City: Accident scene already needed railroad gates

By Jeff Stevens
Staff Writer

The site of Saturday's train-van crash, which claimed the lives of three Midlanders, was already known to be a potentially dangerous railroad crossing, according to city officials.

Two years ago, the city of Midland applied to the Texas Department of Transportation (TxDOT) for funding to install gates at four locations: Midkiff Road and Industrial — the site of Saturday's accident; Front Street and G Street; Front Street and Carver Street; and Front Street and K Street. That funding, totaling $630,000, was recently approved by TxDOT.

But those intersections won't see any safety improvements for another 18 months. Union Pacific Railroad is responsible for installing the gates.

"It's kind of out of our control as far as installation goes," said Gary Saunders, traffic coordinator for the city of Midland. "We're just on their timeline right now."

The money for the project comes from the federal government and ultimately ends up in the hands of Union Pacific. The city has no control over when or how the project is scheduled.

"The money is there right now but it's not us that installs the gates. If it was us we could do it quicker," Saunders said.

According to Mark Davis, spokesman for Union Pacific, the railroad is as concerned about safety as much as anyone.

"These accidents are extremely tragic, not only for the family and friends of motorists, but also the families and railroad crews operating that train," Davis said.

He added that the process for implementing crossing gates requires 12 to 18 months of study and development.

"We have tried to find ways to reduce that, and thus far it's been very difficult," Davis said.

Great Depression more than just a page in history

By Matt Josefy and Emily Statton
Staff Writers

For many of today's investors, the Great Depression is simply a paragraph in the history books, but several residents of Trinity Towers experienced the stock market crash first-hand.

A number of residents spent a portion of their Monday reminiscing during a "Current Events" forum about a time that saw much of the nation in a world of hurt.

"It was a hard time. I certainly was not interested in the stock market myself, but it affected me tremendously when my father lost his job in a suburb of Cleveland, Ohio," Margaret Byars, 89, recalls. "People were eating out of garbage cans behind the big restaurants. So many

Survivors of '29 stock market crash are still optimistic today

By Matt Josefy and Emily Statton
Staff Writers

With technology having brought America full circle from the Model T to the mass-produced desktop computer, some followers of Wall Street have begun to question whether a repeat of the stock market crash of October 29, 1929, might also loom in the near future.

A number of eerie similarities, including everything from alleged New Economies to record margin debts, span the gap of more than 70 years, putting fears in the minds of doomsayers. According to those who can fully fathom that possibility, the speculation may be ill-founded.

Like many others survivors of Black Tuesday, Trinity Towers resident Allena Peters, 93, wonders if the market will ever take such a drastic fall again.

"I hope it keeps doing well, because that's what I'm living on," Ms. Peters laughed. "I don't think it would happen again."

MISD board's study looks at pay increases

By Jeff Stevens
Staff Writer

The MISD board of trustees is scheduled to hold a budget study session today, and although a recommendation on the matter is at least a month away, one major component of the 2000-2001 budget process could be raises for the district's more than 3,000 employees.

According to Art Martin, Midland Independent School District's executive director of business affairs, how much of a raise the staff will recommend has not been determined.

"We don't know yet," Martin said. "What we've been talking about is a 3.5 percent cost of living adjustment."

The raise would be recommended across the board for teachers, administrators, all other professional staff and non-professional staff.

Whether the recommended raise will go as high as 3.5 percent is not determined, but it appears certain the administration will recommend a raise.

Superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr. and board president George Lara said district employees should get a raise.

"We would like to have the best teachers teaching our children in the classroom, but obviously there is a price tag behind that," Lara said. "I would be in favor of giving every employee in MISD a raise."

However, Lara added that the district has to consider budget constraints along with any potential salary increases.

"We are also looking for a bond election to be successful," he said.

Therein lies a potential problem for salary raises. If recommended by the staff and approved by the board, a 3.5 percent raise would add about $3.5 million to the district's already tightly stretched budget. Because of decreased enrollment and lowered property values last year, the district had to make adjustments for $6 million in lost revenue. That was done through some budget cuts and a four cent tax increase.

'We would like to have the best teachers teaching our children, but obviously there is a price tag behind that.'
— George Lara, MISD school board president

Martin said that in order to accommodate raises in the 2000-2001 budget, the district would likely use another combination of tax increases and budget cuts. However, a tax increase in 2000 would be the third in as many years and could put the tax rate at the maximum allowed by law. MISD raised taxes eight cents per $100 valuation in 1998.

Upcoming forum to focus on high-tech industry

- Official from Richardson Chamber of Commerce to provide tips on attracting new businesses.

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Ways to establish a "Silicon Valley" in the Tall City will be the focus of a luncheon to be held from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Tuesday, June 20, at the Midland Center.

Keynote speaker will be Ron Robinson, who is president and chief executive officer of the Richardson Chamber of Commerce. He helped convince Cisco Systems to greatly expand its presence in Richardson with a new site that will increase its employment by 4,000 employees in two to three years.

"Richardson is home to Texas' telecommunications corridor," said Wayne Merritt, chairman of the board of Wells Fargo Texas in Midland, who, along with the Reporter-Telegram, is helping bring Robinson to Midland.

"That corridor is home to more than 600 high-technology companies. Companies like Cisco, Nortel and Texas Instruments get a lot of the press, as they should because of their size and importance. But what I've learned is that 80 percent of Richardson's high-tech companies have fewer than 50 employees," Merrit said.

That statistic, Merritt said, connects the two towns and Midland's need to develop a high-tech economy of its own.

"I've asked Ron to share how Richardson got started, first of all, and secondly, to suggest what Midland can do to begin developing our high-tech companies," he said. "If we can visit with people at the center of developing high-tech economies, we can get some tips on how to get high-tech companies here and go for it."

He said he has been recruiting individuals to serve on a committee to take on the task of developing Midland's high-tech economy.

"We have a large segment that could be defined as high-tech, but it's so fragmented outside the energy industry and the energy industry is about as high-tech as you can get," he said. "I want our committee to get the numbers to show the combined high-tech energy industry and fledgling non-energy, high-tech businesses. We might surprise ourselves."

Local officials agree that the key to attracting high-tech or any new industry is the ability to provide a skilled work force — an issue they hope the planned Advanced Technology Center will provide when it opens this fall.

Rebecca Bell of Midland College, who has been named director of the ATC, said that she plans to work closely with local businesses to develop programs that will train workers to meet their needs.

"We don't want to create programs so our young people can go off to Austin or Dallas," she said. "We want to train them to stay here."

J.D. Faircloth, a board member of the Midland Chamber of Commerce, agreed that there has to be an effort to educate Midland's young people, and opportunities for them when they return from college.

"What we're doing right now is training them to leave Midland," he said.

Bush replaces Confederate flag plaques

By Polly Ross Hughes
Hearst News Service

AUSTIN — Two plaques, one bearing the Confederate battle flag, were removed from the Texas Supreme Court building over the weekend, sparking protests Monday aimed at Republican presidential candidate Gov. George W. Bush.

The governor's replacement of the old Confederate plaques with newer, carefully worded ones drew applause from the Texas chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, but prompted immediate anger from Confederate history buffs.

Confederate heritage groups complained that they were denied a public hearing on the matter and called the Friday night removal "the latest outrage." They vowed to push for the return of the plaques, which had hung on the courts building for 45 years.

"They just couldn't let any citizens be heard. They had to be like thieves in the night, and put those new plaques up without any question," said Kirk Lyons, a lawyer representing the Southern Legal Resource Center, which fights attempts to remove Confederate symbols.

"We're seeing the Confederate flag hauled down, pulled down and spat upon all over the South," he said.

Bush, while campaigning in South Carolina during the GOP presidential primary, dodged questions about the prominent display of the stars-and-bars battle flag atop the statehouse in Columbia. He said it was an issue best left up to South Carolinians.

In Texas, however, Bush's office responded to the issue of a Confederate symbol in the halls of justice after being contacted by the Texas chapter of the NAACP.

"We realize this is a sensitive issue," said Bush spokesman Mike Jones. "We think once emotions have cooled and people look at the actual language on the new plaques, most people will be pleased by the action taken by the Supreme Court and the governor's office."

One of the old plaques, depicting the Confederate battle flag, carried a quote from Robert E. Lee praising the valor of a Texan Confederate regiment. The other carried the seal of the Confederacy.

One of the new plaques reassures that Texas courts are entrusted with providing "equal justice" under the law "regardless of race, creed or color."

The other plaque explains that the Supreme Court building, which also houses the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals, was built with money from a Confederate pension fund. Also, it says the building "at that time" was designated as a memorial to Texans who served in the Confederacy.

SCENE: Train speed has doubled in the last two years trial has been identified by the city as Midland's unprotected crossing with the highest volume of traffic and the highest volume of child-transporting bus traffic. According to Saunders, 13,972 vehicles — including 125 school buses — cross that particular track every day.

The City of Midland has averaged about one train accident a year since 1996. Of those, two wrecks occurring in 2000 have been fatal, according to Saunders. Davis said in 1999, Texas witnessed 364 train collisions with 41 fatalities and 172 injuries.

Adding to the need for improved safety, Saunders said that trains going through Midland have increased their speed over the past two years.

"The speed has doubled within the last two years," he said.

The classification of the track running through Midland legally allows trains to travel as fast as 60 miles per hour. Previously, trains went through at about 20 miles per hour but have gradually increased to 40 miles per hour.

The volume of train traffic has increased, as well. According to Davis, over the past several years, the number of trains traveling through Midland has almost tripled from four to 11 trains a day.

One additional reason for the gates is that Saturday's accident may have been avoided had they been in place.

"I can't say 100 percent that it would have, but more than likely it would have prevented this particular one (accident)," said Midland police Lt. Brian Bogart of the traffic division. "What the gates do is change it from a negligent thing to a deliberate act."

Bogart added that Saturday's accident might have been caused by the driver's being distracted.

"I think he was preoccupied and didn't see the train until the last minute," Bogart said.

Saturday at 2:40 p.m., a van driven by Danny Martinez, 44, of Midland was struck by a locomotive while crossing at Midkiff and Industrial. Martinez, and his 11-year old son Mathew were pronounced dead on the scene. Debbie Martinez, wife and mother of Saturday's victims, died from related injuries early Sunday morning.

MISD: District-wide raises to be discussed at meeting today erty taxes currently is $1.4587 per $100 valuation. The cap for the tax rate is $1.50 and the district would not be able to raise the M&O tax rate beyond that point, without a change in the state legislature. For each penny of increased property tax, the district could raise about $400,000.

A tax hike in 2000 would coincide with the district's proposed plans to pass a bond initiative in October to build a new Midland High School and renovate Lee High School. Estimates for those projects are in the range of $50 million and up.

A "yes" vote for the bond issue would be a vote for increased taxes the following year and a fourth consecutive year of increased school taxes. The city of Midland, on the other hand, has lowered it's property tax rate five years consecutively. The MISD property tax rate used for debt repayment is 13 cents.

Despite all the threat of rising taxes, district officials are confident in a bond election.

"This town has always had the philosophy of being fiscally conservative," Lara said. "But I believe we can't be conservative when we are dealing with children's education (and) providing resources for our children in quality educators, administrators and a complete support staff."

Baressi added, "I certainly don't think our teachers should forego a raise in order to pass a bond issue."

They may not have to either. Baressi said the district's financial problems of a year ago could reverse. Property values have rebounded, which will give the district more local money. Additionally, money lost from low property values a year ago will be made up through state funding this year. Effectively, the district could get back this year what was lost a year ago.

FORUM: Economic diversity to be discussed at luncheon

(From 1A)

Ms. Bell said the first phase of the ATC will open this fall and funding is being established to complete the second phase of the center in 2001. When complete, the center will train students from Midland Independent School District and Midland College in various technologies and offer training to those seeking to upgrade skills or gain new skills to find jobs. It is being financed by Midland College, MISD and City of Midland, with the chamber serving as a contact between the center and local businesses.

In addition to his duties at the Richardson Chamber of Commerce, Robinson, a native of Girard, Ill., serves as president of the Richardson Economic Development Partnership, a marketing program for the community jointly owned by the chamber and the City of Richardson and is president and chief executive officer of the Telecom Corridor Technology Business Council, an organization of 300 high-tech companies in the corridor and across the Metroplex.

He joined the chamber as director of economic development in August 1985 after 24 years in executive and teaching positions in higher education, including Eastern Illinois University, Western Illinois University and East Texas State University, now TAMU-Commerce. He helped found the National Entertain Conference, an organization for concert promoters, in the late 1960s.

HISTORY: Stock crash didn't change West Texas

people had lost their jobs"

Jeanette Rivenburg remembered that "soup kitchens were set up in New Jersey. Nobody liked to admit it, but a there were a good deal of people eating in those kitchens back then."

Desperation the day after the dramatic drop in the Dow Jones influenced more than just the major stock players, even causing one friend of Mae Dunagan, a resident of East Texas at the time, to take his life.

"He was a hard-working, ordinary fellow. He worked at a service station, and he kept a gun in the drawer," Ms. Dunagan said. "He just came to work that day and shot himself. He only lost a little, but it was a lot to him."

For most Midlanders, however, stock consisted merely of steers and calves. In fact, on October 30, 1929, the events of Wall Street hardly drew more media attention than the tomato crops growing in the backyard.

"Things were a lot worse up north," Ms. Byars said.

"Most of the people out here were in oil and land," Gladys Walden, 90, said.

For those working in the oil business, investments were typically limited to the stock options offered by their particular company.

According to Bill Collyns, a McCamey resident at the time and who later became editor of the Reporter-Telegram, "stocks were strictly an individual deal. There were no brokerages at the time."

Life was difficult, yes, but the Great Depression did not necessarily change the lives of the typical West Texan.

"For me it was just more of the same. We made the best of what we had," Leonard Skees said.

"We never really lacked for anything," Tilly Pribyla, a graduate of Lubbock High School, agreed.

Even under unstable conditions, advances in technology would eventually pave the way toward a better standard of living and happier memories.

"I remember when my grandfather backed our first Model T out of the garage and into a tree. He handed the keys to my mother and said, 'Here, you drive. I might hurt somebody,'" Allena Peters said. "I remember my brother's crystal radio set and our first television. So much has changed."

For a generation that Ms. Byars feels "has seen more than any other generation that's ever been born," perhaps the Great Depression was just another dip in the road.

STOCKS: Survivors still optimistic today

(From 1A)

ity Towers forum on current events, five were dependent on the current market for their livelihood.

Even if the market were to take a tumble once again, Dorothy Rush, 81, questions whether the severity could ever be matched.

"I was in England at the time. As long as America does not become isolationists again, it won't be as bad if it does happen," Ms. Rush said, suggesting that in an era of increasing globalization, the sheer size of the world market will deter an outright collapse.

Ms. Peters has confidence that current regulations, such as the Securities and Exchange Act passed under President Franklin D. Roosevelt, will enable the market to weather fluctuations.

"Now it's a little different situation with the changes in stock market procedures," Bill Collyns, 81, agreed. "The reason people jumped out of windows back then was because they couldn't make their payments. They were overbuying on borrowed funds."

"The general tone of the time was confidence," Leonard Skees noted, an attitude that is a contributing factor in the current economy as well. "The stock market was smaller, so there was a better chance to make a killing off of it."

At the time, few people were actually involved in the market. Perhaps the speculative nature has even increased as a more diverse population became active in trading.

"Computers have had one of the biggest effects on the market. It's become more volatile now — a gamble just like Vegas," Bill Joyce, 92, said. "Personally, I wish I had bought Yahoo! stock."

Through experience, Joyce has come to the opinion that the best policy is to simply buy and hold. He still holds inherited stock of Commercial Sheering and Stamping: a 1917 start-up company in Youngstown, Ohio.

"To pass down stock of a big company is a good deal. Just be sure you advise your kids to hang onto it," said Joyce, who also inherited small amounts of General Electric and IBM stock.

"Look at a company and find out who's running it, what they are going to do and where they are going to go. Are they smart, or do they just have a hairy idea?" Joyce asked.

His advice to hold is backed by the fortunes created in Caterpillar, Proctor and Gamble, Goodyear, Gillette and DuPont. Many of those were baby firms at the time of the Depression, when a number of investors bailed out.

"I've never sold any stocks. I just added as I could through the years," explained Collyns, whose portfolio is concentrated in leading oil companies and retail businesses such as Walgreens. "If you buy stock and hold it, you'll be surprised at what you end up with."

"It's fine to play the stockmarket," Jeanette Rivenburg said. "But don't put your whole heart and soul on it."

Two Korean leaders to meet for first time

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Vowing to push for an end to the Cold War on the Korean Peninsula, South Korean President Kim Dae-jung flew to North Korea today for a historic summit — an event that offers the greatest hope for peace on the divided peninsula in more than 50 years.

Under sunny skies, Kim Dae-jung left in a presidential jet from a military airport on the outskirts of Seoul after shaking hands with well-wishers waving South Korean flags. A children's choir sang a ballad popular in both Koreas: "Our wish is unification."

"I wholeheartedly hope that my trip to Pyongyang will be on a path toward peace and reconciliation," Kim said in a departure speech. "I hope that it will be a turning point in efforts to remove threats to war and terminate the Cold War on the Korean Peninsula so that all 70 million Korean people in the South and North can live in peace."

Earlier, hundreds of children, government workers and elderly people cut off from their families in North Korea clapped and waved national flags made of paper as the president's black limousine passed on the way to the airport.

"I hope the summit will lead to a durable peace," said Kim Doo-shik, a 75-year-old man who has been separated from his family in the North since Korea's liberation from Japanese colonizers in 1945.

During the three-day summit, Kim Dae-jung is expected to appeal to North Korean leader Kim Jong Il to agree to reunions of separated families, a summit sequel in Seoul and other conciliatory gestures in exchange for economic resources from the South. Though endowed with long-range missile capabilities, North Korea was unable to feed its own people in the late 1990s and today is reliant on food aid from its traditional foes: South Korea, Japan and the United States.

Reunification, the stated goal of both nations, is likely to be a lengthy and difficult process. The first summit between leaders of East Germany and West Germany was held in 1970, two decades before the dismantling of the Berlin Wall.

Leaders of South Korea and North Korea have never met since the two countries were founded in 1948 in the Cold War's infancy, and the conflict between two populations that speak the same language and the same ethnic roots has been bitter and bloody.

Animosity and suspicion remain fresh a half-century after the communist North, backed by the Soviet Union and joined by Chinese troops, fought the pro-Western South and its U.S.-led allies.

The 1950-53 Korean War left up to 5 million people dead, injured or missing. Its legacy lingers most vividly at the Demilitarized Zone, a buffer area that separates hundreds of thousands of troops, tanks and artillery pieces on both sides of the border.

In 1994, concerns over the North's purported nuclear weapons program nearly triggered a military conflict. And North Korea's totalitarian government — based on a personality cult that virtually deifies Kim Jong Il and his late father and national founder, Kim Il Sung — had been reclusive for so long that reconciliation seemed a doubtful dream.

Yet driven partly by desperation for economic aid to rebuild its dilapidated economy, the North embarked on a new course over the last year, seeking diplomatic contacts with the outside world that culminated in the decision to host an inter-Korean summit.

Korea's leaders have a host of touchy issues to resolve, among them North Korea's missile and nuclear programs and the 37,000 U.S. troops deployed in South Korea. Their role has been to deter the North, which is believed to have stockpiles of chemical weapons and one of the world's largest standing armies.

North Korea is hosting the summit in the mysterious style that it has often employed over the years. It delayed the meeting for a day without a clear explanation and has refused to announce the schedule, possibly out of concern for the security of Kim Jong Il.

The two Kims planned to meet today and on at least one other occasion, and their governments have agreed not to use national flags and anthems to avoid political or ideological frictions.

Working through your retirement?

The chance of outliving your retirement funds or not having enough to retire comfortably is greater than ever. Average life expectancy is 77 years in 2000 (U. S. Census Bureau). Most people will live, on average, about three years longer. If you base your financial plan on the possibility that you will live an average life span, you may be making a big mistake.

Daniel Watts

More years in retirement means you'll need more funds to retire comfortably. Experts predict that it would take at least 70 percent of pre-retirement annual income to maintain the same standard of living at retirement. Everyone's aware of looming problems with Social Security. Private pensions usually comprise about 30 percent of retirement funds. Considering that over 50 million workers do not have pension plans — and that Americans' household saving rate is near its lowest level since the Great Depression — how will you handle the shortfall?

The standard of living you enjoy in retirement will depend on how well you use tax-deferred savings options, such as IRAs, and invest your money. Here are a few suggestions to consider:

Participate in an employer-sponsored 401(k) plan or other contributory retirement plan. Contribute the maximum portion of your salary that your plan will allow. The maximum annual amount you are allowed to contribute to a 401(k) plan in 2000 is $10,500. As an added benefit, those extra dollars in contributions reduce the amount you will owe in taxes at the end of the year. And, many companies will match your contributions up to a certain amount.

A word of caution: If you are about to take a distribution from your company's plan, make sure you carefully analyze the consequences. Cashing out could be costly. Hardship withdrawals, except in certain instances, can trigger serious tax consequences, starting with a mandatory 10 percent federal early-withdrawal penalty tax.

If you haven't already, consider opening an Individual Retirement Account (IRA) to supplement your retirement savings. In some situations, it may be more advantageous to make contributions to a Roth IRA rather than a traditional IRA. Contributions to a Roth IRA are made with after-tax dollars and distributions are generally tax-free.

Select, diversify and monitor retirement investments carefully. Periodically review how your portfolio is allocated between stocks, bonds and cash, taking into consideration the following: the rate of return you hope to achieve on your investments, how much time you have to achieve your retirement savings goals and how much risk you feel comfortable in taking.

Form relationships with professionals you can trust. It is important to have a standing relationship with an estate planning attorney, financial consultant and accountant who, together, can advise you on every aspect of your financial health. Forming these relationships prior to retirement will allow you to feel more comfortable when the time comes to make important decisions about your retirement.

To retire comfortably in the 21st century you must make saving and investing a priority. Get professional advice. Review your options carefully with a competent professional who can make personalized recommendations that are suitable for you. A little planning and professional assistance can be the determining factor in whether your retirement funds last as long as you do.

Unique Refinishing custom builds hardwood shutters

Shutters give your home a new look, feel

If you've ever seen a home with wooden shutters, you know what a warm, friendly look they have. Roy Ramos, owner of Unique Refinishing, says the shutters his company builds provide more than just attractive looks — they have real value.

"Shutters block the heat and bright light from the summer sun," says Roy, which can make west-facing rooms more comfortable. Shutters add privacy and, unlike draperies, they don't fade and they never need to be dry-cleaned.

Wood shutters can add value to your home and can really enhance your décor. Unique Refinishing will paint or stain shutters they build in any color to match your décor, at no extra cost.

Speaking of cost, Roy will give you an extremely competitive quote over the phone, if you provide the approximate measurements. When you decide to have him do the job, he'll come out and get exact measurements so your new shutters will fit perfectly. He will install shutters anywhere in the Permian Basin, with no extra charge for out-of-town locations.

If you put shutters in a brand new home, Roy says you can include their cost in your note. For existing homes, some customers have shutters installed in one or two rooms at a time to spread out the cost. Roy will measure all your windows on the first trip, if you want. He'll keep the numbers on file so that, when you're ready for another room, you can just call him and he'll get started on your shutters right away.

No matter what shape your windows are — round, oval, triangular, rectangular, etc. — they can probably be shuttered attractively. "I have yet to see a window I can't build shutters for," Roy declares.

These sturdy shutters come with a lifetime guarantee. If you change your décor later, Unique Refinishing will repaint the shutters in their shop, for an additional charge.

Unique Refinishing builds all shutters from hard wood. That minimizes warpage, bowing or twisting that can happen to softer woods.

The time it takes to have your shutters delivered varies. Roy says four to six weeks is about average. If you need them in a rush to accommodate closing on a house or another need, ask and he'll try to accommodate you.

If you'd like to see samples, Roy will be glad to see you at his shop. He will also show you his unique painting booth, which is approved by OSHA, TNRCC and the EPA. It allows him to paint shutters quickly and professionally, saving you money.

Roy Ramos of Unique Refinishing has been building attractive, functional shutters like these since 1981. Call 1-877-337-0086 toll-free for a free estimate.

Roy has been building shutters since 1981, opening Unique Refinishing in 1989. He and his associates combine for 50 years' experience in building attractive, quality shutters.

Fashion Cleaners offers fabric tips

Two of the most popular types of fabric used in today's fashions require some special consideration when it comes to cleaning, according to Philip McCain of Fashion Cleaners.

"When you're considering clothing of Spandex or a cotton-Spandex blend, consider the color," suggests Philip. Because Spandex tends to stretch out when being treated for stains Philip suggests avoiding light colors, which do not hide stains well.

Whatever you do, ALWAYS DRY CLEAN Spandex or its blends. "It will shrink significantly unless it is dry cleaned," he warns.

Microfibers, mostly of polyester, are also popular because of their ability to breathe while resisting stains and shedding water. These garments may be either laundered or dry-cleaned. Always follow label instructions for cleaning.

If you do get a stain on clothing, take it to Fashion immediately. The longer a stain remains, the harder it is to remove.

"We always take the greatest care of any garment you bring us," says Philip.

Fashion Cleaners has two convenient locations: 801 W. Wall and in the Imperial Shopping Center at Midkiff and Wadley. They do all kinds of cleaning and laundry, as well as alterations, reweaving and keepsaking of bridal gowns. Pickup and delivery are available.

Fashion's Philip McCain prepares to inspect garments of Spandex and microfiber weaves before returning them to the customer.

MCR makes windows sparkle

When summer comes to West Texas, it's too hot to clean your windows. Let MCR Window Cleaning do it for you at your home or business this summer.

There's more to see out your window in the summer—trees, flowers, green grass—so let MCR brighten your view. You'll be surprised at how affordable it can be.

Summertime is also when you may have more hard water stains on windows from sprinkler systems or swimming pools. In most cases, MCR can remove those stains and give your windows (or glass patio doors) a new look.

Let Mike Ruther and his staff take care of your windows and mirrors this summer.

MCR will relieve you of the headache of windows that are upstairs, behind shrubs or otherwise hard to reach. They also do tall mirrors.

Many residential customers have their windows cleaned every three months, while commercial clients have them done monthly or weekly.

When you call for a free estimate, ask owner Mike Ruther about his company's references. In 12 years in business, he has a lot of satisfied customers.

Mike Ruther opened MCR Window Cleaning in 1988. They clean windows, mirrors, skylight and more. Call 570-9564 or 1-877-644-9564. They cover Midland, Odessa, Big Spring, Stanton, Andrews and other area towns.

Enjoy your windows again with tinting from Mid West Glass

These days, we often take windows for granted. The question is not whether to have them, it is how many. This is a modern luxury. As recently as a few hundred years ago, clear glass windows were a luxury only afforded by the wealthy.

However, windows in West Texas are not an unmixed blessing. While they let in light and fresh air, they also let in heat and ultraviolet rays. If your west-facing rooms are too hot, or if your furnishings are fading, you need not go back to the ancient days of no windows. Window film from Mid West Glass gives you the benefits of windows while reducing the problems.

Window film can block out up to 80 percent of the sun's heat and 100 percent of its damaging ultraviolet (UV) rays. You'll notice the heat difference immediately in west-facing rooms, especially if those windows are large.

The UV difference takes longer to notice. There will be less fading of draperies, carpet, furniture and other furnishings with window film in place.

Some window films add privacy by making it harder to see into your home. If your window is broken by a rock or other item, film can hold the glass together, making cleanup easier and safer. Tough security films resist being cut by even the sharpest of knives.

Mid West's Brandon Herring says window film adds beauty to your home as well. Their wide selection of colors means you can match film to just about any color scheme.

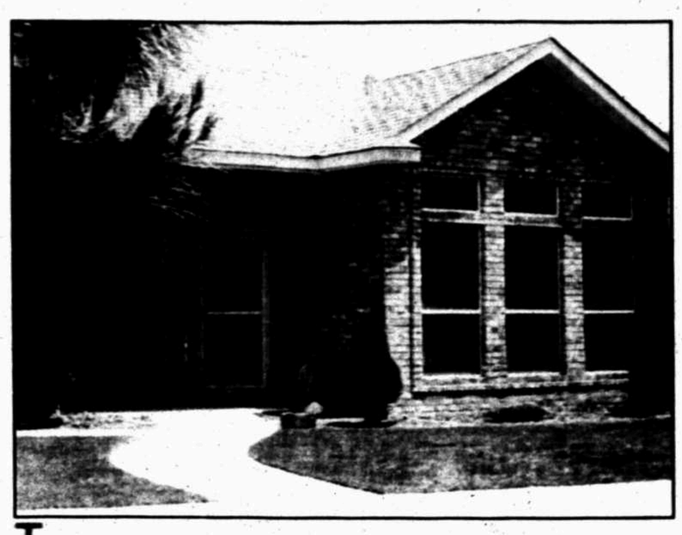
Window film fits any size or type of window or door, including sliding glass doors, French doors, storm doors, bay windows and any shape or size of decorative window. Mid West installs film for much less than the cost of buying new windows. Window film is installed with a minimum of cleanup and interruption of your life.

If you have a business with a huge west-facing window, you may have to pull curtains or blinds to fight off the afternoon sun. With window film, the light can come in but the heat stays out all the time.

All residential films come with a lifetime warranty on the color and against peeling, bubbling and cracking.

Now you can stop avoiding certain rooms because they're too hot in the afternoon. Or you can stop closing the drapes and making the room too dark to enjoy, just to keep the heat out. With window film from Mid West Glass you can do all this for a surprisingly affordable cost while adding beauty to your home.

Why not call Mid West today for a free estimate?



Tame those windows: let in the view, keep out the heat and UV rays with window film from Mid West Glass. Call 682-7373 today to find out more.

Mid-West Glass offers glass and windows for any use, as well as patio enclosures. Located at 906 W. Front, the phone number for a free estimate is 682-7373.

State GOP should show solid front for Gov. Bush

This is an important week not only for Gov. George W. Bush and Texas Republicans in general, but specifically for the people of Midland who served as a strong base of political support for the governor and his father before him, the former President George H.W. Bush.

Republicans now gathered in Houston for the Texas convention no doubt want to provide a united front to the state and the nation for Bush's presidential campaign.

State Reps. Tom Craddick of Midland and Buddy West of Odessa have said that their legislative tug-of-war is over, that, as Craddick put it, they have "buried the hatchet" in their feud.

Cracks in that front — whether caused by religious zealots on a crusade for what they believe is "the only way" a candidate must profess his allegiance to their cause or two state representatives whose back-stabbing antics cost a region of the state dearly in state funding for important institutions — show the people of the nation how politically inept Texans can be at times.

That is a mistake we have made in the past and should not repeat now.

State Reps. Tom Craddick of Midland and Buddy West of Odessa have said that their legislative tug-of-war is over, that, as Craddick put it, they have "buried the hatchet" in their feud. We honestly hope so because, as a political party, the Republicans have bigger fish to fry. If the Texas GOP falls victim to fractionalization and political infighting what it could lose is the presidency this November.

Politics offers a fertile ground for the type of animosities that have become the stuff of novels and movies in recent years, but there is a time for fighting and a time for recognizing that fighting will only undermine the party's quest for the real political plum.

We hope Texas Republicans recognize that fact in Houston and show the people of Texas and the nation a real and solid front behind George W. Bush.

Today in History

Today is Tuesday, June 13, the 165th day of 2000. There are 201 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On June 13, 1900, China's Boxer Rebellion targeting foreigners as well as Chinese Christians, erupted into full-scale violence.

On this date:

In 1886, King Ludwig II of Bavaria drowned in Lake Starnberg.

In 1888, Congress created the Department of Labor.

In 1898, the Yukon Territory of Canada was organized.

In 1927, aviator Charles Lindbergh was honored with a ticker-tape parade in New York City.

In 1942, President Roosevelt created the Office of War Information, and appointed radio news commentator Elmer Davis to head it.

In 1944, Germany began launching flying-bomb attacks against Britain during World War II.

In 1966, the Supreme Court issued its landmark "Miranda" decision, ruling that police had to inform suspects of their constitutional rights before questioning them.

In 1967, President Johnson nominated Solicitor-General Thurgood Marshall as the first black justice on the U.S. Supreme Court.

In 1977, James Earl Ray, the convicted assassin of civil rights leader Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., was recaptured following his escape three days earlier from a Tennessee prison.

Ten years ago: Secretary of State James A. Baker III, testifying before the House Foreign Affairs Committee, urged Israel to accept a U.S. plan for peace talks. (Baker gave out the telephone number for the White House switchboard, telling the Israelis publicly, "When you're serious about this, call us.")

Five years ago: President Clinton proposed a 10-year plan for balancing the federal budget, saying in a televised address his proposal would cut spending by $1.1 trillion. France announced it would abandon its 1992 moratorium on nuclear testing and conduct eight more tests between September and May.

One year ago: NATO soldiers shot dead two armed men as peacekeepers tried to contain new violence in Kosovo; Russian troops, meanwhile, blocked British troops from entering the airport in Pristina, the capital of Kosovo.

JACK ANDERSON

Social Security should be partially privatized

WASHINGTON — Two basic Social Security privatization proposals are being floated by politicians and economists. First, there's the proposal that the government invest in the stock market a portion of what each individual pays in Social Security taxes. The second proposal is to allow individuals to direct such stock-market investments themselves.

Anderson

Both proposals are flawed, but one of them is salvageable.

Among the flaws is the partial abandonment of the idea that Social Security is an intergenerational transfer tax, which means that the working generation's taxes are paying for the retirements of the retired generation. The idea of each person contributing to his or her own retirement is not inherently bad, but to end the present program could be messy. Perhaps the best solution here would be for the government to fund current retirees out of general tax funds, while allowing current workers to commence accumulating money for their own retirements.

Next, the idea of government-decided investments is obviously a formula for failure. Wayne Angell, a former member of the Federal Reserve and economist at Bear Stearns criticized the idea: "Once the government becomes involved (in investing in the private financial market), there are difficult temptations. If you can't invest in an industry because it doesn't meet a social test, then that enlarges the role of the government dictating to the private economy to a degree that many of us would find unacceptable."

And Alan Greenspan has raised further doubts, saying, "There is really no strong evidence to suggest any positive aspects of moving Social Security funds into equities."

Greenspan fears that the Federal government would inevitably allow political considerations rather than economic return to color its investment decisions. This would not create the kind of returns either individuals or the government wants.

Yet another concern of economists is that the government's investment would inflate stock values. Our primary concern about privatization has always stemmed from the concern that the government would in some manner control or direct investment decisions.

The solution to this is to remove the subjective nature of such decisions. This can be accomplished by opening virtually all publicly traded instruments to Social Security investing. Under this plan, up to 25 percent of Social Security taxes could be directed into stocks, bonds or commodities — yes, even commodities. The essence of the concept is to allow people freedom of investment choice within the broadest possible parameters. Therefore, any security authorized for trading on a nationally recognized U.S. exchange should be included.

These would include, but not be limited to, the New York Stock Exchange, the American Stock Exchange, NASDAQ, NASDAQ Small Cap, OTCBB (Over-the-Counter Bulletin Board), the Chicago Board of Trade, the Chicago Mercantile Exchange, and the various regional exchanges.

Would there be risk? Yes. But it would be a risk of 25 percent of the Social Security taxes. That's an acceptable level. This concept of partial privatization would provide a combination of security and risk that could satisfy most privatization advocates without undermining the essential need for retirement safety.

Assad's death leaves unfinished business

What is Hafez Assad's legacy? How should his epitaph read? That's an easy one. His gravestone should read: "Hafez Assad, feared and ferocious President of Syria: He stayed too long and he died too soon."

That's Hafez Assad — for years the Middle East leader most incapable of change, and then, finally, when he realized that change was mandatory if he wanted to turn over a stable Syria to his son, Bashar, he bowed out before getting the really hard stuff done.

Let's look closely at Assad's ambiguous reign. What do we mean he stayed too long? Well, in the fall of 1977, just before going to Jerusalem, President Anwar Sadat of Egypt went to Damascus to meet with Assad and encourage him to follow Egypt's lead with Israel. Assad refused, and he spent the next 23 years resisting the Egyptian approach, and then trying to prove that he could get more from Israel and give less.

And what does Assad have to show for those 23 years? Not much. At best he will remembered for what he didn't do, not for any positive accomplishments: He did not, in his eyes, "sell out" to Israel. He did not meet the embarrassing end of other Soviet-era dictators who were toppled by popular movements. With his brutal fist, he did not let ethnically divided Syria fall into civil war like Lebanon. He did not, like Saddam Hussein, allow himself to be sucked into a devastating war with the world's only superpower. He did not lose Syria's grip over Lebanon.

So many "He did nots." But not a lot of "He dids." By any normal criteria, Assad would have to be judged one of the most overrated leaders ever. Economically, Syria today is a backwater — the last country in the Middle East to introduce fax machines and the Internet, a country with a crumbling industrial base, a corrupt, 19th-century banking system, an utterly backward educational system and not a single world-class export of any product or service. If Syria were in Asia, it would be called North Korea.

In recent years, though, Assad finally got the message — that he had to modernize and open the country. And one of the people whispering that most often to him was his son and designated heir, Bashar. So Assad started bulldozing the road, but he left three huge boulders — boulders that would have been difficult for even him to move, but will be even harder for his son, an eye doctor, who starts with much less legitimacy and none of his father's godfather-like skills at destroying enemies without mercy.

The first and biggest boulder left for Bashar is modernizing Syria and shifting the base of Syrian unity from the war with Israel to building a 21st-century state. President Assad had begun that task last year with a series of internal purges, but it was slow going. Assad was ambivalent about opening Syria's windows, and he had created so many competing power centers, spying agencies and military units — all of which reported to him and all of which he played against one another — that when he initially tried to turn things over to his son, some of those power centers resisted. So father and son started purging: Former Prime Minister Mahmoud Zubi killed himself last month after being sent for trial on corruption charges. Former army chief Hikmat Chehabi also was targeted on corruption charges. But this is an unfinished war, and Bashar will not consolidate his rule, or be able to push his reform agenda, without winning some cock fights with other Syrian roosters.

The second bit of unfinished business is the peace with Israel. Assad refused any compromise with Israel on the Golan, even when only 200 yards were left in dispute. He also refused to show any warmth to the Israeli people. Will Bashar be able to summon the strength and legitimacy to offer compromises his father would not, but which are essential for any deal with Israel?

The last bit of unfinished business was Lebanon. Israel's unilateral pullout from south Lebanon has naturally triggered questions in Lebanon: If the Israelis are gone, why is the Syrian army still here? Bashar will eventually have to work out a new basis for Syria's continued presence in Lebanon. Not easy.

It is rather fitting that Hafez Assad died in mid-conversation on the phone with the president of Lebanon. Because in many ways he was also in mid-conversation with the people of Syria and Israel as well. These were conversations too late in coming. Bashar will now have to finish the calls. I wonder what he'll say.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Death of dictator could change Mideast politics

WASHINGTON — If you want to make a list of the Syrian dictator Hafez Assad's good deeds, begin with this: He was an enemy of Iraq's Saddam Hussein. That's where the list ends.

On the debit side of his life's ledger can be included his eager alliance with Soviet Communism; his slaughter of thousands of dissident Syrians in Hama; his avid support of terrorists worldwide; his military occupation of neighboring Lebanon; and most consuming of all, his abiding hatred of Israel, which made Assad the Arab world's most relentless rejectionist.

Safire

At his funeral Tuesday, crocodile tears will flow from Yasser Arafat, long the object of Assad's contempt, who must be delighted at having outlived his tormentor.

Western leaders will proclaim respect for "stability" provided by such dictators-for-life. Groping for ways not to speak ill of the dead, they will note that once Assad grudgingly made an agreement, he "kept his word" by sealing his side of the border.

Wisely, Bill Clinton decided to bypass this chance at wearing his inimitable lip-biting mournful look, and won't dispatch Vice President Al Gore, his normal substitute, to Damascus.

Why? Because three months ago, at a much-touted meeting in Geneva, Clinton presented Assad with the Golan Heights on a silver platter. The Syrian then humiliated the supplicating American by refusing to take yes for an answer, making fresh demands for control of Galilee that embarrassed not only Clinton but even the most appeasement-prone doves in Jerusalem. Assad scuttled negotiations in the most dramatic way possible.

As a result, an unelected official, the secretary of state, will represent the United States at the state funeral of a world figure; That deliberate diplomatic slight will not be lost on Middle East leaders or American voters.

Does the dictator's demise help or harm the processing of peace? It helps.

Short-term, this week's attempt to transfer power to his son, Bashar, means that the "Syrian track" is derailed for at least this year. That delay is not a matter for hand-wringing. On the contrary, the implacable Hafez was pressing the Israeli prime minister, Ehud Barak, into a corner that might have resulted in Israelis, in a referendum, voting to turn down a deal that would deliver the high ground in return for treaty promises.

Longer-term, the absence of Assad will help because the dictator was driven by pride to recapture in negotiation every inch of land he lost in foolish early aggressions. That intensely personal motive for self-justification is gone. Several scenarios now present themselves:

1. Worst case: anarchy in Syria. The Assads come from a religious minority, the Alawites; the majority Sunnis may want to take over. The dictator also struck a balance among his military, his spy service and his political party; his 34-year old son, figurehead of the regime's insiders, may not have the manipulative cunning of a father who in the end could be expected to make neither peace nor war.

2. Less bad case: a balance of internal powers behind a dictator who needs to make peace to survive. If not Bashar, this could be a militarist or politician able to establish internal order — "stability" — without Hama-style massacres. Economic incentives might induce him to bring home 30,000 troops from Lebanon as Iran's Hezbollah is induced to leave.

3. Best case: The young man leads angry, backward Syria into the modern world. Bashar is an ophthalmologist, educated by London eye doctors. He heads the computer society in a socialist land too worried about dissent to permit Internet access to anybody beyond the elite. With initial investment from Saudis and the emirates, and with a little canniness and a lot of luck, he could introduce the rudiments of market reform and prosperity to a freedom-parched land.

Southern Baptists to debate women as pastors

■ Demonination to vote on proposal at annual convention.

Associated Press

ORLANDO, Fla. — The Southern Baptists are debating the latest proposal dividing the nation's largest Protestant denomination: A measure that says women should no longer serve as pastors.

The denomination will vote on the revised statement of belief at its annual convention, which begins here today.

"I think you'll see a lot of women leaving" the denomination if the proposal passes, said the Rev. Martha Phillips, interim pastor of the Mount Vernon Baptist Church in Arlington, Va., where Vice President Al Gore is a member. "For me it's the last straw."

The Southern Baptists will also discuss new wording against abortion and homosexuality that reflects the rightward shift in recent years in the 15.9 million-member denomination.

The chairman of the drafting committee, the Rev. Adrian Rogers of Memphis, Tenn., said the group makes no apologies for a position he believes most Southern Baptists have held for years.

"This is what God says," he told the radio show "For Faith and Family" on Monday. "We're sucked in a world of wickedness and vice, and we need to speak clearly without stutter or stammer."

The Rev. David Key, director of Baptist Studies at Emory University's Candler School of Theology, called the statement a litmus test of who's in and out of conservative circles.

"Instead of building a consensus statement, (Baptist leaders) are using it as a club to drive out people they disagree with," he said. "After they pass this, every denominational bureaucrat, every missionary, every seminary professor is going to have to adhere to the statement."

The statement of belief reads: "While both men and women are gifted for service in the church, the office of pastor is limited to men as qualified by Scripture."

The 1,600 or so current Southern Baptist clergywomen, about 100 of whom are pastors leading congregations, would not lose their credentials.

The statement is not binding on individual Southern Baptists, and the 41,000 local congregations would remain free to ordain women. But the statement could affect the denomination's hiring decisions.

In 1998, the Southern Baptists declared that a wife should "submit herself graciously to the servant leadership of her husband." About a dozen congregations quit the denomination.

Approval of the men-only clergy clause will probably drive out other congregations, said the Rev. Daniel Vestal of Atlanta, coordinator for a group of 2,000 theologically moderate congregations.

The Rev. Raye Nell Dyer, president of Baptist Women in Ministry, said female pastors would be among the first to go. "They're going to go to other churches and denominations where they have opportunities to minister," she said.

Other proposed changes in the church statement underscore that the Bible is "totally true" and that God is "all-powerful and all-knowing," and insist that "there is no salvation apart from personal faith in Jesus Christ as Lord."

The statement also urges Christians to oppose racism and reject homosexuality.

Nuclear secrets disappear from lab at Los Alamos

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two computer hard drives containing an array of nuclear secrets have disappeared from a highly secured vault at the Los Alamos National Laboratory in New Mexico, prompting a top-level investigation, laboratory and Energy Department officials disclosed Monday.

Energy Department officials first learned that the nuclear secrets and other sensitive material were missing on June 1 and have not ruled out the possibility that the disappearance is related to the forest fire that threatened the lab and forced its evacuation last month.

"This is an extremely serious matter, and we are taking swift actions to deal with it," said John Browne, director of the federal nuclear weapons research lab.

The two hard drives, each slightly larger than a deck of cards, contained material used by the Nuclear Emergency Search Team, or NEST, which is trained to respond to nuclear accidents or threat of terrorism. They contain detailed nuclear weapons data needed to render weapons safe in an emergency or as part of a threat by terrorists.

"It's very sensitive ... technical data," said retired Air Force Gen. Eugene Habiger, the Energy Department's top security official. He briefed Energy Secretary Bill Richardson on the disappearance Monday after a week-long investigation and search at the Los Alamos lab.

Habiger said in an interview that it is too early to determine what happened.

But he said he has not ruled out the possibility that the materials might have been misplaced or destroyed during the confusion last month caused by the threat from a wildfire that destroyed much of the community of Los Alamos.

Senior Energy Department officials said there is no evidence the latest missing data involved espionage.

"The indicators are just not there," Ed Curran, DOE's director of counterintelligence said. He noted that two identical drives, containing the same material, disappeared when someone seeking the information for espionage likely would have taken only one.

Neanderthal ate meat and not much else, study of 28,000-year-old bones indicates

By Paul Recer
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON — If a Neanderthal walked into a hamburger joint today, he probably would order a double burger. And hold the bun, the lettuce, tomato and onion.

A new study of 28,000-year-old Neanderthal bones suggests the ancient hominid ate meat, lots of it, and very little else.

"Their diet was about 90 percent meat," said Paul B. Pettitt of Oxford University in England, co-author of a study appearing today in the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences. "This means they were efficient hunters and not just scavengers as some have suggested."

A lifestyle so centered on meat, said Pettitt, means that the low-browed, hairy Neanderthal was able to organize complex hunts that brought down big and dangerous game.

"This study suggests that the difference between Neanderthals and modern humans was only a matter of degree," said Erik Trinkaus, a Washington University at St. Louis anthropologist and co-author of the study. "Modern humans were probably more efficient in terms of their organization, but the Neanderthals were very close."

Neanderthal-like hominids first appeared in Europe, probably migrating from Africa, around 300,000 years ago, said Pettitt. The "classic" period of Neanderthal presence in Europe started about 120,000 years ago. By about 28,000 years ago, the Neanderthal was gone from the fossil record, he said.

Modern humans arrived in Europe about 32,000 years ago, about 4,000 years before the Neanderthal disappeared.

Trinkaus said the new study shows the Neanderthal was not just simple, stupid and brutish.

"This study implies a much higher degree of social organization complexity than is frequently attributed to the Neanderthals," said Trinkaus. "They were much more equal to modern humans in many ways."

One big difference, though, was food choices.

Studies of bones from the early modern humans in Europe suggest they had a more varied diet, eating smaller animals, such as rabbits, and lots of fish — up to 30 percent of their diet.

But for the Neanderthal, it was meat, meat and more meat.

Neanderthal hunter preyed on mammoth, horse, deer, woolly rhino and other large animals.

Vandalism could lead to felony charges

By Jeff Stevens
Staff Writer

At about 6 a.m. Monday morning, a four-hour crime spree came to a screeching halt and four Midland teenagers found themselves facing allegations of vandalism.

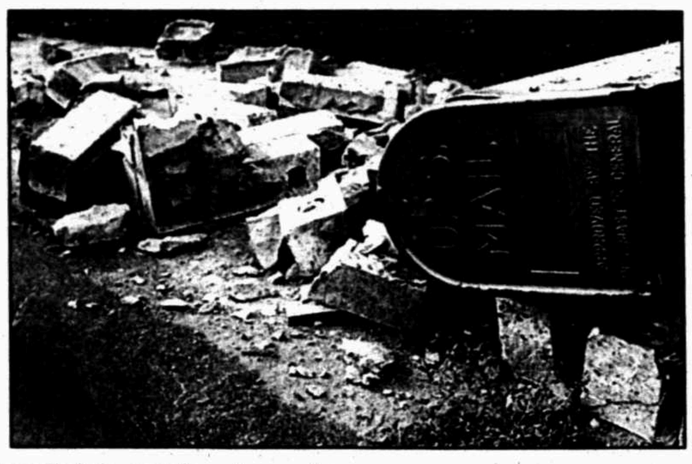
According to Midland Police Department Detective Chuck Sims, the four late-night revelers could face felony charges for their alleged involvement in some 20 reported cases of vandalism in west Midland.

"The damage could be as high as $20,000 and if it is, they could be charged with a third degree felony," Sims said.

Traveling down Whittle Way Monday morning, residents might have wondered if they slept through a tornado as bricks from mailboxes littered the street. Demolished mailboxes, however, were only part of the offering of the "Dawn of Destruction."

The vandals traveled through Midland knocking over mailboxes, vandalizing cars and breaking out the windows of various homes and the windows at Alamo Junior High School. The spree finally ended, according to Sims, when a resident in west Midland heard windows breaking then chased a carload of teenagers down the street. The resident then called police who stopped the car at 6 a.m. in the vicinity of Midland Drive and Princeton.

A 15-year old juvenile is in custody and once all reports are in, three 17-year old adults will be arrested in connection with the crimes, Sims said, adding that no names can be released at this time.



A mail box lies on its side in a pile of rubble along the 4800 block of Neely Drive Monday morning thanks to vandals who went about the early morning destroying private property around west Midland.

Tim Fischer/ Reporter-Telegram

"It's just ignorance and poor parenting," said Jeff Bussell, a homeowner on Whittle Way who woke up Monday to find his mailbox in a pile of bricks. "It will probably cost about $500 fo put it back up because you have to have a mason come out and do it."

This is the third time, Bussell's family has been vandalized in less than a year. He had his mailbox knocked over once before, in October, and the family's cars were broken into a few months ago.

Bussell said he bought his home because of the neighborhood and a perceived sense of security from such activity. "We didn't expect this at all."

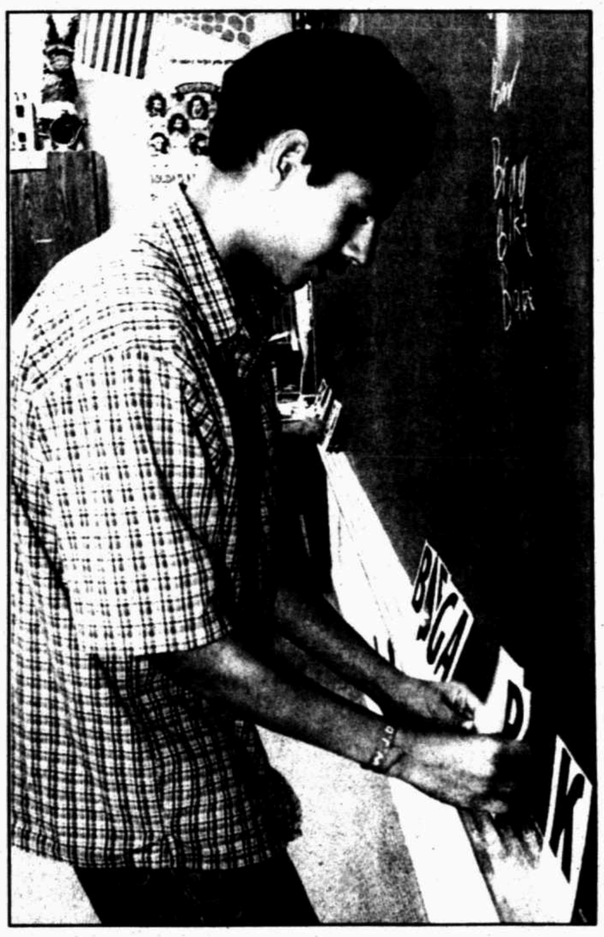
"These kids used boredom as an excuse. There wasn't anything else to do. But they don't realize the consequences of their crime until they're done and caught," Sims said, adding that vandalism goes up during the summer.

Sgt. Rick Gilley agreed. "As a general rule, they do tend to increase during the summer time, when kids are out of school."

He added that in the majority of vandalism cases cleared, the suspect turns out to be person in their young teens to early 20s.

"I guess they just have more time on their hands and are out roaming around more," Gilley said.

Summer School helps good students get even better



Kristine Aleman
MRT Correspondent

It was a busy Monday morning as summer school students filled the empty desks at six Midland elementary schools for the start of the second week of class. At each of the schools, youngsters — grades kindergarten through sixth — gather from 8 a.m. to noon to strengthen their reading and math skills.

"The curriculum that teachers target is decided by TAAS (Texas Assessment of Academic Skills) scores and TEKS (Texas Essential Knowledge Skills)," said Robbie Kind, summer school principal at Bonham and Jane Long Elementary. "The children become better readers and all-around better students."

Although it is school, and students work at the targeted areas, those attending do not seem to mind the morning lessons.

"My mom put me in here to help me in math," said Adrian Griner, who will be entering junior high in the fall.

Adrian attends summer school at Ben Milam Elementary. He, along with his classmates, enjoys the math games and their hundreds chart.

Efforts to renovate downtown Midland's Yucca Theatre have picked up steam as of late with the Midland Community Theatre's (MCT) recent hiring of a theater architect specialist out of San Antonio.

The MCT, in association with the Abell-Hanger Foundation, raised $25,000 for the consulting services of Killis Almond who has redesigned theaters around the world, including theaters in downtown Abilene, downtown San Antonio and downtown Galveston.

But although the project is moving forward, Timothy Jebsen, executive director of MCT, said any restoration of the theater probably won't begin until the Fall of 2001.

"Sometime before October 1 of this year we want a plan for the facility for what we want to see done," Jebsen said.

Almond, who praised the beauty of the Yucca, said the project is still in its infancy. "It's a magnificent structure. It really is beautiful. It has a very intimate feel. A lot of things need to be fixed. They need all new theatrical technology systems, communications, those kinds of things. The lobby has plenty of space to be modified so it could work better."

For now, Jebsen said restoration would include designing the interior to accommodate up to 1,000 patrons. MCT's primary use for the Yucca is its summer theater program, Summer Mummers.

"Right now it's definitely a working theater," he said. "There is not a sense of urgency. In the future there are many more things the building can be used for."

Almond said the Yucca's schedule of events would prove beneficial in programming events once renovation is completed.

"The nice thing is that they're in the theater during the summer when most other theaters are greatly underused," Almond said. "It leaves the other 9 months of the year as a stand-alone theater for other presentations. It's almost ideal. Most theaters in summer time are not used as much."

Once final plans are drawn up, Jebsen said MCT will then approach the public for donations on what he said could be a $1 million project.

And while $1 million may sound like a lot of money, Almond said an old building, such as the Yucca, can be renovated at one-third to one-half the cost of building a new theater.

But before a budget is finalized, Almond said MCT will first need to develop a vision, and the money will follow.

County commissioners ban certain fireworks

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

County Commissioners agreed Monday to restrict the use of certain fireworks in unincorporated areas of Midland County out of concern about continuing dry conditions.

With the passage of the resolution, it will be illegal to sell or use the fireworks known as "missiles with fins" or "skyrockets with sticks" in the county, an offense classified as Class C misdemeanor and punishable by a fine of up to $500.

"We didn't want to have to do this," said County Fire Marshall Dale Little, adding that although Midland County has had some rain, it remains in the 600-700 range on the Keetch-Byram Drought Index scale of 0-800. He added that Midland is projected to still be in that range by June 15.

Midland County joins several other counties in making the move or considering the ban, including Ector, Howard and Martin counties, said County Judge Bill Morrow.

Commissioners noted that if the county receives significant rain between now and July 4, the ban can be rescinded.

The commissioners were also gently chided by Rev. G.A. Magee, a retired Baptist minister who served as pastor of Bellview Baptist Church for 16 years, over their refusal to allow brothers Charles and Roy Langley to hold a revival at the Midland County Exhibit Building.

Noting that he believes the brothers should have appealed to the court in person and were presumptuous in sending out fliers announcing the revival before receiving approval, he said, "I think it was the wrong decision. MISD allows new churches, churches that are just starting up, to meet in their buildings. I know of one now and of others that have met in school buildings. Equal access laws allow Bible studies on school campuses along with other clubs at the same time. Midland College allows revivals at Chaparral Center. I would ask you to revisit this, to reconsider this decision. I believe the Exhibit Building should be open to all faiths."

Commissioner Randy Prude said he had asked for the subject to be placed on Monday's meeting agenda because he felt there was inconsistency in the court's policy on leasing out the Exhibit Building.

"My proposal is to have a consistent policy. Taxpayers are subsidizing the building, whether it's a rock club or a church group."

Commissioner Louisa Valencia, who urged the denial of the Langley brothers' application, said that "I have no problem with the court changing the policy and doing like the other taxing entities."

She pointed out that the Midland Independent School District and Midland College charge fees

With a nickname like 'Princess,' the real world can be tough

More rambling thoughts ... — Oscar Wilde, a truly funny man, once said, "Fashion is a form of ugliness so intolerable that we have to change it every six months."

— My, how time flies: It was on this date in 1971 that the New York Times began publishing the Pentagon Papers, a secret study of America's involvement in Vietnam.

— No matter what your political views might be, you've got to admit that was an exciting time in which to live.

— Sudden thought: It must be terribly difficult to explain to your wife that you have just been arrested for being a "peeping Tom."

— Line from a country-western song: "All my old flames have new names." In other words, they all got married.

— If you need a reminder as to just how quickly a high-profile person fades from the public eye once he takes himself out of a political race, consider this: How many times have you heard the name Rudy Giuliani since he announced he would not oppose Hillary Clinton for the U.S. Senate?

— Can you say "zero"?

— John McCain, on the other hand, seems to be the exception to that rule. His star continues to shine.

— Sound advice to remember: "Think like a man of action, and act like a man of thought."

— Childhood memory: Tracing your fingers on a piece of paper and coming up with a picture of a rooster.

— Why is a left winger a liberal and a right winger a conservative?

— Every person should have an extremely loyal pet, one that will stay by your side no matter how creepy you might behave.

— Bertrand Russell once said, "Of all forms of caution, caution in love is perhaps the most fatal to true happiness."

— Is it just me, or does it seem like fewer new fathers hand out cigars today than before?

— For what it's worth: Donald Trump, everyone's favorite real estate mogul, turns 54 on Wednesday. I don't know about you, but I'm REALLY glad he decided not to run for president, although "Saturday Night Live" would have had a field day with his candidacy.

— I never believe a person who says, "I love my job so much I'd do it for nothing."

— Yeah, right.

— Just wondering: Do people ever get too old to enjoy flirting?

— I hope not.

— There's a good chance that any little girl whose nickname is "Princess" is going to have a rough time adjusting to the real world when she grows up.

— You know you have entirely too much time on your hands when you catch yourself watching a TV program in which Joan Rivers is critiquing the clothes worn by movie stars at the Cannes Film Festival.

— Hey, it's time to get a life.

— And today's final quote comes from Henry Miller, who once said, "Chaos is the score upon which reality is written."

SCHOOL: Students get ahead

(From 1B)

"Mrs. (Cyndi) Simpson gives us candy for our games. She's going to give us cavities, but that's okay," 10-year-old Tracie Davis said, laughing. "She always makes somebody happy. She makes sure no one is sad."

Tracie, along with many other students such as 12-year-old Shannon Bell, attend the Boys and Girls Club once school is out for the day. However, until the buses arrive at noon, teachers have to figure out a way to keep the students' attention.

"It's difficult to teach just math for four hours," Ms. Simpson said. "Kids like change."

MISD closed summer enrollment Friday of last week due the overwhelming number of students attending classes this summer. Each school, except Crockett Elementary, enrolled more than 250 students, Ms. King said.

"Students can attend summer school free as long as they have failed one or more parts of TAAS or are more than half a year behind on Terra Nova scores," said Ms. King. "Otherwise the parents pay $125."

Along with math and reading as essential target areas this summer, each campus has a bilingual program for the summer as well. The Waterford Early Reading Program is also utilized this summer, primarily with kindergarten students needing assistance in reading, but also with students as advanced as the second grade.

Summer school curriculum can summarize students' previous year, or give them a head start on the next level.

"I'm here because I wanted to improve my speed in reading," said 12-year-old Genise Hannah, who attends Bonham Elementary during the summer. "I'm a good reader, but I'm getting even better."

Students in Cary Richmond's class find reading the daily story with him before school lets out at lunch time to be one of their favorite parts of the day. Many students admit that they would want to attend summer school even if they did not have to.

"We need to know how to read and spell better to have a successful life later on," said 12-year-old Olivia Melendez.

Breakfast and lunch are provided for the students and neighborhood children every day. Any child from age three to eighteen is welcome to eat lunch at their area school for no charge. Other members of the community are welcome to eat for a nominal fee.

the public and tell them what we'd like to see done," Jebsen said. "We want to make it a facility to show movies and accommodate the symphony or children's summer theater troupes."

Almond said it's only a matter of time before that dream is realized.

"They're definitely ahead of a lot of organizations I'm working with," Almond said of MCT. "It's not so much about saving the building. The building is an instrument, it holds the art. The idea is to determine how much art you'll fill the theater with."

for the use of the building, while the commissioners frequently waive the rental fee, charging groups only the $50 utility fee.

She defended her actions, noting that other church groups have used the building to hold fund raisers and did not have religious activities in the building.

Morrow said the issue was valid and said "It's been mentioned we might be opening the door to other non-traditional religious groups and, per the Constitution, they'll have equal access."

Prude added that "We need consistency in our policy. But we're also here to provide to the taxpayers, so I reserve the right to refuse the building to anyone."

County Attorney Russell Malm said he would research statutes on separation of church and state to help commissioners craft a policy for the Exhibit Building.

Commissioners also delayed approving a grant application from the Trans Pecos Drug Task Force.

Commissioner Mike Bradford said that commissioners have asked the task force for over a year to provide information about its financial status, who the officers of its board of directors are and the financial status of the host county.

"When we initiated the grant last year, we asked for an organizational chart and an accounting from the host county," he said. "I'm not opposed to the grant, but I don't want to get into a situation where: a) Midland County is not paid its share and b) Midland County ends up with all the responsibility."

The grant has been tentatively approved but will not be sent until the county receives the requested information, he said.

Commissioners also appointed James E. "Gene" Smith, the Republican nominee for County Constable, Precinct 1, to the post following the resignation of Lynn Pope. He had no Democratic opponent in the November elections.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Tuesday, June 13, 2000:

Explore financial ventures carefully to enhance your security and professional status. Others like working with you because you provide options. You operate best when you're close to home. Travel plans often backfire. Relationships with in-laws and those at a distance take on a different quality. If you are single, romance can be unusually successful with someone close to your home or local area. If attached, a mutual project enhances your connection. CANCER has many moneymaking ideas.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★ Brainstorm, but don't think that anything is written in stone. Flexibility can help you straighten out an intricate, difficult problem. Focus on money and one-on-one relating. An associate will go along with you. Give him space to decide. Tonight: Work with an unexpected change.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★ Others have loads of information, and they want to share where they are coming from. Being cynical or touchy won't help you with a boss. If you aren't happy with what you have, change it. Be open to others, who mean well. Tonight: Go along with another's choice.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★ Surprises throw others off. Assimilate information and turn it around so it works in your favor. Moneymaking and professional concerns merge. Say yes to a new project. Worry less about others right now. Tonight: Relax by exercising.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ Go with your winning smile, creativity and resourceful ideas. Others easily respond to you, sensing that you are a winner. Follow through on a decision. Respond to others. An associate might be hedging. Be understanding. Tonight: Play the night away.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ You are not seeing another clearly, as hard as you try. Wishful thinking seems to make a haze of reality. Anchor on family and home. Zero in on what is important. Build security on the domestic front. An investment could be key. Tonight: Follow instincts with family.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ Get down to basics with another. Reach out and have a needed discussion. Keep communication flowing, even though your nerves could easily be frazzled. Review work, with an eye to success and efficiency. Make calls. Explain what you want and expect. Tonight: At a favorite place.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ Others respond to your energy. Money matters come to the forefront. You can have what you want, as long as you don't take a risk. A loved one might coax you into taking unwise action. You might not be viewing a child clearly. Tonight: Be savvy with funds.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ Your ability to take an overview allows you to see where another is coming from. Be willing to gather information. The more new ideas you incorporate, the better off you'll be. Make long-distance calls; reach out for others. Tonight: Do what you want.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★ A partner whispers in your ear. Listen carefully. There are some gems of wisdom here. Not everyone agrees with you, but you could be startled by feedback. Don't expect universal accord. Work with unpredictability. Tonight: Get extra rest.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ Attend meetings, network and share. Unexpected money developments work in your favor. Review your finances and decide where you can make changes. Don't allow current restrictions to stop you. Aim for what you want. Tonight: Get together with a friend.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★ Your unpredictability irks others, whether they admit it or not. Work needs detail attention. Don't skip steps or take shortcuts. Remember agreements and responsibilities, even if you feel a bit uncomfortable with what you must do. Others respect your steadiness. Tonight: A must show.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ Reach out for others who are at a distance. Listen to feedback from a child or loved one. Your sixth sense works for you, but you might feel uncomfortable with what you perceive. Weigh a risk that might involve hush-hush information. Tonight: Catch a movie.

Among the new inductees into the Bridge Hall of Fame is Dr. George Rosenkranz of Mexico City. Long Mexico's leading player and a successful competitor on the world scene, he is also a leading theoretician and designer of the Romex system. He was declarer on this deal from a recent tournament in Texas.

West's decision to make a simple heart raise rather than a pre-emptive jump is eccentric. However, it is hard to fathom which action in the auction is worse — East's double of four clubs or West's decision to sit for it.

The opening lead of the jack of hearts was taken with the ace and two rounds of trumps were drawn, ending in dummy. The only problem was the possibility of a 4-1 diamond split, and declarer had an easy way to avoid that. A low diamond to the king won, and now declarer exited with a heart. The defenders could delay the moment of truth by winning the heart and shifting to a spade, but there was a simple counter. Declarer simply rose with the ace and returned a spade, not caring which defender won the trick.

No matter which defender would now be on lead, any plain suit except for a diamond allows declarer to sluff a diamond from one hand while ruffing in the other. That is what would have happened had West won the spade. But when East took the trick, the defender could bow the knee in a different way — by exiting with a diamond. Declarer runs that round to dummy's queen, then leads toward the jack for the fulfilling trick.

PEOPLE TODAY

Ann Richards 'stronger than ever'

WALTHAM, Mass. — Former Texas Gov. Ann Richards says that despite being diagnosed with osteoporosis four years ago, she's stronger than ever.

Richards, 66, has been talking to women all over the country about how to treat — and hopefully prevent — the disease. On Friday, she spoke at a forum on women's health after age 50, sponsored by Brandeis University.

"I speak with women's groups everywhere and seize every opportunity to help women realize that osteoporosis is one of those diseases you can treat," Richards said. "Lift weights, exercise, medication, treatment, pay attention to diet."

Richards' mother, Ona Willis, suffered from the disease. She died in 1997 at age 86.

Richards, a Democrat, was elected governor of Texas in 1990 and served until 1994, when she was defeated by current Texas governor and Republican presidential candidate, George W. Bush.

BRANSON, Mo. — The leader of Indonesia enjoyed some country-western music and Midwestern hospitality during an overnight stop here.

Abdurrahman Wahid accepted an invitation to speak at the tiny College of the Ozarks and have a down-home dinner at the school, tucked in the rolling green hills just south of Branson.

Wahid, a fan of country music and Mark Twain novels, said Saturday the visit to Missouri gave him the opportunity to study two of the state's economic virtues — tourism and agriculture.

"The trip to this place reminds me of visits to my own ancestors — they were farmers," Wahid said. "I hope that I can learn a thing or two on how to improve Indonesia's agricultural situation."

He said he also decided to visit because he has been impressed since childhood with Twain and the adventures of Tom Sawyer and Huckleberry Finn.

"Nowadays, I see our children don't read those books because they are more interested in Superman than in Mark Twain," he said.

Later in the evening, the newly elected president was serenaded with country western tunes by entertainer Mel Tillis at his Branson theater.

Indonesia suffered two large earthquakes last week that killed about 100 people, injured 1,900 others and demolished thousands of homes. Protesters have complained the government has neglected them.

LOS ANGELES — Cuba Gooding Jr. is showing real estate agents the money.

The Oscar-winning actor purchased a Pacific Palisades home for nearly $3.5 million and plans to remodel the 3,500-square-foot house, the Los Angeles Times reported Sunday, citing confidential real estate sources.

The home was built in the early 1940s, includes a pool, spa and guest house and sits on nearly an acre of property with a view of nearby canyons.

Gooding won a best supporting actor Academy Award in 1997 for "Jerry Maguire," in which he played a pro-football star whose catchphrase was "Show me the money!"

The 32-year-old actor, who made his film debut in the 1991 gang drama "Boyz N the Hood," co-starred last year with Anthony Hopkins in the thriller "Instinct."

The actor was a first-time home buyer in 1994, when he bought a Studio City home for $610,000, the newspaper said.

RADNOR, Pa. — Sarah Jessica Parker says the actresses on her HBO show "Sex and the City" can't have impossible 'dos — they have to have hairstyles that a normal woman could wear.

"The hair rules are, if you can't do it yourself, you can't do it," Parker said in the June 17 issue of TV Guide.

"I don't know any woman in American who can run out of the house in the morning and do an upsweep — except for maybe Ivana Trump, and I don't want anyone on the show to look like Ivana Trump."

The actress has other rules — "no scrunchies, no butterfly clips, no hair ornaments of any kind, period."

As for other style trend for the third season of the cable TV hit series, Parker said, "We're doing a lot more jewelry, a lot of gold, sort of sophisticated uptown ghetto."

DEAR ABBY

Better Business Bureau won't give credit where it isn't due

DEAR ABBY: Please do your readers a service by cautioning them to phone the Better Business Bureau whenever they receive a "great" offer they are considering accepting.

I received a notice from a legitimate-sounding credit card company ("member of FDIC") in Scottsdale, Ariz., saying that I was "pre-approved" for a secured credit card. They asked that I send a check for $99, and they would issue a credit card with a limit of $500. That was exciting because my finances are in a state of disarray. I don't get many of these kinds of offers.

I phoned the credit card company and asked how long it would take to receive the new card. The response was "six weeks." That seemed rather long, and my intuition told me to phone the Better Business Bureau in Scottsdale. I was informed the bureau has a file with pages and pages of complaints against this company.

Please inform your readers that a phone call to the BBB may not only save them money, but prevent grief and a great deal of wasted time as well. — A FRIEND IN FLORIDA

DEAR FRIEND: Better Business Bureaus are located in most major cities in the United States. They were one of the first consumer "watchdog" organizations. The bureaus provide consumer education materials, answer questions, provide information about businesses — i.e. whether there are unanswered or unsettled complaints or other marketplace problems — and help resolve buyer/seller complaints against a business, including mediation and arbitration services. They also have information about charities and other organizations seeking public donations.

BBBs that provide information via 1-900 telephone numbers charge a nominal fee for their services; some offices charge a flat fee and require a major credit card to access information. The BBB Web site can be accessed at www.bbb.org for consumer fraud and scam alerts, and information about BBB programs, services and locations.

DEAR ABBY: I kissed a married man. Actually, it went beyond just kissing. I have just turned 19, and he's 30 and has a baby on the way.

Abby, I didn't sleep with him — but we went pretty far. We both wanted it to happen, but I still feel guilty.

I have liked this guy for four years. I was, and probably still am, too young for him. What should I be doing about this situation now? I don't see him often, but when I do, we fool around. What do you think this guy is thinking? — "BUNNY" IN INDIANA

DEAR "BUNNY": This guy is thinking, "Here's an 'easy' girl I can get some action from without any commitment." That means no love, no respect — zero on your balance sheet. He gets a quick thrill while you get a few moments of pleasure — and plenty of risks.

You feel guilty because you know he is married to another woman who can't compete with you right now. Listen to your conscience and stop playing around with him. You're risking an emotional involvement with a man who has proved he cannot be faithful, a pregnancy with more responsibility than you can handle, and a social disease from someone who's probably playing around with more "other women" than you.

Astros sweep D'Backs to claim National city crown

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

The Northern Astros scored two runs in the bottom of the sixth inning Monday at C.J. Kelly Park to beat the North Central D'Backs, 4-3, to complete a comeback sweep for the Joe Mowles National Little League City Championship.

North Central came into the championship matches with a perfect 4-0 tournament record and already owned a previous tournament win over the Astros. But the Astros pulled off back-to-back wins to force the double elimination tournament to go the distance.

Most of the 11-12 year olds on the Astros don't know how to spell survival, but they know the meaning after Monday night.

"I guess we just like doing things the hard way," said Northern Astros coach Billy Williams. "It wasn't easy, but we kept our heads and went got it (the title)."

Representatives from the Northern League have now won the city title five years in a row and six of the last seven. This was new twist since the Astros were the only team in its league that had not pulled down a city title over that span.

But that's past history now.

With two outs in the bottom of the sixth and the game tied at 3-3, Sam delivered the game winning hit, a single that had eyes and scored Robert Brosig with the winning run.

"My heart was jumping when I went to bat," Sam said. "I just tried to relax. Then I hit the ball and I was just praying that it would drop in. I saw Robert (Brosig) rounding third and there was a lot of emotion."

Jordan Coulon had tied the game at 3-3 earlier in the inning by driving in Bradley Evans. The D'Backs took a 3-2 lead in the fourth inning when Josh Busbee knocked in two runs with a single after a Kyle Corrie double had put runners at first and second.

North Central came into the game with a 20-2 record for the season, so the two losses doubled its total for the year.

"It's always tough to lose," said D'Back coach Brian Corrie, "but these were two great games, so I can't feel bad about it. This is the kind of games you would expect from teams that make it to this level. I'm still very proud of my kids."

The Astros won the first game of what turned out to be a championship series by a 3-2 count. Jordan Coulon

Why won't Rice cook?

■ Lakers' teammates are mystified as to why sharpshooting forward sat late in Game 3.

By Greg Beacham
AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS — Glen Rice thinks he could have prevented the Los Angeles Lakers' first loss in the NBA Finals. Phil Jackson, through his actions rather than his words, has shown he doesn't agree.

The Los Angeles Lakers' high-scoring forward and his coach are at odds as the series moves toward Game 4 on Wednesday night. The Indiana Pacers, who lost twice in Los Angeles before winning 100-91 on Sunday night, can tie the series with a victory.

Rice is angry about being benched by Jackson during critical parts of the Finals, including most of the fourth quarter in Game 3. Jackson, who largely used defense-minded Rick Fox is Rice's place, apparently sees him as a defensive liability.

Now controversy is stirring in the Lakers' previously harmonious camp. Rice is telling anyone who will listen that he should be playing more minutes and getting more shots as the Lakers search for two more victories and a title — and his teammates are backing him up.

"I definitely think we would have had a better chance to win (Game 3) with me on the floor," Rice said. "I really think I need to be in there for us to succeed. With me being on the court, it's going to make it a lot easier for Shaq in the paint. It could all be done a lot easier.

"I'm trying to be as positive as I can. I'm not trying to be negative or be the bad apple in the bunch. I'm just asking to be involved a little more."

Rice played just 27 minutes and had seven points — none after halftime — in Game 3. While Indiana said its defense was the reason for Rice's failures, Rice blames Jackson for benching him in the fourth quarters of the last two games.

Yankees talking with Cubs over trading for Sosa

By Ronald Blum
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK — The Yankees and Chicago Cubs are talking about a Sammy Sosa trade, and some New York officials think a deal could be made by the All-Star break.

Chicago Cubs scouts have been looking at the Yankees' farm system recently, and Gene Michael, New York's top scout, has been at Cubs games. Later this week, Michael is to follow Detroit's Juan Gonzalez, another player the Yankees want.

Sosa, who feuded with Cubs manager Don Baylor last week before proclaiming peace, has made it clear to Chicago that he wants a trade, three baseball sources said Monday, all on the condition they not be identified. Sosa's agent, Tom Reich, said the slugger wants decisions to be made quickly, but he wouldn't elaborate.

"This is something that needs to be resolved with somebody, and the sooner the better," Reich said.

Yankees owner George Steinbrenner, looking to shore up weakness in left field and at designated hitter, would like to make a deal before the All-Star break, said one of the three sources, a Yankees' official. Steinbrenner and Reich are close, and any agreement would probably be accompanied by an extension to Sosa's contract, set to expire after the 2001 season, the source said.

While the Cubs and the All-Star outfielder are interested in a deal, neither side wants to make

Young makes locker room exit

Steve Young gestures during a news conference in the San Francisco 49ers team locker room in Santa Clara, Calif., where he announced his retirement from football Monday. Young has been suffering from a series of concussions over the last several years.

By Dennis Georgatos

SANTA CLARA, Calif. — Steve Young returned to the locker room where he had so often suited up his battered body in San Francisco red and gold.

It was time to say goodbye.

The 38-year-old quarterback retired from football Monday and bid his farewell in the place where "all the sweat and toil is," where for 15 years he forged friendships and prepared for victories.

"This is where you show up for work, so I wanted to show up for work one more time," he told an audience of friends, relatives, coaches and teammates.

Young, whose plans became known late last week, decided that his repeated concussions had made the game too dangerous for him.

"The fire still burns but not enough for the stakes," he said.

Young was at ease, often laughing and cracking jokes as he stood in a suit and tie before a banner emblazoned with the 49ers' helmet in the gray locker room at the team's practice facility. But at least once, he fought back tears as he discussed his life as a player and new role as a husband and expectant father.

"For the record, I can still play," Young insisted. "But I was able to step away and not worry about the immediate circumstances. I made all the

Cunningham says he's happy to suit up in Cowboy uniform

By Jaime Aron
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — Wearing his familiar No. 7 and an unfamiliar star on his helmet, new Dallas Cowboys backup quarterback Randall Cunningham spent Monday getting comfortable in what used to be enemy territory.

"It's not strange," said Cunningham, whose 14 seasons in Philadelphia and Minnesota have included many memorable games against Dallas. "It's more of a rejoicing feeling."

The top-rushing quarterback in NFL history, Cunningham was released June 2 by the Vikings, making way for Daunte Culpepper to be their starter.

That same day, Cowboys owner Jerry Jones happened to be in Las Vegas, where Cunningham lives, and was riding in a limousine driven by one of the quarterback's friends. Jones mentioned that he'd been trying to reach Cunningham, so the driver called the quarterback and arranged a meeting for later that night.

There was never any doubt that Jones wanted Cunningham to back up Troy Aikman, not challenge him for the No. 1 job. Had starting been the most important thing to Cunningham, he could've gone to Detroit to replace the injured Charlie Batch or Tampa Bay to push second-year quarterback Shaun King.

"I just like to know where I'm at," he said. "I went in as a backup in Minnesota, but I knew my role. So I was able to accept it. It's the same thing here."

Late last week, the 37-year-old Cunningham signed a three-year deal with Dallas that includes a $500,000 signing bonus and $500,000 salary for this season.

Cunningham was at team headquarters Monday to start three days of two-a-day practices. This full-squad minicamp is the last get-together until training camp opens July 17.

While the entire offense is still learning a new timing-based system, Cunningham is behind the curve. Quarterback coach Wade Wilson tried giving him a head start by sending him the playbook last week.

"My head is spinning a little bit," said Cun-

Seminoles eliminate 'Horns from CWS, 6-2

By Mark Long
AP Sports Writer

OMAHA, Neb. — Florida State's Mike Ziegler stepped off the mound, peered around Rosenblatt Stadium and soaked up the College World Series atmosphere.

Just in case.

A few innings later, he knew it wouldn't be the Seminoles last stand at Rosenblatt. Ziegler pitched a five-hitter and Ryan Barthelemy tied the CWS career record for home runs Monday night as Florida State staved off elimination with a 6-2 victory over Texas.

"It was the Mike Ziegler show," FSU coach Mike Martin said. "It was a tremendous display of pitching."

Ziegler retired 15 of the final 17 batters. He had sat down 13 consecutive Texas hitters before Matt Rosenberg singled with one out in the ninth. Two batters later, Tommy Nicholson doubled, scoring Rosenberg.

Nicholson had two hits for the Longhorns (46-21).

■ College World Series

"To get a team like the University of Texas and dominate them like he did, it's quite an accomplishment," Martin said. "It's quite a feather in this young man's cap."

After giving up the run in the ninth, Ziegler (10-4) got Ben Emond to fly out to end the game, his 11th fly ball out. The junior right-hander struck out five without a walk.

"He was just ahead of us all night and kept us off-balance enough to make us not effective," Nicholson said.

The Seminoles face Southern California on Tuesday in another elimination game.

Ziegler started and finished with a flurry. He retired nine of the first 10 Longhorns before giving up a hit to Todd West in the fourth inning. West scored three batters later on Chris Houser's single.

But Ziegler went right back to work.

He sat down the next 12 Texas batters in order, giving him four straight 1-2-3 innings. He had seven three-up, three-down innings total.

"This is what college baseball is all about, winning at the College World Series," said Ziegler, a junior college transfer from Tallahassee Community College.

He was drafted in the 14th round by Oakland. Now, Martin is looking for a way to keep him at Florida State.

"I've offered him my car, but he thinks he can get more," Martin joked. "This is probably his last year at Florida State."

John-Ford Griffin led the Seminoles with three hits in a game that took 2 hours, 17 minutes, the fastest CWS game since 1995. Marshall McDougall and Michael Futrell each added two hits.

Ziegler didn't need much help, though.

"Mike Ziegler was the driving force for Florida State," Texas coach Augie Garrido said. "He didn't walk anybody, he didn't hit anybody and they didn't make any errors for a while. That takes a lot of our game away right there. They were able to dominate because they played very well."

The Seminoles (52-18) led off the game with three

Rangers win American title

The North Central Rangers defeated the Northern Orioles 12-2 Monday night at C.J. Kelly Park to win the Joe Mowles American Little League City Championship.

Korbin Mehaffey went the distance to pick up the win, giving up only one hit. Ryan Hill had a double and Travis Reeves had a triple to go with his two hits. Corey Petro, Sterling Fairchild, John Eads and Mehaffey all scored two runs each.

Nathan Strubberg and Randy Decker each scored for Northern. Decker had the double to break up Mehaffey's no-hitter.

The Rangers lost to the Orioles on Saturday to force this "if" contest.

Swoopes paces Comets' rout of Starzz

HOUSTON (AP) — After a close game in Utah over the weekend, Sheryl Swoopes made sure the Houston Comets were in control early.

Swoopes scored Houston's first nine points, finishing with 28 points and a season-high 10 rebounds, her first double-double of the year, as the Comets defeated the Starzz 107-85 Monday night.

Swoopes, who shot 10-for-17 from the field, including 3-for-4 from 3-point range, also had five steals as Western Conference-leading Houston improved to a league-best 7-1. The Comets are three-time defending WNBA champions.

"I think we wanted to make a statement ... to our fans, especially since the last game (a two-point victory)," Swoopes said. "I think we had better team defense. Our approach was different."

Cynthia Cooper added 24 points and six assists, and Tina Thompson scored 17 points for the Comets, who scored 26 points off 17 Utah turnovers.

"It was a small statement," Cooper said. "Our fans deserved it. We started playing tough defense. Utah's always tough. We respect them here, we respect them there. But the bottom line is to get the W. We got it there and we got it here."

Houston built a 52-34 halftime lead, its most points in the first half this season. The 107 points were the most by the Comets at Compaq Center.

(From 1C)

came up huge, helping force the twinbill.

Coulon went the distance on the mound to get the win and also drove in two of the Astros' three runs with a two-run single in the first game. Coulon didn't think it was a tough choice of his top feat in Game 1 when asked if the game winning hit or the victory on the mound was his favorite part of the night.

"The win was the big thing for me," Coulon said, "because if we don't win that first game, we were out of it."

Still, the D'Backs almost pulled out Game 1. Terry Rowell scored on a single by Justin Hicks with two outs to cut the margin to 3-2. Zack Peterson followed with a single to move Hicks to third base, but Coulon got out of the jam and the got the win by getting David Baccus to pop to second base to end the game.

The Astros got out of two major jams in the first game by turning two double plays, one of which was started by centerfielder Sam and the other by second baseman Kyle Williams. If there was a turning point in the night, you have to look there first.

The Astros had no margin for error in either game, winning both by one run. In just about every respect, it was a championship type night.

YOUNG: 49er quarterback calls it quits

(From 1C)

arguments with myself. And I do this with really a lot of joy and with the thought of looking forward."

The news conference came nearly nine months after Young's final game. On Sept. 27 at Arizona, he took a devastating hit that left him unconscious on the turf with his fourth concussion in three years.

Before that, the seven-time Pro Bowler used his fearlessness, scrambling ability and passing accuracy to win two league MVP Awards and lead San Francisco to a Super Bowl title, in 1995, when he was also the game's MVP. He won two other Super Bowl rings as a backup to Joe Montana and holds six passing titles.

Young, who leaves as the NFL's highest-rated passer, followed one of the toughest acts in league history when he took over in 1991 for Hall of Famer Montana. Young said the competition between the two helped them both.

"For me to watch one of the greats, I was energized by that and grateful for it," he said. "It was the finishing school for me in quarterbacking. In all my years, I just wanted to live up the standard that had been set."

Asked if he had any advice for his successor, Jeff Garcia, Young quipped, "Fake it till you make it."

Young is the latest sports superstar to retire in the last two years, from Michael Jordan to Wayne Gretzky to John Elway to Dan Marino. While their departures set off similar emotions, the formal farewells took place in larger, grander settings.

Young popped through a black curtain, walking from the team's showers to a podium to declare he was leaving the game he had played for nearly 31 years — 17 as a professional, including two years in the now-defunct USFL, two with Tampa Bay and the last 13 in San Francisco.

He said he couldn't say goodbye without coming to the locker room one final time.

"I thought, Where else?" Young said. "This is the most intimate place for players."

In addition to coaches, players and relatives, guests at the announcement included former 49ers owner Eddie DeBartolo, who turned control of the team over to his sister to help resolve a family feud, and Cleveland Browns president Carmen Policy, who left San Francisco after a falling out with DeBartolo.

Jerry Rice, who teamed with Young in one of the most successful quarterback-receiver partnerships, spoke of "great chemistry and a great relationship." The two formed the most prolific touchdown-pass tandem in history, hooking up 85 times for scores.

The 37-year-old receiver said he struggled over what to say because, "I know the clock is ticking for me also."

Rice paused to regain his composure as he read a poem he wrote: "Sometimes we dream and dreams come true."

San Francisco coach Steve Mariucci told Young: "We love everything about you, what you've done and who you are."

Young's decision to retire followed months of agonized debate — with himself and the 49ers organization. Given his history of concussions, no one wanted to risk a permanent injury.

Young's primary neurologist is believed to have told him last year to quit football. But Young still yearned to play and passed neurological tests showing he was clinically "normal."

The salary-cap stressed 49ers, fearing the potential for re-injury and wary of the payroll implications if they brought Young back, urged retirement. Young briefly considered going to Denver for one last shot at a Super Bowl run, but ultimately determined to finish as a 49er.

"I leave the game having played my best football," he said. "It just kind of settled on me that this was the right thing to do. And so I do it with a great deal of joy."

Changes in his personal life also influenced his decision. He got married March 14 to the former Barbara Graham and the couple is expecting a baby in late December.

Young also will continue working with the Forever Young Foundation, which deals with children's issues.

"In many ways what lies ahead for me is more important than what I leave behind," he said.

Young, who earned a law degree from BYU and is the great-great-great grandson of Mormon church leader Brigham Young, has been mentioned for jobs in politics and broadcasting.

Young's career highlights include the Jan. 3, 1999, playoff game when he hooked up with Terrell Owens on a last-second 25-yard touchdown pass to beat Green Bay. Equally dangerous as a runner, he rushed for an NFL-record 43 touchdowns, including a remarkable 49-yard scramble in 1988 against Minnesota that endures as one of the great broken-field runs.

He threw for a record six touchdowns in San Francisco's 49-26 Super Bowl win over San Diego in January 1995.

Young said he will miss the team he had played with for nearly half a lifetime.

"I loved playing Dallas. I loved playing Green Bay," he said. "I loved the expectation that every year we were going to the Super Bowl."

FINALS: Double teams contained Shaq

(From 1C)

"I have no comment for that," Jackson said when told of Rice's statements. "That's the way he saw the game."

Kobe Bryant's sprained left ankle likely will be well enough for him to play Wednesday night. But even if Bryant returns, the Lakers showed in Game 3 that they need several options on offense besides Shaquille O'Neal in order to win.

Rather than treating the complaints as a distraction, his teammates appear to be rallying behind Rice, who scored 21 points in Game 2 with Bryant out.

"I was disappointed a little bit that our best shooter was on the bench," said O'Neal, who had 33 points in Game 3 but was harassed by double-teams.

Rice's role on the Lakers has diminished gradually this season. When he was acquired two years ago from Charlotte for Eddie Jones and Elden Campbell, the Lakers thought his offensive explosiveness would provide the outside counterpoint to O'Neal's dominant inside game.

But Rice doesn't believe he fits well in the Lakers' triangle offense. His favorite shots — quick jump shots taken off screens — don't often arise in the scheme.

"I know I can score, but I try to work within the offense," Rice said. "It's frustrating sometimes. If I'm involved, it's a much simpler game for us."

Bryant's emergence as a superstar this season also cut into Rice's chances to contribute. In addition, Rice is often a disinterested defender, which makes him a poor bet late in games.

Rice hopes to be a high-priced free agent at season's end, but he wouldn't touch the subject Monday. When asked whether his exclusion from the game plan against Indiana would influence his decision to return to the Lakers, he was mum.

"I'm just going to try to complete this mission, and I'll go from there," Rice said. "I don't want to be a distraction. These things can easily be worked out if we win a championship."

While the Lakers struggled with egos, the Pacers took a day off and focused on tying the series. Indiana got 33 points from Reggie Miller and rediscovered the swagger they had during the Eastern Conference playoffs.

Miller and coach Larry Bird are also involved in a dispute, though it's much less serious. Bird is trying to convince Miller to spend less energy lobbying the officials and trash-talking his opponents, while Miller says it's the only way he knows how to play.

"These are the Finals, and this is the first time I've been here," Miller said. "My emotions should be high. I've played like that my whole career."

The Pacers also were pleased with their improved defensive effort against O'Neal. Bird used power forward Dale Davis as Indiana's primary defender against Shaq, and though Davis isn't nearly O'Neal's size, he is muscular, tough and clever enough to keep O'Neal at bay until the double-teams can arrive.

Davis cited three factors in the Pacers' improved effort on O'Neal.

"We pushed Shaq out of the block, we got better pressure on the ball, and we were quicker with the double-teams," he said. "That's really all you can do against him. He'll still get a bunch of points anyway."

Pacers assistant coach Dick Harter, who runs the team's defense, isn't a fan of double-teaming on defense but says he has no choice against O'Neal. Jalen Rose compared Indiana's defensive about-face to "cramming for a test in college."

"We tried some things in the first two games that didn't work as well," Rose said. "(In Game 3), we were so much more aggressive and in Shaq's face. We're not used to the double-teams, but we're adjusting quick."

Aikman, Cunningham say they'll miss Young

IRVING (AP) — Troy Aikman and Randall Cunningham, both of whom played big games against Steve Young and attended Pro Bowls with him, said Monday the NFL will miss the retiring quarterback.

"I admired the way Steve handled himself his entire career," Aikman said. "Few guys have been able to step in for a Hall of Famer like Joe Montana and have a Hall of Fame career themselves like Steve had.

"He was great for the game, one of the good guys in the league. He's probably doing the right thing for himself."

Young retired from the San Francisco 49ers because of a series of concussions. Roger Staubach's Hall of Fame career in Dallas ended for the same reason.

Aikman also has suffered a high number of concussions, prompting him to miss some time last season. Others have talked to him about retiring, but he said his situation is different from Young and Staubach.

"If Steve was 33-34, he might not retire," said Aikman, who is 33. "If I was 38 and had the concussion I had last year, maybe I would retire.

"He probably just felt it was too much risk. For him, it was the right time."

Cunningham, who became Aikman's backup in Dallas last week, said Young was making the decision "from his heart" because it was best for himself and his family.

"He's been going after my rushing record as a quarterback," said Cunningham, who has 4,799 yards to Young's 4,239. "That's the only reason I can be happy about him retiring.

"Other than that, I'd love to see him play."

COWBOYS: New QB needs to learn offense

(From 1C)

ningham, who spent the lunch hour sitting at his locker with his playbook on his lap, highlighting play names and passing routes.

"There's so much to learn in this offense. Now I know why I signed a three-year deal."

Despite an on-field rivalry, Cunningham and Aikman have been friends since the offseason following Aikman's rookie year, 1989. The pair were among the 11 charter members of the Quarterback Club.

Before they hugged and said hello Monday, they hadn't seen each other since a February golf tournament in Las Vegas.

"This was even before I knew I'd be coming here, his excitement showed me the team was going to be good," Cunningham said.

Cunningham's top skills are his mobility and his accuracy throwing the bomb, two things not prominent in Dallas' Aikman-tailored offense. Yet coach Dave Campo insists Cunningham will be a good fit.

"We felt this was an opportunity to get a guy who is a change of pace, who can do some things with the football himself under certain circumstances," Campo said. "He's going to be part of our offensive scheme."

Cunningham's most infamous play against the Cowboys was in 1987, when Eagles coach Buddy Ryan had him fake a kneeldown and throw a touchdown pass, making a Philadelphia victory even more lopsided.

"Yeah, yeah, I still hear about that," Cunningham said. "It's been mentioned a few times."

'Hounds blow early chances in 9-2 loss

Staff Report

WICHITA, Kan. — The Wichita Wranglers turned the tables on the Midland RockHounds on Monday with a 9-2 win at Lawrence Dumont Stadium.

The 'Hounds had eight hits in the game but committed three errors against the Wranglers.

There were few highlights for Midland on this night but the 'Hounds took the lead in the top of the first inning as Josue Espada led off the game with a double to center field and later scored on a groundout by Eric Byrnes.

The only other run for the RockHounds came in the fourth inning with Wichita leading 2-1. Byrnes led off with a single, Jason Hart drew a walk and then Mensik connected on a single to right-center to score Byrnes and tie the game at 2-2. The 'Hounds, however, could've added more runs in the frame but Jacques Landry popped up to short and Miguel Olivo hit into an inning-ending double play.

Rod Metzler was big for the Wranglers as he had solo home run in the third inning and scored the go-ahead run in the fifth inning after he reached on a triple. Mike Curry was another big contributor for the Wranglers as he scored three runs and drove in two more.

Eric Thompson (1-1) took the loss for the 'Hounds, while Shawn Sedlacek (5-4) got the win in a spot start. Sedlacek pitched 6 2/3 innings and allowed two runs on six hits.

Jury finds Lewis' former co-defendants innocent

ATLANTA — Two friends and former co-defendants of football star Ray Lewis were acquitted of murder and assault charges Monday in the stabbings of two men after a post-Super Bowl party.

The jury deliberated less than five hours before returning the verdicts in the trial of Joseph Sweeting and Reginald Oakley. The verdicts came just hours after Lewis practiced with the Baltimore Ravens for the first time since pleading guilty to a misdemeanor charge and testifying for the prosecution in the murder case.

Oakley hugged his attorney, Bruce Harvey, who pumped his fist in exuberance when the verdicts were announced. Sweeting leaned over and put his head on the defense table.

Sweeting, Oakley and Lewis were charged with murder, felony murder and aggravated assault in the Jan. 31 deaths of Jacinth Baker and Richard Lollar, who were stabbed outside the party in Atlanta's Buckhead entertainment district.

Lewis, the NFL's top tackler last season, reached a plea agreement with District Attorney Paul Howard last week. He pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor obstruction-of-justice charge, testified against Oakley and Sweeting, and will serve a year of probation, but no jail time.

"The irony of this case is the only person convicted in this case was Ray Lewis," Harvey said.

The Ravens' minicamp in Owings Mills, Md., was finished by the time the verdicts came down and Lewis was unavailable for comment. The Ravens said they would have no comment on the acquittals.

Sweeting, a longtime friend of Lewis' from Miami, was charged with Lollar's death. Oakley, an acquaintance of Lewis from Baltimore, was charged with Baker's death.

Both faced life in prison if convicted, but the jury found them innocent on all counts.

"We are deeply, deeply disappointed in the verdict," Howard said. "We thought that we had presented ... substantial evidence that we thought should have resulted in a verdict of guilty for these defendants. That didn't happen."

Families of the victims gathered in the hallway outside the courtroom.

"This is ridiculous," said Faye Lollar, Lollar's aunt. "That money sure did buy a lot of people. All that blood. ... I don't believe this."

Baker and Lollar were stabbed during a street fight that erupted around 4 a.m. as the nightclubs in the Buckhead district were closing after the Super Bowl, which was held in Atlanta.

Evidence showed Baker started the brawl by hitting Oakley in the head with a champagne bottle. Sweeting tried to help Oakley, but never made it because two large men attacked him and dragged him behind a tree, Lewis testified. Lewis said he then saw Sweeting regain his footing and start throwing punches and fighting back.

Future Longhorn's double gives The Woodlands 5A crown, 3-2

By Jim Vertuno
AP Sports Writer

AUSTIN — Vincent Sinisi couldn't have asked for a better debut at the University of Texas' Disch-Falk Field.

The Longhorns signee belted a two-out sixth inning double to drive home the winning run and give The Woodlands the Class 5A state baseball championship with a 3-2 victory over Corpus Christi Moody.

"I love this field," said Sinisi, who also pitched a complete game in The Woodlands' 11-1 semifinal victory over Duncanville last Thursday.

Monday's game originally was scheduled for last Friday night but was delayed three times by rain.

The Woodlands (30-6) returned home Saturday while Moody (38-4-1) had stayed in Austin until Sunday. Moody finally returned home only to come back on Monday morning when the weather cleared.

"I think the layoff hurt us," said Moody pitcher Gene Flores, who struck out eight but put the winning run on base with a wild pitch that foiled a strikeout. "We were off (three) days and we had to wait it out."

Sinisi said the time home was invaluable for The Woodlands.

"It was good to get back into our own beds," Sinisi said.

Two Moody miscues, the wild pitch and an error, put two runners on in the bottom of the sixth to set up Sinisi's heroics.

After Flores struck out Taylor Hale for the second out, Sinisi hit the first pitch he saw to right center, scoring pinch runner Shane Jensen from second base. The hit would have scored both baserunners but the ball bounced off the artificial turf and over the fence for a ground-rule double, holding a run at third.

"He had been coming at with fastballs all day, then he hung a curveball," Sinisi said.

The Woodlands' Wes Smiley retired the side in order in the top of the seventh, getting David Castillo to line to first for the final out. Moody was ranked No. 3 in the nation by Baseball America and had brought a crowd of about 2,500 fans compared to about 300 for The Woodlands.

China Spring 4, Yoakum 1

Three days of rain did little to cool off Jared Clements' bat.

After waiting out yet another rain delay on Monday, Clements belted a three-run homer in the first inning as China Spring defeated Yoakum to win the Class 3A state baseball championship. The game was delayed three days because of rain and was halted for 35 minutes in the first inning for yet another shower.

When the clouds finally cleared, temperatures quickly shot up to a sticky 88 degrees. The heavy air did little to stop Clements' homer, however, as his 370-foot shot cleared the left field wall with the wind blowing out. Yoakum starter Jared Natho had walked the first two batters and didn't finish the inning.

China Spring added another run on Jeremy Toledo's single in the fourth.

Ricky Barlow pitched 4 1/3 innings for the victory and Josh Lessman, who pitched a complete game in a 2-1 semifinal victory over Forney on Thursday, gave up one hit in 2 2/3 innings of relief.

Braves rally from five down

Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — Andruw Jones homered and drove in five runs as the Atlanta Braves lost a three-run lead, then rallied from five runs down to beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 10-8 Monday despite Kevin Young's six-RBI night.

Young drove in six runs in the first two innings with a double and homer as the Pirates quickly chased Kevin Millwood and went ahead 8-3.

■ NL Roundup

Jones led the Braves' comeback with a solo homer and a two-run shot, both off Todd Ritchie.

Brewers 8, Expos 1

MILWAUKEE — Jason Bere (4-5) won for just the second time in 11 starts since April 13, allowing three hits in 6 1/3 innings and striking out seven.

Diamondbacks 4, Dodgers 2

LOS ANGELES — Travis Lee homered and drove in two runs, and Brian Anderson won for the 12th time in 13 decisions as the Diamondbacks beat the Dodgers.

consecutive hits, but only got one run out of the bases-loaded situation.

Texas starter Phil Seibel hit Karl Jernigan, scoring Chris Smith. But then Seibel got Pichi Balet to ground into a double play.

FSU added two runs in the fourth and one in the fifth.

Again, the Seminoles got three straight hits. Futrell's single up the middle scored Jernigan, and Balet came home on a wild pitch to put Florida State ahead 3-0.

Griffin hit a solo home run in the fifth, his ninth of the season, to give the Seminoles a 4-1 lead.

Louisiana St. 10, Southern California 4

Brad Hawpe hit two three-run homers and Louisiana State beat Southern California in a winners' bracket game, snapping the Trojans' 16-game winning streak.

LSU (50-17) has won 11 straight games and remains the only unbeaten team in the postseason. In two CWS games the Tigers have scored 23 runs and hit five home runs.

Southern Cal's Mark Prior (10-7) took a no-hitter into the sixth inning. It was broken up by Ryan Theriot, who scored three times and drove in three for the Tigers, who have won four national titles in the five times they have opened the CWS 2-0.

Trey Hodges (4-2) allowed two runs and four hits in relief of Ben Saxson, who left in the fourth inning with a blister on his right middle finger.

Beau Craig and Alberto Concepcion homered for the Trojans (44-19), who committed four errors and used six pitchers, five in the final three innings. USC will play the winner of Monday night's elimination game between Texas and Florida State on Tuesday.

TRADE: Mets, Red Sox discuss picking up Sosa

the first public move. Because he's a 10-year veteran who has been on his current team for more than five years, Sosa has the right to veto any trade.

"While it's not something that has a great deal of appeal for me, I've been around the game long enough not to preclude opportunities that might measurably improve the organization," Cubs president Andy MacPhail said.

New York manager Joe Torre said before Monday night's game against Boston that his team is looking for more offense.

"I wouldn't be surprised if we do do something," Torre said. "I don't know if we'll get something done. There are a lot of conversations going on."

Several other teams have been in contact with the Cubs about Sosa, including the New York Mets.

The Boston Red Sox are another possibility, one of the sources said. Red Sox outfielder Carl Everett said any team would like to have Sosa, who had 63 homers last year after hitting 66 in 1998.

"But is he a team player and can he make a team better?" Everett said. "I don't know. If he doesn't fit in with a team, he's not going to help."

The Cubs' options are: extend Sosa's contract, trade him or let him stay and take the chance he would become a free agent after the 2001 World Series. If there's a trade, the Cubs would like to get the most talent possible, but Sosa's value in a deal decreases as the end of his contract approaches.

Crude jumps

Crude oil prices raced to a three-month high Monday on the New York Mercantile Exchange on news that OPEC's expected production increase won't happen for at least another week. Just 10 weeks after OPEC raised oil production to tamp down fast-rising prices, the cost of crude is soaring well above $30 a barrel again. With a new delay in the cartel's much-anticipated decision on whether to open the taps wider, crude for July delivery rose $1.54 to $31.74 a barrel Monday. The Organization of the Petroleum Exporting Countries had been expected to increase supply by 500,000 barrels a day last week — a move ministers authorized at their last meeting if the average 20-day price of OPEC oil topped $28 a barrel, which occurred nearly a week ago. While the increase is still expected to happen, a top cartel official said Sunday it won't be formally considered until the oil ministers meet June 21 in Vienna.

Dollar unchanged

NEW YORK — Most major currencies were virtually unchanged against the dollar Monday in an unusually slow day of foreign exchange trading. The euro was quoted at 95.30 cents in late U.S. trading, down slightly from 95.31 cents Friday. The dollar also bought 106.75 Japanese yen, down from 106.83 yen. Analysts said traders apparently decided to sit on their hands Monday ahead of the release later this week of several key U.S. inflationary barometers. Retail sales figures for May will be released today, and consumer price index and housing starts numbers are expected later in the week. Currency traders will use these statistics to try and predict whether Federal Reserve Board policy-makers will raise interest rates again at the Fed's June 27 meeting, said Tim Fox, currency analyst at Standard Chartered Bank in New York. The value of the dollar is likely to get a boost if policy-makers leave rates alone. Higher interest rates make it more expensive to borrow U.S. dollars. The dollar also was quoted at 1.6379 Swiss francs, down from 1.6427, and 1.4750 Canadian dollars, unchanged from Friday.

T-bills fall

WASHINGTON — Interest rates on short-term Treasury securities fell in Monday's auction. The Treasury Department sold $8.5 billion in three-month bills at a discount rate of 5.775 percent, down from 5.800 percent last week. An additional $7.5 billion was sold in six-month bills at a rate of 6.005 percent, down from 6.040 percent. The three-month rate was the lowest since May 30 when the bills sold for 5.730 percent. The six-month rate was the lowest since May 1 when the rate was 5.935. The new discount rates understate the actual return to investors — 5.943 percent for three-month bills with a $10,000 bill selling for $9,854 and 6.279 percent for a six-month bill selling for $9,696.40.

EPA suspects gasoline price gouging

■ Federal officials investigate soaring prices of cleaner-burning gasoline in Midwest.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Federal officials met for two hours with refiners Monday, and the EPA's top air pollution official said he heard "no good explanation" for soaring gasoline prices in Midwest cities where new requirements require cleaner-burning gas.

The Environmental Protection Agency and Energy Department said field inspectors were sent to the Milwaukee and Chicago areas to investigate price increases in recent weeks of 30 to 50 cents a gallon. They focused on both refining and distribution, one official said.

At the White House, spokesman Joe Lockhart said the Midwest price hikes "seem to be out of whack," and any evidence of price gouging that investigators find will be turned over to the Federal Trade Commission for further investigation.

Officials from eight major oil refineries sat in on the EPA and Energy Department meeting, and further sessions were held later with individual companies.

"We see no good explanation for why the (high) prices exist. ... We think the prices are unfair and inappropriate," Robert Perciasepe, the EPA's assistant administrator for air and pollution programs, told reporters after the meeting.

He said that while gasoline supplies are lower than normal, "there are adequate supplies" to keep prices in check. The additional cost of the cleaner-burning gasoline, called reformulated gasoline, costs only five to eight cents a gallon more to produce, Perciasepe said.

The Energy Department released data that showed prices of reformulated gasoline were on average nine cents a gallon higher as of June 5 than conventional gasoline nationwide, but 23 cents higher in the Midwest. The newly blended gas was required beginning this month in areas with severely polluted air.

Perciasepe and Melanie Kenderdine, a senior DOE official who also attended the meeting, would not characterize explanations given by industry officials except to say there was general discussion about supply and distribution problems.

"We're suspicious of gouging," EPA spokesman Dave Cohen said earlier.

Urvan Sternfels, president the National Petrochemical and Refiners Association, said some of the price increases in the Midwest stemmed from unexpected problems refiners had with meeting the new, higher vapor-pressure requirements for the cleaner gasoline. Corn-based ethanol, used widely in the region as a fuel additive, reduces vapor pressure and complicates fuel blending, he said.

The Renewable Fuels Association, which represents the ethanol industry, blamed the refiners for not building adequate stocks of reformulated gasoline and the EPA for "failure to make appropriate regulatory changes that would reduce the cost of producing RFG in Chicago and Milwaukee."

Gasoline prices have increased for five consecutive weeks nationwide with the beginning of the heavy summer driving season, but they soared in some parts of the Midwest — especially Illinois and Wisconsin.

But EPA officials said they were puzzled as to why the price difference between conventional and the cleaner-burning gasoline was as wide as it has been in the Midwestern areas requiring the cleaner gasoline.

"We do not believe that the cleaner-burning gasoline is causing the major price increases," said Perciasepe.

According to the Energy Department, the average price of regular grade gasoline in areas requiring reformulated gasoline nationwide was $1.63 a gallon on June 5, or nine cents a gallon more than the average price of gasoline sold in other parts of the country that not require RFG.

The average price for the cleaner gasoline was $1.84 a gallon in the Midwest, a 23-cent difference from conventional gasoline; $1.56 a gallon on the East Coast, a nine-cent difference; $1.61 on the West Coast, only a five-cent difference; and $1.48 a gallon on the Gulf Coast, a difference of 2 1/2 cents, according to the DOE's Energy Information Administration.

Some motorists in the Chicago and Milwaukee areas have been paying as much as $2 a gallon.

Profitable prickly pear

Cactus being used for food, health items

By Worth Wren Jr.
Associated Press

FORT WORTH — Generations of Texans have condemned the prickly pear for pilfering moisture from the prairie grasses that sustain cattle.

But now the cactus is gaining a new image. New products, including insect repellent and a skin-care moisturizing gel, are being made from the extract of the prolific prickly pear.

Since being introduced in the Caribbean islands in 1997, sales of Cactus Juice products have gone national and are expected to top $4 million this year, says the manufacturer, Safe Solutions.

The company, which started its factory in Rowlett, now has 20 employees and is now based in Seymour, about 130 miles west of Fort Worth.

Texas native Rob Gibson started the company after moving to Roatan, off the Honduras coast, where he needed relief from tropical insects and sun.

He had retired early from partnerships in a string of auto repair shops and found a new career. Through a friend, he learned about the possibilities of products made from cactus juice and decided to test some of them.

"We like to say, 'It's going to be the next aloe,'" said Gibson, referring to widely sold products made from the aloe vera plant.

Cactus Juice products are now sold in some supermarket chains and retail stores after their U.S. debut this year.

But that's not the only way the prickly pear is losing its pasture-pest reputation.

From a long history as a food and feed source in Mexico and Central and South America, cactus farming is snagging interest in Africa, Israel, Sicily, southern Italy and Southern California.

And cactus is being used for a variety of foods from salsa to wine.

"It's beginning to get respectable," Gibson said.

Research on human health benefits of cactus extract has begun, said Jonas Wilson, Safe Solutions' marketing director.

The French are even showing an interest in its uses for skin care, said Jim Moss, a technical writer and editor of the Professional Association for Cactus Development Journal, based in Dallas.

Promoters tout cactus vitamins, fiber and other nutrients. Cactus product claims are becoming so numerous that scientists are urging caution for consumers. A cactus pill touted for its health benefits proved worthless, Moss said.

Gibson's move into the cactus product business was based on research of the late Richard Kunkel, a retired industrial chemist who had studied cactus extract. After testing it for use as an insect repellent in Central America, Gibson and his partners found a way to mass produce it. Hence, Safe Solutions Cactus Juice Insect Protection and Cactus Juice Miracle Gel.

Safe Solutions contracts with ranchers to harvest the native cactus, which in the past was sprayed with herbicide, burned or bulldozed.

"It's not traditional agriculture," said David Eppele, director of Arizona Cactus and Succulent Research, a 14-year-old nonprofit botanical garden in Bisbee, Ariz., on the Mexican border.

Cactus is nutritious, and it might even benefit diabetics, based on early research, Eppele said.

He cites centuries of American Indians and then Hispanics using cactus juice to soothe and heal burned and scraped skin.

As a cultivated crop south of the Rio Grande, the young green ears, called nopalitos, are a venerable staple in Hispanic cooking and steadily becoming sampled more often by Anglos north of the border.

"Nopalitos. That's yuppie food in Santa Fe, Sausalito and Fort Worth," Eppele said.

But it is also rapidly becoming a U.S. staple. Eppele said U.S. border officials at Nogales, Ariz., alone reported 138,000 tons of imported prickly pear cactus in cans, jars and bulk fresh loads crossing last year.

A cactus margarita has been served on the San Antonio Riverwalk. And although he hasn't sampled it yet, Wilson said, prickly pear wine has been made. "It's supposed to be pretty interesting," he said.

Students who consolidate loans can lock in current rates

Associated Press

With interest rates on college loans about to go up, the federal government is letting students and families lock in current rates if they consolidate their borrowing.

The move by the Education Department gives people with student loans until June 30 to take advantage of current rates if they combine their outstanding loans into one. This applies only to loans borrowed directly from the government or through a cooperating private lender.

With college increasingly financed by loans, students often need more than one. Many eventually merge them to get a single monthly payment, with a rate set for the life of the loan.

On the Net:
U.S. Department of Education: http://www.ed.gov
http://www.loanconsolidation.ed.gov
http://www.nasfaa.org/

Ordinarily, interest on a consolidated loan is set when the original loans are verified. That can take a week to 30 days. With a rate hike coming, this could cost borrowers more than they bargained for.

Instead, the government will let borrowers lock in a rate the date they apply for federal loan consolidation.

The government calculates that a student who owes $20,000 could save $1,500 in interest on a 10-year repayment plan by consolidating this month.

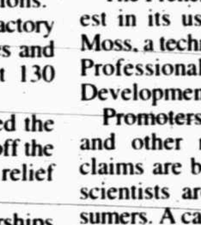
As of July 1, Stafford loan rates, currently between 6.32 percent and 7.72 percent, will rise to between 7.59 percent and 8.99 percent.

Rates on PLUS loans for parents with dependent undergraduates — now anywhere from 7.72 percent to 7.98 percent — will jump to between 8.99 percent and 9.48 percent.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Money market is preferable over CDs for emergency cash

By Eric Tyson



Tyson

Q: Perhaps you can suggest a better strategy for creating an economic security blanket that generates income. Over a three-month period I've purchased three different three-month CDs, each with sufficient funds to get me through a month's worth of living expenses. When a CD matures, I decide if I need to cash it in (e.g., if I were to be out of work looking for a job) or I shop around for a CD with a good rate. The beauty of this strategy is that I have a three-month security blanket that is doled out to me if I encounter an emergency, plus the security blanket generates money. Can you suggest a better strategy for planning for the unexpected while generating income?

A: Your strategy is certainly creative! You've got several months' worth of living expenses earmarked for security purposes, yet you reap some of the higher rates available to those who are willing to tie up their money for a period of time.

The downside to your approach is that you don't immediately have any money available. Suppose your next-to-mature CD doesn't mature for 25 days, yet you have an emergency cash need today, tomorrow or even next week? If you were to be forced to cash in a CD early, you would get hit with stiff early withdrawal penalties.

You should consider instead keeping your emergency reserve in a money market fund. The nation's leading mutual fund companies offer money funds that offer relatively high current yields, comparable to and in some cases higher than the rate paid on short-term CDs. Money funds also offer daily access to your funds without penalty, plus check-writing privileges (usually the checks must be for larger amounts, such as at least $250).

Another advantage of money market funds over CDs is that money funds are available in tax-free versions. Thus, if you're in a relatively high federal and/or state income-tax bracket, you can net more interest through investing in a tax-free money fund. Among the major no-load (commission-free) fund companies with a broad number of funds offered are Fidelity, T. Rowe Price and Vanguard.

Q: I purchased Linux (lnux) stock at $266 when it was new on the market, and it is on a spiral downward and is only $44 now. What can I hope to happen with this stock, and will it ever turn around? Reports I read favor it, but I cannot see how. And at what point do I cash in and take my losses?

A: You're not alone — many investors bought into the highest flying technology and Internet stocks over the past year and have been burned badly. The fundamental mistake you and millions of other investors have made is failing to do your homework and investigating before you buy.

Many investors, probably including you, got caught up in various stories such as Linux's market potential and threat to Microsoft's dominant position and failed to ask at what price is the stock a fair value. Some of these new technology companies that went public and had their stock price go up five-fold, 10-fold or more in short order have plummeted back near their offering prices.

If you liked the stock at $266, you should theoretically love it at only $44! Seriously, though, the marketplace has spoken and is telling you that you overpaid for this company.

Read the company's annual, quarterly and 10-K reports. Also review independent analysts' reports such as those from Value Line and Hoover's. If you believe the company has excellent long-term prospects and is fairly valued, why sell now and take a huge loss? Hold on, and hopefully a decade from now you'll be happy with the stock.

Communication methods are different from child to child

By T. Berry Brazelton, M.D.
New York Times Special Features

QUESTION: What is your opinion of an 8-year-old boy who cannot say "I love you?" When I ask him why he cannot say the words, he replies that he really doesn't understand what they mean. I have tried to explain by giving examples of what love means, but he doesn't seem to understand.

Brazelton

He seems to have difficulty expressing his feelings of like or dislike. When asked if he had a good time at a birthday party, he can't seem to give a definitive answer. If I try to talk to him about it, he gets upset.

Now I just say "I love you" without expecting any reply. I have told him it's OK not to say it if he doesn't feel it and that maybe someday he will.

He is otherwise affectionate, giving and receiving hugs and kisses. I have raised him myself in a loving household. We left his abusive father when he was 2 and haven't had any contact since.

I have tried to provide a stable, loving environment for him to flourish in, buy this one thing nags at me. — C.C., Royal Palm Beach, Fla.

DR. BRAZELTON: It sounds as if you may be embarrassing your son by pushing him so hard. He expresses himself behaviorally. Let that be enough.

In a single-parent family, it may feel too close or too uncomfortable for him to have to use adult expressions such as "I love you." Respect his clear decision and don't push him on this.

QUESTION: I am in support of N.J.W. in San Francisco who responded regarding the grandmother who was distressed over her 18-month-old grandchild's temper tantrums. She advised teaching the child American Sign Language to assist in communication between the child and adults. You responded that you do not have experience with sign language and that temper tantrums are a normal part of childhood. While I agree with you in that respect, I also believe that the frequency of tantrums can be reduced by the use of sign language.

My daughter has been practicing sign language with my 2-1/2-year-old granddaughter since she was a year old. The child has responded very well and is extremely well-behaved. Although she still has tantrums, they are few and far between. My daughter attributes this to her ability to communicate.

My granddaughter knows over 100 words in sign language and is learning to put sentences together. This has not hindered her verbal skills.

My daughter feels that the use of sign language has saved a lot of time and frustration because the guesswork in communicating with a small child has been virtually eliminated. — G.J.M., Kirkland, Wash.

DR. BRAZELTON: What we call gestural language — including signing — is an important form of communication with small children. In the case of tantrums, teaching children more formal signing may well divert their natural tendency to establish their strong feelings at the time of a temper tantrum.

However, I believe that tantrums are one important pathway for toddlers to learn about themselves and how to handle themselves when they want to be in control of their decisions. So, I don't feel driven to divert them.

Natural forms of signing such as smiling are instinctive responses of caring adults. When a small child makes a bid for a verbal response, or a smile or a frown, one should surely respond in kind.

I certainly recommend all such forms of communication. Every time you respond to a baby's bid you are saying, "You are important!" This helps a small child develop self-esteem. He realizes: "I matter!"

Dear dad:

Thanks for all you do. Happy Father's Day

By Katie Boden

Maximo Muñoz, seated, is patriarch of a long-time Midland family that includes his sons, Martin, left, and Fred, right, and Fred's son, Alex, center. They and other families will be honoring their fathers this weekend as the nation celebrates Father's Day, annually marked on the third Sunday in June.

Tim Fischer/
Reporter-Telegram

It's refreshing to know that with today's fragmented families, where career moves and job transfers forever separate extended families, there are still some "home town" people. Many of these families are anchored by the oldest generation. As Fathers' Day nears, one such patriarch is honored.

Maximo Muñoz was born in Midland in 1918 and, except for leaving to serve during World War II and the Korean conflict, has lived here all of his life. He and his wife, Otillia, have raised nine children. Their extended family also includes 32 grandchildren and 29 great grandchildren.

Muñoz looks younger than his 82 years, and has a sharp wit and good sense of humor. As he and his two sons, Fred and Martin, and his grandson, Alex, speak together of the family history, their pride, love and humor are evident in every story they tell.

"My father was a descendent of the Tarahumara Indians in Mexico," Muñoz said. "My mother was half-Mexican and half-Spanish. They lived in the small Mexican town called San Juan de Los Lagos."

His parents eventually left Mexico to get away from both the economic depression and the revolution between the government and Pancho Villa. First they settled in Abilene. After a while they returned to Mexico, but decided it was no longer the place they wanted to live. They traveled back to the U.S. and permanently settled in Midland.

Muñoz attended public school in Midland in the 1930s, but relates how limited the opportunities were for Hispanic children at that time. He remembers going to the "Mexican school," which only went up to the sixth grade. His graduating class included only him and two other students.

"Things are so different now. There is no comparison. It's quite a bit better now and I'm glad of that. We have a good superintendent now," Muñoz said. "I've seen all my children go through the school system and they did it on their own."

AFTER SCHOOL, Muñoz went right to work. "Just name some kind of work and I did it, from digging mesquite to building high towers."

He married Otillia "about 1940." Shortly afterwards, he went to England to serve in the Army Air Corps as a mechanic for the B-17 and B-24 aircraft during World War II. "London was my stomping grounds," he said. He came back to Midland after the war, but was called back into the service during the Korean conflict or, as he called it, "that crazy war."

"I was supposed to stay in for 17 months, but served for 16 years." After a few silent moments he continued, "I feel the American people did not receive the war veteran like me the way they should have been received. I got paid $50 a month. I didn't mind. But I felt they ignored us. I am glad for the work Ciro Sanchez is doing." (Sanchez is instrumental in organizing the Reyes-Sanchez war memorial, honoring Hispanic veterans).

The Muñoz couple went on to raise nine children — Maximo Jr. (Jesse), Mickey, Tina, Ellen, Fannie, the twins Max and Martin, Lucy and Fred. Their various careers include operations maintenance, Baptist ministry, Midland College employee, church staff, retired U.S. Air Force, carpet specialists, accountant, business manager and mothers. "I am proud of every one of them," declared Muñoz.

As father, grandfather and great-grandfather, the legacy Muñoz gives his children is his life experiences. His son, Martin, said, "He always told us, 'If it doesn't belong to you, don't take it.' I work in retail. His advice has put me through retail for a lot of years. My father also taught me respect. He taught us to say 'yes ma'am' and 'no ma'am' no matter how bad a situation was."

Martin drew from his father's advice when raising his own children. "Stay with them. Don't give up on them. Advise them, hold your ground, and don't give up on them."

Fred, the youngest of the Muñoz children, added, "He taught me to give it your best no matter what activity you're doing. He always bestowed that advice to us — whether in school or at the job. Our family has succeeded because of what Mom and Dad showed to us. Love has a lot of meaning to it."

It's apparent that Muñoz, a formidable appearing gentleman despite his age, commands respect. With a chuckle, his older son Martin recalled how his father coaxed his children to get up and go to school every morning by bellowing out "Up and at 'em!"

"My father was a strict man," concurred Fred. "But I was the youngest so I saw what the oldest could get away with. Once I threw a chair at Martin. I ran to Dad's room because I knew Dad would protect me. He protected me because I protected him from Mom."

Life wasn't easy for the Muñoz family. In the early days, they lived in a rented house for $12.50 a week. Once they were two weeks late on the rent. Muñoz has a job that paid $2 a day. Of that $2, he gave 50 cents daily to his children for lunch money.

Health issues have also concerned the family. Jerry Muñoz, grandson of the senior Muñoz and son of Martin, is a cancer survivor. "You don't have it hard until you see something like this," said Martin. Both Jerry and his son, Jerry Lee, now run marathons. Also, Otillia, matriarch of the family, is currently in a nursing home.

The spouses of the nine Muñoz brothers and sisters also help weave the web holding this family together. "The in-laws have seen this family go through thick and thin. We're still holding on," said Martin.

The senior Muñoz agreed. "Yes, my daughters-in-law and sons-in-law are all good people."

The next generation of the Muñoz family seems as resilient and promising as its predecessors. Alex Muñoz, son of Fred, is a sophomore at Midland High School. Alex enjoys in-line hockey and plays trombone for the MHS band. He plans to attend college and major in music. "It's really good having all your family in one area. You can gather in one place," Alex said. He, too, has learned the values of honesty and respect passed down to him from his father and looks forward to giving these values to his own children one day.

Muñoz said of his grandson, "I'm proud of Alex because he's worked. He's gone to school. He's shown the family he can do anything."

ONE OF THE things Alex has shown the family he can do was on his recent trip to England with the MHS band. Alex, along with the other band members, was part of the millennium celebration on Jan. 1. "Imagine," said Martin. "Dad was in London serving his country in World War II, and now his grandson went there to perform for the beginning of the new millennium."

As the torch is passed from father to son to grandson, Muñoz reflects on his life. He is the first to admit that his family is not perfect and has had problems, as do all families.

He sums up his hope for every generation of his children, "I told them they have no limitations ... their educational background, their heritage, no matter what. They can do it if they want to. I have real good children."

To all the dads in the Muñoz family, and in other families too: Happy Father's Day.

A PARENT'S PERSPECTIVE: LANA CUNNINGHAM

Father of major importance in small son's life

By Lana Cunningham

"Daddy! Where are you! I N-E-E-D you!"

At least once each evening, and several times on weekends, Christopher calls out these words at the top of his voice. Depending on his mood, my husband either cringes or cheerily answers. At the sound of my husband's voice, Christopher's face glows and the grin spreads from ear to ear. "Daddy! I need you."

Cunningham

There is something about fathers that makes them appear as heroes to their children. Maybe it's because they aren't home as much as mother (whether or not she is slaving away in an office or at the house). Maybe it's because they don't do things just the way mother does them. Maybe it's because they offer a different slant on life.

I now am convinced that God was right when he designed the world so that it takes two people to create a child and that the resulting product needs a mother and father.

Under even the easiest circumstances, it's difficult for one parent to have the strength and wisdom to raise the child alone. My husband often has said, "You do the nurturing; I'll do the disciplining." (Nice thought, but it doesn't always work that way.)

Baby books talk about how important it is for the father to "bond" with the infant in the first days after birth. These two have been bonded since Christopher was born — maybe even before when my husband would talk to my swollen stomach.

My husband found his own way to develop that bond further with Christopher not long after birth. Photographs show him and the tiny infant on a couch, both sound asleep. Christopher is stretched out on my husband's chest. The two could have slept that way for hours — and did.

Christopher was only a few months old when he "learned" about what time to expect his father in the evening. As soon as he heard the back door open, his face lighted up, he kicked his legs uncontrollably and the arms reached out toward Daddy. At that moment, I could have turned into a Teletubby or Rugrat character and Christopher wouldn't have cared.

It's still that way. Christopher yells, "Daddy's home!" and runs into my husband's arms.

It's always amazing to determine which of the parents' genes found their way into a baby and to see how they unfold in the child's life. Christopher inherited my eyes and skin and hair color. For months, my husband would joke that maybe the father was the mailman or milkman. But when Christopher was only a few months old, there was no doubt about whose son he was. During the night, he had rolled over onto his stomach to sleep — a position the doctors don't want to see in infants but which is the norm for my husband.

The two sleep in the same positions. Two years ago, while on vacation, I had made my husband sleep on the bed with Christopher "because he moves around too much and I'm tired of getting kicked and jabbed."

My husband claimed his son's sleeping never bothered him. When I got up one morning, I could see why. They were laying in exactly the same position — same arm above their heads, other one down, and legs crooked at the same point. It looked like Big Daddy with Little Clone.

At the age of 4, Christopher has become Daddy's Helper. If my husband needs to lay down flats of grass, Christopher is holding on to an edge and helping. If Big Daddy needs to trim water shoots off trees, Little Son is standing nearby to pick up what falls on the ground and put them in the trash.

Time spent together after Christopher's bath is special for both of them. They build, they sing songs, they make up stories and tell each other. They race Hot Wheels, fly space ships, pound out a rhythm on the edge of a wagon and put puzzles together.

When I've walked into the room to check on them, Christopher has ushered me out. "Go away, Mommy."

Recent health problems that popped up in my husband were frightening, not because I thought about having to live alone. I had been single for too many years for that idea to scare me.

It was the thought that Christopher wouldn't have his father to help him grow up.

"You don't understand him," my husband has said. "He's going to be a lot like me and I know how he's going to act."

He's right. I often don't understand my son.

Christopher has been anxiously awaiting Father's Day since before school was out. He made a gift for his dad at pre-school, the teacher wrapped it and it sits in his room, waiting for the special day.

Every morning, Christopher asks, "Is it Father's Day yet?" He can't wait to give Daddy his "pwesent."

Watching Christopher climb into his father's lap one evening after supper and listening to the duo's conversation, I was reminded of my son's daily call, "Daddy! Where are you? I NEED you."

We both need you.
