U.S. alters arms control proposal

GENEVA (AP) — The United States today submitted new proposals at the superpower arms control talks, but a U.S. spokesman rejected reports that the Reagan administration was softening its demands for strict verification measures.

Terry Shroeder, a spokesman for the U.S. arms control delegation, said the U.S. proposals were put forth at a meeting today of negotiators on intermediate-range nuclear forces, headed by American Maynard Glitman and Soviet Gen. Vladimir Medvedev.

Shroeder, reading a prepared statement, said the United States had always maintained that verification measures could be simplified under a so-called double zero option. That means elimination of shorter-range missiles and medium-range missiles worldwide, which have ranges between 300 and 3,000 miles.

"Today we are laying out how this simplification could be achieved," Shroeder said. He said the U.S. proposal "although simplified, will still be the most stringent ever proposed in any U.S.-Soviet negotiations and will include on-site inspection."

However, he declined to provide details of the proposal.

Shroeder said the U.S. delegation "sharply rejected suggestions in U.S. media reports that we are backing off or softening our proposals."

A U.S. official in Washington on Monday told The Associated Press that the new American proposals would soften demands for on-site inspection of nuclear missile facilities, in a move designed to keep Soviet observers out of sensitive areas in the United States. The official demanded anonymity.

U.S.-Soviet negotiators are working to resolve remaining differences before the scheduled meeting of their foreign ministers next month in Washington. One area of difficulty has been agreeing on anti-cheating measures for an eventual accord.

The two sides overcame one hurdle last month when the Soviets agreed to a U.S. suggestion to eliminate all intermediate-range missiles in Europe and Asia. Previously the Soviets had insisted on keeping a force in Asia, and the United States had planned to keep a similar force on its own territory.

The United Sttes had said verification would be simplified if both sides agreed to eliminate the missiles completely. "It is easier to detect cheating if there are no missiles around," said Shroeder.

The Geneva arms control talks, which began in March 1985, also cover negotiations on strategic, or intercontinental, nuclear weapons and on space and defense systems.

Attention recently has been focused on the INF talks as the most likely to lead to a quick treaty, especially since the Soviets agreed earlier this year to separate agreement in that area from the other two subjects.

Agreement in the other areas has been blocked by Soviet insistence on strict limitations on the U.S. Strategic Defense Initiative, which the United States refuses.

In Washington, the U.S. official who spoke on condition of anonymity said the new U.S. proposals were designed to fence off sensitive American weapons production areas from Soviet observers. The official said the Reagan administration had told negotiators to ease American demands for on-site and surprise inspections of nuclear missile production facilities.

The U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency maintains the U.S. must insist on unrestricted inspection of the plants where the Soviets produce their SS-20 rockets and other missiles.

39-year search ends in reunion

By RICK BROWN
Assistant City Editor

When Midlander Sallie Sue Thomas agreed to play organ one or two Sundays a month at South Memorial Baptist Church, she didn't know that the mother she hadn't seen for 39 years lived just a block away.

"You can see the church from my mother's home. That is how close we were and didn't even know it," said Mrs. Thomas Monday night in her Route 10 home, her mother, Lurene Green, sitting nearby.

In fact, the road the 42-year-old Mrs. Thomas traveled to the pair's tearful reunion last Friday is a tale worthy of Shakespeare at his most intricate: not "Love's Labour's Lost," but love's labor's found.

"You have to understand," said Mrs. Thomas. "Our father — he drank. But to his children, you know, he was the moon and the stars. We adored him."

After divorcing the mother in 1949, the father, Ben Johnson, moved the remaining family — Mrs. Thomas and her brother, Billy, now living in Lufkin — to Orange and set up house with his brother, who also was divorced and living with a child.

"This is how it was in Texas," said Mrs. Thomas. "Men divorced their wives and took the kids. I was shocked when I discovered it, but it was because the women didn't work.

"When we moved to Orange, we were poor people, and I wore clothes from the Salvation Army," said Mrs. Thomas, who was 3 at the time of the move. "My father was probably called a drunk.

"But I was happy in my environment," she said. "I do not know this to be a fact, but everything all the relatives have said led up to it: My father would not have given us up for adoption unless he had been pressured into it."

That happened when Mrs. Thomas was 10, in 1955. "I think it was the school — maybe the child welfare and maybe the church," she said.

Whatever the reason, a wealthy family in Tyler County took the children in, but the new house was not one the woman remembers with much love.

"I lived seven years in their home. They were wealthy and they gave me everything I desired," she said. "But I never belonged to them."

She recalls her first night in the well-appointed home and the keys to the parlor piano she fingered for the first time, for she would be given music lessons later.

In her search through the past, Mrs. Thomas was helped not at all by adoption records, which were sealed and would take a court order to open.

"They won't tell you anything," the woman said of courthouse officials in charge of the records.

Panel 'evaluates,' takes no action against Painter

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

No action was taken Monday against Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter after county commissioners met in closed session to "evaluate" the sheriff and his "duties" in connection with a sting operation that led to the arrest of a man accused of trying to buy arms for Iran.

Reached Monday night Painter declined to say whether the commissioners had reprimanded or criticized him during the closed meeting.

"You know I can't talk about that," Painter said.

Following the Monday afternoon closed-door meeting Commissioner Guy McCrary said no action sprung from the session, but "a better understanding resulted."

The commissioner's court closed Monday's meeting — during which Painter and District Attorney Al Schorre were questioned about last Wednesday's sting operation — over objections made by Commissioner Scott Welch.

Welch, who voted against closing the meeting to the public and media, said he didn't understand why the court was getting involved with the affairs of a fellow elected public official.

"I don't know why we have to have an executive session. The sheriff is an elected official. If people don't like what he's doing, the people can handle that," Welch said.

However, neither Painter nor Schorre objected to the closed-door meeting.

The meeting was closed after Commissioner Durward Wright invoked an exception under the Texas Open Meetings Act that involves the evaluation of a public officer and his duties.

Under the state's Open Meetings act governmental bodies can also go into private session for personnel matters, possible land purchase or prospective litigation.

The Reporter-Telegram plans to file a lawsuit in district court seeking access to the tapes made during the closed meeting.

"Where the duties of elected officials are concerned, we believe the public has a right to know the full story of those officials' involvement in activities that fall outside the traditional scope of their work," said Jim Servatius, Reporter-Telegram editor. "Otherwise, citizens are denied an ability to intelligently evaluate the performance of those officials," he added.

Before asking the news media and public to leave, Wright said no complaints had been filed against the sheriff but he explained that the commissioners wanted in the closed session to "gather further information" on last Wednesday's events that led to the arrest of 47-year-old Victor Fonseca of Lisbon, Portugal.

"We're trying to gain as much information as we can so we can be informed of all aspects of this situation from inception to conclusion," Wright said.

Fonseca is expected to go before a Midland grand jury Wednesday on charges of involvement in a conspiracy to buy $2 million worth of stolen missile parts.

After the meeting McCrary added, "I think the sensitive nature of the events suggested that the information would best be exchanged in a closed session, particularly if there was any evidence to be discussed."

McCrary would not comment if evidence against Fonseca had been discussed.

The commissioners also talked about the sting's cost to the county during the closed meeting, McCrary said.

Painter said Monday night he hopes the cost of long distance phone calls and building phoney arms crates will not exceed $1,000.

Painter said Gary Howard and Ron Tucker — who orchestrated Fonseca's arrest — were county volunteers who donated their time.

Whatever the final costs of the operation, Painter said he will not approach the commissioner's court for reimbursement and the money will come out of his department's budget.

Baylor work on AIDS infection drug

HOUSTON (AP) — It's not a cure for AIDS, but researchers at Baylor College of Medicine announced a substance that in laboratory tests was shown to prevent infection caused by the disease.

Further development of the antibody may bring about a drug that will prevent healthy persons with the virus from contracting acquired immune deficieny syndrome.

Such a drug also could and halt the spread of AIDS in patients who are already ill, and provide a base from which an AIDS vaccine may eventually be developed, the researchers said.

"While the results show that human cells can be protected, the studies have been done only (in the test tube)," said Dr. Nancy Chang, who developed the antibody along with her husband, Dr. Tse Wen Chang, and other researchers. "Any application for human treatment must be considered very preliminary."

The study is published in the September issue of the scientific journal, Bio-Technology. Co-authors of the report are Dr. Michael S. Fung, Cecily Sun and Dr. Nai-Chu Sun.

Mrs. Chang said the new antibody acts on the spread of the virus in the body through both the blood and through cell-to-cell contact.

The group of researchers will try the antibody on blood from AIDS patients over the next several months. If those trials are successful, the scientists will ask the Food and Drug Administration for permission to move to clinical trials on patients with AIDS, a news release said.

Hance takes appointment, agrees to run for TRC seat

By JIM WARREN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Taking Gov. Bill Clements up on his offer, Kent Hance accepted the appointment to the Railroad Commission Friday and agreed to run for the seat in the 1988 election.

Hance, a former Democratic state senator and congressman, switched to the Republican Party after losing a bid in 1984 for the U.S. Senate. Hance then ran against Clements and former U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler for governor last year in the GOP primary.

Hance, 44, met with the governor last Wednesday when they talked about a possible appointment to the commission, which regulates transportation and the oil and gas industry. Railroad Commission Chairman Mack Wallace announced earlier this month that he would leave the three-member panel for a job in a prominent law firm.

Hance will be the first Republican to serve on the commission and plans to seek election in 1988. Clements's associates said the governor wanted his appointee to be a strong candidate for the commission in the 1988 election. Wallace said he will talk to Hance and time his official resignation for "an effective transition," probably in mid-to-late September when Hance completes a longstanding busing lawsuit in West Texas.

"When I was discussing the appointment with Gov. Clements last week, he said the person should be commited to run in '88 and should be a person who could get elected," Hance said. "I told the governor I agreed with him, and now that I've taken the job I plan to run to keep the seat."

The folksy Lubbock lawyer had been mentioned in Republican circles as a candidate for governor or lieutenant governor in 1990. If Hance successfully seeks election to the Railroad Commission in 1988, some policitcal veterans said it would substantially increase his momentum for a higher race in 1990. Also, some said it would solidify his shaky Republican ties.

"To even speculate on the future would be a big mistake," Hance said, attempting to quell rumors that he plans to seek higher office.

Hance told the Reporter-Telegram last week that his partners in the law firm of Boyd, Veigel and Hance had told him they wanted him to stay in the firm. Also, Hance said, he was concerned about the cut in pay if he took the commission job. A railroad commissioner makes $71,000.

Rep. Clint Hackney, D-Houston, planned to run againt Commissioner Jim Nugent in the 1988 Democrat primary. But after Wallace resigned his seat, Hackney decided to challenge the Clements' appointee to avoid an expensive, bloody primary race.

Hackney took several shots at Hance shortly after the announcement. "Is this office another political stepping stone for Mr. Hance, or is it just a mechanism to pay off the campaign debts from his two losing statewide races," Hackney asked.

Oil prices, reacting to overproduction, settle below spring levels

NEW YORK (AP) — The oil futures market hasn't lost a drop of volatility as prices fell to their lowest level since spring.

After tumbling early in response to reports of overproduction by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, prices rebounded later in the session Monday following reports of a minor incident in the Persian Gulf.

Overall, prices settled lower. At the end of trading on New York Mercantile Exchange, October contracts for West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark crude, stood at $18.60 per 42-gallon barrel, down 30 cents from Friday when the contract broke below $19 for the first time since May.

Prices for refined products also finished lower. September contracts for wholesale unleaded gasoline closed at 49.17 cents per gallon, down slightly more than half a cent from Friday, while wholesale heating oil contracts for September dipped to 49 cents per gallon, down about 0.8 cent.

Analysts said the market's mercurial move indicated traders may be looking for a floor after more than a week of heavy losses.

As the session opened, analysts said traders were shaken by the report estimating current OPEC output at about 19.7 million barrels a day, or more than 3 million barrels above its official daily quota of 16.6 million barrels.

The Middle East Economic Survey, a respected weekly published in Nicosia, Cyprus, also said several OPEC members had officially complained to the president of the 13-member organization that other members had been cheating on their quotas.

The OPEC president, Nigerian Oil Minister Rilwanu Lukman, has ruled out an emergency conference to discuss falling oil prices, said an official in his office who spoke on condition of anonymity.

After dropping to $18.15 a barrel Monday, buying picked up on word that U.S. Navy ships had encountered an Iranian warship in the Persian Gulf, said Stephen J. McKiernan, of the McKiernan & Co. commodities firm.

Traders increased buying in expectation that a serious confrontation could lead to reduced oil shipments, which would drive prices higher.

U.S.-escorted convoy cloaked in gulf haze

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — A dusty haze settled over the Persian Gulf today, reducing visibility to a half-mile and cloaking a convoy of U.S.-escorted Kuwaiti tankers reported to have entered the waterway, shipping executives said.

Officials of the Kuwait Oil Tanker Co., which operates the tankers sailing under the American flag, have denied reports by shipping sources that a new convoy of three tankers entered the gulf under the protection of four U.S. warships. The U.S. Navy does not report the movements of its ships.

A convoy of four tankers left the gulf Monday, including the Bridgeton, a 401,382-ton supertanker that was damaged by a mine on its voyage north through the gulf July 24. It was the second convoy to return from Kuwait loaded with oil under a Reagan administration plan to shield Kuwaiti tankers from Iranian attack.

The shipping executives, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the inbound three-tanker convoy had passed through the 110-mile-long Strait of Hormuz and was off the United Arab Emirates at nightfall Monday.

The convoy included the 290,085-ton supertanker Middleton, the 81,283-ton Surf City and the 79,999-ton Chesapeake City, they said.

■ Iraq threatens to resume attacks on Iranian ships — 5A

The high winds that frequently whip desert sand and dust over the gulf during the summer months appears to be aiding the convoy effort, a Dubai-based shipping executive said.

"Whether we have a new convoy moving or not, and with the weather as it is, it's all helping the U.S. Navy spread confusion which is the way it now wants the escort operations to continue," the shipping executive said.

Shipping sources said the three tankers are the last of the 11 scheduled to be reflagged with the Stars and Stripes.

In the past Iran has attacked Kuwaiti ships, charging Kuwait aids Iraq, Iran's enemy in the 7-year-old gulf war.

A U.S. destroyer and frigate warned off two small boats Monday after they approached the convoy led by the Bridgeton, the Pentagon said.

The Pentagon said Navy warships fired flares and sent verbal warnings to the dhows, but they did not veer away. When they came within eight miles of the convoy, the destroyer Kidd and frigate Crommelin sailed up to confront them, firing machine-gun blasts across their bows, the Pentagon said.

It was unclear whether the dhows were sail-powered or motorized, said the Pentagon, which did not disclose the incident's location.

Arab dhows and ships or helicopters chartered by foreign reporters several times have approached convoys and been warned away.

In a separate incident Monday involving the same convoy, U.S. helicopters and warships chased away an Iranian warship that had shadowed them.

Officers aboard the helicopter carrier Guadalcanal said the Iranian vessel presented no overt threat as it neared the convoy at the point where the Strait of Hormuz meets the Persian Gulf. The American and Iranian radio operators held a polite conversation, wishing each other a "good day."

Nonetheless, crews on five U.S. warships went on full alert and manned all guns.

Earlier this month, U.S. planes fired two missiles at an Iranian plane that approached a U.S. surveillance aircraft. The missiles missed.

In New York, Iran's deputy foreign minister said Monday that his nation would cooperate fully with United Nation's efforts to end the Iran-Iraq war. The statement indicated a softening of Iran's opposition to a Security Council cease-fire resolution passed July 20.

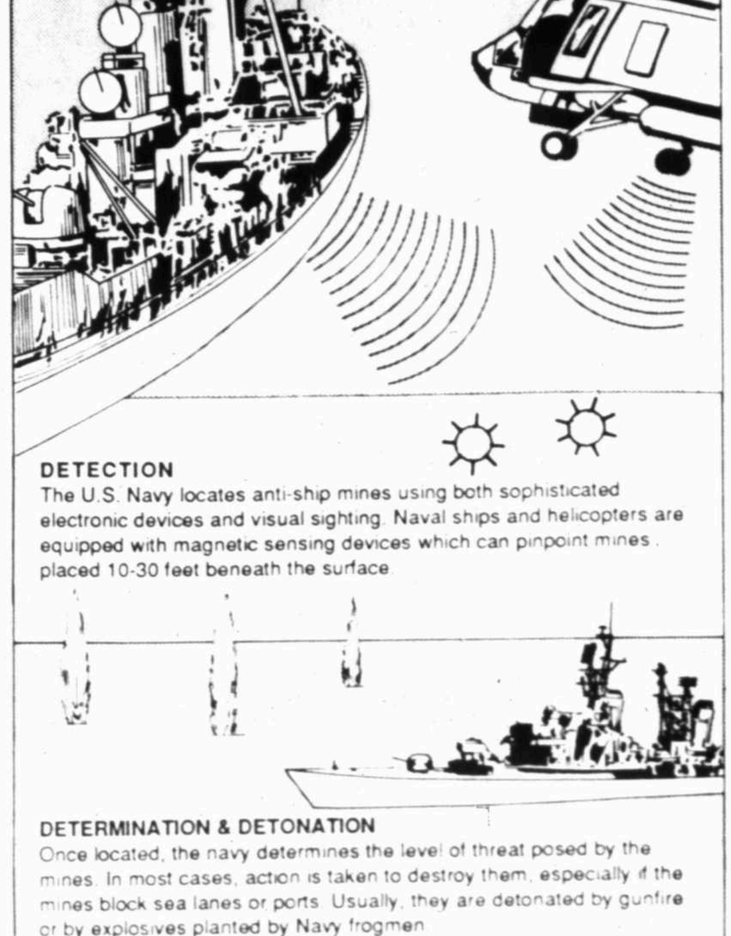
However, the envoy, Mohammad Jawad Larijani, accused Iraq and the United States of violating the resolution. He was to meet with U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar today for a second day of talks.

Arab foreign ministers meeting in Tunis on Monday urged Iran to abide by the resolution, which Iraq has accepted.

In Washington, Iraqi Ambassador Nizar Hamdoon said Monday that if cease-fire efforts slow down, his nation could break its month-old self-imposed moratorium on attacking Iranian oil shipments in the gulf.

Despite the moratorium, Iraq has been bombarding Iranian oil and industrial facilities heavily in the past few weeks.

Also Monday, the U.S. State Department disclosed that Britain has decided to reflag a Kuwaiti oil tanker. The Kuwaitis already have chartered three other ships with British flags.



Iranian leader debates call for cease-fire

New York Times News Service

UNITED NATIONS — Iran's deputy foreign minister met on Monday with Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar to discuss the Security Council's call for a cease-fire in the Persian Gulf, but officials close to the discussions reported little progress.

The meeting was the first between a senior member of the Iranian government and the secretary general since the Security Council resolution was approved last month. The resolution called on Perez de Cuellar to visit Iran and Iraq to discuss an immediate cease-fire, leading to the withdrawal of all forces behind national boundaries and full-scale peace negotiations.

The Iranian deputy foreign minister, Mohamed Jiwad Larinjani, is to continue his discussions with Perez de Cuellar on Tuesday and is to meet with most members of the Security Council except the United States.

Iran's leaders have criticized the Security Council resolution harshly, though they have stopped short of formally rejecting it. Iraq has said it will honor the resolution if Iran does.

United Nations officials said Larinjani's attitude on Monday held out little hope that Iran would accept the United Nations resolution during this week's talks. They said Perez de Cuellar had no plans to visit Tehran on the basis of the discussions so far.

Under international pressure, Tehran has already made clear that it would welcome a visit by the secretary general to discuss its quarrel with Iraq. But officials say Perez de Cuellar is determined not to go unless he is satisfied Iran is prepared to accept the entire United Nations peace plan and will not seek to use his visit for its own propaganda purposes.

In Washington, the State Department expressed impatience with what it said was Iran's continued stalling over the Security Council resolution. It said the Reagan administration believed the United Nations may soon need to prompt the Security Council initiative by declaring a mandatory arms embargo against Iran.

"We strongly hope Mr. Larinjani will indicate Iran's immediate acceptance," the department said in a statement. "If Iran continues to stall, we believe the Security Council must move ahead to consider enforcement mesures."

The Soviet deputy foreign minister, Vladimir F. Petrovsky, who, like Larinjani, is here for a United Nations conference on disarmament and development, slightly modified his country's position on Monday on the Persian Gulf naval buildup

Album contained old Nazi photos

NEW YORK (AP) — A photo album found in a garbage heap contains 13 photographs of Nazi-occupied areas of the Soviet Union, and includes hangings and a meeting between Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini.

The 21-year-old college student who said he found the photographs near his Paterson, N.J., home, sold them to the New York Post, which published them Monday.

The Post said circumstantial evidence indicated the photographs had belonged to Tscherim Soobzokov, an accused SS member killed in 1985 by a bomb that exploded on the porch of his Paterson home.

The newspaper said it bought the photos for an undisclosed sum from Keith Moore, who lives about three blocks from the Soobzokov home.

Experts who examined the photographs said they were taken by an amateur.

One picture shows three partisans hanging from a tree with signs in Russian and German saying, "Stupid attacks against German soldiers will be treated like this."

Others show Nazi leader Hermann Goering and other officers; a group of civilians being led away; corpses of Russian soldiers or prisoners of war stacked in the snow; German soldiers inspecting bodies and civilians digging in the soil, some with their bare hands.

Hitler biographer John Toland told the Post the picture of Hitler greeting the Italian dictator probably is of a meeting that took place in Uman in the Ukraine in the fall of 1941. No pictures of the meeting ever surfaced before, and "it was the only time the two of them got together on the Russian front," Toland said.

Lucjan Dobroszycki, professor of Holocaust studies at Yeshiva University, said many photos of Nazi atrocities on the Russian front exist.

"I have seen a lot of photographs but I've never seen these before. They are really entirely new images," he said.

Holocaust historian Judd Newborn said the photographs are not unusual and probably would not reveal anything new to experts. What is peculiar, he said, is that the owner would save them rather than burn them as evidence.

Soobzokov was accused of being a first lieutenant in the SS in the Caucasus region of the Soviet Union. The Post said the FBI blamed the Jewish Defense League for planting the pipe bomb that killed him.

James J. Knights, an FBI spokesman in Newark, said "the case is still pending under active investigation" and declined further comment.

Mordechai Levy of the Jewish Defense Organization, successor of the now-defunct Jewish Defense League, denied Monday that the JDL was responsible for Soobzokov's death.

Moore, a sophomore at Ramapo College in Mahwah, could not be reached for comment Monday.

REUNION

"They told me to get an attorney and go through the courts, and (that) it was almost impossible," she said. "They said they would hate for me to use that money that it would take to do it."

Through 21 years of an off-and-on search — dead ends became frustrating and she would stop for a while — Mrs. Thomas entered college, underwent moves to the Houston area, Alvin, and Lufkin — among other Texas towns — married three times and bore four sons, now almost fully grown.

And two weeks ago, the trail to the mother finally would hinge on the daughter's connection of two pieces of information that she knew to be true.

Her mother and father had met in Artesia, N.M., she said. And her mother was divorced from an earlier marriage at age 20. What she did not know was her mother's maiden name, the fact from which sprang the ultimate reunion.

"It all came to a head because I was sitting at my desk and thinking that the only thing left I can try is to go to New Mexico," she said.

A call to the Eddy County Courthouse in Carlsbad, N.M., revealed record of the divorce and the sought-after maiden name.

Armed with that information, she put in a call to the Brown County Courthouse in Brownwood to find record of her mother's birth.

None was found, however, prompting a trip to Brownwood with her husband, Bill, last Thursday to search U.S. Census Bureau records — another dead end.

Not an hour after arriving back from Brownwood that day the couple decided a trip to New Mexico was in order.

After arriving in Artesia Friday morning, the couple searched telephone books for residents having her mother's maiden name — Birchfield — to no avail.

But after discussing their search with a cafe cashier that morning, they were directed to a woman who apparently knew the town's history extensively.

And that woman "knew Momma's son by her first marriage," a man named Rocky Selman, who lived in Roswell, N.M., said Mrs. Thomas. The man maintained a weekend home in Artesia and "just happened to be visiting," she said.

Upon finding the man, "I knew him because he looks exactly like my baby brother," she said. "We hugged and kissed and boo-hooed and we cried," she said. "You see, he's an only child."

From Selman, the couple learned that her mother had since married a Midland man, E.E. Green, who owns an auto salvage shop on Rankin Highway.

"And I thought, 'My God, we've been all over the state of Texas, and here she is in my own hometown,'" Mrs. Thomas said.

Calls to the couple's sons at home in Midland marshalled their efforts in a phone book search, and the woman's address was found.

"It had been such a tedious, long search, but I thought, 'I've really got it this time,'" said Mrs. Thomas, recalling the drive back to Midland and a purchase of flowers for the hoped-for reunion.

Said Mrs. Green, 62: "And when she came through that gate — she'll tell you — I was looking her right in the eyes.

"I was looking at her features," the older woman said. "I said to myself, 'This isn't my birthday. This isn't Mother's Day.'"

And after the daughter inquired as to her name — Was she Lurene Brichfield? Was she Lurene Johnson? — the mother "jumped on me," said Mrs. Thomas.

Recalling that first hug, "It just seemed like the biggest pressure left," said Mrs. Green, indicating her shoulders. "Gone," echoed the daughter with the same motion.

Mrs. Green said: "You lay home at night; you lay intense because you're wondering about your children. You're wondering what they're doing. And that's constantly."

The older woman fingered a yellowed, 1945 birth certificate.

Headed with the name of a long-closed Midland medical facility and bordered by two tiny footprints — the daughter was born here after the family moved from New Mexico — it was notated with Mrs. Thomas' given name, Judy.

The mother had treasured that document and one other artifact: a tiny snapshot, about an inch across each side, showing a small girl in a print dress standing foreground before the porch of a wood-frame house.

A slim woman with flowing brown hair cut in a post-war fashion sat on the porch, and a diapered baby boy played off to the right.

"I would look at it lots of times, and look at it because it was all I had," said Mrs. Green.

The mother had attempted a search of her own, "going through phone books and checking all the Johnsons," she said. "And every time I'd see a Judy Johnson, I'd call her — not knowing she was adopted out or any of that."

For all the happiness of the reunion, Mrs. Thomas had some choice words for adoption practices.

"You cannot take a 10-year-old child and pick that child up and put her in a car and say, 'You are not Judy anymore, your name is Sallie Sue. And you are going to be just like you always belonged to us," she said.

While living with her adoptive parents, Mrs. Thomas was told not to discuss her past, she said, and although she was unhappy in her Tyler County home, she had respect for her adoptive parents.

The couple — who Mrs. Thomas declined to name out of continued respect — apparently trusted their daughter.

She was allowed to accompany fellow high school seniors to a marching band contest in Orange, the home of her real father, and Mrs. Thomas did not run away.

"It wasn't funny, believe me, but I survived and I succeeded," she said. "I found my mother and I will find my father."

Concrete word of Ben Johnson remains a goal for the woman, who plans to re-bury his remains either in Midland or in his childhood home near Weatheford if he is dead, she said.

"I think because of his age, and I think because he drank so heavy, the chances are that he's not alive," she said. The man would be 87 years old if he is still living.

Surveying the long series of coincidences that accompanied the search, Mrs. Thomas said that when she heard three months ago South Memorial Baptist needed an organist, it was Christian charity that was uppermost in her mind when she volunteered for the post.

And she thinks back to the parlor piano in her adoptive parent's home and the pain she felt after being torn from real family.

"Music was my escape," she recalled. And the source of a happy coincidence much later, she might have added.

Dole outlines energy plan

HOUSTON (AP) — U.S. Sen. Robert Dole outlined a five-point energy plan, which included an oil import fee, during an appearance here.

Talking with reporters Monday, Dole said he believed the controversial fee may not be needed immediately and should be imposed only as a temporary measure, not a permanent one like farm subsidy.

Dole and other Republican presidential aspirants are scheduled to debate Oct. 28 in Houston for the party's first televised debate.

HANCE

Hance will be the voice for West Texas, the state's leading oil-producing region, on the commission. Commissioner John Sharp is from Victoria, Nugent is from Kerrville in Central Texas and Wallace is from Henderson County in East Texas.

Former state Reps. Ed Emmett and Milton Fox asked Clements for appointments to the commission. Clements' former Secretary of State, David Dean, also was mentioned as a candidate. Republican sources said Loeffler, currently the White House lobbyist for contra aid, was offered the job and declined it.

Hance's appointment likely means that Nugent, who was ousted as chairman when Sharp came on the commission this year, will once again be chairman.

Announcement 'mistake'

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — Presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater erred in announcing plans for President Reagan's speech over a clandestine Contra radio station, arousing concern that the broadcast would be jammed by the Nicaraguan government.

Fitzwater told reporters at his daily briefing Monday that "we are releasing the text of a message the president taped on Saturday and is being broadcast to the people of Nicaragua today."

Reagan speaks on Contra station

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — President Reagan gave a speech on the Contras' clandestine radio station assuring the rebels their struggle against Nicaragua's leftist government "has and always will have our support."

Reagan's unusual message, broadcast three days before he is to meet with Contra rebels in Los Angeles, was heard in parts of Nicaragua despite the Sandinista government's jamming of the rebels' "Radio Liberation." It was also heard faintly in neighboring Costa Rica.

The 3-minute taped address was scheduled to be broadcast three times Monday night and two times today. Listeners heard Reagan speak in English first, followed by a Spanish translation.

The talk addressed a peace plan signed by five Central American presidents, including Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega, in Guatemala on Aug. 7. One of the plan's provisions is an end to foreign support for insurgent movements in the region.

Reagan did not reject the accord, but questioned the Sandinistas' commitment to it.

"We will be helping the democratic leaders of Central America and your countrymen inside Nicaragua as they seek a diplomatic solution to the war that has befallen your country," Reagan told his listeners. "But we will remain firm in our policy. Our objective remains the same: peace and democracy in Central America.

"Your struggle has and always will have our support, because our goal is the same," Reagan told his listeners.

The president said that in signing the accord, "The Sandinistas have agreed that the repression must stop at the same time the fighting stops.

"The Sandinistas have told us that before, but no one believes the Sandinistas any more," he said. "Simultaneity must mean freedom up front or no deal."

Reagan, a former broadcaster who communicates regularly with the American people via radio, taped the message Saturday at his ranch 20 miles north of Santa Barbara, Calif., said presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

Ortega's chief spokesman, Manuel Espinoza, was asked late Monday for any official reaction to the speech.

Espinoza said he could only say that Ortega was to announce today the membership of a National Reconciliation Commission called for in the peace plan to monitor government compliance with the accord.

The commission will be made up of one government official, one "outstanding citizen" not affiliated with the government or ruling party, and one representative each from the Roman Catholic Church and the political opposition.

Catholic leaders and heads of the 11 registered opposition parties have nominated slates of candidates from which Ortega will choose the commission member.

In his speech, Reagan said the Guatemala plan "calls for sweeping political and social change to take place in Nicaragua."

"Hopes will be measured against reality in Nicaragua and promises will be measured against peace," Reagan said.

Superintendent reviewing AIDS education program

HOUSTON (AP) — A new $100,000 AIDS education program formulated by the Harris County Medical Society for teens has been unveiled, but officials at the Houston Independent School District have not decided whether the students will see it.

Dr. Max Butler, the medical society's president, said the program is three-pronged and includes a videotape for teachers, a videotape for students ages 12-18 and a booklet written for those over age 16. It will be made available to schools and the public free of charge, he said.

But although Butler said HISD officials participated in every phase of the program's development, Superintendent Joan Raymond said she and her staff have not yet seen and evaluated the booklet or the videotape for students.

The videotape for teachers was her priority, she said. That will be shown to school nurses, health and physical education techers, life science teachers and elementary school counselors beginning Thursday.

"I do know they have been working on a booklet. We have not seen or reviewed the booklet," Raymond told the Houston Chronicle.

"We are most anxious to get the video for the teachers," she said. "The booklet is another step. We will determine for ourselves the best way for it to be used."

She said she would review the material when she receives copies of it. It will probably be presented to the school board Sept. 4, Raymond said.

"We are aware this is a very sensitive area," she said.

But she declined to discuss whether it would be considered for use in the classroom or as a resource material for school health educators. She would not discuss whether the district will use the 15-minute videotape designed to explain AIDS to students as young as 12.

Mattye Glass, HISD director of health services, said the book will be used as a reference for school nurses.

The purpose of printing 200,000 copies of the booklet was to get the information into the hands of high school-age students, Butler said.

Childhood dreams coming true for astronaut candidates

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The thought of becoming an astronaut first entered the mind of Dr. Mae C. Jemison while she watched the first lunar landing in school.

Her thoughts became a reality Monday. She not only became one of 15 new astronauts named to train at the Johnson Space Center, but also is the first black woman named to the intense one-year program. The class is the first since the Challenger disaster.

"I followed the space program and I was aware of it when I was young. I watched the Gemini and Apollo on TV in school," the 30-year-old Los Angeles physician said during an informal press briefing.

Childhood dreams of being astronauts also holds true for Lt. Cmdr. Bruce E. Melnick and C. Michael Foale.

"I can remember Alan Shepard's first space project," Melnick, 37, the first member of the U. S. Coast Guard chosen for the program, said. "I've always been enchanted with space. That was like in fifth grade and it didn't seem like it could be realistic, but now it is."

Foale, a payload officer at Johnson Space Center, said being an astronaut is something he has dreamed of doing since age 6.

"My American grandmother gave me books on space and ever since then I've been interested," the first native Englishman selected for the shuttle program said. His mother is from Minneapolis and his British father was a member of the Royal Air Force.

"I've had a goal to be an astronaut for a long time," the 30-year-old said.

Both men applied for the program three times.

Jemison does not consider being the first black woman named to the program a big issue.

"What I did, I did for myself," she said. "There wasn't a slot for a black woman. I was just very confident in myself. I was very happy when I was selected. It's something I've wanted to do a long time. I'm looking forward to it as another challenge." Her application for the program was her first.

Others named Monday for pilots were Capt. Andrew M. Allen, U.S. Marine Corps; Lt. Kenneth D. Bowersox, Lt. Cmdr. Kenneth S. Reightler, Jr., both U.S. Navy; Capt. Curtis L. Brown Jr., Maj. Kevin P. Chilton, Maj. Donald R. McMonagle, all U.S. Air Force; and William E. Readdy, an aerospace engineer and pilot at the Johnson Space Center.

Mission specialists include Jemison, Melnick, Foale, Capt. Thomas D. Akers, Air Force; Lt. Cmdr. Mario Runco Jr., Navy; Maj. James S. Voss, Army; Jan Davis, Ph.D., aerospace engineer at Marshall Space Flight Center in Hunstville, Ala., and Gregory J. Harbaugh, manager, schedules and flow office at the Johnson Space Center.

Dr. Mae C. Jemison, the first black female astronaut candidate, steps through the hatch of a space shuttle trainer at the Johnson Space Center Monday. Jemison is was one of 15 candidates, the first class to begin training since the Challenger disaster.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration received 1,962 applications, from which 117 persons were interviewed and given medical examinations at the Johnson Space Center. The group is not expected to fly in space for another four to five years.

The Challenger disaster disturbed the new candidates, but the consensus said it only pointed out how much of a risk is involved in the space program.

"I didn't have any doubts," Jemison said. "There are things involved in all endeavors. It's something one is concerned about, but problems will be worked out. It didn't change my mind."

Ms. Davis, who has applied three times for the program, said she was aware of the risks involved when she first applied for the program three years ago.

Methodist minister criticizes Southern Baptists' beliefs

DALLAS (AP) — An editorial in the nation's largest Methodist weekly newspaper criticizes Southern Baptists for a policy that requires its employees to profess that the Bible is true in all areas.

The editorial, written by the Rev. Spurgeon Dunnam III in the Aug. 28 edition of The United Methodist Reporter, calls the policy "disturbing" and "regrettable."

"Pragmatically, adopting a policy that attempts to dictate the beliefs of others is more likely to polarize and increase disunity among Southern Baptists than to produce the sought after conformity," Dunnam said in the editorial.

"Theologically, Protestant Christians long have emphasized that one's conscience should be regarded as inviolable," the editorial continued.

The comments were directed at the Southern Baptist Home Mission Board. The Atlanta-based board oversees evangelism efforts in the United States and has about 365 staff members and more than 3,600 domestic missionaries.

The employment policy was adopted earlier this summer by the Home Mission Board and requires all future missionaries and staff employees to profess that the Bible is historically, theologically, scientifically and philosophically ture. That belief reflects the opinion of conservative and fundamentalist members among the 14.6 million Southern Baptists.

The editorial, written by Dunnam and associate editor Stephen Swecker, was meant to elucidate differences between Baptist and Methodists, Dunnam said Monday.

"This kind of issue has an educational function," Dunnam told the Dallas Times Herald Monday. "This points out how our tradition is different. It's narrowness vs. broadness."

The editorial also lambasted biblical infallibility, the idea that the Bible is correct in all areas, saying, "we should challenge them to explain their doctrinaire belief in biblical infallibility when the Bible makes no such claim for itself."

The editorial surprised and upset some Texas Baptists.

"I kind of resent people taking us to task on this when we know what our own internal business is," said the Rev. Rudy Hernandez, a San Antonio pastor who is a member of the Home Mission Board.

"If I believed like my sweet Methodist brothers, I'd be a Methodist," he added.

The Rev. Elton "Butch" Ikels, another San Antonio pastor who is a member of the Home Mission Board, had a stronger reaction.

People who don't believe in a literal hell and heaven, the Genesis account of creation and Jesus' resurrection shouldn't be called Baptists, he said.

"These are some very elementary basic beliefs," Ikels said. "If we don't have these things in common maybe we are two separate denominations."

If Methodists would take a stronger stand on the Bible, Ikels continued, their numbers might not be decreasing. Membership in the United Methodist Church has been declining for several years while Southern Baptists have had slight growth.

"We don't look to people outside our denomination for advice on how to do things," Ikels said. "And we certainly don't look to other people whose numbers are dwindling."

Dunnam cited recent problems by Methodists as the case of a bishop at Houston who died of AIDS this summer, two cases of self-avowed homosexual ministers, the play-for-pay football scandal at Southern Methodist University and the mystery surrounding the choking attack on the wife of the Rev. Walker Railey, who was senior pastor of Dallas' largest United Methodist Church at the time.

"We've got our problems, that're right," Dunnnam said. "But the function of an editorial is to make a point or two and this editorial makes one or two points that need to be made."

Not all Baptists disagree.

"I think they assessed the situation accurately and I concur," said Lawanna McIver, a Dallas member of the Home Mission Board. "The direction that Southern Baptists have taken in recent years has been to move more toward the right, but the fundamentalists don't care what Methodists think."

More arrests expected as agents crack drug ring

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — More arrests and the seizure of bank accounts are expected this week as federal agents break up a major South Texas drug smuggling ring, authorities said.

Eight people have been arrested so far and agents have seized a used car lot, 16 vehicles and three airplanes, said James Castillo, resident agent in charge of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration's office here.

Castillo declined to say how much money or how many bank accounts will be involved because several more arrests were expected.

"We believe this is a major drug smuggling operation, and it will put a dent in the local drug traffic," Castillo said.

He said the sweep is the culmination of a seven-year investigation, and estimated the value of the organization's trade in the millions of dollars.

"We believe this organization was responsible for large quantities of controlled substances being smuggled through this area," he said.

The eight suspects arrested so far were picked up on an 18-count sealed indictment returned July 28. They were arraigned Friday evening before U.S. Magistrate William Mallett in McAllen.

The suspects are charged with conspiracy to possess and possession with intent to distribute cocaine, marijuana and other substances.

The 16 automobiles seized were from the Super Autos Gonzalez car lot in Brownsville, Castillo said, adding that DEA agents traced the vehicles used by the ring to the lot.

Property and money obtained from or used in drug operations are subject to seizure by authorities.

The DEA also searched the Palomino Night Club in Brownsville. Its owners were among the eight arrested.

"The night club was used by members of the organization," Castillo said.

Also participating in the investigation were U.S. Customs officers, U.S. Marshals, Texas Rangers and the Cameron County Attorney's office.

Southwest jet hydraulic failure forces landing

HARLINGEN (AP) — A Southwest Airlines jet bound for Houston and Dallas was forced to make an unscheduled landing because of hydraulic failure, the Federal Aviation Administration reports.

The plane, a Boeing 737, returned safely to the ground here at 12:16 p.m. Sunday, Mitch Barker, an FAA official in Fort Worth, said Monday.

Some of the passengers were not able to leave Harlingen until Monday, a Southwest Airlines official said.

No injuries were reported, but emergency crews were standing by, officials said.

The hydraulic equipment was damaged when a tire lost tread, said Randy Rickard, Southwest Airlines' station manager at the Rio Grande Valley International Airport.

He said the tire never lost inflation pressure, and the jet was flown to Dallas for repairs.

Town sad pope will pass it by

PANNA MARIA — Among gently rolling hills covered with cornfields and dotted with bent and twisted oak trees, the stone walls of this old Polish village rise incongruously from the Texas earth.

But it was here, on a slight rise about 55 miles southeast of San Antonio, that a Polish Franciscan priest stood more than 130 years ago and dreamed of a new home for his people. And it was here, not in other, now better-known centers of Polish America, that the Rev. Leopold Moczygemba established the nation's first permanent Polish colony in 1854.

This little village, started by about 100 families who answered the priest's call to the New World, remains overwhelmingly Polish. Its residents, their speech rich with the tones of their homeland, have names like Kyrish and Kruciak, Yanta, Kowalik and Snoga.

Panna Maria — the name means Virgin Mary in Polish — also remains staunchly Catholic. Although the town's population is less than 100, the Immaculate Conception Catholic Church has a membership of about 300.

And when word first spread that Pope John Paul II would visit San Antonio in September as part of a 10-day U.S. trip, a small hope took root here. What if John Paul, the first Polish pope, should hear of the little Polish village in the middle of Texas and bless it with a visit?

Townspeople sent more than 300 letters to Rome, inviting, urging, coaxing the pope to come to Panna Maria.

BUT TO the enduring sadness of this village, Vatican officials decided the pope could spend only one day in San Antonio. There would be no time to stop in Panna Maria. Instead, he would meet with Polish people in Detroit, a city whose Polish American population is estimated at 600,000.

Panna Marians have struggled to hide their disappointment, with some still clinging to the belief that the pope might yet find a way to make a brief stop here when he visits San Antonio on Sept. 13. Others try to face the reality of a papal schedule that is already filled.

"The pope comes once in a life time," said Felix Mika Jr., 51, who owns a grain mill with his brother Sixtus, 67. "I don't think he's going to come back. And I don't think we're going to have another Polish pope."

For the Very Rev. Canon Bernard Goebel, the 82-year-old pastor of Panna Maria, the choice of Detroit over this village held a special irony.

In 1972, Goebel traveled to Detroit to visit the grave of Moczygemba, his most famous predecessor. After establishing Panna Maria in the 1850s, Moczygemba had moved on to Michigan, later founding the nation's first Polish seminary in Detroit.

But no one at the seminary could direct Goebel to the patriarch's grave. And when he finally found it, in a forgotten corner of Detroit's Mount Elliot Cemetery, Goebel was shocked.

Moczygemba, the father of American Polonia, had been given a plain headstone, about a foot high, inscribed with his last name and the dates of his birth and death. There was no reference to his pivotal role in Polish-American history.

"IT WAS not even respectful," said Goebel, a native of Chojnice, Poland. "Without him, there would not even be a Polish seminary in Detroit. But they didn't care."

Upset by the neglect, Goebel under took to have Moczygemba's remains moved back to Panna Maria, where he was reinterred beside a giant oak tree in front of the old white church. Under the same tree, on Dec. 24, 1854, Moczygemba had celebrated Mass with Panna Maria's first settlers on the night of their arrival.

And Goebel had hoped that the pope, too, might stand under the ancient oak and celebrate Mass with the descendants of those pioneers. But it was not to be.

In consolation, the town did receive 300 tickets to a Sept. 13 Polish-American reception for the pope in San Antonio.

And while Goebel and others say they are happy to be included, they still wish the pope could visit this village.

"It will not be the same," said Goebel, whose clear blue eyes and upright bearing belie his years."But in Detroit, there are thousands and thousands of Polish people. And the archbishop there (Archbishop Ed mund C. Szoka) is of Polish descent. He must have convinced the Holy Father that it is the right place for a meeting of the Polish people."

BUT FOR Goebel, who spent 5½ years in a Nazi concentration camp, there is no better place than Panna Maria, a town of simple values, of honest, hard-working people defined by abid ing faith.

"This nature is good, it is true," he said, looking around at the gentle hills and fields surrounding his rectory. "This modern culture, it does not impress me. I learned in Germany that we can't depend on it."

In 1939, along with other Catholic priests in Chojnice, Goebel was arrested by the Nazis and taken to Dachau. Set aside in a group of priests to be shot, Goebel was "saved by a finger of God," he said.

A few weeks before the war, Goebel, at the repeated urging of a friend, had preached a single sermon in German. "I didn't want to do it, but sometimes a finger of God directs you," the priest said. Later, a member of the Gestapo remembered the German service. Goebel was saved.

With the same faith, Goebel accepts the decision of the pope not to come to Panna Maria, but he struggles to hide his sorrow.

For one thing, he and others said they had hoped the pope's visit might bring not only a spiritual but an economic renewal to the town, which has seen troubled times.

IN RECENT years, with failing farm prices and the shutdown of a nearby uranium mine, Panna Maria's young people have been forced to leave to find work. Of the 100 weddings Goebel has performed since his arrival 19 years ago, he said, all but a handful of the couples have moved away. And last year, the local school lost its seventh and eighth grades.

"If we go on like this, we will lose our school," Goebel said.

"If the pope had come here, we hoped that this would help us to get more people to Panna Maria. Maybe someone would have heard of us and brought a new industry to our town," he said. "Without new people, the future of Panna Maria is not bright."

A mile down the road, standing in the heat of their storage house, the Mika brothers and a neighboring farmer talked with equal worry about the future.

"We don't know how long we'll be able to keep going," said Alfred Moczygemba, a farmer who is a distant relative of the priest of the same name.

"One of the big farmers near here, he says two years," said Felix Mika Jr., his straw hat pushed back on his sweating brow.

Moczygemba scoffed. "If he says that, he's looking pretty far ahead. With the prices for our crops, I don't know. But what can we do?"

NONETHELESS, on Sept. 13, the residents of Panna Maria, from the youngest infant to Mary Mika — the Mika brothers' 93-year-old mother — will travel to San Antonio to meet their Holy Father.

Goebel, who will greet the pope at the reception at Assumption Seminary, has been working on a simple message.

"I will extend greetings to him from Panna Maria, the oldest Polish parish in the United States and the final resting place of Father Leopold Moczygemba, the patriarch of American Polonia," he said. "I will assure him that the people of Panna Maria are keeping the faith of their fathers."

'Bow tie lawyer' forsakes fame to serve 'little man'

By ALAN VAN ZELFDEN

DALLAS (AP) — If attorney Bill McMahan's neon-bright bow ties don't bring a chuckle from the pin-striped crowd at the Dallas County Courthouse, then his furiously green jackets and stoplight-red socks do.

Not only does McMahan hold title as the oldest practicing criminal defense attorney in the county but also the Dallas native claims dubious honor as the most outlandishly dressed.

While prim-and-proper prosecutors glide by in solemn tailored suits, the 72-year-old McMahan stalks courthouse halls in garb of a different color.

"Look, I've been a bow-tie lawyer going on 45 years now," McMahan said, sitting in his cubicle-size downtown office and puffing on one of the cigars that have become yet another of his trademarks. "They're easy to clip on, and they don't get in my soup. Hey, they've kidded me a long time about the way I dress."

But the feisty old lawyer packs a lot of punch behind his unassuming country demeanor. The North Dallas High School graduate, who still logs an average of more than 60 hours a week keeping clients out of jail, brings more than 41 years of legal experience to the profession.

The legal life has gone well for McMahan. When he began practicing law in 1946, McMahan made a conscious decision to forsake fame and glory to represent "the regular people" — primarily those who didn't have the money to hire his higher-priced colleagues.

As a result, most of McMahan's cases have not been the high-profile kind that can catapult lawyers to instant stardom. McMahan once represented local nightclub owner Jack Ruby but dropped him as a client when Ruby fatally shot Lee Harvey Oswald nearly a quarter-century ago.

"He's (McMahan) quiet and unobtrusive," says Jimmy Kerr, a retired radio and newspaper reporter who covered events at the courthouse for more than three decades. "He's primarily a little-man's lawyer who takes care of his business."

Although most of his career caseload has involved misdemeanor offenses, some of the more than 5,000 cases have involved felony offenses and a touch of danger.

McMahan clearly remembers the case in Linden, Texas, 30 years ago when the husband of a rape victim came looking for him at the courthouse with a shotgun because McMahan had defended the man accused of the offense.

Those were the heydays of an era that generated hundreds of prime-time memories. Those are the times that McMahan recalls first when recounting a law career that began humbly after his graduation from a four-year law school sponsored by the local YMCA.

McMahan readily admits his heart and mind are anchored in the past, when say-it-like-it-is, tobacco-chewing lawyers and judges plied their trade in an unair-conditioned courthouse.

Although the golden days are long past, the legal profession hasn't lost any of its luster for McMahan, whose conservative beliefs make him something of the Sgt. Joe Friday of the local judicial system.

"Bill never was one to blow his own horn," said 67-year-old defense attorney Charles Tessmer. "He's handled the bread-and-butter cases all his life. A lot of people think you have to be a big trial lawyer to be good."

Historic school may be converted into federal prison

BRYAN (AP) — The students may leave, and the convicts may move in to a 31-acre historic private school, officials say.

Earlier this month, federal officials met with Bryan community leaders to discuss converting the Allen Academy to a minimum-security prison camp, the Houston Chronicle reported Monday.

"It's going to be a club-Fed type of facility," said Don Miller, dean of students. "The (federal) folks already said they will go head-to-head with Texas A&M for the prettiest campus in town."

The academy is listed in the national register of historic places, and has several buildings reminiscent of the Alamo. Academy officials plan to relocate elsewhere in Bryan, the newspaper said.

Federal officials are struggling with a prison crowding crisis much worse than that of Texas. The federal system has a capacity of less than 28,000, but the inmate head-count is almost 44,000, said Kathy Morse, prison spokeswoman.

Some Bryan residents support the move because only the best-behaving federal inmates serving short sentences are supposed to be housed at the camp, said the Rev. Richard Maples of the First Baptist Church.

Criminals sentenced to U.S. Bureau of Prisons facilities usually are convicted of white-collar crimes, such as tax evasion, bank fraud or computer theft, said bureau spokesman Kevin McMahon.

The camp would house about 250 male and female prisoners, employ a staff of about 125 and have an annual budget of about $6 million, McMahon said. It will be six to nine months before the government decides whether it wants to purchase the school, he said.

The academy will move regardless of the decision of the federal prison officials, said Jerry E. Holbert, the academy headmaster.

Bryan Forward, a city-appointed advisory group, recently voted to support the prison camp, which would bring in 50 to 60 new jobs and a yearly injection of about $2 million of new money into the area, Maples said.

STATE IN BRIEF

Grumman signs lease to build Houston facility

HOUSTON (AP) — Grumman Corp. and the city of Houston signed a long-term lease Monday on property at Ellington Field that will become the site of the first space-related manufacturing facility in the Houston area.

The location will be the home of Grumman's civil space programs, including the development of portions of NASA's space station and other space-related advanced technology systems.

Employment at the division is estimated to be 1,000 by 1989. Some 900 people could be hired locally along with about 100 transfers from New York. The company already has nearly 700 employees in Houston and 250 in Sherman.

Mayor Kathy Whitmire and Jacob J. Bussolini, Grumman vice president of business operations, signed the agreement for a 66-acre tract at Ellington Field, a former air base used by NASA. The 40-year lease has options for an additional 79 acres and to extend the time period another 40 years.

Last October, Grumman announced it was moving its space systems division from Long Island, N.Y., to Houston.

Grumman, with sales of $3.5 billion in 1986, employs 33,000 people worldwide. The company built the lunar module, the spacecraft that safely carried America's astronauts to and from the moon.

Legal program announced

AUSTIN (AP) — A program to provide legal assistance for poor Texans needing help with the new immigration law was announced Monday by the executive director of the Texas Legal Services Center.

Director Randall Chapman said State Comptroller Bob Bullock "advises us that close to one-half million Texans will be eligible to be permanently approved as legal residents. Many of these applicants for legalization lack the ability to secure counsel in the complex area of immigration law."

The program is designed to provide help to volunteer lawyers and legal aid offices, Chapman said in a statement.

"We want to provide volunteer (pro bono) lawyers with the training, the manuals and the litigation assistance that they need to provide top notch representation for their clients," Chapman said.

"In those areas where such volunteer panels do not exist, we will attempt to work with the local church and related organizations to provide direct representation in emergency cases."

Chapman said the new program would be funded by the Texas Equal Access to Justice Foundation, which was established by the Texas Supreme Court and State Bar of Texas. The money is part of a voluntary effort and comes from interest on certain attorney office accounts.

A&M to limit enrollment

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Texas A&M University officials say they will devise a plan to limit undergraduate enrollment beginning with the fall 1988 semester.

The Texas A&M University System Board of Regents called for the plan Monday after hearing a report which said enrollment at the College Station institution is projected to reach 46,000 by 1990 and exceed 61,000 by the year 2000.

The plan to limit enrollment would be based on a determination of the number of undergraduate students that the university could accommodate with the financial resources and facilities available.

More than 7,300 incoming freshman are expected to arrive on campus next week.

University admissions officials are anticipating the enrollment of approximately 2,500 more students this fall than last year, when the enrollment increased more than 1,000.

The projected enrollment increase will swell the size of Texas A&M's student body to nearly 39,000, officials predict. Its 36,561 students last year propelled Texas A&M into the ranks of the nation's 10 largest universities.

Pit bull dog bites jogger

RICHARDSON (AP) — A jogger was bitten numerous times by a pit bull Monday as she attempted to stop the animal from attacking her pet boxer, authorities said.

Carolyn Channell, 41, sustained numerous bites to the head, arms, legs and hands, including 32 puncture wounds to the right hand. She underwent surgery Monday night for bone fracutres and was listed in satisfactory condition at Richardson Medical Center.

Channell's dog was being treated for two bite wounds to the neck, while the pit bull was in quarantine at the city pound.

The attack occurred as Channell was jogging with her leashed dog, Muggs, on a sidewalk about two blocks from her home.

"It attacked our dog. It just latched onto its neck, and she was trying to pull them apart," said Channell's husband, David.

Monday's attack was the second by a pit bull in Richardson in exactly two months. On June 24, a pit bull burst through the living room screen door of Patricia Luecke's home and attacked her bichon frise. Luecke was not injured by the pit bull, but her dog was killed.

VA holds home auction

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — About 1,000 people turned out for a Veterans Administration home auction that generated sales totaling $1.7 million, administration officials said.

"The lowest-priced home sold at the auction was for $9,300 for a 3-bedroom, 1-bath home in Kingsville. The highest auction price of $56,000 was for a home in Corpus Christi with seven rooms (including) four bedrooms and two baths," said Larry Latham, chief executive of Larry Latham auctioneers.

Ted Myatt, director of the VA Houston Regional Office, said 68 single-family homes were sold at the auction Sunday.

"The people of the Corpus Christi area are playing an important role in the revitalization of the Corpus Christi housing market," Myatt said.

Myatt said the VA still has a number of homes on inventory that are available to the general public.

Cleanup to focus on plastic

AUSTIN (AP) — Organizers of the Texas coastal cleanup Sept. 19 say the focus will be on telling the public about the dangers of plastic debris.

Linda Maraniss, state coordinator for the cleanup, said according to reports from the National Marine Fisheries Service at least six sea turtles were found entangled in plastic debris along Texas and Louisiana's coastline in May and July.

On May 25, a Kemp's Ridley turtle was found dead with a plastic six-pack ring around its neck, Ms. Maraniss said.

She said such reports show that the Gulf of Mexico is full of floating plastic that is killing marine wildlife.

"If we continue to abuse the marine environment, we will have a silent sea — no turtles, no marine life, just floating garbage and beaches covered with junk," she said.

Prisons remain closed

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Texas prisons remain closed today to new inmates with the inmate population exceeding a state-mandated 95 percent capacity, prison spokesman said.

The most recent closure is the 20th of the year, and began last Wednesday, Texas Department of Corrections spokesman David Nunnelee said.

Seventy-five inmates were released Monday, but the releases were not expected to bring the population down to where new inmates could be admitted on Wednesday, Nunnelee said.

The latest count showed the 27-unit prison held 38,678 inmates, 218 over the state-mandated limit of 95 percent of capacity.

Under state law, the Texas prison system, the nation's third largest behind California and New York, may not exceed 95 percent of capacity. When it does, it must close to new admissions until releases bring the number of inmates below the cap.

Testimony spotlights CIA's role in Iran-Contra affair

WASHINGTON (AP) — The CIA's role in the Iran-Contra affair is at issue in testimony by a key agency official who sources say has denied any knowledge of improper activities.

A declassified transcript of the testimony by Alan Fiers, the CIA's Central American task force chief, was scheduled for release today by the congressional Iran-Contra investigating committees.

Fiers was questioned by the joint committees in closed session in early August, as were two other agency officials.

Intelligence and congressional sources have said Fiers described a general knowledge of fired White House National Security Council aide Oliver L. North's covert operations but professed no knowledge of improper activities. He also was said to have supported claims that late CIA Director William J. Casey had a particularly close relationship with North.

Testimony by Duane "Dewey" Clarridge, CIA counterterrorism chief and former head of the agency's European division, was released last week. The testimony of deputy director for operations Clair George is to be released later this week.

New CIA Director William H. Webster has hired a Washington lawyer, Russell Breummer, as special counsel to head an internal agency investigation of CIA involvement in the Iran-Contra affair, intelligence sources said. Breummer was a special assistant to Webster at the FBI before going into private law practice.

Webster said he wanted a report on CIA officers' role in the covert sale of U.S. arms to Iran and diversion of profits to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels before taking any action involving those implicated by previous testimony and evidence.

In addition to the agency and joint committee probes, the Senate Intelligence Committee plans to conduct an inquiry this fall into the CIA role.

Although the agency has refused publicly to acknowledge Fiers, his name arose repeatedly during the Iran-Contra hearings.

He was a member of the so-called Restricted Inter-Agency Group, known as the RIG, that according to most accounts also included North and Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams.

According to testimony by another CIA officer during the Iran-Contra hearings, Fiers ordered a field agent to continue arranging weapons drops for the Contras during the time U.S. military aid to them was banned by Congress.

Fiers was put in his job as head of the CIA's Central American task force in September 1984 by Casey, who died last May. Intelligence sources have said Casey later approved one of the agency's largest pay bonuses ever, said to be $20,000, to Fiers.

The former CIA station chief in Costa Rica, Joe Fernandez, who was suspended and later ordered reinstated to active duty, testified that he informed Fiers and Fiers' superior, the chief of the agency's Latin America division, of the work he was doing to aid the Contras.

Fernandez, who used the pseudonym Tomas Castillo, facilitated the flow of weapons to the Contras by using a sophisticated KL-43 coding device to pass information to Contra leaders and private U.S. citizens to assist air drops of weapons and supplies. He provided information including coordinates for drop zones, flight vectors, times of delivery and how long Contras could maintain control of drop areas.

Fernandez testified that in July 1986, Fiers cabled him instructions that in effect said he should not alter the role he was playing as intermediary.

He said he had become uncomfortable with his role in the resupply operation and had suggested to Washington an alternative way to coordinate the flights that would put some distance between the CIA and the operation. He said the response was that he should "stand down" from that new plan.

He also testified that Fiers was present at a meeting when Fernandez discussed his use of the KL-43 device that North had given him.

The former U.S. ambassador to Costa Rica, Lewis Tambs, testified that the RIG group of Fiers, North and Abrams gave him instructions to assist the Contras. Abrams disputed that version.

Envoy says Iraq has 'never made promises'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Iraq's ambassador says his government will feel free to resume attacks on Iranian oil shipments unless the U.N. Security Council forces Tehran to agree to a cease-fire in the Persian Gulf war.

"Iraq has never given any promise to anybody," Nizar Hamdoon said Monday in an interview. "Iraq has never given up its right to hit and attack the Iranian ships that are bound for Iranian ports in that war zone."

Iraq suspended its attacks last month while the U.N. Security Council took up a resolution for a cease-fire and negotiations. It was adopted July 20 and readily accepted by Baghdad. But Iran neither agreed to comply nor rejected the order.

U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar met Monday in New York with Mohammed Jawad Larijani, the deputy Iranian foreign minister, and scheduled another meeting for today.

Larijani said at a news conference that his government is ready to work toward "a comprehensive settlement" of the conflict and will cooperate "with any authentic move" to bring peace and security to the region.

But he said the U.N. resolution is not a "comprehensive prescription" for ending the war.

Meantime, Phyllis Oakley, a State Department spokeswoman, said, "If Iran continues to stall, the Security Council must move ahead with enforcement measures."

That could mean an attempt to prohibit weapons shipments to Iran, but would require the approval of the Soviet Union and of China. Iran buys anti-ship missiles from Beijing and some of its other weapons from Soviet allies in Eastern Europe.

Mrs. Oakley said Iran should agree to a cease-fire because "this clearly would be a sensible thing to do."

Hamdoon, in an interview at the Iraqi embassy, referred to the Iraqi moratorium on attacks on Iranian shipping "a very limited matter, a very temporary matter."

The ambassador, who will become Iraq's deputy foreign minister after he returns to Baghdad in 10 days, said, "As long as we don't see a serious effort to squeeze Iran on the Security Council level, Iraq would feel free to hit in those waters."

Iraq began the so-called tanker war in the spring of 1983 as an offshoot of its general conflict with Iran. Iran's only means of transporting its oil is through the gulf. Iraq uses pipelines through Saudi Arabia and Turkey.

The U.S. frigate Stark was hit May 17 by an Iraqi missile, and 37 crewmen were killed. Iraq apologized and said it was a mistake. The United States accepted Baghdad's explanation.

Under Iraqi fire, Iran's oil exports dropped dramatically a year ago to about 500,000 barrels a day. They have rebounded since the moratorium to more than 2 million barrels a day from 1.6 million to 1.8 million barrels during the spring.

Hamdoon said if Iran were deprived of weapons and the money to buy them the war could come to an end.

Reflecting impatience in Baghdad, he said, "It's now about time to take a decision" at the United Nations in New York.

Hamdoon said Perez de Cuellar's meetings with Larijani "should provide a kind of final reaction on Iran's part to the secretary-general and therefore the Security Council should start to move."

Iraqi Ambassador Nizar Hamdoon

Referring to the absence of a direct Iranian response, the Iraqi envoy said, "It's the tricky nature of the regime that we have seen previously. They can sell you and buy you at the same time."

Adoption urged as alternative to abortion

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan, in a move billed as part of his anti-abortion drive, is calling for a task force report before Thanksgiving on ways to help American couples adopt children.

"Americans are a warm-hearted, caring people, and for years, American couples have reached out to embrace children who otherwise would grow up without a stable family life," Reagan said Monday in establishing the interagency task force.

"We must expand and broaden our efforts to make sure that America's family-less children are adopted," the president said in a statement issued in Santa Barbara as he vacationed at his nearby ranch. "We must do all we can to remove obstacles that prevent qualified adoptive parents from accepting these children into their home."

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater, asked whether the task force is part of Reagan's campaign against abortion, replied that "it's fair to say that is in that area."

An abortion rights leader said the approach being taken by the president could lead to intimidation of pregnant women seeking to cope with unplanned pregnancies. Kate Michelman, executive director of the national Abortion Rights Action League, said the government should not be spending money, time and energy promoting one reproductive option over another.

"Adoption is a viable and important option for women facing an unplanned pregnancy, but it is only one," she said. "Women should not be intimidated or pressured into adoption or abortion or foster care or any of the options. They have to be supported to come to the decision that is best for them and their family."

Early this month, speaking to anti-abortion activists in Washington, Reagan announced a series of regulations denying use of federal dollars for abortion counseling and referral services by about 4,500 family planning centers. At the same time he pledged that he would take other steps to aid the anti-abortion cause.

"It is true that adoption is an alternative to abortion, and one that we would like to help and make sure that there aren't rules and laws and regulations which are hindering the adoption process," Fitzwater said.

Reagan is himself an adoptive father. He and his first wife, actress Jane Wyman, adopted a son, Michael.

Fitzwater said the task force is being asked to report by Nov. 22 on ways to overcome "barriers to adoption."

"Up until now, the federal government has not really taken a good and comprehensive look at this problem," he said. "This is not designed to correct a problem with government. It is designed to correct a problem within society, and make sure government is addressing it in a comprehensive manner."

In a fact sheet released with the president's announcement, the White House press office said more than 140,000 children are adopted each year, "but thousands of childless families are still waiting for children to adopt."

"The administration actively pursues policies that encourage and support adoption, and is especially committed to infant adoption as an alternative for pregnant women, and the adoption of adolescents or 'special needs' children who are waiting for a permament family," the fact sheet said.

The 13-member task force is headed by Mary Gall, counselor to Office of Personnel Management Director Constance Horner, who Fitzwater said "has been involved in this area for a long time."

Textbook case bound for Supreme Court

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Seven families whose award of more than $50,000 was overturned in a suit dubbed "Scopes II" pledged a U.S. Supreme Court battle to shield their children from "godless" books like "The Wizard of Oz."

"We didn't start it to lose," said Robert L. Mozert, one of the fundamentalist Christian parents whose lawsuit was rejected Monday by the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati. "A temporary delay will not spoil the victory in the end."

The appeals court reversed a decision by U.S. District Judge Thomas G. Hull, who ruled last October that the Hawkins County school board violated the families' rights by ignoring their religious beliefs and requiring their children to read the assigned texts or leave public school.

Hull, who heard the case in Greenville, awarded the families damages of more than $50,000. He also ruled that children could be taught reading at home and go to public school the rest of the day. The appeals court ordered Hull to dismiss the entire case.

Vicki Frost, a Rogersville mother and leading witness in the case, said she was not disappointed that Hull's decision was reversed, saying the case was not over.

"I know the Lord does all things well," she said. "Victory is always won when you do what's right. We do have God-given rights to practice what we believe."

The parents listed more than 300 objections to the assigned readings, including passages from "The Diary of Anne Frank," which was said to instruct that all religions are equal in God's eye, and from "The Wizard of Oz," which they said contradicted the Bible's lesson that all witches are bad.

The lawsuit also objected to passages in stories by anthropologist Margaret Mead, science fiction writer Isaac Asimov, and fairy tale author Hans Christian Andersen.

Mrs. Frost said the families' attorneys will first ask all 16 judges of the 6th Circuit to review the three-judge panel's ruling.

Michael Farris, a Washington, D.C., attorney representing the families, said he would appeal to the nation's highest court.

"We always viewed this level of the decision as just a whistlestop on the way to an ultimate decision by the U.S. Supreme Court," said Farris, reached by telephone. He represents Concerned Women for America, a Washington-based lobbying group retained on behalf of the families.

Rebecca Hagelin, a group spokeswoman, said the organization works to preserve the rights of families and Judeo-Christian traditions. She said the group wanted the case appealed.

Timothy Dyk, a Washington lawyer retained by the liberal lobbying group People for the American Way to back the county Board of Education in the lawsuit, called the appellate ruling "a wonderful decision. I think it's a great triumph for the public school system."

Dyk said reversal of Hull's decision "will allow them (public schools) to go about their business the way they have for generations."

The parents sued the board in 1983, claiming that the required books violated their beliefs by teaching evolution, secular humanism, the occult, feminism and other beliefs they consider godless.

Chief Judge Pierce Lively, writing for the appeals court, ruled that there was no violation of First Amendment rights because the school board did not force the children to believe what they read in a series of Holt, Rinehart, Winston textbooks.

Farris said the court's rationale implies that "the First Amendment only applies in cases of brainwashing," which he called "a narrow, limited view."

Lively wrote that apparently the families assumed "that material clearly presented as poetry, fiction and even 'make-believe' in the Holt series were presented as facts which the students were required to believe. Nothing in the record supports this assumption."

Marathoner to run Africa for wildlife

WASHINGTON (AP) — Oliver Payne forgoes power lunches these days to trot through the steamy capital in preparation for his planned 4,500-mile run across Africa to draw attention to the continent's vanishing wildlife.

"This summer here has been worse than anything I'll face in Africa," said Payne, referring to the city's scorching summer temperatures and high humidity.

Payne, 35, who works in the map division of the National Geographic Society, has received encouragment from his employer, along with the World Wildlife Fund, several international conservation groups and the governments of six African nations.

The British-born, Oxford-educated marathoner believes he will be the first man to run across Africa if he completes the trek, scheduled to start in March 1988.

Payne said he was inspired to "mortgage his life" to the running project by his desire to return to Africa and do something worthwhile on the continent. He was raised on a farm in Zimbabwe where he did his distance running.

Running 100 miles a week, Payne plans to spend 11 months on the road, starting in Namibia, on the west coast, and proceeding through Botswana, Zimbabwe, Zambia, Malawi, Tanzania and ending in Mombasa, Kenya.

Although Payne will start the run alone, he hopes Africans from towns and villages as well as well-known African athletes will join him at various stages. His wife, Cynthia Barry, will accompany the runners in a four-wheel drive vehicle.

The route Payne has selected will take him through several game parks, the habitat for much of the wildlife Payne wants to help.

Payne hopes the run will serve as an educational tool in the African countries, focusing attention on wildlife conservation and encouraging efforts to protect species such as the rhinoceros, whose populations have been decimated by poachers.

"I want the Africans to participate," Payne said. "I don't want this to be a high-profile Western effort."

FDA, researchers racing AIDS clock

To those infected with the AIDS virus, research on a cure or vaccine must seem painfully slow. But in fact, scientists and drug manufacturers have been working at full speed — and now, even the traditionally ponderous U.S. Food and Drug Administration is reacting with a sense of urgency.

For the first time, FDA officials have authorized human testing of an experimental AIDS vaccine. MicroGeneSys, a small Connecticut firm, produced the vaccine from the outer protein coating of an AIDS virus, and it appeared to raise antibodies against the fatal disease when tested on guinea pigs.

It may take years of clinical tests, however, to determine whether this promising first step will work safely on humans. In fact, the biomedical community still is debating which types of people would make the best volunteers.

Some believe the experimental vaccines should be tried on uninfected people with a high risk of coming in contact with the virus. But that poses an ethical dilemma: The volunteers might believe, falsely, that an unproven vaccine prevents AIDS and engage in risky behavior. Or, if the volunteers are educated on how to avoid infection, it may be hard to determine whether the vaccine — or a safer lifestyle — left them free of the AIDS virus.

Others, notably Jonas Salk, who developed a polio vaccine, think the vaccines should be tried on people already infected with the AIDS virus.

Neither approach to vaccine testing could be tried in the United States without FDA approval. Since the FDA had several AIDS vaccine applications under consideration, one of them was bound to get the go-ahead sooner or later. But the timing is noteworthy. Prompt FDA approval means that human trials can begin several months earlier than anticipated.

These initial vaccine tests — the first in this country — mark a milestone in the fight against AIDS.

They also mark a milestone in FDA's ability to cut its time-consuming bureaucratic red tapes. Ultimately, time saved may mean lives saved.

Another View:

New federal OSHA

It says something about a government agency when everyone is surprised that it has begun to actively enforce the laws it was created to enforce. That's the position in which the federal Occupational Health and Safety Administration, charged with protecting the nation's workers, now finds itself.

After years of lethargy, OSHA recently has startled business and employee groups alike by levying six- and seven-figure fines against some of the nation's biggest employers, including Chrysler, Union Carbide, Ford and General Dynamics. Alarmed by nine cases in which health-care workers have contracted AIDS working with patients, the agency also is threatening to fine hospitals and clinics that don't follow what were previously voluntary guidelines to protect workers against contagious blood diseases.

While these changes at the "new OSHA," as one agency spokesman calls it, are certainly welcome, it's too soon to conclude that there has been a major turnaround in the Reagan administration's underlying worker-protection policies. On the contrary, most of the recent fines were not levied in response to hazardous working conditions uncovered by OSHA inspectors; they were penalties for sloppy or fraudulent record-keeping. And OSHA, in imposing the fines, was only cleaning up a record-keeping mess that it had invited itself in 1981 when it decided to do "wall-to-wall" inspections only at companies with recorded illness and injury rates higher than the national average. That 1981 inspection policy remains in force.

For all its recent activity, OSHA still has far to go. On the same day the agency announced a $2.6 million fine against IBP Inc., the nation's biggest meatpacker, it was sharply criticized by a federal court for failing after five years to come up with a short-term exposure limit for workers dealing with a cancer-causing gas. In a draft report released in the midst of OSHA's new push for respectability, the Labor Department's inspector general found that workplace inspections still were inadequate; there was insufficient follow-up to ensure that identified hazards had been eliminated; and fines were unjustifiably reduced against companies that repeatedly violated the law. In short, the report concluded, OSHA "cannot adequately ensure the safety of the workplace — its primary goal."

Criticisms like those give workers in this country cause to be skeptical about whether the "new" OSHA is the real OSHA.

Medicine promotion draws complaints

WASHINGTON — Is a drug company running its own "Frequent Flyer Program" to reward doctors who prescribe its hypertension medication? One irate physician thinks it is, and the company's marketing tactic has aroused concern on Capitol Hill.

Jack Anderson

Referring to the free airline tickets and other gifts offered to physicians who prescribe the drug and answer a questionnaire on Ayerst Laboratories' drug Inderal LA, Dr. John Graves wrote: "I am very concerned about this form of marketing in medicine as I feel it creates a clear conflict of interest for the physician in their prescribing habits." The marketing ploy, he told us, "gives the appearance of impropriety."

The company denied that its gift program was a marketing device. Ayerst spokesman Joseph M. Mahady said the program is a "research tool," designed to help the company develop a "patient profile." Participating doctors are asked to fill out a seven-question survey form classifying the patients for whom they prescribe Inderal LA, according to age, sex, race, dosage and other medications.

According to Graves, an assistant professor at Bowman Gray School of Medicine in Winston-Salem, N.C., an Ayerst representative told him that doctors who submit questionnaires on 50 Inderal LA patients are given a free airline ticket anywhere in the United States. He said he was told there are other, more valuable prizes for filling out up to 200 survey forms.

Graves first raised his objections to the Ayerst free-gift program in a recent issue of the New England Journal of Medicine. Noting that the market for hypertension medication is clearly a competitive one, and aggressive promotion can be expected, Graves said he thinks Ayerst's technique reflected "questionable ethical standards."

The company spokesman implied that the free gifts were needed as an inducement for doctors to fill out the survey questionnaires. "Completion of survey forms and processing of paperwork is required of participating physicians," he wrote, "and professional honoraria commensurate with these efforts are offered.

"Selections include diagnostic equipment, medical textbooks, or air travel to attend medical meetings. The program is designed to enable physicians to attend the meeting of their selection rather than a pre-arranged symposium. The honorarium is modest when one considers it is offered in return for a full year of program participation and the completion of survey forms on at least 50 patients."

The company's written statement did not say whether it monitored the physicians' choice of airline tickets to make sure they were used to attend medical meetings. The company spokesman declined to comment beyond the written statement.

Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., told our reporter Gary Clouser he is concerned over such marketing practices, and suggested that they are linked to the drug companies' campaign to promote their profitable brand-name prescriptions over generic drugs.

The incentives offered to doctors to prescribe certain drugs "cloud their judgment," Waxman said. He also pointed out that the cost of the gifts to physicians is ultimately passed on to the drug company's customers. Waxman is chairman of the House subcommittee on health and the environment.

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, chairman of the antitrust and business subcommittee, said: "I am aware of numerous objections raised in connection with the marketing practices of some firms who are experiencing generic competition. These include charges of unfair and anti-competitive behavior."

Ken Feather, acting director of the Food and Drug Administration's division of drug advertising and labeling, said his office has reviewed Inderal LA promotional material and found nothing that violates FDA regulations. The ethical issue is not within FDA's purview, he said.

MINI-EDITORIAL — Just when we're about to despair entirely of lawyers as a class and endorse the Shakespearean rebel's famous exhortation to mass solicitorcide, the legal profession does something that makes perfect sense. The American Bar Association retained Zsa Zsa Gabor to address its family law section on the subject of divorce and alimony. And it put Zsa Zsa's world-class expertise up against a speech by Supreme Court Justice Byron White. No contest.

Strategy centers on revulsion of Ayatollah

WASHINGTON — When Iranian enthusiasts for Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini demonstrated in front of the State Department against the U.S.-Saudi alliance, they were unwittingly playing into budding administration strategy to get $1 billion in proposed arms sales to Saudi Arabia past Congress.

The strategy involves portraying opponents of Saudi arms as being in bed with Tehran's terrorist regime. That poses a challenge for the pro-Israel lobby to repeat its feat earlier this year at the height of the Iran-contra probe when it blocked President Reagan's first attempt to sell F-15s and Maverick air-to-ground missiles to the Saudis. In fact, the American-Israel Public Affairs Committee (AIPAC) may have trouble mobilizing the full Jewish community this time.

The stakes are high. A top-secret CIA analysis now under White House study reverses that agency's habitual pessimism about the Middle East, suggesting an upturn in Washington's long downhill slide with the moderate Arab world.

That results from American reflagging of Kuwaiti vessels and the U.S. naval presence in the Persian Gulf. But if Congress again vetoes the Saudi proposal, Soviet weapons will flood arsenals of moderate Arab states that for 40 years have depended on U.S. arms.

The White House wants to portray the sale not in pro-Arab or anti-Israel terms but, says a Reagan planner, as

Rowland Evans and Robert Novak

"a policy for the best interests of all American citizens." What can put political meat on those rhetorical bones is symbolized by the pro-Khomeini demonstration at the State Department.

Placards featured Saudi Arabia and the American "Great Satan" joined as arch villains in last month's Mecca killings of Iranian pilgrims. The demonstrators left no room for doubt by carrying signs that read: "No Arms for Saudi Arabia" and "U.S. Aggression-Saudi Oppression."

The White House wants to link all foes of the Saudi arms package with the ayatollah's state-sponsored terrorism, including Hezbollah Shiites in Lebanon and their record of kidnapping Americans. "AIPAC may not want to keep that kind of company," an administration official told us.

Actually, AIPAC is again committed to a congressional veto of Saudi arms. But that may not prove true of all major Jewish organizations and individual leaders of the American-Jewish community.

White House chief of staff Howard Baker and national security adviser Frank Carlucci invited a dozen Jewish leaders to an unreported chat in the White House and came away fairly optimistic. One Jewish leader present told us later that when the Saudi sale was brought up by Carlucci, the reaction was one of interest, not conflict. "We want the total picture of Mideast arms," he said.

That total picture shows Israel strong and gaining, with nearly $2 billion of military aid coming in from U.S. taxpayers every year. But more telling to some Jewish leaders was the report to them of Saudi activity in the Gulf, much of it secret and some of it denied by the secretive kingdom to avoid stirring reactions from Arab extremists who hate the U.S. for its Israeli alliance.

A Saudi official, asked to explain whether a Saudi minesweeper had been used to clear mines on a track exactly ahead of a U.S. Navy vessel, told reporters it was "purely accidental." In truth, it was purely intentional, but the Saudis did not want to acknowledge it.

Similarly, the Saudi decision to patrol an AWACS radar plane over a new sector, far from Saudi Arabia and encompassing the Strait of Hormuz, is routinely denied by the kingdom. Such denials are exploited by AIPAC to convince Congress that the Saudis, though benefitting from the U.S. naval buildup in the Gulf, are unwilling to help.

Such examples of Saudi cooperation may be essential for the president to make the best case for his billion-dollar arms sale, no matter how the kingdom resists public disclosure. Another defeat in Congress would be read carefully by moderate Arab states.

Jordan, rejected for U.S. arms as Saudi Arabia has been, has quietly asked the Soviets for late-model MiG-29 fighters. Given the U.S. embargo, King Hussein would rather buy from Britain or France, but only Moscow or Washington can sell the arms on terms Jordan can afford. The congressional ban also has driven Kuwait to buy nearly $300 million worth from Moscow.

In an administration ideologically retreating on foreign and domestic fronts, victory on arms-to-Arabs after so many defeats would seem improbable. Optimism derives from the reaction by one Jewish leader who left the White House impressed by Saudi cooperation and uncomfortable about being in bed with the ayatollah.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, Aug. 25, the 237th day of 1987. There are 128 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Aug. 25, 1944, Allied forces liberated Paris, ending four years of German occupation. The surrender of Major Gen. Dietrich von Choltitz, who had defied Adolf Hitler's orders to level the French capital rather than give it up, set off wild celebrations in the streets.

On this date:

In 1718, hundreds of French colonists arrived in Louisiana, with some of them settling in present-day New Orleans.

In 1825, Uruguay declared its independence from Brazil.

In 1835, Ann Rutledge, said by some to have been the early true love of Abraham Lincoln, died in Illinois at age 22.

In 1875, Captain Matthew Webb became the first person to swim across the English Channel, traveling from Dover, England, to Calais, France, in 22 hours.

In 1900, philosopher Friedrich Nietzsche died in Weimar, Germany.

In 1916, the National Park Service was established within the Department of the Interior.

In 1921, the United States signed a peace treaty with Germany.

In 1943, U.S. forces overran New Georgia in the Solomon Islands during World War II.

In 1950, President Harry S. Truman ordered the Army to seize control of the nation's railroads to avert a strike.

In 1981, the U.S. spacecraft Voyager 2 came within 63,000 miles of Saturn's cloud cover, sending back pictures and data about the ringed planet.

In 1985, Samantha Smith, the schoolgirl whose letter to Soviet leader Yuri Andropov resulted in her famous peace tour of the Soviet Union, was killed with her father in an airplane crash in Maine.

Ten years ago: Former California Gov. Ronald Reagan expressed opposition to the Panama Canal treaties, telling the Young Americans for Freedom that the Senate should reject the agreements.

Five years ago: The first Marines sent to Lebanon by President Reagan to help supervise the withdrawal of Palestinian and Syrian forces from Beirut arrived in the Lebanese capital.

One year ago: The reported death toll continued to climb in the central African nation of Cameroon, where toxic gas from a volcano killed more than 17,000 people.

Today's Birthdays: Actress Ruby Keeler is 78. Actor Van Johnson is 71. Actor-producer Mel Ferrer is 70. Actor Don DeFore is 70. Conductor-composer Leonard Bernstein is 69. Former Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace is 68. Actor Sean Connery is 57. Actor Tom Skerritt is 54. Rock singer-actor Gene Simmons is 38. Rock singer Elvis Costello is 32.

Money economy makes people dependent

Why do powerful killer whales do silly tricks for dead fish? And in what ways are we like the performing whales?

Charley Reese

Well, the issue here is control. Two things are done to bring the killer whales under the control of their trainers.

First, they are taken out of their natural environment in which they have choices and placed in an unnatural environment in which their choices have been reduced. There is only one kind of nourishment available, dead fish, and only one source of dead fish, the trainer. Thus, the whale can survive only by pleasing the trainer.

Most Americans are in the same tank, so to speak. We live in an artificial environment in which the only "nourishment' is money. Consequently we have no choice but to spend our lives doing tricks for people who will give us money if we please them.

This stark view of the modern money economy becomes clearer if you remember that what we ultimately need and desire is not money but food, shelter, tools, clothes, and services, such as medical care. The money itself is useless, whether it's paper or gold. It can neither be eaten nor worn. If you found yourself shipwrecked on a deserted island with a briefcase full of $100 bills, their only value would be as fuel for a campfire.

The natural environment of man is a community of land-owner-occupants. With land, you can provide youself with food and shelter. In a community, by cooperation, you can provide for the rest of your needs.

Modern man, however, has effectively been evicted from the land. Rather than living in communities of land-owner-occupants, he is now crowded into cities composed of a mass of landless tenants. These tenants, having no means of providing for their own food and shelter, have no basis for cooperation. The feeling of alienation is correct because each individual is an alien without any support group.

Working in a factory — and whether the product is a thing or a service it is still a factory — is not the same thing as being part of a cooperative community. In the factory, the parts added together produce the sum but each part is independent. The people who do the jobs are interchangeable and expendable. I work today. I don't work tomorrow. It makes no difference. The product is the same.

Placed in an environment in which the necessities of life can only be acquired with money, we have been reduced to four choices: starve, beg, rob, or work. Except for those who have acquired a lot of money, I believe you will find that everyone else fits neatly into one of those four categories.

Please don't over-simplify this over-simplification. I'm well aware that many of us live better materially in rented houses working for anonymous corporations than we would if we owned 40 acres and a mule. Considering the difficulty I have in doing even simple mechancial jobs, this is especially true of me.

All I want to do is stimulate your noodle to think about the basic premises on which modern society is built. Incidentally, the whale analogy and the extraordinary insight that changing the nature of the economy changes the nature of human relationships belongs to Canadian writer, Dick Racey. In the above paragraphs, I have summarized some points he made in an article which appeared in a Canadian newsletter, "LEADS."

Relevant ideas that spring to mind include these: in a money economy, money equals power. Are we then ruled by our elected leaders or are we really ruled by the rich? If I can use my money to buy your elections, influence the votes of legislators, set the policies they follow, and filter the information you get from corporate media, do I not rule you just as well as if I had an army to force you to do my bidding?

It's something to think about. And is there an alternative system? Or some way to modify or improve the present one?

If we could just get people to understand that the status quo is not carved out of granite, then apathy might wane.

Lesbian minister suspended from church

DOVER, N.H. (AP) — A lesbian minister who demanded a church trial to test a United Methodist Church ban on homosexual clergy says the jury's decision only to suspend her shows other ministers also question the policy.

"That feels good. They were men and women of integrity," said Rose Mary Denman, fighting back tears but appearing happy as the sentence was announced. "They were telling the church they were not sure the church has behaved like the church."

Denman, 40, had demanded the trial as a test of the prohibition against homosexuals serving in the clergy of the United Methodist Church, a denomination with 10 million members.

A jury of ministers found Denman in violation of the rule Monday, but suspended her from her ministry until United Methodist ministers from New Hampshire gather for their annual meeting in June.

The jury of nine men and four women could have removed Denman from the ministry or expelled her from the church.

Denman had said she expected to be found in violation of the rule and would transfer her ministry to the Unitarian Universalist Association, which accepts homosexuals.

Bishop George Bashore of Boston, who filed the complaint against Denman, said the verdict showed that the jurors concur with the church policy adopted three years ago, that homosexuality is "incompatible with Christian teaching."

He said the sentence reflected an attempt to make "the most caring and merciful decision" possible under the circumstances.

The jury chairwoman, the Rev. Janet E. Smith-Rushton, of South Walpole, Mass., said the jurors reaffirmed their belief in the church's view that homosexuals are "individuals of sacred worth" and entitled to the church's guidance.

Throughout the trial, Denman, her lover and a group of allies wore small pink triangles, a symbol the Nazis' required homosexuals to wear in concentration camps.

Denman has been on leave from her two parishes in Conway, N.H., and lives in Portland, Maine.

Denman, a divorced mother of one child, testified that until a few years ago she was "a right-wing charismatic" who vehemently opposed homosexuality.

She said her view changed when she was recovering from surgery and invited a friend, the divorced wife of another United Methodist minister, to move in with her to help with the chores.

"Toward the end of the summer, she told me she loved me," Denman said. "That scared me, and I told her I was straight."

Later, after doing "mental and emotional gymnastics" to deny her homosexuality, she accepted it and took the first of two year leaves in June 1985. Last May, she acknowledged her homosexuality before the church's New Hampshire annual conference.

She testified that she resisted urgings to resign from the church before the trial because it would have been "admitting culpability. ...I do not feel guilty. I believe that, in God's eyes, I am not guilty."

The trial, held in a meeting room, had the trappings of a courtroom, with Denman and Bashore sitting at tables with their lawyers facing presiding Bishop Neil L. Irons.

The church lawyer and Irons stressed that the focus of the trial was not the rule itself, but whether Denman had violated it. Denman's counsel, the Rev. John McDougall, countered that a church trial is different from a secular one and the rule should be debated.

"She comes to us with the claim of a Christian to be heard by her own church," McDougall said.

Burton Throckmorton, a professor at the Bangor (Maine) Theological Seminary, from which Denman graduated in 1981, said prejudice against homosexuals was the real issue.

Lonetree 'made dumb mistake,' gets 30 years

QUANTICO, Va. (AP) — A military jury sentenced Sgt. Clayton Lonetree to 30 years in prison rather than life, after attorneys for the first Marine accused of spying conceded he made a dumb mistake for revealing secrets to the Soviets.

Lonetree showed little emotion when the jury announced the sentence Monday after less than three hours of deliberations, said defense attorney William Kunstler, who promised to file an appeal.

The eight Marine jurors also ordered a $5,000 fine, a dishonorable discharge with no pay or benefits, and a reduction in rank to the lowest pay scale.

Lonetree, 25 of St. Paul, Minn., would be eligible for parole in 10 years.

Before being sentenced, Lonetree made a brief, unsworn statement in which he told the jurors he would accept whatever penalty they imposed. He refused to say his problems were anyone else's fault.

"I'm not going to blame anybody," Lonetree said softly.

He said he was "a devoted anti-communist."

Lonetree said he was born in Chicago and lived with his Navajo mother, but he started grade school in St. Paul when he lived with his father.

"Every time I done anything, he criticized me," Lonetree said. "The only time he spoke to me, he was drunk."

He was later taken to an orphanage in Farmington, N.M., and spent several years with little contact with his parents.

Kunstler and defense attorney Michael Stuhff had predicted the jurors would impose the maximum life sentence after convicting him of all 13 espionage counts, the most serious alleging he provided the Soviet KGB the identities of CIA agents and the floor plans of the U.S. Embassies in Moscow and Vienna.

Sgt. Clayton Lonetree

"We weren't far off," Stuhff said. "I think the 30 years is certainly a very substantial jolt, a substantial sentence."

"I think they wanted to do less than life, but still sock it to him," Kunstler added.

Lonetree was accused of becoming a spy after falling in love with a Soviet translator, Violetta Sanni, while he was stationed as a guard at the Moscow embassy.

The prosecution said he was a cold-hearted traitor.

"A message needs to be sent out, a punishment needs to be made, that crimes like this will not be tolerated," said the chief military prosecutor, Marine Maj. David L. Beck.

Move of sea otters worries some fishermen

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Federal wildlife agents snatched 15 napping sea otters for a journey to a new home where officials hope to establish a colony for the creatures where they will not be threatened by oil spills.

But the otter roundup has some shellfishers who ply the waters near the colony worried that the otters will infringe upon their livelihood.

The 15 animals captured Monday, when the roundup began, were being held at the Monterey Bay Aquarium in Monterey, pending the capture of at least nine others, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service officials said.

Four boats were used Monday, and another sweep was expected today.

The otters are to be moved about 200 miles, from the coast of San Luis Obispo County to San Nicolas Island 80 miles southwest of Los Angeles in hopes of removing the playful critters from a list of threatened species, says Diane Hoobler, an agency spokeswoman.

The animals are threatened by oil drilling along the coast, Fish and Wildlife biologist James Estes told ABC-TV.

"Sea otters are very vulnerable to fur contamination, fouling from oil," he explained. "A contaminated otter is essentially a dead otter."

The plan calls for moving 70 of the animals by mid-October.

"It's certainly one of the biggest efforts the Fish and Wildlife Service has undertaken," Ms. Hoobler said in a telephone interview from Ventura.

But the plan has its opponents. Jerry Jashinski says he fears he won't be able to find fishing areas once the otters are moved. The otters devour enormous amounts of shellfish.

"I've got boat payments, insurance payments, health payments, baby bills...personally I am scared," he said.

Carol Fulton, of the Friends of Sea Otter, countered: "There's no place along the West Coast where there are shellfish that man isn't already there harvesting. Any place you move otters, you're going to have some degree of conflict."

Surprise apparently is the key to capturing the otters, which swim primarily on their back.

"A sleeping otter is spied and the boat races up to it at a fairly high speed...so the otter is surprised and can't swim away," Ms. Hoobler said. The animals are pulled from the water with a net.

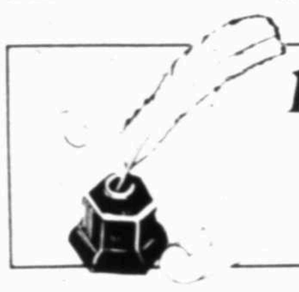
The plan to move the otters was given final approval last week by the California Fish and Game Commission after five years of planning, she said.

The otters are listed as a threatened species because their population has dwindled along the coast from 16,000 to 1,650, she added.

Officials think it will take at least five years for the otters to establish their colony.

San Nicolas was chosen because it is fairly isolated, making it more likely the animals will stay there. It also offers the otters an abundant source of sea urchins, abalone and clams, she said.

The U.S. agency has used similar programs to help other threatened and endangered species, accoording Ms. Hoobler. In North Carolina, the service is working to boost the population of red wolves.



1787 Constitution Daybook

Associated Press

Saturday, Aug. 25, 1787
PHILADELPHIA TODAY

The Pennsylvania Herald dated Sept. 1 reported today's activity at Christ Church:

"On Saturday last, the decorations of Christ Church steeple were completed and fixed on without any kind of accident happening to those engaged in the arduous undertaking. It is remarkable, observes a correspondent, that on that day ten years (ago), viz, the 25th of August, 1777, the (Crown), placed on the extreme end of the spire, was almost demolished by lightning. The representation of a Bishop's Mitre (in honor of the ordination of Bishop William White earlier in the year), is now substituted in its stead, which is deemed a great addition to the other public ornaments of the city."

CONFEDERATION TODAY

John Adams wrote from London to Thomas Jefferson in Paris. Among other subjects, Adams mentioned the loan he had opened in Holland on his own.

"A Million of Guilders are borrowed on a new loan in Holland, and I went over lately to Subscribe the obligations, a Punctillio (a minute detail, a nice point of ceremony) which the Brokers were pleased to think indispensible, to gratify the Fancies of the Money Lenders.

"But as I had no fresh Authority from Congress, nor any particular new Instructions, I have been and am Still under Serious Apprehensions ... of its Ratification. ... I presume if Mr. Grand Should refuse your usual Draughts for your Salary Messrs. Willinks and Van Staphorsts will honor them to the amount of yours and Mr. Short's Salaries."

CONVENTION TODAY

The clause requiring the new government to pay the old government's debt was reconsidered. George Mason (Va.) objected to the obligatory "shall" in "shall fulfill the engagements and discharge the debts." The creditors should be left as they are now. There was a distinction between original holders and those who purchased obligations fraudulently. John Langdon (N.H.) wished to do no more than leave creditors in status quo. Elbridge Gerry (Mass.) had no interest in the question, owning only enough securities that the interest would pay his taxes (actually, he was the largest holder of public securities among the delegates — at least $50,000 worth).

"He would observe, however, that as the public had received the value of the literal (face) amount, they ought to pay that value to some body. ... As to Stock — jobbers he saw no reason for the censures thrown on them — They keep up the value of the paper. Without them there would be no market."

Edmund Randolph (Va.) proposed substitute language (now the first paragraph, Article VI).

The slave trade provision was again taken up. Charles Cotesworth Pinckney (S.C.) and Nathaniel Gorham (Mass.) moved to change 1800 to 1808; James Madison (Va.) said that 20 years would do all the mischief to be expected, and such a term was dishonorable. The motion carried.

DELEGATES TODAY

William Samuel Johnson (Conn.) dined with Elbridge Gerry (Mass.). He took a walk, and paid a laundry bill of 13 shillings and 2 pence.

Gov. William Livingston (N.J.) wrote from Philadelphia to his old friend John Tabor Kempe, in London. (A Tory, Kempe had returned to England. Livingston was providing him evidence to support his claims against the Crown for property seized from him by the Americans.)

LOOKING BACK
Economic Interpretation of the Constitution

On this day, we find Elbridge Gerry, holder of more government debt than any other delegate, arguing for payment of the face value of the debt, even though much of it could be bought at 10 cents on the dollar or less. To what degree were the delegates motivated by personal economic considerations, and to what degree did their work reflect such considerations? These questions have intrigued historians since the appearance of Charles A. Beard's pioneering "An Economic Interpretation of the Constitution of the United States," in 1913.

To date, they have not been satisfactorily answered. We can, however, say that considerations of direct personal economic benefit were not a primary motivation.

If the Constitution did not specifically guarantee that Gerry's share of the public debt would be paid at face value, it did provide a government which would be financially capable of paying it. Gerry would oppose ratification.

George Washington owned no government bonds. He did own land in western Virginia, western Pennsylvania and elsewhere which might be harder to sell if an effective central government was trying hard to sell its own western lands. He supported ratification, as he would have under any circumstances.

Most, if not all of the delegates were not influenced by their own short-term economic well-being.

NATION IN BRIEF

Parents of missionary say she's been freed

JOHNSON CITY, Tenn. (AP) — The parents of a missionary being held hostage by Sudanese kidnappers said they received word from the State Department today that their daughter has been freed in Kenya.

"We're so happy. We're just elated over the fact that they've gotten out and were freed," said Alf Taylor, Katherine Taylor's father.

The bells of First Presbyterian Church, where the family worships, were rung to mark the release of Ms. Taylor, 32, and three other people abducted with her July 7 by members of the Sudanese People's Liberation Army.

"The State Department called and said they had been released over the border to Kenya and they were all OK," Taylor said.

The three Americans and one Briton were taken at gunpoint from their homes in Mundri, about 740 miles southwest of Khartoum, capital of Sudan in east Africa.

Ms. Taylor's employer, the Nairobi-based Association for Christian Relief Organizations, had reported earlier this month that the four were being walked to the border of a neutral country by their captors.

Taylor said he and his wife, Martha Gene Taylor, hoped to speak with their daughter by telephone later today.

Return of cats urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department is appealing for the return of 25 cats taken from an agency laboratory, warning that 11 of the animals were infected with microscopic parasites and could endanger human health.

An animal-rights group calling itself a "Band of Mercy" claimed responsibility Monday for taking the cats and seven African minature pigs from a USDA research laboratory in Beltsville, Md., claiming the animals were being subjected to abuse with no clinical significance.

Veterinarian J.P. Dubey, a USDA researcher, said the disease for which the cats are being tested, toxoplasmosis, is responsible for 25 percent of deaths from AIDS-related complications and also can affect pregnant women and cause birth defects.

Boeing wins Army contract

WASHINGTON (AP) — Boeing Co. outbid LTV Corp. and won an Army contract to produce a new truck-mounted version of the Stinger missile to help defend soldiers and tanks from aerial attack.

The Army announced Monday that it had awarded an initial contract to Boeing totaling $16.2 million for the first 20 pedestal-mounted Stinger units. That is the first installment on an $189.76 million contract for 273 units.

The Stinger units will be built atop small, four-wheel-drive Army trucks. Each truck will carry a moveable "pedestal" in its cargo bed with eight Stingers in launch position, plus a .50-caliber machine gun.

Cocaine arrests top list

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new survey of drug arrests in 39 American cities last year shows the problem remains severe and demonstrates the continued need for anti-drug programs, says the congressman whose committee released the report.

The survey, released Monday by the House Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control, indicates that cocaine and its "crack" derivative, marijuana and heroin led the lists of drug arrests last year.

"This national survey is a 'numbers don't lie' response to those who would eliminate or cut anti-drug programs," committee chairman Rep. Charles B. Rangel, D-N.Y., said in a statement accompanying the report.

The panel said its survey indicated there were 51,462 arrests for sale or possession of cocaine or crack last year in the 39 cities surveyed.

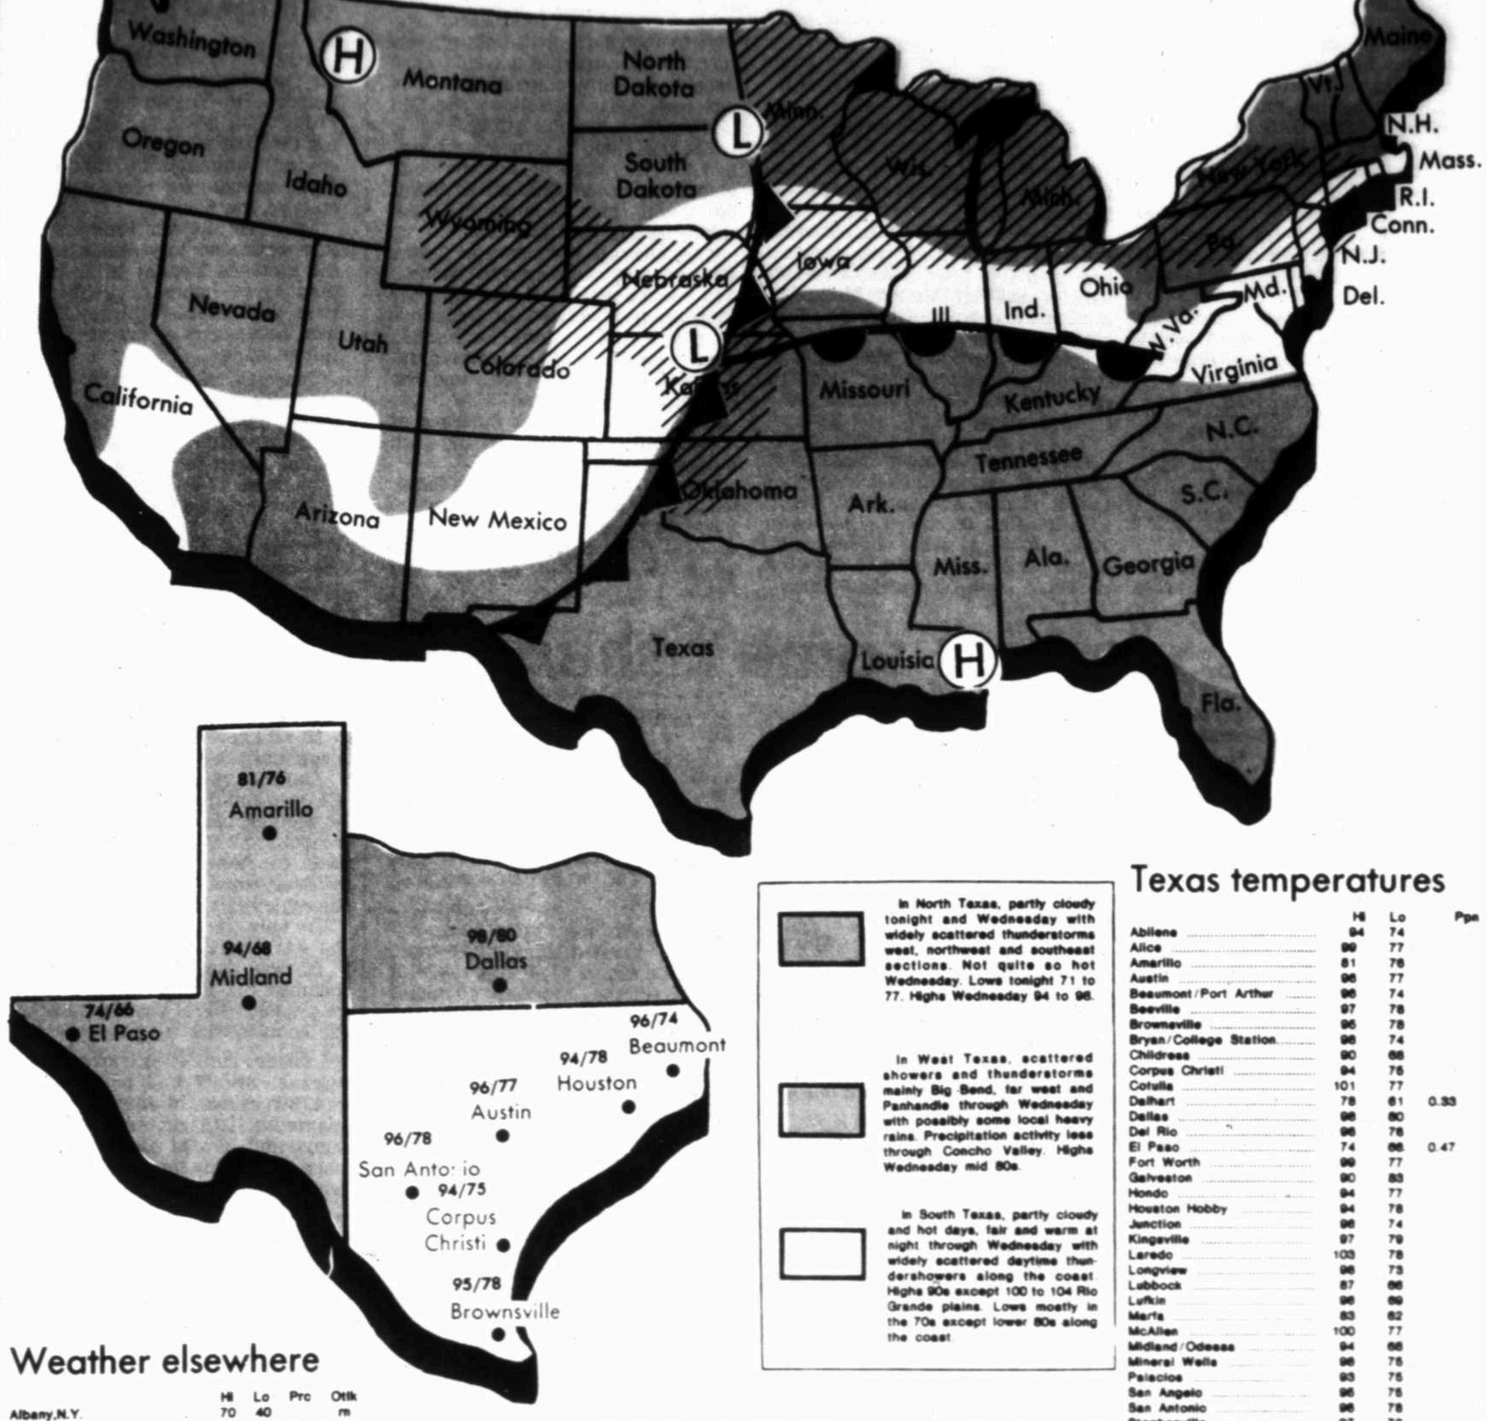
WARNING
(A tornado or severe thunderstorm already is in existence.)

Forecast for 8 AM Wednesday



In North Texas, partly cloudy tonight and Wednesday with widely scattered thunderstorms west, northwest and southeast sections. Not quite so hot Wednesday. Lows tonight 71 to 77. Highs Wednesday 94 to 98.

In West Texas, scattered showers and thunderstorms mainly Big Bend, far west and Panhandle through Wednesday with possibly some local heavy rains. Precipitation activity less through Concho Valley. Highs Wednesday mid 80s.

In South Texas, partly cloudy and hot days, fair and warm at night through Wednesday with widely scattered daytime thundershowers along the coast. Highs 90s except 100 to 104 Rio Grande plains. Lows mostly in the 70s except lower 80s along the coast.

Mostly cloudy skies expected

From Staff and Wire Reports

Tonight skies will be mostly cloudy with a 40 percent chance of late afternoon showers as reported by the forecasters at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport. The low can be expected to be near 70 with winds being out of the southeast at five to 15 mph.

Skies will remain mostly cloudy for Wednesday with the chance of thunderstorms decreasing to 30 percent. The high should reach the lower 90s and the winds will stay out of the southeast at five to 15 mph.

The high for Monday of 94 was nine degrees below the record high of 103 set for that date in 1936. The low for today of 68 was 10 degress above the record low of 58 set for this date in 1970.

STATE

Partly cloudy skies, warm to hot temperatures and scattered showers and thunderstorms are forecast across Texas through Wednesday.

A high pressure system aloft was the state's main weathermaker, but a low pressure system at the surface caused showers and thunderstorms to linger today along the Texas-New Mexico border in extreme West Texas and in the Panhandle.

Forecasters say the showers and thunderstorms could be expected over most sections of the state through Wednesday, but said they would be scattered to widely scattered with many areas not expected to receive any signifcant rainfall.

Lows tonight will be in 60s in the Panhandle and extreme West Texas and in the 70s over the rest of the state.

Highs Wednesday will continue to be warm to hot, mostly in the 90s with a few readings reaching above 100 in North Central Texas and extreme southern portions of the state.

Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 70s, ranging from the 60s in the mountains of Southwest Texas to the 80s in North Central Texas. Extremes ranged from 63 at Marfa in the Davis Mountains to 83 at Grand Prairie in the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

NATION

The upper half of the nation had below-normal temperatures today while rain was scattered across sections of the West.

Showers and thunderstorms were widespread across the Rockies and from eastern New Mexico across the Texas Panhandle and Oklahoma.

Light rain was scattered from the Dakotas and Nebraska across central Illinois into central Indiana.

Below-normal temperatures across the northern half of the nation included widespread early-morning readings in the 50s.

Upton sheriff removed from office again

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

RANKIN — Upton County Sheriff Glenn Willeford was removed from office again Monday after being back on the job for slightly more than three days.

El Paso District Judge William Moody just before noon Monday granted a petition filed by eight residents of Upton County, including County Attorney R.E. Motsenbocker, asking that Willeford be "temporarily and permanantly" removed from office because of alleged criminal acts.

Willeford had been initially suspended from office April 7 of this year by Upton County District Judge Brock Jones, two days prior to the sheriff's indictment on two felony and five misdemeanor charges.

A technical defect in the original petition filed April 6 by District Attorney J.W. Johnson and Motsenbocker required Moody Thursday to order Willeford's reinstatement and payment of all salary due from the time of his suspension.

During a news conference late Monday afternoon called by Johnson and Motsenbocker, Johnson was asked to explain what happened to allow Willeford to be returned to office.

"I guess, in layman's terms, that means we messed up the first time," said Johnson.

In the first amended original petition seeking Willeford's removal pending disposition of criminal charges against him, Motsenbocker had signed an affidavit attesting to the fact the sheriff had committed "an act of official misconduct" involving the possession and delivery of marijuana to one of his deputies, Scott Taylor Aug. 25, 1986.

Willeford's attorneys, John W. Smith and John Cliff of Odessa, sought dismissal of the removal action, contending it was illegal because Motsenbocker did not have personal knowledge of the allegations against the sheriff.

Johnson explained Monday the reason Motsenbocker signed the affidavit was that the deputy sheriff having personal knowledge of Willeford's illegal acts also had been indicted by the Upton County grand jury in connection with the same incident.

Motsenbocker takes exception to the interpretation of the law cited by Smith and Cliff, saying another court ruling has held such affidavits may be sworn on "information and belief," rather than personal knowledge of alleged illegal acts, he said.

Johnson and Motsenbocker indicated, however, that rather than submit the issue to an appellate court, which would prolong the dispute, a decision was made to, in effect, dismiss the original action and file a new one that conformed to Moody's interpretation of state law.

Dancer thinks she had call to teach

By JAMILAH OWENS
Staff Writer

Attributing the person she is today to a very happy homelife and childhood, Sherri Chernesky says "dancing is the key to life."

The 28-year-old Chernesky, a former ballerina, jazz and tap dancer and baton twirler, has been dancing and flying across North American and Canadian stages since her college days.

"I used to lay in my bed at night and just dream about creating entire dance routines...I guess you can say I choreographed in my dreams," said the former Robert E. Lee High School graduate.

She realized early in life — since age 5 — that her love for dancing was very strong. But now, her love for teaching is overwhelming. "I felt as though it was my calling to teach dancing," she added.

Ms. Chernesky, who received a bachelor's degree in dance from Texas Tech University in 1982, said before going to college, "I couldn't decide which way to serve him (God), through teaching dance or serving him as a nun."

"So I decided," she said, "to study dance and later decide, after completing school, which way to go."

After completing 4½ years of school and a brief tour of Europe, Ms. Chernesky said that on the final day of school, after she had packed her clothes and was about to close her dormitory room door for the last time, she received a call from Abbot David Gearits at the Pecos Benedictine Monastery in New Mexico. He called to invite her to come to the monastery to discern her calling.

"I was very appreciative of his offer because I was told that not very many people were invited by the Abbot to visit the monastery by phone. After much prayer, I decided to go," Ms. Chernesky said. "Now, when I reflect upon that whole day, I find it very ironic that he called me right as I was walking out the door...I had written him on several occasions and he called at that moment, I think that said something for great timing."

While at the monastery, Ms. Chernesky said that she liked it and decided to make a one year commitment to stay "serving the Lord" and after the year expired, she would make another decision to either stay or leave.

During her stay, she said, she became involved with liturgical dancing and taught it to the nuns.

Scott Rathburn/Reporter-Telegram

Sherri Chernesky, a 28-year-old Midlander, turned to teaching dancing after spending a year at the Pecos Benedictine Monastery in New Mexico.

"I had the opportunity to work with and study under Carla DeSo, who is one of the founders of liturgical dance and one of the foremost liturgical teachers and dancers in the world. I had the privilege of studying under her. And then I had the opportunity to direct and choreograph liturgical dances for the monastry for people who came from all over the world."

Ms. Chernesky said after the year expired, she was still trying to decide whether to stay or leave. "...and that's when I met Bill, my husband of five years now...and I also felt that I could serve the Lord through teaching dance to children."

Returning home a year ago with her husband, Ms. Chernesky decided to "set-up shop" here in Midland. "I grew up in Midland and since I had been away for awhile, I decided to return...And most of all, my husband wanted to come here and obtain a degree in physical education," she said.

Currrently, Ms. Chernesky's great love for dancing and teaching children has led her to teach at the studio Dance With Class.

Commissioners OK funds for pretrial release program

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

County Commissioners Monday gave $16,000 to a experimental program that allows some people without money to be released from jail on "personnel recognizance," but several bondsman are not happy with the plan.

"They're releasing people out of jail that can afford to pay a bond," charges one local bondsman, Ed Brown owner of B&E Bail Bonding.

Brown was appointed to a committee that will include representatives from the county commissioners court, district court, sheriff's and police departments to study refining the trial program that began June 6.

The bondsmen are contending that unless some changes are made the program will put them out of business.

Lonnie Payne, co-owner of 24-Hour Bail Bonds, said his business has been hurt by the program.

Payne said each month he bails out an average of 20 people charged with felonies. But since Aug. 1 he has had one customer.

However, Midland County Adult Chief Probation officer G.W. Thompson said the program was not set up to compete with bondsmen.

"It was our intent to bring these people out of jail who couldn't make bond," he said.

Pat Baskin, 142nd district court judge, said under the law — unless they are proven to be a threat to society — everyone is entitled to be released from jail on bonds.

However, some people are penalized and must remain in jail until their trial date because they have no money to make bond, Baskin said.

"There is an undesirability in punishing people by keeping them in jail because they are poor, when we would not be keeping them in jail for any other reason," Baskin said.

Thompson told commissioners the program is saving the county about $600 a day or $18,000 a month for every 20 people kept out of jail that would normally cost the county about $30 a day each to hold.

The sheriff's department is having to farm out many prisoners from the county jail which is undergoing renovations to meet specifications set by the Texas Commission on Jail Standards.

During the recent phase of construction, the jail could only hold about 45 prisoners — while 85 prisoners were allowed under a remedial order from the state jail commission before construction began, said Commissioner Scott Welch.

Welch voted against funding the program after his suggestions to have prisoners wait at least three days before they can be released from jail and charged no fees was struck down.

"I don't think we need to buck private enterprise, I think it can work along with the bail bonds group, but it needs a little refinement," Welch said.

Thompson explained that under a state statute courts are allowed to charge people released on personal recognizance a fee from $20 to 3 percent of their bond which can be paid in incremental installments.

He added that some participants in the program have been released from jail before three days on the recommendation of a judge or elected official.

Thirty-six people have gone through the program and currently 24 are out on personal bond and must report to the probation department, Thompson said.

A warrant of arrest has been issued for two people not following rules under the pretrial release program and about nine have shown up for their trials and been processed through the criminal justice system, he said.

Thompson said he thinks the experimental program can co-exist with the local bonding companies.

"There are hundreds and hundreds of pretrial release programs throughout the United States," he said.

Cotton Council holding research project tours

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

TARZAN — The National Cotton Council of America today and Wednesday is conducting a tour of research-and-education projects supported in West Texas by The Cotton Foundation.

"We'll visit field plots where drip irrigation and conservation tillage work is being done, and hear a presentation on a project to determine nitrogen and water-stress effects on cotton-boll development and lint quality," noted T. Cotton Nelson, public relations manager for the National Cotton Council.

The tour also will include a demonstration of the Cotton Telecommunication Network in Lubbock.

The tour's first field stop was to be today at the John Campbell farm at Tarzan, where the consolidated-drip irrigation system was to be explained by Joe Henggeler, an irrigation engineer for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service in Fort Stockton.

Later today, the touring party was to observe conservation-tillage systems for the Texas Southern High Plains on the Burke Slaughter farm at Wellman. Explaining that system was to be Dr. Wayne Keeling, research scientist with the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station in Lubbock.

On Wednesday morning in Lubbock, the group is to hear a report on nitrogen and water stress effects on cotton-boll development and lint quality" by Dr. Thomas J. Gerik, agronomist with the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station in Temple. Later that morning, the group is to observe the Cotton Telecommunication Network at The Trinity Co. in Lubbock.

The Cotton Foundation is the research-education branch of the National Cotton Council, which is headquartered in Memphis, Tenn. A role of The Cotton Foundation is to help United State-produced cotton "stay competitive."

Plea bargain reached in child abuse trial

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

EL PASO — A child abuse trial that was transferred from Odessa to El Paso because of excessive publicity was quickly settled before trial Monday when a special prosecutor named to handle the case and defense attorneys reached a plea bargain agreement.

The trial of Guadalupe Dominguez, 22, on two charges of injury to her young daughter had been expected to last as much as a week. However, the judicial proceeding never reached the stage of jury selection.

Ector County 244th District Court Judge Joe Connally approved a plea bargain agreement worked out by Special Prosecutor G. Smith and Robert Garcia, representing Mrs. Dominguez.

According to District Attorney Eric Augesen, Connally placed the 22-year-old mother on seven years of unadjudicated probation with no specific finding of guilt.

The judge also declined to permanently remove the child from the custody of her parents, Augesen said.

Instead, over a period of several years, the child will be periodically placed in the temporary custody of her parents until such time as a panel appointed by the judge determines the parents should again have full custody, Augesen said.

The first temporary custody period is scheduled to be in about six months, he said.

Concerning the outcome of the case, Augesen said the judge and two attorneys involved had fully explored the case before the judge agreed to the plea bargain agreement.

Man says clerk made himself 'judge, jury, executioner'

HOUSTON (AP) — John K. Niland says his brother was shot to death by a convenience store clerk who decided shoplifting was a capital offense.

Niland made the remark Monday as he prepared to ship the body of Thomas John Niland, 19, home to New York for burial.

The younger Niland was shot in the side early Monday as he apparently tried to run out of the Texan Food Store without paying for a 12-pack of beer and a bag of pretzels.

"This clerk made himself a judge, jury and executioner," the elder Niland told the Houston Chronicle.

Harris County sheriff's detectives said the clerk, Simon Garza, told them he shot Niland in the side with a .38-caliber revolver after Niland abruptly wheeled toward him, as if he had a weapon.

No weapon was found on Niland's body.

The shooting will be referred to a grand jury without charges. Even without what the clerk apparently took as a threatening gesture by Niland, Texas law allows people to use deadly force to prevent the theft of property at nighttime, among other circumstances.

But Niland maintained the shooting of his brother was unnecessary and unjust.

"He shot my brother, and my brother didn't even leave the store," he said. "You can't shoplift without leaving the store. To me, that's the vigilante way. How do I get my satisfaction?"

Garza, 58, would not comment on the incident.

It was at least the third incident involving a gun in the store during his shift this year and the second in which he has shot someone, police records show.

On May 18, investigators said, Garza drew a pistol and shot a man three times after the man walked into the store wearing a mask and carrying a short-barreled shotgun. The man never had a chance to state his intentions, because Garza recognized the gun as the same one used to rob him in April, detectives said.

During the April robbery attempt, Garza complied with the robber without resisting.

In the May incident, Garza held the wounded man at gunpoint until deputies arrived. The suspect, Andre J. Richards, is awaiting trial on aggravated robbery charges, detectives said.

"He just decided he wasn't going to get robbed again," sheriff's Sgt. J.J. Freeze said of Garza shortly after that shooting.

On Monday, Freeze said, Thomas John Niland walked into the store and went to the cooler. Garza told him it was after hours and he could not sell him any beer, so Niland turned and briefly stood near a rack of chips, Freeze said.

Lt. Drew Warren said Niland then "made a dash for the door."

The clerk grabbed his pistol and fired three times when Niland suddenly wheeled toward him as he approached the door, investigators said.

"He said that when the man turned it frightened him and he didn't know" whether Niland had a gun, Freeze said.

Niland was hit once in the side. An ambulance was called, but he died in the store.

Garza was released after questioning.

The elder Niland maintained that the clerk did not have to shoot at a vital area of his brother's body, if at all. He said he could not understand how Garza would think Thomas Niland was reaching for a weapon when he was already carrying the beer and pretzels.

"There's going to be at least a lawsuit filed," Niland said. "If God came down and told me that that killing was justified, I couldn't believe it."

Niland said his brother, the youngest of seven children, moved to Houston from New York less than three weeks ago. He had been living with one of his five sisters since the death of his mother three years ago but moved here because he grew to like Houston while spending summers here, said Niland.

"T.J. was going to start his life over," he said. "His goal was to own his own automotive shop."

DEATHS

Harold Cates

Cates

Harold L. "Doyle" Cates, 65, of Midland died Sunday at a local hospital.

Services will be Wednesday at 11 a.m. in the Ellis Chapel with the Rev. Ross Payne, pastor of Cotton Flat Baptist Church, and the Rev. William Harmon, pastor of White Oaks Freewill Baptist Church, officiating. Burial will follow in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

He was born August 21, 1922 in Rome, Texas, moving to Midland in 1930. As a young man, he worked at various ranches. He married Pauline Massingill in Midland, Oct. 13, 1945. In 1950, he began work for the City of Midland as a mechanic, retiring in 1977 as parts manager of the fleet services. For the next eight years, he and his wife operated Cates Ceramics. He retired two years ago to devote more time to his favorite pasttime, fishing.

He was a member of the Cotton Flat Baptist Church, where he had been a deacon for 12 years.

Survivors include his wife, Pat Cates of Midland; one son, Jim Cates of Midland; one daughter, Mary "Mickey" Perkins of Midland; one brother, Floyd E. Cates of Midland; one sister, Lavon Mertens of Seneca, Mo.; one step-brother, Monroe Patten of Austin; five grandchildren; and several nieces of nephews.

The family requests memorials be directed to MARC of Midland, 2701 North 'A' Street.

Richard Ramsey

WEATHERFORD — Richard L. Ramsey, 63, of Weatherford, brother of Billy Ramsey of Midland, died Saturday at a Weatherford hospital.

Services were at 3 p.m. Monday at Couts Memorial United Methodist Church. Burial was at East Greenwood Cemetery under the direction of Galbreaith-Pickard Funeral Chapel in Weatherford.

He was born Feb. 2, 1924 and was a resident of Parker County for 17 years. He was a retired oil field drilling consultant and a Baptist.

Other survivors include his wife, Dorothy; three daughters, Pam Tatum of Belton, Leslye Marvin of Fort Worth and Deanna Ramsey of Dallas; one son, Richard Ramsey of Albuquerque, N.M.; three sisters, Betty Deyhle, Frances Collard and Doris Williams, all of Honey Grove; two other brothers, Leonard Ramsey of Las Vegas, Nev. and Malcolm Ramsey of Grandview; and six grandchildren.

Frank Houghton

Services for Frank L. Houghton, Jr. were to be today at 11 a.m. at the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity.

Pallbearers were to be Scott Northern, Joe Golding, Dr. Harry A. Miller, III, Ralph E. Covington, Douglas Stillwagon, Mike McElwrath, Charles Stoddard and David Ritchie.

Madlean Cole

Services for Madlean Cole were scheduled for 3 p.m. today at the Ellis Chapel.

Pallbearers were to be John Midkiff, Joe Stickney, Roger Canter, John Crawford, F.L. Cooper, and G.H. Lawless.

Two teens charged in shooting deaths

Wingfield

WELCH, Okla. (AP) — Two teenagers have been charged with three counts of first-degree murder in connection with the shooting deaths of their father, stepmother and 18-month-old half-sister, Oklahoma authorities say.

Assistant District Attorney David Poplin said Monday that Ty Delbert Wingfield, 19, and his 16-year-old sister, Holly Wingfield, were charged in Craig County District Court in Vinita with three counts of first-degree murder for the slayings.

"This is especially heinous because of the little girl. That's bad," Poplin said.

The bodies of Kenneth Clinton Wingfield, 43, his wife, Louise, 36, and their daughter, Crete, 18 months, were found in a trash dump near their rural Craig County home about 7:30 a.m. Monday, said Craig County Sheriff Jess Walker.

Harrison County, Texas, Sheriff Bill Oldham said Ty Wingfield was located after the parents of his former girlfriend called authorities and said he had driven to their Hallsville, Texas, residence and told them about the killings.

The younger Wingfield had a rifle, two shotguns and a pistol with him when he was arrested, the sheriff said.

Oldham said Holly Wingfield apparently had driven alone to Marshall, about 40 miles west of Shreveport, La., in another vehicle. He said she was arrested Monday afternoon.

A Harrison County, Texas, sheriff's dispatcher said the two Wingfields, who waived extradition, were picked up at the county jail in Marshall, Texas, by Oklahoma authorities late Monday.

Walker said the three bodies were found several hundred yards from the residence where the shootings occurred. The residence is north of Welch and about three miles south of the Kansas line.

He said all three appeared to have been shot once in the head. He said the three victims were believed slain between 12:30 p.m. and 2 p.m. Sunday. The bodies were taken to the state medical examiner's office in Tulsa for autopsies.

Poplin said the elder Wingfield apparently was stabbed five times in the chest and shot once in the head with a high-powered rifle.

He said Wingfield's wife and daughter were apparently shot once each in the head with a .44-caliber pistol.

Artist's outdoor murals attracting attention

DENTON (AP) — The brown building on East Hickory Street is vacant except for an apartment in the back, but it has been attracting attention lately.

Pete Foster, who painted a mural on the Yellow Rose Club here last year, has painted another of his Western mountain scenes on the side of the two-story vacant building.

The Western scene shows a backdrop of brown mountains with a cowboy on a horse, a stream flowing from the mountains to the front of the picture, and a gray buffalo and brownish-orange steers grazing on one side of the picture. An old house sits on the other side and tall cactuses grow near the stream. A bright blue sky highlighted with clean, white clouds touches off the top of the mural.

Foster, who appears to enjoy painting as much as the spectators like his work, says mountains are his favorite scene, but he adds that he's painted "everything."

Foster worked for a sign company in Dallas and he had his own company, Argyle Signs, from 1967 to 1976.

Although he was born and reared in the Denton area and graduated from Justin High School, Foster spent the last nine years traveling and painting. He moved back to Denton around the end of June.

Doc Smith, owner of A.R. Motors and the building on which the mural was painted, drove by while Foster was walking along the road and asked him to do the mural.

Smith said he had known Foster for many years and he knew he was the one to do the mural. "I hunted him a long time," Smith said. "I told him what I wanted to do. I knew he could do what I wanted."

In Denver, Foster painted a 280-foot-long mural that serves as a backdrop for one of the world's largest sets of miniature trains, on four walls inside Union Station.

This year, he painted a fiddle and some guitars on a wall inside the Opryland Hotel in Nashville, and a mural outside Loretta Lynn's home near Nashville. He also worked on some buses and vans for country singers.

It's harder to do outside murals because of the cracks on the sides of buildings, Foster said. "You'll wear out a set of brushes," he said.

It also can be distracting when people walk or drive by and comment, but Foster seems to enjoy the attention. "I'll work 10 minutes and talk for an hour," he said.

Some of the people who stop, though, are anxious to talk to Foster about his work. One man has spoken to him about doing a mural on the lobby wall of Denton State School, and a few other places are considering adding murals.

"Everybody's interested, but they're not quite ready," Foster said. Murals draw attention to a business, he said. He compared them to handmade quilts, adding that anything done by hand is worth more.

Foster plans to do other jobs in this area, including some sign jobs he has talked to people about, and possibly buy a house.

He plans to add a partner around the first of the year. A former helper, Larry Fry, now lives in Kansas, but will rejoin him. Fry, who is like a son to the 61-year-old Foster, is "one of the best (artists) I've ever seen," Foster said.

Police probing if slayings linked

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Four men have been found killed in or near graveyards in east San Antonio over the past 10 days, and police sought to determine if they were linked.

"There very definitely are similarities," in the slayings, homicide Lt. Albert Ortiz said Monday.

It appeared that the victim was a robbery victim because, like the three other victims, the pockets of his pants were turned out, detective Joe Oosterveen said.

The body of the latest victim, still unidentified but described as a male 20 to 25 years old, 5-foot 3, about 120 pounds, was found about 2:30 a.m. Monday at a park just south of City Cemetery. He died of multiple head injuries, police said.

He was dressed in tan pants, tan cowboy boots, and a black muscle shirt.

Ortiz said the four killings were similar because of the type of wounds on the victims, the location of the bodies and other evidence.

"At this time we are not ready to identify anybody as a suspect," Ortiz said.

The three earlier victims were believed to have been shot to death.

The first two shooting deaths were discovered Aug. 16 in St. John's Cemetery. They were identified as Alex Delgado, 22, and Robert Torres, 19.

Tickets available to hear Linkletter lecture

From Staff Reports

The Permian Basin Agency on Aging is the local source for tickets to hear Art Linkletter, broadcast star and authority on children and seniors, near Austin Sept. 17 and 18.

Linkletter will be the featured speaker during a two-day community service program offered at the Summit and sponsored by Austin Groups for the Elderly and the Texas Department on Aging. The event also includes a "Senior American Rally" which is free.

Other events during the program require a reservation payment of a fee.

DANCER

Her pedagogical studies under John Barker of New York City, a leading authority in the nation on teaching classical dance, according to Ms. Chernesky, have afforded her the opportunity to learn and teach methods of classic dance in the same manner in which they are taught at the Kirov Ballet and Vaganova Choreographical School in Leningrad, Russia.

Ms. Chernesky said that one of the reasons she has found a love in dancing and teaching is that "it lifts peoples' spirits and I want to make people happy and most of all — smile."

Man surrenders to police after being indicted on drug charges

From Staff Reports

The last of nine men indicted by a Midland County grand jury in relation to a drug bust Thursday turned himself into Midland police Monday night, police said this morning.

Charged with felony delivery of marijuana was Horace Kirby Lyde, age unknown, of 3307 Ward St. He was released on $5,000 bond late Monday.

Midland Police Cpl. Jim White said today nine men were indicted last Thursday and Friday in connection with a drug bust Thursday which netted police "one small baggie" of mushrooms containing the hallucinogen, psilocybin; "two baggies of marijuana"; several hand-held scales; a vinyl bag containing five syringes and spoons believed to be used for "cooking" cocaine or heroin before injection, reports said.

Midland County Sheriff's Department deputies are searching today for a man suspected of aggravated robbery Monday afternoon.

Reports said Dearl M. Flowers Jr., 29, of 8403 Golder in Odessa, stopped to render aid to what he thought to be a stranded motorist.

When the Odessa man neared the late model white Ford LTD he was robbed at gunpoint of $400, police said.

The incident occurred 2.6 miles north of U.S. Highway 80 on FM 1788.

Police Roundup

Information sought about aggravated robbery at shop

This week, Crime Stoppers is asking for the public's help in solving an aggravated robbery that occurred in Odessa at Donna's Fashion Boutique, 1541 Parkway, in the Old Town Shopping Center.

On Wednesday, Aug. 12, at about 2:30 p.m., a sales clerk was helping several customers when a man entered the store, and at gunpoint ordered the four women to lie on the floor. The suspect was described as 5 feet 7 to 5 feet 8 inches tall, weighs between 140 and 160 pounds, and is in his late 20s. He was wearing a red T-shirt and blue jeans. According to investigators, he carried a dark handgun and told each victim to surrender her purse and jewelry.

Any information about the robbery could be worth $1,000 cash, this week only, for information leading to the arrest and indictment of the robber. Crime Stoppers also pays cash rewards for information about other felony crimes.

Crime Stoppers in Midland can be reached at 694-TIPS, and in Odessa at 333—TIPS. Callers do not have to reveal their identity.

TRIAL

"I've known Judge Connally for a long time," Augesen said, "He would never have accepted that plea and agreed to place the child back in the home unless the facts were such that he was satisfied in his own mind that the harm done to the child was not of such a nature that the child would be in any danger of physical abuse in the future," stated the district attorney.

What the lack of finding of guilt means, Augesen said, is that the Dominguez's will be allowed to continue to seek admission to the United States under the immigration amnesty program. A finding of guilt would have precluded this, he said.

The case involving the then-3-year-old girl was initially described as "the worst case of child abuse" in the recollection of at least one investigator. That assessment was made on the basis of investigation of the case by Ector County Sheriff's Lt. Jerry Davis and a report on the results of an examination done Dec. 31, 1986 by Dr. Robert Bright at Women's and Children's Hospital.

The investigation led to the filing of charges of aggravated sexual abuse of a child against the child's father, as well as charges of injury to a child and failure to report child abuse.

The mother was charged with injury to a child and failure to report child abuse. Both were indicted and jailed, but eventually released.

A subsequent examination of the child by several doctors, which indicated the child had not been sexually assaulted or burned with a cigarette, led Augesen to dismiss the felony charges against the father and turn the remaining cases over to the county attorney.

An Ector County grand jury finally indicted the mother on two charges of injury to a child and those are the charges that were plea bargained in El Paso Monday.

SHERIFF

In granting the petition and ordering the removal of Willeford Monday, the El Paso judge set Sept. 14 as the date for the sheriff's pretrial hearing on allegations against him and Nov. 2 as the date for the actual trial.

Where the trial will be held is yet to be determined, but Johnson indicated a change of venue will be sought.

However, that decision will ultimately be made by Moody, who was appointed to preside over the civil and criminal cases involving Willeford after Jones granted a motion by Smith and removed himself from the case. Moody was subsequently appointed to take over the Willeford cases by the administrative judge for the 112th Judicial District.

Because of Johnson's close involvement in the cases since the inception, he asked Jones to appoint a special prosecutor. Jones late last month named Ector County District Attorney Eric Augesen to handle prosecution of the charges against Willeford.

Augesen has indicated he will ask the El Paso judge to transfer Willeford's trial from Rankin to some other location because he does not believe either the state or the former sheriff can receive a fair trial in Upton County.

The grand jury had also indicted three former deputies.

Deputies Don Pennington and Sam Taylor were indicted on charges of official misconduct and official oppression. Deputy Scott Taylor was indicted on five counts, including aggravated perjury, possession of marijuana, official misconduct, tampering with or fabricating physical evidence and official oppression.

Johnson announced Monday that, in plea bargained agreements, all charges have been dropped against Pennington and Sam Taylor in exchange for their testimony against Willeford.

Scott Taylor, Johnson said, last Thursday in El Paso pleaded guilty to a single charge of official misconduct and all other charges against him have been dropped and he, too, will testify against Willeford, the Upton County district attorney said.

In opening Monday's news conference, Johnson said its purpose was "to let the local citizenry in Upton County know that the law enforcement situation here in our county has stabilized itself once again."

FASHION

Lucky clothing, accessories, have special meaning

By PAMELA REDMOND SATRAN
Copley News Service

I left my watch in the country last weekend. When I realized, halfway home, that I'd forgotten it, I was so worried I almost went back.

"Calm down," I told myself. "Your fears are groundless. Nothing bad will happen to you this week just because you're not wearing that watch."

Well, it has been a terrible week. Everything that could have gone wrong, has. Of course, all those bad things could have happened if I had been wearing my lucky watch, but in my heart of hearts, deep down where my Irish grandmother's tales of leprechauns and angels still live, I don't believe it.

I know believing in a lucky watch — in a lucky or unlucky anything — is a little silly. I know it's completely irrational. But when I'm not wearing that watch — white gold, 80 years old, a wedding gift from my husband — I feel unprotected.

I take comfort in the knowledge that other people — educated people, professional people, even famous people — are as attached to their lucky pieces as I am.

When I was feeling naked without my watch, I saw an episode of the television show "St. Elsewhere" in which Dr. Fiskus — the one who always wears a baseball cap — reluctantly lent said cap to a scared little boy about to go into X-ray. "This is my lucky hat. I never take it off my head," he explained to the boy. "It protects me from the forces of evil."

CNS Graphic

THIS REMINDED me of a grande-dame fashion editor I once worked with, who, whenever she travels, trades her Chanel jackets and emeralds for an ancient tweed blazer and a battered Yankees cap.

"I don't like to think of myself as superstitious, but I never take a trip without that hat," she explains. "Even if I don't wear it, I throw it in a carry-on bag. It's got my name written all over the inside in case I lose it."

Another woman I know has lucky earrings, which she wears even when she would prefer to wear another pair, as well as an unlucky persimmon-colored silk blouse.

"I first realized this blouse was unlucky when I was riding home from work in a cab during a rainstorm," she says. "I'd had a bad day, and then I noticed the cab was leaking and my blouse had gotten soaked. After a few similar experiences, I stopped wearing the blouse."

One night, however, she decided to thumb her nose at luck and went to a party wearing the unlucky blouse and not wearing her lucky earrings. "I got blind drunk, lost an earring, bit my boyfriend and you don't want to hear the rest," she moans. "I haven't worn the blouse since."

Athletes are more superstitious than other people, psychologists say, and are apt to attribute wins and losses to mysterious forces harbored in their clothes.

Tennis star Chris Evert Lloyd, for instance, burns any outfit in which she repeatedly loses. For ordinary, everyday luck, she irons everything she wears — from her headband to her socks and all in between.

Martina Navratilova wore the same dress — white with a navy collar, gold lurex pin stripes and a gold gothic "M" monogram — to win five Virginia Slims championships, as well as 1978's Wimbledon.

BUT, SAYS couturier-to-the-tennis-stars Ted Tinling, "Her companion complained that it was full of stains and cigarette holes, so I made a duplicate with the buttons placed slightly differently so the difference could be told up close. Martina would wear the duplicate to every match up until finals, and then she wore the old lucky one to the finals and won."

The first day I came to work without my lucky watch, I decided to adopt Martina's strategy and borrow a similar watch from a co-worker.

Maybe the reason I was so nervous without my watch was that I missed the secure feeling of a band on my wrist. Maybe I was incredibly disoriented by not knowing what time it was every second.

The duplicate didn't work for me. In fact, it didn't work to the extent that the new watch quickly started to feel unlucky.

I realized this on Thursday morning, riding the train to work, right after a dead ringer for the Incredible Hulk stepped on my foot. The day was only an hour old and already the shower had gone cold while my shampoo was still sudsy and by daughter had practiced her Michael Jackson imitation on the white skirt I'd planned to wear to work.

My train lurched to a halt somewhere under the East River, and I looked at the watch to calculate whether I would be late for work.

But I didn't see what time it was, I only saw this stupid watch. Suddenly I hated it, associating it with everything bad that had happened all week.

Just like my lucky watch makes me think of my wedding and my husband and feeling good, this — imposter — made me think of burnt chicken breasts and misplaced manuscripts and troubled sleep. I couldn't wait to get to work and return it to its unfortunate owner.

NOW IT'S Friday, and even though they're predicting rain and I have errands to do and an old friend is coming to town, I'm going to the country this weekend to get my watch.

I don't believe that my watch really makes me perform better at work any more than I believe Martina's lurex-striped dress made her win tennis championships. But I do believe these things somehow make us feel like we can win, and that's what really counts.

Shopping for shoes popular 'fashionable' pastime

By BARBARA HUSTON
Hearst News Service

What do Imelda Marcos, Michael Jackson, Elton John, Cher and millions of Americans have in common?

An uncontrollable desire to shop for shoes, says New York fashion consultant Cheryl Driesen.

Do they think they're Cinderella and life will change if the new shoe fits? Do they feel a Freudian, sexual attraction for the shoe as a perfect container?

Driesen says she leaves such analysis to her psychiatrist husband. She thinks men and women fill closets with shoes, even making catalog systems for them, because buying them is so much fun.

The patients — uh, make that customers — sit down in a pampering atmosphere while someone kneels at their feet bearing shoes.

The stock cartoon shows the woman shopper surrounded by 25 pairs and a tired salesman.

Part of the pleasure, says Driesen, is that shoes are, traditionally, an impulse purchase, an accessory to play with. Americans play with shoes to the tune of $7 billion a year.

Fashion comes first for both men and women.

Almost a quarter of all American women, surveyed in a Bass shoe study, said they'd keep wearing high heels even if the shoes damaged their feet or caused excessive pain, says Driesen.

CNS Graphic

In a lifetime, the average person walks the distance of three to four times around the earth. For every mile walked, feet absorb 500,000 pounds of pressure.

Other facts from Driesen that foot fetishers will enjoy:

■ You can tell whether people are right- or left-handed by looking at their shoes.

If the right heel is more worn than the left, the wearer is right-handed and vice versa.

■ According to footwear historians, footwear styles repeat themselves every 25 years, Driesen says.

Right now classics are in. Pumps, oxfords, boat shoes and mid-heel pumps are good examples. Flats outnumber high heels 2 to 1.

Classics always combine fashion, quality and comfort, says Driesen. They are the opposite of fads.

One fad, the high stiletto heel introduced in the 1940s, was so sharp it dented wooden floors. In the 1950s, pumps developed with toes so long and pointed, women sometimes had to walk up stairs sideways.

At least they were less boring than the basic shoe wardrobe that once included a dress shoe for church, a daytime shoe, maybe a pair of tennis shoes, maybe a pair of boots and, depending on where you lived, sandals for summer.

Black-and-white patent leather shoes appeared between Memorial Day and Labor Day only.

Now the only restriction on style is common sense and your mirror, says Drisen.

High-heeled red shoes, once suggestive of the fallen woman, now are a fashion basic.

Flat skimmers or ballerina slippers are also basics as are loafers or oxfords for weekend wear.

The athletic shoe explosion in the past three to five years means you get specialized walking, jogging, tennis, aerobic or other sport shoes in endless colors, high- or low-topped, and wear them as everyday casual shoes.

With new short, stretch skirts coming in for fall, you'll see many more high-heeled shoes though flats and skimmers still will be acceptable in lighter materials such as suede.

Mid-heel shoes look least appropriate with the new lengths, Driesen says. For the well-heeled, suede, over-the-knee boots will be in.

What hasn't changed recently, Driesen says, is that women still don't know how to shop for shoes. Among her tips:

■ If you want new shoes to fit well during their lifetime, timing is crucial.

Shop for shoes in the middle of the day when your feet have expanded from the force of gravity after a night's rest.

Shop after you've been on your feet for a while. That way you won't get shoes that are too small.

■ Have the salesman measure your foot. Some women don't take the time for that and haven't had their feet measured for size for years.

Sizes change over the years, like dress sizes, says Driesen.

■ Of course, wear the kind of socks or hose you will be wearing with the shoes on a day-to-day basis.

■ For comfort — and strength — leather shoes allow the foot to breathe.

The sole can be either leather or synthetic but many people prefer synthetics for longer life.

Colored gems accent fall fashions

DALLAS (AP) — Flirty, feminine skirts and dresses; sporty, above-the-knee knits; fur-trimmed jackets adorned with peplums; ever-so-daring backless evening wear — fall '87 offers a look for every mood and a fit for every figure.

To complement these versatile fashions, the American Gem Trade Association (AGTA) says knock 'em dead with color in a bevy of brilliant gemstone jewelry designs.

"A colored gemstone jewelry creation is one of the few pieces in a fashion wardrobe that endures from season to season and year to year," notes Maurice Shire, president of AGTA, a non-profit organization representing the colored gemstone industry.

Warm spice, paprika, pumpkin, chocolate and pearlized taupe highlight fall's rich selection of warm brown tones.

To complement these brown tones for special occasion wear, AGTA recommends elegant rings, necklaces and earrings adorned by topaz, a gemstone that is found in several colors including yellow, champagne and sherry.

For warm brown tones for office and weekend wear, AGTA suggests bold jewelry creations featuring citrine, a gemstone that is more durable and less expensive than topaz. A citrine's color can range from pale yellow to intense red-gold known as "Madeira."

Found in Brazil and Madagascar, citrine ranges in size from two millimeters to as large as 1,000 carats, making it a perfect choice for chunky, sculptural jewelry designs.

For the softer side, AGTA recommends the durable aquamarine, found in pale sky to deep sea blue tones. To add a delicate touch, try emerald, oval, pear or cushion-cut aquamarines set in white gold earrings and rings.

Out-of-the-blue fashions for fall '87 sport cool, acid-bright turquoise and deep midnight tones.

Shopping in Bangkok appeals to all tastes

By MARGO HAMMOND
Copley News Service

From sleek department stores where you can shop in air-conditioned comfort to the gritty flea markets set up along the city's canals where bargaining is an art form, Bangkok has a shopping experience for everybody's taste.

Shopping in Bangkok, in fact, is hard to avoid. The street hawkers, whom the city is now trying to control, virtually invade the sidewalks with their stalls. Here fake designer labels abound. Sometimes the label will only echo a name brand — like a pair of jeans marked "Love and Strauss" — but beware of $5 "Calvin Klein" shirts, as well.

The department stores — the various branches of Central and Robinson and the ultramodern Tokyu at the Mah Boon Krong Centre just beyond Siam Square — are more reliable for ready-made clothes and relatively inexpensive (a silk skirt and blouse bought recently at Central cost $40), but larger sizes are limited (the Thais tend toward the petite).

AN EVEN better assurance of quality for your money — and this is what most Thais themselves do — is to have something tailor-made. Overnight service can usually be arranged through major hotels. A tailored cotton shirt will cost from 650 to 700 baht ($26 to $28), a long-sleeved silk blouse slightly more, depending on the quality and design of the silk. Jim Thompson Thai Silk Co. at 9 Suriwongse Road offers quality silk at fixed prices.

On Saturday and Sunday Bangkok features a sprawling Weekend Market at Chatuchak Park, offering a wide range of items from birds (there are occasional cockfights held here and you can buy the winner!) to hillside tribe handicrafts (an appliqued bedspread can be bargained down to $50) to assembly-line "antiques." Some of these "antiques" — opium scales, betel nut boxes, puppets — are so charming and inexpensive, however, it doesn't really matter when they were made. Just beware of being taken. After a few trips to various stands asking prices, you can usually determine the fair price, give or take a baht or two.

A unique feature of the Weekend Market is the vegetarian restaurant of Bangkok's Governor Chamlong where you can eat a meal for 5 baht (20 cents). Drinks are an extra 1 baht (4 cents).

YAOWARAJ ROAD, cutting through Bangkok's Chinatown, is lined with dozens of shops selling gold by weight at fixed government prices. For a lunch break you can stop for a dim sum lunch at Hoi Thien Lao, the oldest Chinese restaurant in Bangkok, on nearby Rachawong Road. Parallel to Yaowaraj Road is Sampeng Lane, a virtual potpourri of shops, offering everything from pipe cleaners to Chinese pajamas.

At the extreme western end of Sampeng Lane is the Pahurat Cloth Market, featuring Thai and Malaysian batiks, and also in the area is the Nakhon Kasem or Thieves Market (bounded bY Charoen Krung, Yaowaraj, Chakkrawat and Boriphat roads) where you can find brass, ships' lamps, coffee grinders, bronze drums and even old antiques.

Shopping for handicrafts is best, however, in the northern city of Chiang Mei, where many of the items originate. Visitors can go along the Bo Sang San Kamphaeng Road to the various workshops to watch silversmiths, silk weavers, and other artisans at work. At the teak factory you can order teak furniture to be shipped back to the United States (a custom-made teak bed — you choose the carvings on the head and baseboards — costs $1,150, shipping to the port of entry included). At the umbrella workshop you can buy parasols, ranging in size from 5 inches to 80 inches in diameter and in price from 10 to 3,500 baht (40 cents to $140).

For really diehard shoppers Chiang Mei even has a night bazaar, worth a visit, but lacking in the quality of the other shops.

A handy guide for shoppers is Nancy Chandler's Map of Bangkok, alias The Market Map and much more, which offers clever and colorful drawings of the city's markets, as well as sight-seeing highlights, river taxi stops, out-of-the-way restaurants and some air-conditioned bus routes. (She also has a map of Chiang Mei.) The maps are available at bookstores, hotels or from Nancy Chandler Graphics Ltd., 315 Silom Road, Bangkok.

DEAR ABBY

Couple can't shut their eyes to peeping Tom

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I've never written for advice before, but this issue cannot be resolved by any other means.

About a year ago, my husband and I became aware of a "Peeping Tom" who occasionally looks into our bedroom window at night. Our bedroom is on the first floor, facing a woods, and would be considered very private. We also have blinds, but because I sometimes leave the bedroom windows open, the blinds blow to the side.

I have not called the police because the "Tom" is our next-door neighbor. He is a respected professional man and has always been a friend to my husband and me, and his wife and children are very dear to us. We are angry and frustrated and don't know what to do.

I'm on the verge of confronting him, and if I do, it will forever change our relationship with him. (I'm assuming he will deny it.) I've already told his wife that I'd seen "someone" at our window, and to ask her husband if he'd seen anyone in hopes that it would scare him away, but he keeps at it.

Any ideas? Or should I just be direct and risk the consequences? — UNEASY IN ILLINOIS

DEAR UNEASY: Even respected professional men are not exempt from this kind of behavior. Your neighbor needs help. You and/or your husband should confront him and tell him that if he doesn't get professional help, you will be forced to tell his wife. And, if necessary, you will report him to the police. Although most "Peeping Toms" seldom go beyond "looking," their victims feel threatened and their privacy is invaded.

DEAR ABBY: We are an elderly couple who made an expensive mistake. After a light lunch at a family cafe that we've patronized for many years, we left a $10 bill instead of a $1 bill for the waitress. I didn't notice it until after we got home.

We went back for lunch on the following day, hoping the waitress would say something. If she had, we planned on insisting that she keep the $10 because she was honest.

Nothing was said, and she avoided any eye contact. She is a new employee and I felt that perhaps we should inform the owner. My husband said forget it; it was our mistake, and it would be her word against ours.

Now we feel uncomfortable going there. What is your advice? — A COUPLE OF SENIORS

DEAR COUPLE: Inform the owner. Your continued patronage and good will should be worth more than $10 to a family restaurant owner.

DEAR ABBY: Baseball is the only major sport in which the players indulge in the disgusting habit of chewing tobacco, then spitting right on the playing field.

Millions of viewers are "treated" to dozens of close-ups of players spitting gobs of gunk onto the field. This grosses out a lot of people, while greatly impressing many young ball players who then take up the habit. Maybe if you would scold them they would clean up their act. Why must they chew? — DISGUSTED EX-FAN

DEAR DISGUSTED: Baseball players "chew" to keep their mouths moist and to relieve tension. Don't chew out the players — blame the cameramen who bring it into our living rooms. Spitting is not only unsightly, it's a health hazard.

AT WIT'S END

'Doggie bag' strange concept to Chinese waiter

By ERMA BOMBECK

Bombeck

I had dinner in a Chinese restaurant the other night, and when the waiter came to clear away the dishes I said, "Could you please put the rest of the almond chicken and the egg rolls in a doggie bag?"

He registered surprise. "A doggie bag? What's a doggie bag?"

I explained to him a "doggie bag" was an American tradition where, when people ordered too much food, they took it home in boxes or bags to be put in the refrigerator, and when it was no longer recognizable or became restless, they threw it in the garbage.

Boxes he knew about, but he had never heard them called doggie bags before. "Why do you call them doggie bags?" he asked.

I told him that years ago people used to ask for the bones left on their plates so they could take them home to their dogs, but the dogs never saw them. The people either gnawed on them before going to bed or made soup out of them.

He was genuinely confused by this time. "This is an old American tradition?"

"The oldest," I said. "Bags stuffed with food were started by my family maybe a hundred years ago. If you'd go to one of my relatives for dinner, you never left empty-handed. My grandmother always baked extra yeast bread so everyone would have something to take home."

"So you enjoyed the bread in your own home?"

"Not really. Do you know how long it takes yeast bread to reach brick consistency? About three hours after baking. There were no preservatives then."

"So you threw it out?"

"Usually. Then there was my mother, who always sent home fruitcake that she baked extra for Christmas dinners."

"Fruitcake lasts and lasts," he said excitedly.

"It's lasted me about 25 years. I still have all those fruitcakes in the freezer. I don't like fruitcake."

"And you carry on the tradition of doggie bags with your family?"

"I do indeed. I have three grown children who are not permitted to leave unless I send something home with them. They don't eat human, if you know what I mean. I send home little leftover boxes with cold asparagus and lima beans in them. I pack macaroni and cheese and cabbage rolls in little foil containers where all they have to do is slide them in the oven. Sometimes I put leftover fruit salad in Dixie cups and cover them with aluminum foil or leftover veal and chili in little storage containers. Oh, and jellies I have made with a cute little label that reads, 'From Erma's kitchen. Made with love.' Believe me when I tell you an army of Tupperware marches out of my kitchen each week into my children's apartments."

"And what do they do with the doggie bags?"

"They put them on their refrigerator shelves and when the food is no longer recognizable or gets restless, they throw it in the garbage."

"Maybe you should feed it to your dogs," he said.

What a weird suggestion.

There's nothing more fun than a cruise

If you have never been on a cruise before you probably have some questions about cruises. Adventure Travel would like to take this opportunity to answer some of those questions.

How much does a cruise vacation cost? Isn't it expensive?

A cruise is one of the best travel values on the market today. The price of a ticket includes all you meals, your stateroom, daytime activities, nighttime parties and entertainment, plus transportation to some of the most popular ports in the world. For once, you'll know what your vacation will end up costing before you go. Moreover, you'll find there is a wide variety of cruise vacation options to choose from. Compare a cruise to the total cost of other vacation options. You'll be amazed at the value.—

Will it cost more if a travel agency makes the arrangements?

No. Though Adventure Travel takes all the headache out of your planning, it will not cost you any more than if you'd done the work yourself.

Are there different classes on cruise ships?

today's cruise ships are "one-class" ships. Which means everyone on board has the freedom to take advantage of all the ship's facilities. The price of a stateroom is based on its size and location. Whether you choose an outside stateroom on Promenade deck or a stateroom on a lower deck inside, everyone enjoys the same courteous treatment, the same menus and dining room service, the same activities and entertainment.

Can I share a stateroom?

Yes. What's more, since most ships offer accommodations for third and/or fourth persons sharing the same stateroom, additional passengers who share the same room benefit from reduced rates.

What's there to do on a cruise? Won't I get bored?

Hardly. Being at sea give you a felling of freedom few places can offer. There's plenty of room. In fact, it'll probably take you two or three days just to discover what's on board. On a cruise ship, you'll have the opportunity to roam and enjoy all the public rooms and deck space plus the added adventure of exploring new and exciting ports of call either on your own or on a guided tour with your shipmates.

Cruise ships are like floating resorts, with all the things fine resorts have to offer.

What's there to do in port?

All kinds of things. You can go off on your own or take a guided tour. The opportunities are limitless. You can search ancient ruins, ride a raft over river rapids, climb a waterfall, see the birthplace of civilization, follow the footsteps of history, eat native foods, sun on some of the world's best beaches, sail, snorkel, play golf or tennis. You can go to a nightclub, try your hand at a casino, or take a cable car to the top of mountains. You'll find there's ample time in each port to get a state of its unique flavor.

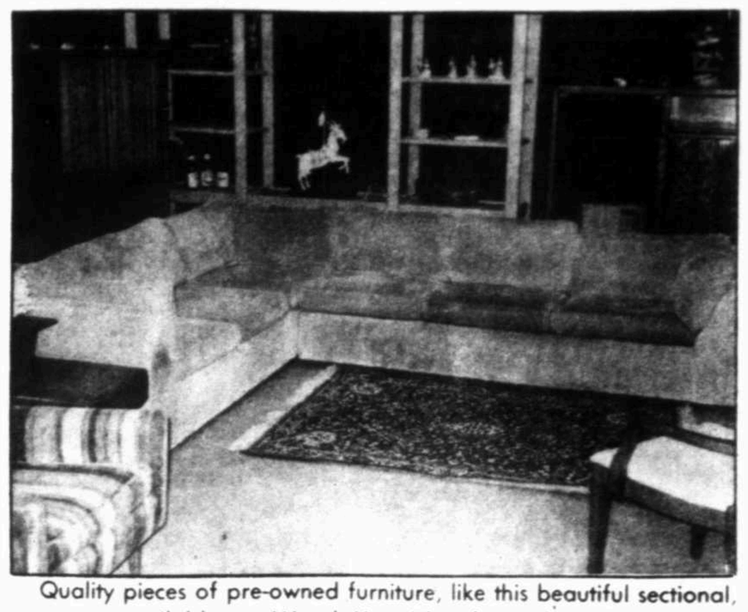
Is there anything for children to do?

If your children enjoy swimming, sports, deck games, movies and the adventure of seeing new and exotic places, they'll love cruising. During the summer and holidays, many cruise liens offer supervised children's programs. Best of all, children generally travel at a substantially reduced rate.

If you've never been on a cruise, now is the time to call Adventure Travel at 683-4211. With Adventure Travel to take care of all the arrangements, you'll have the time of your life. If you have experienced the wonder of a cruise vacation, maybe it's time for another one.

Wood You Like offers quality used furniture



Quality pieces of pre-owned furniture, like this beautiful sectional, are now available at Wood You Like, located in the Imperial Shopping Center, corner of Wadley and Midkiff.

For years, Wood You Like (The Unpainted Furniture Store) has offered quality unfinished furniture and custom staining, as well as staining supplies for do-it-yourselfers. Kaye Horchler, owner, said that now they are offering a new consignment program.

Summer is a good time to change out your rooms and rearrange. The consignment program is designed for "like new" furniture. If you have some furniture that's still in excellent condition but you're just tired of it, this is an ideal way to sell it.

Maybe you never did like the styling once you got the furniture home. Wood You Like's consignment program can free you up to redecorate! That extra money can give your home some fresh summertime looks, too.

Someone may be looking for a piece of furniture to put into a vacation home, into a rent house or for their college-bound child to take into a new apartment.

Kaye said there are other ways to sell your good used furniture, but she's convinced that for quality furniture her way is best.

Garage sales, she said, are lots of work and you will probably not get a price anywhere close to the value of your furniture. In addition, you have to promote the sale yourself and schedule a day or more for just sitting around, waiting on potential buyers.

Even if you don't have a garage sale but just try to sell the goods on your own, you'll still face many of the same problems--waiting for phone calls, showing furniture, probably getting a minimal amount for it.

On the other hand, Wood You Like, which has very reasonable commission rates, assures you that a regular flow of customers will be viewing your goods. Kaye feels that under these conditions, you should be able to get more for your furniture, and the purchaser will still be getting a good deal on quality furniture, too.

So, you can recoup some of your original expense and get set to redecorate this summer!

When you start selecting that new furniture, consider the quality unfinished furniture at Wood You Like.

Dining room groups, bedroom suites, chairs, computer furniture, wall units and other pieces of beautiful solid wood furniture are in stock.

Kaye pointed out a number of important reasons to consider unfinished furniture.

First, Kaye said, the wood in unpainted furniture is BETTER than the wood in pre-finished products. How's it better? Because it is hand-selected and is clearly visible to the customer, it is clearer and more evenly color-matched. "It's the prettiest wood you'll ever see," Kaye said.

Next, she explained, the unfinished pieces have MORE wood in them. Wood You Like purchases solid wood pieces whenever possible. If these aren't available, they select quality plywoods, which have layer on layer of wood. Veneers, which are thin layers of wood on particle board, are a last resort at Wood You Like. On the other hand, Kaye said, you can expect 80 percent of finished furniture to be comprised of veneers.

Kaye said they stock some particle board pieces for specific use. For example, sometimes people want to utilize inexpensive furniture (to be painted) in children's rooms. Wood You Like has a selection specifically for this.

Kaye pointed out another advantage to selecting your furniture at Wood You Like - your FINISH will be BETTER.

Wood You Like, located in Imperial Shopping Center - corner of Wadley and Midkiff, is open Monday-Friday 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. and Saturday 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Zubiate's Furniture Restorations can make old furniture look like new Giving over your precious heirlooms into the hands of a stranger for mending can be a nerve-wracking experience. Often, if the job is not done correctly, the piece can be damaged beyond repair.

Take your precious antiques to Zubiate's Furniture and Restorations and set your mind at ease.

Richard Zubiate is a meticulous worker who will painstakingly restore your damaged furniture to its original beauty.

"In restoration work what you should try to do is leave the work as much like the original as possible," Richard explained. "Then you only replace the parts that have been damaged or may cause problems later on."

"Putting a piece back in its original condition is exciting to me," Richard says.

Hidden treasures found in that old attic need not stay hidden any longer. Bring that piece of history into Zubiate's and receive in return a piece of furniture any homeowner would be proud of.

If an arm on a chair is missing, Richard will carefully match the wood, carve a piece to fit and then finish the chair so that it looks like new. This is possible with almost any piece of furniture you may have.

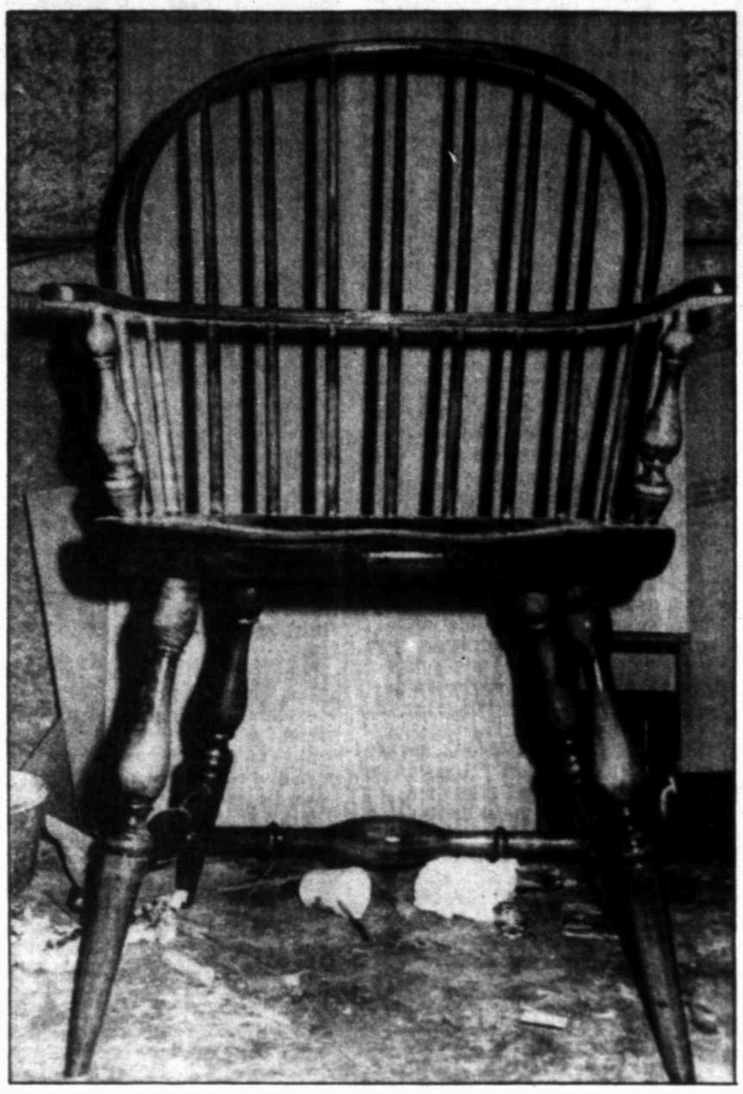
As part of his service, Richard Zubiate will research the history, as well as the design, of the original, before restoration begins.

If the bevelled mirror of your bedroom suite is tarnished or a piece of wood on the dresser was damaged in a move, restoration means resilvering the mirror, as well as matching the wood and carefully fitting the new piece in place.

When the rush or cane in your chair wears thin, Zubiate's will weave new pieces of cane, rush or rattan in the same pattern as the old material.

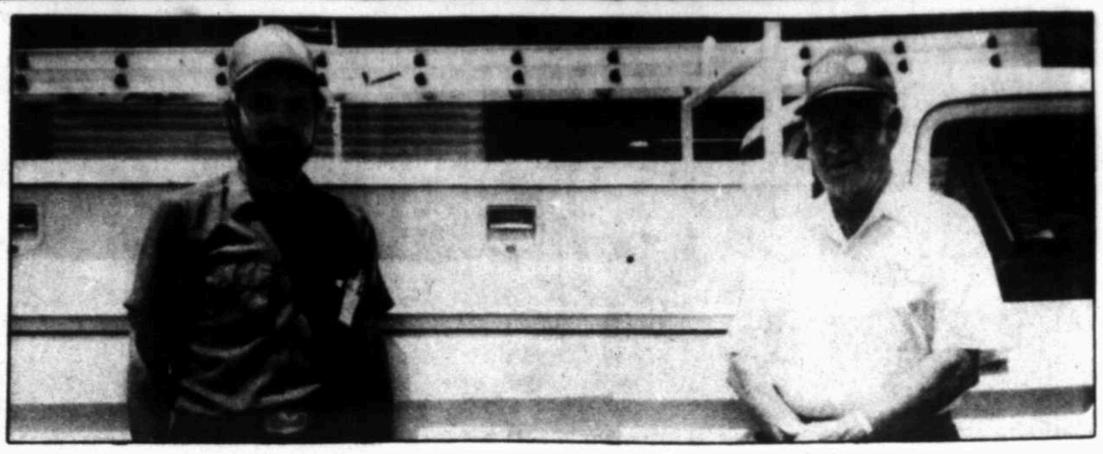
After scouring the antique shops for just the perfect item, why pass it up because it may need some restoration work?

You may have a new piece of furniture that has suffered damage. Zubiate's Furniture Restorations can repair those wobbly chairs or that scarred coffee table that you shopped hours to find.



Restoring your furniture to "like new" condition is the goal at Zubiate's Furniture and Restorations. Richard Zubiate painstakingly researches each piece of furniture to assure authenticity.

If you have furniture that needs restoration call Richard Zubiate at 682-5773 or go by 1611 E. Taylor today. Estimates are available, and so is the peace of mind that comes from knowing your furniture is in the hands of someone who understands the sentimental value of both antique and contemporary furniture.



Jerry's Sheet Metal can help you keep cool with Payne Air Conditioners. Call 684-4495 and let David Anderson, left, refrigeration serviceman, and Jerry Riel, owner, cool off your energy bills as well, with an efficient Payne A/C system.

Jerry's Sheet Metal can help you beat the summer heat and save

Has the recent heat wave left you sweating it out with your old air conditioner? The fury of the infamous West Texas heat will continue for at least a few more months, but that doesn't mean you have to continue to suffer.

Call Jerry's Sheet Metal and have a cool, energy-efficient Payne Air Conditioner installed. Jerry Riel, owner of Jerry's Sheet Metal, has a complete line of Payne Air Conditioners and years of experience in helping Midlanders "beat the heat."

Payne has been manufacturing quality products since 1914, giving customer satisfaction priority over all other considerations. Caring for the customer has been the primary goal for Payne, and this goal has been the foundation of Jerry's business practices as well.

He has chosen Payne as his brand because of their concern for customer satisfaction and their belief that their products should be economical as well as efficient.

Payne's new deluxe air conditioning system is evidence of this commitment. It's just what homeowners have been asking for - a unit that operates in the efficiency range normally reserved for only the most expensive systems and which features important system protective devices as standard.

In addition to immediately reducing the amount of electricity consumed, these units may qualify you for rebates from your utility company.

Payne is certain you will enjoy the cool efficiency for years to come, that's why they back the units with a limited five-year warranty.

David Anderson, refrigeration serviceman, has been associated with Jerry's Sheet Metal for five years. He has been trained by Payne and can take care of all your service needs.

So, you've decided this incredible Payne unit is just what you need. What do you do next?

Call Jerry or David at 684-4495, or go by the shop at 700 N. Fort Worth. They will help you select the exact size unit you home needs.

Jerry's Sheet Metal is open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday. Jerry will make you a good deal and then stand behind his product with expert installation by a fine professional that's factory trained.

Angels leave home looking for help

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Even though the Midland Angels ended their 1987 home schedule with a 10-5 victory over the San Antonio Dodgers Monday night at Angel Stadium, it was a disappointing 4-6 homestand overall.

It was a homestand that could have put the Angels in the playoffs, but didn't. Instead, the Angels leave today for Wichita, not quite out of the second half Western Division hunt, but close.

The Angels will have to win at least four of the five games against Wichita to have a chance. Midland is 1½ games behind El Paso with five games to play. Realistically, Midland is two games back because, even if the Angels make up the 1½-game spread, they would lose by percentage points to the Diablos, who have their last five games against last place San Antonio.

It's a quirk of the Texas League rules that is giving Midland fits. The Angels will end up playing three more games than El Paso. The Angels had to make-up some rainouts from the first half in the second half and El Paso lost a game with Wichita Monday to rain and it will not be made up.

However, Midland left fielder Doug Jennings, who is on a season-ending tear at the plate, isn't using that as an excuse.

"If you're a good enough team, it shouldn't make any difference in the end. We've put ourselves in the shape we're in," said Jennings. "I guess anything is possible in Wichita."

It was Jennings' torrid bat that put the punch back in the Angel attack that came up with only two hits Sunday against San Antonio. He connected for two home runs, driving in four runs and both were big in the numbers game of the Texas League.

JENNINGS' TWO homers gave him 30 for the year and tied him with teammate Stan Holmes for the team and Texas League lead. Only Kevin King had hit 30 homers in a single season before for the Midland franchise. Now there are two more and one waiting in the wings with Joe Redfield sitting at 28 with five games to play.

Lanier likes what he sees

Astros continue winning ways

Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — Hal Lanier, manager of the Houston Astros, is finally starting to feel satisfied with the performance of his ballclub.

"For the first time this year, we're putting everything together — good pitching and good hitting," Lanier said, after the Astros, behind Bob Knepper, whipped the St. Louis Cardinals for a fifth straight time Monday night, 5-2.

The Astros, winners of 10 of their last 11 games, remained a half game behind the San Francisco Giants in the National League West.

"Before, we would have two or three guys hitting, but not everybody, and as a result, we weren't getting enough runs for our pitchers," Lanier said. The usually light-hitting Astros have batted .307 in their last 11 games.

Knepper, 7-13, hurled a 7-hitter in notching his first complete game since Aug. 15, 1986. He credits Lanier with not losing confidence in him when he was poor during the first half of the season.

"It was very frustrating and it took a long time to get my act together," said Knepper, a 33-year-old lefthander. "It was a long, slow process, but I appreciate the fact that Hal stayed with me."

Knepper was 3-12 with an earned run average over six a month ago, but seems to have regained his old form lately. He has won four of his last five decisions over his last six starts, with a 3.29 ERA during that span.

Lanier said he had a tough decision to make when Knepper continued to pitch poorly during the first half of the season.

"But I thought Bob Knepper was going to snap out of it," Lanier said. "His last three years (47 victories) were pretty impressive."

Knepper says the Giants may have more power than the Astros, but feels Houston has the better pitching. "If we keep winning 10 of 11 and we don't catch them, then they deserve to win it," Knepper said of the Giants.

Bill Doran and Billy Hatcher provided most of the offense in support of Knepper Monday night. Doran drove in the Astros' first run to extend his hitting streak to eight games.

NL Roundup

Giants 6, Phillies 1

Newly acquired Rick Reuschel allowed five hits in seven innings in his first appearance for San Francisco to keep the Giants one-half game ahead of Houston in the NL West.

Reuschel, 9-6 with a 2.69 ERA this season after shoulder surgery nearly ended his career in 1982, was acquired over the weekend from the last place Pittsburgh Pirates for pitchers Jeff Robinson and Scott Medvin.

Mets 1, Dodgers 0

New York got the only run it needed against Los Angeles when Keith Hernandez singled in the fourth inning.

Rick Aguilera, 5-2, making his first start since coming off the disabled list, retired 15 consecutive batters from the third inning until the eighth, when Glenn Hoffman singled with two outs.

Randy Myers got the last out in the eighth and Roger McDowell pitched the ninth for his 19th save as the Dodgers were shut out for the 14th time this season.

Broncos hold off frenzied Miami rally

DENVER (AP) — Let it be recorded that in the 1987 preseason, just as the Denver Broncos began to develop a powerful offense, they appear to have misplaced their once-formidable defense.

It should result in a lot of high-scoring games this fall, much like the Broncos' 31-28 NFL preseason decision Monday night over the Miami Dolphins.

John Elway ran and passed for second-quarter touchdowns, and Gene Lang bolted 76 yards for another score early in the third quarter as Denver raced to a 24-0 lead. Then the Broncos had to hang on in the face of a fierce Dolphin comeback.

The Broncos generated an impressive 471 total yards, including 207 on the ground. But they also gave up 411 yards.

Ron Jaworski, the former Philadelphia Eagles quarterback who was signed by Miami last week, completed two TD passes to James Pruitt in the final six minutes of the game to draw the Dolphins within three points. Only when Denver's Steve Sewell recovered an on-side kick with 32 seconds left was the Bronco victory secure.

"It was a hard game to figure out," Denver Coach Dan Reeves said. "Offensively, we moved the ball well. I was pleased with John's performance. Ricky Nattiel and Mark Jackson made big catches. Gene Lang showed tremendous speed.

"We just didn't put Miami away in the second half. All of a sudden we gave up two turnovers, and our defense did not tackle well. We also had too many penalties. I don't like to see that, even in a preseason game."

A PRE-GAME rain created a slippery field at the start of the contest, but playing conditions gradually improved.

Elway got Denver on the scoreboard early in the second quarter. He dropped back to pass, looking to his right in vain for an open receiver. He slipped as he was about to be sacked, but then spun to his left and ran eight yards for the TD.

"That touchdown came from nothing, a broken play," said Reeves. "He's tough to contain, and that's just one of his strengths."

On his next play, Elway unloaded a 53-yard pass to Nattiel, the Broncos' rookie wide receiver. That set up Rich Karlis' 22-yard field goal.

Moments later, an interception by cornerback Mark Haynes gave Denver possession at the Miami 8, and Elway connected with tight end Clarence Kay for a 17-0 halftime lead.

Miami had crossed midfield three times in the half, but suffered turnovers twice and turned the ball over on downs once.

Barely three minutes into the second half, Lang romped for his long TD, putting Denver up 24-0.

Don Strock, who started in place of the injured Dan Marino, passed five yards to Mark Clayton for Miami's first score late in the third quarter. Strock subsequently hit Mark Duper on a 30-yard TD play.

One Last Look

John Hotchkiss (6), Mark Doran (28) and Phil Venturino (14) take one last look at Angel Stadium in 1987. The Angels finished their home season Monday night with a 10-5 win and have only five more games left, all in Wichita.

ANGELS

Jennings' first homer also put him over the 100 RBI mark for the season, giving Midland its first single season trio to accomplish that feat with Redfield and Holmes already past that mark.

"It was a big relief to get the 100 RBI," said Jennings, who had 99 entering the game. "When you get close to something like that, you really want it. I felt it would happen, but you never know until you do it."

Jennings said that his 18 homers last year was his career best. "I worked a lot with weights and I feel I'm just stronger than I was last year."

Redfield increased his Texas League-leading RBI total to 106 with a run scoring double in Midland's six-run fourth against the Dodgers. Holmes is chasing him with 104 while Jennings is third with 103.

Jennings claims that there are no side bets between the three as they shoot for double Texas League leadership.

"Really, we're just pulling for one another. I know I wanted to reach the 30-homer mark and I hope Redfield gets there too," said Jennings.

However, Redfield is feeling a bit like a third place show horse in the homer derby.

"There is no question about it. I want the 30 homers," said Redfield, who needs two more to get there. "Let's just hope the wind is blowing out in Wichita."

Holmes and Jennings both need one more this season to own sole possession of the franchise record.

Midland never trailed against the Dodgers after Norm Carrasco's two-run double in the second staked starter and winner Steve McGuire (6-3) to a 2-0 lead. Jennings' two-run blast over the scoreboard in the third gave the Angels a 4-0 lead and the six runs in the fourth ended it as San Antonio starter Andres Mena lost for the 14th time in 20 decisions.

ANGEL DUST: It's still possible that the Angels could finish with the second best overall record in the Texas League and still not make the playoffs... Should Midland win the second half title, the Angels would meet Wichita in a three-game playoff series — all in Wichita after the conclusion of regular season play. Nothing seems fair in the Texas League these days. The TL seems to give too much advantage to a team that wins the first half...

Bears' punters get a kick out of Ditka's exhibition

Associated Press

The Chicago Bears punters may have enjoyed the kicking exploits of Coach Mike Ditka. But if they don't learn something from it, Ditka will be kicking them — off the team.

"We're punting the ball terrible," Ditka said Monday after demonstrating his expertise to Maury Buford and Kevin Brown. "They've got to punt the ball better, or we've got to find somebody that can punt the ball better."

Ditka, who was among the nation's top collegiate punters 25 years ago when he averaged 40 yards a boot at Pittsburgh, punted twice.

"He understands the fundamentals and knows what he's talking about," said Buford, who is averaging only 32.4 yards punting in two exhibition games.

"It's been embarrassing the way I've punted in games. I punt the ball well in practice but haven't been doing well in games. It's just small things," said Buford, who averaged 41.3 yards for the Bears last year.

Brown, who had a 42.2 average last year at West Texas State, is doing a little better than Buford, with a 37.6 average in exhibition victories over Miami and Pittsburgh.

The Los Angeles Raiders, hoping to improve the quarterback position, will again start Rusty Hilger when they play Dallas on Sunday night. Marc Wilson, who started most of last season, will follow Hilger. Rookie Steve Beuerlein, the Raiders' fourth-round draft choice this season, also is expected to see some action, says Coach Tom Flores.

Jim Plunkett, the oft-injured quarterback who led the Raiders to victories in two Supert Bowls, remains on the edge of the equation while still on the "physically unable to perform" list.

"We'll have to make a decision on Jim pretty soon," said Flores, noting that Plunkett must be counted when the league institutes a roster limit of 60 on Sept. 1.

Signing Up

Linebacker Billy Ray Smith says he could have held out longer before signing a five-year contract with the San Deigo Chargers.

"About 20 minutes (longer)," Smith said Monday.

"I signed the paper about 3:30 today which allowed me to come out today. I wanted to be out today so I could play against the 49ers (on Thursday night) and get my pads set for the Chiefs in the opener," he said.

Terms of the contract, which ended a three-week holdout, were not announced.

Moving Out

Jeremiah Castille, Tampa Bay's active interception leader, was one of four players waived by the Bucs. The fifth-year cornerback has 11 career interceptions, seven of them in 1985. The Bucs also waived third-year tight end K.D. Dunn.

New Orleans released four players, including guard Tyrone Sorrells, its 12th-round draft pick.

San Francisco released 11, including second-year running back Tony Cherry and journeyman punter Jim Asmus.

Kansas City cut 10 players, including wide receiver Craig Richardson, an 11th-round draft choice and Paul Bergmann, who was on injured reserve with the Chiefs last year after two years in the USFL.

Bumps and Bruises

Harris Barton, the San Francisco 49ers No. 1 draft choice, does not have a broken elbow. But there is still something wrong, and the team will know exactly what in 24 to 48 hours, Coach Bill Walsh said.

"I thought it was a break, but nothing shows up on the X-rays so it's got to be ligaments. It's a relief not to lose him for an extended period of time. I'm sure we'll lose him, but not sure how long," Walsh said.

Jeff Bregel, the other top offensive line draft choice, was released from a hospital after minor knee surgery.

NFL Camps

Walker still out for Raiders

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Running back Herschel Walker will miss his third straight pre-season game because of an injured knee and fullback Timmy Newsome will sit out Sunday night's exhibition football game with the Los Angeles Raiders because of a calf injury, the Dallas Cowboys said Monday.

Among those listed as doubtful for the 7 p.m. CDT game in Texas Stadium at Irving, Texas, are center Brian Baldinger, with a knee injury, and running back Darryl Clack, with a bruised thigh and turf toe.

Injured, but listed as probable, are wide receiver Rob Barksdale, hamstring; tight end Doug Cosbie, achilles tendon; running back Tony Dorsett, calf; running back Robert Lavette, nose; linebacker Jesse Penn, neck; and wide receiver, Mike Renfro, knee.

Rangers walk away with win

Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Texas Manager Bobby Valentine was, surprisingly enough, smiling after watching two of his pitchers walk 10 batters in a nine-inning game.

That's what watching one of the offending pitchers strike out George Brett to end the game with the tying runs on base will do for a manager.

Bobby Witt and Mitch Williams combined for 10 walks, but Williams got Brett swinging for the final out to preserve a 4-2 Rangers win over the Kansas City Royals on Monday night.

"He makes sure the lefthander is the last batter he faces," Valentine joked after the lefthanded Williams struck out the lefthanded Brett with four righthanders due to bat next.

Williams put himself in a tight spot by walking Bill Pecota with one out. He struck out Willie Wilson, but then walked Kevin Seitzer to bring up Brett.

Williams had relieved Witt with one out in the eighth inning after Witt threatened to walk his ninth batter by throwing two balls to Lonnie Smith.

"Bobby had a communication problem," Valentine said. "He said he felt fine. He wasn't fine."

Witt, 7-6, said he had trouble keeping his arm loose because of the unseasonably cool weather in Kansas City. Temperature at gametime was 60 degrees.

"Tonight, I had the toughest time staying loose," said Witt, who now has gone 49 straight starts in his career without completing a game. "We came here from Texas where it was 100 or 105, and I think it was 60 or 65 out there tonight."

Kansas City got just three hits in failing to take advantage of eight walks by Witt and two by Williams.

AL Roundup

Kansas City missed its best opportunity in the fourth inning, failing to score after Witt walked the bases full with one out. Frank White hit a short fly to center and Steve Balboni popped out to second to end the inning.

Texas scored twice in the fourth for a 4-0 lead. Darrell Porter walked leading off and scored on a double by Tom O'Malley.

Curtis Wilkerson singled on the infield to move O'Malley to third, and O'Malley scored on Scott Fletcher's single behind second.

Ruben Sierra drove in a run with a sacrifice fly in the first inning and Fletcher doubled home Wilkerson after Wilkerson walked in the third.

Twins 5, Tigers 4

Kent Hrbek's bases-loaded single with one out in the ninth inning scored Steve Lombardozzi and gave Minnesota a victory over Detroit, snapping the Twins' six-game losing streak.

The Twins, first in the AL West by two games over Oakland, had lost all six games on the road in Detroit and Boston. They are now 43-18 at the Metrodome and 24-42 on the road.

Blue Jays 7, Mariners 3

Ernie Whitt and Tony Fernandez hit home runs as Toronto defeated Seattle at the Kingdome to move into a virtual tie for first place with Detroit in the AL East. The Tigers have a percentage of .593 and Toronto is at .592.

Toronto starter John Cerutti, 10-3, took a six-hit shutout into the eighth, but Jim Presley hit a run-scoring triple and Dave Valle homered to make it 7-3. Mark Eichhorn got the last out of the inning and finished the game.

Athletics 7, Orioles 3

Terry Steinbach's two-out, two-run single sparked a five-run sixth inning, and reliever Greg Cadaret pitched five innings of hitless relief as Oakland defeated visiting Baltimore.

Trailing 3-2 in the sixth, Carney Lansford started the rally with an infield single. Mike Davis followed with a double and Mark McGwire walked. Mike Boddicker, 9-7, struck out pinch-hitter Steve Henderson but Steinbach singled on a 3-2 pitch for a 4-3 lead. Alfredo Griffin made it 5-3 with a single to right and Luis Polonia capped the rally with a two-run triple off reliever John Habyan.

Yankees 3, Angels 2

Mike Pagliarulo's two-out double in the 11th inning scored Claudell Washington from second base and lifted New York over California at Anaheim.

Washington walked leading off against left-hander Gary Lucas, 1-3, and moved to second on Don Mattingly's grounder before scoring on Pagliarulo's drive down the right-field line.

Midland's Randy Velarde was 2-for-3 and scored a run for the Yankees.

White Sox 6, Red Sox 3

Carlton Fisk hit his 100th career home run at Fenway Park and Greg Walker added a two-run homer, his 23rd, as Chicago beat Boston.

Jose DeLeon, 7-11, defeated Boston for the second time in a week with the help of a fine catch by left fielder Gary Redus with the bases loaded in the fifth inning.

DeLeon, 4-0 lifetime against Boston, yielded an RBI single to Wade Boggs in the seventh and was replaced by Ray Searage.

BOXING

EDMONTON, Alberta — Willie de Wit knocked out Ken Lakusta in the fifth round Monday night to retain the Canadian heavyweight boxing championship he won from Lakusta in June, 1986.

De Wit stunned Lakusta with a hard overhand right and the challenger slumped to the canvas a few punches later.

It was a convincing comeback for the Midland-backed de Wit, following his second-round knockout in February at the hands of Bert Cooper, and he landed more effective punches than he did in his earlier victory over Lakusta.

BASEBALL

Paul Molitor, whose 38-game hitting streak is the longest in the AL since Joe DiMaggio's record 56-game string in 1941, has been named the AL Player of the Week for the second week in a row.

Molitor extended his streak by seven games, hitting .452 with four doubles and home run, seven RBI and seven runs scored.

Houston's Bill Doran, who hit .538 last week to help the Astros move into second place in the NL West was named NL Player of the Week.

Doran had 14 hits in 26 at-bats, and hit safely in all seven Houston games last week. He hit two home runs, drove in nine runs, scored six runs and stole three bases.

Pirates 5, Reds 4

Pittsburgh snapped a four-game losing streak and extended Cincinnat's string of losses to five as Bobby Bonilla hit a three-run homer and Doug Drabek allowed seven hits in seven innings.

Drabek, 6-10, won for the fourth time in his last five decisions as the Pirates won at home against the Reds for the first time in 10 games since Aug. 22, 1985.

Bonilla's third-inning homer off Tom Browning, 5-11, gave the Pirates a 3-0 lead. The Reds, who were 6-0 at Pittsburgh last year and 3-0 this season prior to the loss, made it 3-2 in the fifth on a two-run homer by Kal Daniels, his 20th.

MHS, Lee return home for volleyball matches

From Staff Reports

Midland High returned from the 18-team Monahans Volleyball tournament with a pair of wins and a pair of losses to reach in the semifinals of the consolation tournament over the weekend.

MHS will host Monahans at 2 p.m. today in the MHS Gym while Midland Lee will host Buena Vista at 5:30 p.m. at Lee. Thursday, MHS will host a double-dual meet with Andrews and Lamesa beginning at 12:30 p.m. while Lee hosts Crane at 2 p.m.

The Lady Bulldogs moved their record to 3-3 after the weekend tourney. They opened the two-day affair with a win over Crane then fell into the loser's bracket by dropping the second game to El Paso Burgess.

A second win over the Cranes set them up with Snyder who eliminated MHS.

"I feel real good about the way we've played so far this season," said MHS coach Sonja Pittman. "We're already much further ahead of where we were at this time last season."

MHS opened with a 9-8 pre-district record last season before making the playoffs.

Kramer back on track in Vike's camp

MANKATO, Minn. (AP) — During the last month, Tommy Kramer was one of the Hazelden Foundation's most popular residents — even if he did give out as many bruises as autographs.

The facility, which treats people for substance abuse — in Kramer's case, alcohol — was the quarterback's home for 28 days after a July 24 arrest for driving while intoxicated.

"I signed a lot of autographs, but I expected that," said Kramer, the NFL's top-rated passer in 1986 who on Monday made his 1987 training camp debut. "But when we had meetings in our unit, I was treated just like everybody else."

Kramer, a Rice graduate who set numerous Southwest Conference passing records, is coming off the best of his 10 NFL seasons, didn't want to lose his edge during the month of rehabilitation. So he made receivers out of the other patients at the Center City, Minn., facility.

"Most of the guys in my unit there wanted to catch," he said during a 10-minute news conference after a morning workout. "One ran several patterns but never did catch anything. But one of the guys up there since my first day made a marked improvement. There wasn't a lot of speed up there."

He said many of his Hazelden receivers took their shirts off during workouts. And partly because the footballs on hand were cheap versions of the slick NFL model, "a lot of the guys ended up with little stars on their chests ... and bruises all over their arms."

Despite the bruises, he said the other patients "enjoyed it and so did I. It got our minds off some other things for a little while."

Kramer's mind was on taking care of his "well-being."

Asked what the difference was between the Kramer of a month ago and today's post-treatment version, he said: "There's not anything that you would notice."

But he added that he would probably be a more private person.

"The things I do in my personal life, I'm going to try to make them more personal," he said.

Kramer then gave the media an example of his new resolve, refusing to answer questions about his alcohol problems. He said he doesn't want his personal life aired publicly.

After two practices Monday, he felt "a little behind" but said he is confident that his workouts at Hazelden helped prepare him for the Sept. 13 season opener.

"One thing I've always taken great pride in is my discipline in getting ready to play football," he said. "I worked a lot harder physically (at Hazelden) than I do at training camp."

He said his daily 2- to 2½-hour workouts included distance running, sprints, dropbacks and passes to other Hazelden residents.

Keesee declared ineligible

LUBBOCK (AP) — Quarterback Aaron Keesee, who started 15 consecutive games for Texas Tech in 1984 and 1985, has been declared academically ineligible for the 1987 season, school officials announced today.

Keesee, who is from Ballinger, Texas, played only two games last fall for the Red Raiders before a shoulder injury ended his season, and he was granted an injury redshirt season. He would have been a junior this fall and was expected to back up starter Billy Joe Tolliver.

Four freshman quarterback signees and senior Scott Toman will battle for the back-up spot, coaches said.

JEANE DIXON'S your horoscope

© 1986, Los Angeles Times Syndicate

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 26, 1987

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: You will not have to spend as much money as you thought this year. Get advice from a tax expert. By reducing the overhead in business, you can boost both profits and your salary. Adopting high technology brings unexpected fringe benefits in October. Open new lines of communication and a relationship will quickly get back on track. May is the best time for a wedding.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: Washington Post executive editor Benjamin Bradlee, Los Angeles Dodgers backup catcher Alex Trevino, Michigan Rep. Guy Vander Jagt, former New York congresswoman Geraldine Ferraro, actor Jim Davis, singer-music man Ronny Graham, oral polio vaccine developer Dr. Albert Sabin.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): No one can limit your expectations or achievements unless you let them. Bend over backward to please partner. You are getting more out of a relationship than you have put in it. Do better!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A nice change of pace may be in store for you. Trust your feelings about a relationship and let yourself become more involved. Adopt a better savings plan. Investment opportunities deserve close scrutiny.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A business offer discussed on the phone today could be promising. Be careful not to spend more than you can afford while on vacation. Pleasure fades if expenses get out of hand.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Get rid of items you no longer use and your home will feel a lot less cluttered. Things are changing at work. You profit if you open new lines of communication. Follow up!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): An analytical mind helps you make the right decision. Review a proposal before signing anything. Travel improves your mood. You have a chance to turn a romantic relationship around. Know your own heart.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Nothing should stop your progress now. You roll out of bed filled with energy and ideas. Get away from a complaining individual. You need to relax more. Do everything necessary to reduce domestic tension.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): The loss of a love is never easy, but someone new may be right around the corner. You will forget more quickly than you imagine. Travel brings you good luck and money.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A telephone call lifts the spirits of many. An opportunity to boost your income is featured. Keep moving forward no matter how many barriers you encounter in your path.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Unexpected funds and business walk in the front door today. Be prepared to take the initiative when someone abdicates his duties. Go ahead and make that large purchase.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Do not put all your eggs in one basket. Being rich is not the same thing as being generous. Rely on someone who has shared a lot with you recently.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Something is hanging over your head. Deal with a troubling situation before it drags you down. Refuse to let others bully you. Once tensions fade, romance will blossom. Speak from the heart.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Major career breaks come as the summer ends. No one can deny you are on a roll now. A relationship is changing for the better. Listen to another's views before acting.

Dbl	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Nine of ♡

At rubber bridge, an extra undertrick, even doubled, means only a few units on the score. On this hand from a duplicate event, it was the difference between winning and finishing third.

North-South won the bidding battle. East should have cue-bid four clubs at his second turn, and his decision to double five clubs was unfathomable—either a forcing pass or a bid of five spades would have been preferable. All that remained was for South to justify his partner's faith. If he went down two tricks for minus 300, he would achieve an excellent score; down three, minus 500, would be a disaster.

West led the nine of hearts, and when dummy appeared, declarer was quite happy with his contract. It seemed he would have no problem holding his losers to one trick in each suit. However, those hopes dimmed considerably when East won the opening heart lead with the queen and shifted to a diamond. Now the possibility of a diamond ruff loomed large.

Since there was no quick entry to dummy, declarer realized he was a dead duck if East held a singleton diamond. Therefore, he followed low. West won the king and returned the suit, and the first hurdle had been overcome when dummy's queen held the trick. Next came a loser-on-loser play—declarer led dummy's king of hearts and, instead of ruffing out East's ace, he discarded his spade loser. There was now no way for East to reach his partner's hand to get his diamond ruff. The defenders were held to four tricks and the title went to North-South.

Tammy cutting gospel music album

Bakker

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Former televison evangelist Tammy Bakker is working on a gospel music album and expects it to be released within a few months.

She said Monday she had some doubts about the album at first.

"I didn't know if there would be a song there," but "when you know God there's something bubbling up in your tummy," she said.

Mrs. Bakker said she'd finish her work in Nashville in a few days and return to Gatlinburg, where the couple is moving into a mountainside chalet.

Her husband, Jim Bakker, stepped down as head of the PTL ministry he founded after admitting to a sexual tryst with a church secretary.

Mrs. Bakker also said during an interview on Crook & Chase, a syndicated television show, that she was followed by 15 reporters on a shopping trip.

"The news media has been very kind to us, we just try to be friends with them," she said. The interview was taped for broadcast on Wednesday.

Principal

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Victoria Principal's lawsuit against Weight Watchers Inc., alleging that her likeness was used in a promotion without permission, will receive a non-jury hearing in federal court, a judge ruled.

U.S. District Judge William M. Byrne made the ruling Monday.

Miss Principal, who played Pamela Ewing in the nighttime soap "Dallas," is seeking at least $11 million. The trial is scheduled for Oct. 17.

The suit alleges that the brochure "Tidbits" misused her name, picture and a quotation attributed to her about keeping fit. Her attorney, William Sobel, said he had no knowledge that she ever participated in a Weight Watchers program.

An official at Weight Watchers' Los Angeles office declined comment and said no one was available in corporate headquarters in Jericho, N.Y., after business hours Monday.

Greene

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Actor Lorne Greene came through abdominal surgery for a perforated ulcer without complications, his spokewoman said.

Greene, 72, was in intensive care at Saint John's Hospital on Monday, and was in fair condition, said spokeswoman Roxanne Lawrence.

"There were no complications and he's conscious," she said.

Greene, who starred as patriarch Ben Cartwright in television's "Bonanza," underwent surgery on Wednesday. It won't be known until later this week when he will be released, she said.

"Bonanza: The Next Generation," a television movie based on "Bonanza," which ran from 1959 to 1973, is in production, said Ms. Lawrence.

CLEVELAND, Miss. (AP) — With apologies to Bob Dylan, a circuit judge dismissing a lawsuit concluded in prose that "Everybody must be sued."

"Well, they'll sue you when you fail to pay the claim.

"They'll sue you for bad faith no matter who's the blame.

"They'll sue you when you're driving to go home.

"Then they'll sue you when you're parked and all alone.

"But, I would not feel so much abused,

"Everybody must be sued."

Parodying "Rainy Day Women Nos. 12 & 35," Bolivar County Circuit Judge Eugene M. Bogen granted a summary judgment in favor of the Cleveland Moose Lodge. The suit was by a man who claimed the lodge was responsible for injuries he received in a beating and robbery on its property.

The lawsuit "advances a widely held view in our society that there is always somebody to blame for life's misfortunes," Bogen wrote in his Aug. 13 decision.

Gere

WATERLOO, Iowa (AP) — Producers of a movie starring Richard Gere are considering shooting part of it at the National Cattle Congress in Waterloo, but they'll have to import an ox.

Officials for "The Farm of the Year" asked the cattle congress about using the Sept. 19-27 event as a backdrop, and Congress general manager Lyndal Graff said he is waiting to hear from filmmakers.

Production company spokesman Russ Smith said a decision will be made Wednesday whether to shoot the scene in Waterloo.

The scene is staged around an "ox-pull contest" although the Cattle Congress doesn't feature an ox-pull. Smith said an ox they found in Wisconsin could be brought in.

• • •

NEW YORK (AP) — Fawn Hall will make her first television appearance since the Iran-Contra affair congressional hearings as a guest on interviewer Barbara Walters' next ABC special.

Ms. Hall, former secretary to then-National Security Council aide Oliver North, will not be paid for the appearance, which will be broadcast Sept. 15, said Maurie Perl, a spokeswoman for Ms. Walters.

"Barbara will ask all the questions. There'll be no restrictions," Ms. Perl said. "Barbara has been in discussions with Hall for some time and this seemed like the best time to do it. She's now reached the stage that she feels comfortable talking about things in her life."

Ms. Perl would not say when or where the interview would take place.

The appearance was reportedly made independently of Ms. Hall's recent pact with the William Morris talent agency. Her agent, Ron Yatter, said one of the network morning programs is interested in hiring her as a substitute host. He wouldn't disclose which one.

Rustin

NEW YORK (AP) — Bayard Rustin, the civil rights pioneer and activist who organized the Washington rally at which Dr. Martin Luther King gave his "I have a dream" speech, died Sunday. He was 75.

Rustin participated in the first Freedom Ride against segregation in 1947, and wound up doing 30 days on a North Carolina chain gang.

In 1955, Rustin went to Montgomery, Ala., to help King organize a bus boycott, a landmark victory for the civil rights movement.

His organizational skills brought 200,000 people to the 1963 march on Washington and King's hisstoric speech at the Lincoln Memorial.

Dollar rallies

LONDON (AP) — The dollar rose in early European trading today, and dealers said rates were likely to hold steady following a hint from the Bank of Japan that it would intervene again to support the currency.

Gold prices were lower.

The dollar rose after the Bank of Japan offered during the Asian trading day to buy dollars at 142 yen, dealers said.

In Tokyo, the dollar rebounded slightly to close at 142.90 yen, up 0.25 yen from Monday's close of 142.65 yen.

Later, in London, it was quoted at 142.90 yen.

Other dollar rates at midmorning, compared with late rates Monday, were:

—1.8230 West German marks, up from 1.8160

—1.5030 Swiss francs, up from 1.4962

—6.0940 French francs, up from 6.0745

—2.0558 Dutch guilders, up from 2.0460

—1,320.25 Italian lire, up from 1,314.50

—1.3183 Canadian dollars, down from 1.32125

In London, the dollar rose against the British pound. It cost $1.6230 to buy one pound, cheaper than $1.6335 Monday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $458.70 a troy ounce, down from late Monday's $459.25. At mid-morning today the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $458.50.

In Zurich, the bid price was $458.65, down from 460.50 late Monday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold rose $2.53 to close at a bid $459.06.

Silver was quoted in London today at a bid price of $7.74 a troy ounce, down from Monday's $7.83.

Spending growth doubles saving

Associated Press

Consumer spending, bolstered by brisk auto sales and unusual air conditioning costs, climbed 0.9 percent in July for the second month in a row.

The Commerce Department reported Monday that spending last month grew twice as fast as consumers' incomes.

But prices on the stock market drifted lower in the slowest trading in eight weeks as traders cashed in some of their holdings after last week's rise to new highs. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 12.43 points to 2,697.07.

Analysts blamed stock investors' dampened enthusiasm on the recent weakness of the dollar in foreign-exchange trading.

The U.S. currency, meanwhile, turned in a mixed performance against major foreign currencies as traders' negative feelings continued to shadow it.

Oil prices stumbled hard, flirting ith the $18 level amid worries over excess OPEC production, then bouncing back somewhat after an encounter between a U.S. and Iranian ship in the Persian Gulf was reported.

At the end of trading on the New York Mercantile Exchange, October contracts for West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark U.S. crude oil, stood at $18.60 per 42-gallon barrel, down 30 cents from Friday — when the contract broke below $19 for the first time since May.

Consumer spending in July was bolstered by brisk auto sales and air conditioning costs, the Commerce Department said.

It reported that personal income also was up, but more modestly: 0.4 percent in July compared with 0.3 percent gains in May and June. It was the biggest income gain since a 0.6 percent advance in April.

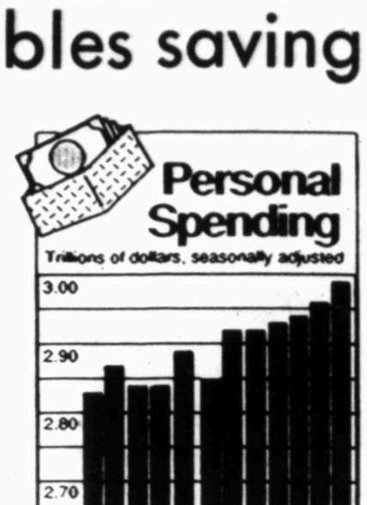
With the growth of spending far outpacing the growth in incomes, Americans dipped deeper into their savings to make up the difference.

Personal savings, the ratio of savings to after-tax income, fell to 2.8 percent in July, down from 3.3 percent in June and from the 4.3 percent rate for all of 1986.

"The consumer has adapted very well to not saving any money," said David Wyss, chief financial economist for Data Resources Inc. in Lexington, Mass. "One may wonder how long this can continue, but it appears low savings rates will be with us for a while."

Despite the low savings, Monday's report was greeted by economists as a strong sign for the economy and an indication that the nearly 5-year-old economic expansion is continuing.

Consumer spending makes up roughly two-thirds of the gross national product.



'Big ticket' orders take first tumble in six months

WASHINGTON (AP) — Orders for "big ticket" durable goods, led by transportation equipment and defense items, fell by 1.5 percent in July, the first decline since January, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said orders for durable goods, items expected to last three or more years, dropped by $1.7 billion to a seasonally adjusted $107.5 billion last month after a 2 percent increase in June.

It was the first drop since the 9.8 percent decline in January, which had been caused largely be a drop in auto sales after the new tax law took effect.

The July decline was led by a 5.7 percent drop, to $27.2 billion, in transportation equipment. In that category, declines in motor vehicles and parts, and shipbuilding and tanks more than offset an increase in orders for aircraft and parts.

Orders for defense goods fell 4.8 percent to $10.1 billion, following a 12.4 percent increase a month earlier.

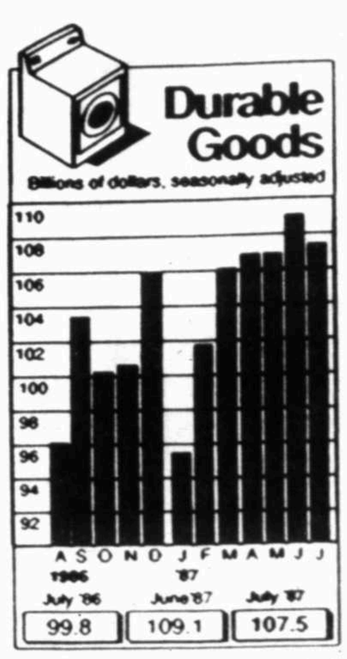
Excluding defense, orders for durable goods fell 1.2 percent.

However, the key category of non-defense capital goods, which includes business investment in factory equipment, increased 1.6 percent in July after a 0.4 percent drop in June.

Within the major industries, orders for electrical machinery fell 2.2 percent to $19.2 billion, following a 7.2 percent climb in June. Orders for non-electrical machinery climbed 4.2 percent to $18.2 billion, more than making up for a 0.9 percent June decline.

Orders for primary metals declined 3.4 percent to $9.6 billion. The drop broke a string of five consecutive monthly increases.

Shipments of durable goods in July fell 1.2 percent to $376.9 billion.



Long-distance bargains disconnected

Post-divestiture firms stress quality

By JOHN BARNETT
Hearst News Service

While interstate long distance telephone rates have plunged since the breakup of the Bell Telephone system, the savings formerly found by shopping among the biggest companies are almost gone.

"The bargains are disappearing," says Jerry Salvaggio, director of the International Telecommunications Research Institute at the University of Houston. "Last week I saw a proposal for a business customer that was less than 8 percent off of AT&T. There was a time when you would expect them to be 50 percent cheaper."

For residential customers, the difference in long distance rates at American Telephone & Telegraph Co., MCI Communications Corp. and U.S. Sprint Communications Corp. has dropped to a few pennies as AT&T's prices have come down following deregulation. Long distance rates no longer subsidize cheap local service.

Although the other phone companies have reduced their rates in response to AT&T's price cuts, the recent round of price reductions in July left some of the alternative carriers more expensive than AT&T for some types of calls.

While price remains a concern, the emphasis has shifted to quality and service. Sprint, which has a large group of residential users, is stressing quality of transmission and its new operator and directory assistance service.

The amount of advertising from the phone companies has diminished recently because the industry is at the end of the equal access period mandated by the government, Salvaggio says. Equal access allows the customer access to the long distance of his choice by dialing one digit, rather than the 14 previously required.

"The jockeying for position is over," said Salvaggio. "When the court ruled that all common carriers had to have equal access it was an open door for a heavy marketing push. Now that's over and most people have made their choice so the need to project that savings image through advertising is reduced."

Most customers have picked one of the three big carriers. AT&T is the carrier of choice for 78 percent of the customers while MCI has 9.5 percent and Sprint has 6.5, according to a recent survey by Prudential-Bache Securities Inc. The rest of the carriers share 6 percent of the market.

The long distance rates of AT&T, MCI and Sprint generally are within a few cents of one another, according to a survey of prices for calls to several large cities. And no longer does the customer always save money by using one of the alternative carriers to AT&T. Depending on what time of day the customer calls and the location, they sometimes wind up paying more.

For example, a five-minute call from Houston to Atlanta between 5 p.m. and 11 p.m., which is when most residential calls are made, is 89 cents on AT&T, 90 cents on MCI and 91 cents on Sprint. The same call made after 11 p.m. or on weekends is 72 cents on AT&T, 69 cents on MCI and 68 cents on Sprint.

Minority Business Center slates Thursday opening

From Staff Reports

The Midland-Odessa Minority Business Development Center is set to open this week with an open house to be held from 2 p.m. - 5 p.m. Thursday, according to Jesse Holquin, program director.

The Midland-Odessa MBDC will be an affiliate of the U.S. Department of Commerce, and will have a staff of consultants to assist members of the minority business community in the areas of marketing, management, personnel, finance and accounting as well as manufacturing and construction guidelines.

Holquin says the purpose of the program is to help the socially and economically disadvantaged persons to readily enter and participate and succeed in the free enterprise system. It is also designed to help minority businessmen expand and improve their present business.

Information regarding the program can be obtained by calling 563-9024. The office is located in Suite II of the Triad Building on LaForce Blvd. at Midland Air Terminal.

Bank shopping can yield greater accommodation for bond coupons

By BILL DOYLE

Doyle

Q. I have a number of U.S. Treasury notes and bonds in "bearer" form, with semiannual interest coupons attached. My bank will not accept an interest coupon before its due date and hold it for deposit on the due date. When I am out of town on an interest date, I lose that interest until I return and can present the coupon to the bank.

What can I do about this?

A. The quick and easy solution to your problem is to change banks. Find one that's more accommodating and take your business there.

When you present a Treasury note or bond interest coupon to your bank, that bank sends the coupon to the Federal Reserve Bank serving your area. The Fed redeems the coupon on its due date and sends the money to your bank.

There are 12 district Federal Reserve Banks and things vary a bit from one to another. Some accept Treasury note and bond interest coupons for up to 30 days before the due dates; others for 10 days prior to the due dates.

Local banks, of course, can set their own policies. Since the bank with which you now do business won't accept your Treasury note and bond interest coupons and send they in for redemption in advance of the due dates, check other banks in your area.

You're certain to find a bank anxious to land your business and willing to handle the redemption of your interest coupons as you want.

No U.S. Treasury notes and bonds have been issued in bearer form since 1982. And, beginning in August 1986, new Treasury note and bond issues have come only in "book-entry" form — recorded on computers — in the new Treasury Direct program. Certificates for both bearer and registered bonds are becoming things of the past.

Q. I would like to turn in my U.S. Treasury bearer notes and bonds to the district Federal Reserve Bank, so that my notes and bonds are in the Treasury Direct program and interest is automatically deposited in my bank account. Can that be done?

A. Not yet. The U.S. Treasury Department is working up a plan through which holders of Treasury note and bond certificates — in both bearer and registered form — will be able to surrender those certificates and participate in the Treasury Direct program. But that plan is not operating, to date.

You can turn in your bearer Treasury notes and bonds and receive registered note and bond certificates. If you do that, your name will be on the registered certificates and on the Treasury's record books. Semiannual interest checks will be mailed directly to you and you won't have to fuss with clipping and cashing coupons.

Q. My bank suggests I leave my bearer U.S. Treasury notes and bonds with them. The bank will clip and redeem an interest coupon each time an interest payment comes due and deposit that money in my account. Is this a safe procedure?

A. Sure. It's used by many, many investors. Besides being safe, it's convenient.

If you're fretting about the bank going bust while holding your Treasury securities, you can put that worry aside. You would continue to own the notes and bonds. They couldn't be touched by the bank's creditors.

Q. Is there any concern about the safety of my bearer Treasury notes and bonds while they are in my safe deposit box at the bank?

A. Not really. Although there have been some well-publicized burglaries of safe deposit vaults, the vast majority of such depositories are as safe as safe can be.

Check with your bank to learn what insurance — if any — there is on the contents of your safe deposit box. You might want to obtain your own insurance coverage.

A safe deposit box is the logical place to keep Treasury note and bond certificates, as well certificates for all other types of securities and valuable items.

Dealer network planned for luxury Toyotas

LOS ANGELES (NYT) — Toyota Motor Sales Inc., trying to shed its economy-car image and lure more affluent buyers, said Monday that it planned to set up a new dealer network called Lexus to sell a luxury car line in the United States by 1989.

Last month, the Nissan Motor Corp. announced plans to sell a sports coupe and sedan in 1989 through a separate dealer network called Infiniti. The Honda Motor Co. began selling its Legend and Integra luxury cars under the Acura dealer banner in March 1986.

Toyota hopes to sell 30,000 Lexus models in the first year, with fewer than 100 dealers. A coupe, which analysts expect will cost up to $35,000, will be equipped with a V-8 engine, making it the most powerful Toyota in the United States. Sedans, with V-6s, will be priced at about $25,000.

Simmons sweetens $794 million offer for NL

DALLAS (NYT) — Valhi Inc., a diversified holding company controlled by Harold C. Simmons, the Dallas investor, said it had submitted a sweetened $794 million merger proposal to the independent directors of NL Industries.

The plan was similar to the original proposal, announced April 23, in that it would split NL Industries into two parts. The company's chemical unit, NL Chemicals Inc., would be indirectly owned by Valhi. The remaining divisions, consisting primarily of petroleum services operations, would be spun off to the stockholders.

OSHA levies top building fine in Texas cave-in WASHINGTON (AP) — The Labor Department fined a Texas contractor $231,400 on Monday for 28 safety violations in connection with the death of a construction worker last March when an unshored trench caved in on him.

The fine, the largest ever imposed against a construction company, was levied by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration against ABC Utilities Services Inc. of Fort Worth.

Frank White, a deputy assistant labor secretary, said the agency levied the maximum penalty possible because the company has consistently ignored federal regulation requiring that trenches be shored up to prevent cave-ins, one of the biggest causes of deaths in the industry.

OIL & GAS DIGEST

Tenneco pulls more gas from spot market

HOUSTON (SWN) — Tenneco Oil Exploration & Production said it is further reducing the volumes of natural gas it will sell on the natural gas spot market beginning in September.

The action, the company said, is in response to the continuing decline in the price the company has received in recent months for gas sold on the spot market.

The company anticipates removal of 200 million cubic feet of natural gas per day from the spot market during September. This reduction includes the 100 million cubic feet Tenneco announced it removed from the spot market during August. The company may make further reductions based on close monitoring of the market.

Santa Fe, Pipelines Inc. merge gulf operations

ALHAMBRA, Calif. (SWN) — Santa Fe Offshore Construction Co. and Pipelines Inc. of Lafayette, La., announced plans to combine their Gulf of Mexico operations.

The partnership will be named Pipe Lines Unlimited Services (PLUS).

Subject to regulatory approvals, PLUS is expected to commence operation about Sept. 1.

Santa Fe will contribute three construction barges to the partnership and Pipelines Inc. will contribute five barges.

Ivan L. Garzotto, presently executive vice president of Pipelines Inc., will be general manager and chief executive officer of PLUS.

"We are certain that this combined operation will create a Marine Contractor that will better serve the construction needs of our customers," said Bill Dore', president of Pipelines Inc.

General Energy erases 1986's $16 million loss

HOUSTON (SWN) — General Energy Development, Ltd. (formerly Entex Energy Development, Ltd.) announced earnings for the second quarter of 1987. Net income for the three months ended June 30, was $40,000 as compared to a net loss of $16,398,000, $2.01 per unit, for the comparable period of the prior year.

Net income for the six months ended June 30, was $535,000, five cents per unit, as compared to a net loss of $23,358,000, $2.93 per unit, for the comparable period of the prior year.

Interest revived in Arctic energy potential

By CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writer

LONGYEARBYEN, Spitsbergen (AP) — Scandinavian oilmen have begun drilling in a remote corner of this Arctic island, opening a new chapter in energy exploration in a northern sea treacherous with pack ice and legal uncertainties.

The new well, spudded July 20 by a joint Norwegian-Swedish venture, is the first drilled by Western companies in Spitsbergen in 10 years.

It is the latest sign of renewed interest in the oil and gas possibilities of Spitsbergen and the rest of Svalbard, a Norwegian archipelago just 800 miles from the North Pole.

This frigid land is the site of the world's northernmost energy projects. The Soviets are also drilling a Spitsbergen well, British Petroleum has done through-the-ice seismic work on Spitsbergen's glaciers, and other companies are conducting geological surveys.

Despite the current oil glut worldwide, the petroleum giants' planners must search for new reserves in such distant areas, preparing for a time when supplies dwindle and prices rise.

A dozen wells sunk here in the 1960s and 1970s proved dry, but Spitsbergen remains attractive because, under an unusual international agreement, profits can be taxed no more than 10 percent.

Executives of the new joint venture are upbeat about prospects for their well, at a spot called Haketangen, 90 miles south of this tiny island center. A crew of 50 men is drilling for gas there, along a coast half-covered by glaciers.

"I think Spitsbergen is hiding huge hydrocarbon reserves," said Alfred Henningsen, operating manager for Tundra, the joint enterprise backed by Nordisk Polarinvest of Norway and Polargas Prospektering of Sweden.

Others are more restrained, but still positive.

"The possibility to find oil and gas on Spitsbergen is there because the geology is there," said Johannes Vik, Svalbard's mines commissioner. But even if Spitsbergen wells come up empty, he told a visiting reporter, the geological information gained in drilling will be valuable.

"Spitsbergen is the undersea continental shelf risen up above the surface," Vik said. "To know the geology on Spitsbergen is to know the geology of the surrounding Barents Sea."

And the Barents Sea has oilmen excited. They believe its 1,000-foot-deep waters, bordering both Norway and the Soviet Union, may have the potential for a North Sea-style petroleum bonanza.

The obstacles to development, both on and off shore, are daunting.

Spitsbergen, where a few Norwegian and Soviet coal mines support a population of just 3,600, is a rugged, mountainous land frozen by minus-50 winter temperatures and surrounded by some of the world's stormiest seas and by thick polar pack ice that would crush conventional ships and drilling rigs.

Drilling on land through glaciers hundreds of feet thick, as British Petroleum contemplates, would be unprecedented. At Haketangen, any gas would have to be liquefied at a plant built on the inhospitable shores of an arctic fiord. And the potential for oil spills, devastating in cold latitudes, would bring environmentalist pressure on any developers in Spitsbergen.

The legal uncertainties could be just as troublesome.

The Svalbard Treaty of 1920, which limited taxation here, recognized Norwegian sovereignty but opened the archipelago to unhindered resource development by other nations. Now the question is whether this wide-open, "finders-keepers" principle also applies to the huge continental shelf around Svalbard, or only to the four-mile-wide territorial waters recognized in 1920.

Under current international law, Norway contends, it has total control of the Svalbard continental shelf and could tax petroleum production as much as it wants. But the Soviet Union, the United States and most other nations have not accepted this interpretation.

"If oil is found outside the four-mile limit, then you'll have a problem," acknowledged Svalbard's deputy governor, Kristian Nicolaisen.

In a separate dispute, Norway and the Soviet Union disagree on how to extend their land border into the Barents Sea, to divide the southern part of the sea's continental shelf. That disputed marine area extends over 51,000 square miles.

These "gray" zones may soon be touched by the hunt for energy reserves.

The Soviets, with drillships and rigs, have been looking for oil in the eastern Barents Sea. No finds have been reported, but Western analysts say they expect the Soviets to expand their exploratory work over the next five years.

Meanwhile, noteworthy gas finds have been reported in sections of the southwestern Barents Sea that are unquestionably Norwegian — and ice-free. The Norwegian government's latest round of licensing granted concessions in an area still farther north, abutting the disputed Svalbard waters.

"The question," said Vik, "is whether Norway will next award blocks in those waters" — and possibly touch off a major international argument.

Houston exploitation firm founded to boost recovery

HOUSTON (SWN) — A group of former oil company executives and Digicon Inc., announced the formation of ExplofTech Inc., a new company which will provide state-of-the-art technology for the exploitation of establishing oil and gas fields.

Utilizing teams of experienced professionals in the disciplines of reservoir engineering, petroleum geology, petrophysics and geophysics, ExplofTech will work with reserve owners to enhance the recovery potential of existing production and to assist in identifying new prospects on leased acreage. The new company will have the facilities for complete field studies from data acquisition through analysis, interpretation and modelling. The company is unique in that it offers a more complete integration of the latest advances in seismic technology with the other petrosciences. ExplofTech will have access to Digicon's seismic processing and research facilities.

ExplofTech's activities will be directed by an advisory board composed of the founders of the company. Chairman of this board is Fines F. Martin, formerly president of Mobil Producing Texas & New Mexico, Inc.

Also on the advisory board is Dr. Robert J. (Bob) Watson who recently retired as general manager for Mobil Exploration & Producing Services, and Charles E. (Chuck) Edwards, formerly chief geophysicist of Chevron Corp. It is anticipated that this board will be expanded in the near future to include an additional two prominent oilfield professionals.

Anadarko active offshore bidder

HOUSTON (SWN) — Anadarko Petroleum Corp. and its partners were the apparent high bidders on six offshore tracts at Federal Lease Sale No. 112 held in New Orleans, Aug. 12.

All bids are subject to the approval of the Department of the Interior's Minerals Management Service (MMS) which administered the sale.

Anadarko and its partners spent $8.68 million for the six tracts, $4.73 million of which was the company's share of the bids. Anadarko has an average of 55 percent working interest in the tracts, and will be the operator on all six if the MMS accepts the bids.

Anadarko bid $153,600 for a 100 percent working interest in Galveston Block 420.

A group composed of Anadarko, Phillips Petroleum Co. and Adobe Resources Corp. was the apparent high bidder on two tracts. The group bid $4,605,850 for Garden Banks Block 70 and $2,505,550 for Garden Banks Block 71.

Anadarko joined with Murphy Oil USA, Inc. and Odeco Oil & Gas Co. to submit an apparent high bid of $459,000 on Garden Banks Block 26.

A group comprised of Anadarko, Samedan Oil Corp. and Diamond Shamrock Offshore Partners L.P. submitted sole bids on two tracts. The group bid $148,050 for Brazos Block 400 and $806,100 for Brazos Block 413.

National Union of Mineworkers President James Motlatsi is carried on the shoulders of strikers at a meeting Monday in the Indian township of Lenasia, South Africa, located southwest of Johannesburg. South Africa's three largest mining groups have lost a total of 190 million rands in pretax working profits because of the now 16-day-old strike.

South African mining executives reopen talks with striking workers

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Mining executives and the black mineworkers' union resumed contract negotiations today for the first time since the miners went on strike 16 days ago.

Talks between the National Union of Mineworkers and the Chamber of Mines, which represents the six major mining companies, broke down in early July over the union's demand for a 30 percent wage increase.

Since the strike started Aug. 9, the chamber had said it would not negotiate a further increase beyond raises of between 15 and 23.4 percent which it implemented July 1. The union had refused to reopen talks unless wages were on the agenda.

However, and the two sides agreed today to meet without preconditions.

The talks began behind closed doors after a union delegation of about 20 people arrived at the chamber's offices in Johannesburg.

The talks followed a series of threats and back-to-work ultimatums by the mining companies, who maintain support for the strike is waning.

The first signs that the negotiations deadlock might ease came Monday when Anglo said it was willing to resume negotiations without preconditions. The union responded by saying Anglo's "revised position...has created a climate to set negotiations in motion."

The only other talks to take place during the strike involved only Anglo and the union, not the other members of the chamber. Those talks dealt only with ways to reduce strike-related violence, and they broke down after two sessions.

Six miners have been killed during strike, and the union said 320 strikers have been injured and 300 arrested.

Anglo American, which has already dismissed 7,000 striking workers for failing to meet deadlines set to return to work, said today that workers at its Vaal Reefs No. 9 shaft and Western Holdings No. 2 and 3 shafts were returning to work in "large numbers" in advance of a new back-to-work deadline.

Anglo told 6,000 workers at the Vaal Reefs shaft they would be dismissed if they didn't return to work by today, while the 7,000 Western Holdings miners have until Wednesday to return.

Anglo had told these workers they would be fired Monday if they continued on strike, and company officials said early in the day that the Western Holdings workers were being dismissed. But Anglo later announced that it has extended the deadlines.

Anglo, which produced more than 39 percent of South Africa's gold last year, has been the worst hit of the major mining houses. It has acknowledged that it has lost substantial revenue because of the strike, but — like the other mining houses — has refused to give specific figures.

The Labor Monitoring Group, a research group based at the University of Witwatersrand, says the three biggest mining groups have lost a total of $95 million in pretax working profits as a result of the strike.

The union says black miners made an average $170 a month before the chamber's unilateral pay increase.

The chamber says black miners earned an average $250 before the raise, and now average $285 plus free room and board. White miners earn more.

According to the union, about 340,000 men are on strike at 45 mines.

The Chamber of Mines said Monday that 210,000 miners, down by 20,000 from its previous estimate, are on strike at 29 mines.

30,000 Orthodox Jews stage 'pray-in' at wall

JERUSALEM (AP) — About 30,000 Orthodox Jews prayed at the Wailing Wall to protest the showing of films on the Sabbath, and an organizer said the issue threatened to ignite a "civil war" between Orthodox and secular groups.

Monday's protest was the latest in a month of weekly demonstrations and counter-demonstrations staged in Jerusalem by the opposing groups of Jews.

The ultra-Orthodox Jews, dressed in black suits and wide-brimmed hats, moved their heads rhythmically back and forth in prayer in front of the Western Wall, the last remnant of the ancient Jewish Temple destroyed by the Romans in 70 A.D.

In a separate area of the wall, several thousand Orthodox women in headscarves prayed together. Police estimated a total of 30,000 people took part in the two-hour pray-in.

Several of the country's leading rabbis read to the crowd from the biblical Book of Psalms in emotion-filled voices. The praying was punctuated by the wavering sound of the shofar, or ram's horn.

The Orthodox say that the showing of films on Sabbath — the period from sundown Friday to sundown Saturday — is a desecration of the holy day of rest.

"We have tried negotiating and now we are trying praying. The next step is a civil war between the religious and non-religious," said Rabbi Menachem Porush, an organizer of the pray-in.

Porush, a religious Agudat Yisrael party legislator, said he and other Orthodox leaders were following a biblical strategy of praying and negotiating before launching an all-out offensive.

Paramilitary border police peered at the crowd Monday from nearby rooftops, but no arrests or injuries were reported.

In recent weeks, dozens of people have been arrested in demonstrations about the film issue.

The secular-religious tension is the highest since Orthodox youths set fire to Jerusalem bus shelters last year to protest swimsuit advertisements they considered indecent.

American team flies to Hanoi for MIA talks

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — A U.S. military team flew to Vietnam today for the first technical talks in 10 months on accounting for American servicemen missing from the war.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Ross Petzing said the military team and a group of medical specialists would hold separate talks over three days with officials in Hanoi, the Vietnamese capital.

The Vietnamese government had delayed talks on retrieving the remains of U.S. soldiers for 10 months, demanding a U.S. commitment to help Vietnam with its own "urgent humanitarian concerns."

Earlier this month, an agreement was reached in Hanoi.

THE STATE OF TEXAS

To: Unknown Heirs/Devisees of the Estate of W. L. Hampton, Deceased

You, and each of you, are hereby commanded to appear and answer before the 142nd District Court in the Midland County Courthouse in Midland County, Texas at or before 10:00 o'clock a.m. of the first Monday after the expiration of forty-two (42) days from the date of issuance of this Citation, being at or before 10:00 o'clock a.m. on Monday, the 7th day of September, 1987, then and there to answer the Petition of Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation in Cause No. A-36,416, styled Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, in its Corporate Capacity, Plaintiff vs. James T. Hampton, Majesta Louise Hampton, Lillian Hampton and Unknown Heirs/Devisees of the Estate of W. L. Hampton, Deceased. Defendants. The Petition, filed July 14, 1987, discloses that the nature of the suit is as follows:

Trespass to try title to, and seeking either eviction of the occupants from, or judicial foreclosure of FDIC's Deed of Trust lien on the following real property:

BEING ALL OF LOT EIGHT (8), BLOCK ONE (1), SUPERIOR ADDITION, an addition to the City of Midland, Midland County, Texas, according to the map and plat thereof of record in Plat Cabinet A/196, Plat Records in the office of the County Clerk in and for Midland County, Texas.

SAVE AND EXCEPT: All oil, gas and other minerals heretofore reserved in Deed of record in Volume 79, page 47, Deed Records in the office of the County Clerk in and for Midland County, Texas.

The names of the grantees as set out in the conveyance constituting the source of title of the Defendants are James T. Hampton, Majesta Louise Hampton and W. L. Hampton; and as W. L. Hampton is deceased, all Unknown Heirs/Devisees of the Estate of W. L. Hampton claiming interest in the property are made parties to the suit.

This Citation shall be served according to T.R.C.P. 116 and returned according to T.R.C.P. 117.

ISSUED AND GIVEN UNDER MY HAND AND THE SEAL OF SAID COURT on this the 21st day of July, 1987 at Midland, Midland County, Texas.
