PACKERS STRIKE CALLED

MAINLY ABOUT PEOPLE

By W. N. S.

Will P. Kennedy is the author of "Capital Sidelights" column which appears every Sunday on a newsy page of the Washington Star. This is a tale of Texas: "Senator Morris Sheppard of Texas has established a new record for long distance oratory in congress. In the olden day the noted orators, especially during a filibuster, usually gained spirit for their work from occasional quaffs of invigorating refreshments and arranged for occasional interruptions to give them second wind, or to have long documents read into their speech by the clerks. Not so with Sheppard. He is an ardent prohibitionist, as well as being called 'the silver-tongued Demosthenes from Texarkana.' Senator Sheppard talked without interruption for six hours and ten minutes on the peace treaties, which, the official stenographers say, is the best record for a continuous speech ever established in either house of congress. He is a graduate of the University of Texas, Yale law school and Southern Methodist University, in all of which he was known as 'the boy orator.' He is a Kappa Alpha and Phi Beta Kappa fraternity man, and sovereign banker or national treasurer of the Woodmen of the World, the second largest fraternal insurance order in the United States. Morris may be the long distance talker of the American congress but he never achieved fame in a single night like old Howdy Martin when he blew out the gas and it happened to be an incandescent bulb; or the Texan who jumped to the top of the ladder of fame in less than two minutes by kicking in the door of a house of representatives. It is said that all women and most men are able to talk but it is not every man who can blow out the gas and survive or every man who is able to kick in or down an oaken door.

Texas is the leading livestock state. Texas has almost a billion dollars invested in the livestock industry. An agricultural livestock finance corporation was launched in the city of Fort Worth to loan government money to cattlemen or sheepmen in order to preserve the meat industry from perishing. The Fort Worth Press is a Scripps-McRae newspaper. It is the boast of the dictators of this organization or system that there is no strings on any one of their newspapers. The Press carried this story on the closing November day: "Washington, Nov. 30.—Charges have been made in Washington that the new Agricultural-Livestock Finance Corporation in Fort Worth is controlled by the packers and operated by a small clique headed by John Sparks. It is seeking to establish its business on government money for the benefit of the Chicago packers by refusing small loans, claiming it is after big loans only, it is charged. It is claimed the corporation is not lending any sheep money, but loaned Robert Kleburg, stockholder of the Fort Worth Packing company, five hundred thousand dollars and is making large loans to T. A. Coleman, San Antonio and T. W. Waggoner of Fort Worth. The complaints say the policy of the Fort Worth loan corporation is putting the cowmen in worse shape than ever before by withholding the small loans. Governor W. R. G. Harding of the federal reserve board will back a bill in congress giving the federal reserve bank at Dallas power to lend money direct to the cattlemen. Harding says if congress will pass his bill he will lend all the money the cattlemen want at 6½ per cent interest." This is one side of the controversy. The Fort Worth Record is a morning newspaper, not owned by the Scripps-McRae organization. The Forth Worth Record carried this story on the first day of December: "Roy C. Vance was elected president of the Stockyards National bank at a meeting of the board of directors Wednesday morning. He succeeds John N. Sparks, who resigned to take up the presidency of the Agricultural Livestock-Finance corporation. Mr. Vance also will head the Fort Worth Cattle Loan company, which is affiliated with the bank. The two institutions represent the Armour and Swift financial interests in Fort Worth and Texas. Mr. Vance has been connected with the bank since 1909 and has a large acquaintance among the banking interests of the state, as well as among the cattlemen and livestock producers. He is well known in Fort Worth having been a resident of this city for the past eighteen years. He is recognized generally as a banker of great vision. In retiring from the presidency, Mr. Sparks accepts a position of very great responsibility but it is generally accepted among banking and livestock authorities that he is the ideal man to fill it. He is known throughout the length and breadth of cattledom in the Southwest and is recognized as a master authority on cattle loans. His administration of the affairs of the Stockyards National bank, of which he became president in 1912, has been one of broad and liberal policy and he leaves the institution with the best wishes and regards not only of every official but of its entire clientele. Ernest W. Hightower succeeds Mr. Vance as cashier of the bank, while Lynn W. Marshall will become secretary-treasurer of the Fort Worth Cattle Loan company. Both of these young men are well-known in Fort Worth, having risen from clerks in the bank to

'IT'S THE SAME CHOLLY HUGHES, BUT MELLOWED'

"Yesterday He Was Enjoying the Reputation of Being America's Most Brilliant Lawyer."

"Today He Matches Wits With Europe's Cleverest Diplomats in Case of the World."

By HERBERT COREY

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—It's a queer thing about Hughes. Every one is showering him with compliments. Every one is saying that Hughes is the big man—no, no, no; the BIG MAN—of the Washington Conference. Every one is talking as though he is the natural, logical, predordained candidate for the presidency seven years from now and if Warren Gamaliel Harding does not keep a brisk eye on him he'll be that same little thing three years from now. Every one is talking about "the new Hughes." By ricochet they are throwing rocks at the "old Hughes" and most of 'em land.

That sort of thing, if the reader will forgive a drop into autobiography, makes me tired. This isn't a new Hughes. It is the same old Hughes. It is precisely the same Hughes who whaled the daylights out of the insurance trust and went to Albany for two terms as governor and kicked the race track dog around. It is a more mature, perhaps a mellower, a more contented Hughes than the Hughes of fifteen years ago. But it is the same Hughes. Hardly a hair has changed. His beard is cut a little more a la mode and he is one of the niftiest dressers the secretary of state's office has seen in a good many years—not that any of his predecessors set a high sartorial mark—and there is a bit less of harshness and intolerance. But this Hughes is the old Hughes.

Yesterday—and Today

There is one difference between yesterday's Hughes and this morning's Hughes. This one is a happy man. He radiates contentment. If I were to say that he carries an aura of satisfaction some one might misunderstand, for to call a man self-satisfied is about the meanest thing possible. Yet one does not come in range of Hughes that one does not feel that he is contented. His eyes shine, he laughs easily and without constraint, his step is quick and springy, the very liking for his job. He would not trade the place of Secretary of State for all the other places of honor and emolument there are.

"I believe that for the first time in his life he is perfectly happy," said an old friend.

The reason why appears in his face and is to some extent the occasion for the somewhat chumpish talk about the "new Hughes." He is a master mechanic who likes his job. He is a workman in the subtleties of the intellect who finds himself possessed of perfect tools and in competition with the best craftsmen of the world. It must be a daily, hourly, continuous joy for him to match wits against the best wits of Europe and find that he need not blush for the quality of his own. That speech at the first session of the conference established him. These other diplomats—who under the old rules would have looked forward to a cosy winter in Washington and little else—are frankly afraid of him.

Opinion of Diplomats

"He bowled us over," said one. "Any one of us might have done the same thing if we had dared. But we did not dare. Hughes did."

Look back at the Hughes of the fight against the insurance trust as compared with the same old Hughes today. They were alike in essentials. They thought right to the point, they

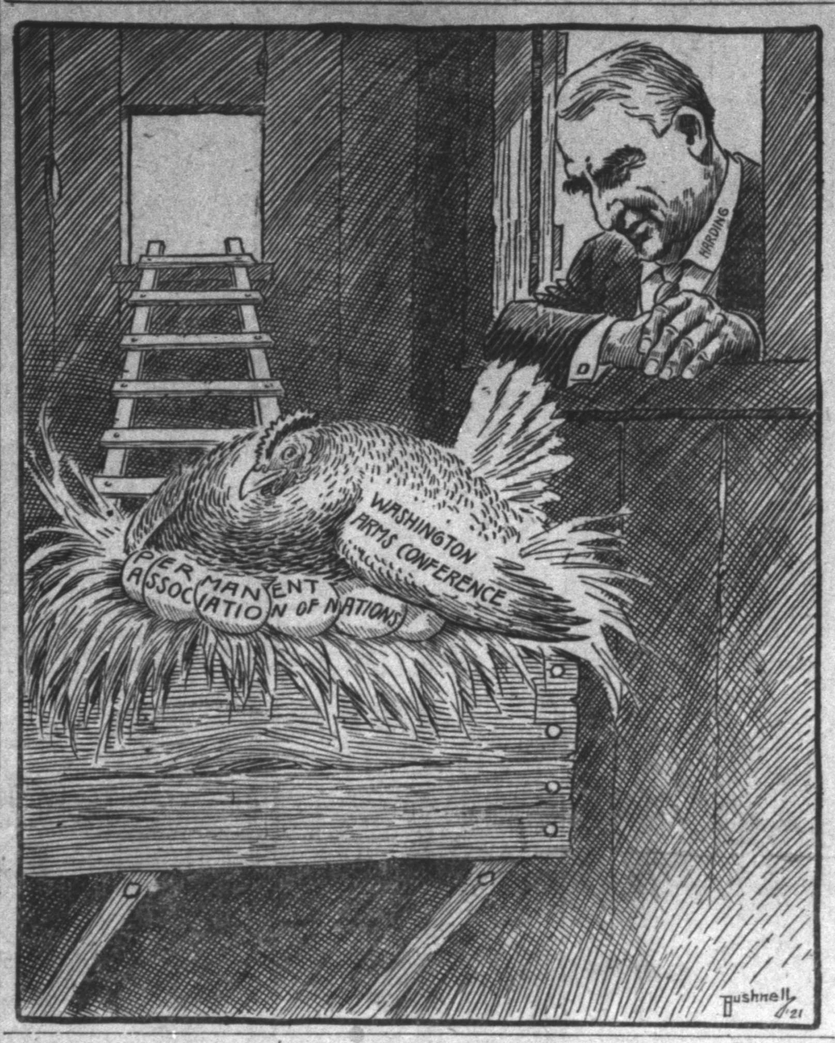
WHAT WILL THE HATCHING BE?



BAPTISTS WILL PROBE CHURCH SCHOOL STUDY

Rumors That College Curriculums Include Objectionable Doctrines, Will Be Investigated.

By Associated Press.

DALLAS, Texas, Dec. 1.—The question of church orthodoxy came up in the convention chamber when 1,368 messengers from Baptist churches of Texas assembled in their 73rd annual session here today. Organization of the convention was merely a formality with Dr. J. D. Sandefer, president of Simmons college, Abilene, retaining his place as president. Three new vice-presidents were named as follows: Dr. R. G. Bowers of Waco; Dr. J. B. Tidwell of Waco and Dr. Wallace Bassett of Dallas.

President S. P. Brooks, of Baylor University, told the convention that charges had been made that heresy is being taught in the school and he offered a resolution for an investigation. The resolution was finally amended so as to provide for an investigation of all Baptist schools in the state by a committee of seven members to be named by the convention.

The business of today's session in addition to election of officers included the welcome address by Dr. George W. Truett, pastor host, response by Dr. H. W. Vergin of Amarillo and the annual sermon by the Rev. M. M. Wolfe, of Houston. The memorial drafted by the committee of fifteen from the pastors and laymen's conference setting forth the attitude of Texas Baptists concerning the authenticity of the holy scriptures was adopted unanimously.

The "widely prevalent curse of unwholesome moving picture shows" was deprecated by J. B. Crantill of Dallas, in addressing the convention. He declared "insidious propaganda is carried on in the moving picture world against the holy Sabbath." Failure of the schools and colleges, "to recognize God in their scientific teachings" also was decried by the speaker.

HEALTH OFFICIAL SAYS PARKING OF CORSET ALL WRONG

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—Parking of corsets in the cloak room by flappers at dances and elsewhere is a mistake, Health Commissioner Copeland declared today.

"The present style of corset," he said, "is a distinct benefit to the health of women. It serves as a brace and at the same time gives smartness to the figure."

COTTON PICKER TO BE TESTED THIS AFTERNOON AT 3

An acid test of the Price-Campbell mechanical cotton picker is promised all interested people who will watch its work Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the cotton field, near the intersection of the Call Field and Lake Wichita road.

The picker has been tested in various ways, including the tossing of carnations into the spindles through which they pass unharmed as an example that green bolls are not harmed in early pickings. It has been tested on green cotton and the backers of the move declare that a test on December cotton filled with dead leaves will be proof positive that at last the mechanical cotton picker is a realization.

The test is to be made on rows of cotton which have been left unpicked for this purpose and a number of out-of-town people are expected to be here for the exhibition. Especial interest is expected from people of Wichita Falls as the machine is to be produced here.

TEXAS HIGHWAY OFFICIALS TO ATTEND NATIONAL MEET

By Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Texas, Dec. 1.—R. M. Hubbard, chairman of the state highway commission; D. K. Martin, member of the commission; R. J. Windrow, state highway engineer and G. G. Wickline, department bridge engineer, will attend the meeting of the American Association of Highway officials in Omaha, Nebraska next week, it was announced today.

MEANS SOUGHT TO BRING BACK CHAS. W. MORSE

Financier Sails for France Just Prior to Probe of His Affairs With Shipping Board.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—Aroused by the departure of Charles W. Morse, New York shipbuilder, from the country just as the government is about to place before a federal grand jury its investigation of his transactions with the shipping board, officials of various departments considered tonight what means may be taken to bring him back to the United States.

It is hoped, department of justice officials said, that word can be sent to the French government in time to permit Morse's detention at Havre tomorrow morning, when, according to latest advices, the French steamer Paris, on which he sailed from New York is due to dock.

One method to prevent Morse from landing in France, shipping board officials intimated, might be through a request to the French government pointing his possible undesirability as a citizen due to old charges which were dismissed.

DAILY PRODUCTION IN DISTRICT SHOWS GAIN OF 2,000 BARRELS: BURK AND ELECTRA ARE GAINERS

Aided by a few good completions in Stephens county, principally the Humble's No. 7 Spain, which came in flowing eleven hundred barrels, and by a nice increase from more steadier operations in Burkburnett, and by new Electra wells, the daily production of North and Central Texas for last week registered a two thousand barrel gain over the average for the week previous.

The average for the last week was approximately 142,000 barrels daily. The previous week the average daily production was right at 140,000 barrels.

Other important Stephens county wells are the No. 2 Guest of the Magnolia Petroleum Company, flowing better than 200 barrels natural, in the 3200 lime, and the Prairie Oil and Gas No. 4-C Veale, flowing 300 barrels, from the 3300 foot lime. The Snowden-McSweeney No. 10 Acker-1, is reported ready to be shot, and spraying around 100 barrels of oil at 3100 feet.

The average daily production in the district, by pools, follows:

Burkburnett 41,500; Electra 11,200; Kemp Munger Allen, Iowa Park shallow 3070; Archer county-Texhoma 1,800; Petrolia 300; Young county 7,770; Stephens county 55,690; Ranger 13,800; Comanche 5,800; Strawn 540; Moran 100; Brown 460; Coleman 110.

MOVE MADE TO UNRAVEL ARMS PARLEY TANGLE

England Using Influence to Bring Japanese Views Into Harmony With Those of America.

New Attempt Is Launched, During Lull in Naval Controversy, to Settle Shantung Dispute.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—Great Britain, as the ally of Japan, is using her influence to bring the Japanese views in the naval ratio dispute into harmony with those of the United States.

With that development, the Japanese plenipotentiaries again have submitted the whole question to their home government.

The exact nature of the latest move for a solution of the ratio problem is notdisclosed, but it is indicated that Great Britain has found a double interest in the success of the negotiations because she has accepted in principle the American "5-5-3" proposal and because on the other hand, she is in alliance with Japan, who asks for a ratio of "10-10-7."

All the principals on both sides of the controversy refused tonight to recognize the situation as a deadlock. The American delegates, it was said, authoritatively, were even declining to regard Baron Kato's proposal for an increased Japanese strength as a formal presentation of the Japanese viewpoint. They were confident, it was delared that the "10-10-7" proportion would be abandoned before Japan's final statement of position is placed before the conference.

"It is apparent that if the proposal of the Japanese statesman is not to be regarded as formal, the reason lies in the fact that it was not "passed across the table," at a formal session of the arms conference or any of its regularly constituted sub-divisions.

"Baron Kato's request for an increase over the American ratio was communicated to Secretary Hughes and Arthur J. Balfour at a meeting of the three late Tuesday afternoon. In relating frankly his government's position, the Japanese plenipotentiary touched on the reasons which impelled him to make the request and asked that the question of national needs be taken into account in determining the new naval relativity.

In response, Secretary Hughes and Mr. Balfour made plain the opposition of the American and British delegates to vitally changing the basis of ratio determination and Baron Kato indicated he desired, before going further, to communicate again with his government. Since then, the three have not met to discuss the question, but their conversations are to be resumed when further advices have been received from Tokio.

During the lull a new attempt was begun today to settle the long debated Shantung controversy, but in view of the status of the naval negotiations the Shantung conversations were looked on by many of the delegates as a small part of the main idea. Secretary Hughes and Mr. Balfour, exercising their "good offices" met with the Japanese and Chinese delegations for a preliminary survey of the situation and then left American and British observers "on the ground to aid in whatever way they can to bring the two Oriental groups into agreement."

SMALL CRIPPLE IS CONVINCED VIRTUE WILL BE REWARDED

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—Harry Coppersmith, a little cripple of 11, now believes all the stories of his favorite authors in which the hero wore stocks to the path of virtue wins reward. For five days Harry had waited patiently to receive the attention of Dr. Adolf Lorenz, Austria's wonder man of surgery. When he hobbled up to a hospital this morning Harry picked up on the sidewalk a woman's bag containing $700 worth of rings. Like the hero in one of his books, he took it at once to the hospital superintendent.

Now Harry has a pass which will admit him to the surgeon's presence bright and early tomorrow.

DEFENSE CASE IS RESTED IN TRIAL OF DR. W. A. NIXON

By Associated Press.

GREAT BEND, Kan., Dec. 1.—The defense rested its case tonight in the trial of Dr. W. A. Nixon, charged with murder in connection with the death of Arthur C. Banta, Great Bend attorney.

Dr. Nixon himself took the stand today and for more than three hours answered questions of attorneys for the defense and state.

The state will begin its rebuttal in the morning, followed by sur-rebuttal of the defense.

A severe attack against the general character of the accused physician was made on the cross examination. Assistant Attorney General Griffith asked numerous questions about the dates of the doctor's four marriages and three divorces, to many of which the doctor answered he did not remember.

45,000 EMPLOYES ARE ORDERED TO WALK OUT DEC. 5

By Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—A strike of all union packing house employes in all plants where wage reductions were put into effect last Monday was ordered for December 5 by the executive committee of the Amalgamated meat cutters and butcher workmen of North America.

The strike which affects all union crafts employed in the packing industry, will involve about 45,000 workers in fifteen cities, according to Cornelius Hays, president of the butcher workmen's union.

Dennis Lane, secretary of the butcher workmen's union tonight issued the following statement on the action of the executive committee:

"All attempts to negotiate a fair adjustment of wage rates by offering an agreement providing for arbitration between the packers and the employes have failed. The joint executive committee representing all international unions affected do now advise, in accordance with the strike vote of the rank and file that all packing house employes in all plants where wage reductions were arbitrarily ordered into effect Monday, November 28, or any date thereafter, cease all work at 6 o'clock Monday morning, December fifth."

Cities where the packing house employes are organized are Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul, Sioux City, Omaha, Denver, Nebraska City, St. Joseph, Mo., Kansas City, Wichita, Oklahoma City, Fort Worth, East St. Louis, St. Louis, Albert Lea and Austin, Minnesota; and Cedar Rapids and DuBuque, Iowa.

There are about 35,000 union workmen employed by the big five packers and about 10,000 union workers employed in smaller packing plants according to President Hays. About 20,000 of the union men are in Chicago, he said.

Unions affiliated with the butcher workmen and which are also ordered to strike, according to the official strike call, include steam and operating engineers, stationary firemen, railway carmen, coopers, carpenters, blacksmiths, electrical workers, steam fitters, sheet metal workers and machinists.

There are about 8,000 men in these allied crafts, Mr. Hays said.

STAR WITNESS FOR ARBUCKLE IS POISONED

Systematic Search Instituted For Man Alleged to Have Administered Poison to Irene Morgan.

Friedman Opens Argument For the Prosecution and Is Followed by Defense Attorney McNab.

By Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Dec. 1.—Systematic police search was begun tonight for a stranger alleged to be responsible for the poisoning of Mrs. Irene Morgan, Los Angeles, nurse and defense witness in the trial of Roscoe Arbuckle.

Mrs. Morgan was found unconscious in her hotel room. She told of being accosted last night and again today by a man she had seen during the Arbuckle trial. She said the man had given her candy twice and that both times eating this candy had been followed by illness.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 1.—The poisoning of Mrs. Irene Morgan, a leading witness for the defense, and the beginning of the closing arguments of both sides were outstanding developments today in the trial of "Fatty" Arbuckle.

Leo Friedman, an assistant district attorney, made the first exposition of the prosecution's contention that it has presented an unbreakable chain of evidence to link the comedian with the death of Virginia Rappe, who it charges Arbuckle injured at a party in his rooms at the Hotel St. Francis here. Gavin McNab, began what seemed likely to be the defense's only address, but was interrupted by adjournment of court for the day.

The courtroom was crowded and many a would-be spectator was unable to get no nearer the center of activities than the corridors of the hall of justice.

Arbuckle appeared indifferent during Friedman's argument, spending most of the time gazing around or fingering shreds of paper. Friedman told the jury "that even if Arbuckle told the truth on the stand it would be strong enough to convict him, for he admitted he left Miss Rappe after the injury without calling a doctor or telling anyone of her condition."

"Why has not the prosecution presented Bambina Maude Delmont, the complaining witness in his case?" McNab asked. He praised Mrs. Morgan as a "heroine, wounded in battle."

Finger prints on the doors of the Hotel St. Francis room used by Arbuckle and said by the prosecution to be those of Arbuckle and Miss Rappe, were called "spooks" by McNab. "Arbuckle had but ten minutes in that room with Miss Rappe," he said.

Miss Zeh Prevost, prosecution witness, was "terrorized" he said in her appearance before the police and the grand jury and because she would not say Miss Rappe referring to Arbuckle, exclaimed "he killed me."

Mr. McNab was interrupted a number of times by the prosecution on the charge that he was going outside the record in the case.

"Weird, fantastic absurdities are substituted for the testimony of Mrs. Delmont, the complaining witness," he said.

The testimony of both prosecution and defense witnesses was detailed by Friedman. He said that Mrs. Morgan's record as a war nurse, as she outlined it on the stand, was subject to attack.

Fred Fischbach, leading defense witness, was accused by Freidman of having attempted to take the blame of Miss Rappe's injury on his own shoulders.

The defense testimony of Dr. Franklin Shiels "blasted the defense's own theory that the bladder rupture which caused Miss Rappe's death might have resulted from sudden immersion in a cold bath" Friedman said.

"Dr. Shiels testified that he had no knowledge of a bladder ever rupturing in this fashion."

SHOWDOWN IN IRISH ROW DUE NEXT MONDAY

By Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—Indications tonight were that the Irish negotiations, apparently hanging by a mere thread for the last two days, would not be finally ruptured before Monday, if at all.

Robert C. Barton is going to Dublin tonight, and the other Sinn Fein delegates expect to follow tomorrow.

This announcement was made at the Sinn Fein publicity department this afternoon, coupled with the statement that unless the Sinn Feiners were summoned to Prime Minister Lloyd George's official residence in Downing street during the course of the evening there probably would be no further meeting with government representatives until Monday.

This was taken to mean that the Sinn Fein delegates would devote the week-end to a discussion of the British government's new proposals with Eamonn DeValera, the Irish republican leader and other members of the Dail Eireann cabinet. It was understook the Sinn Fein delegates would return to London Monday to give the government the Sinn Fein's final decision.

TALKATIVE LODGE MEMBER NARROWLY ESCAPES HANGING

By Associated Press.

SIOUX CITY, Iowa, Dec. 1.—Sam Jones, negro, today is a firm believer in keeping lodge secrets inviolate.

Jones is said to have been accused by fraternity brethren of having communicated lodge secrets to unauthorized persons.

He was ordered to appear before the lodge last night.

On his way while crossing the Floyd river bridge, he says he was attacked by 14 brethren. A clothes line was looped around his neck. He was stripped, bound hand and foot and hanged. Fortunately for Jones, the clothes line broke and he was sufficiently revived when he fell into the icy river to make shore.

He reported his experiences to the police and efforts are being made to arrest and men who attempted to lynch him.

LITTLE GIRL'S DISMEMBERED BODY FOUND

Mother of Child Discovered With Throat Slashed; Search Is Begun for Woman's Husband.

By Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—Following an all-night search for little Margaret Coughlin, 3 years old, her dismembered body was found today in a wash boiler in the home of Mrs. Ralph Pensis, a neighbor. Shortly afterward the body of Mrs. Pensis with her throat slashed by a butcher knife, was found on the second floor of the Pensis cottage. Police immediately began a search for Ralph Pensis, the woman's husband.

Police who called at the Pensis' home, the last place the child was seen yesterday, found the doors locked this morning and could get no answer to their knicks. Finally they broke the door down and forced an entrance.

In the basement they discovered the little girl's torso in the wash boiler, sitting on a pile of paper which had been fired, but had failed to burn. Several feet away one leg, wrapped in paper, was found in a cardboard box. The other leg was found later a block away from the house.

Continuing their search they found Mrs. Pensis' body on a bed upstairs, her throat cut with a butcher knife. The police said they believed she killed herself as they burst in the front door. The body was still warm. Neighbors had seen her less than half an hour before.

Policemen were sent in search of Pensis, a carpenter, who was believed to have gone to his work and two daughters, Josephine, aged 9, and Dolly, 16, both of whom had gone to school.

The head and arms of the child, which were missing when the torso was discovered in the wash boiler, later were found wrapped in a newspaper beneath the pillow of the bed in which Mrs. Pensis and Josephine slept last night.

The police took finger prints on the butcher knife and about the murder scene. After questioning the woman's husband, they locked him up.

clothed their thought in speech as keen as a razor, they had an ability to concentrate which is terrifying to a shatter-brained antagonist and they had no compromise in them. Either of them might be whipped. Hughes was whipped on various issues as governor, and he may be whipped on various issues as diplomatist. But he will not weakly yield ground today any more than he would in Albany. The one difference between the two—barring the inevitable one of age—is that today's Hughes is a bit more good tempered than the old one was. Yet the former Hughes was always cordial.

That is, the former Hughes was always cordial to those who met him on social ground. In his profession he was a curly wolf. He has always had a rock-like, hard, indomitable honesty and it is entirely likely that he gained a contempt for the success without that quality. So some of his friends think, anyhow. They say that he was angered at the dickering and dishonesty he saw on every side. He was a terrible cross-examiner, as may be recalled. Not merely were his questions searching, but his whole manner conveyed the scorn he felt for the man who had sold himself.

Reputation as a Lawyer

Perhaps it was because he felt a sort of contemptuous anger for a great many successful men that he earned a reputation in the legal profession for the size of the fees he has exacted recently. Since his retirement from the supreme bench he has been without question the most eminent lawyer in the United States. A member of the great federal boards said the other day that of all the attorneys who had appeared before that body Hughes was the one who measured up to every demand made upon him. Others, he said, made quite as scholarly and able pleas. But no one ever got up a case as Hughes did.

"He was prepared upon the remotest details," he said. "Others called for help when questioned. Hughes never did."

He made his clients pay. No one knows how much money Hughes made in the practice of law. Gossip puts the lowest limit at $2,000,000 for his personal services. No other American lawyer was ever paid so much in the same length of time. Perhaps this had something to do with the softening of the Hughes disposition, or rather with the amelioration of the somewhat rugged Hughes surface. No one has ever suggested that he was tainted by greed, but it must have been an immense satisfaction to reflect that while still a young man the most tangible proofs of success were his. But he is the same old Hughes. He is always just a bit impatient with the rest of us poor humans. He bears with us just as long as we are quick and alert and intelligent. Stupidity and cowardice and uncertainty always provoke a flash of disdainful temper. His can be the coldest eyes in North America up to and including the open Polar Sea.

The Same Old Hughes—Mellowed.

He may well feel—he must feel—that his career has been brought to a perfect climax. He has always insisted that he has no further political ambition, and I for one believe him. He has won riches from poverty and eminence from obscurity. If he meets with success in the present conference any further political preferment must be in the nature of an anti-climax. If he fails it will be because other peoples—not those of America—have refused peace. After all, he is feeling the lot of conquistion. Think what it must be to a man who has fought great men in great cases all his working life to be called on to fight Europe's best for the case of the world!

But this is the same old Hughes. He has been ripened, of course. His manner is somewhat more mellow. His blast of anger is more destructive but not so frequent. His harshness of yesterday is concealed by suavity. His convictions were once expressed in a fashion that savored of intolerance, but now seems only firmness. His tailor is better and his beard a trimmed and shaped perfection, and he seems happier. But he is the same old Hughes.

CONCRETE IS SUBJECT OF ROTARY TALK

It was a hard subject I. H. Roberts had on Thursday, it was, and he done nobly by it, all who attended the Rotary club regular luncheon at the Kemp were agreed. Rotarians learned more about "Concrete" Thursday than the most of them had ever expected to know, and were convinced that I. H. was thoroughly acquainted with his particular line of work.

Early Wichita Falls history was gone into to a certain extent, Mr. Roberts telling how seventeen years ago there were no cement sidewalks in Wichita Falls. The development of the cement industry, with the ever increasing variety of uses, was detailed. Mr. Roberts also told of the development of the domestic sources, until at present practically all of the cement used in the United States is obtained in this country. New processes and improvements, particularly for its use in building homes, have been developed to an important degree lately.

Rotarian Roy Miller of Seattle, dredging engineer, and F. N. Lawton made short talks. Rotarian Lawton's talk was a sort of "beating the other fellow to it" being a detailed account of his trip to St. Louis, with the irrigation district bonds, and under armed guards two Texas ranger officers. He even told about his posing, unwittingly, as a "bad bootlegger to the edification and horror of his fellow passengers."

The Vernon Rotary club will have a visitation from the local club next week, President Robbins appointing I. H. Roberts, A. E. Myles, P. A. Martin and R. E. Shepherd as the committee.

their present positions. They have a wide acquaintance in Fort Worth and throughout the state." It would be the part of wisdom for the directors of the finance loan corporation of Fort Worth to investigate and weigh the charges or grievances of the little fellows wherever they may exist. But why should the packers do anything or wink at anything that would destroy the meat industry of the Southwest? Wouldn't it be destroying their own business interests and source of supply for their packing houses?

Hall county has won its place in the sun. Louis F. Mock is a Hall county farmer. He grows cotton. He knows how to grow it. The Record News of Thursday morning carried the following. "Hall county claims the best cotton production record in the state for 1921. Louis F. Mock, living 12 miles Southwest of Memphis, planted twenty-five and two-thirds acres as measured by the surveyor. He has gathered thirty-two 500-pound bales from this field. The land was flat broke in the early spring and later planted in the usual way having only the ordinary amount of rainfall this year a- the usual methods of cotton cultivation. This record holds first place until a better one is recorded." Flowers for the living. Flowers for Hall county. Flowers for Farmer Mock. He has taught the South Texas cotton grower something. He has paralyzed the East Texas cotton grower. He has staggered the Central Texas cotton grower. Think of a bale and a half to the acre "away out in the Texas Panhandle."

LAY PLANS TO LOWER NUMBER OF ACCIDENTS

Further plans for local safety week to be nationally observed December 5 to 12 were gotten under way at a meeting held Thursday at which H. E. Taylor, scout executive presided. Police Commissioner Pittis, Mrs. W. M. Woodfin, L. L. Albritton and P. A. Rodgers attended the meeting.

The committee recommended that a standing committee be appointed to serve throughout the year and have charge of safety work of the city during the coming year. According to the plans of the committee all public service, industrial and police organizations of the city and county will take part in the safety drive for next week. Several special features were planned in connection with the drive.

KILLED WOMAN FOR FIFTY DOLLARS, IDLE MAN CONFESSES

Sound of mind and in perfect physical condition, but out of work and in need of money, Thomas F. Catherwood of Chicago has confessed that he coolly murdered Mrs. Betty Sharples, sister of his brother-in-law, to obtain $50, which the young woman, about to become a mother, had saved for Christmas presents. While Catherwood was murdering the woman her little son Clarence, thirteen months old, lay in a cradle nearby. He was crying when the father returned from work and found his wife's lifeless body. Catherwood expresses no regret over the crime.

other high justice department officials declined to discuss the case, but it was learned that the department was considering every possible method by which Morse could be brought back. It was understood that radios had been sent to the captain of the Paris advising him that Morse was wanted by this government.

As yet, officials said no proceedings have been begun before the grand jury.

Any impression that Morse left the country to avoid grand jury investigation was denied by his sons.

"Attention has been called," the statement said, "to articles appearing in the daily press, the tendency of which is to give the impression that Mr. Morse has surreptitiously, and in disguise sailed from the United States to avoid some proposed grand jury investigation. The truth is that he sailed on the Paris on Friday of last week under a passport issued to him in his own name and vised by government officials at the pier, without any knowledge of the government's intentions beyond the fact that they have been making an investigation for over a year.

"The sailing last month was his third sailing to Europe within the past twelve months for the treatment of a malady which seems to be growing daily more serious. The last sailing was under the advice of his family physician that he would have to undergo an operation if he desired to save his life. He will come back to the United States whenever his presence is desired and when he is in physical condition to do so."

GRADING OF TEXAS FARM PRODUCTS IS PLAN OF BAUGHMAN

By Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Texas, Dec. 1.—Commissioner of Markets and Warehouses Charles E. Baughman announced today that he proposes to hold a series of hearings all over the state for the purpose of grading all farm products "so that the producer may know just what he has to sell when he brings it to market."

The first of these hearings will be held at Lubbock next Saturday.

His plan includes a co-operative movement with the Texas Agricultural and Mechanical college whereby the college will institute short courses in grading farm products after Mr. Baughman has established a standard by which to work. By this system, Mr. Baughman points out that the producer will be able to secure expert classers for his products and then demand a price according to the grade.

JURY IS SELECTED IN CAPLIS DRAFT CONSPIRACY TRIAL

By Associated Press.

SHREVEPORT, La., Dec. 1.—Selection of a jury to try Tom Caplis, Sr., wealthy Bossier Parish planter, and his two sons, Tom, Jr., and Joe, accused of conspiracy to evade the draft and with draft evasion was complete late this afternoon after the case had been underway for an hour in the federal court.

Four of the jurors chosen were either in the service themselves or had relatives in the army or navy during the war. It is alleged that Caplis supplied his sons with funds for their escape from the United States immediately following the first call in 1917. They were trailed through Honduras and Guatemala into Old Mexico and were captured in El Paso, Texas, in October, 1919, while visiting their mother and turned over to military authorities at Fort Sam Houston. Later they were surrendered to the civil courts and placed under bond for their appearance for trial here.

PASTOR OF BAPTIST CHURCH IN OKLA., IN BAD WITH MEMBERS

By Associated Press.

DRUMRIGHT, Okla., Dec 1.—Charging that R. W. Lackey, pastor of the First Baptist church here was using his church for political purposes in fighting the city administration, nineteen members of the church tendered their resignation at a meeting tonight.

Lackey is said to be the leading light of a political organization known as the "overalls and hickory shirt brigade," whose announced purpose is said to be the overthrow of the city administration.

Meetings of the organization, church members charge, are held regularly in the church and it was to this that they objected.

YOUTH LOSES FOOT UNDER TRAIN WHEELS

Declares Brakeman Kicked Him Off Freight Train Because He Could Not Pay Dollar for Ride.

Clinging tenaciously to the foot he had lost several hours before beneath the wheels of a freight train on the Fort Worth and Denver railroad about 9 miles south of Henrietta, John Tricarigo, an Italian youth, about 18 years of age, was found Thursday morning by T. R. Radford and Jeff Ward of this city.

According to Mr. Radford, when found, the youth was in the public road, a trail of blood showing how he had dragged his wounded body from the rails out of the railway right of way and up a steep embankment. The flesh and skin was drawn back toward the knee leaving a long stretch of the bone exposed, Mr. Radford said, and the youth weak and sick still clung to his maimed amputated member.

"A brakie kicked me off the train because I couldn't give him a dollar for a ride to Fort Worth," Mr. Radford quoted the wounded boy as having explained his plight. This was said to have happened about 12:30 o'clock and the boy was found about 6 o'clock.

A member of the Texas rangers drove up directly, according to Ward and took the case in hand. The boy was brought to Wichita Falls by Messrs. Ward and Radford. They were met at the city limits by an ambulance from the Merkle-Lann Undertaking establishment, in which the injured youth was transported to the Call Field hospital.

According to Radford, Tricarigo said that he and several other men were riding the train together and that a brakeman approached them saying that they would have to pay him ma dollar each for their ride. Tricarigo had only 20 cents, which he offered the brakeman, who refused it. The youth declares that he was then forced from the train while it was moving at a rapid rate down an incline.

The injured boy gave his home to be 107 Sullivan street, New York City. He told Radford and Ward that his mother lived at this address and that his father is dead.

According to physicians the bone was entirely severed and the left foot hanging by skin when the boy reached the hospital. The leg was amputated about six inches below the left knee and at a late hour Thursday his condition pronounced as good as could be expected with every indication pointing to a rapid recovery, largely because of the youth and strength of the victim.

Wichita Is County of Litigants Filing of Over 3,000 Suits in Year Shows; Is Gain Over 1920

Wichita is a county of litigants. Its residents sue and are sued in numbers that appear appalling when taken in the aggregate. Furthermore, the number which find their way to the several courts of the county is increasing.

The fiscal year of the county ended Thursday and records at the office of District Clerk Kerr showed that a total of 2,344 civil suits were filed during the twelve month period in the three local district courts—30th, 78th and 89th districts.

The total is an increase of 219 over the previous year generally considered the banner year in local legal business. The total for 1920 was 2,125. The total for 1914 was 423.

In the county court at law a coincidence arose from comparative figures. A total of 808 civil suits were filed during the year ending December 1, 1921 and exactly the same number was filed for the previous year.

According to district judges although there were more suits filed in the last year than during the previous year they are not of so much importance involving comparatively small sums of money. In 1920 there were a large number of suits filed involving property whose worth was determined in the hundred of thousands of dollars.

As to the comparison of Wichita and other counties in the state in regard to the number of suits filed local attorneys disagree. Some state that the number of suits filed per capita of population is probably larger than any other county in the state.

Others cite certain counties where every resident it is said is being sued for the possession of his property and in turn is suing others to gain possession of real estate which they claim. The large amount of litigation arises from disputes as to surveys.

MISLEADING LADY TO BE PLAYED IN MATINEE SATURDAY

Tomorrow there will be a bargain children's matinee at the Wichita theater when Gene Lewis-Olga Worth and their company will offer the big comedy success, "The Misleading Lady" which has been making such a big hit all this week. "The Misleading Lady" is without a doubt one of the best plays of the season and the house should be packed at all remaining performances.

Next Week, "Kick In"

Chick Hewes has been a criminal but has reformed and married "Molly." A valuable necklace is stolen and the thief's sweetheart, finding him wounded, get Chick to hide him in the attic of his home where he dies. The body is disposed of but the necklace is found. Chick and Molly decide to tell the truth and go to the district attorney. He refuses to believe them and both of them face the probability of being sent "up the river."

The clever manner in which this situation is solved furnishes the play of "Kick In" which Gene Lewis-Olga Worth and their players will offer at the Wichita theater all next week starting with the performance Monday evening. The usual matinees will be given on both Wednesday and Saturday.

OIL PERMITS LONG RUNS ON KATY LINES

The M., K. & T. railroad claims to have the best record for long distance passenger locomotive performance of any road in the Southwest or in the United States, proven by the oil-burning engines of the Pacific type, 235 tons, which make regular runs between San Antonio and Parsons, Kansas, a distance of 679 miles, without a change of engines, according to information received here by H. G. Smith, division freight and passenger agent.

That such a record can be maintained, Mr. Smith says, is due to the fact that the locomotives in this service are equipped to carry four thousand gallons of fuel oil and take fuel along the route only once.

The M., K. & T. began using the heavy type of passenger locomotives in 1915. Since that time they have proven so satisfactory they are purchased 10 additional equipped to burn oil and with the latest improvements. These are now in passenger service between San Antonio and Kansas City.

The confidence of the Katy in these heavy type oil-burning locomotives are so great, Mr. Smith says, that when it is deemed advisable the entire distance between San Antonio and Kansas City, 816 miles, is made without change. Usually however, he states, the engines are changed Denison, dividing the distance about equally.

TWO WEEKS ENDS THIS ROMANCE

Romance ended at the end of two weeks in the case of Frank H. and Millie Dodson, both residents of this city, according to the divorce suit of the latter filed Friday in the 30th district court.

At the end of the two weeks the groom "broke a chair over her," severely beat her and at the same time called her "vile and indecent names," this petition says.

The Dodsons, both of whom have a wide acquaintanceship in the city, were married October 20. The first disagreement indicated above occurred on November 3 at the plaintiff's rooming house 721 1-2 Indiana street according to the petition.

On November 25 the husband became intoxicated according to the petition and beat the plaintiff so that she is afraid to go home. In addition to his cave man attributes Dodson, according to the petition, is jealous "every time he sees any men folks around the rooming house."

Judge H. F. Weldon granted an injunction restraining the defendant from interfering with his wife's actions pending trial of the suit.

Burkburnett Sues To Get Sunday Fines

Alleging that F. O. Wilke and D. D. Heard, proprietors of the Liberty theater, failed to carry out their agreement in regard to the payment of fines for opening their theater on Sunday the City of Burkburnett brought suit Thursday in the county court at law against the two men for $480.

According to the plaintiff's petition the city on August 1, entered into an agreement with the two men whereby they would pay the city $580 for fines and complaints filed against them. According to the petition the theater proprietors have only paid $100 to the city and the balance is now sued for.

Excursions will soon be over to South Texas. It sells itself now. Seeing is believing. Come in and talk it over with us. M. T. Killion, Suite 8, Ward Bldg., Phone 5698.—Adv.

SURELY COLONEL JONES IS MISTAKEN.

(George M. Bailey in the Houston Post.)

Colonel T. N. Jones of Tyler, addressing the State Teachers' Association a day or two ago, declared that big financial and business interests of Texas are endeavoring to keep the children of Texas from securing better educational advantages.

Unfortunately, the reports of the address were not complete enough to inform us with respect to the proof Colonel Jones submitted in substantiation of this serious charge, if, indeed, he submitted any proof.

Until such proof is in its possession, The Post will not be able to accept Colonel Jones' statement as generally accurate. He surely must have had in view a few individual cases of opposition to education on the part of large financial or business interests.

If, it seems to The Post, such efforts are being made, the fact would be apparent in the counties where the larger financial and business interests are centered, and where their influence is necessarily most potent.

Where is public education best supported in Texas? Surely the answer must be in counties like Harris, Dallas, Tarrant, Bexar, El Paso, Jefferson and Galveston. And it happens these are the counties which domicile big business to a greater extent than elsewhere. These seven counties contain more than one-fourth the taxable wealth of the State.

The Post has never heard of large financial or business interests in Harris county opposing any measure to promote public education.

The Post's vigilance has been lax if such opposition has manifested itself in the other six counties mentioned, for it certainly has never heard of it.

Moreover, these counties not only have to pay into the State school fund more than they draw out—thousands more, in fact—but they pay the heaviest local taxes for schools paid in the State of Texas.

If Colonel Jones would go to the trouble to find out where the lack of interest is, we believe he would find it in rural counties, many of which draw from the State school fund many more dollars than they pay in State ad valorem, State school and Confederate pension taxes combined.

The Post regrets this is true, but the facts speak for themselves. The Post has never failed to support a measure designed to promote the education of the children of Texas. Every constitutional amendment, every legislative proposal, every local tax or bond issue has received its active support.

And not once does The Post recall in its long advocacy of the cause of education that the larger business interests of the State have taken issue with it.

No doubt the financiers and business men have their faults, perhaps at times they support measures out of selfish considerations that may not be of general benefit, but if they have ever shown an unfriendly attitude toward the children of Texas The Post is not aware of it.

Those who have carried on the fight in behalf of educational progress in Texas, and who are carrying on the fight now, know where they must make their campaign. Unfortunately, the greatest opposition they encounter is among the very people who need schools most.

Surely, Colonel Jones' charge does not coincide with the declaration of Dr. Prosser of Minnesota who, addressing the same association, declared that "the farmers are loth to vote sufficient taxes to give their children the education which will permit them to raise their social and economic status."

Colonel Jones is a faithful and indefatigable friend of education in Texas, but The Post is sure that he has erred in his diagnosis of the difficulties which the cause of popular education is encountering in Texas.

Uncompromising opposition to the teachings of Darwinian evolution, the substitution of social service for regeneration, rationalism and destructive criticism and a strong affirmation of belief in the divine inspiration and integrity of the Holy Scripture were declared in the unanimous adoption of a report presented to the pastors and laymen conference of the Baptist churches at Dallas. There was no debate. Texas Baptists refuse to accept the belief that the first forebear of man was a monkey.

Great Britain and France and Italy and the United States insist that Japan shall get out of Shantung and surrender China to the Chinese. If so, Great Britain should get out of South Africa and Asia and Gibraltar and many other places; France should get out of South Africa and North Africa and Asia; Italy should get out of Africa; Belgium should get out of the Congo country. Now, why pick on the Jap. If he must surrender his territorial loot, why not one law for all—for the occidentalist as well as the orientalist.

Bonham has a Republican postmaster—M. A. Taylor. He succeeded R. S. Rodgers, Democrat. "To the victors belong the spoils." When the Democrats come back four years hence, then hungry followers of the grand old party of Jefferson, Jackson and Wilson should be given the jobs. Democratic office holders have been fattening on rich forage for eight years. This is the holiday season and why shouldn't the lean and lank and ravenous Republicans be given something in their stockings? When the Democrats come back, all mugwumps will be ousted without delay. CHATTERER DECIDES TO LIVE

At first Chatterer the Red Squirrel decided that he had rather die than live in a prison, no matter how nice that prison might be. It was a very foolish thing to do, but he made up his mind that he just wouldn't eat. He wouldn't touch that nice yellow corn Farmer Brown's boy had put in his prison for him. He would starve himself to death. So when he found that there was no way to get out of his prison he curled up in the little hollow stump where no one could see him and made up his mind that he would stay there until he died. Life wasn't worth living if he has got to spend all the rest of his days in a prison. He wouldn't even make himself comfortable. There was a little heap of nice shavings and bits of rag for him to make a nice comfortable bed of, but he didn't touch them. No, sir, he just tried to make himself miserable.

Not once that long day did he poke so much as the tip of his nose out of his little round doorway. Ever so many times Farmer Brown's boy came to see him, but Chatterer didn't make a sound. At last night came and the woodshed where his prison was grew dark and darker and very still. Now, it was about this time that Chatterer's stomach began to make itself felt. Chatterer tried not to notice it, but his stomach would be noticed, and Chatterer couldn't help himself. His stomach was empty and it kept telling him so.

"I'm going to starve to death," said Chatterer to himself over and over.

"I'm empty and there is plenty of food to fill me up if you'll only stop being silly," whispered his stomach.

The more Chatterer tried not to think of how good somthing to eat would taste the more he did think of it. It made him restless and uneasy. He twisted and squirmed and turned. At last he decided that he would have one more look to see if he couldn't find some way to get out of his prison. He poked his head out of the little round doorway. All was still and dark. He listened, but not a sound could be heard. Then he softly crept out and hurriedly examined all the inside of his prison once more. It was of no use! There wasn't a single place where he could use his sharp teeth.

"There's that little pile of corn waiting for me," whispered his stomach.

"I'll never touch it!" said Chatterer, fiercely.

Just then he hit something with his foot and it rolled. He picked it up and then put it down again. It was a nut, a plump hickory nut. Two or three times he picked it up and put it down, and each time it was harder than before to put it down.

"I—I—I'd like to taste one more nut before I starve to death," muttered Chatterer, and almost without knowing it he began to gnaw the hard shell. When that nut was finished he found another, and when that was gone still another. Then he just had to taste a gran of corn. The first thing Chatterer knew the nuts and corn were all gone and his stomach was full. Somehow he felt ever so much better. He didn't feel like starving to death.

"I—I believe I'll wait a bit and see what happens," said he to himself. "And while I'm waiting I might as well be comfortable."

With that he began to carry the shavings and rags into the hollow stump and soon had as comfortable a bed as ever he had slept on. Chatterer had decided to live.

THE ARMY GIRLS

By DR. FRANK CRANE

(Copyright, 1921, by Frank Crane.)

There is a little section of the American army that occupies the German territory in Coblenz and roundabout. I have been through this region and seen the soldiers at their work and play and tried to get some idea of what America is doing over here.

One point in this article I wish to mention.

And that is, that about the best thing that I have seen in our army of occupation is the girl.

Under the direction of the Y. M. C. A. there are about fifty or sixty girls who are stationed here.

Their business is to assist in looking after the clubrooms, reading rooms and canteens.

They are dressed in an appropriate uniform, so that every one knows what they stand for and every one respects them.

In the room where the boys gather to play billiards or cards, or to loaf and read, there is always one or more of these girls.

And they do more toward toning up the soldiers and keeping the spirit of the army to the proper level of decency and self-respect than any other single influence.

In a room where one of these fine, frank-faced, trim and attractive girls is sitting no soldier is going to get drunk or profane or otherwise slop into beastliness.

A nice, clean, upstanding American girl does more for the soldier in his hours of recreation by her very presence than could be done by any code official.

It is in his hours of relaxation that the soldier is in danger of unlearning all the discipline he gets in his hours of training and drill. And it is here that the girl counts.

What the presence of self-respecting young women has done to elevate the tone of the business offices in the United States is being done by these girls in the army.

It is peculiarly an American idea; that is to say, the programme of having the sports and recreation of the soldier taken care of by the Y. M. C. A. organization.

It is the presence of these girls here that is an amazing thing to the army officials of other nations.

At the first mention of the idea they are entirely incredulous. But when they come and see how the plan works their incredulity is turned to amazed conviction.

These girls are above all reproach. There never has been any whisper against them, and their influence is tremendous.

They bring with them a breath of normal and wholesome home life, which the men need.

Whenever a number of men are herded together without the presence of refined womanhood there is a strong tendency to degenerate.

There have always been women around armies, but in the past and in other armies it has usually been the lowest type of women, and their effect has been very seriously to interefere with efficiency.

But these are a wholly different sort of camp followers. And their influence is such that the officials of the army appreciate them most highly, and from the general commanding down to the lowest private they are looked upon with affectionate esteem.

On the whole, the brightest spot I have seen in army life is the little constellation of girls, who, under the guidance of the Y. M. C. A. are doing their great part in making the American soldier the finest soldier in the world.

Rippling Rhymes

THE PEDDLER

The peddler greets me at my door, and he has things to sell, some dope to stain a kitchen floor a patent dinner bell; but I can buy them at the store from J. Augustus Snell. The peddler has no interests here, he doesn't pay the freight; he doesn't chip in every year to keep the tax list straight; and so I say, "Please disappear," and shoo him from my gate. It may be he sells better junk than Snell does at the store; but if I spend with him a plunk, I'll never see him more, and if I find his goods are punk, 'twill be no use to roar. But if at J. Augustus Snell's I buy a quilting frame, and find it isn't wearing bells, its workmanship to blame, I seek that merchant where he dwells, and climb upon his frame. And he'll produce another frame, or else refund the cash; he can't afford to win a fame for selling worthless trash; it's up to him to play the game or see his business smash. And J. Augustus nobly stacks when boosting schemes abound, and J. Augustus pays his tax without a doleful sound, and joins the boys who sprain their backs to make the wheels go round. The peddlers to our village trek and then they disappear, and little, little do they reck what problems we may fear; but J. Augustus is on deck all through the fateful year.—Copyright by George Matthew Adams.

The Once Over

By H. I. PHILLIPS

THE CHEMICAL UNION

If you are not getting along very happily with the wife it is probably due to a chemical error. Consult your chemist at once.

Scientists have been investigating matrimonial disturbances, and have reached a conclusion that much of the unhappiness is due to the fact oxygen types marry oxygen types, whereas they should marry nitrogen types, and vice versa.

It seems there is the oxygen person and the nitrogen person. The oxygen is the full-blooded, red-faced party, full of vigor, vim, enthusiasm, and action. Oxygen types make great insurance agents, romantic actors, efficiency school directors, and roller skaters. The nitrogen is the calm, cool, and easy-going person with the I-must-see-a-adoctor-before-another-day-passes attitude. Nitrogen types are predominate among office boys, department store saleshadies, telephone girls, oyster openers, and pastry cooks.

Matrimonial happiness is generally attained when the oxygen man weds the nitrogen woman. Then a happy medium is struck. Lou Tellegen and Geraldine Farrar went upon the rocks matrimonially because they were a couple of oxygens, according to the scientists.

It seems Lou never thought to ask Geraldine how she stood from a chemical standpoint, and Geraldine forgot to ask Lou a word about his oxygen. And the terrible truth is that thousands of young men and women are walking to the altar every day in the same sort of ignorance.

"Dearest, I have one question to ask you before we go any further, every girl should say to her fiance.

"What is it?"

"Are you an axygen or a nitrogen man?"

"A what?"

"Are you an oxygen man..... have you plenty of oxygen or do you run more to nitrogen?"

"To be very frank, sweetheart, I run more to Gordon gin," the honest but confused man should reply. This might satisfy her, but if not she could continue the cross-examination until she got the correct answer. After which:

"Ah, then we are suited.....we are chemically mated!"

A little lyric—something along this line: "You be my oxygen husband and I'll be your nitrogen bride" would then be in order.

There's a great idea for a play behind this oxygen-nitrogen matter. A wonderful third act could be written in which the husband leaves the wife after this fashion:

Husband (laboring under great emotion): It's no use, ... I am going to leave you."

Wife (in amazement): Leave me! What have I done? What have I done?

Husband: It is for the best..... I go!

Wife (grabbing him and clinging to his knees after the style of a Yale tackle): "Tell me.....what is the matter? ..... Why are you deserting me? Have I not tried to be a good wife to you?

Husband: Yes.

Wife: Have I not kept a good home for you?

Husband: Yes.

Wife: Have I not tried to please you in every way?

Husband: Yes.

Wife: Then why are you forsaking me?

Husband (dramatically): You are too full of oxygen.

(He strides out. The wife shrieks and falls in a faint as the chemically prepared curtain is dropped by two nitrogenious stage hands.)

HOME NURSING and HEALTH HINTS

By M. JESSIE LEITCH

WILL-POWER VS. GASTRONOMY

The woman who made a point of being argumentative sat down rather heavily.

She had just eaten an enormous supper. Not that she wanted it in the least. And not that she was hungry. Would you believe it, she hadn't known what it was to be really hungry for, well—not for years.

And the woman, whose name was Mrs. Prescott, Jr., a very important personage indeed, ate nuts and raisins aimlessly as she glanced over the evening paper. She just glanced over it, prefrring to deal in headlines only as those who attempted to talk to her knew to their sorrow.

Her family, gathered under the evening lamp, indulged in the usual family patter.

The Mystery of the Pipe

Some one had moved Mr. Prescott's pipe from the rack. He would thank whoever had touched it to leave it alone in future.

The members of the family who smoked—three tall sons—declared their ignorance of the pipe mystery. The pipe was discovered in Mr. Prescott's smoking jacket, where he had left it.

Molly wanted to go to the Athletic Club dance, but she hadn't a rag to wear. Her slippers were danced right through the sole.

"Poor Flora McFlimsy hasn't a thing to wear," chanted Bill, rushing to the big chair nearest the fire, to Molly's intense disgust and disappointment.

And at this trying moment, with a great creaking of whalebone and a tinkling jet, Mrs. Prescott looked up from the paper and said she had never heard of such a thing.

News Astonishes Mrs. Prescott

"There are women in New York," she said, "who have systematically undertaken to reduce their weight. And one of them lost twenty pounds in two weeks. I don't believe a word of it."

"It sounds reasonable," said the man of the house. "These people are acting under reliable authority. They are studying food values, as I understand it, and eating less than they need, instead of eating three times as much as they need, as so many people do."

"Exercise, strenuous exercise that stirs the sluggish circulation to renewed activity, tones up the body and fills one with energy. Discovering that instead of eating for pleasure they eat for profit, and regain their own self-respect, as well as the knowledge that they have won out through will power—well—it sounds reasonable."

"But do you mean to tell me that a person can live, normally, keeping up social and home duties, and starve at the same time?" said the woman who simply had to argue.

Mother Makes Concessions

"Now, mother! You know very well that one of the crimes of civilization is overeating. Any one can fast for a day—two days, three days, if they want to—without being any the worse for it. By drinking lots of water they can carry on. I won't say it's a good thing to start reducing that way, but it's a test of will power. And, frequently, a benefit. I know soldiers who fought a week on less food than we sat down to tonight at our average evening meal."

Tom, who had been in the Argonne, spoke hotly.

His mother, eating fudge, from sheer force of habit, looked at a piece of candy, then suddenly put it in the waste-paper basket, untouched.

"If the soldiers did it, we should be able to do it. And it may be that there is something in balancing one's foods according to one's occupation," she conceded, thoughtfully.

The Way Out

By H. ADDINGTON BRUCE

Author of "The Riddle of Personality," "Self-Development," Etc.
(Copyright, 1921, by The Associated Newspapers.)

Over in England Harold Begbie has been interviewing business men regarding the industrial depression and social unrest prevailing in that country. From more than one captain of industry he received an emphatic declaration of belief that at the root of all the economic trouble is failure to sense moral values.

One business leader—described by Mr. Begbie as a "director of real ability and most successful conciliator in labor disputes"—gave his views in careful detail. They so merit attentive consideration on this side of the Atlantic that I herewith present the gist of what he said:

"We are face to face with a most terrible thing. How shall I put it? We are face to face, at a time of searching trial, with a materialized humanity.

"The problem of our industrial future is being debated and is being decided by men who acknowledge no higher authority than man's, and, who do not feel within themselves any spiritual responsibility. We miss something in the faces of those with whom we are discussing nothing less than the fortunes of civilization. We miss the human soul.

"Capital and labor are men, not terms, and the atmosphere in which they meet is too often that of the jungle. It is as if we were animals fighting together.

"And the reason is that an unblushing and brutalizing materialism pervades the nation. On every side we see reckless ostentation and unashamed selfishness—selfishness in a word perishing for want of unselfishness. Men have put spirituality, have put religion, out of their lives. Yet religion is the one thing that can save us.

"To put it shortly, we can't get on without the spirit of God. Economics, without that spirit, is the science of the devil. But let there be a great turning of the national heart toward God, and, in the light of the Christian revelation, how simple would economics appear!

"I am not speaking as a sentimentalist. I am speaking simply and solely as a business man. Religion is a practical thing. I am convinced that without it we are bound to end in a crash."

Ask yourself, as employer or as employe, what your own dominant motive is today. Ask yourself whether the accusation of materialism hits home to you personally. Ask yourself how much the things of the spirit really count with you.

Then ask yourself, too, if it is not, after all, true that the one sure way out of the stress and turmoil of today is more general acceptance of, and action in accordance with, the Golden Rule.

Religion is no mere theory. It is one of the things, the most important of the things, that men must live by, if they would live harmoniously with one another and gain at the same time the maximum satisfaction from life. Al human history testifies to this.

The Daily Story

THE BIG HOUSE

Copyright, 1021, by W. Werner

Ever since the brick house has been put on the market Edna had been possessed by the desire to buy it. The four-room bung low that had been the pinnacle of her hopes years before now lost its attraction for her. The thought of the stately brick mansion, set far back from the street in the spacious grounds, the tall iron fence that hid the lawns from the casual glances of passers-by, even the gloomy shadows cast by the thick branches of sad-looking pine trees absorbed her and gave her consuming desire of ownership.

"But Edna, there is a big mortgage on it and we'd find the $70 payment each month a tug after living in our own cozy home rent free. The furniture for four rooms would be laughable in that house of three stories. We would have to use all our savings to buy furniture and carpets. None of the floors are hardwood and the rugs that are so attractive on our polished floors would serve merely as centerpieces in those vast rooms. The floors would have to be painted all over or self-color carpets put down where we used our rugs. Then the grounds require a great deal of care. Old Mr. Barnes kept a man just to attend to the grounds and flowers and his wife had two women servants. It would be silly for us to live in a place like that."

"Will," Edna looked at her husband solemnly. "I want that house. I've helped you save, and I shan't be happy unless I can have it. This little place has grown stiffling to me. The neighbors run in across our tiny yard, and I never glance out without some one waving in to me, or, perhaps, running in without even knocking at the door. There I shall keep the great gates closed, and people will feel that we are class. They won't step in to borrow a cup of flour in the morning while they are in their work dresses. Instead they will come to our entertainments wearing their best and feeling that we have a distinct place in the community. We've lived here all our lives, and they don't realize that we are just as swell as the Briggs. They came from the city, and put on airs over the rest of us."

"I would rather have people like us than to feel that we were putting on airs," said Will, doggedly. "When I had typhoid fever the neighbors brought in all our food, cooked, ready to eat, because you were too worn out taking care of me to bother to eat sufficiently. Suppose we had had a great iron fence around our lawn, with closed gates. Old Miss Pansy would hardly have been able to open them and tread her way through a quarter of a mile of pine trees when she brought in a cup of hot beef tea every two hours. I believe folks like one better in the middle walks of life. I like to be right down among my friends. Why, Edna, if you are ill in the night when I happen to be away you can just call out of your bedroom window, and the Meadows will run right across the grass. They did so when Dot had the croup."

"I know, but we could entertain if we had more room. I could give garden parties and have Chinese lanterns strung through the trees. You can save the selling commission by taking the house on account of being in the real estate business, and I think you ought to get it for me. We can rent the bungalow and that money will apply on the monthly payments."

"If the house had been a bargain it would have been snapped up long ago," argued Will. "Hardly any one has looked at it because it is known to be terribly out of repair. Three thousand dollars would hardly put it in good condition and then it wouldn't be up to date, with polished floors and nice plumbing. The roof leaks and the cement walks are broken and the cistern—."

"I don't care. I want it worse than I ever wanted anything, Will." Edna's eyes held a glassy determination and her cheeks were flushed. "If we can't afford the payments and interest I'll take in two or three teachers to board with us."

"All right"—Will gave in weakly, for he hated to argue—"there is a man in Chicago who is coming to look at it next week. He paid $10 for an option, so he can have it if it looks good to him. If he don't take it I will. Now, are you satisfied?"

Edna was, and she spent the rest of the afternoon writing a notice for the weekly paper, saying that Will Forest expected to buy the old Barnes house, and that they would welcome their many friends at a house-warming party the following month.

"But Edna," protested Will when he read the notice in the paper, "I told you that the Chicago man held an option and he has the first chance at it."

"I feel that he won't take it," said Edna confidently, her face wreathed in smiles. "I guess the Briggs will see that we can entertain as well as they can."

"You see your mistake too late," murmured Will, looking around the snug home, where during their years of occupancy they had found the best corner for each chair, and where one could talk comfortably through the four rooms without shouting. "You'll hate the stairs and the many rooms to be kept clean. The taxes are high, and the insurance will be treble."

"Goin' to keep boarders in the big Barnes house, Edna?" asked old Miss Pansy, entering the side door.

"No. I want to have a big place so I can entertain my friends," said Edna with what she fancied to be an unhospitable manner, but which impressed the old lady as chillingly formal. "I feel that we owe something to the community, and we wish to discharge our debts." Edna had read this sentence in a book, and she repeated it word for word.

"Oh," quavered old Pansy, with an odd look in her aged face. "Ye don't owe me anything, and I don't suppose I'll get to see you often, because the house is set so far back in the yard. Those pine trees look gloomy."

"She seemed to be hurt," said Will, uncomfortably.

During the next few days Edna began to feel lonely and somehow out of things. The neighbors, called by Edna's new manner, grew distant, and she was not troubled by informal callers.

Edna was measuring the rooms for the carpets, taking no joy in her solitary task, when Will appeared with the man from Chicago, who had brought his wife.

"No," said the man, decisively, "this old place wouldn't do at all. Too gloomy and set apart. I want a sunshiny little place right among the neighbors. That's why we're moving into a country town. We want to mingle and be regular folks. If you have a nice little cottage with modern improvements that doesn't cost a mint I shall be interested. This old place is just a place to spend money upon. It would take a large income to keep it up, and would be lonely for the wife when I'm away on my trips. I passed a charming bungalow set among a grove of apple trees. The beds of flaming nasturtiums were the prettiest I've seen for years, the colors were massed."

"Oh," interrupted Will. "That is our house. My wife thinks it too small now, and I may sell it."

"How much?" queried the prospective purchaser, eagerly. "It is exactly what we want. All on one floor and modern."

"It is—"

"Not for sale," cried Edna, decisively, all the unrest of the past days slipping magically from her shoulders. The old delight in the charming little home returned amazingly, but strongly. She crumpled up the card with the carpet measurements and tossed it out under the pine trees, and she knew that the spell cast by the brick house dissolved.

Will looked down the street at the bungalow contentedly. "All right," he said slowly. "I'll show you another house that's for sale."

Watching the Parade

By JOHN PILGRIM

That was a most inspiring trumpet call of the poet's when he wrote that:

"I am the Master of my fate—
I am the Captain of my soul—"

But sometimes it seems to me that he got just a little off the key. He—the poet—may have been the individual captain and master of his own particular fate and soul, but most of the rest of us are not quite so lucky. We have to put up with the hand that Fortune deals us, and the most we can do is to try to better it in the draw. This isn't pessimism. It's just common sense.

Which is written with the case of young John Keyes in mind. When I first knew him he was a newspaper photographer with aspirations to become a newspaper reporter. He was a good photographer—a corking good photographer—one of the sort of photographers that editors brag over. Did that satisfy him? It assuredly did not. He was goin to be Captain and Master, as per the poet plan. He knew he could write, he said.

"I think you're spoiling a good photographer," said the various city editors to whom he confided this ambition, "but because you are a wonder in your way we'll let you try."

As a reporter he always blew up at the end of the first month during the first two years. But he went on being Captain and Master. He worked on twenty odd newspapers in that period. When he was fired as reporter he used to catch on as photographer until at last that became difficult. The word was passed that as soon as he developed a good negative he'd come bursting into the city room with a desire to become the star news-hound of the outfit. Photographers who have wabbles in their brains are not desired anywhere.

But he never quit. Until finally he went completely, utterly, hungrily broke, and had to take a job at a dime beanery waiting on lumber persons. The Captain and Master business had played completely out. Now he owns a string of doughnut shops and white-tiled one-armed restaurants, and could, if he wanted to, buy a newspaper. But he doesn't want to. He prefers to be Captain and Master of the doughnut foundry.

The moral seems to be that if you have stick-to-itiveness you will be successful. But not always in the way that you first want to be.

Fashions for Americans

Strapped footgear has had a tremendous vogue during the past year, and there seems no indication of a decrease in the popularity of shoes that fasten with straps rather than with laces. The fancy has even extended to spats or overgaiters, as one of the figures in the group illustration help to prove.

Next below the strapped "spat" is shown a smart shoe with cut-out sides and a front section cut to simulate straps, but having only the one fastening at the top.

The next slipper is a dainty model combining black satin and cloth of silver and at the bottom of the group is shown a smart evening slipper of black satin decorated at one side with a bead or metal tassel. A slipper ornament consisting of a curved narrow buckle, to which it attached a fringe of metal or crystal beads, is also shown.

The fancy for strapped shoes covers the whole range of footgear, from the sturdiest of sports models to the lightest and daintiest of slippers for evening or boudoir wear.

Among the novelties of the season is the evening slipper entirely covered with feathers in several shades. Peacock shades are featured and also many vivid red and yellow tones. Usually the slipper is finished with a band of plain velvet at the edge and sometimes a jewelled buckle.

Black velvet slippers are considered very smart, sometimes with high gathered tongues of self fabric caught with jewelled buckles.

Sandals and strap slippers in rich metals and silk brocades are smart, and they had to be had in such a wide range of colors that it is possible for a woman to match practically any evening gown.

CHAPTER XIV

Ruth had noticed the close regard Robert Turnbull had paid her for a few days and was troubled.

"It is as if something were wrong with me—my appearance," she communed. "I wonder——" Just at this point Turnbull interrupted her musings, saying:

"I would like to say something to you, Miss Browning, yet I scarcely dare to." He smiled encouragingly. "Don't look worried, it has nothing to do with your work—that is more than satisfactory."

Ruth relaxed. Nothing mattered except her position. She had been frightened for a moment. What would they all do if she lost it? What would Betty do?

"I am sure you can say anything you want to, Mr. Turnbull."

"Will you agree to take what I say as I mean it—not feel hurt?"

"Surely," Ruth answered wonderingly.

"What do you do with your salary, Miss Browning?"

The question came with such surprise to Ruth as to make her speechless for a moment. Then she stammered:

"Why—what everyone does, I guess—spend it."

"A clever answer, but not the truth. You do not spend it."

"Why do you ask me, Mr. Turnbull?" Ruth desperately wished to keep her affairs, her family's to herself.

"Because you dress so badly, because you eat a cold sandwich for luncheon, because you need shoes. Surely with thirty-five dollars a week you should be able to make a good appearance. When you came to us you will recall that I complimented you. Your sensible, good-looking office clothes pleased me. You are still wearing the same clothes—very much the worse for wear. Why?"

"Must I answer that?"

"I wish you would. If we are not paying you enough to dress decently something must be done to remedy the fault. It seems to me that we are. You are very young and thirty-five dollars a week is fair pay."

Ruth considered. She saw that she must tell something. It must be as little as possible, and without exposing family affairs. Ruth Browning was not the sort who takes the public into her confidence in such ways, even though that public may be her employer.

"We own our home, Mr. Turnbull, but there is a mortgage on it. I helped to keep up the interest. I will get some new things at once."

"I mistrusted something like that. How many in your family, Miss Browning?"

"Six at home. My brother was wounded and gassed. We think he will soon be able to work."

"He was overseas?"

"Three years."

"Badly hurt?"

"Very. In a hospital in France for months. But the gassing was the worst."

"I see. And your father. What does he do?"

The dreaded question at last.

"For years father was in the railroad offices. When they laid off so many men because they had to economize father was laid off too."

She would tell no more than she must.

"How long ago was that?"

"About a month after I came here."

"That's almost a year ago."

"Yes."

Robert Turnbull asked no more questions. He knew.

"It's a shame—a blooming shame!" he said when he was alone. "That girl the mainstay of a family of six. I know it as well as if she had told me. She hated to give up. Poor child! Ambitious as the devil, too. Has made good, guess she had to. Probably an irresponsible lot. She the odd chicken among them." Turnbull had sized them up more correctly than he dreamed.

"What shall I do? I must get something decent to wear—now." Ruth said as she rode home that afternoon, her mind entirely occupied with what Mr. Turnbull had said.

"Mother, I shall lose my position unless I have some decent waists and shoes." Ruth had been unable to reach a conclusion. An unusual word of pity because of her weary look caused the sudden burst of confidence. She was but a child after all.

"What do you mean, Ruth?"

"Just what I say. Mr. Turnbull spoke to me today, told me I looked shabby, I do! I have known it, but have seen no way to buy even a pair of shoes. He spoke of them, too." She looked dubiously at her feet.

"Don't stand it, Ruth! Leave him! If you are worth thirty-five dollars to him you are worth just as much to some one else."

"Oh, but I couldn't do that, mother. He has been so kind, and is going to help me make somthing of myself."

"Then don't talk to me. I can't buy you clothes and feed a family of six on what you give me. Let me have the thirty-five dollars and I'll get you fixed up."

Like many girls Ruth never had bought her own clothes. Mrs. Browning had always shopped for her, and even after Ruth had become a wage earner she had not dreamed of shopping for herself.

"But I can't mother! That mortgage interest must be paid."

THIN, FADED HAIR NEEDS "DANDERINE" TO THICKEN IT

35 cents buys a bottle of "Danderine." Within ten minutes after the first application you can not find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair. Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them, helping your hair to grow long, thick and luxuriant. Girls! Girls! Don't let your hair stay lifeless, colorless, thin, scraggy. A single application of delightful Danderine will double the beauty and radiance of your hair and make it look twice as abundant.

Calomel Good But Treacherous

Next Dose May Salivate, Shock Liver of Attack Your Bones.

You know what calomel is. It's mercury: quicksilver. Calomel is dangerous. It crashes into sour bile like dynamite, cramping and sickening you. Calomel attacks the bones and should never be put into your system.

If you feel bilious, headachy, constipated and all knocked out, just go to your druggist and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents which is a harmless vegetable substitute for dangerous calomel. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't start your liver and straighten you up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money.

Don't take calomel! It makes you sick the next day; it loses you a day's work. Dodson's Liver Tone straightens you right up and you feel great. No salts necessary. Give it to the children because it is perfectly harmless and can not salivate.

HARD PIMPLES DISFIGURED FACE

Itched and Burned Very Badly. Cuticura Healed.

"My face broke out in small, hard, pimples which festered and scaled over. They also broke out under my right arm and itched and burned very badly. Later the pimples grew larger and increased in number, and my face was badly disfigured.

"I tried different remedies without any relief. I saw Cuticura Soap and Ointment advertised and sent for a free sample which helped me. I purchased more and after using one cake of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment I was healed." (Signed) John T. Dowell, R. F. D. 12, Box 6, Lebanon, Tenn.

SHIPMENT OF TIES FIGURES IN CIVIL SUIT

The trial of the suit of Charles F. Noble against the Our Coal company of Fort Worth for $5,000 damages and the cancellation of $2,000 alleged to be due the defendants by the plaintiff opened Thursday afternoon in the 89th District court with jury before Judge P. A. Martin.

According to the plaintiff's petition the defendant agreed to furnish ties to be used in constructing a switch at the refinery of the plaintiff at Burkburnett. The plaintiff alleges that the defendant sent a grade of ties which could not be used and which caused a heavy loss from delay.

HEINIE GROH CERTAIN TO BE TRADED BY REDS; PROBABLY WILL LAND WITH CARDINALS

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Dec. 1.—It is now practically certain that Heine Groh will not be with the Reds next season. A big three-cornered deal is on, with the St. Louis and New York clubs as the other traders, and this deal is about as good as settled. The officials of the Cincinnati club are not ready as yet to give out the exact terms of the trade, but one part of it is assured, and that is that Groh will leave here and will probably land with the Cardinals.

It is considered likely that the Reds will get Third Baseman Milton Stock in the deal, as well as a fast outfielder and an experienced pitcher. The trade will be completed during the joint meeting of the two major leagues in New York this month, and the Red officials believe that it will materially strengthen the local club and put it in a position to fight for a higher position than sixth in the league race.

Heine is now in Cuba, playing a series of exhibition games, after which he will return to Florida, where he expects to spend the winter. He will probably never be seen in a Red uniform again.

There is also a possibility that Eddie Roush will be traded during the winter, although this has not been definitely determined, as has the deal for Groh. The crack center fielder has already communicated with the club and announced his intention of holding out for an even larger salary than that which he received last year, and several of the directors are considering the advisability of using him in a trade. They have stated officially that they will not send an emissary down to Oakland City to urge Roush to sign up, as they have done several times, and there is a strong feeling among them that the best thing that can be done is to trade Eddie to another club.

Roush, since joining the Reds in the middle of the season of 1916, has made few Southern trips with the club. He dislikes these journeys and has always maintained that he can keep in perfect physical condition on his farm in Indiana, where he leads an outdoor life all winter.

Roush is a man of independent character, who likes his home, and is not anxious to play ball. He owns and operates a prosperous farm and does not have to play ball to make a living. He would be comfortably fixed for life if he never stepped up to the plate again and never caught another fly ball in deep center field. He has always been on the level with his hold-outs. Unless he can secure a very high salary he really does not care about playing ball. So he has been a hard man to sign up, and the officials of the club are beginning to feel that it would be just as well to let some other club assume the task of getting him to report in the spring.

The passing of Heinie Groh from the Red roster calls to mind the big deal which brought him to the Cincinnati Club, which was by far the most useful trade ever made by that organization. It was back in the spring of 1913, when Joe Tinker was manager of the club, and it was due to Joe's acumen and good judgment of players that the trade was made.

The Reds were playing in Philadelphia about the middle of May in that year. They had not got a very good start in the race, and it was already evident that the team would need some strengthening if it was going to put up any kind of a battle. One evening a sport writer was sitting with Tinker in the lobby of their Philadelphia hotel, when Joe was called to the telephone. He disappeared in the booth and remained about 15 minutes. When he came out his face was wreathed in smiles, and he was about as happy as any manager of a second division ball club could possibly be.

"That was McGraw on the wire," he said. "I have pulled off a deal with him that I think will help us a lot. I have traded Pitcher Art Fromme, even up, for three Giant players, Leon Ames, Josh Devore and a little fellow named Groh, an infielder." Fromme left for New York the next day, and the three New York players reported to Manager Tinker at Philadelphia the following morning. McGraw had always had an idea that Fromme would be a great pitcher for him, especially on the home grounds, and it was his desire to secure the right-hander which enabled Tinker to negotiate this big trade.

As a matter of fact, Fromme was a big disappointment with the Giants, and was never much of a winner for McGraw. He did not last long in New York, but soon retired to the Coast league, where he was quite successful for several seasons.

The three players secured in the trade for Fromme all proved valuable. Leon Ames pitched a large number of creditable games and was finally used in an advantageous trade with St. Louis, where he remained for several seasons, and rounded out his major league career in good fashion. Josh Devore finished the season of 1913 with the Reds, and the next year was sold to the Philadelphia club for the round price of $5,000.

But, of course, it was Groh who was the big man in the big trade. Heinie had been with the Giants for parts of three seasons. He had been formed out to the Buffalo Club and had only recently been recalled when the trade with the Cincinnati Club was made. He was originally a shortstop, but had played second and third base as well. The wonder was that so clever a manager as McGraw had failed to recognize his native ability, and was willing to throw him in as ballast along with Ames and Devore in the deal with the Reds.

Tinker had heard a good deal about Groh and had seen him play a few games and was convinced he had the making of a real star. It was really Groh that Joe was after in the trade more than either of the older players. When Heinie joined the team he was at once sent to second base, and he made good right off the reel. He showed himself to be a natural fielder of high class, with a wonderful pair of hands and a very accurate throwing arm. His batting was right around the .300 mark from the start, as soon as he was given a chance to play regularly.

Heine played every game at second base for the Reds through the rest of that season and also through the following year. By that time he was recognized all over the league as a very classy man in his position. In the spring of 1915 the Reds were without a competent third baseman, and Charley Herzog, who was manager at the time, conceived the idea of shifting Groh over to the hot corner. The Reds were training at Alexandria, La., and it was evident that they were going to be weak at third base. Herzie went to Heine and asked him if he would be willing to shift his position.

This was a good deal to ask of a young player who had made a big reputation as a second baseman, but Heine was game enough to yield in Herzog's suggestion without a murmur. He did not hesitate a minute, but said he would play anywhere he was placed and do the best he could. So he was sent to third and he soon mastered the intricate points of play at that corner so thoroughly that even before the end of that season he was rated as the best third sacker in the league.

He has filled the place for the Reds for seven consecutive seasons, always fielding and hitting well. Last year, Heine had a dispute with the Red officials over salary and held out for two months before joining the team. This year he has made demands in the salary line which the directors refuse to meet and it is for this reason that a trade for him is being arranged and will undoubtedly be consummated within the next three weeks.

POOR FIGHTERS STARVE IN DEAR OLD NEW YAWK

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—Boxing matches in New York city still are drawing well, but the boxers are not receiving the swell purses handed them this year. In fact, many of the fighters are leaving the metropolis, seeking matches in the West as the big city is overcrowded with pugilistic talent and some of the boys are willing to again do business at the old-time figures.

Pat Walsh, Cincinnati middleweight, was in New York last week, in quest of a few bouts. He stated that a Western fighter has little or no chance of breaking in at Madison Square Garden.

"The purses are far from being the same as last year. The promoters are trying to get the boxers to sign at a much lower term. It is just a case of taking what they offer you or no fight. I received a proposition from Leo P. Flynn, who arranges the matches for Tex Rickard's Madison Square Garden arena, to meet Harry Greb, Pittsburgh lightheavyweight, but I hastily turned the match do n because the offer was so small considering the man that I was supposed to meet, that I did not even give it consideration," Walsh said.

The two boxing shows which Tex Rickard has held at Madison Square Garden recently drew $89,625 at the gate. The show at which Harry Greb and Charlie Weinert met in the main bout drew $43,424, while the entertainment at which Johnny Buff defeated Jack Sharkey, brought in $46,201 at the gate. Greb received $8,250.56 for his end, while Weinert got $6,108.92. Johnny Buff drew $14,630.32 for beating Sharkey and Sharkey got $5,486.37.

Plan Probe of Illinois' New Political Mess

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Dec. 1.—Illinois' newest political sensation—reports of alleged attempts to corrupt the grand jury which indicted Governor Small last July—probably will be laid before a future Sangamon county grand jury for investigation, States Attorney Mortimer said tonight.

William D. "Buck" Evans, member of the July grand jury, was accused today by C. H. Jenkins, director of public welfare, of offering to trade damaging information against the prosecution for a job under the Small administration.

Reports that Mortimer planned an investigation of alleged attempts at jury fixing were circulated. Jenkins and the governor said, by the governor's political foes as part of a plot to ruin Small.

Mortimer hurled back a reply in which he said he told the governor's attorneys three weeks ago of his information but that he would take no immediate action on it because he did not want to be in the attitude of prejudicing the governor's present situation.

That Mortimer will sift the Evans charges before a future grand jury in an effort to get to the bottom of all reports seemed certain tonight.

'TWAS BIG YEAR FOR JONES BROTHERS; WILL THEIR TEAMS MEET NEXT SEASON?

An interesting study of Howard Jones, Iowa coach, on the sidelines at a game and, inset, Tad Jones.

BY NORMAN E. BROWN.

Every football season has its quota of brothers who star on rival or the same teams at the leading colleges. This year the pair of brothers who ought to top that list are the Jones boys.

We speak of Tad, who gave Yale its best football team in years, and brother Howard, who coached Iowa to the Big Ten conference in the west. The work of these brothers attracted so much attention that there is some discussion as to the probability of the two men sending their teams against each other next season. Such a meeting is improbable, but it furnishes food for gossip, however.

Howard developed the greatest scoring machine in the west. The team, however, did not show the defensive strength that some of the weaker teams possessed. Tad produced a typical Tad machine, with the offensive and defensive strength well balanced. Yale ran up no large scores, but was beaten only once—by Harvard. And Harvard scored but one touchdown on Tad's team. Howard's team went undefeated through the season, defeating all its Big Ten opponents and other rivals—including the powerful Notre Dame eleven. The Indianians lost 10 to 7.

While, from a sentimental standpoint, a game between Iowa and Yale next year would be interesting it would not be fair to the brothers nor would it mean anything as far as deciding the relative greatness of the two coaches. In any other sport the game might be scheduled for financial reasons, but be it said to college football's credit, it has not been commercialized to that extent.

DANHEIM AND RIDER ATTEND MEETING TO FIX CAGE SCHEDULE

C. E. Danheim and S. H. Rider, of the Wichita Falls high school, went to Iowa Park last evening to meet with other high school directors of this district and arrange an interscholastic basketball schedule for the winter season. The district includes Wichita, Archer, Baylor, Knox, Montague, Throckmorton and Young counties. W. R. Bradford, of Iowa Park, is director general of interscholastic activities in the district, and B. M. Dinsmore, of Electra, director of athletics.

The local high school expects to put a strong basketball quintet in the interscholastic field this winter, and the boys already have been working out for several days. While no definite arrangement has been made as yet, it is expected that Harry Viner, head coach of the red and black football squad, will be invited to coach the cage quintet. Viner has starred at the game himself, and has had considerable experience in coaching other teams, while his success in handling the high school gridiron machine has given both high school faculty and pupils confidence in his ability to train the boys properly.

GOV. M'RAE IMPROVED.

TESTIMONY ENDED IN TRIAL FLORIDA EX-POSTMISTRESS

ORLANDO, Fla. Dec. 1—Shortage in the West Palm Beach postoffice during the time Miss Lena M. T. Clarke, now on trial here charged with the murder of Fred A. Miltimore, a former postal employe, served as postmistress, amounted to $32,000, according to the testimony today of H. A. Graham, postoffice inspector. Graham testified that the shortage began at least a year before the alleged theft by Miltimore of $38,000 which Miss Clarke said he had taken in 1918 after drugging her brother, the late Paul Clarke, who was assistant postmaster.

Prior to 1917, Graham said Miss Clarke was an ideal postmistress, keeping her accounts practically perfect, but after that there was a change. Her books began to show blurs, erasures and her accounts lost their clarity. His estimate of Miss Clarke was that she is "smart, able, resourceful and cunning."

The last witness before both sides finally rested was Charles M. Stoddard, superintendent of mails in the Jacksonville postoffice. Mr. Stoddard was brought here to rebut testimony given yesterday by a witness named Anderson, who swore that Miltimore was working in a Jacksonville shipyard at the time he was supposed to have made the theft of the $38,000 in West Palm Beach.

HORNED FROGS ELECT "JUDGE" GREEN CAPTAIN

HUTCHINSON CO. CITIZENS MAKE BID FOR RAILROAD

STAMFORD, Texas, Dec. 1.—The citizens of Hutchinson county in the north plains have presented a proposition to the North Texas & Santa Fe railway, which now operates between Shattuck, Oklahoma, and Spearman, Texas, to extend this line from Spearman westward through Hutchinson county.

The survey of territory in West Texas needing additional railroads which was made last fall by the West Texas Chamber of Commerce showed that this part of the north plains region was one of the territories in West Texas particularly needing new railroad construction. It is ranked by that organization as third in importance in the need of new railroad construction of the different regions in West Texas which should have additional railroads. The territory between Fort Worth and Lubbock is placed first, and the territory between Midland and Farwell is placed second.

TIGERS' BALL PROGRAM HAS 27 BATTLES

PRINCETON, N. J., Dec. 1.—Princeton's baseball nine will play twenty-seven games next spring, according to the schedule announced yesterday. In addition, there are two tentative dates with Yale and Harvard in case a third contest is necessary to decide the series of two out of three games. Nineteen of the contests will be staged in Princeton.

The teams that did not face the Tigers last spring are on the schedule, including the University of Cincinnati, which will come here for an intersectional game. It is possible that Illinois will be faced here. The other newcomers are the Army and Boston College, neither of which has ever played Princeton; New York University, Bowdoin, Lehigh, Brown, Amherst, Cornell and Bucknell.

The plans for the usual Easter trip have been considerably changed because of vacation periods, and instead of a tour of the South, the team will first meet Columbia in New York, take a sleeper for Charlottesville, where it will face Virginia the next day, finishing with Georgetown on the following day. Last spring the Tigers played the Navy during the Eastern trip.

The schedule follows:

April 1, N. Y. U.; 5, Bowdoin; 8 Lehigh; 12, Stevens (tentative); 13, Columbia at New York; 14, Virginia at Charlottesville; 15, Georgetown at Washington; 19, Tufts; 20, Brown; 22, Pennsylvania at Philadelphia; 26, Holy Cross; 29, Amherst.

May 3, Army at West Point; 6, Cornell; 9, Lawrenceville at Lawrenceville; 10, Virginia; 13, Williams; 17, Dartsmouth; 20, Harvard at Cambridge; 24, Lafayette; 27, Harvard; 31, Bucknell.

June 3, Yale at New Haven; 7, Harvard at Boston (in case of a tie series); 8, Boston College; 10, Colgate; 14, Cincinnati; 17, Yale; 24, Yale at New York (in case of a tie in series, but not tie in Harvard-Yale series); 27, Yale at New York (in case of ties in both series).

TICKETS ON SALE FOR ALL-STAR AND WILDCAT BATTLE

Tickets were placed on sale yesterday at Tipton's, the Palace drug store and Stoecker's for Sunday's battle between the Wichita Falls Wildcats and the Burkburnett All-Stars. Johnny Salm's crew of local ex-collegians had another fast workout yesterday afternoon, and the "boys" expect to be in A-1 shape for Sunday's melee. The game should be a hard fought struggle all the way, with the two elevens about evenly matched.

HUMBLE OFFICIAL WILL DELIVER AN ADDRESS AT A. & M.

Special to The Record News.

COLLEGE STATION, Texas, Dec. 1.—W. S. Farish, vice-president and general manager of the Humble Oil and Refining company at Houston, and one of the best known oil men in the nation, will deliver the second of a series of lectures being given at this institution as a lectureship course to the students of engineering by the Mid-Continent Oil and Gas association, Friday evening.

The lecture will be on the subject of "Methods of Drilling and Problems Involved."

This lectureship course being given by the Mid-Continent Oil and Gas association calls for lectures by the most successful oil men in the business, which are designed to give the students of engineering a practical knowledge of the industry in all its phases. Another part of the course provides for giving to students who intend to enter the industry after graduation, summer employment as producers, manufacturers and salesmen, in order to make their training as full as possible.

WISDOM and WORSE

By C. F. C.

With the football year closed, save for the scattered post-season games here and there, once again you can hear charges made against various elevens that have been successful beyond the ordinary. Teams that fail to show remarkable power seldom are criticized, but it appears to be a penalty of success that some teams rising above mediocrity should be regarded with suspicion.

Specific charges of professionalism are occasionally made against individual players, and it has even been rumored that large sums of money have been paid for the services of certain players with certain teams. Then there are charges also that involve the violation of the so-called eligibility rules, charges which have no bearing on professionalism.

More frequently than not there isn't a basis of truth back of these black rumors, which are often unjust to the individual players and to the college or university which he represents on the gridiron. But the player and the institution are at a decided disadvantage, for the charges are only circulated in whispers that are wholly unofficial—and yet all close followers of football hear the whispers.

The popularity of football has grown tremendously in recent years, until today it is doubtful if there is another amateur sport in the country so appealing to the non-participant. The amazing attendance at all big college games is ample proof of the truth of this statement. Beyond question the leaders in intercollegiate football circles wish to keep the sport clean and are anxious that it should not become professionalized. And yet there is no concerted effort that I can see to protect public confidence in the game by handling, as they should be handled, these yearly rumors of professionalism, violations of the eligibility standards and other violations of the strict ethics of the game. Football has its rules committee, its board to select officials and other committees assigned to look after various phases of the sport—wherefore, why not a grievance committee to handle all cases of alleged violations against the cleanliness of the game? Such a committee through the medium of publicity could effectually give the lie to many spreading rumors against good college players and clean educational institutions, while it could also handle in good "hard-boiled" fashion every case where the ethics of the game had been violated.

With the sport growing as it is, and with the close of the greatest season football has ever known, the good-will of the public certainly is worth protecting, even to the point of over-zealousness. Some official action should be taken by an impartial governing body.

After fifteen years as the supreme ruler of 18.2 balkline billiards, Willie Hoppe has stepped down from the throne and has yielded his place to young Jake Schaefer. Apparently there was nothing of the fluke nature to Schaefer's success, as he decisively defeated the champion in two successive nights in order to win the crown. Schaefer is only 26 years old, and his future should be brilliant—but his pathway will not be as easy as was that of Hoppe, who reached the top when such stars as George Sutton, old Jake Schaefer, father of the new champion, and George Slossin were slipping steadily. Young Jake will have the toughest kind of competition. Hoppe himself is only 34, and always in perfect physical condition; Roger Conti, the French champion, is barely 20; Edouard Horemans is 33, and Welker Cochran is in his early twenties. If young Schaefer can hold his title even a reasonably long time against such a field, he will have established a remarkable reputation as a wizard of the cue.

In Douglas, Arizona, rains have laid bare bones believed by "boneyologists" to be those of a giant race of men. One of the skeletons has a skull, reports state, in which the bone is an inch thick—which proves merely that some wrestler probably died in Douglas several years ago!

It was beginning to look like a quiet, unnatural winter for Ban B. Johnson, American league chief, until this talk of Coast league magnates about a third major league started. Now Ban B. is rolling up his sleeves and smiling happily. He won't be contented unless someone starts something annually.

Sport dopesters all over the United States also have had their winters ruined through Charlie Moran's action in signing to coach the Centre college football eleven another year. Within the next few months, just think of all the teams the dopesters would have had him coaching and the fabulous salaries they would have reported him as accepting.

The Troop Six eleven and the Boy Scout's All-Star team, recruited from the other Scout troops of Wichita Falls, will meet in their post-season tilt tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock at the Junior high school grounds. The game originally was scheduled for Athletic park Thanksgiving day, but was postponed when the Wichita Falls-Polytechnic struggle was played in the forenoon of that day. With the extra time thus obtained to perfect their team work, the All-Stars expect to send a powerful eleven against Troop Six, which holds the Boy Scout gridiron championship of the city. Jimmy Allred, coach of Troop Six, is prepared for a hard battle, but believes the fact that his boys have played together all season will more than offset the superior weight and individual brilliancy of the picked eleven Troop Six will oppose.

YANK SCOUT THINKS LOS ANGELES PLACE FOR SPRING CAMP

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—Bob Connery, scout for the New York American baseball club, today reported to his employers that he favored Los Angeles as a training camp for next spring. The club owners have not yet reached a decision, although they have several sites under consideration, most of them in Texas.

CHICAGO DADS MAY TAX SEMI-PRO GAMES FOR "KIDDY" FUND

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—Taxing of all professional and semi-professional contests and games to provide funds for the physical education of school children were proposed in an ordinance introduced in the city council today. A five per cent tax is proposed for professional sports and half that amount for semi-professional games and sports.

PLANET BRINGS IN FIRST 1800 FOOT PRODUCER

The Planet Petroleum company has completed it's first 1800 foot producer, according to reports from Electra Thursday. This well, one of the old shallow producers deepened, is flowing at the rate of more than 200 barrels daily, it is reported, and is now being rigged to pump.

This is the fourth well brought in in the new 1800 foot sand, opened up by Bridwell and Heydrick several weeks ago.

Services in Progress At North Side M. E.

"Soul winning services," to be conducted every night of December at the North Side Methodist Church, are announced by the Rev. W. A. Betts, pastor. The sermons are to be preached by Mr. Betts, according to the announcement, and all contributions received during the services used in providing wall paper and other necessary interior decorations to the church building.

The pastor also announces that every well behaved small boy and girl who attend the services regularly is to receive a well-filled stocking of Christmas candy, along about the time that Santa Claus makes his well-known annual visitation.

The pastor urges that all attend the services and lend their assistance in bringing the souls of lost men and women to a fuller knowledge of the Christ and the soul salvation he represents.

"LITTLE BENNY" AND DEBATE ON SPEAKER PROGRAM

A debate on the subject "Resolved, That the United States Government Should Own and Operate the Railroads," was announced as the feature of the regular meeting of the Speakers' club held Thursday morning at Senior High school. The negative side of the question was awarded the victory by three judges. The affirmative side was debated by Polly Clark and Darrold Kahn and the negative side by Gage McDermott and Sam Hildreth.

Following the debate a "Little Benny's Note Book" program was staged. Miss Joilett Stanfield gave a short talk on the weather, in which she quoted a little girl as being able to regulate the atmospheric conditions of the earth to much better advantage than the present wielder of that power. Miss Dot Russell read a paper on "Spoarts" and Miss Janie McAlester read a paper on "Interesting People."

Liquor Still Is Found Operating On Lamar Street

"No suh! we don' know nothin' 'bout that and sub, theah jus' natchully couldn't been any sich theah this mawnin'," two negroes wailed Friday night when Constable Frank Morgan and Deputies Will Lay and J. T. Fannin found a still running full blast in a servant house in the 1500 block on Lamar street. The negroes lived in a room adjoining the room in which a white man was found operating the still.

A white man, whom the officers declared they found operating the outfit was lodged in the county jail. The still was almost entirely home made. A fifteen-gallon cream can was being used for a boiler and ordinary piping to transport the steam from the boiling mash to the distilling worm. When found liquor was running from the worm at a rapid rate into a galvanized bucket, in which was approximately a gallon of second run corn liquor.

The two negroes, living in the adjoining room declared that an aged one armed negro occupied the room in which the still was found. They emphatically denied knowledge of the mesh having been made up and soured at that place, declaring their belief that the stuff had been brought there late. The officers were searching Friday night for the negro said to have occupied this room. The two negroes living in the other room were known to the officers and were said to be working regularly.

Rehearsal For Legion Minstrel Proves Success

With a good turnout including many members of the local post, American Legion and the auxiliary, the initial rehearsal of the forthcoming American Legion minstrel went over in tip-top shape, according to George Hougins, who has been secured as the director.

Another rehearsal will be held tonight, Mr. Hodgins said. Another full turnout by members of the post and of the auxiliary is urged.

Two Families Are Relieved From Hunger

How two families were saved from hunger at one stroke when a skilled tradesman was provided with funds to reach a job, and his own family were already without money to buy food was told Friday by Mrs. C. E. Ousley, secretary of the Welfare Council.

The man in the case has been a regular worker except for the past two months and is declared to have never before found himself in this situation. He and his little family were rooming with a woman whom they paid $15 a month as room rent.

From this the woman managed to provide herself the bare necessities of life and pay the taxes on her tiny home, which she fortunately owns. When the affair became known to Mrs. Ousley the rent had been unpaid for two months and the widow had spent her last penny for food.

An out of the city job was found for the man. Mrs. Ousley lent both the man and the widow money to cover their immediate needs, for neither would accept it as a permanent gift, both declaring their preference for a "helping hand that helped them all to help themselves."

Some Chest-Nuts

A man and his wife who were invited to a reception given by a certain viceroy of India received, by mistake, tickets of different colors—one white, one blue.

They didn't know it, but the viceroy had decided to make some distinction between his personal guests and those who were not quite so intimate. Accordingly, blue and white tickets were sent out. The "whites" were to enter a certain door, which gave them precedence over the "blues," who were to gain admittance by another entrance.

When the man and his wife arrived at the "white" entrance, the A. D. C. on duty told them they could not enter together, for the lady, having a blue ticket, must present herself at the other door.

The wife, says Mr. Frederic Villiers in his book, "Five decades of Adventure," refused to be separated from her husband by such an absurd regulation, and, fixing the young official with a stony glare, said: "Young man, my husband and I are not a Seidlitz powder!"

A bumptious young American farmer went to England to learn his business, but where he went he pretended that it was far easier to teach the farmers than to learn anything from them.

"I've got an idea," he said one day to a grizzled old Northumbrian agriculturist, "for a new kind of fertilizer which will be ten thousand times as effective as any that has ever been tried. Condensed fertilizer—that's what it is. Enough for an acre of ground would go in one of my vest pockets.

"I don't doubt it, young gentleman," said the veteran of the soil. "What is more, you'll be able to put the crop into the other vest pocket."

A Scottish minister who was indefatigable in looking up his folk one day called upon a parishioner.

"Richard," he said, "I hae na seen ye at the kirk for some time, and wad like to know the reason."

"Weel, sir, answered Richard, "I hae decided objections to goin'. Firstly, I dinna believe in being whaur ye does a' the talkin'; seconly, I dinna believe in ei' muckle singin', an', thirdly, an' in conclusion, 'twas there I got my wife."

Estes Snedecor, president of the International Association of Rotary Clubs, said at a luncheon in New York: "I would not admit a misogynist to our great organization. Woman is the home builder, not the home destroyer, and any man who takes the latter view of her is a fool. No fool is worthy to be a Rotarian. I was talking to one of these fool misogynists the other day. 'There goes young Kall,' I said. 'He's got $40,000 a year and yet he won't have anything to do with women.' 'That,' said the fool misogynist, 'is why he has $40,000 a year.'"

Two men were sentenced by a self-appointed court to be hanged for horse stealing. The place selected for the execution was the middle of a bridge spanning a river.

The first noose was tied insecurely and the prisoner dropped into the river, swam ashore and escaped.

As the second rope was being adjusted the remaining culprit drawled out. "Say, fellows, make sure o' the knot this time. I can't swim."

SUGAR.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—The local market for raw sugar was quiet and as no fresh business was reported, prices were unchanged at 3.87 1-2 to 4.11 for centrifugal. It was rumored that the committee had disposed of upward of 35,000,000 tons of Cubas to foreign buyers but the details were not obtainable.

New sugar futures sold at new low record prices at the start but after opening unchanged to 2 points net lower under scattered liquidation, prices rallied on covering and buying by brokers with Cuban connections, closing one point lower to one point net higher. January closed at 2.17; March 2.17; May 2.20; July 2.23.

There were no changes in the refined situation, the demand being moderate and prices unchanged at 5.20 to 5.30 for fine granulated.

Refined sugar futures were nominal, closing unchanged to 5 points net lower with no transactions. January, March and May closed at 5.25.

Stocks

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—Stocks were hesitant at the outset of the day's trading but came forward later. New high records for liberty national remittances were favorable influences.

December interest and dividend payments were inaugurated without strain to local reserve. Call money opened at 5 per cent, eased to 4 1-2 at midday but rebounded to 5 per cent in the final hour and touched 5 1-2 on belated borrowings just before the finish of the session.

Dealings in the principal foreign exchanges, especially British, French, Dutch and German bills were in an extensive scale. Formal announcement that the Washington government will aid in the proposed readjustment of Europe's fallen currencies was a paramount factor.

In the stock list representative railand several of the European and domestic oils were the outstanding features, Standard Oil of New Jersey made a net gain of 9 1-2 points.

Sales of stocks amounted to 650,000 shares.

Heavy realizing caused most of the liberty issues to react from their new records. Other domestic bonds were subjected to the same influences. Total sales par value, $24,276,000.

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—Rain in Texas and Kansas, as well as in Southern Argentina had a bearish effect on the wheat market today. Prices closed unsettled 1-4 to 1 1-8 net lower with December 1.13 1-2 and May 1.16 3-4 to 1.16 7-8.

Corn finished 1-2c off to a shade advance, oats 1-4 down to a like upturn, and provisions ranged from 5c loss to a gain of 2 1-2c.

Many traders were persuaded that more rain would follow and it was only for a brief time that attention was given to estimates putting the condition on the winter crop in Texas as low as 20 to 25 per cent of normal.

Wet weather in the corn belt tended to steady corn and oats notwithstanding heavy deliveries of oats here on December contracts. Feedstuffs were generally selling above corn on a pound for pound basis.

Provisions were very dull and averaged a little lower with hogs.

Cotton

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—The cotton market was unsettled today rallies from an early decline being followed by renewed weakness, with last prices steady at net losses of 28 to 53 points. January sold up from 17.34 to 17.55 and broke to 17.11 closing at 17.14 compared with 17.63 yesterday.

The market opened barely steady at a decline of 22 to 28 points owing to weak Liverpool cables, Liverpool and Southern selling. Active months showed losses of 27 to 31 points right after the call but the early offerings were not heavy and the market steadied up late in the morning on covering and local buying which was promoted by the firmness of foreign exchange rates, reports of a better tone in the stock market and talk of restricted spot offerings in the South. Liverpool showed no improvement, however, with private cables reporting increased curtailment in Lancashire mills and the market weakened again during the early afternoon. Renewed liquidation increased Southern selling and local selling in anticipation of weak cables again tomorrow. Stop loss orders were uncovered on the late break which carried January contracts back to the low point of last Monday and the market closed within a few points of the lowest. Early cables from Liverpool reported selling there on a risposition to increase estimates of the crop and a poor spot demand. There was further bullish comment on the pink boll worm situation which may have helped the midday rally, but which evidently failed to create any general demand.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON.

By Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 1.—Depressions that put in their appearance on the opening in the cotton market today were in force the session through and the close was at the lowest of the day, at net losses of 43 to 57 points. January traded as low as 16.40 and July fell to 16 cents. Larger crop estimates were the main cause of the selling and during the period of heaviest selling, toward the end of the day, it was market gossip that Wall Street and Chicago interests were furnishing much of the pressure.

The main bear arguments were a private crop estimate of 7,939,000 bales and the statement by the federal reserve board that the indications were for a crop in excess of 8,000,000 bales, which was regarded by many traders as a warning of what might be expected on the twelfth of December when the department of agriculture makes its annual crop estimate.

Liverpool was poor and helped to make a weak opening here but after declines of 28 to 31 points there was a recovery back to within 9 to 14 points on the weather map, which noted a great deal of rain in the western belt, especially in Texas. This was regarded as a highly bullish development as messages from Texas said that the rain meant that planting of grain would go ahead, thereby increasing the chances of holding down the acreage under cotton next spring. After January touched 16.85, the market had no more recuperative power and a steady decline set in, although much comment of a bullish nature was aroused by telegrams from Dallas saying that cottonseed infected by the pink boll worm had been shipped to 72 widely separated points in Texas.

LIVERPOOL SPOT COTTON.

LIVERPOOL, Dec. 1.—Cotton spot in limited demand; prices barely steady. Good middling 11.69; fully middling 11.29; middling 10.89; low middling 9.59; good ordinary 7.84; ordinary 7.09. Sales 4,000 bales, including 2,600 American.

FORT WORTH, Dec. 1.—Most everything in the cattle division sold to a fairly decent demand today on a steady basis, but the general movement scaleward was not as brisk as it has been on most days during the past week. Yearlings were the last to find an outlet, and the trade was particularly slow to medium kinds. Calves found a ready demand on a good, steady basis. Three cars of cows brought 4.00, heavy calves notched 6.50 and good yearlings ranged up to 6.50. Receipts amounted to 1,500 head of cattle and 1,500 calves.

Shippers and order buyers secured the big end of the day's supply of 1,000 hogs, but secured practically nothing. Packers tried to force a 25c decline, but secured practically nothing. Top hogs sold at 7.35 and bulk sales ranged from 7.00 to 7.25.

Feeders made up most of the supply of 1,000 head in the sheep division and on that class the market was full. The few fat sheep and lambs available cleared on a steady basis. Quotations:

Cattle—Beeves 3.50@6.25; stockers 3.25@5.00; cows 2.25@4.50; canners 1.50@2.25; heifers 3.50@5.75; yearlings 3.50@6.50; bulls 2.00@3.00; calves 2.50@6.50.

COFFEE

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—Higher Brazilian markets and Rio exchange rates combined with bullish crop advices were responsible for an opening advance of 11 to 20 points in the market for coffee futures today. December sold at 8.65 and March at 8.43 while September advanced to 8.20 on covering and scattered buying but these prices attracted some realizing and there were slight reactions from the best in the later trading. Trade interests with New Orleans connections bought near and sold late months while there was scattered buying of the deliveries on the reports that unfavorable weather conditions had damaged the coming Santos crop. Closing prices were 3 to 23 points net higher. Sales were estimated at about 30,000 bags. December 8.58; January 8.51; March 8.38; May 8.24; July 8.19; September 8.13.

Spot coffee was in moderate demand at 9@9 1-8 for Rio 7's and 11 3-4 to 12 1-4 for Santos 4's.

Citation by Publication.
THE STATE OF TEXAS.
To the sheriff or any constable of Wichita county, greeting:
You are hereby commanded to summon Dan Fullerton by making publication of this citation once each week for four successive weeks previous to the return day hereof, in some newspaper published in your county, to appear at the next regular term of the 30th District Court of Wichita county, to be holden at the court house thereof in Wichita Falls, on the third Monday in December, A. D., 1921, the same being the 19th day of December, A. D., 1921. Then and there to answer a petition filed in said court on the 4th day of November, A. D., 1921, in a suit, numbered on the docket of said court No. 11845-A, wherein Bessie Fullerton is plaintiff and Dan Fullerton is defendant and said petition alleging, that on or about the 17th day of July, 1919, plaintiff and defendant were legally married, and continued to live together until on or about the 17th day of October, 1919; that on divers occasions, while plaintiff lived with defendant, he was guilty of excesses, cruel treatment and outrages toward her, of such nature as to render their living together insupportable; that on October 17, 1919, the defendant left their home without telling said plaintiff the truth as to where he was going and since that time said plaintiff has never heard a word from the defendant and has not been able to find out his whereabouts;
Wherefore, plaintiff prays the court that defendant be cited to appear and answer this petition, and that upon final hearing hereof plaintiff have judgment dissolving the marriage contract now existing between plaintiff and defendant, and that her maiden name, to-wit, Bessie Payne, be restored to her; and for all costs of suit, and for such other and further relief, special and general, in law and in equity, that she may be justly entitled to.
Herein fail not, but have before said court, at its aforesaid next regular term, this writ with your return thereon showing how you have executed the same.
Given under my hand and the seal of said court, at office in Wichita Falls, Texas, this the 4th day of November, A. D., 1921.

HARRIMAN LEAVES WITH WAR NURSE BRIDE ON A LONG HONEYMOON TOUR

Mr. Herbert M. Harriman and his bride, photographed aboard ship just before sailing.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert M. Harriman, whose recent marriage surprised society, have just left on a honeymoon tour that will take them around the world. Harriman is a multimillionaire and a brother of Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt. His wife was Miss Jane Hunter, a war nurse.

AUSTRIAN CAPITAL SWEPT BY MOST SERIOUS RIOTING SINCE FALL OF MONARCHY

By Associated Press.

VIENNA, Dec. 1.—In the widespread rioting which took place in Vienna today, many Americans staying at the hotels were attacked and some of them were subjected to rough treatment.

Mrs. Hand, the wife of a colonel of the United States army and her daughter were robbed of furs and clothing, but on the same floor, Colonel and Mrs. Miller, U. S. A., displayed the American flag and spoke English and the rioters withdrew from their room.

Of the hotels the New Bristol and the Old Bristol suffered most. They were partially wrecked and were looted to second floor.

Inquiries at the hotels disclosed that many guests were robbed of clothing and jewels and in some instances the jewels being torn from the ears.

Seemingly the most rowdy elements swept through the inner city. They were joined by the worst criminal classes committing all kinds of excesses.

At 7 o'clock tonight the streets were quiet and further disturbances of a serious nature are not looked for.

The Associated Press correspondent asked one of a squad of policemen who idly watched the wrecking of the Hotel Imperial, if there were not sufficient police to handle the situation. He replied:

"We are tired of shooting and losing shot. These people are hungry and desperate; so are many of us."

The disturbances today were the most serious since the downfall of the monarchy. They spread throughout the inner city and practically every unshuttered window was smashed. All the famous restaurants and hotels frequented by foreign visitors were entered, looted and partly wrecked, and the luxury shops robbed while the police watched without interfering. The disturbances were described as purely economic, due to the growing scarcity and cost of necessities of life.

Vienna is now a woeful sight. All the cafes are closed and the streets are in darkness.

A large force of mounted police tonight scattered the crowds, driving a solid body of workmen back to their home districts.

NEGRO IS SENTENCED TO DEATH 24 HOURS AFTER HIS CAPTURE

By Associated Press.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Dec. 1.—Henry Lacy, 16-year-old negro was convicted today of attacking an eight-year-old white girl and was sentenced to be hanged on December 21. The negro confessed on the stand. The negro was indicted, tried and sentenced within 24 hours after his capture.

AIRSHIP TEST OF HELIUM GAS IS SUCCESSFUL

By Associated Press.

NORFOLK, Va., Dec. 1.—The first official test of Helium gas in large airships was successfully completed today when the naval dirigible C-7 returned to her station here after two long flights. Naval aviation officials expressed the opinion that the tests marked the opening of a new era in aeronautics. Helium gas has almost the lifting power of hydrogen with none of its explosive properties.

The helium used in this experiment was extracted from the Petrolia gas. This gas, equal to hydrogen in buoyancy, but due to its inert qualities inflammable and inexplosive, was made available in large quantities and at cheap coost due to a process discovered toward the close of the war. So far the Petrolia gas gives the only large supply from which the gas can be obtained cheaply known in the world.

This experiment was the first for this gas for a semi-rigid derigible air vessel, the use of the gas having heretofore been confined to observation balloons.

TEN PERSONS KILLED WHEN TRAINS CRASH

By Associated Press.

PORTLAND, Oregon, Dec. 1.—Ten killed and sixty injured was the toll in human life and suffering taken in a head-on collision of two Oregon-Washington railroad and navigation passenger trains near Celilo, Oregon early today, according to latest reports tonight to the company's head office here. The list of dead was increased late today from six to ten by the finding of the bodies of four unidentified men in the wreckage. They were said to be railroad laborers.

ALLEGED SLAYER OF DELL THAMES IS GRANTED BOND

By Associated Press.

GATESVILLE, Texas, Dec. 1.—H. G. Twyman, charged with the murder of Dell Thames, inmate of the juvenile training school here where Twyman was military instructor, was granted bond in the sum of $4,000 by Judge J. R. McClellan of the 52nd district court following a habeas corpus hearing late today.

WOMAN LOSES TEETH IN AUTO CRASH

A woman, whose name was not learned by officers was said to have sustained a blow which dislodged several teeth when two cars collided early Thursday evening at Eighth and Burnett streets.

One of the automobiles was driven by C. F. Baker, 1301 Fifth street and the other by Ferris Hall of 1403 Ninth street, according to Motorcycle Officer Morgan, who was at the scene of the accident.

"KEMP DAY" IS POSTPONED TO NEXT MONDAY

"Kemp Day," which the Kiwanis club is giving in honor of J. A. Kemp, whose big dream the irrigation system is now about to be realized, has been moved up to next Monday, December 5, to make sure that Mr. Kemp will be able to be present, according to a decision reached by the committee Thursday afternoon.

The annual election of officers, scheduled for this day, will be held between 11:45 and 12:15 o'clock, in order not to take any time from the full observance of the day and the special program which has been arranged. All Kiwanians are expected to be present and bring their guests to this special program.

Mayor W. D. Cline will make the talk of the day and Ivan Murchison will sing, the program committee announced. In addition there will be other appropriate features.

Mrs. Kemp will be invited to be an honor guest, the club recognizing the part she has played in the civic and cultural development of the city, and the inspirational part she has had in Mr. Kemp's enterprises. Those who know them best, know how very closely Mr. and Mrs. Kemp's dreams have been interwoven, until they were one, in every matter, of the mutual inspiration, and mutual planning, which has worked to consummation. The Kemp Library, the gift of both of them to Wichita Falls as a Christmas remembrance, in 1916, their many other gifts, generous always, to private and public organizations as well as Mr. Kemp's activities in a commercially constructive way, are too well known, to need further repetition. The Kiwanis club has announced Kemp Day as a public appreciation and expression of the love and gratitude that has been privately felt by the citizenship.

SAMPSON LEAVES POLICE TO ENTER BUSINESS CAREER

T. L. Sampson, who has been serving here for several months as Motorcycle Officer, and who handed in his resignation Thursday to Police Commissioner Fitts, left Friday for Mangum, Okla. Sampson has purchased an interest in a hardware business in that city and expects to devote his future to this line of work, he announced.

Commissioner Fitts announced that R. B. Kinsner has been appointed to succeed Sampson.

CIVIC LEAGUE TO MEET AT STONE HOME

The Civic league's December meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. J. W. Stone, 1400 Grant, the social committee announces, and will combine the business session with an informal social hour. All members are urged to be present, promptly at 3 o'clock.

Maimed Veteran of A. E. F. Tells Strange Story of Wanderings When Charged With Embezzling $600

One of the most extraordinary confessions which Henry W. Locke, special agent of the Katy here, declared he had ever seen is that of L. B. Benton, aged 23, former agent of the W. F. & N. W. at Supply, Okla. He is alleged to have admitted to the misappropriation of over $600 in railroad and express funds, during his 19 days connection with the company, upon being arrested here November 21, after an auditor's check had revealed a shortage.

Benton is said to have several aliases and to have married a girl in Little Rock, Ark., under an assumed name. He says he lost an arm in the Argonne during his overseas service with the Rainbow division in his written confession and told a story of his wanderings over the South, working several places as part time railroad dispatcher and telegraph operator, that if true, forms one of the strangest documents of its sort which, Mr. Locke says he has ever seen.

According to the story told by the youthful ex-soldier, complacently awaiting trial for embezzlement, he is of good family, his parents being country people in Georgia, who are ignorant of his transgressions, his marriage under an assumed name and his present incarceration.

He said he enlisted in the army in 1917, was sent through the recruit training camp and reached France in the fall of 1917. During a combat in the Argonne sector in October, 1918, he says, he lost his left arm and was sent to a hospital, returned to the United States and discharged from a wounded soldiers hospital and his fare paid to Atlanta, Georgia, where he enlisted.

Prior to enlistment in the army, he says, he took part of a course in telegraphy but never became proficient enough to hold down a heavy trick on a railroad.

He says he would work a while until some situation would arise which he was unable to hold and he would move on.

In the summer of 1921, he says, he married a young lady in Little Rock, under a name he assumed upon coming out of the service. Why he took this name he did not say, although he maintained there was nothing in his service record to justify keeping it hidden. His army service record, he says, he destroyed when he married to keep his wife from finding out his real name.

At one time before going to work for the W. F. & N. W. at Supply, Okla., he says, he borrowed some money from the American Legion, Chief Dispatcher Pyle, of the Northwestern and others, as he says he was flat broke when he reached here.

He started to work for the railroad at Supply, on the first of November, 1921, and remained until the 19th. During that time, railroad officials say, shortages amounting to $600 occurred which he is said to confess he was responsible for.

The man's wife, when confronted by the news of her husband's arrest and imprisonment, declared that she never knew the money he had was stolen and that her husband had told her of receiving a monthly allotment from the government on account of the loss of his arm while in France.

A thorough investigation of the confession, taking up official army records and the records of other railroads where he is said to have worked will be made, Mr. Locke says, in an effort to straighten out the entire matter.

Never once has the confident disposition of the youth been changed, Mr. Locke says, and he appeared to be mildly shocked when he was locked up. The confession was alleged to have been given after an investigation. Much of the credit for the alleged statement is given to Mr. Locke.

TAX DRIVE PLANNED BY CIVIC LEAGUE

A city-wide pay-your-poll-tax campaign among the women citizens of Wichita Falls will be planned this afternoon at the Kemp library when leaders of all the local women's organizations will meet with the citizenship study department of the Civic league.

The campaign will open Monday, December 5, and continue through the 10th. Mrs. D. O. Long, chairman of the citizenship department has called the meeting for today at 1:30 sharp. Other members of the committee who will be active in the work include Mesdames John Kay, W. W. Cooke, S. L. Conn, A. B. Lipscomb and T. R. Brunson.

Presidents of the various clubs and church societies are asked to represent their organizations at the meeting Friday, and if they are unable to do so, to see that a substitute is present.

The representatives are also asked to come prepared with suggestions for the campaign where ever possible, as every available means will be taken to further the publicity.

Those requested to be present or send substitutes include:

TRAVERS IS MAYOR FOR SOUTH BEND

J. W. Travers, editor of the South Bend Derrick, is now mayor of South Bend as the result of a recent election, according to word received here. Mr. Travers' two colleagues on the city commission are Otis Tittle and M. C. Mouton.

Installation of modern municipal convenience including electric street lights, paving in the business district, sewers and water works are reported as among the aims of the future of the new city administration—part of the program for the very immediate future. The expense of the paving work is to be borne by public subscription, according to present plans.
