Troops May Be Used If Postal Workers Strike

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal troops may be called in to sort mail. Some forms of mail temporarily could be forbidden. Deliveries may be stopped or cut back.

In addition, millions of retired people may have to pick up Social Security checks that normally come to their door.

These are some of the contingency plans federal officials have ready in the event the U.S. Postal Service and three postal unions cannot agree on a new contract this week and a mail strike follows.

The current pact expires at midnight Thursday.

Despite lengthy bargaining sessions over the weekend, the Postal Service and the three unions involved in the talks remained far apart on the major issues.

Federal mediators reported late Sunday that progress had been made on some differences, but that all the major issues including wages remained unresolved.

While national union leaders have refused publicly to discuss possible strike actions, officials of some militant East Coast unions have threatened a repeat of the scattered strikes that followed bargainers' failure in 1970 to reach agreement on a contract.

Meanwhile, a private group that opposes unionization of public employees announced a suit today against the postal unions and the Postal Service "in an effort to establish once and for all that Postal Service employees have no right to strike."

The Public Service Research Council asked the U.S. District Court here to declare that any postal worker participating in a strike will be fired and may not be reinstated.

Asked at a news conference if the law was not already clear on the illegality of postal strikes, council president David Y. Denholm said: "Obviously, the unions don't think it is illegal or they wouldn't be threatening to strike."

"We are also asking the court to enjoin the Postal Service and the postmaster general from putting into effect any contingency plans or other arrangements under which the Post Office may refuse to accept and deliver mail as a result of the strike," he said.

The Postal Service contingency plan, a copy of which was obtained by The Associated Press, outlines these alternatives:

—National guardsmen, regular military forces and even college ROTC members could be pressed into service during a mail emergency.

—Depending on the severity of local conditions, deliveries could be cancelled and people would have to pick up their mail at a post office.

—Monday through Friday delivery could be maintained, but Saturday deliveries would be suspended.

—Postmaster General William F. Bolger could embargo certain types of mail, forbidding third-class advertising circulars, for example.

The Social Security Administration, scheduled to mail 26 million checks Aug. 3, is making its own contingency plans.

Tax Plans Examined By Solons

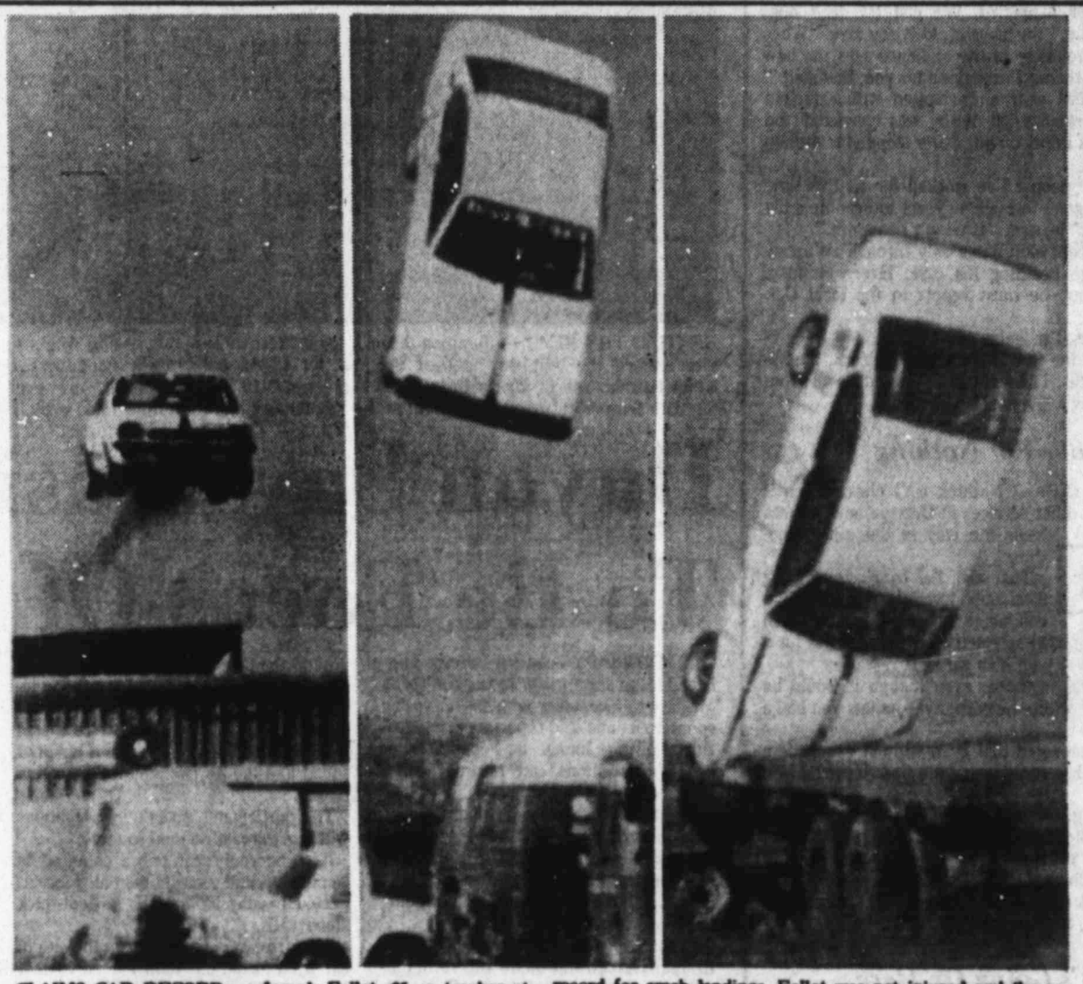

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas legislators returned to Austin today to scrutinize tax relief proposals roughed out before both houses adjourned Wednesday for a long weekend.

Among the issues to be examined are key proposals that would require constitutional amendments. Senators and House members also were to decide what to do with each other's versions of tax cut proposals passed last week that would repeal the 4 percent state sales tax on utility bills and increase inheritance tax exemptions.

The utility and inheritance tax bills were to be officially received and referred to committees in the House and Senate today. Unless one chamber accepts the other's bill exactly as passed, the final writing will be done in a 10-man, joint conference committee.

House Speaker Bill Clayton said last week this would be the best route, because conferees could hold all measures that are passed until the end of the session in order to determine whether they reduce state revenues by too great an amount.

The House Constitutional Amendments Committee planned to conduct a hearing on 13 constitutional amendments, including proposals to increase property tax exemptions for school districts, require a two-thirds legislative vote to pass a tax bill, tax agricultural land on productivity rather than market value and impose a ceiling on local property tax increases.

Six Workers Found Slain In Oklahoma

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — Six steakhouse employees, including four teenagers, were marched into a rear freezer room and methodically slain during a robbery of a restaurant along a busy Oklahoma interstate highway Sunday night.

The bodies of the two men, three teenage boys and a 16-year-old girl were found stacked atop each other in the Sirloin Stockade's freezer.

The young girl was rushed to a nearby hospital in critical condition, but died a few hours later.

"This is the worst mass killing I can remember in 18 years on the force," said police chief Tom Heggy.

"We will leave no stone unturned to find the killer or killers. It was a shock to walk into that cooler and see those victims. I'm prepared to use any manpower necessary within reason."

The slayings occurred about 10:45 p.m. The bodies were found by assistant manager Michael J. Click, 25, who left the steakhouse about 10:30 p.m. but had returned at 11 p.m. to help the others close the restaurant.

He told police he found the restaurant's lights turned off, the doors locked and the employees' cars in the parking lot. A few minutes later he stumbled onto the murder scene.

The victims were identified as Louis Zacharias, an assistant manager, about 40; Isaac E. Freeman, 56, a custodian; David Lindsay, a cook, 17; and employees Anthony Teu, 17; David Salzman, 16; and Terri M. Horst, 16.

All had been shot once in the head. Miss Horst had also been shot in the abdomen.

Police said several weapons had been used during the shootings. They were still unsure about the caliber of the weapons.

"We believe there was more than one suspect," Police Sgt. Tom Mundy said.

Click told plice that when he left the restaurant, the only customers left were a deaf couple. Police were seeking further information about the man and woman, but said they so far they had no leads.

Heggs said it appeared the restaurant, located on I-24, was chosen because of its easy access to I-35 which runs north into Kansas and south into Texas.

"I would venture to say there appeared to be a little planning involved," Mundy said. "They obviously were very intent people."

Money in the cash register had been untouched, but police said a restaurant safe had been rifled. Loose change, which apparently fell from a bag as the assailants fled, was found in the parking lot.

John Wright, 20, a former employee who recently quit and moved to Little Rock, Ark., said, "It's a shame. They are all kids going to school. Man, it's the most horrible thing I've ever heard of."

A police spokesman said the workers apparently had just closed for the night and turned the lights out when the assailant or assailants entered through a back door.

The six were taken to the 200-square-foot freezer room at the back and shot one by one with a pistol — each body falling on top of the one cut down before.

Police said the assistant manager waiting outside in his car eventually began to wonder what was taking so long and went back into the restaurant. He discovered the bodies stacked atop each other in the West To Cut Oil Imports

BONN, West Germany (AP) — President Carter and the leaders of six other major non-Communist nations reached agreement at the economic summit conference today on tactics they hope will speed world economic growth and cut oil imports.

Their plan includes increased Japanese and West German growth, and a slower U.S. growth rate of about 4 percent, the 1978 figure already forecast by the Carter adminstration.

Carter told the other leaders that his administraiton would cut taxes and spending in the next two fiscal years — a pledge he has made frequently at home — and would raise U.S. oil prices to world levels by 1980.

However, it was not immediately clear how the oil price increase would be achieved.

Current price controls expire in 1979 but could, under present law, be extended to 1981. The current price of U.S. oil ranges from $5.23 a barrel to $11.75 a barrel. The world price is approximately $13.50.

U.S Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal, discussing agreements before they were unveiled, described them as a "concrete and concerted action program" to deal with global economic problems.

The economic summit's communique, to be issued after the final session this afternoon, was expected to include specific targets for economic growth, employment, and inflation in each of the seven participating nations.

Conference sources, who asked not to be identified, said West Germany had agreed to take action increasing its economic growth by the end of August. But they reported that West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt had stricken from the draft of a final communique a specific increase of one percent beyond the anticipated increase.

That increase was expected to be significantly lower than the four percent growth forecast for the United States. West German growth could increase the markets for U.S. products.

Robert S. Strauss, Carter's special representative for trade negotiations, said today the summit made "great progress on trade."

He predicted that international negotiations for a pact to reduce international trade barriers would be successful by the end of the year, although "agriculture is still a problem."

Carter told reporters Sunday night, after the first rounds of economic summitry, that "the final results of the deliberations will be good."

As the conference's final session began today, with a focus on trade barriers between the industrialized and developing countries, the dollar's value increased in the world money markets, while dealers watched for new summit developments.

Carter, Schmidt, and the leaders of France and Britain met at breakfast today to discuss developments in Berlin, which Carter visited Saturday.

In addition to Carter, Schmidt, British Prime Minister James Callaghan and French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing, the leaders of Canada, Italy and Japan have attended the summit meetings.

While the United States was under pressure at the summit to pledge meaningful energy conservation, West Germany and Japan in particular were pressed by Carter to expand their domestic economies and create larger markets for American exports.

Blumenthal said the Germans and Japanese "are prepared to take, if necessary, substantial measures" to satisfy Carter on that point.

Man Sought In Shooting At Oil Mill

By PAT CARLSON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The assistant office manager of Plains Co-op Oil Mill was wounded today when a gunman walked into the firm and sprayed shots through the busy office.

Glenn Barbee, 48, of 1919 34th St. was in satisfactory condition at West Texas Hospital at midday after being shot at his desk about 10:15 a.m. He suffered a bullet wound in the lower back.

Although "five or six" shots were fired, no one else was hit.

Witnesses at the 2901 Ave. A scene said the assailant, later identified as a 39-year-old former employee of the company, walked through the front door of the large office area and began firing.

After shooting toward the rear of the open-space business area, he reportedly took aim at an employee standing in front of an open vault. The man, however, ducked in time to dodge the bullets, one of which was found lodged in the open steel door.

Barbee reportedly was standing just outside his cubicle-type office area when the gunman walked through the outer west door. When the shots sounded, the victim turned and ran back to his desk.

According to witnesses, the gunman walked over to a chest-high wooden railing around the desk, pointed the pistol at Barbee and fired.

The suspect reportedly then went down a short corridor and left through a northwest door. It was not known whether he left the scene on foot or in a vehicle.

Two truck drivers, Tom Newton and Dutch Hines, were standing just inside an east door when the gunfire erupted.

"I had my back to the (west) door and I

Toll Mounting As Texas Sizzles In Record Heat

A-J News Services

The death toll in a Texas heat wave now in its third week has reached 19 in Dallas and Fort Worth, and another 16 persons have been hospitalized with heat stroke symptoms.

No relief is in sight for the sweltering Southwest, according to the latest extended forecast by the National Weather Service. West Texans can expect above normal temperatures and no precipitation in the period extending until July 26.

Medical officials renewed informal warnings that people stay out of the heat.

"We're thinking it's going to be the worst we've ever seen if things continue the way they're going," said Dallas County Health Director Dr. Allen M. Fain.

Fort Worth health authorities today listed seven deaths, including two confirmed by the medical examiner as heat stroke victims. The other five — including four deaths Sunday — were listed as heat stroke deaths by doctors at John Peter Smith Hospital, but official rulings from the medical examiner's office were pending.

"We will probably see heat exhaustion as a contributing factor in these deaths," said Tommy Harris of the Tarrant County medical examiner's office.

In addition to the deaths, 13 persons were admitted to Parkland Hospital in Dallas and another three to John Peter Smith Hospital during the weekend with heat stroke symptoms. Three of the Dallas patients were reported in critical condition.

Fain warned outdoor exercisers to confine their activity to the early morning or late afternoon and to avoid mid-day heat if possible.

"The dangers of getting out into the sun during that time of the day far outweigh the benefits," he said.

Fain's office has reported 12 heat deaths since Thursday, and Tarrant County officials said one man died of a heat stroke a week ago in Fort Worth.

Officials at Parkland Hospital in Dallas said Sunday four other persons were in "very critical condition" and a fifth heat illness victim was in serious condition suffering from heat stroke symptoms.

Temperatures have reached or exceeded 100 degrees in the Dallas-Fort Worth area for the past 15 days, reaching 107 on Saturday.

Sunday night the Dallas County medical examiner's office reported that seven persons had died of heat stroke in a 30-hour period. Five succumbed in their non-air-condition homes. Four were in their 70s or 80s.

Michael Ayres, field agent for the Dallas County medical examiner's office, said a possible 13th victim was brought in late Sunday night, but he said though she

Insurance May Rise

AUSTIN (AP) — Insurance rates for private passenger cars should rise an average of 3.2 percent — well under the current pace of inflation, the State Insurance Board's staff has recommended.

The staff findings will be presented to the board Wednesday at the annual auto insurance hearing.

Premium changes recommended by the staff for typical drivers included a 22 decrease for Lubbock County.

Until five years ago, the board routinely approved rates recommended by its staff, but since then has used private actuaries and its own judgment to minimize rate increases.

Rates have not been changed since October 1976, when a 7.1 percent increase came on the heels of a 15.5 percent jump the previous January.

The board staff said rates for both pri-

Pat O'Brien Undergoes Surgery

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Actor Pat O'Brien underwent an hour-long operation at a Columbus hospital for placement of a new battery in his heart pacemaker.

O'BRIEN

O'Brien, 79, became ill Saturday night at the opening of a performance at the Country Dinner Playhouse in Columbus, playhouse manager Donald Mutnick said.

Two doctors from the audience checked O'Brien. He was transferred to Riverside Hospital where the surgery was performed Sunday.

Mutnick said he expects the actor to be back on stage at the playhouse Wednesday or Thursday. O'Brien is starring there with his wife, Eloise, in the comedy "Second Time Around."

O'Brien is the second entertainer within a year to suffer a heart problem while performing in Columbus. Comedian Frank Fontaine, who played the part of "Crazy Guggenheim" on the old Jackie Gleason television show, had a heart attack last September after playing at a local nightclub.

Gold Medal Winner Performs

AMBLER, Pa. (AP) — Cellist Nathaniel Rosen has relived his triumph of two weeks ago, playing the concerto that clinched a gold medal for him in the Tchaikovsky Competition in Moscow July 4.

Appearing Sunday night with the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra at the Temple University Music Festival, Rosen was soloist in Dvorak's "Concerto in B minor for Cello and Orchestra." It was his first appearance since his return to the United States from Russia.

Before the concert, the 30-year-old Rosen, who is first cellist with the symphony, said he was enjoying his newfound fame. "I'm having a great time. It's quite delicious and I'm very happy about it."

Judy Carne Returns To England

LONDON (AP) — Actress Judy Carne, troubled by a string of drug charges in the United States, flew home to London from New York Sunday night and was carried from a Concorde supersonic airliner on a stretcher.

MISS CARNE

The British-born actress who first gained fame as the "sock it to me" girl on the television show "Laugh-In" is still suffering from neck injuries she suffered in a car crash.

Miss Carne wore a metal frame supporting her neck.

She was met by her parents and driven from London's Heathrow Airport to their home in Northampton, north of the capital, in an ambulance.

Miss Carne, ex-wife of movie star Burt Reynolds, was recently divorced from her second husband, Robert Bergman.

Beach Boys Outdraw King Tut

SEATTLE (AP) — King Tutankhamun went up against the Beach Boys in Seattle and the surfers won out.

Authorities said a concert by the rock group attracted larger crowds Sunday than the first public showing in Seattle of artifacts from the Egyptian king's tomb.

"It's dead," said John Pugel, one of several people selling programs for the Tut exhibit at the Seattle Art Museum. "All they've been talking about are the big lines," said Pugel, adding that he hadn't seen any.

The estimated 3,000 people who arrived early for the Tut show got their tickets within an hour, and by 8:30 a.m., the 200-yard-long line had dissipated.

But authorities said morning crowds for the Beach Boys rock concert in an adjoining stadium outnumbered the Tut crowd several times over.

"We saw the lines for the Beach Boys concert and thought they were to see the exhibit," said Glen Diseth of Eugene, Ore.

Comedian Struggling Now

SEATTLE (AP) — Ten years ago comedian George Kirby was among the nation's most successful comics, appearing in some of the better supper clubs and on national television.

KIRBY

Now, free on $50,000 bond pending appeal of a Las Vegas drug conviction, he draws only about 50 people to his twice-a-night weekend sets at Parnell's, a 110-seat tavern that normally features jazz musicians.

"I'm going on just like the thing never happened. We just let dead dogs lie," the 53-year-old Kirby says. "When anybody in the audience asks me how I'm doing, I just tell them, 'I'm playing for you, that's all.'"

He was arrested last year and charged with selling a pound of heroin worth $26,000. Kirby was convicted and sentenced to 10 years in prison but never stopped maintaining his innocence.

"No, no man. The people I've worked for all this time know that I haven't gone through 40 years to become a big star and then do this," he says. "It wasn't necessary."

He was able to accept club dates only through an agreement with the judge handling his case. Every Monday, wherever he's playing, he must report to the local U.S. marshal's office.

"I'm back working. I'm going back to Rodney Dangerfield's in New York, the Cotton Club in New York, the Silver Bird in Las Vegas. I haven't been turned down from these club dates. They know me."

Thanks For Nothing

SAVANNAH, Ga. (AP) — Nothing isn't cheap when it comes to utility and other services in Georgia, and Atlanta leads the way in the cost of nothing.

The Lighter Side Of Today's News

That was the conclusion of the Savannah Evening Press, which conducted a survey of how much you'd pay even if you used no electricity, water or gas for a month and hauled away your own garbage.

Cable television was included, even though it would be difficult to watch TV without electricity — unless you had a battery pack.

The newspaper discovered that even without using these services, you'd still have to pay monthly services charges, or bookkeeping fees.

Atlanta led the way in the survey, with a total charge for nothing of $39.69, followed by Savannah, $34.13; Columbus, $28.50; and Augusta, $28.19.

Here is the breakdown, by category, for Savannah: telephone, $11.30, electricity, $1.97; water, $11.02; garbage pickup, 50 cents; gas, $2.34; and cable TV, $7.

Dayan Says Basic Issues To Be Focus Of Talks

LONDON (AP) — Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan flew to London today for face-to-face talks with his Egyptian counterpart and told reporters in a troop-ringed airport lounge he hopes broader peace negotiations can resume within two weeks.

Dayan added, however, that the two days of meetings scheduled to begin Tuesday in a storybook castle in the English countryside will get down to "basic issues.... These discussions are not going to be talks about talks."

Egypt's foreign minister, Mohammed Ibrahim Kamel, was on his way from Cairo, and Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, host of this week's meetings, was due to arrive later from the economic summit conference in Bonn, West Germany.

U.S. and British security agents sealed off the site of the talks, the 13th-century Leeds Castle, 45 miles southeast of London.

The meeting had been scheduled for the Churchill Hotel in London's Mayfair district. They were switched to the isolated, turreted fortress as a precaution against attacks by Arab terrorists who oppose peace with Israel. The Churchill was the target of an Irish terrorist attack in December 1974.

The three participants, who were expected to first meet informally tonight, will try to lay the groundwork for resuming full-scale Egyptian-Israeli peace talks.

Immediately after stepping from an El Al jetliner at Heathrow Airport, Dayan was surrounded by uniformed and plainclothes police. He was driven from the foot of the aircraft steps under police escort to meet reporters in a VIP suite guarded by troops in full battle dress and carrying automatic rifles.

"I want to discuss all the points," Dayan said. "Our aim is to discuss what is happening on the ground.

"We want laid on the table and discussed fully what is happening in Gaza, in Judea, and talk about the Jordanians and the Palestinians and all the parties involved in the Middle East situation. I just want to get down to the basic issues."

Dayan said he is anxious to draw up a timetable for future talks.

"I would like to see a basis for discussion laid down for future meetings.... I would like to see these talks take place in the not too distant future — maybe in two weeks or so. I don't mind where they are held. It can be Egypt, Israel, the Sinai or anywhere. It does not matter to me."

Dayan, Kamel and Vance were to be taken by helicopter to the castle, built on two small islands in a 20-acre lake and accessible only by air or a drawbridge causeway.

Police sealed off the 485-acre park around the lake Sunday and special communications were installed for the delegations.

Among the security teams were agents of Scotland Yard's crack anti-terrorist squad and the A8 Diplomatic Protection Group.

The participants and their delegations will find the castle a tight squeeze.

Its 21 bedrooms can only accommodate 35 persons, and security men also are expected to stay behind the six-foot-thick stone walls.

A fortress was first built on the site in 857 by a Saxon chieftain named Led. A Norman baron, Robert de Crevecoeur, built a bigger one 400 years later and in the Middle Ages it became a royal palace. The property of kings and queens for centuries, it was bought by Lady Baillie in 1926. She left it to the nation when she died in 1974.

British officials got worried about an attack on the conference when a former prime minister of Iraq was assassinated in London earlier this month. He was the fourth Arab political figure killed in London in the last 15 months.

Prime Minister James Callaghan warned President Carter of possible trouble when they met in Bonn Saturday.

Talmadge Denies Profit Charge, Accuses Journalists Of Vendetta

ATLANTA (UPI) — Sen. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga., today said published reports he profited from a highway project in his home state are an example of yellow journalism and an apparent effort to destroy him politically.

"It seems like an effort of some journalists who want to destroy Herman Talmadge," he said in an interview with the Georgia Network in Atlanta.

"I have been in public office for over 30 years," he said. "This is the first time in my 30 years that either friend or foe intimated that I in some way did something to enhance my interests because of my office. It makes me mad."

Talmadge had urged the Federal Highway Administration to place an interchange at a site recommended by the Georgia Highway Department along the planned route of Interstate 75.

According to published reports during the weekend, the veteran senator joined Atlanta attorney James A. Parker, a longtime business associate, in a syndicate that acquired the land two months earlier and profited from construction of the interchange.

Talmadge said the reports were "just plain yellow journalism" because the state had requested the interchange.

He said he made no investment in a motel at the intersection until "several years after the road was built" and in fact the deal turned out to be "a tragic loss."

Talmadge's press secretary, Gordon Roberts, said the senator had been asked to write the letter and had done so as was normal practice with such requests from constituents or state offices. "We refer hundreds of letters each week to various departments on the basis of constituent requests," he said.

The reports were published Sunday in The Washington Post and The Washington Star and Talmadge charged that the newspapers had "a host of people swarming all over the state" but that he was not contacted for comment.

The reports said the Talmadge property — a motel and service station site on the corner of the interchange — proved initially to be profitable but turned into a "loser" because of the impact of the 1973 energy crisis.

He could recoup those losses, however, in a $1.2 million suit pending against a corporation that defaulted om payments under a leasing arrangement.

Earlier this month, it was reported Talmadge made more than $400,000 on a deal involving and at another interchange in Georgia. His failure to disclose his involvement in that transaction and his acceptance of small gifts of money and clothing as well as birthday presents from constituents are all subjects being investigated by the Senate Ethics Committee.

Three Youths Arrested After Dallas Violence

DALLAS (AP) — Three youths were arrested when a peaceful protest in Reverchon Park turned into a rock-and-bottle throwing episode. No one was injured.

About 200 people gathered Sunday night to protest a decision by the Justice Department not to prosecute on civil rights charges a former police officer who killed a 12-year-old Mexican-American boy in 1973.

Former Dallas police officer Darrell Cain was convicted in state court of murder with malice in the shooting of Santos Rodriguez and is serving a five-year sentence.

The protesters gathered in 100-degree-plus heat and listened to speeches by Mexican-American leaders before joining in a memorial march to the spot where young Rodriguez was shot in the head during an interrogation. A wreath was placed at the site.

After the march the group returned to the park. Police said protesters milled about before restless youths began tossing bottles at passing cars and at police who attempted to stop them.

In a separate demonstration Saturday, about 1,000 people gathered in Plainview in what they called their last peaceful protest against police brutality toward Mexican-Americans.

The group referred to five separate incidents in Texas over the past five years, but the protest apparently was sparked by the June 25 death of Tim Rosales. Rosales was shot to death near here by a Hale County reserve deputy, who was cleared of wrongdoing after a grand jury investigated the incident.

New Orleans Officials Hold Campus Retreat

HAMMOND, La. (UPI) — Going back to college meant a weekend of work and strategy conferences for New Orleans Mayor Ernest Morial and about 80 members of his staff.

Morial, who took office less than three months ago, arranged for himself, his aides and the heads of city departments to seclude themselves on the campus of Southeastern Louisiana University from Friday night until Sunday afternoon to discuss the mechanics of city government.

College dorms were their living quarters Friday and Saturday nights.

"We've decided on some goals which we will begin to move on in the next two to three days," Morial said, "and other areas to smooth out the flow of communication internally within the administration, to tighten the fiscal controls in some departments in city government."

Restraint Revealed In Supreme Court Rulings

(EDITORS NOTE — The just-completed Supreme Court term showed no dominant personality on the bench but a prevalent theme in court decisions. In a word, caution — or "judicial restraint." Here is a term-end look at the court and its rulings.)

By RICHARD CARELLI

WASHINGTON (AP) — Today's Supreme Court is a portrait of power restrained, most often a study in playing it close to the judicial vest.

In the nine-month term that ended recently, the justices showed a determination to let others play the leading role in grappling with perplexing social issues.

Political ideology often was supplanted by deference to Congress and the states. Social direction usually was eclipsed by a willingness to let difficult issues bubble and crystalize in lower courts.

In part, such "judicial restraint" reflects the personal beliefs of Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and the three other members appointed by former President Richard M. Nixon.

But a "Nixon bloc" is no longer — if it ever was — a controlling Supreme Court force.

Two Nixon appointees, Lewis F. Powell Jr. and Harry A. Blackmun, more often are aligned with "centrists" Potter Stewart and Byron R. White.

In 129 cases decided in the recently completed term, Powell, Blackmun, Stewart and White presented a unified front on 74 occasions.

Many of the cases dealt with arcane legal matters. But the four were together in numerous key votes that left Burger and the fourth and most conservative Nixon appointee, William H. Rehnquist, or the court's two most consistent liberals, William J. Brennan Jr. and Thurgood Marshall, in dissent.

The unpredictability of the court's newest member, affable John Paul Stevens, has made him a considerable, if unlikely, political force within the court.

But Stevens, possessor of an extraordinary intellect and author of some of the court's most lucid opinions, is better described as a "swing vote." Depending on the legal issue, he may forsake the center and join the Burger-Rehnquist tandem or the Brennan-Marshall duo.

Unlike the Supreme Court of the 1950s and 1960s, whose "judicial activism" was sparked and guided by the late Chief Justice Earl Warren, the current court had no one dominant force.

The power is in the center, but no one man in the center appears capable — or determined — to harness that power.

Judicial restraint was vividly illustrated by the court's most publicized decision of the just-completed term — the Bakke ruling.

By a thin majority born of a shaky coalition, the court ruled that schools receiving federal money illegally discriminate against whites when setting aside a fixed number of admissions for minority students.

By another one-vote margin, formed again by a less-than-solid alliance, the justices said some race consideration is acceptable in college admission decisions.

It was an edict in which almost everyone could find solace. But a larger question deliberately was left unanswered.

"Bakke" offered no definitive resolution of the "affirmative action-reverse di crimination" controversy festering in education, government and private business.

Not every decision this term was as limited.

In several decisions, the court seemed to be trying to make government more accountable to the public it serves.

Federal officials who deliberately violate a person's constitutional rights cannot expect total immunity from civil rights suits, the justices said. Cities also may find themselves brought into court for constitutional violations, the court said.

Local governments may be sued for alleged violations of federal antitrust violations, the court said in a decision that could have broad financial impact nationwide.

Ther was one major exception to what appeared as a trend toward heightened official liability — judges enjoy total immunity from lawsuits even when they unlawfully violate a person's civil rights, the court ruled.

Here are some other key decisions announced in the just-completed term:

CIVIL RIGHTS:

This area was dominated by the Bakke decision, which allowed Allan Bakke, a white man, to enter a California medical school which the court said had illegally discriminated against him because of his race. But the ruling said some "affirmative action" designed to give minorities special preference could be used in college admissions.

—Employers don't have to prove their job practices maximize hiring and promotional opportunities for minorities or women in order to fend off discrimination lawsuits. Employers also may use their own statistics in efforts to show their employment decisions are not motivated by race or sex.

—Pregnant workers have no constitutional right to collect sick pay for time off the job but employers may not strip workers of their seniority because of maternity leave.

—Students expelled from school for academic reasons have no constitutional right to defend themselves in a pre-dismissal hearing.

—Employment pension plans cannot require women to contribute a greater share of their salaries because of statistics that show women live longer than men and may collect more pension benefits. That, the court said, was sex discrimination.

Once again, the court steadfastly refused to consider any case involving the rights of homosexuals.

CRIMINAL JUSTICE:

—Police may obtain warrants to search the premises of persons and businesses not suspected of any crime but believed to hold some evidence that would help police in a criminal investigation. Police need not first try to obtain the information through subpoenas. The test case for such "third-party" searches involved a police raid on a newspaper office, introducing free-press elements into the controversy.

—States may not limit the facts a jury or judge may consider when deciding whether to sentence a convicted murderer to death or life in prison. This ruling struck own Ohio's death penalty laws, lifting the sentences of 99 death row inmates.

—Police are constitutionally authorized to ask motorists they stop to get out of their cars, even when the motorist is not suspected of any serious crime.

—Prosecutors may engage in what some call "reverse plea-bargaining," threatening a criminal suspect with additional charges if he or she does not plead guilty.

—Police need court-approved warrants for extended searches of murder scenes, and require warrants also for re-entry into fire scenes.

—Criminal defendants seeking to suppress trial evidence have a limited right to challenge the validity of a police affidavit used to obtain a search warrant.

—Witness identification of a criminal suspect is not permissible until the suspect has had a chance to obtain a lawyer's help.

—The court refused to hear the appeal of newspaper heiress Patty Hearst, resulting in her return to prison on a federal bank robbery conviction.

THE ENVIRONMENT:

Unlike the Supreme Court of the 1950s and 1960s... the current court had no one dominant force.

—Construction of the $120 million Tellico Dam project in Tennessee must halt because it threatens the existence of an endangered fish, the snail darter. Congress is working to amend the Endangered Species Act in a way that would allow the project's completion.

—A federal law imposing a $560 million ceiling on liability in the event of a nuclear plant catastrophe is constitutional.

—Federal courts should not play any more than a limited role in protecting the public from any possible dangers from nuclear power plants. Such protection is up to Congress and federal agencies.

—States may impose their own water-use conditions on federal projects within their boundaries.

—No state can turn up its nose at another state's garbage — that's unconstitutional interference in interstate commerce. The ruling struck down a New Jersey law aimed at saving the state's landfill areas for in-state garbage by banning garbage from Pennsylvania and New York.

BUSINESS:

—Inspectors for the federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration may not enter private business premises without permission unless they have a court-ordered search warrant.

—States may ban oil companies from operating their own service stations.

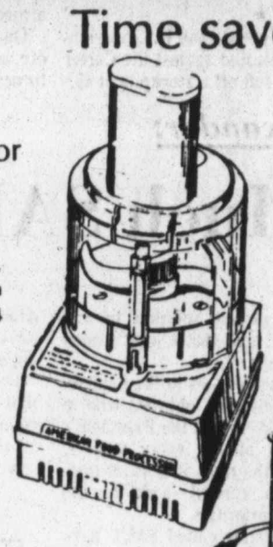

—Tax breaks which Japanese manufacturrs of electronic appliances receive from their government when shipping those products to the United States do not force the U.S. government to impose so-called "countervailing duties" to protect U.S. manufacturers from alleged unfair trade advantages.

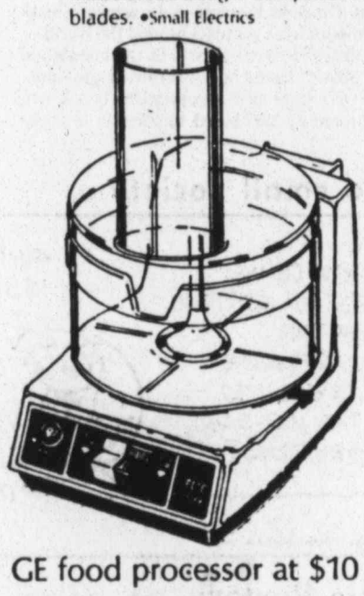

—In the future, a newspaper and broadcast station in the same town cannot have the same owner. Most such cross-ownerships now existing may remain intact under present owners, however.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

Flying Unfettered Skies

ALTHOUGH WHAT goes up is eventually supposed to come down, the airlines have been doing their best of late to disprove the role inasmuch as it applies to business trends.

Consider that passenger traffic this month already is up an estimated 20 percent—following an 18 percent jump a month ago which topped a 13 percent increase the month before that.

Revenues and profits are on the same course—and this not despite of but because of reduced fares.

IT'S ONWARD and upward simply because a bureaucrat took a very unbureaucratic approach to the airline industry and —to its initial dismay—freed it from the cocoon of federal regulations which had determined its development and operational procedures for four decades.

As CAB chairman Alfred E. Kahn saw it, the cocoon had developed into a straitjacket. The regulatory system which was supposed to ensure orderly operation in the public service actually shortchanged the public and prevented the airlines' expansion into a mass transportation industry.

Early this year Kahn reversed the pattern of 40 years. Routes, traditionally and stingily parceled out to carefully selected carriers, were opened to competition and the lines were encouraged to develop competitive fare schedules. There has been, however, a price to pay in terms of convenience.

So many special fare plans and packages have been introduced that passengers and packages/ticketing personnel alike are hard-pressed to find their way through the schedules—let alone come up with the best one for the individual's needs and wallet.

If it was difficult to get a phone call through to a reservation desk before, it is doubly so now.

STILL, THE bargain flights are worth the hassle and delay for a growing public relatively new to air travel, as indicated in some airline surveys.

Ironically, in becoming a mass transportation service, the airlines are cutting into a veteran in that category, i.e., the bus industry.

Bus operators are beginning to make loud noises about the need for some public assistance, citing lower air fares as a major cause of the industry's declining passenger problem.

But that's business—very good business as far as the airlines are concerned.

Holmes Alexander:

Too Much SALT Corrodes Mettle

WASHINGTON—The easiest solution to any problem is to put it off, and that's what's been done about SALT decisions.

The trivia of Senate monologues in the depopulated chamber, the huddling of lobbyists who in truth are the real lawmakers and the President's reversible decisions on almost every subject, have combined to push the most important matter in our time—arms control—back to the "tomorrow" category of priorities.

Also, the complex treaties called SALT have two more players edging their chairs to the table —West Europe and South Africa have joined the USA-USSR bidders. The linkage means more language about neutron warheads, Cruise missiles, Backfire bombers and the rest.

This year has already been scratched off the SALT calendar and we all may be much older before the ink is applied.

HOWEVER, PEOPLE who live these scenarios see the script somewhat like this:

The negotiators are thinking vulnerability whereas they used to think strike. This concept of damage-limitation makes a diplomatic triad.

First, there's to be a standstill Soviet-American treaty that will run until 1985 and will somewhat reduce the stockpiles.

Next is a three-year "protocol," which is a temporary treaty, to review what's happened. Third, the nuclear planners will try for a "statement of principles," which will lead into SALT III.

BY THIS TIME, France and Britain are expected to have earned the title of nuclear superpowers, and will be entitled to have their say. On my own hunch, I included South Africa which is not going to let itself be elbowed from the table.

Nothing is going to happen, there'll be no SALT III, unless the Carter administration or its successor can make the agreement acceptable to the U.S. Senate.

Senate approval will cost the administration a sizable rearmament program. The B-1 bomber may do a reappearance, the Trident submarine must be at sea, Cruise missiles must be available in large numbers and Minuteman III must be poised.

The Senate's not going to feel safe without the MX, or mobile missiles. If the Soviet Union runs to form it will balk and stall over some of these provisions, and our own peacemongers will join in the Kremlin howl that all we've done is speed up the arms race.

This is quite correct, but oversimplified. These weapons are costly. But the philosophy of the American planners has changed under the behavior of the Russians themselves in weapons-making and imperialistic ventures around the world.

This scenario addresses itself to the knowledge that the Soviets have enough throw-weight—now coupled with improved accuracy—to knock out all the American land-based missiles in a single salvo.

The only way to reduce this vulnerability is by a tricky double-play. We must make the price too high for the Soviet gamble by going ahead in the arms race, and at the same time, draw up a monitored treaty which will gradually put a ceiling on the stockpiles.

Mankind's intelligence has never been so tested as in this contest of superpower arms-control.

Don't Go Over 65 With Bad 'Breaks'

IF YOU ARE AMONG America's mounting millions of citizens who are age 65 or older, and who also drive your own car, you well may be overlooking an important area for saving money — your automobile insurance.

In most states, you, a driver 65 or over, are entitled to lower auto insurance rates. Even in states where you can't get lower rates, you may be able to cut your insurance premiums because your life-style now reduces your exposure to accidents and thus alters your insurance needs.

Rating systems used by the major auto insurers in the U.S. vary from company to company. State Farm Mutual, largest auto insurer in the nation, offers to policyholders 65 or over rates that are generally 5 percent lower than its rates for adults under 65. In a few states, rates for the 65-and-over are about 10 percent less.

YOU, AN OLDER driver, are by no means necessarily a safer driver than a younger adult — despite the lower insurance premiums available to you. In fact, liability claims from older policyholders exceed those from adults under 65.

But the key to the lower rates is that claims payments for comprehensive and collision coverages on cars owned by the 65-and-over are substantially less than claims on cars owned by other adults. The net result works out to a lower premium for the 65-and-over in most states.

As for the lower premiums for you, in a state where you are not entitled to lower rates, the explanation here is that you may be less exposed to accidents — particularly if you retire from work — and no longer drive to and from work or use your car in business.

INSURANCE COMPANIES base their rates partly on how far you drive to work and your car's total mileage each year. Your premium may be slashed if and when you notify your insurance agent that you're not driving to work or your own business anymore.

What you save varies from one insurance company to another and from state to state. If you have been commuting between 30 and 100 miles each week, and you stop driving, your rates may go down 10-15 percent. Or if you have been driving more than 100 miles a week to and from work, your rates may go down 20-25 percent.

You also may get a lower rate if you drive your car less than 7,500 miles a year — a group including many 65-and-over couples who do not travel extensively by car.

FOR INSTANCE, State Farm says if you formerly drove more than 100 miles to and from work each week and, if after your retirement, your total annual mileage falls below 7,500 miles a year, your premiums may be reduced by more than 30 percent — a saving not to be underestimated.

It also is probable that now that your weekly and annual automobile mileage is down, you're inclined to keep your car longer.

If this is the case and if the current market value of your car has depreciated to well below $1,000, why not slash your insurance premiums by eliminating your collision and comprehensive coverages? If your car is damaged or stolen, your auto insurer won't pay you more than your car's market value anyway.

It's scarcely worthwhile to insure an $800 car if collision and comprehensive premiums in your area are high! Or even if your car is valuable enough to justify your continuing to carry collision and comprehensive you still can reduce your premiums by increasing your deductible on your coverage.

(A deductible is the amount you must pay out of your own pocket if your car is damaged or stolen.)

You alone must decide, based on your financial situation, how much of any loss you could afford to absorb. If you're the target of any part of this report, start by asking your auto insurance agent if you are entitled to lower insurance premiums at your stage of life and according to your present life-style.

He'll advise you what's best in your situation.

BUT DON'T TRY to lie. Unless your agent knows you're driving less, you won't get the lower rates to which you may be entitled.

Your agent can tell you precisely how much you could save by either eliminating your collision and comprehensive coverage on an old car or by raising your deductibles no matter what your car's age.

And of course, your insurance agent will know whether your company (or any other) gives lower rates to drivers 65 or over in your state.

John D. Lofton:

Pot's A Bummer Number, Man

WASHINGTON—Laraine Newman, the conehead kid of NBC's Saturday Night Live, is pictured in the current issue of High Times magazine with a boxing glove on her right hand, a joint in her left hand and wearing a "Repeal POT-hibition" T-shirt.

When asked why she agreed to pose this way, Newman says: "Well, because marijuana is obviously harmless and there shouldn't be penalties for it." Now, the first part of her answer is a medical question; the second part is a political question.

What her response proves is that just because one feels strongly about the latter position doesn't necessarily mean that one knows anything at all about the former.

In the 1976 edition of "Marijuana Research Findings," published by the National Institute on Drug Abuse, Dr. Robert Dupont, NIDA director, states flatly:

"TO THE OVERSIMPLIFIED question, 'Is marijuana use safe?' we can offer a simplistic, but unequivocal, 'No.' There is good evidence that being 'high' (intoxicated by marijuana) impairs responses ranging from driving to intellectual and interpersonal functioning...Marijuana can be hazardous even when used occasionally."

In December 1977, an AMA house of delegates adopted a report of its council on scientific affairs, which concludes:

"Marijuana is potentially damaging to health in a variety of ways, but it can be especially harmful when used by a person who is immature, unstable or already ill."

This May, the Philadelphia Inquirer carried a letter which took issue with the paper's editorial assertion that marijuana is harmless. Frederick Goldstein, associate professor of pharmacology at Philadelphia's College of Pharmacy and Science, wrote:

"CHRONIC MARIJUANA smoking has produced abnormalities in lung function similar to those changes which occur after prolonged inhalation of known lung irritants.

"There is a distinct possibility that such marijuana-induced preliminary alternations may lead to further deterioration in users; this aspect has not been fully explored."

In a slide show presentation a few weeks ago to the American Lung Association meeting in Boston, Dr. Donald Tashkin, an associate professor of medicine at UCLA, reported on an experiment involving subjects who smoked an average of five joints a week.

Matching this group with a group that smoked more than 16 regular tobacco cigarettes per day, Tashkin concluded: "I'd say no one should be lulled into a false sense of security that smoking marijuana regularly (at least three times a week) is without harmful effects to the lungs."

The Brighter Side

There is the story of the fellow who went to buy a new pickup truck. Three of his friends went along with him. After the deal was made, the owner and one fellow climbed into the cab of the truck and the other two got into the back.

They were going around a curb at a bit more speed than the law allows where they hit a slick spot on the pavement and the truck slid off the road, down an embankment and into the river.

The two fellows in front managed to climb out the open windows and swim to shore. They ran up and down the bank, looking for their friends but couldn't find a trace of them.

"Oh Lordy, Lordy," said the driver, wringing his hands. "I bet I know what happened. I bet they couldn't get the tailgate down."

I INTERVIEWED Laraine Newman, confronted her with all this evidence and pressed her for her evidence to back up the statement that pot smoking is "obviously harmless."

She confessed she had none really, admitting her interview comments "were somewhat naive (and that she had) spoken out of ignorance and a lack of responsibility."

Explaining that she no longer takes drugs of any kind, has outgrown them and has seen the folly of them, Newman told me that pot can make you paranoid.

She told how when she was in high school, once when she was high, she sat in her room watching a plant thinking that it was going to cover her entire window and block out all the light.

"This frightened me so much," she says, "that I quit smoking marijuana." Newman says that she now remembers things much better, like numbers, than when she smoked pot a lot. She also claims that in her interview she "made a lot of statements against cocaine."

But, she says, none of what she told me appeared in her High Times interview because the magazine "is drug-oriented and does not want to display this."

WHEN I CALLED the magazine's press spokesman, Mike Luckman and asked him about the deletion of Newman's anti-drug remarks, he became very upset. He demanded to know if Newman was backing away from what she had said.

I told him to calm down and simply confirm or deny that the magazine had edited out what she said was edited out. Luckman refused to either check the complete transcript of the interview or let me read it.

He said that Newman had okayed it, in edited form, prior to its publication. Newman says this is not true, that she recommended several changes, but all of them were ignored.

Offhand Thoughts

There's an identity crisis everywhere. Many Americans are trying to find out who they are, what they're made of and how they can lose 10 or 20 pounds of it.

Nobody knows more about the high cost of living than politicians. That's why they keep giving themselves pay raises.

Remember, if the match is damp, strike it on glass.

Property Thefts Top City Crime

Recent reports made available by the Lubbock Police Department today continued to show a high concentration of property crimes.

According to James Troy Bass of 2316 14th St., rear, someone removed a screen from an unlocked window at his home this weekend and made off with $600 worth of stereo equipment.

The same type goods, along with a television set, reportedly were stolen from Arthur Lee Cherry's residence at 2020 5th St., No. 42, recently. The $950 haul came after a burglar reportedly reached through a previously broken window and unlocked a rear door.

Lubbock police today were doing follow-up work on a reported rape and two aggravated robberies.

A city woman, who said she was walking home Saturday afternoon along Quirt Avenue, told police two men drove up alongside her and offered her a ride.

The woman said the men introduced themselves as friends of her son.

After she climbed into the brown, 4-door sedan, the victim said the men drove her to an area near the Idalou Highway and Loop 289, where both of them raped her.

The victim said one of the men then took her purse and removed $5 from it. The victim was taken to Estacado High School, 1504 E. Estacado St., where she reports indicated.

Garry John Houston of Chandler said he was crossing a parking lot in the 1700-block of 8th Street about 5:20 a.m. Sunday, when two men approached.

One of the suspects, brandishing what appeared to be a pistol, told Houston to hand over his wallet.

Houston said the tall suspects, in their late teens to mid-20s, took about $300 cash as well as some credit cards during the holdup, before they fled north in an alley. Later, reports indicated, it was determined that the pistol had been a toy.

Earlier, Patti Sue Gray, 22, had flagged down a Lubbock policeman in the 3400-block of Avenue H, to report another armed holdup.

The young department store cashier said she had been walking toward a companion's car about 12:40 a.m. Sunday when a tall man stepped from a car and demanded her money.

The woman said she gave the man $25 from her pocketbook, then was told to give him more or face getting her "head blown off."

With that, the victim showed the man her empty wallet. A companion also was told to give up his money, but the man reportedly had no money at all.

The bandit, who flashed a .22-caliber pistol, then fled with a companion in a black or dark blue Oldsmobile or Buick, reports indicate.

A Lubbock police officer said he had gone to assist other policemen early Sunday, following a reported domestic disturbance.

Before the incident was over, the officer had faced an alleged knifing attempt and a 27-year-old tile layer was in custody on suspicion of public intoxication, aggravated assault on a police officer and being loud and profane.

Officer William Allen said the man told him to leave as the officer walked up. Allen said he told the suspect to hold down his epithets, then stood back when the man allegedly drew an 8 1/2-inch long steak knife from his back pocket.

The man reportedly pointed the blade at Allen's chest before the officer drew his service revolver.

Allen said he told the man to drop the knife, but the suspect replaced it in his pocket.

Asked by Allen if he still wanted to "cut" the officer, the man reportedly pulled the knife out again before saying no.

The suspect reportedly then threw the knife to the ground.

The officer said he then asked the man to shake hands. As the suspect did so, Allen said he jerked the man off the porch and "threw him to the ground face down and handcuffed him."

The officer said he then took the man to the Lubbock County Jail, where he was booked just before 3 a.m.

Emma Darnell of 2606 Quirt Ave., No. 1, said she returned home recently to find her 6-week-old Himalayan cat dead in a dumpster behind her residence. The woman said the animal, valued at $150, apparently had been killed by someone who broke its neck.

In reported break-ins, Suzie Biles of 2224 36th St. said someone stole $1,200 worth of assorted clothes and other goods from her house recently.

Fluoride Program Effective

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Dental researchers reported today that a two-year fluoride treatment study in schools of 17 American communities showed that a weekly mouth rinse program is an effective and inexpensive way of reducing tooth decay.

"We now have a method for partial prevention of caries (cavities) that is effective, costs very little, is easily administered and is readily accepted by the public," said Dr. James Carlos of the National Institute of Dental Research.

He said tooth decay is a major public health problem and regularly leads to infection, pain, disfigurement and very expensive dental treatment. He said fluoride is the most effective weapon known to fight tooth decay.

Many communities have fluoride added to public water supplies as a cavity-prevention measure but 17 percent of the population lives in areas lacking central water systems and 33 percent lives in communities with water systems that are not fluoridated.

Taking a cue from laboratory studies which indicated that diluted solutions of sodium fluoride used as a mouth rinse would reduce cavities, the dental research institute in 1975 started the $2.5 million school mouth-rinse program in 17 communities.

Children of elementary school age were instructed to rinse their mouths once a week for one minute with a very dilute fluoride solution. Some 75,000 children participated in the study.

Preliminary results just tabulated show that cavity reduction after two years ranged up to 46 percent among the children. Most of the communities reported a reduction in the 18-30 percent range but two communities reported little or no reduction of tooth decay. Carlos said the reason was not clear but he suspected a statistical error of some kind.

"In nearly every case, substantial evidence of caries reduction is already apparent," he said.

Carlos estimated that there are 20 million school children in the United States who could benefit from such a school based program and he urged American communities to adopt such a program.

Officials estimated that the cost of such a mouth-rinse effort would be 50 cents per child per school year.

The 17 communities which participated in the school program are:

Charles City County, Va.; Waushara County, Calumet County, Wis.; Ansonia and Darby, Conn.; Birmingham, Ala.; Geauga County, Ohio; Angola, Jerby and North Collins, N.Y.; Anaconda, Mont.; Guam; Watkins Glen, Montour Falls and Odessa, N.Y.; Arlington, Mass.; Dalores, Mancos, Montrose, Telluride, Ouray, Ridgway, Naturita, Uravan, Paradox, Basin, and Norwood, Colo.; Wharton, and Conroe, Texas; Livermore County, Calif.; St. Joseph County, Mich.; Three Village School District, Long Island, N.Y.; Independence, Mo.; and the Mission Hill area of Roxbury, South Jamaica Plain, Fenway and Brighton, Mass.

Slums, Rural Areas Gain 102 Doctors

NEW YORK (AP) — Responding to an appeal by the federal government, 102 young physicians, dentists and other health professionals have signed up to work in slum and rural areas of New York, New Jersey, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

Those who signed up will serve one to three years working in health clinics and hospital outpatient services as part of the National Health Service Corps.

U.N. Envoy 'Accepts' Presidential Rebuke

PARIS (UPI) — U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young, appearing glum and dispirited, said in an interview published today he "accepted" President Carter's rebuke for saying there were "hundreds, even thousands" of U.S. political prisoners.

But Young denied he had overstated the number and he defended most of his controversial statements as right in the long run.

Young was asked by a reporter from the International Herald Tribune how he took President Carter's rebuke of his remark to a Paris newspaper that hundreds, even thousands, of political prisoners were in U.S. jails.

"I accepted the rebuke," Young said in Geneva where he is on U.N. business.

"The overstatement was there."

Later he added, "I didn't overstate the number of people. It was a casual statement which perhaps should not have been made ... and I'm reluctant to discuss it now. But I assure you that I'll come back to the question of what is a political prisoner in the United States."

Asked if he was hurt by criticism of his remarks, Young said, "It hurts, only because I am anxious over the possibility of having hurt my country or President Carter."

"But I still believe that most of the things that I have been criticized for were right and in the long run one of these days, maybe a year from now or so, it might be nice to go back and recall some of the scandalous headlines. I think you will find that a lot of them were pretty accurate and at the time served some purpose."

He added that in connection with Soviet dissident trials, a critique of the Soviet Union becomes stronger when given from the perspective of having faced up to U.S. weaknesses and imperfections.

Reporter Jonathan Power wrote that he found Young "dispirited and gloomy. He talked extraordinarily slowly and carefully picked out every word as if he were shopping in a delicatessen."

In a discussion about his controversial remarks, Young said, I guess the only way I can face life is to live it and to enjoy it and to be open, and if I can't be that I don't want to be anything. I am naive enough to believe that's the American way."

When Power said that Young's goal of a solution for Namibia (South West Africa) is in sight thanks to Young's "quiet diplomacy," the ambassador replied, "I don't agree ... I think the only reason we had enough credibility to maintain the confidence of black African and guerrilla leaders and maybe even South Africa is that we have been very candid and open and honest.

"I refuse to say one thing in one place and another thing some place else.

Man Jailed For Land Loan Fraud

DENVER (UPI) — An fast-talking entrepreneur accused in two multimillion-dollar swindles was being held in the Denver City Jail under a $25,000 bond pending a scheduled Thursday appearance in District Court.

Police said Juan Francico Cortez, 47, had $50 in his pocket when he was re-arrested last Friday for investigation of a second scheme to obtain interest in valuable property by frudulently promising to obtain loans.

Cortez early last week was accused in a scheme to obtain $112.5 million worth of gold and tin mining property in Wyoming. He allegedly used the same method to obtain half interest in Kempton Aviation, Inc. of Grand Juntion, Colo., by promising to obtain $900,000 in loans.

Larry Kempton, president of the Western Slope company, told investigators Cortez contacted him by telephone on June 16. He said Cortez promised to arrange financing for corporate improvements in exchange for half interest in the firm, which Kempton valued at $300,000 but said would increase substantially with the capital investments.

Investigators said Kempton in late June flew to Maimi, Fla., to arrange financing for the loan. With him, police said, were Cortez and James L. Hoffman, the alleged victim of the Wyoming mining property swindle.

Hoffman, the manager of the hotel in Deadwood, S.D., accused Cortez of gaining half interest in his mining lease, valued at $225 million, by promising to secure a $1.5 million loan from a family trust in a bank in Dallas.

Hoffman, who said Cortez was living in a southwest Denver mansion when they first met June 6, later learned there was no family trust and the check Cortez allegedly wrote him was written on a closed account.

Investigators would not comment on Cortez' relationship with the First General Funding Corp. of Miami, which allegedly made the loan commitments to both Hoffman and Kempton.

Cortez originally was jailed last Tuesday. He was released Wednesday on a $5,000 appearance bond and checked into a $20-a-night hotel room where he was re-arrested Friday.

Police said investigators also executed a search warrant in suburban Lakewood, Colo., and seized a filing cabinet believed to contain Cortez's personal records. One investigator said notes in the cabinet indicated Cortez planned to write a book describing himself as "the world's biggest con artist."

Injured Wives Wait To Obtain Help

CHICAGO (AP) — Many wives whose husband beat them try to hide that fact from doctors by waiting days before seeking medical help and by inventing a false cause for their injuries, according to a report in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Beaten women often come to hospital emergency rooms a day or two after they are hurt, said the report in the July 21 Journal. It said that physicians eventually may be responsible, as they are in child abuse cases in some states, to recognize wife abuse cases and act as a witness or refer the victim to social agencies.

Atlantic City Pier Bought

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Resorts International Inc. announced today it has purchased the Steel Pier on the Boardwalk near its casino hotel here.

Resorts International said it purchased the 80-year-old pier, birthplace of scores of show business careers and home of a noteable diving horse act, from a group of local businessmen for 45,000 shares of its class A stock. The stock closed at $86 on Friday, making the deal worth about $3.87 million.

Company officials would not immediately reveal their plans for the pier, which stretches 2,250 feet from the Boardwalk into the Atlantic Ocean. It is one of the longest amusement piers in the world.

The pier is a half-block long and is located across the Boardwalk from Resorts International Hotel Casino between the hotel and the 56.6 acres of vacant urban renewal property where the Florida-based firm plans to build a new $75 million, 1,000-room casino hotel within the next few years.

Murder Investigation Rapped By Family

BEAUMONT (UPI) — The family of five persons allegedly killed by a former in-law say they are upset with the investigation that took place of slayings, saying careless law enforcement officials trampled much of the evidence needed for a conviction.

Sheriff Doil Pounds of Anahuac failed to take fingerprints or photographs at the home of the Bishop Phillips family where deputies went after son George Phillips returned home late Sunday, July 2 and knew something was wrong.

His parents, Bishop Phillips, 64, and his wife, Ester, 66, never left home except to go to work. And George's brother, Elmer Phillips, 31, his wife, Martha, 34, and their son, Jason, 4, were visiting from Woodward, Okla.

Deputies entering the simple frame home later in the day found a fan running, the television set blaring, chicken in a frying pan burning, and a coffee pot that had perked itself dry. There were a few spots of blood but not many.

"It didn't even look like a crime scene," Pounds later told reporters.

Although officials have declined to criticize Pounds, Phillips family members expressed anger with him.

Blood samples were sent to a Beaumont laboratory and a print from a door frame was taken by Winnie deputy Robert Ogden after Pounds' initial investigation of the home.

But the FBI did not enter the case until Wednesday, three days after the family was reported missing. The burned out car used to transport the victims to their common grave was linked to the case a day later. The bodies were found Sunday, a week after the family's disappearance.

One week later — after Ovide Joseph Dugas, 32, led authorities to the pine needle-covered gravesite concealing the bodies — investigators apparently have failed to find the actual murder weapon.

And, for reasons unclear, Linda Burnett, 30, the woman Dugas identified as his accomplice in the apparent revenge slaying of his former in-laws, was freed Friday after a bond reduction from a half million dollars to $100,000.

Criminal District Judge Larry Gist Friday ordered Dugas, a former patient of the Beaumont Neurological Center, to undergo 30 days of psychiatric testing in Houston. Bruce Smith, an attorney for Dugas, said his client was not ready to enter a plea in the five counts of capital murder.

Pounds said Dugas, who had been married to Mary Phillips, one of two daughters in the family of six children, had been slow to cooperate, but finally he relented.

"He was pretty emotional to a point — real nervous and upset," Pounds said.

Peace Justice Jack Cravy, behind his formica bench in a back room of the Hamshire Grocery, was more blunt than prudent in his assessment of the situation:

"The man was mad at the old man and the old lady because they sent him off to a mental institution for being off in the head," Cravy told UPI. "He said he'd kill them all when he got back."

Repaving Scheduled For Traffic Circle

The traffic circle at the intersection of U.S. Highways 84 and 87 will be resurfaced beginning Tuesday, the state highway department has announced.

Traffic will be routed through the construction area but may be temporarily delayed, officials said. Work will not be permitted between 7 a.m. and 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. and 6 p.m.

The facility is expected to be back in normal operation by Thursday.

'Gasahol' Mix Cuts Carbon Monoxide

NEW YORK (AP) — Carbon monoxide emissions from cars would be cut 17 percent if all late-model autos in New York used a fuel containing 10 percent alcohol, according to a survey reported by the U.S. Department of Energy.

The federal study, done by the Aerospace Corp. as a consultant to the energy department, used a computer to estimate the reduced air pollution if all 1975 through 1978 cars and taxis in the city used the 10 percent alcohol mixture.

Refugee Claims 49 Americans In Viet Jails

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A State Department spokesman says the department will investigate a Vietnamese refugee's claim that he saw 49 Americans in Vietnam jails two years after the war ended.

"I think we will follow up on this information," said Frank Sieverts, who represented the department at this weekend's annual convention of the National League of Families of American Prisoners and Missing in Southeast Asia.

Sieverts said Sunday that this was the first U.S. authorities had heard of the claim, made by Ngo Phi Hung, 48, who arrived in the United States early this month with his wife and 11 children.

Hung said he was able to visit jails in South Vietnam after the North Vietnamese took control April 30, 1975, because he had volunteered a 100-unit truck transfer service.

He said a prison warden told him three of the 49 men he saw were civilians, that three officers had died, two by strangulation, and that six others were in poor health.

While he "didn't dare ask" why the Americans were still being held, Hung said, "other officials I talked to said 'We're keeping the prisoners in exchange for aid for reconsuruction because the United State agreed to give us $2 billion.'"

Hung said he had made a list of the prisoners' names, but lost it to pirates while fleeing to Thailand last February.

He said he believes 200 to 250 Americans are still being held captive in five Vietnamese jails.

Le Dhi Anh, a Vietnamese woman who has lived in this country since 1964, said she interviewed Hung for 6½ hours last week.

Majority Leader Labels Young 'Irresponsible'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd says Andrew Young is down to his last strike.

One more "irresponsible statement" by Young, says Byrd, and the U.N. ambassador should be fired by President Carter.

Appearing on a television interview program Sunday, Byrd called Young's comment last week that there were "hundreds, perhaps thousands" of political prisoners in the United States "the most serious in a series of irresponsible statements" by the ambassador.

Byrd said Young's remark undercut U.S. foreign policy and the Carter administration's attempt to pressure the Soviets on the human rights issue.

Young's statement, Byrd said, gave "succor and comfort" to the Soviets and was "of sufficient gravity that resignation should be considered."

"And if he (Young) makes another irresponsible statement that fits into this pattern of bad judgment, I think he should go," the West Virginia Democrat said.

Byrd said he had kept silent after Young's other controversial, often off-the-cuff comments because the ambassador had "contributed a great service to this country."

Byrd appeared on the CBS program "Face the Nation."

On Saturday, President Carter, in Europe for the economic summit conference, telephoned Young to tell the ambassador he was "unhappy" about his recent comment and did not want such an incident repeated.

White House press secretary Jody Powell said Young "apologized for the problems" his remarks had caused. He said he did not know if Young offered to resign, but that, if he had, the resignation would not have been accepted.

Young, arriving in Belgrade for talks Sunday, said he had not meant to compare conditions in the United States with those in the Soviet Union. He said he had tried to point out the "ridiculousness" of the trials of Russian dissidents.

Several of Young's critics sought after the interview, published in a Paris newspaper Wednesday, to get an impeachment resolution through Congress, but the effort was defeated 293-82 in the House.

Nevertheless, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill said he thinks "Andy could have done well if he had curbed his tongue at this particular time."

Young's comment was published as the United States was criticizing the trials of Soviet dissidents Anatoly Shchanransky and Alexander Ginzburg.

Asked about the trials, Young told an interviewer that they would not prevent pursuit of the U.S.-Soviet arms limitation talks, and then added:

"After all, in our prisons too there are hundreds, perhaps even thousands of people whom I would call political prisoners. Ten years ago I myself was tried in Atlanta for having organized a protest movement."

He later qualified the remark, but the damage, according to Young's critics, already had been done.

The Soviet press quickly reported what Young had said. The Soviet news agency Tass said his comments "signify an official admission that political persecution is widespread in the United States."

On Sunday, Mayor Richard Hatcher of Gary, Ind., in a published interview, supported Young's position, saying that Young was "telling the truth" and that the presence of political prisoners in U.S. prisons "is a known fact."

Young also received support from Ugandan dictator Idi Amin, who said Young was "telling the truth" about "the oppression of the majority of black people in America." Amin was quoted by Ugandan radio.

Former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger said Young should resign if he could not keep his "outrageous" opinions private. Kissinger said Young "has to begin to understand that he is an ambassador of the United States ... (and) he should learn discipline or not continue in his post."

Young, a personal friend of the president's, has been given much of the credit for the United States opening up better relations with black Africa and other Third World countries.

But on a number of occasions his offhand remarks have left him deep in controversy and forced to make "clarifying statements." Usually the State Department would — as it did in the recent Parkis interview — say the remarks did not reflect U.S. policy.

Shortly after taking over his post as U.N. ambassador, Young angered the British by saying that Britain had "almost invented racism" and that the English were "a little chicken" about facing up to it.

In another interview and in subsequent statements, he said he considered presidents John F. Kennedy, Lyndon B. Johnson, Richard M. Nixon and Gerald R. Ford all racists.

At another point, he angered both the Swedes and the residents of the New York city borough of Queens by saying that blacks in Sweden were treated "no better than blacks in Queens."

Last year Young angered U.S. conservatives by saying the Cubans were "a stabelizing influence" in Angola and suggesting that conservatives in the United States should not be "paranoid about a few hundred, or even a few thousand, Communists" in Africa.

13 Nations Discussing Antarctica

By RICHARD BOUDREAUX

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Diplomats and scientists from 13 nations meet here today to seek a formula for managing Antarctica's untapped riches, including the krill, a tiny shrimp-like creature that could be a major source of protein for the world.

By the end of the three-week meeting, the 90 delegates from the United States, Soviet Union and 11 other nations that supervise the "white continent" hope to agree on principles regulating exploitation of its marine life and mineral resources.

The delegates believe an agreement is crucial to prevent fishing wars now and to set precedents for regulating the unmeasured Antarctic reserves of oil, gas, coal and other minerals.

There are no fishing controls in the south polar waters, but five nations already fish there, and recent widespread adoption of 200-mile fishing zones is expected to bring more.

Participants in the conference admit an accord will be difficult because seven of the 13 nations claim sovereignty over parts of Antarctica's land mass and fishing rights 200 miles off its shore. The other six refuse to recognize the claims.

The antarctic's waters contain an estimated 5 billion tons of krill, a 2½-inch shellfish that can be peeled and eaten like shrimp, made into fish sticks or served as a paste. Biologists say 50 to 150 million tons, up to twice the world's annual fish catch, could be harvested each year without endangering the species.

Krill fishing is not yet commercially profitable, but three nations attending the conference — Japan, Poland and the Soviet Union — have invested a decade of research into it and favor a minimun of conservation controls.

"The exploiting nations have to realize that we're not here for the sake of krill alone but to preserve an entire ecosystem," said a scientist from one of the 10 countries making up the "conservationist" faction.

"Krill is a major source of food for whales in the region," he continued. "The Soviets almost wiped out the sperm whales in the Antarctic in the '60s, and they need to be left with a generous supply of krill to make a comeback."

The seven nations that signed the 1959 Antarctic Treaty and claim territory there agreed to postpone the sovereignty issue until 1991, but that is complicating the fishing talks because claims by Argentina, Britain and Chile overlap.

The other claimants are Australia, New Zealand, Norway and France.

The rest of the treaty club, Belgium, Japan, Poland, South Africa, the Soviet Union and the United States, opposes dividing the fishing rights according to territorial claims.

The 13 were unable to agree on draft proposals during a three-week meeting at Canberra, Australia, that ended March 16, so they are meeting here to debate a new draft that has not been made public.

Carter Policies On Arms Sales 'Questionable'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter Administration is finding its desire to establish a highly restrictive overseas arms-sale policy blocked by the realities of international affairs, a Brookings Institution study says.

The private research group released a study Sunday branding Carter's arms sales performance as "questionable" and saying it was doubtful his record would be much different from the Ford Administration's because of a similar interpretation of U.S. interest.

The mildly critical report notes that within a few months after President Carter said in May 1977 that U.S. arms transfers would be "an exceptional foreign policy instrument," the administration had sent to Congress 45 requests to authorize arms sales totaling $4.1 billion.

Less than a tenth of the sales were earmarked for countries not subject to Carter's policy of restraint: The NATO countries, Japan, Australia and New Zealand.

The study says Carter is under pressure to continue past patterns of arms sales.

The administration "has found itself supporting arms sales in furtherance of treaty commitments (to South Korea), to retain good relations with countries holding important assets (Iran), to fulfill commitments made in return for base rights (Spain) and to support Israel."

The study adds, that there is nothing to suggest that a policy of restraint on the part of the United States would be viewed by the Soviet Union and other arms-producing counties as anything but "a unique opportunity to obtain new influence and customers."

'Alternative' Politicians Plan Inflation Fight

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Self-styled "alternative" politicians, many of them veterans of the 1960s political wars, are developing new issues in preparing for the 1980s. Surprisingly, a progressive war on inflation is high on the agenda.

At a four-day conference that ended Sunday, economist Gar Alperovitz and socialist Michael Harrington exhorted a gathering of 550 state and local activists — including dozens of elected officials — to fight inflation with the vigor that they currently battle high unemployment.

Alperovitz told the National Conference on Alternative State and Local Public Policies that inflation is "the single most important issue in the life of an ordinary family."

The conference is an annual forum for political activists. It is a loose-knit group of consumer and environmental advocates, as well as economic-minded politicians who believe corporations pay too little taxes and wield too much influence.

Alperovitz, co-director of the National Center for Economic Alternatives, said efforts to reduce unemployment continue to be crucial, but he added that if inflation is not tamed "we will be fighting a continual rear-guard action to hold onto what there already is."

His remarks signaled a significant shift in progressive strategy. In the past, leftists have abdicated the inflation battle to conservatives, arguing that unemployment is a more critical concern. But Harrington, California activist Tom Hayden and a host of others this time agreed with Alperovitz that inflation is too crucial an issue to ignore.

Harrington said the three main elements for progressive political action should be comprehensive reform of the tax system, achieving full employment and reducing inflation in such key areas as health care, housing and food.

Conference members, many of them veterans of past anti-poverty, anti-war or civil rights campaigns, are loathe to associate themselves with the big-spending image of liberal politics.

So they are calling themselves progressives, though more than a few activists said they aren't sure everyone means the same thing by using the label.

Whatever a progressive is, many agreed, times are tough. The activists expressed dismay especially with a recent string of conservative triumph in areas such as affirmative action, tax revisions, women's rights and aid to the poor.

Sam Brown, who heads ACTION, the federal volunteer agency that runs the Peace Corps and Vista, said in a speech, "American liberalism is out of touch with the nation's mood."

Carol Bellamy, president of the New York City Council, said bluntly, "Many of the groups that made up the progressive coalition a decade ago have disappeared and "those that remain now disagree as often as they agree."

"They quarrel over foreign policy, where there is no single issue like Vietnam of overriding importance. We debate whether human rights are more important than limitations on strategic arms," she said.

"Groups in the progressive coalition quarrel over domestic policy. Workers complain that the demands of environmentalists will cost them their jobs, and white ethnic groups complain about affirmative action quotas."

The last of the Roman emperors, Constantine Palaeologus, died in 1453 during the capture of Constantinople by the Turks.

DR. JAMES R. CRUMLEY

Lutherans Elect New President

CHICAGO (AP) — Dr. James R. Crumley, 53, of New York City has been elected president of the 3.1 million-member Lutheran Church in America over Dr. William H. Lazareth, who was favored to win.

In a marathon election that began Tuesday at the church's convention and ended Saturday, Crumley collected 337 votes — two more than the simple majority needed to win — to defeat Lazareth on the sixth ballot.

Lazareth, 50, of Philadelphia, a noted theologian and social action advocate, had been among the leaders all the way in the balloting and was considered the favorite to succeed Dr. Robert J. Marshall as president of the nation's third largest Protestant body. Marshall had been president 10 years.

On the sixth ballot, Lazareth barely lost, receiving 330 votes.

Crumley, secretary since 1974, was regarded as a pastoral type rather than as an administrator. He told the convention that good management was essential in the church but "there is something else that is more important about the style of God's people." He said this was in their concern for one another and in "knowing what it means to be related together in God's love."

"I did not seek it (the presidency)," Crumley said after he was elected. "I wasn't running, and in the eyes of some, I wasn't even walking fast enough."

Officials said that Crumley, in a four-minute address Friday, was "sincere, simple, articulate and unpretentious — and presented a view of himself that many of the others did not have of him as secretary of the church."

Before being elected secretary, Crumley was pastor for eight years of the Ascension Lutheran Church in Savannah, Ga. Prior to that he was pastor at churches in Oak Ridge, Tenn., and Greeneville, Tenn.

Hearing Begins In Test Tube Baby Lawsuit

NEW YORK (UPI) — A Florida couple, John and Doris Del Zio, claim in a $1.5 million lawsuit in U.S. district court that Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center and the center's chief of obstetrics "maliciously and arbitrarily" destroyed a test-tube embryo that was to have been their child.

Jury selection in the trial was to begin today before Judge Charles Stewart.

The procedure, "in vitro" (from the Latin words meaning "in glass") fertilization, is similar to one used to impregnate British housewife Lesley Brown, who is to give birth shortly to the world's first test tube baby at Oldham and District Hospital in Manchester, England.

The Del Zios charge that Dr. Raymond Vande Wiele, the hospital's chief of obstetrics and gynecology, ordered the test tube containing the laboratory fertilized embryo opened on the ground the procedure was unethical.

The Del Zios, Roman Catholics who were married in 1968, had gone to the hospital because the woman's fallopian tubes were blocked and she could not conceive. Both have children from previous marriages.

On Sept. 11, 1973, Mrs. Del Zio underwent an operation in which eggs were removed from her ovaries. The eggs were then rushed to Columbia Presbyterian where Dr. Landrum Shettles fertilized the eggs with sperm from her husband, a dentist.

But, the Del Zios' court papers charged that on Sept. 13 — three days before the embryo was to be implanted in her womb — Vande Wiele called Shettles to his office and showed him the opened test tube with the destroyed embryonic culture.

Reportedly because of the incident, Shettles resigned from Columbia University's College of Surgeons and Physicians, where he had been on the staff for 27 years.

The Del Zios charged that because of the alleged action by Vande Wiele they "suffered severe physican and mental pain and other injuries and incurred substantial medical expenses in connection with the wrongfully aborted fertilization procedure."

Coast Guard Seeks Jammer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Metropolitan New Orleans apparently is the source of a powerful radio transmitter that jammed VHF Channel 16 — the marine distress channel, said officials.

The transmitter — with an estimated power of 1,000 watts — jammed the channel three times last week, but halted before devices could home in on the signal, said a Coast Guard spokesman.

A Coast Guard helicopter was on standby Saturday with a load of tracking equipment. But the signal was not broadcast.

"We have pretty much of a contingency plan when something like this occurs," said Lt. Phillip Bird of the Coast Guard.

"We try to find out what's jamming the channel and where it's located. We notify the FCC. And if it continues, we try to ge an aircraft up.

"It doesn't happen too often. Generally, we'll find that a ship or someone will leave a microphone on and not know it. A lot of times, it can be located by voices in the background," he said.

CHALLENGER'S CHAIR — Self-exiled Soviet chess master Viktor Korchnoi, the challenger for the world title, tries out his special $1,400 Swiss-made chair Sunday at Baguio, The Philippines. Korchnoi plans to use the chair in competition against the world champion, Anatoly Karpov of the USSR, in matches which begin today. Karpov agreed to let Korchnoi use the non-regulation chair after it is inspected and X-rayed. (AP Laserphoto)

German, Japanese Roles Ironic

Analysis

By ARTHUR L. GAVSHON

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Four allied victors in World War II, now in need, urged their onetime German and Japanese foes to share the runaway prosperity they have achieved.

At the Schaumburg Palace summit conference room in this West German capital, that theme was constantly hammered by President Carter, British Prime Minister James Callaghan, French President Valery Giscard D'Estaing and Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau.

Import more goods from their industrialized partners, they urged the Germans and Japanese. Quit "hard sell" policies in the world's shrunken markets. Help the needy nations of Asia and Africa more.

But the host to the wartime allies, Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, and Nazi Germany's Axis partner Japan, led now by Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda, seemed determined to look ahead, not back.

They stressed that the Americans, British, French and Canadians must put their own economic houses in order if a global recession is to be averted.

Buy less foreign oil, they told the Americans. Use less energy. Produce cheaper goods.

Last year 62 million West Germans and 114 million Japanese among them earned about $15 billion more abroad than they spent, mainly at the expense of their fellow industrialized partners.

More than 400 million North Americans, British and French spent $25.4 billion more abroad than they earned in 1977.

This year, unless agreements are shaped up at this Bonn conference of seven capitalist countries (which also includes Italy), the gap between the old allies and old foes seems certain to widen to the advantage of the Germans and Japanese.

Italy is in a special position. It started off the war as a partner of Germany. Then in 1943 it changed sides. Today the Italians are in the same kind of economic trouble as the Americans, British, French and Canadians.

There are reasons why the Germans and Japanese are doing better than the wartime allies.

During the conflict many key German and Japanese industrial centers were bombed out. When peace came, they re-equipped, retooled, and modernized, usually with allied help, while the European allies had to stumble along with old, often outdated plants.

The allies also had the responsibility of defending West Germany and Japan in the postwar period and still spend billions doing so.

Germans and Japanese, for example, live under the umbrella of the U.S. nuclear deterrent. There are some 200,000 U.S. troops in this country, even though Germany's 450,000-member armed forces are the strongest in Western Europe.

Japan has defense forces for internal security but not the kind of air, land and sea power that costs so much money to build and maintain.

The Carter administration insists that the U.S. economy is fundamentally sound even if it rates an energy conservation program as absolutely essential.

Canada argues in the same way.

Both Britain and France claim to be recovering slowly but steadily.

All four have been helping developing countries, especially former colonies. Callaghan, for example, is ready to write off $2 billion worth of old debts which poorer countries of Africa and Asia are finding it difficult to repay.

Unarmed Craft Downed

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — An unarmed Iranian military helicopter that strayed into Soviet airspace was shot down last month and a second copter was damaged by Russian anti-aircraft fire, Iran's ministry of information announced today.

All persons aboard the first helicopter were killed, a ministry spokesman said, but the second helicopter landed at a Soviet airfield despite the damage.

The number of persons aboard the helicopters was not revealed and they were not identified. The spokesman said both helicopters were unarmed.

In a prepared statement the spokesman said:

"On June 21, two unarmed helicopters of the imperial Iranian armed forces lost their way in heavy fog in the Sabzevar region (east of Tehran) while on training flights and strayed by mistake into the Soviet Union."

Match Starts Despite Flap Over Flag

By EHITH M. LEDERER

BAGUIO CITY, Philippines (AP) — Russian defector Viktor Korchnoi, unable to play for the world chess title under the Swiss flag, defiantly sported the Swiss national emblem on his lapel at today's formal opening of the match and remained seated when the Soviet anthem was played for champion Anatoly Karpov.

But the music turned out to be the "Internationale," anthem of international Communism — not the Soviet national song. Realizing the mistake, Korchnoi sat grinning on the stage of the new $3.5 million convention center in this resort city. Karpov and Philippine and Soviet officials stood solemnly at attention facing the Philippine and Russian flags.

Then everyone sat down while Korchnoi's selection, a movement from Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, was played.

The mix-up in anthems was "an honest mistake," match organizer Florencio Campomanes, deputy president of the International Chess Federation (FIDE), said later.

Philippine President Ferdinand E. Marcos officially declared the championship match open before a crowd of more than 1,000. In the only real piece of business of the two-hour ceremony, Korchnoi chose a white pawn from Karpov's clasped hands and won the right to make the first move in Tuesday's opening game.

The flag and anthem incidents were the latest round of a psychological battle between the two Russians leading up to the $550,000 match. Korchnoi's appearance at the opening ceremony ended a day of speculation on whether the preliminary disputes would keep the competition from beginning as scheduled Tuesday.

A FIDE jury had ruled earlier today that the 47-year-old Korchnoi, who went into self-exile from the Soviet Union in 1976 and is living in Switzerland, could not play under the Swiss flag or any other national banner. As part of a compromise, Karpov, 27, cannot have the Soviet flag on the playing table.

Korchnoi later issued a statement protesting "in the strongest possible terms to the tactics of blackmail and intimidation used by the Soviet delegation" in threatening to pull out of the match if he played for Switzerland.

"We shall not lower ourselves to the reciprocal use of such tactics, but ask the Filipino people not again to allow the legitimate rights of an individual to be crushed on their own soil by the weight of Soviet power," Korchnoi said.

Karpov's delegation had protested that since he is not a Swiss citizen the challenger could not play under the Swiss flag. When Korchnoi and his delegation arrived at the convention center today, each wore a red and white Swiss emblem on his jacket.

The last world championship match was in 1972, when American Bobby Fischer dethroned Russia's Boris Spassky in Reykjavik, Iceland. Karpov was named champion in 1975 when Fischer refused to defend his crown.

Experts estimate it will take two to three months and 20 to 30 games, or even more, to determine a champion. The winner, the first player to win six games, will receive $350,000.

Moscow's subway system is less than half the size of New York City's but transports more passengers, about five million a day.

Aguilera Holds Lead In Ecuador

By KERNAN TURNER

QUITO, Ecuador (AP) — A 37-year-old populist who replaced his father-in-law as a candidate pulled ahead today in returns from Ecuador's first presidential election after eight years of civilian and military dictatorship.

It appeared unlikely that any of the six candidates would get the majority required for election. A runoff between the two leaders is expected in August or September.

Official returns from less than a third of the 1.8 million votes expected Sunday gave Jaime Roldos Aguilera of the Concentration of Popular Forces 191,654, or 38 percent; conservative Sixto Duran Ballen, 106,002, and center-leftist Raul Clemente Huerta, 105,600.

Trailing far behind were Rodrigo Borja, 41, of the Democratic Left Party, with 43,224 votes; Abdon Calderon Munoz, 54, Radical Alfarista Front, 33,289 votes, and Rene Mauge, Communist, 19,159 votes.

The election is supposed to be a major step in returning democracy to the country of 6.7 million on South America's northwest coast. The military junta headed by Adm. Alfredo Poveda Burbano has promised to honor the results and turn the government over to the winner. The junta ousted Gen. Guillermo Rodriguez Lara in 1976 and immediately announced it would lead the nation back to civilian government.

Ballots were also cast for a vice president and provincial and municipal officials. The new president will schedule congressional elections.

Roldos Aguilera was nominated when the military for the second time blocked the presidential candidacy of his father-in-law, Assad Bucaram, a former mayor of Guayaquil and the founder of the Concentration of Popular Forces.

He was the leading candidate for president in 1972, and to prevent his election the military took over the government and cancelled the election. This time the junta disqualified him by ruling that candidates had to have at least one parent born in Ecuador. Both of Bucaram's parents were born in Lebanon.

Duran Ballen, 56, was mayor of the capital, Quito, for seven years before resigning to run for president. He and Clemente Huerta, 63, spent heavily on their campaigns, and they were the favorites in pre-election polls.

Duran Ballen was born in Boston and was graduated from Columbia University in New York City, leading Roldos Aguilera's party to charge that he was an American citizen. Duran Ballen denied it, saying he swore allegiance to Ecuador at its New York consulate when he was 21 and travels on an Ecuadorian passport.

Soldiers with fixed bayonets guarded polling places and supervised long lines of voters, but no violence was reported.

Two of the other seven military governments in South America have taken steps toward returning to civilian rule. Bolivia held presidential elections July 9. On June 18, Peru elected a constitutional assembly the government says will draw up a democratic constitution.

Other military governments are in Argentina, Paraguay, Chile, Uruguay and Brazil.

In the past 30 years, Ecuador has had 11 different governments, but only five of them were elected. Voters approved a new constitution in January.

FIRST IN TEN YEARS — An Indian woman casts her vote into a ballot box at a polling station in Quito, Ecuador, Sunday during the first presidential election in 10 years in that military-ruled South American nation. With these elections, Ecuador joins a handful of Latin American nations taking cautious steps toward a return to civilian democracy. (AP Laserphoto)

OPEC Panel Meeting Ends

LONDON (UPI) — A three-day OPEC committee meeting to discuss the continued use of the falling American dollar as the standard for buying and selling oil ended today with no official statement and no indication of any decision.

The session involving 36 members of the "Committee of Experts of the Fluctuation of Exchange Rates" was called to formulate recommendations to the December meeting of Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries in Abu Dhabi.

"This is a group of experts and it is not for experts to say what they will recommend to their ministers," said Sheikh Ali Khalifa Al-Sabah, oil minister of Kuwait and chairman of the committee.

The committee meeting included representatives from 12 of the 13 OPEC nations — Algeria declined to attend. It was the first formal session set up to consider what action to take following the recent drastic slide of the dollar.

With most of the billions of dollars worth of the world's oil transactions priced in dollars, the drop in the U.S. currency's value has meant huge losses for oil-producing nations.

The committee, appointed by OPEC's ministerial council, held three lengthy sessions.

There were "no arguments" behind the meeting's closed doors at a London hotel, the Kuwaiti oil minister said. But the subject was extremely complex.

One of the suggestions put forward and apparently favored by Saudi Arabia was to sell oil at a price measured by a mixed "basket" of currencies, mostly those of Middle East nations.

Besides the difficulty of getting agreement on the makeup of such a "basket," the delegates were faced with the problem of further undercutting the dollar if it was dropped as the official currency for oil transactions.

Indian Official Resigns Post

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The Congress Party chief minister of Maharashtra state broke with Indira Gandhi's faction today and resigned, and Prime Minister Morarji Desai's Janata Party offered to form a new state government.

The resignation of Vasantrao Patil followed public accusations that Mrs. Gandhi's breakaway faction, the Indira-Congress Party, was actively encouraging defections by Congress regulars. Four Congress state ministers quit the four-month-old coalition government last week, accusing the Indira-Congress Party of "dictatorial tendencies."

Mrs. Gandhi, who served 11 years as prime minister, split the Congress party last January in a dispute with other leaders. But she agreed to a coalition with the Congress in India's third-largest state of Maharashtra, which includes Bombay, to block the formation of a government by Desai's party.

The Janata Party defeated Mrs. Gandhi and the Congress Party in March 1977.

Desai's Janata, a coalition, also includes part of the Congress Party, which controlled the Indian government uninterrupted for 30 years following India's independence from Britain in 1947.

Russians Begin Another Trial

MOSCOW (AP) — Trial for a dissident charged with anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda has begun in the Ukrainian town of Gorodya, sources said, but without the Western attention given last week's trials of Anatoly Shcharansky and Alexander Ginzburg.

Dissident sources who asked not to be identified said prosecution witnesses are testifying against Lev Lukyanenko, 50, a lawyer who founded a Helsinki group in the Ukraine to monitor Soviet compliance with human rights provisions of the Helsinki accords. He was arrested last Dec. 12.

Lukyanenko was sentenced to death in 1961 for treason by writing dissident articles, but the sentence was reduced to 15 years at hard labor. If convicted in this case, he faces a maximum of 10 years at hard labor and five years of internal exile.

Last week, Shcharansky, Ginzburg and Lithuanian Viktoras Petkus, all prominent members of Helsinki groups, were given long prison terms. Shcharansky was convicted of espionage while the other two were convicted of anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda.

More than 20 other members of Helsinki groups, including several in the Ukraine, are serving prison terms or awaiting trial.

Palace Fence Climb Brings Police

LONDON (AP) — Three country boys looking for some holiday action in London touched off a security alert at Buckingham Palace early today and spent four hours in a police station explaining themselves.

A police patrol spotted two of the Yorkshire youths lurking beside the palace's 12-foot garden wall and questioned them. The third boy had climbed the wall on a two-pound ($3.70) bet, and security guards with tracker dogs nabbed him.

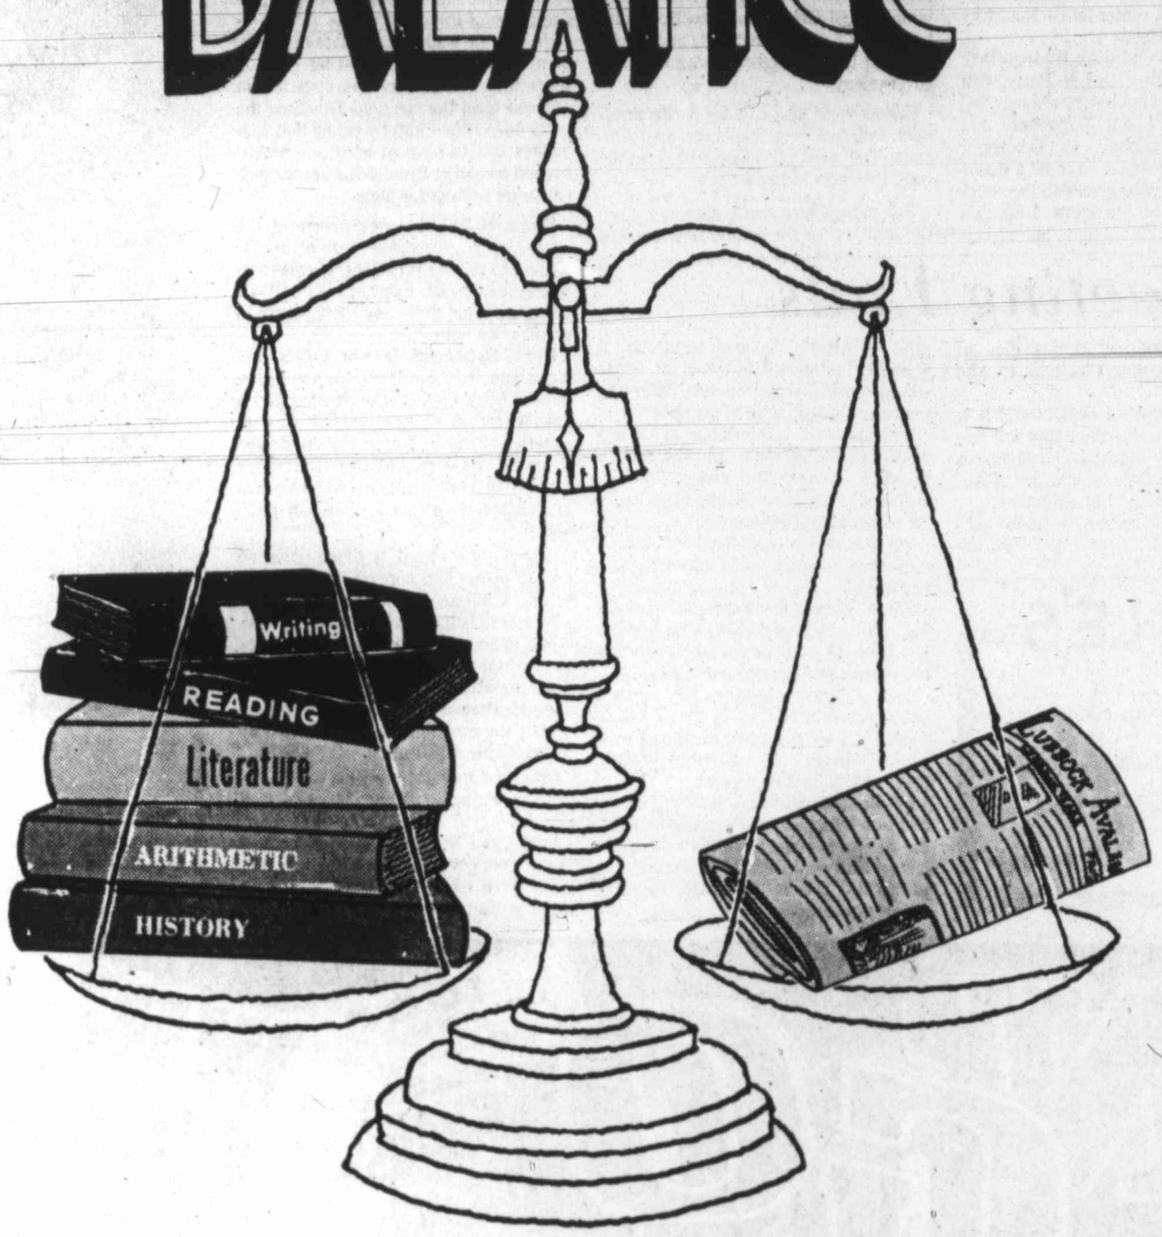

"It seems they were all down in the city on holiday and didn't even know they were at Buckingham Palace," a police spokesman said. "It's their first time in London. When the youngster who was in the palace grounds heard all the police activity, he was afraid to come out."

The police gave the boys a cupt of tea and released them at dawn.

"They said they think they'll go the seaside next summer and stick to chasing girls," the spokesman said.

BALANCE

A textbook is a necessary part of classroom instruction, but it can't possibly cover an event or discovery that has developed in the past 24 hours.

Many teachers have found they can utilize a newspaper as a source for information not yet available in the textbook, thus providing a balance between yesterday and today.

If you're a teacher, you can find out how to put balance in your classroom, by attending Avalanche-Journal's 7th Annual "Living Textbook Conference", to be held August 8th, on the campus of Texas Tech University.

TO EXPAND TRAVEL

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new civil aviation agreement between the United States and Israel is designed to expand air travel between the two countries and to lower the cost. Officials announced that the agreement would permit Israel to choose two new landing points in the United States immediately and two more cities in one year. Currently El Al Israel Airlines can land only in New York City.

WEATHER FORECAST — The National Weather Service forecast for Tuesday predicts large areas of showers in parts of the South and Southwest and the Gulf states. Another large area of showers will curve from the Great Lakes up to the northern Rockies. (AP Laserphoto)

Agency Says Deaths From Quakes Down

GOLDEN, Colo. (UPI) — The National Earthquake Information Service says the world can expect at least one great earthquake, 18 major quakes and about 120 strong tremors — causing about 10,000 fatalities — in an average year.

Geophysicist Waverly Person of the United States Geological Survey said during the first half of 1978, the number of significant earthquakes around the world is about normal, but the number of quake fatalities is considerably lower than in the past two years.

Person said so far this year, the USGS has reported 36 significant earthquakes, quakes that have caused deaths, injuries or considerable damage and register 6.5 or higher on the Richter Scale.

Person said this is three times more than the 12 significant quakes that occurred during the first six months of 1977, but it falls within the normal range of activity for a six-month period.

Person said the largest earthquake in the United States during the first half of 1978 was a magnitude 6.5 in the Aleutian Islands May 24. No damage was reported.

No earthquake was reported in the "great" category (8.0 or higher). He said during the period, seven "major" earthquakes with magnitudes between 7 and 7.9 occurred. The highest magnitude was registered at 7.5 when quakes shook the coast of Honshu, Japan, June 12, and in the Haril Islands region March 24.

Person said the Earth is shaken by tens of thousands of earthquukes each year, but only a relatively few fall into the "killer" category responsible for the world's average annual death toll of 10,000 persons.

"It is impossible," Person said, "to obtain a precise tally of the world's earthquakes. Routinely, we locate about 6,000 quakes a year that range in magnitude from 2 to 8 on the Richter Scale, but there are thousands more — maybe 50,000 or so — that are so small or so located they are undetected by even the most sensitive of instruments.

Police Charge Mother In Slaying Of Children

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Four young children were stabbed to death in their home here, and their mother was charged in the killings, police say.

Detectives said they found the bloodied bodies of the children in their apartment late Sunday night after being called to the scene by a neighbor who had heard "noises from upstairs."

Police identified the children as Kylia Trait, 8, her sisters, Amina, 6, and Inez, 4, and her 2-year-old brother, Demario.

The mother, Gail, 26, was covered with blood and taken to a local hospital, but she was not injured, police said. Authorities said that after several hours of questioning, Mrs. Trait was charged with four counts of second-degree murder.

"We don't really know why she did it," said police Lt. John Rooney, "but family members told us she thought she was under a voodoo curse."

But Leo J. Donovan, chief of homicide, described the report of a voodoo curse as unfounded.

"So far we have no motive," he said. "All we know is there are four children dead."

At Mrs. Trait's arraignment today, Buffalo City Court Judge Alois Mazur advised her of her rights and the charges.

"Did you understand anything I said to you? Did you hear me?" he asked.

Mrs. Trait did not respond, and Mazur ordered her held without bail for a psychiatric examination.

Authorities said Mrs. Trait and her husband, Charles, had been separated for about two years.

Weather Blamed For Problems

BEDMINISTER, N.J. (UPI) — American Telephone and Telegraph said today the weather — not sun spots or solar flares — were responsible for communications problems experienced in scattered parts of the country on the AT&T's microwave lines.

A spokesman for AT&T Long Lines said the problems were caused by either heavy fog or a temperature inversion. It had been suspected that sun spots or solar flares caused the disruption of microwave lines in New Jersey and scattered locations across the country.

"Network operations people say there is a slight problem of fading due to various weather conditions, but there is no transmission problem," said spokesman Mike McCorstin.

McCorstin said heavy fog, such as that experienced Sunday in the New York City metropolitan area, or radical changes in temperature can deflect microwaves.

"This generally happens in the Midwest or South ... I would guess San Francisco's problem is fog also," he said.

Michigan Telephone Co. in Detroit reported "heavy fading" throughout the state and a spokesman for the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration in Boulder, Colo., said there were "indications" that Chicago had minor problems.

Reuss To Introduce Fed Interest Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Henry Reuss, chairman of the House Banking Committee, is ready to introduce legislation to permit the Federal Reserve to pay interest to member banks. The plan by Reuss, D-Wis., would be much less costly than a proposal suggested earlier by the Federal Reserve. The difference, Reuss says, is $90 million compared to $405 million in interest payouts.

The central bank wants to pay interest on deposits member banks are now required to keep in non-earning accounts. It is concerned because it is losing members to state banking regulation, which in many cases permits banks to keep their so-called required reserves in income-earning assets, such as Treasury Department securities.

Fiesta '78 Panel To Meet Tonight

The Fiesta '78 committee will meet to plan activities for September's Mexican Independence Day celebration at 7:30 p.m. today at Rodgers Community Center.

Other items on the agenda include the election of officers and committee assignments.

The meeting is open to the public, and persons desiring more information may call Bidal Aguero at 763-3841.

Rabbi Discloses Role In Spy Negotiations

By VICKI VARELA

NEW YORK (AP) — An American rabbi involved in a recent East-West prisoner exchange says he has been taking part in negotiations to swap Anatoly Shcharansky for two Russian U.N. employees arrested on spy charges in New Jersey.

Rabbi Ronald Greenwald said Sunday night that the negotiations began several months ago and that he met with East German lawyer Wolfgang Vogel on Tuesday in Europe to discuss a possible deal for Shcharansky. The Soviet dissident was convicted of treasonous espionage and anti-Soviet agitation Friday and sentenced to 13 years at hard labor.

Greenwald also said he has had "limited" contact recently with the U.S. State Department on his negotiations and that he has been in contact with New York Congressman Benjamin Gilman.

A State Department spokesman, Kenneth Brown, declined immediate comment on the department's reported role in the negotiations.

Gilman, along with Greenwald, Vogel and the State Department, worked out a prisoner exchange in April involving Mozambique, East Germany and the United States. Vogel also played a key role in the 1962 swap of U-2 pilot Francis Gary Powers for Soviet spy Rudolf Abel.

Greenwald would put no date on when he thought any deal might be reached, but he expressed optimism that one would be made.

"It is hard to say what Russia will want, but if there is someone in the Russian mind (as big as Shcharansky) he could be traded one for one," Greenwald said in a telephone interview from his home in Monsey, N.Y.

Reporters accompanying President Carter to the current economic summit in West Germany were told Saturday that the administration will try to obtain a reduction in Shcharansky's sentence. There has been speculation on an exchange of Shcharansky and fellow Soviet dissident Alexander Ginzburg for the two Soviet citizens accused of espionage in New Jersey.

But White House press secretary Jody Powell said he knew nothing about such prisoner-trade efforts, and that it was premature to be negotiating on Shcharansky's behalf.

Meanwhile, Pope Paul VI added his voice to the protest in the West on the sentencing last week of Shcharansky, Ginzburg and Viktoras Pyatkus. Ginzburg and Pyatkus were sentenced to eight and 10 years respectively for anti-Soviet activity.

In an address Sunday to 3,000 visitors outside his summer palace at Castel Gandolfo, the pope called their alleged crimes "ideological infractions" and said their sentences were too severe.

But West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt criticized U.S. protests against the trials.

"I would like to stress that I do not think it is doing any good for the people in those (Iron Curtain) countries," he said.

He said the best way to respond to the human rights situation in the Soviet Union is to pursue "our general policies of detente."

Hurricane Fico Heading West For Hawaii

HONOLULU (UPI) — Hurricane Fico, packing winds of 150 miles an hour, roared across the Pacific today, and the National Weather Service said it could hit Hawaii sometime Wednesday if it continues on its present course.

Fico, the third hurricane spawned off the Mexican coast this season, was reported about 900 to 1,000 miles east-southeast of the island of Hawaii early today, moving on a 280-degree course — practically due west — at a speed of 15 knots.

A weather service spokesman in Honolulu described Fico as "very much a hurricane force which, unlike its predecessors Carlotta and Daniel, has not disintegrated as it approaches Hawaii."

The spokesman said it was "a little too early to say whether the high winds and heavy rains would move directly across the Hawaiian chain, or merely brush the mountainous island of Hawaii as it continued westward."

The position report early today fixed Fico's eye at 17 degrees north latitude and 138 degrees west longitude.

A special hurricane warning bulletin said there were heavy rains and thunderstorms 300 miles from Fico's center.

A second hurricane, Guilman, was reported about 1,200 miles behind Fico and following the same general course. The National Weather Service said Guilman posed no immediate threat to any land mass.

Adams Says Resignation Not True

WASHINGTON (AP) — Transportation Secretary Brock Adams denies a published report that he might resign, a department spokesman said today.

The secretary scheduled an afternoon news conference after the New York Times reported today that he appears likely to be one of the first members of the Carter Cabinet to depart, possibly by the end of the year.

"Secretary Adams will deny he has any intentions to resign," spokesman Bob Holland said in discussing why Adams had scheduled the news conference.

"He doesn't believe there is any basis for the story," Holland added.

The Times attributed its report to government and industry sources.

"After months of dissension with the White House and Congress and within his own staff, the transportation secretary is reported to be frustrated and looking favorably on private law practice for the first time in 17 years," the newspaper said.

Adams, a former Democratic representative from the state of Washington, has clashed with White House on several issues since President Carter named him to the Cabinet post last year.

There was early friction when Adams brought many of his House staff members with him to the Transportation Department, thus depriving the White House of an opportunity to fill many of the posts.

Adams also has been at odds with the administration on such matters as airline deregulation and linking transportation needs to increased gasoline taxes.

The Times reported that the adminstration and industry have been disappointed in Adams' performance in getting legislation through Congress. They felt his 12 years in the House, including chairmanship of the House Budget Committee, would enable him to have more influence on the legislative process, the newspaper said.

The Times said White House advisers often perceive the secretary as a political opportunist.

Solons To Receive Indian 'Manifesto'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Indian demonstrators headed for Capitol Hill today to protest almost a dozen "anti-Indian" bills and to present a "Native American manifesto" calling on Congress to honor treaties.

A spokesman for the Longest Walk, which brought hundreds of the Indian activists to Washington over the weekend, said Coretta Scott King, widow of the slain civil rights leader, and black activist Jessie Jackson would lead the marchers to the Capitol to greet a delegation of congressmen.

The Indians are concered about several bills that would eliminate their rights to land, water, and fishing and hunting. Congress has not seriously considered any of the measures.

The group is particularly concerned by "The Native Americans Equal Oppportunity Act," sponsored by Rep. Jack Cunningham, R-Wash., which would eliminate all treaties and reservations and shut down federal programs for Indians such as hospitals, schools and housing projects.

Demonstration leaders said the bill is an attempt to rob them of the resources such as coal and uranium which lie on their reservations. Cunningham says the bill will put Indians on an equal footing with other citizens and eliminate their special privileges.

The manifesto, based on one issued in 1972, calls on Congress to honor treaties, to re-establish Indian treaty-making ability and to protect tribal sovereignty and land.

The earlier manifesto was issued during 1972's "Trail of Broken Treaties" caravan which resulted in an Indian takeover of a federal office building and $2 million in damages.

Walk organizers say cooperation by federal and local officials, plus spiritual direction, has eased the danger of confrontation this time.

The manifesto calls on Congress to create a panel to review domestic treaty commitments and complaints of chronic violations and "minimize the possibilities for attacks upon Indian rights," leaders said.

It also calls for repeal of a provision of the 1871 Indian Appropriation Act which stated tribes would no longer be recognized legally as capable of signing treaties with the federal government.

U.S. Attorney Resigns Post

Assistant U.S. Attorney Robert Wilson, chief of the Lubbock U.S. Attorney's office, is resigning Sept. 5 to enter private practice.

The federal prosecutor will join the Sims, Kidd, and Hubbert law firm here.

As chief attorney for the Lubbock office, Wilson has helped coordinate prosecution in Lubbock, Amarillo, and San Angelo. He joined the U.S. Attorney's office here in 1971.

"I've enjoyed the association of all the personnel here and enjoyed working for the government," Wilson, 35, said.

"But I think it's time I explored new avenues and diversified my background."

Hereford Man Dies In Crash

BROWNFIELD (Special) — A Hereford man was killed Sunday afternoon in the crash of a light plane near here.

Troys Dean Riddle, 28, died when the single-engine plane he was piloting crashed six miles south of this Terry County town.

The plane reportedly had banked to the right and then to the left before it crashed. A federal investigator was on the scene today.

Services for Riddle are pending with Gilliland-Watson Funeral Home of Hereford.

Energy Meeting Slated Locally

The Governor's Office of Energy Resources and the state Public Utilities Commission will sponsor a day-long seminar here Wednesday designed to help local government and private businesses conserve energy.

Registration for the event, to be held at the Civic Center, will begin at 8:30 a.m. Alvin Askew, administrative assistant on energy for Gov. Dolph Briscoe, will make the keynote speech at the 9 a.m. general session.

Following the general session, concurrent workshops will be held for specific groups such as local government officials, public school officials, office building owners and managers, retail business owners and residential builders and contractors.

The aim of the state's energy conservation program is to effect a five percent net decrease in energy use by 1980. The Lubbock seminar is one of 24 being held throughout the state to encourage voluntary conservation efforts by demonstrating the money which could be saved by conserving energy.

The seminar is free of charge.

Carter Cites 'Progress' On Energy Legislation

By WALTER R. MEARS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Now it turns out that we're winning the moral equivalent of war. President Carter suddenly is satisfied with the progress Congress is making on his energy program.

That's a rather abrupt change in the attitude of a president who less than a month ago said that the United States was being embarrassed and weakened for lack of passage of his energy measure.

Years ago, then-Sen. George D. Aiken suggested that the way to end U.S. involvement in the conflict in South Vietnam would be to declare a victory and get out. His advice went unheeded.

Carter seems to have adopted a somewhat similar position on energy, apparently to convince skeptical allies at the economic summit conference in Bonn that the United States really is doing something about the problem.

Fifteen months after he proposed his energy plan, Carter still is waiting for Congress to enact it.

Analysis

House and Senate negotiators have approved portions of the program for final votes. So Carter will get part of what he sought.

But the oil tax that was a central feature of the original Carter plan is stalled and likely to stay stalled. The Senate and House members assigned to work on that portion of the energy program met Thursday for the first time in seven months, but didn't accomplish anything.

Again and again, Carter has exhorted Congress to get on with it. He wanted the energy program on the books before he went to Bonn. He threatened to act on his own by posting new tariffs on imported oil, and the Senate voted to forbid it. That June 27 vote was the last significant congressional action on energy, and the White House said it showed that Congress was trying to duck the problem.

But before he went to Bonn on Thursday, Carter declared that "we are making good progress," on the bill and on curbing oil imports.

"I think the Congress has made great progress already," he told foreign correspondents. "What many people in Europe won't understand is our nation is not only a great oil consumer but also a great oil producer and has historically been so.

"It is a very difficult political issue to change the structure of our laws to hold down the free import of oil and to implement strict conservation measures. But I have been pleased with what the Congress has done so far."

He wasn't pleased in Houston on June 23. "We have consumed ever-increasing amounts of oil and gas at prices well below their replacement costs," he said then. "We are the only industrial nation without an energy plan. ...

"We are embarrassed in the eyes of our friends and weakened in the eyes of our enemies without a program to encourage greater use of more available fuels."

Nor was he so patient on April 20, the first anniversary of his call for urgent action on energy. "We have wasted 12 months of precious time," he said on that occasion.

Now he is accentuating the positive. "My prediction is that Congress will act successfully on our energy plan before they adjourn this year," he said.

Carter had to have some explanation of the energy situation, and the lack of final action on his program, for critical allied leaders in Bonn.

Yet if he chose to blame it all on Congress, he could have bought more trouble there, at a time when he needs House and Senate votes to get what remains of his program passed.

So he pointed to what has been done, after complaining for months about what remains undone. He also boasted that U.S. oil imports are down by about one million barrels a day, although that has more to do with production of oil from Alaska than with conservation under the Carter plan.

But that answer to an immediate problem may post a dilemma another day, when and if the White House decides that it must turn up the pressure on Congress again.

Increase In Short Term Rates Bolsters Mutual Fund Interest

NEW YORK (AP) — The sharp rise of short term interest rates this year has touched off a new wave of enthusiasm for money-market mutual funds.

Assets of 47 funds tracked by Donoghue's Money Fund Report, published by William E. Donoghue at Holliston, Mass., ballooned by more than $3 billion from the start of the year through early July.

In the week ended July 5, Donoghue reported, $62.6 million poured into the funds, which invest in such securities as Treasury bills, commercial paper issued by corporations and bank certificates of deposit.

These money-market instruments, as they are called by bankers and brokers, carry maturities typically ranging from a week to six months. They have been a traditional "parking place" for temporarily idle cash in company treasuries, pension funds and other places where large amounts of money tend to collect.

Since they were generally available in minimum denominations of $10,000 or $100,000, money-market securities had attracted little public attention until interest rates began to climb to record highs in 1973 and 1974.

As rates headed up toward two-digit levels, an opportunity arose for mutual fund managers, who were plagued by a steady outflow of investors' money from conventional stock-market funds.

Using the basic mutual-fund concept of pooling the capital of a large number of investors, they could offer individuals of modest means access to the money markets, where yields at the time were substantially better than a savings account could offer.

The Reserve Fund, one of the earliest on the scene, received considerable publicity in 1974, and before long many of the largest fund organizations like Dreyfus, Fidelity, Putnam and T. Rowe Price had introduced money market funds.

By 1975, however, interest rates had begun to recede. After their initial boom, money-market funds settled into a lull.

At the end of 1976, with the average yield of all money-market funds down to 4.7 percent, the assets of the group stood at $3.65 billion, according to Donoghue's figures.

By the end of last year, the average yield had swung back up to 5.69 percent, but total assets had increased only slightly to $3.86 billion.

Then came this year's resurgence as money rates once again moved substantially above the typical 5¼ percent savings-account level. On July 5, with the average fund yielding 6.8 percent, Donoghue reported that total assets had reached $6.88 billion.

Paul Johnston at Wiesenberger Services, a firm which tracks the mutual fund industry, said the rise in money rates this year appeared to have attracted money not only from small investors, but also investing institutions and corporate treasuries.

"These are sophisticated people, and they're going to go for everything they can get," he observed.

Johnston also theorized that the money-market funds might have begun drawing money away from mutual funds that invest in tax-free bonds, which have suffered lately from falling prices in the municipal market.

The revival of the money market funds, he said, "has probably surprised a lot of people. I think the money market funds are here to stay, and I think they're a very important part of the total mutual-fund picture."

12,000 Beer Labels Produced In U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Since the first beer can came out in 1935, as many as 12,000 domestic beer labels have been produced in the United States, according to the National Geographic Society.

Some of these labels were from such obscure brands as Big Apple, Bull Dog, Congress, Olde Frothingslosh, and State Fair.

Many Americans make a hobby of collecting beer cans. The Beer Can Collectors of America, founded in 1970 by some St. Louis men, reports a membership of 13,000.

Solon Wants Exam For Asbestos Workers

WASHINGTON (AP) — A congressman wants to have all workers and their families who have been exposed to cancer-causing asbestos dust to be eligible for medical examinations at the expense of the government.

Rep. Fred Richmond, D-N.Y., introduced such legislation Thursday. He noted that medical reseachers have found that shipyard employees and others who work with asbestos have a high rate of deadly diseases, including lung cancer.

Richmond's bill would allocate $55 million over three years to provide medical screening for those exposed to such substances not covered by private or public health care programs.

A DAILY MESSAGE FROM The Newspaper Bible©
Mark 9:4-19, The Living Bible

4 Then Elijah and Moses appeared and began talking with Jesus!
5 "Teacher, this is wonderful!" Peter exclaimed. "We will make three shelters here, one for each of you....."
6 He said this just to be talking, for he didn't know what else to say and they were all terribly frightened.
7 But while he was still speaking these words, a cloud covered them, blotting out the sun, and a voice from the cloud said, "This is My beloved Son. Listen to Him."
8 Then suddenly they looked around and Moses and Elijah were gone, and only Jesus was with them.
9 As they descended the mountainside He told them never to mention what they had seen until after He had risen from the dead.
10 So they kept it to themselves, but often talked about it, and wondered what He meant by "rising from the dead."
11 Now they began asking Him about something the Jewish religious leaders often spoke of, that Elijah must return [before the Messiah could come].
12,13 Jesus agreed that Elijah must come first and prepare the way—and that he had, in fact, already come! And that he had been terribly mistreated, just as the prophets had predicted. Then Jesus asked them what the prophets could have been talking about when they predicted that the Messiah would suffer and be treated with utter contempt.
14 At the bottom of the mountain they found a great crowd surrounding the other nine disciples, as some Jewish leaders argued with them.
15 The crowd watched Jesus in awe as He came toward them, and then ran to greet Him.
16 "What's all the argument about?" He asked.
17 One of the men in the crowd spoke up and said, "Teacher, I brought my son for You to heal—he can't talk because he is possessed by a demon.
18 And whenever the demon is in control of him it dashes him to the ground and makes him foam at the mouth and grind his teeth and become rigid. So I begged your disciples to cast out the demon, but they couldn't do it."
19 Jesus said [to His disciples], "Oh, what tiny faith you have; how much longer must I be with you until you believe? How much longer must I be patient with you? Bring the boy to Me."

Byrd Vows Support Of Carter Program

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter can return from the economic summit in West Germany assured that Congress will give him the tools he needs to reduce oil imports, Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd said today.

Byrd said the expected Senate passage on Tuesday of the first portion of the president's five-part energy plan will go a long way toward reducing U.S. reliance on oil imports, a central concern of the nation's overseas trading partners.

The legislation would prohibit burning of oil or natural gas in most new power plants and give the government the power to force many existing plants and business to convert to coal.

"This bill is more important from the standpoint of reducing oil imports than may appear on the surface," Byrd told reporters.

The Senate resumed debate on the measure today, the first compromise agreement on the energy plan to reach either chamber.

Backers of the legislation claim it can save up to one million of the eight million barrels of oil the United States imports daily.

Byrd said the combined effect of this bill and other relatively non-controversial parts of the energy plan will have "quite an impact on oil imports," even though these measures are not commanding the attention of the more unpopular parts, such as Carter's proposal for new energy taxes.

The nation now imports just over 40 percent of its oil. Byrd said he was encouraged by recent figures showing a decrease in imports during the first months of this year.

Congressional leaders are trying to give Carter a long-denied victory this week on his energy package, introduced in April 1977. But time left for action on the rest of the package is growing short, with only 56 legislative days left in the 1978 session.

Byrd said he has not decided yet whether Congress may have to return after this fall's congressional elections for a "lame-duck session" if work isn't completed on the energy plan.

"I feel that we're going to make good progress," he said. "You can make a lot of progress in 56 days."

The threat of filibusters may now pose the biggest obstacle to some parts of the 15-month-old energy plan.

Energy legislation commands the attention of both the House and Senate today while supporters of another controversial and persistent issue — the proposed Equal Rights Amendment — are girding for a House committee showdown on Tuesday on a resolution to extend the deadline for ratification.

Backers of the extension say they're hopeful of a narrow victory in the House Judiciary Committee, even if it's for only three or four years instead of the seven they sought.

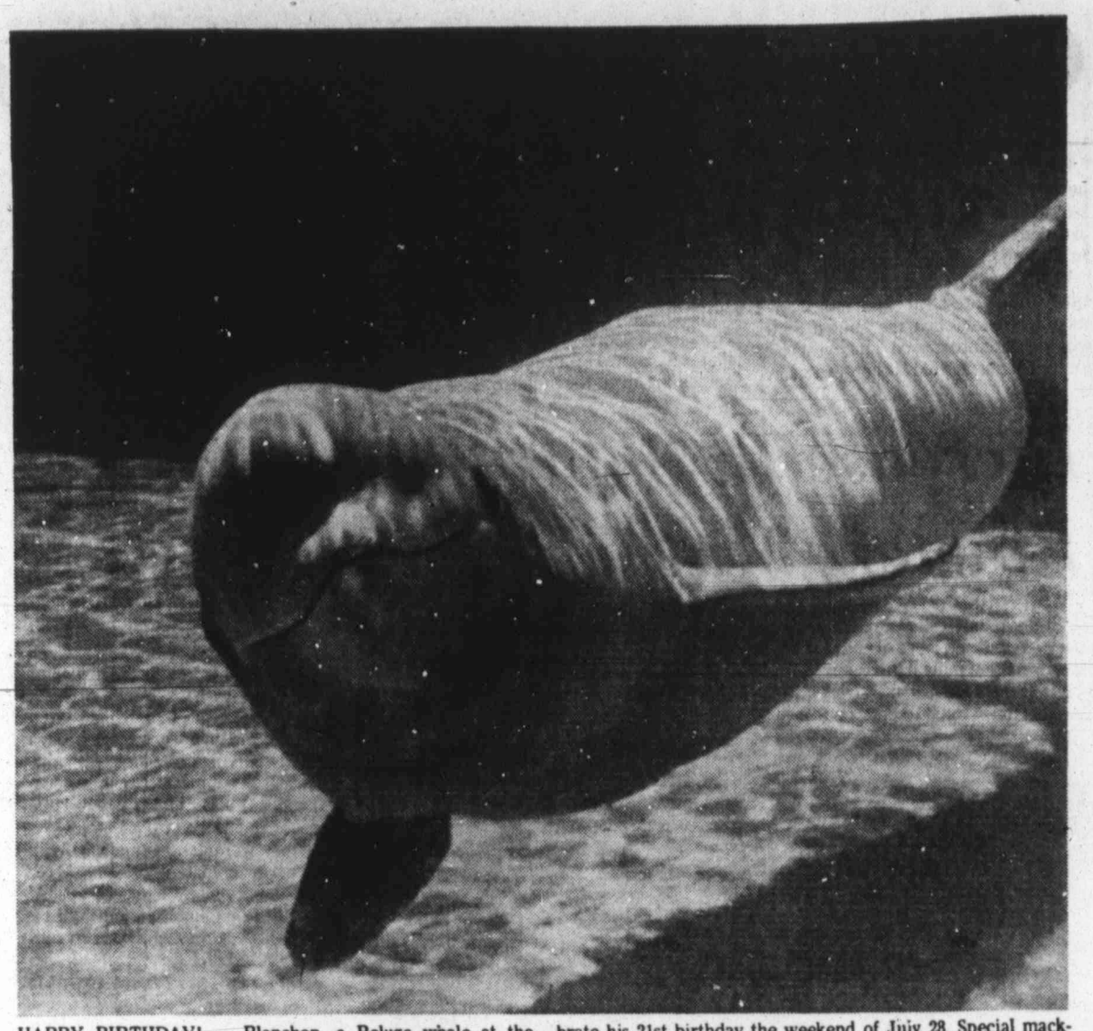

The original seven-year period for the ERA to win approval by 38 state legislatures expires March 22. Thirty-five states have approved the proposed constitutional amendment, which would ban discrimination based on sex. Four of those — Tennessee, Idaho, Nebraska and Kentucky — have rescinded their action, although Kentucky's recission was vetoed by the acting governor. Congress must ultimately decide if the rescission actions are legal.

The full Senate, meanwhile, continues debate on the first portion of Carter's five-part energy plan, while the House wrestles with legislation to authorize about $13 billion in federal energy programs and projects.

The measure before the Senate would prohibit new power plants from burning oil or natural gas and give the government the authority to order hundreds of plants and factories now using these fuels to convert to coal.

Leaders hoped to zip the bill — one of the less controversial parts of the energy plan — through the Senate last Friday but were stopped dead when Sen. Harrison Schmitt, R-N.M., launched a one-man filibuster against it.

However, Schmitt agreed to allow the bill to come to a vote at 1 p.m. Tuesday.

GUARDSMEN FIGHT FIRE — Kentucky National Guardsmen help Louisville Fire Department supervisors battle a blaze Sunday night, during a strike by the regular firefighters. No major fires have been reported during the walkout, triggered by demands for a new contract. (AP Laserphoto)

Judge's Ruling Aids Strikers

By The Associated Press

A judge today struck down an order directing Louisville's 600 union firefighters to end a strike that has closed all but eight of the city's 23 fire stations.

Louisville is one of seven cities around the country now plagued by walkouts and other labor problems with municipal employees.

Philadelphia is without garbage collectors, prison guards and health care workers.

Police in New York, Memphis, Tenn., and Cleveland are butting heads with city officials over contracts or work orders. Officers in Sedalia, Mo., ended a one-day "sickout" on a judge's order, and New Bern, N.C., is being protected by outside law enforcement officers until its 34-member police force is completely rehired.

LOUISVILLE: About 500 people, including strikers and their wives and children, cheered outside the courthouse after Jefferson Circuit Judge George Ryan dissolved a temporary restraining order he had issued Friday when the strike began. Ryan said the order was invalid because Mayor William Stansbury had signed the request for it in advance and was out of town when it was filed.

Ed Zingman, attorney for the city, said he would apply immediately for a new order.

The city has said it will not negotiate unless the firefighters return to work, and the firefighters have said they will return to work only if a new contract is signed.

No major fires have been reported since the firemen put up picket lines at City Hall and 23 fire houses for the second time Saturday. National Guard troops and 1,400 volunteer firemen in surrounding Jefferson County are on call in case of a big blaze.

City Fire Chief Thomas Kuster said supervisory personnel were "holding the status quo" at the eight firehouses still staffed.

Tom Forshee, the city's chief negotiator, said the city's last contract offer would use up all $900,000 earmarked for emergencies, beyond the 5.5 percent budgeted wage boost for firefighters.

CLEVELAND: City Safety Director James Barrett says he found four policemen asleep in their cars, apparently disobeying an order to patrol on foot several public housing projects in high-crime areas.

Barrett said he made a personal check of projects Saturday night.

"There was nobody there," Barrett declared angrily. "At least two sites we observed patrol officers asleep on their assignments."

William McNea, president of the Cleveland Police Patrolmen's Association, accused Barrett of nitpicking.

PHILADELPHIA: Guards at three city prisons ignored a back-to-work order early today as a strike by 19,000 non-uniformed workers entered its fourth day.

Between 80 and 100 supervisors were on duty in place of 619 guards. Some police officers also were on guard duty.

NEW YORK: The Patrolmen's Benevolent Association, seeking a $5,000 pay increase for its members, planned to meet again today with city negotiators after scrapping plans to crack down on jaywalkers and minor traffic violators to publicize its contract difficulties.

MEMPHIS: Leaders of the 1,100-member Memphis Police Association say they will ask the City Council to allow a new contract to be decided through binding arbitration.

David Baker, union president, announced the plan after police rejected a tentative settlement by a 9-to-1 margin Saturday.

City Water Use Sets New Mark

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

City officials are looking to the weatherman for help in reducing the record amount of water being used by Lubbock residents this month.

Sam Wahl, city public works director, said more than 70 million gallons of water was pumped Saturday, the highest daily amount ever in the city's history.

But Saturday's 70.3 million gallon usage broke an all-time record set just last Thursday when 70 million gallons was pumped.

July usage was expected to average about 55 million gallons a day, Wahl said, but "it looks like now it will average close to 60 million."

Wahl said the water use has been high for 12 straight days, and he blames the hot, dry weather for all the water being used.

"I don't see any let-up until the weather changes," he said. "Until we get a shower or a break in the temperature, the water usage will stay around the 68, 69 or 70 million gallon rate."

Wahl said he can't remember a past summer when so much water has been used for so long. "We've just not had sustained use like this in the past," he said. "It's just not let up at all."

If the weather doesn't change before the end of summer, Wahl said residents might be asked to voluntarily cut back on water use and they might face problems with water pressure.

"But I can't believe it's going to continue at this rate through August," he said.

Wahl said he doesn't foresee any "severe curtailment of water unless there are bad mechanical problems."

Nevertheless, Wahl is concerned about the record use of water because "it is reducing our capability in the sandhills."

Wells in the Bailey County sandhills are one of two water sources for the city.

But Wahl is more concerned about water usage problems next summer.

Bonds approved by Lubbock voters for water improvements and later tied up in litigation may create pressure and shortage problems in 1979.

"We need additional wells in the sandhills and pumping stations," he said.

How soon the wells can be drilled will be determined by when the city council decides to sell another group of general obligation bonds, he said, adding that will determine whether there is an adequate supply of water next summer.

Southwest Lubbock already is experiencing some problems with water pressure, Wahl said, because the pump station to be constructed with bond money was held up.

Heat Wave Takes High Texas Toll

appeared to have been another heat victim, an official ruling was not expected until today.

"It's been a hot summer," Ayres said. "I personally don't remember having this number of deaths from heat stroke in the past. It seems high to me but I don't know the exact numbers. This is the part of the country where you see it. We get 100-plus weather every year."

Abilene snapped its 9-year-old record of 102 Saturday when the mercury peaked at 109 — two degrees higher than the new Dallas-Fort Worth mark set the same day. However, Sunday afternoon it was a balmy 103.

Wichita Falls recorded its 25th straight day of century marks Saturday with a blistering 114 — a new city high by eight degrees. The North Texas community made it 26 in a row Sunday, matching Abilene's high.

But nothing could match the sauna-like heat suffered by the residents of Olney. The small North Central Texas town 40 miles south of Wichita Falls vied for national honors Saturday with a high of 116, matched only by Needles and Palm Springs, Calif.

Sunday was Olney's 27th consecutive day over 100. The town tied Waco for the afternoon state high at 105.

Sunday afternoon, National Weather Service figures showed 11 of 23 Texas cities that were checked with readings of 100 degrees or more.

Dick Elder, a meteorologist with the National Weather Service, said the abnormal heat was caused by an "adiabatic warming" condition resulting from a low pressure system hovering along the Texas-Oklahoma border. Air warms up when it moves to a lower altitude, he explained.

Dallas County medical investigator Mike Darst said no official warnings had been issued to the fresh-air fanatics, but added: "I wouldn't stay out in it unless I had to, and I'm a young man.

"These guys, especially the ones with heart conditions, who go out and play 36 holes of golf are just asking for it."

Meanwhile, Lubbock and South Plains residents prepared for another blistering day.

It was expected to be sunny and hot again today and Tuesday, with the highs reaching near 100 degrees. The temperature will dip down to 70 tonight.

Winds were predicted to be southerly at about 10 to 15 miles per hour, and there is no sign of rain.

For the next two days, temperatures are expected to reach 100 across the South Plains except in eastern counties, where forecasters say the mercury will peak at 105.

Hot afternoons are predicted throughout the week, with temperatures dropping to the 70s at night.

The thermometer reading here Sunday topped out at 101 degrees, which ties the record set July 16, 1969. The record for a July 17 is also 101 degrees which was reached in 1947.

Matador's 107 mark Sunday led the crowd of South Plains towns where the thermometer read 100 degrees or more. Sunday temperatures elsewhere in the area were:

Seminole and Lamesa, 105; Spur, Paducah and Brownfield, 104; Big Spring, Plains and Post, 103; Levelland, Lockettville, Morton and Snyder, 102; Lubbock, Abernathy, Floydada and Tahoka, 101; Crosbyton, Friona, Jayton, Littlefield, Muleshoe, Muleshoe Refuge, Plainview, Silverton and Tulia, 100; Hereford, 99; Olton, 98; and Dimmitt, a cool 95.

Insurance May Rise

vate passenger and commercial vehicles combined should rise an average of 5.2 percent statewide.

The insurance industry, meanwhile, said today it would ask the board to raise private passenger rates 8.9 percent and all coverages combined by 10.7 percent.

Actual premium changes would vary widely under both the staff and the industry proposals.

The typical driver with a new Ford, Chevrolet or Plymouth would have a $17 increase in Jefferson, Potter and Randall Counties but a $15 decrease in Kaufman County.

Board actuaries say such a motorist drives to work but doesn't use his or her car in business, has no under-25 driver in the household and carries minimal liability of $10,000 per injured person, $20,000 per accident and $5,000 property damage. The policy also includes $50-deductible comprehensive, $200-deductible collision and no-fault Personal Injury Protection (PIP) coverage.

Young drivers, those with bad traffic records, and drivers who use their cars in business would have greater increases.

Actuaries for the board said all private passenger coverages that pay for medical treatment should drop in price except uninsured motorist protection, which would rise 8 percent.

Basic liability would drop an average of 2.8 percent.

David Irons, spokesman for the Texas Automobile Insurance Service Office (TAISO), defended the companies' rate increase request as "well in line with what's happening in our inflated economy."

Cairo Bus Mishap Kills 56 Persons

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — A city bus packed with soldiers and workers swerved to miss a truck, smashed through a retaining wall and plunged into the Nile River today, killing at least 56 passengers, police and witnesses reported. At least 11 passengers survived.

The driver of the bus, which authorities said was overcrowded, leaped out before the vehicle crashed through the wall and sank in about 25 feet of water, a police spokesman said. Witness reports conflicted with earlier official accounts saying the bus fell off a river bridge.

"One minute I was joking with another passenger and the next we were all at the muddy bottom," said one of the survivors, Abdulla Gabreil, 35.

He said the bus struck a truck loaded with cement bags and crashed through the iron-and-stone riverside wall.

"I tried to squeeze myself out the nearest window. I don't know how to swim. So I put one hand across my mouth and with the other pushed myself up.

"I found a leg and grabbed it. It was another passenger who was hanging on to a fishing boat. It was hell," said Gabreil, a hotel waiter.

Police said most of the dead were trapped and drowned in the bus. They were mostly soldiers in their 20s, police said.

Gabreil said the bus was headed from the Giza pyramid area to downtown Cairo when the accident occurred at about 6:10 a.m.

The bus driver was hospitalized for shock, and the driver of the truck was questioned by police, but officials said no charges were filed immediately.

freezer room and called police.

Lannie Mitchell, the first patrolman to arrive at the scene, said he met the frantic assistant manager outside.

"He said he was sitting in a car out front and went inside to check on the cleanup," Mitchell said. "When he told me there were six people shot in there I couldn't believe it for a second."

Mitchell said he went inside with the assistant mamager and found the bodies.

"They were piled in a heap like they were just stood up one at a time and executed on top of each other," he said. "The one girl was twitching, but we had to pull two bodies off her to get her out of the pile."

The five men were dead at the scene, but the female worker was found alive in the middle of the stack of bodies. She was rushed to a nearby hospital, but died a few hours later without regaining consciousness. Police said she had been shot twice — once in the head.

"The motive obviously was robbery," said Mundy. "After the robbers, the six employees apparently were taken into the freezer and shot. It appears all were taken in at once and executed individually. They were not bound or gagged.

"Obviously we are dealing with some very dangerous people. We've pulled all the stops. We have police cruisers all over the area."

Police found a quantity of money in the back parking lot where it apparently had been dropped in the getaway. Officials of Sirloin Stockade Restaurants, Inc., headquartered in Oklahoma City, were at the scene to help determine how much cash was taken.

Within an hour of the shooting, more than 100 police detectives and laboratory technicians were at the scene, some of them using flashlights to search the restaurant parking lot for additional evidence.

Police cordoned off a three-acre area around the restaurant, located on the south side of the city, as several hundred curious spectators gathered.

Periodically, relatives were brought to the scene, apparently to make positive identification of the victims. They left in tears, escorted in some cases by officers.

About 3 a.m., three hearses pulled up to the back door and the bodies were removed. Soon afterward, two people walked out arm in arm — both crying.

Another young man came out and said to a friend, "He's dead."

Steve Gattenby, 16, a friend of one of the victim, Dave Lindsey, said he had been visiting with Lindsey until about 10:30 p.m. He said when he left, he say three people in the restaurant — a couple and a young girl.

Gattenby said as he was driving home, "I heard it (about the shootings) on the radio. I knew Dave was in there."

didn't see him come in," recounted Newton. "I turned around, and then he shot a couple of times. Everybody, by then, was down on the floor, and then he went over and shot that man (Barbee)."

"He pointed back here, and I ducked down, and then that man (Barbee) ducked down," Hines said. "Then he fired again a couple of times."

Investigators later found five live cartridges and four hulls in another enclosed area next to Barbee's office. It was theorized that the assailant may have tried to reload the .22-caliber weapon.

According to Det. Cpl. Harris Clanton, the suspect had worked at the mill until just recently. He said police had a former address of the suspected gunman. However, as of noon, no arrests had been made.

Boat Mishap Kills Youth

UMBARGER (UPI) — A motor boat cruising along the shoreline of Buffalo Lake Sunday struck and killed an 11-year-old Hereford boy, the sheriff's department said.

The victim was identified as Richard Dean Bacon. Deputies said the youth, on a camping trip, went swimming about 1 a.m. Sunday while the rest of his family slept.

Gary Don Byars, 23, of Canyon, said he was operating the boat 50 to 75 yards offshore when he "heard a scream and a thud." Byars said he found the youth after he turned the boat around to investigate.

Bacon died at a Canyon hospital.

Expert Favors Export Boost

By LeROY POPE

NEW YORK (UPI) — The nation's persisting international trade deficit highlights the argument over whether the export of products and technology should be greatly expanded.

Chairman Willam C. Norris of Control Data Corp. of Minneapolis, and ardent — and admittedly controversial — advocate of expanded export of products and technology to the communist world, says the principal opponents of such expansion are the military and certain defense industry leaders.

The opponents have support in Congress and in government agencies who are convinced they are right.

Norris tells of a 1976 meeting to discuss a proposed export transaction with a defense official. It was suggested that jobs at home should be considered as well as military risks to the United States. Norris said the defense official retorted: "Our responsibility is national security and defense and if you think we are doing to give any consideration in our deliberations about defense to jobs, I can tell you we ain't."

This attitude is emotional and won't work, Norris insists. He has been speaking and writing extensively to oppose it and he makes the following points:

—The United States has a health economy that never will fall to communism either from within or without.

—For the first time in many generations the United States does not have all the resources to provide timely solutions to its major problems. Consequently, solving the domestic problems may be more challenging than containing military aggression.

—There is risk in not furnishing the desired technology to the communist countries. For example, he said, without doubt U.S. export controls have forced acceleration of the communists computer industry. Norris' firm makes computers and markets them globally.

—The Soviet military, like that of the United States, avoids dependency on foreign supplies and suppliers and even to a considerable extent shuns foreign technology.

—Classified U.S. military technology is under complete government control.

Export of technology entails commercial rather than military risks, Norris believers, yet he is convinced it is necessary.

"Other countries with serious unemployment problems are striving to maximize local manufacturing. Couple that with the fact that there is virtually no technology today that is exclusive to the United States, and we readily conclude that if we don't help those countries meet their needs for know-how, others will, and we lose three ways. We lose the value of the know-how, we suffer product competit on, and we don't get know-how return."

Norris concludes that Congress and the Carter administration should frame a national policy fostering the export of virtually any industrial product or technology under appropriate conditions. "The thrust must be for expansion, not constriction," he said.

For products, he said, appropriate conditions means they will be used for industrial purposes with reasonable visibility of usage. For technology, the major criterion of appropriate conditions, Norris said, is maintaining the proper balance between each other country and the United States.

"Certainly between the United States and the Soviet Union, the balance should be equal," he concluded.

Aircraft Seat Used For Lounge Chair

HEMET, Calif. (AP) — Arthur Medore Jr., has created a lounge chair from the ejection seat of an old Air Force jet fighter.

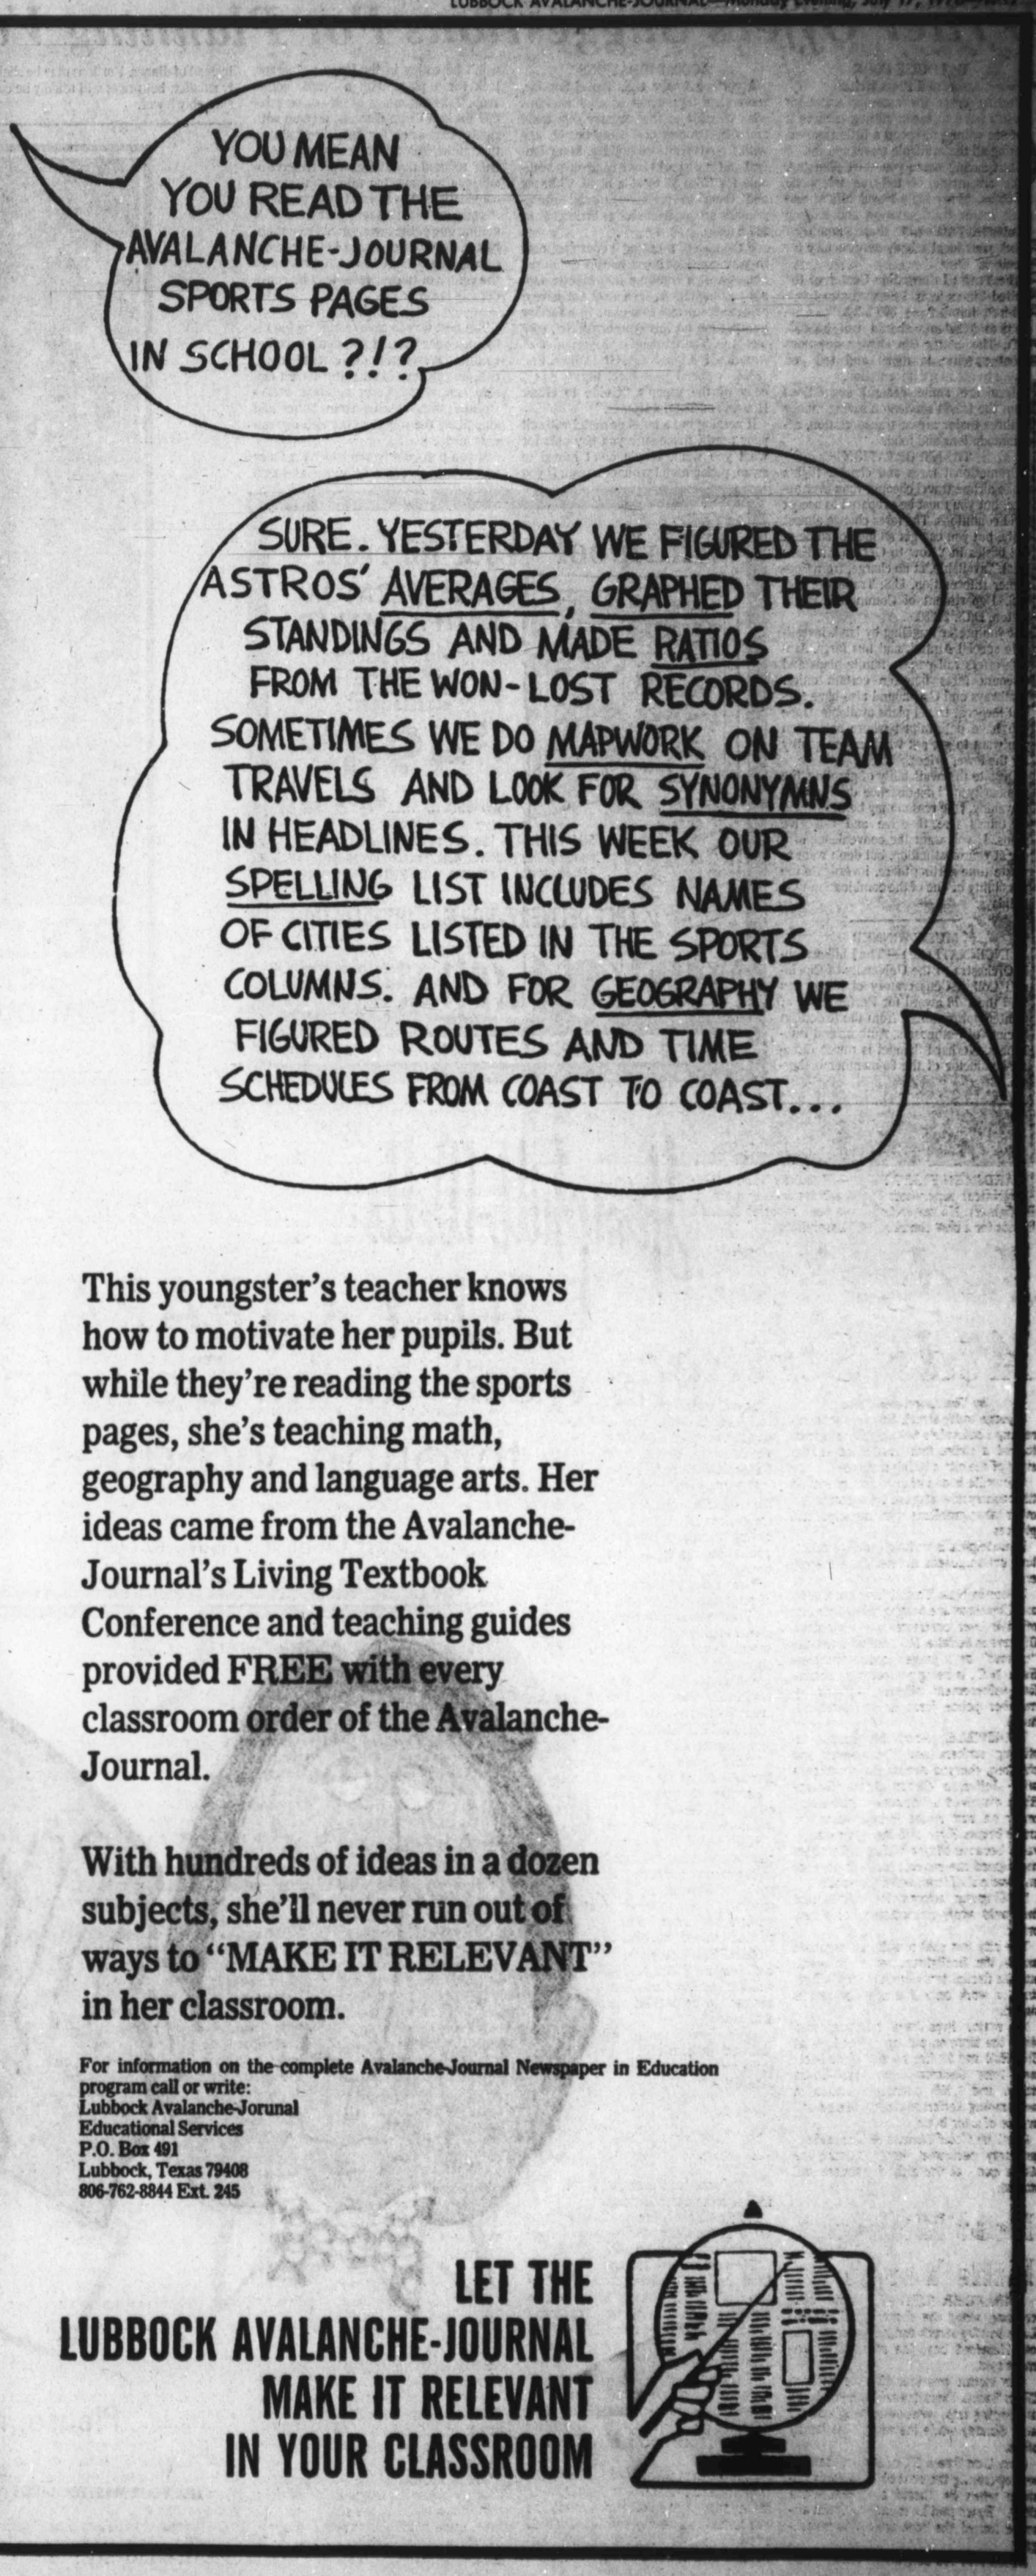

"My father and I restore aircraft as a hobby," he explained. "We were picking up some parts in New Orleans, and I saw this old seat abandoned in a field."

Medore, who is in the customized furniture business, has cradled the seat in a red oak frame, converted the parachute storage to a magazine rack, and rigged a pair of reading lights that operate off the former eject switches.

The chair adjusts by means of a gearshift.

Writer Offers Suggestions For Planning Vacations, Cutting Costs

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Cutting costs for summer vacations doesn't have to mean cutting corners if you are willing to spend a little time exploring all the available travel options.

Start saving when you start planning. Take advantage of toll-free telephone numbers. Many state travel offices and most major transportation and lodging companies maintain these numbers; check your local telephone directory for specifics.

The Travel Information Center of the United States Travel Service also has a toll-free number — 800-243-2372, Connecticut residents should call 800-822-7611. The center can answer questions about specific locations and tell you where to get more information.

Here are some general suggestions from the travel service on saving money in three major areas: transportation, accommodations and food.

TRANSPORTATION

Promotional fares and charter flights make airline travel cheaper than ever before, but you must be prepared to accept rigid conditions. The fares change almost daily, but you can get an idea of some of the basics in "How to Get an Air Fare Deal," available, at no charge, from Consumer Information, U.S. Travel Service, U.S. Department of Commerce, Washington, D.C., 20230.

If you prefer traveling by land, investigate special Amtrak and bus fares. Amtrak offers rail passes, family plans and discount fares between certain cities. Trailways and Greyhound also have special low-cost travel plans available. Once you have determined where and when you want to go, ask whether you qualify for the lower prices.

Despite the availability of gasoline, the popularity of long-distance driving trips is waning. One reason may be the growth of things like fly-drive and rail-drive plans. If you want the convenience of a car at your destination, but don't want to waste time getting there, investigate the possibility of one of the combination-type holidays.

ACCOMMODATIONS

According to the U.S. Travel Service, more than 50 percent of all Americans who vacation in this country skip hotel and motel rooms and camp out or stay with friends while on holiday. Many federal and state parks have campsites available for from $1 to $5 a night. Cottages and tents at privately owned campgrounds are available for as little as $7 to $17 a night.

If the idea of roughing it doesn't appeal to you, consider guest houses or tourist homes which combine informality, simple accomodations (you may not have a private bath) and low cost. For further information on this type of facility, contact the Tourist House Association of America, PO Box 355-A, Greentown, Pa., 18426 or see if your local library has a copy of the group's "Guide to Guest Houses and Tourist Homes."

If nothing but a hotel or motel will suit your needs, make sure you pay only for what you want. If you don't intend to swim, pick a motel without a pool. If you won't be eating in the fancy restaurant, look for a place with a simple coffee shop. Take advantage of off-season rates and packages that combine a room with sightseeing. Look for hotels and motels that allow children to occupy their parents' room at no extra charge. Reserve in advance and ask for minimum-rate accomodations. If you can't reserve, check in early in the afternoon; your chances of getting one of the lower-priced rooms are better. Consider picking a hotel or motel on the outskirts of town rather than in the center of things; rates may be considerably lower.

FOOD

The best way to save money on food is to cook your own. If you don't have the facilities, however, or don't want to cook, consider picnics. Most states have roadside rest areas. Carry a picnic basket stocked with utensils from home and stop along the way for sandwich ingredients, etc.

If you particularly want to try a fancy restaurant, consider splurging at lunch instead of dinner. Portions may be slightly smaller, but prices will usually be considerably lower.

Bring your own instant or regular coffee with you and an electric heater or coffee pot. Some motels even have special hot water outlets. Depending on your coffee-drinking habits, you can save substantially.

Montford Starting DA Duties Early

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

There is nothing harsh about John T. Montford except his approach to becoming criminal district attorney next year.

His composed expression, soft-colored clothes and casually parted hair suggest a low-key individual who likes harmony.

He has decided, however, that the best way to achieve harmony is to come down on crime like a falling sack of cement.

And to that end, he is loading the sack with early recruitment of attorneys and investigators, grant applications for state money to enlarge the staff and an imperatively stated request for a bigger budget from Lubbock County commissioners.

He appeared in county budget hearings last week to ask a $459,000 budget financing the addition of four investigators and five law clerks and higher pay for the staff in general.

The budget this year under DA Alton Griffin is $387,000.

"I'm taking it very seriously, and I want to start early," Montford said in an interview at his office. "I feel that the initial impression we make with accused persons is very important.

"Some have told me I have a lot of nerve to ask for a budget increase during a taxpayers' revolt. But I haven't asked for any easy chairs or a raise for myself.

"I don't feel that my budget is unreasonable, and I'm prepared to defend it all the way through the next few months."

He praised the county commissioners for their traditional stinginess with tax money and said he is "not going to fret" if his full budget is not approved.

He would feel "somewhat handicapped," though, he said.

Montford, 35, a product of Fort Worth and the University of Texas, won the Democratic primary with almost 80 percent of the vote on a platform primarily of adopting a harsher attitude toward crime.

He does not have a Republican opponent.

The office of criminal district attorney here was created in 1973 when the legislature combined the offices of district attorney and Lubbock County attorney.

Montford proposes getting $13,000 next year from the county, the same as it is paying Griffin now, to go with the $27,000 he will be paid by the state.

Although he considers it "a good salary," one of his reservations about making the race was that he would make "two or three times that much" by continuing as a defense attorney.

He was best known as a trial lawyer before his unsuccessful race against Griffin four years ago and had continued to build a criminal practice.

He is a major in the Marine Corps Reserve and a 1971 Navy Commendation Medal winner for his work as a court martial counsel.

The award specifically mentioned "his strict adherence to the principles of military justice, impartiality and integrity, which resulted in his immediate action to dismiss unwarranted charges."

That characteristic apparently has remained part of his personality because he said his office will be interested in fairness to the accused as well as in vigorous prosecution.

All evidence turned up by his investigators, whether favorable to the prosecution or not, will be considered in cases, he said. Evidence favoring the defendant will be given to defense attorneys, and investigations by his office will sometimes result in charges being dropped.

The hallmarks of his administration, Montford said, are going to be "toughness and consistency.

"I think the street talk already is that things are going to toughen up around here on Jan. 1," he said.

Tough-minded as he sounds, Montford is not as tough in body as he used to be and would like to be now.

But he said it was the Sept. 22, 1976, automobile accident near Canyon in which his back was broken that led him to run for criminal district attorney this year.

The power steering locked on his car as he was driving to a trial, and he suffered crushed vertebrae when the car veered off the road and crashed into a ravine.

"I remember hearing that crunch in my back," he said. "I had never had pain like that."

It was in the hospital, though, he said, that he re-evaluated his life and career and began considering a second race for public office.

"You get to a point where you ask, 'Where am I headed, and what contribution have I made?'" he said.

"I could make a lot more money practicing law.

"Some people have suggested that I'm politically ambitious, but I can't think of any other jobs I would really want.

"I can't see myself as a legislator. I am a lawyer. My pulse beats as a lawyer, and that's the job I will always have.

"I can't think of any more exciting job than being a criminal district attorney in a major metropolitan county."

He misses being able to run three or four miles a day, which he did regularly as commander of the Lubbock Marine Corps Reserve Center, and being in such good condition that he could work 18 hours in a day whenever he wanted.

But he has recovered from the accident enough to walk normally and is fully able, he said, to fulfill his duties in office.

He asked the approval of his doctor to make the race before announcing last August, he said.

In addition to continuing his law practice and laying plans for next year, Montford has been occupied lately with a new baby girl, Melanie, born June 10 to his wife Debbie and him. He has another daughter, Melinda, 8, from a previous marriage.

He is completing and this month will submit applications to South Plains Area Governments (SPAG) and the Texas Criminal Justice Division for $63,000 in Law Enforcement Assistance Administration (LEAA) grants.

The grants would finance part of his proposed increases in staff and salaries.

His office outline trims two attorneys from the staff to a total of 12, however.

He also plans a business crimes division to centralize the handling of bad checks in the county and an area law enforcement seminar in January.

"The people of this county are going to know I'm working, anyway," he said.

JOHN T. MONTFORD

Commissioners Ready To Help Out DA-Elect

Lubbock County commissioners were inclined to give Criminal District Attorney-elect John T. Montford much but not all of his proposed 1979 budget after he appeared before them in budget hearings last week.

In an informal roundtable discussion with The Avalanche-Journal, they expressed varied opinions but generally were favorably disposed toward the man who got almost 80 percent of the votes in his primary.

"It seems to me the voters stated their opinion when they elected the man to office, so it'll be hard to deny him all he asked for," Commissioner Coy Biggs of Slaton said. "I don't know if we can give him everything he asked for, but we're certainly going to have to look at it."

Asked if the size of his victory and the urgency of his budget request reduces the lattitude they normally have in considering budgets, Commissioner Alton Brazell, an 18-year veteran of the court, said, "I don't feel any undue pressure because of the size of the vote because all of the commissioners court represents a majority of the people in the county, too."

Brazell said his approach to the Montford budget will be determined by how much money is available for it, and he added that he is particularly interested in how much it would help the other areas of county law enforcement.

Neither Brazell nor Biggs would say if they will go along with the request for the addition of an $18,000-a-year office administrator to the office.

Commissioners Jim Lancaster of Idalou and Edgar Chance both said they probably could approve an administrator but said the full increase Montford wants is more likely to be achieved in two or three years than in only one.

"I think he's a real ambitious, hard-working young man with a real good program," Chance said. "There's such a sizable increase there that I don't know if we can fill all he wants in this budget. Maybe in time we can."

Lancaster said his 10 secretaries, the same number that DA Alton Griffin has now, will have to be paid at the courthouse rate rather than on the scale he proposes.

Staff and salaries could be increased some, Lancaster said, "but not to the degree his initial request is."

Biggs said he liked the idea of investigators serving some subpoenas instead of deputies having to serve them all. Montford said during his appearance that that could be an extra duty of the seven investigators he wants. There are three now.

Lancaster said the centralizing of bad check handling under a business crimes division would also be an improvement.

Lozano Inquiry Starts

MIDLAND (AP) — Federal grand jurors were to convene here this morning to begin investigating the circumstances surrounding the death of a Mexican-American prisoner while in the Ector County jail last January.

Texas Attorney General John Hill requested that the Justice Department look into the death after considerable controversy arose in connection with the case.

Larry Ortega Lozano, 27, of Pecos was arrested Jan. 10 at the site of an auto accident in Ector County. He died 12 days later in the jail from what Ector County Sheriff Elton Faught termed self-inflicted injuries. Faught said Lozano apparently killed himself by banging his head against a one-inch thick glass pane in the door of his jail cell.

Mexican-American groups contested the explanation, and further controversy arose when pathologists produced conflicting autopsy reports.

A state inquest was held last spring to resolve the question of whether Lozano's death was suicide, an accident or was caused by a beating in the jail, as some claimed.

After two days of testimony from inmates, law enforcement officials and three pathologists, the death was ruled accidental, touching off further protests.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

I never talk to a telephone answering machine that I don't suffer a major anxiety attack.

They're always so cutesy with their "Hi there. I'm Bunny and I'm really glad you called. At the sound of the beep, tell me where you're coming from."

They don't know they're talking to a woman who is so insecure that when someone asks me the time of day, I reset my watch to theirs. (When they have just told me their watch stopped.)

They do the whole number about where they are and how they'll return my call if I will just leave my name and number.

The beep sounds and the first thing the tapee hears is the sound of me clearing my throat. (This has often been compared to a seal giving birth). Aware of the limited time I have to leave my message I begin to stammer, "Why yes, my name is Erma Bombeck. That's E as in Everett, R, M as in Mary, A and Bombeck. That's B as in boy, O-M as in Mary, B as in boy again, e-c-k."

My mother said it was unnecessary of me to spell my name so thoroughly for her, but face it, I'm intimidated.

A few months ago, one of my children left me a scribbled message from a person I didn't know. I dialed the number and a recorder answered. Right away, I got mental picture of the deep, husky bedroom voice that answered...skin tight white jeans, molded to 19-inch hips, a shirt open to the navel, tinted glasses, white capped teeth, and a chain around his neck that looked like it was straight from a bicycle.

"Hi, Honey," said the machine, "I told you you'd call. I'm out getting your favorite white wine. The key is in the usual place. At the sound of the tone, tell me what time you'll be here."

Wouldn't you have thought that I could have figured out that I had dialed a wrong machine! Like an idiot, I left my number. (Later, I would envision a girlfriend confronting me with jealous rage and a pearl-handled pistol and would marvel at my stupidity in leaving a track for her to follow.)

Frankly, I'm sick of carrying on conversations with inanimate objects. I expect any day now to dial long distance and have an answering machine that says, "Hello. I'm going to put you on hold for a minute."

That would just about make the human element perfect.

West	North	East	South
Pass	1 ♠	1 ◇	?

What action do you take?

A.—Three possible actions come to mind: a jump to two no trump; a jump to three clubs; or a response of one heart. The first possibility protects your kings from immediate attack should no trump be the final contract. But you have a slightly unbalanced hand, so we prefer some other bid. Three clubs expresses the value of the hand, but risks losing the heart suit. Therefore, we prefer a simple response of one heart, holding back the club support for a later round.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AJ854 ♡A7 ◇AQ83 ♣Q5
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	1 NT	Dble.

What action do you take?

A.—Redouble. You certainly have more than a minimum opening bid, and you should advise partner of this fact. Even though he made a weak response at his first turn, he could have enough to extract a substantial penalty from the opponents. Game for your side is extremely doubtful since partner's response suggests shortness in spades.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K92 ♡K1098653 ◇A76
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
1 ♠	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—This is close. While your hand is basically heart oriented, a jump to four hearts could exclude alternative contracts. On this auction partner could easily have a five-card spade suit, in which case four spades might be the superior contract. Give him a chance to describe his holding by leaping to three hearts. If partner does not rebid three spades, you can settle for four hearts at your next turn.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A74 ♡6 ◇KQJ93 ♣KJ87
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ◇	1 ♡
1 NT	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
3 ◇	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Slam is a distinct possibility, and we would not fault you if you took the bit firmly between the teeth and jumped to four no trump, intending to bid a slam if partner showed a suitable number of aces. However, a probing bid of three spades is likely to yield more accurate information. If partner rebids three no trump, showing solid heart stoppers, we would pass.

Q.6—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠754 ♡K103 ◇AKJ84 ♣J7
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—North's rebid at the three-level describes a very powerful hand—about 18 points. Since you have full values for your two-over-one response and excellent support for partner's first-bid suit, you should now give a jump preference to four hearts. Reverse the spade and heart holdings and a simple preference to three hearts would be adequate.

Q.7—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AK8 ♡72 ◇AQ92 ♣A1076
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—If your hearts were a bit stronger, you would have opened the bidding with one no trump. Now, you are faced with an awkward task—a rebid of one no trump is a drastic underbid, while two no trump is a considerable overbid. To extricate yourself from this dilemma, rebid two clubs. If partner passes, it is doubtful that you have missed game; if partner takes any action, you can rebid two no trump (or jump to three no trump if he reverses) to show your strength and distribution.

Q.8—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠KJ932 ♡A107 ◇876 ♣Q6
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
1 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	Pass

What action do you take?

A.—Not only do you have a fine responding hand, but your queen of clubs is a very valuable filler for partner's suit. Your hand is worth a move toward slam and we suggest a cue-bid of five hearts, both to tell partner that you have the ace of that suit and to deny a first-round control of either minor suit.

BASTE WITH BRUSH

Proper utensils make outdoor cooking easier. Instead of forks, use tongs for turning meat to prevent the loss of flavorful juices. A pastry brush or narrow paint brush works well for brushing on a barbeque sauce.

ACTIVE SPORTSWEAR — Active sportswear for jogging is handsomely portrayed in this outfit. The camel knit pullover sweater features a lapped V-placket and ribbed knit collar. It has contrast sienna collar, chest and sleeve stripes, plus a single chopped corner patch pocket. The drawstring pants are 100% Orlon and have ribbed knit ankle cuffs. The outfit is dual purpose action/lounge fashion.

EARLY AMERICAN DECOR — Early American decor may spark some fresh new ideas for kitchen remodeling. The natural wood ceiling beams and cabinets create a warm background. The shuttered windows, centered by a "point-of-interest" shadow box, transform a plain wall into an eye catcher. A patterned area rug completes the Early American look.

The Slim Gourmet

Have you ever wished that all products — not just a handful — were required to list their calorie counts? Ever wondered about the percentage of bread and fish in breaded fish sticks, or if sugar-frosted cornflakes are more sugar than corn?

Here's your chance to let the government know what you want on food labels. Three agencies, the Food and Drug Administration, the U.S. Department of Agriculture and the Federal Trade Commission have scheduled joint hearings to find out what you want to know.

If you're nutrition-wise, or among the 60 percent of Americans who are calorie-cautious, you want to know a lot more than most labels tell you. And you'd better say so, because the food industry will surely show up to say that mandatory nutrition labeling is costly and nobody cares about it, anyway.

You can say what you think in writing: send your letters to: HEARING CLERK, HFC-18, FDA, Room 4-62, 5600 Fishers Lane, Rockville, Md. 20857.

Or say it in person, at a series of walk-in public hearings scheduled for Aug. 22-23 in Wichita, Kan.; Sept. 18-19, Little Rock, Ark.; Sept. 27-28, Washington, D.C.; Oct. 12-13, San Francisco, Calif.; Oct. 25-26, Boston, Mass.

Any individual can have a say. You don't need to represent an organization, although diet clubs and other groups with a special interest in nutrition might want to send representatives. For more details write to Taylor Quinn, FDA, 200 C St., Washington, D.C. 20204.

The hearings are aimed at collecting grass-roots opinion on a broad range of questions relating to labeling laws. Here are some of special interest to diet-watchers:

Q. WHAT INFORMATION ON LABELS IS MOST IMPORTANT?

With the average American pushing 40 and overweight, cutting calories to curtail obesity is a chief nutritional aim. Nutrient labeling, particularly calorie counts, should be required on all food labels!

Prior to 1972, nutrition information was purely voluntary, rarely found and often misleading. Then, the government set up a standardized format and made nutrition labels mandatory for any product with added vitamins or minerals, or on any label that made a nutrition claim. That law has worked to the consumer's benefit, bringing about more nutritious, less fattening products at popular prices. Expanding the nutrient labeling to all products will expand these benefits. Even shoppers who don't check labels benefit from the calorie-cutting and nutrition upgrading that come about when a food manufacturer knows that consumers can compare labels.

Increasingly shoppers need to know about cholesterol, fat, saturated fat and sugar content. Those on special diets have to know about carbohydrate, protein or sodium content. Allergic shoppers need complete ingredient listings to know what's safe for them.

Q. SHOULD FOOD LABELS TELL THE PERCENTAGE OF EACH INGREDIENT?

Now only fortified foods or those that make nutrition claims must list the percentage of each ingredient. But food manufacturers can reap the benefit of health claims without actually making them...simply by using an ingredient with a "health" image. With no numbers to go on, the public infers lower calories or higher nutrition; with no overt claim on the label the manufacturer isn't required to provide nutrition data and can therefore allow the public to believe what it wants. (Certain fruit yogurts or frozen yogurt desserts might not be so popular if manufacturers had to spell out the percentages of fruit, sugar and yogurt, and admit the true calorie count.)

Q. IF ONE FOOD IS AN "IMITATION" OF ANOTHER, SHOULD IT BE CALLED "IMITATION" OR ALLOWED ANOTHER NAME?

Should margarine be called "imitation butter?" Should diet margarine be labeled "imitation margarine?" Or maybe "imitation imitation butter?"

Before you jump to an opinion, consider if it's in your caloric or nutritional best interests to demand that the government tack the "imitation" label on everything that isn't made exactly as it was in grandma's day. Today, it's possible to defat peanuts, make cheese with more milk protein and less butterfat, jam with more fruit and less sugar, meatier sausage, and mayonnaise with a minimum of oil. Hundreds of proportion-altered alternatives are possible ...many more nutritious and just as "natural." To hang an "imitation" label on them might be misleading: to many shoppers the word implies chemicals, fake flavors and nutrition worthlessness.

Because "imitation" is a consumer turnoff, the requirement could abort the development of low-calorie alternative products with less fat and sugar.

Would you buy "ice milk" if it were called "imitation ice cream?" Would any manufacturer bother to develop and sell it?

Unforbidden sweets are a snap to make. For low-sugar recipes and handy table of equivalents for sugar substitutes, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope and 35 cents to SLIM GOURMET LOW-SUGAR RECIPES, in care of this newspaper, Sparta, N.J. 07871.

YOGURT PEAR SHERBET

4 to 5 pears
1 cup plain yogurt
2 tbsps. honey
½ tsp. ground cardamom
2 egg whites

Pare, halve and core pears. Puree enough of them in an electric blender to make 2 cups. With a spatula stir in the yogurt, honey and cardamom. Pour into a metal ice-cube tray (without dividers) or a cake pan; freeze until firm. Let stand at room temperature until mixture can be broken into pieces with a fork. Beat egg whites until stiff. At low speed of electric mixer, beat pear mixture until smooth; fold in egg whites; freeze until firm. Makes four ½-cup servings.

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: Six months ago I left my wife of 17 years for another woman. (I'll call her "Dixie.") It tore my wife up, but Dixie and I had been having this terrific love affair for two years and I had to make a choice or I'd lose Dixie.

Well, two weeks ago, Dixie and I split up. Now I'm going to confess something to you that may sound silly. I love my freedom. I enjoy being able to come and go as I please without having someone ask me, "Why are you late?" "Where have you been?" "Who were you with?"

Abby, I know I don't really love my wife, but I owe her a lot for raising our two children.

I don't really want to go back to Dixie although she says she still loves me and wants me back. My wife wants me back, too. I don't know what to do.

Don't send me to a shrink. I don't believe in them. And don't send me to a preacher. It's been 17 years since I've been to church. What do you suggest?

UNDECIDED

Dear Undecided: Loving your freedom as you do, it would be cruel to go back to your wife and tear up her life again, so don't go back unless you can be a faithful husband. It has obviously cooled off between you and Dixie, so do yourself a favor and stay away from her.

You need to discuss your problem with a professional who can help you get your head together. And make NO major decisions while you are "undecided."

DEAR ABBY: I am 12 years old and my brother is 7. Our mother and father split up, and Dad is married to another lady now. Mom is going to marry another man in November.

Mom's new husband has a boy who is 10 years old. After Mom marries this man, his kid is going to live with us and be our "brother." (His own mom is dead.) He don't know how to hold a fork, he walks like a girl and talks like a baby, and we don't like him at all. What should we do?

ROCHESTER, N.Y.

Dear Rochester: You and your brother should be extra nice to this motherless 10-year-old boy. He may be a slow learner, but he has feelings. Be patient with him, and try to teach him. Kids who are the "hardest" to love usually need love the most.

DEAR ABBY: I am a very busy plastic surgeon but I am taking time out to ask you PLEASE to tell parents NEVER to allow their children to stand up in either the front or back of an automobile while it is in motion!

These last few weeks I have been called upon to make some extensive repairs on some beautiful young faces that were seriously mutilated from accidents that came about in just this way. All it takes is one abrupt stop for a youngster's face to strike a windshield, dashboard or the back of a front seat with such force as to break face bones, knock out teeth and cause disfiguring injuries.

Today I worked with an eye surgeon for nearly two hours in a vain effort to save the eye of a 4-year-old boy who had been standing in the back of his mother's car when she slammed on her brakes. (The child's eye was gouged out as he struck the ashtray.) Please print this. Such accidents are always on the increase in the summertime.

ALBANY SURGEON

Dear Surgeon: Thank you for the timely reminder.

Business & Industrial Review

SLATED FOR NOVEMBER OPENING, AT 10TH AND AVENUE Q

Downtown Facility Among Expansion Announcements From Southern Sea

In its purposely-planned program of ever-expanding service to the eating public, Southern Sea might well recount several significant milestones:

(1) It was in 1974 that owners Robert and Priscilla Sims entered the Lubbock food service and preparation picture, pledging and following through in "finest food, prices to live with, and a service that reflects genuine appreciation of the customer".

(2) Southern Sea was established in mid-1976 at its already well-known South Loop 289-Indiana Avenue facility, where everything was new and planned with customer consideration foremost.

(3) Carry-out service was provided, together with fine in-restaurant service.

(4) Catering by Southern Sea was announced earlier this year and has met with instantaneous and favorable response from groups involved in business meetings, family get-togethers, banquets, club meetings, farm co-op groups, backyard suppers, church socials, etc.

(5) An added Southern Sea was opened this year in Amarillo, and plans are now in progress for a Southern Sea in San Angelo.

And now comes the really big news:

(6) Ground has been broken for construction of the largest Southern Sea facility of all . . . at the downtown Avenue Q and 10th site outstanding in its convenient location . . . for downtown Lubbock, for the north and west and east city region friends of times past (as well as new customers) and for through-traffic on Avenue Q.

Yes, Bob and Priscilla are understandably enthused (together with folks who have learned of the plans) about the new facility involving more than 5,000 square feet, with seating for 220, with carry-out service and all services of the other Southern Sea facilities that will continue their operation. Located on a full block tract east of Avenue Q and near the Civic Center, the new and added Southern Sea has an opening target date of November.

"A complete but fast-service lunch will be one of our prime considerations at the downtown Southern Sea," Sims emphasizes. "We have seen the demand for such and hope that by our experience and our concept of service we can perform the vital service in this field. We will personally supervise the operation, with Priscilla or myself on the job at the downtown facility and the familiar South Indiana Southern Sea."

"Thank you for letting us share our future plans with you at this time ... and we look forward to new experiences in good eating! Watch our progress at 10th and Q!"

Abernathy Floral Designed, Operated For Comprehensive Area-Wide Service

"We would say that folks in Abernathy, Lubbock and the surrounding region are most fortunate in having access to such a business as Abernathy Floral, 1312 Ave. D in Abernathy."

After all, it is a regional and a comprehensive service that is rendered by this long-established (about 30 years) Abernathy business.

The outside of the facility may not be eye-catching, but here is a very good example of the maxim "don't judge a book by its cover"!

Inside is the prettiest and most, most attractive arrangement of flowers, gifts, etc., provided by Jan Hill, former teacher for eight years in the Abernathy schools, who is ably assisted in the operation by former owner Dorothy Stephens.

Servicing Area

"The multiple services and products of Abernathy Floral are so many that description would be impossible, but it is hoped that the following concise and random facts will convey just what this area business can do for you, whether a resident of Lubbock, Abernathy, New Deal or elsewhere in the near region."

Personalized and qualified service is assured. Jan has provided and arranged the floral needs for an 800-women convention in South Park Inn, for example.

Serving Lubbock and surrounding area with cut flowers, green plants, hanging baskets, wedding service and more, only a $1 delivery fee is charged within the area!

Abernathy Floral, phone 298-2334, is a member of FTD (Floral Trans-world Delivery).

It is a complete floral and gift shop.

Wedding service includes the flower wedding line from Regency (invitation, thank you notes, birth, social and party announcements, etc.); and rental of crystal cups and plates for receptions and showers, silver service, table cloths and even tables.

China, Pottery

Then, in the sales line, there is Noritake china, casual dishes and stemware, together with such other respected names as Vernonware, Poppy Trail, Fitz & Floyd, Villeroy & Boch, and Imperial.

And Oneida, International and Gorham stainless steel and sterling.

What a gift selection, too! There are the Village Bath products, for example; and the Dirty Kids Headquarters where bubblebath and non-abrasive soaps, finger paints and all are stocked.

There is the Kelvin collector and birthday doll collection, too, for ages 1 to 16.

Ceramic figurines, also; and music boxes, jewelry boxes, mirrors and wall hangings, a line of baby gift items, (silver cups and spoons by Oneida, bibs, infants seat covers, diaper bags, pillows, etc.)

Root candles (with the scent melted right into the candle); Windsor wooden flowers so right for arrangements with driftwood; brass and crystal, silver tray, and more and more!

Art Supplies

Such as art supplies including the Grumbacher paints and canvas; and Robert Simmons brushes.

What a selection . . . what a shop! And it is open until noon Saturdays.

Delivery is enabled throughout the area, remember; just call 806-298-2334; but in the meantime, why not pay a visit personally to the pretty and well-stocked shop, meet or renew acquaintance with owner Jan Hill and designer Dorothy Stephens, and discover just how very much Abernathy Floral can do for you!

MORE THAN JUST A FLORAL SHOP — Owner Jan Hill of Abernathy Floral is seen here in a part of the attractive area shop correctly hinting of a gift stock and wedding services among the firm's specialties. Region-wide delivery is featured.

'AFTER THE FIRE COMES THE SALE, WITH CUSTOMERS PROFITING'

Lubbock Floor Covering Holds Fire Sale Before Re-Stocking

"Mister Carpet's loss is your gain!"

"That's right; we've had a fire at Lubbock Floor Covering Co., Inc., 19th Street at Avenue V, and the big Fire Sale is now underway."

"Our complete inventory is being sold for the salvage company," Bob Hendon of Lubbock Floor Covering reports, "and we want to move it fast so that we can re-stock . . . with everything new.

Early Shopping Advised

"Fantastic buys on good merchandise can be made during this sale . . . so come early for best selection."

Whatever the carpet or decorating need, Lubbock Floor Covering is worthy of prime consideration; and there always are carpet values, Fire Sale or not! (Check regarding services including financing advantages, design consultation, decor planning, custom drapes, tile, counter tops, installation of hardwood floors, window treatment, etc.)

Rhea's Crafts Arranges Storewide Discount Marking 6th Anniversary

It is that time again . . . the annually-anticipated Aniversary Sale at Rhea's Crafts in Lubbock.

And this year, for its 6th Anniversary occasion, Rhea's has gone all out to provide values in absolutely every item in the most auspicious stock.

Everything in the big store is marked at 10 per cent off during the sale that commences today ... at Rhea's Crafts, 2831 34th St.!

This includes "everything," remember . . . plaster, decoupage prints, cut wood, beads and all!

But don't delay, if interested in craft, hobby and gift items; it can be a real saving and afford one the desired projects for fall and even for Christmas planning.

Free Instruction

Also . . .

There still are some openings in the children's classes in "Painting on Plaster," presented free of tuition charge by Rhea's.

Classes are divided into the 10-12 age group and the 12-16 age span. Students paint on plaster with their choice of pastel chalk, acrylic paints or with the new sponge painting technique.

The only expense is for supplies available at Rhea's.

Exceptional Store

Rhea's Crafts, long and favorably known for its craft supplies and ideas for the creative person, has other situations of interest:

Fresh, new stock augments the already-huge selection.

Rhea's makes each craft project fun (satisfying and economical, too)!

Always-ready assistance is a big factor in the services rendered at Rhea's Crafts, with individual instruction absolutely free when one purchases there.

The long-standing rule is that anyone buying supplies there is welcomed and even encouraged to come in, sit at the big work-table and even use the big spray paint room, completing the selected project without any further charge!

Personal Assistance

Rhea Abbott is on hand to "show you" just how the project is done.

What an opportunity always for uninterrupted pursuit of a craft project, with free instruction!

Everything for decoupage, including one of the largest selection in the area of beautiful prints, is stocked.

Rhea's has a full selection of pastel chalks, some may not yet realize.

Macrame Supplies

Of course, there are macrame supplies for every need.

And Mirro-Magic, too. With this process, one can open "windows" in mirrors to display and frame cherished prints, photographs, decorative paintings or thogg special mementos.

With this technique, mirrors become frames to reflect and protect fine prints, heirloom photos or decorative painting.

All materials are available at Rhea's.

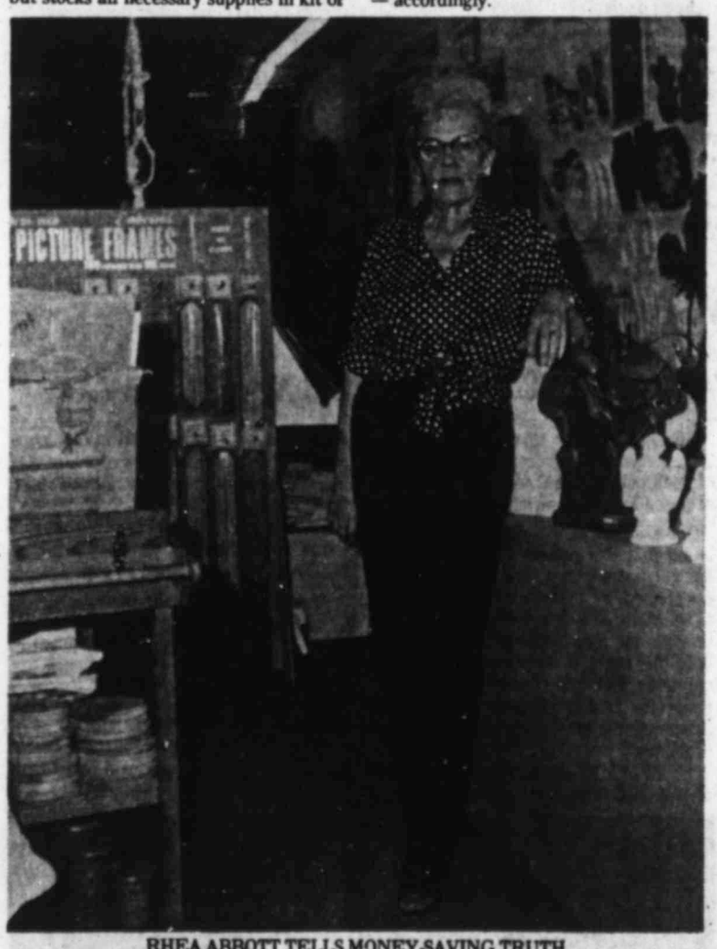

Check also regarding the multiple ways to finish plaster, including antiquing, bronzing, marbelizing, acrylics and pastel chalk.

Rhea's not only has ideas by the scores, but stocks all necessary supplies in kit or individual piece form.

Spray paints and base coats are included in the wide stock.

Glass beads, bangles, etc. are provided.

Get the idea: Rhea's knows the needs of the hobbyist, and stocks — and serves — accordingly.

CANNING TIME — Meinecke Bros. is ready to assist the home canner, with extensive and modern supplies as indicated here by Mrs. Mary Alderson and Steve Meinecke.

Meinecke Bros. Meets Demand, Stocking Canning Necessities

'Tis canning time, for sure!

(It also is air conditioning time . . and lawn care time.)

For the right supplies for each, Meinecke Bros., 1633 Broadway, is heartily recommended as it maintains a full stock of the quality lines traditional at the big Lubbock store founded 53 years ago by the late A. S. Meinecke.

In the same Lubbock location since 1938, Meinecke Bros. is owned and operated by Steve and Charles Meinecke who take pride in carrying on the traditions of the firm.

Canning Needs

For the home canner, one can turn to Meinecke Bros. for the famous Mirro-Matic pressure canners in 4,8,12,16 and 22 qt. sizes; the 16-pt. Presto pressure cooker; (with parts for each); blanchers, food presses, corn cutters, rotary food mills, and more.

Jars, Lids

There are Ball quart and pint jars, together with lids and rings.

And pea shellers by Lady Jo.

Also Seal-a-Meal bags, plastic freezer containers, West Bend sealers, freezer bags, jar lifters, funnels, vegetable slicers, canning books, preserving kettles, a great selection of cookware, etc., all the fine quality and all at fair price.

Cool Pads

All kinds of "summer stuff" is stocked in the big store; including the quality Essick line of evaporative air conditioners . . . and Cool Pads cut to size. These pads are actually revolutionary, of uniform thickness, long lasting, with no misty odors, and they will not shed, protecting the pump and drain from cloggings. They also are treated to inhibit fungi deterioration.

Select, too, from White Mountain ice cream freezers, and other items great for the vacationer, for picnic time, or pleasant evenings in the back yard.

There are lots of power and hand yard tools, including mowers, edgers and all.

"To name the many items in the huge stock would be impractical and even impossible, so why not simply come to Meinecke Bros. for the assurance that value and selection is the rule there, with sensible pricing always."

Multiple Services 'For Just About Everyone' Provided At Galaxy Pawn

"Maybe you, too, will find it advantageous to visit Galaxy Pawn, at 1621 19th St. in Lubbock. After all, an amazing cross-section of area social strata and income levels passes through its doors week after week."

(Not only does Galaxy make loans, but merchandise of value is purchased, among the several services there.)

Meet Dean "Pappa Daddy" Kirkpatrick who runs Galaxy Pawn, at 1621 19th St., phone 763-3001, in Lubbock. He is one of a group considering themselves a "new breed" of pawnbrokers who are making drastic changes in the ancient trade.

Now, a lot of people in likely every walk of life, turn to pawnbroker-businessmen such as Kirkpatrick, not only for short-term loan on possessions of every type and price range, but even just to establish credit.

Kirkpatrick, more familiar as Pappa Daddy, is a businessman, and as manager of the Galaxy Pawn performs accordingly.

His tenure in the business community includes a stint of two decades as general manager of the regionally-based Shugart Studios, as manager for some time of Gibson Discount Centers in Littlefield and Andrews, and other years as owner of his own studio, and even five years spent with a carnival.

Kirkpatrick didn't have to be a pawnbroker; there were plenty of other things he could have done. But he likes his work, reporting that he finds it both interesting and lucrative, and believes it provides a genuine service to the public.

Galaxy Pawn was opened in July of last year. Handling everything from valve grinders to clothing, and in between, Galaxy Pawn is open from 9 a.m. until 6 p.m., six days a week.

"We absolutely loan on anything of value, or buy anything of value," Pappa Daddy emphasizes.

"Running a shop like this gives you opportunity to do a little of everything; I make loans to people who can't get the quick cash they need from a bank or other institution, even some are surprisingly well-to-do. I deal with folks in every walk of life. I like selling things, and I like meeting people."

Not only has the image of the pawnbroker changed in recent years because of "self-policing" but also with the help of state laws, Kirkpatrick explains.

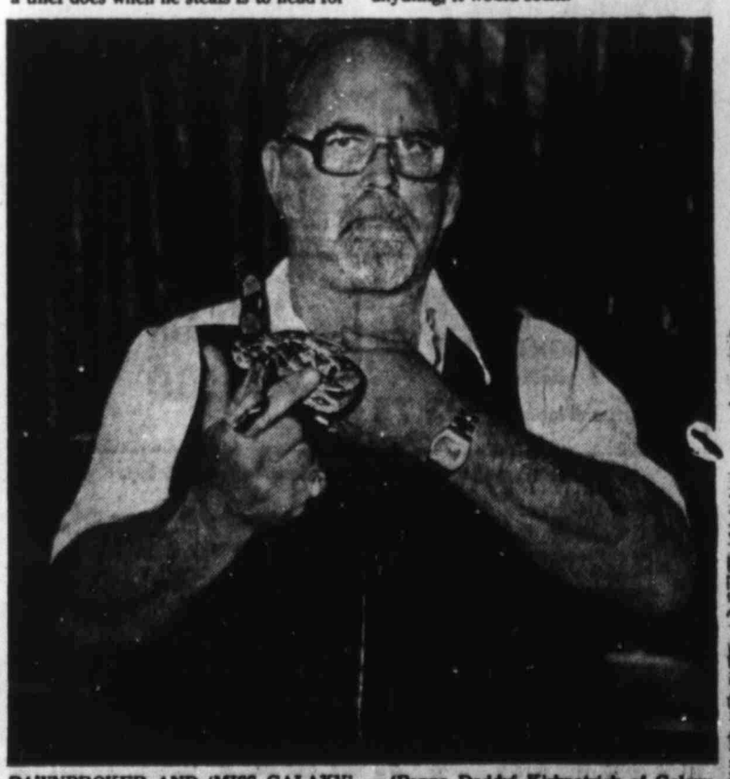

One example of these laws is the stipulation that if a pawnbroker accepts stolen goods for pawn, the goods may be confiscated by authorities and returned to the rightful owner without compensation to the pawnbroker. So, not only does this make it risky to run a fencing operation out of a pawnshop, but it tends for added cooperation between pawnbrokers and police, Pappa Daddy explains.

"A lot of folks still think the first thing a thief does when he steals is to head for a pawnshop," he adds, "but in fact I understand that only one out of every 200 items reported stolen in Dallas ever turned up in a pawnshop!"

Some readers may not realize that the terms and interest rates on pawnshop loans are clearly specified by state law.

"You'd be surprised at the number of substantial residents and businessmen who use our pawnshop regularly to raise cash," Kirkpatrick says.

Of pawned items, diamonds, guns and machine tools are especially good sellers, locally as elsewhere. Galaxy Pawn has all this, plus antiques and just about anything, it would seem.

Business & Industrial Review

FOR DELIGHTFUL SHOPPING — Janiece Proctor, department head, and staffmember Jane Green call attention to the fresh new-season apparel and gift items stocked for little folk at Latham's. Select for infants, girls and boys.

Latham's Considers Young Set, Infants In Popular Department

"For infants wear, for boys and girls apparel, too . . . there is no way to imagine a greater fashion-value combo than that at Latham's!"

Never has there been better selection there than the present offering for late summer, fall and winter . . . with all the togs so very pretty, and practical, and affordable.

Select from infants sizes to 24 months; girls in toddler sizes, size 3 to 6x, 7 through 14 and even pre-teens.

Not only is there a choice clothing selection in this department, but there are scads of appropriate gifts for showers and for the young folks in your life. There are cuddly stuffed toys, nursery decor items, and more.

"We just cannot imagine any mother or grandmother failing to enjoy and appreciate the type department afforded at Latham's for the infants and young folk. With the change of seasons, everything is especially new and bright, making for even more fun in shopping at the big, friendly Latham's, 5th Street at Memphis Avenue in Lubbock."

House Clinic Providing Siding By Endura Steel

Endura Steel, "the heaviest panel in the industry, now is available at the House Clinic in Lubbock.

The House Clinic, at 1922 Ave. E, phone 747-4436, has been named exclusive dealer in all Texas and New Mexico for Endura Steel by Arrowhead Industries.

Manufactured in Minneapolis, Minn., this heavy G-90 steel siding "is just what West Texas has been needing," reports House Clinic owners L.K. and Barbara Lankford.

This siding can be installed anywhere in the area by the House Clinic's own installers, and though just introduced here, it already has been placed on residences in the region. One should see it to fully appreciate its utility, beauty and long-time economy.

The siding is available in six colors and it can be installed over any finish.

Guaranteed For Decades

Its guarantee is extraordinary:

(1) A three-year 100 per cent guarantee and further prorated 32-year limited warranty is given on the product; and

(2) It carries a 20-year limited warranty on hail protection!

Bank rate financing is available.

Long In Business

The House Clinic has been in the siding business since 1960, and it introduced steel soffit and fascia to the area several years ago, now going still further to provide the quality Endura Steel siding.

Advanced Design

As for the Arrowhead soffit and fascia; these overhang systems do more than just fix up what's run down! Their superior construction, advanced design styling and colors will actually make the home more beautiful than it ever was before.

It carries a 35-year written guarantee. If interested in fire resistance, savings on maintenance, elimination of costly repainting; termite resistance, a material that cannot crack, peel, flake or blister, renewable by washing with a hose, then let the people who know solve your overhang problems.

"We invite you to learn more about our siding, fascia and soffit, all by Arrowhead; discover the superior strength afforded . . . a siding that is able to withstand punishment, that is handsome, that is outstanding value for years to come.

"Don't you find that one or more of the products and services of the House Clinic, 1922 Ave. E, phone 747-4436, Lubbock, could be of exceptional benefit to you, now?"

Pivot Point Training, Other Aids Mark Cinderella School

"At the Cinderella Beauty School in Lubbock you may start any day, with classes beginning each morning at 8:30, continuing until 5 p.m., six days a week, Monday through Saturday."

Cinderella Beauty School, at 5401 Aberdeen, phones 792-4439 or 792-4430, is the only "Approved Redken School" in Lubbock, reports owner Mrs. Winnie Vaughn who also states that the Aura books are available to the professional hairdresser at the school.

"We carry Redken retail items, and included in our curriculm are sculpture nails, custom nails and Audutte natural nails (also plain and oil manicures). Facials, lash and brow dye and style, pedicures, electrical scalp treatments, as well as Redken hair treatments, too."

Special courses are offered at the Cinderella including Shampoo Specialist, Manicurist, Facial and Wig Specialist, etc.

"Our students are in great demand by leading salons," Mrs. Vaughn emphasizes.

Beauty Services

"Come in or call for an appointment with one of our students. We will make you feel welcome and happy that you came in, and we know you will be happy with our students' work that is under careful supervision by very capable instructors who are well trained and who have many years experience.

"So call or come in and see our carefully planned school. We are located two blocks north of the South Plains Mall and one block west off Slide Road."

A Pivot Point School

"Cinderella Beauty School invites you to have a beautiful future . . . the Pivot Point way."

"Learn faster and perform better in the shortest possible time! Our approved Pivot Point school teaches the Pivot Point International scientific approach to hair design program . . . the world's most comprehensive educational system."

Pivot Point students receive exclusive advantages, and as members of the International Hair Designers Club receive the Pivot Point Student Package, a complete learning library of book courses, with photos describing each step to perform all facets of hair designing and their cutting.

The book course includes the Scientific Approach to Hair Design book, Five Popular Hair Cuts book; Fourteen Classic Hair Styles book, and Charisma I techniques book, plus Aura, the 'ultimate hair design course.' Also you will be taught the Complete Cosmetology program by your teachers at Cinderella, with the incomparable Pivot Point audio and visual aids.

"As post-graduate benefits, only Pivot Point graduates receive a certificate good for two tuition-free, stimulating Advance Hair Designing Classes, worth hundreds of dollars. The training can be taken at your convenience, up to two years after graduation.

"So enroll now, come in and talk to our registrar who will be happy to answer your questions and help you start on a lifetime career of beauty!"

Good Products, Skilled Staff Contribute In Rainbo Success

Rainbo Baking Co. of Lubbock does not serve and excel by mere happenstance!

A good product line and service to match is made possible by a knowledgeable staff devoted to the job at hand . . . and with the customer considered first and always!

Harry Hoopes, manager of the Lubbock firm, is well aware of the several factors that contribute to a successful and smooth-running organization, and he is known for the pride he takes in the people who make up the staff. More than a few staffmembers' and customers alike have voiced their appreciation of Hoopes and the Rainbo family members.

In conjuction with this recognition, Hoopes periodically introduces and salutes staffmembers on these pages of the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal.

Coming in for salute this are Chester Harris, Rick Martin and Bob Rowten.

Chester Harris

Meet them, one by one:

Chester Harris, public relations and marketing, has spent most of his life in Lubbock, actually having been associated with real estate, auto sales, etc., and most recently with 18 years bakery experience.

"I consider my present association . . . with Rainbo and the baking industry . . . as the most satisfying years of my career," Harris volunteers.

Harris and his wife, Peggy, have two children, a daughter, Mrs. Judy Yaksick of Dallas, and a son, Jim Harris, vice president of an insurance company in Houston. Both Jim and Judy are graduates of Monterey High School and attended Texas Tech.

Mr. and Mrs. Harris are members of the Calvary Baptist Church, and he is a member of the Lubbock Lions Club, Sales Executive Club and Downtown Bible Class.

Rick Martin

Rick Martin, director of sales, has been with the company since 1967, starting his bakery-related career in Cedar Ridge, Iowa, then in Tucson, Ariz., and for the past year with Rainbo in Lubbock. His progress through the ranks included tenures as sales service, sale manager and sales supervision.

Members of the First Baptist Church in Lubbock, Rick and his wife, Connie, have three children: daughters Shawn, 15, and Maribeth, 12; and son, Mike, 13.

"Lubbock is an exceptionally good community in which to rear a family, we feel," Martin states, "and add to this the many advantages of working with Rainbo and you see why we are happy here."

Bob Rowten

Bob Rowten is recently-named city sales manager for the Lubbock firm.

Marking six years with the company, he commenced his career in Harlingen (Tex.) as a salesman, coming to Lubbock 1 1/2 years ago. He has served as salesman, junior supervisor, supervisor and sales manager.

Rowten and his wife, Charlie Ann, have two children, Laura Geneiss, age 1 1/2, and Christopher, 5.

"We really like Lubbock and we appreciate the type firm and the type management that is Rainbo . . . we are 'sold' on every aspect of its operation including product, business concepts, management and community participation."

Frame Selection, Specials, Class Scheduling Impressive At Mrs. B's

Three announcements at Mrs. B's Arts, Crafts & Gifts merit special and immediate attention:

(1) July Specials are now in effect!

(2) An extensive selection of beautiful picture frames has been stocked and made available at unbelievably low prices as outlined below; and

(3) A very impressive class and workshop schedule has been arranged, with popular and talented instructors heading each course.

Mrs. B's, at 5105 29th Drive, phone 797-5850, has searched extensively for a source of frames enabling this Lubbock shop to pass them on at low price without sacrifice of quality.

Now, these frames have been secured, with the largest selection yet presented by the firm.

Check, Compare Prices

As way of introduction, these frames for a limited time will be discounted 25 per cent from their already-low prices.

Examples include some in size 24 x 24, regular $16, now $12; size 18 x 24, regular $13.75, now $10.31; and 16 x 20, now just $9.75.

There are other frames in a wide price range but all are distinct values.

"So . . . why seek out of town or wait for travelling merchants when good frames are available locally, at Mrs. B's, at such money-saving prices?"

Stretched canvas also is made available at low price, with some 16 x 20 as low as $2.75, as example.

July Specials have been arranged on many other items in the intriguing stock at Mrs. B's.

Fun Classes Ahead

Among instructors slated for workshops and classes timed just right for fall enjoyment and Christmas preparation are Charl Egeland and Sarah Storrs, Pee Wee Lanier, Jo Daugherty, Jeannie Lewis, Char Edwards and Sally Carter.

One may learn in the fields of tole painting, oils and acrylic in canvas painting of portraits, animals, landscapes, flowers, even gold leaf creations.

"For schedule and details of a course of your preference, inquire now at Mrs. B's . . . and take advantage of July Specials while in the shop. May we have the pleasure of an early visit?"

Insulating Windows Firm Open Featuring Specialized Service

For those who have depended upon Jim Haynes for Arcadia Stone, there is further good news:

Not only does Haynes still provide the products and services at 1922 Ave. E in Lubbock, but he has opened an added facility, the Insulating Windows, Inc., at 1616 Ave. F, where aluminum replacement windows, storm windows and storm doors are custom made!

"For cleaner and more comfortable living", Haynes and his experienced crew can perform quite a service.

Imagine, for example, rubber seals on the custom-made windows, with this self sealing innovation making caulking unnecessary.

These products and services by Haynes are made possible upon his purchase in June of the window department of House Clinic.

Haynes not only has the background and knowledge for superior window and door manufacture and installation, but he has constructed beautiful homes throughout the area, together with construction of fireplaces and other units with use of Arcadia Stone.

Visits Invited

"The invitation is extended to visit Haynes and his staff at the added and new 1616 Ave. F home of Insulating Windows, Inc. They can open a whole new world in your enjoyment of your home every day of the year ... with the finest in storm windows and doors, with insulating windows enhancing the beauty, comfort and hospitality of the home.".

PRODUCT AND INSTALLATION TO SATISFY — Raymond Blair, foreman at Insulating Windows, Inc., completes an installation in an area residence. Note the accompanying story for specific benefits enabled by the firm.

VALUES IN HOUSE PLANTS, POTTERY — Shown is Tody Davidson, owner with husband George Davidson of The Greenhouse in South Plains Mall. Tody emphasizes that selection, pricing and availability are considered always in the shop's operation.

Weekend Sidewalk Sale Spells Special Values At Greenhouse

For a real treat any day, for exceptional selection and always-sensible pricing . . . it is The Greenhouse, specializing exclusively in house plants, in South Plains Mall.

But this week is of special significance there, with a big Sidewalk Sale scheduled Friday and Saturday, July 21-22.

Many, many items are specially priced for this event, with real bargains available on the merchandise displayed both in and out of the so-attractive shop for these two days.

There is a very good selection of 10-inch hanging baskets at this time, it is observed, with one sure to be "just what you have been wanting" for room or patio, home or business.

A very good pottery selection is stocked, with more arriving. For really decorative pottery, depend on The Greenhouse.

The Greenhouse stocks a fresh, healthy, wide array of house plants including many native to the area, and others from South Texas, California and Florida.

"We sincerely believe that we offer the best selection of house plants in the area" is the word from George and Tody Davidson, husband-wife owner-operator team.

The Davidsons have been at The Greenhouse since its opening back when the Mall opened, and since January of this year they have been sole owners. A very able staff assists, including Susie Rampy and recent Monterey grads Terry Davidson and Lyle Cox.

Not only is the selection outstanding at The Greenhouse (located just west of Chick-fil-A in the west wing of South Plains Mall, but pricing is most competitive. One may select from a range extending from cacti and succulents in 3-inch pots to the big and beautiful dracena margenata . . . and everything in between!

The quality and selection is evident even from a casual view at the store's entry way. Note the gorgeous tropicals, the fantastic array of house plants of all types, and the accessories and decor pieces.

Beautiful, functional macrame hangers are stocked. And ceramic pots.

There are grow lights, brackets, chains, choices in baskets and more.

"Plant food and everything for plants . . . we have it at The Greenhouse."

Visa and Master Charge purchases are welcomed, and The Greenhouse stays open from 10 a.m. until 9 p.m., six days a week.

Plants are potted for customers at a nominal fee.

"As one of the highlights of your next South Plains Mall visit, browse and select at The Greenhouse as residents throughout West Texas and Eastern New Mexico have done. The word gets around when quality and selection, plus friendliness and convenient location, dominate; we at The Greenhouse appreciate the kind expressions and the growing patronage that has enable our current stock and services."

"May we serve you, too, whether for gifting, for selection for your own home decor or for special occasions.

It all is at The Greenhouse, South Plains Mall (with the shop about midway between the fountain and Sears), phone 792-5597.

Stork Shop Tells Drastic Markdowns Highlighting 'July Clearance' Event

Imagine . . . everything in its spring and summer apparel stock marked at 25% to 75% discount!

This is the situation during July Clearance underway at The Stork Shop, 3416 34th St. (in Indiana Gardens).

Yes, everything in spring and summer wear is now marked down at up to 75% to make room for the fall-winter items already being placed on the racks.

EMPHASIZES SALE SAVINGS — Ida Langford, owner of the Stork Shop in Indiana Gardens, tells of July values in maternity wear.

For everything in maternity wear, in Lubbock it is The Stork Shop, and July Clearance time provides ideal opportunity at unbelievable savings.

Under ownership and active management since February of longtime Lubbock resident Mrs. Doyle (Ida) Langford, the Stork Shop actually dates its record of service back some 30 years!

Since its establishment, it has been located in the same Indiana Gardens location, and under the ownership of Ida Langford it now has been remodeled most beautifully.

Actually, one visiting there this week will discover that beautiful new carpeting has been installed, with other modernization involving painting and rearrangement.

Everything at The Stork Shop says "welcome."

Stocked is everything in maternity needs (with exception of shoes).

Select from new items — from swim suits to hose!

New summer wear dominates, with selection enabled from coordinates, really "dressy" dresses, casuals, slack suits, lingerie;

Even denim jeans and a gorgeous array of sleepwear.

Ida Langford is on hand to render personal service to old friends and new customers alike at the so-pretty store, assisted by Rebecca McKinley.

Hours are 10 a.m. until 6 p.m., Mondays through Saturdays, and both Master Charge and Visa purchases are welcomed.

Doyle Langford has been in the dry-cleaning business in Lubbock some 30 years, and Ida, consequently, is no stranger to the public's preferences and needs in apparel.

"I really enjoy providing this kind of shop, serving both Lubbock and regional residents with as complete a selection as I can in maternity wear," owner Ida Langford reports.

It would seem that Indiana Gardens, Lubbock and region, and all in need of maternity wear are indeed fortunate in having the kind of shop and the type of personnel as is The Stork Shop, 3416 34th St., phone 799-5618.

CLEARANCE UNDERWAY — Billie Thigpen and La Nelda Gordon direct attention to "Clearance Time' in the Ladies Wear and Children's Wear departments at Woolco. The invitation is extended to 'shop our Sportswear department for tremendous savings in swimwear, shorts and tops ideal for our 90-degree weather.' Boys ages 2-7 and girls, 2-14, can be completely outfitted in cool summer playwear at Woolco clearance prices; and there are sun dresses, pant suits, and dresses in a size range of 7-18 and 16 1/2-24 1/2, all at clearance prices and all displayed in a pretty carpeted area of the friendly store.

Woolco Furniture, Floor Cover Departments Heavily Stocked

"Everybody enjoys a beautiful home. Right?"

To add the desired beauty treatments to the home, economically and in good taste, come to Woolco and take a look at the fantastic Furniture and Floor Covering departments.

Browsing, comparison and selection is heartily encouraged.

In the Furniture Department there is a large assortment of living room groups including two-piece, three-piece and eight-piece sets in many colors and styles.

Also note the really impressive selection of recliners and swivel rockers, also in choice of colors and styles.

There are cane or Bentwood rockers, music centers, entertainment centers, bar or room dividers, bar stools, gun cabinets, end tables with coffee tables, unfinished furniture, parson tables, five-shelf hutches, three and five-shelf bookcases, and more!

Woolco also has catalogs for one to scan and from which to order.

In the Floor Covering department there are area rugs that likely are just what you have been searching for; and bathroom carpet, indoor-outdoor carpet, room-size carpets in 9 x 12 or 12 x 15 or 8 1/2 x 11 1/2 sizes.

Also five-piece bath sets, lid covers, contour rugs, tank sets, vinyl carpet runner, 5 x 6 bath carpet and vinyl rugs.

The department also provides carpet samples from which one can order.

"So come on down to Woolco and see one of our friendly salespersons including David Sanchez, department manager; Patty Gilbride or Raul Perez. It is quite possible you did not realize the extensive selection in these departments at Woolco; add to this the recognition of low Woolco prices and the knowledgeable and friendly help of each salesperson, and you have very good reason to rely upon Woolco and especially the departments featured in this report."

"After all . . . Woolco wants to be your favorite store!"

'WANTING TO SAVE FOR YOU' — Raul Perez is among the Woolco staffmembers knowledgeable in home furnishings and floor covering selections.

All at once here come a Gal we couldn't resist. ("Bettye Turner") She ain't kin to me, except she is a working motor scooter. Interested in people. Good Looking, 'cept she ain't bald & fat. She loves people. She has 2 daughters, is a Grandma, has 2 or 3 degrees, is a teacher & learner and has some real estate experience (which is noteworthy). Says she ain't but 28 years old, but I figure she is at least mature & smart as a whoop. (40 some odd). She is a Christian person with a wealth of knowledge about people & this here is our business. She can serve you & charm you & you will enjoy buying a home from this fine lady! We present for your edification pleasure Bettye Turner! (We are proud she is a part of our steer.)

Local Pediatric ICU Crippled By Lack Of Nurses

By CURTIS BURTON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A critical shortage of trained personnel is holding back the rapid expansion of the new pediatric intensive care unit at Health Sciences Center Hospital.

The facility, located on the second floor and adjacent to the pediatric ward, opened Monday with a two-patient capacity and will expand to a four-patient capability on July 24.

Currently eight specially trained nurses work in the facility which has the most modern equipment available.

According to Barbara Sawyers, R.N., pediatric coordinator, the only problem restricting the size of the unit is the lack of highly skilled nurses needed to care for the patients.

coordinator, the only problem restricting the size of the unit is the lack of the high-

"Neither money equipment nor space is a problem in expanding the PICU program here," Mrs. Sawyers said. "It is tremendous shortage of specialized pediatric nurses that is keeping us from growing at the speed we prefer." Mrs. Sawyers said the Health Sciences Center Hospital has the only pediatric intensive care unit in Lubbock and the surrounding area.

She said that due to the large population area the Lubbock hospitals serve, such a specialized unit has been needed a long time. The specialized care rendered can help in reducing the mortality rate.

The nearest hospitals with PICU facilities are in Dallas, Houston, Galveston and Albuquerque, N. M.

Three patients have been placed in the unit since its opening. Two required the care following heart surgery and one suffered respiratory difficulties.

Pediatric patients, infants through age 18, who require intensive care in other Lubbock and surrounding hospitals, are treated in adult intensive care units.

Mrs. Sawyers pointed out that children receive excellent care from the nurses in the adult units, but the difference is that the nurses generally are not specialized in working with children and neither are the adult intensive care units designed specifically to treat them.

"Children are not little adults," said Mrs. Sawyers. "Children have their own peculiar problems sometimes far different from adults. They even have different fears.

"A specialized pediatric nurse who is skilled in identifying these problems which become common in children can more easily and quickly care for the patient," she said.

Mrs. Sawyers, in order to make her point, used the example of the heart patient who often requires intensive care.

"In the adult unit, nurses care for patients who have suffered apparent heart attacks. The nurses are not specially trained to care for children whose cardiovascular disorders may be originated with birth, such as the hole in the heart."

Adult intensive care units usually do not have equipment geared down for the size of children.

"Imagine using an adult size cardiac defibrillator (machine which produces and electrical shock to stimulate the heart to beat) on a small child," said Mrs. Sawyers. She showed one designed for a youngster.

The Health Sciences Center Hospital PICU has much equipment and more on the way which is needed to care for pediatric patients who have had surgery generally performed on children.

The beds are so designed that a patient's weight can be monitored without having to move him. Should a patient's body begin to accumulate fluid, nurses are immediately informed by a warning device.

Assorted types of monitoring instruments are on the wall behind the beds and are connected to one central unit which records the history of the patient's body functions for a doctor's immediate reading.

The intensive care room itself really is not unlike the remainder of the pediatric ward in appearance. The walls are painted in "cheerful" colors and the floor is carpeted in bright orange.

Presently the facility is not equipped to deal with head injuries. Radiology equipment will arrive in about six months or sooner.

Although the competition with the larger metropolitan cities is tough, there are reasons why graduating pediatric nurses should be attracted to the entire pediatric program here. "This is where the action is," Mrs. Sawyers said.

"We are one of the newest facilities and have the most modern equipment available with more on its way."

The facility is the site for a number of experimental programs and studies in the field of medicine.

"We are fortunate to have a number of pediatric physicians who specialize in cardiology (heart), nephrology (kidneys), endocrinology (glands) and neonatology (new born infants)."

Immunologist Dr. Mary South, who worked with the somewhat famed case of the young boy who was cared for in "the bubble" in Houston, is chairman in the department of pediatrics at the Texas Tech University School of Medicine.

The staff also includes a pediatric cardiovascular surgeon, Dr. Hugh Firor.

The Health Sciences Center Hospital pediatric department is brightly colored. Red wagons and toys are to be found in the two hallways and rooms.

Each room has a large window. "No patient, particular particularly children, cares to feel shut in, regardless how ill he is," Mrs. Sawyers said.

The facility has a playroom for the young children and a game room, complete with bumper pool tables, for adolescents.

Adolescents and younger children are grouped seperately.

For those who face lengthy hospital stays, say for fractures, a classroom with desks and a chalkboard is provided. A teacher from the Lubbock public schools gives instruction.

Mrs. Sawyers encourages tours to the facility by the younger set so if time ever comes they need to be hospitalized, they will not be afraid.

"We try to alter as little as possible the child's environment," she said. Parents are encouraged to be involved in caring for their children during the hospitalization.

The young patients are not required to wear hospital clothing in the daytime. "We even avoid meals in bed when possible," she continued.

The nurses do not wear traditional uniforms and caps but brightly colored tunic tops. "In no way do we want to scare our young patients," Mrs. Sawyers said.

Health Sciences Center Hospital is the only Lubbock hospital which does not have structured visitation hours. Parents, family members and friends are free to be with the children at any time within reason.

Presently the pediatric staff is working on a sibling visitation program. Mrs. Sawyer said that it is important not to break the young patient away from his brothers and sisters and general daily routine.

Priority in future plans, according to Mrs. Sawyers, is more nurses. "Eventually we want a play therapist and additional social workers. Additional equipment always is needed."

YOUNG REFUGEES — Indochinese refugee children look through a barbed wire fence recently at the Sikieu camp in northeast Thailand, where long-term refugees and those considered by Thai authorities to be politically suspect are kept under tight security. Authorities say there are now more than 100,000 Indochinese in Thai refuge camps, many of them at Sikieu, which is located about 125 miles northeast of Bangkok. (AP Laserphoto)

British Bets Exceed Government Budget

LONDON (AP) — The British bet $15.2 billion a year, or $271 a year for every man, woman and child, a Royal Commission on Gambling reports. That is more than they spend on defense, housing or health.

The nine-member commission found that 94 percent of British adults gamble, and more than a third of them play the soccer pools every week. Only one-tenth of 1 percent frequent the roulette and blackjack tables of London's glossy casinos; the rest seek a payoff on horse and dog racing, slot machines and newspaper competitions as well as the soccer pools.

Survival Ordeal Prompts Man To Plan Return To Alaska

SEATTLE (AP) — Every day was a struggle for survival, but Jerry LaCaille says his solitary 10-day ordeal on a rocky, remote island has left him determined to return to his new love — Alaska.

"I would like to go back there with my son," LaCaille, 45, said in a telephone interview Sunday. "It's the most beautiful country in the world."

LaCaille, who lost 20 pounds, returned home to Yakima after his rescue Friday night from Coronation Island. The island is about 80 miles southeast of Sitka, Alaska.

Ten days earlier, on a 150-mile flight between Ketchikan and Sitka, LaCaille and his companion, Mike Short of Yakima, encountered bad weather. They were forced to land their float-equipped plane on the ocean.

One float filled with water and the plane sank 400 yards off Coronation Island, LaCaille said.

He and Short started swimming to shore with life vests, a packsack and a parka. LaCaille swam with the current in the 40-degree sea and made it to the beach, but Short apparently was swept out to sea.

"My friend wasn't as strong a swimmer as I was, and the tide was going out," LaCaille said. "My friend just didn't make it. The cold killed him."

He reached the beach and spent five days without fire, shelter, food or dry clothing. LaCaille tried to reach a lighthouse at one end of the island, but his feet became swollen and infected. He later found that the lighthouse was unmanned.

In his trek across the heavily wooded and rocky island — which has peaks as high as 2,000 feet — he found an abandoned cabin. Along the way, he encountered constant rain and a shroud of fog.

"By then, I was pretty well gone," said LaCaille. "I just laid down for a couple of days."

He never got a fire going, as 40-degree temperatures and dampness took their toll, but his extensive medical background helped, he said. Some year-old food scraps in the cabin — dried milk, 15 to 20 ounces of syrup, old sea biscuits and berries and mussels — gave him the basics for survival.

"I had no problem at all with food," LaCaille said. "People don't understand how demanding it (nature) is, but on the other hand, it's so generous."

On the tenth day LaCaille said he was lying in the cabin when Roger Gildersleeve, a logger from a nearby island, walked through the door.

"I said 'who are you?' and he said, 'who are you?'" LaCaille recalled.

LaGaille went to the Gildersleeve home before he flew to Sitka, Seattle and Yakima, bypassing hospitals.

"There was not a sad moment," he said of his challenge with nature. "I became aware of the finality of life — that I was totally dependent on my next step."

Car Buffs Re-Enact First Sanctioned Auto Race

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Antique car buffs, complete with dusters and goggles, traced a 200-mile path through Wisconsin during the weekend, commemorating the 100th anniversary of what sponsors said was the world's first sanctioned auto race.

Following as closely as possible the original route taken by two steam-powered vehicles 100 years ago, the antique autos left Green Bay Friday and were greeted by cheers and waves from onlookers in towns along the route to Madison.

Minor breakdowns, most of them flat tires, added another touch of realism to the journey, testing the mechanical know-how of the participants.

Some of the drivers wore antique outfits that included goggles and long motoring coats called dusters, while women wore wide-brimmed hats and carried parasols.

No map of the original route was available, so each car had a navigator who used accounts of the first race to try and trace the route.

Representatives of several auto clubs sponsored the venture, designed to commemorate a race run July 16-23, 1878.

Bruce Mohs of Madison, general chairman of the event, spent a year organizing the anniversary affair, getting a proclamation from the governor's office and striving to see that each wheeled participant was a 1942 model or older.

The original race is considered the world's first officially sanctioned auto contest because the state Legislature offered a $10,000 prize, hoping to encourage development of a practical alternative to the horse.

It pitted the 14,255-pound Green Bay, owned by E. P. Cowles, against the 9,000-pound Oshkosh, built by A. M. Farriand.

The Green Bay was plagued by mechanical problems, broke through a culvert and became bogged down in a muddy roadway, never mounting much of a challenge to its competitor.

The Oshkosh wound up covering the 201-mile distance to Madison in an elapsed time of 33 hours and 27 minutes, about 6½ hours less than the Legislature had required.

But race commissioners, disappointed that only two cars had entered and insisting Farriand's creation wasn't really economically practical, declined to give him the $10,000 prize. Legislators later yielded and gave him $5,000.

Girls Rescued By Policeman

HOUSTON (AP) — A vacationing policeman rescued two young girls Sunday from a smoke-filled cottage at the Burnett Bayland Home for Children.

Jim Dunbar, 29, said he was driving home when he saw smoke from the cottage. He said he called the fire department on his CB radio and then used a flashlight to break window glass.

"I just took a deep breath and went in and saw a person on the floor," he said. After removing the first girl from the cottage, Dunbar said he returned, found the second, and collapsed as he got her outside.

"I was taking a bunch of smoke but I just couldn't leave thinking there might be someone else," he said.

Debra Hedges, 16, was reported in fair condition, Macil Gray, 12, in critical condition.

Hospital attendants said neither girl was burned but that both suffered smoke inhalation.

District Fire Chief R. L. Clayton said both girls would have died if Dunbar had not removed them from the cottage.

TOWER VISITORS

The Tower of London, 900 years old this year, is expected to draw even more tourists this year than the record three million who visisted the structure in 1977, according to the National Geographic Society.

Gun Struggle Kills Man

HOUSTON (AP) — Charges of aggravated assault on a police officer have been filed against two men after a Saturday night incident in which a third man was shot to death.

Bob Schuler, a Department of Public Safety officer, said he was attacked by three men after six men got out of two vehicles he had stopped for speeding on Interstate 10 West.

Schuler told detectives three men tried to take his service revolver and he fired four times during a scuffle. Schuler was not injured.

Juan Jesus Pecina, 20, died at the scene of wounds to the neck and legs.

The aggravated assault charges were filed Sunday against Fidencio Rendon, 20, and Jorge Lopez, 21. Bonds were set at $20,000.

Detectives said Rendon was shot in the right hand, Lopez in the left leg.

WE'RE SPREADING LOVE ALL OVER TEXAS.

Salesmen Often Encounter Disappointment

By MALCOLM N. CARTER

LANCASTER, Pa. (AP) — With the sparkle in his eyes long spent, the salesman's eyelids hang somehow heavier at the end of the day.

Orders will go unsent once more, put off until tomorrow. Sales reports will go unwritten once more. And once more, Hy Kaplan will go alone to yet another joyless motel room.

He is 53 years old and a traveling salesman since 1952, one of hundreds holding a march in Washington Tuesday to protest bills before Congress that they say would unwittingly discriminate against them.

The proposals would raise taxes on fuel-inefficient cars and remove some deductions for business meals derided as "three-martini lunches."

"Why can't they protect us for a change?" the gray-haired salesman asks. "I feel the things they're coming up with are basically hurting the middle-income man."

His "fuel-inefficient" 1977 Chrysler, Kaplan says, is the container for his bread and butter — the sample dresses, 175 of them this day, that he hauls from one backwater town to the next.

"I bought this car for the trunk," he relates. "That's the way I buy a car — with a tape measure."

And lunches laced with martinis? More often than not, it's a cup of black coffee sweetened with a sugar substitute and, Kaplan mutters, a fast-food hamburger bereft of fattening bun.

This day begins at 8:30 in a motel outside Pittsburgh. The $21 room is but one expense. He pays for meals, telephone calls, gasoline, his car, the sample dresses, health insurance and Social Security. Last year, he says, he made nearly $40,000 in commissions on more than $1 million worth of Young Edwardian dresses. He netted about $18,000.

His first telephone calls this morning produce little more than the disappointments that riddle a salesman's day. Today the snag is one canceled appointment after another — appointments made before leaving home in Lido Beach, N.Y., three days earlier.

"When you drive 500 miles to make appointments and they're not there, it's kind of frustrating," Kaplan says. "And it happens a lot. They know that the salesman is always going to come back to them. They know."

John Harrigan, who owns 11 stores, is not in any, and not at home. Kaplan tries anyway, drives into downtown Pittsburgh and, crisp in a blue blazer, strolls into the store. Appraising the racks, he tells the manager he's out of a voile model that has sold well. Then he asks her to call and see if Harrigan has surfaced.

Meantime, it's back to the phone, hoping he can see the owner of a Chambersburg store later: "Tell Steve I'll be there. He's passed up the line twice without even seeing it. I'll be there later."

Afer he hangs up, he charms a young saleswoman. "Hiya, doll,' he says. "See what I get with this job? All the young chicks."

Notwithstanding jokes about traveling salesmen, Kaplan says later, he gets long lonely nights instead of such "chicks."

His wife has come to accept his absences, which started two years after he was married, Kaplan says. But he adds that she has had to be father as well as mother to their four children, now grown.

Kaplan logs 35,000-40,000 miles annually, passes whole months away from home and spends perhaps 250 days a year in his territory, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Washington and southern New Jersey.

On the telephone again, he learns yet another appointment is off.

Harrigan has not appeared, so Kaplan passes time by going for coffee. He finds a parking ticket on his car. It will cost him $10.

When Harrigan finally surfaces, he complains that only the sheer polyesters are moving. Kaplan placates him, promising free samples for the salespersons who sell the most of his line.

Heading east on the turnpike, he doesn't wear his seat belt, doesn't turn on the radio and doesn't listen to the CB jabber.

"With the tape deck, with the Steve Martin tapes, with all the tapes, they don't mean nothin'," Kaplan says. "You're still sitting there alone."

He detours to Ligonier, but one store owner is out of town and a second store is going out of business. Kaplan makes for Somerset, where the proprietor says she's too busy for him.

More telephone calls, and one is good news: An order from Altoona is confirmed. But Steve, the man he had tried to reach in Chambersburg, is unhappy with Young Edwardian sales and won't see Kaplan.

"There's no end to this," Kaplan sighs, starting to wilt in the heat. "You just keep on going."

Enduring snail-paced trailers and snarled toll lines, he reaches Bedford, 95 miles from Pittsburgh, just before 5 p.m. And — at last — Dixie Stufft says she'll look at the line, "if you hurry."

Kaplan is tranformed. He darts outside, wrestles three bags of dresses onto a rack and struggles back in. One "number" at a time, he fairly pirouettes before the woman, his spiel like the patter of a carnival pitchman. He sees himself as a record. "The needle's in the groove," he says. It is like being on stage, and he is the star.

"When the cameras are running and the lights are on, there's no stopping me," Kaplan says. "Suddenly everything changes."

This is his reward. This, and the 33 dresses she orders.

In Lancaster by 8, he's traveled more than 250 miles and worked 13 hours. He says he knows no other life and wishes none other.

There will be no retirement, he says. But maybe his wife soon will join him on the road. For comfort tonight, there's only her call.

For companionship, there's the TV. It plays on and on into the night as Hy Kaplan, his star now dimmed, sinks oblivious into sleep.

LIFE OF A SALESMAN — Hy Kaplan places his sample dresses on a rack outside a store in his three-state territory. Kaplan is on the road, up to 13 hours a day, 250 days a year and Monday will join hundreds of other salesmen in Washington protesting bills that will hurt them. Kaplan says he needs his big, fuel-inefficient car to carry his samples and removing deductions for business meals are more likely to hit his black coffee and hamburger than three martinis. NM Wants Veto Power Over Waste Plant

SANTA FE, N.M. (UPI) — Department of Energy Secretary James M. Schlesinger and his top deputy have promised New Mexico veto authority over a radioactive waste disposal site but Republican Sen. Pete V. Domenici and the Democratic state administration want more than assurances.

Domenici has introduced a bill in Congress to specifically allow the New Mexico Legislature to block the federal Waste Isolation Pilot Project planned east of Carlsbad in 1985.

Secretary George S. Goldstein of the state Health and Environment Department said Schlesinger and his deputy, John F. O'Leary, may lack the legal authority to grant New Mexico the veto.

"I think as far as Mr. O'Leary and Secretary Schleisinger are concerned, New Mexico has veto power," Goldstein said in an inteview. "But Mr. O'Leary indicated if we do not have veto power, it is a New Mexico internal problem. I don't believe that is quite the case."

The Department of Energy last week signed a contract for $2.1 million federally funded state study of the plan to help ensure acceptance of the project. O'Leary said there were no problems in granting the veto.

"I want you to know that the difficulties are on your side, not on ours," O'Leary said.

But Goldstein said the Nuclear Regulatory Commission has the exclusive authority in radioactive waste disposal matters. And the Interstate Commerce Commission may intervene if other states attempt to block movement of the wastes.

"In a recent case, New Jersey was attempting to prevent the transportation of solid wastes from Pennsylvania and they (N.J.) were overturned in the Supreme Court for interference with the Interstate Commerce Act," Goldstein said.

There are other requests for the veto.

"I understand the state of Texas has asked the Department of Energy for veto power as well because transportation (of the nuclear wastes) will be primarily through Texas," Goldstein said. "I do not think the Departnent of Energy can give them veto power either."

Domenici's bill requires the Nuclear Regulatory Commission to allow a state legislature to disapprove a waste disposal site within its borders. The legislature may postpone for one year the commission's approval of the disposal license site and at the end of the period disapprove the action permanently.

"As far as the Department of Energy is concerned, we do have the veto, but I am not sure other prevailing laws will not prevent it," Goldstein said.

"Mr. Schlesinger and Mr. O'Leary are offering us veto power from the heart. As far as they are concrned it is OK, but other laws may prevent it, unless Senator Domenici's bill passes.

"I think Mr. Domenici was aware of other conflicting laws when he introduced the bill. If Mr. Schlesinger and Mr. O'Leary can give us the power, there is no reason to give us the law."

Ruling Gives Authority To Tribal Courts

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court is dipping more frequently into Indian affairs in a steady stream of cases every year.

In the term just ended, the justices cemented the authority of Indian tribes over individual Indians seeking redress under their own special civil rights law. Indians must go to their tribes and not to the federal courts for help.

The court ruled 7-1 that when Congress adopted the 1968 Indian Civil Rights Act it was trying to steer a middle course between preventing injustices by tribal governments and protecting tribal sovereignty from outside interference.

Therefore, said Justice Willium Rehnquist, the law allows an imprisomed Indian to come to a federal court with claims that he has not been dealt with fairly. But it requires Indians who have civil claims, such as discrimination on the bauis of sex, to go to a tribal court.

The test case was started by Julia Martinez, a full-blooded member of the Santa Clara Pueblo in New Mexico and her children. Mrs. Martinez is married to a Navajo Indian.

She challenged a Pueblo membership ordinance barring admission of the Martinez children to the tribe because their father is not a Santa Claran. The children were reared on the reservation and live there now as adults, but they may not vote in tribal elections or hold secular office. And they may not remain there after their mother's death or inherit her home or interest in communal lands.

The suit was brought in Albuquerque's U.S. District Court, where the tribe won. But the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals reversed on the ground the ordinance violated the 1968 act.

Reversing the circuit court, Rehnquist pointed out that the original draft of the law allowed the U.S. Attorney General to investigate constitutional complaints by individual Indians. But the Crow and Mescalero Apache tribes argued this scheme would disrupt tribal governments.

The act — a kind of Indian "Bill of Rights" — also provides that states may not ausume civil or criminal jurisdiction over "Indian country" without prior consent of the tribe. It provides for strengthening certain tribal courts through training of Indian judges and for minimizing interference by the Federal Bureau of Indian Affairs in tribal litigation.

In another case the justices ruled unanimously that a Choctaw reservation in Mississippi is "Indian country" and state courts have no jurisdiction there.

In other Indian cases the court:

— Ruled 6-2 that tribal courts have no power to try non-Indians for criminal offenses, even those committed on reservations, unless specifically authorized by Congress.

— Set Oct. 2 for arguments on distribution of Colorado River water to certain users and whether five Indian tribes may intervene in the case.

Percy Claims GSA Needs Reform

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., says the Ganeral Services Administration will be linked with "favoritism, cronysim and worse" until its accounting procedures are reformed.

Percy commented on a report to Congress that he had requested from the General Accounting Office on GSA construction contracts.

The report said a study of contracts above $10,000 awarded between 1974 and 1976 showed GSA was ignoring federal contracting procedures by making some of the awards without competitive bidding.

The GAO, an investigative arm of Congress, said its sampling showed that 12.7 percent of those contracts awarded for new construction and 13.4 percent for repair and alteration were negotiated without bids.

"There appears to be too high a proportion of negotiated contracts, overly liberal interpretations of public exigency to justify negotiation, and little or no competition for many advertised and negotiated awards," the report said.

Percy's statement said the study suggested "a pattern of extremely lucrative construction awards by GSA that had been going on far too long."

"Until we know why this happened, that agency's contracting procedures will be stained with an inference of favoritism, cronyism and worse," Percy said.

One of the government housekeeping agency's practices the GAO singled out for criticism was its use of "public exigency" as a reason for awarding contracts without competitive bidding.

Such "amergencies," the GAO said, included contract awards for landscaping, interior finishing, painting, decoration and the installation of bookshelves in government offices. It cited these examples of "questionable use" of the emergency clause:

— An $803,240 contract to build a new courtroom in the Everett McKinley Dirksen Federal Office Building in Chicago by one of two firms that bid on the job even though federal procurement regulations require a minimum of three bids.

— A $287,000 construction contract at the U.S. Border Station at San Diego, Calif., without normal bidding procedures on the ground that speedy construction would help "maintain good relations with Mexico and increase efficiency and productivity."

— A $42,745 contract for sculpture foundations at the U.S. Courthouse in San Diego negotiated without bids because the funds would no longer be available after a certain time.

Voter Communication Aids Re-Election Bids

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Close communication with the voters is more likely to ensure re-election in some areas than a congressman's stand on national issues, says a new study by the Historical Research Foundation.

The report, released Sunday, said many freshmen and sophomore representatives from districts where their views are in a minority still are popular because their constituents are as impressed with voting records than with personal qualities, good constituent services and close communication with the people.

The private, non-profit, educational foundation studied several districts where congressmen's voting record greatly differed from the political leanings of their constituents and concluded that the lawmakers continue to be re-elected because they have the image of "honesty, sincerity and leadership" and they stayed in touch with the people back home.

Although several liberal Democrats apparently gained their seats in conservative Republican districts in the wake of the Watergate scandal, the report said this does not explain how they continue to be re-elected.

Rep. Thomas J. Downy, D-N.Y., 29, is the youngest member of the House, and upset the Republican incumbent who had served the district since 1962.

Downy's voting record is much more liberal than his constituents' views, but his efforts to maintain good communications will make him difficult to beat in 1978, the study said.

Rep. Floyd Fithian, D-Ind., a former history professor at Purdue University, represents a heavily Republican district that has elected only two Democrats — both before 1935.

But Fithian has maintained popularity through close contact with the district, and his particular attention to farm policy endears him to the rural community. He is expected to be re-elected in 1978, the study said.

Although his last two elections have been close, liberal Democratic Rep. Timothy Wirth has won twice in the conservative, wealthy, suburban district in Colorado, it said.

The report said 58 percent of the voters who plan to vote for him again cite his sincerity and honesty as their reason.

Rep. Gary Myers, R-Pa., was one of only three Republicans to beat an incumbent Democrat in 1974.

FTC Says Amway Fixed Prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Federal Trade Commission judge says that Amway Corp., one of the largest direct-sales companies in the world, illegally fixed prices.

Administrative Law Judge James P. Timony ruled in a proposed order released Sunday that the company should stop price-fixing and allocating customers among distributors.

However, he refused to interfere with other Amway restrictions on its distributors and declined to agree with allegations in a 1975 FTC complaint that said the company made false claims and failed to disclose important information to its distributors.

Timony's decision is not final and may be reviewed by the five-member Federal Trade Commission.

In a statement, Amway said it "does not engage in, and has no intention of engaging in, the practices proscribed by the initial decision. Therefore, the proposed cease-and-desist order will in no way affect the business operations of Amway or its distributors."

Amway, founded in 1959 by two door-to-door salesmen, manufactures and sells more than 200 products, including soaps, home and car care products, cookware, vitamins and food supplements. It sells the products through more than 300,000 distributors who call at customers' homes.

Timony held that the company applied pressure to distributors who attempted to sell their products at less than the suggested price.

Vest Gives Freedom To Ill Texarkana Youngster

TEXARKANA, Ark. (AP) — Jason White stood impatiently at the entrance of his Locust Street home and bellowed, "Do ya'll notice anything different?"

His arms were crossed on his chest and his face was immobilized in a firm, wide grin. The grin didn't fade until its purpose was fulfilled — to show off the blank space left by the removal of his two front teeth.

But, Jason's missing teeth were overshadowed by a white vest hanging limply on the top of his lifeline — a post holding two bags of fluid, fluid that has kept him alive for more than five years.

The vest, fashioned from material developed for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, makes 7-year-old Jason completely ambulatory for the first time since doctors discovered hyperalimentation could sustain his life.

Jason, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ed White of Texarkana, has been unable since infancy to digest food taken orally. He has been fed intravenously with the fluid since he was two.

Although he experienced some freedom from his limited surroundings last year, Jason's world was confined primarily to his bedroom where the steel pole was plugged into an electrical outlet.

Mrs. White said the "big hangup" with that system was that an outlet was a necessity. Jason received some freedom when doctors decided he could be "unplugged" from the tubes for about four hours daily. During that short period, he attended kindergarten.

The vest, invented by Dr. Stanley Dudrick of Houston, has opened the door of hope for the Whites. Coincidentally, Dudrick invented Jason's life-sustaining fluid.

"We have hope for the first time in five years," Mrs. White said as she sat in her living room, listening to her son play in the front yard.

She is hoping that her son may be able to receive an artificial stomach. His stomach was removed in 1974 in an attempt to eliminate the destructive hyperacidity which has kept him from eating normally.

Jason and his mother are in Texarkana for a short visit before he must return to Hermann Hospital in Houston, where he is being treated.

Dudrick, who took Jason to a medical banquet in Houston recently and promised him a dollar if he would sit still during the session, also has given Mrs. White hope that a diagnosis of what causes Jason's illness can be made within a few weeks.

The trip to Houston began on an almost tragic note May 31. Mrs. White was alone at home at 7 p.m. when Jason went into a coma. Her husband was still at work in Hope.

Dudrick told Mrs. White to rush Jason to Houston and a private plane was used to fly the couple and the child to Houston.

Mrs. White pulled out a postcard of a hospital helicopter and credited the aircraft with saving Jason's life. Three minutes after the plane landed in Houston, Jason was at the hospital.

Jason is one of six people in the United States equipped with the lifesaving vest and is the youngest of the group.

The vest contains a pouch for an ambulatory pump that can operate for 24 hours on one battery. While the pump is operating, a battery for the next 24 hours is recharging.

Protective flaps are attached to the front of the vest — shaped like a hunter's vest — to cover the two containers of liquid on which Jason survives.

The bags must be changed every six hours, Mrs. White explained.

Jason was accepted as a patient by Dudrick after the Whites found a magazine article this spring. He was scheduled to become a patient June 25, but the May 31 spell prompted a schedule change.

Mrs. White says the doctors have given her hope that her son's problems are caused by a hypersecretion of glands and that surgery may be the answer.

Mrs. White and her son live in a Houston motel and Jason visits the hospital daily. White still works in Hope, but visits his family every weekend.

Jason's visits probably will be cut to three times a week, but he must undergo about two more months of testing before treatment begins.

If he does undergo diagnosis and treatment, Jason could be in Houston a year or so.

While Mrs. White talked, a "free" brown-haired bundle of energy romped.

Jason scrambled down the steps of the front porch to play with a dog that wandered into his yard. He wheeled his "police" motorcycle down the sidewalk. Jason went back into the house where he played with his guest, filled his trick camera with water to amuse the guests, and set up his teepee on the living room floor.

"His world had been as far as his tubes could reach," Mrs. White said.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be careful tomorrow not to force people you're fond of on your mate if he or she doesn't take to these people as enthusiastically as you do.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) It isn't like you to try to skim the cream from a collective effort. Tomorrow, however, you may look to fatten you coffer while denying helpers.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Tomorrow's fun happening could turn somewhat sour if those you're sharing the good times with fail to pick up their share of the tab. Avoid tight-fisted types.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Don't spoil what should be a pleasant day by insisting that those with you must march to the tune you toot. Let their melodies and yours blend.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 23) Your ingenuity and efficiency tomorrow will not be fully appreciated by all. Someone who is jealous of you will try to demean your achievements.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Financial conditions are likely to be a mixed bag tomorrow. You're equally as adept at spending as you are at making a profit.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Socially you'll be a big hit tomorrow, but persons important to your career are not apt to view you in the same light. Strive to impress them, too.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If you adhere to your automatic responses you're capable of surprising accomplishments tomorrow. Too much soul-searching evokes a negative attitude.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Friends appreciate you for what you are, but you may have difficulty in believing this tomorrow and try to buy their good graces with material favors.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) For best results financially and careerwise tomorrow, keep non-aligned parties out of the act. Kibbitzers could muddy the water.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) In social situations tomorrow make sure your conversation is light and breezy. Serious subjects important to you may only bore others.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Conditions appear profitable tomorrow, provided you don't divide your efforts between work and play. Concentrate on the former. Eliminate the latter.

Your Birthday

July 17, 1978

This coming year should be a series of socially stimulating experiences for you. Take care, however, not to neglect old standbys in order to woo new pals.

No Serious Injuries When Bus Overturns

WINCHESTER, Va. (AP) — A chartered bus carrying a group of West Virginia youths skidded off U.S. 50 and overturned during a rain storm near here, but no serious injuries were reported.

All 40 people aboard the bus were taken to a local hospital, where most were treated and released. Karen Corrigan, public relations director for Winchester Memorial Hospital, said the injuries appeared to be superificial and that all of the passengers and the driver "looked in pretty good shape."

DR. LAMB

Preparing Low-Fat Foods

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — After cooking meat, if the broth is chilled and hardened fat is removed from the top, does this also remove the cholesterol? Cholesterol is not a fat but it accompanies animal fat as some kind of fatty substance. Is it lighter than water and does it settle on top with the fat?

DEAR READER — There will be some cholesterol in the amount of fat removed but it will not remove the cholesterols within the meat fibers themselves. If you had perfectly lean meat fibers with no fat at all there would still be about 70 mgs of cholesterol in three-and-one-half ounces of lean raw meat fiber.

Nevertheless, the method of cooking that you described is an excellent one to remove fat from roasts or boiled meats. This helps in the preparation of low-fat food and since nearly half of the fat in beef is saturated fat it also helps in decreasing the portion of saturated fat in the diet. Saturated fat seems to stimulate the body's own production of cholesterol in some people.

To give you more information on low-fat, low-cholesterol diets, I'm sending you The Health Letter number 1-3, Diet, Preventing Atherosclerosis. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y., 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — In some of your columns you have referred to the effects of male and female hormone pills. I am somewhat confused as to why female hormones are prescribed for males and vice versa. How do these hormones affect one's sex life?

DEAR READER — As I have pointed out before, all males produce both male and female hormones. Similarly all females produce both male and female hormones. In fact the chemical difference between the male hormones and some of the female hormones is very slight.

Progesterone, one of the two main types of female hormones, is converted to testosterone, the male hormone. And testosterone is converted to estradiol, one of the female estrogens.

Perhaps the most common use of female hormones in males is to arrest cancers of the male reproductive system, particularly in the control of cancer of the prostate gland. Male cancers depend on male hormones for stimulation and continuation of growth.

In a similar way male hormones are sometimes used in woman who have cancers arising from the female reproductive system or breast. Female hormones are important in maintaining and accelerating the growth of such cancers and testosterone is believed to have the opposite effect.

As far as the effect on sex drive is concerned, it is the balance of male and female hormones that counts. A little bit of testosterone may increase a person's sex drive although that's something that's pretty difficult to measure.

Even a small amount of male hormone added to a combination of hormones that a woman is taking may be helpful in some medical instances. In contrast, if you give a man too much female hormone it begins to neutralize the effect of his male hormone production and he may begin to lose his sex drive and interest in sexual activity.

Georgia Shrimpers Seek New Fishing Areas

BRUNSWICK, Ga. (AP) — Barred from their own waters because of a severe crop loss, Georgia shrimpers will face increased competition should they turn to other fishing areas, a state official warns.

Bill Moorhead of the Department of Natural Resources' Brunswick office says many Georgia shrimpers are expected to turn to the Gulf of Mexico as a result of the devastation of their own crop by cold weather earlier in the year.

But once in the Gulf, Moorhead said they are likely to run into increased numbers of shrimpers from Texas and Louisiana, who have been barred from lucrative waters surrounding Mexico by the government there.

"A lot of people go to the Gulf when things are not good here," Moorhead said. "But starting next year, things are really going to be tough there."

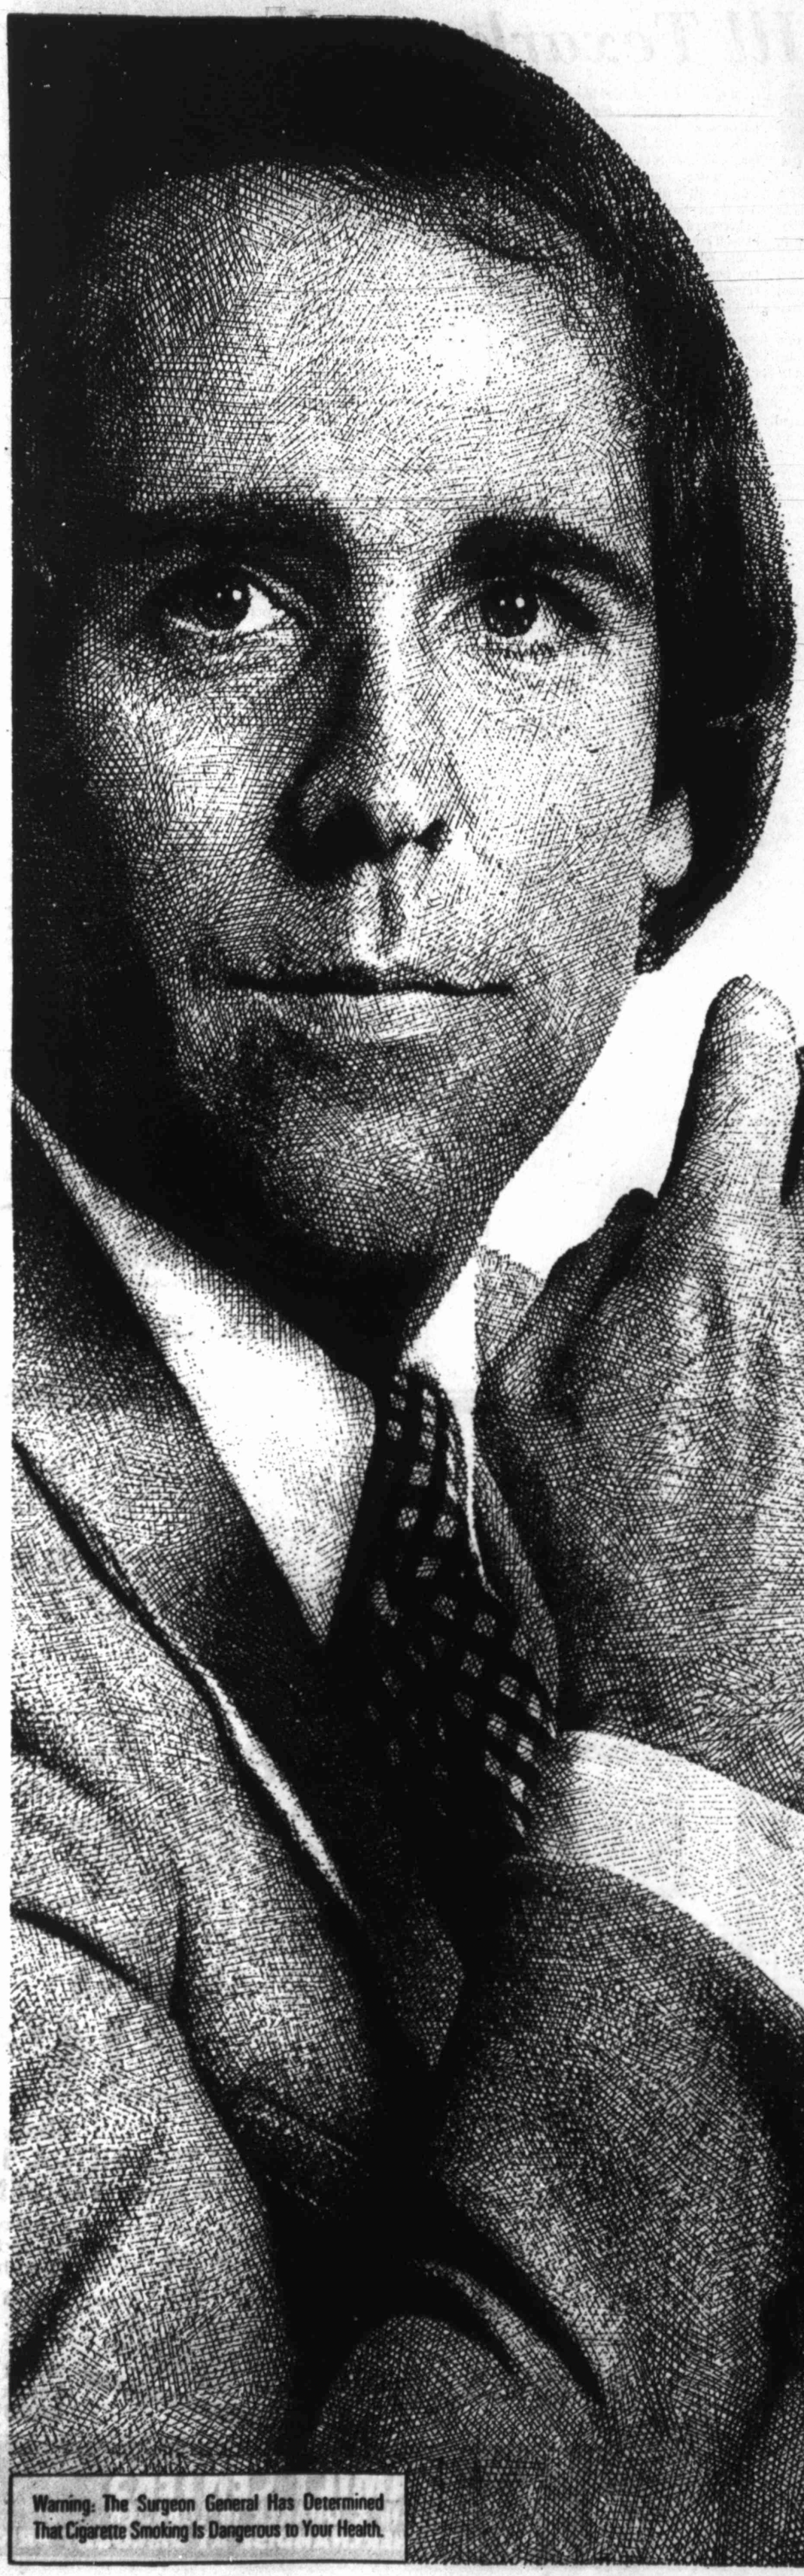

Federal officials have turned down requests to declare Georgia's six coastal counties a disaster area after the loss of the shrimp crop. But low-interest loans are being made available to financially troubled shrimpers by the Small Business Administration.

Loan offices were established last week in Brunswick and Thunderbolt, and SBA officials say they're doing a booming business. During the first three says of operation, 160 shrimpers were interviewed.

Gerulaitis Keeps Climbing To Top

By ALEX SACHARE

NEW YORK (AP) — Vitas Gerulaitis continues his climb toward the top of the tennis world.

Gerulaitis, currently ranked fourth behind Bjorn Borg, Jimmy Connors and Guillermo Vilas, took another giant step Sunday when he routed Romania's Ilie Nastase 6-2, 6-0 to win the inaugural $300,000 Forest Hills Invitational at the West Side Tennis Club.

"My goal is to become No. 1," said Gerulaitis, who pocketed a first prize of $100,000, bringing his official earnings for 1978 to $327,495. "I can't really measure it, I don't have any timetable, but I think I'm close. I've improved the past couple of years, and will keep on improving for four or five more."

Gerulaitis has been a Wimbledon semifinalist the past two years. He won the Italian and Australian Opens in 1977, plus the World Championship Tennis Finals and its $100,000 paycheck earlier this year. He's the top ranking men's singles player in World Team Tennis as a member of the New York Apples.

The next step is a victory in one of the big tournaments, Wimbledon or the U.S. Open.

What must he improve to achieve that?

"There's no one thing I can pin-point," replied Gerulaitis, who will be 24 later this month. "I'm just going to try to improve every phase of my game."

The question was then turned around. What is it about Borg that sets him apart — and above — the rest of the tennis world?

"Concentration," replied Gerulaitis. "He has fantastic concentration. Most of us can concentrate for a set or two and then we let up. Borg never lets up. He's concentrating on every point, and that gives him an advantage over the rest of us. That's something I have to work on."

Gerulaitis says that even though Borg is two years younger, "he's been playing top-flight competition since he was 16, so he's really had more experience than me. I get by more on speed and talent, while his technique is far more developed. He's at his peak, or near it, while I think I will be improving for the next four or five years."

Gerulaitis was in complete command of the finals of this WCT event, created to fill a void at the West Side Tennis Club caused by the departure of the U.S. Open for a new tennis complex in Flushing Meadow.

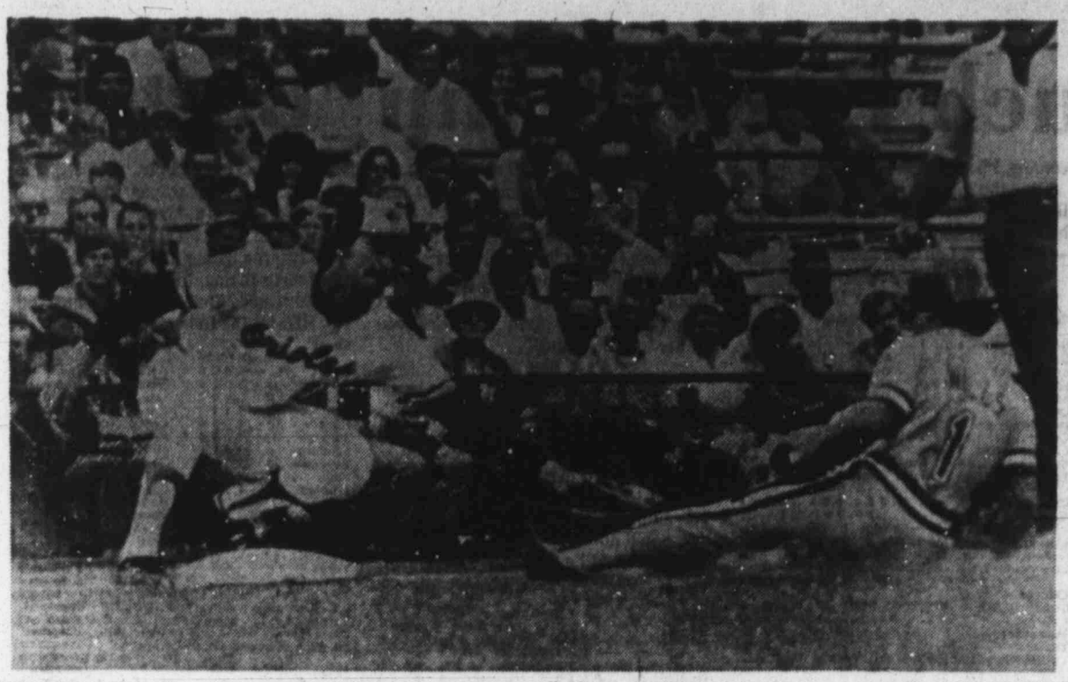

After Nastase scored his only service break of the match to lead 2-1 in the first set, Gerulaitis won the remaining 11 games, many of them with ease. He committed just three unforced errors to 14 by Nastase, allowing the Romanian to score just 10 points in the second set.

He charged the net with supreme confidence, volleying effectively as Nastase made the fatal mistake of hitting short balls.

"He was quicker than me at the net," said Nastase, who took home a runnerup check of $40,000. "These balls were so heavy, I was playing shorter and shorter every point. That gave him a chance to come to the net."

Part of the problem may have been mental, too. Before the match Nastase said he would try to attack as much as possible, but once he got onto the artificial clay-like surface he became tentative, hesitating before taking the offensive.

John Alexander and Phil Dent earned $25,000 Sunday for winning the doubles title, beating Sherwood Stewart and Fred McNair 7-6, 7-6 in the final.

OUT AT THIRD — Texas Rangers' Bump Wills is tagged out by Baltimore Orioles third baseman Doug DeCinces while attempting to steal third in the fifth inning of Sunday's game in Baltimore. Wills was thrown out on a strong thrown from catcher Rick Dempsey. Baltimore won, 2-1, in 12 innings. See story Page 2, Sec. D. (AP Laserphoto)

Landry Finds A Fullback

DALLAS COWBOY FANS discouraged by reports that the 'Poke rookies have lost scrimmages with the Oakland Raiders and Los Angeles Rams can take heart. Inter-squad tussles don't go into the record book and the Cowboy coaches, who are more interested in individual talent than team performance at this stage, think they have found that big, fast fullback they have dreamed about for years.

The Cowboys have had some fine fullbacks in the past, understand, but they have been long on courage and short on size. Don Perkins capitalized on an explosive start and a large heart to make All-Pro, but he didn't weigh much more than some of the wide receivers.

Walt Garrison took over the job after Perk retired and did a great job. He ran like a Brahma bull, despite the fact that he seldom topped 200 pounds. Walt never was the fastest cat around, either.

Now the 'Pokes have Robert Newhouse, a fireplug disguised as a football player. "House" has lots of drive and determination, but his lack of height is a handicap in blocking and catching passes. He's good, but he'll never be the best in the league.

The Dallas coaches are proud of the achievements of Perk, Walt and House, but they look wistfully at the massive muscles of the Larry Csonkas and the Marv Hubbards.

NOW, AT LAST, there may be such a superman on the Cowboys' rookie roster. His name is Todd Christensen and he is listed at 6-3 x 230. He does the 40 in 4.7 seconds and caught 50 passes last year at Brigham Young, while helping old ladies across the street and being kind to dumb animals.

With credentials like that, he should have had a spot in the Cowboy backfield all but clinched when he was drafted in the second round last May. Right?

Wrong. Landry indicated that he planned to try Todd at two other positions, tight end and linebacker, with fullback a possibility only if he didn't pan out at the other spots. Landry did say that Christensen, with his size and great hands, would be a good backfield sub on obvious third-down passing situations.

No one seemed to know why Landry was so determined to make the position shift. It may have been because the Cowboys are a bit thin at tight end, where Jay Saldi backs up Billy Joe DuPree. Or perhaps Landry thought Christensen lacked some quality found in outstanding running backs.

The Cowboy coach also may have been cautious because of his recent experience with Jim Jensen. The 'Pokes drafted Jensen in the second round a couple of years ago on his sheer size and straightaway speed, knowing that he had been primarily a wingback at Iowa. Jim was a magnificent physical specimen with a fine attitude and absolute dedication, too.

But he lacked agility and dropped some passes at the wrong time, so he was traded to Denver just before the 1977 season. Jensen saw some action with the Broncs, but his future in the NFL remains clouded.

CHRISTENSEN BETTER NOT buy a house in Dallas yet, but he appears to be just what Landry wants at the fullback slot. He runs with the authority expected of a 230-pounder, catches passes better than most of the regular receivers and has the agility that Jensen lacked.

In the scrimmage against the Rams last week, Todd carried 15 times for 81 yards while his rookie offensive linemen were trying to find out what they were supposed to do. Christensen also caught three passes for gains of 21, 10 and 22 yards. He blocked well and maintained his enthusiasm throughout a long, hot afternoon.

That, my friends, is how a newcomer makes a team like the Cowboys.

Landry does not get emotional about players, especially rookies. But after a couple of scrimmages he indicated that Todd had found a home at fullback.

"Christensen is a running back," Landry declared in the manner of Moses at Sinai. "He's at that position to compete for a job. He catches the ball well, does a good job blocking and runs with authority. Any time you have a back who can do that many things well, you have to think you've got a potential player."

That is high praise from Landry. Now Todd must avoid the pitfalls facing all rookies, including injuries. He must improve daily to meet Landry's tough standards.

If all goes well, the Cowboys may line up in the Super Bowl next January with a fullback who can do it all — make the tough yardage, block for the passer and catch passes like a wide receiver. It might even add up to that historic third Super Bowl win for the 'Pokes!

Towndraw Rips Z's In NBC

Scott Leimgruber ripped three hits including an RBI double and a two-run homer as the Towndraw Brewers belted the Lubbock Z's 11-3 in Sunday's finale of the west region NBC tournament.

The Brewers and El Paso, which used Louis Llamas' 10th-inning sacrifice fly to ni Abilene 4-3 Sunday, are the only undefeated teams left after the first weekend of action.

The tournament resumes at Mackenzie Park Thursday at 6:30 p.m. when the Lubbock Chaps take on the Lubbock Cardinals and the Z's meet Brownfield at 8:30. Friday, the Lubbock Bulls meet Abilene at 6:30 and El Paso takes on the Brewers at 8:30. The meet will conclude Sunday.

Gary Long and Brian Cowan drove in two runs each for the Brewers Sunday night. And, Mike Gray allowed the Z's to avoid a shutout with a two-run homer in the fifth.

Tim McNeil reached base on an error to open the bottom of the tenth and Jim VanNosdale followed with his fourth straight hit, a single to right field and Llamas then lifted a high fly to right center to end the contest.

Karl Bystrom homered for Abilene in the first, and it remained 1-0 until VanNosdale unloaded a 2-run blast in the fourth. Abilene came right back as Rusty Hamric and Larry Tatum drove in runs in the fifth.

Llamas knotted the game with a double in the sixth. Winning pitcher Bob Alsup struck out 13 and walked only one in going the distance.

Earlier, the hitting of Steve Fancher and Mike Coston sparked Wichita Falls to a pair of wins in run-shortened contests.

Brownfield eliminated the Lubbock Indians 9-2.

City Baseballers Open Tourney Play

It's playoff time, and ten Lubbock Babe Ruth and Little League teams will be in action tonight in search of additional baseball honors.

Two area tournaments will draw eight Lubbock Little League teams, and two LL tourneys will be held in surrounding cities. Also, two Babe Ruth teams will be out of town for games which could lead to further playoff action.

Eastern Little League will host the Area I LL Tournament at its park at 26th and Quirt, and Area II teams will gather at Dixie Park, 54th and K. At each site, two games are scheduled tonight, with finals Tuesday.

At Eastern, the hosts will take on Northeast All-Stars at 5:30 p.m., with Northwest to tackle Midwest All-Stars at 7:30 p.m. Winners collide for the championship Tuesday at 7:30 p.m., with tonight's losers playing Tuesday at 5:30 for third place.

The same time format will hold at Dixie, where Dixie plays the Western All-Stars at 5:30 p.m., followed by the Southern-Southwest contest.

The Area III tournament will be held at Crosbyton, Shallowater playing Wolfforth at 5:30, and Crosbyton hosting Cooper at 7:30. At Slaton, the Area IV meet will follow the same schedule, beginning with the Post-Slaton game at 5:30 and followed by the Tahoka-North Lynn County game.

Lubbock's senior Babe Ruth All-Stars will be in Pampa tonight for start of the state tournament. Lubbock will play tonight at 6 in the double-elimination tournament. The meet will continue through the week.

At the same time, Lubbock's 13-year-old Babe Ruthers will be playing at Canyon. Their game begins at 5:30.

ND Baseballers Face Abernathy

New Deal and Abernathy baseball teams will tangle tonight at Mackenzie Park for the right to advance to Paris in the baseball playoffs.

The teams, for 15 and 16-year-olds, will collide at 8 p.m.

At tonight's game, the New Deal 13-14 age baseball team, which is undefeated this season, will be recognized. It is headed for the playoffs, to be held beginning next Monday at Andrews.

Middle linebacker Ralph Ortega of the Atlanta Falcons is the only Cuban-born player in the National Football League.

Twins Skipper Gene Mauch Drives Ump 'Battty'

By FRANK BROWN
Associated Press Writer

Gene Mauch might have thought first base umpire Bill Kunkel was blind as a bat ... so he threw some to underline his argument.

Kunkel ruled that Minnesota's Mike Cubbage had been picked off first base by catcher Bob Montgomery's throw in the fourth inning of the Twins' 3-2 second-game loss to the Boston Red Sox Sunday. Television replays indicated that Cubbage, who had reached on a single, appeared to slide back to the bag ahead of the throw.

Cubbage rose from the Fenway Park soil and argued vehemently, flinging his helmet and cap, but was out of the game by the time they touched the dirt. That brought Mauch, the Twins manager, out of the dugout on the run.

"Cubbage was safe," screamed Mauch. "I never come out of the dugout unless I know I'm right."

He didn't get to say much to Kunkel, who ejected the Minnesota mentor the moment he arrived. But Mauch wasn't through yet. He dashed back to the dugout and — grabbing bats by the handful — littered the field with more than a dozen before huffing off to the clubhouse.

The afternoon had been frustrating enough for Mauch, as his Twins collected 25 hits but stranded 18 runners in the double-header loss. The Red Sox won the first game 5-3 and took the nightcap long after Mauch and Cubbage had departed.

In other AL action, the Baltimore Orioles edged the Texas Rangers 2-1 in 12 innings, the Kansas City Royals bested New York 3-1 and dropped the defending world champion Yankees to fourth place; the Milwaukee Brewers routed the Chicago White Sox 10-1, the Detroit Tigers blanked the California Angels 4-0, the Oakland A's downed the Toronto Blue Jays 8-5 and the Cleveland Indians beat the Seattle Mariners 8-4.

Fred Lynn drove in all three Boston runs in the nightcap with a single and two-run homer in support of rookie Jim Wright, 5-1. The Twins came close on Willie Norwood's fifth-inning homer and an RBI single by Rob Wilfong.

Orioles 2, Rangers 1

Terry Crowley's 12th-inning pinch single scored Kiko Garcia with the winning run of the rain-delayed contest.

Joe Kerrigan pitched the first seven innings for Baltimore in his first major league start after 119 consecutive relief stints.

"The National Anthem seemed like it took about 3½ hours to play," said Kerrigan, who had to wait 48 minutes for the game to start because of the rain.

Royals 3, Yankees 1

Amos Otis hit a two-run homer in the first inning and four Kansas City hurlers held New York to a total of seven hits as the Royals beat the Yankees and dropped them to fourth place in AL East.

Al Hrabosky took over in the eighth and recorded his 13th save as the Royals helped former Yankee Larry Gura, 7-2, beat his former mates for the first time.

Brewers 10, White Sox 1

Rookie infielder Paul Molitor had three hits and three RBI, stole two bases and scored once as Milwaukee routed Chicago for its sixth victory in seven games. Don Money's third homer in four games keyed a five-run Brewers eighth.

"I'm getting a lot of help," said Molitor, who has 24 stolen bases in 29 attempts. "Larry Hisle has taught me how to steal signs from the catcher when I'm on first base, so I know if a curve ball is coming, I have a better chance to steal.

"But the big thing is I'm learning my limitations, too. I know I'm not going to be a big RBI man, so I try to be an igniter — lead off, get on base and steal."

Tigers 4, Angels 0

Rusty Staub slammed a three-run homer and Jack Billingham recorded his first AL shutout in leading Detroit past California.

"This was the first time all year I've smelled a shutout," said Billingham, who spent the first 10 years of his career in the National League. "I wanted it, but I didn't think I would get it. I was dead after the seventh inning."

A's 8, Blue Jays 5

Joe Wallis hit a three-run homer in the eighth inning, completing Oakland's comeback from a 5-2 deficit and carrying the A's past the Blue Jays.

"All I wanted to do was hit the ball far enough to score a run," said Wallis. "If you go up to the plate trying for a home run, you'll never hit one."

Oakland's Mike Edwards extended his hitting streak to 17 games, tying the club record set by Bert Campaneris.

Indians 8, Mariners 4

Gary Alexander had three RBI, including a two-run homer in Cleveland's three-run fourth inning, to lift Cleveland over Seattle. Buddy Bell added four hits and two RBI for the Indians.

Watts, Wilson Take Hillcrest Club Crown

Ted Watts and Tommy Wilson fired a 6-under-par 66 and never lost their lead in winning Hillcrest County Club's partnership golf tourment for members.

The team had fired a 65 on Saturday and finished with a 131 total, 2 strokes better than the team of Jack Williams of Plainview and J.B. White.

White and Williams had a 65 Sunday after being 3 strokes back at 68 after the opening round.

The tournament was a practically a two-team affair, however, as the duo of Dub Malaise and John Farquhar was third at 139 after a 69 Sunday.

Three teams shared fourth, Guy Conine-Mark Jarrett, Bob Meyer-Steve Earsley, and Johnny Lutrick-Hal Schauer at 140.

Regalado Nips Marti For Quad Cities Title

COAL VALLEY, Ill. (AP) — Scratch can be what you do when you itch, and scratch can mean money in the bank. It's happened both ways for Victor Regalado at the Ed McMahon-Quad Cities Open.

Three years ago Regalado got into poison ivy here and by his own account "was off the tour five weeks and made only about $1,000 the rest of the year."

He made up for that by holding off Fred Marti's charge Sunday for a 1-stroke victory to claim the $30,000 first-place check in his first tour championship since the 1974 Pleasant Valley Classic.

"I won like the Mexico Masters and some others," said Regalado, 30, of San Diego, Calif. "I've finished second the last three years on the tour and you wonder if you will win again the United States."

Regalado was 11 before he started playing golf, late by some standards, especially when you consider that Jack Renner began when he was 2 and started playing competitively at the age of 6.

"I was living with my grandfather two blocks from the golf course," said Regalado. "I started playing with a friend at the Tijuana Country Club. After awhile I'd hustle members for two or three dollars."

He took up the game more seriously after winning the Pan-American Junior Championship when he was 14.

"Then I started playing every day instead of just weekends," he said.

Regalado made a surprise announcement as he accepted the winner's check from host Ed McMahon.

"My girlfriend is from (nearby) Moline," he said. "I think we'll get married this year."

Regalado and his fiancee met here the same year he had the bout with poison ivy and may be married in time to honeymoon in Hawaii during the World Cup competition in November, he said.

A double bogey on the par 3 eighth hole helped seal Marti's fate and four birdies on the back nine were not enough to overtake Regalado. Marti, who finished with a 70 for a 270 total, had shot either 66 or 67 his last five rounds.

Don Iverson also played his best golf in nearly two years, finishing strong with a 64 to pull into a tie for third with Renner and D.A. Weibring.

"I'm elated," said Iverson. "I've been horrible all year and I have no excuses; I haven't been injured or anything. But I've started to play better in the last month and that's encouraging."

Tway Snares Trans-Miss

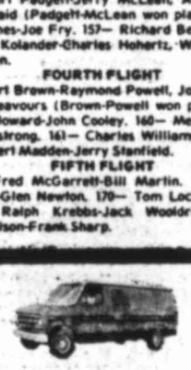

DALLAS (AP) — The lure of professional golf gold doesn't appeal to new Trans-Miss Amateur champion Bob Tway — not just yet.

The composed 19-year-old sophomore, a member of the NCAA champion Oklahoma State team, flashed the driving form and putting stroke a lot of professionals would love Sunday in disposing of John Shackelford of Austin, Texas 6-and-5 in the 36-hole finals of the prestigious tournament.

Tway one-putted five consective holes and birdied four in a row despite 100-degree plus heat over the baked but beautiful Brook Hollow Golf Club. He toured the 31 holes played in 1-under par.

"I'm staying in school," said the baby-faced Marietta, Ga. competitor who qualified with rounds of 67-71 to earn the medalist medal. "I'm not good enough yet to get out there on the pro tour. Playing in college is the best thing you can do. I need to improve. I want to win a few more times."

Tway earned a probable invitation to the Walker Cup team with the victory. He will play in the Southern Amateur starting Wednesday in Tarpon Springs, Fla.

Ruthven Turns Back Braves 4-2

By KEN RAPPOPORT
Associated Press Writer

The dogs had their day Sunday at Atlanta Stadium. Actually, to be more specific, it was the greyhounds who had their day.

From a promotional standpoint, the first "Greyhound Day" sponsored by the Braves was not exactly a success. But from the standpoint of Dick Ruthven, it was every bit of a smash hit.

When Ruthven was traded earlier this season from Atlanta to Philadelphia, he skipped town rather cheerfully, happy to be going to a team with what he called "greyhounds in the outfield."

In a seemingly vindictive response to Ruthven's comment, Atlanta owner Ted Turner had a "Greyhound Day" waiting for him when he returned to pitch against the Braves Sunday.

Ruthven, however, hardly blinked at the obvious harassment, pitching the Phillies to a 4-2 victory over the Braves with Ron Reed's late-inning relief help.

Cardinals 9-0, Giants 4-6

Jerry Mumphrey drove in three runs with a single and a double and Garry Templeton collected three hits, scored twice and added two RBI in helping St. Louis beat San Francisco in the first game of their doubleheader.

The Cardinals, who had suffered five straight setbacks against the Giants, battered longtime tormentor Jim Barr for 11 of their 14 hits in five innings, two of them triples by Templeton and Ted Simmons.

Reds 9, Mets 2

Dave Concepcion had four hits, including a two-run homer and a two-run double, and Tom Hume allowed six hits to lead Cincinnati over New York.

Pete Rose doubled in the seventh inning to tie Cap Anson for 10th place on the all-time hit list with No. 3,081. The Reds' third baseman at the same time extended his hitting streak to 29 games.

Elsewhere in the National League, the St. Louis Cardinals beat the San Francisco Giants 9-4 in the first game of a doubleheader before losing the nightcap 6-0, the Cincinnati Reds walloped the New York Mets 9-2, the Pittsburgh Pirates beat the Chicago Cubs 3-2 in 10 innings and 10-6, the Montreal Expos defeated the Houston Astros 6-1 and Chicago beat Los Angeles 3-2 in the opener of a doubleheader before the Dodgers came back to win the nightcap 5-3.

Ruthven and Reed combined on a seven-hitter for the Phillies. Reed gained his eighth save of the year, giving up a home run to Dale Murphy in the ninth before retiring the Braves.

Pirates 3-10, Padres 2-3

John Milner's bases-loaded single broke a 10th-inning tie, leading Pittsburgh over San Diego in the opener of their twin bill.

Dave Parker, making his first start since he cracked his cheekbone June 30, tossed aside a protective facemask and rapped a triple in a five-run seventh to start the Pirates to victory in the second game.

Expos 6, Astros 1

Left-hander Dan Schatzder pitched a seven-hitter and helped his cause with a run-scoring single and a run scored as Montreal defeated Houston.

Schatzder drove in the first Montreal run in the second inning with a two-out single after consecutive singles by Warren Cromarite and Gary Carter off Houston's Floyd Bannister. A sacrifice fly by Houston's Art Howe in the fourth tied the game before Tony Perez' RBI single in the fifth gave the Expos a lead they never relinquished.

Cubs 3-3, Dodgers 2-5

Dave Rader drove in three runs with a double and a sacrifice fly and Mike Krukow posted his fourth straight victory to lead Chicago past Los Angeles in the first game of their doubleheader.

Dusty Baker drove in two runs with a single and a homer and pitcher Burt Hooton aided his own cause with a run-scoring single as the Dodgers won the second game.

Champs Named In SuperStars

Nick Hammond, Gary High, David Wood, James Conright, Rusty Jones, and Gary Schovjsa won their divisions in the first day of SuperStars competition in Lubbock.

The SuperStars meets will continue each sunday for the rest of the month, in a series of age groups.

Hammond scored 57 points to defeat James Dunnam, who scored 49 points in the men's division for 16-18-year-olds. Andy Geiger, with 48 points, was third.

Wood won over 19-21 age opponents, getting 59¾ points. Second was Nick Sanders with 49 points, and Nick Pirkle was third with 30¼ points. Conright totaled 54 points to win over Steve Viney (29¼) and Rusty Hicks (25 points) in the 25-27 age group.

Jones won in 28-30 with 50 points. Larry Schovajsa scored 38½ for second and Lee Moss was third with 27 points.

Gary Schovjsa had 54 points to win the 31-36 division. Jim Goodwin with 35 points was second and Tom Moody third with 30½.

Eighty men participated in Sunday's competition. The next competition, will be at 2 p.m. next Sunday for 37-39, 40-42, and 43-and-over groups.

All women's events will be July 30.

Dallas Star Says Team Stronger

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Cowboy quarterback Roger Staubach speaks softly, but as the signal caller for pro football's world champions he carries a big stick. And he says this year his club will be even stronger.

If the team stays healthy, Staubach thinks it has a good chance of winning another appearance in the Super Bowl.

"I personally feel this will be a better team than last year's," he said. "That doesn't always mean you'll have a better record. But we're going to have a very competitive team. Our goal is to get back to the Super Bowl and win it, which is a reasonable goal. But a lot has to happen before that."

Staubach, who caught a plane to the team's Thousand Oaks, Calif., training camp Sunday, thinks the team's state of mind will play a major role in its quest for another championship.

"I'm excited about our team," said Staubach. "It's come off a Super Bowl victory with a minimum of problems. Attitude has been great in the offseason. I don't see any complacency, which I think is a key point.

Bain Scores At Speedway

John Bain drove his 1977 Pontiac Trans-Am to a clean sweep at Lubbock Speedway Saturday night over a short field of late model stock cars that felt the impact of summer vacationing.

A below-average crowd turned out for the events at the paved southside track as it switched to Saturday night operation from its early season Friday night format.

Track operators anticipated a full field of cars in both the late model and sprint car divisions next week, with a contingent from the Midland-Odessa area expected to enhance competition.

In the street stock division, Mike Cox snared the main event and the trophy dash, with Robert Daniel the heat winner and Scott McGee scoring in the semi.

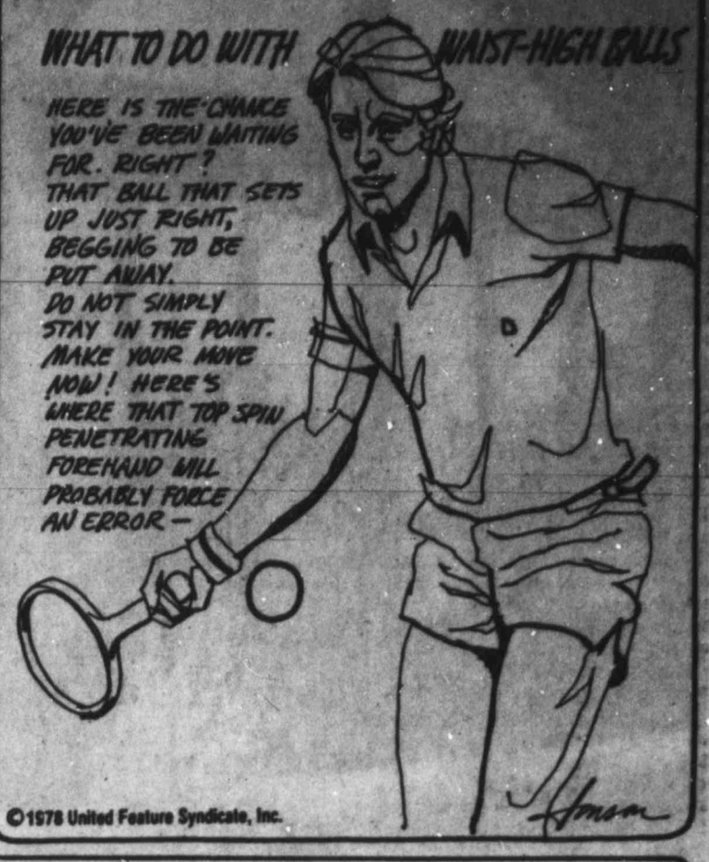

Johnny Mount won the main and the heat and trophy dash as well in sprint car competition, with Dave "Wolfman" Yeager the winner in the semi. The summary:

LATE MODEL STOCK CARS
Heat—John Bain, Dick Wood, Loyd Blackerby.
Trophy dash—Bain.
Semi—Bain, Wood.
Main—Bain, Wood.
STREET STOCKS
Heat—Robert Daniel, Mike Cox, Jimmy Pence.

POW'S DREAM HOUSE — Gary Sigler stands with his wife, Pam, on the porch of their home in Table Grove, located in western central Illinois. Sigler drew up the plans for the house while he was being held in solitary confinement in a Hanoi prison as a prisoner of war. (AP Laserphoto)

Former POW Fulfills Dream Of Constructing Own House

By WAYNE SLATER

TABLE GROVE, Ill. (AP) — For six years, Gary Sigler sat in a whitewashed POW cell in Hanoi and built houses in his head — board by board, stone by stone, inch by inch.

"Solitary confinement," he says. "There, you've gotta do something with your head."

So he envisioned the perfect house, a great rambling house with oak beams and stained glass and rugged barn siding rising off the Illinois prairie like a diamond in the rough.

Back home, he put his dream on paper. And now, he lives there.

"I basically always liked houses, so I started designing them in my head," he said, sitting in the living room of the home he'd built a thousand times in his mind.

"Generally, I'd start out with one idea, maybe a room I liked, and I'd build around it. I'd see the floor plan, put the steps in, put in the lighting, down to knowing where all the wall sockets go. The same with the plumbing and heating."

It was a serious exercise, an internal exorcism to ward off the demons of fear and anxiety and solitude that can break a man.

Every American POW had his own special method for getting through the nightmare. Sigler filled the empty years by building his house deep inside himself.

"You'd get very complex about it," he said. "This might be the size of the room you'd want, but it would have to fit within the over-all plan. It would come down to a matter of inches and half inches."

Sigler was shot down over North Vietnam in 1967 while flying photo reconnaissance. For the next six years, he lived in POW camps, most of the time in an old French film studio just outside Hanoi.

His first year was in solitary confinement. Then he lived among the growing POW population, although communication was restricted and life a regimen of interrogation, torture, isolation and boredom.

Released in 1973, he rejoined his wife, Pam, and his daughter, Becky, who was 8 months old when he left for Southeast Asia. After a year with the Air Force, he decided to settle down in Table Grove, go into farming with his father-on-law and build on the prairie the house he'd conceived half way around the world.

It took more than a year to build, although there remain today some areas to be finished. It is just as he imagined — huge, with four bedrooms, four fireplaces, 3½ baths, vaulted ceilings and a country kitchen. There's barn siding in the family room and a redwood deck out back that overlooks the pond, scattered stands of sugar maples and the rolling corn and soybean fields beyond.

"You know," Sigler said, "I think getting captured, the whole experience, has made me a better person. I've had time to do some thinking, time that most people don't have until much later, and I think I know myself.

"Everything I did up there, with the exception of a few lazy periods was designed with that goal in mind — making plans, following through, making myself a better person."

Colony Of Mice Moves To Ohio

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — What has 20,000 feet, squeaks a lot and gets a sheriff's escort?

The 5,000 mice in the Kirschbaum Memorial Mouse Colony, that's what.

The furry research creatures were moved in climatically controlled vans from their temporary home at Akron General Medical Center to their permanent home at Northeastern Ohio Universities College of Medicine in Rootstown Township.

The mice are not ordinary mice. They are the descendants of the original mouse colony started in 1933 by Dr. Arthur Kirschbaum at the University of Minnesota. The inbreeding allows scientists to control genetic differences.

They ended up in Ohio because Dr. Annabel Liebelt, director of the colony, is a professor of anatomy at Rootstown. She became involved with the colony when she began a job as a research assistant at the University of Illinois Medical College in 1952 and worked with Dr. Kirschbaum.

240 Million Fly On U.S. Airlines

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's airlines carried 240 million passengers in 1977, according to the Air Transport Association.

The association said the 1977 figure compared to 49 million in 1958 when jet airliners "first took to the skies."

It added that air travel in 1977 "accounted for 81.3 percent of intercity public passenger miles — almost double the 43.3 percent total 20 years ago."

Aged Blind Woman Takes Up Career

CANTON, Ohio (UPI) — Nellie Zimmerman, the 72-year-old blind and deaf woman who left Massillon State Hospital to become a college student last year, now is taking up a career.

The white-haired Miss Zimmerman started at Malone College last year following a 19-year confinement at Massillon, where she had been regarded as senile and mute and seldom was even spoken too.

Now, her friend and interpreter, Emily Street, says Miss Zimmerman has decided to leave Malone and accept an offer from the Ohio Commission on Aging to teach arts and crafts and cooking to a class of legally blind boys.

"She's decided to drop out and become a career woman," Miss Street said. She'll work 20 hours a week. Miss Zimmerman, who cooks, cleans and cares for herself, already is a sought-after lecturer in gerontology classes, Sunday schools and Cub Scout meetings.

Miss Zimmerman's nightmare life in a ward of senile old women at Massillon ended three years ago when a deaf volunteer took her hand one day and spelled out with manual letters, "H-I."

Miss Zimmerman gasped, took the volunteer's hand and shakily spelled back, "What's happening in the world?"

Blinded and deafened by childhood illnesses, Miss Zimmerman was tutored at home and taught Braille and hand spelling. But she was sent to Massillon and forgotten when her relatives died.

A group of volunteers won Miss Zimmerman's release from the mental ward and reintroduced her to life: she tasted a Big Mac, went to church, baked bread, decorated a Christmas tree and petted a lion at a shopping center petting zoo.

Then she said she wanted to go back to school.

She's taken courses in ancient history, philosophy and speech with the help of Miss Street who spells out lectures for her and translates her speech, which after years of disuse is a soft, fast mutter.

Money — needed for expensive Braille texts and tutor-interpreters — has been a problem, however. Miss Zimmerman gets only $177 a month from the Social Security Administration Supplemental Security Income program.

Ohio Services for the Blind and the Stark County Welfare authority told her she was too old to qualify for their help.

"They didn't help with this job, either," said Miss Street, who credited Canton Goodwill employee Linda Owens with making the placement.

Drama Critic Blasts Pioneer Sex Play

By WILLIAM GLOVER

NEW YORK (AP) — "Spring Awakening" is a pioneer stage shocker more likely now to induce slumber.

The Public Theater, where something different is always happening, has booked the production, which opened for press appraisal Thursday night, direct from the Juilliard School's theater center. As an historic curiosity it undoubtedly had educational merit there.

It achieves a certain interest also as the first New York exhibit of Liviu Ciulei, an eminent Romanian director-designer who has done several pieces at Washington's Arena Stage. The version being used was prepared by Edward Bond, one of England's contemporary obscurantic playwrights.

Neither Ciulei nor Bond have significantly tampered with the narrative, about the perils of adolescent sex discovery, with which Frank Wedekind so stunned German theater in 1891.

Wedekind, a forerunner of expressionistic drama, was in deliberate rebellion against the narrow-minded morality nd hypocrisy of his day. Unswervingly recounted, such anecdotage now becomes a soporifically outlandish parable.

The staging is drastically stark, filled with intensive lighting changes as the cast gyrates with automaton discipline in front of and behind a towering wire fence.

Boyd Gaines registers well enough as the youth who leads a friend and a girl into sensual awareness, while Kathryn Dowling, the doomed innocent, strives earnestly with difficult characterization. A good many others do multiple vignettes, with Keith Williams most noticeable as the mysterious intruder who carries the hero off into an ambiguous future.

"Spring Awakening" is academic theater at its best — or worst.

Crime Labs Get Poor Test Marks

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Many crime laboratories taking part in a nationwide test were unable to match blood samples, identify drugs or analyze other crime evidence correctly, according to a government report released Sunday.

About 250 crime laboratories — 90 percent of the nation's total -took part in at least some of the tests. The results showed many are understaffed, undertrained, underequipped or underfinanced.

Actor Admits 'Addiction' Broke Up His Marriage

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Jan-Michael Vincent's story is a classic tale of an actor's addiction, his involvement with a "narcotic" that broke up his marriage and interrupted his movie career.

Jan's "addiction" has nothing to do with drugs or booze. This handsome actor's life has been dominated and directly affected by the oceans of the world. Jan is an avid surfer with a mystical attraction to the sea and its rolling waves.

He admits his preoccupation with surfing is responsible for the separation from his wife, Bonnie, and, indeed, the fact that he is a motion picture actor.

Jan drove into town the other day from his home, an hour up the coast from Los Angeles. He built his house with his own hands, assisted by friends who pitched in when the surf was flat.

Jan appeared to be ill at ease in the flossy Beverly Hills Hotel where he was interviewed. He ordered a beer and talked about his new movie, "Big Wednesday," in which he plays a surfer.

Jan gives the impression of being an eminently sensible and practical man until me speaks of surfing. His eyes don't exactly glaze over, but he is almost overtaken by an almost religious zeal.

"I've been surfing since I was 15," he said. "Acting is the sort of profession that gives me the freedom to surf. And there's no question im my mind that I've been obsessed by the sea and surfing since I was a teen-ager.

"I'd love to be able to surf every day. So would all the other surfers I know.

"There's a tranquility surfing brings to you that you can't find anyplace else or doing anything else. It is almost impossible to explain.

"Surfing is totally the most unimportant thing in the world when you think of significant events and accomplishments. But it is a religion, an opiate, a drug and an addiction to the surfer.

"Surfing is barbaric, territorial, competitive and tribal."

Jan owns a dozen surfboards, some old, some new, some long, some short, for riding different kinds of waves in different parts of the world.

He took a year off from his career mainly because he couldn't find a script that appealed to him. But a strong secondary reason was an excuse to surf.

Jan spent three months of that year in Hawaii riding the 30-foot breakers that race onto Oahu's Sunset Beach. He claims it is the highest, most exciting surf in the world.

"There's no sense of accomplishment when you're riding the board on top of a wave," he said. "but you don't surf for accomplishment. The only thing that matters is the feeling while you're turning up the tube and watching the green room roll over you. It's only that moment that counts.

"People plan their lives around surfing. They give up family, security and home to go where the surf is really good. They find jobs that give them enough time off to surf as much as possible.

"It's really a brotherhood of independence. Surfing is a world-wide fraternity. No matter where I go — even to Australia — I'll find guys I know and have surfed with.

"It's competitive, yet you are on your own. It's character building but that's hard to explain to a non-surfer.

"You have to be in terrific physical shape. You become a meteorologist. You learn to survive on little or nothing. You shun possessions bacause you travel fast and light. You've got to move around free of economic and social restrictions. Surfing has developed a group of seasonal workers.

"Acting works well for me because it is intermittent employment. And after the concentration and tensions of movie-making, surfing rejuvenates me."

Jan feels a curious ambivalence about playing a surfer in "Big Wednesday." While the film allowed him to surf for almost a full year during production, he is uneasy about accepting money for doing the thing he loves most.

"I surfed every day for several months in Hawaii and we surfed for 2½ months in El Salvador," Jan said.

"But I just didn't feel right about being paid to surf. It's like selling your religion. It was taking something personal and making it part of my work. I think I sold part of myself. I'm quite certain I lost something in the process. Surfing hasn't been exactly the same for me since.

"The picture taught me a lesson. Surfing isn't anything you can mess around with. But then surfing is full of lessons.

"Sure, it broke up my marriage. I'd get back from a couple of months on a movie location and then take off to surf. I can understand why a wife wouldn't want to put up with that.

"But surfing teaches other things and that is the reason Bonnie and I are still good friends. Amber (his 5-year-old daughter) is spending the summer with me and I'm teaching her to surf."

Jan doesn't try to sell surfing to anone else, anymore than he might attempt to convert someone to a religious cult. In a sense, surfing is a religion with him.

The first commercial herd of water buffalo to appear in the contiguous United States has found a home on the range in Florida and Louisiana, where they are regarded as a potential new meat source.

Canadians Dig U.S. Gold Mine

By PHILIP GREER
And MYRON KANDEL

If the dreams of Al Farrell and his wife June pan out, some time next month the abandoned gold mine that the company they control has brought back to life in California's Sierra Nevada Mountains will start paying off.

If the promising test borings that have been made in the nearly-century-old Blazing Star mine complex are borne out by the full-scale mining that's about to start, they might realy hit pay dirt. But if the samples are merely "flashes in the pan" or mining costs run out of sight, they could lose much of the $200,000 of their own money they've invested in the project and outside investors could be out some $1.7 million more.

However, the Farrells, a Canadian couple in their early 50s who've been married for 11 years and who spend up to seven days a week managing the affairs of the four Alberta-based mining companies they control, appear confident that their U.S. gold mine is a winner.

That, of course, remains to be seen, once the mill that's been built on the property begins grinding the ore taken out of the mine and the gold content can be fully determined. Publicly, the Farrells talk about an average yield of "more than one troy ounce of gold a ton." Privately, though, they're talking about a yield of two ounces.

With gold selling at more than $180 an ounce and the mill capable of handling 165 tons of gold-bearing rock a day, they're not talking about peanuts — especially since the average yield of Canada's top 10 gold mines has been put at around .32 troy ounces per ton.

"You could call what we have a small, high-grade gold mine," Al Farrell told us, after pulling out of his attache case some sample rocks in which the specks of gold were hardly visible to the naked eye.

What is known already, though, is the pedigree of the Blazing Star property on which the Farrells' company, Troy Gold Industries Ltd., has staked its hopes. Records show that the Blazing Star, which is situated 45 miles east of Sacramento, in the midst of the famed "Mother Lode" of Gold Rush days, was first worked in 1883. Eleven years later, after a shaft had been driven nearly 500 feet down and mining had been done on six levels, fire destroyed the upper portions of the shaft, the borings were flooded and the mine was abandoned. Three efforts to resume production, one as recent as 1971, were unsuccessful.

In 1976, after having studied shipping reports and assay records from the original mine, Farrell took an option on the property and started test boring that convinced him that the mine — which consists of five veins of gold-bearing rock with the colorful names of Blazing Star, Ferrin, Last Chance, Never Sweat and Matrimony — was anything but mined out.

Only the Blazing Star vein is going to be mined at this time, but Farrell says that over the next four years the veins can provide some 212,000 tons of ore with a high gold content. The company's mining engineers have driven a spiral tunnel more than 2,000 feet long and 400 feet deep, enabling them to sample the vein at various levels and to use a diesel-powered rubber-wheeled mining vehicle to remove the ore, eliminating the need to build steel tracks or cable hoists.

The biggest expense so far has been the contruction of a $700,000 mill on the site to remove the gold — as well as silver, tungsten and copper — from the ore.

"We expect to start production in August and obtain our first cash flow in September," Farrell said. "That's only two and a half years since we began, and that's phenomenal. Today, taking a mine from grass roots to cash flow is normally ten years. But I give a lot of credit to the old miners who did a lot of the work for us."

Farrell, who worked underground as a contract miner himself for 15 years before becoming a developer and owner, says he's got mining in his blood. "What's kept me in the business is that you never learn all about it," he explained. "Every mine is different. You have to second-guess nature. And putting a new mine into production is really a great achievement. You're generating new dollars."

Farrell exhibits some diffidence in talking about a Canadian mining stock in the U.S. acknowledging that over the years American investors have been burned by fast-buck mining promoters.

He stresses the large personal investment he and his wife have in Troy Gold Industries, which also has a gold and silver mine at Troy, Mont., now being explored under option by a U.S. subsidiary of Noranda Mines Ltd. "We also have a million dollars of our own money in a successful silver mine in the Yukon," he said.

But Farrell concedes that developing new mining properties is a risky business. "I made a million dollars on my first public company and then walked out," he told us, adding: "And I've been making it and losing it ever since."

School Plan Puts Students To Work

HAVILAH, Calif. (AP) — Kern County high school boys and girls who have dropped out, been expelled or are on the verge of either are being "farmed out to the woods."

In a program conceived and developed by the county high school district, students are living and working full time in the mountains for nine weeks, and the results are significant.

"They learn what it's like to work 40 hours a week, to care for themselves, how to get along with people and also find out being in school isn't as bad as they thought," explained George Cobb, 43, supervisor of vocational education for Kern County High School.

The program is funded through the federal Comprehensive Employment Training Act.

Book Provides Hints On Bingo Etiquette

CHICAGO (UPI) — Etiquette has come to bingo.

It's not exactly Emily Post — or even the ubiquitous Hoyle — but Charles "Chick" McCuen has developed a code of behavior and some helpful hints for people who are getting acquainted with the game.

McCuen, a former television newsman, former Illinois State Lottery host and recent bingo fanatic, calls his guide "How To Be A Good Neighbor at Bingo." The slim paper brochure is illustrated by his daughter, Cindy.

McCuen's approach is humorous and the book actually is designed more to entertain than to enlighten. For example, he explains bingo games in church basements or school gymnasiums frequently are run by priests and nuns and, he urges, "You will be careful not to use the Lord's name in vain no matter how angry or frustrated you happen to be...

At fraternal and veteran club games, it is not uncommon for the caller to have had a drink. He will then imagine himself to be a TV star or a show business personality and you will be forced to listen to his jokes in between numbers."

On rehashing past games: "If your good neighbor is a stranger, you probably will want to inform him or her of the number you needed last week for the 'Jackpot' and how long you waited for it. However long you waited, your neighbor will have waited several numbers longer in that same 'Jackpot' game."

On bingo atmosphere: "If you are playing bingo in the basement of your own church and it doesn't feel familiar to you, remember that a bingo atmosphere is very different from Sunday services.

"It may be that your own priest looks at you as though he's never seen you before in his life. Do not be offended. Bingo has become important business to the church and the church school and Father is preoccupied counting the house and estimating the night's take."

The last remark, McCuen said, is likely to be literally true in many cases.

In Illinois alone, he said, some 1,500 establishments are licensed to hold weekly bingo games. They pay the state between $8 million and $9 million a year — 10 percent of their take. That indicates, he said, bingo in Illinois is at least an $80 million-a-year business, with churches and civic groups the major beneficiaries.

At that rate, the game legalized "to give the old ladies something to do" is rivaling the much-trumpeted Illinois lottery in terms of total handling, McCuen said.

And Illinois is only one of 38 states that permit bingo, he added.

Tire Grading System To Aid Consumer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Transportation Department today announced a new uniform tire grading system intended to "help consumers buy the best tire for the money."

Under the plan, to go into effect next year, passenger car tires will be rated on expected tread wear, traction and temperature resistance.

"When this standard goes into effect the consumer will be better equipped to compare quality and price among competing tire brands," said Joan Claybrook, head of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration.

The rule will take effect March 1, 1979, for bias-ply tires and on the following Sept. 1 for bias-belted tires. On those dates tire manufacturers must attach paper labels with the respective grades. Six months later, they will be required to mold the grading information into the tire sidewall.

The grading system will be applied to radial-ply tires at a later date, the safety agency said.

The treadwear grade will be a numerical sequence — 80, 90, 100, 110, 120, 130, 140, 150, 160 — with the highest number giving the greatest mileage when driven under the same conditions.

The tread wear grade will not specify the actual mileage the buyer can expect the tire to last, the agency said, but rather the relative tread life compared to other types of brands of tires. A tire graded at 150, for example, would be expected to wear one and one-half times as well as a tire graded 100 and driven under similar circumstances.

The relative ratings are based upon actual performance over a test course at San Angelo.

Oldtime Sportswriters Praised

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN

NEW YORK (AP) — They say that in this hyped age of athlete's agents and multimillion dollar player contracts they don't make genuine bleacher idols anymore like Dizzy Dean, Jack Dempsey, Sugar Ray Robinson, Red Grange and the immortal Babe.

Mulligan's Stew

Reggie Jackson's conferring with his lawyer after being benched by Billy Martin just doesn't grab the public like Babe Ruth homering after being fined $500 by the Yankee management for a belly ache brought on by six beers, a dozen hot dogs and three sacks of potato chips between games of a key doubleheader.

But even without the debatably ruinous effects of filthy lucre on a star performer's soul, they don't make sportswriters anymore either like Joe Palmer, Damon Runyon, Boston's Col. Egan, Grantland Rice, Dan Parker and Jimmy Cannon.

In the absence of a corrupting salary schedule for journalists, the logic of the matter would tend to indicate that without the former — the colorful characters worth writing about — the latter, the typewriter troubadours who sing their praises and record their antics for an adoring public, can no longer exist. Which may be why Scotty Reston and Jimmy Breslin graduated to picking on politicians and bureaucrats instead of outfielders who misjudge fly balls and shortstops who louse up easy doubleplays.

But then there is Red Smith, still soldiering on up there in the press box, writing the elfin, graceful, witty prose that makes the reader wonder why day after day the best writing in newspapers is found on the sports pages and not the oped page, where la creme-de-la creme is supposed to assemble.

These thoughts were stirred by my reading, on a lazy summer day when the Yankee were rained out in Boston, "Nobody Asked Me, But ... the World of Jimmy Cannon," a collection of his columns from the New York Post and old Journal American.

Cannon died in 1973 and he is much missed around this town as the Giants and Dodgers.

When I first came to New York from New Orleans in the mid-1950s, there was Red Smith in the morning and Jimmy Cannon in the afternoon and, best of all, both of them at lunch at Toots Shor's, sitting up there in front at the important tables near Frank Costello, Jackie Gleason, Mickey Mantle and John Charles Daly. They were and are my idols, and they have worn well.

In those days, sportswriters seemed to be much closer to the athletes they wrote about. Cannon was a personal friend of Casey Stengel, Joe DiMaggio, Rocky Marciano and Sugar Ray Robinson, whom he tried unsuccessfully to coax into retirement and thereby lost a friend. He got the Jets to hire Weeb Ewbank, when Sonny Werblin telephoned him in Florida, person to person, with the plea: "I need a coach." He could go on the wagon and still remain a non-alcoholic drinking buddy of nightclub comic Joe E. Lewis, who always turned up at Shor's when his act was done.

Maybe the star gazers were closer to the stars then because there were fewer agents, lawyers and press spokespersons acting as go-betweens, and only an occasional surly waiter to interrupt with an identifying line like, "Let's see now, you're the meatloaf, and you're the eggs Benedict?"

Jimmy Cannon, of course, would have appreciated the second person approach. It was the writing style he employed with singular success to tell about the people who knew best without resorting to the egotistical "I" so common in TV and radio sports journalism:

"You're Frank Tarkenton, a straight arrow in a swingers' town."

"You're Rocky Marciano who bled for fame."

"You're Mickey Mantle: You're a bubble-gum kid in a chew-tobacco league."

Covering the third Tony Zale-Rocky Graziano fight, Cannon could wring the sweat and the blood of ringside from his typewriter with the stark simplicity of Hemingway, his personal idol:

"Zale hit him with a left hook and Graziano went over backward. His head made the sound an auctioneer's mallet makes on a solid block of wood when the deal is closed. They came out of the corner and picked him up and put the green-edged white bathrobe over his shoulders. The letters on the back spelled out "ROCKY GRAZIANO, MIDDLEWEIGHT CHAMPION OF THE WORLD." Only the name was correct.

But being the type of reporter who watches from the sidelines and leaves the spotlight to the stars, Cannon let the fallen champ on the dressing room table have the last word: "There's only one way you can lick Zale," Graziano said. "You got to kill him."

Cannon could catch the punchdrunk flavor of Stillman's gym in a single line shouted over the pay telephone by a fight manager: "What Tony Kelly you want? ... The Italian one. ... The Irish one ... The Jewish one?"

The book's title, "Nobody Asked Me, But..." is from the deft one-liners Cannon tossed off on whatever bugged, bored or amused him. Some typical Cannon fodder:

"Guys with white shoes always look like strangers no matter what town they're in."

"Some of the wisest men I know are bad spellers."

"I can't ever remember staying to the end of a movie in which the actors wore togas."

"If I had a choice of drinking partners, I'd pick Winston Churchill."

"I never saw a laundry truck driver with a clean shirt."

"If Howard Cosell was a sport, it would be Roller Derby."

Nobody asked me, but ... sports pages just aren't that much fun anymore; at least not since they began reading more like the business section.

FBI Memo Shows Elvis Volunteered

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An FBI memo shows Elvis Presley once volunteered his services as an informant and wanted to meet J. Edgar Hoover, who he described as "the greatest living American," it was reported today.

The Washington Post said the internal FBI memo, released Thursday under the Freedom of Information Act, said Presley also thought the "filthy and unkempt appearances and suggestive music" of the Beatles were responsible for many of the problems the United States was having with young people.

The memo was written by M.A. Jones, chief of research in the FBI's crime records division, to Assistant FBI Director Thomas E. Bishop after Presley visited FBI headquarters in December 1970.

It said Presley "advised that the Smothers Brothers, Jane Fonda and other persons in the entertainment industry of their ilk have a lot to answer for in the hereafter for the way they have poisoned young minds by disparaging the United States in public statements and unsavory activities."

Presley expressed a wish to meet Hoover, but Jones wrote: "Presley's sincerity and good intentions notwithstanding, he is certainly not the type of individual whom the director would wish to meet. It is noted at the present time he is wearing his hair down to his shoulders and indulges in the wearing of all sorts of exotic dress."

The memo said Presley expressed his admiration for Hoover and had read many of his books: "Presley noted that in his opinion no one has ever done as much for his country as has Mr. Hoover, and that he, Presley, considered the director the 'greatest living American.'"

Hoover never met with the singing star, but later sent Presley a note expressing his regrets and said: "Your generous comments concerning this bureau and me are appeciated, and you may be sure we will keep in mind your offer to be of assistance."

Jones wrote Presley said he met many people in the entertainment business "whose motives and goals he is convinced are not in the best interests of this country and who seek to have him to lend his name to their questionable activities.

"In this regard, he volunteered to make such information available to the bureau on a confidential basis whenever it came to his attention," the memo said, adding that Presley said he could be contacted "under the pseudonym of Col. Jon Burrows, 3764 Highway 51 South, Memphis, Tenn., telephone EX7-4427."

Hoover died in May 1972, and Presley in August 1977.

Family Gets Abundance Of Gifts

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Robert Brewer, out of work and nearly broke, thought it was the last straw when his car broke down as he and his family started out to Ohio seeking a job.

But stories about their plight led to a deluge of help, and now Brewer can't get people to stop giving.

"I've never seen anything like this ... We keep telling people that we've got enough and they keep giving more," Brewer said Wednesday.

Unable to raise enough money for their rent, Brewer, his wife, Patricia, and their two small children set out from Fort Lauderdale over the weekend for Middletown, Ohio, where Brewer hoped to find work. But 80 miles up the road, their 14-year-old car blew its engine, and mechanics said it would take $200 to repair.

Desperate, they abandoned the car and with the help of a church, the Brewers and their sons, David, 3, and 8-month-old Robert, made it to Orlando Sunday night. They had $4.

When stories of their plight appeared in the local paper, accompanied by a picture of a tearful Mrs. Brewer holding her children, the two pay telephones outside a small motel room in which they were staying began ringing. They were still ringing a day later.

By Wednesday, the Brewers, exhausted but ecstatic, had received nearly $1,000 in cash, two bus tickets to Middletown, new clothes and food for the children and job offers.

A woman who would not give her name brought new clothes for the children, diapers and milk. An elderly man offered to take the Brewers into his home for two weeks then drive them to Ohio.

There were dozens of others — those who left $300 at a social service agency and those who came to the motel and left $10, $20, $50 or $100.

People came with money in envelopes or wadded in their hands. They asked no questions, offered words of encouragement and left. Many refused to take their money back even when Brewer told them they had enough.

"Yesterday, I had just about given up," Brewer said as he made plans to return to Middletown, where he lived and worked for 20 years before coming to Florida. "But today, I see a future with not too many problems."

He says he is sure he will find work and be able to pay for a place to stay with the money the family has received.

"Everything's so bright now. ... I'll never be able to look down again and it's because so many people care."

IBM Reports Increase In June Net Earnings

NEW YORK (AP) — International Business Machines Corp., the world's largest manufacturer of data processing equipment, today reported a 5 percent increase in net earnings to $691 million for the quarter ended June 30 from $658 million for the same period last year.

IBM said earnings per share for the three months were $4.73 on an average of 145.9 million shares outstanding in the period. Last year, IBM reported earnings of $4.44 per share on an average of 148.1 million shares outstanding the the second quarter.

Gross income for the quarter totaled $4.92 billion, up 11 percent from $4.42 billion last year.

For the first six months, IBM reported net earnings of $1.28 billion or $8.74 a share, up from $1.23 billion or $8.26 a share for the first half of last year. Gross income for the period was $9.35 billion, up from $8.51 billion last year.

IBM Chairman Frank T. Cary attributed the gains to increased data processing equipment sales. He said the increases reflect "tapering off of purchases" of older System-370 Models 158 and 168 and increasing shipments of newer products.

Cary said gross income from rentals and services increased 9.1 percent over the first six months of 1977. Fluctuations in the value of the dollar against other major currencies resulted in an exchange gain of $22 million, Cary noted.

"Incoming orders for data processing equipment for the first two quarters of the year were substanially higher than the strong volumes experienced in the comparable 1977 periods," Cary said.

Wall Street Prices Gain 2.08 At Noon

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market gained more ground today, but last week's sharp rally showed sign signs of fading as the session progressed.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which sported an early 5-point gain, was up 2.08 at 841.91 by noontime.

Advances maintained a 2-1 lead over declines among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said the market was registering a better-than-expected response to the seven-nation economic summit conference in Bonn, which was to conclude with the issuance of a communique today.

Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal said the conferees agreed on a "concrete and concerted action program" to deal with international economic problems.

By mid-morning, however, the market seemed to settle back to await further news from the summit meeting.

Control Data, which reported sharply higher earnings for the second quarter, picked up 1⅜ to 36⅜.

Boeing rose ¾ to 60½, establishing an all-time high for the third consecutive session. Late last week the company received a $1.6 billion order for jets from UAL's United Airlines subsidiary.

The NYSE's composite index picked up .24 to 55.06, and the American Stock Exchange market value index rose .53 to 150.45.

Volume on the Big Board reached 13.16 million shares by noontime, against 11.49 million at the same point on Friday.

STEP BY STEP — With Linda Fraschalla clutching his arm and the aid of a walker, Peter Saraceno approaches the altar at Our Lady of Pompeii Church in Chicago to finish wedding plans halted two years ago with an auto accident that left him almost dead. Love Conquers Doctors' Fears

By SANDRA BALMER

CHICAGO (AP) — Peter Saraceno concentrated on one step, then the next, as he walked haltingly down the aisle at Our Lady of Pompeii Church. Linda Fraschalla, his bride, who brought him back to life from a 3½-month coma, walked beside him, her arm linked in his.

His hands shaking slightly, Peter flashed a wide smile Sunday when he reached the end of the aisle and was helped into a waiting limousine.

"Chicago is my kind of town," he said when friends and neighbors gathered in the old Italian neighborhood broke into rousing applause.

Peter and Linda, both in their 20s, had planned to be married after he left the Marines in 1976. Then came the car crash.

Doctors at a Westlake Hospital had pronounced Peter dead on arrival, until one groped for a pulse one last time and finally felt something.

"Three or four times they told us he had just a few hours left," said his mother, Louise Saraceno. "But I didn't believe it and neither did Linda. Every night Linda was at his side, talking to him just as if it was any other night, as if they were on a date, as if nothing had happened."

On holidays at the hospital, Linda would decorate Peter's room. She told about her New Year's celebration. "At midnight, I put a hat on him and I blew horns and told him the New Year was here. The nurses thought I was crazy, but I figured Peter could hear me," Linda said.

She refused to give up, even though doctors told her to forget about Peter, to go out and have some fun because he never would be the same, never would walk again or talk again.

But finally he opened his eyes, and though he could not talk or even move a finger, "his eyes followed Linda around the room," a relative said.

Linda quit her job and took special training to care for Peter. When he was allowed to go home, she moved in with his widowed mother to give him round-the-clock attention.

With her savings, Linda had an outdoor swimming pool installed so he could exercise his legs and work at physical therapy.

"I've had to learn a lot since the accident," Peter said. "I had to learn everthing over again — how to eat and chew and drink and even tie my shoes. I kept trying, and tried 'til it hurt — because of Linda."

Today, though his speech is still garbled, he can talk, he can shake hands, and, with the help of an aluminum walker, he can walk.

Peter had worked hard on his speech and last year spoke to Linda's father. "Mr. Fraschalla," he said, "I'd like permission to marry your daughter."

"Peter," Jim Fraschalla answered, "when you can walk down that aisle, she's yours." After months of practice, Peter and Linda finally made it.

"It was supposed to be a small wedding, just family and close friends," said the Rev. Angelo Calandra, who celebrated the wedding Mass. "But there were more than 300 people and more outside."

"Any other girl would have forgotten me, left me long ago, but Linda never gave up ... I've been reincarnated through her," Peter said. "These last two years have taught me a lot about life. But ... Linda. She taught me about love."

Crowded Boat Capsizes

PLATTSBURGH, N.Y. (AP) — Authorities say a sailboat accident that dumped 11 persons into Lake Champlain may have been been caused by overcrowding.

One women died and two other persons were feared drowned when the boat capsized and sank early Sunday during a cruise from the Plattsburgh Air Force Base marina. Search operations were to resume today for the other victims.

The 22-foot craft left the Air Force base marina shortly after midnight Sunday and went down off Cumberland Head near the city sometime between then and 3 a.m., Clinton County Sheriff's deputies said.

Rescue workers aboard a small flotilla of boats from the sheriff's department, other police agencies, the air base and local marinas pulled nine persons from the waters. One of the nine, Monique Cable, was pronounced dead at a local hospital.

Air Force spokesmen said the survivors included five Air Force officers and Diane Williams, the daughter of Lt. Col. Joe Williams. The officers were identified as Maj. Charles Robertson, 31; Capt. Phillip Donovan, 29; Capt. Michael Kenny, 32; Capt. Brett Kriger, 32, and 2nd Lt. Edward Dixon.

Three other civilians, as yet unidentified, were treated at the hospital and released.

Lake Champlain, one of the deepest lakes in the state, is located near the Canadian border between New York state and Vermont.

GRANTS ANNOUNCED

Scars From Bus Crash Remain

By HARRY ATKINS

YPSILANTI, Mich. (AP) — Johnnie Jordan pushed a green baseball cap back on his head and squinted into the sun, eager to return to the game behind the Boys' Club.

"I had a punctured lung," the 12-year-old said softly. "I feel all right now. I play ball most of the time 'cause that's what I like to do."

Johnnie was a passenger on a 10-year-old school bus that crashed in southern Georgia last April 11, killing three members of the Ypsilanti Boys' Club on a trip to Disney World in Florida.

The bus, carrying 56 people, smashed into a tree after rolling down a six-foot embankment at the Inaha, Ga., exit off Interstate 75.

Now — more than three months after the crash — the only visible memory of the tragedy is a tree planted at Chapelle School in memory of one victim, 11-year-old Sam Bates, who was a sixth grader there.

Most physical hurts have healed, but some emotional scars remain.

Sue Condon, the 24-year-old club staffer who was driving the bus, was hospitalized with a separated shoulder.

"Things are just now starting to get put back into perspective," she said. "Things are fading a lot more. I don't relish thinking about the accident. There are parts I do not attempt to recall.

"I can't allow myself to be hung up with 'what ifs' and all of that stuff," she added.

Although the crash is still under investigation by the National Transportation Safety Board, it is believed the bus' brakes failed. Miss Condon was not ticketed.

The accident occurred just before 10 a.m. on a clear, dry morning.

Ernie Slater, 33, the club's executive director, recalls he had gone to the front of the bus to confer with Miss Condon about where to stop for breakfast.

"Physically I'm OK," Slater said, fingering the scar over his left eye. "I don't know where I am mentally yet. Now the kids, they're all doing well. They all want to go back — if we go back."

Garvin Freeman, whose son, Jasen, 11, was killed in the crash, said he would allow another son, Gerard, 14, to take another trip "if he wants to."

"Gerard is doing better," Freeman said. "It was a great shock to him at first. When they finally told him Jasen was dead, he got violently sick. He's just now getting where he's riding his bike and playing baseball."

Tony Sablowski, 13, an orphan, was a ward of Bob Wallack, a 34-year-old clinical social worker who runs Vaughn House, a home for troubled adolescents in nearby Ann Arbor.

"That kid was so bright. I can't believe he was killed," Wallack said, his voice breaking. "He was a little red-headed kid. Real assertive. He knew he wanted to be something. He was feisty, but he was never bad."

Another of Wallack's wards, LeRoy Trice, 17, suffered head injuries and cracked vertebra.

"When LeRoy first came back, he was in a state of depression," Wallack said. "But as time went by, he came out of it.

"He doesn't seem to talk aat it much anymore," Wallack continued. "I don't know if he's suppressing it or if he's really over it. He seems over it (but) that's up to a psychologist."

Nell Mills said her 12-year-old son, Larry, who fractured his skull in the wreck, had nightmares for about a week after the crash.

"He's doing fairly well now, though," she said. "He's a little afraid of going fast. I don't think he'll ever go fast." Larry was a close friend of Sam Bates.

Much of the credit for the childrns' rapid emotional adjustment is given to psychologists from Ypsilanti Area Community Services. Four counselors flew to Georgia to accompany the shaken club members on the long bus ride home.

"That ride to Ypsilanti was viewed as a critical part of the adjustments to be made and having our staff ... on board ultimately turned out to be very important," said psychologist Sheila Baler.

Social worker Joan Allen said several families were also provided psychological counseling.

"I would say that the children are adjusting well," Miss Allen said. "I think anyone involved in a tragedy such as this one is certainly going to have memories of it for a long time to come."

Small Board Saves Man's Life

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. (AP) — Roger Gibson owes his life to a small piece of wood that kept a hydraulic packer from crushing him inside a garbage truck.

"If it hadn't been for that board, I'd probably be dead," the 21-year-old Huntington man said Sunday.

Gibson had been in a fight with four men early Saturday. He said they beat him up and threw him into a large dumpster unconscious. He did not come to until the dumpster was being emptied into the truck, he said.

His screams to the truck's driver and attendants went unnoticed.

"I hollered at them, but they didn't seem to want to hear me," Gibson said.

The hydraulic truck packer began shoving him against the back door of the truck but Gibson was able to grab the length of board and stop the progress of the packer.

"I was at the very back," he said. "I made me a little corner and held the wood against the trash." By breathing through the tiny slit along the door, he said he was able to keep from suffocating.

Robert Cardwell, city landfill supervisor, estimates that Gibson was picked up at about 6:30 a.m. and the truck did not finish its rounds and empty its load until about 11 a.m.

When the truck's door opened to release the contents, Gibson said he leaped out the door and rolled, trying to avoid having the debris dumped on top of him.

Breathing with difficulty Sunday, Gibson said his doctor told him his spine and ribs had been injured in the ordeal. Officials at St. Mary's Hospital said he was in satisfactory condition.

The three-button suit is making a comeback, reports Marvin A. Blumenfeld of April-Marcus, Inc., a merchandise consulting firm.
