Major Reshuffling Of Allied Troops

SAIGON (AP) — American forces in the Saigon military region are being cut by about 15,000 men as the result of a major reshuffling of allied units and the transfer of a large base to the Vietnamese, official sources disclosed today.

The sources said two full brigades plus other units would be shipped home from Saigon and the 11 surrounding provinces of the 3rd Military Region. Men who have not completed most of their 12-month tours in Vietnam will be transferred to other units.

SECURITY RULES

Security regulations prohibit publication of the units to be sent back to the United States until the U.S. Command announces them.

Elsewhere in the war—

Small ambush actions and mopping up operations were reported along the northern coast where U.S. and South Vietnamese forces claimed they killed more than 300 North Vietnamese in fighting Wednesday and Thursday.

The largest allied casualties reported today occurred about 65 miles northwest of Saigon when mortar rounds fired by an American unit accidentally landed on a South Vietnamese position. Eleven government troops were killed, and 24 Vietnamese and two American advisers were wounded.

One harassing action was reported in Cambodia. A military spokesman in Phnom Penh said the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese apparently were occupied with integrating newly arrived reinforcements.

ABRAMS RETURNS

Gen. Creighton W. Abrams returned from convalescent leave with his family in Thailand and resumed his duties as commander of U.S. forces in Vietnam. His gall bladder was removed in Japan July 3.

In the major reshuffle of allied forces in the Saigon region, all American combat units except one brigade have been pulled back from the Cambodian border. Most of them have been moved to the northeast and east of Saigon, inland from the South China Sea.

South Vietnamese forces have replaced the Americans along the border west and northwest of Saigon to block North Vietnamese infiltrators, and the Tay Ninh base camp 55 miles northwest of the capital has been turned over to the South Vietnamese 18th Infantry Division. Only a few hundred U.S. support troops remain at Tay Ninh, which once was the base for two American brigades.

While the South Vietnamese army carries out the blocking role in and along the frontier, the protection of the 3.5 million persons living in villages and hamlets in the region is assigned to the militiamen of the Territorial Forces and People's Self-Defense units.

ENEMY STOCKPILES

Lt. Gen. Michael S. Davidson, commander of American forces in the 3rd Military Region, said his troops are concentrating on destroying enemy stockpiles brought into South Vietnam before the allied sweep into base camps in Cambodia three months ago.

American commanders say the Vietnamization program has made the most progress in the 3rd Military Region. They claim that the enemy is incapable of launching large-scale offensives in the region at present because the allied operation in Cambodia smashed his staging areas.

About 17,500 South Vietnamese troops are still in Cambodia, trying to keep the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong from re-establishing base camps near the border.

$19,000 'Bait Money' Seized By Holdup Man

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — State, local and federal officers were hunting a Dallas man today in connection with what may have been the best-witnessed bank robbery in city history.

U.S. Dist. Atty. William R. Burkett issued a warrant Thursday night for the arrest of Ormand Ryn Looney, 28, of Dallas, after an auto believed to have been the holdup man's second get-away car was traced to Looney.

The holdup man escaped with $19,000 — all of it "bait money" reserved specifically for holdups. Serial numbers had been recorded.

Officers were able to track the holdup man nearly step by step through witnesses who observed him from the moment he entered Guaranty Bank and Trust Co. — conspicuously carrying a brown paper bag — to his running exit and his switch to a second get-away car.

Bank employees reported a man described as between 23 and 25 years old fled from the bank in one car, then abandoned it 2 1/2 blocks away. The second car believed used was found 90 minutes after the bank robbery.

The gunman obtained the money at gunpoint unaware that two women tellers had given him "bait money" kept as a holdup contingency with all serial numbers recorded.

Bank employees said the man entered the front door, walked about the bank for four or five minutes, then approached the teller cages.

The man pointed a pistol at the tellers "and told them to give him the money or he would kill them."

He said the women acted on "standard instructions" and put the "bait money" in the man's paper bag.

The robber was said to have driven off in a 1959 Chevrolet which had been parked on the north side of the bank. An assistant cashier followed the car and after losing the man in traffic, found the car the thief had been driving. The robber was gone.

Some neighborhood witnesses told officers they saw the suspect get into a 1970 Firebird and leave the area.

The first car used in the robbery was reported stolen about the time of the bank robbery.

Israel Will Take Harder Attitude In Negotiations

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel will take a harder attitude toward peace negotiations with the Arabs as a result of Egypt's reported movement of missiles closer to the Suez Canal, authoritative sources said today.

The sources indicated, following a day of consultations among top government leaders, that the Israeli government feels no progress can be made in the talks until the missile issue is cleared up.

'MOST IMPORTANT'

There were indications that the government might not name a representative for the talks until it got satisfaction on the missile issue. Asked about this, Foreign Minister Abba Eban said the government considers it "most important" to clarify the matter with the United States.

The government received information earlier this week, and passed it on to Washington, that the Egyptians had moved several SAM anti-aircraft missile batteries to sites 12 and 18 miles from the canal soon after the current cease-fire began last Friday night. Egyptian officials in Cairo denied the report.

Defense Minister Moshe Dayan told the Knesset, Israel's parliament, that the United States bears a "heavy responsibility" because it proposed the 90-day cease-fire so that indirect peace negotiations might be held again. These had been expected to start soon, in Cyprus or New York, with the special U.N. envoy for the Middle East, Gunnar Jarring, as go-between.

'KEY CLAUSE'

Dayan said Israel has demanded that the United States see to it that the missiles are withdrawn to their previous positions. He also made the text of the truce agreement public for the first time and said the Egyptians violated the "key clause," calling for no change in the military status for 30 miles on either side of the canal, and for neither side to "introduce or construct any new military installations in these zones."

He later sent a formal complaint to Maj. Gen. Enzio Silvasio, the Finnish chief of the U.N. observer team in the Middle East, claiming the Egyptians had introduced a "significant number" of missiles as close as 12 miles to the canal.

A U.N. spokesman in New York said the observers were watching for cease-fire violations but had no responsibility to oversee the military standstill. The agreement calls for each nation to check the other side's compliance by reconnaissance flights along its side of the line.

Midnight Rain Cools Over-Heated Texans

Traces of rain in Howard County Thursday night cooled off field crops slightly, but generally failed to bring moisture needed for development of cotton bolls.

Communities in the western part of the county had only a sprinkle including Fairview, Lomax and Knott. No rain was reported at Vincent in the northeast or Coahoma to the east.

The Big Spring experiment station recorded only a trace.

Rains began within the city of Big Spring about 11:30 and fell intermittently until about 12:15 a.m. this morning.

Discussing the trace of rain, Bill Fryrear, superintendent at the Experiment Station, said, "It doesn't help in one regard, in that it did not add enough moisture for the plants to use. However, just cooling off the plant keeps it from being under so much stress. Due to our lack of water it did some good in this regard, but this is of limited value if it warms up again.

Fryrear said cotton plants are shedding some of the bolls that they would not have shed if this area had been having adequate water.

He said rain is needed now because at this time cotton is very active and using more water. Grain sorghum usually makes its greatest use of water later on.

"If the cotton doesn't get rain until late September, we get some pretty good looking plants, but this doesn't help fiber production.

"If we get some rain soon, plants may make new bolls and mature them out, but if we get rain after about Sept. 14, new bolls don't have enough time to mature.

The area has not had appreciable moisture since May 31 when 1.13 inches were recorded. Prior to that .66 inches fell May 29 and 30.

Since May 31 only .15 inch of rain has been recorded. Most rainfall was recorded on two days, July 4 and Aug. 4.

Weather records indicate the longest period of time this area has gone without even .01 inch of rain was for 97 days during September, October, and November, in 1950.

House Tramples Education Veto

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate is expected to follow the lead of the House and override President Nixon's veto of a $4.4 billion education bill. It would be Nixon's second such defeat this year.

The Senate vote is expected Tuesday or Wednesday. The House overrode the veto Thursday by a margin of 289-114, 20 votes more than the necessary two-thirds majority.

MAKING HISTORY

But in a history-making day of considering two presidential vetoes, the House sustained Nixon's rejection of an omnibus $18 billion appropriations bill carrying funds for housing, veterans, the space agency and a score of other programs.

The vote on that one was 203-195, a majority but 63 short of two-thirds.

The second House vote ended any chance for the omnibus measure and made it necessary for the Appropriations Committee to go to work to draft another one.

There is some sentiment at the Capitol for deeper cuts in the space program to preserve the extra funds provided in the original bill for veterans and for such programs as urban renewal.

POOR FAMILIES

Republican leaders noted the Senate passed the education bill 85-0 in agreeing privately with Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield that the measure would be enacted into law over Nixon's objections.

Nixon objected to the bill because it exceeded budget recommendations by $541 million.

The bulk of the increases are for two programs which the Senate long has supported.

One is the Elementary and Secondary Education Act designed to improve education for children from poor families.

The other is the impacted areas program which provides federal grants for school districts overcrowded because of nearby federal installations.

Sen. Ralph W. Yarborough, D-Tex., chairman of the Labor and Public Welfare Committee which handles education bills, said he believes the action of Congress on the vetoed measure will show its determination "to meet the domestic needs of this nation."

"It is not inflationary to meet the domestic needs of this nation," he declared.

If the President wants to fight inflation effectively, he should use the veto "on some of the wild spending for unproven weapons and on wild spending for his enlarged and expanding war in Southeast Asia," the Texan said.

Jackson State Racism Cited By Scranton

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — The head of President Nixon's Commission on Campus Unrest says racism was involved in the police fusillade at Jackson State College when two black youths were killed.

William W. Scranton, former governor of Pennsylvania and commission chairman, summed up his views after a three-day hearing on the May 14 shooting at the predominantly Negro college.

"I think it's very clear that racism is the major problem involved in the Jackson State incident," he said.

"I don't mean to insinuate that there is no racism anywhere else . . . but it seems to be outstandingly so here, from the testimony we have heard," Scranton added.

DEPRESSION

Fast Winds Pose Threat To Florida

MIAMI (AP) — A dangerous, fast-moving tropical depression with winds of 60 miles an hour approached the Bahamas Islands today and posed a weekend threat to the Florida east coast.

Urging all interests to be prepared for fast action, the National Hurricane Center said the depression was moving into an area where it could rapidly develop into a full hurricane.

"It contains a large area of very heavy squalls which for the last 18 hours have carried winds sustained for short periods as high as 60 miles an hour," a bulletin said.

"This depression poses an immediate threat to boating and to low lying island areas in the central and southeastern Bahamas, and to the western Bahamas and Florida east coast over the weekend."

"Conditions which have inhibited the development of this depression into a hurricane are less prominent today and the weather system is approaching a region where it may very quickly develop full hurricane characteristics," the bulletin said.

"All interests must be prepared for fast action if this development occurs."

Okays Poison Gas Burial

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal district judge refused today to forbid the sea-bottom burial of 2,675 tons of deadly nerve gas 282 miles off the Florida coast.

But Judge June L. Green coupled her denial of a temporary restraining order with an "urgent request" that the Defense Department designate a different site for the dumping.

She said she had "serious misgivings" about the selected site. Sinking of the ship hulk at a depth of 16,000 feet, she said, posed the danger of a sudden and simultaneous crushing of all of the concrete-encased gas containers.

Judge Green also noted testimony and affidavits submitted to her that this is the first time the Army has planned to dispose of gas at such a great depth.

Detective Shot In Back

CHICAGO (AP) — A police detective was shot in the back and critically wounded Thursday night in an alley outside a South Side hotel that police say is a hangout of the Black P Stone Nation.

A short time later, police reported, sniping began in half a dozen nearby locations.

Numerous police reinforcements were sent in, along with dogs and a helicopter with a searchlight, in an effort to track down snipers.

Detective James Alfano Jr., 30, was shot as he sat in an unmarked police car. He was in critical condition.

"We've been shot at by the Stones for the past two weeks," said Detective Richard Crowley, who was driving the car in which Alfano rode.

PACT TO REDUCE SUPERPOWERS' ARSENALS SALT Talks End In Vienna

VIENNA (AP) — The United States and the Soviet Union today completed the second round of their arms talks known as SALT—the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks—and agreed to begin a third round in Helsinki Nov. 2.

After 32 secret working meetings in four months, chief delegates Gerard Smith of the United States and Vladimir Semenov of the Soviet Union signed a joint communique at a public ceremony in the Belvedere Palace.

The two governments had agreed in preliminary talks last year in Helsinki to hold alternate sets of working sessions in the Austrian and Finnish capitals. The goal is an agreement to reduce the two superpowers' arsenals of large-size nuclear warheads and the missiles to deliver them.

By agreement, the two delegations preserved unusual secrecy throughout the twice-weekly meetings in Vienna, and there were none of the propaganda barrages which used to accompany all Soviet-American negotiations.

Conference sources said Smith presented an "outline," which reports from Washington said proposed a freeze on strategic weaponry at about the number the two governments now have.

The proposal, it was said, called for an over-all numerical ceiling on each nation's intercontinental ballistic missiles, missiles fired from submarines and long-range bombs, but each government would have some latitude in dividing its total among the various classifications.

Observers here believe that an agreement may be drafted in the next Helsinki round. But some think the talks may move back to Vienna next spring to make the agreement final.

Although the public was left unaware how much progress the talks made, Smith went five times to Brussels to brief America's 14 allies in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. In July he went three times in eight days to NATO headquarters in the Belgian capital, indicating the negotiations may have reached a delicate stage just then.

Shapely Brunette Gives Stark Account Of Killing

ANGLETON, Tex. (AP) — A woman who formerly lived with Charles Harrelson testified in his murder trial Thursday that he kidnapped, shot and strangled another Houston man and dumped the body on a beach.

Sandra Attaway 26, a shapely brunette who said she stayed with Harrelson for almost a year, testified he was paid $1,500 cash to kill Houston carpet executive Alan Berg.

Miss Attaway, the state's star witness, said she was with Harrelson when he took Berg from a night club parking lot, forcing Berg at gunpoint to lie on the floor of a car as she drove to a deserted dirt road.

GET OUT

"He told Berg it was a kidnapping," she said. "He told him he wouldn't get hurt if he kept quiet."

At Harrelson's direction, she said, she drove down a series of dirt roads and came to a stop.

Harrelson told Berg to get out of the car she said.

"I thought he was going to beat him up," she said. "I heard a shot. I jumped out of the car. I saw Chuck (Harrelson) standing over the body with a gun and he was slumped down."

DIG A GRAVE

Harrelson, she said, told her to "get back in the car or I would get the same thing. Then I heard another noise and he was dragging the body down an incline by his arms."

She said Harrelson had expected to find water, but did not, and tried to dig a grave, but found the ground too hard.

Harrelson put the body into the car trunk, they drove to a point near the Gulf and Harrelson carried the body away from the road, she said.

"When Chuck came back he had a watch he said belonged to Alan Berg," Miss Attaway testified. "He said he had to have evidence that he had done the job."

She named Frank DiMaria as the man who paid Harrelson for Berg's death. DiMaria also is charged in the slaying.

Dist. Judge G. P. Hardy Jr. granted Miss Attaway immunity from prosecution in the case Thursday before her testimony began.

CANDY STRIPS STATE OF EVIDENCE

Make It Sexy, Boys!

BROWNWOOD, Tex. (AP) — A motion by Candy Barr, former queen of the bump and grind circuit, has stripped the state of its evidence in her marijuana case.

Dist. Judge Joe Dibrell ruled Thursday that the prosecution could not submit as evidence marijuana which police said they found in Miss Barr's room. Dibrell nevertheless denied a motion to quash the indictment against Miss Barr and said her trial was scheduled for Monday.

"I don't have any other evidence," Dist. Atty. George Day said.

LITTLE DOLL

The ex-stripper, known in night spots from New Orleans to the West Coast, faces trial on a marijuana possession charge.

Police said they found 13.9 grams of marijuana seeds in her room in 1969.

Day said late Thursday he had not decided whether to continue the case.

Still looking like a little doll, Miss Barr philosophized as she faced the judge at the hearing on the motions.

Clad in a yellow blouse and brown skirt, she was 14 minutes late to court and almost had her bond cancelled.

Accompanying her was a young, handsome man Candy said was her husband. But she refused to divulge his name or say where they reside.

"If we have no sanctuary, then we can never live a normal life as husband and wife," she told newsmen.

REAL CORKERS

She may be anywhere from 30 to 38, depending on what statement is believable but still can pass for a teen-ager when she dresses for the part.

A spectator commented on her beautiful face and her dimples. "Haven't got a wrinkle in it yet," Candy said smilingly.

Candy came up with some real corkers in the interview.

"I have never had and never will enjoy being exploited and I've never made an effort to be noticed," she said. This was from the girl who was the toast of the strip joint circuit for years and whose only plea at another arrest on marijuana charges was to the photographers: "Make it sexy, boys."

'BELIEVE IN ME'

She added of her court trouble, "I will grow from all this. I've come a long way, baby."

Sometimes she was a little cryptic, like when she said, "Lots of people have called me oddball, but I have always put myself in the major positions in life."

I feel through my trials and errors I have grown and I have enough tolerance and compassion that in a situation like this the confusion stems from the hurt that must be hidden inside the persons responsible for this situation."

Postpone Playday

The Howard County Youth Horsemen Club has postponed the playday scheduled for Saturday. Instead, the playday will be held Aug. 15, according to an announcement by Dr. Nell Sanders.

She added, "If people would stop for just a brief second and consider the hurt that is felt by the people who like me and believe in me!"

PLEAS FOR PRIVACY

What she was saying in pleas for privacy was summed up when she declared, "If I'm blessed to have just a little peace of mind, that is good enough for me."

Candy was arrested in the room she rented in Brownwood and officers said they found marijuana seed. This was March 11, 1969.

Married at 14 and stripping in Dallas night clubs as a teen-ager, Candy was convicted in 1957 on a charge of marijuana possession. She said she was just holding it for a friend.

She spent three years in prison on that charge. She had been sentenced to 15 years but was released early for good behavior.

DEAR ABBY: The advice you give, "seek professional help," is good, except for one hitch. One should check on any prospective therapist first.

I went to a kook whose office walls are festooned with degrees but he must have left his ethics behind in grade school. Three years and thousands of dollars later, I wound up with a divorce. The grounds: Adultery. The man? My therapist. (And I'm not even good looking.)

Therapy often causes women patients to "fall in love" with their doctors, but the competent (and ethical) psychiatrist knows how to handle this situation.

A little investigating later turned up the facts that my doctor was known for tomcatting around. He is still sitting around "helping" people, raking it in and no doubt putting out.

Me? I have a ruined marriage, two fatherless children and no money. Please print this. It might save some unsuspecting woman from my fate.

DEAR BITTER: Most therapists wouldn't touch a patient with a 10-foot pole. You just happened to get the local Lochinvar. However, YOU are in a better position than I am to "save some unsuspecting woman from the same fate." Report your doctor to the county medical society. He desperately needs therapy himself, and shouldn't be permitted to practice.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I have been married for 9 years. We have four daughters, 7, 5, 4 and 2. We own our own business, own an average home, and drive an average late model car.

My wife is just about the most wonderful woman in the world. She's a great cook, an excellent housekeeper and a fine mother. She loves to work in the yard, seldom raises her voice or loses her temper and we get along beautifully.

Our children are exceptionally well-behaved and we have wonderful friends. My wife loves my folks, and I love hers.

My problem, Dear Abby, is that I am about to go completely out of my mind trying to figure out how a bum like me ever got into such a wonderful situation. Should I accept the fact that I am the luckiest guy in the world, or should I just keep trying to figure this thing out?

DAVE IN EUGENE, OREGO

DEAR DAVE: Accept it. And also knock on wood and bite your tongue.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I were eager to entertain at home after our marriage last year. We have invited friends for cocktails, brunch, foreign meals, buffet dinners and after-theater suppers. We were pleased with the high number of acceptances, and our guests always seemed to have a good time. As newlyweds we live in a small apartment in a new high-rise building in the "city." But in spite of the limited area of entertaining, we have opened our doors to about 150 guests — some of them four or five times.

However, sadly, we must admit, only three couples have reciprocated thus far. The rest are still repeating meaningless phrases, like "drop in sometime," or, "we MUST get together soon."

Of course we don't intend to "drop in." We are dropping OFF — their names for our list of future guests. Isn't that the only answer? DISAPPOINTED

DEAR DISAPPOINTED: Yes, I think in your "eagerness" to get into the social swim, you may have "gone off the deep end." To invite the same people four and five times without a reciprocal invitation from them appears to me as "social climbing." Stick with those who have returned your invitations. If you have only three couples who appreciate your company and hospitality, you're doing well.

FOUND AFTER SEVEN DAYS ON MOUNTAIN — Daniel Crowley, 12, is reunited with his mother at North Conway Memorial Hospital after he was found "alive and well" on rugged 4,050-foot Mt. Pasaconaway in New Hampshire. The boy, from Dorchester, Mass., became separated seven days ago from a summer camp hiking group. He existed on blueberries and water.

INVASION OF PRIVACY Nader Will Collect $425,000 From GM

NEW YORK (AP) — Consumer advocate Ralph Nader has received $425,000 from General Motors in an out-of-court settlement of his invasion of privacy suit.

Nader said Thursday he would use some of the money to monitor GM's activities in the areas of safety, pollution and consumer relations. "They are going to be financing their own ombudsman," he said.

The suit, filed in November, 1966, alleged that GM began a campaign to intimidate Nader after he wrote his book, "Unsafe At Any Speed," which was critical of automobile safety standards.

Nader complained in the suit that GM hired a private investigator, Vincent Gillen, whose detectives inquired into his private life.

The book prompted a safety crusade and a Senate hearing during which James M. Roche, then president of the giant automaker, publicly apologized for any harassment.

Nader sued for damages—$26 million was the figure reported at the time although his lawyers said Thursday the total was $12 million.

The $425,000 that GM paid Thursday was for compensatory damages and the automaker said claims for punitive damages were withdrawn as part of the settlement.

GM said it denies any wrongdoing or legal liability in connection with the claim and that "the settlement in no respect constitutes an admission of any of the claims asserted by Nader."

"Settlement of the lawsuit at this time was considered desirable" to save the time and expense of further litigation, GM said.

Nader said in a statement that GM could have delayed the case further and therefore "it was deemed wiser to settle the case and devote the proceeds, after deduction of legal fees and expenses, to the cause of consumer protection and corporate responsibility, especially in the latter area—General Motors' responsibility."

When The Middle Majority Speaks Up

The past five years has been a period of upheaval in American life. Many cities and many university campuses have been convulsed by demonstrations, often ending in violence and widespread destruction of property.

But the majority of the American people still seem wedded to the "middle" between the far left and the far right. This fact has been reinforced by the Gallup Poll in a recent survey. Extremist groups, from the John Birch Society and the Ku Klux Klan on the right and the Students for a Democratic Society (SDS) and the Black Panthers on the left, have the backing of only a very small minority of the people, the survey suggests.

Only 4 per cent of all persons interviewed hold a "highly favorable" opinion of the John Birch Society, whereas 38 per cent had a "highly unfavorable" opinion of the society. The Klan is considered "highly favorable" by only 3 per cent of those interviewed while 75 per cent held a "highly unfavorable" opinion. On the left, the SDS was viewed with favor by 7 per cent, with 42 per cent unfavorable. The Black Panthers were supported by only 2 per cent, while 75 per cent looked upon it as unfavorable.

Why, then, with so little backing have these extremist groups been able to create such a stir? Perhaps there is no definitive explanation, considering their diversity. But strong convictions and the ability to articulate forcefully have a part. Occasional police overreaction to the far left also has a part, overreaction on the campus especially where at least a temporary sympathy is aroused in the student body.

There is a plain warning here for those whose activities provoke violence: If sufficiently goaded, the majority of the middle will demand, and obtain, stern repression, even if it involves the surrender of some constitutional guarantees. This could change many situations as they exist in America today.

Construction To Withstand Storms

Progressive elements of the design and building professions likely have given this matter consideration, but a question has arisen in some quarters: Can builders and architects profit from lessons such as the Lubbock tornado and Hurricane Celia?

A detailed study of the damage and its causes might be most helpful.

At least one fact stands out in a survey made of much of the construction loss in the Corpus Christi area: It is that older homes suffered less than newer homes. This may be attributed to such things as more solid construction, or better ventilation (which enabled them to escape the "explosion effect" of great pressure differences inside and outside houses as barometric pressures dropped suddenly).

It also appeared in Corpus Christi that homes and business fared better if owners were inside, at least if they took the precaution of opening one or more windows on the leeward side of the storm, and then reversing the procedure as the eye passed and the wind came from a new direction.

Thus the question: Did sealed, all air-conditioned homes suffer more than open-type homes? Is the siding material most in use adequate for brick veneering? Are there better methods of anchoring roofs?

What the hurricane did and what the tornado did may be two different types of problems. But in both instances (as well as from other major storms), some detailed analysis might lead to a guide for safer home and business construction in the future.

California Pits Youth Vs. Age

LOS ANGELES — Youth triumphant over age, that is the message on every beach and every street corner in this lush, luxuriant state. And it is the theme of a political contest that could in November determine the control of the Senate of the United States and the direction of policy for a long time to come.

Sen. George Murphy, the song-and-dance man featured in dozens of movies over the years, is running for a second term at the age of 68 and after a serious throat ailment that impairs his speaking ability. His opponent is 36-year-old Rep. John V. Tunney, son of the former heavyweight boxing champion Gene Tunney.

TALL, ATHLETIC, with a broad, toothy Theodore Roosevelt grin, Tunney has been three times re-elected to Congress from a traditionally conservative district in the Los Angeles area, each time with a greatly increased percentage, even when Ronald Reagan running for Governor and Richard Nixon for President carried his district by whopping majorities.

Here in the Golden West you don't run for office, you pose for office.

Billy Graham

Why do ministers emphasize faith and trust so much in their sermons?

O.P. There are many areas in life where trust is important. Even our currency, which in itself is without value, is valuable only because of public confidence and support.

The bank holds a note from a borrower for $5,000. That note is not better than the man who signed it. The bank trusts that man, has faith that he will meet his obligation to the bank. There is no such thing as proving that a man is a sure risk. The bank just has to trust and take a chance. But, this element of trust is so reliable that the entire banking system is built upon it.

The same is true in many other relationships. Suppose a couple were considering marriage, and the bride says: "Suppose our marriage turns out like one out of three, in divorce. What if you stop loving me, and become unfaithful? Before we wed I'd like proof that this will not happen."

What can the poor fellow do? There is no possible way he can prove his love for her. All he can say is: "I love you, and you'll just have to trust me and believe in me."

Just so: our relationship to God is built upon trust. "Beloved, if our heart condemn us not, then we confidence toward God." I John 3:21.

Sniping At Mutual Funds

NEW YORK (AP) — These have been tough days for the mutual funds, what with prices depressed and government investors and academicians sniping at one thing or another. They have also been days of growth in numbers, not assets.

In June 1969 the Investment Company Institute, trade association of the open-end fund industry, numbered 281 members. One year later the total had risen to 323, although assets had shrunk to $38 billion from $49 billion.

The trend seems clear: The number of funds doesn't depend upon the success of funds. They are permanent and growing aspect of the securities industry, and that growth could accelerate as insurance companies enter the field.

The latest criticism of the industry comes in a book to be published Monday by researchers at the Wharton School of Finance and Commerce. Called "Mutual Funds and Other Institutional Investors: A New Perspective," it faults the industry for probably contributing to excessive price swings for smaller and more speculative stocks during the past decade.

Prior to publication, however, the authors have hurled another spear into the side of this mammoth industry. During the first half of 1970, they state, a sample of mutual funds actually performed worse than an unmanaged portfolio.

Such criticism by now has a familiar sound, because that gong has been struck several times before. But there are still some questions that could be the subject of scholarly analysis in the very near future.

First, is there a potential conflict of interest in as many as 12 supposedly independent funds being sponsored by one management company?

Each of these funds, it is to be expected, would desire to keep its activities hidden from its neighbor, because they are competitors in the marketplace even though each contributes to the profits of the same company. But do they?

The president of a company that manages a dozen funds was asked to comment.

"Our entire investment group of 65 people has a 40-minute meeting each morning," he said. "We review all transactions of the previous day—all the buys and sells of the entire group."

In other words, one fund always knows what the other is doing? "Of course." As a matter of fact, he related, there are about six instances a year when one fund in the group sells and another fund picks up the same stock.

It's all above board. But, since there is a trend toward multiple funds under one umbrella manager, the situation seems to suggest study. The concerted efforts of a dozen funds, after all, can make or break a stock.

Values Change With Time

NEW YORK (AP) — Jumping to conclusions:

While age fears youth today, youth fears age somewhat too. Young people are particularly distrustful of older people who can compete with them in any field and who refuse to "act their age." They prefer old people who submit tamely to life and have one foot in the grave. Such oldsters are no threat to them.

The average bowler is shorter, heavier and more congenial than the average golfer. He is also more likely to drink beer, smoke a cigar, and have more trouble keeping his shirttail in while he plays.

Think twice before lending money to a guy who habitually wears a tie clip. Nobody who is that neat and orderly in his dress ought to have his financial affairs in order also—and therefore have no need to borrow.

Most of the people who are sentimentally clamoring for the government to save the nation's long-distance passenger trains haven't taken a trip on one in the last 10 years.

It is hard to understand why women are so stoutly resisting the efforts of some fashion designers to get them out of miniskirts and into maxiskirts. After all, Whistler's mother wears a maxiskirt in her son's famous painting—and looks real nice.

An old-timer is a fellow who can remember when folks didn't think much of a medicine unless the label claimed it could cure not only the specific ailment they had but also half a dozen other diseases they might acquire later.

Something good can be found in every dirty movie—but that isn't why people stand in line to see it.

Our values do change with time. Can't you recall when a man thought his date was a gold digger if she ordered the $2 steak a la carte in a restaurant instead of taking the $1 blue-plate special like a lady?

The trouble with going to a baseball game anymore is that by the time the game is over you need another shave.

If you jump when the phone on your desk rings, you need to get another job, take a long vacation—or quit dipping into the office ready cash fund.

Life is getting more interesting with each passing generation. The man who used to kill time by going over to the barbershop to watch a haircut now has a grandson who does the same thing by going to the beach and watching a girl in a bikini get a sunburn.

Don't Raise Hand, Just Push Button

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — A University of Arizona student, Michael Pomeroy, says he has developed an electronic "confusion meter" designed to let students tell a professor they didn't understand his lecture without the embarrassment of raising their hands.

They could covertly press the button on a light-weight transmitter, Pomeroy said, which would register their confusion on a receiver held by the professor.

To Your Good Health

She Has A Good Way To Stay Young

By G. C. THOSTESON, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am a 62-year-old female with full office employment and very active. I especially enjoy young people and spend much of my time with them.

There are a few old people who severely criticize me for moving around and walking quickly. They say that because of my age I should stay at home more, learn to walk and move slowly to retain my health.

I have regular checkups with my family physician and have a clean bill of health, but these few old people say I will ruin my health if I don't slow down. Your thoughts please? M.R.

Sounds like sour grapes. Let 'em sit around and listen to their arteries harden if they want to, but I'm in favor of your method of staying young.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have pernicious anemia and take thyroid tablets each morning and a shot of B-12 once a month. A friend sent me some B-12 tablets. Would taking them cause an overactive thyroid? I haven't taken any yet. J.F.S.

I'm afraid you are getting two separate problems mixed up. Vitamin B-12, given by injection, is the proper way to control pernicious anemia.

Your thyroid problem is a separate matter. You take tablets for that. Taking B-12 tablets wouldn't make your thyroid overactive, but on the other hand, since you are getting the injections, I don't see why you should need B-12 in tablet form in addition.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please!

Will just one small drink of whisky eventually do my system any harm if taken daily? That's all I take, and my children all feel it will cause some damage to my kidneys or liver in time. I'll abide by what you say, sir. I am 65 and a widow. Sign me—GRANDMA. If you mean just one a day, and by "small" you mean about an ounce, then I think your children are worrying over nothing. (But as you know, I'm opposed to excessive drinking.)

Diverticulosis is a bulge in the digestive tract. To become more familiar with the subject, write in care of The Herald for my booklet, "Don't Let Diverticulosis Throw You," enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 25 cents in coin to cover cost of printing and handling.

Around The Rim

You Know Who's No. 2

Some day a TV camera will focus on a crowd of students demonstrating, and they'll halt what they're doing, stick up their index fingers and begin chanting:

"We're No. 1! We're No. 1!" And then the Associated Press will start a weekly poll of education editors, picking the top 10 demonstration teams in the nation.

Except Penn State, which will be No. 2.

THE OTHER DAY a congressman from Texas — no names please — stubbed his toe and in a moment of weakness said "Damnation!" Fifteen minutes later Spiro Agnew was on the air upbraiding him for un-American comment.

Twice recently a friend (?) has had to cancel dinner with me (I was going to buy) at the last minute. The second time he said he had to go out of town.

The moral is: Some people go to great extremes to avoid going to dinner with me.

DON'T EVER wait until the funeral to let a friend know you like him, suggests Roger Beard, a good neighbor.

He also observes I am polite only to my inferiors, and he insists "There aren't any."

I have to admit that's a pretty good summation.

RED O'DONNELL of the Nashville Banner says that to discourage taking reading material into the steam room at the YMCA health club, there is a sign on the door which reads:

"Wet newspapers smell." Underneath someone has penciled: "So do some dry ones."

Dick Cavett says there is a move on the wing in New York to make the bluebird the state bird, but some claim the blackbird is more numerous.

"Then someone checked and found that the blackbirds really are bluebirds," Cavett said.

"DO YOU KNOW what one fish said to another fish?" "Glib."

Editor Joe Pickle says he's so old he remembers when people who wore blue jeans worked.

My bright cousin, Dr. George Ladd, an Okie from Muskogee, points out that no less than prize-winning reporter James Reston and the Holy Bible prove that the press has always been rather pushy.

He cites a speech by Reston who refers to the 19th chapter of Luke, verses 1-3:

"And Jesus entered and passed through Jerico."

"And behold there was a man, Zaccabaeus, and he sought to see Jesus and could not for the press."

MAN IS LIMITED only by his knowledge, woman by her checking account.

J. B. Jay, "Mr. B" or the "Pampa Kid," philosophizes:

"Old age is that period when your thoughts turn from passion to pension."

Effectiveness Of The FBI

WASHINGTON — The Federal Bureau of Investigation — usually referred to as the "FBI" — is perhaps the most effective agency related to law enforcement in the world today. It is at the same time the victim of more barbs of hate and criticism from the so-called "liberal" group than any other part of the government.

A Gallup Poll, therefore, which has just been issued is significant. It shows that, while the favorable rating of the FBI by the public has declined from 84 per cent in December, 1965, to 71 per cent today, this can be attributed largely to the attitude of the younger respondents, and is doubtless due to the antiwar and youth groups which have made the FBI a special target in their criticisms of the "establishment."

AS A MATTER of fact, the FBI carries on investigative work where there are violations of federal law and crimes across state lines. It simply gathers information and reports findings to the Department of Justice or to state or city agencies which might use them. Many an important criminal has been caught as a result of the data collected by the FBI.

Interestingly enough, the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency, which does not operate in this country but investigates certain American interests in foreign countries, is also the object of attack and scorn.

BUT ALL the prosecuting attorneys and officers who are familiar with what these two agencies do for the federal government in collecting data about criminals and their activities know that, except for the skill of the agents who come up with information that helps to catch and indict many a wrongdoer, a lot of guilty persons would have escaped punishment.

THE FBI has a considerable influence on the police systems of this country and plays an important role in the methods of training police officers. It collaborates often with state and city authorities who seek advice and counsel on how to improve law-enforcement agencies.

THE FBI was established in 1908, but it was not until it was reorganized and J. Edgar Hoover became chief of the bureau that the agency began to be a model of efficient operation. The bureau maintains a total abstention from all political affiliations or entanglements, and not only follows closely the instructions given by each attorney general but carries on a good deal of work on its own initiative in order to collect valuable information about crime and subversion in America.

The FBI gathers information to guide its own agents in being at the right place at the right time in order to catch criminals who are fugitives from justice. It is one of the remarkable achievements of the bureau that, over the years, some of the most dangerous of the criminals may have for a while escaped capture, but in the end found themselves in the hands of the FBI.

THE POLICE DEPARTMENTS of states and cities have confidence in the FBI, cooperate with it and employ its help in ferreting out criminals, especially those who have fled from their jurisdiction. The FBI does not participate in any of the decisions as to whether a case shall be prosecuted or abandoned, but leaves such matters to the attorney general or the solicitor general to determine.

All this is why the FBI has achieved its reputation for fairness, efficiency and non-political involvement as an information-gathering agency for the federal government.

If They Want To Go To Hanoi, Let 'Em

WASHINGTON — Reports from law enforcement intelligence sources claim that more than 500 assorted black and white militants have signed up with Huey Newton's army to help liberate the Communist Vietcong from the imperialistic persecution of the United States and South Vietnam governments.

NEWTON, a co-founder with Bobby Seale of the Black Panther Party, was sprung last week from a California jail on $50,000 bond. His 1968 conviction for voluntary manslaughter in the slaying of an Oakland policeman was overturned last May by the State Court of Appeals and he'll get a new trial.

Newton's ambivalent status thus would seem to make him a poor bet to lead his troops against the American and South Vietnamese enemy. He could find it difficult to order an assault on the Saigon hoosegown from a California courtroom.

BUT THE 28-year-old Newton probably can take care of himself, although he appears to be suffering from a case of acute romantic narcissism in pledging to dispatch troops to the distant battlefields.

What is hard to understand is the peculiar neuroses of Newton's volunteers. Some burning masochism must have possessed them to thus set them up as his tame patsies.

IT IS feckless to recall that these sprouts have made a fetish of their opposition to all wars and all killing. In what passes for their minds, the Communist side of a war is a special package of goods. Besides, they cheer Newton when he demands that they go out and kill a few cops, for practice.

But some of these lads do have a kind of rudimentary intelligence and yet they apparently have given no thought to what they have let themselves in for. Even if they accept the wretched inconveniences and discomfort of war, logic would seem to demand that they ponder the hardship of pledging fealty to Hanoi, especially under military discipline.

AFTER ALL, these are kids who have grown accustomed to the perverse joys that accrue from dissent, often of a violent nature. Their big kicks come from defying authority. Yet they seem impatient to serve under a government to which the word dissent is spelled treason. Should they make it to Vietnam, they will discover that orders, especially Communist orders, are positively orders. When their commanding officer tells them to charge, his fiat will not be subject to a round-table discussion. They will blow their noses only with permission, and go to the bathroom on a schedule drafted by their commissar.

WORSE, these boys will discover that political disagreement is nonexistent. There will be no long-winded discussions of Marxism, Maoism and Holism. A soldier in the Communist ranks does not call an MP a pig with impunity. Casting doubt on the wisdom of Hanoi's ruling clique gets you a ticket to jail, or standing room only before the firing squad. There is no picketing, and demonstrations are staged by the government, not by fun-loving students.

Perhaps we should let them go and even pay their fares.

For China It Meant Start Of Civil War

By ARTHUR C. MILLER
Copley News Service

HONG KONG — It was a hot, muggy summer's evening when word of victory crackled over the few radios in Chungking, wartime capital of China. Slowly, news of victory over Japan spread by telephone and word of mouth through the burdened, war-ravaged city. Sporadic shouts of joy sliced the thick air that hung over Chungking. Here and there the burst of firecrackers interrupted the evening's pre-curfew calm. Within an hour, Chungking was alive with the exciting news. Thousands of men, women and children poured out of their homes and hovels and into the city's downtown areas.

CURFEW CANCELED
The 11 o'clock curfew was canceled. Jeeps, trucks and buses aswarm with people weaved and coughed through the masses of revelers. In happiness and appreciation, the people tore at the uniforms of the American troops in the city, shouting, "Mei kuo ting hae, mei kuo ting hao" (America is marvelous).

But there was a suffocating element in the atmosphere of joy and relief at the end of the war, a war that had consumed China not four but for eight long, bitter, devastating and cruel years.

For China, the surrender of Japan at the conclusion of World War II 25 years ago did not mean peace.

JOY FADES
A new war, this time a civil war that would touch every corner of China and have far-ranging implications for the rest of the world, lay immediately ahead.

The celebration of victory over Japan quickly faded in Chungking, as it did everywhere in the country.

That was as it should have been, for within a scant 48 hours of war's end the civil war between the Nationalists and Communists that had flickered throughout the period of struggle against Japan burst into full flame.

Ironically, Japan's aggression, which should have been the catalyst for great unity within the Chinese nation, instead contributed to the division of the country characterized by the Nationalist-Communist split.

Despite an attempt by the two sides to form a united front against the Japanese, that unity was never more than an illusion.

STORY IN REVERSE
True, after the kidnapping of Chiang Kai-shek by one of his young generals in December, 1936, the Nationalists and Communists had agreed to halt their civil war and concentrate their efforts against the invading Japanese. But after 1938, any cooperation between the two Chinese forces was purely coincidental.

The full force of the war and Japan's designs on China came into play on July 8, 1937, with the infamous "Marco Polo Bridge incident" outside Peking. The Japanese claimed they were fired on by Chinese troops; the Chinese told the story in reverse.

Whichever the case, and historians to this day are still not certain, it marked the start of Japan's drive into China . . . and war.

THAT'S ALL
Within a year and a half, the Japanese juggernaut had sliced through the poorly trained and equipped Chinese forces and pushed deep into China's heartland. The Nationalist government fled ahead of the advance, coming to rest far to the west, in the Yangtze River city of Chungking in Szechuan province.

By the end of 1938, the Japanese advance was complete.

The Japanese controlled every major Chinese city and nearly one-half of the country east of a line running from Paotow near the border with Mongolia, to Ichang on the Yangtze in central China, to Nanning in Yunnan province on the border with French Indochina.

NO-MAN'S LAND
From that date until the surrender of Japan in 1945, the China war was mainly a stalemate fought along a flexible belt of no-man's-land some 50 to 100 miles deep up and down the middle of China.

The campaigns the Japanese conducted were designed mainly to keep the countryside in terror, the Chinese troops off balance and to provide training under fire for green Japanese recruits.

It was a stalemate, however, only in a technical sense. For as Chinese and Japanese troops chased each other back and forth across the no-man's-land, the peasants suffered, the troops bled and the villages and towns were repeatedly razed.

While the Nationalists fought their conventional war along the front stretching from Mongolia to Indochina, the Communists honed their guerrilla warfare skills behind Japanese lines in the northern and north-eastern portions of the country.

Frequently throughout the war years, the Communists and Nationalists — despite their agreement to concentrate their fighting against the Japanese — engaged in battle against each other.

Both sides knew only too well that once the battle against Japan was over, the battle for China would begin.

The very conditions created by the war made that a certainty.

Final Victory: How A-Bomb Came To Be

By FRANK MACOMBER
Military-Aerospace Writer
Copley News Service

Twenty-five years ago atom bombs devastated two major Japanese cities in the space of three days — Hiroshima on Aug. 6, Nagasaki on Aug. 9, 1945 — to bring a swift and conclusive end to World War II.

The terrible destructive power of the bomb, unheard of by most of the world until after its fury was unleashed on Hiroshima, thus ironically became an instrument of peace.

SPLIT ATOM

But the story of how nuclear fission was developed in the United States and the A-bomb was conceived began six years earlier.

American newspapers in January, 1939, published reports that German scientists at last had split the atom. This meant little or nothing to most Americans. But it was ominously significant to a group of foreign-born scientists who had fled to this country to escape the already mounting threat of Hitler's Nazi storm troops.

Led by Leo Szilard, a Hungarian scientist who had found refuge here, they called on Dr. Albert Einstein to tell President Franklin D. Roosevelt of the German scientific achievement and to warn him that Hitler some day might have a weapon that could wipe out entire cities.

'ULTIMATE WEAPON'
Einstein wrote a letter to the president. It inevitably reached Brig. Gen. Edwin M. (Pa) Watson, the president's aide, with an "action" recommendation.

Now the U. S. government officially was taking an interest in what later was to become known as "the ultimate weapon." But not until 1941 did the National Research Committee contain a uranium section.

Dr. Vannevar Bush, chief of the Office of Scientific Research and Development, pushed the project, advised Mr. Roosevelt of some progress and was promised more personnel and dollars to speed it. Bush passed along the president's pledge to his colleagues on Dec. 6, 1941, a day before the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor.

That black Sunday, of course, triggered perhaps the greatest scientific-industrial-military effort ever attempted — all under the wraps of strictest secrecy.

CODE NAME

It was the start of the bomb and the birth of the Manhattan District Engineers, the mystical code name given the group of men assigned to build the first atomic weapon.

Brig. Gen. Leslie R. Groves, an Army engineer, headed the supersecret Manhattan Project. At 46, he was handed the mission of building a nuclear bomb about which few men knew anything and most knew nothing.

Groves drafted the best minds in science and industry, ignored

Congress and financed this tremendous undertaking with funds obtained directly from the U. S. Treasury.

Finally the now-familiar mushroom cloud flowered and climbed to 40,000 feet or more above the desert floor.

However, the world was not yet to know that science had wrought a new weapon of terrible and unimaginable power. In Albuquerque, N. M., newsmen were handed a brief "explanatory" statement which read:

"An ammunition magazine exploded early today in a remote area of the Alamogordo Air Base reservation, producing a brilliant flash and blast which were reported to have been observed as far away as Gallup (N.M.), 235 miles northwest."

Or Was It Japan That Won War?

By BENEDICTO S. DAVID
Copley News Service

MANILLA — If anyone in 1945 had correctly forecast what the Philippines would be like in 1970, he would have been labeled a lunatic.

The Japanese, once a hated conqueror, have come back in force — as economic superiors. They live and do business in terms of millions of dollars annually. Japanese products fill Philippine stores and are at times preferred over American brands because of their comparatively low prices.

Japanese radios, cameras and electronic equipment are highly regarded and Japanese cars are rapidly replacing the All-

American look of Philippine roads.

There are Japanese-type restaurants and many hotels guided by their way to make the Japanese feel at home in the Philippines.

DEMONSTRATIONS

On the other hand, there have been several demonstrations staged against the once-beloved United States by militant student and labor groups.

Why the turnabout after a mere 25 years? Why have the Japanese become acceptable and Americans turned into whipping boys for the ills or at least for part of the ills of this country?

There are a host of reasons. One is graphically illustrated by the ruins of the Metropolitan Theater Building near the center of Manila. Twenty-five years after the end of the war, it still has not been rebuilt.

Japan, on the other hand, has recovered fully from the war since for decades the Japanese did not spend a single cent for defense and were aided generously by the United States.

Invasion Of Japan Would Have Cost A Million Casualties

Editor's Note: The writer of this article is a vice admiral, U.S. Navy, retired, and was one of the top planners of the invasion of Japan — an invasion that never was necessary.
By RUTHVEN E. LIBBY
Copley News Service

It would have been a colossal undertaking — the invasion of the Japanese home island of Kyushu.

It would have had a star-studded cast, including many of those who had written their names on the pages of history through involvement in earlier Pacific campaigns, and had survived to take part in this one.

It would have brought together the greatest armada ever assembled in the history of the world, including ships redeployed from the European Theater of Operations. The troop list included three Army corps; a Marine Amphibious Corps of three divisions and an aircraft wing; two additional Army divisions, including one airborne division; the Army Service Command Pacific.

POWER TO BURN

There also was the Eighth and 20th Air Forces from the U.S. Army Strategic Air Force; all naval aviation in the Pacific including fleet air wings; all Pacific Fleet submarines, and three Navy Service Squadrons.

It would have been supported by the Eighth Army in the Southwest Pacific, most Army forces in the Middle Pacific and Western Pacific, the far East Air Forces, and the Tenth Army in the Ryukyus.

The operation would have been unique in the annals of Pacific amphibious operations because, since the land campaign and its requirements would have been primary, the commander-in-chief, U.S. Army Forces Pacific (Gen. of the Army Douglas MacArthur), was charged with the primary responsibility for the conduct of the operation, including control, in case of exigencies, of the (Olympic) never came off, thank a actual amphibious assault through the appropriate commander.

LEARNED HARD WAY
All the forces involved were veterans of many previous campaigns. Many of them knew all there was to know about amphibious operations, albeit they had learned the hard way.

The operation had been meticulously planned, and preliminary steps had been set in motion.

It could not possibly have failed to accomplish its objective. But it was conservatively estimated that Allied forces would have sustained one million casualties, giving consideration to the ferocity forced the Japanese to defend the Pacific positions they had occupied, and the fact that in this instance they would be defending the homeland.

The operation (code named member of the Joint War Plans Cod.

SHOCKING LOSS

However shocking the loss of life at Hiroshima and Nagasaki may have been, it was minor compared to what would have occurred if these bombs had not been dropped, since it was these bombings which induced the Japanese to surrender. (It has been argued that pressure from studies of the invasion of the bombing damage would have forced the Japanese to surrender prior to Olympic even if President Harry Truman had not authorized the use of nuclear weapons, and perhaps this is so.)

(But in any case, Olympic and Operation Coronet, the final assault on Honshu, to which Olympic would have been merely a preliminary, never had to be initiated.)

TIGHT SECURITY

When this writer reported in Washington as the senior naval Committee in late October, 1944, the Joint Chiefs of Staff already had issued the directive for the Luzon, two Jima and Okinawa operations, and feasibility studies of the invasion of the Japanese home islands were already under way in that committee.

It is indicative either of the tight security surrounding the Manhattan (atomic bomb) Project or of the lowly status of us planners that we had no knowledge of the development of the atomic bomb. In any case, we agreed with the Joint Chiefs of Staff (who knew about the project but had no assurance that it would succeed) that in order to end the war it would be necessary to invade the main island of Honshu and capture most of the main industrial and war production plants on that island. The more we studied the problem, the more apparent it became that we would have to take two bites at the cherry, and that a base area in Japan itself would be essential to support a successful invasion of the main island of Honshu.

Geographical and topographical conditions, and what we could learn about the disposition of defending forces, indicated that the least worst place to attack would be southern Kyushu. It should be remembered that in those days the range of land-based fighter airplanes was substantially shorter than it is today, which was one reason why a base area close to the final objective was essential.

CERTAIN ASSUMPTIONS
We were given certain assumptions by the Joint Chiefs on which to base our feasibility studies. These included:

1. That control of the sea had been gained by the destruction of most of the Japanese fleet.
2. That our attacks on the Japanese air forces and the resources on which they depended, preceding the target date for the invasion, would have made it possible for us to maintain continuing control of the air in the objective area. As I remember, we felt this to be a somewhat dubious assumption, since we knew that Kyushu was liberally peppered with airfields (we knew of at least 60, and knew that an indefinite number more were under construction).

3. That the combat troops available would be mainly those then in the Pacific, augmented by some engineer and service troops redeployed from Europe.

WEAK REED

4. That cargo shipping sufficient to support the operation would be available — another rather weak reed on which to lean, we felt.

5. That naval facilities and shore-based air forces adequate for the support of the invasion had been established in the Ryukyus.

6. That Russia would have entered the war against Japan by Oct. 1, 1945. . . . A most important additional assumption was that attacks on Japan by the Pacific Fleet and by shore-based air forces in the Ryukyus and the Marianas would have intensified through the summer and early fall of 1945.

On the basis of these assumptions, we concluded that a feasible plan for the invasion of southern Kyushu could be developed, and set about the task of preparing the broad brush study which led to a Joint Chiefs of Staff directive of May 25, 1945. This directive was issued only after considerable argument at the Joint Chiefs of Staff and higher levels. I recall, since there was a sizable contingent in Washington who believed that a naval blockade and aerial bombing would be sufficient to force the Japanese to end the war.

INDUSTRIAL HEART

This directive, in essence, said that the Joint Chiefs had determined that the over-all objective in the war against Japan, to be brought about at the earliest practicable date, was to force the unconditional surrender of Japan by lowering Japanese ability and will to resist by blockade, intensive air bombardments, and destroying Japanese air and naval strength; and invading and seizing objectives in the industrial heart of Japan.

In pursuit of this objective, the JCS then directed the invasion of Kyushu in order to intensify the blockade and bombardment of Japan, contain and destroy major energy forces, and support further advances for the purpose of establishing conditions favorable to the decisive incursion of the industrial heart of Japan.

LOOKING BACK

Well, great oaks from little acorns grow. The forces released by this simple directive were stupendous. Looking back on it after a lapse of 25 years, I am impressed now, as we in Washington were then, at the brilliance, speed, and efficiency with which all echelons, from Fleet Adm. Chester Nimitz' staff on down, developed staff studies and operation which had never been equaled for size and complexity, and which would have involved five million U.S. personnel and three divisions of troops from the British Commonwealth.

COOL MAN — Jack Nicklaus of North Palm Beach, Fla., stops to pat a cardboard snowman erected by tournament officials at the PGA Championship, to help the players forget the heat. Nicklaus proved cool as he toured the 6,962-yard Southern Hills Country Club course in a 2-under-par 68 to share the lead with John Miller. Temperatures were in the 90s during the day.

Nicklaus, Miller Share PGA Lead

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus was strolling through the lobby of the club house when he was approached by a middle-aged woman wearing dangling earrings and a look of hero worship.

Jack, who shared the first-round lead in the PGA championship, blushed.

"No, Ma'am," he replied politely. "I play golf. That's my career."

Shortly afterward, a man strode up to a press photographer and asked the name of the young player whose picture he had just snapped.

"That was Jack Nicklaus," the photographer answered.

"No, I know Nicklaus," the questioner persisted. "I mean that kid with the blond hair."

"It was Nicklaus," the cameraman repeated.

The man walked away, scratching his head.

PUZZLE TO MANY

The new Jack Nicklaus is puzzling everybody. He is trim and handsome. He looks 10 years younger. He has a pleasant new personality. And he's playing the best golf of his life.

The 30-year-old better from Columbus, Ohio, who has won more than $60,000 in his last four tournaments which include his second triumph in the British Open, goes into the second round of the PGA Championship today tied with San Francisco's young John Miller for the lead with two-under-par 68.

Everybody's predicting Jack will walk away with the $40,000 first prize, thus completing a unprecedented second sweep of the four major pro championships. He already holds three Masters, two U.S. and two British Open crowns. He won the PGA in 1963.

Only three other players have won the four major titles once around Gene Sarazen and Ben Hogan, no longer active, and Gary Player of South Africa, three away from a second sweep.

Trailing Nicklaus and Miller after the opening round over the 6,962-yard, par-70 Southern Hills Country Club course are Larry Hogan and Charles Coody, tied at 69 and a half dozen bracketed at even par 70.

They are Arnold Palmer, Jack Cupit, Dick Hendrickson, Homero Blancas, Dave Stockton and Sam Snead. Hendrickson is an obscure club pro from Marlton, N.J.

Twins' Lead Has Dwindled To 5 Games

By The Associated Press

Dick Bosman gave up drag racing in favor of throwing a speeding baseball much to the regret of the skidding Minnesota Twins.

The hard-throwing Washington right-hander mowed down the Twins on a measly bunt single-Cesar Tovar's leadoff hit—in handing the West Division leaders their sixth loss in succession Thursday night, a 1-0 beating as Minnesota's once-comfortable lead dwindled to five games over Oakland as the A's lost 4-3 to Cleveland.

Bosman, a husky 6-foot-3, 210-pounder, issued a walk to opposing pitcher Jim Katt in the sixth, after retiring 16 straight Twins, then got Tovar on a double play bouncer before retiring Minnesota the rest of the way, facing only 28 batters, one over the minimum.

DON'T MIX

The 26-year-old from Kenosha, Wis., who has driven drag racers at 215 miles per hour, gave up driving a couple of years ago "because I realized the dangers of auto racing and you must drive consistently at those speeds to react properly. You just can't play ball then jump into a car and win a race."

So Bosman, who is now 12-8 and was 14-5 last year with an American League leading ERA of 2.15, switched to owning and fixing snowmobiles in the winter and winning games for the Senators in the summer.

Bosman, lowering his 1970 ERA to 3.02, got the only run he needed in the first inning when Wayne Comer bunted for a single and went to third on Harmon Killebrew's wild throw. Rick Reichart's grounder got the run in, sending Kaat, who issued only five hits to his ninth loss against 10 triumphs.

In other AL games, California nipped Baltimore 3-2, Milwaukee edged Detroit 3-2, Kansas City slugged Boston 11-3 and the New York Yankees topped Chicago 4-3.

Sam McDowell, 17-7, struck out nine and gave up three hits in stopping the A's winning streak at five games.

The left-hander was touched for the three runs—all unearned—in the third on Tommy Davis' two-out bases-loaded double. Davis got to bat when Cleveland's Duke Sims dropped a foul fly off the bat of Blue Moon Odum, who eventually walked.

PINSON HOMERS

Vada Pinson homered for the Indians in the first and Cleveland won it in the fifth with three runs. Graig Nettles and Roy Foster had run-scoring hits and another came in on a wild pitch.

ODESSA — John Round, Lubbock, won the 16-17 division of the Tournament of Champions at the Odessa Country Club here Thursday with a 36-hole score of 153.

Runner-up in the division was Andy Rowe of Odessa, who had a 155. The two were tied after the first round of play with 77s.

In the 14-15 age group, Scott Morgan, Sweetwater, was first with a 157.

Ross Wortham, Iraan, led the 12-13 bracket with a 170.

COAHOMA — The Coahoma Bulldogs, moving up in class this fall, begin workouts in pads at 7 a.m. Monday.

Coach Bernie Hagins said the Big Red would work for two hours in the morning and again at 6 p.m., hoping to escape the heat.

The Bulldogs who have 13 offensive and defensive lettermen returning, will scrimmage

Monday Aug. 24 and Starnford there Sept. 4, both workouts starting at 7 p.m.

Dalton Hamilton, who has coached at Trinidad and who is a graduate of Stephen F. Austin College, has been added to the Coahoma staff. He'll help Willie Lundy in junior high. Seven coaches are now employed by the Coahoma school district.

LOOKING 'EM OVER

With Tommy Hart

The motorcycle crowd here has been trying to give Big Spring and environs something in the way of entertainment with occasional race programs.

Promoters haven't succeeded too well. Perhaps it is because Big Spring is a one-sports community — and I have reference to Sunday afternoon viewing of TV Football rather than Friday night rendezvous with the high school teams of their choices.

This, of course, is a one-high school town but the football support has been not outstanding — perhaps just a notch above mediocre.

Be that as it may, the original discussion was about motorcycle racing and the efforts of the local promoters to give the local buffs something wholesome and rewarding. Friends of the sport have had to dig down in their jeans for money to keep the endeavor from drowning in a sea of red ink.

Nationwide, motorcycle riding is perhaps the fastest growing participation sport. Total U. S. sales of $38,763 imported bikes in 1969 almost doubled the 1968 figure of $33,235.

Motorcycle Weekly says Japanese imports of 525,891 units accounted for $122,400,000 of the $161,976,000 imported motorcycle sales total last year. By comparison, second place Britain was able to sell only $7,721 units here for a gross income of only $25 million.

Some persons are predicting 1970 imported motorcycle sales will top the $80,000 mark, approximately one for every ten cars sold. Most will be purchased strictly for pleasure riding.

Youthful buyers have always been the backbone of the motorcycle market. Recently, however, it has become the 'in' thing for the upper middle class, too.

Some observers reason motorcycles will gradually be used more for basic transportation because they reduce highway congestion, are easier to park and, with only one or two cylinders, produce less air pollution. There's also an air conditioning factor involved — at no cost to the buyer, although some people are repelled by the idea of picking insects from their teeth.

When pro football commissioner Pete Rozelle and superstar Joe Namath were exchanging hot mots during their discussions about Namath's judgment in owning a New York bar, the conversation was interrupted by a telephone call.

Namath was informed his father was on the line. Joe, at length, came back to the discussion and remarked: "My dad doesn't like you very much, Mr. Rozelle."

"You know something, Joe," the commissioner replied with the suggestion of a smile playing about his mouth, "my dad doesn't think much of you either."

When the Ontario Motor Speedway in California opens officially next month, it will boast a seating capacity of 140,000 and every next likely will be filled for the opening event — with tens of thousands more fans in the infield.

The record for paid attendance at a sporting event in California was the 105,231 mark set in 1947 by football teams of USC and Notre Dame, which was played in the Los Angeles Coliseum.

It goes without saying that interest in auto racing is mushrooming with dizzying speed in all sections of the country.

The Ontario people obviously are out to overshadow the Indianapolis 500 in prestige and interest. The cars in the Sept. 6 California 500 will carry sensing devices which transmit signals on a different frequency for each car. When the race crosses an antenna buried beneath the track surface it will be given credit electronically for completing the lap by a computer which will then flash the current standings to three 65-foot pylons, at least one of which will be visible to every spectator.

Accurate, high-speed computations such as this, and the information printed on an IBM scoreboard (average speed, time of pit stops and etc.) will likely pamper the race fans so much other tracks like Indianapolis will have to improve their own scoring methods.

Chiefs And Colts In TV Feature

By The Associated Press

The millions of fans who spend autumn Sundays watching their favorite pro football teams clash get a chance to night for their own version of preseason training.

They can get in shape for the regular season by watching the Kansas City Chiefs, 1970 Super Bowl champs, take on the Baltimore Colts in a nationally televised preseason game. It's on NBC-TV and the kickoff is 7:30 p.m., Big Spring time.

There was gloom, meanwhile, today in the camp of the Cincinnati Bengals, youngest of the 26 National Football League teams. Star quarterback Greg Cook is scheduled for surgery early next week and probably will be out of action for the entire campaign.

The game at Kansas City is one of two tonight as the second weekend of exhibitions get underway. The Detroit Lions are at Buffalo in the other.

There are nine scheduled Saturday night, one Sunday and one Monday night.

Bench Close To New Mark For Homers

By The Associated Press

It's been nine years since baseball made "asterisk" a household word — but the little character may once again star in the record books the next time Cincinnati's Johnny Bench unloads a homer.

The biggest cog in the Big Red Machine smacked a two-run shot in the fourth inning Thursday night and Lee May and Tony Perez added solo blasts as Cincinnati overwhelmed the New York Mets 6-1 to give Jim Merritt his 17th victory of the year.

BACK TO 1961

It was back in 1961 when Roger Maris hit 61 homers in 162 games that baseball decreed the record should carry the little star to show it was separate but equal to Babe Ruth's 60 round-trippers in 154 games.

Now along comes Bench with 40 home runs, one shy of Roy Campanella's 1953 record for most homers in a season by a catcher.

The problem is the Bench isn't exclusively a catcher. He has hit 33 of them in games in which he worked as the receiver, four when he was a left fielder and one each as a center fielder, right fielder and first baseman.

Officials say only the 33 are being counted in his quest for Campy's record. What the record book will look like when Bench finishes the season is best left to statisticians and computers. Bench apparently isn't giving it much thought.

"Sure I'm thinking about homers," he said after the game, "but the Campanella record is the last thing on my mind."

"I started the season hoping I'd hit 30 and, as things are going now, I'd like to hit 50. But I'm also looking for hits that can help the ball club," Bench said.

In Thursday night's other National League action, Houston surprised Philadelphia 4-3, San Diego outlasted St. Louis 9-7, Atlanta topped Montreal 4-1, and in an afternoon contest, the Chicago Cubs beat San Francisco 6-3.

IN OIL BOWL Sooners Given Nod In Game

WICHITA FALLS (AP) — The annual Red River grudge battle between the fuzzy cheeked Goliaths of Texas and Oklahoma schoolboy football—the 33rd Oil Bowl—begins at 8 o'clock to night with a most unusual favorite—Oklahoma.

The Sooners, who won 17-7 last year, are a seven-point choice to trim the Texans, who hold a 17-5-1 mark in the series.

Oklahoma has never won two in a row and hasn't been the favorite since 1966.

But the Oklahoma club has one of its finest offensive machines assembled for the match

In Coyote Stadium. The Sooner backfield of quarterback Brent Blackmon, Tulsa Hale; halfback John Winesberry, Tulsa Washington, Jimmy Edwards, Oklahoma City Classen and Clyde Powers of Lawton, Okla., is a ground-gobbling outfit.

Texas counters with quarterback Tim Trimmer of San Antonio Lee, halfback Charles Davis of West Columbia, fullback Dennis Ladd of Dallas Carter and wingback Perry Young of Brownwood.

A crowd of 20,000 is expected for the Masket Shrine Temple-sponsored event. Proceeds of the game benefit crippled children in Texas and Oklahoma.

Coaching for the Texans are Ernest Hawkins of East Texas State and Richard Harvey of Sul Ross. Oklahoma mentors are Ed Lacy, Tulsa Washington, Jim Harris, Midwest City and Dick Corbett, Moore, Okla.

Trimmer, who got the starting nod over heralded Jimmy Carmichael of Brownwood, said the Oklahoma-Texas battle is a "grudge game and there's no doubt that it carries much more prestige than the North-South game we played in Houston last week."

Frazier Manager Doubts That Clay Has License

ATLANTA (AP) — Promoters say only the lack of signatures on a contract—something they view as a formality—stands between a heavyweight championship fight between Joe Frazier and Cassius Clay in Atlanta Oct. 26.

The proposed bout has been rejected by a number of cities because Clay, stripped of his heavyweight crown when he refused induction into the Army, has been unable to secure a license. But the Atlanta Athletic Commission has issued him a license.

And Clay said at a news conference Thursday that he is willing to fight Frazier, the champ, in the 5,000-seat City Auditorium. Announcement that Clay has a license and is ready to fight caught the Frazier camp by surprise.

"It's a lie," said Yank Durham in Stateline, Nev., where Frazier is appearing with his rock music group, Durham, who manages the fighter, said "there is no truth to it at all."

He said he could not believe that Clay had a license, but that if he does, Frazier will fight him.

"But he doesn't and that is all there is to that," he said.

However, Durham left the door open for a possible bout with Clay next year.

"We have a commitment to fight Bob Foster," Durham said. Clay will not be fought until we fulfill our obligation to Foster.

"If Clay has a license, then we'll fight him next year. Let him fight someone else and prove to me he has a license. If he has a license, we'll fight him next year. There is no fight in sight with Clay until next year."

Coach Is Named At Hermleigh

HERMLEIGH — Bobby Campbell, who is finishing work toward his degree at Hardin-Simmons University this summer, has been named head coach at Hermleigh High School.

Doctors believe a sheath of muscle may have broken loose in Cook's arm, Brown said. The quarterback has complained of constant pain and has not been able to throw a football. He hurt the arm during a pickup basketball game last winter.

"Doctors feel he will be lost for the season," Brown said.

Both Baltimore and Kansas City have injury problems. The Chiefs will play without linebacker Bobby Bell, sidelined with a spinal injury, and cornerback Jim Marsalis, who scored last week with an intercepted pass, is doubtful.

Johnny Unitas has a dislocated finger but the veteran quarterback is scheduled to start for Baltimore, which may not have the services of offensive tackle Sam Hall and safety Jerry Lo-

Proposal To Force Boat Registration

AUSTIN (AP) — A special House committee indicated its approval Thursday of a proposal to require all motorboats to be registered and to display registration decals.

Rep. Ben Atwell of Dallas, chairman of the Water Safety Committee, said, "I'm for it," and the other three members present appeared to agree.

The proposal was made by John Ebell of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Water Safety Division.

Motorboats of less than 10 horsepower or under 14 feet long are exempt from registration as well as smaller craft such as canoes.

Ebell said by requiring all motorboats to be registered, Texas' fleet of registered motorboats would double—from 248,000 to at least 500,000. Registration fees, which must be paid every two years, range from $3 to $12 depending on the size of the craft.

Ebell said he wanted the committee to consider the registration of all water craft, including sailboats and canoes, which could hike Texas' number of registered boats to 700,000.

He also suggested that all water craft be required to observe state water safety regulations. He specifically mentioned that lifejackets be required on board.

Most sailboats, canoes, punts and dinghies are now exempt from the safety regulations. Atwell said legislation "could correct that."

Court Ruling Due On Bid To Halt Nerve Gas 'Dump'

WASHINGTON (AP) — A judge was to decide today whether to halt the Army's destruction of surplus nerve gas as workers loaded the concrete-encased rockets aboard a ship for a final voyage to the bottom of the Atlantic.

Army officials said the loading at Sunny Point, N.C., might be completed late today, allowing the ship and the 2,675 tons of deadly nerve gas to begin the final ocean trip Saturday, a day ahead of schedule.

U.S. Dist. Court Judge June L. Green of Washington promised a decision today on a suit by an environmental group seeking to halt the dumping operation.

SAFER WAY

Plans call for sinking of the LeBaron Russell Briggs and its cargo Tuesday, 282 miles east of Cape Kennedy, Fla.

The suit, contending there are safer ways of disposing of the gas, asked a delay in the operation until alternatives are studied.

Lola Lea, lawyer for the Environmental Defense Fund, argued Thursday that the Army erred in determining the ship will not break up before reaching the bottom of the ocean.

The suit said the ship and concrete coffins containing the gas might break up before reaching bottom, 16,000 feet down. This would allow the gas to escape and contaminate the environment, the suit said.

LAND MINE

The Army theory is the ship will sink slowly and ocean pressure will cause the coffins to break up gradually, allowing the gas to escape slowly without harming marine life.

The suit, in which Florida Gov. Claude Kirk joined, also questioned the dumping of 10 pounds of VX nerve gas contained in a land mine in the shipment.

This gas is a more persistent type than the GB gas which makes up most of the cargo, the suit noted. If released into the water prematurely, it would retain half strength more than 12 years.

Once the GB gas escapes into the water, the Army says, chemical action will render it harmless within 10 hours.

A droplet of either gas can kill in minutes.

The Army has said since the disposal operation was announced July 30 that the rail shipment and dumping of the gas pose little danger.

The gas had been stored at depots near Richmond, Ky., and Anniston, Ala. Rail shipment of the 12,540 rockets, encased in 418 steel and concrete coffins, was begun Monday and the trains rolled into Sunny Point Tuesday night.

GAS MASKS

Personnel working with the gas are armed with masks and antidotes, and normal operations at the Sunny Point docks were curtailed while huge cranes hoisted the coffins aboard the ship.

The Briggs, brought out of mothballs for the operation, will be towed to sea by commercial barges. At the burial site, valves will be opened, allowing the ship to sink.

The Army decided to bury the gas in the ocean after the National Academy of Sciences said the quickest method of disposal was necessary because of the unstable condition of the gas. The Atomic Energy Commission decided against destruction by a nuclear blast in the desert.

'FREE WOMAN' REVEALS:

Manson Puts Out 'A Lot Of Vibes'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Everybody says I'm a free woman," Linda Kasabian said with a sigh, "but I don't feel any different."

Then the state's star witness in the Sharon Tate murder trial was whisked out a back door of the Hall of Justice Thursday under heavy guard to spend her first night out of jail in eight months.

Mrs. Kasabian's lawyers said she was driven to an undisclosed hotel, anticipating "a good dinner and probably watching television."

LOOKOUT

She was released after murder-conspiracy charges against her were dropped Thursday. The petite, pigtailed witness was granted immunity from prosecution for telling her story on the stand.

During 14 days as a witness, she has testified that some members of Charles M. Manson's hippie-style "family" killed the blonde actress and six others during two murder missions last August. She said she went on the missions but stayed outside as a lookout, then fled in terror.

Ruling Might Set Precedent

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A ruling which may set a precedent in cases involving migrant workers was made Thursday by Judge Alfred T. Goodwin of U.S. District Court.

Judge Goodwin ruled that a Washington County berry farmer committed a breach of contract in dealing with Mexican-Americans recruited to pick berries on his farm.

Court observers said the decision marked the first time migrant workers as a group have successfully sued an employer for breach of contract.

The farmer is Ronald Tankersley, who, Judge Goodwin said, made false promises on which migrant workers relied in leaving their homes in Texas and New Mexico to travel to Oregon.

He said Tankersley also violated an implied agreement not to hire more workers than could earn a reasonable wage by doing the available work.

However, the judge said the 32 individuals—who filed a class action against the farmer—were not entitled to punitive damages, since there was no proof of bad faith in Tankersley's actions.

Manson and three women followers, Susan Atkins, 21, Patricia Krenwinkel, 22, and Leslie Van Houten, 20, are on trial for murder-conspiracy.

Mrs. Kasabian will come to court daily until she completes her testimony. Ronald Hughes, the last of four defense lawyers, completed his cross-examination, and chief prosecutor Aaron Stovitz began questions in redirect examination.

UNDER GUARD

Stovitz said he would finish redirect by tonight, but the four defense attorneys then begin recross-examination, which is expected to take several days.

A prosecutor said that she will remain under guard as long as she is a witness, but once she leaves California the matter will be out of their hands.

Her attorney said she hopes to head east. Her mother in Milford has been caring for her children, Tanya, 2, and Angel, 5 months.

The attorney, Ronald Goldman, was asked if, in view of her experiences, she could ever really feel free.

BABY 'STONED'

"The fact that she has told the truth," he said, "that she gave herself up, and that she has done everything she could for the cause of truth and justice, will give her solace and a sense of freedom."

Hughes, trying his first case, concluded his cross-examination with questions on drug use and life in the Manson "family."

He asked if Mrs. Kasabian gave her baby daughter drugs. "No," she replied. "I believe she was stoned naturally. I believe that all children are."

BROAD GRIN

"Yes, possibly." Did he put out "a lot of vibes?" "Sure. He's doing it right now."

How Texans Voted On Education Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Following is the vote of Texas in the roll call Thursday by which the House overrode 289 to 114, President Nixon's veto of $4.4 billion appropriation for the Office of Education.

Democrats for: Brooks, Burleson, Cabell, Casey, de la Garza, Dowdy, Eckhardt, Fisher, Gonzalez, Kayzen, Mahon, Patman, Pickle, Poage, Purcell, Roberts, Teague, White, Young. Democrats against: None. Republicans against: Collins, Price.

Don't Blame Nixon For Obscenity Bit

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon was warned months ago he would be blamed for a proposal to liberalize the nation's obscenity laws if he didn't fire the Commission on Pornography staff and most of its members, a packet of letters has disclosed.

The letters from Charles H. Keating Jr., Nixon's lone commission appointee, were released Thursday by Rep. Robert N. C. Nix, D-Pa., after the White House disclaimed the commission and called it former President Lyndon B. Johnson's.

"Inasmuch as it is a presidential commission," said one of Keating's letters, "I am concerned not only that the pornographers will have taken a giant step toward winning the war but that your administration will receive the blame."

Keating, a Cincinnati attorney and founder of the Citizens for Decent Literature, Inc., urged Nixon 11 months ago to replace all but six of the 18 commission members. He said the new Nixon commission should then "promptly install a new staff."

Last month, Keating told Nixon on "the situation is critical" and that he had seen draft reports confirming the commission was headed for a recommendation to repeal all U.S. laws against pornography for adults.

The commission's draft report also recommends enactment of laws to protect children against exposure to pornography and bans its use in public displays or unsolicited mail advertisements.

The White House announced Tuesday the president would oppose repeal of pornography laws for adults. Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler stressed:

"This is not Nixon's commission. It was formed under a previous administration."

Keating's letters were turned over to Nix, chairman of a House subcommittee that blasted the draft report at a hearing Tuesday, by Keating's Citizens for Decent Literature.

"I do not think it is reasonable," Nix said in releasing the letters, "for the White House to wash its hands completely of the obscenity commission by merely blaming the whole mess on the previous administration."

Svetlana Basking In 'Just Housewife' Role

SPRING GREEN, Wis. (AP) — "What is this bra-burning business?" asks a bewildered Mrs. William Wesley Peters. "I don't understand this. I am a conservative, a convinced conservative. I think to be a wife is a good job to have. I don't agree with women that it's not enough."

Relaxed and tanned Svetlana Alliluyeva, daughter of Josef Stalin, has begun to settle without fuss into what she calls

"just the usual life of a housewife" in rural Spring Green. Wisconsin, and the lush, rolling countryside around her new home reminds her of Central Russia, she says.

The quiet, sturdy-looking woman who walked into the American embassy in New Delhi, India, over three years ago and asked for asylum in the United States is now the wife of William Wesley Peters, chief architect of the Frank Lloyd Wright Foundation. They were married April 7, just 20 days after they met at Talliesin West, the Wright Foundation's winter headquarters near Phoenix, Ariz.

She had been invited by Wright's widow, Olga, and his daughter, Iovanna, who were intrigued by Svetlana's book, "Twenty Letters To A Friend," an account of her life in Russia under her father. It was written in 1963 and published after she came to this country in 1967.

"I had been invited just for a two-week visit," she says, almost apologetically, "but things worked out differently."

The wedding was a simple Quaker ceremony, conducted by a Unitarian minister. After a trip to the Grand Canyon and the Rocky Mountains, the couple arrived here at Talliesin, headquarters for the architectural foundation, just two weeks ago.

"She got so sick of the mountains," Peters recalls, "that when we got to the lush, green landscape of Wisconsin—His wife finishes the sentence: 'I felt peace of mind.'"

Svetlana's second book, "Only One Year," told of her decision to flee Russia, her trip to the United States and her life in Princeton, N.J.

She insists she has no plans to do any more writing. "Two books were enough trouble," she says. "I am planning to do nothing except be a good wife to my husband. That is a full-time job."

She ventured into the village of Spring Green for the first time last week, to do some shopping, and was unrecognized. She could probably pass for a market-going housewife almost anywhere.

"Generally, I avoid interviews," she said, "because I think I am a private person. The wedding, of course, that was different. Then we wanted to let people know what took place. We had no reason to keep it secret."

The voice is a flexible instrument, giving forth low, winning tones on command. The command center, of course, is in your thoughts. In their character.

WINNING MANNERS To open a door on increased poise and popularity, send for my booklet, WINNING MANNERS. Topics included are: Introductions, Invitations, Table Manners, The Charming Hostess, You — The Guest, Dating Manners, Formal Dances, Travel Tips and Tipping, Small Points, like when to wear a hat or check your coat. For your copy, write to Mary Sue Miller in care of The Big Spring Herald, enclosing 25 cents in coin, and a long self-addressed stamped envelope.

You have only to listen — hear — the sound of your voice to detect its degree of charm, and that is tantamount to correcting unpleasant traits.

People flee a woman who speaks in loud strident tones for reasons other than the ear-splitting effect. Her voice, like all voices, indexes personality. You suspect her thoughts of having an equally strident quality. For certain, her manners are showing or she would not intrude her voice on fellow travelers.

To give her the benefit of the doubt, perhaps she is no taware of her irritating vocal characteristics. Many women do not realize that their voices are flawed. But when has ignorance become an excuse?

You have only to listen — hear — the sound of your voice to detect its degree of charm, and that is tantamount to correcting unpleasant traits.

Did you ever stop to think how an attractive voice opens doors that otherwise might be closed? The point is never better than when you travel and are exposed to strangers.

Away from familiar surroundings your ear is sensitive to new sounds. It tunes in and rates the unknown voices, almost without your being conscious of the process.

But how quickly you are joined to consciousness when your ear picks up the harsh and raucous voice of a strange woman. You try to tune her out or you try to escape from her vicinity. She's a loser in what might have been a pleasant encounter.

Bride-Elect Is Honoree At Shower

Miss Helena Wozencraft, bride-elect of Danny Nichols, was honored recently with a bridal gift shower in Pioneer Gas Flame Room. The couple will marry Tuesday in the First Presbyterian Church.

Hostesses were Mrs. R. C. Thomas, Mrs. Donnie Long, Mrs. Marion Newton Sr., Mrs. W. C. Fryar, Mrs. Shirley Fryar and Miss Corky Grantham.

Corsages of white carnations tied with blue ribbon were presented to the honoree, her mother, Mrs. C. M. Wozencraft, and her fiancé's mother, Mrs. J. P. (Chuck) Nichols Jr. Refreshments were served from a lace-covered table centered with an arrangement of white carnations and blue daisies.

Families Take Summer Trips

WESTBROOK (SC) — Mr. and Mrs. Doc Alvis visited her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Winifred Cunningham, and son in Wichita Falls. The Alvises also visited with the J. T. Wilsons in Abilene. Another houseguest of the Wilsons was Mrs. Mary Starr, Fort Worth.

Mrs. Wilson and Mrs. Starr are daughters of Mrs. Alvis.

Guests of the George Dawsons are their grandchildren Mark, Karen and Steve Dawson, children of the Weldon Dawsons of Midland.

The Quann Bryants have been vacationing at Lake Brownwood.

The J. D. Igleharts visited her brother-in-law and sister, the N. W. Stokes, former Westbrook residents, in Stephenville.

A houseguest of the Gerald Rollins is their niece, Miss Carol Stuvard of Stanton, a student at Sul Ross State University.

The Maxey Wares are visiting her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Weldon Ware, in Houston.

Herman Parsons of Snyder, formerly of Westbrook, was discharged recently from Root Memorial Hospital, Colorado City.

Wesley Class Donates To Fund

Susannah Wesley Class of the First United Methodist Church donated $25 to the high school Bible fund during the Thursday meeting in the Downtown Tea Room.

Mrs. J. L. Terry presided, and Mrs. Nell Hatch led the invocation. The devotion, "God's Guidance," was given by Mrs. W. D. McDonald and Mrs. W. A. Laswell.

Mrs. Fred Eakers told of her tour of the West and Northwest and gave each member a pine cone souvenir. The closing prayer was given by Mrs. Laswell.

Mrs. W. M. Gage Feted On Birthday

Members of the Sew and Chatter Club celebrated the 82nd birthday of Mrs. W. M. Gage during their meeting Wednesday.

Mrs. Marvin Sewell, 407 Washington, hostess, served refreshments from a polished table with a green runner centered with an arrangement of white daisies. Silver and china appointments were used. The next meeting will be Aug. 26 in the home of Mrs. H. V. Crocker, 1707 Benton.

Concert Soloist Slated To Sing Here Sunday

Mrs. Emmitt T. Caviness of Cleveland, Ohio, will be guest soloist Sunday at the 11 a.m. worship service at the First Baptist Church.

Mrs. Caviness, who has recently joined the staff of the Cleveland Institute of Music, is the former Miss Jimmie Lou Pitts, daughter of Mrs. R. J. Walker of Big Spring.

It was through the interest of townspeople, sparked by Mrs. George O'Brien, that the young singer was able to begin studies which eventually led to a notable career in music. Now a well-known concert soloist, choir director and teacher, Mrs. Caviness received Bachelors and Masters of Music Degrees at Westminster Choir College in Princeton, N.J. She now specializes in oratoria and recital singing.

Her concert engagements have taken her throughout the state of Texas as well as Illinois, Missouri, Ohio and New Jersey. Possessing unusual linguistic facility has enabled her to develop an extensive repertoire which includes works in German, French, Italian, English, Russian and Spanish.

In 1952, she was married to the Rev. Emmitt T. Caviness, and the couple has two children, Theophilus, 14, and Theodosia, 8. At present, Mrs. Caviness is also serving as director of the Sanctuary and Angel Choirs at Greater Abyssinian Baptist Church in Cleveland.

Mrs. Floyd Rice Conducts Study

WESTBROOK (SC) — Mrs. Floyd Rice led the study Tuesday for the Women's Missionary Union of First Baptist Church. The opening prayer and scriptures were given by Mrs. Altis Clemmer. Participation in the study were Mrs. Hoyt Roberts and Mrs. Homer Rice.

Plans were made for the "Christmas In August" contribution to the Mission Bautista Memorial in Phoenix, Ariz. Useful articles will be collected at the church for mailing by Aug. 26. Items such as clothing, baby clothes, dress fabric, school supplies, linens and toiletries are needed.

Farewell Luncheon Held For E. H. Boullioun

Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Boullioun Jr. were honored at a farewell luncheon held Thursday in the Blue Room of Cosden Country Club. The host couple was Mr. and Mrs. Paul Meek.

The Boulliouns, longtime local residents, will be moving to Homewood, Ill., near Chicago, where he will be plant manager of the Chicago Chemical Plant operated by Cosden Oil and Chemical Company. Boullioun has served as the company's assistant chief engineer in Big Spring.

The couple has been very active in community affairs, with Boullioun serving as head of the National Little League, vice president of the Teenage Baseball Association's Hi-Junior League and a former 15-year member of the Downtown Lion's Club. He has been a board member of the First United Methodist Church.

Mrs. Boullioun recently was presented a plaque from the Big Spring Chamber of Commerce for her active participation in the "PRIDE" project, involving property improvement, general clean-up and other beautification campaigns.

OES Holds Charter Ceremony

The charter was draped for the late Mrs. Francis Douglas Thursday by the Laura B. Hart Chapter 1019, Order of Eastern Star. Conducting the ceremony was Mrs. J. A. Wright, assisted by Mrs. Henry Brewer.

Mrs. L. H. Duncan was installed as "Ruth" by Mrs. Richard Mitchell and Mrs. Wright. Mrs. Wright conducted a balloting practice for members.

Introduced were two grand officers, Horace Jarrett, deputy council representative for the Veterans Administration Hospital Volunteer Service, and Steve Baker, member of the board of trustees. Guests at the meeting were Mrs. Orbin Daily, worthy matron of Big Spring Chapter 67, and Mrs. Charles McCauley.

Refreshments were served by Mr. and Mrs. George Glenn from a white lace-covered table centered with a yellow tulle swan on a bed of yellow rosebuds. The next meeting will be Aug. 27 with a salad supper honoring Masons and a program honoring Rob Morris, founder of the OES.

STOP SOAKING POTS AND PANS!

The New KitchenAid Dishwasher with exclusive SOAK CYCLE does your soaking automatically.

The messiest kitchen clean-up job has always been removing crusted-on foods from pots, pans and casseroles. And sometimes from dishes.

Until now, the KitchenAid Superba Model has a new exclusive Soak Cycle that automatically soaks and loosens encrusted foods. Then it washes, rinses and dries everything.

Wayland Yates Scholarship Plans Made

SAN ANGELO — Contribution pledges are now being accepted for the Wayland Yates Memorial Scholarship to help finance a freshman student at Angelo State University.

Mr. Yates, ASU news service director and journalism instructor and a former city editor of the Big Spring Herald, died July 3 from injuries received in a plane crash near Mathis Field.

A spokesman for the Yates Scholarship Committee said the organization's primary concern now is to determine if there is enough interest to establish the fund. Persons interested in contributing should contact the committee by mail at 3750 Arden Rd., Apt. 11, San Angelo, and either enclose a pledge or request that a pledge card be sent.

Mr. Yates was a magna cum laude graduate of Hardin-Simmons University in Abilene and had worked on the Abilene Reporter-News, the Wichita Falls Record-News and the San Angelo Standard-Times as well as the Big Spring Herald.

Marwitz Heads One Team In Member Drive

Charles Bell, chairman of the Big Spring Chamber of Commerce's 1970 membership drive announced today that Alton Marwitz, the second-leading salesman in the 1969 drive, will captain one of three teams competing in this year's campaign.

Marwitz, vice president and agriculture officer at the State National Bank, was chairman of the chamber's Agriculture Committee in 1969, the Agriculture Task Force in 1970, is a director of the Big Spring Jaycees and has held various other posts in several organizations.

Marwitz has lived in Big Spring seven years, coming here in 1963 after receiving his masters degree in agriculture economics at Texas A&M. He received a bachelors degree in agriculture education at A&M in 1961. Marwitz is a native of Hamilton County.

"I know that Alton will do a topnotch job," Bell said in making the announcement. "He has been successful in every other civic task he's undertaken, including the money-raising duties for the First Ball of Cotton award, so his team should be aggressive in this important drive."

The drive is set for Aug. 31 through Sept. 3 and the goal has been set at $15,000 in new funds for the chamber.

Released On Bail

Ponciano D. Lopez, 27, 406 NW 10th, was released from county jail Thursday on bond. He was arrested April 4 on charges of driving while intoxicated and robbery by assault. District Judge Ralph W. Caton had originally denied bond on the charges but later set bond at $1,000 on the driving while intoxicated charge and $3,500 on the robbery charge.

Tulsan Slain

APTON, Okla. (AP) — The body of a young Tulsa man found dead Thursday on the Will Rogers Turnpike near here was identified as John M. Leonard, a painting contractor.

He was apparently shot once through the forehead, authorities said.

His blood-stained, abandoned car was located about 10 miles from where his body was found.

State Hospital Budget Hike Is Discussed

Dr. James Kreimeyer met Wednesday in Abilene with government budget advisers and members of the Mental Health-Mental Retardation Board to discuss money requests and problems of the Big Spring State Hospital.

Dr. Kreimeyer, acting superintendent, explained the request for a $10,166,372 budget which asks an increase of $2,142,913 in the 1972 budget over the appropriation for 1971 and for an additional 274 employees.

Personnel needed, Dr. Kreimeyer said, include a clinical director, two psychiatrists, a physician and a clinical psychologist, as well as many others, ranging from dental technicians to janitors.

The hospital has also requested another registered pharmacist. "We have only one now," Kreimeyer said, "serving the hospital and outreach clinics." There are also requests for $10,000 for a processor and dryer for the X-ray lab.

JIMINY! CRICKETS

Are crickets becoming prolific around your house? Bug experts say crickets are at their peak of activity in the hottest summer months. Female crickets lay eggs depending on temperature and young crickets are most abundant in the heat of the summer.

August heat in Big Spring, no doubt, accounts for the appearance of hordes of the chirping insects.

Crickets are not said to be native to North America. They were imported during the 18th century into Canada and the United States. Since then they have spread throughout the country.

Crickets feed on plants and other bugs, but rarely on clothing, thus are harmless, but a nuisance from the standpoint of getting under foot.

Teen Night Tonight, But All Ages Are Welcome

Three Starlight Specials remain: Teen Night is tonight; Little Theatre Night is Saturday evening; and Sunday will be another starlight Gospel Sing. Each show begins at 8:30 in the Comanche Trail Park amphitheatre, and each show has some special entertainment to offer.

Although Teen Night is designed to satisfy the teenage taste for rock music, nobody will be checking identification and swingers 20 and older are not considered "over the hill." All will be welcome, and dancing will be permitted for the only time during the Specials.

Deejay Bill Mack will be the master of ceremonies introducing "Exit" (Odessa), "Bicycle" (Big Spring), the Robert Byrd Soul Group (Big Spring) and "The Elastic Fox" (Big Spring).

"Bicycle" will be giving their farewell performance, before leaving for Arlington to turn professional, and "Exit" also plans to be professional soon.

Saturday night, the Little Theatre of Big Spring, with the help of Bill Bradley's Big Spring High School Band will bring a different concept in "theatre" when they present "We Hold These Truths."

The program adapted and directed by Al Scott will highlight the words and music of great Americans, and will be presented "in concert" under the stars.

"The best way to explain the program," Scott said "is to take the ideas and ideals of Franklin D. Roosevelt, Patrick Henry, Douglas MacArthur and John F. Kennedy and punctuate them with music."

Scott added that if this analogy isn't clear, "Just come, expecting to see something different. We promise you an entertaining evening and a thrilling and inspiring experience."

With Scott will be Ken Carter, KBST radio news director, the Little Theatre's newest member, who has had extensive college dramatic experience.

A concession stand is open each night, and spectators are reminded that cold drinks and snow cones are on sale. Lt. Donald Flores has organized the concessions, which have been run by the American Business Women's Club, the PBX Club, the Republican Women's Club, and the Band Boosters.

Concession proceeds and gate admissions are going to the Library Aid Fund primed with about $200 raised by the Book Fair four weeks ago. The fund will go for microfilm readers and other modernizations after the library moves into the new building across from the court house.

IN SAN ANTONIO Diphtheria Reaches Epidemic Proportions

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — An epidemic of diphtheria was declared here Thursday as health officials confirmed the 18th case of the disease since August 1.

Dr. William Ross, director of the San Antonio Metropolitan Health District, said 48 cases of diphtheria have been reported in San Antonio since January, two cases resulting in the deaths of children.

Ross has beefed up the staffs at the downtown public health clinic in addition to opening three new immunization clinics. Calling the 18 reported cases an "alarming number," Dr. Marthelyn Green, head of the health district's communicable disease division, said: "We're sitting on a real powder keg when school starts."

Ross said his crew has immunized some 1,300 persons in the past two days with vaccine furnished by the State Health Department. State health officials said San Antonio is the only Texas city experiencing diphtheria problems.

The health director said he is asking that all pupils entering school be required to get diphtheria, tetanus, polio, and measles inoculations in addition to the usually required smallpox vaccine.

"An epidemic is any unusual occurrence of a disease within a period of time. So 1970 is an epidemic year," Ross said, noting that San Antonio had 98 cases of diphtheria in the previous 10 years.

May Call New Primary Vote

MARSHALL, Tex. (AP) — A meeting of the Harrison County Democratic Executive Committee today was to consider calling a new primary election for the county judge's seat.

An official canvass of votes

8-B Big Spring (Texas) Herald, Friday, Aug. 14, 1970

showed incumbent Jim Ammerman won the May 2 primary by 16 votes.

Dist. Judge John Furrh voided the results in July and ordered a new election.

Ammerman had appealed to the Texarkana Civil Appeals Court, asking that the election order be withheld until a final judgment is rendered in the election contest suit.

Jim Collins, Ammerman's opponent in the race, asked the appeals court to order an immediate election. He filed the election contest suit.

Opening lead: Ten of ♣.
By seizing the initiative at the crucial moment, West took a decisive step that was essential to achieve an upset of South's four heart contract.

South chose to treat his red suit holdings as equals and he opened the bidding with one heart. When North offered a single raise, South rebid three diamonds as a game try. Holding maximum values for his initial response, North accepted the invitation and proceeded to four hearts.

West opened the ten of clubs covered by the jack, queen and king. South cashed the ace of spades and the ace of clubs and then ruffed a club in dummy. The nine of hearts was led and passed when East played the three.

West was in with the king. There appeared little hope of defeating the contract unless the defense could cash some diamond tricks, so West switched to the three of diamonds. East put up the ace and continued with the queen. It is West's play at this point that determines the outcome of the deal.

If West lets East hold the second diamond trick, the latter cannot prevent the dummy from regaining the lead. If, for example, East switches to a spade, South can cash two high spades—discarding diamonds from his hand and then lead North's jack of hearts to repeat the trump finesse.

If East covers with the queen, declarer plays the ace and then ruffs out his last diamond with the eight of trumps. If East does not cover the jack of hearts, dummy retains the lead and cashes the jack of spades permitting South to discard his remaining diamond. In either case the defense is limited to two diamonds and one heart tricks.

West decided that unless he found his partner with only two diamonds, declarer was well on his way to victory. He therefore overtook the queen of diamonds with the king and led a third diamond. North ruffed with the jack but East overruffed with the queen for the setting trick.
