Veterans need jobs more than thanks

Skip the "thank you for your service." Let's talk about what veterans really need.

Veterans Day is today, and strangers who learn that I served seven years on active duty in the U.S. Army will inevitably thank me for my service. While some people believe that veterans deserve lifelong gratitude for their role protecting our country, more than a few of us find it annoying; an empty platitude that civilians use to absolve themselves from asking what exactly we sacrificed, or what we truly need now.

What post-9/11 veterans need are good jobs, with good benefits. They need employers who don't thoughtlessly cut-and-paste job prerequisites that favor someone who spent four years partying at a state university over a vet who was waking up at 6 a.m. and wearing a uniform during 60-hour workweeks, except for when they were in combat.

That's what vets said they need in a poll by iCIMS Hiring Insights, a labor market research firm.

More than 3.6 million Americans have completed military service since 2001, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics. These men and women have an unemployment rate of 5.8 percent, about a point higher than the rest of the country.

Most Americans may hail them as heroes, but nearly three-quarters of post-9/11 vets believe their military experience hurts them because hiring managers don't understand or appreciate what they did in the military.

Another 37 percent believe hiring managers devalue their military experience, and 36 percent believe job postings often require more specialized experience than they have for jobs they know they can do.

"The entry into the workforce following military service is really not a great experience for these vets," said Susan Vitale, chief marketing officer and workplace

HUCKABEE'S HOPE FOR US

James Durbin/Reporter-Telegram

Hope is the message of the night at annual fundraiser

By Stewart Doreen

■ COMMENTARY

On Thursday night, a man from Hope delivered a message of hope for those attending the Life Center's 22nd Fall Fundraiser.

Former Arkansas Gov. Mike Huckabee stated the need for enforcement of federal law currently in place to protect all life — specifically the unborn.

He cited the 14th amendment, which says no state shall "deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws."

Huckabee said science already makes the case for the life movement and that the estimated 1,100 in attendance need to tell their representatives to recognize and respect the law and science. He even called for a human life amendment to the Constitution similar to the one in Arkansas, which he says protects human life from the time of conception.

But The Life Center's fundraiser wasn't about the politics as much as the "opportunity" — as The Rev. Roy Smith said in an introductory prayer — in front of the community and the nation.

Huckabee described that opportunity as the respect for life that is not a "Catholic thing or evangelical thing" but a "human civilization thing."

He stated that around 1 million lives were aborted — a number confirmed by statistics from the National Right to Life Educational Foundation.

The man from Hope, Arkansas, called for a society that saw similar value in a person with Down syndrome and the football team captain.

He credited The Life Center for its work in "saving" 610 lives between September 2015 and September 2016 and was critical of a media and society that turned refused to see such work. If 600 people died in an event, can you imagine the headline, he asked.

Statistics provided Thursday night also showed The Life Center was involved:

- in teaching sexual integrity programs to 28,662 students in grades 4 through 12. From September 2015 to September 2016, pregnancy rates among Midland ISD students dropped by 57 percent, according to The Life Center's statistics;
- in administering $250 sonograms for

Streak of falling sales tax collections now at 21 months

■ Double-digit drops reported in 15 straight months

By Stewart Doreen
sdoreen@mrt.com

The number of consecutive months the city of Midland has reported sales tax decreases is approaching 24.

The city reported Thursday that the sales tax collection for November dropped 16.74 percent this month — a number that extends two lengthy streaks.

First, the city has now received less money than the same month during the previous year — in this case, November 2015 — for 21 straight months.

Second, those losses have been double-digit percentage-wise for the past 15 months. That means — in the case of this month — that there have been consecutive Novembers when the drops have been 10 percent or more. In November of 2014, the city collected $4,402,982. Last November, that collection was $3,695,121 (a drop of 16.08 percent). This year, that number is $3,076,676 (a

Major Baylor donor wants Briles' 'honor restored'

By Jim Vertuno
Associated Press

WACO — Billionaire businessman Drayton McLane, whose name adorns the Baylor University football stadium, said Thursday he wants to see fired football coach Art Briles' honor restored and any evidence that led to his dismissal publicly released by the school's board of regents.

McLane and a group of influential alumni and donors called "Bears for Leadership Reform" met across the Brazos River from McLane Stadium in Waco to demand more transparency from school regents, including the release of what was uncovered by an investigation into how the school handled sexual assaults.

The group insisted its goal isn't to bring back Briles or focus on the football program, but to remove a cloak of secrecy surrounding board meetings, the investigation and its findings.

Speaking on his own, McLane stopped short of calling for Briles' return, but defended his integrity.

"The Baylor family and the public needs to know the truth," McLane said. "Art and the other people involved in this need for the facts to come out." McLane also insisted he's been told nothing and been shown none of the evidence despite his position as a non-voting regent emeritus.

Regents released some results from the investigation by the law firm Pepper Hamilton earlier this year that found the school for years mishandled reports of sexual assault, and that Briles' football program acted as if it was "above the rules."

The probe led to Briles' dismissal, the resignation of former athletic director Ian McCaw and the demotion of school president Ken Starr, who later resigned.

Baylor is facing federal lawsuits from more than a dozen women, and a federal investigation by the Office of Civil Rights at the Department of Education. The demands and sharp criticism of school leadership from influential donors and alumni is the strongest sign yet of the behind-the-scenes battles at Baylor.

Briles' assistant coaches, including son Kendal Briles, released a statement last week defending Briles. Fans lined up to buy black T-shirts with his initials before Baylor's home game against TCU last week, and a similar banner also flew from one of stadium's luxury suites.

The group on Thursday demanded Baylor regents hold open meetings, publish agendas and minutes, and discuss decisions publicly. And it wants Baylor to disclose what the university has spent on settlements and the pending lawsuits. It also wants a voice in selecting a new president.

"Baylor University has no place in scandalous, tabloid news," former regent Emily Tinsley said. "Power struggles and secrecy can destroy any family."

Houston attorney John Eddie Williams suggested some regents should be forced out. The board, however, is appointed by its own members.

"There's some good people on that board, but there has been some bad decisions," Williams said. "At some point, you've got to clean house."

The group noted that Pepper Hamilton recommended reforms at the board level, including training on conflicts of interest and protocols for interaction with administrators and athletics. The group said it wants to know what the investigation found to prompt those recommendations.

Baylor officials did not attend Thursday's meeting but regents Chairman Ron Murff released a lengthy statement in which he noted that "emotions are running high."

Charlie Glenn Woods

Charlie Glenn Woods was born March 16, 1937 in Caps, Texas, to Sam and Lonie Woods. He died Tuesday, November 8, 2016 at Manor Park in Midland, Texas, after a lengthy hospital stay and a blessedly short time in a nursing facility. He was preceded in death by his parents and siblings Warren B. Woods, Bonita Woods Adams, and Geraldine Woods Thornton.

Glenn was raised in Abilene, Texas. He attended and graduated from Abilene High where he was a member of the famed Abilene Eagle Team of the Century. Glenn credited football for his education, his discipline, and the many opportunities he was granted throughout his life. After graduating from Texas Tech, Glenn coached football at McAllen and later at Midland Lee High School. He served the youth of Midland for 40 years as a coach, teacher, assistant principal counselor, and Director of Counseling for Midland ISD.

Glenn leaves behind his wife of 49 years and 11 months, Peggy Ray Woods. Peggy also taught for Midland ISD until her retirement, and between the two of them it is hard to meet anyone from Midland they have not helped in some way. Glenn was a member of First United Methodist Church and taught the Partners class for many years. Two of his favorite pastimes were listening to gospel music and singing bass along with his treasured hymns. Glenn also leaves behind his sister and brother-in-law Nelda and Jerry Church; nieces Crystal Rolison, Janet Johnson, Marva Cagle and Kara Faith; nephew Ted Woods; and great-nephew Will Rolison. He passes on a legacy of caring and love for generations of students who passed through the Midland school system.

Glenn loved his God, his family, and Texas high school football. He had many favorite bible verses, but one that can be associated with his life is found in Isaiah 40:31: "but those who hope in the Lord will renew their strength. They will soar on wings like eagles; they will run and not grow weary, they will walk and not be faint." As much as we miss him, we know that he is soaring full of joy and free from pain.

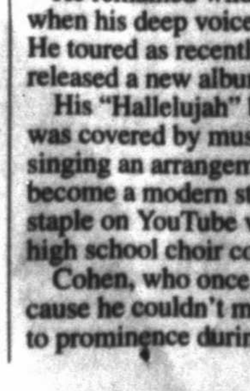
Singer-songwriter and poet Leonard Cohen dies

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Leonard Cohen, the baritone-voiced Canadian singer-songwriter who seamlessly blended spirituality and sexuality in hits like "Hallelujah," "Suzanne" and "Bird on a Wire," has died at age 82.



Cohen

Cohen's label confirmed a statement on his Facebook page Thursday that he had died, and a memorial will take place in Los Angeles at a later date.

Cohen, also renowned as a poet, novelist and aspiring Zen monk, blended folk music with a darker, sexual edge that won him fans around the world and among fellow musicians like Bob Dylan and R.E.M.

He remained wildly popular into his 80s, when his deep voice plunged to gravelly depths. He toured as recently as earlier this year and released a new album just last month.

His "Hallelujah" became a cult hit when it was covered by musician Jeff Buckley in 1994, singing an arrangement by John Cale, and has become a modern standard since, an unending staple on YouTube videos, reality shows and high school choir concerts.

Cohen, who once said he got into music because he couldn't make a living as a poet, rose to prominence during the folk music revival of the 1960s. During those years, he traveled the folk circuit with the likes of Bob Dylan, Joni Mitchell, Joan Baez and others as they were moving popular music away from a reliance on lightweight pop lyrics to songs that contained deeply personal meanings.

His contemporary Kris Kristofferson once said that he wanted the opening lines to Cohen's "Bird on a Wire," on his tombstone.

They would be a perfect epitaph for Cohen himself: "Like a bird on a wire, like a drunk in a midnight choir, I have tried in my way to be free."

The Montreal-born Cohen never seemed quite as comfortable on stage, however, and he chalked it up in part to being the old man among the group. "I was at least 10 years older than the rest of them," he told Magazine, a supplement to the Spanish newspaper El Mundo, in 2001.

Judy Collins, who had a hit with Cohen's song "Suzanne," once recalled he was so shy that he quit halfway through his first public performance of it and she had to coax him back onstage.

Like Dylan, his voice lacked polish but rang with emotion, and as he aged its gravelly bass tone took on more power. In 1992, he won the Juno Award for vocalist of the year — the Canadian equivalent of a Grammy. While he never won a Grammy, Cohen received numerous other honors, including being named a companion of the Order of Canada in 1991, his native country's highest civilian honor. In 2016, Dylan told The New Yorker that Cohen's best work was "deep and truthful, multidimensional and surprisingly melodic."

"When people talk about Leonard, they fail to mention his melodies, which to me, along with his lyrics, are his greatest genius," Dylan said. "Even the counterpoint lines — they give a celestial character and melodic lift to every one of his songs. As far as I know, no one else comes close to this in modern music."

He was inducted into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame in 2008, telling the audience: "This is a very unlikely occasion for me. It is not a distinction that I coveted or even dared dream about."

In songs such as "Sisters of Mercy," Cohen melded romantic imagery with minimal orchestration to produce music that rang with the authenticity of traditional folk songs. Many had a dark mood, featuring black humor or sardonic social commentary.

"Destroy another fetus now. We don't like children anyhow," was one of the lines from his song "The Future."

Once asked if he was a pessimist, he responded with typical dark humor.

"I don't consider myself a pessimist at all,' he told the London Daily Telegraph in 1993. "I think of a pessimist as someone who is waiting for it to rain. And I feel completely soaked to the skin."

Regulators reject railroads' request to delay new drug testing rule

By Ashley Hasley III
Washington Post

Federal regulators, faced with soaring drug use among railroad workers, have rejected an industry request to postpone required testing for the more than 36,000 employees who maintain rail lines.

"The country is in the throes of a devastating substance abuse crisis," said Sarah Feinberg, who heads the Federal Railroad Administration (FRA). "The rail industry and its workforce are not immune from this crisis — we know that in fact many are suffering."

Feinberg on Thursday rejected a petition to extend by one year a drug and alcohol testing requirement set to take effect in June.

"Delaying track workers from being included in the group of railroad employees tested for drugs and alcohol would delay the important work of preventing injuries and fatalities," Feinberg said.

The American Association of Railroads (AAR), which represents freight railroads, signed the petition, but later withdrew its objection.

"Freight railroads in the country already have drug and alcohol testing programs in place for employees, support the rule and can meet the 2017 deadline for track workers, this is a priority for the industry," AAR spokesman Ed Greenberg said.

Nearly 8 percent of workers involved in rail accidents this year tested positive for drug use, including marijuana, cocaine, ecstasy, benzodiazepine, OxyContin and morphine, according to internal federal documents obtained by The Washington Post in September.

That number was the highest since the FRA began keeping records in 1987 and three times higher than it was 10 years ago.

Overall, the number of engineers, train crew and dispatchers who tested positive for drug use in random tests rose by 43 percent last year. After rail accidents in 2014, no one tested positive for drugs, and just two people did last year.

Railroad drug testing has been limited to about 120,000 "safety sensitive" workers whose performance puts lives at risk. The train-repair workers and about 70 percent of the more than 36,000 workers who maintain track beds and railroad right-of-ways are not required to undergo the same testing.

The U.S. Department of Transportation drug-tests about 7 million people who hold commercial driver's licenses, as well as railroad and transit workers, and the U.S. Coast Guard. In the past five years, the DOT tests have shown sharp increases in use of amphetamines and natural opiates.

The popularity of illegal prescription drugs and heroin has increased dramatically in the U.S. in recent years. A record 28,647 people died from heroin and prescription opioid use in 2014, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. Overall, 47,055 people died from drug overdoses in 2014, the CDC said.

The FRA and the railroads it regulates have been in the forefront of federal drug testing since 1987, when an Amtrak train collided with three Conrail freight locomotives linked together just north of Baltimore.

The engineer and 15 others on the Amtrak train were killed; 174 other people on the trains were injured.

Investigators determined that the engineer of the Conrail train and his brakeman had shared a marijuana joint as they made their way from the rail yard. The engineer, Ricky Lynn Gates, was convicted on state and federal charges and served four years in prison. In 1993, he told the Baltimore Sun that smoking marijuana was the cause of the crash and that it was not the first time he had done it on the job.

Baby's big hair gets lots of notice

Associated Press

ELTON, La. — A southwest Louisiana woman says her 3-month-old daughter has such a full head of hair that strangers stop to admire it, and she made the baby a Halloween troll costume.

But Alisha John said she and her husband, Dakota, don't have long to play with baby Areea Sue Oiba John's hair. That's because she's a Coushatta Indian, and the tribe shaves babies' heads as part of a blessing ceremony when they're 4 months old.

She told the American Press in Lake Charles that her older children — a 3-year-old girl, and boys aged 4 and 7 — also were born with a lot of hair. But nothing like Areea's, whose blessing ceremony will be held on Nov. 25.

Weather forecast: La Nina is here, may last through winter

By Alicia Chang

Irrigation pipes sit along a dry irrigation canal May 18, 2015, on a field near Stockton, Calif. Government weather forecasters said Thursday that La Nina has arrived and may last through the winter. La Nina usually means wetter winters in the northern U.S. and drier conditions in the southern parts including drought-stricken California.

LOS ANGELES — La Nina has arrived and could hang around through winter, government weather forecasters said Thursday.

La Nina, the flip side of El Nino, is the periodic cooling of the central Pacific Ocean that affects weather patterns around the globe. Predictions called for fleeting La Nina conditions that could last through February.

It's "anticipated to be a weak, short-lived event," said Mike Halpert of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's Climate Prediction Center.

In the United States, the arrival of La Nina usually brings wetter winters to the northern Rockies, Pacific Northwest and Ohio Valley and warmer, drier conditions to southern parts.

There's a 55 percent chance La Nina will stick around through winter, causing the drought to persist in Southern California and regions in the Southeast and southern Plains to experience dry conditions, NOAA said.

After five years of withering drought that forced mandatory water conservation, parts of California have recovered thanks to October storms that doused the northern part of the state. Three-quarters of California remain in drought, mostly in the central agricultural belt and Southern California.

The drought cost the state's economy $2.7 billion in 2015 alone, according to a recent study by the University of California, Davis.

NOAA planned to release a winter forecast update next week. Last month, the agency predicted a wet winter in the northern Rockies, Great Lakes region, Hawaii and western Alaska. Warmer and drier than normal conditions were predicted for the South while it was a tossup for the middle section of the country.

expert at iCIMS. "There is a disconnect, and veterans are not feeling necessarily valued after their service when it comes to employment."

Consider for a moment how many jobs require a bachelor's degree as a minimum requirement. In many cases, employers will accept almost any degree if the job they are filling does not require a specific certification. Employers think the bachelor's degree will give them candidates with critical thinking skills.

That's bad news for the 25-year-old veteran, who joined the service when he or she was 18 and doesn't have a degree. That employer's focus on a bachelor's degree means it will miss the fact that the vet managed a $1 million program budget and supervised 15 troops as a noncommissioned officer, probably in a high-stress situation that required sound judgment.

Isn't that better than a college degree and two years of experience in an entry-level management job? I think so, but the veteran I just described was me in 1990. I've since earned a degree, and I can attest that what I learned in the military is far more valuable than what I learned in college.

"Many employers, when they are crafting a job description, and describing who would be perfect in whatever role it might be, don't necessarily place enough stock in the right things," Vitale confirmed. "Other things that might really make a difference, they don't place enough value on."

The military and the vets themselves share some of the blame. There are few corporations that will invest that much authority in a young person, but the military does it because most troops retire in their early 40s.

Vets also acknowledge they are not very good at explaining how their skills apply to a civilian business. Twenty-eight percent say they don't know how to sell themselves to a civilian hiring manager, and 47 percent say they understate or leave out their military experience for fear it might hurt their chances.

While I was with the Associated Press, I routinely embedded with U.S. troops in Iraq and spent about two years on the front lines with truly remarkable young people. I am still friends with many of the soldiers I wrote about between 2003 and 2008, and adjusting to civilian life has not been easy for them.

Many of them went to work for defense contractors or government, both of which are very good with vets. Others have found success with major corporations with paramilitary, hierarchical structures. Others became teachers and police officers, and one became a sommelier.

All of us have lost too many comrades to suicide, though, and there are some who still painfully struggle to find their place in civil society.

A good job with a supportive employer makes all of the difference. And there are state and federal programs that provide tax credits to employers willing to make the extra effort to employ vets who are disabled or have suffered from chronic unemployment.

All employers should know the military trains people to focus on a mission, solve problems, adapt to change and work as a team, to include stepping up as a leader when needed. These are also the qualities that employers say they need.

The next time your company advertises an opening, make sure the job posting lists the skills that are truly desired and drop the pro-forma prerequisites that could screen out a capable veteran.

Then take the time to understand what a veteran can offer. Talk through what they did and how they did it.

There is an enormous amount of untapped potential out there. Don't let it go to waste.

George P. Bush says name isn't liability after Trump's win

By Will Weissert
Associated Press

AUSTIN — The only member of the Bush family currently holding elected office isn't worried about his political future being threatened by a rejection of dynasty politics that may have helped doom Hillary Clinton's presidential campaign.

Texas Land Commissioner George P. Bush campaigned for Donald Trump as chairman of his state Republican Party's victory committee, despite his family's well-publicized shunning of the billionaire businessman. Bush says Trump's success repudiating politics-as-usual won't make it harder for a member of one of America's best-known political families to succeed in upcoming elections.

"I think, through my activities serving as victory chair and further positions that I took, it further shows that I'm my own man," Bush said in a phone interview Thursday. "My family understands that more than anybody."

Some voters saw Clinton as too politically entrenched as a former secretary of state, senator and first lady. Bush agreed that Trump "has disrupted American politics" but said people "vote based on the individual."

Bush plans to seek re-election in 2018 as land commissioner, which manages Texas' 13 million acres of public lands and mineral rights for oil and natural gas exploration.

Bush's father, former Florida Gov. Jeb Bush, was among the crowded Republican presidential primary field crushed by Trump. George P. Bush initially hesitated to embrace Trump, but eventually traveled Texas praising him while helping raise $1.5 million for the state Republican Party.

His family never came around, though. Bush's uncle, former President George W. Bush, didn't cast a presidential vote. His grandfather, George H.W. Bush, won't discuss his vote.

But on Wednesday, both former presidents congratulated Trump by phone and Jeb Bush did via Twitter.

A fluent Spanish speaker whose mother is from Mexico, George P. Bush said Trump's non-politically correct rhetoric won't make Republican values a tougher sell for Hispanics. He noted that Eva Guzman, a Hispanic Republican justice on Texas' Supreme Court, got more votes in the state Tuesday than any candidate including Trump.

Trump beat Clinton by 9 percentage points in Texas, the first time a Republican hasn't coasted to double-digit victory statewide since 2000. But Bush noted that Trump received 4.6 million-plus votes statewide, more than any Republican presidential nominee since at least 1992.

Texas had a record 15.1 million people registered and a record 8.8 million cast ballots, but that's still only about 43 percent of all eligible voters statewide.

Bush said he hadn't spoken with any relatives since Election Day but would likely see them during the holidays.

"I respect their decision," he said. "They've earned the right to have their opinion, and I have mine."

drop of 16.74 percent). A person has to go back to November 2011 to find a lower collection in a month of November.

Still, the drop of a more than $1.2 million since November 2014 is creating pain for the city, which just went through a budget process impacted by the lower sales collected last year. The drop of $8.6 million, the largest one-year decline in its history, forced the city to cut back, including on the money budgeted to repair roads.

City of Midland Finance Director Pam Simecka said the problem now is that the city is now "double dipping," or posting decreases in the same month during consecutive years. She said the indicators the city is using show no improvements but that city officials hope collections will improve by the spring.

So far this fiscal year, the sales tax collection is down 16.05 percent. The city in its budget for fiscal year 2017 expected the sales tax collection to be flat.

- and in mentoring 3,005 women and 577 men, who requested services from The Life Center's four centers in Midland, Odessa, Big Spring and Andrews.

"What would happen if The Life Center was not there?" Huckabee asked.

Thursday's event was more than listening to a two-time candidate for the Republican Party's nomination for president. It was more than the statistics or steak dinner. Those who spoke were direct in their hope that more lives could be saved. The event is a fundraiser, annually one of the more successful ones in Midland.

And, according to Huckabee, that money translates into lives saved. And those lives, he said, might belong to a child one might see at the market or on a Little League field years from now.

Six hundred and ten lives saved, he repeated.

"If you could save a human life, would you do it?" Huckabee asked.

Rubik's Cube cracked as EU court strips away its trademark

By Stephanie Bodoni
Bloomberg

You might not be able to solve Rubik's Cube, but now you can make one.

The multicolored puzzle that's kept small and big hands busy since the 1970s lost the final round in a fight to hold on to a European Union trademark protection.

EU trademark law seeks to prevent a company getting "a monopoly on technical solutions or functional characteristics of a product," the EU Court of Justice ruled in Luxembourg on Thursday.

The legal battle in Europe has seen almost as many twists and turns as the iconic cube. A lower European court two years ago backed the puzzle's makers by deciding that the shape's distinctive surface with black lines and the grid structure on each surface justified the right to a trademark valid across the 28-nation EU.

An adviser to the higher court in a non-binding opinion in May disagreed, saying EU judges should back the argument by German toy maker Simba Toys GmbH that the protection isn't justified because the cube's shape performs a purely technical function.

Seven Towns, a U.K. company that manages the intellectual property rights for Rubik's cube, didn't immediately respond to a request for comment.

The ruling isn't a surprise, said Geert Glas, a lawyer at Allen & Overy LLP in Brussels, who specializes in intellectual property cases.

The EU court "has become very wary of trademarks which it fears could become competitive obstacles for others," he said.

The EU's IP office, which will now have to weigh adopting a new decision will be bound by the latest ruling. "I'm afraid it's game over for the owners of the Rubik's Cube," he said.

Hungarian inventor Erno Rubik in 1974 created a solid cube with colored stickers that twisted and turned without falling apart. It was "an object that was not supposed to be possible," says the official Rubik's website. Rubik himself took one month to work out the solution. There are "42 quintillion possibilities, but only one correct solution" so that all sides are aligned in an evenly colored manner, according to the website.

"The essential characteristics of the cubic shape in issue must be assessed in the light of the technical function" of the product, the EU court said in Thursday's ruling.

The new Republican majority can succeed

■ Time for Republicans to craft a governing agenda that actually alters the lives and prospects for the working class

CHARLES KRAUTHAMMER

Washington Post Writers Group

Donald Trump won fair and square and, as Hillary Clinton said in her concession speech, is owed an open mind and a chance to lead. It is therefore incumbent upon conservatives (like me) who have been highly critical of Trump to think through how to make a success of the coming years of Republican rule.

It begins by recognizing Trump's remarkable political instincts. As Paul Ryan noted in his morning-after olive-branch news conference, Trump heard "a voice out in this country that no one else heard." Trump spoke to and for a working class squeezed and ruined by rapid technological and economic transformation.

One of the principal tasks for the now-dominant GOP is to craft a governing agenda that actually alters their lives and prospects. In the end, it was this constituency of those left behind by the new globalized digital economy that delivered the presidency to Trump.

Nonetheless, this election was not just about the social/economic divide. It was also about the ideological divide between left and right. The most overlooked factor in the election is the continuing deep and widespread dissatisfaction with Obamaism.

It tends to be overlooked because President Obama remains personally popular (56 percent in the latest Gallup). As a charismatic campaigner, whenever his name is on the ballot, he wins. But when it's not — 2010, 2014, now 2016 — the Democrats get shellacked.

The reason is no mystery. The problem was never with Obama himself, but with his policies. Before each of those losing elections Obama would campaign saying that his name wasn't on the ballot but his policies — and now his legacy — were. The voters made clear what they thought of his policies and legacy.

Simply put, from the beginning of his presidency, Obama overreached ideologically, most spectacularly with his signature legislative achievement — Obamacare. The spike in Obamacare premiums and deductibles just two weeks before Tuesday's election proved a particularly damaging reminder of what Obamaism had wrought.

Hence the other principal task for the now dominant GOP: Undo Obamaism. Begin with canceling Obama's executive orders on everything from immigration to climate change. Then overturn his more elaborate legislative adventures into overweening liberalism, starting, of course, with Obamacare.

The promise of a Trump presidency is that, if it can successfully work with a Republican Congress, it could turn Obamaism into a historical parenthesis. Republicans would then have a chance to enact the Reaganite agenda that has been incubating while in exile from the White House.

For years, Washington gridlock has been attributed to GOP obstructionism. On the contrary, serious legislation, such as Medicare reform passed by the GOP House, was either strangled in the Senate by Democratic leader Harry Reid or died by veto on President Obama's desk.

Beyond the undoing, there's now the prospect of doing. Serious border enforcement, including a wall, for example. That's not only a good in itself, it would offer leverage in a grand bargain that would include eventual legalization of resident illegal immigrants, an idea supported (according to the exit polls) by more than seven in 10 voters.

Another given is a reshaping of the currently rudderless Supreme Court with the nomination of a conservative justice to replace the late Antonin Scalia.

During the campaign, Trump's populism often clashed with traditional Reaganism. The key to GOP success is to try to achieve an accommodation, if not a fusion. Two agendas: one ideological, one socioeconomic. They both need to be addressed. Onto the Reaganite core of smaller government and strict constitutionalism must be added a serious concern for the grievances of the constituency that animated the Trump insurgency, the long-suffering, long-neglected working class.

If Reaganite conservatives want to head off wrongheaded solutions — such as massive tariffs, mercantilist economics and trade wars — they must be prepared to accept such measures as federal wage subsidies and targeted restraints on trade. This involves giving up a measure of economic efficiency. But the purpose is to achieve a measure of social peace and restore dignity and security to a stressed and sliding working class. Some might even call it compassionate conservatism.

The key to success for a Trump presidency is for the Reaganite and populist elements in the party to be willing to advance each other's goals even at the cost of ideological purity. This will require far-reaching negotiations between a Trump White House and a GOP Congress. The Republicans have gained control of all the political branches. They have the means to deliver. They now have to show that they can.

OUR VIEW

Trump amazes like few others during political upset of the century

We are in the midst of the "how did it happen" and "what it means" part of the election process.

We are reading all the theories, reasons and expectations for the Donald Trump win and what America can expect moving forward.

On Sunday, we will provide our take on what happened, but we hope to spend more time on the moving-forward part.

In short, this is a huge opportunity for conservatives to move America back to a center-right nation. We hope that opportunity isn't sabotaged because of overreach.

As far as today goes, here are few things we have been thinking about since the political upset of the new century.

■ We think about today and can't help shake our heads at how much attention we gave Iowa back at the beginning of the year. Do you remember who won in Iowa? (Ted Cruz and Hillary Clinton did.) Still, it's hard for us to think about what all the fuss was about leading up to that caucus. The election process is flawed is because of the attention given to Iowa and New Hampshire, two elections that a year later are hard to remember (Donald Trump and Bernie Sanders won their primaries in New Hampshire).

■ All elections are different, and the electoral process really makes the popular vote not that important. But it is still interesting that the 59,821,874 votes that the Associated Press reports Donald Trump had as of Thursday afternoon is less than fellow Republicans John McCain had in 2008 (more than 59,948,000) and Mitt Romney had in 2012 (more than 60,934,000), according to the Roper Center for Public Research.

■ We were amazed at Trump's wins in Wisconsin, Michigan, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Florida. He deserves great credit for doing what Republicans haven't done in decades. But it is worth nothing that those states do have Republican governors. Ohio, Florida, Wisconsin and Pennsylvania also re-elected Republican senators Tuesday.

■ USA Today reported that exit polling showed 81 percent of white evangelical voters favored Trump (compared to 16 percent for Clinton). That was better than George W. Bush performed in 2004 (78-21 percent margin) in 2004. Selecting Indiana Gov. Mike Pence and the decision of Republican leaders in the Senate not to fill the Supreme Court vacancy surely didn't hurt there.

■ The streak of Democratic Party candidates for president receiving 25 percent or less in Midland County continues. Hillary Clinton collected 20.29 percent of the vote. The streak goes back to at least 1992.

■ A Democrat still hasn't won statewide in Texas since 1994. A Democratic presidential candidate hasn't captured Texas since 1976 (Jimmy Carter).

■ The person collecting the most votes inside Midland County was Judge George D. "Jody" Gilles, who ran unopposed in the 142nd District race. He collected 40,849 to edge out state Rep. Tom Craddick (40,823).

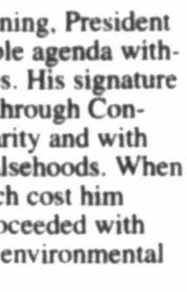
Election night rewrites Obama's legacy

■ Obama's coalition didn't show up, and we know how transformational the president really was



RICH LOWRY

King Features Syndicate

In the course of about six hours, what was supposed to be a Republican existential crisis turned into a Republican wave.

What was supposed to be a victory of the coalition of the ascendant became a dispiriting rout of the coalition that didn't show up.

What was supposed to be the crowning political achievement of Barack Obama's presidency set the predicate for the unraveling of his legacy.

Since before he was elected president, Obama put down as a marker the transformational example of Ronald Reagan. That entailed moving the political center of gravity of the country in his direction; winning re-election; and cementing his standing by securing a de facto third term for a Democratic successor.

As of 6 p.m. CST Tuesday, the Reagan standard looked to be in Obama's grasp. His approval rating stood above 50 percent. He campaigned vigorously, and apparently effectively, in front of adoring crowds. The last round of public polling and the exit polls on Election Day showed Hillary Clinton getting over the top, and her victory seemed likely to precipitate an ugly, self-destructive Republican civil war.

By the wee hours of Wednesday, this scenario turned to ashes, and Obama could only survey the wreckage of the Democratic Party and, by extension, his highest ambition.

Obama is a once-in-a-generation political athlete who will always be remembered as the nation's first African-American president. But a goodly portion of what he has labored for over two terms could now wash out with the political tide.

His party has been devastated beneath him. It began in 2010, when Republicans took the House by winning 63 seats, the biggest pickup since 1948, and six seats in the Senate. In 2014, Republicans gained another 13 House seats and took control of the Senate. Democrats lost more than 900 state legislative seats in this period.

This was chalked up to the midterm effect, the product of a smaller, more Republican-leaning electorate in nonpresidential years. Well, on Tuesday night, the GOP won Senate races in blue states. It minimized losses in the House. It picked up governorships and made striking gains in state legislatures.

All in a presidential year. The GOP controls the presidency, the U.S. Senate and House, and roughly two-thirds of the country's governorships and state legislatures. The Democrats are now, judging by the scorecard of major offices, the nation's minority party.

What happened? From the beginning, President Obama pushed the leftmost plausible agenda without regard to political consequences. His signature initiative, Obamacare, was forced through Congress despite its manifest unpopularity and with the crucial assistance of obvious falsehoods. When Obama's initial legislative overreach cost him his congressional majorities, he proceeded with executive overreach, especially on environmental regulation and immigration.

Having made no real effort at party-building and after a series of disastrous midterms where his campaigning basically saved no one, he had no protege available to try to win his third term. He had to reach back to his vanquished rival, Hillary Clinton, whose inadequacies he had exposed in the 2008 primaries and who was almost comically ill-suited to energize the Obama coalition.

Those voters were considered Obama's enduring political contribution — an ever-growing bloc of minorities, millennials and the college-educated who would constitute an ideological ratchet, turning the country's politics steadily to the left.

In its first big post-Obama test, the coalition failed. Now many of the president's substantive achievements are under threat, especially Obamacare, which is in a semicrisis, and his vast number of unilateral actions. President Trump will soon pick up his own pen and phone.

President Obama's party is lurching toward a bloodletting after losing to perhaps the least likely presidential candidate in all of American history.

Nothing is permanent in politics, and victories often carry the seeds of future defeats. But elections are always clarifying. We now know that President Obama's larger project has come a cropper. He is no Ronald Reagan, not even close.

President Barack Obama shakes hands with President-elect Donald Trump in the Oval Office of the White House in Washington on Thursday

Mr. Trump comes to Washington: Triumphant tour for the victor

By Julie Pace
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President-elect Donald Trump took a triumphant tour of the nation's capital Thursday, holding a cordial White House meeting with President Barack Obama, sketching out priorities with Republican congressional leaders and taking in the majestic view from where he'll be sworn in to office.

Trump's meeting with Obama spanned 90 minutes, longer than originally scheduled. Obama said he was "encouraged" by Trump's willingness to work with his team during the transition of power, and the Republican called the president a "very good man."

"I very much look forward to dealing with the president in the future, including his counsel," Trump said from the Oval Office. He'll begin occupying the office on Jan. 20.

While Trump noted that he and Obama had never met before, their political histories will forever be linked. Trump spent years perpetrating the lie that Obama was born outside the United States. The president campaigned aggressively against Trump during the 2016 campaign, warning that his election would put the republic at risk.

But at least publicly, the two men appeared to put aside their animosity. As the meeting concluded and journalists scrambled out of the Oval Office, Obama smiled at his successor and explained the unfolding scene.

"We now are going to want to do everything we can to help you succeed, because if you succeed, the country succeeds," Obama said.

From the White House, Trump headed to Capitol Hill for meetings with House Speaker Paul Ryan of Wisconsin and Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell of Kentucky to discuss the GOP legislative agenda. Ryan, who holds the most powerful post in Congress, was a sometime critic of Trump and never campaigned with the nominee.

Emerging from the meetings, Trump sketched out priorities for his presidency.

"We're going to move very strongly on immigration," he said. "We will move very strongly on health care. And we're looking at jobs. Big league jobs."

Ryan took Trump on a tour of the Speaker's Balcony overlooking the National Mall, the scene of Trump's upcoming inauguration. The view, Trump said, was "really, really beautiful."

Trump was also beginning the process of putting together his White House team. Republican National Committee Chairman Reince Priebus, who worked his way into Trump's inner circle during the election, and top campaign official Kellyanne Conway were emerging as possible picks for White House chief of staff, according to two people familiar with the transition planning.

A third person said conservative media executive Steve Bannon was also in the mix, though others insisted Bannon would not have a White House role. Those involved in the process insisted on anonymity because they were not authorized to discuss the planning publicly. A decision on chief of staff is expected in the coming days.

First lady Michelle Obama met privately in the White House residence with Trump's wife, Melania, while Vice President Joe Biden saw Vice President-elect Mike Pence late Thursday. Trump's team was said to be sketching a robust role for Pence, an experienced Washington hand, that would include both domestic and foreign policy responsibilities.

Obama and Trump met alone, with no staff present, White House press secretary Josh Earnest told reporters following the discussion.

"The two men did not relitigate their differences in the Oval Office," Earnest said. "We're on to the next phase."

Trump traveled to Washington from New York on his private jet; breaking with protocol by not bringing journalists in his motorcade or on his plane to document his historic visit to the White House. Trump was harshly critical of the media during his campaign and for a time banned news organizations whose coverage he disliked from his events.

At the White House, Obama chief of staff Denis McDonough was seen walking along the South Lawn driveway with Jared Kushner, Trump's son-in-law. A handful of Trump aides trailed them.

The show of civility at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue contrasted with postelection scenes of protests across a politically divided country. Demonstrators from New England to the heartland and the West Coast vented against the election winner on Wednesday, chanting "Not my president," burning a papier-mache Trump head, beating a Trump pinata and carrying signs that said "Impeach Trump."

More than 100 protesters held a sit-in outside Trump International Hotel just blocks from the White House. The mostly student protesters held signs saying "Love Trumps Hate," a phrase Democrat Hillary Clinton often used during the campaign.

Trump's advisers, many of whom were stunned by his unexpected victory, plunged into the huge task of staffing government agencies. A transition website, GreatAgain.gov, referenced 4,000 political appointee openings.

Officials at the Pentagon and State Department said they had not yet been contacted.

State Department spokesman Mark Toner said the agency stood ready "to work with the incoming team once that team is designated and arrives here. But we don't have any firm word as to when that will be."

As president-elect, Trump is entitled to the same daily intelligence briefing as Obama — including information on U.S. covert operations, information gleaned about world leaders and other data gathered by America's 17 intelligence agencies. The White House said it would organize two exercises involving multiple agencies to help Trump's team learn how to respond to major domestic incidents.

Massive celebrity backing failed to lift Clinton campaign

By Hillel Italie
Associated Press

NEW YORK — One lesson from the 2016 campaign: Celebrities guarantee attention, but they don't ensure votes.

Few presidential candidates attracted as much A-list support as did former first lady and Secretary of State Hillary Clinton. But rallies in Ohio with LeBron James, Beyonce and Jay Z did not prevent Republican rival and President-elect Donald Trump from prevailing in a state President Barack Obama had won twice. A joyous election eve gathering in Philadelphia, featuring a performance by Bruce Springsteen, did not prevent Clinton from losing Pennsylvania, where no Republican had won since 1988.

Meanwhile, Trump's notable guests in the days leading up to his stunning victory included rocker Ted Nugent, whose last top 20 album came out in 1980. The Democratic National Convention featured appearances by Meryl Streep, Katy Perry, Lena Dunham and many others. One of Trump's few celebrity endorsers at the Republican gathering was Scott Baio of "Happy Days" fame.

And it didn't seem to matter.

"The overwhelming majority of voters know who they're going to vote for long before the election and don't decide based on celebrity endorsements," says Jon Wiener, a history professor at the University of California, Irvine whose books include "How We Forgot The Cold War" and "Gimme Some Truth: The John Lennon FBI Files."

"I know it's hard to believe but there were more powerful political forces at work in Pennsylvania than Bruce Springsteen."

On Thursday, celebrities themselves were still absorbing the election's results. Actress Kyra Sedgwick, a self-described "lefty, liberal, living in New York and California," said she yearned to visit "Trump country" and find "what binds us together." Singer and stage actress Deborah Cox said she was living through "a real sobering moment."

"It's a tough time. It's a real sobering moment, I think, for the country," she said.

Trump, the former "Apprentice" star and the candidate with the longest background in entertainment since Ronald Reagan, apparently only needed his own endorsement. During the campaign he seemed to spend more time fighting celebrities than being praised by them. He continued his feud with Rosie O'Donnell, had harsh words for Jay Z and defied the wishes of the Rolling Stones, Adele and other artists by playing their music at his campaign appearances.

But the entertainment industry's distaste for Trump may also have contributed to his image as an outsider shunned by the country's elite.

"I'm here all by myself," he said during a rally in Hershey, Pennsylvania. "Just me, no guitar, no piano, no nothing."

Wiener says that getting support from a celebrity like Beyonce can "help create excitement — and headlines" but is less important than inspiring people to vote. In Cleveland's Cuyahoga County, for instance, turnout appeared to be down significantly from 2012, with preliminary results showing Clinton receiving some 60,000 fewer votes than Obama did four years earlier.

The effectiveness of celebrity campaigners has varied over the past few decades. Frank Sinatra's support of John F. Kennedy in 1960 has often been credited for helping the Democrat in a race in which he narrowly defeated Richard Nixon. Years later, Sinatra's shift to the Republican Party and his backing of Reagan seemed to stand for millions of Democrats who also had turned more conservative. In 2008, Oprah Winfrey's enthusiasm for Obama led The New York Times editorial board to declare that she deserved a "good chunk of credit" for his success by boosting his standing in "middle America."

Centers celebrates new outlook with new building

By Rich Lopez
jrlopez@mt.com

For 59 years, Centers for Children and Families has provided counseling for those who are unable to afford such services during emotional distress. Up until recently, they have served up to 1,000 people in cramped quarters. That all changed Wednesday when Centers celebrated the grand opening of their new building.

This will be quite a change as the organization approaches its 60th year.

"Once I realized that Centers had been in 11 different places over its existence, I began trying to find a way for us to have our own," Centers executive director Ann Bradford said.

A Home of our Own was their capital campaign theme which started in 2013. Bradford's goal was to have a debt-free home so that donor money didn't have to go building or rent costs and instead be directed toward their services.

For Bradford, the new building isn't just a celebratory time — it's a breath of relief.

"I'm grateful for so many different ways. We were very crowded in the space with just two therapy rooms," she said.

With larger space and four therapy rooms with better technology, the staff and therapists can provide counseling without cramped quarters and overbooking of rooms. Services are likely to expand even with the new building.

With a refreshed outlook for Centers, Bradford expressed her gratitude for the Midland community.

"The foundations, the corporations, all the individuals have been amazing. We presented a need and they stepped up to provide resources for their fellow citizens," she said. "Midland is a community like no other."

Centers for Children and Families is now located at 3701 Andrews Highway. For more information about their services, visit centerstx.org.

Judge: Youth climate change lawsuit against feds can proceed

A lawsuit filed by young climate activists who contend the U.S. government is failing to protect them from the harmful effects of greenhouse gas emissions can move forward, a federal judge in Oregon ruled Thursday.

U.S. District Judge Ann Aiken in Eugene denied motions by the federal government and trade groups representing big energy companies to dismiss the lawsuit. They had argued that lawmakers and federal agencies, not by the court, should determine climate change policy.

The plaintiffs include 21 youths and a climate scientist James Hansen.

Longtime addict seeks to end downward spiral of life

DEAR ABBY

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Her column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 46-year-old drug user. I have been addicted for more than 20 years. I know it's wrong. I know I can be a better person. I got hooked when a supposed friend introduced me to crack in 1992. If I could only go back to that day, I'd kick the you-know-what out of him. I was all set to make something of my life.

In 2010, my dad was diagnosed with lung cancer. It only got worse. I have hurt the people I care about the most. I have stolen from my mom. I have written checks on her bank account and pawned her jewelry. I don't know what to do.

I know I'm depressed since Dad died. I'm also disabled and on disability. I pretty much kept everything in check until 2001 when I lost the job I'd held for 17 years. I have drifted from job to job ever since.

So there it is. I have developed chronic obstructive pulmonary disease (COPD). I'm on oxygen full time and can't work. I ask myself why I'm suddenly doing three and four times more than I've ever done. Do you think I'm that depressed? That I'm trying to speed my own death? I'm at a loss and need some guidance. I contemplate suicide daily, but I guess I'm too much of a coward. Can you help me? — END OF MY ROPE IN FLORIDA

DEAR END OF YOUR ROPE: At this point, the only person who can help you is yourself. The problem with using drugs is that after a period of time, the body builds up a tolerance, and it takes more and more of them to achieve a high. This may be why your use has increased the way it has.

Because programs to help people break their drug habit usually cost money — which you don't have — go to na.org to find the location of the nearest Narcotics Anonymous meeting. As you may already know, NA is a fellowship in which addicts help each other to get off and stay off drugs. Please give it a try because it could save your life.

DEAR ABBY: My friend Bryan and I were at a sports bar watching a football game. We had ordered a large pizza, but had time for only one slice before we had to leave. I wanted to offer the remaining pizza to a group of college-age students sitting at a nearby table. Bryan was horrified and insisted we just leave. He said to offer the pizza would be insulting.

When I pointed out that another couple had once given us a half-filled bottle of champagne (they were heading to the theater), we accepted and appreciated it. He said that was different. What do you think? — TRYING TO BE NICE IN L.A.

DEAR TRYING TO BE NICE: I think you're a nicer person than your friend Bryan. If the crowd at the next table was insulted, they could have refused your generous offer. Bryan may have nixed the idea because he didn't think of it first.

DEAR VETERANS: I salute you for your service to this country. My thanks to each of you, as well as to the brave men and women who are still on active duty. You are the personification of patriotism and self-sacrifice for your dedication to our country. — ABBY

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The stars show the kind of day you'll have: 5-dynamic; 4-positive; 3-average; 2-so-so; 1-difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Friday, Nov. 11, 2016:

This year you will be more vibrant, as long as you don't try to prevent change from happening. Greet transformation with a smile, even if it is uncomfortable for you. Know that you are calibrating your life and your priorities. If you are single, count on an active love life. You'll meet potential suitors easily in your day-to-day travels. If you are attached, the two of you have several common interests that allow you to enjoy each other even more. Set aside more time to relax with your significant other. ARIES knows how to get you going.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★ You could be surprised by what is happening around you, especially with several people who have played an active role in your life. Power plays are likely when dealing with a boss or higher-up. Reach out to someone at a distance. Tonight: Enjoy praise and recognition.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★ Take time to enjoy the little things in life. You could be worn out by the process of being in the here and now. You might need a break, or a power nap. Understand what is expected of you, then follow through. Make this day yours. Tonight: Read between the lines. Keep it private.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★★ Zero in on your priorities. You might want to eliminate some juggling on your part when handling an issue that involves a loved one. Be more vulnerable when dealing with a key person in your life; you will be happier as a result. Tonight: Only where people can be found.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★ Listen to what is happening with a parent, relative or friend. You could find that by resisting change, you are more likely to cause yourself a problem. Try to be more open-minded. Honor a lack of energy when adjusting your plans. Tonight: A must appearance.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★ If you relax, detach and empathize with a key person in your life, you will gain a new perspective. Put 100 percent into whatever you do, and you'll be delighted with the results. Your caring is likely to be more appreciated than you realize. Tonight: Consider taking a trip.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★ One-on-one relating is emphasized. You'll like what comes up for you if you choose to work with a friend. You will experience more closeness as well as more clarity. Too much might be going on for you to indulge a family member right now. Tonight: Be with the one you love.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★ Others seek you out, as they might feel as if they can't get enough of your time. You might be spreading yourself too thin. Be aware of others' needs, and adjust your schedule. Your sensitivity is likely to emerge. Be honest with yourself. Tonight: Say "yes" to an offer.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★ You will want to understand what is happening at work. You will be much more upbeat if you stay present in a discussion. Others sense your intensity. A neighbor might want you to agree with him or her. Don't make any financial decisions today. Tonight: Know when to call it.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★ You might want to work on repairing your relationship with someone. Expect the unexpected as a result of this effort. A friend is likely to be lucky for you. Share how much you appreciate this person's magic! Tonight: Remind others of how much fun you can be.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★ Be more sensitive when dealing with a family member or loved one. Though part of the discussion could be rather uncomfortable, the results will give you a lot to consider. You will feel much better when everything is said and done. Tonight: Invite friends over.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★★ You might make the first move, but you still will need to allow the other party to share and perhaps even dominate the conversation. Do your best to understand what is going on with this person. Don't try to dodge a call right now; it could be important! Tonight: Stay local.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★ You might want to change your schedule as more invitations come in. You'll want to get to the bottom of a problem as soon as you can, so that you can free yourself up for the impending weekend. Enjoy the moment. Tonight: Weigh the pros and cons before making a purchase.

Today's deal is from an important pairs competition in 1998. South was the great English player, Tony Forrester. The Polish East-West pair started with two artificial bids. The auction was essentially natural thereafter, but it was hard work to get to game after that start. Forrester had to make this contract in order to win the event.

Forrester won the opening diamond lead in dummy perforce, as East unblocked the queen. Forrester naturally played the opening bidder for the queen of clubs, so he got off to a bad start when he cashed the ace of clubs and played a club to his jack. Forrester ducked when West now led a diamond to East's jack. East saw that it was pointless to continue diamonds, but he didn't see that it was essential to switch to hearts. East tried the queen of spades instead and Forrester was in with the king.

Forrester cashed his two good clubs and the ace of diamonds. East had to make two discards and could only afford one heart before he had to discard a spade. Forrester exited with the four of spades to East's jack. East shifted to hearts, but it was too late. Forrester won the heart in dummy and led another spade. East won with the ace, South following with the seven, and led another heart. Forrester won with the king of hearts and produced the carefully preserved two of spades for his ninth trick.

Former cop works to make gang members into 'warriors for Christ'

By Carmen George
The Fresno Bee (TNS)

FRESNO, Calif. — Police officer Dave Standley no longer patrols the streets of Fresno on Friday nights — he leads church.

The founder of Gangland Redemption Ministries preaches in a gymnasium at Valley Dream Center in east-central Fresno. Worship includes rap and hip-hop music, church volunteers wear sports jerseys and churchgoers call Standley coach, not pastor.

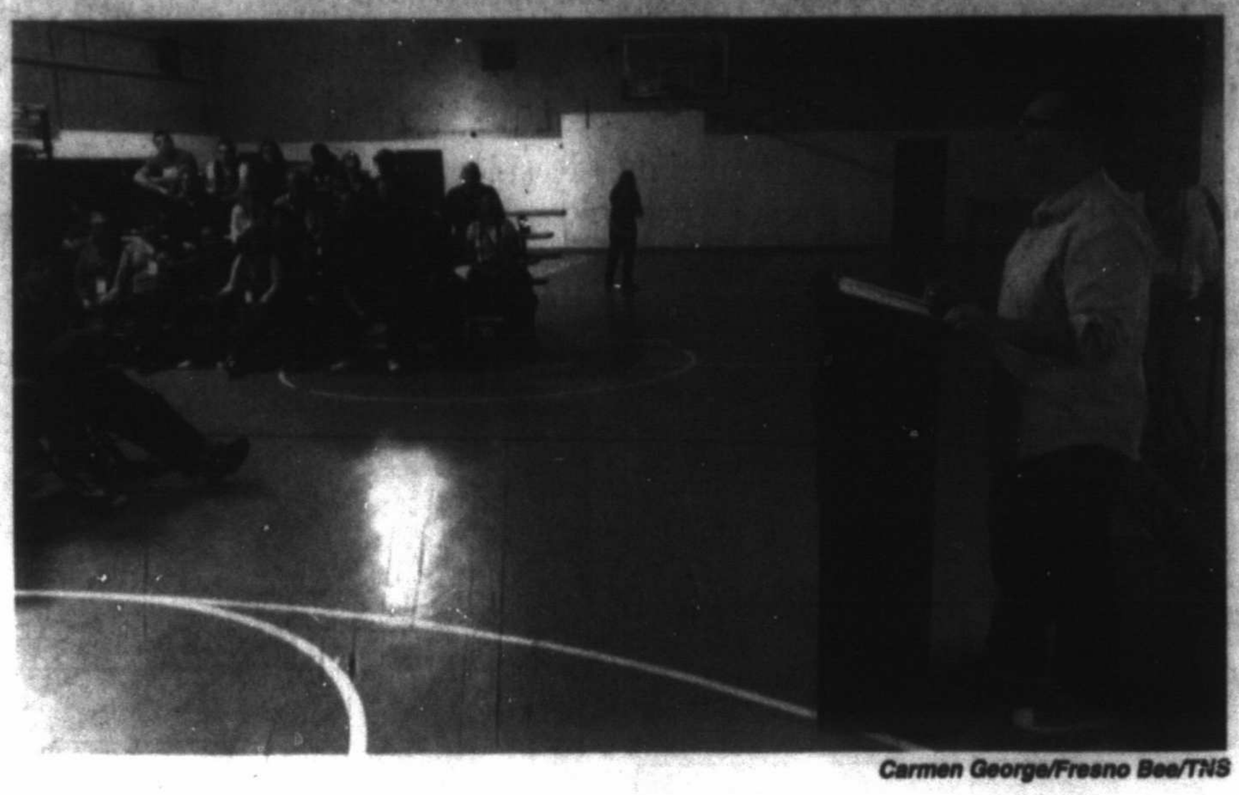
One recent Friday, Coach Dave talked about the Crucifixion in an equally unorthodox way.

"With this mob looking upon Jesus with rage and ridicule, Jesus goes out like a 'G' — full of grace — and he drops the mike and he gives up his spirit."

Many in the crowd smile, laugh and cheer. After the service ends, the gym stays open so children can play basketball.

These Friday night services, which started in May, are the latest step in reaching out to a community that Standley and others found when searching for a "ground zero" to plant the headquarters of Valley Dream Center. The center has 14 partners — including Standley's Gangland Redemption Ministries — working toward this mission: "Rescue those with immediate physical needs. Restore individuals and families to health. Equip and release people into the workplace."

Standley only does Friday night services. He sees himself as a life coach, not a pastor. He wants the services to be another option to help those struggling on Friday nights. He's been leading an adopt-a-block program in neighborhoods around Valley Dream Center since 2014 through Gangland Redemption Ministries that provides free bicycle repairs, community cleanups, prayer walks, block parties and a "Laundry of Love" program.



Carmen George/Fresno Bee/TNS

Coach Dave Standley shares a sermon on Oct. 28 at Valley Dream Center in Fresno.

Former gang member Martin Gomez is among the volunteers at Standley's new Friday-night church. Born and raised in southwest Fresno, he joined a gang at age 10 to combat bullying.

"It was just society, in that area of west Fresno," Gomez says. "We either stuck together and fought back, or they were just going to keep picking on us."

He decided he'd had enough of the gang lifestyle after committing a violent crime.

"I literally cried out by myself, not knowing I was crying out to God, I said, 'I want change, I need change, I've got to have change,'" Gomez recalls. "No more than five minutes after that, I got arrested."

Gomez considered provoking an officer to shoot him, but says he heard a "still voice within me that said, 'a new beginning.'" When he was released from jail in 2014, he was scared to come out. He checked himself into a drug rehabilitation facility and then became a volunteer at Valley Dream Center.

"Gang members, drug dealers, pimps — every one of them, as a child, had a dream, just like I did," Gomez says. "They dreamt to be a fireman, they dreamt to be a doctor. They wanted to make something out of themselves. I just want to go back and let them know there's still hope. It's still possible. That's my passion now."

Standley is inspired by former gang members like Gomez who have found God.

"That hardwiring — all in, all heart, all passion — goes up to God, and I see warriors for Christ," Standley says, "guys who put in 8-12 hours a day at work and they'll still come out and serve 3-4 hours. It's amazing to see the level of effort."

Standley has worked as a police officer for nearly 20 years. He now serves as a school resource officer at an at-risk school and is a crisis negotiator for the Fresno Police Department.

The catalyst for Gangland Redemption came while Standley was working as a gang investigator and interviewing a 14-year-old Fresno boy. During the interview, the child's 7-year-old brother walked up and stood beside them.

"I can see him looking at his brother and looking at me and looking at his brother, and then I realized this kid is processing right now, at 7 years old, 'Am I going to be on that side of it, or am I going to be on the other?'"

That led Standley to start mentoring youth and to write a fictional novel based on real events about struggles facing three teens growing up in and around gangs. He and his wife, Tish Valdez-Standley, created a book-study lesson to go with the novel which led them to found their nonprofit in 2012.

"If we can get to the kids young," Tish says, "then we can make a difference."

The higher-ups also approve of their ministry and new church.

Tammy Dunahoo, general supervisor of The Foursquare Church, shared her blessing at Friday's kickoff event for the new Friday-night services, attended by more than 80 people. Coach Dave is a pastor through Valley Christian Center Ericson, a Foursquare church.

"We're kind of a creative group," Dunahoo says. "We do some out-of-the-box stuff. I love it."

Pointing outside the gym, Rene Charest, president and executive director of Valley Dream Center, says the Friday night services are "a great way to keep the crime off that street out there."

Among those in attendance were Renee Roque and her two young daughters. Roque says she found her faith in God a number of years ago, and that helped her beat a methamphetamine addiction and rebuild her life in a positive way after serving two years in prison.

Her 12-year-old daughter, April, came to Friday's service dressed as a police officer for Halloween. She says because of Coach Dave, she wants to be a police officer when she grows up.

He mother is proud of her — and proud that their family now counts a police officer as a friend.

"It's so nice for me to break that whole cycle," Roque says, "and this is huge in doing that."

Bulldogs win shootout vs. El Dorado, 73-52

Anuszkiewicz

Childress

By Christopher Hadorn
chadorn@mrt.com

EL PASO — Two of West Texas' most high-octane offenses convened Thursday night at Socorro ISD Student Activities Complex.

Midland High and El Paso El Dorado entertained fans with their ability to move downfield at ease, but only one of them would play past this week.

The Bulldogs were able ride the right arm of Jackson Anuszkiewicz and balance it out with a second-quarter rush attack en route to a 73-52 win over the Aztecs during the Class 6A Division I bi-district playoff.

MHS (9-2) will advance to face Arlington Bowie in the area round of the playoffs, which is tentatively set for 2 p.m. Saturday in Abilene.

Anuszkiewicz completed 15 of 25 passes for 306 yards, six touchdowns and no interceptions to spearhead the Bulldogs offense.

MHS' Ricky Hubert rushed 14 times for 115 yards and a pair of touchdowns, including a back-breaking 56-yard run in the fourth quarter.

All four of Midland High's standout receivers — Jalen Childress, McLane Mannix, Courtney McMaryion, Juleion Bowers — scored touchdowns in the game.

El Dorado quarterback Cedarious Barfield rushed for 268 yards and passed for 251 yards in a losing effort.

One of the game's turning points in the shootout occurred in the second quarter when the Aztecs (8-3) attempted a fake punt on their own 8-yard line.

The Bulldogs sniffed it out, stopping Barfield for no gain.

"We knew that it was going to be a fake punt," MHS defensive end Dillon Springer. "We said, 'hey, we got to go out and take care of business and get it done and that's what happened. That's an aggressive offense and they got some good players to go with that."

On the next play, Anuszkiewicz tossed an 8-yard pass to Mannix to push MHS to a 27-17 advantage.

From that point on, Midland High never trailed and closed out the fourth quarter with three scoring runs.

The Bulldogs won the turnover battle, 2-0, getting an interception from free safety Chris Sims and a fumble recovery from Stetson Abney.

- Thursday was the Bulldogs' first bi-district win since 2010, a 39-35 victory against Arlington Bowie in Lubbock.
- With his 69 yards receiving and a touchdown, MHS senior Courtney McMaryion passed Antwan Goodley to become the MHS program's all-time leader in career receiving yards with 1,813.
- Craig Yenzer-coached Bulldog teams are now 13-9 in the postseason and the Bulldogs are 15-13 all-time in the playoffs. MHS is now 2-0

MCS has eyes set on ultimate prize

By Will Korn
wkorn@mrt.com

Winning a state title is the season-long goal for just about every volleyball team out there. But only a few even find themselves in the conversation months after the season's first service.

After winning their first three playoff matches, the Midland Christian volleyball team is now fully in that state championship conversation and are heading to the TAPPS 5A state tournament as one of four teams still alive.

MCS (28-7) will take on Austin St. Michael's (20-12-1) in the semifinal round at 5 p.m. today at the Brownwood Coliseum in Brownwood. The winner will face the victor of San Antonio Holy Cross (43-10)-Sugar Land Fort Bend Christian (24-10-1) in the state final at 2 p.m. Saturday at the Brownwood Coliseum.

This is the Lady Mustangs' first state appearance in head coach Alicia Filyukova's four seasons with the program. It is also believed to be the first state appearance for MCS volleyball in nearly 15 years.

As such, excitement and anticipation are running high. But for Filyukova and her players, just making it to the state tournament isn't enough. They want the ultimate prize — they want to make history as the first state champion Lady Mustang volleyball team.

"We know it's the final four teams in our classification," Filyukova said. "We're just trying not to be satisfied with making it to state, but (we're trying) to come out with a state championship, because I know we have the ability and the girls know we have the ability to do that. We're excited about that. We're just looking forward to having the opportunity to compete first round at state."

Rangers fall to Bushland, 49-42, in bi-district

By Oscar LeRoy
oleroy@mrt.com

LUBBOCK — Just by looking at the offensive statistics, Greenwood did everything it could to win Thursday's Class 4A Division II bi-district game against Bushland.

It even had a phenomenal game from Stace Bell, as he rushed for 325 yards and a touchdown on 20 carries.

Bell

But the Rangers turned the ball over four times and couldn't capitalize twice in the red zone and that led to a stunning 49-42 loss to the Falcons at Pirate Stadium.

With the win, the Falcons (6-4-1) — winners of four straight — advance the area round to play the winner of today's game between Vernon and Glen Rose.

Greenwood's season ends at 7-3 as the Rangers suffered a disappointing loss in the first round of the playoffs for the third straight year.

"There were two good football teams out here battling, and we just came up on the short end of the stick tonight," Greenwood coach Shad Hanna said. "I'm really proud of my group of seniors, they fought their butts off. I'm proud of the legacy they're leaving behind for these guys to follow in their footsteps. It was a tough night. We made some mistakes but we also overcame some, and we put ourselves in position to win. We just came up short."

Hanna added that he was proud of the job Bell did, as he made runs of 75, 82, 50 and 46 yards as part of his big night.

"He ran up and down the football field and he did a great job tonight," Hanna said. "The offensive line did a great job of opening up holes and protecting tonight."

Greenwood had as much as a 21-7 lead in the first quarter before Bushland came back and eventually took a 28-27 lead at the half. It would be a back-and-forth battle from there.

Witten's leadership shines in surprising season for Cowboys

By Schulyer Dixon
Associated Press

FRISCO — Jason Witten locked arms with Dallas police at training camp in a show of support he initiated after the shooting that rocked the city over the summer.

Three months later, the Dallas tight end accepted a game ball from coach Jason Garrett in a joyous locker room after catching the winning touchdown pass in overtime against Philadelphia.

Off the field and on, Witten's 14th NFL season has been a showcase of his leadership, made even better for him by the Cowboys' surprising surge to the best record in the NFC at 7-1. Maybe this was the perfect year to be the first one with Witten all alone on the cover of the team's media guide.

"Witten means everything to me," said receiver Dez Bryant, who benefited from the stewardship of Witten and quarterback Tony Romo during more difficult times early in his career. "If you're a hard worker, that's the type of guy you want to be around. The way he just talks to us, I just think it's amazing. That guy's got everything."

When camp opened in California in late July, Witten was arm in arm with Dallas Police Chief David Brown less than a month after five officers were killed in a downtown ambush as a Black Lives Matter rally was wrapping up.

Witten went to team officials with the idea of a tribute to the families of the fallen officers because he says that's what leaders do. And he wasn't concerned about taking sides on a divisive issue that reignited a few weeks later when San Francisco quarterback Colin Kaepernick sat during the national anthem.

"I just thought it was the right thing to do," Witten said. "The more established you get, the more ingrained you get in an organization and a city, obviously the more at stake you have. You feel that's part of you."

When U.S. Attorney General Loretta Lynch announced a funding initiative for police departments early in the season, Witten attended the function at a Dallas high school, along with safety Barry Church. For several

Flacco, Ravens keep Browns winless with 28-7 rout

By David Ginsburg
Associated Press

BALTIMORE — Joe Flacco threw three touchdown passes, and the Baltimore Ravens beat Cleveland 28-7 on Thursday night to leave the winless Browns at a historic low point in franchise history.

Baltimore trailed 7-3 late in the second quarter before gaining control during a third quarter in which Flacco went 10 for 12 with two scores.

The Ravens (5-4) have won two in a row following a four-game losing streak. Baltimore is the only team in the AFC North above .500.

Cleveland (0-10) has opened a season with 10 consecutive losses for the first time since joining the NFL in 1950. The Browns have lost 11 straight on the road since winning in Baltimore in October 2015.

The loss left Cleveland's all-time record at 461-461-10. The Browns have never been below .500.

Down 7-6 at halftime, the Ravens moved 64 yards on their first possession of the third quarter to take a 13-7 lead. Flacco connected with five different receivers on the drive, closing with a 4-yard touchdown pass to Darren Waller.

Browns coach Hue Jackson then opted to insert Josh McCown at quarterback after watching starter Cody Kessler go 10 for 17 for 94 yards. McCown's second pass was intercepted, giving Baltimore the ball at the Cleveland 40 with a chance to break the game open.

WITTEN

From 1C

weeks after the Kaepernick controversy arose, Witten fielded questions on the topic.

All the while, the Cowboys kept winning with rookie Dak Prescott at quarterback after Witten's best friend on the team, Romo, injured his back in a preseason game. Dallas has a chance to match the single-season franchise record of eight straight wins Sunday at Pittsburgh.

And Witten is one of the constants. The 34-year-old entered the season with the franchise record for consecutive games played. That number is up to 211, and he now has the club marks for starts (205) and consecutive starts (155).

"Witt's just a rare individual," coach Jason Garrett said. "He's a great football player; 14 years, 10-time Pro Bowler, arguably the best all-around tight end of his generation. But what he does each and every day is an example to the rest of us: coaches, players, guys he plays with, guys he plays against."

Witten's achievements for longevity have coincided with almost a yearlong absence for Romo, who missed 12 games last season with a twice-broken left collarbone. They are the two longest-tenured Cowboys, but Witten's voice has been the only consistent one on the field for a young group headlined by two standout rookies in Prescott and running back Ezekiel Elliott.

"When you have some situations come up, you would think, 'Oh, he's really got to do it more because the 14-year veteran quarterback isn't in there,'" Witten said. "For me, I just think keep attacking it every single day. And it makes it a lot easier when lot of the other guys want to follow you."

HSFOOTBALLPLAYOFFCAPSULES

COMPILED BY OSCAR LEROY

CLASS 3A DIVISION II BI-DISTRICT
COAHOMA VS. CHILDRESS
When/where: 7 p.m., Peoples Bank Stadium, Wolfforth
On the radio: KBTS-FM (94.3), Big Spring
Records: Coahoma 3-6; Childress 7-3
Last game: Coahoma 24, Lubbock Roosevelt 6; Childress 58, Spearman 0
Last meeting/series: This is the first meeting

Three things to watch:

■ Coahoma got some much-needed momentum at the end of the regular season as a win over Roosevelt gave the Bulldogs the No. 3 seed and it got their offense back on track. QB Mason Moore threw for 190 yards and two TDs in the win.

■ Coahoma coach Fred Dietz said Childress is a good team that's pretty balanced offensively, which tends to keep defenses guessing. He added that defensively, the Bobcats tend to make plays when they need to.

■ Dietz said it's going to be important for his team to move the chains and sustain drives.

"Offensively, we need to have some success," Dietz said. "On defense, we can't allow them to have any explosive plays."

Next: Winner plays either Cisco or Alpine in area round, TBA

CLASS 2A DIVISION II BI-DISTRICT
NO. 2 IRAAN VS. BAIRD
When/where: 7:30 p.m., Grande Communications Stadium
Records: Iraan 10-0; Baird 6-4
Last game: Iraan 41, Irion County 0; Baird 38, Winters 24
What to watch:

■ Iraan hopes to start a nice playoff run as the Braves made it to state quarterfinal round in 2015.

■ The Braves are led by senior RB Daryel Lozeya, who earned Built Ford Tough Texas Class 2A Player of the Week honors for Week 10 after running for 179 yards and three touchdowns on just six carries in a 53-6 win over Menard out of the flexbone offense.

■ Baird will need to match up with Iraan's powerful offense as the Braves average 44.9 points per game.

Next: Winner plays Santo or Petrolia in area round, TBA

CLASS 1A SIX-MAN DIVISION I
NO. 4 GARDEN CITY VS. NO. 6 IRA
When/where: 7:30 p.m., Griffith Stadium, Robert Lee
Records: Garden City 8-2; Ira 9-1
Last game: Garden City 48, Robert Lee 0; Ira 53, Klondike 8 (Oct. 28)
Last meeting/series: Ira defeated Garden City 70-22 in 2014 and leads the all-time series 6-3

Three things to watch:

■ This is a monster matchup in Class 1A as a very good team will be going home. Garden City coach Jeff Jones said he knew no matter who his team would face in the bi-district round, it would face a tough opponent out of District 5. "It's not ideal, but it is what it is," Jones said. "All that matters is that we've got to shot and we're in the playoffs."

■ Jones said Ira is a very well-coached and disciplined team that does a lot of things right.

"We need to do the same thing as Ira: Be disciplined, make tackles and limit our mistakes," Jones said.

■ The Bearkats have some experience returning from a team that made it to teh state quarterfinals last year with four seniors and a junior.

"We don't have a whole lot of experience, but the players that do made a deep playoff run last year," Jones said. "Those guys will be key to lead the guys who don't have big game experience."

Next: Winner plays Santa Anna or Marfa in area round, TBA

GREENWOOD

From 1C

"We made one more play than they did, obviously by the scoreboard, but our kids continued to fight, even when bad stuff happens to them," Bushland coach Jimmy Thomas said. "We got down two scores in the first half and we overcame that to take the lead at the half, and that was huge for us momentum-wise."

Bushland was outgained 607-344 as the Falcons either had great kickoff returns or took advantage of short kicks by the Rangers. The only time the Falcons started a drive inside their own 30-yard-line was because Greenwood turned it over on downs. The Rangers were stopped twice on fourth downs inside the red zone. The Rangers turned it over on downs at the Bushland 19 right before the half, and then they turned it over on downs at the Falcons' 3 when the game was tied at 35.

"Our defense played well in the second half, and that was key," Thomas said. "(Greenwood) did a lot of things well and ran the ball on us. We're just super proud of our kids."

Probably the biggest defensive play of the game came early in the fourth quarter when Jaren Alvarado stepped in front a Ben Brockman pass and returned the interception 42 yards for a score to give the Falcons a 41-35 lead.

Greenwood could not respond on the following drive as the Falcon defense forced a three-and-out.

Andrews finished the game with 144 yards on 20 carries, while dual-threat quarterback Colton Moore added 124 yards passing and accounted for two TDs in the win.

In Your Honor

Unselfishly, you left your fathers and your mothers,
You left behind your sisters and your brothers.
Leaving your beloved children and wives,
You put on hold, your dreams- your lives.
On foreign soil, you found yourself planted
To fight for those whose freedom you granted.
Without your sacrifice, their cause would be lost
But you carried onward, no matter the cost.

Many horrors you had endured and seen.
Many faces had haunted your dreams.
You cheered as your enemies littered the ground;
You cried as your brothers fell all around.

When it was over, you all came back home,
Some were left with memories to face all alone;
Some found themselves in the company of friends
As their crosses cast shadows across the land.

Those who survived were forever scarred
Emotionally, physically, permanently marred.
Those who did not now sleep eternally
'Neath the ground they had given their lives to keep free.

With a hand upon my heart,
I feel the pride and respect;
my reverence is revealed
In the tears that now stream down my upturned face
As our flag waves above
you, in her glory and grace.
Freedom was the gift that you unselfishly gave Pain and death was the price
that you ultimately paid.
Every day, I give my utmost admiration
To those who had fought to defend our nation.

Trump win revives Keystone hopes, boosts Dakota access outlook

Bloomberg

Donald Trump's U.S. presidential election victory came as a positive surprise for pipeline proponents.

Energy Transfer Partners's controversial Dakota Access Pipeline is likely to be the immediate beneficiary. TransCanada's Keystone XL project, rejected by the Obama administration a year ago, could be resurrected. A Republican-controlled government would likely expedite project approvals and permitting by regulators.

Trump has said he would reduce the federal government's role in energy and environmental policy, while encouraging more infrastructure projects including pipelines to better connect production with markets and consumers. Shares of Energy Transfer and TransCanada rallied on Wednesday.

"Obama killed the deal. Hillary wasn't warm to it at all," Bart Melek, the head of commodity strategy at TD Securities in Toronto, said of Keystone XL. "This is something that's accretive."

A year after President Barack Obama's refusal to approve the $8 billion Keystone XL project to connect the Canadian oil sands with refineries on the Gulf of Mexico, the $3.8 billion Dakota Access line to ship crude from the Bakken shale hasn't fared very well either.

Trump has said he'd approve Keystone XL — for a share of the profits. TransCanada said it remains fully committed to building the line and is looking at ways to engage a Trump administration on the project's benefits, including a $3 billion boost to the U.S. economy, a total 42,000 jobs and tens of millions of dollars in property taxes, according to an e-mailed statement. The Calgary-based pipeline giant's shares rose 3 percent in Toronto on Wednesday, the most since Jan. 22.

As for Dakota Access, if it hasn't received the go-ahead by the time Trump is sworn in, the new administration would be expected to grant it, said Christine Tezak, managing director of research at ClearView Energy Partners LLC in Washington.

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers is unlikely to keep holding up the last leg of the project, said Ethan Bellamy, an analyst at Robert W. Baird & Co., in a note. Energy Transfer shares surged 11 percent, the most since Feb. 16.

"We remain focused on completing construction of this important energy infrastructure project with the expectation it will be in service in the first quarter of 2017," Vicki Granado, a spokeswoman for Energy Transfer, said in an e-mailed statement.

The Army Corps hasn't made any changes to its review process and won't speculate on the effect of the election, Kamil Sztalkoper, a spokesman, said in a statement.

A revival of Keystone XL may help ease the pressure on Prime Minister Justin Trudeau's government to approve controversial pipelines projects to link the landlocked oil sands to the coast, such as TransCanada's proposed $13 billion Energy East line that has faced mounting opposition in Quebec. The Canadian Association of Petroleum Producers said it wouldn't comment on the politics of another country, but noted the U.S. is the industry's largest customer.

Stocks mixed overall

Banks and other financial companies led U.S. stocks mostly higher Thursday, propelling the Dow Jones industrial average to a record high.

The Standard & Poor's 500 index, a broader measure of the stock market, also eked out a gain, adding to a big rally the day before following Donald Trump's presidential election victory. The Nasdaq composite closed lower, weighed down by a slide in technology companies. Bond prices slumped again, sending yields higher.

"You are seeing a massive swing out of cash and fixed-income and into equities to take advantage of this pro-growth cycle that the market believes we're beginning," said David Lyon, global investment specialist at J.P. Morgan Private Bank.

The Dow climbed 218.19 points,. or 1.2 percent, to 18,807.88. That's a gain of about 1 percent from the average's previous record high set on Aug. 15. The S&P 500 index added 4.22 points, or 0.2 percent, to 2,167.48.

The Dow and S&P 500 index are on a four-day winning streak. The tech-heavy Nasdaq lost 42.28 points, or 0.8 percent, to 5,208.80.

Metal end mixed

In metals trading, the price of gold fell $7.10 to $1,266.40 an ounce, while silver added 36 cents, or 2 percent, to $18.74 an ounce. Copper rose 9 cents, or 3.7 percent, to $2.55 a pound.

FCC concerned about AT&T exempting DirecTV from data caps

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Federal regulators say that they are concerned that AT&T's exempting its DirecTV unit from cellphone data caps could hurt competition.

AT&T lets customers watch video on DirecTV apps on their AT&T cellphones without eating into monthly data allotments. It's expected to do the same with an upcoming, $35-a-month TV streaming service called DirecTV Now.

The Federal Communications Commission, in a letter to AT&T dated Wednesday, said that practice may disadvantage video providers that aren't owned by AT&T, ultimately hurting consumers. The agency asked that AT&T reply to its concerns by Nov. 21.

AT&T, which plans to launch DirecTV Now later this month, said Thursday that consumers gain from watching video without using up their data — a practice known as zero rating. Any video provider can pay AT&T, "at our lowest wholesale rates," to let customers watch without using up their AT&T data, said AT&T executive Bob Quinn in an emailed statement.

The FCC has looked at other companies' zero-rating practices as well. In its letter to AT&T, the FCC said that its concern was "not with zero-rating per se," which the agency has said may have some consumer benefits, but about using it to hurt competition.

The FCC says that AT&T's approach is problematic because a rival streaming video provider could find it "infeasible" to compete with DirecTV Now's $35-a-month price if this competitor also had to pay AT&T to exempt its customers from data caps. And not paying AT&T could make a competitor's video service less attractive to customers, the FCC said.

MCS

From 1C

Added senior outside hitter Kenzie Pullen: "For a lot of us, it's our last year, we get to try to go out with a bang, try to win state and do something no one has ever done at this school. (We want to) leave our marks here."

MCS senior right side Megan Ashton admitted that while she and her teammates didn't expect to produce such a memorable playoff run earlier this season, they fully believe they can finish the job.

"It's really cool," Ashton said. "None of us at the very beginning of the season expected to have made it this far. But once we started beating teams like Grapevine Faith and (Austin) Hyde Park, it became a reality for us."

SHOE BAR RANCH
25,572 Deeded Acres
Foter County, Texas

The Shoe Bar Ranch is located approx. 15 air miles southwest of Odessa, Texas at Penwell. This ranch has been under the same family ownership since the 1920's. This quality Permian Basin ranch is all native pasture and is in good condition. The ranch has been rested with no livestock for approximately two years. Livestock water is primarily provided by eight taps on the CRMWD water line, two windmills and one submersible. Structural improvements include a two bedroom/two bath brick home, a bunkhouse, a shop building, pipe shipping pens and two sets of working pens. Oil production is mostly concentrated in the southeast portion. The majority of the ranch is free of oil field activity, which could possibly present future opportunities for the collection of surface damage income. Trophy quality mule deer and an abundance of quail are found on the ranch. Seldom does a ranch of this size, mostly free of oil field activity, come up for sale in close proximity to Midland/Odessa. The Shoe Bar Ranch is reasonably priced at $350 per acre.
