FARM VOTE OF IOWA PARK GOES TO BONDS

Neighbor Precinct to Give Good Majority, Says Wood

BENEFITS STRESSED

Efforts to Confuse Issue Meet Little Success, Leaders Say

The entire community south of Iowa Park will vote in favor of the $1,110,000 road bond issue to be placed before the people Saturday, June 25, it was asserted at a meeting of the general campaign committee held at the Wichita Falls Chamber of Commerce Tuesday morning. S. N. Wood, farmer in this section, and several other representatives of the community reported favorable sentiment among all residents in this district.

Benefit to Labor

Labor leaders present including P. B. Roberts of the People's Press and L. V. Thomas, president of the Wichita Falls Trades and Labor Council, reported that labor was united on the issue and that a majority of craftsmen in every line had realized that building the roads would make more work on farms to be improved, relieving the unemployment situation. All were agreed that a general stimulation of business would benefit labor more than any other move, it was said.

That retail and wholesale business men of the city favor the issue was among other optimistic statements made concerning the success of the project at the meeting. Men in both lines have affirmed that this opening of the trade territory will place Wichita Falls far ahead in the future market, and that business locally will receive unlimited betterment from the issue.

Legal "Clouds" Not Justified

The entire list of those signing the petition protesting against the election was read in the meeting. It was discovered that several citizens have since changed their minds when additional facts were presented to them, and that others are changing to support the question daily. Opposition was attributed to a misunderstanding of the effects and benefits of such an issue by campaign committee members. Over 50 were present at the meeting.

It was also affirmed that any efforts to becloud the minds of the people on legal issues had no effect in view of the clear statement of the attorney general, who reversed the opinion of his assistant, D. L. Whitehurst, and stated that all proceedings for the election were regular and legal.

Several hundred additional pledge cards signed by voters who will cast ballots favoring the bonds on Saturday were received at the

Roles in Uncle Tom's Cabin Are Reversed

UNIVERSAL CITY, Cal., June 22. (AP)—Jeff, a bloodhound cast in a role to chase Eliza across the ice in a screen version of Uncle Tom's Cabin, reversed the action here today and died saving Eliza's life.

Outside the picture, Jeff, whose registered name was Ledourn Barrier, had become a great friend of Eliza, played by Marguerite Fischer. As Eliza stood at the edge of the "ice-flaked" river under a property tree, the tree toppled. Jeff sensed the danger to his friend and rushed at her, literally shoving her out of the path of peril. But the tree caught the bloodhound, and he was crushed to death.

CAL'S NEW HAT

President Presented With Many Ten-Gallon Lids

By Universal Service.

RAPID CITY, S. D., June 21. Life for President Coolidge is getting to be one 10-gallon hat after another.

Folks out here show their appreciation by the gift of the broad-brimmed Stetson seldom seen east of Chicago.

Mayor Dan McCutcheon of Deadwood, who invited the president to the days of '65 celebration, gave the president an immense 10-gallon lid made entirely of expensive beaver and worth about $150. The president tried it on, and according to Dan, "looked like a million dollars" in it.

PROHI'S CATCH LIQUOR HEAD

Believe Bootlegging Organization Broken Up

KANSAS CITY, June 21.(AP)—Frank DeMayo, head of what prohibition agents say is the largest bootlegging organization in the United States, was arrested today by federal authorities on four indictments returned by a federal grand jury at Joplin, Mo., last week.

The indictments charge conspiracy to nullify the federal prohibition act and the manufacture and sale of counterfeit revenue stamps.

Ever since prohibition became effective DeMayo has been openly boasting of his ability to defeat the law and of his prosperity. For some time he has operated from a room in a building across the street from the federal building.

Reports have it that he has put away more than $1,000,000 in securities and cash.

But no liquor charges ever have been brought against DeMayo. Often others alleged by prohibition agents to have been agents of DeMayo were arrested, but the connection between them never was established in court.

Only once did DeMayo get into federal court. That was in 1924 when he was indicted for collecting from druggists and still operators and paying off prohibition agents. Four prohibition agents were sent to the penitentiary, but DeMayo's case still is pending.

The situation attracted the attention of authorities in Washington who sent special agents here to break up the ring, some of the agents not knowing who the others were.

The well laid plans of the prohibition officers, however, were frustrated when a letter to one of them was intercepted by one of the liquor ring which proved itself better at sleuthing than the prohibition forces.

DALLAS, June 21. (AP)—Gov. Dan Moody will be asked to honor requisition for the return of C. C. Compton to Los Angeles, where it is alleged he is wanted on a charge of jumping bail, but the requisition will not be made until after July 11, District Attorney William McCraw said Tuesday.

Compton is needed as a material witness against Fred Simmons and Milton Shafer, who are charged with kidnaping Compton from Dallas recently.

Nash Adams, assistant district attorney, left Dallas Tuesday for Austin where he will appear before Acting Governor Barry Miller and request that the hearing be postponed until July 15.

Pecan Bayou Dam Project Before Board

BROWNWOOD, June 21. (AP)—The right of Brownwood to dam Pecan bayou, a tributary of the Colorado river and impound the water for the use of the city, is to be threshed at Austin Wednesday at a hearing before the state board of water engineers.

A delegation of more than 100 business and professional men were preparing to leave here Tuesday for the hearing. At a similar hearing in the state capital several weeks ago opposition developed from a development company which claimed it has water rights to all tributaries of the river.

Several basements of downtown buildings were flooded by the overflow in the storm sewers and the fire department was kept busy Tuesday morning pumping water from basements. A number of residences were also flooded in the basements, according to reports to firemen.

Water reached such a depth along the right-of-way of the Wichita Valley railroad in Wich-

NEED MONEY FOR HIGHWAYS

Sterling Cites Lack of Funds For Road Work

By Universal Service.

AUSTIN, June 21.—Unless the state highway commission is allowed more funds it will take 50 years in which to get the state properly connected with a first class system of highways, R. S. Sterling, Houston member of the highway commission, said this afternoon.

People all over the state, from the Panhandle to Brownsville, and from Texarkana to El Paso, are clamoring for good roads," Sterling said. "But the way the matter now stands, unless the legislature appropriates more than the $12,000,000 which we now have to maintain 20,000 miles of highway, it will take 40 to 50 years to get the state properly connected, and by that time, the conditions would be even worse than at present."

Sterling also urged the people of the state to co-operate with the highway commission in carrying out its present highway program.

Pittsburgh Terminal Company Forcing Miners From Houses

LIGHTS SHUT OFF

Company Files Eviction Proceedings Against Miners

PITTSBURGH, Pa., June 21. (AP)—The Pittsburgh Terminal Coal corporation has established a food blockade in an effort to force union miners from company houses at Coverdale and Mollenauer, Philip Murray, international vice president of the United Mine Workers, charged today. Horace E. Baker, president of the corporation, said, "We found it against our interests to have every one going on our property where there were both union and non-union miners and therefore we laid down rules to exclude them.

Murray declared the coal company's police have banned all deliveries from Pittsburgh merchants and that milk, food and ice must be carried a mile or more by the miners to their homes. Murray said the company had shut off electric light power, forcing the miners to use oil lamps and lanterns.

The company has filed eviction proceedings against many miners occupying company houses in the two mining towns.

Texas Druggists Plan "Bootlegger Elimination"

By Universal Service.

SAN ANTONIO, June 21.—Steps to eliminate the "bootleg druggists" were taken here today by the Texas Pharmaceutical association at its 48th annual convention.

The "extermination" call was sounded by Zeb W. Rike, president of the association in his address that opened the three-day session.

"It is time," Rike declared, "that we purge our ranks of the drug store whose sole purpose, apparently, is to dispense concoctions presumably manufactured for the purpose of violating the prohibition laws of our country."

The delegates adopted a resolution recommending the tightening of the Texas pharmacy law and the adding of an amendment which would allow no person to own or operate a drug store in the state unless he was a registered druggist as well as a citizen of the state.

JACKSON, Miss., June 21. (AP)—Walter Burley, negro slayer of two women, was sentenced to be hanged today by a Hinds county circuit court jury. Burley will be hanged for an attack on one of his victims. He was taken to unannounced destination for safe keeping until July 22, the date set for his execution.

Burley was brought to trial today in a court room closed to the public and to newspapermen, and guarded by six hundred state troops armed with machine guns and tear gas bombs. The extraordinary precautions were taken because of disquieting rumors that occurred after the negro's arrest.

Burley brought here during the night under heavy guard, entered a plea of guilty when arraigned. The jury was specially drawn and ten witnesses, among them Mrs. S. Rees, husband of one of the slain women, and brother of Miss Martha Ives, who was attacked and killed, testified. The jury returned its verdict in one minute and thirty seconds. The murder charges against the negro were not prosecuted, the trial being for the assault upon the younger woman.

Special to The Record News.

Chamber of commerce and committee officials declined to make comment tonight, but it is believed that the issue will again be presented to the people at an early date. Necessary improvements in the county make such action practically imperative, officials affirm.

The vote from the Kirkland-Tell, Hazel, Chand and Shook's Creek killed the issue, opposition was strongest in these districts it was noted. Vote and Silverton, two smaller towns of the county, went unanimously for the bonds.

A four-to-one vote in favor of the bond issue was polled in the city of Childress.

chamber of commerce Tuesday, Hubert M. Harrison, manager, announced.

"There has been an excellent response on the part of the people on this arrangement, and we are anxious that each shall have returnd his card by Friday night," he said.

COMMITTEE OF WOMEN TO JOIN CAMPAIGN.

A committee of 75 women of Wichita Falls and surrounding communities will be named Wednesday morning to serve on an additional campaign committee in the interest of carrying Saturday's election to a successful finish, it was announced Tuesday, following a meeting of the special women's committee of seven members. Mrs. M. M. Adickes was named chairman of this committee at the meeting.

16,000 BALLOTS READY FOR ELECTION.

Sixteen thousand ballots for the road bond election to be held Saturday were received Tuesday by E. P. Walsh, county auditor.

The state law specifies that one and one-half ballots for every poll tax shall be printed for all elections. There were 10,900 poll taxes issued this year in the district in which the election will be held.

Subordinate committees to superintend details of the campaign will be named following the meeting of the general committee, and will at once put into effect several plans as they were drafted Tuesday. Among these will be a telephone committee, personal call group, and a transportation committee.

This last named unit will furnish cars for the use of women in the outlying districts who may have no way of reaching the polls on election day, it was said. Scores of women have volunteered their services in the cause of this good road issue, and everything will be done to insure a heavy vote from the women of the district, it was affirmed at the meeting.

Others on the committee which met Tuesday at 3 o'clock in the chamber of commerce rooms are: Mesdames P. A. Welty, C. R. Hartsook, G. B. Smedley, J. C. A. Guest, A. R. Blakeley and Mrs. Adickes.

Heavy Rains Boom Crop Outlook

ita Falls that houses were flooded during the height of the water shed. The moisture laden gale did small damage to shrubbery and trees in the city and a skating rink under a large tent on Holliday street was partially wrecked, it was reported.

Crop Outlook Good.

In the South Central and Eastern parts of the state the rain was general, Austin, Waco, Bryan and Palestine reporting downpours in their respective districts.

Although crops were already in good condition from heavy rains the previous week, Tuesday morning's fall will be of great value to farmers. Had it not rained so hard, however, the value would have been greater, it has been pointed out. Cotton in most sections was not in need of rain but is not hurt.

Farmers of Wichita county are advised to scatter their grain stacks immediately to prevent sprouting following the recent rains, and to turn over any cut grain that has not been stacked, O. K. Barnes, manager of the agricultural department of the chamber of commerce, said Tuesday. G. C. McGown, county farm agent, was in conference with Mr. Barnes concerning conditions now prevalent in the county, and added his recommendation to this effect.

The rain may prove harmful to grain that has not been thrashed if proper measures to prevent sprouting and rotting are not taken, both men affirmed. The precipitation of last week was not injurious, but added rainfall may cause serious damage to the crop, they said.

Timperature Climbs.

Potato growers are also advised to go ahead and plow up the crop without waiting for the fields to dry as continued rains may injure the potatoes. It would be three or four days before the digger could be used again, and the safest way to insure the crop will be by plowing, Mr. Barnes said.

Although Tuesday morning was somewhat cooler than Monday, clear skies in the afternoon allowed the sun to bear down and boost the temperature to 99 degrees during the afternoon. The minimum temperature during the 24-hour period was 64 degrees, it was reported by the Texas Electric Service company co-operative weather bureau.

In Wichita Falls the rain was accompanied by one of the most severe electrical storms of the season. No damage was reported from this source, however.

RAINS HELP OUTLOOK IN DONLEY COUNTY

CLARENDON, June 21.—Rains varying in amounts from one-third of an inch to one inch or more fell over Donely county Sunday night. These rains will be of great value to farmers over the entire county and especially in the western and northern sections where no rain had fell this spring with the exception of a few showers. Donley county has not had a crop failure in 26 years and these showers will hold the moisture sufficient for the time being. Crops in the southern and eastern parts of the county are in excellent condition, while in the west they are practically as well, after the recent rains the north part of the county is in the need of rain more than any other section.

All wheat in the county has been harvested with the exception of some few fields in the northern part of the county, and with light rains in that section all will be completed in a few days.

Conditions as a whole in this county are good and with additional rains within the next week or so will be in excellent shape as where moisture is light most farmers have dry planted and recent showers will bring this up and future rains will hold it within the next two weeks.

QUITAQUE CROPS IN FINE CONDITION

QUITAQUE, June 21.—With practically one and one-half inches of rainfall crop conditions in this section have been decidedly benefitted.

According to the wheat raisers the grain crop has practically all been harvested. The yield is much better than was expected 30 days ago.

Many farmers in this section that planted before the recent rain say they have a good stand of grain sorghums, and will be benefited considerably by the rain.

It is the general opinion of the farmers that there is plenty of time yet for a feed crop to ripen before frost if planted by the first of July.

It is the opinion of many, that if this country gets a late frost that much cotton will be made if planted by the first of July.

No insects of any kind have made their appearance here yet.

CROPS OUTLOOK AT GRAHAM BEST EVER

GRAHAM, June 21. (Sp.)—Crop outlook in the Graham section has never been more promising at this time of the year, say observers. The rain one week ago, amounting to 2.2 inches, practically insured a good yield of corn and other feed crops and cotton was placed in good condition, the rain last night giving additional aid to the latter crop. Practically all grain has been cut.

GRAIN HARVEST UNDER WAY IN WALTERS AREA

WALTERS, Okla., June 21.(Sp.) Although the yield per acre is exceedingly light this year, the grain harvest is under full swing in this county, having been interrupted by the rains.

SENTINEL, Okla., June 21.(Sp.) Crops in this section have been materially benefitted by the recent rains, the first of which fell one week ago and amount to 1.38 inches.

KANSAS PEN HAS MUTINY

328 Prisoners Defy Guards In Mine

LANSING, Kan., June 21. (AP)—Mutiny in the ranks of the convicts of the Kansas penitentiary here flared up above ground early tonight, while 328 prisoners, barricaded 720 feet under the surface in the prison mine, defied officials of the institution.

Occupants of B. cell house overpowered three guards, locked the cell house door and planned to burn the twine factory as a means of escaping the prison.

The riot was brought under control when the day guards, who were just going off duty, were hastily called back, equipped with shotguns and began firing on the rioters.

J. E. Thomas, one of the guards in the cell house, which quartered 310 convicts, was stabbed twice in the chest. A prisoner was shot in the leg by Deputy Warden R. H. Hudspeth, in charge of the prison in the absence of Warden W. H. Mackey. Thomas' condition is not serious.

Before order was finally restored, the prison was being patrolled by 115 guards armed with riot guns.

Nine prisoners were removed from the cell house, marched across the prison yard and put in solitary confinement. About a dozen knives and clubs were taken from the rioting prisoners.

The riot was believed to have been part of a plot of the mutineers in the mine as it was in B cell house that the convict miners were quartered.

The prisoners in the cell house overpowered F. E. Tildon, J. E. Thomas and A. B. Casey, guards, took their keys and locked them in a cell. Thomas was stabbed during the encounter. The extent of his injuries has not yet been determined.

The prisoners then locked the cell house door. Deputy Warden Hudspeth grabbed a shotgun, climbed up to a window and began firing on the prisoners, shooting twice.

Harry Baird, doing a life term for murder at Wichita, called out that the prisoners would surrender if the shooting was stopped. The guards rushed forward with their shotguns and the prisoners opened the outer cell door.

Hudspeth ordered immediate search of the prisoners inside but before the search could begin, about a dozen knives and two clubs were thrown out the door.

Meanwhile no word had been had with the 328 prisoners who have revolted and are entrenched in the prison mine. The prisoners still refuse to answer the telephone connecting the mine with the surface.

Paul Kelly Testifies For Dorothy Mackeye

LOS ANGELES, June 21. (AP)—Paul Kelly, under sentence for the death of Ray Raymond, musical comedy actor, came to the defense of Dorothy Mackaye, Raymond's actress wife, who is accused of conspiring to conceal the facts of his death, in her trial here today.

The screen juvenile was led from the county jail to testify for the state but what he told of the fist fight with Raymond, April 16, and evens leading up to it were construed by court room attaches as tending to support the defense. The state contended that the fist fight was responsible for Raymond's death and brought charges against Miss Mackaye and Dr. W. J. Sullivan who attended the actor, on felony charges of trying to make it appear that death was due to natural causes.

Lindy Makes Aviation Plea

Commercial Flying to Progress by Leaps, Bounds

ST. LOUIS, Mo., June 21.—Commercial aviation in America is certain to "progress by leaps and bounds within the next few years," Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, the national air hero declared here tonight in a speech before the industrial club of St. Louis.

Lindbergh attended the club's banquet as his first public function in two days.

The air hero devoted most of his address before the club to a plea for the industrial development of St. Louis hand in hand with a development of aviation.

The banquet also was addressed by Harry Hall Knight and Harold M. Bixby, who promoted Lindy's trans-Atlantic flight. Both praised the youthful flier.

Lindbergh's speech, the longest he has made since returning to this country dealt chiefly with the problems of St. Louis.

"It is only natural that all that has happened since we landed at Le Bourget field should leave impressions which I can never forget. But more indelible than all these will certainly be those grim days of doubt when I sought some one to believe in me and my ambitions," Lindbergh said.

"That my search took a brighter turn came through the interest Mr. Bixby and Mr. Knight, an interest which I want the world to know was the true springboard for the flight.

"I am not a business man and cannot tell you about economic advantages which would bring business to this city. My interest, however, is aviation and I can not help but feel that St. Louis has a rare opportunity in the development of aviation, which is certain to progress by leaps and bounds within the next few years. If the industrial club sponsored this development among its other activities, it would go far to justify the hopes we now hold for it.

"That the phrase "Spirit of St. Louis" is now rather extensively known, has a favorable significance, but at the same time leaves an obligation. A united effort on the part of St. Louis and naturally implies that the St. Louis spirit is back of it. Its success or failure will be observed by the rest of the nation."

Lindy will leave here tomorrow or Thursday for Washington. He will fly east and later visit New York to complete arrangements for a trans-continental tour. He will accept no invitations, however, for two weeks at least.

Last Rites Held For Walter Hall

Funeral services for Walter H. Hall, 29, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Hall, 1202 Burnett street, were held at 5 o'clock Tuesday afternoon from the family residence. The Rev. W. H. Townsend, pastor of the Lamar Avenue Baptist church, conducted the services.

Mr. Hall died at a local hospital Monday night following a relapse of malaria, originally contracted while he worked as a civil engineer in Central America. Besides his parents Mr. Hall is survived by a sister, Mrs. Jack Speegle.

GAS BUGGIES—The Sweets of Publicity

By FRANK BECK

"My Plane and I—

FROM THE LIPS OF LINDY HIMSELF"

(When Col. Charles Lindbergh landed at LeBourget Field, Paris, after his epochal flight from New York, William Hillman, Universal Service writer, was waiting for him. They met and never separated until New York's great reception for the Atlantic ace. To Hillman, Lindbergh told his story intimately as friend to friend. Hillman is now writing under title "My Plane and I From the Lips of Lindy Himself," a 60,000-word story for The Wichita Falls Record News and associated newspapers in Universal ervice. The second chapter of this story appears in today's issue. Succeeding chapters will appear daily for the next 30 days.)

By WILLIAM HILLMAN

(Copyright, 1927, by King Syndicate, Inc.)

The world never knew a happier mortal than Lindbergh in flight. Not even Shelley's Skylark, that "scorner of the ground" was more joyous or carefree on wing. But unlike Shelley's Skylark, Lindbergh never sings. Lindy has never been known to whistle. He cannot hum a tune, an awkward silence seizes him when music is played. Sometimes in the past, when classmates or aviators on "Gypsy" flying tours with him would sit around a evenings and warble popular and sentimental ballads, Lindy would grin but never join in the singing.

Lindy never made any pretentions about his inability to follow a tune. I have seen him at two church services one in London. While others wound intone the hymns Lindbergh would remin silent, not even pretending by following the words with his lips.

"Singing's not my line," he said in his naive manner.

But when the rough and tumble boyish games begin, Lindy is equal to any in the play.

Lindy's favorite sport is to pounce on someone suddenly and send him sprawling. Unexpectedly he will stick out his foot and trip someone.

He Likes "Horseplay"

"Horseplay" is his only outlet for the vast abundance of animal spirit which many hours in the air does not seem to dissipate.

On the second day of his return to the United States on the cruiser Memphis, I saw him steal up stealthily behind his friend B. Franklin Mahoney, who built the trans-Atlantic plane. He pretended to be preoccupied about something. One hand was in his pocket, the other behind his back.

He made a sudden move and placed something on Mahoney's head—so gently that Mahoney observed and felt nothing.

Lindy ambled off quietly. Several of the officers who had witnessed Lindy's prank, were almost doubled up with laughter and had to leave the room to save themselves from giving the joke away.

Mahoney kept on talking with one of the officers. Then he began to sniff the air. Something was burning.

What's on here he asked.

Fire on His Head.

Then he felt the heat and realizing something was smoking from the crown of his head, he quickly ruffled his hair and a short string lighted at both ends and smoking, dropped to the floor.

Mahoney kept on talking with looked about the room and started for the cabin he was sharing with Lindy. And for the next five minutes there was a rough and tumble staged in the cabin.

A few minutes later, Lindy came out with a grin on his face, but saying nothing.

One night Mahoney turned in an hour later than Lindbergh. Not wishing to disturb Lindy, he did not put on the light, but felt around for his cot, an improvised canvas cot which had been placed there for his accommodation. He sat down and went tumbling to the ground. Lindy had fixed that.

Even on the eve of his welcome back to the United States, within only a few hours of Washington, where he was to be received by President Coolidge, Lindy turned the waterhose on Mahoney.

The shouting and the tumult of Europe, the praise and the adulation of statesmen and kings had not made Lindy forget that he was still a boy.

He Likes Candy.

Lindy or "Slim" as he is always called by his friends, has a boyish love for candy.

His favorite candy is peanut brittle. His cabin was well supplied with peanut brittle coming home on the Memphis.

The second day out, Mahoney began to feel seasick. The Memphis was passing through heavy seas. "Slim" was having a great time, and the sea had no terror for him.

He took to teasing Mahoney.

"Have some peanut brittle," he said. "peanut brittle's good for seasickness. Sure it is."

And Mahoney had to come up for fresh air as Lindy took a huge bite out of the peanut bar.

Lindy likes gumdrops, too. Shortly after his arrival in Paris, he was taken out early in the morning to see a bit of Paris before the round of ceremonies began. He was driven around in the embassy car.

The Louvre, The Garden of The Tuileries, Rue de Rivoli, Paris' brightest jewels, were pointed out to him. But Lindy's gaze became eager as the car passed a famous candy shop.

Hops for Gumdrops.

"Just a minute, please," he said. "Can't we stop here?"

The car stopped. Lindy went in and asked if he could get some gumdrops. He stood there in front of a pretty little French salesgirl, who recognized him at once; and as her big wide eyes opened with wonder, he blushed and fumbled like a schoolboy.

He was still wearing a borrowed suit that hung around him loosely. He did not have a hat, for Lindy never wears a hat if he can help it. But no dapper, perfumed little Frenchman could have awed the little salesgirl as Lindy did.

She was the first to recover, and after Lindy's order had been translated into French by Lindy's companion from the embassy, she picked out the freshest and choicest gumdrops in the shop.

Lindy ordered a pound of gumdrops.

"I crave sweets once in a while," he told me. "I like good old American apple pie."

I shall never forget the evening of the day he arrived in London. He had just gone through a trying experience at Croydon where he was afraid his plane would be damaged by the huge crowd.

He got a few minutes rest at the American embassy, and after changing into a blue striped suit, he bought in Paris, was ushered by Ambassador Houghton into the guest room where English and American newspaper ment awaited him.

Champagne, sandwiches and little cakes were spread around a huge table.

He Devours Cakes.

Lindy edged over to the table, and pulling a dish full of cakes toward him, began to munch them. Between questions he stuffed himself with cakes, or rather, between cakes, he answered questions.. The dish was rapidly exhausted, and he edged over to another dish of cakes.

He was the hungriest, sweet-toothed lad you ever saw!

But he never touched the champagne. But more of that later.

Another boyish characteristic of his is his indifference to clothes.

Give him a rough sweater and a pair of old trousers, and all the shops of Bond street or Piccadilly cannot lure him.

"Have you ordered your suit here in London yet," Lindy was asked by an English newspaper man.

"No" he answered naively, "I got two in Paris."

"Are you setting any special styles' he was asked.

Lindy grew serious. "What's that got to do with aviation" he asked.

Later on that evening he said to me:

"I'm setting no styles. I'm no fashion plate."

But there's no denying his fashion plate appearance when he dressed in evening clothes, the first he ever owned, or in the handsome flying clothes he purchased in Paris.

He was worried at first about appearing in Swallow Tails, but his long slim figure, his poise, his erect carriage made it seem as if he were accustomed to full dress all his life.

Who could have said which was the better dressed man, the Prince of Wales, or Colonel Lindbergh as these two public idols posed together one evening for their picture?

(Chapter five will continue Lindbergh the boy and the man—telling about Lindy's sentiments about drink.)

THREE MEET VIOLENT ENDS

Charges of Murder Filed In Fort Worth Againts Two

FORT WORTH, June 21.(AP)—Two charges of murder, one against a woman, were filed here today following three violent deaths here Monday.

Mrs. Johnnie Mae Quiram, 22, mother of two small children, was charged with murder after her husband, Henry J. Quiram, a stone cutter, died in a hospital from a pistol shot wound in the leg sustained during a family quarrel June 12. Bond was set at $12,500 and the case prepared for the grand jury.

Innes Bermantello, Mexican, was charged with murder in connection with the fatal stabbing of Felerde Lopaz Monday night in an affray in which Lopaz is alleged to have shot a third Mexican, Felipe Lopez, inflicting serious but not necessarily fatal wounds. The cause of the fight had not been determined by police at noon today.

No charges were filed in the third death, that of Antonio Cardenas, 19, who was stabbed late Monday by a Mexican boy friend although Macario Padillo, 17, was held for a time in connection with the affair. Cardenas was stabbed in a friendly scuffle with Padillo and a third Mexican youth who were on their way to church, District Attorney Martin said. He bled to death while en route to a hospital after having been removed first to his home.

Mrs. Quiram, although prostrated at news of her husband's death in a hospital, asked to go to his funeral set for this afternoon.

MAYBE THE CAT OBJECTED.

LORAIN, O.—"As long as it ain't Friday, I haven't any objections," said George Jennings, lord high executioner of the Lorain police force. Someone had just brought a black cat to be destroyed and Patrolman Buda, who had been assigned to the job, just couldn't see it. Not that he was superstitious, said the patrolman, but there's a limit to everything. So he called upon Jennings to pinch-hit for him and after glancing at the calendar, George escorted pussy to the lethal chamber.

Byrd May Hop Off Today

Storm Prevents Tuesday Starting of Flight

By Universal Service.

NEW YORK, June 21.—Commander Richard E. Byrd and his crew of three hope to take off on their non-stop flight to Paris tomorrow evening.

A new storm developed today between Nantucket and the Grand Banks of Newfoundland and delayed the tsart which had been planned for today.

Byrd was sworn in today as the first trans-Atlantic air mail flier. The ceremonies were elaborate. He will carry 300 letters to be delivered in Europe.

The letters are from nationally prominent persons, including governors of several states. This mail officially closed last night and there is no chance now of anyone getting another letter on the Byrd plane.

The name of the fourth man who will make the flight has been announced. He is Lieutenant Bernet Balchen, who has just resigned from the Norwegian navy and has taken out citizenship papers here.

Byrd met Balchen at Spitzbergen while preparing for his North Pole flight and the two became close friends. Since Byrd has been preparing for the Paris flight Balchen has been giving him valuable help around the hangar and on the field.

Others who will attempt the Paris trip with Byrd are Bert Acosta, the pilot, and George Noville, the combined navigator, radio operator and cameraman.

Balchen is also an all-around man on a plane and will be valuable to the expedition.

Acosta, however, will be Byrd's right-hand man. He holds several flying records and has a world-wide reputation as a pilot.

The fliers had hoped to get away today. It looked this morning as though they would be on their way tonight but at noon the weather man held up his warning hand again and the start was once more delayed.

TAKE BACK YOUR GOLD!

CLEVELAND, O.—"What could I do with $30,000?" asked George Schmidt, 60, inmate of Warrensville workhouse, when told of a legacy bequeathed to him by a deceased relative. "Home was never like this. Lemme alone." George does odd jobs of gardening and whatnot around the workhouse and is well-behaved, say the authorities. So the chances are that he will continue at the old stand.

Talks supporting the issue and urgin the realtors to assist in the campaign now being waged by proponents of the bonds were made by J. M. bland and Walter Curlee.

The major portion of the meeting was taken up in hearing reports from members of the board who attended the state realtors convention at Beaumont.

The ports were made by Mrs. V. W. Vain, A. L. Huey, Roscoe Staton, P. S. Richardson and Mr. Curlee. All of the speakers attested to the fact that Beaumont provided an excellent convention.

Coolidge Is a Fisherman

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE was reported to have caught a string of trout in a Black Hills brooklet and to have used worms for baiting. Senator William A. Borah of Idaho branded the story as a fabrication. He had never heard of worm fishing for trout. He slyly intimated that the president had fished for trout and hooked catfish.

Senator James A. Reed was there with his stinger. He said "any trout that will lie at the bottom of a lake and bite a worm is a degenerate trout. As a matter of generosity and common fairness, however, I hope Coolidge used a whole worm."

That is where the sting comes in. President Coolidge is said to be a thrifty man and very frugal when it comes to baiting the hook. It is a base Democratic insinuation to say that he would only make use of a half or divided worm to lure a Black Hills trout into the White House frying pan.

Borah and Reed are expert anglers. They are envious anglers. They are westerners. They are unwilling to give a Vermont angler a fair deal.

More Than a Dream

SEVENTY-THREE years ago Fort Worth was a frontier village of 300 inhabitants, a frontier army post and vast herds of buffalo grazed on the western plains of the commonwealth. Howard Peak celebrated his 73rd birthday the other day. He has the distinction of being the first white child born in the city of Fort Worth, in the county of Tarrant. All the 300 pioneers held a celebration just after his arrival. It wasn't a dry celebration. All the 300 were champions of moisture. Peak has been a commercial traveler for 55 years. He has his fads when vacation time comes—he plays golf, hopes for the return of Jacksonian practices and customs, writes stories of old pioneers and when he is in a mellow mood, he "indicts a bit of poetry."

When he made his bow on or to this mundane sphere Texas was a wilderness. Look at it now.

New Law for Williamson

WILLIAMSON county; under a new law relating only to the county and reorganizing the school system of the county, has abolished the teacher's institute. That is, the new law provides for its abandonment and the substitution therefor a system of supervision of primary and intermediate work in the schools of the county by experts, the election of a county board of education as all other county officers are elected, composed of one member from each commissioner's precinct and a chairman-at-large and charging that board with the election of a county superintendent. All teachers are to be selected from a list prepared by the county superintendent. This is said to be a new departure in Texas.

In the Rain Belt

THEY irrigate in the Magic Valley. There are times when they do not need the impounded water. Jim Hogg county isn't exactly in the irrigated belt, but it is on the fringe. A rain fall aggregating eight inches fell in Jim Hogg and adjoining counties the other day. There are shallow oil wells in Jim Hogg. There are water holes in Jim Hogg. Eight inches of rain made the stockmen happy and the drillers of wells more than happy. Tremendous cotton crops are promised in Jim Hogg and Zapata counties this year. Tremendous corn crops have been made. Wherever there is moisture in the ground there is money in the pocket of the tiller.

Mexicans in Texas

IT is said there are 300,000 Mexicans in Texas still under the jurisdiction of the Mexican government. It is also said by the legal advisor of these 300,000 that work would begin immediately in exterminating the Mexican fruit fly, and research work would be started to discover effective methods for exterminating the insect. This double-barreled announcement has been made by a special attorney for the Calles government who is sojourning in Texas. It is said the boll weevil came from Mexico. It is said the pink boll worm came from Mexico. Now the fruit fly is said to be doing extensive damage to orchards in the Rio Grande valley.

Foster for Prison Reform

REP. BEN F. FOSTER of Del Rio is for prison reform. He addressed his constituents on his return home, and the prison system of Texas consumed a major portion of his time and address. He declared although there were approximately 3200 convicts in Texas prisons and the state had invested about $9,000,000, the whole system was a losing proposition from a financial point of view, "going in the hole upwards of a million dollars a year." It takes a large size rat hole to swallow a million a year of the people's money.

Uncle Sam Must Pay For Gas

UNCLE SAM is not exempt from the three-cent gasoline tax away down here in Texas. This is the ruling of the attorney general, and army authorities are hostile to the ruling. They will buy army gas supplies outside of the state. Uncle Sam has $600,000,000 surplus in his treasury. Why should he plead poverty?

Toll Bridges Banned

UNDER specifications of the federal bureau of roads toll bridges are not allowed on any designated highway. Now the Texas state highway commission is making plans for eliminating Red river toll bridges. Hasn't the owner of a toll bridge a vested right? Which is the most sacred? A vested right or a constitution?

The Day Book of a New Yorker

By BURTON ROSCOE

NEW YORK, June 21. (EFS)—At a club the other night a writer was complaining that his financial worries were so great that he could not get his mind on his work, and so his financial condition was getting steadily worse.

"Nonsense," said a successful publisher. "Don't you know that all of the finest poetry and the best literature are produced by poets and novelists living on crumbs in garrets?"

"I know nothing of the kind," answered the writer. "If what you say were true, the present state of American literature should be more flourishing in undying masterpieces; for you publishers are disposed to ration us with crumbs."

At the corner of Fifth avenue and Fifty-ninth street yesterday I saw a maroon colored limousine of foreign make, the tonneau of which had no side windows and only two small, oval windows, one in the front and one in the back. The chauffeur, of course, sat in a seat in front; but the owner of the car was entirely shut off from the stares of the vulgar.

This limousine looked somewhat like an expensive and luxurious armored car, and it attracted a swarm of people as it waited at the curb. I stood for some time, hoping to see the owner come out of a shop and get into it. I did this because I wanted to make up my mind as to one of the two possible reasons that, it occurred to me, any one should have a car especially designed like that. One of the reasons might be that the owner is a snob who does not wish to look upon the common mob or have the common mob look at her or him. The other reason might be that the owner was physically so afflicted that he or she did not wish to be gazed upon. I never found out which was the true reason.

The importance of timeliness in reading matter and the importance of not being ahead of the public taste is strikingly exemplified in the great sale of "The New Medical Follies," by Dr. Morris Fishbein. This book is a best seller among the non-fiction books.

The first chapter, which runs to nearly three-quarters of the book, is an encyclopedia of the fake cures, quackeries and psycho-therapies of the medical world. Eleven years ago H. L. Mencken published almost precisely the same list, and a much more extensive one than Dr. Fishbein's, as a supplement to "A Book of Burlesques." Mencken called it "A Genealogical Chart of the Uplift."

Mencken got $100 in advance royalties on the "Book of Burlesques," out of which he had to pay a stenographer for typing the book $40. About a year's work netted him, then, about $60. During the intervening eleven years, however, his books have become very profitable sellers. And it is a satisfaction to note that first editions of "A Book of Burlesques" are so rare and so much in demand that they bring almost as much per copy as was Mencken's profit out of the book the first year it was issued.

The number of men (?) with make-up on their faces seems to be increasing in the neighborhood of Times Square, and is making that district more and more distasteful to normal people. These mincing creatures have their eyebrows plucked, their eyelids blacked with mascara, their cheeks and lips rouged. It is bad enough to see how much the women on Broadway are over-painted and over-made up. Some of the younger women look like circus clowns, with their faces powdered dead white, their eyebrows made artificially long with a black pencil, and their lips painted very thick. But these painted sissy boys make one want to rush for the fireaxe.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED—

The entrance of America into the World War finds Phillip Wynne Track IV suffering from the collapse of his first passionate love affair. Before this, he and Natlee Jones had had a childish engagement.

Rod and Phil are the first to enlist. Natlee nearly breaks Rod's heart by ignoring him entirely at the depot where she has gone to see the boys off, so great was her anxiety to see Phil.

Mrs. Tracy sends Phil a letter of introduction to Marta Tennis, the daughter of an old friend, who lives near the training camp to which Phil had been sent.

Here he meets Gladys, a girl of the streets, to whom, on an impulse of pity Phil proposes marriage. The girl, for Phil's good, refuses and he then insists on giving her a thousand dollars with which to start life anew.

Phil's regiment is ordered back to New York, presumably bound for France. In New York he meets Natlee, and his love for her flames afresh. They plan to be married but the immediate departure of Phil's regiment prevents this.

After a miserable voyage Phil finds himself in France, and there makes friends of a peasant woman who is kind to him. Shortly they are ordered to the front, and Phil writes loving letters home.

Here the story further unfolds—

"The One Who Gets the Lady Stays Here."

CHAPTER XXXXVI

UP TO THE FRONT

At 1 o'clock that night, almost 24 hours before they had expected to leave, the regiment was piled into box cars.

After much jolting, starting and stopping the funny little French engine decided that getting these carefree Americans up to the front was really worth the effort, and so started sluggishly off.

Half the town was there to bid them "bonne chance", and Godspeed.

Phil could not help but notice the total absence of young men. There were old women and young women, old men and children—but the poignant tragedy was that except for the wrecks still in their army uniforms, there was not a Frenchman on the platform between the ages of 19 and 40.

He looked about at these Americans who were starting out so gayly for this unknown adventure. How many of them would soon go back to their little home town in America, crippled and maimed, and would be waving good luck to those who were taking their places.

Finally, a little before daylight, the train stopped and the regiment detrained.

They marched on.

Phil felt that they were now getting near, for all the while in the distance someone seemed to be having a huge Fourth-of-July celebration and the firecrackers were popping.

All at once the whole regiment was fairly snapped to its toes.

"That's why we're here, and we'll give 'em hell."

Shortly a gleam of red, down by the horizon, grew brighter and touched with a glow of light, a wayside shrine—throwing into relief the body of a French soldier lying with his face upturned to the Christ on the cross above him.

A sudden hush went over the long line of men as they passed him lying there.

Rod turned to Phil, his voice soft and reverent as he saluted.

"They're brothers, aren't they?" he said.

Long afterward Phil remembered those words. He realized that Rod, as did that other man whose image hung upon that cross, had the same capacity for sacrifice—the same love for his fellows.

They marched on.

The sun had risen—the boom of the guns grew louder. On the horizon an observation ballon loomed, rising—then another—and still a third.

Phil thought he had never seen a more beautiful day. After the rain the sky was beautiful and the flowers were poking up their heads from the ditches from beside of the road.

If it didn't seem possible that just a little way beyond there was war—that the guns they were booming louder and louder meant that men were killing each other.

A little wry smile curled his mouth. "It is much too nice a day. It is much too good to be alive." And he gave a sigh of appreciation.

They marched on.

The day became more beautiful, if possible. It seemed to affect the whole regiment of marching men.

Then from out the blue a noise like that of 10 giant sirens cut the ether. "Everybody down!" someone shouted.

At the same moment the shriek of the sirens ended with a boom, as though hundreds of pounds of dynamite had exploded, throwing the dirt high in the air and showering the whole country.

A piece of hard earth clanged on his steel helmet, and Phillip realized that as usual he had disobeyed orders and stood stock still in the middle of the road, trying to explain to himself what was going on.

It was not fright he concluded, when he thought of it afterward—it was just that he had not known what it was. It had all come so fast that he had not gotten the command while he was trying to place the sound of his first shell.

He came to himself calling "Rod, Rod!" His only fear was that something had happened to his friend. His heart beat more calmly when he saw Rod rushing toward him.

"Everything's jake with me, old man," he assured him. "And you?"

"Same here, Phil."

"Company, fall in! Forward!" They marched on.

Although Phil thought he had not only sampled, but exhausted all the smells that could assail his nostrils, he knew before he had spent one night at the front that there was no smell so terrible as that of disinterred bodies. He also learned there was no noise so terrific as the noise at the front when a barrage was on.

Phil and Rod were immediately ordered to report to the Intelligence Department. There had been desultory fighting back and forth across the river all day, and Rod and Phil in headquarters company, were kept busy laying lines from the batteries to their headquarters and their outposts, and repairing them when the boche shells had cut the wires.

Every day there were rumors of the mobilization of the Germans at this sector with a last "do or die and get to Paris" push.

And then one morning Phil awakened from his two-hour sleep, his ears pounding. He rolled out of his blanket and rushed to the cellar where the telephone station had been installed. Lieutenant Andrews was there before him. It's come, Tracy," he said. "We're in it now, and God have mercy on their souls."

Phil did not realize that he could like anyone as well as he liked Lieutenant Andrews at that moment. He seemed human. He seemed friendly.

He was to remember this meeting when after the war he read Thomas B. Dawson's book, and he knew that the tie of battle was a stronger one than the tie of blood. No one could hate another when they were fighting side by side.

They were banded together against a common enemy.

Lietenant Andrews detailed Phil and Rod to report at the outpost on a hill, which overlooked the Marne, to observe shell fire.

The men they relieved were dog tired and hungry. "Hell's apopping," said one of them. "Good luck to you. They haven't come anywhere near our range yet."

"You've got a seat in the first row, haven't you? The crest of that hill over there belongs to the Germans. Who'll own it when the day is over, God alone knows."

Rod and Phil watched that hill all through the day. It was not more than half a mile distant. The replacing and alternate blowing up of a pontoon bridge which the Americans had tried to throw across the Marne kept them in a tense state of excitement. They watched the slaughter through their glasses until they could look upon it no more. Toward night Lieutenant Dolan arrived at the outpost.

"We've got to find out," he said, "if Americans or Germans are holding that hill."

For a moment Phil could not realize that Lieutenant Dolan was saying "we" instead of "I."

And then he knew that when men face death, whether they are generals, lieutenants or privates, they are equal.

"We've got to find out," he continued, "who holds that mass of ruins over on our left. The major told me to pick up one of you and hop to it and have a look."

"It seems there is a chance of the Americans having it, and if they have, we don't want to fire on our own men."

"I'm on," sand Phil, quickly.

"Very well, sir, let's go," spoke up Rod, at the same instant.

"Phil, it's better that I go," said Rod, slowly. There was that in his voice and in his eyes that spoke volumes.

"Rod, I wouldn't miss this for anything in the world. Why, this is what I came for."

Rod stubbornly shook his head. "Say, listen, you two," interrupted Lieutenant Dolan, "I don't care a damn which of you goes, but we're supposed to start at sundown." As he spoke, the sun, as if bidding goodbye to all the horror it had looked upon that day, slipped behind the hill in a blaze of red, as though it, too, were writing good night in letters of blood.

"There's the signal, lieutenant. Come on, let's go."

Rod clutched Phil's arm. "Wait a minute, Phil," he pleaded, with what seemed one last forlorn hope. "Let's match for it."

Phil drew a two-franc piece out of his pocket, saying, "The one who gets the lady stays here."

"I'm never lucky with ladies—I'll take the other side."

Phil tossed the coin and Rod spoke.

As it fell, Lieutenant Dolan bent forward. He raised his head and said: "Come on, Tracy, let's go."

They wormed their way down the hillside to the river's edge. Lieutenant Dolan told Phil he had information that the French had thrown a bridge across further up the river that was passible at last report.

Flat on their bellies, they at last found the bridge. It had been made out of house doors nailed together on one side and tied onto the other with ropes.

At best it was precarious crossing.

Phil never forgot the sensation—wiggling across that muddy river on those doors which sagged into the water with every move of his body.

Alone in No Man's Land with his lieutenant, what will happen to Phil? Will Rod be content at his post? Find out tomorrow.

How Long Should a Man's Legs Be?

We believe Abraham Lincoln answered this question by saying "Long enough to reach the ground."

It's much the same when talking newspaper circulation. The Record News believes that a newspaper should have "enough circulation to produce results."

Of course, The Record News could "claim" "umpteen thousands of circulation"—but The Record News is prepared to let its case rest upon what an A B C auditor's report PROVES that it has—rather than upon any figure we might decide to claim!

Thousands of families that read The Record News read no other Wichita Falls newspaper.

Women Who Do Not Remain In Their Homes Make Best Companions

Why Wifes Who Do Not Remain Eternally at Home Make Better Companions—How Can a 19-Year-Old Sissy Become "a Regular Fellow"?—The Young Girl Who Hesitates to Wed a Widower With Children.

Dear Miss Dix—I am the mother of two daughters 9 and 12 years old. I keep house and also fill an office position from 9 to 5. One day in two weeks I have off. On that day I take the car—that I have helped to purchase—and spend the day visiting friends or just peacefully driving for relaxation. My husband resents this, as he works and cannot accompany me, and he is extremely jealous if I invite a woman friend to go along. There is always such a scene when I return, which is never later than 6 p. m., that my day off has become a nightmare. My husband thinks that I should spend every moment at home and never need any change. What do you think?—A. S.

Answer: I think you are exactly right to spend your day off in such a wholesome manner and in a way that gives you the most pleasure and relaxation. And if your foolish husband objects to your indulging in such an innocent diversion, the only thing to do is just to let him rave.

But I'll tell him he doesn't know when he is well off and how much these days of jolly visiting among your old friends and long rides along lovely country roads save him. For it takes the kink out of a tired woman's nerves and soothes her ruffled spirits and gives her something cheerful and bright to think about and protects her husband from many a mental chastisement that he would otherwise get.

To my mind, there is nothing else in the world so curious as that the average man has never learned a thing about the psychology of women. He has advanced in every other respect, but he still looks at women from the medieval point of view and hangs on to the same old superstitions that his great-great-grandfather held about women.

And one of these is the theory that a woman's place is in the home; that every minute should be spent in the home; that she should have no other interests besides the home; that she couldn't possibly desire any other amusement except cooking and washing and sewing and patching and baby-tending, and, above all, that she could never desire any other society except her husband's.

Therefore, a lot of misguided men who hang on with a death grip to these antique ideas try their level best to keep their wives prisoners in their homes and thereby work their own undoing.

For they never realize that nine tenths of women's irritability and high-temper are just sheer nerves, the result of doing over and over and over again the same dull and monotonous tasks and that the only way to relieve this tension is by giving them change and variety.

Nor do they realize that the cause of most women's nagging is just because they have so little to think about that they dwell on one little grievance until they make a mountain out of a mole hill. They could stop this harping on a single string by providing their wives with fresh interests.

Still less do they realize that the reason their wives bore them is because they are forced to live in such a restricted manner that they know nothing outside the four walls of their homes and, consequently, have nothing entertaining to talk about.

If men could only realize how much more amiable, how much more agreeable, how much broader and more companionable their wives would be if they went out to places of amusement and took trips alone now and then, why husbands would implore their wives to take as many days off as they possibly could.

A timely vacation has saved many a divorce.

DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—I am the youngest child—a boy in a family of girls. Being delicate when I was young, I was kept in the house helping my sisters cook, dust and wash dishes. Now, at 19, I am big, strong and healthy, but I am a sissy. I never had a boy friend. My mother has kept me at home, never permitting me to go with other boys or do as other boys did, and when I am with other boys I am constrained and awkward. I rebel at being made to stay in the house with my sisters, helping mother. I want to be a man. What must I do to be a regular fellow? SISSY.

Answer:

Misguided mother love never does a more cruel thing than when it ties blue ribbons on a boy's curls and makes him play nice, refined, improving games in the parlor, instead of taking his chances on the back lot with a lot of rude, rough boys who might muss up his clean clothes and give him a bloody nose.

Of course, mother is trying to protect her precious darling and prevent him from hearing the things he should not hear and knowing the things he should not know and kep him unspotted from the world.

She forgets that she can't always keep him tied to her apron strings; that he has to live in a world that is full of a number of things besides pasting pictures in albums and listening to sweet little bedtime stories over the radio; that the more a boy knowns about this world the less danger he has of falling into its pitfalls, and that the more he has learned to stand up for himself and fight his own battles the more likely he is to win out.

In your case the mischief has been done, and the best way to undo it is to get your mother to send you off to school. You will find it easier to adjust yourself to strange boys than to boys you already know. If she cannot afford to do this, get yourself a job and go to work. If you show yourself competent and that you can do a man's work your fellow employes will respect you.

But here's a word of warning. In trying to get away from being a sissy dont' swing to the opposite extreme, as so many boys do, and drinking and gambling are no indication of manhood. When you become a hellian. Toughness, make yourself a man, make a good job of it. Make yourself a gentleman. DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Dorothy Dix—I am a girl in my early twenties and in love with a widower. He is a splendid man, but he has three children and my family is very much opposed to my marrying him on that account. I also worry about the children. But if I do my best to bring them up right and am good to them, don't you think they will give me due love and respect? WORRIED GIRL.

Answer:

I would not let the children keep me from marrying any widower if I love him, because, even at the worst, it is a matter of only a few years until the children will be grown and gone about their own affairs.

Undoubtedly, the lot of the stepmother is generally a hard one, because it takes the miracle of mother love to bear with patience the noise and mischief and selfishness and lack of consideration and tempers of the young. Not always do even one's own children repay the sacrifices that a mother has to make for her children. Still less do stepchildren, who are likely to regard a stepmother with suspicion and to resent her attempts to control them and advise them.

Occasionally, however, there are stepchildren who repay a stepmother's love and kindness with a devotion that never falters and this may be your fate. At any rate, when you mother motherless children and make them a happy home you are doing one of the greatest missionary acts on earth and you will get your reward in heaven if not here.

DOROTHY DIX.

IN TRUE CHICAGO STYLE

CHICAGO—Either Alfred Smith, of 2416 Bryn Mawr avenue, has discovered an entirely new plan for husbands who want to make a temporary exit from the hearth and home, or else the young lady who captured him at the point of a gun last night is a real cave-girl, a throwback to the days when members of the younger set, desiring an attractive lady friend, simply went forth and helped themselves with the aid of a couple of rocks. At any rate, the young lady, name unknown, descended upon the Smith menage yesterday evening, drew a revolver, pointed it at the husband, and despite Mr. Smith's protests, departed, complete, with victim. "I have not seen Mr. Smith since," said his wife, "but he telephoned me from St. Louis tonight, saying that he would be back Tuesday."

GOD SAVE THE KING

NEW YORK, N. Y.—The Union Jack is flying gaily in the breeze over the Waldorf-Astoria hotel, W. D. Ireland of Portland, Me., started it. Immediately after he had registered, Mrs. W. D. England of Logan, W. Va., wrote her name firmly along the dotted line. This wouldn't have caused any particular excitement, were it not for the fact that B. S. Scotland, of Joliette, Ill., appeared on the scene, loudly demanding a room. "Well, what d'you know about that," said one clerk to another. "Let's see now, which one is missing—" "Beg pardon," said a voice at the window, "but haven't you a reservation for Mr. and Mrs. John E. Wales of Norfolk, Va.?"

YES, HE "ENTERTAINED."

CHICAGO, Ill. — Something brand new in the way of society entertainment has been introduced by Harold F. McCormick. At a little gathering of selected friends, he gave a whistling recital, accompanied on the harp by Baroness Wenner of Vienna. The selections were all of the classical variety, including Schubert's "Litany" and Bartlett's "Dream." This is considered to open up a hitherto neglected field for relievig the monotony of social gatherings, and it is said that Mr. McCormick's next effort will consist of solos on the mouthorgan, with flexatone obligato by the Baroness.

MODISH MITZI

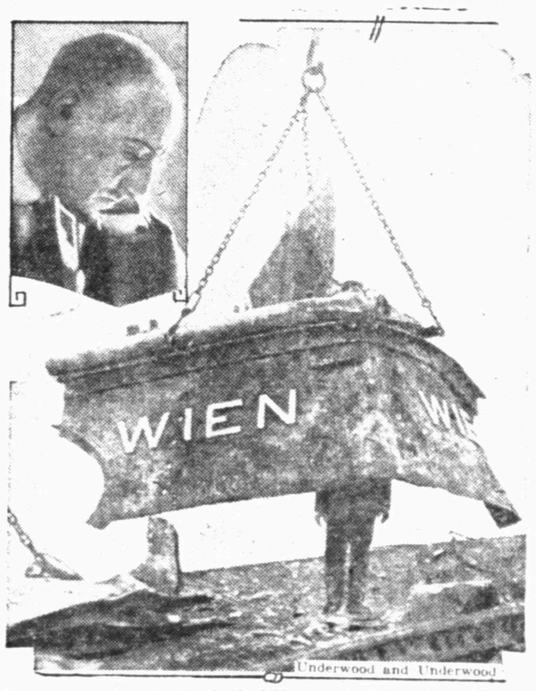

Marcel who chalks the scores for the shuffle board players has not enough English at his command to tell the lady with the two-piece suit how to play shuffle board correctly. Her velveteen jacket with the flannel sport skirt is correct if her form (athletic technique of course) isn't anywhere near perfect. The ideal costume for this game, or any other, is a jersey two-piece dress with stripes of crepe de chine applied on it. She's been counting in French and the little cabin boy wonders if she meant to cheat. "Well, allez, oop!" says Mitzi feeling sure she has mastered the language.

Mitzi Embarks For Home By JAY V. JAY

This is life on the bounding deep, especially when it isn't bounding. Deck tennis is highly recommended for those who have eaten too well of the good things on shipboard. Mitzi is watching the game, or more accurately the way of the dress and allowed to be free on the skirt. Her shipmate seems a sleeveless jacket with a plaid sports skirt. This is the place for interesting back shows how pleats may be stitched, three-quarters, general good time. Mitzi's supposed to keep score. Was it a love game, or wasn't it?

THE CHILDREN'S WASHING

The children's weekly washing,
Wee suits of underwear,
Their little shirts and bloomers,
Are drying in the air.

The twins' small colored blouses,
Tom's "grown-up" BVD's,
The baby's tiny dresses
Are waving in the breeze.

So snowy-white, so spotless,
The children's clothes, so neat;
A miracle of freshness,
With wind and sun so sweet.

I cannot help but see them
With sentimental mien—
This is the one occasion
They're ever really clean!

Denver Tunnel Through Mountain At Quitaque Pierces Last of Rock Wall

QUITAQUE, June 21.—Daylight was discovered Saturday morning about 11 o'clock in the great Denver tunnel some 12 miles south of town when the electric rock bit made its appearance to the outer edge of the rock wall on the northeast side of the mountain in which the workmen were tunneling. Something like three months ago work begun on this tunnel. The engineer says much trouble and difficulties have been overcome. Only about one-half of the distance of which is 700 feet has been made permanent and safe for visitors to go. If no unavoidable trouble occurs it is expected that the tunnel will be completed within the next sixty days.

The tunnel when completed will resemble that of a half moon in shape. There are many winding places along the railroad as it goes through the "cap rock" until the entrance is made on top of the plains. As you look in a northeastward direction from the rear end of the tunnel it is almost an air line into Quitaque.

Messrs. W. Stewart, the manager of the Quitaque Motor company and O. C. Arthur, the manager of the City Drug Store of this place, witnessed the opening of the tunnel and were first to go through.

AS LINDY WAS FIRST MAKES BIG DIFFERENCE

Chamberlin's achievement is intrinsically as great as Lindbergh's. The men who followed Columbus gained from his daring the knowledge that one could sail across the Atlantic and find land. Lindbergh made no such contribution to Chamberlin. Both knew the destination existed. Lindbergh showed the flight could be made, but the perils were the same for both. They were called upon equally for courage and resource, and they met the call, both of them, with glorious spirit. Yet there remains, and there is no desire to deny, the massive fact that Lindbergh was first.—R. A. Franklin, Electra News.

VOTE AGAINST BOND ISSUES

For One or More of Following Reasons:

1. Taxes are now too high—and not fairly handled. Large properties are on tax rolls for much less per cent of selling value than small ones.

2. If buying a partnership oil and gas lease, you make one wanting a 1-4 interest pay a 1-4 of costs. Property most benefitted by roads proposed, will pay but a minor part of costs, instead of the full costs and more (intersections) to city owners paving streets.

3. Roads in precincts 1 and 3 will not reach Diversion Dam and Fish Hatchery in Archer and Baylor counties, and nearest points in Wichita county are in precinct 4 not included in bond issues.

4. Road promoters promises will not control future necessary assessments to pay bond debts legally voted. Remember irrigation district start on 25c and increase to $1 and now 80 cents. Or if you are for the roads,

CAN YOU BE STAMPEDED?

Advocates of bond issues Saturday carry needless weight in controversies from office of attorney general. Rewriting petition and correct action by commissioners' court can avoid all matters in dispute except fact of outstanding county-wide bonds. Sale of road bonds by Electra road district seems to indicate that fact no obstacle. A new start makes but few weeks delay, and saves lawyers fees and court delays. (Clay county issues were in court several years).

Hence whether for issues on proper basis or not, it seems common sense and county economy requires defeat of proposed bonds in election as now called for Saturday, June 25th, 1927.. Therefore,

REFORMING A HUSBAND

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

HE OFFERS HER A HAPPY LOVE.

SHE'D RATHER REFORM A DRUNKARD.

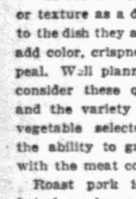

MARRY A MAN YOU CAN RESPECT.

Sympathy Feeble Substitute for Respect and Love

By Beatrice Fairfax,
An Authority on the Problems of Love and Marriage.

VARIOUS emotions are sometimes mistaken for love. Many a girl—and man also—has married for pity, only to realize that such a marriage cannot succeed. Admiration may also be mistaken for the tender affection which alone brings married happiness.

Beatrice Fairfax.

There are persons who marry out of sheer vanity, because they are flattered by the attentions of a generally sought after person. Most disastrous, however, of all motives for marriage, masquerading itself as love, is the zeal to reform a man by marrying him.

A weak or unprincipled man will promise anything to win the woman with whom he is infatuated. More than one girl, fired with zeal to show her power by reforming a confirmed gambler, drunkard, crook, a ne-er-do-well or even a criminal, has invited disaster and tragedy by marrying him to make him over.

This unfortunate type of girl is probably the inspiration of the following pessimistic letter from "Dubious":

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"May I comment—for the first time—on a letter printed in your column? This letter was signed 'Eileen.'

"While I understand you do not conduct a Get-Acquainted Bureau, and I do not mean to suggest anything of the sort, yet I hope you will print my message to 'Eileen.'

"My Dear Eileen, your viewpoint and standpoint are appreciated by me. Yes, Eileen, there are men who enjoy a girl's companionship for herself, alone. I am one of them.

"'But girls seem to be rather peculiar. For instance, I have survived twenty-six years without the assistance of whiskey, petting parties and prize fights. I have nothing against them. But my taste is more for the theatre, travel, art, philosophy, etc.

"'I still have—or did have until a month ago—ideals. But, due to a love affair in which the lady chose a drunkard and habitue of prize fights, poolrooms and barrooms, with the claim that she could reform him, although she heartily dislikes his tastes, I have lost faith in girls.

"It seems to me girls prefer to reform a man—or attempt it—rather than have one who has tried to keep himself decent and clean-minded.'

DUBIOUS."

How about it, girls? Is this accusation true?

Of course, a girl may not fall in love with a man merely because she admires his character. But do you find it fascinating to bestow your love on a man of weak or worse character, on his promise to reform for your sake?

It is not easy for a young man to go straight in this Jazz age. Surely, the man who has fought and won the battle with temptations that assail him on all sides deserves a better reward from you girls than to be ignored in favor of a shiek, cake-eater, lounge lizard or crook who promises to reform if you marry him.

The weakling, who promises to reform for your sake, will soon forget the promise after the wedding ceremony. Then the marriage will resolve itself into sordid tragedy.

A wise philosopher suggests that those persons with enthusiasm for making people over, practice on their enemies, rather than their friends.

To try to make friends over is almost an ir pertinence, is it not, in its self-righteousness? Measures of reform are best left to the impersonal efforts of consecrated preachers and reformers.

The average girl will find she is doing her full and marvelous share toward helping this old world onward if she sets an example by living up to her own ideals and standards, by showing friendly tolerance toward those who differ from her, by choosing friends representative of her idea of what is good and true and worth-while and by marrying the finest young man of all and making him a happy, successful home.

Parents' Quarrels Must Be Hidden From Children

By L. Lamar Matthews.

UNTIL a year ago Victor thought that his mother knew everything that anybody needed to know. Whatever he wanted to know, he just asked Mother.

L. LAMAR MATTHEWS

Then he entered the sixth grade at school and began studying advanced arithmetic, history, geography and a lot of other things that his mother had forgotten all about.

He asked her questions and she was forced to admit that she did not know. And when that happened his father laughed and began teasing her.

Now Victor looks with pity upon his poor, ignorant mother; and doesn't pay as much attention to what she says as he once did. He has found out—so he thinks—that he knows more than his mother does. He hasn't wisdom enough to realize that she has forgotten the things he is learning and will forget, too. He is too young to comprehend the fact that she has been so occupied with the big affairs of making her family comfortable that school-book information has slipped from her mind.

As a matter of fact, the father did not attach much importance to the matter. He is just a tease and he hasn't a great consideration for anybody's feelings.

It would have been very easy for him to make his son understand just why Mother could not answer his questions. The father could also have impressed upon the boy the fact that he is old enough and smart enough to consult the dictionary or books of reference and find out what he wished to know for himself. That would have been the proper attitude.

Somehow it is these inconsequential happening that develop into situations of real import.

That is one reason why mothers and fathers should be so careful about their attitude toward each other when their children are about. Matters that seem trifling to grown-ups often take on great significance in the minds of children.

Half the mothers—and fathers, too, for that matter—are confronted with a similar condition. And many of them feel deeply humiliated because they are unable to render assistance in their children's studies. To feel embarrassed or apologetic about the matter is foolish.

Let for one parent to say anything that reflects upon the other is most unwise. Mothers and fathers should stand together in whatever relates to the children. If there is any teasing to be done, or any differences of opinion to be threshed out, let it be done out of sight and hearing of the children.

There comes to mind a little girl who was given to making pert remarks to her mother. The father, who idolized the child, found keen delight in hearing these smart sayings. So the little miss was always sure of her father's applause and protection.

The result was that as she grew older she became impertinent, disrespectful and disobedient, not only to her mother, but to her father as well. And then the father almost stopped laughing entirely. There was a pain in his heart that nothing could ease—and he had brought it upon himself.

Garnishes as Part of Meal

By Hannah Wing.

GARNISHES should be selected as much because of their flavor or texture as a desirable accessory to the dish they adorn because they add color, crispness or appetite appeal. Well planned menus always consider these qualities of foods, and the variety or service of the vegetable selected depends upon the ability to garnish or go well with the meat course.

Roast pork is garnished with baked apples, apple rings or apple jelly because the fat of the meat calls for the tartness of the apples.

Potatoes browned with the meat serve as a garnish for the platter of roast beef and mashed potatoes piped through a tube or cups of mashed potatoes filled with buttered peas or carrots may act as a garnish for the planked steak, although their first function is as a definite part of the menu.

Parsley, slices of lemons, French fried or shoestring potatoes may accompany the chops.

Triangles of toast or croustades of bread or timbale cases of toasted bread, with a fine edge of minced parsley, serve both as a container and a garnish for creamed dishes.

Macaroni, rice or mashed potatoes may be arranged with meat balls or sausages in such a manner that each adds attractiveness to the other.

Curls of celery, cress or parsley are always in order with roast fowl, which also need currant jelly or gooseberry sauce.

Lemon, parsley or hard boiled eggs decorate fish dishes and slices of fresh cucumber or tomatoes make the salmon more tasty.

Whenever olives, radishes, mushrooms, pickles or peppers are used as relishes they may be so served that they act as garnishes as well.

Even vegetables may be made more attractive by a bit of melted butter, a dash of paprika or a sprinkling of finely chopped parsley. Slices of hard boiled eggs or egg yolks rubbed through a sieve are often used with slices of lemon to garnish spinach, while grated cheese sprinkled over cooked cauliflower or other vegetables prepared en casserole and set in the oven to brown or buttered or browned crumbs serve to make these dishes more appetizing.

Chopped nuts, capers, red or green peppers, pickles, olives, cut fruit of any kind and anything that adds color may be used to garnish salads if the food used blends well with the salad itself.

Poached egg served on hash, spinach or with a sauce makes use of these devices as a garnish for the egg, as well as supplementing its value as the main dish of the meal.

Roast chicken, duck or turkey may be placed on a bed of fresh watercress or garnished with hearts of celery alternating with celery tips. Glace sweet potatoes nicely browned may also be used to garnish the platter which carries this roast to the table.

How You May Help Save a Life

By Chas. A. L. Reed, M. D.,
Former President of the American Medical Association.

YOUR life may some time depend upon the prompt and efficient practice of artificial respiration by those nearest you at the moment of crisis.

Dr. Chas. A. L. Reed

Or, on the other hand, the duty may some time suddenly devolve upon you to practise the measure upon some other unfortunate.

You can understand what this means when I tell you that in New York State alone, during 1925, about two thousand deaths occurred from causes in which artificial respiration was the proper treatment. Of these 857 were due to drowning and 852 to suffocation by gas. Probably an equally large number of cases recovered after artificial respiration.

We are told by the New York State Journal of Medicine that about five thousand persons in New York State require artificial respiration each year. You see, therefore, any one may at any time be confronted with a case of drowning or asphyxiation where a life will hang on that person's knowledge of artificial respiration.

The method is very easily learned and is in fact taught to all Boy Scouts, and to employes in gas and electricity works, as it ought to be taught in all public schools.

Institutions, even hospitals, however, are perhaps inclined to rely too much on the apparatus known as the pulmotor, by which the patient's thorax is compressed rhythmically by the movement of a lever. At a small hospital one day during the monthly meeting of the committee a call came for the pulmotor. There was a delay in finding it, and then it was discovered to be out of order. It was surprising, but true, that no member of the staff knew offhand the proper method to use in its place.

There are two serious objections to a mechanical device: The delay in bringing it to the patient and the fact that it is no better than the "prone pressure," or Schaefer method, which any one can do anywhere the patient happens to be. Dr. Henderson, in the Journal of the American Medical Association for September 6, 1924, specifically says that the prone pressure method is superior to any other method or to a mechanical appliance. He also recommends in cases of carbon monoxide poisoning the use of oxygen containing 5 per cent of carbon dioxide, in order to stimulate the respiratory centres.

The only other method is the Sylvester, which needs some arrangement to hold the patient's tongue away from his gullet, and is a good deal more tiring to the operator.

But you can easily practise artificial respiration by the Schaefer method, which consists simply in placing the patient on his stomach, having first emptied the water as far as possible out of the throat and lungs, in cases of drowning, by lifting him up by the waist, head and face down, with the mouth open. The operator then straddles the patient's back, places his hands on the lower ribs on either side, and presses downward, and lets go in a rhythmical manner, about fifteen times to the minute, the rate of normal respiration.

Don't get discouraged. The return of breathing may not take place until artificial respiration has been continued for two or three hours, sometimes even more. It is impossible to tell when a man is dead until decomposition sets in, and a person who commences artificial respiration should not give up until ordered by a doctor.

You can readily see how easy it would be to teach a whole class of children this life-saving manipulation.

In the interest of yourself and that of your neighbors, why not take up this matter in your own school?

Correct MANNERS

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

A Church Wedding.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Is it proper to wear an evening gown and no hat to a church wedding if I am one of the bride's sisters?

(2) Is it proper or necessary to invite the minister and his wife to the reception at home, which is for relatives only, after the church wedding?

A BRIDE-TO-BE.

AT an evening wedding evening gowns are usually worn. Whether or not one wears a "head covering" depends on the rule of the church in which the wedding is to take place. Some churches are very strict about the rule that a woman's head should be covered in a "place of worship," but in most weddings nowadays one does not see hats or head coverings of any other kind.

2. Yes, it is courteous and customary to invite the clergyman and his wife to the reception. If only the members of your family are invited, the clergyman and his wife will undoubtedly understand that they need not stay long.

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on etiquette submitted by readers.)

The Ever-Popular Sweater

—Republished by Special Arrangement with Good Housekeeping—

SWEATERS have taken on a new importance this year for they figure in almost any kind of sport costume. They are worn with crepe skirts or knitted skirts as most attractive sports outfits. Or they may be worn with a two piece suit in place of the conventional blouse of years gone by.

But in any case, the smart woman must have several of these valuable garments in her wardrobe. And the smartest of the models have striped designs.

DO YOU KNOW THAT—

The most extraordinary tattoing idea was that of a French coachman, who at the time of the Dreyfus trial had his body covered with 120 illustrations of the case?

There are 256 railway stations within a six-mile radius of St. Paul's Cathedral, London, while within a twenty-mile radius there are nearly 40.

Household Hints

A Cut Onion

A cut onion should never be left exposed to the air if it is destined to be eaten afterwards, since it attracts germs. If a small bulb cannot be selected the remainder of the cut one should be kept in vinegar or placed in an airtight jar. If by any chance one is left lying about it still can be of use. It can be rubbed on any very rusty steel article that needs cleaning. After the juice has been there a day the rust will vanish entirely if the article be rubbed with bath-brick and turpentine.

The Bath Sponge.

A slimy, soapy sponge soon becomes very unpleasant. If this should happen as time goes on, soak it for some hours in a solution of borax and warm water, squeezing every now and again, and then, if possible, hang it to dry in the sun and wind.

SOME are vexed by all life's dullness, finding nothing fine or rare; restless creatures, worn and jaded by the sameness everywhere; to their thoughts the passing hours are a weary, creeping crew bringing naught of joy or brightness, nothing lovely, nothing new. Others, wiser, glimpse bright wonders ever waiting on their way, find in life a fresh adventure budding with each dawning day, ever something sweet and stirring in the happy moments' flight, till the hours fleetly journey, brimmed with bliss and filled with light. Blest, indeed, are those who live it with a gallant heart and gay, seeking ever for the gladness that lies waiting on their way, gaining still in strength and courage with the barriers they climb, every day a new adventure on the trackless shores of time!

Folly's Daughter

A Thrilling New Mystery of New York Night Life

By Ann Lisle

Jill Creates a Costume.

"THIS isn't for you," Jill told Folly absent-mindedly and out of the side of a mouth in which there was a pin ready to go into the tan cape.

Jill turned carefully. She was hardly aware of Folly. And Folly watching from the bed where she was going through her usual noon struggle to get up and begin the day, realized that Jill was really an artist. The costume the youngster had contrived out of a lot of junk was actually smart—dashing—just the thing Folly Duane ought to wear when she tucked her little body into Sam Kerby's coupe and motored down to Asbury Park.

ANN LISLE

The flame-colored chiffon swirled out over the green taffeta slip. The contrast was daring and very smart. The tan georgette cape was piped with green taffeta and lined with flame chiffon. It actually looked Frenchy. And the turban of tan georgette was gay and impertinent with its green bow and its flame pipings. The costume came well above Jill's knees. Her long, lovely legs with their gracious curves and small, round ankles above high-arched feet strode with the graceful awkwardness of youth and revealed themselves unaffectedly. . . . The skirt would cover Folly's knees and the sagging calf-muscles that bespoke the passing of youth. . . .

Folly watched Jill until the last pin had been placed in the upstanding collar of the cape the girl had fashioned out of her own best dress. She knew perfectly well that Jill's creation represented the two evening dresses she had given the girl for use at Beppo's and Jill's own "best dress" from school days. She wondered idly just why Jill was working so frantically to finish her costume. But she didn't inquire about it. She was much too deeply absorbed in her midsummer madness for Sam Kerby to wonder about anybody else's concerns.

"Let me see," thought Folly. "I'll wear that thing Jill is just finishing. And then when we get to Asbury—in time for tea—I'll make an immediate sensation when I walk in out of a motor looking as if I'd come off the French boulevards. And I'll take a warm coat—my old tan cloth. Maybe an evening dress. My old blue one. Every time Sam has seen me I've been in the blue evening dress or the blue costume I got on Sixth avenue the other day. It's lucky Jill is getting this ready just in time."

Folly didn't bother to remember that she had taken Jill's fifty dollar bill to purchase the blue costume. She didn't bother to inquire why Jill was working so frantically over this new costume. She wasn't given to inquiring. When the fates cast gifts into Folly's lap, as it were, she took them and asked no questions.

The possible connection between the fifty dollars Jill was so eager to return, and the frock and cape and hat Jill was so eager to make didn't occur to Folly. She wasn't given to analyzing. So she didn't try to figure out the grave but dynamic intentness in Jill's manner. And after a while she asked petulantly:

"Aren't you going to get me any breakfast, Jilly-flower?"

"Will you wait about ten minutes till I get this collar to do just what I want it to?" asked Jill.

"Of course, darling." Folly agreed sweetly. "Maybe I can help you."

"Would you hold this in place while I see if it makes the effect better?" asked the unsuspecting Jill approaching the bed with a bit of green taffeta.

"I'll pin it if you like. I've often thought I had a gift for designing. If I'd had time to cultivate it as you have—I'd have made something of it," Folly sighed.

"I hate sewing and puttering around with old bits of stuff," Jill confided. "But when I have to, I can."

Folly didn't ask why she had to. Folly was beginning to remind herself lazily that what you didn't know couldn't hurt you.

Jill finished the costume, hung it away carefully, got Folly's breakfast and was delighted when Folly said suddenly:

"There ought to be stockings for that rig. French nude. I'll give you a couple of dollars and you run down to the store on the corner and get a pair of the dollar forty-five ones."

Jill was delighted. She took the money and hurried out. She was dreaming of the moment when MacNeil Shannon would lift the tan cape off her shoulders and smile that slow, caressing, tantalizing smile of his as she was revealed in her wonderful new dress.

When Jill got back to the room she was in the midst of her dream. She opened the door pretending that it was the Shannon Hotel she entered. She stepped into the room slowly—dreamily, smiling to the tune of her heart and dancing on enchanted feet.

And in the middle of the room stood Folly wearing Jill's green taffeta dress with its flame colored tunic and the tan cape and hat that Jill had worked to create.

"Hurry and give me the stockings," said Folly Duane. "Sam is waiting. I've got to run."

Yurp, Yurp, Yurp

NEW YORK, June 21. (AP)—Not since the "white hope" days of 1910 when Jim Jeffries came out of retirement to battle Jack Johnson has any comeback of the ring aroused as much interest as the bid of Jack Dempsey to regain the crown from Gene Tunney.

Not even in the days when he was the champion, swaggering and boyish, did Dempsey himself ever create the commotion he seems to have stirred up by his return to New York tomorrow to talk business with Tex Rickard. There will be more pomp and ceremony, more fuss and feathers over his signing for an elimination battle with Jack Sharkey on or around July 21, at the Yankee stadium that there ever has been in Rickard's elaborate championship soirees.

It is strange but true that the champion has faded to the background of the ballyhoo while his two foremost rivals, Dempsey and Sharkey, but principally Dempsey—share the spotlight for what seems likely to be the first million dollar fight in which no title is involved.

Disaster Looms For Helen Wills

WIMBLEDON, June 21. (AP)—Disaster hovered about the head of the fair Helen Wills on Wimbledon's center court today in the opening round of the women's singles championship, but with indomitable courage and characteristic driving, she came through finally.

The California girl defeated Miss G. R. Sterry of England, after one of the most stubbor battles she has been called upon to face since she lost to Suzanne Lenglen, the French star. The score was 6-3, 3-6, 6-3.

In the second round of the men's singles, both William T. Tilden and Francis T. Hunter maintained American prestige. Tilden defeated R. D. Poland, England, in straight sets, 6-3, 6-0, 6-1, while Hunter took the measure of the veteran English player, Lieut. Col. Algeron Kingscote to the tune of 6-3, 6-3, 6-4.

A surprise in the men's contests was the defeat of Louis Raymond of South Africa, by George Crole-Rees, England, Raymond being the second seeded player to fall by the wayside.

MANION MEDALIST.

BROADMOOR, Colo., June 21. (AP)—By showing respect for the baffling Broadmoor greens, Jimmie Manion, St. Louis city champion, putted his way to medal honors at the close of the 36 holes of qualifying play today of the Trans-Mississippi tournament. Manion's card showed a 144, only four strokes over par. The Missouri flash garnered a 73 yesterday in the first half of the qualifying round and a 71 today. He was five strokes ahead of the champion, Eddie Held, of St. Louis, who placed second with a 149.

YANKS SUBDUE BOSTON TWICE

Pennock Holds Red Hose To Six Hits in Opener

BOSTON, June 21. (AP)—The Yankees subdued the Boston Red Sox twice today by scores of 7 to 3 and 7 to 1. Pennock held the Hose to six hits in the first encounter while Hoyt gave only five in the second tussle. Gehrig hung up his 18th circuit wallop in the first inning of the closing game. Babe Ruth connected for two singles in the first contest and got a double in the other struggle, from which he retired after the seventh inning because of his sore right knee.

A bare-handed catch by Carlyle of Dugan's drive to the embankment in left field in the third inning of the second game was sensational.

Tony Lazzeri, Yankee's infielder, was given an ovation by the Boston Italian-Americans and was presented with a ring. The score:

The Senators cinched the first game by hitting Rommel for three runs in the first inning, and assuming a lead that was never overcome. The Mackmen bunched their nine blows on Walter Johnson effectively in the second game, while Rube Walberg held the Griffmen to five hits. The score:

WANER'S FORMULA

PITTSBURGH, June 21. (AP)—A broken bat, forcing Paul Waner to borrow another hickory, explains in part the imposing batting record of the Pittsburgh rightfielder. Paul has hit safely in 23 successive games and he leads the league in singles, doubles and triples.

Asked about his terrific hitting Waner explained Tuesday that on a recent swing east his brother, Lloyd, broke his favorite bat and he was forced to use another. Up to that time he used a bat with a thick handle. He selected a thin grip hickory in the emergency and has been worrying the pitchers ever since.

Every Game in Texas Loop Put Under Canvas

The rain god got rough again Tuesday and for another one of the very, very few times he has got away with such wholesale horseplay at expense of the Texas league, rained out every game scheduled. There were four of them.

The Wichita Falls Spudders down in San Antonio didn't welcome the rest. They copped a couple of free days here last week due to wet weather. Besides, Carl Williams' warriors were in hopes of catching the floundering Bears for three straight and bolstering their league lead while the bolstering is good preparatory to continuing on the current 19-day voyage over the circuit.

George Payne was slated to carry the Wichita Falls hurling mantle yesterday. Williams probably will shoot old "Rubber Arm" onto the hill today, instead, in the last game of the Santone series.

The Spudders move on to Waco tomorrow.

Today's Texas league card:
Wichita Falls at San Antonio.
Fort Worth at Houston.
Dallas at Beaumont.
Shreveport at Waco.

Rain Puts Crimp In Twilight Plans

But Muny Gassers Go After Panhandle Today

Katy park was too wet and muddy for the Plumbers and Electricians to play their scheduled Twilight league game Tuesday afternoon. The game may be played off Thursday or Saturday afternoon, but no date has yet been decided upon.

The Panhandle Longhorns and the Muny Gassers will cross bats this afternoon at five bells. Snipe Connally will do the twirling for the Longhorns and who the Gassers will use has not been decided.

LOMSKI WINS

NEW YORK, June 21.—Leo Lomski, the Aberdeen, Wash., light heavyweight, won a surprising 12-round decision over Maxie Rosenbloom of New York at the Queensboro stadium.

Leo used an effective left to the body that slowed Maxie up in the early rounds. Rosenbloom was unable to land frequently on his western opponent, the latter's footwork being a revelation to the 6000 fans who saw the bout.

TERRIS PAYS OFF 5 GRAND

NEW YORK, June 21. (AP)—Because the Catholic Boys' club boxing show in which he figured at the Polo Grounds last week failed as a money maker, Sid Terris, a light weight, is $5000 lighter, having turned back that much of his $32,500 purse. Kid Kaplan contributed $2000, Ace Hudkins and Jackie Fields $700 each and Billy Wallace also has promised to contribute.

KID GOLFERS AT SANTONE

SAN ANTONIO, June 21 (AP)—San Antonio Tuesday became the mecca of the youngster golf stars of Texas. A score of them reported from other cities for practice preparatory to the first state boys championship tournament which gets under way at Willow Springs at 8:30 Thursday.

Out on the links bright and early for practice, many of the lads were caught in the Tuesday morning rain that interrupted play.

NEW MOTORCYCLE RECORD

SAN ANTONIO, June 21. (AP)—Circling the two-mile oval of the San Antonio speedway in one minute 10 1-5 seconds, Red Peters, San Antonio, Monday afternoon established a new world record for motorcycles on a dirt track. The former record of one minute 11 1-5 seconds was established here some time ago by Rural Murray of Dallas.

AROUND THE BIG LEAGUE CIRCUITS

In their spurt of nine straight victories the Cubs gained seven by one run. Joe McCarthy has his Bruins playing like the Red Sox of 1915-1916 when one run was a safe lead for Bill Carrigan's champions.

Every time Miller Huggins plucks a substitute off the bench and sends him in as a regular he finds a star. Benny Paschal filled in at left field for Bob Meusel the other day and poled two homers, one triple and one double and scored five runs.

• • •

The strange part about the Yanks' 14-6 victory over the Indians was that Babe Ruth did not score a run. Like others, Babe has his idle moments.

• • •

When "Pie" Traynor fractured a finger Hal Rhyne became the third baseman for the Pirates. The coast product while failing to hold down a regular job has proven a capable substitute for the Pirates.

It is doubtful whether the White Sox will ever get as close to first place again as on June 6 when their percentage read: 31-17 .646. Then followed three defeats in four games by the Yankees and three straight from the Senators.

• • •

An injured arm is no barrier to a punch at the plate. Eddie Collins, forced out as Conie Mack's second baseman with a lame whip, appeared as pinch hitter in the game of June 13 and pasted a triple, driving in the tying run against the Tigers and then scored the winning ticket in a 7-6 finish.

• • •

Trying to develop new pitchers, Bill Carrigan is moving to his outfield with the same desire. Having sold Bill Jacobson to the Indians, Carigan has turned left field over to Carlyle and center field to Shaner.

Since moving over to right field, Max Carey appears to be in his second childhood. Over in Brooklyn they say Max is the best right fielder since the days of Harry Lumeley, which is stepping back a few years.

• • •

Fame slides out quickly. Johnny Neun turned a triple play unassisted and then fell into a batting slump and was given a ticket to the bench by George Moriarty. Lew Blue is again first basing for the Tigers.

• • •

In the same path, Jimmy Cooney became a hero with his unassisted triple play for the Cubs. A few days later he was traded to the Phillies.

Moral: Get your base hits in the pinch and let some other bloke leap for those unassisted triple plays.

Walter Gerber is riding on the last lap of his American league career as the Browns' shortstop and Dan Howley is trying out Otis Miller, who helped the Toronto Leafs win the International league pennant last season.

EVERY FIGHT ON CHARITY CARD WORTHY OF MAIN EVENT RANK

Like a mammoth charity fistic program sponsored in New York by the well-known leader of swelldom, Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, the Wichita Falls milk and ice fund boxing card is scheduled to be run off Thursday night in the Ross stadium, aver members of the charity fund boxing committee which is composed of Dr. J. H. Fletcher, Solon Featherston, J. Wilkie Talbert, Jim King, Frank Quiesser and T. O. Shappell.

There is one point certain, according to Shappell. If Thursday night's boxing card were staged in New York and the list of fighters on this card were as well known in Gotham as they are here thousands of fans would turn out to see the fiffers mill. For every bout on the card with exception of the curtain raiser between the youngsters, Ken Adams and Olin Hearn, would draw main event rating on any other occasion in Wichita Falls.

The Frankie Wine-Speedy Sparks 12-rounder ranks as one of the leading fights, according to prebout calculation, staged in the southwest over the past several years. The Pete Charley-Pug Humphries 10-rounder would be a main event on any man's fight card. Everybody knows Jack Matlock for years was one of the Pacific Coast's leading light heavies. Matlock clashes with Ray Willis, the Fort Sill sergeant, in an eight-rounder. Both Sam Riley of Altus and Roy Edwards of Hollywood, who are billed for a six-rounder, are main event timber.

Yessir, this benefit program is the greatest fight card ever arranged in the State of Texas, declare the committeemen, all of whom are ardent sportsmen and close followers of athletics. The committee has been drumming up trade so efficiently that there is more than a possibility of a sell-out ere the first prelim is run off with a large chunk of coin going to the needy of Wichita Falls who are aided by the money turned into the milk and ice fund.

Grip Scores On Leahman Again

Charley Grip, Buffalo junior middleweight, defeated the youthful Charley Leahman of Detroit again in two falls out of three of a laborious return match Tuesday night as the feature offering of the Ross wrestling stadium.

The match lacked much of the speed and gusto diplayed by the grapple boys as a rule, but was of the slow, arduous, gruelling type with Grip plugging away mostly at leg splits and Leahman working a defensive game. A few times, the athletes resorted to kicking and slugging tactics.

Grip won the first fall with a leg split, Leahman conceding in 21 minutes and 10 seconds. The second went to Leahman via the body scissors route in 14 minutes and 25 seconds. Grip grabbed the decider in 21 minutes and 10 seconds with a crab hold.

Black Dummy, Fort Worth negro welterweight boxer, earned a shade decision over the sturdy Battling Sam of Wichita Falls in 10 rounds of hard fighting. The two Senegambians slugged away at a vicious clip throughout. The victor's margin was very small.

Dave Wade, local middleweight, went 10 minutes with George Carpenter, also of this city, neither gaining a fall. Carpenter, if anything, had a bit the edge on the milling.

Buster Padgett, local amateur, won from Jess Lowrance with an arm strangle in three minutes, reinjuring an arm for Lowrance that had been hurt in a workout session.

Tracy Reinstated As Amarillo Prexy

S. JOSEPH, Mo., June 21. (AP)—E. B. Tracy, ousted last week as president of the Amarillo baseball club, of the Western league, was reinstated Tuesday. This action was taken following a conference here Tuesday between Tracy and Dale Gear, president of the league.

Tracy met Monday with J. O. Whittington and Cal Farley, Amarillo stockholders, in the presence of Mr. Gear, where the difficulties were ironed out. Gear said Tuesday that he attended the session to keep the league records straight and that he had no part in reinstating Tracy. Whittington and Farley left for Denver from Omaha with the Amarillo team Tuesday night.

CLAUDE ATHLETE DROWNS

CLAUDE, Texas, June 21 (AP)—Arrangements were being made here Tuesday for the funeral of Bondies Blue, 17, captain-elect of the Claude high school football team, who was drowned while bathing late Monday with several companions in a pool on the Doak ranch east of here. The body was located in 15 feet of water.

GOLDSTEIN CHALLENGES

CHICAGO, June 21 (AP)—A challenge for the bantamweight title with a $2500 certified check was on file Tuesday with the Illinois Athletic commission, posted by the manager of Abe Attell Goldstein who claims the right to meet the winner of the Taylor-Canzoneri match here Thursday night.

SPORT a la CARTE

by ROY GROVE

To date it looks as if Miller Huggins and his moneyed associates got a real bargain when they signed the "Bambino" Ruth up to $70,000 a year on a three-year contract.

The wisacers had the Babe on his back when he wrote his name down last winter for a grand cut-in on the national pastime. But all seems to be to the berries as far as the whole American league is concerned.

The big boyish Babe is at present clicking the turnstiles at an unusually rapid rate and with the immediate pace his record will do well in a new standing at the close of the 1927 baseball season.

That means that Ruth will draw next year, likewise the New York Yanks. After that nothing matters much. An occasional home run three years from now will draw a gate as long as the Babe, who has made and broken home run records, is still at the small end of the bat.

Ruth has a pace maker along with Gehrig, who stays at a respectable distance behind the king of swat.

Ruth may concentrate on this young fellow when he feels the old eye dimming. That lets the Yanks on the field still in possession of home run honors.

Aside from the batting prowess of Gehrig, Ruth has doubled his home run lead over the major league players of both the National and American leagues.

Wilson, of Chicago, and Williams, of the Phillies, are the nearest things to the swat king in the National league, although the first six places may take a change for better or worse at any time.

With Ruth's slugging the American league takes a lead of nearly 30 homers over the total average of the National league.

The Yanks feel Ruth is worth every cent at this early date and could have gotten along comfortably if they had been forced to double the Babe's salary or pay his total in one year.

JACK VISITS IN-LAWS

WILMINGTON, Del., June 21. (AP)—Jack Dempsey interrupted his journey to New York Tuesday by visiting his wife's parents here. He expects to go to New York Wednesday to confer with Tex Rickard, sports promoter.

Three Brothers Charged With Whipping Kerr

By Universal Service.

HOUSTON, June 21.—Three younger brothers of T. A. Kerr, 41, city meat market proprietor, were indicted today by the Harris county grand jury on aggravated assault charges in connection with the flogging of Kerr Sunday night.

In indicating the three brothers the grand jury said it was still investigating the whipping of Miss Nettie Spalding, an acquaintance of Kerr. Miss Spalding, Kerr told the grand jury yesterday, was with him when his three younger brothers began swinging a knotted grass rope after accusing him of abusing his wife.

CINCY DEFEATS CORSAIRS, 7 TO 6

Waner Goes Hitless After 23-Game Run

PITTSBURGH, June 21. (AP)—Critz's single in the tenth inning scored Allen with the run that gave Cincinnati a 7 to 6 victory over Pittsburgh today. Joe Dawson, making his first start for the Pirates, was batted hard. Pittsburgh drove Luque from the box in the ninth with a four-run rally that tied the score. Morrison relieved Dawson in the tenth and the winning run was made off him. Wright hit a home run with one on in the seventh.

Paul Waner, Pirate outfielder, went hitless after hitting safely in 23 games. His teammate, Clyde Barnhart, however ran his string to 21 straight games in which he has made one or more hits. The score:

BOSTON 7, NEW YORK 5.

NEW YORK, June 21. (AP)—After one home run by Frank Hogan, Boston heavyweight catcher, helped the Braves tie the score in the ninth, Hogan banged another for the circuit on his next appearance in the tenth with one on base, giving Boston the decision by 7 to 5 today.

The game was a nip and tuck affair full of arguments with both managers using three pitchers. Mueller and Roush of the Giants also hit home runs. Mogridge did well as a relief pitcher striking out Reese, a pinch hitter, with the bases full in the ninth and turning back New York in the tenth. Hogan and Mueller exchanged a few punches in the eighth when Mueller was caught off third and they were promptly separated. The score:

CARDS SCUTTLE CUBS.

ST. LOUIS, June 21. (AP)—The Cardinals pushed Chicago out of second place here today by taking a double bill from the Cubs, 6 to 5, and 12 to 3. The Cards' victory reduced the lead of Pittsburgh leaders to two and one-half games. Tommy Thevenow, St. Louis shortstop and star of the 1926 world series, suffered a fractured ankle when he slid into second in the fourth inning of the second game and probably will be out of the game for the remainder of the season. Hack Wilson, centerfielder, and Joe McCarthy, manager of the Cubs, were put off the field in the second inning of the second game when Wilson argued because he was called out on strikes and McCarthy took his part. The score:

R. L. STEINER, OIL MAN, DIES

Prominent Operator Succumbs to Attack

The body of Robert L. Steiner, 54, prominent Wichita Falls oil man who died suddenly Monday night in a room at the Mayo hotel in Tulsa, will be received here Thursday by the Merkle Undertaking company Thursday. Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

Mr. Steiner's death was caused by a heart attack but he has been in failing health for many months. On leaving Wichita Falls about one week ago to attend to business in Tulsa, he was apparently enjoying normal health, business associates said Tuesday.

Mr. Steiner was well known throughout Texas and Oklahoma as a successful and energetic business man. He was especially well known to many officials of major oil companies in the Mid-Continent field, having handled some of the largest sales made here in the past 10 years.

He was president of the Steiner Oil company and the Steiner Crude Oil corporation, both of which are prominent brokerage concerns. Before coming to Wichita Falls permanently in November, 1925, Mr. Steiner was actively engaged in the oil business in the Ranger field during the boom and later engaged in the oil business in Dallas. He spent much time in Wichita Falls during the Burkburnett boom of 1918 and 1919.

Mr. Steiner was educated in Germany and was proficient in the use of more than a half dozen languages, friends stated. He was a member of the Elks lodge.

Besides his wife, Mrs. Zora J. Steiner, the deceased is survived by two daughters and one son, all of whom were students in the local high school. They are Katherine, Dorothy and Robert Steiner Jr. The family home is at 710 Denver street here.

Cotton

NEW YORK COTTON.

NEW YORK, June 21. (AP)—Early advances on unfavorable features in weather and crop news were followed by reactions in the cotton market today. October contract sold off from 17.22 to 16.96 and closed at the lowest, the general market closing barely steady at net declines of 18 to 23 points.

The opening was steady at an advance of 2 to 7 points. Active months showed net gains of 7 to 10 points in early trading. July selling up to 16.86 and December to 17.47. A renewal of the recent buying movement was promoted by reports of further showers or rains in the belt, and reiterated reports of an increasing infestation of boll weevil.

The demand which appeared to be rather less general and aggressive than previously, was supplied by realizing or liquidation, however, and prices soon turned easier. Spot houses continued buyers of July against sales of later months at about recent differences, but the near month liquidation had rather an unsettling efect, and when buying stimulated by the unfavorable weather news tapered off, reactionary sentiment became more evident. There was no particular change in the weather or crop news to promote selling, and there were frequent bulges as a result of buying on the dips or covering, but the market seemed rather unsettled during the afternoon. Perhaps the failure of the continued wet weather and the numerous reports concerning boll weevil to bring in a more general demand increased the disposition to take profits on long cotton.

Prices reached the lowest levels of the day in late trading, July selling off to 16.60 and December to 17.18 or 18 to 20 points net lower.

Private cable advices said Manchester and continental selling in Liverpool had been absorbed by renewed buying on adverse weather reports, but that the turnover in cotton cloths in the Manchester market was disappointing.

Exports today 12,593, making 10,719,771 so far this season. Port receipts today 10,670; U. S. port stocks 1,346,860.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON.

NEW ORLEANS, June 21. (AP)—Trading in today's cotton market was mostly of a reactionary tendency. Following an early gain of 10 to 11 points the market eased off and was on the downgrade during the remainder of the session with but one or two minor rallies. October traded up to 17.18, within one point of last week's high but dropped to 16.93 in the late trading and closed at that figure. The general market closed steady at a net decline for the day of 14 to 17 points.

Liverpool was about as due at the opening here but first trades showed gains of six to eight points. Reports of general rains in the belt and of the spread of boll weevil held prices firm in the early trading and by the end of the first hour July traded at 16.86, October 17.18 and December 17.40, 10 to 11 points above the previous close.

The approach of the first notice day for July brought about more liquidation in that month and later deliveries eased off in sympathy. At mid-session July had dropped to 16.72, October 17.05 and December 17.26, 13 to 14 points under the highs. The decline attracted some trade buying and October rallied about 9 points but the market soon started on the downgrade again.

Th emarket continued to ease off during the afternoon and made new lows right at the end with July at 16.59, October 16.93, and December 17.15, 25 to 27 points below the highs.

Exports for the day totalled 12,592 bales.

Bear Raids Fail to Break Market; Ford's New Car Basis Of Attack On General Motors

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, June 21.—Increase in broker's loans, threat of a higher call rate and Ford competition were stressed by the bears today in an attempt to influence liquidation on the stock exchange but proved futile as while rails dropped slightly on the average industrials made sufficient recovery to even the score.

It was a highly professional trading market with the majority of the "public" in too nervous a state to take an active part in dealings. Profit-taking and short selling caused a further decline at the opening but the more active favorites met good support and the list snapped back in even better manner than after the rather sharp break of last Tuesday.

Call money remained in good supply at 4 per cent. The foreign exchange market was rather quiet but steady with the lire making a further advance. Cotton eased slightly under realizing sales while the grain market held firm with unimportant price changes in active wheat and corn options.

A report from Detroit giving purported details of the new car Henry Ford is building was seized upon by those short of General Motors as a signal for further raiding tactics. The most active of these bears is an industrial magnate known to be an active market operator. He attempted to refute the report of coming General Motors splitup without success last week. A statement from Mr. Ford was received after the close and in as much as it showed that price and several important details of the new car have not been decided upon yet, talk of "competition" was rather premature. Automobile men here state that details of the new Ford known indicate that it will be sold at a price within $50 to $100 of the Chevrolet and that its actual appearance will not be made for two months or more.

There was a distinctly unfavorable impression aroused by the apparently concerted pressure on leading stocks just before the close Monday in advance of the issuance of the brokers' loans report and after the opening today. The jump in the loans to a new high record, however, has unsettled speculative sentiment to a degree seldom equalled. In banking circles and among a few larger traders there is the utmost confidence voiced in the constructive side of the market and the belief exists that loans will reach $3,500,000,000 or more before the bull market really terminates.

The average speculator, however, remembers March, 1926, and is inclined to lighten up on commitments. This with the short selling tends to place the market in even better position. While preparations for the July 1 payments may bring higher call money next week, as was so widely threatened in private advices, the tightening will be but temporary and when the mid-year interest and dividend disbursements seek employment an even easier money market is expected.

Those caught short of General Motors made spasmodic slaps at Chrysler and Hudson without material success as forthcoming quarterly reports are expected to point to extra dividends by both companies. Yellow Truck was moved fractionally higher by the same group that has been hung up with the stock for many months. Gabriel Snubbers held the leadership of the motor accessories as it was realized that if the new Ford abndons the frek suspension which chracterized the old model and adopts the conventional semi-elliptic spring there will be further broadening of the market for snubbers.

With the exception of the market in General Motors that in American Can is reflecting one of the bitterest battles ever waged between bull and bear. American Can was sold heavily months ago on knowledge of the poor condition of the canning business. However, in the last month rumors have told of steady improvement coincident with quiet but steady demand for the stock.

Buying is credited to the same banking interests as sponsored the big move in the stock before the splitup. Every point advance has attracted added short selling and the technical position, it is claimed, never was stronger. As to extra dividend possibilities, however, it is pointed out that the can directors never take such action except in the final quarter of the year.

Postum Cereal pool after weeks of hard work finally were successful in influencing an advance coincident with talk of extra payment possibilities. International Nickel succumbed to selling influenced by rumor that the pool had taken big profits and stepped aside so that nothing more will be heard of the "new ore bodies" for a while. Allied Chemical made a fractional response to expression of hopes for a stock dividend at the forthcoming meeting.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, June 21. (AP)—Notwithstanding unsettlement in grain markets today resulting from passage of the Kessinger bill to third reading at Springfield, wheat and corn finished higher. To a considerable extent, price advances, especially in corn, were associated with unofficial predictions of a frost period starting on June 28 and another on July 7, with freezing temperatures as far south as the Potomac.

Corn closed nervous, ⅜ to 1⅛c net higher, wheat ⅛ to ⅜c up, oats at ⅛c decline to c gain, and provisions a shade to 15c down.

The Kessinger act provides that all grain exchanges in Illinois shall "obey and comply with each and every requirement, of every order, decision, direction, rule, or regulation, made or prescribed" by an Illinois state commission of three men who are to have general supervision of all such exchanges.

Provisions were neglected and had a downward slant, notwithstanding tha hog values were higher.

Estimates on Tuesday receipts called for 24 cars wheat, one corn, one oats, three barley, two sorghums, and one cane seed.

N. Y. Stocks

NEW YORK, June 21. (AP)—Strong resistance developed in today's stock market to the selling inspired by the announcement that brokers' loans had reached a new high record for all time. With few exceptions, the lowest prices of the day were recorded in the first hour of trading, the mrekt thereafter moving upward until just before the close when selling of stocks previously bought for supporting purposes, turned the market irregular. Total sales again fell well below the 2,000,000 share mark.

Opening recessions of 1 to nearly 3 points were rather common on the execution of a large volume of overnight selling orders "at the market." When these had been absorbed, strong buying support was provided for the recent favorites. Fixing of the renewal rate for call money at 4 per cent helped to inspire confidence, the rate remaining at that figure all day, despite the calling of about $15,000,000 in loans.

Although credit conditions were the chief subject of comment in stock market circles, operators for the rise derived encouragement from the raising of the annual dividend on commonwealth power from $2 to $2.50 by the announcement that the annual dividend on Bangor and Aroostook would be increased from $3 to $3.50 annually on the issuance of nearly 30,000 shares of additional stock, and by reports of improvement in certain branches of retail trade.

Baldwin attracted attention by climbing over 3 points to a new record high at 229, but it later lost all its gain. American Can touched a new 1927 top at 55⅝, up 1⅜ net.

Motors were liquidated rather freely towards the close, with some of the selling undoubtedly inspired by the unofficial descriptions of the new Ford car, which were later characterized as inaccurate by Edsel Ford. Mack Trucks dropped 3 points to 105, Studebaker sagged below 49 for the first time this year and General Motors, Pierce Arrow common and preferred, Hudson and White sold down a point or two, the last named touching another new low at 38⅛.

Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

A 30 point jump in Japanese yen to around 47.30 cents was the only noteworthy change in the foreign exchange market. Demand sterling and French francs held steady around $4.85¼ and 3.91½ cents, respectively.

NORTHERN CENTRAL RY. CO.

of track in Maryland and Pennsylvania operating lines from Baltimore to Marysville, Pa., from Dauphin to Sunbury and from Hollins, Md., to Green Springs Junction, Md.

Funded deb totals $15,832,288. Capital stock outstanding totals $27,077,200 in shares of $50 par value. Under the terms of the lease to the Pennsylvania, which owns nearly half the stock, the holders of $19,342,550 of the stock were to receive a stock dividend of 40 per cent and 10 per cent cash from treasury assets together with a guarantee of 8 per cent on all stock issued during the lease. The rental to be paid for the road is interest on the bonds and $5000 for organization expenses and dividends of 8 per cent on the capital stock.

Dividends of $4 a share annually have been paid regularly since 1901. Income from the lease has tended to increase with the issue of securities for improvements and new construction. The rental in 1926 amounted to $2,853,900 and net income to $2,174,334. As of Jan. 1, 1927 total current assets were $1,362,938, current liabilities $1,354,039, net working capital $8899 and book value applicable to the capital stock $35,399,994 or $65.37 a share. The company retired the first of this year at maturity $3,441,000 in second general mortgage 5 per cent bonds.

Captured Rum-Runner Stopped in Houston

HOUSTON, June 21. (AP)—The steamer Trader, which customs records indicate is the true name of the "Turner" captured Tuesday off New York with a $1,000,000 liquor cargo aboard, is no stranger to rum search.

Members of her crew filed a libel suit just before her departure from her early in May, alleging that she was going into the liquor traffic instead of Yawata, Japan, to be junked, as announced. The ship's owners settled with the men and the vessel departed.

At Galveston she was halted and her then captain G. R. Bickford, removed by authorities for investigation of the rum running rumor. She was given a clean bill of health and proceeded on May 12.

VALLEY TOUR SET JUNE 29

Muddy Roads Delay Visit To Irrigation Area

Due to the muddy condition of the fields and several dirt roads of the county, the inspection trip scheduled for members of the chambers of commerce, business men and farmers of Vernon, Burkburnett and Electra Tuesday was postponed until Wednesday, June 29, according to announcement from the Wichita Falls Chamber of Commerce. The trip is to be made in the interest of the Pease river irrigation project being considered in these communities.

The local delegation, headed by J. A. Kemp, will meet the visiting groups at Iowa Park on the date set and accompany them through all sections of the irrigated Wichita valley, according to present plans. Men from the three cities to be represented are interested in getting the views of farmers living in these districts on the success of irrigation and their suggestions on the best methods in irrigated farming.

The Pease river project is practically assured, and will be in operation within the next two years, it is believed. The trip through the Wichita valley will be of material benefit, both in the information derived from talks with individual farmers, and in a visual appreciation of the value of such a project for a similar district, it was affirmed.

So Today Will Be Tough For the Day Workers

Why it is and what's the reason is something the scientifically inclined can figure out but it won't juggle even the brains of a "dumbbell" very much to fathom that all day-workers on Wednesday are going to do a whole lot of work, because its the longest day of the year.

All the almanacs set out, in addition to extroiling the virtues of sundry medicines that were discovered by the Indians and helped kill them off, that the sun will make its arrival this morning with the milkman at 4.52 a. m. and will set at 7:11 p. m.

According to the almanacs this day of hard luck for the day workers happens because the earth, like every one else, gets tilted onece in a while, and this is the earth's day to tilt.

The earth tilts further toward the sun has a longer time to visit day in the year and as a result the su nhas a longer time to visit with the earth.

Narcotic Tablets Worth $200 Taken From Man

Morphine worth, at bootleg prices more than $200 was taken from a man by Police Officer Pat Allen Tuesday afternoon as the man was entering the city from Fort Worth. The narcotic was in the form of 87 cubes, each containing from four to six grains, according to police.

The man told officers that he had ridden to the edge of the city in a bus. He was seen by Officer Allen to throw a tin box containing the tablets into a ditch at the side of the road. The officer stated that a little boy picked up the box and the man ran back to him and offered the boy a dollar for the box. The boy was frightened and ran away, the officer stated.

Police autorities said that the man had served a 2-year sentence in Leavenworth federal prison for a narcotic violation. Charges will be filed against the man in federal court, officers stated.

"Peaches" Don't Need Papa Browning Anymore, He Says

CARMEL, N. Y., June 21.(AP)—Edward West Browning believes "Peaches," his Cinderella wife, is now earning enough money as a public entertainer to pay her own legal battles.

In six affidavits filed in court here in answer to his wife's plea for an additional $10,000 for legal fees, counsel for the wealthy real estate operator alleges Mrs. Browning has earned more than $32,247 since April from theatrical and night club contracts. Mrs. Browning told the court she was "not in a position to financially prosecute" her appeal from the supreme court decision granting Browning a legal separation from her and denying her further alimony.

URGE RETURN OF GEN. WOOD

Coolidge to Ask His Return To Philippines

By Universal Service.

RAPID CITY, S. D., June 21.—Major-General Leonard Wood will be urged by President Coolidge to return to his post as governor-general of the Philippine Islands, it became known here today.

Wood, having arrived in this country for his first "vacation" in years and for a survey of his health by eminent physicians, is expected by the president to be one of the official visitors to the summer White House.

Recurring reports of friction between the president and General Wood were today ascertained to be false. President Coolidge has confidence in the general's administrative ability. He believes Wood has made the best of a difficult and vexatious job in the Philippines. If Wood wants to return, he will be free to go. Only his impaired health and personal desires can intervene.

Wood's constant quarrels with the Filipino leaders is believed by President Coolidge to have been caused by the necessity of Wood's seeking advice from his military associates in the islands.

Wood has been accused by the natives of surrounding himself with an arbitrary, military cabinet, but the president is understood to have been convinced that there was no other source to whom the general could have turned with confidence.

Civil government in the islands has been strained almost to the breaking point at times, but the president is also convinced that under Wood's regime the islands have made notable progress in education, sanitation, public works and teaching of self government.

President Coolidge will discuss with General Wood the advisability of establishing a civil bureau of insular affairs to administer not only the Philippines but Porto Rico, Hawaii, the Virgin islands and all other posessions now under rule of the army and navy.

By creation of such a bureau, President Coolidge believes that the possessions would be relived of an administration which has the appearance of being military. Friction between the United States and her dependencies would be greatly lessened by civil rule, the president believes.

Cattle Prices Show Industry Faced with Favorable Outlook

WASHINGTON, June 21.(AP)—With beef cattle commanding the highest prices this spring since 1920 and all other grades of cattle participating in the general advance, the cattle industry in the United States is faced with "very favorable" conditions, according to a review of the spring cattle market issued by the United States Department of Agriculture.

The trend in production appears to be downward toward a "more profitable basis" and the industry apparently is approaching that phase of production when the grower "feeling confident of the future, begins to build up herds, retains stock for the full utilization of available pasture and range, and holds young stock for further growth and finish," says the report.

This downward trend is in contrast with the movement in recent years when the cattle industry was hurt by over-production which resulted "in curtailment, liquidation, heavy market receipts and consequently a high slaughtering ratio to numbers remaining on farms and ranges," it is pointed out.

The end of this period of over-marketing was declared in sight, and except for some further culling and liquidation of range herds this fall because of high prices and for marketing in spots because of drought conditions the number of cattle forced on the slaughter market will be limited."

The present high price level for the better grades of fed steers is "unusual," says the report, for this season of the year, "and may be attributed partly to the fact that receipts of all cattle at the principal corn belt and eastern markets during the first four months of this year were four per cent smaller than during the same period last year." The premium for weight also has been a factor in raising the average price for the better grades of fed steers, it was said.

Judge Frees Defendant, Fines Him $10 For Celebrating Court Victory

It cost E. A. Martin $10 Tuesday to celebrate his freedom in the 89th district courtroom.

Judge E. G. Thornton instructed the jury to acquit Martin on a charge of embezzlement. Martin started snapping his fingers and showing other signs of glee to the detriment of the court's decorum. As a result Martin was fined $10 for contempt of court.

Martin was arraigned on a charge of embezzling funds from his employer. He was employed as an automobile trailer salesmon.

The employer testified that Martin had paid him part of the shortage in funds. As a result of this testimony Judge Thornton instructed the jury to return an acquittal verdict due to the fact that the payment of money by Martin to his employer made the case a civil matter instead of a criminal action.

E. F. Fruechte and Sam Spence, assistant district attorneys, representing the state protested the instructions to he jury given by Judge Thornton on grounds that a money settlement between the accused and the complaining witness did not effect a criminal action after a charge had been filed against the accused.

Insurance Firm Named In $6247 Damage Suit

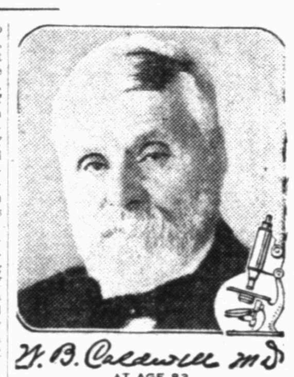

Claiming that he had sustained permanent injuries as the result of being burned, Oliver B. Bloodworth filed suit Tuesday in district court for $6,247.58 damages against the Security Union Insurance company.

The plaintiff contends that he was employed by the Continental Oil company, which is insured against liability for injuries received by employes by the defendant.

On March 5, 1927, the plaintiff alleges, he was cleaning out a large oil storage tank belonging to the oil company. A small amount of oil was in the tank, according to the plaintiff's petition, which was ignited by another workman.

Before he could escape from the tank, the plaintiff contends, he sustained severe burns about the body, causing injuries which will be permanent.

Prescription He Wrote in 1892 is the World's Most Popular Laxative

W. B. Caldwell M.D.
AT AGE 83

When Dr. Caldwell started to practice medicine, back in 1875, the needs for a laxative were not as great as they are today. People lived normal, quiet lives, ate plain, wholesome food, and got plenty of fresh air and sunshine. But even that early there were drastic physics and purges for the relief of constipation which Dr. Caldwell did not believe were good for human beings to put into their system. So he wrote a prescription for a laxative to be used by his patients.

The prescription for constipation that he used early in his practice, and which he put in drug stores in 1892 under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a liquid vegetable remedy, intended for women, children and elderly people, and they need just such a mild, safe, gentle bowel stimulant as Syrup Pepsin.

Under succesfsul management this prescription has proven its worth and is now the largest selling liquid laxative in the world. The fact that millions of bottles are used a year proves that it has won the confidence of people who needed it to get relief from headaches, billiousness, flatulence, indigestion, loss of appetite and sleep, bad breath, dyspepsia, colds and favers.

Millions of families are now never without Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and if you will once start using it you will also always have a bottle handy for emergencies.

It is particularly pleasing to know that the most of it is bought by mothers for themselves and the children, though Syrup Pepsin is just as valuable for elderly people. All drug stores have the generous bottles.

We would be glad to have you prove at our expense how much Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can mean to you and yours. Just write "Syrup Pepsin," Monticello, Illinois, and we will send you prepaid a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE.
