Shultz to carry support to Latin America

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz sets out Tuesday on a nine-day tour of five Latin American and Caribbean countries, bearing a message of American support and sympathy for the democratic processes in each one.

Shultz was to have visited El Salvador and Brazil last fall but postponed the trip after the bombing of the U.S. Marine headquarters in Beirut. On his forthcoming trip, he will visit those two countries as well as Venezuela, Grenada and Barbados.

All the countries on his itinerary are in varying stages of democratic development, and a U.S. official who briefed reporters Friday said the unifying theme for the Shultz trip is American support for democratization of the region.

Shultz's tour will begin in El Salvador where presidential elections are scheduled for March 25. El Salvador is currently headed by an unelected civilian president, Alvaro Magana, and the Reagan administration is hopeful that the March balloting will represent a major step toward making the country more democratic.

Shultz is scheduled to meet with Magana, Foreign Minister Fidel Chavez Mena, Defense Minister Carlos Eugenio Vides Casanova and with opposition political leaders.

The official who briefed reporters, insisting on anonymity, said Shultz once again will stress to Salvadoran leaders that American public and congressional support for El Salvador depends in large measure on that country's ability to curb the activities of rightist death squads.

The administration is soon expected to ask Congress for $350 million in supplementary assistance for El Salvador, about evenly divided between economic and military aid.

Shultz will depart Tuesday evening for Venezuela, one of Latin America's most stable democracies where a new president, Jaime Lusinchi of the Democratic Action party, will be inaugurated on Thursday.

Lusinchi's inauguration will mark the fourth consecutive peaceful transfer of power in Venezuela from one party to another since 1969.

In Caracas, Shultz is expected to meet with representatives of the four-nation Contadora group, which has been engaged in a year-long effort to mediate peace in Central America. The group is comprised of Venezuela, Mexico, Panama and Colombia, all of which will send envoys to the Venezuelan inauguration.

After three days in Caracas, Shultz flies to Brazil, where a process is under way that probably will lead to the installation next year of that country's first civilian president since a 1964 military coup.

Shultz will review with Brazilian officials progress made in lower level talks on enhancing bilateral cooperation in trade, science, military and other areas. Also on Shultz's agenda will be a discussion of Brazil's efforts to come to grips with its $90 billion debt. In Brazil, Shultz also will spend two days in private talks with U.S. ambassadors based in South America.

On Feb. 7, Shultz will become the first senior administration official to visit Grenada since the American-led invasion of the island last October. U.S. officials are hopeful the visit, timed for independence day celebrations, will reinforce the widely held view here that the invasion and the continued U.S. presence on the island have the enthusiastic support of the Grenadian people.

During his brief visit, Shultz will ask the caretaker government there headed by Governor General Paul Scoon about its plans for a transition to democracy.

Before returning home, Shultz will travel from Grenada to nearby Barbados, a stalwart pro-Western democracy, where he will meet with representatives of the Organization of Eastern Caribbean States, whose concern over developments on Grenada last fall contributed to President Reagan's decision to intervene.

School officials, students oppose 'standardization'

"I think it stinks," Midland school trustee Ron Britton said indignantly. School officials and students tend to agree.

Even Midland's representative to the State Board of Education, who voted to approve the proposal, is opposed to many aspects of it.

In an attempt to standardize and upgrade public school education, the state board has approved on first reading new curriculum and graduation requirements. One provision drawing heavy criticism would allow college-bound students only two electives over four years.

Midland students said the changes would result in a higher number of drop-outs and cutbacks in electives and extracurricular activities. Midland school officials say many electives now offered would be cut because there wouldn't be enough students to justify offering them.

Electives are necessary, students maintain. They allow students to explore areas of interest, excel in specific areas and get a head start on college. Midland students are allowed 7½ electives. With only two electives, students would have to limit their choices, and even then may not be able to participate in such things as band, choir, athletics, debate and foreign language for four years.

Lee High senior Coy Stewart said if the requirements had applied to him, he probably would not have played football. Today the All-State guard is being offered full scholarships to several major universities.

Mississippi murder suspect captured in Midland

Trooper's 'routine' chase ends 18-year-old assailant's all-night, 900 mile flight

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

When Texas Highway Patrol Trooper Jim Swain clocked a westbound motorist on Interstate 20 through Midland at 85 miles per hour Saturday morning, he thought it was just another pedal-to-the-medal speeder.

By the time he got him pulled over seven harried miles later, he had apprehended a double-murder, triple-kidnapping and armed-robbery suspect from Waveland, Miss.

Hancock County, Miss., officials are expected to fly to Midland Monday to discuss the charges with 18-year-old Allen Nicolaou, in custody in Midland County Jail.

According to The Sun newspaper in Biloxi, Miss., the shootings occurred at approximately 8 p.m. Friday during an argument in a Waveland, Miss., home owned by Gerald Comiskey, 54, and also occupied by the suspect; Keith McMillian, 20; and Robert Corcken, 21. Authorities believe at least two of the men resided at the house and the others had been staying temporarily.

McMillian was discovered dead at the scene and Comiskey died during surgery. Each had sustained three bullet wounds.

Corcken told investigators the four of them were seated at the dining room table when an argument erupted and the suspect pulled a gun and shot the others. The suspect then stripped the bodies of credit cards, took Corcken hostage and fled in Comiskey's 1983 Chevrolet Camaro, according to reports.

A few miles away at Kiln in northern Hancock County, said authorities, the suspect reportedly stopped to rob a cafe of $250 and take a woman and a 14-year-old girl as additional hostages. Continuing his flight from law officers, the suspect was persuaded by Corcken into releasing the three of them in Necaise Crossing, Miss., only a short distance from the scene of the robbery.

As Corcken notified police, the suspect apparently embarked on an all-night, all-morning 800-900 mile flight through Mississippi, Louisiana and Texas. At dawn Saturday, according to authorities, the suspect's vehicle was sighted speeding through Fort Worth, but eluded officers.

Meanwhile, Trooper Swain was getting ready to begin his work day in Midland, and by mid-morning had set up a radar check along I-20 between the Rankin Highway and Midkiff Road.

At 11:02 a.m., a vehicle blitzed past. Swain's radar gun registered 85, and he whirled into the westbound lane expecting to write a speeding ticket.

"I turned to pursue him and he kicked it up to 110," Swain narrated. "The chase went on for about seven miles. I had to coerce him (to stop). I pulled up next to him several times and one time he tried to hit my patrol unit and I veered back over on the shoulder."

Approximately one mile west of Warfield Truck Terminal, Swain forced the vehicle off the road.

"I got him out of the car and then I took him down with a shotgun and had him spread-eagle on the ground. After I handcuffed and searched him, he had a .25 automatic in his back left pocket. And then we started running names and numbers (through the DPS computer) and we got a hit back from Mississippi. Then I called for the Texas Rangers and the Auto Theft Bureau."

For some it was a joyous moment; one they would cherish forever. For others, an agonizing defeat. Such is the nature of competitions. Their conclusion is always marked by winners and losers, their pathway strewn with laughter and tears.

The 22nd annual National Young Artist Competition, sponsored by the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale Association, Inc., closed Saturday night with the announcement of winners and performing winners out of a field of 61 contestants from throughout the United States.

This year's performing winners were Gloria Justen, violin, from Houston; and Helen Sim, piano, from Scarsdale, N.Y.; (both in the secondary division) Judy Stone, cello, from Chicago; and Richard Dowling, piano, from Houston (college division).

Other winners, announced late Saturday night, were Paul Wehage, saxaphone, from Austin; and Stephen Biggers, voice, from Dallas. Both performed in the college division.

Other finalists in the secondary division were Earl Hough, violin, Wichita Falls; and Rod Waters, piano, Lubbock.

Other finalists in the college division were Blythe Sawyer, voice, Oklahoma City, Okla.; Margaret Nelson, flute, Bloomington, Ind.; Saundra Couch, violin, Houston; and Michael Schnelling, piano, Goddard, Kan.

The finalists, chosen during two days of competition, split $7,000 in prize money, plus four of them gained what most came seeking — opportunity. The competition provides the chance to perform with a professional symphony and the experience such a performance brings. The performing winners will return March 9 and 10 to perform with the Midland-Odessa Symphony.

Judges for the competition were pianist Walter Ponce, head of the piano faculty of the State University of New York; clarinetist Stanley Hasty, professor of clarinet at the Eastman School; violinist Dr. Donald Portnoy, professor of violin at West Virginia University; pianist Roger Keyes, coordinator of Baylor University's keyboard division; and Jean Mallandaine, head of the Houston Grand Opera music staff and director of musical studies for the Houston Opera Studio program.

Nazi papers found in trunk

MOOSE JAW, Saskatchewan (AP) — A crate full of papers, including three award certificates apparently signed by Adolf Hitler and hundreds of photographs of the Nazi leader, were found among the belongings of a World War II military intelligence specialist.

The papers and photographs belonged to Fred Schiesser, a Canadian who died at 80 last August, The Moose Jaw Times-Herald said Thursday. His wife described Schiesser as a semi-recluse who never showed the contents of the crate to anyone and didn't discuss how he obtained them.

The crate was found in Schiesser's attic, some of the documents party gnawed by mice.

The authenticity of the documents has not been established. The Schiesser family is seeking advice on their disposal and has been in touch with a London auction house.

Last year, a West German dealer in Nazi memorabilia confessed to writing fake Hitler diaries, which a journalist had claimed to have discovered. The diaries were sold to a West German weekly magazine for $3.75 million.

The documents record many facets of daily life in wartime Germany and include a calling card apparently signed by Eva Braun, Hitler's mistress. The photographs show Hitler and high-ranking officers and other officials of the Third Reich.

One document translated by a faculty member at the University of Regina is a letter by a senior member of the Waffen SS, the military arm of the Nazi party elite. In the letter, dated July 7, 1941, the German officer discusses the fate of the military SS after the end of the war.

Another document, also translated at the university, is an internal government document, dated April 30, 1943, discussing the need to raise taxes in wartime Germany.

Schiesser served with Canadian military intelligence forces during World War II and apparently shipped the records back to Canada after his service ended, the newspaper said.

The collection, found in an old wooden crate in the attic of Schiesser's isolated log home in the southern British Columbia town of Golden, includes documents stamped Geheim, German for top secret.

Some of the hundreds of photographs show grisly battlefield scenes. Others show Hitler at meetings, social events and troop inspections.

The documents and photographs had remained in the crate since it had been shipped home by Golden during the war, his wife, Christian, said in an interview. Her husband had instructed her not to open the crate and she complied, she said.

Jack Schiesser, a son, said of the crate's wartime arrival: "It was there for quite a while, with instructions not to open. We didn't dare."

"When he arrived home, he opened it and showed me some of the photographs, but I never paid much attention to him. He then nailed it shut and it stayed that way for all these years," his wife said.

Schiesser, a native of Switzerland who spoke German, never discussed details of his wartime service with Canadian military intelligence or how he came to obtain the documents, his wife said.

Youth shot dead in West Bank demonstration

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israeli border police in the West Bank town of Nablus today shot and killed a Palestinian youth who was among demonstrators throwing stones at the policemen, the military command said.

The command said in a prepared statement that a border patrol commander called on demonstrators to disperse and ordered shots to be fired in the air. When stones continued to be thrown, the commander fired shots at the "feet of demonstrators" and wounded the youth, who died later in a hospital, the statement said.

The Palestinian Press Service, a Palestinian-run news agency which operates from Jerusalem, identified the boy as Nasser Sarisi, 15. Reporter Abdel Kaaraim said Sarisi was shot in the neck.

During the demonstration, about 100 people shouted anti-Israeli slogans and chants in support of Palestinian guerrilla leader Yasser Arafat.

Sarisi's death was the first this year during a Palestinian demonstration. Earlier this month, a Palestinian was shot dead during a car chase after he evaded a military roadblock.

In Jerusalem, police chased several Israeli men from the Temple Mount, which is sacred to both Jews and Moslems, Israel Radio said. It said the men fled Thursday night through narrow alleys from the area, where both the al Aqsa mosque and the western wall of Solomon's Temple are located.

The Palestinian Press Service said a guard at the mosque spotted several Israelis carrying hand grenades and six bags of explosives. It said the men left the weapons behind when they fled.

The mosque is located near the Dome of the Rock, where the Koran says the prophet Mohammed ascended to heaven.

King seeks more U.S. aid

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — King Hussein said on Saturday he did not plan a Jordanian rapid deployment force, but he called for increased U.S. military aid and said his army could be used to ensure stability in the Middle East.

The king, holding his first news conference in Jordan since 1980, said Jordanian forces would be willing to intervene in the Middle East "if the situation arises and we are requested and needed to help."

The Associated Press reported Jan. 19 that the Reagan administration planned to renew its request to Congress for $220 million to finance a Jordanian strike force of 8,300 men, which could assist friendly Arab countries in times of emergency and help protect Persian Gulf oil supplies.

But administration officials had urged Hussein to make the plan public, despite fears it could hurt his standing in the Arab world or endanger his regime. Congress had rejected a similar plan previously, because of its secrecy.

Asked by Arab reporters about the report, Hussein replied, "We are not thinking of establishing such a force."

In a later meeting with foreign reporters, the king said in English that "any, the majority or all" of Jordan's armed forces "would help in a crisis situation in the Middle East.

"Obviously, to be effective, we need to increase our ability through some modern equipment," he said.

HISTORIC PROPERTY TAX BREAK

There is a great tax credit bonanza in rehabilitating historic buildings. Do not assume that rules are overly complicated or that they apply only to properties like Lincoln's birthplace. Taking advantage of the tax credit is fairly simple, and you'd be surprised at how broad the qualifications for elegibility are.

For buildings 30 to 40 years old, the credit is 15% of rehab costs; 40 years or older, 20% of rehab costs; and for CERTIFIED HISTORIC STRUCTURES, the allowable credit is 25% of certified rehab costs. Remember, a tax credit is a reduction of TAXES not of taxable income. It's worth more - much more.

What qualifies as a historic building? A certified historic building is one that either is listed individually in the National Register of Historic Places or is located in a registered HISTORIC DISTRICT)designated by the National Register). A historic district can be designated by a state or local government, provided that the designation is approved by the National Park Service.

Report: Missile fired at U.S. copter

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — U.S. jets swept over Beirut's southern suburbs on reconnaissance missions Saturday minutes after a ground-to-air missile was fired at, and missed, a Navy helicopter over the U.S. Marine base, state radio said.

The jets staged no attacks and drew no fire, Beirut radio said.

The Marines would not comment on the radio reports.

Formations of F-14 Tomcat interceptor jets took off from U.S. aircraft carriers in the Mediterranean off Lebanon's coast, the radio said.

Four Phantom F-4 fighter bombers staged similar sweeps about three hours later at 1:15 p.m (6:15 a.m. EST), it said.

The official radio reported the missile incident, but gave no details. The Voice of Lebanon radio station of the rightist Christian Phalange Party said the missile was fired from Beirut's Hay el-Sellum neighborhood, a stronghold of anti-government Shiite Moslem militiamen.

The Hay el-Sullum militiamen are known to possess shoulder-fired SAM-7 "Strella" missiles, but neither station reported the type of missile or the type of helicopter involved.

Capt. Keith Oliver, a spokesman for the U.S. Marines based at Beirut's international airport, said he could neither confirm nor deny the helicopter incident. Nor would be confirm the reported reconnaissance flights.

"We cannot comment on any tactical air maneuvers," Oliver said.

Meanwhile, U.S. special Middle East envoy Donald Rumsfeld and Richard Murphy, the U.S. assistant secretary of state for Near East and South Asian affairs, met with Lebanese President Amin Gemayel, the state radio reported.

Neither American official made any statement after the 90-minute meeting at the presidential palace. Both then flew to Amman, Jordan, the radio said. It said the talks focused on the progress of a Saudi-sponsored plan to establish a true cease-fire in Lebanon.

In Amman, officials said Rumsfeld and Murphy met with King Hussein, but there was no word on what they discussed.

Government troops and Syrian-backed Druse insurgents exchanged intermittent artillery and mortar fire in the Baissour bluffs east of Beirut and the Kharroub region to the south. No casualties were reported.

The Lebanese magazine al-Shirra on Saturday quoted Druse leader Walid Jumblatt as demanding an international investigation be conducted into U.S. naval bombardment of Druse villages in Lebanon's central mountains. U.S. ships have fired in support of the Marine contingent on several occasions since last September.

The magazine also quoted Jumblatt as saying in an interview that he plans to meet soon in northern Lebanon with former President Suleiman Franjieh, a Maronite Christian.

Burmese troops camp os Karen insurgents

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Burmese troops captured a camp of the Karen insurgents Saturday, the second rebel camp seized in two days near the border with Thailand, Thai officers at the frontier said.

The fighting is part of a decades-long conflict between Burma's central government and the Karen ethnic minority group, which is seeking autonomy.

Thai police Lt. Chatri Khunwat, contacted by telephone, said the Karen base of Mae Poh fell and Karen soldiers retreated southward from their stronghold. He said gunfire from the area was heard at the Thai border crossing at Thasongyang, and thatthe Karens fired at, but missed, a Burmese aircraft that flew over another base nearby.

France warns Libya

PARIS (AP) — Five months after reluctantly committing troops in Chad, France has made clear there will be a direct confrontation if Libya's troops or the rebels Libya supports dare cross the French forward line.

The French troops are backing the forces of Chadian President Hissene Habre in their civil war against Libyan-backed rebels loyal to former President Goukouni Oueddei, the man Habre ousted.

On Friday, the French expanded their area of control in Chad an average of 90 miles north of the 15th parallel — to the 16th parallel, and beyond in some areas — and told their 3,000 troops to fire "without warning" on any "hostile elements" that tried to cross the new line.

Additional F-1 Mirage interceptor jets and Jaguar fighter planes have been dispatched to Chad's capital of N'Djamena, and French helicopter patrols began Saturday along the new defensive perimeter.

"NO hostile presence was detected," the Defense Ministry reported.

The moves were in response to a ground raid — allegedly by Libyan forces —inside government- and French-controlled territory, which resulted in the downing of a French jet fighter plane Wednesday. The pilot was killed, becoming the first French casualty since France intervened in August.

The new tough posture by France indicates President Francois Mitterrand is no longer simply trying to contain the Libyan and rebel advance in Chad. He is trying to push it back for the first time in this latest outbreak of what has been almost continual civil war for 19 years in Chad.

THE NEW French defensive line for the first time places French forces inside the potential range of Libyan warplanes based in southeast Libya and the disputed Aozou Strip in northern Chad.

It also advances the French position to within 120 miles of the oasis town of Faya-Largeau, Libya's main advance base. France claims Libyan forces have enlarged Faya-Largeau's air strip to handle transport planes and intends to expand it further to accommodate jet fighters.

That would give Libya, which denies it has any forces at all in Chad, the capability of attacking N'Djamena — the capital of Chad — by air.

LIBYA denied any involvement in the downing of the French plane and again accused France of interfering in Chad's internal affairs.

Saturday night, Abderahman Moussa, Paris-based spokesman for the rebels' Chad Government of National Unity, said France had "poured oil on the fire" by advancing north.

County 'gets serious' about taxes

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Midland County taxpayers who are "chronically delinquent must be pursued."

That's the mandate from Chief Appraiser Roland Wilkinson of the Midland County Appraisal District. He's after more tax money.

"We are entering a much more serious phase as far as delinquent taxes are concerned," he said. Those taxpayers who haven't paid their delinquent taxes "have had a free ride on the wagon long enough." Further, Wilkinson said that "free ride" is unfair to the faithful taxpayers.

Deadline for paying taxes without the imposition of penalties and possible lawsuits filed against taxpayers who are delinquent in taxes is Tuesday. On that day, the appraisal district's offices in Suite 160 of Dellwood Mall will be open until 7 p.m. Payment made by mail must be postmarked no later than Jan. 31 if the taxpayer is to avoid penalty and interest charges.

After Tuesday, 1983 taxes, which became due last October, automatically become delinquent, Wilkinson said, and will be turned over to the appraisal district's delinquent tax attorney, Jimmie Oglesby, for collection.

On Wednesday, Feb. 1, delinquent taxes will incur a six percent penalty and a 1 percent interest. Charges increase by a combined 2 percent per month or portion of a month in which taxes are unpaid until July 1, when the penalty-interest rate is a combined 18 percent.

After that date, the penalty peaks out at 12 percent. But the interest grows.

"I don't feel it's right for those who have paid their taxes on time to bear the load of those who do not pay their taxes on time."

— Roland Wilkinson, Midland County Appraisal District

"The interest rate continues to increase by a percent a month through infinity," Wilkinson said, until taxes are paid, or until a court judgment is rendered or until real or personal property is confiscated in lieu of taxes.

Suits taken to court by Oglesby are subject to court-ordered 15 percent attorney's fees in addition to the penalty and interest charges.

"The total possible percentage of penalty and interest charges assessed to 1983 accounts upon which suit is filed in April may total 26 percent," Wilkinson said.

Exceptions to the penalty-interest charges are those taxpayers who made half payment of their taxes prior to last Dec. 1 and taxpayers, age 65 or older, who can sign an affidavit to defer payment. In the former cases, the last half of the half payment may be made through June 30 without the assessment of penalty and interest charges, he said.

Wilkinson is responsible for collecting about $47.5 million in taxes for the Midland Independent School District, the city of Midland, Midland College and the Midland County Hospital District. Through December, his collection of tax due totaled 60 percent for the city and slightly more than 50 percent for the school, college and hospital. The normal collection through January runs about 85 percent, but Wilkinson said this year, the collections likely will be "less than 85 percent." By midyear, after most of delinquent taxes are in, the collection of taxes runs about 96 percent, he said. Thereafter, the delinquent-tax attorney continues pursuing delinquent taxes by letter and court action.

Unlike Wilkinson, Midland County Tax Assessor-Collector Frances Shuffield said she will not refer overdue taxes to the delinquent-tax attorney until July 1.

"The way I understand the law," she said, "the county is not empowered to place suits until after July 1."

Wilkinson, however, cited a Texas Property Tax Code provision which says a taxing body "may file suit to foreclose the lien securing payment of the tax, to enforce personal liability for the tax or both...at any time" after Feb. 1 when taxes become delinquent.

Oglesby, who said he will be filing the lawsuits, said the courts in which the suits are filed may end up ruling on how timely they are. Meanwhile, he said the appraisal district will be after taxes from individuals and businesses which have filed for bankruptcy. "We will be pursuing claims through the bankruptcy proceedings," he said.

Primarily, Wilkinson's efforts are to get operating money in for the city, the Midland public schools, the college and the hospital and then "to keep our collection percentage as high as we can to more equitably distribute the tax burden throughout the county."

"I don't feel it's right for those who have paid their taxes on time to bear the load of those who do not pay their taxes on time," he said.

"Taxes are the price that we pay for the society we live in," Wilkinson said, "and for me to let them ride that wagon free...is not fair to those who paid...It all boils down to our taking a much more aggressive stance in collecting delinquent taxes than we ever had before."

Electives proposal drawing fire

Several students who plan to major in such areas as geology, drama and computer science said under the proposed regulations they probably would not have taken these courses and may not have developed an interest in them.

Deirdre Bell is valedictorian of the senior class at MHS. A limit of two electives would have hindered her preparation for college and a future in engineering, she said. "I was in athletics my sophomore and junior years. I wouldn't have any electives left with this system. I wouldn't be able to take all the math and science I wanted to."

Even though they would not affect him, National Honor Society member Josh Jones is upset by the proposals. He plans to state his objections to state board members and is encouraging his classmates to do the same.

"It's too restrictive for a young person," state board member J. Murphy Horton said. "It would nearly obliterate electives. We've got cases of National Merit Scholars who couldn't graduate under it as it's presented."

Another provision states that students who miss three days of class per semester, or five days per year, will not receive credit for the class. "The Texas Forensic Association board members are really up in arms about it because it's going to kill the program," said Midland High Debate President Kathy George. Midland debate students usually miss 10 days a year for tournaments.

Local school officials object to the clause because Midland is geographically isolated and students must travel long distances to compete. It will also restrict student participation in more than one activity, they charge.

The restrictions would hurt high achievers the most, Midland students said, pointing out that most National Honor Society students are involved in several extracurricular activities.

Horton, who is also opposed to the proposal, said the Professional Advisory Committee to the state board has recommended that section be deleted.

Another proposal would require students to earn a C rather than a D to receive credit. "I think anyone involved in extracurricular activities must be functioning at a C or better to participate," Horton said, "but this says all students. I think we should leave it (the decision to pass a student) to the discretion of the teacher. If we go to that, you'll have one of two things — either inflated grades or heavy dropouts."

Midland students agreed. "As long as you keep your grades up, you should be allowed to participate in as many extracurricular activities as you want," Ms. George said. Stewart said extracurricular activities were an incentive to making good grades. Most football players grades went down after football season, he said.

"The first thing I thought of was scholarships," Jones added. "If you're limited in extracurricular activities it cuts back on your chances to get scholarships."

All the students agreed if implemented, the policy would cause more students to drop out of school.

The curriculum proposals were drawn up by the staff of the Texas Education Agency, directed by the Commissioner of Education. They were presented to the board Jan. 13 and were passed on first reading. They go into effect once the second and third readings are approved.

But the state board, although having discussed various aspects of the policy, did not see the final recommendations until the January meeting. And local school officials are upset because they were not aware of many of the provisions until after they had been approved.

Midland trustees wondered why such a far-reaching, unpopular and little-discussed proposal was approved so quickly. "I don't know," Horton admitted. "I can't remember if anybody voted against it, but I don't think there's a member of the board that has a handle on this. Most of the people I have talked to are not in favor of it.

"We'd had no discussion at the board level on these items (when they were presented at the Jan. 13 meeting). It was the first time we'd seen them. The board wasn't satisfied with it.

"As it was explained to us, this was the first reading and was just getting it set up," he continued. "We can't delay too long if we're going to implement it in the '84-'85 year, because schools need some lead time, so we're kind of boxed in. At the same time, I don't think we have to implement this in the '84-'85 year. I'd like to see public hearings on it. I could not vote for it because it doesn't leave enough flexibility to the districts."

Horton said the board could not add any amendments at the first reading, but he expects the final product to have several changes. "But there's a chance it might pass if we don't get people in education concerned."

If approved on schedule, the policy will go into effect a few weeks before the Governor's Select Committee on Public Education, headed by H. Ross Perot, comes out with its final recommendations. Midland trustees speculated the state board is rushing the process in order to beat Perot to the punch. Horton said he would rather hear Perot's report before final approval.

"They're trying to do something, but instead of taking a step forward, they're taking several steps backwards," Jones accused. "I think they're going about it the wrong way."

Marijuana charges may be filed

From Staff Reports

Felony charges are expected to be filed Monday against a Midland man and woman in connection with the seizure of seven pounds of what is believed to be marijuana from a residence at 4:30 p.m. Friday.

Also arrested was a second man who had an outstanding felony warrant.

The arrests were made during a search of a home near County Road 118 and S. Midkiff on a warrant.

Also recovered were other suspected controlled substances and stolen property.

The raid was conducted by officers of Midland County Sheriff's Department and the Constable's Office.

Authorities believe that information obtained from the search and continued investigation will lead to the solution of burglary cases under investigation by Midland Police Department.

Competitors encounter art of waiting

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Entertainment Writer

Some knew by 11 a.m. Saturday. Either they made the finals and were still in the running, or debited the money and time spent coming to Midland to compete in the 22nd annual National Young Artist Competition to their experience list. For the latter, their seats during the finals Saturday night would be in the audience.

But several categories of competors knew nothing at all. The preliminaries for them were not complete.

Edna Koren was in that group. She had played at 8:45 Saturday morning, followed by Mia Lee. Both competed in the secondary piano division. Both were from Connecticut. Both had the same teacher. Both were waiting.

Leaning back on one of the sofas in the McCormick Gallery at Midland College, Miss Koren was working at being calm.

"I have this urge to go swimming. I wonder why?" Edna says to nobody in particular.

No reply. Her mother lights a cigarette. Miss Lee squeezes down a little deeper into the sofa's corner cushions.

Around them, people are milling through. Light laughter and conversation can be heard around the coffee and sweets table as well as at the check-in table. Warren Taylor, art instructor at MC, is busy going around the walls hanging 150 George Edward Anderson photographs, as inconspicuously as he possibly can. The works, all in black and white, trace the early days of Utah. Once seen, they seem to call the viewer closer. Several of those walking through the Gallery stop to look.

The three don't move from the sofa. Miss Koren and Miss Lee talk briefly about where they are staying. Miss Lee has a place in a host family's home, a service provided by the Midland Symphony Guild for unaccompanied secondary students (students in the college division are on their own for housing). The conversation is short lived, dwindling off once again into the silence of waiting.

The two-day competition began Friday, continued Saturday and entered the finals stage at 7:30 p.m. Saturday night. By 5 p.m. on Saturday the five judges had heard and made decisions on 61 secondary and college age performers. They had to pick no more than 12 finalists, limiting each category to two. No ties.

Divisions include secondary piano, strings and wind (but there were no entries in secondary wind this year) and college piano, strings, wind and voice. Registered students in secondary schools, colleges, universities, conservatories and institutes of music are eligible provided they have not reached their 26th birthday prior to Jan. 27 and have not launched a professional career.

A fourth party joins Miss Koren, her mother and Miss Lee. This Texan overheard the comment Miss Koren made about wanting to go swimming and asks,"Why?" Miss Koren smiles. "I don't know. Perhaps because it's such a beautiful day."

"But, it's still so cold," says the Texan, only to discover it's a matter of perspective. When the Korens left Connecticut, it was snowing.

When the visitor asks what division the girls are in, she might not have known the secondary piano division was the talk of the competition.

NYAC is highly respected throughout the country and those competing in the college divisions were all clearly competent players.

However, the entries in the secondary piano division had stolen the competition. Since many national competitions don't have a secondary division, those students don't have as many opportunities to compete. Whatever the reason, the talent in the secondary piano division amazed all those who heard the students play.

"The judges have been impressed with the quality of the music they're hearing," said Betty Sumner, chairman for NYAC, which is sponsored by the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale Association, Inc. "They only wish they could choose more finalists."

It's hard to tell contestants they've not reached the finals especially when that doesn't mean they aren't talented, just that others were perhaps a little farther along.

Many can try again next year. If it isn't snowing here, maybe it will be warm enough to swim.

Six young artists chosen winners

In addition to receiving prize money and the opportunity to perform with the symphony, the performing winners receive the Lara Hoggard Performance Medallion.

This competition began with a dream in 1962. Dr. Lara Hoggard, then symphony conductor, envisioned a competition which would foster "early recognition of a truely outstanding talent," one which "might encourage a youngster to keep going."

That same year, Ruth Burton was desirous of a project which could be done in memory of her late husband, Raiford H. Burton, one which would be supportive of the cultural arts at its beginning stages. She also wanted to be able to provide encouragement for talented and creative young people.

Together, with the help of the symphony and symphony guilds, they made the dream a reality. The competition has grown each year, and today enjoys a good reputation nationwide.

Elderly woman fights for home

CARROLLTON, Texas (AP) — An illiterate widow stands to lose her ramshackle house and five acres of suburban Dallas land because of an 18-year-old agreement with a contractor who was deeded the property after claiming she didn't pay him promptly for fixing her leaky roof.

Callie Wallace, 75, says she cannot read or write and barely remembers signing the document that turned the land over to the contractor, Virgil Whatley, in 1966.

Whatley maintains that Mrs. Wallace knew what she was doing when she signed an agreement and plans to sell the land soon.

Mrs. Wallace and her husband, John, were given the land 40 years ago for their work on a nearby cotton farm of Charles McKamy.

At the time, Carrollton was a tiny isolated community and McKamy estimated the land's value at $2,500. Now it's a bustling suburb of Dallas with 40,000 residents, condominiums and office buildings have sprouted on farmland and the land where Mrs. Wallace lives was assessed last year at $524,000.

In March 1965, she hired Whatley to fix her roof and signed what he said was a contract requiring her to pay the $3,500 bill within 90 days, something she said would have been impossible.

According to Jeff Shore, her attorney, Mrs. Wallace made payments to a bank, but when she didn't pay the total on time, Whatley returned the next year with another man and falsely claimed that the bank would foreclose on her property if she didn't sign a contract calling for $45-a-month payments to him.

The document actually deeded over her home to the contractor in return for $10, something Mrs. Wallace said she didn't realize until 1982.

Astronauts to test backpacks enabling untethered walks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Five astronauts and the space shuttle Challenger are to launch from Cape Canaveral on Friday to kick off the most ambitious year in NASA's history — with a total of 52 men and women scheduled to make 10 flights.

This week's mission will feature the first untethered space walks, with two astronauts testing jet-powered backpacks to roam up to 300 feet away from the orbiting shuttle.

The flight starts at 7 a.m. CST Friday, and much of what the crew does, including the backpack tests, is rehearsal for the next flight in April when another crew will attempt to retrieve and repair the defective Solar Max satellite.

The astronauts also will chase an orbiting balloon to test maneuvers needed to track down Solar Max and will practice the necessary repairs. They plan to end the flight Feb. 11 with the first landing on a 15,000-foot runway near the launch pad at Kennedy Space Center.

"This flight will be a bridge to the next one," said commander Vance D. Brand, veteran of two earlier space flights.

Other crew members are Navy Lt. Cmdr. Robert L. Gibson, the pilot; and three mission specialists, Navy Capt. Bruce McCandless; Army Lt. Col. Robert Stewart; and Ronald E. McNair, a physicist who will be the second black to fly on an American spaceship.

After the April flight, the NASA launch rate accelerates to one a month. The most manned flights ever launched by NASA in a single year was five, during the Gemini program in both 1965 and 1966.

The 1984 missions will include deployment of a dozen commercial satellites, the second Spacelab science flight and the first all-military mission in June with a secret payload. A third shuttle, Discovery, will debut in June, joining Columbia and Challenger in the fleet.

Six women and three blacks have been assigned missions during the year. An August flight will have two women in the five-person crew — Sally Ride and Kathryn Sullivan, the first female astronaut ticketed to make a space walk.

Brand said the major goal of the upcoming flight — the 10th for the shuttle — is to deploy two commerical communications satellites for paying customers, Western Union and the Indonesian government.

These are to be dispatched on the first and second days of the mission. Then the crew will concentrate on the tools and techniques for the April Solar Max mission. Solar Max is the $100 million Solar Maximum Satellite, which has been ailing in orbit since an electronic box fuse failed shortly after it was launched four years ago. The plan is for astronauts to replace the electronics box, enabling the satellite to do its job of studying the sun.

The key for retrieving Solar Max is the backpack, or MMU as it is called, for Manned Maneuvering Unit. There are two mounted in Challenger's cargo bay, and they both will be tested by McCandless and Stewart, with McCandless making three flights and Stewart two, each flying out to about 300 feet from the shuttle as it orbits 190 miles high at 17,400 mph.

In April, 300 feet is the distance the shuttle will "park" from Solar Max while astronaut George Nelson jets over to latch onto the satellite to bring it into the cargo bay.

Neither McCandless nor Stewart consider their pioneering tetherless space walks daring or risky.

"The backpack is very easy to fly and risk is very minimal," said Stewart.

If something goes wrong and one of them is unable to steer himself back to Challenger, Brand and pilot Gibson are trained to fly over for a rescue.

"This is a very critical test to the future of the program. They're not going out there more than 300 feet and we're not going to let them out of our sight," said Brand.

An MMU looks like a backpack with arm rests, with the astronaut's hands resting on controls at the end of the arms. These operate jets of compressed nitrogen gas which propel the spaceman slowly and easily through space.

The MMU tests will occur on the fifth and seventh days of the mission.

Officer shot by sniper

NEW YORK (AP) — Scores of investigators searched West Harlem streets and rooftops Saturday as a 13-year police veteran shot by a sniper lay "in bad shape" after eight hours of surgery.

"They're canvassing the neighborhood, doing forensic work, research work — let your imagination run wild," said Sgt. Ed Burns, a police spokesman. "They'll get these guys. Without a doubt."

The Patrolmen's Benevolent Association, the police union, offered a $5,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the gunman or gunmen, said PBA President Phil Caruso.

Dennis Brennan, 34, was hit in the chest by rifle fire at about 7:30 p.m. Friday while on routine patrol in an enclosed, three-wheeled scooter in Harlem, police said. A second bullet grazed his neck.

Brennan, the father of four, managed to transmit a muffled "officer in trouble" call before collapsing on the seat of the scooter. Rescuers rushed him to St. Luke's Hospital where surgeons operated until about 4 a.m.

The doctors performed "numerous procedures" on Brennan, who was in critical but stable condition in the hospital's intensive care ward Saturday, said Nursing Administrator Dorothy Burch. She declined to give details.

"He's in bad shape," Burns said, but was expected to live.

"Being a cop is a dangerous profession," said Mayor Edward Koch, who sped to the hospital. Police officials and Brennan's wife, Barbara, also rushed to St. Luke's, and officers mobbed the emergency room to donate blood.

Brennan was conscious and talking as he was wheeled into the operating room, said First Deputy Commissioner Patrick Murphy.

"As far as we know, the officer did not see his assailant," Murphy said. "Shots rang out. He felt the shock. The scooter rolled forward, and he called on his radio for help. He is not aware of why he was shot."

One bullet smashed through the windshield, passed through Brennan's chest and lodged in the scooter's seat, investigators said. Another grazed the left side of his neck.

Murphy said police had located no witnesses who saw the shooting but two who heard it. The officer had been driving in a dimly lighted area under the elevated tracks of the Broadway subway line.

About 100 officers immediately were deployed at the scene, and a police helicopter with searchlights scanned the area Friday night, Burns said. On Saturday, about 60 officers continued the search, he said.

"A sniper really doesn't operate in foreign territory. That's going to limit the chances of escape," Burns said. "It increases the chances of him not being alone, of his having discussed it with someone else."

Brennan was the first New York police officer shot in the line of duty this year. Seventeen were shot on the job in 1983, and one died.

Church wins $4 million suit

BOSTON (AP) — Trinity Church has won its suit against the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co., charging that construction of the giant Hancock Tower seriously damaged the adjacent historic church.

A Suffolk Superior Court jury awarded the Copley Square church $4 million Friday, and court officials estimated that $4 million in interest will be added to the verdict.

Vibration and falling objects caused cracks in the church's foundation, damaged a mural painted by American artist John La Farge, damaged the roof and cracked stained glass windows, according to the suit, filed nine years ago.

Jobless man sues TV news crew

ANNISTON, Ala. (AP) — A jobless roofer who set himself on fire to protest the nation's high unemployment rate has filed a $4 million suit against a television news crew who filmed the incident.

Cecil Andrews of Jacksonville, Ala., claims in his suit that he was "mentally or physically incapacitated" at the time and that the television crew was negligent in not trying to stop him. He claims the burns he suffered resulted in "permanent and total physical injury," which still require "extensive medical treatment."

The suit seeks $4 million from WHMA-TV news director Phil Cox, cameramen Ron Simmons and Gary Harris, and the Anniston Broadcasting Co., which owned the station at the time of the incident.

Andrews called the station four times on the evening of March 4, 1983, saying he was going to set himself afire in the town square of nearby Jacksonville to protest unemployment. The station notified police and sent Simmons and Harris to the square. When they arrived, Andrews walked up to their vehicle, squirted lighter fluid on his pants and set himself afire.

Fifteen more tank shells found

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Navy ordnance experts have found 15 more tank shells during a sweep of a canyon where two 8-year-old boys were killed when an old shell exploded on a former military firing range.

The shells found last week raised to 28 the number found in the canyon since the sweep began two weeks ago, Navy spokesman Bill Kinder said Friday at the San Diego Naval Base.

The brush-covered canyon, on the edge of a middle-class neighborhood, was used as a tank and artillery range in World War II.

Lawyer says he solicited murder

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An attorney who admitted he tried to get a friend to beat a former client has been sentenced to two years in prison.

Superior Court Judge Ronald M. George sentenced Paul Ian Mostman of Sherman Oaks on Friday.

Mostman, 48, had been charged with soliciting the murder of ex-client, actor-producer John Roper, but that was dismissed in exchange for his Nov. 4 guilty plea to a lesser charge. His grudge against Roper never was revealed.

Pilot killed in jet fighter crash

HILL AIR FORCE BASE, Utah (AP) — A Air Force F-16 jet fighter has crashed in the western Utah desert during a training flight, killing its pilot.

Base spokeswoman Carol Ann Keck said the aircraft went down at about 1:30 p.m. Friday on a firing range 60 miles southwest of Lakeside on the south shore of the Great Salt Lake.

Ms. Keck said other pilots saw the jet crash. She said there was no indication that pilot Lt. Col. Wendell Neisz, 40, of Ogden, tried to use his parachute.

Coal company's sales hit record

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The nation's oldest independent coal firm, Westmoreland Coal Co., says it sold 16.2 million tons of coal worth $549 million last year, the highest since it was founded in 1854.

The company's earnings hit a six-year high in 1983, totaling $15.3 million, or $1.91 per share, compared with $8.4 million and $1.14 per share in the previous year, according to a statement released Friday. Sales were up from 15.7 million tons valued at $548 million in 1982. It was the highest earnings figure since 1977's $17.8 million.

Chairman E.B. Leisenring Jr. said the figures were particularly pleasing in light of the worldwide depressed coal market that has affected both volume and prices.

Nuclear power plant leak fixed

ROWE, Mass. (AP) — A tiny leak that dripped radioactive water at the nation's oldest operating commercial nuclear power plant was repaired Saturday and crews began working toward restarting the reactor.

New England Power Co. spokesman William McGee said crews replaced a leaking tube at Yankee Rowe during the morning. The tube is used to measure water pressure in a larger pipe.

Operators shut down the reactor late Tuesday after a weekly inspection detected the drip amid a maze of pipes inside the reactor containment building. The plant declared an "unusual event," the Nuclear Regulatory Commission's lowest classification for a nuclear power plant problem. McGee said the leak posed no danger to workers or the environment.

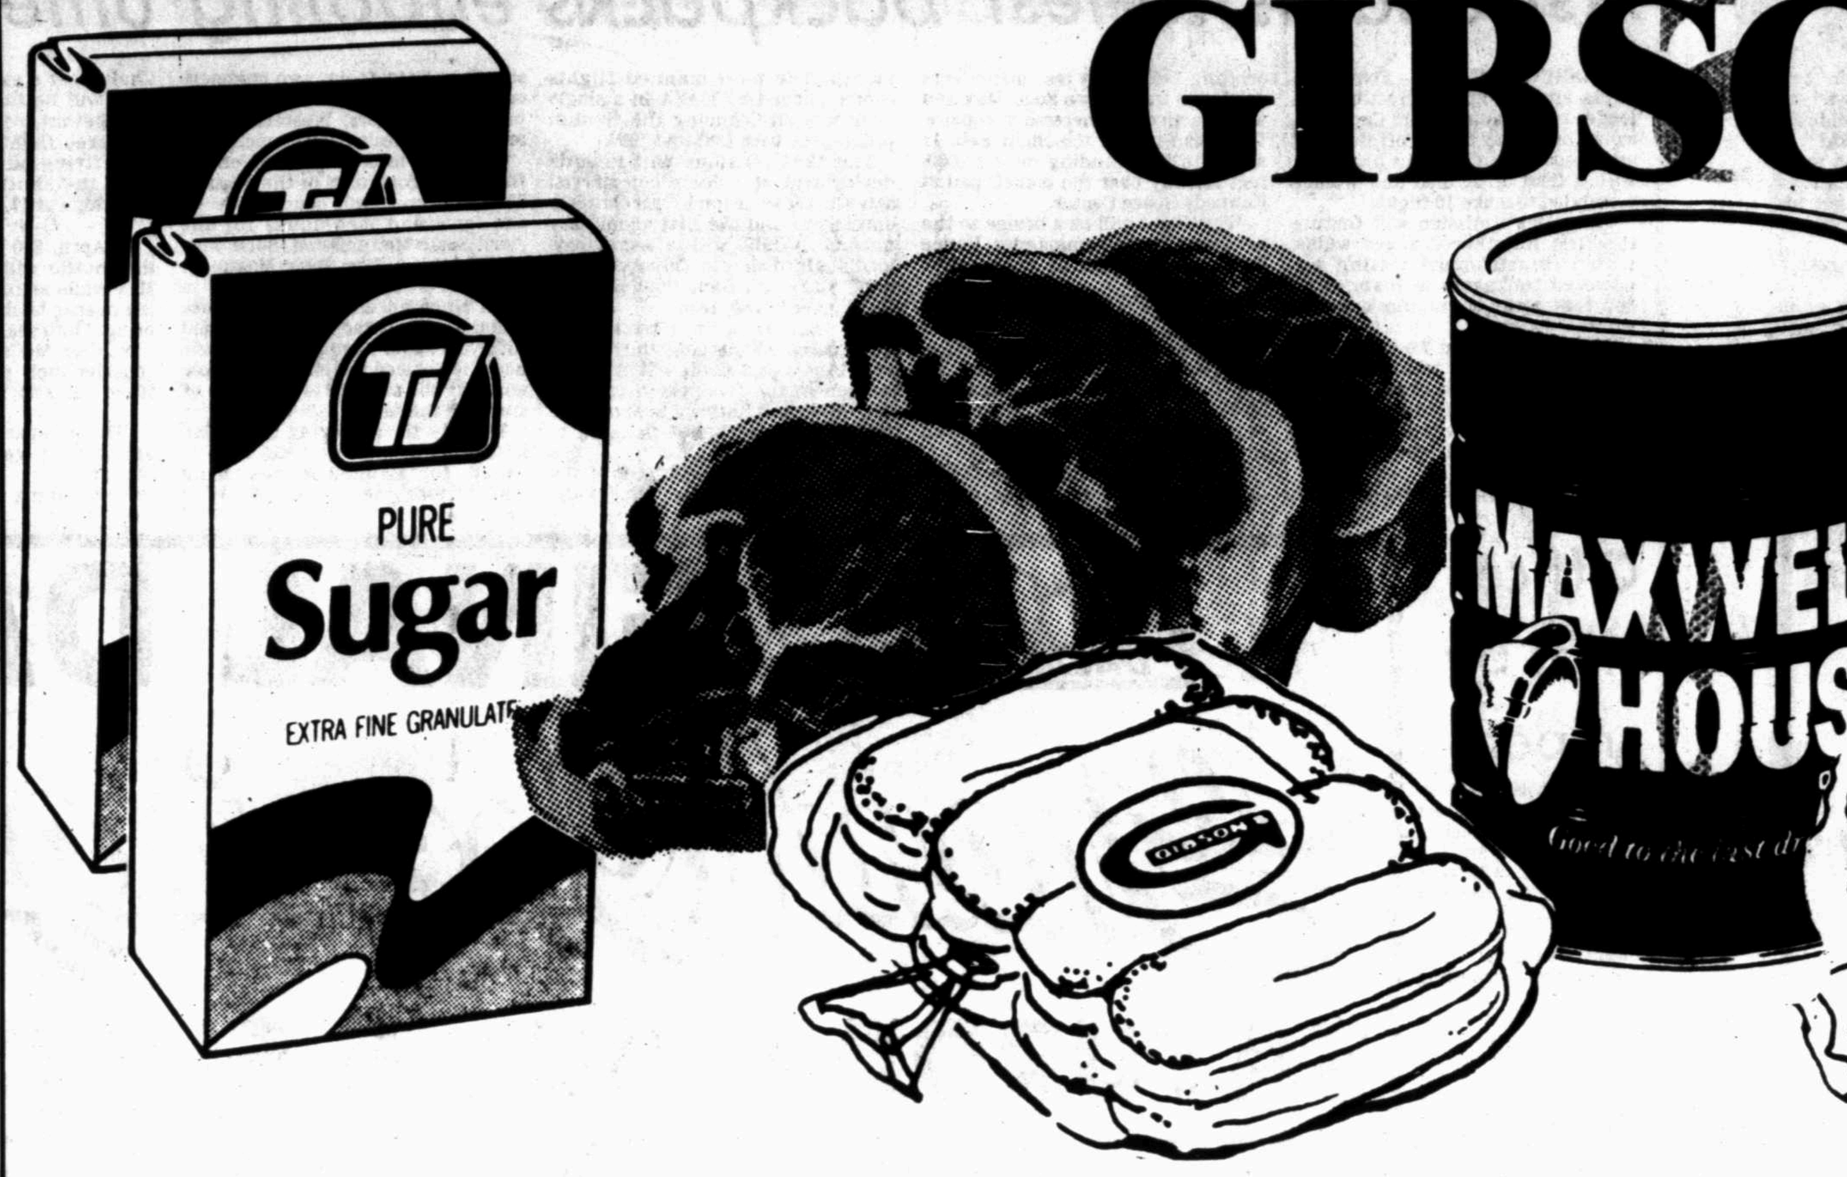

Connecticut endorses Cranston

HAMDEN, Conn. (AP) — Sen. Alan Cranston won 64 percent of the vote to Walter Mondale's 29 percent Saturday as the Caucus of Connecticut Democrats endorsed Cranston's bid for the Democratic presidential nomination.

The state's Democratic liberal wing gave Cranston 72 of the 113 votes cast on the third ballot. Mondale received 32 votes, Jesse Jackson seven votes, and George McGovern and Sen. Gary Hart one each.

Officials allege muffin mixes contaminated

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Muffin mixes containing what state officials said were dangerous levels of a cancer-causing pesticide have been pulled from hundreds of stores by California supermarket chains.

Procter & Gamble, manufacturer of the Duncan Hines mixes, was asked again Friday to voluntarily recall the contaminated products, said state health director Peter Rank.

Early this week, state officials said they found high levels of EDB in Duncan Hines' Wild Blueberry Muffin Mix, code 3277W4, and Bran Muffin Mix, coded 3180W4 and 3181W4. Rank said Friday that officials had also found 1,904 parts per billion of EDB in a batch of Duncan Hines' spicy apple muffin mix with the code number 3223W4. He said the batch was discovered in the Sacramento area.

The state considers anything over 300 parts per billion to be dangerous, said Peter Weisser, a spokesman for the state Department of Health Services.

Safeway spokesman Louie Gonzalez said the chain, which has 530 stores in California, is "pulling off all Duncan Hines muffin products."

"The customers are bringing back all Duncan Hines muffin products, so we are pulling them all off," Gonzalez said.

At Lucky Stores, which has 250 stores in California, management decided to pull all Duncan Hines muffin mixes with the affected lot numbers, said spokeswoman Judy Decker.

"We're going to wait and see what the state has to say about this," Ms. Decker said.

Alpha Beta, another large California's grocery chain, said all the mixes with the affected lot numbers were ordered removed from the chain's 80 Northern California stores. The chain does not carry those mixes in Southern California.

Rank met for 90 minutes Friday with two officials from Procter & Gamble and said he would decide Monday whether to halt sales of the muffin mixes in California. The company has refused to recall the mixes, saying there is no evidence they are dangerous.

The officials declined comment after the meeting, but Rank said the company had agreed to reconsider its decision not to recall the products.

A Procter & Gamble spokeswoman, Marjorie Bradford, said in Cincinnati that the company didn't "at this point see any reason to recall the muffins since they're totally safe. But we are in the process of working with the state to resolve this."

Weisser said the department thought Thursday that Procter & Gamble had agreed to recall the mixes. "Apparently it was vetoed by higher management," he said.

Ms. Bradford said there had been "misunderstanding" between state officials and the company.

EDB, ethylene dibromide, is used in some states as a grain or citrus fumigant to kill insects. Its use as a soil fumigant has been banned by the federal government and some states.

Nixon: There'll soon be woman vice president

NEW YORK (AP) — Former President Richard Nixon predicts the United States will have a woman vice president within a dozen years — probably a Republican.

In an interview Friday on ABC's "Good Morning America," Nixon said:

"A woman will certainly be vice president within 12 years, perhaps next time. More likely on a Republican ticket than a Democratic ticket in 1988 for the reason that women seem to tilt more to the Democratic Party. The Republicans need a woman on the ticket."

Nixon also said Walter F. Mondale is a shoo-in for the Democratic presidential nomination this year and that there is "no way" Jesse Jackson would be his running mate.

Stranger posts bond for woman jailed for having child

NEW PORT RICHEY, Fla. (AP) — A young woman jailed for violating a probation condition that she not have any more children for 15 years has been freed after a businessman complaining of "Big Brother" court tactics posted her bond.

Jackie Fourthman had been behind bars since Dec. 25 because neither she nor family nor friends could afford to post her $10,000 bail.

She left the Pasco County Jail on Thursday after a benevolent stranger, Tampa shipyard owner Louis Preziosi, posted the bond and she caught a bus back home to Buffalo, Ind.

"I just can't see how the state can decide when someone can breed and when you can't. That's Big Brother," Preziosi, 49, of Atlantic Sandblasting and Coating Inc., said Friday, referring to the oppressive government portrayed in George Orwell's "1984."

"I expected a real hardened girl. I didn't see that," said the father of seven children. "A big steel door came open and she had all her clothes in a plastic bag. She had tears in her eyes."

Ms. Fourthman was 20 when she pleaded guilty last March to third-degree murder and aggravated child abuse in the death of her 7-month-old son Jeremy in this town on the Gulf Coast north of Tampa.

James Burchell, 29, the child's father, was found guilty of the same charges by a Pasco County Circuit Court jury.

Investigators said the baby died of complications resulting from malnutrition, dehydration and severe sunburn.

Circuit Judge Wayne Cobb put the couple on 15 years' probation and prohibited them from having children during that time. Burchell successfully appealed the order. Ms. Fourthman didn't appeal.

The judge allowed Ms. Fourthman to go home to her parents in Indiana, with a probation stipulation that she not leave Indiana without permission of her probation officer.

Ms. Fourthman was arrested Dec. 1 in Indiana after probation officers said a birth certificate presented with a welfare request showed she had gone to Phoenix, Ariz., last June to give birth. She never had permission to leave Indiana, they said.

She was returned to Florida and jailed Christmas day.

"The way I saw it was, she is a young, naive victim of extreme poverty," said Preziosi. "She showed me a picture of her current child. He was just a fat, happy-looking kid."

Ms. Fourthman is scheduled to be arraigned Feb. 13 in circuit court in Dade City and Preziosi will get his money back as long as Ms. Fourthman appears for trial.

She asked him one favor before she left.

"She asked me to come back when she goes to trial," said Preziosi, who vowed he would be there.

People cheer when man found guilty in murders of stepdaughter, fiance

LOGAN, Ohio (AP) — Dale N. Johnston was found guilty Saturday afternoon of two counts of aggravated murder in the dismemberment slayings of his young stepdaugher and her fiance, and some townspeople cheered.

Prosecutors stressed jealousy and incest in closing arguments.

Each of the two counts carries death penalty specifications. Sentencing will be determined after a second hearing, yet to be scheduled. The prosecution has asked for the death penalty.

A three-judge panel returned the verdict in the non-jury trial after two hours of deliberations. The trial began Jan. 11.

Johnston, 50, stood quietly, but he paled as the judges read the lengthy verdict convicting him of killing Annette Cooper Johnston, 18, and Todd Schultz, 19, both of Logan.

The victims' torsos were found Oct. 14, 1982, in the Hocking River. Remaining body parts were found two days later buried in seven shallow graves in a cornfield. They had last been seen going for a walk together along a railroad track that passes the field.

Although spectators in the packed courtroom were quiet, cheers could be hear outside in the hallway.

Earlier Saturday, defense lawyer Robert Suhr had argued that Johnston was chosen as a scapegoat to ease the terror that the gruesome killings caused in this quiet southeastern Ohio city of about 6,600.

"You can't have people from a city like Logan in a county like Hocking going out of their minds about some unknown person or persons who would do that to people," he said.

After the arrest of Johnston, a farmer and construction worker, he had been kept under strict security because of fears of community reprisal. Everyone involved in the case was under a judge's gag order until the trial.

The prosecution contended that Johnston killed the two because he was jealous of the relationship Miss Johnston had with Schultz.

Sandra Schultz, Todd's mother, testified that Miss Johnston told her she had been raped by her stepfather when she was 10 years old.

Suhr had argued that the killings could have been done by more than one person in a kind of cult ceremony.

"They were cut up, perhaps in some kind of ceremony, perhaps not," Suhr told the three judges: James E. Stilwell of Hocking County, Joseph E. Cirigliano of Lorain County and Michael J. Corrigan of Cuyahoga County.

Suhr's statement was the only defense effort to explain what might have happened to the pair after they disappeared Oct. 4, 1982.

Suhr said Schultz had a large gash across his chest — cutting through his ribs — with smaller incisions in the shape of a cross on his abdomen. There were three gash marks radiating from the upper left quadrant of the cross, Suhr said.

He also said seven nails were missing from Miss Johnston's fingers and that the graves for the body parts were arranged in a semicircle.

Suhr said the autopsy report showed that some of the cuts made to dismember the bodies were clean, while others appeared to be hacked, suggesting more than one person might have been involved.

The defense had an expert witness on the occult standing by to testify Friday and Saturday, but the witness was never called.

Johnston testified on his own behalf Friday, claiming that he loved Miss Johnston and denying ever raping her.

Johnston said he and his wife approved of the couple's marriage plans.

We could not have done it without you.

Boy nags father to help save thousands of starving horses

state

MARLIN (AP) — When the multimillion-dollar deals fell apart and the harshest winter ever set in, it was the 11-year-old boy who made the difference.

More than 1,200 horses slated for slaughter died in the muddy pastures of central Texas, the victims of a business deal some call "bad judgment" and others call "a scam."

A horse breeder whose son nagged him about the situation called a television station two weeks ago, setting in motion a relief effort that brought hay and other grains and donations for food from as far away as London.

"My son Chance and I had been watching horses die for weeks," said Don Walker. "I didn't know what to do. He kept pestering me and one day he said, 'Daddy, who's going to talk for those horses?'

"I had to set an example for my son," Walker said. "Horses are our whole life and I just couldn't stand to see it no more."

Authorities say the condition of the thousands of surviving horses is improving since Walker's call and the resulting public response.

Now local officials are left with the question of who's responsible.

Falls County cattle ranchers spent from $2 million to $5 million to buy 14,000 horses from a local company called Horses Unlimited, which promised to buy them back at the same price plus $1 per day for what the horses ate.

Ranchers said they were told Horses Unlimited would then sell the horses to a slaughter house. Ultimately, the horse meat would be sold in Europe.

Ranchers blame Roland Jones Jr. of Clifton, the financier of Horses Unlimited, who announced Jan. 13 he couldn't buy the horses back.

"These animals were brought in here for slaughter, brought in here to be fattened up. A lot of them just couldn't make it when the winter came and took its toll," said rancher H.A. "Tony" Novelli, who spent $700,000 for about 2,200 horses at $300-$350 apiece.

"Maybe we didn't feed them properly," Novelli added. "We did the best we could. But he (Jones) left us holding the bag...It was his project, his scheme, not ours."

On Dec. 28, the ranchers say, Horses Unlimited was supposed to buy back the horses. Jones asked for more time. But after another meeting — on Friday the 13th of January — the question of who was responsible for feeding the animals became confused.

Jones will not comment on the case. His attorney, Artie Giotes of Waco, will say only that "Mr. Jones is innocent."

Jones' partner, R.D. "Big Shot" Plunkett, said he was a victim of the failed deal, too.

"I'll be bankrupt," Plunkett said. "When we turned the horses out here, there was lots of feed. Then there was the winter and the freeze killed everything. Then the price of feed jumped $85 a ton. Everything in the world went wrong."

District AttorneyTom Sehon and Sheriff Larry Pamplin say the question of responsibility will be determined by a grand jury, due to convene in February.

"The animals are victims, the owners are victims and the county as a whole is a victim," Pamplin said. "There is going to be a tremendous loss — up in the millions of dollars. It's going to take a long time for this county to recover."

Jerry Owens, a vice president of the New York-based Fund For Animals, said of the 400 animal cruelty cases he has investigated, this is the worst.

"It's nothing more than greed," Owens said. "It's a money thing. It's capital gains. It's economics, and the animals always end up the victims."

Owens said he believed the deal was doomed from the start.

"Personally, I believe this started out as a scam and some local fellows got in and didn't know what they were facing," he said.

Rancher Louis Corpora said he had made money on two previous contracts with Horses Unlimited but fears he may have lost the $390,000 he invested before winter for 1,000 horses.

For Corpora, watching the horses die stirred devastating memories of his days as a World War II prisoner of war in Poland and Germany.

"They were in a pen and starving, and there was nothing we could do about it," he said. "We were in that shape sometimes. I just don't like to see anything suffer."

With alarming frequency, Owens said, ranchers in Texas are turning toward raising horses instead of cows.

"The demand for horse meat for human consumption is increasing in Europe, and there is an oversupply of horses so they're easy to get," he said. "There's no branding inspection program, and so we're even finding horses are being stolen for slaughter."

Sehon and Pamplin called in help from the Texas Animal Cruelty Enforcement Agency. "It looks like a matter of not necessarily criminal intent, but of bad judgment and questionable financial dealings," said Capt. George Huebner, a divisional commander of the agency.

"They have too many horses here," he said. "You can't raise horses like you can cattle. The horse's temperament is different...Some of the ranchers said they didn't even know how to care for horses."

Jones has been charged with 12 counts of theft after seven ranchers filed complaints against him. The humane organizations have filed cruelty to animals charges against Plunkett, rancher Mike Davis and Horses Unlimited. An arrest warrant has been issued for Jones. Plunkett and Davis have posted bonds.

Judge corrects clerical error to lengthen sentence of child's killer

HOUSTON (AP) — A judge says the image of a baby lying in a pool of blood was vivid in his mind when he corrected an error that would have allowed the child's killer to leave prison six years earlier than the law permits.

Visiting District Judge Allen Stilley corrected the clerical error in the sentencing papers of Walter Waldhauser Jr. Friday.

Waldhauser, 31, was sentenced to 30 years in prison for the 1979 murders of the baby and his parents, John and Diana Wanstrath. Waldhauser admitted arranging the murders so Mrs. Wanstrath's adoptive brother would inherit the family's million-dollar estate.

The judge instructed a clerk Friday to amend the documents to show that Waldhauser used a deadly weapon in the slaying of the 14½-month-old child. Without the phrase, Waldhauser would have been eligible for release from prison next year. With it, he will be jailed at least until 1991, the judge said.

"I remember reviewing the evidence of the little dead baby in a pool of blood," Stilley said. "I remember thinking that a deadly weapon finding was appropriate."

Waldhauser's attorney, Robert Scardino, said he would appeal the judge's action to the Texas Criminal Court of Appeals.

"To go back 2½ years and change the record is something I strenuously object to," Scardino said.

According to Texas law, if a judge rules that a deadly weapon was used in a crime, a defendant must serve one-third of the sentence before becoming eligible for parole.

"I remember reviewing the evidence of the little dead baby in a pool of blood. I remember thinking that a deadly weapon finding was appropriate."

— District Judge Allen Stilley

Without the ruling, a defendant becomes eligible for parole when his "good time" credit and the time actually served equal one-third of the sentence.

State law makes it possible for prison inmates to receive up to three days credit on their sentences for each day of good behavior.

Scardino argued that because the deadly weapon finding was not part of the plea bargain under terms of which Waldhauser was assessed the 30-year sentence, to change the judgment would constitute a breach of the plea bargain agreement.

But Assistant District Attorney Chuck Rosenthal said calculation of eligibility for parole was never part of the plea bargain.

Waldhauser told authorities the Wanstrath slayings were arranged by Mrs. Wanstrath's brother, Markham Duff-Smith. Waldhauser identified Allen Wayne Janecka as the triggerman.

Janecka and Duff-Smith were sentenced to death.

Longview police officer killed during drug investigation

Randy Davis

LONGVIEW (AP) — A 28-year-old policeman was shot and killed as officers executed a search warrant at a motel, authorities say.

Sgt. Randy Davis was pronounced dead on arrival at Good Shepherd Medical Hospital at about 8 p.m. Friday, said a police spokesman.

A group of special service officers was executing a search warrant in connection with a narcotics investigation at a room in the Globetrotter Motel in Longview when the shooting occurred, said Sgt. Kathy Alexander, shift supervisor.

She said officers who entered the room encountered an armed man who opened fire on them. Witnesses said one bullet struck Davis.

Charles Billups, 46, of Dallas was arrested and later arraigned before Peace Justice Robert Malcolm on a capital murder charge. Malcolm set Billups's bond at $1 million.

Officers said Davis had been in the police force since 1977 and was promoted to sergeant on October 1, 1982. Davis is survived by a wife and two children.

Agricultural situation not improving, Hightower says

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower says that as bad as the drought was for Texas farmers in 1983, that may have been the only good news Texas agriculture received.

"In a strange way," Hightower comments, "the bad news was the good news last year, in that it at least had a temporary impact on surpluses."

Of course, he points out, the drought also means higher food prices for consumers, and higher feed prices for poultry and livestock raisers.

Hightower argues farmers and ranchers nationwide, as well as in Texas, need some better news and need some help — and need it quickly.

Hightower is chairing the Democratic Party's agriculture caucus, which is conducting a series of hearings to draft new farm legislation next year, when Democrats hope to have secured the White House and Congress.

"The agricultural situation in Texas remains depressed, as it has been for the last three years," Hightower reports.

"And there's no sign of it getting better anytime soon, under our current approach to agriculture policy," he adds.

"What I've been doing," he explains, "is saying to farmers that they need to use 1984 to write themselves a new farm program...and they have to get involved in this 1984 election, both presidential and congressional, to rally a national constituency that will be capable of passing a farm bill in the next Congress."

Hightower argues that farmers really have been active in politics since the Great Depression, but have "been kind of laying back, assuming that they were a constituency that, no matter who was in, would get taken care of."

"Well, it's obvious by policies over the last decade, which you will note includes at least one Democratic administration, that they can no longer afford this laid-back attitude."

Agriculture policy in recent years, Hightower contends, "has tended to favor the people who profit from low farm prices — the commodity brokers, the traders, the shippers and processors..."

The forums being conducted by the Democrats are to allow farmers to make their feelings and needs known, and to help force agriculture into the spotlight as a major issue in the 1984 campaigns.

What are farmers and ranchers saying they want in a farm policy?

One element, Hightower says, is "some form of mandatory production management, supply management; it's very clear they no longer want agricultural policy to be based on the export market."

Hightower says he believes the nation should develop the export market, but "stop telling them (farmers) to produce high surpluses, and then try to sell it somehow."

Instead, he says, the farmers want markets developed "and then sell to them."

Another element is a return to "strong conservation" practices, which Hightower argues have been "gutted under the Reagan administration."

"And not just the Soil Conservation Service budget," he says. "The policy has been to encourage overproduction, straining the land beyond what it should be strained."

Also desired, Hightower reports, is a program that is long-term, "isolated as much as possible from political manipulation."

"Nobody knows from one six-month period to the next what the farm program is now," he comments.

Hightower says the Payment-In-Kind (PIK) program failed because overall it was not a farm program.

It was, he contends, "an attempt to slap a Band-aid on a wound that was bleeding profusely."

The PIK program, Hightower says, did help some farmers — it saved them some production costs. It didn't succeed in driving prices up or getting rid of surpluses.

And now, Hightower says, "basically there's no PIK program and there's only the weakest kind of production control program."

"So what we're looking at is more surpluses, and lower prices."

Hightower reports the Texas Department of Agriculture is working on some programs at the state level, with a major focus on marketing, "to try to open up markets for Texas agricultural products, to open those markets as directly as possible to the farmers."

And TDA is working on promotions with supermarkets to get them to do their own campaigns for Texas products.

Agent's body found

EAGLE PASS (AP) — The handcuffed body of a U.S. Customs agent who had been kidnapped from a Rio Grande bridge was found Saturday about a half-mile outside this border city, authorities said.

The agent, Richard Latham, was abducted Friday in Del Rio when he stopped a van carrying four armed men believed responsible for the robbery of a Mexican jewelry store, said Maverick County Sheriff's Department spokesman J.C. Flores.

Latham was clothed in his uniform and wearing handcuffs when his body was found by a sheriff's deputy about noon Saturday, Flores said.

Flores said investigators had not determined how Latham had died.

Authorities said the abductors may have been involved earlier Friday in the armed robbery of a jewelry store in Ciudad Acuna, a sister city to Del Rio on the Mexican side of the river.

No shots were fired, although the men were armed when they kidnapped the agent, said a Val Verde County sheriff's deputies, who declined to give his name.

Road blocks were set up on U.S. 277 south of Del Rio and on U.S. 90 both east and north of Del Rio after the kidnapping.

Police in Cuidad Acuna, Mexico, confirmed that a jewelry store had been robbed Friday afternoon.

4-5A tops nation in football coaching $$$

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

District 4-5A is not a bad place to coach if money happens to be a motivation.

Scholastic Coach magazine reported in its January edition that District 4-5A in Texas is the highest paying high school district in the nation for football coaches with salaries ranging from $37,000 to $43,000.

"I would say those figures are accurate," said Midland Athletic Director Gil Bartosh. "We keep close tabs on what the other coaches of our district are making and I know that Odessa Permian's John Wilkins is the highest paid at around or just over $43,000. We have to stay competitive in regards to salaries and that is one of our priorities for all of our coaches."

IT MUST be noted that there are higher paying jobs on an individual basis in some high schools across the nation and in Texas, but no district in the country pays better from top to bottom than in District 4-5A.

When Jack Tayrien was recently hired as the replacement of Spike Dykes at Midland Lee, Tayrien was given a salary of $40,200. The Midland High position is now open and that salary will be negotiated with the new choice, but it would appear that the MHS job will be within in the above salary scale.

In contrast to the rest of the country, many districts in Texas do not require the head football coach to teach classes. That is the case in District 4-5A as coaches are selected on a "free agent" basis of past performance.

Head football coaches in El Paso, for instance, are required to teach classes. District 4-5A has other key benefits for coaches, such as the use of a car and gasoline for in-town travel and business related trips.

Football salaries in District 4-5A have escalated dramatically over the past four years. In 1980 when Pat Culpepper and Dykes joined the Midland school system, they were paid $30,000. Bartosh said it is reasonable to assume that Dykes would have drawn near the top salary of $43,000 if he had elected to stay at Lee instead of leaving for Texas Tech after guiding Lee to is most successful season in the school's history with a 13-3 record and a berth in the state finals.

Texas coaches, who own the "free agent" status, are a rare breed. Most coaches, 98 percent nationally, are paid an annual stipend in addition to their teaching salary for each sport they coach. Stipends range greatly from state to state, district to district and even school to school.

MOST HEAD football coaches across the nation are paid by an annual stipend, an amount above their base teaching salary.

The highest football stipend is paid by Paris, Ky., which pays $5,000 per year. The low is $900 by Washington, D.C. and the average is $2,297.

Scholastic Coach reports that the head football position in Fairbanks, Alaska, "may be the cushiest high school coaching job in the country with an annual stipend of $2,350 for just a four-week season."

"We also keep tabs on the stipends being paid in our district and we feel that Midland is more than competitive in that area," said Bartosh. "The thing to keep in mind is the base salary for teachers because most of our coaches are selected as teachers first and our base salaries are very good in Midland.

"I would say Midland and Odessa are about even as far as coaches are concerned for the first eight years. But after eight years, this is where Midland really takes off."

The highest national stipend in basketball also comes from Paris, Ky., with $5,000 paid annually. Of course, this is basketball country and stipends paid for that sport would naturally reflect that.

"I don't know what a teacher's base is in Kentucky, but I would be willing to bet that our coaches receive a total amount on par with them because of our teacher's base pay," said Bartosh.

Basketball stipends for Lee coach Paul Stueckler and MHS coach Jack Stephenson are $3,472 per year. That stipend also applies for MHS' Jane Young and Lee's Shirley Stephenson, who coach girls basketball.

Stueckler is the only basketball coach Lee has ever had. He has been in the system for 24 years and his overall salary would come close to that of Tayrien in football.

For instance, Stueckler has a base teaching salary of close to $33,000 with a masters degree plus 30 years experience, the same as any teacher with that experience in the school system. Stueckler is also the athletic chairperson at Lee, which pays 10 percent of his base salary. Add in his stipend and he makes close to the $40,000 paid in football.

"We have an athletic chairperson at each school from junior high through high school and they all receive 10 percent of their base salary for that job. It's no different from any other phase of teaching in the system. We have chairpersons in the math, science and other departments," said Bartosh.

MIDLAND coaching-teaching salaries are probably inflated to a great extent in regards to the rest of the nation since Midland has so many coaches like Stueckler.

Midland High's Johnny Williams (track), Lee's Ernie Johnson (baseball) and Sam Volpe (track) all have 24 years or more in the school system.

"I would venture to say that you won't find another situation like that in the country. It's rare to see that many coaches stay in one place so long," said Bartosh.

Volpe and Williams receive an annual stipend of $2,240 to coach track. This is also a favorable stipend in regards to the national scene. Bismarck, N.D., pays a track stipend of $2,800 and that is the national high for high school. Gaston County, N.C., pays a mere $400 for the low and the national average is $1,580.

Williams, as many other coaches in the system and around the nation, coaches more than one sport and is paid a stipend for each sport. Williams is an assistant football coach at MHS and receives $3,360 plus ½-month base salary for that position. That is the same stipend that all assistant varsity football coaches receive in Midland. Junior Varsity assistants receive $2,240 plus ½-month base salary. The ½-month base salary is awarded because football workouts start prior to the start of the school term.

One of the surprising stipends offered by Midland comes in tennis where MHS' Pete Barizon and Lee's Bobby Connell receive $2,800 a year for that sport. Scholastic Coach reports that fee is the highest in the nation. The national low in tennis is $174 by Memphis, Tenn., and the national average is $1,082.

"We feel that the tennis and swimming coaches should be paid a good stipend because those sports require work in both the fall and spring. Varsity football assistants are paid on the same basis," said Bartosh.

IN SWIMMING, MHS' Jesse Marsh and Lee's Charles Guthrie also earn a stipend of $2,800, close to the national high of $3,000 in Trenton. The national average is $1,198. The lowest stipend in the nation comes in swimming in Little Rock, Ark., with only $124 being paid.

Lee's Johnson and MHS' Tim Whalen are paid a stipend of $2,240 for the head baseball positions and neither coach another sport. Trenton, N.J., pays the best baseball stipend of $3,000 while the low is $500 in Iron City, Utah.

Texas Tech guard Bubba Jennings (4) steals the ball from Texas A&M's Todd Holloway during Saturday's SWC game in Lubbock. Tech went on to win, 74-49.

Tech surges to victory over A&M

LUBBOCK (AP) — Guards Bubba Jennings and Tony Benford sparked a 25-2 Texas Tech surge in the final 7:03 of the game Saturday to power the Red Raiders to a 74-49 Southwest Conference basketball victory over Texas A&M.

Tech's final 19 points came from the free throw line as the Aggies were fourced to foul in attempt to slow down the opportunistic Raiders, who took advantage of 11 second half Aggie turnovers.

During a four minute stretch, which featured three technical fouls against the Aggies and the ejection of Aggie junior guard Darnell Williams for a flagrant foul, Jennings canned five consecutive free throws and junior forward Vince Taylor hit five of six.

UP UNTIL the 7:03 mark the game had been close with neither team able to build more than a five point lead.

Tech jumped ahead 6-1 on a pair of long jumpers by Jennings, but the Aggies fought back to take a 15-11 lead with 10:28 to play in the first half on seven consecutive points by sophomore center Jimmy Gilbert.

Gilbert hit 13 of his 15 points in the opening half to stake A&M to a 31-29 lead at intermission.

Jennings, who led all Tech scorers with 15 points, hit from 20 feet out to give tech a 47-45 lead with 8:21 remaining. David Reynolds and Benford followed with back-to-back 18-footers that gave Tech a 51-47 lead and signaled the beginning of the surge.

Dwight Phillips added 12 points for the Raiders and Benford and Reynolds each contributed 10.

Todd Holloway was othe only Aggie besides Gilbert in double figures with 10 points.

The win keeps Tech tied with SMU for third place in the conference at 5-2. The Raiders are 11-7 overall. The aggies fall to 8-11 on the year and 4-4 in the SWC.

"OVERALL I was proud of our intensity," said Tech Coach Gerald Myers.

"We just broke it (the game) with seven minutes left," said Myers. "We sank some shots and they got into some technical trouble.

"Overall it was a good win for us. We were at home and we're just trying to stay as high as we can in the standings," said Myers.

Aggie Coach Shelby Metcalf said he was confused by the officiating that led to the Aggie fouls and the Tech surge.

"I am tremendously pleased with my team, I am just confused as to the end. You'll have to ask the officials about the end," said Metcalf.

Koncak leads SMU to win over Texas

DALLAS (AP) - Seven-foot center Jon Koncak's 22 points led the Southern Methodist Mustangs on their highest Southwest Conference scoring rampage since 1977 Saturday with a 105-81 rout of the Texas Longhorns.

The victory advanced SMU's overall record to 17-4 and 5-2 in SWC play, while the Longhorns tumbled to 5-13 and 1-6.

SMU's last 100-point game in non-conference play was against Texas Wesleyan in 1979 but the last century mark effort in SWC play was against Texas Christian seven years ago.

Texas led briefly 6-3 before the Mustangs scored 12 straight points midway of the first period as the 'Horns went on a cold shooting spell that saw them go almost five minutes without a basket.

SMU was ahead 44-31 at halftime then stretched the lead to as much as 26 points in the second half. Every Mustang on the team scored at least a point.

Larry Davis scored 18 points and Carl Wright added 17 for the Mustangs.

The Longhorns were led by Carlton Cooper who had 19 points and Karl Willock, who added 16 points.

Wright doled out eight assists for the Mustangs, who used their fast break to perfection over the outmanned Longhorns.

KONCAK HIT 10 of 12 shots and hauled down 11 rebounds. Davis was 8 of 12 from the field and he also had 11 caroms.

SMU shot 70 per cent from the field in the second half and was 66.7 per cent for the game.

Texas had a respectable 54.8 per cent from the field. The 'Horns were also outrebounded 33-28 and had 14 turnovers to 10 for the Mustangs.

SMU Coach Dave Bliss said "Our players remembered the way we played against Texas in the post-season tournament last year.

COM swimmers in good position

400 Relay victories set up showdown with AAC

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

The City of Midland Swim team took wins in the day's final two events, and as a result the COM swimmers are in good position today to dislodge the Amarillo Aquatic Club and win the COM Winter Invitational.

COM's senior boys and girls 400 medley relay teams swam to victories in the 57th and 58th events of the Invitational's second day to total 491 points. AAC leads the Invitational with a 529 total.

"Our younger kids' relays today will be the key," said COM coach Paul Bridgers. "They have to score. There's a lot of entries but only the top eight will score. I expected us to be ahead of El Paso (COM leads EPAP by 65 points), and behind Amarillo. If we're behind them by 20 or less, we'll be in pretty good shape."

COM didn't get quite that close, but today's final events should be hotly contested. AAC's lead is well within striking distance.

But the AAC has one thing going for them that the others entered at the Invitational do not: Robert Fulton.

The 14-year old Fulton already set one pool record and would have had another, but finished second in one of Friday night's opening events. Saturday, he didn't erase any other Mabee Pool record, but he posted senior-classification wins for AAC in the 200 breast stroke (2:23:29), the 500 freestyle (4:57:24) and the 100 freestyle in a speedy 51:05 time.

Fulton added a third place finish in the 100 butterfly and a second in the 200 backstroke. In the back, Fulton lost to Wayne Gleason of El Paso's Water Ranch (h2oR) by a mere 33/100 of a second. Mike Seay and Sam Perry of COM finished four seconds behind the pair in third and fourth.

Seay passed Fulton for second in the 100 fly, but was still behind Gleason by over a second.

Gleason had a superb day as well. Besides besting Fulton in those two events, he finished third in a tight 50 freestyle event. San Angelo's (SASC) Travis Meyers won with a 23:61, the tightest and toughest second place went to Seay, a miniscule 1/100 of a second behind. Gleason's third place showing was a very respectable 23:93.

SWIMMING IN the 11-12 division, Jeffrey McPherson of Odessa (OAC) also scored heavily. McPherson got COM's pool record Friday in the 500 freestyle, and Saturday added COM marks in the 200 free (2:00:06) and the 100 breast (1:09:32).

He won the 50 free (25:65) and the 100 fly (1:06:69) for a total of five wins on the day.

Yet his efforts only lifted OAC into fifth place with 262 points.

"You always expect Fulton and McPherson to have good meets," said Bridgers. "They're at the top of their age group. Robert's having an exceptional meet."

In the girls competition, Amarillo's Sheri Paradee had another good day, and according to Bridgers "she's the only girl to beat Becky Simpson at this meet." Paradee topped COM's Simpson in the 50 free by a second, the 500 free by less than a second, and in the 100 free by 12/100 of a second.

Simpson got a slight measure of revenge in the 100 fly, nipping Paradee 1:05.07 to 1:05.62.

Paradee's thin wins over Simpson helped AAC stake their equally thin lead. Paradee grabbed a win elsewhere, in the 200 backstroke.

WHICH SETS up today. The meet is close, the athletes are good, the conditions are ideal, and the stakes are clear.

Olajuwon carries Cougars to win over Bears, 84-58

AP Laserphoto

WACO, Texas (AP) — Akeem Olajuwon had five dunks, 22 points, 12 rebounds and the admiration of the opposing coach as he led the seventh-ranked Houston to an 84-58 win over Baylor — the Cougar's 31st consecutive triumph in Southwest Conference play.

"Akeem proved to me that he is the best amateur center in the world and soon will be the best professional center. He was awesome," said Baylor Head Coach Jim Haller.

The win raised Houston's league-leading record to 7-0 and the Cougars are 17-3 for the season. Baylor dropped deeper into the SWC cellar with a 0-7 mark and the Bears are 4-14 overall.

Olajuwon, a seven-foot junior from Lagos, Nigeria blocked five shots and was whistled three times for goal tending.

His supporting cast included freshman Rickie Winslow who had 18 points and Michael Young who added 16.

"They (the Cougars) really don't have a lot of highs and lows. This is the most consistant team I have ever had. They play hard every night," said Houston Coach Guy Lewis, who added that he thought Olajuwon and Winslow were outstanding Saturday night.

HALLER SAID he believes his team played about as well as it could against Houston.

"Houston just outmanned us, outmuscled us and out-talented us. I couldn't aske for anthing more ouf our team. We played as well as we could," said Haller.

"Our team fought its heart out," said Haller.

The Bears were paced by Michael Tate who had 14 points and Russ Capps and DeWayne Brown, who had 12 points each.

The Cougars hit 23 of their first 29 shots of the game and never trailed the Bears.

Baylor made a fight of it early, trailing just 15-14 before the Cougars ripped off eight straight points.

Houston outscored Baylor 24-4 in the final 10 minutes of the first half. The Cougars led 42-24 at intermission.

Leigh-Walters win Miller Doubles

Midland's Donna Leigh and Odessa's Gayle Walters not only won the Texas state finals of the Miller National Doubles Bowling Tournament at Fairmont Park Lanes Saturday, but they captured a berth in the national finals which will be held later in February in Reno, Nev.

Leigh and Walters rolled a 444 set in the finals against the Houston team of Ken Cherry and Garv Thompson, who posted a 407.

A key turning point in that match came when Leigh watched the seven and 10 pin fall after what looked like an apparent split turned into a strike.

The state crown is worth $2,265 to Leigh and Walters, but they could win up to $50,000 with a national title in Reno, Feb. 24-26. The Midland tournament had a purse of $12,800 and the national tournament will have a $150,000 purse. The Fairmont Lanes tournament paid the top 35 teams from the 282 team field. Cherry and Thompson earned $1,500 for second place.

Jay Goodnight and Davis Hooper earned $1,000 for third while Goodnight got a double pay day by placing fourth with Sarah Morris for $875. Leigh also shared $725 with Carl Antle for a fifth place.

Midland Christian claims two fourths

The Midland Christian boys' and girls' each placed fourth in tournament action this weekend.

For the boys', Northland Christian of Houston dropped MC 64-54 for third place. Abilene Christian defeated Lubbock Christian 57-50 for the title.

MC's Cary Wallace scored 29 points in the loss and was named to the tournament all-star team.

Laura Woolard was named to the girls all-star team after the MC girls were defeated by Abilene Christian, 46-39.

Stewart leads San Diego Open

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Payne Stewart used a 15-foot birdie putt on the final hole to retain a one-stroke lead Saturday in the third round of the $400,000 Isuzu-Andy Williams San Diego Open Golf Tournament.

Stewart, resplendent in color-coordinated plus-fours, golf cap and knee-socks, had a 69 in the brilliant, warm, sunny weather, and completed 54 holes in 201, 15 strokes under par.

Andy Bean, regaining the putting touch that made him a winner of at least one title for six consecutive seasons, also birdied the final hole at the 7,-002-yard South course at Torrey Pines for a five-under-par 67 that left him one shot back at 202 going into Sunday's final round of the chase for the $72,-000 first prize.

"I'm driving good, hitting my irons good, and I'm starting to play well," said Bean, who last season has his first non-winning year since 1977. "I feel like I'm playing good again, and that's the most important part."

Chip Beck and veteran Ray Floyd, who had a birdie-birdie finish, were another stroke back at 203. Each had a 69 in the 80-degree weather.

Defending champion Gary Hallberg, who had a second consecutive 66, and Mark O'Meara, with a 68, were at 204.

THE GROUP at 205, only four off the lead with 18 holes remaining, included Joey Sindelar, Dan Pohl, Ed Fiori, Gil Morgan and Don Pooley.

Pooley, who bounced an approach shot off the top of a spectator's head on the 18th, had a 71. Sindelar closed up with a 67. Pohl, Fiori and Morgan, a two-time winner last season, all had 69s.

Stewart, a winner in each of the past two seasons, hit 17 greens and putted from the fringe on the one he missed in a performance that was marred only by a reluctant putter. He used 28 strokes on the greens, three-putted for his only bogey, two-putted for two of his birdies and missed twice from four feet or less.

"I can't say I let one get away, because 68 is a good score," Stewart said. "I didn't make the putts I could have, but yesterday (Friday) I made some I shouldn't have.

"Tomorrow (Sunday), I'll just try to do the same thing: put it in the fairway, on the green and give myself a chance for some birdies."

Floyd, who played with Stewart in the final threesome, saluted his partner's play as "a fine round of golf. I don't remember him missing a green. It was a very easy 68 he shot. He didn't have to work hard at any time."

Stewart, who out-drove Floyd by 50-60 yards a couple of times, reached two of the par-five holes in two and two-putted for birdies. He holed from four feet on the fifth hole and missed from the same distance on the next hole.

Stewart made a 12-foot birdie putt on the 14th hole, three-putted the 15th, then regained sole control of the top spot with the birdie on 18.

The national average is $1,491. Again Midland would be regarded in the top 10 percent of the nation.

John Ford and Mary Baird coach golf at MHS while Van Tom Whatley, who is also a football assistant coach, coaches both girls and boys at Lee. The stipend is $1,680 for each girls and boys position. Again Trenton pays the highest stipend in golf of $1,985 while the low is again in Memphis with $174. The national average is a meager $867.

Ford also coaches cross country for MHS while Volpe draws that assignment for Lee. They are also paid a stipend of $1,680, somewhat lower than the national high of $2,112 in Rutland, Vt. Memphis is again low with $221 and the national average is $1,113.

Midland's two volleyball coaches also receive close to the national high. The national high volleyball stipend being paid is $2,900 in St. Paul, Minn. Midland High's Linda Jolly and Lee's Janice Baulch receive a stipend of $2,016 plus ½-month base salary since volleyball begins before the start of the school term. The national low is $450 in Kanawha, W.Va., and the average is $1,437.

If the figures of the Scholastic Coach survey are right, and they were on the money in District 4-5A figures, Midland coaches receive better pay than the national average in all sports.

THE SCHOLASTIC Coach survey did not include salaries of professional trainers since so many schools nationally do not have trainers on the school staffs. Here again Midland seems to be ahead of the sports scene nationally with professional trainers at both MHS and Lee.

James "Doc" Dodson of MHS and Jeff Bass of Lee receive an annual stipend of $3,360 per year and ½-month base salary in addition to teaching duties. Dodson is very well paid due to his long-time association with MHS. His base salary would be regarded as high because of experience and he also receives 10 percent of his base salary for being head of the physical education department at MHS.

If you want a coaching job, Midland or District 4-5A, where all schools have competitive stipends, would be a good place to start or stop.

Bertolaccini alone atop Mazda Classic with 211

DEERFIELD BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Silvia Bertolaccini of Argentina emerged as the sole leader by one stroke in the third round Saturday of the Ladies Professional Golf Association's $200,000 Mazda Classic.

Bertolaccini produced a 35-36-71 for a 54-hole total of 211, 5-under-par on the 6,079-yard course.

She moved ahead of four other players with whom she was tied for the lead after Friday's second round.

"I'm confident going into the last round now," Bertolaccini said.

"I feel the toughest round was the third one, to keep myself in play after playing so well (Friday) when I even had a couple of eagles," she said.

Five players trailing Bertolancci at 212 included Patti Rizzo, Kathy Postlewait, Lauri Rinker, Rosie Jones and JoAnne Carner.

Bertolaccini, whose last LPGA victory came in 1979, got a birdie at the par-4 first hole with a perfect drive to the corner of the fairway. She birdied the par-4 fifth hole with a 12-foot putt after a 3-wood approach.

But Bertolaccini missed the green at the 157-yard par-3 eighth hole and double-bogeyed. She had all pars on the back nine.

Jones managed to keep up with Bertolaccini with a 5-under par going into the 18th, but she missed a 10-foot putt for par.

The Mazda Classic field was cut to the top 70 players and ties.

Laciar gets split decision to keep title

MARSALA, Sicily (AP) — Santos Benigno Laciar of Argentina fiercely defended his World Boxing Association flyweight crown Saturday, winning by split decision against tough Mexican challenger Juan Herrera.

Referee Larry Hazard of the United States voted for Laciar 146-142, while judges Fernando Viso of Venezuela and Harmodio Cedeno of Panama were divided.

The decision came at the end of a grueling 15-round bout with intense action.

The WBA champion, his left eye swollen from relentless punishment by the Mexican's wild jabs, made a last minute attempt to send Herrera to the canvas. But his barrage met a furious combination that made him stumble.

"He is simply a rock," the Argentine said of the 26-year-old Herrera after the fight. "He is very, very strong ... A good rival to fight."

Laciar, who will become 25 later this month, made a conservative start, studying flashing raids unleashed by the challenger. By the third round, Laciar's nose was bleeding and he was staggered by several uppercuts.

Vikings' Grant steps down

HONOLULU (AP) — Bud Grant formally announced Saturday that he was stepping down as the Minnesota Vikings coach, ending a successful 17-year stint at the helm of the National Football League club.

It appeared virtually certain that Vikings assistant Les Steckel, 37, will be named Sunday as the new Minnesota coach.

Grant, 56, will remain with the organization in some yet to be determined post. He flew to Honolulu to personally tell Vikings President Max Winter, who has a home here, of his decision.

Grant said at a press conference that he decided sometime "around the Super Bowl" that he wished to quit coaching in order to pursue other interests, something that time had not permitted during his NFL coaching career.

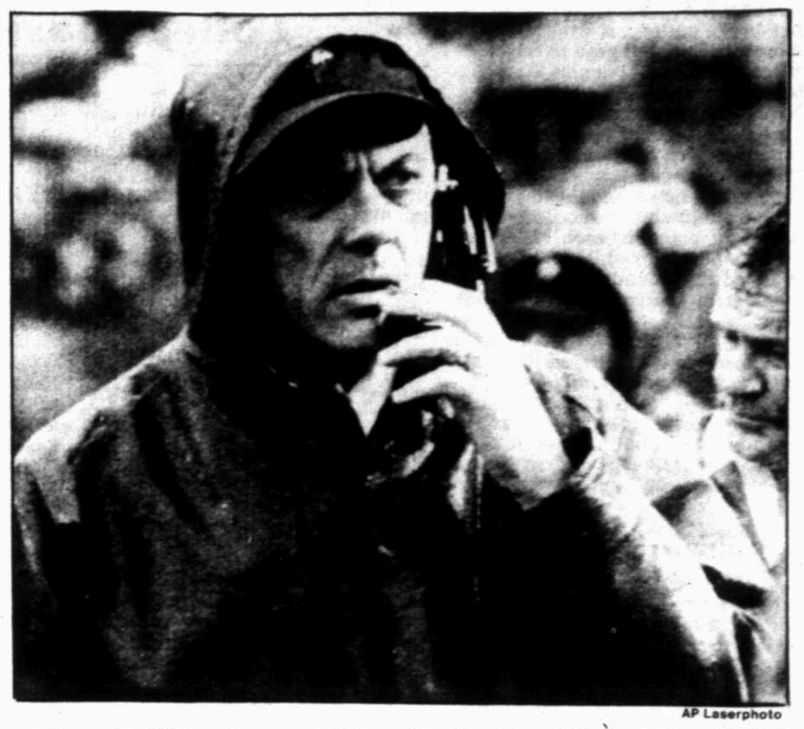

Also at the press conference, Mike Lynn, the Vikings' general manager, said that "a nominee" for the coaching post was on his way to Hawaii. Later in the day, Steckel arrived in Honolulu and confirmed it was a foregone conclusion that he would be Grant's successor.

"Everyone was surprised by Bud's decision," Steckel said. "And I'm surprised to be coming to Honolulu."

REGARDING CONTRACT details to be worked out, Steckel said: "I'm certain there will be no problem. This organization is just outstanding."

Told that Grant had said the Vikings' coaching post was one of the most desirable in pro sports, Steckel smiled and said, "I'll have to agree."

Steckel added, "To replace Bud Grant, I'm not going to do. A lot of people consider him the best coach in the game. I have learned a great deal from him."

Minnesota Vikings head coach Bud Grant, pictured here on the sidelines of the 1977 Rams-Vikings playoff game, has resigned after 17 years of coaching. Grant took his team to four Super Bowls.

Before Steckel arrived, Lynn indicated the only details to be worked out with Grant's successor was length of contract and compensation.

Grant emphasized that any speculation that he was quitting the coaching job because of "inner turmoil, personality clashes or health problems," was not valid.

"The only reason for leaving is to do some things that coaching didn't allow me to do," he said.

Gretzky's streak ends at 51 games

By The Associated Press

EDMONTON — The Los Angeles Kings ended Wayne Gretzky's record point streak at 51 consecutive games Saturday night and halted the Edmonton Oilers' six-game winning streak with a 4-2 National Hockey League victory.

Gretzky had picked up at least a goal or an assist in all 51 Oilers games this season. He hadn't been held scoreless for 60 straight regular-season games dating back to last season.

The Kings, who halted Gretzky's previous NHL record streak at 30 games last season, duplicated the feat Saturday. Gretzky had three good scoring chances, but they were from close in and he had little room to maneuver.

His best chance for a point came midway through the first period when he lured goaltender Markus Mattsson and both defensemen to his side of the ice and then set up teammate Charlie Huddy. But Huddy looked at the open net and then shot the puck behind Mattsson, but across the front of the crease.

Red Wings 4, Islanders 3

UNIONDALE — Detroit's John Ogrodnick, Lane Lambert and Ron Duguay scored early third-period goals for the Red Wings to turn a one-goal deficit into a 4-3 National Hockey League victory over the New York Islanders.

The slumping, injury-decimated Islanders, who have now lost five of their last six games, also lost right wing Mike Bossy with a sprained right knee. New York had started the game with only 18 players in uniform as Anders Kallur came down with the flu before the game and was forced to go home.

Nordiques 3, Whalers 0

QUEBEC — Michel Goulet scored his 39th and 40th goals of the National Hockey League season and Daniel Bouchard blocked 23 shots to record his first shutout of the season as the Quebec Nordiques beat the Hartford Whalers 3-0.

Goulet, the starting left winger for the Wales Conference in the NHL All-Star Game on Tuesday, also drew an

Lee leads Memphis State past Oklahoma, 69-65

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Keith Lee broke out of a scoring slump to score 22 points and grab 18 rebounds in leading No. 13 Memphis State to a 69-65 nonconference victory over No. 11 Oklahoma Saturday.

The win was the seventh straight for the Tigers, 14-3, while Oklahoma had its four-game winning streak broken and now stands at 16-3.

Lee, a 6-10 junior who had scored only four points in each of his last two games, scored 14 points and grabbed 12 rebounds in the first half when Memphis State clung to a 36-35 lead.

Wayman Tisdale, Oklahoma's 6-9 All-American who entered the game with a 30.1 point average, was limited to 12 points by the Tiger's' collapsing zone defense. Tisdale grabbed 14 rebounds while Tim McCalister, a freshman guard paced the Sooners with 24 points.

DePaul smashes UCLA

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Tyrone Corbin scored 18 points and Kevin Holmes added 17 as No. 2 ranked DePaul blasted UCLA 84-68 in a nonconference game at Pauley Pavilion.

Corbin and Holmes led a second-half onslaught that saw a tight 56-48 game turn into a blowout.

The Blue Demons improved their record to 16-0 and the Bruins fell to 12-4.

Kenny Fields had 16 points for 15th-ranked UCLA, but only two in the second half. Ralph Jackson added 12 points.

DePaul guard Kenny Patterson had 14 points and Tony Jackson 11 off the bench for the Blue Demons.

Irish upset Maryland

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Tom Sluby's three-point play with 18 seconds left helped boost Notre Dame to a 52-47 upset victory over fifth-ranked Maryland.

The victory was the sixth straight victory for the Fighting Irish, now 13-5. Maryland dropped to 13-3.

Sluby scored a game-high 19 points, including five in the last two minutes of the game.

Hoyas tip Pitt, 63-52

PITTSBURGH (AP) — All-American Patrick Ewing scored 20 points and was an intimidating force at both ends of the court as fourth-ranked Georgetown eased by Pittsburgh 63-52 in Big East Conference play.

Ewing added nine rebounds and five blocked shots and scored all but seven of his points in the second half as the Hoyas, 6-1 in the league, built their record to 17-2. Ewing was eight of 11 from the field.

Michael Jackson added 12 points and Gene Smith 10 for the Hoyas, who broke open a tight game by scoring eight consecutive points to move into a 50-42 lead with just over five minutes remaining.

Syracuse wins in OT

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Andre Hawkins assisted on one basket and scored two himself in the first 1:06 of overtime and 20th-ranked Syracuse survived seven consecutive misses on one-and-one free throws late in the game to defeat St. John's 78-74 in Big East action.

Rafael Addison led all scorers with 24 points. He scored 14 of them after intermission, including two free throws with 24 seconds left in overtime to break the Syracuse cold spell and ice the game.

Defeating the Redmen for the first time in three years, Syracuse improved its season record to 14-3 and completed the first half of the conference schedule undefeated at 8-0.

Wildcats back in first

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Melvin Turpin reeled off 10 points in the second half as third-ranked Kentucky breezed by Georgia 64-40 and regained a share of the Southeastern Conference lead.

The Wildcats, 6-2 in the SEC and 15-2 overall, scored 18 straight points in the second half, holding Georgia off the boards for 10½ minutes with a tough 2-3 zone defense.

The loss dropped Georgia, which hasn't won at Rupp Arena since 1922-23, to 4-4 in the league and 12-5 overall.

Heels still unbeaten

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Michael Jordan, on repeated trips to the foul line, led top-ranked North Carolina to a 73-61 victory over a determined, but outmanned Georgia Tech team in Atlantic Coast Conference action.

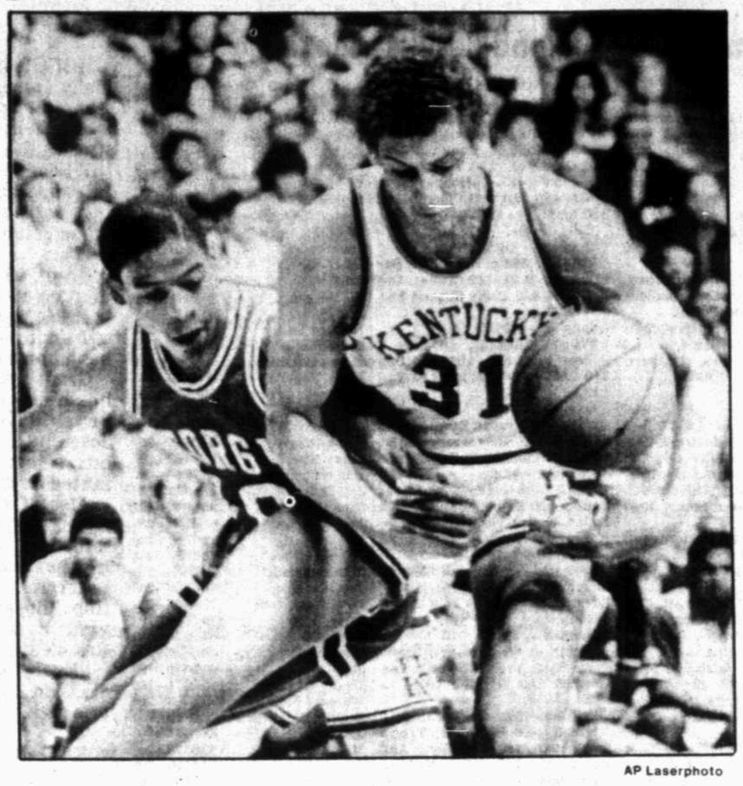

Jordan finished with 21 points after a slow start.

The Tar Heels are now 16-0.

Deacons upset Cavs

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Freshman Mark Cline scored 20 points and senior Delaney Rudd added 18 as No. 17 Wake Forest broke open a close game in the second half and knocked off 19th-ranked Virginia 84-76 in Atlantic Coast Conference action.

Rick Carlisle's jumper from the top of the key pulled the Cavaliers to within 50-47 at the 14:04 mark, but the Demon Deacons outscored Virginia 11-2 in the next five minutes to wrap up the victory.

Illini need four OTs

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Efrem Winters scored 23 points and keyed an explosion of free throws in the fourth overtime period to carry No. 9 Illinois to a 75-66 victory over Michigan in Big Ten action.

The quadruple-overtime decision, two short of the Big Ten's six-overtime record set by Minnesota and Purdue in 1955, lifted Illinois to 6-1 in the conference and preserved a first-place tie with Purdue. The Illini are 15-2 overall. Michigan tumbled to 4-4 in the Big Ten and 12-6 in all games.

UNLV gets OT win

FULLERTON, Calif. (AP) — Forward Frank "Spoon" James hit two free throws in overtime to put sixth-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas ahead to stay as the Runnin' Rebels downed Cal State Fullerton 82-75 in a Pacific Coast Athletic Association basketball game Saturday.

Fullerton, which scored the last six points in regulation to send the game into overtime, led twice in overtime on baskets by Tony Neal and Gary Davis before James' free throws. The Runnin' Rebels hit 15 of 21 free throw attempts in the extra period.

James led the Rebels, now 18-1 overall and 9-0 in the PCAA, with 23 points. Center Richie Adams scored 20 points and had 15 rebounds.

Guard Leon Wood scored 31 to lead the Titans, whose record drops to 14-5 and 5-3. Neal scored 13 points and had a game-high 20 rebounds. His free throw with eight seconds to play sent the game into overtime where he missed four consecutive free throws after James put the Runnin' Rebels ahead.

Fullerton led by as many as six points in the first half, but UNLV outscored the Titans 19-8 in the final seven minutes of the half to take a 38-33 halftime advantage.

Warriors stun Cards

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Kerry Trotter's three-point play capped a Marquette comeback and the Warriors hit 10 of 12 free throws in the final minutes to upset No. 14 Louisville 65-60 in a nonconference game.

Trotter's play gave Marquette its first lead of the second half at 53-50 with 3:50 left in the game.

Marquette then forced the third Louisville turnover in less than a minute and Trotter laid it in to put the Warriors up 55-50 with 3:11 remaining.

Louisville's Jeff Hall hit two 17-footers to pull the Cardinals to within 55-54 with 1:44 to go, but Marquette's Mandy Johnson and Tom Copa connected on two free throws each to pad Marquette's lead to 59-54.

Lefty Gomez to attend Midland Sports Banquet

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Vernon "Lefty" Gomez, sometimes known as El Goofy for his unpredictable antics on the field, will be here for his second Midland Sports Banquet Feb. 7.

Gomez, the New York Yankees pitching great of the 1930s who holds the record for most World Series victories without defeat, was the guest speaker at the first Midland Sports Banquet in 1979, and turned out to be one of the most popular.

The main complaint about Lefty at the time was that he shut up and sat down too soon.

Gomez joins Ben Davidson, the former Oakland Raider bad man; Midland Cub Manager George Enright and Master-of-Ceremonies Tex Moritz.

Also added to the celebrity roster this week were Midland College basketball Coach Jerry Stone, who led MC to a National Junior College title two years ago, and the Toy Cannon, Jimmy Wynn, the former centerfielder for the Houston Astros.

Gomez stories are legend and so were his Yankee teammates—Ruth, Gehrig, DiMaggio, Rolfe, Crosetti, Lazzeri, Chapman, Dickey, Selkirk, Ruffing, Murphy....

Gomez was a four-time 20-game winner in the 1930s for the Yankees. His most productive year was 1934 when he was 26-5.

But Gomez says when Babe Ruth would come up and assure you that "if you hold 'em to five runs, kid, we'll beat 'em", it was comforting.

Goofy? He once stopped in the middle of his motion on the mound to watch an airplane. Another time there was no play at second, but on a ball hit back to the mound, Lefty whirled and threw to a surprised Tony Lazzeri at second. "They were always talking about how smart Tony was," said Lefty, "I wanted to see what he'd do with the ball."

Gomez does hold one lasting grudge against his old catcher Bill Dickey. He feels Dickey deprived him of the "right" to be listed forever more among the all-time great hitters.

In the 1934 All-Star game, when Carl Hubbell fanned Ruth, Gehrig, Jimmy Foxx, Al Simmons and Joe Cronin in rapid succession, Dickey broke up the string with a single. Hubbell then struck out Gomez and Lefty claims if it hadn't been for that, he'd always be listed in that illustrious group when amazing All-Star game feats were recited.

Tickets for the $35 a plate dinner are on sale at the Midland Cubs ticket office. The social hour will begin at 6:30 p.m. and dinner at 7:30 p.m. Cubs General Manager Bill Schammel emphasizes, "This is not a stag affair. It's for everyboyd."

West Old-Timers beat East, 65-63

DENVER (AP) — Rick Barry scored 14 points, Lou Hudson 12 and Earl "The Pearl" Monroe 11 Saturday to lead the West to a 65-63 victory over the East in professional basketball's first-ever Old-Timers Game.

The West, getting off to a fast start behind Barry and Jerry West, led by as many as seven points in the first half and fashioned a 28-25 advantage at intermission. But Pete Maravich and Oscar Robertson triggered a 7-2 spurt at the outset of the second half and the East took its first lead at 36-35 on a bucket by John Havlicek with 13:32 to go.

The old-timers played two 20-minute halves as a prelude to Sunday's National Basketball Association All-Star Game.

Many of the aging greats were huffing and puffing by the end of the contest, played before a large, appreciative crowd at McNichols Arena. The lead changed hands four times before the West took command for good on two free throws by Barry for a 39-38 advantage.

With 11:06 left, the game's only comedy surfaced when Tommy Heinsohn and Johnny Kerr, rival centers from the mid-50s through the mid-60s, engaged in a bit of horseplay. Kerr, 51 and noticably paunchy, went to the free-throw line after Heinsohn pulled on his shorts several times.

Kerr, after donning a pair of eyeglasses, then sank one of two free throws to put the West on top 40-38. A moment later, Kerr made a nifty behind-the-back pass to West, who glided in for a layup and a 42-38 lead.

Maravich, the youngest of the old-timers at 35, led the East with 18 points and Robertson had 12. Havlicek finished with nine for the East.

Miller beats Berardi in Quaker State Open

GRAND PRAIRIE (AP) — Hugh Miller of Everett, Wash., kept his record on television unblemished Saturday when he defeated Joe Berardi, 217-171, in the title match of the $125,000 Quaker State Open.

Miller, now a four-time Pro Bowlers Association champion, won his sixth game in the championship round without a loss to capture the $20,000 first prize.

The top-seeded Miller, a left-hander, also went through his sixth straight TV game without an open frame.

The four right-handers, however, were struggling. They combined for a total of 19 splits in the four matches, including three by Berardi in the finale.

Your RV battery should be checked about once a month in storage to see that it has plenty of electrolyte and is charged (a dead battery will freeze). If you are leaving your RV plugged in to 110v check the battery at least every two weeks as it may boil dry with the constant charging. Use good water to refill the cells up to the indicator level. Overfilling will result in increase corrosion, but allowing the level below the top of the plates will permanently affect performance by coating the plates with oxides or warping them. Overcharging may be the result of a bad regulator in your alternator or converter or a dead or low cell in the battery.

"More to Explore in '84" is the theme of the 4th Annual Family Recreational Vehicle Show INSIDE Ector Co. Coliseum, Feb. 17-19th. Billy Sims Trailer Town invites you and your family to explore the new and exciting world of R.V. 6 days a week at 520 E. 2nd, Odessa or come by their display at the R.V. show.

Excessive water usage is a indication of overcharging, both battery and charging should be checked.

Endangered Species Act still controversial subject

By BILL SCHULZ
Associated Press Writer

The Endangered Species Act, one of the world's strongest conservation laws, goes into its second decade with a record of accomplishment and a heritage of controversy.

"I would say the most important thing we've done is create awareness," said John Spinks, chief of the Office of Endangered Species in Washington, "awareness from the standpoint of a heightened consciousness on the part of people in general about the needs to consider endangered and threatened species."

"The word 'endangered species' has become a part of the American vocabulary now," he said. "It evokes a certain reaction from people, a reaction that there's something there that is in trouble and we need to be concerned about it."

Although the Office of Endangered Species, an arm of the Fish and Wildlife Service, Department of the Interior, is a relative newcomer to conservation, some species have showed impressive rates of recovery it opened.

There are, for example, 148 whooping cranes, up from 15 in 1941 and the bald eagle, peregrine falcon, brown pelican, Aleutian Canada goose and American alligator are all making comebacks.

The original endangered species lists has grown from 400 to 783. Some conservation groups say it should grow even more.

In many cases, like the American alligator, protection from poachers was enough to allow a natural recovery. Alligators are now legal game in some states.

For other animals, salvation is more difficult and expensive. Habitat must be saved or restored; poisons like DDT removed from the environment.

The Endangered Species Act covers not only mammals, birds and reptiles, but plants, insects, crustaceans and mollusks, lower rungs of the food chain which must be intact or the levels above them collapse.

Its shortcoming, said Ron Way of the National Wildlife Federation, is it doesn't address the problem of habitat loss.

"Roughly one-third of the endangered species are tied to wetlands. We know 56 percent of our wetlands are gone, and disappearing at the rate of 1,000 acres a day. Before the sun sets again, another 1,000 acres will be gone."

"We've got to address the question of habitat loss," Way said. "The endangered species are only an indicator of things to come."

The harshest criticism of the agency came when it delayed the Tellico Dam project in Tennessee for an unknown fish, the snail darter.

"That may have been advantageous because of its shock value, that the Supreme Court said, 'Yes, this law does protect this fish, and yes, this fish does have priority over the dam,'" Spinks said.

"I think the first decade has been a good decade," he said. Enforcement has "evolved to a much more cooperative venture, including various federal agencies, the states and private conservation groups.

"It's not confrontational any longer."

Looking ahead, he said, "I believe we are going to become increasingly sophisticated in efforts to protect species. It's difficult to say how much better we're going to get, but we're going to be better at it in 1994 than we are in 1984."

YOU READ about the youngster who fell in Lake Michigan a couple of weeks ago and was under the ice for 20 minutes. Well, falling into cold lakes in the winter isn't that rare.

At least nine Texans have already died from drowning or exposure after falling through the ice on frozen ponds in December and January, according to the Texas Parks and Wildlife Dept.

Three Grand Prarie youths fell through the ice on a partially frozen pond. Two boys drowned and the third apparently succumbed to hypothermia while crawling for help.

Two adult hunters drowned while attempting to rescue a hunting dug which had fallen through a frozen pond near San Marcos. Two children, eight and nine, perished under similar circumstances in Hopkins County and a 15-year-old lad who alread had pulled two youths from a frozen pond near Bellvilee drowned while attempt to rescue his eight-year-old brother.

The TPWD warns that any frozen body of water, no matter how thick it might appear, is dangerous. Rescuers should not walk onto the frozen surface, but should attempt to reach the victim by throwing a rope or using a long pole or tree limb from a bank.

BYU's Young wins O'Brien QB Award

DALLAS (AP) — Steve Young, runner-up for the 1983 Heisman Trophy, on Saturday became the second Brigham Young University star to win the 3-year-old Davey O'Brien National Quarterback Award.

Young will be honored at a reception and dinner Feb. 15 featuring former Los Angeles Rams quarterback Pat Haden and the previous O'Brien honorees, Jim McMahon of BYU and Todd Blackledge of Penn State.

A $10,000 scholarship will be given to BYU in Young's name.

Runner-up for the award was Nebraska's Tuner Gill. Boston College's Doug Flutie was third, Southern Methodist's Lance McIlhenny was fourth and West Virgina's Jeff Hostetler was fifth.

Young completed 306 of 429 passes for 3,902 yards and 33 touchdowns last year in leading the Cougars to their eighth-straight Western Athletic Conference title.

He also hit 18 straight passes in one game and threw at least one touchdown passes in 22 straight games during his career.

O'Brien led Texas Christian to the 1938 national championship and later quarterbacked the Washington Redskins.

McEnroe gains U.S. Indoor Pro Tennis finals

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Second-seeded John McEnroe, establishing control with a strong serve, defeated unseeded Wojtek Fibak of Poland 6-2, 7-6 Saturday and advanced to the final of the $375,000 U.S. Pro Indoor Tennis Tournament.

McEnroe, 24, the world's No. 1-ranked player, will meet the winner of Saturday night's other semifinal between top-seeded Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia and France's Yannick Noah, the third seed in the weeklong tournament, for a $54,000 first prize.

McEnroe said he was angry with himself toward the end because he felt he got careless.

"I could have been a 6-2, 6-2 match. But I got careless...Fibak began to play smarter and he began to play well at the net. My carelessness gave him a chance to get back into the match. But I bore down in the tiebreaker."

McEnroe won eight times on his serve before being broken in the ninth game of the second set. He lost only four points dring the streak.

He served five consecutive love games with a string of 23 straight points from Game 5 of the first set to Game 7 of the second set.

The defending U.S. Pro Indoor champion broke Fibak's serve in the second game of the first set, forcing four errors, the last on afour-hand crosscourt shot over the left sideline as Fibak attempted to pass the charging McEnroe.

They held serve until Game 8, when McEnroe broke through again to win the set. He won on a second-set point when Fibak netted a backhand as McEnroe rushed the net.

In the second set, it went to 4-3 when McEnroe again broke Fibak's serve. The deciding point came as Fibak stroked the forehand over the baseline.

Fibak, 31, who had great difficulty coping with McEnroe's serve, finally broke through in Game 9, in a six-point game. He pulled to within 5-4 with a sharp backhand passing shot down the line.

The two held service to 6-6, forcing a seven-point tiebreaker, which McEnroe won 7-5, capping it with a service ace. In the tiebreaker Fibak won the first two points, then lost the next four and never caught up.

Region V ticket package goes on sale Wednesday

A Region V Junior College Basketball Tournament ticket package is being offered to the general public starting Wednesday at the Chaparral Center ticket office, according to Midland College Athletic Director Delnor Poss.

This year, Midland will host both the women's and men's Region V playoff tournament March 6 through March 10. The winners here will earn advancement to the national junior college playoff tournament.

Poss said that a ticket package that will include tickets for all 14 playoff games may be purchased for $20 per person. "We think that is a good buy for those who are interested in junior college basketball," said Poss.

The women's tournament begins on March 6 with four games scheduled from 2 p.m. to 8 p.m. On March 7, women's teams will play semifinal games at 6 and 8 p.m.

On March 8, the women's championship game will be sandwiched in the middle of first round action of the Region V men's tournament at 7 p.m. Region V games that day are scheduled for noon, 2, 5 and 9 p.m.

On March 9, the men's semifinal contests will be held at 7 and 9 p.m. and the championship finals will be held at 7 p.m. on March 10.

"We put the women's finals in the middle of the men's first day in order to assure that the women can play before a big crowd and that might help us obtain this tournament again next year," said Poss.

Raiders, Redskins dominate Pro Bowl All-Star lineups

HONOLULU (AP) — Today's Pro Bowl will have a strong Raiders-Redskins flavor, with each of the clubs placing seven players on the National Football League All-Star teams.

Guiding the NFC offense will be Washington quarterback Joe Theismann, who led the Redskins to a single-season scoring record of 541 points and a Super Bowl berth. He'll be operating behind Washington teammates Jeff Bostic at center, Russ Grimm at guard, and Joe Jacoby at tackle.

But a number of the Los Angeles defensive players who shut down the Redskins in the Raiders' 38-9 Super Bowl victory last Sunday will be on the other side of the line, including end Howie Long, linebacker Rod Martin and cornerback Lester Hayes.

The Pro Bowl, being played for the fifth consecutive time in Aloha Stadium, is scheduled for a 4 p.m., EST, start and will be nationally televised by ABC.

"It's an important game to the players because they know it's the best against the best," said Coach Bill Walsh of San Francisco, whose staff is guiding the NFC. "It's up to us as coaches to use all their great talents.

"It's kind of mind-boggling for me, because everbody here is so great," added Walsh, in his first Pro Bowl duty.

"Pride makes the players play hard in this game," said Buffalo's Chuck Knox, the NFC coach who's involved in his fifth Pro Bowl. "As the coach, you try to let them show their skills, let the players decide the game."

In the NFC's starting backfield along with Theismann are rookie Eric Dickerson of the Los Angeles Rams, who led the league in rushing; and William Andrews of Atlanta, the NFL's second-leading rusher.

San Francico's Joe Montana is the other NFC quarterback, and running backs Tony Dorsett of Dallas and Walter Payton of Chicago will spell Dickerson and Andrews.

Dan Fouts of San Diego is the starting quarterback for the AFC, with Bill Kenney of Kansas City the backup. Miami rookie Dan Marino had been voted the American Conference starter at quarterback, but is unable to play because he's recuperating from knee surgery.

Veteran Earl Campbell of Houston and rookie Curt Warner of Seattle will open as running backs for the AFC, with Buffalo's Joe Cribbs and New England's Tony Collins waiting in the wings.

They'll be facing an NFC defense that includes tackle Randy White of Dallas, ends Lee Roy Selmon of Tampa Bay and Ed Jones of Dallas, linebackers Lawrence Taylor of the New York Giants and Mike Singletary of Chicago, and safety Mark Murphy of Washington.

Other AFC defensive starters include Pittsburgh linebacker Jack Lambert, making his ninth Pro Bowl appearance; Cleveland linebacker Chip Banks; Miami tackle Bob Baumhower, and Kansas City cornerback Gary Green.

The NFC holds a commanding edge in recent all-star contests, having won five of the last six games.

The 40-man rosters for the Pro Bowl are selected by a vote of the NFL's coaches and players, with the individuals receiving the most votes at their position being designated the starters.

Coach plays bigger part in close swim meet

Enter Bridgers. "In meets that are close, the coach takes on a bigger role. He's got to keep his swimmers aware of the score. It can be a big motivational factor. If the meet was a blowout, I wouldn't emphasize the scores as much. Here I'll be more involved and so will the swimmers. In a blowout, you really have to work to keep them going.

"We'll be going for the win."

Streep, Russell, Cher play 'Silkwood' roles with skill

ENTERTAINMENT

A Review

"Silkwood," starring Oscar-winning actress Meryl Streep in the title role of Karen Silkwood, is the part-fact, part-fictionalized account of the 28-year old laboratory analyst who was working for the Kerr-McGee Nuclear Corporation Cimarron plant near Cresent, Oklahoma, in November of 1974, when she was killed in a car wreck.

The circumstances of her death are still shrouded in mystery. That is because on the night she died, she had planned to turn over evidence to a reporter from the New York Times about Kerr—McGee's participation in negligent acts concerning employee health and safety and the falsification of records to conceal defects in plutonium fuel rods made at the facility.

This movie, under the skillful direction of Mike Nichols, offers no explanation as to what happened to Karen Silkwood on that fateful night. Was she the victim of foul play by Kerr McGee agents, fellow workers in the plant fearful of losing their jobs, or was the combination of alcohol and the drug Methaqualone found in her bloodstream the indirect instrument of her death?

Whatever the answer, "Silkwood" presents a sympathetic picture of a simple young woman, tied to her lived—in—haste past by three children and yet pulled onward by the knawing urgency of something better. In this role, Miss Streep personifies the Janus figure and handles the personna of Karen Silkwood with a tender and compassionate hand. From the wise-cracking beginning to the earnest end, Miss Streep weaves the unmarked twists and turns of Karen Silkwood's life with her customary skill.

Skillful too, are Kurt Russell as Karen's live—in boyfriend, Drew, and Cher as Karen's lesbian roommate, Dolly.

Russell is always on mark, genuinely in tune with the often conflicting macho-good ol' boy ways of Drew, who measures life's pleasure in a can of Coors and smeared car grease and yet tenderly embraces Karen, once contaminated, without fear for himself.

Cher, in characteristic monotone, uses the droning of her voice to play out the popular concept of lesbianism — an unsatisfied, unnatural woman — and she does this quite convincingly. But in those moments when friends are being friends and not defined sexually, Cher's character stands out.

Another standout is Dolly's short-lived girlfriend, Angela, played with powder-puff pink perfection by Diana Scarwid. A mortician's beautician, Angela seems harmless with her hip-swaying, simple-minded style but shoots straight from the hip at her critical roommates when she says, "I can always tell when the people I work on worked at Kerr—McGee because they already look dead when they die!"

"Silkwood" is shot in a style befitting the Oklahoma countryside and the people of the story — tough and yet surprisingly fragile as they are — and the direction keeps the focus clearly on the plight of the working class. Karen becomes a hero with clay feet, all the more heroic for her foundation, and the union is seen as both friend and foe to the worker.

A carefully plotted story (written by Nora Ephron and Alice Arlen), "Silkwood" is nevertheless, unable to gloss over the fact that Karen Silkwood died too soon, and that while she lived, she encountered personal and professional hardships, which included contamination by plutonium and subsequent scathing "scrub—downs" (scenes you aren't likely to forget). Only it should be mentioned that lest we fail to grasp the import of Karen's death we are subjected to a melodramatic scene at the end wherein she sings "Amazing Grace" under a replay of a previous scene.

As a movie, "Silkwood" is a David and Goliath story of modern-day proportions, even though Karen Silkwood didn't live to see the giant topple. Rated R for its adult themes, "Silkwood" was shot on location in Texas, New Mexico and New York and the city of Midland gets a passing reference (when Silkwood's divorced common—law husband gets moved here due to an oil strike), that makes it sound like the end of the earth.

"Gorky Park" is a movie to see in a toasty warm theater. Not only is the vision of simulated Russian countryside (It was shot in Finland) chilling, but the acting and plotting (Or should I say plodding?) is as well.

William Hurt ("The Big Chill") stars as Russian police investigator, Arkady Renko, who is assigned to look into the mutilation murders of three young people. Their faceless bodies are found one snowy winter evening in Gorky Park in the center of Moscow, and Renko discovers they are in some way connected to an American fur buyer, expertly underplayed by Lee Marvin. His apparent connection is one of smuggling Russians out of the country to "freedom," but his real interest is in precious live sables for breeding.

A love object for Renko in the person of Miss Joanna Pacula as Irina (a friend of one of the murder victims) fails to kindle even a spark of interest in the frigid plot (written by Dennis Potter from the novel by Martin Cruz Smith) that reads like an iceberg — not much showing on top. But just wait for the thaw!

That thaw and subsequent flood comes at the end, when we find out who is lying to whom. But my guess is you will have figured this one out in the early minutes of "Gorky Park" because there is no greater give—away than the guy who says, "Trust me!"

Hurt, usually known for his intuitive grasp of characters, stiffs Renko with an inconsistent quasi—British accent. Maybe the cold forced the clenched teeth and stiff upper lip, or maybe he is just out of his element this time. But the fact that one of his fellow cops has a cockney accent suggests there was a grand design, one that is, nevertheless, lost on me.

The American version of Renko, more Mike Hammer and less Columbo than Hurt's cop, is a stereotype with verve. The hulking figure of Brian Dennehy as Kirwill, brother to one of the victims and New York policeman extraordinaire, provides what excitement "Gorky Park" has. Unfortunately, his part as his brother's avenger is small, probably due to the writer's desire to overlook how Kirwill could roam about Moscow, gun in hand, so freely. Apparently, the less said and seen, the better.

Finally, "Gorky Park," rated R, might have been called "Gory Park," since we get a close-up view of the three, faceless heads, tenderloin—like amidst the snow. And later one head is seen aswarm with worms, honorary dinner guests for the specific purpose of cleaning tissue fragments from the skulls to be reconstructed in the likenesses of their former owners. There is a disembowelment, too, and several people get blown away for economic and political expediency.

So, all in all, "Gorky Park" leaves its tracks in the snow, making the following a breeze, that is, if you don't freeze from the wind chill.

Twenty West Texas artists honored

The accomplishments of 20 young West Texas artists were recognized Saturday during the Museum of the Southwest's awards presentation for its "Expressions of Color" art contest.

First, second, third and honorable mention awards for five different age categories were presented for art works that most creatively used color in relating to the Museum of the Southwest.

Judges for the categories preschool through 6th grade were Cristi Branum of Gallery 1114 and Jean Posey, president of Midland Arts Assembly. They selected the following young artists as winners:

—preschool and kindergarten, first place Scott Wagner, second place Samuel Leflor, third place Jeremy Popp, and honorable mention Joshua Barbeau, all are from Midland;

—grades 1-3, first place Jeff Wright, second place, Gavin Lyons, third place Jeremiah Martin and honorable mention Jeremy Jon Foster, all are from Midland;

—grades 4-6, first place George Kuhn, second place Jerry Gay, third place Albert Kelley and honorable mention Samatha Garza, all are from Midland.

Jane Lunson and Warren Taylor, faculty members of Midland College, judged the remaining categories. Their selections were:

—grades 7-9, first place Brent Prewit, Pecos; second place Eric Peterson, Midland; third place Donna Sharon, Pecos; and honorable mention Jo Ann Garcia, Pecos;

— grades 10-12, first place Connie Sampson, second place Monica Garcia, third place Joe Hamilton and honorable mention Melecia Gasciniak, all are from Midland.

The idea for the contest was conceived by the Museum staff to encourage young artists to express themselves creatively while focusing upon the diversity of the Museum's exhibitions and programs. The competition was held in conjunction with the Museum's "Aspects of Color: Works on Paper from the Hirshhorn Museum and Sculpture Garden" exhibit. The exhibit, on display at the Museum through Feb. 12, was made possible through the Junior League of Midland.

"The 'Aspects of Color' exhibition, which is traveling across the country under the auspices of SITES, is a rare opportunity to see original work by such artists as Jack Pollack, Maurice Prendergast, Milton Avery and John Singer Sargent, and we wanted to highlight its stop in Midland," said Anne Sherburn, development and public relations officer for the Museum. "These artists were pioneers in the development of contemporary art, and we wanted to encourage upcoming artists to innovately and freely use color."

Selected entries will be on display at Midland Park Mall through Feb. 12.

Historic photographs to be exhibited at MC

Historic photographs tracing the early days of Utah as seen through the lens of George Edward Anderson will be on display at Midland College's McCormick Gallery, Allison Fine Arts Building, Wednesday through Feb. 29.

A native of Salt Lake City, where he was born in 1860, Anderson worked with and learned his craft from Charles R. Savage before opening his own studio. He devised tent galleries and portable studio vans which he used in photographing southern Utah.

Settling in Manti, Utah, for a time, Anderson made more than 50 glass plate photos of the Manti Mormon Temple while it was under construction from 1886-88. He moved to Springville, Utah, in 1888 and established a permanent portrait studio there.

During the next 40 years, he photographed people, stores, events and schools. Anderson's photographs capture people — families in their finery, people at work, parades and fairs, major construction projects, disasters and even death.

Soon after the turn of the century, he spent three years in England, several more in New England, the American Southwest and Canada, always recording with his camera.

The show which is being displayed at MC was assembled in 1979 by the Amon Carter Museum, Fort Worth. This marks the first time the photographs have been displayed outside the Amon Carter. Most of the 150 prints that comprise the first retrospective of Anderson's work came from another Springville resident, Rell G. Francis, who had the foresight and determination to save the glass plates from destruction. Francis made the prints shown as well as writing the catalog for the exhibition when it opened at the Amon Carter.

During the show, the McCormick Gallery will be open from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday and 1 to 4 p.m. Sunday. There is no admission charge at the Gallery.

Cox's works to be exhibited

ODESSA — An exhibition featuring the works of Odessa artist Paula Babb Cox opens at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin Third-Floor Art Gallery Tuesday at 7:30 p.m.

Miss Cox, a 1971 graduate of Odessa High School, received her bachelor of arts degree from the University of Arkansas. She has since done post-graduate work at UTPB, and recently opened Art-Adillo, an artist supply store in Odessa.

Her artwork has been viewed in national shows in New York, Kansas and Texas. She has received awards in numerous regional exhibits, the most recent being in Midland's Museum of the Southwest juried area art competition in 1983.

Cox's work deals primarily with the human form, the image often being relatives. Through the bold use of line and color the subject matter is often dealt with aggressively. The most recent figures are paintings on paper that have been cut out and mounted to display on the wall or secured in stands so they may be free-standing. The show includes painted abstract paper pieces as well as constructed paper dolls.

"I have been experimenting with different types of paper and mediums and the use of collage," she says. "The abstract paper pieces are a result of working with mediums on the paper and shaping it and them finally adding color. While these pieces are quite new for me, they are an important step in my work with paper. Paper is not just a surface to paint or draw on, it can be manipulated into a form all its own."

Gallery hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. The show will be up through Feb. 22.

Singer Michael Jackson released from hospital

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Singer Michael Jackson checked out of a hospital Saturday after being treated for severe scalp burns he suffered when his hair was ignited by special effects while he filmed a TV commercial.

Michael Jackson

More than 200 calls a minute had streamed into the switchboard at Brotman Memorial Hospital and avid fans had poured into the medical facility in attempts to see him.

Dr. Steven Hoefflin said Jackson left the hospital in a wheelchair at 12:30 p.m. and was escorted by a bodyguard and relatives.

"He's home, and he just wants his fans to know that he's all right," said Jackson's tour manager Larry Larson.

Hoefflin said Jackson will be receive daily outpatient treatment consisting of removal of bandages and application of ice to the burned areas.

Hoefflin, a plastic surgeon, said Jackson still had some discomfort from the burns but "he wanted to leave the hospital and I thought it was appropriate to discharge him at this time." He had said earlier Jackson could suffer some permanent hair loss.

Jackson, 25, a multimillionaire who won eight American Music Awards this month and could win 12 Grammy awards next month, had a palm-sized patch of his scalp singed Friday night while filming a commercial for Pepsi-Cola — one of two that will be shown during the nationally televised Grammy presentations on Feb. 28.

Jackson's tour manager, Larry Larson, said a "special pyrotechnical effect" somehow ignited Jackson's curls, which had been pomaded for the filming.

Doctors said Jackson suffered second- and third-degree burns.

Jane Korsi, a spokesman for the hospital's communications operation, had said earlier the hospital was getting an average of 200 calls a minute through the switchboard. Brotman had called in 13 additional employees to handle the calls.

"Everybody wants to talk to him. Some people are crying, and they get very upset when they can't get through. Many are trying to pass themselves off as relatives — sisters and cousins," she said. "If the president of the United States came here, I don't think he'd get as many calls."

Before Jackson's discharge, doctors had described him as exhausted and in pain, but he spent Saturday morning visiting other patients in the burn unit to cheer them. Jackson previously had visited patients there twice at Hoefflin's request.

Doctors had said earlier that Jackson might spend several days in the hospital because he was "slightly exhausted."

Jackson had managed to sleep during the night "but was up watching TV to 1 a.m.," Hoefflin said at a news conference earlier Saturday at the hospital in the western Los Angeles suburb of Culver City.

Jackson's boy-soprano lead vocals made him the teen idol of the Jackson Five singing group in the mid-1960s. Few black performers have come close to Jackson's success. His "Thriller" album catapulted Jackson to superstardom.

The accident in the Shrine Auditorium near downtown occurred as Jackson was coming down terraced steps toward the front of the stage, singing a Pepsi jingle to the tune of his hit song "Billy Jean," said Margaret Watkins of Fullerton, who was watching the taping.

Ten years of sculptor's work on display

Opening today at the Museum of the Southwest in the Stables Gallery is the exhibition "Lincoln Fox — Sculptor: Ten Years of His Work." Fox is in town for the public opening and will be at the Museum, 1705 W. Missouri Ave., from 2 to 3 p.m.

Born in Morrilton, Ark., in 1942, Fox was raised in San Angelo, where his lifelong fascination and affinity with Native American philosophy began. At The University of Texas at Austin, he began his career as an artist. Initially he worked as a painter, but soon discovered that through sculpture, he could better express himself and his philosophy.

He continued to sculpt while enrolled in the masters program at the University of Dallas. However, it was not until he pursued his master of fine arts at the University of Kansas that he learned to cast bronze, a technique which changed his artistic career.

When asked several years ago why he chose to be a sculptor, he replied, "First of all, I'm a sculptor because it's part of me. It's natural and was never preconceived. I thought at first that I wanted to be a painter, my paintings were good and they sold, but this was before I discovered sculpture. The transition of physical form to sculpture is more immediate than in painting; I simply couldn't help myself."

In all of his work, Fox is striving to capture, describe and communicate the spirit of man. To him, the American Indian, with whom he feels a spiritual harmony, is the most pleasing symbolic medium for his message. Their myths and legends are particularly attractive because of the openness of expression they allow. Fox cautions against misinterpretation of the pervasive Indian imagery, saying, "I create symbols of man, endowed with their cultural traits. Symbols thus created, although visually bound to the Indian, are first and foremost symbols of man."

An important inspiration for his work is the dreamworld and its images. One of Fox's best known and most critically acclaimed sculptures, "Victorio's Dream," on display at the Museum, is one of a series of seven pieces dedicated to the subject of dreams. Fox has become fascinated with the freedom afforded by dreams as opposed to traditional themes and subjects. He repeatedly concentrates on the dreamworld because he believes that the symbols of dreams are universal in significance and timeless in duration, thereby reaching and affecting a greater audience.

Fox admits to having been influenced by Michelangelo, Rodin, Brancusi, Henry Moore, Leonard Baskin and Marion Marini. He says that each, like himself, broke away from realism specifically for the purpose of heightening emotion and capturing the spirit or vitality of the subject.

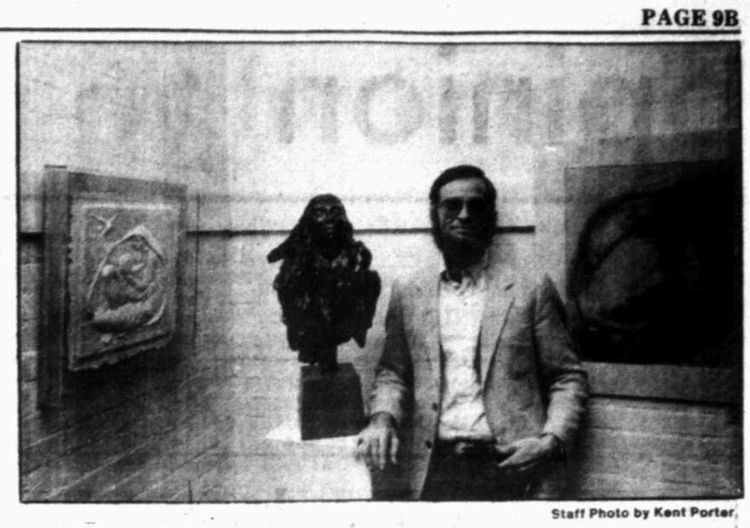

This distortion of proportion can be seen in such Fox pieces as "Transformation," "Love Flute," "Winter Shaman" and the "Duck Catcher." All are in the Museum exhibit.

Since the late 1960s, Fox has participated in close to 70 exhibitions across the United States and Canada. He has been honored with one man shows at the Smithsonian Institution, the Kennedy Galleries, New York City, and numerous museums and galleries throughout the Southwest. Prince Charles is among those who collect his work.

In 1978, 1980 and 1981, Fox was included in invitational shows at Midland College. The Permian Basin Petroleum Museum has commissioned several sculptures for its permanent collection.

A member of the National Sculpture Society and the National Western Artists Association, Fox was a founding partner in the Shidoni Foundry, Tesuque, N.M.

The exhibit will be on display through March 11. All works are for sale and proceeds go to the Museum. Hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday.

Ten years of artist Lincoln Fox's life is represented in 68 pieces of his work on display beginning today at the Museum of the Southwest. Fox will be available to answer questions during the Museum's public reception today from 2 to 3 p.m.

MC instructor to present concert

Ron Franklin, Midland College instructor in commercial music, will present a faculty concert at 3 p.m. today in the Allison Fine Arts Building Auditorium.

The free performance is open to the public.

Franklin will perform several compositions for classical guitar, including selections from composers Villa-Lobos, Frescobaldi, Corbetta and Scott Joplin. As a special feature Franklin will present part of his program with a replica Baroque guitar first used in the 17th century when much of the classical guitar music was composed.

Franklin joined the MC faculty in 1982 as the instructor for a program being instituted in commercial music.

His recital serves as part of his performance requirements for his doctoral program at Texas Tech University, Lubbock.

He received his bachelor's degree from Baldwin Wallace College, Berea, Ohio, and his master's from Texas Tech. He has performed professionally for more than 10 years and has served as a guitar instructor at the University of Akron, Ohio, and at Texas Tech.

Give and take

Midland City Council walked a fine line this week in determining how near oil wells can be drilled to residential structures. The resulting compromise passes a thumbnail test for fairness in that no one came out with everything they wanted.

It wasn't an easy question to resolve. It never is when a city's populace is pitted against the very industry that gives the community its reason for existence.

In this instance the council was asked, in effect, to choose between oil field activity the industry sought and the desires of residents who opposed that activity.

Generally, the ordinance as now written does not allow drilling within 175 feet of residences from the well bore unless specific conditions are met, such as approval by all landowners within that distance and a three-fourths vote of the council. Beyond that distance, generally, regulations are looser.

The council is to be commended for making the safety of residents a prime factor in resolving the matter. The requirement of public notices for wells close to residential areas is good, also, because that will keep the public informed. If landowners want, they can appear before the council to oppose any particular well.

At the same time, the council left ajar the door for drilling activity if and when the particular requirements regarding public notices and safety measures are observed.

Like all communities, Midland is populated with individuals. Some do not approve of drilling under any conditions; others would permit drilling almost anywhere at anytime. To keep the community functioning in the best interests of the most residents requires the delicate art of compromise.

That's what the council forged this week.

A hardy perennial

One of the more puzzling aspects of what observers discern as a religious revival in the Iron Curtain countries is the growing number of adherents that it is finding among young people.

A reawakening of religious interest in the older generation might be explained as a desperate effort to return to the ancient verities. The young folk in East Germany, Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Bulgaria, however, have scant acquaintance with those verities except by hearsay from their elders.

These young folk were born, raised and came of age under Communist systems which are dedicated to the extinction of churches and everything the churches teach. But where church programs are still tolerated, Iron Curtain youths are said to be responding enthusiastically. And where religious repression is most virulent, the young people are conducting services in homes.

The Communists have had almost 40 years in which to "atheize" the Iron Curtain peoples and they are faring little better than the Soviets have in almost 70 years. They simply have failed to come up with a credible alternative.

Another View:

Jobs for the jobless

One way that America deals with displaced workers is to let them "vote with their feet," as President Reagan phrases it. But the remedy has severe limitations.

For all the talk about a mobile population, studies have shown that most Americans don't like to pull up stakes and move to another part of the country. Even if it means remaining jobless, many displaced industrial workers will stay in their hometowns after mills and factories close down.

Moreover, as the Urban Institute points out in a recent report, great economic waste occurs even when workers can be persuaded to relocate. Here's how the non-partisan research group describes it:

"When jobs and population relocate from one place to another, they leave behind underutilized capital infrastructure, both public and private, which must be replaced in the new location."

Put another way, valuable factories, streets, sewers and school buildings go to ruin in a declining Midwestern town while a burgeoning Sun Belt community is building such facilities from the ground up.

Neither the "Rust Bowl" states nor the federal government should accept such change as completely inevitable. Carefully tailored aid programs and tax policies can help affected industries develop new employment opportunities to replace the old.

The government, through retraining programs, also can help assure that displaced workers in declining areas have the skills attractive to emerging kinds of American industry. Studies show that those workers often lack basic reading and math skills.

All in all, it frequently makes economic sense to move jobs to the workers rather than try to move the workers to jobs.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Customs bill favors Soviets

WASHINGTON — With run-of-the-mill regularity, the United States has allowed advance technology to be sold to the Soviet Union, which has routinely used the purchases to improve its weaponry. This has contributed to the obsolescense of U.S. armaments, which must then be redesigned and replenished at a cost of billions.

Jack Anderson

Perhaps it's too much to expect that the government might occasionally exhibit a minimal level of awareness and cohesion, so U.S. policy would serve some higher purpose than corproate greed. But now there's a move to turn over to the Commerce Department the main responsibility for policing these sensitive sales.

The mission of the Commerce Department is to promote sales of U.S. goods. It has neither the manpower nor the inclination to stop valuable technology from slipping through the cracks to the Soviet Union.

The Commerce Department has only 50 inspectors and investigators to keep an eye on high-tech exports. In contrast, the Customs Service has 200 years' experience and more than 5,000 trained people around the world to track smugglers.

Yet a little-noticed bill, sponsored by Rep. Don Bonker, D-Wash., would rewrite the Export Administration Act of 1979 and virtually strip Customs of its authority to examine export shipments. The protection of our technology would be left largely to the Commerce Department, which has a history of putting profits ahead of securtiy.

This has provoked the outrage of William von Raab, commissioner of the U.S. Customs Service. "The KGB is happy, but I am angry," he said. "(This bill) would make it even easier for the Soviet Union to steal America's high technology."

Given President Reagan's probusiness philosophy, the White House is inclined to dismiss the matter as a bureaucratic squabble over turf. But tighter security could save the taxpayers billions. The Pentagon is squandering money on weapons that it wouldn't need if the high-tech trade hadn't been so free and easy.

The president wants to sink billions, for example, into the development of the MX missile. This is needed, he contends, because the Soviets' SS-18 missiles are so accurate they threaten the old-line Minutemen missiles. But the SS-18's accuracy was made possible by American ball bearings.

In fact, almost every weapons system the Pentagon is now building is justified by Soviet technoligical improvement — improvements that originated in Silicon Valley or other U.S. high-tech centers.

"Many of the 200 Soviet weapons systems currently on the drawing board will require American know-how," von Raab said. "The more we try to close holes in the net, the quicker the KGB will move to open new ones."

A clsasic case of Commerce's sloppy enforcement of export laws occured last November. It made headlines briefly, but my associate Dale Van Atta has seen secret documents and spoken to sources who tell the truly appalling story behind the story:

Among the thousands of export licenses reviewed by Commerce in 1982 was one for a Vax 11/782 computer, a high-grade system that has many military applications, including missile guidance. The Soviet Union lacked the technology to develop such a computer.

The $1.5 million system was going to Microelectronics Research Institute in Cape Town, South Africa. Even the most cursory investigation would have revealed that the company was run by a fugitive from U.S. justice, Richard Mueller, a West German businessman.

What was Mueller's offense? He was indicted in California in 1979 on charges of shipping semiconductor technology to the Soviet Union, by way of Canada and West Germany. He was also implicated in other export violations.

The Commerce Department's licensing officer didn't know this. He didn't know that several times since 1980 another division at Commerce had been told about Mueller and MRI, but had conducted only superficial inquiries.

What the licensing officer did know — and wrote in his highly sensitive internal report — was that the "end user" of the Vax computer "may engage in missile delivery or intelligence activities, thus requiring (Defense Department) review."

But the official in the policy planning division who got this warning replied: "No basis for referral to DOD." The words "no basis" were underlined to make sure the cheeky licensing officer got the point. So the Pentagon, which undoubtedly would have protested the Vax export, was never consulted, and the license was approved.

That would have ended the matter, except a Customs attache in the Bonn embassy go a tip that the Vax was in fact headed for Moscow. Less than 24 hours later, with excellent West German cooperation, the three, 20-foot-long Vax crates were taken off a ship that was only seven minutes from sailing.

Even then, Commerce was unimpressed. Customs agents who had been sent to South Africa to investigate other Soviet-bound shipments got no cooperation from Commerce — until top officials started using language bureaucrats understand.

One account had an assistant Treasury secretary shouting at a Commerce undersecretary, suggesting he'd be wearing "prison stripes" if he didn't cooperate. In another dust-up, a National Security Council official gave a Commerce official one hour to cooperate or be reported to the White House.

GEORGE F. WILL

Line-item veto no balancing bar

WASHINGTON — Ronald Reagan, heading the axiom that a compliment can be a forensic anesthetic, used a part of a paragraph in his State of the Union address to compliment Congress. But Tip O'Neill, looking even more than usual like a rolling stack of cumulus clouds, said "Blech!", or words to that effect. Evidently he knows that Reagan's proposal for a demi-commission on deficit-reduction measures is evidence for the axiom that when people seek advice they are seeking accomplices.

George F. Will

For decades, conservative after-dinner speakers convulsed audiences with this thigh-slapper: "We're not getting all the government we're paying for — thank God!" But in 1984, a conservatave administration is cheerily telling the country that it need not pay for all the government it is getting. As Sen. Pat Moynihan says, this administration has made big government cheap: For every dollar of government, it asks only 78 cents in taxes. (Never mind that if the deficit path is unchanged, by 1989 half of personal income-tax revenues will be needed just to pay the interest on debt, and every percentage point increase in interest rates may add $15,000 to the 30-year cost of a $55,000 mortgage.)

Reagan is requesting an item veto — power to strike a particular item from an appropriations bill rather than choose between signing or rejecting a huge spending package. The best reason for granting his request is that it would strengthen the presidency. An item veto gives the President the power that makes government work — the power to inflict pain, and hence to instill fear. Forced to choose between meddling with foreign policy and preserving a cherished spending project, many congressmen would lose interest in playing secretary of state.

For reasons of institutional self-interest, Congress probably will not approve an item veto, although one argument against the item veto is that it would enable Congress to be irresponsible. It could vote for every project favored by the home folks and say that it is the President's job to weed the garden.

An item veto would do less than broad powers of impoundment, recision and deferral would do to control spending. True an item veto can occasionally be a big weapon. Last year Richard Thornburgh, Pennsylvania's Republican governor, used it to knock one of every eight dollars out of the budget concocted by the Legislature. He even vetoed all funds for the operation of the state House of Representatives, which Democrats control. But no government can be routinely run by such bruising methods.

Gov. James Thompson of Illinois generally uses the item veto to reduce appropriations by about 3 percent. As governor of California, Reagan used it to reduce spending about 2 percent. If he did as much with the federal budget, he would cut the fiscal 1985 deficit just $18.5 billion. But he could not do as much because the federal budget is fundamentally unlike state budgets. It is fundamentally less susceptible to control by vetoes, item or otherwise.

The entitlements component is huge and politically protected. The interest component is large and not optional. And this President thinks defense spending is too low. (Congress cut his fiscal 1984 defense request by $4.7 billion.) That leaves all other discretionary social spending — about 19 percent of the budget — as the target for item vetoes. Reagan could take a long, sharp pencil and turn it into a short, dull pencil by vetoing every item in this portion of the budget, and the budget still would not be balanced.

A President's most formidable constitutional power is negative — the blocking power of the veto. Reagan has not vetoed a single appropriations bill passed by the current Congress. Why not? Because in passing 10 of 13 appropriations bills, and continuing resolutions, Congress has appropriated just $3.2 billion more than Reagan requested for fiscal 1984. If facts can counter the public's prejudice against Congress, the facts should complicate any Reagan plan to run against Congress as the culprit in the deficit drama. Even more complicating will be Reagan's Budget Message.

It will propose cuts for fiscal 1985 amounting to less than 1 percent of non-defense, non-interest spending; it will project deficits averaging approximately $180 billion over the next three years; and it will say that even after three years like that, the T-bill rate will be just 6.1 percent. As an example of claiming too much, that calls to mind the Havana museum that claimed to have two of Christopher Columbus' skulls, one from when he was a boy and one from when he was a man. The human race, said Mark Twain, consists of the dangerously insane and such as are not. We know to which group belong the authors of the T-bill projection.

Bars make war games realistic

More and more companies are now holding seminars on how executives should deal with the media. In the past, businesses (big business in particular) handed out press releases through their public affairs vice presidents and that was that. But as the press keeps badgering our nation's businessmen, they are finding themselves in front of cameras, blinking into bright lights and running the risk of losing control of their story.

Art Buchwald

There are hundreds of experts making large fortunes showing corporation big shots how to deal with the media.

"All right, gentlemen. I'm going to give you your first hypothetical case for this war game. Word gets out your company has produced a headache powder that causes convulsions, and also fillings to fall out. Mr. Chairman, what is the first thing you do?"

"I telephone my insurance company and find out if the product is adequately covered by my liability policy. If it is, then I call a press conference and announce we will continue manufacturing the powder."

"Why?"

"Because if we stop, we'll be admitting the charges are true, and we'll be opening ourselves up to a lot of frivolous lawsuits."

"Fair enough. Now I'll make it harder on you. Mike Wallace shows up with a crew from '60 Minutes' to find out what is going on. Do you let him in or not?"

"I let him in, but I don't talk to him. I turn him over to my research director, Dr. Rich."

"Right. Okay, Dr. Rich. You are now on camera. Mike Wallace is holding a dead white hamster in his hand and says, 'Would it surprise you, Doctor, that this rat used your headache powder?' What's your answer?"

"I tell Mike we have no evidence to substantiate that the product, when used with caution, would damage anyone's health."

"Weak, Doctor, very weak. Mike Wallace pulls a report out of his briefcase which he reads from: 'This FDA study, which I know you received eight years ago, indicates that almost everyone exposed to your powder was subject to catatonic convulsions. Why didn't you make this report available to your superiors?' How do you deal with Mike on that one, Doc?"

"I reply that I did turn the report over to management."

"No you don't, Dr. Rich."

"What do I do?"

"You get the hell off camera. Once Wallace confronts you with the FDA report, you can't fake it anymore, and you refer him to the company lawyers. Where are the lawyers? All right, Wallace is knocking down the door. He smells blood. Who's the head legal beagle?"

"I am, sir. Timothy Wadlipp IV."

"Okay, Wadlipp, Wallace shows you the report and wants to know why your company is still making the stuff. How do you respond?"

"I say we will have no comment until we have a chance to study the data."

"Not good enough. Wallace claims you've had the report for eight years. You have to give him some red meat."

"I appear shocked, and say we're firing Dr. Rich for keeping the report from management, and we'll cooperate with the Justice Department if criminality is established."

"Hey, wait a minute. I'm not going to take the rap because management made me stuff the FDA report in a back drawer."

"Dr. Rich, we're just playing a media game. This is a hypothetical case which has nothing to do with our company."

"Oh yeah? If it's so hypothetical why am I going to prison?"

"Because people always feel so much better toward a company when someone on '60 Minutes' goes to jail."

Reagan's address offers nation blueprint for future

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST, JR.
Editor-in-Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

Hearst

NEW YORK — President Reagan gave people at home and the world abroad a blueprint of the immediate future in his State of the Union address before the joint houses of Congress. He emphasized in 42 minutes how America regained its economic and military strength during his first term in the Oval Office and appealed to the Soviet Union about negotiating on all issues dividing us.

"I want to speak to the people of the Soviet Union," declared President Reagan. He asserted that the only sane policy for the two superpowers was assurance "that a nuclear war cannot be won and must never be fought."

This pointed remark induced a wave of spontaneous applause from the jammed audience which included veteran Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin who applauded enthusiastically instead of burying his head in the printed message before him, which he generally does. The president's reference to war-and-peace also was a response to ailing U.S.S.R. Communist boss Yuri Andropov who belatedly responded the other day to President Reagan's offers for negotiation as "nothing new."

EDITOR'S REPORT

IN HIS SPEECH, President Reagan maintained the momentum of looking forward — saying "We cannot turn back" — and appealed for bipartisan cooperation to check a long decline in the nation's fortunes. The Democrats, playing partisanship in an election year, seemed to be very wary of cooperating with him to bring down a large national deficit where they believe the Republicans are vulnerable.

Looking toward the future, the president endorsed a permanently-manned space station, which may eventually be used as a base from which to colonize the moon or Mars. It will cost $20 billion to $30 billion by the end of the century. To some Americans it may seem an extension of a Buck Rogers fantasy but remember, having men on the moon also looked that way a few years ago. The president's announcement represents a major triumph for NASA which has been advocating a permanently-manned station as the next major American objective in space.

Besides the deficit, the Democrats keep up running criticism of the president for his refusal to withdraw our Marines from the Beirut, Lebanon, area. Their point man in this argument is House Speaker Tip O'Neill. He faulted the president, for instance, for devoting "only one paragraph" in the State of the Union message to the problem. The speaker not long ago approved of the president's mission for the Marines, who are part of an international peacekeeping force with NATO allies France, Italy and Britain. Now Tip wants to get all the Marines back home where they won't be targets for suicidal Moslems, many of whom follow Iran's Ayatollah Khomeini.

I HAVE ALWAYS been leery of sending so few of our boys — 1,600 — to an uncontrollable region like Lebanon. The president has managed to move them to more defensible positions. But as Senator Howard Baker, R-Tenn., who also is Senate majority leader, has said, it's doubtful any legislation can be approved to withdraw the Marines.

Without elaborating, President Reagan revealed that he soon would submit legislation to assist in combating terrorism. Various sources in the know in Washington inform me that the legislation will provide money for us to cooperate with other governments on intelligence exchanged.

The president's State of the Union message will be remembered for its tone as much as its substance. He spoke as a man of hope and optimism, and as a leader who has an abiding faith in the destiny of this nation. Here is an example of that tone:

"There is renewed energy and optimism throughout the land. America is back — standing tall, looking to the 80s with courage, confidence and hope."

And here is another: "After all our struggles to restore America, to revive confidence in our country and hope for our future; after all our hard-won victories earned through the patience and courage of every citizen — we cannot, must not and will not turn back. We will finish our job."

THESE WERE inspiring words, as I think most Americans who heard the president speak would agree. One thing we should bear in mind is that this upbeat tone was not simply political oratory, as some partisan critics were quick to suggest, but is based on solid ground.

For instance, on the very day our president was appraising the state of the union last week, the Labor Department announced that the inflation rate last year was only 3.8 percent, the lowest since 1972. This statistic is indicative of the state of the nation's economy which has been rebounding steadily for the past 15 months.

In other words, the recovery that has been taking place in these months provides a factual foundation for President Reagan's optimism about the future.

Another thing that has been happening during these months, and for which President Reagan deserves credit, is a study of how to cut the cost of government. For a year and a half a 161-member committee headed by the New York industrialist J. Peter Grace has been making an exhaustive examination of ways to save some of the dollars currently spent on the federal bureaucracy.

THE GRACE GROUP made 2,500 recommendations of ways to stop the drain. The dramatic conclusion was that more than $400 billion could be saved in the next three years if its proposals were accepted.

I am pointing this out because it is typical of the nature of leadership President Reagan is giving the country in the area of fiscal responsibility. During his campaign for the presidency he made a big point of "getting the government off our back," and in his first three years in office he is carrying out his promise. Efforts to cut the costs of government were what made it possible for the president to talk with such optimism in his State of the Union address. A continuation of such efforts will make it possible for the next State of the Union address to be even more optimistic. Let us never forget that the state of the American economy has a direct bearing on the world's economy.

President Reagan will make another statement late tonight about his plans for a second term. American voters will have the final word on the state of the union next Nov. 6.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Congratulations

To the Editor:

Being an avid football fan I keep close tabs on all the Texas high school teams, especially during the playoffs. I would like to offer my congratulations to the Midland Lee Rebels for nearly winning the 5A crown.

Since a controversial call by an official was a factor in the Judson game (regarding the fumble by Judson around the Lee 10-yard-line) it seemed to determine the winner.

After attending all the Temple Wildcat games this year I, too, have seen some questionable calls. These can be verified by watching our game films on Monday night at our Quarterback Club. Against Plano we had two which really hurt. A fumble on Plano's 3-yard-line and an apparent first down on 4th and short when we were driving deep and the ball was spotted wrong. I think Plano was penalized for a total of 10 yards on two penalties.

Anyhow, how long will it be before a video camera will be used when a question arises during a game, be it pros, college or high school?

God vs. Caesar

To the Editor:

Sunday's "Speaking Out" (Jan. 15) published the thoughts and opinions of Mary Knoll regarding the group in Nebraska who wanted to forego accredited education for their children. I, too, am very concerned with this tendency which ignores all considerations except that anyone in the name of religion has the right to disobey the law.

There are certain limitations to all freedoms. It has often been said that my freedom to swing my arm is limited to just before it comes into contact with someone's nose. Sometimes, we forget that the "state" has certain responsibilities which "we the people" have given it. Not the least of these responsibilities is to set up standards to assure protection to the disenfranchised — in this case the children — in order to ensure that all children will receive the opportunity of an education. All that need be done by the group in question is to meet accreditation standards for minimum education in the State of Nebraska.

More than 20 years ago the Baptist General Convention of Texas named a committee, of which I was a member, to study the entire spectrum of our state Baptist institutions and their relations to the State of Texas and the government of the United States with regard to the question of "Separation of Church and State." The convention adopted the committee report to require all convention owned and operated institutions — hospitals, children's homes, nursing homes, colleges, universities and others — to meet and exceed the requirements of the "state" that protects the interest of students, faculty and patients. This has in no way affected those institutions' opportunity nor ability to teach the tenets of our Savior and Lord Jesus Christ. I have found no reason to change my mind about that position.

This same Lord and Savior said "render unto Caesar that which is Caesar's and unto God that which is God's.

Man of vision

To the Editor:

As fate would have it, we can mark on the calendar of life a person we chance to meet who stands out just a little more than others in our memory. I met such a person in 1983.

While I'm sure this person has no political aspirations, how refreshing it would be to see him become our "city father." Possessing the qualities of compassion and sensitivity, he could bring together all communities of the city of Midland.

At this time in our history, the black community does not feel that their petitions of grievance are being given true respect and just treatment. Somehow, a new foundation of confidence in the city leadership has to be built but can only be rebuilt when outmoded values no longer exist among this leadership.

In my opinion, the person, an attorney, to whom I alluded earlier, is one who could bring to us new life, new blood and new activity, for he is old enough to reflect on the past yet young enough to possess vision. Vision for the future.

This person is the personification of our founding fathers belief that "all men are created equally."

Here is a man full of compassion and can relate not only to the rich but the poor as well. Is this not what the American dream is all about? Are these not some of the prerequisites for good leadership?

To paraphrase Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., perhaps the time has come when we no longer judge a man by the color of his skin but the content of his character. This leads to the point of casting aside partisan politics and electing to office a person who would be representative of all peoples.

Do you think we might be able to persuade him to run for office? Draft him?

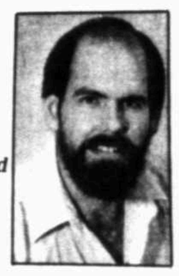

Midland needs and should be proud to know that in our city we have a man such as Tevis Herd.

SPEAKING OUT

American society threatened by foreign belief systems

By MARK T. MOSELY

A native of El Paso, Mark T. Mosely has lived in Midland for three years. At the age of 17, he traveled to Thailand where he taught English and studied Eastern religion and mysticism as it relates to the individual and society. He attends the Word of Life church in Midland.

There has been a slow transformation of value and belief systems in America, which I believe could lead if not reversed, to a loss of our freedom, rights and way of life as we know them now. The conditioning began over a century ago, but has increased in the last 15 to 20 years and consists of a gradual replacing of Judeo-Christian beliefs and Western thought, which enveloped absolutes and objectivity, to a new, yet ancient way of thinking.

At the birth of our nation, there was a common belief in a personal God and Creator. William Penn observed, "If man is not ruled by God, he will be ruled by tyrants." This belief has gradually been transforming to a belief in (1) pantheism, the idea that all is God and God is all, (2) monism, the idea that the universe is one in being or substance, (3) a denial of a personal or active creator God (i.e. atheism), and (4) relative truth or thought as opposed to objective or absolute truth.

We can see these tenets of belief in many of the "science of the mind" philosophies and beliefs. The goal of this thought is self-realization or self is god. The student of religion would recognize these tenets as basic Hinduism.

Another aspect of the transformation is in the supernatural or mystical. This would include ESP, psychokinesis, telepathy, clairvoyance, dictation from psychic guides, space brothers, higher intelligences, etc. Once considered fakery or superstition, this phenomenon is now being accepted by many in modern science. Well known research psychiatrist E. Fuller Torvey in "Mind Games," declared "The methods of western psychiatrists, with few exceptions, are on the same scientific plane as the methods of witchdoctors."

The Soviet Union as well as the U.S. has been experimenting for years with ESP. Uri Geller, well-known psychic, claims that highly evolved "ET's" from another planet, acting as special agents for the "controllers of the universe" have chosen him as their ambassador to earth. Helena Blavatsky and Annie Besant, founders of the Theosophical Society, 1875, also received messages from "higher intelligences." Many of the founders of the panthiestic "science of the mind" beliefs have received doctrines and teachings from the "higher intelligences."

When I was living in Northern Thailand, I would visit the hill tribes. They also received messages from "higher intelligences." There were whole communities based on teachings given by the "ET's." This religious belief is called animism or spirit worship.

Our society is also slowly being conditioned to self-centered, relative thinking. This means a process of denying that there is an absolute standard for measuring moral values. "Value Clarification" encourages the students to look within themselves for "inner guidance." It only matters how you "feel" about the situation. Could this be one of the reasons for our deteriorating educational system?

The media is also involved. With movies such as "Encounters of the Third Kind" and "ET," we are introduced to the mysticism of the "cosmic consciousness." George Lucas, in his Star War series, preached his belief in Franz Mesmer's impersonal "Universal Force" or mesmerism.

This mixture of mysticism, pantheism and relative thought has adversely affected many societies.

India's government has been trying to re-educate its people away from the fatalistic and apathy breeding philosophies of karma and reincarnation. The law of karma teaches that all suffering is the result of evil done in a former life; a sufferer therefore is considered akin to a criminal. The law also states if one is born poor, it is his fault and he has to work it out himself. Therefore, no incentive to help the poor is encouraged. All life in considered equally sacred, so the rats are free to eat the grain that could be given to the starving.

The Marxist-Leninist system of belief, evidenced in the Soviet Union, denies belief in a personal God. Interestingly enough, the secular humanism in the U.S. also holds this belief. Since there is no God in Marxist thought, truth is relative. The state becomes God and therefore the definer of truth. If the state says there is no slave labor...there is no slave labor. That is the truth, all else is a lie. That is why Marxism can break agreements with a clear conscience; they are the definers of truth or they are God. Lenin has become a God, with Hinduistic chants or mantras Lenin is worshiped. "Lenin lived, Lenin lives, Lenin will always live, Lenin is more alive than the living!"

Adolph Hitler's Nazi Germany is another example. The swastika, evolution of the Aryan master race and SS's belief in reincarnation and a "cosmic force" had Hindu roots. Swami Svatanatrananda said to a Hindu audience, "Whatever you may say against him, Hitler was a mahatma, almost like an avatar."(God in the flesh). Although Hitler publicly denounced mysticism and remained a member of the Catholic church, historians admit that astrology and spiritualism were influential in Hitler's decision making. In Gerald Suster's "Hitler: The Occult Messiah," it is observed that Hitler studied "the wisdom of Gurdjieff, derived from Suf, mystics and Tibetan llamas, and Zen mysticism."

Individuals of Orthodox Moslem, Jewish and Christian beliefs should be aware that humanism, Marxism, Nazism and most of the "science of the mind"systems hold these common beliefs: (1) denial of the personal God-Creator, (2) belief in the evolution of man into a master race with self as god, (3) for the Christian, denial that Jesus Christ was and is God-Creator, Saviour. Jesus' claim "I am the Way, the Truth and the Life" is explained away, (4) concerning the Jew, there is either a direct or subtle attack on his faith. Some scholars believe that the existence of the Jewish faith or race is a constant reminder that there might be a God, thus causing anti-Jewish feelings.

We as Americans should observe this transformation and conditioning to pantheism, mysticism and relative thinking and judge what the effects have been in other societies and whether it can happen to us.

"Speaking Out" columnists are invited to submit articles on subjects of their choice. They should be limited to 850 words or less.

Rebels risk ridicule, hostility by challenging status quo

Bill Modisett

Rebellion used to be fashionable.

When I was in high school, there was this classmate of mine who was always rebelling against authority. Ed didn't care how many times he was dragged to the principal's office or how many "laps" coach made him run. He was going to rebel because, well, he didn't believe that going along with the crowd was always in the crowd's best interests.

Ed wasn't always right. Most of our classmates probably would say in many instances he rebelled simply to make life difficult. I have a sneaking suspicion they'd be right.

But rebellion — for whatever reason — isn't always bad, either, and anyone who thinks it is hasn't studied history. This country was created by rebels and adventurers — the kind of people who believed the "norm" wasn't quite good enough and, most importantly, had the courage to risk the ridicule and hostility of those around them by questioning the status quo.

Throughout history, rebels have brought about change that has benefitted society rather than impeding it. They have questioned conventional wisdom and given mankind cause to ponder another possibility. Christopher Columbus wasn't trying to prove the world was round when he set sail from Palos, Spain, in August of 1492. Most educated individuals at that time realized the world had to be round, historians tell us.

Columbus was merely seeking a short sea route to the Indies to make trade easier and life better, but he raised eyebrows all over Portugal and Spain with his far-fetched proposal. His discovery of the West Indies forever changed the face of the world and led to European colonization of the Western Hemisphere.

In the early years of American colonization, there were plenty of rebels — individuals looking for the opportunity to start new lives in a new world, a large number of them running away from tyrannical government, plenty of them just misfits who didn't blend in with European society. When the heavy hand of the rulers across the sea became a little too much to stomach, all those colonists pulled together in a rebellious act that gave birth to the United States. And we haven't stopped rebelling yet.

There are two sides to rebellion and while it can be to society's benefit, it also can be destructive. When the rebellious nature of one individual endangers society, rebellion can become a dangerous force. But when a large number of individuals pull together in an act of rebellion to challenge the status quo, they become society's "steering wheel."

A recent example in Odessa was the tax rollback election in which 65 percent of those voting told Ector County to cut its budget by $880,000, in addition to budget cuts already made, and told the Ector County Independent School District to do likewise, to the tune of $2.2 million.

It can be argued that the low turnout of voters didn't accurately reflect society's wishes, but that's ridiculous. Voters surely knew what was going on and if they chose not to vote but opposed the rollback, they got what they deserved.

Of course it also can be reasonably argued that tax rollbacks have a dangerous potential. That's true; they can stymie progress and create hardship for society. They also can make government more responsive to the people it's supposed to represent.

Rebellion can still be fashionable. Rollbacks are a product of rebellion. They can be dangerous or they can benefit society. The secret lies in recognizing the difference.

Newman to 'take things as they come'

NEW YORK (AP) — Outside Edwin Newman's office at NBC News, another midwinter Manhattan evening is falling quickly. But the veteran correspondent doesn't seem particularly concerned about the end of either the day or the career.

Newman, who is retiring, says he is going to read a lot, listen to classical music and jazz and spend more time with his wife, Rigel, in her native London. They will visit their daughter at her home in Scotland.

He doesn't know whether he will ever be host of another documentary or write another book, and he doesn't much seem to care.

"My life, our lives, have been dominated by my work for a very long time," he says in that familiar flat voice. "We're going to take things as they come."

It is Friday, two days after Newman turned 65, two days before his last mini-newscast Sunday night and four days before his last scheduled appearances on NBC. Those will be Tuesday, when Newman will be interviewed early in the morning on "The Today Show" and late at night on "The David Letterman Show."

In a way, those last appearances mark a fitting end to Newman's 35-year career at NBC. It seems, especially in recent years, that the network never really had a place for him.

He was shunted off to the odd hours of the schedule, doing those little headline summaries between primetime programs and occasionally pitching in with his usual aplomb whenever an emergency arose. The last time that happened was in March 1981, when he anchored NBC's coverage of the attempted assassination of President Reagan.

Even now, in the twilight, there are few signs of triumph in Newman's small, mostly bare office. It is not even on the same floor as the rest of the NBC national news team. He is two floors below, tucked in with the network's New York City news offices.

A few books are on the shelves: dictionaries, almanacs, encyclopedias, pronounciation guides. There are no copies of "Strictly Speaking" or "A Civil Tongue," his 1974 and 1976 best-sellers on use and misuse of English.

On the wall hangs a newspaper cartoon that declares Newman, rather than either Ford or Carter, the winner of the 1976 presidential campaign debate for which he served as host.

For all those viewers who suspected picture-tube distortion whenever his visage appeared, yes, Newman's head really does appear to be narrower at the top. Similarly, his torso seems to slope away from narrow shoulders.

He is not a physically imposing man. But Newman, whose foreign postings for NBC were London, Rome and Paris, is clearly urbane. Leaning back in his chair, with his suit jacket off, he looks at once dressed up and relaxed as only a city man can.

Open adoption still 'new' concept

Many seek records; Few want face-to-face meetings

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Open adoption is a relatively new concept. At Lutheran Social Services of Texas, Inc., written histories, records and photographs have been shared between biological parents and those who have adopted the child when requested for the past 10 years or so.

"But the actual concept of face-to-face meetings is very new," said Lael Cordes of LSST. "Some can handle the open face-to-face meetings and some can't."

With the passage of a state law called the Voluntary Registry Law, effective Jan. 1, Texas became one of the handful of states that allows adopted children and birth parents to find each other through an adoption agency. No information is provided unless all parties, including biological siblings, are 21 years old or older and all have registered to be contacted.

"That way, no one can be found if they don't want to be," Ms. Cordes said. "Biological mothers never forget, but some want to put the past behind them and go on."

Three factors helped uncover the secretiveness with which adoptions were shrouded, according to LSST's Anna Courtney.

One was the almost insatiable curiosity adopted children developed from not having questions answered. According to Ms. Cordes, "they're identity-related questions. Especially as a teenager, they are trying to put the pieces of a puzzle together, but they have the additional aspect of being adopted."

"Secondly, since the 70s, the infant adoptions have been on the decline," Ms. Courtney said. "With legalized abortions and changes in society so that it is acceptable to go to school with your baby, we had to come up with an alternative idea.

"The third reason is the birth parents, in the traditional adoption, were always excluded. It is always the adoptee and the adopted parents. We're just now acknowledging her grief and her thoughts of giving up a child she brought into the world."

"Any three-legged stool with a short leg is going to tip over," Ms. Cordes said. "It gives the birth mother a release when she knows her baby has been placed in a stable family — and then she can let go."

"It's not necessarily a life-long openness," Ms. Courtney said. "It's usually from 6 months to a year. If it goes beyond that, the adoptive parents wished for it to."

The birth mother as an uncaring woman has disappeared with the open adoption. So have fears that the woman will return in the darkness of the night to claim the adopted couple's bright ray of happiness. And for the birth mother, the ability to know her child will be taken care of and by whom is reassuring.

For the adopted child, the questions disappear.

"The pendulum was always way over here with the secrecy for so long — it was so secretive and the mothers must have all been bad girls to get in the position of giving up their children," said Brenda Munson, who with her husband Michael adopted a son, Brandon, and plan to adopt a daughter. "Then it swung way over here when all of the guilt about these women started catching up. I think it needs to reach a middle stage."

When LSST workers called her to say that Brandon's biological mother was requesting photographs of her child, her immediate response was, "Absolutely not."

"I can't believe how naive I was," she said. "If we'd had some kind of warning or realized what it meant to her. It was really no big deal — she just wanted to see pictures of her beautiful baby."

Most of the Munsons' friends who had adopted children advised them not to send her photos. The request had come during the finalization of the adoption.

"We were trying to bond with the child and we were feeling the strings pulling," she said. "We thought about it a long, long time. On the day we finalized the adoption, we did it. We knew she had no intent of complicating his life. That would've undone everything that went into her decision."

Brandon's biological mother wrote a letter to her son and to his adopted parents. In their letter, Mrs. Munson said the mother used a quote from a favorite book, "The Prophet," which she had borrowed from a LSST social worker.

"The quote was about your children are not your children. You can give them your love but not their thoughts. It was like we were two vessels that God had put here, one to bring the child in through and one to..." she paused, wiping her eyes. "So we sent her a copy of 'The Prophet' with the pictures. And we marked a quote about all the pain she has gone through."

When the Munsons moved to Midland from Denver, Colo., four years ago, they had been on adoption waiting lists for years. Everytime they would move, they'd have to get on another list. Before they moved to Midland at Thanksgiving three years ago, they called ahead to keep their place on the list. They were given Brandon the following April.

"Brandon was here waiting for us," she said. "It was meant to be. When you look back on your life, some things just click even though you didn't understand it then."

A file on adoption is being kept so that Brandon, now 3½, can look back and understand the decisions that were made. No more correspondence has been received or requested from Brandon's mother, but the Munsons know she will continue to be in contact with the adoption agency.

If Brandon chooses to locate his biological mother when he is old enough, the Munsons will support him. "You don't want him to suffer that rejection twice, but still, the child has the right to know," Ms. Munson said.

"We've got to keep in mind that he's adopted. We can give him everything — love, material things, a family base — but we did not give him our heritage — and he has a right to know his."

Although the Munsons don't see what purpose meeting Brandon's mother face-to-face would serve, they plan to go through the open adoption when they receive their daughter, already named Amanda.

Brandon, excited about having a little sister, already is writing thank you letters to Amanda's real mother. To him, according to his parents, everyone is "dopted."

"He says he was adopted and Amanda will be adopted and mom and dad adopted each other when we got married.

"We love these children so desperately," Ms. Munson said. "They fill a need in us that, biologically, we could not fill."

Michael and Brenda Munson adopted their son Brandon, 3½. Although they've never met his biological mother, correspondence between them will provide answers for his future questions.

Baby's 'best' was her desire

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

ODESSA — On a shelf in her small house, Cae Ramirez has a photo of her daughter in a pink baby dress. A black and white photo of herself in the same dress is in the frame next to it.

The dress was something Cae wanted to give her daughter. She also gave her more.

She gave her a home with two loving parents — something tiny Amy wouldn't have had if Cae had kept her.

"Me and my dad were real close," Cae, a 29-year-old Odessan, said. "I wanted her to grow up with a dad, too. You have to think about what's best for everyone else — but especially for the child."

Cae Ramirez

It was a difficult decision. There was pain and sadness. But finally there was joy.

When Cae, a divorced mother of two boys, found out she was pregnant, she didn't think about placing the child with an adoption agency. Because she was totally against abortion, it didn't leave her much choice.

"But that was one of my requirements," Cae said. "I had to know who she was going to. This way, I know that's she's alive and that she's taken care of. It really helps. To me, she's going to be independent and treated good. They care and everything.

"I feel good about it. I mean, it was hard. For the first couple of weeks after I had placed her (with an adopted family) and I'd hear a baby cry...it was hard."

"They are sensitive girls," said Anna Courtney of Lutheran Social Service of Texas, Inc. "They've really made a rational decision here — it's not an impulsive one."

"So many people ask how they can give their child up," LSST's Lael Cordes agreed. "Really, for them it's a much more loving choice, it's a more couragous choice."

"And it's more realistic," Ms. Courtney said.

"It's a nice memory," Cae said. "It's not that painful. But there are times that I see a little girl...and it's sad.

"I just wanted her to have everything that was possible to have. My oldest son is 9, and he knew what was going on," she said. "It's hard to tell your child that it's not because I don't love her and I don't want her. Then the boys will think, 'Hey, if I don't behave, she'll do it to me, too.'"

But her children were more understanding.

LSST gave Cae five case histories of families wanting to adopt. Genetic information, their age, how long they had been married, hobbies, dislikes, church preference, financial status and their physical appearance were included.

Seminar on adoption scheduled

From Staff Reports

The Council on Adoptable Children will present an all-day seminar on "Adoption, Finding Your Special Child," at the First United Methodist Church, 305 N. Baird, Feb. 11.

Luncheon speaker will be Barbara Tremitiere of Tressler Lutheran Home for Children in Pennsylvania. In addition to being director of adoption services at Tressler-Lutheran Service Associates, she is the mother of 15 children, 13 of whom are adopted.

Mrs. Tremitiere, advisor to Parents of Adopted Children Organization (PACO) and member of the National Association of Social Workers, received her masters degree in social work. She will speak on her own experiences in parenting special needs children and adoption in the '80s.

Also during the seminar, which will be from 8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m., five workshops dealing with different aspects of adoption will be held.

"Issues of Adopting Minority Children," will feature Edna Rono of Catholic Family Service, San Antonio, and Anne Thomas of Agape Services in Dallas. The two will talk about cultural adjustments, issues, challenges and experiences.

"Issues of Adopting Special Needs Children" will involve a panel of adoptees discussing personal experiences with adoption at an older age and filling emotional, mental and physical needs. They will be led by Beverly Hutchens from the Department of Human Resources in San Angelo and Pat Sims of Lutheran Social Service of Texas in Midland.

"The Basics of Adoption" will focus on the types of children available for adoption in the U.S. The process of adoption, including different requirements agencies may have, will be discussed by Mona McDonald of the Methodist Mission Home-Southwest Maternity Center in San Antonio, Marilyn Anderson from Edna Gladney-New Hope Agency in Fort Worth, and Mary Diltz from the Department of Human Resources in Midland.

"Support Systems Available for Helping Adoptive Parents Cope" will feature representatives of organizations explaining their programs. Registration may be done the morning of the seminar, but on-site registration will not include lunch or child care.

When Carla Rowell got off the plane at the San Antonio airport last Memorial Day weekend, a crowd of people surged around her.

As she headed for the baggage claim area, the crowd began clearing. A man was standing there with a child in his arms. Next to him, a woman stood with her hands on a carriage containing a small baby.

Carla was looking for a couple with three children.

"I looked at her for a long time," the 20-year-old said. "Her eyes were just looking hopefully at the crowd. And then, when our eyes met, I knew."

Carla Rowell

As a very happily adopted child, Carla had no intent of finding her real mother. Although she had known she was adopted for as long as she could remember, it was not the focal point of her life.

"Questions would pass through my mind like a book I had read, or a joke I'd heard or like an old movie I'd seen. But it wasn't something I dwelled on."

Her parents, who never hid the fact that she was adopted, answered all of her questions the best they could. She was given love and opportunities she knew she wouldn't have had without them.

"I really couldn't have been placed with a better family," she said. "I think parents that adopt have to go through so much. There is so much waiting, so much paper work and so much fear that the real mom will come back. It's like living in a shadow — thinking what if tomorrow, someone comes knocking at my door and wants to take my baby?

"I think they tend to care more," she said. "It's like saving every penny for something you want. You really take care of it when you have to work for it."

And although Carla could never think of another group as her family or love anyone as much as she loves them, a desire to know her biological background grew when she had her own baby.

"I felt so very close to her after they placed her in my arms," Carla said. "I knew I could never give her away after holding her. I knew I couldn't be that strong.

"It had to take a lot of guts and a lot of love. It must be so hard. After I became a mother and realized what the decision would be like, I just felt like it was something I had to do."

Reagan should 'commission' a few more issues

Probably the No. 1 accomplishment of the Reagan Administration — aside from inventing the word "misstatement" — has been the popularization of blue ribbon commissions that seek solutions to problems no politician in his right mind wants to address because they are too controversial.

Perhaps that's a bit harsh. The truth of the matter is all presidents have mastered the art. Otherwise, they would be back in Small Town USA instead of enjoying the fruits of the Oval Office. It is politics at its best.

The way the system works is simple. An issue comes up that demands immediate attention. The president (be it Reagan or any of his predecessors) says, "No way am I taking the heat on this one by myself," so he looks to Congress for help, a mistake in itself. Congress then divides along party lines and a great number of speeches are given on the subject, but no action taken.

Meanwhile, the situation worsens.

About the same time, an election approaches, leaving the president with no choice but to act. So he does. He names the bi-partisan commission, which is always stacked with "experts" who think the way he does and usually is headed by a famous person (thus, adding credibility). The president then goes on national TV to announce the formation of the commission and with great fanfare instructs the members to find workable solutions to the problem.

This, quite naturally, makes both Congress and the president very happy. Each gets to avoid making an unpopular decision. When the commission finally does make its recommendations, they can either jump on the bandwagon or express opposition. Either way, they avoid the heat.

So far, Reagan has used this system quite effectively. The first, and most famous, commission was the one designed to solve Social Security's money problems.

That was followed by Henry Kissinger's commission which was told to find a solution to Central America's woes.

Now, we're getting another one which will determine how the budget deficit can be reduced.

Obviously, the president is on to something here and I, for one, am impressed. In fact, I propose that he take it several steps further.

We need a special blue ribbon commission to study:

— Why congressmen, of all people, are allowed to grant pay increases to themselves when the rest of us would be laughed out of the office if we tried to do likewise.

— Why the president makes such a big deal out of news leaks when everyone knows he, like all of his predecessors, uses them to his own advantage.

— Why Republicans are fond of quoting John Kennedy while at the same time using Teddy Kennedy as their favorite whipping boy.

— Why some Democrats still view Teddy Kennedy as a savior when it was his snooty, stand-offish behavior that did so much harm to his party's re-election chances in 1980.

— Why political conventions overflow with red, white and blue placards, balloons and mini-American flags when politics is not what we should associate with patriotism and the American dream.

— Why some president, at a future press conference, won't respond to a question by saying, "Gosh fellas, I really don't know," when that obviously is the case.

— Why, if some president did give that answer, the rest of us would view it as a sign of weakness.

Program on cults presented

Wilshire Park Baptist Church, 801 S. Bentwood St., is presenting a special program on "cults" today at 6 p.m. Special speaker is Sheila Toney of Hurst.

Ms. Toney is an administrative assistant for the Cult Awareness Council, which identifies itself as a non-profit organization based in Texas which is affiliated with Citizens Freedom Foundation, Manacroix, N.Y.

Of her personal experience with The Way, International, Ms. Toney says, "The Way, International, took my money, time and energy. Only my family realized my personality and mind had also been taken. Cults disorient and uproot recruits and replace family ties with fervent allegiance to the leader and 'The Cause.' Mind control does exist."

Suicide ruled in oilman's death

DALLAS (AP) — A 33-year-old oilman jumped from his 24th-floor apartment, then tried to grasp the balcony with one hand before he fell screaming to his death as nearby office workers watched, police said.

Jake Louis Hamon III, an oil company executive and former part owner of the National Basketball Association's Dallas Mavericks, was killed instantly Friday when he hit the roof of a parking garage adjacent to the apartment building, police said.

The Dallas County medical examiner's office ruled the death a suicide caused by multiple injuries, field agent Judy Cook said.

Services were set for 4 p.m. Saturday at the Sparkman-Hillcrest Funeral Home in Dallas.

Decision to give up baby was 'best for everyone'

"I let Joey help pick," Cae said of her eldest son. "This couple didn't have any kids and they weren't real well-to-do. Money's important, but I don't think it's that important. Her (Amy's adopted mother) physical description sounded a lot like mine. She was just a little younger than me and she used to be a nurse."

Joey thought it was a good deal "because if she gets sick, they'll know what to do."

She was with her baby for three days after delivery. She breast fed her — against the advise of several of the nurses.

"They knew she was going to be adopted," Cae said. "But it was really important to me. It was because I love her. I want her to have this. This is something that only we will share."

Pictures were taken of Cae and her family before they left the hospital. The baby was dressed in going away clothes Joey and J.C., his four-year-old brother, had picked out. A blanket Cae had made during her pregnancy was wrapped around her.

The actual face-to-face meeting with the adopted parents took place at a Lutheran church in Midland. Cae met with the parents first, and then the sleeping baby was brought in. The couple gave Cae a gold bracelet and a special card. She handed the infant, still asleep, over to her adopted mother and left.

A journal which had been kept by Cae, who writes poetry, throughout her pregnancy already had been sent to the adopted parents. Some pages were filled with doubts about giving her up. Others were full of the knowledge Cae was doing the right thing for her baby.

"If I feel something, I write it and send it to them," she said.

"It's for Amy, but it's for them, too. I think the journal helps them know me and know that I won't come steal her away in the night."

Someday, the baby will grow up and read those tear-stained pages and know the woman who wrote them loves her. More importantly, she'll understand the situation which has brought so much happiness to her adopted parents, whom Cae admires.

In turn, the couple sends photos and letters to Cae about her daughter.

"But in all of the pictures they sent, she wasn't smiling," Cae said. "I have dimples and I wanted to know if she did, too. I don't know, it just seemed important."

The next time she saw Amy and her parents was at Easter. The baby was dressed in yellow. And she had dimples.

"They told me she liked to sing and I got to see how they acted with her."

The next meeting was with Amy, her biological mother and her adopted mother. The trio went to lunch.

"We just talked and got to know each other. We didn't even talk that much about Amy. But I got to watch her and see if she did anything like the boys did.

"She was so pretty," Cae said. "The whole time I was pregnant, I didn't call her anything but 'my little angel.' Then I found out her adopted mother collects angels. That was neat, because it was like I was giving her the most special one."

Birth of her own child inspired woman's search

Her parents didn't think it was a good idea. "My mother, especially, just felt like I should have left the door closed. I tried to explain it to my parents as much as I can. I don't love them any less and I don't love her anymore. They are the only parents I've ever known. And I didn't search because I was unhappy.

"My biological mom said 'please tell your adopted parents that in no way am I trying to take their place. I could never do it. There are parts I've missed out on, like your toddling years, holding you when you're hurt, your first step, first teeth, the first time you rode your bicycle.'"

And after she contacted the Lutheran Social Services of Texas, Inc., the adoption agency through which she was placed, LSST workers counseled her about her decision to find her biological mother.

"I expected absolutely nothing," Carla said. "I expected total rejection, that she'd be married and have a family. So many people — they expect a movie star or a high-fashion model. They don't realize they're ordinary people.

"If she spit in my face, I'd still respect her for what she did. I mean, I've lived without her for 20 years, I can continue to do so. But I just felt like it was something I needed to do — to see where I came from and what she was like."

LSST case workers contacted her biological mother to tell her Carla wanted to meet her. Her excited response was, "I've been waiting 20 years for this call."

Both parties signed release forms and phone numbers and all other information was released from LSST. The two contacted each other and arranged for Carla to fly in.

"It was really weird," Carla said. "I dreamed that I found her and it was in an airport. I always knew I could pick her out in a crowd."

The two held hands and cried at the airport and all the way to the car. The night was spent catching up on each other's lives until 4 a.m.

Because many physical and personality traits are similar between the two, Carla said it was more like meeting an old friend.

"We both felt like we just hadn't seen a best friend for a long time. It was like I had known her all of my life but we'd just gotten lost along the tracks somewhere. We'd just misplaced each other and had to catch up."

Her mother's story was a familiar one. Carla's father was from a prominent family who wanted the situation hushed up. Her mother's parents felt it was the only choice she had.

"What could I do?" Carla said her biological mother told her. "It was either that or find a new home. I was pregnant and in high school. I knew there was someone who could take better care of you than I could. I did it in your best interests."

"I really respect her a lot for that," Carla said. "And at least she cared something about herself, too. She knew she couldn't get an education and better herself the other way."

Today, the two chat on the phone like friends — but Carla, her husband and daughter still consider her adopted parents as parents.

"I was so afraid they would think that I didn't love them and that they'd be hurt," Carla said. "I wasn't doing it because I missed out on something. They've made no mistakes raising me. They're my parents. And she's my friend."

Longtime police officers retiring

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

"He's the one who hugs all the women," the captain said of the sergeant. He chuckled. "I don't get to."

"Well, you would if you treated them right," the sergeant replied and smiled.

"Well, I try to."

The amiable fellows, Midland Police Traffic Sgt. O.W. "Preacher" Roberts and Patrol Capt. Victor A. "Kirk" Kuykendall, have far more in common than being senior citizens who finally are retiring their badges and removing themselves from the police force.

They've both worked on sheep ranches, fought a war, been married for ages, fell into police work after the war and are happy in their jobs, which, all told, they have been into for 67 years.

Looking forward to their retirement from a combined 67 years with the Midland Police Department are Capt. Victor A. 'Kirk' Kuykendall, left, and Sgt. O.W. 'Preacher' Roberts.

"YOU CAN'T HARDLY stay with the same thing that long and not like it," said Kuykendall, patrol captain who, at 62, has put in 30 years with the Midland Police Department. Roberts, 67, has been on the police force 37 years. And both men will be honored upon their retirement in a public reception from 9 a.m. to noon Tuesday in the Midland Public Safety Building, 404 E. Texas Ave.

Roberts, whose beat has been downtown Midland and Midland High School, "walked them (students) across the street for a 100 years," said Kuykendall.

"Pretty close to 30," said Roberts.

Roberts, who in 1946 joined the police force "fresh out of the Army," was the walking-beat mentor for Police Chief Wayne Gideon, Major Sid Corley, retired Chief Harold Wallace, Detective Lt. Earl Luckey, Communications Lt. Jim Colburn and, among others, Kuykendall himself.

"He had me for a month," said the captain, "and that's all I wanted. He told me how to take care of swollen feet" from walking the beat all day: "Soak them four times — twice in cold water and twice in hot water. In the summertime, it was a son of a gun."

Many of those who walked the beat for "Preacher" Roberts climbed high up the corporate ladder. Others fell, and that's one reason why one of Midland's favorite policeman elected to stay on the beat.

"When you go up, you go out," he laughed. "See how many guys are gone now."

THROUGHOUT the years, Roberts has been presented many public-service awards — from the Golden Deed to Policeman of the Year.

"Maybe that was 'Rookie of the Year,'" the captain smiled. "I've been trying to get that for 30 years."

Roberts and Kuydendall are like good-natured brothers.

"Oh, we get along swell," said the sergeant. "If everybody got along as swell as we do, this would be a nice police department."

Roberts, who grew up in Midland, got his "Preacher" nickname from his father, a Pentecostal Holiness minister.

"I played the Victrola for the music for old silent pictures in the Idle-hour Theater," Roberts recalled of his youth. Later, he was fry cook and waiter for the old Post Office Cafe off South Main Street, and for a while worked at the old bombardier base in Midland. Then, for just 16 days, he toiled on a sheep ranch for Clarence Scharbauer Sr. "That was hard work, dirty, hot."

He left ranching and went to war.

"They were going to draft me, but I volunteered."

In World War II, Roberts served in Europe with the U.S. Army's 13th Armored Division. "They put me to cooking in the Army," he said. "I was with Blood 'n' Guts (Gen. George Patton) for awhile."

WHEN THE WAR was over, he returned to Midland.

"I wasn't really ready to come to work," he said, but he did. In 1946, he became the 12th man on the police force, which then was headed by Chief Jack Ellington. He earned $150 a month.

Kuykendall has a similar tale. In his youth, he lived along the Llano River, sheared sheep and goats, farmed and "did a little bit of everything." When the war came, he enlisted before he was drafted, served with the U.S. Army Air Corps in Africa and Italy.

"I was a cook," said Kuykendall. "I was a wreck-truck driver — loaded bombs (on B-24 and B-26 aircraft) with a 10-ton wrecker."

"Our lives have been pretty close to the same," he noted.

After the war, Kuykendall moved to Midland, drove a maintainer for Midland County, and later worked on a cattle ranch near Ozona and then went into the painting business in Ozona and Midland.

He got into police work in 1953.

"Work got slow," Kuykendall said, "and a night policeman, Hoss Grayson, talked me into coming down here. We were short of money."

He started out making $185 a month on a 32-man force. "I put my wife (Aloise) to work, so we made it, barely."

"How long you been married?" Roberts asked Kuykendall.

"'Preacher,' I've been married all my life. It takes a good woman to put up with that."

"You better believe it," said Roberts, who has been married 44 years to his wife, Cleo.

As in marriage, their lives on the police force mostly have been pleasant.

"We were very careful," Roberts said.

"A few of them didn't like us," noted Kuykendall. "It was usually those old thugs around here who don't think too much of me."

The retiring officers have had good lives on the force.

"Oh," Kuykendall said of police work, "I've enjoyed it. It's been good to both of us."

"They couldn't be better," said the sergeant. "The general public has been good to work with."

"If they hadn't been," said the captain, "we'd be gone."

Plan could benefit Midland schools

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Midland Independent School District would gain state funds under a school finance plan proposed by Comptroller Bob Bullock, according to an analysis of the plan released by Bullock's office.

Bullock contends his proposal would provide aid on a more equitable basis "without adding a single red penny in taxes."

A number of urban districts would lose funds under the plan.

"Some people have already criticized this plan because they think it will cost them money," Bullock noted. "These same people will admit Texas is threatened with a major lawsuit challenging our state education aid system, and if we don't change it some judge will step in and do it for us.

"I'd rather pay state education dollars to a teacher in a classroom than a lawyer in a court," Bullock said.

Based on current spending, MISD would receive $147,112 more, or $9 per student. If the legislature increased funding by $200 million, Midland would gain $1,179,633, or $73 per pupil.

An increase of $1 billion in funding would mean an additional $5,298,780 to the district, or $326 per pupil.

"If the legislature decides to devote more money to education, then this plan is flexible enough to put state dollars — no matter how many dollars we're talking about — where the students are and where the need is greatest," Bullock said.

Democrats pick female chairman

Janet Massey has politics in her 'blood'

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

She flips open the black vinyl notebook and looks at the words penciled on the yellowing sheets decades ago. It gives her inspiration for the job she now is to do.

Janet Massey

Janet Massey is the first woman to be selected Midland County's Democratic chairman. The woman who also works at the Midland Oil Scouts office has had her finger in Democratic politics since the early '60s. But her inclination toward the political arena, she claims, "is in my blood."

Turning the pages of yellowed handwriting, she stops at one. It's an invitation from "Pa" Ferguson to his inauguration as governor. The notebook belongs to Mrs. Massey's grandfather who, as a country doctor in Lometa, was a member of the school board and dabbled in politics.

Mrs. Massey grew up in Mullin, married and moved to Midland in 1955. In the early '60s, she joined the League of Women Voters and then branched out.

She's been a charter member of St. Paul Methodist Church and Ladies Auxiliary to VFW Post 4149, Altrusa Club, American Legion Auxiliary, Ladies Fraternal Order of Eagles and, recently, the Permian Basin Chapter of the Texas Women's Political Caucus.

But her first stop outside the League of Women Voters was the Democratic Women's Club. It wasn't solely because her parents were Democrats. "I did some studying of both parties. I decided I had to be a Democrat because of my upbringing, my caring for other people, for the plight of poor people.

"I'd like to be against welfare, too, but there are so many people starving."

Her studying showed her "the Democratic Party is more responsive to the needs of the people, and has been down through the years."

In 1968, Mrs. Massey attended the National Democratic Convention in Chicago and saw an eyeful. "You didn't know who to trust: the police or the hippies."

But as a member of a group attempting to get a controversial unit rule repealed, Mrs. Massey also saw what persistence can do at a large gathering: they succeeded.

Through the years, she's made friends with many Democrats throughout Texas, including state chairman Bob Slagle, and she's hoping that may help in her new position.

Mrs. Massey is replacing Darrell Smith, who had to bow out after he took the job as U.S. magistrate. A special meeting was held to find a replacement, and Mrs. Massey stepped out as a surprise candidate. She will fill in until the regular election is held in May, and then her name will be on the ballot.

The opening came at the right time in her life. "After losing my husband (Bobby) in September, I had a void that this has helped fill. My children (one daughter, two sons) are grown. I feel like I have the time over and above my job to give."

Emphasizing her belief in a two-party system, Mrs. Massey already has some plans under way to make it "socially acceptable to be a Democrat in Midland," a Republican oasis in West Texas.

These plans include:

—Getting Democrats deputized to go out and register people to vote.

—Finding a building and opening a local headquarters.

—Asking other local Democratic organizations, such as the blacks and Mexican-Americans, to send non-voting representatives to the county executive committee meeting. "We plan to include all of them in party business."

—Setting up an April workshop, sponsored by the State Democratic Executive Committee, to train local party members on voter registration, phone banks and communications.

And Mrs. Massey is toying with the idea of a weekly dutch-treat luncheon where any Democrat can stop by and discuss issues while meeting other people.

Considering the dominance of the Republican Party here, Mrs. Massey knows she has a difficult job in building the Democratic Party. "We've got room for improvement. As a party we're growing. I'm seeing some interest from college professors that we hadn't seen before."

Piling all her plans together, Mrs. Massey hopes to reach her ultimate goal: "To show it can be done when you have a good Democratic group."

YMCA to emphasize weight loss in February

From Staff Reports

The Midland YMCA has designated February as Weight Loss Month in conjunction with the National Wellness Pilot Program.

A new weight loss program entitled "Live It — Don't Diet," includes nutrition, exercise and behavior modification. Weighing in and self-hypnosis are a part of the program but are not required.

The YMCA is encouraging healthy weight loss through support groups, mental awareness and physical activity. By combining these factors, participants should feel more energetic while they count calories.

YMCA professionals are encouraging everyone to think thin during February and begin programs that are designed to keep you thin for life.

For more information on weight loss, exercise or nutrition programs, call the Central Y at 682-2551, or the Alamo Y at 694-2528.

"Daniel," "Testament" and "Terms of Endearment" are movies which have been shown in all major cities but Midland. Why is it taking so long to get them here? Who is responsible for getting movies to Midland? And does that individual have a say on what movies do and do not play here? — Julia Penn

ANSWER: The problem with showing "Terms of Endearment" in Midland before now was due at first to the film company, which failed to supply sufficient films for distribution, according to Jaeho Yi, manager of UA Cine IV. In the meantime, other movies were booked. He says "Terms of Endearment" will open Feb. 17 at UA Cine IV.

Weldon Givens, manager of Midland Park Mall Cinemas, says that movies shown in Midland are arranged by the Dallas Booking Department for General Cinemas and United Artists. The only theater in Midland selecting and arranging for the movies it will show is the Ritz.

Both Givens and Yi said they are not familiar with the other two movies you mention and do not know if they will be showing in Midland.

My husband and I would like to change the entire name of my son from my previous marriage. My son is now 3 years old. Can I legally do this? — J.L.

ANSWER: No, you cannot do this yourself until you have obtained agreement from the child's father, says the State Bar of Texas.

The courts have held that a father from a first marriage has a legally protectible interest in his children's names.

Therefore, unless you have terminated the rights of the child's father, he must join in the application or appear at the hearing. The district court of the county where you and your son live has jurisdiction over changes of name.

Can a landlord withhold my property until I come up with the money I owe for the rent? — E.T.

ANSWER: Texas law allows your landlord a lien against your non-exempt property for nonpayment of rent, says the State Bar of Texas.

If you have a written lease agreement in which the contractual lien is underlined or printed in conspicuous bold type, the landlord may seize your non-exempt property without any notice or court hearing.

Your exempt property, which your landlord may not seize, includes all your wearing apparel, professional or trade tools, family library, portraits and pictures, one couch, two living room chairs, dining table and chairs, all beds and bedding, all kitchen furniture and utensils, all food, all medical supplies, all goods pledged as collateral and all agricultural implements.

If you learn that your landlord is going to try to seize any of your property, with or without court action, you should consult a lawyer for advice on protection of your rights.

Could you find out if there is any organization in Midland needing volunteer workers to help with animals? I understand the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals has a closed membership. If this is true, I would like to know why. — R.C.

ANSWER: Dalton Byerly, director of the Midland Animal Control Center, says there is no active humane organization for animals in Midland at the present time. There was at one time a Permian Basin Humane Society which operated out of Odessa, but this group no longer exists, he says.

Byerly did say that the Animal Control Center currently is organizing a volunteer auxiliary for its annex (cats) and persons wishing to become part of this volunteer group may call 683-2028. He also points out the Midland SPCA is very active in the financial support of programs at the Animal Control Center and legislative support.

Jeanette Probandt, president of the Midland SPCA, says the Midland group does not have a closed membership as such. It operates through financial contributions from interested persons, assisting financially the Animal Control Center.

I heard on the radio not too long ago about a new medicine approved by the Federal Drug Administration for people trying to stop smoking. I believe this drug is available only by prescription. Can you find out anything about it and if it is being used by Midland doctors? — S.S.

ANSWER: Dr. T.A. Reddy, Midland physician, says that the newly approved prescription drug you mention is not available yet in Midland, but may be in the near future.

Planning deductions

This is the second in a series of "tax tips" articles provided by the Permian Basin Chapter of the Texas Society of Certified Public Accountants.

Q. I can't afford to invest in rental property, but I want to save some tax money. What can I do?

A. One of the best tax breaks around is the Individual Retirement Account (IRA). These allow you to reduce your taxable income substantially while earning tax free interest. This is a double benefit.

Anyone can have an IRA regardless of other pension coverage. Married people can invest in two IRAs even if one spouse is unemployed or works only parttime. A married couple in which only one spouse works may invest up to $2,250 in an IRA. If both spouses work the formula is the lesser of the income earned per individual or up to $2,000 per spouse.

Q. I am a participant in a corporate profit-sharing plan that is being terminated. If I invest the distribution in another retirement plan, will I still have to pay tax on it in the current year?

A. If you invest or "rollover" your distribution into another qualified retirement plan or an IRA within 60 days after receipt, no tax is due until you begin withdrawals from the new plan. If you receive distribution payments in installments and all installments are received in the same tax year after the plan is terminated, the 60 day rule begins on the day you receive the last payment. You should remember that the portion of the distribution that represents your own contributions cannot be rolled over into another qualified plan, unless these were "accumulated deductible employee contributions." Accumulated deductible employee contributions are those which you may have invested in your firm's retirement plan.

Q. I am retiring this year and will be receiving a lump-sum distribution from my company's retirement plan. Contributions cover a 20-year period. Is the entire amount subject to tax at regular rates?

A. The portion of your lump-sum distribution that represents contributions made before 1974 is taxed at the long-term capital gain rate unless you elect to have it all treated as ordinary income.

The number of years during which you were an active participant before 1974 divided by the total number of years of participation is applied to the total distribution to determine the amount eligible for capital gain treatment. Your total income tax in the year of distribution may also be reduced by using the regular five-year income averaging method.

A third method of reducing your tax liability on the year of distribution, if eligible, is use of the 10-year forward averaging method on the ordinary income portion of the distribution. If you qualify to use this method (consult the instructions on Form 4972), the distribution would be taxed as if included in income in equal amounts over a 10-year period. Tax would be figured separately on this amount by using the single individual tax rates, then added to the tax computed on all other income for the year of distribution only.

These and other tax questions will be answered during the Taxpayers Education Program to be held Saturday, Feb. 11, at 9 a.m. at Midland College in the Allison Fine Arts Building. Members of the Permian Basin Chapter of Certified Public Accountants will help individuals who plan to complete their own tax returns for 1983. Program content will concentrate on questions relating to the 1040 and 1040A tax returns. To register for the course, send $1 and your name and address to the Permian Basin Taxpayer Education, % Donald S. Johnson & Co., Inc., Midland, Texas 79701. Pre-registration is encouraged, but walk-in registration will be accepted.

Parkview seeks blood donors in employee contest

Employees at Parkview Hospital are competing for blood through a contest arranged to increase the supply available from United Blood Services in San Angelo.

Hospital officials expect they will need an 11 percent increase this year from that needed in 1983.

Each employee will be awarded a point for every donor they recruit for the blood drive Feb. 6. At the end of the day, the employee with the most points will win a dinner for two at Shenanigan's Restaurant.

"We have decided this would be the most effective way to increase blood donations," Parkview Administrator Richard Liley said. "From a positive campaign within the hospital, our employees will create a stronger awareness in the community of the vast need for blood donations."

According to Denise Kemp, Parkview laboratory manager, barring emergencies, needs could be met if each employee recruits four donors. "This is a small number when you consider that each donation can help five or six patients," she said.

The public is invited to participate in the drive from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Feb. 6, at the hospital, 3201 Sage. Advanced appointments are suggested.

"We need the help of all concerned citizens of Midland and the surrounding area," Ms. Kemp said. "We hope no one will wait for a family emergency to happen where blood is needed and can't be given for lack of a proper blood supply at the Community Blood Center.

"We want the public to feel secure in emergency situations and their donating before the need arises is the only way to assure this."

Honor Roll Report

MIDLAND IS NOW 99 YEARS OLD. Historians tell us that a few years prior to 1880, Lum Medlin, a lone hunter, made what was later to become Midland his home. Researchers studying this area tell us that Lum was one of the first white men to settle in this area. Early in 1880, R. N. Garrett arrived here with a flock of sheep being driven to market. Like many of those who followed, Garrett took an immediate liking to the surroundings and settled here permanently. Shortly thereafter, his California family joined him.

In those early days the railroad people dropped off a box car to service the growing community as depot, post office and general store. On February 2, 1885 Midland County was established; 26 days later Midland was designated a city.

The old, middle-aged and young enterprises of Midland have contributed immeasurably to the progress, pride and prosperity of our city. You will be interested in reading this list of leading firms and organizations whose names have been arranged by the number of years they have served Midlanders and other West Texas residents.

"It's good to have a place where you really like to live."

Debbie Allen talks about living at The Clusters:

"There's a lot of activity around here. Like this aerobics class.

"I can swim, play tennis, aerobics, jog. I can stay in good physical shape just living at my own house.

"I've lived here 8 months and I've been an apartment dweller for several years. I looked at several other complexes, but they were all the same...just four walls, a bathroom and a kitchen. This one is quite different. It has all the other luxuries."

No other Midland apartment community combines a multitude of activities with truly luxurious living. Featuring your choice of decorator wall coverings, side-by-side icemaker refrigerators, built-in micro-waves, ceiling fans, dishwashers, washers and dryers, trash compactors, mini-blinds and French doors to patios/balconies.

Come and visit and you'll see why Debbie Allen says, "I would really hate to move from here...I love it."

The Clusters. Midland's finest adult community. Special pricing now available.

"WE WANTED A QUALITY LIFESTYLE, NOT GIMMICKS AND GIVEAWAYS..."

"...That's why, when John and I were transferred to Midland, we chose to live at Oakridge Apartments. Sure, we passed up a few gimmicks and giveaways offered by the other communities. But what we got instead is an apartment community superior to anything else we saw. New on the market this year, Oakridge Apartments are bright and beautiful with sparkling new amenities and lots of extras. But more than that, Oakridge is a real quality neighborhood. The people out here are just great, and the management team is the best we've ever had."

1-, 2- and 2-bedroom studio apartment homes are available now. Take Loop 250 to N. Holiday Hill Road and look for the giant American flag.

Nothing is quite as endearing to a doting mother as a room full of pre-school children whose eyes and ears are intent on a storyteller. Anytime young children are together and quiet, participating in the same activity at the same time, something special is happening.

A story time is such a special event. It gives children a chance to interact with others the same age. Their attention is focused on an adult other than the parent. They use their imaginations to picture the story in their heads rather than see the images on a screen.

Midland's pre-school children are offered several of these magical story times. Groups meet weekly or monthly for half-hour-, one hour- or hour-and-a-half- spans.

FIRST SATURDAY
Museum of the Southwest

Organized in October, 1983, the Museum of the Southwest's First Saturday program offers children ages 4-6 stories and hands-on learning activities.

Anne Sherburn, development and public relations officer for the Museum, said the program was started, "originally because the Museum of the Southwest did not have anything for younger children — nothing for preschoolers. A lot of people asked for it, and (through the program) we are really addressing an audience we had been neglecting."

Allene Kleweno, formerly a children's librarian in Albuquerque, N.M. and now a professional storyteller, begins each First Saturday with a story, Ms. Sherburn said, and each story is on a different topic.

The story is "followed up with a studio art project, a hands-on experience where the children can express themselves" about how they feel about the story, she said.

Dorothy St. Germain, teacher of crafts workshops and participant in many crafts shows, leads the children in the crafts projects, which are "oriented to the book, to the story, to the illustrations in the story," said Ms. Sherburn.

Although First Saturday is scheduled to end this school year's calendar of programs with the April session, Ms. Sherburn said the group has been so well received that plans for additional sessions on weekdays next fall are being discussed.

"In the summer we'll be on a different schedule," she said.

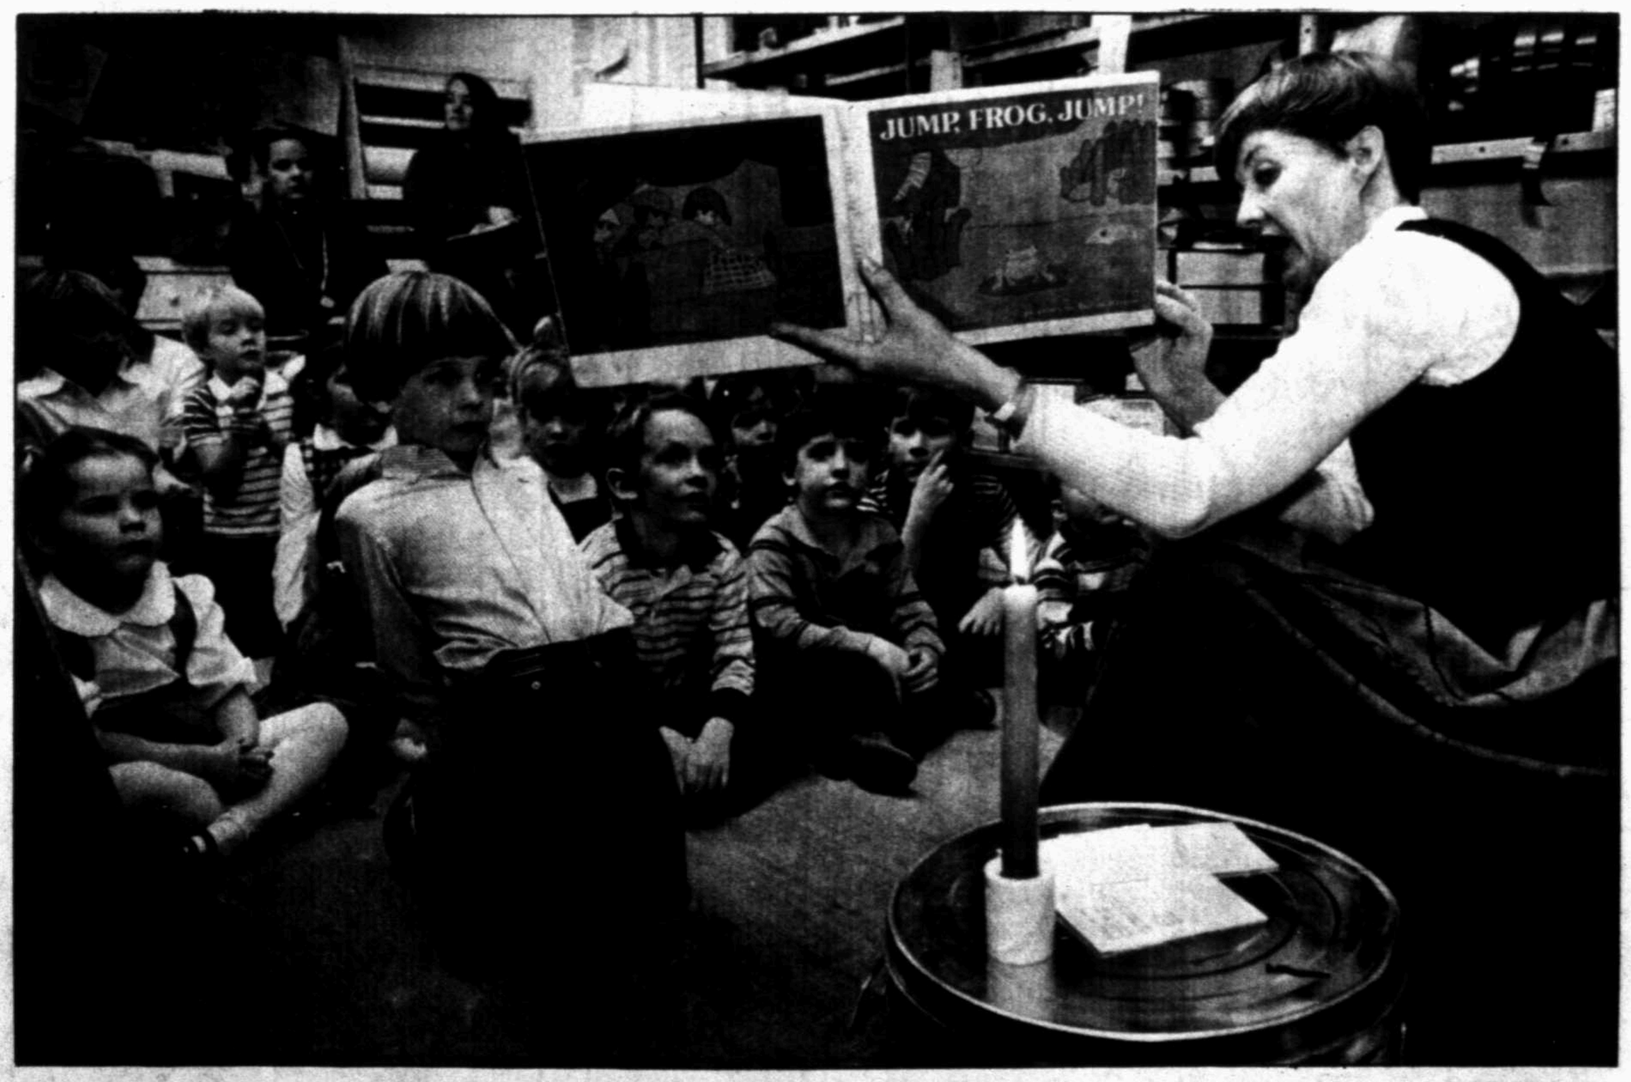

First Saturday for February will feature Mother Goose and Humpty Dumpty as a craft. March's program will be about colors, with craft rainbow puppets. April's First Saturday will feature Spring with eggshell butterflies.

First Saturday is presented from 10:30 a.m.-noon, the first Saturday of each month at the Museum of the Southwest. The group is limited to 20 children ages 4-6. Registrations: The Museum, 683-2882.

pre-school story times, Story Hour, sponsored by Midland Junior Woman's Club, is presented at the Midland County Public Library. The program was organized about 20 years ago by the Junior League of Midland, according to Rebecca Turner, Junior Woman's Club publicity chairman and once-a-month leader of Story Hour.

Junior Woman's Club has presented Story Hour for eight or nine years, said Terry Brinlee, assistant Story Hour leader — "It's our baby, we just love it."

Story Hour is from 10-11 a.m. each Tuesday during the school year in the children's department of the library and is open to children ages 3-5. The children are treated not only to stories, but also to movies, songs, games and safety tips. The tips are presented through Georgie, a fuzzy, stuffed bear who attends Story Hour each week and "whispers" safety tips into the ear of an adult volunteer who shares the tip with the children.

Story Hour is often attended by special guests, such as doctors, dentists, even football players and cheerleaders, who tell the children about what they do. Jingles the Clown and Raggedy Ann also attend regularly.

The purpose of Story Hour is to teach the children about the library and "to learn to like books and stories," said Mrs. Brinlee.

The adult volunteers are so enthusiastic about the program "some workers give up their Mothers' Day Out to come and work at Story Hour because they think it is so worthwhile," said Mrs. Turner. "We try to teach the children the fun of learning, of reading, of listening."

Although Story Hour is sometimes attended by as many as 225 children, Mrs. Turner said, the average group is 170-180 children. The number of children who may attend the program is not limited, but groups of seven or more are asked to make reservations. Revervations: 683-2708.

STORY TIME
Oak Leaf Bookstore

Since September 1983, children ages 4-9 have gathered each month at Oak Leaf Bookstore in Oak Ridge Square for Story Time.

Presented by Allene Kleweno, who also is the storyteller for the Museum of the Southwest's First Saturday program, Story Time is more than just stories. The children also participate in songs, activities and puppets (Mr. Whiskers the Walrus, Freddie the Frog, Alex the Alligator and Miss Mousie).

"Many of the story times I do are themed, but not always," said Mrs. Kleweno. "I've been doing story time programs for over 10 years now so I've got quite a repertoire I can draw on. But I'm always looking for new ones."

In addition to books, Mrs. Kleweno often uses flannel board stories and other aids to present her stories to the children. "Sometimes I tell the story without the book," she said.

Mrs. Kleweno said the average size of the group of children is 15-20, but it is not limited.

Story Hour is offered from 3:30-4 p.m. the fourth Wednesday of each month. The last session for this school year will be in March.

CHICKADEE CORNER
Midland County Public Library

With its first session in December, 1983, Chickadee Corner at Midland Public Library became Midland's newest story time for pre-school children. "We had many requests for a small story hour and we thought we would try it," said Joan Threlfall, children's librarian and storyteller for the group. "I think it's going to grow."

Mrs. Threlfall said the sessions are not themed, "but we try to have some learning experience with the stories."

Limited to 12 children ages 3-5 per session, Chickadee Corner is presented 10-10:30 a.m. each Thursday and Friday in the children's department of the public library. The same program is presented both days.

Because the library offers other progams during the summer for school-age children, Chickadee Corner is only offered during the school months. Reservations: 683-2708.

Have you heard...?

By MARILYN McKNIGHT HARRISON

Spending the Christmas holidays in London, Joanne and Harvey Langston and their son Richard, a student at UT-Austin had a memorable experience. They chose to live as the Londoners do, renting a flat for their month's stay and eating many of their meals in, as Joanne found the British way of grocery shopping and food preparation such fun. She made the rounds of the nearby deli, the green grocer in the alley and Harrods food halls to make her selections.

Their flat between Harrods and Hyde Park was perfectly located and gave them easy access to the theatre, where they saw many of the current hit plays, and the shopping, which Joanne thoroughly enjoyed. Christie's Auctions, Portobello Road and the London Silver Vaults were among her favorite haunts. While browsing at the later, she was the subject of an interview by BBC television.

The Langston family had the pleasure of dining with Midlanders Eila and Paul Noel and Fran and Gene Schutte on Christmas Day at the Inn on the Park and entertaining them at their flat with sherry and Christmas pudding.

Taking time out from city life, the Langstons enjoyed a four-day excursion into the English countryside, with overnight stays at Bath, location of the famous Roman baths, and the village of Broadway in Shakespeare country.

The Langstons were joined by longtime friends Virginia and Bob Gill of Austin, Minnesota, for part of their holiday.

THOSE OF US who are permanent residents of Midland face the sad reality of seeing many friends come and go, but occasionally they return for a visit. Somehow this helps ease the pain of the mass exodus.

Within a week's time recently I got to see two dear friends who were back in the Tall City for quick visits. Wanda (Mrs. Dick) Berry, now of Carrollton, was here to visit Dick's parents, Neta and Lawrence Berry, while en route to Texas Tech with daughter Allison. A small group enjoyed an impromptu "koffee klatsch" at Cathy (Mrs. Dick) Stump's home, where we caught up on each other's family news.

Now a consulting geologist, Dick was with Skelly Oil when the family lived in Midland.

Carol (Mrs. Jay) Stiles and children Kip and Katie were guests of Patsy Hinchey, Laura and Doug while Jay was in town on business. We burned the midnight oil listening to Carol describe life in the Ozarks and their experiences as resort owners and operators. They now live near Flippin, Arkansas.

CHRISTMAS IN GERMANY was a delightful experience for Donna and John Yuronka. Accompanied by their daughter and son-in-law, Ann and Jay Hollingswroth of Dallas, they flew over to be with their younger daughter Sarah. She is a foreign exchange student at Heiligenhaus, a Dusseldorf suburb, this school year.

After spending the holidays in the German Alps at the resort town of Berchtesgaden, the rest of the family returned stateside, and Donna remained with Sarah while she underwent an appendectomy.

Donna reports that Sarah had a good recovery and is thoroughly enjoying her year in Germany. She will soon join another German family (her eleven-month stay is divided between three families), and is looking forward to a two-week trip to Greece with them in April.

En route home Donna enjoyed a weekend visit with a cousin at the U.S. Embassy in Paris.

BLUE BALLOONS added a festive touch to the grandmother shower which recently honored Carol (Mrs. Gary) Hall. Held in the home of Monta Jo (Mrs. Ted) Johnson, the party was co-hosted by Marian (Mrs. Charles N.) Reeder, Susan (Mrs. Russ) Hall and Maggie Artley.

Carol and Gary made a quick trip to Denver to deliver the shower gifts and make the acquaintance of their first grandchild, Nathan Hall Billingsley, upon his dismissal from the hospital January 18. The little boy was born December 21 to the Halls' daughter and son-in-law, Becky and Cary Billingsley, former Midlanders, and he is reported doing fine now.

THE END OF 1983 was a busy and exciting time for Margaret and Marshall E. Surratt. Their son Marshall N. Surratt and the former Dorothy Kuhn of Irving were married December 3 in the First Baptist Church of Elgin and are at home in Frisco.

Marshall is a reporter for the Plano Daily Star-Courier. He succeeds Larry Budd, who is now a staff writer for the Midland Reporter-Telegram. The bride is a physicist with Texas Instruments.

Margaret and Marshall also have a new grandchild. Their daughter Jean and her husband John Humphreys of Waco are the parents of a daughter Lauren Ann, born November 13. John is with Bankers Life Company.

Autistic children suffer from 'sensory malfunction'

Hearst Feature Service

They are usually cherubic children, perfect in every outward respect except for that faraway look in their eyes that gives little hint of the private world into which they retreat.

Behaviorally, they aren't the little angels their physical appearances suggest. Many are hyperactive; many engage in "stims," self-stimulation which only makes sense to them, such as spinning objects or rocking for hours on end. Many are nonverbal. Most avoid eye contact; most can't stand to be touched; most can't tolerate even minute changes in anything familiar.

These children are autistic, and their retreat into a world within themselves is perplexing. Basic questions, such as why and how autism occurs, are still unanswered, although theories abound.

The National Society for Autistic Children explains autism as a "severely incapacitating lifelong developmental disability."

The term autism, which comes from the Greek word "autos" meaning "self," was coined by Dr. Leo Kanner of John Hopkins University in 1943. Although now disproven, his original theory was that cold, unloving "refrigerator parents" accounted for the autistic child's withdrawal into himself.

Today, the most popular theory attributes autistic charcteristics to a sensory malfunction. Theorists believe autistics do not see or hear as normal people do, that the sensory organs or parts of the brain responsible for sensory information do not work properly.

Current biomedical experiments use megavitamins and a new drug called fenfluarmine, which helps lower serotonin levels in the brain, but so far the evidence shows they work only in some cases and not across the board.

New hope lies, however, in research being done in this biomedical area to find a chemical that could possibly eliminate autism altogether.

Satellites may help lost drivers

Associated Press

Someday a new network of navigational satellites known as the Global Positioning System may give drivers their location almost instantly.

National Geographic says automakers already are testing dashboard navigators that show drivers where they are, and someday a voice synthesizer could tell them their location and where to turn.

Sociologist: Computers change secretaries' role

NEW YORK (AP) — "The traditional role of the secretary as one who types and gets coffee is being challenged every day by the potential of the automated office," says a Yale University sociologist.

"Secretaries are looking to increase communication with their bosses and enhance their positions because of their new-found know-how," adds Dr. Rosabeth Moss Kanter.

"Bosses, however, are reluctant to perceive automation as an upward step for their office workers, and some bosses prefer that secretaries simply follow directions and work priorities that they set," notes Ms. Kanter in reporting on a Honeywell survey of managers and secretaries.

That is the essence of the "coming office coffee clash — a possible mismatch between the desires and abilities of secretaries and the preferences and perspectives of managers," according to Ms. Kanter, author of "The Change Masters: Innovation Through Productivity in the American Corporation."

"Secretaries want to change their role — to become part of the team — and take on more challenging and responsible assignments," she says. "Managers want to maintain current roles and, in some cases, even increase the distance by using automation to eliminate rather than increase communication with office workers."

Many managers don't know how to make the secretary's role more inclusive, she points out. They don't give secretaries more opportunity to be part of the team because they have never been part of the team themselves.

"They don't give office workers more information about the importance of their work in a whole project because many of them do not get similar information from their bosses," she explains.

AT WORK

Selling one's own art often not easy

By ADELE SCHEELE, Ph.D

"It's not fair that your gallery will only show the works of artists that you already know!" the young artist complained. "Why can't I just come in and show you what I have done? Why do I have to know you first or come recommended by someone great? How can I ever get any attention from you gallery owners if you won't show the work of new, unconnected artists?"

It's the old Catch-22 that Joseph Heller spelled out so brilliantly in his satire on war. It works the same way in that other fighting zone — career. To get a job, you need experience. But to get experience, you need a job. It holds for artists — to get shown you need to be known. To be known, you need to have been shown.

How to break this cycle was the inadvertent theme of a recent Laguna Beach Art Museum panel chosen to discuss who determines taste — the artist, gallery owner, or critic. The topic held its audience spellbound but enraged some. The root of the anger for artists (of all kinds — visual, musical and written) — is their belief that art should be judged according to its merits.

They hope that the world acts like a fair jury of their peers, or like their teachers, disposed to be critically fair. But human systems hardly ever work that way. Teachers, even juries, are swayed by the charismatic and already famous.

The message is not to lower the standards for one's art, but to learn how the system works. "If you can't beat 'em, join 'em," the old saying advises. I'd go further; not only join the system but embrace it because it is our human way. Consider what two tastemakers revealed:

The Gallery Owner: As a private owner of a profit-making gallery, he has to select art that would sell.

Also, all the artists he has shown to date are those he already knows or those referred to him by artists he knows.

The Critic: She wanted to discover her own leads and preferred not to have artists approach her. But she confided that she was dependent on her links with gallery owners and artists to recommend artists and shows. She also revealed that when she sees an art piece that she is interested in, she never writes an article about the artist without talking to him or her first. Sometimes during these interviews, either in person or on the phone, she changes her mind about doing the story because of the force of the artist's personality.

Indirectly, both the gallery owner and critic preached politicking as a viable means to market one's art. They were candid in revealing their own dependencies on networks. "Politics" and "markets" were terms never used directly, but that's how they translate. Therefore, artists take heed.

Find a mentor. Choose among well-known artists whose work you admire, patrons or collectors, gallery owners. Associate with them. Attend classes or studio workshops given by them. Participate in the local and often pivotal museum or community art show, volunteering time, energy, art, ideas, support of every kind.

Don't resent the tastemakers, the critics and gallery owners and museum curators, for their roles or how they play them because it will only leave you bitter — and unknown.

Dr. Scheele is a columnist for King Features Syndicate.

Historian writes book on suffragist of 1800s

STORRS, Conn. (AP) — A 17th-century saltbox in northeastern Connecticut seems an unlikely place for a historian to launch a pioneering study of one of the Northwest's foremost feminists.

But it was here where Ruth Barnes Moynihan, mother of seven children, decided that there was an important story to be told in the life of Abigail Scott Duniway. It yielded a critically acclaimed biography, "Rebel for Rights," and a change in her own life.

Born on an Illinois farm in 1834, Abigail Scott was 17 when she recorded her 2,400-mile journey to Oregon in a daily journal. In 1853, she married Benjamin Duniway, who supported her entry into the fledgling women's rights movement.

She went on to wage a 42-year suffrage campaign that included writing books, editing newspapers, stumping throughout the region, being pelted with eggs and carrying on a long-standing battle with her prominent and anti-feminist brother. Known as the "Mother of Northwest Suffrage," Mrs. Duniway lived to see women get the right to vote in Oregon in 1912.

"I was always interested in the Western experience, even though I'd been in Connecticut all my life," Mrs. Moynihan said in a recent telephone interview.

"But it wasn't 'the lure and the lore' of the West I was curious about," she said. "I became interested particularly in the condition of frontier women.

"Many modern men and women have no awareness of the tremendous amount of work required of women in the past, especially farm women and women on the frontier. And you have to realize that 'frontier' can refer to conditions in New Hampshire or western New York state as late as the early part of this century," she said.

Mrs. Moynihan, who resumed her education on a part-time basis in 1971 and earned a graduate fellowship to Yale, said her study had been aided by the preservation of a vast amount of Mrs. Duniway's writings by the suffragist's son and grandson.

In addition to numerous articles and pamphlets, Mrs. Duniway wrote an autobiography, a fictionalized account of her westward journey and 17 serialized novels in a weekly paper she published.

"Through her fictionalized writings, a reader can learn what a woman's experience was, not only in physical health and conditions, but also in such things as ideology of marriage and child-rearing," Mrs. Moynihan said.

The Duniway story is well-known in the Northwest, Mrs. Moynihan said, but was untouched by the feminist awareness that swept the nation in the '60s and '70s.

One reason, she said, may have been the conflict between the Oregon suffragist and the national women's right-to-vote movement. Although Mrs. Duniway managed Susan B. Anthony's 1,000-mile speaking tour in the Northwest in 1871, she was not above objecting to some elements with which she disagreed.

For example, the national movement tried to link suffrage with temperance, which Mrs. Duniway — although a teetotaler — believed was unrealistic in the West and unwise nationally. As a result, the Women's Christian Temperance Union trumpeted that Mrs. Duniway had "sold out to liquor."

Mrs. Moynihan's book began as her doctoral thesis, which won the university's Beinecke prize in Western history in 1979.

But Mrs. Moynihan has found little room in Connecticut to teach her specialty. She is currently a visiting professor at Lewis and Clark College in Portland, Ore.

This has meant a restructuring of her life, she said during a recent visit with her family at Storrs, where her husband is head of the University of Connecticut English department.

Toy helicopters recalled

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some 50,000 toy helicopters are being recalled because they pose a hazard of cutting the children who operate them, the Consumer Product Safety Commission said Thursday.

The recall involves Combat Copter helicopters sold nationwide between January, 1982 and January, 1983

The commission said it has received 30 reports of incidents in which the copter flew into someone's face and 18 cases which resulted in injuries.

The Combat Copter is a plastic toy with a rotating propeller, launching pad, crank and trigger release. The toys carry model numbers 6249 and 6249A.

To work the toy, it is placed on the pad, cranked up until the propeller is turning quickly, and then released. The commission said that in some cases, instead of flying forward when released, the helicopter went backward into the operator's face.

Consumers who have these toys should return them to the place of purchase for a refund, the commission said. Persons with questions can contact the commission, toll-free, at 800-638-CPSC.

Rivers says she hasn't 'mellowed'

Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — Joan Rivers fans says she hasn't been doing new Elizabeth Taylor fat jokes since the actress recently entered the Betty Ford drug dependency center at Rancho Mirage.

"That took a lot of courage," Rivers said in an interview.

"I still throw in one or two because audiences demand it," she said, "but it's not a major part of my act."

That may disappoint those who fondly quote such Rivers swatters as:

— Elizabeth Taylor has more chins than a Chinese phone book.

— Taylor had her ears pierced, and out spouted gravy.

— Taylor ate at McDonald's, then tried to leave, but got caught in the golden arches.

What does Taylor, probably Rivers' most famous target, think about the constant — until recently, at least — harpooning?

"She's not bothered at all," Rivers said. "She's gorgeous and rich and has 76,000 men in love with her. What does she care what I say about her?"

BUT LEST ANYONE think Rivers has mellowed, she adds impishly:

"I'll lay off her when menopause hits."

That's more in character with Rivers, who has elevated waspish gossip to a fine art, saying on television the outrageous things that people usually confine to private conversations.

In numerous appearances and in her new role as sole guest host of the Johnny Carson "Tonight Show," Rivers has repeatedly stretched the boundaries of taste and asked pointed questions of celebrities. All this has resulted in her being called — and not just by publicity people — "the funniest woman on television."

Last July, she signed on to be Carson's exclusive guest host, in an unprecedented contract. She acts as host during the 10 weeks a year he's on vacation, with the rest of the shows featuring Carson live or in "Best of" presentations.

RIVERS SAID HER host weeks — like this one — are hectic.

"It's crazy, with all the things to do," she said in her distinctive emery-board voice, "but I love it."

Some of her shows have garnered ratings better than Carson's, fueling speculation that she'll be his replacement when he eventually retires.

Such a coup would provide a high point — and an ironic rounding-off — to a career that's been remarkably on the rise since 1965, when she got her big break on the Carson show. Before that, she struggled as an actress and comedian for years after graduating (as Joan Molinsky) from Barnard College.

She did have fair success as a writer, notably for Bob Newhart and the TV show "Candid Camera." And today, she said, she writes 90 percent of her material, largely gleaned from the gossip newspaper National Enquirer.

"Just give me the National Enquirer and The New York Times, and I'm happy," Rivers said. "That covers both ends of the spectrum, and I'll never run out of material."

THE REST OF her jokes, she said, come from material people send in.

"I get some good stuff from out there. It's amazing," she said.

Rivers has also demonstrated a golden touch with films. "Rabbit Test," a 1978 movie she wrote and directed, made lots of money despite being panned by most critics. She said she's writing a new film but didn't want to talk about it for fear of jinxing it.

Her popularity seems to grow despite — and maybe because of — controversy, like the flap that developed after she co-hosted the Emmy Awards show and swore once and made jokes about herpes and then-Interior Secretary James Watt.

"Actually, that turned out well," Rivers said, citing a larger number of calls supporting her than those criticizing. Also, she said, "We got our highest rating the next week on Carson."

Rivers said she didn't really understand all the fuss.

"Carson was doing Watt jokes almost every night, Joe Piscopo on 'Saturday Night Live' was doing them. ..."

RIVERS SAID SHE likes stretching her humor to the limit. "You never know how far you can go until you do it," she said.

"I do the same stuff in clubs that I do on Carson — it's just pushed farther."

Thus, naturally, she inquired about the famed killer whale, looking forward to the two resuming their relationship.

Besides the television appearances, Rivers works hard, touring up to 40 weeks a year. She's planning trips to England and Australia to follow up on the success there of her latest LP, "What Becomes a Semi-Legend Most?"

The album, her first in 14 years, she said, continues to be a huge success here.

Warm wear suggested

BOSTON (AP) — To stay warm in winter, wear wool or polypropylene underwear, advise experienced outdoorspeople at the Appalachian Mountain Club.

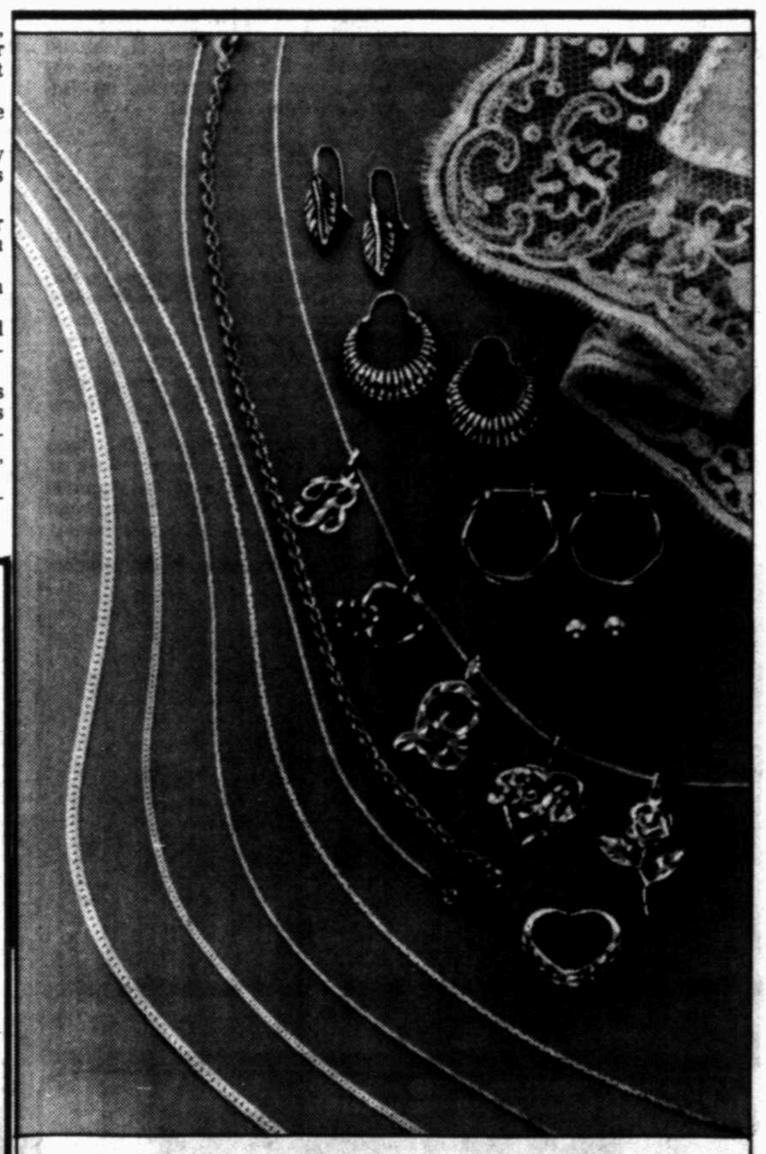

They point out that both wool and polypropylene insulate, whether they are wet or dry, "poly" because its fibers cannot absorb water, and wool because its fibers do not collapse (and therefore lose their loft) when wet.

Logo not new

PARIS (AP) — Emblems, logotypes and animal patches so prevalent in today's fashions are only a revival of a trend that began about 50 years ago, industry leaders point out.

Courturier and perfumer Jean Patou's embroidered JP initials on the sportswear he designed during the 1930s, including swim suits, riding habits and trim tennis dresses for fashionable women. The famed Wimbledon champion, Suzanne Leglen, was the first celebrity to endorse a designer, wearing Patou creations on and off the tennis courts.

BETTY MARTIN

The classic interfacing material for tailoring is hair canvas. Look at a crosswide yard of hair canvas. Note how a strand of horsehair or goat's hair is wound around it. This is what gives the canvas its springiness, its resilience and its ability to cling to wool. Cut lapels on the lengthwise grain to take advantage of the crosswise roll of hair-wound filler yarns. This will produce that beautiful, soft turnback so characteristic of a tailored lapel. Hair canvas comes in light, medium and heavy weights and in a variety of fibers. The softest hair canvas is made of wool. Use it for any soft style and for soft fabrics such as cashmere, camel's hair and the like.

At LEGGETTS FABRICS you will find a wonderful selection of patterns from the leading manufacturers in the field...Butterick, Vogue, Simplicity and McCalls. Whether you are a skilled seamstress and feel capable of tackling a garment that requires tailoring or are just a beginner be sure to stop by 1541 Parkway, Odessa, 362-8255 and No.9 Plaza Shopping Center, Garfield at Wadley in Midland, 683-3101. Every Customer's needs receive our personal attention. Visa and Master Card. Hours: Mon.-Sat. 10-6.

DEAR ABBY

Man perplexed by problem

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I was once advised that at all costs I should try to keep peace in the family, yet when I'm with my in-laws I feel as though I've landed on another planet.

They are the most bigoted people I've ever known. They make their feelings known in many ways. My father-in-law always has a new "joke" that invariably insults a minority group.

I have kicked myself for not speaking up and thereby encouraging further incidents. How can I tactfully make my feelings known, contain my anger and keep peace in the family? I don't want to suddenly blow up at the next family gathering and ruin everything, and I don't want my wife to do my talking for me. — PERPLEXED

DEAR PERPLEXED: Speak up! You may not educate your in-laws with one speech, but you can let them know that you disapprove of racial "jokes" and do not care to hear them.

Apropos remaining silent when one should speak up is this gem of a piece I have kept for nearly 30 years. It was written by a German Lutheran pastor who was arrested by the Gestapo in 1938 and sent to Dachau concentration camp until he was freed by the Allied forces in 1945.

I DIDN'T SPEAK UP
by the Rev. Martin Niemoeller

"In Germany, the Nazis first came for the communists, and I didn't speak up because I wasn't a communist. Then they came for the Jews, and I didn't speak up because I wasn't a Jew. Then they came for the trade unionists, and I didn't speak up because I wasn't a trade unionist. Then they came for the Catholics, and I didn't speak up because I was a Protestant. Then they came for me, and by that time there was no one left to speak for me."

DEAR ABBY: Recently I attended a funeral service at a church. The family of the deceased filed in in this order and sat in the front row: first the sister of the widow, then the widow, next her sons and their families.

To be correct, shouldn't the widow's sister have let the widow and her immediate family go first and be seated in the front row, then she (the widow's sister) bring up the rear? — A QUESTION OF PROTOCOL

DEAR QUESTION: The funeral director usually instructs the mourners concerning the "correct" order to file in and be seated for the service. However, at a time when most families are numb with grief, if the correct protocol is not strictly observed, only the pettiest of the petty would take note and be critical of the lapse.

DEAR ABBY: This is in reference to the older woman who was hoping to get her attorney son-in-law to draft her will:

In Mississippi, when an attorney stands to benefit directly or indirectly from the terms of a will he has drafted, there is a presumption of undue influence, and if undue influence is found, the will is voided. — MISSISSIPPI ATTORNEY

AT WIT'S END

Found: Perfect sport

By ERMA BOMBECK

All my life I've been looking for a sport that (a) features a cute outfit that I can wear to do my grocery shopping, (b) requires no more effort than putting one foot in front of the other, (c) has your next meal strapped to your back and (d) offers the cheap thrill of having someone breathe heavily behind you.

I've found it! Cross-country skiing.

Imagine. No ambulance parked at the bottom of the hill waiting for you. No tents at the finish line offering blankets and I.V.'s. No standing around trying to find your pulse to see if it's accelerated.

I know there's a lot of curiosity about cross-country skiing, so I'll try not to get too technical.

As with any sport, basically what we're talking about is coordination. I cannot tell you how important it is to coordinate your entire outfit at one time. The knickers should fit well and be something eye-catching, preferably matching your lightweight jacket. A cotton turtleneck or scarf tucked smartly under a blouse is a nice touch. Socks should be dark to help keep your thighs from looking like piano legs. A lot of people wear thermal underwear, but personally, I found it too warm for the supermarket.

What I really love about the sport is that you don't have to wear those awful caps that flatten your hair and make it look like an unmade bed. I prefer earmuffs. They're cute.

Another tip is to avoid needless exertion. That's why I fry my chicken the night before and pack the knapsack with small bread-and-butter sandwiches, thermoses of hot soup and chocolate, candy bars and of course, a corkscrew.

Setting your pace as you go is very important in cross-country skiing. If you tear off in a kick-glide movement the way you are supposed to, you'll never meet anybody.

As in most sports, cross-country skiing improves with time and practice. After awhile you learn that if you look too frightened to move, someone will clamp your skis on for you, pull your gloved hand through your poles and never leave your side. As for the promise of great personal satisfaction, I wouldn't know. Maybe next week, when I venture outside of the parking lot.

New satellites may assist lost drivers

Someday a new network of navigational satellites — the Global Positioning System — may give drivers their location almost instantly.

National Geographic says automakers already are testing dashboard navigators that show drivers where they are, and someday a voice synthesizer could tell them where to turn.

Skiers warned of avalanche risk

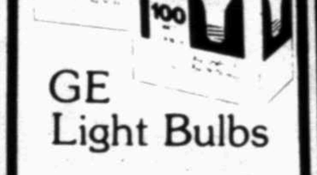

BOSTON (AP) — Avalanches are not confined to the Himalayas.

So the Appalachian Mountain Club suggests it's wise to learn how to recognize avalanche terrain and to be aware of the snow conditions that can produce avalanches before going on a skiing trip or a hike in the mountains in winter.

Before starting such a trip, get information on the safest routes; if avalanche reports are posted, heed them.

Happy Chinese New Year 4682

This New Year of 4682 is a perfect time to enjoy the cuisines of China. Created over a span of 4,000 years, China's culinary heritage of regional cooking styles remains distinctive. Celebrate the New Year with these Chinese specialties. You don't have to be an Oriental cooking expert either. Three ingredients important in Chinese cooking are used throughout — rice, soy sauce and walnuts.

Versatile rice, an international food that is eaten all over the world, is the ideal foundation for many menus because of its nutritive and economic values. When the Chinese say "ch'ih-fan" (eat rice) they mean "to eat a meal" — so important is this grain to them. When served for formal meals, it is prepared in the simplest form — hot, fluffy, and plain — for the companion dishes are seasoned to be served with mild-flavored rice.

Soy sauce, one of the most widely used seasonings in Chinese cooking, has been recognized for centuries as the way to enhance the flavors of meat, poultry and fish.

Walnuts are one of the most frequently used nuts for Chinese entrees, desserts and sugared or spiced confections. Blending beautifully with other ingredients, walnuts add a mellow flavor and crunchy texture. Toasting the walnuts helps protect their crispness and brings out more of their good taste. Toasting is easy to do, too.

The Chinese believe food is a symbol of prosperity and good luck. These regional dishes represent several of the most popular cuisines. Steamed dishes like the Parchment Wrapped Chicken and gently seasoned Walnut-Vegetable Stir-Fry are typical of the Southern or Cantonese cooking style. Szechuan cuisine, from the inland province of the Himalaya foothills, features spicy and peppery foods like Beef with Cauliflower and Snow Peas.

The coastal region around Shanghai features rice as a main accompaniment to diverse seafood dishes that have an extra touch of sweetness such as Shrimp-Pineapple Stir-Fry. Though not a typical Chinese seasoning, teriyaki sauce is convenient and specially blended to provide the right flavor balance.

Steamed Walnut Spongecake is a fitting finale to any or all of these Chinese entrees. Airy-light and just barely sweet, the cake is enhanced with the intriguing flavor of the Glazed Walnuts, which also make delicious snacks on their own.

Wishing you happiness and prosperity, Gung Hay Fat Choy!

Beef with Cauliflower and Snow Peas

1/2 pound boneless beef sirloin or top round steak
2 tablespoons cornstarch, divided
3 tablespoons naturally-brewed soy sauce, divided
1/2 teaspoon granulated sugar
1 clove garlic, minced
1/4 to 1/2 teaspoon crushed red pepper
Water
*1/2 pound fresh snow peas
3 tablespoons vegetable oil, divided
1 small head cauliflower, separated into flowerets
2 medium-size tomatoes, chunked
Hot cooked rice

Cut beef across grain into thin slices. Combine 1 Tbsp. each cornstarch and soy sauce with sugar and garlic. Stir in beef and let stand 15 minutes. Meanwhile, combine remaining cornstarch and soy sauce with red pepper and 1/2 cup water; set aside. Remove tips and strings from snow peas. Heat 1 Tbsp. oil in wok or large skillet over high heat. Add beef and stir-fry 1 minute; remove. Heat 1 Tbsp. oil in same wok. Add snow peas and stir-fry 2 minutes; remove. Heat remaining oil in same wok; add cauliflower and stir-fry 2 minutes. Add 1/2 cup water; cover and cook 3 minutes. Stir in beef, snow peas, tomatoes and soy sauce mixture. Cook and stir until sauce boils and thickens. Serve immediately with fluffy rice.

Makes 4 servings.

*Substitute 1 pkg. (6 oz.) frozen snow peas, thawed and drained. Stir into wok with soy sauce mixture.

To toast walnuts: Drop kernels into rapidly boiling water; boil for 3 minutes. Drain well. Spread them out on shallow baking sheet and bake at 350°F. for about 12 to 15 minutes, or until browned lightly, stirring occasionally. Set aside to cool before using in recipes.

Walnut-Vegetable Stir-Fry

1 pound fresh broccoli
1/2 cup regular-strength chicken broth
4 teaspoons cornstarch
2 tablespoons naturally-brewed soy sauce
1 tablespoon dry sherry
1/4 teaspoon granulated sugar
3 tablespoons vegetable oil, divided
2/3 cup toasted Walnuts
1 large carrot, pared and cut into 1/4-inch "coins"
1 teaspoon minced fresh ginger root
1 clove garlic, minced
1/2 cup water
Hot cooked rice

Cut flowerets from broccoli; slice in half lengthwise. Peel stalks; cut crosswise into 1/8-inch slices. Combine broth, cornstarch, soy sauce, sherry and sugar; set aside. Heat 2 Tbsp. oil in large skillet or wok (not iron) over medium-high heat. Add walnuts and stir-fry 1 minute; remove walnuts and drain on paper towels. Heat remaining oil in same pan. Add broccoli, carrot, ginger and garlic; stir-fry 2 minutes. Add water; cover and cook vegetables over medium-high heat 2 minutes, or until vegetables are tender-crisp. Add soy sauce mixture; cook and stir until sauce boils and thickens. Stir in walnuts. Serve immediately with fluffy rice.

Makes 4 servings.

Steamed Walnut Spongecake

3 eggs
1/4 teaspoon salt
2/3 cup granulated sugar
1/4 teaspoon vanilla
3/4 cup sifted cake flour
1/2 cup toasted Walnuts, finely chopped
1/2 teaspoon grated lemon peel (optional)
*Glazed Diamond Walnuts

Beat eggs with salt in mixer bowl until foamy; add sugar and vanilla and beat on high speed 5 minutes. Fold in flour, walnuts and lemon peel. Pour into greased 9-inch square or round baking pan. Steam over boiling water 18 to 20 minutes, or until cake top springs back when lightly touched. Remove cake from steamer. Let stand in pan on wire rack 10 minutes. Loosen edges and turn out onto serving plate. Decorate with Glazed Walnuts. Best served slightly warm.

Makes 6 to 8 servings.

*Glazed Walnuts: Combine 1/4 cup apricot preserves, 1 Tbsp. sugar and 1-1/2 tsp. naturally-brewed soy sauce in small saucepan. Heat over medium heat until preserves melt, stirring constantly. Remove from heat and stir in 2 cups toasted Diamond Walnuts. Spread out onto lightly oiled baking sheet. Bake in preheated 275°F. oven 20 minutes, or until walnuts feel dry to the touch. Remove walnuts onto waxed paper and cool completely. Decorate Steamed Walnut Spongecake. Store remainder in airtight container.

Parchment Wrapped Chicken

2 whole chicken breasts, skinned and boned (about 1-3/4 lbs.)
3 tablespoons naturally-brewed soy sauce
*1 teaspoon ginger juice
1/4 teaspoon granulated sugar
1/2 pound fresh bean sprouts
Parchment paper or aluminum foil
6 green onions & tops, cut into 2-inch lengths and slivered
1/3 cup chopped toasted Walnuts

Cut chicken in thin, narrow strips, about 3 inches long. Combine soy sauce, ginger juice and sugar; stir in chicken and let stand 30 minutes. Meanwhile, parboil bean sprouts for 30 seconds. Remove from heat and cover with cold water; drain thoroughly and set aside. Cut parchment paper or foil into eight 8-inch squares. Thoroughly toss chicken mixture with bean sprouts, green onions and walnuts. Place about 1/2 cup chicken mixture in center of each parchment square. Fold bottom point of parchment over filling; crease just below filling and tuck point under filling. Fold side points over filling, overlapping slightly. Crease paper to hold fold. Fold remaining corner down so point extends below bottom of bundle; tuck this point between folded sides. Crease paper to hold fold. Repeat with remaining filling and parchment. Place bundles, seam side down, in single layer, on steamer rack. Cover and steam over boiling water about 7 minutes, or until chicken is tender. Remove from steamer and serve immediately.

Makes 8 bundles.

Shrimp-Pineapple Stir-Fry

2 tablespoons cornstarch, divided
4 tablespoons bottled teriyaki marinade & sauce, divided
1/2 pound medium-size shrimp, shelled and deveined
3/4 cup regular-strength chicken broth
2 tablespoons vegetale oil, divided
2 stalks celery, cut diagonally into 1/4-inch slices
1 green pepper, chunked
1 onion, chunked
1 tablespoon slivered fresh ginger root
1 can (8 oz.) pineapple chunks, drained
Hot cooked rice

Combine 1 Tbsp. each cornstarch and teriyaki sauce; stir in shrimp. Blend remaining cornstarch, teriyaki sauce and broth; set aside. Heat 1 Tbsp. oil in wok or large skillet over high heat. Add shrimp and stir-fry 1 minute; remove. Heat remaining oil in same wok. Add celery, green pepper, onion and ginger; stir-fry 4 minutes. Stir in shrimp, pineapple and soy sauce mixture. Cook and stir until mixture boils and thickens. Serve immediately with fluffy rice.

Makes 4 servings.

Shrimp makes easy, but elegant entree

Copley News Service

A shrimp by any other name is still a prawn, langoustine, Spanish Red or scampi. The differences between the various categories of crustacean are related to size and geographic origin, but all are basically the same shellfish creature.

Basically, shrimp are the principal scavengers of the ocean. They speedily remove all traces of fish or flesh from the bones of any dead animal exposed to their ravages. Despite their lowly position, however, they are highly prized as nutritious and delicious food.

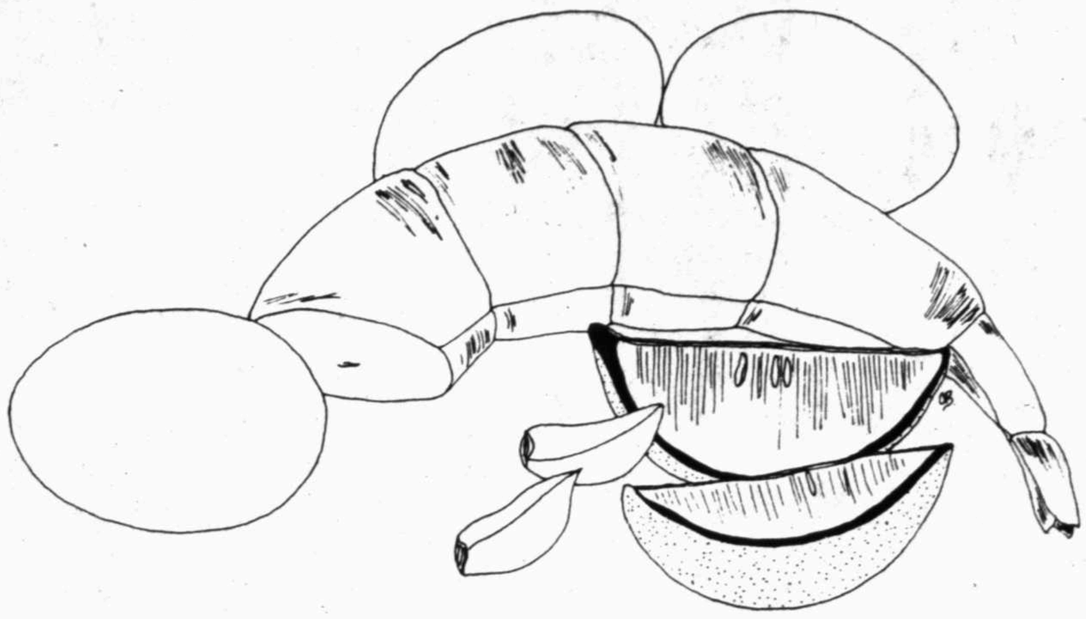

They are also easy to prepare as hot or cold appetizers, salad, soup and/or entrees. The delicately distinctive taste of shrimp blends with spicy seasonings, as well as with mild cream sauces. Needing little time to cook, shrimp is an ideal solution for the busy cook who wants to prepare an elegant meal.

Buying: When it comes to buying shrimp, get them in the raw, usually frozen state, then thaw and cook them when desired.

Reheating cooked shrimp can make them rubbery. Even for cold shrimp dishes, it is best to cook them just before serving, to ensure that their flavor will be as fresh as possible. If a certain type of shrimp, such as bay shrimp, is available only cooked, buy it at a fish market rather than using canned shrimp.

Sizing: To give a more precise indication of shrimp size, fish markets often label them with a number, which tells how many shrimp of that lot would make a pound. The lower the number, the larger the shrimp. Often the letter "U" is written before the digits to indicate "under" a certain number of shrimp to the pound. For instance, "U15" means that there are 15 or less shrimp to the pound.

Cooking: As with most seafood, the primary rule in preparing shrimp is to avoid overcooking it. Cooking time is very short. Sushi lovers know that fresh shrimp are good raw. If served in sauce, shrimp rarely need pre-cooking as heating in the sauce will usually cook them. The shellfish can be sauteed, stir-fried, boiled, broiled, barbecued, poached and remain sweet and delicious served hot or cold.

The purpose of a shrimp's shells is to protect them, not only in the ocean but also in cooking. If they are to be cooked in the simplest way, in salted water, shrimp should be left in their shells. If cooked "naked" in the water, the shrimp would lose too much flavor to the water.

Sometimes the goal of a dish is to promote a flavor exchange between shrimp and sauce. In this case, the shrimp are shelled before cooking. To give a shrimp sauce greater depth of flavor, a good trick is to first simmer the shells in water, then strain the water, saving it to use in making the sauce; the shrimp should be gently cooked in the sauce at the last minute.

Timing: Small shrimp are done when their shells turn bright pink; large ones are done 1-2 minutes after that stage. Out of their shells, shrimp cook even faster and are done when the outer surface of their flesh turns pink and the inside becomes white.

Deveining: Large shrimp should be deveined, either with shell on or off. Raw shrimp are the easiest to devein: Slit them down the back and, with the aid of the tip of a small, sharp knife, pull out the black intestinal "vein" that runs down the back.

The following recipes feature shrimp.

BEER BATTER SHRIMP

1 cup all-purpose flour
1 tbsp. paprika
½ tsp. salt
1½ cups beer (12 ozs.)
½ tsp. Worcestershire sauce
1 tbsp. white wine vinegar
½ tsp. paprika
¾ tsp. Tabasco pepper sauce
¼ cup finely chopped scallions
¼ cup finely chopped celery
¼ cup finely chopped parsley

In small bowl, stir together tomato paste, mustard, oil, vinegar, paprika ad Tabasco sauce until combined. Stir in scallions, celery and parsley.

Makes about ¾ cup.

TOMATO AND SHRIMP QUICHE

Flour tortillas form a wafer-thin crust for this Mexican-inspired quiche. Serve hot as an appetizer or first course or cold for a picnic dish.

2 tbsps. butter
2 12-inch flour tortillas
4 ozs. Monterey Jack or cheddar cheese, shredded (about 1 cup)
4 green onions, chopped
2 firm ripe tomatoes
Flour
Salt and freshly ground black pepper
3 tbsps. diced canned peeled green chilies
4 ozs. cooked small shrimp
4 eggs
1 cup milk
Salt and freshly ground black pepper

Melt butter in 9-inch pie pan. Dip tortillas in melted butter to coat both ides and place in pan, overlapping tortillas to cover bottom and sides of pan. Sprinkle with half of cheese and half of onions. Slice tomatoes ¼-inch thick and dip in flour. Place in pie pan in single layer. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Scatter remaining onions, chilies, and shrimp over tomatoes. Beat eggs until blended; stir in milk and season with salt and pepper and pour over. Sprinkle with remaining cheese. Bake in preheated 400-degree oven 25 minutes or until custard is barely set in center. Cut into wedges to serve.

Makes 8-10 first-course servings or 6 entree servings.

¼ tsp. Tabasco pepper sauce
2 to 3 lbs. peeled, raw shrimp
Flour for dredging

In a medium bowl, stir together flour, paprika and salt. Whisk in beer, Worcestershire and Tabasco sauce. Let stand at least 1 hour or cover and refrigerate until ready to use. Fill a sauce pot or deep fat fryer with vegetable oil about 3 inches deep; heat to 375 degrees. Dip the shrimp in flour and then batter. Fry 1 to 2 minutes until shrimp are golden. Drain on paper towels. Serve with Creole Tartar Sauce (recipe follows).

Makes 10 to 12 appetizer servings.

CREOLE TARTAR SAUCE

3 tbsps. tomato paste
2 tbsps. Dijon-style mustard
2 tbsps. olive oil

Egg foo young good for brunch

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

If Egg Foo Young isn't in your permanent culinary repertory, you may well be interested to try a recipe for this dish. It has a great virtue: it's suitable for supper, lunch or brunch.

Yes, brunch. I've come on some pretty outlandish main dishes suggested for this late morning meal for guests, but in my opinion Egg Foo Young is not one of them. The dish is a Chinese-style omelet, and eggs — in one form or another — are certainly appropriate for brunch.

Although Egg Foo Young has to be cooked just before serving, you can have the eggs beaten and the vegetables prepared before your guests arrive. The accompanying sauce can be made well ahead and reheated. Rice tastes good with the Egg Foo Young and its sauce, but cooking rice is no great chore.

EGG FOO YOUNG

6 large eggs
½ teaspoon salt
2 cups fresh bean sprouts, well-drained (see Notes)
1 cup diced (¼ to ½ inch) cooked chicken
4 medium scallions, thinly sliced (½ cup)
1 medium (4 ounces) green pepper, finely chopped (½ cup)
14 (about) drained canned whole water chestnuts (from an 8-ounce can), thinly sliced (½ cup)¼ cup corn oil
Foo Young Sauce (see recipe)

In a large bowl beat the eggs and the salt just until foamy.

With a large kitchen spoon stir in the bean sprouts, chicken, scallion, green pepper and water chestnuts.

In a heavy 10-inch skillet over moderately low heat, heat oil. Add egg mixture; with the kitchen spoon spread vegetable mixture so it is evenly distributed; cover tightly. Cook until bottom is golden and top is set — about 15 minutes. Cut into 4 equal wedges; with a wide spatula remove and turn golden side up onto individual plates. Serve with Foo Young Sauce.

Makes 4 servings.

FOO YOUNG SAUCE

1 tablespoon cornstarch
1 to 1½ teaspoons sugar
½ teaspoon finely chopped peeled fresh ginger root
1¼ cups water
2 tablespoons soy sauce
Salt to taste, if desired

In a 1-quart saucepan stir together the cornstarch, sugar and ginger; gradually stir in the water, keeping smooth. Cook over moderate heat, stirring constantly, until clear, thickened and boiling. Off heat stir in the soy sauce and, if used, the salt. Sauce will be thin. Makes 1 cup.

NOTES

If you buy ¼ pound drained fresh bean sprouts you'll find they usually measure 2 cups. But if you buy ¼ pound fresh bean sprouts that are taken from a tray of water, they will — after you drain them at home — measure about 1¾ cups; this amount may of course be substituted for the 2 cups called for in the recipe.

In cooking the Egg Foo Young, you may find the bottom is golden before the top is set. In this case, place a large heavy dinner plate over the skillet and invert the skillet to turn out the Egg Foo Young onto the plate; slide the Egg Foo Young back into the skillet and cook just until the bottom sets — usually a matter of seconds.

Celebration rings in 'Year of the Rat'

From Staff Reports

The Chinese New Year, an elaborate affirmation of the future and of the family, will be celebrated worldwide Feb. 2.

The Chinese will welcome the year 4682, the Year of the Rat. And food, ranging from simple to the ornate, plays a major role in the New Year celebration.

The customs in China vary region by region with each family having its own variations it observes during the New Year.

In contrast to the usual New Year festivities in the United State — a single evening of merriment followed the next day by football on television — the Chinese New Year celebration lasts for two weeks.

Preparations begin far in advance of New Year's Eve. Special foods must be bought and cooked. Presents for family members and friends are wrapped. The house is cleaned to its sparkling best and decorated with colorful displays of red and gold flowers — the two lucky colors among the Chinese — along with lucky fruits or oranges and tangerines.

The family exchanges traditional greetings and gives food offering to various deities and honorable ancestors. Children look for the lucky gifts. Money wrapped in red envelopes, "lei-see," is a traditional good luck present. There is not the toasting, embracing and singing that Americans associate with the arrival of the New Year.

The New Year festivities always feature a family feast with dishes such as whole chicken and whole fish to symbolize wholeness in life and togetherness of the family. Suckling roast pig may also be served.

Welcome in Chinese New Year 4682 at your house with hot and spicy "Hunan Pork Stir-Fry with Bean Curd." The flavor of the Orient is captured in this one-course meal that wil satisfy the heartiest of appetites.

Stir-fry traditional Chinese cuisine

The vast and varied terrain of China has created numerous, distinctive, regional cooking styles. From the inland areas of Hunan and Szechwan come the hot and spicy dishes that have become a favorite all across the U.S. Generously seasoned with garlic, crushed red pepper and onion, "Hunan Pork Stir-Fry with Bean Curd," captures the full flavor and ease of preparation associated with the best Chinese cuisines.

Pork, the most popular meat in Chinese cooking, is enhanced in this recipe with the addition of bean curd. Bean curd, or tofu, is used in countless meat and vegetavle dishes throughout China. Economical, high in protein and low in calories, it blends well with many foods and picks up the flavor of sauces.

HUNAN STIR-FRY PORK WITH BEN CURD

1 pound fresh bean curd (tofu)
1/2 pound ground pork
1 tablespoon dry sherry
1 teaspoon minced fresh ginger root
1 clove garlic, minced
1/2 cup regular-strength chicken broth
1 tablespoon cornstarch
3 tablespoons naturally brewed soy sauce
1 tablespoon vinegar
1/2 teaspoon crushed red pepper
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
1 onion, cut into 3/4-inch pieces
1 green pepper, cut into 3/4-inch pieces
Hot cooked rice

Cut bean curd into 1/2-inch cubes; drain well on several layers of paper towels. Meanwhile, combine pork, sherry, ginger and garlic; let stand 10 minutes. Blend broth, cornstarch, soy sauce, vinegar and red pepper; set aside. Heat wok or large skillet over medium-heat; add pork mixture. Cook, stirring to separate pork, about 3 minutes, or until lightly browned; remove. Heat oil in same wok. Add onion and green pepper; stir-fry 4 minutes. Add pork and soy sauce mixture. Cook and stir until mixture boils and thickens. Gently fold in bean curd; heat through. Serve immediately with fluffy rice. Makes four servings.

Julian Bond to address group

From Staff Reports

The Negro Business and Professional Women's Club of Midland is sponsoring its third annual Black History Observance February 17 and 18.

On Friday, February 17, a Black Festival Banquet will be held in the Midland Hilton Ballroom at 8 p.m. The Honorable Julian Bond, Georgia state senator, from Atlanta will speak on "Black America's Mission for the '80s."

In 1968, Bond became the first black ever to be nominated for vice president. Because of his age, he withdrew his name from consideration.

He has long been in the forefront of the battle for civil and human rights and is one of the founders of the Student Non-violent Coordinating Committee.

A native of Nashville, Tenn., and a graduate of Morehouse College, Bond has hosted the popular "Saturday Night Live" television show and appeared as a lawyer in the movie "Greased Lightning."

He has been named to Time magazine's "200 Leaders" list and his speeches and poems have appeared in Life magazine, Negro Digest, Ramparts, Rights and Reviews and other publications.

Bond was elected to the Georgia House of Representatives in 1965 and served four terms there. In 1974 he was elected to the Georgia State Senate, where he now serves.

His appearance at the the banquet will launch the Negro Business and Professional Women's Black History Festivities, scheduled for February 18.

Study: Valium users not stereotypes

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Disputing Valium's popular image as "mother's little helper" for harassed housewives and ambitious career women, a study today says the tranquilizer's typical long-term user is over 50 and chronically ill.

The study, published in the Journal of the American Medical Association, found that most Americans who use anti-anxiety drugs daily for a year or more "are neither young females nor middle-aged housewives," said co-author Mitchell B. Balter of the National Institute of Mental Health.

And while women are more likely than men to use Valium and other mild tranquilizers, men who take the drugs are almost as likely as women to use them for long periods, the study found.

The government-financed study was conducted at the Institute for Research in Social Behavior in Oakland, Calif., at the University of Chicago and at the mental health institute in Rockville, Md.

"In the 1960s and 1970s, the typical tranquilizer user was sometimes portrayed as the young male drug abuser or, more frequently, the harassed, middle-aged, suburban housewife," wrote psychologist Glen D. Mellinger of Oakland.

The Rolling Stones' 1966 song "Mother's Little Helper" helped popularize the image of the chronic Valium user as the housewife who "goes running for the shelter of her mother's little helper."

More recently, the stereotype has expanded to include the "overambitious, frenetic career woman, burning the emotional candle at both ends," Mellinger said.

But the study, which surveyed only adults, found that 71 percent of long-term users were 50 or older, 20 percent were between 35 and 49 years old and 9 percent were between 18 and 34.

Of long-term users, 59 percent suffer "high levels of emotional distress" and 75 percent suffer "chronic physical and basic health problems," Balter said.

The study also revealed that:

—Twenty-nine percent of all tranquilizer users were men and 39 percent of long-term users were male.

—Only 15 percent of all American users of mild tranquilizers take them daily for more than a year, a relatively low rate compared with Western European nations. Balter said 67 percent of tranquilizer users "have used them no more than a total of 30 days in a whole year. Some 80 percent have used them for less than four months."

Lawyer defends drunk drivers

Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES — Donald H. Nichols receives hate mail calling him a "defender of the scum of the earth." And one or two judges have suggested his clients don't even have the same rights as rapists and robbers.

It's the price Minneapolis attorney Nichols pays for being perhaps the best in his field. Nichols has defended 2,600 drunken driving cases in the past 10 years, and hasn't lost one.

Though it was once what Nichols calls the "garbage bag of the law," the legal defense of drunken drivers has become a multimillion-dollar business in recent years, with a slew of lawyers entering the controversial field. Lawyers says that's because of tougher state laws, increased enforcement of those laws, and a national movement spearheaded by Mothers Against Drunken Drivers.

Nichols and other specialists in the field currently are sharing their expertise with lawyers around the country in a series of seminars — "Winning Strategies in Drunk Driving Cases" — that have begun to draw anger from anti-drunken driver crusaders.

A seminar here last week attracted 100 lawyers, a few law enforcement officials and Marcy DeJesus, vice president of the Los Angeles MADD chapter, who said the idea of "teaching other lawyers how to weed out technicalities to get off someone they know to be guilty borders on immorality and poor ethics."

But in defense of the lawyers, Dr. James Feldman, a specialist in breath-testing equipment and co-founder of the seminars, said, "It's the counsel's job to present a defendant's case to the best of his ability. That doesn't mean the counsel for the defense in any way condones what his client is accused of." And attorneys who organized the seminars said they are not designed to teach lawyers how to "beat" drunken driving charges against their clients, but to guarantee their clients' rights.

Among the strategies suggested in the lectures are attacking the credibility of breath, urine and blood tests, and selecting jurors who value statements and observations of people rather than evidence gathered through technological means.

Also recommended was offering "reasonable explanations" to the observations of arresting police officers. For example, attorney Lawrence Taylor of Spokane said that what might smell like alcohol on the breath is actually the "flavor of the alcohol" — which he said could be similarly obtained from non-alcoholic "near beer."

Those conducting the seminar even say it's possible to say their clients' out-of-sync movements were caused by being distracted by police lights shining on rear-view mirrors.

For the 40-year-old Nichols, the 15-city seminar tour is a far cry from the expectations he once had of practicing corporate law. When he returned home from Vietnam in 1971, Nichols began his law practice by accepting drunken driving cases because no one else wanted them. With the publication of his first book on drunken driving law in 1974, he established himself as an authority in the field. He now heads his own law firm in Minneapolis and is editor in chief of a newsletter called the "Drinking/Driver Law Letter."

Forty states strengthened their drunken driving laws in 1983, and 39 states now send second-time offenders to jail.

Martin Luther was the most prolific religious figure in history, according to National Geographic. It says that from 1516 to 1546 he wrote, on the average, a treatise every two weeks.

San Francisco: Something for everyone found here

That famous San Francisco fog caresses the Golden Gate. CNS Photo

Copley News Service

You could fly down to Rio and sample a bit of Sugar Loaf in its magnificent harbor.

Or you could "slide down the chute" to land safely at Kai Tak, between Hong Kong's sequined hills, to share the endless delights of the Star Ferry with thousands of bustling Chinese.

You could sail into Naples to sample some of the world's best "cucina" in that fabled port and on to Rome for a visit to the Vatican and its glorious art and architecture.

But why would you do any of the above when you can fly to San Francisco and have it all, practically in your own back yard?

According to legend, San Francisco is everybody's favorite city. Like Paris, everyone who ever goes there owns a share of its hills, its harbors, its culture and its charm forevermore.

(Some have even been known to leave hearts there — and you can put that to music for a surefire success.)

The little cable cars aren't climbing the hills at the moment, but there's so much else going on, you probably won't even miss them. We watched one of San Francisco's famed "little old ladies" gracefully climb across California Street recently, clambering over the tracks and the excavations with the help of a workman who had just crawled out of a hole in the street.

As she reached the other side, she turned and bowed a thank you. He smiled and bowed and waved a hand in farewell as she proceeded determinedly up the street.

It's the sort of encounter that makes just walking around The City so much fun. The place exudes vitality — and concern for the joy of living.

Right now, the calendar of events runneth over:

Probably the hottest item on the culture circuit is the showing of The Vatican Collections: The Papacy and Art, at the M.H. DeYoung Memorial Museum in Golden Gate Park, on display until Feb. 19. The 237 works, carefully culled from the vast collections sponsored by popes for centuries, range in date from Egyptian and classical antiquity to the 20th century. They represent the best of the works commissioned, collected and preserved by the papacy. Pan Am transported the collection with special care and it will be shown only in New York, Chicago and San Francisco.

Admission is by ticket only, available through BASS Tickets, P.O. Box 57, Oakland, Calif. 94604. Adults $5.80, Juniors (5 through 17) and seniors, $3.80. Tickets may be charged by phone to major credit cards: (415) 893-0126 in San Francisco, (213) 381-2000 in Los Angeles or (800) 551-SHOW out of California.

If possible, reserve ahead, especially for weekends. Otherwise, call the museum's hot line — (415) 386-2202 — to determine ticket availability on a day-to-day basis.

While you're in the area, check out the magnificent Avery Brundage collection of Chinese art in the Asian Art Museum next door to the DeYoung. The permanent collection in the main floor galleries has just been reopened and knowledgeable docents give guided tours at regular intervals throughout the day.

But half the fun of San Francisco is just being there and exploring the city on your own. Harbor cruises from Fisherman's Wharf give you a nifty view from the water. So do ferries to Larkspur and Sausalito.

You can wander on foot through any of a dozen neighborhoods, one more fascinating than the next: Try Union Street and its shops, with a stop at the Balboa Cafe (or any of 50 other good restaurants in the area). There's a new plaza near the Opera House with some elegant restaurants (try Kudan for extraordinarily fine Indian food).

Don't overlook the waterfront and Ghiradelli Square, the Cannery or Pier 39 or Union Square and its beautiful department stores.

There are 92.6 restaurants per square mile in San Francisco, so there's no fear of going hungry. Wander through Chinatown and take your pick. North Beach offers a taste of Italy. Little Japan centers on Post Street between Laguna and Fillmore. Clement Street, Geary Boulevard and the streets connecting them are home to 48 restaurants in seven blocks.

Unusual bus company offers 'adventuresome' trips

By JERRY HULSE
The Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — Oh, wow, Sylvester, have I got a trip for you.

I mean, if you're uninhibited, enjoy skinny-dipping, slurping a little muscatel and aren't turned off by the idea of sharing a pad with 30 other trippers, well, pack the bedroll and hop aboard The Green Tortoise.

While you're at it, grab a six-pack and a handful of tapes (something by the Go-Go's, the Rolling Stones, the Police or the Grateful Dead will do). And don't forget to bring along the guitar. This isn't a bus ride, it's a party, a celebration. Whoee-eee.

No formal invitation necessary. Just a ticket for the open road with time to kick in with the rest of the gang at pit stops stretching from Berkeley to Boston, north to Oregon, Washington and Alaska and south to Baja for the hottest sunset this side of Bali Hai.

Without argument, Green Tortoise is America's most unorthodox bus company, its rigs described variously as mechanized youth hostels, rolling crash pads and dormitories on wheels.

In the words of the big daddy of The Green Tortoise empire, when you travel on one of his buses "it's a trip, not a journey."

This isn't to imply that older dudes are turned off by the company's laid-back approach to transportation. I mean, why not mattresses instead of seats? And what's wrong with this business of pit stops at wineries en route?

FOR ONLY $25 a traveler can hop a ride with Green Tortoise from Los Angeles to San Francisco. Or onto Eugene, Portland and Seattle for an extra $59. The company's longest journey is San Francisco to the East Coast, $119. Or the Tortoise does a relaxed 10-day version that's pegged at $199 and takes in desert, mountains, lakes, rivers and valleys, an odyssey that few, even crusty old-timers, aren't moved by. Add to this the $35 for the food kitty and you've bought yourself a cross-country trip that includes accommodations (bunks aboard the bus), travel and meals, the whole bundle figuring out to under $24 a day.

After blasting off from San Francisco the Tortoise does pit stops at Pyramid Lake outside Reno, Jackson Hole, Wyo. (white-water rafting down the Snake River), Yellowstone, Mt. Rushmore and the Black Hills of the Dakotas. Later the Tortoise hums on into Minnesota, Chicago, Pennsylvania and New York. En route, city types join cookouts beside lakes and rivers lost in a wilderness as pure as the first dawn. One night is spent atop a remote mesa in North Dakota, another alongside a waterfall in Wyoming.

These cross-country trips are done during summer. Other green bugs crawl to Alaska. The Tortoise barrels north as far as the Arctic Circle on 30-day tours that cover nearly 10,000 miles, this for a flat $625 plus a couple of hundred bucks for the food kitty.

CURRENTLY, THE TORTOISE is doing trips south to Baja, featuring whale watching at Scammon's Lagoon and camping on deserted beaches where "nobody in their right mind" would take a bus, according to one driver, which is OK because the benefits — the snorkeling, the sailing and the windsurfing — are worth every bounce, he insists, over roads gutted with potholes.

A Green Tortoise trip to Baja (departures every other week) costs the vacationer $299 for 13 days plus a donation to the food kitty. Or for those who wish to go deeper into Mexico, the Tortoise people do a $399 trip from Los Angeles to the Caribbean, returning by plane to Tijuana and by bus to Los Angeles. Also on the books is Tortoise's annual New Orleans bash with camping beside the Mississippi. Here buses join a circle at night like a wagon train hookup in the Old West.

Bus seats have been removed to make way for platforms covered with foam rubber and overhead racks have been replaced with bunks. While it's a trifle funky, it's comfortable. So who needs showers with all the skinny-dipping in lakes and rivers?

It's a trip for non-smokers, what with signs cautioning passengers: "'No tobacco smoking" aboard the bus. This isn't to say that a little grass doesn't surface occasionally, but just don't try lighting up cigarettes, pipes or cigars, says The Man.

WHILE IT'S MOSTLY a younger crowd, older riders are welcome on the Tortoise runs and few freak out over the casual arrangements. While precise time arrivals aren't always guaranteed, the Tortoise people promise it will be a trip passengers will remember always.

One brochure declares: "Our trips are vacations for adventuresome people, not luxury tours designed to pamper. There are no rigid plans, only general outlines. Flexibility is a Tortoise trait."

And so away they go, these green rigs, rambling through cow towns and cities and into national forests and down along the seashore. The Green Tortoise is a descendant of the '60s when other hippie-type bus companies burned up the roads. Outfits like the Lame Duck, the Blue Goose, the Iron Pony and the Gray Rabbit. Everyone operated illegally, but only The Green Tortoise survived, and while now it's legitimate, that's not what 37-year-old Gardner Kent had in mind. No sir. No doubt he'd still be operating illegally had not the Interstate Commerce Commission and a gang of cops moved in shortly before the Tortoise fleet was about to blast off for New Orleans three years ago. Kent surrendered (he had no choice). He also had no license, no insurance.

Although Kent looks like a prize fighter, he possesses the soul of a poet. Big and beefy, and with long hair like the hippies used to wear, he finds his peace in forests and alongside rivers, which is why he takes to the road whenever he finds time to get lost from the crowd.

KENT DESCRIBES life aboard his buses as "intimately close" although he insists that his passengers are "infinitely more comfortable" than others riding the major carriers.

Instead of using depots, Kent makes pickups at such places as a Mexican restaurant and an ocean-front parking lot in Los Angeles, a grocery in Berkeley and a burger joint in Portland.

For details write to Green Tortoise, Box 24459, San Francisco 94124.

Penguin City: 'Stuffed shirts' profitable

By FRANK MACOMBER
Copley News Service

SAN DIEGO — People love penguins and that is money in the bank for Sea World, an aquatic park located on the bay in San Diego. Attendance has increased 15 percent since it opened its Penguin Encounter over the Memorial Day weekend last May.

From 9,000 to 11,000 people daily crowd into Sea World now — about 2,000 more than before the Penguin Encounter opened — and on weekends the tally climbs even higher.

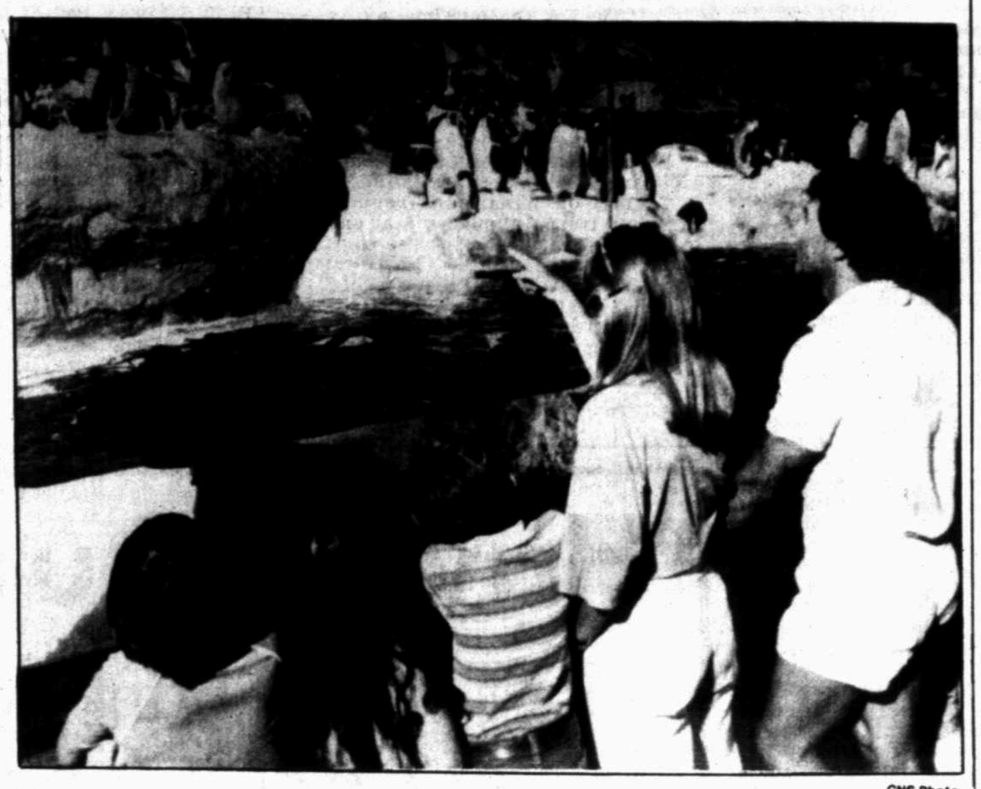

At about $10 a head, that makes the penguins among the top money earners in the country, surpassing the earning potential of even the brightest professional sports stars.

And all the penguins want is plenty of cold and fish.

Even Shamu, the lovable killer whale at Sea World, has had to learn to play second fiddle to the Adelie and Emperor penguins which join other smaller species in the encounter, a 5,000-square-foot enclave behind thick glass panels where the temperature never rises above freezing.

Outside the glass, penguin buffs and the just plain curious are transported past the 100-foot-long viewing area on a moving sidewalk. The encounter resembles an antarctic mountain whose slopes reach the sea. Icicles cling to the underside of a ragged shelf of blue-and-white ice jutting over crystal-clear seawater. More than 12,000 pounds of fresh crushed ice is blown daily into the encounter to provide a realistic substrate on which the penguins strut, slide and waddle.

So the Adelie and Emperor penguins will feel at home, they are joined by King, Gentoo, Macaroni and Rockhopper penguins, all native to the bitter cold environment at the bottom of the world.

CNS Photo

A moving sidewalk transports visitors past the 100-foot-long viewing window of the Antarctic exhibit at Sea World's new $7 million Penguin Encounter. Behind the glass more that 300 penguins live in a sub-freezing atmosphere simulating Antarctic conditions.

If penguins are the most comic of the bird family, then spectators who sit on benches in back of the moving sidewalk run a close second with their reactions to these strange creatures.

National Gallery of Art centenary of artist's birth

By BENJAMIN FORGEY
The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — The painter Amedeo Modigliani, Modi to his friends in Montparnasse, was born 99 years ago in Livorno, a Tuscan port city of no great distinction, to an aristocratic business family down on its luck. When he died in Paris in 1920 from the combined effects of tuberculosis and alcohol he was known to only a lucky few. He became famous — the Modigliani — shortly after that.

The National Gallery of Art has begun an exhibition of his works, in a slightly premature celebration of the centenary of his birth (the show closes on March 18, four months before the actual birth date). It is a wonderful show of 53 works, about evenly divided between paintings and drawings plus two heads carved in stone, full of the beauty and strange dignity that Modigliani imparted to his subjects.

My own first encounter with Modigliani's art was memorable and short. It was in one of those darkened lecture halls where slides are shown and the teacher, Robert Rosenblum, then a young art historian (now a famous one) with a contagious enthusiasm for art (principally expressed, in my recollection, by splendid non-stop runs of incisive art adjectives), was complaining in high gear about the limitations of the course.

We were covering, or trying to, a century and a half of Western painting, from the Romantics to the Abstract Expressionists, and Rosenblum was saying how impossible this was. Why, he said, there was hardly time even to mention interesting figures who for one reason or another didn't quite fit into the linear stream of things, painters such as Modigliani (and this was the first time I had heard the name), the relentless bohemian whose art was so rich and so Italian but so superficially attached to Cubism and the other revolutionary art researches swirling from studio to studio in the Paris of his day.

What I don't remember exactly is the image that Rosenblum flashed briefly on the screen to illustrate his point. I really think it was a portrait, but I'd like to think it was one of Modigliani's breathtakingly sexual female nudes. Princeton was still a desperately all-male institution in the late '50s. I can well imagine the effect that would have had, can hear as if it did happen the collective gasp in that dark room.

In any case, it was a discovery, an important addition to my list of personal finds, which at the time was made up of a few writers and, mostly, jazz musicians. It was like a secret club with universal membership: when you met someone who could talk passionately about jazz, you felt you had made a friend for life. Modigliani, more than any other single painter, added the dimension of art to my version of the club, so my admiration and affection for him are lasting.

Early enthusiasms often fade, usually for just cause. The frank sexuality of Modigliani's nudes was high on the list of reasons I so admired his art at age 20.

I don't remember seeing any Modigliani paintings during my first, museum-haunting trip to Paris in 1959 — pre-eminent among many first-time art shocks was the size of Gericault's "Raft of the Medusa," larger by far than the projected image of the slide! — but I returned to the dorm with a plentiful supply of poster-sized Modi reproductions.

Travel plans 'choice vacation experiences'

By MORRIS D. ROSENBERG
The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

Whether on a cruise ship in the Galapagos, by leisurely hotel-barge along winding canals in France's Loire Valley, in a balloon over Burgundy or via private jet around the world, some choice vacation experiences await the adventurous traveler in 1984.

While none of these trips can be considered low-cost, not all seem to be priced with the carriage trade in mind. A few examples:

— METROPOLITAN TOURING'S Galapagos Cruises. These isolated islands about 600 miles off the coast of Ecuador boast plant and animal specimens found nowhere else.

(In fact, the flora and fauna here were studied by Charles Darwin and inspired his theory of evolution.) And Galapagos tourism operates under strict rules designed to protect the environment and its creatures. The islands form the most popular part of the Ecuadorian National Parks System and are included annually in many tour packages.

But scientists say this year may prove to be special in the evolution of the islands. According to Metropolitan Touring of Quito, the next 12 months may show "a rare, sudden shift in ecological activity" because of "El Nino," the combination of shifting winds and warm sea currents blamed for the torrential rains that devastated many Pacific coastal regions last year.

El Nino's immediate effects on the Galapagos were a decrease in sea life and an increase in both plant and animal life on land. Scientists reported seeing colonies of fish never before seen there, and desert areas turned tropical — though these are expected to return rapidly to desert again.

The Metropolitan Touring cruise ship is the 1,500-ton, 90-passenger MV Santa Cruz. On a typical seven-night cruise, you embark from Guayaquil and spend the first day at sea.

Stops include Hood Island, with its red-and-green-trimmed marine iguanas, masked boobies, albatross colonies and tame mocking birds; James Island, with fur seals, sea lions and flamingos; Santa Cruz Island, home of the Charles Darwin Research Station and giant tortoises; Bartoleme Island for swimming and hiking; Tower Island, the bird sanctuary; and Fernandina Island, with marine iguanas, sea lions and flightless cormorants, pelicans and penguins on the beaches. From the Baltra Island airport passengers fly back to Guayaquil or Quito.

The cost of a seven-night cruise (one of a number of options) ranges from $910 to $1,400 per person, depending on cabin location. This includes all meals and guided shore excursions but does not include air fare to and from Ecuador and between Baltra and Guayaquil or Quito.

Information from Adventure Associates, 5925 Maple, Dallas, Tex. 75235 (800-527-2500).

— HORIZON CRUISES' hotel-barge and balloon trips in France. The American-owned company, now celebrating its eighth year of operation on French canals, has expanded to include five deluxe hotel-barges, 11 self-drive boats and six hot-air balloons that began offering adventures over the Burgundy countryside last year.

The ancient French canal system dates back to the reign of Henri IV in 1604. The canals, once heavily used to transport bulk commodities, are less than 50 feet wide and only six feet deep. And because of size restrictions created by the locks, boats are restricted to 126 feet in length and 16½ feet in width. To ensure comfort, Horizon Cruises limits the number of passengers on its two largest vessels to 16 and 13.

Passengers go on frequent excursions on the company's buses (which follow the barges) to Roman ruins, vineyards, chateaus and medieval towns. At breakfast there are croissants from the local bakery, while the five-course dinners might include fresh vegetables gathered by the lockkeeper.

Ballooning takes place at Horizon's renaissance chateau in Cezy, from the hotel-boat Liberte and from the medieval town of Vezelay in Burgundy. Side trips are scheduled between balloon flights.

One week on the Burgundy Canal aboard the Horizon costs $1,200 per person. It includes (as do all prices for boat and balloon trips) all meals, wine, excursions, chateau or hotel accommodations, games, bicycles and transfer from Paris to the boat, Vezelay or the chateau (as applicable), plus return.

More information: Horizon Cruises, 215 North 75th St., Belleville, Ill. 62223 (800-851-3448.

— HEMPHILL-HARRIS' 1984 world cruise by private jet. This seventh annual "one-of-a-kind adventure" is a 37-day journey from Easter Island to Rio de Janeiro. This year the California tour operator is celebrating 56 years (combined) of arranging deluxe travel.

More information: Hemphill-Harris Travel Corp., 16000 Ventura Blvd., Suite 200, Encino, Calif. 91436 (800-421-0454).

Ski Patrol provides safety (for free) on slopes

From Wire Reports

There's one ski resort facility that skiers rarely talk about and never intend to utilize. But when they need it, there's no charge for the service, and it's far more important to them than lodges, lifts or slopes: the Ski Patrol.

The 24,000 members of the National Ski Patrol, a nationwide, Denver-based public-service organization formed 45 years ago and chartered by Congress in 1980, watch over U.S. ski trails, provide emergency care and transport victims of accidents to hospitals when necessary.

Whether serving as unpaid volunteers or paid employees of the resorts, they consider themselves well trained, professional rescue experts.

Ski resorts have increased their emphasis on safety in recent years, and a few sponsor benefit days when a portion of the proceeds from the schussboomers are earmarked for patrol members in the region.

On Dec. 3 the Wisp Ski Area at Deep Creek Lake, Md., hosted the first such day in the Southern Appalachian region; Hunter Mountain, Hunter, N.Y., has sponsored an event annually for 14 years and has contributed a record $60,000 to the patrol's region.

Ski Liberty at Fairfield, Pa., which was the first resort to institute the practice, has scheduled its 15th annual National Ski Patrol Recognition Day on Feb. 19.

Ski Liberty's 63-member patrol (4 paid employees) recently purchased a second snowmobile with benefit funds and soon will receive digital thermometers and electronic blood-pressure measuring units, according to Bill Clowser, a Hagerstown (Md.) businessman and patrol leader. A portion of the funds are donated to their Pennsylvania region.

"We're like any other safety organization," says Stephen Over, executive director of the National Ski Patrol. "We're trying to get people thinking about ski safety."

Over reports that the most common ski accidents are "sprains, strains and twists. Improperly set bindings are the number one cause of injuries." He urges skiers to check their bindings, "to make sure they will stay on when they should and come off when they should."

Think winter. That's the suggestion from snow-frosted Michigan and Minnesota, each of which is now offering a free guide for visitors.

"Michigan, Where Winter Comes to Life" is a beautifully illustrated, full-color, 48-page booklet emphasizing skiing and snowmobiling but also including details on other atttractions and activities, plus a comprehensive directory of sources for tourist information.

"Explore Minnesota This Winter" is a 43-page winter sports guide and calendar of events covering snowmobile trails, ski areas and including a list of events and information sources.

Isle gives traveler two nations

BY MICHAEL CARLTON
The Los Angeles Times—
Washington Post News Service

MARIGOT, St. Martin — This is a tale of two countries. A minor tale, to be sure, but a story nonetheless.

Once upon a time there were two men, one French and one Dutch. On a sun-washed day in the midst of a warm Caribbean winter, they decided to divide the splendid island on which they lived. They stood back-to-back and walked in opposite directions along the periphery of the island until they met once again. They then drew a line between their starting and ending points, a line that became the border between their two countries.

It seems the Frenchman was the quicker walker of the two, probably because he drank less of his bottle of wine than did the Dutchman of his bottle of gin. At any rate, when the walk was over, the Frenchman had claimed 21 square miles of the island for his country. The Dutchman had managed only 16 square miles for the Netherlands.

And so, dear readers, were born the countries of St. Martin (French) and Sint Maarten (Dutch), the smallest piece of real estate shared by two countries in the world.

Not only was the Frenchman a faster walker, he was a smarter one, too, for the French part of the island is the more beautiful, with an ethereal beauty that recalls the countryside of France. But the Dutchman, ever practical, got the side with the best port, and so his Sint Maarten side prospered and grew and became the richer of the two.

Although the story about the two walkers is probably apocryphal, it well illustrates the differences between the two sides of this one small island. There are no guards and only two signs ("Bienvenue Partie Francaise" when you enter St. Martin; "Welkom aan de Nederlandse Kant" upon arrival in Sint Maarten) marking the border, but you sense the change immediately. Sint Maarten is very Dutch: bustling, commercial, touristy. St. Martin is very French: casual, bucolic, seemingly deserted.

Sint Maarten, with a population of nearly 20,000, has most of the tourist hotels, all the casinos, the only golf course, and the majority of the shops on this two-country island. Less than 9,000 people live on the French side, and there are very few hotels there. But, "mon dieu," the restaurants!

What the French side lacks in hotels it certainly makes up in restaurants. To illustrate: The tiny village of Grande Case, which barely houses 500 people, has 15 restaurants, many of them first-rate. And in the capital of Marigot, there are another dozen restaurants that would be comfortable on the Riviera.

This dichotomy is what makes Sint Maarten-St. Martin so attractive to tourists, more than 350,000 of whom made the trip to the island last year. The island appeals to those who want a sprawling resort hotel like Sint Maarten's 585-room Mullet Bay Sheraton Hotel, as well as those who would rather hide away in a tiny inn like the five-room Bertines, where Bernard and Christine Potichas look after you with Gallic concern.

A tourist can walk along bustling Voor Straat in the Dutch capital of Philipsburg, where the narrow, one-way sidewalks are crowded by wide, two-way people from cruise ships shopping for Bols gin, Heineken beer and Dutch cheeses. Or, a tourist can stroll along the nearly deserted Rue de la Liberte in the French capital of Marigot and browse for Mumm's champagne, Vuitton handbags and Lalique crystal. In both capitals, the goods are duty-free, and the bargains are exceptional.

The high-rollers on the Dutch side can gamble at one of six casinos; the low-rollers on the French side can gambol at Orient Beach, a nudist's delight and one of the prettiest beaches on the island.

On the Dutch side, in Philipsburg, you can enter the spectacular confines of Spritzer & Fuhrmann, the Neiman-Marcus of the Caribbean, and marvel at the beauty of Patek Philippe and Piaget watches, Wedgwood and Royal Doulton porcelain, Waterford and Baccarat crystal. Or, on the French side, in Grande Case, you can enter the humble wooden building that houses Pierre Lapin, a delightful shop stuffed with hand-sewn dolls and hand-stitched dresses.

You can get into a traffic jam going into Philipsburg or you can wander the rural roads of St. Martin, seeing hundreds of goats but very few cars. The choice is simply yours.

St. Martin-Sint Maarten is one of the few islands that gives you such a clear choice. There really is something for everyone (to use a travel cliche) on St. Martin-Sint Maarten. If you tire of one country, all you need do is jump in a car and, within 20 minutes, you'll be in the other.

Information given on travel to St. Martin

The Los Angeles Times—
Washington Post News Service

HOW TO GET TO ST. MARTIN — American Airlines flies to Queen Juliana Airport from New York and Dallas. Pan American from New York, Eastern and ALM from Miami. There is also service from St. Thomas on Winair and regular flights from Antigua on Liat and Prinair. A number of cruise ships also call on the island.

GETTING AROUND — It is a good idea to rent a car, since the attractions of the island are scattered. Count on paying about $30 a day for a rental car. Taxis are plentiful and there is a bus service (85 cents between Philipsburg and Marigot).

WHERE TO STAY: Both St. Martin and Sint Maarten have excellent hotels, led by the posh La Samanna on the French side. Much less expensive, but still very nice, is the Grande Case Beach Hotel, a short walk away from the restaurant-laden town of the same name. The Mullet Bay Sheraton Beach Hotel gets most of the conventions and has the island's only golf course.

WHERE TO EAT: St. Martin and Sint Maarten have the Caribbean's most varied and perhaps best cuisine. Among the best on the French side: La Nacelle, Auberge Gourmande, L'Escapade and Le Toucan in Grande Case; Le Santal, La Vie en Rose, Le Nadaillac, David's, Le Mini Club and Le Boucainier in Marigot. On the Dutch side: Antoine, West Indian Tavern and L'Escargot in Philipsburg; Bilboquet in Pointe Blanche. As is true in most locations in the Caribbean, the restaurants on St. Martin-Sint Maarten aren't cheap.

WHAT TO DO: Neither St. Martin nor Sint Maarten is much of a sightseeing island. The best reason to come here: 32 beaches, some of which allow nude bathing, and all of which offer soft, cool sand and clear, cool water.

MORE INFORMATION: For St. Martin: French West Indies Tourist Board, 610 Fifth Avenue, New York 10020. For Sint Maarten: Sint Maarten Tourist Office, 25 West 39th St., New York 10018.

ASK THE FDIC

FDIC will 'continue' lawsuits filed by FNB

By THOMAS R. PROCOPIO

If a suit was filed in district court by First National Bank of Midland, before it was closed, against a guarantor of a note that was in default, what becomes of the suit?

The FDIC does continue those lawsuits and in most cases, the firm that was representing the bank will continue to represent us. However, there have been occasions when the FDIC's legal department has felt it was in the best interest of the receivership to change firms — if there is a confilct of interest of any kind. However, we do not drop a suit just because the bank closed.

• • •

My question is concerning certificates of deposit which I now have with First National Bank of Midland (RepublicBank First National Midland).

I have on deposit with them two certificates of substantial amounts and since my contract is with First National and I did not make any binding contract with the bank to sell and/or transfer and since First National has been declared defunct and sold to RepublicBank of Dallas my contention is that I should be allowed to withdraw these accounts without penalty.

The FDIC is in the process of confiscating the salary of President Wageman, therefore, if this transaction is declared illegal I think the sale of certificates of deposit should be considered in the same manner. Please advise.

I referred you question to Kenneth J. Marino, an FDIC attorney, and he said "If you feel that you have the right to require RepublicBank to permit you to redeem your certificates of deposit prior to maturity, I would suggest that you arrange a meeting with one of their account officers to discuss the matter in person.

After such a meeting, should you remain convinced that your position is correct and that RepublicBank does not see it your way, I would suggest that you consult with your attorney. As the attorney for the FDIC it would be inappropriate for me to advise you on the relative strengths and weaknesses of your position.

"As far as the pending litigation relating to the salary of President Wageman, the resolution of the issues raised therein has no conceivable bearing and/or impact on questions relating to your certificate of deposit. Further comment on this issue is clearly inappropriate since the matter is presently in litigation, and matters relating to pending litigation are kept strictly confidential."

• • •

Much has been discussed about the directors of the First National Bank. What about the officers of the bank if one would have reason to believe there might have been fraud through the computer? How far back will the records be checked to tie into where the bank was solvent?

I also referred this question to our attorney, Kenneth J. Marino and he said, "Any and all potential fraud claims will be investigated as potential sources of recovery to the FDIC. We will review records as far back as the laws of Texas permits: In other words, we will attempt to document such claims unless they are so old as to be barred by the applicable statute of limitations."

Are you still accepting applications for employment and do you have openings right now?

Yes, there are numerous positions currently available. Our new personnel director is Carol S. Nichols who recently joined the FDIC from a local bank. Anyone wishing to be considered for employment may contact her following the completion of form 171. The application can be picked up on the tenth floor of Wall Towers West, Wall Street, Midland, or by calling 685-2802 and requesting that one be mailed to you.

• • •

Over a period of many years FNB must have paid millions in so-called insurance coverage to the FDIC, now the risk is called and the FDIC has become a prejudicial party. Why, under these circumstances, is the FDIC appointed liquidator without say by other ereditors, as would normally happen in bankruptcy cases?

It would appear that including the insurance "premiums" and sale of assets the FDIC will finish with handsome profits.

We believe that in this particluar division of this particular agency, can do a better job than the private sector in liquidating banks. First of all, we've proven we are less expensive over the years.

Our expenses to collection ratio has averaged right around 2 percent which is unheard of in a private bankruptcy matter. Basically, because the FDIC staff is on government payrolls we are paid relatively low compared to the private sector trustees in bankruptcy situations.

In addition, we are talking about public money — the public's insured deposits — and I don't think the public wants that money in the hands of private industry. I think they want the government to be involved — protecting their money.

In private industry, companies are only answerable to their stockholders. We are answerable to the FDIC board of directors, the general public and Congress.

I believe that the public sees us as having a much more conservative approach to liquidation than they would in the private sector. I don't think there is any other group which could run these kinds of liquidations based on a 2 percent expense to collection ratio.

• • •

Why the apparent undue haste in the foreclosure and sale of FNB to RepublicBank without waiting three to four days for Midland citizens and the board of FNB to come up with a possible solvency program?

I believe I answered that in an earlier column when I stated that the agencies involved, knew for a long time that the bank was in trouble and gave the bank directors and the community an opportunity to do something, and for quite a long time nothing was done.

While I can't speak for the comptroller of the currency, it must have been his perception that the bank was not salvageable.

As I have said earlier, the FDIC does not close banks. I'm not privy to whether it was too late or not, however, I would say it must have been. The comptroller of the currency doesn't like banks, like this one, to close.

The comptroller and the FDIC, both, have strong feelings about having to liquidate a large bank like this because it doesn't do much for confidence in banking as a whole. So, I would think that everything possible was done and if an extra three to four days would have made a difference I'm sure they (the comptroller's office) would have given the bank and the community the extra time if they thought it could salvage the situation.

• • •

My wife and I have a joint checking account and a joint money market account in a bank. We wish to break these deposits into accounts that will assure us of protection by the FDIC for accounts less than $100,000. Please advise the legal and proper way to style these accounts so that they are all under the FDIC $100,000 umbrella.

All banks have personnel on their staffs who have the responsibility of knowing how to break up accounts for the maximum amount of insurance coverage. So, you should discuss this matter with your banker.

If, however, you require a second opinion, you can call the open bank section of the FDIC's division of bank supervision in Dallas for advice. The telephone number is 214-767-5501.

• • •

I would like to clarify a statement I made earlier this week in an article about property taxes which appeared in the Reporter-Telegram Thursday, Jan. 26. In the article, I was quoted as saying the FDIC will pay all taxes — real and personal property taxes. The FDIC will pay all real property taxes, however, we are exempt under a federal statue (12 U.S.C. 1825) from paying other taxes such as personal property taxes. The FDIC has budgeted approximately $407,000 for property taxes on property it currently holds. This figure is based on the FDIC holding the property for the entire year.

U.S. nuclear power industry 'on ropes again'

By The Los Angeles Times—Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — The U.S. nuclear power industry suddenly is on the ropes again, reeling under an almost daily barrage of blows to its perceived ability to successfully build and operate the huge atomic reactors that generate 12 percent of America's electricity.

In the last two weeks, a nearly completed $3.3 billion plant in Illinois, Byron, was denied an operating license on safety grounds, the first time this has ever happened. A second nearly completed $1.7 billion plant in Ohio was deemed so flawed its owners proposed converting it to a less-dangerous coal plant.

Two other plants in Indiana, Marble Hill, in which $2.5 billion had been invested, were abandoned in despair by a nearly bankrupt utility. And a temporarily shut-down $1 billion nuclear plant in Alabama, Browns Ferry, laid off 400 workers because of "numerous violations" of government rules.

Beyond the cost to the utilities, their shareholders and eventually, in many cases, to their customers, the shakedown in the industry almost certainly will mean that many of the 48 nuclear power plants still under construction will not be completed.

With little increase in demand for power in the United States the past few years, partly a result of the recession, utilities currently have no trouble meeting their customers' needs. But some experts think the combination of the cancellations and a resurgence in demand for electricity could make power shortages once again a feature of life for many Americans in the 1990s.

The nuclear industry's woes are good news for the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC). Many of the abandoned units would have replaced aging oil-fired plants that currently use almost half the amount of crude oil this country imports daily.

Ironically, only a month ago the U.S. nuclear industry optimistically was looking to its best year since the traumatic 1979 accident at Three Mile Island in Pennsylvania, the worst in civilian atomic power history.

Industry officials talked hopefully of 14 new power plants receiving licenses in 1984, equaling the single-year record, joining the 79 already in operation.

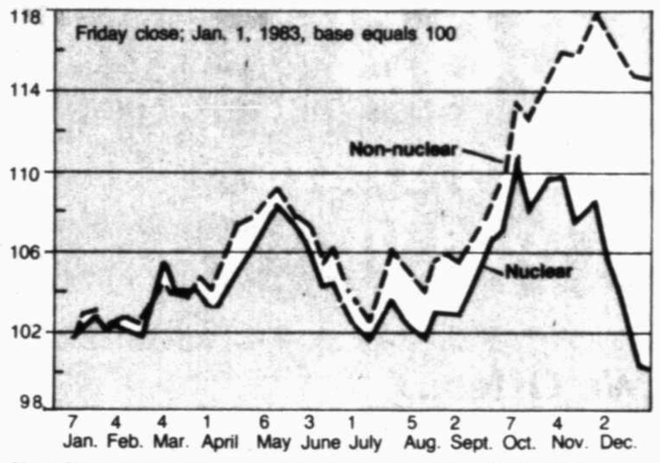

So what has triggered this chain reaction of events that plunged the nuclear industry into gloom?

The answer, government and industry sources agree, is that the day of reckoning finally seems to be at hand for a number of "problem plants," whose owners have found it most difficult to adjust to the tougher licensing climate that has emerged since the Three Mile Island accident.

"To some extent, it's a matter of coincidence that all of these are hitting the headlines at once," said Victor Gilinsky, a member of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission. "But there are a lot of troubled projects, and a number of them presumably still will go under."

Nuclear vs. non-nuclear utilities

While more than 57 atomic power plants ordered before the Three Mile Island accident subsequently were canceled, a number of utilities — many with little nuclear experience — continued forging ahead building reactors, seemingly bewildered by the blizzard of new regulations that slowed their projects to a snail's pace.

"I think our major problems are with the smaller utilities who didn't have an appreciation for what they are getting into and didn't develop within their organizations a spirit of getting the thing built properly," said NRC Chairman Nunzio J. Palladino.

One reason for this, said Gilinsky, who was appointed to the NRC by President Ford and is the only remaining commissioner to predate the Reagan administration, was that "enforcement of rules during construction was very lax" before the Three Mile Island accident.

"Utilities were getting away with quite a lot and others thought they could get away with more," Gilinsky said. "Now, ironically with four Reagan appointees on the commission, the chickens have come home to roost."

As a result, Palladino, looked to by the nuclear industry to carry out President Reagan's promise to help make it easier to build atomic power plants, found himself in the unexpected position in November 1981 of warning utilities that quality control at construction sites appeared to be a major problem.

"At that time, there were about a half-dozen plants that seemed to be steeped in these problems," Palladino said.

Palladino said it was "unfortunate" that plants like Zimmer, the $1.7 billion facility located outside Cincinnati which faces possible conversion into a coal-fired unit at a cost of additional hundreds of millions of dollars, got to a point where their builders felt they could not meet NRC requirements.

"Nevertheless, we felt that our requirements had to be met so these plants could be judged to be safe and the public health and safety would be protected," Palladino said.

As the problems at these plants festered, and construction timetables began to be reckoned in terms of decades, the cost of the projects increased as much as tenfold, fueled by an unprecedented period of double-digit inflation and 20 percent prime interest rates.

The threat these multibillion-dollar overruns could pose to utilities whose securities were once viewed by Wall Street as the safest of risks was brought home with a crash when Washington Public Power Supply System partially defaulted on bonds issued for an ambitious program to build five huge reactors.

"It is increasingly evident that the industry itself is largely to blame for its dismal history and dark future," said Rep. Edward J. Markey, D-Mass., a leading critic of the nuclear industry. "I say, let nuclear power meet its maker in the marketplace."

But despite its current woes, industry officials insist nuclear power has a future, and that despite all the cost overruns, the atom still has an economic advantage over its archrival, coal, in most parts of the country.

"I think nuclear needs to be a part of our country's energy mix," Energy Secretary Donald P. Hodel said.

But with not a single new atomic power plant ordered since 1978, Gilinsky said he thinks the future of nuclear power will depend on whether the current lull is used to straighten out the problems of the past.

"We're still cleaning up the problems of the past and we'd better get them sorted out before we think of going any further," Gilinsky said. "If the performance in the meantime is poor, people are going to be so turned off that they never will consider building nuclear plants again."

Women making steady progress in corporate employment

By The Los Angeles Times—Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — In his State of the Union address, President Reagan Wednesday night painted a dramatic picture of employment gains by women during the recovery, saying they filled three-quarters of the new jobs last year in the prestigious ranks of management, the professions and technical work.

In fact, the gains — while substantial — were not nearly as dramatic or as exceptional as the president indicated. While women made progress in filling prestigious white collar jobs traditionally dominated by men, there was no breakthrough. The new jobs which the president cited included many in sales and office work, where women have always found work, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, which prepared the numbers for the president's use.

Reagan, seeking to dramatize the strength of the economic recovery, mentioned that, "In 1983, women filled 73 percent of all new jobs in managerial, professional and technical fields."

What the president did was combine employment figures for the two chief categories of white collar employment — one called "managerial and professional" and the other called "technical, sales and administrative support."

In the first category, women filled 62 percent of the 440,000 new jobs created in 1983. This category comprises a wide range of managerial and professional jobs, including some, like teaching and nursing, where women have traditionally outnumbered men, and others, like law and engineering, where the reverse is true.

The most dramatic employment gains for women last year were in the second category, "technical, sales and administrative support," which includes sales workers, office workers and technicians — jobs that paid a median income of $287 a week, compared to $445 for the managerial and professional category, according to the latest BLS data for 1983.

Of the 496,000 new jobs created in this category, women filled 83 percent and men 17 percent, according to the BLS.

Combining the two categories, there were 935,000 new jobs created, based on comparisons of average annual employment for 1983 and 1982 in these job categories — 73 percent filled by women, 27 percent by men, the BLS said.

Women made similar gains in the last major economic recovery, in 1975-'76, filling 70 percent of the new white collar jobs in that period, according to BLS statistics.

The Women's Equity Action League, a research and lobbying organization, said yesterday that, contrary to the president's statement, women "did not make major breakthroughs in 1983" in new job fields. "Most women entering 'managerial, professional and technical' jobs last year went into nursing and teaching, career fields that are traditionally considered 'women's work,' work that is traditionally low paying.

"Women are beginning to enter higher-paying manager-professional-technical occupations such as law, medicine and computers, but these numbers still are quite small compared to the men holding these jobs. The president's '73 percent' figure is quite misleading. ... "

The president correctly noted that the recovery has produced a surge of new jobs, pulling down the unemployment rate faster than nearly all economists had predicted.

Paying tribute to entrepreneurs and "risk-takers" in the "sunrise industries of high tech and ... small business," Reagan said, "They helped 4 million Americans find jobs in 1983. More people are drawing paychecks tonight than ever before."

A look at the top 10 companies in the Fortune magazine list of the 500 largest industrial companies shows that most report having the same number, or fewer employees in December 1983, than in December 1982, when the recovery was beginning. American Telephone & Telegraph Co., General Electric Co., Sears, Roebuck & Co., ITT, GTE Corp., K mart and Mobil all are in that category. The exceptions, reporting increased employment, are General Motors Corp., Ford Motor Co. and International Business Machines Corp.

Peter F. Drucker, a professor of business and management, said the job-creating role of new and small businesses is more important than ever. "Indeed, over the last three years, 'Fortune 500' companies have lost some 3 million jobs, but businesses less than 10 years old have added at least 750,000 jobs and slightly more than a million new employes," he said, writing in the current edition of the Harvard Business Review.

MGF announces final exchange extension

MGF International Finance N.V. (MGF International) announced today the final extension of its pending offer to exchange class A and class B non-interest bearing convertible senior subordinated guaranteed debentures due 1989 (the new debentures) for any and all of its $34,815,000 principal amount 8 1/4 percent convertible subordinated guaranteed debentures due 1995 (the old debentures).

The exchange offer will expire at 12 midnight, Luxembourg time (6 p.m., New York time) on Jan. 30, 1984.

MFG International has received tenders of old debentures amounting to $28,040,000 (80.5 percent). Of that amount, $22,547,000 (64.8 percent) have been accepted by MGF International subject, however, to the execution by tendering holders of certain additional documents, and $1,496,000 (4.3 percent), which were tendered after Dec. 29, 1983, will be accepted by MGF International upon consummation of the exchange offer. Based upon documentation received to date, MGF International does not anticipate accepting certain tenders totaling $3,530,000 (10.1 percent).

For tenders of old debentures already accepted by MGF International, the conversion price of the class A new debentures to be issued will be $.46 per share. For tenders of old debentures made after Dec. 29, 1983, the per share conversion price of the class A new debentures to be issued will be the greater of $.46 or 105 percent of the most recent closing bid price of MGF common stock on or prior to the exchange date, as defined in the exchange offer offering circular.

Two of MGF's participating banks have committed to fund the Dec. 1, 1983 interest payment with respect to nontendered old debentures contingent upon, among other things, the exchange of at least 65 percent of the old debentures in the exchange offer. As a result, MGF International intends to make the Dec. 1, 1983 interest payment on the untendered old debentures as soon as practicable after Jan. 30, 1984.

All tenders not accepted by MGF International prior to 12 midnight, Luxembourg time on Jan. 30, 1984 may thereafter be withdrawn.

Drilling permits increase

DENVER — A total of 2,240 permits to drill for oil and gas were issued in the United States in the week of Jan. 9, according to Petroleum Information Corp., Denver. The total is an increase from 1,902 in the preceding week and from the month-ago figure of 2,078.

In the comparable week a year ago, operators permitted only 1,647 wells. Three years ago, at the height of the 80's surge of domestic drilling, permits for the comparable week totaled 3,299.

The total in the second week of this year included permits for 231 purely exploratory wells...new field wildcats...178 'other exploratory' wells and 1,831 development wells to be drilled in existing fields. The new field wildcat total was down from the month-ago figure of 257, but was above the same week a year ago when permits were issued for only 150 new field wildcats.

Texas, with 589 new permits issued was the leader among the states in the week of Jan. 9.

Not all permits issued are actually drilled, but permits are the earliest statistical indication of the level of drilling activity to be expected, according to Petroleum Information.

Petroleum Information Corp. is a wholly owned subsidiary of A.C. Nielsen Co., Northbrook, Ill. PI offers comprehensive reporting services, data and data analysis, maps and logs to the petroleum and related industries.

IRS says sick pay is income

Taxpayers who received sick pay benefits from their employer in 1983 must include the payments as income on their federal tax return, the Internal Revenue Service says.

The payments are taxable whether they were made directly by the employer or from a welfare fund, a state sickness or disability fund, or an insurance company, provided the plan was paid for by the employer.

Benefits received under an accident or health insurance policy for which the employee paid the premiums are not considered taxable by the IRS.

More information on sick pay benefits is contaned in the free IRS Publication 525, "Taxable and Nontaxable Income," which can be ordered on the handy order form in the tax package or by calling IRS.

Local property taxes due soon

AUSTIN — An important deadline occurs next week for property owners in Texas. Ron Patterson, executive director of the state Property Tax Board, reminds Texans that local property taxes assessed for 1983 are due by the end of January.

"Taxes not paid before Feb. 1 are delinquent and begin to accrue penalty and interest," Patterson says.

He points out that delinquent 1983 taxes will incur a six percent penalty and one percent interest charge on Feb. 1. Charges continue to add up at the combined rate of two percent per month or portion of a month that the taxes remain unpaid, until they reach a total of 18 percent on July 1.

After that, interest accrues at one percent a month. Taxes delinquent for a year would incur penalty and interest charges of 24 percent of the original tax.

UNDER TEXAS LAW, according to Patterson, taxes are owed on property whether or not the owner receives a tax bill, and there are only three exceptions to the Feb. 1 delinquency date: When the option of split payment is offered by a local government; when tax bills are mailed after Jan. 10, or when a tax-rate rollback election succeeds in lowering a tax rate after tax bills are mailed initially. Not all taxing units offer the split-payment option. When it is available, half of the 1983 tax must have been paid before Dec. 1, 1983. The second half is due before July 1 this year. Penalty on a delinquent second half-payment is 12 percent of the tax due, and interest will be added at one percent a month from July 1 on.

In some taxing units, tax bills may have been mailed after Jan. 10, or a successful tax-rate rollback election may have necessitated mailing corrected tax bills by a unit other than a school district. In both cases, the delinquency date is postponed and the new date must appear on the most recent tax statement, but penalty and interest will be added if taxes aren't paid before the new date.

Further penalty can be incurred by a tax delinquent on July 1. If a private attorney — rather than the city, county or other public staff attorney — is contracted to collect delinquencies after July 1, up to 15 percent of the total tax, penalty and interest may be added to defray the cost of those collections.

Patterson notes that the property tax code does provide some relief for taxpayers who are unable to pay delinquent taxes, penalty and interest all at one time.

A PROPERTY OWNER aged 65 or over may file a sworn affidavit with the appraisal district to defer paying any or all delinquency amounts on his homestead. However, the amounts are still owed on the property and continue to increase until paid or until the property changes hands.

Another option, but one which must be in a written agreement between the tax collector and property owner, is to pay delinquent tax, penalty and interest in installments over a period of not more than 36 months. With this option, too, the tax is still considered due until paid, and penalty and interest accrue on any unpaid balance.

Under certain conditions, a tax collector may choose to follow steps allowed by law to seize personal property, which is then sold to satisfy delinquent taxes. Property owners should contact their appraisal districts or local tax offices with any questions about delinquent taxes or payment and to find out if collection for taxing units in the appraisal district may have been consolidated in the appraisal office or in a particular tax office.

Tax returns take time

Taxpayers filing their 1983 federal income tax returns and claiming refunds should wait at least 10 weeks to contact the Internal Revenue Service about their refunds, the IRS says.

Generally, taxpayers who file returns early in the year may receive refunds in less than 10 weeks, unless the return was incorrect in some manner, according to the IRS.

Those taxpayers filing returns after April 1 should wait until after June 15 to contact the IRS about refunds.

RRC approves gas rate decrease

AUSTIN — The Railroad Commission has approved a $1.6 million decrease in contract gas rates between Exxon Gas System Inc. and Houston Lighting and Power Co.

The change will decrease the cost of gas sold through the contract from $4.246 per MMBtu (million British thermal units) to $3.823 per MMBtu. A thousand cubic feet of gas contains approximately one million Btu's of heat.

Houston Lighting and Power used the gas as fuel for electrical power generation in the Houston area.

During the second half of 1983 the commission approved nine similar contract rate reductions of more than $1 million. Those nine changes involved rate decreases totaling more than $47 million.

The changes affect the weighted average cost of gas for the buyersand can be passed through to their customers.

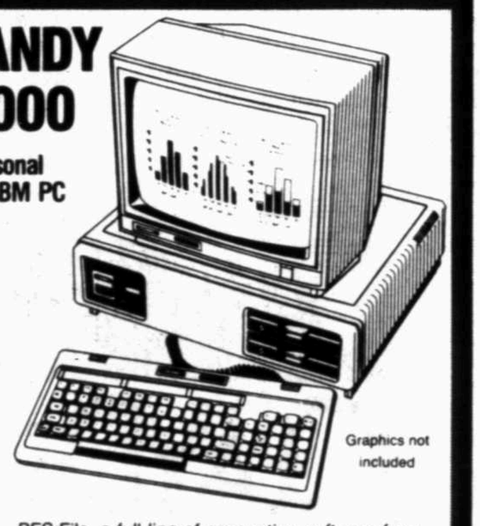

The changes involved contracts for gas sold by Delhi Gas Pipeline Corp. to United Texas Transmission Co. (two contracts totalling $15.7 million), Lone Star Gas Co. (two contracts totalling $13.4 million), Intratex Gas Co. ($1.1 million), Houston Pipe Line Co. ($6.9 million), and Texas Utilities Fuel Co. ($2.6 million). Another contract for gas sold by Tenngasco Gas Gathering Co. to Channel Industries Gas Co. involved a rate reduction of $7.4 million.

Bullock ready to lower boom

AUSTIN — State Comptroller Bob Bullock has announced Texas business operating outside state tax law will get a one-time-only, penalty-free chance in February to get right with the comptroller's office before Bullock lowers the boom in March.

"We'll give them 29 days in February to get right with the law," Bullock said. "If they come in and wipe the slate clean, we won't charge them penalty and we won't file charges against them. If they wait until March or if they wait until we find them, they'll be too late.

Comptroller enforcement officers will begin using new procedures designed to more quickly identify and collect taxes from errant taxpayers in March. Under the law, the comptroller can collect a 10 percent penalty and has the power to file criminal charges for unreported state taxes.

"We will only waive penalties and charges if the taxpayer comes forward voluntarily during February," Bullock said. "Chronic late filers, delinquent taxpayers and other taxpayers already under investigation or court prosecution don't qualify for this relief."

On February-only, no-penalty period is aimed at:

— A business operating without a tax permit.

— A business (such as an out-of-state corporation) which owes Texas taxes even though a tax permit isn't required.

— A business not reporting taxes on a new activity added since it got its original tax permit.

— A business with a single tax permit, but more than one business location.

"The February period is for the business operating outside the tax law or beyond the limits of its tax permit. We want them to come out in the open, get a permit and start reporting taxes like most other Texas business people," the comptroller said.

Information and assistance for taxpayers to take advantage of the one-month grace period will be provided by the comptroller's field offices or by calling 1-800-252-5555 toll free from anywhere in Texas.

PBGC offers field trip to Belize

A five-day working field trip into the relatively primitive country of Belize has been scheduled by Permian Basin Graduate Center. It includes three days of boat and land excursions where all participants will be able to snorkle, core and trench. The trip focuses on Holocene and Pleistocene shallow-marine-transitional carbonate depositional environments of northern Belize shelf. An overflight will enable participants to view areas examined on the ground.

The registration fee is $900, which includes airfare, all meals, and lodging. For more information, call the Graduate Center at 683-2832.

Texas gas production down slightly

AUSTIN — Railroad Commission chairman Mack Wallace has announced that Texas oil and gas wells produced 477,359,527 Mcf (thousand cubic feet) of gas in Oct. 1983, down .82 percent from field runs a year earlier.

That brings total production for the year through October to 4,629,290,854 Mcf of gas. Through October of 1982, Texas had produced 5,057,823,696 Mcf of gas.

Marketed gas production in October totaled 380,714,302 Mcf and reflected a 3.37 percent decrease from the Oct. 1982 volume. Marketed production is the gas left after liquid hydrocarbons have been separated on the lease from the 'wet' gas that is usually produced at the wellhead. It also does not include gas that is reinjected into the producing reservoir to maintain gas pressure, gas that is used to fuel production-related equipment on the lease site, or gas that is otherwise not marketed.

Exports of Texas-produced gas in October totaled 139,366,801 Mcf, and reflected a 14.08 percent decrease from the year-earlier month.

Texas gas production in October came from 237,530 oil and gas wells.

In Sept. 1983, Texas wells produced 471,960,379 Mcf of gas. Marketed gas production in September totaled 381,485,365 Mcf. September exports of Texas-produced gas totaled 151,395,869 Mcf.

Crude oil production up

AUSTIN — Texas crude oil production averaged 2,310,483 barrels daily in October, according to Railroad commission chairman Mack Wallace.

This figure compares with September production of 2,326,522 barrels daily and October 1982 production of 2,371,621 barrels daily.

Texas oil production allowable totaled 92,669,557 barrels. Texas oil production was 22.71 percent under the allowable for the month.

The state's top producing counties, followed by October production and cumulative production for the year, were: Pecos, 4,287,072 barrels, 41,939,778 barrels; Ector 3,745,463 barrels, 37,379,020 barrels.

Charley Miller(L), serviceman/installer, and Mike Dahlheim, General Manager, show Ionicron's Bacteriostatic Water Conditioner or Conditioning System. To find out more about these systems call Charley or Mike at 561-5355 or stop by and see them at 10055 County Road 125 West.

Ionicron- your conditioned water headquarters

If you haven't compared the difference between tap water or softened water and Ionicron conditioned water, you should make the test.

Over eight thousand Texas homeowners made that comparison and chose Ionicron.

Ionicron, Inc., a Dallas-based public company, is the exclusive distributor of water conditioning equipment manufactured by Ionics, Inc., offering homeowners ans businesses "clean water for life."

Ionicron markets a sophisticated water refinery that is installed at the source of the main water supply, where it conditions, not just softens, all incoming water.

"Water as it flows from the tap, is neither pure or natural, but a manufactured product thet has been treated with a variety of chemicals to clearify, alter and disinfect it," explained Irwin Karp, Ionicron's President and Chairman of the Board,

Karp said Ionicron's system filters out dirt, helps remove odors, chlorine, pesticides, DDT, hardness and many other undesirable contaminants.

"The response to our product has been overwhelming throughout the Permian Basin. Residents realize the seriousness of the West Texas water supply as well as recognize quality equipment to overcome many of the problems associated with it," Karp continued.

To date, Ionicron's bateriostatic water conditioning system is the only type of water conditioning system for homes and small businesses registered with the U.S. Enviromental Protection Agency.

Mike Dahlheim, Ionicron's Midland/Odessa general manager, said that in the Permian Basin, where the water is very hard, tap water will leave stains and deposits on plumbing fixtures.

"Hard water makes shampoo tough to lather and leaves soap scum in the tub as well as on the skin and in hair. This soap residue and irritating minerals left byhard water can also harbor bacteria and cause chapping, flaking,itching and dryness.

"These are the primary reasons why 30 percent of U.S. beauty salons use conditioned water, and why, in a recent article, Vogue magazine said conditioned water'... will pay for itself in improved hair and skin behavior, and in savings on soap and soap products.'" elaborated Dahlheim. Dahlheim explained that Ionicron conditioned water (as opposed to hard water) allows water heaters, dishwashers, washing machines, ice makers and all water-using appliances to perform more efficently while expanding their life expectancy.

Besides the Bacteriostatic water conditioning system, Ionicron offers Reverse Osmosis for drinking salt and sodium free water which also services ice makers. In addition, Ionicron has a patent pending on a portable distiller ideal for the non-homeowners or those on sodium resticted diets.

Ionicron, Inc., a public company with shares traded over the counter, is located on County Road 125 West, in the Terminal area next to Duccomun Metals. Corperately based in the Dallas area, Ionicron also has an office in Houston with independent distributors in Abilene, Waco, Austin, Wichita Falls, St. Louis, Chicago and Phoenix.

Jo Smith, owner of the Pennyrich Bra & Lingerie Shop, offers Midland the world's first natural organic line of cosmetics: Nutri- Metics. Of Course, the Pennyrich Shop still offers the best in custom-fitted bras, in lingerie, and in formal wear. The Pennyrich is located at 311 Dodson in Midland, or call 683-1045.

Pennyrich Shop brings you natural beauty

Competition is the base of free enterprise. Everyone has the right to make and sell a product, within limits, of course. But competition and the free enterprise system can make things very confusing at times for consumers. How do you know which brand to choose? It is impossible for anyone to know everything about any single product on the market. So how do you make your choice? Well, common sense will tell you which brand is the best for you and your family. Sometimes, looking at the ingredients can be a big help. Nutri-Metics cosmetics, available at the Pennyrich Bra & Lingerie Shop, was the first in the world to create a line of cosmetics made solely of natural organic ingredients.

Nutri-Metics was developed in 1961 by Mulford J. Nobbs, president of Con-Stan Industries, Inc. after he ahd received an invitation to visit Hunza, high in the Himilayan Mountains. There he found a population that appeared to have found the true secret of the Fountain of Youth. Women of 80 had skin that looked as if they were only 30. He learned that the golden apricot played a big part in their lives, both from eating the fruit and then using an oil from the kernel as their only form of skin care. He also found that there had been no crime in Hunza for over 100 years, that people did not know what sickness was, and that the age of 120 years was not at all uncommon. Why, men of Hunza often fathered children at 90 years old!

But the apricot oil was not the only reason for the remarkable preservation of the people of Hunza. They observe six basic rules: sunshine, fresh air, pure water, proper exercise, sufficient sleep, and natural food.

With this in mind, the company became the first in the world to make a line of cosmetics made of natural organic ingredients. In fact, reading from a list of the ingredients used in the Nutri-Metics line, it appears that the cosmatics could be eaten as well as used externally. In addition to the apricot oil, there are honey, almond, mint, oranges, lemons, limes, papaya extract, special herbs, soy bean, and avocado. The Nutri-Metics line is natural, organic, derma-genic, ph balanced, and hypo-allergenic.

Remember in buying your cosmetics that anything put onto the skin is absorbed into the bloodstream. With this in mind, you should realize that any chemical not safe enough to be put in the mouth is not safe enough to be put on the skin. This is one of the beauties of Nutri-Metics.

Remember,Nutri-Metics cosmetics are available locally at the Pennyrich Bra & Lingerie Shop, 311 Dodson in Midland. But besides the Nutri-Metics, the Pennyrich also carries, of course, the Pennyrich bra, beautiful lingerie, swimwear, Danskins, and formal wear. In addition, Jezebel strapless bras, halter bras, French-cut bras, and bras for all types of formal wear are available there. Jobst prosthesis and Camp masectomy bras are also available. If you prefer, special appointments made be made after hours for these items. The Pennyrich Bra & Lingerie Shop gives you the personal attention you deserve to serve your individual needs.

Next time your present bottle of make-up runs out, come by the Pennyrich Bra & Lingerie Shop at 311 Dodson in Midland and try Nutri-Metics. Compare the ingredients with your present cosmetice and decide which is really better for you. Then look at the beauty of Nutri-Metics. Even if you can't wear other cosmetics, remember, the Nutri-Metics cosmetics are all natural and organic. Of course, the Pennyrich is still the place to go for your custom-fitted bras and beautiful lingerie and formal wear. Call Jo Smith, owner of the Pennyrich, at 683-1045. Start today out as the first day of your new-found beauty.

Finance Commission to review use of loan production offices

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

Use of loan production offices in Texas by out-of-state financial institutions and by Texas banks is coming in for attention from the Banking Section of the State Finance Commission.

Department of Banking general counsel Archie Clayton says such offices involve agents or employees of banks soliciting, negotiating and servicing loans.

While the Texas Constitution prohibits branch banking, the U.S. Comptroller of the Currency has ruled that such offices aren't branches, and therefore aren't subject to State laws governing branch banking.

Most visible use of the loan production offices (LPOs) has been by out-of-state banks, particularly in the Dallas-Fort Worth and Houston areas.

Increased interest by Texas banks in LPOs, Clayton says, is due to use of automated teller machines and "increasing competition from other lenders."

Texas banks have established LPOs through their holding companies, using those holding companies to staff the LPOs, and then channeling loans through the holding company.

A bank not in a holding company must establish an office directly, which has occurred with Moran National Bank, which has an LPO in Albany, Clayton reports.

Banking Commissioner James L. Sexton says that if use of an LPO amounts to a bank doing business "in more than one place," then he has a constitutional duty to halt the practice.

But Sexton and Finance Commission chairman Carroll Sullivan, Georgetown, agreed that the result of action against banks might be simply to cause the LPOs to be operated through holding companies.

Sexton also commented that whatever is done, "you're going to make half the people made."

Clayton told the section that the proposed constitutional amendment, to be voted on Nov. 6, relating to powers of State-chartered banks, could alleviate the situation.

That amendment provides that State-chartered banks be allowed the same privileges as National banks.

Clayton commented, and section members agreed, that lending by out-of-state banks has been helpful to Texas' economy in the past, with Sexton commenting that attempting to stop use of LPOs might not "help anyone."

Ruben Johnson, Austin, commented that his concern is that the Finance Commission work to assure parity between State and National banks, and expressed concern over the ability of traditionally non-financial entities such as Sears, Roebuck & Co. to engage in loan production activities when banks may be restricted in those areas.

That particular topic also is a matter of concern to the House Financial Institutions Committee, which has set hearings for Feb. 7-8 in Austin to consider financial service conglomerates and other topics.

Economic Development Commission has been invited by the U.S. Department of Commerce to sponsor a trade mission of high-tech firms dealing with petroleum and petrochemical equipment to Eqypt, Saudi Arabia, Qutar and Iraq.

EDC plans to recruit firms for the trade mission later this yer.

EDC will be going to Peking August 1-14, at the invitation of the Peoples' Republic of China, for a trade show for high-tech petrochemical firms.

The agency's past efforts in international trade also have received attention from the Department of Commerce, which is awarding EDC an "E Certificate" for export service.

EDC previously won the award in 1969.

State board of Insurance heard discussion of the new "simplified" worker's compensation insurance policy developed by the National Council on Compensation Insurance, and delayed action on adopting the proposal until mid-February to allow for additional review and comment.

No strong opposition was received to the new policy, but various trade associations asked for the delay.

NCCI has asked that the new policy be made effective as of April 1.

The State Banking Board was told by Banking Commissioner Sexton that Department of Banking personnel will be working to prepare proposed rules on use of point-of-sale terminals and automated teller machines.

Department counsel Clayton reported a survey of other states indicates little has been done in that area, so the board is "on the leading edge of access regulation."

The board is attempting to draft rules which will satisfy a district court in a dispute over sharing of an ATM by three Bryan-College Station banks, but wants to avoid rules which would prevent new technology from coming into use, Sexton says.

UTPB searching for client businesses

The University of Texas of the Permian Basin-based Small Business Institute is currently selecting client businesses for its spring program.

Dr. Thomas E. Schaefer, UTPB professor of management and coordinator of the Small Business Institute at UTPB, said the program is sponsored by the Small Business Administration.

"The Small Busisness Administration assigns teams of senior or graduate students to provide research, case analysis, counseling and consulting services to businesses, without charge to the business," Schaefer said.

"In addition to being helpful to approximately 25 area businesses each year, the UTPB Small Business Institute program provides graduating students with a practical, real world, experience and an ideal opportunity to apply the skills they have been learning in the classroom to a live business environment," he said.

Since businesses are chosen on a first-come, first-served basis, interested business owners should contact Schaefer at 367—2156 or the SBA office in Lubbock at 806-743-7481.

World Oil forecasts brighter outlook for oil industry

HOUSTON(SWN) — World Oil magazine, published by Gulf Publishing Company in Houston, forecasts a brighter outlook for the petroleum industry in 1984.

After two gloomy years, the U.S. oil business should finally join the nation and see the beginning of its own "economic recovery", reports William Dudley, publisher.

Activity and sales to the industry will not approach the golden days of 1980-'81, but both should be better than last year — and the potential exists for being considerably better, depending on the unpredictable pendulums of national/international politics and the state of the U.S. gas supply after this winter.

SPECIFICALLY, World Oil expects the drilling of 73,451 wells and 331.9 MM feet of hole this year, up 9.5 percent and 10 percent, respectively, from 1983. Included in this total are 15,504 exploratory tests of all types, up 12.6 percent.

These results can be achieved by an average rig count in the range of 2,500 active units, indicating that the forecast was made with caution and may be conservative. The inability to predict OPEC conduct and Middle East passions, factors that can sharply swing U.S. activity up or down, were principal reasons for the caution. Also a factor is the hazy outlook for gas — near-depletion of many major reservoirs, questionable longevity of current deliverability and reserves, and the recent decline in drilling for gas may mean a significant upturn in that part of the business much sooner than anyone expects.

The forecast is based on adjusted actual drilling of 67,082 total wells and 13,774 wildcats tabulated for 1983, as opposed to highly inflated reported drilling totals of 80,544 wells and 15,272 wildcats for the same period.

There are also signs that this will contribute to at least a moderately better year for suppliers to the industry. Prices have firmed for some service categories; discounting remains the norm, but is less drastic; demand for higher cost products aimed at 10,000-15,000-foot wells should be up; less secondhand drilling equipment of quality is on the market; and supplier organizations have trimmed to a super-lean condition to minimize overhead.

CONVERSELY, inventories of some hardware items are still very high, competition is keen and much activity this year will still concentrate on shallow oil wells.

In summary, Dudley said the 73,451-well domestic forecast is minimal, barring any OPEC oil price fiasco or excessive additional taxation by the federal government or if Iran disrupts oil supplies from the Persian Gulf.

Outside the U.S. and Communist countries, 1984 drilling is expected to total 14,936 wells, down 3.2 percent from last year. More specifically: Canada is forecast to drill 6,840 wells in 1984, about the same as last year. Several large infill drilling programs are planned in Alberta, because of price and royalty advantages granted by the province.

Mexico drilled an estimated 306 wells in 1983 and is projected to drill 331 this year. The additional drilling is to compensate for pressure and productivity declines in the Reform area, the country's major onshore producer.

SOUTH AMERICA should drill 10 percent fewer wells this year than last, for a total 3,495 holes. Principal declines will be in Brazil and Venezuela, with nominal increases projected for Argentina, Colombia, Bolivia and Ecuador.

Europe will drill at last year's level in 1984, posting a total 888 wells. The UK, Austria and Norway should record gains, with most other countries showing declines. In the North Sea, the Netherlands and Denmark will be down a collective 39 wells.

Africa is forecast for an 81-well drop to 845 wells. West Africa will be down except for Angola and only Algeria is expected to show a gain in the north. Egypt will be down for the first time in many years.

The Middle East will be steeply down by 12.5 percent due to OPEC allowables, near-completion of the Upper Zakum development in Abu Dhabi and concentration on deep Khuff gas drilling.

U.S. petroleum demand, exploration off in 1983

By STEVEN EISENSTADT
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — U.S. petroleum demand in 1983 didn't decrease as rapidly as in past years, but a staggering drop in oil and gas exploration continued, according to a new study.

The American Petroleum Institute, in its wrapup of the year in energy, reported that total domestic demand for petroleum products fell 1.1 percent last year, to 15.1 million barrels a day, the smallest decrease since 1979.

However, oil and gas drilling continued to slide, according to the trade group. The number of active rigs plummeted 12 percent from 1982, and well completions were down at least 11 percent.

The study also found that:

— Crude oil production at 8.7 million barrels a day last year was virtually the same as the 1982 level.

— Total U.S. energy consumption continued to decline in 1983, falling 2.7 percent below the previous year's figure.

— Oil consumption dropped in volume but rose in market share as a result of higher prices for competitive fuels such as natural gas.

The stabilization in demand for petroleum products was led by a 4.1 percent jump in demand for kerosine jet fuel, a 1 percent rise in demand for gasoline and a 0.8 percent increase in demand for distillate fuels, according to the study.

The increase in demand for distillates, mainly home heating oil and diesel fuel, was the first since 1978. Unusual weather patterns during the year created substantial fluctuations in the demand for that fuel, the study added.

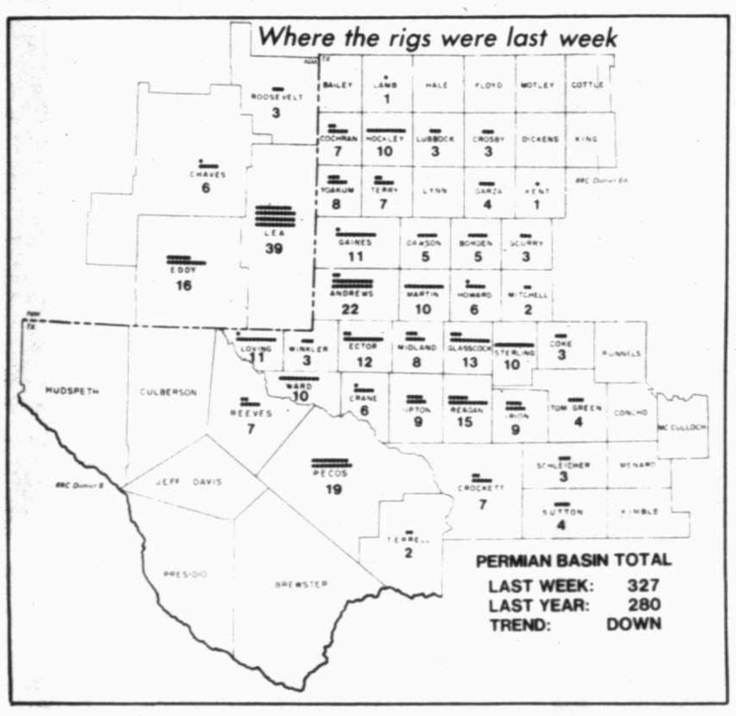

Among major products, only residual fuel oil failed to rise in demand last year. It fell 17.4 percent, consistent with decreases during the previous four years.

The study noted that petroleum demand levels actually increased during the second half of the year compared to the same period in 1982, calling the rise "an outgrowth of the vigorous economic recovery."

Additionally, the study said, oil imports fell almost 4 percent below the 1982 levels, but they have risen substantially since spring as demand picked up.

Imports accounted for 30 percent of U.S. petrolem demand in 1983, with members of the Organization of Petrolem Exporting Countries supllying 36 percent of those imports in the first 10 months of the year.

Coastal Corp. bidding for Houston Natural Gas

By The Los Angeles Times—
Washington Post News Service

NEW YORK — Coastal Corp. opened Friday what may become yet another protracted takeover battle in the oil and gas industry by announcing a $1.3 billion bid for more than 45 percent of Houston Natural Gas Corp.

Combined with the 5 percent holding disclosed by Houston-based Coastal on Friday the tender offer, if successful, would give Coastal, a petroleum refining and marketing company, about 50.7 percent of Houston Natural Gas, a gas production and pipeline company.

Wall Street analysts said that they presume that Coastal will later move to take over the rest of Houston Natural Gas at a lower per-share price than the $68 it is offering now. Coastal's attempted takeover last year of Texas Gas Resources Corp., in which it was outbid by CSX Corp., was structured the same way.

The same analysts, however, also argued that Coastal's offer is almost certain to provoke the kind of bidding war that has become almost routine in the petroleum industry as companies seek to improve their reserves by buying other companies instead of exploring for more oil and gas. The most recent example was Texaco Inc.'s apparently successful $10.13 billion bid for Los Angeles-based Getty Oil Co.

"I think it's going to be a dogfight," said John Olson, a Houston-based oil and gas analyst for Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. Securities analysts said they expect Houston Natural Gas to respond to Coastal's bid over the weekend with aggressive anti-takeover tactics, including a search for a friendlier suitor or even a offer of its own for Coastal shares.

"They'll put out all the land mines and trap doors," Olson said.

Among the potential "white knights," he said, would be other major gas pipeline companies, including Tenneco Inc., Transco Energy Co., and Texas Eastern Corp., all based in Houston; and Chicago-based Mid Con Corp.

Other analysts questioned Coastal's ability to finance a takeover. "It's like the minnow attacking the whale," said M. Craig Schwerdt, an oil and gas analyst for Los Angeles-based Morgan, Olmstead, Kennedy & Gardner. Schwerdt noted that Houston's market capitalization — its stock price times the number of shares outstanding — is about $2.3 billion, or more than three times the $700 million capitalization of Coastal.

Houston responded to the bid Friday by saying it would "evaluate" the offer for its effect on shareholders. By late Friday, the company said it had not yet received formal notification of Coastal's bid. "We don't have any of the paperwork, so it's a little difficult to respond," a spokesman said.

In an unusual move, Coastal itself made no formal press announcement of the offer. Instead, it placed advertisements announcing its move in Friday editions of the New York Times and Wall Street Journal. A spokesman later said the company believes that the ads in themselves met any legal requirements for full disclosure of the company's plans.

Rumors of Coastal's impending bid for Houston Natural Gas have been circulating on Wall Street all week, apparently contributing to a sharp run-up in the Houston Natural Gas stock price and remarkably vigorous trading in both companies' securities. Houston Natural Gas stock closed Thursday at $56.375, up by $5.50, on turnover of 1.2 million shares.

OCAW wins new contracts

DENVER (AP) — Twenty days after the last two-year contract expired, the Denver-based oil workers' union had won new agreements for fewer than half its members, a spokesman said Friday.

Some 22,000 of the 50,000 oil-industry workers the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers represents have either tentative settlements or have ratified new two-year agreements, Jerry Archuleta said.

Most OCAW members have continued on their jobs since the last agreements ran out at midnight Jan. 7. Some 175 OCAW workers remain off the job in Laurel, Mont., unable to agree on new terms with Cenex Oil, Archuleta said.

The latest tentative agreement came early this morning in Union Oil Corp. talks in California, where a ratification vote is scheduled Saturday for the 800 OCAW members at refineries in Rodeo and Wilmington. A 10-day strike at the Rodeo plant, northeast of San Francisco, began violently. Union officials claimed one worker was sideswiped by a car at the plant gate.

Striker Greg Goobic was killed Jan. 19 in Rodeo when a big rig operated by a contracted driver hit him at the gate, the California Highway Patrol said.

The Union settlement follows a pattern for wage increases set in an earlier agreement with Gulf Oil Corp. Under the old contract, the oil workers earned an average $13.61 an hour. The new pact calls for 20 cents more an hour in the first year and a 35-cent-an-hour raise the second year.

Former SEC director believes takeovers need more attention

By HELEN L. CALL
Copley News Service

Shareholders often become pawns in company takeover battles, and while they may do well financially, "I am not satisfied that their rights are protected," said Stanley Sporkin, general counsel of the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) and formerly director of the division of enforcement of the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC).

"Company takeovers need some attention (from the SEC). They have a tremendous impact on shareholders," said Sporkin. "When two, three or four giants are scrapping with one another, the giants are well represented, but little attention is paid to shareholders and they don't know what is going on behind the scenes.

"These takeovers are like war battles," he said. "Everything is preplanned. Just by looking at the jargon being used you get an indication of the problem: Scorched earth, poison pills, golden parachutes.

"I don't know that big company takeovers are good for the economic system," said Sporkin. "It needs to be looked at carefully.

"To protect shareholders, we need to refine the takeover process and make a bigger role for the SEC in that process. And somebody has to look at the problem to see whether there are any antitrust implications."

THE PROBLEM OF insider trading has increased in recent years because of the greater number of takeovers and tender offers, said Sporkin, and this has become virtually the sole area of caseload at the SEC.

"When a stock is selling at $20 and there are secret plans to take it over at $40, there is an opportunity to make a lot of money," said Sporkin. "If they use options, rather than buying stock, there is virtually no impact on the market. There is a tremendous opportunity here to make a killing. Because of the enormous premiums being paid for companies, people take great risks to make that money.

"There has been quite a bit of insider trading in those situations and that is what the SEC is looking into. The fact that it takes place during one event — a takeover — makes it easier to detect.

"The SEC examines the trades in the options and stock involved in a takeover situation — examines the buys and sells, by who and why. It's a single target, which makes it easier for the SEC to go back and reconstruct the trades.

WITH SO MANY new issues coming to market, Sporkin said, there also is some concern about protecting shareholders in this situation.

"Predictably, some companies in the new issue market will fail. People have to have an opportunity to try out new ideas. When they fail, it causes investors to complain. Then, too, there always will be some outright dishonesty in the new issues market."

Other problems that concern the SEC are current practices in tax shelters and in leveraged buyouts.

As the financial world expands its horizons, said Sporkin, "There are tremendous attempts being made on a nationwide scale to get people's money under management.

"There is an enormous number of new investment products coming out," he said. "Options, futures, options on futures and options on indices. While some have an economic basis behind them, some just draw money off the tip and may well be very speculative and not produce the result the investor expects.

"ALSO, SOME take money out of the community where people live. This is a nationwide effort and one day it will run into a problem."

As more banks and investment companies compete for investor funds and are operating outside the brokerage industry, Sporkin said, they also are outside the "finely honed" regulations of the SEC. However, efforts are being made to get "a level playing field" for all who manage money.

The same problem affects the securities market. "As it becomes worldwide, it involves people who do not have the same regulatory laws," he said. "The great thing about the U.S. domestic market is that investors have access to all information."

The private sector, in entering the financial markets, has vastly expanded its horizons, providing greater investment opportunities, said Sporkin. "With this kind of expansion, the rules become dislocated and it's up to the regulators to catch up."

RELO president predicts 'year of growth' in 1984

While 1983 was a "year of recovery" for the real estate industry, 1984 may well be a "year of growth" — for the field, says the newly-installed president of the nation's largest referral network of independent realtors specializing in relocation services.

The key indicator for 1984 will be the continued availability of low-interest mortgage funds to attract home buyers, says Austin realtor J.B. Goodwin, president of RELO/Inter-City Relocation Service headquartered in Chicago.

"For the housing recovery to continue in full bloom, interest rates must stabilize at a level below 14 percent in all areas of the country, and I believe they will," Goodwin said.

In many areas of the country, Goodwin noted, home buyers already can secure mortgage funds at interest rates substantially below 14 percent.

He pointed out in the Austin area, for example, interest rates currently are ranging between 13 percent and 13 1/2 percent.

Overall, the president of the RELO service said trends will vary on a local community-by-community basis, taking into consideration a wide variety of regional factors.

For the home buyer, Goodwin sees this year as a time in which many individuals will be able to "move up" to a larger home because of available financing and the ability to sell their current home.

In addition, he believes that first-time buyers in many parts of the country will be able to satisfy their pent-up housing demands.

"The single-family house made a dramatic comeback in 1983 and the trend should continue," he noted, referring to a nationwide survey by Chicago Title Insurance Co. That survey found the number of buyers choosing a detached house rose to 87.8 percent of all home buyers in 1983, up from 76.6 percent in 1982.

Even more dramatic, according to the survey, was the shift of the first-time buyer from condominiums. In 1982, one of three first-time buyers selected a condo. Last year, 92 percent of the first-timers bought single family homes.

For the relocation industry, Goodwin also sees a rosy picture.

"Corporations for the most part have regained confidence in the economy and this should be reflected in their relocation practices," Goodwin explained.

As a result, he said, it can be anticipated that a greater number of mid- and top-level executives will be moved by their corporation this year.

"Companies which transfer their employees should find themselves in a better financial environment making relocation more affordable," Goodwin said.

He also said a recent survey of relocation specialists of the RELO service indicated that corporate executives — including an increasing number of women — are more willing to accept job transfers from one city to another.

However, Goodwin emphasized corporations — whether large or small — will continue to remain cost conscious and seek economical ways of relocating their employees.

With nearly 1,200 member companies and more than 2,500 member offices, the RELO service is a nationwide referral network of independent realtors specializing in helping families to sell a house in one geographic area and buy a home in another.

Shell studying Royal Dutch/Shell's offer

HOUSTON (AP) — Directors of Shell Oil Co. have appointed a panel to study an offer from The Royal Dutch/Shell Group to buy the 31 percent of the oil company that it does not already own.

Shell's 11-member board of directors appointed a committee of six to study the offer. Royal Dutch/Shell has offered to pay $55 a share for the 94.5 million shares held by the public and institutional investors.

The panel is made up of Shell Oil Co.'s six directors who are not otherwise affiliated with that company or with The Royal Dutch/Shell Group.

The transaction, which came Tuesday, is valued at $5.2 billion.

The Houston Chronicle reported a number of analysts believe the offer is on the low side.

"If I were an external investor, I would expect the board to get more than $55 a share," Alan R.H. Thomas, an oil analyst with the London brokerage firm Kitcat & Aiken, told the paper. "They could easily justify (a higher offer) on several bases."

Among the justifications are Shell's reserves of 2 billion barrels of crude oil, condensate and natural gas liquids and 7.5 trillion cubic feet of natural gas.

However, Thomas said, "I suspect the buyout price has already been accepted."

Shell announced in a news release that the committee would look at the offer from the point of view of a public shareholder and of an employee.

The committee comprises the six outside directors of Shell Oil Company's board: L.W. Lehr, chief executive officer of the 3M Co.; William A. Marquard, chief executive officer of American Standard; Charles de Bretteville, retired chairman and chief executive officer of The Bank of California; William L. Lindholm, retired vice chairman of American Telephone & Telegraph Co.; John H. Platts, retired chairman and chief executive officer of Whirlpool Corp.; and William B. Renner, retired vice chairman of Aluminum Co. of America.

Shell announced Friday in a news release it has retained Goldman Sachs and Co., a New York firm, as financial advisor.
