TRIUMPH OVER TRAGEDY: The Story of Becky Stacy

A little more than year ago, Becky Stacy, 3, of Midland became a victim of a bizarre accident and for the past 14 months has been fighting her way back to normalcy. It has been a hard fight and one that has not only affected her life but also the lives of those around here. During that time two members of the Reporter-Telegram staff have followed and chronicled her progress and her story will be published Tuesday in a special section.

OPEC within shouting distance of new pact

GENEVA (AP) — OPEC oil ministers, a step away from adopting a short-term production accord that could raise oil prices, adjourned their morning session today without reaching agreement, officials said.

The final hurdle at the longest OPEC meeting in history was Kuwait's demand that it be given a bigger share of the cartel's total oil production under a proposed two-month extension of a temporary production-sharing system.

Ali Khalifa al-Sabah, the Kuwaiti oil minister, told reporters after today's morning session that he had not changed his stance.

Iran's oil minister, Gholamreza Aghazadeh, said without elaborating, "The major problem has been resolved," and that he expected a final agreement by the end of the day. Iran has been adament in rejecting Kuwait's demand for a bigger oil quota, although other members also were resisting.

Other ministers were pessimistic about an agreement being reached today.

"No, it doesn't look that good," said Saudi Arabian Oil Minister Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani.

Libyan Oil Minister Fawzi Shaksuki said the cartel leaders planned to meet again later today. Yamani said no specific time had been set.

The 13 oil ministers of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries were in their 15th day of deliberations. A 14-day session in March 1983 was the longest continuous OPEC meeting before this one.

■ Analysts don't think agreement would do much to raise oil prices — 6C

The oil ministers worked at a furious pace before the delayed opening of today's formal session, trying to sketch out a compromise on Kuwait's demand for a higher production quota, sources said.

The key breakthrough in the conference came Saturday when Saudi Arabia, the dominant oil producer in OPEC, dropped its opposition to renewing a cartel accord that was to expire Oct. 31.

The original accord was to be effective only for September and October. It assigned oil production quotas for all members except Iraq and kept OPEC's overall output at 16.8 million barrels a day in order to bolster oil prices.

Yamani, in an interview published Sunday in Kuwait's al-Watan newspaper, was quoted as saying that he believed a renewal of the accord through the end of the year would trigger an increase in world oil prices.

Yamani did not say how big the increase might be, according to al-Watan, though some analysts suggest a price of about $18 a barrel. Prices currently range from $14 to $16 a barrel.

Market analysts have said that any $1 rise or drop in the price of a barrel of oil means a 2½-cent change in the price of gasoline if the total difference is passed along to the consumer.

The main stumbling block to signing a renewal was deciding how to modify it to meet the demands of several members who wanted a bigger share of OPEC's output. The stickiest point was Kuwait's demand, which some member countries considered unjustified.

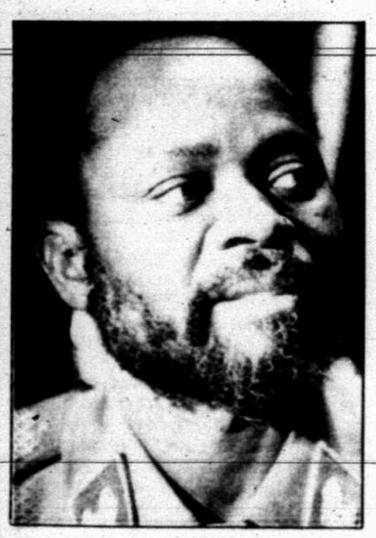
Al-Sabah, the Kuwaiti oil minister, said Sunday he wanted his country's production quota increased by 90,000 barrels daily as of Nov. 1, making it equal to the quota of Libya at 990,000 barrels a day.

Mana Saeed Oteiba, the oil minister of the United Arab Emirates, said late Sunday that behind-the-scenes maneuvering had set the stage for a final accord.

"We will solve all the problems," he said.

OPEC was eager to complete a deal in order to avert a new drop in oil prices, something that large oil producers outside OPEC, such as Mexico, would eagerly embrace. Any oil price increase would help Mexico, which is struggling with a huge $103 billion foreign debt.

Analysts say prices could fall below $10 a barrel without an OPEC agreement to continue limiting its oil production.



Samora Machel

Mozambique's president dies in plane crash

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — President Samora Machel of Mozambique, a guerrilla commander who led his country to independence, died in an overnight plane crash, the presidents of South Africa and Kenya said today.

By mid-afternoon, Machel's death had not been announced in Mozambique. In Maputo, the capital, state radio reported the plane carrying the Marxist president home from Zambia was long overdue and that a plane crash near the borders of South Africa, Mozambique and Swaziland was being investigated.

The Radio Mozambique announcement was accompanied by solemn music.

A statement from the office of South African President P.W. Botha said Botha expressed "deep regret and profound shock at the death of President Samora Machel."

Machel, 53, had been president of Mozambique since its independence from Portugal in 1975. Before taking up arms against colonial forces in 1964, he had been a nurse at a hospital in the capital.

PMRC seeking rock restraint, not censorship

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Congressional wives, concerned over explicit lyrics in today's rock music, have been "misinterpreted by the media and general public," Susan Baker, wife of Treasury Secretary James Baker III, said today.

Ms. Baker, visiting Midland as a guest of Midland County Families in Action, told reporters during a news conference that her group — The Parents' Music Resource Center — is not asking that rock music be censored.

Instead, she said the music industry should "exercise self-restraint and be responsive to parental and consumer needs." The PMRC was formed in May 1985 to bring about awareness of the escalation of today's rock music lyrics that glorify permissive sex, rape, sado-masochism, the occult, suicide and drug and alcohol abuse.

She said the Recording Industry Association of America, the PMRC and National PTA have reached an agreement whereby record companies have an option of either displaying a warning label if the album contains explicit lyrics or printing the lyrics on the outside jacket of the album or tape.

Since its formation, the organization has been engaged in a media campaign and has acted as a resource of information to the general public.

Its purpose, Ms. Baker said, is to "encourage ethical boundaries in music and to promote positive, inspiring music."

Ms. Baker said the PMRC grew out of parental concern shared by four Washington D.C. mothers whose children were becoming consumers of rock music.

"We were concerned that the line of decency had been crossed and that children, whose character and values had not had a chance to develop, were being influenced by the destructive messages of some rock music," she said.

She said over 30,000 letters have poured in and hundreds of newspapers, news magazines, radio stations and television networks have aired the issue to date.

Sister city delegation returns to China

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

Wearing black cowboy hats, wide smiles and carrying with them the best wishes of old and new Midland friends, the Dongying/Midland Friendship City delegation boarded a Southwest Airlines jet to end a five and a half day visit to the area.

Mayor Carroll Thomas, at Midland Regional Airport just before noon Sunday to bid farewell to the Chinese visitors, was asked if he felt the delegation headed by Dongying Mayor Tang Shenghai was impressed by what they saw during their whirlwind tour.

"Unquestionably they were impressed with everything they saw, from the city things to the oil field things," Thomas said. "It was quite an experience for them. Of course, you have to realize that six of the seven had never been out of China before," the mayor observed.

Wei Zhongwu, a chemical engineer, who is deputy director of the Dongying Foreign Affairs Office, spent about three years at the Brookhaven National Laboratory, Long Island, N.Y.

Asked if he felt business opportunities would result from the visit of the Dongying delegation, Thomas said, "I think they will. They will perhaps be more selective than we anticipated initially. (But) I think that we have certain products which they need," he said.

Thomas said the fact the Dongying delegation came to Midland so soon after the visit of Midlanders there last June "was very impressive to me and a pleasant surprise."

He stated Mayor Tang and other Dongying officials "have issued an invitation to us to come back as soon as possible, and they reiterated as soon as possible." Thomas said and indicated another visit there is being considered.

It's season for Ninjas, sexy witches

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The Ninja warrior is again the overwhelming favorite for male Halloween costumes this year while a sexy witch is the top choice for girls and women, according to a costume maker.

The buying patterns are bearing out planning decisions made a year ago by National Theme Productions, the nation's largest designer and retailer of adult Halloween costumes, which works all year for a few days of scary celebration.

"We try to make sure we know what's happening in the world in general," said Bonnie Kerr-Gagnon, the company's division merchandise manager.

The brief Halloween season leaves no room for large orders based on fads, Ms. Kerr-Gagnon said. A costume design that doesn't sell sits in a warehouse, and there's no markdown period in Halloween sales.

"I learned my lesson on Boy George," she said. "I tried to do a Boy George. It had braids and a hat with ribbons going through it. Then he cut his hair off. I could have killed him. I had about 4,000 braided wigs connected to hats that I had to take the braids off to even get rid of."

For specific imitations, the company stocks 200 accessories in its 850 seasonal shops set up in major department stores nationwide. You can create the female rock star Madonna, but you can't buy her ready-made.

"To make guesses on whether Madonna will look like Madonna next year is hard to do," said Ms. Kerr-Gagnon, who already is making decisions for Halloween 1987.

Can you do your share? This year it's more important than ever!

Is Hobby headed for fifth term?

By DAVID PLESA
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — With one opponent campaigning on funds from his own pockets and the other espousing a plan to abolish the office, Bill Hobby appears ready to roll to a fifth consecutive term as lieutenant governor.

Hobby, whose astute knowledge of the state's financial workings has helped him stay in the Senate's top job since 1972, says he is well qualified and that his support for higher taxes will help him, not hurt him, at the polls on Nov. 4.

"My main assets are 14 years of experience on the job, my experience in dealing with the state's budget and my experience in the Senate," says Hobby, 53, who four years ago soundly defeated State Republican Party Chairman George Strake.

Despite strong opposition, Hobby hanged tough from the very start of the two recent special sessions, nevering wavering from his call for a combination tax increase and spending cuts to solve the state's oil-induced $3.5 billion budget deficit.

Eight weeks later, a majority of both chambers, including a reluctant House of Representatives, came to see things his way. Had lawmakers resorted only to spending cuts to solve the financial crisis, the impact on education, transportation and other state services would have been devastating, Hobby says.

"I think there is a very broad understanding of the need to support the basic services provided by the state, including education and transportation," he says.

One small thorn drawing a trickle of blood from Hobby's side concerns recent charges by a Republican candidate that fraud was involved in a series of Houston real estate deals that Hobby invested in.

M.D. Anderson Jr., a Republican candidate for land commissioner, says developers of the real estate projects put up the investment fees for Hobby, U.S. Rep. Mike Andrews, D-Houston, state Land Commissioner Garry Mauro and other officials to become limited partners in exchange for use of their names to lure other, smaller investors.

But Hobby denies the charges, saying he personally invested more than $200,000 in the developments that were losing money and that there was nothing illegal or unethical about the transactions.

"(The issue) will not affect the election," Hobby says. "Voters are sophisticated people and I'm sure they will recognize it for what it really is." He labeled the charges "Republican, election-time sleaze."

Campaign styles quite different, but TRC candidates look alike

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Once voters get past the trucking issue and party identification, they may find it difficult to tell the difference between the two candidates for the Texas Railroad Commission on the November ballot.

If campaign advertising works, however, they'll be much more familiar with Democratic nominee John Sharp than with his Republican opponent, Milton Fox.

Going into the final month of the campaign, Sharp reported a $90,000 surplus in his treasury, with much of that set for spending on last-minute television ads. Fox's records show the Republican running a $6,300 deficit, and he says he'll have enough money only for some direct mail and limited radio advertising.

Fox says Sharp's financial edge and the campaign time lost during the summer special legislative sessions put him at a real disadvantage trying to get his message out. "I'm back to travel, full time, trying to see as many groups as I can, visiting newspaper editorial boards, picking up the personal contact that the 60 days in the session cut me short on," he says.

Dumpsite protesters release 1,000 balloons to publicize their cause

DELL CITY (AP) — A group protesting a proposed low-level radioactive waste dump in Hudspeth County released 1,000 helium-filled yellow balloons to publicize their cause.

The bright balloons, released from a semi-truck trailer, were emblazoned with the standard radiation warning symbol. Tied to them are orange ribbons that say:

"This balloon released from the proposed radioactive dumpsite in Hudspeth County. Had there been a nuclear accident, you would now be contaminated."

A barbecue lunch preceded Sunday's rally, which was attended by about 50 people and staged on a desolate landscape 17 miles south of Dell City and about 85 miles east of El Paso. The rally was sponsored by an organization calling itself Alert Citizens for Environmental Safety (ACES).

Organizers said they hope the balloons will help draw attention to the fact that three possible sites for a radioactive waste dump are within 100 miles of downtown El Paso.

They are trying to broaden their base of opposition to the proposed dump, which they fear would contaminate their water supply.

"If people don't think radiation can hurt you, they ought to be exposed to it — just a little bit," Mary Mosely of Dell City said.

While undergoing cancer therapy last summer, Ms. Mosely suffered overexposure to Cobalt 60, a radioactive isotope.

"Your skin starts to flake off and you lose your hair. They don't tell you about those things. But it can happen to you, and it hurts. We have our own private soapbox about radioactivity."

The Texas Low-level Radioactive Waste Disposal Authority, which is studying the sites, was not represented at the rally.

State Rep. Larry Don Shaw, D-Big Spring, whose district includes all of Hudspeth County, pledged to help residents fight the dump.

"I've been involved in this fight now for more than five years," Shaw said.

He was a member of the House Environmental Affairs Committee in 1981 when the radioactive waste disposal authority was established by the Legislature.

Now he says he is appalled that sparsely populated Hudspeth County is considered the best location for the dump.

"I'm convinced that it is not," Shaw said.

He criticized a study being conducted by West Texas Council of Governments because the authority helped pay for it.

"That sounds like the fox is guarding the henhouse to me," Shaw said. "I think the citizens of this council of governments area ought to be outraged by that relationship."

Irma Dominguez of Fort Hancock said a number of small groups that oppose the dump are being organized into one large coalition. She was not discouraged by the small number of people attending Sunday's rally.

"This is not a numbers game," she said. "Sure, it's a small West Texas town but we have to be heard no matter how small our numbers are."

Police kill Fort Hood soldier who fired from rooftops

KILLEEN (AP) — Police shot and killed a 23-year-old Fort Hood soldier who fired at least six shots at officers and bystanders from the roofs of several downtown buildings in this Central Texas city.

The man was killed Sunday about 10 minutes after local police received a 2:30 a.m. report of the shooting spree, said Killeen Police Lt. Phil Gadd.

The soldier, whose name was withheld pending notification of relatives, was left on the rooftop until daybreak, when officials were certain the man had been shot.

He was pronounced dead at 9:30 a.m. Sunday.

Gadd said two police patrol cars, a civilian car and a bank window were struck by gunfire, but no police or bystanders were injured.

Police said the roofs of the buildings where the man was perched are connected, which allowed the man to move from building to building while he fired.

The department called in its Special Missions Team, but before the team was fully deployed a patrol officer spotted the man as he stood on the edge of a roof about 60 feet overhead, Gadd said.

"He gave the command that he was an officer, and he ordered him to freeze," Gadd said. "(The soldier) made a movement toward the officer, who discharged his weapon."

Officers recovered a .22-caliber rifle and several spent cartridges, the Austin American-Statesman reported.

Officials originally belived there were two gunman involved because the shots were fired from several locations. Gadd said authorities did not try to reach the soldier after he was shot because of the confusion over the number of suspects.

Killeen police said the soldier was originally from Ohio. The name of the officer who shot the gunman also was withheld.

Reagan sends anti-abortion message

HOUSTON (AP) — A message from President Reagan greeted an estimated 7,500 anti-abortion demonstrators who marched through downtown Houston.

"Your deep concern about the right to life is mine as well," Reagan wrote. "As I've said before, the medical evidence leaves no room for doubt that unborn children are living human beings."

The message was read at a Saturday rally at Sam Houston Park, the final destination for the demonstrators.

The rally also featured three hours of speeches from politicians, religious leaders and anti-abortion advocates, who encouraged people to join the movement and vote for leaders who support their cause.

"I'm very disappointed that we did not have more elected officials here today," U.S. Rep. Jack Fields, R-Texas, told the crowd. "Those unborn babies have rights, just as you and I do."

Bishop Joseph Florenza of the Catholic Diocese of Galveston-Houston, said anti-abortion activists would not tolerate the daily killing of 4,000 unborn babies.

Candidates' personal life probed

DALLAS (AP) — A survey by The Dallas Morning News has turned up new, perhaps not-so-important differences between Mark White, Texas' Democratic governor, and Bill Clements, the Republican former governor who is trying to get back into office.

For one thing, they disagree on underwear. White likes boxer shorts, while Clements favors briefs.

The underwear split is among the new insights gleaned from a candidates' questionnaire devoid of issues and heavy on personal snooping.

There are some similarities between the two very different politicians, though. Both are a couple of church-going guys who shop at the grocery, enjoy bird-hunting and sometimes cry at the movies.

White Clements

White's staff initially balked at the newspaper questionnaire. "Some of these questions are very personal," said press secretary Ann Arnold. But the governor eventually 'fessed up and reportedly enjoyed doing it.

Clements never protested the questionnaire, but he didn't answer all the questions, either. History may never know his favorite store for browsing or the toppings he orders on a pizza.

Even the way they completed the questionnaire represents a difference in style between the two men.

Clements took the questions on a campaign flight and scratched the answers in handwriting in the margins.

White was more methodical, dictating his answers to an aide over the course of a day of politicking. His staff then typed the answers on a plain white sheet of paper.

On matters of music, White indicated he'd rather hear Merle Haggard than Frank Sinatra, while Clements favored Sinatra.

Asked to name three living people they admire, both men named two women among their three most admired.

Not surprisingly, political considerations appear to have slipped in on a few answers. On the subject of liquor, for example.

Both men have been known to sip a drink at the end of a long day. But to the question, "What is your preferred cocktail?" White answered, "I do not prefer cocktails." Clements gave no answer and drew a line through the question.

Like good Texas politicians, both men paid homage to the Alamo, but in different ways.

Clements listed Alamo heroes James Bowie and William Barret Travis among his childhood heroes. White said he was moved to tears when John Wayne, Richard Widmark and company refought "The Alamo" in the 1960 movie.

Hasenfus says he helped supply arms for the money

NEW YORK (AP) — An American captured in Nicaragua says he helped supply arms to rebels fighting the leftist government for the money rather than for ideological reasons.

Eugene Hasenfus, who was to go on trial today in Nicaragua, also told CBS-TV's "60 Minutes" that he believed he was working for the U.S. government when his rebel supply plane was shot down Oct. 6.

Hasenfus said William J. Cooper, one of three men who died when the plane was downed, had hired him to work with the CIA airline Air America in Southeast Asia, and again for supply runs in Central America.

"I'm not a freedom fighter," Hasenfus said in the interview broadcast Sunday. "I'm not one of these soldiers of fortune or anything. I was another individual who was asked if they wanted to work for a job that they did before and there was a chance to make money at it and we did."

The Nicaraguan government, meanwhile, has refused Griffin Bell's request to represent Hasenfus at the trial, the former U.S. attorney general said.

Bell also said the Sandinista government notified him of its refusal to delay the trial for two weeks.

"It means he doesn't have any due process," said Bell, adding that further requests for a delay would be made and that he would still travel to Nicaragua for the trial.

Secretary of State George Shultz on Sunday criticized Nicaragua's handling of the case.

"The Nicaraguans are not abiding by the normal rules that apply when you take somebody under those circumstances," Shultz said on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press." "Our government has had no private access to him whatever.

"His wife went there and only had one minute with him and then on a public occasion, so they don't seem to be going about it in a very judicious and proper way at all."

Hasenfus, 45, of Marinette, Wis., told CBS his captors were treating him fine, but he is worried about his wife, Sally, and their three children.

Hasenfus' brother, William, and Mrs. Hasenfus flew on Sunday to Nicaragua, where they plan to remain during the trial, family members said.

Hasenfus told CBS he made $3,000 a month to carry small arms and ammunition to the rebels in Nicaragua and neighboring Honduras, and he believed about 14 Americans were involved in the effort.

"I'm not a freedom fighter. I'm not one of these soldiers of fortune or anything. I was another individual who was asked if they wanted to work for a job that they did before and there was a chance to make money at it and we did."

— Eugene Hasenfus

"Our government is backing this 100 percent," said Hasenfus, who was interviewed Saturday in the presence of Nicaraguan officials.

Hasenfus identified the coordinator of the supply effort at Ilopongo air base in El Salvador as Max Gomez, and said Cooper had told him that Gomez was a friend of Vice President George Bush. But asked if he believed the operation had Bush's blessing, Hasenfus replied:

"You put it that they have the 'blessing.' They had his knowledge that he was working and what was happening and whoever controlled this whole organization, which I do not know, Mr. Gomez, Mr. Bush, I believe a lot of these other people, they know how this is being run. I do not."

Intelligence officials have acknowledged that Gomez, whose real name is Felix Rodriguez, was a former CIA agent, but the CIA denied current ties to him. Sources close to the Contra aid network have told The Associated Press that Rodriguez was placed at Ilopongo by Donald Gregg, an aide to Bush, and Nestor Sanchez, a Pentagon official.

Bush and Gregg have denied directing the secret flights. Hasenfus said he had never met Gregg.

Hasenfus said he considers himself a prisoner of war, but expressed ambivalence when asked whether the United States has an obligation to help him.

"I would like to say yes, but, as an individual going out on my own, I would probably say no," he said. "But then being tied in with the company the way I was and then knowing what I was doing..."

By "the company," Hasenfus said, he meant the CIA.

Downed plane's records reveal existence of aid network to Contra rebels

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — Records found in the wreckage of a downed airplane in Nicaragua indicate its American pilot flew in military operations for the Contra rebels, who may have been supplied through an extensive network.

The documents, which were made available by the Nicaraguan government, tie the supply network closely to Southern Air Transport of Miami, a onetime CIA-owned company.

The company has said a pilot killed on the cargo flight shot down over Nicaragua two weeks ago, Wallace Blaine Sawyer Jr., had worked for Southern Air but quit in 1985.

Sawyer's flight crew logs, however, show him last February flying two planes leased to Southern Air, with one flight ending at McClellan Air Force Base in California and another going to El Salvador's Ilopongo military airport, which has been identified as the center of the Contra supply network.

Southern Air spokesman William Kress refused to comment on why Sawyer would be flying Southern Air planes if he no longer worked for the company.

ACCORDING TO the Defense Department, Southern Air became a major private contractor for flying U.S. military supplies beginning in 1983, with contracts in the new fiscal year expected to reach $42 million. The CIA sold Southern Air in the early 1970s.

After Congress cut off covert CIA aid to the Contras in 1984, a private aid network of Americans, many with longstanding ties to the U.S. government, emerged to raise funds and provide other assistance to the rebels fighting to overthrow Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government.

Reagan administration officials, American Contra backers and rebel leaders have said the White House, using outside intermediaries, managed that network that kept the rebels supplied while President Reagan pushed Congress to reverse itself and renew military aid.

The sources, who insisted on anonymity, said Lt. Col. Oliver L. North, a deputy director for political-military affairs on the National Security Council staff, had overall responsibility for the operations. His chief intermediaries were identified as retired Maj. Gen. John K. Singlaub and conservative activist Robert W. Owen.

The White House has denied that North's actions violated the congressional ban on U.S. government military assistance to the Contras. That ban existed from October 1984 until Saturday when Reagan signed a catchall spending bill that included $100 million in military and other assistance for the Contras.

One intelligence source said the apparent size of the Contra supply operation, as reflected in the captured documents, was much larger than anything the CIA had described to congressional oversight committees.

EUGENE HASENFUS, an American crewman who survived the downing of the C-123 and was captured by Nicaraguan troops, said the Ilopongo supply operation involved between 24 and 26 men and was run by two Cuban-Americans, Max Gomez and Ramon Medina, whom he described as working for the CIA.

Intelligence officials have acknowledged that Gomez, whose real name is Felix Rodriguez, was a former CIA agent, but the CIA denied current ties to him.

Sources close to the Contra aid network said Rodriguez was placed at Ilopongo by Donald Gregg, an aide to Vice President George Bush, and Nestor Sanchez, a senior Pentagon official responsible for Central American aid programs. Bush and Gregg have denied directing the secret flights.

According to the flight log for the C-123 that was shot down Oct. 5, a "Medina" was on board a 7½-hour flight June 15. The C-123 log book lists 27 flights — many with the notation "drop" — from April 16 to Sept. 23.

Sawyer's crew logs also show other planes participating in the supply operation. Sawyer listed eight different identifications for airplanes he flew in Central America this year, although it is unclear if different codes could be used for the same plane.

The aircraft include DHC4 Caribou cargo planes and two Southern Air L382 transports, according to the logs.

MORE THAN 100 log entries appear to mark flights in Central America, including many to "MSSS," the international code for El Salvador's Ilopongo military airport. Seventy-seven log entries mention flights to or from "AGU," an apparent reference to Aguacate, the Contras' U.S.-built airstrip in eastern Honduras. Other notations mark flights to "MOC," presumably Mocoron, a U.S.-built airstrip used by Indian rebels allied with the Contras.

The bulk of Sawyer's Central American flights were made between last February and September, with a flurry of apparent Aguacate-based flights between March 24-28 listed as "ops," common military shorthand for military operations. During that period, Nicaraguan government forces had crossed into Honduras to attack Contra base camps along the border.

According to the logs, Sawyer also flew out of U.S. military bases. One flight aboard a Southern Air-leased L-328 went to U.S.' Howard Air Force Base in Panama on June 19, 1985. He made four trips from Norfolk Naval Air Station in Virginia to the U.S. naval bases in Guantanamo, Cuba, and Roosevelt Roads, Puerto Rico, in July 1985.

Last Feb. 6, he flew another Southern Air-leased L382 cargo plane into Mercury, Nev., a highly classified test site for military aircraft and nuclear weapons, and then into McClellan Air Force Base in California, the logs show.

Although it was not clear why those flights were made, they could have related to Southern Air's carrying of logistical supplies to U.S. military bases.

Hasenfus' wife, brother arrive in Nicaragua

MARINETTE, Wis. (AP) — The wife and a brother of a man captured in Nicaragua while flying supplies for rebels flew Sunday to that Central American nation, where they plan to remain through the captive's trial, family members said.

Sally Hasenfus and William Hasenfus were met by a U.S. State Department representative upon arrival in Managua, where Eugene Hasenfus, 45, is to stand trial beginning Monday, said Donna Hasenfus, William's wife.

The State Department official picked the two up at the Managua airport and escorted them to a U.S. Embassy guesthouse, she said.

"We paid for the tickets ourselves," she said, adding that the department was helping the family "because Gene is an American citizen, he's in a foreign country, and he's in trouble."

"It is not because he is CIA-connected," Donna Hasenfus said.

Hasenfus in an interview broadcast Sunday on the CBS program "60 Minutes" said he felt he was working for the U.S. government when his plane was shot down.

He also said he flew in Southeast Asia for a CIA-owned airline during the Vietnam War, and that an associate from those years had hired him for his flights in Central America.

Donna Hasenfus said family members were relieved to see Hasenfus "alive and well" on television.

Mrs. Hasenfus flew to Nicaragua a few days after the capture of her husband by Sandinista soldiers.

Mrs. Hasenfus returned to her Marinette home Wednesday, saying she wanted to talk to attorneys about representing her husband when he faces trial.

Five U.S. diplomats must leave Moscow

MOSCOW (AP) — Five American diplomats ordered expelled for what the Soviet Foreign Ministry called "impermissible activities" must leave by the end of the month, a U.S. Embassy official said today.

The official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the deadline was contained in the official Soviet document ordering the Americans to leave. The Soviet news agency Tass said the diplomats had been ordered out after the Foreign Ministry determined they had engaged in "impermissible activities." The term impermissible activities is a diplomatic catch phrase for spying.

In Washington, Secretary of State George P. Shultz responded to Sunday's expulsion orders by saying, "We will protest and we will take some action."

The five are Jack Roberts of the U.S. consulate in Leningrad and four diplomats from the U.S. Embassy in Moscow: William Norville, a first secretary; Charles Ehrenfried, a third secretary; and attaches Gary Lonnquist and David Harris.

The Tass announcement did not mention the U.S. expulsions of the 25 Soviet diplomats from the United Nations earlier this month. But Georgy Arbatov, a senior Kremlin specialist on the United States and a member of the Communist Party Central Committee, indicated the Soviets were retaliating.

"If the Americans say they think there are too many spies in our United Nations mission, we can say that, in our opinion, there are too many spies in the American Embassy in Moscow," he said, speaking in a satellite interview from Moscow on the CBS-TV program "Face the Nation."

It was believed to be the largest group of American diplomats expelled at one time in at least the past 20 years, based on records kept by Western news agencies in Moscow.

"The Americans will (see that) Mr. Gorbachev is a very forthcoming man if he has good partners. But if you behave in such a way he becomes very tough," Arbatov said, referring to Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

"It can cool down to zero in both countries if you go on this way of retaliation after retaliation," Arbatov said.

Shultz, appearing on the NBC-TV program "Meet the Press," said it is up to President Reagan to determine what action to take.

"The president will consult, and he will decide," Shultz said.

In March, the United States ordered Moscow to reduce its U.N. Mission staff by 105 people over a two-year period. The State Department alleged many of the diplomats were engaged in espionage.

In September, two days before Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze arrived in the United States for talks with Reagan and Shultz, Washington issued a specific list of 25 Soviets it accused of using their U.N. status as a cover for spying.

It ordered them to leave, but the deadlines were extended several times.

Shevardnadze, who denied that the Soviets diplomats were spies, said after his talks with Shultz in New York that Moscow had prepared "major and very sensitive" retaliatory measures, but was postponing them until after the Oct. 11-12 summit between Reagan and Gorbachev.

Shevardnadze, referring to retaliatory expulsions, also said he and Shultz had "agreed we should not engagein competition in this area."

The Soviet Union and U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar have said the U.S. expulsions violated the United States' legal agreement for being host country to the U.N. headquarters in New York.

The last U.S. diplomat expelled by the Soviet Union was Eric Sites, a defense attache accused of espionage in May after being detained while meeting a Soviet citizen.

Expulsions of one or two diplomats are somewhat routine, especially in retaliation for U.S. expulsions of Soviet envoys.

The ouster of five U.S. diplomats at once recalled the expulsion battle in September 1985 with Britain. Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher expelled 25 Soviet diplomats, journalists and trade representatives from London after a defector charged they were spies.

Moscow expelled 25 Britons. Mrs. Thatcher expelled six more Soviets, and Moscow retaliated again, expelling six Britons.

In August, the FBI arrested a Soviet physicist employed by the U.N. Secretariat, Gennadiy Zakharov. Zakharov, accused of espionage, had no diplomatic immunity and was to face trial in New York.

The Soviets in apparent retaliation arrested U.S. journalist Nicholas Daniloff, threatening to try him for spying.

Weinberger would oppose 'Star Wars' test limits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, reacting to signs that the Soviets are shifting their stand on "Star Wars," said today he would oppose any testing limits on the defense against nuclear attack.

"I would certainly think it would be wrong" to accept any limitations on testing of Star Wars technology outside the laboratory, Weinberger said in an interview from Frankfurt, West Germany on NBC-TV's "Today Show."

"We don't know what limitations we could define," he said. "We can't tell you now how we can limit it or how we could exclude certain types of research or testing because we want to do everything possible to enable us to deploy it."

Weinberger added that any move by the Soviets to limit Star Wars testing "is an attempt by the Soviets to maintain the monopoly they've had" in working on their own missile defense system.

On Sunday, both American and Soviet officials appeared optimistic about the chances for arms control even though U.S.-Soviet talks in Iceland broke off after President Reagan refused to accept Soviet demands to bar Star Wars research and testing outside the laboratory.

"We have not cut off our dialogue," Georgy Arbatov, a Kremlin adviser who took part in marathon arms negotiations at the Oct. 11-12 summit in Iceland, said on the CBS program "Face the Nation."

"There can be qualification" of the laboratory demand, Arbatov said. "If the president needs some face-saving devices, we can find him some."

At the same time, Secretary of State George Shultz said Gorbachev sent a verbal message through diplomatic channels following the summit urging Shultz to meet in Vienna next month with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze.

"The main message seemed to be that Shevardnadze and I had developed a certain relationship and we should keep it moving," Shultz said on NBC's "Meet the Press." "And we should be thinking about when we might meet again."

White House chief of staff Donald Regan echoed Arbatov's optimism on arms talks, saying Soviet diplomats in Geneva were shifting their stand on Star Wars, known formally as the Strategic Defense Initiative or SDI.

While "there has been no letter from Mr. Gorbachev to the president since Iceland," Regan said, "there have been hints delivered to some of our negotiators that perhaps they could discuss further the SDI and its testing."

Also Sunday, the Soviet Union announced the expulsion of five American officials, in apparent retaliation for a U.S. order expelling 25 Soviet employees at the United Nations.

"We will protest and we will take some action," Shultz said, but the exact response "remains to be seen."

Neither the Soviet nor U.S. officials indicated the Kremlin's order would hamper arms talks, and their comments were more upbeat than in the hours after the Reykjavik meeting broke up when each side blamed the other for the impasse.

But Arbatov also repeated Soviet arguments against Star Wars research on exotic weapons, such as lasers to knock down ballistic missiles.

"I think all of this ... is a bit irrational," said Arbatov, asserting that the United States would not need strategic defenses if it accepted Gorbachev's proposal to eliminate all nuclear weapons over 10 years.

At the summit, Reagan and Gorbachev tentatively agreed to reduce by 50 percent the number of strategic nuclear delivery systems and eliminate intermediate-range nuclear missiles from Europe over five years. Reagan proposed that all strategic missiles be eliminated over the following five years, leaving bomber and unmanned cruise missile forces, while Gorbachev said that all nuclear weapons should go.

The talks broke down on the SDI issue, however, and the Soviets insisted on an all-or-nothing deal.

MACHEL

The South African announcement said Machel was among 38 people aboard a Soviet-built twin-engine Tupolev 134A jet that crashed in eastern South Africa during the night en route from Zambia to Maputo.

South African Foreign Minister R.F. Botha said earlier that four people had survived the crash were being treated for injuries.

In Nairobi, Kenya, President Daniel arap Moi, speaking at a Kenyan holiday ceremony, interrupted his speech to announce Machel's death.

"I just received this message a minute ago," said Moi, who asked the audience attending the ceremony to stand for a minute of silence.

A senior Mozambican journalist based in Johannesburg said interim leadership of Mozambique would likely be exercised by Prime Minister Mario Machungo and Marcelino dos Santos, the No. 2 man in the ruling FRELIMO party after Machel.

Constitutionally, the president of the party is also president of Mozambique.

Speculation on a possible successor to Machel centered on Foreign Minister Joaquim Chissano, 47, said the journalist, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

In March 1984, Machel signed a peace treaty with South Africa, long Mozambique's enemy, to the dismay of some black African leaders. The accord did not end the debilitating conflict with anti-Marxist guerrillas whose campaign increased hardships and famine in the countryside.

After a brief honeymoon with South Africa, relations deteriorated badly and Mozambican officials said they believed South Africa still was aiding the rebels, whose attacks intensified.

In recent weeks, Mozambican journalists suggested publicly that South Africa might want to kill Machel.

American psychiatric patients look to black market for drug

NEW YORK — Patients have established a widespread black market in Canada and Mexico to obtain a new drug that is the first effective treatment for a common psychiatric illness, a U.S. government scientist says.

Clomipramine is the only known drug that can provide relief for the estimated 5 million Americans with obsessive-compulsive disorder, said Dr. Thomas Insel of the National Institute of Mental Health in Bethesda, Md.

However, it is unlikely to be approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration for at least two years because its manufacturer has not yet supplied adequate evidence for its safety and effectiveness, he said in an interview Sunday.

Dick Dunbar, president of the Midland/Dongying Sister City Association, asked his impression of the delegation visit, said, "I feel it has been very successful. They have made strong commitments to us to work closely with us on all the needs of the things they have seen here" in the areas of social, cultural, educational and economic exchanges between the two cities," he said.

Was there anything in particular that caught the attention of delegation members, Dunbar was asked.

"I think that, as an overview," he said, "they were impressed with exactly what we have to offer here, that we're not just a community in a small out-of-the-way place, that we definitely are a major leader in the petroleum industry and many other areas" important to the economy of Texas.

"I think they were impressed with the quality of cultural life that we have," Dunbar said. "But the thing that impressed them most, every one of them said, were the people. I had no doubt that would be it, because the people impressed us when we went to China. So that's what makes the best match going," he stated.

During their visit to the Midland-Odessa area the seven member delegation toured oil field-related manufacturing and service facilities, looked at the Midland school system and had briefings on municipal facilities by Midland and Odessa city administrative officials.

The delegation showed particular interest in municipal water and sewer treatment facilities. Wei Zhongwu, a chemical engineer who is deputy director of the Dongying Foreign Affairs Office, said there was interest in such facilities because Dongying is being expanded.

He indicated five days was too short a time to learn everything they needed to know about such things and experts will probably be sent later to study municipal facilities more closely.

Dongying, located in the heart of the Shengli oil field, has a population of about 50,000. However, the population living outside the city raises the total to about 1.43 million, according to Mayor Tang.

The Shengli oil field, second largest in China, is located in the Yellow River Delta in the coastal region of Bohai Bay in the northern part of Shandong Province.

Exploration in the Shengli field didn't begin until 1960. After more than 20 years, 52 oil pools have been proven, with 32 now in production. Shengli produced 27 million metric tons in 1985 and, according to Mayor Tang, expects to increase this production by 50 percent by 1990.

Six pipelines and a railroad, that runs from Jinan to the center of the Shengli field, are used to transport crude oil.

In the past several years, Shengli oil has been exported to the Phillipines, Japan, United States, Thailand, Romania, Italy and Brazil.

A Media General/Associated Press survey concluded 51 percent of the people polled felt that lyrics have a bad effect on children as opposed to 1 percent who felt they had a good effect.

A Simmons Market Research Bureau survey has concluded 75 percent of U.S. adults agree there should be a rating system so that people are aware of the contents of a recording; 80 percent of the public want the lyrics published on the outside of the albums or tapes so they can be read first.

Ms. Baker said the PMRC, in cooperation with the National PTA, has appealed to the music industry to exercise social responsibility and self-restraint.

The two organizations stress the issue is consumer-oriented and that parents need a tool — a warning label — to alert them to explicit lyrics.

The PMRC tesitified before the U.S. Senate Commerce Committee and appeared before the National Association of Broadcasters in September 1985. The founders spoke out against those responsible for creating and disseminating obscene and violent music and music videos.

Presently, the PMRC founders and members are generating support by speaking and delivering slide presentations to statewide PTA conferences. Their presentation also is available on video cassette to PTA council presidents and local residents.

Sharp says his polls show him running 2-to-1 ahead of Fox in most parts of the state. "The only folks supporting Milton are just hard-core, yellow-dog Republicans," he says, re-wording a popular political catch-phrase usually reserved for staunch Democrats.

Fox, a state representative from the western Houston suburbs, faces Sharp, state senator from Victoria, in his bid to become the first Republican to serve on the 95-year-old commission. They are waging a relatively low-profile contest for the open seat on the commission created when Buddy Temple resigned earlier this year. Clark Jobe, Temple's temporary replacement, is not seeking the $71,100-a-year position.

The three-man commission regulates the transportation and oil and gas industries in Texas with an annual budget of about $37 million. Fox and Sharp essentially agree on appropriate measures to revitalize the energy industry. They both support a national oil import fee and reducing state severance taxes as an incentive for new drilling.

Their views differ, however, when discussing the commission's role in overseeing trucking.

"I am for economic deregulation," says Fox, 60, a 14-year veteran of the House. "I don't want to tell 'em how much to charge nor do I want to say, 'You've got to have a permit in order to haul chickens from point A to point B and you can't haul game hens and you can't drop 'em off at point C.'"

Sharp, a 36-year-old Victoria realtor who has served four years each in the House and Senate, opposes that proposal and maintains that only the Legislature can make such changes. "To say as a Railroad Commission candidate you're for deregulation is to speak about something that you don't have control over," he says.

Sharp stresses regulation as the commission's handle on trucking safety. "The Railroad Commission for a long time has had the authority to put truckers out of business that have 200 or 300 safety violations," he says. "I think if they'd do that once or twice, the rest of the industry would fall in line."

According to the candidates, the major issue in the race comes down to experience and personality. Fox emphasizes his background as a petroleum engineer. "I wasn't just a slide-rule pusher, I was also a manager," he says. "I really knew the industry."

Sharp points to Fox's sometimes-stormy career in the House and predicts his opponent would be unable to work with and balance the various interests that fall under the commission's jurisdiction. "He's shown over a period of time in the Legislature that he does not work well with people, that's he's mostly an 'againer' and opposes things and I don't think he'd work effectively at the Railroad Commission," he says.

Fox questions Sharp's independence, citing his opponent's campaign finance record. More than $80,000 of the $223,000 Sharp took in over the past three months came from political action committees, including $15,000 from two trucking PACs. Sharp also reported taking almost $22,000 from seven Midland oilmen late in September. Fox reported few PAC contributions, most from Republican women's groups, and no major donations from the energy industry.

The two candidates hold down the No. 8 position on the ballot among statewide offices, and Sharp and Fox differ on the effect the top race — between incumbent Democratic Gov. Mark White and Republican Bill Clements — will have on their campaign.

"That becomes a factor if there's a 20point spread one way or the other, then you automatically have wide coattails," Sharp says. "I think in this situation where you've got virtually a dead heat, maybe a few points difference one way or another if that much, that that particular race as close as it is doesn't affect positively or negatively on our race."

Fox says he's "brutally candid" that his fortune's are tied directly to the governor's race. "Clements has to win in order for the balance of the ticket to have a chance," he says.

HOBBY

Favoring a folksy half-stutter to a slick-talking politician's chatter, the broadcast executive, businessman and former president of The Houston Post has served as lieutenant governor longer than anyone in Texas history. The son of former Gov. William P. Hobby, he is widely presumed the most knowledgeable elected official in the state when it comes to the complicated state budget.

Republican candidate David Davidson, a political novice and former minister, has the arduous job of opposing Hobby without the support of the Republican Party, which opted instead to flex its limited muscle in other statewide races.

"The state party has never targetted this race, and it is obvious that I disagree with that policy," Davidson says. "I think this is the most critical office in the state of Texas, and we as Republicans cannot bring our political philosophy to Texas without replacing the lieutenant governor."

Despite the lack of support, Davidson, 48, is taking the race seriously, digging into his own pockets to get the word out statewide that the office is in need of what he calls a more conservative, traditional leader.

"There is a conflict of values in the state of Texas, and they are lining up along political lines, with Republicans expounding a more conservative set of values and Democrats expressing a more socialistic or liberal set of values," he says. "Republicanism, and the desire for traditional values, is stirring in the hearts of many Texans."

Born in Poteet, a rural town of 3,086 south of San Antonio, Davidson worked in banking and manufacturing before serving as minister of Emanuel Fellowship Church in Gonzales for 11 years. He quit the ministry, moved to Austin in February and entered the race.

Davidson says he became interested in Republican Party politics when he got involved in President Reagan's campaign in 1980, but he says he is not a Reagan Republican or a part of the religious right.

He says he favors "managing government, not raising taxes," a constitutional ban on state income taxes and a cap on indigent health care spending. He says he is "pro-family," opposes abortion and believes in "less government, more opportunities."

State spending, he says, has increased 400 percent in 12 years, going from $9 billion to $37 billion, with only a 30-percent increase in population.

"We have a massive state government. We have developed a monstrous bureacracy," he says.

Libertarian nominee Bill Howell, 35, a bookkeeper in Dallas, says that if elected, he will attempt to abolish the office of lieutenant governor.

"First of all it is a useless office; eight other states get along alright without it," Howell says. "But the main reason is that it is too powerful... There is an institutional incentive to use that office to increase the size and power of government."

Howell opposes a tax increase as a means to solve the state's budget deficit.

Orlov, Goldfarb meet for first time

NEW YORK (AP) — Yuri Orlov leaned back and smiled, relishing the chance to freely exchange views with fellow scientist David Goldfarb, who was also allowed to emigrate from the Soviet Union this month.

"No one is listening!" Orlov exclaimed, laughing and pointing to the ceiling to indicate that the hospital waiting room where he sat on Sunday was free of electronic eavesdropping devices.

Orlov, a human-rights activist, spent about a half-hour speaking in animated Russian with Goldfarb, a Jew who reportedly refused to help the KGB frame American journalist Nicholas Daniloff.

The two men had heard about each other years ago through the intelligentsia grapevine, but government pressure had made it impossible for them to meet in the Soviet Union, said Goldfarb.

Even so, said Orlov, "We are friends."

"I knew about him at least 15 years," Goldfarb said of Orlov. "My personal opinion is that after (Nobel Prize-winning physicist Andrei) Sakharov, he is the most important figure in the development of the human rights movement. I admire his courage."

Goldfarb, 67, a geneticist, arrived in New York with his wife, Cecelia, on Thursday evening, more than seven years after he first asked to leave the Soviet Union for Israel. He is undergoing treatment at Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center for diabetes and heart trouble.

Freed Soviet scientists Yuri Orlov, right, and David Goldfarb, meet for the first time in New York's Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center where Goldfarb was admitted last Thursday.

"I never lost hope," said Goldfarb, who sat in a wheelchair beside his hospital bed. Asked if he considered himself a survivor, he laughed and replied, "It's from the Lord. It's luck."

Orlov, 62, a physicist, was released along with Daniloff in exchange for Gennadiy Zakharov, a Soviet employee of the United Nations who had been arrested Aug. 23 in New York on spy charges.

As chairman of the Moscow Helsinki Group, which monitored human rights violations in the Soviet Union, Orlov was imprisoned and exiled in Siberia for nearly 10 years. He and his wife, Irina L. Valitova, arrived in the United States on Oct. 5.

Orlov and Goldfarb talked mainly about an unusual meeting scheduled today in Washington by Soviet Consul Vladimir Kolechov and former dissidents Alexander Slepak and Ludmilla Alexeyeva.

Soviet Ambassador Yuri V. Dubinin set up the meeting to consider the fates of Slepak's father, Vladimir, a Jewish "refusenik" who has been seeking an exit visa for 17 years, and Alexeyva's friend, writer Anatoly Marchenko, who has served 20 years in prison camps for "anti-Soviet agitation."

Bank offering guns as interest

HARRISBURG, Ill. (AP) — Mention a gun in most banks and tellers get edgy. But bankers in this southern Illinois town say they are getting millions of dollars in deposits by offering guns as interest.

For three years, First Bank & Trust of Harrisburg has been providing a three-piece set of revolvers in lieu of interest on special certificates of deposit. Recently it switched to a two-gun set of automatic weapons.

"It was daring for the bank to do this," said advertising executive David England of Carterville, who came up with the idea.

"But it has paid off," he said. "It's brought hundreds of depositors from all over."

The promotion is aimed at both collectors and investors, and the bank attracts business by advertising the special edition Smith & Wesson guns in weapons-oriented publications, said Donald M. Medley, bank vice president.

"We decided that, if we could get Smith & Wesson to make these guns and work this promotion with our little bank, it would help us raise millions of dollars in new revenue outside our particular geographical area, which it's done," he said.

While Medley would not reveal how much the promotion has generated in deposits or divulge the bank's assets, he said the bank in this town of 10,400 people, about 55 miles southwest of Evansville, Ind., had received deposits from across the country.

The bank keeps a licensed gun dealer on its staff for the transactions.

"We came up with a three-gun set in a presentation case: a .44 Magnum, a .22-caliber and a .357 Magnum," England said.

"Hundreds of sets went out, and we've just now gone to a two-gun set: a .45-caliber and a 9-millimeter automatic."

NATION IN BRIEF

Six-year-old boy mauled by cougar

SAN JUAN CAPISTRANO, Calif. (AP) — A 6-year-old boy was mauled by a cougar that snatched him from a hiking trail and took his head in its jaws before being scared off by the boy's knife-wielding father, the father said.

Justin Mellon of Huntington Beach, the second child attacked by a cougar this year in Ronald W. Caspers Wilderness Park, was in satisfactory condition early today with lacerations on his head, arms and chest, after being attacked on Sunday.

"He never did cry that entire time," said Justin's father, Timothy Mellon, 28. "He just fought that mountain lion, which had to weigh at least 150 pounds."

Mellon said Justin was hiking with a group of children and adults. "The children ran ahead of us about 15 yards and around a curve," he said. "You could hear laughing. Then all of a sudden it turned into screams."

Mellon said he pulled out a knife and ran to help his son, but "right before I got to it, (the lion) released him," Mellon said.

The park was the site of the state's first recorded cougar attack in 77 years when a cat mauled 5-year-old Laura Michele Small of El Toro on March 23. The girl suffered serious head injuries.

Coast Guard rescues fishermen

BOSTON (AP) — Three fishermen who spent nearly 24 hours in a life raft after their fishing boat sank 20 miles east of Cape Ann were plucked to safety by a Coast Guard helicopter.

The three were given medical examinations following their rescue Saturday and then released.

"Can't say I was too nervous about it, but then again, can't say I was too pleased about it either," said Robert McCurday, 54, after spending a cold night on the raft in winds to 20 knots and six foot seas.

The raft was spotted by a Coast Guard search jet after the fishing vessel Maude B. was reported overdue by the wife of its captain, William Lopes, 37.

Rescued along with McCurday and Lopes was crew member Dan Aruda, 27. All live in Gloucester.

Premier's wife meets with Say

WASHINGTON (AP) — Margaret Papandreou, wife of Greek Premier Andreas Papandreou, met with Peggy Say, sister of American hostage Terry Anderson, to discuss possible steps to free the Americans held in Lebanon.

Mrs. Papandreou, in Washington on a private visit, said Sunday she is "in touch with Syrian authorities who have reaffirmed (Syrian President Hafez) Assad's desire to have the hostages released."

She said that she and Mrs. Say "discussed a number of steps that might be taken" on behalf of the hostages.

In addition to Anderson, The Associated Press' chief Middle East correspondent when he was kidnapped in Beirut on March 16, 1985, the other hostages are David Jacobson, administrator of the American University Hospital in Beirut; William Buckley, an officer at the U.S. Embassy in Beirut; Thomas Sutherland, faculty member of the American University in Beirut; Frank Reed, the American director of the Lebanese International School; and Joseph Cicippio, acting comptroller at the American University.

Aquino's 'tests'

As she seeks to restore democratic rule in the Philippines, Corazon Aquino confronts three critical tests:

■ The first and most important is the Filipino economy, burdened by an overseas debt of $26 billion that consumes 40 percent of the country's export earnings.

■ Next is the 17-year insurgency waged by communist guerrillas of the New People's Army.

■ Third, but certainly not least, of Mrs. Aquino's concerns is a growing challenge to her legitimacy to hold the office of president.

All three problems are closely linked and cannot be solved by separate measures. That's why a new constitution drafted by a citizen's commission promises to ease strains on all counts.

The most pressing threat in the short term is a campaign led by Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile against Mrs. Aquino's right to the presidency. After her disputed election last February against President Ferdinand Marcos, Mrs. Aquino abolished the old constitution and dissolved Parliament until a new order could be established. Enrile, who orchestrated the coup that deposed Marcos, is demanding that Mrs. Aquino stand for reelection next year instead of automatically finishing out her 6-year term.

If approved by the voters in January, the draft constitution will solve Mrs. Aquino's legitimacy crisis, because it contains a transitory provision authorizing her to continue in power until her term expires on June 30, 1992. The constitution amounts to a referendum on her presidency.

The constitution also will impose political stability vital to attract foreign investment and to undermine the grip of radical labor unions, making long-term economic growth possible again. After three years of uninterrupted decline under Mr. Marcos, the economy is beginning to expand.

Hope for economic prosperity will, in turn, help undermine support for the rebels and make possible broad social reforms to solidify democracy in the Philippines. Bolstered by the new constitution, Mrs. Aquino also may have a stronger hand to deal more firmly with the insurgents.

Americans have an enormous stake in how Mrs. Aquino weathers these storms. Without political stability and economic progress in the Philippines, the U.S. strategic strongholds at Clark air base and Subic Bay naval base would be thrown into doubt. Nothing less than the balance of power in the Pacific is resting on the future of those installations.

Another View:

Corrupted by racism

By refusing to strike down capital punishment as unconstitutional, the current Supreme Court majority opens itself to some difficult questions about the death penalty. Foremost is the claim that, in many states, the decision to execute is corrupted by racism.

For example, in Georgia a convicted murderer, white or black, is between 4 and 11 times more likely to be sentenced to death if the victim is white than if the victim is black. Among people convicted of killing whites, blacks have a much greater chance than whites of being condemned to death. As John Charles Boger of the NAACP Legal Defense Fund told the Court the other day, it is as though Georgia still obeyed pre-Civil War laws setting racial criteria for executions.

That's an ugly condition for the law of a society still laboring to cleanse itself of racism. How can the court continue to live with and administer a system so suspect? One way would be simply to ignore discrimination. Another would be to impose on condemned prisoners such a high burden of proof that their challenges fail and executions can proceed as usual. Another, evident in the court this week, is diversionary argument over whether the discriminatory death penalty odds are 11 to 1 or only 4 to 1 or somewhere in between.

Georgia argues that the crime, not the victim's race, governs its death decisions. Whites are more often victims of outrageous murders than blacks, argued Assistant Attorney General Mary Beth Montgomery. If so, then an impressive statistical study allowing for such factors is wrong. Even among killers of policemen, Atlanta juries condemned only 1 of 16 convicted men between 1973 and 1979. Whites were the victims of all seven Georgia men who have been executed — six of them blacks.

The obvious evidence seems damning and statistical evidence doesn't help the state. Thus it's reasonable that it should now be up to the death penalty's advocates to offer a nonracial explanation. Instead, Chief Justice William Rehnquist would add to the abolitionists' burdens with some unusual rules. By his test, the prisoner challenging a death sentence might prevail only by proving that his particular jury was motivated by racial bias. The existence of those old discriminatory state laws was once proof enough of bigotry. But just try getting a bigoted juror to admit his prejudice today.

The Supreme Court has the raw power to announce impossible legal standards of proof. It has the discretionary authority to focus on the little picture. But failing to assign a proper burden to the state won't change the ugly big picture. Requiring the prisoner to prove specific racism would do nothing to purge the racism now inherent in the death penalty. The states may be able to devise a nonracial way to carry it out, in which case a better course would be to stop executions until they do. If that's too hard, the racist burden on capital punishment is too heavy to bear.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's highlight in history:

On Oct. 20, 1944, during World War II, Gen. Douglas MacArthur stepped ashore at Leyte in the Philippines, 2½ years after he said: "I shall return." Said MacArthur: "I have returned."

On this date:

In 1740, Maria Theresa became ruler of Austria, Hungary and Bohemia upon the death of her father, Holy Roman Emperor Charles VI.

In 1803, the U.S. Senate ratified the Louisiana Purchase.

In 1903, a joint commission ruled in favor of the United States in a dispute concerning the boundary between the District of Alaska and Canada.

In 1967, seven men, including a Ku Klux Klan leader and a sheriff's deputy, were convicted in Meridian, Miss., on charges of violating the civil rights of three murdered civil rights workers.

In 1964, the 31st president of the United States, Herbert Hoover, died in New York at the age of 90.

In 1973, in the so-called Saturday Night Massacre, special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox was dismissed. Attorney General Elliot L. Richardson and Deputy Attorney General William B. Ruckelshaus resigned rather than carry out the order to fire Cox.

Ten years ago: More than 70 people died when the Norwegian tanker Frosta collided with the ferryboat George Prince on the Mississippi River about 20 miles upstream from New Orleans.

Five years ago: Three members of the radical Weather Underground were arrested following a bungled armored truck robbery in Nyack, N.Y.

Today's birthdays: Radio-television personality Arlene Francis is 78. Columnist Art Buchwald is 61. Baseball hall-of-famer Mickey Mantle is 55. Actor William Christopher is 54. Actor Jerry Orbach is 51. All-star first baseman Keith Hernandez is 33.

Thought for today: "Men make history and not the other way around." — Harry S. Truman, 33rd president of the United States (1884-1972).

Navy reforming spare parts program

WASHINGTON — Three years ago, in response to press exposures about $640 toilet lids and $7,400 coffee makers, the armed services set out to reform their system of spare parts procurement. The Navy even thought up a cute, acronymic title for its program: "Buy Our Spares Smart."

Jack Anderson

A recent report by the Pentagon inspector general offers even more evidence why the BOSS program was needed. The military buyers were not buying enough spare parts to start with, and then they paid sometimes two or three times as much when they reordered them a few months later.

The inspector general's report, obtained by our associate Lucette Lagnado, gives some horrible examples of extravagance in the "re-purchase" of spare parts for the Air Force and Navy cruise missile programs. Here are some of them:

— In January 1983, the Navy ordered seven "transducer assemblies" for $3,653 apiece. Three months later, the brass decided they needed two more; the price had gone up more than 19 percent, to $4,350. A year later the Air Force made the Navy look really bad in retrospect by buying the identical transducer assemblies for a mere $1,700 — less than half the Navy's best price.

— Also in January 1983, the services bought "capsule cover assemblies" for $370 apiece. Ten months later they bought some more — but the price had zoomed 62 percent to $600 each. A cruise missile program spokesman explained that the material for the capsule covers had been changed.

— In December 1982, the price of "valve warhead cavities" was $262 apiece. Only 13 months later, the price had risen 88 percent to $492 each.

— In April 1982, ball bearings were going for $8 apiece; one year later they cost $12, a 50 percent markup.

"The Joint Cruise Missile Project office and (the Navy and Air Force) have not established controls needed to ensure that spare parts were obtained at the lowest possible price," the inspector general complained. "The various military (units) procuring cruise missile spare parts were unaware that they had procured identical parts, and could continue to procure them, at different prices."

The auditors also uncovered an even more worrisome trend: entering into "unpriced contracts." This is a shortcut used when an agency needs a spare part "urgently," and so doesn't take the time to negotiate a price in advance. This in effect gives the contractor permission to charge whatever he wants.

"We noted that orders have remained undefinitized (sic) for more than two years," the auditors reported. "Contractor price proposals remained undefinitized for over two years."

Cruise missile program officials assured us that major reforms have been undertaken in response to the inspector general's report.

Watchdogs working for Sen. William Roth, R-Del., are keeping their eye on the program to make sure that this time the reforms actually stick.

UNDER THE DOME: Miracles do happen. The House Public Works Committee has offered to drop a controversial provision of the new highways bill that would compensate a North Dakota billboard owner for removal of his illegal signs. We reported some time ago that the billboard man, Harold Newman, had appealed successfully to Rep. James Howard, D-N.J., chairman of the Public Works Committee, even though highway officials, state and federal judges and the Supreme Court had given Newman the cold shoulder. Howard explained that he mistakenly believed both North Dakota senators favored the Newman break, when in fact they didn't.

CONFLICTS GALORE: In their new book, "United States of America, vs. Sex," reporters Philip Nobile and Eric Nadler accuse two members of the Attorney General's Commission on Pornography of conflicts of interest. Executive Director Alan Sears remained a high official of the Southern Baptist Convention, which opposes sex education in the schools. And Father Bruce Ritter received $100,000 from an anti-pornography organization for his Covenant House project while he served as a commissioner.

The authors of the new book will undoubtedly be accused of having a conflict of their own. Their publisher is Penthouse magazine owner Bob Guccione.

Reagan 'gas mask' analogy may bolster SDI

WASHINGTON — Polishing up his Monday night speech on the Reykjavik summit, President Reagan wrote out half a dozen pages in longhand that White House aides quickly incorporated into his televised talk — including his analogy that a strategic nuclear defense (SDI) in a world free of nuclear weapons was the same as keeping gas masks following the outlawing of poison gas.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

It was that comparison, together with his description of SDI as the free world's "insurance policy," that may have dramatically helped convert public apathy or opposition to SDI into public support.

A footnote: White House insiders said the normally upbeat president was unusually disheartened on the way back to the U.S. in Air Force One but brightened, according to one administration official, when speechwriter Tony Dolan handed him a note predicting that the American people would applaud his effort when they learned the facts.

SUPER-VETO?

Donald T. Regan, the autocratic White House chief of staff, got an unaccustomed tongue-lashing from Republican governors when he asked them during a Washington meeting what they would think if President Reagan vetoed the toxic cleanup Superfund bill.

"They gave Don a pretty good lesson in politics," a participant told us. Gov. John Sununu of New Hampshire, who is seeking re-election, said Republican opposition to continuing the waste disposal program could have disastrous political consequences Nov. 4. Even seemingly unbeatable Gov. George Deukmejian of California might be in trouble, Regan was told.

Besides Regan, Treasury Secretary James Baker and the president himself strongly favor vetoing Superfund because of the broad-based tax that finances it. But White House political and legislative aides join GOP candidates in opposing another veto sure to be overriden.

IS SDI AN ISSUE?

The laboratory campaign for determining whether President Reagan's all-out campaign for his Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI) may be Idaho's Second Congressional District, where right-wing Republican challenger Mel Richardson is attacking liberal Democratic Rep. Richard Stallings for being "soft on SDI."

Richardson thinks that in the wake of the Reykjavik summit the highly-complex issue is catching on. If so, it may also help embattled Republican Sen. Steve Symms. Symms has steered clear of defense issues, despite his reputation as one of the Senate's hardest-line pro-defense conservatives.

President Reagan's attack on Democratic "liberals" in a highly partisan pro-SDI campaign speech for Maryland Republican Senate nominee Linda Chavez Wednesday night was an invitation to other Republican campaigners. Reagan said that if the Democrats defeated his SDI proposal in Congress, Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev would win the victory he was denied at Reykjavik.

REALTOR VENGEANCE

Reacting against Republican support of tax reform, the real estate lobby has decided quietly to slip a $150,000 "independent expenditure" into Oklahoma against the re-election of first-term GOP Sen. Don Nickles.

Actually, Nickles has supported the realtors and even voted no on tax reform. But the industry's strategy, devised by ex-Jimmy Carter political operative Gary South, is to use its clout to defeat one heavily-favored Republican candidate in a race that could tip the Senate balance to the Democrats. That would dramatically inform the GOP it no longer could take real estate for granted.

Sen. Jeremiah Denton of Alabama was considered the target but was deemed too far in front to be vulnerable. South convinced the realtors to back Democratic Rep. James Jones, running well behind Nickles but close enough to come within hailing distance with the spurt he would get from an extra $150,000.

PERLE ASCENDS

The strange alchemy of national security politics has elevated Assistant Secretary of Defense Richard Perle a notch since the Iceland summit, making him a key administration voice in explaining what really happened, whereas six months ago he was under orders not to talk at all.

The only top Pentagon official invited to the summit, Perle's subtle elevation is directly tied to the administration's suspicion that Mikhail Gorbachev probably set out to mousetrap Reagan — offering him the moon and, when he was ready to buy, suddenly laying down his no-SDI demand.

Such Soviet conduct is precisely what Perle and other hard-liners have warned Reagan about. Now, even though Perle is telling one television audience after another that an overall U.S.-Soviet arms reduction compromise is still highly possible, the gloomier and more realistic positions he has taken in the past have given him the new profile of a powerful administration insider.

Confused? Turn down information volume

Funny thing about the so-called Information Age is that it is harder to get reliable information.

Part of the problem is the contemporary urge to quantify everything — to reduce every conceivable aspect of life to numbers. This probably results from the mistaken notion that the methodology of the physical sciences can be universally applied.

Charley Reese

It's one thing, however, to measure and weigh physical things and quite another to attempt to quantify intangible qualities or something like human behavior with its infinite variables. How do you measure love? How do you establish a dollar value for a human life? How do you predict human behavior?

The so-called social sciences have contributed to the grand delusion. The study, which in most cases is nothing more than asking a small number of people a few questions, has become a favorite device for justifying jobs and getting public funds. There is enormous abuse. Politicians and members of the press compound it by readily accepting claims based on these things as the truth.

"A study shows" has become a modern cliche and, of course, you can find studies that show anything because it's very easy to rig the study to get the results you want. Studies generally reveal exactly what the people who are paying for them want them to reveal.

That's not to say that interviewing people cannot yield valid information if it's done properly. It's just to say it's rarely done properly and even when it is, there are limits to the useful information that can be obtained. Moreover, it is impossible to make a judgment about the validity of the information unless you have all the data and know something about how such things should be done.

I am greatly amused by planners who say, to cite another abuse of numbers, that population in such an area will grow at such and such a percent on into the future. This is nothing more than a mathematical formula that averages past rates of growth and then projects them into the future. The defect is that while the past numbers represent historical data, the future numbers are nothing more than guesses based on the assumption that future conditions will be the same as past conditions. That's almost never true.

The Western mind has an awful time dealing with uncertainty and ambiguity. Many people would rather be certain about fictions than live with the uncertainty of realities. Statistics are a favorite form of fiction.

Another factor that clouds the Information Age is mental and moral egalitarianism. Few people in American society today have any standards. With no standards, anything goes — so long as somebody else says it's OK or as long as it makes money. Snake oil salesmen and reputable scientists are presented side by side or given equal treatment. People with axes to grind are given the same uncritical acceptance as people acting unselfishly.

It's a good idea to remember that information per se is neither necessarily truthful, factual nor useful. Information is just data translated in most cases into words. It may be fiction. It be may be truth. It may be absurd. It may be manipulative. It may be useful. It may be useless. It may even be injurious.

To cope with the unprecedented bombardment of information, people have to develop an ability to edit. The first step is to learn what it is you need to know. The second step is then to learn what not to read, what not to watch. Otherwise our brains become hopelessly clogged with a mishmash of perceptions and data.

When I take vacations, I don't read newspapers, watch TV or listen to radios. When I return, I find that I've missed out on nothing important. Try it sometimes. Turning down the flow in this Information Age has a remarkably calming effect.

Who at Hearst magazines comes up with the ideas that have made us the number one publisher of monthly magazines in America?

Everyone.

Clockwise from lower left: 1 Good Housekeeping, Louis E. Porterfield, publisher. 2 House Beautiful, JoAnn R. Barwick, editor. 3 Colonial Homes, Mary Persico, business manager. 4 Connoisseur, Thomas Hoving, editor-in-chief. 5 Harper's Bazaar, Anthony T. Mazzola, editor-in-chief. 6 Sports Afield, Gary Gretter, art director. 7 Country Living, Mary Roby, managing editor. 8 Town & Country, Frank Zachary, editor-in-chief. 9 Redbook, Annette Capone, editor-in-chief. 10 Cosmopolitan, Kitty Mountain, promotion director. Clockwise in center. 11 Popular Mechanics, Joe Oldham, editor-in-chief. 12 House Beautiful Home Interest Group, Thomas W. Wolf, publisher. 13 Motor Boating & Sailing, Jeffrey C. Lovelace, Northeast sales representative.

Whatever their job is at Hearst, we want all our people to be idea people. People with the kind of imagination that has made Good Housekeeping America's leading women's service magazine, that has made Cosmopolitan synonymous with a whole generation of "Cosmo Girls," that has made Popular Mechanics, Harper's Bazaar, Redbook, Country Living and all our other Hearst magazines outstanding in their fields.

Our people...all 12,000 of them working in more than 135 Hearst businesses... have helped The Hearst Corporation more than triple in size in the past ten years and have made us one of the largest and, we think, one of the best communications companies in the world.

Thunderstorms in forecast

From Staff and Wire Reports

The possibility of showers and thunderstorms is in the forecast through Tuesday, according to forecasters at the National Weather Service. The chance of showers for tonight and Tuesday is 40 percent.

Mostly cloudy skies will cover the Midland area and winds will be out of the southeast at 10-15 mph tonight through Tuesday.

Sunday's high of 69 was 21 degrees below the record high set for that date in 1936. Today's low, recorded early this morning, was 22 degrees above the record low of 35 set for this date in 1976.

STATE

A couple of weather systems and Hurricane Roslyn combined Monday to bring cloudiness and some precipitation to the state.

Early Monday Hurricane Roslyn was located southwest of Baja and was feeding Pacific moisture across Mexico and into the state.

A high pressure system stretching from Ohio to Oklahoma brought low-level moisture to the Lone Star State while an upper storm system over the Southern Rocky Mountains drifted slowly east.

The three systems brought multiple cloud layers to most of Texas except for the extreme northeast.

Scattered showers and thundershowers occurred along the coast Monday between Corpus and Brownsville and light rain sprinkled the northwest corner of the Panhandle while drizzle fell in Laredo.

South Texas also should receive scattered thundershowers and showers tonight with lows in the 50s and 60s. Scattered showers and thundershowers expected Tuesday with highs in the upper 70s to upper 80s.

West Texas should receive showers and thundershowers through Tuesday with lows tonight in the upper 40s in the mountains and Panhandle and in the 50s in the southeast and Big Bend valleys. Highs should be in the upper 70s to upper 80s.

NATION

Showers and thundershowers were scattered today from west Texas to Idaho, while clear skies dominated the area from the Mississippi Valley to the East Coast.

A few thundershowers were present along Florida's southeast coast, and frost warnings were in effect this morning for inland parts of South Carolina, northern and western areas of North Carolina, and northern and eastern sections of Indiana.

A storm system in the central Rockies was responsible for the scattered showers and thundershowers from west Texas and New Mexico.

Sports in Brief

America's Cup

FREMANTLE, Australia — The challengers' first round-robin series ended with no surprises as New Zealand, America II and Stars & Stripes scored easy victories in the America's Cup. The three challengers each finished with 11-1 records.

In another challenger race, USA, skippered by Tom Blackaller, defeated French Kiss by 1:18, for its eighth victory. The San Francisco boat started slow with steering gear problems, but improved in almost each race.

In the other challenger races, Canada II defeated Eagle of the United States and White Crusader of England sailed to a lopsided victory over Courageous IV of the U.S.

Floyd wins in OT

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. — Ray Floyd rolled in a 6-foot par putt on the first playoff hole to defeat Lon Hinkle and Mike Sullivan for the championship of the $556,000 Disney World Oldsmobile Golf Classic on Sunday.

Hinkle missed a 3-footer and Sullivan's missed opportunity was from about 12 feet on the par-3, 15th hole.

SAINT-NOM-LA-BRETECHE, France — Severiano Ballesteros of Spain and West Germany's Bernhard Langer finished in a tie for the $238,000 Lancome Trophy golf championship Sunday when darkness halted play after the fourth hole of a playoff.

SYDNEY, Australia — Australian Greg Norman won his fifth consecutive tournament Sunday, firing a 2-over-par, final-round 73 for a five-shot triumph in the $80,000 New South Wales Open Golf Championship.

Edberg nips Noah

BASEL, Switzerland — Top-seeded Stefan Edberg of Sweden outlasted French ace Yannick Noah, 7-6 (7-5), 6-2, 6-7 (7-9), 7-6 (7-5) to win the $175,000 men's Swiss Indoor Tennis Tournament Sunday.

Edberg, ranked fourth in the world at age 20, triumphed in a 3½-hour repeat of last year's final, holding off second-seeded Noah's stiff challenge in the last two sets.

FILDERSTADT, West Germany — Martina Navratilova beat Czechoslovakia's Hana Mandlikova 6-2, 6-3 Sunday to win the $175,000 women's Porsche Grand Prix Tennis Tournament.

Navratilova gained the final by eliminating Pam Shriver 6-1, 7-6 (8-6). Mandlikova advanced to the final by routing Argentina's Gabriela Sabatini 6-2, 6-1 in Saturday's other semifinal.

SYDNEY, Australia — Two-time Wimbledon champion Boris Becker of West Germany recovered from a slow start and beat top-seeded Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia 3-6, 7-6, 6-2, 6-0 in the final of the $345,000 Australian Indoor Tennis Championships Sunday.

Andretti at Phoenix

PHOENIX, Ariz. — Michael Andretti tightened an already heated Indy-car point race Sunday with a runaway victory in the Circle K-Fiesta Bowl 200 at Phoenix International Raceway.

The 24-year-old racer, trying to overtake Bobby Rahal to win his first CART-PPG title, picked up 21 points — 20 for winning and one for leading the most laps — in cutting Rahal's margin to 174-171.

ROCKINGHAM, N.C. — Neil Bonnett broke a 46-race winless streak Sunday, cruising to a 2.53-second victory over Ricky Rudd in the NASCAR Nationwise 500 at North Carolina Motor Speedway.

Darrell Waltrip finished third and Harry Gant was fourth, both in Chevrolets. Buddy Baker took fifth in an Oldsmobile. Midland's Bobby Hillin was 11th.

It's on to Fenway after Shea shockers

By Mark Kreidler
Copley News Service

NEW YORK — The aftermath of the cataclysmic collision between Roger Clemens and Dwight Gooden: bandages, battered balls and a trip to Beantown, where the home nine may well ice this 83rd World Series.

Working with all the precision of Manhattan streetcorner watches, Clemens and Gooden stopped ticking midway through Sunday night's second game of the World Series, one much anticipated because of that tantalizing pitching matchup.

Where one entertainment failed, however, another succeeded wildly. The Boston Red Sox pounded Gooden for six runs in five innings en route to an 9-3 victory over the New York Mets, and find themselves in excellent position to claim a World Series championship they were given precious little chance to win.

Boston has taken a 2-0 lead in the best-of-seven series, with the teams idle Monday. They play the next three in Boston, beginning Tuesday night.

"The feeling's outstanding. Whenever you come to a foreign park and come away with a sweep, it's got to be a great benefit," said Wade Boggs, who doubled twice, knocked in a pair of runs and played sparkling defense at third base. "Now we've got to take it one game at a time back in Fenway."

As Manager John McNamara put it: "People are going to find out that we're a pretty good ball club."

The game, which shifted momentum so strongly in the Red Sox' favor, defied nearly all expectations. Gooden, who had a 1.06 earned-run average in two playoff starts, gave up eight hits, including two home runs, and walked two batters before Mets manager Davey Johnson had seen enough.

"A couple of mistake pitches cost me the game," he said. "I don't think I had the best fastball of my career, but it wasn't a terrible fastball — it was my location that was off."

CLEMENS, THE hard-throwing right-hander who closed the door so forcibly on California in the decisive game of the American League playoff, was pulled after 4 and one-third mediocre innings — his second-shortest effort of an almost-certain Cy Young season.

And the Mets, whom most prognosticators (including this one), picked to win the Series, failed even to gain a split in their backyard, Shea Stadium, which housed more than 55,000 raucous fans in each of the first two games.

"They still have to beat us two more times, and my ball club has played well in streaks this year," Johnson said. "So we'll have to hope we can start one in Fenway.

"They beat us two games in a row — one where neither club did it (1-0 in Game 1), and tonight, where they just busted out against us and we couldn't keep up. I'd tell jokes if I thought it would help."

Nothing else did. One of New York's most obvious advantages over Boston was its pitching, both on the starting and relieving ends, but pitching buried the Mets Sunday night.

It began with Gooden, the bandage and a curious turn of events in the second inning, when Boston manager John McNamara asked home plate umpire Jim Evans to look at a baseball Gooden had pitched. The umpire looked, called to Gooden, seemed to wipe something off the ball and then asked Johnson to come to the mound.

THE NET result was that Gooden was asked to remove a bandage he'd had wrapped around the middle finger of his left (glove) hand.

"I could have left it on, but he (Evans) said, 'You can't rub the ball with the hand that the Band-Aid is on,' so I just took it off," Gooden said.

Johnson found the scene a trifle amusing, considering how his team had complained about Houston's Mike Scott scuffing the baseball during the playoffs.

Band-aid raises stir

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Mets, who complained throughout the National League playoffs that Houston pitcher Mike Scott was illegally scuffing the ball, saw their ace, right-hander Dwight Gooden, subjected to an inspection Sunday night in Game 2 of the World Series.

In the second inning, just as Boston center fielder Dave Henderson came to bat, Red Sox Manager John McNamara complained about a white band-aid on Gooden's left hand.

After a conference at the mound, Gooden removed the band-aid and continued pitching.

Mets Manager Davey Johnson said Gooden was wearing the band-aid because he had cut the middle finger on his left hand.

Mets confident in defeat

By HARRY ATKINS

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Mets after losing the first two games of the World Series at home still had the confidence of a winner Sunday night.

Center fielder Len Dystra was looking forward to giving Boston a payback on the Red Sox home turf at Fenway Park in Game 3 Tuesday night.

"We'll go into Fenway and relax," Dykstra said. "They've still got to win two more. It's a long series. I don't think anyone's too concerned about it.

"Things just aren't going the way they should. But we feel we're a good enough ball club to come back."

Comeback is something the Mets did very well during the regular season. Of New York's 108 victories, the Mets came from behind 39 times.

For the second straight game the Red Sox took advantage of a New York error, in Game 2 by first baseman Keith Hernandez, for victory, winning 9-3 Sunday night.

"It's important to not do anything that you haven't done before. Hernandez, whose third-inning error led to three runs, said. "We just have to keep after them and believe in ourselves.

Hernandez was asked if the Mets have suffered a drop in emotion.

"No. It's just that we've battled hard all year," Hernandez said. "It's been a long year.

"We're not quitters. We didn't get here by being quitters. The day off Monday will be good for us."

Wally Backman, who platoons at second base, said the Mets' bats simply have to come to life.

"We've got to start swinging the bat," Backman said. "There's no doubt about that.

"It's frustrating. But when a team scores nine runs a game, they're going to beat you."

Many of the Mets expressed surprise that they lost two games at Shea Stadium, but tried to be gracious in defeat.

"You wouldn't think they could do this to us, but everybody surely knows they're a good ball team," said right fielder Darryl Strawberry. "We have to prove we can go up there and do that to them in their park."

Dallas' Steve Pelluer is on the move for an eight-yard gain as the Philadelphia pass rush can't quite catch up.

Old pros White, Septien save Pokes

By RALPH BERNSTEIN

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — It took two old pros to rescue the Dallas Cowboys.

Rafael Septien, 32, a 10-year NFL veteran, came on with six seconds remaining and kicked a 38-yard field goal to give the Cowboys a 17-14 victory Sunday over the Philadelphia Eagles.

Quarterback Danny White, 34, in his 11th NFL season, limped off the bench to make a key play that set up the fifth game-winning kick of Septien's career.

White, the Cowboys' regular quarterback, has been sidelined with an injury that he said could have ended his career. But he came in after starter Steve Pelluer injured his throwing hand on a 21-yard scramble in the winning drive.

"There is no question I was not 100 percent," said White, whose 18-yard completion to fullback Timmy Newsome moved the ball to the Philadelphia 18.

"It's a very delicate injury," said White, who described it as a pulled muscle which runs from the knee to the groin to the lower back. "There was a lot of swelling and bleeding."

White was in for only six plays — one in the first half — but was in when it was time to stand up and be counted as the Cowboys moved to 5-2 and the Eagles fell to 2-5.

THE COWBOYS' defense collected 10 sacks, including 3½ by defensive end Jim Jeffcoat, two by strong safety Bill Bates and 1½ by tackle Randy White.

Dallas took a 7-0 lead on its first possession of the game on a seven-play, 76-yard drive capped by Pelluer's 22-yard TD strike to tight end Doug Cosbie.

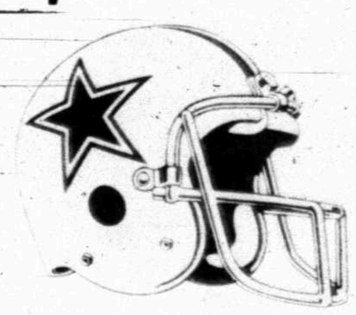
That lead held until halftime as Philadelphia managed only 62 first-half yards, 59 of them rushing.

But the Eagles came to life when Coach Buddy Ryan relieved starting quarterback Matt Cavanaugh — who was filling in for the injured Ron Jaworski — with third-stringer Randall Cunningham.

Cunningham directed a five-play, 80-yard third period drive, scoring on a 14-yard scramble to tie the game at 7.

After the Eagles missed with a 50-yard field goal attempt, Pelluer led a two-play 68-yard scoring drive. He hit wide receiver Tony Hill for 53 yards to the 15, and Dorsett ran it over on the next play for a 14-7 Cowboys lead.

The Eagles came back to reach the Dallas 13, and missed on a 31-yard field goal.



Then, Cunningham took Philadelphia 51 yards on on five plays to tie it at 14 on a 15-yard scoring pass to Mike Quick with 7:19 to play.

SEPTIEN said he told himself after that, "I'm going to win this game."

"I put myself in a mental position and after that just let it flow," said Septien, who said he didn't know the kick was good immediately because of a crosswind. "I didn't feel right away that the kick was good."

The field goal was Septien's 172nd in 244 attempts over 10 years. In the fourth quarter with Dallas tied or behind by three points or less, he has made 9 of 13.

Ryan said his club "played as hard as hell and also as dumb as hell."

The first-year head coach said Cunningham might advance from third string to first because of his clutch job. The second-year quarterback was 8 of 15 passing for 127 yards.

"His ability is so great and he makes things happen," Ryan said. "He's improved a lot in poise, especially in looking for receivers."

Cavanaugh started because Jaworski had two numb fingers on his passing hand. Cavanaugh completed 3 of 10 for 32 yards in the first half.

"It wasn't a very pretty game for us, but give the Eagles credit, too. We missed too many opportunities," Dallas Coach Tom Landry said. "We really weren't doing the things you have to do to win."

Landry described backup quarterback Steve Pelluer's performance as "fair, like the rest of the team.

"We didn't play real bad but we didn't play real good, either."

The Cowboys' running twosome of Dorsett and Herschel Walker gained a total of 87 yards, 54 for Dorsett and 33 for Walker, who also caught eight passes for 62 yards. Hill caught four for 82 yards, including the 53-yard strike that set up the Cowboys' second touchdown.

Oilers snatch defeat from victory's jaw

CINCINNATI (AP) — The downtrodden Houston Oilers were ready to celebrate a sweet, improbable victory when running back James Brooks stole the smiles from their faces with an even more improbable finish.

Brooks, the heart of Cincinnati's offense Sunday, bowled over two tacklers on a desperate 21-yard dash to the end zone with 43 seconds to play Sunday to give the Bengals an 31-28 victory over the stunned Oilers.

Houston, 1-6, had taken the lead just 43 seconds earlier when linebacker Robert Lyles picked up a fumble and ran 93 yards untouched for a touchdown and a 28-24 lead, its first of the game.

Brooks vainly chased Lyles to the end zone while his teammates stood near the Houston goal line in disbelief.

"That was a blow to everybody," Brooks said. "But you look at the scoreboard and there's 1:26 to play, and we can go right back and score. All day long they hadn't stopped us, we'd stopped ourselves."

Nobody could stop Brooks on the winning drive.

The Bengals covered 70 yards in five plays, including a 24-yard pass to Brooks to put the ball on the 21. He went the rest of the way on a trap play, his second touchdown of the game.

THE 5-2 Bengals celebrated by tossing their helmets in the air while the Oilers hung their heads.

"We might have celebrated a little too early," Oilers quarterback Warren Moon said. "You never know it's over until it's over."

Bengals Coach Sam Wyche said Lyles' fumble return didn't cause the Bengals to panic.

"I don't think anybody felt we didn't have a chance," Wyche said. "There was nobody who had a faint heart."

Brooks led the Bengals offense with 133 yards on 18 carries and 62 yards on six catches.

The 1-6 Oilers suffered their sixth consecutive loss, extending their streak of futility against Cincinnati. The Oilers have lost their last six games at Riverfront Stadium since 1980 and have dropped 10 of their last 11 games to the Bengals.

Fullback Larry Kinnebrew took a hand-off, ran into the middle of the Oiler line and fumbled. The ball went to Lyles, who was laying on the ground. The replay confirmed he picked the ball up without being touched before sprinting for the Oilers' first lead of the game with 1:26 to play.

Game of Week: Permian-Lee

Sellout greets Rebs, Panthers Friday

As far as high school football rivalries go, they just don't get any bigger than Midland Lee vs. Odessa Permian. And it's finally time again.

These two teams, who have been the top two District 4-5A playoff powers since 1983, meet again Friday night without all the hoopla of live TV like last year, but that usual sellout crowd will be on hand again — like every year.

This game is for fans with tickets already in hand because it was virtually a sellout before the season ever started. Lee fans purchased all available season tickets before the season, and since Permian has over 5,000 season ticket holders to gobble about 3,000 available reserved tickets, another lottery had to be held in Odessa. Tickets are gone.

To call this one the game of the week in District 4-5A is putting it mildly. Nothing in the state or nation can match this one this week.

Lee owns a perfect 6-0 record and a 3-0 league mark. The Rebels have had a week off to prepare for this contest. Permian, on the other hand, has won three straight decisions over Lee since a double sweep by the Rebs in 1983. Permian won last year's contest by a 13-7 margin when Lee couldn't score from inside the five-yard line late in the game.

PERMIAN IS 7-0 on the season and 4-0 in league play, so it doesn't take a long look to see what this game means in terms of district championship hopes.

The least that can be said is that the winner of Friday's outing will almost certainly find itself back in the state playoffs. A win would insure the victor down the stretch. The winner could lose a game and still be in the playoffs.

Lee has held leads in the last six outings against Permian, only to win twice. Scores like 9-7 and 15-14 have become so common that the rivalry has grown to near legendary proportions. It's the one game West Texas drools over from year to year.

It is estimated that over 110,000 fans have attended the Lee-Permian matchup over the last five times they have met. The only thing that has kept that number down is the puny seating capacity (around 10,500) at Memorial Stadium. Two games in Lubbock's Jones Stadium drew in excess of 30,000 each time despite being over 100 miles away from the Petroplex.

THE ONLY fly in this year's ointment is the San Angelo Bobcats. San Angelo is also undefeated at 7-0 and will face Lee and Permian the next two weeks. That's going to give District 4-5A fans a lot of excitement down the loop stretch.

But the big news this week, won't be talk of the game. It will be the panic of West Texas fans, who are trying to find a way into Memorial Stadium by 8 p.m. Friday night.

A ticket to this game puts you in the class of West Texas' social elite. And you don't even have to wear a tux. Your basic black and maroon will be just fine. But you still have to have a ticket.

BYU runs to keep hopes of 11th straight title

Associated Press

It seemed like a sensible strategy: Insert extra defensive backs and force Brigham Young to challenge that stacked alignment through the air or run the ball.

The Cougars came into Saturday's game at Laramie as the No. 2 passing team in the country, averaging 322 yards per game, but ranked 100th out of 105 NCAA Division I-A teams in rushing at 84 yards per game.

The BYU ground game hadn't hurt anyone all season, a fact duly acknowledged by Cougar Coach LaVell Edwards.

So what happened? BYU stayed on the ground, generating 309 yards on 59 carries — its highest rushing output since 1982 — in a convincing 34-22 victory over Wyoming.

The triumph raised BYU's overall record to 4-2 and Western Athletic Conference mark to 2-1, keeping its hopes alive for an 11th straight conference crown.

WAC Roundup

Elsewhere in the WAC, Colorado State went to 2-1 in league play with a 31-7 rout of Hawaii in Fort Collins, San Diego State stayed unbeaten at 3-0 with a 15-10 decision over Texas-El Paso in El Paso, and New Mexico outslugged Utah 47-43 in Albuquerque. In a non-league game, Air Force was whipped by Notre Dame 31-3 in South Bend.

"Being able to run makes it a lot easier to call the game," said Edwards. "Our offensive line really came off the ball well today. We have been trying to get better at running."

Fullback Lakei Heimuli led the way with 177 yards and a third-quarter touchdown which proved to be the clincher. Steve Lindsley threw a pair of first-quarter touchdown passes and Leonard Chitty kicked four field goals.

Wyoming, outgained 270-34 yards in the first half and trailing 22-0, stormed back to make the score respectable in the second half on three scores by quarterback Randy Welniak. Welniak had replaced Scott Runyan, who suffered a first-quarter wrist injury.

Wyoming Coach Dennis Erickson said his team was beaten in all phases of the game but added, "I'm proud of our team. A lesser group may have packed it in at the half, but we didn't."

The loss dropped Wyoming to 4-3 overall and 2-1 in the WAC.

Steve Bartalo, the WAC's all-time leading rusher, ran for 108 yards and two touchdowns, and safety Ron Cortell returned an interception 32 yards for a TD as CSU stayed in the thick of the WAC title chase.

Girls may play football

AUSTIN (AP) — In a possible first step toward allowing girls to play junior high football in Texas, the policy committee of the University Interscholastic League unanimously recommended Sunday the deletion of words in the UIL constitution that make only boys eligible.

The UIL Legislative Council is scheduled to consider the issue Monday and can either approve the recommendation, reject it, or put the issue on the ballot for a referendum vote.

Even if the recommendation is proposal is approved by the Legislative Council, it must also be OK'd by the State Board of Education before it could go into effect.

The committee's action was prompted by a lawsuit filed recently challenging the 38-year-old rule that has banned girls from playing football.

The suit was filed by the Texas Civil Liberties Union and the parents of Tina Trejo, an Austin eighth-grader who tried out for her junior high football team this fall. Trejo made the team and has been playing under a restraining order.

The Policy Committee decided against recommending the elimination of all references to the sex of participants in seventh and eighth grade football.

The UIL's decision on the recommendation would not affect participation in high school football.

"We haven't been asked to address that," said Policy Committee chairman Bill Graves.

Murray knocks Baylor, chip off his shoulder

SWC Wrapup

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — It took the game of Kevin Murray's career for Texas A&M to finally put away its Baylor jinx.

Murray, a junior who hadn't beaten Baylor in his A&M career and played poorly in a 20-15 loss last year, said he had a "chip on his shoulder" going into Saturday's Southwest Conference clash with the Bears.

"I had something to prove," Murray said. "Last year I let the team down and Aggies all over the world down. I wanted to play a lot better than that."

Murray certainly did.

The 11th-ranked Aggies, who had lost to Baylor the last two years, outlasted the 20th-ranked Bears 31-30 on quarterback Murray's three touchdown passes.

Texas A&M Coach Jackie Sherrill called it "the greatest game I've ever seen a quarterback play."

The Aggies now have a 12-game winning streak at home since Baylor beat them here in 1984.

Baylor jumped to a 17-0 lead and appeared headed for another A&M upset when Murray took control.

Murray, who also ran for a touchdown, passed for 308 yards.

"Kevin was going uphill all day," Sherrill said. "He was 17 points down but he still always did the right thing."

Baylor Coach Grant Teaff said Murray's scrambling hurt the Bears the most.

"Murray just did miraculous things," Teaff said. "I saw the films of all A&M's games and that's the best they've played and it's the best we played. And it's Murray's best game."

For Murray, it was sweet revenge against the Bears.

"Baylor put a lot of pressure on us but left our receivers in a lot of man-for-man coverage," he said. "We did a good job of adjusting.

"I played bad against Baylor last year. I had been thinking a whole year about it. It was embarrassing. We all came on the field with a little chip on our shoulder," Murray recalled.

It was the sixth straight A&M-Baylor game decided by five points or less.

"It took a great team to beat us and that's what A&M was today," said quarterback Cody Carlson.

A crowd of 74,739 fans watched the game, third largest in Kyle Field history and the largest non-University of Texas game.

The loss was the second in SWC play for Baylor, while the Aggies increased their league record to 3-0.

"We were ready to play and gave it an extraordinary effort," Teaff said. "The season isn't over for us by a long shot although our chances for the Cotton Bowl are probably gone."

Three years ago Houston made it to the Cotton Bowl with two losses.

Aggies tall in saddle in Cotton Bowl quest

SWC Roundup

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

Don't automatically count out all the teams with two losses in the Southwest Conference football race.

In 1984, Houston had two losses yet got to the Cotton Bowl, where the Cougars lost to Doug Flutie and the Boston College Eagles.

It's the only time it has happened in SWC history.

As it stands right now, defending champion Texas A&M and Southern Methodist are the only two unbeaten teams in the conference. A&M is 3-0 while SMU is 4-0.

Arkansas is 2-1, Texas 1-1, and both Baylor and Texas Tech 2-2. The other teams have at least three losses.

However, SMU can only be a heartbreaker. The Mustangs are ineligible for the title or post-season competition because of NCAA probation.

The 1986 Aggies are already one-up on last year's team.

The Aggies' come-from-behind 31-30 victory over Baylor on Saturday was the first for Coach Jackie Sherrill's crew over Baylor's Grant Teaff in four years. Baylor had beaten A&M the last two years and tied them 15-all three years ago.

The Aggies entertain the Rice Owls at 2 p.m. on Saturday.

SMU, which bounced Houston 10-3 on Saturday, travels to Austin to meet the struggling Texas Longhorns at 1 p.m. Arkansas is at Houston in a 7 p.m. game in the Astrodome, and Baylor at TCU in the noon Raycom-TV game on Saturday.

Arkansas stayed alive in the SWC race by bouncing back from a 17-7 loss to Texas Tech with a 21-14 victory over the Longhorns — the first for the Razorbacks in Austin in 20 years.

IN OTHER games, Texas Tech blasted Rice 49-21 and North Texas State beat Texas Christian for the first time since 1919 with a 24-20 victory.

Quarterback Kevin Murray threw three touchdown passes and ran for another score as A&M overcame a 17-0 deficit for the victory before 74,739 fans, third largest crowd in Kyle Field history.

"That's the best I've seen Kevin Murray play," said Baylor quarterback Cody Carlson. "He was just outstanding."

Teaff said, "You can spell the game Kevin Murray. On third down, he was just incredible. He was throwing the ball like he was throwing it through board slats in a fence. He was tremendous."

Sherrill said Murray "had the best game I've seen a quarterback have."

He said A&M wasn't worried when it fell behind.

"We came from behind eight times and won them last year," Sherrill said. "Our players aren't afraid of it."

Arkansas Coach Ken Hatfield said it was a relief to finally take out Texas in Austin. Frank Broyles, now the athletic director at Arkansas, was the coach in 1966.

"FIRE FRED" signs were in evidence at Memorial Stadium.

Akers' daughter, Lesli, was interviewed on the sidelines by ESPN late in the game.

She said she "didn't appreciate" the derogatory signs about her father.

"You sort of get hot, but I guess it goes with the territory," she said. "We do appreciate the supporters who have stood behind us."

Contest Winners

This week's winners of the MRT Football contest are Gilbert Guiterrez of 1117 E. Spruce in Midland who took first place and Elaine Wright of 4409 Wilshire, also of Midland, who was second.

Game of Week: Permian-Lee

Sellout greets Rebs, Panthers Friday

As far as high school football rivalries go, they just don't get any bigger than Midland Lee vs. Odessa Permian. And it's finally time again.

These two teams, who have been the top two District 4-5A playoff powers since 1983, meet again Friday night without all the hoopla of live TV like last year, but that usual sellout crowd will be on hand again — like every year.

This game is for fans with tickets already in hand because it was virtually a sellout before the season ever started. Lee fans purchased all available season tickets before the season, and since Permian has over 5,000 season ticket holders to gobble about 3,000 available reserved tickets, another lottery had to be held in Odessa. Tickets are gone.

To call this one the game of the week in District 4-5A is putting it mildly. Nothing in the state or nation can match this one this week.

Lee owns a perfect 6-0 record and a 3-0 league mark. The Rebels have had a week off to prepare for this contest. Permian, on the other hand, has won three straight decisions over Lee since a double sweep by the Rebs in 1983. Permian won last year's contest by a 13-7 margin when Lee couldn't score from inside the five-yard line late in the game.

PERMIAN IS 7-0 on the season and 4-0 in league play, so it doesn't take a long look to see what this game means in terms of district championship hopes.

The least that can be said is that the winner of Friday's outing will almost certainly find itself back in the state playoffs. A win would insure the victor down the stretch. The winner could lose a game and still be in the playoffs.

Lee has held leads in the last six outings against Permian, only to win twice. Scores like 9-7 and 15-14 have become so common that the rivalry has grown to near legendary proportions. It's the one game West Texas drools over from year to year.

It is estimated that over 110,000 fans have attended the Lee-Permian matchup over the last five times they have met. The only thing that has kept that number down is the puny seating capacity (around 10,500) at Memorial Stadium. Two games in Lubbock's Jones Stadium drew in excess of 30,000 each time despite being over 100 miles away from the Petroplex.

THE ONLY fly in this year's ointment is the San Angelo Bobcats. San Angelo is also undefeated at 7-0 and will face Lee and Permian the next two weeks. That's going to give District 4-5A fans a lot of excitement down the loop stretch.

But the big news this week, won't be talk of the game. It will be the panic of West Texas fans, who are trying to find a way into Memorial Stadium by 8 p.m. Friday night.

A ticket to this game puts you in the class of West Texas' social elite. And you don't even have to wear a tux. Your basic black and maroon will be just fine. But you still have to have a ticket.

BYU runs to keep hopes of 11th straight title

Associated Press

It seemed like a sensible strategy: Insert extra defensive backs and force Brigham Young to challenge that stacked alignment through the air or run the ball.

The Cougars came into Saturday's game at Laramie as the No. 2 passing team in the country, averaging 322 yards per game, but ranked 100th gut of 105 NCAA Division I-A teams in rushing at 84 yards per game.

The BYU ground game hadn't hurt anyone all season, a fact duly acknowledged by Cougar Coach LaVell Edwards.

So what happened? BYU stayed on the ground, generating 309 yards on 59 carries — its highest rushing output since 1982 — in a convincing 34-22 victory over Wyoming.

The triumph raised BYU's overall record to 4-2 and Western Athletic Conference mark to 2-1, keeping its hopes alive for an 11th straight conference crown.

WAC Roundup

Elsewhere in the WAC, Colorado State went to 2-1 in league play with a 31-7 rout of Hawaii in Fort Collins, San Diego State stayed unbeaten at 3-0 with a 15-10 decision over Texas-El Paso in El Paso, and New Mexico outslugged Utah 47-43 in Albuquerque. In a non-league game, Air Force was whipped by Notre Dame 31-3 in South Bend.

"Being able to run makes it a lot easier to call the game," said Edwards. "Our offensive line really came off the ball well today. We have been trying to get better at running."

Fullback Lakei Heimuli led the way with 177 yards and a third-quarter touchdown which proved to be the clincher. Steve Lindsley threw a pair of first-quarter touchdown passes and Leonard Chitty kicked four field goals.

Wyoming, outgained 270-34 yards in the first half and trailing 22-0, stormed back to make the score respectable in the second half on three scores by quarterback Randy Welniak. Welniak had replaced Scott Runyan, who suffered a first-quarter wrist injury.

Wyoming Coach Dennis Erickson said his team was beaten in all phases of the game but added, "I'm proud of our team. A lesser group may have packed it in at the half, but we didn't."

The loss dropped Wyoming to 4-3 overall and 2-1 in the WAC.

Steve Bartalo, the WAC's all-time leading rusher, ran for 108 yards and two touchdowns, and safety Ron Cortell returned an interception 32 yards for a TD as CSU stayed in the thick of the WAC title chase.

Girls may play football

AUSTIN (AP) — In a possible first step toward allowing girls to play junior high football in Texas, the policy committee of the University Interscholastic League unanimously recommended Sunday the deletion of words in the UIL constitution that make only boys eligible.

The UIL Legislative Council is scheduled to consider the issue Monday and can either approve the recommendation, reject it, or put the issue on the ballot for a referendum vote.

Even if the recommendation is proposal is approved by the Legislative Council, it must also be OK'd by the State Board of Education before it could go into effect.

The committee's action was prompted by a lawsuit filed recently challenging the 38-year-old rule that has banned girls from playing football.

The suit was filed by the Texas Civil Liberties Union and the parents of Tina Trejo, an Austin eighth-grader who tried out for her junior high football team this fall. Trejo made the team and has been playing under a restraining order.

The Policy Committee decided against recommending the elimination of all references to the sex of participants in seventh and eighth grade football.

The UIL's decision on the recommendation would not affect participation in high school football.

"We haven't been asked to address that," said Policy Committee chairman Bill Graves.

Murray knocks Baylor, chip off his shoulder

SWC Wrapup

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — It took the game of Kevin Murray's career for Texas A&M to finally put away its Baylor jinx.

Murray, a junior who hadn't beaten Baylor in his A&M career and played poorly in a 20-15 loss last year, said he had a "chip on his shoulder" going into Saturday's Southwest Conference clash with the Bears.

"I had something to prove," Murray said. "Last year I let the team down and Aggies all over the world down. I wanted to play a lot better than that."

Murray certainly did.

The 11th-ranked Aggies, who had lost to Baylor the last two years, outlasted the 20th-ranked Bears 31-30 on quarterback Murray's three touchdown passes.

Texas A&M Coach Jackie Sherrill called it "the greatest game I've ever seen a quarterback play."

The Aggies now have a 12-game winning streak at home since Baylor beat them here in 1984.

Baylor jumped to a 17-0 lead and appeared headed for another A&M upset when Murray took control.

Murray, who also ran for a touchdown, passed for 308 yards.

"Kevin was going uphill all day," Sherrill said. "He was 17 points down but he still always did the right thing."

Baylor Coach Grant Teaff said Murray's scrambling hurt the Bears the most.

"Murray just did miraculous things," Teaff said. "I saw the films of all A&M's games and that's the best they've played and it's the best we played. And it's Murray's best game."

For Murray, it was sweet revenge against the Bears.

"Baylor put a lot of pressure on us but left our receivers in a lot of man-for-man coverage," he said. "We did a good job of adjusting.

"I played bad against Baylor last year. I had been thinking a whole year about it. It was embarrassing. We all came on the field with a little chip on our shoulder," Murray recalled.

It was the sixth straight A&M-Baylor game decided by five points or less.

"It took a great team to beat us and that's what A&M was today," said quarterback Cody Carlson.

A crowd of 74,739 fans watched the game, third largest in Kyle Field history and the largest non-University of Texas game.

The loss was the second in SWC play for Baylor, while the Aggies increased their league record to 3-0.

"We were ready to play and gave it an extraordinary effort," Teaff said. "The season isn't over for us by a long shot although our chances for the Cotton Bowl are probably gone."

Three years ago Houston made it to the Cotton Bowl with two losses.

Aggies tall in saddle in Cotton Bowl quest

SWC Roundup

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

Don't automatically count out all the teams with two losses in the Southwest Conference football race.

In 1984, Houston had two losses yet got to the Cotton Bowl, where the Cougars lost to Doug Flutie and the Boston College Eagles.

It's the only time it has happened in SWC history.

As it stands right now, defending champion Texas A&M and Southern Methodist are the only two unbeaten teams in the conference. A&M is 3-0 while SMU is 4-0.

Arkansas is 2-1, Texas 1-1, and both Baylor and Texas Tech 2-2. The other teams have at least three losses.

However, SMU can only be a heartbreaker. The Mustangs are ineligible for the title or post-season competition because of NCAA probation.

The 1986 Aggies are already one-up on last year's team.

The Aggies' come-from-behind 31-30 victory over Baylor on Saturday was the first for Coach Jackie Sherrill's crew over Baylor's Grant Teaff in four years. Baylor had beaten A&M the last two years and tied them 15-all three years ago.

The Aggies entertain the Rice Owls at 2 p.m. on Saturday.

SMU, which bounced Houston 10-3 on Saturday, travels to Austin to meet the struggling Texas Longhorns at 1 p.m. Arkansas is at Houston in a 7 p.m. game in the Astrodome, and Baylor at TCU in the noon Raycom-TV game on Saturday.

Arkansas stayed alive in the SWC race by bouncing back from a 17-7 loss to Texas Tech with a 21-14 victory over the Longhorns — the first for the Razorbacks in Austin in 20 years.

IN OTHER games, Texas Tech blasted Rice 49-21 and North Texas State beat Texas Christian for the first time since 1919 with a 24-20 victory.

Quarterback Kevin Murray threw three touchdown passes and ran for another score as A&M overcame a 17-0 deficit for the victory before 74,739 fans, third largest crowd in Kyle Field history.

"That's the best I've seen Kevin Murray play," said Baylor quarterback Cody Carlson. "He was just outstanding."

Teaff said: "You can spell the game Kevin Murray. On third down, he was just incredible. He was throwing the ball like he was throwing it through board slats in a fence. He was tremendous."

Sherrill said Murray "had the best game I've seen a quarterback have."

He said A&M wasn't worried when it fell behind.

"We came from behind eight times and won them last year," Sherrill said. "Our players aren't afraid of it."

Arkansas Coach Ken Hatfield said it was a relief to finally take out Texas in Austin. Frank Broyles, now the athletic director at Arkansas, was the coach in 1966.

"FIRE FRED" signs were in evidence at Memorial Stadium.

Akers' daughter, Lesli, was interviewed on the sidelines by ESPN late in the game.

She said she "didn't appreciate" the derogatory signs about her father.

"You sort of get hot, but I guess it goes with the territory," she said. "We do appreciate the supporters who have stood behind us."

This week's winners of the MRT Football contest are Gilbert Guiterrez of 1117 E. Spruce in Midland who took first place and Elaine Wright of 4409 Wilshire, also of Midland, who was second.

Monday Night

N.Y. Times News Service

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. — Calm down, John Elway. It's only a game.

"I've got to keep things under control," admits the Denver Broncos' quarterback, who often is so jittery before a game that he takes the field on the verge of hysteria.

Elway's next lesson in tranquility is Monday night, when the undefeated Broncos face the 5-1 Jets at Giants Stadium. The game brings together the top teams in the American Conference, meeting in the cauldron of prime-time television before more than 70,000 fans.

But only a few weeks ago, Elway was so fired up before the game with the Patriots that his coach, Dan Reeves, didn't know how to handle the strong-armed youngster.

"I thought about sending him down on kickoff coverage to calm him," says Reeves.

Instead, Elway was in his accustomed quarterback role and messed up terribly. In the first half he completed only six of 18 passes — and three of those completions were shovel passes to his backs. He was intercepted once. After one poor series he stormed past everyone — coaches, teammates — and sat down by himself at the end of the bench.

"I guess I learned something afer that game," says Elway.

In the second half Elway bounced back to complete 12 of 16 passes as the Broncos went on to record a 27-20 victory.

Those figures are part of Elway's overall impressive record that shows 11 touchdown passes and only two interceptions. Perhaps Elway's most meaningful statistic is this: From the time he became a starter for good late in his rookie season of 1983, the Broncos are 31-9 under him.

Coach Joe Walton of the Jets has worked with some of pro football's best quarterbacks, and says of Elway: "Right now, he's very scary. He can do something a lot of quarterbacks can't do — he can throw accurately upfield on the run. And far. I've never seen a guy do that so far on the run."

Elway has blossomed along with the Denver team. Since he joined the club the same comments have been made about both: "They're great, but . . ." The "but" was the Broncos' failure to win the really big games. In 1983 they were eliminated in the wild-card game by Seattle, in 1984 Pittsburgh knocked them out in the wild-card affair, and last season, an 11-5 record wasn't good enough for the playoffs. That was because the Broncos also were knocked off twice by the Raiders, who captured the division title.

Elway was the first quarterback chosen of the six picked on the first round in 1983. He was, in fact, the first player in the entire draft.

"It was harder on me because of what Marino was doing," he admits, referring to Dan Marino's stellar rookie season.

As a rookie, he was so celebrated in a city that was quarterback-starved that he was whisked off to a barber's home for a haircut in the dead of night so that fans and newsmen wouldn't spot him.

The Jets' Ken O'Brien was the fifth quarterback taken that year.

"I wasn't aware of him in college," says Elway, who played at Stanford while O'Brien performed at California-Davis.

Now, though, Elway says he follows the other first-rounders "more than anyone else."

"I follow them to see where I stand compared to that group," he said. "It's probably taken me longer than some and not as long as the others."

And how would he rate the group, which includes Jim Kelly, Marino, Tony Eason and Todd Blackledge?

"Pretty good. It'll probably be a while before a group like that comes out again."

NEW YORK — The New York Yankees have hired former Kansas City Royals interim manager Mike Ferraro and dismissed coaches Roy White and Joe Altobelli, The New York Times reports.

Pitching coach Mike Connor, bullpen coach Jeff Torborg and dugout coach Stump Merrill will return to the Yankees' staff, The Times said.

The Yankees will announce further changes later this week, including the addition of one more coach. Manager Lou Piniella wanted to retain his entire staff, but the club's principal owner, George Steinbrenner, wanted changes...

WASHINGTON — Lefty Driesell would relinquish his job as basketball coach and be reassigned to another position at Maryland under a deal being negotiated, according to a published report.

The most discussed job prospect for Driesell would be as a fund-raiser for the Terrapin Club, a private foundation housed on campus that functions as a booster club.

Members of that club were some of Driesell's strongest supporters following the death by cocaine intoxication June 19 of basketball star Len Bias.

Driesell referred questions to his attorneys, who could not be reached for comment...

NEW YORK — The long comeback effort of New York Knicks All-Star forward Bernard King has suffered a jolting setback following an injury to his right knee while jogging.

King, who hasn't played for the Knicks since March 23, 1985 because of torn ligaments and cartilage in his right knee, stepped in a hole while jogging Sunday and will miss 3-to-6 weeks of rehabilitation. King also sprained his right ankle in the mishap.

King, who had not announced a timetable for returning to uniform for the Knicks in 1986-87, had taken part in team practice drills on Friday for the first time since the injury. He had surprised Knicks Coach Hubie Brown by showing up in training camp...

'Outrageous' Vikings whip Bears

Associated Press

With Chicago's regular quarterback Jim McMahon sitting out with an injury, the Minnesota Vikings manhandled backup Steve Fuller en route to a 23-7 upset of the defending Super Bowl champions in Sunday's National Football League action.

"We were outrageous today," said Minnesota rookie defensive end Gerald Robinson, whose 2½ sacks keyed the Vikings defense. "Today, we were like maniacs. We were crazy out there."

Tommy Kramer completed 12 of 18 passes for 239 yards, including two long first-quarter touchdown passes, to key Minnesota's victory over Chicago.

Kramer also scored a touchdown as the Vikings, 5-2, snapped a six-game losing streak to Chicago. The Bears, 6-1, lost for only the second time since the 1984 NFC championship game and had won nine straight regular-season games.

The contest was a complete reversal of the Oct. 5 meeting in Chicago, which the defending Super Bowl champions won 23-0 by sacking Kramer seven times and by getting superb quarterbacking from McMahon.

Without McMahon, under whom Chicago has won 21 straight games in the contests he's started,, but who was out with shoulder and back injuries, the Bears never got untracked.

Rookie defensive end Gerald Robinson was in on three sacks and consistently beat All-Pro Bears tackle Jim Covert to flush Fuller out of the pocket. Fuller was sacked seven times, once more than Chicago quarterbacks had been trapped all year.

"Once we got ahead, the defense had the confidence to be reckless," said defensive tackle Keith Millard, who had 1½ of Minnesota's seven sacks of Fuller. "The 'Purple Rain' came down today when we needed it."

"We were whipped soundly," Bears Coach Mike Ditka said. "They played very good and they made us look very bad. They beat us up physically and they beat us the way you're supposed to to win football games."

Packers 17, Browns 14

Randy Wright passed for 277 yards, including the game-winning 47-yard touchdown to Phillip Epps, as previously winless Green Bay rallied from a 14-3 halftime deficit to beat Cleveland.

The pass to Epps, with 1:21 to play in the third quarter, came on the first play following a 36-yard punt by Cleveland's Jeff Gossett and gave the Packers a 17-14 advantage, their first lead since a Sept. 22 game against the Chicago Bears.

The Packers, 1-6, off to their worst start ever, had managed only a 24-yard Al Del Greco field goal in the first half before coming to life in the third quarter.

49ers 10, Falcons 10, OT

Atlanta's Sylvester Stamps caught a short pass from David Archer for a 39-yard tying touchdown with 1:33 left in regulation and the Falcons and 49ers battled to the first overtime tie in the NFL in nearly two years.

Before Sunday, there hadn't been a tie in the NFL since Nov. 4 1984, when Philadelphia and Detroit played to a 23-23 draw. It was only the ninth overtime tie in NFL history.

The deadlock left Atlanta atop the NFC West standings with a 5-1-1 record. The 49ers remained in second place with a 4-2-1 record.

Atlanta's tying score came on the first play after Billy Johnson had returned a punt 11 yards. Stamps made the catch over the middle at the 35, hit the right sideline and outran the defenders.

'Papa' Dionne charges Kings

Associated Press

Marcel Dionne's fatherly treatment of a pair of Kings rookies already is reaping benefits for Los Angeles' NHL team.

Luc Robitaillie scored two goals and set up the winner by Brian Erickson with 2:53 remaining Sunday night to lead the Kings to a 7-6 victory over the Edmonton Oilers. Jimmy Carson, the Kings' top draftee last spring, had a goal and two assists.

Dionne, the NHL's No. 2 all-time scorer and a veteran of 15 NHL seasons, arranged to have Robitaille live with his family and Carson live with a family next door during this season. Both youngsters have responded with some excellent performances for the Kings.

North Stars 8, Blackhawks 5

Red-hot Dino Ciccarelli had two goals and two assists, and defenseman Ron Wilson connected on a 65-foot power play slapshot and set up two of three first-period Minnesota power-play scores.

Wilson, with just 13 NHL goals in 93 career games, set up Brian MacLellan and Ciccarelli with perfect passes in the opening period. The Hawks, 0-4-1 in their last five games, have now given up 10 power-play goals in six games.

Flyers 3, Jets 1

Philadelphia remained unbeaten as Ilkka Sinisalo scored two goals and Tim Kerr also connected. The 5-0 Flyers got 29 saves from rookie goaltender Ron Hextall.

Kerr's tip-in of a Mark Howe shot at 14:56 of the first period opened the scoring. Sinisalo scored 2:12 later, putting in a rebound of a Peter Zezel shot. He scored again with a shot from the left faceoff circle that eluded Winnipeg goalie Eldon Reddick at 9:04 of the third period.

Rangers 2, Islanders 2

Patrick Flatley scored with 5:57 remaining in the third period, then the Islanders survived an elbowing penalty to Bryan Trottier which forced them to play shorthanded for the last 24 seconds of regulation and first 1:36 of overtime.

NFL ROUNDUP

Patriots 34, Steelers 0

Steve Grogan passed for three touchdowns and New England raced to a 24-0 lead before Pittsburgh managed a first down as the Patriots whipped the Steelers.

The Patriots' defense scored one touchdown, set up two others with turnovers and constantly pressured Pittsburgh rookie quarterback Bubby Brister as the Steelers suffered their worst loss since they moved into Three Rivers Stadium in 1970.

New England, last year's Super Bowl finalist, won for just the second time in five games. The Steelers, 0-3 at home, fell to 1-6, their worst start since they went 1-13 in 1969, Chuck Noll's first season as coach. Their worst previous loss at Three Rivers was 31-7 to Miami in 1984.

Saints 38, Bucs 7

Rookie running back Rueben Mayes rushed for 172 yards and two touchdowns, leading New Orleans over Tampa Bay. The Saints scored on their first three possessions of the game.

Mayes got 133 yards and both touchdowns in the first half while the Saints were opening a 17-0 advantage by intermission. Mayes accounted for 50 of the 73 yards on the drive to the first touchdown, scoring on a 9-yard run on the Saints' first possession.

Tampa Bay's Steve DeBerg, who replaced starter Steve Young at quarterback five minutes into the second half, accounted for the Bucs' touchdown with a one-yard run in the fourth quarter.

Redskins 28, Cardinals 21

Jay Schroeder, working against the NFL's top-rated pass defense, threw for three touchdowns and 232 yards to lead Washington over St. Louis.

The Redskins, 6-1, scored three touchdowns in their initial four possessions to take a 21-0 lead midway through the second quarter. St. Louis, getting three scoring passes from Neil Lomax, pulled to within 28-21 with 8:28 left, but the Cardinals' final drive of the day ended on the Washington 11-yard line as time expired.

St. Louis, 1-6, has lost nine of its last 10 games against the Redskins and has not won in the nation's capital since 1978.

Schroeder, who entered the game with only one touchdown pass in his last three outings, completed 13 of 23 passes and improved his record as a starter in the NFL to 10-2.

Raiders 30, Dolphins 28

Marcus Allen ran for 96 yards and scored three touchdowns to lead the Los Angeles Raiders past struggling Miami for their fourth straight victory.

Allen rushed for touchdowns on a pair of 2-yard runs and caught a 16-yard TD pass from Marc Wilson as Los Angeles improved its record to 4-3 and dealt Miami, 2-5, its fourth loss in the last five weeks.

Dan Marino threw two touchdown passes in the second half to bring Miami back, but the Dolphins couldn't cut their deficit to less than nine points until Mark Clayton caught a 68-yard TD pass on the last play of the game.

Bills 24, Colts 13

Jim Kelly threw touchdown passes of 6 and 13 yards to Andre Reed, leading Buffalo over winless Indianapolis.

The 0-7 Colts, the only team in the NFL without a victory, trailed from the beginning after Randy McMillan fumbled the ball on Indianapolis' first possession and Buffalo cornerback Rodney Bellinger returned it 15 yards for a touchdown. The Colts entered the game having lost an NFL-high 13 fumbles.

The Bills were also helped by 13 Colts penalties that cost Indianapolis 151 yards and one touchdown.

Rams 14, Lions 10

Nolan Cromwell returned an interception 80 yards for a touchdown and Eric Dickerson added to his NFL rushing lead with 130 yards as the Rams held off the Lions.

Dickerson, who improved his rushing total to 860 yards, scored the Rams' other touchdown on a 1-yard run as Los Angeles took a 14-0 first-quarter lead.

The Lions, held scoreless through the first three quarters, got a 47-yard field goal from Eddie Murray and a TD pass from Eric Hipple to Jeff Chadwick in the final period.

Seahawks 17, Giants 12

Seattle turned an interception of a Phil Simms pass into a 1-yard touchdown run by Curt Warner five minutes into the fourth quarter and held on for a tight victory over the Giants.

Dave Brown's interception of a Simms pass on the Seattle 10-yard line with 54 seconds left preserved the victory. Brown had two of the Seahawks' four interceptions of Simms.

The Seahawks improved their record to 5-2 while ending a five-game winning streak for the Giants, also 5-2, and knocking them out of a first-place tie with Washington in the National Football Conference East.

Chiefs 42, Chargers 41

Backup quarterback Bill Kenney rallied Kansas City for two second-half touchdowns after defensive players scored four second-quarter touchdowns as the Chiefs beat extended San Diego's losing streak to six games.

Kansas City safety Lloyd Burruss intercepted Chargers quarterback Dan Fouts three times and returned two for touchdowns, going 56 yards and 47 yards in the second quarter.

The Chiefs got a third score in the period when Kevin Ross scooped up a fumbled kickoff and ran 21 yards to the end zone.

Fouts suffered a concussion and did not start the second half after passing for 200 yards and one touchdown in the first half.

SERIES

"There wasn't any sandpaper involved," the manager said, smiling weakly. "He cut himself on his middle finger, and you're not supposed to have any foreign substance on your hands when you pitch. But you're not going to scuff a baseball with a Band-Aid."

No sooner had the bandage come off than a tourniquet was required. Gooden walked Spike Owen to begin the third inning, and on Clemens' bunt, Gold Glove first baseman Keith Hernandez badly underthrew Rafael Santana at second base, with both runners safe.

Gooden seemed to lose his composure, Boggs doubled home Owen, Marty Barrett singled hom Clemens and Bill Buckner singled home Boggs. The Red Sox had a 3-0 lead they would never relinquish.

The Mets made it interesting, striking for two runs in the bottom of the third. But Boston playoff hero Dave Henderson led off the fourth with a home run to deep left-center, and Gooden gave up a two-run homer to Dwight Evans in the fifth that gave the Red Sox enough offense to win.

"Early, he wasn't getting his breaking ball over," Johnson said of Gooden. "After that second home run, I thought he settled down and got his pitches over. I know he was certainly frustrated."

AFTER EVANS' blast, the game was over. For good measure, though, the Red Sox went on to collect a total of 18 hits, the most ever by a Boston team in the World Series and two hits shy of the Series record shared by the 1921 New York Giants and the 1946 St. Louis Cardinals.

McNamara, wary of his bullpen, was forced to go to it because Clemens clearly was off his game.

"To say the least, he wasn't effective," the manager said of Clemens, who was pitching on three days' rest for the third straight time. "He could have been tired ... he never got in a groove. He had a lead, and I wasn't going to leave him in when he was struggling."

The Red Sox were pleasantly surprised to get 4 and two-thirds innings of scoreless relief from Steve Crawford and Bob Stanley, meaning they saved Calvin Schiraldi for another day, a more pressing need.

Johnson, meanwhile, went through five pitchers, including possible starters Rick Aguilera and Sid Fernandez. He said Game 1 loser Ron Darling will come back to pitch Game 4, and Gooden will go in Game 5.

Aspens acquiver

Little breezes dusk and shiver.

Part I, Stanza 2

With a bright blue sky as a backdrop, top photo, aspen trees change colors in the mountains of southern New Mexico, site of Cloudcroft's annual Aspencade tour earlier this month. Golden-leafed aspens brighten the hillsides, above left photo, at Lincoln National Forest. Rim Trail 105, above, is covered with fallen aspen leaves. Aspens combine with the red maple trees, above right, for a rich and varied look during the fall season. Aspen-covered hillsides, at left, contrast with other, barren, hills.

The annual Aspencade at Cloudcroft, N.M., held during the first week of each October, provides visitors with the opportunity to view the changing of the colors — as the aspen trees native to the New Mexico area turn a spectacular shade of gold.

The venture is jointly sponsored by the Cloudcroft Chamber of Commerce and the Lincoln National Forest Ranger Service.

The chamber began the popular fall foliage tours 14 years ago by the chamber but during recent years the Ranger Service has been gradually incorporated into the program.

Ranger Service guides lead the tours and discuss the native wildlife. But it is the aspen trees — and their showy display — that provide the real reason for the visitors.

And, while this year's viewing was less spectacular than some in the past, because of the wet summer and high winds, a large crowd was still on hand.

It has been said of the autumn scene:

"Mother Nature goes about with a liberal supply of paint, with which she colors the leaves of the trees and other plants and thereby produces the riot of red, purple, orange and yellow found in the woods."

Rancher opposed to law requiring licenses for out-of-state hunters

FORT DAVIS (AP) — Darrell York, who operates a 7,200-acre ranch in the mountains of far West Texas, said the Texas Legislature added more grief to his operations when it passed a new law requiring out-of-state residents to pay $75 for a hunting license.

"I have enough trouble with mountain lions getting my calves. I don't need this other problem," York said. He runs 50 head of registered Texas Longhorns and 80 head of crossbred mother cows on his ranch 36 miles northwest of Fort Davis.

York is one of several exotic game owners in West Texas who feel the law violates their rights as landowners and makes it difficult to attract hunters.

York said he and other ranchers depend financially on exotic game hunters, who are increasingly choosing to go to other states, such as Florida, that do not require out-of-state hunting licenses.

Exotics formerly were considered domestic livestock and ranchers could do with them as they wished. Ranchers would report poached or stolen exotics to their county sheriff, not a game warden. The law passed by the 1985 Texas Legislature placed poaching of exotics under the jurisdiction of the Parks and Wildlife Department.

York would not say how many hunters his ranch attracts annually, or how much they pay to hunt exotics. His exotics are mouflon sheep, wild sheep native to Corsica and Sardinia.

State Sen. Bill Sims, D-San Angelo, opposes the law, and said a number of individuals and organizations have contacted him asking for a change.

Sims, executive secretary of the Texas Sheep and Goat Raisers Association, said some association members are interested in a change in the law.

"We want to establish that exotics belong to the man who raises them," Sims said.

Sims wants landowners to decide whether they want exotics to be livestock or wildlife under the law.

The Texas Parks and Wildlife Department lobbied for the law to make it easier for game wardens to enforce poaching laws and to arrest and charge poachers, Sims said.

Sims said he is working with State Rep. Fred Agnich of Dallas on a proposal for the upcoming Legislature.

However, Agnich has indicated to Fred King, publisher of the Hunting Ranch Business newsletter, that the problem may be larger since free-roaming exotics compete with native whitetail deer for feed on overgrazed land.

Agnich intends to propose legislation to allow unlicensed hunting of exotics inside high fences on ranches and farms. His proposal would make free-roaming exotic game state property and hunting would be regulated by Parks and Wildlife.

Sims said exotics should be the property of the owner, regardless of the side of fence they are grazing.

"If my sheep jump the fence and get into another man's pasture, he lets me know," Sims said. "Exotics are no different."

According to King's publication, Agnich admits his proposal would be difficult for exotic owners without high fences.

York said such a regulation would be worse than the licensing requirement. His ranch is in rugged mountain country, and regular fencing costs are high. The cost of a high fence would be prohibitive.

Candidates for Congress' 9th District distinctly different

BEAUMONT (AP) — One certainty in the 9th District Congressional race between Republican Lisa Duperier and 34-year incumbent Democrat Jack Brooks is that voters have a clear-cut choice.

The contrasts in the candidates — both in their style and their positions on issues — couldn't be greater.

Ms. Duperier, 31, a Beaumont stockbroker, represents the new-generation candidate — impeccably tailored, aggressive, a fountain of statistics, photogenic and comfortable with television.

Brooks, 63, the dean of the Texas congressional delegation, is just the opposite. His television commercials, for example, show him riding a tractor. His charm, undetected by the unflattering eye of a camera, comes alive in a one-on-one meeting when he puts his arm around a constituent or when he digresses during a speech to recall one of the countless anecdotes picked up during his 17 terms in Congress.

If he's running hard or if he feels threatened by a woman who reminds voters Brooks has been in office longer than she's been alive, he isn't admitting it.

"You're always concerned, but you don't worry about it," Brooks says. "Worry doesn't help."

"We've had the old-boy almost crooked-type backroom politician for so long," Ms. Duperier says. "That's one of the reasons why our area hasn't been able to overcome its economic problems."

The district stretches from southeast of Houston and includes such diverse areas as Clear Lake City — the home of the Johnson Space Center — Texas City and Galveston, and east to Beaumont and Port Arthur. It is the petrochemical heart of Texas and among the areas hardest hit by unemployment when the bottom fell out of oil prices.

Brooks terms his polls optimistic. Ms. Duperier says her surveys show her trailing but picking up five or six of every seven undecided voters since August.

Brooks' campaign touts his ability to create jobs for the area. He points to his efforts to locate near Port Arthur a huge drydock that has brought work to the depressed area. He also insists his seniority in Washington — he's the 10th-ranking Democrat in the House — is money in the bank for the people back home.

"I can demolish that," Ms. Duperier says. "He's not on the right committees. He's not effective. The question we ask people is: What has his seniority done for us?"

She's constantly on the attack, challenging what she says is Brooks' liberal voting record, out-of-state fund-raising and lack of positive image.

"He cannot change his looks," she says. "He cannot change his voting record. He cannot change his activities. We know we have the ammunition we can nail him with. I just have to figure out how to get the message out in the most economical manner."

Brooks, meanwhile, rarely even acknowledges in public that he is in a race.

"I have some things to do in the district," he said recently during a speech to a chamber of commerce group in Clear Lake City. "I have some opposition, as you know," he said, drawing chuckles from the audience.

Asked later about Ms. Duperier's incessant attacks, he replies, "I don't think they're very productive. My opponents never like what I do. They always complain."

And he keeps on winning re-election.

"So far," he cautions.

Ms. Duperier, however, gets credit for drawing Brooks into unfamiliar territory. For the first time ever before a general election, she got a reluctant Brooks to engage in a head-to-head televised debate.

One of her surprises during the 30-minute session was to rip Brooks for having campaign signs printed in Louisiana, instead of Texas.

Brooks ignored it during the broadcast, responding only when prompted afterwards by reporters.

"You know something even worse?" he said. "I was born there and so was my mother and father and grandmother and grandfather and great-grandfather."

He supports an oil import fee; she does not. Brooks favors the Superfund bill awaiting President Reagan's signature; Ms. Duperier wants business to have some leeway.

Ms. Duperier says Brooks is soft on crime; he points to part of the recently passed drug bill that imposes tough sentences on dealers, saying he put the punishment in. Brooks opposes U.S. aid to the Nicaraguan contras; she says the lack of aid threatens national security.

Brooks reminds voters in the historically Democratic district of his Democratic heritage, blaming the Reagan administration for any delays in easing the unemployment rate.

"We've sidetracked job initiatives to clear up this fiscal mess," he says of congressional efforts. "Reagan said he'd balance the budget. Now they've given up that goal until the next decade."

Ms. Duperier counters by saying it's not a Republican vs. Democrat issue.

"You're not going to hear me get up there and say send me to Washington to help Reagan," she says. But she also adds that among the high points in the campaign so far has been Vice President George Bush's campaign appearance for her in July.

Brooks already is planning for an 18th term.

TV violence, children's attitudes linked

Copley News Service

Murder, mayhem, rape, theft, drug abuse — all presented Hollywood style. A plot from "Miami Vice"? The next Rambo saga? "Death Wish II"?

Guess again.

These are the visions of children, youngsters who were asked to complete mock scripts during a recent CBS documentary on children and violence.

"The scripts were enough to chill your bone to the marrow," said Dr. Stuart L. Brown, a La Jolla, Calif., psychiatrist who conducted the informal experiment while serving as consultant for the "Children to Cain" installment of the network's "For Our Times" program.

Brown, who specializes in the study of violence, thought it would be intriguing to ask some junior high school students to write the last two acts of a script begun by two professional screenwriters.

The psychiatrist was especially eager to explore the imagery of these children, students in a violence-plagued, inner-city neighborhood in Northern California.

He expected — hoped for — something mundane and whimsical.

Instead, the children's scripts were so violent that they even stunned Brown, who once led a behavioral fact-finding team on Charles Whitman's observation tower shooting spree at the University of Texas in 1966.

BROWN CAME AWAY from the documentary more convinced than ever that media violence desensitizes people to acts of real violence and that children are particularly susceptible to this.

"A different world view is incorporated in the mind-set of those who view TV hour after hour," he said.

"The mind-set is that the world is accepting violence, it's a terrifying place. I liken it to the view of the world — particularly by the television generation — that we're all riding the Titanic and let me get the best cabin while I'm on it."

The psychiatrist said that, in his opinion, the evidence shows undeniably that aggression and violence on TV alter the behavior of the viewer, affecting not only those who are vulnerable to violence but also those not considered violent by nature.

Brown said his bibliography contains at least 800 references to the effects of television violence on people throughout the world. The studies range from one that focuses on the effect of cartoon violence on audiences who have never seen a cartoon, to those who watch a lot of television each week.

"It's no longer a question if prolonged TV watching has an effect on attitudes and behavior of the viewers," he said. "It does. We know that."

He said inhibition to violence is lowered when it is repeatedly observed and the violence appears gratuitous or sanctioned or is unrealistically presented, "like in these TV car crashes where everyone walks away unscathed."

He said that TV violence, when presented in a cartoonish Rambo context, also can be especially stimulating to people who have been victims of or witnesses to violence in the family, including violence between parents.

"THOSE INDIVIDUALS are more aggressive and have a higher propensity for violence in frustrating situations," Brown said.

CNS Graphic

Brown believes that reducing the amount of TV violence would reduce violence in society. This view is supported by Dr. Joe Tupin, another psychiatrist considered an expert on violence.

"Clearly, any reduction of violence on TV or in any other section of society might impact the safety of society," said Tupin, medical director of the University of California-Davis Medical Center and a professor of psychiatry.

But Tupin also said there is doubt as to whether the violence "is a reflection of us, or if we are a reflection of it. That question is unanswerable."

University of California-San Diego sociologist David Phillips, a respected researcher on the relation between mass media and aggression, said it's an "open question" what role media violence has on violence in the real world, because most studies on the subject are done in laboratories.

He did say, however, that lab tests have shown mass-media violence triggers aggressive behavior in some people. A major question, he said, is whether media-inspired violent tendencies in children remain with them over a longer period of time outside the lab.

Phillips recently had a major study published in the New England Journal of Medicine concluding that television news reports about suicide cause significant increases in teenage suicides.

"We are herd animals," the researcher said. "We do copy."

Realistic-looking toy guns used in real criminal acts

Copley News Service

"The Python" is a .38-caliber snub-nosed revolver that would do "The Equalizer" proud. It's on sale for $2.29.

Thomas Magnum, "P.I.," might pack the "Z-Matic" 45-caliber pistol. It goes for $2.39.

The guns look real — alarmingly real. They are, in fact, toys.

They're among scores of authentic-looking toy weapons sold at stores throughout the nation.

How realistic are these kinds of playthings? Police say real-looking enough to be used in crimes.

"We've recovered numerous robbery suspects who display only the butt end of a gun in their waistbands — and they end up having toy guns," said Bill Robinson, senior spokesman for the San Diego Police Department.

Those are just the ones police have caught.

"About half of all robberies are committed with handguns," Robinson said. "Nobody knows how many of those are toys."

Authentic-looking toy guns, besides being cheaper than the real thing, are also simpler to obtain.

To purchase a real handgun in California, for instance, you have to be 21 years old and submit to a background check that takes 15 days.

Any child can buy a toy gun. All that's needed is the money.

But children apparently aren't the only ones buying the toy weapons.

A random check of stores indicates that the real-looking toy guns are big sellers, and that they often are bought by adults.

A salesclerk at one toy shop said "businessmen in suits, then men in more casual clothes" buy more of the guns than do teenagers and younger children. At another toy store, an employee said, "Mostly adults — all kinds of adults — buy the realistic-looking guns."

Some adults, apparently, buy realistic toy guns for "protection." Robinson warned that it's illegal to brandish any kind of weapon — real or toy — in a threatening manner.

And, he said, if someone with a toy gun confronts someone with a real gun, the consequences can be tragic. "We've transported many people who have been wounded by someone they've intimidated with toy guns," he said.

Noting that even police can have a difficult time telling real guns from toys, Robinson said, "Pointing these kinds of things at a police officer is tantamount to suicide."

Not all adults who purchase realistic toy guns, of course, are buying them to commit crimes or to threaten anyone with. They often buy them for their children. These parents are, as one salesclerk put it, "all kinds of people from all kinds of backgrounds, right across the board."

As if to illustrate the point, in the parking lot of a shopping center recently, an apparently upper-middle-class family was climbing into an expensive late-model station wagon; the father nonchalantly held two authentic-looking submachine guns, then handed them to his two small sons as they settled into their seats.

All of this is disquieting to people who believe buying toy guns for children fosters violent tendencies.

That aspect aside, children, too, can face the same violent consequences as adults when they have what appears to be a real weapon in their possession.

In March 1983, a Stanton, Calif., police officer was sent to what was thought to be an unoccupied apartment after a neighbor reported not having seen the woman who lived there or her 5-year-old son for several days.

When the policeman entered the apartment, he heard noises from another room and saw that the door was tied shut with a string. After identifying himself, the officer kicked in the door and in the glow of the TV set saw a figure pointing a gun at him.

He fired one shot. He killed the little boy, who was holding a toy gun.

Daytime television eye-opener to uninitiated

By JOHN BOGERT
Copley News Service

For the past two weeks I have been home getting acquainted with a newborn child and, God save us all, daytime television.

Because I have been occupied with day labor for many years, what plods across the daytime tube has largely passed me by.

Sure, I knew the reruns, game shows and soaps were there, but hey, when you're moving fast, you just can't drink it in.

It took the immobilization caused by multiple night baby feedings to cause me to dwell before the set.

I did not, of course, catch all the shows I will mention all in one day. Such viewing, I fear, would promote the kind of brain atrophy that causes the lower lip to protrude and the mouth to drool alarmingly.

No, I caught the daylight tube in two- and three-hour stints. Still, it was enough to make an impression.

For starters — and this may well be the high point of the broadcasting day — did you know that there is a farm report at 5 a.m.?

Everybody who watches daytime television should be forced to watch the farm report to remind them that some folks who aren't stockbrokers or cat burglars still arise at that hour to gulp coffee and find out what the futures traders are saying about their as-yet unharvested crop.

After that reminder of a heartier life, we launch right into the stretching and meditating shows and the "Rambo" (no kidding) cartoon show.

"Eat hot lead, commie!"

It's a good thing the kid, a scant few weeks out of utero, can't see that.

On the brighter side, there is still the "Today Show," the Rascals and the venerable Three Stooges. But once they fade from the screen the awful, mindless onslaught begins.

CNS Graphic

Let's go down the morning list: "The $25,000 Pyramid," "Card Sharks," "Sale of the Century," "The Price Is Right" (no, it isn't), "Wheel of Fortune" and "Super Password."

Watch any two and feel the drool form on your lips.

My overall impression is one of eager, jumping, screaming cocker spaniel-like humanoids looking mentally taxed as they stand amid flashing lights, bonging bells, walking mannequins and stupid game show hosts as they try to win "this beautiful washer-dryer!"

"Oooooo-ahhhhhhh!"

It makes me wonder how they'd react to Monument Valley or the Louvre.

All in all, game shows are a cut below the "Newlywed Game," the former low-water mark in human evolution.

However, we all know that the real meat of the daytime spread is the soaps.

And soaps, I discovered, are every bit as tedious as real life. In the entire history of story-telling, time compression, the rendering of truth and the finely drawn character have been the gold ring for which the writer strives.

Forget it. In the soaps everything moves in real time. It's like watching unedited home videos.

A guy comes in the door on "Days of Our Lives" carrying a bag of groceries. Does he put them down and deal with other matters? Nosiree. He puts the groceries away, all of them. Let's see, crackers here, milk in the fridge, nuts there.

I noticed that I was grinding my teeth.

Then there was this toothy blond woman on another soap — I think it might have been "Loving" or maybe it was "As the World Turns" — using a hypodermic needle to inject poison into chocolate bonbons.

She injected all the candy, pausing after each to flash what I supposed to be a fiendish smile in the general direction of the camera.

And all the folks inhabiting these lovely, beautifully decorated soap opera apartments and homes are dressed (sometimes literally) to kill.

Everyone has beautiful hair, beautiful clothes and impeccable makeup. Going to bed alone and they look like a million bucks.

It must make the homebound feel great.

About the only good thing I can say about these shows — and there seems to be about 4,000 of them — is the fact that they are sponsored by national advertisers. This may not seem like much — an M&M commercial here, a bleach advertisement there — but compared with the ads running on local stations, it's pure class.

The kind of commercial that comes wrapped around reruns of "The Odd Couple" and "Bonanza" makes me wonder if everyone who stays at home is there because he has been locked in.

"Do you," asks the announcerlike voice for about 20 different technical schools, "want to be a (pick one) welder, executive secretary (as opposed to a flunky secretary), nurse, computer programmer, computer repairman or medical technician?"

Do you want to be, variously, "in control, secure, a leader in your field, respected, admired and — it is strongly suggested — sexy?"

Who could say no?

Then there are Donahue and Gary Collins and Oprah encouraging people to share their most intimate secrets and feelings with a few million close friends.

Only partially masked by all this pseudo-psychology and painful self-revelation, is the fact that guys like Donahue are running a verbal peep show.

Watch this stuff long enough and you might get the impression that the world is as hollow as a beach ball, as bleak as Newark.

Video encyclopedia triggers discussion

Copley News Service

How can schoolchildren be shown a video without being spoon-fed?

With help from the Video Encyclopedia of the 20th Century, that's how.

Twenty-three years in the making, the video encyclopedia is being marketed to schools and libraries by the Corporation for Entertainment and Learning.

Company officials are quick to point out that "entertainment" and "learning" are not mutually exclusive terms. The 75 one-hour videocassettes cover major events from 1893 through the 1985 presidential inauguration.

The difference is that the videos contain no captions or commentary.

Creator Mort Koplin says the aim is to get students and teachers to discuss what they've seen instead of being told what they're seeing.

After all, many adults still think Spencer Tracy and Clarence Darrow were the same guy.

Appetites enormous

LUSAKA, Zambia (AP) — Elephants have not found favor here or elsewhere as house pets for more reasons than their huge bodies.

One other reason is that these tremendous animals must eat more than 300 pounds of food a day, ranging from grasses and leaves to twigs and bark.

DEAR ABBY

Trick-or-treat custom disliked

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: With Halloween nearly here again, please run those letters from readers protesting "trick or treat." Thank you. — WORRIED IN WILMINGTON

DEAR WORRIED: With pleasure. Others have also requested them:

DEAR ABBY: Shame on you. Your campaign to abolish trick or treat on Halloween is unreal. Why deny children the fun of dressing up in costumes and going from door to door to show off and collect a few treats just because a few rowdies have abused the custom?

I usually agree with you, Abby, but this time I think you were wrong to suggest ending a cherished tradition that is second only to Christmas for some children. Please let me know how the voting went. — LOVES CHILDREN

DEAR LOVES: My readers voted 500-to-1 to abolish trick or treat. Please understand, I see nothing wrong with dressing children (under 12) in costumes and sending them around the neighborhood to show off and collect a modest treat, but trick or treat has escalated to extortion by teen-age hoodlums. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: Congratulations for having the courage to suggest that trick or treat be abolished.

I refuse to spend my retirement money for candy or anything else kids don't need.

I'm no Scrooge, but each year on Halloween, I turn off my lights and hide upstairs, reading by flashlight until the dread hours of trick or treat are over. — W.K.H., LEXINGTON, KY.

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for condemning trick or treat. It's high time somebody did.

A few years ago I opened my door to a band of trick-or-treaters and gave them some good apples. They took them, threw them on my lawn and started to threaten me, so I quickly shut the door and called the sheriff. I was told, "It's only a game. It's Halloween!"

The next morning my lovely white brick wall had been spray-painted red and my windows had been pelted with eggs. When I told my neighbors I was outraged, they said I was "un-American."

Please run that column every year, Abby. — S.M.F. IN COLORADO

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I agree that trick or treat should be abolished. When our children were small, we followed the crowd and went along with it. When they came home after touring the neighborhood, there would be squabbles over which sibling had the better "haul." Much of what they brought home gathered dust until Christmas. Then it was thrown out.

Each year Halloween grew increasingly repugnant to us. As you say, "It's legalized blackmail" — a poor concept to instill in children. Finally after several years of dreading Oct. 31, I thought, "Why should I go against my principles to follow the sheep?" So, instead, on Halloween we took our children to a restaurant for a festive dinner.

They never felt deprived, and I hope they respect us for holding out against a bad custom. It's a shame more parents don't put down a firm foot and behave like responsible guardians. — MOTHER OF SIX

DEAR ABBY: After reading your column against trick or treat, I am hoping more people will do something to end this potentially dangerous custom. Last year when I was president of the PTA, we had one big Halloween party for all the students and their siblings. Out of 400 students, 375 attended. Over 75 parents volunteered to chaperone, and we had more donations of food than we knew what to do with.

It was a huge success! The party ended at 6 p.m., and to ensure that everybody went straight home afterward, our principal made random phone calls to the kids' homes, and if they answered the phone they won a prize donated by the many generous merchants in our area.

This is our second year, and I hope it will always be a tradition at the Alleghany School — Pride of Lindenhurst! — LISA PIGNATARO, NEW YORK

THIS CAN BE THE BEST YEAR YOUR CHILD EVER HAD IN SCHOOL.

JUST TWO HOURS A WEEK CAN BRING OUT THE CLASSROOM WHIZ THAT'S HIDING IN YOUR CHILD.

Sylvan Learning Centers are located in major cities across America. We teach reading and math. An independent study by clinical psychologists shows that Sylvan students gain an average of more than one school year in reading or math in the first 36 hours of instruction.

AT SYLVAN YOUR CHILD DOESN'T HAVE TO COMPETE TO LEARN.

There are never more than three students per instructor, so your child receives constant individualized attention. Experienced, certified teachers use innovative teaching methods and modern technology. This, combined with continuous praise, encouragement, motivation and rewards, builds your child's confidence and desire to succeed.

ENROLL YOUR CHILD NOW.

Remember, because we hold the line at just three students per instructor, enrollment is strictly limited. And the sooner your child begins, the sooner you'll see positive results reflected in his classroom work.

Sylvan offers flexible after school hours and requires no contracts or long-term commitments. You simply pay monthly tuition. Don't let this learning opportunity pass your child by.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠95 ♡83 ◇Q10983 ♣AKQ10
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
4 ◇	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—Five diamonds is a lazy bid. You could easily have a slam and partner won't know what to do. It costs you nothing to cue-bid five clubs en route. If partner does no more than bid five diamonds, you should then pass.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠8 ♡K1076 ◇QJ853 ♣J72
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	3 ♠	Pass	Pass
Dble	4 ♠	?

What do you bid now?
A.—We would not fault you severely if you elected to bid one of your suits at the five-level. However, partner must have a powerful hand to force you to bid at the four-level and you have a good holding for someone who has promised nothing. The expert bid is four no trump. That cannot be to play—if you held spades you would double. It must be a takout bid showing moderate values and a hand where you are not sure in which strain to place the contract.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A8 ♡AKQ632 ◇AQ ♣KQJ
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
2 ♡	Pass	4 ♡	Pass

What action do you take?
A.—Partner's jump raise in response to your demand bid shows good trumps but denies any ace, king or singleton. Under the circumstances, give up all thoughts of slam. At best, you will need a finesse; at worst, you might have no play at all and 10 tricks could be your maximum.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠83 ♡J10542 ◇K983 ♣A6
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
3 ♡	3 ♠	Dble	?

What action do you take?
A.—Strange auction. How can East possibly have enough to double three spades, even if he has all the missing trumps? Partner must have a good suit and fair hand to bid at the three-level vulnerable. Show your faith in him by redoubling.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AJ9852 ♡A2 ◇K543 ♣7
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—You have found your eight-card fit! North's bidding promises a six-card heart suit, so your A-2 is adequate support. Since you have an opening bid facing an opening bid, jump to game. Four hearts.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠10953 ♡J963 ◇Q1072 ♣8
Partner opens the bidding with one club. What action do you take?
A.—We don't like the idea of passing partner's one club opening bid with a singleton, especially when we hold two four-card major suits. However, we are not prepared to bid either of them. If we make our natural response of one diamond, partner can introduce a major suit, if he has one.

Wiesel throws first ball

NEW YORK (AP) — Nobel Peace Prize winner Elie Wiesel, who divides his time between New York and Boston, threw out the ceremonial first ball for the second game of the World Series between the New York Mets and the Boston Red Sox.

Wiesel, 58, who lives in New York and teaches one day a week at Boston University, threw a strike to Mets catcher Gary Carter and then watched the first inning from baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth's box before leaving.

Also in the stands Sunday night were singer Billy Joel, who sang the national anthem, and his wife, model Christie Brinkley, who was recording the action with a video camera.

Wiesel, a survivor of Nazi concentration camps who was named the 1986 Nobel Peace Prize winner on Tuesday, is an author who has chronicled the suffering of Jews under Hitler and their problems in the Soviet Union today.

MIAMI (AP) — "Miami Vice" star Don Johnson has settled a $2 million invasion-of-privacy lawsuit against a Miami Beach real estate broker for an undisclosed sum, his attorney said.

Johnson

Johnson sued broker Gerard Llorens last March after Llorens told a reporter the actor was buying a plot of land and building a home on posh Star Island in Miami's Biscayne Bay section. The suit said Llorens had made an unwritten promise to keep the sale a secret.

Johnson called the disclosure "improper, inappropriate, immoral and offensive," and his attorney, Donald Klein, claimed it would cost "a fortune" for extra security guards to guard the house against gawkers and souvenir-hunters.

Llorens would not comment on the terms of the settlement.

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Actress Jill Ireland, wife of film tough guy Charles Bronson, says she agreed to be a guest speaker for the local American Cancer Society to show how she benefited from cancer research.

"A few years ago, I wouldn't have lived," she said, referring to her bout with breast cancer. "If it weren't for the cancer research advances, I would not be here now."

Miss Ireland, 50, underwent cancer surgery about two years ago, followed by six months of chemotherapy. The operation involved removal of the right breast because of a malignant tumor that had spread to lymph nodes.

In a book to be released in January, Miss Ireland describes her experiences and the impact on her life and family. The book is titled "Life Wish" — a takeoff on Bronson's "Death Wish" films.

BRIDGEHAMPTON, N.Y. (AP) — Sportscaster Frank Gifford and WABC-TV personality Kathie Lee Johnson have tied the knot but their honeymoon will have to wait because they have to work.

Gifford, co-host of ABC's "Monday Night Football," and Ms. Johnson, co-host of "The Morning Show" on the network's New York flagship station, were married Saturday in Bridgehampton on Long Island, the bride's manager said.

Ms. Johnson, who was formerly on ABC's "Good Morning America," will now be known professionally as Kathie Lee Gifford, said her manager, David Martin.

He said the newlyweds would honeymoon at a later date because both were scheduled to work today.

BOSTON (AP) — Pianist Vladimir Horowitz performed before a full house in Symphony Hall, one of only two U.S. concerts planned for him this year following a tour of Europe and the Soviet Union.

Many members of the audience on Sunday had waited hours before the box office opened Sept. 29 to buy tickets to hear the 82-year-old Russian-born master, who last played in Boston in 1983.

Horowitz is to perform in Chicago next Sunday.

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Roy Clark's pickin' and grinnin' was the featured entertainment as hundreds of Oklahomans saluted Gov. George Nigh, who leaves office in January after 32 years in state politics.

The governor and his wife, Donna, were treated to dinner at Leadership Square and a reception at the Myriad Convention Center. Performers on the bill with Clark included a Dixieland band from Central State University in Edmond.

"It was fantastic," Nigh said of the tribute. "Naturally one thing is that I have mixed emotions about saying farewell. But I look around at all these friends and others who have come out and I am happy."

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — An elderly couple who likened their missing pet orangutan to "one of our own children missing" was reunited with the ape Sunday evening.

Police brought Prissy, an 8-year-old ape with one arm, back to Buck and Betty Robinson, said Robinson.

"We are very happy and we're all back together again," he said. "We can really sleep tonight."

Robinson had no details on how police came across the ape, which was stolen from the couple's front porch last week. A police spokesman did not immediately return telephone calls.

Earlier, the couple said they wouldn't ask questions or seek restitution if Prissy, a birthday present from Robinson to his wife several years ago, were returned.

"I won't press any charges if they return it to me," said the 76-year-old Robinson, who, himself, is missing an arm, from an accident during his career as a rodeo clown.

"If they bring it back up here and tie it to the porch, I won't say a thing."

Robinson, who placed a newspaper advertisement asking for Prissy's return, said he received a report Sunday that two men were trying to sell the ape Saturday for $300.

The couple had been distraught since the orangutan was stolen Thursday. "It's just like it was one of our own children missing," Robinson said.

Before Sunday's reunion, the ape had last been seen being shoved into a van in front of the Robinson's house, police reports said. Witnesses gave police sketchy descriptions of the driver and a accomplice.

"People who don't know animals can't realize how much she did to make us happy in this house," said Robinson.

Robinson said Prissy loved to lay her head on his wife's lap and watch television in the evenings. If a dog appeared on the screen, Prissy would get down, run over and slap the screen.

"You see, it was a dog that bit off her arm years ago," he said.

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar gained slightly in quiet trading today as dealers awaited fresh indicators of U.S. economic performance to be published this week. Gold fell in Europe after rising in Hong Kong.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar rose to a closing 154.30 yen from Friday's 154.15. Later, in London, it was quoted at 154.45 yen.

Other dollar rates at midmorning, compared with late Friday:

—1.9784 West German marks, up from 1.9760

—1.6245 Swiss francs, up from 1.6195

—6.4815 French francs, up from 6.4650

—2.2335 Dutch guilders, up from 2.2305

—1,369.10 Italian lire, up from 1,368.50

—1.3895 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3892

In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.4290, compared with $1.4320 Friday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $421.70 a troy ounce, compared with late Friday's $421.30. At midmorning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $420.

Oil prices unlikely to rise with OPEC agreement

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — A decision by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to basically extend its current production agreement is unlikely to cause oil prices to stray out of the $13-to-$16-a-barrel range they have been in since Sept. 1, according to oil analysts in the United States.

OPEC is considering allowing some of its members to raise production enough to add 200,000 barrels a day to the organization's total output, but given that late autumn and early winter is the peak demand period for crude oil, the extra output would probably not put any downward pressure on prices, the analysts said.

On the other hand, any increase in OPEC production would not help the organization get nearer to its goal of raising oil prices to the $18-a-barrel level.

Steve H. Hanke, chief economist of Friedberg Commodity Management, Inc. of Toronto, said one effect of an extension of the accord is likely to be an increase in the relatively small amount of cheating by OPEC members that has occurred since the accord took effect Sept. 1.

The 200,000-barrel-a-day addition appears earmarked for several member countries — including Kuwait, Gabon, Ecuador and the United Arab Emirates — that were known or widely believed to have violated the Sept. 1 production pact.

"If the rollover in effect sanctions the cheating that's going on," Hanke said, "what's to prevent these countries from continuing and others from joining in? This shows that cheating can be a successful bargaining chip."

Further, he said that the huge oversupply of crude oil in storage would continue to act as a brake on any upward price movement and could be the instrument of a sharp downward swing if refiners believe prices will fall and decide to liquidate their stocks. The analysts also said they were not surprised that OPEC, after two weeks of haggling, during which it appeared the group would not be able to reach any agreement at all, is on the verge of extending the same pact they settled on two months ago.

"There's been a tremendous amount of politics at play," said Alan L. Edgar, a senior vice president of Schneider, Bernet & Hickman of Dallas, a division of Thomson McKinnon Securities Inc. "I'm not surprised it took this long."

Edgar said that the political considerations within OPEC include the concern of Saudi Arabia and other Gulf Arab states that the Iran-Iraq war could seriously escalate, threatening oil production and shipments throughout the Gulf, and their worry over its Iran's leadership role within OPEC and the diplomatic overtures it has been making to both the Soviet Union and the United States.

Edgar said the Iran-Iraq conflict remains "the wild card in any of the deliberations within and outside OPEC, because everyone knows that if Iran takes Iraq it becomes the prorationing agent of oil for the entire Gulf."

George F. Friesen, a Dean Witter Reynolds Inc. vice president, said that another reason for the long, contentious OPEC session was that both Saudi Arabia and Kuwait were undecided at the meeting's outset whether they would support a rollover of the August pact.

He said that both countries "wanted to insure that OPEC discussed long-term strategic issues concerning pricing and production and not just back into that strategy piecemeal."

"They got those issues out in the open at this meeting," Friesen said. "They've set them up for discussion at the December meeting."

Daniel Yergin, president of Cambridge Energy Research Associates, a consulting firm in Cambridge, Mass., said that fashioning a permanent production agreement "is clearly going to be on the agenda for December." He added: "It was obvious that a basic extension of the agreement was the path of least resistance. But it would be very difficult for OPEC to simply roll over a stopgap agreement a second time. They have got to face the heart of the matter."

Hanke said that will present an extremely difficult challenge for OPEC because the "basic message of the Saudi manuevering in this meeting was that they can't live with this kind of setup."

Hanke said that Saudi Arabia, which can produce at least 9 million barrels a day and has a current quota of 4.35 million, "needs to be allowed to use their production capacity to a greater degree than possible under the present arrangement — which, of course, raises all sorts of difficulties for the other OPEC members, because if that happened, they would have to cut their production. That's the fundamental issue facing OPEC: how to let Saudi Arabia produce more and at the same time get the price up to $18 a barrel."

GM scraps plans for GM-80 project

New York Times News Service

DETROIT — Confirming industry reports, the chairman of the General Motors Corp. said Sunday that his company had scrapped plans to produce a new generation of plastic-body sports cars.

Roger B. Smith indicated in an interview with The Detroit News that GM has no current plans to proceed with production of front-wheel-drive plastic replacements for the current Chevrolet Camaro and Pontiac Firebird sports cars. Last summer, the company notified suppliers that the project, designated GM-80, was at least temporarily on hold.

"The GM-80 right now is gone," Smith said in the interview. "We're back in the laboratory on that one."

The GM chairman said the project went "maybe a little too far on technology and got beyond the cost barrier." In recent months, GM, which is expected to report an operating loss for the third quarter, has been scaling back its spending on new programs.

The GM-80 cars had been set for introduction in 1989 or 1990 as replacements for the present Camaro and Firebird, which have rear-wheel drive and conventional steel bodies.

The GM-80 cars would have had plastic body panels bolted to a steel subframe. They would have been the first high-volume application of plastic technology, restricted so far to specialty models, such as the Fiero and Chevrolet Corvette.

Earlier this year, some General Motors officials and executives of supplier companies predicted that as many as one million GM cars a year would be built with plastic skins by the start of the next decade.

They said the lower tooling costs for plastic body parts, compared with steel, made the technology attractive because the look of a model could be changed quickly and relatively cheaply. But plastic costs more, piece for piece, than steel. The GM-80 cars reportedly also were heavier than planned and did poorly in crash tests.

The halting of the GM-80 program is causing turmoil among plastic suppliers. Many of these companies had established offices in the Detroit area and earmarked production facilities in anticipation of new business.

In the interview, Smith said the company was not planning to sell any of its divisions, despite its slumping earnings, and he said efforts to trim its work force were underway. Officials of GM have said its goal is to cut white-collar employment in this country 25 percent by 1990.

Retailers expect good Christmas sales

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — The 1986 Christmas selling season — the 27 shopping days starting the day after Thanksgiving — has a generally good look to both retailers and analysts at this point. But most agree that this season probably will not match the outburst of consumer buying that marked both the 1985 and 1984 periods.

Estimates for the season vary considerably because of widespread uncertainty about the economy, but the majority of retailers expect holiday sales to be up from 3 percent to 8 percent over last year, with some expecting double-digit gains.

"It will be a good season and hold up reasonably well with the sales rate of 6 to 7 percent that the general merchandise industry had in 1986 so far," said Bernard M. Fauber, chairman of the K mart Corp., the nation's second-biggest non-food retailer after Sears, Roebuck & Co. "But we don't think it will be a barnburner."

He added that he expected apparel sales to do well and said there would be "a good toy season because there are some very interesting new products out there."

However, Fauber and others expressed concern about the federal deficit and the nation's trade balance. He does not foresee consumers flocking to stores this holiday period in expectation of lower taxes and more take-home pay next year when their payments on credit purchases will come due. "I think the tax reform measures will have to settle in first before the consumer is stimulated," he said."

But Donald J. Stone, vice chairman of Federated Department Stores, believes the season will be difficult because "customers don't seem to have any great confidence about spending money."

The holiday period is crucial for retailers, contributing as much as 25 percent of total sales and as much as 50 percent of annual profits. In some recent years, profits slumped as sizable inventories remained on the shelf, but retailers now are makng substantial efforts to better correlate their merchandise stocks with sales.

Edward Johnson, director of the Johnson Redbook Service of Prescott, Ball & Turben, New York, believes that these inventory-control efforts will exert a strong influence this season, helping to lift retail profits.

"It looks to me as if we will see a 5 percent to 6 percent advance in the Christmas season over 1985, with a strong flourish at the end," he said.

Retailers predicted that the Northeast and the revived Middle West would probably enjoy the best sales. California and other Western states are expected to have areas of weakness related to the cyclical effects of the letdown in the technology and aerospace industries. The Southwest, particularly Texas, the retailers said, might be the weakest area, with the slump in the oil industry curtailing consumer spending.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Corporate confidence deteriorates further

NEW YORK (UPI) — Business leaders around the country apparently have lost confidence in both the economy at large and their own industries, a new survey shows.

The quarterly survey by The Conference Board, covered about 1,000 heads of 24 major industries. The survey's Measure of Business Confidence, which began at 100 in 1985, tumbled to 50 in the third quarter, down from 61 in the first and second quarters of this year.

"Latest index readings show that executives who head this nation's major businesses have lowered their expectations for the economy at large and their own industries as well," said Steven Malin, an economist with the board.

Sharp declines were recorded in the surveyed executives' views of both current and future business conditions. Less than a third expected the economy to improve during the next six months, the board said.

Strong competitive pressures will limit price hikes during the rest of 1986 and 1987, the survey said.

Houston foreclosures likely to peak this year

HOUSTON (AP) — As many as 35,000 Houston homes may be repossessed because of dropping home values and high mortgage payments, according to a University of Houston report.

Lenders have repossessed about 30,000 homes in the Houston area since the beginning of 1985. More than 2,000 homes were repossessed in the monthly Harris County foreclosure sale on Oct. 7, an all-time record.

Most foreclosures are on homes sold between 1980 to 1984 with high interest rate loans.

Foreclosures likely will peak out this year because about half of those 65,000 homes sold during that time already have been repossessed, said Barton A. Smith, director of the UH Center for Public Policy that issued the report.

Real estate brokers said Houston property has begun to attract foreign and domestic capital because some investors believe low prices will soon disappear as the local economy improves.

Kansas firm tops Forbes small company list

NEW YORK (UPI) — A Kansas manufacturer of bar-coded labels is atop Forbes' 1986 list of the 200 Best Small Companies in America.

Graphic Technology of Olathe, Kan., grabbed the top spot on the annual list, which ranks companies according to their five-year average return on equity — the annual profits figured as a percentage of net worth.

Graphic Technology, a newcomer to the list, had the highest five-year ROE of 274.4 percent among the more than 4,700 companies evaluated nationwide with sales ranging between $1 million and $325 million.

New York-based Value Line, a financial publisher, was in second place with a five-year ROE of 158.6 percent.

Educational Systems and Publications, a printing firm based in Bellevue, N.J., captured the No. 3 slot with a 75 percent ROE.

Franklin Resources, a mutual fund management company in San Mateo, Calif., dropped to fourth place from the top position last year and had a 63.9 percent ROE.

Among well known companies that qualified for the Best 200 were King World Productions (ranked 7th), Oshkosh B'Gosh (29th), Dunkin' Donuts (116th), Tootsie Roll Industries (137th) and Houghton Mifflin (181st.)

Thirty-nine of the Best 200 small companies are based in California, more than any other state. New York was second with 28, down from 34 in 1985. New Jersey and Texas shared third place, with each state home to 13 of the best small companies.

GM evaluating South African operations

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — General Motors Corp. is reassessing its position in South Africa and will make a detailed announcement about its plans this week, the company said in a statement Sunday.

The statement came after The Sunday Times newspaper reported that GM decided Friday to pull out of South Africa, but turn its facilities over to other buyers to make sure no jobs were lost.

The newspaper quoted unidentified "sources close to the company."

Robert White, managing director of GM's South African subsidiary, said that whatever the final decision, "The interests of motorists, our 200 dealers and their employees and our 3,000 employees in Port Elizabeth will not be prejudiced."

At the company headquarters in Detroit, spokesman George Schreck said he knew of no decision to pull out of South Africa. He said he probably would have been told had such a decision been made.

"As I have said many times, we are reviewing the South Africa operations," Schreck said. "I really can't speculate on what might be the outcome.

"The South African economy has been pretty much in a recession for three or four years so we have periodically reviewed the South Africa operations," he said.

AUTOMOTIVE REPORT

Cadillac's ultimate expression of sporty luxury

By Tom Cooper

Outstanding handling and performance, sophisticated applications of functional electronics, and contemporary body styling are features of Cadillac Motor Car's Eldorado, all-new for 1986. "Ever since the front-wheel drive Eldorado made its debut in 1967, it has represented Cadillac's ultimate expression of personal, sporty luxury," said Cadillac Motor Car Division general manager, John O. Grettenberger.

The Cadillac-exclusive transversely mounted 4.1 liter V-8 digitally fuel injected powerplant is standard in the 1986 Eldorado. A new four-speed automatic transmission with overdrive includes the Cadillac-exclusive microprocessor-controlled viscous converter clutch for smooth driveability.

The best of two technological worlds have been integrated within the 1986 Eldorado: noticeable solid structure due to body frame integral design and excellent road isolation due to the fully independent suspension. For the driver, this means responsive maneuverability, precise on-center steering feel, and smooth ride control. An available touring suspension package enhances these Eldorado characteristics for the true driving enthusiast.

Eldorado's many applications of state-of-the-art electronics further demonstrate Cadillac's 1986 emphasis on "driver function." A new, standard digital instrument cluster, integrated within Eldorado's new body computer system, displays more information than the 1985 version, including "auto dimmer" indicater for the available automatic high-beam headlight-controlling dimming sentinel.

Eldorado's new electronic climate control panel and driver information center compliment the standard digital instrumentation and provide the most sophisticated display of information ever offered in any Eldorado. The driver information center features displays of outside temperature, date, time, average fuel economy, driving range, fuel used, engine data and numerous vehicle status and warning messages as part of Eldorado's advanced on-board diagnostic system.

The 1986 Eldorado coupe and its special edition, the Eldorado Biarritz, feature completely exclusive body styling. The smooth, simple contours of its exterior provide a distinctively contemporary shape.

Eldorado's sporty character carries into its interior which features fully reclining front bucket seats. Standard equipment includes electrically adjusted outside mirrors, digital instrument cluster, electronic cruise control and twilight sentinel lighting system. The steering wheel, wrapped in color-keyed leather, tilts and telescopes for precise adjustment.

Eldorado is available in a wide range of colors including optional "Firemist" and "Pearlmist" colors. Advanced paint technology is used to achieve its characteristic high-gloss finish. Two coats of pigment-rich base color coats are followed by two coats of clear enamel for a deep luster.

Available "Firemist" colors produce a glimmering effect as light reflects off tiny metal particles suspended within the pigment. Optional "Pearlmist" finishes actually produce subtle color changes depending upon the intensity and angle of light striking the car's surface. Black Cherry Pearlmist may appear as solid black, solid violet, solid reddish violet or metallic magneta. Black Emerald pearlmist may appear as solid black, dark rich green or metallic emerald. Eldorado may be ordered in a choice of 12 standard colors, five optional "Firemist" colors or two optional "Pearlmist" finishes.

This feature appears each Monday as a reader service of the Midland Reporter-Telegram
