Jaworski Adopts Tough Stance About Watergate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Special Watergate Prosecutor Leon Jaworski said Saturday he will present any incriminating evidence about President Nixon to the grand jury without waiting for a final ruling on whether it is possible to indict an incumbent President.

Taking a much more aggressive public stance than his predecessor Archibald Cox—whom Nixon fired in October—Jaworski told reporters at his first formal news briefing: "If I came across something involving the President, I would feel an obligation to present it to the grand jury."

Jaworski was asked if he would permit an indictment to be handed down against the President and then let the courts decide whether there was legal grounds for doing so.

"Yes, it's conceivable," he said, adding that the same applied to the possibility of naming Nixon as an indicted co-conspirator.

"I'm under no personal restraints of any kind," he said. "I can arrive at my own judgment."

The White House declined to comment on Jaworski's statement. An aide said the White House already had explained in court briefs its position that the President cannot be indicted until he is impeached and convicted by the Senate.

Jaworski also said:

—Although the White House so far has turned over every tape and document it has found that Jaworski requested, "nothing was handed me on a silver platter ... they haven't volunteered anything."

—He will not give to the House Judiciary Committee's impeachment investigation White House material that he receives, and cautioned the Senate Watergate committee against release of any report that might jeopardize the prosecution.

—Although he did not offer a "deal" to John D. Ehrlichman, Nixon's former No. 2 aide, last Thursday, there was some preliminary plea bargaining with Ehrlichman's attorney.

—He has made no changes in the staff of 78, including 37 lawyers, he inherited from Cox, and he is sticking by his Dec. 31 statement that indictments may be forthcoming in January or February.

"Any report that I am being held hostage by the staff is absolute poppycock," Jaworski said. "At my age and place in life, it is somewhat foolish to suggest that I would even permit myself to be put in that position."

Jaworski, 68, of Houston, past president of the American College of Trial Lawyers and the American Bar Association, sat at a conference table for separate half-hour briefings with several groups of reporters. He talked calmly, occasionally glancing at notes.

In his news briefings, Cox refused to discuss in any way whether his investigation also included the President.

"Fortunately Mr. (Robert H.) Bork (former acting attorney general who hired Jaworski) spelled out very clearly our right to investigate the President and we're not holding back on anything and we don't intend to," Jaworski said.

Attorney General William B. Saxbe said Friday in his first news conference that he does not believe a President can be indicted, even for a felony. Saxbe also said he would let Jaworski decide whether he could pass evidence his office might develop to the House Judiciary Committee which is investigating grounds for impeachment.

Jaworski said his counsel, Philip A. Lacovara, was researching the question of whether a President can be indicted. He said he would present any evidence to the grand jury "in the meantime."

"This office has obtained from the White House a large number of documents, quite a number of tapes, some in reference to telephone conversations, some in reference to visits with the President," Jaworski said.

"All of these were the result of our serving notice on the White House that we were aware of this particular item and that we wanted it for the grand jury," Jaworski said.

"There was no such thing as 'Do you want this?' Do you want that? Nothing was handed me on a silver platter."

Kissinger Continues Trip To Middle East Nations

By United Press International
U.S. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, seeking disengagement of Egyptian and Israeli forces from the tense Suez Canal front, arrived in Israel Saturday evening after "extremely good" talks with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat.

As Kissinger sought to bring about an accord, U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim warned in New York that the situation at the canal was "potentially explosive" and called for "a substantial measure of disengagement."

Following Kissinger's meeting with Sadat, a highly placed Egyptian official told UPI, "I think I can see an opening in the disengagement situation. I cannot imagine Dr. Kissinger coming here empty-handed or that he would gamble on a losing proposition."

A high American official accompanying Kissinger said the secretary was seeking an agreement in principle that Egyptian and Israeli military negotiators at the Geneva conference could turn into a concrete accord.

Making his third trip to the Middle East since the October Arab-Israeli war, Kissinger conferred with Sadat at the upper Nile resort of Aswan for three hours Saturday after a 90-minute session Friday night.

"The talks were extremely good," Kissinger told newsmen, but he did not elaborate.

Tahsin Bashir, assistant press adviser to President Sadat, said, "The president explained the Egyptian and Arab stands clearly to the American Secretary of State."

Kissinger's meeting with Sadat, held in a cordial atmosphere, came after he briefly toured the Aswan High Dam spanning the Nile River and the relics of ancient Egypt preserved there.

On arriving at Israel's Ben Gurion International Airport, Kissinger told newsmen, "I look forward to full, frank, and I know, useful talks with my friend the foreign minister (Abba Eban) and all my other friends in the Israeli cabinet."

An Israeli government spokesman said Kissinger would conduct a working dinner Saturday night with Deputy Prime Minister Yigal Allon, Defense Minister Moshe Dayan, Eban and other Israeli leaders.

Mothers To March For MoD Monday

The Gray County Chapter of the March of Dimes is making final plans for its annual round off fund drives in the continuing battle against birth defects and other diseases.

The drives will kick off with the Mothers March on Monday from 6-8 p.m. Volunteer mothers will go door-to-door to seek contributions from city residents.

Even though it will not be dark until after 7 p.m., persons wishing to donate are asked to turn on their porch lights to indicate their desire to give.

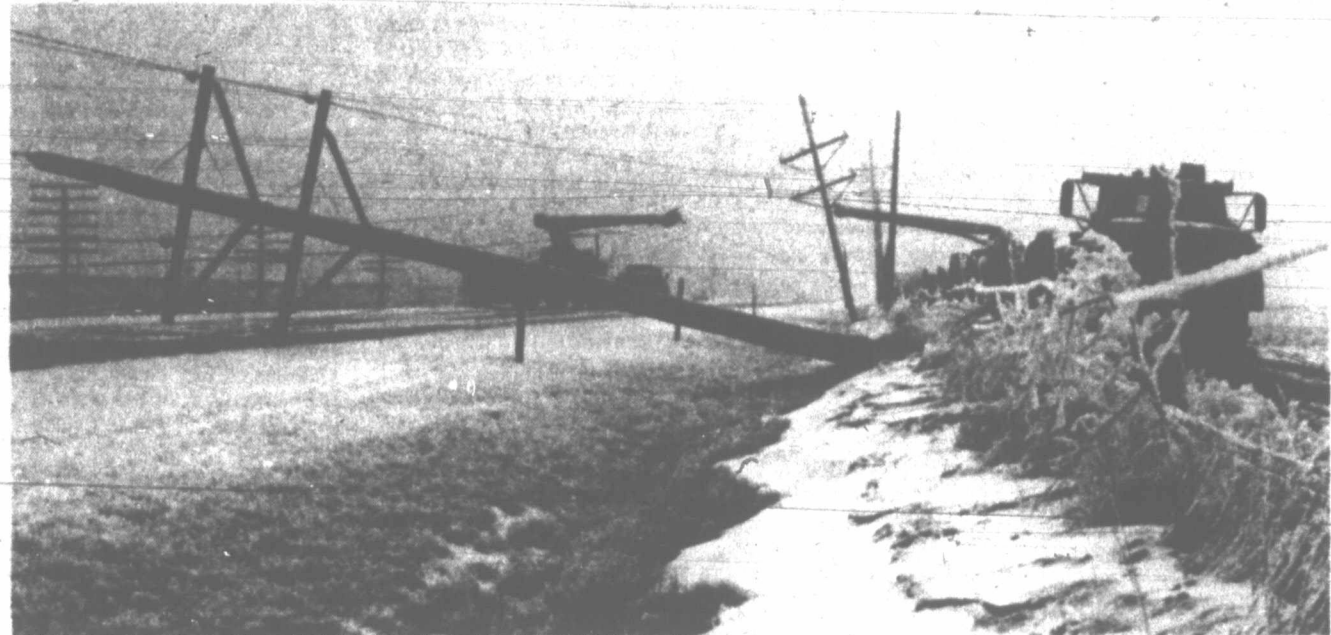

In the event of bad weather, the march will be postponed one week. The decision will be announced over local radio stations. Mrs. Rhona Saltzman, Mothers March chairman, said, and will be printed in the paper if the decision is made early in the day.

Weather forecasts Saturday called for clearing weather to occur later today.

Volunteer mothers will need to listen to the radio to discover if the march has been postponed.

In addition to the Mothers March, a bucket brigade at seven intersections throughout the city will be conducted Saturday, Jan. 13, to gain funds from drivers on that day.

The national headquarters has sent out a number of envelopes in the mail in an which has plagued the area for the past several days. SPS workmen had repaired most of the damage by Saturday evening but were still working into the night.

Winter Weather Causes Power Failures In Area

Despite weather reports predicting clearing conditions for the area, Pampa and other surrounding areas of the Panhandle continued Saturday to shiver in the wintry blasts of an arctic cold front which had lingered in the vicinity since Tuesday afternoon.

Temperatures climbed into the lower 20s Saturday afternoon in Pampa although the forecast called for a rise into the lower 30s.

Forecast for today, as for Thursday and Friday afternoons, is for the high to reach into the upper 40s and possibly into the low 50s under partly cloudy skies.

Low this morning was to be in the upper teens, as it has been for the past several days.

Icy fog, light snow and blowing southerly winds swept across the Pampa regions Saturday morning into late Saturday night, creating hazardous conditions for area drivers. The cold was to continue through this morning and then begin to warm this afternoon.

The icy conditions and winds contributed to several power failures in the area.

Power failures in Pampa and surrounding rural areas started around 2 p.m. yesterday as winds began whipping ice-laden power lines about, snapping lines, knocking down poles and burning out electrical conductors.

Nine poles were down on Highway 60 West near the Cabot Shops yesterday shortly before 2 o'clock. Five of them had been replaced by around 4:30, Southwestern Public Service Co. manager Melvin Kunkel reported. The others were repaired later in the day.

Those nine poles blown down affected about 50 customers on the western side of Pampa, Kunkel said. Dyer's Barbecue was one of those who lost power. That business closed early last evening.

Marvin Cooper of SPS said last night a power failure in the northern section of Pampa yesterday afternoon occurred around 4:30 when electrical conductors burned out in the south part of town. He said they were repaired in about 30 minutes.

Last night, Cooper said, "We have lines down in rural areas all around Pampa."

He said there were 12 or 15 poles down in the Pampa area at various times yesterday.

Cooper said there were crews from Amarillo and Borger working with Pampa crews to repair the damage done to SPS power lines. "But, they have problems in those cities also."

There were no reports late last night of telephone lines down, although cable television was affected in some areas.

Wheat Farmers Face Troubles From Dry Soil

What will result for wheat farmers in the area from the dry, extremely cold weather and ice covered ground which prevails over the entire Panhandle is a question which nobody has a ready answer for at the present time.

Several people questioned Saturday (who said they wished to remain anonymous) expressed fears that there may be quite a bit of wheat already dead as a result of the lack of soil moisture and the cold which has been in the area for the past several days.

"Nobody knows" was the answer given by everybody talked to yesterday about the condition of wheat.

One of the sources said a dryland farmer (like himself) told him yesterday morning he "would sell his wheat right now for $10 an acre."

Forster Whaley, county agricultural agent, has said the county has one of the worst wheat pastures that he has seen in the past decade.

Lack of soil moisture is a condition general over the whole Panhandle section (District One) of the state as it is divided by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service of Texas A&M University, District One covers most of the Panhandle.

Of 13 districts in the state, nine report extremely short to short to adequate soil moisture.

Only North Texas (from Palo Pinto County to the Louisiana-Arkansas border), East Texas and the Gulf Coast (Port Lavaca to the Louisiana border) report adequate to surplus levels of soil moisture.

Extremely dry soil is also reported in Eastern New Mexico, Eastern Oklahoma, Eastern Colorado, Kansas and Nebraska.

The storm of the past few days has not added much moisture to the soil.

County To Review Survey By PRPC

County commissioners have 13 items on the agenda for their semi-monthly meeting tomorrow at 10 a.m. in the Courthouse.

Among those items are an explanation of a water and sewer survey taken in Gray County by Panhandle Regional Planning Commission representative Robert Lord and a discussion of proposed county annex parking lot improvements with Gene Barber of Merriman & Barber Consulting Engineers, Inc.

Also, consideration of final payments of $12,538.01 to Pam-Tex Co., Inc. and of $513.95 to Merriman and Barber for revenue sharing funds for the new Precinct 1 steel building.

A fire contract with the City of Lefors and the selection of public members of the salary grievance committee (grand jury) will also be considered.

The new Texas Open Meetings Law amendments effective Jan. 1 are also to be studied by the commissioners.

The approval of an agreement and resolution that Gray County participate in the Law Enforcement Radio Communications - PRPC grant application is an item on the agenda.

The resolution would authorize County Judge Don Cain to execute the agreement and would also authorize the payment of the sum of $6,199.60 from the county general fund to PRPC under its contract with Motorola, Inc.

The figure represents 25.125 per cent of the total equipment and installation cost to Gray County of $24,675.39.

In routine business, the commissioners will consider the payment of bills, time deposits and transfers of funds, the welfare report and the county treasurer's report.

At 11:30 a.m., Dr. Donald Todd to West Texas State University will address the court on regional government.

The annual meeting of the commissioners with county hospital board has been scheduled at 5:30 p.m., Jan. 21, in the Highland General Hospital conference room.

Boy Scout Council Holds Annual Awards Banquet

The annual recognition banquet of the Adobe Walls Area Council, Boy Scouts of America, was held last night at the Coronado Inn. Various awards and presentations were made at the banquet attended by numerous area scouts and scouters, including one to U.S. Rep. Bob Price.

Master of ceremonies was Frank Phelan, Jr. of Clarendon, 1973 Council president. The opening ceremony was directed by A.C. Taylor, Scoutmaster of Troop 271 Canadian.

The Rev. Smiley Johnson, pastor of the First United Presbyterian Church in Canadian gave the invocation.

Special introductions were made by Phelan. They included Glen Fowler, president of Area IV, South Central Region, Boy Scouts of America, Albuquerque, N.M., and John Clardy, area director of Area IV.

The Buffalo Wallow District and the Adobe District were recognized for achieving all of their goals in 1973 and earning the Spencer Award for the second time. Receiving the awards were the district chairmen, Glen Lemon, Booker, and Paul Hussen, Borger.

Glen Patton, Explorer Post 143, Guymon, Okla., was presented a plaque for achieving first place in the South Central Region, Readers Digest - BSA national public speaking contest. He gave his award winning speech at the banquet. Patton will compete with five other Explorers next month in Washington D.C. for the national title.

After his speech, the 1974 Council officers were installed by Glen Fowler. Those officers include Gene Steel, Pampa, president; Warren Fatheree, Pampa vice president and council commissioner; Frank Phelan, Clarendon; Glen Lemon, Booker, and A.M.L. Kube, Borger, vice presidents; W.J. Chabless, Pampa, Council treasurer; and Frank Culberson, Pampa, National Council representative and president of the Advisory Council.

Culberson presented five Silver Beaver Awards to the following men: Robert Dale "Bob" Price, Pampa, Congressman and Advisory Council member; A.M.L. Kube, Borger; Phillips Petroleum Co.,

exploration manager and Council vice president; P.S. "Jack" Stallings, assistant plant manager, Phil - Tex Chemical Plant, Phillips Petroleum Co. and Council training chairman; Drew Ellis, president of the First National Bank in Perryton and member of the Advisory Council; and Jesse James Nelson, Guymon, principal of Academy Elementary School and Scoutmaster.

The Silver Beaver Award is the highest honor that can be bestowed on an individual by a local Scout council. The award represents service to youth, community, and church as well as service to the Boy Scouts of America. There have been less than 100 Silver Beavers awarded in this council since its inception in 1920.

Speaker for the evening was Alec Chesser, vice president of Houston Natural Gas Co., Houston, and member of the South Central Region executive board. He was introduced by Steel.

The meeting was closed by a ceremony of Troop 189, Guymon, with Jess Nelson as Scoutmaster.

POSTER GIRL — Debbie Shay, 9-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Shay, 1156 Neel Rd., has been chosen as Gray County March of Dimes poster girl in preparation for the annual fund drives, beginning with the Mothers March from 6-8 p.m. Monday. Standing with her are Emmett Saltzman, left, Gray County drive chairman, and Philip Kimbley, city drive chairman.

POLICE FIGURES SHOW Fewer People Injured In 1973 City Accidents

According to a report released by the Pampa Police Department, there were 741 accidents investigated by the department during 1973.

Ninety-one of the accidents involved injuries, with 117 people hurt, none fatally.

In 1972, 725 accidents were investigated, 141 people were injured and one person was killed.

In collisions last year, 354 drivers in the 15-19 age group were involved in accidents, nearly 28 percent of the total number of drivers (1200).

In the next most accident-prone group (20-24) only 145 drivers were involved in accidents, Police Chief Jim Conner said.

Failure to yield right of way was the largest single contributor to accidents in 1973, the report said. 157 people were ticketed for that offense; 106 tickets were written for improper turns.

Ninety-six others were cited for speeding, while 212 were given tickets for "other improper driving."

Of the total number of accidents investigated last year, 650 involved property damage — conservatively estimated at about $340,000 by officers.

Chief Conner urged drivers in Pampa to maintain an awareness of traffic laws and to obey them.

Conner said, "Not only do these accidents result in property damage, but when you consider hospital bills and time off the job for injuries, the accidents are very expensive."

Bad Weather Delays Some WT Registration

CANYON — As of 3 p.m. Saturday, 5,314 have signed up for courses on West Texas State University's Canyon campus.

1,568 made the rounds of paper work on Saturday, with 161 registering for classes in Amarillo's WTSU center Thursday night.

Those interested in any of the 25 courses to be offered at night in James Bonham High School at Amarillo can still register on the first night of those classes with no penalty.

A more accurate count of students will not be available until next week.

Registration for division of continuing education classes had to be rescheduled in Pampa, Borger, Dumas, Clarendon and Plainview because of inclement weather.

The slippery roads and poor visibility the icy weather brought probably had a major influence on the Canyon campus registration. For that reason Dr. Donald Cates, WT registrar, announced Saturday that on-campus registration will continue through next Friday, Jan. 18, without late charge.

Dr. Cates emphasized that final registration figures would not be available until Jan. 29, the 12th class day, at which time the state gets final figures for appropriations purposes.

MRS. RENA B. ANDERSON
...seeks second term

Mrs. Anderson Seeks Post Of Superintendent

Rena Belle Anderson has announced her candidacy for re-election to a second term as superintendent of Gray County schools.

Mrs. Anderson has served in the past three years, since she was appointed to fill an unexpired term and then elected by Gray County citizens to improve the quality of instruction and curriculum materials for all county schools including the Pampa Independent School District.

She has attended many conferences, workshops, conventions and planning sessions to update and improve the Gray County schools accounting procedures to meet new state requirements and has coordinated executive efforts of the various boards of trustees of county schools.

Mrs. Anderson has spent fifteen years serving schools in Gray County, has been a resident of Pampa for over forty years and is a member of the First Baptist Church, Altrusa International and the Pampa Chamber of Commerce.

"My long association and acquaintance with the county schools systems and executives have prepared me to discharge the duties of this office. I pledge to work for the best interest of all the school children of Gray County schools and their parents," said Mrs. Anderson in announcing for re-election.

Kiwanians Hear Mid-East Talk

Roy Kornegay, former education minister at First Baptist Church and now holding that post at Amarillo's First Baptist Church, addressed Pampa Kiwanians at their Friday luncheon on his recent visit to Israel and Egypt.

"Everywhere you look in Egypt," Kornegay said, "there are Russians and Russian machinery. Cairo is filled with armed guards at all bridges."

"There is a different atmosphere in Israel, a feeling of optimism and confidence," he said. The Arabs want Sinai back desperately, but Israel will defend it and retain it.

Kornegay presented Biblical backgrounds of various religious sites he visited and tied Biblical prophecy into today's current events.

Safety Belts Shunned

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A survey returned by nearly 2,500 drivers recently indicated 63 per cent of them opposed legislation that would require them to wear both lap and shoulder belts.

The survey by the California Automobile Association also showed 45 per cent favoring a bill that would require drivers to use lap belts only. Thirty-nine per cent were opposed.

Genesis House Board Meets

The board of directors of Genesis House met last week to discuss plans for the house for girls.

Various committees reported on several immediate needs for the house. Plans for action were formulated by the board, according to Mrs. Sherry D. Hager, president.

Attending besides the president were Gene Steel, vice president; Mrs. Don Lane, secretary; Don Lusher, treasurer; Roy Sparkman, Mrs. Carl Brugger and Leslie Hart.

FOR HOUSTON YOUTH Arguments Near In Murder Trial

HOUSTON (UPI) — Legal arguments begin in court Monday for the trial of Elmer Wayne Henley, one of two teen-aged youths charged in the mass murder of 27 boys last year.

Judge William Hatten has set a Friday deadline for pretrial motions, but neither the defense nor prosecution expect delaying tactics.

Henley, 17, is charged with six of 27 murders in the sex and sadism deaths of teen-aged boys in the Houston area over a three-year period. Bodies of the murder victims were unearthed at three Texas locations during mid-August, 1973.

Vance Ready To Go
"I can't anticipate how long our case would take to try," said District Attorney Carol S. Vance. "It would depend if insanity is an issue."

"We're ready to go," said

Vance, who will personally prosecute the case.

The prosecution cannot seek the death penalty under the state's penal code and the insanity issue is expected to be the bulwark of the defense's case.

"Insanity will definitely be a defense," said Charles Meider, the defense attorney who has followed Henley's case from the opening days. He will be assisted by two other attorneys.

"I've never asked for a continuance," he said. "I like to think I have served my clients well."

Assistant District Attorney Donald Lambright has worked nearly fulltime on the state's case for five months and an investigator has worked another four months. The amount of time and manpower devoted to the case is unprecedented in the prosecutor's office.

FFA Stock Show Group To Finish Contest Plans

The Frank M. Carier Scholarship award will be presented to the outstanding FFA student from Area I. The $500 scholarship to be used in the Agriculture School at Texas Tech has been presented here for many years. The selection is made by a special committee which evaluates the applications and by interviewing the students.

Cartoonist To Talk For K&F Meeting

V. Neil Wyrick, cartoonist-author-lecturer, will be the guest of the Knife and Fork club when its members meet Tuesday at the Coronado Inn at 7:30 p.m.

Wyrick is a young Miami man who has been recognized for his creative talents in Time Magazine and by the Miami Junior Chamber of Commerce when they awarded him their Outstanding Citizen Award. He has written several books (illustrated others) and numerous magazine articles. His column appears in several newspapers.

His artistic ability is reflected by the fact that he has produced, written, and directed over a dozen Orange Bowl extravaganzas and several of his more serious works are hanging in Miami galleries.

Wyrick is perhaps best known though for his cartooning ability, which helped him get two degrees in college and which has made him widely known.

"The idea," he explains about cartooning, "is to determine a person's outstanding characteristics, then cartoon or caricature him in that manner. It's all in fun, of course, although occasionally it has some personal, practical value."

Of particular interest in his knack for changing dissociated lines and scribbles into amusing cartoons, many times with an amazing resemblance to members of the audience.

Wyrick also has extensive radio and TV experience as a moderator, newscaster, and in professional spots. He currently has two TV programs in Miami and his combination of cartooning, counseling and observing has received wide acceptance by the viewing public.

Officers Plan Attendance At Two Seminars

Two local police officers will attend seminars to study various aspects of law enforcement this week, Police Chief Jim Conner has announced.

Lt. Gene Aufleger will attend a 40-hour seminar at Amarillo College titled "Criminology from the Police Perspective."

The seminar is sponsored by the Amarillo office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Panhandle Regional Law Enforcement Academy.

It will be attended tomorrow through Friday by approximately 15-20 area law enforcement officers and will end with an examination Friday, Conner said.

Officer Randol Nichols left for Austin today to attend a 40-hour school designed to teach breathalyzer use and analysis.

The school will be conducted at the Homer Garrison, Jr. Memorial Law Enforcement Academy.

Upon completion of the school, Officer Nichols will be qualified to administer the breathalyzer test to DWI suspects.

Previously the Pampa Police Department has had to depend on Highway Patrol officers to administer the test and sometimes one was not available, Conner said.

Several local officers have registered for classes at Frank Phillips Junior College in Borger for the spring semester, Conner also said.

Kiwanis Club To Distribute Book On Drugs

The Downtown Kiwanis Club will distribute a comic book message to fifth and sixth graders in Pampa public and parochial schools this week as part of the civic group's program to aid the campaign against drug abuse.

Club president James McCoy said 1,300 of the comic books entitled "What If They Call Me 'Chicken'?" will be distributed locally in the public elementary schools and at St. Vincent's Catholic School.

The message to the fifth and sixth grade boys and girls is given with the hope it will keep them from taking or using any drug which has not been prescribed by a physician or given to them by a parent for treatment of an illness.

McCoy said the story in the comic book also vividly points up the danger of experimenting with drugs and urges youngsters never to experiment with any drug given or sold to them by anyone other than their doctor or their parents.

COUNTRY MUSIC

By PETER McCABE

A new Tom T. Hall album has the same effect as the first cold snap of winter. It catches you unawares, jolts you wide awake, brings you to your senses. His latest effort, entitled "For The People In The Last Hard Town," is no exception.

Take Alice, for example — an alcoholic who stumbles around the kitchen burning food and missing the ash tray. She's the leading lady in his song "Pay No Attention To Alice," and once you've met her she leaves an indelible impression.

But Tom T. Hall always has had a way of painting detailed portraits or entire landscapes with just a few simple strokes of the brush, and in any gallery of country songs, his are always the ones everybody recognizes.

Tom T. Hall's songs do without romantic endings and earth-shaking morals. They are mostly self-contained tales, raw slices, of middle-American life set in the all-familiar bars, railroad depots, pool halls and back porches.

Their central characters go by such names as Eddie and Romana, Clayton Delaney, Windy City Anne, and now Alice. Hall has a way of finding poetry in ordinary, hairy-legged mortals.

His admirers range from rural conservatives to left-wing college students, but he sees himself as spokesman for neither, simply as a storyteller. He refuses to limit himself to one point of view. Even on subjects as controversial as the Vietnam war, he has written songs that could reasonably be construed as representing divergent political opinions.

Hall says his songs reflect his desire to avoid giving people labels, and he doesn't appreciate it when people label him.

"I try to see what other people are thinking and put their opinions into songs," he says. "At the same time I don't try to write that objectively."

Your Baby is What You Eat, Says March of Dimes Doctor

by Arthur J. Salisbury, M.D.
Director of Medical Services
The National Foundation—
March of Dimes

We are a nation of snackers. We often skip meals, but nibble constantly during coffee breaks, after school, with cocktails, and before bed. We are always eating, but too many of us aren't eating well.

When a woman carries these sloppy eating habits over into pregnancy, she is risking her own health and that of her unborn baby.

At The National Foundation, we have a special interest in nutrition because of its influence on pregnancy. Underweight or overweight mothers have a much higher incidence of premature and low-birth-weight babies than do healthy mothers.

The child grows more rapidly during these nine months than at any other time in his life, and he is totally dependent upon his mother to supply all his nutritional needs.

Our concern is that these babies, who weigh 5½ pounds or less at birth, tend to have many problems with normal physical and mental growth. Most of the babies who die in the first year of life are those who are premature or of low weight at birth.

Research indicates that the mother's diet deficiencies during pregnancy may cause malnutrition in the unborn baby. This could lead to abnormal development of the child's brain and to other birth defects.

Eating right is important for all of us all of the time. But an expectant mother is eating for two. The emphasis, however, must be on what she

One of the best cuts on his new record is "Subdivision Blues" (which, incidentally, features some very fine harmonica work by Charlie McCoy). The song is classic Hall, offering such rich, mid-America detail as the Welcome Wagon bringing the subdivision owner sleeping pills and booze, and explaining the home owner's feelings about his choice of location:

"I bought my house because it was located near a school."

Now a bus comes by and takes the kids to school. "It's just one more instance where Hall takes the American pulse, and writes about American feelings with red-dirt reality."

There is nothing special about Hall's voice.

"I'm just an ordinary picker who sings through his nose," he says.

But he's a little less modest about his writing. He points to Hemingway's simplicity of style as the greatest influence on his own economical writing.

It was as a writer, of course, that he first made his name — with "Harper Valley P.T.A.," a simple story about hypocrisy in a small town, which earned him $100,000 and launched Jeanie C. Riley's career. Now he says he thinks of the song as a calling card for people who know little about country music.

This time last year Tom T. was topping charts with an excellent song called "Old Dogs, Children and Watermelon Wine." This year he seems headed for similar success with his hit song, "I Love."

He is admired by all in the country music community for his skill as a poet, as well as by his larger audience, the public. Last year he was nominated for awards in every possible category — the Country Music Association lists. He didn't win one. Does that bother him?

"Why should it?" says his wife, Dixie, herself a writer. "A good songwriter has to remain humble."

PROPER WEIGHT GAIN in pregnancy can be an important influence in the health of mother and baby. The March of Dimes encourages regular prenatal care visits to doctors or clinics, where information about nutrition is available.

eats, as well as how much. She must be doubly sure that she is getting sufficient proteins, minerals, and vitamins.

Best Choices

These are abundant in the basic food groups: milk, meat and fish, fruits and vegetables, breads and cereals.

Milk advances the baby's growth because it helps build muscle and bones.

Meat and fish are sources of protein, iron, and B vitamins for the baby and supply energy for the mother. This group includes chicken, turkey, tuna, salmon, liver, beef, and pork.

the yellow vegetables such as carrots and squash, are necessary for normal development of the baby.

Enriched or whole grain breads and cereals furnish iron, B vitamins, protein and energy.

Doctors like to keep a close watch on weight gain and diet because they are important aspects of prenatal care. They recommend an increase of between 24 and 30 pounds in a normal pregnancy. However, a woman's general health, age, and weight are always taken into account. But whatever amount is right for her, those pounds are supposed to come from eating a balanced diet of nutritious foods — not just from eating.

UT OFFERS A COURSE

How About Studying Vampires?

AUSTIN (Sp.) — Vampires — those bloodthirsty creatures of the night and the late, late show — have come under academic scrutiny at The University of Texas.

Vampires and an assortment of evil spirits are the subjects of a course to be offered in the spring called The Vampire in Eastern Europe.

The course will be taught by an "authority" on the subject, Dr. Jan L. Perkowski, associate professor of Slavic languages.

Dr. Perkowski's expertise in the area originated in two small Canadian communities where he collected data for a folklore study. He found that the people there — all "full-fledged" members of the Canadian social and cultural context — have a sincere belief that vampires indeed exist among them.

The accounts of persons victimized by vampires and the precautionary measures against them are found in Dr. Perkowski's monograph "Vampires, Dwarves and Witches Among the Ontario Kashubs."

Although some may say the accounts are nothing more than idle superstition, Dr. Perkowski says the stories are still a dynamic part of that culture.

In his course this spring, Dr. Perkowski will use an anthropological base to study Eastern European cultures and their beliefs about vampires and other demons. A psychological perspective will examine the thoughts and motivations behind those beliefs.

And what would a course on vampires be without a look at the infamous "Dracula," created by the author Bram Stoker?

Dr. Perkowski will look into that literary legend. For example, back in the 15th Century there was an infamous Wallachian prince who served as the basis for Stoker's Count Dracula. More popularly known as Vlad the Impaler, the prince is said to have impaled 30,000 of his subjects in one day.

The course has been taught for the past semester for the past semester on a trial basis during evening classes, and has met with success, Dr. Perkowski says.

The class had a "guest lecturer" on Halloween night. Dressed in the dark flowing cape which is so fashionable among vampires of the English literary tradition, Assistant

Prof. Paul Schmidt, an actor friend of Dr. Perkowski, read, in the most sinister of voices, passages from Stoker's "Dracula."

Although Dr. Perkowski — who is known as "The Vampire Man" among his colleagues and students — sometimes takes a humorous approach to the vampire, he believes the subject can be a focal point for serious study of Slavic folklore, utilizing a multidisciplinary approach.

"We might even learn something about our own subconscious minds," notes Dr. Perkowski.

The course will be taught again in the summer, this time in Austria, where the University plans to hold its first summer abroad. Dr. Perkowski says he hopes to take his students on a field trip to an ancient castle outside of Vienna that reportedly has been the scene of "vampire-like incidents" during the 20th Century.

When news of Dr. Perkowski's course broke on the UT Austin campus, more than 600 students pre-registered for the spring class. But, because of space limitations, only half that number will be able to delve into the mysterious world of vampires.

EVEN WITH NOISE

People Near Freeways Tend To Enjoy Them

PROVO, Utah (UPI) — Freeways make good neighbors, according to a Brigham Young University researcher.

Evan T. Peterson, a sociology professor, says a study he did for the Arizona Highway Department found about two-thirds of those living within six blocks of a freeway liked where they lived. But people living farther away disliked the express roads.

"It appears many people who live within urban centers have fewer direct advantages from the freeways, therefore they are not as favorable to them," Peterson concluded.

He was surprised to find that the satisfied included a good share of those living close enough to freeways to hear the noise and clatter of high-speed travel.

"More than half of them said they liked it where they lived," Peterson said.

"The people who live next to elevated fill freeways said they had the most dissatisfaction, but their records show they have been remarkably stable in where they live."

He said only 10 per cent of residents questioned in the survey were completely negative about freeways.

The Lighter Side

By DICK WEST

WASHINGTON (UPI) — It wasn't until the return of Daylight Saving Time this week that many Americans became aware of "Catch 22" in changing the clock to conserve energy.

They discovered that when you gain an extra hour of daylight in the afternoon, you lose an extra hour of daylight in the morning.

A local bus driver summed it up nicely. "I don't see any difference in having lights on in the morning or at night," he said.

Dairy farmers and parents of children who had to walk to school in the dark were particularly critical of the time switch.

If you are among the inconvenienced, please have patience. All new government programs have a few bugs in them at first.

They're Working on It

Even now, you may be sure, some of the best brains in the country are working on the problem. I am confident that they will soon have it licked.

One of the time experts the government might do well to consult is Sam Crepuscule, a professional night watcher.

Note that I have identified Crepuscule as a night watcher, not a night watchman. The latter is merely a watchman who works the night shift.

Years of nocturnal watching have made him perhaps the world's foremost authority on nighttime.

Crepuscule believes the problems that have arisen with the midwinter adoption of Daylight Saving Time came about in part because the government relied on the advice of daytime experts in setting up the new arrangement.

The Solution

The solution, he told me, may lie in a dual time system. "We already have divided the day into two time zones—a.m. and p.m.," he said. "But there is no good reason why they have to be on the same schedule."

"The p.m. zone could be an hour ahead of the a.m. zone, as the Eastern time zone is an hour ahead of Central time."

In other words, instead of observing Daylight Saving Time the clock around, we would have Morning Standard Time and Evening Daylight Time.

"The effect would be to delay the twilight's last gleaming by an hour while holding the dawn's early light in the same time slot."

I said, "That should make everybody happy. But how would it work?"

"By using two clocks," Crepuscule explained. "The p.m. clock would have 11 hours and the a.m. clock 13."

I said, "Wouldn't wearing two watches be rather cumbersome?"

"Maybe so," he replied, "but it sure beats milking by candlelight."

The pronghorn antelope has telescopic vision. Its large, bulging eyes, capable of taking a wide-angle view, enable the antelope to sight predators at great distances.

MOTHER EARTH NEWS

Start Planning Now for a Strawberry Summer!

By JOHN SHUTTLEWORTH
Enough headlines about political corruption, rising prices, fuel shortages and icy winter winds! The mailman has already delivered the first seed catalogue of the year and it's time to begin dreaming about next year's garden.

Or — better yet! It's time to start laying the groundwork for the biggest dream of all.

Let's see now... a little place in the country... just a few acres... where you can grow a really satisfying crop that takes only a few weeks of your time each year... but pays you a better-than-average return on your investment.

Impossible? Not at all! Whether you know it or not, my friend, you've got strawberries on your mind.

Two thousand dollars per acre with only average production and double that amount for exceptional crops... that's what strawberries have done for hundreds of growers. Including John Zoeller of New Riegel, Ohio.

Three years ago, John found that his 40-hour-a-week job left him with plenty of free time and, while looking for a part-time enterprise to keep himself busy, Zoeller turned up some glowing reports about the strawberry business.

"It all sounded so good to be true," he says, "but, after inspecting the books kept by an established commercial grower, I knew it was true!"

Once sure he was onto something good, John Zoeller plunged into his new undertaking on a rather expansive scale: he began making plans to set out two and a half acres of the luscious red berries. That's a lot, by the way. If you're getting into this agricultural enterprise for the first time, and you might well want to try a quarter or half acre of the crop before attempting anything so grand.

Newcomers to the strawberry business will find the Rayner Brothers' Berry Book (available free from Rayner Brothers, Inc., Salisbury, Maryland 21081) an invaluable guide to the selection of "just the right" variety of fruit to raise.

The manual rates various types of berries for growth, vigor, yield, size, firmness, flavor, freezing quality, suitability for cold climates, resistance to disease and other characteristics.

Zoeller figured that Surecrop was the best possible strawberry he could raise in his part of the country and he was tempted to order nothing else.

A neighboring berry producer with several years' experience under his belt was so sold on a variety called Midway, however, that John finally ended up splitting his initial planting (10,000 sets!) between the two.

Every strawberry "expert" has his own idea about the "proper" way to space the plants across a garden or field. John decided to place his sets 22 inches apart in rows that were laid out 42 inches from center to center. Using these measurements, he could plant 7,300 strawberry sets per acre which, of course, is why he ordered a total of 10,000 sets for his two-and-a-half-acre patch.

Your new strawberry bed stands its best chance of getting off to a good beginning if you buy dormant stock — which suffers the least shock when being transplanted — from a reputable nursery. Just remember that strawberry sets must be placed so the crown of each plant is exactly flush — no higher and no lower — with the surface of the soil. (This is not as difficult as it sounds.)

Okay. That's about it for the first year. Other than the occasional drought or flood (both of which his Zoeller's planting the first year), there's not much that can happen to your strawberry patch next summer. You'll want to weed it, of course, and spend a few hours pinching back the bloom stems that develop (to encourage bigger and better berries the following year).

Just 12 months after John Zoeller set his plants in the ground, he was selling thousands of quarts of luscious berries at 55 cents a quart. Additional thousands of quarts of the fruit were sold for 35 cents each to the hundreds of folks (mostly housewives) who came right out to the field to "pick your own."

At the end of the first harvest season, John tilled under the east edge of every long north-south row of berry plants. All the remaining runners were then trained toward the west to form a matted strip of new, strong plants. Zoeller renews half his bed in this way each year and — if his luck continues — he may well make his initial investment in sets a final one.

Can you duplicate John's success? Yep. If you have anything approaching a green thumb, there's no reason why you can't.

Check around your community for one or more small tracts that are nothing but a weed problem to their owners. You should be able to find at least one landlord who'll give you, free (or very low-cost) use of a lot in return for relieving him of its maintenance. The rest is up to you.

The market for strawberries appears to be insatiable and you should have little trouble selling all you raise. And — at an average of 4,000 to 6,000 quarts per acre and 35 cents per quart — that can add up to a nice return for no more than one good month's work a year.

For more complete information about John Zoeller's strawberry-raising success, send 10 cents and a stamped, self-addressed long envelope to The Mother Earth News, in care of Register and Tribune Syndicate, Des Moines, Iowa 50304. Ask for Reprint No. 106, "Strawberries!"

South African Has Sextuplets

CAPE TOWN (UPI) — A 25-year-old woman gave birth to South Africa's first sextuplets Friday. A hospital spokesman reported the three boys and three girls in good condition.

The babies, born almost a month prematurely to Mrs. Susan Rosenkowitz, had a combined weight of less than 25 pounds, the spokesman said. Doctors delivered the babies by Caesarian section in less than ten minutes.

Because of the premature birth, the major risk was that the babies' lungs would be under-developed and incapable of independent operation, a spokesman at the Morbury Maternity Hospital said.

An oxygen tube was inserted in the windpipe of each child and the lungs inflated. After this initial boost, the babies in each case cried lustily and continued to breathe on their own, the spokesman said.

Old Veteran Gets 'Tax-Free' Check

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — Doris Willis, a veteran of 66 years in the shoe shining business, is $25,000 richer today and that's "all right" with him.

Willis, 67, the lone survivor of a group of black infantrymen unjustly given dishonorable discharges by the Army 66 years ago, received the tax-free check Thursday. He said he deserved more but the check was "all right."

Willis and 166 other black soldiers were dishonorably discharged after being blamed for a shooting incident in Brownsville, Tex., in which the buildings were shot up and one man killed. Early last year, the discharges were changed to honorable by the secretary of the Army.

Maj. Gen. Dewitt C. Smith Jr. and Lt. Col. William Baker presented the check, which the Internal Revenue Service said would be excluded from the ex-soldier's income tax.

This is an occasion that happens perhaps once in a half-century," Smith said. "The debt is unpayable, but we all just wish we could pay it."

"We are honored by the quality of life which you have led over the long years and fundamentally, we are here to pay tribute to a man whose full life has been marked by hard work, human decency and honor."

Willis, a husky, white-haired man who walks with a cane, said: "To everybody who acted in my behalf in bringing this to a close, I appreciate it and thank them dearly."

"But, I don't think they went far enough. I'm very grateful (for the check). It's a great birthday present, but it comes too many years too late."

"I'd hoped for $70,000, figuring $1,000 for each of the 66 years I waited, plus $4,000 for medical costs I've had over the years."

"But I guess this all right."

The Brownsville incident, brought before the public in a book by John Weaver, "The Brownsville Raid," occurred in 1906 when 20 horsemen rode through the city's streets shooting up buildings and killing one man. Whites, who had protested the transfer of Willis' black unit to the city, put the blame on the black infantrymen.

New Orleans is five feet below sea level, making it the lowest point in Louisiana.

WORRY CLINIC

By George W. Crane, Ph.D., M.D.

Zeke should be grateful that he suffers from stage fright. But he should learn how to avoid advertising his tremors to the audience. For the first 3 minutes, clasp your hands or the edge of the lectern. And hold your muscle or notes in both hands; then keep pulling gently.

CASE 2-524: Zeke D., aged 23, occupies a village pulpit on weekends while he is enrolled at the Seminary.

"Dr. Crane," he asked, "how can I get over my stage fright?" "For my hands tremble and my heart is pounding as if I were running the 100-yard dash."

"Indeed, I won my letter in track and actually my heart didn't beat as fast then as it does when I now stand in the pulpit."

"I just wish I were as cool and composed as you are when you lecture!"

STAGE FRIGHT IS GOOD

Actually, stage fright is a blessing!

And neither Dr. Peale, Billy Graham, Bob Hope or any other professional performer is perfectly cool and without some trembling of his hands as he starts his performance!

After the first 3 minutes, he usually calms down greatly. But the professional, though not as stage frighty as the novice, still is nervous and keyed up at the beginning.

His heart is pounding and his breathing is too rapid, which is why even the professional starts out in jerky, short phrases, such as:

"Ladies and gentlemen - It is, indeed, a great honor - to be here - this evening."

The reason he doesn't employ smooth flowing, full sentences at the outset, is merely the fact he is breathing so fast that he doesn't have enough air available for a complete sentence.

God apparently equipped us (and lower animals) to be alerted and stage frighty when in a new situation.

For then our blood pressure rises so more blood flows through the brain, thereby letting us think faster or react more quickly to danger. Ideas then flow rapidly so we aren't as likely to be searching for words!

Last Week In Wall Street

By BOB HILL

Members, New York Stock Exchange

Margin Accounts
Last week the Federal Reserve Board announced a reduction in margin requirements from 65 percent to 50 percent and the stock market shot ahead in heavy trading on the news. The Fed sets margin requirements because these are credit transactions involving the lending of money by brokerage firms to customers.

Stocks purchased on margin are purchased with the investor paying part of the total purchase price and borrowing the balance from his brokerage firm. The amount of money the investor puts up is the "margin" and this is what was just lowered from 65 percent to 50 percent. The investor now has to put up only half the purchase price of a stock instead of 65 percent.

But, before you pick up the telephone to call your broker with an order, let me point out that the regulation covering margin transactions states that the margin shall be not less than the greater of $2,000 or 50 percent. This excludes the very small investors because the minimum amount of cash required in a margin transaction is $2,000.

If you wanted to purchase 100 shares of a $30 stock, under the 50 percent rule you would have to put up only $1,500 of the $3,000 purchase price. BUT that phrase, the greater of $2,000 or 50 percent, comes into play. So, your margin would be $2,000, not $1,500.

In order to get the maximum leverage out of a margin account, the investor would have to purchase $4,000 or more of stock on margin. This way he gets full usage of the 50 percent.

Brokerage firms like margin accounts. In fact, some firms aggressively seek margin account business, paying their salesmen a bonus for opening margin accounts. Here's why. The investor is paying interest on the money he borrows from the brokerage firm when he buys stock on margin.

The interest rate is usually 1 percent to 2 percent above the lowest bank rate available. Secondly, margin accounts tend to be more active. This means more buying and selling by the investor, more commission income for the brokerage firm and the salesman. Thirdly, it tends to "lock-in" business.

Stocks purchased in a margin account must be held by the brokerage firm in the name of the brokerage firm, but for the account of the customer. The customer cannot take possession of his margined stock until after paying off any money he owes the brokerage firm. Consequently, few margin accounts are transferred, although they can be shifted from one brokerage firm to another upon written request of the customer.

There are two basic ways to use a margin account. The first is by full usage of the 50 percent margin requirement (or whatever the percentage is at the time - it has been as low as 35 percent). In this way, if an investor purchased 200 shares of a $20 stock ($4,000 market value), it would require $2,000 margin.

If the stock goes up $5 per share, the investor could take a profit of $1,000 (before commissions and interest on the margin account) or a return of 50 percent on his equity. Not bad. On the other hand, if the stock goes down $5 per share, he could lose 50 percent of his equity of $2,000. Not so good. This is why stop loss orders are vital in margin accounts.

The other way to use a margin account is to use it to pay for the last $500 or $1,000 on a purchase of stock. For instance, if our investor in the first example wants to buy 200 shares of a $20 stock and has $3,000 cash available but doesn't want to tap his savings account or just doesn't have immediate access to other funds at the moment, he can margin the $1,000 balance of the purchase price.

In other words, use the margin account as a convenience, for a relatively small amount of money and not for maximum leverage. I prefer this approach. The one thing the investor should always be able to do, is live with a mistake if he chooses to do so, until the price of the stock gets back up to the purchase price or goes higher. You may not be able to do that if you are fully margined.

'Bananas' Fights DST For Kids

By LIDIA WASOWICZ
SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — A man with several hundred children is gathering signatures on a petition against Daylight Saving Time because he is "bananas about kids."

Les Johnson, or "Bananas the Clown" as he is affectionately known to his many young admirers, began his battle against the time change Thursday in front of a main street department store, armed with petitions, pens and notes on the hazards of DST to children.

He plans to hold his ground until Sunday, at which time he hopes to have gathered 1,000 signatures. He will then present the petitions to Utah Gov. Calvin Rampton, state legislators and maybe President Nixon, "although I think he'll be uncaring."

Democrat Rampton and Attorney General Vernon B. Romney, the state's top Republican official, both declared their opposition to Daylight Saving Time in Utah. Romney said it was an "ill-advised and dangerous" law and called for its repeal. Rampton asked the attorney general for an opinion on what action the legislature could take to counteract its effects.

With 140 signatures filling the first page and a half of his petition, cold air nipping at his uncovered hands and face, and half an hour left on his Thursday stance, Johnson enthusiastically pledged to fight to the end.

"I've got to see this thing through. I'm a professional clown, but that's not the reason for doing this. I'm doing this because I'm bananas about kids," said Johnson, 29, who has spent six years as a volunteer in a children's hospital and who works as a Big Brother coordinator for the Utah State Division of Family Services.

"I'm not married, but I have hundreds of small friends who write to me and call me," he added. Johnson cited the dark early morning hours during which children go to school as one of the dangers to youngsters created by Daylight Saving Time.

"Walking the streets during the dark predawn hours causes a hazardous potential of auto-pedestrian collisions. Already reports are coming in of children being struck by vehicles while on the way to school," he said.

"The potential also arises of being victim of child molesters who operate during the darkness hours most effectively," he said.

Local Woman Leads Forum Club Discussion

The Twentieth Century Forum Study Club met recently in the home of Mrs. Homer D. Johnson, with Mrs. Larry Cross, president, presiding. Mrs. David Holt read the Club Collect, and Mrs. Johnson, secretary, read the minutes of the last meeting.

Arrangements were made to serve the Senior Citizens Jan. 17.

Mrs. Richard Van Kluyve introduced Mrs. Homer Johnson who presented the program, "The Woman Beautiful is the Woman Adorned With Art Treasures Old and New."

For centuries Gold has been the way people have assessed their worth — especially has this been a way of enhancing the beauty of a woman. The glittering pure gold has been the greatest tribute — whether in jewelry — hair ornaments or cloth — or whatever way it is used to show praise and love to holy ones as well as humans, the speaker told.

Peter T. White says in the National Geographic this month, "THE ETERNAL TREASURE — GOLD" means many different things to many different people. It is deeply engrained in the human psyche. The dictionary defines it as a "dense, volatile, bright yellow, and lustrous metallic chemical element" — after all, who ever heard of a silver opportunity or a heart of platinum.

Mrs. Johnson stated she has always loved gold and felt that everything golden was more precious than any like article.

She has known its value through the years — the treasured gold band wedding rings — the golden earrings for the newborn in many countries — the watch fobs and class rings, etc. But, the impact of its value and its treasured beauty hit her with full force when visiting the GOLD MUSEUM of the Bank of Bogota Colombia.

The articles on display are dramatically arranged according to Colombia's five main Indian Cultures. They constitute one of the world's great collections of Pre-Colombian Art. Visitors enter darkness that gradually lights up into a dazzle of thousands of golden objects — breastplates, tweezers, nose ornaments and fishhooks, from Indian Cultures that flourished before the Spanish came. Some of the more valuable and perfect examples of the art are displayed in special glass cases with lights or spot lights which display each piece separately and with a unique emphasis on its beauty.

Treasures sown by the ancients stir a gold rush in Colombia where precious artifacts hid in seemingly countless Indian graves. Tunneling 23 feet down quaqueros sifts through sands that may bring a bonanza that is valuable enough for the Gold Museum.

She told of one interesting display in the Gold Museum showing how a grave or quacas looks when found if it is found intact. The bones of the full body lay with the breastplate.

headpiece and jewelry, just as if the full body were still there. These golden pieces were used to preserve the person, king or nobleman just as embalming is used. Many of them are hollow so as to fit the body, and many statues, especially those made by the Quimbayas, are hollow with holes for eyes and mouth, so the spirit can enter.

Gold is still mined in Colombia. Although all gold comes from hard rock originally, nature and time did a lot of work breaking it up so that it washes down to settle in river beds. This is so-called alluvial or placer gold.

There is still treasure hunting going on, and if you are interested, you may book passage on the Jupiter. It's home base is Cartagena, which is on the Caribbean and was founded in the 16th century. It was considered the richest prize on the Spanish Main. Today it is the center for treasure operation in this hemisphere. The Jupiter sails around Colombia and the coastal waters of British Honduras, and with reservations, you may take a two week cruise with Winchester Adventures and try your hand at underwater treasure hunting, the speaker concluded.

Those present were Mmes. Holt Barber, Larry Cross, Robert Finney, David Holt, Homer D. Johnson, Frank Kelley, Glen Larsen, Ellis Locke, M. McDaniel, Aubrey Steele, Jack Ward, John Warner, John Young and Richard Van Kluyve.

Garden Club Studies Floral Table Settings

Flowers for the table in January was the topic of a program on table settings and arrangements presented recently to members of the Pampa Garden Club. "In a few moments of creating a decoration, the hostess can turn an ordinary dinner into something special," stated Mrs. W.E. Abernathy, chairman of the panel discussion and demonstration.

She said a hostess should learn to "express herself" and not imitate the styles of others. In doing so one must learn to combine things that are unusual and original but in good taste.

Mrs. Abernathy listed the four keys to successful table decor from the book, "The Art of Table Setting and Flower Arrangement" by Sylvia Hirsch. They are inspiration, which can be derived through a theme, as oriental decor with Chinese food, etc.; imagination with the courage to be original; knowledge along with the realization that not just any arrangement will be compatible with any table and menu; and good taste. "The hostess today strives for simplicity without being trite or commonplace," said Mrs. Abernathy.

She prepared two tables for the segment table demonstration, a tea table and a breakfast table. The flowers she used for January were preserved last summer in silica gel for four days. "After these flowers are removed from this chemical drying solution, they should be arranged because they are more flexible," said the speaker. The flowers she preserved, still in their natural color, included zinnias, daisies, and marigolds. She included glycerized barberry and evergreen nandina foliage for line material.

Mrs. Marion Brown displayed a patio table service in brown and green with an arrangement of live evergreen materials and gloriosa daisies, dried in cornmeal, which had been placed last summer in a shoe box lined with saran-wrap and sealed with a lid for two weeks. All of the dried flowers were stem-wired before preserving them.

A formal table setting was presented by Mrs. Holly Gray who chose the colors of lilac and pink with silver accessories. For winter flowers she selected pink straw flowers and lestrice, both dried and mounted in styrofoam sprayed silver to blend with the container.

Mrs. A.B. Cross chose a fruit arrangement for her informal luncheon table setting in gold and violet colors. The fruit container was a coach designed from a cigar box mounted on wheels made of coffee can tops and designed with macaroni, all sprayed gold. A violet net veiled the fruit arrangement inside the coach.

Valentine was the theme for Mrs. Wallace Birkes' dessert table. She demonstrated the use of a glass hurricane globe for simple arrangements, including candles, and the use of live evergreen with artificial or sprayed cones for winter flower improvisation. She used the combination of Boston ivy with red velvet balls and an arrangement of pfitzer with deodora pine cones sprayed gold to match the heart container.

Mrs. Thelma Bray, president of the Pampa Environmental Beautification Foundation, announced that all members were to meet Tuesday, Jan. 15, at 7:30 p.m. in City Commission Room, City Hall. The remaining 15 members of the Board of Trustees will be elected at that time. Memberships are $6 and the membership is open to Pampa citizens who are interested in improving the beautification of Pampa.

Club members will conduct a workshop in preparing cone bird feeders with Headstart students in January.

Deadline for the speech contest on "Trees Today for Life Tomorrow" is Jan. 21. The poster contest for students in the first through eighth grades, will close March 1. Posters cannot exceed 14 by 22 inches, may be painted in any media, or may be a collage, cutout pictures of construction paper, news, magazine or bulletin.

A single cutout picture is not acceptable. The theme is the same as that of the poster contest. Cash awards are being donated by Mrs. Paul Crouch. For additional information contact Mrs. James Malone, club president.

Hostesses for the meeting were Mrs. Joe Weaver and Mrs. Cliff Vincent. The next meeting will be Monday, Jan. 21, at 9:15 a.m., at the Pampa Room with the program "Use and Abuse of Our Land."

Gains in Reading
EAST PALO ALTO, Calif. (UPI) — Second-grade students at Brentwood school made significant gains in reading in two separate studies following instruction on a talking computer.

The computer-assisted instruction program teaches beginning reading on a large and practical scale. The computer's sophisticated voice capability makes possible instruction of students who cannot read when they begin.

The studies were made by researchers at Stanford University and Educational Testing Service of Princeton, N.J.

KICKOFF AT 2:40 CDT

Dolphins, Vikings In Big One Today

HOUSTON (UPI) — The M & M Super Bowl, pitting the world champion Miami Dolphins against the blase, experienced Minnesota Vikings in Rice Stadium Sunday, has a unique feature which could mean this will be the first Super Bowl to live up to its ballyhooed buildup.

In this era, when traditions are created faster than instant coffee, the Super Bowl has become a Cecil B. DeMille spectacle of Americana that transcends the championship football game it's supposed to be.

But in the first seven contests, the football game has yet to overshadow the spectacle that is televised live to untold millions from Alaska to Venezuela.

The kickoff for Super Bowl VIII is set at 3:40 EDT and the Dolphins, appearing in the extravaganza for the third straight year, are a touchdown favorite. Each winning player gets $15,000 and the losers receive $7,500.

This is the first time the game features two teams who've experienced this spectacle before and NFL officials hope that means the game will be more memorable than the ballyhoo.

Both the Dolphins and the Vikings seem to have a relaxed, loose attitude about the game and they may not play the conservative, don't-make-a-mistake, uptight brand of football that has produced yawners in the past.

"I think we're more confident and relaxed this time," observes Minnesota defensive tackle Alan Page. "The first time we were somewhat uptight. We got caught up in the 'if we don't win this time it's the end of the world' mentality. Well, once you've lost it, you know it isn't the end of the world if you lose."

One problem in past years is that the teams, unaccustomed to the two week break before the game, have had a tendency to peak too soon and become flat on game day. Don Shula, the Miami coach, says he prepared his team too quickly for the game against Dallas two years ago when the club was clobbered by the Cowboys, 34-3.

And last year, the Washington Redskins appeared to be ready three or four days before the game and then became stale waiting for the kickoff as they lost to Miami, 14-7, in a game that wasn't as close as the score sounded.

Except for Garo Yepremian, who lived up to that game with his feeble pass on that botched field goal, last year's game was rather dull.

But Minnesota, which lost Super Bowl IV to Kansas City 23-7, and Miami didn't seem to peak early this time.

The Vikings were off for five days last week after beating

Dallas in the NFC title game while the Dolphins, after being in the Super Bowl for a third able to take it in stride.

"I think the Dolphins may have been a bit uptight last year because Shula had lost two Super Bowls and didn't want to be known as a threetime loser," Viking coach Bud Grant said. "But now they've won cause we've been here before."

The Vikings don't seem to favor a conservative, play-it-safe strategy either.

Fran Tarkenton, the Viking quarterback, has engineered a gambling, wide-open attack in the club's playoff victories over Washington and Dallas.

Tarkenton, who's never appeared in the playoffs in his 13-year career before this season and is finally living down his tag as a "loser," says, "Our approach to the game is to go in and try to win it, not to keep from losing it."

Of course, the indefinite status of Miami wide receiver Paul Warfield, who suffered a hamstring pull on Wednesday, could hamper the Dolphins. He's likely to play but it's difficult to tell how effective he will be.

Minnesota has a slight edge in the injury department. The team is in good shape and guard Milt Sunde, hampered slightly by a knee ailment, is the only Viking who isn't 100 per cent.

But the Dolphins have already lost Charley Leigh, a kick return man, and have five players—Bob Kuechenberg, Jack Mandich, Jake Scott, Nick Buoniconti and Tim Foley—in uniform who have steel pins or screws in their arms, hands or shoulders to help injuries heal. Kuechenberg and Mandich are also playing with casts on their arms.

"Our biggest worry is a lightning storm," quips Scott.

The Dolphins, being hailed as the "team of the '70s" the way the Packers were called the "Team of the '50s," can become the only team except the Packers—who won the first two-to-win back-to-back Super Bowls.

Buoniconti simply and succinctly lists the Dolphin goal: "We want to go down as the greatest team in NFL history."

The Vikings, who will be happy to know as the best team of this season, will do their best to spoil the Dolphins' illusions of grandeur.

This last Saturday was the first week of thirteen televised tournaments being brought to you by the ABC Television Network at 2:30 p.m. We were treated to a very exciting perfect game, which is twelve strikes in a row. This feat was accomplished by Jim Stefinich.

This was the third televised perfect game so far in the history of televised professional bowling. Besides the money they win in the tournament the bowlers also receive a $10,000 bonus plus a new Mercury Cougar.

In order to get to the televised portion of the tournament, bowlers roll approximately 40 games. They start qualifying on Thursdays and finish on Friday nights, and the top five finalists compete on television Saturday afternoons. There are two tours—one in the summer and one in the winter.

Prize money in the tournaments are quite attractive, averaging from $50,000 to $80,000 each week. The final tournament is the Firestone Open with a purse of $125,000. Bowling is as popular as football, basketball or golf.

Professional bowlers must stay in reasonably good physical shape because of the amount of bowling done. Also, the expense of entering a tournament and their lodging and meals require their winning some of the prize in order to stay with the tour. Some of the bowlers have sponsors to help with expenses.

There's between 130 to 150 entries each week and they establish an average between 210 and 215. Top average this past week was in the 230's.

Some very valuable pointers are given each week by ex-professional Billie Weln and they are of help to all bowlers. I had the opportunity to have Billie in a Junior Bowling program as well as in my instruction classes while I was managing a bowling center in the Houston area.

Would like to mention our stamp spree which is bowled on Sunday evenings at 8 o'clock. Come and join in the fun. Further details are available at the lane.

Scores of the past week in the Men's Doubles League include Benny Horton with a 575 series. Bill Jack and Rudy Taylor each rolled a 221 game. Ted Erickson had a 606 series and a 223 game. In Ladies Doubles, Amy Wuest had a 536 series and she picked up the 6-7-8-10 split on Monday night in the Petroleum Industrial League. Mildred Kilcourse picked up the 6-7-10 split in Ladies Doubles. Dorothy Osborne rolled a nice 606 series which included a 214 and 210 game.

In Harvester Men's, Carroll Pettit had a 606 and 304 and 203 games. Jessie Smartt had a 571 and a 216 game. Roscoe Mounce a 572 and a 200 game. Tommy Hill a 545 and a 203 game and Daniel Riddle had a 203 game.

In Hits & Mrs., Carroll Pettit had a 212 game. Joe Achord a 557 series and a 227 game; Bill Jack a 576 series.

Harvesters Nudge Canyon Eagles In Come-From-Behind Game, 73-69

CANYON — Hot-shooting guard Wayne Pitt and the Canyon Eagles played their finest game of the season and almost pulled off an enormous upset before bowing to the Pampa Harvesters, 73-69, Friday night here.

Pitt scored 22 points, followed by Andy Cooper with 21 and Ed Lair with 12 to lead the Eagles, now 13-11 for the season. Pampa won its 13th game of the season against five losses.

"Canyon was hot as a pistol in the first quarter, they bombed it and made it," said Pampa coach Robert McPherson. The Eagles, behind Pitt's 31 points, outscored Pampa in the opening period, 19-13.

The Harvesters bounced back in the second quarter and led at the half, 30-35. At halftime, McPherson told his players "to get out and put a little more pressure on the shooters and screen the boards better."

McPherson said, "We got Pitt cooled off a little bit."

Canyon continued to hit, however, from the outside and McPherson estimated that 22 of the 28 field goals the Eagles made for the game were from 20 feet out or better.

"We played well. The Harvesters showed a lot of poise, they didn't get rattled," said the Pampa coach. "Ray Powell probably had his best game of the year, shooting, defense and running the offense."

Wilbon (Billy) came back and did a fine job. He showed signs of shaking off his injury (pulled leg muscle) and returning to form. Howie had another good ball game.

The three scored 18, 17 and 16 points respectively while Rick Beesley added 11 and Matiga Burton nine.

Pampa's C-team and Shockers also beat Canyon, 50-40, and 76-49 (JV game). Mark Adair, Mike Lee and Craig Samples scored 19, 13 and 10 for the C-team, while Noel Hansen and Nick Slaymaker scored 22 each, followed by Tony Stafford with 18.

The Shockers are 16-3 and the C-team 9-6 for the season.

All three Pampa teams travel to Lubbock Tuesday for games with Lubbock Monterey. The Harvesters take on the Plainsmen starting at 8 p.m.

What's Going On Here?

NEWS ITEM: Musial Tops Sports Poll

There were several sharp surprises in this marketing survey conducted by a consumer research firm. The thing that impressed me most was the 1-2-3 rating in the category of "trust for endorsement of a product" — Musial, Mantle, Berra. Three baseball players, all finished as competitors, all over 35.

When the poll is broken down by age of the voters, however, we get a somewhat different result. Of the 2,500 consumers contacted, those from age 18-34 picked Bobby Orr, Boston's hockey star, as "most trusted." Men 35 and over picked Johnny Bench, Stan Musial was No. 3 in both age groups, and thereby won the composite. Everybody, young and old, likes and trusts Stan the Man.

Harold's Name Keeps Popping Up

Among the young people, one name keeps popping up that is virtually ignored by the over 35s. John Havlicek. Among "most trusted," Harold's name is 9th with the younger people, ranks 2nd in "most liked," right behind Musial, and ahead of Willie Reed, and second again behind Musial in "most talented." In the voting of over 35s, Havlicek's best is a tie for 13th in "most talented."

What the poll establishes beyond dispute, is that it is one thing to know a man and quite another to like or trust him. Joe Namath finished 2nd to Willie Mays as "best known," but was 13th in "admiration of talent," 13rd as "liked" and 15th as "trusted." Muhammad Ali ranked 3rd as well-known, but 18th in being unadmired, 19th as untrusted, and 19th as unliked. And that is among 192 sports figures listed.

That bothers me. Perhaps it is because I have contributed somewhat to the downgrading of Ali. In the matter of talent, you either have it or you don't, and whether a person is liked or not, trusted or not, cannot erase the existence of pure talent. In this approach, the Alan R. Nelson Research poll has missed the boat, the pier and the river.

The low estate of Ali's trustworthiness also disturbs me. I disagree with his philosophy of racial separation and can't buy his having hid behind an infrequent pupil to escape military service, but when it comes to trust among athletes, I rate him high, very high.

Trouble Designed To Solder Gate

I mean his word, not his gut. His screaming, "Don't call me Clay!" was an act, designed to sell tickets. He is, as I have long contended, a "commercial racist." He doesn't hate whites, or even dislike them. His tirades against "white hopes" are buildups for the gate. When he feels the need, he paints a black man white to stimulate an emotional racism among fight fans.

But get all alone, when he is not on, and he will level. ("Maybe I did lose the first fight to Frazier, but it was close!") He is one of the most direct, most candid, most unequivocal men in sports or anywhere. I just had to say that, and I know he'll be sore at me again because painting him the nice guy, even in one small way, can hurt the gate of Superfight II.

Sandy Koufax' public recognition, at this stage, surprises me. He ranks 9th in well known, 6th in admired-ability, 10th in liked, and 5th in trust. For a man who has dropped out of sight, those are highly impressive across-the-board numbers.

On the admiration-of-ability scale, the top five in order are: O.J. Simpson, John Havlicek (there's that name again), Stan Musial, Sandy Koufax and Willie Mays. I interpret this to mean that O.J. will win the Heisman Award this time.

Riggs, Rostel, Granatelli ... Boooo!

Among sports figures least-liked, aside from Ali, are: Bobby Riggs, Lance Rostel, Andy Granatelli, Rosemary Casals, Duane Thomas, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, Bobby Fischer, and ... Jimmy the Greek? The reason for the unpopularity of most is fairly apparent to readers of the sports pages, but Jimmy the Greek? He must have been slipping an awful lot of losers to an awful lot of people. As for Andy Granatelli, I guess the public has never forgiven him for beating Rocky Marciano in those STP greasy-pencil commercials.

The Conell mystique pops up in the analysis, cramped with its customary ambivalence. As a recognizable figure, Conell ranks a lofty 6th, ahead of Yogi Berra, Joe DiMaggio, Johnny Unitas, Hank Aaron, O.J. Simpson, Joe Frazier, and such. However, he is down near the bottom in the admiration, like and trust categories: 18th, 17th and 131st, out of 192. Curt Gowdy ranks well above him. Conell then is not popular. He is notorious. This should put to rest Howard's delusive notion to run for public office. He couldn't get elected captain of his broadcast booth.

Jaynes, Swann Lift North To 16-13 Win

MOBILE, Ala. (UPI) — All-America quarterback David Jaynes of Kansas threw a 15-yard touchdown strike to Southern Cal's Lynn Swann with 33 seconds to play Saturday, giving the North a come-from-behind 16-13 victory over the South in the 25th annual Senior Bowl.

After leading most of the game, the North wound up on the short end of a 13-9 score three minutes into the final period when an 80-yard Southern drive ended with Arizona State's Woody Green scoring on a two-yard sweep.

In spite of a number of drives that fell short in the intervening 12 minutes, the North—with a total of seven All-Americans among its 31 members—kept its cool and lived up to its role as the favorite with the pass from Jaynes to Swann.

Adding to the North total was Bo Mathews of Colorado who ran one yard for a second period touchdown and Rich Sanger of Nebraska who booted a field goal from 30 yards out, but missed on one of his two conversion attempts.

The South, kept out of the North end zone throughout the game, finally penetrated early in the fourth period when, with fourth and goal at the two-yard line, Green made his sweep around left end.

Kicker Greg Gantt of Alabama added the extra point. Gantt also accounted for the South's other six points with field goals of 27 and 35 yards. He missed a first period attempt from 36 yards out.

Heisman Trophy winner John Cappelletti failed to score but his first half performance, with more than 40 yards running and almost 80 yards in pass receptions, kept the North squad moving.

Bill Kollar, a defensive lineman and the first player from Montana State ever to play in the All-Star game, was named most valuable player, earning a new automobile and $2,500 in addition to the $1,500 and expenses paid to each member of the winning team.

Members of the losing team collected $1,250 plus expenses.

It was two miscues by the Southerners—a pass interception thrown by Arizona State's Danny White and a fumble by Wilbur Jackson of Alabama—that gave the North its first two scoring opportunities.

The South retains the edge in the All-Star contest with a record now of 14-2.

Here's the story about how the famous Notre Dame "Victory March" was written ... (This is the song that starts out "Cheer, Cheer For Old Notre Dame") ... It has become the best known football song of all-time ... and, actually, it was written by a priest, in 1909 ... One day at a game that season, Father Michael Shea decided Notre Dame should have an appropriate song ... At the time, they didn't have one ... After the game, Father Shea went to a piano in a nearby building, but someone was using the piano ... So, Father Shea then went to the Sacred Heart Church on campus and composed the song on the organ at the church ... His brother, John Shea, then wrote the words ... And thus, football's most famous fight song was written in a church organ.

Did you know football fields were not always 100 yards long from goal line to goal line? ... When football started, the field was 140 yards ... Then, they shortened it to 110 yards in 1880 ... The present rule making the football field 100 yards was not put into effect till 1912.

'Toy Cannon' A Dodger

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Jim Wynn admits he was an unhappy ball player the past few years with the Houston Astros and it affected his performance.

He had personal problems, disagreements with the front office and trouble with at least one manager who was trying to change his hitting style.

To hear the 31-year-old outfielder tell it, he's achieved a long-cherished goal by becoming a member of the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Wynn, known as the "Toy Cannon" because of his power-hitting and chunky build, came to terms Wednesday with the Dodgers. No figure was announced but a source close to the club said he is getting $70,000 a season.

The Dodgers want him for his power at the plate and also to fill the gap in centerfield left by the trade of Willie Davis to Montreal.

He appeared to assume that Dodger manager Walter Alston will not try to change his hitting style as former Astro manager Harry Walker tried.

When asked about Walker's celebrated batting instructions, Wynn shook his head impatiently and said:

"You can't transform a power-hitter into a Punch and Judy hitter. He wanted me to hit to right field all the time."

Wynn wields a quick bat and is strong in the shoulders. He has no big theory about hitting but just gets up to the plate and swings. He uses a rather heavy bat (35 ounces) for a man his size—5-foot-9 and 175 pounds. His lifetime average is .255. His high in-home run production was 37 in 1967. He has hit 30 and 32 in other years.

In 1973 he hit only 20 home runs and batted .220.

"I wanted to be traded and I wanted to be traded to the Dodgers," Wynn told a Dodger Stadium news conference. "There was an uneasiness for me in Houston and disagreements with front office personnel for the past four or five years. Last year my brand new wife got sick during spring training and she was in the hospital for four months. That was on my mind. It all affected my play."

Wynn looked mighty happy to be a Dodger and among those welcoming him was Maury Wills, now a coach with the club.

"Jim and I used to talk around the batting cage," Wills recalled, "and he always said he wanted to be a Dodger. He is one of the best all-around ballplayers in the game today. He can hit with power, he can run, he can field and he can throw."

"Thank you, Mr. Wills," said Wynn with a courtly nod of his head.

Al Campanis, Dodger vice president, said he had been trying to make a deal for Wynn for several years "but the price was always too high."

The Astros finally accepted a trade for Claude Osteen, ace southpaw.

Wynn had been playing in right while young Cesar Cedeno took over centerfield for the Astros. Cedeno got into trouble in a motel killing in the Dominican Republic and may not be available for awhile.

"Funny thing," mused Campanis, "if this Cedeno thing had happened earlier we wouldn't have gotten Wynn. And if he had hit .400 and 40 home runs last year we wouldn't have gotten him. Ballplayers sometimes have a little dip in their performance and then they come back. I think Jim will do that."

Wynn will be playing on natural turf at Dodger Stadium and he says his legs should feel better. "I had to hit the whirlpool after playing on the Astro turf in the Dome," he said.

He hit six homers at Dodger Stadium in 1967, a record for an opposing player in one season and he feels the ball carries better there than indoors in the Astrodome.

"I like the crowds here," he said. "I'm happy to be with the Dodgers because they are a winning organization."

Wynn was given No. 23 since manager Alston has his old number—24.

The ballplayer disclosed that he was given 24 when he joined the Astros 11 years ago because he was supposed to pattern himself after Willie Mays, also No. 24.

Paul Richards, then general manager, had the idea that this would spur the young player to greater heights.

"It didn't work out that way," said Wynn. "I've got to be my own man. I respect Willie Mays very much but I can't be like him any more than I can be another Henry Aaron."

At the news conference, Wynn was resplendent in a gray suit—a double knit with a quilted look—a maroon shirt, red, black and white plaid tie, a double-breasted waistcoat and red shoes.

"My wife, Diann, picked out this outfit for me," he said with a grin. "It's not flashy. She has good taste."

NFL Doesn't Produce Successful Playoff; Rain Causes Misery Too

HOUSTON (UPI)—The National Football League likes to think it plans the arrangements for Super Bowl week with the thoroughness, precision and attention to detail that is usually associated with something like a space shot.

But this week there've been a few misfirings.

For example, there were those sparrows in the Minnesota Vikings' locker room.

Now it's the weather—which is one element even the NFL can't control—that is causing headaches for league officials.

Friday was a dreary, rainy day in the Houston area with temperatures in the 30s and NFL officials are becoming apprehensive about the possibility of rain today, despite the optimistic forecast by the weather man.

Don't Trust Weatherman

The official forecast for today is for no rain with the temperature in the 50s. But one official quipped, "The weatherman hasn't been right yet this week."

The two teams—the Minnesota Vikings and the Miami Dolphins—went through light drills in the rain Friday and planned one-hour workouts Saturday on the artificial turf at Rice Stadium.

Manny Fernandez, the Dolphins' defensive tackle who was the hero of last year's Super Bowl, was held out of Friday's workout because of a high temperature. Of course, wide receiver Paul Warfield was also sidelined because of the pulled hamstring muscle he suffered Wednesday although Don Shula said he is hopeful Warfield can start today.

Shula and Bud Grant of the Vikings, the two opposing coaches, held their final pregame news conferences Friday and both struck the typical coaches' pose—confident but wary.

They Can Be Defeated

Grant said, "They are a team that can be defeated—as we all can."

Shula, whose team is favored by a touchdown in its quest for its second straight Super Bowl title, said, "We're not overconfident. Anybody's who's intelligent has to realize they have a heckuva team."

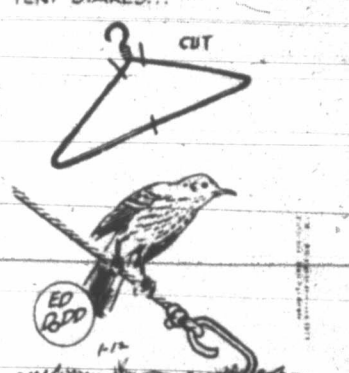

Shula said he will start Jim Mandich over Marv Fleming at the tight end slot and Lloyd Mumphord over Tim Foley at a cornerback spot. Fleming and Foley lost their jobs when they were injured and haven't been able to win them back yet.

The Dolphin coach said the cast will be taken off Mandich's broken left hand and he will play with it heavily taped. That leaves guard Bob Kuechenberg, who has a cast on his broken left arm, as the only Dolphin who will play with a cast on.

Pete Rozelle, the NFL commissioner, held his annual Super Bowl news conference and said he'd wait until next week to decide if Grant will be fined for his statements criticizing the team's training facilities.

"The Circuit Rider" Is Explained To DAR Members

Las Pampas Chapter Daughters of the American Revolution met Jan. 5 at Purr's Cafeteria with Mrs. J.B. White, Regent, presiding.

The meeting was opened with a devotion by the Chaplain, Mrs. Quentin Williams, followed by the Pledge of Allegiance to the flag and the Americans' Creed led by the Flag-Chairman, Mrs. Louise Sewell.

Mrs. E.L. Norman, Bicentennial Chairman, stated that 12,000 Texas DAR members are cooperating with the government in planning special events for 1976.

The program was given by Mrs. Paul Bowers who used as her subject "The Circuit Rider in Early American History" — a Bicentennial subject.

The early circuit rider made history not only for the churches but for the nation. These itinerant preachers at a very early stage in history with their faithful horses began to pierce a wild, uncivilized country, helping to prepare the way for the civilization to follow by preaching the gospel and proclaiming the way of the Lord.

Often it took four weeks for the preacher to go the round of a circuit, yet the people were faithful in attendance, knowing that the preacher would always be present with a message, regardless of the weather — and it was seldom they were disappointed. These preachers served a simple — hearted teachable people, she stated.

They were usually plain, simple men who required little worldly goods. In their saddle bags, they usually carried a change of clothing, a small Bible, and a hymn book. Their most valuable possession was a trusty horse.

They received a warm welcome in every home. The preacher was poorly paid, so part of his pay was his room and board. There were no church houses, so the homes were often the meeting places where sermons were preached and prayer services held. Often these homes were only one room.

The early pioneer preachers suffered many hardships. There was always the hostility of the Indians. Often they were captured, tortured and put to death. Many times they were drenched with rain or half frozen with cold. There were raging torrents to ford. Often they pitched hay all afternoon and preached at night, she continued.

The most influential circuit rider was Francis Asbury. Thousands had come to new life through his services. He preached over 16,000 sermons, traveled 270,000 miles on horseback and ordained over 4,000 preachers. He had to swim rivers with his horse and trail his own way through unsurveyed wilderness.

If it is fitting to speak of Washington as "The Father of this Country," it is equally fitting to call Bishop Asbury "The Chief Apostle of American Christianity," she told.

In closing, Mrs. Bowers stated that we owe these circuit riders much. They are largely responsible for the fact that today we have the benefits of Christianity in our land.

Mrs. L.A. Barnes, Defense Chairman, gave her report from an article by Paul Scott — "U.S. Food — Weapon of Freedom."

The administration's handling of the country's food and fiber production is shaping up into a national issue that could soon surpass the energy crisis.

A one-year reserve of basic foods and feed grains is necessary to avoid famine conditions in the United States in case of a bad growing year.

These life giving reserves are being deliberately depleted to shore up Communist governments in Russia, China, and East Europe. This could be disastrous to our country.

There were 19 members and four guests present. The guests were: Mrs. J.G. Morrison and Mrs. Clara Roane from Ester McCrory Chapter in Amarillo, Mrs. Mabel Torvie, and Miss Mary Britton.

Twentieth Century Culture Members Study German Castles

The Twentieth Century Culture Club met Tuesday in the home of Mrs. N.D. Steele, 1901 Dogwood, with Mrs. Rufe Jordan, co-hostess.

Mrs. Ross Buzzard, president, presided during the business meeting. Mrs. Buzzard also introduced the speaker, Mrs. Fred Brook, who gave a very interesting program entitled "Schloss Probing," as she showed slides describing the tour she and her husband had made of the castles in Germany.

"Everyone has heard of 'Castles on the Rhine,'" she said, "and I for one was not disappointed with what we saw. However, these beautiful castles on the Rhine and the intriguing legends associated with them left me with a desire for another visit and some more thorough probing. These we viewed from a boat trip up the Rhine from Frankfurt to St. Gershausen. They are lovely and line both sides of the Rhine."

Mrs. Brook mentioned several castles, but said that of all the castles and palaces they visited, they were most intrigued with two in Bavaria that stand as monuments to a tragic king, Ludwig II. To some he was mad, to many he sought the good and beautiful — and found the evil of the world. He was known conversely as the Mad King and the Fairy Tale King; he was an idealistic and romantic youth who came to the throne of Bavaria totally uneducated for the role of king and unable to cope with the politics and intrigue of the court at Munich.

Deceived and embittered, he retreated more and more to the solitude of his beloved Bavarian Alps, and concentrated on building his castles. In 1868, plans for the construction of the first of his three castles began to take shape. It was Neuschwanstein Castle, near Fussen, built on the site of the ruins of the old Voderhohenschwangau Castle; it is Neuschwanstein Castle that the fairy castle at Disneyland was patterned after, which is in the style of a Knight's castle of the Middle Ages. Ludwig's passion for the music of Richard Wagner is reflected in the paintings throughout the castle.

The stone foundation was laid in 1869, and it took 17 years to build Neuschwanstein Castle, though it was never fully completed. The Herrenchiemsee Castle was begun some nine years after the foundation of Neuschwanstein was laid. It stands on Herren Island in the middle of the Chiemsee and was modeled after Versailles. This castle reflects a deep admiration for the era of Louis XIV.

Of the three castles of King Ludwig II of Bavaria, only Linderhof, in the Graswang Valley near Oberammergau, was ever completed, and Mrs. Brook says "Regrettably, it was the only one we didn't visit."

She showed slides describing the magnificence and beauty of each room of both the Neuschwanstein and Herrenchiemsee castles, with their knot-free oak paneling, gilded brass lighting fixtures and other fine pieces, gold embroidered silk draperies, Bohemian glass ornaments on the chandeliers, lovely paintings everywhere, mosaic floors in the large halls, Meissen porcelain used in mantelpieces, candelabra, foral arrangements, etc., fine marble stairs; the finest of materials, engineering and artistry is obvious throughout the castles.

Neuschwanstein had a very modern kitchen for that time, with hot and cold running water, and as early as 1884 it was centrally heated; hot air flowed through air shafts to the rooms in the upper stories. The unfinished part of this castle was in the fabulous Throne Hall, where a throne of gold and ivory was to have been placed, but after the king's untimely death, all unfinished work was cancelled.

The Herrenchiemsee castle featured the Hall of Mirrors, overlooking the gardens; it contains seventeen arched windows, and facing the gardens are seventeen imitation windows covered with mirrors. The hall is illuminated by 33 chandeliers and 44 candelabra, totalling 1848 candles. Chamber concerts are given here on Saturdays during the summer months, so that visitors may enjoy the illuminated fairy-like beauty of the hall. It is in this castle that is found the only portrait of King Ludwig II in any of the three castles — by his order — and it was painted after his death.

Mrs. Brook said that the Schloss Herrenchiemsee is possibly the most magnificent of all the castles they visited in their "schloss probing."

Members present besides Mmes. Steele, Jordan, Buzzard and Brook were Mmes. A.E. Berry, Milo Carlson, J.L. Chase, Jr., J.R. Donaldson, M.K. Griffith, E.W. Hogan, Wyatt Lemons, Myron A. Marx, Jr., James A. Poole, E.E. Sheilhamer, Paul Turner and L.J. Zachry.

Modern Asian Woman Is Varietas Program Topic

Mrs. J.E. Gibson presented the program for Varietas Study Club on Tuesday afternoon, Jan. 8, at the home of Miss Anna Pierce. Mrs. Clyde Ellis, president, presided.

The club Collect was led by Mrs. Sherman White, and plans were made for serving the Senior Citizens. The president presented material on a possible club project and referred investigation to the project committee.

The nominating committee, consisting of Mmes. Lee Harrah, R.W. Lane and Otis Nace, presented the following slate of officers for 1974-75: President, Mrs. Clyde Ellis; Vice - President, Mrs. J.E. Gibson; Secretary, Mrs.

Sherman White; Treasurer, Mrs. Audrey Sprawls; Parliamentarian, Mrs. J.E. Kirchman; and Reporter, Mrs. Otis Nace. These officers will be installed in May.

Mrs. W.H. Burden, program chairman, announced that the day's program would be on International Affairs and used the quotation, "So we meet the challenge for change with its counterpart, the challenge for continuity." She introduced Mrs. Gibson, who spoke on "The Status of Modern Woman in Asia."

The speaker confined her presentation to modern-day China, contrasting it to the history of Chinese life under the old dynasties and under the leadership of Chiang Kai-Shek.

She said, "On the surface, the Chinese people seem to be enjoying a better life than ever before. The Communists eliminated crime and unsanitary conditions, gave liberation to women and children, allowed women to hold jobs and salaries equal to those of men, and provided work for all plus food, homes, nurseries, and other privileges."

Workers are paid $26 a month without income tax, charged $2 a month rent, and given their necessities.

The dormitory housework is usually done by the women too old to work in industry. Thus the Chinese people appear to live better than before they fell under Communist rule."

Continuing, she said, "When you study this system more closely, however, you note the disadvantages. There is no individuality among the people. Mau believes that the only way to govern 800,000,000 people is by regimentation and absolute discipline."

In conclusion she said, "There are signs of small changes among the women of modern-day China. A very few women are daring to wear light-colored skirts and blouses, shorts, and even hot pants — since Mao's wife appeared in public in a short white dress with white accessories. This is not yet countrywide, but it does indicate the possibility of a trend. A second improvement is that the world gets more news from China today than ever before."

Turn cuffs down and remove lint before washing pants.

THANK YOU!

To all these wonderful people, who have been my customers over the past years, I extend my sincere thanks. If I can serve you this year or in the future, I will appreciate it, and I will do my best to help you.

Your Horoscope

By Jeanne Dixon

SUNDAY, JANUARY 13
Your birthday today: Your major program for this coming year is to master current reality with ongoing skills and steady improvement of opportunity and goodwill. Relationships are uneven early in the year, settling to quiet, more intimate terms fairly soon. Today's natives are usually out of step with their time, frequently ahead of it and taking a mystical or philosophic view of life, pursuing distant goals.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: For once, a late start is preferable, planning ahead for a long evening. Obstacles encountered early should be no more than a challenge.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: Give yourself a break from routine, but stay busy with activity which supports the general welfare as well as your own interests.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: Attend your share of community observances early, in dignity and your finest appearance, then be on your way to catch up with recent developments.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: This Sunday is great for excursions, distant travel, and if you're going out of curiosity, so much the better. Bring loved ones with you.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: Leave actual business aside for the day; attend to ceremony and formalities early. Afternoon and evening are excellent for social movement.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: You'll find yourself responding to the call for some expression beyond your usual round of routine amenities and functions. Welcome the opportunity.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: Nothing happens quite as conveniently as you'd like. If you will pursue your goals patiently and with outward calm, surprisingly good response develops.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: Having held the line while your friends experimented, you'll find them coming back to agree once more. You haven't missed anything you'd want.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: Let the morning hours be a personal mini-holiday. Serious thought brings a bright idea and you are off and running for a lively day and evening.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: By the time you're organized to go, conditions change for the better and you're in good shape to go farther afield than planned. Be venturesome.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: Be prompt and definite in your pursuit of duty. Get clear early, then organize an excursion or social affair of sorts. It needn't be elaborate or expensive.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: Once you get into the rhythm of this Sunday, life tends to go swiftly and well. Benefits obtained now are generally free of strings.

MONDAY, JANUARY 14
Your birthday today: Resolutions made today are more relevant than New Year's resolutions. The most urgent is, "Tidy up your life!" Whatever extra frills you are attaching to basics may as well be discarded. Learn to get to the point quickly. Relationships bring surprises, most of them pleasant. Today's natives follow their own convictions rather than popular fads, frequently getting themselves into added responsibility.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: Never mind that competition seems so intense. Do something subtle and original on your own that can't be mass-produced or easily copied.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: Don't linger longer than necessary along the way today. Medical and other technical advice is favored; causes and effects are more readily understood.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: Make immediate use of the bright idea that comes to you now. Clear out projects or possessions which have lost their functions.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: Changes emphasized today. More depends on your attitude than on the nature of the change. Select people to play a part in your future.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: It is all you can do to keep track of what happens nearby, let alone the broader scene. Make the rounds early; renew acquaintances.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: For business, make this a day for either collecting or writing off whatever is overdue. Come to terms with anybody you owe, arrange definite understandings.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: Line up your facts and figures early, turn them over in your mind, go ahead with a very definite line of action with distinct decisions made or implied.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: Your philosophy is tested today. If you can keep cool in the midst of what is happening, then you will prosper. If not, prayer can show you the way.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: It is doubtful that you can get thru the day without having to say "no" to some interesting proposition. Be wary of suggestions concerning money.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: This is a fine day for the start of new ventures, entry onto new responsibilities, efforts to improve earning power. Overtime is probable.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: Personal projects lag or get squeezed out as you pursue career or business objectives. There will be plenty of time later, of course.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: Intuition should be allowed to guide your way thru this complex day of contradictory attitudes. Have faith in what you've checked out for yourself.

A new paper sculpture kit invites craftsmen to make four creations and frame the favorite. Featured are pre-cut, pre-scored paperboard patterns for a frog, snail, dove and heron. When they are pressed out, folded and glued together, they become three-dimensional sculptures. When all four are completed, one may be mounted and framed, using the burlap backboard and plastic frame which are included in the kit. Also included: glue. Another kit, also priced at $4, provides fixings for sculptures including an Indian Brave design, a stallion, an owl and a bear with a fish.

One of the stickiest minor problems of modern life appears to have been solved by a new ice tray from Treasure Ware Products of London. The manufacturer says the advantage of the tray is that ice cannot stick to it and it cannot stick to the refrigerator. A user can press out one ice cube at a time or all the cubes at once with equal ease.

Secretary wants work —and nothing more

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1974 by Charles Scribner's Sons, Inc.

DEAR ABBY: After working only two weeks at a secretarial job that paid very well, I quit because my boss made a pass at me.

The second day on that job, my boss cornered me, but I tried to laugh it off and told him in a nice way that I wasn't interested.

I am a 39-year-old divorcee with two children to support. I'm a competent secretary who's not afraid of work, but I just couldn't take all that dodging and ducking required to keep this man away from me.

What do I tell prospective employers when I am asked about my last job? I don't want to lie, but in the last two job interviews when I said I quit "for personal reasons," they looked at me like I was a mental case. Please advise me.

ALL BUSINESS

DEAR ALL: Be honest. It's no reflection on you, and it will discourage other bosses who want to mix pleasure with business.

DEAR ABBY: Lisa [21] and I [23] fell in love and decided to live together. We agreed there would be no mention of marriage. After a year she got pregnant. Then she broke her promise and started to hassle me about marriage.

I told her I loved her [I did, and still do] but marriage was out. She seemed to accept it, and promised not to bring it up again. After the baby came she seemed happy and we were more in love than ever.

Last Monday, I came home after work and discovered that Lisa had packed her things, taken the baby and left. She didn't even leave a note. I have searched everywhere for her and haven't a clue as to where she could be.

I would marry her tomorrow if she would come back, but I don't know where to look for her. Her family and friends insist they don't know where she is. Can you help me?

M.

DEAR M.: Since Lisa didn't leave a note to let you know where she could be contacted, it's obvious she doesn't want to see you. All you can do is wait. She knows where you are if she changes her mind. If she does, then it's up to you to convince her that you want her back—on her terms.

DEAR ABBY: In your opinion, whose place is it to bake a birthday cake for a man? His wife's or his mother's?

I feel that when a boy becomes a man and takes a wife, that is where his mother's obligation should end and his wife should take over.

I have been trying to bake Steve's birthday cake for the last 16 years, but every year when I tell his mother I'd like to bake Steve's cake, she says: "After I'm gone you'll have the rest of your life to bake Steve's birthday cake, so while I'm here, please don't deprive me of that pleasure."

Now, what am I supposed to do?

BUGGED

DEAR BUGGED: Where is it written that a man shall have only one birthday cake? You don't need his mother's permission to bake him a cake. [Some men have a cake at the office and one at dinner. And those who burn the candle at both ends can always work in an extra place.]

CONFIDENTIAL TO E. R. N. OF SAN DIEGO, CAL.: You are right. The quote I attributed to Socrates was not written by Socrates because Socrates actually wrote nothing. But his teachings were perpetuated thru the works of his disciples, Plato and Xenophon.

Rucker-Weatherred

Cypress Exchange Student Presented Program To ABWA

The American Business Women's Association held their monthly dinner meeting at Coronado Inn Tuesday with President, Mrs. Homer McNeil, presiding.

The speaker, Miss Anastasia Mama, foreign exchange student from the island of Cypress was introduced by Mrs. G.F. Richmond. Anastasia lives with her American parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Hagerman. She told of the customs of her country. Cypress is a Greek Island and is the third largest island in the Mediterranean Sea. She and her family live in the city of Famagusta which is a seaport town of 55,000 population. Anastasia has three sisters and one brother. Her father is a fireman and her mother is a housewife.

The school system on Cypress requires six years of elementary and six years of High School, there being no junior-high in America. Most students walk to school and are not eligible to receive drivers license until after the age of 18. Anastasia will lack one more year of high school when she returns home, where all students are required to wear uniforms.

The leading religion in that country is the Greek Orthodox Church. Her country was famous for its orange trees at one time, until many have been cleared to make way for construction of high-rise hotels to accommodate tourists. Today Cypress is a tourist attraction because of its mild climate and beautiful beaches, she told.

The reading of the minutes, the executive board meeting, and communications from national headquarters was read by Betty Mounce.

Report of the treasurer was given by Mrs. Danny Malone.

The chapter voted to hold the annual Boss Night Banquet at Coronado Inn in the Starlight Room Feb. 26. All letters to be submitted for competition for members' houses to Mrs. Homer McNeil by Feb. 1.

Mrs. Fred Glick's resignation was accepted by the chapter. Mrs. Glick's husband is being transferred to Hobbs, N.M. and she plans to affiliate with an ABWA chapter in that city. She has held the post of vice president on the executive board this year. The chapter voted Mrs. John King to fill the vacancy.

Mrs. Ken Plotner's name was drawn from the Raffle Fund.

Guest attending were Miss Anastasia Mama from the American Field Service.

Members attending were Mmes. Homer McNeil, Danny Malone, Fred Glick, Norman Dulaney, T.A. Mastin, Ken Plotner, Doyce Shelton, Glynda Schickedanz, John King, C.A. Herd, Maudie Voyles, James Quay, Eugene Franklin, G.F. Richmond, Lloyd Summers and Betty Mounce.

JANE LONG HD CLUB
The Jane Long Home Demonstration Club met Tuesday in the Courthouse Annex, with Mrs. Paul Graham, hostess.

The meeting was opened with Club Prayer. Roll call was answered with "Who was president when I was born?"

The program was presented by Mrs. Glen Knight, and the door prize was won by Mrs. Neil Fulton. A visitor, Mrs. Willard

Taylor, became a new member. Those members present were Mmes. Neil Fulton, Dusty Williams, Paul Graham, Glen Knight and Willard Taylor. Miss Audette Vaughn, assistant Home Demonstration Agent, was present at the meeting.

The next meeting will be Tuesday Jan. 22, with Mrs. Carl Parks as hostess. The program will be on making bread dough flowers. Following the meeting there will be a covered dish luncheon.

Miss Eastham To Compete For 4-H Club Scholarship

The Texas Home Demonstration Association Scholarship Awards Program is designed to provide educational opportunities in the form of scholarships to six outstanding 4-H Club girls each year.

This year will mark the first time in Gray County for two local senior high school 4-H girls to be eligible to compete for the awards.

The County committee has selected Stephanie Eastham for first place in the county, and also named Regina Atwood, second place. Their records will be submitted to district agent by Jan. 15, and district winning records will be submitted to the State 4-H Club Leader by Feb. 1. The six scholarships awarded by THDA are: three — $500 awards; one — $300; one — $200; and one $100.

For the awards, any 4-H girl who has competed or is enrolled in her third year of 4-H Club work, and plans to attend college during the fall and spring semesters following the year of the judging and has not passed her 18th birthday as of Jan. 1 of the year when records are submitted, and has not previously won one of the above scholarships, will be eligible.

Eligible girls also should submit 4-H Award Program Record Book that includes a special story and a transcript of high school grades.

The top 50 percent of the state candidates will be visited by the judging committee and state winners will be announced by March 15.

The recipient may use the scholarship for any course of study, with the Texas Home Demonstration Club members contributing to a fund for the scholarships.

Miss Eastham, 18, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Eastham, 2531 Christine, has been very active in 4-H Club work for the past seven years.

She was named Gold Star Girl in 1971 and has won numerous ribbons for all facets of club projects.

Miss Eastham has also served as president, secretary and treasurer for that group. She is presently employed at Horace Mann school after school hours and is a member of the Vocational Office Education council delegate and secretary. Miss Atwood won the Gold Star Award in 1972 and has participated in and won county and district dress revues, and food shows over the years.

She is a member of her church choir and has three letters in band. She was a member of the All-Regional Band.

Miss Atwood is a Junior Volunteer at Highland General Hospital and her hobbies are playing the piano, guitar and swimming.

She plans to major in music and minor in secondary education in college.

The scholarship awarded can be used at any accredited senior or junior college in Texas.

Let's Ask the Cook

by Nan Wiley

Dear Nan:

I enjoy your column so much and have gotten so much help from it. I wonder if you can answer this one. Almost all pie recipes are for a 9-inch pie, and they are too large for our family. What proportion should they be cut down for a 6-inch and an 8-inch pie?

Jill Kracilek
Kansas City, Mo.

It is always risky to tamper with any recipe, but you would probably be safe in cutting crust and filling ingredients by one-third for a 6-inch pie. Try scant measurements for an 8-inch pie. Personally I would hate to go to the trouble of pie making if it lasted for just one meal. Pies and pie shells can always be refrigerated; most of them freeze well. You are apt to get into the most trouble reducing the crust ingredients unless you figure and measure very carefully.

My grandma taught me how to use up pie dough scraps for an extra treat she called "snibbles." Cut rolled out scraps in diamond or other shapes. Brush with milk. Sprinkle with cinnamon-sugar (1 part cinnamon to 3 parts sugar) and bake until lightly browned. They are delicious with coffee, tea or milk. Mrs. Cowan's "foolproof" pie crust recipe would be ideal here — it's so flaky and tender. It's beyond me why some cooks have trouble with it, especially if dough is refrigerated before rolling.

Remember, it never hurts if you have to patch rolled-out dough here and there, either on the board or after it is fitted into the pan. That shows it is a rich, tender pastry. Some pie doughs may roll out without a break but they are also apt to be on the cardboard side.

Now let's get something straight on another recipe. The mandarin orange cake. It is correct the way I gave it, so go ahead with confidence. No, there isn't one bit of shortening in that cake beyond the butter used in the topping. It is a sponge-type cake. It could be that a lot of today's cooks are so hooked on cake mixes they have forgotten that not every cake is so-called butter cake. Not that I haven't pulled a couple of boobies in 12 years of writing a column (any food editor appreciates the hazards) but not this time. As my grade school teacher told me "The only way you will never make a mistake is not to try anything."

Secretary wants work —and nothing more

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1974 by Chicago Tribune-H. V. Ross Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: After working only two weeks at a secretarial job that paid very well, I quit because my boss made a pass at me.

The second day on that job, my boss cornered me, but I tried to laugh it off and told him in a nice way that I wasn't interested.

I am a 29-year-old divorcee with two children to support. I'm a competent secretary who's not afraid of work, but I just couldn't take all that dodging and ducking required to keep this man away from me.

What do I tell prospective employers when I am asked about my last job? I don't want to lie, but in the last two job interviews when I said I quit "for personal reasons," they looked at me like I was a mental case. Please advise me.

ALL BUSINESS

DEAR ABBY: Be honest. It's no reflection on you, and it will discourage other bosses who want to mix pleasure with business.

DEAR ABBY: Lisa [21] and I [23] fell in love and decided to live together. We agreed there would be no mention of marriage. After a year she got pregnant. Then she broke her promise and started to hassle me about marriage.

I told her I loved her [I did, and still do] but marriage was out. She seemed to accept it, and promised not to bring it up again. After the baby came she seemed happy and we were more in love than ever.

Last Monday, I came home after work and discovered that Lisa had packed her things, taken the baby and left. She didn't even leave a note. I have searched everywhere for her and haven't a clue as to where she could be.

I would marry her tomorrow if she would come back, but I don't know where to look for her. Her family and friends insist they don't know where she is. Can you help me?

M.

DEAR M.: Since Lisa didn't leave a note to let you know where she could be contacted, it's obvious she doesn't want to see you. All you can do is wait. She knows where you are if she changes her mind. If she does, then it's up to you to convince her that you want her back—on her terms.

DEAR ABBY: In your opinion, whose place is it to bake a birthday cake for a man? His wife's or his mother's?

I feel that when a boy becomes a man and takes a wife, that is where his mother's obligation should end and his wife should take over.

I have been trying to bake Steve's birthday cake for the last 10 years, but every year when I tell his mother I'd like to bake Steve's cake, she says: "After I'm gone you'll have the rest of your life to bake Steve his birthday cake, so while I'm here, please don't deprive me of that pleasure."

Now, what am I supposed to do?

BUGGED

DEAR BUGGED: Where is it written that a man shall have only one birthday cake? You don't need his mother's permission to bake him a cake. (Some men have a cake at the office and one at dinner. And those who burn the candle at both ends can always work in an extra piece.)

CONFIDENTIAL TO E. R. N. OF SAN DIEGO, CAL.: You are right. The quote I attributed to Socrates was not written by Socrates because Socrates actually wrote nothing. But his teachings were perpetuated thru the works of his disciples, Plato and Xenophon.

Cypress Exchange Student Presented Program To ABWA

The American Business Women's Association held their monthly dinner meeting at Coronado Inn Tuesday with President, Mrs. Homer McNeil, presiding.

The speaker, Miss Anastasia Mama, foreign exchange student from the island of Cypress was introduced by Mrs. G.F. Richmond. Anastasia lives with her American parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Hagerman. She told of the customs of her country. Cypress is a Greek Island and is the third largest island in the Mediterranean Sea. She and her family live in the city of Famagusta which is a seaport town of 55,000 population. Anastasia has three sisters and one brother. Her father is a fireman and her mother is a housewife.

The school system on Cypress requires six years of elementary and six years of High School, there being no junior high as in America. Most students walk to school and are not eligible to receive drivers license until after the age of 18. Anastasia will lack one more year of high school when she returns home, where all students are required to wear uniforms.

The leading religion in that country is the Greek Orthodox Church. Her country was famous for its orange trees at one time, until many have been cleared to make way for construction of high-rise hotels to accommodate tourists. Today Cypress is a tourist attraction because of its mild climate and beautiful beaches, she told.

The reading of the minutes, the executive board meeting, and communications from national headquarters was read by Betty Mounce.

Report of the treasurer was given by Mrs. Danny Malone.

The chapter voted to hold the annual Boss Night Banquet at Coronado Inn in the Starlight Room Feb. 28. All letters to be submitted for competition for members' bosses to Mrs. Homer McNeil by Feb. 1.

Mrs. Fred Glick's resignation was accepted by the chapter.

Mrs. Glick's husband is being transferred to Hobbs, N.M. and she plans to affiliate with an ABWA chapter in that city. She has held the post of vice president on the executive board this year. The chapter voted Mrs. John King to fill the vacancy.

Mrs. Ken Plotner's name was drawn from the Raffle Fund.

Guest attending were Miss Anastasia Mama from the American Field Service.

Members attending were Mmes. Homer McNeil, Danny Malone, Fred Glick, Norman Dulaney, T.A. Mastin, Ken Plotner, Doyce Shelton, Glynda Schickedanz, John King, C.A. Herd, Maudie Voyles, James Quarry, Eugene Franklin, G.F. Richmond, Lloyd Summers and Betty Mounce.

JANE LONG HD CLUB
The Jane Long Home Demonstration Club met Tuesday in the Courthouse Annex, with Mrs. Paul Graham, hostess.

The meeting was opened with Club Prayer. Roll call was answered with "Who was president when I was born?"

The program was presented by Mrs. Glen Knight, and the door prize was won by Mrs. Neil Fulton. A visitor, Mrs. Willard

Taylor, became a new member. Those members present were Mmes. Neil Fulton, Dusty Williams, Paul Graham, Glenn Knight and Willard Taylor. Miss Audette Vaughn, assistant Home Demonstration Agent, was present at the meeting.

The next meeting will be Tuesday Jan. 22, with Mrs. Carl Parks as hostess. The program will be on making bread dough flowers. Following the meeting there will be a covered dish luncheon.

Miss Eastham To Compete For 4-H Club Scholarship

The Texas Home Demonstration Association Scholarship Awards Program is designed to provide educational opportunities in the form of scholarships to six outstanding 4-H Club girls each year.

This year will mark the first time in Gray County for two local senior high school 4-H girls to be eligible to compete for the awards.

The County committee has selected Stephanie Eastham for first place in the county, and also named Regina Atwood, second place. Their records will be submitted to district agent by Jan. 15, and district winning records will be submitted to the State 4-H Club Leader by Feb. 1.

The six scholarships awarded by THDA are: three —$500 awards; one —$300; one —$200; and one $100.

For the awards, any 4-H girl who has competed or is enrolled in her third year of 4-H Club work, and plans to attend college during the fall and spring semesters following the year of the judging and has not passed her 19th birthday as of Jan. 1 of the year when records are submitted, and has not previously won one of the above scholarships, will be eligible.

Eligible girls also should submit 4-H Award Program Record Book that includes a special story and a transcript of high school grades.

The top 50 percent of the state candidates will be visited by the judging committee and state winners will be announced by March 15.

The recipient may use the scholarship for any course of study, with the Texas Home Demonstration Club members contributing to a fund for the scholarships.

Miss Eastham, 18, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Eastham, 2531 Christine, has been very active in 4-H Club work for the past seven years.

She was named Gold Star Girl in 1971 and has won numerous ribbons for all facets of club projects.

Miss Eastham has also served as president, secretary and treasurer for that group. She is presently employed at Horace Mann school after school hours and is a member of the Vocational Office Education council delegate and secretary. Miss Atwood won the Gold Star Award in 1972 and has participated in and won county and district dress revues, and food shows over the years.

She is a member of her church choir and has three letters in band. She was a member of the All-Regional Band.

Miss Atwood is a Junior Volunteer at Highland General Hospital and her hobbies are playing the piano, guitar and swimming.

She plans to major in music and minor in secondary education in college.

The scholarship awarded can be used at any accredited senior or junior college in Texas.

Let's Ask the Cook

by Nan Wiley

Dear Nan:
I enjoy your column so much and have gotten so much help from it. I wonder if you can answer this one. Almost all pie recipes are for a 9-inch pie, and they are too large for our family. What proportion should they be cut down for a 6-inch and an 8-inch pie?

Jill Kracilek
Kansas City, Mo.

It is always risky to tamper with any recipe, but you would probably be safe in cutting crust and filling ingredients by one-third for a 6-inch pie. Try scant measurements for an 8-inch pie. Personally I would hate to go to the trouble of pie making if it lasted for just one meal. Pies and pie shells can always be refrigerated; most of them freeze well. You are apt to get into the most trouble reducing the crust ingredients unless you figure and measure very carefully.

My grandma taught me how to use up pie dough scraps for an extra treat she called "snibbles." Cut rolled out scraps in diamond or other shapes. Brush with milk. Sprinkle with cinnamon-sugar (1 part cinnamon to 3 parts sugar) and bake until lightly browned. They are delicious with coffee, tea or milk. Mrs. Cowan's "foolproof" pie crust recipe would be ideal here — it's so flaky and tender. It's beyond me why some cooks have trouble with it, especially if dough is refrigerated before rolling.

Remember, it never hurts if you have to patch rolled-out dough here and there, either on the board or after it is fitted into the pan. That shows it is a rich, tender pastry. Some pie doughs may roll out without a break but they are also apt to be on the cardboard side.

Now let's get something straight on another recipe, the mandarin orange cake. It is correct the way I gave it, so go ahead with confidence. No, there isn't one bit of shortening in that cake beyond the butter used in the topping. It is a sponge-type cake. It could be that a lot of today's cooks are so hooked on cake mixes they have forgotten that not every cake is so-called butter cake. Not that I haven't pulled a couple of boobies in 12 years of writing a column (any food editor appreciates the hazards) but not this time. As my grade school teacher told me: "The only way you will never make a mistake is not to try anything."

Panhandle Water

By FELIX W. RYALS
Two weeks ago this column carried the 15 developmental problems the Governor's Task Force on Water has recommended. This week we are carrying the Legal and Institutional problems before the Task Force on water.

LEGAL

1. A water authority or regional public agency should be considered for the High Plains of Texas to finance the importation of surface water supplies to supplement and replace the dwindling around water supplies being mined. Such agency should have broad revenue-raising powers; new and unique methods of financing should be provided in order to assure that the costs and benefits of such imports are equitably shared by all High Plains' interests. If an effective regional agency cannot be established, then consideration should be given to having the State undertake the necessary program since we can ill afford the loss of the food and fiber producing capability of this important area.

2. Are Texas laws broad enough to deal with the serious land subsidence problems encountered in the coastal areas? Obviously not. Legislation appears necessary. If this problem is to be solved.

3. There are now compacts with our sister states on all interstate streams except the Red River. The absence of a Red River Compact is a legal impediment to the development of that stream.

4. Is the proposed Constitutional Revision adequate to meet the State's water conservation and development requirements? The Revision should be carefully studied to assure it is adequate and amendments suggested where indicated.

5. Delay in adjudication of water rights on Texas streams will also delay wise management and administration of our public waters. Acceleration of the adjudication process appears necessary. Until state water masters can be established on all our streams, we can never have an orderly process of assuring that those lawfully entitled to water will receive it. Such management will also help to identify those entitled to run-of-the-river water, releases from storage, and directly from the storage itself.

6. All cities should have the legal authority to issue revenue bonds for water and sewer services without a vote of the people. This will require legislation.

INSTITUTIONAL

1. Is the present institutional structure of State water agencies adequate? Our major water agencies are the Texas Water Rights Commission, Texas Water Development Board, Texas Water Quality Board, and the State Soil and Water Conservation Board. Do their functions overlap? Is there a conflict of policies? Do they often work at cross purposes? Could these agencies, or some modification thereof, perform their duties more effectively if state water policies were definitely established? Is there a duplication of effort? If so, does this lead to waste of the tax dollar? Should we have these checks and balances? These are questions which need to be answered.

2. Other state agencies have an interest in water conservation and development and water quality control. These are the Parks and Wildlife Department, Health Department, Highway Commission, Railroad Commission, Department of Agriculture, General Land Office, Council on Marine Related Affairs, Texas Forest Service, research activities of State Universities, and, finally, the Governor's Division of Planning Coordination. The Task Force should examine these various institutional arrangements and, where indicated, suggest methods for improvement.

3. Is a river authority the proper legal vehicle to develop a basin? Or does such an authority tend to plan only for its own regional, in-basin water requirements and ignore the rest of the State? Again, these are questions which deserve study.

4. What of our Regional Councils of Government? Are they just another layer of government on our already overburdened system? Or do they serve such a useful purpose that their powers should be enlarged? Let's seek the answers.

5. Inter-governmental cooperation between Federal, state, regional and local agencies could be improved. Better liaison between all agencies is desired.

7 Farmers Complete Great Plains Contracts

Seven farmers and ranchers in the Gray County Soil and Water Conservation District have completed Great Plains Conservation contracts recently, according to Mickey Black, district conservationist of the Pampa Soil Conservation Service. Black said, "The contracts have not only enabled the farmers and ranchers to draw cost-share assistance to apply needed conservation practices, but it has helped to improve the environment we live in by stopping wind and water erosion." The contracts that have expired were on lands owned by S.D. Fish, Creed Lamb, J.M. Orr, Delbert Trev, Leon Daugherty, Elmer Balch and Mrs. Ruth Caudill.

These contracts represent a wide variety of conservation practices which were applied to the land to reduce soil erosion and provide a more economic farming and ranching operation. The conservation practices applied include 16 acres of critical area shaping, 375 acres of pasture planting, 11 acres of range seeding, 12,140 feet of cross fences, one farm pond, one sheep pond, three livestock wells, three water storage facilities for livestock water, 550 feet of diversion terraces, 35,024 feet of conventional terraces, 7,500 feet of under-ground irrigation pipeline, 96 acres of irrigation land leveling, one irrigation tailwater recovery pit and one grade stabilization structure.

Also, management practices were applied to the entire farms and ranches to help improve their overall operations. There are also additional conservation practices available for cost-share assistance under the Great Plains Conservation Program, stated Black.

The Great Plains Conservation Program is a voluntary one. Its core is a complete recourse conservation plan for the entire farm or ranch. The plan is based on the needs of the land and the desires of the individual landowner. This program makes it possible for a farmer or rancher to receive cost-share assistance to apply a complete conservation plan on his land.

Since the Great Plains Conservation Program has been in effect in Gray County, there have been 218 applications made for participation in the program, Black added. There have been 177 farmers and ranchers who have gone into contracts on 250,000 acres.

Your local Soil and Water Conservation District Directors will help you get further information on the Great Plains Conservation Program.

1973 Cotton Harvest Greater Than 1972

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Agriculture Department has estimated the 1973 Texas Cotton crop at 4,850,000 bales, down 100,000 bales from last month's estimate but higher than last year's harvest.

The higher yearly yield contradicted national figures. In its monthly report this week, the Agriculture Department said the national cotton crop for 1973 should be 12,961,200 bales, down 1 percent from last month's estimate and 5 percent below last year's harvest.

The national crop is smaller than projected domestic and export demand, and has produced a supply pinch which earlier led the textile industry to call for controls on cotton exports.

Administration officials, despite currently high cotton prices, have rejected the export control proposal. However, they have eliminated all planting controls for 1974 in an effort to increase supplies next year.

Conservation Education Is Important

Conservation education is of highest importance, says soil conservationist Rodney Hyatt. Only a conservation-minded people can and will commit themselves to intelligent use, development, restoration, and conservation of our heritage of natural resources.

Outdoor classrooms in schools are helping, and will continue to help people learn to appreciate and manage our natural resources, stated Hyatt.

Models, books, overhead projector illustrations, and movies are very effective in any education program. However, none of these can duplicate the teaching effectiveness of real soil, real water, a real tree, or a real bird.

In other words, conservation education is not meant to fill children's heads with information, but to create desirable, lasting attitudes toward our environment.

Conservation education can be effectively included in almost any class subject with an outdoor classroom, according to Hyatt.

Pampa, Texas 67th Year Sunday, Jan. 13, 1974

WARNING

There have been unconfirmed reports of widespread death loss and sickness in cattle that have been grazing wheat that was sprayed with Dieldrin for greenbug control. This is true even when cattle have been held off wheat pasture from 10 days to 2 weeks longer than the labeled instructions call for. My advice would be if you graze, don't spray. Or if you spray, don't graze. Most of the fall damage has already occurred from the greenbugs. In my opinion, your money will be better spent if you wait until February or a warm up. We still have the greenbugs and it is very likely you will have to spray in the spring even if you sprayed the past fall or during the winter.

CATTLE PRICES

Fat cattle at this writing (1-9-74) are bringing $51.00. By the time you are reading this I will not be surprised if they are not bringing $52.50 or higher. The heavy and over-fed cattle are gone. Chief Choctaw says, "Pale Face Squaw, Mr. Meany, great White Father, and all the rest of America are fixing to learn what a price freeze on beef will do to you."

Chief Choctaw says - Texas Cattle Feeders Association, American Cattleman's Association, and all cattle organizations should start beating the big drums and tell 'em why. Should tell 'em of impending meat shortage and tell 'em why. Shortage is because of freeze and its affect. Cattle feeders have now dropped numbers placed on feed from ten per cent to twenty per cent per month since freeze started last April.

Another thing Chief Choctaw says - Pale Face Squaw and rest of Americans should know. $51.00 is no more than a breakeven figure.

The Chief thinks fat cattle could go to $60.00 this time and the price will hold at or near this figure for an extended period. Won't be a two weeks or few days of what Pale Face Squaw calls a high market. It will be long enough to make people pay for their sins. Lot big headlines and lot of bleeding except in packing house. Only thing that will work against price rise is energy crises. Cutting off gas to some of feedlots will not be in best long-range interest to consumers. Some reduction in demand because of unemployment. Energy crisis could help in demand since driving and other recreational activities will be curtailed. Stay home and eat a good steak at half the price it would cost in Europe and 10 per cent of cost in Japan. Too much said already on this one.

ALFALFA GROWERS MEETING

A seminar on alfalfa growing and insect and weed control problems of alfalfa will be conducted in McLean Feb. 11. The time and place has not been selected, but we hope to have a 2 p.m. meeting. If interested contact me. We should have rest of details soon. Alfalfa growing is very much on the increase in the McLean area due to the feedlot activity. Some growers say they expect to get $60.00 per ton next summer.

Wheat Shortage Charge Revives Baker Critique

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Charges by bakers that the U.S. is facing the possibility of a temporary wheat shortage this spring have revived longsimmering criticism of the baking industry by some government officials and farm groups.

The heart of the criticism was summed up here in a statement by Ray Davis, president of the National Association of Wheat Growers (NAWG) that bakers "have failed to make adjustments to meet changing supply conditions."

Baking officials began talking about possible future shortages five months ago, Davis pointed out. But despite their own warnings, the bakers failed to "buy ahead" by placing firm orders last summer for the wheat flour they knew would be needed during the 1973-74 season which ends when the 1974 wheat crop comes from the combines next summer.

"They were told then to buy ahead because of heavy world demand. They failed to adjust buying habits carried over from days of surplus wheat," Davis said.

Agriculture Department officials — in private and increasingly in public — have been saying much the same thing. In effect, their argument is that in this year's era of tight supplies and low reserves, all farm product processors should be making long-term supply commitments rather than buying on a month-to-month basis as they did over the years when surpluses were the rule.

"I'm a little concerned that millers and bakers sit back and do not buy wheat what they know they'll need," assistant agriculture secretary Carroll G. Brunthaver told a news conference this week while denying that consumers face shortages this coming spring.

"They've been allowing exporters to move in and buy this wheat out from under them," Brunthaver complained. "If we're going to operate American agriculture at full capacity, with all the benefits that brings to both producers and consumers, then we've got to have users looking ahead so they won't have talk of export controls every season to discourage efforts to expand production."

Farms Decline Again

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Continuing a long decline that began nearly four decades ago, the number of farms in the United States on Jan. 1 dropped another one per cent to an estimated 2,821,000, the Agriculture Department said this week.

A similar 1 per cent decline had been reported between Jan. 1, 1972, when farm numbers were estimated at 2,870,000 and Jan. 1, 1973, when the estimate was 2,844,000.

Compared with a decade ago, farm numbers were down 18 per cent. But the annual report, based on a sampling survey, showed the total amount of land in farms has been declining much more slowly than farm numbers. As a result, the average farm size has been growing steadily.

From an average of 332 acres per farm in 1964, average farm size rose to 383 acres in 1973 and 385 acres at the beginning of this year, the report showed. It estimated there were nearly 1,067,000,000 acres of land in farms on Jan. 1, 1974 compared with 1,000,000,000 a year earlier and 1,146,000,000 a decade earlier.

Despite the continuing downward trend in the number of farm units, U.S. agricultural productivity has continued to increase as farms grow fewer and bigger. For 1974, agriculture officials have predicted farmers will set new all-time

The 10-Gallon Absurdity

Perhaps you haven't noticed, but the Nixon administration, while steadfastly maintaining that gas rationing will be imposed "only as a last resort," is systematically imposing rationing step-by-step without calling it that.

If the ordering of refineries to cut their production of gasoline is not rationing, we are at a loss for a word to describe it. And, when Nixon's energy czar, William E. Simon, with all the terrible power of the federal government at his command, "announces" a 10-gallon per customer "limit," what descriptive term, if not rationing, is one to apply to what has been done to one?

With respect to the latter, Simon was careful to explain, of course, that oil companies and independent distributors have "agreed" to set a limit of 10-gallons per gasoline per customer at service stations. But, for anyone even vaguely cognizant of how the federal bureaucracy works, the behind the scenes arm-twisting used to obtain that "agreement" is not difficult to imagine.

Alternating between these overt and covert coercive measures, the tax-paying gasoline-using consumers are slowly, but surely, being psychologically prepared for the imposition of formal rationing, along with the burgeoning bureaucracy, favoritism, corruption and black markets that invariably accompany such socialistic schemes. Once imposed, and with the bureaucracy thus created having a vested interest in continuing it, it is doubtful that many of us will live to see the day when rationing is removed.

The 10-gallon "voluntary" limit will fail to conserve gasoline, of course, and one rather suspects that it was intended to fail. It will fail for the simple reason that motorists needing more than 10-gallons to get back and forth to work and for other reasons, will merely pull into a second or third service station until their tanks are filled.

Consequently, in addition to the social costs in irritation and frustration involved, the 10-gallon limit will be incredibly wasteful of scarce human energy and time; which, although it may come as a surprise to the meddlers in the national capital, are valuable commodities that are always in short supply.

In a time when the economy of this nation needs desperately to increase and upgrade its productive output in order to compete with other nations whose industrial plants have been subsidized and made more efficient with U.S. taxpayer provided "foreign aid," the imposition of the 10-gallon limit and other time and energy wasting schemes are nothing short of criminal.

Power not only corrupts, as the late Lord Acton warned, but it, also, renders its wielder incapable of rational thought, much less of acting morally or ethically.

Having caused the energy shortage by its meddling with the free market (setting gas quotas, holding up Alaska pipeline, etc.) the federal government will undoubtedly fail to take the only action it can to ease the crisis. And that is to get out of the way and let the natural law of supply and demand solve the problem.

WORLD ALMANAC FACTS

Curfews were originally practiced in medieval Europe as a precaution against fires. Upon the toll of an official bell, all fires and lights had to be extinguished or covered. The World Almanac recalls. The custom was necessary because homes were wooden and fires were usually made in a hole in the floor.

When I had digested the situation I told the lady I wanted to be removed, like now, from the AFTRA plan and restored to the "National Review" plan. She refused, advising me that I would have to "straighten the matter out with AFTRA." This was obviously Answer 5(b).

Now here the plot thickens. I am not a member of AFTRA, have no desire to be one, and under a recent court ruling, people who appear on radio and TV solely to comment on public affairs are not, thanks to the First Amendment, required to belong to that ravenous outfit.

But AFTRA is out of the habit of dealing with people as individuals, let alone human beings. It inhaled my name along with the others, like a whale-scooping up a shoal of minnows, and then sprayed us all onto its own Blue Cross plan.

When the Blue Cross computer discovered my name already in its files, listed under its contract with "National Review," the Blue Cross officials (who can tell a big outfit from a small one) summarily removed me from "National Review's" plan and left me in AFTRA's — without even bothering to notify me!

All this, I recently discovered, took place on or before last October 1. Along toward the end of December, their computer noticed that "National Review" was still making payments under its own plan on my behalf, so the people at Blue Cross told our bookkeeper to cut it out. When she objected, I was personally called on the carpet by a Blue Cross employee whose general attitude suggested that she had dealt with difficult types like me before.

That, in fact, is where I came in. I have been employed for sixteen years by the corporation that publishes "National Review," and have been a contented member of its medical plan, which happens to include a Blue Cross arrangement. From time to time, however, I appear on radio and television programs, commenting on public affairs, and apparently some station forwarded my name and Social Security number to AFTRA, probably along with similar information on scores of other helots.

Columnist Describes One-Day Battle With Blue Cross Agent

By WILLIAM A. RUSHER

Are you a member of a Blue Cross chain-gang? Don't laugh — you may be, wit out even knowing it. I have just discovered that I spent the last three months of 1973 in a union Blue Cross medical plan without having requested it; in fact, without even being informed of it.

The story begins with AFTRA, which is short for the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists — a bunch of union gorillas who are trying to monopolize the performing side of TV and radio. One of the "benefits" AFTRA provides its members, voluntary and otherwise, is a Blue Cross medical plan. Blue Cross is naturally delighted, since the more people enrolled in its plans the bigger staff it can support; and AFTRA (as you shall see) is a vigorous recruiter.

Rearview Mirror

By TEX DEWESSE
Editor Of The News

IF YOU are interested in government and how it operates you might find it worth your time to drop by tomorrow forenoon's meeting of the Gray County Commissioners Court.

It convenes at 10 a.m. in the county courtroom on the second floor of the Gray County Court House.

An agenda item right at the top of the interest list is the scheduled appearance at 11:30 a.m. of Dr. Donald Todd, a West Texas University professor who is an opponent of regional government because he says he has documentary evidence to show that it is part of a trend to condition the American people for dictatorship.

As he has done in other counties, Dr. Todd is expected to urge citizens to call their commissioners and urge the adoption of a resolution rejecting regional government and bring pressure to bear on the Texas Legislature to launch an investigation into regional government in the state.

DR. TODD'S contention is that governmental bodies, such as the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission headquartered in Amarillo, usurp the power, jurisdiction and authority of local government.

The WTSU professor says there are 23 other units of regional government in Texas and he hopes eventually the Texas Committee for Restoration of the Constitution, of which he is a member, will be able to enlist aid of county commissioners and city commissioners in all 254 Texas counties in halting what he calls erosion of the United States Constitution.

He thinks the fight can be won only through alerting the people at local levels.

"Citizens have a lot more power than they think," Dr. Todd says. "If only we can alert the people to the dangers they are facing, the trend can be reversed."

Gray County and the City of Pampa both are members of the Panhandle-Regional Planning Commission.

Dr. Todd said it should be recognized that there are many well-meaning individuals working for the local regional planning commission (PRPC) but who are unaware of the nature of regional governance. In other words, they are being misled and misguided.

ANOTHER THING brought to light by Dr. Todd concerns the full-scale revision of the Texas Constitution which will be presented to Texas voters at a date to be set before the current Constitutional Convention ends. He says it is very alarming to examine the proposed revised Constitution for Texas and discover that State Supreme Court judges and Appellate Court judges would no longer be elected by Texas voters. They would be appointed.

That leaves only district judges and county judges to be elected. Todd believes it is a tragic blunder to propose a change in the Constitution whereby the people of Texas would no longer have the power to elect some of the members of the state's judicial system.

Todd says it is also a mistake to permit the proposed revised constitution to include a provision which permits the people to vote on a County Home Rule Charter.

He states if a County Home Rule Charter is approved, the people would eventually realize that too much power had been delegated to the county unit and that no powers would have been reserved to the people. He adds that Home Rule is really a tool being used to promote regional governance.

Why don't you drop by tomorrow forenoon at the commissioners court meeting and listen to what Dr. Todd has to say about what's happening to you and you don't know it? We think you will find him quite a knowledgeable person.

COUNTRY AND Western Music fans will recall a tune titled "I Like Mountain Music."

A lot of Pampans and other residents next to the Mountain Time Zone are beginning to get a hankering for Mountain Time as well as Mountain Music.

In other words they don't cotton to the year-around Daylight Savings Time.

We are on the western edge of the Central Time Zone and only a little more than 100 miles from the eastern boundary of the Mountain Time Zone.

That's why children in the Texas Panhandle are going to school in the dark. It's dark in Pampa at 8 a.m. Central Time these mornings. But on the eastern boundary of the CDT zone, 1,000 miles away, it's daylight at 8 a.m.

It's a complicated thing we suppose everybody eventually will learn to live with — but it is also a dangerous thing for children waiting for buses and crossing busy streets on their way to school in the dark.

So, there's a chance for budding songwriters to come up with the words to a tune titled "I Like Mountain Time."

One Pampans suggested he would use it as his theme song for circulating petitions to get the Texas Panhandle to switch to MDT.

Mothers March Monday

When some people hear about Women's Lib, they begin making strange noises that we infer, connote disapproval, displeasure, and general all-around disgruntlement.

Not us. We note with real enthusiasm, for instance, that Jane Wyatt, that lovely and talented lady who appears evenings on the TV screen, has been elected as the first trustee of her sex to the board of the March of Dimes. Hurrah for Ms. Wyatt. Congratulations to The National Foundation — March of Dimes.

And while we are handing out the compliments, we would like to add a barfellow more to the dauntless women of Pampa who participate in the voluntary health organization's Mothers March each year. With unfailing devotion, they go from door to door seeking help in overcoming what is now this nation's No. 1 child public health problem — birth defects. Some 250,000 babies are born with a significant defect annually in this country, and these mothers know that something has to be done about that.

We know it too, and urge you to lend a hand and give a gift to the next generation of Americans.

The Pampa Mothers March will be held tomorrow night from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. Turn your porch light on.

Rockefeller And Reagan Take Off In '76 Presidential Race

By GARRY WILLS

Messrs. Rockefeller and Reagan threaten to make the Republican nominating process in 1976 look like a geriatric stampede, jamming each other's wheelchairs as they smash toward the finish line. (Rockefeller will be 67 by then, and Reagan 65.)

Reagan should have the stronger position, as an upholder of Nixonism without Nixon. His advocates will be selling the line that Nixon's "mandate" of 1972 was not cancelled by the adventitious scandals of Watergate. The new Republican majority is still "out there," mainly to the West — and Reagan, during the Goldwater campaign of 1964, was one of its earliest prophets.

But Reagan has several problems other than age. His taxless year will not look good, after Nixon's ordeal by IRS. His tax plan for California was rejected. His tough line on campus disorders is no longer very relevant. His ignorance of foreign policy is total. And, besides, it is still to be proved that the Middle America strategy can work except as part of a backlash to the Sixties — i.e., as a vindictive response, to which Watergate was not an accidental but a necessary adjunct.

Well, then, how about our other "clean old man"? Nelson Rockefeller usually gets what he wants in the end — and he has wanted the presidency very badly most of his long life. Now that scandal touches the finances of so many politicians, people might be tempted to vote for a man too rich to be bought. (The reverse of this argument is to say that he is rich enough to buy us — who knows better than a Rockefeller when a cheap country is going up for sale?)

Rockefeller must disarm old Republican resentments, and reverse the movement away from the party's "Eastern establishment." Unluckily for him, his new base is one of those foundation p...els of experts that George Wallace likes to make fun of. When Rockefeller used this approach in the Fifties, the party did not take it kindly. Calling a great Symposium on the nation's needs under a Republican administration was a way of telling President Eisenhower that he was part of the problem rather than the solution.

It is easier for Republicans to recognize that they have problems in the Watergate era, but Rocky's way of solving them may misfire. Just as he makes the implicit claim that his wealth exists far above scandal, it looks bad for him to be using a study group to launch his campaign — thus avoiding the campaign spending laws.

He hopes, of course, to beat down opposition from his old opponents by outtoughing everyone in sight on the subject of welfare cheats, drug abusers, and military spending. That last one is the danger. Rockefeller has always been a hardline defense advocate. His hurtful reputation as a "big spender" could help him here — the hawks know he loves military hardware. Back in the days of his first study group, he and Henry Kissinger were critical of President Eisenhower's moratorium on nuclear tests, and they leaned toward use of "tactical nukes" in limited war. Kissinger has moved away from such views, but there is no evidence that Rocky has.

Potomac Fever

By JACK POSNER

Some of Nixon's papers given to the National Archives contained top secret defense plans — for the Washington Redskins.

Energy chief Simon urged a ten gallon gas limit. That should keep Kissinger in Washington.

A new record, "Hang in There, Mr. President," hasn't given Nixon's spirits a lift. Only 60 copies were sold.

Representative Aspin (Wis.) wants to tax oil firms for higher profits and lower production. Aspin can cause headaches.

New Attorney General Saxbe called the Ervin panel tape subpoena a "fishing expedition." That's like calling the U-2 mission a snorkeling prank.

General Haig has discovered how that "sinister force" could hum on the tapes. It played the Mazda commercial.

With Saxbe as attorney general, he will not be a presidential adviser and stumble into John Mitchell's shoes.

Senator Gurney has given up his activity on the Watergate committee since the "good fairy" left all that cash in his office safe.

Glen Campbell Tells Of Home

By EARL WILSON
NEW YORK — Glen Campbell, speaking of his home town, Delight, Ark., population 296, said, "It was so small, when we got enough people together to put on a parade, there was nobody left to watch."

Glen was heading for one of the major cities of the world, London, to tape a TV special "with Burl Ives and the Duke" when he made this remark a few nights ago. A listener spoke up, "Burl Ives and Duke Ellington?"

"No! Burl Ives and the Duke, John Wayne!" Glen laughed. "Oh, I see how it is. In the East, the Duke is Ellington, in the West the Duke is John Wayne."

"In 'True Grit,' when we were just getting acquainted, I called him 'Mr. Wayne' and he finally said, 'Look, my friends call me the Duke,' and I said, 'It'd be funny if they call you the John.'"

Glen never forgets he's from the country. "I'm not ashamed of bein' a hillbilly," he said when we were having dinner at Sid Allen's en route to the Naum Theater. Go. Round. We spoke of our knowledge of such rural arts as hog-calling, slopping the pigs and milking.

Glen Campbell knew his home town, Rockford, O., because as a boy of 8 he was a tomato-picker. "A migrant worker," picking tomatoes for 10 cents a hamper.

"We picked tomatoes at a town called Willshire," Glen said. "Rockford was where we went to see the picture show."

His father bought him a guitar which he carried along on the tomato-picking and that started him toward "Gentle on My Mind," "By the Time I Get to Phoenix," "Hey Little One," "Wichita Lineman" and other hit records and his own CBS-TV show.

The rural sayings creep into his speech. Sid Allen suggested another drink. "Might as well. It's gonna rain tomorrow and we can't plow." In his show routine he said, "Mom had the bathroom carpeted. She liked it so well, she's gonna run it right into the house."

His humor continues in that direction. Doing an impression of Elvis Presley for the delighted Naum audience, he said, "I thought he was trying to shake his britches leg down or his shorts was bunched up real bad."

Speaking of having four children, he said he wanted a boy, but the first two were girls. "Then my wife and I read up on how to determine the sex of your children ahead of time — adopt what you want." He added, "I was one of 12 children. My dad always said there wasn't a lot to do on the farm."

Glen's next TV special will be aired March 6 on NBC. He had difficulties with CBS and took his sponsor to the opposition. The special will be sold throughout the world. Despite his rural manner, he has sophisticated moments, as, for example, when he forgot himself and quoted a line, "I love to hug Mary and to squeeze Betty but what I like best is to quiche Lorraine."

But he remembered to stay in character on the stage. When he got a standing ovation, he told the audience, "You scared me. I thought you was gettin' up to leave."

THE WEEKEND WINDUP...
Sammy Davis'll get the special marquee treatment when he stars at Harrah's Reno — just his first name in lights, a Ja Elvis and Barbra ... Muhammad Ali took an ad in a London paper promising his British fans he'll dispose of both Frazier and Foreman in 74.

Johnny Cash's mother-in-law, Mother Mabel Carter, will appear in the "Country in New York" concert Jan. 19 ... George Grizzard said it: "New York is cold, rainy, snowy — and an actor feels young." Los Angeles has wonderful sunshine and scenery — and you feel you're getting old.

Former football star Ken Strong recalled he once played a full season for the N.Y. Giants for $5,000: "Nowadays football players get that much for spraying their hair on TV" ... REMEMBERED QUOTE: "Knowledge is knowing that fire will burn. Wisdom is remembering the blister."

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

Enlarged Breasts In Males

By G.C. THOSTESON, M.D.
Dear Dr. Thosteson: What would cause enlarged breasts in a male? I have had this since childhood. Am near 50 now, married and have children.

As time goes by this problem gets worse. Is there any medication for it? I understand there is surgery but I can't afford it.

—L.E.H.

Dear Doctor: I am a male, 51, large frame and build. My breasts are so large I am too embarrassed to go swimming, take showers with other men, etc. I've read of a simple operation to take care of this.

—J.G.

No single cause. I'll offer what help I can.

Enlargement of the breasts in adolescent males is not uncommon, but usually subsides in six to 12 months without any treatment.

In an adult male, if it occurs, it is likely to be after age 50. It is unusual to have this as a lifelong condition, as in L.E.H.'s case.

For some of the common factors: large build and frame are common — the breast is an area in which fat accumulates rather readily from no apparent cause other than obesity. Why? Not known, any more than we can specify why some people have fat hips but thin legs, or occasionally the reverse. Or have fat accumulate in any particular area to the exclusion of other places.

But anyway, I wish I knew about the weight of both L.E.H. and J.G. If they are on the beefy side, losing some weight might pay dividends.

A glandular deficiency is possible in these cases — but since L.E.H. has had no children, and the condition has persisted since childhood, glandular discrepancy is unlikely.

Cirrhosis of the liver can be associated with breast enlargement at this age. Worth checking. Thyroid disorders also can be responsible and should be checked out.

If female hormones for baldness, prostate trouble or other reasons have been taken over prolonged periods, that can be involved — although I suppose, in most such cases, the patient is aware of what is happening, and the medication is more important than the side effects.

I think I should mention a warning that enlargement, on one side, and with a painless lump under or near the nipple, should be viewed suspiciously. While only 1 per cent of breast cancer occurs in males, it is too serious a thing not to keep in mind.

Because of the various possibilities, a thorough checkup by your doctor is in order. But the patient should understand that it is possible there is no dangerous underlying cause and that nothing can be done except perhaps losing weight — or resorting to surgery to remove some of the excess tissue.

Such plastic surgery is, in certain cases, the only cure, and it is being done frequently. It is not an extensive procedure.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I had a breast removed more than a year ago and all is well except that my arm has begun to swell.

I would appreciate knowing some exercises to make the swelling subside or stop getting worse.

—Mrs. B.P.

Exercises for this are primarily those involving arm and reaching movements. Often physical therapy (massage, and use of an arm cuff) is necessary.

I suggest you write to "Reach to Recovery Foundation," c/o American Cancer Society, 219 East 42nd St., New York, N.Y. 10017, which has information dealing with this particular problem.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Could using straight bleaching peroxide on the hair each month cause a weakness or loss of vision over a period of time?

—D.T.

No, it would have no effect on vision.

Acne is one of the most terrible problems of growing up. If you are afflicted with this aggravation, or if you have children who are, write to Dr. Thosteson in care of Publishers Hall Syndicate, 401 N. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Illinois 60611, for a copy of his helpful booklet, "Controlling Acne, Blackheads and Pimples." Please enclose a long, self-addressed (use zip code), stamped envelope, and 25 cents in coin to cover cost of printing and handling.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes all reader mail, but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

THE HOUSE DOCTOR

Self-Repairs Of Toilet Can Save Money

By HERMAN BAUM
Dear House Doctor:

Our toilet is not working properly. While the tank is filling, water squirts out all over the place, even with the cover firmly in place. I am continually mopping up the floor. The last time I called a plumber, I paid $18 for 15 minutes' work, and I can't stand much of that. Please tell me what to do so I can make the repair myself.

Mrs. T.T.K.

ANSWER — The plumber has his side of the story, too, and he will tell you that he is working for peanuts or something of less value. Let's not get into that argument, but come to the point of your problem.

Of course, you can make the repair yourself, even though the toilet may be out of commission for the better part of the day while you chase around looking for the proper replacement parts, so be prepared for that emergency.

The plumber would have had the necessary parts on his truck and would have completed the job in 15 minutes, so that is why it costs $18.

There is a valve in the water supply line beneath the toilet. Turn it to close. You will probably need a wrench or pliers to get it started. Now, flush the toilet to empty the tank.

Inside the tank you will see an array of rods and levers which look complicated. These are held in place by two wing screws, which must be removed. If they do not turn easily, do not force them as you may break them off, and then you will really need a plumber. Apply penetrating oil and wait an hour or two before reattempting work.

With the screws removed, all that array can be lifted out. One of those rods passes through a slot in the top of the plunger. This plunger is the valve that turns the water on and off inside the tank.

There will be two washers on this plunger. The one that is causing the trouble is the one near the center. This is really a gasket rather than a washer. Some of these plungers are made in two pieces like the one illustrated. Others are in one piece.

Rather than burden you with unnecessary details, do this the easy way and take the plunger to a plumbing supply or hardware store and let them install the proper size new gasket.

While you have the thing dismantled, it is a good idea to install a new soft seat washer also. Now, all you have to do is to put the valve back together in the reverse order from which you dismantled it. Before putting the plunger in place, wrap a cloth around a pencil and clean the tube into which it fits. There may be some grit in there that damaged the first gasket.

OUT PATIENTS' CLINIC
D.W.C. — When the mastic oozes up between the joints of a resilient tile floor, it means that the work was not done properly. The trouble should correct itself in a few years. If you do not want to wait, install a new floor.

Dr. B.S. — The metal door on your home may be galvanized steel that was not properly primed, which accounts for the paint peeling. Remove all existing paint, apply a zinc-rich primer, then paint with exterior grade gloss enamel.

Mrs. A.H. — Even if you had a dozen kids in your family, they could not possibly get so dirty as to require the use of a drain cleaner in your bathtub drain. You have other problems. I suggest you call a plumber.

GLAZING
Dear House Doctor: Please tell me how to replace a broken glass in an aluminum frame window.

ANSWER — Some aluminum frame windows require glazing compound. Others use an aluminum insert to hold the glass in place. The two methods are too involved to be explained here, but they are included in our Bulletin A-148, which also explains the work on wood frame windows.

A copy is available for 10 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope, sent to The House Doctor in care of Register and Tribune Syndicate, Des Moines, Iowa 50304. Please remember to place a stamp on your return envelope.

PRESSURE SENSITIVE TAPE
Dear House Doctor: We bought a house that had non-slip floor designs glued to the bottom of the bath tub. I pulled them off, but I cannot remove the stain.

Mrs. M.M.B.
ANSWER — The pressure sensitive adhesive used on these designs can be removed with a chemical called trichlorethylene. It is available under the trade name of Carbona as well as by its chemical name.

TILE ROOF
Dear House Doctor: I will soon paint my house. It has a white tile roof marred by mildew stains. Should the roof be painted also?

T.C.
ANSWER — White tile roofs require painting, but this should be done by a company that will spray the paint on after pressure cleaning to remove dirt and mildew.

ODOROUS KITCHEN CABINETS
Dear House Doctor:

The home we recently purchased has pine kitchen cabinets. These have an objectionable odor which cleaning and the use of disinfectants has not removed. Do you have a solution?

Ms. J.W.
ANSWER — When all else fails, paint the interior of the cabinets with gloss enamel or gloss varnish. This will seal in the odor.

FOGGED STORM WINDOWS.
Dear House Doctor:

We had all new aluminum frame storm windows installed on our home. They steam up so badly that we cannot see through them. Is there any cure for this trouble?

H.H.
ANSWER — This condition is caused by the house windows not being efficiently weatherstripped. During the warmer part of the day, the air between the windows is warmed and expands so that some of it escapes. A night, the air cools and humid air from inside the house is drawn into the space, due to defective weatherstripping. The moisture is then deposited on the cold storm window glass.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED KARPIN

In the theatrical world, one of the most enthusiastic bridge players was the late Sigmund Romberg, world-renowned composer of operettas, including "The Student Prince" and "Maytime."

Romberg was not a good player, primarily because his busy schedule deprived him of the time necessary to master the techniques of the game. But he was a very lucky player; and this characteristic brought him many a victory that a more proficient player might not have achieved. Today's deal, which was played in 1947, is a case in point. Romberg was sitting in the West seat.

Neither side vulnerable.

South deals.

SOUTH

The bidding:

South West North East

1♥ Pass 2♠ Pass

2♥ Pass 4♥ Pass

Opening lead: Five of ♠.

West's ace of diamonds. If West, at trick two, continued spades, South would ruff. Trumps would be drawn next, after which dummy's clubs would be cashed. South discarding two of his diamonds on dummy's fourth and fifth clubs.

And so, as is evident: Romberg's opening lead of the fourth - from the - highest spade, instead of the proper top - of - a - sequence lead against a suit contract, "forced" East to win the first trick with his ace. The natural shift to a diamond then resulted in declarer's demise.

I really feel sorry for declarer, primarily because "there, but for the grace of God, go I."

Investment Chatter

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market already has reached an intermediary bottom but there will be no new upward trend until March at the earliest, Laidlaw Coggeshall Inc. said in an investment research report.

"Disappointing earnings comparisons for the last quarter of 1973 and first quarter of 1974 will be dampeners for investment confidence," it said.

"But oddly enough, we expect stock prices to enter a new major upward trend looking to a brighter future at a time when the economic news may look the worst."

The austerity measures to reduce petroleum consumption have been more successful than anticipated, Townsend-Green-span and Co. said in a special report on oil.

"Despite the drop in imports, as well as a small decline in domestic production of crude oil, inventory drawdowns in the United States have been not only far less than originally feared but even less than would seasonally be expected with normal supplies," it said.

"Although supplies of oil have fallen, consumption seasonally adjusted has dropped as much or more."
