From the I wonder why department. A neighbor asked this week about the flags that normally fly on such days as Memorial Day, and where they were this year.

That question falls into the same category as the one we asked last week about why our kids spent the major holiday in school.

All I can say is, I just don't know.

The Senior Class of 1989 is now history. They are now on the way to college, jobs, and planning sessions for class reunions in years to come.

These young adults must be commended for their demeanor during the graduation exercises.

All was orderly throughout the ceremonies until the end, when the tassels and mortar boards were thrown high in the air—even this was done in an orderly fashion.

Personally speaking, we felt a closer relationship with this year's class. Our eldest completed high school in this group.

The transfer of our graduate to Winters High School was not without considerable difficulty. Some really special folks went to work and got the job done in order for this class to have 62 graduates rather than 61.

All the teachers and administrators deserve our thanks and special thanks to Mr. Grantham and to Susie Johnson for their interest and concern.

Things must have been real interesting out on the lake this week end. What with all the fishermen and the wind blowing (the two are not necessarily connected), it might not have been necessary to use fishing poles.

From some of the comments heard about the weather, wind-wise, the fishermen might have had nearly as good luck holding a net in the air to catch the fish as they were blown from the water.

Seriously, our Chamber of Commerce has done a good job with the bass classic. This third annual event was the biggest and best ever and officials are looking to the same event next year.

Vacation Bible School time nearing

The Methodist Church has set Vacation Bible School for June 19-23, 9 a.m. until noon. Ages 3 through grade 5 (just completed) are invited to attend. Registration cards are available at the church office. Also a registration day is set for June 17, 10 a.m. until noon at the lot by People's National Bank.

The theme for the week is "The Bible: The Book of God's People". The offering each day will be donated to the Child Welfare Board. On Friday, the children are asked to bring a special offering, a canned good for the Winters Food Pantry. Through these acts and their lessons, the children will learn how we are all God's people and we help one another.

Wind damage

Gusty winds in advance of a thunderstorm overturned a shop building at the Winters Wrecking Yard Saturday evening. Although the yard has not been in business for several years, a number of parts and salvage items were still stored in the building and were, along with the rest of the building, scattered along U. S. 83 in north Winters.

Winters residents received only a trace of rain from that storm cloud, along with gusty winds, loud thunder and a brilliant electrical display.

In the early morning hours Sunday, another storm blew through Winters with winds clocked at about 65 miles per hour. That storm left rain totals of 1 1/2 to 2 inches.

Lightening associated with that second storm struck an oil tank battery about four miles south of Poe's Corner that caused some anxious moments for firemen about 7 a.m. Sunday.

Winters Council extends hours for City Hall to 5:30

The Winters City Council, meeting in regular session Monday, agreed to extend the open hours at the Winters City Hall an additional half-hour for the convenience of customers who must work until 5 p.m. but still need to conduct business with the city.

In other business, the council was introduced to Mike Magee, Winters' newest police officer. Mike was officially sworn as a police officer in Winters last week.

He is a recent graduate of the police certification academy in San Angelo. Mike's entry into law enforcement follows that of his father, a long time San Angelo Police officer.

The Council met with Gerald Palomo regarding the city's collection of past due taxes and the steps to be taken by the law firm Mr. Palomo represents to secure the collection of the tax monies.

The city entered into a new agreement with the Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation regarding maintenance of U.S. 83, Texas 153, and Loop 438 within the city limits of Winters. The agreement provides for the police department's enforcement of city ordinances, including speed limits, on the state-maintained highways in the city limits.

The city accepted a lease proposal from the McCaslin Company, of Abilene, for oil, gas, and mineral exploration on the airport property. The bid submitted by McCaslin was the only one received by the city for the lease.

Nadia Returns To Germany

The story begins with Grif and Kattie Brown who had been serving as a fill-in for families who had applied for foreign exchange students, and found they were unable to meet their commitments for whatever reason.

This setup had not proved satisfactory for the Browns so they applied as sponsors themselves. This was in January and before they had received Nadia Bork's application she telephoned that she would be coming to America from Germany. Due to the language barrier it took three phone conversations to straighten things out.

When Nadia arrived and the girls wanted a hamburger for lunch there continued to be a problem with the language as Nadia eats no meat. It was solved by Katie Harrison, the Brown's granddaughter who lives with them, who said, "tell them to give you a hamburger and cut the meat."

When communication was difficult at school, Kerstin Bordt of Bangs was used as translator. Katie, a junior, was of great help to Nadia who had been attending a private school in West Germany.

Nadia has been on the honor roll since she arrived. She has also taken drivers education. The age to receive a drivers license in Germany is 18, and she rides a bicycle or train everywhere she goes. Many people ride the subway and trains in Germany because there is a 50% tax on gasoline.

Most every young person in Germany wants to live in another country to improve his English. Nadia had a choice between Australia, America and Great Britain, but chose America. She worked during the summer and holidays to pay for her trip. Her application was sent to International Education in Frankfurt and was accepted.

When friends learned that Nadia was coming to America they told her tales about Texas and warned her not to go there.

She listened, and then said, "that is where I'm going."

Nadia says all the kids have been good to her. The teachers and Mr. Grantham have been supportive.

One difference she has noticed here is that boys and girls read for entertainment, while in Germany they are more serious and read to improve their government, also other conditions. Some are vocal in their criticism of the government.

Nadia feels close to the Methodist Church and pastor where she attends and helps by working in the nursery. She says there are no Sunday Schools in Germany and they don't have a high percentage of church attendance in urban communities.

Travel has not been left out of Nadia's schedule. She has been to Six Flags twice, has shopped in Dallas and gone snow skiing in Colorado. She also attended the Rattlesnake Roundup at Sweetwater. Her mother, Dagmar, writes that she is afraid Nadia is being spoiled.

For those planning to travel in Germany, Nadia has some advice to give. "When one is offered wine it should not be refused. This is an insult, our wine is more like mineral water."

When questioned, she said their cabbage, called rotkohl, did not taste good. It is seasoned with apple and spices and cooked a long time to make it more tasty.

On graduation day June 1, Nadia could not receive her diploma with the class because she lacked a half term in economics and in history. Arrangements have been made for her to take correspondence courses from Texas Tech and receive her diploma. She is a straight A student.

The Winters High School Academic Excellence Award was presented to Nadia by the faculty at the graduation exercises.

A bronze plaque with the words "We love you Nadia Bork, Class of 1988-89, Winters High School" was presented by the senior class with all their names engraved on it.

Katie, who will be a senior next year, is already sad, her big sister is leaving. The Browns say she is special. As Nadia boards the plane at Abilene for her trip home on June 14, I'm sure that plans are being made to see her again.

A lot of people don't have much to say, and that's fine. The trouble with some of them is you have to listen a long time to find it out.

Becky Brown, Paul and Ken Baker hosted the supper and game night Saturday night. President Baker called a short business meeting. Secretary Nila Osborne read the minutes of the last meeting and Paula gave the treasurers report.

It was agreed to postpone July and August meeting due to the July 4 holiday and in August plans are to have a Crews reunion. Plans are to meet again Saturday, September 2. Our visitors were Tim, Tammy, Jessica and Josh Hunter of Coleman.

With Norval and Helen Alexander over the weekend were Jerry, Casey and Brandi Alexander, Tucson, Arizona. Brandi will remain and spend her summer vacation with her grandparents.

The Mike Prater family have moved back to Texas and to the Crews community. Mike came from Nebraska with their belongings Wednesday and moved into their new home Sunday evening, just walking distant west from the Noble Faubions.

Noble Faubion had his doctor's checkup Thursday in San Angelo, had a good report on his heart condition. On Friday had minor surgery on his right arm, something to do with a nerve condition.

Amantina, Claudette and Melissa Faubion, Tiffney Prater and Harvey Mae Faubion attended Holley Englert's dance recital in the Ballinger High School Saturday night.

Brownies learning about their heritage

Brownie Troop 161 has been working very hard this year towards earning their bridge to Jr. Girl Scouts. Over the last three years as Brownies, the girls have earned 15 Try-It Badges. This year has been concentrated on learning about Jr. Girl Scouts as the girls exchanged letters with Jr. Scouts from Ballinger, and saw badges they would be working towards as they move up.

The last few months the Brownies have been working very hard on a Jr. Scout badge called, "My Heritage." Many projects were involved in the study, as the girls learned of their heritage. This includes talking to grandparents and learning things they did when they were growing up, and then sharing these stories with fellow girl scouts. Some brought pictures of their personal history. They looked up meanings of family names, and then went on to learn a dance many grandparents enjoyed, the Charleston.

The Brownies then proceeded to learn about the place they were growing up in. Mrs. Charlie Poe came to a meeting and told the girls about how the town of Winters got started, and how it changed and grew. The next meeting the troop paid a visit to the Z. L. Hale Museum, to see things that were a part of our history. The Brownie Troop really appreciated the help of Mrs. Poe and the ladies at the museum for their help in this project.

To finish up the year the Brownies went on a field trip to Abilene for bowling and pizza. Girls participating were Wendy Arredondo, Jennifer Davis, Amy Heathcott, Jeanna Kozelsky, Karen Oats, Lisa Poindexter, Monica Parramore, Kathy Torres, Heather Watkins, Angela Shoemaker and Judy Spill. They were accompanied by leaders Teresa Davis, Barbara Heathcott and Chris Parramore.

Bob Bullock reports

State Comptroller Bob Bullock praised Texas lawmakers for passing an innovative school bond program that will lower borrowing costs for poor school districts.

"I originated this plan and supported it all the way, and it's definitely a step in the right direction. Now it's up to the voters to approve the next step towards financial equity in our schools," Bullock said.

That step will come in November, when Texas voters decide on a constitutional amendment to allow the state to lend financial backing to a new school bond program that was approved by the Legislature in May.

SB 951, sponsored by Sen. Bill Haley, will help bring construction funding to school districts at a significantly lower cost to taxpayers by combining local bond issues into one larger, more cost-effective state bond issue, Bullock said.

"Some of our districts don't have the property tax base that others have, and these education bonds will provide extra money to school districts that need it. At the same time, by issuing bonds on a state level rather than on a local level, administrative costs will drop," Bullock said.

Under the new law, money from the bond sales can only be spent by the school districts on certain items, such as building or renovating classrooms.

The constitutional amendment would allow the state to use the Permanent School Fund to back the state-issued education bonds, which are limited to $750 million, Bullock said. That fund is already used to guarantee education bonds issued by local school districts.

If the amendment is approved, the state-issued bonds will have the highest ratings possible at the lowest cost, since they will be backed by the state.

Graduation. It has come and gone. A significant rite of passage for those participating in the exercises. Both high school and college graduates.

I thought back on my high school graduation some 21 years ago. And I have come to a conclusion. It is a different planet now.

When I graduated I never figured I would live this long. The Viet Nam War was in its darkest, bloodiest time. A war that seemed to last forever. They were thinking about doing away with student deferments. And with the draft, most of us just counted on going. The prospects hung over us all like an ominous cloud.

Most of us were looking forward to our first summer in the oil field, probably roustabouting for minimum wage. Then entering college in the fall.

We listened to graduation and baccalaureate speakers who told about life in the future, which we couldn't identify with. Old guys. About as old as I am now. We thought they were from another planet, too.

The future was scary. Fortunately, we didn't know how scary it was or we would have been paralyzed.

While we worried about personal annihilation, we didn't have the same clouds over us that the 1989 grads have. Back then there were only two nations who had nuclear delivery capability. Now that number has increased considerably, making annihilation of life a possibility.

Texas Agricultural groups disappointed with Governor's announcement

A coalition of 40 mainstream agricultural organizations said it was deeply disappointed with Governor Bill Clements' announcement that he will sign the Texas Department of Agriculture sunset legislation.

"Although we are deeply disappointed in the governor's decision, the creation of a scientifically oriented pesticide review board is a small step in the right direction," the coalition said. "We now have 40 diverse, mainstream agricultural organizations united and poised for the next phase in the much-needed correction of the Texas Department of Agriculture," they said. Spokesmen for the coalition—Jimmie Powell, president of the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association, S. M. True, president of the Texas Cattle Feeders Association—said they had hoped the governor would veto the sunset legislation.

"Although the sunset bill creates a nine-member pesticide review board, which is a good concept, it does not address the inherent problem of TDA's structure," the agricultural leaders said. "Under the existing structure, mainstream producers are virtually locked out of decisions that are important to agriculture."

The coalition had urged the governor to veto the sunset bill and push for legislation creating an appointed commission to head the agriculture department. The commission would determine policy and, in turn, hire an executive director to run day-to-day operations.

"We appreciate the legislature's efforts in working toward a solution, but much more needs to be done," the spokesmen said.

"We will keep this group together in an effort to modernize the agriculture department and make it more responsive to the farmers and ranchers who produce most of the food and fiber for Texans."

Raise in daily oil production rate may mark promising trend for small operators

Texas' oil production rate increased some 15,000 barrels a day in March, according to Railroad Commissioner James E. (Jim) Nugent, bucking a long-term production slide that has seen a drop of some 462,000 barrels a day in the state's crude production capability since the beginning of 1986.

Preliminary figures released by the Commission show state oil wells produced at a 1,810,711 barrels-per-day pace in March, compared to a preliminary February production rate of 1,795,006 barrels per day.

"While this one-month uptick in our oil production rate doesn't mean the Texas oil industry is out of the woods, it is an encouraging sign—especially for our marginal well operators," Nugent said.

The 10-year Commission veteran said the production rise may mean more of the state's stripper wells are coming back into production after months of inactivity brought on by low oil prices. "That's extremely important for Texas because almost 70 percent of the state's 195,000 producing oil wells fall in the stripper category," Nugent said. "Daily production from these marginal wells accounts for almost 21 percent of the statewide total."

A well is classified as a stripper well if it produces 10 barrels of oil a day or less. According to Nugent, the average stripper oil well in the state produces only a 2.8 barrels per day.

"The 1986 crude oil price plunge took a heavy toll on our marginal wells," Nugent said. "Operations couldn't meet expenses at $9 or $10 a barrel. To save wells and the crude reserves they were tapping, the Commission changed its rules to extend the mandatory plugging deadline for inactive wells up to a year or more. We did everything we could to help producers hang on until prices improved, rather than plugging and abandoning their wells."

"Prices have remained relatively high since the first of the year, and that has to be encouraging to well operators," Nugent concluded.

Breckenridge to hold Bass Tournery

Breckenridge Chamber of Commerce President Scott Harris, Breckenridge Big Bass Bonanza Director Ernie Underwood and Tim Ball General Chairman of the 1989 Breckenridge Big Bass Bonanza have issued a very special invitation to all interested bass fishermen from everywhere to the Annual Breckenridge Big Bass Bonanza which will be held on Hubbard Creek Lake June 24 and 25.

Hubbard Creek Lake is located approximately four miles west of Breckenridge on U.S. 180. Headquarters for the Big Bass Bonanza will be at Wimberley's Wharf which is located at the east end of the "mile long bridge" on U.S. 180.

The Second Annual Breckenridge Big Bass Bonanza will feature a $25,000 tagged black bass for some lucky fisherman to pull out of Hubbard Creek Lake during the two day event. Guaranteed prize money of $10,000.00 will be paid to the top places along with $75 for the big bass of the hour. Recent catches in Hubbard Creek Lake have been in excess of seven pounds.

Tim Ball is again serving as General Chairman of the Breckenridge Big Bass Bonanza which is sponsored by the Breckenridge Chamber of Commerce and assisted by the Breckenridge Bass Club.

Entry fees are $40 for one day, $60 for two days. Entries must be received by 5 p.m. Friday, June 16, 1989. Late registration is $50 for one day and $70 for two days.

The tournament will be held on Saturday, June 24, 1989 and on Sunday, June 25, 1989. Tournament fishing hours will be from 6 a.m. until 3 p.m., local time on both days of the tournament.

For additional information or entry forms contact the Breckenridge Chamber of Commerce, phone (817) 559-2301, or write P.O. Box 1466, Breckenridge, Texas 76024. If you are in the immediate area entry forms are available at several sponsor locations in Breckenridge and around Hubbard Creek Lake.

Members of the Breckenridge Big Bass Bonanza Committee in addition to Underwood and Ball include Jerry Karl, Tommy Wimberley, Bobby Rogers, Johnny Stoker, Peggy Holder, Dale Cary, Ricky Edwards, Doub Ables, Kevin Simmons and ex-officio members Scott Harris, Virgil E. Morre, III and James C. Hestand.

A message from this newspaper and the Texas Dept. of Public Safety

TDH to test school water for lead

In response to a new federal law meant to protect children from lead contamination, the Texas Department of Health (TDH) will begin in July to test water samples from all Texas schools and day care facilities.

The Lead Contamination Control Act, signed into law by President Reagan last October, requires that all U.S. schools, kindergartens, and day care centers ensure that drinking fountains are lead-free.

Anthony "Tony" Bennett, of the TDH Division of Water Hygiene, explained that many older water coolers were manufactured with lead-line tanks, fittings, or lead soldered joints which contaminate the water. "Our lab will be responsible for testing samples from all drinking fountains known to contain lead, as well as some fountains believed to be lead free," he said.

Bennett said that the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) has compiled a list of the manufacturers and models of coolers that are not lead-free. By using the list and a document called, "Lead in Schools' Drinking Water," school officials and day care operators can learn whether their drinking fountains contain lead components.

Since TDH has been named responsible for informing schools and day care centers of the testing requirements and procedures, the agency has received numerous telephone calls for more detail. "Some school and day care administrators have received their copies of the product list and guidance manual," Bennett said. "But anyone who hasn't should contact the TDH Division of Water Hygiene, at (512) 458-7497."

Bennett added then when all details about sampling and testing procedures are complete, TDH will notify schools through the Texas Education Agency and licensed day care centers through the Texas Department of Human Services.

bass before they are large enough to get away from these predators.

To maintain a catfish population in a pond where other fish are present, plan to restock periodically as the larger catfish are caught, said Mr. Turner. Channel catfish stocked into such a pond should be at least 8 inches long to escape being eaten by bass.

Weeds or aquatic vegetation also cause some misconceptions among pond owners, said Mr. Turner. These are not automatically bad. Such plants are the basis for much of the oxygen supplied to the pond which is necessary for fish growth. In addition, the insects that live in or on the plants provide food for fish. Most aquatic plants also help stabilize the shoreline to prevent erosion and are attractive to water fowl.

Of course, too much vegetation will interfere with swimming and fishing. Vegetation should be controlled when it covers more than 15 percent of the pond surface, said Mr. Turner.

More information on controlling aquatic weeds or other phases on pond management is available from the County Extension office.

Pond management facts outlined

Managing a pond for recreational fishing and maximum enjoyment often means understanding some facts and separating them from certain "ideas," said Allen E. Turner, county agent with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

One of the most common "ideas" is "poachers have caught all the big fish out of my pond." Though this may happen, almost all of the blame for catching only bass less than 12 inches in length must be on the pond manager, Mr. Turner said.

A pond can be overfished, but usually small bass are an indication that the pond owner is overprotecting the fish. Limited fishing allows the bass to become overabundant and slow-growing. Such ponds yield few really large bass because most die before reaching "trophy" size.

Often a pond owner can improve the population of stunted bass by allowing smaller sizes to be harvested, Mr. Turner said. Then the remaining bass will have more food available and will grow faster and larger. This might lead to a "lunker" bass.

Another "idea" that many people have is that channel catfish will now spawn in a pond. On the contrary, they will often spawn, but the eggs and small fish will be eaten by bluegill and

School is out at Wingate Elementary, but we couldn't let all of our hard work go unrecognized.

The 5th and 6th grade class voted on which books to buy with the money they raised. Their selections are: There's a Bog in the Girl's Bathroom, by Sachar, a 1989 Bluebonnet selection; The Lion, the Witch, and the Wardrobe, by C. S. Lewis, and a good ghost story. We are proud of the hard work that these students did this year.

K-6 entered the 44th Annual National AAA Traffic Safety Poster Contest. Ray Lee Luera, a 3rd grader, won a merit citation certificate for an outstanding traffic safety poster design. His poster was chosen from among the thousands of entries submitted this year. This is an honor since more than 600 students from communities including Weatherford, Houston, Arlington, and Austin competed in the contest at state and national levels. Mrs. Cheryl Sneed also received a certificate of appreciation.

Pirate Award winners for the 4th six-weeks were: Calvin Williams and Jessica Dyess. Two winners for the 5th six-weeks were: John McGallian and Julie Reyes.

Education legislation to impact Texas

State Representative Ernestine Glossbrenner, chair of the House Education Committee, and Texas State Teachers Association President Charles N. Beard, Jr. issued statements commending the 71st Legislature for the passage of a number of progressive education bills.

The two cited, among others, new legislation on student dropout prevention, a raise in the minimum salary schedule for teachers, sick leave for educational support personnel, compulsory school attendance for students between the ages of six and 17 years, an early retirement bill for all school employees, and increased funding for the teacher career ladder.

Glossbrenner, chairing the Education Committee for the first time this session, said she was proud that the new school finance package includes a new "floor" for teacher salaries, but is disappointed that a long-term plan to provide for funding the true cost of education failed to gain passage.

Beard said that he was pleased that salaries were raised, especially during the hard economic times, but warned that the "pay raise battle" is far from over.

He said TSTA, the state's largest organization of school employees, and its local affiliates will now "focus our attention on local school district budget deliberations in the hundreds of Texas school systems where salaries already exceed the new state minimums," Beard said. "In these districts, local school boards are not legally mandated to pass on their increased state aid for salaries so long as they pay at or above the minimum."

The TSTA president said he believes the legislation intent was to provide funds to grant every teacher at least an $1,800 increase.

"Our recent polls conducted by The Texas Poll indicate that 81 percent of all Texans want to raise teacher pay and we urge all of these citizens to come forward on behalf of their local teachers during school district budget deliberations," he said.

In addition to salaries, the legislators approved additional funding for the teacher career ladder by 28 percent, raising the allotment from $70 per ADA to $90. The bill will add more stringent requirements for advancement to Level III of the ladder and delays Level IV implementation until 1991.

A five day sick leave bill for educational support personnel gained passage and provides that all school employees may use two of the five sick days to conduct personal business which cannot be accommodated during the off-duty hours. This adds a new benefit for over 100,000 school support workers, including custodians, bus drivers, maintenance and cafeteria workers. It also provides personal leave provisions for teachers, as well.

All school employees will be affected by a new early retirement bill. The new legislation provides that school employees can retire as early as 55 provided they have 30 years of service. It also provides for lesser penalties for retiring earlier under different formulas and gives retirees greater flexibility in providing annual annuities for their beneficiaries. Current retirees who left the school system prior to August, 1986 will be granted pay increases in monthly annuities.

Beginning with the next school year, the new compulsory attendance age for students will be from six to 17-years-of-age, as opposed to the current law which states that students between the ages of seven and 16 must attend school.

Dear Betty Crocker

Q. Can "bread" flour be substituted for all-purpose flour?

R. D. W.
Seattle, WA

A. Yes. Bread flour is especially good for yeast-raised breads because its slightly higher protein content contributes to gluten development and higher volume breads and rolls. The dough is more elastic and should rest about 20 minutes after punching down and before shaping. The rest period allows the gluten to relax, making rolling or shaping easier.

Q. What would prevent bananas from turning dark in fruit salad.

S. B.
Clay, KY

A. Either sprinkle banana slices with juice from the citrus fruit (oranges or grapefruit) in salad or with lemon juice.

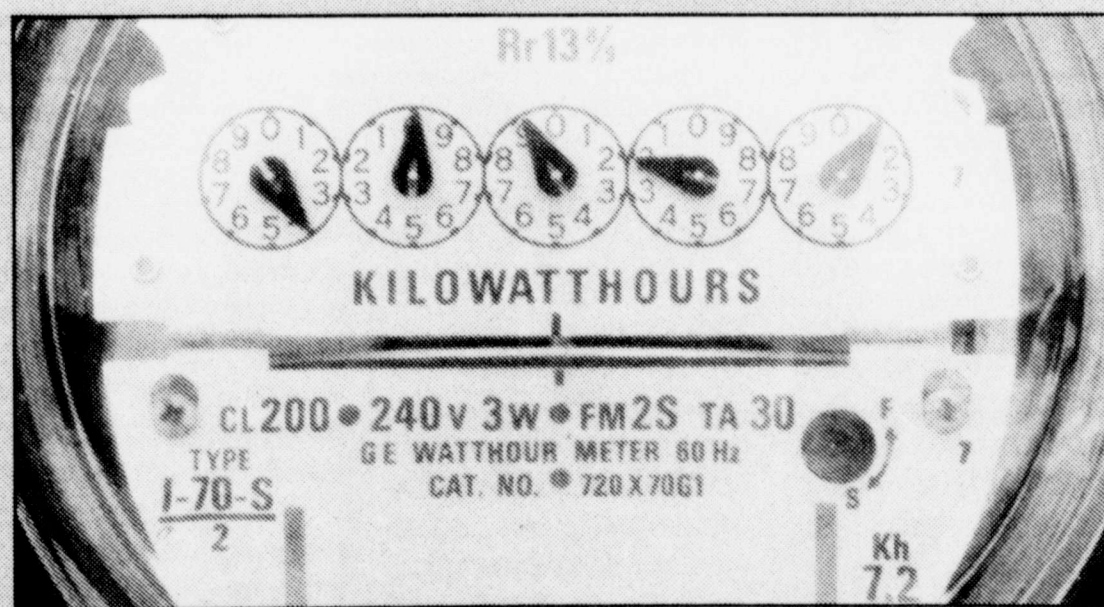

Beard said that in addition to the new legislation passed this session, TSTA was very pleased in that it was able to defeat many proposed bills that it felt would be bad for students and school employees.

He credited the organization's success to a network of 200 teacher lobbyists who stayed in continual contact with their representatives and senators during the deliberations of the various bills.

"I also believe that the majority of the legislators did all that they could in light of the fact that the Governor was threatening vetoes of any legislation that did not fall within the allotted appropriations. Under these circumstances, passage of many of our other legislative proposals was almost impossible," the TSTA president concluded.

GIVE YOUR ELECTRIC METER A TURN FOR THE BETTER.

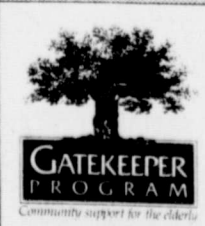

You can slow down the wheels on your Electric Meter and lower Summer Cooling Bills when you follow these helpful tips:

- ☐ Set your thermostat on 78° or higher and use ceiling or portable fans to help circulate the air.
- ☐ Have your air conditioner serviced annually and once a month, check the filter. A dirty filter can keep your air conditioner from working efficiently.
- ☐ Keep doors, windows, and drapes firmly closed to keep cool air in and heat out.
- ☐ Protect ceiling and walls with adequate insulation. Make sure cracks around windows, doors, pipes and wiring are tightly sealed with caulking and weatherstripping.
- ☐ Use heat producing appliances, like ranges, dishwashers, and dryers during the cooler part of the day.

They are paying more than 100 dollars per person for the privilege of trekking deep into the bush to spend an hour with the world's last tribe of wild mountain gorillas. International Wildlife magazine reports the monies raised by these excursions helps preserve the gorilla's fragile habitat and protect the big primates from poachers.
