Outside Rain

Forecast for West Texas says mostly cloudy with scattered rain or showers through Monday morning and then a slow clearing late Monday. Highs today mostly in the upper 40s with overnight lows dropping to the 20s. Tuesday through Friday, partly cloudy with a slow warming trend. Highs 50s and 60s, lows 20s and 30s.

Shoppers out despite state, local economies

From staff and wire reports
If Christmas shopping is a reflection of economic health, Big Spring and Texas may be feeling a little better this season.

Malls and shopping centers were packed on what is traditionally the biggest shopping day of the year Friday, fueling optimism among retailers who hoped for similar crowds throughout the weekend.

"Friday was a real good day," said Diane Harrison, a merchandising assistant at the J.C. Penney Store located in the Big Spring Mall.

"Shopping has been real steady," she said.

A gain in sales over last year post-Thanksgiving business was reported by Gene Madsen, manager of Beall's Department Store, also located in the Big Spring Mall.

"I don't think the weather has been a factor in the increased sales," Madsen said, referring to the warm temperatures and clear skies that have prevailed locally during the past two days.

Sales at Wonder World also have increased when compared to the holiday shopping period one year ago, according to Richard Waters, a store supervisor.

Elsewhere in the state, store managers report similar sales

Water taps turned off at prisons

(AP) Tempers flared Saturday among Cuban inmates holding 120 hostages at two federal prisons they have controlled for nearly a week, and frustrated authorities said they cut off water supplies to try to end the stalemate.

One of the 1,100 Cubans inside the Atlanta penitentiary argued with another inmate by two-way radio and said he was ready to kill some of the 94 captives and later in the day a fire broke out in one section of the prison. The rioting inmates are protesting an agreement between the United States and Cuba that could return them to their homeland.

"I've got the rednecks (Americans) in here. We'll kill them all. We all have our knives out," the inmate said in Spanish to another Cuban, presumably of a rival faction.

One inmate was removed from the prison Saturday after being stabbed in a fight with another Cuban, said Michael Quinlan, director of the federal Bureau of Prisons. The inmate was treated at a local hospital and returned to a secure part of the prison. Authorities control an administration building and a cellblock where the man could be held.

Saturday evening, thick black smoke was seen pouring from the right side of the prison, and at least

Widening project prompts concern

By BILL FOSTER
Staff Writer

Having a highway on their front doorstep is something several Big Spring merchants along Gregg Street from 10th Street to FM 700 say they want to avoid.

Business owners on both sides of the roadway — except one — when questioned in an informal Herald telephone poll, said disadvantages of a proposed widening of the highway outweigh advantages.

Elimination of customer parking spaces in front of their stores, and potential loss of business while the road widening work is underway, were the two main objections raised by those merchants contacted.

A proposal to widen the 18-block stretch of Gregg Street seven feet on each side to allow for construction of a center turn lane were announced Nov. 17 by Bill Burnett, State Department of Highways District 8 engineer.

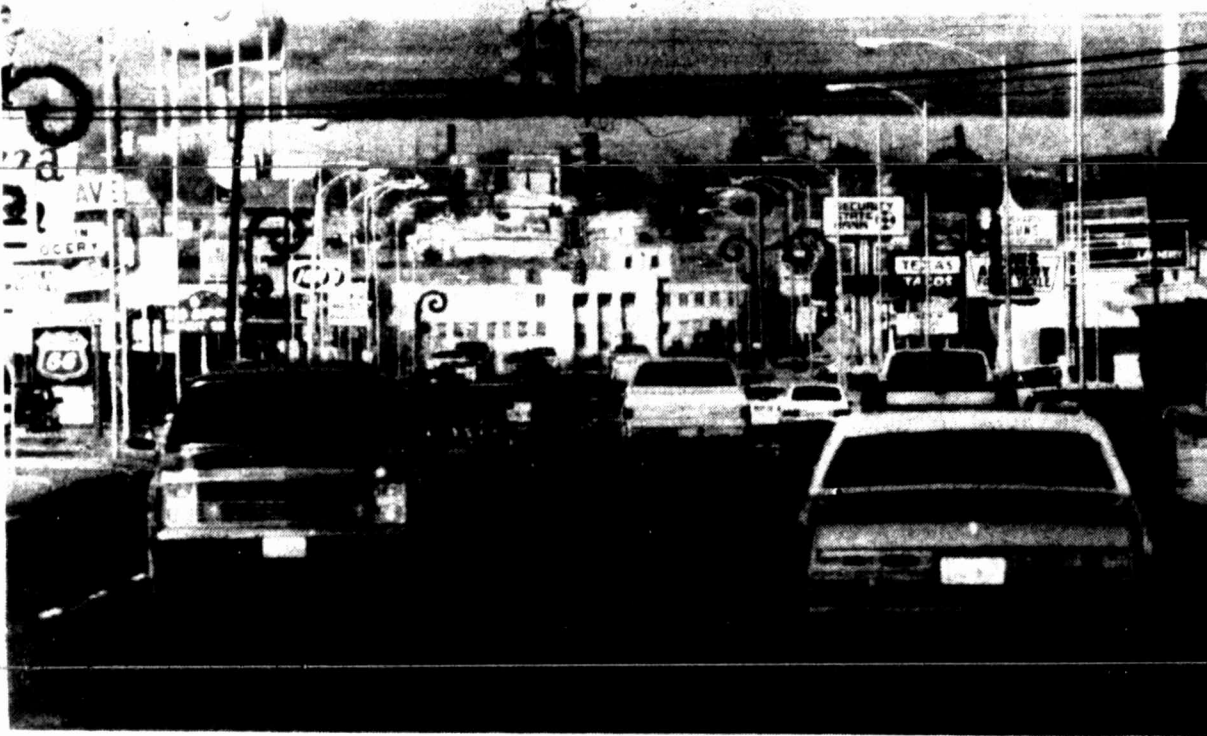

The widening is one of 12 Howard County road improvement projects for which $10.4 million in state highway funds have been allocated.

If embraced by Big Spring city officials, the Gregg Street widening would not start until late 1988 or early 1989.

Although the city would be required to pay the expense of relocating utilities, right-of-way purchases would be unnecessary because the state owns the land, according to Burnett.

When he made the announcement, Burnett indicated that the $750,000 project might spark some controversy. He was right.

A few business owners who would be directly affected the widening say they understand the long-range benefits of the project — improved traffic flow and reduction of the potential for accidents.

A total of 240 traffic accidents occurred between the 1000 block and 2700 block of Gregg Street from November 1985 through October 1987, according to statistics compiled by the Big Spring Police Department.

Those mishaps involved 489 vehicles and resulted in injuries to 88 people, according to police records.

However, despite the expected improvement of traffic conditions, those merchants contacted said they can't afford to lose business because of customer inconvenience caused by loss of parking and lack of access to their stores while the highway is under construction.

Mike Canatella, owner of Brown's Shoe Fit Co., 1901 1/2 Gregg, says he has "mixed emotions" about the proposed widening.

"Traffic flow would be improved, but it would take my parking," Canatella said.

Parking spaces at Canatella's store, like those in front of several firms along each side of Gregg Street, are directly off the roadway. There is only a few feet — in some areas a few inches — of clearance between the street and back of the parking spots.

"If my parking spaces are eliminated, customers would have to park in back of the store. That would be an inconvenience," Canatella said.

Pact to eliminate state-of-the-art nuclear arms

WASHINGTON (AP) — The missile pact awaiting superpower signatures will be the first to eliminate state-of-the-art nuclear arms. Supporters say it could lead to sweeping cuts of longer-range weapons while detractors fear it will pull the rug from under NATO.

Kremlin leader Mikhail Gorbachev is expected to arrive in Washington on Dec. 7 for a summit centered on the signing of the Intermediate Nuclear Force (INF) pact, eliminating all U.S. and Soviet missiles with ranges of 315 to 3,000 miles.

President Reagan and Gorbachev hail the INF agreement as a mutual victory that would eliminate about 2,200 nuclear missiles from Europe and Asia, about 3 percent of their arsenals, and might lead early next year to a pact that would slash overall superpower nuclear arsenals by 33 percent to 50 percent.

"I have been optimistic all along and even more so now that we could move from an intermediate-range treaty to a strategic treaty that would make the world safer," said Sen. John Warner of Virginia, the ranking Republican on the Armed Services Committee.

Although ratification is not certain, it appears likely that the INF agreement will win the 66 Senate votes needed. The previous U.S.-Soviet pact, the second Strategic Arms Limitation treaty, was signed in 1979 but chances for ratification ended after the Red Army invaded Afghanistan.

The latest round of INF negotiations were protracted, lasting more than 24 years and continuing even after the summit date was scheduled. In fact, it wasn't until last week that the treaty was finalized during two days of talks in Geneva between Secretary of State George Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze.

Shevardnadze called the treaty "a triumph of peace" and voiced hope that "a political thaw is starting which may lead to a change in the political climate on our planet."

"We are very pleased that we have this agreement," Shultz said.

Arms control backers like the INF treaty because it calls for the destruction of newly deployed missiles. By contrast, the SALT accords set a limit on the numbers and types of weapons that the superpowers could deploy, thus en-

Parade, tree lighting planned for Saturday

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

Official holiday celebrations will culminate Saturday with the annual Christmas parade, the tree lighting ceremony and a blood drive at the downtown area.

The parade will feature Santa Claus, Miss Merry Christmas Danelle Castillo and, as Grand Marshal, noted rodeo clown Quail Dobbs, according to parade chairman Lea Whitehead.

Bands from Big Spring High School, Coahoma High School, and Goliad and Runnels Middle Schools also will be featured in the parade. Midland/Odessa TV weathermen Fred Barnhill, J. Gordon Lunn and Rick Wells will serve as parade judges, Whitehead noted.

Plaques will be awarded to the top three entries in three categories, she added. The categories are: Church and civic, commercial and manufacturing and school/college.

The parade, sponsored by the Herald, will begin on Gregg Street and end in the vicinity of County Courthouse on Fourth and Main Streets.

In connection with the parade, United Blood Services will be conducting a blood drive at the Sparenberg Building, on Main Street across from the Courthouse, according to a release.

The donations will help community hospitals meet their blood needs during the holiday season. UBS, the blood supplier for the Big Spring area, is encouraging every healthy individual to participate, the report stated.

The east side of the courthouse will be the site of a tree lighting ceremony at 6 p.m. It is sponsored by the Downtown Steering Committee and the Big Spring Chamber of Commerce.

Walter and Frances Wheat of Wheat's Furniture will serve as emcees for the ceremony, and will be assisted by Castillo, according to information released by Teri Quinones, downtown coordinator.

Bauer Magnet Extended Day Music Students will provide music for the lighting, and Mu Zeta Sorority will have hot cider available. Luminarias, courtesy of ALSA, will decorate the square, the report added.

Currently, there are only enough lights to eventually light the entire square during the holiday season, donations of white, twinkling lights will be accepted, the report stated.

Persons interested in donating lights for future ceremonies can contact Quinones at 263-8311, extension 650, or Elaine Oliver at 263-3312.

The parade will culminate holiday activities, including the Community Luncheon Wednesday. Reservations for the luncheon must be made by noon Monday, Chamber officials said.

Family that defected left videotapes

HOUSTON (AP) — A couple who defected to the Soviet Union with their children last year left behind a videotape explaining their sudden move, the Houston Chronicle reported Saturday.

In a copyright story, the Chronicle reported that the videotape was discovered Friday in the couple's abandoned home by a house inspector when he checked behind some insulation in the attic.

Lauren and Arnold Lockshin say on the tape they are making the recording in case something happens to them. Several copies of the tape, labeled, "The Way We Were," are to be made, they say, so at least one will remain for their children.

The Lockshins and their three children fled Houston — leaving two cars in the driveway and numerous items inside the home — and flew to the Soviet Union Oct. 8, 1986. They now live in Moscow where Lockshin works for the national cancer research center.

On the tape and at the time of their defection, the couple said they were leaving because they had been persecuted in the United States for their communist beliefs. Lockshin claimed he had been fired from his $50,000-a-year job as a cancer researcher at the direction of government agencies.

Larry Busby, a real estate inspector, found the tape Friday while checking for termites in the attic of the Lockshins' former home.

"I was checking the insulation when I found it," Busby said. It was hidden along the outer wall between two joists, under the eave. Busby said he took the tape home and played it. He was astonished when Lauren Lockshin appeared on the tape and introduced the couple's three children as they all sat on a park bench. He immediately knew who they were.

"I'd seen them on the news," he said. Busby called a friend who is a local attorney, and they planned to turn the tape over to the FBI.

In the tape, the Lockshins claim to have firm commitments to political activists groups, the Communist Party and related organizations. But they say they became disenchanted and convinced that the organizations they had served for years were front organizations run by the FBI and CIA.

"We're going to make several copies for ourselves and for our children," Lockshin says on the tape.

"We're recording this in case something happens to us," Mrs. Lockshin adds.

Local fire

Big Spring firefighters probe through debris in the aftermath of a fire that caused an estimated $10,000 damage to a carport and living room at the Paul Plammet residence, 1106 W. Fourth St., Saturday. The blaze occurred when flames escaped from a faulty homemade fireplace, according to fire department reports. No one was injured in the fire.

Bill Draper, owner of Faye's Flowers, 1013 Gregg St., and Robert Chaney, owner of Chaney's Jewelers and Gifts, 1706 Gregg St., also expressed concern about the negative impact the project may have on business.

"With the economy like it is, I can't stand to lose the business during construction," Draper said.

"It (the widening) would kill my parking... the highway would run about three feet from my front door," Chaney said.

Other merchants who said that parking places in front of their stores would be eliminated if the highway is widened were Repps Guitar, owner of Dibrell's Sporting Goods, 1307 Gregg St., and Becky Brewer, assistant manager at Keaton's Kolor, 1309 Gregg St.

Evelyn Bender, owner of Miss Royale, 1509 Gregg St., was the only shop owner contacted who said the widening would not have a detrimental impact on her store.

Bender explained that customer parking at her shop is located directly south of the business and does not abut Gregg Street.

The widening proposal has not been presented to Big Spring City Council for consideration.

City Manager Mack Wofford has said that the highway work will not be done until city officials obtain extensive input from merchants along the roadway.

If Big Spring citizens and city officials decide not to proceed with the project, the $750,000 state funding will be allocated to another State Highway Department project, Wofford said.

The earmarked money cannot be used for any other project in the city, he said.

Prison riots

six Atlanta Fire Department trucks, including a hook and ladder truck, rushed to the scene.

U.S. Justice Department spokesman Thomas Stewart said the fire was in a segregation building formerly used to house inmates held in solitary confinement. He said firefighters were battling the blaze from a position away from the building, because it is an area now controlled by the Cubans.

Stewart said the fire apparently was started by inmates, but he would not speculate on their motive.

"Among the inmates there are people who want to destroy the entire prison," he said. "That's one of the many factions we're dealing with."

Authorities said earlier Saturday they had shut off the water to the Atlanta prison Friday, and the rioting inmates have not been given new shipments of food, Quinlan said. But a prison the size of Atlanta's normally would have enough food in house to last several weeks, another official said.

"We are asking for water," an inmate known as "Pepito" said in a radio conversation Saturday. Asked what authorities hoped to gain by cutting off food and water, Quinlan replied, "Quick resolution of this situation."

Water pressure in the prison has dropped since the inmates damaged much of the facility in their fiery takeover. Authorities were unsure how long the water remaining in the system might last the inmates.

Officials in Louisiana cut off gas, electricity, water and food supplies to the Federal Detention Center not long after the riot began there Nov. 21. Officials said they have restored electricity periodically so inmates could watch television reports on the incident, and that the center has electrical generators.

Officials also said the inmates apparently were collecting rainwater and had soft drinks available in the commissary. In addition, 40,000 pounds of meat was delivered to the center a few days before the riot.

The 950 inmates in Louisiana blamed federal officials for a breakdown in negotiations to free 26 hostages, and demanded that a Roman Catholic bishop be allowed to mediate talks.

"America do not be deceived. The (Bureau of Prisons) is delaying release by denying Archbishop San Roman from attesting to the agreement," said a red-and-white banner staked into ground in the Federal Detention Center near Oakdale.

Auxiliary Bishop Augustin Roman of Miami has said he was willing to join the negotiating team but prison officials have asked him not to.

"America we will release everyone when Archbishop Roman tells us the agreement is agreed. This is the only change with the agreement," read another inmate banner posted Saturday.

There are no plans to allow outsiders to participate in hostage negotiations with the inmates at either prison, Quinlan said.

"However well-meaning the offers may be, taking into the negotiations new third parties could well set back the negotiations," he said.

Prisoners seized their hostages in wild rioting that left one dead, 53 injured and the facilities severely damaged by fire and looting. Oakdale inmates have controlled the facility since Nov. 21.

MESQUITE (AP) — Suburban residents got a taste of the Wild West after 21 Brahman bulls broke out of a corral, romping across a freeway and well-manicured lawns.

Don Gay, an eight-time world champion bull rider, was preparing to show 26 students at Mesquite Rodeo Arena a film on bull-riding Friday when he learned that the prized animals, destined to be used in a bull-riding school, had broken a corral gate latch and escaped.

Gay pulled on his boots, jumped on his $10,000 pinto and rode bareback across a field. He was followed by arena workers and some of his students, who gave chase on foot and on horseback.

One bull made his way into a Mesquite subdivision and was roped in front of a half-million dollar home on Lakeshore Drive. "The family didn't mind at all.

They thought it was the Wild West right in front of their home," said bull-riding instructor Glen McIlvain, also a former rodeo champion. "They thought it was a private parade."

Two of the Brahman ran across the busy Lyndon B. Johnson Freeway where startled motorists slammed on their brakes, Gay said.

Some drivers pulled off the road to take photographs of the bulls lumbering across the freeway, Sergio Gonzales, one of Gay's students, said.

During the chase, Gay took a spill into a deep, muddy ditch, but neither he nor the horse was hurt and he rode on.

Beards show man henpecked

One theorist opines, "Most of the young men who wear beards were bossed around by their mothers and sisters. They grow whiskers because it's something women can't do."

In the 1890s, Josiah Bent of Milton, Mass., forgot to take his biscuits out of the oven in time. Got pretty crisp. So crisp, in fact, they cracked. So he coined the word "crackers."

The New York town of Naples is so proud of its local wine industry it painted its fire hydrants purple.

Q. Why does hot water weigh more than cold water?
A. Denser.

If you want to lose weight, take up aerobic flying. It's one of the most grueling sports. Curious, that. The athlete doesn't walk, run, jump, but just sits there. Yet said athlete can lose five to ten pounds in one competitive event.

When a pilot puts a plane through rolls, loops, spins, hammerheads and Immelmans, the high-negative high-positive G forces are incredibly punishing. Am told there are no overweight aerobic pilots.

Sea cows graze, too. They're vegetarians.

World's largest pyramid is unknown to most. Hardly anybody remembers it's name: Quetzalcoatl at Cholula de Rivadavia, Mexico. So Egypt gets credit Mexico deserves. "It's the name that's wrong," writes a client. "From now on, let's call it Juan."

Just 175 miles off San Francisco in an underwater volcano. Marine geologists who discovered it say its eight miles wide. A lot bigger than Mount St. Helens, that one. How lively it might become isn't known.

It's rarely mentioned that numerous fathers not only won't eat the mushy mixtures they feed to their infants, but won't even taste the stuff.

Those scholars don't go to college to get away from strenuous activity, that's clear — 67 percent of the U.S. triathletes are college graduates.

Q. How long does a mama elephant nurse her young?
A. Five years.

Police beat

Three burglaries, a vandalism, a break-in and a counterfeiting were reported to Big Spring police late Friday and Saturday.

• Mary Thomas, 100 Lincoln Avenue, told police someone entered her home and stole three rifles, three handguns, jewelry and $80 cash.

• Fourteen belt buckles, two money clips and candy bars, valued at $124, were reported stolen during a burglary at the Rainbarrel General Store, 1010 E. 11th.

• Norma Jean Woodruff, 1002 N. Main St., reported the theft of a television and a video recorder during a burglary at her home. The items were valued at $700.

• Gale E. Russell, 3709 Calvin Street, told police someone threw a rock and broke out the windshield of her 1986 Chrysler. Damage was listed at $400.

• Someone passed a counterfeit $20 bill at the Beall's Department, 1801 E. FM 700, according to police reports.

• David E. Heffington, 1508B S. Scurry St., reported that someone broke into his home. Nothing was reported missing.

Big Spring police also arrested two people Friday and Saturday.

• Trevor Scott Moore, 18, 2513 Carol St., was arrested on a charge of DWI. Moore was transferred to the Howard County Jail and released on $1,000 bond.

• Vincent Edward McVea, 17, 908 N.W. Second St., was arrested on charges of not having a driver's license, third offense, and not having automobile insurance, third offense. McVea was transferred to the Howard County Jail and released on bonds totaling $1,000.

C-City announces parade

COLORADO CITY — The annual Christmas parade, sponsored by the Colorado City Area Chamber of Commerce, has been scheduled for Saturday.

The theme is "Christmas Through the Eyes of a Child." The parade will begin at 5:30 p.m. at the courthouse on Oak Street and end at the First Baptist Church on Chestnut Street after traveling through the downtown area on Second Street.

Santa Claus will be at the gazebo at the Kiwanis Club Park following the parade.

Commercial entry winners will be awarded first, second and third place trophies. Organizational entries will be awarded prizes of $175 for first, $100 for second, and $50 for third. Individual prizes will be $20, $15, and $10, said Joe Freeman, parade chairman.

The Colorado City Lions Club annual chili day also will be Saturday at the Civic Center.

Deaths

Willie May Anderson

Willie May Anderson, 94, died 2:50 a.m. Friday, Nov. 27, 1987 in Scenic Mountain Medical Center after a lengthy illness.

Services will be 2 p.m. Monday in the Anderson Street Church of Christ, with Phillip Burcham, minister, officiating. Burial will be in Mt. Olive Memorial Park under the direction of Myers & Smith Funeral Home.

She was born Jan. 16, 1893 in Milford. She married W.G. (Bill) Anderson; he preceded her in death June 15, 1945. She had been a resident of Big Spring for more than 70 years, coming here in January 1917. She was a homemaker and a member of the Church of Christ.

She is survived by one son, J.V. (Andy) of Big Spring; two daughters, Mrs. Lester Thomas of Wichita Falls, and Mrs. Barney Edens of Big Spring; one brother, Zan Turner of Ballinger; two daughters-in-law, Maxine Anderson of Big Spring, and Eva Sue Anderson of Noble, Okla.; 11 grandchildren; 18 great-grandchildren; one great-great-granddaughter.

She was preceded in death by one son, W.E. (Pete) Anderson, Feb. 16, 1981.

Grandsons will be pallbearers including: Jimmy Anderson, Bill Thomas, Barney Edens Jr., Buster Edens, Dan Edens, Ronnie Anderson, and Donnie Anderson.

Tom Montgomery

ROTAN — Dr. Tom Montgomery, 54, Rotan, a former Big Spring resident, died at 12:05 a.m. Friday, Nov. 27, 1987, at his father-in-law's home after an extended illness. Graveside services will be 4 p.m. Sunday at the Rotan Cemetery with Rev. Fred Brown, pastor of the First United Methodist Church, Petersburg, officiating.

He was born June 1, 1933 in Big Spring. He served with the U.S. Army from 1955 until 1957. He married Shirley Bridges May 26, 1960, in Rotan. He was a 1955 graduate of Texas A&M and a 1963 graduate of Texas A&M veterinary school.

He was a member of the board of the American Board of Laser Surgery, and was founder and director of the Veterinarian Laser Institute. He was a pioneer in equine laser surgery.

He lived in Louisville, Ky., until moving to Rotan two months ago, and was a member of the St. Francis Episcopal Church in Louisville.

He is survived by his wife, Shirley, Rotan; two sons, Richard and William, both college students; one daughter, Pamela, also at college; his mother, Clem Montgomery, Big Spring; one brother, David Frank Montgomery, Paris; two sisters, Sue Balzer of Big Spring; and Sarah Lanham of Milledgeville, Ga.

The family requests memorials be made to Department of Surgery, University of Louisville, Louisville, KY, 40292.

President's peacemaking isn't just to bolster image

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's meeting with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev may bolster his battered image or help win him a place in history as a peacemaker. But those around him say that's not what matters most to him.

Reagan, they say, is motivated instead by a genuine desire to reduce the threat posed by the vast nuclear arsenals of the United States and the Soviet Union.

Even so, he remains willing to "walk away from" an unsatisfactory treaty to eliminate intermediate-range nuclear forces (INF), says White House Chief of Staff Howard H. Baker Jr.

Those around Reagan are stressing that he has already demonstrated he'll stick to his guns when it comes to pursuing peace.

The president, they point out, didn't renounce his own peace plan for Central America when Costa Rican President Oscar Arias Sanchez, who had crafted a rival peace proposal, won the Nobel Peace Prize.

Instead, Reagan stuck to the plan he put forth with House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, which puts tougher demands on the leftist Sandinista government of Nicaragua and seeks to curb or eliminate Soviet influence in the region.

Nor did Reagan accept Mikhail Gorbachev's demand for a sharp restriction on the Star Wars program to make a historic deal last year to slash strategic missiles by 50 percent. Rather, he held fast to his pledge to continue work on his prized Strategic Defense Initiative.

Yet there is no denying that the Reagan presidency needs the boost a successful summit would provide. The last year has been a succession of heavy blows — the loss of Reagan's power base in the Senate, the Iran-Contra affair, the stock market crash and the humiliating collapse of two Supreme Court nominations.

Presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater, bombarded by questions when the congressional Iran-Contra report was released, suggested the way the history books read on the Reagan years is not a major concern.

"The president commented the other day about history, that he's not looking to history. He's looking to do the best job he can for the remainder of his term, period," Fitzwater said.

A few days later, talking of the prospective arms treaty, the spokesman told reporters: "The president starts from the position that nuclear weapons are something that should be outlawed, they should be reduced, eliminated, ... that is a process that is a moral imperative."

This might explain why Reagan, who has built a career on baiting the "evil empire" is now pushing so hard for agreement on the INF treaty.

Reagan has talked of the moral imperative of the U.S. standing behind the "freedom fighters" resisting the Sandinistas.

It was a moral imperative that sent Reagan, empty-handed, down the steps of Hofdi House in Reykjavik that icy night in October 1986 after his meeting with Gorbachev. Reagan preferred missing an opportunity to deal with the Soviets to being forced to rein in "Star Wars" research and development.

"This, we could not do," he said. Nancy Reagan is believed by some to have high hopes for an arms control pact to ensure that her husband will be remembered as a statesman.

Treaty

couraging them to replace old systems with more accurate and destructive ones.

Liberals are lining up to support the INF pact, the first arms control agreement signed under Ronald Reagan, who built a career on Soviet-bashing. But it is getting a lukewarm response from moderates, like the chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, Sam Nunn of Georgia.

Nunn, whose vote will sway moderates among Democrats and Republicans, has warned that the pact removes a nuclear deterrent against possible attack by Soviet conventional forces, which outnumber NATO by a 2.5-to-1 margin.

Nunn has called for establishing a "psychological tie" so that "the Soviet Union will understand that we're not going to de-nuclearize Europe or even take a major step toward de-nuclearization of Europe until we make some tangible progress towards having a conventional balance there," Nunn told reporters recently.

Moderate conservatives, led by Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, argue that removing the missiles from Europe would eliminate one trigger assuring that the United States would and its NATO allies in the event of a Soviet attack.

With the U.S. missiles deployed in Europe and aimed at the Soviet Union, the Russians "would only attack Western Europe if they would be prepared to attack the United States," Kissinger said in a speech last month.

Extreme conservatives, led by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., oppose all forms of arms control with the Soviet Union. Reagan, they say, has accused the Kremlin of violating every previous arms control agreement, and they want him to insist on compliance with those before ratifying the INF pact.

The conservatives can muster about 23 votes to kill the treaty, short of the 34 they need, said the Democratic Whip in the Senate, Sen. Alan Cranston, who will lead the fight for ratification.

The ratification battle will climax a rancorous debate that began in 1977 with the deployment of Soviet SS-20 missiles. Each of the SS-20's carries three warheads, and with a range of up to 3,000 miles, is able to hit cities or military targets in Western Europe.

The North Atlantic Treaty Organization responded to the Soviet deployment by agreeing, in 1979, to base two new kinds of missile in Western Europe while seeking to negotiate the withdrawal of the SS-20's.

One of the missiles, the U.S. Pershing 2, with a 1,080-mile range, can deliver a nuclear punch directly on key Soviet military targets such as radar and anti-aircraft installations and forward aircraft and troop concentrations.

It is considered especially dangerous by the Soviets because it can reach its targets in about seven minutes, rather than the 20-30 minutes for other types of ballistic missiles. Thus it can, with virtually no warning, knock out defenses that would be critical to stopping subsequent NATO attacks.

The other type of missile deployed by NATO in response to the SS-20's was the Tomahawk ground-launched cruise missile. It has a range of 1,500 miles, and is designed to travel close to the ground, well below the speed of sound, hiding from enemy radar and delivering a charge with pinpoint accuracy.

The INF treaty calls for the elimination of the launchers, missiles and warheads for 108 Pershing 2, 256 Tomahawk and 441 SS-20 missiles.

Opinion

'English only' inappropriate

Texas Gov. Bill Clements has some good advice for the Texas Republican Party: Forget the GOP plan to ask voters in the 1988 primary to say whether they want to make English the official language of Texas and the United States.

In a voice vote, the State Republican Executive Committee decided to put the question on the March 8 ballot, even though State GOP Chairman George Strake admitted the "English only" issue is "sensitive." Mr. Strake did not even move tongue from cheek in adding that the vote is not meant as a slap at any ethnic group.

Gov. Clements knows better. He said the referendum "has racist overtones" and that he would vote against it. He pointed out, quite correctly, that Texas should not concentrate on an "English only" law but on increased education programs to help all Texans master English.

Strake argues that Republican approval of the plan will deliver a message to Texas legislators at least to consider an "English only" law. But the GOP will also be delivering a message to the people of Texas, particularly Hispanics, that cultural diversity and ethnic pride are not to be honored.

Two statewide polls this year showed more than 70 percent of Texans think English should be established as the state's official language. The American Ethnic Coalition unsuccessfully pushed for passage in the 1987 Legislature of an English First bill. Lou Zaeske of Bryan, chairman of the coalition, notes that 13 states, including California, have established English as their official language.

No one can really argue that English is not the language of Texas and the nation. There is no reason to trumpet the obvious in a referendum that can only engender bad will. Texas Republicans would be smart to listen to Gov. Clements — and remove the "English only" issues from their primary ballot.

Assailed aide survives Iran-Contra inquisition

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Elliott Abrams, who once seemed a sure bet to be forced from his key State Department post, appears to have survived his involvement in the Iran-Contra affair, but not without cost to his standing on Capitol Hill.

At the height of the controversy over Abrams six months ago, Democratic attacks on Abrams' credibility were relentless. Even President Reagan offered only tepid support for him, fueling suspicions that Abrams was on the way out as the top administration aide for Latin America policy.

But Abrams, known for his forceful advocacy of the Nicaraguan Contras, appears to have defied the odds against him and now has served longer — 2½ years — than his eight immediate predecessors.

Among administration officials most deeply involved in the Iran-Contra affair, only Abrams and Attorney General Edwin Meese III continue to serve in office.

Abrams' problems stemmed from two incidents in 1986. One was his denial of any U.S. government connection with a Contra resupply plane shot down in October of that year. Abrams later acknowledged his denial was "completely wrong."

His second credibility problem resulted from his admission in December 1986 that he had wrongly implied the administration had not sought third country assistance for the Contras. In fact, the Southeast Asian country of Brunei agreed to contribute $10 million to the Contras in August 1986 at Abrams' request.

The congressional Iran-Contra report released earlier this month was less critical of Abrams than some officials had expected. The eight Republicans who submitted a separate report containing a dissenting view said Abrams had been completely exonerated by the investigating committees.

Still, Abrams is regarded by some Democratic committee chairmen on Capitol Hill as so untrustworthy that they refuse to allow him to testify at committee hearings.

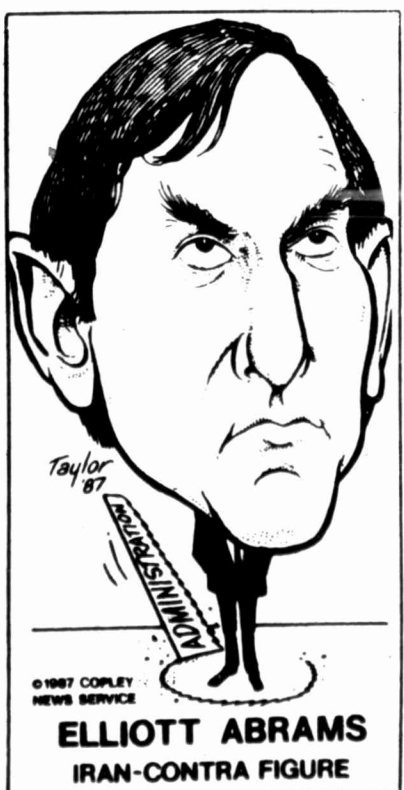

The chairman of one House Foreign Affairs subcommittee, Rep. George Crockett, a liberal Democrat from Michigan, has called Abrams the "lying assistant secretary of state."

When Abrams testified before the Iran-Contra committees in June, Sen. George Mitchell, D-Maine, said Abrams' ouster was "inevitable and inexorable."

Democratic moderates offered no comfort to Abrams. Senate Intelligence Committee chairman David Boren, D-Okla. said he felt that Abrams' usefulness had been destroyed.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., wondered whether Abrams should be asked each time he was called to testify whether he was authorized "to tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth."

Abrams has said he believes the attacks on him are part of the polarization that has resulted from Reagan's Nicaragua policy. He has said that enemies of the Contras try to undermine the policy by attacking him.

Wright's Nicaragua meetings may indicate understanding

By JESSE TREVINO

The Rio Grande Valley Airport in Harlingen is two days' driving time from Nicaragua, according to President Reagan. I was in that airport when I heard the first news reports about House Speaker Jim Wright's recent meeting in Washington with Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega.

It struck me as curious that Wright would expand his involvement in the Central American quagmire. Since those meetings caught him considerable flak for his active participation in matters the Constitution says are best left to the chief executive.

Just a few days after the Harlingen trip, I was on my way back to South Texas by car. Once you pass the needle of San Antonio's HemisFair Tower, the drive into South Texas provides plenty of time to think.

With the radio filled with White House criticism of Wright, my thoughts changed about Wright as I drove into an area that did much to change the thinking of another Texan, Lyndon Johnson. The Wright-Reagan dispute is not just a high-stakes game of power politics.

I am certain the current crippled condition of Reagan's administration offers some politicians who have chafed under the Reagan magic an opportunity to pierce the teflon. But I do not think these are Wright's intentions alone, although what he thinks about Reagan is widely known. Despite the political atmosphere in Washington these days and the easy criticism of Wright, this is more than just politics as usual.

For Texas, Jim Wright's ascension to speaker may be extremely important — especially regarding Central America. Perhaps, like Lyndon Johnson before him, Wright understands something most Texans do not. Something that has to do with Texas' future.

Johnson's world view changed mightily during his early years as a teacher in the dust-blown, poverty-ridden town of Cotulla in South Texas. Later, as president, he revved up legislative programs that pumped millions of federal dollars into the fight against poverty and despair in Texas.

The federal programs he directed changed the lives of many and affected Texas' political development at a crucial time. Where would Texas be if the attention Johnson focused on South Texas had not come at all?

His programs of education, health and nutrition helped mute serious ethnic rumblings that were being heard in South Texas at the time with the birth of the La Raza Unida party. Many problems exist in South Texas, but Johnson's programs made a difference.

Imagine that region of Texas coming alive politically today — as it did in the late 1960s and early 1970s — when things have soured economically and when the number of Hispanics is almost four times the number in 1963 when he became president.

Texas today might have been full of ethnic tensions at the worst time imaginable. Similar thoughts may be on Jim Wright's mind. Like Johnson, Wright may have a better understanding than most of what is happening in Hispanic Texas.

Wright, whose own congressional district was once the beginning of story book Texas with its cowboys and trail drives, may understand that the world for Texas can no longer stop at the Rio Grande and that our population and economy are changing dramatically. Others do not. Certainly the State Republican Executive Committee does not.

Its endorsement last week of the anti-Spanish language proposal reflects the thinking of a political party which denies the immutable geographic reality of 1,000 miles of border with Mexico. Some Hispanic Republican businessmen along the border may find it hard to understand that their party wants them to conduct their businesses only in English.

Jesse Trevino writes on Hispanic social and political issues.

Critical of council inaction

To the editor:

I left city hall (Tuesday) feeling somewhat disappointed — not surprised, but disappointed — that no action was taken in the area of a smoking ordinance. Some very reasonable-minded, sincere people, both pro and con, presented their views of freedom and rules pertaining to this matter. It was apparent that citizens on both sides of the issue could be persuaded to submit to some limitations on smoking areas.

The smoker usually does not appreciate how much an allergic person suffers and wastes his time moving from place to place to remove himself from the irritating area. It is extremely difficult for a polite person to ask someone to refrain from smoking near him, so he usually leaves without accomplishing his business.

The most uncomfortable I have ever been was when I was called for jury duty, involving a half day of enduring smoke in the hallways while waiting for selections, followed by a half day in the jury room with eight heavy smokers.

The second most offensive place to me is the beauty shop where most of the operators and about half the patrons are chain smokers in a small area. I do not have to be in that place. I have the freedom to patronize another beauty salon, but this is an example.

Fifteen years ago, smoke did not bother me. Now I am taking allergy shots for it. Many other citizens have experienced this situation, even some who are former smokers.

The City Council exhibited a provincial attitude in not facing this modern health problem, and more than one council member expressed a cavalier attitude toward some sincere, reasonable people who deserve a little more consideration than this. Maybe we will have to go to another city to buy groceries and use the medical facilities in order to be heard.

Traveler shows gratitude

To the editor:

I want to let the people of Big Spring know how fortunate they are to have three nice people in their community.

I was on a trip from Tucson, Ariz., to Louisiana and Nov. 11, about 20 miles north of Big Spring, my engine overheated. I finally made it into town and was directed to City Radiator, R.L. Metcalf, owner.

He looked, tested, and checked... He told me of a nice motel a few blocks away and advised me who to call about the truck to have it fixed. He even called Tony Lester (of Lester Automotive) and explained my situation.

The next morning Tony came to the motel and got the truck; what a pleasant young man. He gave me a quote on a price, which I was told by my nephews in Louisiana was right. Tony fixed the truck and treated us so nice.

It was a frightening thing to be out on the road in a strange town and have trouble. You hear so much about "rip-offs." We were lucky to have made it to Big Spring and go to the right people. It lets you know there are still honest people around.

Again I thank R.L. Metcalf of City Radiator, Tony Lester of Lester Automotive, and also his office help, Janice, she is a real asset to him.

Thank you for letting me express my thanks again to these people through your newspaper. We couldn't have been treated nicer or more fair.

We made the rest of the trip without further trouble. Thanks again.

Says thanks to merchants

To the editor:

The Forsan-Elbow Halloween Carnival was conducted Saturday, Oct. 31. It was a great success and the Community Club, teachers, parents and students were very pleased.

Our great success was partly due to the merchants of Big Spring, who so generously supported us by your cash donations and gifts to be used as prizes or raffles. A great big thank you to each of you from the Forsan-Elbow Community Club and the school district.

Friends, free cuts, winnings

By ROBERT WERNSMAN

Dale Henhaffer is learning that in addition to "no free lunch" there is also truth in the expression "no free haircut."

Henhaffer has been a lifetime friend of Karen Quittmeyer; they grew up near each other in Lindenwood, N.J. He has had the good, and bad, fortunes of success at an Atlantic City slot machine, to the tune of $327,000.

The result? Proof that money fogs memories, and friendships are fragile items these days.

Reports from Atlantic City inform us that Quittmeyer claimed ownership of the quarters Henhaffer stuffed in the machine at 4:30 a.m. February 5, 1984. It was one of these quarters that yielded the payload. Quittmeyer is so emphatic on the point, a jury of peers believes her — as well as a friend who was present and corroborates the story.

Quittmeyer and professional hair stylist Bill Hackett have been dating since their introduction by Dale Henhaffer years ago. Hackett and Quittmeyer have shared good times with Dale and Fran Henhaffer, and the two couples have enjoyed excursions on the Henhaffer's boat. In return, Bill has cut Dale's hair at no charge.

On the particular, early Sunday morning in question, Karen began winning small pots and accumulating a pile of quarters. Whose quarters were placed in the slot by Dale was in question. The matter wound up before a jury, not an altogether unusual development these days, and one-half hour of deliberation resulted in a verdict which divides the winnings into two equal shares of $163,000.

Admittedly, not a bad day's work, even if there are strange hours involved.

The problem at this point seems to be Henhaffer's beliefs. In fact, his dedication leads him to exclaim: "Share." No way I'm a man of principle.

While the story may be difficult to sort through 23 months after the fact, the jury appears to have acted on the basis of evidence which supported Karen's contention on the question of coin ownership. She had left her winnings behind, while she sought breakfast passes for the group.

Soon after she left, the bells began ringing and lights began flashing. All of this indicated, besides a bunch of dollars, the beginning of the end of a friendship.

One peculiarity in the case originated from the bathroom of the Henhaffer home.

Weeks after the jackpot was won, when the realization that a hoped-for share might not be forthcoming, Karen and Bill visited the Henhaffer residence. The trip was not fruitful. A second visit found Dale Henhaffer locking himself in the bathroom, although he finally consented to a private meeting with Bill.

This breakthrough, Bill says, came after he was "both screaming and trying to be nice." A difficult combination under the best of circumstances, but even more so when dealing with new-rich friends.

That meeting ended with Dale and wife talking privately in the bathroom and finally, "my wife verbally threw them out," he says. There is no record of Dale's attitude about the friendship before being split by bucks; however, he does recall that the other couple never had any money. "They were so cheap they squeaked," says he, a seemingly smug observation from a man who accepts free haircuts.

Now what? The next chapter awaits appeal to higher court. Until it is settled though, one can only hope that Dale's new barber settles for cash and tolerates a minimum discussion on principle.

Broker kills family, self

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — On Friday the 13th, John L. Markle walked into a video store and reserved a copy of "Nightmare on Elm Street," a film about a man who attacks and kills young people while they dream.

Three days later, on Nov. 16, police say, Markle, who had just been fired from the vice presidency of a major brokerage firm, scrawled some notes on a legal pad, picked up three pistols, and stalked through his Victorian mansion in the middle of the night, killing his two daughters, his wife and then himself.

Markle, 45, the son of Academy Award-winning actress Mercedes McCambridge, was brilliant, eccentric, loving, pessimistic, enthusiastic, family-oriented, friends said.

Markle was a vice president at Stephens Inc., the 15th largest brokerage in the United States, where he sometimes arrived at work in rumpled suits and white socks, on a motorcycle or in a battered pickup truck that he and his daughters had happily painted many colors.

Some associates said he was a genius. In recent months, though, Markle's economic forecasts had become so gloomy that one colleague had taken to referring to him as "Dr. Doom."

More Contra aid wanted

WASHINGTON — Rep. Tony Coelho, D-Calif., on Saturday said the White House — instead of promoting peace in Central America — is seeking new money for the Nicaraguan Contras so they can "step up the war."

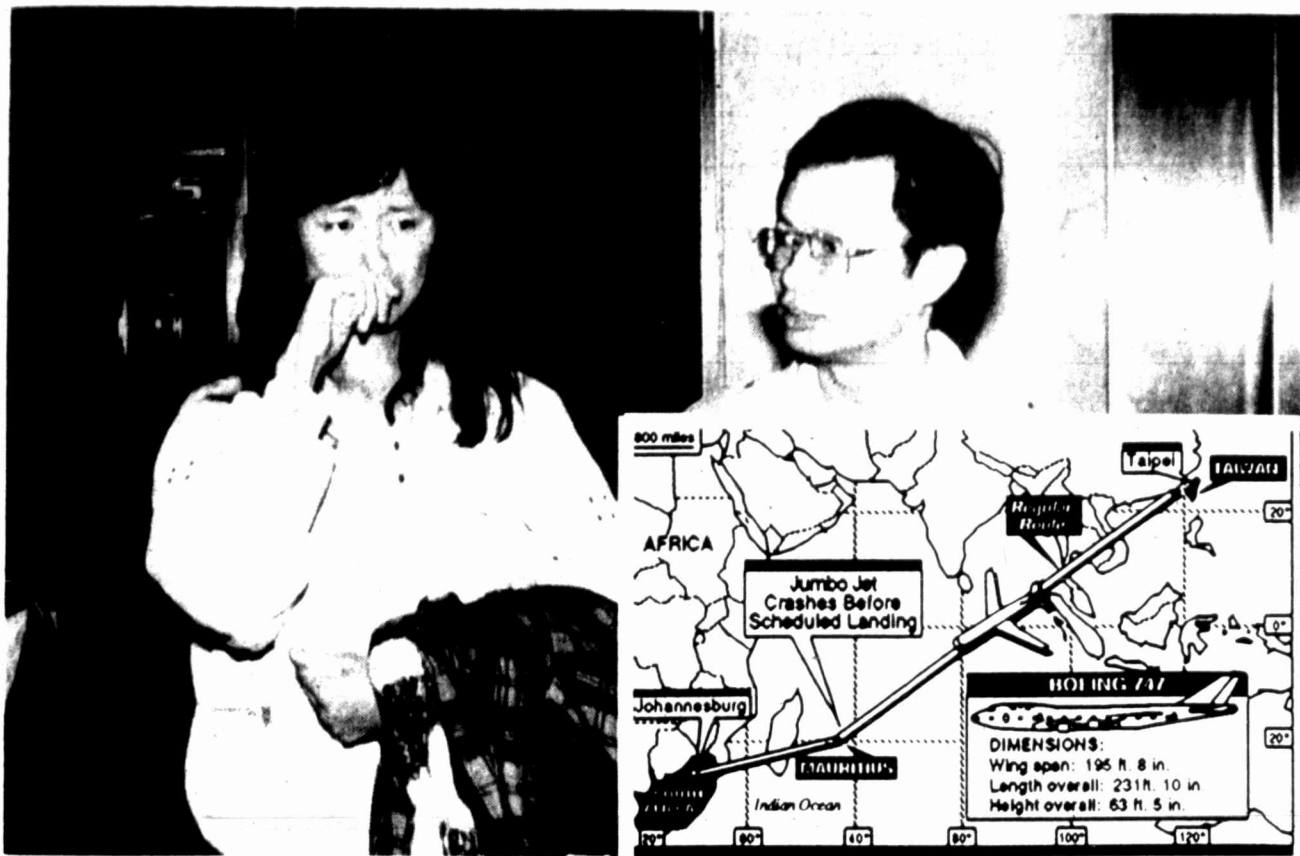

Coelho, delivering the Democratic response to President Reagan's weekly radio address, said Colin Powell, the president's new national security adviser, has played a role in the efforts to aid the Contras.

"This Thanksgiving week, the president's new national security adviser went to Congress demanding new money for airplanes, helicopters and supplies so that the Contras can step up the war," Coelho said.

Thousands mourn mayor

CHICAGO — Thousands of tearful mourners filed into City Hall throughout the night and into the gray, drizzly morning Saturday to pay their last respects to Harold Washington, the city's first black mayor.

And, in another sign of mourning, a riderless horse led the city's annual McDonald's Charity parade.

A Taiwanese woman, consoled by a friend, cries over the feared death of her father, Wu Chi-hui, a passenger aboard a South African Airways jumbo jet which reportedly crashed over the Indian Ocean Saturday. About 160 people were feared dead.

Plane crash

160 feared dead in Indian Ocean

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A South African Airways Boeing jumbo jet carrying 160 people crashed Saturday in the Indian Ocean near Mauritius after its crew reported smoke in the cabin and cockpit. All aboard were feared dead.

The jetliner crashed in early morning darkness minutes before it was to land at Mauritius for a refueling stop en route from Taipei to Johannesburg.

Another South African Airways plane sent to take rescue officials to the island radioed that wreckage was spotted about 130 miles from Mauritius. An empty life raft and a suitcase were seen, but no sign of survivors.

The passengers came from 11 countries. No Americans were reported aboard.

The airliner was on a regularly scheduled flight from Taipei and was due to land at Mauritius for refueling at 4:13 a.m. before resuming its flight, officials said. Mauritius is an island chain about 500 miles east of Madagascar, a much larger island east of southern Africa.

The cockpit crew last contacted the ground 10 minutes before the scheduled landing, when they told air traffic controllers about an emergency.

The plane "reported that it was doing an emergency descent from its flight level down to 14,000 feet because it had smoke in the cabin, smoke in the cockpit," Mauritius controller Servan Sing told The Associated Press.

He said the jet was cleared to begin an instrument landing system approach.

"It said, 'Roger.' It was going, moving for that, going to that point, and after that we had no contact," he said.

There was no immediate indication what caused the smoke.

Search boats were on their way through heavy swells to the site of the wreck. Officials said planes would rejoin the search at daybreak Sunday, trying to pick up the signal from the box containing the jet's flight data records.

The plane carried 141 passengers and 19 crew. The SAA office in Taipei did not release a full passenger list but said in a statement that those on board included 30 Taiwanese; 47 Japanese; 70 South Africans, including the crew; three from Hong Kong; two Australians; two Mauritians, and one person each from Britain, Denmark, Holland, West Germany and South Korea.

Airline officials said that in addition to 140 registered passengers and 19 crew members, a baby not on the register was taken on board in its mother's arms. The baby's nationality was not immediately available.

Two escape East Berlin

BERLIN — Two 22-year-old East Berliners fled to West Berlin by swimming across the icy waters of a canal, police in West Berlin said Saturday.

Police said the two men, drenched and cold, walked into a bar following their daring swim Friday. They were then taken to West Berlin police where they explained their escape, authorities said.

"I don't believe the other side (border soldiers patrolling in Communist East Berlin) even noticed the escape," said a spokesman for West Berlin police, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Iran makes U.S. threat

NICOSIA, Cyprus — Iraq reported its warplanes attacked a ship off the Iranian coast Saturday night and Iran said it will strike first at U.S. naval units in the Persian Gulf if Washington endangers Iran's regional interests.

Iraq reported its warplanes attacked a "large naval target" — a phrase that usually means an oil tanker. Baghdad's news agency said the jets scored an "accurate and effective hit" on the naval target, which was not identified further.

It was the third ship attack reported by Iraq in as many days.

Haiti election arrives

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — On the eve of national elections, volunteers scrambled Saturday to deliver ballots and the ruling junta reneged on its promise to fly election material to isolated districts.

Port-au-Prince was quiet but scattered violence continued in the countryside between supporters and opponents of the balloting.

The Haitian people's initial exhilaration over ridding the nation of the Duvalier dictatorship has been tempered by a climate of pre-election violence that claimed at least 28 lives last week.

Election board offices in La Chappelle, north of the capital, and Gressier, to the west, were burned Saturday, radio stations said.

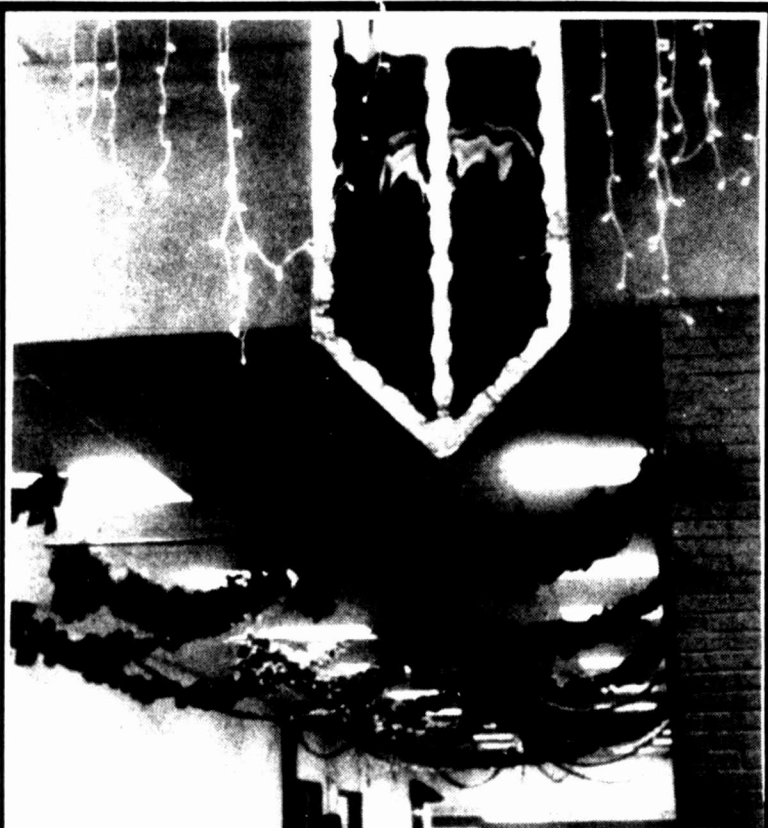

Treaty draws letters

MOSCOW — The official press said Saturday that the Soviet Embassy in Washington is receiving thousands of letters in support of the superpower arms agreement, but portrayed Soviets as questioning the goodwill of the U.S. government.

Newspapers carried editorials, letters and reports about the treaty banning intermediate-range missiles to be signed in Washington next month by Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev and President Reagan.

BIG SPRING

Inmates at the Oakdale federal detention center in Oakdale, La., post a sign directed at President Ronald Reagan Wednesday reading "Mr Reagan if you deny our freedom you kill us."

Atlanta pen always 'tough'

ATLANTA (AP) — Once primarily a lock-up for murderers, mobsters and moonshiners from across the South, the federal penitentiary here has been known as a "tough joint" by the prisoners who resided behind its thick, stone walls.

In recent years, however, the "Big A" has earned an especially terrible reputation.

Since the government began using the dilapidated, 85-year-old prison as a dumping ground for unwanted Cuban immigrants in 1980, penal officials say, Atlanta has become the most violent prison in the federal system.

In the past three years, 20 percent of all assaults on inmates or guards in the nation's 59 federal prisons have occurred behind Atlanta's walls. In 1985, according to the U.S. Bureau of Prisons, there were 21 armed assaults on guards in Atlanta — more than in all of the other federal prisons combined.

Through the decades, the 23-acre maximum-security prison — in the midst of a $40 million renovation program when rioting Cubans set parts of it afire on Monday — has held many infamous criminals, including Chicago ganglord Al Capone.

The penitentiary, located in a residential and industrial area of southeast Atlanta, stands alone when it comes to mayhem and malevolence.

"Believe me, man, that place is a real pressure cooker," a shaken guard said Monday afternoon as he stood outside the prison, watching the arrival of a military assault team.

The guard, who declined to give his name, said he fled in terror only a couple of hours earlier as angry Cuban prisoners began taking over the prison. He said he had been tipped off by some of the inmates whose rebellion eventually gave them control over 94 hostages and much of the prison compound.

"Some of them told me I'd better get out quick because something was coming down," he said. "It was either stand or run."

When the trouble began Monday morning there were some 1,600 inmates in the prison, including 1,400 Cuban detainees. In 1984, when Atlanta inmates staged an eight-hour riot, only 500 Cubans were held here.

The guard, one of 300 at the Atlanta prison, said he was on good terms with many of the Cubans, all of whom are being detained on indefinite hold by order of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service.

He said doesn't necessarily agree with the government's assessment that the Cuban prisoners are dangerous undesirables who should be locked up until they can be deported.

"The Cubans actually are a mixed bag," he said. "Some of them shouldn't be in prison; some of them should be."

Stanton yearling wins blue ribbon at exposition

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — The V Bar Ranch of Stanton was awarded the blue ribbon in the summer yearling bull class at the National Hereford Show held during the North American International Livestock Exposition in Louisville. The winning bull was V Bar L1 Dom 19619.

The Hereford competition at Louisville was the strongest and best in several years with 95 head shown representing 57 owners from 15 states, according to a release from the American Hereford Association.

Jeff Brandenberger of V Bar Ranch, Stanton, is the owner of the reserve calf champion female at the national Hereford show held during the North American International Livestock Exposition in Louisville.

The winning heifer was V Bar Encore 30614 and had earlier won the first place award in the winter heifer calf class.

The judge, Dr. Jarold Callahan, Oklahoma State University, Stillwater, repeatedly complimented the breeders on their quality exhibits.

Cleaning offer brings bonanza

FINDLAY, Ohio (AP) — A dry cleaner who offered to clean used coats and distribute them to the needy said Friday he was overwhelmed by the response.

"We're just going to work more hours than we thought we would," said Paul Kramer, owner of City Laundry and Dry Cleaning Co. in Findlay, a city of 35,000 people. "We're going to go into three shifts to clean these coats for Christmas."

Kramer said his business began advertising for coat donations about two weeks ago. He had expected 500 coats, but by Friday had at least 5,000.

"The vast majority of them are in excellent shape," he said. "We have some brand new coats, some fur coats."

Kramer said his company, founded in 1944, would donate the cleaning supplies and facilities, and some of his 82 employees had volunteered their time. He declined to estimate the amount of the donation.

Timeline: U.S. Hostages in Lebanon

Fifteen Americans have been kidnapped in Beirut since March 1984 when Jeremy Levin was captured. Levin escaped and others have been released, but eight remain captive, including Terry Anderson who has been held the longest.

Hostages

Syria-Iran link key to freedom

By ED BLANCHE
Associated Press Writer

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — What led up to the release in Beirut of French hostages Jean-Louis Normandin and Roger Augue is shrouded in mystery, like previous such releases.

But the fate of 21 other foreigners still missing in Lebanon appears to hang increasingly on the sensitive relationship between Syria and Iran.

Most of the missing men are believed held by Iranian-backed Shiite Muslim militants and have become Iran's ace in the hole in a macabre poker game with Syria over Lebanon.

Moderate Arab leaders are trying to get Syrian President Hafez Assad to sever ties with Iran in hopes that might help end the 7-year-old Iran-Iraq war.

Twenty of the missing include eight Americans, four other Frenchmen, two Britons, a West German, an Italian, an Irishman, an Indian and two unidentified foreigners. Some, including Terry Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent of The Associated Press, are in their third year of captivity.

In addition, there is Church of England mediator Terry Waite, who vanished in west Beirut Jan. 20 after he left his hotel to keep a rendezvous with a Shiite faction holding two Americans hostage.

Normandin and Augue were freed Friday night by their kidnapers, the pro-Iranian, Shiite Revolutionary Justice Organization, two weeks after Syria joined other Arab states at a Jordan summit to condemn Persian Iran for continuing the Persian Gulf war and occupying parts of Iraq.

But Assad has shown no clear sign of breaking with Tehran, which has become increasingly isolated for failing to embrace a United Nations cease-fire resolution.

Releasing hostages into Syrian hands is one way of keeping Assad on Tehran's side. It allows him to refute allegations that he supports terrorism, charges that have in the last few years soured his relations with the West.

But there is another, darker side.

Syria's relations with Iran have been strained in recent months, mainly over a growing challenge to Syrian power in Lebanon by Iranian-backed Shiites.

The secular Syrians consider Lebanon their turf: Assad sent 7,500 commandos into Moslem west Beirut in February to end three years of militia anarchy.

But fundamentalist Iran wants to create another Islamic Republic in Lebanon, where the million-strong Shiites are the largest sect.

Most of the hostages are believed to be held in Beirut's Shiite-controlled southern slums. Assad fears that moving against Lebanon's Shiites would put the captives' lives in jeopardy.

The hostages are also part of a wider complexity, demands made by the Shiite factions to foreign governments for major policy changes that would favor Iran or for the release of terrorists held by them.

The Revolutionary Justice Organization said in a statement that Normandin and Augue were freed in response to "assurances by its friends that France will fulfill its promises in the near future."

The statement did not spell out what that involved. But Revolutionary Justice has in the past demanded that France halt all arms shipments to Iraq.

France has supplied Iraq with advanced weaponry totaling more than $5 billion, including Mirage F-1 fighter-bombers and Exocet missiles that have wreaked havoc with tankers carrying Iran's vital oil exports.

The French have signaled in the past that they will not halt arms sales to Baghdad.

"Iraq's foreign debt is $50 billion because of the war and the French know they can kiss goodbye to the money owed to them if Iran wins," a Western diplomat in Baghdad told the AP recently.

In March, when Revolutionary Justice threatened to kill Normandin if France did not clarify its Middle East policies, French President Francois Mitterrand said he would consider a pardon for convicted terrorist Anis Naccache if "all the hostages were turned over."

Naccache is serving a life sentence in France for a 1981 attempt to assassinate former Iranian Prime Minister Shahpour Bakhtiar in Paris.

A well-connected Syrian source in Damascus noted after Friday's release that "this happy result comes from intensified efforts by Syria and by Iran, at the request of French Foreign Minister Jean-Bernard Raimond," who visited Damascus last month.

The source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Assad discussed the issue with Iranian Prime Minister Hussein Musavi when Musavi visited Damascus. A week earlier, Raimond was in town.

Exactly what the French agreed to do to get their citizens out of captivity is not known.

Official vows to hunt missionary slayers

HARARE, Zimbabwe — The nation's top police official on Saturday inspected the farms where 16 white missionaries and children were hacked to death by a murderous band, whose leader he vowed to capture "at all costs."

A witness to the worst attack on whites since Zimbabwe's 1980 independence told Saturday of how the attackers used axes against their bound victims, and how they bashed a 6-week-old boy against a kitchen sink until he died.

Killed were seven women, five children and four men.

John Russell, who was away at the time of the massacre, became the only surviving adult member of the Pentecostal Christian commune called Community for Reconciliation. He said he would abandon the two homesteads, called New Adam's and Olive Tree.

Home Affairs Minister Enos Nkala, who is in charge of police, said after being shown the massacre site by armed police: "We want Gayigusu at all costs. We want his head."

"It is a matter of time before we get him," Nkala said after inspecting the two farms southeast of Bulawayo, the province's administrative capital.

Nkomo, on a private visit to England, condemned the massacre as "dastardly and callous." He suggested it was aimed at wrecking talks he has been holding with Prime Minister Robert Mugabe aimed at merging the nation's two main political parties.

Missionary's daughters Glynis (left) and Deborah Keightley were killed in Zimbabwe. Sixteen victims were axed to death.

Nkala said the victims were axed to death after their hands were tied behind their backs and were left in the two burning houses.

Mrs. Esinathi Dube, a black domestic employee of the missionaries, told him she witnessed the killings.

"The first to be axed was Mrs. Russell, who was also chopped five times," she said, referring to Mrs. Hazel Russell, 46, a white Zimbabwean and John Russell's wife. "Then they called the Marais family into the kitchen one by one and chopped them with an ax while their hands were tied behind them."

A 6-year-old boy escaped before the slaughter and a girl of 13 was released to carry a note to authorities denouncing the Mugabe government. Two of the victims were Americans.

bia; Miguel de la Madrid, Mexico; Eric Arturo Devalle, Panama; Alan Garcia, Peru; Julio Maria Sanguinetti, Uruguay; Jaime Lusinchi, Venezuela.

U.S., Soviet journalists to share center for press

WASHINGTON (AP) — A combined media center for U.S., Soviet and other journalists is being set up for the Dec. 8-10 summit.

Reagan administration officials said Wednesday that both the White House and Kremlin will set up shop for print media in the J.W. Marriott Hotel with broadcast media facilities at the Commerce Department, across Pennsylvania Avenue from the hotel.

At the 1986 summit between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev in Reykjavik, Iceland, the United States, Soviet Union and the host country established separate media centers in different parts of the city, complicating coverage.

Michael Weil, a Marriott manager, said final agreement was reached Wednesday for using the hotel and "we are now in the process of coming up with a game plan" to handle the more than 5,500 journalists expected to cover the summit.

Jim Pope, a spokesman for the U.S. Information Agency, said the State Department and the White House have lined up several high-level briefings during the summit.

A White House official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said that although the "Soviets have the option of doing whatever they want, they have indicated that they will use the main center."

Officials at the Soviet Embassy were not answering their telephone Wednesday and could not be reached for comment, but they said earlier this week that they also planned extensive briefings for journalists during the summit.

In the past, the Soviets have held news conferences at their embassy on 16th Street, near the White House, but space there is limited.

"One of the reasons that we have made it clear that the Soviets have the option to do whatever they want here is that we want our options open in Moscow," said the official, referring to a possible summit next year in the Soviet capital.

Latin leaders discuss mutual debt woes

ACAPULCO, Mexico (AP) — Eight Latin American presidents bemoaned their region's crushing debt problem today and called for united action to save their devastated economies and societies threatened by social unrest.

One after another, the Latin leaders spoke of "unjust international economic relations," "unequal distribution of riches," and "debilitating debt" in opening speeches of their two-day summit.

President Jaime Lusinchi of Venezuela said the nations of Latin America, like other underdeveloped countries, are suffering "the results of unjust international economic relations."

"These are manifested in constant deterioration of terms of exchange, the monopoly of new technologies, the imposition of tax barriers to our products, the arbitrary management of international financing, the manipulation of markets for primary materials, and particularly dramatic, the grave problems of foreign debt," he said.

President Virgilio Barco of Colombia said crushing debt service payments have forced many Latin American countries to "put aside carefully prepared plans" for development.

"Complicating this even more, the basic export products of many states, once strong sources of income, are strongly punished by preferences and duties that make exporting practically impossible," Barco said.

"All of this precipitates and generates social and economic problems that take advantage of those trying to substitute stability for chaos, democracy for dictatorship and liberty for totalitarianism," he added.

The presidents are meeting in this Pacific resort to begin search for a common approach to their foreign debts, a problem that has stunted their nations' economies, led to social unrest and in some cases threatened their governments.

On his arrival Thursday, President Alan Garcia of Peru said, "Foreign debt is the most dramatic danger that troubles the economies of our people. It constitutes the greatest challenge and also ... could cause a historic rebellion of the people of the continent. Now is the time for Latin America to act."

Garcia set the tone for the meeting at this Pacific coastal resort Thursday, calling on his colleagues to "stand up to the dictatorship of a single world currency," a clear reference to the U.S. dollar.

Garcia has earned the enmity of international lenders by limiting payment of Peru's $14.5 billion debt to 10 percent of its export earnings.

The presidents began their discussions Thursday evening at a private dinner at the plush Las Brisas Hotel overlooking Acapulco Bay.

They were greeted individually at the city's seaside airport by President Miguel de la Madrid of Mexico, given a 21-gun salute by a battery of army howitzers, and driven to their mountainside hotel. Their informal dinner excluded even their closest aides.

Formal talks started at mid-morning today with an inaugural session at which each of the eight made a public statement. Thereafter, all discussions will be behind closed doors until the summit ends Sunday morning with a joint declaration.

President Jaime Lusinchi of Venezuela said the eight shared a common interpretation of "social and economic development, the debt, obstacles to trade, the lack of technology transfers and our cultural isolation." He said all those matters would be discussed.

De la Madrid and Presidents Jose Sarney of Brazil and Raul Alfonsín of Argentina, whose countries are the leading debtors with outstanding loans totaling $270.7 billion, are expected to call for more favorable repayment terms from their lenders.

That could take the form of a demand for new debt repayment schedules tailored to each country's ability to pay, based on fluctuations in gross national product and other factors. Together the eight nations owe $343 billion and their economies vary from battered to devastated.

In Washington, any Latin American pleas for debt restructuring will have to compete with U.S. concern over its own massive trade imbalance, huge budget deficit and shaky stock market.

Pecan is in nutcracker grip of low prices

Pity the poor Texas pecan. Caught in the nutcracker grip of low prices and high labor costs, it is likely to lie on the creek bank until it rots.

By NELSON ANTOSH
Houston Chronicle

HOUSTON (AP) — Pity the poor Texas pecan. Caught in the nutcracker grip of low prices and high labor costs, it is likely to lie on the creek bank until it rots.

The native pecan is one of several holiday foodstuffs that have experienced large price drops, with some approaching half what they were two years ago. Prices are down for walnuts, almonds, turkeys, chickens, lambs and hogs. Even Christmas trees may be a bit cheaper than last year.

The bonanza for consumers is in most cases the result of overproduction, the economic consequence of better prices in previous years. Turkey may fall as low as 29 cents a pound in some supermarkets, according to a grower spokesman. That is roughly the equivalent of gasoline at 35 cents a gallon.

Texas turkey raisers seem to have dodged the bullet, at least to some extent, but growers of pecans are about as unhappy as oilmen would be to hear that price.

The small, hard-shelled native nuts that make up about 75 percent of the state's production are bringing growers 25 to 30 cents a pound at the same time the Legislature is requiring a minimum rate for pickers of 19 cents a pound.

In recent days, prices have edged up to 30 cents, but that remains a fraction of last year's 70 cents a pound for similar pecans. And in 1986, the minimum piece rate for harvesting pecans was 8 cents a pound.

The Texas Department of Agriculture set the rate at 19 cents as a consequence of the Legislature hiking the minimum wage for agriculture workers to $3.35 per hour, effective Sept. 1, from $1.40 an hour. TDA attorney Olga Moya said the 19 cents is calculated on a formula that says a person can pick 17.82 pounds of pecans an hour.

A big complaint is that the rate for large, grafted pecans is the same as the rate for small native types, says Norman Winter of College Station, executive vice president of the Texas Pecan Growers Association in College Station.

The new rate makes it unprofitable to pick up native pecans, while it gives workers "a fortune" for picking up the large types, said Winter. And paying by the hour isn't an alternative because it doesn't get the nuts harvested, he said.

The reaction of growers includes "unfair" from Kenneth Pape of Seguin, "ridiculous" from Errol Dietze of Cuero and "foolish" from DeWayne McCasland of Goldthwaite.

A certain percentage of the smaller nut goes unharvested every year, depending on the economy. Last year, for example, the U.S. pecan crop forecast was 209 million pounds as of September. Prices were high, and by the time the last nut was picked the total harvest was up to 272 million pounds.

The small, hard-shelled native nuts are bringing growers 25 to 30 cents a pound at the same time the Legislature is requiring a minimum rate for pickers of 19 cents a pound.

Where possible, growers are switching to mechanical harvesters. One limitation is that machines can't operate on hilly or brushy land, said Winter. In Georgia, where this year's crop is so large that it takes much of the blame for the year's price collapse, almost all the pecans are harvested by machine.

The price to growers for grafted pecans is close to the norm of around $1 a pound, said Winter. At retail, these nuts will probably be 20 cents to 30 cents a pound cheaper than last year, said spokesmen for the two pecan houses in Richmond, LeBlanc's and R.B. Bagley &

Sons.

"There is a big crop of nuts all the way around, thank goodness," said Leon Cooper, owner of the Houston Pecan Co. Almonds that retailed for $3.70 a pound last year are going for $2.30, he said.

In the poultry category, the wholesale price 12-pound turkey hens has plunged from 91 cents in 1985 to 82 cents in 1986 to 55 cents a pound in mid-November, quoted FOB New York delivered to the grocer's warehouse. During that same time span, the price of 18-pound tom turkeys has fallen from 99 cents to 53 cents.

One Houston supermarket chain is already offering frozen turkeys at 65 cents a pound, another has smoked turkeys for 89 cents, while a small-town supermarket has been selling frozen turkeys for 49 cents a pound.

"I suspect we'll see some pretty wild prices this year," said Lew Walts, executive vice president of the National Turkey Federation. "I've heard that some Northeast stores are running specials at 29 cents a pound."

Lower prices for feed ingredients such as corn, milo and soybean meal have "mitigated some of the pain you would expect," said Herman T. Wilson Jr., the vice president and chief operating officer of Granada Foods, a division of the Houston-based Granada Corp.

Granada's turkey farms and slaughter plant at Fredericksburg, which go under the Sunday House label, make up one of two remaining large turkey operations in Texas. The other is Plantation Foods in Waco.

Granada and Plantation have almost gotten out of selling turkeys as a commodity — "turkey in a bag" — which is where the big price decrease has occurred, said Wilson. Instead, they have switched to making products such as turkey ham, turkey bologna, and turkey franks. Because buyers are paying mostly for convenience, prices of these items have gone down a little.

Analysts pessimistic about sales

NEW YORK (AP) — "Fallout from the stock market crash and a slowdown in November sales have made some retailers and analysts gloomy about the crucial Christmas shopping season, which officially opens Friday.

"People have been extremely pessimistic," said Jeffrey B. Edelman, an analyst with Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. "Consumer spending is drifting sideways."

"I don't think there's reason for alarm, but I don't think there is reason to be ebullient," said Edelman, predicting sales would be "mediocre."

"I think it's going to be lousy," said Robert Buchanan of L.F. Rothschild & Co. Inc. "I think the consumer is not in a buying mood because of very meager growth in real disposable income along with a dose of fright caused by the stock market crash."

Buchanan said sales could actually decline after being adjusted for inflation.

Consumer spending has been slow all year while Americans paid off heavy installment debt. But with spending remaining sluggish in recent weeks, analysts and retailers have become not just cautious, but concerned.

The Christmas season is critical for retailers because they make half their annual profits from holiday shopping. It's also crucial for the economy, because consumer spending accounts for two-thirds of the gross national product.

The $500 billion stock market crash worsened the situation, analysts said. However, noted Lawrence Chimere, president of Wefa Group, a private economic forecasting service in Bala Cynwyd, Pa., "there was very little chance this was going to be a boomer of a Christmas" even before the Oct. 19 crash.

Chimere predicted consumers may limit the cost or number of their purchases, but a survey by the Conference Board, a business research organization, indicated Americans don't plan to cut back their Christmas spending.

Retailers confirmed that sales have been slow this month. Julian Taub, a vice president at upscale Bloomingdale's, said store officials reported lower sales growth.

And at Wal-Mart Stores Inc., the discount chain that had seen explosive sales growth, early November sales "were not up to our expectations," said spokesman Jack Shewmaker.

Both retailers said they remained optimistic about Christmas.

Spindletop

Would-be heirs still seek wealth

Dallas Times Herald Bureau
DALLAS — The Spindletop mystique refuses to die, 86 years after a gusher at the great oil field near Beaumont ignited Texas' first oil boom.

Although Spindletop is almost played out, thousands of would-be heirs to billions of dollars in royalties continue to come forward, certain they are on the verge of staggering wealth.

Some have spent years digging into their family histories; others are operating on what a great-aunt once told a second-cousin. All believe there is a chance, however remote, that they are related to Pelham Humphries, the original owner of land atop the oil-rich Spindletop salt dome.

The Spindletop saga is a delight for conspiracy buffs. There is talk that bribery and even murder have been used throughout the years to silence potential Humphries heirs.

"Folks have been killed over this, you know," said one Fort Worth woman, who believes she might be a descendant and doesn't want her name disclosed. "I've heard about it since I was a kid. People would go hunting and they wouldn't come back."

Bryan Humphries, a 35-year-old real estate appraiser from Dallas, conceded he will be taking a "stab in the dark" if he proceeds with plans to pay an English genealogy firm $750 to find his roots.

"It's a roll of the dice," he said. "If nothing else, I'll have a chart of my lineage."

As best as anyone can determine, Pelham Humphries moved to southeast Texas from northern Tennessee in the early 1830s, about the time Sam Houston — another Tennessean — arrived. The Mexican government in February 1835 granted Humphries about 4,400 acres in what is now Jefferson County; it was the land on which the major Spindletop strikes would be made the following century.

Humphries is believed to have been shot to death in a Nacogdoches boarding house in September 1835. His self-professed heirs say all sorts of fraud and blundering occurred after Humphries' death and that legitimate claimants to Spindletop royalties suffered as a result.

To date, however, no one has been able to convince a judge that they are related to Humphries and, therefore, is entitled to a cut of the bonanza. Most students of Spindletop doubt anyone will.

"I have long puzzled over why there is still such interest in this," said David Hartman, assistant director of the Spindletop Museum at Lamar University in Beaumont. "I suspect fully that these people — these heirs' with their pie-in-the-sky dreams — are creating a pattern based on a legend that simply doesn't exist."

At least 15 lawsuits alleging denial of royalties have been filed against various oil companies over the years. None has succeeded.

Just last August, a federal judge in Beaumont dismissed a suit filed against five oil companies — Amoco, Mobil, Phillips, Texaco and Gulf — by Tennessee hog farmer John Howard Meadows and about 18,000 of his relatives. The plaintiffs claimed they were related to wildcatter James Meadows — also spelled Meadows — who supposedly was given a one-eighth interest in the Spindletop field by the mining engineer who drilled the first big well, Anthony F. Lucas.

Yet those pursuing the Spindletop fortune remain undaunted.

Brown Perego, a retired construction superintendent who lives in Gray, Tenn., leads a group called the Humphries Heirs Trust Association. Perego said the association has 7,500 members who paid $150 apiece to become part of an impending lawsuit against oil companies — including Shell, Texaco, Gulf (now Chevron), Phillips and Exxon — that may have reaped profits from the field.

The original Spindletop well spurted 84,000 barrels a day; last year, according to the Texas Railroad Commission, the entire field produced just under 750,000 barrels.

"I feel 100 percent confident that we will be able to prove who the heirs of Pelham Humphries are," Perego said in a recent telephone interview. "We think the estate could be worth as much as $100 billion to $200 billion." The suit should be filed early next year, he said.

For the past month, Perego has been touting the findings of English genealogist Harold Brooks-Baker, who claims to have proved that Pelham Humphries had a brother, William. Whether Pelham Humphries had any siblings has long been a matter of debate.

Brooks-Baker said he has found "about a dozen" descendants of William Humphries. "We can prove a handful and we hope to prove many more," he said. "I would think things look rather rosy for the first time in 80 years."

Brooks-Baker is the publishing director of Burke's Peerage, a London firm that publishes books on the genealogy of the British aristocracy. The firm, retained by Perego and about 400 other purported Humphries heirs, spent more than a year doing detective work.

"We are now able to prove that several members of this greater family are ... descendants of Pelham Humphries," Brooks-Baker said. People who previously claimed to have the same ancestral ties weren't taken seriously, he said, because they lacked the money and documentation to put up a vigorous legal fight.

"It seems never to have occurred to many of these people that if you go into court to prove something, you first have to prove who you are," Brooks-Baker said.

Slim pamphlet offers guide to job, education in peace

AMHERST, Mass. (AP) — Five schools worked together to produce a pamphlet to provide a career and education guide for students of peace.

The $3.50 guide, available from Hampshire College, was written for the hundreds of students who are signing up for courses in arms control, conflict mediation and social and economic development.

"The Guide to Careers and Graduate Education in Peace Studies" is the work of the Five Colleges Program in Peace & World Security Studies, founded in 1983 by Amherst, Hampshire, Mount Holyoke and Smith colleges and the University of Massachusetts.

"In many cases ... these students have been hampered by a lack of information about these options, or by worries that very few such opportunities exist," wrote Hampshire College President Adele Simmons in the guide's introduction. "This, in fact, has proved to be a major obstacle to further growth in this field."

The guide gives tips on internships and fellowship grants and surveys graduate programs in this country and abroad. It also occasionally offers advice, such as the following:

"As representatives of the U.S. government, Peace Corp volunteers are placed in countries and regions according to the dictates of U.S. foreign policy — not necessarily in areas where the need is greatest."

Committee questions paintings' authenticity

NEW YORK (AP) — The authenticity of at least eight works by Rembrandt will be called into question when a research committee's new findings are published, the December issue of ARTnews magazine reports.

The eight works, all held in Great Britain, were scrutinized by the Rembrandt Research Project, a 20-year-old continuing study by a committee of five experts.

The findings, which could affect the value of the paintings, are not yet public. However, the magazine said it had learned that the works in question are "Landscape with Coach" from the Wallace Collection and seven others in the National Gallery.

"The committee is giving us a much leaner Rembrandt than we have had in the past. The number of paintings it will accept as his is expected to total 350, half the number (that) one scholar attributed to him early this century," said ARTnews' editor-at-large Sylvia Hochfield, who wrote the story.

"The Rembrandt Research Project has had a tremendous influence on Rembrandt studies. Every curator who has Rembrandts in his care has been forced to look at them again and reconsider his views if he disagreed with the committee's decisions," she said.

"The people I feel sorry for are those English and American families a large part of whose family fortunes are invested in a Rembrandt which is going to turn out to be by somebody else," John Ingamells, director of the Wallace Collection, is quoted as saying by the magazine.

Members of the committee traveled the world to see the paintings and to fill out a detailed questionnaire on each work. Sometimes, the magazine says, they even counted threads in the canvas to help determine authenticity.

Two volumes of the committee's findings have been published so far. A third volume is due next year, to be followed by at least two more volumes. The work of the committee may not be completed for another 10 to 15 years.

ARTnews says some critics believe the project has an overly narrow conception of Rembrandt that has caused the rejection of too many pictures.

Among them, Christopher White, director of the Ashmolean Museum at Oxford University, says the committee is "trying to force the artist into a straitjacket that doesn't really fit."

Rembrandt shared a studio in his early working years with another painter and the two worked so closely together that collectors at the time described certain works as being by either painter.

Another work that may lose value because of the panel's research is "Portrait of a Bearded Man Standing in an Archway," which is about to come to auction at Sotheby's.

The magazine said, because of the committee's findings, the work will be cataloged there as "attributed to Rembrandt" rather than as a Rembrandt.

End preseason with two losses

By SARAH LUMAN
Staff Writer

SNYDER — The easy part's over now. Stefanie Massie and the Queens have survived preseason — but, in a doubleheader with the mens' game following the women's tilt, Howard meets nationally-ranked Odessa College Monday night in Odessa.

The Howard College Hawk Queens dropped two games in the Thanksgiving Classic Tournament at Western Texas College here Friday and Saturday despite outstanding performances from Massie and Cindy Johnson, according to Queens' coach Don Stevens.

The losses, 75 to 55 against Blinn College's women's team from Brenham on Friday and 71 to 54 against the U.S. Army women's team from Fort Hood Saturday night, did not dishearten Stevens.

"We played well," he said. "In both games, we played hard and had a lot of enthusiasm."

The first game pitted the Queens against a tough squad from the coast, led by Yvonne Hill and Tonya Johnson with 12 points each. Karen Stroleny and Marla Rotke added ten points apiece to the Blinn cause.

In that tilt, sophomore Stefanie Massie paced the Queens with nine field goals. She sank every shot of a baker's dozen free throws, totaling 31 points. Massie also pulled down 11 rebounds in the game against Blinn.

"It was close most of the night," Stevens said of the contest, "but then they broke it open on us. They got us in the end."

In Saturday's contest against Fort Hood, Stefanie again showed her stuff, Stevens said, as she led the Howard women toward a good performance.

"We played even with them until about the middle of the second half," he said. "But they never really did blow us out."

Massie had 13 field goals and sank nine of her 11 tries from the charity stripe to total 35 points. She added 14 rebounds to her total.

"Cindy Johnson played a very good game" against the Army women, too, Stevens said.

The Army relied upon Allette Miller for leadership. She put the Fort Hood team's sole three-point field goal through the net and added 16 more points to her tally. Rita Grimes came right behind Miller with nine field goals for 18 points.

Also scoring in double figures for the Army Saturday were Margie Crawford with 13, and Tammy Crawford with 10.

Cindy Johnson had 11 points altogether in the game against Blinn, but the Army slowed her scoring to three — all on one shot.

Stevens said he did not expect freshman Karen Mitchell to return to the basketball court in time for Monday night's conference opener.

"She's getting around on her leg real well now," he said Saturday. Mitchell underwent surgery on her knee Nov. 2. We're just waiting for her to feel confident enough in it to come back and play."

He said the team would have to wait and see how long Mitchell's recovery takes. She had been instrumental in the Queens' wins in preseason play and her loss has further stressed the virtually-benchless squad.

Stevens sent home five players in October following disciplinary problems. Two more quit the team in the same week, leaving the Queens with an eight-woman roster.

Stevens said Mitchell's surgery was necessarily scheduled last week to enable her to be ready for conference play — but he did not expect her to see action in the league opener.

"I doubt she'll be ready for Monday," he said. "Possibly by Thursday, but we just don't know yet."

Hurricanes blast Irish

Shutout first in 53 games

MIAMI (AP) — Second-ranked Miami moved within one game of another national championship showdown by defeating No. 10 Notre Dame 24-0 Saturday on Melvin Bratton's two short touchdown runs and a defense that kept explosive Tim Brown under control.

Bratton, who fumbled at the goal line late in the first quarter for Miami's first fumble in 421 rushes, barreled 2 yards through the left side at 3:21, capping a short drive following Brett Perriman's 13-yard punt return.

The 35-yard drive included 22 yards in penalties as Notre Dame was flagged for pass interference, offside and a personal foul, the last two coming on consecutive plays and giving the Hurricanes first downs at the Irish 4- and 3-yard lines.

Greg Cox kicked a 30-yard field goal with 3:09 left in the first half, 11 plays after free safety Bennie Blades, Miami's all-time leader, made his 19th career interception at the Miami 8 and returned it to the 29.

Bratton scored again on a 1-yard plunge at 11:42 of the third period, capping an 11-play, 69-yard drive after Perriman's 12-yard punt return. Freshman Leonard Conley's 6-yard run with 5:04 left capped a 66-yard drive and wrapped up the scoring.

The victory was Miami's 31st in a row in the regular season and gave the Hurricanes a 10-0 record. They finish against eighth-ranked South Carolina next week and then meet No. 1 Oklahoma in the Orange Bowl on New Year's Night. Last year, Miami dropped a 14-10 national championship game to Penn State in the Fiesta Bowl.

Cotton Bowl-bound Notre Dame suffered its second

Melvin Bratton (5) of the University of Miami goes through Notre Dame's defense en route to a touchdown during the first half of No. 2-ranked Miami's win Saturday. The shutout was the first the Irish suffered in 53 games.

straight setback and finished the regular season 8-3.

Brown, who came into the game ranked fourth nationally with 174.80 all-purpose yards a game and is favored to win the Heisman Trophy next Saturday, was involved in only 10 plays for 96 yards.

He returned three kickoffs for 42 yards, three punts for 14 yards — including a fair catch — caught three passes for 37 yards and rushed once for 2 yards.

Notre Dame was out to avenge a 58-7 humiliation by Miami in Gerry Faust's final game as coach two years ago.

Instead, the Irish suffered their first shutout in 53 games — since a 20-0 blanking by Miami in 1983 — and their worst loss in Lou Holtz's two seasons as head coach.

Ripping Houston didn't satiate Schottenheimer

By DAVE GOLDBERG

AP Football Writer

Marty Schottenheimer doesn't think his Cleveland Browns have proven anything yet. Roger Craig, who will have to carry the ball against them, thinks otherwise.

Which is what makes the Sunday night cable showcase game between the Browns and the San Francisco 49ers so intriguing.

"We are not elite," says Schottenheimer, whose team looked very elite demolishing Houston 40-7 last week. "Those types of tags are safe for teams that have won two or three championships. When we do that, we'll talk about being elite."

Craig and the 49ers fit that definition — San Francisco has won two Super Bowls in the '80s. Their view of Cleveland? They think they might see them in San Diego Jan. 31.

"They are very aggressive and probably have the best defense in the league right now. They hit with a vengeance," Craig says. "This will allow us to see how we stack up against a Super Bowl-type team."

"I think we're finally back to where we were before the strike," Schottenheimer said after the Houston game, in which about the only thing the Browns did wrong was botch a snap on an extra point and two more on field goal tries.

The 8-2 49ers, who bounced back from a loss to New Orleans to beat Tampa Bay 24-10 last week, need all the wins they can get for the home-field edge in the playoffs. They also are just a game ahead of the Saints in their division.

The Browns, 7-3, also have to look over their shoulders at Houston and Pittsburgh.

One sidelight: San Francisco's Jerry Rice has caught touchdown passes in eight straight games, three short of the league record.

The NFL's week began with two Thanksgiving Day games. Kansas City ended a nine-game losing streak by beating Detroit 27-20 and Minnesota

In other Sunday games, Cincinnati is at the New York Jets; Green Bay at Chicago; Houston at Indianapolis; Miami at Buffalo; New Orleans at Pittsburgh; Philadelphia at New England; St. Louis at Atlanta; Tampa Bay at the Los Angeles Rams; the New York Giants at Washington; and Denver at San Diego.

The Los Angeles Raiders visit Seattle Monday night.

Houston (6-4) at Indianapolis (5-5) — Both these rising teams were convincingly taken down a step last week — the Oilers 40-7 at home against Cleveland, the Colts 24-0 in New England. The loser of this one may never get back up.

Eric Dickerson, who has rushed for more than 100 yards in each of the three games he has seen full-time duty with the Colts, may have a heavier load this week — his alternate, Albert Bentley, has a bruised knee.

Denver (6-3-1) at San Diego (8-2) — The Chargers may have been put in their place with a 34-3 drubbing by the Seahawks at the Kingdome last week. On the other hand, getting blown out in Seattle isn't uncommon and San Diego could re-establish its credentials with a win here.

The problem they face now is John Elway.

Cavalierly behavior

Looking downcourt, Cleveland Cavalier John Williams cradles the ball in one hand after grabbing a rebound in Saturday's NBA tilt at Madison Square Garden in New York. The Cavaliers lost to the Knicks, 105-93, in the game despite leading at halftime 40-49. New York scored 16 points to the Cavs' seven in the first seven minutes of the second half behind the performance of rookie Mark Jackson.

Surprises spark playoffs

SUDAN (AP) — When Charles Sanchez kicked a 21-yard field goal with just 54 seconds to play, O'Donnell thought it had a 15-13 victory over Vega in a Class 1A high school football regional playoff game Friday night here.

But, as Vega head coach Houston Powell noted after the game, "Anything can happen."

On the ensuing kickoff, Vega took over at its 31 and quarterback Bryan Wood completed passes of 9 and 22 yards to Dave Drinnon for a first down at the O'Donnell 38. When three straight passes fell incomplete, Vega's Longhorns faced a seemingly hopeless fourth-and-10.

But it was flea-flicker time. Drinnon took a lateral from Wood and tossed a perfect pass to his brother, Steve, who took the pass at the 5 and scampered into

Hogs run down New Mexico

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — James Rouse, sidelined in the first quarter with a stomach disorder, came back in the second half to score three touchdowns and spark Arkansas to a 43-25 victory over New Mexico Saturday.

Rouse, who had a 42-yard touchdown on one of his three carries in the opening minutes, wound up with 19 carries for 219 yards — the third best in UA history.

Arkansas, 8-3, finishes the regular season against Hawaii and then meets Georgia in the Dec. 29 Liberty Bowl at Memphis, Tenn.

New Mexico finished at 0-11.

Barry Garrison completed a 40-yard pass to tight end John Duff on New Mexico's first play of the third quarter to give the Lobos a 17-16 lead.

Then Rouse came off the bench and scored on a 9-yard run that gave the Razorbacks the lead for good midway through the third quarter.

Garrison threw incomplete three times and then Rouse ended a 68-yard drive when he started right, ran into a defender, reversed his field and trotted home from 40-yards out.

Rouse scored his fourth touchdown of the game when he leaped over from the 4-yard line in the opening minute of the fourth quarter. On the previous play he picked up 11 yards on fourth and one.

New Mexico's junior wide receiver Terance Mathis caught 14 passes for 214 yards to establish a Western Athletic Conference career record of 2,939 yards. The WAC record of 2,877 yards was established by Walter Murray of Hawaii from 1982-85.

Rams drop playoff try in OT

SAN ANGELO (AP) — Tom Seeke kicked a 34-yard field goal in overtime to lift Northern Michigan to a 23-20 victory over Angelo State in an NCAA Division II football quarterfinal playoff game Saturday.

In overtime, a coin flip and NCAA rules gave Angelo State the first possession at the Wildcats 25-yard line. When Northern Michigan's Jerry Woods intercepted a Rams pass, rules required that the Wildcats be awarded the ball at the Angelo State 25-yard line.

The Wildcats then ran three running plays, moving the ball to the 17-yard line before Seeke kicked the winning field goal, his third of the game.

Northern Michigan forced overtime with a 94-yard, 13-play drive capped by a 15-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Rick Popp to tight end Frank Harris with 1:32

Angelo State fumbled the ensuing kickoff and with one second left in regulation, Seeke's 32-yard field goal attempt was blocked.

Popp completed 14 of 23 passes for 189 yards and two touchdowns. His first touchdown came in the second period on a 36-yard pass to Joel Yaggie.

Angelo State led 14-13 at halftime.

Cougars blow out Rice 45-21

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston's David Dacus passed for a Southwest Conference record 450 yards and Jason Phillips, the nation's leading receiver, caught 12 passes, leading the Cougars to a 45-21 victory over cross-town rival Rice Saturday.

The underdog Owls trailed 28-21 when they lined up for a field goal with 10:38 left in the game.

But the kick was blocked into the air by Houston's Keith Jenkins and Johnny Jackson returned it 75 yards for his fourth touchdown of the season.

Dacus completed 34 of 58 passes for 450 yards and two touchdowns. He broke the single game record of 422 yards set by Texas Tech's Billy Joe Tolliver, against Texas Christian in 1985.

Dacus finished with 1,849 passing yards for the season, breaking the school record of 1,666 yards by Bo Burris in 1966.

Kimble Anders scored on runs of 4 and 6 yards and James Dixon caught touchdown passes of 7 and 23 yards in the rout.

Jackson's touchdown and Dixon's 23-yard catch broke open the game midway in the fourth quarter.

Chip Brownkye kicked a 39-yard field goal with 31 seconds remaining, his third of the game.

The Cougars overcame turnovers on their first two possessions to lead 25-21 at the half.

Mark Comalander ran 14 yards for Rice's first touchdown, completed a 20-yard scoring pass to Chris Nixon and Glen Ray Hines kicked a 29 yard field goal for the Owls.

Derrick Hoskins gave Houston its 22nd interception of the season in the third quarter and Brownkye kicked a 40-yard field goal.

Phillips needed 13 receptions to become the fourth receiver in NCAA history to catch 100 or more passes in one season. Phillips finished with 81 yards on 12 receptions and 99 catches for season.

Letters to sports to bow next week

Starting Dec. 6, the Herald sports department will feature Letters to sports. So start getting those letters ready. To appear in Sunday's paper, letters should be turned in no later than Thursday by five p.m. There is a drop box for news articles located on the south side of the building.

All letters must be signed, with an address or box number to be printed with the letter. Please include your phone number in case there is a question to be resolved.

So don't forget. Starting Dec. 6, Letters to sports will debut. I'm looking forward to hearing from you.

Big Spring sports boosters to meet

The Big Spring Sports Booster Club will meet Monday at 7 p.m. in the high school cafeteria.

Coaches and players from the freshmen and junior varsity football, volleyball and cross country teams will be introduced.

All parents and school athletic supporters are urged to attend.

Sports banquet will honor athletes

The Big Spring Sports Booster Banquet will be Dec. 7 at 6:30 p.m. in the high school cafeteria.

Varsity participants in football, volleyball and cross country will be honored.

Tickets are on sale in the high school office. Costs are $4.25 for students, $5 for booster club members and $6 for adults.

Deadline to purchase tickets is Dec. 3. There will be no tickets sold at the door.

Elway, who may single-handedly carry the Broncos to the playoffs. Denver has had its problems on the road but Elway has had problems almost nowhere.

Elway will go against Dan Fouts, who didn't start against Seattle because of a pulled calf muscle, then came in when the Chargers trailed 24-3.

Miami (5-5) at Buffalo (5-5)

Does this game matter? Whatever happens, in two weeks, both will probably be 6-6, along with the Patriots, Jets and Colts.

Yes, it matters, because the Bills came back from a 21-0 deficit to beat the Dolphins in Miami a month ago, so another win here gives them an edge in a tiebreaker.

The Bills are still flying from their first win over the Jets in eight tries, 17-14 last week after Jim Kelly bawled out his offensive linemen at halftime.

But the Dolphins seem to be rising, too. They've won three of their last four and unveiled a potential new star in rookie Troy Stadford, who ran for 169 yards in last week's 20-14 win in Dallas and the defense is getting better.

Los Angeles Raiders (3-7) at Seattle (7-3) (Monday night)

The Raiders have lost seven in a row and other than the emergence of Bo Jackson in a 23-17 loss to Denver last week, there doesn't seem to be much hope that the streak will end now.

The Raiders have never won at the Kingdome in eight tries — even when they were a power and the Seahawks were an expansion team. The last two losses have been by a combined score of 70-3, including a 37-0 Monday nighter last year that sent everyone but rabid Seattle fans to bed early.

Jackson was teamed with Marcus Allen last week and contributed a stunning 35-yard touchdown run against the Broncos. But the Raiders still have nobody to throw the ball.

New Orleans (7-3) at Pittsburgh (6-4)

If the Saints had a more experienced quarterback than Bobby Hebert and a little more outside speed, they might be headed to the Super Bowl. As it is, they have won four straight, three on the road, and one more ensures them of their first winning season in 21 years of existence.

But while the city of New Orleans goes crazy, Coach Jim Mora continues to play it low-key, although he concedes that the win last Sunday that ended the New York Giants' chances of repeating as Super Bowl champion "is just about the most important win I've ever been around."

The Steelers are coming off a 30-16 win over Cincinnati, a game in which newly signed first-round draft pick Rod Woodson contributed an interception for a touchdown. But they're lucky the Saints are a running team — they surrendered 409 yards passing to Boomer Esiason.

Green Bay (3-6-1) at Chicago (8-2)

"We stink," Mike Ditka said a week ago, so the Bears finally went out and beat a team like they should, crushing Detroit 30-10. Now Ditka says: "We're going in the right direction. We may improve."

Chicago needed Kevin Butler's last-second 52-yard field goal to win 26-24 in Green Bay and most recent Packers-Bears games have been close and rough, notwithstanding the huge discrepancy in overall records.

New York Giants (3-7) at Washington (7-3)

This was supposed to be a big game. It's not but it could be a good one — the Giants want to win for pride, the Redskins want to win because they lost three to New York last year.

In reality, there's not much difference here except that the Redskins' strike replacements were 3-0 and the Giants' 0-3.

the end zone for a touchdown that gave Vega a 20-15 victory.

In next week's quarterfinals, Vega will play Wheeler, a 29-20 victor over Plains.

Next week's spotlight 1A game will be between No. 1-ranked Munday, 12-0, and No. 2-ranked Paducah, 13-0. Munday defeated Baird 28-6 and Paducah shut out defending state runnerup Throckmorton 24-0 Friday night.

In other 1A playoff games Friday night, Tenaha beat Coolidge 14-6, Wortham edged Maud 7-6, and Flatonia knocked off previously unbeaten Skidmore-Tynan 22-0.

Only one 5A playoff game occurred Friday night. Aldine MacArthur ousted Houston Yates, 20-17.

In 4A games Friday night, West Columbia and Schertz Clemens kept their perfect seasons intact. West Columbia rolled over Tomball 32-12, and Schertz Clemens routed Gregory-Portland 35-7. Also, Canyon beat Brownwood 42-22, Kilgore embarrassed Allen 49-6, and Kerrville Tivy overpowered Calallen 35-6.

In Class 3A, the stage was set for a pair of quarterfinal games next week pairing undefeated, untied teams. Cuero and LaGrange advanced in Region IV, while Gladewater and Southlake Carroll moved up in Region II. All four teams are 13-0. Cuero popped Floresville 50-0, LaGrange beat Hebronville 28-16, Gladewater defeated Springtown 20-6, and Southlake Carroll edged previously unbeaten Linden-Kildare 14-13.

Two other perfect teams, Cameron Yoe and Newton, clashed in a 3A playoff game Friday night, with Cameron emerging a 14-9 winner. In a Thursday night game, Waco LaVega eliminated Littlefield 29-0.

One of Class 2A's four unbeaten teams was beaten Friday. LaVerna was tumbled by Schulenburg, 14-9. But New Deal, Pilot Point and Refugio kept their records unblemished. New Deal beat San Saba 34-18, Pilot Point got by Mart 19-14, and Refugio defeated Manor 42-21.

In other 2A games Friday, it was Abernathy 33-9 over Hamlin, Eustace 21-13 over Winona, and Groveton 32-7 over Kerens.

Perennial six-man football power Jayton destroyed Vernon Northside 48-0 in a quarterfinal game Friday night. Steven Morales gained 208 yards on 13 carries and scored three touchdowns, while his brother Paul picked up 113 yards on six carries with two touchdowns. Steven scored on runs of 63, 9 and 7 yards. Paul went 3 and 21 yards for touchdowns. Then Mark Morales took a 33-yard pass from quarterback Andrew Sumner.

In the other six-man playoff games, Rochester, the only unbeaten, untied team, lost to Christoval 42-16; Lohn defeated Benjamin 48-40; and Wellman pulverized Silvertown 58-8.

Abilene Christian won the Division II championship of the Texas Association of Private Schools on Friday night, beating Canyon Creek 34-8 to cap a 13-0 season.

Austria's Wolf snares World Cup racing win

SESTRIERE, Italy (AP) — Sigrid Wolf of Austria won the World Cup super-G race and her teammate Sylvia Eder finished third Saturday, handing the highly rated Swiss women's ski team its second setback of the meet.

Yugoslavia's Mateja Svet was runner-up for the second time in as many races in this inaugural World Cup event of the season and she moved into the lead in the overall cup standings with 40 points.

Edith Thys of Squaw Valley, Calif., skied her best World Cup race ever, a seventh-place finish, in 1:17.93 minutes.

It was the first good news for the U.S. team which lost Eva Twardokens for the Winter Olympics because of an injury in Thursday's slalom, and had all its skiers eliminated in the first heat of the men's event Friday.

Debbie Armstrong of Seattle was 37th in the super-G in 1:19.78, and right behind her was Pam Ann Fletcher of Acton, Mass.

Further back were Diann Roffe of Williamson, N.Y., Kristin Krone and Adele Allender of Olympic Valley, Calif.

Wolf's victory was her third in World Cup competition, but the first by an Austrian in a women's super-G, with a clocking of 1:16.64 minutes.

The 19-year-old Svet trailed the winner by only five hundredths of a second down the 1,545-meter long Kandahar course. She was second to Blanca Fernandez-Ochoa of Spain in Thursday's slalom.

Vreni Schneider, a world giant slalom champion, was the best Swiss finisher in tenth place, 1.5 seconds behind.

Olympic downhill champion Michela Figini finished 19th while Maria Walliser, the world champion of this specialty, was 27th, with an huge gap of 2.61 seconds.

"I can't figure out why we did so poorly," said Walliser, who is seeking her third consecutive World Cup overall title.

Figini said she lacked aggressiveness down the course, which she said "looked more like a giant slalom rather than a super-G."

West Germany's Michaela Gerg placed fourth, 1.07 seconds behind Wolf while 17-year-old Italian Deborah Compagnoni, a third-group starter, took a sensational fifth place.

Hall of Fame list has new names

NEW YORK (AP) — Willie Stargell, Luis Tiant, Sparky Lyle and Manny Mota head of list of 24 first-time candidates on the 1988 Hall of Fame ballot, the Baseball Writers' Association of America announced Saturday.

The ballot also lists 21 holdover candidates, including Jim Bunning, Orlando Cepeda, Bobby Bonds, Maury Wills and Roger Maris.

Bunning, now a congressman from Kentucky, missed election by 21 votes last year when Billy

Williams and Catfish Hunter were selected. Cepeda was fourth in last year's voting, 131 votes shy of election.

To gain election, a player must receive 75 percent of the ballots returned from more than 400 writers. A player can remain on the ballot for 15 years, but must receive 5 percent of the vote each year to remain eligible.

Results of the election will be announced in January.

Bunning won 224 games during his 17-year career, including more than 100 in both leagues. Bunning, who has only three years of eligibility remaining, spent most of his career with the Detroit Tigers and Philadelphia Phillies.

Stargell hit 475 home runs and had a career batting average of .282 during his 21 years with the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Other first-time candidates are Stan Bahnsen, Mark Belanger, Ross Grimsley, Larry Hise, Al Hrabosky, Grant Jackson, Randy Jones, Bill Lee, Lee May, John Mayberry, Lynn McGlothen, George Medich, John Milner, Willie Montanez, Ken Reitz, Joe Rudi, Reggie Smith, Jim Spencer, Del Unser and Rick Wise.

The other holdover candidates are Dick Allen, Ken Boyer, Elroy Face, Curt Flood, Elston Howard, Harvey Kuenn, Don Larsen, Mickey Lolich, Bill Mazeroski, Minnie Minoso, Thurman Munson, Tony Oliva, Vada Pinson, Ron Santo, Joe Torre, and Wilbur Wood.

Colts ready for 'unusual' from Oilers

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — All week the message has been the same to the Indianapolis Colts defense as it looked toward Sunday's NFL game. Coach Ron Meyer and defensive coordinator George Hill have been warning the defense to "be prepared" for the unusual.

The Oilers have employed several unusual plays on offense this year — lining up with four wide receivers on first down, snapping the ball directly to the tailback and having quarterback Warren Moon in motion.

"We have to be alert at all times," linebacker Barry Krauss said. "They will try and hide players in the huddle so we can't get the proper defensive people on the field. They will try to spread the field on us all afternoon."

"We have to be ready for every play imaginable. I don't know when I've had to prepare for a more versatile offense. They dictate the pattern of play to the defense."

Both teams are battling for a playoff berth and trying to bounce back from embarrassing losses.

"These teams are like two cornered dogs — two wounded, cornered dogs," said Meyer.

Indianapolis, tied with the other four AFC East teams at 5-5, was shut out 24-0 by the New England Patriots Sunday. The Oilers lost 40-7 to the Cleveland Browns in a showdown for first place in the AFC Central Division. Houston brings a 6-4 mark to the 1 p.m., EST, kickoff at the Hoosier Dome.

"Houston will be out to forget the Cleveland game humiliation, and I'm sure they'll play a fine game against us," Meyer said.

The game will be the two teams' second meeting this year. Indianapolis defeated Houston 17-6 in the final pre-season game, and that could provide extra motivation for the Oilers, Meyer said.

The Oilers' offense is currently 10th in the NFL with an average of 320.4 yards per game. Moon has completed 105 of 214 passes for 1,515 yards for 14 touchdowns, but has been intercepted 12 times and sacked 15 times for 141 yards. He's had success in three outings against Indianapolis, completing 67 of 118 passes (56.8 percent) for 1,023 yards, five touchdowns and four interceptions.

Mike Rozier leads the ground game with 572 yards on 126 carries, an average 4.5 per carry. Wide receiver Ernest Givins, who caught three passes for 126 yards last Sunday, is the club's leader with 33 catches for 558 yards — including an 83-yard touchdown against Chicago Nov. 7.

The Oilers also have a big weapon in kicker Tony Zendejas, who is second in the AFC in scoring with 61 points. He's made all 19 of his extra points and has connected on 14 of 17 field goal attempts.

Indianapolis will mix the running of halfback Eric Dickerson with the passing of Gary Hogeboom.

Dickerson has run for more than 100 yards in each of his three starts for the Colts and will top the club record he shares with Lydell Mitchell by going over the century mark again this week.

Cowboys may drop Dorsett

IRVING (AP) — Dallas Cowboys Coach Tom Landry says running back Tony Dorsett may not fit into the team's 1988 plans.

Meanwhile, quarterback Steve Pelluer likely will take over for most of the rest of the season, Landry said Friday.

Landry said he wants to discuss Dorsett's future with him at the end of the season, but wouldn't say whether he wants the 33-year-old back to retire.

"Right now the position belong to Herschel (Walker)," Landry said. "He just fits with our plans," he told the Dallas Times Herald.

Landry said Pelluer will probably start against Atlanta Dec. 6. He would not be specific on what he will say to Dorsett at the end of the season.

"I'm not going to say right now what I'll do," Landry said. "But if I can help, I will help him. Tony has meant a lot to this team. So it could be difficult."

"Herschel is our future," Landry said. "As much as I respect Tony and all of the things he has done for this team, we will have to make a decision about him at the end of the season."

Dorsett, who won the Heisman Trophy at the University of Pittsburgh, has gained only 331 yards rushing so far this season in a limited role. He finished with only 19 yards on seven attempts Thursday in the 44-38 overtime loss to the Minnesota Vikings.

An example of how Dorsett's production has dropped this season is in his average per attempt statistics. He has averaged 3.2 yards per carry this season while his career average is 4.4 yards.

Dorsett, in his 11th season with Dallas, has gained 11,911 yards in his career and needs 209 yards to pass Franco Harris as the all-time No. 3 rusher and 401 yards to pass Jim Brown and move into second place. But he remains more than 5,000 yards behind Chicago's Walter Payton, the NFL's all-time leading rusher.

Quarterback Danny White, who said he might like to return for two or three more seasons, probably would be welcomed by the team although his role might be that of a backup, Landry said.

"We can't go the next four weeks without getting a look at Pelluer," Landry said. "We need to find out what we've got in Steve, to find out if he's our future."

Landry said he doesn't blame White for throwing the interception in overtime that led to Minnesota's winning touchdown.

"Danny was just trying to get something in the seam of the defense, something he'd been doing," Landry said. "I will not second-guess a quarterback. If he'd gotten the first down, we might have won. Besides, Danny made some great plays in the game."

In the fourth quarter, White hit 8 of 10 passes in leading the Cowboys to two touchdowns to tie the game and send it into overtime.

"If we had won the game, it would have been considered one of the greatest comebacks of all time," Landry said.

Von Erich returns to wrestling

DALLAS (AP) — Wrestler Kerry Von Erich, sidelined for more than a year by an injury, has returned to the pro-wrestling circuit and will join his family on a 260-city tour that takes them to Japan.

"I'm in the best shape I've ever been," Von Erich said Thursday, before he returned to the ring at Reunion Arena.

Von Erich had been away from the circuit after injuring his ankle in a 1986 motorcycle accident.

Kerry praised his brother Kevin Von Erich, part of the wrestling dynasty started by their father Fritz Von Erich. A brother, Mike, committed suicide in April and a fourth wrestling brother, David, died as a result of an inflamed intestine while on a wrestling tour in Tokyo in 1984.

We knocked down the satellite ...hooked up the turntables and brought back your favorite announcers!

You listen to us because we listen to you. Just a little over a year ago KBYG began an experiment with automated satellite programming. They promised us the highest quality announcers.

Problem was, sometimes what's the top country hit in Los Angeles isn't in Big Spring. And vice versa. And those high quality announcers in LA didn't know a thing about what's going on in Big Spring.

So we decided to ask you — the listeners. The "Question of the Day" on "Ask Your Neighbors" Friday, October 30 was "Do you prefer automated satellite programming or live local announcers? Live and local won by 37-1.

KBYG brought back Vance Kimble from 5-10 a.m. and Richard Paul Fleckenstein from 10 a.m.-4 p.m. We've introduced some bright new talent: Melinda Ellison from 4-6 p.m.; Betty Hankins from 6-7 p.m. and Steve Cook from 1-5 a.m.

Of course we'll continue our commitment to the news — with CBS on-the-hour and local news at a new time, half-past-the-hour. That's every hour, 24 hours a day. Now, KBYG is the ONLY radio station in Big Spring with a live, local personality 24 hours a day. That's REAL radio.

P.S. KBYG LISTENS TO YOU. Call us anytime at 263-0228. For requests, public service announcements, news tips. To buy, sell, trade. Or to express your opinion on "Ask Your Neighbor" at 8:06 a.m. weekdays. To tell us what we're doing wrong. Or what we're doing right.

Big Spring Collects 'Not your typical art show'

By SARAH LUMAN
Staff Writer

Big Spring is about to show off its private collection of art.

Heritage Museum officials, who are planning "Big Spring Collects," are hoping its upcoming Big Spring art show will be a gala event.

"It's not your typical art show," says Katie Grimes, president of the Heritage Museum's board. "All the items will be from private collections of local people. None of the art will be for sale."

"We're planning to have a real gala night," she says of the event Dec. 4 and 5 at the museum.

"They do this frequently at the Museum of the Southwest in Midland, and it's always well-attended," she said.

"Many people have wonderful things you never see—a lot of people in this town have some very good art."

She enumerated the items to be displayed during the special exhibit; more than 50 pieces are scheduled for the show, including an original Frederic Remington statue.

Other highlights will be an exhibit of works by local artist H.W. Caylor that have not been shown previously, Grimes said, and several examples of his art from private collections. In addition to the Caylor, works scheduled for the special display include oil paintings by Kovach, a bronze eagle by Guelich, a Sahli painting and a large sculpture by Fred Hurt, she said.

"We have four Jamie Wyeth paintings and three Jim Thomas bronzes, a Lester Hughes and a bronze by Mary Coselle," she added. "We will have a Roberts painting and a bronze buffalo by Oeberg."

According to Kay Bancroft, chamber music will be provided by a trio of musicians, from the Midland/Odessa Symphony and Chorale, who perform for private functions. Two stringed instruments and a piano will be included, she said.

"We're trying to make this a really nice event for Big Spring," Bancroft said.

An alabaster sculpture and a pecan/oak woodcarving of an oil well pumping unit are also among the items to be displayed.

A collection of original art consisting of movie posters has been made available, Grimes said, and a collection of Navajo Indian art containing rugs, basketwork and belts will be on view.

"One of our exhibitors has some Indian art which is at the Museum of the Southwest," she said, "and he has borrowed several pieces for us to have for this exhibit."

Robert Summers' "One Riot, One

Ranger" sculpture also has been scheduled for display, as has Miguel Cervantes' sculpture, "Majestic Horse."

Texas wines and a variety of cheeses and fruit will be served during the event Friday night, Dec. 4, which begins at 7 p.m. and ends at 10 p.m. Tickets for the show are $10 each, according to Grimes. Valet parking will be available for the show.

Grimes said the artworks will be on public display Dec. 5, during regular museum hours.

There is no charge for admission to the Heritage Museum during its regular hours, which are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturdays.

"We're very excited about this event," she said. "We hope it will be well-attended, as it is a rare opportunity for people to see the art collected by local residents."

Bancroft said the exhibit is aimed at heightening the public's awareness of the museum's attractions.

"We really have so much to offer," she said. "We want the Heritage Museum to be a vital part of things to do in Big Spring."

"We want the people to enjoy this," she said, "so they'll remember us, and so they'll notice the museum more when we have new exhibits or special events."

Weddings

Cregar-Thomas

Marcia Annette Cregar and Ted Thomas, were married Nov. 28 at an 11 a.m. ceremony at Our Lady of the Gulf Catholic Church, with Father Beck, officiating.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. W.R. Cregar. Bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. H.S. Thomas.

The couple stood before an altar decorated with two candelabra and flowers.

Organist was Kathy Riske. Vocalists were Peggy Dworaczek, bridegroom's aunt.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a full-length gown of candlelight silk taffeta, trimmed with matching vanise lace. The fitted bodice featured a sweetheart neckline with three-quarter-length bell sleeves and matching lace up to the neckline. The bodice and the sleeves were fashioned to points in the center. The skirt was lightly gathered on the sides and back with a modified chapel-length train, accented with a large bow. She wore flowers that encircled her head.

She carried a cascading bouquet of candlelight, maroon, dusty rose and pink flowers.

Matron of honor was Shannon Godfrey.

Maid of honor was Karla Cregar, sister of the bride. Bridesmaid was Rosy Weaver, sister of the bridegroom.

Flower girl was Melissa and Shelly Weaver, nieces of the bridegroom.

Best man was Bill Rickert. Groomsmen were Clay Coffey and Walter Hahn.

Ringbearer was Russel Hartl, nephew of the bridegroom.

Ushers were Randy Cregar, brother of the bride; John Thomas, brother of the bridegroom; and Mark Thomas, brother of the bridegroom.

MRS. TED THOMAS
Formerly Marcia Cregar

Candlelighters were John Thomas and Mark Thomas.

After the wedding a reception was hosted at Union Carbide Sportsman's Club. The three-tiered candlelight-colored cake was topped with a crystal gazebo. In the center of the gazebo was a bride and bridegroom with a cross hanging over their heads. The bridegroom's table featured a chocolate cake with the Texas A & M symbol.

The bride is a graduate of Forsan High School, Howard College and Angelo State University. She is employed by Big Spring Independent School District as a kindergarten teacher.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Calhoun High School and Texas State Technical Institute in Waco. He is a technician for Chevron Pipeline Co.

The couple will make a wedding trip to an undisclosed destination.

Galvan-Aragon

Elaine L. Galvan, 1803 Johnson St., and Jesse L. Aragon, Garden City Rt., exchanged wedding vows Nov. 13 at his parents' home.

Parents of the bride are Jose and Francisca Galvan, 1803 Johnson St. Bridegroom's parents are Jimmy and Rita Aragon, Garden City Rt.

The bride wore a tight-fitting, tea-length, white satin gown with puffed sleeves tapered into pointed petals below the elbow. The round neckline, was edged with cut-out chantilly lace circles, sewn with pearls, which were scattered over the bodice and sleeves. The back featured a bow, beginning at the waist forming one gathered point, the length of the dress.

Her waist-length veil of illusion, was held together by a comb filled with azaras and edged with chantilly lace circles sewn with pearls.

She carried a bouquet of blue baby's breath, miniature carnations and tiny crystal wheels, and was trimmed with blue and white ribbon.

The groom wore a matching carnation.

Matron of honor was Lucy G. Hernandez.

Best man was Louie Aragon, brother of the bridegroom.

After the wedding, a dinner and reception was hosted. The table, decorated with white wedding bells and blue streamers, was centered with a two-tiered cake with a blue heart in the front, inscribed with the couple's names, and was surrounded by blue roses. The cake

Aggies, moms and apple pie

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) — Mom and apple pie are dearer to few people than college students away from home for the first time. For the home is not just a place, but the familiar taste of good food made richer by the love Mom put into it.

Bebe Combs and Maggi Gonzales shared their "taste of home" with other members of the Federation of Texas A&M Mothers' Clubs, and the recipes have been included in the just-published "Aggies, Moms and Apple Pie."

"Well, of course, I was flattered," said Mrs. Combs. "Our club submitted quite a few recipes and to have one in the book is an honor."

Mrs. Combs and Mrs. Gonzales are members of the Wichita County Area "Aggie Moms" club. Both have sons at A&M, and both have a flair for cooking that is famous both at home and on the campus.

"Whenever my son visits, there's always something I make he wants to take back with him," said Mrs. Gonzales. "The cookies are easy to pack and travel well."

The cookbook includes recipes for tailgate parties, casseroles and other make-aheads for those quick weekend visits, simple recipes that "even an Aggie underclassman could make" and snacks that could be added to a care package.

MAGGI GONZALES' KOURABIEDES
Powdered Sugar Cookies
1 pound (4 sticks) unsalted butter, softened
1/2 cup sifted powdered confectioners' sugar
1 egg yolk
1/2 cup finely chopped toasted almonds
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 jigger whiskey
4 cups sifted cake flour
Powdered confectioners' sugar for coating

Beat butter, powdered sugar and egg yolk until light and creamy (about 10-15 minutes). Add almonds, vanilla and whiskey. Beating by hand, add cake flour until dough does not stick to fingers. It will be a soft dough. Pinch off pieces of dough about the size of a walnut, and roll and shape into crescents. Place 1 inch apart on ungreased cookie sheet, and bake in a 350-degree oven for 20 minutes or until very lightly browned. Carefully remove cookies and place on flat surface that has been sprinkled 1/2-inch deep with sifted powdered sugar. Sift more sugar over cookies until they are completely covered. Allow to cool. Makes 6 dozen.

ON YOUR FEET

Dr. CARLOS DIMIDJIAN — Podiatrist

RUNNER'S ANKLE AND FOOT PAIN

If you've been running for awhile, no one has to tell you how important healthy feet are for comfort and full enjoyment of the sport. But if you're feeling any abnormal discomfort, your feet may have a structural imbalance that needs correcting.

You may not notice any problem when you first take up the sport, when you're making short runs. But as your endurance builds, stress caused by improperly balanced feet will send you a clear message. If you have an unstable heel, for example, Morton's foot (flattening of the longitudinal arch) you will begin to feel the pain.

Sometimes an unstable heel will develop a condition known as "jogger's ankle," causing pain on the outside of the ankle. This can happen when a foot rolls outward and leans on the ankle excessively. Each time you follow the curve of a road or track your feet have to bear up to six times the weight of your body. This can injure the ligaments if there's a weakness in your ankles.

Structural imbalances in your feet can be controlled by your foot specialist, alleviating the pain and discomfort and helping to improve your performance.

A mini for every woman

From LADIES' HOME JOURNAL A Meredith Magazine

Worried that figure flaws may rule out the mini from this fall's wardrobe options? No matter what body shape, there's a mini every woman can wear, according to Ladies' Home Journal. The secret is in finding the right one to flatter a particular body type.

To conceal a bit-big hips or too-wide thighs, go for a just-to-the-knee flared and pleated mini or an A-line cut. Both have full, swingy skirts to fudge flaws. Avoid skin tight fabrics such as jerseys and knits; instead, look for sturdy denim in a solid color. Another option is the new bubble skirt, a bouffant from waist to top of knee. The bubble's width hides hips while it draws attention to the waist and legs.

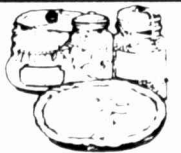

If the stomach and derriere are too much of a good thing, skirt the issue by pairing a mini with a long, easy pullover or oversize sweater. Choose a mini that's snug and slim with little seam detail. Top with a same-color sweater that falls 10 to 12 inches over the skirt. Be sure the sweater is roomy enough not to cup the rear. Select a mini made of good-quality gabardine or leather. Stay away from stretch fabrics and loose-fitting jersey and suede.

The best bet for busty women is a classic, straight mini worn very short. If your lower body is slim, you can get away with a stretchy, body-hugging mini. To draw attention away from the bust, team the skirt with an outside, shoulder-padded jacket that hits just below the hips or three inches above the skirt hem. Pair with a round-neck crew or a turtleneck top and avoid V-neck blouses and sweaters. Show off a small waist with a belt.

Since dressing monochromatically is the most effective way to camouflage less-than-perfect figures, keep the top, mini, hose and shoes in one shade. Wearing opaque hose is a must, especially if still exercising legs in to miniskirt shape.

Briton calls Texas home

By TUMBLEWEED SMITH
I don't think I have ever seen anyone caress wood the way Paul Sellers does it. He knows wood. He works with it every day as a custom furniture designer and builder. He uses all types of wood, but is especially fond of black walnut, mesquite and juniper cedar found in Texas.

Paul lives with his wife and children in a modest home/workshop at Reagan Wells, just up the road from Uvalde. He is a new Texan, coming over a year ago from England. He was a successful carpenter in England and had two and a half years of paid work ahead of him when he decided to emigrate.

He had gone through the apprentice program in England and learned the fine points of working with wood. His work gave him a good reputation and he had several offers to relocate. He took one of them: a chance to be a partner in a small company in Texas that manufactured wooden items. It turned out to be one big mess. Within months after coming to Texas, through no fault of his own, Paul had lost his life savings, was broke and owed money. He quickly learned not to trust everybody. It was a hard lesson to learn for someone who had put so much faith in his new life in this country.

They did own their land and the house they had built on it. That was about all they could call their own. When they found themselves in poor financial condition, they spent one entire night contemplating what they might do here in this strange country. They should have just gone to sleep and rested. Their neighbors would take care of that cute little British couple.

Paul decided to go into business for himself, making things out of wood. He would be working out of his home. He had wanted to start a business of his own anyway, eventually, so he just started a bit earlier than he had originally planned.

When the residents of Reagan Wells learned of the plight of their new neighbors, they got moving in a hurry. One by one they came, independently of each other. The first one brought over some juniper logs, saying, "I thought you might have some use for these."

Tumbleweed Smith

Paul and his family live 28 miles from the nearest supermarket. Their vehicle was beyond the help of even the most skilled mechanic. Someone called up and said, "Use our van for as long as you need it. Two weeks, two months, two years, whatever."

Paul's new sign needed posts. Someone brought them, inquiring, "Are these long enough?"

Paul's house had no water. A neighbor across the road brought over 700 feet of pipe and all the necessary faucets and fittings to pipe water from the Nueces river into the house. The neighbor did all the installation, including the ditch digging. When he finished he told Paul, "Consider this a gift. We're glad to have you here."

A competitor of Paul sold him mesquite at one-seventh the market value, along with free delivery (30 miles to Paul's place) and a credit plan that was simply "pay when you can."

A real estate lady in Uvalde owned a photo copier and made 500 free brochures for Paul, "a gift in anticipation of your successful future."

One man sat down with Paul and asked, "How much would it cost to build a shop and equip it with tools and machinery?" Paul said, "Around $15,000." The man wrote a check.

Another neighbor who had recently been laid off from work gave Paul $100.

An 80 year old neighbor couple went over to visit with the young people from Britain. Their wisdom, love and comforting words were priceless.

Now Paul has started to give back some of that faith and trust. He is producing beautiful furniture and building workshops throughout South Texas. After a year of living in Texas, Paul says, "This is home. We belong here."

Tidbits

By LEA WHITEHEAD
Staff writer

Main Street Inc.'s proposed railroad plaza at First and Main Streets took the Chamber of Commerce's Liz Taylor and Downtown Coordinator Teri Quinones on a research trip to Galveston this week.

They visited the Island City's Museum of Transportation and Commerce, located in the vintage Southern Pacific Railway depot. Director Tim Kingsbury shared his ideas and experiences, and gave them the grand tour of the facility, including some behind-the-scenes exhibits not usually open to the public.

Liz says they were especially intrigued by the vast marble lobby, crowded with life-size cutouts of passengers from another era, poised and waiting for their trains to be called.

Big Spring's Gould's Station will consist of specialty shops and restaurants inside railroad cars and a caboose. Liz and Teri are ready to put their ideas to work; the pressing need now is to locate a caboose or railroad car to get the project moving.

Liz got home just in time to host her parents, Earl and Alma Taylor of DeLeon, for the Thanksgiving holidays. It was a stopover for Earl on his way to his annual deer hunt.

Charlie Morehead is busy planning the annual open house at Potton House. She traditionally prepares that fabulous Potton House hot wassail that's flavored with Red Hot candies. This year, according to Charlie, Potton House will have a freshly cut Christmas tree from a local ranch instead of the "store-bought" trees of past years.

Tidbits

Joey Jabor, daughter of Joe Jabor and the late Mari Jabor, had a commentary printed in the November issue of Seventeen Magazine, according to her sister, Toni J. Medley. Joey, a junior at Big Spring High School aspires to be a journalist.

Ed and Mildred Wright enjoyed a Thanksgiving visit from their daughter, Kathy, who lives in North Richland Hills, a suburb of Ft. Worth.

Friends will be glad to know that V. W. Kemper is doing well at Physicians & Surgeons Hospital in Midland, following emergency open heart surgery.

Actor Joe Justice of San Antonio, son of Jim and Clara Justice of Coahoma, has just been signed by the Phyllis Dumont Talent Agency. (Dumont is the southwestern U. S. representative of the Screen Actors Guild of Hollywood.) Joe's first role under the contract will be a made-for-TV movie, "Estate Sale." Local residents won't soon forget Joe's portrayal of a slightly irreverent minister in the Howard College theatre department's production of "Greater Tuna" a few years ago.

Tippy Anderson and his mother, Billie Anderson, spent the Thanksgiving holidays in Austin with his sons and their families, Terry and Candy Anderson, and David and Linda Anderson and children Leif, Evan, Layne and Casey. Terry and Candy recently moved to Austin from Ft. Worth.

Guests at Bob and Susan Lewis' home for the holidays were his mother, Era Lewis of Ft. Worth, and the Lewis' son B. Z., a student at McClennan College in Waco, and Kevin, with his wife Priscilla, of Sherman.

Denise Crenwelge recently returned from the State Bar of Texas Media Law Conference in Houston where she was presented a Gavel Award for her documentary, "Profile of a Rape Victim," which aired on KBST last year.

Sherrie Bordoske quietly made her debut about a month ago as a countrywestern vocalist with Monroe Casey & the Prowlers. Although Sherrie has been singing since she was five years old, this was something "entirely new." She has sung solos at church and in weddings, and members of her family even once formed a gospel quartet. "But I always dreamed of singing with a band," she said. Sherrie's appearances so far have been at clubs, but now she's looking forward to bookings at the Cosden 25 Year Club Christmas party December 4, and the Cosden Employees holiday doings December 11, both at the Coliseum. By the way, the Prowlers are local businessmen Gordon Myrick, Charles Madry, Thad Sneed, Monroe Casey and his son, Marvin Casey.

Tips on frying in deep fat

From BETTER HOMES AND GARDENS

A Meredith Magazine Deep-fried appetizers, moist on the inside with a crisp golden exterior, are a hit at any party. Master them with these hints from Better Homes and Gardens Holiday Appetizers.

Choose the right pan. An electric deep-fat fryer is one good choice; most are equipped with a basket that makes draining fried food easy. A wok works well because it has a large cooking surface. If it has a rack, use it to keep cooked appetizers warm. A heavy skillet or a large saucepan that's at least three inches deep can also be used. Use a slotted spoon or spatula to lift foods out at the end of drying time.

Use the right oil. Pick one that can be heated to a high temperature without smoking. The best choices are corn or peanut oil. Follow the recipe guide or fill the saucepan or fryer one-third to one-half full.

Be sure the food is dry. Pat foods to be fried with paper towels to remove as much moisture as possible before battering or frying.

Moisture causes the hot oil to spatter.

Follow the recipe recommendation for oil temperature. Use a deep-fat thermometer to keep track of the temperature of the oil while frying. Watch the temperature closely. If it's too low, food will be greasy. If it's too high, food will burn before it cooks. For an accurate reading, the tip of the thermometer shouldn't touch the bottom of the pan.

Add food to the hot oil a few pieces at a time. Too much food at once quickly lowers the oil's temperature. Be sure the oil returns to the right temperature between batches. After each batch of frying, remove any food particles from the fat.

Drain food well. Allow as much oil as possible to drip from the basket or slotted spoon back into the fryer. Then drain completely on paper towels or the wok rack. Keep cooked appetizers warm on a paper-lined baking sheet in a 300 degree oven.

Stock show entries up from recent years Strange videos

By DON RICHARDSON
County Extension Agent

When are entries due for the major stock shows in Texas?

You are too late if you have not already done so! This is according to Mike Bragg, agricultural agent, who is in charge of these events. All Howard County entries were mailed earlier this week to meet the deadline dates of the stock shows.

Howard County 4-H'ers sent in over $2,000.00 worth of entry fees this year for youngsters to participate in the junior steer, lamb, barrow and beef heifers in the Sandhills Hereford and Quarter Horse Show, The Southwestern Livestock Exposition and Rodeo, Houston Livestock Show, Southwestern International Livestock Show, San Antonio Livestock Exposition and San Angelo Livestock Show and Rodeo.

According to Bragg, entry participation in these events are up considerably from recent years.

When can I prune my trees? This seems to be a weekly question but the answer remains the same! Put off any pruning of shade trees, fruit trees, grape vines and bush roses until they are in a completely dormant condition. This is usually around February or late January.

In West Texas, many roses and some shrubs never go into complete dormancy and early pruning will stimulate new growth when we have a few extra warm days during the winter. This new growth will only weaken the plants as they are in all likelihood be frozen back sooner or later before the warm weather comes to stay. Climbing roses should not be pruned until after they bloom next spring. They flower on this season's growth.

What are these white, red-headed grubs I am finding in my pecans?

These are grubs of the pecan weevil. Please destroy them immediately and do not let them have the chance to survive to adulthood! They are not common to Howard County but a few local trees do have an infestation of them. They are difficult to control and can be quite destructive. Start this fall and winter by adapting a good sanitation program. Keep all the trash and old pecans picked up around the tree and do let them have a place to overwinter. Early next fall you can begin a spray program but we will discuss this more at that time.

Can I still enter the county Pecan Show?

You certainly can and we encourage you to do so! Bring in to the Extension Office by Monday, 40 pecans of your favorite variety and then come on out to Highland South Shopping Mall and enjoy the show on Dec. 3, from 10:00 a.m. until 4:00 p.m. Some excellent awards are being made available this year to our winners, one of which is a memorial to long-time horticultural committee member, Mr. Sherman Smith and our late Extension Horticulturist, Dr. Austin Stockton, who helped us organize our first Howard County Pecan Show.

Do I need to water my trees and shrubs in the winter time?

Most certainly! The top and trunk of your tree may appear lifeless but beneath the ground a lot of activity is still going on. It is important for the tree's roots to maintain a sufficient supply of water throughout the winter months. This is especially true for young, recently planted trees and shrubs. They will grow and develop and large healthy root system during the winter and be ahead of the game by the time warm weather arrives and be off and going so do not neglect the home landscape this time of year.

By Video Magazine

Every field has its weirdness and the world of home video is not immune.

For this reason, Video Magazine has established its Video Clunker Awards, which are making their debut in the current issue.

How's about a videotape of a guy having a heart attack? A Danish lady taped her mate in the throes of a coronary. The husband's reaction: "My wife needs professional help. I could have died right there on the living room floor while she panned around for the right angles and light."

Another tape to receive the Video Clunker is one of Ferdinand Marcos, bare-chested, jogging in place. "The Wit and Wisdom of Ronald Reagan" also made Video's Loser Parade. It's 60 minutes of blank tape. Not far behind on the list is the film "Fat Guy Goes Nutzoid," closely followed by "Talk With the Maid," in which a Spanish maid teaches you how to give orders to your non-English-speaking help.

A number of products also made the Video Clunker sheet. Two Ohio men invented the One-View videocassette that erases a movie from a tape as you watch it. Sounds like a good idea until the phone rings. Another accessory on the list is a video camera shoulder cushion.

Treating itchy feet

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Ever wonder why men are featured in ads for athlete's foot remedies?

"Because athlete's foot is four times more common in men," says Dr. Janet Fairley, a University of Rochester dermatologist. Fairley says athlete's foot is caused by fungi that like a warm and moist environment where fresh air rarely enters. Feet are ideal since they are covered by shoes and socks and the toes are squeezed together.

She suggests people with athlete's foot change shoes and socks several times a day, use foot powder and other medications between the toes and "go barefoot as much as possible." For stubborn cases, she suggests seeing a dermatologist.

Cholesterol and women

WEST POINT, Pa. (AP) — While heart disease is more common among men in the U.S., women about 50 and older should also minimize their risk factors for the disease.

Before menopause, the female hormone estrogen apparently provides some protection against heart disease in women. But between about the ages of 50 and 60, rates of heart disease in women begin to parallel those in men, according to Merck Sharp & Dohme, maker of a new drug for certain patients with high cholesterol.

It says such women are now often being advised by their doctors to include a test for cholesterol in their routine physical exams. When there is a high serum cholesterol finding, doctors will have the patient attempt to bring it down through diet and exercise, before prescribing any drug therapy.

DATE SET — Judith R. Weiland, Highland Heights, Ky., announces the engagement and approaching marriage of her daughter, Jennifer Lynn Weiland, to Lt. Patrick Rowan Connelly, son of Jean B. Connelly, Huntsville, Ala.

The bride-elect is a 1983 graduate of Bishop Brossart High School. She will graduate from Northern Kentucky University in December 1987 with a bachelor of arts degree in journalism.

The prospective bridegroom is a 1982 graduate of Big Spring High School. He graduated from the United States Military Academy at West Point in 1986 with a bachelor of science degree in engineering. Connelly is a first lieutenant in the United States Army and is stationed at Fort Bliss, El Paso.

The couple will wed Jan. 23 at St. Joseph's Catholic Church, Cold Spring, Ky.

The popular Abyssinian cat

By CONNOISSEUR
A Hearst Magazine

The domesticated Abyssinian cat almost disappeared during World War II but since then has made a comeback and today has edged out the Siamese as the most popular show cat in America.

Food shortages and other problems devastated the breed during the war, according to an article in the current issue of Connoisseur, and 40 years ago there were only about 50 domesticated Abyssinians in the world. Today, 12,000 are registered in the Cat Fanciers' Association.

Abyssinians do not appeal to everyone. Their owners claim they are smarter than other cats and most dogs, but they remain wild, capricious and provocative all their lives.

They dig into garbage like goats, contrive games for themselves like children, play with water, greet their masters and fetch like devoted dogs.

After long spells of creating chaos, they curl up, docile as lambs, and expect hours of petting. They appeal to pet-owners who look down on Persians as furniture that puffs.

The breed historically has been most common in Britain. Abyssinians were shown in the first great cat show, at London's Crystal Palace in 1871, and one of them placed third out of 180 cats.

Abyssinians have gold-green eyes and are short-haired with ruddy-colored to red fur. Three years ago, over the protests of some of the top American breeders, the Cat Fanciers' Association also accepted the silvery "Blue Abyssinian" into competition.

The general requirements for an Abyssinian, as presented in The Cat Fanciers' Association Yearbook:

"The over-all impression of the ideal Abyssinian would be a colorful cat with a distinctly ticked coat, medium in size and regal in appearance."

"The Abyssinian is lithe, hard and muscular, showing eager activity and a lively interest in all surroundings. Well-balanced temperamentally and physically with all elements of the cat in proportion."

BOSTON (AP) — "Unfolding Beauty: The Art of the Fan" will be on view at the Museum of Fine Arts here March 9-June 5, 1988.

The museum says, "Ninety fans and 20 costumed mannequins in the exhibition will illustrate the changing styles of the fan from the 18th to the 20th century. The chronological survey will be complemented by a display of fans from different eras, grouped according to specific themes: the Grand Tour, political fans, chinoiserie and ballooning."

Specialty fans, created by designers who transformed fans into party games, lognettes and parasols, also will be represented in the exhibition.

NEW YORK (AP) — Flowers make a lovely gift.

Unfortunately, they don't last indefinitely. One way to keep them with you for a long while is to get a book full of pictures of flowers. A new, lovely and expensive addition to such books is "Georgia O'Keeffe: 100 Flowers." The book, published by Knopf-Callaway at $100, contains "an array of blossoms painted with an astonishing intensity: calla lilies, red cannas, black and purple petunias ... bleeding hearts, trumpet flowers."

The book is published during the centennial year of O'Keeffe's birth. The artist died last year.

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — "Foirades-Fizzles: Echo and Allusion in the Art of Jasper Johns" will be on view at the Walter Art Center here Dec. 6, 1987-Jan. 31, 1988.

The exhibition will feature more than 140 prints and trial proofs, including the prints executed by Johns for the illustrated book, "Foirades-Fizzles." That volume consisted of five prose fragments by Samuel Beckett and 33 etchings by Johns. The etchings are variations of his painting "Untitled" and will be exhibited with a selection of working proofs from his private collection.

USDA dilutes rosy Business beat farming forecast

WASHINGTON (AP) — Crystal balls, those magical orbs that are supposed to give shadowy hints of the future, are being dusted off in preparation for the Agriculture Department's 64th Agricultural Outlook Conference.

The Dec. 1-3 conference at USDA "will provide unique insight into the prospects for U.S. and world agriculture, farmers, agribusiness and consumers," according to the department's sponsoring agency, the World Agricultural Outlook Board.

But farm economists really don't consult crystal balls — at least not in public — and the USDA has always taken pains to hedge the bets of even its foremost prognosticators by issuing "highly tentative" or "preliminary" forecasts of future trends.

Anyone is welcome to attend the annual conference for all or part of the meetings, and registration is free.

"Not all farmers were equally stung by lower product prices, declining exports and falling land values during the last several years," the department's most recently released report, which forecast better times in agriculture ahead, said. "Today, not all are sharing equally in the recovery."

As they have for some weeks, agency economists noted that farm income may reach record levels this year, reflecting lower production expenses, larger federal payments and increased livestock receipts.

Farm debt declined by a record $18 billion in 1986, although the value of farmers' assets continued to drop to $693 billion at the end of 1986, down $61 billion from the year-earlier level.

The equity of farmers, or the difference between total assets and total debts, also declined again in 1986 to $536 billion, the lowest level since 1970, the report said. However, if farmland prices stabilize and asset values turn up this year as forecasters expect, Morehart said equity, or net worth, may increase.

"Finally, lower debts and expenses reflect sacrifices made by farmers — land sold off to reduce debt or idled to qualify for government programs, meager profits plowed back into debt repayment, and postponed expenditures for a new tractor or family car," the report said. "Improved financial indicators also partly reflect the shakeout that had already occurred before 1986 began, as farmers with the most serious problems were forced out of farming."

Overheard this week on the beat:

The Veterans' Administration Medical Center's Nursing Home Care Unit residents had a Thanksgiving dinner at the Golden Corral Family Steakhouse Wednesday, Nov. 25.

Restaurant manager Ralph Johnson said this is the second year the residents have been invited to the steakhouse for Thanksgiving dinner.

"This can be a lonely time of year for many of our residents, and they appreciate the generosity of the Golden Corral," said Frances Montague, supervisor of the Nursing Home Care Unit. "So do we."

The Chamber of Commerce will sponsor a trucking regulations seminar Dec. 9. Department of Public Safety trooper Marvin Keenan will teach the school. He urges everyone who runs trucks in connection with their business to attend.

"If you have one truck or a fleet," he said, "if you run trucks through a gin or a grain elevator or drive dump trucks for a construction company, these federal regulations affect you."

Women at work

Dallas Times Herald Bureau

Beverly Brooks had no problem with the concept of teamwork at the life insurance corporation where she became the first woman vice president. That is until the players changed.

She had a hard time after the company was sold and the top executives who had brought her into management were replaced.

"I thought I had to like and respect everybody I worked with," she says. "I know now that the important thing in a corporation is that everybody plays on the same team. I didn't understand that."

Finding it hard to just play along and keep quiet when she didn't like the direction the company was headed, Brooks decided corporate life wasn't for her.

Disillusioned, she quit to start her own insurance firm.

Although women are entering corporate management in record numbers, they also are finding their goals and expectations are not being met. After initial success, many of them are leaving, dropping out or burning out. Others find themselves locked into dead-end jobs they can't afford to leave.

Experts say the phenomenon has reached crisis proportions as more and more women feel betrayed by corporations. American business is in danger of turning off a significant number of women to lifetime corporate careers, they say. Fortune magazine reported last year that one of every four of the nation's best women MBAs have abandoned their jobs after only 10 years in the work force.

Part of the problem is that many women bring to their jobs unrealistic expectations that create a romanticized, larger-than-life view of the corporation. But corporations contribute significantly to the problem by failing to change attitudes and structures that make it hard for women to get ahead.

Women seem to enter the workplace believing that life is fair and that if they work hard, they'll be rewarded for their efforts, says Sarah Hardesty. A former vice president at Hill & Knowlton, Hardesty is co-author of a new book on women in business, "Success and Betrayal, the Crisis of Women in Corporate America," published by Simon & Schuster Inc.

From the start, men seem to be more savvy at office politics, and realize sooner that there's a lot more to getting ahead than hard work, she says.

In addition, she says, many women have bought into the unprecedented glamorization of corporate life that promises boundless opportunity.

Company betrayals ambush hopes

Dallas Times Herald Bureau

The origins of women's discontent in the workplace lie partly in the myths they bring to their jobs, according to authors Sarah Hardesty and Nehama Jacobs. Among the more prevalent myths are:

Myth: Merit is the principal quality corporations reward.

Reality: In the world of making money, no one promises to be fair.

Myth: A hard-working, valuable employee can become irreplaceable.

Reality: Corporations are managed to prevent anyone from becoming irreplaceable.

Myth: An employee will be recognized appropriately if she just performs her best and does a good job.

Reality: That's what they pay you for.

Myth: The corporation is a loyal, steady, reliable and endlessly challenging companion in a 50-50 partnership.

Reality: Women are becoming corporate spinsters — 41 percent of women executives are married as compared to 90 percent of men.

Myth: The corporate relationship is like a long-term marriage — an employee "owes" the company.

Reality: The corporation doesn't feel it has to reciprocate — an employee is only as good as her last accomplishment.

Some of the higher expectations women brought to the workplace were fueled by the women's movement and by media hype, says Hardesty. "People were saying women could do anything. There were all these cover stories about glamorous women who were having careers and families. Yet we had no real models in business to show us what the reality of working was."

Hardesty and her co-author Nehama Jacobs, a former advertising executive who is now an investment banker, conducted in-depth interviews with more than 100 corporate women across the country while doing research for the book.

They realize their conclusions are somewhat controversial because so many women have fought hard not to be singled out in the work force as different from men. Yet if women are to advance in male-dominated corporations, the issues must be discussed, says Hardesty.

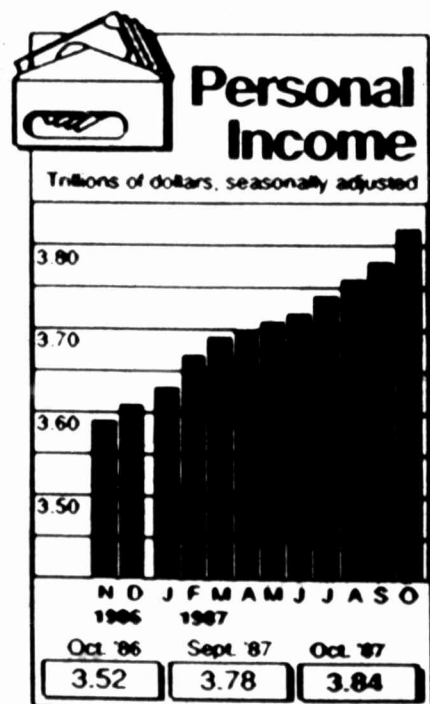

ty, in Dallas recently to promote the book.

Hardesty says most women in the work force today were brought up to be dependent, and that affects their jobs. "No one foresaw the explosion of opportunities for women," she says. "That's the way we were raised. So we tended to often unconsciously transfer a lot of expectations we had onto the workplace. For instance, women expect their companies to give them approval and protection in a way that men don't expect. Women expect to be patted on the head."

For many young women today, joining the company replaces marriage as the rite of passage that symbolizes coming of age. "Women have seen that marriage no longer offers any guarantee of stability or protection," says Hardesty. "Women are saying they're going to make it on their own, but they tend to see the company as their family."

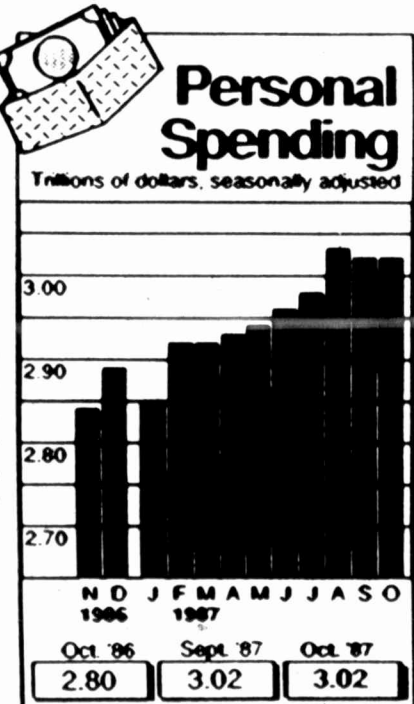

Part of the frustration lies in the actual topping-out experienced by women from the middle-management level upward, says Hardesty. After years of advancement, the career track slows, often just as women are looking to a career to reward them for not surrendering to their ticking biological clocks.

Income, outgo

The Commerce Department reported this week that personal income rose an average of 1.7 percent in October, the largest such rise since July 1981. The department also reports that spending remained steady in October, following a 0.3 percent drop the previous month.

Mattox bolsters insurance rules

AUSTIN (AP) — The 1987 state law requiring all vehicles using Texas highways to comply with mandatory liability insurance requirements is permissible under the state's police powers, Attorney General Jim Mattox has held.

The law has drawn criticism from Lower Rio Grande Valley merchants, particularly some in downtown McAllen, who complained that business from Mexico has decreased since the law took effect Sept. 1.

The attorney general's opinion was sought by Rep. Juan Hinojosa, D-McAllen, who released copies of it Wednesday. The opinion was signed by Mattox on Monday.

"The act is a permissible exercise of the state's police powers to regulate its highways to protect the public welfare," Mattox said in the opinion.

He said state laws concerning highway safety carry a strong presumption of validity. Such laws can be deemed unconstitutional only if they show a completely irrational attempt to address a legitimate state interest or a disguised desire to promote local economic interests at the expense of interstate and foreign commerce, he said.

The extension of the mandatory auto insurance law was pushed by Alonzo Cavazos, a Harlingen resident who began his crusade for the change after three of his relatives died in a 1985 collision with a Mexican driver who fled to Mexico.

Italy's Benetton models savvy

By TOM PETERS

Is there any one best role model of the newly flexible and responsive corporation? Apple Computer? Federal Express? Honda Motor? Sony?

All four companies are good candidates, but if I were forced to choose among the pool of winners, I'd vote for Italy's The Benetton Group.

Benetton, headquartered in an old villa in the small town of Ponzano, will sell about $1 billion of apparel this year. It will have more than 4,500 shops at year end, from Budapest and Sofia in Eastern Europe to New York and Tokyo.

The huge firm, though, with only about 1,500 people on its payroll, has more sales per employee than almost any company outside of the oil industry. Sales per square foot run several times the retail industry average, speed of response to fashion changes is perhaps 10 times the industry average, and net profit has been an astounding 10 percent or more for the last two years.

Benetton has redefined the concept of market segmentation. In a five-block stretch along Fifth Avenue in Manhattan, you can find five Benetton outlets, bearing little resemblance to one another, except for the familiar green logo and the open design that is the franchisers' trademark. That is, a differentiated market segment for Benetton can be as small as one linear block in New York City.

Each of those shops usually spans only 600 square feet — small potatoes compared with The Limited Stores' 4,000-square-foot per operation, and J.C. Penney, Co.'s more than 50,000-square-foot per average store.

While virtually all sites are owned by franchisees, Benetton even has redefined the usual franchise relationship. That is, the store owners have no formal franchise agreement with Benetton.

This paragon of high technology operates by handshake agreements with its "agents," most of whom are chosen not on the basis of retail experience, but as to whether or not they have "the right spirit." The informality of the agreement is but one tiny aspect of the big firm's enviable flexibility.

The tiny shops' information system/network has been written up glowingly in major data processing journals around the world. Information on sales is processed and sent forward immediately to Ponzano, and from there to the appropriate factory.

And the factory system is just as extraordinary as the retail outlets. Benetton owns nine factories, but it mainly relies on more than 220 small "workshops."

Each employs 30 to 200 people, who are not on the Benetton payroll, keeping operating arrangements as informal and flexible.

But again, the flexible arrangements mask a very high-technology setup. One observer described the typical workshop as a 300-year-old stone barn, housing a million-dollar, state-of-the-art, flexible manufacturing system. The factory system is linked directly to the central information network, and it can respond in one week to new information from Miami or Prague.

Rabbis inspect turkeys for market

MIFFLINTOWN, Pa. (AP) — Rabbis wearing hardhats inspected hand-killed turkeys as the world's largest kosher poultry producer worked in high gear to provide Thanksgiving fare for Jews across the country.

Turkeys, hanging by their legs, whirled from station to station on elevated conveyers while 75 rabbis made sure ancient Jewish dietary laws were being followed at the modern Empire Kosher Foods Inc. plant.

"The rabbis reject 10 times more than the USDA rejects," said Louis Lynch, a spokesman for the family owned business in central Pennsylvania.

"Rabbinical inspection is much tougher, much more stringent, much more frequent than the USDA."

U.S. Department of Agriculture inspectors never number more than 20 at the plant, according to Lynch.

To make the turkeys, chickens and ducks it produces kosher, Empire follows Jewish laws governing everything from how the birds are raised to how they are killed and processed.

An estimated 1.8 million Americans follow Orthodox Jewish doctrine, while 2 million other Jews observe kosher eating habits, Lynch said.

Also, an increasing number of health-conscious non-Jewish buy kosher turkeys, which cost twice or three times the price of non-kosher birds, he said.

"Even though they're more expensive, you're not only paying for rigid inspection and higher quality," Lynch said.

To make fowl kosher, the birds are fed whole grains, with no growth stimulants, hormones, or artificial ingredients, Lynch said. They also are free roaming, rather than caged, he said.

A specially trained rabbi, known as a "shochet," kills the birds by cutting their throats with a knife sharper than a razor. The method is supposed to result in a painless death.

A bird killed with an imperfect blade may have felt pain and isn't kosher, he said.

Rabbis also supervise each step of the production, wearing the same white coats as many of the company's 925 employees. Rabbis and federal inspectors wear hardhats to stand apart from the production workers.

To meet the demand for rabbis, Empire recruits them from New York and Baltimore, giving providing a special lunchroom and synagogue at the plant, Babad said.

"They expected their jobs to make them feel fulfilled," she says. "They get to a certain level and find those feelings just aren't there. They start looking around and say, I don't have a life. I don't have any time with my children. Or if they don't have children, they start thinking they've made a mistake. They don't have a relationship and they decide to reassess everything."

Dallas career counselor Carol Duncan says she sees a steady stream of burned-out corporate women coming to her to find out what they did wrong.

"These women are working 80 hours a week to prove themselves. Corporations will push and push and push just to see how much a person will do," says Duncan. "I can't think of a single male I've had come in with that syndrome. But I've seen many women with it."

Most of the women she sees want to make changes to bring their lives into balance. "Because of the economy, people are happy just to have a job, so they aren't thinking of changing of careers," she says. "But I've had people learn to value themselves enough to learn to ask for what they want. Also, once they start dissecting their jobs and those of people around them, they often realize they're doing the job of two people."

Brooks says she sees the problem both from her own perspective as a former corporate executive and from the point of view of younger businesswomen just entering the corporate world from college.

"Women have seen that marriage no longer offers any guarantee of stability or protection," says Hardesty. "Women are saying they're going to make it on their own, but they tend to see the company as their family."

"I think their high expectations are as detrimental as my lack of knowing how to play the game," Brooks says. "They have every intention of hitting the door running and rising to the top. They think they have it all figured out. But corporate America is still run by men. The good-old-boy network is still in place. And there is still no one to have the babies but women."

Dallas psychotherapist Susan Sturdivant, who specializes in the problems of career women, agrees.

"These high expectations contribute to burnout," she says. "These young women come out of academia, which is a relatively impartial system. If you make 95 on a test, regardless of how the professor feels about women in business, he's got to give you an A."

But when they discover that politics rule the corporation, they're disillusioned, says Sturdivant. "A lot of them think they can ignore it and stay above it."

Both men and corporations could benefit from the particular perspective women bring to their jobs, Hardesty says.

"As women start reassessing their lives, it will help men reassess. I think that's already happening," she says. "I think it's become more acceptable to think about spending time with your family instead of working all the time. There's also not the split between home and work that there used to be. Men are being expected to do more at home."

Peters

That's about 10 to 15 times faster than sluggish, traditional competitors. (The Limited system is an exception — its blazing speed rivals, and at times surpasses, Benetton's.)

"Perhaps the single most significant contributor to Benetton's unparalleled responsiveness is its practice of piece dyeing finished garments, which is a unique element of the factory technology.

For instance, all pullovers, scarves and shirts are cut and sewn or woven in the natural color of the thread. Garments are dyed at the last minute, depending on sales of green vs. purple in each of its stores around the world.

At the hub is the largest segment of Benetton's payroll, the huge, fully automated distribution center, which handles most of the 43 million garments a year the company produces.

At the center of the network is the Benetton family, especially the peripatetic chief executive, Luciano, who spends more than 200 days a year on the road, sniffing markets in every corner of the globe and instilling "the right spirit" face to face. His designer sister, Giuliana, plays a major role as well.

John Naisbitt made a useful contribution in his 1982 book, "Megatrends," when he coined the phrase "high tech, high touch." Benetton is just that.

On the one hand, its small stores and small, mainly family-run factories/workshops are managed by handshake agreements. On the other hand, you'll find the most advanced manufacturing, materials handling and information systems technology that exists.

So the advantages of small scale's flexibility (stores, factories) are coupled with advantages of large scale (the central network, purchasing, marketing muscle). Overhead is startlingly low (small payroll, tiny inventory — no garment is made before an order is first received).

And, of course, Benetton is a true internationalist in an ever-shrinking globe.

Whether Benetton sustains its extraordinary — and entirely internally generated — growth or it stumbles, the company already stands out as a superb model.

See City Finance for small Christmas loans

Has it even happened to you?

You think you have put aside enough money to comfortably afford Christmas gifts for the whole family with plenty left over for a tree and a dinner with all the trimmings?

Then you have an emergency that takes all your Christmas money!

That's when City Finance comes in handy. "For those sudden, unexpected cash shortages, we fill a real community need," says Debbie Walling, manager. "Many people need to borrow only a small amount. Smaller loans than banks can handle profitably."

The busiest month for borrowing, of course, is December, when many customers need extra money for Christmas gifts, vacations or even an extra special family Christmas celebration.

"Almost everybody needs a little extra cash once in awhile," says Debbie.

City Finance makes loans of $10 to $320. All that is required is for the customer to fill an application, have a permanent job, and pass credit approval.

"We are state regulated," assured Debbie, adding that the State of Texas sets the interest rate and payment schedule, and specifies that the borrower must have the means to pay back the loan. State auditors check the firm's books annually.

Another important use of a small loan is to establish credit. For example, a customer will bring in a son or daughter and co-sign the loan. The youth then makes regular payments and establishes a credit rating.

"Our customers come from all walks of life," says Debbie "and many of them have been coming to us for years."

Debbie stresses the confidentiality of the operation. Often a husband will come in to borrow money for a gift for his wife. The wife usually sees charge card or department store statements, and this way the husband can keep the cost of his gift a secret. Sometimes both a husband and wife will have loans at City Finance, but the staff remains quietly discreet.

City Finance is located at 206½ Main. Debbie has been with the firm eight years. Also on the staff is Pat Cypert who has worked fulltime for three years.

Business hours are 8:30 to 5:30 Monday (including lunch hour) and 8:30 to 12 noon Saturday. They will be open till noon Christmas Eve for last minute shopping loans.

EXTRA MONEY — For those last-minute Christmas gifts and other holiday expenses, City Finance specializes in small loans up to $320. Debbie Walling, putting the finishing touches on her office Christmas tree, says she will remain open until noon Christmas Eve.

Budding financial consultant Debra Lynch, a psychic, displayed the tools of her trade in her New York apartment: tarot cards, a crystal ball and astrological charts. Psychic uses tarot to find best stocks

By MARIANN CAPRINO
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — When Debra Lynch, psychic and budding financial consultant, advises clients whether to buy IBM or sell Ford, she puts all her cards on the table.

Tarot cards, that is. Lynch has the ability, she claims, to interpret whether the Duke of Knave is feeling particularly bullish or whether an appearance by the Empress signals bearish times ahead.

Clients who pay $100 for one of Lynch's psychic counseling sessions are invited to bring along their portfolios. Lynch says she often gets vibes from the stocks or the dates on which they were purchased.

Seated in a cluttered Greenwich Village apartment practically in the shadow of Wall Street's skyscrapers, the 34-year-old Lynch said psychics of previous generations would shrink from giving financial advice on the grounds that money and spirits just don't mix.

But this is a different era for things unearthly, and Lynch considers money just another element in the larger scheme of prosperity. Her clients — who she says include executives from some high-powered brokerage houses — are looking for that competitive edge.

"They're willing to use everything," she said. "They figure this is just as accurate as anything else."

Lynch says her clients come from two extremes: those who are unemployed or who are doing poorly in business, and those who are successful.

First-time clients are asked to "sign in" in a spiral notebook on her worktable. The tools of her profession — the tarot cards in a drawstring cloth case and a cut-glass pendulum — rest next to an empty can of Coke. The crystal ball is on a shelf in another room.

While she usually relies on the tarot cards, Lynch also may draw up astrological charts of business people or their companies.

Several of Lynch's clients are personnel managers who seek her celestial guidance in reviewing employment applications. Lynch skims over an applicant's list of qualifications and zeros in on his or her birthday.

"If you're the boss and the employee is going to have to work closely with you, you may have to hire the person who's more compatible and more company loyal over the person who is the most qualified," she said.

While outsiders may voice skepticism, Lynch says she has no choice but to believe. What she began dabbling in out of curiosity 16 years ago has become a full-time job.

University doing tarot card readings. Clients kept coming back in such a steady stream that she never had a chance to do social work, an area in which she claims to hold a master's degree.

Most of her time had been spent advising the lovelorn. In fact, Lynch didn't ruminate over the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, the market's leading indicator, until about a year ago.

It was after she accurately called this year's Super Bowl (she picked the New York Giants over the Denver Broncos 39 to 20) that reporters began hounding her about the stock market.

"People like to ask psychics outrageous questions, like did I see the market crashing," she said.

As a matter of fact, she did. "I didn't know what the Dow was, I only saw it crashing," she said. Back in December, Lynch predicted the Dow would plummet by 800 to 1,000 points by the end of September.

So she was off by a few weeks. "I'd rather be early than late," said Lynch, figuring that too late is more wrong than too early.

Since then, Lynch has educated herself on how the financial system operates. And she's become fascinated by the stock market.

"It's the biggest roulette wheel going," she said. "It's a big gamble."

Lynch is so confident that she follows her own investment inklings. In early August, she said she bought stock in Sony Corp., held it for eight days, during which time it rose $8 a share, and then sold.

While Lynch often lets the cards tell all for clients, she looks to the stars for her major predictions. She calculated the market crash based on the astrological forces at work over the stock exchange.

"Every stock exchange has a birth date. The New York Stock Exchange (which was incorporated at 10 a.m. May 17, 1792) is a Taurus, and the American Exchange is a Cancer," she said.

Things have not been looking too good for Taurus lately. As Lynch sees it, the destructive planet Pluto is negatively aligned against Taurus, and unfortunately, "Pluto always wins out."

Lynch feels the market pretty much has bottomed out, and she expects it to climb unevenly until mid-September 1988.

"It will be a good time to buy and cash out," she said. "Then the market will start a steady decline, but not too severe, so it won't be noticed."

Growers: Rio Red 'grapefruit of future'

By JOEL WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer
EDINBURG, Texas (AP) — Citrus growers in the Rio Grande valley are calling a new grapefruit variety known as the Rio Red the "grapefruit of the future."

Visual appeal is its main attraction, with the deep red fruit, red juice, and a rich red blush on the peel, said Dr. Richard Hensz, director of the Texas A&I Citrus Center in Weslaco.

Hensz has spent more than two decades developing the Rio Red. Some growers say it's also sweeter than any grapefruit they've tasted.

Hopes among leaders of the Texas citrus industry — just bouncing back from a devastating 1983 freeze — were raised considerably Wednesday with the first commercial shipment of Rio Reds.

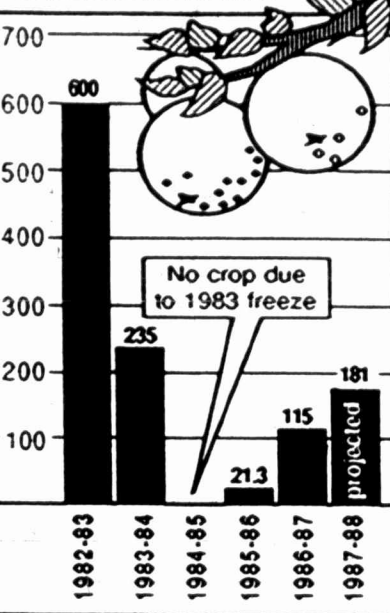

"I think the coming market's going to be the deep red fruit," said Allen Arnold, a grower who just planted 40 acres of Rio Red. "The redder the better."

Rio Grande Valley growers are looking to the new grapefruit as the key to regaining markets lost after the freeze four years ago.

Grower Donald Thompson of Weslaco produced the first commercial crop of Rio Reds, and was on hand Wednesday with Hensz to see his fruit loaded on the first truck.

Rio Grande Valley Citrus Production

In thousands of tons

The Kroger Co. supermarket chain bought up virtually the entire initial crop of about four truckloads, and is shipping it all to Cincinnati, Ohio, Kroger's home base.

"I think it's what's going to put us back in competition against Florida," said Thompson. "In fact, we're not going to be in competition against them because we have a variety they're not going to have."

Hensz began developing the variety in 1963 from Ruby Red grapefruit budwood irradiated with thermal neutrons.

"It's a one-shot thing that disrupted the chromosomes," Hensz said. The first innovation to boost the Texas citrus industry began in 1929, with development of the Ruby Red, which was pink inside due to a natural mutation.

Its next advance came in 1959, when Hensz developed the Star Ruby by irradiating Ruby Red seeds. The Star Ruby was redder than the Ruby Red, but the trees had disappointing, inconsistent production.

After the 1963 neutron treatment of Ruby Red buds, Hensz worked with the fruit until 1976, when he finally achieved the grapefruit he wanted.

It was deep red inside, blushed red outside, sweet and did not have the production problems of the Star Ruby.

So far, the deep-red grapefruit is only in production on about 3,000 acres in the Rio Grande Valley, with mostly immature trees.

While the fact that all of this year's crop is going to Ohio may irritate some of the locals hoping for a taste, growers say the interstate export indicates a strong potential market for the Rio Red.

Many have begun planting the new variety in place of the Ruby Red and Star Ruby grapefruit that have carried the Texas citrus industry.

"Growers from all over the world are clamoring to buy budwood from Rio Red," said Hensz.

In addition to buyers from California and Florida, Hensz said a company from the Bahamas recently was in the Valley interested in buying 100,000 Rio Red buds, the slivers of stem grafted to sour orange root stock to grow the grapefruit.

"There have been inquiries from every place in the world that grows grapefruit," Hensz said.

The scientist said he is convinced that grapefruit was meant to be red. The Rio Red also produces red juice.

Les Whitlock, manager of the Texas Valley Citrus Committee, said half the new grapefruit planted in the region since 1983 is Rio Red.

The freeze that year reduced the next year's crop to nothing and killed half the trees. Yet it will be a few years before the new Rio Red trees are mature enough to produce a significant crop.

Texaco, Pennzoil resume negotiations

NEW YORK (AP) — Texaco Inc. and Pennzoil Co. for the first time in months have resumed negotiations over settlement of their multimillion-dollar legal battle, as Texaco faces potential pressure from its new major shareholder and in its bankruptcy reorganization, according to published reports.

James W. Kinnear, Texaco's chief executive officer, met last Tuesday with J. Hugh Liedtke, Pennzoil's chairman, and they could meet again as early as next week, according to an unnamed source quoted by the Wall Street Journal in Friday's editions.

Charles Luce, chairman of the general creditors committee in Texaco's bankruptcy proceedings, said Texaco and Pennzoil again were in "direct negotiations" over an out-of-court settlement, according to the source, who the Journal said was familiar with the companies.

Texaco is appealing a Texas state court jury's order that it pay $10.35 billion in damages to Pennzoil for wrongly interfering in Pennzoil's attempted merger with Getty Oil Co. in 1984. The state supreme court refused to hear the appeal, and Texaco is seeking a U.S. Supreme Court review of the case.

Texaco in April filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection from creditors to void a state requirement that it post a potentially ruinous $12 billion security bond in order to appeal the judgment.

The two companies broke off direct negotiations when Texaco filed for Chapter 11 protection.

Pennzoil recently proposed that if Texaco paid it a non-refundable $1.5 billion it would place a $5 billion cap on Texaco's total liability in the case. Texaco officials have rejected the notion of a non-refundable payment, while characterizing the idea of a base cap as worthy of discussion.

Pennzoil attorney James Shaddix, co-chairman of the industry creditors committee, told the Journal that it would be misleading to interpret the reported meeting between Liedtke and Kinnear as a sign of progress in settlement negotiations.

Shaddix noted that Texaco was requesting another extension of the period in which it had the exclusive right to propose a bankruptcy reorganization plan and a hearing was scheduled for Dec. 2. The exclusivity period, which already was extended once by the Bankruptcy Court, expires Dec. 8.

"Texaco is heading toward next week's hearing with an unsatisfactory record regarding its efforts to negotiate a plan of reorganization, which would require a means of resolving the Pennzoil litigation," he said.

The resumption of direct negotiations comes as Texaco gains a major new shareholder in Carl Icahn, the chairman of Trans World Airlines.

Australian investor Robert Holmes a Court announced Wednesday he would sell 12 million Texaco shares he controls to Icahn, and give him voting rights over 12 million more.

Beltone develops tiny hearing aid

Chicago's Beltone Electronics Corporation has developed its smallest hearing aid ever — and the new one may also be the best, according to Josh Villaseñor, Certified Hearing Aid Audiologist and manager of the Beltone Hearing Aid Center at 606 S. Johnson in Big Spring. That office is Big Spring's sole authorized Beltone dealer and service center.

"In-the-ear and in-the-canal-type hearing aids, like those worn by President Reagan, are the most popular hearing aids on the market today," he said. A common problem with such hearing aids is wax, which builds up in the ear canal. The new device from Beltone reduces this problem with a trademark system, Sentry Wax Guard, for which Beltone has made a patent application. The system consists of many layers of barrier construction designed to keep wax out of the hearing aid, according to Villaseñor.

For more information, call Villaseñor at 263-6181. Office hours are Monday and Thursday 9 a.m. to 12 p.m. and 12:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. and Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday 12:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Texas index declined in October

Dallas Times Herald Bureau DALLAS — Black Monday was blacker in Texas than much of the rest of the nation.

That conclusion can be drawn from the performance of the Texas 77 stock index in October, compared to the Standard & Poor's 500 stock index. The Texas index declined 28 percent in the month, while the S&P index fell 22 percent.

Mary Jane Wardlow, spokeswoman for the Texas comptroller's office, said the poorer performance of the Texas index was due to the fact that it is made up of more smaller companies than are on the S&P index.

Smaller public companies, many of which are listed on the over-the-counter exchanges, have performed worse than larger Blue Chip firms, most of which are on the New York Stock Exchange, since the stock market fell sharply on Oct. 19. Eugene Melnichenko, director of research for the Dallas investment banking and brokerage firm of Eppler Guerin & Turner, said Texas companies are more often traded over-the-counter rather than on the New York Stock Exchange.

Melnichenko said the collapse of the over-the-counter market during the crash drove the price stocks traded on it down more than those on the New York Stock Exchange.

In October the New York Stock Exchange's composite index fell 28 percent and the NASDAQ composite index of over-the-counter stocks fell 34 percent.

"The over-the-counter market was very inefficient," Melnichenko said. "Sellers could not get through to their brokers. Because of this, to sell their stocks they had to accept a lower price."

The Dow Jones industrial average, which measures the movement of 30 major companies, fell about 24 percent in October. Many market experts consider the S&P a better broad-based barometer of the stock markets than the Dow.

Quarterly luncheon set for Wednesday

By THE BIG SPRING AREA CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

The Chamber's quarterly community luncheon is Wednesday in the East Room of the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum. Sponsored by NTS Communications and Bailey Electric, the luncheon begins at 11:45 a.m. Cost is $5 per person with reservation and $7 at the door. Reservations are being taken through noon Nov. 30 at the Chamber office, 263-7641.

The community Christmas parade is scheduled for Saturday. The parade is being sponsored by the Big Spring Herald and is being coordinated by Lea Whitehead. "Christmas Dreams" is the theme for the parade. It will begin at 10 a.m. and proceed north on Gregg Street.

The Annual Tree Lighting Ceremony is scheduled for Saturday at 6 p.m. at the memorial area of the courthouse on the east side.

Walter and Francis Wheat will be masters of ceremonies, and there will be music by the Bauer Magnet Extended Day Music Students. Mu Zeta Sorority will serve hot cider. Miss Merry Christmas, Danelle Castillo, will assist the emcees.

ALSA will again have its luminarias around the courthouse. The top three winners in each category of the community Christmas parade will be announced at the ceremony, and the lighting of the pine tree on the northeast corner of the courthouse will also occur.

The chamber's beautification committee is sponsoring a Christmas decorating contest again this year. Entry deadline is Dec. 15 — judging will take place on December 22. Entry forms may be picked up at the Chamber office or at local businesses, florists, etc.

The chamber will host a holiday open house on Dec. 18 from 3:30-6 p.m. at the chamber office, 215 W. 3rd St. All members and spouses are encouraged to stop by, visit with staff and help us celebrate the holidays. Refreshments will be served.

Drilling report

Flowing 198 barrels of oil per day, plus 60,000 CF casinghead gas, the No. 1 Amos was completed in Howard County's B-C Field by V. F. Petroleum of Midland.

Drill site is three miles north of Big Spring.
The well was drilled to 10,080-ft. total depth and was plugged back to 9,182. Production tests were run on an 11/64-in. choke, and flowing tubing pressure registered 1,300 PSI. The well will produce from perforations in the Canyon Formation, 9,031 to 9,035 feet into the wellbore.
The location is in a 105-acre lease in the T&P Survey, Sec. 19, Blk. 32.

The No. 1 Guita Estate "B", an 11,000-ft. wildcat well, is scheduled to be drilled in Howard County. Exxon Corp. of Midland is the operator. The well will be spudded in a 320-acre lease nine miles northwest of Big Spring in the Baureff & Cockrell Survey, Sec. 16, Blk. A.

Drilling operations at the No. 1 Stallings, a Howard County wildcat well, are nearing the 4,100-ft. mark. With Deminex US Oil of Dallas as the operator, the well carries permit for 10,500-ft. total depth. Drill site is four miles north of Big Spring in a 242-acre lease in the T&P Survey, Sec. 11, Blk. 33.
The well was spudded Oct. 27.

Shut-in and abandon orders were issued for the No. 1 O'Daniel, a wildcat try in Howard County. The operator was Zac Elmer of Midland.

Drill site was 12 miles northeast of Big Spring in a 409-acre lease in the T&P Survey, A-1382. Spudded Oct. 15, the well bottomed at 4,548 feet with no commercial shows.

Grubetz Operating of Dallas is planning to drill two 3,300-ft. developmental wells in the Turner-Gregory Field, Mitchell County.

without worries.

You can get the safety and high returns you want on your money with insured bonds that offer diversification and are free from federal income tax. With insured bonds, your principal will be there at maturity and your interest will be paid when due, plus you can earn a higher after-tax return than usually available on taxable savings.
