Sales quotas issue for OPEC

Source: New York Mercantile Exchange AP

By BARBARA SHOOK
Hearst News Service

VIENNA, Austria — Finding a way to enforce oil sales quotas has emerged as the major issue among ministers of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, gathering here just prior to their summer conference.

The ministerial conference is scheduled to begin Monday, but OPEC's powerful price monitoring meeting starts June 2.

Saudi Arabia has proposed allowing oil prices to float rather than target a specific goal such as $18 a barrel.

This approach is designed to force all OPEC members to be more responsible for maintaining market stability, said a source from a major Mideast OPEC member.

If the price is allowed to float, and certain member countries exceed their sales quotas, then those countries willl have to assume the responsibility for causing prices to plummet, said the source, speaking on the condition he not be identified.

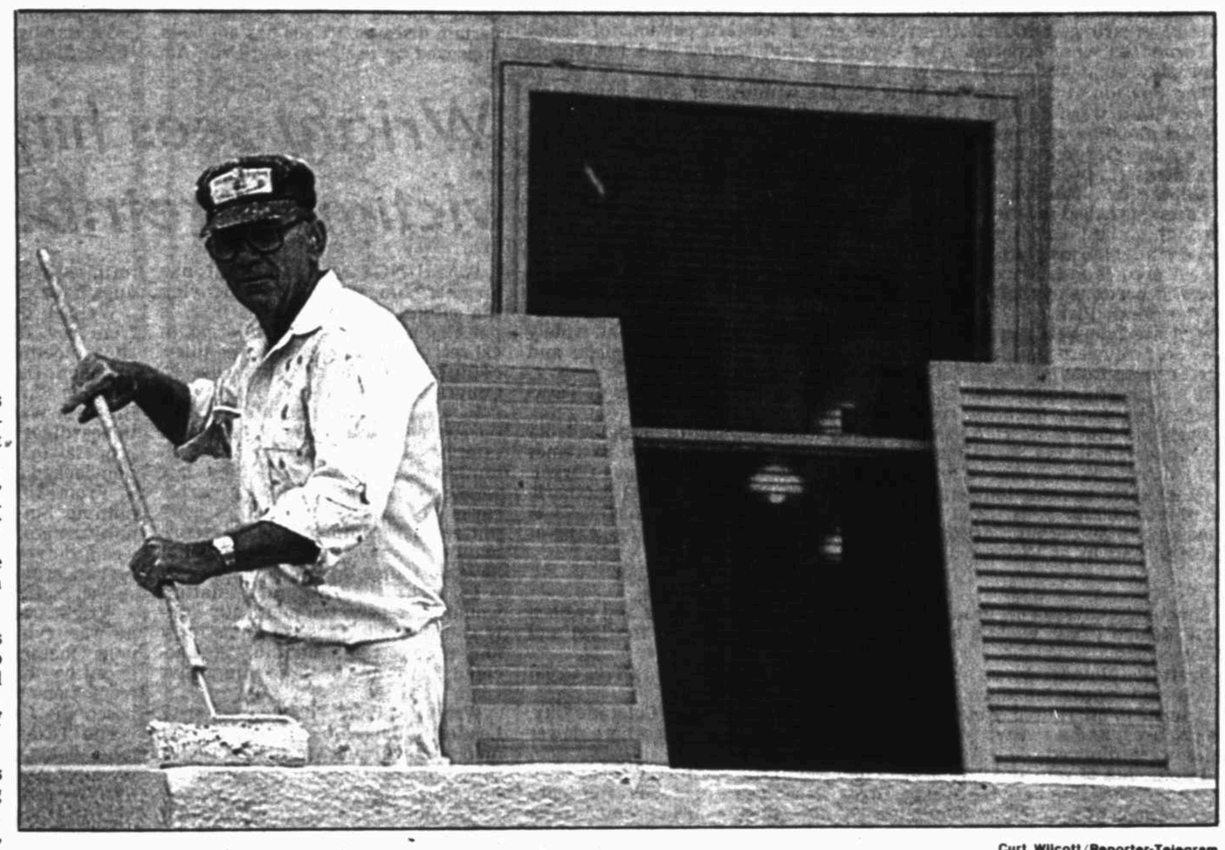

Offenders also could feel the severe economic pressure of falling oil prices.

Such a system would relieve the biggest producers, such as Saudi Arabia, of the burdensome responsibility of reducing their sales when other member nations exceed their quotas.

OPEC's official sales ceiling is 18.5 million barrels of oil a day, specified in the agreement adopted last November. Various estimates put current output at between 20 million and 21 million barrels per day.

The United Arab Emiratee and Kuwait are selling well above their quotas, according to recent surveys. Iran, Ecuador and Gabon also are exceeding the allowed levels.

Thunderstorm, tornado danger continuing tonight

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

The dangerous combination of widespread weather conditions responsible for as many as four possible tornadoes, flash flooding and hail Thursday night and today may slam Midland-Odessa tonight, a forecaster says.

Tornadoes were reported Thursday night and early today near Colorado City, Big Spring, Lamesa and in Scurry County, area forecasters said this morning.

In Colorado City some home windows were blown out and power lines were downed in Lamesa, reports said.

Flash flooding washed several cars off the road in Big Spring and heavy rains reduced visibility to 25-50 feet this morning in Lubbock and Hale Center, a small farming community located 30 miles north of Lubbock.

Hail the size of golf balls pummeled Balmorhea and much of Dawson County, while smaller sized hail was reported in Alpine, Lubbock and Snyder.

One tornado warning was issued in Dawson County at 9:20 p.m. Thursday night when a possible twister was sighted.

A tornado watch existed in an area east of Monahans to west of San Angelo from 6 p.m. to midnight.

A flash flood warning remained in Lubbock this morning where rains were heavy. Another had been issued Thursday night in Big Spring where accumulations up to 4-feet were reported.

No rain was reported in Midland-Odessa Thursday night, though 30-40 mph and lightening continued throughout most of the evening.

Indications are that the weather conditions may be converging upon the Midland-Odessa area of the Permian Basin.

"If you think last night was fun, wait until tonight," warned Eddie Brite, a forecaster at the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

The weather conditions span nearly 30,000-square miles stretching from the Big Bend area to the South Plains and consists of Gulf of Mexico moisture, a cold front and a dry air mass.

Between Midland and Lubbock a cold front is stagnant, while a dry air mass is currently centered over an area between El Paso and Midland, Brite explained.

In addition, moisture from the Gulf of Mexico is vying for territory over the area.

The combination of the three create the possibility of dangerous weather, forecasters concurred.

Tonight there is a 40 percent chance for thunderstorms, some possibly severe. The conditions should persist through the weekend, Brite said.

The low will be in the upper 60s and winds will be out of the southeast at 10-20 mph and gusty.

Saturday will be much the same with partly cloudy skies and a 30 percent chance of possibly severe afternoon thunderstorms.

The high will be in the middle 90s and winds will be from the south at 15-25 mph and gusty.

Thursday's high of 89 was 12 degrees cooler than the record high temperature of 101 set for that date in 1958. The overnight low of 66 was 18 degrees warmer than the record low temperature of 48 set for this date in 1970.

Tornadoes were reported in three locations in West and Southwest Texas.

Airplanes, RVs gain property tax exemption

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

The worry over sky-rocketing property taxes on recreational airplanes may be over for hundreds of Texas pilots, including Midlanders Mary Alice Tidwell and Paul Erdmann.

A new law, which exempts from taxes personal property not used to produce income, goes into effect next year and would include airplanes and recreational vehicles.

Rep. Mark Stiles, D-Beaumont, sponsored the legislation, which was signed into law on May 10 by Gov. Bill Clements and supported by Sen. Bill Sims, D-San Angelo, and Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland.

The county's taxing entities will have to decide whether they also favor the tax exemption.

Legislation abolished the tax on boats last year.

Ms. Tidwell, a certified public accountant and a pilot for more than 10 years, applauded the Legislature's actions Thursday, observing that the new law will help promote aviation in Midland County.

"I know that the flying associations in Midland County plan to contact local taxing entities and urge them to follow the Legislature's position," Ms. Tidwell said.

Erdmann, president of the West Texas Aerobatic Club, voiced cautious optimism over the legislation's ability to repair what he termed the damage done to the recreational aviation business caused by years of taxation.

"The damage that's been done is long-term. Like anything else, it'll take time to come back," Erdmann said.

Precinct 4 County Commissioner Win Brown, without actually promising to consider the abolishment of the tax levy, said the tax on airplanes is discriminatory and not applied fairly to other property that is exempt from taxation, such as artwork and jewelry.

There's no stopping Crime Stoppers

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

The January day in 1984 when the first caller dialed the now-familiar Crime Stoppers number, 694-TIPS, officers weren't sure if the program would work in Midland.

Five years later, they aren't sure if anything can stop it.

"We have exceeded $2 million in recovered property and confiscated narcotics," Sgt. Keith Ward, Crime Stoppers coordinator, announced today. "Our first million was reached in October of 1987, so it took us nearly four years to get to there. But our second million was reached in less than a year and a half."

The $2 million mark officially was reached in March, but the announcement delayed "because we just couldn't get around to it," Ward said. To date, tips to the program have generated $2,022,126 in recovered stolen property and confiscated narcotics.

At a party attended by Midland Crime Stoppers board members and officers from the Odessa Crime Stoppers, Ward talked about the program.

"The program is growing with public support and the support of law enforcement," he said. "It is continuing to grow. Public awareness of the program has really taken off.

The people's willingness to utilize the program more has really helped, been a big part of it. It's not that we are doing anything different or special."

An increase in drug cases — which means more confiscated narcotics — has helped Crime Stoppers reach the $2 million level, according to officers.

"I'd say narcotics of course is up, and there have been larger single seizures," Ward said. "The drug crimes are just being busted more."

At least 70 percent of the 130 to 150 monthly calls to Midland Crime Stoppers concern narcotics cases, according to Ward.

Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter, whose department staffs Crime Stoppers with Midland police, was elated with the announcement.

"I think the program is outstanding," the sheriff said, noting the rapid rise to $2 million. "Just from that you can tell it is an extremely successful program."

Wright will retain pension benefits

■ Related stories — 2A, 4A

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jim Wright will lose a number of privileges when he steps down next week as House speaker, but one benefit will remain intact — his pension.

Gone will be the access to limousine service. Gone will be the use of a separate staff. The Texas Democrat, however, can expect to receive a handsome pension for as long as he lives.

The annual pension is based on an average of the lawmaker's three highest salaries, multiplied by 2.5 percent and then multiplied by his years of service — 34 in Wright's case, according to the House Clerk's office.

Although Wright plans to resign as speaker on Tuesday but not give up his House seat until later this month, the difference of a few weeks will have little effect on his pension.

The National Committee on Public Employee Pension Systems estimated that Wright's average salary was $108,333 and after all the mathematics, his pension in the first year will be $86,666.

If Wright lives another 17 years, which the committee based on the 1988 Life Insurance Fact Book, he would receive a cumulative total of $1.47 million. Factoring in a cost-of-living increase of 5 percent, the cumulative pension will be $2.24 million.

The Office of Personnel Management will handle the pension.

Though his pension won't be effected by the few weeks Wright is just a member of the House rather than its speaker, his life insurance coverage is based on his salary, which drops from $115,000 to $89,500.

But the change will likely be minor since Wright's time as simply a House member will be less than a month, said Michael McCauley of Congress Watch, a public interest group.

Wright's health insurance is not tied to his salary and won't be affected.

Bush returns, buoyed by NATO success

LONDON (AP) — President Bush flew home today after "a wonderful trip" to Europe, leaving U.S. allies cheering his leadership at the NATO summit and heading for a meeting with congressional leaders on future moves toward the Soviet Union.

With aides to Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher waving farewell at Heathrow Airport, Bush left aboard Air Force One on a return flight that will take him first to his oceanside vacation retreat at Kennebunkport, Maine, for a weekend of rest. He plans to return to Washington late Sunday.

The president arranged separate meetings Monday with his Cabinet and with Democratic and Republican congressional leaders to assess the results of his week-long tour of Rome, Brussels, Bonn and London and the prospects for negotiated reductions in conventional NATO and Soviet-led Warsaw Pact forces.

"We will spare no effort to achieve agreements that will reduce the risk of war and strengthen the foundations for peace," White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said before the president's departure.

Flash flooding was reported in Big Spring and Alpine and hail was widespread as strong thunderstorms roared across western portions of Texas.

Tornadoes were reported near Colorado City, Lamesa and Big Spring Thursday night and early today.

The tornado at Colorado City blew out the windows of some homes and power lines were downed at Lamesa.

Flash flooding was reported at Big Spring, where some cars were washed off a road after more than an inch of rain fell in about 20 minutes. A severe thunderstorm produced more than two inches of rain and golf ball-size hail at Alpine late Thursday.

Forecasts called for the possibility of thunderstorms over most of the state through tonight except in South Texas and in extreme West Texas. Some of the thunderstorms may linger through Saturday, forecasters said.

Scattered thunderstorms were reported before dawn today across southwestern portions of the Texas Panhandle and the northwestern two-thirds of the South Plains.

Scattered showers were reported along the upper Texas coast and widely scattered showers were reported over the southern low rolling plains and northern sections of the Hill Country early today.

It was mostly cloudy over northern and northwestern portions of Texas and partly cloudy over the rest of the state.

Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 60s and 70s, ranging from the upper 50s in the South Plains to around 80 in South Texas. Extremes ranged from 58 at Lubbock to 80 at Palacios, Del Rio and Corpus Christi.

Other early morning temperatures around the state included 62 at Amarillo, 67 at Wichita Falls, 73 at Fort Worth, 75 at Waco and Austin, 73 at Houston, 76 at Corpus Christi, 77 at Brownsville, 66 at San Angelo, 68 at Midland and 63 at El Paso.

NATION

Severe thunderstorms brought heavy rain to western Texas and eastern New Mexico today, while a heat wave continued in parts of the East and West coasts.

Scattered thunderstorms also hit the upper Ohio Valley, the eastern Great Lakes and Upper Michigan.

A tornado on Thursday blew out windows in homes in the Colorado City, Texas, area, and a twister was reported near Lamesa, Texas, where power lines were downed.

Two inches of rain and baseball-size hail fell in the southwest Texas town of Alpine. Flooding near Big Spring, Texas, washed cars off roads after more than an inch of rain fell in 20 minutes. Thunderstorm winds uprooted trees.

In New Mexico, tornadoes touched down near Ramon and Yeso; golfball-size hail covered the ground near Elida.

Thunderstorms in Illinois on Thursday caused flooding, power failures and cancellation of sporting events, including a fishing derby.

Heavy rains raised the water level in the Chicago River by 3 feet. Metropolitan Water Reclamation District workers had planned to stock the river with trout, but barges could no longer be moored because of high water.

Flooding caused one death in Hobart, Ind., police said.

Several record temperatures were set Thursday, including Alameda, Calif., 92 degrees; Baltimore, 99; New York City, 93; Oakland, 87; and San Francisco, 90.

The high temperature in the nation Thursday was 104 degrees at Laredo, Texas.

Today's forecast called for showers and thunderstorms scattered over much of the Plains states, the upper Mississippi Valley, and from east Texas across the lower Mississippi Valley, parts of the Tennessee and Ohio valleys into New England; possibly severe thunderstorms in parts of the southern Plains into south-central Kansas; and widely scattered showers and thunderstorms in the northern and central Rockies, and parts of Florida.

NOW seeks legalization of abortion pill

By PAUL RECER
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON — Both sides in the abortion battle are squaring off over a "morning after" abortion pill that is available in France but not in the United States.

Officials of national Right to Life said they are prepared to encourage a boycott of products distributed by an American affiliate of the French manufacturer of the pill if there is an attempt to license the drug in the United States.

And on the other side, leaders of the National Organization for Women and the Fund for the Feminist Majority call such tactics "medical McCarthyism" and are preparing to lobby federal health officials and commercial drug companies to start American testing of the abortion pill.

The drug, called RU486, is now being used for about 15 percent of the elective abortions in France and is being studied for the treatment of certain diseases. RU486 has not been approved by the Food and Drug Administration for distribution in the United States.

NOW President Molly Yard charged at a Thursday news conference that the Right to Life organization is intimidating American pharmaceutical firms from attempting to license or test the drug in this country.

"It is a total insensitivity on the part of Right to Life to be working to keep this drug out (of the United States)," said Ms. Yard. "We intend to organize people to see to it that we get RU486 into this country."

Eleanor Smeal, president of the Fund for the Feminist Majority, said that a campaign against RU486 by the Right to Life organization has "put a chill on research" and caused American drug companies to avoid investing in the abortion pill.

"We intend to visit the pharmaceutical industry leaders and ask them to rise above this medical McCarthyism," said Ms. Smeal. "We believe it is their moral and scientific responsibility."

"McCarthyism" is a term that refers to the use of unfounded accusation to intimidate and threaten. It originates from anti-Communism hearings conducted by Sen. Joseph McCarthy, R-Wis., in the 1950s.

Richard Glasow, a spokesman for the national Right to Life, acknowledged that his organization discussed a boycott with officials of Hoechst-Rouselle, the American affiliate of Roussel-Uclaf, the French company that makes RU486.

"We asked them to not bring the abortion pill to the U.S.," said Glasow. "We pointed out to them that we have encouraged members to boycott" another company that makes drugs used in clinical abortions.

He said Hoechst-Rouselle officials said they had no plans to market RU486 in the United States.

Glasow added: "We didn't threaten Hoeschst-Rouselle with a boycott. We just said that was a possibility."

He said an international anti-abortion group to which the American organization belongs has instituted a boycott in Europe against products made by affiliates of Rossel-Uclaf.

Olivia Gans, also an official with Right to Life, said her organization is opposed to RU486 because "we have concerns about its safety to women in addition to the fact that it destroys the baby."

Ms. Yard said that RU486, in addition to use for abortions, has "shown promise" in the treatment of a variety of diseases, including breast cancer; glaucoma, a disease that can cause blindness; endometriosis, a pelvic disease that can cause infertility in women, and Cushing's Syndrome, a disease of hormone imbalance.

Though RU486 has been referred to as a "morning after" abortion pill, Ms. Smeal said the drug is used in France only under medical supervision.

In a typical case, she said, a woman seeking an abortion is examined at a clinic to confirm her pregnancy and then takes three 200 milligram pills of RU486. Two days later she returns to the clinic for an injection of prostaglandin, a hormone. Sometime after the shot, the fetus is expelled. The patient returns to the clinic two weeks later for examination.

Wright sees himself as victim of retribution

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Jim Wright, still denying the ethics charges against him, is painting himself as a victim of political retribution and of a desire to accomplish too much, too fast in Congress.

In a 1½-hour luncheon with reporters and in a series of television interviews on Thursday, an unrepentant Wright said he decided last weekend to resign from Congress because he expected the ethics committee to recommend he be reprimanded, a move which likely would have cost him his speakership.

To fight that recommendation would have been too politically costly and tied the House in knots for a long time to come, he said. "So I decided that is one of those things that I can't change."

Wright said he believed Majority Leader Thomas Foley, D-Wash., the man who will succeed him, is better suited to heal the wounds caused by the ethics fight.

"He does have a temperamental advantage in the sense of being more cautious, reasoned, less hurried," Wright said. "I was probably obsessed with the notion that I had a limited period of time in which to make my mark on the future. That was one of my attitudes, perhaps a failing."

In the interview, Wright was by turns jovial and emotional, offering an unusual self-analysis and portraying himself as seeking to restore peace to the chamber he had plunged into turmoil during his stormy 2½-year tenure.

He reached back to memories of his adolescence in Dallas, when a football coach persuaded him to join the school debate team and he became interested in Woodrow Wilson's ideas for the League of Nations.

"From that time, I didn't want to do anything except to come to Congress and to use whatever influence I could to help create the basis for a more peaceful world," Wright said, his voice breaking. He paused a moment to regain his composure, and added:

"You get so self-righteous about these things, I guess, you think your way is right. So you get very determined and you try to make things happen in a way that you believe, in your finite judgment, is best. And maybe you are not the possessor of infinite wisdom. Maybe the other guys have got good ideas, too."

Wright dated his misfortunes from Nov. 13, 1987, when he attended a meeting between Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega and Roman Catholic Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo in Washington, during which the cardinal agreed to carry a peace proposal to the Reagan administration-backed Contra rebels.

"From that moment there was nothing but hostility from the administration," Wright said. "There was a determination on the part of certain people in the other party to see to it that I was removed."

Wright came in for criticism that he was trying to usurp the foreign policy-making prerogatives of the executive branch, but won praise from Democratic liberals who opposed the Contra policy.

The Texas Democrat did not allude to his ethics problems during the interview, preferring to dwell on what he saw as the highlights of his 34-year House career. He sat in his private dining room decorated with the U.S. and Texas flags and a set of longhorns over the door.

Wright announced his resignation in a House speech Wednesday after a yearlong investigation that led to charges that he improperly accepted gifts and sought to evade House outside income limits.

He said he hoped his tenure as speaker would be remembered "as a time when we began to turn from our preoccupation with military might to a recognition of the long-deferred agenda of building and rebuilding America."

And he added: "If I've made any contribution to peace in the world, then that's the thing of which I'd be proudest."

He said he made up his mind to resign during a weekend getaway with his wife, Betty, at a friend's lodge in the Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia. But he said he had decided early this year that he would not seek another term in Congress, and had told the majority leader, Foley, to "get ready to be speaker."

He said he had received calls from his home district of Fort Worth urging him to stay and fight the charges. "They didn't understand the climate in Washington. They didn't realize the deadly destruction this entire episode had wrought ... the wicked forces it had set in motion between Democrats and Republicans in the House."

CRIME

Crime Stoppers is a genuine help to investigators, Midland Police Chief Richard Czech said.

"I think it is a credit to the community to know that there are that that many people who are giving us that much information, and allowing the police department to follow up," Czech said. "I think it definitely shows there is a need in the community, and that it does work. A lot of the people that call in don't even want a reward, and the ones that do call for a reward, well that is allright too. It is a helpful tool."

Ward, a Midland County Sheriff's officer who took the program over from David Cobos, now head of Texas Crime Stoppers program, said only about $109,000 in reward money has been paid for information.

"We're running about $20 recovered for every dollar spent," he said. "That is even counting the information we pay for fugitive arrests, where you have no recoveries. That is a good ratio. I wouldn't say it is an exceptional ratio, but it is very good. I don't know if there is any program that is better."

About 25 new code numbers are issued monthly to persons who call the program with information, an indication the program is not slowing.

"We are really excited," said overseeing board member Jackie Hamilton. "On behalf of the other board members, I want to thank the community and the news media. Without the news media, we wouldn't even be on our first million yet."

Ms. Hamilton recalled the program's meager beginnings.

"And to think, it was started with someone's private bank account."

PLANES

If the county doesn't adopt the exemptions, Brown warned that airplane owners may be forced to move their planes to hangars in other counties that don't collect the tax.

Erdmann, who buys and sells oil and gas properties, said the taxes paid by Midland County pilots have not been invested in aviation.

By eliminating the tax, many pilots who sold their aircraft because of the heavy tax burden, may return to recreational flying, he said.

Midland County Tax Assessor-Collector Frances Shuffield said the new law could save money because the cost of collection is sometimes more than what the taxes bring in to the county, city, school, college and hospital district.

Additionally, Mrs. Shuffield said she doesn't believe the removal of airplanes and recreational vehicles from the tax roll would have much of an effect on the county's $3.9 billion tax base.

BUSH

Emerging from dinner with Mrs. Thatcher at 10 Downing Street on Thursday night, Bush declared, "NATO is strong. We are showing a very solid front."

As Bush's black limousine pulled away, Mrs. Thatcher approached reporters and said, "We're very much together."

Asked if Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev was trying to divide the NATO alliance, Mrs. Thatcher said, "He wouldn't succeed. NATO is strong and the alliance is firm.

"We're not going to have our defenses undermined," she added.

In a dinner toast, the prime minister assured Bush, "You always will be able to count on Britain when there is danger, when you need us. That's why the relationship is so special."

Bush called Mrs. Thatcher a prime minister "who holds the reins of history."

He noted "it was in this very city that a little more than a century ago Karl Marx died, leaving behind ideas that were to bear his name."

A succession of British prime ministers and American presidents worked "to stem Marxism at full tide," Bush said. Now "we can explore possibilities for peace that would have seemed widely unrealistic just a handful of years ago."

"We seek to free Europe from the shadow of Soviet military power."

The farewell dinner, attended by a phalanx of British celebrities and sporting stars, capped a week filled with praise from Western allies for America's new president.

Earlier in the day, Denis Thatcher, the prime minister's husband, gave Mrs. Bush a gallant kiss on the hand when he greeted her at 10 Downing Street.

When photographers clamored for a repeat, a playful Mrs. Bush clasped Denis Thatcher's hand and planted a kiss on it.

OPEC

In spite of the excess volumes, prices have remained strong, aided by a series of accidents in the North Sea and Alaska that have disrupted oil supplies and caused higher-than-expected demand.

The Mideastern source said an official target price would become "irrelevant" if all OPEC members adhere to their quotas. The target price has become more of a psychological standard, not a true reflection of market fundamentals. Similarly, an earlier Saudi proposal calling for establishment of a $15-a-barrel floor price also would have been a psychological measure, he said, intended to provide a safety net against a price drop such as occurred in 1986.

That year, prices fell from a high of about $28 a barrel in January to less than $10 by midsummer. The market recovered to about $14 when OPEC adopted a new production accord that included an $18-a-barrel target price in December 1986.

Saudi oil minister Sheik Hisham Nazer reaffirmed previously announced plans to abandon specific price goals. "We are proposing the elimination of $18 as a target, and we have withdrawn our proposal of a $15 floor," he said.

Nazer declined to answer other questions or clarify apparently contradictory statements issued by himself and Saudi King Fahd.

The Saudi minister initially introduced the $15-a-barrel floor price proposal at last November's OPEC meeting. The other 12 ministers then rejected the idea.

The plan resurfaced several weeks ago after Saudi King Fahd said prices could climb to $26 a barrel if all 13 OPEC members observed their quotas.

The Mideast source said the king's $26 statement was an observation about market conditions at the time and should not be viewed as a change in the kingdom's policy. He noted that the price for West Texas Intermediate crude in late April rose to more than $24 a barrel.

Although Saudi Arabia and Kuwait are reported to be deeply divided, Kuwait oil minister Sheik Ali Khalifa al-Sabah indicated that official prices also are irrelevant to him. Asked what was his preferred price, he replied, "Does it make a difference?"

An issue that certainly will make a difference to the OPEC powers will be how any quota increase should be allocated.

The 13 OPEC members agree that their sales quotas should be higher, but disagree on the amount of the increase and how it should be divided.

Saudi Arabia has been adament that any hike should be shared equally, according to the percentage of the total each country now has. Kuwait, however, is asking for 300,000 barrel-per-day increase at a time when the organization is considering a 1 million-a-day increase for all the member nations.

It claims that a disproportionate increase is justified because Kuwait is the only OPEC member whose quota is less than half of its production capacity.

Couple teaches students how to sit down on the job

By CHUCK STEVICK

DICKINSON, Texas (AP) — Susan Shea has an answer to a question that has stymied philosophers for generations.

Yes, she says, you can teach an old dog new tricks.

Teaching its owner, however, may be more difficult.

Mrs. Shea is the S in D&S Dog Obedience School, which offers an eight-week course aimed at turning Fido and Rex into better canine citizens.

Though the course is designed for dogs, their owners are expected to participate.

"I can train someone's dog," says Mrs. Shea, but the owner will be shortchanged if he or she doesn't take part in the process. "The training really develops a strong bond between the two."

The classes "are for people who want a good dog at home," she says. "They want to be able to walk down the street without dragging it. They want a dog that will come when it's called."

At the end of eight weeks of classes — and homework — they'll have a dog that will do those things and more. In addition to heeling (walking behind the owner) with or without a leash, and coming when summoned, the successful D&S graduate will stay, sit and stand for examination. Mrs. Shea says the latter is particularly useful during visits to the vet.

To accomplish the basic training, owners must be willing to invest at least 20 minutes a day, five days a week with their pets. Advanced training takes longer.

Mrs. Shea and her husband Dennis (the D in D&S) started the school in 1981, after eight years of involvement in dog training. In addition to their school, the Sheas teach a similar course during the spring term of Alvin Community College.

"It's more or less a hobby," she says. "We do it because we enjoy it and love animals."

In real life, Dennis works for Monsanto in Alvin. Susan, a registered nurse, is a diabetes educator for the University of Texas Medical Branch in Galveston.

Mrs. Shea says the age and breed of a dog has little to do with what it can be taught. "If a dog doesn't have physical problems, it can learn," she says.

And even if it does have physical problems, it probably can learn. Mrs. Shea fondly remembers one D&S graduate that was blind as a doorknob.

Mrs. Shea says they taught the dog by concentrating on voice, rather than visual commands. The dog did fine, but its elderly owner had some problems.

"She felt bad about the dog being blind and wasn't willing to make it do what it didn't want to do," Mrs. Shea says.

"That dog was smart."

According to Mrs. Shea, the trick to training a dog is convincing it that you are in charge. That can be tricky, since dogs are pack animals by nature and apt to believe they are the leader of the pack.

Says Mrs. Shea, "Some dogs have dominant personalities," the kind of animal that, when told to do something, thinks "make me. In those cases, it usually hasn't been settled at home who's the boss."

The remedy is simple enough. "You teach a dog that what you say, you mean," Mrs. Shea says.

D&S utilizes the Volhard Motivational Methods in its training sessions. The system — named after its developers — calls for firmness, but no violence.

For instance, some self-styled experts believe an owner should hit the dog's nose with a rolled-up newspaper at certain times during housebreaking — such as when the pet decides to use the house as a personal toilet.

This is not the Volhard way. "We do not advocate hitting a dog, not even with newspapers," says Mrs. Shea. "There is no screaming. We seldom say no."

Is Gingrich ethics panel's next target?

By VIC OSTROWIDZKI
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Now that Speaker Jim Wright, the leading Democrat in the House, is resigning, the investigating spotlight of the House ethics committee is expected to swing around to his chief accuser, GOP Whip Newt Gingrich of Georgia.

Gingrich, the second-ranking Republican in the House, last year instigated the panel's probe that led to the Texan's fall from grace — and power.

Wright offered to resign Wednesday when it became clear that the ethics panel was unlikely to rule favorably on his request to dismiss charges involving his financial links to a Texan developer, George Mallick, and allegations that he sold his 1984 book, "Reflections of a Public Man," in bulk to lobbyists and interest groups in order to circumvent House limits on outside income.

Now, despite Wright's call for a ceasefire in the searing, partisan battles that have enveloped Capitol Hill, Gingrich, 45, a conservative gadfly who has earned the enmity of many Democrats, is an odds-on favorite to become the ethics panel's next target.

"Gingrich has got to be the most nervous guy in America today," said Rep. Beryl Anthony, D-Ark., chairman of the House Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, who has in the past described Gingrich as a "grenade thrower." Anthony added that Gingrich "has got to see that he has to live or die by the sword he has pulled out."

In mid-April, Rep. Bill Alexander, another Arkansas Democrat, filed a complaint accusing Gingrich of 10 House rules violations.

The allegations stem from a partnership Gingrich entered in 1984 with 21 prominent Republican conservatives to promote a book that the Georgia lawmaker co-authored with his wife Marianne, and political associate David Drake, in return for a share of half the profits.

Published by St. Martin Press, the book, "Window of Opportunity," offered predictions and proposals for reforming American government and society.

Alexander's complaint alleged that Gingrich violated campaign finance laws and House rules on gifts, outside-income limitations and disclosure of income and expenses. Alexander also charged that Gingrich's partnership involved "21 people, many of whom have direct interest in legislation."

According to the complaint, the partners each contributed $5,000 to promote the book. The book sold 17,000 hardcover copies and more than 9,000 paperbacks. Net sales totaled $122,120. Marianne Gingrich, who served as general manager of the partnership, earned $11,500. In addition, Gingrich and his wife received $14,036 in royalties.

The publisher reported in 1988 that it lost $6,259 on the book venture. Because the partnership received no profits, the $104,185 loss generated between 1984 and 1988 was distributed among the partners, providing them with tax writeoffs.

The investors included a number of prominent and wealthy conservatives, including Joseph Coors of the Adolph Coors brewing company; Roger Milliken, president of Milliken Industries, a South Carolina textile manufacturer, and Howard (Bo) Callaway, who was Gerald Ford's presidential campaign manager in 1976.

Alexander charged that because of the unusual nature of the partnership and the losses incurred by investors, the royalties received by Gingrich and his wife do not fit the House's definition of royalties and thus violate House limits on outside income.

The Arkansas Democrat also charged that payments to Mrs. Gingrich and her interest in the partnership were gifts that violated House rules.

In defending himself against Alexander's charges, Gingrich has said his book arrangement was different from Wright's, that it was a "real book published by a real publisher and sold in real bookstores." He said the deal was well within House rules.

In an interview with Hearst Newspapers, he said:

"I've nothing to hide. I knew full well that this issue might well come up when I filed charges against Wright. I knew full well the intensity and savagery of the Democratic response.

If the ethics panel probes Gingrich's finances, it will likely also take a close look at Gingrich's second book publishing arrangement.

Gingrich was accused by Democrats last year of having accepted $13,000 in 1977 from patrons for a novel he never finished.

Gingrich has said his work on the novel was interrupted by his election to Congress in 1978 and that he never went back to it.

Gephardt asks Democrats to elect him majority leader

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Richard Gephardt appealed to his Democratic colleagues Thursday to elect him majority leader as part of a "new generation" to take control of the House.

"John Kennedy said in 1961 that it was time for a new generation of Americans to lead our country. Now I believe it is time for a new generation of members to lead the Congress," Gephardt, 48, said in a letter to House Democrats.

The Missouri congressman noted that, like himself, two-thirds of current House members have been elected since 1978, and he described the Democrats as a "young and vibrant majority."

The seven-term lawmaker is campaigning for the No. 2 House leadership spot to replace Rep. Tom Foley, who is expected to become speaker next week now that Speaker Jim Wright has announced his resignation.

Gephardt, who ran for president in 1988, is considered the front-runner in the leadership race although he is opposed by Rep. Ed Jenkins, D-Ga.

The Missourian confirmed that he would not seek the 1992 presidential nomination if he becomes majority leader but would "devote all of my energies to the work of the House." He said he had been "seriously considering" another run for the White House, and said it was a difficult decision to seek the House post.

Some Democrats were annoyed at Gephardt's prolonged absence from the House during last year's presidential campaign, when he was head of the party caucus, the No. 4 leadership job. He no longer holds that post.

Accountant arrested in 1971 family slayings

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — John E. List's first life as a church-going accountant ended 18 years ago when he disappeared after the slayings of his mother, wife and three children in their Victorian mansion.

List

His second, almost parallel existence ended Thursday when FBI agents arrested List in an accounting office in Richmond, Va., wrapping up a search that had led to all 50 states, Europe and South America.

The arrest came 11 days after Fox television network's "America's Most Wanted" program broadcast details of List's case.

The show re-enacted the slayings, and displayed photos of List from before the killings and a sculptor's bust of how he might look today. One viewer called to say a man resembling List was living in the Richmond suburb of Midlothian, the FBI said.

"I don't know what a guy who's killed five people is supposed to look like, but he was not that person," said Pat Ferguson, who lives two doors away from the man she knew as Robert P. Clark but who agents said was List.

"He worked hard in his yard, went to work every day, went to church every Sunday. The guy was so average."

List is accused of shooting to death his mother, Alma, 85; wife, Helen, 45; and their three children, Patricia, 16, John Jr. 15, and Frederick, 13.

Their bodies were found Dec. 7, 1971, in the family's 18-room mansion in Westfield, 10 miles southwest of Newark. Police said they found a confession written by List and addressed to his Lutheran minister on the dining table.

"Nobody believed he could do something like that," said Frank Chenitz, who lives a few houses away from where the mansion stood. It was destroyed by fire in 1972.

"I say give him a fair trial, because we've only heard one side of the story," said Chenitz. "But the things he's accused of, if he did them, then he deserves the worst. They were atrocities."

After the slayings, investigators found that List had two mortgages on his house, was failing as a financial consultant and had been siphoning money from his mother's $200,000 savings account.

Since 1971, List lived most of the time in Denver, where he met a woman at a Lutheran church function in 1977 and married her eight years later, authorities said.

Authorities said List's new wife, Delores, was unaware of his past and was shocked by his arrest. She has helped agents piece together some of List's movements since 1971.

The childless couple lived in the Richmond area for about a year, authorities said.

Neighbors Joseph and Jacqueline Stefano said the Clarks were good, hardworking people who did not like to talk about their past.

The families did odd jobs for each other and exchanged books and videotapes, Stefano said. Clark often called up to recommend a movie or television show, Stefano said. One of his picks was "America's Most Wanted," but Stefano missed the program the week List was featured.

In his confession, List said he believed his family was drifting from the church and was upset that his daughter wanted to be an actress, investigators have said.

Before the killings, List wrote notes to his children's teachers and his minister saying the family would be away for a few weeks visiting an ailing relative, police said. Newspaper delivery was canceled and the thermostat was turned off to retard the decomposition of the bodies.

Neighbors called police when they noticed lights in the house burning out. The lights had been left on as security.

Officers forced their way in and found the bodies of List's wife and children in the ballroom. His mother's body was found in an upstairs closet. All had been dead a month.

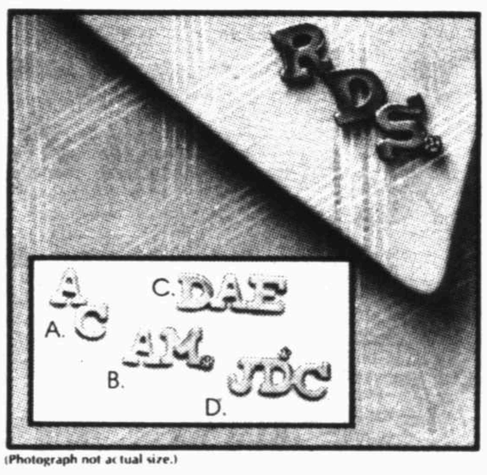

"It's something I remember like yesterday," said James Moran, who was police chief at the time. "I walked into that house and saw how one kid was shot with nine bullets in him, just savagely.

"You don't forget something like that."

Old water system corrodes town's relationship with firms

By VALERIE ULLMAN-AVERY

ROARING SPRINGS, Texas (AP) — On the surface, Roaring Springs is a typical town. But beneath the sun-baked earth and mesquite-covered breaks in the Caprock runs a problem that's eating up the community and could cost it two businesses.

The problem is water.

Oh, the small Motley County town has plenty of it. But it's not the kind of water on which a community can be built.

The water has a heavy mineral content. And compounding the problem is an old and antiquated water system.

"If everyone takes a shower at the same time and you're at the end of a line, you'll have to wait till everyone is finished," said Tim Pierce, South Plains Association of Governments economic development director.

Roaring Springs' current water system was built 75 years ago when the railroad came through West Texas. Pierce said railroad workers used the redwood log cross-ties from the railroad tracks to line the wells.

"They just used what was available, and nothing has been done to upgrade since," he said.

The community, located about 80 miles northeast of Lubbock, has two wells. Only one serves the town of 265. The other has been shut down because it is in such bad shape.

Two of the town's biggest users of water are thriving businesses, Thacker Jewelry and Quail Pipe Corporation. Both want to expand, but both have second thoughts because of the water situation.

"We're looking to expand," said Thacker Jewelry president Joe Thacker. "Our business is looking real good, but it's hard to find housing for my employees."

Most of Thacker's 32 workers drive in from Matador, Spur and McAdoo, a 25-mile drive for some. "I want to hire professional jewelers, but I have to go outside the area," Thacker said.

"I moved three families. I want to hire three or four more. But most come from urban areas, and when they take one look at the water supply they turn the job down," said Thacker. "It's difficult to move into a rural area anyway. And when they see a water supply that's not any good, it compounds the problem.

"Two people I hired left because of the water system," he said.

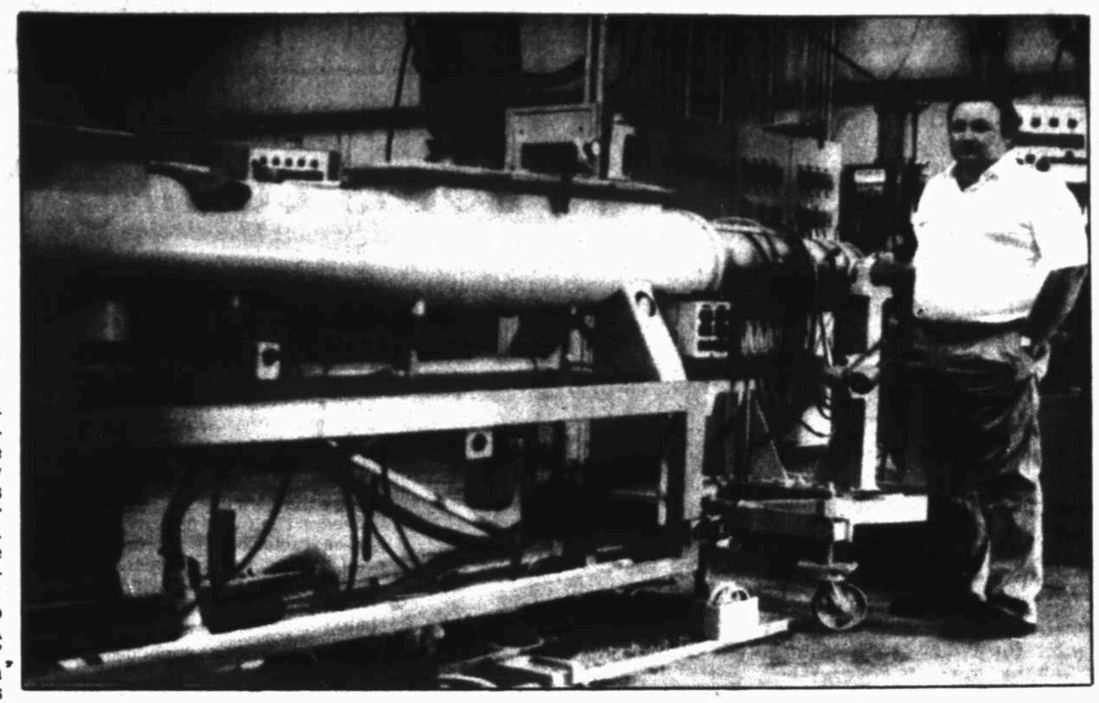

Thacker's employees need housing. There's not much available rental property, so the people who move in with jobs are forced to build new homes. But no lending institutions are prepared to approve loans for homes with a sub-par water supply.

The water has been cited by the Texas Department of Health as a potential health hazard.

"We've got several people who can't get loans through the FHA (Farmer's Home Administration)," Pierce said. "They don't want to loan money because of water conditions in the area."

While the water quality is eating up Thacker's supply of employees, it's slowing down the production of plastic pipes at Quail Pipe Corporation. Quail Pipe makes pipe for oil and gas utility companies and telecommunications businesses.

"With the heavy mineral content, it clogs up the machinery," said Quail Pipe Corporation Vice-President Randy Barton. "It's not good for us. We just need a good water supply."

Randy Barton, vice president of Quail Pipe Corporation, looks over equipment which gets clogged up by the high mineral content in the 75-year-old city water system. It may force his company to relocate.

AP Laserphoto

The sandy water pits and scars the pipe as it is cooled, causing blemishes.

Quail Pipe uses a steady supply of water to cool down the pipe after it is produced. Barton said because of a heavy concentration of oil, grease and sand in the well water, Quail Pipe workers must purify the water before they use it and after it is run through the system.

"The biggest problem with the water content is the corrosion on the tanks," said Barton. "It's costly on machinery. Every once in a while we have to strip down the equipment and sand it. That takes up a lot of our production time."

Barton and Thacker have written letters to Roaring Springs City Council members. Both company presidents have indicated that if the water supply doesn't improve, they will have to move their companies elsewhere.

"I would hope we wouldn't have to move," said Barton. "We like it here. It's a good place to live. We don't look forward to going anywhere."

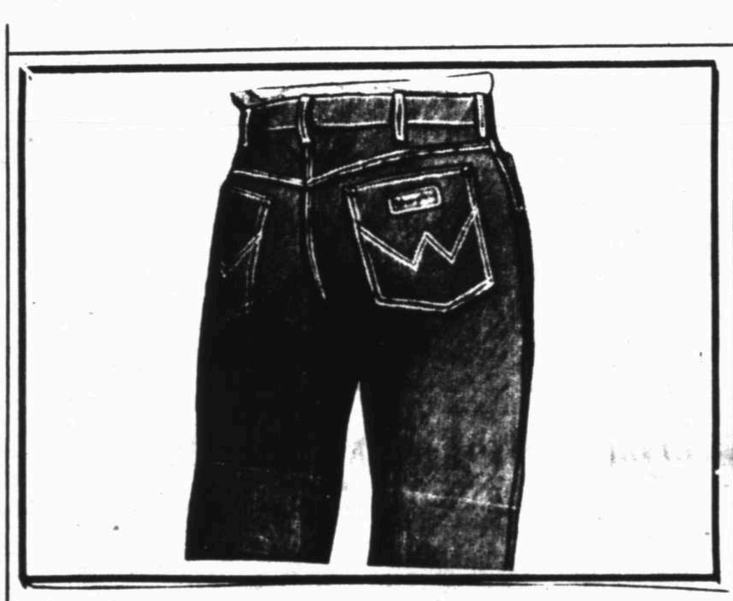

"There is that possibility," said Thacker.

Losing the two big businesses would put the nail in the coffin for an already suffering economy. Motley County's population has dwindled the last five years, designating it as a "redevelopment county" by the federal government.

Because it is suffering financially, the county is eligible for federal funds.

Something amiss down in Austin

Feel like being astounded today? Well, try this on for size: During the just-completed session of the Texas Legislature, a total of 1,317 bills were approved by lawmakers. And, sad to say, they didn't even get to the "biggie" — workers' compensation.

They'll do that in a special session that Gov. Bill Clements called for June 20th.

Oh, yes, the taxpayers will get the bill for that special session, necessitated by the legislators' inability to get to the real reason for this regular session.

Government is big business and if you don't believe us, just ask some of the several hundred special interest groups that flock to Austin every time a session begins to push their particular causes.

Of course, there are those bills that address the public good and really do serve the people of Texas. But there is more than a little special interest legislation being funneled through the Texas Legislature and it's contributing to the problem of a larger, more complex government at the state level — while still being far shy of the huge bureaucracy in Washington, D.C.

One has to wonder, in fact, whether a lot of the legislature's work is not merely designed to perpetuate state bureaucracy jobs and, thus, feed waste in state government. A recent study along that line, conducted by the Dallas-based National Center for Policy Analysis, suggested that the state government may actually waste $6 billion a year, with that amount of state spending potentially available to be cut without doing any great damage to the well-being of Texans. It is the legislature that determines what needs to be addressed in the state and approves funding for purchases.

This is not to suggest that the legislature is not needed or is called into session merely to waste the taxpayers' money, but rather to question how priorities are established. Aren't the most pressing items of business dealt with on a first-come, first-served basis? They should be.

It seems that when a number of newspapers around the state call for the legislature to specifically address a certain item of business — workers' compensation — and the legislature then meets for 140 days without resolving that one particular item and, in fact, has to schedule a special session to address the item, something is amiss.

It's time to identify what's amiss and correct the problem before it puts the state government in the poorhouse.

Bush touts cutting Nicaraguan aid

WASHINGTON — The Bush White House is touting a kinder, gentler attitude toward Nicaragua. But behind the scenes the administration has found a new way to wage a covert campaign against the Sandinistas — by bullying international banks that are supposed to be aloof from politics.

Jack Anderson

Representatives from several countries gathered in Stockholm last month to talk about aid for Nicaragua. The Sandinista government, never a model of fiscal responsibility, was knocked to its knees by the damage from Hurricane Joan last October and needs help from outsiders.

Not only did the Bush administration shun the meeting, it urged other countries not to go. And knowledgeable sources claim the White House pressured the independent World Bank and Inter-American Development Bank to stay home too. Both banks, based in Washington, D.C., were invited to attend as observers. They loan money to foreign governments.

Participants at the Stockholm conference were surprised when the World Bank did not send a representative. Sources within the bank and in the Swedish government believe the Bush administration put pressure on the bank to stay away. Sources inside the Inter-American Development Bank told our associate Scott Sleek that similar pressure was applied there, but the bank sent an observer to the conference anyway.

Neither bank is supposed to be swayed by politics. The Inter-American Development Bank charter says that bank officials cannot "be influenced in their decisions by the political character of the member (nation) ... Only economic considerations shall be relevant to their decision." Nicaragua is a member of both banks.

Latin American watchdogs say the real victims of the political game playing are Nicaragua's poor people, especially those living along the hurricane-ravaged Atlantic coast. The Council on Hemispheric Affairs, a human rights group specializing in Latin American affairs, claims that by pressuring the banks Bush is merely "continuing the Reagan approach of unremitting hostility toward Nicaragua." World Bank officials initially agreed to attend the meeting on the condition that Nicaragua's past bad debts would be discussed. The Sandinistas are in hock to the World Bank for $78.5 million in overdue loan payments. Swedish officials agreed to that caveat, but then the World Bank backed out. Insiders say the waffling embarrassed the bank.

The World Bank's official line is that it skipped the conference because Nicaragua is in arrears. Bank spokesman Frank Vogl told us the bank was worried about giving the impression that it might forgive the old debts. Nicaragua is more than $30 million in arrears to the Inter-American Development Bank too, but that didn't stop that bank from observing the meeting.

The Bush administration insists that Nicaragua should get no additional aid until it starts looking more like a democracy. The White House claims Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega's promise of an election next year is a sham. That's reason enough for the United States not to send a delegate to the Stockholm meeting, and even to urge its allies to boycott too. But leaning on the independent international banks is a no-no. Maybe Bush thinks he can play the bully because the United States is the largest shareholder in both banks.

The tactics paid off. Ortega had hoped for $250 million out of the meeting. He got about $50 million in pledges from the countries that attended. The White House issued a statement voicing satisfaction that the figure was not higher.

FAMILY FEUD — Gen. Adnan Khairallah, the Iraqi defense minister killed in a helicopter crash there last month, was a close confidant of President Saddam Hussein, but our sources say their friendship had hit a bump over family matters. Khairallah was the brother of Hussein's first wife. Last year Hussein secretly decided to take a second wife. His first didn't like the idea, but Hussein married No. 2 anyway. The marriage caused bad feelings between Hussein and his brother-in-law. Khairallah dropped out of sight for a while. But our sources in Iraq say the two men reconciled before Khairallah's death.

MINI-EDITORIAL — The new Soviet KGB chief has promised to be a more open kind of a guy. He promises that the Soviet people will be told more about the inner workings of the spy agency. One Soviet newspaper is even publishing a little column of KGB news. The next thing you know, Muscovites will be reading daily listings on the society pages of Pravda announcing who got rounded up and who got shipped off to the gulag. Ain't glasnost grand?

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, June 2, the 153rd day of 1989. There are 212 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

Ten years ago, on June 2, Pope John Paul II arrived in his native Poland. It was the first visit by a pope to a Communist country.

On this date:

In 1851, Maine became the first state to enact a law prohibiting alcohol.

In 1883, the first non-league baseball game to be played under electric lights took place, in Fort Wayne, Ind.

In 1886, President Grover Cleveland married Frances Folsom in a White House ceremony. Cleveland is, to date, the only president to marry in the executive mansion while in office.

In 1924, Congress granted U.S. citizenship to all American Indians.

In 1941, baseball's "Iron Horse," Lou Gehrig, died in New York of a degenerative disease, amyotrophic lateral sclerosis.

In 1946, the Italian monarchy was abolished in favor of a republic.

In 1953, Queen Elizabeth II of Britain was crowned in Westminster Abbey, four months after the death of her father, King George VI.

In 1966, the U.S. space probe Surveyor 1 landed on the moon and began transmitting detailed photographs of the lunar surface.

In 1975, Vice President Nelson Rockefeller said his commission had found no widespread pattern of illegal activities at the CIA.

In 1983, 23 people died after fire broke out aboard an Air Canada jetliner, which was forced to make an emergency landing at Greater Cincinnati International Airport.

In 1986, for the first time, the public could watch the proceedings of the U.S. Senate on television as a six-week experiment of televised sessions began.

Thought for Today: "Hands are the heart's landscape." — Pope John Paul II.

Old jocks don't quit, they just jog away!

NEW YORK — It was Our Gang — the Over-the-Hill gang.

Stockbrokers and salesmen who never left the Army or Navy. Public relations and advertising types who once played sandlot baseball or pick-up basketball.

Jack Casserly

Slower, fatter, sweaty, overaged jocks.

We meet at this health club in lower Manhattan every day — pounding our legs on the treadmills, grunting off blubber on exercise bikes, groaning under the weights, swimming lap after longer lap, swapping stories in the hot steam room.

We were joined by the Yuppies — younger, slimmer, faster, smarter.

They played more racquetball, squash and tennis, and often preferred aerobics and pumping iron.

We talked with those guys, but we were different — slower talking, less buoyant, more introspective.

Over the past year, one by one, the Yuppies have quietly turned in their locker keys. Scores of them have disappeared. We have wearily slogged along day after day.

It has taken us time to know why they left us groaning.

Marriage caught up with some. They are now home with the wife or meeting her for dinner. Or shopping for the new apartment. Maybe off to see her parents.

We have somehow kept pounding away. The heart-attack death of long-distance runner Jim Fixx, who promoted jogging and fitness like a religion, sent shivers down our spines. We asked ourselves if we were another Jim Fixx waiting to happen. But we ran and swam.

The Jock Boom in America is slowing down. Many health clubs are closing. Big discounts are now offered to new members. Clubs now often lower entrance fees.

The Yuppies tell us they are taking up walking, bicycling and golf. And exercising on home equipment like rowing machines. All say they have slowed down their fitness programs.

This is happening across America. Onetime fitness buffs are becoming weekend sailors and golfers — when the weather's good.

But we in the Over-the-Hill gang are still puffing along — winded much of the time, rubbing aching muscles to ease the pain.

Older guys are great storytellers. Between our fish stories, we sweat our way through the days, weeks and months. Our wives are content to go out to dinner two or three times a month. And they have heard all our fish and war stories. We're not so dashing anymore. We don't try to outsmart them — just turn on the tube and snap open a cold one while watching the news.

I can't seem to lose weight although I work out and swim five days a week. My wife never notices how hard I try. Instead, she asks if I have any good magazines. If I do, she whisks them away as fast as a box of chocolates.

The gray is starting to creep around my ears. And my voice now often becomes hoarse in cold weather. There are other signs that I am more like Archie Bunker than John Wayne. I have fallen several times this year because my knees buckled. And some of my joints seem to be always aching.

But I still work out, long after the Yuppies have gone. And so do my Over-the-Hill pals. When one of us gets tired, the others grunt: "Hang tough."

We don't know any better. So we return day after day, tell the same old jokes, and struggle through another hour or so. It is an old story — one more play, one more swing, one last swim. None of us is searching for the Fountain of Youth. We just can't quit because, at our stage, we wouldn't know what to do with ourselves.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

For $100 you can put the doctor to sleep!

I've been feeling quite frustrated and tense, so I made an appointment with my shrink, Dr. Alvin (Slick) Allgood.

I have a great deal of respect for psychiatry.

Lewis Grizzard

As Doctor Allgood said, when I questioned his charging me $100-per-hour a session — which lasts only 45 minutes — "Find somebody else to listen to your petty problems and not go to sleep. This racket ain't as easy as it looks."

"So," Dr. Allgood said, at the beginning of our recent appointment, "what's the problem now, and make it good. I just had a lady in here who talked about how her cat didn't love her anymore. I said find another cat. I should have gone to law school."

"I've been feeling quite frustrated and tense," I said.

"Didn't get in on the recent stock market surge, huh?" said the doctor.

"That's not it," I continued. "I think it's the little annoyances in life that are getting to me."

"Go ahead."

"It's like butter," I went ahead. "Every restaurant I've been into for breakfast lately has those little individually wrapped pats of butter. Difficult to open, and if you've got four pieces of toast that means you've got to open four of those pats.

"By that time, the toast is cold and the butter won't melt and my breakfast has been ruined."

"Very interesting," said Dr. Allgood, yawning. "What else?"

"I bought some new slacks, and you know how when you pull the tag off, there are always those four little pieces of string you've got to remove from the slacks?"

"I can't wait to see where this is going," said my doctor.

"Well, those little strings are almost impossible to remove, but you can't go out in public with strings on your slacks.

"You can't cut the string with scissors because they're too big and the strings are too little. Then you try to pull the strings out with your fingers, but that won't work either."

"For the record," said Dr. Allgood, "how did you get the strings out?"

"I burned them out with a match. I also burnt my new slacks and my fingers and had to lie down to get over these things."

"Give me some more examples and hurry, you've only got 10 minutes left."

"Tom Brokaw's tie wasn't straight on the nightly news," I said.

"This is a concern of yours?" asked Dr. Allgood.

"How can I trust a man to know what's happening in China when his tie isn't straight?"

"And?"

"And I don't like the new guy on the daytime 'Wheel of Fortune,' and there's always a long line when I go to rent a car, and I hate it when a waitress fills my coffee cup too full and I can't get any cream in it, and I still can't decide which long distance company is best, and the clock in my car has stopped working, and I can't get my VCR to stop flashing '12:00,' and why doesn't elastic in a pair of underwear last?"

There was no response from Dr. Allgood because he had dozed off. I wrote the check for a hundred and put it in his pocket — careful not to awaken him.

Boy, did I feel better.

CHARLEY REESE

Evasion sold as compromise served no one

A common bad habit in Washington is evasion disguised as a compromise. Since President George Bush's decision to ban the import of semi-automatic rifles is a good example, let's toss it on the table and conduct an autopsy.

Charley Reese

The issue of semi-automatic rifles is framed by two opposing premises. One, represented by Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, is that these weapons are a significant contributing factor to crime and therefore a ban on their sale and possession would have a positive result.

The other premise, represented by the National Rifle Association, is that these weapons are NOT a significant contributing factor and banning their sale and possession would have nil effects on crime and would only harm the rights of law-abiding citizens who may wish to own them for competitive shooting or collecting.

For purposes of examination of evasion-disguised-as-compromise, we can see that perhaps Metzenbaum is right or perhaps the NRA is right, but in either case, Bush is wrong.

If Metzenbaum is right and these rifles are a significant crime factor, then it makes no sense to ban foreign semi-automatics but not American. After all, a man shot to death won't care where the weapon was manufactured. According to Metzenbaum, about 75 percent of the semi-autos in the U.S. are domestic.

If the NRA is right and these rifles are not a significant factor in crime, then Bush has uselessly banned foreign imports and done nothing more than hand a protectionist favor to American manufacturers and inconvenienced American consumers.

Paradoxically, even from a political viewpoint, Bush's position fails. Neither the anti-gunners nor the pro-gunners are pleased while no social good is accomplished whatsoever.

Instead of offending one group and pleasing another, Bush has offended two groups and pleased no one, except perhaps his staff.

A real leader, thinking substantively of the issue instead of trying to evade it, would have come down on one side or the other, depending on which he believed was correct. His motivation would have been to do the right thing and to heck with the political consequences.

Again, paradoxically, a strong leader more often than not reaps positive political consequences. Americans recognize that on different issues we cannot all agree. But most prefer honest disagreement to evasion and indecision.

The cause of our problems of governance rests with the modern phenomena of the perpetual political campaign. The nature of a campaign mechanic is to be ever concerned with appearances; ever mindful of transient public opinion; ever reluctant to take a clear, decisive position; and to always view governance as an adjunct to campaigning rather than the other way round.

Sending troops to Panama is an example of gesture in lieu of decisive action. There are already more than 10,000 U.S. troops in Panama, about 4,700 combat or combat support types. That's more than sufficient to protect U.S. dependents — provided they are given the authority to do so.

Sending troops — but not giving them the authority to do anything either — beguiles the public into thinking Bush is taking forceful action when, in fact, he's evading taking any action.

It was pathetic to see a president of the United States offer via a news conference, in effect, a bribe to Panamanian military officers to kill or topple Manuel Noriega.

Colorado youth wins national spelling bee

WASHINGTON (AP) — Scott Isaacs, an eighth grader from Littleton, Colo., won the 62nd annual National Spelling Bee on Thursday by correctly spelling the word "spoliator."

It was the 14-year-old's third time in the national finals. He defeated Ojas V. Tejani of Hixson, Tenn., in a duel that capped the two-day finals.

They were the survivors of the largest field in the bee's history, outlasting 220 other contestants.

The word "spoliator" means a spoiler.

In the final rounds, Ojas, a 12-year-old sixth grader, correctly spelled "saponaceous," an adjective for something resembling soap, and Scott countered with the correct spelling of "ideaphoria," which is a capacity for creative thought or imagination.

Both spellers, however, missed "pasigraphy," which means an artificial international written language, and Ojas then missed the next word, "senescing," which means growing old.

Scott spelled the word correctly and under contest rules had to spell the next word correctly. He did and won the $1,500 first prize.

Ojas will collect $1,000.

In third place was Arthur A. Hodge, 14, from Pottsville, Pa., who missed "trinklied," a word meaning a drinking song. In fourth was Samantha Cassell of Johnson City, Tenn., who lost out on the word "pedicled," which means having a slender stalk.

Scott was one of seven students competing in the national finals for the third time.

He is an eighth grade pupil at Kent Denver Country Day School in Englewood, Colo. His father, Bud, is an oil engineer and his mother, Kaye, is a homemaker.

He was the 1987 and 1988 Denver spelling champion.

Ojas is in the sixth grade at St. Nicholas School in Chattanooga, the son of a chemical engineer, Vinay, and a homemaker, Indu.

Scott was to fly to New York later in the day to appear on Friday's ABC "Good Morning America," and he is booked for next week on NBC's "Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson."

Ojas, meanwhile, and the entire Indiana delegation of spellers have been invited to meet on Friday with Vice President Quayle.

After six rounds, only six boys and nine girls remained. The next round cut that number to four and four, and only the final four were left for the ninth round.

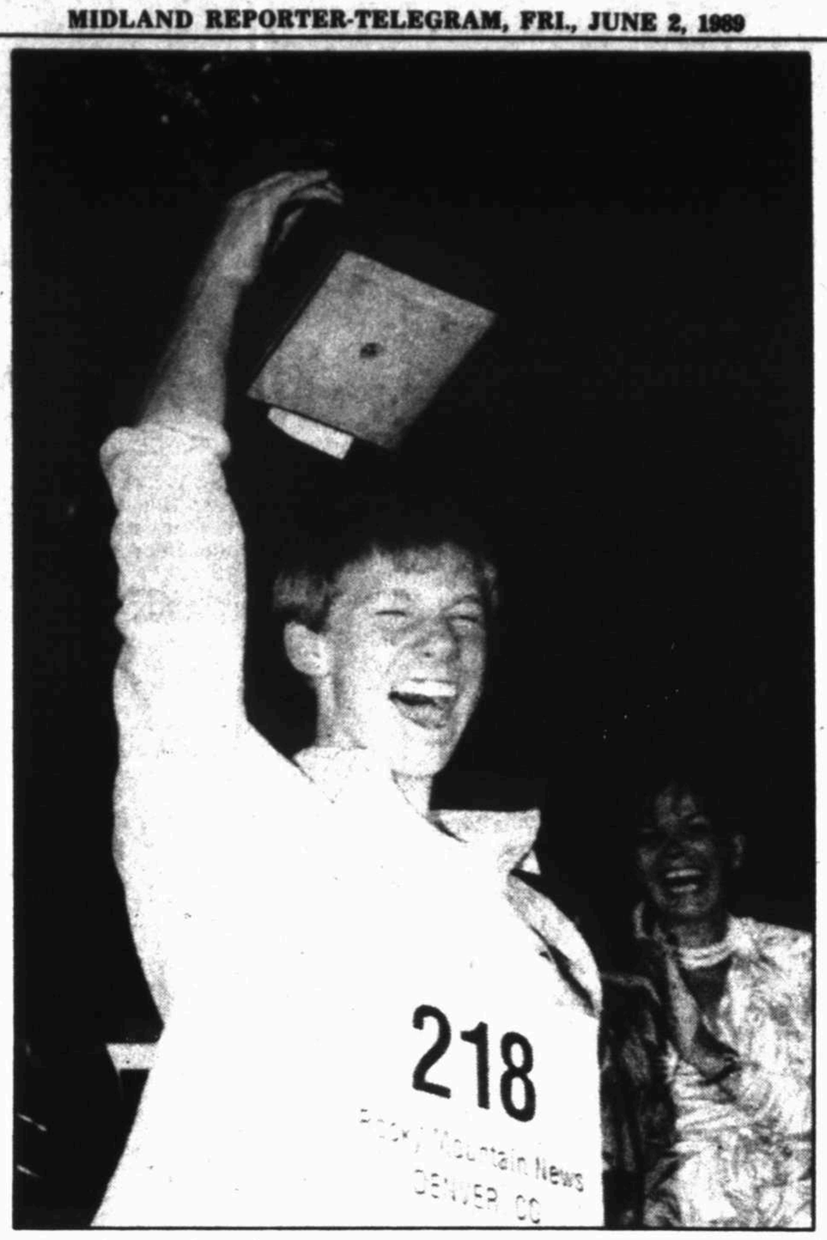

In quick succession, Arthur spelled "wieat," a living being; Samantha spelled "dihara," a buddhist monastery; Ojas had "halieutics," which relates to fishing, and Scott was correct with "morion," a helmet worn by 16th and 17th century Spanish footsoldiers.

In the 10th round, Arthur was correct with "vigentennial," which means once every 20 years, and Ojas had "stereopsis," a capacity for depth perception; Scott spelled "diluvial," which concerns a flood or deluge, but Samantha tripped up on "pedicled."

Arthur then lost out with "trinklied." And that left only the two finalists.

Scott said that he had been studying 104 dictionary words a day — the number that will fit on a sheet of computer paper — since January. He said he has participated in 15 bees counting local, regional and national contests, and has won eight of them.

As for the future, he said, "I might be into words when I get older, or I might be a pilot."

Hundreds battling blaze in Carson National Forest

Associated Press

Firefighters were mopping up hot spots and working at controlling a 650-acre fire in the Carson National Forest in northern New Mexico.

The Cedar Springs Fire was declared contained Thursday, when the 440 firefighters got an assist from the weather in their efforts to complete a man- and machine-built fire line.

State forestry division spokeswoman Terry Zubchenok said the division planned to start sending fire crews home Friday.

Frank Smith, chief of fire management in the forestry division of the state Department of Energy, Minerals and Natural Resources, said crews Thursday were mopping up an area from the fire's perimeter back about 100 feet.

"We're in real heavy mop up," he said. "We brought in a lot of water-handling equipment last night."

The fire is the latest in a series that have charred more than 20,000 acres of tinder dry New Mexico territory during the past five days.

Firefighters dug a fire line around 90 percent of the fire by Wednesday night and finished the line Thursday, Zubchenok said. Part of the fire line was secured by hand and the rest with bulldozers.

The blaze burned west of Dulce and east of Bloomfield in the Jicarilla Ranger District of the national forest. The area contains about 25 natural gas wells that connect to underground pipelines.

NATION IN BRIEF

Coast Guard chief pleased with cleanup

VALDEZ, Alaska (AP) — The Coast Guard commandant said Exxon is making progress in cleaning up its huge oil spill off the Alaskan coast, but the state's top conservation official said a lot more work needs to be done.

"I'm seeing a massive project that appears to be well run," Adm. Paul Yost said Thursday after touing Prince William Sound beaches.

The state's commissioner for environmental conservation said Exxon has increased its effort but is not through gearing up for the job.

"We think there's a long way to go both inside and outside Prince William Sound," Dennis Kelso said.

Meanwhile, a rule went into effect Thursday requiring alcohol tests for skippers and other tanker crew members who might operate oil-laden vessels through the sound. Shipping companies are to hire contractors who will administer the tests.

The requirement is part of an interim set of state rules established after the tanker Exxon Valdez ran aground March 24 in the sound and spilled nearly 11 million gallons of oil. Its captain, Joseph Hazelwood, failed sobriety tests administered more than 10 hours after the accident. The vessel's third mate was operating the ship when it ran aground.

Murder charges filed

NORTH CHICAGO, Ill. (AP) — Parents accused of forcing their baby to drink acid seemed like average people, but apparently had devised a scheme to collect money in a bogus product tampering case, an investigator said.

"I've never seen a case that is as heinous or violent. It's beyond imagination," said Detective Johnie Phelps Jr.

Shelia Smith, 26, and Ricky Irby Sr., 27, have been charged with murder in the death of Quinten Irby, who was 3 months old in 1984 when he was taken to a hospital with acid burns in his mouth and throat.

Associate Judge Harry Hartel Thursday ordered the parents held in lieu of $1 million bond each. They are to be arraigned Wedenesday.

Phelps, a 14-year veteran of the North Chicago Police Department, investigated the case and knew Smith and Irby casually because they lived in the same neighborhood as Phelps' father.

Father returns with boy

NEW YORK (AP) — A cancer-stricken boy is back in the hospital from which his father took him, and a judge has freed the boy's mother who had been jailed for allegedly refusing to disclose their whereabouts.

Judge Leon Deutsch scheduled another hearing for today to determine what kind of treatment is necessary for the 4-year-old.

Steven Pagan, 36, surrendered with his son, Darian, at Family Court on Thursday after hearing that his wife, Migdalia, had been jailed because of his action.

Deutsch returned Darian to the custody of the city's Child Welfare Administration and Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center. He ordered an examination of Darian but specifically prohibited doctors at Sloan-Kettering from administering any treatment without his consent.

Quayle praises Pepper

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President Dan Quayle and members of Congress praised Rep. Claude Pepper's compassion and vision as they and thousands of other Americans paid final respects to the champion of the elderly.

"This week's loss is tomorrow's legend," Quayle said. "We honor him best not by praising him today but by following his example in the years ahead."

Pepper, who died of stomach cancer Tuesday at age 88, lay in state in the Capitol Rotunda Thursday and today. For hours, people filed past the open casket in tribute.

Among those lauding Pepper at a brief memorial service Thursday was resigning House Speaker Jim Wright.

Judge delays PUC order forcing GTE to make refund

AUSTIN (AP) — A state district judge on Thursday issued a temporary restraining order that delays a Public Utility Commission order forcing GTE Southwest Inc. to refund more than $128 million to its customers.

Judge Joe Hart issued the order after GTE filed a lawsuit on Thursday challenging the PUC edict that also called for a rate cut of $59.2 million.

The PUC had maintained that GTE owes $128 million plus interest to its customers because of overcharges on state and federal taxes since Jan. 1, 1987.

But GTE contends in the lawsuit filed Thursday that it would suffer "material and irreparable harm" because of the PUC decision.

A hearing on the suit and a permanent injunction to block the refunds is scheduled for June 12.

GTE spokesman John Wallace told The Dallas Morning News that his company intends to comply with the portion of the order that asks for a $59.2 annual rate decrease. Rates for GTE customers will be reduced by an average of 17 percent, beginning in mid-July.

The PUC refused on Wednesday to reconsider its decision in the GTE rate case.

With the rate decrease in effect, business customers' monthly bills will be reduced from $24.10 to $19.95. They also will receive lower rates for extended-area service.

When the lower rates are put in place, customers will receive a one-time credit on their bills for the five months since the PUC's decision.

Hissing roach latest pet trend

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Now for something completely different: the pet cockroach.

Don't reach for the insecticide, said Gene Alford, a salesman at Critter Shop. This isn't the kind of roach you want to stomp.

The Madagascar hissing roach, 2½ to 3 inches long, hisses like an aerosol can and will frolic on an owner's arm or shoulder, said Alford, who's asking for $6 a bug.

"Most people that have exotic tastes want something clean, not too much cleanup, easy maintenance, and it is a conversation piece," Alford said. The homely pets have sold well since going on the market in January, he said. Some people think of them as trendy.

"It depends on the individual's taste," Alford said.

The exotic pet shop has sold six of the 12 roaches it bought from the Southeast Reptile Exchange Inc.

LHS students head toward national academic contest

By BRIAN PEARSON
Staff Writer

One question may ask them to name Popeye's three nephews, while the next could have them pondering a physics problem.

Eggheads beware, because it takes more than a superior academic mind to succeed in the Texaco Star Academic Challenge, a high-octane Trivial Pursuit contest of well-rounded knowledge, speed and risk.

"It's pretty hard to study for," said Lee High School economics teacher David Fly, who will bring six LHS students with him to the national challenge this weekend in New Orleans. "It takes somebody who is confident and quick."

The LHS team won the right to attend the nationals by beating 10 other area high school teams in the April 15-16 regional event. At the national challenge, the LHS students will take on 63 teams.

LHS also was last year's regional winner but went down in the second round at the national level.

"We're really confident about this year," said James McNew, 16, an LHS junior and veteran of last year's team. "Our team showed promise last year. This year our team proved itself well in the regional competition."

Although the school's team — which also includes Jim Murphy, Erin Kelly Cyndi Froning, Ana Bustilloz and Meredith Rentz — are top academians, they do not necessarily represent the tops of their classes.

"Having a lot of knowledge is not all to this game," McNew said. "You have to be willing to take the risk of being way off the answer. If you don't take risks, you don't win."

Fly said, "A lot of people know the answer and won't hit the buzzer because they're afraid to look stupid on local television."

Fly said there is almost no way to prepare for the event other than practicing the mechanics of the challenge by hitting the buzzers and answering sample questions.

Sample questions have included naming the two busiest ports in Europe, identifying various muscles in the body and solving equations such as the following: "A retired colonel lived a quarter of his life as a boy, one-fifth as a young man, one-third as a man with responsibilities and 13 years on a pension. How old was he when he died?" The answer, obviously, is 60.

The challenge has three rounds. In the first, questions are tossed up and the individual who hits the buzzer must answer it. When an individual correctly answers a second-round question, the team gets a question to itself and members may consult each other for the answer. The third round involves 10 questions fired at a team in 60 seconds.

Fly said his team has an unusual make-up. While challenge teams are traditionally comprised of a majority of males, his team is majority female. Only two of the 64 teams at the national event are majority female, he said.

Air Show features variety from biplanes to jet fighters

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A blacksmith's biplane that first flew into the West Texas sky in 1912 will represent aviation's pioneering spirit on June 17 when Air Show '89 at Midland International Airport will feature supersonic jet fighters, a mammoth air transport, tactical attack aircraft, seaplanes, World War II "warbirds," aerobatic airplanes and possibly the B1-B bomber from Dyess Air Force Base in Abilene.

"We are going to see the famous Phantom F-4 perform. It's awesome," said Paul Erdmann, who is coordinating the annual Air Show that is sponsored by the West Texas Aerobatic Club Inc.

Aerial maneuvers, including skydiving, demonstrations by high-performance military aircraft, and aerobatic flying, will begin about 1 p.m. on Saturday, June 17. However, aircraft will be on static display at the airport from 9 a.m. until 4:30 p.m.

Aerial feats will include skydiving by the Eagle's Nest Parachute Team coordinated by Jim Fowler, maneuvers by the Mach 2-plus Phantom interceptor, demonstrations by the A-10 tactical fighter, and aerobatic flying by West Texans such as Ole Olsen, Brad Baysinger, James Jones, Fred "Hot Czech" Michna and Charlie Armstrong.

They will be flying such aircraft as the high-performance Pitts biplane, which was expressly designed for aerobatic competition, the clipped-wing Piper Cub, and a scaled-down version of the P-51D Mustang.

In addition, Dallas-based pilot Lew Shaw of the International Aerobatic Club will be flying the North American P-51D Mustang. Shaw is a former T-38 jet-pilot instructor at the old Webb Air Force Base in Big Spring.

The show will feature a fly-by of T-38 Talon jet trainers from Reese Air Force Base in Lubbock. Col. Monroe Sams, Reese AFB wing commander, will direct the fly-by, Erdmann said.

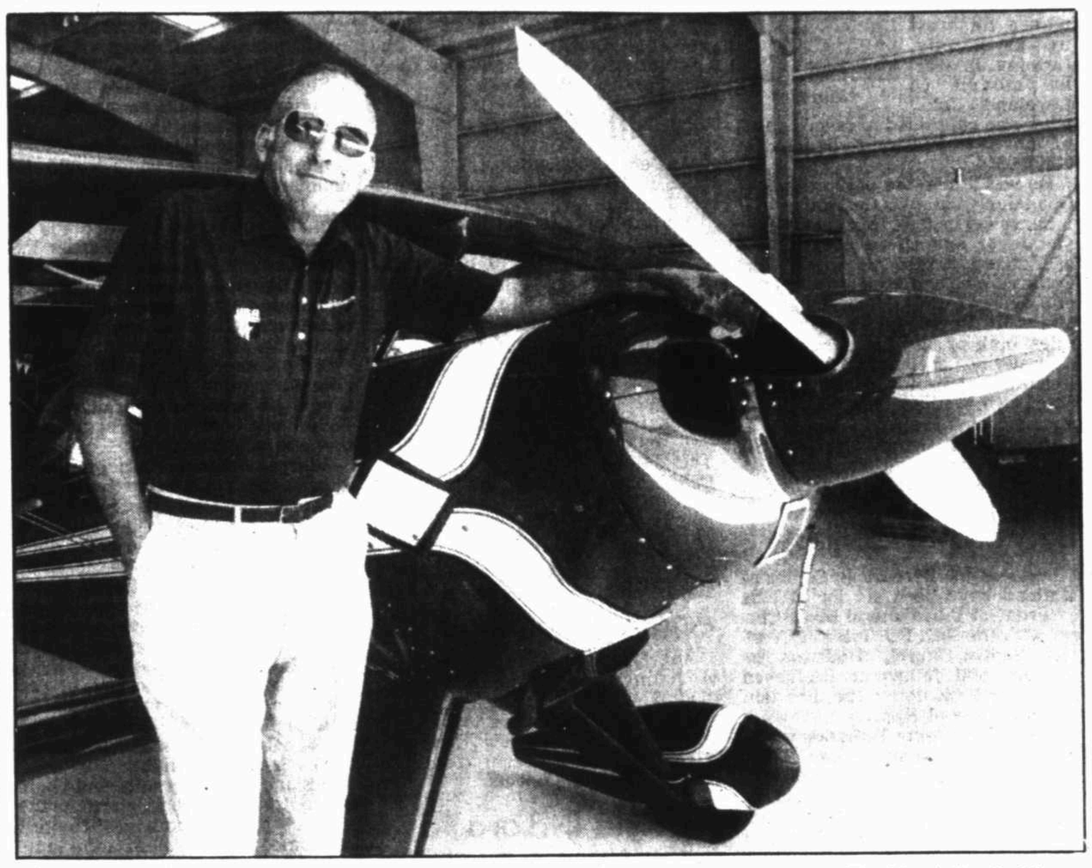

In addition, Capt. Teddy Varwig, a 31-year-old F-15 Eagle pilot who is an Air Force "William Tell" pilot, which is the equivalent of the U.S. Navy's "Top Gun" aviator, will be at the show.

"He (Varwig) will be there to talk to recruits and young people who would aspire to be Air Force pilots," Erdmann said. "You know how kids love it."

An Air Show regular, the Lockheed C-5A Galaxy jet transport, will be on display for spectators to inspect.

"Without it, we wouldn't have a show," Erdmann said. "Everybody loves it."

The C-5A is billed as the "world's largest" airplane, Erdmann noted. And it will be a C-5A that will fly about 10 aerobatic biplanes and monoplanes to to Switzerland in 1990 for the World Aerobatic competition.

Erdmann, who is transportation director for the U.S. Aerobatic Team, noted that the United States pilots, including Gene Beggs of Odessa, won the world championship in 1984 in Hungary.

In 1986 competition in England, the team came in second behind Russian fliers. And in 1988, the team, minus Beggs, won the world aerobatic title in 1988 in Canada.

Beggs, a Southwest Airlines pilot, is a "world-class pilot" who has flown in previous air shows in Midland.

Air Show '89 will include performances by the U.S. Air Force Band and a swearing-in ceremony of recruits by U.S. Air Force Brig. Gen. James S. Allen, the 47-year-old commander of the 833rd Air Division, Tactical Air Command, Holloman Air Force Base in New Mexico.

Allen, whose awards include the Distinguish Flying Cross, has more than 2,800 flying hours in the fighter-attack aircraft, such as the F-100, F-4 and A-7.

Ole Olsen, who is an aerobatic pilot of "world-class caliber," will provide live narration of his aerobatic flying and will coordinate the Air Show's flying schedule so as not to conflict with commercial airline traffic.

"That is a monumental job," Erdmann said. "He's good at it. He's the best."

Air Show '89 will be narrated by Jean Sorg, editor of the Sport Aerobatics magazine.

A highlight of the Air Show will be the display of the restored Pliska biplane, which Midland blacksmith John V. Pliska and automobile mechanic Gray Coggin built in 1911 and flew in 1912. The Pliska Aeroplane reputedly was the first Texas-built airplane to fly in Texas.

The aircraft, powered by a 50-horsepower marine engine, recently was restored by Midland-Odessa members of the Experimental Aircraft Association (EAA) and the International Aerobatic Club (IAC).

In the 1960s, the old biplane initially was restored by the Abell-Hanger Foundation of Midland.

"It was through the efforts of Mr. George T. Abell that the Pliska plane was restored," noted Ed Vogler, chairman of the Airport Advisory Board to the city of Midland. Until recently, the biplane was encased in a mini-museum at Midland International Airport.

Midland College offering free adult classes

From Staff Reports

Midland College this summer is offering free Adult Basic Education classes as well as special programs in English As a Second Language for Amnesty residents.

The college's Adult Learning Center is open from 9 a.m.-4 p.m. on Monday and Wednesday and 9 a.m.-9 p.m. on Tuesday and Thursday for persons wishing to study for their GED examinations.

Those who complete GED requirements are given certificates which are recognized as the equivalent of a high school diploma. The Adult Learning Center is located in Room 132, Occupational-Technical Building.

"Those seeking GED certificates are assessed on their first visit, then provided with individualized instruction in those areas where they need help," said Cindy Turland, director of the Adult Learning Center. "With this assistance, they can progress at their own speed. Upon completion of each segment of study, they can take the GED exam for that particular area."

The ESL/Amnesty class is being offered on two levels at Casa de Amigos, with intensive instruction to help those residing in the United States through the Amnesty program in learning English speaking and reading skills.

Both Level I and Level II ESL/Amnesty classes are taught at Casa de Amigos from 7-9 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

Information about both programs is available by calling 685-4566.

Monday final summer registration day at MC

From Staff Reports

Monday is the final day of late registration for Midland College's first summer session. Prospective students may enroll in the Student Services Office, Administration Building, from 7 a.m. until 5 p.m. Summer I classes started Tuesday, May 30.

The session ends on July 5.

Registration by Thursday afternoon was running ahead of the 1988 Summer I count.

"Since classes are four days per week during the summer sessions, a lot of material is covered each day," said Dr. Don Cates, associate dean of students and registrar. "However, there are classes where students still can catch up and complete the course work in the remaining time. Our counseling staff talks with students about those classes where late enrollment is less difficult."

Cates noted many students were enrolling during the summer to avoid taking the TASP (Texas Academic Skills Program) exam. Students who do not complete three hours of transferable college credits prior to the 1989 fall term will be required to take the TASP exam by the time they earn nine credit hours. The exam costs $24 and takes several hours to complete.

Students are advised to enroll early Monday in order to avoid another day's absence. Information about classes which have openings is available by calling 685-4501.

Conservancy preserves land old-fashioned way

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Workers at the Texas Nature Conservancy probably won't ever be found chained to a bulldozer or wielding picket signs to protect nature. They are more likely to be found doing their job at a conference table and wearing business suits.

"We do conservation the old-fashioned way: we buy it," said Texas Nature Conservancy director David Braun.

Braun's organization is the state affiliate of The Nature Conservancy, an international non-profit organization that preserves nature by gaining acreage through gift, lease, trade or purchase.

The Texas Nature Conservancy does not keep all the land it preserves. For instance, it recently donated 57,000 acres of land in the Rosillos Mountains to the National Park Service to add to Big Bend National Park.

The land was given to the Texas Nature Conservancy in 1984 by Ed Harte, of Corpus Christi, and his brother Houston, of San Antonio. The boundaries of Big Bend were not amended until 1987, when Congress passed legislation allowing the donated land to become part of a national park.

"We are very pleased," Ed Harte said of the land transfer. "For many years it was the hope of my brother and me to get the land into Big Bend."

Harte, a former chairman of the National Audubon Society, said he and his brother turned to the Conservancy to accomplish their goal because "they have more clout than two people from Texas."

Though other conservation groups say they approve of the Conservancy's unique way of protecting wildlife, the organization's critics disapprove of its acceptance of what they call "guilt money" from oil companies and other large corporations, Braun said.

"It may be tainted money, but it 'tain't enough," Braun said. "What matters is conservation. We don't ask why. If they want to give and believe in conservation, then that is enough."

Since the Texas Nature Conservancy was formed in 1964, it has undertaken 46 land-acquisition projects and preserved more than 200,000 acres of land. It buys land from a $95 million TNC fund in which affiliates borrow money to buy land, then pay it back. The fund has grown annually and increased about $10 million from 1988, Braun said.

"We are very businesslike," said Charles Gandy, development director for the Texas Nature Conservancy. "We are kind of like the Trammell Crow of conservation."

Braun said the Conservancy uses a team of staff biologists to identify areas where endangered species are found. It has identified about 2,000 areas of biological interest in the state, and since 1984 has worked with the General Land Office of Texas to take an ecological inventory of the state.

Once the Conservancy determines a piece of land is worth saving, it notifies the owners that a rare or unusual species exists on their land. Sometimes, the owners donate the land to the Conservancy, while some offer to sell it.

"The Conservancy approach is compatible with Texans' approach — non-controversial and businesslike," Braun said. "Some Texans have problems with government regulations and like how we stay in the free market."

Landowners who do not want to sell can become part of the Conservancy's Land Steward Society, said Helen Ballew, director of the Conservancy's landowner-contact program.

"They agree to protect the area and notify us of their intent to transfer the land or any outside threats," Ms. Ballew said.

The Conservancy keeps in touch with its estimated 100 Texas land stewards through newsletters, and officials try to visit the land about once a year, Ms. Ballew said.

If land is acquired, it is either managed by the Conservancy staff or transferred to the care of other conservation groups, universities or government agencies. The Conservancy retains about 60 percent of the projects.

Braun said the Conservancy project in the Big Bend area — called the North Rosillos Mountain Preserve — is the largest in Texas and the second biggest in the country. More than 64,000 acres of wetlands were recently acquired in an area of South Florida, also called the Big Bend.

"It's fantastic," Conservancy biologist Ann Schnapf said of the Rosillos project, consisting of almost 100 square miles in the Trans-Pecos region of the state. "Things that would naturally occur happen there."

Conservancy officials said the Rosillos land includes several desert springs and such rare plants as cliff thistle and silver wolfberry. The predominant vegetation is known as Chihuahuan Desert Scrub.

'Lonesome Dove' actor returns home for cowboy celebration

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Actor Barry Corbin is returning to his native West Texas to participate in this weekend's National Cowboy Symposium and Celebration.

"I have a strong interest in all of this," he said. "I love to listen to the cowboy poetry. Anybody that grew up here — especially those that leave — tends to enjoy this type of poetry and songs. Those that stay here tend to forget its importance."

Although cowboy poetry only recently is coming to the attention of the general public, Corbin said he doesn't think the poetry and the music of the cowboy has ever diminished. "Its popularity slows down a bit, and then, about every five years, we have a revival," he said.

"People like Waddie Mitchell are getting some national play on the Johnny Carson show, and other people are beginning to know of it. Still, it's not as well known as it could be."

More than 100 poets, musicians, singers, storytellers, panel members and presenters of scholarly papers are scheduled to take part in the event at Texas Tech University today through Sunday.

The symposium also will include exhibits and activities such as a book fair, arts and crafts, music, and cutting and roping.

The cowboy poetry and songs recount area history, Corbin said. "Whenever I tell people that I'm going to Lubbock, the first thing they think of is Buddy Holly. The second thing is cowboys," said Corbin.

Corbin's interest in the West is reflected in characters he has played, including Roscoe in "Lonesome Dove;" Uncle Bob in "Urban Cowboy;" a Texas high roller in "Any Which Way You Can;" and a councilman in "Best Little Whorehouse in Texas."

"I'm hoping Western movies will make a comeback, but I'm not sure one project will bring them back. However, Lonesome Dove was the highest-rated mini-series in five years," he said.

'Cavewoman' tested for medical effects

Adrian LeBlanc, right, manager of nuclear medicine for Methodist Hospital in Houston, shows Stefania Follini test results like one that will be produced during tests to determine her physical condition after spending four months in a cave.

HOUSTON (AP) — Doctors are awaiting test results performed on an Italian woman who spent a record 130 days isolated in a New Mexico cave, but say the only noticeable difference detected so far is her 17-pound weight loss.

Doctors checked Stefania Follini to see if she lost any bone tissue while underground, and they are awaiting results from a battery of other physical tests.

"She looks fine to me," said Dr. Adrian LeBlanc, manager of nuclear medicine for Houston's Methodist Hospital, where Ms. Follini was tested this week.

Ms. Follini, a 27-year-old interior decorator from Ancona, Italy, who volunteered for the job, appeared happy and healthy Thursday as she described the experiment as a "positive" experience and one she would repeat.

She underwent a test Thursday that documented the amount of minerals in her bones. She had the same test done before she went underground so both results could be compared.

LeBlanc said the results will be available in several days and will be turned over to Pioneer Frontier Exploration and Researchers, a nonprofit Italian research group that is conducting the experiment and has conducted other isolation projects similar to Ms. Follini's.

"I don't expect a large (bone) loss," he said, adding that any decrease should be restored naturally as Ms. Follini gets back in her regular routine above ground.

A loss of calcium or other minerals in her bones could be attributed to a decrease in exercise. Ms. Follini said she exercised some in the cave, but not as much as she normally does.

A decrease also could be caused by a lack of estrogen. Ms. Follini — for reasons researchers have not yet determined — didn't have a regular menstrual cycle during her underground stay.

Dr. Andrea Galvagno, one of two Italian researchers in Houston to monitor Ms. Follini's health, said a loss of calcium also might be caused by the lack of sunlight.

LeBlanc said the results could help Methodist researchers determine the effects of activity on bones. The test performed on Ms. Follini is the same one used to gauge osteoporosis.

After living underground for more than four months, Ms. Follini was a little confused about the passage of time. When told she would be coming out May 22, she said she thought it was March 14.

She first reported having problems adjusting to a 24-hour day, but she said Thursday she had overcome most of those difficulties.

Ms. Follini, who is 4 feet 11 inches tall and now weighs 90 pounds, said through an interpreter that she is looking at the world with more attentiveness and curiosity than before her stay in the cave. She also said noises seemed much louder since she emerged from the cave.

"I can see now my attention is better," she said.

Ms. Follini, who underwent other medical tests this week, was scheduled to leave Houston on Saturday. She and two Italian researchers will attend a medical convention in Paris before returning to Italy.

She will undergo further tests in Italy to help determine how well researchers prepared her psychologically for the underground stay, said Maurizio Montalbini, a psychologist overseeing the experiment.

After visiting with friends and enjoying the summer, Ms. Follini said she will look for a new job as an interior decorator. She had to quit her previous job to do the experiment.

CORBIN

Hollywood has a mix of real cowboys and want-to-be cowboys, the actor said. "Some Hollywood cowboys are pretty close to the real thing. A lot of the wranglers and stuntmen have a ranch background," Corbin said.

"Most of the actors want to be cowboys, making the wranglers' job harder because they have to keep the actors from killing themselves."

Through the years, Hollywood has been interested in the myth of the cowboy, the Sherman Oaks, Calif., resident said. "If they made a movie about the real life of a cowboy, it would be a 12-hour movie and nothing would happen, which is why we have cowboy poetry," he said.

Corbin's two sons, James, 10, and Chris, 6, enjoy watching Western movies "once in a while" he said, but they were not allowed to watch their father in "Lonesome Dove."

"My wife, Susan, didn't want them to see me get stabbed with that great big knife," Corbin said.

CONTEST

"A lot of coaches seem to think that females aren't aggressive and competitive enough," Fly said, adding that he believes that philosophy, of course, is untrue.

Ironically, Fly attributed part of his team's success to the rival Midland High School team, which lost at the regional level. The MHS team, he said, not only lent his school the buzzer system to practice with but also was willing to scrimmage before and after regional competition.

The LHS team will leave for New Orleans at 2 a.m. Saturday for the Sunday-through-Friday national event. The team would return early if it loses a match.

NATURE

In addition, more than 80 bird species have been reported, including the golden eagle and scaled quail. Mule deer, mountain lions, javelina and antelope also inhabit the property.

Ed Harte said he and his brother bought the land in 1956 for about $5 per acre from a rancher who was having financial troubles. The land had been overgrazed, he said.

"We knew our ranch would never be good for grazing, but it had a great many species of wildlife," said Harte, 66, who serves on the board of directors of Harte-Hanks Communications, which owns 33 newspapers in three states including Texas.

"We concluded that the best use was to put it into wildlife."

In addition to the Rosillos project, the Conservancy has been busy recently in the Lower Rio Grande Valley, where Braun said 97 percent of the native habitat is gone. Conservancy officials currently are trying to save the ocelot that inhabits the region.

Another recent project involves the preservation of Blackland prairies in north Central Texas, mainly in Hunt and Collin counties, where unique grasses and wildflowers have been discovered, Braun said.

Braun said there are about 12,000 paid members of the Conservancy in Texas — a number that he said is too low for the state's size and population.

"There is a perception of unlimited land in Texas...," Braun said. "Our frustration is that we are losing places before we can protect them."

The Conservancy has identified 545 high-priority areas that contain rare or endangered species, "and we will be lucky to protect 15 in a year," he said.

The Conservancy has 15 full-time professional staff members, many of whom work out of the organization's office, which overlooks the Alamo.

Braun said the Texas Nature Conservancy raises about $1 million a year through private or corporate donations. Some money also is gained through the sale of ecologically insignificant land acquired from individuals or corporations.

Other conservation groups, while they may not use similar means to get their job done, approve of TNC because it promotes conservation.

"They do a very good job," Faith Campbell, a conservation programs director with the Natural Resources Defense Council in Washington, D.C., said of TNC. "I think it is entirely appropriate for some organizations to get corporations to make a positive contribution. I don't think there is anything wrong with taking their cash."

Ann Dingwall, a Greenpeace ecology projects director in Washington, said that although her organization approaches conservation differently, "anything that raises the problem of conservation is going to be a value."

Two-year-old listed as critical

From Staff Reports

Two-year-old Haley Harvey of Midland, who Wednesday afternoon was found floating unconscious in her backyard swimming pool, today was still listed in critical condition in a Lubbock hospital.

"She is still critical," said Cheryl Wing, house supervisor at Lubbock General Hospital. "She really is about the same, but might be a little more stable."

The girl is being treated in the pediatric intensive care unit of the hospital, Ms. Wing said.

The girl was found in the pool of her home, 3503 Cardinal Ln., about 4:45 p.m. Wednesday, by her mother, Bambi Harvey, according to police. She had been swimming with two older brothers, and sometime after the boys left she was discovered by her mother, officers said.

She was taken to Midland Memorial Hospital, but transferred two hours later to the Lubbock facility.

Fire damages Midland county home

From Staff Reports

An early morning blaze heavily damaged a home in west Midland County, according to fire department reports.

Four units and 10 firefighters were dispatched to the scene of the fire, near the intersection of County Road 1270 and CR 152 West, according to reports. When firefighters arrived just after 2:30 a.m., the home was blazing, the reports said.

The fire, which caused no injuries, apparently began in the kitchen of the home, according to a preliminary report.

Lee Gass, who was listed in the report as the owner and occupant, reported the fire.

Bus accident injures 16 people

LUBBOCK (AP) — Twelve special education students from Lubbock elementary schools were among 16 people injured when their school bus collided with a car at a city intersection and rolled on its side, authorities said.

The car's three occupants, including two girls aged 2 and 5, and the bus driver, Isabel Aguilar, 28, also were hurt in the accident on Thursday. All were treated for minor injuries at Lubbock General Hospital and released.

The accident occurred about 7:40 a.m., Lubbock Police Cpl. Bill Wertman said.

The collision knocked the 35-passenger bus onto its right side, and the front of both vehicles were thrown into a nearby front yard.

The students received cuts and abrasions, said hospital spokeswoman Gwen Stafford.

"I think most of the injuries were from being jostled and bumped in the bus," Mrs. Stafford said.

The bus driver was suspended, said Dena Lewis, general manager of Durham Transportation, which is contracted by the Lubbock Independent School District.

Lewis said Ms. Aguilar had a perfect driving record since Durham took over bus operations for LISD in 1986.

Yeutter urged to amend grazing laws

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yeutter is being urged to think hard about opening up millions of acres of long-term conservation land to haying and grazing in drought-stricken areas.

Yeutter is under pressure from Capitol Hill and other quarters to approve haying, grazing or both on highly erodible land taken from crop production under the Conservation Reserve Program.

But Kenneth A. Cook, vice president for policy at the Center for Resource Economics, and Justin R. Ward, senior project associate of the Natural Resources Defense Council, said Wednesday it is premature to open up the CRP as a source of livestock feed.

In the 1988 drought, the Agriculture Department approved haying on millions of acres of CRP land in dozens of states. But none has been approved for haying or grazing in 1989.

Cook and Ward said in a letter to Yeutter that several major farming areas face the possibility of a second consecutive year of severe drought.

"It is early in the growing season and the threat will not materialize if moisture-deficient areas in Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska and other states receive the amount of rainfall the National Weather Service has recently forecast," the letter said.

It is understandable, Cook and Ward said, that many farmers, particularly livestock producers, are extremely anxious at this time.

But they told Yeutter: "We urge you to proceed with deliberation and caution in any decision to open the CRP. The public has already invested billions of dollars in the CRP and will invest billions more in the years ahead."

Such investment, Yeutter was told, could be compromised if USDA does not establish "clear, consistent criteria and procedures" for deciding on the emergency use of CRP lands.

More than 28 million acres have been set aside under the CRP and is supposed to remain out of production for 10 years. The contracts specify that protective grass and trees must be planted to project the fragile soil from wind and water erosion.

In return, farmers get initial financial help from USDA to plant the grass and trees. Each year they get federal rental payments, averaging around $50 per acre. These currently cost about $1.5 billion a year.

"Any decision to open the CRP in selected counties will result in requests and increased pressure for similar treatment of additional counties," Cook and Ward said. "And since drought afflicts some part of the country every year, it is safe to assume that you will face similar decisions about the CRP year in and year out."

They added: "This year and in future years, we urge you to establish a formal, public procedure for making determinations about emergency use of the CRP. We feel this procedure should include consultation with farm, environmental and wildlife interests, and between USDA and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service."

WASHINGTON (AP) — The latest survey by the Agriculture Department shows that prospects for summer water supplies in much of the West have declined from last month because of below-average precipitation and early snowmelt.

"Warm temperatures and sunny skies throughout the West in April caused snowpack to melt sooner than usual for the month," Wilson Scaling, chief of the department's Soil Conservation Service, said Wednesday.

April precipitation was below average or well below average throughout the region except in the Pacific Northwest and Montana, he said. Consequently, seasonal forecasts have been reduced in most basin areas.

"Early runoff improved reservoir storage dramatically," Scaling said. "However, inflows have already begun to taper off in many basins."

April precipitation was less than 50 percent of average in the Southwest, except for pockets of above average precipitation in southern Arizona, southeastern New Mexico and central Colorado.

Streamflow forecasts have been reduced throughout the West through September, Scaling said. However, near-average flows are expected for most rivers in Oregon, as well as for the Upper Columbia, the Upper Snake and along the mainstem of the Yellowstone River.

Nevada is the only state where reservoir storage is well below average, he said. Summer inflows to reservoirs are likely to be below average in all Western states.

The West depends on snowmelt for about 75 percent of its water supply.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cattle being fed for the slaughter market as of May 1 in the seven major beef states totaled 7.85 million head, up 4 percent from a year ago and 8 percent more than inventories of two years ago, says the Agriculture Department.

The placement of new cattle and calves in fattening pens last month was reported at 1.53 million head, up 1 percent from a year ago but down 9 percent from two years ago, the department said Wednesday.

Marketings of "fed" cattle in April totaled 1.57 million head, down 2 percent from a year ago but up 2 percent from two years ago.

As of May 1, feedlot inventories were larger than a year earlier in Colorado, Kansas and Texas, but were less in Arizona, California, Iowa and Nebraska. The seven states produce about three-fourths of the nation's beef.

State feedlot cattle inventories are listed here for the seven states. The first number is the number of cattle, in thousands, as of May 1, and the second number is the percentage of a year earlier.

AGRICULTURE

No drought letup seen, extension official says

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Texas agriculture appears to be settling into an early phase of the summer doldrums as hot, windy weather rapidly dries soils and farmers hurry to plant annual cash crops.

Soil moisture is still reasonably adequate in most areas east of a line from Palacios on the Gulf Coast, up through San Antonio and Abilene, and then to the southern Panhandle.

But all areas west and southwest of that line are sweltering, dryland crops are in bad shape and no drought letup is in sight, said Dr. Zerle L. Carpenter, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

He said Panhandle corn is up to good stands, sorghum planting is active and cotton planting is about 75 percent complete. Alfalfa hay baling is underway and irrigated vegetables are progressing.

South Plains cotton is 60 to 70 percent planted and sorghum planting is peaking but pastures and ranges are much too dry as hot, windy conditions continue.

The picture is much different along the Coastal Bend, and South, Southwest and West Texas, where drought is intensifying, Carpenter said.

In southern counties, including the Lower Rio Grande Valley, no significant rain has fallen since Hurricane Gilbert last fall. Ranges and pastures are poor, and those dryland crops that haven't failed are declining fast. Hay demand is strong. Irrigated crops are growing normally.

Because of dry conditions, range fires have burned an estimated 14,000 acres in Andrews County in far West Texas. Some dry-planted cotton will require reseeding. Skimpy forage is causing increased maintenance feeding of livestock, Carpenter said.

District Extension directors reported the following specific crop and weather conditions for the past week:

PANHANDLE: Soil moisture varies from adequate to short. Recent rains have greened ranges and pastures, and alfalfa hay is being baled and processed. Deaf Smith County vegetables are growing well. Cattle are in good condition. Cotton planting is about 75 percent done and sorghum planting is active.

NORTHEAST: Soil moisture is adequate. Pastures are responding well to recent rains, cattle are in good shape, markets are steady and much hay baling is underway. Wheat is fair to good despite hail damage, corn growth is about normal and cotton planting is complete. A light peach crop is expected. Pecans have a good nut set but insect control measures are active.

FAR WEST: Soil moisture varies widely but is mostly short. Temperatures hit 113 degrees, a new record. Range fires have burned an estimated 14,000 acres in Andrews County. Most of the cotton crop has been planted but some dry-planted fields will need reseeding.

CENTRAL: Wheat yields are disapponting so far and aphids are active. Peanut planting is gaining momentum, early corn is tasseling and Coastal Bermudagrass is being baled. Spraying of pecan trees for casebearer control is well along.

EAST: Soil moisture is adequate but high winds are rapidly drying the district. Cattle are in excellent condition on lush pastures and maintenance feeding is down. The clover crop is one of the best in years. Corn is growing fast and looking good but the peach crop will be light. Many pecan orchards have insect problems.

SOUTH CENTRAL: Soil moisture is ample to short. Harvest is beginning on a good wheat crop. Oat harvesting also is starting, soybeans are blooming and growing well, a good corn crop is silking and sorghum is heading. Cattle are in fair to good condition on pastures that have responded well following rains in mid-May. Early peaches are being harvested from a good crop.

SOUTHWEST: Strong winds and high temperatures are intensifying the drought. Ranges, pastures and non-irrigated crops are in poor condition. A spring hay crop is unlikely. Irrigated crops are growing well, including peanuts. Corn is silking and cotton is blooming.

4-H gardening projects give valuable experiences

Growing landscape and vegetable plants can be a rewarding experience for youngsters, and the 4-H Gardening and Horticulture program gets off to a fast start.

With the spring season just ahead, now is a good time for 4-H'ers to plan for gardening and horticulture projects.

Kiker

The gardening and horticulture program can provide youth with valuable lifelong learning experiences.

Objectives of the program are the following:

- Learn basic principles of plant science.
- Learn to plan, care for and manage vegetableand/or flower gardens, lawn or commercial horticultural crops.
- Learn effective, safe methods of pest control and management.
- Produce vegetables and fruits for year-round use to improve family production.
- Explore all aspects of gardening including its therapeutic role, and its relationship to agriculture production.

4-H'ers who excel in the program can qualify for awards provided by the Ortho Products Division of the Chevron Chemical Co.

Pesticide industry argues health benefits of chemicals

WASHINGTON (AP) — House legislation designed to strengthen pesticide regulations is coming under attack from an industry spokesman who says the bill neglects to consider the health benefits of using chemicals on crops.

Jay Vroom, executive director of the National Agricultural Chemicals Association, said recently his organization considers the "Food Safety Amendments of 1989" so inflexible as to be unworkable.

They apply standards for assessing how risky a pesticide is without considering the benefits, he said.

"We hope to point out that there are many benefits associated with an abundant supply of food that are health benefits," Vroom said. He said some fungi and insects are more dangerous to human health than the pesticides that kill them.

He suggested, for example, that there might be insect parts in bread and worms in tomato sauce if it weren't for pesticides.

But Paul Allen, spokesman for the Natural Resources Defense Council, said there are some pesticides that are so dangerous to people, particularly children, that nothing else need be considered in banning them.

He said his organization, which led the public outcry against Alar on apples, helped draft the legislation introduced by Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., chairman of the Energy and Commerce subcommittee on health and the environment.

Testimony from both Vroom's and Allen's organizations was being presented today to the subcommittee.

"This is an extension of the Alar debate," said Allen. "We think it is a pretty good bill."

"From the point of view of the farmer, this would clarify the situation and get rid of predicaments like we had with Alar in which farmers may suspect a chemical is dangerous, but because it is legal, they go ahead and use it," Allen said. "Then there is a public outcry and a market disaster."

Dreaded black flies 'bugging' New England

PORTLAND, Maine (AP) — With springtime's tardy entrance to northern New England, the dreaded black flies have started buzzing by, and folks who stay outdoors are hunting for ways to avoid the blood-drawing bites.

"They kind of tend to drive you foolish," says James F. Dill, a University of Maine extension specialist in pest management.

"They come in swarms and have a tendency to swarm around your head. They seem to like to bite where clothing fits tightly, like if you've got a sleeve, they like to burrow in and bite there.

"Of course, they'll bite everywhere," Dill said.

Black-fly experts and victims in Maine say their state may suffer more of the pests than any other in the region, although New Hampshire state entomologist Ziegfried Thewke said the flies can be a nuisance throughout all northern states, and even in the Midwest and parts of the West.

Thewke said there is no way to tell how many black flies will infest an area in a given year. Other experts say years of low moisture may have fewer flies, although they will always be present.

The flies are at their worst in wooded areas with lots of clean, running water. And they are faster than mosquitoes when it comes to biting.

"A black fly will come whizzing along and land and attack, quickly," Thewke said, adding that a few types of black flies give the whole group a bad name.

"There are 30 some species of black flies here in New Hampshire, but only four of them bite humans," he said.

The first few tend to come out in early May, and the swarm can be in full swing toward the end of the month, sometimes hanging around as late as November.

"Sometimes we just have to wear bug nets, head nets, gloves, longsleeve shirts and insect repellent, naturally," said John R. Moring, an associate professor of zoology at the University of Maine. "If you're new in Maine, or a baby, sometimes you get a worse reaction."

The insect repellent, called "fly dope" in Maine, can have its bad side effects, however. For example, some types melt plastic.

"If you have plastic lenses on your glasses, you can find your fingerprints on them, and you can find your hands sticking to the steering wheel," Moring said.

People fight the flies in many other ways, with varying degrees of success.

"I don't condone this, but a lot of people will smoke big cigars," Moring said. "The smoke keeps them away."

FAMILY MATTERS

Co-dependency causes depression

By JIM MAY

May

DEAR FAMILY: My mother is driving me crazy. I have tried to be a good wife and mother to my children, but no matter what I do she always has a better way to do it. When I clean the house and she comes over, she always finds something that I didn't clean. I am a good housekeeper. We have three children and the house isn't going to be perfect all the time. I may not be perfect, but I do a good job.

When it comes to the children (or her grandchildren) I never do the right thing with them. I am always too strict or too lenient or too something. If I try to do what my husband says, then she says I'm too strict. If I try to do what she says, then my husband says I'm too lenient. I don't know what I'm supposed to do anymore, so I hardly discipline the children at all. Someone is always mad at me.

I feel depressed all the time. Sometimes I just feel like running away. What can I do? CRITICIZED

DEAR CRITICIZED: Depression is a sadness that can't be expressed. You have chosen to place yourself in a very sad position — in between your mother and your husband.

You are experiencing a form of co-dependency in which your worth and value are being determined by what others (your mother and husband) think. The in-between position is not a fun position to hold; like a tennis ball, you get hit back and forth between two people.

Begin by focusing on what you want rather than on what others want. That is easier said than done. I encourage you to attend Co-Dependents Anonymous meetings. Call 682-4721 for meeting times and places. I also encourage you to read about your situation. Melody Beatties' book, "Codependent No More," is a good introduction.

Take that first step; go do something. Many people have learned to stop the pain and gain control of their lives, and so can you.

DEAR FAMILY: I have reached the end of my rope. All my husband of 15 years wants to do is watch television. We never do anything together. He just comes home, grabs a beer and goes and plops down in front of that stupid boob tube. I fix supper and he fills his plate and goes back and eats while he watches television. He vegetates in there until after Johnny Carson and then drags himself to bed. Of course, I am already asleep by then so we don't talk then.

Last week I was so mad that I stayed awake and waited for him to come to bed. I told him that I wanted more out of him than what he was doing. He listened and said that he had a lot on his mind and needed the television to unwind. I just gave up and tried to go to sleep. I am hoping that you have some ideas for me. TV WIDOW

DEAR TV: The problem is with your husband, not the television. What has happened in your relationship to cause him to turn to television for companionship? When did the drift start? What turned him off? What turned you off so that you didn't demand things change?

We do what we do for specific reasons. Television permits us to avoid addressing our issues, our spouses, our families, ourselves, but the price for escape is high. I encourage both of you to seek marriage counseling to address these issues.

DEAR CONFIDENTIAL: I share your concerns about your son's behavior changes. He seems to have very low self-esteem, and is escaping to his room. I encourage you to seek professional help. For example, Glenwood Hospital, 563-1200, provides a free consultation evaluation that you may find very beneficial. Don't wait until there is a major problem before taking action. A teenager's warning signs can easily be misinterpreted. Your son is sending out signals that he needs help.

AT WIT'S END

Eventually, every daughter becomes like her mother

By ERMA BOMBECK

Bombeck

I rummaged through a stack of old gift boxes in my closet before I found what I was looking for. It was a knotted, crumpled ribbon. Feverishly, I salvaged what I could and steamed out the wrinkles with an iron. My shoulders slumped as I realized that I had just come full circle. I had turned into my mother!

How could I have allowed this to happen? I love my mother dearly, but all the little things that have driven me nuts throughout the years have now found a home in my body.

I carry my lipstick in one of those little holders with a mirror. There is a piece of bright-colored yarn around the handle of my suitcase so I can spot it easily. I keep a litter bag in my car. Can you believe any of this?

Every time I change the color of my shoes, I change handbags to match. I never used to do that. And the other day I found myself throwing a measuring cup in the dishwasher when I had measured only water in it.

Maybe I have misjudged my mother. Is it possible there was a time in her life when she never considered rinsing out bread wrappers and hanging them out to dry with little clamp clothespins? Was it Grandma who passed on to her the habits of never calling anyone after 10 o'clock at night or never washing her hair just before she went to bed?

The first trait I picked up was a shock. When I pulled out of our driveway one day, I immediately got into the left lane on our boulevard.

"Why are you doing that?" asked my daughter.

"I have to make a left turn," I said.

"Mom! You don't make a left turn for another 30 blocks."

"I want to be there just in case no one will let me in."

"You sound just like Grandma," she said. "She's always doing that."

The comparison bothered me. I have always considered myself to be a "free spirit," a monument to rebellion. I worked at it while I was growing up. If my mother said someone was a creep, I saw him as a role model. If she said a philosophy course wouldn't pay the rent, I minored in it. If her prime concern was getting all the tomatoes canned before they went bad, mine was saving the world.

I was riding with my daughter the other day when she entered the expressway and immediately got into the left lane. "I know," she said, "the exit ramp is a few miles down, but sometimes no one will let you in."

I smiled. It's only a matter of time before she'll be saving boxes and ironing old ribbons.

Co-dependency is treatable condition

By JUDI HUNT
Hearst News Service

SEATTLE — Author Melody Beattie had been sober seven years when she decided she wanted to kill herself.

"Here I was free at last of my dependency on alcohol and other drugs, and I thought I should be supremely happy," recalls Beattie.

"Instead, I was frantically calling a suicide hot line to tell some stranger that I didn't want to live anymore," she says of those dark days before she began writing.

Since then, she has written "Co-dependent No More," which has been on the The New York Times best-seller list for 44 weeks.

Beattie, in Seattle last week to publicize her new book, "Beyond Codependency," says she didn't know then why she felt so depressed.

"I was just slogging my way through life without any purpose or sense of self. I'd become nothing but a shell reacting to other people."

Beattie didn't realize it at the time, but she was suffering because she let other people's behavior rule her life. She was feeling responsible for events she had no control over and was obsessed with controlling other people.

"That included attempting to solve family members' problems, whether they wanted me to or not," she says.

All are symptoms of co-dependency, and Beattie isn't alone in her battle against it. Millions of Americans are struggling with alcoholism and drug addiction. And millions more — their spouses, parents, siblings and children — are trying to help, sometimes too much.

Emotionally damaged in the struggle, these family members are turning in increasing numbers to programs such as Al-Anon and Adult Children of Alcoholics (ACA), where the focus is on healing the family.

And they are gobbling up books like those written by Beattie, although she says her latest work isn't a recipe book or a how-to manual.

"I'm just trying to say that yes, we can change," she says. "But each of us co-dependents will need to find our own path, our own support groups."

Helen L. Kester, family program director at Lakeside Recovery Center in Seattle, explained what is meant by co-dependency.

"It's behavior that allows people to survive," she says. 'It's a natural reaction to an abnormal situation and abnormal stress in the family."

Family members learn to live with the disease of addiction over a long period of time, she explains. "And the longer you live with the disease, the more family relationships are affected."

There is hope, Kester says. A person can unlearn people-pleasing, perfectionism and other abnormal behaviors they have lived with for so long.

But she says it may take a residential treatment program, where family members of addicted people learn in depth about the physical disease of addiction. There, too, they find out what that disease has done to the family and the individuals in it. And they are exposed to other people who have the same problems.

"That reduces the feelings of uniqueness and isolation," Kester says.

They are also introduced to Al-Anon, the support group designed for people who live with alcoholics or other drug-dependent people.

Until she began attending Al-Anon meetings, Beattie often felt like a victim who believed life was just to be endured. "My joy at being alive was gone. The gift of life didn't mean anything."

Even so, Beattie was reluctant to attend Al-Anon after being an Alcoholics Anonymous member. Suddenly there she was, indignant at being among women she saw as "frowning, long-suffering, saintly," who didn't know what it was like to to have an addiction.

"What's more, I was outraged that it was my husband's drinking that was causing the problem and I was the one having to go to meetings," she says.

It took just one session to discover she was at the right place. "My feelings were so frozen and I was in so much emotional pain, but before the meeting was over the healing tears were flowing. I knew then, like it or not, that I was where I belonged."

In Beattie's case, she was still in the marriage that triggered much of her abnormal behavior. Later, she divorced her husband when he wouldn't stop drinking.

Beattie's new book describes the emotional pain of compulsively taking care of other people and the kinds of families where it is likely to be found.

"It isn't just alcoholic families," she says. "It's also where gambling, overeating or any kind of compulsive behavior toward spending, religion, achievement or appearance damages the family."

But the book doesn't just identify the sufferers, she says. "I'm trying to show ways that people like myself can begin to look after ourselves and take care of our own needs instead of being obsessed with caring for others."

Focus on needs before buying binoculars

NEW YORK (AP) — Whether you're scanning the horizon from a cruise ship, going on a big-game photo shoot in Africa, backpacking in a state park or birding from your back deck, binoculars are standard equipment.

Depending on quality, they range in price from about $50 to more than $900. But, says Mark Abrams of Clairmont-Nichols Optics in New York, "only 15 percent of people who come in for binoculars know what type of glasses they should buy to fit their needs."

Before buying, says Bob Meichsner of Swarovski Optik, you should decide their primary use and bone up on binocular-talk. Know especially the meaning of the two numbers the dealer will refer to, ie., 7x42. The first number is the magnification, the "x" is shorthand for "power" and the second number is the objective lens diameter.

So 7x means the binoculars will make objects look seven times bigger than they really are. The 42 is the diameter in millimeters of each of the front lenses, called objective lenses. The wider the objective lens, the more light and better image.

DEAR ABBY

Grandmother upsets stepchildren's mother

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: With all the stepfamilies in today's society, maybe your answer can benefit others with the same problem.

"Ira" and I have been married for seven years. When he married me, I had two children, ages 2 and 3 years old, from a previous marriage. Ira is the only father my children have ever known.

Now, my problem: Whenever we are with my mother-in-law and she introduces us to anybody, she says, "This is my son, Ira, his wife, Mary, and Mary's two children," emphasizing the fact that they are my children, but not Ira's.

These children are her grandchildren; they call her "Grandma." I have told Ira that I am hurt and offended by his mother's behavior, and since he has been a father to these children since they were infants, he should ask his mother to please refer to them as "our" children, which is the way Ira refers to them.

Ira says his mother doesn't mean anything by it, and I am being too sensitive. Meanwhile, she continues to hurt me this way every chance she gets. What do you suggest? — MARY

DEAR MARY: Ask Ira to please be more supportive. But don't you permit this to become a divisive issue in your marriage.

What's wrong with saying: "Mother, you hurt me when you emphasize so emphatically that these children are mine. Ira has been a wonderful father to them, and he refers to them as HIS children. I wish you would too."

DEAR ABBY: I have been dating this perfectly wonderful man steadily for more than two years. I am 30 and divorced (no children) and he is 38 and has never been married. He tells me he loves me, and I have fallen head over heels in love with him. He treats me like a queen and we are perfect for each other.

The problem: He does not want to make a commitment. He says he was hurt eight years ago and is afraid of being hurt again, so he refuses to make any kind of commitment.

What can I do to change his mind? — DEAD END

DEAR DEAD END: Nothing. Just be grateful that he's being honest instead of leading you on. When a person says, "I was hurt once, so I am afraid of making a commitment," do not walk — run for the nearest exit. There is no future with this man.

Just because a person ate a bad meal once shouldn't stop that person from eating.

DEAR ABBY: I am personally indebted to your Operation Dear Abby, because had it not been for you, this native Iowan never would have met a U.S. Marine named John Patrick of New Jersey.

We started corresponding when he answered my letter in 1985, and what a wonderful long-distance romance it was! We've been happily married for two years.

Abby, I am curious — as I'm sure others are — to know just how many lives were changed when your readers sent cards or letters to lonely servicemen (and women) to make their Christmas away from home a little brighter.

Why don't you do a survey? It would make interesting reading, and encourage others to send cards, cookies and letters to the troops away from home during the holidays. — KARY WILLIAMS, CEDAR RAPIDS, IOWA

DEAR KARY: Great idea. Readers, if you, a friend, relative or buddy found romance or a mate through Operation Dear Abby, please let me hear from you. Write to Abby, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069.

Study shows rate of skin cancer higher

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — A 29-year study of cancer in Sweden shows the rate of cases increased faster among women than men, especially skin cancer caused by too much sun.

Malignant melanoma caused by overexposure to ultraviolet rays was increasing by 6.6 percent a year and ine 1987 represented 3.5 percent of all cancer cases, said Jerzy Einhorn of the Karolinska Hospital.

A law requiring doctors to report all cancer cases to a national registrar since 1958 has yielded "a unique foundation" for health care and planning, since it covers 100 percent of the population in specific areas, Einhorn said.

The study, released Tuesday by the hospital, covered Stockholm and Gotland, a large rural island in the Baltic.

Sven Tornqvist, who was in charge of the register, said the rate of all forms of cancer increased by 29 percent for women and 15 percent for men in the Swedish capital from 1958 to 1987. The figures were higher in Gotland.

Malignant melanoma "could become the major form of cancer in the next century" because many people who have damaged their skin have not yet developed the disease, Einhorn said.

He attributed the increase among Swedes to their more frequent holiday trips to warmer countries and their penchant for sunbathing.

Lung cancer was the most common cancer, but it decreased among men along with a decline in smoking.

'Cymbeline' production emphasizes the lurid

By MICHAEL KUCHWARA
AP Drama Critic

NEW YORK — George Bernard Shaw once referred to "Cymbeline" as "stagey trash of the most melodramatic order" and rewrote the last act to tone down its improbabilities.

Director JoAnne Akalaitis takes another approach in her interpretation of Shakespeare's most problematic romance. The production, which opened Tuesday at the Public Theater, emphasizes the lurid over the lucid.

That's not to say it isn't successful, just that she has made some choices that sacrifice or give short shrift to some of the play's more baffling contradictions.

This is a comedy filled with jealousy, hate and even murder. It's a tragedy offset by true love, bawdy high jinks and a fairy tale ending. It's also a spectacle that focuses on the very personal, particularly the relationships between husband and wife and father and children.

In short, just about every plot device — not to mention the god Jupiter — ends up in this Shakespearean stew, and the director has a hard time juggling the ingredients equally. Most of the time, the laughs — intentional and not — overtake the tragedy.

Miss Akalaitis, a founding member of the avant-garde troupe known as Mabou Mines, has set the play in Victorian England, specifically in the middle of Celtic ruins that look like Stonehenge on a dark and stormy night. It is a sinister place, a garden grown wild and dangerous. Set designer George Tsypin and lighting designer Pat Collins have created a wonderous other-worldly environment that enhances Stephanie Rudolph's spectral slide projections.

The play may be called "Cymbeline," but the central character is his daughter Imogen, played by Joan Cusack, an Oscar nominee this year for the film "Working Girl."

Miss Cusack is a quixotic, beguiling actress working against type here. Imogen is an uncommon heroine, battling unfair accusations made by her husband Posthumus. She's a fighter, something the wan and slightly off-center Miss Cusack doesn't portray with conviction. She's more of a little girl lost than a Shakespearean Joan of Arc. The actress is also at a sea with much of the dialogue.

Other performances in the large cast vary wildly. Among the best are a lovingly narcissistic portrait by Michael Cumpsty as the villainous Iachimo and Jeffrey Nordling's outraged, stuffy and totally believable Posthumus. But George Bartenieff is a cipher in the title role, and Joan MacIntosh, as his evil wife, overcompensates for his blandness with a bad case of histrionics.

Composer Philip Glass has provided a throbbing, melancholy score that at times threatens not just to set the mood of the story but overwhelm the actors as well.

Miss Akalaitis lets the production run more than three hours. She doesn't abbreviate any of the play's other outlandish plots — particularly the rediscovery of Imogen's long-lost brothers, portrayed here as noble savages, and an improbable war between England and Rome.

Midler takes on role as modern Stella Dallas

TORONTO (AP) — It's 1937, and Barbara Stanwyck playing the outcast Stella Dallas watches from outside as her daughter gets married. It is one of Hollywood's classic tear-jerking scenes.

Flash forward to 1989.

The feisty, funny Bette Midler is starring in a remake that the production team says updates the old concepts of high society but keeps the basic story intact. So, instead of Stanwyck needing to chase after a rich husband to make her unsuccessful attempt to move upward, Midler can grumpily tell her friend how she told off the rich guy and doesn't need his money.

The new version, called "Stella," was filmed in Toronto this spring for a planned release in the winter.

The handkerchiefs, though, will still be needed. At the end, just as her predecessor did, Midler will be watching from outside at her daughter's elegant New York wedding.

"I think the old movie was really about class distinction," said director John Erman said in an interview. "This movie is really about opportunities."

This will be the third version of the Stella Dallas story, based on a novel by Olive Higgins Prouty. Samuel Goldwyn made a 1925 silent film, starring Belle Bennett, Ronald Coleman, Jean Hersholt and Douglas Fairbanks Jr. He produced the King Vidor version in 1937 starring Stanwyck, who was nominated for an Academy Award.

The Samuel Goldwyn Co. held the rights. Now, Samuel Goldwyn Jr. is co-producing the new movie with Touchstone Pictures, which has an exclusive arrangement with Midler. Touchstone will domestically distribute the movie, and Goldwyn's company has international distribution.

Goldwyn traces the idea to remake the movie back to 1986. He said he didn't intend to get involved in a co-production but the chance to get Midler as the film's star was too good to pass up.

"She's really become a reason to redo the picture," he said.

As for the script, Goldwyn said that the original movie's reliance on the class system wouldn't totally work today but the emotional scenes still do.

Among the "set pieces," as he called them, are the birthday party for the daughter to which nobody comes and the famous ending.

He, and others involved in making the movie, say there's no doubt that some sort of class system still exists even if it is not as ironclad as in the earlier part of the century.

The new version ranges from 1969 to the present. Midler plays a bartender in a small upstate New York town, who meets rich New Yorker Steven Dallas while he is a medical student in the area. She gets pregnant, he backs off, she brings up their daughter without any help. That, of course, is just the start.

"It's Bette's picture all the way," said actor Stephen Collins, who plays Steven Dallas.

The "trick of the plot" is to show that Steven and Stella simply don't belong together.

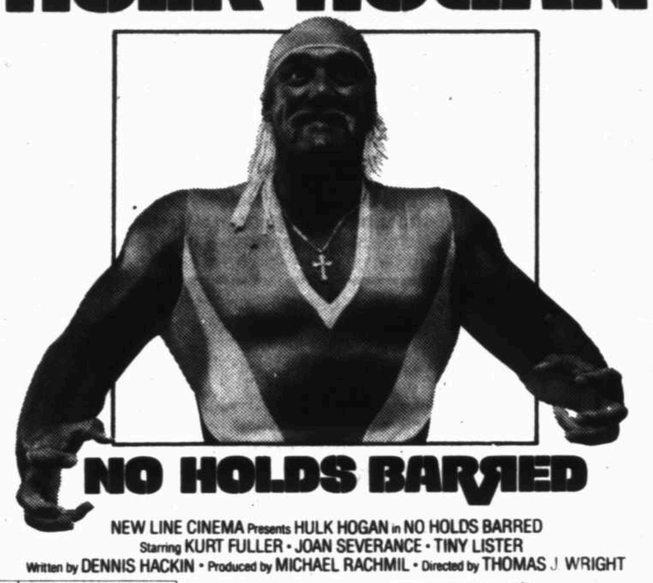

"So nobody's a bad guy," Collins said, taking a break from tuning fellow actor John Goodman's guitar. "They're having a great affair, but realistically marriage is not in the cards for them."

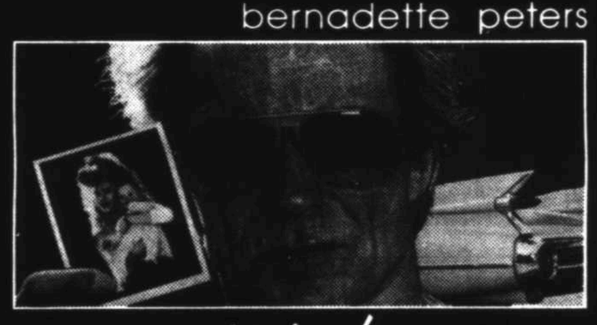

As for the famous scene where Midler will be watching her daughter get married, Collins said, "If anybody in this day and age can make that scene fly, she could.

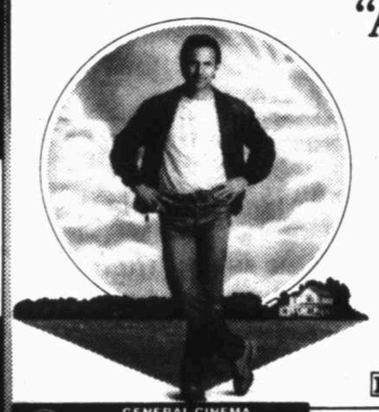

"If it works, it'll be similar to 'Beaches,' — a really good cry and the kind of story people really like going to the movies for."

Mother testifies sex tape revelation changed daughter

STATE

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston woman tearfully testified that her daughter changed from having a normal, happy life to one filled with shame and loneliness after she learned that some male students secretly videotaped her having sex with a boyfriend in 1985.

Kay Kerr gave the testimony Thursday in the $60 million invasion of privacy suit that her daughter, Susan Leigh Kerr, filed against the former boyfriend and four of his friends. The suit, filed in state court, seeks $12 million from each of the men.

"She's alone. Her friends all consider her trash. Her girlfriends from high school won't call her," Mrs. Kerr said. "She doesn't have a sparkle in her eye. I don't think she has any self-esteem."

"She's not the same person. I don't think she will ever be the same," she added.

Recent University of Texas graduate Dan Boyles, 21, Susan Kerr's boyfriend at the time of the taping, has admitted in testimony at the trial that he showed the tape on three occasions to 10 of his fellow UT students

One of the showings, he said, prompted an Alpha Tau Omega fraternity brother to forgive a $25 gambling debt in return for viewing the videotape.

Ms. Kerr, 19 at the time of the videotaped sexual encounter, contends in her suit that the tape has caused her lasting psychological damage and resulted in her having to transfer from Southwest Texas State University in San Marcos to Texas Tech University because of campus gossip.

Mrs. Kerr testified that her daughter's physical health deteriorated and her grades declined after she learned about four months later that the encounter had been videotaped.

She said her daughter was a leader an outstanding student at St. Agnes Academy when she met Boyles during her senior year.

"She informed me she had met a very nice young man. He appeared to be such a gentleman," Mrs. Kerr said. The mother described Boyles as "very polite, very pleasant, easy to talk to."

Dr. George Dempsey, a Clear Lake area psychologist who began treating Susan in 1987 for post-traumatic stress disorders, said it is likely she will be in and out of treatment "for the rest of her life" as a result of the taping.

Boyles was her "first love" and Susan felt that it was a "mutually committed relationship," Dempsey said.

Since the 1985 incident, Dempsey said, Ms. Kerr has lived with two other men and has difficulty in developing "trust and intimacy." He said she also considers herself "emotionally soiled" and alienated from her friends.

He also compared her to rape victims who often feel a tremendous sense of guilt along with a tremendous sense of rage.

The other defendants in the suit, Wray Widner, Karl and Kirt Broesche and John Paul Tamborello, all expressed regret during testimony Thursday.

Ronald Krist, one of the lawyers representing Ms. Kerr, pressed the defendants in an attempt to get them to say when they started feeling remorseful about the incident.

"I felt remorseful when I found out that Susan found out (about the tape)," said Tamborello, who apologized to Ms. Kerr from the witness stand.

Pressed again for an exact time, Tamborello replied, "When Dan told me he was being sued."

Cavazos cracks down on schools' default rates

WASHINGTON (AP) — Private trade schools across Texas that recruit "anybody who's breathing" to attend class could face stiff federal sanctions in 1991 unless more students begin repaying their government-guaranteed loans.

According to officials, some unscrupulous trade schools around Texas have no screening of students, plucking them out of welfare lines and off the streets.

The schools collect the students' loan money as tuition, yet the students either fail to receive the kind of education they need to land a job that will earn them enough to repay the loan, or drop out because they were not prepared for the training, said Joe McCormick, executive director of the Texas Guaranteed Student Loan Corp.

According to U.S. Education Department figures, 16 private trade schools in Texas had student loan default rates of more than 60 percent in fiscal year 1986. A total of 71 of the 228 schools on the agency's list had default rates exceeding 40 percent, including trade schools, and public and private two and four-year institutions.

Officials say the default problem is most severe among private trade schools, and appears to be worsening in Texas, where the number of trade schools has doubled in 2½ years.

"They are siphoning off of the guaranteed student loan program; millions of dollars every year is literally going into default that the taxpayers are paying and they're smiling all the way to the bank," McCormick said.

Education Secretary Lauro Cavazos announced tough new steps Thursday to weed out schools that "promise to educate but deliver only a debt" and to reduce the $1.8 billion student loan default burden on taxpayers.

The new department rules dictate an increasingly tough series of corrective and punitive actions against schools with default rates ranging from 20 percent to 80 percent and higher.

Those above 60 percent will face limitation, suspension or termination from the government's massive student loan program starting Jan. 1, 1991. Schools at 40 to 60 percent must reduce their default rates by 5 percent a year starting in 1991 or face the same penalties.

All schools will have to provide counseling for first-time borrowers and those with default rates above 20 percent must develop a default management plan.

McCormick blames the default rate largely on out-of-state firms, or "franchise trade schools," that have located fraudulent operations in Texas, or those that "take anybody who's breathing."

He cited an operation that recruited 154 homeless people off the streets of Dallas and New Orleans and bused them to Houston with promises they could get money to go to school.

McCormick said an Indiana company operates a truck-driving school by correspondence with several locations in Texas where three weeks of behind-the-wheel experience is offered.

Another questionable operation is a Texas beauty school offering a 300-hour course in manicures at a cost of $3,000 to $4,000, he said.

"Do you need 300 hours to...teach kids how to file their nails," said McCormick, whose agency administers the guaranteed student loan program for the federal government at nearly 500 schools in Texas.

In Texas, the Waco Beauty College ranked No. 1 with a default rate of 80 percent — 40 of the 50 students who had to begin repaying their loans in 1986 had defaulted, the Education Department said.

Education Secretary Lauro Cavazos gestures during a news conference in Washington Thursday where he unveiled strict new regulations designed to crack down on schools that are turning out large numbers of delinquent borrowers and contributing to a rising burden for taxpayers.

Although its default rate ranked fourth, the Mansfield Business College in Arlington had far more students who defaulted and led all state institutions in the number of actual defaults in 1986.

Martika

Martika came 'out of womb ready to be performer'

By HILLEL ITALIE

NEW YORK (AP) — Before Martika could even speak, she was thinking about singing and dancing.

"I feel like I've done it before, probably in a previous life" explained the 20-year-old singer and actress, who has released her self-titled debut album. "I think when I came out of my mother's womb I was ready to be a performer. Most people don't have that. I can never explain why. God only knows."

Born Marta Marrero, she began dance classes at 4 and was soon giving recitals at school. Martika, the daughter of Cuban immigrants, also paid close attention to the new phenomena of music videos on television.

"Yeah, it was big," she recalled. "I grew up on MTV. When I was 14, MTV was taking off. That's when I got into pop. Culture Club, Duran Duran and Madonna came out."

Impatient to break into show business, Martika was calling agents at age 11; she had no interest in pursuing a conventional career.

"I have friends who say, 'I hate my job. I wish I could do something else.' I say, 'Go do it.' I really believe you should follow your heart even if you have to go through rough times.

"I know I wanted it badly enough, I would have starved for it. Better that than making a lot of money in an office and being unhappy for the rest of my life."

Rock singer Madonna would prove to be a major influence on the aspiring star, who admired her determination to succeed.

"Madonna's been really inspirational for me because she took herself from nothing to the hugest female pop star alive. She introduced the whole dance music scene. She paved the way for the rest of us. People still don't take her seriously, but she's still making records."

Martika also chose to professionally use just one name, but denied getting the idea from Madonna. After all, Cher had done it before.

"Even when I was younger, I thought it would be cool to have one name, to have a unique name like Martika," the singer said. "I started using it when I was 16. I was acting, and my agent said I should save having one name for my recording career. Casting directors would complain to the agencies that I didn't have a last name."

Martika landed a minor role in the 1982 film version of "Annie." She went on to appear on several television shows, including "Silver Spoons," "Diff'rent Strokes," "Hardcastle & McCormick" and the children's variety series, "Kids Incorporated."

When she turned 18, she set her sights on the music industry, spending a year preparing songs with producer-writer Michael Jay (Miami Sound Machine, Stephanie Mills). She needed just two months to record the album, a collection of dance tracks and ballads.

The first single, "More Than You Know," reached the Top 20, but Martika's favorite song on the album is the anti-drug "Toy Soldiers," which she wrote herself.

"I was a little hesitant because I had only written two songs before and they were light songs. I came up to Michael and said I wanted to write about drugs. It was the first time I got the nerve to write about something that was scary for me to talk about, so I did," she said.

Martika wrote the song about a friend who had been addicted to cocaine.

"He can't listen to it," she said. "It gives him the chills. He says it affects him too much. He knows it's about him. He loves it. he thinks it's a beautiful song, but when he listens to my record, he skips over that."

Martika also does a dance version of Carole King's "I Feel the Earth Move." The young singer was just 3 when King's classic "Tapestry" album was released and knew little about her work.

Ivy plant breaks into new habitat

EGG HARBOR TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — This is not your ordinary office plant.

A persistent ivy vine that once climbed only the front of the southern New Jersey township's building inspections office made its way indoors about five years ago through a crack in the wall and apparently found it a good growing environment.

The vine now is in several offices, lining the perimeter and the ceiling of the room it first entered and making its way up a dark stairwell toward offices on the second floor.

Workers have allowed the vine's offshoots to wind their way to the fire inspections office and out to the customer service area counter, where a sign proclaims, "Yes! The ivy you see is real!"

When it came inside, no one saw reason to prune it. In fact, the employees marked its progress with small slips of paper.

GMC wheels out threat over name

PORTAGE, Mich. (AP) — The owner of Chevy's Cafe plans one last bash before changing the eatery's name, under a threat of a trademark infringement lawsuit by General Motors Corp.

To commemorate the name change to Flip's Cafe, employees and patrons will destroy a battered 1957 Chevy in the restaurant's parking lot tonight with a sledgehammer.

Owner Dennis Richards contends the name Chevy's was chosen simply to convey a 1950s image. Portage is about 135 miles west of Detroit.

"They sent us a letter the first week in April indicating that they were going to sue us if the name wasn't changed," Richards said of GM.

It's over: Angels end skid with 11-2 win

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

The Midland Angels made up for a lot of tough losses with an 11-2 romp over the San Antonio Missions Thursday.

Not only did the Haloes break a seven-game losing streak, but Manager Max Oliveras' team retained its half-game lead over Wichita in the Texas league-West race.

Wichita slapped El Paso 11-4 to keep pace with Midland, but nobody in Midland cared how the Wranglers did after the Angels pounded out 13 hits and got another complete-game performance from Mission-killer Scott Lewis.

Lewis went the distance with a six-hitter, walking none and fanning three. Even though he wasn't overpowering, Lewis faced only 22 batters — one over the minimum — in the second through eighth innings.

The Angels' opening-day pitcher lost his shutout in the first inning, but kept the visitors scoreless until the ninth to lower his earned run average against the Missions to well below one and a half runs per nine innings in posting his third win against the Los Angeles Dodger farmhands.

Lewis acted somewhat surprised with his success against the Missions.

"(With six left-handed-hitting starters Thursday) they really don't have the lineup that favors a right-handed pitcher," Lewis said. "But every time I've pitched against them, I've had real good command of my pitches."

San Antonio manager John Shoemaker said Lewis seemed stronger Thursday than in his first two starts against the Missions.

"We didn't hit the ball as well this time," Shoemaker said. "We hit the ball hard the first times we saw him, but we swung at some bad pitches tonight.

"Give him credit, though. He threw the ball better this time."

If only he could transfer that success to the rest of the league.

Lewis is 2-5 with a earned run average of more than 7.00 against the rest of the league. But for now, he's only concerned with the effect that Thursday's win might have on the Angels' flagging penniant hopes.

"A lot of things changed for us tonight," he said.

Oliveras elaborated on his hurler's comment.

"We just wanted it to be over," the skipper said. "Everything went our way."

Chris Cron, whose two-run homer in the third broke the game open, said the Angels really began their turnaround Wednesday, despite an extra-inning loss to the Missions.

"Wednesday was the turning point. We started to play better, and it carried over into tonight's game.

"We'd been hitting the ball well," Cron added. 'It just hadn't been falling in key situations."

After San Antonio got its first-inning run, Cron stroked a two-out double and scored the tying run on the first of two doubles by Otto Gonzalez. Two innings later, Cron put the Angels ahead for good with a two-run shot over the left-field fence.

Then San Antonio starter Darren Holmes settled down, sort of, until the sixth when he was forced to leave the game after a line drive off the bat of Scott Cerny hit him on the knee. Enter an Angel hitter's best friend — a.k.a Isidrio Marquez.

Marquez got rocked by the Angels in a brief stint Wednesday. And, he was mistaken if he thought Thursday would be any better. The Angels hammered the side-arming right-hander for five earned runs in the last 2⅔ innings on four hits and four walks.

Dan Grunhard was the only Angel batter not to drive in a run, even though he contributed mightily to the attack with two doubles.

The teams continue play with a doubleheader tonight. The first game begins at 6 p.m.

• HALO HOOPS — The Angels bid coach Nate Oliver goodbye after Thursday's game. Oliver leaves soon for Mesa, Ariz. to manage the Angels' rookie league team, but he said he'll remember his two-month stint with Midland in nothing but a positive sense.

Midland's Chris Cron lays out a damaging two-run homer Thursday against San Antonio.

Coaching changes abound

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Gil Bartosh, Midland athletic director, announced Thursday some coaching changes throughout the Midland Independent School District that are effective with the start of the next school year.

"We still have some changes to make and a few positions to fill, but we have made some decisions on vacancies we have had," said Bartosh. "We think the overall lineup of coaches will be a strong one for the school system."

Janice Baulch, who coached both volleyball and track at Midland Lee, resigned those two positions after the track season and those two positions have been filled.

Van Tom Whatley, Lee's football offensive coordinator, will take over as head girls track coach and will also be the cross country coach next fall. Whatley will remain with the Lee football team also.

Whatley isn't new to the Lee track scene, working as an assistant for several years under both Sam Volpe and Mike Quimby with the varsity boys. Whatley came to Midland in 1978 from Farwell, where he was head football coach. He left Lee briefly to take the Granbury football job for two years. He is a former quarterbacking standout at Big Spring.

The Big Spring connection continues in the volleyball position as Elise Wheat takes the head reins. Wheat is also a Big Spring graduate and was the school's female MVP for two years. At Big Spring, Wheat was a state finalist in the discus in 1981, placing fifth.

Wheat, an Angelo State graduate, will come to Midland from Liberty Hill where she has coached since 1986 and has been the head volleyball coach there for the past two years. She placed a team in the state playoffs in 1987. She is considered one of the up and coming coaches and is highly regarded.

New Midland High head football coach Davis Corley has completed his staff for next fall, hiring Bobby Cotton from Gregory-Portland. Cotton coached linebackers and ends at Gregory-Portland and will probably be the junior varsity coach at MHS while assisting with the varsity. He is the replacement for Randy Quisenberry, who went with Doug McCutchen to Duncanville.

One of the surprising actions was the move of Jesse Marsh from Midland High to Lee. Marsh, who is the most successful swimming coach in District 4-5A swim history, will become physical education chairman at Lee.

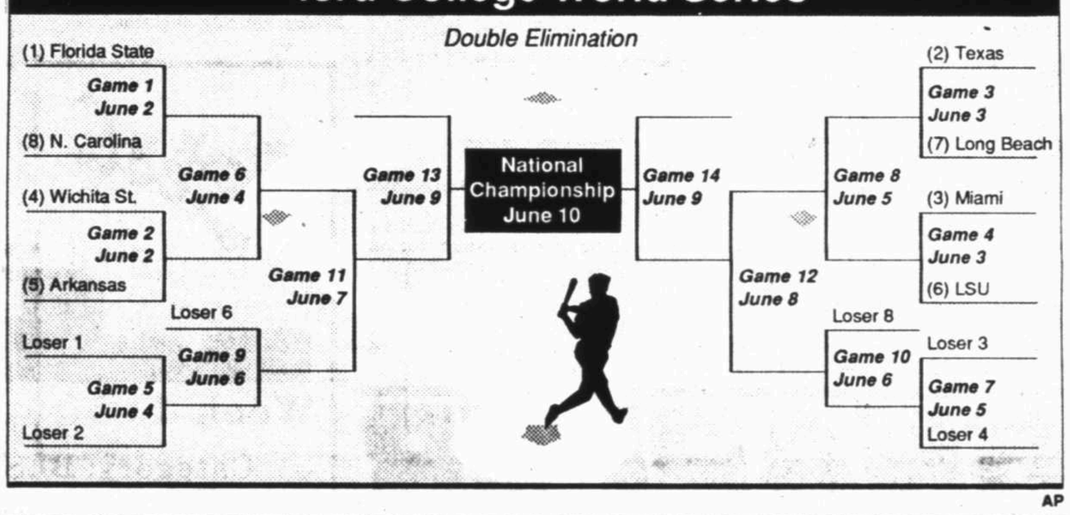

Marsh's swim teams have won numerous district and regional titles. The MHS swimming position is currently open.

Phyllis Sutton, who is a current member of the Lee teaching staff, will become the girls golf coach, replacing Shirley Stephenson, who has opted to join Whatley as an assistant in girls track.

43rd College World Series

Double Elimination

Eight is enough in college series

By Ed Zieralski
Copley News Service

Mike Schmidt played in it. So did Dave Winfield, Bob Horner, Sal Bando, Burt Hooton, Roger Clemens, Chris Sabo and Greg Swindell.

It is the College World Series, and each year for the past 40 the folks in Omaha, Neb., have turned their city into a wide-open campus for a week of college baseball's best.

Call Rosenblatt Stadium these fans' Field of Dreams. They haven't had to clear a corn field to make a baseball stage for the likes of Shoeless Joe Jackson. These folks just turn out Rosenblatt's green carpet for eight of the best college baseball teams.

Play in the 43rd CWS starts Friday (June 2) in the two-bracket, double-elimination tournament and ends with a championship game June 10.

"This is a fun time of year to be in Omaha," said Terry Forsberg, Rosenblatt's public events manager.

Knicks' Pitino makes it official

By PETER ALFANO
New York Times News Service

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Accompanied by his wife, Joanne, and modest applause, he walked into a conference room brimming with 15 television camera crews, a sportscaster powdering his nose with makeup, a number of newspaper reporters and the 22 members of the University of Kentucky Athletics Association Board of Directors, as well as other university dignitaries.

Dressed in a gray suit, his dark hair neatly in place, able to pass for a postgraduate student, Richard A. Pitino — as the athletic director C.M. Newton presented him — stepped to the podium and conducted his first news conference as the head coach of the Commonwealth's favorite team.

In his unmistakable New York accent, Pitino spoke about how happy he was to be back home again in the world of college basketball.

"We missed the college community and dealing with young people," he said. "Every day for the past two years, we've looked back and missed Providence. I almost went back there last year. We're New Yorkers and the New York Knicks are a class organization that will win a championship, but emotionally and physically, I needed to get back to college.

Deshaies narrowly misses no-hitter

By MIKE LUTZ

HOUSTON (AP) — Jim Deshaies came within four outs of the season's first no-hitter, allowing only an infield single by Mickey Hatcher and a bloop hit by Eddie Murray in 8 2-3 innings, and the Houston Astros defeated the Los Angeles Dodgers 7-2 Thursday night.

With two outs in the eighth inning, Hatcher hit a hard bouncer that Deshaies was unable to handle. The ball skipped toward shortstop Rafael Ramirez, whose throw was too late to catch the runner.

Murray dropped a hit between second baseman Bill Doran and right fielder Terry Puhl to lead off the ninth. The Dodgers went on to score two unearned runs before reliever Juan Agosto struck out pinch-hitter Mike Davis for the final out.

Four pitchers, including Nolan Ryan, have taken no-hitters to the ninth inning this season. The last one also came against the Dodgers when Cincinnati's Tom Browning pitched a perfect game on Sept. 16, 1988.

Deshaies, 6-3, walked five, struck out six, and has never lost to the Dodgers in six decisions at the Astrodome.

The Astros have seven straight victories, equaling the longest National League winning streak this season.

Dodger starter Mike Morgan, 4-3, gave up an infield hit to Glenn Davis and a single to left field to Puhl to start the second inning.

Caminiti scored the second run on a grounder by Craig Biggio.

MC prepares for nationals

From Staff Reports

Five golfers from Midland College are preparing for the 1989 National Junior College Athletic Association championship tournament, which opens Tuesday in Norfolk, Nebraska.

The Chaparrals gained their first automatic berth in the tournament by winning the Region V title last month. Their first participation in the NJCAA event was in 1988, when they gained an at-large invitation because of their high national ranking. Midland finished 13th in the tournament.

"This is exciting, because we earned the right to be in the tournament instead of having to wait for a special invitation," said MC coach Delnor Poss. "We feel we can play with almost anyone, despite having five freshmen."

Agassi shines in Paris

By ANDREW WARSHAW

PARIS (AP) — Andre Agassi loves being an American in Paris.

"I would say that I get the best responses from the Europeans, especially in Italy, West Germany and here in France," the long-haired, 19-year-old Agassi said. "I depend on the U.S for the criticism ... constructive criticism."

Last year, Agassi, the No. 5 seed, reached the semifinals on his first visit to Roland Garros.

His first-round opponent then was the player he dispatched at the same stage Thursday, Paolo Cane of Italy. Once again, Agassi triumphed in straight sets. Once again, he lost only seven games.

This time, it was 6-2, 6-2, 6-3 and Agassi said he was ready to go all the way to the title.

"I am mentally prepared to go all the way this time, whereas last year the semifinals was almost all I could handle."

First up on center court today was defending women's champion Steffi Graf as the third round got under way in this famed Grand Slam event. She faced Austrian Nicole Jagerman, with an unfinished match between Tim Mayotte and Ronald Agenor to follow.

They were tied 3-3 in the fourth set when darkness set in Thursday night. Mayotte won two of the first three sets.

Mayotte, the No. 7 seed, was hoping to join six other Americans — No. 15 seed Michael Chang, Jay Berger, Jimmy Arias, Jim Courier and Lawson Duncan — in the third round.

Despite the best early American showing in five years, Ivan Lendl still appeared as the man to beat on the surface that gave him his first Grand Slam title in 1984. Lendl cruised to a 6-1, 6-3, 6-1 victory over Derek Rostagno Thursday, moving a step closer to his fourth French crown.

Mariners' ninth inning homer defeats Rangers

Associated Press

AL Roundup

Dave Cochrane said he wanted "to put the bat on the ball" when he stepped to the plate in the bottom of the ninth inning for the Seattle Mariners. He got more than he hoped for.

"That's as far as I've ever hit the ball," Cochrane said after his 417-foot home run lifted the Mariners to a 3-2 victory over the Texas Rangers.

Cochrane, an utility man who has been playing first base in place of the injured Alvin Davis, has struggled in the field and felt redeemed by his clutch hit. In the eighth inning, he missed Scott Fletcher's line drive down the first base line that went for a two-run double that tied the game 2-2.

"I'm proud of the way I can jump, but on that play I got off the ground about three inches," Cochrane said. "The umpire said I missed it a foot. I was no Michael (Jordan) on that play."

"I've felt pretty bad the way I've been playing. I just wanted to contribute. Fortunately, I put the bat on the ball," he said.

Seattle Manager Jim Lefebvre talked to Cochrane before the game.

"I told him the only thing that would keep him from being a good player up here is his nervousness," Lefebvre said. "He can play all nine positions and hit with power from both sides of the plate. If he keep things in perspective, he'll be an asset."

Mike Schooler, who has 12 saves in as many opportunities, was the winning pitcher, allowing one hit in 1 2-3 innings with two strikeouts and one walk.

Entering the game with two Rangers on base in the eighth, the 6-foot-3 right-hander, 1-0, retired Ruben Sierra on a grounder and struck out Julio Franco, who leads the American League with 44 RBIs.

"Schooler gave us a chance to win the game by getting us out of the eighth inning," Lefebvre said. "It was a very big win because of the way things went on the road trip."

The Mariners lost seven of nine games on an eastern road swing, before beating the Rangers in the opening game of a seven-game homestand.

Kevin Brown, 4-2, allowed seven hits, but two of them were solo home runs, and Texas lost its fourth straight.

Jim Presley's fifth-inning homer snapped a scoreless deadlock and broke up Brown's no-hitter.

The Mariners added another run in the sixth. With two out, Greg Briley singled, Jeffrey Leonard was hit by a pitch, and Ken Griffey Jr., singled in Briley.

"I rushed too much, pitching to Griffey," Brown said. "No excuses in the ninth. I just threw a pitch right down the middle to Cochrane,"- Brown said.

The 24-year-old rookie has been the Rangers' most consistent pitcher this year. Prior to Thursday's game, Texas pitchers had given up six or more runs in four straight games, but Brown responded with his fourth complete game in 10 outings.

"With an arm like his, he's going to have a lot of success," said Texas catcher Jim Sundberg. "He just made a mistake and threw a fast ball over the heart of the plate. We were trying to work him (Cochrane) inside," Sundberg said.

Seattle starter Scott Bankhead, 2-4 had one of his finest efforts of the season before tiring in the seventh. He allowed three hits, struck out three and walked one.

"Bankhead pitched a super, super game. When I went out there in the seventh, he told me his tank was on empty," Lefebvre said.

Orioles 8, Tigers 3

Jim Traber and Rene Gonzales homered to key a six-run first inning and the Baltimore Orioles won for the 12th time in their late 15 games, beating the Tigers.

The Orioles have won four straight, equaling their longest streak of last season, and are the first American League East team to go five games over .500 this season. They lead the second-place Boston Red Sox by 2½ games.

Rookie Randy Nosek, 0-2, making only his second start since being called up from Class AA London, Ontario, did not survive the first inning, giving up all six runs on four hits and two walks. He was relieved by Mike Schwabe, another rookie up from London, after retiring only two batters.

Dave Schmidt, 5-4, won his fourth consecutive start despite allowing a leadoff homer to Gary Pettis in the Detroit first and another leadoff shot by Fred Lynn in the fifth.

It was Pettis' first homer of the season and Lynn's second.

Schmidt gave up three runs on nine hits in five innings. Mark Thurmond started the sixth and allowed just one hit the rest of the way for his first save.

Nosek, who walked eight in 4 2-3 innings in his first start last Saturday at Kansas City, walked Baltimore's Brady Anderson on five pitches to start the game. Anderson stole second when the ball fell out of Nosek's hand during a delivery to Phil Bradley.

Cal Ripken singled to score Anderson, Mickey Tettleton walked and Joe Orsulak followed with an RBI double. Traber's third homer, off the facing of the second deck in right, made it 5-0 and one out later Gonzales hit his first homer.

Schwabe came on to strike out Billy Ripken, the ninth batter of the inning.

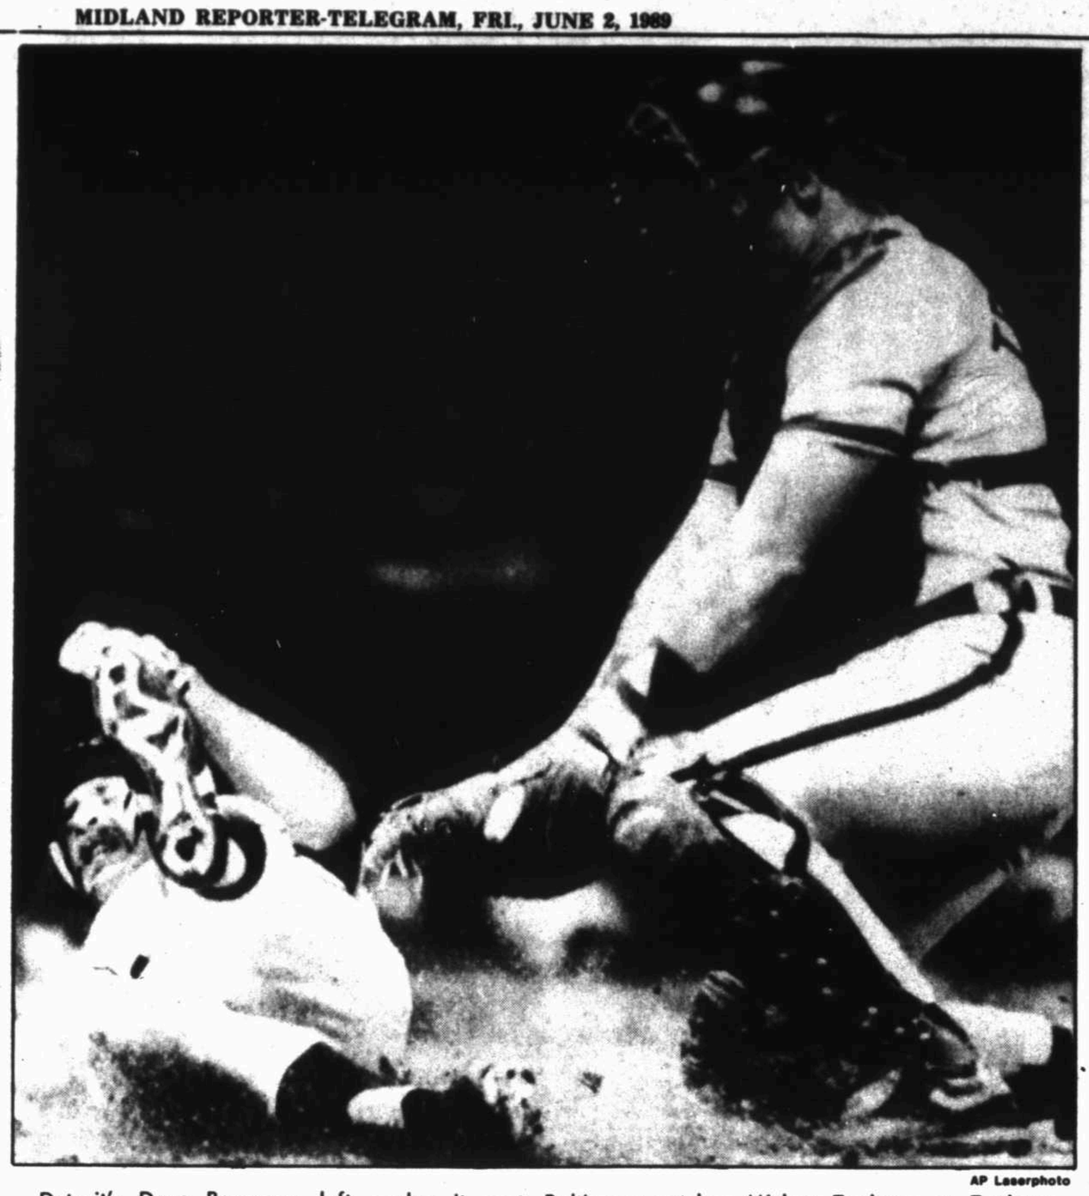

The Orioles scored without benefit of a hit in the fourth when Billy Ripken walked, moved to third on a two-base error by Lou Whitaker, and scored on a sacrifice fly by Cal Ripken. Tettleton doubled in the seventh and later scored on a sacrifice fly by Traber, who finished with four RBIs.

The Tigers' second run came in the fourth when Dave Bergman doubled and scored on a single by Rick Schu.

Brewers 5, Yankees 0

Teddy Higuera, slowed all season as he recovered from back surgery, pitched a two-hitter over six innings for his first victory as the Milwaukee Brewers beat the New York Yankees.

Higuera, 1-2, did not give up a hit until Alvaro Espinoza singled over the pitcher's glove leading off the sixth inning. The left-hander then gave up another single to Steve Sax before retiring the side.

PITINO

"We may speak differently, but I believe people are people anywhere you go and we're all the same. We wanted stability and roots; I want my children to go through the same grammar school and high school, something I didn't have. I hope that Kentucky basketball and the city of Lexington will be part of our lives for a long time."

He may not know all the words of "My Old Kentucky Home" as yet, but the 36-year-old Pitino recited the phrases that will quicken the pulses of the fans, alumni and boosters in a basketball-mad state who have been devastated by the sanction imposed on the Kentucky basketball program by the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

Kentucky was placed on probation for three years for recruiting and other violations. The 1989-90 men's basketball budget of $3,128,000 approved Thursday by the board of directors was $716,000 less than last year's total, reflecting the projected loss of income from television appearances and the NCAA postseason tournament.

"The one thing I can promise is that we will try to prove we can be competitive," Pitino said. "For me, it's been a tradition to say we will win right away. These will be exciting years and we want to see something so rich in tradition be brought back the right way the way Dr. Roselle and C.M. Newton have done.

"I don't want people here thinking of oil or horses but of Kentucky basketball tickets. I want them to be the most precious thing in life some day."

Pitino's hiring was approved by the board at a 10 a.m. meeting chaired by David Roselle, the school president. It was the fifth item on the agenda, but obviously, the reason for all the media attention. The local stations interrupted their morning programming to carry the news conference live.

Roselle, who greeted Joanne Pitino with a kiss on the cheek, called her husband a well-known and highly respected coach.

Newton made the recommendation that Pitino be hired. "Today, begins a new day," he told the board members. "It's the first day in rebuilding the program. I've traveled across the Commonwealth carrying the message that what's done is behind us. We face some tough times but I think we named the best head coach in the country. We will have an exciting, aggressive style and a program with class."

Under the NJCAA format, teams play 18-hole rounds on Tuesday and Wednesday. The field then is trimmed to the top 15 teams for the final two days. Five golfers play each day, with the best four rounds counted for the team total. All play will be at the Norfolk Country Club, a par-70, 6,700-yard course.

Some of the top competition likely will come from defending champion Scottsdale (Ariz.) Community College, plus New Mexico Junior College and Odessa College. NMJC won the spring conference title and finished second to the Chaps in the regional tourney.

Odessa College won the overall conference title, but had to rely on an at-large bid to gain the tournament field after faltering in the regional tourney.

Other teams are expected from East Texas, Florida, Georgia, the Carolinas, and Alabama.

Poss also acknowledged the home course advantage could help Northeast Community College of Norfolk, the host school for the tourney.

Poss will be without two of his top players: Sean Duffy and Andrew Coltart are freshmen from Scotland who had previously accepted invitations to the 1989 British Amateur before arriving at MC.

Golfers who will be competing for the Chaps include Mike Johnson from Midland High; Mark Kochan, a redshirt transfer from Scottsdale Community College, from Coquitlam, B.C., Canada; Dean Robertson, Scotland; Brian Wallace, Victoria, B.C., Canada; and Brad Wells, Graham.

En route to Norfolk the team will play a practice round in Lincoln, Neb. Teams are allowed practice rounds at the Norfolk Country Club only on Sunday and Monday prior to the tournament.

"Kochan, Robertson, and Wells all played in the regional tournament, so they know what to expect," Poss said. "But we aren't giving up anything with Wallace and Johnson on the squad. They've been competitive all year and both are capable of turning in some great scores. If this team doesn't get too excited and plays up to its capabilities, it can be shooting for the top spot on the last day."

Lendl, a native of Czechoslovakia who resides in Greenwich, Conn., has taken several years to perfect his English. Against Rostagno, he said, he had to try to understand a third language.

This year, umpires' instructions like "time" and "tiebreak" are being translated into French and Lendl found it confusing.

"I have trouble understanding what is going on," he said. "Not on the score but when we change over I can't understand if he is saying "quiet," "time," or something nasty. I can count (in French) but I'm not that good. Next time I'll have to bring a dictionary."

"I've been around a lot of teams, but I've never met 30 like these guys.

"First of all, they're good people. Second of all, they're outstanding athletes. Third, and most important, everybody cares about everybody else.

Oliver managed the Reno entry in the California League last season, before landing a spot in the California organization ...

... The Angels won despite missing the usual left side of their infield. Third baseman Bob Rose sat out with a sore ankle, while shortstop Gary DiSarcina was hurting from a backache suffered in a play at second base. Both players' status are day-to-day ...

... Midland's bullpen got a rest Thursday, keeping their cumulative 12-3 record and 2.12 ERA intact. Closer Gary Buckels has gotten most of the limelight with his ongoing streak of 27 innings without giving up an earned run, but how about Vinicio Cedeno? After a slow start, Cedeno has posted a 1.69 ERA in his last 15 games. He has inherited 15 runners this season, none of whom have scored ...

... San Antonio sluggers Adam Brown, Carlos Hernandez and Brian Traxler went into Thursday's game with a cumulative 16-for-25 streak this series. The trio — San Antonio's 4-5-6 hitters — went 1-for-10 against Lewis ...

... Finally, Cron's home run pulled him to within one of TL leaders Traxler and Tulsa's Gary Alexander.

CHANGES

Sutton has never coached golf, but is no stranger to the sport. She taught golf in schools in Washington, Iowa, and Albuquerque, N.M. Her daughter, Carrie, was an All-District golfer at Lee this spring.

Spencer Dunlap, who has coached football, basketball, track and golf over a 15-year career at McCamey, will join the Alamo coaching staff where he will coach all sports.

San Jacinto has filled its two openings with Greg Althof and Joe Golding.

Althof, is a recent graduate of Angelo State where he lettered in football. He was an All-District football player at Roscoe in high school.

Golding, a former Midland school board member, moves to SJ from De Zavala Elementary where he has been teaching physical education.

He helped Midland High in both football and basketball this school year, but was not an official coach of the system. He had long expressed an interest to get into the coaching field.

Teddy Reyes moves from SJ to Midland Freshman where he will have the same duties in basketball, football and track.

Bartosh said that some other "minor" moves and hirings would be made as the "situations warrant" through the summer. All of the assistant coaching positions haven't been settled and there is at least one opening left to be filled at the junior high level.

SATURDAY, JUNE 3, 1989

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Professional and social activities will compete for your attention. Vacation in late summer. When adverse winds blow, stand firm. Others respect you for defending your ideas. Exciting events affect romance in a positive way. A marriage that has faltered recovers; affairs of the heart overtake singles. A legacy or financial windfall makes home improvements possible.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Colleen Dewhurst, actor Tony Curtis, auto racer Barney Oldfield, actress Paulette Goddard, tenor Jan Peerce, Confederate leader Jefferson Davis, golfer Hale Irwin.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your feelings for someone are deepening. Accept a new family responsibility. Examine bargain items carefully before buying. A good evening for getting together with good friends. Try to keep entertainment costs down.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A social engagement will be fun, provided you have enough money to pay the bill. It is OK to break certain rules this weekend. Be bold in romance. Say what you feel.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A home renovation project will contribute to domestic harmony while increasing your property's value. Stick to the sound money management ideas proposed by an expert. Steer clear of friends' get-rich-quick schemes.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Real estate deals can be lucrative if you understand fully what you are doing. A class reunion brings a flood of memories. You have an opportunity to rekindle an old romance.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A change of scene will be a real pick-me-up this weekend. Outdoor sports prove invigorating. Take a chance on a blind date. Romance enjoys better influences than in the recent past.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Weekend shopping could put a dent in your budget. A parent-child relationship improves following a candid, illuminating conversation. Your appearance affects your morale. Skip desserts and get more exercise.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Hold fast to recent gains. Attend personally to matters that affect your family. Watch your cash and belongings when you travel. Avoid taking unnecessary risks.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be flexible and you can handle anything that is thrown your way. Your social calendar may be overbooked this weekend. Put loved one's wishes first. Romance flourishes in an atmosphere of consideration.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Conflicting influences could overshadow your plans today. The best thing to do is to muddle through without complaint; eventually the clouds will be dispersed. Promote projects that will help large numbers of people.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan 19): Although the social pace picks up, you must insist on some private time, too. Rest and a well-balanced diet are essential for success and continued good health. Listen to mate's suggestions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Get busy and complete those chores early so you can spend most of today with your family. A child urgently needs your counsel and understanding. Do more listening than talking.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Don't be a couch potato today. Loved ones' suggestions help you surge ahead. Forward important mail to a traveling family member or friend. Your thoughtfulness will be richly repaid. A dream comes true.

The Fourth Annual Epson Worldwide Bridge Contest will be held in clubs all over the world one week from today on June 9. A record 84,352 players took part in the 1988 event, making it the world's largest-ever bridge tournament. This hand is from the 1987 event.

Sitting South was Esther Rapaport of Chicago. She elected to open a slightly off-shape two no trump, not only to protect her doubleton kings from the opening lead, but also to show her relatively balanced 20 points. After a one-spade bid, she would have had no good rebid, and the final contract might well have been played from the wrong side. North made a transfer bid to hearts, then elected to bid four hearts because of the singleton diamond.

When dummy appeared, declarer was not thrilled. Not only was she playing in the wrong major, but there was every chance those declarers in no trump would take the same number of tricks as those in the major suit. So she decided to base her play on having at least one major suit break badly.

The opening club lead was taken by dummy's queen, and declarer's salvo was right on target—she led a low heart from the table rather than the jack! When East produced the queen, declarer was way ahead of the game—she had held her trump losers to one. West won the ace, continued with the four of clubs, and the rest was smooth sailing for declarer. She won in hand with the king and finessed the seven of hearts. After drawing trumps, on which declarer discarded two diamonds and a spade, the jack of spades was run. Unfortunately, West had the wrong doubleton honor, so South had to be content with 11 tricks. Nevertheless, declarer's nimble recovery to make five-odd was worth 80 matchpoints of a possible 100.

Young Jesse has hearty appetite

SAN GABRIEL, Calif. (AP) — Baby Jesse, who received a new heart only after his unmarried parents made a plea on national television, celebrated his third birthday with his own TV appearance.

Baby Jesse was born May 25, 1986, with a normally fatal heart defect, hypoplastic left heart syndrome. His parents, Jesse Sepulveda, 29, and Deanna Binkley, 19, sought to get the boy a heart transplant at Loma Linda University Medical Center.

The Right to Life League of Southern California claimed Loma Linda refused to consider Jesse as a heart transplant candidate because of his parents' unmarried status and Ms. Binkley's age at the time.

The hospital denied the charges and asserted they were concerned only about the couple's ability to provide post-operative care. Doctors agreed to perform the transplant operation when Baby Jesse's grandparents offered to accept legal custody.

Sepulveda and Ms. Binkley succeeded in finding a heart for their son by telling their story on Phil Donahue's syndicated television talk show. A Michigan couple watching the show volunteered the heart of their brain-dead child as a donor.

On Jesse's birthday last week, he and his parents, who have regained custody of the boy, flew from their home here to New York for an appearance on the "CBS This Morning."

"Jesse eats like a normal child," Sepulveda said when the family returned. "He likes Taco Bell tacos and Chuck E. Cheese pizza."

Sepulveda and Ms. Binkley give Jesse medicine twice a day to prevent rejection episodes. Jesse returns to the hospital once every six months.

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC News "Today" anchor Bryant Gumbel, on a dare from weatherman Willard Scott, showed some on-air versatility.

He gave the weather report.

The challenge began when Gumbel started kidding Scott on the air Thursday for arriving with only a second to spare before the 8:30 a.m. forecast.

"I was going to vamp for a little while until you managed to join us," Gumbel said. "Then I thought we'd kind of do the local (weather) at the front."

Scott said he would give $100 to Gumbel's favorite charity if Gumbel gave the weather report.

Gumbel chose the United Negro College Fund and then did the weather report, starting off in grand Willard Scott-style with birthday greetings for two viewers in South Dakota and Kansas.

Scott and Gumbel had a feud recently after Gumbel sent a memo to NBC brass criticizing Scott for making birthday greetings.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Actor Paul Newman has beaten a $41,000 tax bite on income from "The Sting."

Newman won the tax dispute when the California Supreme Court rejected the state's claim for a greater portion of Newman's income from the movie.

In unanimously denying a hearing sought by the state Franchise Tax Board, the justices on Thursday let stand a lower-court ruling that counted the time an actor spent "on call" as work time for apportioning income.

A non-resident such as Newman who performs personal services in California for part of a year is taxed according to the portion of the total working days spent in the state. If one-third of the working days are spent in California, for example, one-third of the income from the project is taxable by the state.

Newman's case involved a dispute over the definition of working days. In filming "The Sting," which won an Academy Award for best picture, Newman spent 30 days in California in 1973, 25 of them filming and five "on call," and 24 days outside California, only two of them filming.

In their tax returns, Newman and his wife, Joanne Woodward, described 54 days as "working days" and apportioned 30, or 55.5 percent, to California. But the tax board said only the 27 days of actual filming should count as "working days," and 25 of them, or 92.6 percent, were attributed to California.

Justice Jack Goertzen said in the decision that Newman was required to report for work by his studio at any time during the period he was "on call," and could not take any conflicting jobs.

LONDON (AP) — Dustin Hoffman heard cheers for his British stage debut as Shylock in Shakespeare's "The Merchant of Venice."

But while he won approval from the opening-night audience in London's Phoenix Theater, the critics today gave him mixed reviews.

"In side curls and skullcap, Hoffman gave Shylock humor, a passion for revenge and a tortured dignity when he loses all. It was a far cry from Raymond Babbitt, the autistic savant he plays in his current hit film 'Rain Man'," wrote Reg Evans of the British domestic news agency Press Association.

Wright loss may slow Texas recovery

By JOHN A. BOLT
AP Business Writer

The Congressional departure of Jim Wright could further bruise Texas' already fragile economic recovery, patched in part by government contracts pumping billions of dollars into the state.

Wright

"Texans are losing a very dedicated public servant, a great leader and an individual who has played a monumental role in shaping the economic viability of our state," said Texas House Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth.

Gov. Bill Clements, a Republican, put it simply, saying Wright "brought jobs and opportunities to Texas."

The Fort Worth Democrat, who has been the object of an ethics investigation surrounding his business dealings and the bulk sales of his book, has said he would step down as speaker of the U.S. House of Representatives and offered to resign his seat by month's end.

He was first elected to the House in 1954 and has been speaker since 1987.

"Jim Wright probably contributed more to the economy in Texas and to bringing good things to Texas than any other person that I've known in my lifetime," state Rep. Doyle Willis, D-Fort Worth, said in Austin.

Democratic Attorney General Jim Mattox said, "I think it's a tragedy for the state of Texas." He particularly cited the areas of defense contracts and the $4.4 billion superconducting super collider proposed for construction near Waxahachie but still unfunded.

But Waxahachie Mayor James Self, while concerned about loss of any support, said Texas Senators Lloyd Bensten and Phil Gramm have been more "out front" in support of the atom smasher, which could bring an estimated 3,500 permanent jobs to the town just south of Dallas.

"Whether or not (Wright's) loss is going to affect the super collider is a matter of conjecture," Self said, adding he wishes Congress would address the funding of the project as a scientific necessity and not a political plum.

Figures for 1986, the latest year available, show the importance of federal spending in Texas. In that year, direct federal spending was $47.58 billion, with $16.9 billion of it in defense outlays.

In Wright's home county of Tarrant, which includes parts of two other Congressional Districts, the federal government spent $6.67 billion. That compares, for example, with Dallas County's $4.67 billion in federal receipts the same year.

The Dallas-Fort Worth area accounts for more than 60 percent of total defense outlays in the state.

One of the major recipients in Fort Worth is General Dynamics Corp., located in Wright's district and the largest Tarrant County employer with more than 29,000 workers.

Another key Tarrant County defense contractor is Bell Helicopter-Textron Inc., with several sites in the county.

Bell, in conjunction with Boeing Helicopter Co., holds a $1.8 billion U.S. Navy contract to the V-22 Osprey, tilt-rotor aircraft. But Defense Secretary Dick Cheney has targeted the $40 billion tilt-rotor program for elimination to help reduce the budget.

Oil prices continue falling

From Staff and Wire Reports

Oil futures prices continue to head lower as many investors remain on the sidelines awaiting next week's OPEC meeting. Pressure has been building within the cartel to raise its self-imposed quota by more than 1 million barrels daily, a move that some fear would dampen oil prices.

At midmorning on the New York Mercantile Exchange, the July contract for West Texas Intermediate lost 20 cents to stand at $19.61. The contract lost 9 cents Thursday to close at $19.81.

Among refined products, wholesale unleaded gasoline for July delivery lost 1.21 cents to 63.34 cents a gallon, while contracts for later delivery also fell.

Wholesale heating oil for July, meanwhile, rose 0.33 cent to 48.09 a gallon, as other contract months ended mixed.

Traders said activity on the exchange, which has slowed considerably in the last two weeks, was grinding to a near-standstill as the market turned its attention to Vienna, where the 13 ministers of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries are gathering for their semi-annual meeting.

The meeting, scheduled for Monday, was to be preceded by a meeting of the cartel's price-monitoring committee on Friday. Eight ministers form that group.

Analysts said new speculation that the cartel would raise its current 18.5 million barrel-per-day production ceiling by between 1 million and 1.5 million barrels set a bearish tone for the market.

"Although the reports are not new, they make what we've already heard more definite," said Greg Dreis, energy broker with Merrill Lynch Energy Futures.

Dollar falls in 'readjustment'

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar eased in calm trading this morning in what dealers described as a readjustment rather than a change in a long-term trend.

Gold profited from the dollar's slight decline.

In Tokyo, the dollar closed at 141.80 yen, down from 142.52 on Thursday. Later, in London, the dollar was quoted at 141.90 yen.

Other dollar rates at midmorning compared with late Thursday:

—1.9715 West German marks, down from 1.9835.
—1.6920 Swiss francs, down from 1.7040
—6.6900 French francs, down from 6.7185
—2.2230 Dutch guilders, down from 2.2370
—1,432.00 Italian lire, from 1,442.50
—1.2026 Canadian dollars, down from 1.2068.

In London, it cost $1.5835 to buy one pound, compared to $1.5730 on Thursday.

Gold opened in London at $362.50 a troy ounce, unchanged from late Thursday. At midmorning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $362.70.

Silver was quoted in London at $5.22 a troy ounce, unchanged from late Thursday.

Stock market gains 10 points

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices gained ground Thursday in a session dominated by a record-sized transaction in Texaco shares just as the market closed.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 10.48 points to 2,490.63.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 3 to 2 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 879 up, 574 down and 527 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 223.16 million shares, against 162.53 million in the previous session. Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 262.03 million shares.

As the New York market was about to close, three big Wall Street firms handled a 42.32 million-share block trade of Texaco at 49, down 2⅛ from Wednesday's last price.

Traders immediately concluded that financier Carl Icahn had unloaded his position in the company to pursue other objectives, possibly involving USX Corp., in which Icahn also has long held a large stake. USX shares jumped 2¾ to 37¼.

IS USX NEXT?

Icahn sells record $2 billion in stock

Icahn

NEW YORK (AP) — Carl Icahn has sold a record $2 billion block of shares — his entire Texaco Inc. stock. The move fueled speculation that the takeover strategist may turn his sights on an old target: USX Corp.

Trading in the steel giant's stock was halted near the close of the New York Stock Exchange session Thursday because there were too many buy orders and not enough sell orders after Icahn sold his 42.32 million Texaco shares. USX finished the day up $2.62½ at $37.50 a share.

Icahn ended his long and often bitter involvement with Texaco by selling his 17.3 percent stake — which had made him the company's biggest shareholder — for $49 a share or $2.07 billion. The block trade was the single most expensive ever on the New York Stock Exchange, according to Catherine Maroney, a Big Board spokeswoman.

Texaco closed down $2.12½ at $49 a share.

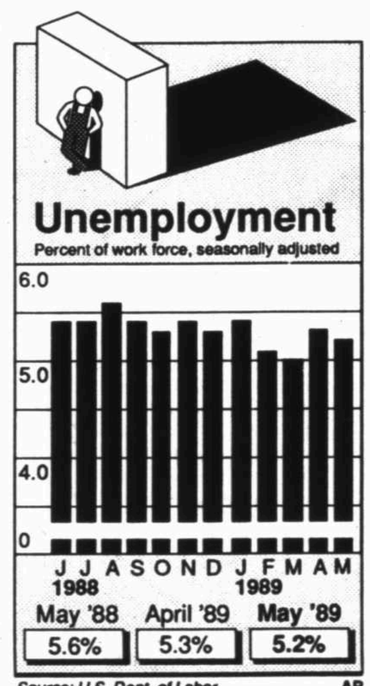

"We think the company has improved a great deal in a year and a half and we like to think we played a small part in helping them to do that, but we felt it was time to move on and we wish the company and management well," Icahn said in a telephone interview.

Icahn declined to comment further and it was not known immediately how he planned to use proceeds of the sale. Icahn, who is chairman of Trans World Airlines Inc., bought the shares for an average cost of $36.50 apiece, and his profit on the transaction was estimated at close to $700 million, The New York Times reported today.

UNEMPLOYMENT

May unemployment rate goes lower to 5.1 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's unemployment rate dipped to 5.2 percent in May but — in a signal of a slowing economy — job growth fell to its lowest level in more than three years, the government said today.

The civilian jobless rate, taken from the Labor Department's monthly household survey, fell 0.1 percentage point from April's 5.3 percent, in line with the expectations of analysts.

But non-farm payroll growth, taken from a separate survey of business establishments, was up by only 101,000, down from April's revised growth of 206,000 jobs. The May growth was the lowest month-to-month gain since 84,000 added payroll positions were reported in March 1986.

For the past three months, an average of only 160,000 jobs have been added to non-farm payrolls each month, down from the robust average monthly gain of 270,000 jobs reported in 1987 and 1988.

In other signs of an economic slowdown, the Labor Department said the average private-sector nonagricultural workweek fell 0.3 hours, to 34.6 hours. That decline was influenced by April figures that likely overestimated the work week because the survey did not take into account that Good Friday and the Easter holidays fell in March this year instead of April.

The average factory workweek also fell last month, slipping 0.2 hours to 41 hours while average overtime fell an equal amount to 3.8 hours, the Labor Department reported.

And in data that will hailed by those looking for signs of easing inflation, average hourly wages inched up only 0.1 percent in May following a 0.7 increase for April. Average weekly earnings fell from April's $335.04 to $332.51 on a seasonally adjusted basis.

The consensus among analysts was that some 220,000 jobs would be added to the nation's economy, more than double the number reported by the government.

Such projections have led analysts to predict the economy would show too much strength for the Federal

Bush plan gets setback

New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration's rescue bill for the nation's troubled savings and loan industry suffered another setback Thursday in Congress as the House Government Operations Committee voted along partisan lines to include in the federal budget most of the costs of the plan.

The action was a victory for those who support on-budget financing to pay for the rescue plan, which calls for spending $157 billion in the next 10 years.

And it represented a growing tide of sentiment in the House that the cost should be reflected in the nation's annual deficit figures.

By a vote of 22-13, the committee rejected President Bush's off-budget financing plan and agreed with the House Ways and Means Committee that $50 billion in borrowings to close hundreds of insolvent savings institutions should be included in the budget along with other government spending obligations.

But the panel also agreed that the spending measure should be excluded from deficit ceilings set by the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings budget law, which otherwise would force either major cuts in other government programs or a tax increase.

At the same time, members of the House Banking Committee Thursday challenged contentions by a Treasury official that the on-budget plan would actually be more expensive in the long run since it would push up the overall borrowing costs of the Treasury and wipe out any savings.

"The administration's plan is both representative of truth in budget accounting and is cheaper than the alternative," said Robert Glauber, under secretary of the Treasury.

He said that putting the plan on the budget would set a dangerous precedent for other costly government programs, such as nuclear waste cleanup, which could also be excluded from deficit targets, and would send a signal to the financial markets that the government was not serious about sticking to the deficit law.

Texas jobless rate steady

DALLAS (AP) — Texas saw a drop of slightly more than 1 percent in its unemployment rate in May when compared with last month and last year, continuing a slow, but steady economic recovery, analysts said.

Nic Santangelo, chief economist with the Bureau of Labor Statistics in Dallas, said 5.9 percent of the state's employable people were jobless in May, compared with a 7.4 percent jobless rate in April.

Last May, 7.2 percent of the Texas workforce was without a job.

"This is the third consecutive month of significant change in the series," Santangelo said.

"The direction of movement in the data is mostly typical for May: as employment increased and the number of unemployed fell," Santangelo said. "Employment stood at 7.8 million in May, while the number of unemployed persons in the state was placed at 488,000."

In April, there were 7.7 million employed and 621,00 without work.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

MCC, NASA sign consulting contract

AUSTIN (AP) — The MCC research consortium says it has signed a contract with NASA to supply consulting services to the space agency.

MCC, the Austin-based Microelectronics and Computer Technology Corp., said Thursday its software technology program was awarded a one-year, $96,000 subcontract with the University of Houston-Clear Lake's Institute for Computing Information Systems under the NASA contract.

"We will provide an overview of our software technologies and prototypes and determine with NASA and our shareholders how our research could be integrated into the agency's activities," said Les Belady, MCC vice president.

Gibraltar delays bond interest payment

LOS ANGELES (NYT) — The Gibraltar Financial Corp., parent company of Gibraltar Savings and Loan of Beverly Hills, Calif., said it would not make a $1.02 million interest payment due Friday to bondholders.

If the payment, due to holders of $22 million worth of 9¼ percent convertible subordinated debentures due 2008, is not made by July 1, the company will default on the notes and it said it might also default on another $99.5 million in senior subordinated debentures.

Gibraltar Financial said it could not make the interest payment because the government prevented it from receiving an interest payment from Gibraltar Savings last month.

Federal regulators seized the institution in April. Gibraltar Financial also announced it was postponing indefinitely its June 16 annual meeting.

Former head Vernon S&L is indicted

DALLAS (AP) — The former president of Vernon Savings and Loan Association has been charged with conspiring with other senior Vernon officers to commit fraud in a scheme involving $55,000 in political contributions.

A federal grand jury in Dallas returned the 33-count indictment against Patrick G. King Thursday.

The scheme allegedly involved reimbursing Vernon officers approximately $55,000 for political campaign contributions to candidates for state and federal office, said FBI special agent Woody Specht.

The indictment charges that the scheme involved contributions in 1986 to Texas Republican gubernatorial candidate Tom Loeffler and the 1986 Texas Tribute, an organization that donated money to several politicians, including House Speaker Jim Wright of Fort Worth, U.S. Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., and U.S. Rep. Jack Kemp, R-New York.

But the indictment emphasized that there were no allegations whatsoever that any of the candidates or campaign organizations knew that the contributions.

May retail sales get increase

New York Times News Service

The nation's large retailers reported Thursday that sales last month were better than in May 1988, but sales at several of the biggest chains barely kept up with inflation and in some cases rose less than the prices of their goods.

Sears Roebuck, K-mart and J.C. Penney, three of the four largest retailers, posted increases of about 5 percent or less, compared with May 1988. Their results reflected a lag in buying of the low-to moderate-priced goods that they emphasize.

But the large department store and specialty chains, which cater to more-affluent consumers, had a much healthier May, with several of them posting double-digit increases.

The overall results were seen by analysts as further evidence that both retailing and the economy were slowing.

"May sales softened in the second half of the month," said Walter F. Loeb, senior analyst for Morgan Stanley & Co., New York. "Business became polarized with mass-volume stores hurt most and the department and apparel stores doing much better. Men's wear, the most postponable of purchases, turned sluggish and that may signal a significant slowdown."

During the month, shoppers also became conservative on big-ticket durables for the second month in a row, while sales of women's apparel continued to surge over a depressed year-earlier trend. This turnaround gave several of the large apparel chains the largest monthly sales rises among the major retailers.

Sears Roebuck, the nation's biggest retailer, has a 5.3 percent rise in May sales in its merchandising group, to $2.5 billion from $2.37 billion a year earlier. Its same-store sales, which measures sales at stores open for at least a year, rose 3.1 percent compared with the year before. For the 17-week period ended May 27, Sears' sales increased 9.7 percent, to $10.1 billion from $9.22 billion a year earlier, while same-store sales rose 6.6 percent.

One analyst, Joseph Ronning of Brown Bros. Harriman, told The Associated Press that Sears' results suggested that customers were losing interest in the retailer's low-price policy that started March 1.

The second-largest retailer, K-mart Corp., did not have a good month,

Tenneco fined for destroying gas

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston-based Tenneco is paying the Department of the Interior a $5 million fine today for deliberately destroying 1 billion cubic feet of natural gas at Gulf of Mexico drilling platforms and then trying to conceal the action to avoid paying government royalties, according to a published report.

The payment, to be made in New Orleans, is described by the department as the largest such settlement ever collected, The Houston Post reported today from its Washington bureau.

"This is a matter of cheating the American people — first by wasting an important natural resource and second by not paying America for using it," Interior Secretary Manuel Lujan said. "We will not tolerate this kind of behavior."

A public relations department secretary at Houston-based Tenneco said no one was immediately available to comment this morning.

The federal government owns offshore areas leased by Tenneco where authorities found more than 300 incidents of unauthorized venting of natural gas at drilling platforms.

Tenneco last year sold its oil and gas operations for more than $7 billion. The incidents cited by the Interior Department occurred between May, 1986 and February 1987.

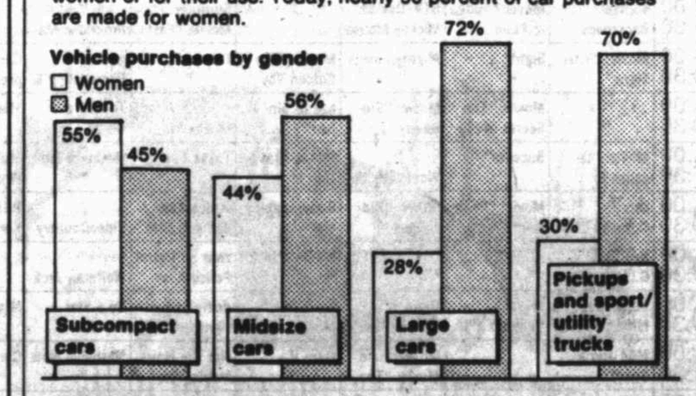

Interior officials said the gas was destroyed by "flaring," a process that burns off unwanted gas.

GAS

According to the department's inspector general's office, Tenneco burned off the gas because prices were too low to make it profitable to bring it onshore.

The company's lease agreement with the government, however, made Tenneco responsible for paying royalties on all gas and oil, regardless of whether it was sold. Government officials said Tenneco tried to avoid the payments by filing false production and royalty reports and by disconnecting a gas meter.

Two technicians from the Minerals Management Service, on an inspection tour of Tenneco offshore platform, discovered the problem when they saw bubbling in the water — a sign of gas being vented.

Under terms of the accord, Tenneco will pay the fine in exchange for the government's agreement not to seek criminal prosecution, civil penalties or cancel the company's lease.

with sales rising 2.5 percent, to $2.19 billion from $2.14 billion a year earlier, while same-store sales fell 0.6 percent. Analysts noted that the K-mart gain for all stores was actually a decline in real terms when inflation is subtracted. Sales in the 17-week period were up 3.5 percent, to $8.26 billion from $7.98 billion, and same-store sales were flat in the period.

At the company's annual meeting last week, Joseph E. Antonini, K-mart chairman, said that K-mart's May sales were falling behind the company's projection of a 3.5 percent growth in same-store sales but he hoped this would improve for the year as a whole.

Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., the third-largest retailer which has long been outpacing bigger rivals, continued to do so in May.

It reported a 25 percent sales gain, to $2.03 billion from $1.63 billion a year earlier, and said same-store sales were up 11 percent.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

'Drafts' allow quick fund shares redemption

By BILL DOYLE

Q. Despite its modest dividend yield, my husband and I invested in a tax-free money market mutual fund because checks can be written on our account and additional money can be added to it.

We are now in need of a portion of this money. I remember reading something that led me to believe the money might not be available. Is that true?

Doyle

A. Not unless something went terribly wrong at that particular mutual fund. And that would be a major news item, which has not occurred.

The Investment Company Act of 1940 requires every mutual fund to cash in any shares presented for redemption on any business day. Virtually all money market mutual funds — both the taxable and the tax-free variety — as well as some other mutual funds, permit redemption though check-writing.

When you open an account at a typical money market mutual fund, you get a book of checks — technically "drafts," but they work the same as checks.

Every time you write one of those checks, you redeem some of your fund shares. As long as the value of shares in your account is sufficient to cover the check, the fund can't refuse to pay.

Q. A friend is urging me to change the $60,000 I now have in certificates of deposit to a tax-free income mutual fund. How can anything be tax-free? Won't I eventually have to pay? Are these funds insured? I am 70 years old and, as you might have guessed, not very venturesome.

A. The dividends paid by tax-free mutual funds are not subject to federal income tax because that kind of fund holds as investments "municipal" securities issued by states and their political subdivisions.

The interest paid on those securities is exempt from federal income tax. The mutual fund collects that interest and, after deducting its operating expenses, passes that money along to fund shareholders — also free from federal income tax.

Here's a kicker. If you are collecting Social Security benefits, you must include otherwise tax-free mutual fund dividends, tax-free municipal bond interest and half of your SS benefits to your adjusted gross income to determine if part of your SS benefits are taxable.

That amounts to a backdoor tax on municipal bond interest and dividends from mutual funds holding municipal securities.

Mutual funds are not insured.

Q. I have been advised by a broker to invest my $25,000 life savings in a U.S. government securities mutual fund, from which I would receive $205 monthly.

Would my initial $25,000 investment remain the same? Does the dividend rate fluctuate? What exactly is this fund?

A. That fund is an open-end investment company. The money investors pay in to buy fund shares is used to invest in U.S. Treasury and federal agency securities. Because the market value of those securities can rise and fall, the value of the fund's shares can fluctuate — taking the value of your investment up or down. The dividend rate cannot be guaranteed. It can change.

On the fund you named in your letter, a 4 percent commission charge would come right off the top of a $25,000 investment, meaning you would purchase $24,000 worth of shares.

Monthly dividends of $205 work out to $2,460 a year. On $24,000, that a 10.25 percent yield. The fund you named has been yielding about 9.9 percent lately. So based on the fund's recent share value and dividend payments, you would get $198 a month.

That dividend payment might be higher or lower in the future, depending on market conditions and the investing ability of the people who manage that mutual fund.

There has been widespread speculation that Icahn, who already holds a little more than 11 percent of USX, might make a play for the oil and steel company. He made and then abandoned a $7.2 billion offer for USX in early 1987 after its board rejected it.

Possibly heightening the speculation was Wednesday's retirement of USX Chairman David M. Roderick, who led the company's battle against Icahn.

A telephone call to USX headquarters in Pittsburgh wasn't answered late Thursday.

Texaco spokeswoman Anita Larsen said Icahn's shares were bought by the investment firms Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc., Salomon Brothers Inc. and Goldman Sachs & Co. The firms intend to offer the shares to investors worldwide, she said.

JOBLESS

Reserve to ease its tight rein on credit. But the sluggishness demonstrated by today's report likely will increase pressure on the central bank to relax monetary policy.

The service-producing industries again accounted for the overwhelming job growth, adding 134,000 jobs to help offset some of the declines in other economic sectors. But even that number was well down from a revised April gain of nearly 190,000 new service-producing jobs and well off the sector's 250,000 monthly average gain last year.

Goods-producing industries reported a net loss of 33,000 jobs, with mining down slightly and construction employment off by 14,000 positions. Manufacturing operations reported a loss of 18,000 jobs from April.

Japanese parliament approves Uno

TOKYO (AP) — Parliament today approved Sousuke Uno as prime minister, and he pledged reforms to clear the air of an influence-peddling scandal that has decimated the top ranks of the governing Liberal Democratic Party.

The 66-year-old former foreign minister also spoke out against the United States, saying Washington's use of its new trade law to force concessions from Japan was "like negotiating with your fists up."

The conservative party was to get new leaders and a new Cabinet was to be installed in an effort to wipe the slate clean of the Recruit Co. scandal before an election for half the upper house of Parliament, expected within two months.

The scandal surfaced a year ago, ruined many careers and forced Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita, 65, to resign and take responsibility for a widespread loss of trust in politics.

The two houses of Parliament met separately today and selected Uno as Japan's 18th postwar prime minister on the strength of the Liberal Democrats' majorities in each chamber.

In the lower house, Uno got 285 of 477 votes, with Japan Socialist Party Chairwoman Takako Doi receiving 139, Eiichi Nagasue of the Democratic Socialist Party 26 and Kenji Miyamoto of the Communist Party 25. Two votes were ruled invalid.

The upper house gave Uno 124 of 220 votes, with Ms. Doi capturing 65, Miyamoto 17 and Nagasue 9. Five ballots were blank, officials announced.

Earlier, the Liberal Democrats endorsed Uno to succeed Takeshita as party president.

A special conference of party legislators spent only 45 minutes on debate and speeches before standing in virtual unanimity to endorse Uno as party president.

Uno today pledged political reforms to create "the party anew" and clear the air of the scandal that has decimated the top ranks of Liberal Democrats.

"The Recruit scandal had a great impact, and I understand what it means to be chosen as prime minister in such a situation," Uno said. "I would like to promise to carry forward political reforms with all my loyalty and strength."

Asked at a news conference about his reform program, Uno gave no specifics.

Uno has served as director general of the Defense Agency, minister of interational trade and industry, and foreign minister, three of the most important Cabinet posts.

But he has not held two of the traditional jobs on the route to the prime ministership — the finance portfolio and the party post of secretary general — and he has no independent power base within the party.

Some observers expect him to be an interim prime minister, perhaps only until the upper house election in July, or until October, when the party holds its national convention.

A key to his survival will be his political reform program and the opinion of it by voters, who now give the Liberal Democrats record low popularity rankings.

Will Bush arms-control timetable survive test?

An Analysis

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

LONDON — The euphoria and even the self-congratulation are subsiding. And now President Bush's ambitious arms control initiatives will be put to the test.

Indeed, as Secretary of State James A. Baker III said Thursday, the ball is in the Soviets' court and "a response by them is now clearly called for."

Bush's proposals for ceilings on troops, tanks, combat aircraft and attack helicopters, artillery and armored personnel carriers refine what NATO put on the bargaining table in Vienna in March.

Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev responded last month with his own blueprint for drastic cuts.

But Bush's proposals change the picture in the East-West talks again. For the first time, for instance, NATO is willing to negotiate over combat airplanes.

The Soviets, presumably, will have to deal with that issue. Defining what is a combat craft is difficult. And Gorbachev is bound to have his own version of what kind of aerial cutbacks should be made.

The Soviet leader also may push for reductions in Western naval forces. And it would be amazing if he did not try to trim or even eliminate British and French troop concentrations in West Germany.

Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze, in an initial reaction Wednesday in Paris, said those 100,000 forces could complicate the quest for an accord.

This had echoes of the fight two years ago over Pershing missiles in West Germany that were partly under U.S. control.

It threatened to hold up a treaty to ban U.S. and Soviet medium-range missiles.

The Reagan administration argued the negotiations did not involve West Germany. Finally, there was a compromise in which the West Germans volunteered to destroy the missiles.

Bush, outlining his plan in Brussels, said it should be possible to complete a treaty in six months to a year.

It would be carried out by 1992 or 1993, at the latest, under the Bush timetable.

Shevardnadze said he was "pessimistic" about Bush's timetable.

Baker was not about to contradict his boss, especially on the president's best week in office.

"It was optimistic, but not unrealistic," Baker said.

But he acknowledged there are lots of questions for NATO to work out before the proposal is put on the table in Vienna.

These, he said, include finding ways to verify that the reductions are carried out and dealing with the equipment the United States would like to keep stored in Europe after tens of thousands of troops are withdrawn.

Baker also said there are questions about the extent to which troops must be demobilized and deactivated.

Responding to Shevardnadze on British and French troops, he said, "I suppose we will have an interest in knowing what happens to other Warsaw Pact troops other than Soviet troops."

The pace of arms control has quickened since Gorbachev took power in 1985.

The United States and the Soviet Union signed an unprecedented treaty in 1987 to destroy all their medium-range nuclear missiles.

By pushing hard on a number of fronts, the Soviet leader has forced Bush to abandon his cautious stance and come up with his own wide-ranging plan.

Barry Schweid, the head of the AP's State Department staff, has covered arms control for 16 years.

Pretoria blast shakes Indian leader's home

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) — A bomb blast today damaged the home of the leader of the Indian chamber of Parliament but police said there were no injuries.

Ebrahim Abramjee, chairman of the House of Delegates, was visiting Britain with his wife, but his three sons and his 80-year-old mother were at the house when the blast occurred shortly after midnight in Laudium, a township for Indians outside Pretoria.

Windows were shattered, and a wall was badly damaged by the bomb, which police identified as a Soviet-made limpet mine.

There was no claim of responsibility, and police gave no indication who might have been responsible.

Last month, the home of a white Parliament member of the governing National Party was damaged by a bomb. There were unconfirmed press reports that white right-wing extremists may have been responsible.

Parliament has segregated chambers for whites, Indians and people of mixed-race, but excludes the black majority.

WORLD IN BRIEF

III Duarte surrenders Salvadoran presidency

Alfredo Cristiani, second from right, is sworn in as president of El Salvador. His wife, Margarita, holds the Bible as the oath is administered by Ricardo Alvarenga, president of the congress. Watching, far right, is outgoing president Jose Napoleon Duarte.

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Exhausted by cancer, calamity and revolution, President Jose Napoleon Duarte has completed what may be his greatest victory — peacefully turning his government over to an elected successor.

He yielded power Thursday to Alfredo Cristiani, the new president who represents Duarte's nemesis on the right wing.

Duarte's closest political adviser, commenting on condition his name not be used, said that with the president's ebbing strength, Duarte is given to reflecting on his crusade for democracy in El Salvador.

"He feels ambivalent, because he began by taking power away from the oligarchy and now it may seem he's handing it back," the adviser told The Associated Press.

"He is aware of the irony in the fact that handing power to the most disagreeable political opposition will consolidate the democratic process he has dedicated his life to building."

The adviser, an old friend and fellow founder of the Christian Democratic Party, sees Duarte almost daily.

He described how Duarte has had to lie in an oxygen tent, wasted by dehydrating vomiting and diarrhea. Like the ulcers in Duarte's mouth, they are brought on by chemotherapy.

The 63-year-old engineer-turned-politician is likely to be remembered as crucial to a gradual and difficult replacement of an authoritarian, semifeudal system of government with an incipient democracy.

But he approached the end of his term and his life burdened by failures and compromises that will weigh heavily as history deliberates its verdict.

Duarte has terminal liver cancer. Since it was diagnosed in June 1988, he has made periodic trips to Walter Reed Army Medical Center in Washington for treatment, which leaves him bedridden.

Jetliner takes nose-dive

DARWIN, Australia (AP) — A Qantas Airways jumbo jet with 325 people aboard inexplicably pitched upward at 30,000 feet Thursday and then nose-dived, catapulting passengers around the cabin so hard they left dents. As many as 30 people were injured.

A Qantas official on Friday described the effect as like a "roller coaster ride" for the 305 passengers and 20 crew members bound for Singapore. The plane, a 747-200, left from Sydney and was diverted to Darwin, far northern Australia.

Fleet Manager Capt. Les Hayward said he did not know whether air turbulence or a fault in the autopilot could have caused the malfunction.

He said 61 people were taken to Royal Darwin Hospital, but more than half of them were relatives of the injured.

Pope facing challenge

OSLO, Norway (AP) — Norway's top Lutheran bishop challenged Pope John Paul II to view Scandinavia's dominant church as an equal.

The frank exchange with Bishop Andreas Aarflot of Oslo came on John Paul's first day in Norway, which has only 28,000 Roman Catholics. The pope is to travel north today to the Arctic Circle.

The five-country visit is the first ever by a pope to Scandinavia, where the Protestant Reformation vanquished Catholicism four centuries ago.

Differences between the Vatican and the Protestants are expected to be heard as the pope travels across the area for 10 days.

Argentina's crisis grows

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — The food riots have subsided but Argentina's currency continues sliding in black-market trading, an indication the economic crisis that prompted looting in the major cities is worsening.

On Thursday, police arrested six leaders of the small leftist Workers Party on orders from a federal judge who accused the party of spurring riots in Argentina's four largest cities.

Fourteen people died, 80 were arrested and more than 2,000 arrested.

Looters, many of them women and children, have been sacking stores and eating food on the spot in the nationwide unrest despite a state of siege the government declared on Monday.

Stamp has Latin error

VATICAN CITY (AP) — A Vatican postage stamp issued to commemorate Pope John Paul II's trip to Scandinavia contains a mistake in Latin, the Italian news agency ANSA reported.

The Latin writing on the stamp was supposed to say "John Paul the Second Visits Norway, Iceland, Finland, Denmark and Sweden," but instead of the Latin word for Sweden — Svetiam — the stamp has "Svebiam," the agency reported Thursday.

Svebiam means Swabia, a region in southwest West Germany.

'Alien' tags abandoned

JERUSALEM (AP) — A Jewish settlement on the West Bank dropped plans today to force Palestinian laborers to wear tags reading "alien worker" after the U.S. State Department strongly criticized the idea as undemocratic.

Also today, Israeli media reports said the army may restrict the movement of West Bank settlers suspected of vigilante acts against Palestinians.

The reports came hours after troops stopped dozens of residents of the Jewish settlement Kiryat Arba from raiding the nearby Arab village of Halhoul to avenge stone-throwing attacks on Israeli cars.

On Thursday, Kiryat Arba settlers reportedly entered Halhoul, shooting at homes and smashing windows of cars and houses.

In another development, peace crusader Abie Nathan was charged with supporting terrorist organizations because he met in September with PLO chief Yasser Arafat in Tunisia and France.

Nigerian streets guarded

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — Police patrolled the streets and guarded state buildings Thursday, a day after six people reportedly were killed and 1,500 were arrested following clashes with troops.

The government said the capital was calm Thursday, but the evidence of the rioting remained — burned-out buildings and vehicles, and debris strewn throughout the streets of the port city.

Wednesday's clashes were the most violent since students began rioting a week ago to protest a government austerity plan and school policies.

The independent Punch newspaper reported six people, including two soldiers, were killed in Wednesday's rioting. The state-owned News Agency of Nigeria said five were killed. Police said 1,500 people were arrested.

Colombians arrested

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — The national police said Thursday that three high-ranking officers were arrested and 10 officers were fired on charges of working for Colombia's powerful drug trafficking cartels.

The force's commander, Gen. Miguel Gomez Padilla, said in a communique his office "will be inflexible in applying whatever corrective measures are needed to maintain discipline, order and to guarantee good service to society."

The Bogota newspaper El Tiempo said on Thursday that five officers have been arrested and 23 expelled from the force in recent months on corruption charges.

Sakharov faces heckling for insulting army

MOSCOW (AP) — Andrei D. Sakharov, accused today of insulting the Soviet army and heckled by his colleagues in the new Congress, said he was proud of the exile he endured for opposing the Afghan war and wears it "like a medal."

His comments before the Congress of People's Deputies came in response to Deputy Sergei Chervonopisky of the Komsomol Communist youth organization, who accused the 1975 Nobel Peace Prize winner of "unprecedented badgering" of the army, which completed its pullout from Afghanistan in February.

AP Laserphoto

Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev rubs his eyes after a long parliamentary meeting.

Chervonopisky demanded an explanation of an interview Sakharov gave in Canada in which he was quoted as saying that Soviet pilots killed soldiers they could not save from being captured by Afghan guerrillas.

The hall gave the Komsomol leader a standing ovation when he finished, then heckled Sakharov.

Sakharov, who endured his punishment in the closed city of Gorky for opposing the Soviet military intervention that began in December 1979, took the podium in his defense, but he was obviously shaken by the attack and stammered as he spoke. Deputies took advantage of pauses when he stumbled over words to mock him and try to cut him short.

The 68-year-old physicist said the Afghan war was a "criminal adventure" that cost 1 million Afghan lives.

"We have to cleanse ourselves of this terrible shame," he said. "I spoke out against sending Soviet soldiers to Afghanistan, and for this I was exiled to Gorky. I am proud of this exile in Gorky, I wear it like a medal."

Sakharov denied he intended to insult the army. But he added that charges soldiers killed their comrades in Afghanistan were under investigation and that no one could call his statements an insult until the truth is determined.

But after he finished speaking several deputies hurried to the microphone to denounce the dean of the Soviet human rights movement before the session recessed for lunch.

Marshal Sergei F. Akhromeyev, former Soviet military chief of staff, said charges that Soviet soldiers were instructed to kill their comrades to prevent capture were "a blatant lie."

Members of the ruling Communist Party Politburo in the Kremlin Palace of Congresses stood along with others and applauded when Tursun Kazakova of Tashkent declared that Sakharov should be ashamed of himself. "You have insulted our entire army, our entire nation, all of our boys who gave their lives," she shouted at him.

Besieged by reporters after the session, Sakharov said, "I am sorry I didn't tell the whole truth about the Soviet crimes in Afghanistan, the napalm, the bombing."

Asked about the reaction to his remarks, he added: "It was a performance ... I think it was a contrived reaction."

"I can bear it," he added.

The new Congress, which has been conducting nationally broadcast debates since May 25, remains in session with no indication when it will adjourn. It is the first competitively elected Congress in 70 years of communist rule.

Also today, the Communist Party's powerful Central Committee was ordered to convene after more than a week of parliamentary sessions in which the party's seven decades of supremacy came under repeated attack.

"We'll evaluate how the work of the Congress is going," said Politburo member Alexander N. Yakovlev, who confirmed to reporters the Central Committee would meet later today.

The call for a meeting of the policy-making Central Committee came as members of the party's ruling Politburo rejected suggestions that the party surrender power or give up its constitutional monopoly.

Chinese students burn newspapers

BEIJING (AP) — Hundreds of students today burned copies of an official newspaper to vent their anger over the increased government condemnation of the democratic reform movement in Communist China.

Earlier in the day, about 1,000 helmeted soldiers jogged near Tiananmen Square in the latest government ploy to intimidate the students, who have been staging anti-government protests since mid-April.

In Nanjing, about 400 students from universities there began walking toward toward Beijing, 1,000 miles to the north, to add their support to the pro-democracy movement.

An American student in Nanjing said the Chinese were inspired by the U.S. civil rights movement and its marches on Selma, Ala., and Washington.

The demonstration by about 500 students outside the office of the Beijing Daily came as activists entered the fourth week of their defiant occupation of Tiananmen Square.

"Rip it up and burn it!" shouted students crammed into a narrow lane outside the paper's gate as they threw dozens of copies of the daily into a bonfire.

The students were particularly incensed by an article in Thursday's edition claiming dissension among different factions directing the movement.

The Beijing Daily, which is controlled by the city Communist Party, is known for its hardline views.

In Tiananmen Square, about 10,000 students were massed today in defiance of martial law orders to move. Up to 200,000 students have occupied the square, the symbolic heart of China, since they launched their protests six weeks ago.

The People's Liberation Army troops ran out of a nearby train station and through the surrounding neighborhood today before they returned to their camp, about a mile from the square.

It was the third straight day that troops have appeared on city streets, reinforcing government pronouncements that the army is poised to carry out Premier Li Peng's order of martial law for Beijing.

Chinese sources said factories and work places were also ordering workers to participate in a pro-government march today through central Beijing. Several sources said workers were being paid $2.70, and were given bread and eggs to join the rally.

The propaganda blitz against the students even reached the storefront of the American fastfood restaurant Kentucky Fried Chicken near Tiananmen. A large banner outside the restaurant read, "Maintain stability and unity. Protect order in the capital."
