Lawmakers cut vacation short for session

AUSTIN (AP) — Lawmakers had six days notice to return the capitol and will have just $15 million to spend during the special session called to consider brucellosis control and extending the life of the Texas Employment Commission.

Some lawmakers were on summer vacation whtn Gov. Mark White called the special session and had to cut short their holiday to get back to Austin by today.

The session is expected to last a week to 10 days.

Sen. Tati Santiesteban, chairman of the Senate Natural Resources Committee, scheduled a committee hearing today on brucellosis — a cattle disease — and predicted a bill would be ready for a Senate vote by Thursday.

"I said last Friday, when the governor called the special session, that we would hear the bill 'virtually immediately' after the session begins," said Santiesteban, D-El Paso. "We are still on that timetable. If we act quickly, the threat of a quarantine can be lifted by the end of the week."

After the Legislature failed to pass a brucellosis bill, the U.S. Department of Agriculture threatened a quarantine of Texas cattle, but decided last week to give Texas at least 30 days to resolve the differences between state and federal regulations.

Brucellosis, commonly known as Bangs disease, is a highly contagious disease that centers in the reproductive organs of cattle and causes abortions, weakened calves, sterility and partial loss of milk production. It also causes undulant fever in humans.

A bill by Sen. Bob Glasgow, D-Stephenville, would give the Texas Animal Health Commission authority to adopt rules to comply with the federal program for testing and vaccinating livestock.

The bill passed the House on April 26 and was tentatively approved in the Senate, but Glasgow fell one vote short of suspending the rules for final passage three days before the session ended.

Also left over from the 140-day session that ended May 30 was a bill that would continue the TEC, a state agency which helps unemployed people find work and gives benefits to those who cannot get jobs.

A bill to extend the TEC to 1995 under Texas' Sunset law died in the House after the Senate added an amendment that would have set up a TEC department to handle job discrimination complaints.

House TEC sponsor Lloyd Criss, D-LaMarque, blamed Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, for failure to pass the bill because Doggett had pushed the amendment.

"It's a shame the state can't make Doggett reimburse it for the $300,000 a special session will cost," Criss said.

Sen. Roy Blake, D-Nacogdoches, said Tuesday that he and Sen. John Sharp, D-Victoria, had filed a bill that omits the proposed Human Rights Commission within the TEC.

"We have received a letter from the U.S. Department of Labor stating clearly that federal funds now provided for TEC cannot be used for funding a Human Rights Commission," Blake said in a statement. "State funds would have to be committed; therefore, the Human Rights Commission, I believe, should be kept as a separate issue in its own right."

White has said he would add a third item to the legislative agenda, a $16 million appropriation for Texas Southern University at Houston. The Senate Finance Committee scheduled a hearing today, and the House Appropriations Committee posted a Saturday hearing.

State Comptroller Bob Bullock told White on Wednesday that the special session would have approximately $15.5 million to spend.

Bullock already has said the state can cover the cost of the $30.9 billion two-year state budget approved by the recent Legislature. It goes into effect Sept. 1.

Explosion kills seven miners

McCLURE, Va. (AP) — A mine explosion in southwestern Virginia killed seven coal miners, including a woman, and injured three others, officials of the Clinchfield Coal Co. said today.

Eighty-four mine workers were underground at 10:15 p.m. Tuesday when the blast occurred at the company's McClure No. 1 mine in Dickenson County, company spokeswoman Susan Copeland said.

"Of the 84, 74 came to the surface uninjured," she said.

Ten employees were working in the accident area at the time of the explosion, she said. Three, suffering burns, were taken to hospitals and seven were killed.

Ms. Copeland said she had no information on how the blast occurred.

"Everyone apparently has been removed from the mine," Ms. Copeland said. The mine is located in the heart of Virginia's coal country about 20 miles east of the Kentucky border.

Neither the company nor police had released names of the dead or injured, but the company said one of the dead was a woman.

However, one of the dead was identified by a family member as F.C. Riner of Dante.

Also, family members of another victim, Luther McCoy, confirmed he had been killed in the explosion. They declined to talk with reporters.

There was no immediate word from the company on the conditions of the three injured people.

The injured had been brought to the surface by 10:50 p.m. and all seven bodies of the victims were brought to the surface by 5:15 a.m., said John McGrath, public affairs specialist for the Mine Safety and Health Administration in Washington.

Federal mine safety officials from the MSHA district office in Norton, Va., arrived at the scene shortly after the agency was notified of the explosion at 11 p.m., McGrath said.

A team of specialists and engineers from the agency will arrive on Friday to investigate the accident, he said.

In Budapest, Hungary today, the official MTI news agency announced that a mine explosion had claimed 35 lives in Hungary's Oroszlany collieries.

Four SIPCO employees hospitalized Tuesday

Four men were hospitalized Tuesday after breathing chlorine gas leaking from a cylinder at Swift Independent Packing, Highway 60.

All the men, three of whom are from Hereford, were taken to Deaf Smith General Hospital late in the afternoon. Two were released last night and the other pair left the hospital this morning.

Pablo Morales and Duane Verschelde, both of Hereford, were released this morning. Odessa's Jerry Rister and Robert Blair, Hereford, were treated and let go Tuesday evening.

According to Tim Homer, assistant chief of the Hereford Volunteer Fire Department, the leak was reported at 4:35 p.m. One of four chlorine gas cylinders, located on the south side of the Swift building, had ruptured without exploding.

Morales, Verschelde and Rister were close enough to the leak to breath the poisonous gas, Homer said. Blair reportedly required treatment after helping firemen remove the cylinder to where it was emptied.

Homer desribed the cylinder as small, similar to those used for welding torches. He guessed it held about 150 pounds of pressure.

Aprroximately 10-12 firemen responded to the call, Homer said.

Challenger completes chase and capture

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — American astronauts dropped a West German satellite into free-floating orbit today and began chase-and-capture maneuvers to prove the shuttle's usefulness in repairing or retrieving crippled spacecraft.

In a day-long celestial ballet, mission specialists John Fabian and Sally K. Ride were using the 50-foot-long arm to lift the Shuttle Pallet Satellite (SPAS) into space, recapture it, and restow it for Friday's return to Florida.

Fabian, working from control panels on the shuttle flight deck, sent the robot arm to pick up the scientific satellite and release it into space.

"That SPAS is a nice flying little vehicle," said shuttle commander Robert Crippen as the craft moved away from Challenger 180 miles above Earth.

Crippen and Rick Hauck were flying rendezvous with the SPAS from 1,000 feet away. Cameras aboard the satellite provided Mission Control with first-ever views of a shuttle as it maneuvered in space against a brilliant backdrop of a blue, sunlit Earth.

"Beautiful living color," the control center told the crew. A spokesman said, "There were lots of oohs and ahs" in Mission Control.

Challenger cameras relayed pictures of the satellite, stable in space, its running lights shining brightly. "It's spectacular," Hauck reported. "We've got five very happy people up here."

The tests are a major milestone in the use of the shuttle as a working vehicle. The ability to pluck an object from orbit will be crucial when shuttles are sent aloft for satellite repair missions.

The first such mission is set for April 1984, on the shuttle's 13th mission, when Crippen will head a team of astronauts to repair the Solar Maximum Satellite that failed after three fuses blew on its control system soon after launch in 1980. The plan is for Crippen's crew to bring the satellite into the cargo bay, replace the control system and return the satellite to space.

For today's test, NASA's seventh shuttle crew arose an hour early — about 10:30 p.m. EDT Tuesday — to test the 3,300 pound SPAS. "The team is refueled and rarin' to go," a controller told commander Crippen.

Crippen, who'll guide Challenger to its first Florida landing, peered down on rain-swept Cape Canaveral Tuesday and asked how the weather was shaping up for the 6:53 a.m. EDT Friday touchdown.

"We're still looking at it for Friday, hoping it will clear out," said Mission Control. "We're not real sure yet."

"OK, maybe we can stay til Saturday," said Crippen. "Or Sunday," added Ms. Ride. In the event of bad weather, the shuttle could orbit at least until Sunday, or it could be landed at Edwards Air Force Base in California.

SPAS carries six scientific experiments for the West German government, two for the European Space Agency and three NASA cameras. The satellite's German manufacturer bartered with the American space agency

Two American reporters killed by artillery fire

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — Two American journalists were killed by artillery fire while driving on an isolated road along the Honduras-Nicaragua border, the State Department said today. Honduras blamed Nicaraguan soldiers for the attack.

Honduran Foreign Minister Edgardo Paz Barnica said the bodies of Dial Torgerson, Los Angeles Times bureau chief for Mexico and Central America, and free-lance photographer Richard Cross, on assignment for U.S. News & World Report, were being brought by car to the capital and would arrive today after an eight-hour drive.

Anita Stockman, a State Department spokeswoman in Washington, confirmed today that Torgerson and Cross were killed Tuesday evening.

Heavy rifle fire along the the Nicaraguan border prevented Honduran troops from recovering the bodies immediately, but they did so after nightfall, Paz Barnica said. He said the information from the border zone, 75 miles south of Tegucigalpa, came from a "definitive report from military intelligence."

Paz Barnica said Torgersen, Cross and their Honduran driver, who he identified as 27-year-old Jose Herrera, were killed around 5 p.m. EDT Tuesday by anti-tank gunfire from Nicaraguan troops across the border. However, The Los Angeles Times said it had been told by Honduran officials that the driver may have survived.

The Honduran government sent an immediate protest note to Nicaragua, Paz Barnica said in a telephone interview with The Associated Press.

He said an anti-tank shell shattered the rented automobile Cross and Torgerson were riding in on a stretch of dirt road a few yards from the Nicaraguan border.

The road is between the villages of Cifuentes and Las Trojas, which are about 75 miles east of Tegucigalpa but 218 miles by car because of the winding mountainous road to the isolated region.

Earlier, a Foreign Ministry communique said William McWhirter of Time magazine was also killed, but Paz Barnica said that initial report was a mistake. McWhirter had been in Honduras but flew to Miami on Monday night.

The communique said British journalists Susan Morgan of The Economist and Steve Kate of the British Broadcasting Corp., and a number of other foreign journalists "were in grave danger in the border area" but gave no details.

The ruling leftist Sandinistas in Nicaragua have been threatening war with Honduras since January, when Honduras-based rebels intensified cross border raids. They accuse the Honduran government and the Reagan administration of arming and training the rebels in an effort to overthrow the three-man Sandinista junta.

Paz Barnica handed a protest note to the Nicaraguan charge d'affaires, Carlos Sequeira. It referred to "the brutality and cold blood evidenced by the regular Nicaraguan army in this criminal attack that not only constitutes a flagrant violation of our territory and a new and grave violation of Honduran sovereignty but also an unqualifiable attempt against human life."

"The Honduran government ... holds the Government of Managua responsible for whatever incident that

Some citizens don't think about Hereford being a tourist town, but travel dollars are important to the county and travel is listed as the third largest industry in the United States.

The recent issue of "This Is West Texas," the W.T. Chamber of Commerce magazine, reveals how important travel and tourism is to the area.

The article breaks down the total travel expenditure by counties and shows that last year Deaf Smith County generated $14.8 million in travel money, generated a payroll of $2.5 million, funded 261 jobs, brought in $161,000 in state tax receipts and $103,000 in local tax receipts.

While Deaf Smith is not considered a tourist's mecca, the Cowgirl Hall of Fame and our county museum draw a lot of visitors. And, the traffic on US-60 and US-384 carries a lot of tourists through Hereford. Oklahoma provides the most out-of-state visitors, followed by California, Louisiana, Illinois, Florida, Missouri, Michigan and Arkansas.

The leading tourist cities are Dallas, Fort Worth, San Antonio, Houston and El Paso. The Fort Worth-Dallas Metroplex is the big drawing card with Six Flags, Texas Stadium, the Cotton Bowl and State Fair, plus other attractions.

The average visitor to Texas last year spent $26.41 a day, while Texans visiting within the state spent $28.45 a day. An excellent highway system is termed a "plus" for Texas.

The impact of the travel industry snowballs in two ways. First, money spent for employees who work in travel-oriented businesses is re-spent into the locality. Second, revenues collected from the hotel-motel tax can be used to benefit the local community.

Early Saturday morning will mark the start of the annual area application of insecticides, Hereford City Manager Dudley Bayne announced this morning.

Pope celebrates record mass; to meet Walesa

KRAKOW, Poland (AP) — Pope John Paul II celebrated Mass today for more than 2 million people — the biggest crowd yet on his Polish pilgrimage — and tens of thousands of chanting Solidarity supporters left the service on a noisy march through downtown Krakow.

Lech Walesa, leader of the outlawed independent union, left his home in the northern seaport of Gdansk and headed for Krakow and his long-awaited meeting with the pontiff. Walesa, accompanied by his wife Danuta and four sons, was expected to have his audience with the pope on Thursday, the last day of John Paul's tour, somewhere in southern Poland near Krakow.

Poland's Communist rulers reluctantly agreed to sanction a "strictly private" papal audience with Walesa, whom they call a "former leader of a former trade union."

At the end of the papal Mass demonstrators formed up under scores of Solidarity banners, chanted Walesa's name and "Long live the pope!" and raised their hands in Solidarity's V-for-victory salute.

Police, far outnumbered by the crowd leaving the Krakow Mass, made no move to halt the river of demonstrators pouring out of Blonie parade ground.

The crowd appeared as big as the one in Warsaw last Thursday, the first night of the papal visit, when about 50,000 people marched past Communist Party headquarters in the largest demonstration since martial law was imposed Dec. 13, 1981, in a bid to crush Solidarity.

The Krakow marchers jeered and whistled at a police helicopter that hovered overhead. A voice on the police loudspeaker said in a polite voice, "Please disperse and go home. Don't mar the papal visit."

The protesters carried banners reading, "We keep our vigil within Solidarity," "They can't kill the spirit" and "Your words are our hope."

Last body of drowned children found Tuesday

FREEPORT, Texas — All four bodies of the children who drowned while playing at the mouth of a river in Southeast Texas have been found by investigators.

The body of Darrin Duhart, 13, of Houston, was found Tuesday morning. It washed up on Sargent Beach in Matagorda County, about seven miles from where the children had been swimming Sunday near where the San Bernard River opens up into the Gulf of Mexico.

Brazoria County sheriff's officers Monday found the bodies of Darrin's brother, Anthony Duhart, 12; and cousins Patrick Lynn Oliver, 9, of Simonton, and Carrie S. Henry, 9 of Houston.

A fifth child, Charlotte Lavine Henry, 14, Carrie's sister, was rescued Sunday and was listed in fair condition in the intensive care unit of Houston's Ben Taub Hospital.

The children had been on a father's day picnic with some other family members, including two adults.

'Hooker hangout' broken with arrests

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — A "hooker hangout" has been broken up at an El Paso truckstop with the arrests of eight people, including two suspected prostitutes and an alleged pimp, police say.

The undercover operation netted the arrests of eight suspects at Petro's Truckstop off Interstate 10 just east of this city of 480,000, El Paso Det. Freddie Bonilla said Tuesday.

Arrested on prostitution charges were Rachel Copeland, 28, of Menton, Calif., and Theresa Bryant, 19, of Tampa, Fla. Ronald Carr, 23, also of Menton, was arrested on charges of promotion of prostitution in connection with Ms. Copeland, Bonilla said. Each is being held in lieu of $1,500 bond.

Alfred Reeves, 55, of Dunn, N.C., also was arrested and charged with soliciting sex from a female undercover officer who had set up a mobile home at the truckstop. Truckstop owners recently had complained about an increase in sex and drug trafficking at the truckstop, police said.

"(Truckstop officials) told us there were hookers all over the place," Sgt. Gary Gabbert said.

Four others were arrested on possession of drug and disorderly conduct charges, police said.

Gabbert said trucking firms also had called to complain their drivers weren't getting enough sleep and were being harrassed at the truckstop because of the traveling network of prostitutes and pimps.

Officers led by man accused of extortion

HOUSTON (AP) — A leader of a new organization of Harris County reserve officers is awaiting trial on extortion charges, officials say.

Gayland W. Hooper, a reserve constable lieutenant, helped found the Harris County Peace Officers' Association last week, after District Attorney John B. Holmes announced plans to enforce a law prohibiting volunteer reserve officers from working security jobs. The group aims to maintain the officers' right to work extra jobs.

Hooper, 35, is accused of threatening to kill the wife and 6-year-old daughter of a Houston marketing executive. He was suspended from duty and freed on $10,000 bond in March after being charged in March wis ago with extortion.

Hooper allegedly phoned Smith anonymously and threatened to stalk and kill his wife and daughter if he did not deliver the money.

A group of about 75 reserve officers gave a standing ovation to group cofounder Paul T. Hamilton after he gave an emotional speech Monday night vowing to protect the right of the officers to hold security jobs "all the way to the Texas Supreme Court" if necessary.

But some of the same officers — whose ranks have been plagued by a number of controversies in recent months — expressed disappointment when they learned that Hooper was the new organization's other cofounder.

"It's really unfortunate," Constable Major Sam Gentry said. "Here we are trying to clean our act up and they do something like this."

Two killed, three injured in head-on crash

COMSTOCK, Texas (AP) — Two people were killed and three injured when a car drifted into the wrong lane and hit another vehicle head-on just outside this Southwest Texas town, authorities say.

The vehicles collided about 7:40 a.m. Tuesday on U.S. Highway 90, according to Sgt. D. Smith of the Texas Department of Public Safety.

Dead at the scene were Dawn Glitsch, 39, and her 13-year-old son Darren, both of Norman, Okla.

The three injured people were taken to Val Verde County Memorial Hospital in nearby Del Rio.

William Glenn Glitsch, 50, was listed in satisfactory condition with multiple abrasions, and Jamie Glitsch was in fair condition with only minor injuries.

The driver of the second car, 32-year-old Mildred Dunn Smith of Comstock, was in satisfactory condition with multiple abrasions.

Task force calls for reforms

WASHINGTON (AP) — A task force of governors, educators and business executives, warning that "a real emergency is upon us," today called for sweeping reforms in public education "to raise both the floor and ceiling of achievement in America."

The Task Force on Education for Economic Growth echoed a Reagan administration panel's call for tougher standards, more homework and longer school days and years, and it strongly endorsed merit pay for teachers.

Three governors — James B. Hunt Jr. of North Carolina, Pierre S. du Pont IV of Delaware and Charles S. Robb of Virginia — were holding a news conference today with IBM Chairman Frank T. Cary and Frank Press, president of the National Academy of Science, to release the report, "Action For Excellence."

The 41-member task force adopted the recommendations unanimously at a meeting in Research Triangle Park, N.C., on May 4. The group was formed late last year by Hunt under the auspices of the Education Commission of the States in Denver.

In an eight-point action plan the task force urged:

— "Drastic" improvements in state and local methods of recruiting, training and paying teachers.

— Making schools "more intense and more productive," with no-frills curriculum and exacting standards.

— Setting up systems to provide "quality assurance in education," including ways to measure teachers' effectiveness and reward excellence.

— Making better use of existing school dollars.

— Developing in each state plans to improve public schools from kindergarten through grade 12.

— Establishing partnerships between businesses and schools.

— Improved leadership and management in the schools with principals setting the academic pace, not absorbed by grounds and building care and paperwork.

— Stepping up efforts to serve students at the top of the academic ladder as well as those at the bottom.

"Technological change and global competition make it imperative to equip students in public schools with skills that go beyond the 'basics,'" the task force said. "The challenge is not simply to better educate our elite, but to raise both the floor and ceiling of achievement in America."

This report, like others issued recently, said the nation is giving too few rewards — monetary and otherwise — to its schoolteachers.

The task force noted that Montgomery County, Md., an affluent Washington suburb, pays clerks in the county-run liquor stores $12,479 after two years, but teachers with college degrees and the same amount of experience only $12,323.

Soldier helps others with torments

TEMPLE, Texas (AP) — A World War II soldier left for dead in the snows of France is using his talent and time — much of his time — to help combat veterans from three wars cope with whatever torments them.

Dr. Merrill Lipton was 19 and fresh from the sidewalks of New York when a 155mm artillery shell burst in the air in Alsace-Lorraine and blew holes in his body and head just after New Year's 1945.

A comrade thinking he was a goner threw a blanket over his body. Later, he was told, he tried to rise with blood gushing out of his eyes, ears, nose and head and fell back into the snow. He was covered up again. He remembered nothing for five days, but during that time he was hauled out on a stretcher on the deck of a light tank.

Today, he is an associate professor of psychiatry at Texas A&M University's College of Medicine and a staff psychiatrist at the Olin E. Teague Veterans Center.

His special interest is post-combat stress or, in medical terms, post-traumatic stress disorder.

Harold Smedley, a counselor who helps veterans collect benefits, says Lipton is so dedicated and effective that he will recommend him for a national award from the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

"I've looked for someone like him for years," said Smedley, an employee of the Texas Veterans Affairs Commission.

Even though most public attention has focused on the mental problems of Vietnam veterans, Lipton and Dr. William Schaffer, a 20-year Air Force veteran from Fairfield, Conn., have extended psychiatric group sessions to World War II and Korean War veterans.

One 1½-hour session each week is for the older veterans, one for the younger. The median age for the older veterans is 61½. They come from as far away as Brownwood and Marble Falls, and their job backgrounds range from pipefitter and store owner to clergyman.

Until recently, Lipton said in a recent interview, wartime stress was called the "Vietnam syndrome." Older veterans were merely described as having combat fatigue. Lipton said that even his psychiatric training in the 1950s taught him that combat disorders were considered the result of cowardice "or a previously existing weakness or mental defect."

"The traditional attitudes were that if you had a 'nerve problem,' you were crazy," said Lipton. "And in my generation, nobody admitted to fear. Only in the last few years have people felt it chic to say, 'Boy, you really get scared.' It's the John Wayne syndrome.

"Man does what needs doing, and he doesn't have fear."

"And a man that does show fear," said Schaffer — "is not much of a man," interrupted Lipton.

"My generation didn't seek psychiatric help," said Lipton, "and when they did it was in terms of 'I'm nervous. I can't sleep. I've got anxiety. I'm depressed,' but it didn't qualify itself as a distinct diagnosis with specific features.

"If a man was 'normal,' he wouldn't have combat fatigue — if he was a 'man.'"

Times have changed.

"A common saying we hear in the group is that a man who says he wasn't afraid is a liar," said Schaffer.

Lipton and Schaffer started their first discussion group in November 1981. The veterans, some of whom were POWs who had existed under "horrendous" conditions, were people whose lives had fallen apart. They could not function.

"Most of the people we see are people who have had successful lives in terms of raising a family, having businesses or professions, whatever," said Lipton. "However, at some point, their symptoms start to increase."

Smedley recalls men in his office who are so depressed that "they stutter or cry. ... They are unable to think. They can't keep a train of thought. They have problems with simple things."

Schaffer, a social worker with a doctorate in education, said, "We always meet in the afternoon. The basic question is, 'Today did anyone bring a problem with them?' That's how it starts."

There have been quick dropouts, including one Dallas-area man who left after 15 minutes, but most stay with the program until they are better, Lipton said.

"We encourage people to leave the past behind, because the past that comes back is usually dead," Lipton said. "The more time you spend thinking about it during the day, the more chance you're going to have nightmares that night about it."

Asked how they measured progress among the group members, Schaffer said, "Seeing people go back to work, seeing fewer visits to the heart specialist, seeing weight changes, complexion changes, attitudinal changes."

Englishman stirs whirlwind with theory of learning

WASHINGTON (AP) — Do children have an easier time than their parents did learning to ride a bicycle, master a foreign language, drive a car, play a piano or score on a video game?

Rupert Sheldrake, a lanky English biologist with curly hair and quiet manner, thinks so. And he thinks he knows why.

His "morphic resonance" theory about how all living creatures assume their forms, develop and learn is stirring a whirlwind of controversy in the scientific world.

Sheldrake presented his startling new theory at the Capitol recently before a luncheon audience of congressmen who meet occasionally to consider what the future holds. After hearing Sheldrake's provocative explanation, Rep. Albert Gore Jr., D-Tenn., observed:

"An awful lot of people think he's crazy. But a lot of other people think that if his ideas are even partly correct, the implications are just as profound as the discoveries of Einstein, Darwin and Copernicus."

The Tarrytown Conference Center, a think tank in Tarrytown, N.Y., is offering a $10,000 prize for the best experiment to prove or disprove Sheldrake's theory, and a Dutch foundation has put up $5,000 as a second prize. The contest ends New Year's Eve 1985.

Lila Gatlin, a theoretical biologist at Stanford University, plans a series of learning experiments with human volunteers this fall to test Sheldrake's hypothesis.

Simply put, Sheldrake suggests that embryos, from humans down to the simplest animals and plants, are able to develop into fully formed organisms because they somehow "tune in" to a field created by past members of the same species.

These "morphogenetic fields," he says, exert a crucial influence on the biochemical activity of DNA, the genetic building blocks of life found in the nucleus of every cell.

These fields also serve as "a kind of collective memory of the species," Sheldrake says. When a certain behavior is repeated often enough, the "morphogenetic field" that it creates sets off a "morphic resonance" — instantaneously through time and space — among other members of the same species.

He likens this field to a television signal, and each cell's DNA to the transistors and circuitry inside a TV set.

"DNA is very important in heredity in giving the right components, and these can affect the tuning. But it does not convey or carry most of the hereditary information. Most of that is coming through the morphogenetic field," Sheldrake told the congressmen.

In other words, thanks to this "morphogenetic field," it might be getting easier nowadays to dance or program a computer because people already have figured it out — and done it many times before.

The phenomenon was observed as early as the 1920s, when researchers discovered that after slow-learning rats were trained to run through a water maze at a Harvard University laboratory, test rats mastered the same task much faster during separate, later experiments in Scotland and Australia.

The same theory, Sheldrake says, might explain why small children learn foreign languages so quickly, without textbooks, or why fingernails know to grow back the way they do. In both instances, he suggests, they are assisted by a kind of pool of memory or previous learning transmitted by "morphic resonance."

Sheldrake says his theory is so revolutionary that it can be tested simply and cheaply by anybody, outside the strictures of orthodox scientific research.

In sample test of his own, Sheldrake commissioned a Japanese poet to give him a real Japanese nursery rhyme, a poem he had written and a nonsensical rhyme, and all three were published in a Los Angeles bulletin. Sheldrake says preliminary results indicated that readers found the traditional verse — known to generations of Japanese — was easiest to memorize and the gibberish was hardest.

When Sheldrake, a well-regarded, Cambridge-educated plant physiologist, first set forth his theory in a book published two years ago in England, the respected scientific journal Nature denounced it as "the best candidate for burning there has been for many years."

But some scientists, and many laymen, were more positive. Nobel Prize-winning physicist Brian Josephson, for instance, said he believes "a new kind of understanding of nature is now emerging."

Sheldrake received a mixed reception earlier this month on Capitol Hill.

Rep. Bob Edgar, D-Pa., chairman of the Congressional Clearinghouse on the Future which sponsored the luncheon, said he was "quite skeptical," although open to new ways of thinking about the nature of life.

Man, patient found dead after apparent suicide

IRVING, Texas (AP) — An elderly hospital patient and her husband were found dead this morning after the man apparently shot his wife and turned the gun on himself, authorities say.

Nurses heard shots from the 72-year-old woman's fourth floor room about 7 a.m. and discovered the bodies, said Irving Community Hospital administrator Bill Fowler.

Fowler identified the couple as Charles and Vivian Pilgrim.

"We believe the elderly white woman was shot by her husband, who then turned the gun on himself," said Police Sgt. J.W. Wicker.

Wicker said Mrs. Pilgrim had terminal cancer, and that police believe her husband shot her and then himself out of frustration.

"She was 72 and he was 73. From my personal experience that would probably be what this was, that he was depressed over her condition," Wicker said.

He said police found Mrs. Pilgrim lying in her hospital bed. Her husband's body was on the floor, Wicker said. A .32-caliber automatic pistol was found in the room, Wicker said.

The nurses did not know that the husband had gone to the room, Fowler said.

"The nursing staff said he was not there a few minutes before," Fowler said. "The best we can summarize is he came in and went directly to her room."

Officials from the Dallas County medical examiner's office were investigating the case, Wicker said.

Mrs. Pilgrim's physician, Dr. Myrna Smith of Irving, could not be reached for comment this morning.

Burglary under investigation

An estimated $4,732 worth of personal belongings were taken sometime during the week prior to June 19 from the 815 Baltimore residence of Kenneth Helms, Hereford police reported.

Among items stolen while Helms was on vacation were a television set, stereo, guns and some jewelry. Police said the crime, reported to them Sunday evening, is still under investigation.

Police disclosed three other thefts, none of which were assigned a specific value. All three are still under investigation, police said.

A combination radio and 8-track stereo were taken sometime Sunday from the home of Tanya Sandoval, 319 W. 2nd.

Herbert C. Edwards of 408 Star St. told police a money bag with an unknown amount of cash was stolen from his residence either Sunday or Monday.

A definite time is also not known for a bicycle theft which occurred on Sunday. Police said the victim is Cindy Saiz and her 10-speed was lifted from her 208 Jowell home.

According to Lieutenant Vernon Hope, the past weekend in Hereford featured 32 traffic citations, eight DWIs, seven public intoxications and two minor motor vehicle accidents.

may occur as a consequence of the constant harrassment by the Sandinista army against the territory and population of Honduras," the note warned.

Torgerson was born April 19, 1928, in Southport, N.C., and graduated from the University of Southern California in 1951. He joined the Los Angeles Times in 1967 as a reporter and worked in Nairobi, Kenya, from 1974 to 1976, when he was transferred to Jerusalem. He was named bureau chief for Mexico and Central America in March 1981.

He also worked from 1946-52 as a reporter for the San Fernando Valley Times in the Los Angeles area, and in the Los Angeles bureau of The Associated Press from 1955-1966.

William F. Thomas, editor of the Los Angeles Times, said Torgerson "worked for the Times for 16 years and never turned in less than a first rate performance. He was an experienced professional and a good personal friend, and he'll be sorely missed by us and by all who knew him."

Cross, 31, was born in Kansas City, and worked through the photo agency Black Star for a number of publications, including Newsweek.

He was a free-lancer for The Associated Press during the 1978-79 revolution during which the Sandinistas overthrew strongman-President Anastasio Somoza, and made many friends then among the Sandinistas.

He lived in Mexico City and was due to marry his fiance, a Salvadoran, in August. He was one of a few journalists who traveled with a Sandinista delegation to Havana in 1979 for a meeting with President Fidel Castro.

Les Tanzer, U.S. News & World Report's managing editor, said Cross went to Honduras last weekend to take pictures of Honduras-based Nicaraguan rebels. He said Cross also planned to go to Puerta Castilla, on the Caribbean coast, where about 120 U.S. Special Forces "Green Berets" are establishing a base to train Salvadoran soldiers.

and got a bargain; by allowing NASA to use the satellite for deployment and retrieval practice, the United States is picking up $9 million of the $13 million development, production and launch costs. The SPAS is designed to be used on five flights.

A computer on the satellite overheated Tuesday after the SPAS had been operating seven experiments more than 24 hours in sunlight. Crippen turned the shuttle belly-up — placing the cargo in the cold shadows, but that overchilled one of the instruments. He then was directed to point Challenger toward Earth — a position in which it alternates between daylight and darkness.

The position changes worked, but barely. The decision on whether to let the satellite operate independently in space was "a very close one," said a NASA spokesman. He said temperatures aboard the craft hit 101 degrees, just one degree below "red line."

rose in the crowd as John Paul concluded the homily of his Mass with the words, "Jesus Christ, shepherd of people ... I beg you for victory."

Thousands responded with cheers, chants and victory signs, and up went the banners.

The pontiff, saying Mass in the city whose archdiocese he headed for 15 years, beatified two Poles who fought in a 19th-century uprising against Russian rule, the Carmelite father Rafal Kalinowski and Franciscan brother Albert Chmielowski.

"Both were inspired by heroic love of the homeland," said the pope. For both, the 1863 rebellion "was a stage on the path to holiness."

John Paul, in white vestments trimmed with gold, spoke slowly and with emotion to the vast throng, which poured into this city throughout the night. Trekking to Blonie parade ground, an open meadow in the center of this ancient seat of Polish kings, the faithful sang patriotic hymns and chanted, "long live the pope."

In Krakow, the pontiff's arrival shared the front page of the local Communist Party with an article on the 71st anniversary of Lenin's visit to the city in 1912.

In an extraordinary comment from the officially atheistic party, a newspaper editorial referred to the pontiff as "a great statesman and patriot."

CRIME COUNT

FBI Reports Decline

For the first time since 1977, the FBI has good news to report on the nation's crime rate. Reversing the years-long upward trend, serious crimes in 1982 dropped by 4 percent from the previous year's figure. The nationwide decline was apparent in both cities and less-populated areas — and in all crime categories except aggravated assault. The FBI figures are based on reports from more than 15,000 local law enforcement authorities.

For his many books

Collector looking for new homes

LUFKIN, Texas (AP) — Barney Bradshaw buys, sells and sometimes breathes books.

Old books are stacked in the garage and an extra bedroom, or carefully shelved in the den and living room of the 74-year-old Lufkin house he shares with his wife of 46 years.

But there is one book in particular that the soft-spoken rare-book dealer would like to sell: a Genevan, or "Breeches," Bible that was printed in London more than 375 years ago.

Bradshaw, who has been collecting books for 30 years, immediately imparts this trick of the trade and a tip for novices. If a dealer tells you a book is bound in leather, smell it. Demonstrating with his nose literally in the book, Bradshaw said leather will carry a stronger, muskier scent than imitation bindings. Some might call it the "breathe before you buy" method of selecting books.

The "Breeches" Bible, published in 1608, will go for $400. It got its name from a passage in Genesis in which Adam and Eve discover their nakedness. "They sewed fig leaves together and made themselves breeches" is the way the ancient book renders the passage.

Most subsequent versions of the Bible, including the King James, which replaced the Genevan Bible, say Adam and Eve made aprons from the fig leaves.

The Genevan Bible first was published in 1560, and lasted through 140 editions and more than 80 years, making it an extremely popular Bible for the period.

The centuries-old relic, which is several inches thick, is in good shape. It has been rebound in leather in the last century or so, Bradshaw estimates.

Bradshaw says he will sell any of the thousand or so books he owns, but his wife Evalyn disagrees. "He hates to part with them. He wants to find a new, kind, loving home for the books, particularly the Genevan Bible," she said.

She readily admits to a lack of enthusiasm for her husband's hobby, although she taught reading clinics in the Lufkin schools for 20 years.

But that doesn't dampen his enthusiasm. He happily jumps from one volume to another, explaining the history of the book or giving tidbits about the author.

Most of the books, he said, came from garage sales, although he also buys from book dealers through a magazine.

Bradshaw said he got started collecting books because he likes to read. "I never cared about selling books until I retired and I decided I had more than I could read," he said.

Among the peculiar books Bradshaw has is "The History and Description of Angelina County, Texas." He got that one from a California book dealer.

The book was written by R.W. Haltom, a former Lufkin Daily News editor, and published in 1888. It was reissued a few years ago, and the jacket says it was "one of the first county histories ever issued in Texas."

Although he has assembled his collection over the years in a piecemeal fashion, Bradshaw said he would like to buy and sell more leather-bound sets of the works of great authors.

Among the sets for sale are a 26-volume set of the works of Thomas Carlyle that he will let go for $90. Other sets include Voltaire's multi-volume dictionary and a 26-volume set of works by John Ruskin that goes for $90.

Bradshaw also deals in more recent books, including ones by James Michener, Gore Vidal, and a book by Isaac Asimov entitled "Asimov on Numbers."

Five persons indicted for harboring Kaul

FORT SMITH, Ark. (AP) — More than two weeks after militant tax protestor Gordon Kahl was killed in a shootout in rural Lawrence County, a federal grand jury has indicted five people for harboring the fugitive.

U.S. Attorney Asa Hutchinson and James T. Blasingame, special agent in charge of the FBI in Arkansas, announced the three-count indictment Tuesday. Lawrence County Sheriff Gene Matthews and Kahl shot each other to death June 3 in the rural Smithville home owned by Leonard Ginter, 61, and his wife Norma, 58.

The Ginters, who face capital murder charges for Matthews' death, were indicted Tuesday along with Arthur H. Russell, 74, of Mountain Home; Ed C. Udey, 70, and his wife, Irene, 61, both of Cotter. The five were charged with conspiracy to harbor and conceal Kahl, a member of a tax protest group called Posse Comitatus. Kahl, 63, was wanted for the shooting deaths of two U.S. marshals in North Dakota last February.

The Udeys and Russell were taken into custody shortly after the indictment was returned. Bond wasn't set Tuesday. Ginter already was in the Pocahontas City Jail and his wife was in the Jackson County Jail at Newport.

According to the indictment, Kahl stayed in Russell's home between the last week in February and May 30, and the five defendants "obtained and rendered to Kahl protection, sustenance and services."

The indictment's second count charges Udey and Russell with aiding and abetting each other in the harboring of Kahl in the Russell home. In the third count, the Ginters are charged with harboring and concealing Kahl in their vehicle while transporting him from Russell's home to the Ginters' residence on or about May 30.

Russell, the Ginters and Udey are subject to maximum penalties of 10 years in prison and-or a maximum fine of $10,000 under the indictment. Irene Udey could get five years in prison and-or a $5,000 fine.

Hutchinson said the investigation, conducted by the FBI and the U.S. marshal's service, is continuing.

"Because of the pending prosecutive action mentioned herein, neither agency will have further comments relating to this case," Blasingame said in a news release.

Graford mayor says town can't afford paid lawman

GRAFORD, Texas (AP) — With only 495 residents, Graford is not a big town. But city residents say it's big enough to need a marshal even though Mayor Audrey Altum says it simply cannot afford one.

School board member Harry Sain claims some residents, aware that no one is minding the store, are running wild, breaking windows and drag racing along the town's main street.

Crime in this community 60 miles west of Fort Worth, he said, is up.

"The bulk of the crime is from peole who live here," he said. "They're locals. They know they can get away with just about anything since there is no law enforcement."

Sain obtained in March about 100 signatures on a petition and gave it to the city council. It asks they hire a marshal.

"We have no law enforcement whatsoever," Sain said. "We have a big drug problem, but we have other crime, too, such as thievery, vandalism and speeding."

Mrs. Altum said the only way Graford is going to get a marshal is if someone volunteers for the job. The city's budget, she said, is already stretched trying to pay for a new water system.

"What we're looking at is a salary, a car, radar, the whole bit," she said. "We simply cannot afford that."

"What it boils down to," she said, "is that this city's law enforcement depends on if we get someone to volunteer."

Sain is also complaining that Palo Pinto County Sheriff John Turpin, who is supposed to be protecting Graford, is not doing the job since Graford does not have a full time deputy.

"We felt like the sheriff wasn't giving us any protection because the other towns in the county had a deputy and we didn't," Sain said. "The sheriff said he had been protecting us and we were just unaware of it, but we knew better than that."

Turpin said he doesn't undertstand Sain's complaint. Graford, he claims, is protected by his deputies just like any other town in the county.

"There is a deputy assigned to the area," he said. "The county is divided into six areas, and there is a deputy assigned to each one. I don't know why they think that they get less protection than anyone else."

Turpin concedes, however, that if something happens in Graford, "naturally it's going to take a while for a deputy" to arrive at the scene if there's not someone already there. And he said he advised Graford's city council to hire a marshal.

"The sheriff and the deputies have been in and out of here a lot more lately, so they really have been giving us more protection," she said, "But we'll have to rely on that until we can get a volunteer."

Hispanics plan registration drive

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The nation's Hispanic leaders plan an expensive campaign to register 1 million more Hispanic voters across the country for "crucial" political clout in the 1984 presidential election.

The leaders met here Tuesday and issued a "call to action" to Hispanics to register and then hold politicians accountable with their collective voting power.

"This is probably one of the most important things that ever happened in the Hispanic community," said Raul Yzaguirre of Washington D.C., president of the National Council of La Raza.

Currently, 3.4 million of the nation's registered voters are of Hispanic descent.

Another 1 million would increase voter registration among Hispanic citizens to 65 percent, up from the current 52 percent.

One Hispanic leader pointed out a problem that he said underscored the necessity of the registration drive — almost a third of the Hispanic community is ineligible to vote.

"About 30 percent of our population can't vote because they're resident aliens and not citizens," said Willie Velasquez, director of the Southwest Voter Registration Education Project.

The percentage of Hispanics currently registered drops to 37 percent if the resident aliens are taken into account, he said.

Much of the $2 million voter drive simply will be volunteers going door-to-door in 185 U.S. cities, according to Ruben Valdez, director of Colorado's Department of Labor.

"We have huge and lofty goals, but reachable goals," Valdez said. "We need the inclusion of many, many groups in this country."

He and others stressed the drive was non-partisan, but conceded that most Hispanics vote Democratic.

Hispanic leaders will kick off the drive with an August fundraiser in San Antonio, where they hope to supplement the $1.4 million already raised.

NBA governors adopt playoff changes

NEW YORK (AP) — The best-of-three mini-series that frightened good teams and gave upset hopes to mediocre ones is being scrapped by the National Basketball Association.

The NBA's Board of Governors voted Tuesday to expand the playoffs from 12 to 16 teams and make the opening-round series best-of-five instead of best-of-three.

Another effect of the vote is that the four division champions now will have to play in the first round rather than receive a bye.

Jerry Colangelo, general manager of the Phoenix Suns and chairman of a special committee appointed by NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien to recommend improvements in the league, announced the changes after the summer meeting of the Board of Governors.

Colangelo said there were two other major changes approved by the board.

One is that no NBA team will be allowed to make transactions that would leave it with no first-round draft choice for two consecutive years. Another change limits cash transactions to $300,000 between Dec. 15 and the end of the season each year.

Colangelo said the main reason for the change in the playoff format was economic.

"Potentially, there could be 28 more playoff games and an extra $4 million to $5 million in league revenues," he said.

Under the new collective bargaining agreement, players are guaranteed 53 percent of gross revenues.

Colangelo said the limit on trading top draft picks was approved in order to avoid situations like the Cleveland Cavaliers, who at one point had no first-round picks for five straight years.

In other action, the board approved the transfer of ownership of the Kansas City Kings to a group led by Gregg and Frank Luckenbill and Joe Benvenuto and the sale of 50 percent of the ownership of the Jazz to Gerald Bagley.

The board also gave permission for the Utah Jazz to play up to 11 games in the University of Nevada-Las Vegas arena next season.

Sam Battistone, part owner of the Jazz, said he did not see the decision as a first step toward moving the team to Las Vegas.

"We don't believe the city could support the team for 41 games, but we will look on this deal as a success if we can draw 8,000 per game in Las Vegas," Battistone said.

MacPhail decides not to fine Martin

NEW YORK (AP) — American League President Lee MacPhail doesn't approve of the language Billy Martin used to a newspaperwoman, but he says the offense wasn't serious enough to penalize the volatile manager of the New York Yankees.

MacPhail absolved Martin Tuesday of charges that he screamed obscenities in a confrontation last Friday night with Deborah Henschel, who was on research assignment from the New York Times and was interviewing players in the Yankee clubhouse.

The league president's statement ended an investigation begun following a formal protest by the Baseball Writers Association of America. MacPhail talked with Martin and others who were in the clubhouse when the incident occured.

"This includes a reporter, a photographer, a trainer, several players, and a coach," noted MacPhail. "Each individual confirms that Martin's statements were basically as he reported them. I have been unable to talk to the representative of the Times — the Times, apparently, feeling this would be improper."

Martin said he did not know Henschel and that when he asked her to leave, she refused, saying she was from the Times and had credentials. Martin told MacPhail he ordered Henschel out of the clubhouse in stronger terms, using language common in major league clubhouses.

"Based on the information we have been able to gather, I must hold there is no cause for serious disciplinary action against Mr. Martin," MacPhail said. "The American League does not approve of the language he used, but the language used does not far transcend language used in a professional baseball clubhouse. The Yankees have already apologized to the New York Times. The American League regrets any embarrassment which the representative of the Times may have suffered."

Joseph Vecchione, sports editor of the Times, said Tuesday, "We've seen his (MacPhail's) statement and taken note of it. We stand on what we had in the paper Saturday morning. We've said everything we care to say in that story. This has changed nothing."

Vecchione said the Times planned no further action on the matter.

MacPhail, who earlier this season fined and suspended Martin for three games after a number of arguments with umpires, noted Henschel is not a member of the Times sports department and is unfamiliar with customary clubhouse procedures.

Roenicke, Johnson

Shots surprise sluggers

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Home run hitters like Gary Roenicke and Cliff Johnson usually know when they have unloaded a dinger, but sometimes they're not so sure.

They each slammed two homers Tuesday night, accounting for four runs, and then expressed surprise over one of the long balls.

"I was surprised as anybody that the second homer went out," Roenicke said of his eighth-inning blast off New York's Shane Rawley which snapped a 2-2 tie and powered the Baltimore Orioles to a 5-2 victory over the Yankees. "I didn't think it was going out until I saw (center fielder Jerry) Mumphrey go up against the fence and then not come down with the ball. It was a fastball out over the plate. "I said, 'I wish I had pulled it more.'"

There was no doubt about Roenicke's two-homer in the fourth, a blast deep into the left field bleachers.

Johnson, who hit a tape-measure shot with the bases empty in the sixth inning, drilled a three-run homer in the first off Minnesota's Bryan Oelkers as the Toronto Blue Jays whipped the Twins 8-3.

"I was kind of surprised on the first one," he said. "I didn't think it had the height to go out."

Elsewhere in the American League, the Texas Rangers nipped the California Angels 3-2, the Kansas City Royals beat the Oakland A's 4-2, the Cleveland Indians downed the Boston Red Sox 3-1, the Milwaukee Brewers trounced the Detroit Tigers 10-3 and the Chicago White Sox defeated the Seattle Mariners 4-2.

Roenicke's first homer followed a walk to Eddie Murray and the 2-0 Baltimore lead stood up until New York's Graig Nettles homered in the top of the eighth. With one out in the bottom of the inning, Murray singled and Roenicke again homered. The Orioles added another run on doubles by Benny Ayala and Rich Dauer. Storm Davis and winner Tippy Martinez scattered eight hits in ending the Yankees' five-game winning streak.

The Yankees have lost 10 straight at Memorial Stadium — they were 0-7 last year — and are 4-17 in Baltimore during the last three seasons.

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — In William Jones Cup women's basketball action Korea upset the U.S. University All-Stars 67-54, Italy beat Taiwan's Chung Hua team 66-55, and Sweden overpowered Finland 57-48.

Tim Lollar

San Diego hurler flirts with no-hitter

By BEN WALKER AP Sports Writer

The San Diego Padres are still waiting for a no-hitter, despite the best efforts of Tim Lollar.

Lollar had Dodger Stadium buzzing Tuesday night as he breezed through six innings by holding Los Angeles hitless. Then, with one out in the seventh, Dusty Baker broke the spell with a clean single to left.

And, after Bill Russell led off the ninth with another single, Luis DeLeon came on to retire the side in order as the Padres beat the Dodgers 2-0.

"Pitching a no-hitter is not the foremost thing on my mind," Lollar said. "I'm not saying I wouldn't want one, but the main thing is to help the club."

Meanwhile, the Padres — who came into existence in 1969 — and the New York Mets remain the only teams in the National League that have not produced no-hitters.

In other NL games, St. Louis blanked New York 5-0, Pittsburgh shelled Chicago 8-4, Houston beat Atlanta 5-0, Cincinnati got past San Francisco 6-5 in 16 innings and Philadelphia and Montreal split a doubleheader, the Phillies winning the opener 8-1 and the Expos taking the nightcap 5-4 in 12 innings.

Lollar, 3-4, struck out six, walked three and knocked in the game's first run with a fifth-inning sacrifice fly.

The 27-year-old left-hander, bothered by elbow problems earlier in the year, had pitched effectively against Cincinnati in his last outing.

"In the past, I wasn't healthy," Lollar said. "It wasn't the real me. I had a lot of pain in my arm. I look at these two starts as a new beginning.

"I was tired going into the ninth inning," he said. "That's been strange territory for me this year."

Added San Diego Manager Dick Williams: "He threw great. (Catcher Terry) Kennedy came to me in the seventh and thought he was losing a little."

Garry Templeton singled in an unearned run in the sixth against Los Angeles starter Alejandro Pena, now 6-1.

The victory was San Diego's fourth in a row. Dodgers Manager Tom Lasorda, who dropped Baker from third to fifth in the lineup, was left looking for other ways to break his team's recent hitting slump.

"I'm not saying he didn't pitch a great game, but right now we make anyone look good," Lasorda said.

Cardinals 6, Mets 0

Neil Allen, traded to St. Louis last week, shackled his former team on four hits through eight innings. Allen, who was dealt along with pitcher Rick Ownbey for first baseman Keith Hernandez, raised his record to 3-7.

St. Louis reliever Doug Bair came on to retire the Mets in order in the ninth. After the game, Bair was sent to the Detroit Tigers for a player to be named later.

Rookie Andy Van Slyke, recently called up from the minors, hit his first big-league homer and George Hendrick drove in two other St. Louis runs.

Pirates 8, Cubs 4

Mike Easler and Jason Thompson provided the offensive spark to help Rick Rhoden, 4-7, struggle to an 11-hit complete game. Easler doubled twice and drove in three runs while Thompson went 3-for-3 and knocked in two runs.

The Pirates picked on Chicago's Dickie Noles, 0-3, who was making his first start since the opening week of the season. He was on the disabled list from April 12 to June 4 while taking part in an alcohol rehabilitation program.

Pittsburgh, which swept a doubleheader from the Cubs Monday, has now won three in a row, its longest victory streak since opening the season with five straight wins.

Astros 5, Braves 0

Mike Scott needed just 81 pitches in tossing a six-hitter. Scott, 3-3, faced only 29 batters in handing Atlanta its fifth loss in six games.

Ray Knight went 4-for-4 with two doubles for Houston.

Phillies 8-4, Expos 1-5

Philadelphia won the opener behind Joe Morgan's two-run homer and solo shots by Mike Schmidt and Gary Matthews.

In the second game, Schmidt blasted a two-run homer, his 14th, to give the Phillies a 3-1 lead in the sixth.

Reds 6, Giants 5

Paul Householder singled with one out in the top of the 16th, moved to second on rookie Nick Esasky's hit and scored on Ron Oester's single to end the five-hour, 10-minute marathon.

The Reds put runners in scoring position with less than two outs in eight of the last 10 innings.

Both team scored a run in the 14th, and each team used six pitchers.

San Francisco's Darrell Evans drilled his 19th home run, tying him with Atlanta's Dale Murphy for the major-league lead.

At Wimbledon

King seeks 21st crown

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — When Billie Jean King captured her first Wimbledon title in 1961, Jimmy Connors was just 9 years old and Chris Evert Lloyd two years younger.

Connors, now 30, is attempting to defend his All-England Lawn Tennis Championships title here on the fabled grass courts, while the 28-year-old Lloyd is going after her fourth consecutive Grand Slam tournament crown.

King, meanwhile, is still following her serve to the net, putting away volleys and many of her younger opponents as she tries to increase her Wimbledon record of titles to 21.

"Chris and Martina (Navratilova, the defending women's champion) have earned the right to be the favorites here, but I know I have prepared myself as best I can," said King, a winner on opening day. "In fact, I was ready to play last week."

Last year, King delighted the crowds — many of whom were around to see her collect the women's doubles title in 1961 — as she reached the semifinals before being ousted by Lloyd.

The woman who replaced King as queen of tennis, Lloyd still is wary of the "Old Lady" of the tour.

"I think she is a threat on grass," said Lloyd. "They say she is in better shape and a good frame of mind.

"I think she could do some damage. But she's in my quarter (of the draw), so I hope not. But her game is suited for grass."

Like King, Connors has returned to the scene of some of his greatest triumphs. He first won here in 1974, then gained his second title last year.

"I have to work harder now that I am older," Connors said. "It takes two hours of hard work to discipline myself instead of one hour. I am working harder, but I enjoy it more."

All three were to play second-round matches today, King taking on Beth Herr, Lloyd meeting Marcella Mesker of the Netherlands and Connors playing Wally Masur of Australia.

Lloyd and Navratilova breezed past their opening-round foes, Lloyd taking just 55 minutes and Navratilova an astounding 32 minutes.

Second seeded, Lloyd stopped fellow American Alycia Moulton 6-2, 6-1. The top-seeded Navratilova, who has lost just four matches since the beginning of 1982, crushed South African Beverly Mould 6-1, 6-0.

Fourth-seeded Tracy Austin was Tuesday's major casualty, never taking the court. The two-time U.S. Open champion withdrew prior to her first-round match because of a pulled back muscle.

Another seed, No.6 Bettina Bunge of West Germany, was upset by Christiane Jolissaint of Switzerland 3-6, 7-6, 11-9.

Widby trying to enter golf tour

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — At 38, Ron Widby has sold his roofing business to try to become a professional golfer.

"I can't drive it far, but I'm a consistent iron player and my chipping and putting are fairly good," Widby said after failing to make the cut for the Danny Thomas Memphis Classic.

Widby is a former all-sports standout at the University of Tennessee and a former kicker for the Dallas Cowboys and Green Bay Packers.

"I'm going to give this a good shot for a couple of years and see how it goes," he said of his latest sports venture.

At Tennessee, Widby lettered in football, baseball, basketball and golf, and he played for awhile with the New Orleans Bucs of the American Basketball Association.

After retiring from pro football in 1974, Widby held several jobs and ran a roofing business in Dallas until he decided to give professional golf a try.

He said he was encouraged by his golfing buddies.

"So I talked it over with my wife and here I am," he said. "I haven't competed in a tournament in about seven years so that probably explains why I was a little shaky at first.

"But I think I've got a pretty good game. In time, I might surprise somebody."

Widby said he's being backed financially by several businessmen from San Antonio, Texas.

"I've played a lot of golf for a long time and my friends back in Dallas convinced me that I ought to give this a try.

Ayala 'threat to women,' jailed

PATERSON, N.J. (AP) — The Superior Court judge who ordered Tony Ayala Jr. to spend a minimum of 15 years behind bars for a sexual assault described the former top-ranked boxer as "a threat to women."

Judge Amos C. Saunders, pronouncing the sentence Tuesday, painted a protrait a young man who was unable to control the impulses that led to the destruction of a once-promising career.

"The future was his," Saunders said. "Unfortunately, underneath that handsome exterior there seems to be another Antonio Ayala."

Ayala was convicted of charges of sexually assaulting a woman who lived in his West Paterson apartment complex and threatening her roommate with a knife.

"The circumstances of this crime are certainly one of extreme violence and depravity," Saunders said.

The judge noted that the crime occurred on the victim's birthday and that "for the rest of her life, whenever she celebrates her birthday, she will remember that night of terror."

Ayala, who received a 35-year sentence with a 15-year minimum, threaded his way through a crush of photographers on his way to the courtroom. He was silent during the sentencing and frequently wiped tears from his eyes with his handcuffed hands.

Singer arrested for attacking officer

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The district attorney's office has rejected assault charges prepared by the sheriff's department against country singer Moe Bandy.

Bandy was accused of attacking a deputy patrolman who came to his house after finding the singer's daughter running down the road, hysterically crying.

The patrolman, Roland H. Aylesworth, contends Bandy's wife gave him permission to enter the home.

The district attorney's office, however, told Bexar County Sheriff Joe Neaves on Tuesday that Aylesworth "had no reason to be in the house."

Bandy has refused comment on his Thursday arrest, but scheduled a press conference for this afternoon.

His attorney, Stanley Bernstein, said Tuesday that Bandy's wife "absolutely did not" give Aylesworth permission to enter the house.

"She told him just the opposite," Bernstein said.

He did not deny Bandy scuffled with Aylesworth.

"There was a fight," Bernstein said. "It's hard to say who started it. He didn't attack the deputy."

Aylesworth, who was treated and released for minor injuries after the fight, said he was roundig up loose cattle when he noticed Bandy's daughter waving her arms at him.

"She had small abrasions on her face and arms and she said her parents were fighting and hurting each other," he said. He also said she was "terrified and afraid to go home."

Bandy's wife, he said, was "messy and soiled" and standing outside the house in the rain when he arrived.

After he identified himself as an officer, Bandy lunged at him and struggled with him "for 12 minutes" before Aylesworth was able to radio for another deputy and the singer finally was subdued, the patrolman said.

Bernstein said Bandy's daughter was "terrified" only because of the fight between her father and the deputy.

"It's an outrageous lie to say there was anything wrong with the girl," he said. "There were no marks on the little girl."

In 1980, Bandy and Joe Stampley were honored as Vocal Duo of the Year by the Country Music Association in Nashville, Tenn.

The original tales of Mother Goose—before the nursery rhymes—were moral tales warning of the dangers of curiosity and trespassing.

New briny lake formed on salt flats

WENDOVER, Utah (AP) — A huge, briny lake has formed on the white salt flats of western Utah, a throwback to the inland sea that was prehistoric Lake Bonneville, but scientists don't know how deep it is or how long it will last.

The lake is one of two new bodies of water created on the bed of the ancient lake after 18 months of heavy rain and snowfall in Utah. Geologists and long-time desert residents say they've never seen anything like it.

"I've been here 23 years and have never seen water like this in the desert," Richard Dixon, owner of the Bonneville Speedway Museum in Wendover, said recently.

The new lake has no name. It wasn't there last year and may not be there next year. It stretches into one of the West's most isolated areas and its exact size and depth are unknown.

Alhough heavy in salt content, the lake does support life. Minute brine shrimp, which also thrive in the highly saline waters of the Great Salt Lake to the east, paddle about in its steel-grey waters.

The lake, which laps against Interstate 80 about five miles east of this city on the Utah-Nevada border, is in an area where patches of standing water are common in the spring before evaporating in the summer heat, leaving a hard and virtually level salt plain.

But National Weather Service satellite photos this spring showed the new body of water stretching across the level salt beds in roughly a right triangle, its longest side about 25 miles.

In a May 23 satellite photo, the lake appeared larger than Utah Lake, a 25-mile long, 10-mile wide freshwater lake near Provo, 40 miles south of Salt Lake City.

That would make it Utah's second largest body of water, behind the 55-mile-long Great Salt Lake.

"The lake is something new for us," said J. Wallace Gwynn, of the Utah Geological and Mineral Survey.

A hundred miles to the south, water also stands two to three feet deep on 80 percent of the Sevier Dry Lake bed.

In a normal spring, up to a foot of water might cover the 20-mile by 5-mile bed before evaporating. But this year, water may remain all summer, Gwynn said.

Both Sevier Dry Lake and the new, nameless lake are on the floor of Lake Bonneville, which covered most of Utah and parts of Idaho and Nevada 20,000 years ago.

As a child, England's Queen Victoria was nicknamed "Drina."

STATE CAPITAL HIGHLIGHTS

By Lyndell Williams
TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

AUSTIN—Texas Comptroller Bob Bullock certified last week that the Texas Legislature once again, as required by law, has balanced the state budget . . . but not by much.

Bullock predicted that after the state finishes paying the bills two years from now, "there will be only small change left in the bank."

Although Gov. Mark White earlier indicated he might veto the budget unless lawmakers raised taxes for teacher salaries, he was expected to sign the bill, thus ending a budget battle which nickel-and-dimed everyone-leaving all feeling underfunded.

But while the tax battle still looms on the horizon, at least two other issues must be resolved first, and events are apparently unfolding to bring lawmakers back into special session this summer.

Lieutenant Gov. Bill Hobby predicted last week the Governor will call the Legislature into session within a few weeks to extend the life of the Texas Employment Commission and to enact a brucellosis program. Later this year, Hobby said, White will call a second special session to pass a teacher pay raise.

Some insiders say the first special session could come the last week of June.

Quarantine Sidestepped

Last week, a few days before Texas was to have gone into court against the federal government's quarantine of all Texas cattle, a tentative bargain was struck when it looked like the Lone Star State was about to lose the case.

White and the feds agreed that Texas will seek to enact a new brucellosis control program and the feds will call off the quarantine as long as Texas shows good faith effort.

White and others will take a week or so to line up the legislative program before a special session is called.

Employment Commission

When the brucellosis session is ordered, White is also expected to include a bill which will extend the existence of the Texas Employment Commission.

The state agency was subject to the Sunset Act this session, but the Legislature adjourned without passing a bill to continue operation of the commission for the next 12 years.

The Senate passed its version, but when Sen. Lloyd Doggett tried to force the House to accept his "human rights commission" amendment or forfeit the bill, conservative House members called his hand and let the bill die.

Whether Doggett is successful in attaching the amendment this summer may be an indicator of whether he will forge ahead with his now-in-force campaign to challenge U.S. Sen. John Tower.

Water, Farmworkers

Two other unfinished issues which might find their way onto the special session agenda are the comprehensive Texas water plan and workers compensation for farmworkers.

The farmworker bill was killed in regular session by a last hour filibuster and the water bill was held up in a House committee after it passed the Senate.

A West Texas Senator, Bill Sims of San Angelo, speculated last week Texas may have to pass the legislation piecemeal over the next few years, since it will be difficult to provide an all-encompassing statewide water plan.

Sims passed legislation which would govern the use of fresh water in secondary oil recovery, increase requirements for lining salt water pits, and provide for plugging of old abandoned wells which often leak oil or salt water onto agricultural land.

Galveston Gambling

What with all the talk last session about legalizing horserace gambling, some speculators want to rebuild the gambling hey-day of Galveston Island. Gambling of all sorts was allowed until 1957 when the Attorney General closed it down.

Now that the Island is undergoing a building boom with several large hotels going up right on the seawall, a move is afoot to legalize casinos.

State Sen. Chet Brooks and the city council have agreed to a non-binding straw vote to see what citizens want.

Texas Republicans

The Texas Republican Party reports it is in unified state following this spring's bloody infighting and the election of a new state chairman. The GOP vows to carry the state in '84, and national Republicans visited Dallas last week to prepare for the coming convention there next year.

New chairman George Strake said last month the party, which was $230,000 in debt, was whipped from the November Democratic sweep which reclaimed the Governor's Mansion. "We had nowhere to go but up," he said.

He reports gains since the '78 Clements win: 230 GOP chairmen out of 254 counties, and increases of two congressmen, 14 legislators and 152 county and district elected officials.

The U.S. Army adopted olive-drab for winter service uniforms in 1902.

Innocent pleas ordered for man claiming murder

MONTAGUE, Texas (AP) — Investigators are checking unsolved killings in Texas and other states following a former mental patient's claim that he killed about 100 women.

A judge ordered innocent pleas for Henry Lee Lucas, 46, who was arraigned Tuesday on a murder charge in the killing of Kate Rich, 80, of Ringgold, and on a weapons charge.

Montague County District Attorney Jack McGaughey said Lucas has made statements regarding about seven deaths in Texas.

"It's just speculation until we begin to confirm them," said McGaughey.

When State District Judge Frank Douthitt, who presided over Tuesday's arraignment, cautioned Lucas that murder is a serious crime, the defendant replied, "I had about 100 of them."

Lucas then asked, "Will I still be able to go on helping finding bodies?"

Lucas was arrested June 11 on a weapons charge. On Thursday, law enforcement officials, with Lucas' help, unearthed what they believed to be Mrs. Rich's remains near Ringgold.

Mrs. Rich has been missing for more than nine months, authorities said.

Bone fragments were found in a stove in Stoneburg, where Lucas was living, investigators said.

Skeletal remains, which may be those of a 15-year-old girl named Becky or a Denton runaway, were unearthed in Denton County Thursday night, McGaughey said.

The judge asked Lucas whether he was mentally competent to stand trial.

"There's about 100 women out there that says different," said Lucas. "I would say yes, I think so. I am guilty of it."

Lucas, who has a fifth grade education, said he had been held in an Ionia, Mich. state hospital for the criminally insane for six years. He also said he spent three weeks in a Princeton, W. Va. mental institution.

"I keep asking for help ... I know it ain't normal for a person just to go out and kill a girl that won't have sex with them," Lucas said. "They turned me loose and told me to go back home, they said 'you are alright.'"

According to the weapons indictment, Lucas was convicted of stabbing his mother to death in March 1960 in Lenawee County, Mich. McGaughey said Lucas received a 20-year sentence in that case.

Lucas spent part of his sentence in a Michigan mental institution, was returned to prison and was released in 1975, authorities said.

Cooking Cotton

Donald L. Bailey, manager of the Cotton Inc. Color Services Center, peers into a king-size pressure cooker at the Raleigh, NC, facility. Bailey is actually checking on some of the fabric "cooking" in a pressure jet dryer. Better, more economical ways of dyeing and finishing cotton fabrics is the goal of Bailey and other textile researchers at the producer-funded facility. Their research helps U.S. cotton producers obtain markets for their fiber.

Americans still spend less for food than foreigners

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's no idle boast that Americans spend a smaller portion of their incomes for food than anyone else in the world, according to the latest Agriculture Department surveys.

Last year, says the department's Economic Research Service, Americans, on the average, spent a record low of $16.10 on food for every $100 in take-home pay. That was down from a rate of $16.20 in 1981 — and as much as $20 in 1960, according to agency records.

Agriculture Secretary John R. Block said Monday it's "no accident" that Americans have such a break at food markets.

"The fact is, U.S. agriculture stands head and shoulders above the rest," Block told a meeting of the Grocery Manufacturers of America in White Sulphur Springs, W. Va. "We are efficient — from farmer to food manufacturer."

Economists point out that the food-spending percentages are derived simply by stacking U.S. disposable personal income against food consumption expenditures and represent an average — not necessarily what individuals actually spend out of their paychecks to eat.

In some cases, obviously, a low-income family might have to spend 25 percent, 50 percent or even a larger share of its income for food, while one with a large income would spend much less than the average of 16.1 percent reported for 1982.

But the point about Americans having relatively low-cost food, compared to prices in some foreign countries, has been made frequently by USDA for many years.

One way to highlight U.S. food prices is to compare specific costs with those in other countries. The department's Foreign Agricultural Service collects the information through its offices in U.S. embassies abroad.

The latest "shopping list" of food items reported by the agency was collected by foreign-based U.S. officials in selected world capitals on May 6.

Boneless sirloin steak, for example, was $4 per pound in Washington, D.C., compared to $10.24 in Bern, Switzerland; 92 cents in Buenos Aires; $5.35 in London; $3.83 in Paris; and a peak of $12.91 in Tokyo.

Whole broilers, which sold for 49 cents per pound in Washington, D.C., were shown at $1.42 in Bern; and $1.52 in London. But they were competitive in two capitals — 49 cents in Brasilia and 47 cents in Buenos Aires.

A dozen eggs sold for 92 cents in Washington, D.C., and cost more in nine of the 15 capitals listed. The lowest price was 37 cents per dozen in Mexico City.

The brief report said that the items listed "are more typical of those purchased in the United States than those purchased in other countries." Thus, the prices might not reflect actual spending for food in the other cities.

Another flaw in the comparison is that "prices may not be directly comparable due to differences in quality, packing, and seasonal variation" in the supply of food items, the report said.

Pest Report

Greenbugs, grasshoppers in fields

General Situation

A few greenbugs are being reported in grain sorghum. A combination of cool weather and thrips have slowed cotton growth. Southwestern corn borer moths are being captured. Some whorl worm activity is being reported in corn. Rangeland grasshopper infestations are heavy in spots.

Grain Sorghum

Although no major greenbug outbreak exists, producers should continue to check their grain sorghum for this pest. Reports primarily consist of small colonies and few individuals on an occasional plant. There have been a few fields in the Bushland and Wildorado area sprayed in order to prevent stand loss.

Cotton

Cool weather has slowed cotton growth making this crop more susceptible to thrips damage. Thrips are difficult to find on the seedling cotton plant because they are quite small at one-sixteenth of an inch and are usually feeding in the folded leaves of the growing terminal. Check cotton seedlings closely and if 2-5 thrips per plant can be found and the cotton is not growing well an insecticide treatment likely is due.

Corn

A mild winter and considerable unplowed or late plowed stubble may mean heavier than usual southwestern corn borer infestations this year. Recent field checks of overwintering borers indicate higher survival than that of recent years.

The first generation of southwestern corn borer seldom requires control, but the high overwinter survival may change that this year. Treatment of first generation is recommended when an average of 10 percent of the plants are infested with eggs or larvae.

A few southwestern corn borer moths have been captured in light traps in corn growing areas south of Amarillo. Corn producers should begin now checking their corn for eggs and larvae.

Wheat harvest on target

WASHINGTON (AP) — The harvest of this year's winter wheat crop is about on target in Texas but is lagging behind in some other areas where combines usually are rolling by now, according to the Agriculture Department.

For the week that ended on June 19, an estimated 6 percent of the winter wheat acreage had been cut in the major producing states, compared to 7 percent a year earlier and the long-time average progress of 13 percent.

In California, 30 percent of the wheat was harvested by June 19, compared to 35 percent a year ago and the average for the date of 40 percent.

The Texas crop was 33 percent cut, compared to a year-earlier pace of 34 percent and the average of 36 percent.

But in Oklahoma, where 10 percent of the winter wheat was harvested by this time last year, only 5 percent was estimated harvested by June 19. The normal progress is 40 percent.

No significant acreage was reported harvested in Kansas, the leading producer — the same situation that prevailed a year ago. The average progress by now is 5 percent, the report said.

Irrigation meeting set July 5

U.S. Rep. Kent Hance and State Senator Bill Sarpalius will be among the guest speakers at an Irrigation Energy Meeting sponsored by the Texas Corn Growers Association July 5.

The meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m. at the Expo Building in Dimmitt, according to TCGA President Carl King. Hance will address the federal energy status, while Sarpalius will present an overview of gas legislation in the recent state legislative session, King said.

The meeting is co-sponsored by the Plains Irrigation Gas Users Association. King said all area farmers and agribusinessmen are invited to attend the meeting.

Erosion helpful to fish ponds

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Agriculture Department scientist says that "a little erosion may not be a bad thing" for fish when it produces new sediment in farm ponds.

Allan R. Isensee, a plant physiologist in the department's Agricultural Research Service, made his assertion in a report published today.

"A fresh injection of sediment into a lake or pond, as happens during a summer storm, actually helps to cleanse the water of pesticides and other unwanted chemicals," Isensee said.

When a chemical enters a pond, part of it remains in the water, while part of it is attached to soil particles and some is taken up by living organisms.

"Enter fresh sediment from a summer downpour. New soil particles drifting through the water attact pesticide molecules — taking them out of circulation — thereby disrupting the equilibrium," the report said.

To regain the balance, the living organisms — including plants and animal life — release some of the unwanted chemicals to balance the solution. The result is a diluted concentration of chemicals.

Beet armyworm attack lessens

LUBBOCK, Texas – The first wave of beet armyworm attacks on both sugar beets and cotton in the Texas High Plains appears to be over but their early appearance leaves farmers worried that they could be in for another year like 1980 when beet armyworms damaged thousands of acres of cotton.

Dr. James Leser, area extension entomologist-pest management at Lubbock, said attacks this year were much earlier than usual. He is not sure why or where the beet armyworms have gone.

"We don't expect them to move in again in significant numbers until July and really not until August," he said. "In 1980, they didn't come until mid-July and stayed until September."

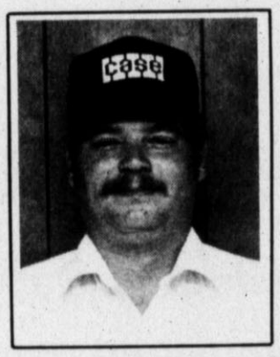

The first wave of beet armyworms, sometimes together with army cutworms, attacked sugar beets in Castro and Deaf Smith counties in mid-May. Beet armyworms also destroyed seedling cotton in Gaines and Yoakum counties. Both insect problems appear abated for the time being but Dr. Leser believes the danger of a further beat armyworm problem is far from over.

Two aerial applicators who sprayed beet armyworms and-or cutworms said the problem appears to be under control in the areas they worked.

Ken Russell of Farmers Spraying Service, Inc., 12 miles north of Muleshoe, said he aerially sprayed 200 acres for Holly Sugar. The problem appeared to be cutworms, he said, but after the spraying started, it turned out to be both a cutworm and a beet armyworm problem.

"We cleaned the worms up," Russell said. "A few days after we sprayed one field, a few armyworms showed up. Now they're gone."

Ann Landers

Surrender for curiosity

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am 19 and, unfortunately, not a virgin. I asked 50 girls I know (36 Catholic, 13 Jewish, 1 Protestant) whether or not they were virgins. Only one was. These are not trashy, underprivileged or stupid girls. They are middle-class or above, intelligent and decent.

The most common reason for surrendering their virginity was curiosity. They had heard sex is glorious and wonderful, that it brings two people so close together they are like one. Naturally, they were eager to experience what magazines, movies, TV and advertisers promote as the ultimate in bliss and ecstasy.

Many kids feel that their lives are being controlled by their parents. They believe that by having sex they can prove that they are completely independent. This is what I thought, but I was wrong. Instead of making me independent, it enslaved me.

Sex can be a beautiful experience, but it can also be a disappointment. It took me a long time to get over the guilt and feelings of worthlessness. I also had to admit it wasn't much fun.

Sex is worth waiting for. If experienced too early, it can be very painful physically and emotionally. I would advise kids today to wait until they know each other well enough to be truly in love and are ready to make a lifetime commitment.

Straitlaced, preachy moralists who are dead-set against premarital sex make it more appealing when they order teenagers to stay away from it. If someone tells you not to touch, that's exactly what you want to do, isn't it? Sign me--Not Pregnant, Thank You, Lord (Chicago)

DEAR NOT PREG: That's THIS month. What about next? And I hope to heaven you're not depending totally on the Lord.

Thanks for presenting the picture from a teenager's point of view. It's far more effective coming from one of your own rather than from an old relic like me. What do I know?

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am sick and tired of reading letters in your column from women complaining about their workaholic husbands. On behalf of the millions of women who are married to out-of-control boozers, I would like to say:

Dear Sister: I will gladly trade my alcoholic for your workaholic. You don't have to worry about money for tomorrow's groceries or the kids' shoes.

Nor do you have to be concerned about your husband killing you when he is out of his mind from drunkenness. And you don't worry that he is dead in a ditch when he doesn't come home hours after the plant has closed.

As for being lonely, I could write a book. We can't have company because I never know what shape my guy will be in. I am afraid to leave him and go visiting because he might burn the house down and nobody could save the kids. My husband's boozing is robbing me and our children of a normal life. I am depressed and miserable. Anyone out there willing to trade?–Evansville, Ind.

DEAR WIFE: I urge you to check Al-Anon. It's in the phone book. And it's free. This organization could change your life. Please ask a relative or neighbor to stay with the kids and go to a meeting as soon as possible.

Vows exchanged

Laura Lynn Ragsdale of Farmington, N.M., and Joe Stoltz of Duncanville, Texas, were united in marriage Saturday in the parlour First Baptist Church, Hereford. The Rev. J.W. Ragsdale of Farmington officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Clovis Seago, 121 Ave. C, Hereford and John Seago, Carlsbad, N.M. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. S.G. Stoltz of Hobbs, N.M.

Ms. Seago served as matron of honor and Kyle Ragsdale, son of the bride, served as best man.

Music was furnished by Jeryl Hoover of Hereford and Barbara Moore, flautist, of Farmington.

Following the ceremony, a luncheon was served to 30 guests.

After a wedding trip to San Antonio, the couple will reside in Duncanville, where Stoltz is employed with the Matsco Company.

Canyon church to give away clothing Saturday

The Clothing Room of the University Church of Christ, Canyon, is holding a Give-Away Bonanza Day from 9 to 11 a.m. Saturday in Canyon. Those wishing to receive free clothing are invited to bring their own boxes and come get good, stylish clothing.

Large amounts of nice clothes have been donated to the Clothing Room both by individuals and other churches in Canyon, and the members at University Church of Christ wish to share these clothes with people in local area. Items will be hung outside on the west parking lot.

For directions to the church, from the Lubbock Highway drive east on the Palo Duro Highway to Lair lane, and turn south 2 blocks.

Bonanza Day items offered will include: ladies size 3-20, men's clothes all sizes, girls' sizes 12 and 14 only, and men's and ladies' shoes. There are probably 6,000 garments ready to give away Saturday. Some baby clothes will also be offered.

For anyone who makes quilts or craft items, a large number of culled items, both knits and cotton blends, are ready to cut and re-cycle into something useful.

In case of rain, this event will be held two weeks later on July 9.

Decorating with color

"A vital element in decorating small rooms is the use of color," says Dr. Peggy Owens, a housing and home furnishing specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

Light colors, especially off-white and beige generally give rooms a spacious appearance. Furniture, floors and walls should be in neutral colors which blend together says Owens.

Organist hardly needs training

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) - An organist at a baseball game hardly needs conservatory training, but the University of Rochester's Eastman School of Music thinks it's a good idea to give organists the chance to share tricks of the trade.

Eastman is sponsoring a seminar here for stadium organists July 19.

The organists will be able to discuss their role in controlling unruly crowds and spurring home-team rallies, and how one plays for different sports.

Organists Nancy Faust of the Chicago White Sox, Vince Laschied of the Pittsburgh Pirates, and Fred Costello of the Rochester Redwings and Americans are scheduled speakers.

Charlie & Bea Pratt

Our speaker this month is CHARLIE PRATT from Amarillo. Charlie and his lovely wife Bea, who ministers with him, have a prison and rehabilitation ministry.

Charlie grew up in New York City and was introduced to crime early in life. As a result, he spent 18½ years in state prisons and reformatories. During that time he was in and out of several non-christian religions. In a beautiful and fantastic way he met his wife, who led him to the Lord.

Charlie Pratt is a big man with a big heart and a tremendous love for the Lord. HIs gentle spirit is a far cry from the violent nature which was so much a part of his life before he met Jesus.

10 YEAR NO SWEAT WARRANTY

If Air Conditioning doesn't have it here it probably doesn't have it.

Gas Air Conditioning Has It!

No other air conditioner has a warranty like a gas air conditioner because no other air conditioner is built like a gas air conditioner.

Gas air conditioning has fewer moving parts and no compressor to wear out or break down. This means less wear and tear and lower maintenance costs.

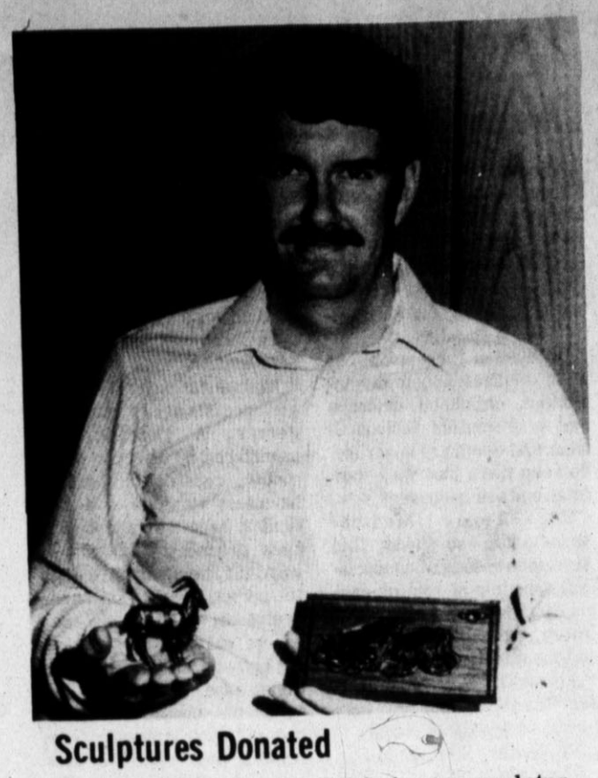

That's why gas air conditioning is so dependable and why it has a warranty that's twice as long as other types of units . . . a full 10 years!

Find out more about the air conditioning that's backed by the best warranty available. Call Energas today for a free cooling survey and cost estimate. There's no obligation.

Remember, all air conditioning was not created equal. And we have the paper to prove it!

Manufacturer's limited warranty covers all defects in materials and workmanship on the sealed refrigeration unit for ten years from the date of installation of the air conditioner when it is installed in a single family residence. All other parts are warranted for one year from date of installation.

Appliance warranties based on time, not use

COLLEGE STATION -- Some major appliances are used very little over a year's time. The window air conditioner, refrigerator, and range in a lakefront cabin, travel trailer or Gulf Coast condominium may only be used a few weeks or months of the year.

"When these appliances need repairs, some owners feel that four years of seasonal usage should constitute less than one year's worth of warranty coverage," says Nancy Granovsky, a family resource management specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

"But the manufacturers think differently," she adds.

Consumers should be aware of what their appliance warranties cover and for how long. "Consumers should be especially aware that coverage is stated for a specific period of time and not for how much you use the appliance," cautions Granovsky.

According to the specialist, manufacturers can offer almost any type of warranty, as long as the provisions are clearly stated and the warranty is available for review before purchase.

Although "vacation only" use may result in less wear and tear on an appliance, it is nearly impossible to base a warranty on usage because of the difficulty a manufacturer would have in measuring actual consumer use.

Some appliances can also suffer more from extended non-use than from continuous daily operation, explains Granovsky.

For instance, the seals in the pump of a dishwasher are meant to be immersed in water at all times to keep the seal soft and pliable. The sealed systems in refrigerators and air conditioners present another example. They will stay vacuum tight for years only if the refrigerant gas and the oil they contain are kept moving to lubricate the seals.

Consumers who have appliances in vacation homes or trailers should carefully read the warranty and use the appliance enough during the warranty period so that any defects may have time to surface.

"Consumers should remember that even if they don't use an appliance, the warranty is not extended," says Granovsky.

A car that shifts manually has been estimated to get an average of two miles more per gallon of gas than a car with automatic shift.

Sickle-cell anemia is inherited disease

Sickle-cell anemia is an inherited disease of the red blood cells that primarily strikes blacks. About one in every 400 black American is born with this disease, according to the Texas Medical Association.

Although sickle-cell anemia is present from birth, its symptoms usually do not appear until the infant passes 6 months of age. The most common symptom is called sickle-cell crisis, characterized by severe pain in the chest, abdomen, back, arms, or legs. Other symptoms may include weakness, tiredness, breathlessness, and paleness.

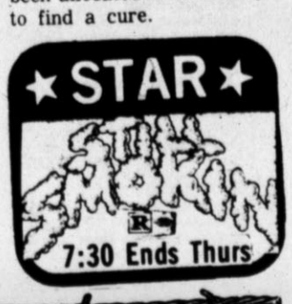

The problem involves hemoglobin, a protein in red blood cells. In persons with sickle-cell anemia, these cells contain an abnormal hemoglobin called hemoglobin S. It causes the cells to become deformed in the shape of a crescent or sickle.

The cells' irregular shape prevents them from flowing smoothly through smaller blood vessels. The cells may clog the vessels and prevent blood from reaching tissues, resulting in a lack of oxygen that makes the sickling worse. This sickle-cell crisis can last for hours or weeks and may occur several times a year. It can be triggered by infection, fatigue, unusual stress, overexertion, or high altitudes.

A person with the disease has inherited a sickle-cell gene from each parent. This condition should be distinguished from sickle-cell trait, in which the person has inherited only one sickle-cell gene from one parent. Approximately 2.5 million Americans have the sickle-cell trait, meaning they carry the non-contagious disease but are almost never affected by it.

Sickle-cell anemia cannot yet be cured, but a number of measures can control it. Persons with the disease should maintain good general health, have proper nourishment and avoid excessive activity that brings on fatigue. A doctor may give medication to relieve pain or prescribe antibiotics if an infection is present.

Until recent years, sickle-cell anemia was a somewhat neglected disease. Considerable funds now have been allocated in an attempt to find a cure.

"Don't let him watch! Don't let him watch!"

The Newspaper BIBLE

IMPOSSIBLE! BUT IT HAPPENED

Zacharias was in the sanctuary when suddenly an angel appeared, standing to the right of the altar of incense! Zacharias was startled and terrified.

But the angel said, "Don't be afraid Zacharias! For I have come to tell you that God has heard your prayer, and your wife Elizabeth will bear you a son! And you are to name him John.

"You will both have great joy and gladness at his birth, and many will rejoice with you. For he will be one of the Lord's great men. He must never touch wine or hard liquor--and he will be filled with the Holy Spirit, even from before his birth! And he will persuade many a Jew to turn to the Lord his God.

"He will be a man of rugged spirit and power like Elijah, the prophet of old; and he will precede the coming of the Messiah, preparing the people for His arrival. He will teach them to love the Lord just as their ancestors did, and to live as godly men."

Zacharias said to the angel, "But this is impossible! I'm an old man now, and my wife is also well along in years."

Then the angel said, "I am Gabriel! I stand in the very presence of God. It was He who sent me to you with this good news! And now, because you haven't believed me, you are to be stricken silent, unable to speak until the child is born. For my words will certainly come true at the proper time."

Meanwhile the crowds outside were waiting for Zacharias to appear and wondered why he was taking so long.

When he finally came out, he couldn't speak to them, and they realized from his gestures that he must have seen a vision in the Temple.

Luke 1:11-22

Vaccinations ensure healthier children

Although smallpox as once a dreaded disease that often killed its victims, a vaccine now appears to have eradicated it. And polio, the crippling childhood disease, has been brought under control with a vaccine.

Because of these advances in immunizations, many infectious childhood diseases that once caused serious illness and death are now rare. To keep them that way, vaccinations are necessary.

The Texas Medical Association suggests this American Medical Association schedule of routine vaccinations to give a child maximum protection against serious infectious disease:

–2 months old: Polio, DTP (diphtheria, tetanus, and pertussis, or whooping cough)
–4 months: DTP, polio
–6 months: DTP
--15 months: Measles, mumps, German measles (rubella)
–1½ years: DTP, polio
4-6 years: DTP, polio
14-16 years: DT (diphtheria and tetanus)

Also available are vaccine for other diseases such as pneumonia, influenza, typhoid fever, hepatitis B, rabies, plague, yellow fever, and cholera. These are not considered routine but are for specific situations.

Immunizations make people resistant to specific germs. A vaccine, administered by injection or by mouth, consists of dead or harmless versions of a particular infectious agent. The body produces antibodies to ward off the agent. Although the person does not suffer the symptoms of the disease–except maybe slight fever–the body becomes immune to the disease.

Parents should tell their doctor before immunizations begin if their child has ever had convulsions. They also should tell the physician if the child is ill when the vaccine is to be administered. For instance, a cold could mean a short delay in giving the vaccine.

Business is locating computer software

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — It's becoming harder these days to find a company that does business without a computer, but even computers are brainless shells without the programs that make them think.

Both of those facts make 27-year-old entrepreneur Tim Shirley a very happy man.

Shirley heads Sofsearch International Inc., a two-year-old San Antonio-based company in the business of locating software, or the programs that tell a computer to organize a payroll, perform tax accounting or just play Pac-Man.

"We do have a unique concept and it is something that has a broad appeal if you consider everyone searching for a computer right now, which is about everyone in the American economy," Shirley said.

Sofsearch never physically handles the software, but rather uses its database listing 30,000 "products" to match up the customers' computers — or hardware — with the programs that meet their needs.

Within about 48 hours, subscribers receive a one-page detailed description of each appropriate program and information on how they can contact the vendor or salesperson.

"We don't give them evaluative information on the product, but we do list how many people are using that particular program and the cost," Shirley said.

Customers who pay Sofsearch a $175 subscription fee are entitled to five searches in one year, with each additional search costing $35.

An average search turns up 10 to 30 possibilities, and Sofsearch keeps tabs on about 60 percent of the programs on the market, he said.

Shirley, who began working with computers at age 17, said he immediately ran into a problem when he started developing Sofsearch's database in 1981: there was no software locater to consult.

"Now there are three lookalike services, but their database is inconsequential compared to ours," Shirley said. "The investment we have in our database is already a seven-figure investment."

Intially, Shirley said, vendors weren't eager to list with Sofsearch, considered just another unknown variable in a rapidly changing field.

"The more we're known in the business, the more people want to be listed," he said. "It's free advertising. We don't charge vendors to list with us, but we do require them to update. We think that's a small price to pay."

Most of Sofsearch's revenues are funneled back into updating the database, which basically is an electronic reference library, Shirley said.

"We constantly have to review periodicals, ads, etc., looking for new software houses," he said. "We cover any type of packaged software product ... micros, minis or mainframes.

"Any eight-track tape will work in any stereo. That's not the case with software," Shirley said. "As soon as you buy the hardware, you have effectively limited your options."

Thus the company also offers Sofselect, which helps customers determine which software package best meets their needs and only then selects the computer to run it.

Sofseach has about 10,000 subscribers in 30 countries, but more than half of those customers joined in the last four months, Shirley said.

'We're not yet into the black because of the huge start-up costs, but we should go into the black by this year," he said.

About 70 percent of Sofsearch's customers are businesses, according to Shirley, who said "most" of the Fortune 500 companies subscribe.

About 20 percent are certified public accountants or computer consultants, with the final 10 percent drawn from dealers who need a specific piece of software to make a computer equipment sale.

Shirley is confident enough to have expansion on his mind.

He hopes to eventually provide customers "on-line" capabilities, where they can access Sofsearch's database with their own computers and conduct their own searches.

And he's experimenting with a program that would use computer dealers to solicit their walk-in customers' needs.

Sofsearch already has opened a franchise sales office, Sofseach of California, based in Anaheim, and more of those are a possiblity, Shirley said.

"We're still trying to determine the best marketing approach for our service," he said. "We want people to know who we are, what we do and why they need us."

POLLY'S POINTERS

Save on nail polish

DEAR POLLY — Could you repeat a Pointer you gave some time ago for saving old nail polish that has settled in the bottom of the bottle? I've lost the information you printed previously. I get half through a bottle and the rest gets really hard and sticky. — DOROTHY

DEAR DOROTHY — It's a pleasure to repeat such a simple, but money and aggravation-saving Pointer. Simply add nail polish remover a few drops at a time to thickened polish. Stir it in thoroughly with a toothpick or other convenient stirrer (even the polish brush will work if the polish isn't too thick), adding more, drop by drop, until it reaches the desired consistency. It usually doesn't take much polish remover to salvage a half bottle of polish, so be careful; don't add too much or the polish will be ruined! — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — You can minimize the separation that occurs when yogurt is used in cooking by adding a little cornstarch to the yogurt. — LORRAINE

DEAR POLLY — Before rolling pie crust on my plastic laminate countertop, I set several packages of solidly frozen meat on the counter for three or four minutes. Then I stash the meat immediately back into the freezer (no harm to the meat) and my countertop is well-chilled to make rolling the pie dough easier. Works as well as an expensive marble slab. — JULIE

DEAR POLLY — If eggs are supposed to be at room temperature for a particular recipe and you've forgotten to remove them from the refrigerator in advance, put them into a bowl of lukewarm water for 10 minutes. The eggs will be perfect. — MRS. D.

DEAR POLLY — To help a child who has a difficult time pulling pull-toys behind him because he cannot grasp the plastic string, try attaching the string to an old rattle or anything the child plays with that they can easily grasp.

If your infant drools heavily while teething, try putting a cloth diaper folded in a triangle and pinned at the back of the neck around him as a bib. The thick absorbent diaper will keep the baby drier than ordinary bibs. — CATHY

CBS wins Nielsens Week

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Newhart" became the most-watched show in the country for the first time last week, helping lift CBS to first-place in the ratings for the second straight week, the A.C. Nielsen Co. says.

The series starring Bob Newhart has regularly finished in the top 20 but was never No. 1 until it drew a 17.9 rating for the week ended June 19.

CBS had six series, including the canceled "M-A-S-H," in the top 10 and coasted to an average 13.1 rating for the week, far ahead of NBC's 12.2 rating and ABC's 11 rating.

The networks say this means that for the average prime-time minute last week, 13.1 percent of the country's homes with television were tuned to CBS.

CBS, which won the 1982-83 ratings season, was shut out during the crucial four-week sweeps period during May in which advertising rates are set, and only returned to dominance for the week ended June 12.

Movies and specials were scarce last week, with the 10th place "Barbara Walters Special" on ABC and two movies — "Telefon" on ABC and "Love and Bullets" on CBS — the only non-series prgramming to crack the Top 20.

One original show, NBC's "Buffalo Bill," tied for 30th with a 12.8 rating.

The lowest-rated shows for the week were CBS' "Bring 'Em Back Alive" and "Seven Brides for Seven Brothers"; NBC's "Voyagers" and the "Monitor" magazine program; and ABC's "USFL Football Special, Chicago vs. Birmingham-Los Angeles vs. New Jersey," which hit rock bottom, 72nd place.

The Top 20 programs, with the rating and estimated number of viewers:

1. "Newhart," CBS, a rating of 17.9, or 14.9 million viewers.
2. "Knight Rider," NBC, 17.7, or 14.7 million.
3. "Trapper John," M.D., CBS, 17.4, or 14.5 million.
4. "A-Team," NBC, 17.3, or 14.4 million.
5. "Cagney & Lacey," CBS, 17.2, or 14.3 million.
6. "Hill Street Blues," NBC, 17.1, or 14.2 million.
7. "M-A-S-H," CBS, 17.1, or 14.2 million.
8. "The Jeffersons," CBS, 16.7, or 13.9 million.
9. "Archie Bunker's Place," CBS, 16.1, or 13.4 million.
10. "Barbara Walters Special," ABC, 15.8, or 13.1 million.
11. "60 Minutes," CBS, 15.7, or 13.1 million.
12. "Simon & Simon," CBS, 15.7, or 13.1 million.
13. "Magnum, P.I.," CBS, 15.3, or 12.7 million.
14. "Eischied," NBC, 15.3, or 12.7 million.
15. Movie-"Telefon," ABC, 15.1, or 12.6 million.
16. "Remington Steele," NBC, 14.7, or 12.2 million.
17. "Love Boat," ABC, 14.6, or 12.2 million.
18. "Family Ties," NBC, 14.6, or 12.2 million.
19. Movie-"Love and Bullets," CBS, 14.4, or 12 million.
20. "Cheers," NBC, 14.4, or 12 million.

Cooking and vitamins

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am concerned about the nutritional value of food like a quart of fresh or frozen vegetables when they reach the boiling point. How many minutes can they be cooked without destroying so many vitamins? What percent is left if cooked 30 to 45 minutes?

Which meat has the most protein or builders for red blood and muscles — beef, chicken or turkey?

DEAR READER — The simple truth is that the longer you cook vegetables and fruits the more vitamins will be lost. The three vitamins most susceptible to cooking are vitamin C, thiamin and folic acid. Just preparing raw vegetables can cause a significant loss of vitamin C. Fortunately, the RDA (Recommended Daily Dietary Allowances) are high enough that reasonable food preparation will not result in vitamin deficiencies.

Just storing food will result in loss of vitamins in time. That also applies to frozen foods.

Water-soluble vitamins are lost during washing and soaking. This is a good reason not to soak foods and not to use a lot of water in preparing fresh vegetables.

You can help improve the vitamin content of your foods by saving and using the fluids from cooking or the drippings from meat.

I have included general guidelines about this problem in The Health Letter 20-8, How Food Processing Affects Nutritive Values.

Today in History

By The Associated Press

Today is Wednesday, June 22, the 173rd day of 1983. There are 192 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On June 22, 1773, Dominican friars established the first settlement in what is now California.

On this date:

In 1815, Napoleon Bonaparte abdicated for a second time.

In 1937, Joe Louis began his reign as world heavyweight boxing champion, knocking out Jim Braddock in Chicago.

In 1940, France and Germany signed an armistice during World War II.

In 1969, singer-actress Judy Garland died at the age of 47.

Ten years ago: Skylab I astronauts returned to Earth after a record 28 days in America's first space station.

Five years ago: It was disclosed that Bulgaria had arrested four German terrorist suspects and turned them over to West Germany, the first such cooperative police action by a Soviet-bloc nation.

One year ago: Great Britain's Princess Diana and Prince Charles left a London hospital one day after the birth of their son, Prince William.

Thought for today: "The greater the difficulty, the greater the glory." — Cicero, Roman scholar (106 B.C.-43 B.C.).
