Reagan joins Mondale in age-old arena

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

President Reagan has begun his re-election campaign by turning the age issue on his Democratic opponents, chiding that "their ideas are just too old," while challenger Walter F. Mondale describes the Republican as a cold and uncaring country-club president.

As quickly as the fall presidential campaign left the Labor Day starting blocks, Reagan and Mondale were trading jabs.

"I don't believe a president should just serve all the people in his country club," Mondale said as he and running mate Geraldine Ferraro campaigned from New York to California Monday. "I believe a president should serve all the people in the country."

Reagan, at the same time, was denouncing the Democrats as "that pack of pessimists roaming the land." And he addressed with humor possible concern about his age, 73, by aiming the issue back at the Democrats.

"Trouble is, our opponents treat each new idea the old-fashioned way: they spurn it.

"I hate to say this," Reagan added, "but the age factor may play a part in this election. Their ideas are just too old."

The president was in Salt Lake City today for a series of events, including a speech to the national convention of the American Legion, a gathering Mondale will address Wednesday. Mondale was campaigning again today in California, in Long Beach and San Jose, before heading to Utah.

Both candidates kicked off their fall campaigns with traditional Labor Day appearances.

Reagan spoke to a crowd of more than 20,000 — Reagan's campaign claimed closer to 50,000 — at a park in Orange County, Calif., a huge, predominantly conservative Republican region just south of Los Angeles and smack in the heart of Reagan's political homeland.

Mondale, accompanied by his running mate, began with a march up Manhattan's Fifth Avenue — where few showed up to watch — and flew on to a rally in little Merrill, Wis., where most of the town's 9,500 people turned out. They then flew on to California for a final event, joined by former rival Gary Hart, before Mondale and Ms. Ferraro split up to campaign separately today.

Ms. Ferraro offered sharp rhetoric in attacking Reagan, portraying him as as peddling superficial patriotism while trying to impose his religious and moral views on others.

"I don't think the American people buy the self-conscious patriotism that's made on Madison Avenue.

Flight director Randy Stone describes the Discovery crew's "Operation Icecube."

Shuttle astronauts 'break the ice'

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Discovery's astronauts successfully executed "Operation Icecube" today, dislodging the greater part of a pesky block of ice from the side of their orbiting ship with a nudge from their 50-foot mechanical arm.

Mission Control said the 5-inch icicle still clinging to a waste water port was not a hazard. In fact, there was an indication it too may have fallen away after the astronauts completed their ice-breaking task.

The ice danger removed, the crew prepared to come back to Earth on Wednesday.

The frozen block never posed a threat to the astronauts. But there was concern that it might break off during re-entry and damage Discovery's tail, requiring lengthy repairs that would delay the shuttle's next flight.

"We got most of it," astronaut Judy Resnik reported after commander Henry Hartsfield had gingerly guided the arm out of the cargo bay and over the port side to get at the ice. He operated from a remote station in the cabin.

A picture televised live to Mission Control in Houston showed that after the initial tap with the end of the arm, a large hunk of the ice had been knocked off.

The block, melted down to about half its size by overnight heating, had measured about 15 inches in length and about 9 inches at its widest point before the operation. The remaining icicle had a maximum thickness of about 3 inches.

"The remaining piece is not considered a hazard to the orbiter," said Mission Control commentator John Lawrence. "It appears to be porous and very spongy and not very hard."

Lawrence reported later that temperature readings from the port where the small icicle remained indicated that there may no longer be any ice there. He said the piece may have been loosened enough by the nudge that it dropped off after the operation was complete.

He said the crew might be asked to maneuver the arm camera later in the day to take a look at the area.

"It was a super job," controllers told the crew. "See you at Edwards."

Discovery is scheduled to end its maiden flight with a landing at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., at 9:41 a.m. EDT.

Procedures for an all-out assault on the ice were teleprintered to the crew this morning along with a drawing of the shuttle with its robot arm, appropriately wielding an ice axe. The instructions were labeled "Icecube Ops," which NASA translated to "Operation Icecube."

The television picture, captured by a camera mounted on the arm, dramatically showed the robot slowly approaching the ice chunk. Hartsfield had to be very careful so the arm would not accidentally hit and damage protective thermal tiles on the shuttle's side and wing. He had only about a 10-inch clearance with the wing.

Sally Ride, America's first woman in space, worked out the arm procedures Monday in a simulator in Houston. She radioed instructions to Miss Resnik, the second American space woman, who relayed them to Hartsfield. Ms. Ride's husband, Steve Hawley, is among Discovery's crew.

The arm was called into use as an icebreaker after a series of jet firings failed for the second day in a row to shake the ice loose.

"No joy," Miss Resnik reported after Hartsfield triggered a series of jet bursts that vibrated the shuttle's frame.

The assault on the ice began early today when the astronauts turned the block toward the sun and switched on heaters at the openings to the two waste-water dump vents where the ice had formed.

Hartsfield inspected the chunk with the arm camera and reported it was about half the size it was Monday, when it was estimated to measure about 2 feet by 1 foot at the widest point.

The ice lump started out as two icicles at the vents for waste water and toilet water, which are about 7 inches apart on the port side. The two pieces eventually joined into a chunk about 24 inches long and 12 inches thick at the base.

The blockage put the toilet out of commission, forcing astronauts to discharge body wastes into special bags like those used by the Apollo moon astronauts. The remaining icicle continued to block the toilet drain after the arm did its job.

Concern about the ice grew late Monday when a report from shuttle builder Rockwell International said that damage found on the shuttle Challenger after its last flight might have been caused by ice weighing only one-fourth of a pound, said flight director John Cox. That required time-consuming repairs to thermal protection tiles on the tail section.

Texas boaters rescued from rig

Associated Press

PORT ARANSAS, Texas — Four Dallas-area residents whose boat capsized in the Gulf of Mexico tied themselves together and made their way through 12-foot waves to an oil rig before being rescued.

Billy Martin, 33, of Dallas, and Douglas Cantrell, 23, Andrea Cantrell 18, and Barbara Cantrell, 30, all of Carrollton, were rescued by a U.S. Coast Guard helicopter about 10 a.m. Monday, said Petty Officer Jeff Jay Cox.

They were in a hotel late Monday recuperating from an overnight stay at the the oil rig, which is located about 7 miles of Port Aransas, said Anita Cantrell, the mother of the Carrollton residents.

Martin's 23-foot motor- boat, the Scorpion, went down into the Gulf of Mexico about 1 p.m. Sunday about a quarter mile from the oil rig.

"They encountered some severe weather and they started taking on water," Cox told the Corpus Christi Caller-Times. "Their engine and their bilge pumps became inoperative and they started taking on more water."

The four, who had on life preservers, tied themselves together with a rope and made their way to the rig.

Mrs. Cantrell said her husband notified Coast Guard officials after the four failed to return to port Sunday.

She said the four used two ice chests to keep them afloat. She said they injured themselves slightly with barnacles on the rig as they tried to climb it.

Cox said the four seemed to be in good condition when found by the captain of the Linda Lou, one of several fishing vessels asked to look for the boat after it failed to come back to port Sunday evening.

He said the Scorpion left the Port Aransas dock about 10 a.m. Sunday and was due back at 5 p.m. and when it failed to show up, D.L. Cantrell called the Coast Guard.

Mrs. Cantrell told The Associated Press Monday night she had not talked to her children because they had gone to a hotel to rest.

She said her husband told her the four were feared lost at sea and told her to start preparing for funeral services.

"I told him, 'No. Anything is possible with God.'"

She said she began to pray.

"I didn't know what else to do," Mrs. Cantrell said. "I told them we had to lift them up to God. In a way that's what happened. They went up in the oil rig. It's just miraculous to me."

American man held in Montreal bombing

Associated Press

MONTREAL — Workers cleared rubble today from Montreal's main railroad station after an explosion killed three people and injured 41. An American arrested in connection with notes threatening Pope John Paul II sent to the station was to appear in court.

The explosion Monday sent metal and glass fragments tearing into a line of about 150 people waiting to board a train for Ottawa at the end of Canada's Labor Day weekend. Thousands of people were heading home, and the Central Station was crowded.

It was closed after the blast and passengers were shuttled to suburban stations, but station officials said they hoped it would be back in operation today.

Detective Sgt. Jacques Grondines said police arrested Thomas Brigham, 65, believed to be from Rochester, N.Y., in connection with about 50 anonymous notes threatening John Paul, banks, insurance companies and various governments. The notes were mailed to the train station and various news media in Ottawa and Montreal since April.

Brigham was to appear today in Sessions Court charged with sending threatening letters.

On Monday, Detective Sgt. Pierre Vezina said two local radio stations had received calls from people claiming responsibility for the explosion. He refused to identify the callers.

The bombing came a week before the pope is scheduled to visit Montreal by rail on a 12-day Canadian tour. The pope will arrive at Windsor Station, two blocks from Central Station, and stay at the residence of Maurice Cardinal Roy, Archbishop of Montreal, which is across the street from the station.

In Rome, a Vatican spokesman, the Rev. Romeo Panciroli said: "There is no reaction" to the explosion or the threatening notes. "The preparations for the trip are proceeding normally."

Many people were thrown from their feet by the blast, witnesses said. Railway officials said they believed the device contained more than 25 pounds of explosives.

The explosion occurred in a storage locker area. Police said the bomb must have been in an upper locker, because the ceiling was scorched.

Bernard Lefebvre, of the city's emergency medical service, said ambulances took 25 people to seven hospitals, and 16 other victims went to hospitals on their own. Three bodies were taken to a morgue.

Minneapolis McPunks just want McRights

Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — Shaved skulls, black leather clothing and outrageous makeup have become as common as Big Macs at the McDonald's restaurant in the Uptown area of south Minneapolis, but not nearly as popular with merchants.

On most summer nights a crowd of about 40 teen-agers — self-proclaimed "McPunks" — spills onto the sidewalk and into the street around the restaurant. And that has store operators fearful that customers are being scared off by the tough-looking crowd.

Although police say the McPunks have not been directly linked to recent vandalism — streets signs torn down, obscene graffiti on buildings — Uptown Association merchants have urged police and McDonald's to take action, and a crackdown has begun. The restaraunt has added a second guard in the evening to help clear out loiterers, and police have assigned a beat officer to the intersection.

The kids say it is their appearance and not their behavior that is under attack.

"Our very presence offends them," said Tena Eastburg, a high school sophomore. "If we dressed preppie and said, 'Have a nice day,' they would probably let us sit here for hours. But just because we want to express our individuality, we're labeled troublemakers."

John Meegan, owner of Top Shelf Tailors, says some of the McPunks are "very respectable kids who are dressing the part and loving it, but some are just destructive. Part of it is the age-old conflict between one generation and another...but I'm only 30 and some of them make me nervous."

Not all merchants are upset. Jan Snyder of nearby Snyder Drug dismisses the punks as just another fad, "like the hippies" of the 1960s.

The teen-agers say other McDonald's customers can nurse a soft drink for hours without harassment, while they are hustled off the premises by city police or "McCops," their name for McDonald's plainclothes security guards.

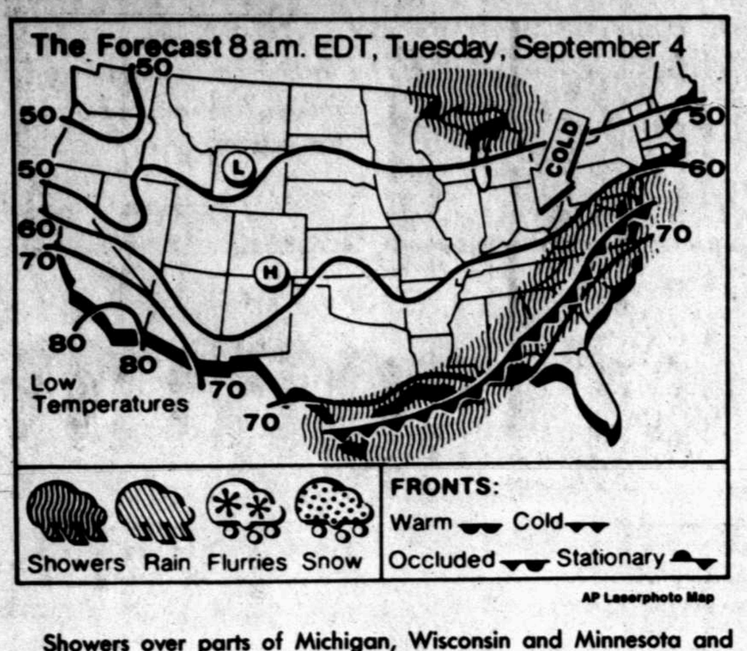
WEATHER SUMMARY



AP Laserphoto Map

Showers over parts of Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota and stretching from the Atlantic Coast to the Texas Gulf are forecast by the National Weather Service.

Record low not likely to be repeated tonight

From Staff and Wire Reports

A record overnight low for the Midland area was set this morning when the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport recorded a temperature of 50 degrees. The previous record low for Sept. 4 was 52 degrees set in 1961.

Warmer weather is expected tonight. Clear skies should accompany light and variable winds and lows in the upper 50s, warming Wednesday to highs in the upper 80s. Wednesday's skies will be fair with winds from the southeast at five to 15 mph.

The high of 85 reached Monday was 16 degrees below the record set in 1939.

STATE

A spell of cool and dry air continued to spread southward into Texas early this morning, while a weaker cool front trailed behind and enveloped the shore along the gulf.

Skies were mostly clear statewide except for some low clouds and patchy fog over the southern and eastern regions of the state.

Meanwhile, some very heavy thunderstorms continued offshore over the gulf, east of Galveston and in the southeast corner of Texas.

Elsewhere, a light rainshower was detected just north of Laredo.

Light northerly winds swept through most areas of the state, although the National Weather Service reported more light and variable winds racing through the West.

Predawn temperatures dipped into the 50s in northwest Texas, while readings over the remainder of Texas were generally in the 60s and low 70s. At 4 a.m. today, the mercury ranged from 52 at Amarillo to a warmer 76 degrees at Brownsville.

The forecast called for fair to partly cloudy skies with scattered thunderstorms in South Texas. Highs will range from the 80s to the lower 90s.

NATION

Thunderstorms erupted from eastern Georgia to southern New England today and fanned out west over states along the Gulf of Mexico as far as eastern Texas.

Showers and thunderstorms also stretched from Minnesota to eastern Nebraska, but skies remained partly cloudy over much of the rest of the nation.

Today's weather forecast called for showers and thunderstorms scattered over the Atlantic Coast and Gulf states. Showers were also scattered over portions of the upper Great Lakes and the Pacific Northwest, and patches of thunderstorms covered the southern intermountain region.

Labor Day closes summer season

By RON SIRAK
Associated Press Writer

Millions of Americans said goodbye to summer and hello to the campaign season in a three-day Labor Day holiday marked by picnics, parades and political oratory from coast to coast.

In major cities, hundreds of thousands of people took part as organized labor marched, rallied and celebrated the holiday named in honor of America's workers.

In Hood River, Ore., the festivities took a chillier form. More than 200 people, ages 8 to 83, braved the frigid waters of the Columbia River on Monday in the annual 1.1-mile Labor Day Cross-Channel Swim.

At least 420 people died in traffic accidents during the three-day weekend, including seven people killed in a fiery pileup on Chicago's Lakeside Drive. Four people were killed in an Idaho plane crash and two people drowned in the Missouri River.

State troopers in Michigan were busy over the weekend, pulling over motorists and handing out 500 $5 gift certificates to those wearing seatbelts.

President Reagan, Vice President George Bush and the Democratic ticket of Walter F. Mondale and Geraldine Ferraro set up the soap boxes Monday and worked the holiday crowds on what is traditionally regarded as the starting line for the sprint to Election Day.

In Detroit, center of the nation's auto industry, Joan Mondale, wife of the Democratic presidential nominee, was joined by United Auto Workers President Owen Bieber and AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland leading a parade and rally that police said drew 150,000 people.

Mondale and Ms. Ferraro led dignitaries and workers up Fifth Avenue in New York City's giant parade honoring the union movement. Parade coordinator Brian McLaughlin estimated that 500,000 people took part in the 2½-mile hike through the heart of the city. Police made no crowd estimate.

One man, carrying a "Labor for Reagan Victory" sign, had it taken away and torn to pieces by the largely Democratic crowd along the parade route lined with Mondale-Ferraro posters.

Later, heavy thunderstorms hit the New York metropolitan area, delaying returning holiday travelers for up to 2½ hours at Kennedy and LaGuardia airports.

About 30,000 picnickers waited in lines as their baskets, coolers and baby strollers were searched, then walked through metal detectors to hear Reagan officially launch his campaign in Fountain Valley, Calif., the same place he kicked off his 1980 effort.

The crowd waved American flags, and stacks of ready-made pro-Reagan signs in English and Spanish were available. Music was provided by a jazz band and the Fountain Valley High School band.

"This is great," said Darrell Jennings of Fountain Valley. "It's like one of the old rock concerts without the rock music. People are just laying around having a good time."

Bush was at the New Orleans World's Fair, which cut ticket prices from $15 to $9.95 to draw Labor Day crowds.

The Mississippi Pavilion at the fair imported sand to fill a 20-foot-by-30-foot sandbox and threw a beach party, complete with a fishing booth and Hula-Hoop and "best-looking leg" contests for men and women.

Elsewhere, a crowd estimated by police at 4,200 braved a threat of rain to watch Indianapolis' third annual Labor Day parade. About 20,000 people turned out for a parade in Asbury Park, N.J., and 300 rallied in Bismarck, N.D.

On the Atlantic Coast, New Jersey officials said crowds were disappointing. Summer business along the 110-mile shoreline was reported off by as much as 20 percent from last year, partly because of cool water and rainy weekends.

Sunny skies with temperatures near 90 degrees drew more than 2 million people to California's beaches.

In Stanley, Idaho, a holiday weekend of camping ended in tragedy when a light plane carrying two California couples crashed in the Challis National Forest, killing all four people.

At a family outing in Kansas City, Mo., a 5-year-old girl fell out of a flat-bottomed skiff into the Missouri River and her father jumped in after her. Both drowned as the mother, unfamiliar with the boat, tried frantically to maneuver close enough to help.

Tooling along the highway are Chloe Channel and Gila.

Woman's sidekick rides in motorcycle sidecar

BOARDMAN, Ohio (AP) — For a time, Chloe Channel thought either her motorcycle or her Doberman pinscher had to go. But where there's will, there's a way, and now woman and dog tool along the highways together.

Gila, the 4-year-old dog, rides in a sidecar. Together, they've logged 20,000 miles through 32 states.

The problem arose when Gila was about 12 weeks old, and Mrs. Channel left her dog home alone.

"When I came home, my living room was shredded, demolished, destroyed, and I had to make a decision — give up motorcycling, give up Gila, or find a solution," she said.

Enter the sidecar, with Gila's name painted on the side.

But it wasn't that simple, of course.

Mrs. Channel worried that Gila, leashed in the sidecar, could be trapped in an accident, so the dog had to learn to ride untied.

"The first time was scary," Mrs. Channel said. "I was going about 40 miles per hour when suddenly she wasn't there. I looked back just in time to see her getting to her feet in a field.

"She was scraped and skinned but no bones were broken. I washed the blood off and put her back in, and she's never jumped out since."

Now Mrs. Channel and Gila make quite the smart couple.

"People follow me into rest stops and restaurants and campgrounds," she said. "We've had thousands of snapshots taken of us, even movies by people who put the camera out the car window."

And there are advantages: "With Gila, I need never worry about anyone stealing the cycle even if I left the key in the ignition."

POLITICS

They feel the selfless, quiet patriotism of Main Street America," she said.

And she belittled Reagan's background as an actor.

"While Ronald Reagan was making movies, Fritz Mondale was making history as a champion of civil rights and social justice," she said. "While Ronald Reagan was host of 'Death Valley Days,' Fritz Mondale was trying to get Medicare passed for senior citizens."

Vice President George Bush, too, plunged into the fray, campaigning in New Orleans after marching in a Labor Day parade in the largely Democratic Chicago suburb of Lemont, Ill., where he described Mondale as "a little desparate."

He said Mondale has tried to create a "smoke screen" by charging that the Republicans are improperly mixing religion and politics.

"Four years ago today, a Democratic administration attempted to raise a smoke screen to obscure one of the sorriest economic records in the history of the United States," Bush said. "...And in their desperation today, our opponents have reverted to ... that same low-road campaign as a subterfuge for their own economic plans for the future. Walter Mondale's economic dream would result in a return to the nightmare of Jimmy Carter."

Bush also inched closer to a debate with Ms. Ferraro. "I'll make that decision pretty soon, maybe in a week or so," Bush said. "I'd look forward to it. ... I expect there will be one."

While Reagan was starting out with a strong lead in public opinion polls, Mondale hoped to grab the political initiative early this month by spelling out his proposal for sharply reducing federal budget deficits — and challenging Reagan to do the same.

Aides had said privately that Mondale would unveil those plans in his Wisconsin speech, but they decided the plan needed more work and would be announced later.

Mondale used the small, Midwestern community — described as "culturally conservative" by its congressman, Democrat David Obey — as a backdrop for his assertion that Reagan is uncaring about average Americans.

"Let us end this uncaring, icy indifference to human needs in American society and get a president who will stand up and lead us," Mondale said.

Reagan entered the nine-week fall campaign holding a 16 percentage point lead over Mondale in his own polls. A national poll conducted Aug. 25-30 for The Los Angeles Times put the spread much higher — 27 points.

Dismissing such dismal views of his chances, Mondale said, "... these pundits that say we're going to lose, they're wrong. The people know what's going on and we're going to win it."

Much of Reagan's rhetoric was purposely mild. Campaign spokesman James Lake said Reagan was switching from the harsh rhetoric unleashed at the GOP convention in Dallas two weeks ago to a new "high tone."

The Rev. Jesse Jackson, meanwhile, began his formal campaign in support of the Democratic ticket with a speech in Norfolk, saying Reagan has dealt setbacks to civil rights and public education. "Reagan's record is a threat to our future," he said.

Hijack victims returned to Iran

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Nearly all the passengers and all 11 crew members of the Iranian jetliner hijacked a week ago returned to Iran today aboard a plane chartered by the Red Cross.

The Foreign Ministry said 189 Iranian passengers and the 11 crew members of the Iran Air Airbus commandeered Aug. 28 flew out of the Iraqi capital aboard a Dutch DC-10. There were 206 people aboard the Iranian jetliner when it was hijacked on a flight over Iran.

(In the Iranian capital, Iran Air announced that the passengers and crew arrived at Mehrabad airport today. And the official Tehran radio, in a report monitored in London, said: "the Iraqi regime has released the passengers and crew.")

Canadian balloting off to strong start

By CHARLES CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer

TORONTO — A brisk flow of voters was reported this morning as Canadians began electing a new government, with Brian Mulroney, leader of the Progressive Conservative Party, heavily favored to defeat Liberal Prime Minister John Turner.

Voters in Newfoundland on the East Coast, where the clocks are set half an hour ahead of the mainland, were the first to mark their ballots.

Brendan Kelly, an official for the St. John's East voting district, said voter turnout "appears to be fairly brisk." Across the city another election official reported "a steady flow of voters, but not a rush."

Several polls in the past week put Mulroney's Tories more than 20 points ahead of the Liberals, who have governed Canada for all but nine months of the past 21 years.

Turner, who took over the Liberal government June 30 when Pierre Elliott Trudeau resigned, seemed likely to wind up with one of the shortest tenures as prime minister in Canadian history.

The country's 16.5 million registered voters are choosing members of Parliament in 282 districts. The leader of the party that emerges with the most seats will become prime minister. Polling hours are 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. local time in all five time zones.

The final Gallup poll of the campaign found 50 percent of decided voters planning to vote Conservative, 28 percent favoring the Liberals and 21 percent favoring the left-leaning New Democrats.

Political analysts expected the Tories to win between 160 and 190 seats.

Turner finished the campaign in Vancouver, where he was in danger of losing his own race for a seat in Parliament as well as the national contest.

He told a television interviewer that he had no regrets about the campaign, which took his Liberals from a 10-point lead two months ago to a huge deficit.

"One does the best one can. One makes the decisions one has to make, one makes the choices one makes and then one moves on to something else," the prime minister said. "And I don't second-guess myself."

Mulroney, a 45-year-old electrician's son who was president of a mining company until running for the Tory leadership last year, went home to Baie Comeau, Quebec, on the final day of campaigning.

His Quebec roots and fluent French have given the Conservatives a chance to win possibly half the 75 seats in the French-speaking province where in the 1980 election, all but one of the districts voted Liberal. Among the seats the Tories are favored to win is the district in far northeastern Quebec where Mulroney is running.

Mulroney has struck a chord by promising change, while advocating policies that were, if anything, more liberal than Turner's.

"He recognized ... that when Canadians said they want 'change' they meant a change in faces and in style, rather than a change in actual policies," political columnist Richard Gwyn wrote in the Toronto Star.

"By espousing every good cause on the go, from women to peace to jobs for youth to pensions for the elderly, and by saying nothing about doing something about the deficit or cutting government spending, Mulroney tugged his party to the center, shaded a fraction to the left, which is where most Canadians are," Gwyn said.

Both Mulroney and Turner have pledged to change Canadian policies on energy and foreign investment that have angered U.S businessmen and the Reagan administration, while pursuing negotiations for free trade with the United States in some sectors of the economy.

Mulroney also has said he would be less critical of the United States than Trudeau often was, promising to give the Americans the "benefit of the doubt" on foreign policy issues.

Turner, a 55-year-old former finance minister and corporate lawyer, has told Canadians his broad experience would make him better able to manage the Canadian economy, cut the government deficit and reduce unemployment, now at 11 percent.

Mulroney, who never ran for public office before last year, argued that voters should put a whole new team in charge instead.

Ed Broadbent, leader of the New Democrats, has promised to speak for "ordinary Canadians," regardless of which party formed the government.

Modern Viking sailors find 'key to history'

Associated Press

BOSTON — Six adventurers sailed a replica of a 1,000-year-old Viking ship across the North Atlantic and while battling high winds and threatening waves discovered what one of them called "a key to history."

The 57-foot, single-sail ship left Norway June 17 and arrived in Boston Monday. Following a 10th Century Viking trading route, the sailors said they found Viking artifacts along the way and have learned quite a bit about type of ship used by Viking explorer Leif Ericsson.

"Most importantly, we have learned that this is a very seaworthy ship," said Ragnar Thorseth, 36, a writer who is leading the expedition.

"We conclusvely proved that Viking ships can sail up to 45 degrees into the wind using a square sail," he said. "That disproves the theory that they had to use oars to turn their ships when there was no tail wind.

"We also found that the rudder on Viking ships was not nearly as important in steering as was the sail. That may sound small to you, but when you put all these small things together, you have a whole, a key to history," he told The Boston Herald.

The ship, Saga Siglar, which means sailer of the sagas, is an exact replica of a knarr, or deep sea trading ships, used in the 10th and 11th centuries. Archeologists recovered one in 1959 from a fjord in Denmark.

The replica weighs 27 tons and is made of Danish oak and Norwegian pine. "We worked with our hands, using the old tools — tools that the Vikings would have used," Jacob Bjorkedal, 29, a member of the crew told The Boston Globe.

Alleged writer of sex pamphlet charged

AUSTIN (AP) — A former school district records clerk accused of writing and distributing a pamphlet "How to Have Sex With Kids" has been charged with sexual performance by a child, authorities said.

David Sonenschein, 43, is accused of exchanging photographs of children involved in sexual acts with David Woodruff, 44, of Houston, assistant Travis County district attorney Steve McLeery said Monday.

State District Judge Tom Blackwell issued a search warrant Friday for Sonenschein's house based on information obtained by Austin police, who interviewed Woodruff.

Woodruff was arrested at his Houston home June 18 and charged with having sex with a 4½-month-old girl. He was also charged with six counts of sexual performance by a child. Houston police confiscated more than 800 slides and photographs of naked children ranging in age from 4½ months to 12 years old from Woodruff's home, authorities said.

Investigators said Woodruff and Sonenschein had written each other for several years.

Woodruff was interviewed by Austin sex crime investigators last week and asked about his relationship with Sonenschein. After the interview, Travis county prosecutors asked Blackwell for a warrant to search Sonenschein's house.

It was not known if any evidence was found at Sonenschein's home. Monday's charge of sexual performance by a child is a third degree felony.

He was charged July 6 with obscenity, a Class A misdemeanor, after being accused of writing and distributing pamphlets.

Charges may be filed in baby's death

GRAPEVINE (AP) — Charges may be filed this week against a 22-year-old woman suspected of giving birth to a baby in an airport restroom and then strangling it to death, authorities say.

Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport Police Chief Tom Shehan said the woman was arrested over the weekend, then released on a writ of habeas corpus.

The newborn baby — a white male — was found in a D/FW Airport trash can Friday shortly after it was born, said medical investigator Dail McMillan. The baby, which was at full term, died of asphyxiation, McMillan said.

Tarrant County Medical Examiner Nizam Peerwani said Sunday his office is trying to determine if the infant was strangled before he was dumped into the trash.

New Grapefruit 'Super Pill' Gives Fast Weight Loss

No Dieting - Eat All You Want Pill Does All the Work

BEVERLY HILLS, CA. (Special) An amazing new "super" grapefruit pill has recently been developed and perfected that reportedly "guarantees" that you will easily lose at least 10 pounds in 10 days. Best of all, it allows you to "eat as much as you want of your favorite foods and still lose a pound a day or more starting from the very first day until you achieve the ideal weight and figure you desire."

This "super" grapefruit pill is a dramatically improved version of the world famous grapefruit diet. It is far more effective than the original and eliminates "the mess, fuss, and high cost of eating half a fresh grapefruit at every meal."

"Pill Does All the Work"

According to the manufacturer, "the pill itself does all the work while you quickly lose weight with NO starvation "diet menus" to follow, NO calorie counting, NO exercise, and NO hunger pangs." It is 100% safe. You simply take the pill with a glass of water before each meal and the amazing combination of powerful ingredients are so effective they take over and you start losing weight immediately.

Pill Has ALL Daily Vitamins

The powerful and unique combination of ingredients are what make this a "super-pill". It contains highly potent grapefruit concentrate and a diuretic to help eliminate bloat and puffiness. No need to take any vitamins to maintain your good health and energy. The pill is fortified with ALL (100%) of the U.S. Government daily vitamin requirements.

Contains Japanese 'Glucomannan'

Each pill also contains an amazingly effective amount of "glucomannan", the remarkable natural dietary fiber discovery from Japan (used successfully for over 1500 years) that expands in your stomach and gives you a full and satisfied feeling all day long.

The super-pill is already sweeping the country with glowing reports of easy and fast weight loss from formerly overweight people in all walks of life who are now slim, trim, and attractive again.

Now Available to Public

You can order your supply of these highly successful "super" grapefruit pills (now available directly from the manufacturer by mail order only) by sending $12 for a 14-day supply (or $20 for a 30-day supply, or $35 for a 60-day supply) cash, check, or money order to: Citrus Industries, 9903 Santa Monica Bl., Dept. 841, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. (Unconditional money-back guarantee if not satisfied.) Visa, MasterCard, and Amer. Next shuttle flight to have seven crew members

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — A shuttle flight in October will have seven astronauts on board — the most ever in space at one time on one craft — but crew members believe they can manage as long as the space toilet works.

The 41-G mission is set for launch Oct. 1 with five men and two women on board for eight days in orbit. Plans call for the first spacewalk by an American woman, the launch of a satellite using the robot arm, the first flight of a Canadian astronaut, a demonstration of satellite refueling and a high-latitude orbital path that will carry the shuttle Challenger over the Soviet Union.

Mission commander Robert Crippen told reporters at a news conference Monday that "seven people is going to be crowded" and said the crew members "have to be very conscious not to get in each other's way."

Astronaut Jon A. McBride, 41, the pilot on the flight, had a more specific concern. A seven-member crew should be fine, he said in an interview, as long as the toilet works.

If the toilet fails, he said, "it could be rather unpleasant with that many people."

The shuttle toilet has failed on 10 of the 12 flights, and is available for only limited use on the mission now in orbit by Discovery because of a buildup of ice on a waste vent.

Crippen said he doubted the shuttle could carry a much bigger crew.

"I'm not sure what the maximum number is you can carry on board, but we're pushing it with seven," said Crippen, 46, who is making his fourth flight into space.

AP Laserphoto

The crew of the space shuttle mission that is scheduled for Oct. 1 gathers for a news conference: from right, Robert Crippen, commander; Jon McBride, pilot; Kathryn Sullivan and Sally ride, mission specialists; and Marc Garneau and Paul Scully-Power, payload specialists.

Others on the crew include:

—Sally Ride, 34, America's first woman in space, who will be making her second flight and who will specialize in operating the robot arm.

—Kathy Sullivan, 33, who will make the first spacewalk by an American woman.

—David C. Leestma, 35, who will be Ms. Sullivan's partner in the spacewalk.

—Marc Garneau, 35, a Canadian navy commander, who is the first from his nation to fly in space.

—Paul D. Scully-Power, 40, a civilian employee of the U.S. Navy who will do oceanographic studies.

During their spacewalk, Leestma and Ms. Sullivan will attach a hose to two tanks in the cargo bay of the shuttle. Later, the hose will be used to transfer hydrazine, a rocket fuel, between the tanks.

It will be the first time that large volumes of fuel have been transferred in space by American astronauts. The Soviets have done it before.

Leestma told reporters at the Johnson Space Center that the transfer of the fuel is potentially dangerous "if not done properly" because the rocket fuel is extremely volatile and could explode.

Defendant in sanctuary trial to seek change of venue

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — An attorney for a man charged with transporting Salvadoran illegal aliens says the publicity surrounding the sanctuary movement makes it difficult to find an impartial jury here.

Attorneys representing defendent Jack Elder were to argue for the change of venue at 8:30 a.m. today before U.S. District Judge Hayden Head Jr. of Corpus Christi.

The case was transferred to Head's court in July after a federal judge in Brownsville removed himself from the case.

Elder, 40, is director of the church-sponsored Casa Oscar Romero refugee halfway house in San Benito, about 15 miles north of Brownsville.

Elder has been a leader in the nationwide sanctuary movement that offers assistance to Salvadoran and Guatemalan refugees fleeing violence in Central America.

He has also been an outspoken critic of U.S. policy in that region.

Elder is charged with transporting two Salvadoran illegal aliens from the church-sponsored halfway house to a bus station in Harlingen 5 miles away.

Prosecutors have said they would oppose the change of venue.

If convicted, Elder faces up to 15 years in prison and a $6,000 fine.

Earlier this year, Casa Romero volunteer, Stacey Lynn Merkt, 29, was convicted by a federal jury in Brownsville of conspiring to transport two Salvadoran illegal aliens. She was given a two-year suspended sentence in June.

Elder's attorney, Steve Cooper of St. Paul, Minn., said the publicity surrounding the Merkt case could make it difficult to find an impartial jury in Corpus Christi.

"A lot of people in Corpus Christi read about the Merkt case and formed opinions about the sanctuary movement," Cooper said.

Cooper said he hoped the trial could be moved to a "non-border state where there hasn't been a lot of publicity.

Fans boo when Sinatra cuts concert short because of weather

Frank Sinatra

TORONTO (AP) — Frank Sinatra risked his life when he appeared at the Canadian National Exhibition during a violent electrical storm, concert organizers say.

"You don't go out and stand in a puddle with a live microphone in your hand during a thunderstorm," Winfield Stockwell, general manager of the exhibition, said Monday. "I'm surprised he stayed."

Stockwell was responding to complaints from fans about the brevity of Sinatra's program here Sunday night. Many fans, some of whom had paid as much as $75 for a ticket, booed when Sinatra left the stage after about 45 minutes.

Esther Shiner, municipal controller in the suburban city of North York, had two free tickets to the concert, but was outraged nonetheless.

"He was rude," she said. "It was almost as if he was laughing at us."

About 11,000 people attended the event, organized by Concert Productions International.

Norman Perry, vice-president of Concert Productions, said Monday that a severe storm warning with the possibility of tornadoes was in effect for Southern Ontario on Sunday night and it was left to Sinatra's crew to decide whether the show would go on.

Stockwell said he was backstage during the discussions, and heard Sinatra's wife advising her husband to call the concert off.

"If there's an audience out there, I want to sing," Perry quoted Sinatra as replying.

M. Wittkowski

CHICAGO (AP) — A $40 million lottery windfall might leave some people singing, "Take This Job and Shove It," but Michael Wittkowski says he'll stay on as a printer because "if I just sat around counting my money, I'd be bored."

The 28-year-old who became the biggest lottery winner in history is heading back to his $20,000-a-year job at a check-printing company, he said. The fact that he'll get $2 million a year for 20 years "hasn't begun to sink in yet."

Wittkowski was the only person to pick the numbers 2, 3, 10, 26, 30 and 43 — the combination drawn Saturday night in the state's cash-swollen weekly Lotto game, Illinois Lottery officials announced Monday.

At a news conference, Wittkowski said that he'll share the prize with his father, brother and sister.

"All we want to do is pay off our bills," he said. "After that we'll sit down and decide what to do with it."

He may use his riches to buy Chicago Cub baseball tickets, Wittkowski said. "Maybe now I'll have money for playoff tickets."

The Lotto game went three weeks without a winner, and frenzied ticket buying by people from as far away as California and New Jersey swelled the jackpot to monumental levels.

Lottery superintendent Michael Jones said 2,020 players matched five out of the six numbers drawn Saturday night, and each will receive $1,569.50. He said 103,652 players matched four of the six numbers and will each get $45.50.

Pharmacist Donald Pollak, who owns the Northwest Side drug store where Wittkowski bought his winning ticket, will receive a $400,000 bonus.

Wittkowski, who is planning to become engaged, said last week started out like any other week — he and his family bought about $35 worth of tickets, and he played the same numbers he always does.

'Courageous' cancer patient dies at age 19

ELY, Minn. (AP) — David Chelesnik Jr., who despite a four-year battle with cancer starred on his high school basketball and baseball teams and earned an athletic scholarship to the University of Minnesota, has died of the disease at age 19.

Chelesnik, who died Monday at his parents' home, was frequently written about for his courageous struggle against cancer, most recently in the August issue of Good Housekeeping magazine in an article called "David, A Story of Courage."

The teen-ager was able to fight off the side effects of chemotherapy and excel in sports at Ely High School.

In July 1980, it was discovered that he suffered from non-Hodgkin's lymphoma, but 18 months of chemotherapy helped put the disease into remission.

In July 1983, an adult lymphoma, a more chronic form of the cancer, was discovered. Chelesnik returned to chemotherapy treatment shortly thereafter, and enrolled at the University of Minnesota last fall.

He attended classes, made weekly visits to the Mayo Clinic for treatments and made the Gophers baseball team. He pitched one scoreless inning at Texas A&M, but a stress fracture of a bone in his foot, made brittle by the cancer, kept him out of further action.

On July 18, Chelesnik received the prognosis that he had two to three months to live.

The American Cancer Society made Chelesnik its Minnesota Crusade chairman in 1981-82. The organization also has designated a youth-against-cancer award to be called "The David Chelesnik Award," because he personified "the best in American youth; demonstrated courage, commitment and a high degree of civic responsibility."

The University of Minnesota also plans a baseball award in his honor.

Chelesnik is survived by his father, David Sr., his mother, Laura, and a brother, Steve, 25. He was engaged to Leslie Kurre of Ely.

Services are tentatively scheduled for Thursday morning at St. Anthony's Catholic Church in Ely.

Department auctions off Olympic signs

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Many Olympic memento-seekers bought hats, shirts and pins adorned with the Olympic logo, but other souvenir hunters had something bigger in mind.

Olympic signs that used to adorn the freeways were bought at a California Department of Transportation sale that attracted 3,822 sealed bids from such far-flung locales as West Germany, New York, Florida, Washington, Iowa and North Carolina.

About 200 of the colorful signs, which pointed the way to competition sites for visitors, were installed above the freeways when the Olympics opened July 28. Thieves, however, managed to make off with more than half of them.

The highest bid for the remaining signs was made by Gary Osherhoff, a real estate developer from Los Angeles who became the proud owner of a 15- by 4-foot tennis and gymnastics sign.

He paid $2,260 for the souvenir.

"I expected the prices to be much higher, but I don't care that I paid the most of anyone. I just wanted it," Osheroff said. "I was skeptical of the Olympics at first, but then I ended up very impressed. I attended two gymnastic events where Mary Lou Retton won back-to-back 10s. It was great."

The auction of the 99 signs is expected to raise $53,000. The signs cost $235,000, of which Caltrans paid $63,000. The rest was paid for by the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee, which bought back two of the signs for $500 apiece.

Thatcher wins pig race

ARAZURI, Spain (AP) — More than 3,000 spectators cheered as an oinker named Margaret Thatcher won the annual pig race in this northern Spanish town, edging out competitors called Ronald Reagan and Carl Lewis.

Six animals ran the 600-meter course last week after what local officials said was 17 days of training by their respective owners.

Customers bid nightclub farewell

CHICAGO (AP) — They came by the hundreds to say goodbye, not only to the downtown landmark called Blackhawk but also to a remnant of an era that started when Chicago was ruled by Al Capone and Mayor "Big Bill" Thompson.

After 64 years as a big band-era nightclub turned restaurant, Blackhawk closed its doors last week, sold to a savings and loan association rather than undergo a costly renovation.

Many of Blackhawk's veteran customers and employees at a farewell dinner were old enough to recall the days when tunes like "Dancing in the Dark" were big band hits. A few were old enough to remember the Prohibition days when cocktails were mixed under the tables.

Some took pictures, "for old-time's sake," with the restaurant's second-generation owner, Don Roth. Others danced as the Staney Paul orchestra played tunes like "Chicago" and "Thanks for the Memories."

And some reminisced, like host Edward Contreras, 79, who started as a Blackhawk busboy in the 1920s and was on hand in 1926 when Otto Roth turned his 6-year-old, 600-seat downtown restaurant into a nightclub.

"It was one of the real dollar affairs in Chicago," Contreras recalled. "We had all the best bands," and their music was broadcast live nationwide over WGN.

For 26 years, the club named in honor of Illinois' World War I 86th Division — the Blackhawk — would be host to musical greats like Benny Goodman, Glenn Miller, Kay Kyser, Perry Como and Frank Sinatra.

Contreras was there in 1933, when Prohibition ended and Blackhawk waiters "began bringing the booze in," he said. Before that, customers did their own bartending. "It was a custom of people to bring their own whiskey. We only sold the ginger ale and ice."

Banker Charles Sincere wouldn't tell his age, but said he started eating at Blackhawk in his college days during World War II.

"Every time I had a big date, this is where I would come," Sincere said, glancing at the woman sitting across the dining table from him. "I wanted her to see the place that I really loved.

"One of the highlights of getting home from the service was coming to Blackhawk. I'll never forget this place," he said.

When your opponent is Trump Coup Tommy, the wisest thing to do when you are looking at a bunch of trumps and he is declaring, is to steal quietly into the night. Trump Coup Tommy, you may remember, is that amazing person who fluffs simple hand after simple hand, only to become a master of technique when faced with a bad trump break.

The fact that his distribution was not ideal did not prevent Tommy from opening one no trump. West could hardly be blamed for thinking that the rubber was about to pay for his winter island vacation. After all, his partner had bid at the two-level and his hand rated to produce four tricks on its own.

West led the ace of his partner's suit and continued with his remaining spade. Tommy won the king and confirmed the trump position by cashing the king. Now he was in his element.

He crossed to the ace of clubs and finessed the queen of diamonds. When the king fell under the ace, life was beginning to assume a rosy glow. He cashed the king of clubs, crossed to the jack of diamonds and ruffed the 10 of clubs. When West followed suit, the contract became a cinch.

Declarer led one of his good diamonds and West, down to nothing but four trumps, was forced to ruff high. Tommy did not make the mistake of overruffing — he sluffed the table's last spade. When West continued with a trump honor, Tommy allowed him to win the trick. West was now forced to lead away from his 10-8 of trumps into dummy's A-9 tenace, and Tommy lost only two trump tricks and the ace of spades.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Wednesday, September 5, 1984

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Raquel Welch, Bob Newhart, Fed Chairman Paul Volcker, Sen. John Danforth (R-Mo.), author Frank Yerby and actor William Devane share your birthday. Also born on this date: King Louis XIV of France, outlaw Jesse James and Hollywood producer Darryl Zanuck. Things begin to settle down at both work and home. You make new financial gains while reducing domestic tension. A former flame could reappear, bringing you good luck. Develop your social skills; you cannot afford to reveal your personal feelings in every business situation. If self-employed, provide for your retirement years. Build your savings while things are going well.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Self-improvement activities bring lasting rewards. Enroll in a special class. A candid chat with family members strengthens your ties. Handle a difficult or sensitive loved one with kid gloves.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Someone could make an uncalled-for remark. Curb your temper and refrain from responding in kind. A cooperative attitude will result in new harmony. Your connections bring you good financial luck.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A Scorpio begins to play a larger role in your affairs. A letter or message holds valuable financial information. Keep your valuables under lock and key. A new alliance pays off.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Too much haste or too little thought will lead to embarrassment. A creative writing class will help you market your ideas. Travel proves highly profitable. Romance is in full bloom.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Some good luck comes your way! Patience is the key to success. Expect a certain amount of delay or confusion and refuse to be thrown by it. Guard an important secret.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A Capricorn offers a helping hand. There could be strings attached. A research project uncovers valuable information. Protect your reputation; watch what you do and say this evening.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Plan a special surprise for someone who has felt neglected recently. He/she will be most appreciative. Your income rises once you market a new idea. Romance with a Leo can be stormy.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Think things through before expressing your views. You could be jumping to the wrong conclusion about a family member or friend. Productivity rises when you work at a steady rhythm.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Teamwork helps you make up for lost time. Soft-pedal any criticisms you must make. Sarcastic comments will cost you valuable allies. Look for ways to reduce household expenses.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A sacrifice you make now will bring lasting benefits. A little tenderness will help heal a recent wound. Be a good listener. Your loved ones will give you their full cooperation -- just ask.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Business efforts taking place far away are succeeding. Correspondence will help you settle a long-time dispute. You receive high praise and a bonus for your good work. Romance is outstanding!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Higher-ups may ask you to perform a task that sounds unrewarding. Do it well and you could be in line for a promotion or bonus. A change in lifestyle increases family members' comfort.

New breadwinners

In days of old (and, really, not all that long ago), the man in a household was the primary breadwinner. Mark it up to change, but it simply isn't necessarily so any more.

In fact, American Demographics reported in a recent edition that 6 million American wives earn more than their husbands and the number is growing rapidly.

Said the magazine, "In dual-earner couples in which the wife earned more than the husband in 1981, over half of the husbands worked less than full-time. While some of these husbands were retired, ill, disabled, or temporarily laid off, a significant proportion worked part-time simply because they wanted to."

That fact typifies the changing status of women in this country. During the past 35 years, the participation of married women in the labor force has been steadily growing.

A sobering fact is that while the number of married women — and for that matter single women — in the labor force has been increasing, their pay scales have not increased proportionately. American Demographics says that wives, on the average, earn only 40 percent as much as their husbands. That percentage increases to 59 when they are full-time, year-round workers.

That isn't equitable and obviously it's time for a change. After all, men aren't the only ones bringing home the bacon any longer.

Fulfilling a promise

Within the next 25 years, selected U.S. scientists could be conducting their space research from a small colony on the moon and American astronauts may be mining resources from the lunar surface.

This is the striking conclusion of a report prepared for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration by a panel of 20 experts at the California Space Institute in La Jolla, Calif. The 10-week study was commissioned by NASA to set goals for the U.S. space program through the year 2010.

The scientists say that a manned space station could be operational by the early 1990s. Once this is accomplished, the experts estimate that the United States may be able to establish a "permanant presence" on the moon within 10 years.

Initially, the lunar colony would be expected to house a small contingent of astronauts. But the space outpost would eventually serve as an extraterrestrial observatory for astronomers, a service station for space vehicles, and a launch pad for trips to Mars.

The U.S. space program has come a long way since that day 23 years ago when President John Kennedy challenged NASA to put a man on the moon and return him safely to earth. Still, much remains to be done before this nation fulfills its promise to push the frontier of human intelligence to the solar system and beyond.

The proposed lunar colony would be a significant step toward fulfilling that promise.

Another View:

Propaganda galore

Kremlin propagandists and "Reagan bashers" in the United States are mischievously celebrating the anniversary of the destruction of the Korean Air Lines 747, shot down by Soviet missiles over the Sea of Japan after straying off course into Soviet airspace.

The disaster and deaths of 269 innocent passengers and crew members remain surrounded in mystery because no one survived and very little wreckage was recovered. But the big liars in the Kremlin and domestic critics of the president are doing their best to shift blame for the tragedy to the Reagan administration.

As part of a Soviet propaganda buildup, Moscow radio over the weekend said the South Korean jumbo jet actually was destroyed by a U.S. bomb planted on board and set off by remote control to cover up a failed spy mission. (The Soviets were apparently misquoting the conclusions in an Italian newspaper interview with former U.S. diplomat John Keppel, who remains convinced the airliner was on a spy mission.) Never mind that the Soviets a year ago admitted the Soviet attack. The Kremlin has conditioned its citizens to revisionist contradictions.

Another amateur KAL sleuth in the United States, Yale graduate sociology student David Pearson, meanwhile, is fueling propaganda mills with his KAL dissertation. Pearson has received undue media coverage with claims that there is no way the pilot of the Korean plane could have flown off course. If the Korean plane had indeed flown off course, an American RC-135 reconnaissance plane also in the air at the time should have contacted the pilot rather than test Soviet response capabilities, according to Pearson.

With the monitoring of the KAL airliner by the RC-135 and other intelligence sources (including Japanese), one can wonder why the Koreans weren't notified. But the U.S. explanation is entirely plausible. Those eavesdropping in this tight surveillance area felt the commercial airliner either would be chased out of the Soviet airspace or forced to land, as had happened to other strayed commercial aircraft.

Bipartisan-led congressional intelligence committees have certified that the KAL plane was in no way involved in intelligence activities. The International Civilian Aviation Organization also concluded the plane unintentionally flew off course. But curiously, Pearson gets the ink.

The Reagan administration, moreover, has attempted to repair some of the damage the disaster did to U.S.-Soviet relations by acknowledging the possibility the Russians thought they were shooting at a spy plane, not a jetliner.

Moscow, however, has tried to blame the United States for the incident, believing that if it repeats a combination of facts and falsehood long enough it will develop a life of its own. At home, there are those eager to parrot this nonsense for their own partisan ends.

JACK ANDERSON

Vesco linked to drug smugglers

WASHINGTON — Federal agencies have amassed volumes of evidence linking fugitive American financier Robert Vesco to a mammoth drug smuggling operation in unholy alliance with Nicaraguan government officials. My sources say the profits from the illicit drug traffic have exceeded $25 billion.

Jack Anderson

Firsthand evidence comes from a former Vesco associate in the scheme, Jitze Kooistra, a European dope smuggler who fled to the Bahamas in 1981, one jump ahead of the law. Lured into a trap by U.S. Customs Service agents, Kooistra turned state's evidence and was allowed to plead guilty to relatively minor charges.

Kooistra's account of the Vesco-Nicaraguan connection is laid out in a government report marked "sensitive." It was obtained by my associates Donald Goldberg and Corky Johnson. Here is Kooistra's story:

Kooistra had been smuggling hashish from Iran to Western Europe for two years when his partners were arrested. According to Kooistra's statement, he escaped with $2 million to the Bahamas, where he was approached by a bagman for longtime Prime Minister Lynden Pindling. Kooistra got permission to operate in the Bahamas.

At about the same time, Kooistra met Vesco, who lived nearby and was also making payments to the prime minister through his bagman. Kooistra and a Vesco associate, Adolph Loia, went into dope dealing in the Caribbean, including the sale of Bolivian cocaine to distributors in the United States.

Loia then proposed a venture, to be bankrolled by Vesco, to smuggle coke from Nicaragua to Western Europe. According to Kooistra, Vesco also supplied the Nicaraguan contact, Faradico Vaughn. He was to buy the cocaine in Colombia, bring it into Nicaragua with the connivance of corrupt Sandinista officials and ship it from Nicaragua to Europe. There Kooistra and Loia would distribute it through Nicaraguans — apparently diplomats — whose names were provided by Vaughn.

The first shipment to Europe — 29 kilograms of cocaine — was secreted in a crate containing a marine winch. The share of the profits due to Vaughn and officials in Nicaragua was sent back in cash by a Nicaraguan ambassador using the diplomatic pouch.

As further evidence of Vaughn's — and thus Vesco's — relationship to high officials in Managua, Kooistra said Vaughn at one point proposed a marijuana smuggling operation that would involve the Nicaraguan minister of agriculture.

Kooistra's tale may be challenged, but other sources have provided details about Vesco that lend at least some credibility to his claims. For example:

— Vesco reportedly was introduced to the possibilities of drug dealing four years ago in the Bahamas by a Colombian dope trafficker who advised him on profit-laundering through offshore corporations.

— Vesco and the Colombian began working with the Cubans in 1980, about the time the United States started its crackdown on drug smugglers. The Cubans provided Vesco's smuggling boats a safe haven in return for his agreement to run guns from Cuba to Nicaragua and other Latin American countries.

— Vesco reportedly met Cuban President Fidel Castro in 1982, and the two developed plans to expand the drug traffic and to smuggle high-technology equipment into Cuba from the United States.

CITIZENS WATCH: Joe Spagnalo is a civil service "lifer" who has spent 25 years trying to save the taxpayers money in the complex area of government procurement.

Last year, the Air Force awarded him the Legion of Merit — its highest civilian honor — for his procurement work as an reserve officer.

But he ran into trouble in 1979 when he questioned the award of a sole-source contract to American University in Washington, D.C., to develop a procurement curriculum.

In a report to his boss, William Hunter, Spagnola raised the possibility of a conflict of interest in the award, and pointed out that there were at least three other universities in the Washington area that already had procurement programs that could be offered for less money.

Spagnola's questioning of the contract displeased Hunter. According to Spagnola's records, confirmed by witnesses' affidavits, Hunter told Spagnola at a staff meeting:

"I have a long memory, and if I get to be director some of you may not get promoted. ... Maybe you think you are safe ... but there are ways to get to people ...."

During a two-year stint at the Pentagon, Spagnola's boss, Navy Cmdr. John Summers, was asked by a Hunter associate named William Mathis to help get rid of Spagnola as a "troublemaker," according to Summers' sworn statement. He said Mathis asked him to give Spagnola a poor performance rating — the kiss of death for a civil servant.

"I told Mathis that Spagnola's performance did not warrant a poor evaluation, and that I did not want to be a party to this," Summers stated. He gave Spagnola an exemplary rating. Mathis claimed that Summers had taken his remarks "out of context."

When Spagnola applied for another Pentagon job, he was regarded as the top choice, according to Col. Melvin Brown. But Brown said he decided against Spagnola after hearing repeated rumors that he was a troublemaker. In a sworn statement later, Brown indicated that "in retrospect" he should have ignored the rumors.

Footnote: Spagnola has filed charges against Hunter and Mathis. Hunter did not return calls for comment.

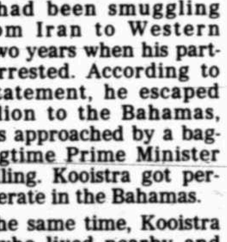
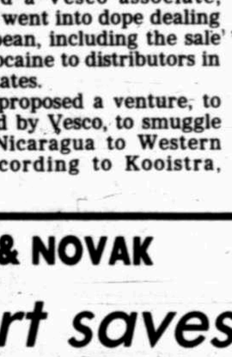
EVANS & NOVAK

Bert saves Fritz embarrassment

WASHINGTON — The Good-Samaritan telephone call that saved Walter F. Mondale from embarrassment in Georgia Aug. 14 came from Bert Lance, whom he had left twisting slowly in the wind after the Democratic National Convention.



Rowland Evans



Robert Novak

Georgia State Democratic Chairman Lance called Mondale two days before the scheduled campaign trip to Macon to warn him. The state's Democratic leaders — including Sen. Sam Nunn, Gov. Joe Frank Harris and Lt. Gov. Zell Miller — would not be on hand to greet Mondale. Lance said he, too, would not be able to attend.

That rescue of Mondale from acute embarrassment was a surprising act of kindness, considering the presidential nominee's refusal to save the high campaign post he gave Lance at San Francisco. But Georgia, once considered Mondale's strongest state in the Deep South, is now no-man's land for him.

MEESE CONFRONTATION

Even if independent counselor Edwin Meese III a clean bill of health, senior political advisers will urge President Reagan to withdraw his nomination to be attorney general.

That ensures confrontation inside the White House. Meese has no intention of quitting short of a specific request from the president. Reagan's political advisers want him to make just that request, arguing that Meese cannot be confirmed by the Senate and remains a running liability so long as the nomination is not withdrawn.

Unlike his White House colleagues, however, Meese commands the loyalty of a constituency within the Republican Party. When he appeared on the convention floor at Dallas, he was nearly mobbed by well-wishing delegates and was greeted as a folk hero by his home-state California delegation.

OFFENDED BY JEANE

United Nations Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick's failure to distinguish in her Republican Convention speech between Mondale liberals and Democrats with tough national security convictions, such as Zbigniew Brzezinski, may have cost President Reagan any chance for endorsement by the Democratic hard-liners.

Some of them had been considering just such a step. But the ringing speech by nominal Democrat Kirkpatrick was a blanket denunciation of the Democratic Party for its foreign and defense policies.

Brzezinski and other hard-line Democrats who are regularly consulted by the Reagan White House quickly let it be known that they were deeply offended by Kirkpatrick's failure to take account of their national security views. AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland, a hard-liner who would never dream of backing Reagan, also was surprised by Kirkpatrick's failure to discriminate.

REAGAN'S CLOSED DOOR

During the recent World Population Conference in Mexico City, James Buckley found that even a former U.S. senator with ambassadorial rank is not expected to communicate directly with the president in the Reagan White House.

As head of the U.S. delegation in Mexico, Buckley needed guidance when an unexpected question — Israeli settlements on the West Bank — was introduced by Third World countries. He conversed over the telephone with national security director Robert McFarlane in the White House. But Buckley felt a personal conversation with Reagan was needed and put in a call to the Oval Office.

The former senator never talked to the president, but that was not the half of it. Buckley was informed in no uncertain language that leapfrogging the chain of command is not the way things are done in this White House.

OPENING MONDALE'S COCOON

High-powered Democrats are quietly moving to persuade a resisting Walter Mondale to open up his campaign, which they consider dangerously isolated, by calling a top-level session with outside political leaders to plot strategy.

Mondale and campaign chairman Jim Johnson worry that any big session with such outsiders as now-neglected former Democratic national chairmen Robert Strauss and John White would be a sign of desperation. Mondale tells intimates it would smack of Jimmy Carter's ruinous 1979 Camp David sessions on national "malaise."

CHARLEY REESE

Believe Ferraro if you want

Richard Milhous Ferraro said she is not a crook. Maybe she isn't. But she is no poor little Queens housewife either.

Charley Reese

Ferraro's feminist fans were more taken with the fact that she didn't cry or lose her temper at last week's press conference than with the substance of what she said. That's no surprise because radical feminists have made it quite clear that they think her physiology is sufficient qualification for high public office.

What Ferraro's press conference revealed was that she likes to play it both ways. She claims she's qualified to be vice president because she's a tough, competent, independent former criminal prosecutor. But then she said, gee fellows, the federal election laws are so complex I had to ask for advice and the man gave me bad advice. What could poor little me do? I asked an expert and he misled me.

Incidentally, the man, David Stein, has said he did not misled the Ferraro's and that he told them that family loans of $130,000 to her 1978 campaign were illegal.

Obviously, either Stein or Ferraro is lying. Stein has offered to take a polygraph examination. Apparently it is considered rude, however to suggest that a vice presidential candidate do the same thing. Ferraro simply stonewalled the press by asserting it's my word against his.

The way the illegal loan was paid back looks suspiciously like an illegal pass-through. Ferraro sold her $25,000 interest in a building to her husband's business partner for $100,000, a phenomenal appreciation in just four months. Unfortunately, though, the building stopped appreciting because a few months later her husband bought her interest back for the same $100,000.

Gee, fellows, I was just lucky and, gosh, I didn't know my husband was going to buy back that interest.

The third issue is whether she wilfully violated federal disclosure laws by claiming an exemption on the form, declaring she had no knowledge of and derived no benefit from her husband's business interests.

The facts are she was an officer of the corporation, owned a one-third interest in it, and certainly did derive benefits from it unless you think a person on an assistant district attorney's salary and later a Congresman's salary can amass a net worth of $700,000. If she did, she ought to be running the World Bank instead of running for vice president.

A functional illiterate might indeed read the federal disclosure laws and misinterpret them. They are not ambiguous. They say plainly that to qualify for the exemption from listing your spouse's income you must have no knowledge, no ownership and no benefit.

Well, gee, fellows, I though I qualified for the exemption.

So the essence of her defense was that she did not knowingly violate federal election laws or federal disclosure laws and that she was just plain lucky in making a $75,000 profit on a $25,000 investment. So there. You take my word for it.

Pardon me, Mrs. Ferraro, but I don't. I don't believe a tough, obviously intelligent, obviously quick-witted, and obviously aggressive lawyer who has amassed a net worth of $700,000, been elected to Congress and nominated for vice president is naive, dim-witted or trusting of outsiders' advice.

However, if you, dear reader, wish to believe her version of events, you may certainly do so. You might even buy her a dog and name it Checkers, after the one Richard Nixon used in his plea to be retained on the ticket as vice president in the 1956 election.

I'll give her credit. She's a classy stonewaller. She does a superb job of alternating between the tough politician and the feminine housewife who's been taken advantage of.

But don't buy the red herrings she tossed out. How much taxes she paid was not an issue. Nor is her integrity a non-issue. If she in fact knowingly violated laws and is lying to cover that up, then we have a pretty Nixon without his foreign policy experience and executive ability.

Maybe she'll draw up an enemies list next. If so, I hope I make it.

Shootings scare travelers, workers on Interstate 95

Associated Press

STRATFORD, Conn. — Three shootings at motorists within a month, one of them fatal, have left toll collectors and motorists on one of the nation's busiest highways worried they could become targets of the seemingly random attacks.

A couple who had been fixing their car Monday were fired at as they dove for cover when they spotted a revolver being held out the window of a van, state police spokesman Lt. Kenneth Kirschner said. The two were not hurt.

On Aug. 5, a former congressional aide was fatally wounded in the head by an unknown assailant. And on Sunday, a bullet struck the rear of a car and grazed the leg of its driver.

All three shootings occurred on Interstate 95 in southwestern Connecticut's Fairfield County, a heavily traveled commuter route that links New York City to New England.

"We don't know why that happens," a toll station worker at the Stratford plaza who refused to give his name said Monday.

Other collectors refused to discuss the incidents, but State Department of Transportation spokesman William Keish said they feared they might be singled out as targets.

Monday's incident occurred around 4 p.m. when a couple whom police refused to identify were in the southbound emergency lane in Stratford, Kirschner said. As the man finished making repairs under the hood, he heard a speeding van approach.

"He looked up over the hood and saw a light brown van approaching him and the passenger was leaning out the passenger-side window with his arm extended with what appeared to be a revolver," Kirschner said.

The man and his wife ducked to the ground and heard what they thought was a gunshot, he said.

The car was not struck and no bullet had been recovered, but police "definitely" believe a gun was fired, Kirschner said.

Nathaniel Young was fatally wounded around 12:30 a.m. Aug. 5 while driving on the turnpike in Stamford.

And on Sunday at 3 a.m. a shot was fired into the back of an eastbound Volkswagen Rabbit in Fairfield, 20 miles northeast of Stamford on I-95. The bullet passed through the rear and front seats and bruised the leg of the driver, whose identity also has been withheld, state police spokesman Adam Berluti said.

Kirschner said a link between Sunday's and Monday's incidents, which occurred about five miles apart, "is a possibility," but he added "We have no evidence whatever in either case that they're connected to the Young case.

"In the VW case, we have a projectile that we sent to the lab that we can compare to the Young case," Kirschner said, adding that test results could be available sometime this week.

Authorities say they know of no motive in the killing of Young, a former aide to Rep. Stewart McKinney, R-Conn.

Police, who have a description of the van and assailant involved in Monday's incident, said that up to three people could have been inside the vehicle.

The state police Major Crime Squad is investigating the shootings.

About 95,000 cars a day travel in each direction on the section of highway, which has been plagued with trouble since June 1983 when a 100-foot section of the Mianus River bridge collapsed, killing three people.

Federal transportation officials blamed the collapse on inadequate state inspection and maintenance, while the state blamed faulty design.

Last week, officials ordered four southbound lanes of a 900-foot bridge over the Norwalk River closed so that a broken support structure could be repaired. Labor Day weekend traffic snarls dissipated when two lanes were reopened to passenger cars on Sunday.

X-rays revealed possible cracks in at least one other support structure. Permanent repairs are expected to take up to three weeks.

Congress returns to Washington for action-packed 22 days

By JANET STAIHAR
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — With the presidential campaigns in full swing, members of Congress return to work Wednesday poised to make an impression on voters back home who are sensitive to issues that'll affect their pocketbooks.

Over the summer, Congress recessed for the conventions of both political parties as well as the long Labor Day weekend. Now they'll be faced with a full plate of legislation served up throughout the next 22 days.

Both the Senate Republican leadership and House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., say they don't want a lame duck session after the November election under any circumstances.

So if the tall stack of unfinished legislative business gets done in one fashion or another, the 98th Congress is set to adjourn during the first week of October. That is a tentative deadline and could easily be extended by the congressional leadership by several days to wrap up a few items on the calendar.

For example, nine money bills covering fiscal 1985 spending for such major agencies as the Defense, Agriculture and Treasury departments still must be approved. If not passed by Oct. 1, a stopgap measure known as a continuing resolution would be needed to keep the agencies in business financially.

House Republican conservatives are sure to take every opportunity available to make speeches in the chamber on the economy, anti-crime legislation, and defense policies in the time allotted for rhetoric prior to and following the regular legislative businesss.

In the past, Democrats have not often used the so-called "special orders" speech-making period at day's end, which like the regular legislative session is televised over the C-SPAN cable television network to millions of American homes.

As the election draws near, however, the Democratic leadership is likely to send the partisan troops to the House floor to challenge the views of GOP conservatives on a more frequent basis.

Up for grabs in the fall election are all 435 seats in the House of Representatives and 33 of the Senate seats.

The House will complete action this week on legislation easing regulations for approval of cheap generic drugs and granting an extended patent life for new drug discoveries.

Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. has assigned top priority to appropriations measures necessary to fund government agencies for the fiscal year starting Oct. 1.

House Ways and Means Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., is expected to hold speedy hearings on politically popular legislation to guarantee retirees a cost-of-living increase in Social Security benefits even if inflation falls below 3 percent, the current trigger for such increases. The administration-supported increase was passed by the Senate, and House approval is considered a sure bet.

On the Senate agenda this week is legislation that would redefine who can own a bank. Also it would direct the Federal Reserve Board to speed up the processing of paychecks in order to avoid a long "hold" time when the money is not credited to a customer's account.

Many banks refuse to credit a check to a customer's account until the bank is absolutely certain the check isn't going to bounce. Consumers complain of waiting weeks for the process to work in the case of out-of-state checks.

The fate of immigration reform legislation remains uncertain.

The House and Senate passed different versions so conferees may attempt to come up with a compromise. Generally, the bills would grant amnesty to many illegal aliens now in the country while imposing stiff sanctions on employers who hire undocumented foreign workers. One key stumbling block is a House provision that would allow thousands of foreign workers to come into the United States temporarily each year to harvest crops.

Because Hispanic groups strongly oppose the immigration bill, leaders of both political parties are fearful it could cost them votes in November.

Convicted killers in Louisiana, Florida face execution this week

Associated Press

Two convicted killers, one sentenced to death for slaying his two young children, face the electric chair this week unless courts block their executions with last-minute action.

Earnest Knighton Jr. will die in Louisiana's electric chair shortly after midnight tonight unless the U.S. Supreme Court steps in. He was convicted of the 1981 killing of a service station owner.

Ernest John Dobbert Jr. is scheduled to die in Florida's electric chair Thursday morning. He lost another round in his legal battle to stay alive Monday night.

U.S. District Judge Susan Black issued her ruling shortly before midnight Monday after hearing arguments in the case Saturday afternoon, said Dobbert's attorney Steve Malone.

Dobbert was sentenced to die in 1974 for the Dec. 31, 1971, slaying of his 9-year-old daughter, Kelly. He also was convicted of second-degree murder in the 1972 death of his 7-year-old son, Ryder Scott.

Woman aims at burglar, hits child

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — A woman awakened by the sound of someone trying to break into her house fired a gun at the kitchen door, but the shot killed her 6-year-old daughter who had wandered into the line of fire, police said.

Angel Wilson died Monday at St. Elizabeth Medical Center less than two hours after being shot once in the chest with a .22-caliber gun, police said. The mother, Darlene Wilson, was not charged.

Lt. Michael Sammons said Ms. Wilson was awakened by a noise at the kitchen door of her apartment in the DeSoto Bass Courts complex. He said she stood at one side of the kitchen and fired a shot at the door.

"She didn't even know the little girl was awake and walking around," Sammons said. "When she fired the gun, the girl ran right into the line of fire."

The burglar apparently had been trying to force his way into the kitchen but was frightened away by the gunshot, Sammons said.

Driver charged in tanker mishap

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — A gasoline truck explosion that sent flaming fuel racing through storm drains and set 21 cars on fire left the truck driver seriously injured and a garbage truck driver charged with reckless driving, authorities said.

"We were really lucky we didn't come up with more injuries. The potential was there," Fire Chief Tom Gardner said.

The explosion occurred Monday when a garbage truck backing into a street collided with an Exxon tank truck carrying 8,500 gallons of gasoline.

The Exxon driver, William Scott, 58, of Virginia Beach, suffered first- and second-degree burns on his face, legs and arms. Scott, who jumped clear just before the explosion, was listed in serious condition today at Norfolk General Hospital.

Tralton Cooper, 32, said he was backing the garbage truck out of a driveway at the Ronald McDonald House when he collided with the Exxon truck. Cooper later was charged with reckless driving.

Teens riot at drive-in theater

GARDNER, Mass. (AP) — About 200 teen-agers went on a rampage at an all-night drive-in movie theater, lighting bonfires, throwing bottles and smashing the windshield of a fire engine, police said.

It took 1½ hours for state troopers and police from five towns to quell the disturbance at the Mohawk Drive-In Theater early Monday, authorities and witnesses said.

More than 2,000 people were at the drive-in when the disturbance broke out, Patrolman Robert Babineau said. Firefighters called to put out bonfires were attacked with rocks and bottles by the youths.

The windshield and the red light on top of one fire truck was broken and another fire truck was dented, authorities said.

Firefighter John Loiselle was hit by a thrown bottle, but police said he declined treatment. No other injuries were reported.

Police arrested nine adults and a juvenile, Babineau said. Most were to be arraigned in Gardner District Court today.

David Fedeli of Princeton, owner of the theater, said 2,000 people were at the drive-in for the all-night movies — which included "Rocky III," "Reckless" and "The Waitresses."

Fedeli said that only about 100 patrons were causing trouble. He said police put out the same small bonfire several times before calling in firefighters at about 2 a.m.

Teachers' strikes disrupt school schedules

By MARY MacVEAN
Associated Press Writer

San Francisco's 3,800 teachers threatened to walk off the job but Chicago's 24,700 instructors agreed to open classes under an expired contract as strikes by 4,600 teachers in seven states today disrupted school for 99,200 pupils.

Illinois was hardest hit by the walkouts, with more than 3,200 teachers on strike in eight districts. Strikes continued in Michigan, Louisiana, Indiana, Pennsylvania, Washington and Rhode Island.

School opens Wednesday for 62,600 children in San Francisco, but the Classroom Teachers Association said it could call a strike today without "significant" movement toward a new contract, said Judy Dellamonica, union president. Teachers were expected to report for an orientation session today.

"Our bargaining team is extremely frustrated," Ms. Dellamonica said. District negotiators "simply have not offered us any money."

The teachers' demands are "reasonable," but the city can't afford to grant them, said district negotiator Al Cheng.

"We have enough money for about a 1 percent raise for all certified employees," said district spokesman Felix Duag. Teachers with at least 21 years' experience and 60 post-graduate credits earn $31,800.

One Illinois strike was settled Monday night and another began today as walkouts affected nearly 74,000 students statewide. Most of the strikes began early last week.

In Poplar Grove, in northern Illinois, 58 striking teachers voted Monday night to accept a school board offer, and classes will begin today for 966 students.

But teachers in the Kildeer-Countryside School District 96, north of Chicago, called a strike for today. The district's 17,700 pupils attended two full days of classes last week.

And in Rockford, the school board was to consider a proposal from striking teachers today. That strike has idled 29,500 students in the state's second largest district.

But school will begin on time Wednesday for more than 400,000 pupils in Chicago, where the Teachers' Union House of Delegates, which had threatened a walkout, voted Monday to work until Nov. 1 under a recently expired contract while mediation continues. The 24,700 teachers begin work today.

Teachers in the Windy City walked out for a record 15 days last year before agreeing to a 5 percent salary increase.

Strikes by 435 teachers in six Michigan districts idled 10,146 pupils. And the Michigan Education Association said strikes were "probable" in nine other districts. Association President Larry Chunovich said 117 districts remained without contracts.

A strike begins today in Salin, after negotiations between 160 teachers and the district broke down Monday, said union spokeswoman Jan Henry. The school board canceled classes for the 3,000 students for the duration of the dispute. No new talks were scheduled.

After seven hours of talks Monday, the Saginaw Education Association and school officials agreed to accept a state mediator's proposal, said schools spokesman Mike Manley. The 920 teachers and 18,000 pupils begin school today.

But a strike loomed in Grand Rapids, where classes begin Wednesday. Some of the districts' 1,800 teachers were to picket today after contract talks stalled Monday night in the state's second-largest district.

At least one vehicle in pileup explodes; Seven persons killed

CHICAGO (AP) — A five-car collision on an expressway turned into a fiery deathtrap when at least one of the vehicles' gas tanks exploded, killing seven people and injuring two others, police said.

Four of the dead were children, authorities said.

Lake Shore Drive was closed for about an hour Monday night while the charred wreckage was cleared. Three of the five cars burned.

The names of the dead, including an infant, three children, two adult males and an adult female, were not released immediately by police. Authorities were to identify the victims through dental records today. All seven were dead on arrival at Henrotin Hospital, according to hospital spokeswoman Candy Fong.

An eyewitness told police two northbound cars collided while trying to avoid a southbound vehicle that had crossed the median.

PUBLIC NOTICE

AT&T Communications of the Southwest, Inc., has filed with the Public Utility Commission of Texas (PUC) a proposal to reduce intrastate, interLATA long distance revenues to offset proposed increases in specialized service rates for private line, WATS, 800, OCC facilities and directory assistance services. The proposed tariff restructure will not result in any increases in the overall revenues of the Company. The proposed effective date for the tariffs is September 20, 1984. All customers and classes of customers will be affected by this filing.

The restructure in the basic long distance service (MTS) results in an overall decrease in the revenues received by the Company from such service of approximately $100 million. While this proposed restructure results in an overall decrease in revenue, certain MTS rates are proposed to be increased to more nearly recover the access charges approved by the PUC for such service.

AT&T Communications has also filed restructured tariffs designed to more closely recover access costs for private line, DATAPHONE* Digital Service (DDS), OCC facilities, WATS, 800 and directory assistance services. These restructured tariffs result in an approximate overall revenue increase of approximately $100 million from increases in its WATS, 800, DDS, OCC facilities and private line rates, and institution of a charge for directory assistance.

The result of these proposed tariff changes and the restructure of our service offerings is to more nearly recover access costs from those services for which such access costs are incurred.

This proposed restructure results in no increase in overall revenue to AT&T Communications and is not a major rate change as that term is defined in Section 43(b) of the Public Utility Regulatory Act.

A complete copy of all tariffs and rate schedules is on file with the Texas Public Utility Commission at Austin, Texas. Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the Commission as soon as possible. A request to intervene or participate or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information also may be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission Consumer Affairs Division at (512) 458-0223 or (512) 458-0227 or (512) 458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf.

Wind-driven waves halted salvage operations aboard the Mont Louis, which sank last week after colliding with a Belgian ferry. Salvage operators have anchored a platform close to the boat and cut a whole in its side.

Winds strand salvage attempt

Associated Press

OSTEND, Belgium — High waves driven by gale-force winds in the North Sea today kept salvage workers from retrieving the radioactive cargo from a sunken French freigher off the Belgian coast, a salvage company official said.

"For the moment we cannot do anything," Henk Drenth, a spokesman for Smit Tak International in Rotterdam, said of efforts to salvage the 4,210-ton Mont Louis. The vessel sank Aug. 25 with 30 containers of lightly radioactive uranium hexafluoride aboard.

"The weather is very bad. The wind is too strong. We may try something at low tide in the afternoon," Drenth added.

On Monday, stormy weather also made retrieving the cargo impossible. But workers, armed with cutting torches, succeeded in slicing a 9-foot by 42-foot hole in one hold containing three containers of uranium hexafluoride.

The Mont Louis was en route to the Soviet Union where its cargo was to be reprocessed into enriched uranium for use in West European power plants. It collided with a passenger ferry and sank about 12 miles off the Belgian coast. No one was injured, but the ship now is lying on its starboard side in 46 feet of water at low tide.

So far, one of 22 empty containers aboard the Mont Louis has been hoisted onto a large pontoon anchored off the wreck.

"We have also cleared away three broken crates that floated inside the first hold," said Drenth, adding that an "empty trailer" was lying on top of the first containers with uranium hexafluoride that are to be salvaged.

Since the Mont Louis sank, Belgian and French experts have checked sea water near and inside the Mont Louis for radioactive contamination, and have reported that there is none.

On Monday, officials also checked a liquid that had leaked from the empty container, but test results showed no significant acid pollution, Environment Ministry spokesman Jan Peeters said in Brussels.

Soviet power divided between tough Gromyko, ill Chernenko

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON — Kremlin leadership has splintered under Konstantin U. Chernenko, giving veteran diplomat Andrei Gromyko direct control over Soviet foreign policy during a period of possibly unprecedented rigidity, says former U.S. National Security Adviser Brent Scowcroft.

With powers divided along functional lines, and the 72-year-old Chernenko not seen in public since mid-July and reportedly in ill health, the Soviets are operating without a "paramount leader" in overall charge, the former Nixon and Ford administration official said.

In a recent interview, Scowcroft said the Soviet foreign minister doesn't just implement foreign policy, "I think Gromyko is, in fact, the foreign policy."

Scowcroft described Gromyko as "tough, rigid" and equipped with "a very large treasure house of insults and slights." His dominant role heightens doubts the Soviets might be prepared to resume nuclear weapons reduction talks with the United States after the Nov. 6 election, Scowcroft said.

The former presidential adviser said he would not recommend President Reagan seek a meeting with Gromyko. "The worst thing we can do at this point is to appear to go running after the Soviets," Scowcroft said. "This would allow Gromyko to say 'if you listened to me all along, I know how to handle the Americans. You just be really tough with them and they'll come running.' This we shouldn't do."

On the other hand, Scowcroft said, it might be a good idea for Secretary of State George P. Shultz to see Gromyko while both are attending the U.N. General Assembly session next month in New York. "I'd be inclined to be open to a meeting, but not to push a meeting, and in a sense to leave the initiative to the Soviets," he said.

Scowcroft, a retired Air Force general, is now a private consultant. He headed the special commission that recommended Reagan proceed with deployment of the NX missile and attempted to deliver a message from the president to Chernenko last March in Moscow. He did not get to see the Soviet leader.

He said the current "decentralization" in the Kremlin has one possible precedent — the power-sharing period immediately after Stalin's death in 1953.

Scowcroft attributes the current impasse in U.S.-Soviet relations more to "the kind of rigidities that have set in" than to Soviet objections to Reagan, his rhetoric and tactics. And yet, Scowcroft said, the administration lacks "a central concept" about U.S.-Soviet relations.

"What is needed, somehow, is an agreed concept that's going to be followed about how to deal with the Russians, and I'm not sure that exists," he said.

Anti-abortionists fight destruction of embyros

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Anti-abortion groups said today they will try to stop state officials from destroying two frozen embryos, whose fate was in put in limbo by the death of an American couple in a plane crash.

Scientists have said that the embryos, created with the aid of "test-tube" techniques, were unlikely to survive thawing and implantation into the womb of a surrogate mother. Despite the pessimism for survival, a government committee's recommendation for destruction has unleashed outcries of protest.

The head of the test-tube baby program at Queen Victoria Medical Center in Melbourne, where the embryos were created and are being stored, also came out strongly today against the committee's recommendation.

The ethical and scientific dilemma arose after a Los Angeles couple, Elsa and Mario Rios, were killed in a plane crash in Chile last year. The wealthy couple had been trying to have a child through the method of in vitro fertilization, in which a woman's eggs are extracted from an ovary and fertilized in a container.

Mining talks in danger

LONDON (AP) — The head of the coal industry said the proposed new talks aimed at ending Britain's 25-week-old coal strike might not take place if miners' leaders continue to refuse to discuss closing uneconomical pits.

The Monday warning by Ian MacGregor, chairman of the National Coal Board, came after the National Union of Mineworkers won backing from the giant Trades Union Congress in the miners' fight to prevent closures and save pit jobs.

The strike has sparked two supporting national dock strikes this summer. About a third of Britain's 35,000 longshoremen have been on strike since Aug. 24.

Black rioting continues

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Police fired rubber bullets to drive off looters and arsonists today after 22 blacks were killed and more than 200 injured in the worst day of black rioting in eight years, police and news reports said.

Mobs of rioters enraged by rent increases hurled petrol bombs and bricks at police, barricaded roads and set fire to dozens of buildings from Sunday to Monday night in three segregated black townships near Vereeniging, 45 miles south of Johannesburg.

The death toll rose to 22 as more bodies were recovered from destroyed buildings and areas police could not enter Monday, said Maj. Steve van Rooyen at police headquarters in Pretoria. He said it was unclear how many victims were shot by police.

Chun's trip protested

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Shouting anti-Japanese slogans, about 500 students demonstrated today at Seoul's Sungkyunkwan University against President Chun Doo-hwan's trip this week to Tokyo.

The students tried to charge off campus, but were held back by about an equal number of riot police, witnesses said. Students hurled rocks and police replied with tear gas.

The confrontation came after a campus symposium on Korea-Japan relations. A student leader said several thousand students from other universities and colleges in the capital city of Seoul had planned to take part, but police kept them from approaching Sungkyunkwan.

Attack draws protest

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — The leftist Sandinista government has sent the United States a note protesting the aerial attack of a military school and village near the Honduran border.

The note sent Monday to Secretary of State George P. Shultz claimed Saturday's attack by four airplanes and a helicopter was the product of "the polemic of terrorism carried out by the government of the United States against Nicaragua."

The pilot and two other people aboard the helicopter were killed, as were two adults and four children on the ground. Defense Minister Humberto Ortega said Sunday the helicopter pilot was "tall and blond" and "could be a North American." He said he also could be Honduran.

Cowboys lower Hogeboom on Rams, 20-13

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — While Danny White calls it an experiment, Gary Hogeboom figures to be the first-string quarterback for the Dallas Cowboys for years to come if his first National Football League regular-season start is an accurate measure of his talents.

Hogeboom set a franchise record for completions in a game Monday night as the Cowboys, as they usually do, opened the season with a victory.

"I had fun, hopefully there's more to come," Hogeboom said after completing 33 of his 47 passing attempts for 343 yards to lead the Cowboys to a 20-13 come-from-behind win over the Los Angeles Rams. "I was very pleased with my performance."

Dallas Coach Tom Landry announced last Tuesday that Hogeboom would replace White as the Cowboys' starting quarterback. White had been the starter since Roger Staubach retired after the 1979 season.

White said he had mixed emotions watching the nationally televised game at Anaheim Stadium.

"It was exciting to see how well the defense played," he said. "We have the potential to win the Super Bowl with defense like that."

Asked about his future, White said, "I won't make a permanent decision until this experiment is over."

Ironically, the record Hogeboom broke was set by White, who completed 31 throws last Nov. 13 against San Diego.

The triumph was the 19th for the Cowboys in their last 20 season-openers — their only loss coming at the hands of the Pittsburgh Steelers in 1982 — and gave them an 11-0 record in openers on the road.

It also enabled Landry to become the second-winningest coach in NFL history.

Landry, the only head coach the Cowboys have had since the franchise was formed in 1960, has 235 victories to 234 for former Green Bay Coach Curly Lambeau.

The late George Halas, who coached the Chicago Bears, is the all-time leader with 325 wins.

The Cowboys won despite committing four turnovers in the first 16½ minutes and five in the game. They trailed 13-0 after only 12:32 of play. Then, their defense took over and Hogeboom began hitting with regularity.

MISSED FIELD GOALS—None.

"I thought the key to the Dallas win was their defense, they were outstanding," said Los Angeles Coach John Robinson. "It was a game we let get away from us. I thought our defense played well but we left them on the field too long."

The Cowboys had the ball for 37 minutes, 53 seconds of the game and finished with 436 yards in total offense to only 204 for Los Angeles.

Yet Dallas fell behind after 3:01 of play, didn't tie the contest until Rafael Septien's 52-yard field goal with 13:44 remaining, and didn't go ahead until Tony Dorsett raced seven yards for a touchdown with 3:56 left to complete the scoring.

Los Angeles running back Eric Dickerson, who scored his team's only touchdown on a 2-yard run in the opening minutes, had a good game, finishing with 138 yards on 21 carries. Dickerson led the NFL in rushing as a rookie last year with 1,808 yards.

However, the Cowboys did a superb job in defending against the pass. Quarterback Vince Ferragamo of the Rams completed only 11 of his 33 throws for just 84 yards and was intercepted four times.

"Eric ran the ball well but our timing was off on our passing," Ferragamo said. "They made us throw quick and double-covered our receivers. The momentum totally changed after we were up 13-0. We had our chances but didn't capitalize."

Dickerson's touchdown came immediately after Hogeboom was hit while attempting to pass by Los Angeles linebacker George Andrews and fumbled. Defensive end Jack Youngblood of the Rams scooped the ball up and ran nine yards to the Dallas 2-yard line.

The Rams got their other points on field goals of 31 and 36 yards by Mike Lansford later in the first quarter. The first three-pointer followed a 23-yard interception return by Gary Green to the Dallas 44-yard line; the second came after a fumble by Dorsett was recovered by Eric Harris at the Cowboys' 25.

The Cowboys made it 13-7 on a 19-yard touchdown pass from Hogeboom to Doug Cosbie with 5:51 left in the second quarter, and 13-10 on a 31-yard field goal by Septien with 6:01 remaining in the third period.

After the Cowboys drove 69 yards in nine plays to take their 20-13 lead, the Rams posed one final threat, getting as far as the Dallas 39-yard line. But on a fourth-and-one play, Dickerson was thrown for a 1-yard loss by defensive tackle Randy White.

"It was the exact same play as the Ram touchdown," said White, who was a holdout until a week ago Monday. "Dickerson gets the ball and picks his hole. I beat the center's cut block and was able to stop the play."

Three Dallas players established personal single-game highs in receptions — Dorsett caught 10 passes for 66 yards; Doug Donley had nine catches for 137 yards; and Cosbie had eight receptions for 99 yards. Dorsett also rushed for 81 yards on 25 carries.

"This one will give us confidence with a long season ahead," Landry said. "It will be a very interesting season with a 40 percent turnover in personnel and 12 rookies."

Landry didn't even mention the new starter at quarterback.

"I was very pleased with his performance," Landry said of Hogeboom, who is beginning his fifth professional season. "I felt he had that kind of game in him. We are blessed to have two great quarterbacks."

Winslow begins early retirement

Chargers, All-Pro reach contract impasse

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Just how good would the San Diego Chargers be without their best receiver, Dan Fouts' favorite target, the leading pass catcher in the National Football League over the past five years?

"We may have to find out," says General Manager Johnny Sanders, whose club has informed tight end Kellen Winslow that it will not consider renegotiating his contract until he rejoins the team.

Winslow, 26, began a self-imposed "retirement" Monday, an action he said was precipitated by the Chargers' refusal to raise his salary from the $210,000 he currently earns to an annual figure of about $700,000.

In doing so, he completed a contractural ~~circle that could keep~~ him out of action this season. Winslow says he won't return to camp unless his salary is renegotiated; the Chargers say they won't talk until the tight end is back in camp.

San Diego management has written a letter to Winslow telling him they may exercise their option to place him on "reserve" if he does not report within five days.

"Once he's on the (reserve) list, we couldn't trade him," Sanders said. "He couldn't play with another team, Canadian team, or USFL team. (And) I think the Charger policy is that if a guy is not in camp and practicing with his team full speed, there are no negotiations."

It could be a bitter pill for both sides to swallow. Winslow, if placed on reserve, would be forced to sit out after five star-studded seasons in which he has pulled down 347 passes. He caught four passes in the Chargers' 42-13 drubbing of Minnesota on Sunday before announcing his decision to depart.

"I feel I've been shafted. We had a deal," said Winslow, who claims former Chargers owner Gene Klein had promised to rip up his old contract and draw up a new one satisfying his salary demands.

Klein, who this summer sold his 56 percent controlling interest in the club to Alex Spanos, told the San Diego Union he never made such a promise, only that "I would take a look at the contract and try to make it fair and equitable for everyone."

Winslow says Spanos was the one who nixed the new contract being discussed last week. Chargers officials said that was not true.

Coach Don Coryell's team, meanwhile, is smarting from the possible loss of Winslow, a four-time Pro Bowl participant who caught 35 touchdown passes in his first five seasons.

Coryell is trying to revive his troops after a dismal 6-10 showing in 1983, but the Chargers have had a multitude of personnel problems. Chief among those is the team's inability to sign first-round draft pick Mossy Cade of Texas, a cornerback counted on for much-needed defensive support.

In addition, starting offensive linemen Don Macek and Billy Shields walked out of camp because of contract disputes. Shields was traded to the Vikings, and Macek missed nearly two weeks.

The Chargers gave up a No. 2 draft pick to the New York Jets for more defensive aid, linemen Abdul Salaam and Kenny Neil. But a disgruntled Neil was traded away, and Salaam was soon waived.

So San Diego began the 1984 season with essentially the same defense it had a year ago — a defense that yielded 372 yards and 29 points a game. The Chargers' best hope is to outscore their opponents.

"Maybe I'll pay him," quipped Fouts, who sat out the first 10 weeks of the 1977 season because of a contract dispute.

Winslow left the team Sunday in Minneapolis and headed for his home in East St. Louis, Ill., where he says he'll stay this week.

Sacramento team triumphs in coastal showdown

By BOB BRUNDAGE

Mr. A's Express of Sacramento, Calif. now has a nice trophy to stick in a display case for all to see, one that reads: "1984 Amateur Softball Association Class A Women's Slowpitch Softball Tournament Champions."

They won that trophy Monday afternoon at Hogan Park with a 13-3 victory over Sonny's Bar-B-Q in the if necessary championship game.

It was the third time the two teams met on Monday, and the second time the Express came away winners.

Mr. A's opened the final day of play with a 7-2 victory over Sonny's, dropping the Tallahassee, Fla. team into the loser's bracket with its' first loss of the tournament.

Sonny's went on to meet the Seattle A's, a team they defeated Sunday night, 20-2, after the A's eliminated Playmates of Sacramento 13-9 in a loser's bracket game. Sonny's threatened a second blowout over the A's but had to hang on in the final innings for an 18-16 victory.

That win punched Sonny's into a championship game rematch against the lone unbeaten team of the tournament, Mr. A's.

Kent Porter/Reporter-Telegram

Winnie Dodgion of Sonny's Bar B-Cue eyes the ball in the Amateur Softball Association Class A women's national championships Monday. Sonny's lost in the championship game.

IN THE first championship game, Sonny's went into the top of the seventh inning trailing 3-2. Jo Anne Graf led off the frame with a single and moved to third on Carol O'Domski's single to right. Graf tied the game when Express third baseman Joann Van Vliet let the throw from Terry Mascaro slip away. O'Domski moved to third on the error and scored the go-ahead run on Cricket Lee's sacrifice fly to center field.

Now down by one, Mr. A's rallied when Wonnie Frazier beat out an infield single and moved to second on shortstop Sandy Sims' throwing error. Shelly Van Drimmlen moved Frazier to third with a single up the middle and she came home on Van Vliet's sac-fly to left for yet another tie score.

Sonny's Susan Limestahl led off the eighth inning with a triple and scored the eventual winning run on Cathy Gooding's sac-fly. The Tallahassee team stopped Mr.s A's in the bottom half to claim the 5-4 victory.

THE LOSS was Mr. A's first of the tournament and the two teams met for the final time a few minutes later. This time, Mr. A's jumped out to a 7-1 lead after two innings and added six insurance runs in the sixth enroute to the 13-3 victory. Katros provided the finally Express runs with a three-RBI inside-the-park home run.

The victory left Mr. A's with a 7-1 tournament record. Second place Sonny's, also second in last year's national tournament, finished at 6-2; Seattle A's in third at 5-2; Playmates fourth at 4-2 and Armed Forces of Memphis, Tenn. fifth at 6-2.

"We won and I'm happy and it's super," said Mr. A's Assistant Coach Brian Merrida. "What else can I say. This is a team that belived it could win every softball game it play. That's the way they are and with that kind of feeling, it's inevitable that we'll win. They have the coaches believing in them."

And win they did. For the year, the Express put together an impressive 86-17-1 record, placing no worse than second place in any of the 10 tournaments they competed in.

"Our season has been really good," said Coach Russ Anderson. "In every tournament we've been in we've finished in second or better. In 10 tournaments we have five seconds and five firsts."

While both coaches were extremely pleased with the way their team performed in the tournament, the players were happy with the job the coaches did in getting them there.

"Our coach, Russ, is probably the most dedicated person on the team," said Express rover and second team All-American Thalia Long. "Today we finally made his dream come ture. He's been trying for 10 years to win a national tournament and we're finally bringing it to him. We couldn't have done it without or coaching staff. They're great."

Long also gave praise to her teammates.

"I played terrible but the team played excellent," she said. "A lot of people really played great for us and the bench sacrificed a lot. It was the players on the bench that held us together."

The mood in the Express dugout after the game, obviously, was one of complete joy.

"I'm so happy," said center fielder and first team All-American Wonnie Frazier. "I always knew we could do it but I'm glad we did it now. This is the best thing that ever happened to this team and I'm glad I was a part of it. We're taking the gold back to California. We had a great time in Midland, Texas, but now I'm ready to go home."

Sutter's record 38th save drops Mets to six back

Associated Press

With the streaking Chicago Cubs playing almost perfect baseball, the New York Mets can't afford any slip-ups — or very many showdowns with the likes of Bruce Sutter.

Sutter was at his late-inning best Monday night, limiting the Mets to one hit over two innings in recording a National League-record 38th save as St. Louis stopped New York 7-3.

The defeat was only the second in 10 games for New York, but the Mets nonetheless lost ground during that stretch because the Cubs were winning eight of nine. The latest Cub triumph was a 4-3, 12-inning decision over Philadelphia that boosted the Chicago lead in the National League East to six games with only 25 left in the season.

"We are in a position right now where we have to play our tails off," said New York first baseman Keith Hernandez. "We can't afford to fall any farther back than we are."

In other National League action, San Diego used home runs by Kevin McReynolds and Terry Kennedy to beat Los Angeles 4-3 and extend the Padres' lead in the Western Division to 10 games over Houston, a 6-4 loser at Atlanta; Pittsburgh blanked Montreal 3-0 behind the pitching of Larry McWilliams; and Dusty Baker walked with the bases loaded to force in the deciding run as San Francisco slipped by Cincinnati 4-3.

The Mets bolted to a 2-0 lead after three innings on Darryl Strawberry's double and a sacrifice fly by Hernandez, but St. Louis used home runs by George Hendrick and David Green to build a 5-3 edge after six innings against Met starter Ron Darling, 11-6.

On came Sutter to snap the NL save record of 37 set by Cincinnati's Clay Carroll in 1972 and tied by Rollie Fingers of San Diego in 1978 and Sutter, then with Chicago, in 1979.

"Bruce's ball is something," said Hernandez. "It's breaking better than it did in Chicago. It doesn't matter how you get them out. He and Rollie Fingers and Sparky Lyle are the greatest relievers the game has ever seen."

"I've been close before and didn't get the record," said Sutter, referring to that 1979 campaign. "Tonight, I wanted to get it out of the way and just go on."

Sutter's next target is the major-league record of 45 saves, set last year by Dan Quisenberry of the Kansas City Royals.

National League

Cubs 4, Phillies 3

Chicago won its 21st game in 30 starts when Kiko Garcia misplayed a two-out ground ball, allowing the Cubs' Ryne Sandberg to race home with the deciding run in the 12th inning. Sandberg slapped a one-out ground ball and reached base when teammate Richie Hebner was trapped off second base. But Sandberg kept the inning alive by swiping second and then came home when Garcia booted Gary Matthews' grounder.

Earlier, Mike Schmidt hit his 29th homer of the year for Philadelphia while Ron Cey hit his 24th and Matthews his 10th for the Cubs.

George Frazier, 4-2, got the win in relief of Chicago starter Rick Sutcliffe, who didn't get the decision despite allowing only three hits and striking out 15 in eight innings. Renie Martin, 1-2, absorbed the loss.

Padres 4, Dodgers 3

McReynolds' 20th homer of the season gave San Diego a 1-0 lead and Kennedy's 12th of the year, a two-run blow in the fourth, provided the difference for San Diego. Mark Thurmond, 12-7, scattered six hits in 6 1-3 innings. Luis DeLeon and Craig Lefferts threw hitless relief the rest of the way, with Lefferts earning his 10th save. Jerry Reuss, 2-7, took the loss, which dropped the defending Western Division champions 10 games below .500 and 15 games back of the Padres.

Braves 6, Astros 4

Dale Murphy's 29th homer tied Mike Schmidt for the league lead and snapped a 4-4 deadlock in the fifth. Craig McMurtry, 9-14, went six innings for the victory as a last-minute replacement for the scheduled starter, Pascual Perez. Atlanta Manager Joe Torre yanked Perez from the lineup when the controversial right-hander arrived at the stadium an hour late. Gene Garber pitched three innings for his seventh save.

Vern Ruhle, 1-9, took the pitching loss. Jose Cruz drove in three runs for the Astros with a bases-loaded triple in the fifth.

Pirates 3, Expos 0

McWilliams, 9-9, gave up only three hits and didn't allow a runner past second base in shutting down the Expos. The performance lowered McWilliams' earned-run average to 2.41, best in the National League. Kent Tekulve got his 11th save by pitching the ninth.

Marvell Wynne drove in the only run McWilliams needed with a sacrifice fly in the third inning off Montreal starter Steve Rogers, 5-13. A Rogers wild pitch in the fourth allowed Tony Pena to score the second run and Jason Thompson completed the scoring with a solo homer, his 15th, in the sixth.

Giants 4, Reds 3

Cincinnati starter Jeff Russell, 6-16, loaded the bases in the ninth on singles by Scot Thompson and Joel Youngblood and an intentional walk to Johnnie LeMaster. John Franco came out of the bullpen to face Baker, who walked on a 3-1 pitch to force in the deciding run in a battle of Western Division cellar-dwellers. Greg Minton, 3-8, got the victory in relief. Eric Davis hit his fourth homer in a losing effort.

Twins end Royal pain, win 4-1

Associated Press

It was time for the upstart Minnesota Twins, losers of five straight games, seven of their last eight and all but one game of their lead in the American League West, to prove their mettle.

Manager Billy Gardner figured the time had come with their arrival in Kansas City for the start of an important three-game series with the second-place Royals, who had closed the gap to a game.

"I thought before the game that the worst possible thing would be for us to get swept," Gardner said after the Twins squelched that possibility with a 4-1 victory Monday night. "It's a big series, but we got a long way to go."

The Twins got good pitching from John Butcher, who limited Kansas City to just four hits over 7 2-3 innings, and relievers Ed Hodge and Ron Davis, who collected his 26th save.

They took advantage of a second-inning error by Royals shortstop Buddy Biancalana that led to two unearned runs, and cut down two Kansas City baserunners attempting to stretch hits.

"After the way we'd been playing, we had to get a big effort from our pitchers and Butcher did a helluva job for us," Gardner said. "He kept us in the ballgame and we made two big plays at second base."

Jorge Orta led off the Kansas City second with a hit to right-center, but was thrown out by about 10 feet by center fielder Kirby Puckett when he tried for a double. Don Slaught led off the sixth with a single and was thrown out by left fielder Dave Meier.

The Twins got all the runs they needed following Biancalana's error when Ron Washington singled to make it 2-0.

"We're just fortunate we could take advantage of it," Washington said of Biancalana's error. "We got two runs early and that ended up being enough. It's always important when you come into a town to get the first game, and we did that tonight."

Bud Black, 14-11, who gave up only six hits in eighth innings, was the loser.

Indians 6, Angels 5

Mel Hall and Joe Carter homered and Mike Hargrove rapped a two-run double to back Steve Comer as Cleveland defeated California.

Comer, 4-8, yielded seven hits while striking out three and walking one in seven innings. Jamie Easterly, the fifth Cleveland pitcher, got the final two outs for his second save.

Hall lined his sixth homer in the first, but the Angels tied it in the second on a double by Brian Downing and a single by Rob Wilfong. The Indians went ahead to stay in the second on singles by Pat Tabler and Hargrove and Broderick Perkins' pinch-hit sacrifice fly.

The Indians made it 5-1 on Hargrove's fifth-inning double and 6-1 on Carter's eighth homer an inning later.

Reggie Jackson keyed a four-run California eighth with a two-run single.

Red Sox 8, Brewers 5

Jim Rice keyed a decisive four-run fifth inning with his 300th career home run and Tony Armas added his major-league-leading 36th homer to pace Boston.

Rice's 24th homer tied the game 3-3 in the fifth off Jamie Cocanower, 8-15, before Rich Gedman put Boston ahead with a two-run single. Armas extended the lead with a two-run shot in the sixth.

Dennis Boyd, 10-9, struck out seven batters, walked two and gave up seven hits in six innings. Bob Stanley picked up his 19th save.

Yankees 2, Blue Jays 0

Joe Cowley scattered three hits over eight innings and Bobby Meacham drove in the deciding run with a sacrifice fly in the seventh as New York blanked Toronto.

Dave Winfield hit a solo homer, his 17th, leading off the eighth to provide a cushion for Cowley, 6-1, who picked up his fifth straight victory. Cowley, who struck out four and walked four, bested Luis Leal, 13-5, who limited the Yankees to just six hits in seven innings. Dave Righetti collected his 24th save.

Leal had limited the Yankess to four singles when Willie Randolph lashed a one-out double in the seventh, went to third on a wild pitch and scored on Meacham's fly ball.

A's 8, White Sox 2

Danny Meyer's two-run double in the fifth inning and Carney Lansford's 12th homer, a three-run blast in the sixth, gave Chris Codiroli, 2-3, all the support he needed.

The A's snapped a 2-2 tie in the fifth when Rickey Henderson walked and Carney Lansford doubled before Floyd Bannister, 12-9, walked Dave Kingman intentionally. Mike Heath plated Henderson with a grounder, then Meyer, inserted at first base after Bill Almon was ejected for arguing over a third strike in the first, doubled to chase Bannister.

Chicago's runs came on Greg Walker's 19th homer, a two-run shot in the first.

Orioles 7, Tigers 4

Mike Young's eighth-inning grand slam homer broke up a tie game. It was Baltimore's sixth grand slam of the season and second in three games.

With the score tied 3-3, Ken Singleton started the Baltimore eighth with a walk off Jack Morris, 17-10, who gave pinch hitter Joe Nolan a one-out intentional pass and walked Al Bumbry to load the bases with two outs.

That brought on Aurelio Lopez, and Young jumped on a 1-0 pitch for his 13th homer.

Sammy Stewart, 7-2, who took over for Storm Davis to start the seventh, picked up the victory.

Mariners 7, Rangers 3

Seattle used two walks and three Texas errors to score four unearned runs in the fourth inning as Mark Langston, 14-9, struck out seven to increase his American-League-leading total to 174.

After giving up a game-opening single to Jack Perconte, who eventually scored on a grounder by Alvin Davis, loser Frank Tanana, 14-13, retired 11 batters in a row before running into trouble with two out in the fourth inning.

Ken Phelps and Al Cowens walked and Steve Henderson followed with a single to right. Phelps was called out at the plate, but catcher Ned Yost dropped the throw from right fielder George Wright to key an uprising that included two errors by Texas shortstop Jeff Kunkel.

Buddy Bell, who went 3-for-4 with a walk, two singles and a double, has seven hits in his last nine at-bats with nine RBIs for the Rangers.

Eastex pays off big for owners Dr. and Mrs. H.D. Hall of Ada, Okla. by taking first over Odessa horse Miss Mitedo Monday in the All-American Futurity at Ruidoso Downs, N.M.

Eastex wins All-American Futurity

RUIDOSO DOWNS, N.M. (AP) — Trainer James McArthur's faith in the quarter horse broodmare Tall Cotton would not be shaken — in his eyes her potential overshadowed her past.

Two years ago, McArthur convinced Ada, Okla., dentist and horseman Dale Hall to repurchase Tall Cotton, whom Hall had sold months earlier to another trainer, Steve VanBebber, for $15,000.

Tall Cotton's tendency to abort her unborn foals — she had lost three of her first four — influenced Hall's decision to sell the mare.

But at McArthur's insistence, Hall bought back Tall Cotton for the same $15,000 price tag and another mare. As part of the deal, Hall also acquired Tall Cotton's first colt, who VanBebber had named Eastex.

On Monday, Eastex completed the best bit of horse trading Hall has ever made.

Displaying the awesome speed and power that has made him the best 2-year-old quarter horse in the country, Eastex overwhelmed his competition to capture the 26th running of the $2.5 million All-American Futurity.

The victory, the ninth in 12 starts for the gelding, earned Hall the first-place paycheck of $1 million.

Overcoming a slow start on a muddy track, Eastex put on a torrid run in the final 100 yards of the 440-yard sprint to overtake the front-running filly Miss Mitedo. Miss Mitedo, owned by J.W. Ham of Odessa, Texas, held on for second to collect $343,500.

The colt Copper Bugs, whose owner had predicted his horse would run well in the mud, did just that and took third. Copper Bugs, who went into the race with earnings of just over $2,600, boosted that figure with the third-place pot of $153,500.

McArthur said he was convinced Tall Cotton, a promising runner herself eight years ago before being sidelined by injuries, could be a good producer.

"If a horse could be a woman, the mare (Tall Cotton) would be a Marilyn Monroe," McArthur said.

Eastex ran the 440 yards in a Futurity record time of 21.41, erasing the previous record of 21.58 set in 1973 by Timeto Thinkrich.

The speedster set the record on a slow track and hit the finish line 1½ lengths in front after catching Miss Mitedo in the final 100 yards.

The strapping gelding was spooked by the large, noisy crowd and bolted briefly during the parade to the post. He also lurched in the starting gate but McArthur said it was simply an indication of Eastex' desire to run.

"Today he was on tilt," McArthur said. "He couldn't stand himself."

Hawks crown Browns downtown, 33-0; lose Warner

SEATTLE (AP)— The Seattle Seahawks won their first regular-season opener ever by pounding the Cleveland Browns 33-0.

Dave Krieg threw three touchdown passes and Norm Johnson kicked three field goals for the Seahawks, who had to start their ninth season on Monday afternoon because baseball's Seattle Mariners played at the Kingdome on Sunday.

The victory, however, was a costly one for the Seahawks. All-Pro running back Curt Warner limped off the field with a knee injury in the second quarter, and after the game team officials said Warner was to undergo arthroscopic surgery today.

"It's possible ligament damage," said team spokesman Gary Wright. The injury apparently occurred when he planted his right foot on the artificial turf.

"It does not look good," said Seattle Coach Chuck Knox.

Cleveland was shut out for the first time since Nov. 27, 1977, when it lost 9-0 to a Rams team also coached by Knox.

The Seahawks were not the only team hurt by injuries in the first weekend of action.

Pittsburgh quarterback David Woodley, hospitalized with a concussion following a 37-27 loss to Kansas City, probably will not play Thursday night when the Steelers go on the road to play the New York Jets.

Woodley, who completed 11 of 17 passes for 225 yards and two touchdowns in just over a half of play, was released from the hospital Monday but did not take part in the team's Labor Day workout.

The Steelers rushing attack — without Franco Harris — managed just 46 yards on 24 carries.

Pittsburgh Coach Chuck Noll called the loss "a sad moment for this football team."

Denver's starting quarterback, John Elway, is questionable for next Sunday's game against the Bears in Chicago because of a bruise and sprain suffered in his left shoulder during a 20-17 victory over Cincinnati.

The Indianapolis Colts' debut in their new home would have gone better if they had not beaten themselves, said Coach Frank Kush. The Colts lost four fumbles in falling to the Jets 23-14 at the Hoosier Dome.

"This one had to be significantly more important because we did have the 12th guy on the field — the fans," Kush said.

Also disappointed were the Washington Redskins, who were thumped 35-17 by the Miami Dolphins.

Miami quarterback Dan Marino riddled the Washington defense for five TD passes and 311 yards.

Joe Gibbs, coach of the defending NFC champion Redskins, said complacency was not a problem.

"We had great intensity," he said. "But we ran into a team that made five or six big plays and played errorless football, so we got beaten pretty badly."

Quarterback Phil Simms got the New York Giants off to a fast start, completing 23 of 30 attempts for 409 yards in a 28-27 triumph over the Philadelphia Eagles.

"I'd say that's pretty good," Giants Coach Bill Parcells said of the effort by Simms, who joined Y.A. Tittle as the only quarterbacks in team history to throw for more than 400 yards.

Houston fans were hoping that the signing of quarterback Warren Moon from the wide-open Canadian Football League would spice up the Oilers' offense. Instead, Houston took a conservative approach, relying mostly on running back Earl Campbell, in a 24-14 loss to the Super Bowl champion Los Angeles Raiders.

"We tried to shorten the game because that's the way we felt we could win," Campbell said.

Moon completed 12 of 29 passes in his NFL debut for the Oilers, who were 2-14 last season.

The St. Louis Cardinals saw their late rally fall short against the Green Bay Packers when Neil O'Donoghue missed a 45-yard field goal try with less than three minutes remaining in a 24-23 loss.

Cardinals Coach Jim Hanifan said the missed attempt was not O'Donoghue's fault. Hanifan said the team planned a fake designed to get a first down on the fourth-and-two play, but then called it off. Several of the St. Louis linemen didn't hear the audible.

"Our problem is that we've got to get some hearing aids," Hanifan said.

Walter Payton gained 61 yards on 16 carries as the Chicago Bears downed the Tampa Bay Buccaneers 34-14. Payton took a quick shower after the game and left the locker room quickly, apparently miffed that he didn't play more.

"Sometimes I could understand that," said Bears Coach Mike Ditka. "If things don't go right, I'd take a quick shower."

Area Golf

From Staff Reports

Alan Williams, who missed an 18-inch putt in the Midland City Golf Tournament in early August, was able to get a bit of vindication Monday when he fired a 69 in the third and final round of the Green Tree Country Club tournament to help him beat defending champion Steve Whiteside by nine strokes with a 207.

Williams played near-perfect golf throughout the three days of the tournament. On the fifth hole in the first round, he shot his first bogie. It wasn't until the 16th hole during the final round Monday that he hit his second, 46 par-or-better holes. Bennett Robb finished third in the tournament at 219.

Following are the results of all flights:

(From Back Tees)

Championship Flight: 1. Alan Williams, 70-68-69-207; Steve Whiteside, 72-70-74-216; 3. Bennett Robb, 73-70-76-219.

First Flight: 1. L.L. Fuller, 76-74-74-224; 2. Mark Stoltz, 75-78-79-232; 3. (tie) Bill Gilluly, 76-79-79-234; Tom Newman, 79-72-83-234.

Second Flight: 1. Dick Wennerberg, 82-76-84-240; 2. (tie) Ron Cunningham, 77-82-83-242; Glen Harbert, 82-79-81-242.

(From White Tees)

Third Flight: 1. Marv Ginzel, 77-78-78-233; 2. Mike Taylor, 80-82-75-237; 3. (tie) Jack Mussett, 82-77-79—238; Bill Collins, 82-76-80-238.

Fourth Flight: 1. Steve Sledge, 75-79-78-232; 2. Doc Weathers, 79-83-81-243; 3. Rod Roberts, 83-78-88-247.

Fifth Flight: 1. Kevin Moore, 86-76-94-256; 2. John Wood, 81-86-91-258; 3. Larry Melzer, 84-92-90-266.

Rose takes title

Rick Rose outdistanced the field Monday with a 149 total to easily win the championship flight of the Ranchland Hills Country Club championship.

Rose's nearest threat, Al Boudreaux, finished five strokes back of the champion.

Play in the championship and president's flight was stroke play. The remainder of the flights were match play.

Results from the RHCC tournament:

Championship Flight: Rick Rose, 149; Al Boudreaux, 154; Mac McGee, Doyce Haney, 156.
President's Flight: Neil Fisher, 161; Mike Courter, 163; Bob Riek, 164.

Survey: Sudden surge in interest will not collapse ARM budgets

Hearst Feature Service

Fears are unfounded that a sudden surge in interest rates might capsize the budgets of millions of home buyers with adjustable-rate mortgages, largely because lenders have been putting a ceiling on possible increases in monthly mortgage payments, according to an industry group's nationwide survey.

Unlike traditional fixed-rate mortgages in which monthly payments remain the same for life of the loan, adjustable-rate mortgages feature interest rates and payments that rise and fall with the general movement of interest rates in the economy. Although offered in some form since 1974, ARMs only recently gained widespread popularity.

"I'm surprised at how fine the results are of ARM use. Many of the fears surrounding ARMs were overblown," said Dennis Jacobe, director of research at the United States League of Savings Institutions, which conducted the survey.

One reason may be that most lending institutions now put ceilings, or caps, on how much monthly payments can rise. The Chicago-based League's survey of 1,100 thrift institutions making adjustable rate mortgages found that more than 96 percent place caps on annual interest rate increases or mortgage payment boosts.

Some real estate analysts had predicted that a run-up in interest rates would lead to a rash of foreclosures as home owners became saddled with monthly payments far higher than they could afford.

At giant Home Savings of America, however, spokeswoman Gayle Morris said: "We have had excellent results using adjustables. That is all we have written in the past two-and-a-half years. We funded approximately 50,000 loans for $7.5 billion in that period, and from what we've seen so far, delinquency rates are actually lower on ARMs than on fixed-rate mortgages."

The interest rates on Home Savings' ARMs, as with most savings institutions nationwide, are tied to the Federal Home Loan Bank Board's Cost of Funds index. The index, published monthly, measures the average cost of funds borrowed by thrift institutions. If the index goes up or down, so do interest rate charges on ARMs. However, a home owner's payments will not be changed every month along with interest-rate fluctuations. Adjustments usually are made annually.

Home Savings' loans are typical: They have a 7.5 percent annual cap on the dollar amount that a monthly mortgage payment can increase, and a "lifetime rate cap" limiting overall interest rate increases to 5 percent.

The popularity of ARMs has jumped dramatically in the last year. Two-thirds of mortgage loans made in July carried adjustable rates, compared with 25 percent last July.

Cashless society moves closer

New York Times News Service

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — Since Saturday, several Crown Liquor Stores have been allowing customers to pay for their purchases without cash, credit cards or checks. And countless other retailers are expected to soon follow Crown's example — bringing the cashless society a little closer.

A new alternative has become available throughout Florida: a point-of-sale electronic funds transfer system. In such a system, funds are moved by computer from a customer's bank account to a merchant's bank account at the moment a sale is completed.

The customer runs a bank card — the same piece of plastic used to withdraw cash from an automatic teller machine — through a small slot that reads the card's magnetic strip. Then the customer types a secret four-digit identification number on a keypad. The transaction is cleared electronically with the customer's bank, usually within 30 seconds. The cash register prints a receipt, which the customer keeps as a record.

While such debit cards are in scattered use around the country, Florida's effort is the nation's first statewide, multibank system. One analyst estimates that 3,500 terminals will be processing 500,000 transactions a month in Florida by the end of 1985.

Advocates of the point-of-sale, or P.O.S., funds transfer system say that merchants will benefit from immediate access to payments and reduced fraud losses. Financial institutions will reduce expensive processing of paper checks and charge-card receipts. Consumers can carry less cash and bypass the often long interrogations associated with checks or credit cards.

"The No. 1 motivation for us is customer service," said Robert McDermott, director of Electronic Funds Transfer Systems for Publix Supermarkets Inc. of Lakeland, Fla., a leader in the development. "It's an easier and more convenient way to pay for your groceries."

Publix has outfitted one supermarket in Lakeland with P.O.S. terminals at each checkout lane. All of the company's 276 stores will be equipped with P.O.S. terminals by January 1986.

Although Publix is stressing P.O.S. as a customer convenience, it could also dramatically reduce the supermarket chain's check-processing costs. McDermott said that Publix spends about 50 cents to process each check received from its customers, for a total cost of about $15 million last year. A P.O.S. transaction will cost Publix 15 to 25 cents, but none of the systems in Florida will charge customers for the transactions, at least initially.

If Publix could persuade 30 percent of its customers to pay for groceries with P.O.S. transactions, a level McDermott projects for 1990, the company would save about $3 million a year — more than the cost of installing P.O.S.

Still, some see disadvantages to P.O.S. Consumers lose the "float" they have on checks, so the funds must be available in their accounts when they make the transaction. In addition, there is no paper check, only a cash register receipt, if some proof of purchase is required. And there is the psychological aversion of some consumers to all kinds of electronic funds transactions, not just P.O.S. transactions.

The state's system goes back two years, when a group of 10 banks and savings and loan associations formed the Florida Interchange Group Inc. to link automatic teller machines in a network. The group's project now links 1,900 teller machines belonging to 307 Florida financial institutions. Customers can withdraw cash, determine their account balances or transfer money between accounts at any teller machine in the state belonging to the network.

Simply by expanding the software at the project's computer center in Orlando, the Florida Interchange Group was able to begin processing P.O.S. transactions.

The Landmark Banking Corp. of Fort Lauderdale is the first participant in the P.O.S. system. Through its credit card processing center in St. Petersburg, the bank is renting P.O.S. terminals to merchants for $35 a month.

In the St. Petersburg area, Landmark has rented terminals to a Cadillac dealership, a travel agency, a liquor store and a muffler shop chain. Landmark's first customer in south Florida is Crown Liquors of Fort Lauderdale.

"I think it's going to end up everywhere," said Paul Sandler, controller at Crown.

Piper factory puts out last plane

LOCK HAVEN, Pa. (AP) — The last airplane has rolled off the line at the parent factory and former headquarters of Piper Aircraft Corp., which is moving to Florida after 47 years in this logging town. A handful of workers remain, packing up the assembly line.

"It's heartsickening, loading the parts. The guys are packing the crates and saying, 'There goes my job. There goes my job,' " said John Cebulka, 68, a 45-year veteran who took an early retirement.

"I hate to see it go. Piper was my livelihood. Piper was my entire life," Cebulka said on his next-to-last day at work. "It's just not going to be the same. There's nothing here for the future. That's the worst part."

On May 1, Piper workers were told production is ceasing here and is being consolidated at Florida plants in Vero Beach and Lakeland.

The Lock Haven plant, which made its first Piper Cub in 1937 and once had 2,300 workers, will close by mid-October and the remaining corporate operations will leave by year's end, officials said. Only 112 mostly white collar workers were asked to move.

On Aug. 10, a piston-powered, twin-engine Piper Mojave was the last of 76,992 planes to be produced in central Pennsylvania. It was unceremoniously flown to Florida four days later.

On its journey down the assembly line, workers hung signs on it that read: "No Christmas Turkeys This Year" and "Last Piper Made By Yankees."

"All the planes had Indian names. They should have called that rascal the last of the Mohicans," said Russell Fisher, 64, who had invested 34 years at the plant.

Left behind were six fuselages, some spare ailerons, drafting tables, sewing machines, assorted tools and other hardware awaiting the move.

William Piper Sr. brought his company to Lock Haven, which sits along the Susquehanna River and now has a population of 9,500, after a fire wrecked the original factory in Bradford, Pa.

An inexpensive, single-engine, two-seater called the Piper Cub became a generic term for private plane and propelled the company to the heights of the general aviation industry. Piper ranks second to Cessna Aircraft Co. as a maker of private planes.

A nearby town called Quehanna changed its name to Piper, Pa., when the company opened a fabricating plant. That facility, which once had 500 workers, is also due to close.

The Piper family sold out in 1969 to Bangor Punta Corp., which manufactures Smith & Wesson handguns and recreational products. On Feb. 1, Lear Siegler Inc. of Santa Monica, Calif., took over Bangor Punta and its Piper subsidiary in a $290 million merger.

The Pennsylvania plant closings are blamed on plummeting market for private planes after a 1979 boom.

"It's been a deeper, longer recession than anybody in the industry ever imagined. It knocked the socks off of everybody," said Drew Steckette of General Aviation Manufacturing Association.

Piper lost $61 million in the past two years. In 1979, Piper sold 5,774 planes, but last year, sales nosedived to 771, a drop of 87 percent.

Workers agreed to a wage freeze, and Piper quit making Cubs in January 1983 and concentrated on bigger, better selling models. But because of the doldrums, the Lock Haven plant plummeted to 12 percent of capacity.

Then came the shutdown decision. Max E. Bleck, president of Piper Aviation, cited more modern facilities in Florida and higher market demand for the aircraft that the Florida plants produce.

"When you look at the numbers, look at the balance sheet, something had to be done," said Piper spokesman Joseph Ponte. "I don't know who the villain is. If there is a villain, it certainly is a complex character."

Still, the pullout is a bitter pill for many.

"We, the people of Lock Haven, built Piper and now they're giving it all away to the people of Florida," said Jim Young, secretary of Local 734 of the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers.

Clinton County has a jobless rate of 14.9 percent, and officials say just as many people are underemployed or have run out of jobless benefits.

"It's a major catastrophe, at least temporarily, to the city. But they'll survive, one way or another," said William Piper Jr., son of the company's founder and former president of Piper Aircraft, who still lives in Lock Haven.

"Realistically, we've hit bottom, but we're not stagnating on the bottom. We have to pick ourselves up by our own bootstraps," said James Bottorf, Clinton County commissioner.

Piper offered to give the 770,000-square foot factory to the city or state to help attract new industry. There have been inquiries but no takers yet.

Bank claims publicity aided in downfall

Los Angeles Times,
Washington Post News Service

The first rumor moved over the Reuters News Agency wires about 11:39 the morning of Tuesday, May 8. Speculation on Wall Street, it reported, was that Continental Illinois Bank in Chicago, the 12th-largest bank in America, was considering bankruptcy, a rumor the bank denied as "totally preposterous."

What happened next was like a child's game of telephone played worldwide. Wire services, following Reuters, added new rumors in their reports, and by Wednesday morning institutional depositors in Japan started a run on the bank.

The run moved West with the sunrise, to Europe and then the United States, gaining such force that within a week astonished U.S. banking regulators had to contrive the largest rescue package in business history to keep Continental from failing.

To this day, Continental officials insist that, while the bank had severe problems, the rumors were untrue, and they complain that the press may have contributed to the run.

The case of Continental typifies the difficulty the press faces covering troubled banks or savings and loans. Financial institutions, more than other industries, survive on public trust — and that trust can vanish with astonishing quickness when a bank encounters severe problems.

When trouble comes, the news media, who feel they have a responsibility to inform the public, find themselves in a collision with the banking industry, which is striving to keep the institutions alive. The press, then, must arbitrate between reporting news and unduly eroding public confidence in a way that makes the banks' problems worse.

Industry executives complain that the news media too often fail in that effort, that in competing for news the press by its nature focuses too intensely on the negative. In some cases, bankers charge, banks that died would have survived without the adverse publicity.

Journalists and some regulators, however, counter that financial institutions are vulnerable to a loss of public confidence only if they have real problems of their own making. While the press at times can exacerbate problems, they argue that perhaps it is proper to let public opinion decide an institution's fate.

BOTTOM LINES

HOUSTON — Galveston-Houston Co. has reported a net loss for the six months ended June 30, 1984, of $2,955,000 or $.52 per share, compared to a net loss of $10,119,000 or $1.78 per share for the same period in 1983. Revenues of $48,602,000 reflect an increase of $4,715,000 or 10.7 percent over revenues in the first two quarters of 1983.

For the three months ended June 30, 1984, the company also reported a net loss of $1,714,000 or $.29 per share on revenues of $25,140,000 compared to a net loss of $6,553,000 or $1.15 per share and revenues of $21,375,000 for the second quarter of 1983.

HOUSTON — Tenneco Inc. has reported net income of $220 million for the second quarter of 1984, up 7 percent from $205 million for the same period in 1983.

Earnings per average share of common stock were $1.46 for the quarter compared with $1.38 a year ago.

Net sales and operating revenues were $3.8 billion for the quarter, compared to $3.6 billion for the second quarter of 1983.

Tenneco chairman and chief executive officer James L. Ketelsen said that sales of greater volumes of both crude oil and natural gas, coupled with continued improvement in packaging, shipbuilding and automotive, were the major reasons for the earnings increase.

LOS ANGELES — Farmers Group Inc. earned $41,721,000 or $1.23 per share for the second quarter of 1984 compared to $34,713,000 or $1.02 per share a year ago, Richard G. Lindsley, chairman and chief executive officer, has announced.

Earnings for the first six months of 1984 were $78,942,000 or $2.33 per share, compared to $66,203,00 or $1.95 per share for the same period last year.

SAN ANGELO — Tucker Drilling Co. Inc. has reported some improvement in the following unaudited results for the three months ended June 30, 1984, as compared to the same period in the previous year.

Larry J. Tucker, president of the company, said the mild increase in net income was due primarily to the results of continuing cost control programs. He noted that, while net income increased 43 percent, overall revenues decreased five percent. Contract drilling revenues were down 14 percent to $3,036,000, oil and gas sales were down 16 percent to $1,386,000, and equipment sales were up 29 percent to $1,830,000.

ARDMORE, Okla. — The board of directors of Noble Affiliates Inc. has announced the declaration of a quarterly cash dividend of three cents per common share, payable August 27, 1984 to shareholders of record August 13, 1984.

DENVER — Wichita Industries Inc. has announced operating results for the second quarter and six months ended June 30, 1984.

For the second quarter, revenues were $2,495,000 compared to $2,044,000, reported a year ago. The company sustained a loss of $221,000 or $.08 per share compared to net income of $141,000 or $.05 per share in the second quarter of 1983.

For the six-month period, revenues were $4,599,000 compared to $4,123,000 for the same period last year. Loss for the six-month period was $433,000, equal to $.16 per share, compared to net income of $244,000 or $.08 per share reported for the six-month period of 1983.

Four other Midland artists will give demonstrations in the lobby of RepublicBank National Midland each Tuesday in September from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

The public is cordially invited to participate in these events. There is no charge.

Dollar hits record high; gold drops

LONDON (AP) — The dollar hit new all-time highs today against the British pound and Italian lire. Gold prices dropped.

In London, the pound sank to a new trading low of $1.2950, compared to $1.3030 on Monday and its previous low of $.2975 last July 11.

The dollar sold for a record 1,802.50 Italian lire, up from 1.795.25 lira on Monday.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before it begins in Europe, the dollar edged up for the third straight day to close at 242.80 Japanese yen, compared with Monday's 242.10 yen. The dollar traded later in Europe at 243.27 yen.

Early dollar rates against other key currencies compared with late rates Monday:

—2.9182 West German marks, up from 2.9105.

—2.4375 Swiss francs, up from 2.4272.

—8.9555 French francs, up from 8.9285.

—3.2840 Dutch guilders, up from 3.2835.

—1.2957 Canadian dollars, unchanged.

Gold opened in London at $341.60 an ounce, down from Monday's late bid of $344.50. London's five major bullion houses set the midmorning "fixing" rate at $341.75.

In Zurich, gold opened at $340.60, down from $344.25 late Monday.

Gold closed earlier in Hong Kong at $342.96, down $347.80 on Monday.

Silver was quoted in London today at $7.23 an ounce, down from $7.315 an ounce late Monday.

Coal gas ready to begin flowing

TRW Inc., the high-technology products and services concern, says it is about to sell the first commercial natural gas retrieved in a new process that extracts methane from coal fields.

TRW said Friday the gas will begin flowing in the next few days through piplines owned by Southern Natural Gas Co. of Birmingham, Ala., a unit of Sonat Inc., under a 15-year contract signed for undisclosed terms.

Robby Robertson, the director of the natural-gas venture for Cleveland-based TRW, said the pilot project in Alabama was aimed at demonstrating the commercial viability of the production process.

Robertson said he expected initial production of 1 million cubic feet daily from 11 wells now completed in a coalbed of Alabama's Black Warrior Basin, located north and east of Tuscaloosa.

Another 18 wells are expected to be hooked into the system by the end of the year, and production is expected to reach 5 million to 6 million cubic feet daily by mid-summer in 1985 on estimated reserves of 25 billion cubic feet.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Prices farmers get for raw products entering the marketing pipeline were unchanged in August for the fourth straight month but still averaged 3.6 percent above a year ago, the Agriculture Department says.

Oranges, lettuce, tomatoes, milk and tobacco received higher prices in August, but those were offset by lower prices for cattle, corn, soybeans, broilers and hogs, the department said Friday.

Prices rose to a record high in April and then fell in May before stabilizing.

Friday's report also showed that in July, prices held steady instead of declining 0.7 percent as the preliminary figures showed a month ago.

Farmers have put millions of acres back to work in 1984 that were idled a year ago due to drought and the government's payment-in-kind acreage program to curb 1983 output. The result, according to August forecasts, could be bumper grain crops this fall, further weakening commoditiy prices.

General Electric unveiled its new more fuel efficient propfan jet engine, called an unducted fan engine or UDF, at the Farnborough, England, International Air Show. An engine like the mockup may power the airliner of the future and one American plane manufacturer is testing the UDF, while another is studying the idea. The engine's two bands of short propeller blades rotate in opposite directions.

McDonald's changes style for Freeport

FREEPORT, Maine (AP) — This coastal village once begged businesses to locate here. Now it's trying to rein in a surge of discount clothing outlets, shoe stores, restaurants and motels.

The new companies are all lured by the crowds who come to the outdoor outfitting emporium of L.L. Bean Inc., open seven days a week, 24 hours a day, and packed with shoppers most of those hours.

When McDonald's Corp. announced last summer that it wanted to set up in Freeport, the resultant hoo-hah drew national attention, as preservers of tradition and quaintness battled a symbol of invading commercialism.

When a Main Street merchant put two huge pig sculptures in front of his store as a publicity gimmick in June, village officials proclaimed them a clear violation of the sign ordinance.

Local leaders, worried about what the town of 6,000 people might look like in 10 years, are beginning to force new arrivals into the traditional Freeport mold.

"A developer has to jump through many hoops to locate in Freeport," said Town Manager Dale Olmstead.

McDonald's found that out. After making its intentions known last summer, the fast-food chain endured months of hearings and design reviews.

The result: Ground was broken in July for a McDonald's restaurant that few Americans will recognize.

There will be no drive-through window, no outdoor playground and no soaring yellow arches out front.

Instead, tucked inside a 19th century white clapboard house, the restaurant will feature carpets, wainscoting, wallpaper "and lots of cherry trim," said Doug Quagliaroli, the corporation's New England operations director.

"It's going to be tastefully done," he added.

McDonald's was willing to camouflage its operation because it felt Freeport was too good to pass up, Quagliaroli said.

Other businesses share the feeling. Olmstead estimated 20 to 30 new stores would open downtown by the end of summer. "And that will probably double again within the next two to three years," he said.

With such welcome development come problems, Olmstead said. The town must expand its water supply. Tourist parking has become a serious problem. And there is a strain on the police department, whose two daytime officers spend most of their time directing traffic.

The biggest problem in Freeport may be getting residents to agree how much development they want — and how to control it, if they can.

Faye Day, who just got a job as a clerk at one of Freeport's 10 new shoe stores, believes most old-timers like the prosperity that development brings — "except if they're trying to get down Main Street in the traffic."

Women geoscientists plan coastal field trip

MENLO PARK, Calif. — Association for Women Geoscientists will hold a two day field trip on the California coast to explore the productive Monterey Formation and the Miocene volcanics and ophiolites of the San Luis Obispo area, Saturday, October 20, 1984. The group will explore the Miocene volcanics and ophiolites of the San Luis Obispo area with Cathy Busby-Spera, Ph.D., of the University of California, Santa Barbara. Learn about the Monterey productive facies and California coastal geology while enjoying the beauty of the Pacific coast.

Drilling permits see rise from previous week

DENVER — A totoal of 2,359 permits to drill for oil and gas were issued in the United States during the week ended August 24, according to Petroleum Information Corp.

The total is up 230 permits, or 10.8 percent, from the previous week. The total is well below the 3,456 permits reported for the same week in 1983, however.

The weekly total brings to 67,509 the cumulative number of permits issued in the United States this year.

Survey indicates public expects protection

PRINCETON, N.J. — According to a survey by Opinion Research Corp., the Princeton based survey and market research arm of Arthur D. Little Inc., the public still expects the federal government to protect it from another energy crisis.

The ORC report, terming public attitudes toward energy conservation "a political and economic time bomb," notes that 58 percent of the American public believes that the federal goernment should lead the way, and that energy companies have a public trust to increase domestic supplies of crude oil and natural gas regardless of the cost.

Natural gas exploratory drilling decreases

WASHINGTON — Exploratory drilling for natural gas has shown a drastic decline according to reports received by the American Petroleum Institute.

The API's Quarterly review of Drilling Statistics reveals that during this year's second quarter, April through June, reports on exploratory natural gas well completions totalled 352, a 39.8 percent drop from the same period last year. Reports on exploratory oil well completions totalled 559, a drop of 4.4 percent.

Interfirst Bank Odessa begins publication

InterFirst Bank Odessa has sponsored a new publication entitled the Permian Basin Energy Report, the first isssue of which was mailed to over 2500 energy-related businesses in late July. The monthly publication will include energy statistics as they pertain specifically to the Permian Basin: well completions, drilling applications, rigs running, footage drilled, oil and gas produced, oil and gas prices, as well as numerous others. The report will also include summaries of major articles which have appeared in other energy publications.

Diamond Shamrock high bidders in Alaska

DALLAS — Diamond Shamrock Exploration Co., a subsidiary of Diamond Shamrock Corp., and its partners were the apparent high bidders on nine offshore tracts in Alaska's Beaufort Sea which were offered in the Federal government's Diapir Field Sale No. 87, held in Anchorage.

If the nine bids are accepted by the Federal government, Diamond Shamrock and its partners will spend approximately $43.3 million for 51,239 lease acres. Diamond Shamrock's portion of the bids will be approximately $5.9 million for 10,779 net lease acres. The lease offering attracted high bids of $877 million on 232 tracts in the Beaufort Sea, off Alaska's North Slope.

New software introduced

AUSTIN — Industrial training has taken a new twist. Companies can now buy a computer software package that enables them to conduct their own seminars on how to negotiate.

That package, called "The Art of Negotiating Computer Preparation Program," is available through the Industrial Education Department of The University of Texas at Austin.

Now executives or training specialists can be prepared to bring modern negotiating principles right to the negotiating table. The learning program can show members of employee negotiating teams how to explore both sides of key issues. They learn what moves to make and what to do and say next to solve the problem addressed.

Besides the basic software, the buyer receives support materials — an on-line instruction program to teach buyers how to use the program, step-by-step; a user's manual, and two textbooks. Buyers also receive free updates of the program disks and user's manual for six months.

Cost of the complete program is $495.

The textbooks are "Fundamentals of Negotiating," which explains negotiating methods, and "The Art of Negotiating Work Text," described as the "desktop negotiating reference."

For further information, write to the Industrial Education Department, Education Annex, Room S-13, Austin, Texas 78713-7700, or call (512) 471-4633.

Treated water to soon be diverted to man-made lakes

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

The shore birds glide over the water while the ducks flap their wings. A system of man-made lakes in south Midland County is providing a home for these birds in the middle of a parched wasteland.

It's a tranquil setting compared to the uproar that created these bodies of water...also known as the city's newest sewage disposal project.

Almost three years ago the idea of disposing of Midland's overflowing sewage water through a system of lakes far outside the city seeped into the minds of local officials and engineers. At that time, the scene was one of bedlam. There were meetings where county officials yelled charges at the city and the city barked rebuttals in return. The source of the controversy came from holding ponds which were overflowing onto county residents' land.

The plan was approved Oct. 15, 1982, by the Texas Water Commission and the clock was set at two years for Midland to get the system built and put into operation. Midland had to seek $20 million in revenue bonds to finance the project.

When the alarm rings in October this year, Midland will be ready. And under the $20 million budget, claimed Utilities Director John Lowe.

"WE WILL BE complete between Sept. 19 and 29," he said. "Then we'll do some testing for the next three weeks. But unless the world falls apart, we'll get there."

Already, the city is testing the 15-plus miles of pipeline starting at the sewage treatment plant on Midland's southeast border and running along Garden City Highway until it cuts over to the man-made lakes. It is to this system of holding ponds where the primary treated effluent is being shipped. But the birds already have found the water and are making it their home.

"We've worked very closely and carefully with the contractors" to get the project completed by the time the alarm rings, according to Lowe. "It's just bits and pieces now."

Those small parts will go to the irrigation pump station and the telemetry equipment, none of which is necessary for the system's startup.

"We're going on the theory we won't allow anything to happen," said Lowe.

Driving out to the site, Lowe pointed out markers along the roadside which pegged where various components of the pipeline were located. And he could tell what type of manholes were installed. To the layman's eye, it looks almost like any other borrow ditch covered with weeds.

"It's 20-miles plus of pipeline," he said, "with a few problems, which is about normal." Those problems, however, are centered primarily in the pipeline around the lakes and not in the line carrying the effluent to the site.

THE SITE IS six sections of land in the middle of what once was wasted pasture land — three owned by J. "Timber" Floyd and the other three by the city. Under that land runs only a small amount of ground water, according to tests by hydrologists, and what is there is of such poor quality it couldn't be used for drinking purposes, Lowe noted.

Today, those six sections have been cleared of brush and new center pivot irrigation systems sparkle in the sun, waiting for the October date when sewage water can be used to irrigate the land. What once was a wasted, parched 2,400 acres will be turned into farmland.

Floyd already has planted some maize on part of the land, and with this summer's rains the crop is growing.

"The city has done everything except plant the seeds," Lowe noted. Floyd and other farmers will till that land and not worry about drought years. But it's not a complete handout by the city. When those crops are sold, the city will receive a portion of the revenue, as they will when Floyd takes his maize to market this year.

The eight ponds and irrigating equipment had to be placed around oil wells, pump jacks and pumping lines. In some cases, the wells or lines were moved, at the city's expense. In another, the city couldn't get around paying the oil wells. So it continues pumping away in the middle of one of the ponds. It is surrounded by a berm which will allow the company to maintain the well. That berm, however, cost Midland about $70,000 to $80,000, according to Lowe.

FLOYD'S LAND was not the city's first choice for this project...just the last one that proved feasible.

Commissioners will decide on plan for re-districting

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Midland County commissioners at 9 a.m. Wednesday are to decide on a re-districting plan to equalize the number of voters in each of the county's four commissioners' precincts.

They will be meeting in the Commissioners' Courtroom on the second floor of the Midland County Courthouse.

Federal law mandates the carrying out of the "one-man, one-vote rule," which calls for an equalization of voters within a jurisdiction, such as Midland County. The rule was initiated by a lawsuit in the 1960s in Midland. Back then, one county commissioner represented the urban area, the city of Midland, and, hence, most of the voters in the county; the other three commissioners represented the sparsely populated rural areas.

That case eventually went to the U.S. Supreme Court, and Midland County was ordered to equalize precincts according to populations and voters.

"We're trying to keep populations as well balanced as well as we can," said Commissioner Win Brown.

"We've had an imbalance here because of our odd-ball growth patterns," he said. "We're trying to get a more equitable balance."

According to figures compiled by Midland County Elections Administrator Janeice Builta, the current "imbalance" by commissioners' precincts and the recommended "balance" by changing or switching voter boxes are as follows:

—Precinct 1, which takes in west Midland and southwest Midland County: Remains unchanged at 10,395.Commissioner is Durward Wrigt.

—Precinct 2, which takes in northeast Midland and much of east Midland County: from 11,907 to 12,513. This precinct will barely change. Commissioner is C. Wallace "Wally" Craig.

—Precinct 3, which takes in south Midland and south central and southeast Midland County: from 7,504 to 10,805. This precinct will be in for major changes in voter boxes. Commissioner is C. DeWayne Davis.

—Precinct 4, which takes in northwest Midland and northwest Midland County: from 16,421 to 12,514. This precinct will be in for even more major realignments. Commissioner is Win Brown.

The total number of registered voters comes to 46,227.

"This has been a real hard thing to do," Brown said of realigning the commissioners' precincts.

Family law specialists honor Judge Culver

By ED TODD

Barbara Culver, judge of Texas' 318th Family District Court for Midland County since 1978, recently was named the first recipient of the Judge Sam S. Emison Jr. Memorial Award at the annual meeting of the Texas Academy of Family Law Specialists in Houston.

The award is given to "the person whom the Academy feels has donated the most in the field of family law" in the year preceding the annual meeting, according to Earle S. Lilly, dean of the Academy.

Ms. Culver said she was honored by the award.

"Actually, I was very surprised. It was a very big surprise. I was very, very flattered to feel that I was getting the award from the leaders among the family-law specialists," she said.

"Peer recognition is very, very nice," Ms. Culver said.

Ms. Culver's court specializes in family-law matters, including divorces, child custody and child-support issues.

Judge Emison, 50, presided over the 257th Family District Court in Houston until his death in an automobile accident on July 11, 1983. He was a member of the Family Law Council.

"Everybody seemed to have liked and respected him," Ms. Culver said.

Doggett: Gramm handmaiden of energy lobby

By GARY OTT
City Editor

ODESSA — Democrat Lloyd Doggett Monday labeled Phil Gramm, his Republican opponent for the U.S. Senate, "a handmaiden of the nuclear energy" lobby. He said Gramm had not worked with other Texas elected officials in opposing the dumping of radioactive waste in West Texas.

Doggett, a state senator from Austin, was in Odessa Monday as part of a Labor Day campaign swing through West Texas. He meets Gramm in the Nov. 6 general election and most public opinion polls show Gramm, a Democrat-turned-Republican from College Station, with a lead. The winner will replace John Tower, who is retiring at the end of the current session.

"We need to do some work" on attracting rural conservative Democrats to the campaign, Doggett acknowledged during a press conference at the official opening of the Ector County Democratic Headquarters.

Many political pundits have predicted rural West Texas will be critical in the Nov. 6 election. Democrats historically have done well in that region of the state but in the Democratic primary earlier this year, Doggett trailed both Kent Hance and Robert Krueger among rural voters. He ran strongest in the cities and Rio Grande Valley.

Gramm has launched a major campaign to attract Hance and Krueger supporters, claiming Doggett is too liberal for most West Texans.

Doggett countered those charges Monday by pointing to three issues on which he said Gramm was out-of-touch with West Texans. He said Gramm:

— Advocated weakening or eliminating the Small Business Administration;

— Had not opposed dumping radioactive waste in West Texas and;

— Favored cutting farm programs by 60 percent over the next three years.

"I want to work with the West Texas family farmer," Doggett said, adding that once rural Texans become better educated on Gramm's voting record they will return to the Democratic Party.

He also called for a series of debates with Gramm. So far only one face-to-face confrontation, to be aired on public television Oct. 18 in Dallas, has been confirmed.

Gramm: Doggett works for nuclear freeze

By GARY OTT
City Editor

ODESSA — Phil Gramm, Republican candidate for the U.S. Senate, said Monday that while he was "fighting for a stronger America," his opponent, Lloyd Doggett, "has been working for Kennedy's nuclear freeze proposal."

It was one of several attempts by Gramm to characterize Doggett as a liberal who is out-of-step with most Texans. Gramm was in Odessa to address a Republican fundraiser.

At the same time, Gramm identified himself as a staunch Reaganite and said he and the current administration were at least partially responsible for the improved economy. He cited a lower inflation rate and the fact that more people are working than ever before as two major accomplishments in the past four years.

However, he did not specifically mention the budget deficit, which has grown substantially since Reagan took office in 1981. It is expected to be a major campaign issue in both the Doggett-Gramm Senate race as well as the presidential contest. Democrats claim the deficit is a result of Reagan's economic program while Republicans charge that Democrats have refused to make necessary spending cuts.

Gramm did say he supported the balanced budget amendment, but did not indicate what the chances of passage were in the immediate future.

Throughout his 15 minute speech, Gramm repeatedly said his race offered a clear choice — liberal vs. conservative.

"I'm a conservative," he said. "For the past six years I have fought for traditional family values. My opponent, in his attempt to get the endorsements of gay and lesbian groups, has supported the Gay Rights Bill."

Gramm also said he was one of the first congressmen to support the president's decision to send troops to Grenada.

"I'm working for a new coalition of conservative Democrats, Republicans and independents," said Gramm, who was a Democrat until last year when he switched to the Republican Party, saying national Democrats had become too liberal and were out-of-touch with ordinary Americans.

Most animal lovers tend to be a little nuts

In the United States there is only one thing more fanatical than a Star Wars fan — an animal lover.

America's fascination with pets extends to such unlikely companions as tarantulas, rodents, snakes, alligators and pet rocks. I don't understand it. None of them fetch the evening paper or qualify as a tax deduction.

Pets have been named beneficiaries of million-dollar inheritances and been given $20,000 funerals. I've even heard tell of lavish boarding kennels that make the Waldorf-Astoria look like Motel 6. I've always chalked up such incidents to the eccentricity of the rich, but now I'm not so sure.

Now, I have a sweet-tempered mutt that I treat like a dog. I'm what might be classified as a social pet-owner. But there are thousands, perhaps millions, of people out there who are animalholics.

Most animal lovers are a little nuts, but Yorkie owners have got to be the craziest. Take my mother...please!

She recently became a grandmother when her Yorkie had four puppies. She couldn't have been more proud or boastful of genuine grandchildren. She positively glowed while handing out little doggie biscuits — two pink and two blue — and relating every gory detail of the great event, accompanied by photographs.

She even talks to the little buggers in baby talk — which sounds silly enough when uttered to a real child, but goes beyond ridiculous when the baby has four paws.

I can always tell when Mother is addressing the puppies — her voice is four octaves higher and reminds one of fingernails on a chalkboard. "Is my purdy widdo baby hungry?" she squeaks. "Wassa madder, don't you wike dat nasty ol' light shining in your eyes? Come on, give gammy a teensy-weensy kissy-poo." No wonder babies spit up so often, I'd gag on language like that, too.

I don't recall her making such a fuss over me, her first born, when I arrived.

When Mother first discovered Brandy was expecting, she was indignant. That her baby should find herself in such a compromising situation was unthinkable. She immediately insisted on a proper wedding ceremony between the mother-to-be and the cur responsible. She actually went so far as to make a tiny white (ha!) veil and hounded me — me — to fly to Dallas to be matron of honor.

She actually called the courthouse and asked about a license. "We don't issue marriage licenses for animals," she was told. "This isn't an animal. This is my Yorkie!."

But now things have gone too far. She is obsessed with getting birth certificates, complete with paw prints, and the appropriate announcements to send all her friends. She even wanted to buy little bonnets and pacifiers and take the whole bunch to Olan Mills while it was having a special on family portraits.

Maybe it's my fault. Perhaps I should have spent more time with her.

No, I suspect it runs in the family. Grandma had Yorkies, too. I remember once, as a starving teen-ager, being drawn to the kitchen by the tempting aroma of frying meat, eagerly anticipating one of Grandma's mouth-watering specialties.

"Mmmmmm, that smells good, Grandma. Whaccha makin'?"

"Supper for the dogs."

"Oh," deflated. "What are we having?"

"Peanut butter sandwiches."

I sometimes wonder if the expression "it's a dog's life" is interpreted correctly.

Houston lawyer Donald R. Royall described Emison as a judge who "had a vision that saw beyond most of us...

"If Sam had a flaw as a trial judge," Royall wrote in the State Bar Section Report on Family Law, "it was his combination of awesome intellect and insatiable curiosity."

Royall said that Emison "took to the bench in 1977 like a young eagle takes to the sky...Sam was a rare individual. He did almost nothing quite like others did...He was a family lawyer in the highest sense of the word."

While in Houston at the Academy, Ms. Culver attended the Advanced Family Law Course sponsored by the Star Bar of Texas.

She served on the Family Law Council during the drafting of the Texas Family Code.

And this summer, she just completed a second four-year term on the Council, which is the governing body of the Family Law Section.

"The Council is now drafting and editing for publication a new three-volume Family Law Practice manual, which is to be published later this year," Ms. Culver said. "The Council also proposed legislative changes in the Family Code for improving it and keeping it current with judicial interpretations in family-law cases."

Ms. Culver, 58, a graduate of the Southern Methodist University School of Law, was Midland County judge from 1963 until 1978, when she, a Republican, was appointed to the state bench by Texas Gov. Dolph Briscoe, a Democrat. She succeeded Judge Joseph Mims on the 318th Family District Court bench in 1978.

"Barbara Culver is as close to a human natural resource as there is," Darrell F. Smith, a Midland lawyer who was then the Midland County Democratic Party chairman, said upon Ms. Culver's appointment. Smith today is a United States magistrate.

"I'd heard of her work on the Family Code before I even moved to Midland," Smith said.

He is actively seeking the support of former backers of Kent Hance and Robert Krueger, defeated opponents of Doggett in the May Democratic primary. Both Hance and Krueger have endorsed Doggett and Doggett said Monday he expected both men to campaign for him between now and the general election.

Gramm has released a list of names of supporters of Hance and Krueger who he claims are now backing his candidacy.

"This election is not a partisan election," Gramm said. "It is one of philisophies. Conservative vs. liberal. My opponent has gone around the state promising everything to all special interest groups. I'm not interested in another government program. I'm interested in another job. That's what this administration has done, create more jobs."

Gramm has made numerous political visits to the Permian Basin area and has said he needs to win in rural West Texas to help offset expected losses in the Rio Grande Valley and other Democratic strongholds. Republicans historically run strongest in the suburbs of the state's largest cities.

LAKES

Lowe recalled city officials first wanted to ship the effluent to Salt Lake. "Salt Lake would have been several million dollars less. But we were never able to put all the technical data together that we needed from Salt Lake."

Landowners adjacent to the lake refused to allow the city to complete its testing.

Another option was to follow Odessa's example and dump it into Monahans Draw. The state said "no" to Midland but recently permitted Odessa to continue its practice.

"It had the potential of degrading the ground water," Lowe said of the technical data gathered by Midland.

The city also looked at Stephenson Lake, but it had problems, too.

The Floyd site should serve Midland for at least 20 years, according to Lowe. And if it reaches the point the ponds begin overflowing, there shouldn't exist the same problem of landowners living nearby.

When the switches are turned on Oct. 14 to divert all treated sewage water to the ponds, Lowe is hoping members of the Texas Water Commission are watching. "They gave us such a short period of time to do it," he said.

Obviously, said Lowe, this project is the star in his utilities director cap.

"There's more blood, sweat and tears that went into it. I feel pretty good about what we've done out there. It's a very responsible use for a very valuable natural resource."

DOGGETT

"Lubbock and Amarillo television stations have offered us free time. I immediately accepted the offer to debate on any night in October. My opponent hasn't," Doggett said. He indicated Gramm was avoiding debates so his voting record would not become well-known.

In the campaign, Gramm has repeatedly attempted to label Doggett a liberal in the mold of House Speaker "Tip" O'Neill and Sen. Ted Kennedy. But on Monday Doggett countered by saying, "There is only one extreme candidate in this race, and it is my opponent." He said studys indicate Gramm's voting record is to the right of Jesse Helms (R-N.C.), generally considered the most coservative member of the U.S. Senate.

Doggett also dismissed suggestions that the presidential race will be a major factor in the Senate contest. "I don't think President Reagan's coattails are that long. Neither are Mondale's." He said the Senate race would be determined on the issues.

Current polls show Reagan with a substantial lead in Texas but Doggett said it was possible for him to win his Senate race with Reagan carrying Texas in the presidential contest.

"But I hope it doesn't work out that way," he said. "By Nov. 6, I hope we're both in good shape."

Mondale's son, William, also was in Odessa Monday and predicted his father would carry Texas and win the presidential race.

"According to most people, we're behind right now. But my dad's used to that. No one thought we could beat John Glenn. But we did. No one thought we could beat Gary Hart. But we did. Now, no one thinks we can beat Ronald Reagan. But we will."

Buffalo Trail Council trying to recruit new members

The Buffalo Trail Council of Boy Scouts of America will recruit new members as part of the 75th anniversary of Scouting.

With the introduction of Tiger Cub Scouts, for seven-year-old boys, the nationwide movement has risen to nearly 5 million youth and adult members.

Scouting now serves boys ages 7 to 18 and young women in Exploring ages 14-21.

The first phase of the Diamond Jubilee Roundup will be Cub Scout rallies held in schools and churches throughout Midland.

Cub rallies are scheduled for 7 p.m. at the following locations:

Sept. 6: Long, Santa Rita and Travis schools;

Sept. 10: Jones, Bowie and Milam schools;

Sept. 11: Emerson and Pease schools (students from Quanah Parker, Trinity and Hillander will meet at Emerson School) (Henderson students will meet at St. Pauls Methodist Church).

Sept. 13: Houston and De Zavala schools;

Sept. 17: Lamar, Rusk and Crockett schools;

Sept. 18: Burnett and Fannin schools;

Sept. 20: Washington, West and Bonham schools;

Sept. 25: South Elementary School;

Boys ages 7-10 and their parents should attend the meeting at their neighborhood school.

St. Anns Catholic School Cub Rally is slated for Wednesday.

For more information contact the Scout Service Center, 684-7171.

Re-districting can result in gerrymandering and can, in an election year, favor one candidate over another or can put an officeholder out of his jurisdiction and out of contention for re-election when his term of office ends, Brown noted.

"In other counties," Brown said, "they (commissioners) have actually gotten into fistfights over re-districting." Commissioners have gotten embroiled over the concept "Don't tread on my territory."

Brown said Midland County commissioners have been civil in their approach to re-districting.

Y will offer course in relaxation

A short course in relaxation will be offered by the Central YMCA from 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 25 and Sept. 27.

Janet Whitman will teach "Natural Relaxation," a four-hour seminar based on research in the areas of biofeedback and self-hypnosis. Techniques will include muscular relaxation, autogenic training and visualization.

A relaxation tape for home use is included in the fee of $30 for YMCA members and $40 for non-members.

For more information or to register, call the Central YMCA at 682-2551.

DEATHS

W.H. Keown

W.H. Keown, 72, of Midland, died Sunday afternoon in a local hospital after a lengthy illness.

Services will be at 1:30 p.m. Wednesday in the Ellis chapel with Al Jolly and Don Mitchell, of the Westside Church of Christ, officiating. Burial will be in the Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Keown was born Oct. 19, 1911 in Whiterun, Ky., where he was reared. He moved to Orange in 1928 and was living in Winnie in January 1943 when he entered the Navy Sea Bee's during World War II. He was discharged in December 1945, after serving in the Pacific Theatre of War. He worked throughout the coastal area of Texas and Louisiana and moved to Midland in October 1950 while he was with B.B.M. Drilling. He worked as a drilling superintendent for them until 1956. Keown was self-emplouead from 1958 to 1972 and owned B&C Tankers Trucking Company. He joined Petroleum Pump and Transport, Inc. as Field Representative. Keown retired March 1983.

He married Mary Ellen Bostic of Grace City, Georgia, Dec. 15, 1947 in Houston.

He was a member of the Church of Christ and the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Survivors include his wife; three sons, H. Glen Keown of Klamath Falls, Ore., W. Lee Keown and L. Eric Keown, both of Midland; a brother, Crown Keown of Louisville, Ky., and six grandchildren.

Pallbearers will be Jim Bradshaw, Bill Auburg, Oscar Jones, Ben Greenfield, Russell Stipp and Bob Lacy.

Honorary pallbearers include Dick Jones, Charles Pagan, Carl Copeland, Raymond Welch and Rob Mallow.

The family suggests that memorials be directed to Hospice of Midland.

Estelle Bridgers

Estelle S. Bridgers, 68, of Waco died Sunday evening at a local hospital.

Services will be at 3:30 p.m. Wednesday at Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with Dr. Jarrell Sharp, pastor of St. Luke's United Methodist Church, officiating. Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park.

She died in Midland while visiting her daughter, Sharon Lee Goodwin.

Mrs. Bridgers was born Jan. 6, 1916, in Florence. She spent her early life in San Marcos and attended schools there. She graduated from Southwest Texas State University in 1940 with a degree in education. She began her teaching career in the Rockdale public school system.

Mrs. Bridgers met and married David L. Bridgers in San Marcos in 1957. They moved to Corpus Christi in 1959 and lived there until 1963 when they moved to Abilene. After moving to Midland in 1968, her husband became general manager of Midland Country Club. They returned to Abilene in 1979 and moved to Waco in 1982. Mrs. Bridgers was here visiting her daughter when she had an attack.

She is survived by her husband and daughter.

Billie J. Little

Services for Billie Jean Little, 55, of Midland were to be at 4 p.m. today in Hubbard-Kelly Funeral Home, Odessa, with the Revs. Paul Miller and Bob Porterfield officiating. Burial was to follow in Sunset Memorial Gardens.

Mrs. Little died Saturday at her home.

She was born Marh 17, 1929, in Athens. She married James O. Little Nov. 28, 1946, in San Angelo. She was a legal secretary and member of the San Angelo Bethel Baptist Church.

Survivors include her husband; a son, James Cary Little; a daughter, Sherry Roundtree; her father, Tom Finley, all of Midland; and seven grandchildren.

Mabel Grafa

Mabel Grafa of Midland died early Tuesday morning at a local hospital.

Services are pending at Ellis Funeral Home.

George Freetage

George Freetage of Midland died late Monday evening at a local hospital.

Services are pending at Ellis Funeral Home.

Edward Mooney

Edward Mooney, 68, of Midland, died Saturday in a Midland Hospital.

Services were to be today at the First United Methodist Church in Hobbs with the Rev. Gary Hubbard, pastor, officiating. Burial was to be in the Prairie Haven Cemetery in Hobbs.

Mooney was a retired printer for the Hobbs Daily News Sun and a veteran of World War II.

Survivors include his wife, Pauline; two sons, Asa Mooney and Eddie Mooney, both of Midland; a daughter, Joan G. Girrity of Bellbediur, N.J.; a brother, Bill Mooney of Bellbediur, N.J. and two sisters.

Workshop will be held on waste disposal site

From Staff Reports

Permian Basin residents interested in the continuing process leading to the opening by 1986 in Texas of a landfill for the disposal of low-level radioactive waste should register for Saturday's Keystone Workshop at the Airport Executel.

The registration deadline is Wednesday for the Midland/Odessa workshop to be held from 8:30 a.m.-3:30 p.m. Saturday at the Airport Executel. Sponsored by the Women Voters of Texas Education Fund, the $5 charge covers materials and lunch provided for the seminar.

Because of the geological and ecological requirements set up by the Low-Level Radioactive Waste Policy Act of 1980, several of the sites that have been considered lie in West Texas — some as close as the Howard County-Big Spring area.

In reaction to the 1980 federal mandate, Texas passed its own legislation which formed the Texas Low-Level Radioactive Waste Disposal Authority. This agency is expected to select a site for the landfill, but has encountered resistence from residents of the areas under consideration.

The state has until 1986 to find a place to put its low-level wastes — the less hazardous remnants of nuclear applications in business, industry, medicine and research.

Those interested can register by contacting Ken Kramer, Project Director of the Keystone Education Project, 600 W. 28th St., Suite 101, Austin 78705 or by by phoning Kramer at (512) 476-6962 or state LWV president Lois Carpenter in Midland at 685-3388. Those wishing to register the day of the seminar will be welcomed.

The workshop will survey the needs of the area for hazardous waste management, review different technical approaches to the disposal of the radwastes and consider techniques chosen by other states. It will focus on all types of hazardous waste management.

Late last week, the Texas House subcommittee studying low-level radwastes issued a statement calling for a moratorium to the site selection process and development of the facility. Should Texas develop its site while others resist, it could end up the dumping site for several states' radwastes.

The subcommittee sent a letter to House Speaker Gib Lewis calling for the moratorium, suggesting the process was moving ahead too quickly, said Kramer of the Lone Star Chapter of the Sierra Club.

The Keystone Process was developed by a number of citizens who attended work sessions in Colorado in 1982 at the Keystone Center. It is meant to complement the current siting process being administered by the state agency.

A local citizen review committee developed through these sessions would work with the prospective waste facility site developers prior to filing of the application for a permit to construct the facility.

Speakers at the seminar will come from Austin, Houston, Galveston and Colorado.

Aggravated sexual assault charges to be filed

From Staff Reports

Formal charges are expected to be filed today against a 37-year-old man for aggravated sexual assault following a Monday night incident.

According to Midland County Sheriff's office reports, a 42-year-old Midland woman flagged down a passing Department of Public Safety trooper at about 12:30 a.m. today at a roadside park on East U.S. Highway 80.

The woman, who gave officers a Midland hotel address, told the trooper the man had approached her at about 11 p.m. Monday while she was in her car at the roadside park. Believed by sheriff's deputies to be a transient, the man assaulted her in her car before she escaped, reports said.

The suspect was caught about four miles east of the park by the DPS trooper. Five units from the sheriff's department responded.

The man was arrested on charges of aggravated sexual assault. He is expected to be formally arraigned today.

Police Round-up

A Monday afternoon fire resulted in heavy damage to the bedroom of a vacant house at 3212-A W. Kansas Ave., owned by R.J. Management. Blazing on arrival, the fire was confined to the bedroom although the rest of the house sustained heat and smoke damage. Cause of the fire was undetermined.

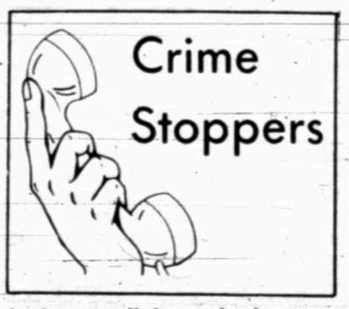
William A. Womack told police a storage building at 3200-A Commercial had been broken into and $1,795 worth of equipment and tools were taken between 6 p.m. Sunday and 10 a.m. Monday. Entry apparently had been gained by prying open a metal door.

A burglary of a trailer house at 2200 S. Lamesa netted $1,100 in cash and $300 worth of stocks in an oil drilling company. Bryon Alfred Hickel of the residence told police his house was broken into between 10 p.m. Monday and 2:14 a.m. today.

Jack Zengler of 2814 Cimarron reported his home was burglarized between 10 a.m. Friday and 4:30 p.m. Monday. The house was ransacked but a list of missing items was not available, according to police reports. Entry had possibly been gained through a door leading into the garage.

And three classrooms were vandalized sometime between 4 p.m. Friday and 11:30 a.m. Monday at Bunche Early Childhood Center, 702 S. Jackson. Police responding to an alarm found that entry had been gained through a window. The damage was estimated at $500.

Crime Stoppers seeks information on theft



A $1,000 cash reward is being offered by Crime Stoppers this week for information leading to the arrest and indictment of those responsible for the theft of a utility trailer from a Midland residence.

The 1983 model trailer was taken from Bob Hodges, 4719 Leisure, July 27. Witnesses told investigators from the sheriff's office that two male subjects were seen standing in the street in front of the house at about 11:30 p.m. that day. The subjects reportedly attached the trailer to a passenger car and drove west on Leisure.

The trailer was described as shopmade, 16 feet long and 6 feet wide. It was painted equipment yellow with a wood slat bed. The trailer was equipped with electric brakes on all four wheels, commerical-type fenders and loading ramps mounted underneath the trailer that pull out at the rear.

Those with information may contact Midland Crime Stoppers at 694-TIPS, and Odessa Crime Stoppers at 333-TIPS. All callers can remain annonymous.

Man found dead in Odessa City Jail

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A 51-year-old man was found dead in an Odessa City Jail cell Sunday night.

Doyle Wooten, 51, reportedly a transient, was found dead by officers at 9:32 p.m. Sunday in the city jail. He had been in the jail since his arrest Saturday for public intoxication.

Officers found Wooten unconscious and not breathing Sunday night. Attempts to revive him were unsuccessful. He was pronounced dead at 10:35 p.m. Sunday by Justice of the Peace Virgil Lumpee.

No signs of foul play were reported. Pending results of an autopsy ordered by Lumpee, Wooten's death has been listed as accidental.

Wooten was arrested Sept. 1 at 7:40 p.m. in the 200 block of W. 2nd St. for public intoxication. He was taken to Medical Center at 7 a.m., Sept. 2 for treatment for alcohol withdrawal and returned to the jail at 10:30 a.m. the same day, acording to reports.

He was found dead later that day.

New dancerobics session to start

New sessions in Dancerobics, a complete physical fitness program, will begin the week of Sept. 10 at Midland YMCAs.

The program consists of warm-up, aerobic and muscle conditioning exercise routines. No dance experience is necessary.

For more information on orientation and class times, contact Holly Williamson or Judy Reuter at the Central YMCA, 682-2551.

No YMCA membership is necessary and babysitting will be available for all classes.

'Basic Fitness' class to be available

A new fitness class is being offered this fall by the Central YMCA.

"Basic Fitness" is an introduction to important fitness concepts. Each class will include a discussion of selected topics such as heart rate monitoring, proper exercise and nutrition as well as a complete workout. Emphasis will be placed on the individual.

The class will meet at 6 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday for six weeks, beginning Sept. 11. Cost is $10 for YMCA members and $40 for non-members.

For more information, contact Holly Williamson or Judy Reuter at the Central Y, 682-2551.

Course to help those with back pain

The Central YMCA is offering an exercise program for those who suffer from lower back discomfort.

"The Y's Way to a Healthy Back" is a carefully designed and instructed exercise program to correct and prevent back pain related to muscle weakness, diminished flexibility and muscle tension. The format includes relaxation techniques and a gradually increasing sequence of flexibility and muscle strengthening exercises.

The course will begin Sept. 24, and will meet at 6:45 p.m. every Monday and Wednesday for six weeks. Cost is $50 for YMCA members and $65 for non-members. Enrollment, which is being taken now, is limited to 15 students.

To register or for more information, contact Judy Reuter at 682-2551.

Fashions from Albert Nipon Boutique will be featured in a trunk show from 10 a.m.-5:30 p.m. Wednesday and from 10 a.m.-4 p.m. Thursday at Julian Gold.

The Albert Nipon satin-striped leaf print silk, left, stresses elongated elegance. A lean silhouette is created by pleats falling gracefully from the contoured waistband.

The after-sundown suit, right, in navy velvet and ivory satin crepe, is another item in the Albert Nipon Boutique Fall line. The lined cardigan jacket shelters the tucked camisole sashed over a black slit skirt.

Oriental influence blooms

Copley News Service

Through the late '70s and on into the '80s, the Oriental influence has blossomed and boomed.

Whether it's the car in the garage, the rock garden or the architecture of the home you live in, the influence of the East has reached most of America. Inside the home, fans of all shapes and sizes grace windows and walls; hanging lanterns provide delicate light, and bamboo furniture and Oriental prints dictate the mood of another world.

Whether eating out or cooking at home, both Chinese and Japanese food are staples of the American diet. Sushi has become the latest craze in food fashion and Szechuan continues to enjoy an intense popularity among food enthusiasts.

American grooming also has seen the influence of the Orient in makeup with paler powders and more clearly defined yet subtle uses of color; in hairstyling with bolder, more dramatic cuts, and in clothing. Designers from the Far East are making bold statements in the world of fashion with designs and shapes that are changing the landscape of a world once dominated by Europe.

But the American rage for Oriental fashion has not stopped with clothing. Jewelry staples from the Orient, such as jade, cinnabar and cloisonne, also make significant fashion statements.

Ellen Kiam, who first imported jewelry for her Friendship Collection from mainland China 10 years ago, says the allure of jewelry from an unknown country first made it a success. But since, as with many things Oriental, it has been necessary to somewhat adapt the products to American tastes and lifestyles.

For instance, Kiam helped pioneer Chinese production of pierced earrings. Previously, she pointed out, all earrings made in China were clips, most with backs so wide American women wouldn't wear them.

But the techniques involved in making such jewelry are unchanged.

For instance, cloisonne came to China during the 14th century, where it flourished throughout the Ming and Ch'ing dynasties.

An intricate metal design is affixed to a hammered metal base. Enamel, known as soft glass or glass paste, is placed into the cells created by the design, along with pieces of real glass, until the individual cells for a single color are completely filled. The walls formed by this design provide an anchor for the different colored enamels and keep the colors separate and clear.

The piece then is fired until the glass paste has melted and fused with the metal base. This procedure is repeated numerous times until the enamel level is above the wire line. When the piece has been ground and polished to a state of semigloss, it is complete.

Most Chinese cloisonne still is made by hand, as opposed to production-made cloisonne. These differences in process result in a difference in appearance. Handmade cloisonne has a hand polished finish and is not as shiny as machine-made cloisonne.

Other popular Chinese jewelry-making techniques include cinnabar, which is layer upon layer of tree resin lacquer with intricately carved designs, and embroidered enamel, which is a twisted wire design on a background of enamel filled with contrasting enamel colors. The wire design is not completely filled, but left raised above the enamel to create texture.

Sunbelt fashions full of contrasts

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — An expanse of pristine white linen contrasts with the glitter of sequins and beads. Full flaring shorts bare the knees, while skirts fall in a plumb line to or ripple around the ankles.

The resort season is in full swing on Seventh Avenue, and it promises to be a season of contrasts.

These are warm-weather clothes, geared for the mild weather of the Sun Belt, for the women who live and work there as well as those who visit on midwinter vacations. So there are play clothes, to wear around the pool or at the beach, dressy styles for dinners under moonlit skies and classic blazers and trousers, useful at any time or place.

Ralph Lauren, as usual, favors the classics. His are timeless styles in linen, suede and cashmere that avoid the trendy and have an inborn sense of elegance, a word that is not bandied about much these days in fashion circles. His clothes were presented at a series of informal shows in his Seventh avenue showroom in what he called his "Palm Beach room," an environment consisting of a lot of fronds and a rattan sofa.

THE WHITE linen shirts and pants, pale cashmere sweaters and supple suede skirts and trousers looked comfortable and appropriate in the setting. Without going in for histrionics of any kind, Lauren showed clothes that will be as useful next year or five years from now as today. They have style as well as elegance, and his presentation was a class act.

So was the Anne Klein presentation of clothes by Donna Karan and Louis Dell'Olio. Somewhat more extensive in scope than the Lauren collection, with more colors and prints, the collection has a similar sense of enduring style. The blazer is a key element. With it go long shorts and long skirts, linen T-shirts and linen shirts. It is shown in prints and solid colors and it looks most practical in cotton chino, to be paired with separates in chino or almcombination consists of a long, widely flaring chino skirt, matching jacket and white linen shirt.

The sweaters, with their crunchy three-dimensional surfaces, are an alternative to jackets. They also come in patterns or solid colors. Proving once again that less is more, an all-white outfit consisting of linen shirt, long linen skirt and white sleeveless sweater has a strong sense of glamour.

JUMPSUITS, LINEN T-shirts, chambray and foulard-pattern silk separates all have their place in the sun.

Resort showings tend to be less awesome than the presentation of fall and winter clothes, which generally constitute the biggest season for most fashion houses. Most take place in the company's showroom rather than in hotel ballrooms or restaurants, providing an opportunity to see the clothes up close and even touch the material, an age-old Seventh Avenue tradition. But there are exceptions.

One was the introduction of Bob Mackie's collection in the auditorium of the Parsons School of Design here. No stranger to warm weather clothes, Mackie works in Los Angeles, where he designs for film and television as well as private lives. The theatrical flair shows.

He chose a circus theme, carrying it out in colors so strong they seem to vibrate, with harlequin details, ruffled cancan dresses, face masks in the shape of poodles or cats and trompe l'oeil zebras on the sleeves of a short black jacket. There was even a bearded lady in a jeweled crepe dress, but that seemed to be carrying androgyny too far.

IN BETWEEN, there were plenty of beaded dresses, a Mackie signature, as well as some more casual sweaters with red hearts knitted into them. Everybody enjoyed the oom-pah-pah of the circus music as well as the glitz. Annabel Nichols, Mike Nichols's wife, echoed the sentiments of many observers when she murmured at the end, "Beautiful clothes." It was the most ambitious of the week's presentations.

Bill Haire recalled his introduction of his "high-powered color palette" for sportswear just two years ago. His colors are still stronger than most, but they are just a bit muted. Crushed raspberry and chartreuse with mustard overtones are examples. Easy shirts with curved shirttails dipping longer in back, scribble prints and sweaters patterned with the faces of the models Liz Lee and Liz Brown, are some of the offbeat ideas. The sweater patterns, which look like computer printouts, were made from Xerox enlargements of photographs of the models.

Carmelo Pomodoro, the designer for Betty Hanson, paired bulky but lightweight sweaters with jacquard silk satin skirts and pants for an amalgam of casual and dressy forms. Sometimes the sweater repeats the gently colored flower pattern of the satin. Tropical worsted separates in pale shades and cotton lace full skirts are other innovative fashions here.

TWO DESIGNERS introduced new sportswear collections. The more modest presentation was Leo Narducci's. The design director of Dalton, the knitwear house, for the last three years, Naducci showed a well-rounded sportswear line under his own name. Prices are in the $60 to $200 range, styling is soft rather than hard-edged and Narducci has made good use of the parent company's knitwear facilities. Sweaters in stripes and other patterns are interesting without being ostentatious.

Albert Capraro, long known for his dramatic evening clothes, made his sportswear debut with a showing at the Hotel Pierre priced from $140 to $400. The collection emphasizes what used to be called dressmaker details. A blouse with a lace-edged collar, a red stripe down the sleeves of a small navy jacket, sheer inserts and embroidery near the hem of a full skirt — these offer a change from sportswear's usual Spartan look.

Hands key to watch styles

NEW YORK (AP) — Watches, which once were just a way to tell time, today are fashion items as well as technically advanced timepieces.

"More than ever before, a watch helps you make a personal trademark fashion statement," says Ed Goldberg, director of product design and development for the Bulova Watch Co.

"Watches are designed in a variety of shapes — square, rectangle, oval, hexagonal, octagonal and round — to mix and match with leather, reptile, goldtone, silvertone and duotone bands and bracelets," he adds. "They play a dynamic role in the way we present ourselves."

One of the most important aspects in the selection of a watch is the shape of your hand and wrist, Goldberg explains. Choosing the proper size and shape of watch face, band or bracelet can enhance the overall look.

For instance, he advises, a woman with a narrow wrist should not wear a wide watch face that extends beyond the sides of the wrist.

"It would only call attention to the smallness of her wrist and result in an awkward appearance," he points out. "It's far more flattering for a narrow-wristed woman to wear a watch with a smaller face so just enough of the strap or bracelet shows on either side."

On a wide wrist, a small watch face with too much strap showing will look lost and make the wrist and hand seem ungainly and even wider than it is. The smaller the watch face, the thicker the wrist appears, Goldberg notes. A wide wrist, therefore, calls for a bigger watch face.

Designers at Bulova have designated four major hand types, each of which looks best with a watch of different shape and size. Goldberg offers these tips for selecting a watch to fit your hand type:

— The oval or perfectly shaped hand: the fingers are slender, nails are oval shape, the hand itself tapers to a well defined, slim wrist. The woman with an oval shape can look good in any style of watch.

— The small hand with sleek, short fingers and narrow, oval-shaped nails and slim wrist can easily be overwhelmed by many styles of watches, so it's best to wear one with a small, rounded face. The one-color look — all goldtone or other matching watch face and strap — gives hands and fingers a longer line. A slim, thin bracelet watch is a good choice for a small hand.

— The wide hand requires a large watch with a round or oval case to balance the squareness of the hand. All the large fashion watches look attractive on a wide hand.

— The slender hand, long and tapered with a slim wrist, fingers and nails, looks best with a round or square watch case, which creates an impression of width.

DEAR ABBY

Daughter wants church to go with wedding

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter, "Etta," who is 22, went steady with "Rick" for four years. He's 23. Five months ago they drove to a distant state, found employment and started living together there. Last week they phoned to say that they had been married by a justice of the peace. But listen to this: Etta says she would like to come back home next summer and have a big church wedding like her sister had. She says it's always been her dream to walk down the aisle on her father's arm.

My husband doesn't want to give her a church wedding. He says since she's already married, she doesn't need a church wedding.

I tried to tell him it's not unusual for couples who have been married by a justice of the peace to get married again in a church.

He says to write to Abby, and if she says it's OK, he will compromise and give Etta a small church wedding.

What do you say, Abby? — IN THE MIDDLE

DEAR IN: Many couples who have been married in a civil ceremony by a justice of the peace choose to be married again in a religious ceremony.

It need not be large to be beautiful and memorable. Don't deny Etta a church wedding. Be glad she wants one.

DEAR ABBY: Will you please tell me why the three major networks (ABC, CBS and NBC) treat us, the listening/viewing public, as though we are a bunch of illiterate morons?

After President Reagan or some other dignitary has talked for 20 to 40 minutes, some newscaster comes on for another half-hour to tell us what was said. We are quite capable of understanding English and do not need an interpreter to tell us what the speaker has already told us.

I, for one, resent it! Care to comment? — GEORGE KELLY, DES PLAINES, ILL.

DEAR GEORGE: I don't resent it. In fact, I find the interpretations interesting.

DEAR ABBY: I really identified with "Outraged," whose son had a completely different hair color than her husband's and hers. I had the same problem, but I thought it was funny!

When I was pregnant with our first child, we lived out in the suburbs of Seattle, quite a distance from the stores. A truck from a local bakery came by twice a week. The driver was a handsome man with very red hair.

When our daughter was born, she had flaming red hair — and a lot of it! You should have seen the faces on the neighbors when we brought her home from the hospital! It was a riot! Naturally, there must have been recessive genes that picked up the red hair back a generation or so in both families. But it sure gave all our neighbors a lot to talk about. It didn't make me angry because, of course, there was no guilt!

The funniest comment of all came from the neighbor who said, "Boy, when you get BREAD, you really get BRED!"

Tell "Outraged" to just laugh it off. People aren't trying to be mean — the world is full of comedians! — REDHEAD'S MOTHER

Ultimate weapons: Home movies, slide shows

By ERMA BOMBECK

In a world where weapons become more deadly and more inhumane with every passing day, I am reluctant to suggest one that will end war forever.

It is called, "Home Slides and Movies."

I know, I know. What kind of people would stoop to inflicting that kind of pain? But think about it.

When people show up for a war, you simply pull down a large screen and show pictures of a dog chasing sticks, children mooning one another at the pool, mom coming out of a public restroom with toilet tissue on her shoe and dad squinting at the sun mouthing obscenities. Think how many lives it would save.

Frankly, I don't know how slides and movies got to be so deadly. I know my husband never meant to harm anyone with ours. All he said was, "Does anyone want to see the 500 slides on our weekend in the Smokies?" and the next thing you know Fred was comatose and Marge was holding ice cubes over each eye to remain conscious.

The camera itself is innocent — until it is loaded. Then it becomes absolutely lethal. No one is safe from its probing eye. If you are eating a ham sandwich where the fat unravels from your mouth like your intestines unfolding, it's all there on film. If you are lying on the beach in your bathing suit and your body has given way to gravity, providing shade for a thousand ants, it belongs to the ages.

Everyone worries about how they can protect themselves and their homes from aggressors in a war. What home does not have its own stockpile of home movies and slides? With a sign in your window, "This house is protected by a projector and 1,500 slides of a science fair project showing the birth of a compost," the entire neighborhood can sleep at night.

In our neighborhood the other week, Walter said, "I'm going to show my slides again of our trip down the Colorado River. Bring Dramamine."

"You do," said my husband, "and I'll show you our home movies of rump shots of 300 wildebeest in Africa which we chased for 18 miles in the dust."

"You wouldn't," said Glenn. "Then I have no choice but to show my slides of an Eydie Gorme and Steve Lawrence concert out of doors at night with the wrong ASA and my lens cap on.

We all held our breath. Was this to be the end of the world as we knew it?

Finally Walter said, "So, it's a lot of trouble setting it up. Let's just play some trivia."

Remember, cameras don't kill people. Negatives do.

Fall footwear designed for office

Copley News Service

Stodgy boardroom dressing — especially from the knees down — is on its way out, according to Italian shoe manufacturers. This fall, executive footwear will take its cues from a variety of heel heights, textures, colors and details. It's what the "bottom line" is all about.

According to Collete Hughes, associate director for the Italian Shoe Center, "This fall's footwear is the best yet for office dressing." Executive dressing today is more than a seersucker suit and plain navy pumps — "women want excitement in their office fashions," she says.

Career women also want versatility in their "9-to-5" dressing because many are finding that their workdays don't necessarily start at 9 a.m. or stop immediately at 5 p.m. "So they need a style versatile enough to carry through to other occasions," Hughes says.

The newest looks to watch for this fall in executive footwear are menswear, postwar and glamour, she says.

As casual looks have become acceptable in the office, the strongest influence has been menswear. Tweed and twilled trousers cuffed at the ankle with oversize blazers and oxford blouses are "in" this fall. Team these fashions with menswear-influenced lace-up oxfords, which look like his but are feminized with rounder toes and narrower silhouettes.

A comeback of the postwar look — chunky heels, low and sturdy — will be tailored for the executive woman with colors ranging from red to gray. Postwar styles easily can be teamed up with cropped slacks or this fall's fuller, longer skirts. Textured footwear will be important in this category, with mixes of reptile, mat and stamped leathers.

However, women can look glamorous in the office, as well. What should the glamorous executive look for? Higher, straight or comma-shaped heels in patent leather and suede. Special attention will be given to the back of the shoe, with an occasional bow or swatch of contrasting color.

Accessories spice up old wardrobes

By IRENE GARDNER KEENEY
Hearst News Service

Before you begin a frenzied buying spree this fall, first check your closet. With a pair of chocolate rib-knit stockings, last season's dress might be the star of your wardrobe.

That's the advice from Judy McIlvaine, product manager of the Wool Bureau, a trade association in New York.

"Two-piece worsted and lightweight wool knit dresses popularized last spring are terrific wardrobe investments," says McIlvaine.

Even if you don't have a worsted wool dress, you probably have other trans-seasonal clothes in the closet, just waiting to be transformed for fall '84. McIlvaine recommends the following fashion tips for making the warm-to-cool weather transition:

— Switch from open-toe shoes to closed-toe pumps or some of the new leather boots.

— Substitute worsted wool sweaters and silk blouses for the lightweight cotton tops of spring and summer.

— Wear a tweed or solid-color wool blazer over dresses and tops.

— Add texture with a wool shawl, sweater-vest or ribbed stockings.

Helen Donath of Corpus Christi, center, sits with her mother Helen Philpo and husband Klaus Donath. Mrs. Donath has traded in Texas tunes for operatic arias.

Texas singer stuns opera audiences

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Soprano Helen Donath began her opera career as a tenor.

She was a young girl living in Corpus Christi when she went to see the movie, "The Great Caruso." Her mother bought her the album, and she began learning all of Mario Lanza's tenor arias — phonetically.

These days, Mrs. Donath can pick and choose her parts at the invitation of the world's great opera houses. And La Scala in Milan, the Metropolitan Opera in New York, the Royal Opera in Londa and the Paris Opera clamor for her lyric soprano voice.

For more than 22 years, on these stages and on 90 albums, the Corpus Christi native has simply stunned them with song.

Mrs. Donath, 44, lives near Hamburg, West Germany, but was in South Texas in early August visiting her mother, Helen Philpo. With her was her husband, Klaus, a pianist and conductor, and their 16-year-old son, Alexander.

Her visit was a vacation, but the pace in Mrs. Philpo's home was set on vivace. There was a constant rush of conversation, a near-constant ringing of the telephone and an occasional lament from Mrs. Donath who said she must get some rest before her vacation ended.

She had just come from performances at the Olympic Arts Festival in Los Angeles.

"It was a huge success. It was a bomb on Los Angeles," she said, referring to "The Magic Flute," by Mozart.

"They just went out of their heads. There were standing ovations for 11 performances," she said.

Helen Donath has been detonating operatic bombs since 1962 when she first began performing in German, landing a singing position less than two weeks after her arrival there.

She left the United States just before she was to enter the Julliard School in New York to study for a master's degree, a piece of paper she now says is not as valuable as experience.

Mrs. Donath has experienced reviews as lofty as the peak of her vocal range — generally a high F. Reviewers have written that she has "a clear soprano that can melt stones with its musicality."

They have had nothing but praise for her "intelligent, but not intellectual" voice "endowed with a celestial high lyric range."

"Singing is all I've ever done since childhood," said Mrs. Donath, who earned her first dollar singing at the age of 11. The paycheck, never cashed, is part of the family scrapbook.

Mrs. Donath's friends at Corpus Christi Cathedral School remember her as Helen Jeanette Erwin, a champion speller.

At 14 she began studying voice under Carl Duckwall and continued studying with him until she graduated from Del Mar College in 1960. It is one of her regrets that he died before he was able to hear her perform with the Corpus Christi Symphony, her first professional appearance in her hometown.

Her career has been spent in Germany because, she says, that's where the majority of the opera houses are located. She has performed on five continents and says she is booked to perform through "1986 or 1987."

Producer searching for new Stooges

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Stooges are coming! The Stooges are coming!

Not in reruns. Not in 30-year-old movies. Larry, Moe and Curly are scheduled to return in a brand new comedy for theaters, "003" — a cut-rate, slapstick version of the James Bond spy capers.

How is that possible? The three original Stooges have died: Curly Howard in 1952, and Moe Howard and Larry Fine in 1975.

"We will launch a nationwide talent search for actors to replace Moe, Curly and Larry," said Norman Maurer, who is masterminding the Stooge revival. He is ideally suited for the job. He wrote the stories and produced four Stooge features and directed two of them. He is also Moe Howard's son-in-law.

Columbia Pictures, which made millions from the Three Stooges since they started making shorts for the studio just 50 years ago, has given the go-ahead for "003." If the new movie is a hit, more will follow. George Gallo is writing a screenplay, which Maurer expects in a week.

"Then we'll launch the talent search and work up a budget," said the producer in an interview. "I expect the cost will be in the medium range — $8 to $10 million. That astounds me. I made the last Stooges features for under $400,000."

Filming is expected to take place next year in England and Mexico, where the spy adventure takes place.

Three Stooges Curly Howard, left, Moe Howard, center and Larry Fine, ham it up in a scene from one of their episodes. Although all three have died, a natonwide talent search will be launched for actors to replace them in a new film, "003," a slapstick version of the James Bond capers.

If "003" comes off, it will mark another chapter in the unending saga of the three knockabout comics who have had an irresistible appeal for two or three generations of Americans.

It all started with a vaudeville comic named Ted Healy, a wild Irishman with an original comic style. In 1922, he hired a two brothers, Moe and Shemp Howard, as victims of his violent comedy. In 1925, a violinist named Larry Fine joined the act. Later Shemp left to be a single performer and his place was taken by the melon-headed brother Curly.

Ted Healy and His Three Stooges moved on to Hollywood, then in 1934 Healy went off on his own (he died in 1937). Moe, Curly and Larry began their long association with Columbia. After Curly's death, Shemp rejoined the Stooges. He died after three years, and his place was taken in turn by Joe Besser and Joe DeRita.

"The big popularity of the Stooges came after World War II, when the shorts were released on television," Maurer said. "The kids of the Baby Boom went crazy over the Stooges. They're adults now and their children are now fans. There's a big audience out there for our movie."

ENTERTAINMENT

Robert Morse says he was original 'Tootsie'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Robert Morse can't begin to count the number of times he's put on high heels and false eyelashes.

Though he dons respectable male garb for his private life, Morse has an alter ego named Daphne who struts her stuff in a blond wig and dress in the musical "Sugar."

The current Los Angeles Civic Light Opera production at the Dorothy Chandler Pavilion co-stars Joe Namath. The onetime football star also dons ludicrous female attire as one of two musicians who join an all-girl band while hiding from gangsters.

If the plot sounds familiar, it's because "Sugar" is based on the hit Jack Lemmon-Tony Curtis movie, "Some Like It Hot."

"I was the original 'Tootsie,'" Morse purrs, slipping into his Daphne persona. "I taught Dustin Hoffman everything he knows.' When the play ran on Broadway in 1972, Morse received a Tony Award nomination. Tony Roberts co-starred.

Morse and Namath only had five days of rehearsal together. "He came and he knew every line. There was never a problem," Morse said of his current co-star.

Namath towers over Morse, adding to the comedy onstage. "He's about 9 foot 3," Morse said. "He's an Amazon — the largest lady I've ever seen."

The actor, who was recently featured in episodes of TV's "Fall Guy" and "The Dukes of Hazzard," admits that at 53 the broad physical comedy of "Sugar" isn't as easy as when he first played the role.

"Now it takes a little more out of you — the high heels, the cramps in the legs," he said coyly.

Morse, winner of a Tony Award for "How to Succeed in Businesses Without Really Trying," said he moved to Los Angeles two years ago "to work in television, motion pictures, lawns, gardening, whatever I can do."

As Daphne, Morse clowns around the stage, at one point executing a hilarious sendup of a ballerina performing as the dying swan. But he said he wasn't difficult to transform himself into a woman.

"I try to be sweet and lovely, that's all I can tell you," joked Morse, once again slipping into Daphne. "When I started the role I was nice. Now I'm a little matronly."

But there's one thing he's serious about — his three daughters. Andrea, 21, and Robin, 19, are both actresses with respectable credits, while Hilary, 18, plans to attend fashion school.

"The newspapers can call you a bum but the kids always love you," Morse said.

Milk can pamper peppered tongues

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Palates peppered with flames prompted by potent peppers can best be appeased with a plentiful pouring of whole milk, according to researchers specializing in burning questions.

"It works better than water, salt, crackers or anything else," Marianne Gillette, a McCormick Co. researcher, said at a meeting of the American Chemical Society.

Director likes having writers around

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Director Arthur Hiller says he always smiles when an actor says something interesting on the set.

"I know I'll get the credit for it later," he said. "'A good Arthur Hiller touch' someone will write."

Hiller is a rare director who likes having writers around. On his newest film, "Teachers," starring Nick Nolte and Jobeth Williams, he worked closely with first-time screenwriter Bill McKinney.

"It seems insane to me not to get all the help you can from the writer," he said. "Afterall, they're the ones who first dreamed up the story."

Hiller worked with Paddy Chayefsky on "Hospital," Erich Segal on "Love Story" and Steve Shagan on "Nightwing."

Doug's Baby Store celebrates Expectant Mother's Day with big celebration sale

Doug Messer and Ina Adcock of Doug's Baby Store are celebrating Expectant Mother's Day with a big sale. All in-stock nursery furniture is priced to sell and infant and toddler clothing is 20% off. Many other baby accessories are also sale priced. Go by the shop in San Miguel Square this week and take advantage of the Celebration Sale.

Doug's Baby Shop is celebrating Expectant Mother's Day, which is September 9th, with a big celebration sale. Whether you are an expectant mother or just know an expectant mother this is a good time to visit Doug's Baby Shop, one of the finest baby store's in Midland.

Doug's entire stock of infant and toddler clothing will be 20% off through this Saturday. As always, his racks are full of clothing from popular manufacturers such as Chandler, Carters, Buster Brown, Nannette, Bryan, and Fawn Togs. Whether you are looking for sportswear, dresses, suits, or coats, Doug has it and he has it on sale.

Maybe you're trying to get a nursery ready for the "big event". Well, here's the perfect opportunity! Doug has all of his in-stock nursery furniture priced to sell. Childcraft, Hedstrom, Nod-a-way, and Lullabye are some of the best and most popular brands available and Doug offers free delivery and set up.

To help you visualize how a nursery will look with various styles of furniture, Doug has a number of vignette's set up. A different line of furniture is in each vignette and each group is accented with appropriate wall hangings, lamps, and other accessories. This will help you get a realistic idea of what your nursery will look like.

Doug will also have a number of miscellaneous baby accessories on sale all week. Doug carries so many unusual items that you will want to drop in and see what he has.

A special program to help you with baby showers is also available. For years, people havde depended on bridal registries to help them select wedding gifts. Now, Doug introduces the Stork Club. This baby shower registry allows the expectant mother to select items from the nine categories that Doug has. Those categories include: feeding (fancy bibs, food grinders, cup/dish sets, heated feeding dishes, high chairs, bottle warmers, etc.), bath (Washclothes, hooded bath towels, toilet trainers and much more), nursery (birth announcements, mobiles, diaper pails, cribs, changing tables, etc.), books (record books, snapshot books, and more), going out (backpack carriers, diaper bags, strollers, and auto seats), play (rattles, musical toys, dolls, plush animals, swings, and more), miscellaneous (pacifiers, teethers, toiletries, silver spoons, and banks), basic bedding and fashion bedding (sheets, quilts, pillows, canopies, dust ruffles, and too many other things to list).

This takes the worry out of gift selection. No one has to wonder if the gift will be duplicated or if the color is wrong. Doug keeps up with all of that. Doug's Baby Store also giftwraps and delivers the gifts the day of the shower at no extra cost.

Doug has a couple of gifts which he would like to give expectant mothers. Stop by and he will give you a pair of mittens which will keep your newborn from scratching himself (or herself). He also just received new complimentary copies of babytalk. This informative magazine is full of articles on subjects which interest new parents. For example: "Your baby's feet and shoes", "Woman's Health: Adjusting to motherhood", "Toddler Mealtimes", and "Gymboree!" are all part of this month's issue.

Take advantage of the big Celebration Sale at Doug's Baby Store and marvel at the wide selection of baby items he has in stock. Doug's is conveniently located in San Miguel Square. If you want to call to check on a particular item, the number there is 697-9890.

A little touch of Mexico from Carmen's Mexican Imports makes a big difference

Stepping into Carmen's Mexican Imports at 410 N. Terrell is like walking into a market in Old Mexico. Pinatas of all colors and sizes dangle from the ceiling, hope chests and jewel boxes line the aisles, and velvet paintings (from the very traditional to Michael Jackson) cover the walls. The shop has just about everything that you might look for in a Mexican market. In fact, you can browse through Carmen's Imports for hours and still overlook something.

Ponchos, serapes, and Mexican dresses with embroidered designs are plentiful at Carmen's. Carmen has the dresses in many colors and designs with sizes from infants to ladies. Suits for boys and girls, as well as charro hats, are also available. Carmen even has the men's dress shirts which are so popular in Mexico. They come in many pastel colors and really look sharp. Go by Carmen's today and see the largest selection of authentic Mexican style apparel available anywhere in Midland. You can walk out looking like a real caballero or beautiful senorita.

To accent your new outfit, Carmen has all sorts of accessories. Leather goods, hand carved silver, and cowboy hats are just a few of the possibilities. You can take your pick of a whole passel of leather belts, both in boy's and men's sizes. Men's and women's leather wallets and a wide, wide variety of women's purses are also in stock. Whether you are looking for something sort of small or something large enough to carry all your treasures home in, Carmen has it. The silver at Carmen's is hand crafted by Texco, a company which is well known for its silver work. Just as in the market in Mexico, Carmen's Imports has a display case which is absolutely full of Texco silver in many styles. You can be sure with such a large selection, you will find something to fit your taste. You will also find a cowboy hat which will fit you perfectly. Various creases are available in these traditional straw hats at Carmen's.

Carmen doesn't stop with clothing and accessories. You will also find everything you need to make your next celebration una grande mexicana fiesta! Imagine colorful pinatas hanging from the ceiling and a Mexican flag covering one wall. Add to that a table covered with a beautiful Mexican tablecloth and food, made with Mexican spices from Carmen's. A great selection of Mexican curios will help you complete your decoration. Take a chess set or backgammon set and settle down to a friendly game at a rod iron patio table. Meanwhile, the children can play with the dolls and Mexican games which you also find at Carmen's. In addition, Carmen has Mexican tapes you can play in the background and guitars ranging from $22 to $195 so you can entertain your guests, yourself. So that your guest can play along, Carmen carries other Mexican musical instruments. What a difference a little bit of Mexico from Carmen's can make in a party!

With Carmen's Imports helping, decorating your home is as much fun as having a party. Start with some colorful flower pots and a rod iron staircase shelf to place them on. Or, try a rod iron bird cage. Carmen has many sizes, some are large enough for a parrot while others are small enough for a parakeet. Rod iron baker's shelves can also add a nice touch to your home. To bring a little light to your home, Carmen suggests a Mexican chandelier. The wide variety of velvet paintings, along with decorative ships, will help you decorate your walls. Carmen also offers you a variety of religious statues, hope chests, and jewel boxes, as well as beautiful bedspreads.

In addition to the wide selection of articles from Mexico, you will find great bargains on stereos, televisions and sewing machines at Carmen's Imports. The Pilot stereos range in price from $399 to $1195, all being approximately $50 under the suggested retail price. Car stereos are also available. Likewise, Carmen's new Teknika televisions are a great value. The Nelco and Nuke sewing machines which you will find at Carmen's are backed with 62 years of service experience. You just can't beat the bargains you will find at Carmen's Mexican Imports.

Carmen and Roy Herron have nearly everything that you might look for in a Mexican market. Walls lined with velvet paintings, tall stacks of ponchos and serapes, and religious statues are just a few of the things you'll find at Carmen's Mexican Imports, 410 N. Terrell.

Go by Carmen's today at 410 N. Terrell. You will feel like you've stepped into a Mexican market place. With over 4,000 items from Mexico in stock, they are sure to have something to meet your need.

Charles McPike, 73, is one of the few remaining mill workers living in Boettcher's Mill on the outskirts of Huntsville. He would like to see the community annexed by Huntsville.

Huntsville may annex company sawmill town

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Back when the oil industry was just a little squirt and timber was king, Boettcher's Mill was a thriving company sawmill town on the fringes of Huntsville.

It produced millions of board feet of lumber, much of it used for frame homes built 60 years ago that are still standing in Huntsville and Houston.

Built on the eve of the Great Depression, Boettcher's Mill was a small town in itself, providing basic services such as housing and running water.

The mill area was never a high-rent district and since the mill closed in 1969, the community of about 200 homes has fallen into general disrepair.

Some homes do not have running water. Sewage flows from back yards into driveways. The streets are dusty, trash-lined dirt roads.

But Huntsville, which now surrounds Boettcher's Mill, is now considering annexing the community and reworking the area's water and sewer lines.

Sawmill towns sprung up after the Civil War and thrived until the 1950s and 60s when many were forced out by competition from international lumber conglomerates.

Boettcher's Mill was a typical southern company town complete with workers' houses, a company store and company script on a pay day.

"The company towns were an offshoot of the southern plantation farms," said Gerald Holder, a Sam Houston State University geology professor.

"In many cases the worker's condition bordered on that of an indentured servant who depended on the company for everything. But it was servitude by choice because for a long time after the Civil War, the southern man had nothing to offer but his strong back. For many it was either work at the company town or starve," Holder said.

Mill workers were never paid a high wage and undoubtedly many went over their heads into debt with the easy credit at the company store. But, the mill towns offered security for the economic refugees who sought only jobs and a roof over heads, said Holder.

By the most accounts, the workers at Boettcher's Mill were not taken advantage of.

Edward Boettcher Sr., the son of a German immigrant, was a benevolent patriarch who looked after his workers and often sponsored charitable company events usch as deer-hunting parties.

"Old Man" Boettcher also had a feisty side and enjoyed jousting with the town's landed gentry who looked with disdain at the outside influence the mill brought in said, C.J. "Clinton" Boettcher, 57, a Huntsville developer and son of Boettcher.

"We were the outsiders to the town folks. They thought the way we worked was disgusting. They also resented the fact that we were self-sufficient and never asked anything from them," Boettcher said.

Merchants bitterly complained in the 1950s that the mill drained the local economy. By that time the mill had stopped issuing company script and was paying its workers cash they could spend either in town or at the Boettcher commissary.

In a move to prove the merchants wrong, "Old Man" Boettcher one day paid the mill hands in $2 bills. "Those damned bills flooded the town and kept turning up for weeks afterward. We never heard again how little he helped the town," said Clinton Boettcher.

Despite years of profits and an effort at automation, Clinton Boettcher closed the mill down in 1969 after he was faced with new federal government regulations he couldn't meet.

The family sold off what they could and little is left of the mill today. A giant steam-driven saw rests rusting in a berry-strewn field next to the site of the old mill, which has long since been levelled.

The old company store is boarded up, donated to a local church for its missionary work.

In the past 10 years, the entire character of the old mill town has changed. Elderly white mill hands have been replaced by waves of Hispanic immigrants that have moved in to live in the low-cost housing.

Charles McPike, 73, is one of the few remaining mill workers left living in Boettcher's Mill and keeps an eye on the dilapidated buildings.

McPike started working for Boettcher as a log hauler in th 1920s, driving a mule team for $2.50 a day.

McPike is one of the big supporters of annexation. He wants the city to install water meters at each home.

Although the city provides water service to the community, few homes are individually metered. The city bills the community for total water consumption off a water meter on the main line that serves the 200 families that live there. The monthly bill totals more than $90 during the summer.

"It's a big mess and we can't get a lot of people to pay their share," said McPike.

Lupe Rodrigues, 41, a former mill hand who has lived in Boettcher's Mill for the past 27 years said most residents support annexation by Huntsville.

Rodriguez owns the community's only grocery store which fronts on Boettcher Mills' lone dirt main street.

"Sure we know we would have to pay more taxes, but we need the services. We need new water services and there are places where the sewerage is boiling out of the ground," he said.

"And who knows, maybe we'll be able to attract some industry to the area and have more jobs for people to work in," Rodriguez said.

M.A. Lebron

COPPELL, Texas (AP) — Two years ago, Mariasela Alvarez Lebron was jetting around Europe and South America as an international beauty queen.

Today, the former Miss World of 1982 is married and settling into the role of suburban housewife and mother.

The 24-year-old native of Santo Domingo, moved to this northwest Dallas suburb six weeks ago with husband Alberto del Pino, a marketing executive with Jack Tar Hotels.

The phone calls still pour in from outside the country, but they are relatives — not agents — calling to ask about her new baby, 2-week-old Andres Alberto del Pino.

"Now I hope my life stays like this for at least a year," she said, recalling her fast-paced life visiting 18 European and South American countries and catching planes every day.

Even with the slower pace, she still remembers the fashion changes and press conferences that filled her life only a year ago.

Her title carried with it $8,000 in prize money, $35,000 worth of modeling contracts with sportswear, computer and fur coat companies, as well as numerous commitments to model in charity fashion shows on two continents.

Winning was as much of a surprise to her as London bookmakers who had given odds of 20:1 that she'd win. "I never thought I could win," she said.

She was already packed and ready to leave when she found out she had won.

"The next morning I had to get up at 6 a.m. to iron my clothes for a press conference," she remembers.

She finished her university studies, got a degree in architecture and "after the baby is a year old, I want to work as an architect and use every opportunity here in Dallas."
