Powell for '96

WASHINGTON — He believes in free enterprise and lower taxes and is put off by "patronizing liberals." Yet he supports abortion rights and gun control and was alarmed by a "troubling mix of politics and religion" at the 1992 Republican convention. Colin Powell, it turns out, is an awkward fit in today's politics, a self-described "fiscal conservative with a social conscience." And both parties are trying to assess the impact the retired general would have if he decided to enter the 1996 presidential race.

Independent GOP

WASHINGTON — The Senate's centrist Republicans have begun tempering the spending cuts emerging from Speaker Newt Gingrich's House, restoring some money for education, job training and environmental protection.Even so, the Senate's softer stance won't avert a veto battle between Congress and President Clinton over the budget. Story page 10A

Board: Victims' families may witness executions

■ Policy allows up to five members of family to be present at death of loved one's killer.

Associated Press

CORPUS CHRISTI — Thomas Dillon wants to see the man who murdered his stepson — he wants to watch the killer be killed.

On Friday, Texas prison officials gave him that opportunity, unanimously approving a policy allowing families to view the executions of their loved ones' killers.

"To have that final closure, we need to look into the eyes of the man that did it," said Dillon, whose 20-year-old stepson was stabbed to death two years ago during a convenience store robbery.

"It wouldn't be a thrill; it would be a closure," he said.

The policy adopted by the Board of Criminal Justice allows up to five members of a victim's family to witness an execution. The witnesses must be at least 18 years old.

The policy is contingent upon a legal opinion by Texas Attorney General Dan Morales, who said he supports the idea.

Currently, up to five people chosen by the condemned (usually family or a lawyer), five media representatives and an unspecified number of state witnesses are allowed in the death chamber's observation room. The room has thick glass overlooking the area where the inmate is strapped into a fixed gurney.

Board vice chairman Ellen Halbert, herself an assault victim several years ago, said victims' families also have the right to be present.

"I don't think that any of us who haven't lost someone we loved can know what it would take for closure. I believe the victim needs to have a place in this execution," she said.

Killing pleasure

Tough new law seeks to wean French drivers off liquid lunches

PARIS (AP) — A tough new law against drinking and driving — as French as Burgundy with brie — declares many people legally drunk if they have more than two glasses of wine.

Only two? Sacre bleu! say some French intent on shielding their beloved "bon vivant" lifestyle from the law that took effect Friday.

"Working your way through a good bottle of wine is one of life's great pleasures," said Dominique LeValle of Versailles, sipping Chablis at a Paris bar.

'It's crazy. It's too stiff. Even the police like to drink. They come in here and have three, four, five beers.'
— Franck Tardivat, pub owner

"That doesn't mean you have the right to go out and kill someone," she added. "But neither does the government have the right to kill our pleasure."

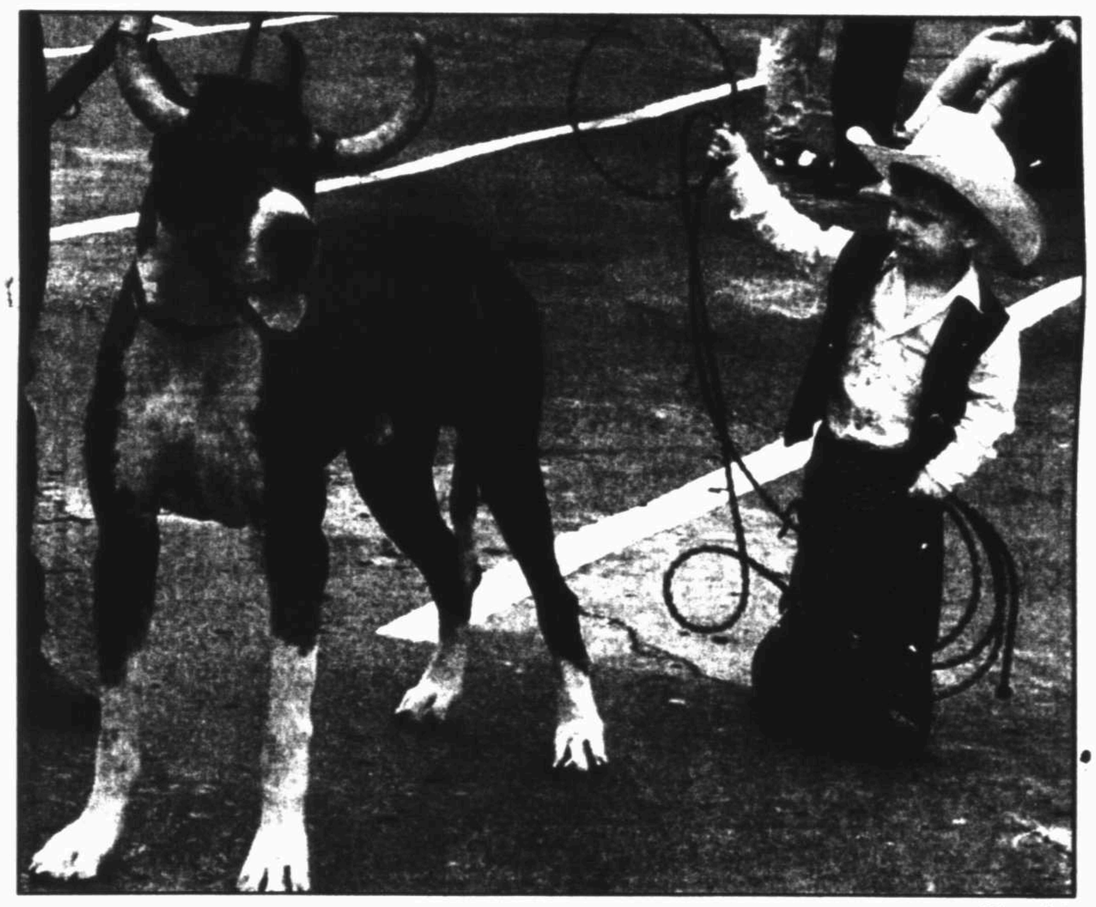

The new law toughens restrictions on blood alcohol content for French drivers. The government coupled the crackdown with a media blitz using the slogan: "After two glasses, everything speeds up."

Depending on a person's size, metabolism and other factors, drinking more than two glasses of wine, beer or spirits could put him or her over the new limit of 0.5 grams of alcohol per liter of blood, down from 0.7 grams.

The new limit translates to a blood alcohol content of about 0.065 percent. Most states in the United States consider a person legally drunk when they reach a blood alcohol content of 0.1 percent, although some have recently toughened the laws to 0.08 percent.

The new limit gives France one of the strictest drunken driving laws in Europe. Those caught over the limit will be fined $180 and will lose three points on their

FBI agent stomps on O.J. defense expert's bloody imprint testimony

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An FBI expert punctured the seemingly invulnerable testimony of defense forensic sleuth Henry Lee, telling O.J. Simpson jurors Friday the renowned scientist saw possible shoeprints in some places where there were none.

In another blow to Simpson, Lee said he won't voluntarily participate in the trial any more even though the defense has asked him numerous times to be available as a witness during the trial's next phase.

"A trial should not become a game. I'm a little bit disappointed about the whole process," Lee said.

The testimony of William Bodziak, an FBI footwear expert, struck a shattering blow to the defense theory that the traces of two killers could be found at the scene of a double-murder by following their footsteps on the walkway.

Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Cries of "Viva, Mexico!" were heard from Centennial Plaza Friday night as Midlanders commemorated Diez y Seis de Septiembre (16th of September), the day Mexico declared its independence.

Councilman Jose Cuevas, on behalf of Midland Mayor Bobby Burns, read a proclamation honoring "our sister Republic to the South."

"This marks the 185th anniversary of Hildago's declaration of independence," Cuevas said.

Miguel Hildago y Costilla sought to lift the tyranny of viceroys and councils — appointed by the king of Spain — over the poor Indians, Mestizos and Criollos (people of Spanish descent born in America). Although he declared Mexico free on Sept. 15, 1810, the Mexican national holiday is celebrated Sept. 16.

"This is like celebrating Fourth of July for Americans," said Rafael Vargas.

Groundbreaking case seeks to lift anonymity on Internet

CHICAGO (AP) — Anonymity and freedom of speech in cyberspace are being challenged by a Caribbean resort owner in a court case that could dramatically restrict the rights of computer network users.

The resort owner and a scuba instructor claim they were defamed on a computer bulletin board by an anonymous user, and they asked a judge this week to force America Online to reveal the name of the subscriber so they can sue the person for libel.

If Arnold Bowker and John Joslin are successful in obtaining the name, it could have serious implications for millions of people who use the Internet to think, write and debate in a world where they are identified by their ideas, not their names.

Technology experts fear a morass of court cases that would hold computer users accountable for what they say

Also, the school is hosting a fund-raising Halloween carnival 6 p.m. Oct. 14 at Ector County Coliseum, Barn D.

Judge vacates order for mother to speak English to daughter

CANYON (AP) — An Amarillo judge has vacated his order that demanded a woman speak English to her 5-year-old daughter.

Bill Piatt, a law professor at Texas Tech who mediated the dispute, said State District Judge Sam Kiser vacated his Aug. 16 order Friday afternoon.

Kiser had ruled in a child-custody hearing that the girl's ignorance of English was abusive and doomed her to life as a maid, a comment for which he later apologized.

"The order I signed stands, but my apology for a mischoice of words in trying to explain the reasoning behind it is sincere," Kiser said last week.

Kiser ordered Marta Laureano, a bilingual Mexican native, to speak English as well as Spanish to her kindergartener. Ms. Laureano says she was speaking Spanish so the girl could grow up bilingual.

Kiser had ruled on a motion filed by the woman's attorney to set aside his order.

In court-ordered mediation, the couple agreed that English proficiency would be in the best interest for the child, according to a spokeswoman in Kiser's office.

Today mostly cloudy, chance of rain

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for mostly cloudy skies with a 30 percent chance of storms or thunderstorms and southeast winds 10-20 mph. The high is to be in the mid-80s, according to a forecaster at the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

Tonight's forecast calls for mostly cloudy skies, a 30 percent chance of storms or thunderstorms and a low in the mid-60s.

Sunday's forecast also calls for mostly cloudy skies, a 30 percent chance of storms or thunderstorms and a high in the mid-80s.

After an overnight low of 66, Friday's high reached 79, compared to the record high for that date of 100 set in 1965. The record low was 47 set in 1993.

Friday, a flash flood watch was in effect for most areas from the Guadalupe Mountains through the Permian Basin to the South Plains

Tropical moisture from the remnants of Hurricane Ismael over Northern Mexico continued to stream across West Texas dumping rain.

Three inches of rain fell by early afternoon in Lubbock, where police closed a few low-lying intersections.

Sgt. Tony Gribben said officers worked about 20-25 wrecks he blamed on deep water that caused mechanical failures and speedy drivers to lose control. There were no major injuries, Gribben said.

NATION

The shreds of Hurricane Ismael brought rain from Arizona and New Mexico into the southern Plains on Friday, while showers ranged through the Mississippi and Ohio valleys and east to the mid-Atlantic coast.

Roads were impassable around Hobbs and Carlsbad, N.M., thanks to the 3 to 4 inches of rain that fell from Thursday to Friday afternoon.

There were also locally strong thunderstorms in the northern Plains.

A cold front that pushed into the Ohio Valley and central Plains brought significantly cooler air, dipping temperatures to freezing in the Great Lakes region.

In the Caribbean, Hurricane Marilyn was about 50 miles off St. Croix, in the U.S. Virgin Islands.

There was a chance of showers and thunderstorms from the northwest corner of Nevada to western Oregon and northern California.

Severe thunderstorms and locally heavy rain were possible from southeastern Arizona through New Mexico and into Texas and Oklahoma.

Clarification

A story in Friday's paper identified a John Adcock as the driver in one of two accidents that occurred Thursday on Highway 191. The driver was not John R. Adcock, owner of Adcock's Ideal Dry Cleaners.

The Reporter-Telegram regrets any confusion.

(From 1A)

"I'm not here to criticize what Dr. Lee said. I'm here to clarify," Bodziak said. He told jurors Lee mistook old tool marks on the concrete walkway surface outside Nicole Brown Simpson's condominium for fresh imprints, and he belatedly photographed other imprints that weren't present shortly after the murders of Ms. Simpson and Ronald Goldman.

In a news conference in Connecticut, Lee said his testimony was misinterpreted and contended that he never even testified about some of the stains that Bodziak told jurors about.

An obviously wounded Lee said he had no plans to testify for the defense during its rebuttal. He said he hadn't decided what he would do if the defense subpoenaed him.

He was adamant that he would not testify in a second trial if the jury is unable to decide this one.

"One time experience is enough," he said. "Life has to go on. Once a trial becomes a game, I'm not going to participate."

Bodziak, who criticized Lee's expertise when it comes to shoes, said he found Lee's testimony confusing and misleading — accusations that drew a heated response from defense attorney Barry Scheck on cross-examination.

"Are you telling us Dr. Lee is not sufficiently trained in footwear and impressions?" Scheck asked.

"I think his training is far less than mine," Bodziak said, adding that he has taught scientists who now work under Lee at the Connecticut State Police and do most of the shoe analysis for Lee's laboratory.

Under questioning by prosecutor Marcia Clark, Bodziak showed photographs of the walkway as well as pieces of evidence Lee said were marked with suspicious imprints.

He offered a series of opinions drastically different from Lee's. Among them:

n A series of parallel lines detected by Lee on the walkway isn't an imprint or shoeprint but tool marks from finishing the concrete tiles.

n A "wavy line" identified by Lee as an imprint "is an impression from when the concrete was poured. ... This is a shoeprint made in the concrete before the concrete was dry."

Lee's photographs of the crime scene, taken on June 25, 1994, show suspected shoeprints that are not seen in police photos taken June 13, the day after the killings. Clark's questioning suggested they could have come from the shoes of gawkers who flooded the scene after police left on June 13.

His conclusion was the same as when he testified earlier: A single pair of size 12 Bruno Magli shoes made the bloody shoeprints on the walkway. The prosecution has provided jurors with a tenuous link between Simpson and a pair of the Italian designer shoes, which were sold at the Bloomingdale's store where Simpson sometimes shopped.

Legal analysts were bowled over by Bodziak, the final scientific witness of the prosecution's rebuttal presentation.

"Bodziak was an incredibly strong witness. He may have given the prosecution that home run it needs on the one-assailant theory," Southwestern University Law School professor Myrna Raeder said. "Barry Scheck, in the time he had, was not able to do any real damage."

Scheck's cross-examination of Bodziak was to continue Monday.

Raeder said the explanation Bodziak gave made sense and was presented in a way jurors could understand.

Lee, who gave a flashy, often theatrical presentation, speaks with a strong Chinese accent that sometimes made him difficult to understand. Nevertheless, lead defense attorney Johnnie Cochran Jr. has said he considered Lee one of the most powerful defense witnesses.

"I think we all thought that Henry Lee was invincible because of his background," Loyola University Law School professor Laurie Levenson said. "Certainly, in the area of the shoeprints, I think Henry Lee has been out-experted."

"I think, frankly, this hurts the defense's credibility," she said. "It makes it look like the defense tried to get Henry Lee to give opinions that weren't valid and were beyond the scope of what he normally does."

Judge Lance Ito, who continues to worry aloud about the well-being of the sequestered jurors, gave them a pep talk at the end of Friday's session.

"I wanted to compliment you on your continuing level of attention," he told them. "I can tell by the expression on your faces every day that you're all tired — almost as tired as I am. ... I know you're paying attention. I know it's tough. But hang in there, we're almost there."

Clark has said she will rest her rebuttal case "conditionally" when Bodziak leaves the stand, which could be Monday.

CASE: Lawsuit seeks to lift anonymity

anonymously.

"What this case brings up is the specter of millions of libel suits every time there's a disagreement on the Internet," said Daniel Weitzner, deputy director of the Center for Democracy and Technology in Washington. "I think it's a critical issue."

The motion filed in Cook County Circuit Court charges that Bowker's dive shop at the Carib Inn in Bonaire, Netherlands Antilles, and instructor John Joslin were defamed by a message posted on an America Online bulletin board for scuba divers by a user identified as "Jenny TRR." The bulletin board is accessible to the company's 3.5 million subscribers.

In June, Jenny TRR wrote that she had a bad experience while learning to dive at the Carib Inn with an instructor who she said used drugs.

"Since I'm a little new diving needless to say diving with a stoned instructor was a little scarry. ... I won't mention his name but he's the only white instructor there," the computer user wrote.

According to Bowker, a frequent visitor to the Carib Inn told him of the allegations. Much of the Carib Inn's business depends on communication with customers via computer, said Lawrence Levin, the attorney for Bowker and Joslin.

When Bowker investigated the charges made by Jenny TRR and found them untrue, he posted a message on the same bulletin board rebutting them and asking Jenny TRR to recant, Levin said.

When no apology came, Bowker decided to sue for damages, claiming his business had suffered. But first he must find out the identity of Jenny TRR.

"The person who used this abused the privilege of being able to communicate with people worldwide on America Online," Levin said. "This has serious repercussions for businesses."

Several calls seeking comment from officials at America Online were not immediately returned Friday.

Abraham Haddad, chairman of the computer science department at Northwestern University, said the anonymity of cyberspace should be maintained as long as it was not used to commit a crime.

"There's really a need to protect people's privacy as long as no laws have been broken," Haddad said. "What would happen is people would think twice about saying things publicly. That really would be terrible."

WATCH: Officials OK family viewing of executions allow victims' families to witness executions — Virginia, Louisiana, Washington and California, according to Andy Kahan, crime victims director for the city of Houston.

The Texas Board of Criminal Justice, concerned about confrontations between the killer's and victim's families, adopted a policy in 1985 prohibiting victims' families from viewing executions.

To deal with that concern, prison officials plan to expand the death chamber viewing room and build a partition to separate the killer's witnesses from the victim's. That process could take several months, said prison spokesman Larry Fitzgerald.

"The reality is it may not be until the first of the year. I don't know," he said.

Mrs. Herden was stabbed six times with a hunting knife and beaten so forcefully that her dentures were knocked from her mouth, Herden said. Skin was torn from her arms as she struggled for her life.

For Herden, the ability to see his mother's killer executed will bring peace of mind.

"Being present at this execution will not serve as a time for me to cheer or to gloat or to celebrate," he said. "It will give me the opportunity to stand in for my mother and to finally know that after years of waiting for the endless appeals process, justice was served to both the convicted and to the victim."

Donna Watkins of Corpus Christi, whose brother was bludgeoned to death in 1972, said not all victims' families will want to be present at executions, but they should have the option.

"Give us a choice. Our loved ones had no choice, their lives were taken," she said. "I'm begging, I'm asking, I'm pleading: give victims' survivors that choice."

TOUGH: New law targets France's wine worshippers

it will be fined $180 and will lose three points on their 12-point license. Under the French system, driving offenses carry point penalties; when all 12 are used up, the license is suspended.

"Sure, it's tough, but we have to do something to keep people safe," said a Transportation Ministry official, speaking on customary anonymity.

Drunken driving was blamed for 40 percent of all fatal road accidents in France last year — 3,600 fatalities — and is on the rise, officials say.

Nearly 120,000 people were arrested for drunken driving last year, compared with 90,000 in 1988, the Transportation Ministry said.

French authorities contend the new blood alcohol limit will cut in half the risk of a deadly accident.

"For me, a drunk driver is a powerful murderer," said Guy-Paul Partouche, a Paris taxi driver.

The French are just as horrified as anyone else about the carnage caused by drunken drivers. But in this country where wine is worshiped and each harvest is cause for celebration, people are passionate about the right to live life to the fullest.

"It's crazy. It's too stiff," pub owner Franck Tardivat said of the new law. "Even the police like to drink. They come in here and have three, four, five beers."

The French are indeed Europe's most prolific drinkers, sipping and sighing their way through nearly four gallons of pure alcohol a year, according to statistics released Friday by the European Union.

Months before the new law took effect, the French started buying their own breath analyzers, sold for as little as $1 in gas stations and drug stores as a way to avoid arrests and accidents.

But Tardivat thinks most French won't pay much attention to the new law.

"They'll probably take it as a joke," he said. "If you like to eat a nice meal with wine, how can you stop after one or two drinks? It's impossible."

(From 1A)

"It is an opportunity for all Mexican people to remember who we are and where we came from, and where our families came from. We must never forget. Many of us still have family living in Mexico."

Jose-Luis Suarez, Mexican consul in Midland, said Midland has been having a Diez y Seis commemoration for six years. He lead the crowd with celebratory cries. The Mexican flag was presented by La Asociacion de Charros de Midland and the Midland Police Honor Guard presented the American and Texas flags.

"We celebrate Diez y Seis because it is freedom for Mexico," said Octavio Perez, 7. "I like it because we get tamales at my house."

The celebration will continue today with a 10 a.m. Charreada Parade beginning at the intersection of Lamesa Road and Parker Avenue.

In Odessa, the Basin Lions Club will feature Elida y Avante and other Tejano entertainers today at their clubhouse on Monahans Street.

■ Island residents took shelter from the fourth storm in as many weeks as heavy rain caused mudslides and heavy surf.

Associated Press

CHRISTIANSTED, U.S. Virgin Islands — Trees crashed, power failed and roiling seas flooded a waterfront Friday as the Virgin Islands took a pounding from Hurricane Marilyn's howling 105-mph winds and 12-foot waves.

Marilyn, the fourth hurricane to hit the Caribbean in as many weeks, struck as islanders on St. Croix still were repairing the damage wrought by Hurricane Luis with its 140-mph winds last week.

It then bore down on eastern Puerto Rico, including the islands of Culebra and Vieques. Residents in San Juan nailed windows and doors shut and bedded down to wait out the storm.

Marilyn's eye passed right over St. Croix. "It's dead calm," Lt. Gov. Kenneth E. Mapp told the radio station. Wind gusts of 100 mph were reported to the north in St. Thomas.

At Christiansted, the old Danish capital of St. Croix, the remains of the Cormorant Beach Hotel restaurant remained half-submerged in the sea where it was carried by Luis' 10-foot waves on Sept. 5.

Marilyn flooded towns, damaged dozens of homes and rampaged through banana and sugar cane plantations in the eastern Caribbean islands on Thursday, destroying the little that Luis had left of Dominica's vital banana crop.

As Marilyn gained strength to become a Category 2 hurricane Friday, officials shut airports in its path and opened shelters. Residents crowded supermarkets for last-minute supplies of batteries and food.

At 11 p.m. EDT, Marilyn's center was located near Vieques and was moving northwest at 8 to 10 mph, according to the National Hurricane Center in Miami. Maximum sustained winds were 105 mph with higher gusts.

Hurricane warnings were in effect northwest to Puerto Rico. Further west, the Dominican Republic issued a hurricane watch for its northeast coast.

The U.S. Federal Emergency Management Agency dispatched emergency response teams to the Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico, while Schneider ordered the National Guard to police a curfew from 3 p.m. Friday to 6 a.m. today.

In the U.S. Virgin Islands, carpenter Robert Charleston laid out extra anchors to secure his sailboat in a harbor scattered with vessels beached and flung onto the rocks by Luis. There was even one rusting victim left over from Hurricane Hugo, which ravaged the Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico almost six years to the day in September 1989.

Luis, one of the most powerful storms on record, killed 12 people on five islands as its tore apart homes, washed away roads and sunk 200 boats in harbor at the French-Dutch island of St. Martin.

"I'm tired of this," Charleston, 52, said as he headed home to hammer plywood shields over glass windows. He had just taken them down this week, after Luis.

Amateur radio operators relayed a report of a 127-mph wind gust from the National Guard on St. Croix, the National Weather Service said. High waves spilled across the waterfront of Charlotte Amalie, the capital on St. Thomas island.

In Puerto Rico, Gov. Pedro Rossello declared a state of emergency that enables him to seek federal aid.

Rossello asked citizens to take advantage of shelters, and civil defense officials said about 2,600 had done so. He also announced a temporary ban on alcohol sales, in effect until Sunday.

The National Weather Service's San Juan office warned people not to emerge from shelters in the deceptive calm at the center of the storm. "Do not be fooled by calm winds in the center or eye of Marilyn. Remain in shelter!" an advisory said.

In San Juan, Claudio Sosa Morales, 17, was electrocuted while helping a neighbor remove a TV antenna from the roof of her home before the storm hit. Morales was killed when the antenna touched power lines, said Freddy Marrero, a spokesman for the Electric Power Authority.

Puerto Rico's tourism agency reserved rooms in San Juan hotels for those tourists who wanted to leave but couldn't before the airport closed, said the agency's director, Luis Fortuno.

"They're having a ball downstairs," said an assistant manager at El Conquistador Resort and Country Club, referring to several hundred guests in the ballroom.

The hotel, one of the island's newest and most luxurious resorts, is perched on a cliff near Fajardo on Puerto Rico's east coast with a view of Vieques and Culebra and the approaching storm.

WORLD IN BRIEF

■ Mitterand chooses historic burial site

PARIS — Former President Francois Mitterrand has chosen to be buried at a site steeped in the romance of ancient history: the place where rival Gaul chieftains first united nearly 2,000 years ago.

Mitterrand, 78 and ailing with prostate cancer, has purchased a plot on Mount Beuvray not far from his birthplace in eastern France, his wife, Danielle Mitterrand, confirmed Friday.

The site is where, around 52 B.C., Gaul chiefs pledged to join forces under Vercingetorix and defend what would become France from Roman invaders.

"One might say that this is the first sign of French unity, and I love that symbol," Mitterrand said in April, when he visited the area to inaugurate an archaeological center.

The former first lady said Friday she had hoped to be buried along with her husband next to his parents in Cluny, another town in the region.

But Mitterrand, known for his keen sense of history, insisted on a gravesite that would make a statement.

Mitterrand served as president for 14 years before turning over the Elysees Palace to conservative Jacques Chirac in May.

■ Power cut leaves base in dark

MOSCOW — A military base in northern Russia used for unmanned space launches and ballistic missile tests had its power cut off Friday because of unpaid bills.

The Strategic Missile Force condemned the power cutoff by the Arkhangelsk regional power grid, which claims the Plesetsk facility owes it $3.4 million.

"If they continue settling debts like that, the combat duty of the strategic force would be on the verge of failure and the safety of nuclear weapons would be at risk," Col. Gen. Vladimir Nikitin, the force's deputy commander, said in a statement.

The military was negotiating with local authorities for the resumption of electricity.

Many branches of Russia's armed forces have run up huge energy debts, mainly because the government has been late in delivering promised funding.

Last year power to the missile force's central command post near Moscow was cut for four hours. Only a switch to a backup power system enabled control of intercontinental ballistic missiles to be maintained.

Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin said then that those responsible would be severely punished. However, a government directive issued in July allowed local authorities to cut energy to any facilities for debts, the military said in its statement Friday.

■ Veterans remember landing in Korea

SEOUL, South Korea — South Korean and American veterans tearfully remembered on Friday the U.S.-led amphibious landing at Inchon that turned the tide of the Korean War 45 years ago.

Hundreds of people lined the streets of Inchon to cheer and applaud the veterans, who were accompanied by armored tanks and 200 South Korean marines armed for battle. A U.S. military band added a festive air.

"I think it is very meaningful to remember this great operation which turned the tide of the war in favor of the allied forces," Inchon Mayor Choi Ki-sun told some 80 U.S. and South Korean veterans of the landing at a ceremony at the Inchon Amphibious Operation Memorial Hall.

Choi thanked those who "risked their lives ... for the cause of freedom and peace."

Earlier, veterans set adrift wreaths of red and white flowers in the waters off Wolmi Island to remember the 21 men who died to help put 13,000 U.S. Marines ashore.

Flowers were also laid at the foot of a 20-foot bronze statue of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, who ordered the landing at Inchon, a port city 30 miles southwest of Seoul, against the advice of most of the military establishment.

Bad economy casts pall over Mexican celebration

By Anita Snow
Associated Press

MEXICO CITY — Independence Day tinsel of red, white and green wink in the sun around the historic plaza where plumber Helanio Rey Martinez waits outside a centuries-old cathedral for offers of day work.

Besieged by Mexico's economic crisis, Martinez and many others weren't feeling festive as the nation kicked off the national holiday Friday, traditionally one of the biggest fiestas of the year.

The peso's drop, unemployment and recession have cast a pall over the usual flag-waving and noisy, drunken revelry by Mexicans marking the 1810 uprising against Spanish colonial rule.

Hundreds of thousands of people were expected Friday night in the Zocalo, the vast square in the heart of Mexico City, for the traditional "Grito," or Cry of Independence, and fireworks.

But beforehand, hundreds of laid-off bus drivers rallied outside Mexico's stock market, symbol of the financial crisis, while in a separate protest, garbage collectors in dirty orange overalls snaked past them demanding better pay.

Although President Ernesto Zedillo vows the economy will rebound next year, his words are little comfort to Mexicans thrown out of work or those whose paychecks buy less each week due to rising inflation.

"Since the beginning of January the economic situation has been very bad," said Martinez, 37, who sometimes goes a week between jobs.

AP Laserphoto

Protesting garbage workers from the eastern coastal Mexican state of Tabasco march through Mexico City's main plaza, the Zocalo, Tuesday.

The working and middle classes in this nation of 90 million have been hit particularly hard by the recession that began Dec. 21, when the peso lost 40 percent of its value.

Some 1.2 million people have since lost jobs and the economy has shrunk by nearly 6 percent. Industrial production is down 6.2 percent in the first half of 1995, inflation up 37 percent, and crime also is rising.

"The celebrations this year aren't like the celebrations of the past," said Julio Velasco, who sold Mexican flags in the plaza while hoping for steady work as a house painter. "This is the worst economic crisis I have seen. There is hunger all around the country."

The president promised an austere Independence Day celebration this year because of the crisis — scraping a big champagne bash.

The impact of "La Crisis," was evident at the national pawnship on the plaza's other side, where hundreds queued up to hock jewelry and other possessions.

"We can't celebrate Independence Day fiestas anymore," said Marta Sanchez, a 46-year-old housewife forced to pawn a gold watch. "The money we used to use to celebrate we must use for rent and other things."

Pawnshop employees say about $12 million was loaned in the first eight months of the year — as much as was loaned in all of 1994.

Thousands of people have taken to these gray flagstones in recent months to protest government austerity measures. Here also, a half-dozen peasants from the central state of Puebla were asking people to "cooperate" with a few pesos to feed their families.

In the northern state of Durango, six people had their lips and eyelids sewn shut with black thread in a desperate demonstration against double-digit interest rates.

More than than 1,000 pensioners, some in wheelchairs, last week besieged the congressional palace to complain that they were barely surviving.

Inside, Treasury Secretary Guillermo Ortiz was telling lawmakers Mexico was poised for economic recovery in 1996 after months of trade surpluses.

Many see no recovery soon.

Some 1.1 million people were officially out of work in December, when the crisis hit. But by June some 2.3 million Mexicans were without jobs, more than doubling the official unemployment rate to 6.6 percent.

Independent economists put the jobless rate much higher.

Velasco, standing amid plastic noisemakers and party sombreros his fellow street vendors were selling, said he saw no reason to party. "We don't want a deluxe lifestyle. We just want jobs."

Soldiers clash with settlers in Hebron

HEBRON, West Bank — Palestinians shouting "Settlers out!" stoned Israeli soldiers in widespread clashes in Hebron on Friday, a day before make-or-break talks between Israel and the PLO over control of the city.

The United States stepped up pressure on PLO chief Yasser Arafat to accept a compromise on Hebron that would allow a Sept. 21 White House signing of an overall Israel-PLO accord on Palestinian self-rule in the West Bank, a PLO official said.

U.S. Consul-General Ed Abbington met with Arafat on Thursday to urge him to accept the compromise, said the official, speaking on condition of anonymity. U.S. officials confirmed the meeting took place, but refused further comment.

Osama el Baz, adviser to Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak, also pressed Arafat to show flexibility, the PLO official said.

But Arafat is facing counter-pressure from Palestinian residents of Hebron, who demand that all Israeli soldiers leave. PLO negotiators insist that the bulk of the soldiers must leave, but have said they are willing to let some troops stay behind to guard the 450 Jewish settlers who live in the city of 120,000 Palestinians.

Israel has offered to pull out of several neighborhoods, but wants to retain overall control over Hebron.

Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres said Hebron remained the toughest issue. "Finding a solution for the situation in Hebron is like making eggs from an omelette," the Maariv daily quoted him as saying.

In Friday's clashes, hundreds of Palestinians chanting "Settlers out!" and "Allahu Akbar!" (God is great) hurled stones at soldiers in hit-and-run battles in downtown Hebron.

Troops fired several bullets in the air and wielded their clubs, but otherwise showed unusual restraint. They apparently were under orders to prevent casualties during a sensitive stage in the Israel-PLO negotiations.

Church must fight African corruption, pontiff declares

YAOUNDE, Cameroon (AP) — Standing before a mosaic designed by a murdered priest, Pope John Paul II asked African clergymen Friday to strike back at corruption and hopelessness that leaves their continent in "unspeakable suffering."

The pope likened Africa to a man left beaten and near death and said the Church must urgently come to its aid.

"This very sad situation ... also has internal causes such as tribalism, nepotism, racism, religious intolerance and the thirst for power taken to the extreme by totalitarian governments," he wrote in a landmark document released on the second day of a week-long trip.

His trip also includes South Africa and Kenya. The pope's next trip is an Oct. 4-7 visit to the United States.

The pope did not cite particular nations, but his comments rang loudly in Cameroon where two Roman Catholic leaders have been murdered since 1991. His words also were likely to resonate in Rwanda, where a number of clerics, including three bishops, were slain in last year's ethnic massacres.

The pope spoke to clergy and faithful in a cathedral decorated by a giant mosaic of two figures with outstretched arms designed by the Rev. Englebert Mueng, a Jesuit killed in April. In 1991, the body of 79-year-old Monsignor Yves Plumey was found in his bedroom. Neither killing has been solved.

"Beloved Africa, cursed by poverty and suffering that too often weighs upon you," the pope said to the congregation, which included people waving Polish flags in honor of the pope's homeland.

The ceremony included a Muslim leader in Cameroon who echoed the pope's call for dialogue with the Vatican. Sheik Mounir Pekassa suggested a yearly meeting between the two faiths as a way "to block the way of ... all fanatics."

In the 141-page papal text, the pontiff urged better ties with moderate Muslims who share the conviction that it is unacceptable to "kill another person" in the name of faith.

Sarajevo citizens rejoice as relief plane arrives at airport

By Kit R. Roane
N.Y. Times News Service

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Friday afternoon, Sabin Dzako heard a roar like thunder that shook the windows and brought tears to her eyes.

Outside, from the clear blue sky, the first of what she hopes will be a long line of cargo jets hit the tarmac of Sarajevo airport, bringing a long-awaited shipment of food and the first installment of psychological relief citizens of the besieged city have known in months.

"We all hope that we will be able to sleep peacefully now and have water and power like we used to," the 52-year-old woman said. "I was so happy, I cried when I saw the plane. It means the shooting has stopped and we are now free."

The opening of the airport was the fulfillment of the first part of a broad agreement with the Bosnian Serbs, who also opened the land routes into the city to aid convoys and, in the final hours of the day, began to remove their heavy weapons from the hills around the city.

In the neighborhoods around the airport — some of the worst-hit areas of the city — many citizens were euphoric.

Medzed Muzaferija, a local businessman, danced in the street as the second plane touched down. Then he spotted some of his company's trucks coming around the bend off the Mount Igman road, which has only recently opened to commercial traffic. Jumping in his Volkswagen Golf, Muzaferija popped a Roy Orbison tape into the tape-deck and cranked up the volume.

"I feel great," he shouted above the music. "This is the end of the war, definitely. It's over and there's no turning back."

Few people cared that the agreement signed by the Bosnian Serbs did not meet the original NATO ultimatum to pull all of their heavy weapons from the area, or that it was the Bosnian Serbs who would be listing just what they had and what they were willing to move.

Dobrinja, a suburb of Sarajevo off a long corridor of sniper territory, has grown weary of war, and the NATO air strikes have proved to them that the world has finally become weary, too.

"Who cares about those Serbs guns now, the U.S.A. has arrived and they are afraid to use them," added Muzaferija, pointing to the United Nations cargo plane about half-a-mile away. "This means the end of the Serbs."

Two aid convoys drove through Serb-held territory unimpeded Friday, carrying more than 350 tons of wheat flour and other food, while two planes reached the airport, one carrying aid, the other supplies for the U.N. forces.

Mans Nyberg, spokesman for the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees, said that Friday was the first time convoys had passed Bosnian Serb checkpoints without being harassed.

He added that eight planeloads of aid were slated to arrive today and that, if access continues September would be the first month in five that Sarajevans received the 6,000 tons of food per month promised by the United Nations.

He said he hoped that the shipments would also allow aid organizations to begin filling their vacant warehouses for the bitter cold months to follow.

"This will amount to the end of the blockade," he said. "It is the end of this Serb weapon against the citizens of Sarajevo."

"And they stopped," he added, "for no other reason than the NATO bombing."

The NATO air strikes, which began Aug. 30 in response to a Bosnian Serb mortar attack on a crowded market area in Sarajevo, opened the city to commerce several days ago. Food prices have plummeted, and shelling and sniping incidents have reached a year low.

In the markets, people recalled how at the height of the 41-month-old siege one egg cost $2. Now Sarajevans purchase a box of 24 eggs for about $10. The cost of bananas and potatoes had also reached record lows, and even alcohol was now becoming affordable.

About the only hold-out has been the price of cigarettes, which some tobacco hawkers attributed to hoarding. That would break, they said, at the first sign of a Marlboro truck in town.

Despite the new optimism, Sarajevo still has its skeptics, who recall how Western guarantees to protect them from Serbian shelling were not acted upon in the past.

Throughout the city, memorials and shell holes mark the sites of personal loss and death and many people doubted that these tributes to Sarajevo's dead would be the last.

"I don't trust the Serbs and I don't care what they say," said Edina Hadzic, an 18-year-old student as she sat with her friends in one of the city's shaded squares. "I still feel under siege and getting cheaper food will change that. They are still on the hills and can create a massacre any time they want."

N.Y. Times News Service

TILAVA, Bosnia and Herzegovina — On a dirt road through this hamlet about five miles southeast of Sarajevo, a column of three 105-millimeter artillery pieces, three tanks and two large mortars, as well as support trucks, was assembled just before 5 p.m. Friday.

An officer told the soldiers, "You have your orders, and you know the route we're taking. Keep the vehicles 50 meters apart and let's go."

With booms and roars from diesel engines that startled the children, cows and a goat who had come to the edge of a field to watch, the column set off over a small hill.

An officer said that the column would travel for two hours to a United Nations monitoring point and that other units in the region were about to do the same.

Finally, it seems, after more than two weeks of NATO bombing, the Bosnian Serbs are actually pulling heavy weapons away from Sarajevo, the Bosnian capital, which the Serbs have murderously pummeled so often over the last three years.

In return, the bombing has been stopped for now. While the proof of Bosnian Serb compliance will come from U.N. monitors and surveillance by NATO aircraft, Bosnian Serb authorities allowed reporters to see the departure of this military unit, which they said would be followed by dozens more.

It was either a good start or a good show.

As peace began to seem possible here, the offensive by Bosnian and Croatian troops that is recapturing large areas in western Bosnia continued, adding to the flood of tens of thousands of Bosnian Serb refugees.

Many of the refugees were heading toward the major Bosnian Serb-held city in the region, Banja Luka, which was ill-prepared for them.

Red Cross officials said that as many as 30,000 of the fleeing civilians had been stopped at the entrance to the city and told to go to the area around the town of Mrkonjic Grad, about 40 miles to the south.

While this implied that Serb authorities felt that Mrkonjic Grad would not be taken by the combined Bosnian government-Croat forces, the refugees were not willing to comply with the order, the Red Cross officials said.

"Most of the refugees will be very frightened, and will have fled their homes in a panic, without sufficient food or water even to reach Banja Luka," one official said.

"I don't know how they can be expected to just go back."

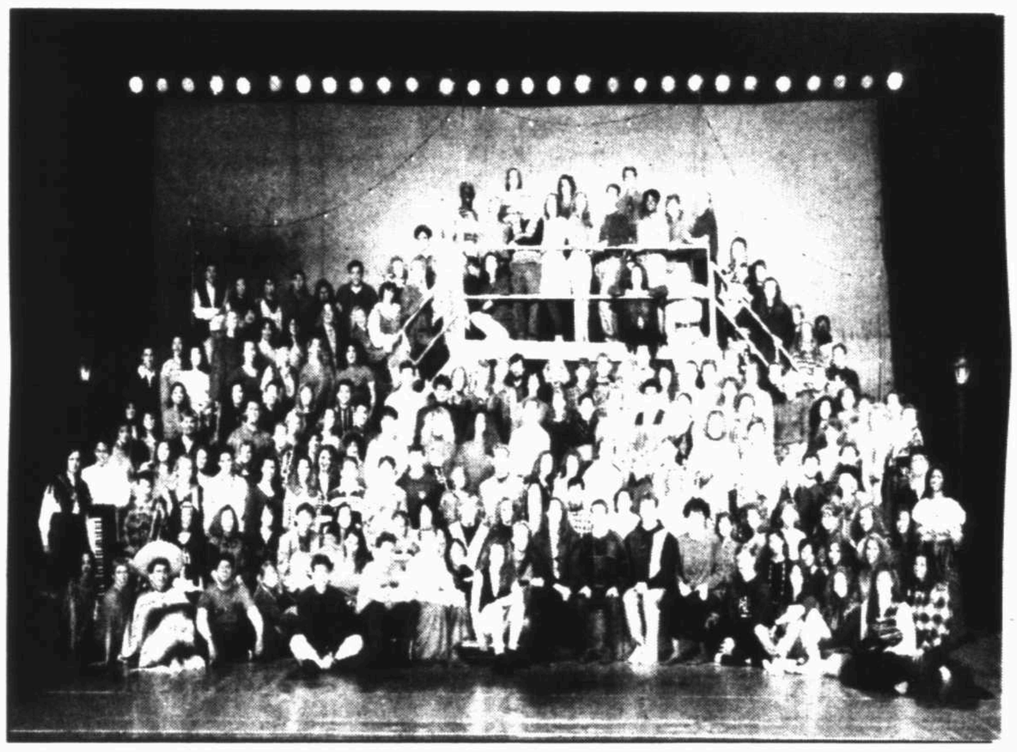

At the same time, officials reported that residents of Banja Luka were extremely concerned that their town would also be attacked. It is only a two-hour drive from the troops in the front lines of the Bosnian army.

Town's residents anticipate profits from bombing trial

LAWTON, Okla. (AP) — Traffic slowed Friday so people could take a fresh look at the three-story brick courthouse where the two men accused of the deadliest terrorist attack on U.S. soil will be tried next year.

Residents also prepared to profit from the onslaught of reporters and others expected here for the May 17 trial of Timothy McVeigh and Terry Nichols.

"I would hate to think that Lawton would want to capitalize on anyone's tragedy, but it will happen," Vice Mayor Glen Alford said. "The reason behind it is not of our choosing."

Media organizations already were snapping up the 1,240 motel rooms in this town of 85,000 following a judge's decision Thursday to move the trial to Lawton, 90 miles from the bombing site and about 35 miles from the Texas state line in southwestern Oklahoma.

Nichols and McVeigh face murder and conspiracy charges in the April 19 bombing of the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building in Oklahoma City, which killed 169 people and injured more than 500.

Lawton was carved from the prairie in 1901 and has depended throughout its life on nearby Fort Sill, a cavalry post that opened in 1869 and is now home to 20,000 Army soldiers. The Apache leader Geronimo was held there as a prisoner of war and is buried on the grounds of the fort.

It wasn't immediately known where McVeigh and Nichols will be held during the trial but speculation in Lawton has centered on Fort Sill, where clapboard buildings with peeling paint flank earlier structures of stone.

Federal authorities toured the post Thursday, but a Fort Sill spokesman said they had not received orders on housing the prisoners.

Defense lawyers had protested U.S. District Judge Wayne Alley's decision to move the trial to Lawton, arguing that it is too close to the site of the bombing for the suspects to get a fair trial.

"I can't recall a time when a civilian has been held here. We're breaking new ground," spokesman Jon Long said.

The courtroom where they will be tried was locked and dark Friday. Deputy marshal A.D. Templeton already looked tired from turning away reporters scouting the building.

Officials say the courtroom will seat only about 50 spectators. The overflow may be able to watch via closed-circuit television in a room nearby, but it is extremely unlikely the trial will be broadcast, Assistant U.S. Attorney Steve Mullins said.

Defense lawyers had protested U.S. District Judge Wayne Alley's decision to move the trial to Lawton, arguing that it is too close to the site of the bombing for the suspects to get a fair trial. Jurors will be drawn from an area that does not include Oklahoma City.

But Stephen Jones, McVeigh's lead lawyer, softened his position a little on Friday.

"I want to go down there and spend some time in town and talk to some folks and get their views," Jones said.

Jones wasn't sure how jurors in a town dependent on the military might view two former soldiers. Nichols and McVeigh served in the same Army unit at Fort Riley, Kansas.

"Mr. McVeigh was a sergeant who was honorably discharged and won the Bronze Star," Jones said. "That might be perceived as helping us, but on the other hand it might be perceived as hurting us."

In restaurants and offices around Lawton, residents debated the judge's decision to move the trial.

"I'm glad they didn't move it out of state," Teresa Traughber said as she lunched near the courthouse. Her friend Beth Wakeley disagreed.

"People are still too angry. Once the trial starts it's just going to hash it all up," Ms. Wakeley said.

Another friend, Brenda Bentley, said she knew people killed in the bombing, but thought she could be an impartial juror.

They also discussed the trial's impact on the community: "I'm telling y'all. Things will never be the same again," Ms. Bentley said.

Bosnian peace would put U.S. troops in as peacekeepers

WASHINGTON (AP) — If the Bosnian cease-fire becomes a real peace, thousands of American ground troops will play the role of peacekeeper in the same woodlands and hills that NATO pilots have been raking with bombs.

But they would not be peacekeepers in the U.N. mold discredited in Bosnia and elsewhere. The Americans would be heavily armed to deter violators of the peace. And they would have a green light to shoot — not just to punish but to defeat violators.

Peace is by no means assured in war-weary Bosnia, but President Clinton has said that if it comes, the United States will provide up to half of a NATO peacekeeping force — up to 25,000 U.S. troops — that could stay for months or years.

In that sense it would be unlike any peacekeeping effort we've seen before.

Clinton has said he would consult with Congress before dispatching U.S. forces on a peace monitoring operation in Bosnia. It is not certain whether the president would ask for explicit congressional approval, but that seems likely in view of the expected high cost of the operation and its political sensitivity.

As yet there is no formal plan for how NATO would carry out the mission of implementing and monitoring a peace agreement. But officials at NATO headquarters in Brussels, Belgium, have accelerated the planning effort in recent weeks.

Much hard bargaining remains over how Bosnia will be divided among the warring parties, and U.S. officials have said there will be no NATO peace monitoring operation until a comprehensive peace agreement is signed. Once a deal was in place, the peacekeeping would start within days or weeks, officials said.

Defense Secretary William Perry said Thursday that it would take one or two more weeks for NATO planners to finish the blueprint and that the details — including the number of U.S. troops required — would depend on the terms of any final agreement to end the Bosnia war, which began in 1992.

Perry said he assumes the American contribution of ground combat forces might amount to "two or three brigades," which his aides said meant roughly 10,000 to 15,000 soldiers, most of whom would come from Army units in Germany.

The soldiers would be under a NATO, not a U.N., commander, Perry said.

In addition to the soldiers, U.S. Air Force, Navy and Marine Corps troops would be involved, although they would not actually step foot on Bosnian soil. U.S. and other NATO aircraft, including reconnaissance planes, would fly over Bosnia to keep tabs on Bosnian government, Bosnian Serb and Croat forces.

The U.S. aircraft presumably would operate from air bases in Italy, as they are now for the NATO bombing campaign, and perhaps from Navy carriers in the Adriatic.

It is not yet clear how many countries would contribute troops to the peace monitoring operation.

■ Elizabeth Taylor hospitalized

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — Actress Elizabeth Taylor was hospitalized with an irregular heart rhythm, her physician said Friday.

"Miss Taylor was taken late yesterday afternoon to St. John's Hospital in Santa Monica for an irregularity of her heart rhythm. She is there for evaluation and is doing fine," Dr. Charles Freedman said in a statement released through Taylor's New York publicist Chen Sam.

Taylor's arrhythmia developed Wednesday, Freedman said later Friday in an interview from his home.

"There is no need for an electrical pacemaker. She should be treated with some medications and be released ... I'd say in two or three days. I expect no complications," said Freedman, an internist who has treated Taylor for several years.

■ Woman charged in corruption of minor

Prosecutors say the woman's 19-year-old stepson had impregnated the girl. He is charged with rape.

The woman, Rosa Marie Hartford, 39, was charged with interfering with custody of children and corrupting a minor. She could face up to 12 years in prison if convicted.

"Nowhere else in the nation has a prosecution occurred when an individual has assisted a woman to exercise her constitutional rights," said Kathryn Kolbert of the Center for Reproductive Law & Policy in New York, who said she will represent Hartford.

Sullivan County District Attorney Max Little denied that the case is about abortion rights.

"This is a case about parental rights and duties and who has them and who doesn't," Little said Friday. "We're not talking about the girl's right. We're talking about the parent's right."

Pennsylvania requires women to wait 24 hours before getting an abortion and requires women under 18 to get a parent's consent. New York has neither restriction.

■ Investigation clears Army Rangers

EGLIN AIR FORCE BASE, Fla. — An internal investigation cleared Army Ranger instructors and commanders of criminal wrongdoing in the deaths of four Ranger trainees in February.

A report by the Army Criminal Investigation Command said there was "dereliction on the part of some members" of the 6th Ranger Training Battalion.

But investigators said no instructors or commanders could be held directly responsible for the four deaths that occurred during exercises in a chilly, rain-swollen swamp.

"I can confirm that nobody is going to be court-martialed," said Griff Godwin, a spokesman for Fort Benning, where the Ranger Training Battalion is based.

Like two other Army investigations, the criminal report told of bad decisions on the part of Ranger instructors and insufficient safety precautions.

It quoted survivors who told horrifying tales of men screaming in pain and refusing to move on through the swamp.

"I dragged (2nd Lt. Curt G.) Sansoucie for a long time ... slapping him, rubbing his head, talking to him, feeling his weak pulse, and I was screaming for help," one student told the investigators. "I could hear voices and pleaded for people to come back. Many men were wailing and crying out in pain throughout the whole movement."

Clinton threatens veto of GOP Medicare plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton threatened a veto Friday of a GOP plan to trim $270 billion from Medicare, but Republicans won a blessing from Ross Perot, who said "it takes a lot of courage to touch this alligator."

At the White House, Clinton called for compromise on Medicare, the health care program for the elderly, which requires changes to stay solvent. At the same time, he said of the GOP plan, "This is not what it takes to save Medicare. ... If these health care cuts come to my desk, of this size, I would have no choice but to veto it."

But Perot saw it differently. Sharing a Chamber of Commerce stage with House Speaker Newt Gingrich, the architect of the House GOP plan, Perot said any political leader tackling Medicare is "putting their job at risk."

"If you were just being a politician, you would not touch this thing," said the man who gained 19 percent of the vote in a 1992 independent campaign for the White House.

Republicans say their proposal to save $270 billion in seven years is necessary to head off insolvency for the program. Democrats contend the measure is merely a GOP attempt to find money needed to finance tax cuts targeted to the wealthy.

While few details have been released, the plan would offer incentives for seniors to give up their current Medicare insurance in favor of cheaper, private alternatives, with cuts in payments to doctors and hospitals if the desired savings failed to materialize.

House Democratic Leader Dick Gephardt sharply attacked the proposal in a speech at the National Press Club.

"The health of the elderly shall not be bartered away for a fistful of supply-side silver," he said, adding Democrats would try to delay GOP efforts to bring the measure to the floor unless Republicans agree to lengthy hearings.

Gephardt challenged Gingrich to a one-on-one debate, without a moderator, to discuss the issue, and said he had asked the networks to consider airing it.

Gingrich replied he would "love to" debate the Gephardt, but only after Democrats put their own plan on the table. "If we're the only ones who have done the work and created a plan to save Medicare, their job first is to do their homework before they get ready to debate," the speaker said on PBS' "MacNeil-Lehrer Newshour."

Clinton's veto threat drew an unusually sharp response from Majority Leader Dick Armey of Texas. "The Democrats have a craven approach to Medicare, which is to let it go bankrupt for what they perceive to be short-term political gain," he said in a statement. "What they fail to realize is that public tolerance for demagoguery is at an all-time low."

Republicans have yet to explain many of the most important details, but Gingrich said he plans to release a "conceptual outline" next Tuesday and the actual draft legislation next Thursday. One or two hearings are also expected next week before the measure moves to the floor in mid-October.

A similar effort is under way in the Senate, where Republicans haven't offered so much as an outline of their own proposal.

Perot's appearance was a welcome political boost for Gingrich and the Republicans, who are treading carefully on Medicare lest they spark a rebellion among senior citizens.

Both houses of Congress are operating under Republican control this year for the first time in 40 years, and Democrats hope to exploit the issue of GOP savings in Medicare, education, the environment and other areas to regain a majority.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A judge Friday rejected death row inmate Mumia Abu-Jamal's request to have his conviction overturned and obtain a new trial.

Abu-Jamal, a black activist and former radio reporter, asked for a new trial on the grounds that he was framed and had an incompetent trial attorney. He was convicted in 1982 for the 1981 murder of Philadelphia police officer Daniel Faulkner.

"We prevailed. We were confident that our evidence would disprove each and every one of the allegations that the defense put forth," said William Davol, spokesman for the district attorney's office.

"It's one step closer to justice being carried out," Faulkner's widow, Maureen, told WWDB-FM.

In a 154-page opinion, Common Pleas Judge Albert F. Sabo wrote that Abu-Jamal "fails to prove by a preponderance of evidence each and every claim presented to this court." Davol read from the opinion, which was issued after court hours and was not immediately available to the media.

Abu-Jamal's case has attracted international attention from death penalty opponents, celebrities, politicians and left-wing activists who believe he was railroaded onto death row by a corrupt and racist judicial system.

Abu-Jamal's defense lawyers had not seen the opinion Friday night. They said they expected to file an appeal with the Pennsylvania Supreme Court next week, and if they are rebuffed there, with the federal district court. The appeals process is expected to take years.

The lawyers said they were not surprised by Sabo's ruling.

"Given the fact that he quashed half of our subpoenas and rejected a large number of our exhibits, and indicated from the first day that we could raise our issues on appeal, the court telegraphed in every way conceivable what this decision would be," lead defense attorney Leonard Weinglass said.

Weinglass, a New York lawyer, said Sabo deliberately filed the opinion after hours to prevent defense lawyers from commenting on it.

Rachel Wolkenstein, another Abu-Jamal lawyer, condemned the ruling. "It's relatively outrageous as well as expected that he ruled so quickly in denying Mumia Abu-Jamal's petition for a new trial," she said.

Defense lawyers, who argued that Sabo unfairly favored the prosecution in Abu-Jamal's 1982 trial, had asked the judge to step down from the recent appeal hearing, to no avail.

Powell politics

Possible presidential contender is awkward fit in Republican party

By John King
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — He believes in free enterprise and lower taxes and is put off by "patronizing liberals." Yet he supports abortion rights and gun control and was alarmed by a "troubling mix of politics and religion" at the 1992 Republican convention.

Colin Powell, it turns out, is an awkward fit in today's politics, a self-described "fiscal conservative with a social conscience." He puts himself in the "sensible center of the American political spectrum" and declares allegiance to no political party.

As Powell launches a 23-city tour this weekend to promote his autobiography, "My American Journey," analyzing his views has become something of an obsession in Washington. And both parties are trying to assess the impact the retired general would have if he decided to enter the 1996 presidential race.

It is clear that Powell, who was raised in a home where Franklin Roosevelt was a hero, has little good to say about today's Democratic Party, viewing it as too quick to spend and slow to respond to the nation's declining values and shaken sense of community.

In a CBS interview broadcast Friday, Powell said he has reluctantly come to the view that a constitutional amendment requiring a balanced budget might be needed to force fiscal discipline on Congress. He also said he believed virtually every Cabinet department should be reviewed to determined whether it is necessary, exempting only State, Defense and Treasury. And he embraced "three strikes" laws requiring life without parole for repeat felons.

In an interview broadcast Friday on ABC's "20/20" program, Powell offered his first specific criticism of a 1996 GOP presidential candidate. Citing California Gov. Pete Wilson's support for affirmative action over two decades, Powell says "there is a certain degree of political pandering" in Wilson making opposition to affirmative action a centerpiece campaign issue.

Should he decide to run for president, Powell said the best route would be as a Republican, and he told CBS he did not believe any of the declared candidates had formed "a critical mass of support" — with the exception of Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole.

In early reviews, most Republican analysts believe the retired general would be a tough sell in GOP primaries because of the influence of anti-abortion religious conservatives and gun groups.

"Colin Powell has reinforced the notion that he is not a comfortable fit in the Republican nominating process," said GOP pollster Bill McInturff, who works for Dole's campaign.

Still, McInturff said Powell's star quality and compelling life story would make him a "formidable candidate" if he chose to run.

Such hedging is typical as strategists ponder whether Powell could defy conventions and overcome the significant hurdles he would face as a Republican or in mounting an independent bid. Polling data suggest the public is clearly intrigued with the idea of a Powell candidacy, although that support could wither as his views become better known.

In a new CNN-Time national poll released Friday, 53 percent said they wanted to see Powell run for president. He ran ahead of Clinton in a two-way matchup, and was in a statistical dead heat with Clinton in a hypothetical Dole-Clinton-Powell race.

Ralph Reed, executive director of the Christian Coalition, a religious conservative group with significant sway in GOP affairs, described Powell as "at most a Rockefeller Republican" — out of step with the GOP's conservative grassroots activists.

Gordon Black, a pollster who has written extensively on the growing independent movement, questioned Powell's chances running outside the system. Independents, he suggested, are anti-establishment and likely to sour on Powell because he "shows absolutely no tendency to upset the status quo."

That could be a misguided judgment, however.

In "My American Journey," Powell chides both political parties for ducking debates over the soaring cost of Social Security and other entitlement programs.

Elsewhere in the book, Powell laments that the "present tax burden on Americans is so high that it seriously risks dampening our entrepreneurial vitality. Every dollar taken away from a consumer or a business is a dollar that will be spent less efficiently than if left in private hands."

But after espousing this conservative economic view, Powell notes that his mother benefited from being in a labor union and that he benefited from a New York program that waived college tuition for children of immigrants. He also applauds "courageous" liberal leaders who pushed through civil rights laws and defends affirmative action but not rigid racial quotas.

And he repeatedly questions the Republican Party's position on racial issues, saying that President Bush was "unmindful of the racial polarization being caused by the far right wing of his own party."

Senate GOP send moderate message to fellows in House

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate's centrist Republicans have begun tempering the spending cuts emerging from Speaker Newt Gingrich's House, restoring some money for education, job training and environmental protection.

Even so, the Senate's softer stance won't avert a veto battle between Congress and President Clinton over the budget.

With the Oct. 1 start of the new fiscal year barely two weeks away, lawmakers are racing through 13 spending bills needed to keep federal agencies functioning. A clear pattern has emerged: The House, led by Gingrich, is more inclined to cut social programs deeply or eliminate them, while the Senate prefers more moderate reductions.

It's a script the two chambers have followed since January, when the House sprinted through its "Contract With America," only to see most of it languish in the Senate.

"The Senate is sending a far different message to the public than the House is, a philosophy of incremental change rather than clear and fundamental change," said Rep. Ernest Istook, R-Okla., a conservative member of the House Appropriations Committee and author of some provisions the Senate has killed.

Senate Appropriations Committee Chairman Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., one of the most moderate Republicans in Congress, says he has toned down the spending bills because in the end, Clinton must sign them into law.

"Maybe some people have a sense of fulfilling commitments or agendas," the veteran lawmaker said. "But I want to shepherd this process to completion."

Examples of the Senate's softer glove are plentiful. When Clinton sought $1.3 billion for home-heating aid for the poor, the House voted to kill the program. The Senate legislation would provide $1 billion.

The House would give $4.9 billion to the Environmental Protection Agency, $2.5 billion less than Clinton wanted. The Senate adds $800 million to the House total. The pattern holds for job training for youths and adults, Goals 2000 education reform, aid to schools with low-income students, and numerous other programs.

The Senate would also eliminate provisions the House has inserted into the spending bills to restrain federal enforcement of anti-pollution and worker safety laws and to restrict government-paid abortions, research using human fetal tissue and lobbying by groups receiving federal grants.

Both chambers want to erase the near $1 billion Clinton wants for summer youth job training and the $819 million he seeks for his prized national service program. And the House is slightly more generous than the Senate to high technology programs and to biomedical research.

But generally, it is the House that is the more eager to slice programs.

The gulf between the two chambers reflects a tension between an ideological desire to reshape the government and the practical need to produce legislation that can become law. It also flows from a political reality: Activist conservatives are more numerous and influential in the House than in the Senate, where moderates such as Hatfield hold key leadership posts.

Before the bills are shipped to Clinton for his signature or veto, compromises will be negotiated by the House and Senate that fall somewhere between the two chambers' plans.

Nonetheless, administration officials say that while they applaud the Senate's gentler approach, it won't be enough to avert vetoes of some measures that drastically ignore White House priorities. The 13 spending bills provide about $30 billion less for domestic programs than Clinton wants, and $7 billion more than he prefers for defense.

In an interview this week, White House Budget Director Alice Rivlin said the administration is demanding more money for domestic programs, especially for education, job training, high technology and the environment.

Selenium: An upper

Eating more selenium, a trace mineral, may lift your mood and make you feel more energetic, according to new tests by U.S. Department of Agriculture research psychologist James G. Penland. He found that boosting selenium in the diets of a group of men to 220 micrograms per day — three and a half times the daily recommended intake — improved their moods even though they were not deficient in selenium to begin with. This suggests many Americans lack the optimal selenium needed for peak well-being.

Dr. Penland also noted that the more selenium in the men's red blood cells — as determined by increased activity in a selenium-containing enzyme — the better they felt. The men with the more active enzymes felt more agreeable, less confused, less anxious, more confident and more energetic.

Since selenium is toxic in high doses, don't take in more than 400 micrograms a day. Good food sources: seafood, whole grains, cereals, meat, poultry and especially Brazil nuts.

Tomatoes, sunburn

It makes scientific sense that taking high doses of antioxidants might help prevent sunburn or cell damage leading to sun-caused wrinkles and skin cancer because antioxidants help neutralize "free radicals" generated by the sun's rays that cause the skin damage.

Indeed, some research has suggested that an array of vitamins might help prevent skin cancer.

Johns Hopkins investigators found that people who took vitamins in general, especially E and A, had a 70 percent lower risk of skin cancer. However, new studies at Tufts University's Human Nutrition Research Center on Aging found that subjects who took 400 IU of vitamin E daily for six months suffered just as much skin damage from burning doses of ultraviolet radiation as those who got a placebo (dummy) pill. Nor did 90 milligrams of beta carotene a day for three weeks prevent sunburn.

But Tufts researchers observed signs that lycopene, another strong antioxidant, might combat sun-induced skin damage. Lycopene is concentrated in tomatoes. Lycopene supplements are just new on the market. Thus, Tufts researchers are yet to test their promise in preventing sunburn and skin cancer.

Olive oil extra

Here's another reason to choose olive oil over other fats. It's apt to not only protect your arteries, but also your lungs, according to a new report in the Journal of the National Cancer Institute. Italian researchers at the Latium Region Health Authority in Rome studied the diets of people with and without lung cancer. Their main finding: Using olive oil daily as a dressing on salads, vegetables and other foods cut the risk of lung cancer by 85 percent. Interestingly, using olive oil in cooking did not seem to protect against lung cancer.

The explanation, according to the investigators: Olive oil contains natural antioxidants that help repair cell damage from renegade chemicals in the body, called free radicals, that attack cells and incite cancer. Also olive oil's major fat is a type that is highly resistant to becoming rancid and able to generate destructive free radicals.

But why didn't cooking with olive oil have an anticancer effect? Because heating olive oil destroys some of its antioxidants, the researchers say.

Diet drug alert

While users of the recreational drug "ecstasy" say it melts inhibitions and makes them love one another, it can also cause permanent brain damage, at least in animals, scientists say. Researchers' concern about ecstasy, chemically known as MDMA, also extends to an increasingly popular diet drug, fenfluramine.

George Ricaurte and his colleagues at Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine report in the August issue of The Journal of Neuroscience that rats and squirrel monkeys showed long-term changes in brain circuitry after receiving MDMA.

The drug appeared to affect brain centers involved in emotion, learning, memory and other functions. Since the appetite suppressant fenfluramine is chemically related to MDMA, scientists are concerned that it may affect the brain in similar ways.

Researchers are trying to find out whether the drugs' long-term effects in animals also occur in humans.

High-tech hookups link inmates, doctors

By Jean Pagel

LUBBOCK (AP) — A 45-year-old man, arriving at a prison infirmary, pulled his mouth wide to one side to expose white lesions on his cheeks and gums.

But the nurse at his side didn't want the inmate's complaint directed her way.

"Talk to him," she said, pointing at a device called TeleDoc.

TeleDoc on this summer morning was linking inmates at Amarillo's Clements Unit to medical specialists in Lubbock.

Think of it as a 120-mile house call — or prison call, in this case — that broadcasts two ways. Television-type color monitors in both cities let the Lubbock doctors and Amarillo inmates see each other. Microphones picked up their words as the exams tackled various ailments from flaky rashes and itchy bumps to the complex symptoms of AIDS.

"The modern patient feels very comfortable talking to a TV," said Dr. William E. Gonzalez, medical director of Correctional Health Services at the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center.

Telemedicine has been around for several years as a way to instantly relay big-city expertise to rural hospitals. But its regular use in Texas prisons started just last year.

Dr. Tim Revell of the William P. Clements Jr. Unit near Amarillo, examines the leg of an inmate as Dr. Paul Warren, on video screen, guides Revell in the procedure via satellite linkup from Lubbock.

Supporters say telemedicine saves time and money by eliminating about 70 percent of the trips prisoners would otherwise need for specialized health care.

Men locked up at the Clements Unit, for instance, no longer get taken under guard to downtown Amarillo for their hard-to-crack dermatology and pulmonary problems. Instead, specialists at the Health Sciences Center can zoom in via video and the inmates stray no further than the prison infirmary.

"Intangibles," said Dr. Mike Warren, director for health services for the Texas Department of Criminal Justice. "How much is it worth not to risk an escape?"

The Legislature created an advisory committee in 1993 to utilize state medical schools in a managed health-care network for inmates.

Tech's Health Sciences Center contracted for West Texas — from Brownwood to El Paso, a region with 27 prison sites and 30,000 inmates. The University of Texas Medical Branch in Galveston contracted for the state's east side. The HSC and UTMB both took up telemedicine last year as a way to reach remote inmates with illnesses beyond the scope of general practitioners in prisons. Seven out of 10 inmates say they prefer the video exams over face-to-face doctor visits anyway, said Dr. Bob Brecht, telemedicine project director in Galveston.

"The 'hassle factor' is the way they explained it," Brecht said. UTMB has linked to four East Texas prisons and expects to make 2,000 consults this year, he said.

In Lubbock, the HSC has hooked up to prisons in Amarillo and Abilene and, as of this month, Fort Stockton. Its contract with the state pays $3 per inmate, per day, for health care.

A typical telemedicine consultation lasts 15 minutes and costs about $100, which Gonzalez said saves the HSC about $39 off the cost of an actual visit.

Technicians in a control room in Lubbock keep the weekly Thursday morning clinics running on track.

"Time is money and we're on the air," Gonzalez said from his busy maze of screens, panels and headsets. "You've got to do it in organized fashion."

Movements on the screens looked slightly jerky. But the high-resolution TeleDoc cameras could zoom in close enough to detail an inmate's skin pores.

Nurses in Amarillo would bring in one inmate at a time, make an introduction, and then let the televised doctor in Lubbock take over. Nnurses shined lights and prodded the patients at the doctor's direction.

"As far as quality of care, it would be a little better in person. But you have to weigh the benefits," said Dr. Ronald Rapini, chairman of the HSC department of dermatology. "You can't do everything — like feel the skin. I'd rather do it myself."

This particular day's linkup with the Clements Unit handled about 15 consultations, among them a slate of female prisoners from the nearby Neal Unit. The inmates could see Rapini in the Lubbock studio as he mulled over their medical histories and gave his diagnoses to the nurses. Medical staff at the prisons must follow up on the recommendations that specialists make during the consultations.

Gonzalez, the telemedicine director in Lubbock, said the technology has proven cost effective and medically sound. Doctors who were initially apprehensive now look at the broadcast process as just another clinic.

"In the last six months it's changed from the gee-whiz to the mundane routine," Gonzalez said. "It's the future of rural medicine. That's what prison medicine is."

Experts advise using caution when putting teenager on diet

By Susan Taman Levy
Associated Press

Is your teen-ager complaining about weight gain and insisting that a diet is necessary to fit into his or her back-to-school clothes?

Some weight gain in young men and women is normal. Young women generally gain weight in their hips and thighs as they go through puberty, and their percentage of body fat generally increases until the age of 16. It remains constant for a time before beginning to increase once again.

In young men, weight increases usually result from building muscles rather than increased body fat.

Youngsters are considered obese if they are more than 20 percent over the ideal body weight for their age group and if the percentage of fat to muscles and lean body mass is over the 85th percentile for their age group.

If teen-agers are considered obese, a medical evaluation should be made before any kind of strict diet is undertaken.

There are some healthy ways for teens to lose weight. Most physicians do not recommend that adolescents undertake a formal diet because a severe restriction in calories can interfere with growth and development.

In most cases, doctors recommend that teens eat a little less, exercise a little more and make a few substitutions in foods.

One recommendation is that teens watching their weight take in at least 1,800 calories a day.

Weight loss for teens is often linked to snacking. However it is important that snacks include healthy foods such as fruits or vegetables with a low-fat yogurt.

Parents generally do most of the food shopping. They need to act as gatekeepers for their children by ensuring that a variety of healthy foods is available and that high-fat processed foods are kept to a minimum. For example, parents can select lower-fat dairy products such as skim milk and reduced-fat yogurts and cheeses.

In addition to watching what they eat, teen-agers need to increase their amount of exercise. Lack of exercise is a major factor in obesity.

Parents should encourage adolescents to take up a team or recreational sport. They may not burn a lot of calories, but many find they enjoy the activity and are more inclined to continue it.

Cholesterol count based on geography?

By Richard A. Knox
N.Y. Times News Service

When skeptics sniff that there is no proof that lowering blood cholesterol actually reduces cardiac mortality, believers in the "cholesterol hypothesis" have long pointed to the Seven Countries Study, a project involving nearly 12,500 men in the United States, Europe and Japan.

Now a 25-year update of the study, published recently, adds an important wrinkle to the debate.

The update verifies that the higher one's blood cholesterol, the greater one's risk of dying from heart disease. But the same cholesterol reading carries different risks from one country to another.

A middle-aged man with a cholesterol reading of 210 milligrams per deciliter of blood — below the US average for middle-aged men — has a 4 to 5 percent risk of dying from coronary disease within 25 years in Japan and Mediterranean countries, but a 12 percent risk here and a 15 percent risk in Finland.

The divergence is not explained by average differences in age, smoking or average blood pressure.

Writing in the Journal of the American Medical Association, Seven Countries Study authors say the new results mean that "it may be impossible to achieve a reduction in coronary heart disease mortality rates in northern Europe and the United States to the Mediterranean level by cholesterol reduction alone."

To achieve the low-risk levels of Greece or Italy, they say, it may be necessary not only to lower dietary cholesterol but also to eat more antioxidants such as vitamin C, vitamin E and beta carotene, and to increase the proportion of dietary fat that is monounsaturated, such as olive oil.

In other words, it's not just your cholesterol that counts. It's your oxidized cholesterol — maybe.

Centers treat headache sufferers

By Denise Lavoie

STAMFORD, Conn. (AP) — Kathie Scarella's headaches started out small, the kind most people get rid of with a couple of aspirin or a quick nap.

But then five years ago, the big ones hit. Excruciating, throbbing pain that would last 24 to 36 hours, forcing the operating room nurse to miss a day or two of work each week.

"The pain would be so intense that I would start to cry, and of course, that only made it worse," Scarella, 46, recalled. "It felt like somebody was squeezing my head."

Two years ago, Scarella found relief at The New England Center for Headache through a combination of drugs, vitamins, stress management and a diet that exluded such headache "triggers" as chocolate, red wine and aged cheese.

"I suffered for a long time and I thought, this is life, you have to live with it, we all have our aches and pains," Scarella said. "But now, I know I don't have to live with it, and it feels great."

HEADACHE CENTERS have proliferated across the country over the last decade as the headache has gained acceptance as a legitimate health problem rather than being dismissed as the complaint of nervous types with low pain thresholds. The centers now number about 50.

From 200 patients in its first year in 1979, the center in Stamford now sees 5,000 to 8,000 patients annually.

"The public is demanding better care. They shouldn't accept hearing, 'You'll just have to live with it,' " said Dr. Joel R. Saper, founder and director of The Michigan Head Pain and Neurological Institute in Ann Arbor, Mich., which treats 17,000 headache sufferers a year.

While headache centers have made believers out of Scarella and many others, they offer no special healing powers, said Dr. Robert Daroff, editor of Neurology, the journal of the American Academy of Neurology.

"There's nothing in a headache center that's unavailable to a neurologist or another doctor outside a headache center," Daroff said. "It has the psychological advantage, perhaps, to naive patients that something about a center offers more expertise than an individual who's an expert in headaches."

And like medical practices in general, not all headache centers are equal, said Daroff, chief of staff at University Hospitals of Cleveland and a neurology professor at Case Western Reserve School of Medicine.

SOME HEADACHE centers offer good care from competent physicians but others are "run by charlatans who overstudy their patients," Daroff said.

"There's a tendency in headache centers to overstudy," he said. "You can make a headache diagnosis in 99.9 percent of patients by taking histories, without doing any studies."

Among the tests sometimes ordered unnecessarily are electroencephalograms, or EEGs, which trace the variations in electric force in the brain, he said.

Sheftell said headache centers can help prevent unnecessary testing.

MANY PATIENTS who seek treatment at a center have been suffering for so long that they have already had EEGs and a host of other tests, he said.

"We see many people who have had sinus procedures, temporomandibular joint syndrome (TMJ) procedures, workups for allergies, people who have been overusing aspirin, et cetera, and I think that we're in a position to stop all that," Sheftell said.

Often, patients have been misdiagnosed, he said.

"I had a woman come see me ... who had 25 years of one-sided headaches. She brought with her a two-inch thick file of X-rays, CAT scans and MRIs. Everything had been focused on a problem with her neck, but she had migraines," Sheftell said.

Studies estimate that as many as 90 percent of Americans have at least one headache a year, most of them mild. Most of the people who go to headache centers have the more severe variety.

Sheftell and Dr. Alan M. Rapoport, a neurologist who is cofounder of the Stamford center, said there are many misconceptions about headaches.

Sheftell and Rapoport say some of the most common myths include the widely held beliefs that most headaches are due to sinus problems; allergies are a frequent cause of headaches; and that the more aspirin, ibuprofen or other over-the-counter medication you use, the better you will feel.

THE THREE main types of headache treated at the centers are: migraine, a one-sided throbbing headache often accompanied by nausea and vomiting; cluster headaches, one-sided, steady, intense pain, usually around the eye and temple; and tension-type, moderate pain, usually on both sides of the head with a squeezing or pressing sensation.

The New England Center treats most of its patients at a small outpatient unit in Stamford through a combination of drugs, diet control, stress management and behavioral techniques. Ten percent of the patients are treated at a 15-bed inpatient unit at Greenwich Hospital.

At the center, doctors take extensive histories of their patients' headaches and treatments. Then they ask the patients to keep calendars to track the frequency, severity and possible triggers for their headaches.

A treatment program is developed, with the patient doing much of the work by trying to reduce stress and avoid triggering mechanisms, such as certain foods and activities.

Sheftell said the center has been able to help about 80 percent of its patients reduce the frequency, intensity and duration of their headaches by at least 60 percent.

THE HEADACHE unit of Montefiore Medical Center in New York claims a similar success rate. The unit was founded in 1945 as a headache center for World War II veterans.

"That doesn't mean a patient will never have another headache for the rest of their life," said Dr. Seymour Solomon, director of the Montefiore unit. "That's too unrealistic because we still cannot eliminate the underlying metabolic cause of migraines."

"We measure success by (the standard that) the patient is able to lead a normal life," Solomon said.

Doctors advise against use of tanning salons

By Ira Dreyfuss

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tanning salons have skin doctors doing a slow burn. Although salon supporters disagree, dermatologists say exposure to ultraviolet light even in a salon raises the risk of skin cancer. Tanners may be tempted to seek an artificial glow as summer sunbathing days fade, but the physicians contend that would-be tanners are better off getting pale.

A link between salon use and skin cancer has not been proved, but the evidence is strong enough to be believable, said Dr. Rex A. Ammonette, president of the American Academy of Dermatology. "I am comfortable in stating it because I see so many patients where I know that was the source," said the Memphis, Tenn., physician. Ammonette was coauthor of a recent review article in the Journal of the American Academy of Dermatology. He and colleague James M. Spencer of Miami found no health value in tanning salons.

Tans, in a salon or in the sun, are evidence of harm to the skin, Ammonette said. "It indicates the DNA in cells is already damaged." Short-term damage can include redness, dryness and itching; long-term damage, besides cancer, can include premature aging of the skin, such as wrinkling, he said. Tanning in a salon doesn't avoid this. Although time spent under ultraviolet light is typically shorter in a salon, the intensity of the light is greater. Salons tout their facilities as using safer components of ultraviolet, but there is no safe ultraviolet, he said.

Ultraviolet A, the dominant form in salons, is less likely to cause a burn, but can burn the normally pale-skinned, Ammonette said. It can penetrate below the outer layer of skin, which ultraviolet B cannot, and thus can make the skin underneath red and itchy. Also, UVA can cause adverse reactions in some drugs that may be carried in small blood vessels below the skin, he added.

Ultraviolet B, the harsher of the UB frequencies, is also present in salon light, because it causes the most tanning, Ammonette said. "I see reports now of 23 percent." However, some UV bulbs showed UVB as low as 3 percent, his article stated. Although the dosage is more readily controlled in a tanning salon, the ultraviolet light components can change based on such things as whether a new bulb has been installed, he said. The UVB component of salon light falls more quickly than UVA, his article said.

A "base tan" at a tanning salon won't lower the risk of a burn later outside, Ammonette said. Most salon UV light is in the A frequencies, not the tan-powerful UVB, so a salon may promise a person a tan that amounts to the equivalent of a level 2 or 4 SPF tanning lotion, but sunbathers still need sunscreen.

Exposure to intense sunlight also raises the risk of cataracts, Ammonette said. Protective goggles can avert this, but only about one-quarter of tanning salon clients use them. What's more, it's possible for UV light to give an unprotected cornea the ocular equivalent of a sunburn, he said. The cornea typically recovers, but long-term exposure may cause it to thicken, the article said.

Data on the potential for salon-tan damage is still being collected, partly because it takes 10-20 years for exposure to develop into cancer cases, Ammonette said.

A tanning industry official disputes the dermatologists' claims and accuses them of hiding another agenda for their anti-salon crusade. "They point to a lot of research that's very sketchy and very preliminary, and the researchers themselves will tell you it's preliminary, and the researchers themselves say they don't know what it means," said Joseph A. Levy, executive director of Tanning Trends magazine, an industry publication in Jackson, Mich. "The medical lobbyists have taken the license to draw conclusions that the researchers don't draw themselves."

Medical skin care is mostly "a vanity-based industry" and doctors may lose new patients as health maintenance organizations cut costs by cutting back referrals to the specialists, Levy said, so organized dermatology needs a "crusade" to keep patients demanding doctors' attention, and keep business flowing in, Levy said.

Alternative medicine growing in popularity

By April Allison
N.Y. Times News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — Aldo Biasoni's best friend died fewer than nine hours ago, but he is relaxed and centered as he handles the news. Biasoni, who is HIV-positive, has just spent the past half-hour with needles protruding from his body in a cool, windowless treatment room. As the needles are inserted and removed during the acupuncture session, his mind clears and his anxieties calm.

Biasoni is a patient at the American College of Traditional Chinese Medicine's community clinic. The San Francisco college, which celebrates its 15th anniversary this year, has grown from 34 students working in a private house to more than 80 students in a master's degree program studying at a campus that includes the community clinic. The college's growth mirrors America's growing acceptance of alternative medicine. A 1993 Harvard Medical School study found that Americans visited a practitioner of alternative medicine more often than their primary care physician. In the Bay Area, providers of traditional Western health care are beginning to include alternative medicines in their practices.

Some physicians on staff at Kaiser Permanente Medical Center in San Francisco incorporate acupuncture and alternative medicine into their practice, and the hospital chain is looking at expanding those services, said Kaiser spokeswoman Beverly Hayon.

"It's certainly an area we're exploring because we know more and more of our members want those services, especially in San Francisco," Hayon said.

Medical professionals already are learning Chinese medicine at the school, Admissions Director Wally Walker said. The college currently has three students who are doctors and five students who are registered nurses.

Nestled in Potrero Hill, the American College of Traditional Chinese Medicine trains students in acupuncture and the prescription of Chinese herbs by combining classroom work and clinical practice, Walker said.

"The biggest difference between Eastern and Western medicine is that Eastern medicine looks at the whole body as connected and treats it as a whole, not just one part at a time," student Mary Tagliaferri said. Tagliaferri said she plans to combine the two after she graduates from the college this month. She has been accepted to a premed program at Bryn Mawr College, and plans to attend medical school afterward. "The way to go in the future is to incorporate the two together," she said.

The college's clinic treats more than 800 patients a month and includes a program for HIV-positive patients funded by the Ryan White Comprehensive AIDS Resources Emergency Act, Walker said. The money was approved by the San Francisco Department of Public Health to provide medical treatment for patients with HIV using acupuncture and herbal medicine, according to the college.

While practitioners of both Eastern and Western medicine help their patients, they differ on the idea of how to treat people effectively, college President Lixin Huang said. She likened Chinese medicine to gardening and Western medicine to hunting. "In Western medicine, you go look for the animal and go directly to the animal. The side effects are negligible because 'I solved the problem.' " She experienced that with her infant son a few years ago, Huang said. "My baby had a high fever and the doctor gave me antibiotics. He told me my son would suffer diarrhea as a side effect. Well, the fever was gone but the diarrhea was really bad. This is what you get."

Chinese medicine is more like gardening because, like gardeners, its practitioners consider every aspect of the environment to make living things flourish, she said. "Gardeners have to consider everything — the climate, the soil, the temperature," Huang said. "It's the same thing in Chinese medicine. You have to consider the environment at work, nutrition history, lifestyle, everything. So when you give a diagnosis and treatment it goes to the root of the problem, it doesn't just deal with the surface."

The school's students study the practice of Chinese medicine in a three-year program and earn a master of science degree, Walker said. When the college was approved as a California degree-granting institution in 1986, it became the first school of Chinese medicine in the country to be accredited by traditional U.S. higher education, Walker said.

Clinic patient Biasoni, 35, also receives more conventional treatment for HIV. He said he was amazed by the success of his acupuncture treatments. "I have much more energy and I'm much more clear," the Argentine-born San Francisco resident said. "You can feel it right after you have it."

The combination of Eastern and Western medicine "balance each other out," Biasoni said. "I get nauseous from the medication and they take care of that here (at the clinic) "

RELIGION IN BRIEF

■ Minister welcomed

Trinity Presbyterian Church welcomes its new minister, the Rev. Fane Downs, Sunday.

Downs

"As a native West Texan, I love the very spaciousness of this region," said Ms. Downs. "The pungent smell of greasewood after a rain, the startling sunsets and the surprising beauty in unexpected places, lift my heart and settle my soul.

Ms. Downs has served congregations in Abilene, Dallas and, most recently, John Calvin Presbyterian Church in San Antonio.

She holds degrees from Texas Tech University — bachelor's and master's of arts and doctorate — and a master of divinity degree from Austin Seminary.

"I like baseball, history, good novels, dogs and cats, outrageous socks, Presbyterians of all ages, Mozart, picnics, ice cream and choral singing," Ms. Downs said. "My favorite place to be is in the sanctuary at worship with the people of God."

"God's Dream" will be the topic of her first sermon.

The worship service will begin at 10:55 a.m. Sunday school starts at 9:30 a.m.

In addition to classes for children ages 18 months through sixth grade, the junior high class will be "Building Christian Relationships" and senior high youth will be studying "Luke: Good News for the Good, The Bad and the Ugly."

Adults will have a choice of two Bible study courses and the CLER Ministries adult study of human sexuality from a Christian perspective.

In addition, the childrens' choirs are still looking for participants ages 3 through sixth grade. Rehearsals are held from 4:30 to 5:30 p.m. Wednesdays. The childrens' choirs will sing at Sunday's service.

Also, Trinity Presbyterian's Monday Morning Bible Study, "Search for Significance," meets from 9 to 10:30 a.m. weekly. A nursery will be available. For more information, call Brenda Garrett, 697-7636.

Women's Circles will meet at 2 and 7:30 p.m. Tuesdays to study "Glimpses of Promise" by Eugenia Gamble.

Fall registration is in progress for the church's Pre-School program (ages 3-4), with optional extended day care.

Limited space is also available in Trinity's Mother's Day Out program. For more information call: Preschool - Rhonda Braun, 682-5021; Mother's Day Out - J'Lynn Wheeler, 682-5325.

Also, Wednesday night activities have resumed. Dinner will be served beginning at 5:15 p.m.; reservations are required and may be made by calling 682-2514 weekdays; cost is $4 for adults and $2 for children, with a maximum of $12 for a family.

Reservations are not required for Wednesday night classes, 6:15-7:15 p.m. Children from kindergarten through sixth grade will learn about Christians in Pakistan in "The Secret Search." Adults have a choice of two courses: "Speaking the Truth in Love — Being an Assertive Christian" and "In the Name of Jesus.

■ Grief seminar set

The Counseling Ministry of Golf Course Road Church of Christ will present a grief recovery seminar titled "Living Through Loss" from 7 to 9:30 p.m. Sept. 28 in the church's Family Center.

The presenter will be Ron Ellison, family therapist and grief recovery expert, at Samaritan Counseling Center.

The seminar will be conducted with the belief that not only the death of a loved one, but a broken engagement, divorce, absentee parenting and loss of a dream can be devastating. Strategies will be presented that can help an individual overcome the anger, regret, guilt and fear that can accompany any kind of loss.

Following the seminar, weekly support groups will be offered for those who are looking for more in the healing process. Participation in either is optional.

Child care will be available for those who call 694-8836 before Sept. 27.

■ Workshop planned

The Greater Ideal Baptist Church, 411 S. Tyler St., is hosting a "Musical Workshop" today.

Registration today is at 9:30 a.m. Classes will end at noon.

The youth rehearsal will follow the morning classes. Lunch will be served after class.

■ Women's Day set

Macedonia Baptist Church is holding its 27th annual Women's Day Program at 11 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. Sunday.

Study: Religious services reduce older Americans' fear of death

Associated Press

Going to church on Sunday may be the most effective means of reducing the fear of dying among older Americans.

A major study of religion and death anxiety found that visits from children and friends and outside activities do not seem to reduce the fear of death among people in the final stage of life. Not even private religious activities such as prayer or Bible reading appear to significantly lessen the fear of the next life.

What does appear to make older people less fearful of dying is regular attendance at religious services, researchers Robert W. Duff of the University of Portland and Lawrence K. Hong of California State University, Los Angeles, report in the September issue of the Review of Religious Research.

"The research indicates that it is primarily the ceremonial acts that provide the life-enriching effects of religion," Duff said. "Rituals provide a sense of togetherness. They sustain us by fostering a sense of going beyond."

The study was based on a random sample in 1988 of 674 generally healthy residents from six retirement communities in California and Oregon. The average age of respondents was 75.6 years. Community residents suffering from serious illness or severe bereavement due to an imminent or immediate death in the family were excluded from the survey.

Death anxiety was measured from a scale based on respondents' answers to questions such as whether they were very afraid to die or their willingness to talk to dying individuals about their upcoming deaths.

Not surprisingly, the one community oriented toward retired religious workers scored lowest on the death anxiety scale. But in testing several variables that might lower or raise death anxiety, researchers found little evidence to support other hypotheses.

For example, the findings did not indicate that living in a retirement community, with its concentration of people nearing the end of their lives, created an atmosphere fostering anxiety about death.

Other factors that could be thought to lower death anxiety, such as frequently participating in social activities or regularly visiting with friends and children, also were not statistically significant.

Lawyer cites Simpson case to keep camera out of Texas courtroom

By Mitchell Landsberg
Associated Press

'The last thing I want is to become known as the Marcia Clark of South Texas.'
— Carlos Valdez, district attorney of Nueces County, Texas

Carlos Valdez could have been a star.

Valdez, the district attorney of Nueces County, Texas, was all but guaranteed a prominent role on national television as the prosecutor in the case against a woman accused of murdering Selena, the star of Tejano music.

Instead, he is shunning the spotlight. Why? Blame O.J.

"The last thing I want is to become known as the Marcia Clark of South Texas," Valdez said last week during arguments about allowing cameras into the courtroom.

The judge spared him that fate; there will be no cameras in the courtroom at the Yolanda Saldivar trial. Nor will there be cameras in the trial of Richard Allen Davis, accused of kidnapping and killing 12-year-old Polly Klaas in Northern California. Nor were there cameras in the South Carolina trial of Susan Smith, convicted of murdering her two young children.

In each case, someone — a prosecutor, defense lawyer or the judge himself — cited coverage of the O.J. Simpson trial as a reason to keep the cameras out.

Three cases do not make a trend. But some news media lawyers and outside experts say they expect the Simpson trial to lead to more challenges of televised coverage of trials. And already, the trial has renewed the debate over whether cameras damage or enhance the criminal justice system.

"'Open to the public' doesn't have to mean 'open to cameras,'" one critic of televised trials wrote recently on the Op-Ed page of The New York Times. He added that "letting cameras in can turn a courtroom into a movie set."

Not a startling argument, perhaps, until you see the name of the author: Don Hewitt, the executive producer of the CBS News program "60 Minutes." Yes, the same "60 Minutes" that virtually invented "ambush journalism" and has lugged cameras to the ends of the Earth, often without invitation.

Yet Hewitt is among several prominent and unlikely critics who have objected to the sometimes lurid, often dull and seemingly endless coverage of the Simpson trial on CNN, Court TV, E! and other networks.

Another is Gerry Spence, a lawyer who has achieved no small measure of renown as a TV commentator on the Simpson case. He recently complained in USA Today that cameras "have turned the search for justice into a spectator sport for the amusement of drooling couch potatoes."

That is the essence of the complaint about cameras in the courtroom: that they represent an entertainment medium improperly foisted on a judicial system that relies on dignity and decorum for its integrity. On a more practical level, critics worry that the presence of cameras will either intimidate lawyers and witnesses or turn them into prancing, preening publicity hounds — the Kato Kaelin syndrome.

They blame cameras for the interminable length and circus atmosphere of the Simpson trial — and point to the Susan Smith trial, a crisp, two-week-long affair, as an example of what can happen when cameras are banned.

"I have to say that the moment the cameras were turned off it was as though someone had pumped the air back in the courtroom," Bruck said in an interview.

From that point on, he added, "you had a sense that the courtroom was a sanctuary in which all that really went on was the work of the court, and the media and the frenzy was all outside. ... It wasn't like things were done in secret, but there was a sphere of calm that enveloped the courtroom that I think was very, very valuable."

Cameras are now allowed in courtrooms in 47 states — all but Indiana, Mississippi and South Dakota. Rules vary. In Florida, the first state to allow televised trials, cameras are permitted in virtually all cases. Other states give wide discretion to the judge, and tightly restrict what can be shown in photographs or on television.

The federal court system, after a three-year experiment with cameras, decided last fall to restore its ban on photographic coverage.

Defenders of cameras argue that modern technology has made televised coverage relatively unobtrusive, and that the presence of photographers at a celebrated trial is far less distracting than the alternative: a row of frantically doodling courtroom artists.

Besides, they argue, the more important point is that the public has a right to see what goes on in its courtrooms, and televised coverage serves an important educational purpose.

"Certainly there are things that are going on in the O.J. Simpson courtroom that the public might not approve of," said David Bartlett, president of the Radio-Television News Directors Association. "But we think the public has a right to know about them. ..."

Bulldog offense improves in win over Bel Air, 13-7

■ David Leaverton kicks two field goals and Jerome Eldridge scores MHS' first touchdown as the Bulldogs win first game.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Midland High learned a second quarter lesson against El Paso Bel Air Friday night at Memorial Stadium and then almost forgot it when the second half exam time came.

However, the Bulldogs still escaped the teacher's wrath with a 13-7 victory over El Paso Bel Air.

The lesson seemed simple enough to understand. Just hold onto the ball when you get into enemy territory and you should come away with points, especially with one David Leaverton on the sidelines with a toe of iron.

MHS squandered two scoring opportunities deep in Highlander territory with an interception and a fumble to start the game, but then finally got it right with three consecutive scoring drives as Leaverton knocked home field goals of 35 and 27 yards while Jerome Eldridge punched in the team's only touchdown of the year in two games with a 4-yard run and a 13-0 lead at the half.

Leaverton, undoubtedly one of the best kickers in the state, is almost automatic at those distances and the Purple Pack must learn to protect the ball when they cross the opponent's 40-yard line. The chance of scoring is pretty great after that.

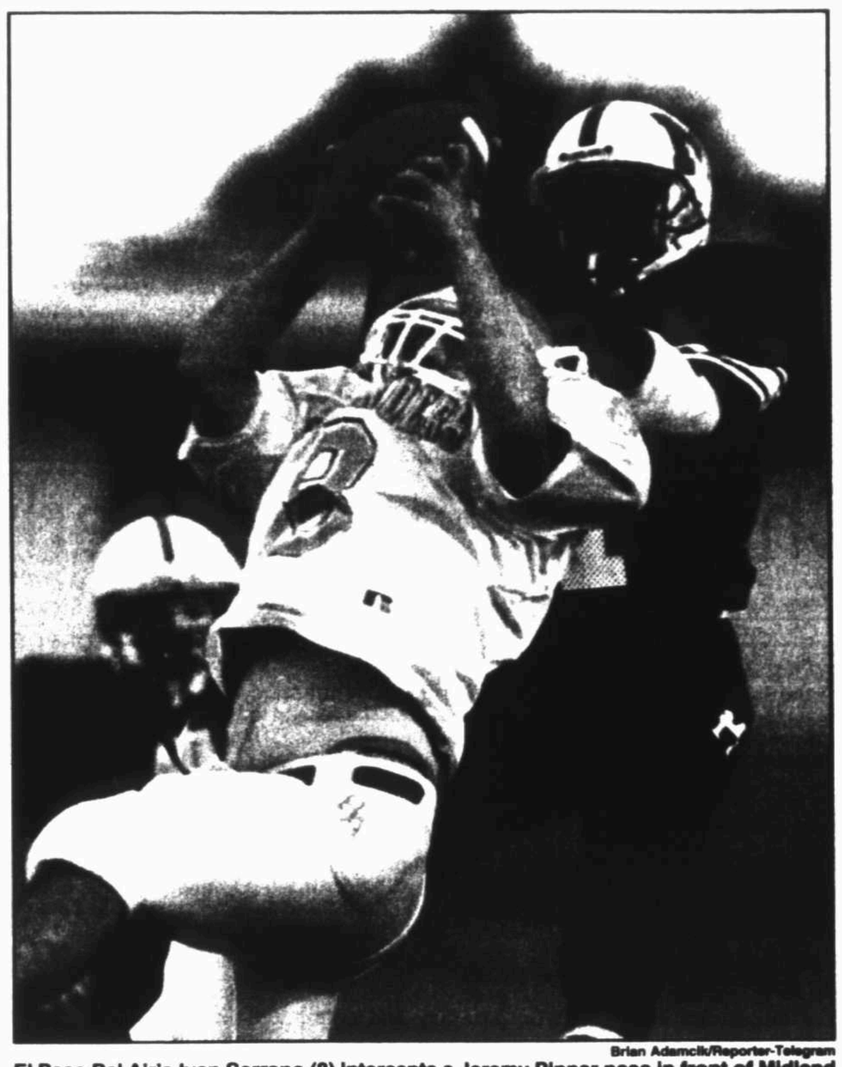

"We got off to a slow start, but the offense got me inside the range I need, and that's all I can ask," said Leaverton after finally getting a chance to use that toe of his. "I have confidence that I can put three on the board anytime with a chance like those two."

But did MHS learn the lesson well. Well, not in this game. Fumbles stopped a couple of drives and Leaverton had no more shots to take, leaving the balance of the game in the hands of the Bulldog defense, which played another superb game.

"We can't score 13 points in the first half and then just stop scoring," said MHS coach Ronnie Reeger. "I think we set a record or tied one with two fumbles on the same play in the second half. How can you do that? Those are the kind of things that are scary for us right now."

Bel Air quarterback Ivan Serrano came off the bench to guide a 50-yard TD drive in the third period, hitting John Solis for the final five, cutting the MHS

Rebels face toughest test of non-district play

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Midland Lee was dynamite in John Parchman's 48-0 debut over El Paso Irvin last week, but now the Rebels face their toughest task of the non-conference season here today at 7:30 p.m. when they play San Antonio Marshall.

Marshall lost to Round Rock Westwood, 35-21, last week, but is a large team with a potent running attack. And this is also a very long road trip. The Rebs left Midland at 5 p.m. Friday and won't get back until around 6 a.m. Sunday. This is a test of both the playing field and the raw bus seat.

Also, Marshall possesses a proud tradition that carried it to the Class 5A state finals against Odessa Permian in 1991 under present head coach David Visentine, who is no stranger to West Texas since he once coached at Andrews.

"They have a good tradition and they are doing the same things now as they were when they went to the state finals," Parchman said. "They are real strong and have good players. They don't have great team speed, but I feel the strength of their team is in their offensive and defensive lines."

Parchman feels the Rebels may have to throw the ball to be successful. That was how the Round Rock team beat Marshall last week.

No. 2 Permian exacts revenge in 34-9 win over Tigers

By Stewart Doreen
Sports Writer

ODESSA — Last year, Odessa Permian went to College Station ranked No. 2 in the state and was turned back with a 23-3 loss to the A&M Consolidated Tigers.

How things would change. The Panthers, again ranked second in the state, made the stay for the Tigers just as bad Friday night with a 34-9 non-district win at Ratliff Stadium.

The Panthers, 2-0 for the season, ended what had been a battle for field position with nine minutes to go in the second quarter. A 35-yard run around the left end by Ja'Quay Wilburn gave the Panthers a 7-0 lead.

The Panthers got the ball right back and into good field position when Consolidated had failed on Anthony Hensley's attempt to run the ball off a fake punt. Permian would take the ball on its 47 and go five plays when Buddy Brooks recovered a fumble. L.C. Wards 4-yard carry, giving Permian, 12-11-1 against East Texas schools in the regular season, a 14-0 lead. The lead had been sparked by Permian's strong defensive effort and the good running game.

"We put them in pressure situations offensively," said Odessa Permian coach Randy Mayes. "That put us in good situations offensively."

The Panthers, who lost their home opener last season 34-7 Amarillo High, would keep the pressure on in the second

Rangers hold off Panthers, 21-18

GREENWOOD — Despite six turnovers in the game, the Greenwood Rangers held off a late surge by the Fort Stockton Panthers to win 21-18 Friday night in non-district action.

Greenwood was led by running back Bucky Smith, who carried 15 times for 132 yards and two touchdowns.

Fort Stockton, 0-2 for the season, got out to an early 3-0 lead by getting a first quarter field goal from Brian Parker. But that was all the Panthers would get for a while.

Greenwood got to work quickly in the third quarter by scoring on their first series.

Sterlin shines as Lake View beats Lamesa, 21-0

By Sean Wallace
Sports Writer

LAMESA — Sterlin Gilbert threw for 127 yards and two touchdowns Friday night as San Angelo Lake View beat Lamesa 21-0 at Tornado Stadium in a Class 4A non-district contest.

The loss drops the Golden Tornadoes to 1-1 on the season after beating Pecos in its season opener a week ago. Lake View improves to 2-0 with the win.

"We've just got to be able to play four quarters of football. Fatigue was a big factor," Lamesa coach Gary Yoder said. "We played with them for about a quarter-and-a-half for both halves but we just couldn't finish it out."

Lake View won the meeting between these two teams last year 48-20 but had a rough time moving the ball in the first half against Lamesa this time. Tailback Jay Jordan, who rushed for 213 yards in the Chiefs' opener against Kerrville Tivy gained 102 yards on 14 attempts, 37 of them on his final carry.

Lamesa's best scoring chance came in the first quarter when the Tornadoes used a power inside running game led by Kevin Larry, who had 74 yards on 18 carries.

"We had a lot of success last week running the outside stuff and that's what they line up for so they were giving us the middle," Yoder said. "I think we could have run the ball to the outside if we wanted to press the issue but we were going to take what they were giving us."

The Tornadoes converted on a third-and-6 from the 23, which gave them the ball on the 17 when Max Kelly broke through the line and got to the 10 before fumbling the ball. Roland Tijernia recovered the ball and Lamesa never got closer than the Lake View 18 the rest of the game.

Lamesa held Lake View to a scoreless first quarter before allowing two scores

Carr motors past Steers

■ Sweetwater running back plows through Big Spring defense for 263 yards as Mustangs win 27-12.

By Mike Butts
Sports Writer

BIG SPRING —Sweetwater running back Shuan Carr had just run through, over and by the Big Spring Steers for 263 yards in the Mustangs' 27-12 win Friday. And someone asked him how he felt about his year so far.

"I guess I'm pretty satisfied right now," the senior tailback said. "I just want to get better during the season."

Ask any one of the Steers who chased Carr Friday and they'll tell you that is a frightening thought.

Carr broke out of tackles and sprinted past Steer defenders on carry after carry, with Sweetwater (2-0) building a 27-0 fourth-quarter lead and dominating all the way. The 5-foot-9, 175-pound runner scored on dashes of 87 yards in the second quarter and 62 in the fourth, averaging 13.8 yards a carry.

"A lot of our (players) have never seen a back like that," Big Spring coach Dwight Butler said. "And when they saw him it kind of put them in a trance."

Butler said he may have over coached in his approach to stopping Carr by checking off plays on defense. Carr gained over 1,600 yards last year and ran for 261 yards in the Mustangs' 21-0 win over Monahans in Sweetwater's opener last week. Even then Butler said he didn't realize how good Carr was.

"We knew if we didn't stop him on the perimeters, which is their game, we were going to be in for a long night," Butler said. "He's as good a back as we've seen. He's not only fast, he's shifty and if he needs to he has some power."

Carr seemed to get the Mustangs out of any bind. Leading 7-0 in the second quarter with third down and 14 from its own 22, Sweetwater let Carr carry the ball on a draw play. He took it 22 yards to the Mustang 44-yard line and two plays later Mustang quarterback Andrew Boatright threw a 52-yard touchdown to Shedrick Williams for a 14-0 Mustang lead.

"He's got just as good a chance to score on any play we have," Mustang coach

Thoughtful Moments™

Bouquets

I plucked a bunch of daisies
As the morning sun arose,
Sun-filled and touched by heaven,
And each was glad I chose
To share them with my neighbor,
Who always thought it best
To get bouquets while living,
Instead of when at rest.

Study: Religious services reduce older Americans' fear of death

Associated Press

Going to church on Sunday may be the most effective means of reducing the fear of dying among older Americans.

A major study of religion and death anxiety found that visits from children and friends and outside activities do not seem to reduce the fear of death among people in the final stage of life. Not even private religious activities such as prayer or Bible reading appear to significantly lessen the fear of the next life.

What does appear to make older people less fearful of dying is regular attendance at religious services, researchers Robert W. Duff of the University of Portland and Lawrence K. Hong of California State University, Los Angeles, report in the September issue of the Review of Religious Research.

"The research indicates that it is primarily the ceremonial acts that provide the life-enriching effects of religion," Duff said. "Rituals provide a sense of togetherness. They sustain us by fostering a sense of going beyond."

The study was based on a random sample in 1988 of 674 generally healthy residents from six retirement communities in California and Oregon. The average age of respondents was 75.6 years. Community residents suffering from serious illness or severe bereavement due to an imminent or immediate death in the family were excluded from the survey.

Death anxiety was measured from a scale based on respondents' answers to questions such as whether they were very afraid to die or their willingness to talk to dying individuals about their upcoming deaths.

Not surprisingly, the one community oriented toward retired religious workers scored lowest on the death anxiety scale. But in testing several variables that might lower or raise death anxiety, researchers found little evidence to support other hypotheses.

For example, the findings did not indicate that living in a retirement community, with its concentration of people nearing the end of their lives, created an atmosphere fostering anxiety about death.

Other factors that could be thought to lower death anxiety, such as frequently participating in social activities or regularly visiting with friends and children, also were not statistically significant.

By Mitchell Landsberg
Associated Press

Carlos Valdez could have been a star.

Valdez, the district attorney of Nueces County, Texas, was all but guaranteed a prominent role on national television as the prosecutor in the case against a woman accused of murdering Selena, the star of Tejano music.

Instead, he is shunning the spotlight. Why? Blame O.J.

"The last thing I want is to become known as the Marcia Clark of South Texas," Valdez said last week during arguments about allowing cameras into the courtroom.

The judge spared him that fate; there will be no cameras in the courtroom at the Yolanda Saldivar trial. Nor will there be cameras in the trial of Richard Allen Davis, accused of kidnapping and killing 12-year-old Polly Klaas in Northern California. Nor were there cameras in the South Carolina trial of Susan Smith, convicted of murdering her two young children.

In each case, someone — a prosecutor, defense lawyer or the judge himself — cited coverage of the O.J. Simpson trial as a reason to keep the cameras out.

Three cases do not make a trend. But some news media lawyers and outside experts say they expect the Simpson trial to lead to more challenges of televised coverage of trials. And already, the trial has renewed the debate over whether cameras damage or enhance the criminal justice system.

'The last thing I want is to become known as the Marcia Clark of South Texas.'
— Carlos Valdez, district attorney of Nueces County, Texas

"'Open to the public' doesn't have to mean 'open to cameras,'" one critic of televised trials wrote recently on the Op-Ed page of The New York Times. He added that "letting cameras in can turn a courtroom into a movie set."

Not a startling argument, perhaps, until you see the name of the author: Don Hewitt, the executive producer of the CBS News program "60 Minutes." Yes, the same "60 Minutes" that virtually invented "ambush journalism" and has lugged cameras to the ends of the Earth, often without invitation.

Yet Hewitt is among several prominent and unlikely critics who have objected to the sometimes lurid, often dull and seemingly endless coverage of the Simpson trial on CNN, Court TV, E! and other networks.

Another is Gerry Spence, a lawyer who has achieved no small measure of renown as a TV commentator on the Simpson case. He recently complained in USA Today that cameras "have turned the search for justice into a spectator sport for the amusement of drooling couch potatoes."

That is the essence of the complaint about cameras in the courtroom: that they represent an entertainment medium improperly foisted on a judicial system that relies on dignity and decorum for its integrity. On a more practical level, critics worry that the presence of cameras will either intimidate lawyers and witnesses or turn them into prancing, preening publicity hounds — the Kato Kaelin syndrome.

They blame cameras for the interminable length and circus atmosphere of the Simpson trial — and point to the Susan Smith trial, a crisp, two-week-long affair, as an example of what can happen when cameras are banned.

"I have to say that the moment the cameras were turned off it was as though someone had pumped the air back in the courtroom," Bruck said in an interview.

From that point on, he added, "you had a sense that the courtroom was a sanctuary in which all that really went on was the work of the court, and the media and the frenzy was all outside. ... It wasn't like things were done in secret, but there was a sphere of calm that enveloped the courtroom that I think was very, very valuable."

Cameras are now allowed in courtrooms in 47 states — all but Indiana, Mississippi and South Dakota. Rules vary. In Florida, the first state to allow televised trials, cameras are permitted in virtually all cases. Other states give wide discretion to the judge, and tightly restrict what can be shown in photographs or on television.

The federal court system, after a three-year experiment with cameras, decided last fall to restore its ban on photographic coverage.

Defenders of cameras argue that modern technology has made televised coverage relatively unobtrusive, and that the presence of photographers at a celebrated trial is far less distracting than the alternative: a row of frantically doodling courtroom artists.

Besides, they argue, the more important point is that the public has a right to see what goes on in its courtrooms, and televised coverage serves an important educational purpose.

"Certainly there are things that are going on in the O.J. Simpson courtroom that the public might not approve of," said David Bartlett, president of the Radio-Television News Directors Association. "But we think the public has a right to know about them. ..."

Bulldog offense improves in win over Bel Air, 13-7

■ David Leaverton kicks two field goals and Jerome Eldridge scores MHS' first touchdown as the Bulldogs win first game.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Midland High learned a second quarter lesson against El Paso Bel Air Friday night at Memorial Stadium and then almost forgot it when the second half exam time came.

However, the Bulldogs still escaped the teacher's wrath with a 13-7 victory over El Paso Bel Air.

The lesson seemed simple enough to understand. Just hold onto the ball when you get into enemy territory and you should come away with points, especially with one David Leaverton on the sidelines with a toe of iron.

MHS squandered two scoring opportunities deep in Highlander territory with an interception and a fumble to start the game, but then finally got it right with three consecutive scoring drives as Leaverton knocked home field goals of 35 and 27 yards while Jerome Eldridge punched in the team's only touchdown of the year in two games with a 4-yard run and a 13-0 lead at the half.

Leaverton, undoubtedly one of the best kickers in the state, is almost automatic at those distances and the Purple Pack must learn to protect the ball when they cross the opponent's 40-yard line. The chance of scoring is pretty great after that.

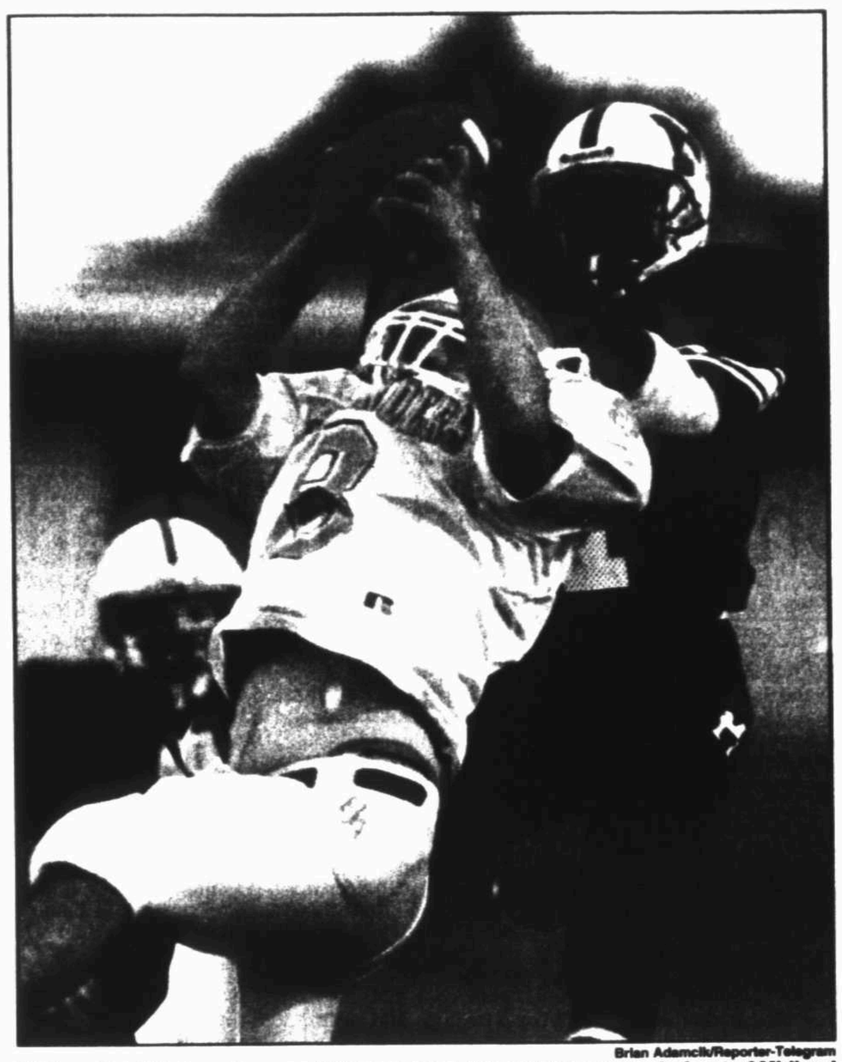

"We got off to a slow start, but the offense got me inside the range I need, and that's all I can ask," said Leaverton after finally getting a chance to use that toe of his. "I have confidence that I can put three on the board anytime with a chance like those two."

But did MHS learn the lesson well. Well, not in this game. Fumbles stopped a couple of drives and Leaverton had no more shots to take, leaving the balance of the game in the hands of the Bulldog defense, which played another superb game.

"We can't score 13 points in the first half and then just stop scoring," said MHS coach Ronnie Reeger. "I think we set a record or tied one with two fumbles on the same play in the second half. How can you do that? Those are the kind of things that are scary for us right now."

Bel Air quarterback Ivan Serrano came off the bench to guide a 50-yard TD drive in the third period, hitting John Solis for the final five, cutting the MHS

Rebels face toughest test of non-district play

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Midland Lee was dynamite in John Parchman's 48-0 debut over El Paso Irvin last week, but now the Rebels face their toughest task of the non-conference season here today at 7:30 p.m. when they play San Antonio Marshall.

Marshall lost to Round Rock Westwood, 35-21, last week, but is a large team with a potent running attack. And this is also a very long road trip. The Rebs left Midland at 5 p.m. Friday and won't get back until around 6 a.m. Sunday. This is a test of both the playing field and the raw bus seat.

Also, Marshall possesses a proud tradition that carried it to the Class 5A state finals against Odessa Permian in 1991 under present head coach David Visentine, who is no stranger to West Texas since he once coached at Andrews.

"They have a good tradition and they are doing the same things now as they were when they went to the state finals," Parchman said. "They are real strong and have good players. They don't have great team speed, but I feel the strength of their team is in their offensive and defensive lines."

Parchman feels the Rebels may have to throw the ball to be successful. That was how the Round Rock team beat Marshall last week.

No. 2 Permian exacts revenge in 34-9 win over Tigers

By Stewart Doreen
Sports Writer

ODESSA — Last year, Odessa Permian went to College Station ranked No. 2 in the state and was turned back with a 23-3 loss to the A&M Consolidated Tigers.

How things would change. The Panthers, again ranked second in the state, made the stay for the Tigers just as bad Friday night with a 34-9 non-district win at Ratliff Stadium.

The Panthers, 2-0 for the season, ended what had been a battle for field position with nine minutes to go in the second quarter. A 35-yard run around the left end by Ja'Quay Wilburn gave the Panthers a 7-0 lead.

The Panthers got the ball right back and into good field position when Consolidated had failed on Anthony Hensley's attempt to run the ball off a fake punt. Permian would take the ball on its 47 and go five plays when Buddy Brooks recovered a fumble. L.C. Wards 4-yard carry, giving Permian, 12-11-1 against East Texas schools in the regular season, a 14-0 lead. The lead had been sparked by Permian's strong defensive effort and the good running game.

"We put them in pressure situations offensively," said Odessa Permian coach Randy Mayes. "That put us in good situations offensively."

The Panthers, who lost their home opener last season 34-7 Amarillo High, would keep the pressure on in the second

Rangers hold off Panthers, 21-18

GREENWOOD — Despite six turnovers in the game, the Greenwood Rangers held off a late surge by the Fort Stockton Panthers to win 21-18 Friday night in non-district action.

Greenwood was led by running back Bucky Smith, who carried 15 times for 132 yards and two touchdowns.

Fort Stockton, 0-2 for the season, got out to an early 3-0 lead by getting a first quarter field goal from Brian Parker. But that was all the Panthers would get for a while.

Greenwood got to work quickly in the third quarter by scoring on their first series.

Sterlin shines as Lake View beats Lamesa, 21-0

By Sean Wallace
Sports Writer

LAMESA — Sterlin Gilbert threw for 127 yards and two touchdowns Friday night as San Angelo Lake View beat Lamesa 21-0 at Tornado Stadium in a Class 4A non-district contest.

The loss drops the Golden Tornadoes to 1-1 on the season after beating Pecos in its season opener a week ago. Lake View improves to 2-0 with the win.

"We've just got to be able to play four quarters of football. Fatigue was a big factor," Lamesa coach Gary Yoder said. "We played with them for about a quarter-and-a-half for both halves but we just couldn't finish it out."

Lake View won the meeting between these two teams last year 48-20 but had a rough time moving the ball in the first half against Lamesa this time. Tailback Jay Jordan, who rushed for 213 yards in the Chiefs' opener against Kerrville Tivy gained 102 yards on 14 attempts, 37 of them on his final carry.

Lamesa's best scoring chance came in the first quarter when the Tornadoes used a power inside running game led by Kevin Larry, who had 74 yards on 18 carries.

"We had a lot of success last week running the outside stuff and that's what they line up for so they were giving us the middle," Yoder said. "I think we could have run the ball to the outside if we wanted to press the issue but we were going to take what they were giving us."

The Tornadoes converted on a third-and-6 from the 23, which gave them the ball on the 17 when Max Kelly broke through the line and got to the 10 before fumbling the ball. Roland Tijernia recovered the ball and Lamesa never got closer than the Lake View 18 the rest of the game.

Carr motors past Steers

■ Sweetwater running back plows through Big Spring defense for 263 yards as Mustangs win 27-12.

By Mike Butts
Sports Writer

BIG SPRING —Sweetwater running back Shuan Carr had just run through, over and by the Big Spring Steers for 263 yards in the Mustangs' 27-12 win Friday. And someone asked him how he felt about his year so far.

"I guess I'm pretty satisfied right now," the senior tailback said. "I just want to get better during the season."

Ask any one of the Steers who chased Carr Friday and they'll tell you that is a frightening thought.

Carr broke out of tackles and sprinted past Steer defenders on carry after carry, with Sweetwater (2-0) building a 27-0 fourth-quarter lead and dominating all the way. The 5-foot-9, 175-pound runner scored on dashes of 87 yards in the second quarter and 62 in the fourth, averaging 13.8 yards a carry.

"A lot of our (players) have never seen a back like that," Big Spring coach Dwight Butler said. "And when they saw him it kind of put them in a trance."

Butler said he may have over coached in his approach to stopping Carr by checking off plays on defense. Carr gained over 1,600 yards last year and ran for 261 yards in the Mustangs' 21-0 win over Monahans in Sweetwater's opener last week. Even then Butler said he didn't realize how good Carr was.

"We knew if we didn't stop him on the perimeters, which is their game, we were going to be in for a long night," Butler said. "He's as good a back as we've seen. He's not only fast, he's shifty and if he needs to he has some power."

Carr seemed to get the Mustangs out of any bind. Leading 7-0 in the second quarter with third down and 14 from its own 22, Sweetwater let Carr carry the ball on a draw play. He took it 22 yards to the Mustang 44-yard line and two plays later Mustang quarterback Andrew Boatright threw a 52-yard touchdown to Shedrick Williams for a 14-0 Mustang lead.

"He's got just as good a chance to score on any play we have," Mustang coach

Stephenville rebounds, 33-0

ABILENE — Class 4A's No. 9 ranked team rebounded nicely here Friday night after ending its 32-game winning streak against Saginaw Boswell last week with a 33-0 romp over District 4-5A's Abilene High.

AHS is now 0-2 on the year as the Eagles couldn't handle Yellow Jacket quarterback Jason Schwartzkopf, who threw for three touchdowns and rushed for another.

Stephenville led 20-0 at the half and got 157 yards rushing from Jason Slawson. Schwartzkopf completed four of six passes for 144 yards.

Abilene High travels to Wichita Falls next week. Stephenville has won two consecutive 4A state championships and is now back on track.

Christmas comes early for Seminole

By Tom Ruiz
MRT Correspondent

CRANE — Christmas came early for the Seminole Indians Friday night as the Crane Golden Cranes which posed as Santa Claus blew an 18-point second-half lead and lost a heartbreaker 19-18.

For the Crane players it was nothing to be jolly about as mental miscues led to their second consecutive defeat. "The good teams have to make the right plays and we didn't do it tonight," said Crane coach Johnny Burleson.

Before the uneventful second half, Crane (0-2) had led in every category of the stat sheet during the first 24 minutes. It accumulated 15 first downs, 181 yards rushing, 67 yards passing, controlled the clock for most of the first half and allowed Seminole only once past the 50-yard line.

Complete domination so it seemed until the second half when the Cranes concentration flew south.

Leading 18-0, Seminole (2-0) came up with their first big play on defense as it stymied a Crane drive and then blocked a punt to set up shop at the Crane 15. Two plays later Toby Shain rumbled almost untouched into the end zone to cut the Crane lead to 18-6 in the third quarter.

With six minutes left in the game, the Indians used a 55-yard pass play and culminated the drive with a 10-yard touchdown pass from Stephen Wright to Cody Fleming to cut the Crane lead to 18-13.

On the ensuing squib kick, the Crane special teams avoided the football as if it were the plague which allowed the Indians to recover the ball at the Crane 26.

The Indians took advantage of Crane's mental breakdown and broke their hearts three plays later as Nathanael Flores' three-yard run sealed the Golden Cranes fate.

"We never gave up and we knew if we had a chance that we could pull it off," said Seminole coach Army Salinas.

The Crane scoring came on a Josue Garcia 1-yard run in the first quarter, Casey Willis added another touchdown on a 1-yard pass from Chris Harbin and Gerald Rivera ran in from 22 yards for Crane's final score.

Seminole hosts Littlefield next and Crane will be at Presidio on Friday.

lead to 13-7.

Then Serrano started another Highlander scoring bid in the fourth quarter. Leaverton pinned Bel Air at its own three-yard line with a 48-yard punt, but Serrano directed an attack to the Midland 48-yard line before Bulldog Steven Potter put the clamp on the game with a huge interception at the 18-yard line.

"The defense felt all along that we could stop them," Potter said. "We saw it was going to be a pass and we just read it right," Potter said. "The ball was underneath and I went over the top and it came into my hands. We (the defense) played our hearts out. We played hard last week too, but we were rewarded with a win this time."

MHS threw only three times in the game as senior quarterback Jeremy Pinner went the distance. Junior Russell Dunlavy was at quarterback last week in a 6-0 loss to Frenship.

Sam Powell led the Bulldog rushers with 63 yards while Jeffery Arnold had 55. Fullback Leighton King is still hobbled with a bad ankle and had only two rushes for no yards.

"We've got some small running backs right now, but they are going to get better," Reeger said. "We just need to protect the ball. We wanted to keep up the intensity level in the second half and we go out and put the ball on the ground again."

Still, this was a win well deserved by the MHS defense. Linebacker Marcus Carlisle was a terror to Bel Air runners and he also had an interception. Ky Edwards also had an interception while Ricky Cunningham picked up a fumble recovery. Bel Air had more yardage than MHS, but they couldn't score in a battle of field position that MHS owned most of the game.

Both teams are now 1-1. Midland High travels to Pecos next Friday in its last game before the counting starts. The 4-5A test is the one the Bulldogs must pass anyway.

The Panthers got back on the board in the fourth quarter on a 10-yard pass play from quarterback Ector Lopez to Tre Parker.

Greenwood struck back with Smith's second touchdown run of the game. Two plays after the Fort Stockton touchdown, Smith broke several tackles and rambled for 58 yards for the touchdown.

Smith then hauled in a two-yard pass for the two-point conversion to put Greenwood up for good.

Fort Stockton managed to score once more, but could not pull off the onside kick, allowing the Rangers to run out the clock.

Former Dolphin Smith charged with intent to distribute cocaine

MIAMI — (AP) Former Miami Dolphins running back Sammie Smith was charged Friday with intent to distribute cocaine after a raid in an Orange County neighborhood where he was considered a hometown hero.

Federal and local authorities described Smith as the biggest catch in a four-month effort to rid the crime-ridden Orlando suburb of Zellwood of cocaine dealers. Smith, a record-breaking running back at Florida State, could face life in prison, if convicted.

Smith, 28, who lives in Apopka, near Zellwood, had about 15 pounds of cocaine in his car when about 100 law enforcement officials in cars, helicopters and SWAT vehicles moved in Thursday evening, sheriff Kevin Beary said Friday.

Smith was charged with four federal counts of intent to distribute cocaine. Smith, wearing ankle shackles and handcuffs, appeared before a federal magistrate Friday afternoon. A bond hearing was delayed until Wednesday while the sides gather more information.

"Obviously, there are two sides to every story," defense lawyer Wayne Sheaffer said. "(Smith) is very depressed at this point in time. The family, his friends and the community at large is rather shocked and dismayed."

Deputy U.S. attorney Ralph Hopkins said prosecutors will ask that Smith be held without bond until trial. He is being held under watch of federal marshals at the Seminole County Jail.

"That could change if he provides us with information on other individuals, but we don't anticipate that's going to happen," Hopkins said.

News of the arrest shocked Smith's former coaches, who described him as a soft-spoken player with a solid work ethic and strong upbringing.

"Nothing surprises me anymore. But I sure hate to see this," said Florida State's Bobby Bowden, who coached Smith from 1985 to 1988.

"You have all these boys who come in and out of your program through the years, and they're all like your children," Bowden said. "You hate to see them go astray."

Miami Dolphins coach Don Shula, who selected Smith in the first round of the 1989 NFL draft, also was dismayed.

"Anybody that you've been associated with, when their life gets off track, you hope they can get it back together," Shula said. "I didn't see any signs of that when Sammie was here. He was a hard worker."

Added Chip Gierke, who coached Smith from 1982 to 1984 at Apopka High School: "That's not the Sammie Smith I know. He was an outstanding kid, never gave anyone a minute's problem."

However, the sheriff painted a much different picture, saying Smith was considered a "major player" in the importation and sale of crack cocaine in Orange County.

"It was a full-service operation," Beary said.

REBELS: Big plays hurt Rams

(From 1C)

"We'll need to throw the ball and spread them out a little," Parchman said. "If we run every play inside, they will win a lot of those battles with the size they have inside."

Visentine was pleased with his offensive production last week, but is concerned about his youthful secondary on defense.

"Last week against Round Rock, we had a funny game," Visentine said. "We had 21 first downs and 360 yards rushing and I felt really good about that, but Round Rock beat us with big plays, and that concerns us. They returned the opening kickoff on us for a touchdown and threw 60 and 80 yard touchdown passes on us. They completed only 38 percent of their passes, but they hurt us with big plays. We must keep Lee from making the big plays and they are probably more capable of doing that than the team we just played."

Parchman said, "It looks to me like Marshall won the battle and lost the war. They beat up on Westwood physically, but the scoreboard doesn't show it."

Visentine says it will take a major effort to beat Lee.

"From what we saw last week on film, we may have to bring out the artillery. I'm extremely impressed with their offensive line and defensive secondary and linebackers. That is a major factor for us since we are an option team and Lee moves to the ball so well. We can't afford to miss a blocking assignment, or we will pay the price."

Marshall features quarterback David Moreno and running back Warren Sauls. Visentine, who runs out of the I-formation just like Lee, has gone to more of an option game because of the talent of Moreno.

No one really knows just how effective Lee's passing game will be. Parchman predicted that Lee would throw the ball more out of the new I-formation, but the Rebels threw only six times against Irvin, two of which went for touchdowns. Senior quarterback John Thurman could get his first real arm test tonight.

The new "I", however, turned out some impressive rushing numbers. Reserve Josh Norman had 182 yards rushing to take the early rushing lead in District 4-5A while starter Alex Strambler had 97 yards rushing in a little under two quarters of play.

"When you have a game like we did last week against Irvin, you probably hurt some players when it comes to statistics, but when we get a chance to use other people, we will. We don't have a lot of depth and we can't afford to play stupid," Parchman said. "Alex probably could have had a lot of yards last week. It was just good to see someone else come in there and get some numbers."

This doesn't end Lee's road miseries. The Rebels hit the road again next week for a Saturday 2 p.m. date against Palo Duro in Amarillo.

"That's the game that will cause some problems in the travel area because it will make a short week for us to prepare for the Midland High game. And that's when it all starts counting," Parchman said.

But Marshall comes first and there won't be any side visit to the Alamo.

Harper still on sidelines for Buccaneers

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Alvin Harper practiced again Friday, however there still was no definitive word on when the injured receiver will make his debut for the Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

The Bucs signed the fifth-year pro to a $10.66 million contract in March and envisioned the former Dallas star making an immediate impact in an offense that ranked near the bottom of the NFL a year ago.

Instead, Harper has been slowed by ankle, knee and foot problems since the second week of training camp and has caught only one pass — a 9-yard reception in the final exhibition game.

He missed the first two regular-season games with a sprained right ankle that also could keep him out of Sunday's home opener against Chicago.

"We're going to wait until Sunday," coach Sam Wyche said, adding the status of three other key players — offensive tackle Scott Dill (broken hand) and cornerbacks Martin Mayhew (knee) and Tony Stargell (hip pointer) — will be determined a few hours before the game.

Harper, who sprained his ankle in practice two weeks ago, worked out with the team for the third straight day. He's eager to play, but Wyche has said he won't let him return to the lineup until he's completely healthy.

"I can do some things, but I don't want to go out there and mess the team up," said Harper, who missed only one game in four years with Dallas. "There are certain things I can't do, and I might get caught in the game when they call those certain things.

"I don't want to be out there half-speed, kind of hobbling around. That would be bad for the team if I'm not 100 percent out there."

Harper is listed on the injury report as questionable for Sunday, although Wyche said Thursday he was on the "good side of questionable right now."

Friday's practice was more of a walk-through, so Harper didn't really test the ankle except for light running. But that was a lot more than he could do a week ago.

"It's encouraging to just go out and run around. Two or three days ago, I couldn't even run," Harper said. "It's good to run and at least get in some kind of shape so that when I do get back, I won't be gasping for wind the whole game."

Jayhawks avenge TCU loss, 38-20

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Revenge is sweetest when the whole world is watching — or at least the whole ESPN world, as when Kansas beat Texas Christian University 38-20 on its home turf.

There were a few warts on the Jayhawks' performance Thursday night, such as their six straight possessions without a first down. But TCU, despite the passing onslaught of Max Knake, got nothing but field goals during that window of opportunity. Now, the Jayhawks are 3-0 for the first time since 1992 and deeply satisfied they've avenged last year's crippling loss in Fort Worth.

"We owed them one," said running back June Henley, who rushed for two touchdowns and his first 100-yard game since last year's meeting with TCU.

In that 31-21 loss, where TCU scored the last 17 points, Henley piled up 118 yards but was knocked out in the fourth period by a shoulder injury. He never seemed to regain the form that saw him amass 1,127 yards as the Big Eight's freshman of the year.

Then came Thursday night.

"I've never forgotten it," said the junior running back, whose 160 yards Thursday included touchdown jaunts of 43 yards in the second quarter and 59 yards in the fourth. "I've been waiting to get them back."

L.T. Levine, fresh off a one-week suspension for violating team rules, chipped in 134 yards and scored on a 9-yard run in the second quarter and a 43-yard sprint in the fourth.

The two, long fourth-quarter touchdowns put an end to a comeback bid by TCU that fizzled when the Kansas defense refused to yield anything more than a field goal. After jumping to a 21-7 lead, the Jayhawks went from about 11:00 left in the second quarter until the final play of the third period without a first down.

Henley's two touchdowns nudged him higher on the all-time list. He's now tied for fifth with John Riggins at 21 career TD's.

Knake, who threw for 299 yards against the Jayhawks a year ago, did even better. He finished with 379 yards and two touchdowns and erased Sammy Baugh's school record with his 40th TD pass.

Jason Tucker had a career-best 14 catches for 171 yards. But when given an opportunity to get back in the game in the third quarter, the Horned Frogs had to settle for Michael Reeder field goals of 24 and 19 yards.

Raiders, Chiefs set for old 'AFL' rivalry

The Associated Press

The Raiders are back in Oakland, and this week, they're back in Kansas City for a game against the Chiefs, ready for another installment of the old AFL's most storied rivalry.

"You know it's going to be nasty and tough at all times," Chiefs defensive end Neil Smith said. "You can't just stand around the pile. You have to protect yourself at all times."

The Raiders have changed more than cities this year, however. They've changed styles, and perhaps it's best displayed by one simple fact: In winning their first two games, they've been penalized hardly at all.

Under first-year head coach Mike White, the Raiders have not been turning over the ball, getting excessive penalties or throwing many downfield passes.

"They're spreading out a little more than they used to," said Chiefs defensive coordinator Gunther Cunningham, who installed the "attack" defense for the Chiefs this season. "They use a lot of three wide receivers, and split out Harvey Williams to look like a fourth, which is a little surprising."

In Kansas City, Raider-hater parties have been a tradition since the late '60s.

"It's something special. It's not just media hype," Chiefs tackle Joe Phillips said. "You can sense it with coaches and players. Then you get out into the community, and you realize what a huge game this is for the whole city."

Cunningham spent four seasons as a Raiders assistant before moving to Kansas City. Former Raiders coach Art Shell is now an assistant to Chiefs coach Marty Schottenheimer.

Both teams are 2-0.

The 49ers (2-0) will face a team in New England (1-1) that's already put up 98 passes in two games with 55 completions. That's Drew Bledsoe's doing, and with Steve Young on the other side of the line of scrimmage for San Francisco, it's no mystery what kind of game this could be.

"I've had the misfortune of being around the guy since he started," 49ers defensive coordinator Pete Carroll said.

Though the addition of rookie running back Curtis Martin gives the Patriots another dimension, they remain a passing-oriented team, putting the ball up 51 times in last week's loss to Miami and 47 times in a season-opening victory against Cleveland.

San Francisco leads the series 6-1, winning five straight and all three meetings at home.

The Cowboys beat the Giants and the Broncos by a combined 66-21 in their first two games, and now it's on to Minnesota.

"Nobody stops the Dallas Cowboys," said Vikings middle linebacker Jack Del Rio. "They stop themselves when they get bored. Let's hope they're a little bored this week."

Or distracted. What with owner Jerry Jones signing all these promotional deals, then Deion Sanders, it wouldn't be surprising if a few Dallas minds were elsewhere.

"I think it would be wrong for anybody to say it was not a distraction," Cowboys QB Troy Aikman said. "It was a distraction for all of us."

The Vikings (1-1) are among several NFC teams who believe they might be able to upset the anticipated championship-game matchup between the Cowboys and San Francisco. And they do that by staying close early, then establishing a running game in order to exploit the Cowboys' suspect secondary more easily.

Both the Chargers and Eagles are 1-1 and fighting some distractions of their own.

San Diego is trying to hit stride after the training camp holdout of running back Natrone Means, while the Eagles were shocked by last week's benching of Randall Cunningham in a 31-19 victory over Arizona. Cunningham had the added distraction of finding out he'd been involved in trade talks with the Cardinals.

"Yeah, it's going to be pretty tough to play, but I'll go out and I'll do my job," Cunningham said early in the week, before he decided to clam up and concentrate on football.

Tortillas flat in Texas Tech home opener

■ Red Raiders make plea to fans to leave tortillas at home because the new tradition could result in a penalty.

The Associated Press

LUBBOCK — A saucy show of resistance has emerged in face of Texas Tech's plea that football fans keep their tortillas at home today.

Karen Fortner and her friends argue that students should "responsibly" toss tortillas up in the stands — not onto the field, where the flour Frisbees will bring penalties upon the Red Raiders.

"Not very many students say what they believe, or stand up for what they believe in," said Fortner, who was joined by several other people who handed out about 500 tortillas Thursday on campus.

Rain canceled plans for another handout Friday.

"People aren't going to want slimy tortillas," she said. "I'm going to study instead."

Tech officials waged war against tortillas earlier this week as Athletic Director Bob Bockrath announced a crackdown for the Red Raider's home opener at 6:30 p.m. against Missouri.

Bockrath said the "inappropriate behavior" would result in 15-yard penalties against Tech if tortillas land on the field more than once today.

NCAA rules prohibit fans from throwing objects on the playing field.

Gatekeepers at Jones Stadium expect to distribute about 10,000 warnings printed with "Toss Equals 15 Yards." Tech Sports Information Director Joe Hornaday said contraband will be confiscated.

"You're not allowed to bring food into the stadium," Hornaday said.

Tulsa at No. 3 Texas A&M

COLLEGE STATION — Underdog teams such as Tulsa worry big favorites like No. 3 Texas A&M.

"This team (Tulsa) will spread you out all over the field and it's really tough to defend," A&M coach R.C. Slocum said. "You can't just go out and play and chase the ball. It's more of a mental game. Those kind of preparations worry me."

Forget that the Aggies are a 29-point favorite and have the nation's longest home-winning streak, having won 27 in a row at Kyle Field.

"Every week, a team like Tulsa beats a team like Texas A&M," Slocum said. "Tulsa is perfectly capable of coming in and giving us fits or even winning."

Tulsa certainly has a history of being a pesky underdog. In 1991, the Hurricane trailed the Aggies by 18 points at the half, but rallied to a 35-34 victory.

"History has shown that A&M is real tough at home," Tulsa coach Dave Rader siad. "They have a tremendous home field advantage. One of the great spectacles of college football is a game at Texas A&M.

"The way I look at it, maybe the odds are in our favor. I mean, how many games in a row can you win at home? Whether it's us or somebody else, at some time the streak will end."

AP Laserphoto

Pittsburgh at No. 15 Texas

AUSTIN — Twenty years ago, a game between No. 15 Texas and Pittsburgh would have been a matchup of national title contenders, featuring names like Earl Campbell and Tony Dorsett.

Today, the two former national powers will attempt to take another step forward in their battles back from a decade of decline.

Texas (1-0), still trying to break through under fourth-year coach John Mackovic, should learn if its defense has toughened against the run and if its offense, anchored by a young, dynamic backfield, is as good as it looked in a 38-17 victory at Hawaii two weeks ago.

Pitt (2-0), coming off a 3-8 season, already is shooting for its first bowl game since 1989 and is off to an impressive start with a 17-13 victory against defending Alamo Bowl champion Washington State and a 66-30 pounding of Eastern Michigan.

"We were supposed to beat Eastern Michigan," said Pitt coach Johnny Majors. "Our team believes we have a good opportunity against Texas to win. But we'll have to be better than we've been the first two games."

Last season, Pitt's Curtis Martin ran for 251 yards and helped the Panthers erase a 27-16 deficit before losing to Texas 30-28.

It marked the first of many games last year in which opposing running backs appeared to have their own sidewalk through the Texas defense.

■ SWC Roundup

"No doubt we made their training films because they put some picture-perfect blocks on us and ran right past us," Mackovic said. "We don't anticipate they will have it that easy this year."

Southern Methodist at No. 14 Oklahoma

NORMAN, Okla. — Southern Methodist coach Tom Rossley's hope for this season was that his quarterback would have another outstanding season and his linebackers would shine in a new defensive scheme.

On the first play of the year, quarterback Ramon Flanigan dislocated his hip. The Mustangs' leading rusher, passer and scorer from a year ago is out for the season.

Middle linebacker Chris Bordano also is out for the season, with a back injury. Two other linebackers, Carlyce Black and Mark Futschik, will likely miss today's game against No. 14 Oklahoma.

"We need to have some success and we've got a tough road ahead of us," Rossley said.

That road begins today against Oklahoma (1-0), then continues with games against Wisconsin, Texas and Texas A&M.

Beating any of those teams would be a chore even with Flanigan, who accounted for 2,371 total yards as a sophomore last season. Without him, well ...

"Ramon being gone, it's as if the Cowboys were to lose Troy Aikman," Rossley said. "He just really is the heart and soul of our offense.

"We'll continue to feel the loss of him tremendously throughout this year because he's such an impact player and he was a guy that we counted on for making plays and getting us in the end zone and scoring points."

Houston at No. 6 Southern Cal

LOS ANGELES — Although Houston has won a grand total of two games the past two years, Southern California coach John Robinson believes the Cougars eventually will turn their program around.

He would prefer they don't start today, however.

The sixth-ranked Trojans (1-0) will be heavily favored at home for the second straight weekend when they face the Cougars (0-2) at the Coliseum. Kickoff is 9 p.m. CDT.

Robinson, noting Houston's ability to move the ball in a 45-21 loss to Florida two weeks ago, doesn't believe the Trojans will take the Cougars lightly.

"I can't imagine us playing a team like this and being flat," he said. "Houston has lost so much that it's hard for them to turn it around and all of a sudden become winners.

"But if a combination of events happens, they will turn this team around."

The Cougars had 421 yards of offense in their loss to Florida, which currently is ranked fourth nationally. Antowain Smith rushed for 122 yards on 22 carries; Chuck Clements was 17-of-37 for 244 yards, and Larkay James made six catches for 143 yards.

Emmitt Smith asks Jones to renegotiate contract after '96

IRVING (AP) — Running back Emmitt Smith, who held out in 1993 before signing his current $13.6 contract, says he expects Dallas Cowboys owner Jerry Jones to renegotiate the deal after this season.

"We haven't talked about renegotiation," Smith, who is in the third year of a four-year pact, told The Dallas Morning News for Friday. "But I would expect it."

When Jones solicited Smith's input during negotiations to sign Deion Sanders — who signed a seven-year, $35 million contract that includes a nearly $13 million signing bonus — it was the first time the team's owner has made him feel wanted, Smith said.

Smith signed his current contract in 1993 after holding out all of preseason and the first two games of the regular season. The Cowboys got off to an 0-2 start before Jones gave in. Smith went on to win the NFL rushing championship again and to lead Dallas to its second straight Super Bowl.

While supportive of Sanders' deal, Smith believes that Jones should improve his contract a year before it is scheduled to lapse. Smith is scheduled to make $2.4 million this season and $2 million in 1996.

"Emmitt has told me he wants to be with the Dallas Cowboys for the rest of his career," Jones said. "I have told him that I am going to do everything I can for him to be here."

Smith concedes that no promises were made while Jones treated him with what he considers unprecedented respect in soliciting his input during the process of signing Sanders.

"This is the first time he has ever made me feel wanted, the first time my opinion mattered," Smith said.

He hopes his next contract will be the product of peaceful negotiations. But he seems reluctant to believe it.

"You can't always believe everything a person says until he shows you," Smith said. "Someday, I'll get mine."

Perez' first hit a two-run homer as Braves win

The Associated Press

CINCINNATI — Eddie Perez hit a two-run homer in the seventh inning — his first major-league hit — to power Atlanta to a 3-1 victory over Cincinnati on Friday night.

■ NL Roundup

Perez, a catcher making his first major-league start, was one of several reserves in the lineup as the Braves rested injured starters after clinching the NL East title Wednesday.

John Smoltz (11-6) beat the Reds for the third time this season by scattering six hits over eight innings and striking out 11. The only run came on Barry Larkin's two-out homer in the fifth, his 15th.

Astros 7, Expos 3

MONTREAL — Pinch-hitter Derrick May drove in the go-ahead run and Andy Stankeiwicz added a two-run single in Houston's three-run seventh.

Pinch-hitter John Cangelosi was walked by Greg Harris (2-3) leading off the seventh and, after Tony Eusebio singled, May doubled off reliever Bryan Eversgerd to snap a 3-3 tie.

Stankiewicz then hit a two-run single past a drawn-in infield and Jeff Bagwell added an RBI-single in the eighth.

Rockies 6, Marlins 3

DENVER — Joe Girardi slapped a two-run single that triggered a four-run seventh inning for Colorado, which posted its 11th victory in 15 games to remain one game in front of Los Angeles in the NL West.

Walt Weiss and pinch-hitter John Vander Wal opened the seventh with singles off John Burkett (13-12). It was Vander Wal's 24th pinch hit this season, leaving him one shy of the major-league record set by Montreal's Jose Morales in 1976.

Mets 4, Phillies 1

NEW YORK — Todd Hundley drove in three runs and rookie Jason Isringhausen allowed only one run despite giving up a career-high 13 hits as New York extended its winning streak to three games.

Isringhausen (7-2) went 7 1-3 innings to win his fifth straight, striking out six without a walk. John Franco pitched the ninth for his 24th save.

Michael Mimbs (8-6), pressed into a starting role when Curt Schilling was scratched due to a sore right shoulder, took the loss. Mimbs worked five innings, giving up two runs and six hits.

Giants 4, Pirates 2

PITTSBURGH — Matt Williams' two-run single in the 10th helped San Francisco end its three-game losing streak.

Scott Service (2-1) struck out the only two batters he faced and was the winner. Rod Beck pitched the 10th for his 30th save.

Dodgers 7, Cardinals 6

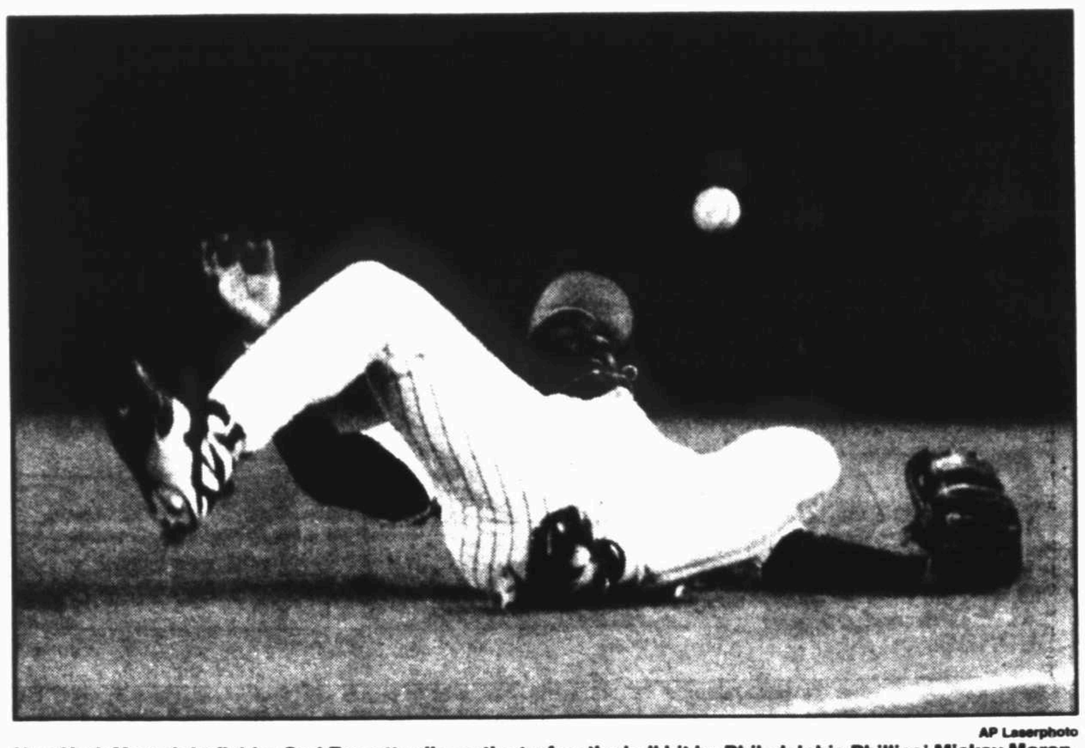

ST. LOUIS — Eric Karros hit his third run-scoring single with two outs in the ninth and Los Angeles ended St. Louis' six-game winning streak.

The Dodgers survived blowing a three-run lead in the eighth to win for the eighth time in 11 games.

The loss was the first decision of the year for Tom Henke, who leads the National League with 33 saves. It was Henke's 48th appearance.

Coleman sends Mariners into wild card lead

The Associated Press

CHICAGO — Vince Coleman had four hits and scored on an odd overthrow, helping Andy Benes and the Seattle Mariners move into the wild-card lead Friday night with a 3-2 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

■ AL Roundup

The Mariners, who won for the sixth time in seven games, moved one game ahead of New York, which lost in Baltimore 8-1.

After a leadoff triple in the eighth, Seattle's bullpen preserved the one-run lead when Jeff Nelson struck out Frank Thomas, Lee Guetterman fanned Robin Ventura and Bill Risley struck out Lyle Mouton. Norm Charlton pitched the ninth for his 10th save.

Coleman doubled home the go-ahead run in the seventh. He also reached on a walk and stole two bases. Earlier, he scored from third when first baseman Dave Martinez overthrew Jason Bere (7-13) while returning the ball.

The Mariners are 8-1 in the nine games started by Benes (5-1) since he was traded from San Diego on July 31.

Orioles 8, Yankees 1

BALTIMORE — Bobby Bonilla hit a grand slam and Rafael Palmeiro had a three-run shot, powering the Baltimore Orioles past New York and dropping the Yankees into second place in the wild-card chase.

The Yankees' third loss in 11 games dropped them one game behind Seattle for the wild-card spot.

Scott Erickson pitched an eight-hitter for the Orioles, who managed only five hits but took advantage of 12 walks. Erickson (11-10) pitched his team-high fifth complete game of the season.

Red Sox 6, Indians 3

CLEVELAND — Mo Vaughn hit a three-run homer during a five-run eighth inning, sending Boston over Cleveland. The Red Sox reduced their magic number for clinching the AL East to four.

Vaughn's home run temporarily tied him with Cleveland's Albert Belle for the league lead. Belle moved ahead again in the ninth with his second home run of the game and his 39th of the year.

The sellout crowd of 41,833 pushed the Indians' season attendance to a franchise-record 2,634,139, surpassing the mark of 2,620,627 set in 1948. Jacobs Field has been sold out 52 times this season, including the last 47 in a row.

Erik Hanson (14-5) gave up five hits in eight innings as the Red Sox won for the second time in their last eight games. Reliever Alan Embree (2-2) took the loss.

Tigers 3, Rangers 2

DETROIT — Cecil Fielder hit the 250th home run of his career and the Detroit Tigers stopped Texas' five-game winning streak. The Rangers fell two games behind Seattle for the wild-card spot.

Rookie Clint Sodowsky (2-0) outpitched Kevin Gross (8-15). Gross tied Mike Moore, waived this month by the Tigers, and Pittsburgh's Paul Wagner for the most losses in the majors.

Rodman says no way to third year with Spurs

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Dennis Rodman says he no longer wants to play for the San Antonio Spurs and will sit out the season if necessary to accomplish that objective.

Rodman was one of the featured guests of Byron Allen on the season premiere of "The Entertainers," a weekly one-hour nationally syndicated television show that will be aired this weekend.

"San Antonio has been screwing me for the last two years," Rodman told Allen, host of the show, which is kicking off its second season. "So I said the hell with it. I want to be out now. ... If they won't give me my just due, then get me out now.

"I'm not going to camp. I'll sit out for a year. I don't care."

At the time the show was taped, on Sept. 7, Rodman also told Allen he would love to play in Los Angeles. Rodman is under contract with the Spurs for the 1995-96 season.

Rodman, 34, led the NBA in rebounding for the fourth straight year last season, but clashed with coach Bob Hill on several occasions, causing him to miss extensive playing time.

Rodman played for the Detroit Pistons for seven seasons before being traded to the Spurs along with Isaiah Morris in exchange for Sean Elliott and David Wood on Oct. 1, 1993. The Pistons traded Elliott back to the Spurs on July 18, 1994.

NBA back in business as owners vote for six-year labor agreement

NEW YORK (AP) — The NBA is back in business.

Owners ensured six years of labor peace, voting 24-5 Friday to approve the collective bargaining agreement that players ratified earlier this week. The league's 2 1/2-month lockout, which prevented offseason signings, will be lifted Monday.

"If you're going to have a lockout, probably the best time to do it is the summertime," NBA commissioner David Stern said. "But we have alerted the world we're not immune to the dangers of labor strife."

The salary cap will rise from $15.9 million last season to $23 million this season, and rookies will be limited to three-year contracts. Training camps will open as scheduled on Oct. 6 and the season will start on time on Nov. 3.

Deputy commissioner Russ Granik said almost all the teams will be over the cap when business resumes Monday because of free agents they don't intend to re-sign who still are on their rosters.

"We think trading activity is pent up and is going to explode, especially among the expansion teams," Stern said.

Stern said small-market owners expressed concern that they would have more difficulty competing under the new deal, which runs through the 2000-01 season. He said they will bring up their problems again when the league revisits its revenue sharing formulas.

"The overriding item is the level of the salary cap, where it's being raised to and where it's likely to be raised beyond that," Stern said.

Player representatives voted 25-2 Wednesday to approve the deal, which was agreed to Aug. 8. The union vote came one day after players voted 226-134 not to decertify the union, a move pushed for by Michael Jordan, Patrick Ewing and many agents. Rather that ratify the agreement, they thought they could get a better deal by proceeding with an antitrust suit against the owners.

"As the players perform under the contract ... I think you'll get back into what we consider to be the routine of professional basketball," said union head Simon Gourdine, who was criticized by the Jordan-Ewing group.

Sacramento's Mitch Richmond has filed an unfair labor practice charge against the league, accusing Stern of coercing players to vote against decertification by threatening to delay the season.

Jeffrey Kessler, the lawyer for the dissident players, hasn't decided whether he will challenge the results of the decertification election conducted by the National Labor Relations Board.

"We probably won't make any determination until Monday or Tuesday," Kessler said.

Tuesday is the last day objections can be filed. Stern thought Kessler would be able to find at least one player willing to continue the challenge, but thought the deal would stand up to legal scrutiny. Stern said the lockout, begun July 1, had hurt the league somewhat.

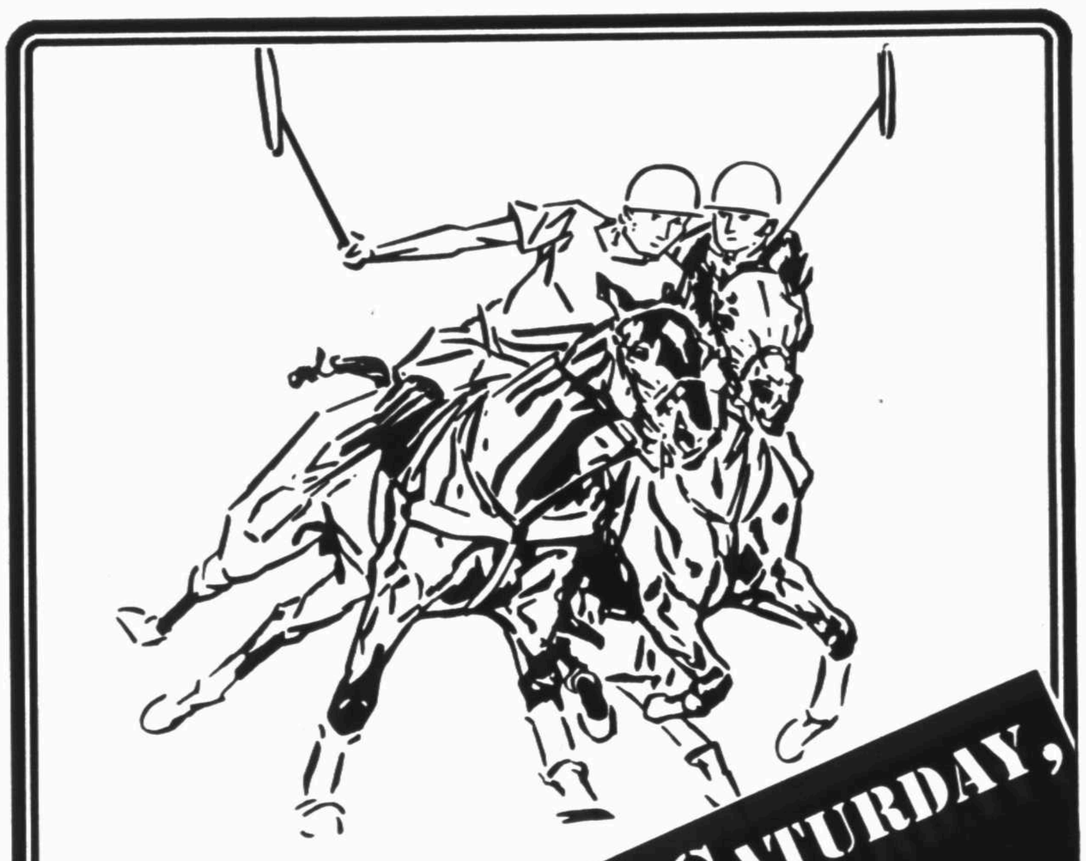

Some agents would like to replace Gourdine with a negotiator who would take a harder line. Gourdine, who took over after players forced out hard-line union head Charles Grantham, wouldn't say whether he'd stay with the union long enough to negotiate the next deal.

"That's a long, long time," Gourdine said. "I would certainly hope to be around for the foreseeable future. There's no question about that."

'Superman' star Reeves to go on '20-20' for his 1st interview since riding accident

NEW YORK — Barbara Walters has landed the first interview with Christopher Reeve since he was paralyzed.

Barbara Walters to interview Christopher on "20-20."

The interview, conducted at the New Jersey rehabilitation center where the "Superman" star is undergoing therapy, will be broadcast Oct. 13 on "20-20," ABC said Thursday.

Reeve, 42, broke his neck in May when he was thrown from a horse during a riding competition in Virginia. He has no movement below his shoulders, needs a ventilator to breathe and speaks with difficulty.

The golfer's lawyers said that the character, played by John Leguizamo, "engages in numerous disreputable acts and is portrayed as sexually promiscuous."

A spokesman for Universal, Alan Sutton, declined to comment.

Rodriguez, who lives in Florida but has business interests in Las Vegas, wants to stop showings of the move with his name.

The comedy is about three drag queens who become stranded in a small Nebraska town while traveling across the country to Hollywood.

NEW YORK — First he became an editor. Now the formerly media-shy John F. Kennedy Jr. is on TV.

Kennedy plays himself and plugs his new political magazine, George, in a 90-second cameo on the season premiere Monday of CBS' "Murphy Brown."

Murphy, the TV newswoman played by Candice Bergen, mistakes the former New York City prosecutor for her latest short-time secretary.

"I guess the whole lawyer thing didn't work out," she says. "That's a tough break. Could you file this for me?"

"That's it?" Murphy asks.

"No, no, there's a one-year free subscription with the card," he says.

"Gee, I hope you didn't have to sell the compound," she says.

"OK, fine, if that's your attitude," Kennedy responds, stalking off. "But don't come crying to me when you have to pay the full newsstand price."

NEW YORK — Decked out in their best Western clothes, a misty-eyed Roy Rogers and Dale Evans were honored at City Hall for nearly six decades in movies, rodeos and television.

Rogers and Evans, now 83 and 82 respectively, were in New York to receive a humanitarian award from a Bronx medical center. A children's unit named after them is to be dedicated there in June.

Evans, who wore a sea-blue dress with a Western-style tunic and belt buckle at Thursday's City Hall ceremony, fought back tears as she said, "I feel very humble to accept an award for something I enjoyed doing."

Rogers, wearing a Western-style suit, string tie, 10-gallon hat (white, of course), and boots, added: "Now you know why we're together for 47 years. She's always been a great mother and a great wife."

LOS ANGELES — Her breakup with Clint Eastwood has apparently done wonders for Frances Fisher's career.

Since last winter, when she realized her relationship with Eastwood was over, she's done four films and a TV series.

One of the movies, "The Stars Fell on Henrietta," premiered Friday, as did the TV series, Fox's "Strange Luck."

"I don't quite understand it," she said. "I guess God has his plan."

The 43-year-old actress appeared in the Eastwood film "Unforgiven" and played Lucille Ball in the TV movie "Lucy and Desi: Before the Laughter."

Charles Tatum scored on a 63-yard run in the final two minutes of the first half as Midland Purple held off Lee Maroon 6-0 in Freshman football action Thursday.

The ensuing extra-point kick failed but the Bulldogs continued to keep the Rebels out of the end-zone for their first win of the season. MFHS tied Bonham last week.

Midland's next game is Thursday as it hosts Odessa Hood at 4:30 p.m.

Lee Maroon, which suffered its first loss after opening with a win over Hood last week, will play next Saturday hosting Odessa Ector at 10 a.m.

Frosh volleyball starts preseason

Irvan cleared for racing

By Mike Harris
AP Motorsports Writer

DOVER, Del. — Ernie Irvan, unable to race since a grinding crash in August of 1994 that nearly took his life, has been cleared by NASCAR to resume competition.

There was no formal announcement, but Kevin Triplett, a spokesman for NASCAR, said Friday at Dover Downs International Speedway, "We have cleared him to return to competition with no strings attached."

Irvan was in a coma for several days after sustaining serious head and lung injuries in a crash during a practice session at Michigan International Speedway. His wife was told he had only a 10-percent chance to survive.

But the 36-year-old driver has made a miraculous recovery, with only a continuing double vision problem in his left eye keeping him from being back to full health.

Even with the eye problem, Irvan has tested both SuperTrucks and Winston Cup cars and has reportedly fared well.

Asked how NASCAR made the decision to reinstate Irvan as a competitor, Triplett said, "We had extensive conversations and an exchange of information with some of the best doctors in the country who dealt with him from day one to today."

Dale Jarrett has been in the No. 28 Ford Thunderbirds that Irvan drove prior to his accident, but team owner Robert Yates already has said Jarrett will move to a different-numbered car when Irvan is ready to resume racing.

That could come as soon as the weekend of Oct. 1 at North Wilkesboro, N.C.

Irvan admitted on a Charlotte radio show this week that Yates has sent in entries for him in both the SuperTruck and Winston Cup races at North Wilkesboro Speedway. But he qualified that by saying an entry does not mean he will definitely race, although you can't race if you don't file an official entry in a timely fashion.

Yates has scheduled a press conference Tuesday at the team shop in Charlotte, N.C., to announce the plan for Irvan's return, as well as a new sponsor and car number for Jarrett.

A spokesman for Robert Yates Racing said that, under the circumstances, there would be no statement from the team until Tuesday's announcement.

Triplett, not wanting to spoil Yates' press conference, would only say, "They have come to us with a schedule that we are in agreement with. We've been in the loop on everything. ... I think Ernie is very excited about Tuesday."

■ MBNA 500 Notebook

MR. 500: When Terry Labonte takes the green flag for Sunday's MBNA 500 on Dover's one-mile oval, he will join Richard Petty in reaching a perch once thought at least unlikely, if not impossible.

This will be Labonte's 500th consecutive Winston Cup start. He trails only Petty's streak of 513 straight, which ended at Richmond in March 1989. Labonte's streak began at Riverside in January 1979.

Labonte, who is 38, can break Petty's record by qualifying for every race through next April's Goody's 500 at Martinsville.

"I just hope that people don't think I'm a lot older than I am because of this streak," Labonte joked.

HELLO DEERE: Chad Little, winner of six races this season and currently second in the Busch Grand National series, will run like a Deere next season.

Deere & Company of Moline, Ill., announced earlier this week that it will make its first foray into stock car racing, sponsoring Little for the 1996 Grand National season.

The sponsorship will go onto the Pontiacs owns by St. Louis Rams quarterback Mark Rypien and Michigan businessman Greg Pollux.

"Our sponsorship of a NASCAR team is a careful business decision based on thorough marketing research," said Hans W. Becherer, chairman and CEO of Deere & Co. "We're impressed by the growth potential for the sport and the loyalty of its fans. NASCAR has placed great emphasis on safety and sportsmanship, as well as professionalism, teamwork and high performance under pressure. These characteristics parallel our values as an organization."

B.C. Open features five-way tie

The Associated Press

ENDICOTT, N.Y. — Jay Williamson bogeyed his final hole Friday after hitting his drive into the water, settling for a 68 that dropped him back into a five-way tie for the lead midway through the $1 million B.C. Open.

■ Golf Roundup

Williamson, first-round co-leader Skip Kendall, Brad Faxon, Guy Boros and Jeff Leonard were bunched atop the leader board at 7-under-par 135 after two rounds over the par-71 En-Joie Golf Course. Leonard had the best round among the leaders, a 66. Boros shot 67, Faxon 68 and Kendall 69.

Faxon's U.S. Ryder Cup teammate, Peter Jacobsen, shot 65 and was among nine golfers one stroke off the lead. Also at 136 was Gary Hallberg, whose 63 was the best score of the day. His round featured nine birdies and was marred only by a bogey on par-5 12th.

Jay Haas and Fred Couples, also members of the Ryder Cup team, were 5-under after 69s. Lowery faded to 74 and was 2-under.

British Masters

NORTHAMPTON, England — Sam Torrance, at 42 the oldest member of Europe's team in next week's Ryder Cup, fired a 6-under-par 66 Friday to take a one-stroke lead in the British Masters.

Torrance has been playing the best golf of his life the last few months. He's finished second in two of the last three European PGA events and stands No. 2 on the money list.

An example of his improvement came on the 543-yard 14th where Torrance chipped in from 15 feet for an eagle. He also had six birdies, the last one coming on a 35-foot putt.

Nine of Europe's 12 Ryder Cup players entered the event as a tune-up for next week's biennial match with the United States. Four of them — including Ian Woosnam — missed the two-round cut.

Ryder Cup players Colin Montgomerie and Seve Ballesteros each had 69 to trail Torrance by five shots. A fifth player, Howard Clark, is seven back after back-to-back rounds of 70.

Brickyard Crossing

INDIANAPOLIS — A well-rested Ray Floyd shot a 7-under-par 65 to take a one-stroke lead after the first round of the Brickyard Crossing Championship.

John Paul Cain, Jim Dent and Larry Laoretti opened with 66s on the Brickyard Crossing course at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway and Lee Trevino, Bob Murphy, Bob Charles and qualifier Bob Carson followed with 67s. Calvin Peete, Gary Player and Kermit Zarley shot 68s.

"I played some really good golf and I putted the ball well," said Floyd, who hasn't played on the tour since winning the Burnet Senior Classic on Aug. 13. "I had some opportunities in the round that I didn't convert for pretty easy birdies."

Floyd, who teamed with Hale Irwin and Jack Nicklaus to win the Three-Tour Challenge on Tuesday in Dublin, Ohio, also had a 65 in Thursday's pro-am.

Trevino, who had neck surgery in October and has been bothered recently by a sore right shoulder, returned to the tour after a three-week break. He won the Northville Long Island Classic on Aug. 20 in his last start.

LPGA Safeco Classic

KENT, Wash. — Patty Sheehan, who says this will be her last tournament this year, shot a 7-under-par 65 and set a tournament record for 36 holes in taking a four-shot lead in the $500,000 Safeco Classic.

Sheehan's two-day total of 133 broke her own record of 134, set in 1990 on the 6,234-yard Meridian Valley Country Club course.

First-round leader Mitzi Edge was four strokes back along with Liselotte Neumann. Edge shot a 70 and Neumann a 69. Rookie Emilee Klein matched Sheehan's 65 on to pull into a tie at 138 with Alison Nicholas and Jenny Lidback, who shots 70s for 138.

Ninety seven fights in 15 years takes its toll, even for one of boxing's greatest champions.

"After so many years of working out and boxing, it all adds up," Chavez said. "I've had a lot of problems with my arms and knees. I really don't want to extend myself much longer."

Chavez appears to be closing in on the end of his career as he enters the ring once more tonight to defend his WBC super lightweight title against No. 1-ranked David Kamau.

The bout tops a card at the Mirage hotel-casino that also features WBC super welterweight champion Terry Norris in a title defense against David Gonzales. It will be televised on pay-per-view with the main event beginning about 10:15 p.m. CDT.

Though plans change often when big money is waved about in boxing, Chavez sounds serious about finishing his career in his 100th bout with a proposed May 5 fight against Oscar De La Hoya that could make him $15 million.

"I'd like to beat Kamau, (WBC lightweight champion) Miguel Angel Gonzalez and then do the fight for a lot of money with Oscar," Chavez said. "Then I'll retire."

Chavez complained this week about the rigors of training at the age of 33 for a relatively small payday of $1 million against the undefeated Kamau.

The fight is a mandatory defense for Chavez, who would tie a record of 22 title fight knockouts set by the late heavyweight champion Joe Louis if he can stop Kamau.

"I'm a little bit exhausted with boxing," Chavez said. "I don't know if I will get to 100 wins."

Chavez is a 5-1 favorite against Kamau, who probably didn't help his chances by angering the Mexican champion during Thursday's final prefight press conference.

"Julio Cesar Chavez has been a great fighter for a long time. But it's time for him to go. I'm strong, I'm fast and I can take a punch. Nothing is going to stop me," Kamau said.

"I always seem to get these big mouth opponents," Chavez replied. "I'm tired of hearing so much bull."

The Dodge Caravan is restructured

Can a minivan, that economical box on wheels which epitomizes suburbia's commuting crowd, function like an easy-to-use family sedan?

A minivan can, if it's the new Caravan by Dodge.

This striking design, in short and long variations, still looks like a minivan, despite some curvy corners and liberal expanses of window glass.

Like all the other minivans, this one can carry up to seven people or, with the two rear tiers of seats removed, a mess of cargo.

Unlike others, Caravan also performs sedan tricks.

For instance, backseat riders can reach their seats from either rear sliding side door because there's one on the left side now that matches the one on the right. When combined with the two front hinged doors, that means there are four in all for passengers, which turns this minivan into a 4-door model, just like a sedan.

Also, riders won't have to hike a leg up or get a lift just to climb aboard because the floor of this minivan seems lower than the rest — it's so low, in fact, that you can simply step aboard like you would step into a sedan.

From the driver's vantage, Caravan's wide and tall new windshield increases visibility outward, and those deep side windows further enhance the views for passengers so you end up feeling like you're peering out of a nice sedan, not some boxy van.

Further, the driver's seat, when coupled to the redesigned instrument panel, sporty steering wheel, tactile steering lever and other tools, positions the person who maneuvers Caravan in such a comfortable manner that you'd think you're guiding a far smaller vehicle.

And mechanical hardware hidden within Caravan makes this thing steer, ride and stop like a refined car.

On a recent romp across Maryland's Eastern Shore in a short-wheelbase Caravan Sport, I had to keep reminding myself that this was a minivan, not some comfortable sedan that I steered.

On Pennsylvania Avenue in the crush of commuters at our nation's capital, Caravan crossed lanes to weave between sluggish traffic as easily as would a 2-seat roadster.

On an up-ramp to the 7.7-mile Chesapeake Bay Bridge, my Caravan with its V6 horsepower surged out of a toll gate like a precision touring machine.

On the Beltway girding Washington, Caravan zipped along so smoothly and quietly that I found myself having to rein it closely to avoid the net of so many speed traps.

Clearly, the uncommon ride quality and ease of handling for this new Caravan did not match my mental image of driving a boring minivan.

According to designers, that's the big idea: Keep the favored minivan features, but forgo the hassles.

After polling minivan owners to figure out which features of the original minivan concept should change to make it more functional, design teams went to work on the new generation of models that for 1996 wear the labels of Plymouth, Chrysler and Dodge.

Results of these efforts may astound you.

New Caravan measures more than before, but it seems smaller, thanks to a hunky low stance and curvy shell.

It's three inches wider outside, with as much as nine extra inches of width within to create more space for people and gear. And Caravan's far longer now, with a cute short wheelbase model as the economy alternative and longer ones for those who want even more space.

Caravan's design also adds so many comfort features.

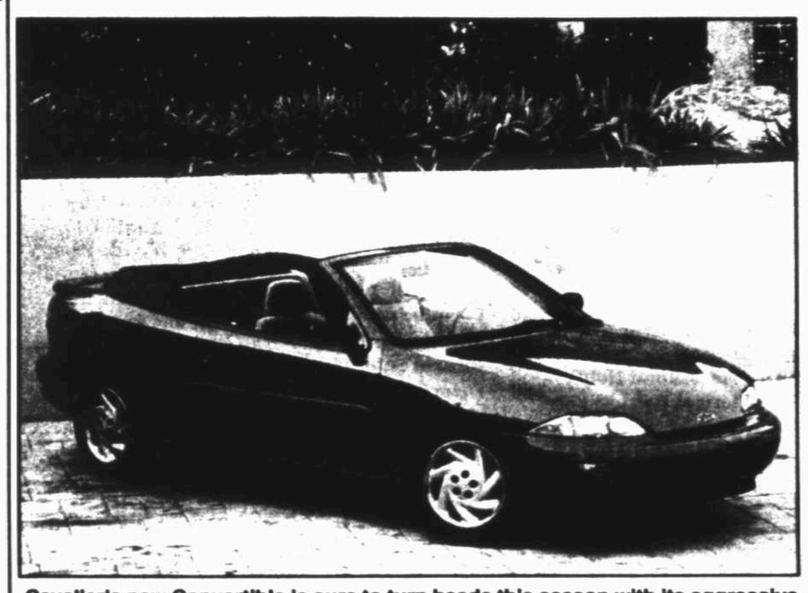

Caravan comes with so many selections.

In addition to choices of regular and long wheelbase, there are options of four engines and two automatic transmissions, seating systems for five or seven and a total of six trims — three for Caravan and three for the longer Grand Caravan.

Base Caravan and Caravan SE pack Chrysler's twin-cam 2.4-liter in-line 4-cylinder engine which delivers 150 hp.

Longer Grand Caravan SE and LE begin with the first of three V6 engines, a 3.0-liter with 150 hp rating.

Show stopper

Cavalier's new Convertible is sure to turn heads this season with its aggressive styling and racy looks. It is a real performer too, with its 150 hp powerplant.

The busy valets stopped in their tracks as I pulled my new convertible into the Manhattan parking garage. These skilled car jockeys knew instantly a Cavalier with all-new looks had just arrived.

For the first time in 13 years since the Cavalier was introduced in 1982, Chevrolet has redesigned the popular subcompact model. The convertible is very attractive. It's fresh styling resembles contemporary European designed cars. Despite the fact that the Cavalier has become the best-selling Chevrolet passenger car, with more than 3 million sold, General Motors wants to take this success story to the next level. The automaker aims to get there with appearance and affordability in mind.

The Cavalier now has a longer wheelbase, by nearly three inches, and an improved suspension system, for an enhanced, comfortable ride. Its new look is achieved by shortening the length of the body, as well as making it slightly wider and taller. The LS convertible looks like an expensive car, especially with the top down, but it is very affordable in today's automotive market of rising sticker prices.

Based priced at $17,210, the convertible I test drove had bright red exterior paint, a white top and arctic white vinyl seating; the combination was particularly eye-appealing. Getting the top down was initially easy with an electronic-powered lever that raised and lowered the soft-top. The three-piece bonnet gave the convertible a sleek, sophisticated look when the pieces were snapped into place. The snaps, however, didn't always fit easily into place, and at times, required some straining and stretching of the three-piece tonneau before it was firmly secured.

What I like about the all-new Cavalier is the array of standard equipment. Safety is one of the most important considerations in car buying (decisions) by consumers today. Anti-lock brakes, dual airbags and knee bolsters are included in the base price.

My tester's standard equipment also included a battery rundown protection to avoid a dead battery caused by an interior light left on. It also has "theatre dimming" that slowly brings down the interior courtesy lights, new integrated rear-seat air ducts and cupholders for backseat passengers. The newly designed interior has more shoulder, hip and leg room than the previous model. A rear fold down bench seat and the low trunk liftgate make lifting and transporting plenty of cargo easy to manage.

My LS convertible was equipped with a preferred package that made it especially comfortable and stylish. These optional features included a tilt steering wheel, cruise control, intermittant wipers, power mirrors, door locks and windows, with an automatic down window button for the driver, electric rear window defogger and driver's side lumbar support. With optional air conditioning, and an AM/FM stereo radio with compact disc player, the tested price was $20,161.

In addition to the sporty convertible, the 1995 Cavaliers are available as an LS sedan and a Z24 coupe. Gone are the five-door wagon model and the 3.1-liter V-6 engine with 135 horsepower. The convertible tester had an optional 2.3-liter, 4-cylinder engine with dual overhead camshafts and 150 horsepower, with an optional 4-speed automatic transmission. Due to extended durability, the automatic

1962 Impala

Chevrolet Impala and Impala SS convertibles and two-door hard-tops are much in demand from car collectors these days! Perhaps the most popular Chevrolet of all time is the 1957. Many a school kid who can't remember any new cars built before the 1990s can, nevertheless, identify a '57 Chevy on sight!

The '62 may not have been as popular, by a long shot, but it's what is known as a "sleeper" ... something that captured less attention in the past, but which is now beginning to draw the public's fancy.

Opening an original '62 Chevrolet sales brochure, we read: "AN ELEGANT BLEND OF THE TRIED AND THE NEW: Here is a car that does justice to its tradition ... the '62 full-sized Chevrolet. It's the new beauty with Jet-smooth ride. In it, you will see many of the enduring qualities that have consistently made Chevrolet America's most popular car. You'll see the same concern for craftsmanship, inside and out. You'll find the same basic engineering excellence. Even the same sensible size people liked so much last year. But you'll have to look mighty hard to find anything that isn't brand spanking new in its clean-lined looks and luxurious appointments."

New engines were available. And Chevrolet's De Luxe Air Flow Heater and Defroster was standard equipment for 1962. New inner fenders, in front, protected against rust, and new exhaust mufflers were corrosion-resistant.

A new touch on Bel-Air or Impala Sport Coupe (two-door hardtop) was a sculptured steel roof with creases to give it a "ragtop" look.

In addition to Impala and midrange Bel-Air series, there was also the lower-priced Biscayne series (with full-sized bodies, but with a minimum of chrome trim, and plainer interiors).

Since 1960, Chevrolet also offered the low-priced compact Corvair, with rear engine, and 1962 saw the debut of the intermediate-compact Chevy II, a.k.a. Nova. Then, too, there was the luxurious fiberglass-bodied Chevrolet Corvette sports car, since 1953.

1962was a "quiet" year, with more interest in quality control and engineering, and less furor over promotion hoopla and pizzazz. 1959 or 1965 cars may have looked flashier, but during the "quiet" early 1960s there were numerous mechanical improvements in American cars, which is why so many of them have lasted so long!

Dear Doctor: I own a 1991 Buick LeSabre. Sometimes it will stall out while traveling at 20 to 30 mph. Sometimes it restarts instantly, other times it will continue to stall. It doesn't matter if the gas tank is full or not. Can you help? W.A.B.

Dear W.A.B.: Before you replace any parts, have an engine performance test done. Have the technician pay close attention to idle air control motor, mass air flow sensor, ignition module, crank shaft and camshaft sensor. These are areas that I find cause a lot of stalling problems. Fuel pressure is the other area of concern. I have not seen many computers cause your problem.

Dear Doctor: I own a 1989 Nissan Maxima with 59,000 miles. I have a problem with the clock read out. Sometimes it works and other times it doesn't. When it comes back on, it displays the correct time. This has been going on for six months. The Nissan dealer suggested that I replace the timing belt and water pump for a cost of $450.00. He said this was a Nissan maintenance recommendation. Phil R.

Dear Phil: Your clock memory is keeping alive, which means that the 12 volt power and ground is not being lost. The radio will have to come out and the display read out circuit will need to be checked. This will have to be done at a radio shop. The timing belt should be replaced every five years or 60,000 miles on your car and a lot of others. Other car manufacturers have shorter and some longer timing belt intervals. The cost of $450.00 for timing belt, all other belts and water pump is not far off. Check with your local repair shop for competitive pricing. Some Nissan dealers offer special discounts on timing belt replacement. Yes Phil, other companies make timing belts and water pumps for your Maxima.

Dear Doctor: I own a 1987 Buick Custom four-cylinder, with 113,900 miles. I have had a major tune up and all required maintenance performed. My problem is long cranking when left overnight. During the day, the engine cranks over four to eight times, then starts. What is the answer to this problem? Dom G.

Dear Dom: There are three possibilities: low fuel pressure, weak spark, or not enough fuel. First, check the fuel pump and filter for pressure and volume. Then check the spark output from the coil to the plugs. Third, check the coolant sensor resistance while the engine is cold and again when it is hot, as the coolant sensor reacts similar to an automatic choke on cars with carburetors. A choke changes the air/fuel mixture.

Dear Doctor: I own a 1985 Mazda 626 LX with 120,000 miles. I have had it tuned up every 12,000 miles. Recently, I was unable to remove one of the spark plugs. I was able to turn it about- a 1/2 turn and then it stopped. Should I apply a lot of pressure to remove the spark plug or leave it alone? I am afraid of braking the spark plug or damaging the threads. John R.

Dear John: This is a common problem when spark plugs are installed without anti-seize compound, are over tightened, cross threaded, or installed when the engine is hot. I suggest you either leave the spark plug in the engine or take the car to good repair shop. Care must be taken when trying to remove the frozen spark plug. The best way to attempt to remove the spark plug is let the engine warm up for a few minutes, spray some penetrating oil onto the base of the spark plug. Try to move the spark plug either way. Care must be taken not to break the spark plug or remove the threads out of the cylinder head. Again, you should leave this job to a professional. Keep in mind the cylinder head may have to be removed to replace the threads if damage occurs. Dear Doctor: I own a 1991 Hyundai Sonata which I purchased new. Over the past three months I have had trouble starting the engine. This is an intermittent problem. I turn the key and sometimes get a clicking sound. I replaced the battery and the starter motor. The problem is still there. Al D.

Dear Al: The problem sounds like voltage drop in the electrical system. A poor connection either at the battery terminals, ground at engine block or the starter. There is always the possibility of a defective starter or battery. Clean all connections, check for voltage drop. The next time the clicking is heard, hold the key to the start position for 45 seconds. Open the hood grab on to both battery cables. The hotter cable should lead you to the problem, and would indicate a poor connection.

Winalota Cash lives up to name in 1.65 million race

RUIDOSO DOWNS, N.M. — Winalotta Cash, one of three $50,000 supplements in the nine-horse All American Futurity field, broke sharply, took control of the last 100 yards down the straightaway, then cruised home for a one-length win in the 37th running of the $1.65 million race, Sept. 11 at Ruidoso Downs.

The time of :21.18 was the fastest-ever for the All American, and only 18/100ths off the world record for 440-yards that was set by Truckle Feature at Ruidoso in 1973.

The Gregg Sanders-trained gelding qualified to the world's richest quarter horse race with the co-fastest time of :21.47, along with Mexico City invader Shake The Bank, in Aug. 18 trials and was sent off the 2-1 favorite in the 440-yard final.

Winalotta Cash was on the lead at the first call, a head in front of fellow supplemental nominee Naturally A Winner and Shake The Bank. Midway down the racing strip, the powerful golding had widened his lead to a half-length under no urging by jockey Billy Peterson. Nearing the wire, Shake The Bank and Naturally A Winner put up mild challenges, but their attempts were futile as Whinalota Cash pulled clear to win driving.

Shake The Bank finished a 3/4-length in front of Naturally A Winner for the place and show positions.

"When the gate opened I knew we were in good shape. After the fourth or fifth jump I was in front and after that I never saw another horse," said jockey Billy Peterson.

Concerning the fast time his horse ran, Peterson said, "he's just a freak. He's unreal. I never whipped him. I just hand rode him because this horse does it all on his own and he's always giving 150 percent," Peterson said.

Sanders and owner Andra Meridyth of Odessa are relative newcomers to the racing game and neither had over come close to having a horse in the All American.

"This is a dream come true. I have to thank God, my wife and Jamie Meridyth (Meridyth's husband) because I wouldn't be here without them," said Sanders who has trained for nine years, but has never had more than 10 wins in one year until this season.

Winalota Cash and sixth-place finisher Some Swinger each were the most experienced horses in the field with eight starts each before today's race. Sanders said that was a primary factor in the victory.

"Any horse with nine starts is more aggressive than one that has only three starts. He runs like an older horse and he's 100 percent sound," he said.

The victory was worth $921,465 to Winalota Cash's connections and raised his career bankroll to $1,087,669 from five wins in nine starts. The Texas-bred son of the previously unproven stud Light On.

The runner-up effort earned Shake The Bank $268,010. The Oklahoma-bred filly by Bully Bullion is trained by Juan Gonzales and owned by Cuadra Serpino, Ramiro Alpizar and Hector Roldan of Mexico City.

The Johnie Goodman-trainee Naturally A Winner will receive $110,575 for third. The golding by Runaway Winner is owned by Goodman, Jim Johnson and Ernest S. Bess. Glen Murphy was the rider.

The All American and the nine races on the supporting card was witnessed by a crowd of 10,994 fans on track, the fifth largest in the 47-year history of Ruidoso Downs. The total attendance, including off-track figures, was 10,994.

The time of :21.18 was the fastest ever for the All-American, and only 18/100ths off the world record for 440-yards that was set by Truckle Feature at Ruidoso in 1973.

Heavily-favored Blazen Bryan overcame a slow start to outfinish early leader Kelleys Merger nearing the wire for a half-length victory in the $157,570 All American Futurity First Consolation Sept. 11.

The 2-year-old gray colt by Chicks Beduino was third at the start of the 440-yard race and trailed Kelleys Merger by nearly a length. Under veteran rider Jacky Martin, the even-mony favorite rallied strongly on the outside part of the track to get on even terms with Kelleys Merger with 100 yards to go then took the lead for good in the final stages of the race to stop the timer in :21.53 seconds.

The victory was worth $32,251 to owners Fast Track Partners, Alice Bench and others of Milburn, Okla. Rodney Reed is the trainer.

World record holder Tuxer just nipped favorite Slick Ace at the wire for a nose victory in the $16,500 Ruidoso 550 Championship.

Slick Ace, a winner of three straight races, was sent off the 2-1 favorite in the field of 10 quarter horses and grabbed the lead midway down the straightway. Tuxer trailed in third, but loomed boldly on the outside and put in a furious charge with less than 50 yards to go. In the final jumps Slick Ace and Tuxer battled nose-and-nose and after a long photo finish Tuxer was declared winner by the narrowest of margins. The time was :26.88.

Tuxer, a 5-year-old California-bred gelding by White Tie, established a new world record for 550 yards when he ran the distance in :26.34 at Rillito Park in February, earned $7,440 for the victory. Tuxer is trained by John Bassett and owned by Icela Luna and Arturo Soto of Tucson, Ariz. Kenny Hart was the winning jockey.

The other co-feature, the $17,325 Breeders' Cup Southwest Juvenile, was captured by the 2-year-old gelding EC's Dream, owned by Jim Paul and Johnie Jamison of El Paso.

Kiker gives tips on prussic acid poisoning

Sudangrass and sorghum are two groups of plants that produce cyanide and "can and will poison livestock under certain conditions," said Midland County Extension Agent, Earnest Kiker.

While growing, these plants produce cyanogenetic glucosides, which, with the addition of water glucosides, decompose into glucose sugars, Kiker said.

"When this process occurs in sorghums and sudans, cyanide is released from the chemical reaction and becomes toxic hydrocyanic acid (prussic acid). While in the bonded form, cyanide and glucosides aren't poisonous.

"However, when the bond is broken due to the presence of certain enzymes, the highly toxic cyanide or prussic acid is formed. Those enzymes may be present in the plant itself, other feeds or the digestive juices of the animal.

'Prussic acid is released very rapidly from the glucoside form in frozen leaves. This is the reason that frosted sorghum is dangerous to feed until it dries out.'

— Earnest Kiker
extension agent

Kiker offers some tips to avoid prussic acid poisoning:

When animals eat plants containing glucosides intact, the toxic form is eliminated before the concentration becomes poisonous. Stress that retards the plant growth — including drought or frost — causes an increase in the glucoside level within the plant. Frost or wilting of the plants followed by rapid regrowth will increase prussic acid within the plant and the transformation into the highly toxic cyanide.

"Basically, sorghum is much higher in prussic acid than sudangrass," Kiker said. "Prussic acid is released very rapidly from the glucoside form in frozen leaves. This is the reason that frosted sorghum is dangerous to feed until it dries out."

There is usually little danger of prussic acid poisoning in grazing most varieties of sudangrass, he said. Plants that have a height of about 6 feet tend to not affect animals as much as shorter stunted plants experiencing regrowth.

Green chopping the entire plants tends to dilute the toxic portions of the plant. Favorable weather for plant regrowth after clipping, drought, frost or grazing will result in new leaves that are likely to be very toxic and cause prussic acid poisoning.

Call state for requirements before traveling with horse

Cobb's Corner

Q. I am planning a trip to New Mexico in the fall. Do I need to do anything special to cross state lines with my horses?

A. A negative result on a Coggins Test is required on all horses within the past 12 months. A health certificate issued within the past 45 days is required for interstate travel. Because of an outbreak of vesicular stomatitis, which affects horses, cattle, swine and other animals, travel may be restricted. Before leaving Texas, it is best to call the state you will be visiting to check on requirements. To check on re-entry to Texas, call 512-719-0777.

Q. I have heard about vesicular stomatitis. Is it fatal? How would I know if my animals have it?

A. Vesicular stomatitis has caused concern for ranchers and horsemen and complicates interstate travel. It effects horses, cattle and swine. It causes blister-like lesions in the mouth, dental pad, tongue, lips, nostrils, hooves and teats.

These blisters swell and break, leaving raw tissue that is so painful that animals refuse to eat or drink and show signs of lameness.

Incubation period is between two and eight days.

The first sign is excessive salivation. Fever may accompany the lesions. The mouth has white and raised areas. Other signs are weight loss and drop in milk production.

If there are no complications, such as secondary infections, animals may recover in about two weeks. The disease is usually not fatal. Antibiotics may prevent infections. Infected animals should be isolated from the herds.

Farming community pulls together, faces challenges

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

ST. LAWRENCE - The very nature that makes farming possible and oftentimes profitable, particularly in times of bumper crops, can also be a curse: Imbalance in nature.

The infiltration of the foliage-stripping beet armyworm is evidence of that.

Like the infamous boll weevil, the notorious green beet armyworm that flies into the country in its altered state as a moth is causing problems that are calling for the unity of the St. Lawrence cotton-farming community.

The condition is abetted by the drought that is cutting into cotton production despite the benefits of irrigation.

"This beet armyworm is a natural occurrence that happens from time to time when you have an imbalance in natural," declared cotton farmer Clifford Hoelscher at the Tri-County Field Crops Tours that attracted 135 agribusiness people, including farmers from Glasscock, Upton, and Reagan counties and Texas Agricultural Extension Service (TAEX) agents from throughout much of West Texas.

The imbalance is evident in detrimental insects, such as the bollworm, boll weevil, stink bug, beet armyworm, aphid, and tobacco budworm, overpowering the beneficial-insect population, including the lady beetle or ladybug and the lacewing.

"I've seen this very same thing happen 25 and 40 years ago - the beet armyworm, the cabbage looper (inchworm), and all of these worms," said Hoelscher, who is on the St. Lawrence Area Cotton Growers Association board of directors. "We tried to bring back a balance of nature with the use chemicals. Sometimes new technology isn't quite far enough on the cutting edge to take care of that situation for us."

While farmers are taking action to counterattack their archenemies, boll weevil and the beet armyworm, they are less able to cope with another devastating condition: inadequate rainfall bordering on a drought and droughts.

"It's drying up," Hoelscher said of the cotton. "It's hot and dry. We don't have enough rainfall and, consequently, we are going to have half a crop."

But what rain falls "sure helps our spirits," said farmer Alfred Schwartz.

The 1995 harvest, which Schwartz estimated to be about two-thirds of a bale to the acre, will be well below par and "very similar" to last year's paltry crop coming off of irrigated land.

Even irrigated crops must have natural rainfall to fare well.

Last year, St. Lawrence cooperative gins processed 44,000 bales. "We may not make quite that much (in 1995), but it's going to be a pretty good little run," he said. The co-op's record run is 65,000 bales.

In the three-county St. Lawrence area, Schwartz estimated that between 150,000 and 200,000 acres are in cotton but figured that fewer than 100,000 bales would be produced off of that acreage.

"The farmers here in the St. Lawrence area are truly devoted to farming," Schwartz declared. "They live farming. They eat farming. They sleep farming. This is their life. They are truly devoted."

Michael Hoch, who is into his 25th crop year, said that in the 30 years in which he has lived in the community, "This is the first time I've seen the mesquite trees turn yellow in September" due to lack of moisture. And the mesquite, a survivor among trees, has a "tremendous root system. It is dry."

To the south in ranching country around Rankin, rancher Tommy Owens observed that "It has been really tough here lately. We haven't had much rain. But here last weekend, we got two inches across Upton County, and it has brightened up a lot."

Before the recent farm tour, Dr. Ed Hiler, who is Texas A&M University's dean of Agriculture and Life Sciences, saluted St. Lawrence farmers for maintaining a "high level of management. The camaraderie in this group is something that is very, very positive. With the spirit and the leadership that is here, I know that you will come through all of these things (challenges and problems), and you will be stronger and stronger, as time goes on."

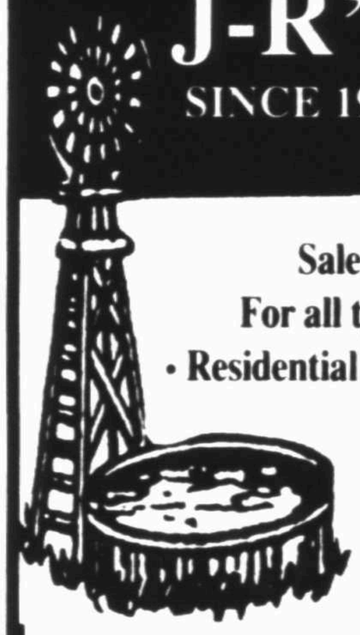

And TAEX Agent Earnest Kiker of Midland hailed the farmers. "They are always on the cutting edge of technlogy to improve their production techniques."

Computerized feeding

Feed specialists from Holland and Germany descended on Wil and George Groves' Iowa hog farm in early 1994 to test a sophisticated new computer feeding system. Designed in Holland, the Lacoflex system is a computerized system that can feed finishing pigs a constantly changing ration. However, getting the system to work on a U.S. farm has been a challenge.

Extension service to conduct six-day workshop on Total Ranch Management

These days ranching folks hear more and more words like sustainability, success, goals, enterprise analysis, and management.

But really, what are they? How do you understand, prioritize, and integrate them for your own unique ranching situation? No two ranches are alike.

These and many other questions are being asked daily by ranchers, managers, lessors, absentee landowners and families. In most cases, the simple truth is, that the future will be determined by identifying and doing the appropriate things in a timely manner. The decisions you make today impact resources necessary for survival, profit and sustainability for future generations.

The Texas Agricultural Extension Service will be conducting a six-day workshop on Total Ranch Management on Sept. 27-29 and Oct. 10-12 in Sanderson.

The TRM approach emphasizes goal achievement via enterprise selection and day-to-day activities that give the most effective use of ranch resources. An open, informal dialogue between all participants is kept throughout the workshop. Participants begin by identifying why they are ranching. This facilitates the formulation of long- and short-term goals for the ranch, family, absentee owners, lessor, etc.

Resources are inventoried and a business plan for sustainability is developed. Along the way, the specific skills necessary to develop and monitor these business plans are taught both in the classroom, and with hands-on field exercises. They include the integration of financial management, enterprise analysis, drought management, and other range, livestock, wildlife, and people management techniques.

This TRM workshop will be limited to 30 participants. The registration deadline is Wednesday. For more information contact your local County Extension Agent or the District ó Extension office at (915) 336-8585, Box 1298; Fort Stockton, 79735, Attn. Bruce Carpenter.

■ Handbook produced

The Livestock and Natural Resources Committee of the Midland County Extension Service is a group of horse people dedicated to education and promotion of the horse industry in the Permian Basin. Members include business owners, cutters, barrel racers, veterinarian, trainer, ranch manager, ropers and pleasure riders. As representatives of area horse owners, the committee sees the need for related business information to be available to all horse owners in a handy directory.

The Permian Basin Equine Directory/Handbook is being produced by the Livestock & Natural Resource Committee (L&NR), for new arriving and longtime resident horse owners in the West Texas area.

Besides listing services, sources and organizations for horse owners, the Equine Directory/Handbook will include helpful horse care information compiled from Texas A&M Equine Science Department.

Every horse-related business in the Permian Basin is being contacted to learn the benefits of this important project. So far, more than 300 businesses names have been collected as potential advertisers. Plans are to produce 2,000 copies of the Director/Handbook with more printing as needed. The Directory/Handbook will be distributed through chambers of commerce, feed stores, realtors, clubs, committee members and other locations frequented by horse owners.

Business and organizations will be listed by specialty for easy reference. Special notations can be included.

World champion bull riders leave lasting impressions

By Kendra Santos

Legends are never supposed to die, especially before they're done painting all of their unique, indelible impressions on the world.

It seems like Western justice would grant them long lives, glorious golden years to share their remarkable memories with their children and grandchildren. After all, they give their youths to the public and give us someone in common to idolize. The magic of legends is magnetic; it boosts society's optimism.

Rodeo lost two greats on July 30 - George Paul in 1970 and Lane Frost in 1989. Both men were 25 years old. They were world champion bull riders, but that's not what makes them legends. Those who knew them will never forget them. Those who didn't know them wish they did and will never satisfy their craving to hear more about them.

Rodeo kids today feel like they knew Frost, the 1987 world champion. They got to see him ride, they have his autograph on their bedroom walls and they have newspaper clippings that they cut out themselves in their scrapbooks. They'll feel privileged and proud to hand those memories down to their kids and grandkids. They'll tell them what a great bull rider he was, what a nice person he was, what a hero he was.

BUT TODAY'S kids are too young to have known Paul, the 1968 champ of the world, so they get their Paul lore from those who did.

Gary Leffew won the 1979 world bullriding title. When he stepped up to accept the gold buckle that year he didn't hesitate to tell the crowd that he wouldn't have won it had George Paul not been tragically killed that summer. Leffew said he was traveling with Paul just before he died.

"He won the bareback riding and bull riding that afternoon (July 29, 1970) at Monte Vista (Colo.)," Leffew remembers. "We went to Casper (Wyo.) that night and we were supposed to go on to Helena and then to Canada the next day. He bucked off his bull at Casper that night and was madder than hell. Then he went to the bar and got in a fight.

"The next morning, I went down to his room to wake him up. He didn't come to the door, but he was a hard sleeper. So I went and got the bellman to open the door. The room had never been slept in. He'd flown off in the night without telling anyone."

ACCORDING TO Leffew, the impulsive Paul had set out for Las Vegas, where he was going to marry his girlfriend. He called her from Casper to tell her he was on his way. The route was to take from Casper to Salt Lake City to Las Vegas. When he never arrived, she called the authorities, who on Aug. 2 located the wreckage of his twin-engine Beechcraft Bonanza on Commissary Ridge, 15 miles northwest of Kemmerer, Wyo. Paul, whose body was discovered by rancher, died of a broken neck.

His friends said Paul was notorious for putting his plane on automatic pilot and going to sleep.

"Earlier that summer, he had his plane on auto pilot on his way to the rodeo in Salinas (Calif.)," Leffew said. "While he was asleep he flew right over Salinas and way out over the Pacific Ocean somewhere. He barely had enough gas to get back to Salinas and he got there late. When he came running in he was asking who was winning it. Then he said, 'Get ready to win second.' He was right. God, it was a beautiful ride."

FROST WAS killed just after making an 85-point short-round ride at the 1989 Cheyenne Frontier Days Rodeo. The bull he rode hit Frost in the back with his horns and he died of internal injuries.

"Everybody loved George and Lane," Leffew said. "They always had those great big smiles on their faces and they both had a great sense of humor. They were full of enthusiasm and they were always laughing and poking fun at life."

After Paul's 1968 world championship, he took 1969 off to tend to the family's million-acre ranch in Coahuila, Mexico. He traveled moderately early in 1970 and then hit it hard that summer.

"He didn't need the money. But if there was a buckle or prize or the recognition of doing something no one else had ever been able to do, he rose to the occasion," Leffew said. "He loved those prizes. And he loved the limelight. He was the first to throw his hat in the air. What a superstar."

HE ONCE rode 79 bulls in a row to the whistle.

"He was in a class by himself," Leffew said. "And he was one of the most charismatic people I've ever seen. He was like Elvis out there.

"I remember the first time I saw him. It was at the Cow Palace. When he walked in, every head turned. The confidence just seemd to radiate out of him, and here he was just a 19-year-old kid. That night he stuck it on a rank bull. He won the bareback riding, too. When he took off his shirt he looked like a champion weightlifter. Yet he never rode with strength; he rode with balance."

Leffew still carries a picture of Paul, himself and his son, Brett, that was taken in Cheyenne in 1970.

Three-time world champion Tuff Hedeman was only 7 when Paul died. But Hedeman, who was Frost's best friend, was practically raised on George Paul tales.

"Growing up in Texas and wanting to be a bull rider, he was the legend," Hedeman said. "Any time a conversation comes up about great bull riders, he's always one of the first names out of somebody's mouth.

"Guys have told me I ride like George Paul. It's flattering to me to be mentioned in the same sentence. He must have had something because they're still talking about George Paul."

THE GEORGE Paul Memorial Bull Riding is an annual event open only to professional rodeo's most elite bull riders. It's held n Del Rio, where Paul lived when he wasn't in Mexico.

"I remember the first time I got to watch it," Hedeman said. "It was the highlight of the year. The only buckle you'd rather have was a world buckle, an NFR buckle or a Cheyenne buckle."

Frost treasured the George Paul buckles he won in 1985 and '86, when he and Hedeman shared the title. Frost's 1985 George Paul buckle is at the ProRodeo Hall of Fame in Colorado Springs, Colo.

Cody Lambert also remembers Paul as a childhood hero.

"I heard a lot about him when I was a kid," he said. "I've talked to a lot of guys who knew George Paul. They all say he never came close to reaching his potential. At the time he rodeoed, he really stood out."

Reigning world champion all-around cowboy Ty Murray was 9 months old when Paul died.

"I REMEMBER my dad talking about George Paul," Murray said. "I always heard what a good bull rider he was; how he rode all those bulls in a row. I was the type of kid who really paid attention to that kind of stuff — rodeo was everything."

Larry Mahan won one of his six world all-around crowns the year Paul died. He also knew Frost.

"They were both very charismatic and had great attitudes," Mahan said. "To me, they were always in a right frame of mind. They were great athletes. They rode different from each other, but they were both great champions. We felt such a great loss when they died."

"They had a world of personality," Leffew said. "To watch them ride was aleays a joy, but it's their personalities we miss, their smiles. They both had that presence that lit everything up."

Quest for cotton

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING - To farmers, the essense of the complexities of molecular biology, plant pathology, and other sciences dealing with cotton production basically boils down to one simple thing: The quest for more cotton.

Bush and a couple of Lubbock-based molecular biologists, Dr. Norma Trolinder and Dr. Linda Koonce, joined almost a hundred West Texas farmers and other agribusiness people at Roy Holland's Holland Cottonseed Inc. Field Day 1995 in early September to update producers on bold experimental cotton varieties.

In their dreams and hopes, farmers seek varieties that are hardy and drought resistant, which is possible and extant. Drought-resistant cotton that fares well in dry conditions and on dryland farms has been on the market for years even as more research continues into more drought-resistant varieties.

'They now have engineered cotton — the BT cottons — that makes this protein. When they (bollworm, budworm, armyworm) eat the cotton, it kills them. It has some efficacy against the armyworm.'

'We have had an awful hot, dry year, and that contributed to the increase in the beet armyworm.'

— Dr. David Bush
Waco plant pathologist

And farmers are intent on attacking the scourges of boll weevils, which cause the young, succulent bolls to rot, and the beet armyworms, which cause cotton to waste away by stripping the plants' life-support system, the leaves and bracts.

They desire cotton strains that defeat the onslaught of detrimental insects, such as the boll weevil, bollworm, budworm, and the beet armyworm.

"It's more than possible," said Lubbock molecular biologist Dr. Norma Trolinder. "It's done."

Monsanto, a major chemical company, has developed and is testing a cotton variety that produces an enzyme, cholesterol oxidase, that interferes with the boll weevils' life cycle, maturity and reproduction.

"I don't know how far away they are from putting this thing out," Dr. Trolinder allowed, but the enzyme is "showing very good efficacy against the boll weevil."

Dr. Koonce noted that the boll weevil needs cholesterol to complete its life cycle and for the female weevil to lay eggs.

The "BT cotton" variety that is "coming on the market" produces a protein by way of the bacterium, Bacillus Thuringiensis (BT), that kills insects in a specific manner," Dr. Trolinder noted.

"They now have engineered cotton - the BT cottons - that makes this protein," Dr. Trolinder said. "When they eat the cotton, it kills them. It has some efficacy against the armyworm."

And Dr. Koonce noted that organically healthy plants, as opposed to sickly plants, have no defense against the worms and the adult boll weevil after it has left the worm stage.

Dr. Bush, the plant pathologist, noted that the beet armyworm, a caterpillar, "is associated with drought."

Beet armyworms "seem to have their outbreaks in areas that have started the boll-weevil eradication program." However, that outbreak may be linked to "reducing the numbers of predators," those beneficial insects, such as the lacewing fly and the lady beetle or ladybug, which would control the beet armyworm.

"There is a fungus that sort of controls those (armyworms) populations naturally," Bush said. "Whenever you have droughty situations, that fungus is not there," and the armyworm is not held in check.

"We have had an awful hot, dry year, and that contributed to the increase in the beet armyworm," Bush surmised. "You are getting these tremendous explosions of the beet armyworm; the populations are just enormous. And they are just overcoming not only the beneficials but also the (chemical) compounds that you put on (crops) there."

In a more positive sway, Bush noted the success of the Holland 186 variety and the promise of Holland's experimental HX-338A and HX-339A.

"They have a very, very wide range of adaptability - the widest we've had."

HX-339A "does well in a lot of different environments," including soil types and varying humidities.

HX-338A is at least equally stout. "I think you could plant this thing on the moon and make some cotton," Bush said.

In developing varieties at Holland Cottonseed , Bush noted that "We don't why exactly, but (generally) you can go from east to west with a cotton variety, but it is very difficult to go from the west to east. Cottons that are selected in this low-humidity (West Texas) area just can't stand the higher humidities." However, the HX-338A and HX-339A varieties, for whatever reason, can handle it because they have done well in those situations."

On insect control, Bush observed that "You never are going to kill every single one of these insects," including the "nondescript" green armyworm.

"There are some in here (in the Holland field)," but "We are not really panicking about this, because we still have some pretty good populations of beneficials," including the lacewing fly and the lady beetle (ladybug) and another beneficial predator, the crab spider.

Roy Holland, who owns and operates Holland Cottonseed, is gravely concerned about cotton's insect problems. His operation serves the Texas Rolling Plains, the Texas Coastal Plains and Rio Grande Valley, Oklahoma and is venturing into the Southeastern United States.

"If we eradicate the boll weevil, we can grow cotton cheaper than anybody," Holland said. " And if we don't eradicate him, we're out of the cotton business."
