A.M. BRIEFING

AP Laserphoto

TWA theory

NEW YORK — Federal officials denied again Friday that "friendly fire" caused the TWA Flight 800 crash, a theory given new life by newsman Pierre Salinger's claim a Navy vessel accidentally shot down the jumbo jet. "We can assure the American public and families of the victims that nothing — nothing — like that did take place or would take place," FBI Assistant Director James Kallstrom told reporters. Bristling at the suggestion there was a cover-up of the cause, Kallstrom said "as I stand here today" it is still unknown whether a bomb, a missile or a mechanical failure caused the July 17 explosion that killed all 230 people aboard.

President Clinton gestures during a White House news conference Friday. The president said questionable contributions to the Democratic party from foreign interests proved the need for campaign reform but that administration policy toward Indonesia and other nations wasn't influenced by the gifts.

President urges GOP to put investigations aside

■ At news conference, Clinton talks about balancing budget, campaign finance reform, U.S. troops in Bosnia and names Erskine Bowles as new chief of staff.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton said Friday there always are "a lot of hard feelings" after elections, but he urged Republicans to put aside politically charged investigations and work with him to balance the budget and enact campaign finance reform.

"The American people would be elated if we — both sides — seemed to be putting our politics down, waiting for the next election, and really working like crazy to get something done for our country," the president told a news conference.

Three days after easily winning re-election, Clinton unequivocally denied that questionable campaign contributions from foreign donors had any influence on his policy toward Indonesia. "Absolutely not," he declared.

The president refused to say whether Attorney General Janet Reno should seek an independent counsel to investigate Democratic Party fund raising. And he declined to say whether he wanted Reno to stay on for his second term.

With at least half his Cabinet departing, the president said he hoped some Republicans would be among the replacements. Reno has said she wants to remain, but some White House officials are trying to engineer her departure.

As a torrential rain lashed Washington, the president held forth for more than an hour in an East Room news conference where he announced that North Carolina businessman Erskine Bowles would replace Leon Panetta as chief of staff. Worn out by the campaign, Clinton was pale but spoke energetically.

The president said it was conceivable that American troops would participate in a follow-on NATO mission in Bosnia next year, beyond the one-year deadline he

Amoco, Shell lay off 90 basin employees but will keep them on payroll through 1996

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Amoco Corp. and Shell Western, which will be combining their assets into a new company next year, laid off a total of 90 employees in the Permian Basin this week.

Amoco laid off 60 employees from its Permian Basin Business Unit, a move that spokesman Jim O'Leary attributed to current production drop-offs and other business conditions.

He said that the layoffs included employees in Houston and Midland-Odessa. He was unable to say whether the jobs eliminated were field or office positions.

Shell Western Exploration & Production laid off approximately 30 employees. Company officials attributed the layoffs to the pending merger with Amoco, which will create a new company, Altura Energy Ltd.

O'Leary said that while the pending merger might have played a small part, "the layoffs would have happened regardless."

"In September, we spoke with all the employees in Houston and West Texas," said Rich Hansen, manager of community affairs for Shell. "We described the management structure, what jobs would be available, the various departments, salary and benefit structure for Altura.

"We then gave all the employees ballots to indicate if they wanted to join Altura and what job description, whether they wanted to stay with Shell or whether they wanted to retire or find new employment."

After reviewing the ballots in September and October, Hansen said, officials offered jobs to 370 of the 400 employees Shell has in the division — 150 in Houston and 250 in the Permian Basin.

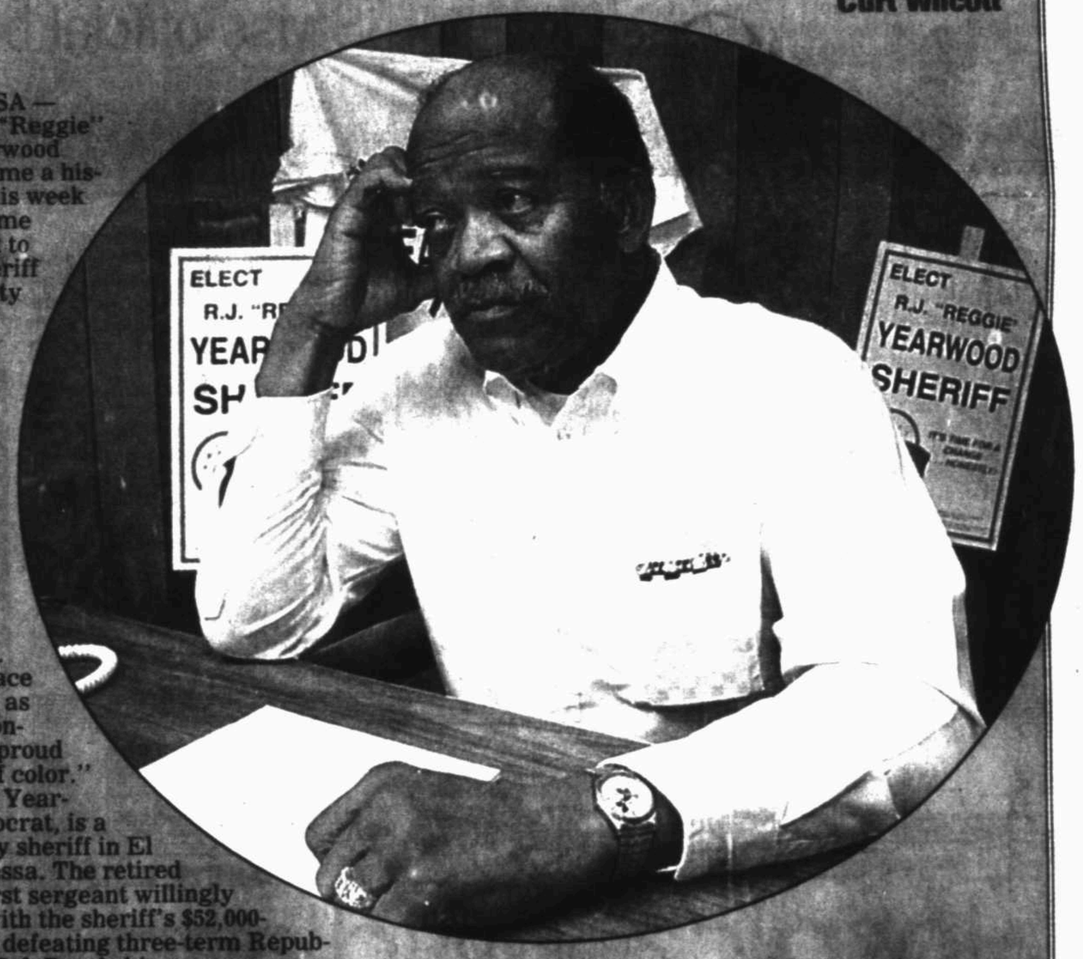

He estimated that half of the 30 employees whose positions were found to be redundant would retire and the remainder would either find new positions within Shell or look for new employment in the Permian Basin.

He said Shell will keep the employees on the payroll for the rest of the year so

MAKING HISTORY

Story by Ed Todd | Photos by Curt Wilcott

ODESSA — R.J. "Reggie" Yearwood became a historic figure this week when he became the first black to be elected sheriff of Ector County and, perhaps the first to be elected in West Texas.

"I am the elected sheriff who happens to be black," Yearwood, 67, said Friday at his downtown campaign headquarters. "There's no race involved here as far as I am concerned. I am proud to be a man of color."

The 6-foot-1 Yearwood, a Democrat, is a former deputy sheriff in El Paso and Odessa. The retired U.S. Army first sergeant willingly got saddled with the sheriff's $52,000-a-year job by defeating three-term Republican Sheriff Bob Brookshire.

"I'm for the underdog because I think everything is possible," said Yearwood, who will command a force of more than 150 deputies and other staffers and a $5.5 million budget.

"You just have to apply yourself." And so he did.

Yearwood attracted 53 percent of the popular vote to Brookshire's 47 percent.

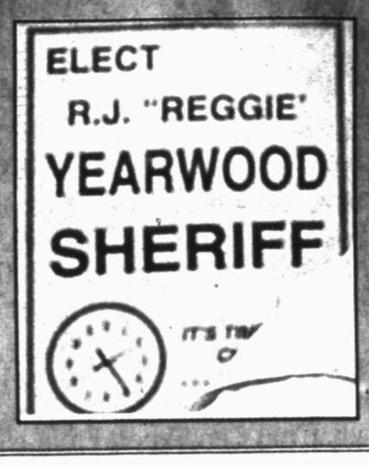

His victory, in a county of 122,000 people — of whom less than 5 percent are black — was by more than 2,000 votes: 17,156 to 15,111.

"We stuck with the issues," Yearwood said. "We didn't sling any mud. Mr. Brookshire is a good man."

Yearwood said that Brookshire hired his oldest son, Reggie H. Yearwood, as a deputy jailer.

Yearwood conducted a grassroots campaign in which he directed his efforts toward voters who had cast ballots against Brookshire in the Republican primary election and to citizens who did not vote in the primary.

Recycle Midland officials expect new facility to recycle 11 percent of city's garbage in first year

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

A groundbreaking was held Friday for a facility where nearly all the city's garbage will be routed and recyclable materials extracted.

The Materials Recovery Facility (MRF), expected to open in February, will process an average of 400 tons of garbage a day. More than 11 percent of garbage is expected to be recycled in the first year.

The $1.8 million dollar MRF is being constructed by Recycle Midland, a private enterprise that works closely with the city of Midland. The 25,000-square-foot processing facility will be at 4005 W. Industrial Ave.

Machines and people will remove metals, glass, paper, cardboard and possibly plastic in the future.

"It will go down a conveyor belt and we'll pick out the good stuff," Recycle Midland President Bill Mathis said. "If it shakes rattles or tears, we'll pull it out."

Unlike some MRFs, this one will process the entire solid waste stream with the exception of yard trash, construction refuse and hazardous material.

Recyclable materials and leftover garbage will subsequently be baled and sent off, respectively, for recycling and the landfill.

"By doing that (baling the garbage) you reduce the volume of the landfill by 50 percent," said Phil Handley, director of operations for Recycle Midland.

Because of the space savings, the city will save in its ongoing costs for expansion and maintenance under disposal regulations, city officials said. And the bundled trash also would prevent problems with blowing garbage at the dump.

WORLD IN BRIEF

■ Hells Angels give up headquarters

COPENHAGEN, Denmark — At City Hall's urging, the Hells Angels have abandoned their Copenhagen clubhouse — hit by a deadly anti-tank grenade last month.

The grenade slammed into the Copenhagen headquarters during a beer bash there, killing two people and injuring 19 others. Police suspect that the rival Bandidos gang was behind the attack.

Many residents in the surrounding working-class district had avoided rooms in their homes that faced the clubhouse, fearing stray bullets and bombs.

The Danish bikers are locked in a low-level guerrilla war being waged among motorcycle gang members across Scandinavia and Finland.

While the Hells Angels finally agreed to roar on down the road, their departure came at a price for Danish taxpayers, City Hall spokesman Carsten Mai-Joergensen said Friday.

■ 'Despicable' people ruining tourism

BANGKOK, Thailand — In a reference to pro-democracy leader Aung San Suu Kyi, a top general said "despicable people" are trying to wreck the Burmese government's campaign to boost tourism.

"Unscrupulous people and organizations are spreading rumors ... and also discouraging investment saying the people do not benefit from such investments," Gen. Khin Nyunt was quoted as saying in Friday's edition of the state-run New Light of Myanmar newspaper.

Khin Nyunt heads Burma's secret police and is chairman of the tourism development committee.

Although he never mentioned Suu Kyi by name, he seemed to refer to the 1991 Nobel Peace Prize winner, who has urged tourists not to visit Burma and foreign investors not to invest in the country until the generals are no longer in power.

"Without consideration for the welfare of the country ... despicable people of low intelligence are spreading false and disparaging reports" about Burma, Khin Nyunt said.

The military government's "Visit Myanmar 1996" campaign is scheduled to kick off on Nov. 18, more than 10 months late because of delays in work needed to accommodate a hoped-for influx of 250,000 tourists.

■ Italian judge rules on cursing God

AVEZZANO, Italy — Cursing God is still a crime in Italy. But invectives against the Virgin Mary? That's a matter for your conscience, not the courts.

A judge ruled Thursday that a motorist could not be prosecuted under Italy's old blasphemy statutes because the targets of his venom — Mary and a host of saints — are no longer off-limits to the foul-mouthed.

"It is no longer seen as a crime," said Judge Francesco Centofanti in Avezzano, about 50 miles east of Rome.

He said Marco Catuzzi was guilty of blaspheming God in the course of a stream of curses directed at a traffic officer three years ago. However, Catuzzi escaped punishment because the statute of limitations had expired.

The Constitutional Court ruled in September that blasphemy laws applied to God, but not to other figures worshiped by Roman Catholics, including Mary, Jesus' mother. The maximum fine is $395.

The Vatican newspaper L'Osservatore Romano said that although Mary and the saints cannot "be compared to God," the "whole body" of the faith should be covered by anti-blasphemy laws.

■ Unexploded bombs still in London

LONDON — More than 100 bombs that the Germans dropped on Britain during World War II lie unexploded in and around London, 51 years after the war ended.

Armed Forces Minister Nicholas Soames released a list of unexploded bombs Thursday that the authorities know are scattered across the capital, although exact locations are not known.

He also indicated that unexploded bombs that nobody knows of could be buried in the London area, saying there was no absolute assurance the list he had was complete.

"We are now embarking upon major redevelopment schemes in old docklands areas where we are concerned we may find more unexploded bombs," the defense ministry said in a statement. East London's docks were among the most heavily bombed areas.

Soames issued the list of known bombs in a written parliamentary answer to a lawmaker's question about the extent of the problem.

Soames wrote: "The risk which these unexploded bombs represent is very difficult to quantify."

Some Germans want wall back as reminder

By Paul Geitner
Associated Press

BERLIN — Only a few pieces remain of the Berlin Wall. Most of the concrete that once snaked through the city has been replaced with reconnected streets and new construction.

Out of sight, out of mind? Many fear that's already happening, and are lobbying for the city to make the 96-mile wall visible again as a reminder to future generations of a painful past.

"The wall is disappearing everywhere in the city," said Hermann Josef Pohlmann of Berlin's office for building administration. "It's visible almost nowhere. Nobody knows anymore where it stood."

Pohlmann is in charge of the "Wall Museum" project, which hopes to draw a line through the city to connect the existing sections of wall.

One proposal is to extend a copper band that traces 825 feet of the wall along a Berlin street. Estimated cost: $4.7 million.

Other proposals range from a modest red stripe for $27,000 to inlaid concrete for $6 million. The project also plans to mark the two ends of the wall with polished steel and to re-create a guard tower.

"It's a way of dealing with a painful past — creating a place for contemplation ... and along with that, show the people who come after what it was like," Pohlmann said.

Erected in 1961, the wall started to come down on Nov. 9, 1989. As the East German regime collapsed, the wall was disassembled.

Today, brightly painted segments stand in museums around the world. Other big chunks were given to former U.S. President Ronald Reagan and Pope John Paul II for their gardens.

Individual segments sell now for $27,000, and the price is climbing, said Rainer Hildebrandt, head of the museum at the wall's most famous crossing point, Checkpoint Charlie.

But most of the 117,000 tons of concrete that made up the wall were pulverized and dumped, or used as fill under the autobahn circling Berlin. A Berlin recycling company uses about 800 feet of the wall to hold back mounds of trash.

The longest remaining section, outside the city center, became known as the East Side Gallery after artists from around the world were invited to paint murals on it in 1990.

Another section not far from the Reichstag, once and future home of the German parliament, is to be transformed into an official memorial to people killed trying to cross the wall.

"We want to make the point that seven years after the wall fell, it's almost impossible to understand where it ran," Hildebrandt told reporters Thursday outside the Checkpoint Charlie museum, where workers tacked to the street a white strip with the phrase "Unity in Freedom" in four languages.

In an editorial Friday, the Berliner Morgenpost newspaper said it was important to move the project forward.

"It is simply imperative that we at least show the places where streets were cut, families torn apart and workers separated from their jobs," the paper said. "Tourists need it as an orientation aid. But above all, Berliners need this reminder because nothing has had so much influence on their past and present."

Yeltsin moved to Kremlin hospital to recover as condition improves

MOSCOW (AP) — Calling for his classical favorites — Tchaikovsky, Mozart, Vivaldi and Mendelssohn — President Boris Yeltsin settled in Friday at a different hospital with presidential offices, where he continued his swift recovery from heart surgery while taking up more of his official duties.

"The president's health will improve very fast now," Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin predicted after Yeltsin left the Moscow Cardiological Center, where he underwent quintuple heart bypass surgery on Tuesday.

The 65-year-old Russian leader had been pushing doctors for days to move him to the Kremlin hospital, which has extensive presidential quarters.

Yeltsin's surgeon, Dr. Renat Akchurin, said he approved the move because of the familiar atmosphere of the Kremlin hospital in Moscow's western suburbs and because security is tighter there.

Akchurin complained that "regiments" of reporters had been pestering staff at the cardiological center. The Kremlin has kept a tight rein on information about Yeltsin's health, issuing determinedly upbeat reports.

Presidential spokesman Sergei Yastrzhembsky said Yeltsin asked for classical recordings to listen to while he was mending.

"When someone asks for his favorite music, it's the best sign that he's getting well," Yastrzhembsky said.

Akchurin said the president could maintain a limited work schedule — holding meetings or reading documents — but had to limit his physical activities until his stitches come out in 10 to 12 days.

"His mind is working every minute," he said.

The president had no working meetings Friday. But Chernomyrdin, who held presidential powers for a day while Yeltsin underwent surgery, said Yeltsin is already beginning to turn his attention to matters of state.

Swiss official blasts D'Amato

BERN, Switzerland (AP) — The head of the Swiss government's newly appointed task force on Holocaust assets accused Sen. Alphonse D'Amato on Friday of unfairly rushing to judgment against Switzerland.

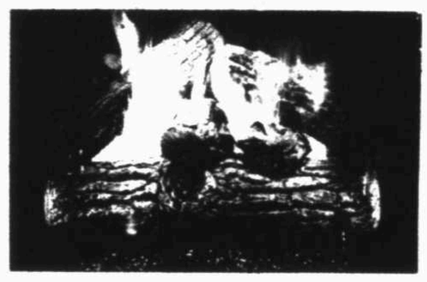

In a separate development, a special committee formed by Jewish groups and Swiss banks concluded that the banks' initial estimate of possible unclaimed Jewish assets was as much as $3.2 million too low.

That would put the total amount Swiss banks say they have in unclaimed Holocaust assets at $35.2 million. Jewish groups, however, claim the banks hold more than $7 billion in assets and interest from deposits made by Jews who later perished in the Holocaust.

Thomas G. Borer, a Foreign Ministry lawyer who leads the new Swiss task force, wrote D'Amato accusing the New York Republican of "drawing conclusions before the facts have been established."

In Washington, D'Amato's office said it had yet to receive the letter, but D'Amato responded anyway. "The Swiss government continues to drag its feet as it relates to this matter," he said. "That's unacceptable. We will continue to pursue the facts."

Tax study committee: 'Identifying problems is easy; solving them is hard'

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. George W. Bush's tax study committee reported Friday that rising school property taxes are a growing problem. But neither the panel nor Bush offered a specific plan for lowering the $10 billion a year levy.

"The Citizen's Committee on Property Tax Relief can unequivocally state that substantial public sentiment exists for school property tax relief," the group reported.

However, it said, "Identifying problems is easy; solving them is hard. ... A consensus in support of a particular alternative to current school taxes did not evolve."

Bush reiterated his belief that rising property taxes are a time bomb, calling them "storm clouds on the horizon."

The tax committee and Bush said school property taxes hinder business investment and the ability of Texans to buy and keep their homes.

The Republican governor said he is convinced that Democratic legislative leaders and lawmakers of both parties have heard that message and will unite behind a plan to replace at least some of that local school money.

"I'm convinced something will be submitted to the Legislature. We don't have a specific plan in place yet. But as the Legislature approaches, I'm confident that people ... will agree that we need to start addressing the issue in a constructive way," Bush said.

Bush began talking about property tax relief in 1995, saying he hoped to see a tax relief bill passed by the 1997 Legislature.

The governor said that much has changed since he first raised the issue.

"Sixteen months ago, when I started talking about it, there was one voice: mine," he said.

But today, "Members of the Legislature are openly talking about the need to put together a bipartisan approach to listening to what Texans are saying and doing something about it."

This week, state Democratic Party Chairman Bill White said Bush's as yet unannounced 1998 re-election bid might hinge on providing property tax relief.

Bush rejected that suggestion. "If there is a bill submitted and the members (of the Legislature) vote against it, I would submit that the members failed the people."

Just what form a tax relief plan might take remains the subject of speculation.

Both Bush and state Rep. Tom Craddick, who chairs the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee, said a personal income tax is out of the question.

Gubernatorial aides and legislative experts earlier suggested three tax options:

Widening or increasing the state sales tax, which already ranks among the nation's highest; creating a gross-receipts tax on total business revenue; and establishing a business-activity tax, which would tax the difference between the sales and costs that a business incurs.

The tax committee said a hybrid combination "may offer the best hope for a solution."

Whatever final proposal is reached, it must be ready soon, said Craddick, R-Midland. The 1997 Legislature convenes on Jan. 14.

"I think you've got to have a plan out there in late December or early January, before we go into session, so that the members of the House and Senate can look at it and the governor can go out ... and sell this plan," Craddick said.

State Rep. Rob Junell, D-San Angelo, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, has said he would work with Bush to advance a plan.

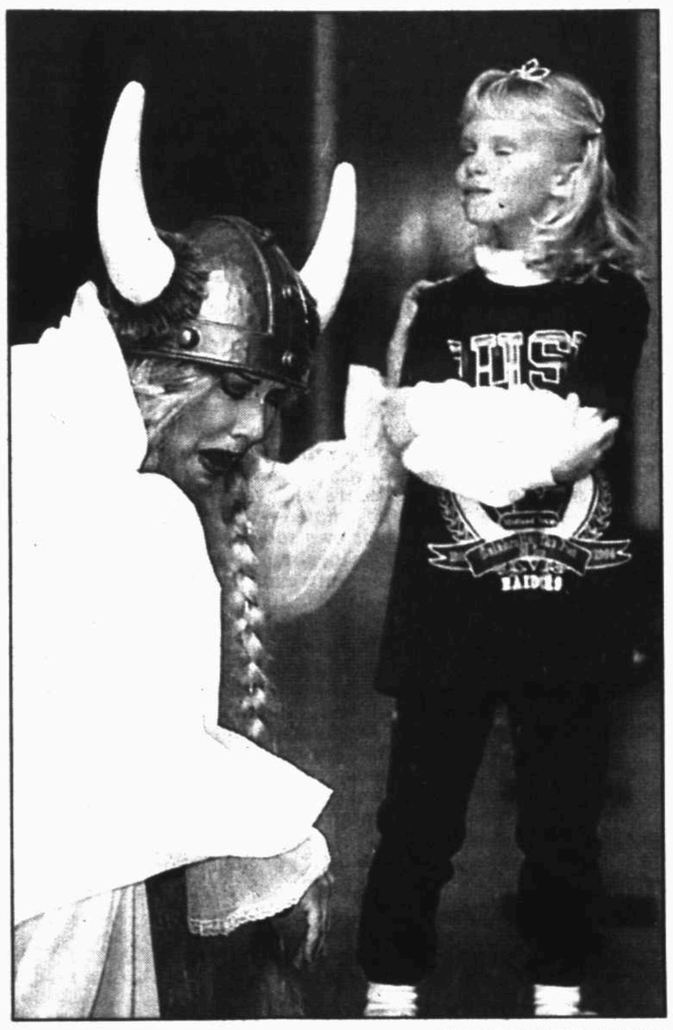

"I think we have time between now and when the session opens to develop what things we can agree on and what things we can't," Junell said.

State Rep. Richard Raymond, D-Benavides, said he believes homeowners and small businesses should get top consideration.

"The public's sentiment is that school property tax relief is needed; now it is up to lawmakers to make sure those who deserve the biggest breaks — homeowners — get them," Raymond said.

A spokesman for Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock, who earlier in the year proposed using extra lottery profits to freeze property taxes, said the Senate would await action by the House.

"We'll just have to wait and see what comes out of the House. That's where tax bills originate, and take a look at it from there," said Mike Hailey, Bullock's press secretary.

Today's forecast calls for sunny skies and a high in the lower 70s. Winds will be variable at 5 to 10 mph, according to the National Weather Service.

Sunday's forecast calls for sunny skies and a high in the mid-70s.

The high for Friday was 59, compared to the record high for that date of 89, set in 1988.

Friday's low was 33, compared to the record low of 22, set in 1938.

NATION

Tornadoes and strong storms hit the East Coast on Friday, killing a 7-year-old girl in a Georgia mobile home and ripping off roofs and tree tops in Virginia, Pennsylvania and Maryland.

A tornado tossed a mobile home into the middle of a highway in Chester, Ga., said Sheriff Jackson Jones, killing the girl and seriously injuring four other members of her family.

Northeast of the central Georgia town, a tornado injured at least 12 more people in four mobile homes. In suburban Atlanta, a motorist was killed when he lost control of his car on I-285 in heavy rain and hit two tractor trailers.

A tornado packing 112 mph winds damaged at least 15 buildings in two south-central Pennsylvania towns. One home was lifted off its foundation in Wolfsburg. A lawn chair was found 150 feet up a tree.

"I saw this funnel of wind loop up toward the woods and turn straight for my house," said Stacey Lepley of Wolfsburg. "That's when I grabbed my son and laid on the floor. When it passed by us, you could feel the whole house shake."

Moments later, the tornado rolled over a trailer, ripped the roofs off two barns and destroyed a garage in nearby Morrisons' Cove, officials said. A dairy farmer broke his arm as he was tossed around the trailer. He was treated at a hospital and released.

Strong winds gusting up to 80 mph shattered at least two dozen buildings, overturned cars and knocked out power to 4,000 people in Virginia.

In the northern part of the state, the storms caused flight delays at Washington National and Dulles International airports.

A government building in Fairfax was evacuated because of the volume of rain water that accumulated on its flat roof.

Strong winds also tore off part of a liquor store roof and flipped a house trailer in Baltimore County, Md. Boats were lifted out of Bear Creek. One person was injured, but it wasn't known how seriously. Some roads were closed because of flooding.

Elsewhere, scattered light rain fell in the middle Mississippi River Valley on Friday morning, the result of another cold air push through the region. Some light lake-effect snows developed across portions of northern Minnesota and Wisconsin.

Gunmen rob shuttle bus, shoot driver

DALLAS (AP) — As highway robbery schemes go, this seemed like a good one:

Three guys join about 60 other people on a casino-bound shuttle bus, wait midway through the late-night ride, then pull out guns and rob the cash-carrying passengers. A car following the bus provides the getaway.

If not for a stubborn bus driver and the quick thinking of cellular phone-carrying passenger, the plan may have worked.

Two of the bandits were arrested early Friday, several hours after the incident began unfolding around 10:30 p.m. Thursday. A third suspect was caught about 7:25 a.m. Friday with help from around 150 officers from more than a dozen agencies.

"They certainly weren't too bright to begin with," Smith County Sheriff J.B. Smith said. "They got up and put on ski masks in the middle of the bus after everybody had seen their faces. They're so ignorant."

The trio were in the Smith County Jail facing $200,000 bond apiece on charges of aggravated robbery and attempted capital murder. They also could face federal carjacking charges, the sheriff said.

The suspected getaway driver was caught around noon and was headed for Smith County to face a robbery charge.

Bus driver Mike Gibbs, who was shot in the face by one of the fleeing gunmen, was in critical condition at East Texas Medical Center in Tyler, where he underwent surgery.

"He took the bullet for all of us," passenger JoAnn Williams said. "He saved our lives."

Gibbs was hit in the arm and lower jaw, with the bullet exiting through his esophagus. To have survived such extensive damage, "there must have been an angel riding on his shoulder," a hospital worker told Smith.

Williams also was being hailed as a heroine because of her call for help.

"I told 911 we were being robbed and we were on our way to the casino," she said Friday morning after returning to Dallas.

She remained on the line about 20 minutes until officers drove up, flashing their lights and signaling for the bus to pull over. Soon after, authorities sealed off a 6 1/2-mile area.

Gibbs, a military veteran who has worked for Dallas-based Shuttleking Inc. for several years, refused to cooperate with the gunmen. He pulled over against their wishes and didn't immediately open the door to let them out.

"He told them, 'Just go ahead and shoot me because I'm going to stop," passenger L.W. Ebsen said.

Once the doors opened, the men fired at authorities, then turned back and shot Gibbs point-blank. They fled into the woods, spilling all their pilfered cash and jewelry into a ditch, Smith said.

Law enforcers found Joe Falcetta, 23, around 3 a.m. and David Carl Adkins, 21, at 4:30 a.m. A police helicopter helped locate Torres Kartik, 25, standing shirtless alongside the highway trying to hitchhike. All three were from Fort Worth.

Stephen Randal Henry, the 34-year-old alleged driver of the red Buick Skylark that trailed the bus, apparently headed for home as he was arrested in the Dallas suburb of Plano.

The bus was bound for the Isle of Capri Casino in Bossier City, La., as part of Shuttleking twice-weekly "Red-Eye Run." The $19 round-trip fare includes a $5 food voucher and a free pull on a slot machine.

The route picks up passengers at four Dallas-area malls, arrives at the casino around midnight and returns by 11 a.m. Shuttleking also makes the run during the day, seven days a week.

Shuttleking president Mitch Goldminz said the gunmen boarded at the first stop in Irving, then sat quietly with the other passengers through two hours of pickups.

The bus then traveled about 100 miles east along Interstate 20 and was nearing Tyler, still about 90 miles west of their destination, when the men stood up, waved their guns and screamed it was a holdup.

"They all had these big old bags," passenger W.D. Davis Sr. said. "That's when it dawned on me what they were doing with those bags."

Smith said law enforcers have recovered one of two shotguns and the handgun they believe was used to shoot Gibbs. "It has one spent cartridge in it," the sheriff said.

Goldminz said Gibbs had a phone, but was in no position to call for help. He said the company was looking into other possible safety measures.

"We're talking to bus companies all over the United States," he said. "But let's face it, these kinds of things can happen anywhere. You can be walking out of your driveway or going through a mall. You always think, 'This isn't going to happen to me.'" to the landfill, Midland's recycling effort is expected to increase substantially. Between 10 and 15 percent of 110,000 tons annually of garbage will saved for recycling.

NEW: Midland expects effort to increase

Currently, about 3,000-4,000 tons of paper, corrugated cardboard, aluminum and plastic are recycled annually through a program that requires residents to voluntarily place those materials in special bins around town. Those efforts still will be maintained by Recycle Midland.

In addition to environmental advantages, the savings to the city and profits for Recycle Midland, the facility will employ about 25 people.

SPEAK: Clinton asks GOP to work with him

imposed on their assignment. The decision will depend on the nature of the mission, the president said.

On a key domestic issue, Clinton suggested it would take a bipartisan commission to find answers for long-term imbalances in Social Security and Medicare. But on Social Security, he said it would be "unwise to raise the payroll tax any more."

The president was asked if his wife, Hillary Rodham Clinton, had been told by Whitewater special counsel Kenneth Starr that she was the subject or target of the investigation into the first family's business and political relationships in Arkansas. "No," he snapped. "Not to my knowledge."

In terms of investigations, Clinton's administration has been probed by the Republican Congress on Whitewater, Travel Office firings, Vince Foster's suicide and FBI files that wound up in the White House.

Asked if it was time for Congress to give him a break, Clinton said Americans want the government to work on problems, such as balancing the budget, expanding educational opportunities and health care and fighting crime.

"I think they would like it," he said of Americans, "and I'm prepared to do it. And I hope that they (Congress) will be."

He acknowledged that "there are always a lot of hard feelings after every campaign," objecting anew to the Republicans' charges that his 1993 tax increase was the largest in history while defending his own assertion that Republicans tried to slash $270 billion from Medicare.

Even so, Clinton said, "I'm prepared to reach out and meet them halfway."

Opening the news conference, Clinton said he had invited the Republican and Democratic leaders of Congress to meet at the White House next week to develop a plan for balancing the budget and to keep the economy growing.

He said he also would press for an agreement on a campaign-finance reform bill sponsored by Republican Sens. John McCain of Arizona and Democrat Russell Feingold of Wisconsin and said it should be amended to include a ban on contributions by foreign citizens living in the United States.

Sen. Connie Mack, R-Fla., responding on behalf of the Senate Republican leadership, said the McCain-Feingold bill was inadequate because it didn't address labor union spending.

And McCain said he welcomed Clinton's support for the bill but that passing reform legislation "does not absolve Congress of its oversight responsibility to examine the many serious allegations that U.S. foreign and trade policies were unduly influenced by Commerce Department officials for the purpose of securing political campaign contributions."

Clinton defended his relationship with Democratic fund-raiser John Huang, the focus of questionable donations. The president said he met Huang while on a trade mission to Taiwan several years ago.

Huang was associated with the Indonesia-based Lippo Group, a banking and investment concern, before taking a Commerce Department job and then moving to the Democratic National Committee to raise millions for the party from Asian-Americans. Republicans have questioned whether Huang used his government or party posts to assist his former employer. Bob Dole said during the presidential campaign that accepting money from interests linked to the Indonesians and other foreigners amounted to "foreign corruption in America."

The Democratic Party has returned more than $750,000 in questionable contributions.

Clinton was emphatic when asked if administration policy was swayed by political contributions from those with business and political interests in Indonesia. "The answer to that is, absolutely not," he said.

Clinton said he had changed administration policy and stopped selling small arms to Indonesia because of its takeover of East Timor. He also said the administration had co-sponsored a United Nations resolutions calling for greater human rights in East Timor.

At every opportunity, Clinton said, Americans want the president and the Republican-led Congress to work together.

GOP, Dems split on campaign finance reform

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Despite public disgust and personal embarrassment over the biggest, sleaziest flow of campaign gifts since the Watergate scandals, approval of a bipartisan reform plan is far from certain.

At a joint post-election appearance by the major party chairmen, Democrat Chris Dodd and Republican Haley Barbour, both came out against accepting gifts from non-citizens. That involves only a few million dollars out of about $2 billion spent on races for the White House and Congress this year.

But when they moved beyond that narrow issue, the rival leaders spelled out contradictory visions of reform:

— Barbour called for new laws to make it harder for the elected leaders of unions to spend dues money for independent political activity. The benefit for Republicans: It wouldn't cramp the business and conservative coalitions that spent at least $10 million on pro-Republican activities, but would restrict the AFL-CIO labor coalition, which spent at least $35 million on anti-Republican and pro-Democratic activities.

— Dodd called for a ban on gifts to parties of "soft money," which consists of gifts of any size from corporate and union treasuries and gifts of more than $20,000 per year from individuals. That would favor the Democratic Party, which had raised $15 million less in soft money than the Republican Party by mid-October.

Similar partisan splits have paralyzed all efforts at campaign reform for the past 20 years. Clinton, freed by term limits from the need to raise money for re-election, might help bridge the gap, reformers said.

At his news conference Friday, the president said he would make reform a top legislative priority in the new Congress.

"Now we have a president who says he's really going to push for this. We've never really had that before, from him or any of his predecessors," said attorney Donald Simon of Common Cause. "And he's helped by the widespread agreement that after two decades without significant changes, the old controls have completely collapsed."

Ellen Miller, executive director of the Center for Responsive Politics, said polls show more public support than ever for their three goals. Reformers want to "break or blunt the ties between private funders and public officials, make sure that money doesn't determine who gets to be elected, and end the time-consuming and corruption-inviting money chase for candidates," Miller said.

(In every state where Tuesday's voters had a chance to vote on measures described as reforms of campaign finance, the propositions passed.

But federal changes are harder, because they must be created and adopted by incumbents. And their own success under the current system gives incumbents who will seek re-election ample incentives to swim against the popular tide.

As incumbents, they not only get money from their supporters, but also from "pragmatic" lobbyists and special interests who are trying to buy access to or impress office-holders.

As a result, Clinton and almost all congressional incumbents out-raised and outspent their challengers this year. And their edge in the money chase paid off: Clinton, as well as 95 percent of the senators and 90 percent of the representatives seeking re-election, won.

Moreover, voters seldom reward reformers or punish their opponents.

ELECT: New sheriff makes history in Ector County

(From 1A)

Yearwood thinks that part of his winning vote was an anti-Brookshire vote. He thinks that the anti-Brookshire sentiment apparently came about after Brookshire fired a deputy, Capt. Eldon Blount, after Blount had taken a leave of absence to campaign against the sheriff in the primary and lost.

"When you look at the statistics, all of those people could not have been dissatisfied with Mr. Brookshire," Yearwood said.

"I realize that a lot of those votes that I received were from dissatisfied people because of the way Mr. Brookshire treated Eldon Blount."

Yearwood, who was a deputy sheriff under Brookshire for more than 10 years, said that he decided to campaign for sheriff because if he won he "could correct ... all of these things that were wrong, (such as) people getting promoted without any examination."

Yearwood, who had worked in crime prevention until the early 1990s, wants to reassign resident-deputies to communities in rural Ector County and wants to create a force of deputies and other workers who will "go out of their way to help (citizens)" while enforcing the law.

"What (goodness) comes back to me belongs to them. They don't work for me," he said of deputies and staffers, whom he called co-workers.

"They work for Ector County. I just happen to be the man who is sitting at the head desk. And I have to oversee what these people are doing for Ector County. And if I feel like they are not doing their job, then I get rid of them and get somebody in who will."

Yearwood, who said that he particularly values honesty, said that as sheriff he would not tolerate rumor-mongering.

"That's the first thing I'm going to tell them (deputies and staffers). If it (talk about another) is derogatory, you and that person are going to be in my office. And I want you to tell him or her exactly what you said. And if you don't, I'm going to fire you.

"If you can say you are righteous in all things, then you can say anything you want. I dislike hypocrites because those are the people who are ruining the world today."

Yearwood asserted that "When I tell people something, I tell them 'You can take that to the bank, because I am not going to lie to you. Why lie? Tell the truth right off the bat."

In acknowledging an imperfect world, Yearwood said that "people will always try to undermine, always try to make themselves look better at the expense of others."

Yearwood said that as sheriff, he would "hire the most qualified (people) regardless of what they look like ... Don't give me no race business here. I don't believe in that ...

"I don't dislike anybody. But I have one nerve, and when you step on that, you are on my bad side."

Yearwood said he would bring to the Ector County Sheriff's Department "stability and would encourage his people to practice the work ethic.

"You are going to have to work for (a promotion) and not (get promoted) because 'I like you.' Anything that you get, you are going to have to work for."

Yearwood, who was born in New York City in 1929 of English-Jamaican ancestry, was raised in a five-story building whose tenants were black, Oriental, Jewish, Irish and Puerto Rican families.

Yearwood said that his "Momma told me when I was a kid: 'If you'll lie, you'll cheat. If you'll cheat you'll steal.'"

His father was a disciplinarian.

And to help right the world's wrongs, Yearwood said that "I think we have to go back to the village concept. (It's) not so much that it takes a village to raise a child. It takes a whole village to raise a village. In there, the child will be raised correctly."

Yearwood, who served in the Army from the late 1940s until the early 1970s, was in the military police and in artillery.

He said his primary mentor in the Army was an artillery commander, Capt. Franklin Delano Alexander, "who taught me everything I knew about being a first sergeant. He would give me no breaks."

And of Rita, his helpmate and wife of 47 years, Yearwood said, "Without her, I wouldn't be where I am today."

In noting that he is community-oriented, Yearwood said that he serves on the boards of directors of the American Red Cross, the Presidential Museum and the Odessa Boys and Girls Club and is a member of the Knights of Columbus.

A Catholic, Yearwood said he prays everyday, including a prayer to St. Michael, the archangel: "Defend us in battle. Be our protection against the wickedness and snares of the devil."

Of any legacy that he might leave in life, Yearwood said that "I just want to be known as an honest man: What I did will speak for itself. If you can be honest in all of your dealings, I think that will really show."

On his tombstone, he would have etched: "Remember me as an honest man — died with my badge on."

MERGE: Shell, Amoco cut 90 jobs

they can qualify for bonuses and will offer outplacement assistance and severance pay or relocation assistance if they transfer within the company.

"We will have a job posting program of jobs available within Shell. The Gulf of Mexico is booming so that could mean relocating to New Orleans," Hansen said. "Of course, some want to stay in the Permian Basin and feel the industry is strong enough that they'll take their chances finding new employment elsewhere."

Amoco, which employs 500 in the Permian Basin, also will keep the 60 employees on the payroll through the end of the year and provide them with outplacement assistance.

Since October 1995, Shell and Amoco have been working to combine their Permian Basin assets into Altura, which will be headquartered in Houston.

Upon its creation in the first quarter of next year, Altura will become the largest operator in the Permian Basin with 210,000 barrels of oil and 245 million cubic feet of gas a day.

Dole lets guard down, sense of humor shine on 'Letterman'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bob Dole, who sometimes hid his well-known wit on the campaign trail, was in prime form Friday.

Perhaps it was fitting that he chose David Letterman's show for his first public appearance since election night.

"Bob, what have you been doing lately?" Letterman asked.

"Apparently not enough," Dole quipped to cheers and applause.

As he left Washington's Warner Theater, where the show was taped, Dole said it felt good to let down his guard and let his sense of humor shine. "It's all been pent up here, now, for 18 months," he told The Associated Press. "I can be myself again."

Audience members seemed to agree. "It showed another side of him — a side of him I hadn't seen. He should have done that during the election," said Aileen McCombs, of Hampton, Va.

Dole's interview on CBS' "Late Show With David Letterman" was filled with jokes at his own expense.

Asked about Ross Perot, who mounted an independent run for the White House, Dole joked that maybe the Texas billionaire would adopt him since he lost. On a more serious note, he said Perot may have taken enough votes away from him to cost him the election.

And Dole poked fun at his campaign's attempt to get Perot to drop out of the race and endorse him. "Too bad our little visit with Perot didn't turn out too well," he said to laughter.

Letterman sympathized. "You know, I can't imagine any visit with Perot turning out too well," the late-night host said.

During the campaign, Dole limited spontaneous banter with reporters, saying things he meant in jest were being taken seriously. His wit was in full swing Thursday night.

Off to Florida next week, Dole needled his campaign slogan, "A better man for a better America."

"My slogan is going to be 'A better tan for a better America,'" he said.

The 73-year-old Dole took a jab at Letterman, asking what he was going to do with all his jokes about Dole's age.

"We've retired them," Letterman said. "We'll send them down to Florida and you can ... fan (yourself) with them."

Dole jokingly blamed Letterman for his loss, noting that when he unofficially announced his candidacy on the show in February 1995, Letterman told him everything would be fine.

"I want to know what went wrong," Dole said.

"You're not holding me responsible here, are you?" Letterman asked.

"At least I get 200 bucks for being here tonight — first work I've had," Dole said.

There were some serious moments. Dole said he would like to work with the disabled or with young people in the future. He didn't rule out working in the Clinton administration, though it didn't sound likely.

"If he wanted to give me his job, I'd think about it," he said. He didn't address suggestions that President Clinton might appoint him to head a commission on the future of Medicare.

POLICE REPORTS

Investigation

ODESSA — The Odessa Metro Homicide Unit is investigating the death of a woman who died of a gunshot wound Thursday, Lt Carl Rogers said.

After an emergency call to 5819 El Paso St., Ector County Sheriff's Office officials found Tamela Jean Sanders, 25, inside the residence with a gunshot wound. Sheriff officials would not say where she was wounded.

She was taken to Odessa Medical Center and was pronounced dead shortly after, Rogers said.

Inside the residence were four family members and friends. One of them, a male, has been detained and is being questioned, he said.

The body has been taken to Lubbock for an autopsy.

If the death is ruled a homicide, it would be the fourth in Ector County this year.

Zaire's refugee crisis reaches boiling point as hunger takes over

By David Guttenfelder
Associated Press

GOMA, Zaire — Using clubs and rifle butts, exhausted Zairian aid workers and Tutsi rebels beat starving people back from boxes of high-protein crackers as Central Africa's refugee crisis hit the boiling point.

The head of the U.N. World Food Program said more than 80,000 children in eastern Zaire could die by the end of the month unless they receive food and clean water shortly. The food aid program in the refugee-packed region has collapsed.

"The small children are the most vulnerable and typically are the ones who are the first to go," Catherine Bertini said Friday in Rome. "Without quick action, we will definitely start seeing people starving."

She said children between 18 months and 3 years old were at the highest risk of dying.

Rebel soldiers fired rifles in the air to disperse mobs of Zairians clawing the ground and each other for boxes of crackers at a nearly empty warehouse in Goma. When that failed to keep the hungry away, they beat at them with clubs and the butts of their firearms.

Last week, the rebels routed the Zairian army and ethnic Hutu militias from this eastern Zairian city of 300,000 after Zaire tried to force local Tutsis out of the country.

The warfare shattered the food program and brought the danger of starvation to residents of Goma as well as the hundreds of thousands of Rwandan Hutu refugees who fled its U.N. camps. The refugees are thought to be in even worse shape.

"We must act and we must act immediately," U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali said Friday after meeting with the U.N. Security Council in New York.

Saying the refugees are facing a "genocide by starvation," he told reporters he had urged the ambassadors to move quickly to support a French proposal to set up an international force to secure aid corridors and enable refugees to return home to Rwanda.

France and Britain agreed Friday to commit up to 1,500 soldiers to the force, but U.S. officials said the Clinton administration had serious reservations about the plan.

'The small children are the most vulnerable and typically are the ones who are the first to go.'

—Catherine Bertini, U.N. World Food Program head

Boutros-Ghali said a U.N. force would take too long to organize and an African mission would need financial and logistical support.

The humanitarian group Doctors Without Borders estimated Friday that more than 13,000 people have died and 1.2 million mostly Rwandan Hutu refugees have been left without access to food, water or medicine since fighting began in eastern Zaire three weeks ago.

The dead included three Spanish missionaries slain at their monastery in Bukavu, Spain's Foreign Ministry and the private Europa Press agency said. The men had been aiding the refugees, the ministry said.

Refugees have told of dozens of people dying of thirst, and many eating roots to stay alive. Mothers have lost their children in stampedes as refugees fled U.N. camps near the fighting, one U.N. official said.

Rebels who say they now control two provinces in eastern Zaire declared a unilateral, three-week cease-fire Monday to allow international aid workers to resume assistance to the refugees. There has been little contact between rebels and the aid agencies, however.

Scattered gun- and mortar fire were heard outside of Goma during the day Friday.

About 150 rebel soldiers headed toward Goma's northwestern edge carrying rocket launchers, mortars, assault rifles and boxes of ammunition on their heads.

As evening fell, Tutsi rebels passed out beer to young men in Goma sweeping up debris from a week of looting after the last of the foreign aid workers left town.

Rebels and sweepers gathered around a bonfire of rubbish, letting the flames lick at a crumpled poster of President Mobutu Sese Seko.

The ailing 66-year-old Mobutu has ruled Africa's third-largest nation with an iron hand for 31 years. He remained in France, convalescing after treatment for prostate cancer.

The Rwandan Hutus fled to Zaire, Tanzania and Burundi in mid-1994 when Tutsi rebels overthrew Rwanda's Hutu government. The government was responsible for the slaughter of at least 500,000 minority Tutsis.

Most of the Hutus went to Zaire and are afraid to return home for fear of reprisals. Exiled Hutu soldiers and militias, mixing in with the refugees, have taken control of the 40 U.N. camps in Zaire, using force to prevent many refugees from going back to Rwanda.

The Rwandan government on Friday endorsed the plan to deliver food aid to the refugees as long as the international force would not include Belgian, French or Rwandan troops.

Belgium is the former colonial power in Rwanda and Zaire, and France was a staunch supporter of the Hutu government in Rwanda that masterminded the Tutsi genocide.

Officials presume airliner crash killed all on board

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — Rescue workers searching the swamps outside Lagos found the submerged wreckage of a Nigerian jetliner on Friday, 24 hours after it disappeared on a domestic flight. All 141 people on board were believed dead.

"From the information I have ... the plane just plunged into the lagoon," Aviation Minister Ita Udoh Umeh told reporters in Lagos.

A helicopter search located the Boeing 727 in a swamp at the village of Imota, about 40 miles southeast of Lagos — the intended destination of its flight Thursday.

The News Agency of Nigeria quoted unidentified sources as saying the pilot advised the Lagos airport to prepare for an emergency landing before the plane lost contact with the control tower Thursday evening.

The cause of the crash was not known. Umeh said attempts would be made to lift the wreckage from the muddy water.

The jet, belonging to the domestic airline Aviation Development Corp., was carrying 132 passengers and nine crew members to Lagos from the southern city of Port Harcourt, about an hour away. Port Harcourt is in the heart of Nigeria's oil-producing region, and foreign oil industry workers frequently travel the route.

At least six Britons were on board the flight Thursday, and the Italian and Israeli embassies said at least one of each of their nationals was also aboard. It was not known if they were with the oil industry.

Reporters reached the crash site before the search and rescue team, which arrived accompanied by British officials.

Villagers in Ebute-Egun, near the crash site, said they saw a huge ball of flame in the sky at about the time the plane lost contact with Lagos airport.

The crash was bound to deepen concern about the safety standards of aviation in Nigeria, where officials say most planes are more than 25 years old.

Few of the country's 15 private airlines have more than two functioning aircraft, a problem airline operators blame on the government's failure to raise state-controlled air fares since 1994.

As a result, the Airline Operators of Nigeria, representing private commercial airlines, says it can't keep up with maintenance and fuel costs.

Netanyahu may soften stance, report says

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu is willing to accept a Palestinian entity with broad powers but not a fully independent Palestinian state, a newspaper reported Friday.

The report indicated that Netanyahu — a staunch opponent of Palestinian statehood — was softening his hard-line stance. In the past, he has said that a demilitarized state for the Palestinians was impractical, and could never be enforced.

Chief Palestinian negotiator Saeb Erakat flatly rejected Netanyahu's proposal.

"He knows very well that the Palestinians are determined to achieve their independent state," Erakat told The Associated Press.

Haaretz newspaper said that Netanyahu, in talks with foreign diplomats this week, said he would favor a semi-autonomous Palestinian entity modeled after places like Puerto Rico or Andorra.

As a U.S. commonwealth, Puerto Rico's foreign affairs are controlled by Washington, and its residents are U.S. citizens. There also are U.S. military installations on the island. But Puerto Ricans do not vote in national elections and do not pay federal taxes.

Andorra, a tiny enclave in the Pyrenees on the French-Spanish border, conducts its own foreign affairs, but the demilitarized state is under the security control of France and the Spanish bishop of Urgel.

"What is required is a model that will allow a national group to conduct its own affairs, in a way which doesn't bring about the collapse of the state within which this group lives and doesn't threaten the majority," Haaretz quoted Netanyahu as telling foreign diplomats.

He also suggested that the entity could be called a state even if it is not fully independent. "Why can't it be called a state without (certain) authorities?" Netanyahu asked, according to Haaretz.

Netanyahu spokesman David Bar-Illan said he was not at the meeting, and could not confirm the Haaretz report.

Legislator Yossi Beilin, an architect of the Israel-Palestinian autonomy accords, said that an Andorra-type solution for the Palestinians might be workable.

"Puerto Rico today is part of the United States and I don't want the Palestinian state to be part of something that has to do with us," Beilin said. "Andorra is a state without an army, a demilitarized state. I think the Palestinians are ready to have a demilitarized state."

Israel and the Palestinians are struggling to agree on how to implement the interim peace accords already signed, including the long-delayed Israeli troop withdrawal from the West Bank city of Hebron.

The Palestinians have demanded a timetable for that and other troop withdrawals.

A poll published in Haaretz on Wednesday found that most Israelis would agree to the establishment of a demilitarized Palestinian state in most of the West Bank and Gaza, as part of a final peace settlement.

Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat presently commands a 30,000-member armed police force.

Japan's prime minister says regulations will be reformed

TOKYO (AP) — Prime Minister Ryutaro Hashimoto is promising an ambitious reform plan to cut government regulation and trim Japan's powerful bureaucracy within a year.

Hashimoto, re-elected to a second term by Parliament on Thursday, was short on specifics in Friday's nationwide address but said he would meet with his new Cabinet within a week to start work on the five-year package.

"In one year, I want to put to Parliament a comprehensive reform bill ... that will affect the entire nation when it becomes law," he said. "We must implement administrative reform. ... If we don't, Japan has no tomorrow."

Hashimoto assembled a new Cabinet of conservative old-style power brokers from his Liberal Democratic Party on Thursday night to bolster his fragile new minority government.

The campaign promises Hashimoto made during the Oct. 20 general election that set the stage for his re-election require standing up to the unelected but powerful bureaucrats.

He has vowed to rev up a sluggish economic recovery and convince wary trade partners like the United States that he can reduce the bureaucratic regulation of trade that protects domestic markets but keeps prices high.

"Free. Fair. Global — that's the kind of finance and trade system we in the new Cabinet want to work toward," he said, sprinkling his speech with English to re-create the international flair that colored his campaign ads.

Substantive change is going to be difficult. Despite the recent electoral gains of Hashimoto's LDP, it still lacks a majority in Parliament — something Hashimoto glossed over Friday. The party only holds 239 seats in Parliament, a dozen short of a majority.

"The government and opposition simply have to go forward with this in a cooperative manner," he said.

On foreign policy, Hashimoto said he spoke earlier in the day with President Clinton and stressed the importance of reducing the U.S. military presence on Japan's southwestern islands of Okinawa, while keeping the overall U.S. military presence in Japan unchanged.

Okinawa hosts a disproportionate amount of U.S. military facilities, which many residents want removed.

Hashimoto also said he wants to strengthen cooperation with China, and said aid to that country should not be changed in light of human rights abuses.

Political authorities get first look at NATO Bosnia plans

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — The NATO-led soldiers enforcing the peace in Bosnia are to leave by Dec. 20, and the alliance must decide soon what kind of force — if any — will replace them.

On Monday, NATO policy makers will get their first look at military plans to continue keeping the peace, something leaders in Bosnia say is essential.

"Were the international community to leave today, I think the peace would fall apart tomorrow," said Carl Bildt, the highest representative for civilian affairs in Bosnia.

In June, NATO defense ministers gave the alliance's generals a few options: Withdraw the entire peace force in December, the end of its one-year mandate; keep on a reduced force; or continue the present mission.

Virtually everyone acknowledges that the only real option is to keep on a reduced force.

The original NATO-led force of 30 nations numbered just under 60,000. The debate now, according to sources at NATO headquarters who spoke on condition of anonymity, is about the size and location of the new force.

Political leaders, particularly in Washington, want to cut the number of soldiers dramatically. The United States also wants as few Americans as possible in Bosnia itself.

Unsurprisingly, the military, under Gen. George Joulwan, the supreme allied commander, wants a force large enough to handle the mission it is given.

The size of the new force will depend on how much support it is expected to give Bosnia's civilians, in addition to keeping peace between Bosnia's former enemies and maintaining security for post-war reconstruction.

The current force is now down to 43,000, according to NATO. That includes the new 3,500-strong covering force that will provide security for withdrawing U.S. troops.

The North Atlantic Council, NATO's top policy-making body, will begin reviewing the options Monday with hopes of making a decision by Nov. 18, an official said Friday.

Bildt said the sooner the decision is made, the better.

After the council makes its decision, NATO's generals can begin working up a full-fledged plan. That plan, ideally, would be back to the North Atlantic Council for review by the end of the month, with provisional approval in early December.

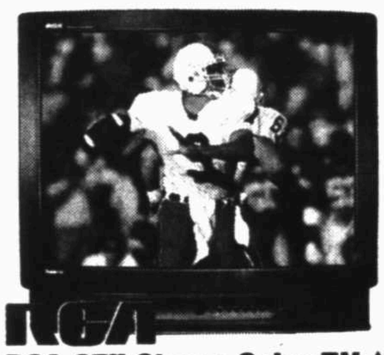

Then, NATO must wait for the U.N. Security Council to decide to extend the peace force's mandate beyond Dec. 20. Officials hope all will be completed in time for NATO foreign ministers to make the final decision at the Dec. 10 meeting in Brussels.

Rescuers search for bodies in village devastated by cyclone

HYDERABAD, India (AP) — With only the clothes on their backs, hundreds of thousands of Indians left homeless by a devastating cyclone huddled in tent camps Friday as rescuers searched for bodies, brought in relief supplies and sought to prevent a cholera outbreak.

The death toll from Wednesday's cyclone, which destroyed homes, crops and livestock in one of India's most fertile regions, exceeded 1,000, state and relief officials said.

The search for more victims continued Friday. Among hundreds of people missing were dozens of fishermen working in the dangerous waters of the Bay of Bengal, a rough sea with high waves.

Relief helicopters carried in food, drinking water, medicine and clothing and searched for the sick and wounded along the coastal stretch of southern India still inundated by rains and sea water.

"I am at a loss for words to describe the tragedy," Chandrababu Naidu, chief executive of Andhra Pradesh state, told reporters after he flew over the disaster area in a relief helicopter.

Two districts in the state, east Godavari and west Godavari, were affected by the cyclone. A total of 5 million people live in the districts.

"The most beautiful and fertile rice-growing district of east Godavari has turned into a burial ground," Naidu said. "Except for houses made of brick and cement, nothing is standing there."

The area of rice fields and banana and mango groves remained inaccessible by road.

Officials struggled to supply food to an estimated 500,000 stranded people. The state's health department reported its first suspected cholera case, while the news agency United News of India said seven people were hospitalized in the worst hit area, around Kakinada, with cholera symptoms.

United News said medical teams rushed to the area to check the further spread of cholera, caused by a bacteria that proliferates in contaminated water. If not immediately treated, cholera can be fatal.

Splintered palm trees stand near collapsed power poles in the cyclone-devastated East Godavari region of Andhra Pradesh Friday. At least 670 people have died and a half a million people have been left stranded by the cyclone, which struck India's east coast Thursday.

The state administration estimated crop and property losses of about $555 million — a staggering figure in a nation where the annual per capita income is less than $500.

The cyclone hammered the area for five hours Wednesday night with winds approaching 100 mph, flooding rice paddies and villages, ripping power poles from the ground and washing out roads and railway lines.

More than 10,000 homes were destroyed. About 200 tent camps were set up for 100,000 people, and more tents were being sent to the region.

"I have nothing left except the clothes I have on my body," said Seetharama Raju at one relief camp.

President's antics endear him to citizens

Ecuador's new president, Abdala Bucaram, is known to friend and foe as "El Loco" — or "the crazy one." So when a presidential helicopter crashed and burned on Thursday, and he called it an assassination attempt, no one knew quite what to think.

Bucaram frequently compares himself to great world leaders who have been assassinated, such as Gandhi, and wonders if he's next. His enemies call him paranoid.

But those who know him well say such escapades are part of a strategy to enhance the 44-year-old Bucaram's populist appeal. His self-promotion is shameless.

During a recent visit to Ibarra, in the Andean highlands, Bucaram made a public show of donating his salary to a group of peasants. One of them, a poncho-clad Indian, kissed the hand of a grinning Bucaram in gratitude for his share, about $325.

"The elite laugh at him. They say what he is doing is not solving any problems. He knows that," says his image adviser, Luis Eladio Proano. "What he's doing is sending a message to the people who elected him, the poor people, that he cares about the poor, that he loves the poor."

Bucaram distributes bags of subsidized groceries that prominently display his name and provides free backpacks with textbooks, note pads and pencils to poor students in urban shantytowns and rural villages.

His most ambitious project is to build 200,000 low-cost homes.

Business leaders say Ecuador is too strapped for money to afford large-scale social programs. They predict Bucaram's policies will fuel inflation and discourage badly needed foreign investment.

With the poor, however, at least one of his strategies appears to be working: a government-subsidized brand of milk named after him — Abdalact.

On a steamy day in Trinitaria, a shantytown built on stilts over a drained swamp on the southern outskirts of Guayaquil, dozens of women and children lined up to buy a half-gallon of the milk.

Grecia Bonnet, a 48-year-old mother of seven, said she couldn't afford milk until Bucaram began distributing his low-priced product, which comes in plastic quart bags emblazoned with the president's face.

"All the people around here support Abdala because he says he's for the poor," she said. "The other presidents have defrauded us. We've put our last hopes in Abdala."

The son of a Lebanese-born merchant and the former mayor of Guayaquil, Ecuador's largest city, Bucaram campaigned as "the force of the poor" and the "scourge of the oligarchy."

But the force of the poor has another side: He lives in a mansion and counts among his closest advisers not only the country's biggest banker but also Domingo Cavallo, the former Argentine economy minister who oversaw harsh reforms in his own country.

Bucaram plans to announce his own economic program in late November, which aides say will be a tough package that eliminates subsidies, raises taxes and boosts telephone and electrical rates.

Such measures usually would be expected to undercut his support among the poor, but even his foes concede that Bucaram's political skills will help him ride out the storm.

"He's a political genius. He has an incredible astuteness, a capacity to adapt to the circumstances," said Blasco Penaherrera, a conservative former vice president.

NATION IN BRIEF

■ Powell says he would consider Cabinet spot

ORLANDO, Fla. — Retired Army Gen. Colin Powell said Friday he would consider a cabinet post in President Clinton's new administration, although he added he has not been contacted by the White House.

"You always have to listen to your president," Powell told The Orlando Sentinel for Saturday's editions.

Powell, former national security advisor and chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, has been mentioned as a possible successor to Secretary of State Warren Christopher or Secretary of Defense William Perry.

Powell denied rumors during the Republican National Convention in August that presidential nominee Bob Dole had offered to make him secretary of state if elected.

■ Sinatra's health said to be deteriorating

LOS ANGELES — Frank Sinatra, officially suffering from no more than a painful pinched nerve, put a lid on information about his health Friday amid reports he was stricken with pneumonia and heart failure.

"We continue to honor Mr. Sinatra's request that there be no comment," said the singer's spokeswoman, Susan Reynolds. Ron Wise, spokesman for Cedars Sinai Medical Center, said Sinatra gave him the same instructions.

When the 80-year-old entertainer was hospitalized Nov. 1, his representatives said he was walking and in good spirits but in pain from a pinched nerve.

On Friday, KABC-TV cited unidentified sources close to the Sinatra family as saying that although he initially was admitted for the pinched nerve, he was now being treated for a heart ailment. The seriousness was not known.

KCBS-TV, citing an unidentified hospital source, said on Thursday that Sinatra was being treated for pneumonia and heart failure.

■ Clinton calls for bipartisan panels

WASHINGTON — A bipartisan commission is needed to find ways of keeping Medicare and Social Security viable when baby boomers reach retirement age, President Clinton said Friday.

At a news conference, Clinton called for a "bipartisan mechanism ... to deal with the problems that Social Security will encounter in the third decade of the next century and the problems that Medicare will encounter when all the baby boomers go on it."

He said the solutions "wouldn't be particularly dramatic, if we move now."

A more immediate problem that should be fixed separate from the work of such a commission is extending the life of the Medicare Trust Fund by 10 years, he said.

Asked how soon such a commission should begin its work, Clinton said, "All I can tell you is, I think, to deal with the baby boom issues of Social Security and Medicare, we need a bipartisan commission, and we need the longest possible time line.

19-week campaign ends with frustration, hindsight

WASHINGTON (AP) — As the Dole-for-President headquarters shut its doors on Friday, departing aides and advisers looked back at the 19-month campaign with frustration and angst — and plenty of hindsight.

"We missed many exit ramps on the road to oblivion," said Alex Castellanos, Dole's senior media adviser and ad-maker. The biggest blunder? "We scared people," he suggested.

The GOP defeat also brought forth a sentiment never uttered openly in those corridors before: admiration for President Clinton, for his political skills.

"I don't think any Republican could have won this year," said Charlie Black, a veteran GOP operative who was a senior adviser to Dole.

Black cited peace and a sound economy. "Combine that with the fact that Clinton has the best candidate skills of any Democrat in at least a generation."

Portraying Clinton's re-election as inevitable seemed to help cushion the blow.

"Clinton cynically but rather skillfully moved to the center," said Ken Khachigian, a senior adviser and chief California strategist. "Absent those things, Dole would have had a much more level playing field."

Dole's campaign headquarters, in a nondescript office building across the street from Washington's Union Station, closed for good on Friday. Only a skeleton staff will be kept on the payroll to close the books on a campaign that began on April 10, 1995, with Dole's announcement.

Many Dole advisers suggested the seeds for Dole's defeat were sown in 1995 — when Democrats began portraying Republicans as intent on cutting popular domestic programs; and with the December 1995 shutdown of government, which voters generally blamed on Republicans and not the White House.

"We never built on our success" in the 1994 congressional elections, said Castellanos. "We kind of became the problem. Starting earlier, we shouldn't have let the Democrats get away scaring half of America that we were going to cut Medicare and cut Social Security and cut school lunches."

Dole aides were near unanimous in lamenting the brutal GOP primary season, from which Dole emerged victorious but bloodied and broke — while Clinton, unopposed within his party, waltzed through the primary season with $25 million left to spend.

"What would I have done if I could?" asked Dole pollster Tony Fabrizio. "I would've gotten Bill Clinton a primary opponent so he couldn't have moved to the center as adroitly as he did."

There was plenty of blame to go around. Some Dole aides faulted the Republican National Committee for not spending more of its own money on TV ads during the spring to help prop up Dole's candidacy.

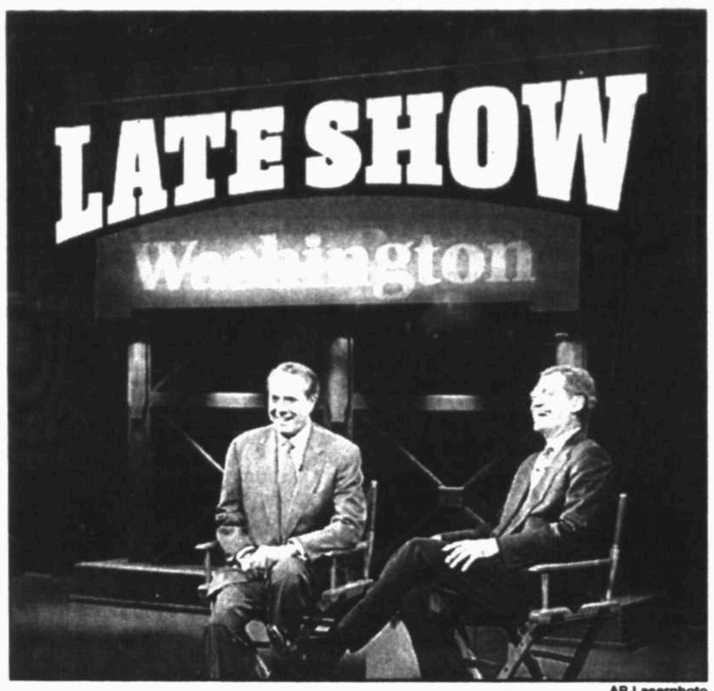

The Dole campaign limped along with little to spend from late March until August. Even when it got the same $62 million in taxpayer dollars for the general election that Clinton received, it squandered some of the money, according to one official.

Although the Dole campaign thought it had more money left in the bank in the final two weeks, it turned out "they had $10 million more left than we did," said the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity. "I was livid. I really went nuts."

Others blamed the relatively inexperienced staff — few of Dole's senior advisers had been through a presidential campaign before. "I think they were collectively in over their heads," said one official.

Dole's personal liabilities — many of them well documented — were also recited by departing campaign aides: his age, his lack of communication skills, his inability to focus on the big picture, his tendency to think in legislative terms, his difficulty in delegating authority.

"He is a smart politician," said a campaign official. "He totally understood what the issues were in various states, such as immigration in California and Medicare in Florida. However, when he would stand up on the stump, he would throw his remarks away and talk about anything but that issue. It was a wasted opportunity."

Legionnaires' outbreak traced

WATERFORD Mich. (AP) — An outbreak of Legionnaires' disease that killed four people and sickened at least 26 others has been traced to an air conditioning cooling tower on the roof of a suburban Detroit grocery.

Health investigators tested water samples from several businesses before concluding the airborne bacteria came from the Cattleman's Market in Farmington in late September and early October, Oakland County Executive L. Brooks Patterson said Friday.

He said the tower has been sterilized and the outbreak is over.

Stagnant warm water in rooftop cooling towers makes them a common breeding ground for Legionella bacteria, which become airborne when the water evaporates.

Feds deny newsman's claim about Flight 800

NEW YORK (AP) — Federal officials denied again Friday that "friendly fire" caused the TWA flight 8[illegible], a theory given new life by newsman Pierre Salinger's claim a Navy vessel accidentally shot down the jumbo jet.

"We can assure the American public and families of the victims that nothing — nothing — like that did take place or would take place," FBI Assistant Director James Kallstrom told reporters.

Bristling at the suggestion there was a cover-up of the cause, Kallstrom said "as I stand here today" it is still unknown whether a bomb, a missile or a mechanical failure caused the July 17 explosion that killed all 230 people aboard.

But he said one thing is known: "The military had nothing to do with this horrendous tragedy."

Salinger, a former ABC News correspondent and spokesman for President Kennedy, told reporters in Cannes, France, on Thursday that he has obtained a document detailing how the Navy was testing missiles off Long Island and accidentally hit Flight 800 because the Paris-bound plane was flying lower than expected.

"The truth must come out," Salinger said, adding that he is willing to turn the document over to the FBI.

Salinger said he was told by "some very important people" to wait until after the U.S. elections to disclose the information because it could "make the public very, very unhappy."

Friday, Salinger told The Associated Press from Paris that he was standing by his claim despite the official denials.

"The FBI is now after me," he said. "They visited my house in Washington last night and spoke to my wife, and I'm sure they are looking to talk to me."

The FBI has received dozens of calls from people claiming to have seen a missile at the time of the explosion. Rumors that the aircraft was accidentally shot down by the military have abounded on the Internet.

But investigators have said on several occasions there is no evidence to support the friendly fire theory.

And again in a joint statement Friday, the FBI, Navy and the National Transportation Safety Board said: "The so-called 'friendly fire' explanation has been thoroughly pursued with the full cooperation of the U.S. Department of Defense and has been found to be totally without foundation."

The 71-year-old Salinger showed reporters his document on two crumpled pages but wouldn't let them read it. He said it was dated Aug. 22 and given to him five weeks ago by someone in French intelligence, but written by an American who "was tied to the U.S. Secret Service and has important contacts in the U.S. Navy."

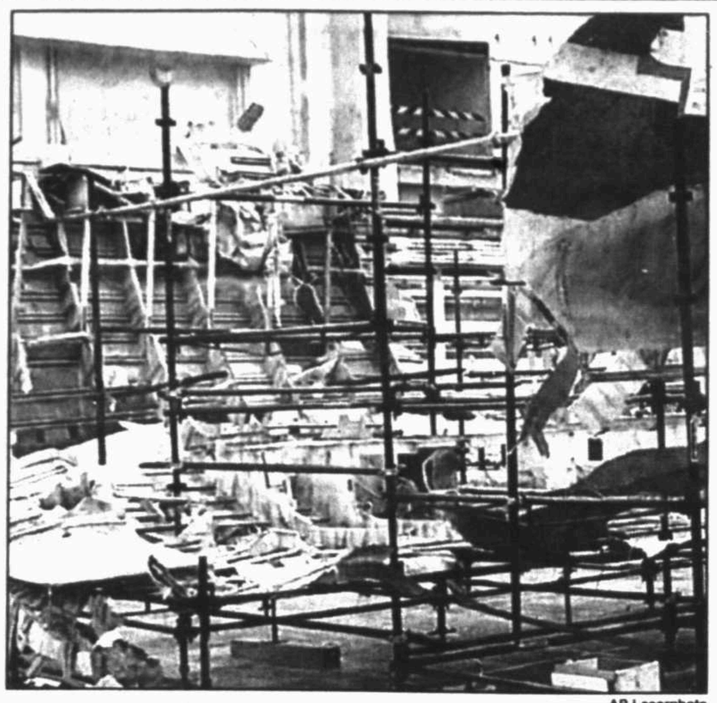

Salinger said the document was posted on the Internet in September. He did not know the Internet site and said he hadn't seen the site himself.

At least one Internet posting in September included a letter attributed to an unidentified former "safety chairman" of the Air Line Pilots Association that said Flight 800 was shot down by a Navy missile.

An ALPA spokesman has called the claim far-fetched.

Lt. Cmdr. Rob Newell, a Navy spokesman at the Pentagon, said the nearest warship, the USS Normandy, an Aegis-type missile cruiser, was 185 miles to the south and was not conducting weapons drills. Its computer-driven, long-range radar system was on "low power," reaching out only 130 miles, and "couldn't even see the TWA plane."

Newell said the only aircraft in the area was a P-3 Orion anti-submarine plane, which he said does not carry missiles. But the military reference, Janes All The World's Aircraft, states the P-3 is capable of carrying missiles.

Investigators continue to examine wreckage from TWA Flight while a former newsman said he has reliable proof that the plane was brought down by friendly fire from missile exercises.

Regulators review medical needs of airline-passenger emergencies

WASHINGTON (AP) — Health emergencies aboard aircraft, from heart attacks to strokes to severe allergic reactions, are under review to see if airlines need bigger and better medical kits on their planes.

"We are collecting data from the industry about events on aircraft," Federal Air Surgeon Jon Jordan said Friday.

New drugs for dealing with heart problems, strokes and other emergencies are under consideration in addition to airline medical kits. Other possibilities include devices to open the throat to allow breathing and defibrillators to shock a stopped heart back into action.

But any decision is at least a year away, Jordan stressed, and even then the Federal Aviation Administration may decide no changes are needed.

"A year from now we may look at the data and say: 'This doesn't give us justification for proceeding.' I think we have to have a lot more data than we have currently to make any change in the medical kit," Jordan said.

Under federal rules, airline medical kits now contain devices to measure blood pressure, a stethoscope and several medications for chest pain, circulatory collapse, allergic reactions, medication for diabetes, latex gloves and instructions.

Flight attendants are trained to deal with emergencies, though Jordan stressed that they are not considered medical personnel. If changes in the emergency kits are made, attendants would have to be trained in how the equipment or medication works.

So far, Jordan said, his office is only in the preliminary stages of collecting information about onboard medical emergencies. If it concludes that changes are needed in medical kits on planes, a notice will be issued calling for suggestions from the public, medical profession and airline industry.

In particular, he noted that equipment such as defibrillators would have to be studied to be sure that they do not pose a hazard to people when used. And the machines would need engineering testing to make sure they do not interfere with the plane's electronic instruments.

Civil-rights leaders urge White House to fight 209

WASHINGTON (AP) — Civil rights leaders met privately with White House and Justice Department officials Friday to urge the Clinton administration to lead the fight against California's anti-affirmative action proposition.

Proposition 209, which voters approved Tuesday by a 54-to-46 margin, amends California's state Constitution to ban race and gender considerations in public hiring, contracting and college admissions.

President Clinton was outspokenly opposed to the measure during the campaign, saying of affirmative action: "Mend it. Don't end it." Republican presidential nominee Bob Dole supported Proposition 209.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson and Patricia Ireland, president of the National Organization for Women, told officials that the Justice Department should lead the battle against the proposition in court. The government also should withhold funds from the University of California, one of the government's biggest contractors, on the basis of federal civil rights laws, they said.

"If this were Mississippi passing such a referendum rather than California, the reaction would be much different," Jackson said after meeting with Deval Patrick, assistant attorney general for civil rights. Earlier, Jackson met at the White House with Deputy Chief of Staff Harold Ickes, he said.

"The government must protect the most vulnerable," he told reporters.

Ireland said they got no "commitment of any sort" from administration officials. "But they're clearly looking at it. They're clearly concerned."

Jackson noted, "There's some measure of paralysis because of the transition of offices."

There was no immediate comment from the White House. A Justice Department spokesman said officials there will continue to review the proposition and monitor any court action on it.

Attorney General Janet Reno said Thursday that California's proposition "does not affect federal law."

Barrier-breaking judge succumbs to scleroderma

NEW YORK (AP) — When voters re-elected Justice Ruth Moskowitz, they chose a passionate jurist who, as an idealistic young woman from Brooklyn during the 1960s, was jailed in the South for trying to integrate a bus-station lunch counter.

They also voted for a judge who, when critically ill, still struggled to the bench on the arm of an aide.

What most voters didn't know Tuesday was that they were choosing a candidate who had died three days earlier.

Moskowitz, 60, succumbed Saturday to a disease that had destroyed her own kidneys and a donated one. Her name stayed on the state Supreme Court ballot because the deadline to remove it had passed, and she was elected to a second 14-year term on the trial-level court in Brooklyn.

"Sometimes it's better to vote for someone who's dead than for someone you don't like," said Glenn Rubenstein, who learned of the judge's death after voting for her.

Moskowitz was more than liked. She was "the finest judge I've ever appeared before in 22 years of practicing the law," said defense attorney Benjamin Brafman, a former prosecutor.

Friends and colleagues packed a Brooklyn synagogue for her funeral Monday, and police blocked off surrounding streets filled with other mourners.

Moskowitz was a Democrat, but her name also appeared on the ballot on the Republican and Liberal tickets. The top eight vote-getters among 15 candidates were elected; Moskowitz was fourth with nearly 400,000 votes.

"Whether you were the mayor or a homeless man, in her courtroom you were on equal standing," Brafman said. "She was small, slightly built and tough as nails. And she worked a courtroom as well as anybody I've watched — but with grace and charm."

In 1988, Moskowitz made headlines by tongue-lashing Mayor Ed Koch when he barged into her courtroom to demand stiff sentences for city employees who had looted parking meters. She made the mayor sit down until the sentencing was over, then gave him permission to leave.

Moskowitz was driven to study law by her hatred of racism, friends and family said. Between graduate school and law school, she went down South as a Freedom Rider and, in 1961, was arrested in Jackson, Miss., for sitting at a blacks-only lunch counter.

In that volatile time, Northern Jews who went down South to fight segregation were despised as outside agitators. Moskowitz refused to post the $500 bail and awaited trial in prison for 40 days in solitary confinement.

Army stresses 'buddy system' at proving ground in light of scandal

ABERDEEN PROVING GROUND, Md. (AP) — Faced with a scandal that could prove more damaging than Tailhook was to the Navy, the Army is strengthening its "buddy system" at an installation where at least a dozen female recruits were allegedly raped or harassed by their instructors.

Since the allegations first came to the attention of Army brass in September, soldiers at the training center have been told, "Don't go anywhere alone, make sure you know where your buddy is," said Lt. Col. Gabriel Riesco, chief of staff to the base commander at the Army Ordnance Center at Aberdeen Proving Ground, about 30 miles north of Baltimore.

"If they are seen without their buddy, then lots of questions are asked," Riesco said.

Four drill instructors and a captain, all married, have been charged with violations ranging from rape to sending improper love letters to women trainees, who had an average age of 21.

Investigators expect to find more victims as they interview women who passed through the base in the last two years. They also expect more charges against other, unidentified suspects.

"This is absolutely deplorable," said Maj. Gen. Robert D. Shadley, the base commander, who was close to tears during a news conference Friday. "We as leaders have a responsibility to take care of our soldiers."

He said some of the charges stem from consensual relationships, but that is still unacceptable; sexual relationships between commanders and subordinates violate Army regulations.

"We want those individuals out in front of our soldiers in formation and in front of them in the classroom to be leaders and not lechers," Shadley said.

Unlike the Tailhook scandal, which occurred during a Navy and Marine aviators' convention at a Las Vegas hotel, the Army says the victims in this case were harassed, molested and raped by men in authority over them for a long period — from last spring to this fall.

Officials say they were unaware of the alleged crimes until a single recruit came forward in September.

Trainees and recruits "see their drill instructor as God," said Laura Miller, a Harvard University sociologist and specialist on gender in the military. "The potential to abuse power is unlike any other organization."

One recruit agreed.

"There is an intimidation factor and a lot of stress in the Army," Pvt. Kristen Funkhouser, who has been at the training center since September, told WMAR-TV. People say how can it happen in such a disciplined environment but it happens obviously. ... And this is just the tip of the iceberg, I feel. It's all going to start coming out now."

Miller said this scandal could end up being worse than Tailhook, after which the Navy pursued 140 harassment cases against aviators accused of accosting more than 80 women. None of the accused was court-martialed.

"The numbers involved, the amount of time it had been happening and the extremity of the charges surprises me," she said.

But she said the Army's reaction has been better and quicker than the Navy's. The Army investigated the complaints aggressively when they surfaced and this week broke the story itself, she said.

Shadley said he had ordered an independent investigation into the allegations. Maj. Susan Gibson, an attorney at the base, said it would focus on any problems in the chain of command and why women did not immediately notify superiors of the alleged crimes.

The Army also has ordered a review of all its training facilities worldwide.

The Maryland center teaches about 11,000 trainees a year technical skills ranging from weapons repair to air conditioning.

The 52-year-old unemployed maintenance worker finally won a seat in the Legislature after a dozen years of trying, and he's not going to let the fact he doesn't own a car stop him from getting there.

So every day during the six-month session that begins in January, Leonard plans to board a bus for the 30-mile round trip from his home at the Cadillac Motel in Manchester to the Legislature in Concord.

"I'm still flying high," Leonard said Friday of his victory, speaking figuratively, of course. "I've got a lot of friends who said I'd never amount to anything, but I knew deep down in my heart, my calling was to help people."

Leonard spent just $43 to file his Democratic candidacy for a vacant seat, print some fliers and send a few faxes.

"I feel the taxpayers of the state of New Hampshire were getting fed up with the politics that were going on," Leonard said. "It's time for the parties to work for the people who pay them."

After a dozen years on the campaign trail, Leonard won with 1,130 votes in Manchester's Ward 3, a working-class neighborhood.

He credited his persistence to his French-Irish background: "Those are the two best and most stubborn nationalities there are."

Rhonda Landry, a clerk at the three-story hotel Leonard calls home, said, "He's one of those people who can relate to just about anyone."

City Clerk Leo Bernier said Leonard "is just one of those persons who is, well, different."

Leonard said he will be looking out for the people of his ward, even if they don't know who he is.

Clinton picks millionaire Washington outsider as new Chief of Staff

WASHINGTON (AP) — With his second-term shakeup gaining speed, President Clinton tapped soft-spoken Washington outsider Erskine Bowles to be chief of staff and promised to learn from past presidents who stumbled after re-election.

In his first news conference of his second term, Clinton assured reporters, "I'm very mindful of history's difficulties and I'm going to try to beat them."

Bowles' first task will be to help Clinton fill yawning holes in his staff and Cabinet. A flood of high-ranking officials, including popular chief of staff Leon Panetta, is leaving for greener pastures or falling victim to presidential housecleaning.

The Cabinet is almost bare: Six of 14 top agency heads plan to depart, with one or two more likely to go.

Panetta, whose resignation is effective Jan. 20, Inauguration Day, whipped order into an undisciplined White House after Clinton's first chief of staff, Mack McLarty, departed in 1994.

"This had been a great and wonderful journey that has satisfied both my mind and my soul," said Panetta, who is expected to return to California and run for governor. "Now it's time to satisfy my heart."

Bowles, a close Clinton friend, promised "a smooth and seamless transition." Clinton said the millionaire businessman took the job, albeit reluctantly, because "his country needs him and I need him."

Still catching up on his sleep, the newly re-elected president must now seek replacements for Secretary of State Warren Christopher and Defense Secretary William Perry. He hoped to announce the choices before an overseas trip late next week.

A student of history, Clinton told reporters that re-elected presidents normally stumble because of external events, their overconfidence or "sometimes a president essentially just runs out of steam."

> 'This had been a great and wonderful journey that has satisfied both my mind and my soul.'
> — Leon Panetta

"We have a driving agenda, we know what we have to do," he said. "And if we keep good, energetic people involved, I think we'll be able to avoid those pitfalls," he said.

Bowles, 51, an investment banker in Charlotte, N.C., first came to Washington in 1993 as Small Business Administration director and deputy White House chief of staff. He left nearly a year ago to spend more time with a son, who was still in high school.

The loss of Panetta, a veteran congressman, will cost Clinton another legislative warrior as he prepares for battle with the Republican Congress; Capitol Hill veterans George Stephanopoulos and Rahm Emanuel also are leaving. But he gains a respected, well-liked businessman who helped bring order to the White House staff during his brief stint in Washington.

The last time Clinton turned to an outsider and friend, he made Mack McLarty his chief of staff. Like Bowles, McLarty was likeable, a Southerner and a businessman — but proved ineffective.

Bowles worked for both men, after McLarty brought him from the SBA to impose structure on the president's staff and schedule.

"He's been tested," said Stephen Hess of the Washington think tank Brookings Institution. "He learned at Panetta's knee."

James Granato, political scientist at Michigan State University, said the selection of a man who considers himself a conservative businessman shows that Clinton is committed to keeping his second term in the political center.

"This suggests they will be very serious about going at things like entitlements," Granato said.

Two senior White House officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Bowles agonized over Clinton's offer — and did not accept it until the president gave him wide latitude in reshaping the senior staff.

That presidential concession could impact deputy chief of staff Harold Ickes, whose hard-knuckle management style is said to be a poor fit with the genteel Bowles.

CIA finds no evidence it knew about drug outlet

WASHINGTON (AP) — An internal CIA investigation found no evidence the intelligence agency knew anything about alleged drug smuggling activities at an airport in Mena, Ark., where the intelligence agency once held a secret training exercise.

"No evidence has been found that the CIA was associated with money laundering, narcotics trafficking, arms smuggling or other illegal activities at or around Mena, Ark., at any time," said the report, made public Friday.

The investigation was conducted by Frederick P. Hitz, the CIA inspector general. The agency released a six-page unclassified summary of his findings.

CIA Director John Deutch ordered the investigation last spring in response to a request in February from House Banking Committee Chairman Jim Leach, R-Iow . Leach's panel is conducting its own investigation of alleged money laundering in the Mena area, stemming from the committee's Whitewater inquiry and related issues.

Dave Runkel, a spokesman for the committee, said allegations that the CIA was somehow involved in running guns to Nicaragua and that CIA-chartered planes may have been used to smuggle cocaine into the United States date back to the Reagan and Bush administrations.

A new book, "Boy Clinton," by R. Emmett Tyrrell, editor of the conservative American Spectator magazine, alleges that President Clinton, then the governor of Arkansas, knew about illegal activities at Mena.

At a news conference in 1994, Clinton was asked about the allegations and replied that he knew nothing about any illegal activity at the Mena Intermountain Airport.

"The airport in question, and all the events in question, were the subject of state and federal inquiries," he said. "It was primarily a matter for federal jurisdiction. The state really had next to nothing to do with it."

The CIA's Hitz said "no evidence has been found to indicate that CIA or anyone acting on its behalf participated in, or otherwise had knowledge of, any illegal or improper activities in Mena, Ark., or the area north of Mena known as Nella, Ark."

The inspector general said the agency was involved in two activities at the airport over a three-year period.

E. coli linked to baby's death

DENVER (AP) — A 16-month-old girl died Friday after drinking unpasteurized fruit juice linked to an E. coli outbreak across the West.

Anna Gimmestad is believed to be the first person to die in the outbreak, which began last month.

The California-based maker of the juice, Odwalla Inc., has since recalled 16 of its fruit drinks, which are thought to have infected five people in Colorado and 44 in California, Washington state and Canada.

Anna was admitted to Children's Hospital on Oct. 16 and died after going into cardiac and respiratory arrest, spokeswoman Jenny Kolquist said. Anna had severe kidney problems, and her heart had stopped several times in recent days.

Although the E. coli infection has not been confirmed by laboratory tests, health officials strongly believe Anna was infected with the bacteria, said Dr. Richard Hoffman, a state epidemiologist.

Anna fell ill with bloody diarrhea after drinking a Smoothie, an Odwalla bottled juice drink. Her illness, known as hemolytic uremic syndrome, is a known complication of E. coli O157:H7 bacteria, whose presence was confirmed in Odwalla fruit drinks.

A blood sample from Anna was sent to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention for testing.

What twentysomethings want in their machines

By Charles Stough
N.Y. Times News Service

All right, now that the election is over, except for the screaming about media bias, let's get back to the important choices. Here is what an unscientific poll of Generation-Xers would put in the slots if they had their own vending machines.

Coke and cherry Coke. Plain and peanut M&Ms. Sour cream and onion potato chips. Salt and vinegar potato chips. Animal crackers. Stick pretzels. Chocolate. And beer.

It could stir curiosity, a poll like this one. Who owns a vending machine, after all? If you could own one for your own private use, why would you bother — why not just keep the snacks on the shelf with the soup and coffee? Who asks such stupid questions?

Well, the question came up more or less spontaneously in a corner of the Internet, in a Usenet newsgroup called alt.society.generation-x. Someone posted the query, and those who sign on and read a.s.g-x, as the abbreviation goes, answered.

One fellow said he would put beer in the machine. He said he and some pals once had control of a vending machine and they did that, and the cans dropped when customers pressed the Dr Pepper button. That way no one but insiders found out about the beer, he said.

There was also a question about "guilty movie pleasures." In that thread, contributors were asked to tell what motion pictures they enjoy when they don't have to explain that the channel selector is,

Will the new technology give dyslexics an edge?

By Richard A. Knox
N.Y. Times News Service

Dyslexics often possess strengths that could be an advantage in the "world of pictures" that is emerging as computers increasingly render information in visual images rather than words, says author Thomas West.

West will explain his theory at a conference of the Orton Dyslexia Society here later this week.

People with dyslexia, the reading and language disability, face a lifelong struggle to keep up in a text-based world whose currency is words, West says.

But dyslexics often have strong visual-spatial abilities, and that, says West, may give them an edge in business, science and other professions that more and more involve looking at information in nonverbal ways.

Citing the success stories of dyslexics like Nicholas Negroponte, founder of the MIT Media Lab, and Charles Schwab, the influential stockbroker, West says: "We should expect that often these visual thinkers will see the emerging trends and new developments that their conventionally trained competitors will not see."

West is the author of "In the Mind's Eye," in which he argues that noted figures like Albert Einstein, William Butler Yeats and Leonardo da Vinci reflect the flip side of dyslexia: an ability, often highly developed, to think in visual and spatial terms and solve problems in nonverbal ways. What's needed, he says, is to help dyslexics exploit those talents.

"As technologies change, the kind of brain that lends itself poorly to an old technology (writing) may be just what is wanted with a new technology," says West, himself a dyslexic.

He will speak Wednesday during a symposium on dyslexia research that opens the meeting of the Orton Society, named for Samuel Orton, a pioneer in research on the language disability.

GAME BOY

Striking it rich with the past

By Stephan Lazaroff

The latest installment of SirTech's Jagged Alliance is subtitled, and rightly so, "Deadly Games". This package comes with more mercs and weapons than the original, and now it supports the purchasing of additional hardware from the arms general supply officer.

Now, the graphics are the same as the original, which means they are outdated by most all standards, and the interface hasn't changed one bit. Not bad in this case, since it was pretty good to start with. My only complaint, for what it's worth, is the grainy textures and poor graphical displays even at 800x640 with 32,000 or more colors displayed. VGA with 256 is more this game's style and that means anyone can play for the low priceof admission. Memory is not taxed greatly and sound is best on a 16 bitSound Blaster card from Creative Labs. (As if I had to tell you who makes 'em!)

A great new feature, which helps make up for the grainy images, is the campaign and level editor which enables you to create your own

Too much telecommuting can be isolating

By Bill Husted
N.Y. Times News Service

The other day I made a speech to a group of telecommuters, those folks who work from home from time to time, commuting using telephone lines, computers and fax machines.

I've done that myself. I think a lot of people will end up working that way as cities become more crowded and lifestyles more complicated. There's a lot of good in telecommuting.

Besides, for some people, it's the only way to get to any kind of work. For single parents, people with physical limitations that make commuting difficult, and for folks who choose to live in remote locations, it's a lifesaver.

But I hope telecommuting never becomes the routine way to go to work for those who just would rather not fight the traffic. I hate traffic, neckties and being inside as much as the next guy. But you would lose more than the headaches caused by a jam on I-75 if working from home becomes the norm.

When I walked up to the podium at that speech, the audience formed a pattern that scared me. Don't get me wrong. Just speaking to any group larger than four people causes big globs of sweat to form quivering on my head. But I got scared by something else as well. Almost no one sat together. People were scattered about the room — with several empty chairs between them. Maybe those folks were just afraid they'd catch a cold from their neighbors. But — whatever the reason — that pattern reminded me once again that technology is a double-edged sword.

Is Microsoft sabotaging its own efforts in interactive media?

By Denise Caruso
N.Y. Times News Service

If Microsoft Corp.'s grip on the software industry is roughly equivalent to the Kremlin's control over the former Soviet Union — so great that the world scrambles to decode every ceremonial hiccup — then the industry's Kremlinologists should take note of the subtext in the revamping that the company announced last week.

That subtext concerned Microsoft's huge investments in interactive media, a growing genre of products, viewed on a PC, that includes video games, CD-ROM's and World Wide Web sites. What grabbed most of the headlines was the announcement that Patty Stonesifer, senior vice president of the interactive media division and Microsoft's only top-ranking female executive, was leaving the company.

But the organizational shift also moved Nathan Myhrvold, one of the company's best-known technical visionaries, out of his role as group vice president of Microsoft's "applications and content" business.

As the executive in charge of "content," Myhrvold approved most of Microsoft's media projects. But he has now been pulled back into research as chief technology officer.

Perhaps most noteworthy is that the company, for the first time, has broken out interactive media into its own business group — and tapped a highly regarded Microsoft executive, Pete Higgins, to run it.

Sharing management duties in the applications and content group with Myhrvold, Higgins ran the company's cash-cow software applications business, which includes the company's flagship Word and Excel products. Now, under his leadership, the interactive media business will have its own entry on Microsoft's balance sheet. Until last week, its finances were never public because they were reported as part of the applications and content group.

These are radical moves that speak volumes about the strategic importance Microsoft is now placing on the interactive media market.

Because it already dominates the PC software industry, Microsoft cannot grow much more simply by increasing market share. Instead, the company measures its growth by increasing "dollars spent per PC," as Ms. Stonesifer once said. Once customers have bought word processors, spreadsheets and data bases, most of what they continue to buy are inexpensive upgrades.

But media is an addictive, hit-driven business. Unlike buying a spreadsheet and using it for years, buying one video game is likely to inspire the buying of another. The media opportunities are not only in software titles: PC users, on average, now spend between $10 and $200 a month for on-line services and Internet connections.

And if consumers buy lots of Microsoft Windows-based interactive media, they are increasingly bonded to the Windows PC platform itself — meaning, in theory, that they will continue to spend more and more dollars per PC.

Industry watchers estimate Microsoft's media investments are now between $800 million and $1.5 billion, embracing everything from giant reference works on CD-ROM to television's MSNBC cable channel (on which this writer appears as a commentator).

The company has ensconced more than 2,000 workers in a new Redmond, Wash., campus for its Interactive Media Division. In addition to MSNBC, its joint venture with NBC News, Microsoft has partnership deals with Dreamworks SKG, Paramount Television, Black Entertainment Television and others.

Earlier this month, moreover, the company transformed its Microsoft Network, known as MSN, from a proprietary on-line service to a giant Web site of information and entertainment "channels," much of which is created by independent producers financed by Microsoft.

In fact, one on-line developer said Microsoft is courting these producers so intensely that "no one in the New York interactive media world has bought themselves dinner in more than a month."

But, as any company can tell you, making deals and spending money does not ensure success. And even though both businesses involve PCs, the process of creating and selling PC software, Microsoft-style, could not be more different than creating and selling interactive media.

Hit media properties, especially in entertainment, are the result of a winnowing of thousands of creative visions made manifest in the market. If the public does not like one vision, they will simply go somewhere else.

But Microsoft is not known for creative vision. Instead, it is legendary for taking others' visions, pushing its own version into the market, and reiterating it until it gets it right.

The difference between software applications and media properties is so fundamental that many people believe Microsoft cannot be successful in interactive media until it puts someone in charge of the division who knows and understands both media and creative vision.

Ms. Stonesifer's move out of the company was under way for a year, and Higgins had been attending meetings with her for more than eight months, according to people familiar with the situation. During this transition, the company presumably had the opportunity to find someone with vision and the skills to

Webstock '96 like nothing ever seen online

By Steve Dollar
N.Y. Times News Service

Hyped as a generational landmark, Webstock '96 promises it will be like nothing ever seen online.

The rock'n'chat festival — which launches at 12:01 a.m. Friday with a live Halloween performance by Porno for Pyros — hopes to draw a half million participants during its four-day run.

Like its 1960s namesake, the event aims to energize participants around a common focal point. Only this time, instead of Woodstock's mud, there's Michael Stipe of R.E.M. and Academy Award-nominated actor Elisabeth Shue.

They join a group of celebrities who will make chat room appearances during Webstock, which also has signed up baseball's Ken Griffey Jr., actors Courteney Cox and Malik Yoba, rocker Tom Petty and CNN correspondent Farai Chideya, among others.

Co-producer and "Melrose Place" star Andrew Shue helped organize Webstock to benefit his pet project, DO Something, a non-profit community service program for youth. Corporate sponsors such as America Online, Yahoo and Microsoft already have donated more than $1 million to Shue's cause. As part of the event's public service agenda, participants can find links to non-profit organizations nationwide, as well as contact chapters of DO Something.

"This is a real punctuating mark in the popular use of the Internet," contends Tom Hayes, Webstock's executive producer and director of Global Corporate Affairs for Applied Materials, the world's largest manufacturer of microchip equipment.

The target audience? Screenagers.

"People 14-40, folks who are going to live their lives on-line," Hayes says. "Wave after wave of change has hit us, but we haven't had many opportunities to sit back, take stock, talk to each other and sort things out."

Located at http://www.webstock96.com, the Webstock site is designed as an animated village, with chats and concerts held in an ampitheater, complete with live sound and video; a sports arena for virtual basketball; a library to investigate multimedia source materials; and a "'Lectric Mosh Pit" where large numbers of participants can chat.

Organizers claim that even those with lower-end technology will be able to enjoy Webstock.

"We took great pains to provide for every kind of modem speed," Hayes says. "Most folks will enjoy real audio."

combat situations. As the game is turn based, this means you can make some very interesting problems for your mercs or those of a friend. Don't let the graphics stop you from enjoying this really fun sequel to one of the best squad level tactical games to come down the ol 'puter road.

Interplay has another winner on its hands with Mummy: Tomb of the Pharaoh. Not quite a five star taker, but well worth the effort and cost, this one takes place in the tomb of a long deceased, but not quite forgotten, Pharaoh who needs your help to stop the pillaging of his most holy resting place. Live actions from Hollywood stars spruce up the mostly exploration style game and lend needed character to its darkplot. I took about fifty hours to play it through and in the end used a walk-through to solve only one of the many puzzles included in the game.

Graphics are great and, although it lacks real first person shooter excitement, it shines nearly as bright as Myst.

Having just completed installation of the new PC Format, (July edition really) ezine, I found some real favorites from a by-gone era and wasted youth! Yes, I'm talking about my youth and, yes again, my favorites! Pacman in its original form is on one of the two discs included with the magazine, and I wiped away a nostalgic tear for this venerable old title.

"I Have No Mouth - But I Must Scream" is another title on this disc, but it's a demo and from playing it I can honestly say the game is dark, twisted and difficult to control! Other's reviews have not been kind to this title and after perusing the demo, I don't think a copy of it will find a place beside Mummy or Myst, or Indy Car Racing for that matter!

Perhaps of interest to all who read this column and enjoy both gaming and the creative end of such titles that allow level editing or creation, is PC Format's offering on disc two. Micrografix's "Visual Reality 1.5" has proven to be a most entertaining product, and this disc carries the full version, not a demo. That alone pays the price of admission and there's always the other goodies included to soothe your wallet.

DYSLEXICS: Visualization skills once again become important

Although relatively common, dyslexia remains underrecognized and often misunderstood, say specialists. Children with dyslexia have trouble learning to read, even if they're of normal or high intelligence, because their brains are wired in a different way from most people's.

These children have great difficulty relating written letters and letter groups to the sounds they they represent. They have trouble sounding out unfamiliar words and read even familiar words very slowly, so that comprehension suffers.

They don't necessarily reverse letters or read backward, although that can be a part of the condition.

Sally Grimes, a learning disabilities specialist in Marstons Mills, has written that dyslexics lack "the explicit knowledge that spoken and printed words can be segmented into individual phonemes, or sounds, and can be taken apart and put together in different combinations. Good readers develop this phonetic coding system quickly and almost effortlessly."

At the Wednesday symposium, scientists will discuss the latest findings about the brain differences between dyslexics and others. Further information on the meeting is available by calling 800-ABC-D123.

Dr. Norman Geschwind, the late Harvard neurologist, carried out influential work suggesting that dyslexic brains are structurally different, and that one reason may be hormonal influences in the womb.

Subsequent research by a student of Geschwind, Dr. Albert Galaburda at Beth Israel Hospital, and by others has uncovered more detailed brain abnormalities, and scientists are trying to understand how they're related. The symposium will also hear reports from geneticists about inherited factors suspected to be involved in dyslexia.

Gordon Sherman, director of the Dyslexia Research Laboratory at Beth Israel and president-elect of the Orton Society, said a major theme of the conference is to "get the word out to parents, educators, teachers and administrators that dyslexia is real and is a brain-based issue, and that with the right accommodations, dyslexics can learn to read and they can excel in education."

West raises the intriguing possibility that dyslexia may have had survival benefits when humans were hunter-gatherers, and that could be why the trait persisted.

"If you look at the sweep of human experience, you had to have the (spatial) skills to hunt and fish and analyze battle strategies and so forth," he said, while reading and writing have existed only for the blink of an eye on an evolutionary time scale.

With more complex information being packaged in images, says West, the newest technologies take us "back the other way, and visualization skills are becoming terribly important again."

TELECOMMUTING: Most business decisions made in isolation and the World Wide Web make it easier to communicate instantly with friends and business contacts around the world. But technology also can isolate us.

After the speech, I started thinking about a business world where all the decisions were made by telephone, e-mail and fax.

You'd never see the worried look in the eyes of a friend who needs to leave early to pick up her kids. So you'd never think of offering to stay late so she could get home on time.

You'd never waste a few minutes talking to the guy at the next desk about the home run his kid hit at the T-ball game.

Most of your business decisions would be made in isolation and typed out in cold letters on a computer screen. Without the human element, without seeing the fear and the hope of your co-workers and customers, your decisions might become more logical. That's a shame because some of the best ideas aren't logical at first blush. They are built of dreams, hope and inspiration.

Don't get me wrong. There are plenty of times that I wish boring people had an on-off switch like the ones on my computer and ham radio. When a conversation gets boring you could just flip the switch. But, in real life, you have to suffer through the boring moments to find the treasure buried there.

Sometimes — after what seems like hours of tedium — you'll hear the darnedest things if you keep listening. Real conversations, real friendships and good business decisions sometimes take time to bloom. And the slowest-blooming flowers are often the most beautiful.

I'm not trying to start a campaign against telecommuters. I wish them well. I'm just saying I hope technology doesn't become a shield from the little things you can't see on a computer screen. If it does that, we may get where we're going faster. But I don't think we'll like it once we get there.

make it a reality. It chose not to do so.

Why not remains a mystery. Any analysis of Microsoft's success focuses on the business acumen of its chairman, Bill Gates, whose intimate knowledge of computer software is inextricably linked to his business skills, making him a formidable competitor.

Gates said that Higgins was right for his new job because of his success with applications, as well as his considerable management skills.

But that represents only half of the equation that Gates has long brought to the making and marketing of software. What is missing in this case is a fundamental understanding of interactive media.

With such sizable investments on the line, Microsoft's failure to apply its own success formula to interactive media is an apparent lapse in logic — from a company where logic is its stock in trade.

GEN-X: Complain, or feel warm and fuzzy

ahem, broken.

The Gen-Xers chose "Top Gun" for its bad acting, ridiculous story and unrealistic dialogue. "The air-to-air combat scenes had several glaring errors," its nominator said, "and even the climax was monumentally stupid." That's because while Tom Cruise and Val Kilmer are up there duelling six enemy fighters, the aircraft carrier can't launch any more fighters because two of its catapults are broken, and everybody knows that all Navy carriers have four catapults.

"The Island of Dr. Moreau" got a vote, as did "Aliens 3," "Babe," "Spaceballs," "Terminator," "The Exorcist" (both I and III), "Steel Magnolias," Three Stooges shorts and "Blade Runner."

"Blade Runner," it should be noted, is a semi-cult opus that stirs debate whenever it comes up in any of Usenet's thousands of newsgroups. The argument goes whether Deckard, the future-world bounty hunter played by Harrison Ford, who chases the dangerous replicants, is himself a replicant and doesn't know it.

In the director's cut of the film there are ambiguous hints that he is a replicant, as when he dreams about the unicorn but doesn't tell anybody — and then finds a little gum-wrapper unicorn left in the hallway by the skulking paper-folding cop played by Edward James Olmos.

How would he know about the unicorn if the thought wasn't planted in Deckard back at the plant? And what about all those old photos on his piano, when replicants like Leon the killer and love-interest Sean Young find old photos so precious? Wow, heavy. This passes for theology among Gen-Xers.

It was for subsets such as Generation X that Usenet was created, although for sure the first newsgroups were for computer insiders. When the 'Net became infested with non-techie consumer types, the geek newsgroups for OS2 and Fortran programmers found themselves competing for bandwidth (capacity) with fiery sailboat owners and Ann Rice fans and collectors of old phone cards.

The geeks hate this, but in fact it is the wider use of Usenet that will assure Usenet's survival as a worldwide forum and resource. Check with your Internet service provider for groups available to you, find one that tickles your mouse and sign on.

Alt.society.generation-x is not even the most frivolous of groups. There's one, alt.cuddle, for people who like to hug and be hugged. There's another, alt.bitterness, for those who need to complain a lot. There are several for journalists but I seldom go there; alt.journalism is full of screwballs trying to shame a horrifyingly biased American press into slanting everything in screwball directions.

About the bias, by the way: According to Editor & Publisher magazine, since 1946, of U.S. newspapers that endorse candidates for president, 86.7 percent did so in favor of Republicans. That, no doubt, explains everything.

Usenet newsgroups are accessible with modem-equipped computers; consult local Internet service providers for instructions and groups available. Charles Stough is an editor for the Dayton (Ohio) Daily News. His electronic address is copyboy@dma.org.

RELIGION IN BRIEF

Musical presented

The youth choirs from Alamo Baptist Church in Midland and Temple Baptist Church in Odessa will be presenting the musical, "Live The Difference" at 7:00 p.m. today at the Yucca Theater in downtown Midland. For ticket information, call 915-337-3641 or 697-3101. The tickets are free and the public is invited to attend.

Celebration set

Redeemer Lutheran Church of Joy, 824 E. 18th Street, Odessa, will hold a Golden Anniversary Worship Celebration on Sunday at 10:30 a.m.

The Bible Study for all ages will begin at 9:30 a.m. Dr. Gerald Kieschnick, president of the Texas District of our church body, will be the speaker in the Fellowship Hall Bible Study Hour and for the worship celebration.

A catered barbecue meal will be served in the Fellowship Hall at noon. The Rev. Dean Kelm is senior pastor.

Building dedicated

Pastor Don Palmer of Life Unlimited Church in Odessa announces the dedication of their new building located at Bay. 191 and E. Loop 338.

Palmer stated that Life Unlimited purchased the unfinished building in 1988 and have finished construction in phases.

"When we purchased the property, it had been sitting vacant several years and it looked like the skeleton of a burned-out building," said Palmer. "It was an eyesore to the community."

He said another church began construction about 1980. The building was foreclosed on by the lending institution due to the oil glut of the early 1980's.

Palmer invites the public to the dedication service which begins at 2:00 p.m. Sunday and features Bishop Malcolm Smith as the guest speaker.

An 8 pm concert is scheduled today with Dana Key of the well-known DeGarmo and Key duet.

A nursery and a church program will be held for the children.

Call 362-1911 or 550-0005 for more information.

OCC to deliver gifts

BOONE, N.C., Oct. 31, 1996 — Operation Christmas Child (OCC), the charity project that last year delivered 812,000 Christmas gifts to children in war-torn Bosnia and other crisis areas, plans to collect and distribute an additional one million Christmas shoe boxes this year. A project of Samaritan's Purse, the international Christian relief organization headed by Franklin Graham, son of evangelist Billy Graham, OCC will hand-deliver the 1996 gifts to needy children in more than 25 troubled countries, including Bosnia, Croatia, Lebanon, Nicaragua, Kenya, and Vietnam.

A project known for its simplicity, Operation Christmas Child encourages children, families, schools, civic groups, and churches to fill shoe boxes with small gifts and necessity items to share Christmas with less fortunate children around the world. Last year, President Bill Clinton and his family participated in Operation Christmas Child, providing a shoe box gift for the world's largest airlift of children's gifts. Clinton, who plans to give a Christmas shoe box again this year said, "To Franklin Graham, thank you, sir, for the remarkable work that you are doing and for giving people . . . the chance to be remarkable in their own right."

This year, Operation Christmas Child will collect shoe box gifts from across the U.S., Canada, Great Britain, Australia, Holland, Germany, and Finland. Participants fill the shoe boxes with small toys, candy, and necessity items such as flashlights, school supplies, and hygiene products. Many add personal notes and family photos establishing a pen-pal relationship with the recipient of their box.

For more information on how to participate in the project, call the Operation Christmas Child Hotline at 1-800-353-5949.

Festival hosted

Asbury United Methodist Church of Midland will be hosting its 17th Annual Fall Arts and Crafts Festival today (Nov. 9th) from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. at the Midland County Exhibit Building located on East Highway 80.

There will be more than 100 booths with local and surrounding area exhibitors. Some of the items include pottery, woodwork, needlepoint, clothes, ceramics, jewelry, Christmas items and many, many more. Weather permitting there will be pony rides for children.

The church will have an expanded menu in the kitchen this year. Hamburgers, hotdogs, barbecue sandwiches, Frito pies, nachos, drinks and many other mouth watering treats. The homemade cobblers for dessert sell out fast. The church will also have their Bake sale with loads of pies, cookies, cakes and breads. An addition this year will be the 50th Anniversary Cookbook that will be on sale. Called "50 Years and Still Cooking" it contains over 600 recipes from members of Asbury and their friends.

There will be door prizes given away during the day and the Grand prize drawing at 6:00 p.m. will be for a 19 inch color television set. Admission is $1.00 and children under 12 are free. All proceeds go toward the church budget and its many outreach ministries. For more information call the Rev. Jerry Don Cheshire at 684-4061.

Fall Revival set

The pastor and Members of the Macedonia Baptist Church and the pastor and members of the Mt. Calvary Baptist Church invite the public to attend their Annual Joint Fall Revival.

Services will be Monday through Friday, Nov. 11-15, beginning at 7:30 p.m. daily.

The speaker for this event will be the Rev. Aaron Brasfield, Jr. of San Antonio.

The Rev. Brasfield is a graduate of Bishop College and Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Ft. Worth. He is a member and Recording Secretary of the Home Mission Board of the Missionary Baptist Convention of Texas. He also serves as Moderator of the United Fellowship Baptist District Association. Involved with the outreach ministry at the San Antonio Juvenile Detention Center, of San Antonio and also the Charter Real Rehabilitation Center of San Antonio.

The Rev. Brasfield presently pastors the Grace First Baptist Church of San Antonio. He is married to Alma and is the father of four children and one grandson, Marcus.

The public is invited to attend.

Singles to meet

The Catholic Singles Ministry, Single and Single Again, invites all singles to join us at 3 p.m. on Saturday, November 9th, at St. Stephen's Cathlic Church, 4601 Neely Ave.

The speaker will be the Rev. Jim Bridges of St. Stephen's. His address will be entitled "The Church After Vatican II." Mass at 5 p.m., dinner at Furr's Cafeteria, and a fun evening is planned.

Please call 689-4639 or 694-5064 if you have any questions.

Celebration set

The Lutheran Church of the Risen Lord will host a celebration of the naming of The Rev. James Otterness as Pastor Emeritus.

The celebration will take place at the Lutheran Church of the Risen Lord, 1603 N. Grandview Ave, Odessa, at 10:15 a.m. Nov. 10. The Rev. Otterness will be preaching the Gospel message.

Otterness said, "I am committed to do all that I can by the Grace of God to further the continued growth and development of Lutheran Church of the Risen Lord, Lord of Life, and Our Savior's Lutheran churches. This community is really where I have invested my life for Christ."

A catered luncheon will immediately follow the service. All are invited to share this time and fellowship with the Rev. James Otterness.

Auction planned

Ranchland Heights Baptist Church will have their annual WMU - Lottie Moon Auction Friday at the church located at 3203 South County Rd. 1211, beginning at 7 p.m.

Craft items, quilts, decorated clothing, Christmas Decorations, home-made breads, pies, cakes, cookies, candy, home canned jellies, pickles and vegetables will be auctioned. All of the money will go to the Lottie Moon Missions.

Beginning at 5:30 before the auction, the youth of the church will be serving a spaghetti dinner, which will include a tossed salad, garlic bread and dessert. All proceeds from the meal will be donated to the Lottie Moon Mission fund. The public is invited to attend.

The Rev. Robert Kepple invites the public to attend all of the church services. For a ride to any of the services you may call Ben Hart at 684-3909.

Extended services

Cotton Flat Baptist Church, 6409 S. Hwy. 349 invites the public to attend "Old Fashioned Revival Days" beginning Sunday morning, Nov. 17 and extending through Sunday evening, Nov. 24.

Services will be at 11 a.m. on both Sunday mornings and at 7 p.m. every evening. Evangelists are Bill and Vicky Murphy of Irving. They have ministered throughout the southwest. Vicky has been a special guest of the "700 Club."

A nursery will be provided during each service. The public is invited to attend.

Celebration set

The Rev. Hadley R. Edwards and members of Mackey Chapel United Methodist Church, 306 W. Clements, Odessa, are planning to celebrate the 59th anniversary of the church.

This celebration will be held Sunday at 3 p.m. at the church.

For this service, the keynote speaker will be the Rev. Ora L. Roberts, pastor of St. Paul C.M.E. Church, Midland. Theme for the celebration is "Order our Steps as We Press On."

All area churches, former members, former pastors, and others who are well-wishers are cordially invited to come and join us in this hour of worship, praise and thanksgiving.

At noon today there will be a memorial service followed with a salad luncheon at which several members will be honored for their years of service. Among these members is the oldest member, not in age but in service and continued membership.

Everyone is invited.

Dinner planned

DALLAS — A leading figure in world investing and world religion, Sir John M. Templeton, will be the keynote speaker Nov. 14 at the third annual Thanksgiving dinner here.

The dinner is sponsored by The Thanks-Giving Foundation. The dinner will be held at 7:30 p.m. at the Crescent Court Hotel. Proceeds from the dinner will support the activities and programs of thanks-Giving Square.

Templeton, who was named last year as the first president of the Center for World thanksgiving at Thanks-Giving Square, is best known for the Templeton World Fund, which he pioneered, his philosophy of gratitude in personal and business life, his work with the Templeton Prize and his involvement in many religious institutions, including Princeton Theological Seminary.

Born in Winchester, Tenn., in 1912, Templeton received a bachelor's degree from Yale and was a Rhodes Scholar at Oxford. He has been a resident of the Bahamas for many years.

For the dinner, benefactor tables of 10 may be purchased for $2,000 and patron tables of 10 may be purchased for $1,000. Individual tickets may be purchased for $100 or $200.

Co-chairing the event, which is sponsored by The Dallas Morning News, are John and Bonnie Strauss. For reservations or more information call Thanks-Giving Square, 1-214-969-1977.

Class to begin

The Inquirers Class at First Presbyterian Church begins Sunday and will continue Sundays in November during the 9:45 a.m. Sunday School hour.

The class, which is for visitors and new members, is taught by the Rev. Dr. Jerry Hilton and selected FPC elders. The course is an introduction to First Presbyterian and Presbyterian theology and polity.

Study series set

The Downtown Bible Study has announced a new study series on Tuesdays.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 9, 1996

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: A move to another city or state could mean a higher salary or larger home. Next month will bring a gift that you prize above anything else you own. Contacting someone you have long admired gets 1997 off to a flying start. An individual you meet by chance becomes a lifelong friend. Affluent people note your efforts and offer assistance. A research breakthrough is likely. Those in science or medicine will be honored for a remarkable achievement.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DAY: astronomer Carl Sagan, folk singer Mary Travers, St. Louis Cardinals manager Whitey Herzog, bodybuilder Lou Ferrigno.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Be patient but firm with an emotional teen-ager. Although you can and should compromise on some issues, basic rules must be followed. A romantic partner is thinking about settling down.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Stay ahead of the game by taking care of paperwork early in the day. Someone may decide to exit your life. Instead of mourning what cannot be, look around.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20):Postpone making a far-reaching decision until more data is available. Others are relying on your good judgment. Check your insurance coverage to see if it is adequate.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Do exactly what you want today. Trust your first impression of someone who comes to you with a financial project. You need to get agreements in writing.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A good day to shop for clothes or major appliances. Refuse to let others take you for granted. Speak up if you need assistance with a tiring task. Romance thrives on acts of generosity.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Welcome a heart-to-heart talk with your partner or mate. You need to investigate stock tips before investing. A neighbor or relative may seek your help with a household project.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You have been lucky in love. A friend may want to accompany you on a business trip. Your instincts serve you well. A promotion hinges on your ability to make wise decisions.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A difficult domestic situation requires tact and compromise. Be prepared to go more than halfway to meet your spouse or partner. You both need to lay your cards on the table.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A good day to spend money on health-related items. If evaluating your diet, consult a nutritionist before making drastic changes. Public recognition comes through community work.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Emotional responses can be misleading. If you must deal with people who have an ax to grind, be diplomatic. Your credit rating is a valuable asset.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Family members may not know what they want to do today. Give them a couple of attractive options, then let the majority decide. Friends want to please you.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Recent events have put you in a more optimistic frame of mind. Love is uncertain, but exciting. Two heads are better than one when making important domestic decisions.

MacLaine returns to Texas for premiere of sequel to 'Terms of Endearment'

DALLAS — Oscar winner Shirley MacLaine returns to Houston next month to attend the Texas premiere of "The Evening Star," the sequel to "Terms of Endearment."

Shirley MacLaine stars in sequel to "Terms of Endearment."

It's been 13 years since MacLaine played the domineering Aurora Greenway in "Terms of Endearment," which won five Academy Awards, including best picture and best supporting actor, for Jack Nicholson.

In the sequel, Aurora contends with her unruly grandchildren, one of whom is played by Juliette Lewis. Nicholson returns in a cameo.

Both movies, based on novels by Larry McMurtry, were shot in Houston.

The premiere will be held Dec. 5.

ROME — Ex-porn star Ilona "Cicciolina" Staller gets to keep her 4-year-old son.

Italy's highest appeals court Friday rejected a bid by her ex-husband, pop artist Jeffrey Koons, who sought to enforce a New York judge's ruling that Staller turn over the boy.

Staller's lawyer, Rossella Di Tullio, said the court upheld a 1995 decision awarding Staller custody of Ludwig Maximilian.

Koons and Staller — who also served a term in Parliament — married in 1991. They met when Koons hired her to pose in sexually explicit photos, paintings and sculptures.

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Violinist and conductor Yehudi Menuhin cut short a visit to South Africa because his 100-year-old mother is ill.

Menuhin will miss conducting four concerts, including one at a church in the black township of Soweto, as part of his 80th Birthday Celebration Tour.

ST. JOHN'S, Newfoundland — Miss Canada International pleaded innocent Friday to punching another woman in the face.

Danielle House was given a trial date of March 10.

The 20-year-old nursing student was charged after a fight at a Memorial University bar Oct. 18. Police said the other woman, who suffered a chipped tooth and other injuries, was with House's former boyfriend.

The charges disqualified House from an international competition in Jamaica.

Martha Stewart renews permit to tape program at home.

A zoning board voted 5-2 to renew her permit to tape her cable program at her estate, even though she admitted breaking the rule against taping on weekends and at night.

The improper taping was done Sunday night because of a scheduling conflict with a special guest: Miss Piggy.

NEW YORK — David Letterman may have to explain all his jokes about Bob Dole's age when the former presidential candidate appears on his show.

Dole, whose wife, Elizabeth, appeared on the "Late Show with David Letterman" last month, appears tonight, along with broadcaster Ted Koppel and singer Mary Chapin Carpenter.

It will be Dole's first major TV appearance since President Clinton beat him in the election.

No word if Dole will follow his wife's lead and present his own version of Letterman's Top 10 list.

NEW YORK — Steve Howe, the trouble-plagued former major league pitcher, pleaded guilty to gun possession and was sentenced to three years' probation and 150 hours of community service.

Howe, 38, was arrested June 24 at Kennedy Airport when a loaded .357 Magnum was found inside his suitcase. He pleaded guilty Thursday and returned to his Montana home.

The arrest came two days after the New York Yankees dropped him. Howe was National League rookie of the year in 1980 but was suspended from baseball seven times for drug-related problems.

District Attorney Richard Brown said Howe's community service will include reaching out to people with alcohol and drug problems.

Republicans may be missing golden opportunity

■ News analysis

WASHINGTON — The Republican Party's increasingly Southern power base could be at risk if it fails to incorporate Southern blacks.

That was the stern warning this week from Milton Bins, a member of the Dole-Kemp '96 Task Force on Education, Job Training and Outplacement.

Following Tuesday's election — where 8 out of 10 blacks voted to reelect President Bill Clinton — Bins said "the (Republican) Party will wither on the vine unless it energizes the recruitment of blacks."

"We have to go after it — especially in the South," where more Republicans are coming from, he said, speaking to a group of conservative black leaders and political analysts who met to discuss the 1996 black electorate.

Although the GOP retained it's majority in both chambers of Congress, their margin narrowed in the all-important House of Representatives and the solid Democratic black vote could hurt them more in each election, Bins said.

"Five senate races could have tilted the other way," Bins said. "Republicans barely held on to those seats and the Party is approaching a limit" to which they can no longer afford to ignore black voters.

But some experts say Republicans won't reach out for the minority vote in fear of losing their traditional conservative white constituency — particularly in the South where racism and politics are often intermingled.

While the GOP suffered substantial losses in the Midwest, Northeast and the West Coast, they picked up 10 additional House and Senate seats in Southern states.

But Bins warns that if the GOP continues to alienate black voters, their new-found southern power will also diminish.

No one can deny the strong influence of black voters in this election, said David Bositis (CQ), a senior analyst at the Joint Center for Political and Economic Studies, a think tank that focuses on black issues and politics.

For example, he said, Rep. Robert Torricelli (CQ), D-N.J., who will return as a senator, and Reps. Cynthia McKinney, D-Ga., Martin Frost, D-Texas, Corrine Brown, D-Fla., and "several other Democrats would not be returning to Congress without it."

And as the Republican Party in Congress takes on more of a Southern flavor, Bositis agreed that catering to black voters there could be the key to maintaining future power.

Many traditional swing voters, such as Roman Catholics and Jews, don't relate to Southern culture, he said. "This is to some degree a problem for the Republicans" who are led by conservative southerners such as House Speaker Newt Gingrich of Georgia and Senate Majority leader Trent Lott of Mississippi.

Meanwhile, about one-half of black voters live in Southern states and could be much easier to incorporate, Bositis said.

"This provides a golden opportunity for our party," said Bins, who is chairman of the Council of 100, a national network of African-American Republicans.

"Poll after poll shows that the black middle class shares Republican values and ideas and are sick and tired of being taken for granted by the Democrats," he said.

But so far, the GOP has failed to take advantage of their potential to incorporate southern blacks.

"We had a disconnect with a vast population of voters out there," said Bins, speaking about the GOP presidential campaign.

He added that there were "almost zero dollars allocated to the pursuit.

Arms-control director wants ban on chemical weapons ratified

WASHINGTON (AP) — Winning Senate ratification of a U.N. treaty banning chemical weapons will get immediate priority in President Clinton's second term, the U.S. arms-control director said Friday.

"I don't doubt there will be opposition," John D. Holum said. "But there is no longer any reason to make this a political argument."

Holum said the United States must approve the treaty by April to play a leading role in implementing the ban on development, production, stockpiling and transfer of chemical weapons.

Clinton has criticized the Senate for not ratifying the treaty this year. Democrats blame Bob Dole, the former Senate Republican leader, for delays in taking it up. Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., who heads the Foreign Relations Committee, was a tough opponent.

Hungary two weeks ago ratified the treaty, the required 65th nation to start the clock ticking for the ban to take effect 180 days after Hungary's approval.

Neither the United States nor Russia, both of whom signed the treaty, has ratified it.

Holum acknowledged some small American chemical companies are concerned with provisions for international inspection. He said the administration would try to persuade them their operations would be protected.

Even without ratifying the treaty, the United States has embarked on a $12 billion plan to disarm 31,000 tons of mustard and nerve gas. At the same time, the United States is helping Russia to destroy its 40,000 tons of chemical weapons.

At a news conference, Holum also said the United States was making headway in persuading China to cancel the proposed sale of a nuclear facility to Iran and to curb technology deals to countries with questionable nuclear policies.

Iran has said it wants the facility to make fuel rods for its civilian nuclear program and that as a subscriber to the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty, it is open to international inspection.

But Holum said Iran is using the treaty as a cover to develop nuclear weapons, and that no nation — and Russia provides more help than China — should help Tehran with advanced technology.

Earlier this year, China notified the International Atomic Energy Agency that it plans to go ahead with the plant sale.

However, Holum, reporting on a series of high-level U.S. talks with Chinese officials, said: "I think we are making progress, but we are not there yet."

Clinton's election coattails were shorter than expected

■ News analysis

WASHINGTON — President Clinton and Vice President Al Gore were so confident of victory in the final days before the election that they tossed aside their own campaign plans to barnstorm for Democratic candidates for Congress around the nation.

But the election results showed that their political coattails were no longer than T-shirts, leaving Congress in the hands of the GOP for two consecutive elections for the first time since 1930.

Clinton and Gore campaigned for at least 89 Democrats seeking House seats and 20 Democrats seeking Senate seats, according to statistics compiled by the Clinton-Gore campaign.

But the Democrats picked up only six seats in the House, with three close races in California and Oregon still being counted. Republicans retained control of the House with at least 225 seats to the Democrats' 204 seats.

Republicans gained two seats in the Senate and now enjoy a 55-45 majority in the Senate.

Clinton and Gore also campaigned unsuccessfully against the California Civil Rights Initiative — an amendment to the California Constitution to prohibit preferences based on "race, sex, color, ethnicity or national origin" for employment by cities, counties, public schools and public colleges.

The president told a news conference last week that he may have failed to get more than 49 percent of the popular vote because he decided to spend the final days of the campaign in smaller states on behalf of Democratic congressional candidates — rather than campaign in more populous states.

"It's the right thing to do," he said.

Larry Sabato, a political scientist at the University of Virginia, likens the results of the Clinton-Gore campaigning to the modest gains that the White House party scored in other recent re-elections.

President Richard Nixon and Vice President Spiro Agnew captured 61 percent of the popular vote and rolled up a 49-state landslide in 1972. But their Republican comrades in Congress gained only 12 seats in the House — far short of taking control. Democrats picked up two Senate seats that year to retain control of that body.

In 1984, when President Ronald Reagan and Vice President George Bush won 60 percent of the popular vote and achieved another 49-state landslide, the GOP picked up 16 seats in the House — still short of gaining control from the Democrats.

In the Senate, the Democrats gained one seat that year but the GOP retained control.

"What this tells me is that re-elected presidents tend not to have very long coattails," Sabato says. "Bill Clinton's coattails were shorter than most."

San Angelo	7

SAN ANGELO — Sometimes you can turn ugly into bad and bad into good. Just ask Clint Eastwood. Shoot, just ask Midland Lee's football Rebels.

Lee bombed San Angelo's Bobcats 35-7 here Friday night in a game that was both bad and ugly with good results. It isn't a verdict that Lee will crow about, but it did help the team finish regular season play undefeated and untied for only the second time in school history, 1987 being the other.

And now it's on to the state playoffs where the No. 4 state-ranked Rebels will take on the third-seeded Lubbock Monterey Plainsmen.

"We're going to play in (Lubbock's) Jones Stadium if we can get it," Lee coach John Parchman said. "They take the first one to reserve it."

Parchman's wish was granted Lee will play Monterey Friday night at 7:30 p.m in Lubbock's Jones Stadium.

As far as the regular season ending victory, Parchman said, "We were not very crisp. We were fortunate to win the game. We came out flat, and maybe that's human nature after (beating Odessa Permian) last week. Either way, it's my fault."

Lee made it rather easy work for the Rebels to put the finishing touches on a perfect regular season. And they did it with defense again with the Pertile brothers, Cory and Fred, doing major damage along with Michael Hall. Antwan Alexander stopped the Bobcats' only first half threat with an interception of a Julio Guerrero pass in the end zone.

San Angelo finally did get into the end zone with a nice third quarter drive that

ODESSA PERMIAN 17, ABILENE HIGH 3

ODESSA — Randy Mayes' Panther club got the momentum change of all changes to defeat the Eagles 17-3 Friday night at Ratliff Stadium, and in the process, break the string of not making the playoffs in a year ending in '6'.

ABILENE COOPER 42, ODESSA HIGH 28

ABILENE — The Abilene Cooper football team nailed down the second place spot in District 4-5A Friday with a 42-28 thumping of Odessa High in Shotwell Stadium.

Cooper got 320 yards in total offense, including three touchdown passes from quarterback Michael Anderson. Dominic Rhodes added a 70-yard touchdown scamper.

1996-97 GIRLS' HIGH SCHOOL BASKETBALL PREVIEW

4-5A girls court now in session

Lady Dawgs out to defend their four straight district championships

By Lee Passmore
Sports Writer

For the last four seasons, the Midland High girls basketball team has been the immovable object of District 4-5A. Try as they might, foes of the Lady Dawgs have tried to move them from the top of the heap, but MHS wouldn't budge.

Along with four straight district titles won in that period, Midland High also had four straight district players of the year, with Amy Alcala winning three straight years (sharing it with teammate Julie Chancellor one season) and Ogonna Merritt keeping the string alive last season. And the Lady Dawgs are still undefeated in their last 20 district games.

This season, though, the Lady Dawgs look about as vulnerable as they have been during the seven-year tenure of coach Jim Raughton. There are no Alcalas or Merritts returning to help carry the team to another title. That might not be so bad if it weren't for the fact that MHS lost not only Merritt, but its four other senior starters as well.

But Raughton's not the type to shed tears over what's lost, and the Lady Dawgs might not be rebuilding but reloading. The good news is that Midland High does return eight players, including seven seniors.

"We have eight kids returning but at the same time I'm not sure about our experience," Raughton said. "The kids we carried last year I wasn't afraid to put on the floor. All those kids who came off the bench, their roles have got to change."

That means all eight players and perhaps a couple of others will have to step out of the shadows and into the spotlight. Raughton did make it a point last season to use his bench effectively, and those players contributed to the Lady Dawgs en route to a 25-5 record and a spot in the Region I quarterfinals.

Who plays what roles, though, hasn't been entirely determined. While Raughton has a pretty good idea about his starting lineup, nothing has been written in stone.

"In the past I pretty much had a set starting lineup and stayed with it, but this year there's no way it's as clear cut as it's been in the past," Raughton said. "Every player we have is going to add something to our team."

Without a true "star" returning, nobody is more aware of that than the players.

"There's no certain person on the team to lead us," said senior Talitha Belcher, who figures to form a strong backcourt tandem with junior Jodie Mitchell. "Everybody is going to have to step up."

Above everything, Raughton wants his players to understand what it takes to win every ball game. Part of his intensity has been running a full court press most of the game, something which he doesn't plan on changing this season.

"If we can't pressure the basketball, our chances of winning are less," said Raughton, who plans on running a transition game as much as possible.

The Midland High Lady Dawgs come into the 1996-97 season having lost all five starters from its fourth straight District 4-5A championship team, but returners like Jodie Mitchell (left) and Kim Paschall will try and keep the successful program at the top of the league standings.

Lady Rebels ready to make the jump to District 4-5A contender this year

By Lee Passmore
Sports Writer

Brian Adamcik/Reporter -Telegram

Midland Lee will be counting on a seasoned group of seniors this season, including returning starters Nisha Washington (left) and Jaime Rhoads.

LEE

The brass ring is there for the Midland Lee girls basketball team to grab this season. All the Lady Rebels have to do is reach for it.

With eight players coming back from last season's team, including four starters, a big season is a distinct possibility for Lee, which finished fourth in District 4-5A last season. The Lady Rebels count among their returners arguably the district's best player, Jamie Rhoads, and have suitable depth at most spots on the floor.

"We're real excited about the group of kids we've got coming back and the kids are real excited too," said Lee coach Elise Kail.

Such optimism, though, is tempered slightly by the memories of last season, when the team had comparable talent yet fell short of a playoff spot, finishing 15-13 overall and 6-6 in the district. What the team may have had in talent it might have lacked in focus, at least as far as expending effort the entire game.

"They're going to have to go out and play hard every single game, which was something we weren't always able to do," said Kail of last year's squad. "We'd play hard but not always for four quarters.

"Each kid is going to have to be emotionally ready for each ball game. We've got an extremely tough preseason schedule and I hope that gets us ready."

The Lady Rebels don't have much in the way of breathers between the time they open their season Tuesday at home against Sonora and when they open district play Dec. 10 at Odessa Permian. Lee will participate at tournaments in Georgetown and Levelland as well as the Byron Johnston Classic.

Such endurance tests early in the season will show whether or not the Lady Rebels will live up to their promise. Kail, who is in her sixth year at Lee, says this year's team is her deepest so far.

"I feel we can go way down the bench and not feel a negative effect," Kail said. "I think my drop-off is when we go to JV."

Where the foundation looks to be set is unquestionably with Rhoads, a senior who was rated No. 88 in the state by Texas Hoops magazine and was an all-district player last season. Ostensibly a forward, Rhoads averaged 15.4 points a game last season and led the Lady Rebels in every statistical category except three-point shooting.

"The kids look up to her," Kail said. "They respect her. Jamie as a person is just as important as a player."

Rhoads, who has grown an inch-and-a-half since last season to five feet, 10 inches, figures to take on a larger leadership role this season, her third on the varsity. With the experience the Lady Rebels have coming back, Rhoads knows now is the time for the team.

"We're a lot older," Rhoads said. "We're going to have 9-10 seniors on this year's squad. We have a lot of talent this year and we've been working really well together."

Midland College pulls off Classic sweep

MIDLAND COLLEGE

The Midland College men and women basketball teams won in two different fashions to open the 1996 Midland College Classic at Chaparral Center Friday night.

The Lady Chaps stumbled past Murray State of Oklahoma 84-48, while the Chaps held off the determined Angelina College Roadrunners 88-83.

While both teams are of the same feather, it was the Chaps who outran the Roadrunners to the final buzzer.

With the game tied at 44-44 at intermission, Midland used a 13-0 run to start the second half and then had to hold off the Roadrunners trapping defense that nearly smothered the Chaps into defeat.

Because Midland was unable to handle the pressure defense by Angelina, the Roadrunners trimmed the Chaps' 13-point lead t, 72-66 with just over 11 minutes left in the game.

"They (Angelina) kept the pressure on us, they confused us a bit and we played to their tempo." said Chaps coach Pat Rafferty.

Rafferty added that when Midland was able to dictate the tempo, the Roadrunners were caught back on their heels.

"During the first six to eight minutes of the second half, we played very, very good, we executed and pounded the ball inside," he said.

The Lady Chaps, however, didn't execute so well in their lopsided win over Murray State. Had the Lady Aggies shot better and not committed 10

NHL ices expansion thoughts

Associated Press

NHL Notes

NEW YORK — The NHL is slowing down its expansion agenda, saying that the number of groups seeking franchises is more than it expected.

The Board of Governors will not entertain presentations from franchise hopefuls at a meeting Thursday as planned, because too many groups applied to be there, according to spokesman Arthur Pincus.

As a result, the Board probably will not reach any decisions on expansion at its meeting in Phoenix next month.

It was believed the league could add two teams at the Dec. 12-13 session, but commissioner Gary Bettman does not think it's likely.

"I just don't think we'll be ready in Phoenix," Bettman said. "We're not in a rush. We have plenty of time to do things right, so we think it's a good idea to sl[illegible] up [illegible] process."

Bettman said 11 applications from nine cities had been received and he did not think there was enough time to review that many and select the best candidates at one meeting.

Cities seeking NHL franchises include Hamilton, Ontario; Atlanta; Houston and Nashville, Tenn. Atlanta and Houston are considered the frontrunners.

Stars' moves

DALLAS — Forward Bill Huard, idle for the past month with a separated shoulder, has been activated and cleared for immediate play, the Dallas Stars said Friday.

To make room for Huard on the roster, the Stars assigned forward Marc Labe[illegible] to the [illegible] Wings of the International League.

Huard, 29, suffered the injury during an Oct. 10 game in New York against the Rangers. In three games with Dallas, he has one assist with seven penalty minutes.

Labelle, 26, had been held scoreless while accumulating 29 penalty minutes in six games since the Stars recalled him from Michigan Oct. 23.

■ Kim Paschall, 5-6, Sr., f: Role player last year who is expected to start and provide outside scoring punch. "One of the finest shooters I have ever coached," Raughton said. "Great touch on the ball. Very deceptive on the defensive end of the floor with her anticipation and quickness."

■ Kristi Cornelius, 5-6, Sr., f-c: A contender for playing time at center or forward who was a reserve last season. "As good an athlete as we can put on the floor," Raughton said. "Will have to be able to play both inside and outside."

■ Deborah Landreth, 5-10, Sr., c: The team's tallest returning player who is the leading candidate to start at center. "She can turn and face the basket and is very active in the pivot," Raughton said. She doesn't stand around on offensive end. She's a smart player."

■ Jimeca Sims, 5-8, Sr., c: Another contender for playing time in the post, primarily a reserve last year. "Her game has improved a bunch. She's always been a good athlete and now her work habits are a lot better."

■ Jamie Nicholson, 5-8, Sr., f: Could end up starting at forward after coming off bench last season. "Jamie has great work habits and a great attitude," Raughton said. "She's playing with a lot more confidence in handling the basketball."

■ Shelly Ray, 5-5, Sr., g: Didn't see lots of game time last season but should have a chance to play more this season. "She may be as good a defensive player as we have," Raughton said. "If you go against Shelly you better take care of the basketball."

■ Talitha Belcher, 5-4, Sr., g: Played extensively as a reserve last year, is expected to do the same in a starting backcourt role now. "Good athlete who played a big role for us last year. Her experience and leadership quality will be needed for us to have another good year."

■ Jodie Mitchell, 5-4, Jr., g: Will take over at point guard after spelling District Player of the Year Ogonna Merritt as a sophomore. "Always kept her head no matter what the situation," Raughton said. "Jodie is going to stay in control and is a take charge type of player."

■ Tarhonda Belcher, 5-4, Jr. g: A standout on junior varsity last season who should have prominent reserve role this season. "Tarhonda is a player who only knows one speed and that is all out," Raughton said. "When you toss it up you'd better be ready because she will be."

■ Blanca Lane, 5-7, Jr., f: Also in her first season on the varsity, will provide a breather for starters up front. "One of the hardest workers I have ever been associated with," Raughton said. "Good size with her quickness makes her very versatile and dangerous."

■ Kelly Scharbauer, 5-7, Jr., f-g: One of several players from the junior varsity squad on team this season with role yet to be determined. "Kelly is very coachable and is not afraid of hard work to get better and make the team better."

■ Kyleigh Griffin, 5-10, Jr., c: Had an outstanding year on junior varsity and could be a valuable reserve in the post. "A strong player who is not afraid of the contact that takes place in the pivot," Raughton said. "Will be relied on heavily to control the glass on both ends of the floor this season."

■ Misty Browning, 5-5, Jr., g: Might have to fight for playing time in the backcourt in her first varsity season. "Misty is capable of playing either the point guard or the off guard."

■ Jamelyn Swinney, 5-9, So., f: Could contend for playing time up front in reserve role. "Good size and ability to use it wisely," Raughton said. "Jamelyn has the ability to take the ball to the hole and finish."

■ Morgan Kelley, 5-11, So., c: Has ideal size for a post player, but may have to wait her turn to play. "Morgan is a very strong rebounder with the ability to challenge anyone anywhere around the goal," Raughton said. "She has a great attitude and work ethic."

■ Heidi Lange, 5-8, So., g-f: Her athletic ability could compensate for inexperience and could result in a lot of minutes. "A true competitor who's very strong," Raughton said. "We're going to find a place for her."

■ Clarisse Leonard, 5-8, So., f: Still recovering from a torn anterior cruciate ligament, but could still make the varsity. "She has the opportunity to do some good things for us.

DAWGS: Going for fifth straight title

(From 1C)

That puts more emphasis on Belcher and Mitchell to perform, since they will be called on to harass the opposing guards bringing the ball up the court. Mitchell in particular has a lot to live up to, since she's taking over Merritt's starting point guard job.

"It puts a lot of pressure on me but I won't let it get to me," Mitchell said. "I've got to step up and take charge. I'm starting to get used to doing the same things (Merritt) did."

While the backcourt brings an emphasis on quickness, the Lady Dawgs lack a truly dominant player up front. Kim Paschall, the team's top outside shooter, will start at one forward, but the other two spots appear open. Deborah Landreth and Jimeca Sims should both see a lot of time at center.

The other forward position figures to include either Kristy Cornelius or Jamie Nicholson, with Cornelius also potentially playing in the post. Shelly Ray will also compete for time at forward.

What all those above mentioned players have in common is that they are seniors. Paschall, who never started as a junior, thinks it's important to have seniors on the floor whenever possible.

"Everybody has to adapt to a different role with all the seniors gone from last year," Paschall said. "The juniors and sophomores need someone to look up to."

Raughton knows it is asking a lot for all of this year's seniors to approach things differently from last season.

"Those juniors didn't have to be leaders so to speak," Raughton said.

It doesn't appear entering this season that Midland High is an obvious district front runner. Raughton thinks that the Lady Dawgs could be in contention, but believes that Midland Lee has the best overall returning talent in the district.

San Angelo Central and Odessa High are two other teams Raughton thinks will be in contention for the three playoff spots. Overall, Raughton thinks the league may be a little stronger than in years past.

'I can look around the district and there are some strong, strong teams, but in the same sense I'm not going to sell these kids short. When we play every game we plan on winning. I don't care who we're playing.'

— Jim Raughton, Midland High girls coach

"I can look around the district and there are some strong, strong teams, but in the same sense I'm not going to sell these kids short," Raughton said. "When we play every game we plan on winning. I don't care who we're playing."

It could take some time for MHS to find its identity and gel as a unit. It's uncertain, for instance, how strong Belcher will be at the start of the season since she suffered a knee injury just before the volleyball playoffs. The first test which counts for the Lady Dawgs comes Monday night when they host Lubbock Coronado.

Raughton, for one, is confident that his team will be able to answer the bell each time out.

"This is a team that can get better as the season goes along," he said. "I really believe that."

Then there's the matter of tradition. Four straight league titles are as close as you can get in sports to a dynasty these days, and that success can rest on the head like a thorny crown.

As imposing as that might be, though, the Lady Dawgs aren't ready to concede it to the next pretender to the throne.

"It's nervewracking," said Paschall, one of those used to the pressure of a championship season. "We want to win five straight district championships. We don't want to be the ones to break that tradition."

■ Kendra Albus, 5-3, Sr., g: Will start at point guard after playing nine games for the varsity last season. "Her biggest asset is her speed," Kail said. "If there's a loose ball she's going for it. She's not necessarily a scorer but she does everything else well."

■ Verena Behrmann, 5-8, Sr., f: Foreign exchange student from Germany who will most likely see limited duty. "She's smart and real gutsy. She's going to have to be able to adapt to American basketball."

■ Roxanne Pylant, 5-5, Sr., g: A backup last season who should help provide offense off the bench this season. "She loves to shoot the ball," Kail said. "She's not afraid to drive to the basket and she's good defensively."

■ Sarah Buchanan, 5-7, Jr., wing: Spent last season on the junior varsity, which won the district and will swing between guard and forward off the bench. "She's got amazing court vision and she's a beautiful passer," Kail said. "She knows basketball very well."

■ Sarah Luehring, 5-10, Sr., f: Another junior varsity standout last season, will fill in up front and is praised by Kail for her work ethic. "She's an excellent defensive player with a wide wing span. She gets a lot of steals."

■ LaSaundra Christian, 5-6, Sr., g: Expected to contribute off the bench at guard or forward after last year on the junior varsity. "She likes to take the ball to the hoop every chance she can get," Kail said. "Athletically she's so much improved over last season."

■ Jennifer Aman, 5-8, Jr., f: A key reserve last season who played 22 games after call-up from junior varsity, could crack starting lineup. "She's a great visual player and keys in on opponents' weaknesses real well," Kail said. "She's got great hands."

■ Jamie Rhoads, 5-10, Sr., f: One of district's top returning players, her all-around ability will keep Lady Rebels competitive. "She's a great anticipator," Kail said. "Her court awareness is outstanding. Her one-on-one ability allows her to succeed."

■ LaToya Strambler, 5-9, Sr., f: Called up from junior varsity last season and appeared in 20 games, will see a lot of minutes this season. "Her vertical leap and quickness are a big asset to the team," Kail said. "She's an awesome defensive player."

■ Maurion Strambler, 5-7, So., wing: Could make the squad as a sophomore, but also could be sent to junior varsity if she sees limited playing time early. "I know she's athletic. She's got to be able to prove she can compete."

■ Ritha Belizaire, 5-9, Jr., f-g: A raw talent who was the leading scorer for the junior varsity last season, will start in a swing position. "She's a fabulous athlete," Kail said. "She can play inside or outside. She's a great offside rebounder."

■ Tamika Thurman, 5-10, Jr., c: Spot starter last season who should rotate often in the post. "She was real green last year but she's gained lots of experience," Kail said. "She's going to get stronger as the season goes along."

■ Angie Seibold, 5-10, Sr., c: Yet another option of Lee's three-way post rotation who will provide muscle as a starter or reserve. "Angie's probably one of our best defensive players," Kail said. "Her arm span is scary. If she wants to she can dominate the boards."

■ Nisha Washington, 5-9, Sr., c: Hurt ankle last season, but if healthy will be one of three post contributors. "She's a very tenacious player," Kail said. "She doesn't let anything get past her if she can help it."

LEE: Older team ready to compete

(From 1C)

Unlike some top players on other teams, Rhoads is a highly team-oriented player, maybe a little too much so at times for her coach's liking.

Rhoads has often preferred to try to get other players involved in the offense instead of taking all the shots herself.

Scoring more might become a priority for Rhoads since last year's second-leading scorer Clare Wright has graduated.

To say the least, Rhoads will be counted on to do a lot for the Lady Rebels this season.

"I don't see it as a problem because that's the type of player Jamie is," Kail said. "She's very unselfish and I sometimes have to get on her to shoot more."

Although getting the ball to other players will be a key, Rhoads might be helping the team more by shooting herself.

"We need leaders and scorers and if I'm not shooting good I should get it to them," Rhoads said. "(Kail) said she'd sit me down if I didn't shoot more."

There are others to turn to regardless of how well Rhoads is shooting. Rhoads will be the focal point of a strong and experienced front line. The Lady Rebels will rotate three players in the post among returners Angie Seibold, Nisha Washington and Tamika Thurman.

If Rhoads enjoys a good night shooting, that will allow the trio to concentrate on defense and rebounding, the latter area of which is a concern to Kail.

"Going back and watching tape from last year upset me," Kail said. "We should have done a better job on the boards."

The 5-10 senior Seibold should start at one forward while senior Washington and junior Thurman will divide time in the post. Washington was hampered by an ankle injury last season which kept her on the bench more than she wanted to be.

She is one player who believes that her playing time will remain significant whether she starts or not.

"We have such talent on this team that the starting lineup won't always stay the same," Washington said. "I don't think it matters who starts. (Post) is not my favorite position but I can live with it."

There won't be quite as much experience in the backcourt. Kendra Albus will start at point guard after having only played just nine varsity games last season. She was called up to the varsity during district play, and ended the season on the varsity roster

Junior Ritha Belizaire, the leading scorer for the junior varsity last season, will start at an off-guard wing spot and Kail is enthusiastic about her athletic ability.

Kail likes the odds of her team making the playoffs, but she won't go out on a limb and predict a District 4-5A championship. She respects the tradition of Midland High's four straight district championships and also thinks Odessa High could grab a playoff spot.

Abilene High brings in a new coach, Pat Mouser, who built a 2A powerhouse at Abernathy. San Angelo Central has one of the district's best athletes in Patrina Pearson.

The only team Kail can do anything about is her own, and she likes what she sees. Kail and some of the returning seniors weren't happy about the way things ended last season, falling just short of playoff herth.

And for Rhoads, the most veteran of the Lee players who played on a playoff team as the district's newcomer of the year in 1995, the choice of how to end the season is simple.

"I've been to the playoffs and I haven't been to the playoffs so I really want to go back," she said.

Martin into Stockholm semifinals

Associated Press

STOCKHOLM, Sweden — Second-seeded Todd Martin and Swedish wild-card entry Magnus Norman won their matches in straight sets Friday to set up a semifinal meeting in the Stockholm Open.

Martin, who won the Sydney outdoor tournament in January for his only ATP singles title this year, whipped fellow American Richey Reneberg 6-2, 6-2 on the medium-fast Plexipave surface at the Royal Tennis Hall.

It was Martin's first straight-set win during the week. He had been extended in matches against countryman Jib Grabb and Jason Stoltenberg of Australia.

Martin, ranked 12th in the world, is still hoping for a berth in the ATP Tour World Championships later this month at Hannover, Germany. He could reach No. 9, a spot that would allow him to be an alternate in case another player withdraws.

Norman, one of three Swedish wild-card entries to reach the quarterfinals here, turned in another spirited performance. He ousted Vince Spadea of the United States 6-3, 7-6 (9-7).

Thomas Johansson, 21, another wild card from Sweden, edged Canadian-born Greg Rusedski of Britain 7-6 (7-5), 3-6, 7-6 (8-6) after trailing 2-5 in the decisive set. He will face defending champion Thomas Enqvist in an all-Swedish semifinal Saturday.

Enqvist, who won the Paris Open last week, trounced the third Swedish wild-card entry, Patrik Fredriksson, 6-2, 6-0 for his eighth consecutive straight-set win on the ATP Tour.

Rusedski, who has the biggest serve on the tour and fired 30 aces past the Swede, held to love to lead 5-2 in the decisive set.

But Johansson broke back after four superb service returns and then held at love as Rusedski lost eight consecutive points. Both players then held their serve, forcing the tiebreak.

Johansson fell behind 1-3 in the tiebreak, but clawed back and earned a match point when Rusedski double-faulted to trail 7-6. The Briton then returned Johansson's serve wide to end the match.

Bank Of West Classic

OAKLAND, Calif. — Lindsay Davenport's chance for another shot at Martina Hingis or Monica Seles will have to wait.

Unable to overcome the powerful serves of Brenda Schultz-McCarthy, Davenport lost 6-2, 6-4 in the quarterfinals of the Bank of the West Classic on Friday.

A victory would have matched the sixth-ranked Davenport against No. 7 Hingis for a third straight tournament, both matches won by Hingis.

Instead it will be the Netherlands' Schultz-McCarthy, who landed eight aces against Davenport, going up against the 16-year-old Swiss phenom in the semifinals.

■ Tennis Roundup

"She hits her serves unbelievably well," Davenport said, "and she is volleying much better than she did the last time I played her."

Schultz-McCarthy last saw Davenport in a split-set loss in the 1995 Australian Open, but evened her career mark against her at 2-2 with Fridays' victory. She broke Davenport's serve early and set the tone by slamming a few of her own near 120 mph.

Schultz-McCarthy, ranked No. 12, lost to Hingis 6-1, 6-4 in this year's Australian Open. But she uncorked her fastest serve of the year, 122 mph, in that match.

If she gets past Hingis, Schultz-McCarthy will likely get a shot at co-No. 2 Seles, who is favored to beat her next two unseeded opponents.

Romania's Irina Spirlea, No. 15, defeated No. 23 Elena Likhovtseva of Russia 6-2, 6-4 to advance to the semifinals against the winner of Friday's late match between Seles and No. 34 Kimberly Po.

Hellmann's Cup

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Top-seeded Marcerlo Rios, Feliz Mantilla, Alberto Bersategui and Hernan Gumy won spots in the semifinals in the $278,750 Hellmann's Cup tennis tournament.

Chile's Rios, seeded No. 1 and the tournament's top-ranked player at No. 11 in the world, delighted a partisan crowd with a 6-3, 6-2 victory over Fernando Meligeni of Brazil.

Mantilla, of Spain, the No. 2 seed, beat Oliver Gross of Germany 6-3, 6-4.

Raiders, 'Horns battle for lead

By Mark Babineck
Associated Press

LUBBOCK — For Texas, pressure isn't traveling to favored Texas Tech on Saturday for the chance to salvage an otherwise disappointing season.

Pressure is facing Red Raiders tailback Byron Hanspard.

"How do you stop Byron Hanspard?" asked Longhorns linebacker Tyson King. "I don't know. It hasn't happened a lot this year. He's great. If we do a great job against Byron Hanspard, it will erase all the negatives people have said about this defense."

Actually, a victory by Texas (4-4, 3-2 Big 12) would do more than that — it would give the Longhorns the inside track to the league's South Division championship, their top remaining goal after enduring four losses in a five-game span. That stretch ended with a victory over Baylor last Saturday.

The Red Raiders (5-3, 4-2) can do Texas one better. If Oklahoma State beats Oklahoma earlier in the day, Tech could clinch the first Big 12 South title with a victory Saturday night.

Tech has the edge because of Hanspard, the nation's top runner at 201 yards per game. Texas foes have racked up a healthy 203-yard rushing average, 86th best in Division I-A.

Texas limited Hanspard to 109 yards last season in last season's 48-7 victory that they dominated every facet. Despite that bitter memory, the Red Raiders this week have downplayed talk of revenge — even if it obviously lies just beneath the surface.

"We're not going to overlook them," said Tech defensive end Montae Reagor, who has memories of Texas' backfield tandem of Shon Mitchell and Ricky Williams combining for 218 yards and three touchdowns in 1995. "This year, I can say they're not going to get 100 yards on us."

Actually, the Tech defense appears tough as ever despite losing its senior core last winter. It ranks among the top 30 teams in virtually every statistic and seems to improve each week.

"We want to win, but I'll tell you what — we're looking for a shutout," said Daniels, whose assignment is to pursue speedy UT quarterback James Brown.

Brown isn't worried about Tech's blustery comments.

"I don't think their defense is difficult," said Brown, who threw for 174 yards and two TDs last year. "I've never had trouble moving the ball against their defense when I've played against them."

Defending NASCAR champion Jeff Gordon climbs out of his car after qualifing Friday for Sunday's NAPA 500 at Atlanta Motor Speedway in Hampton, Ga. He was subsequently bumped off the pole by Bobby Labonte.

Labonte bumps Gordon off pole

NASCAR Winston Cup

HAMPTON, Ga. — Bobby Labonte earned his second straight pole, again elbowing the Winston Cup championship contenders out of the spotlight Friday with a record-setting lap in time trials for the season-ending NAPA 500 at Atlanta Motor Speedway.

Labonte, whose older brother, Terry, needs only to finish eighth or better in Sunday's 500-mile race to win his second series title, bumped second-place Jeff Gordon off the pole with his lap of 185.887 mph.

That put Gordon, who trails the elder Labonte by 47 points, on the outside of the all-Chevrolet front row at 185.290. He was followed by Terry Labonte at 184.559, Mark Martin at 184.528 in the fastest Ford, and by third-place Dale Jarrett, who trails the leader by 99 points, at 184.131.

Bobby Labonte, who won the pole two weeks ago at Phoenix International Raceway, Friday broke the record of 185.830 set on the then newly repaved 1.522-mile Atlanta oval in November 1994. It came in dramatic fashion as Labonte was the 47th of 48 drivers to make qualifying attempts.

Gordon, the defending series champion, said, "I knew it could be beat. It's hard to be disappointed in a lap like that, but I did give up a little in (turns) one and two. I might have tried to overdrive it."

"We are putting the pressure on ourselves," Gordon added. "We're going to have to live up to the pressure now. The only way we can win the championship is to do the best we can, and that means ... lead laps and, hopefully, win the race."

It was Labonte's fourth pole of the season — Gordon, with five, is the only driver with more — and the seventh of his career.

Asked if he was concerned about starting the race in the midst of the championship contenders, Labonte, who hasn't won a race since August 1995 at Michigan, said, "It's something we're going to put out of our mind as soon as we leave here."

"We're trying to win a race," he added. "We haven't won one all year and that's all we're concerned with right now. I hope Terry wins the championship. He's in a good position to do it. But I have my own job to take care of."

Terry Labonte, who will again race with a cast protecting the broken index finger on his left hand, said, "It hurt a little more than I thought, but that was a good run for us. The car felt good."

"We did what we had to today," he said. "Now I've just got to try to get my hand better for Sunday. We can do some stuff to it Sunday to kill the pain if we need to."

Labonte finished third at Phoenix after breaking the hand in practice two days earlier.

Jarrett, whose only chance to win the title is a combination of him winning and both Labonte and Gordon having problems, said, "Fourth is not bad. That shows how good a race car I have."

"Now, we've got to get out front," he said. "To have any chance, we probably have to lead the most laps and win the race. Unless (Labonte and Gordon) have trouble, what they do doesn't matter to us. We have to get out there and go."

Pressure? What pressure?

Pressure is bringing a 100- point-plus lead into the final race of a Winston Cup season and working on ways not to blow it.

Pressure isn't being 47 points behind teammate Terry Labonte. That's incentive.

Jeff Gordon can tell you how both situations work on one's psyche. He's been there, done that. Both ways.

Gordon won the Winston Cup championship last year, but it wasn't a pretty sight. He came to the NAPA 500 at Atlanta Motor Speedway leading Dale Earnhardt by more than 100 points.

Gordon's bunch almost blew it. Earnhardt won the race and Gordon finished 32nd. But Gordon won the championship by 34 points and apologized to no one.

Now, he's the pursuer.

"This is our last shot at it," Gordon said. "Sure, there's pressure. What we have to do is turn it around and put it on Terry. Win the race, lead the most laps and get as many points as we can. We know Terry is going to run well."

Gordon shakes his head at his predicament. He has won 10 races to Labonte's two, but insists he has no problem with a Winston Cup season points formula that rewards consistency.

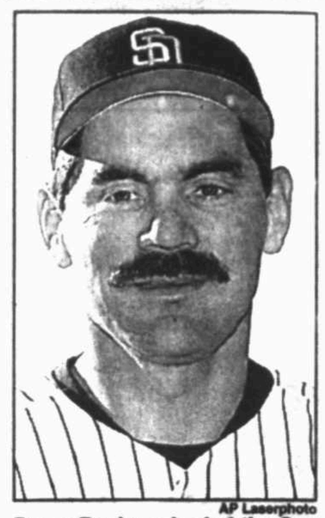

"It's the way it should be," Gordon said. "You can't go win a race and fall out of the next and expect to be a champion. The whole effort you put into it, the consistency, is what makes a championship yours."

Gordon's more immediate problem, besides beating La bonte, is beating the track. In four previous fall races, he's been 31st twice, 32nd twice and 15th, but has yet to finish on the lead lap.

That's what brought him to Atlanta Motor Speedway last week for a two-day test.

"You have to do all you can," Gordon said. "You never know when this opportunity will come again. We found that so many things are out of your control. You can have a great car, a great team and still have failures that deny you the championship.

"That's one of the beauties of the sport. There are no sure things. We won fewer races last year than this one and won the championship, and now with 10 wins, we're chasing Terry for the championship. That's what makes this sport so great."

Bruce Bochy, who led the San Diego Padres to the NL West title this past season, was named the NL Manager of the Year Friday.

AP names Bochy best NL skipper

Associated Press

NEW YORK — The San Diego Padres were back in the playoffs for the first time in 12 seasons, which helped Bruce Bochy win the NL Manager of the Year in just his second season.

"We had a lot of fun this year," Bochy said Friday. "No question we were disappointed we didn't take it a little further, but we feel like we accomplished a lot and I'm proud of the way the guys played this year. It's just nice, too, that the people of San Diego are talking baseball again."

Bochy, at 41 the youngest active manager in the major leagues, finished with 76 points, two more than Felipe Alou of the Montreal Expos and seven more than Tony La Russa of the St. Louis Cardinals.

"It's a big moment for me and I'm proud to accept it," Bochy said.

La Russa was listed on 25 ballots, Alou 24 and Bochy 22, but the San Diego manager had 10 first-place votes to eight for Alou and seven for La Russa.

"He deserves it," La Russa said. "Bruce did a real good job. So did Felipe. I appreciate the consideration."

Bobby Cox of the Atlanta Braves, the 1991 winner, finished fourth this year with 24 points and three first-place votes. Bill Russell, who took over from Lasorda during the season, was fifth with six points and Terry Collins of the Astros was sixth with three points.Bochy thanked management, his staff and his players.

"I'd like to thank each one of them for the way they played and the way they went about their business," he said. "They certainly can make a manager look good and my players did that this year."

Bochy became the first San Diego manager to win the award, which began in 1983.

The former catcher led the Padres to a 91-71 record in his second year with the team. San Diego was swept by the Cardinals in the first round of the playoffs.

Bochy said the highlight of the season was sweeping the Dodgers in Los Angeles the last weekend of the season to win the NL West.

"I think it said what the guys were made of," he said.

Under a system in which first-place votes are worth five points, seconds are worth three and third-place votes are worth one, Bochy had seven seconds and five thirds, to nine seconds and seven thirds for Alou, who won the award two years ago.

AP Boxing Writer

LAS VEGAS — For a long time it looked as if Mike Tyson and Evander Holyfield would have to live with the frustration of not having faced each other in the ring except for one round when they were amateurs in 1984.

They appeared headed for a showdown in June 1990, but Tyson lost the undisputed heavyweight championship on a 10th-round knockout by James "Buster" Douglas.

Holyfield was scheduled to defend the undisputed title against Tyson Nov. 8, 1991, but Tyson injured his ribs, then was convicted of rape and sent to prison until March 25, 1995.

It looked as if Holyfield's career was finished in 1994. After he lost the IBF and WBA titles on points to Michael Moorer, he announced his retirement because of a heart problem.

Nevertheless, Tyson said, "I knew eventually we would fight."

They will Saturday night, when Tyson defends the WBA championship against Holyfield in the featured bout of a heavyweight title tripleheader in the MGM Grand Garden.

Tyson weighed in Friday at 222 pounds, the highest of his career. The previous high was the 221 1/2 he weighed when he stopped Trevor Berbick in the second round Nov. 22, 1986, and won the WBC title.

"I'm happy with the weight," said Holyfield, who weighed 215 pounds. "But the weight isn't important — it's the performance."

A lot of boxing fans wish it would have happened sooner, and they have questions about this fight.

How much has the three years in prison affected the 30-year-old Tyson? The four fights since he was released have not answered that question.

Does the 34-year-old Holyfield have health problems even though he's been medically cleared by the Nevada State Athletic Commission after extensive testing at the Mayo Clinic?

Or has he faded as a fighter simply because a combination of age and hard fights have caught up with him?

"In his last four fights (only two of which he won since 1993) he hasn't looked that well," Don Turner, Holyfield's trainer, said. "But in one fight for all the marbles, you will see a different fighter."

Tale of the Tape

By The Associated Press

	Holyfield	Tyson
Record	32-3	45-1
Knockouts	23	39
Age	34	30
Weight	215	222
Height	6-2 1/2	5-11 1/2
Reach	77 1/2	71
Chest (normal)	43	43
Chest (expanded)	45	45
Biceps	16	16
Forearm	12 1/2	14
Waist	32	34
Thigh	22	27
Calf	13	19
Neck	19 1/2	20 1/2
Wrist	7 1/2	8
Fist	12 1/2	13

The only time the two met in the ring, their goals were making the U.S. Olympic team. Professional boxing glory was still just only a hope.

What happened in that fight, and when, is not exactly clear.

Tyson remembers it as one round of sparring in Los Angeles where he was an Olympic team alternate at 201 pounds and Holyfield was the 178-pound representative.

"We finished one round," Tyson said. "He couldn't fight me back because he was injured and I only used one hand."

The session, as Holyfield recalls, was while the two were in Colorado Springs, Colo., preparing for the box-offs to determine the Olympic team.

"We only boxed about a minute and a half," Holyfield said. "Pat Nappi (U.S. national coach) said we were swinging too hard. Nobody was trying to feel anybody out."

Given the history of the two, they're not likely to be feeling each other out Saturday night. Chances are good the scheduled 12-round bout will be short, but not dull.

Mitch Halpern will referee the scheduled 12-rounder for which Tyson will be paid $30 million and Holyfield $11 million. The winner also will get a scheduled March 15 fight against the winner of the bout between IBF champion Moorer and South African Francois Botha.

Selig to meet with union head Fehr

Associated Press

Baseball Notes

NEW YORK — Bud Selig scheduled a Monday bargaining session with union head Donald Fehr, a meeting that figures to turn into a lively rebuke of baseball's acting commissioner.

The union staff has been seething since owners rejected the proposed labor deal Wednesday, sources said Friday. Selig, who planned to attend the meeting with three or four other owners, wants to ask for additional concessions.

Fehr's response is expected to include a stinging attack on Selig for his betrayal of management negotiator Randy Levine and the deal agreed to by Fehr and Levine on Oct. 24, said sources on both sides who had been in contact with the union staff.

Levine, who planned to attend the session, already has told Selig he intends to resign as of midnight EST Thursday, the deadline for a deal. After that, free agents can begin signing and the sides will be locked into another offseason under the rules of the agreement that expired in December 1993.

While the vote against the deal was 18-12 — 11 short of the number needed for ratification — two management sources said Friday that as many as 16 clubs were prepared to vote for the deal before Selig pressured them to vote against it.

In the resolution approved at the end of the major league meeting, owners gave the 10-man executive council authority to approve an agreement, but conditioned it on the union agreeing to give up both the option to extend the deal through 2001 and the limit of no more than five teams per year paying a luxury tax.

Santiago on way out

PHILADELPHIA — Benito Santiago, who led the Phillies last season with a career-high 30 home runs and 85 RBIs, is unlikely to return to Philadelphia next year.

Santiago, 31, has filed for free agency and is seeking a three-year deal, which is two more years than would interest the Phillies, general manager Lee Thomas said.

Gagne Gets $3M deal

LOS ANGELES — Shortstop Greg Gagne and the Los Angeles Dodgers agreed to a $3 million one-year contract with a $3.2 million team option for 1998.

Gagne hit .255 with 55 RBIs in 128 games last season and made $2.6 million. He was signed as a free agent last Nov. 30 after leaving the Kansas City Royals.

Reds Keep Harris

CINCINNATI — Infielder Lenny Harris is staying with the Cincinnati Reds, agreeing Friday to a two-year contract worth $1,375,000.

Harris, 32, had filed for free agency last month. He will get $600,000 next season and $775,000 in 1998, with the chance to earn $150,000 more each year in bonuses based on games played.

The backup infielder and pinch hitter batted .285 in 125 games with the Reds this past season, when he made $500,000. He had 17 doubles, two triples, five home runs and 32 RBIs.

Kemp, Sonics bounce Spurs

NBA 50 — NBA Roundup

SAN ANTONIO — Shawn Kemp scored 19 points and grabbed 13 rebounds to lead the Seattle SuperSonics to an 87-75 victory Friday night over the low-scoring San Antonio Spurs.

The Sonics, the defending Western Conference champions, led the entire game as San Antonio limped along without All-Star center David Robinson and several other injured players.

It wasn't a stellar shooting night for either team. Seattle shot only 39 percent from the field, while San Antonio shot 41 percent. It was the fourth game out of five that San Antonio has scored fewer than 80 points.

Behind 45-37 at halftime, San Antonio closed its deficit to 45-42 on a field goal and foul shot by Dominique Wilkins with 10:21 remaining in the third. But Seattle answered with a 9-2 run sparked by Jim McIlvaine and Detlef Schrempf, giving the Sonics a 54-44 lead with 7:07 left in the period.

San Antonio couldn't move any closer than seven points after that, and Seattle soon amassed and maintained a double-digit lead.

Schrempf and Gary Payton each added 16 points for Seattle, and Craig Ehlo scored 11.

Sean Elliott and Avery Johnson led the Spurs with 15 points apiece. Elliott also had 11 rebounds.

Nuggets 94, Warriors 91

DENVER — Dale Ellis scored nine of his 23 points in the fourth quarter as the Denver Nuggets rallied for their first home win of the season over Golden State.

The Nuggets scored the game's final seven points, with Ellis scoring the go-ahead basket on a layup after he stole the ball at midcourt with 1:06 left.

Ervin Johnson had his best game in a Denver uniform with 16 points and 17 rebounds, and Mark Jackson added to his NBA-leading assist total with 14.

76ers 115, Celtics 105

BOSTON — Allen Iverson scored 32 points, leading Philadelphia in scoring for the third time in his four pro games, as the 76ers defeated Boston Celtics Friday night for their first win of the season.

Iverson, the NBA's leading rookie scorer, had 30, 15 and 24 points in his other games. Against the Celtics, he scored 15 in the fourth quarter and repeatedly drew fouls with speedy drives to the basket.

He made 14 of 22 free throws in the game, while the entire Boston team made only 16 of 23. The 76ers went 33-for-48 from the line.

The 76ers didn't trail after scoring 18 straight points late in the third quarter for a 79-75 lead. Boston had used a 16-6 run to go ahead 75-61 with 5:57 left in the period.

Jerry Stackhouse then picked up his fourth foul and was replaced by Lucious Harris, who helped Philadelphia run off the next 18 points for a 79-75 lead. Stackhouse never returned.

Raptors 93, Lakers 92

TORONTO — Damon Stoudamire collected his second career triple-double, scoring 21 points with 10 assists and 10 rebounds to lead Toronto by Los Angeles.

Stoudamire pulled up and nailed a 3-point shot for a 93-83 lead with 1:53 to play before the Lakers, on three field goals by O'Neill, one by Jones and a 3-point shot by Byron Scott with 24 seconds to play, cut the lead to 93-92.

Walt Williams scored 21 points for the Raptors, who won their second straight home game after dropping the first two games of the season. Camby had 15 points and five rebounds off the bench.

Hornets 102, Bullets 87

LANDOVER, Md. — Charlotte held Washington to 37 percent shooting and Tony Smith scored 20 points off the bench in a 102-87 victory Friday night, the Hornets' first road win under new coach Dave Cowens.

Anthony Goldwire had 18 points, Anthony Mason 17 and Matt Geiger 16 for the Hornets, but it was Charlotte's defense that made the difference. Washington scored only 19 points in the pivotal third quarter and made just 37 of 99 field-goal attempts for the game.

Chris Webber had 19 points and 14 rebounds for the Bullets, but he was 9-for-20 from the floor. Juwan Howard scored 14 points on 6-for-23 shooting and Tracy Murray was 2-for-11.

Cavaliers 88, Grizzlies 72

CLEVELAND — Bob Sura had 15 points and a career-high 13 rebounds and the Cleveland Cavaliers held winless Vancouver to 31 percent shooting.

Sura, a 6-foot-5 guard, was able to get so many rebounds because the Grizzlies kept clanking shots hard off the rim. Cleveland, which improved to 3-1, ran away even though leading scorer Terrell Brandon played only 15 minutes and scored just four points because of foul trouble.

Heat 101, Bucks 89

MIAMI — Alonzo Mourning scored six of his 23 points during a decisive 14-0 second-quarter run to lead the Heat by Milwaukee.

It was Miami's 14th straight victory over the previously undefeated Bucks.

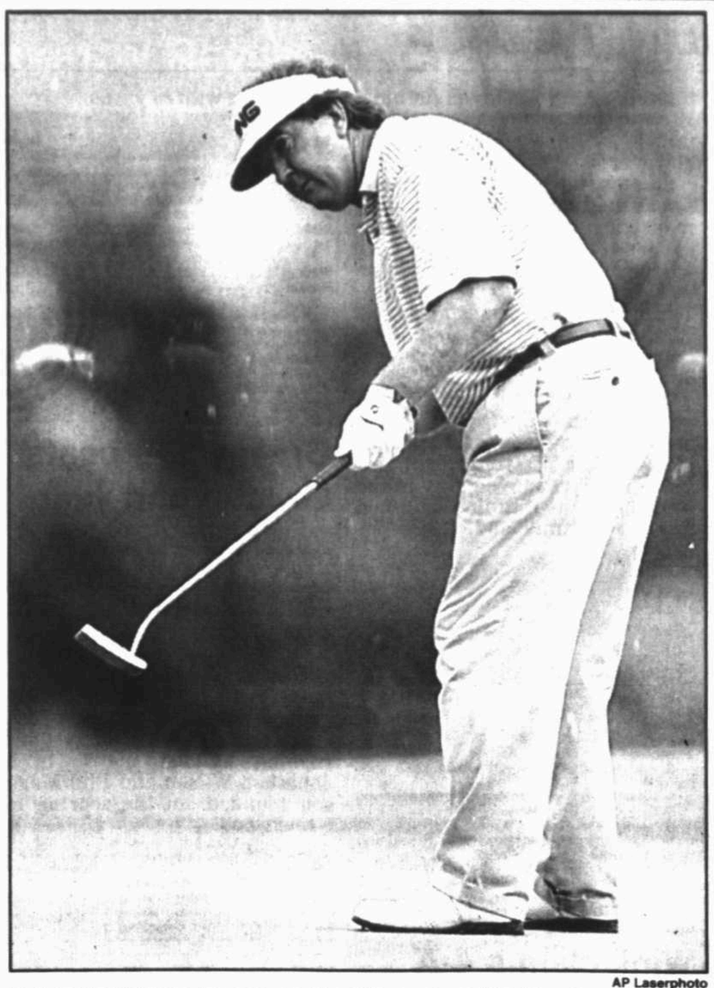

Mourning, who scored 10 points in the fourth quarter, also grabbed 10 rebounds and led a contingent of six Heat players in double figures. Reserve center Isaac Austin had 12 points and 10 rebounds. and Tim Hardaway had 12 points with nine assists.

Bulls 98, Pistons 80

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Chicago tied the club record set last season with a 5-0 start, knocking Detroit from the ranks of the undefeated without much help from Michael Jordan.

Luc Longley scored all 16 of his points as the Bulls took command in the first quarter and cruised to a 98-80 victory. The Bulls, who have never opened with six straight wins.

Pair remain tied for lead in PGA Kapalua Classic

Associated Press

Pro Golf Roundup

KAPALUA, Hawaii — Steve Jones and Bob Gilder each shot 2-under-par 69s Friday and remained tied for the lead midway through the rain-delayed $1.2 million Kapalua International.

Jones and Gilder, who shot 9-under-par 64s on Thursday over the 7,263-yard Plantation Course, overcame the effects of a rain delay to shoot 2-under scores on the 6,531-yard, par-71 Bay Course. The two completed 36 holes at 133, 11 strokes under par.

Several players were unable to complete their rounds before darkness forced a halt, notably Davis Love III, who was 11-under with two holes to play.

Billy Mayfair made the day's biggest move, shooting a 6-under-par 65 on the Bay Course to complete two rounds at 10-under 134. He shot a 69 on the Plantation course on Thursday and trailed Jones and Gilder by five strokes.

Paul Stankowski and two-time Kapalua winner Fred Couples, both still on the course, were at 10-under. Scott McCarron was at 135 after shooting 68 on the Bay course.

The stormy weather was reflected in the the high scores. With the second round still to be completed, eight players had over-par scores for the day after only four had over-par scores on Thursday's opening round.

Senior Tour Championship

MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. — Hale Irwin, who soared to the first-round lead with accurate irons, fell in Friday's windy conditions with four straight bogeys and dropped four shots back of Vicente Fernandez, Frank Conner and Jay Sigel at the Senior Tour Championship.

Irwin shot a 3-over-par 75, the first time since July he was over par in a Senior PGA Tour event.

Fernandez, who won his first U.S. pro title in July, shot a 70 and finished two rounds at 6-under 138. Conner had six birdies, including one at the 18th hole, for a 67. Sigel had two birdies and an eagle over the final six holes for his second straight 69 at The Dunes Golf & Beach Club.

The three were a shot up on Mike Hill, who won this title in 1990 and 1991, and Bob Charles in the tour's final event of the year.

"I like my chances," said Fernandez, an Argentinian who starred for years on the European PGA tour before joining the Seniors this season. "Just being here is a dream come true, and to be playing like I am, who could ask for more?"

Probably Irwin, who came into the round with a one-stroke lead after a 67. However, the three-time U.S. Open champion was blown away by 30 mph wind gusts that disrupted his usually smooth swing.

Irwin, the tour's leading money winner with $1,572,894, looked like a weekend hacker during his stretch of four straight bogeys. He made his first at No. 7, then pushed a short par putt at No. 8.

After hitting into the bunker at the par-3 ninth, he took a weak swing that moved the ball foward only about 10 feet farther in the sand.

A short approach shot at No. 10 led to bogey No. 4 and had Irwin angrily grabbing at clubs. He was four shots behind the leaders and, more importantly, two behind defending champ Jim Colbert, who trails Irwin by $66,004 in the chase for the money title.

Irwin hadn't gone over par since the second round of the Ameritech Senior Open in July, a span of 20 rounds.

Fernandez wasn't sure he'd be able to compete in this tournament when he was hospitalized Monday after eating shellfish. He is allergic to it — "I could die in two hours" — and did not know it was part of his regional breakfast.

Fernandez was given a shot to stop his throat from swelling and only began to feel better Wednesday.

He grabbed the lead with consecutive birdies at Nos. 10 and 11, then parred in after that.

A 25-foot uphill putt at the 18th gave him a share of first.

Colbert had an up-and-down 70 and was in sixth at 140. John Bland, third on the money list, was next at 141. Irwin, Ray Floyd and Gary Player were another shot back.

Report: two-thirds of athletes break rules

By Hal Bock
AP Sports Writer

NCAA

Two months before the Boston College gambling investigation, NCAA-funded research found 25 percent of athletes responding to a survey admitted to betting on athletic events and a fraction said they had taken money from gamblers to control their performances in games.

The research conducted by Frank Cullen and Edward Latessa, criminal justice professors at the University of Cincinnati, used a random sample of 2,000 male Division I basketball and football players and received replies from 648.

"Fully one-fourth (25.5 percent) of the respondents reported that they had gambled on sporting events," the researchers wrote. "These results suggest that student-athletes have a proclivity for illegal gambling, which could present opportunities for more serious problems.

"Although relatively infrequent, almost four percent admitted gambling on events in which they played, and three respondents said they received money from a gambler for not playing well in a game."

In the Boston College case, 13 football players were suspended for gambling, including two who bet against BC in its game against Syracuse.

"The gambling findings struck me as high," Cullen said. "That's a potential problem area for the NCAA."

There were other troubling findings in the survey in which two-thirds of student-athletes responding said they had broken NCAA rules.

Six in 10 said that since the age of 16, they had been drunk in public and almost half reported driving under the influence of alcohol. Almost 45 percent admitted to hitting or threatening to hit a non-family member and about four in 10 said they "threw objects ... at cars or people."

"It seems that the student-athletes' relatively high levels of alcohol use and aggression — alone and potentially in interaction — warrant special attention by policymakers," the researchers wrote.

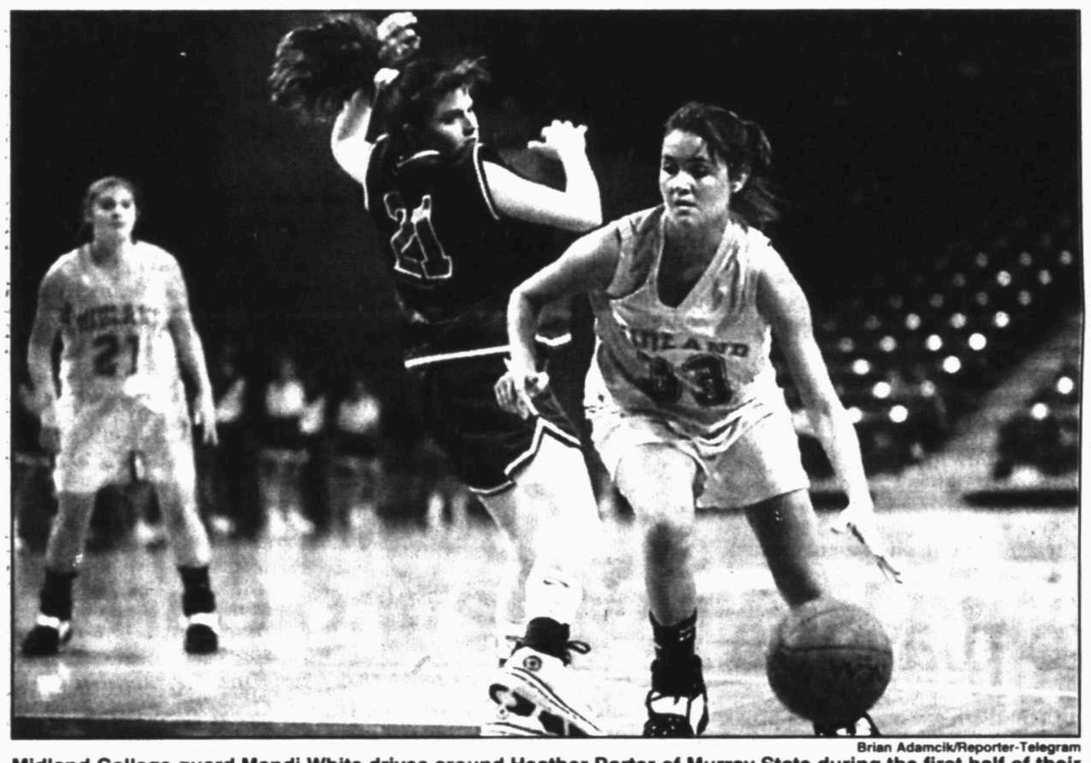

Sixty-six percent of those responding said they had broken minor NCAA rules, including such as receiving free meals or cash payments of under $20.

"You can violate NCAA rules just walking down the street," Miami quarterback Ryan Clement said. "People come up and say, 'You played a great game, dinner's on me.' I can't accept. That leads to problems for some players."

There were only a few reports of serious violations such as free cars, substantial financial allocations and academic fraud.

Cullen and Latessa found that the student-athletes most likely to break the rules were those who were highly recruited and saw rule-breaking as acceptable behavior. They also did not have close relationships with their parents and "had a general propensity to be involved in deviant behavior."

Midland committed 20 turnovers for the game, but it was its superior talent that got it past this hurdle. The Lady Chaps may have also been looking forward to playing top-ranked Trinity Valley this afternoon.

"That may have taken the focus of this game, we've been looking forward to playing Trinity Valley," Jones said.

In the first two games of the tournament, the Frank Phillips men got by Arkansas Express 70-61 and the Trinity Valley Lady Cardinals buried the Lady Plainswomen of Frank Phillips 79-48.

Midland Christian make playoffs

Now, almost twice as many players will get to start for Midland Christian in a playoff game.

With a 26-15 victory Friday night over Lubbock Christian, the Mustangs completed a remarkable return into playoffs, this time in the Texas Association of Private and Parochial Schools Class 4A 11-man division after dominating the six-man division for five years.

The five-time state champion Mustangs were an unknown quantity in their new district, with a new coach Mike Spradlin and five more players on the field. But Midland Christian knocked off the No. 1 team in their division — Fort Worth Christian — to finish 8-2 overall and 4-1 in district play.

Now, the Mustangs only need to win two more games to make it into the state championship where they would be going for their sixth straight state title.

Andrew Hufford, Craig Patteson, Alex Awtry and John Koss were the offensive stars for the Mustangs, who fell behind 15-14 after failing to convert a PAT in the second quarter.

But Midland Christian rallied with two Patteson touchdowns in the fourth quarter on runs of 3 and 2 yards to take the lead and seal the victory for the Mustangs. A loss would have ended the season for Midland Christian.

Hufford had scored the first two touchdowns for Midland Christian, on runs of 4 and 57 yards. But the missed extra point on the first TD almost came back to haunt the Mustangs when Lubbock Christian went for two on its second TD after converting the kick on the first TD.

Hufford carried the ball 25 times for 138 yards to lead MC in that category. Awtry passed for 102 yards and rushed for another 50 while Koss caught just three passes for 92 yards, including long bombs from Awtry of 43 and 37 yards.

The Mustangs, who ended up second in district play behind Denton Liberty Christian, will have their playoff game determined at a later date.

Stanton cruises against Anthony

STANTON — Stanton scored touchdowns with five different players as the Buffaloes cruised to a 50-13 District 6-2A victory here Friday night over Anthony to wrap up regular season play before the Class 2A playoffs start next week.

Stanton (8-2 overall, 4-1 in district) will play Shallowater in the bi-district round. The game is tentatively set for Friday night but a site and time have yet to be determined. It will be a neutral site, however.

Stanton finishes the regular season as the runner-up, after falling to district champion Iraan 19-8 in earlier action.

Scoring touchdowns for Stanton was Leo McAlister (two TDs), Tyron Davis, Chris Carroll (2 TDs), Mark Carrillo and Jody Louder. Kyle Herm had two touchdown passes.

Carroll led the team in rushing with 116 yards on 16 carries. Davis had three catches for 55 yards, including the TD from Herm.

The starters played only in the first half as the Buffaloes climbed to a 47-3 halftime lead.

Wink claims 4-A crown over Rankin

RANKIN — After trading scores early in the game, Wink finally pulled away from Rankin and ran away with the District 4-1A championship, 33-10, here Friday night.

Still, Rankin's season is not over. The district runner-up now faces Petersburg in a Class 1A bi-district contest next Friday night in Big Spring. Game time is 7:30 p.m. Wink will take on Lorenzo in Lamesa at 7:30 p.m. Friday.

Rankin broke open the scoring early with a 55-yard touchdown run by Richard Acosta with more than 10 minutes remaining in the first quarter to give the Red Devils (4-6 overall, 3-1 in district) a 7-0 lead.

Wink answered with a 10-yard run by Justin Hamm but missed the ensuing extra point to trail the Red Devils 7-6. Rankin increased its lead to 10-6 on a 23-yard field goal by Jason Hahn.

That was the last time the Red Devils scored, however, as the Wildcat defense shut down the Rankin offense the rest of the way.

That's when the Wildcats (4-0 in district) went crazy, scoring once each in the next two quarters and twice in t' fourth to take the victory and the title. They took advantage of three pass interceptions in Rankin territory to increase their lead.

Brandon Thompson, who rushed for 140 yards on 18 carries for Wink, scored on a 29-yard run to give Wink the lead for good at 13-10 and Hamm tacked on two more touchdowns in the fourth quarter.

Greenwood beats Owls to end year

BIG LAKE — The Greenwood Rangers ended the season on a winning note here Friday night with a 27-9 victory over Reagan County.

Michael Otho scored twice, a 8-yard run and a 12-yard run, to lead the Rangers to a 3-6 overall record and a 2-3 mark in District 4-3A.

The Rangers compiled 284 yards rushing against the Owls as Jonathan Wilson and Phil Morrison rounded out the scoring for Greenwood.

Plainview tops Lamesa, 6-3

LAMESA — Lamesa and Plainview both took the field here Friday night hoping to finish a losing season on a winning note.

Only the Bulldogs came away satisfied.

Plainview won a battle of field goals, 6-3, extending Lamesa's losing streak to nine games after the Golden Tornadoes opened the season on a high not e with a victory. Plainview ended its season with a 2-8 overall mark and a 1-4 record in District 2-4A play. Lamesa fell to 1-9, 0-5.

The Bulldogs opened the scoring first on a 32-yard field goal by Anthony Gonzalez in the second quarter. But Lamesa answered with its own second-quarter three-pointer, a 21-yard kick from Jesse Maholly, to tie the score at halftime.

Mustangs survive Big Spring 7-6

By Lee Passmore
Sports Writer

ANDREWS — It came down to a test of wills between two teams here Friday night.

Not a battle between two styles or systems, not a grudge match between two towns, not even a contest between two of the best running backs in the district. Both Andrews and Big Spring were locked in a battle for the third playoff spot from District 4-4A at the Mustang Bowl in a game where almost every play in the second half carried significance.

There was no flash or glitter, only spit and dust in a game which might have made Woody Hayes nod his head in appreciation. When it came down to it, Andrews won 7-6 in a game that might not have looked pretty but was absolutely beautiful as far as the Mustangs were concerned: They are going to the playoffs.

"It was the team concept and it was a great concept," said Andrews coach Mike Lebby, echoing a familiar theme which rang through the jubilant Mustang locker room in the afterglow of victory. "Talk about adversity and the way the kids played, it was a great win."

If anything, the victory deflated the theory that the Mustangs are a one-man team. That one man, man-child if you will, sophomore running back Shaud Williams, wasn't around for most of the game, having left in the first quarter with a hip-pointer. With him, most of the Mustangs' offense also left.

And with Big Spring having taken the opening kickoff and marched 75 yards for a 6-0 lead, Andrews (5-5 overall, 3-2 in district) found itself in a hole, which was potentially impossible to climb out of.

Yet, the Steers (2-8, 1-4) proved to be their own worst enemy. They were suffering from the loss of their own top rusher as well, junior Antwoyne Edwards, who left the game early with a broken thumb. Although Frankie Green picked up the slack admirably with 165 yards on 28 carries. He also scored Big Spring's touchdown on a seven-yard run.

"Frankie did a great job," said Big Spring coach Dwight Butler. "It would have been nice to have (Edwards and Green) but it was just like Andrews, losing Shaud."

Big Spring was also without quarterback Gabriel Mendoza, out with a thigh injury and starting in his place was sophomore Tory Mitchell, who performed admirably with 85 yards on 14 carries. With Mitchell at the helm, the Steers' game plan had a more conservative tilt than a Rush Limbaugh monologue.

That still didn't prevent the Steers from committing three turnovers at the most inopportune times. Late in the second quarter, Green fumbled and Andrews safety Stormy Jackson recovered at the Big Spring 32-yard-line.

Two plays later, Williams reentered the game at halfback. He was on the field for only three plays, but they made all the difference in the game.

After a three-yard carry by Williams, the Steers faced a fourth-and-one. Williams carried over the right side for a two-yard gain. The next play, quarterback Daniel Kessler ran the option to the right side with Williams trailing. Kessler seemed like he was ignored and cruised into the end zone untouched. Waylon Mayfield kicked the extra point for a 7-6 lead.

"Everybody's keying on (Williams) and thinking he's going to get the ball every time, so that opened it up," Kessler said. "It was just a really great team effort."

Especially defensively. Late in the third quarter with a fourth down and three to go at the Andrews eight, the Steers opted to go for it, instead of trying a short field goal. This was partially because they would have needed to win by eight if they were in a three-way tie with Andrews and Fort Stockton — which lost to Pecos as it turned out.

Mitchell was thrown for a two-yard loss and the Steers lost their best opportunity.

They had a last shot late in the fourth quarter with the ball at the Andrews 36, but Jackson tackled Mitchell for a one-yard loss and Mayfield deflected a pass the next play to end the threat.

Permian downs Abilene to make playoffs

By Stewart Doreen
Sports Writer

ODESSA — Not that a football team like Odessa Permian needs a good break, but when it does get one, not even a jinx or Abilene High can beat Mojo.

Randy Mayes' Panther club got the momentum change of all changes to defeat the Eagles 17-3 Friday night at Ratliff Stadium, and in the process, break the string of not making the playoffs in a year ending in '6'.

The game did insure the Panthers the final 4-5A playoff spot and that is only thing that matters to Mayes. In fact, the Panthers, who created the jinx by missing out on the post-season party in 1966, '76 and '86, had been on the other side of a key punt in one of those years.

In 1986, when a 84-yard punt by San Angelo Central's Doug Bounds all but eliminated the Mojo's playoff hopes in the 14-7 loss. So this time Mayes got the break.

Permian will play Lubbock Coronado next Saturday at 1 p.m. in Ratliff Stadium. Mayes was very specific about what the punt, the scores, the win and third-place finish in District 4-5A meant. That was making the playoffs. That was the main goal for any Permian team this time of year.

AHS, 5-4 and 2-4, had 228 yards in total offense but couldn't break the Permian defense, who allowed the lone 41-yard field goal by John Michael Herrera to make the score 10-3. Penalties and just errors in general didn't help.

Permian got its usual play out of Ja'Quay Wilburn, who had 187 yards on 25 carries. That was a good chunk of Permian's 261 yards in total offense.

Cooper drums Odessa 42-28

ABILENE — The Abilene Cooper football team nailed down the second place spot in District 4-5A Friday with a 42-28 thumping of Odessa High in Shotwell Stadium.

Cooper got 320 yards in total offense, including three touchdown passes from quarterback Michael Anderson. Dominic Rhodes added a 70-yard touchdown scamper. Cooper's record raises to 7-3 for the season and 5-1 in 4-5A. The Cougars finished second.

Cooper will open the Class 5A playoffs against Amarillo High. The bi-district contest starts at 7:30 p.m. next Friday at Lowery Field in Lubbock.

Odessa High, 4-6 and 2-4, got three touchdowns from Nick Graves, who had 148 yards rushing for the game. Kyle Willey also had 105 yards for the Bronchos.

REBELS: Central gets three yards rushing saw Guerrero hit Chris Rodgers with a 21-yard score. Guerrero ended the night with 214 yards passing, but that is death to the Bobcats, who have lost by an average of 28 points this season when passing over 200 yards. It was the lack of rushing (three total yards) that was the demise of the Bobcats, a factor Bobcat boss Gary Gaines will surely work on in the off-season with his 3-7 Bobcats.

In all, the Lee defense held the Bobcats to a minus-eight yards rushing in the first half and only 85 in the air. Still, the Guerrero-to-Jared Whitson combination still didn't connect, and coming into the game, that was the most potent combination in the league's passing lanes.

Meanwhile, the Lee offense turned in one spectacular play when quarterback David Smith hit John Norman for a 56-yard touchdown pass. It was the only completion of the first half for Smith, but Norman made it count, busting a tackle at the 15 for the score.

Wingback Ricky Green got Lee on the scoreboard first with a 21-yard reverse, giving Lee a first-quarter score in eight of its nine games this year. However, Lee failed to score on its first possession for only the second time this year. The other time was last week against Permian. Maybe, the Rebs are folding.

Josh Norman broke a 15-yard TD run in the second quarter as Bobcats kept giving up field position with lack of a rushing game and poor punting, a 28.6 per punt average.

Norman got his second touchdown in the third period with a two-yard run and fullback Stacy Jones romped 25 yards for Lee's final TD in the fourth quarter.

It wasn't a dead awful performance by Lee and the 35-7 score would indicate that, but it didn't leave a good feeling among the Rebels.

"We can't ever, ever play like that again," said linebacker Cory Pertile.

Parchman added, "I think our kids understand they didn't play the greatest game, and I think you'll see a completely different team when we play next week."

Lee is now 17-0-1 under Parchman in regular season play. Pa4hman has now survived his first two full seasons at Lee without a regular season loss.

And now there are new lawns to mow. Lee has never played Monterey in the state playoffs. There are new traditions and ties to form. But one thing is for sure — Lee will have to finish the season undefeated to claim a state championship. There's no losing — or tying — allowed from here on out. That's probably the reason Lee didn't feel good about Friday's win over the Bobcats. When you meet state caliber teams in the playoffs, an effort like this one might not be enough to stay alive.

STORM TRACKER FACTS

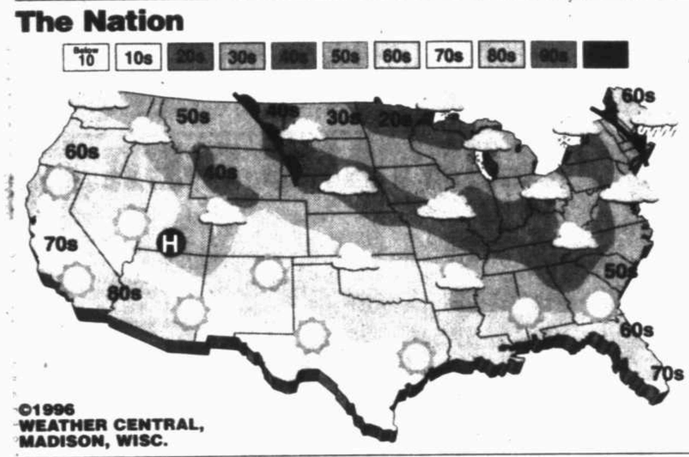

It's shaping up to be another nice fall weekend for anything outdoors as cool high pressure dominates West Texas weather. Daytime temperatures will remain in the 70s...but nighttime lows will continue to be chilly. The extended forecast shows no signs of any severe cold snaps or rain.

PUBLIC NOTICE

The Joint Commission on Accreditation of Healthcare Organizations will conduct an accreditation survey of this organization on December 4 -5 - 6, 1996. The purpose of the survey will be to evaluate the organization's compliance with nationally established Joint Commission standards. The survey results will be used to determine whether, and the conditions under which accreditation should be awarded the organization.

Joint Commission standards deal with organizational quality of care issues and the safety of the environment in which care is provided. Anyone believing that he or she has pertinent and valid information about such matters may request a public information interview with the Joint Commission's field representatives at the time of the survey. Information presented at the interview will be carefully evaluated for relevance to the accreditation process. Requests for a public information interview must be made in writing and should be sent to the Joint Commission no later than five working days before the survey begins. The request must also indicate the nature of the information to be provided at the interview. Such requests should be addressed to:

Division of Accreditation Operations,
Organization Liaison
Joint Commission on Accreditation of Healthcare Organizations
One Renaissance Boulevard
Oakbrook Terrace, IL 60181

The Joint Commission will acknowledge such requests in writing or by telephone and will inform the organization of the request for any interview. The organization will, in turn, notify the interviewee of the date, time, and place of the meeting.

This notice is posted in accordance with the Joint Commission's requirements and may not be removed before the survey is completed.
