Shattered comet to strike Jupiter

The comet Shoemaker-Levy 9 has been fragmented into 21 or more large pieces by Jupiter's gravity. It is due to smash into the giant planet between July 16, July 22. Observers on Earth, 485 million miles away, may be able to see disturbances in Jupiter's atmosphere caused by impacts. Large telescopes will be needed to see the effects.

Some scientists expect flashes of light as comet fragments crash into the night side of Jupiter's atmosphere at about 37 miles per second. Others expect the fragments to disintegrate without a dramatic display.

Breyer hearings

WASHINGTON — Supreme Court nominee Stephen G. Breyer defended himself against conflict-of-interest allegations Tuesday as his confirmation hearings began. But it was barely a moment of controversy in friendly proceedings seemingly speeding him toward approval. FLOODS' GRIM COUNT

Behind rising death toll lie sad stories full of life

By Marc Rice

AMERICUS, Ga. — The numbers from Georgia are grim enough. Billions of losses likely in crops, in bridges, in homes and in belongings. But behind the harshest statistic — 28 people swept away by roiling brown water — are sad stories full of life.

Life just beginning — a toddler and young mother drown as a father watches helplessly while the car's taillights sink below the surface.

Rich life of love and laughter — a woman just short of her 51st wedding anniversary, a soul-food cook whose husband loses his grip on her arm as a flash flood smash-

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — The army-backed government's order to expel human rights monitors ignited blazing international criticism Tuesday, just as reports surfaced that 12 people were found shot to death west of the capital.

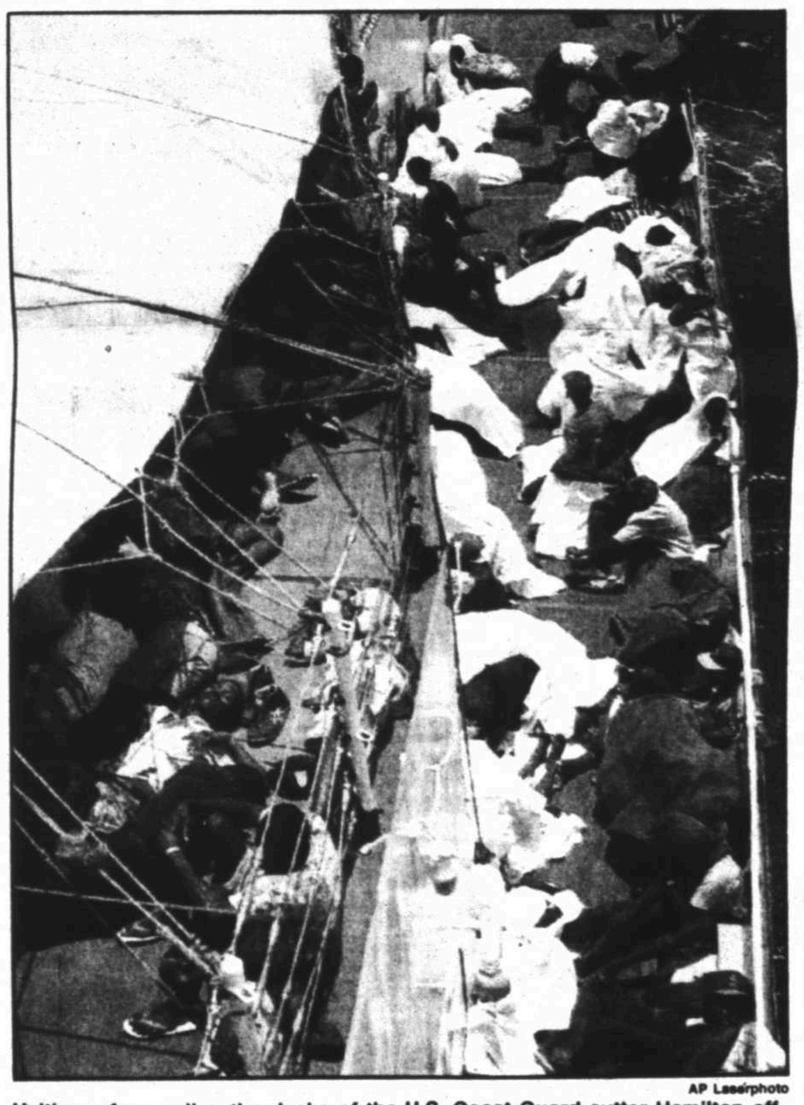

One U.S. official warned Haiti's repressive army rulers that talk of invading Haiti is not a bluff. The de facto government threatened to punish Haitians who call for an invasion.

Flying feline finally 'mee-outs' after 12 days in jetliner's hold

By Judie Glave

NEW YORK — One lawsuit, 12 days and 32,000 miles after getting lost in the belly of a jumbo jet, a high-flying cat named Tabitha was found safe Tuesday exactly where a psychic said she would be.

"I hear this wondrous 'Me-ow,' and I just lost it," Carol Ann Timmel said after she coaxed the cat from a hiding place in the drop ceiling of the jet's cargo area. "I was calling her, and she was calling back."

Timmel, cat in hands, left the Tower Air plane with tears on her cheeks and a smile on her face — a happy ending to a bizarre tale that attracted more attention than most homicides do in New York.

A neurosurgeon testified that the clerk who was beaten with a baseball bat suffered permanent brain damage and two classmates of defendant Mark W. Mitchell Jr. said he told them he hoped the woman died.

Following a full day of testimony, both sides rested in the attempted capital murder trial of Mitchell, 17.

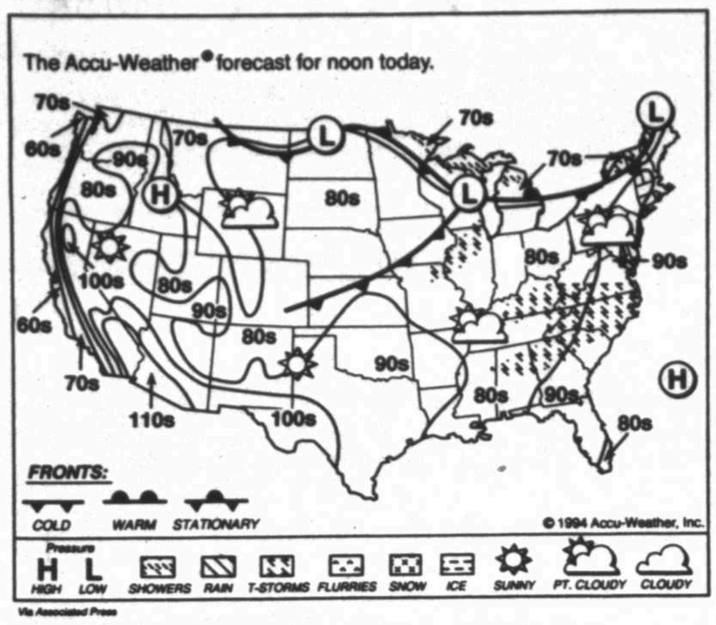

He also faces charges of aggravated robbery and aggravated assault for the April 2, 1993, attack on Kay Balog while she was working at the Town and Country Food Store, 7100 W. Highway 80.

Mitchell is charged with striking Ms. Balog with a baseball bat and taking a 12-pack of Dr Pepper.

Highs again flirt with records

Staff Report

After teasing the area with 90-degree temperatures during the weekend, the mercury rose above 100 on Tuesday.

Tuesday's high temperature was 102, just 2 degrees shy of the record for that date of 104 set in 1933. Monday's high reached 100.

The triple-digit temperatures will remain in the forecast throughout the week, according to forecasters with the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

Today's forecast calls for mostly sunny skies with a high near 101 and south winds at 15-25 mph. Tonight should be fair with a low in the lower-70s, according to forecasters.

Thursday should be mostly sunny with a high near 103.

The record low was 49 set in 1936.

STATE

More thunderstorms in rain-soaked parts of North Central and Northeast Texas prompted forecasters to issue flash flood warnings and watches Tuesday for the regions.

A low-pressure trough and moisture flowing in from the Gulf of Mexico fueled showers and thunderstorms in those areas and in South Texas. Rainfall in the south was moving northeasterly toward Louisiana at 15 mph.

While less than an inch of precipitation fell at Dallas Love Field Tuesday afternoon, severe thunderstorms moved into North Texas by Tuesday evening and brought with them winds of up to 90 mph.

Roof damage near Lake Worth was reported as was hail to one inch in diameter in northwest Tarrant and Denton counties, the National Weather Service reported.

The storms produced scattered rainfall amounts between one and three inches in one hour and caused flooding problems at some low-water crossings, the weather service said.

Flash flood warnings were issued for Collin, Dallas, Denton, Grayson, Fannin, Tarrant and Wise counties.

NATION

Thunderstorms ranged across a wide section of the United States on Tuesday, from the northern Plains and Great Lakes to the flood-ravaged South.

Typical summertime heat baked the Southwest, where triple-digit temperatures came before noon in California desert areas.

Thunderstorm watches were posted for parts of Wisconsin, Iowa, Illinois, Michigan, and elsewhere in the Great Lakes region.

More heavy rain in the South prompted flash flood watches in parts of Georgia, the Florida Panhandle, Alabama and Texas.

In Georgia, severe flooding continued. Floodwaters not expected to crest for days have already submerged 300,000 acres of cropland, left 175,000 people without drinking water and washed out hundreds of roads since last week.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

TRIAL: Testimony ends in 'bat attack' case

(From 1A)

The trial was expected to last the entire week. 238th District Court Judge John Hyde will read the charge to the jurors this morning. Then both sides will have the opportunity to present closing arguments.

The first witness to testify Tuesday was Midland neurosurgeon William McGavran. He said Ms. Balog suffered a blow to the left side of her head that caused a blood clot on the right side of her brain and another one inside her brain.

McGavran said the brain essentially floats in the skull and when the head receives a blow it vibrates in the skull. He said if a blow occurs on one side of the skull it will cause the brain to shift and cause trauma to the other side of the brain.

The surgeon said that when he performed surgery on Ms. Balog he removed dead tissue from her brain. He said she recovered well, but has suffered permanent brain damage as a result of the attack.

Ms. Balog can function in day-to-day life fairly normally, but has problems with cognitive skills as well as her medium and short-term memory, McGavran said.

Ms. Balog herself testified that she has no recollection of the attack. She also told the court she had no knowledge of a lawsuit brought in her name against Mitchell regarding the attack.

She said she gave Town and Country representatives permission to file a lawsuit on her behalf, but she didn't know it had been done.

Her mother, Gwen Woody, testified that she was called to the emergency room following the attack on her daughter and visited with her in a treatment room.

Ms. Woody said her daughter told her a teen-age boy came in the store with a baseball bat and she didn't think he would hit her, but he did. Ms. Woody said she also got a description of the boy from Ms. Balog.

She said Ms. Balog told her the boy was blond with a crew cut and was wearing jeans and a jacket.

The man who found Ms. Balog following the attack, Bernardo Galindo, testified he saw her lying on the floor surrounded by blood and heard her crying and pleading "help me, help me."

Galindo said he called 911 and helped Ms. Balog get to the phone when a 911 operator called back requesting more information. He said Ms. Balog told him she didn't know what had happened and indicated she thought she may have fallen.

Brian Burns, who was with Mitchell on the Friday night the attack occurred, testified they were with another teen and the three of them had been drinking beer and were intoxicated.

He said he went to the Town and Country store with Mitchell when Mitchell told him he was going to enter the store and hit the clerk with a baseball bat and take some items. Burns said he thought Mitchell was joking.

Burns said he remained in the vehicle while Mitchell went in the store, but got out of the pickup and went to look in the store window after hearing the clerk scream.

Burns said he saw Mitchell standing up, holding a baseball bat and looking down at something.

The teens then returned to the home of their friend, Cody Laymon. Burns said he told Laymon what Mitchell had done at the store.

Laymon disputed Burns' testimony that they were intoxicated. He said he didn't think any of them were intoxicated. He, too, said he didn't believe Mitchell had actually committed an assault until he heard sirens coming down the highway.

A couple of days later, Laymon called the sheriff's office to tell them what he knew about the assault after hearing about it on the news.

Another friend of Mitchell's, Matt Wiggins, sobbed as he testified that Mitchell recounted the events to him a few days after the attack.

He said Mitchell told him he had been drinking and his companions dared him to go in the store and hit the clerk and take something. Wiggins said Mitchell told him he took the bat in the store and swung it at the clerk while her back was turned, missed and took another swing that hit her in the head.

Wiggins said he didn't believe Mitchell at first until he heard on the news that Mitchell had been arrested for the crime.

A county criminal investigator testified that he found a baseball bat wrapped in a shirt and jacket in Mitchell's truck following his arrest.

Toby Pittman, a classmate of Mitchell's, testified Mitchell asked him what could happen to him for the assault and told him he "hoped the bitch died."

Chris Cooper, a neighbor and classmate of Mitchell's, said the day after the attack Mitchell "told me I wouldn't believe what he'd done the night before."

Cooper testified Mitchell told him that while he was out he stopped at the convenience store, went in and swung a bat at the clerk. He said Mitchell told him he missed and then hit her on a second swing.

Cooper said he didn't believe Mitchell at first.

He said Mitchell described how Ms. Balog fell following the blow and had convulsions.

"He was pretty much kicked back, relaxed" when he recalled the events, Cooper said about Mitchell's demeanor. Cooper said Mitchell didn't appear to be bragging but "he was basically hamming it up."

He said at school the following Monday Mitchell was talking to Pittman when he heard him say he "hoped the bitch dies."

Both sides rested following Cooper's testimony. Summation for both sides will begin this morning. The jury is to begin deliberating immediately after.

If found guilty of attempted capital murder, Mitchell could face life in prison or five to 99 years. He remains free on bond.

ling, Pandora, after a psychic said Tabitha would be found if readers stared into Pandora's eyes.

Tabitha escaped from her carrier June 30 on a flight from New York to Los Angeles. Timmel, a 26-year-old aspiring actress, was moving from New York to Beverly Hills. Pandora arrived safely and no one knows how Tabitha escaped.

For 12 days, Tabitha spent eight hours daily zipping from New York to Los Angeles, New York to San Juan, Puerto Rico, and New York to Miami.

Timmel filed a lawsuit to force Tower Air to conduct a thorough search but dropped it when the airline agreed to ground the plane for 24 hours.

Cat traps were baited with fresh tuna, but the finicky 3-year-old didn't show. She prefers dry food.

After a bit of feline mind-bending, psychic Christa Carl pinpointed the drop ceiling where the cat had recently taken up residence.

"She was exactly where the psychic said she was," Timmel said. She said she was never a strong believer in psychics but "I believe in this one."

The striped tabby might have burned a few of her nine lives; she was without food or water and dropped two of her eight pounds. She survived because the cargo hold of the Boeing 747 where she roamed freely was temperature-controlled, airline officials said.

Pesky Critters, which specializes in corralling wayward alligators, People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals and the ASPCA kept the pressure on Tower to find the cat.

Tower vice president Nick Lacey estimated the airline invested 100 staff hours in fruitless searches for Tabitha. But the plane kept to its regular schedule.

Dr. Keith Manning, a veterinarian, said Tabitha was a little dehydrated and scared but otherwise fine.

Tower is flying Timmel and Tabitha home for free on Thursday, providing both a first-class seat.

"I'm not going to take my eyes off her," Timmel said. "Once I get her to L.A. she's never going to fly again."

GRIM: Sad tales lie behind harsh numbers

es their house.

Life full of promise — the young quarterback helping out a line crew with his granddad's telephone company when the lake rises up.

In Americus, where 15 of the victims died 25 miles from the normal course of the normally placid Flint River, the churning tributary creeks are receding and the bodies are being buried. The mourning has just begun.

Walter Davenport Stapleton III, 17, nicknamed Daven, was working last Wednesday with a crew from Citizens Telephone Co., which his grandfather owns, stringing lines along Lake Corinth. In an instant, the lake heaved up, overturning the work boat and splitting it in two. Daven became tangled in wires and drowned.

The obituary in the Americus Times-Recorder read like the resume of a classic American boy-next-door: quarterback of Southland Academy's football team, Boy Scout, member of the Key Club, the Spanish Club, the Fellowship of Christian Athletes.

"He was always polite, courteous. If something didn't go his way, he never pouted," said Melvin Kinslow, the school's headmaster. "It was his first year at quarterback. He was a big boy, about 6-foot-3, had a good arm."

To prepare for his senior year, Daven had been studying verse, specifically "The Road Not Taken," a poem about making choices in life, recalled the Rev. Vance B. Mathis, the teen's pastor at First United Methodist Church.

"I was impressed that he was reading Robert Frost, and I used that in the sermon," said Mathis, who officiated at Daven's funeral.

Daven's 29-year-old sister, Emmilyn Stapleton, recalled how he "thought he was immortal. He always wanted to help someone, and that's what he was doing when all this happened — helping someone."

Life was sweet for Idell M. Jackson. At 67, she was looking forward to her 51st wedding anniversary Aug. 3. She had 11 grandchildren to spoil. Now and then she ventured the four miles into town for ice cream.

And she could cook.

"She was one of the best cooks, just soul food. She could really cook it up and fry that good ol' chicken. I ate good," said her husband, Dave Jackson.

In the middle of the night July 6, a flash flood on the local creek filled their modest frame house with water and started ripping it apart. Jackson grabbed for his wife but couldn't hold on to her arm. Jackson lost consciousness in the swirling water but came to when he slammed into a tree.

Idell Jackson was dead when he found her.

After 51 years, the Jacksons spent their last moments together in terror. "I was afraid, but I didn't want to show her," he said.

Staying at his daughter's small yellow house until he can find an apartment, Jackson can't help thinking about that night of black water.

Trying to swim back to their demolished house through the flood tide, Jackson was stripped of all his clothing except one sock. He has nothing else left, not even a photograph of Idell.

John A. Hurley III would have turned 3 last Saturday. His body was found Sunday.

The boy was in the car about 3 a.m. July 6 when John A. Hurley Jr. picked up his wife, Kathy Renea Hurley, 28, from her job at the Cooper Lighting plant.

On the 13-mile ride home from Americus, the road was suddenly hub-deep in flash flooding from two converging creeks. Hurley jumped out, hoping to find help in the middle of the night.

"I was halfway out," he said. "All of a sudden the water came up the hill and threw me out of the car. I went under water and the current pulled me away."

His tumbling body bumped up against a building. "I tried to swim back," he said, "but when I came up the last thing I could see was the taillight going under."

John Hurley kept vigil on a downstream bridge for four days, waiting for the bodies to be found. Kathy Hurley's body turned up Saturday, young John's the next day.

His son liked to run, Hurley said, just as fast as he could; he was "real wild, just loved the outdoors, playing outside."

The Hurleys, married six years, had recently built a house in Smithville.

"She was real excited about it," Hurley said, shaking his head. "She just had a real pretty smile. She was always smiling. Everybody knows that."

FANS: Invasion 'no bluff,' U.S. official says

power is based only in the barrel of their guns, have chosen to divert national sovereignty for their benefit, to the detriment of the well-being of an entire people."

On Tuesday, 12 young men were found shot to death near Morne-a-Bateau, a hamlet 19 miles west of the capital, the private Haitian Press Agency reported.

The victims were people who were intending to flee Haiti by boat, independent Radio Quisqueya reported. It said the bodies apparently were taken to the site and dumped.

The reports couldn't be immediately confirmed and underlines the importance of an observer team, said frustrated U.N. officials hours before their expulsion from Haiti.

"This comes as a media report, and we're not able to verify the veracity of it, and it could very well just fall through the cracks," U.N. spokesman Eric Falt said as he was packing up his belongings.

President Clinton again raised the possibility of U.S. intervention to return exiled President Jean-Bertrand Aristide, who was toppled in a 1991 coup and is Haiti's first democratically elected leader.

"If anyone thinks they're going to outbluff the international community or the United States, this time they're not going to," U.S. Embassy spokesman Stanley Schrager declared later in the day.

The departure of the estimated 100 observers is expected today.

Granderson, the observers' chief, said "Our departure will signal a turning point in the Haitian crisis." He did not elaborate, but many of his colleagues believe invasion is imminent.

The U.N. Security Council on Tuesday condemned the expulsion order as "provocative" and a "serious escalation" in Haiti's crisis.

In Ottawa, Canadian Foreign Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet said he hoped the Security Council condemnation "will be a clear indication to (army leaders) that they really have no friends and nobody to support them."

"It is quite clear that there's a lot of people around the world who believe that the only way to resolve this impasse is by a military intervention," Ouellet said. Canada has opposed invading Haiti.

Haiti's government took to the airwaves Tuesday to threaten citizens against dissent. The Information Ministry warned: "All who call for invasion are liable to be punished according to the law."

Foreign Minister Charles David denied the government was seeking to provoke a conflict and characterized the observer mission as illegal.

"It's black and white. They are not wanted here. So they have to leave," David told reporters at the Foreign Ministry.

"Haiti is not a threat to anyone," David said, adding that the expulsion "shouldn't justify military intervention."

The Pentagon, meanwhile, announced it has 14 warships near Haiti, including four carrying 2,000 Marines. Eight of the ships are directly involved with 15 Coast Guard cutters in enforcing a U.N. trade embargo and dealing with a flood of Haitian boat people.

Clinton said the expulsion order would give the international community new resolve to restore Haiti's constitutional government and end atrocities the monitors linked to the Haitian military and its supporters.

case because of media overkill.

Still, several callers had strong opinions on the Simpson saga, including one anonymous female caller.

"I think he's been framed," the caller said, "and I hope before too long they'll come up with who actually did it. If he did do it I think he was pushed over the edge and I don't think he realizes what he did. A woman can drive a man to anything. They can drive a man crazy, and if this is the case, she drove him to this."

Referring to the Rodney King, Reginald Denny and Menendez brothers cases, Midlander James Beatty said, "If the last three trials in Los Angeles are any indicator of justice, he stands a lot better chance of getting off with a jury trial than with a plea bargain."

One caller felt Simpson's public stature should weigh in his favor. "I don't think he's guilty," Julian Gonzales said, "because as in the Mike Tyson trial, everything has to be a set-up. He's a football player, a hall of famer, a millionaire and a good actor. I don't think he would do a thing like that."

Another caller felt the opposite, saying, "O.J. Simpson was a man before he was a star. If he did the crime, he should do the time."

But Kim Collins agreed with the theory that he was set up.

"I do believe O.J. is innocent," Collins said, "and it will come out that he was set up. Whoever set him up did a very good job and I think this will come out."

And another caller agreed with Beatty, saying California juries give the perception of being different.

"The way things go out in California," the anonymous caller said, "all they have to do is get one flake on the jury and they walk murderers, so I expect this is what he'll opt for."

Court unlocks shackles on German military imposed after war

■ Visiting Germany, Clinton says he's 'comfortable' with idea of taking chains off German war machine.

Associated Press

BERLIN — Germany took a greater role in world peacemaking Tuesday when its highest court freed German combat troops for U.N. and NATO missions abroad.

The decision cast off postwar shackles put on the military to keep Germany from ever becoming an armed threat again.

President Clinton, visiting Berlin, said he was "completely comfortable" with the ruling. He has been pushing Germany to shoulder more global responsibility.

The Constitutional Court in Karlsruhe reinterpreted a clause in Germany's constitution that had been seen as limiting the military to defending the country or its North Atlantic Treaty Organization allies.

"I'm very happy with this," said Chancellor Helmut Kohl, whose efforts to craft an effective foreign policy have been hindered by his inability to help the United States and United Nations keep world peace.

Germany had to essentially sit out the 1991 Persian Gulf War because of the constitutional constraints and watch from the sidelines as the U.S.-led coalition defeated Iraq.

Since then Kohl has tested the limits by dispatching troops to carry out humanitarian tasks in Somalia and to help NATO monitor the air and sea embargoes on Yugoslavia.

But he has not dared to send troops into areas where they might get involved in a firefight.

The ruling lets him do that, but only if a mission is approved by a majority vote in parliament.

Polls say most Germans favor sending troops on U.N. humanitarian and peacekeeping missions, but the populace is split on ordering them into combat.

Ulrich Finckh, a retired Lutheran minister who heads a group that represents conscientious objectors, said the ruling will likely produce a pacifist backlash among young German males.

"The number of conscientious objectors climbed last year to over 100,000. This ruling will make it go up even further. I don't think most Germans want to see our troops going to all corners of the world," said the 66-year-old Finckh, who became a pacifist because he was forced to fight as a teen-ager during World War II.

At age 18, German males are called up for 12 months of military service, to be reduced to 10 months in 1996.

It is not clear where Germany might be willing to send troops.

Kohl has said Germany could not dispatch ground forces to former Yugoslavia because of atrocities by German soldiers during World War II.

If you follow that logic, there are no trouble spots in Europe where German troops could go, Finckh said.

With Clinton at his side, Kohl said he wants to avoid the impression "the Germans are rushing to the front." He said Germany will have to decide carefully what sorts of missions to get involved in.

Germany's constitution, called the Basic Law, was written in 1949 with a provision stating that "except for self-defense, the armed forces can only be deployed in so far as that is made possible by this Basic Law."

That section of the constitution was written with the Nazis in mind.

TV debate, or lack of, heats Mexican race

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The leader of Mexico's governing party says there's no time for another televised debate of presidential candidates before the Aug. 21 election.

Critics say the Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI, is just trying to deny two major opposition candidates time to air the issues.

"Time is running short," said Ignacio Pichardo, president of the PRI, which has not lost a presidential election since its 1929 founding.

"In my opinion there's not going to be enough time left for new debates between the presidential candidates," he said in comments published Tuesday in Mexican newspapers.

He would not, however, rule out the possibility of another debate.

A first debate among major candidates May 12 was watched by 30 million Mexicans, giving an overnight boost to a sharp-tongued lawyer, Fernandez Diego de Cevallos, candidate of the conservative National Action Party.

Fernandez has been running in most polls just behind the ruling party candidate, Ernesto Zedillo. For the first time, a ruling party victory isn't necessarily assured.

In third place is repeat candidate Cuauhtemoc Cardenas of the left-leaning Democratic Revolutionary Party. He claims the PRI cheated him out of the presidency in 1988, when he lost to Carlos Salinas de Gortari.

Up to 30 percent of voters are reported undecided, and opponents speculated Tuesday that the governing party could lose ground to rivals if another televised debate were held.

The leader of Cardenas' party, Porfirio Munoz Ledo, told the official Notimex news agency that Pichardo's statement was "clear evidence" of such fear by the ruling party to debate Cardenas in particular.

But Zedillo told The Associated Press last week he had invited all nine candidates to a debate, but that no formal agreement could be struck.

"I haven't received a clear response. This matter is unclear but not on account of me," said Zedillo, who got a late start as stand-in for Luis Donaldo Colosio, the governing party candidate slain March 23 in Tijuana.

The demand for debates comes amid a clamor by democratic activists for an open campaign after 65 years of ruling party victories, often amid charges of vote fraud.

But late last week, privately owned TV giant Televisa, under fire for giving more and better coverage to the governing party's presidential candidate, offered free air time to the challengers.

The network normally charges $100,000 a minute for prime time political announcements, far beyond the budget of most opposition parties.

Televisa sent letters to all nine parties Friday, inviting them to submit three 15-minute programs to be aired four times each between July 18 and Aug. 13. Despite some complaints that it wasn't enough, the opposition candidates have happily accepted.

About 80 percent of the television audience in Mexico, a country of 84 million, tunes in to the network.

Ukrainian nationalists lose ground

KIEV, Ukraine (AP) — Ukraine's president-elect, Leonid Kuchma, speaks only halting Ukrainian and dismisses independence without economic alliance with Russia as a fantasy.

Ukraine's referendum on breaking away from the former Soviet Union, in which 90 percent of Ukrainians voted "yes" less than three years ago, now appears a distant past.

Yet it was precisely the promise of strengthening bonds with Russia that won Kuchma the election.

Where did Ukrainian nationalism go? Where does Ukraine go from here?

Parliamentary elections this spring saw Rukh — the name of the nationalist movement that spearheaded Ukraine's drive for independence — perform poorly against a rejuvenated Communist party.

Once considered the only viable alternative to Ukraine's Communists, Rukh appeared splintered and marginal, with its support base largely confined to western regions of the vast, 53-million nation. Rukh membership, once around 100,000, has dropped to as little as 20,000.

The presidential election was a disaster for the nationalists.

Failing to field a candidate, they pinned their hopes on the vanquished incumbent, Leonid Kravchuk. His loss leaves them apprehensive at what vision of Ukrainian statehood is harbored by Kuchma, whom they accuse of trying to make Ukraine subservient to Russia.

Political analysts explain the defeat of Kravchuk and his allies from the nationalist camp by their failure to deal with Ukraine's collapsing economy and provide a clear message of hope.

"Kravchuk gave people no immediate hope," said Markian Bilynskyi, the director of the Institute for Democracy, a Kiev think tank. "Kuchma offered a practical prescription which people could easily understand — restoring ties with Russia."

Rukh leaders like Vyacheslav Chornovil are forecasting an inevitable conflict between Kuchma and the nationalist western Ukraine.

Vatican denies rumors that pope is seriously ill

ROME (AP) — The Vatican again denied a rumor Tuesday that the pope is seriously ill. This time, the report came from a Brazilian cardinal who said he heard talk that John Paul II had a "bone tumor."

"The rumors regarding a presumed bone tumor that supposedly afflicts the Holy Father are absolutely false," Vatican spokesman Monsignor Piero Pennacchini said.

In an interview aired Monday on Brazil's Povo de Fortaleza network, Cardinal Aloisio Lorscheider said he "had heard it said" during a recent trip to the Vatican that the 74-year-old pope had a bone tumor.

The rumored ailment is said to have contributed to a fall in April in which the pontiff broke his thigh bone, according to the interview. The cardinal said he could not confirm the rumor.

Brazil may lose nearly half of next coffee crop

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — The latest cold snap that swept over large coffee-growing regions in southern Brazil means close to half of next year's coffee crop may have been destroyed, exporters said Tuesday.

Freezing temperatures in the coffee-growing states of Parana, Minas Gerais and Sao Paulo over the weekend may have destroyed the equivalent of up to 5 million bags, according to Jair Coser, president of the Federation of Brazilian Coffee Exporters.

Added to the 5 million bags the government estimates were lost in an frost two weeks ago, that means Brazil could lose nearly half of the 22.5 million bags estimated for the 1994-1995 crop, he said. Each bag weighs 132.3 pounds.

Overweight
It's not your fault

Research sites chemical or metabolism disorders as the leading cause of weight problems. The fact is most overweight people eat less and more healthy than most people who are able to maintain their weight.

The abuse of fat and calories did not create the problem and restrictive calorie dieting offers only temporary success. Low calorie/fat dieting can further deteriorate our Metabolism and Sugar System, therefore we often gain back more weight than we lose.

The M Balance weight management system is a one-on-one diagnostic diet program designed to analyze the rate our body uses energies and all those things that may influence weight control.

No pills, formulas or pre-packaged foods. Losing weight is not the same as solving a weight problem.

IRA shoots down helicopter

The outlawed Irish Republican Army claimed responsibility for shooting down this British Royal Air Force Puma helicopter Tuesday. The 12 soldiers and three crewmembers on board miraculously escaped injury when IRA mortar fire knocked the chopper out of the sky over Newtownhamilton, Northern Ireland.

Rwandan rebels launch offensive

■ Rebel advance drives tens of thousands of panicked refugees into last third of country still in government hands.

Associated Press

KIGALI, Rwanda — Rebels launched a new offensive against cornered government troops, advancing to the outskirts of the western town of Ruhengeri, the top rebel leader said Tuesday. The road from the town swarmed with thousands of refugees.

Ruhengeri is Rwanda's third-largest city and one of the last government strongholds. It is on a direct line west toward government-held Gisenyi on the Zairean border, and rebels dominated by the minority Tutsi tribe have been moving toward it for weeks since securing their hold on the north.

The rebels have captured about two-thirds of the country, including the capital of Kigali.

"Right now our forces are moving," said Alexis Kanyarengwe, chairman of the rebel Rwandan Patriotic Front. "They are close to entering the city."

The rebels' western advance has driven tens of thousands of panicked refugees into the last third of the country still in government hands, said Nina Winquist of the Red Cross.

"The road from Ruhengeri is flooded with refugees," Winquist said. "It is like a mass hysteria — there are 10 people per square meter on the move."

With more than half a million people displaced by war, the tiny Central African nation is suffering a refugee disaster of immense proportions, Winquist said. She appealed to aid agencies to quickly move in before famine and disease rage out of control.

The refugees fear the rebels will take revenge against Hutu civilians for the murder of hundreds of thousands of Tutsis by Hutu death squads. But so far there have been no reports of retribution killings by the rebels, U.N. special envoy Shaharyar Khan has said.

The death squads, trained by the Hutu-led government, went on a three-month spree killing minority Tutsis and anyone else it considered an opponent. Aid agencies estimate more than 500,000 people died in the orgy of violence that erupted after the Hutu president died April 6 in a mysterious plane crash.

Kanyarengwe, the rebel leader, repeated the rebels' vow to never negotiate with the government, which they and the United Nations blame for the massacres.

"If our forces continue, they will meet the government with an arrest warrant in their hands," he told reporters at a captured army barracks in Kigali.

As the RPF comes closer to holding the whole country, it has put increasing pressure on France to withdraw the 2,500 soldiers that came to Rwanda on a humanitarian mission to prevent more massacres.

French Defense Minister Francois Leotard told France-2 television on Tuesday that 300 of the soldiers would be withdrawn by July 31.

The French forces have carved out a security zone in southwestern Rwanda to protect people endangered by the carnage. But the RPF is suspicious of France's intentions because of its former close relations with the Rwandan government.

Despite the rebels' hard line about negotiating with the government, there was hope of a settlement. Some government army officers "did not dip their hands in the blood of the massacres," Kanyarenwe said, and the rebels hoped to reach a cease-fire with them within days.

The rebels were also consulting with opposition party leaders and "all conditions have been met to announce a new, broad-based government before Sunday," he said.

Little more than a week into rebel rule, a new calm had settled over Kigali. Most rebel roadblocks had disappeared and thousands of Hutu and Tutsi refugees were returning to the war-shattered city.

Also Tuesday, the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees said mortality rates have soared in a Rwandan refugee camp in Tanzania because of the weak condition of new arrivals.

Anti-whaling activists get charged in Norway

OSLO, Norway (AP) — Norwegian authorities on Tuesday charged three anti-whaling activists with cutting the wire to a harpooned whale.

Under Norwegian law, the offense, perceived as serious criminal damage, carries a maximum jail penalty of four years.

The court of the Rogaland province in south-western Norway also put a $29,000 lien on the Greenpeace vessel Sirius to compensate the captain of the whaling vessel Senet for the alleged loss of income caused by three Greenpeace actions against it.

"We will continue to keep up the pressure on Norwegian whalers as long as they continue to kill whales," said activist Paul Horsman aboard the Sirius.

The Senet left port Tuesday, under coast guard protection until the end of the whaling season August 15.

Italy recalls diplomats from Algeria after battle near embassy

■ Italians react after Islamic militants kill 51 foreigners in less than year.

Associated Press

ALGIERS, Algeria — A gunbattle near the Italian Embassy killed four people Tuesday, prompting Italy to recall some diplomatic staff and to increase embassy security amid an escalating terror campaign by Muslim extremists.

The shootout came six days after assassins slit the throats of seven Italian sailors aboard a docked freighter.

Seven East Europeans were shot to death in two attacks Monday and four Algerians also died in violence linked to the rebellion by militant Islamic fundamentalists against the military-installed secular government.

The militants are trying to weaken the regime by driving away foreign business and technical expertise and investment capital. They have slain 51 foreigners since September.

In Tuesday's clash, gunmen ambushed police patrolling in an unmarked car in the hilly embassy quarter, a wealthy area where foreigners had felt relatively secure.

Two gunmen, believed to be Muslim militants, and two police officers died. A third gunman was arrested by security forces sent to help the patrol, authorities said on condition of anonymity.

The shootout seemed certain to increase fear among the dwindling foreign community.

In Rome, Italian officials said the government had not decided how many embassy personnel to call home or how many new guards to add at the embassy.

Livio Caputo, an undersecretary in Italy's Foreign Ministry, said Italian companies had been asked to consider pulling workers out of Algeria. He said the government had stopped issuing permits for Italians to work in Algeria.

About 750 Italians live in Algeria.

Meanwhile, the body of a proofreader for the newspaper Le Soir d'Algerie was found Tuesday, two days after men dressed as police abducted her, the paper said. Yasmina Drici's throat had been cut. Journalists have been a favorite target of Islamic militants.

Sources at the newspaper, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Ms. Drici had been kidnapped with a Polish woman. The information could not be immediately confirmed.

Anti-regime strikers threaten Nigerian oil exports

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — Business ground to a halt and strikers threatened Nigeria's oil exports Tuesday in the most dramatic show of opposition yet to Gen. Sani Abacha's military regime.

Almost all business stopped in Lagos, nerve center of the economy and home to 5 million people. Armed police patrolled the city streets. Workers were reported staying home in several other cities in southern Nigeria, where opposition to the dictatorship is strongest.

The stay-at-home strikes cut across all sectors in Lagos and were even honored by federal employees, despite threats from Abacha. Banks closed, buses and ferries stopped running, and people walking to work found their offices empty.

Most of Nigeria's commercial activity and all the West African nation's petroleum fields, which provide 80 percent of government revenue, are in the south. The growing fuel shortage has caused blackouts and water cuts in Lagos.

Since seizing power in November, Abacha has dissolved elected governments and jailed dozens of journalists, human rights activists and politicians, including the apparent winner of the 1993 presidential election, Moshood K.O. Abiola.

Most oil workers went on strike July 4 to demand Abiola's release and Abacha's ouster. Oil company managers at the Warri refinery in southwestern Nigeria joined the strike Monday, shutting down production and crippling the nation's major source of revenue.

Kenneth Narebor, deputy general secretary fo the Petroleum and Natural Gas Senior Staff Association, said pipelines at two of the biggest export terminals, off southern Port Harcourt and Warri, would run dry by Wednesday or Thursday.

Abacha appeared on television late Monday and said, "All apologists of civil disobedience will be severely dealt with." Last week, his government said anyone who interfered with the military's attempts to keep the oil industry going would face the death penalty.

The strikes, which are in large part economically driven, represent the biggest challenge to the military government since similar actions forced out Abacha's predecessor, Gen. Ibrahim Babangida, last August.

Nigeria is virtually bankrupt after years of corruption and mismanagement by a succession of military rulers.

Kidnappers release banker held in Brazil

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — Kidnappers released a 45-year-old banker held more than two months, after receiving a reported ransom of $2 million.

Ezequiel Edmond Nasser, owner of the Excel Bank, was released Monday night in Sao Bernardo do Campo, a suburb of São Paulo, police said Tuesday.

Neither Nasser's family nor police would say how much ransom was paid, but the O Estado de Sao Paulo newspaper, citing unidentified police sources, put the ransom at $2 million. The kidnappers had demanded $12 million, the newspaper said.

Nasser was abducted April 29 as he and his wife drove toward their home in the posh neighborhood of Morumbi. The kidnappers intercepted Nasser's car and shot and and killed his bodyguard before forcing the banker into another vehicle. Nasser's wife, Joelle, was left behind unharmed.

Nasser's press spokesman, Mauro Lopes, told reporters Nasser was not harmed.

Shots can protect American society

Childhood diseases such as hepatitis, mumps, measles and polio have not been major problems in American society for nearly half a century thanks to immunization programs widely endorsed and carried out in years past.

The diseases still exist, however, and could threaten the population once again if more Americans fail to recognize the importance of childhood immunizations.

Fortunately, the immunizations are being made available through a program called Shots Across Texas and in Midland, the city's health department will offer two free immunization clinics before the 1994-95 school year begins in August.

One clinic will be offered from 1-5 p.m. July 23 at Southeast Senior Center and another will be conducted from 6-8 p.m. Aug. 11-12 at Goddard Junior High School. Of course, those unable to take advantage of the free clinics may obtain immunizations for their children for $10 per child at the Midland Health Department.

Both President Clinton and Gov. Richards are pushing the immunization of all children — and with good reason. They recognize that the immunization program prevents misery and heartache by keeping our society virtually free of the deadly childhood diseases.

All Midlanders with young children should make plans now to take advantage of the free immunization clinics to be given later this summer or to get their children immunized at another health facility. The immunizations are important to keep the scourge of childhood diseases from ever threatening our society again.

America seems to be losing drug war

WASHINGTON — The government's much ballyhooed war on drugs shows scant signs of victory, perhaps because drug runners are using ever more ingenious ways of concealing the contraband they ship to the United States.

Anderson

A federal information-sharing unit run by the Drug Enforcement Administration and a half dozen other federal agencies in El Paso keeps track of the concealment methods and prepares special reports for other law enforcement agencies.

The reports are stamped "Confidential" and not intended for publication, but we've reviewed several of them.

Among other things, the reports show that some drug runners are also adept wood craftsmen and metal workers. For instance, U.S. Customs officials in New York City recently found more than 30 pounds of opium sticks in the hollow backings of pictures and plaques arriving from Iran. Ironically, all of these pictures and plaques bore the stern visage of the Ayatollah Khomeini.

Hiding drugs inside large containers ostensibly carrying innocent items, like farm equipment and wooden furniture, into America is such a favorite of smugglers, the DEA recently prepared an advisory to law enforcement officials about some of the more creative "containers."

Eight pounds of heroin were found inside four hand-crafted wooden room dividers arriving in San Francisco from Thailand. Wooden lamps and gaming tables coming from Lebanon into the San Diego airport were found to contain 260 pounds of hashish in backgammon tables and 15 pounds of hashish oil in the lamps.

Carved wooden figurines are another favorite. DEA agents in Seattle reported seeing a crack in a wooden bust of a South American Indian coming from Rio de Janeiro, Brazil. Suspecting the piece had been sawed in half and glued back together, agents popped it open and found 4 kilograms of cocaine.

Another confidential DEA report noted that U.S. Customs marijuana seizures of this type at Miami, Atlanta and Guatemala City have generally involved commercial air couriers from Caribbean countries.

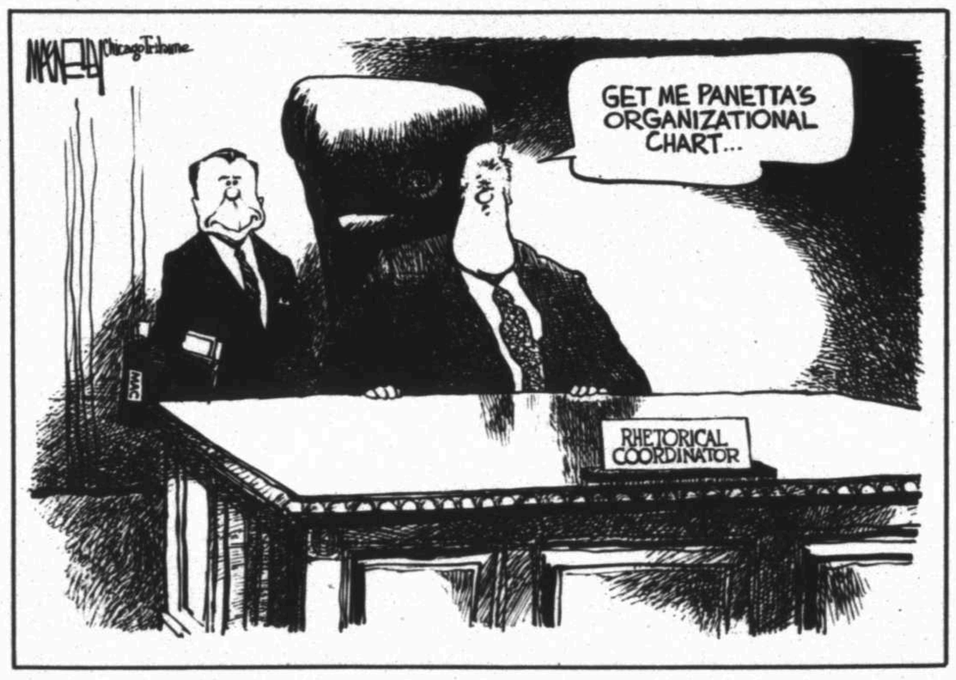

Traffickers will also hollow out the frames and runners of wooden shipping crates and pallets to conceal drugs. One seizure of shipping crates arriving at Miami International Airport on a commercial flight from Colombia yielded 94 pounds of concealed cocaine.

Another smuggling group, from Lisbon, Portugal, tested the use of hollowed-out shipping crates by concealing 43 bottles of wine. One confidential report notes that "it was an apparent 'dry run' test of the false floored shipping crate" which U.S. Customs discovered.

One interesting method originating in Thailand is the use of plywood sheets specially laminated to create internal compartments, or a stack of plywood sheets strapped together to conceal a large internal void area.

In the first instance, DEA agents discovered a pile of plywood in a Bangkok storage facility whose sheets were 1-1/8 inches thick. "Plywood sheets are seldom manufactured in thicknesses greater than 3/4 inches so suspicion was aroused," an intelligence report says. Though it appeared externally that the sheets were three sheets glued together, the middle was a false one concealing a large quantity of "Thai stick" marijuana packages.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

'To overhear' becomes part of language

The language of penetrated privacy has a new noun.

The verb to overhear, "to hear what is not intended by the speaker to be heard," has been used by snoopers since 1549, when a man on the gallows murmured a message meant for a lieutenant, but — according to a sermon by Bishop Hugh Latimer — "the worde was over heard."

Safire

The word over is used in this verb not in the sense of "above" but with the meaning of "beyond," as in "to hear beyond the intended reach of the voice."

But what shall we call the overheard remark itself? Eavesdrop is a verb, rarely used as a noun. When my telephone was wiretapped, the content of that eavesdropping activity was called the tap, or when recorded in written form, the "tap transcript." No noun existed for the overheard conversation itself.

The language vacuum has been filled. The other day I called Joseph diGenova, a Washington lawyer who serves as an independent counsel investigating the unlawful disclosure of the Clinton passport files during the campaign of 1992.

My purpose was to find out the status of the investigation, which has been delayed by the tainting of evidence by some illegal eavesdropping (euphemized as "monitoring") within the Department of State.

"Can't talk about the overhears," he said.

Switching to a linguistic mode, I asked what an overhear is. Long pause, during which I presume the prosecutor was mentally reviewing Rule 6 (e) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, forbidding the disclosure of grand jury proceedings. Assured of the query's exclusively lexicographic thrust, the lawyer promised to get back to me by fax.

Which he did. An overhear, in law-enforcement circles, is defined by diGenova as "surreptitious interception (usually electronically) of oral communications."

Eavesdropping has a nice etymology. The eaves of a house are the ends of the roof that overhang the windows. The eavesdrop is the water that drops from the eaves. An intrusive person who wants to overhear what is going on inside stands next to the window, close up against the wall, within the eavesdrop.

What the eavesdropper is getting is an overhear.

INCORRECTIONS

Beware of incorrections, a word coined by my chief language associate, Jeffrey McQuain, to denote those false settings-straight by the inexpert or too-expert.

When I referred to one on one as "a basketball defense," the incorrections dribbled in. Larry Lesser of Washington pointed out that what I meant was man to man: "One on one is a variant basketball game for two people." Larry Craig of Huntsville, Ala., agreed that one on one is "the title of a two-person basketball game in which one player plays against another."

That's one meaning, but in current usage, one on one also refers to defensive maneuvering by a basketball team, perhaps developed from man to man and influenced by the general replacement of man by person ("one person, one vote"; "person of the week," etc.). "The Language of Sport" by Tim Considine lists the two-player game as a secondary meaning, with the primary sense "a situation in which a player offensively or defensively . . .is confronted by a single opponent" and an extended meaning of letting one person interact with another unbothered by interlopers. The term also appears in football. An undated citation in Merriam-Webster's Sports Dictionary quotes O.J. Simpson, in his playing days: "If we at least clear enough of their guys out to leave me one on one with the last tackler, that's cool, because one on one is my game."

Another incorrection: "The world of transportation shaves words and phrases," I wrote, "like no other." Isabelle Loughlin of New York gently objects: "I'd correct like to as. Maybe I'm not with it and the rule has been changed." Nope: like is correct as a preposition taking an object ("no other"). Had I added a verb ("like no other can" or "like no other has"), then like would be replaced by the conjunction as. The rule is as it was (not like it was); when a verb follows, the clause requires a conjunction as, not the preposition like."

In the same way, the great horde known as the Gotcha! Gang descended on me for writing about "sources more adept than me."

"You used me where the nominative was called for," snorted Dr. and Mrs. Darwin Prockop of Philadelphia, in unison. Sorry, all you staunch nominatarians: I treat than as a preposition, calling for the objective me. You can zig with your old ways, but the world has zagged.

N.Y.'s ex-Mayor Koch enjoys life on sidelines

That ubiquitous citizen and former municipal chief executive Edward I. (Call me Ed) Koch is writing up a storm these days.

He has the useful habit of circulating photocopies of everything written by or about him. It makes for a thick folder, especially when you count his movie reviews. (Hated "Wolf," loved "Speed.")

There are some persistent themes. Things have not worked so well since you-know-who left office. Some Kochian ideas were so far ahead of their time that their true brilliance is only now being recognized.

Sometimes he perceives that city, state, nation and world are on a toboggan to doomsday. In his darker moods, he can even identify the pushers of that toboggan. These satanic forces include, we blush to report, this editorial page.

The destruction of civilization as we know it is a mighty task, but in the World According to Koch, somebody has to do it. Otherwise there would be no need for the saving wisdom of He Who Is Constantly Approached By People Saying "We Wish You Were Still Mayor."

By lunching with Koch in his favorite midtown restaurants, it is possible to see that people really do say that to him all the time. After they say it with sufficient fervor they are then allowed to proceed to their tables.

Koch supported Rudolph Giuliani for mayor and seems to think he is doing all right — with some thunderous exceptions like the fire-sale price on the Coliseum.

There is a Kochian theory that covers the stuff Giuliani has managed to get right. It was elaborated in a recent column with the implicit theme that the incumbent mayor is getting a lot of mileage out of Some Other Person's brainstorms. The column ran under what must stand as the quintessential Koch headline to date: "They booed me for ideas they applaud today."

What is sweeter than vindication to a politician? The word comeback may leap to some minds, but probably not to Koch's. He has settled into the cloistered life of the scribe. Not for him the long-nursed grudges and greedy feuds of the electoral jousts. Besides, as he likes to wisecrack, the voters abandoned him and now they must suffer.

On the other hand, if Giuliani ever runs across a column headlined "Tanned, Rested and Ready," he had better call David Garth straightaway.

Arafat tries to collect elusive economic aid

Among the awkward transitions for Yasser Arafat as he segues from terrorist to head of a mini-state is the switch from collecting blood money to collecting aid money.

So far he has fumbled the opportunity, and the Gaza and Jericho Palestinians who now must depend upon Arafat can only hope he will manage the turnaround soon.

Arafat made a politically correct debut in the two territories for which the Palestine Liberation Organization has negotiated limited autonomy.

He was generally restrained and responsible, descriptions that don't ordinarily twinkle around the Arafat name. Israel, which does not praise lightly, spoke approvingly of his performance.

But even as Arafat begins to regularize Palestinian affairs, he is kvetching hugely about a supposed betrayal by the West: Donors have ponied up little of the $720 million they promised this year to help grease the transition, the down payment on a five-year, $2.4 billion commitment.

That's the old Arafat, laying off his own shortcomings on a handy scapegoat and playing to the well-honed Arab knack for believing almost any conspiracy over any obvious explanation.

The obvious explanation in this instance is that the 43 donor nations, with the World Bank handling their affairs, have insisted the PLO put little financial niceties like budgeting and accounting in place before they start off-loading megabucks.

The donors don't mean to manipulate proto-Palestine, a suspicion Arafat has tried to retail. They just want minimum assurances that some substantial part of their contribution will actually go to the governance for which it is intended.

PLO officials have a well-earned reputation for — let's be kind here — a certain untidiness with money. No one was on the PLO's back about it before.

Most of the longtime Arab sugar-and-oil daddies who kept PLO biggies in the style to which they were pleased to have become accustomed paid up just to hold PLO radicalism at arm's length from their own conservative regimes.

The contributions were more like protection money than fraternal sharing.

Now the PLO has to start delivering public services instead of rhetoric, and the pressure to produce is as much internal as external. Islamic movements that reject any peace with Israel are using their own efficient schools, clinics and other amenities as political magnets.

As Arafat begins to settle in, there are encouraging signs he is learning to apply the escape artist's survival skills he showed as head of the revolutionary PLO to the different menaces he faces as head of a domesticating PLO.

The novice Palestinian police are so far proving credible. And Arafat had himself sworn in as head of the new Palestine authority on both the Koran and the Bible, recognition of the important Christian minority among Palestinians and in the authority — and a gesture pointedly beyond his fundamentalist challengers.

The moment was canny political theater worthy of a Chicago machine pol juggling a polyglot ward. The Middle East is one of the few places where you can say politics is improving the closer it gets to Chicago's.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, July 13, the 194th day of 1994. There are 171 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On July 13th, 1793, French revolutionary writer Jean Paul Marat was stabbed to death in his bath by Charlotte Corday. (The assassination inspired the famous painting by Jacques Louis David; Corday was executed four days after slaying Marat.)

On this date:

In 1787, Congress enacted an ordinance governing the Northwest Territory.

In 1821, Confederate cavalry commander Nathan Bedford Forrest was born in Bedford County, Tenn.

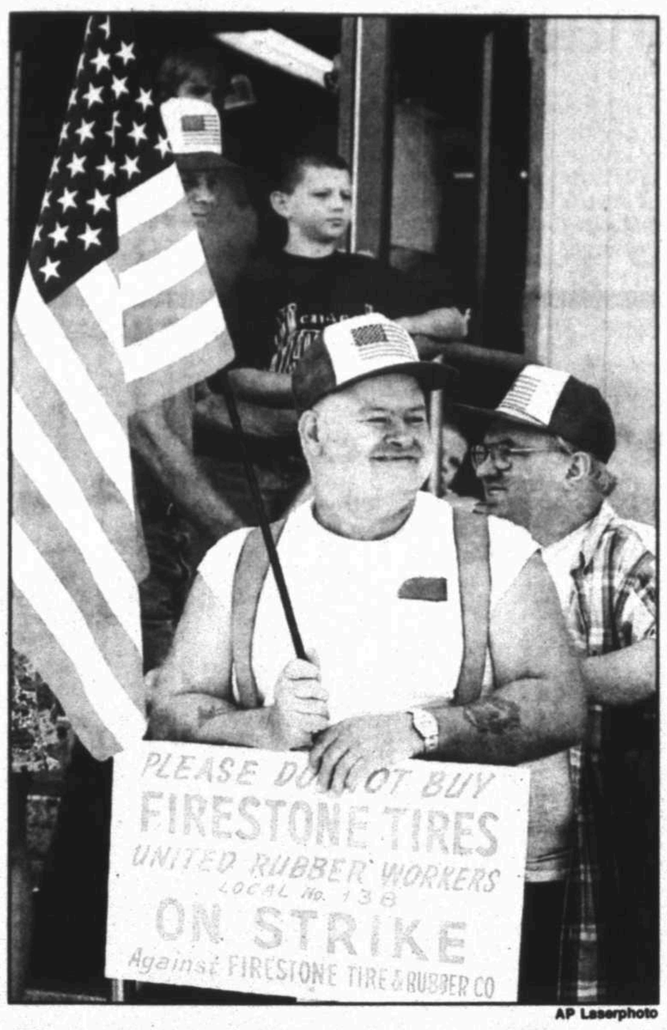

In 1863, rioting against the Civil War military draft erupted in New York City; the violence resulted in about 1,000 deaths over three days.

In 1878, the Treaty of Berlin amended the terms of the Treaty of San Stefano, which had ended the Russo-Turkish War of 1877-78.

In 1960, Massachusetts Sen. John F. Kennedy won the Democratic presidential nomination at his party's convention in Los Angeles.

In 1967, race-related rioting broke out in Newark, N.J.; by the time the violence ended July 17th, 27 people had been killed.

In 1972, George McGovern was nominated for president on the first ballot at the Democratic National Convention in Miami Beach, Fla.

Clinton on Haiti: We must end this

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Clinton administration is using Haiti's ouster of human rights monitors as a way to goad reluctant nations into tightening economic sanctions.

The administration also hopes the latest action by Haiti's military rulers will help U.S. efforts to enlist other nations in a peacekeeping force that would enter Haiti once democracy was restored. So far, about a dozen countries, including Canada, have committed to supply some 2,000 to 3,000 troops to a potential force that U.S. officials hope will number about 9,000, a State Department official said.

President Clinton, asked Tuesday about the possibility of invading the Caribbean nation to oust its military rulers, said Haiti's action "certainly validates the position we've taken so far that that's an option we shouldn't rule out."

"We have got to bring an end to this," Clinton told a news conference following meetings with officials of Germany and the European Union in Berlin. "This is a not only illegal but highly repressive regime and we have to keep the pressure up."

Haiti on Monday ordered some 100 human rights monitors from the United Nations and the Organization of American States to leave the country, where elected President Jean-Bertrand Aristide was ousted in a September 1991 coup.

Although the order represents a setback in monitoring human rights abuses, it could also give the administration new ammunition in its bid to enlist other countries in isolating Haiti's rulers economically. U.S. unilateral sanctions go beyond those passed by the U.N.

The Haitians' latest action should "stiffen the will of the international community" against the coup leaders, Clinton said. He urged other nations to enforce strong sanctions.

In particular, U.S. officials said they will make a renewed push for other countries to join the United States in freezing Haitians' assets and banning financial transactions with Haiti. In addition, France is being pressed to discontinue flights to Haiti by Air France, the only foreign carrier still operating there.

U.N. sanctions that took effect May 21 include a recommended freeze on the assets of military officers and their supporters, a much more narrow restriction than the U.S. action. In addition, the U.N. has imposed a trade embargo on all but humanitarian aid and food.

The new action by the Haitian military "has heightened the sense of urgency," said William Gray III, Clinton's special adviser on Haiti.

"We have got to press hard as an international community, and we have got to get more people to join in tightening the noose economically and diplomatically," he said in an NBC "Today" interview.

Report: Disney's 'Lion King' has some film buffs fuming

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The name of the cuddly orphan cub in Disney's "The Lion King" is Simba. The hero of a Japanese cartoon seen across America in the 1960s was an orphaned lion named Kimba.

Coincidence?

Disney has called the summer blockbuster its first cartoon feature since 1970 not taken from an existing story, but a laundry list of similarities with "Kimba, the White Lion" have some animation buffs up in arms.

"The parallels are stunning," Fred Ladd, the American producer for the Kimba series, told the San Francisco Chronicle in a story published Tuesday.

"I've received calls every day from people all over the country who are outraged by this," said Robin Leyden, a former animator who wrote a history of the "Kimba" TV series.

Both stories feature:

- Orphaned lion princes who lose their crowns to an evil adult lion, then reclaim their thrones.
- Good lions aided by a wise old baboon and a talkative bird, while evil lions get help from hyenas.
- Kimba's foe was a one-eyed lion named Claw. Simba's is a lion named Scar, who has a scar over one eye.
- Some specific images, including the promotional shot of a lion on a jutting rock and the outline of a dead father lion in the clouds talking to his son.

Disney declined to comment on the record Tuesday, but an employee who demanded anonymity told The Associated Press that there was no story-borrowing on "The Lion King."

Disney's claim of originality is backed up by an official with the company founded by Osamu Tezuka, the late Japanese cartoonist who created "Kimba."

"Kimba" was born in the 1950s when Tezuka wrote a comic book called "Jungle Emperor." It spawned a Japanese TV series called "Kimba, The White Lion," which was shown dubbed into English in the United States beginning in 1966.

"The Lion King," has earned more than $143 million in a month of ticket sales, making it 1994's top film.

Georgians wait, paddle, wade through flood that's moving south

BAINBRIDGE, Ga. (AP) — Tensions mounted in sweltering shelters Tuesday as residents stacked sandbags all over town to keep out the big surge of floodwaters still two days away.

Daniel Jones spent his fourth day in a school gym-turned-shelter with his wife and five young children. With the Flint River not expected to crest until Thursday, he won't go home for days.

"I'm not doing anything but watch my kids and watch TV," he said. "I'm feeling tense. ... It's holding everybody from their homes."

About 4,000 of the southwestern Georgia city's 12,000 residents fled in advance of the flooding, spawned last week by Tropical Storm Alberto.

At least 28 people have been killed in Georgia as the muddy floodwaters have surged southward through the state.

Disaster officials refused to estimate the damage from the flooding, which has submerged 300,000 acres of cropland, left 175,000 people without drinking water and washed out hundreds of roads.

An earthen dike was holding firm at a fertilizer plant south of town, where the water was only about a foot deep Tuesday.

National Guardsmen and inmates built the dike to shield a tank containing 9 million pounds of dry ammonia. Authorities feared that water could shut down the equipment that keeps the ammonia frozen, releasing poisonous ammonia gas.

President Clinton plans to visit Albany, about 50 miles upstream from Bainbridge, to view the damage there today. The Flint crested in Albany at 20 feet above flood stage Monday and is expected to remain near that level for five days.

Farther north, in Macon County, the ghastly stench of 250,000 rotting chickens from the Simmons family farm covered a mile and a half stretch of road Tuesday.

National Guard troops and county emergency workers, wearing masks, high rubber boots and heavy gloves, used pitchforks to lift the drowned and decaying carcasses. Chicken feathers dotted the road leading to the farm.

Police take O.J.'s hair, want Cowlings

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Police took hair samples from O.J. Simpson on Tuesday to compare with those found in a knit cap at the scene of his ex-wife's slaying.

The investigators spent about an hour at Men's Central Jail, where Simpson is being held without bail on murder charges.

He is charged in the June 12 stabbing deaths of Nicole Brown Simpson, 35, and her friend, Ronald Goldman, 25, outside her Brentwood condominium.

"We were here to execute a court order regarding hair samples for Mr. Simpson," Detective Tom Lange told reporters as he left the jail carrying an evidence envelope.

Municipal Court Judge Kathleen Kennedy-Powell had ruled that prosecutors were entitled to obtain 40 to 100 hairs from Simpson for comparison.

Authorities have said they want to use DNA testing to compare the hairs.

In another development, police asked the district attorney to bring charges against O.J. Simpson's friend Al Cowlings.

"We were presented with the packet today," said district attorney's spokeswoman Sandi Gibbons. "We will review it and determine if there is sufficient evidence to prove to a jury beyond a reasonable doubt that the suspect committed a crime."

Cowlings drove the white Ford Bronco seen by millions of people on national television during a 60-mile police chase June 17. Simpson cowered in the back, holding a gun to his head at times.

Simpson fled after learning that he was about to be charged with murdering Ms. Simpson and Goldman.

After the chase ended in Simpson's driveway, Cowlings was arrested for investigation of aiding Simpson's escape and freed on $250,000 bail.

Simpson attorney Robert Shapiro has said Simpson planned to go to his ex-wife's grave and commit suicide, but Cowlings talked him out of it.

Pornography soils weapons lab computers

LIVERMORE, Calif. (AP) — Chagrined officials who discovered a pornographic picture gallery in computers at one of the nation's three nuclear weapons laboratories say it's hard to prevent that kind of misuse of technology.

An employee at Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory was place on leave while officials investigate how more than 1,000 pornographic images were smuggled into lab computers.

"In the brand new information superhighway, there really is no highway patrol," lab spokesman Jeff Garberson said Tuesday. "We all have a lot to learn about how to control wrongdoing and even how to define it."

The computers were shut down after an investigation by The Los Angeles Times uncovered software piracy on the Internet, a network of thousands of computer networks. It was originally designed to connect computers at universities and government research labs but is now used by millions of people.

But it is also abused by "pirates" who traffic in illegal or illegally obtained electronic information. The pirates can tap into computers from anywhere in the world, and tracing them is difficult.

"We are currently tracking over 1,600 pirate sites on the Internet in a joint investigation with the FBI," said Peter Beruk of the Software Publishers Association, which represents major software manufacturers. "It is a very serious and costly problem."

Federal grants

WASHINGTON — Forty-four Texas communities, including the state's largest cities, have applied for status that would make them eligible for federal grants, tax breaks and other aid to stimulate business growth in poor urban and rural areas.
Those areas were among more than 500 nationwide that have applied to become empowerment zones or enterprise communities, Housing Secretary Henry Cisneros and Agriculture Secretary Mike Espy announced Tuesday. "The program will help some of the most impoverished communities across the country take control of their own destiny through economic development," Espy said. "Behind each application is a community that has come together, talked together, worked together, planned together." After departmental review, Cisneros and Espy later this year will select six urban areas and three rural locations for empowerment zone status.

Couple's $5,000 donation has life-saving potential

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

A grant from a Midland couple has the potential to save lives.

James and Juandelle Lacy have donated $5,000 to offer breast cancer screening to 96 local women.

The Lacys donated the money to fund a grant for the American Cancer Society's Texas Breast Screening Project.

"The project is aimed at providing education and early detection of abnormalities," said Duane McBride, American Cancer Society field representative for District 2.

McBride said the program is for women, age 40 and older and in the lower economic status, "who don't have any symptoms" of breast cancer.

"Women with any symptoms should be seeing a doctor already," McBride said.

Interested women may go to the Midland Health Department or Planned Parenthood of West Texas to apply for the mammograms.

"The program is targeted to under-served women who might not have any insurance, or may have insurance that doesn't cover mammograms, or to low-income single moms," McBride said.

The mammograms will be performed by the Allison Breast Screening Service Center.

"For women who haven't had this before, this will provide them with a blueprint to compare with future mammograms," McBride said.

In the United States about one out of every nine women will develop breast cancer at some time during her life, according to information from the American Cancer Society.

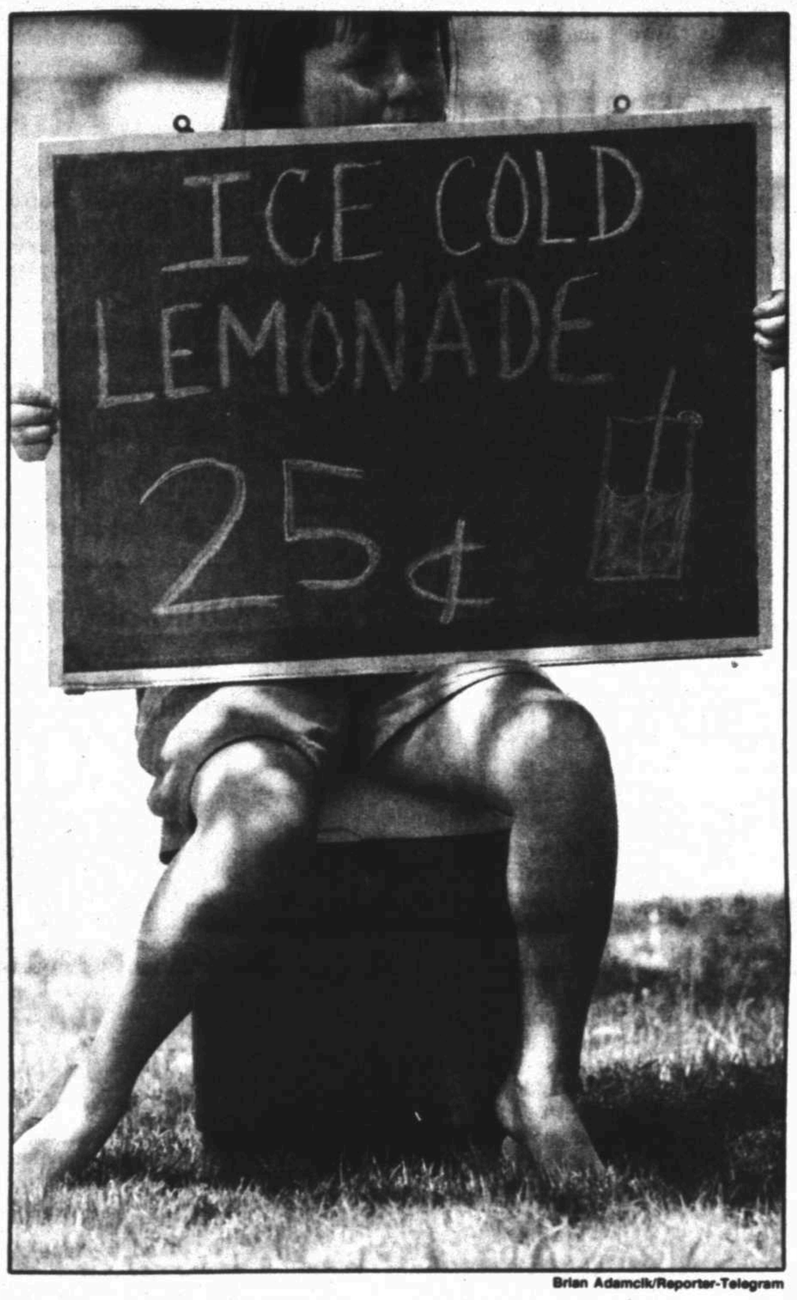

Breast cancer is currently the No. 2 cancer killer of American women. However, if cancer is caught early, there is a high cure rate.

A low-dose X-ray or mammogram can detect cancer in its earliest stage, when chances for a cure are the highest.

The survival rate for detected cancer — which is not invasive — is 100 percent. However, the survival rate decreases to 69 percent for cancer detected in a later stage.

Warning symptoms of breast cancer include lumps or thickenings, changes in the contour of the breast; dimpling, scaling or puckering of the skin around the nipple; or secretion from the nipple.

Women interested in applying for the free service may call the Midland Health Department at 685-7370 or Planned Parenthood at 683-3691.

Council considers proposal to locate facility in Midland

■ Plant would produce low-cost electricity, 5 million gallons of reverse osmoses water a day.

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

A proposed $86 million electrical cogeneration facility — to produce low-cost electricity for sale to power companies and 5 million gallons of reverse osmosis water a day for municipal use — could be located in Midland, but there is a psychological barrier that could come into play.

Houston businessman Richard S. Moore asked the Midland City Council at Tuesday's meeting for permission to locate a plant here.

"We propose to fully finance the design, installation and operation of a reverse osmosis water treatment facility in conjunction with a 100 megawatt gas turbine based cogeneration facility," Moore said.

The proposed plant would use waste natural-gas products — which area refiners are forced to burn away in flare stacks — to produce steam for the generation of electricity.

To gain federal tax credits and funding, a cogeneration plant must produce more than one product, explained Glen Hackler, assistant city manager. The plant would use reverse osmosis to process 5 million gallons of wastewater effluent into distilled-quality water.

This water would then be sold to the city at a small savings over the water pumped from the Lake Ivie reservoir.

Meeting covers collection fees, re-submissions

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Reducing commercial solid-waste collection fees and tightening up restrictions on re-submissions to the Planning and Zoning Commission were discussed at a Tuesday meeting of the Midland City Council.

City managers have researched commercial waste collection fees and discovered that some independent corporations are more competitive on price, costing the city some of its commercial customers.

To retain its customer base, a 10 percent reduction in price for each container was suggested at the meeting. This would make the city more competitive in the commercial waste-disposal market, which would help offset part of the cost of providing residential waste disposal, city officials said.

Council members were receptive to the suggestion, which should reappear as an agenda item, probably within 30 days, said Glen Hackler, assistant city manger.

Also to be presented for action by the council is a rewriting of the Midland City Code pertaining to decisions of the Planning and Zoning Commission.

In the past, many man hours have been wasted reviewing requests for re-

Workshop to help people through hard times

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Be it the loss of a loved one or the loss of a job, grieving is a process people must work through, and Hospice of Midland is offering free consultation in an upcoming four-session workshop.

These grief workshops were originally established in 1991 for families that were helped by hospice — which provides support to terminally ill people and their families.

There are usually about 20 people who come in for the free workshops, which are offered four times a year — in February, May, August and November, said Thelma Upton, hospice volunteer coordinator.

Of these, some will have recently lost a family member or friend, some will be experiencing a divorce, some will have recently lost their jobs and others will have experienced another kind of devastating loss, said Mark Mercer, a social worker who leads the workshops.

"The principles we talk about can be applied to almost any type of loss," he said.

Even the trauma of moving to another city can cause people to enter the grieving process, Mercer said.

It is "anything that has happened in your life that has caused you to experience loss," he said.

The four-session program will meet on Aug. 2, 9, 16, and 23. The meetings are set for 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. at Hospice House, 911 W. Texas Ave.

Grandmother promises return of orphaned twins in 24 hours

HOUSTON (AP) — A woman who fled the state rather than give up custody of her orphaned twin granddaughters Tuesday told authorities she would bring the girls back within 24 hours.

Phyllis Schlaepfer Durichek contacted the Harris County District Attorney's office at noon, four days after she was court-ordered to turn over Felicia and Natasha Schlaepfer to a Minnesota couple.

"We anticipate that there will be a return," said Cindy Merrill, the prosecutor handling the matter.

Ms. Merrill would not say where Mrs. Durichek had called from or exactly when

TU Electric withdraws opposition to Cap Rock's transmission line

Staff Report

Cap Rock Electric announced Tuesday that TU Electric had withdrawn its opposition to Cap Rock's new 232-mile transmission line.

TU Electric had gone before the Texas Public Utilities Commission to oppose construction of the system. The new line puts Cap Rock in a position to buy power from Southwestern Public Service instead of TU Electric.

Teresa Kelly, spokeswoman for Cap Rock, said TU Electric's withdrawal of opposition means that the transmission system would likely be approved when the PUC meets in September. This would clear the way for the line's construction.

She said continued opposition would have meant that it would have been December before the system could have been approved.

Friends don't think missing woman 'just walked away'

ROUND ROCK — The search for Darlene Anderson by foot, horseback, car and aircraft last weekend failed to turn up any evidence of the missing former Midlander.

"There were several articles found but nothing that we can relate to her or to her disappearance," Round Rock police Det. Sgt. James Bond said on Tuesday. "We are still plugging."

The search — which was coordinated by the San Antonio-based Heidi Search Center — covered about 1,200 square miles in and around this community north of Austin. Among the estimated 500 volunteers who participated in the search were employees of Austin Semiconductor where Ms. Anderson is national marketing director, members of the armed forces, Civil Air Patrol pilots and flight observers, and many of her friends.

"It's just an absolute mystery, perplexing," said Barbara Ross, spokeswoman for Austin Semiconductor, which manufactures and markets semiconductors for space and military applications.

Ms. Anderson, 38, was a marketing engineer for Tex-

PLANT: Council considers proposal for facility

(From 1B)

Although engineers can show that the processed water — which has been demineralized by reverse osmosis and pasteurized at 180 degrees — is purer than Midland's tap water, there is a psychological barrier in some residents about this recycling of wastewater, city officials said.

Even if this psychological barrier is not overcome through public education, the 5 million gallons of potable, distilled-quality water can still benefit Midland, Hackler said.

Many industries can be attracted to a location with sufficient, highly purified water. Industries, such as semiconductor manufacturers, are dependent on large amounts of distilled-quality water, Hackler said.

"Distilled water . . . is very attractive to industry," said Ken Jones, the city's director of utilities.

About 2 million gallons of the distilled-quality water will be used to produce steam to run the electricity-generating turbines of the plant. The other 3 million gallons of pure water will be produced strictly for municipal use.

The greatest direct monetary benefits of the plant would be in the reduction of effluent discharge from the municipal wastewater treatment plant.

Since Midland has no river to discharge treated wastewater, the effluent is used on an irrigation farm. This facility, however, is being used near its limit and the council will probably be faced with upgrading the facility within the next 18 months.

The reduction of Midland's wastewater volume by 5 million gallons or more would relieve the city from capital expenditures to increase the size of the irrigation farm.

"This proposal is sound from both an engineering and an ecological basis," Jones said. "This plant could significantly extend the life of our water and wastewater treatment systems," he said.

Finally, the $86 million facility would increase ad velorum taxes to city coffers, Moore said.

Discussions on the proposed plant "are very preliminary," Hackler said. The matter was presented to the council in basic form to get an idea of how receptive council members would be.

"They wanted to know how receptive the council would be before they invested (money and man hours)" in preparing the proposal, Hackler said.

Council members were very interested in learning more about the proposed cogeneration plant. City mangers will be working to provide a more thorough prospectus for the council's consideration, Hackler said. This should again be presented to the council within 90 days, he said.

POLICE REPORTS

Monday

Theft: Cindy Barron reported a Nintendo and game cartridge were taken from 2600 N. Midkiff Road. It was reported at 9:48 p.m. zoning after they have already been turned down by the commission. The wording in the code pertaining to the holding of public hearings by the zoning commission is often unclear and the commission has allowed people to resubmit virtually the same request after it was denied.

New wording on the ordinance will probably include clearer language regarding re-submissions and require a two-thirds majority vote from the commission, Hackler said.

Also at the council meeting:

■ Contracts were authorized with N.C. Sturgeon for portions of the construction of a new vehicle maintenance barn.

■ Plans and specifications were approved for City Hall renovations.

■ Contracts were authorized with G&O Fence Inc., for the fence renovation project at Ida Jo Moore Park.

■ Contracts were authorized with the low bidder for Midkiff Road sewer improvement projects.

■ A company was approved for life insurance for city employees.

■ An agreement for maintenance and operation of a tennis center was made with Midland College.

■ Public improvements (sewer service) was deferred for a proposed plat along the north side of Solomon Lane west of Texas Highway 349.

■ A Southwestern Bell rate reduction was approved.

■ A water service agreement was made with the Midland Independent School District for water outside the city limits.

■ Agreements were made for the continued furnishing of electrical service in the city by TU Electric.

■ A request from several corporations was approved for a zoning change on the west side of Loop 250 about one mile south of Wadley Avenue; the northwest corner of the intersection of Loop 250 and Big Spring Street; and between Austin Street and Midkiff Road about 300 feet north of Bedford Avenue.

Official: Texas dropout rate hits low

AUSTIN, Texas — Even though nearly one in five Texas students quits school before graduating, the state's dropout rate is the lowest it has ever been, Education Commissioner Lionel "Skip" Meno said Tuesday.

For the first time, the dropout rate dipped below 20 percent, to 18.42 percent in the 1992-93 school year, the latest for which statistics are available.

The rate is down from 20.7 percent the preceding year and is half what it was in 1987-88, when 34 percent of students in grades seven through 12 quit.

"The point is that we're still losing one out of every five youngsters — that is a tragedy. But it's much less of a tragedy than losing one out of every three, which is where we were when we started this process," Meno said.

Meno called the improvement "a major accomplishment" in a string of successes, including higher student test scores. It was his third "good news" announcement on education in three weeks and was criticized by Republicans as being politically motivated.

NEW: TU withdraws opposition

(From 1B)

That late date would not have given Cap Rock enough time to disconnect from TU Electric by February 1, she said.

On that date, Cap Rock is scheduled to discontinue buying electrical power from TU Electric and to begin purchasing power from Southwestern Public Service.

In exchange for TU Electric withdrawing its opposition to Cap Rock's transmission system, Cap Rock agreed to withdraw its opposition to TU Electric's preferred deregulation rate plan that would give TU Electric permission to establish wholesale and large retail rates on a market by market basis.

SEARCH: Woman's whereabouts remain mystery

as Instruments in Midland until she took the Austin job more than a year ago.

Nothing was disturbed at her house or missing except for her main set of keys, Bond said. Her house and her car were locked. Her personal effects, including her wallet, purse and credit cards, were untouched.

And there has been "no activity" in Ms. Anderson's bank account since her June 27 disappearance, Ms. Ross said.

Ms. Ross said she "can't say enough good words about" the Heidi Search Center and the "wonderful" people it employs.

If Ms. Anderson had been kidnapped for some technological information or something similar, surely officials at Austin Semiconductor "would have heard something by now in the way of demand, ransom," Ms. Ross said. "The police have never mentioned it.

"You try to rack your brain, thinking 'Surely there's one more thing to do' or 'one more thing we haven't done' . . . It's such a shame; it really is," Ms. Ross said.

"None of us can believe that Darlene would just walk away," Ms. Ross said, although "people do that all of the time.

"And that's what makes it difficult for the police at the very beginning of these things. Because at that point, it is a missing person. And there's no crime against that," Ms. Ross said. But "not all of them (missing-person cases) are the same."

Ms. Anderson is devoted to her children and to her job, Ms. Ross said.

She and ex-husband Dan Anderson, a Midland insurance executive, have two children: Daniel, 14½, and Marlena, 12½. The children were with their father in his Gardendale home when Ms. Anderson disppeared.

The search for the 5-foot-8 Ms. Anderson intensified into the first week of her disappearance after police realized that Ms. Anderson, as her ex-husband said, is a "very responsible" person.

Midlander Karen Price, a friend of Ms. Anderson, has described the missing woman as a "very smart, very bright" person who "would never encourage trouble.

"Darlene's kids are the most important things in the world to her," Ms. Price said. "She's their best cheerleader.

"If she had to choose between her career and her children, she would choose her children. She's a mom."

Virginia Dominguez, a friend of Ms. Anderson and an Austin Semiconductor employee who participated in the weekend search, said Ms. Anderson is "a sweet lady. . . . I hope to God and I still feel very strongly that whoever has her — I hope to God — they release her and bring her back to us. I hope she can work herself out of a situation. She's a strong person. She is a very sweet lady. I hope to God that she will come back."

the children would be handed over. She did acknowledge that the children had been taken out of Texas.

The girls, who turned six on Sunday, have been missing since Friday, when state District Judge Joe Peavy ordered the two to be turned over to Lance Rhicard and Candice Geary.

Robert Schlaepfer, the girls' father, stipulated in his will that custody be granted to the couple. He died of AIDS last September.

State District Judge John Peavy Jr. granted custody to Mrs. Durichek on Sept. 15, days after a Minnesota court granted custody to Rhicard and Ms. Geary.

On June 22, the Texas Supreme Court said jurisdiction belonged to the Minnesota court and ordered Peavy to withdraw his ruling.

Peavy then ordered Mrs. Durichek to turn the children over to Rhicard and Ms. Geary by 4 p.m. Friday. She didn't show up.

If the children are returned safely to Harris County, no charges are expected, said Ms. Merrill.

"I'm confident that she'll surrender the children tomorrow," said Stewart Gagnon, Mrs. Durichek's lawyer.

Gagnon said he has not talked to his client, but had been in touch with the district attorney's office. Gagnon said he has not spoken to his client since last month, before the Texas Supreme Court's ruling.

The Houston Post reported Tuesday that Mrs. Durichek's disappearing act is not a first.

In 1982, she reportedly took two other grandchildren from another son, according to Mrs. Durichek's ex-husband and former daughter-in-law.

HELP: Hospice plans 4-day grief sessions

(From 1B)

The sessions are open to the community, since it has been established that many people can benefit. "If it's only 10 or if 30 show up, we'll make room for them," Mercer said.

In the sessions, people can learn ways to help them deal with the pain of separation and how to better work through the grieving process.

"We teach them healthy things they can do for themselves," Mercer said.

People work through losses in different ways, Mercer said. He looks for signs that indicate a person may need extra help. People who do not deal with unpleasant parts of life or who do not acknowledge and deal with problems tend to have more problems, he said.

People who have not dealt with a previous loss, people without support systems of friends and family and people with a history of clinical depression are among those who might require help in addition to the workshop.

The workshops, however, provide a helpful tool to many individuals experiencing the grieving process.

"It's not really quite like a support group, although there are some elements of that," Mercer said. "I want to make it real clear — nobody has to share anything if they don't want to," he said.

Some people derive benefit from the sessions simply by sitting in the back and listening, he said.

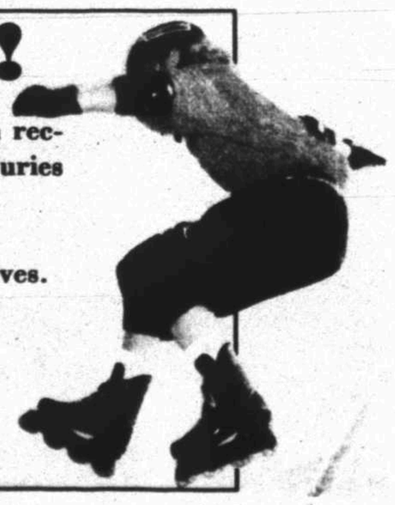

The sessions will include short videotaped instruction, information presented by Mercer and discussions by those in attendance.

Many people are comforted to find that others are having experiences similar to theirs and others may have something helpful to say to another person suffering a loss, he said.

Bush pushes plan to let communities run their schools

AUSTIN (AP) — Republican gubernatorial candidate George W. Bush said Tuesday that "home rule education districts" are needed to free local schools from onerous state regulations.

Democratic Gov. Ann Richards said she's been working to do just that.

"I think that his intent is for us to be able to give more authority and more assistance to local control. And I totally agree with it," Richards said. "I think he means well. But he simply doesn't know how to get where he wants to go."

In a speech to education leaders, Bush said he wants to make it an option for communities to charter home-rule districts. They then would be exempt from most regulation by the Texas Education Agency and Legislature.

The plan, he said, would allow local people to design "a charter on how best to run your schools the way you want to run them. That could be operating specific, it could be general. It could have school board elections in November or in April, depending on what the community decides."

Once completed, such a charter would be put up for a local vote.

"If it passed, that local school district would be free from the clutches and whims of the TEA and the Legislature," Bush said.

He said there would be three main conditions: no segregation, no evading the public school finance system and a requirement to show "improvement toward a standard of excellence" in English, mathematics, science and social sciences.

"The intriguing thing is that certain districts will try it and certain districts won't," Bush said. "I believe you're going to find all kinds of ideas beginning to flourish."

Richards said her administration began just such a move in 1991, with a program of site-based management to give more decision-making power to local schools.

"We wanted to give administrators and teachers for the first time in a very long time in the public schools in Texas an opportunity to make decisions on their own," she said.

However, she said, such a shift is a gradual process that continues today.

"It is a slow and evolutionary process where you've got thousands of employees involved and a great deal of public policy to work through," Richards said.

The governor noted that the Legislature authorized waivers from regulations for school districts, and that some 3,000 have been granted.

"We wanted to be able to go back to the Legislature and say, 'Look, these people can function and function well without so many top-down instructions from TEA. As a consequence of that, we've had thousands of waivers.

Singer to perform in Odessa

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff Writer

Music and acting have called to Wende Harston since childhood.

"My entire life has been torn between music and acting as I have done both since I was a small child," said Ms. Harston, who is to perform Thursday at the Odessa Radisson — formerly the Odessa Hilton — for the West Texas Jazz Society.

Harston

Both her mother and her grandmother were jazz singers. Ms. Harston had 10 years of classical training before she began performing with her jazz band, The Percolating Fools, in Chicago.

During her career, she has performed with such notables as Dick Hyman, Bob Haggart, Snooky Young, Bill Watrous, Bob Wilbur and Bobby Rosengarden.

This jazz, blues and gospel singer also has appeared in numerous "Perry Mason" television productions, several "Father Dowling Mysteries" and was in the movie "Flashback" with Dennis Hopper and Kiefer Sutherland.

"I was a backstage baby," she said. "I got my first paid acting role when I was 7 years old."

Show time is 8 p.m. Admission is free to WTJS members and $15 for non-members and $1 for students. Reserved seating is an additional $10. For more information call 682-4283.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

WEDNESDAY, JULY 13, 1994

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Better working conditions will boost your morale and productivity. September could bring a raise or promotion. Plan a family reunion during the winter holidays. A reconciliation that takes place in December will usher in a period of great happiness. Parents exert a beneficial influence as 1995 gets underway. New marketing techniques help business. Financing should be easier to obtain next spring. Treat your associates with respect. Someone you meet in June will find your reserve very attractive. Follow your heart.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actor Harrison Ford, actress Lynn Loring, actor Cheech Marin, basketball player Spud Webb.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Job interviews will go well. Although exaggeration may help you sell yourself to some people, it will turn off more conservative folks. Choose your audience. A quiet talk helps you reach an understanding with mate.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Things may be a little slow to suit your action-oriented style. Do not let impatience hurt your relations with your co-workers. Telephone relatives at a distance to share important news. Avoid sounding smug.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A new approach or method will help you make headway at work. Your inventive response to the public's mood is right on the mark. Physical exercise is just as important as mental gymnastics. Get moving!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You may be facing some big changes related to your career. Be open-minded. Service to others is more important than fulfilling a personal fantasy. Romance looks fantastic. Do nothing to rock the boat tonight.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Compromises are easier to negotiate now. Take a deep breath and start again. Trying to postpone a talk is counterproductive. Heap praise on loved ones instead of hurling insults. They really do want to help.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Plug away at a time-consuming project. Once this chore is out of the way, you can tackle something much more fun. Look ahead. Storm warnings are up on the romantic coast. Do not capsize tonight!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Taking care of past-due bills will protect your credit rating. Someone who has suffered a serious romantic disappointment may be suspicious of your interest. Take things nice and slow. Avoid making any demands.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your skillful handling of other people's talents or resources could win you a reputation as a mover-and-shaker. A practical approach makes quick work of a financial or domestic problem. Romance requires further thought.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Lucky developments could stir up interest in a new alliance. Contact both newcomers to your area and overseas clients. A romantic partner could throw you a curve. Are you really willing to play games?

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your calm, methodical approach will impress someone influential. A merger of resources or ideas could follow. Research financial tips carefully before acting on them. A good day to buy sports gear and apparel.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Be prepared to compromise with coworkers or family members. Your negotiating skills will get an agreement back on track. A financial disclosure could leave you wondering if someone has told the whole truth.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your personal magnetism is a strong asset in business. Press your advantage. A vivid dream means that your subconscious is sending you a message. Do not ignore psychic revelations. Search out intellectual challenges.

Opening lead: ?

We have often written about how important it is to choose the right opening lead. Put yourself in West's place and decided what you would lead at trick one and why.

North's opening bid was artificial and strong, and South's response was positive, showing at least a five-card suit headed by two of the three top honors. North elected to show the spades first to indicate a source of tricks, then took control when partner rebid hearts and settled in a small slam on learning that an ace was missing.

It was obvious to West that East had a yarborough. Also, it was more than likely North held both the ace and queen of clubs and that, if necessary, declarer would be able to take a successful finesse for the king.

West had knowledge not available to declarer—the spade suit could not be established for discards. Since no declarer likes to rest the fate of a contract, especially a slam, on a 50-50 chance if any other line was available, West chose the jack of clubs as the opening salvo.

West's reasoning proved impeccable. Since the contract was cold if spades were no worse that 4-2, declarer rose with the ace of clubs, drew one round of trumps, then went after spades. Unfortunately, East ruffed the second spade and the defenders collected the king of clubs and ace of diamonds for a two-trick set.

'Roger & Me' creator sets sights on Ford chief; CEO doesn't run

DETROIT — Filmmaker Michael Moore made his name chasing the chairman of General Motors Corp. in "Roger & Me."

When Moore set his sights on the chairman of Ford, the auto executive didn't run.

Alex Trotman accepted Moore's challenge to change the oil in a Ford Explorer for Moore's NBC newsmagazine "TV Nation," which premieres next week.

Filmmaker Michael Moore sets sights on Ford chairman.

Trotman spent about an hour changing the oil, explaining the process and bantering with the filmmaker. The segment will be part of the July 26 episode of the show that has Moore as host doing what he does best — tweaking corporate America.

"We don't think it's a great huge deal," Ford spokesman Al Chambers said.

Moore challenged CEOs of several companies to show how much they know about their products. Many declined, including IBM's Louis Gerstner and Colgate-Palmolive's Reuben Mark, the Detroit Free Press reported Tuesday.

Moore's 1989 "Roger & Me" was a satirical documentary on how auto industry layoffs affected his hometown of Flint. Moore relentlessly pursued then-GM chairman Roger Smith, who retired in 1991.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Chet Atkins will be honored in August for his contributions to the music industry.

Guitarist Chet Atkins to receive another award.

The guitarist and former record executive will receive the Governors Award from the Nashville chapter of the National Academy of Recording Arts & Sciences, the organization that presents the Grammy Awards.

Record producer Owen Bradley also will receive the award at a ceremony Aug. 31.

"Most of the industry agrees that Chet and Owen are largely responsible for the music coming out of Nashville," singer Brenda Lee said.

Bradley was one of her producers and she will be master of ceremonies for the event.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — Comedian Bill Bellamy grew up idolizing Eddie Murphy and Robin Williams. Minus the profanity, that is.

"It's not necessary with my style, because I talk about funny stuff," said Bellamy, a veejay on MTV. "If the material is funny, cursing is not necessary."

Bellamy, 26, never planned to be a comedian, though he always had a knack for humor.

"I was always the talkative person in class," he said. "I really started behaving like a fool in high school, doggin' brothers. I used to dog brothers all the time. And they'd be like, 'We'll see who's funny after school.'"

At Rutgers University, Bellamy majored in economics and envisioned settling down as a "regular suburban guy." Then he entered a male beauty pageant and found it included a talent competition. He did a standup routine.

"It's great," said Bellamy, who will perform Saturday at the Birmingham-Jefferson Civic Center. "People will pay you for doing something you love to do, something you did for free without even thinking about it."

FARGO, N.D. — "Hee Haw" host Roy Clark thinks country music rookies lack individuality.

"Too many country singers sound alike these days," said Clark, who joined other celebrities for a golf tournament Monday. "When someone makes a hit record these days, 10 more come out the next day sounding just like it."

Patrick Pacheco, a freelance journalist, has just received — or rather, eaten — the last payment for an assignment he undertook about two years ago. Pacheco was the ghostwriter for Angela Lansbury on the preface to "The Little Pie Company of the Big Apple Pies and Other Dessert Favorites," published last year by Harper Perennial.

Pacheco said: "Arnold Wilkerson, one of the shop's owners, said, 'Would you take the fee in pies?' and I said, 'Sure.' We decided $800 worth of pies would be fair."

That arrangement made Pacheco a desirable guest for dinner parties. He said: "Whenever I would ask what I could bring to parties, people would ask, 'Do you still have a charge at the Little Pie Company?' I was particularly popular at Thanksgiving and Christmas

DEAR ABBY

No offense is best defense during robbery at gunpoint

DEAR ABBY: I am an intelligent 30-year-old woman. My husband's 26-year-old sister, Susan, and I are equal partners in a small dress shop.

Van Buren

Two young boys — no older than 14 — came into our shop. One pointed a gun at us. The gun did not look real, but who wants to take a chance? We had only $35 and some change in the cash register. Had it not been for the gun, Susan and I would have been a match for them. One of the boys dangled two shoelaces and wanted to tie our hands. I figured it would take about two minutes to break the laces, and nobody would get hurt — in case the gun was real.

Well, Susan got real steamed and was ready to crown them, but I told her to relax. They tied our hands behind our backs and told us to wait five minutes. Boy, was I suckered! Two seconds later, these kids whipped out two roles of duct tape and, before we could pop the shoelaces binding our hands, our mouths were taped and we were bound hand-and-foot, then dragged into a dressing room. It was two hours before a customer came and released us.

Abby, Susan is furious with me. She says we were patsies to allow a couple of punks to humiliate us; we never should have let them tie our hands in the first place, etc. I didn't enjoy being tied up either, but I think my judgment was sound.

It has been over a month and we are barely speaking to each other. Who is right? — CAROLE IN A BIND

DEAR CAROLE: You and Susan are fortunate to have lost only $35, plus suffering the indignity of being trussed like a couple of chickens. Had you challenged the boy holding the gun (regardless of his tender age) you both could have been two more casualties on the evening news. Your having insisted on complying with the youthful robbers' demands may have saved Susan's life — as well as your own.

DEAR ABBY: What can we do (if anything) about relatives who never invite us to their house, even though they have been wined and dined at our home many times?

They say, "We don't invite people over, but come over anytime."

Have you any idea why people do this? We are on good terms with them. — TOLEDO

DEAR TOLEDO: Either they are insecure about their ability to properly reciprocate, or too lazy to prepare for guests.

DEAR ABBY: The letter about the high school graduate whose classmates had written some X-rated comments in his yearbook reminded me of something one of my classmates wrote in mine in 1925. This created a terrible commotion when my parents saw it:

"Dear Bernice:

"I love you dearly, I love you mighty.

"I'd love my pajamas next to your nighty!

"Now, please don't fret and don't get red,

"I mean, on the clothesline — not in bed."

— BERNICE L., OAK LAWN, ILL.

ADD A PAL FOR A PENNY.

No advance purchase required. Fully refundable.

Hurry, seats for this summer are going fast. Now when you buy a Continental Pal Fare,℠ roundtrip in coach to one of the cities below (via specific connections), you can take a Pal along for just a penny more each way. It's called Add-A-Penny-Add-A-Pal.℠ There's no advance purchase required. And all tickets are fully refundable.

From Midland/Odessa

Albuquerque • Austin • Baton Rouge • Brownsville Corpus Christi • El Paso • Harlingen • Houston Indianapolis • Kansas City • Lafayette • Las Vegas • Little Rock Louisville • McAllen • Milwaukee • New Orleans Oklahoma City • Omaha • San Antonio • St. Louis • Tulsa

Very few, very small, very reasonable restrictions. However, this great Add-A-Penny-Add-A-Pal deal does have a few small restrictions.

First, you have to be at least 18 years old, but your Pal can be any age. Both of your roundtrip reservations have to be made at the same time, for the same flights, and at least one day in advance. With such a tempting offer, demand will be high and seats are limited. (Certain flights may not be available between all cities.) So, go ahead make your plans now. You will need to stay over for at least one night, but any night is fine. You're also eligible to earn mileage from our frequent flier program: OnePass.℠ It's really a pretty good deal, don't you think? (Unfortunately upgrades are not available, and your Pal is not eligible to receive OnePass miles.)

The best summer days for you and your Pal to fly. To take advantage of this great offer, we encourage you to travel Saturday or Monday through Thursday. Typically, Fridays, Sundays and holidays (i.e., Labor Day, Thanksgiving and Christmas) are the most popular days to travel, so plan carefully. It's just that simple. Buy yourself a roundtrip coach ticket on Continental and bring a Pal for a penny more each way.

High court nominee leans pro-choice, death penalty

■ Stephen Breyer appears to garner support from all political sides for position on Supreme Court.

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Supreme Court nominee Stephen Breyer supports legal precedents that allow abortion and the death penalty and is open to putting television cameras in the high court chamber, he revealed at the opening day of his confirmation hearing Tuesday.

To lift the single shadow over his integrity, Breyer told the Senate Judiciary Committee that he will get out of his insurance investments as soon as possible, even though he denied they created a conflict of interest.

Testifying before the committee that once employed him as counsel, Breyer basked in bipartisan praise. Even the one committee member who has criticized part of his record said he will vote for the nomination.

Unfailingly deferential and flattering to the senators who were his bosses in the late 1970s and early 1980s, the chief judge of a federal appeals court appeared certain to be confirmed to replace retiring Justice Harry A. Blackmun.

"Above all, I will remember that the decisions I help to make will have an effect on the lives of many, many Americans," Breyer said. He said he will "do my absolute utmost to see that those decisions reflect both the letter and the spirit of a law that is meant to help them."

Breyer responded without hesitation on the emotional issues of abortion and the death penalty under pro forma questioning by senior committee member Strom Thurmond, a South Carolina Republican who did not follow up to elicit detail.

"The case of Roe vs. Wade has been the law for 21 years or more and was recently affirmed by the Supreme Court. ... That is the law," Breyer said, volunteering that he did not want to comment on possible restrictions that could be added to the basic right to abortion.

On the death penalty, Thurmond asked whether Breyer would follow Blackmun's recently adopted practice of refusing to support capital punishment in all cases.

"If a judge has strong personal views on a matter as important as the death penalty ... you might take yourself out of the case. I have no such personal view in respect to the death penalty, so I would sit on such a case in respect to the constitutionality of the death penalty," Breyer responded.

He said the issue of whether capital punishment is cruel and unusual has been considered by the Supreme Court "for quite a long time" and "is, in my opinion, settled law."

Blackmun, who is retiring when his replacement is confirmed, was the only member of the current court to consistently oppose the death penalty.

On the issue of allowing television cameras in the high court for the first time, Breyer noted he has a record of favoring cameras in the federal circuit and federal district courts. "I voted in favor of that" as a member of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

While stating his receptivity to allowing cameras in court, he said he would "listen to other members of the court and try to understand their points of view" before making a firm recommendation.

But Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., who asked the question, took the answer as an endorsement of televising the Supreme Court's oral arguments, where media representatives have never even been allowed to use tape recorders.

"I applaud you for the feeling you had, because I think the (Supreme) Court, like every other part of the government, should be as accessible as possible," Leahy said.

Moving immediately — before anyone asked — to deflect a potential stumbling block, Breyer added the announcement about his financial holdings to the end of his opening statement.

He said he would get rid of his Lloyds of London investments, because "this question has been asked by people of good faith, and there is nothing more important to me than my integrity and my reputation for impartiality."

The issue is whether Breyer should have declined to consider environmental cases that came before the appeals court that could have affected the liability of the insurance holdings in Lloyds of London.

"I personally am confident that my sitting in those cases did not present any conflict of interest," he said, noting that his investment was disclosed to the public, and Lloyds was not a party in any cases before him.

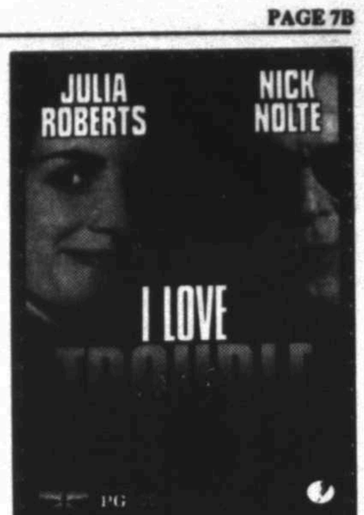

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, was the only committee member who commented on the Lloyds issue, noting that Breyer might not be able to get out of the investment until next year. He did not question Breyer about the investment or possible conflict of interest.

Metzenbaum said he has decided to vote for Breyer, even though he considers his judicial record too pro-big business. "In too many cases, time after time, you hold against the little guy, the small business person, the consumer," Metzenbaum said.

The depth of Breyer's bipartisan committee support was highlighted by the often acerbic Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., who said the hearing was the first time in this century that "members had the opportunity to consider the nomination to the Supreme Court of a person who many of us personally know so well."

The admiration society was mutual, Breyer made clear, as he took every opportunity to credit the senators with accomplishments often attributed to him.

"You, senator, and other senators on the committee" deserve credit for crafting the federal sentencing guidelines, Breyer said to Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., Breyer's chief sponsor for the court.

Copter ferrying firefighters crashes in New Mexico; 3 die

SILVER CITY, N.M. (AP) — A helicopter ferrying four firefighters between blazes crashed Tuesday, killing three people and injuring two.

The helicopter went down about 30 miles northeast of Silver City, and the crash started a fire in the tinder-dry forest, Fire Information Officer Chuck Tonn said.

Other helicopters dropped water on the blaze so rescue crews could reach the site, he said.

The helicopter was flying from the 6,200-acre Pigeon Fire to the smaller Guide Fire, also in the Gila National Wilderness, Tonn said.

Authorities didn't immediately identify the dead and injured.

The Guide Fire began overnight, possibly caused by a lightning strike, Tonn said. It wasn't immediately known how much acreage it had burned.

The injured were taken to Gila Regional Medical Center in Silver City, Tonn said. One was released and the other was to stay overnight for observation, nursing supervisor Holly Gard said.

The cause of the crash was under investigation.

Last week, 14 firefighters died in Colorado when a wildfire fanned by erratic winds roared up a steep slope, trapping fire crews.

U.S. to spend $57.5 million on jobs program for poor areas

WASHINGTON (AP) — Commerce Secretary Ronald H. Brown announced a program Tuesday aimed at bringing job-creating businesses to the nation's poorest areas.

Brown told the House Public Works subcommittee on economic development that the administration planned to spend roughly $57.5 million in the fiscal year starting Oct. 1.

The department's Economic Development Administration would, after a national competition, award grants to institutions such as nonprofit employers, colleges or community groups.

They, in turn, would combine the federal money with local funds and spend it on devising economic development strategies for distressed communities and then on specific projects to attract or expand high-employment companies.

The program "will help to build competitive economic activity in areas of the country which have too long been left out of our national economic progress," Brown said.

Institutions such as nonprofit employers, colleges, community groups to get grants which, combined with local funds, will be spent on devising economic development strategies for poor areas.

The economy is growing, he said, but the cliche that a rising economic tide lifts all boats is not true.

"Too many communities don't have boats or their boats have gaping holes," he said.

The money is coming from funding earmarked to help communities hit by military base closings and will not cut into the EDA's other activities, Brown said. The House already has provided the money but the Senate hasn't acted, he said.

Additional legislation is not required for most of what Brown proposes, except for restoring the EDA's lapsed authority to guarantee bank loans for large redevelopment projects.

However, when the House approved legislation in May reauthorizing the EDA it did not include the loan guarantee power. The Senate hasn't yet moved on the reauthorization.

Conservatives criticize the EDA, created in 1965, as nothing more than an unwieldy bureaucracy distributing pork-barrel projects in the districts of politically influential members of Congress.

At the hearing, Brown dismissed the criticism as nonsense and said a series of administrative reforms have made the criticism "even more nonsensical."

He said the average approval time for an EDA grant, now eight months to two years, will be cut to 60 days and that more authority will be given to officials in EDA's local offices.

Mobile home standards to be tougher

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — If you live along the Gulf Coast, you've heard the jokes about trailer parks being magnets for hurricanes and tornadoes.

Construction standards that might end those jokes go into effect Wednesday — though dealers and manufacturers say the standards may simply drive up prices and drive some manufacturers out of the market in some areas.

Hurricane Andrew prompted the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development to order tougher standards in 13 states and six U.S. territories.

"I think the scope of that storm and the power of it caught everybody's attention," said Michael Charles, manager of regulatory affairs for the American Society of Civil Engineers, which recommended the standards in 1988.

Hurricane Andrew wiped out or damaged up to 18,000 mobile homes in Louisiana and south Florida, including 97 percent of the trailer homes in Dade County, Fla. Even when nearby houses survived, trailers were twisted and torn apart.

Mobile homes built after Wednesday wouldn't survive Hurricane Andrew's peak winds of 160 mph. But those sold in Hawaii, coastal Alaska and 25 coastal counties in Louisiana, Florida and North Carolina must be able to resist steady winds up to 110 mph — close to the tough south Florida standard for conventional homes.

Another 91 counties in those three states and Alabama, Georgia, Maine, Massachusetts, Mississippi, South Carolina, Texas and Virginia must be able to stand up to 100-mph winds.

The rest of the country keeps the previous standard: 80 mph.

Hurricane Andrew's $3.5 billion price tag included more than $475 million in damage to or by mobile homes, the ASCE said.

If all trailer homes had been built to the new standard, the damage to the trailers themselves would have been cut 83 percent, according to HUD research. Also, damage from the debris of destroyed trailers would go down.

Charles noted that 52 percent of the nation's mobile homes are in the South, and 18 percent are in the Midwest. "Almost three-quarters of the mobile homes are in areas prone to high winds of one sort or another, so you tend to see more destruction," he said.

HUD estimates that the retail price for mobile homes will rise $1,200 to $1,500 in areas under the 110-mph standard, and $800 to $1,000 under the 100-mph standard.

Food Lion chain cracks down on smokers

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Food Lion employees will be barred from smoking at all company buildings effective Sept. 1, and tobacco industry officials are urging growers to protest the ban at their local stores.

"We're hoping that the tobacco growers and supporters who shop at Food Lion will make themselves known," said Lisa Eddington, managing director for the Tobacco Growers Information Committee, in a telephone interview on Tuesday.

"They will go to Food Lion management and show them the facts, just like Food Lion did when they were under controversy this time last year," Eddington said.

In the Food Lion memo, which Eddington says was provided to her office anonymously, the Salisbury-based grocery chain points to several competitors such as Winn-Dixie, Kroger, Publix and Bi-Lo as stores which have implemented smoke-free workplace policies.

"Surveys show that over half of all large employers have eliminated smoking in the workplace. In addition, an increasing number of municipalities now prohibit smoking in all retail establishments," the memo said.

"Effective September 1, 1994, it shall be the policy of Food Lion to prohibit employee smoking at all locations, including stores, distribution centers and the office."

The memo was signed by Gene McKinley, Food Lion vice president of human resources. Spokesman Mike Mozingo was not available for comment Tuesday afternoon.

SWC honors

DALLAS — A dozen more Southwest Conference greats will join the original five members of the league's Hall of Honor in a July 29 ceremony.

The SWC announced the 12-man second class Tuesday and it includes some of the most familiar coaches and players not among the first six inductees.

The Class of 1994 include Baylor linebacker Mike Singletary, Texas Christian linebacker Bob Lilly, Rice running back Dicky Maegle, SMU running back-receiver Kyle Rote, Texas A&M lineman John Kimbrough, Texas linebacker Tommy Nobis, Texas Tech lineman E.J. Holub and former Texas coach Darrell Royal.

Four men honored posthumously are Houston defensive lineman Wilson Whitley, former Texas and Texas A&M coach D.X. Bible, Texas quarterback Bobby Layne and former TCU coach L.R. "Dutch" Meyer.

They join TCU's Sam Baugh, Texas' Earl Campbell, Texas A&M's John David Crow, Andre Ware of Houston, Doak Walker of SMU and the late Davey O'Brien of TCU.

Tyson pleads

INDIANAPOLIS — Mike Tyson sent a letter to the judge who presided over his 1992 rape trial asking her to reconsider her decision last month not to grant him an early release from prison.

In the letter Monday to Marion Superior Court Judge Patricia Gifford, the former heavyweight champion said he has apologized to Desiree Washington, the woman he was convicted of raping, but still denied committing any crime.

"I know you don't want me to admit my conduct was criminal or for me to say something I didn't do," Tyson wrote. "But I want you to know, and I want the Washingtons and the prosecutor to know, that my conduct was inexcusable.

"I should not have expected a woman to come to my room late at night, not knowing her, and to expect her to have sex with me."

Tyson was sentenced in March 1992 to six years in prison after a jury convicted him of rape. He's scheduled to be released next May.

Foreman returns

NEWPORT, R.I. — Former heavyweight champion George Foreman said he would be back in the ring this fall in a bid to reclaim the title.

"It hasn't been formally announced but it looks like HBO will carry a heavyweight title match between George Foreman and Michael Moorer sometime in November," said Foreman, of Houston.

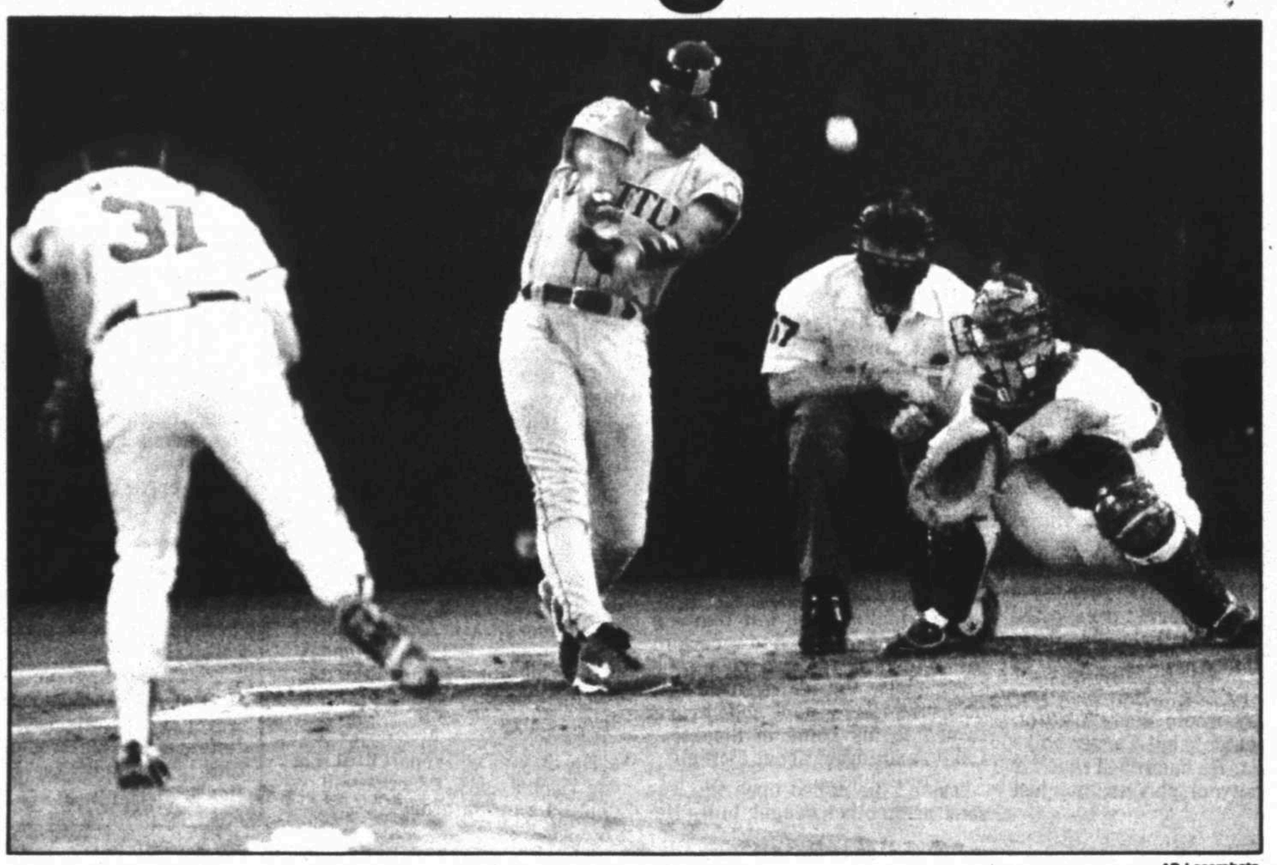

Cornish signs

MINNEAPOLIS — The Minnesota Vikings have agreed to terms with former Dallas center Frank Cornish on a one-year, $350,000 contract.

Cornish spent two seasons with San Diego and backed up Mark Stepnoski for the Cowboys during the past two Super Bowl seasons.

PITTSBURGH — Tony Gwynn scored on the most exciting play at the plate in an All-Star game since Pete Rose, barely making it home on Moises Alou's double in the 10th inning, and the National League ended its six-game losing streak with an 8-7 victory Tuesday night.

Fred McGriff's tying two-run homer in the bottom of the ninth off Lee Smith earned him MVP honors and sent the game into extra innings, where the NL now has a 9-0 edge.

Gwynn, one of the few players left from the days of NL domination, opened the 10th with a single off Jason Bere. Alou followed with a drive to left-center field and Gwynn, playing the whole game in place of ailing Lenny Dykstra, never broke stride.

While third-base coach Jim Leyland was waving Gwynn home and running with him down the line, strong-armed shortstop Cal Ripken Jr. took left fielder Albert Belle's relay and threw home. But Gwynn, a 10-time All-Star, snuck his foot through the legs of catcher Ivan

Brazilians, Sweds set for rematch

■ Brazil meets Sweden in one World Cup semifinal match today.

By Barry Wilner
AP Sports Writer

PASADENA, Calif. — In college basketball, it's the Blue Devils. In the NBA, it's the Bulls. In soccer, it's Brazil.

If you want to win a championship in those sports, you have to get past the kings. The Brazilians always are the uncrowned kings of the World Cup, even if they haven't won it since 1970.

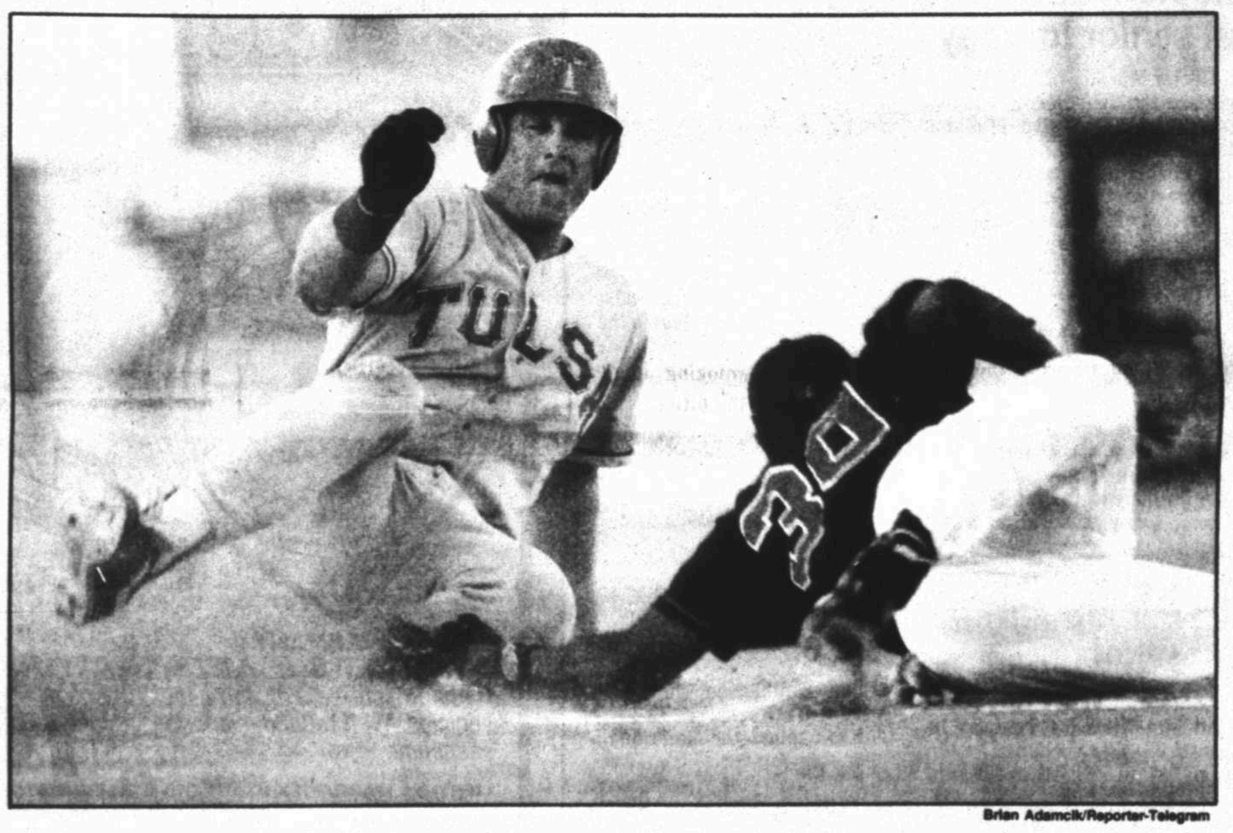

Now, they are one step from the final, a place they haven't visited since the era of Pele, the days of dominance for Brazilian soccer. In their way are the Swedes, who claim they have no fear of their opponent in today's semifinal at the Rose Bowl.

"We feel that we can beat any team that's left in the tournament," coach Tommy Svensson said. "We tied Brazil 1-1 in the first round and it was a good experience. It showed that we can beat them. And we'll try to have that feeling on Wednesday."

But can they really beat them? The first-round tie at the Pontiac Silverdome came after Brazil had clinched advancement to the second round and Sweden was just about there. Brazil didn't appear in danger of losing to the surprising Swedes, who last got this far in 1958 when, as hosts, they lost to the Brazilians in the championship game.

"The spirit is totally different from the first game because both teams already had qualified," said Brazil assistant coach Mario Zagallo. "Win lose or draw, it wouldn't have changed Brazil's

Midland third baseman Chris Smith (white) whirls to tag Tulsa's Rob Nelson during action Tuesday at Christensen Stadium. Nelson was safe on the triple, but Midland went onto win 16-4.

Angels drill Tulsa, even series

By Mike Butts
Staff Writer

If the pitching-weak Texas Rangers go looking for much needed arms in their minor league system, they may want to pass over their Double-A affiliate in Tulsa. At least based on the way Tulsa pitchers presented themselves Tuesday at Christensen Stadium in the Angels 16-4 laugher.

Tulsa brought a staff to Midland that already had some dubious Texas League numbers. Those figures won't be a bit better when league statisticians add on the Angels season-best 21 hits and second-best 16 runs.

Driller pitchers ranked first, second and third in home runs allowed. They allowed two Tuesday. Starter Chris Curtis led the league in losses with 10. He now leads with 11.

"It's the first time we've played these guys, so we don't really know them," said Angel first baseman Chris Pritchett, who had a sensational evening at the plate with four hits, five RBIs and a homer. "It's not like we were going up there looking for anything."

But they found it anyway. The 21 hits bested a 20-hit performance in a 15-inning game at Wichita June 6. Only versus Wichita July 7 have the Angels, now 10-12, scored more runs this year—17.

Norman baits British Open contingent with old, silver jug

By Bob Green
AP Golf Writer

TURNBERRY, Scotland — The claret jug is missing from Greg Norman's office.

"There is no better feeling in the world than to sit down at my desk and see that claret jug," Norman said Tuesday.

■ British Open

The old silver jug, of course, is the trophy for his 1993 triumph in the British Open. He removed it from its place of honor in his office and brought it with him this week to Turnberry to relinquish — if necessary — to the 1994 winner.

Norman, however, will not give it up quietly or easily.

"I want to keep that trophy," he said before a practice session on the rain-soaked links on Scotland's western coast. "Every time I look at it, it brings back fond memories."

And the dynamic Australian hopes — even expects — to add to those memories in the 123rd edition of the world's oldest golf tournament.

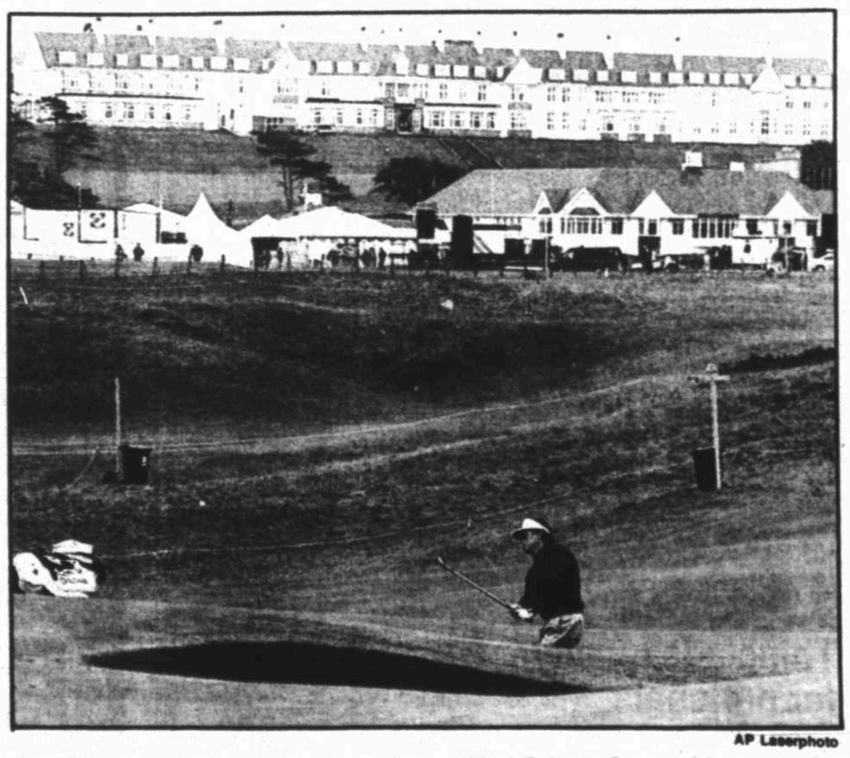

"It's been a pretty good year. My consistency and my level of performance are pretty stout," he said. "I am looking forward to enjoying the week. I am playing well. I feel very comfortable, very relaxed. I don't think there is any undue pressure on me because I am the defending champion.

"Any time you have a chance as defending champion to come back at the site where you won your first Open is a special and wonderful feeling."

Returning to the scene of his 1986 triumph took on an even more special aspect Tuesday when Norman played the par-3 course at the Turnberry Hotel with his children, Morgan-Leigh, 11, and Gregory, 8.

"The boy was born the year I won here," he said. "He was just an infant. Now, to come back and play golf with him and my daughter.

Dallas tries to carve deal with top pick

■ The Dallas Cowboys may open training camp Friday without their top draft pick — defensive end Shante Carver.

By Rick Cantu
N.Y. Times News Service

DALLAS — When the defending Super Bowl champions open training camp Saturday in Austin, they might convene without one of their biggest and brightest newcomers.

"I sure hope I'm there," said first-round draft choice Shante Carver, a touch of pessimism wrapped around his words.

"I sure hope I'm there."

If practice at St. Edward's University started today, Carver wouldn't be there. He is embroiled in — what else? — a contract dispute. If he can't strike a deal this week, the team's newest defensive end will remain in Dallas.

"That's really not my concern right now," Carver said at the Cowboys' quarterback camp Monday afternoon. "My agent takes care of the contract. I can only be concerned about football."

Carver was the 23rd player taken in April's NFL draft. He declines to say how much money he's demanding, but adds, "I just want what I'm worth. I'm not asking for four years and $4 million. I just want what's right for a person who was drafted in the first round."

When Carver was drafted, he admitted he would have to gain weight before his rookie season. At 6 feet, 5 inches and 239 lean pounds, Carver was told he was too small to handle NFL offensive linemen.

At quarterback camp Monday, Carver tipped the scales at 249.

"I'm getting up there," he said. "The coaches want me to reach 255 before the season. I'm not sure how much more weight my body will allow me to pack on."

By picking Carver, Dallas beefed up a defensive line that was hit hard by free agency this spring. Tony Casillas is gone. So is Jimmie Jones. Carver is expected to be a reserve behind veteran Charles Haley.

First-year Coach Barry Switzer said Haley would serve as Carver's "mentor," but Carver balks at the idea. He has relied thus far on a variety of players, not just Haley.

"I've learned to depend on myself," he said. "My mother passed away during my sophomore year at Arizona State. I had leaned on her so much, and suddenly I felt alone."

Carver's mother, Peggy Lamb, died in a car accident. A few weeks later, his maternal grandmother, Ernestine Cobb, died after an extended illness.

Already caught in a whirlpool of problems, Carver seemed to have lost his lifelines. He was flunking out of school and tried to cope with the deaths of the two people he loved most. Carver recalled that he could have quit school, returned to his home in Stockton, Calif., and forget about football.

Instead, he called upon the lessons his mother taught him. He grew up, became a man. He learned to handle responsibility.

"I don't want to call anyone my mentor. So far I've asked for advice from a lot of people, including Charles Haley," he said. "But I've also asked questions of Jim Jeffcoat, Leon Lett, Russell Maryland, a lot of guys."

The Cowboys expect Carver to become an impact player. He had 79 tackles during his senior season with the Sun Devils and 299 for his career. With 41 career sacks in college, he is considered a pass-rush specialist.

NOTES: Switzer said he was disappointed that wide receiver Michael Irvin did not participate in camp Monday. Irvin had shoulder surgery in the spring and watched practice in street clothes. He is expected to miss most of training camp in Austin.

The 80 players who worked out Monday spent much of the day running 110-yard sprints. "Of all the positions who ran today, I'd say the linebackers did the best job," Switzer said. "I don't count the wide receivers because they can run all day."

Switzer said he is eager to start his first training camp, and hopes the temperature in Austin is hotter than it was in Dallas on Monday. "If it's not any warmer than this, I'm going to be real disappointed."

The players will report to St. Edward's on Friday. Practice will begin at 9 a.m. Saturday.

Hernia to sideline Gant

FORT WORTH (AP) — Hernia surgery may force Dallas Cowboys safety Kenny Gant to miss the first month of training camp, Gant says.

The hernia surgery was the third operation he has undergone during the off-season.

"I'm going to be fine, but I know I want to be back on the field for at least a couple of preseason games," Gant, who underwent surgery Friday, told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. "I have no idea how I did it. It just happened."

Gant, a fifth-year pro who has excelled for Dallas as a specialteamer and a Nickel back, has a reputation as a quick healer. In recent months, he has had operations on his knee and his shoulder.

"We told him operations are four-for-$1, but hopefully, three will be plenty," joked trainer Kevin O'Neill, who said the club hopes Gant will miss only three weeks.

Gant wore a brace while playing much of last season with a separated shoulder.

"Being in a little pain is not a big issue to me," said Gant, who will not use the shoulder harness this year. "With this (hernia) thing, all I can do is get some rest and wait."

Shula considers options; Shuler remains unsigned

Associated Press

MIAMI — Don Shula said this may be his final season as coach of the Miami Dolphins.

Shula said Tuesday he hasn't decided whether he wants a contract extension from new Dolphins owner H. Wayne Huizenga.

■ NFL Notes

Shula's current three-year contract expires after this season. An extension would likely be through 1996.

"I can't sit here and say I want to coach three more years, and I can't say I want to coach this year and no more," Shula said. "I don't feel at this time that I have to make that decision, and I think Wayne understands that."

The 64-year-old Shula spoke with reporters on his first day back from vacation. He and Huizenga met last week at Shula's summer home in North Carolina.

Huizenga has said the decision about a contract extension is up to Shula, who last year broke George Halas' NFL record for career coaching victories.

Shula said that if he retires as coach, he wants to remain with the Dolphins in some capacity, perhaps as a part owner or executive. Shula is apparently negotiating a deal that would call for him to stay with the organization beyond this year.

The New York Jets have come to terms with wide receiver Rob Moore on a one-year contract, the club announced Tuesday.

Moore caught a team-high 64 passes for 843 yards last season. After just four seasons with the Jets, he is already ninth on the team's career receptions list with 228 and eighth in yardage with 3,248.

The Jets also announced the signing of linebacker Horace Morris from Tennessee, the club's fifth-round draft pick this year.

Cornerback Aaron Glenn, the team's first-round draft pick from Texas A&M is still unsigned.

It's a tough year to be a rookie if you're trying to sign with the Washington Redskins and your name isn't Heath Shuler.

The team will have to spend more than half its $2.812 million rookie pool to get Shuler, the Tennessee quarterback who was the third overall pick in the draft.

Redskins officials had hoped to sign Shuler first, but with just seven days until the start of training camp on July 20, they have begun talks with agents for their five other unsigned draft picks.

"It's a real predicament for those players that are drafted after a team selects a quarterback in the first round," said Alan Herman, the agent for third-round pick Joseph Patton.

Blue Diamonds take fifth place

IRVING — The Midland Blue Diamonds 18-under ASA fastpitch softball team recently finished in fifth place here in the Texas Open Class A/Gold Invitational tournament, which had 35 teams from five states.

The Blue Diamonds finished third in their five-team pool with a 2-2 record before advancing to the double elimination round.

The Midland team notched two more wins before losing to Pizazz, 2-1 in eight innings. In the loser's bracket, Midland advanced to the semifinal game where they were eliminated by the Oklahoma Wranglers and were 6-4 overall in the tournament.

Emily Hayes pitched eight complete games, posting a 5-3 mark, including two shutouts and two one-hitters. She had a 1.46 ERA with 52 strikeouts and 10 walks.

Christian Lance led the team hitting with a .360 average while Hayes hit .218 and Joye Lewis .292. Defensively, Blue Diamonds' catcher Amee Pullen threw out nine of 11 runners.

The Blue Diamonds will next play in the Texas State Division I ASA Tournament in Lake Jackson.

OPEN: Non-Americans expect to fight for title

(From 1C)

"That's the most special thing about the week, playing in the rain, watching the kids make birdies. It means a lot to do things like that. It makes you realize how fast time gets by."

The passing years, however, have done nothing to diminish Norman's desire.

"My ambitions, my goals, my expectations still are very high," said the man who has won 66 times around the world, including twice this season.

Instead of getting easier, however, winning becomes more difficult, Norman said.

"The more you win the harder it becomes to win," he said. "The more you win, the higher your expectations become, the higher the expectations of other people. You are walking a thinner line."

But there is a positive aspect to the situation, too, said the top-ranked golfer who is a solid favorite to win a third British Open crown.

Norman opens defense of his title as the leading money-winner on the American tour with more than $1.1 million for the season, a record-setting victory in the prestigious Players Championship and four runner-up finishes.

When play begins Thursday, he faces a 150-man field in which all the leading contenders are non-Americans.

They are led by Masters champion Jose Maria Olazabal of Spain, Bernhard Langer of Germany, Nick Faldo of England, Nick Price of Zimbabwe, U.S. Open winner Ernie Els of South Africa and Colin Montgomerie of Scotland.

CUP: Sweden brings confidence into match

(From 1C)

course. In fact, it might have been easier had we lost."

Imagine how confident Sweden would be in that scenario.

"Our morale has grown with each game, especially since the draw with Brazil," said Kennet Andersson, who has taken over as Sweden's major scoring threat with Martin Dahlin nursing leg problems.

Still, Andersson knows beating Brazil in a semifinal is a whole lot different from tying a half-interested Brazil in a relatively meaningless first-round meeting.

"It's going to be much harder," Andersson said. "But I don't feel any pressure. I just feel confidence."

As do the Brazilians, who impressively have answered every challenge. In their 3-2 quarterfinal victory over the Netherlands, they blew a 2-0 lead, looking vulnerable for the first time. But they got a late goal from Branco, making his first appearance in 40 days, and shut down the dangerous Dutch in the final moments.

With every element working against them in the second round against the United States on July 4, playing 10 against 11 for the second half, Brazil was dominant in a 1-0 victory that wasn't nearly so close.

So why shouldn't Brazil feel it is destined to beat Sweden and the winner of the Bulgaria-Italy semifinal, then samba off with an unprecedented fourth World Cup title?

"Brazil has been tested and the team has grown with difficulties that Sweden didn't have," Zagallo said. "Against Saudi Arabia, they had an open field to play, and is it possible that Brazil can't create the chances that Romania did?"

Sweden beat Romania in a penalty-kick shootout after a 2-2 tie.

Playing the Swedes, even if Brazil's only misstep came against them, provides something of a comfort zone.

"There is an advantage that we know this team," coach Carlos Alberto Parreira said of the rematch, the first in a World Cup since 1982. "It's better to play a team you know than a team you've never played before."

Of course, when you're on the other side and Brazil is the opponent, it's not so comforting.

ALL-STAR: Senior Leaguers snap losing skid

(From 1C)

Rodriguez a split second ahead of the tag.

"I just tried to hurry up and get home," Gwynn said. "The American League has dominated us for the last six years, and we had an opportunity to win this ballgame. Freddie McGriff got us even. We just wanted to cash it in."

Gwynn, who had doubled in two runs in the third, was mobbed at the plate after ending a game that both teams played hard to win. It was that way in the days of Rose, too, especially when he ran over catcher Ray Fosse to score the winning run in the 12th inning in 1970.

The NL's last win was the last game to go extra innings, a 2-0 victory in the 13th inning in 1987. That night in Oakland, Smith was the winning pitcher.

Doug Jones was the winner this year on a night when nine NL pitchers managed to turn off the American League's power.

The NL leads the series 38-26-1.

Marquis Grissom also homered for the NL, while Ken Griffey Jr. and Kenny Lofton each drove in two runs for the AL.

McGriff connected for the NL's first pinch-hit homer since Lee Mazzilli in 1979. He homered after Grissom drew a leadoff walk from Smith, the major league save leader, and Craig Biggio grounded into a force play.

"At first, I was just hoping to get an at-bat. It was late," McGriff said. "I told myself to be aggressive and take some hacks. He gave me a fastball down and I hit it out."

McGriff hit an 0-2 pitch to left-center that Lofton chased, but he ran into the wall while the ball kept going and cleared the fence.

"One of the best moments of my life. I came in to pinch-hit when we were down two runs. That's stuff you dream about," he said.

From the start, both teams were out to win. Roberto Alomar tried to bunt leading off the game. Mike Piazza slammed his bat after popping out. And each club spilled out of the dugout to congratulate runners who scored. Gregg Jefferies pumped his fists after a neat hook slide past Rodriguez in the third.

Lofton, who took over in center field for Griffey in the sixth, put the AL ahead 7-5 in the seventh with a two-run single.

Griffey went 2-for-3 and the 24-year-old Seattle star, already a five-time All-Star, is 7-for-14 in the event.

The NL, outscored 22-9 in the last two games, took a 4-1 lead into the sixth. But Griffey's RBI single keyed a three-run rally that tied it and, after Grissom hit a solo homer in the bottom half, the AL scored three more in the seventh.

NL manager Jim Fregosi used three pitchers in the seventh, to no avail. Rodriguez singled and Mickey Tettleton drew a walk from Houston reliever John Hudek.

Shortstop Ozzie Smith, perhaps playing his last All-Star game at age 39, made a diving stop that prevented a run from scoring. But Scott Cooper hit Danny Jackson's first pitch for a double that tied it at 5, and Lofton slapped a single to left through the drawn-in infield.

Griffey, as usual, was in the middle of things as the AL rallied for the three runs in the sixth to tie it 4-4. But it was a two-out throwing error by third baseman Matt Williams that was the key play.

Alomar met Doug Drabek with a single up the middle, stole second with one out and scored on Griffey's single. Center fielder Grissom got the relay in quickly, and Griffey was caught in a rundown and tagged out when he made a rare mistake and tried to advance to second.

After Thomas singled, Joe Carter hit a two-hop grounder to Williams. The two-time Gold Glover backed up on the ball, letting it play him, and rushed a throw that sailed over second baseman Carlos Garcia's head.

The ball rolled into right field for a three-base error, and Kirby Puckett added an RBI single that made it 4-4. Puckett's hit also brought Fregosi to the mound, and he brought in Hudek, who struck out Ripken to end the inning.

The Nationals scored three times in the third off David Cone for a 4-1 lead. Pinch-hitter Jeff Bagwell singled with one out and Jefferies, given another chance after Rodriguez dropped a tough, twisting popup near the dugout, was hit by a pitch.

ANGELS: Pritchett has home run, five RBIs

(From 1C)

choice, for six runs in the fourth inning. They later tallied six more in the seventh off reliever Kerry Lacy. Cohick's grand slam in that inning gave the Angels a 13-4 lead. The Midland designated hitter had five RBIs on the night.

But Pritchett wasn't ready to say the lopsided win could break Midland out of a penchant for playing .500 ball it's showed this year.

"I think the type of game that can get us out if it (of playing .500) is a close win," Pritchett said. "We have to execute (well) ... not just score a lot of runs."

Tulsa actually has the fourth best league ERA and John Dettmer, who has the second best league ERA, but Dettmer is now with the Rangers in Arlington.

Curtis (3-11) gave up seven earned runs in 3⅓ innings while striking out no one.

The Angels, meanwhile, got 6⅓ good innings from starter Kyle Sebach, now 3-1. He gave up only three earned runs.

Pritchett's night shows why he's one of the best players the Angels have had over the last two seasons not to get promoted to Triple-A. With a .429 on base percentage, he's the toughest out in the Texas League. Going into Tuesday's game he trailed El Paso's Tim Unroe by three (61-58) in RBIs. Add that to stellar play at first, and it's evident he's a victim of the numbers game.

"There's nothing I can do about that," Pritchett said. "I just continue to work on the things that keep me at this level and continue to work on the things that can move me up to the next level. In any organization when people swing the bat well they're going to play at first because it's the easiest position to learn."

Midland began to tear into Tulsa pitching in the fourth inning when they sent 10 men to the plate. Pritchett's first-pitch triple down the first-base line cleared the bases of three Angels. The left-handed hitter then cleared the left field fence with 2-1 pitch in the sixth with one man on to make it 10-1 Midland.

Ty Boykin, Marquis Riley and Emmitt Cohick also had RBIs in the Midland fourth.

Sebach wrenched himself free of two jams. Rob Nelson led off the fourth with a triple. The right-hander got a groundout, a flyout and then struck out Andy Mota to end the inning.

In the sixth the Drillers had two men on with not out. Sebach got his fourth strike out and then ended the inning with a call third strike on David Rolls after Rolls had fouled off several 3-2 pitches.

ANGEL DUST: Midland starter Korey Keling threw one inning for the American League Double All-Stars Monday at Binghamton, N.Y. Keling had a one, two, three frame recording one strike out...The Angels made several roster moves over the one-day all-star break. Catcher Fausto Tejero was promoted to Triple A Vancouver and infielder Jim Walewander left to play professional ball in Taiwan. Pitcher Jerry Nielsen was traded to the Chicago White Sox organization for Dean Locklear. Nielsen will play with Michael Jordan at Double-A Birmingham, where Locklear has been. Larry Gonzales, now at Mesa in the Arizona Rookie League, replaces Tejero and will join the club soon...Keling (7-6, 4.57 ERA) faces Lance Schuermann (5-8, 4.02) in tonight's game against the Drillers.

Durand takes stage, Indurain extends lead

■ Tour de France

CAHORS, France (AP) — Jacky Durand of France broke away from a small group with six miles left and won the 10th stage of the Tour de France today.

Miguel Indurain finished in the pack, less than two minutes behind, and retained the overall lead.

Durand, the French national champion the past two years, was in a group of four that broke away from the main pack about midway through the race.

Then Durand went out by himself and held the advantage until the end of the stage of 100 miles from Bergerac to Cahors. It was the last mostly flat stage before the steep climbs start with a trip up Mount Hautacam, 5,363 feet, Wednesday in the Pyrenees.

Marco Serpellini of Italy finished second and Stephen Hodge of Australia was third.

The rest of the racers, including Indurain, took it relatively easy after Monday's demanding time trial, won by Indurain, the three-time champion.

The victory gave Indurain the overall lead by 2:28 over chief rival Tony Rominger, after the 40-mile leg from Perigueux to Bergerac.

Third behind Indurain and Rominger overall was Armand de las Cuevas of France, who also was third in the time trial. He was about five minutes behind Indurain in the overall standings

Lady 'Horns finalize schedule

AUSTIN (NYT) — Jody Conradt says the fine art of scheduling women's basketball games has changed because of adjusted priorities. And to Conradt, it hasn't changed for the better.

"Women's basketball has gone from valuing the strength of schedule to the number of wins. I was hoping it wouldn't come to that," said Conradt, the Texas women's coach. "The toughest thing anymore is finding people to play. It's becoming increasingly difficult to attract teams to Austin."

The Lady Longhorns' home, the Erwin Center, recently was rated as the fourth-toughest place for visiting teams to play. Nevertheless, Texas was able to lure four nonconference opponents coming off NCAA tournament appearances last season to the Erwin Center for the 1994-95 season.

In addition to Southwest Conference foes Texas Tech, Texas A&M and Southern Methodist, all of whom earned NCAA bids last season, the Lady Longhorns' nonconference home schedule includes perennial national power Tennessee, Old Dominion, Vermont and Florida. That quartet compiled a collective record of 96-24 last season en route to the NCAAs.

Texas opens the 1994-95 season by playing three of its first four games on the road, beginning with a West Coast swing to Cal-Berkeley and Sacramento State. After the Dec. 3 home opener against North Texas, the Lady Longhorns visit Oklahoma.

"We used to try to play everybody we could play that was tough because we knew the conference schedule wouldn't prepare us for where we wanted to be at the end of the year," she said. "Our conference schedule has become increasingly more difficult, so that changes the way we look at nonconference."

Manning ponders offer amid lawsuit

ATLANTA (AP) — The Atlanta Hawks have offered unrestricted free agent Danny Manning a multiyear contract worth more than $4 million a season, The Atlanta Journal-Constitution said Tuesday.

But Manning and other free agents are waiting for the outcome of an antitrust trial in federal court in New York, in which U.S. District Judge Kevin Duffy said he will rule on the legality of the NBA draft, free agency and salary cap after Tuesday's hearing.

Should the salary cap remain in place, Atlanta's offer to Manning might be considered more appealing, although Hawks president Stan Kasten said, "From the nature of our negotiations, it seems we're a long way apart."

Specifics on the offer were not available, but general manager Pete Babcock said, 'It's multi-, multiyear and we think it's very substantial."

The offer is the biggest per year in franchise history, surpassing Dominique Wilkins's five-year $14 million deal, and Jon Koncak's six-year, $13.1 million contract, The Journal-Constitution said.

If Duffy rules that the salary cap is illegal, that could clear the way for the NBA's wealthier franchises to pay astronomical salaries, skyrocketing the market value for Manning and other free agents.

NBA coaching peaks Abdul-Jabbar's fancy

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Kareem Abdul-Jabbar said Tuesday he's interested in coaching in the NBA and would consider offers beginning next year after one season of working as a personal teacher.

The league's all-time leading scorer said many people told him after last season he should go into coaching after Magic Johnson stepped down from an interim position with the Los Angeles Lakers.

Abdul-Jabbar, 47, said he now knows that he would be interested in taking over a team or working as an assistant. He was in Philadelphia helping center Shawn Bradley.

"I want to get this project done," Abdul-Jabbar said. "I want the 76ers and Shawn to benefit from my presence here. That's something for my resume, then we'll see what opens up."

The Lakers recently hired Del Harris to coach the team when Johnson resigned after 16 games. Johnson was hired after Randy Pfund was fired. The Lakers finished 33-49 and missed the playoffs for the first time in 18 years.

Abdul-Jabbar's 20-year career closed when his Laker team was defeated in the playoffs after the 1988-89 season. He finished his career with 38,387 points, 1,560 games and 57,446 minutes and was third all-time with 17,440 rebounds.

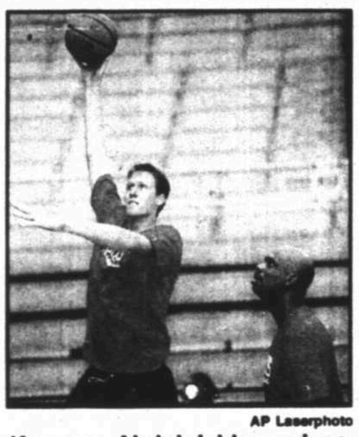

He played in 19 all-star games, won six world championships and collected six MVP awards during his career.

Abdul-Jabbar said he spent two years recovering from burnout after his career. He since has helped players who were considered projects in the NBA, such as Bradley and Manute Bol.

He wants to finish at least one more year as a personal teacher before making a leap into coaching.

"This is great for me," Abdul-Jabbar said. "I'm really thankful for this opportunity because it's a halfway point. I'm learning things about how to teach the game. Then I'll be ready for the next step."

New Sixers coach and general manager John Lucas said Abdul-Jabbar would make a good coach. Lucas has not approached him about a job, nor has Lucas spoken to team owner Harold Katz about adding him.

NIT sets tournament field

NEW YORK (AP) — A pair of in-state matchups — Ohio University at Ohio State and Old Dominion at Virginia — highlight the opening round of the Preseason NIT, which was announced Tuesday.

The winners of those Nov. 16 games will meet Nov. 18 in the second round.

The other first-round matchups for the 10th edition of the Preseason NIT include George Washington at Syracuse; Canisius at Penn; Kansas State at Alabama; and New Mexico State at Southern Cal, all on Nov. 16, as well as San Francisco at New Mexico and Southwestern Louisiana at Memphis, both on Nov. 17.

Other second-round matchups have the George Washington-Syracuse winner facing the Canisius-Penn winner and the Kansas State-Alabama winner against the New Mexico State-Southern Cal winner, both on Nov. 18, and the winners of the Nov. 17 first-round games on Nov. 19. The second-round sites are to be announced.

The semifinals are at Madison Square Garden on Nov. 23, with the third-place and championship games on Nov. 25.

Nine of the 16 teams in this year's field played in last year's NCAA tournament and 10 won at least 20 games.

Kansas beat Massachusetts in last year's championship game.

STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE

WHAT IS STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE?

Stockquote Hotline gives you the latest stock prices direct from the wires of the Associated Press. Over 9,000 stocks are listed from NYSE, AmEx, and OTC sources; all available 24 hours a day. You can receive up to 10 quotes with one easy phone call.

HOW TO USE STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE:

1) Call the Stockquote Hotline at 560-2400; enter the category number which is 9988.
2) You will be asked to enter your stock ticker symbol. These are based on industry-standard symbols, which can be found in a Standard & Poor's Ticker guide, or by calling your local stock broker.
3) Once you've entered the numerical code for the ticker symbol, press the Star Key (*) and you will hear the current price and net change from the last Associated Press update; which is a few minutes behind market activity.
4) After the stock is quoted, you will be asked to enter another ticker symbol. You now have 2 options:
- You may request a quote, you will be asked to enter another ticker symbol. You now have 2 options.
- You may request additional information on the stock just quoted by once more pressing the Star Key (*).

Now the volume, high and low will be given, and then you will be asked to enter another ticker code.
- You may enter up to 10 ticker symbols per call.

5) To exit Stockquote Hotline, simply hang up the phone.

Prices rise

NEW YORK — Oil prices rose Tuesday as the oil worker strike in Nigeria intensified and threatened to cut off oil exports from the world's tenth-largest crude producer.

Oil flirted during the day with its recent high, but fell back from the peak on rumors that a committee was being formed to settle the strike.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, light sweet crude for August delivery settled at $20.43 per barrel, up 25 cents. Crude reached a high of $20.74 per barrel during the day.

Local crude purchasers raised their posted price 25 cents to $19 a barrel.

The recent rally in oil prices has taken it to a close as high as $20.75 per barrel, where it settled on June 20

Almost all business has stopped in Lagos, Nigeria's capital, as the weeklong strike by oil workers spread across the economy. The strikers are protesting the country's military regime, which seized power just more than a year ago.

Pipelines at two of Nigeria's biggest export terminals, off southern Port Harcourt and Warri, were expected to run out of oil by Wednesday or Thursday.

The market was also supported by continued uncertainty in North Korea, analysts said.

After the market closed Tuesday, the American Petroleum Institute released its weekly supply figures. The industry trade group said stocks of crude oil and distillates, which include heating oil, rose. Gasoline supplies were lower in the week.

Crude oil stocks rose 1.34 million barrels to 327.22 million and supplies of distillates rose 4.06 million barrels to 122.75 million. Gasoline stockpiles fell 514,000 barrels to 214.52 million. Refineries slowed production to 94.9 percent of capacity from 96.5 percent.

Dollar slides

NEW YORK — The dollar continued its slide against most other currencies Tuesday, weakening on economic data that squelched expectations of higher interest rates and continued negativity about the beleaguered currency.

The dollar hit another post-war low against the Japanese yen and was slightly lower against the German mark.

In New York, the dollar fetched 97.50 yen, down from 97.75 Monday.

In New York, the dollar was 1.5285 marks, down from 1.5295 on Monday.

Stocks seesaw

NEW YORK — The stock market followed the dollar through a volatile session on Tuesday, with the Dow Jones industrial average recouping a loss of more than than 30 points to end almost unchanged.

The Dow closed at 3,702.66, down 0.33. Advancing issues outnumbered decliners by 1,072 to 1,020 on the New York Stock Exchange, where volume totaled a moderate 251.9 million shares.

Report: Natural-gas demand rises

■ Expected growth means demand probably will achieve highest level since 1974, AGA chief says.

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Domestic demand for natural gas likely will increase about 4 percent this year, the president of the American Gas Association said Tuesday.

The expected growth means that demand probably will achieve its highest level since 1974, AGA President Michael Baly said in releasing the association's mid-year report on natural gas use.

With a 4 percent increase, natural gas use in the United States would climb to 21.6 quadrillion Btu, (quads), compared to 21.7 quads Btu consumed in 1974 in the nation.

"During the past eight years, natural gas demand has grown nearly 25 percent, from 16.7 quads in 1986 to 20.8 quads in 1993, and this trend should continue as the nation's economy keeps strengthening," Baly said.

The 4 percent forecast takes into account normal weather conditions, an annual economic growth rate of 2.75 percent and a $17-per-barrel price for crude oil in the second half of 1994, Baly said.

The group's report, called the "1994 Mid-year Natural Gas Outlook," included three scenarios for gas use, with the smallest increase being 3 percent, the base being 4 percent and the highest 5 percent.

The report also shows that gas use during the first quarter of 1994 was 4 percent higher than in the same period last year.

The increase was due in large part to a strong 3.4 percent economic growth rate in the 1994 first quarter, Baly said.

During the first quarter, the commercial sector had the largest increase in demand — more than 7 percent. Residential use was up nearly 6 percent and industrial gas demand rose by about 4 percent.

However, gas used for electric generation was down about 3 percent as a result of depressed oil prices, Baly said.

"Natural gas exhibits strong growth in both the residential and commercial markets because of new technologies coming to market and because of the environmental and economical advantages of using natural gas," Baly said.

"In 1993, natural gas captured a 66 percent heating market share of new single-family housing completions and 64 percent of all new housing completions," he said. "This trend of natural gas dominating the residential housing market is expected to continue in 1994."

In the predicted 4 percent scenario, the industrial market sector, driven by strong growth in manufacturing and exports, would have the largest increase, up 0.3 quads in 1994.

The commercial and electric utility sectors' gas use is expected to rise 0.2 quads over the 1993 levels. Residential use, which is partly offset by increasing energy efficient measures, is projected to grow about 0.1 quad.

Newly-named UAL Chairman Gerald Greenwald talks with reporters during a press briefing at a Chicago hotel Tuesday. Shareholders of United Airlines' parent company approved an employee buyout of the carrier, making it one of the nation's largest employee-owned companies.

New UAL takes off with shareholder blessing

Associated Press

CHICAGO — United Airlines was reborn as an employee-owned company Tuesday with promises of better service, lower fares on short routes and a new slogan: "Fly Our Friendly Skies."

Consumers will see the most significant result of the ownership change when United Shuttle, a low-cost, short-haul carrier, is launched on the West Coast in October.

But starting Wednesday, United passengers may see pilots, ground crews and ticket agents wearing "Proud Owner" buttons.

"We're hoping this will turn seven years of apathy and gloom around," said Guy Settineri, a United communications and computer specialist for 18 years. "Before, we were always waiting for the next roller-coaster, being led by the nose.

"Now we have input. We can work toward same goal — a productive airline."

Approval of the employee buyout plan by about 70 percent of the shareholders of UAL Corp., United's parent, ended a seven-year struggle for employee control of the carrier and made UAL one of the world's biggest worker-owned companies. About 54,000 U.S. employees will have a stake in the company.

Labor Secretary Robert Reich hailed the move as "a major milestone in the history of American business."

"If this experiment pays off in the way UAL shareholders anticipate it will, then we may see many more large companies owned and run by their employees," Reich said in a telephone interview.

Stephen Wolf turned the UAL chairman's post over to Gerald Greenwald, as planned, after reporting to shareholders on United's growth during his nearly seven years in the job. Under Wolf, United grew from a Midwest airline with the oldest planes in the industry into a global carrier with the most trans-Pacific routes.

"I leave knowing United is superbly positioned for the future," Wolf said. The buyout will give the airline "a competitive cost structure and a harmonious force of employees who take pride knowing they hold a substantial equity stake in the company," Wolf said.

He said he didn't know what he would do next.

Employees will receive 55 percent of UAL's stock in exchange for $4.9 billion in wage and benefit concessions. The savings and expected labor peace will enable the company to launch United Shuttle to compete with the cut-rate carriers that have captured 20 percent of the U.S. traffic.

United Shuttle will go "head to head" on fares with Southwest Airlines and other low-cost carriers.

Hold that deal: Comcast casts rival QVC bid

■ Action brings proposed merger of CBS, home-shopping concern into question.

Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — The proposed merger of CBS Inc. and QVC Inc. was brought into question Tuesday when cable television provider Comcast Corp. announced a rival bid for the home shopping concern.

The boards of CBS and QVC had planned to vote Wednesday on their merger proposal, which included the installation of veteran television executive Barry Diller at the top of CBS.

Comcast's spoiler bid for QVC, which it valued at $2.2 billion, is a cash and stock combination totaling $44 a share.

"As we have repeatedly expressed to you, the proposal to sell QVC to CBS is of great concern to us as it represents a fundamental departure from our strategic view of the company's future," Comcast Chairman Ralph J. Roberts and Brian L. Roberts, its president, said in a letter to Diller.

"We do not believe that the CBS proposal is in the best interests of Comcast's shareholders," they said in the letter released by Comcast.

The proposed merger had called for CBS to acquire QVC in a deal valued at roughly $7 billion that would have left CBS shareholders with nearly 54 percent of the new company's stock. CBS, which is valued at $3.5 billion, owns one of the four major broadcast television networks along with TV and radio stations.

The Robertses noted their offer represents a 22 percent premium over Tuesday's closing price for QVC's common stock, which ended 25 cents a share higher at $36 on the Nasdaq stock market.

Comcast's bid was announced after the close of trading.

QVC said in a statement Tuesday evening that it will consider the Comcast bid at its Wednesday board meeting.

"All the ironies aside, I said at the outset that if someone else wanted to bid for QVC, we would, of course, deal with it," Diller said. "And we will, with the only consideration being the best interests of the QVC shareholder."

New health-food store targets basin diabetics

By Mella McEwen

Opening today in Odessa is DIABETIC DREAMS, located at 865 Central Ave., Suite 5-B — between 8th and 11th streets behind Lowe's Marketplace

McEwen

The owner is Kim Ables Branam, one of 15,500 Odessa and Midland residents affected by diabetes.

Diabetic Dreams offers a wide variety of sugar-free foods, including cheesecakes, cake mixes and frostings, cookies, candies, chocolate chips, breakfast cereals, sauces for sundaes, puddings, jellos, hot cocoa mixes, pancake mixes and flavored syrups, milkshakes, cranberry sauce, whipped topping, caramel corn, brownies and snow cone syrups.

She also has purchased a machine to make frozen fruit drinks, milkshakes and homemade ice cream.

In addition, Branam sells gift baskets filled with cookbooks, gifts and foods, items aimed not only at diabetics but anyone on a sugar-restricted diet, who chooses not to eat sugar or watching his weight.

GRILLZ, at the corner of Illinois Avenue and Andrews Highway, is demolishing the Driscoll's Gifts building to put in a driveway and parking area and give customers easier access to and from the restaurant.

Jay Caldwell, executive vice president overseeing Grillz, said customers will be able to pull in to Grillz from Andrews Highway and circle around to the back and go through the drive-through windows. Also, eight to 10 parking spaces will be created, making access to the patio dining area easier.

Caldwell said demolition should be completed by the end of this week and the project completed by the end of next week.

Grillz has two locations in Odessa in addition to the one in Midland and has four locations in various stages of negotiation in central Texas.

Mood for garlic

Researchers in Germany and India, testing garlic to lower cholesterol, have noted an interesting side effect: Garlic eaters report less anxiety, agitation and irritability and "a greater sense of well-being."

Now, Dr. Gilles Fillion of the Pasteur Institute in France has come up with a reason why. His tests on animal brain cells reveal that a specific chemical in garlic can act on neurotransmitters — chemical messengers that regulate brain activity.

Fillion has found that garlic affects the release of serotonin — a ubiquitous brain chemical involved in regulating a wide spectrum of moods and behavior, including anxiety, depression, pain, aggression, stress, sleep and memory.

Serotonin is known as the "calming chemical." Higher levels of serotonin in the brain tend to relieve depression and induce sleep.

Says Dr. Fillion, "I suspect garlic is anti-stress, anti-anxiety and acts as a sort of an anti-depressant like Prozac, although with a much milder effect. "Eating garlic may just make you feel better."

Soybean for bones

Sure, eating lots of high-calcium foods, especially when you are young, may build strong bones and help save you from bone-crippling osteoporosis in older age. But some scientists have long wondered why Asian women, who eat few calcium-loaded dairy products, have amazingly low rates of osteoporosis.

A possible answer: soybeans, according to a report by nutritionist Mark Messina, at a recent Washington conference on disease-fighting chemicals in foods.

Messina says several studies suggest that eating lots of soy protein foods, such as soy milk, soybeans and tofu, as Asian women do, helps build stronger bones.

For one thing, eating animal protein washes much more calcium out of the body in the urine than eating soy protein. One study found that women eating meat lost 50 milligrams more of calcium per day than when they ate the same amount of protein in soy milk.

He adds that new animal studies have found that soy chemicals have a direct benefit on bone health.

Nuts to cholesterol

Unfortunately, pleas to cut down on fat have led many people to believe no kind of fat is safe or good for your arteries. Not so, say many experts. A prime example of fat that seems to thwart heart disease is the monounsaturated type in almonds and walnuts.

A new Australian study has found that men with normal cholesterol who ate 3 ounces of almonds a day for three weeks cut their total cholesterol by 7 percent and their bad-type LDL cholesterol by 10 percent.

Further, when the men ate 2½ ounces of walnuts daily for three weeks, their total cholesterol sank 5 percent and their LDL cholesterol 9 percent. Importantly, their good-type HDL cholesterol, which helps prevent heart disease, did not go down.

Of the two nuts, almonds seem superior, the Australian researchers said, because almonds also appear to help block the oxidation — or conversion — of LDL cholesterol to a toxic form that attacks arteries.

You don't need to eat as many nuts as used in the study, researchers say. The point is that occasionally adding almonds and walnuts to your diet in place of animal fat would be beneficial.

Double Whammy

Cigarette smoke is known to be associated with hardening of the arteries and a higher death rate from coronary heart disease. Now a new study reported in the July issue of Reader's Digest suggests a reason: smoke inhibits two components that clear excess cholesterol from artery walls. The activity of one component, a key enzyme called lecithin-cholesterol acyltransferase (LCAT), was dramatically inhibited by cigarette smoke. The second component, HDL, or "good" cholesterol, is damaged by cigarette smoke. HDL particles pick up excess cholesterol from artery walls and carry it to the liver to be metabolized and eliminated through the gastrointestinal tract. LCAT determines whether or not excess cholesterol is picked up by the HDL particles.

Vision can be damaged by OTC drugs

Hearst News Service

Some prescription and over-the-counter drugs can damage your vision or the appearance of your eyes.

Blurred vision, dry eyes and double vision are among the drug-induced problems, Francesca L. Kritz wrote in an article in the current issue of Good Housekeeping, caused by medications that include antibiotics, antihistamines and heart medications.

"When a drug travels through the bloodstream, the many blood vessels in the eyes are likely to absorb some of it," said Dr. Oliver Schein, associate professor of ophthalmology at Johns Hopkins Wilmer Eye Institute in Baltimore.

Certain cold remedies can cause a change in the size of the pupil, which can lead to glaucoma. This is generally more of a problem for people who are farsighted or have a family history of glaucoma. If you fear you are at risk, discuss these medications with your ophthalmologist.

"If you're taking any drug and notice a change in vision or in your eye's appearance, contact the doctor who prescribed the drug," said Dr. Evan Dreyer, director of the glaucoma service at the Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary in Boston.

In some cases you may have to stop taking the medication and switch to another drug. In other cases, the problem may reverse itself once you finish the course of medication, although you will need to take some safety precautions while taking the drug, such as not driving and being careful going up and down stairs.

If you are seeing an ophthalmologist, discuss all the medications you are taking.

Among the drugs most likely to cause problems:

■ Antibiotics, particularly tetracycline, in rare cases may cause blurred vision with long-term use. Sometimes the drug must be discontinued, but the problem often goes away when the treatment ends.

■ Anticoagulants such as Coumadin and aspirin, may cause red spots on the surface of the eyes that rarely affect vision. Spots go away when the drug is discontinued.

■ Some antihistamines, both over-the-counter and prescription, can cause eye dryness, and-or a change in the size of the pupil that can lead to glaucoma. Artificial tears help dryness. People at risk of glaucoma should consult their doctor.

■ Arthritis drugs, Chloroqulne and Plaquenil, also used for malaria, can accumulate in the retina, leading to permanent loss of vision. Eye exams to check for this are needed every six to 12 months.

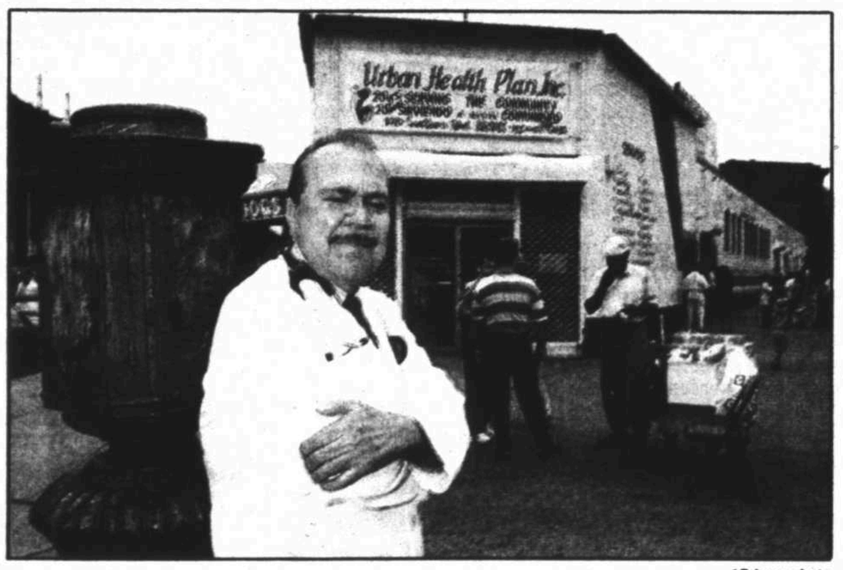

■ Bladder and stomach spasm drugs Ditropan, Donnatal and Levain can cause blurred vision. Dosage may need to be lowered, or the drug discontinued.

■ Heart disease drugs. High doses of Digoxin can cause blurred or "yellow-tinged" vision. The solution may be to cut back on dose on the advice of both prescribing physician and ophthalmologist. Cordarone can cause pigment deposits in the cornea. Discuss with prescribing physician and ophthalmologist.

■ Diuretics can cause eye dryness. Use artificial tears as needed.

■ Steroids, including over-the-counter creams can cause cataracts, or change in the size of the pupil that can lead to glaucoma. Keep creams away from the eyes.

Have an eye exam six weeks after starting the drugs, thereafter at the doctor's recommendation.

Izquierdo bought the building in 1968 with $3,000 in borrowed money and a year later opened the San Juan Health Center with a group of private-practice doctors. In 1974, the Center was reborn as a nonprofit clinic that celebrates its 20th birthday this year.

In South Bronx, 20 years of health care

By Beth J. Harpaz

NEW YORK (AP) — In an abandoned building in the South Bronx filled with needles, garbage, and broken pipes gushing gallons of water, Dr. Richard Izquierdo hatched a dream.

He imagined a clinic where doctors, like their Puerto Rican patients, would speak Spanish. Where poor people — just like middle-class people — would see the same doctor every time they needed treatment and be able to call for advice 24 hours a day. Where no one would be turned away, and where everyone who walked in off the street for a rash or a cough would walk out with a plan for better health. And where the doors would stay open — no matter how bombed out the neighborhood got.

"I was too dumb to know that it couldn't happen, so I did it," he said.

Izquierdo, 64, bought the building in 1968 with $3,000 in borrowed money, and a year later opened the San Juan Health Center with a group of private-practice doctors. But within a few years he realized that a dozen solo practitioners could not provide the comprehensive care he envisioned.

This year, the San Juan Health Center celebrates its 20th birthday as a nonprofit clinic. With 15,000 registered patients, 72,000 patient visits a year, and 20 to 30 new patients each day, it has become one of the largest independent clinics in the state.

THE DOORS open at 6:30 a.m. New patients are sent off for the nutritional and social service screening provided to everyone. Regular patients wait to be called for appointments for diabetes, hypertension, asthma, and other common problems.

"I don't know what I would do if I didn't come here," says Deborah Rivers as her 13-month-old, Shavona, is given a tuberculosis test.

Kim Jenkins brings her 3-year-old and 7-month-old sons in for checkups. "You see the same doctors. That's why I like it. Somebody is looking at your chart who's familiar with it."

Not only do the doctors speak Spanish; the nutritionists plan their dietary recommendations around traditional Spanish food.

"We laugh and cry in the language of our patients," said Izquierdo.

There are programs for AIDS, tuberculosis and prenatal care; off-site clinics in a local high school, drug rehab center and a homeless shelter; and special sessions for adolescents.

"The first day of the adolescent session was an eye-opener," Izquierdo recalled. "There were a half-dozen teenagers. Three were pregnant and four tested positive for TB."

And when a state institution for the retarded closed in 1988 and placed its clients in group homes, the clinic agreed to help out. "Today we are the largest health care provider to mentally retarded in the Bronx, with 800 patients," Izquierdo said.

BUT HEALTH care is only part of what the clinic provides. There's a Halloween parade, ceremonies honoring teen-agers for academic achievement, a newsletter that lists patient birthdays, and volunteer work that helps both the clinic and the person doing it.

"I'm building job skills, and I've learned a lot about computers," said volunteer Bernice Perez, 38, as she handed a stack of papers to an administrator.

Jessica Rivera, 15, who has been a patient at the clinic since she was born, worked there last summer and now wants to go to medical school. "They inspired me," she said. "They treat you like a friend instead of a patient."

Dr. Acklema Mohammad was a teenager when she began working part time for Izquierdo; now she is head of pediatrics. And the director of external affairs, Rosemarie Longo, was Izquierdo's patient as a child.

The clinic is an economic Rock of Gibraltar in an area that was once a burnt-out moonscape overrun with pushers and hookers. When it first opened, it had but a few dozen patients a day, most of them "bums," as one administrator put it.

Today, the Hunts Point area where the clinic is located is making a comeback. Women push strollers on every corner, and shops and restaurants bustle along Southern Boulevard, the main drag.

"The health problems of this community don't only stem from disease," said Paloma Hernandez, Izquierdo's daughter and the clinic's executive di-

Heed signs of attempted suicide

By Dr. Norman Sussman
Associated Press

Suicide often casts its shadow before it.

An estimated 80 percent of all Americans who killed themselves last year gave clear warnings of their intentions, by word or deed.

If relatives and friends are aware of the warning signs, suicide often can be prevented by professional help.

A basic rule is that when someone talks about suicide, that talk should be taken seriously.

That's especially true for persons who can be identified as being in a high-risk group.

Clinical depression is a major risk factor for suicide. The risk of an attempt is increased if the person with depression also suffers from another mental or physical condition.

Neck pain sufferers usually can get relief

By Dr. Gerard Varlotta
Associated Press

Anyone who has a persistent pain in the neck knows why it's used as a metaphor for significant distress.

Fortunately, it's usually easy to zero in on the cause of a real pain in the neck — and provide relief for it.

Very frequently, neck pain is caused by a problem with the disks in the cervical spine. Disks are the soft, pliant cushions between the bones of the spinal column.

The disk most often responsible for the pain lies between the fifth and sixth vertebrae bones at the very top of the spinal column; in formal terms, the fifth and sixth cervical vertebrae.

Neck pain often is age-related. With age, arthritis of the joints sets in and the disk starts to lose its fluid content. Pressure on it can cause it to bulge out, impinging on the nerve that leads from the neck to the upper limbs. The result is irritation and inflammation, which causes pain in the neck area and then radiates to one or both arms.

In severe cases, the tough outer coating of the disk can break and the jelly-like material in the center spills out. This condition is called a herniated disk or a slipped disk.

Younger people can also suffer this kind of neck pain. The disk can be damaged by trauma, such as the whiplash caused by an auto accident.

Enzyme trigger for invasion of tumor found

NEW YORK (AP) — Scientists have found an enzyme that appears to help cancer cells invade tissue, a discovery that may lead to ways to limit the spread of some cancers.

Tumors must eat through an intricate mesh of protein fibers to invade tissue, and the newfound enzyme may trigger this process by activating a second, protein-destroying substance, researchers said.

In the July 7 issue of the journal Nature, Japanese researchers report that in the test tube, the enzyme activated the protein-destroying substance and promoted cell invasion.

Dr. Jean-Dominique Vassalli of the University of Geneva Medical Center in Switzerland, co-author of a Nature commentary on the Japanese work, said future drugs that hamper the invasion process may prove useful in treating cancers that have already spread to distant tissues. But the initial invasion by tumors frequently occurs before the cancer is even discovered, he said.

SUICIDE: Signs can be clear

another risk factor. Suicide is 50 times more common among alcoholics than in the general public.

Another clear warning sign is a previous attempt at suicide. One of every four people who take their lives have attempted suicide before. And the more serious the attempt, particularly if the person had been hospitalized as a result of a self-sustained injury, the higher the risk.

Suicide is more common among men and among older people, although there has been an increase in suicide among adolescents in recent years.

A time of special danger for the person at risk is a personal crisis, such as the death of a loved one or the loss of a job.

Sometimes the warning comes in the form of talk. When someone begins discussing the effect his or her suicide would have on the family, or details a specific method of committing suicide, help should be sought immediately.

Sometimes deeds tell the story — acquiring the means of suicide, such as a gun or an abnormal supply of sleeping pills; preparing a will unexpectedly and giving away personal possessions; and shutting out family members and friends.

When the warning signs are evident, it is essential that family members seek professional help for those at risk.

Medical steps include treatment of depression, by drugs and psychotherapy. A psychiatrist may sometimes recommend immediate hospitalization of an individual if the risk of suicide appears great.

The family can help by providing a supportive atmosphere, by watching the individual closely, and by removing guns or other means of suicide.

Such measures can help an individual through a personal crisis. But depression, which is closely associated with suicide attempts, can be a recurrent condition, and so constant vigilance may be necessary.

Dr. Norman Sussman is clinical associate professor of psychiatry at New York University School of Medicine.

rector. "So we have to be committed to improving the whole socioeconomic status of the community. We're part of the infrastructure."

Every inch of the clinic's 16,000 square feet is crammed with tiny offices, examining rooms, waiting areas and equipment. There are 113 people on staff, including 15 doctors, plus another dozen consulting specialists.

The $5 million budget is mostly paid for by Medicaid reimbursement, but foundation grants are now being sought to fund the purchase of a nearby vacant lot where a much larger facility could be built. Izquierdo's latest goal is to double his space and his patient load, and even perhaps open a birthing center and a food pantry.

He can hardly believe that his original vision ever came to pass.

"I started all of this?" he said, looking around. "I can't believe it, that it was once just a dream in my head."

Breakfast cereal tastes 'berry' good

By Linda Anderson

My children have very definite likes and dislikes — if something new falls into the realm of things they already like (like ice cream and chocolate), they will help with the tasting, but if something looks the slightest bit healthy or good for them, they refuse to touch it.

Anderson

Which brings us to Blueberry Morning, a new dry breakfast cereal from Post. This cereal, a combination of multigrain flakes, oat clusters and sliced almonds, is laced with "Real, Wild Blueberries," according to its label. Basically, that means that instead of raisins, the manufacturer has added dried blueberries to the cereal.

My kids took one look at the box and said "Not me!" So that meant I had to rely on myself and some of my more adventurous friends to taste-test the product.

A 15-ounce box of Blueberry Morning cost $3.59, which lead some of the tasters to lament the high cost of breakfast cereal.

Label advertising goes like this: "Wake up to a new taste in cereal — real, whole wild blueberries-...right in every bowl.

"There's never been a cereal like Blueberry Morning... the only leading cereal with whole, wild blueberries bursting with flavor. And their sweet, delicious taste is perfect with the crispy multigrain flakes, made from wheat, corn and rice, crunchy oat clusters and sliced almonds.

"POST Blueberry Morning Cereal. Now you can enjoy delicious cereal with sweetened, real, wild blueberries... every morning."

Now I have to admit, I'm not that fond of blueberries, but oh well. And I really wish manufacturers would quit putting nuts in breakfast cereal — that's just to much to chew that early in the morning.

But in spite of that, I found that Blueberry Morning is kind of tasty, in a blueberry muffin kind of way (although the blueberries, since they are dried, are kind of chewy). And even though it's too expensive to my way of thinking, so is most every other kind of breakfast cereal — prices are going up almost as fast as the ones at the gas pump.

Some of the other testers liked the cereal and some didn't — it all depended on how much they liked or didn't like blueberries because the faint taste of blueberries floats through the entire box of cereal.

So if you like blueberries — or at least blueberry muffins — you might want to give Blueberry Morning a try. Otherwise, forget it.

Price listed is from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.

PAIN: Treatment may involve therapy, surgery

(From 1D)

Treatment of neck pain generally starts with immobilization of the neck in a collar and the prescription of a pain-relieving drug, usually one of the class called nonsteroidal anti-inflammatory agents. If the pain is severe, a cortisone derivative might be prescribed for four or five days, under medical supervision.

A physical therapy program to strengthen the muscles of the neck and shoulder can help, after the acute pain is relieved. In physical therapy, the patient does stretching exercises and is taught techniques to improve posture and hold the neck muscles in the proper position. Most patients get good relief in four to six weeks with proper therapy.

Surgery for neck pain is rarely necessary. It is done when the patient experiences progressive weakness, when the pain becomes unbearable in spite of medical treatment, or when the damage to the disk is severe enough to cause compression of the spinal cord or nerve roots.

In surgery, the damaged disk is removed and the two adjoining vertebrae are fused. The recovery period is about three months, followed by a rehabilitation program.

Dr. Gerard Varlotta is assistant clinical assistant professor of rehabilitation medicine at New York University School of Medicine.

Drug interactions cause reactions

NEW YORK (AP) — You have asthma, and a cold is giving you a stuffy head. Stop before you start if you're considering a nasal decongestant, warns the Council on Family Health. You may get a reaction you didn't bargain for. Many over-the-counter drugs, prescription medicines, and chronic conditions don't mix, says the Council, which cites 50,000 adverse reactions reported in one year to the U.S. Food and Drug Administration. Twenty percent of these ended in hospitalization or death.

A flyer, "How to Prevent Drug Interactions," is available from the council. Send an SASE to Council on Family Health, 225 Park Avenue South, Suite 1700, New York, N.Y. 10003.

Distributorships Now Available

PART-TIME INCOME OPPORTUNITY

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has early morning routes which need to be filled with dependable individuals with reliable transportation. Often asked questions:

➥ Is it worthwhile for adults also?
YES! 95% of our Distributors ARE adults! Morning Routes are attractive for:
★ ADULTS who have fulltime jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job!
★ MOTHERS who can't justify a small job AND daycare, because as a Distributor, you don not need daycare!
★ COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
★ SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added retirement income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends!

➥ How much money can I make as a Distributor?
Depending on the size of the route(s), from $350 to $800 monthly, in some cases...even more!

➥ OK...but how long does it take?
The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday-Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, depending on the size of the route(s). Also some time is needed each month to collect from subscribers. Many Distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in the subscribers' papers and having payments mailed to them. Some collecting in person will be necessary though, particularly on some routes more than others.

➥ When do the papers have to be delivered by?
Papers must be on the yards by 6 am Monday-Friday, and 7 am on weekend mornings.

➥ Do I ever get a day off?
The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, most Distributors do take days off by finding a friend, family member, or another Distributor to substitute for them!

➥ What else?
A small deposit is required.

Take Note Of This

Summer's end is just around the corner and it's time to start making arrangements for education and care of Midland's children. To assist you with information on where education and care is available, the Midland Reporter-Telegram is publishing it's annual Children's Education and Child Care Directory on Sunday, August 7th.

This Directory is a vehicle used to reach parents with information about the services that are available in the Midland area and who provides them. The parents of children in the Midland area have come to rely on this directory as a guide to quality education and care. This section focuses on the basic "who, what, where and when" of quality education and care in our area.

As a provider of these services in the Midland area, you will want your facility represented in this special Directory with an ad, as well as a story, photo and a dot on the map showing where you are located.

Special ad packages ranging from 8" to 65" are available, as well as rates for ads running without a story, photo, etc.

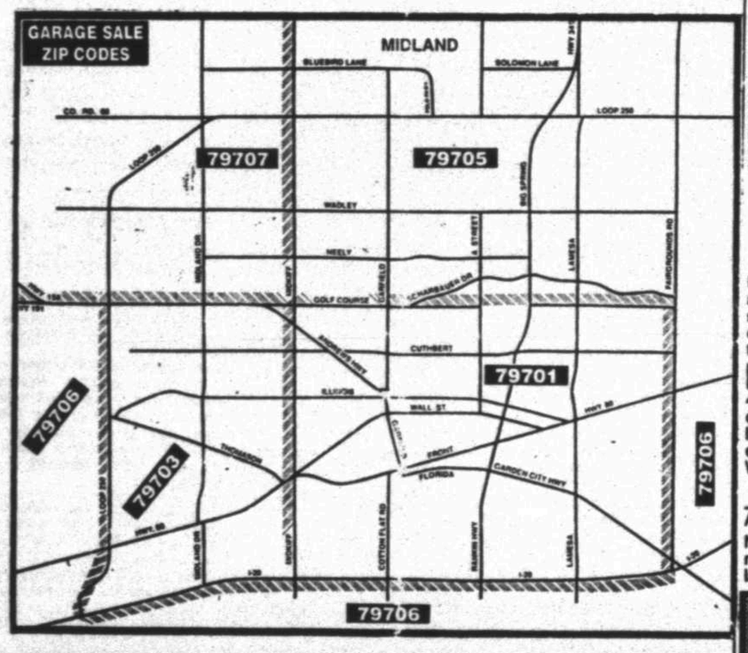

Deadline for Children's Education and Child Care Directory is Thursday, July 28th. To reserve your ad space, please call
