By J. W. King, Sr.

The first primary election for the democratic party is over in Texas, and there will be little interest in politics until the general election in November.

It seemed strange Saturday that a Governor was being elected in Texas without the usual fuss and heated arguments. It just doesn't seem possible.

The rains came last Friday and Saturday making this section one of the wettest spots in Texas. Crops are looking good and promise a bountiful harvest this fall.

Farmers are urged to remember the Loraine Dairy Show on August 17, and have their show animals here for exhibition. Help to make this one of the best shows Loraine has ever had. Cash prizes and ribbons will be offered to all classes of dairy animals except grade bulls.

Vote Was Light In Saturday's Election

The heavy rain Saturday kept quite a few people away from the polls in this precinct. The condition of the roads made it impossible for some to get to town. Only 428 votes were cast here as compared with a possible 700.

Governor Coke Stevenson defeated his eight opponents by a very large majority. Lt. Governor John Lee Smith also defeated his three opponents. Grover Sellers and Jesse E. Martin will go into the August run-off for Attorney General. Supt. of Public Instruction L. A. Woods was given a clear majority over his two opponents as was J. E. McDonald, Commissioner of Agriculture.

George Mahon was re-elected Congressman from the 19th District by a substantial majority.

Milburn S. Long of Abilene defeated O. C. Funderburk for a place on the Court of Civil Appeals. Pat Bullock was re-elected State Senator for the 24th District. Harley Sadler was returned to the State Legislature, defeating Charlie A. Jones.

The 42nd Judicial District will have a new District Attorney in the person of Chas. L. Nunn, who defeated Truett Barber, on leave from the office while serving in the Navy.

In the county races A. F. King was given another term as County Judge, defeating J. E. Coles more than 500 votes. J. N. Narrell will continue to serve as sheriff, having defeated Jack Delaney almost two to one.

In the only contested place for Commissioner J. E. Skelton was re-elected for the Westbrook Precinct by a small margin.

J. A. Crosby received 5 votes for Justice of the Peace Precinct No. 5, and Page Henderson received 6 votes for constable.

J. C. Hall was retained as precinct chairman, having received 25 votes.

No Precinct Convention was held here Saturday to elect delegates to the county convention next Saturday. The chairman will probably appoint delegates to the county convention.

THANKS

TO MITCHELL COUNTY

By H. A. Pond, District Clerk "Howdy Folks." Ladies and gentlemen, boys and girls, you DEAR VOTERS of Mitchell County, you know I am just so thankful I must write a note in the paper thanking you one and all. Just think, all meeting at the election Saturday evening on the 22nd of July 1944, no excitement or worries of Hitler's Germany Robot Secret Bombs falling around us, such as we hear in England.

Two years ago, you remember dear voters of Mitchell County, and Colorado City, Texas, after making the third stab for office, you elected me as District Clerk of Mitchell County. Words cannot express the feeling I have in store for you. I want to thank you OH so much, you have been so grateful and kind to me. I really want to shake your hand in return and gratitude.

For a motto I will say: If you make use of small opportunities, greater ones will come to you. We think highly of a man who is wiser today than he was yesterday. Do good to a friend to keep him; to an enemy, to make him a friend. Experience and practice is the best of teaching, so since I have had the office in 1943 I am better qualified with more ability to hold the office, and serve you, it is your office, not mine. You elected me as a duster, dust the books and keep the records, and you are always welcome if I can help you in any way or assist you. The books are open for inspection any time. I am asking you to examine me.

I want to say this. The war is still on, we know not when it will be over, or how soon. I will say this: My heart is beating with sympathy with you for those who have loved ones, sons daughters, and sweethearts far away from home who are fighting in this horrible war for victory and peace, some who are lying beneath the sod and in the bottom of the seas. You know they have given their lives for you and I, and for the Flag that waves on high. As I have one somewhere lying beneath the sod in the Philippines, one of the first from Mitchell County, Texas. I thank you.

H. A. Pond

France—Surprised by sniper while on patrol, U. S. Doughboys make for ditch and prepare to return enemy's fire.

SECOND FRONT:
Hedgerow Battle

Beautiful in peace, hedgerow in war, the hedgerow battle is one of the most interesting of the current fighting in World War II, with desperate Nazi soldiers trying to control their lines of machine guns and artillery to stop the steady advance of the American doughboys.

Further to the east, Gen. Bernard L. Montgomery's British and Canadian forces guided by a large-scale assault against strong German positions.

Shortly after he had told his son, Capt. Quentin Roosevelt, that "the old machine is pretty well worn out," 34-year-old Brig. Gen. Theodore Roosevelt Jr., son of the immortal "Teddy," quietly succumbed to a heart attack in an army tent on the Normandy battlefield, where he had been assistant commanding general of the 4th infantry division.

tions of German armor in the plains below Caen, while enemy units continued to jab into their flanks to unsettle their positions.

As the Allies edged forward in northern France and received a continuing stream of reinforcements, some allegedly direct from the U. S., American and British aviators were dropping down in German communications lines in efforts to disrupt the flow of enemy reserves and supplies to the flaming front.

German Soil

No longer able to maneuver freely on the vast spaces of Russia, and with its back to its own homeland, the German army on the northern sector of the eastern front found itself confronted with the problem of being forced to stand up and fight or allow the Reds to carry the war into their own country.

As the Russian army became the first Allied force to approach the threshold of Germany, bitter fighting continued to rage before the enemy's Gothic line in northern Italy, where the Nazis again took advantage of the high mountain country to slow up the Fifth and Eighth armies advance to the rich agricultural and industrial regions beyond.

As the Germans fell back toward their East Prussian border in the north, German propagandists made no bones about the critical situation, declaring that the time had come for the complete industrial and military mobilization of every man in the Reich capable of working or bearing arms.

PACIFIC:

Spotlight Shifts

The spotlight in the ever widening Pacific war zone shifted back to northern New Guinea, where 45,000 desperate Japanese sandwiched between U. S. battleheads all along the coast, repeatedly attempted to break through the iron ring being forged around them.

In the islands farther to the north, U. S. warships and planes continued to pepper the important stepping stones to the Japanese mainland, with Guam below captured Saipan the major target.

Despite the ferocity of their attacks in New Guinea, the position of the Japanese forces was hopeless, with Yanks occupying large patches all along the 600 miles of coastline to their west, and other Allied forces firmly entrenched to their east.

AGRICULTURE:
Bumper Crops

Overcoming machinery and manpower difficulties, U. S. farmers are expected to turn in bumper crops in 1944, the department of agriculture reported, with the wheat harvest anticipated at an all-time high of 1,128,000,000 bushels, 119,000,000 over the former top of 1915.

Prospects were reported good for all grains, with the corn crop expected to approximate 1,980,000,000, the fifth largest in U. S. history. Although near record harvests were predicted for hay, fruits, vegetables and soybeans, and a 20 per cent increase in truck produce for the fresh market is anticipated, the department looks for smaller crops of beans and peas, peaches and potato crops.

Harvested acreage was set at 361,000,000 acres for the 12 principal crops, largest since 1921, and 1 per cent over last year.

Unloading Trouble

Latest problem to arise as a result of the manpower complications resulting from the war is the unloading of grain cars at wheat markets, with permits needed for shipments from 11 points in the southwest.

With no less than 22,000,000 bushels of wheat standing in Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas because of the unloading situation, it was predicted that about six months would be required to move the crops from these states and Colorado instead of the usual 5 to 90 days.

Large crops and insufficient rail cars were said to be contributing factors to the terminal crisis, but, except for bad weather, there is no threat of grain spoiling in the fields.

Rare Twins

In one of the rarest cases in medical annals, Mrs. Frederick D. Smith of East Port Chester, Conn., (in picture) gave birth to twins 11 days apart, with a 4 pound, 12 ounce girl following a 4 pound, 7 1/2 ounce boy.

FOURTH TERM:
F.D.R. Willing

One week before the Democratic National conference met in Chicago, Franklin D. Roosevelt looking cool in his seersucker pants and white shirt, but wiggling nervously, told a gathering of 200 quiet newspapermen that if the people of the U. S. desired, he would be willing to serve a fourth term as president.

With the country's objective being a speedy end to the war, a durable peace and the creation of a prosperous economy, F. D. R. said that he would have to accept a fourth term as a "good soldier" if the people asked him to remain in the White House.

F. D. R.'s announcement was first page news the world over, with both British and Russian papers paying it up without comment. The German radio proclaimed interest, saying: "One is convinced here in Berlin that military and political issues which are now at stake are not to be influenced by this or that President of the United States."

DIPLOMACY:
Good Neighbors

Provision of American transportation facilities for movement of goods to Mexico, and close economic cooperation between the two countries in peace as well as war, dominated the formal discussions of U. S. Secretary of State Cordell Hull and Mexican Foreign Minister Ezequiel Padilla.

Not only did the U. S. promise to help hold up the Mexican economy by maintaining the shipment of goods to the good neighbor, but it also agreed to furnish technicians and equipment for bolstering the country's own sagging railway system.

Basing their discussions on a program drawn up by a U. S.-Mexican commission created as an outgrowth of President Roosevelt's visit with President Cárdenas in 1943, Hull and Padilla announced that the two governments agreed to "discourage trade barriers which may unduly interfere with the economic development of Mexico and trade between the two countries."

Oil Parley

Organization of an international administrative agency to provide orderly marketing and development of world oil resources will be the principal topic of discussion of a formal oil conference between the U. S. and Britain.

The conference promises to be of particular interest in the U. S. with depletion of American reserves as a result of record war time production for the supply of the major bulk of Allied needs, and with the project construction of a private pipeline across Arabia to the Mediterranean with U. S. government funds.

The conference will follow technical discussions between petroleum experts of the two countries, with Secretary of State Cordell Hull and Lord Beaverbrook being in charge of the U. S. and British delegations.

Supplies and Troops Continue to Roll In Striking panorama of the French invasion beach was made by a coast guard combat cameraman from a hillside cut with trenches, in foreground, by ousted Nazi defenders. The channel is black with ships as reinforcements and supplies pour ashore to reinforce the troops to continue their advance southward. Barrage balloons float overhead to protect the landings. Until captured harbors have been repaired, and perhaps even later, the beachheads are being utilized to land men, supplies, munitions and food as well as hospital and canteen supplies now being furnished the invaders.

Nazi Collaborationist Loses 'Crowning Glory'

The French patriots made the punishment fit the crime (as any female who has had her "crowning glory" sheared will attest). Grande Guillotte, 23-year-old French girl was taken from her home by force and sheared of her long hair for collaborating with the Nazis. Many French patriots have joined together and have designated a large number of collaborationist suspects. While they have not announced the punishment to be given to all the men on the list, it looks as if the women will soon be missing their hair.

First Marines to Land in U. S.

The First marine division, with 2,743 happy members, arrived in San Diego after 26 months in the South Pacific. This unit struck America's first land blow at Japan at Guadalcanal. Their most recent action was on New Britain island where they drove out the Japs.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

BUSTLES: Something faintly resembling the old-fashioned bustle has made its appearance in the New York fashion shows. It's only a little bulge, it's true, sometimes in the form of a stiff bow, sometimes a series of fishtail ruffles in the center of the back, but it's a legitimate descendant of grandmother's day. So far it has only appeared on afternoon gowns and cocktail suits.

COCOA: The tight situation will soon be relieved by the arrival of 667,000 bags of cocoa beans from Africa. The new Brazilian crop will soon be coming in, dealers say. Recently manufacturers of cocoa products have had to reduce their grind to 70 per cent of the 1941 base quantity for civilian use, but they can now go on a full schedule again because of the new receipts.

TURKEYS

So that servicemen will be assured of plenty of turkeys for Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year's the War Food Administration has ordered that all birds produced and marketed within 24 states and parts of three others, shall be reserved for army and navy purchasing agents until the necessary quantity is obtained. Last year supply services bought 35,000,000 and it is expected that this year they will want even more to satisfy festive doughboy appetites.

The name Winchell appeared in the Congressional Record long before the current one started worrying those in Washington, who have good reason to worry. His name was Benj. Winchell. The oldest papers in the files of Congress relate to Benj. and his son Ruggles. The papers date back to 1758. . . . Radio networks have altered the well-known lines of the song, "Beyond the Blue Horizon." The wordage—lies the rising sun—has been switched to "the setting sun."

Midtown Vignette: It happened in the Stork Club the other night. . . . Corp. Brod Crawford, former Hollywood actor, saw a lieutenant at the bar, a buddy from Movietown. . . . He greeted him by his first name, of course. . . . The lieutenant stiffened and in tones colder than Sophie Tucker's ice-cream replied: "Address your superior officer as a soldier." . . . After 15 minutes of heated argument the session ended when the officer gave the corporal a direct order: . . . Infringement of which is punishable by a court martial. . . . A witness to the episode relayed it to a colonel seated in the rear. He was Col. Butch Morgan, one of the real tough guys who fly our fighting planes. He is the most decorated hero in this war. . . . Colonel Morgan walked over to the lieutenant and said: "Lieutenant, where do you know Corporal Crawford from?" . . . "Hollywood, sir," was the reply. . . . "What did you call him in Hollywood?" asked Colonel Morgan. . . . "I called him Brod," was the answer. . . . "Well," said the Colonel, "when you meet a friend or post, you address him by his first name, and don't go pulling your rank on him—and that's a direct order from your superior officer."

It has been estimated that 55,000,000 Americans go to the movies every week. The film industry is one place where mediocrity pays handsome dividends. Producers of B films are among America's highest paid executives. Those celluloids also reap the most loot. . . . Too many ambitious youngsters believe that beauty is the only qualification for film success.

Quotation Marksanship: Raymond Moley: Walks as if balancing the family tree on his nose. . . . V. Kitchen: There's no use itching for something unless you're willing to scratch for it. . . . H. Savoy: She was as light as a feather, and she didn't weigh much either. . . . A. Bierce: A fork is an implement used by a civilized man to put dead things in his mouth. . . . Toni Eden: An American who takes off his coat for his country is worth 10 who just take off their hats to the flag. . . . Billy Sunday: Try praising your wife, even if it does frighten her at first. . . . J. Lorimer: The best way to hold a man is to make him want to hold you. . . . Maude Warren: Everybody is able to give pleasure in some way. One person may do it by coming into a room, another by going out.

Love Letter of the Week: From Printer's Ink and the page by Hugh E. Agnew, titled: "You are immature if you think: That everything currently popular is really good. . . . That smart and smart alec are synonymous. . . . That you could run the business better than the man who built it. . . . That clever copy is selling copy. . . . That the popular side is the right side. . . . That men over 50 seldom get new ideas. . . . That popular mediocrity is a criterion of taste. . . . That the majority is always right."

Gen. Eddy Commands One Of Best Combat Divisions

Commander Dares Enemy Fire to Be With His Fighting Troops

By Ernie Pyle

IN NORMANDY.—One of the favorite generals among the war correspondents is Maj. Gen. Manton S. Eddy, commander of the Ninth division.

We like him because he is absolutely honest with us, because he is sort of old-shoe and easy to talk with, and because we think he is a mighty good general. We have known him in Tunisia and Sicily, and now here in France.

Like his big chief, Lieut. Gen. Omar Bradley, General Eddy looks more like a schoolteacher than a soldier. He is a big, tall man but he wears glasses and his eyes have a sort of squint.

Ernie Pyle

He talks like a Middle Westerner, which he is. He still claims Chicago as home, although he has been an army officer for 28 years. He was wounded in the last war.

He is not a glib talker, but he talks well and laughs easily.

In spite of being a professional soldier he despises war, and like any ordinary soul is appalled by the waste and tragedy of it. He wants to win it and get home just as badly as anybody else.

When the general is in the field he lives in a truck that is used to be a machine shop. They have fixed it up nicely for him with a bed, a desk, cabinets, and rugs. His orderly is an obliging, dark-skinned sergeant who is a native of Ecuador.

Some of his officers sleep in foxholes, but the general sleeps in his truck. One night, however, while I was with his division, it got too hot even for him. Fragments from shells bursting nearby started hitting the top of the truck, so he got out.

The general has a small mess in a tent separate from the rest of the division staff. This is because he has a good many visiting generals, and since they talk business while they eat they must have some privacy.

Usually he stays at his desk during the morning and makes a tour of regimental and battalion command posts during the afternoon. Usually he goes to the front in an unarmed jeep, with another jeep right behind him carrying a machine gunner and rifleman on the alert for snipers. His drivers say when they start out:

"Hold on, for the general doesn't spare the horses when he's traveling."

He carries a portable telephone in his jeep, and if he suddenly wants to talk with any of his units he just stops along the road and plugs into one of the wires that are lying on the ground.

General Eddy especially likes to show up in places where his soldiers wouldn't expect to see him. He knows that it helps the soldiers' spirits to see their commanding general right up at the front where it is hot. So he walks around the front with his long stride, never ducking or appearing to be concerned at all.

One day I rode around with him on one of his tours. At one command post we were sitting on the grass under a tree, looking at maps, with a group of officers around us.

Our own artillery was banging nearby, but nothing was coming our way. Then, like a flash of lightning, here came a shell just over our heads, so low it went right through the treetops, it seemed. It didn't whine, it swished. Everybody, including full colonels, flopped over and began grabbing grass. The shell exploded in the next orchard.

General Eddy didn't move. He just said:

"Why, that was one of our shells."

And since I had known General Eddy for quite a while, I was bold enough to say:

"General, if that was one of ours all I can say is that this is a hell of a way to run a war. We're fighting toward the north, and that shell was going due south."

The general just laughed.

The general also likes to get up at four o'clock in the morning once in a while and go poking around into message centers and mess halls, giving the boys a start. It was one of these night meanderings that produced his favorite war story.

It was in Africa. They were in a new bivouac. It was raining cats and dogs, and the ground was knee-deep in mud. The tent pegs wouldn't stay in and the pup tents kept coming down. Everybody was wet and miserable. So, late at night the general started out on foot around the area, just because he felt so sorry for all the kids out there.

As he walked he passed a soldier trying to redress the stake that held down the front of his pup tent. The soldier was using his steel helmet as a hammer, and he was having a bad time of it. Every now and then he would miss the stake with the helmet and would squash mud all over himself. He was cussing and fuming.

The general was using his flashlight, and when the soldier saw the light he called out:

"Hey, Bud, come and hold that light for me, will you?"

So General Eddy obediently squatted down and held the light while the soldier pounded and splattered mud, and they finally got the pup driven. Then, as they got up, the general said:

"Soldier, what's your name?"

The startled soldier gasped, leaned forward and looked closely, then blurted out:

"Goddamn, mighty!"

During the Cherbourg Peninsula campaign I spent nine days with the Ninth Infantry division—the division that cut the peninsula, and one of the three that overwhelmed the great port of Cherbourg.

The Cherbourg campaign is old stuff by now, and you are no longer particularly interested in it. But the Ninth division has been in this war for a long time and will be in it for a long time to come. So I would like to tell you some things about it.

The Ninth is one of our best divisions. It landed in Africa and it fought through Tunisia and Sicily. Then it went to England last fall, and trained all winter for the invasion of France. It was one of the American divisions in the invasion that had previous battle experience.

The Ninth did something in this campaign that we haven't always done in the past. It kept tenaciously on the enemy's neck. When the Germans would withdraw a little the Ninth was right on top of them. It never gave them a chance to reassemble or get their balance.

The Ninth moved so fast it got to be funny. I was based at the division command post, and we struck our tents and moved forward six times in seven days.

That works the daylight out of the boys who take down and put up the tents. I overheard one of the boys saying: "I'd rather be with Ringling Brothers."

Usually a division headquarters is a fairly safe place. But with the Ninth it was different. Something was always happening.

They had a bad shelling one night and lost some personnel. Every now and then snipers would pick-off somebody. In all the time I was with them we never had an uninterrupted night's sleep. Our own big guns were all around us and they would fire all night. Usually German planes were over too, dropping around in the darkness and making us tense and nervous.

One night I was sitting in a tent with Capt. Lindsey Nelson of Knoxville, when there was a loud explosion, then a shrill whine through the treetops over our heads. But we didn't jump, or hit the dirt. Instead I said:

"I know what that is. That's the rotating band off one of our shells. As an old artilleryman I've heard lots of rotating bands. Sometimes they sound like a dog howling. There's nothing to be afraid of."

"Sure," said Captain Nelson, "that's what it was, a rotating band."

But our harmless rotating band, we found a few minutes later, was a jagged, red-hot, foot-square fragment of steel from a 240-mm. German shell which had landed a hundred yards away from us. It was wonderful to be a wise guy.

High Staff Officers Given Secret Protection

In the early days of the invasion a whole bevy of high-ranking Allied officers came to visit us—Generals Marshall, Eisenhower and Arnold, Admirals King and Ramsey—there was so much brass you just bumped two-star generals without even begging pardon.

Being generals, they know they must appear to be brave in order to set an example. Consequently, a high-ranking general never ducks or bats an eye when a shell hits near.

The military police charged with conducting this glittering array of generals around our beachhead tried to get them to ride in armored cars. But, being generals, they said no, certainly not, no armored cars for us, we'll just go in open command cars like anybody else. And that's the way they did go.

MR. WINKLE GOES TO WAR

By THEODORE PRATT

W.N.U. RELEASE

THE STORY THUS FAR: Forty-four-year-old Wilbert Winkle, who operates a repair shop in the alley back of his home, is notified by his draft board that he is in I-A. He breaks the bad news to his domineering wife, Amy, who becomes suddenly tender. Mr. Winkle is sent to Camp Squeeb, where, after graduating from Motor Mechanics school, he leaves for home on a furlough. Amy hardly knows him, and his dog barks at him furiously. Mr. Winkle and his friend, Mr. Tinker, soon find themselves on the high seas in a huge convoy. They land on the island of Talizo and report at one of the repair shops. Some of their friends are also on the island. There is a bad mist, that might screen Japs.

CHAPTER XII

Mr. Winkle pulled his steel helmet more securely on his head and pressed on the accelerator of the car.

The jeep shot off the road and along the sand trail leading to the beach. The command car stood where it had been left, in a partially cleared space enclosed by low palms. Mr. Winkle stopped alongside it.

As they got out, he glanced at the tent, set at one side among the trees. Ordinarily, the off-duty members of the machine-gun crew would be loitering or sleeping there. It was empty.

Up on the low ridge, fifty feet away, a helmeted head appeared above the sand. It was the Alpha.

He ran to the ridge. He arrived breathing hard, not from exertion, but from excitement. He gasped at what he saw.

One of the shells from the plane's cannon had exploded in the fox hole. The bodies of the men lay about, some of them half buried. Freddie was sprawled over the gun, as if protecting it. Sergeant Czeideskrowski was on his back, his open eyes staring straight up at the burning sun and not blinking. In a tangled pile, Mr. Winkle caught sight of the side of Jack's still face.

A single thought ran through him repetitiously. How will I ever tell the Pettigrews? He asked himself. How will I ever tell the Pettigrews?

The sound of surging water made him turn his head.

Out of the mist had come a flat-nosed Japanese assault boat.

Behind it, but somewhat off to either side, were two more.

Mr. Winkle sank to his knees, both to get out of sight and because his legs wouldn't hold him up any more.

After a moment, he knew that he must do something. He realized that the whole position on Talizo might be lost if the men in those assault boats ever landed and infiltrated through the jungle.

He found himself scrabbling about in the sand of the fox hole for the field phone. It wasn't in sight.

He saw the Signal Corps wire leading up out of the hole. He grabbed it, and started pulling on it.

A broken piece of the shattered phone came into his hands.

He dropped it from nerveless fingers.

Helplessly, Mr. Winkle watched the leading assault boat come on. Now it was less than a hundred yards from the beach.

He looked back at the jeep. Unless the bullet holes through its windshield meant more than they appeared to, the car would still run. He could get back in it to give the alarm at the next post.

But by that time, the Japs would have effected their landing.

Mr. Winkle wished that it was not he who had been placed in this position. He wanted, fervently, for it to be another man, a fighter, a killer, a younger, a different, a better man than he. It flashed through his mind that it had been a mistake to draft and make a soldier out of a mouse.

He felt guilty at not having resigned from the Army. A different man here now, in his place, would have known what to do.

Then Mr. Winkle knew what to do.

It occurred to him that he hadn't thought of himself, of his own safety, when considering getting away in the jeep. He had thought only to give the warning of what was happening.

Also, he saw Mr. Tinker lying sprawled out there on the ground. He remembered how he had ducked under the command car while Mr. Tinker fired his rifle. The recollection made him feel craven, especially when now Mr. Tinker would never get his Jap.

He decided that he must get him for Mr. Tinker.

There were the Alphabet, Freddie, Jack, and the other men to think about, too. It infuriated him that Sergeant Czeideskrowski lay dead. It made him see red to think that after Freddie had been made into a decent person, he had been killed.

His brain seared with a hot flame at the thought of Jack.

It seemed to be the most natural thing in the world to pull Freddie's body from the gun. Swiftly, he examined it. The gun was intact. It needed only a new belt of ammunition.

He clawed about in the sand and among the bodies for an ammunition box. He stepped on soft flesh and didn't mind it.

Digging furiously, he found what he wanted. He stripped the nearly spent belt from the gun, and inserted a fresh one.

As he worked he knew how good and wise it was that he had been trained to operate a machine gun. He wished that he was better at it. But a rising surge of confidence made him sure he would be good enough.

The first boat was nearly at the shore. Mr. Winkle sighted the gun for the spot he figured the men would be when they stepped out. That was what he had been taught.

He still had a moment. He employed it by coolly taking off his glasses and wiping them dry with his handkerchief. He wiped his face and neck, both of which streamed with sweat.

He glanced about.

This was where he would die.

He had often wondered in what circumstances and in what locality it would occur. Now he knew. It wasn't such a bad place. He saw it almost for the first time, the waving palm trees, the flowering hibiscus.

He liked it.

It was romantic.

Amy, he thought, would be glad to know it was such an attractive place.

It occurred to him that for the first time in his life he wasn't afraid to die. He even exulted in it. He heard his voice. He was laughing. He felt released from hard, painful bonds. He knew that, at last, Wilbert George Winkle, in the flesh and not in a newspaper headline, was proud to fight.

He turned back to the gun. It was nearly time.

The assault boat beached in shallow water. Men started jumping out and splashing through the water. He could see their faces, brown, slant-eyed, expressionless. Mr. Winkle let them all get out. Then, carefully sighting, he squeezed the trigger.

There was a snap and a jerk.

The gun jammed without firing.

Frantically, he worked at the gun. One finger caught in the mechanism. He tore it away. Blood spurted, but he paid no attention. He kept picking at the jammed cartridge. Finally he got it out, and a new one in the firing chamber, the gun prepared properly.

Five men had run ahead, off to one side. Mr. Winkle swung his gun around, concentrating on them first. This time the gun fired. He was astonished to see the men fall. He wasn't sure if one of them got away.

He swung the gun back, spitting vengeance at the larger group. As the bullets spat out from under his hands, a still new and greater world opened before him.

This was what he had lived for. Life had a meaning and a purpose of which he had never dreamed.

Dear Mr. King: I have been planning on writing you for some time, so I received your Lorraine paper today which reminded me that I should write you.

The paper today was dated May 11th but that doesn't make any difference over here, it is still news to us. For a while three of us read your paper but now Charles Reeder has gone home and Gordon Richards is in the hospital so I just read them from cover to cover and discard them. The first thing I look for is Mrs. Baird's letter to the boys. I can say she is doing a good job keeping us posted on the whereabouts of all the boys. Keep it up Good Luck.

COASTGUARDMEN TELL OF U-BOAT PACK RAID IN THE NORTH ATLANTIC

(The following story was given to us by C. W. McAnally whose son, Dick McAnally, was on the Joyce and assisted in the rescue work as described.)

Orange — (UP)—Two coast-guardmen, plunged into the icy north Atlantic last March when an enemy U-Boat pack sank their destroyer escort vessel, told last night how a pitiful handful of survivors on the rafts slapped each other and yelled to keep alive.

The night was March 10. The USS Leopold, fated to become the first craft of her class to go down in this war, was riding a flank position in the convoy played tag with the enemy undersea pack.

Soundman 3-C W. F. Smith of Fort Worth, Tex., and Gunners Mate Carl M. Graves, of Memphis, Tenn., told workmen at the consolidated steel shipyard, where the Leopold was built and launched, that the enemy sub laid a torpedo into their craft at 8:10 pm—even while the Leopold was bearing down, with guns blazing, on another half-submerged Nazi U-Boat.

"It was a dull thud. Then the Leopold cracked right across the middle of the deck," Graves remembered. "When the order came to abandon ship. I aided in releasing a raft on the starboard side and jumped into the water. The water temperature was 36 degrees and the wind felt even colder."

Smith said the ship was abandoned in good order, "without the yelling and hollering" he had always imagined. "The men were too busy helping each other for that," he explained.

Once on the rafts, the major problem was keeping awake. To go to sleep meant to freeze to death.

"We hollered and made all the noise we could to stay awake. We also slapped each other's faces and swung our arms," Smith said. "But some were just sitting, feeling sleepier and sleepier as they froze to death."

"We put the dead afloat as they died and pulled others that were still alive out of the water."

Three times the USS Joyce another escort sent to battle from the Orange Yard, churned past the life rafts carrying Smith and Graves.

Once the skipper of the Joyce made himself heard above the roar of sea and battle.

"We're dodging torpedoes. God bless you. We'll be back," he belated.

At 4 am on March 11, the Joyce pulled the survivors from their rafts after eight hours exposure.

There had been 18 men on Graves' raft, but now there were only six. Only three were still alive on Smith's raft. All in all, Only 28 of the Leopold's complement—more than 100—survived.

MOOS OF THE MOMENT

BY UNCLE BOB

of the Kraft Dairy Farm Service

This is National Farm Safety Week, and I'm reminded that a fellow who leaves a chunk of his right hand in a sickle bar or a corn husker is bound to have trouble keeping up with his rapid-milking program, among other things.

Of course there is no single season of the year when a farmer should give more thought to being careful and avoiding accidents—that's an every day job, like milking. National Farm Safety Week, sponsored by the National Safety Council, just seeks to focus attention on the need for care in your daily work.

Most accidents are avoidable. If you'd like to have a check list of good, sensible safety rules, you'll find 23 items tabulated in the latest issue of the Producers' Edition of the Kraftman.

Speaking of the Kraftman, among the interesting items in the latest issue is a step-by-step plan for building a practical low-cost milk house. You'll want a copy and I'll be glad to mail one. Drop a note to Uncle Bob at 500 Pestigo Court, Chicago. Or ask your Kraft fieldman for a copy.

How much and what to feed dry cows probably is something you are studying at this time. The extension service at the University of Missouri says the amount of milk a cow will produce in her lactation period depends greatly on her condition at freshening time.

Feeding during the time a cow is dry is just as important as is proper feeding while the cow is producing milk. She should have good pasture or be fed hay and silage at approximately the same rate as a cow being milked, Missouri Circular 405 says.

Nebraska covers the same subject in Circular 627, pointing out that any additional fat that a cow adds to her body while dry is a reserve upon which she will draw after freshening. Nebraska says just before calving a cow should weigh 100 to 200 pounds more than during lactation.

I think you'll find both of these bulletins interesting. Write the extension services at the University of Missouri, Columbia, Mo., and the University of Nebraska, Lincoln, Nebraska.

A lady correspondent of ours says the reason they haven't hung any medals on the dairy farmer is because no dairy farmer has time to put on his Sunday best, these days. Medals are supposed to be pinned to dress uniforms, she says.

I don't know anything more discouraging than to see a lot of work go up in smoke. Maybe you've watched the results of spontaneous combustion in your haymow, with loss of hay and barn. Purdue has a suggestion of how to forestall such loss, simply by taking the hay's temperature.

Use a half inch pipe, with a pointed plug in one end. Drill a series of 3/4 inch holes in the side of the pipe, above the plug. Push the pipe into the hay and lower a thermometer into the pipe, leaving it in long enough to record actual temperature.

Purdue says at 150 degrees, the hay is entering the danger zone. At 160 degrees, inspect every four hours. At 175, stop all ventilation and call fire department for standby service. At 185, remove hot hay and have a fire department pumper ready to quench flames which probably will develop when air comes in contact with the hay.

Hay is almost sure to ignite at 210 degrees. I suggest you write the Extension Service at Lafayette, Indiana, for Leaflet 229 which gives a complete discussion of spontaneous combustion.

Probably we have not handed enough bouquets to the women for their part in the farmer's war job. We believe, like the Maine farmer, in giving credit where due. Someone told him that Andrew Carnegie came to America with 25c in his pocket but died leaving an estate of $250,000,000. "Must have married a mighty saving woman," the Downeaster commented.

You may be working on preparation of seedbeds now for small grains and for pastures. Wisconsin circular 338 has some helpful ideas on this subject.

This bulletin says land which has been used for peas, soybeans, or cultivated crops need not be plowed but worked with a disc, spring tooth or field cultivator. A reasonably smooth seedbed, loosened to a depth of two or three inches, should be made for planting small grains.

Sods or areas badly infested with quackgrass need plowing now and should be worked immediately. The bulletin can be obtained from the University of Wisconsin Extension Service, Madison, Wisconsin.

*NOTE: There usually is a 5c charge for pamphlets mailed to non-residents of a state; but possibly your own state has a free pamphlet on the same subject. Ask your county agent.

IT CONSISTS of two simple words.

Yet every soldier who's worth his salt covets it.

This title is simply:

"Good Soldier."

It isn't just happenstance that so many women in the WAC have earned this title—the proudest in the Army.

For wherever Wacs are working, both here and overseas, there you find a job well done. And done with a spirit so gallant and fine that high Army officers everywhere say of the WAC...

"They're soldiers. Good soldiers!"

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT

About 153 million tons of agricultural products were moved from farm to market by motor vehicles in 1942, and even a greater amount is expected to be transported by highway this year. Shipments of this volume call for the use of a tremendous number of tires.

Only a small amount of rubber may reach us from the Amazon Valley, but herculean efforts are being made to get it out of the jungles, as is indicated by the report that Brazilian agencies have moved 20,000 workers into the rubber-producing country.
