Gorbachev seeking space weapons ban

PARIS (AP) — Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev announced today he had proposed to the United States that both nations cut their strategic nuclear missiles by half and agree to "a complete ban on space weapons of attack."

Gorbachev unveiled a three-point plan to stop the arms race in a speech to French parliamentarians on the second day of his official visit to France. Soviet opposition to the U.S. Star Wars program has been his major theme.

Gorbachev said the first point, the proposal to the United States given to President Reagan last week and since to the U.S. arms negotiating team in Geneva, covered "missiles capable of reaching the territory of the other nation."

■ Visits with French officials begin — Page 2A

His second proposal covered medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe, on which he urged "the fastest possible agreement on mutual reduction."

He said a separate agreement on such tactical missiles should not be directly linked with strategic (long range) and space weapons.

As his third point, Gorbachev indicated the Soviets had unilaterally withdrawn SS-20 missiles from readiness in Europe and would shortly dismantle their launching sites.

He said the Soviet Union has 243 operational SS-20 medium-range nuclear missiles in the European zone.

He said that was the same level as in June 1984, when the Soviets started installing extra missiles to respond to the U.S. deployment of cruise and Pershing 2 missiles.

Gorbachev said the extra missiles were currently withdrawn from operational service and that their ground bases would be withdrawn in the two coming months.

Saudis admit oil discounts

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Saudi Arabia's oil minister today confirmed that his country had begun offering price discounts on its crude oil, in violation of OPEC rules.

Asked by a reporter whether he had signed contracts with buyers for such deals, Ahmad Zaki Yamani replied, "Yes."

The minister said nothing more as he was whisked by his bodyguards into a conference room at OPEC headquarters where the oil producers' cartel opened a special conference to discuss requests by several member countries for a bigger share of sales.

Yamani said earlier today he saw no chance that the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries could grant the requests from Iraq, Ecuador, Qatar and Gabon. He also said OPEC could not afford to increase its overall production ceiling, which now stands at 16 million barrels a day.

Industry sources had said Saudi Arabia was going ahead in mid-September with its first price discounts, prohibited under the cartel's regulations. But there had been no public comment from the Saudis.

Yamani's confirmation today came before U.S. businesses opened, and it was not immediately clear what effect, if any, the Saudi decision would have on gasoline prices at the pump.

The Saudi discounts are believed to be pegged to the so-called netback value of a barrel of crude, or the price a refiner can get for the products derived from the oil.

Soviets boost security in Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The Soviet Union increased security at its Beirut embassy today to guard against a threatened suicide bomb attack, and an embassy official said he expected "sad news" about three surviving Soviets kidnapped by Moslem extremists.

The body of one kidnapped Soviet diplomat was found by police on Wednesday. Callers claiming to be his abductors threatened to kill three other Soviet hostages and bomb the embassy.

Yuri Souslikov, charge d'affaires of the Soviet Embassy, told reporters he was expecting "sad news any minute" about the three other Soviet hostages. He did not elaborate.

State-run Beirut Radio said Souslikov met for an hour today with President Amin Gemayel, a Christian, and senior army and police commanders at Gemayel's palace in suburban Baabda.

The meeting was devoted to studying ways of saving the Soviet captives, the radio said, giving no further details.

Soviet officials have appealed to Syrian and Lebanese leaders to help free the Soviets abducted Monday by kidnappers demanding that Moscow pressure Syria to stop a battle between pro-Syrian and pro-Palestinian militias in Tripoli.

Heavily armed militiamen of the Lebanese Communist Party and the Progressive Socialist Party of Druse warlord Walid Jumblatt patroled all approaches to the Soviet Embassy compound in west Beirut.

The main gate to the walled complex was shut and police said militiamen also had taken up a round-the-clock watch inside the compound.

UTPB urged to recruit Mexican-Americans or close

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The University of Texas of the Permian Basin should boost enrollment by recruiting Hispanic West Texas students or shut its doors, the chairman of a prominent Mexican-American group says.

In a letter to the head of a new blue ribbon committee studying higher education in the state, Ruben Bonilla Jr., chairman of the Mexican American Democrats of Texas, said the state cannot afford to spread too thin its dwindling resources. Bonilla recommended that Austin lawyer Larry Temple and his Select Committee on Higher Education strongly consider closing or merging several colleges, including UTPB.

Tony Bonilla, Ruben's older brother and a former state legislator, said his brother has appointed him to co-chair a higher education task force for the Mexican American Democrats and work with Temple's panel.

"The committee should consider closing the colleges with extremely low enrollment," the elder Bonilla said in a telephone interview Wednesday afternoon. "Conceivably, the University of Texas of the Permian Basin could justify its existence if they initiated an aggressive recruiting plan designed to attract Hispanic youngsters in the West Texas area."

This fall, UTPB's total head count dropped 4.9 percent to 1,905. Hispanic enrollment dropped from 132 to 89, a 32.6-percent decline. Hispanics currently account for 4.7 percent of the UTPB student body, down from 1984's 6.6 percent.

Vicki Gomez, UTPB associate director of admissions and a personal friend of the Bonillas, said she was "just aghast" at their recommendation. "They're talking about large numbers of Hispanics in high school," Ms. Gomez said.

"We are an upper-level institution. We cannot recruit in the high schools. We have to wait two years."

El Paso Community College, Ms. Gomez said, is the only source of a substantial number of possible Hispanic West Texans for UTPB. Ms. Gomez said she will spend a week there in November and the school plans to offer five to 10 scholarships to El Paso Community College students.

In his letter to Temple, Ruben Bonilla said he would ask the executive committee of the Mexican American Democrats to support his recommendations at its Oct. 12 meeting in Corpus Christi. Ms. Gomez, who is trying to reorganize a MAD chapter in Odessa, said, "I just might be there."

The Bonillas also recommended merging similar state colleges within the same city, such as North Texas State University and Texas Woman's University in Denton. "There is little need for two institutions ... within a few blocks of each other, providing the same courses and appealing to the same students," Tony Bonilla said.

Odessa legislator gears up petition drive to repeal state seat belt law

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Republican State Rep. Kelly Godwin this morning announced he is initiating a petition drive throughout the state to seek support for legislation that would repeal the mandatory seat belt law. This law went into effect Sept. 1, although fines can't be imposed until after Dec. 1.

"I believe the people of Texas should be allowed to make their own decisions about personal safety," he said, adding he believes the seat belt law is "an infringement on personal freedom."

During a news conference at the Greater Odessa Area Chamber of Commerce, Godwin said he has been contacted by many of his constituents who believe seat belts are good but oppose their use being mandated by state law.

The District 75 representative said he believes the seat belt law, as approved by the legislature, does not meet U.S. Department of Transportation requirements which states the use of seat belts by those involved in accidents will be a factor in mitigating liability in civil court. According to Godwin, the wording of the Texas seat belt law specifically forbids consideration of the use or nonuse of seat belts by accident victims as a mitigating factor in determining liability.

Godwin also said he believes the seat belt law, as approved by a majority of legislators, is not equally applied, since it only requires the driver and front seat passengers in a vehicle to wear seat belts. The law also doesn't require persons riding in the rear of an open pickup truck to wear seat belts.

And, Godwin said, because the law is not equally applied "it is very questionable whether or not this law is constitutional. The state government has gone too far in imposing this law on the the people of Texas," he said. "I would personally encourage everyone to wear their safety belts, but I don't think we need a state law to mandate it."

The seat beat law was introduced in the 69th Legislature by Sen. Ted Lyon of Mesquite. The law requires the wearing of safety belts by all front seat passengers in passenger cars and trucks with a carrying capacity of 1,500 pounds.

Godwin said he is "introducing the petition to establish broad support for my efforts to introduce legislation to repeal the mandatory seat belt law" and plans to make copies available to all members of the Legislature." He is planning to introduce his legislation during the next session which will meet in 1987.

Abuse of 'laughing gas' doesn't tickle nitrous oxide sellers, users

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

A Midland Health Department official and the owner of a local gourmet items shop have raised concerns about the abuse of a controlled substance — nitrous oxide.

Commonly referred to as "laughing gas," the product is used widely by diverse interests ranging from dentists and race car drivers to welders and manufacturers of propellant canisters for seltzer bottles.

It's the canisters that concerns the gourmet shop owner.

"We started selling an unusually large number of them," said the man who asked that he and his shop not be identified. "It seemed to be older teens and people in their early 20's who were buying them.

"When this all started, we didn't know what was going on," he said.

One killed, two injured in fall of bridge being built in Denver

DENVER (AP) — A section of a bridge under construction over a highway in Denver collapsed today, killing one construction worker, injuring four others, and forcing the closing of the major traffic artery, authorities said.

The accident occurred about 2:10 a.m. when one of the pre-stressed concrete and steel sections for the new bridge fell onto Interstate 25, said Sgt. George Ray.

One support column was sheared off by the huge steel and concrete slab that was being set in place. One end of the fallen section was sinking into the pavement. The accident also damaged part of the understructure.

Details on the extent of damage were sketchy, police said.

The highway has been closed for a few nights because of the construction, part of the Lawrence-Colfax-Larimer Exchange, police said.

All traffic in that area of I-25 was halted, and authorities said it appeared the highway would stay closed through rush hour.

Gorbachev in round of talks with French leaders

By JEFFREY ULBRICH

PARIS (AP) — Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev, in a warning to the Reagan administration, predicted "rough times" in international relations if the United States persists in its plans to develop space-based weapons.

On his first visit to the West since becoming Soviet Communist Party chief in March, Gorbachev met for more than two hours Wednesday with French President Francois Mitterrand. His schedule today calls for meetings with Mitterrand and Premier Laurent Fabius, and a ceremony at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

Soviet spokesman Leonid Zamyatin also said the Soviets would release today details of new disarmament proposals revealed to President Reagan last week and presented at arms control talks in Geneva on Monday and Tuesday.

The 54-year-old Gorbachev's four-day visit to Paris precedes by seven weeks his summit meeting with Reagan in Geneva, and Western observers expect to hear in Paris many of the themes Gorbachev will stress in the Swiss city Nov. 19-20.

Neither the Soviet Union or the United States has reported any progress in the Geneva arms talks since they began in March. But speaking at an official dinner at the French presidential palace on Wednesday, Gorbachev said their immediate goal must be agreement on a reasonable level of weaponry.

"But in the last year or two, a qualitatively new aspect has made its appearance," the Soviet leader said. "It consists of the fact that an attempt is being undertaken to transfer military rivalry into extra-atmospheric space, as if we lacked it on the Earth."

"In the event that the instigators of this enterprise stubbornly continue down the perilous path they have laid, the world must indeed face up to rough times," Gorbachev said, speaking in Russian. A French translation was provided.

Gorbachev noted that both the Soviet Union and France, a U.S. ally and a member of the NATO alliance, had spoken out for peaceful cooperation in space and against "military confrontation."

The French, who have traced their own path in East-West relations, flatly rejected Reagan's invitation to participate in research for space-based missile defenses, officially known as the Strategic Defense Initiative.

The Soviet Union has demanded that the United States abandon the "Star Wars" project, calling it a major roadblock to an arms agreement. The Kremlin also contends the program would violate existing treaty obligations.

Referring to those obligations in his dinner remarks, Mitterrand said, "It would be wise that the treaties on anti-ballistic missiles, or ABM, be respected and that at Geneva the two principal powers find the road to a reasonable compromise for all."

In his toast at the dinner, Gorbachev said the Soviet Union has demonstrated in superpower negotiations that it "is ready for reasonable compromises and is awaiting an adequate reaction."

Quoting French writer Antoine de Saint-Exupery, author of the children's classic "The Little Prince," Gorbachev said: "We are all passengers of a boat which is the Earth.'

The Soviet leader continued: "In the nuclear and spatial century, an infinitely larger responsibility than in the past is incumbent on the navigators of this boat."

Vietnam veterans Bill Callahan, left, of Inverness, Fla., and Mike Standerfer of Fort Myers, Fla., head into San Antonio Wednesday. Their walk to the Alamo is meant to remind Americans of the plight of Vietnam-era POWs and MIAs.

Vietnam veteran walk to Alamo for MIAs

By JIM MICHAELS
Hearst News Service

SAN ANTONIO — Two Vietnam veterans ended a 1,400-mile, two-month walk by touching the wall of the Alamo and vowing never to forget the 2,400 servicemen from Vietnam still listed as missing in action.

"We have 2,400 Americans unaccounted for," Bill Callahan said. "At this time we're not going to forget them. We want to know where they are."

Clasping hands, Callahan, 40, and Mike Standerfer, 39, arrived at the Alamo Wednesday morning, ending an odyssey that began Aug. 3 in Crystal River, Fla., near Tampa.

The two were surrounded and cheered by dozens of area veterans. Bearded members of the San Antonio Vietnam Vets Motorcycle Club, wearing leather jackets, stood next to clusters of men who fought in World War II.

"We got veterans here from Vietnam, World War II and Korea," said Joe Foulkes, a Silver Star Medal recipient who spent a year in a German POW camp after his P-47 Thunderbolt attack plane was shot down over Germany.

Callahan, a former Green Beret medic, said the purpose of the walk was to call attention to the Americans still listed as missing, some of whom they say still are alive and held captive in Vietnam.

Pentagon spokesman Maj. Keith Schneider said the Pentagon lists the number of MIAs from Vietnam at 2,464.

"We're going on the assumption that some of them are still alive," Schneider said. However, he added: "Thus far we have not been able to prove that."

Callahan and Standerfer, clad in fatigues and carrying military issue rucksacks, said they chose the Alamo to symbolize that Vietnam soldiers were fighting a losing cause but continued to fight out of a sense of duty.

"The reason we picked the Alamo is because they (soldiers defending the Alamo) knew they weren't going to win, but they stayed and fought," Callahan said. "We believe in the Alamo."

Callahan walked the distance in leg braces because of wounds suffered in Vietnam, and Standerfer suffers from Hodgkin's disease.

They said they will check into the Audie L. Murphy Memorial Veterans Hospital for a checkup. "We're both worn out," Callahan said.

OPEC

That would mean the Saudis could be selling some of their oil for $26 a barrel or less, compared with the official price of $28 for Arabian light crude.

Yamani's comment about not allowing any increases in production quotas made it highly unlikely that today's meeting would reach any meaningful agreement. OPEC has been trying for the past 2½ years to control overall production and the output of each member country in order to protect its oil prices.

The strategy has become more and more unwieldly as economic pressures have increased in the 13 member nations and demand for their oil has dropped.

At preparatory meetings Wednesday, Iran and Iraq clashed over Iraq's plans to ask for a bigger share of OPEC's total production. Iran and Iraq have been at war for five years.

Iraq's oil minister, Qassim Taki, said he would demand that his country be given a two-thirds increase in its quota. However, Oil Minister Mohammed Gharazi of Iran insisted he would never allow it.

Gharazi accused Iraq of deliberately splitting the cartel on an issue that has become increasingly sensitive. Asked whether Iraq should be allowed to sell more oil, Gharazi said "not for OPEC, not for Iraq."

Officials said they had no plans of cutting prices at the meeting.

Even Saudi Arabia, the traditional paymaster in OPEC and its biggest exporter, has said economic stress has forced it to abandon OPEC pricing agreements.

The chief delegate from Ecuador, Fernando Santos, said he would request that his country's production quota be raised by more than half, to 280,000 barrels daily. He also said Saudi Arabia, as the group's richest member, should restrain its production in order to make room for higher sales by the others.

Mana Saeed Oteiba, the oil minister of the United Arab Emirates, said OPEC production in September was about 14.5 million barrels daily. That is below the group's self-imposed ceiling of 16 million barrels a day, reflecting weak demand for OPEC oil.

Oteiba said the oil market had strengthened in recent weeks, in part because Iranian exports had been curtailed by a series of Iraqi bombing raids on Iran's main oil terminal at Kharg Island.

Oteiba also said British and Soviet oil production had dipped recently.

"We feel that we should keep a close eye on the market and not be misled by this improvement, which is of a temporary nature, a short nature," Oteiba said.

ABUSE

"Then my manufacturing representative came in and I told him what was happening and he just sort of laughed and said, 'Don't you know what those kids are doing? They're filling balloons with that stuff and inhaling it. They're doing it in Dallas and all the larger cities,'" he said.

The shop owner quickly clamped down on sales of the product, he added.

"Right now we're completely out of the canisters, but you better believe that I'm going to watch who I sell it to," he said. "I'm only going to sell it to people I know."

The man added that he suspected that "some of the older kids were pushing" the product.

A Midland health inspector, Jim Roberts, said he learned of the problem when making his routine inspections at the shop.

"This is not a health department matter," said Roberts. "Our only concern is providing knowledge to parents. We feel that if the kids are using nitrous oxide, then the parents need to be aware of it.

"There's so many different things out there that parents are not even aware of," he said. "We feel they have a right to know what's going on."

Abuse of nitrous oxide can have some long-lasting and dangerous effects and may even cause death, according to Dr. Andrew K. Kauffman, a Midland dentist, who uses the product in his practice.

"People who abuse it tend to have nervous problems or a nervous condition and may experience lapse of memory," said Kauffman. "It's a pretty psychologically-addicting drug and it could kill you if you were exposed to it for a long time."

Kaufmann stated that nitrous oxide literally "suffocates you."

"It must be mixed with oxygen — usually 50/50 or 60/40 — or it will technically suffocate you," he said. "Long-term breathing of the gas could also cause problems for pregnant women."

According to Kauffman, the product used to be a common ingredient in whipping cream canisters, but is no longer used in them.

"It's a controlled substance," he said. "It is widely used by welders, race car drivers, seltzer canisters and other non-medicine applications, but it is controlled," he said. "I have to lock it up now. Used to be you could leave the tanks out, but we have to keep it under lock and key now."

Callers claiming to represent the Islamic Liberation Organization, apparently a group of Sunni Moslems that supports the pro-Palestinian Tawheed Islami in Tripoli, told Western news agencies and Beirut newspapers Wednesday that the Soviets must abandon their embassy by 9 a.m. EDT Friday.

"Otherwise, we shall mount suicide bombing attacks to level the whole compound upon your heads," said the anonymous callers.

It was impossible to verify the authenticity of the calls.

In Tripoli, the fighting between Tawheed Islami and the pro-Syrian militias continued today after a brief cease-fire Wednesday, dampening hopes the Soviets would be released soon.

Soviet cultural attache Arkady Katkov, 32, was found dead Wednesday after a caller claiming to represent the Islamic Liberation Organization said the body of a Soviet had been left in a west Beirut suburb.

The caller said Islamic Liberation would kill all four Soviets unless the assault on Tawheed Islami ended. Syria is Moscow's chief Middle East ally.

Anonymous telephone callers have contacted Beirut radio stations and Western news agencies with a variety of reports about the Soviets. Callers claimed Wednesday that another Soviet had been killed, but police said they had not found the bodies of any other foreigners.

After the killing, many of the 150 Soviet citizens in Beirut moved into the heavily guarded embassy compound, said sources close to the embassy.

Soviet spokesman Leonid Zamyatin, in Paris with Communist Party leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev, said the Soviet Union had contacted Syrian leaders and "various Lebanese groups" in search of the captives' freedom.

The abduction of the Soviets follow the kidnapping of 35 foreigners in Lebanon since January 1984. It was the first time Soviets were kidnapped.

"It's been the Americans and the French who have been hit until now. Now it seems to be our turn. But we're not panicking," the Soviet source said.

Tawheed Islami has been battling pro-Syrian militias, particularly the Arabian Knights, for about two years. The current round of fighting, which has claimed at least 500 lives, came about after the pro-Syrian forces accused Tawheed of allowing Yasser Arafat to ship arms to his Palestine Liberation Organization through Tripoli's port.

Syria opposes any efforts by Arafat to rebuild the PLO's Lebanon power base, smashed in Israel's 1982 invasion.

The three other kidnapped Soviets are commercial attache Valery Mirikov, press attache Oleg Spirin and Nikolai Sversky, an embassy doctor. Police earlier had identified Mirikov as Valery Kornev.

"The only difference between the two institutions is that one has a football team."

Bonilla said the Hispanic group is looking for ways to "make the dollar stretch without sacrificing quality." Minorities, he said, make up the majority in the seven largest school districts in Texas.

"These youngsters are going to be the college students of tomorrow," he said. "We don't want watered-down institutions of higher education just because they're going to be minority institutions."

As a former lawmaker and member of the Texas College and University System Coordinating Board, Tony Bonilla said he understands the political opposition that school-closing plans would generate. He added that he hopes his former colleagues can overcome that political heat.

"The economic climate coupled with the technological age we live in dictates that these tough choices be made and that the Legislature act on it," Bonilla said. "We cannot ignore the reality of the loss of revenues or the need for quality education at our institutions of higher education."

Sugar found in fuel system of crashed plane

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal investigators have discovered sugar in the fuel system of a plane that crashed in Georgia during the weekend, raising the possibility that sabotage was involved in the death of the pilot and 16 members of a parachute club.

The National Transportation Safety Board, although emphasizing that the source of the sugar is not known, asked the FBI for assistance Wednesday to determine how the sugar got into the fuel system.

The single-engine Cessna 208 Caravan crashed on a private, rural airstrip Sunday near Jenkinsburg, Ga., killing all 16 parachutists and the pilot aboard. In addition to contaminated fuel, investigators believe the aircraft, which crashed shortly after takeoff, may have been overloaded.

The NTSB disclosed earlier that the Federal Aviation Administration had grounded the private aircraft two days before the crash after an FAA inspector at the Fulton County Airport in Atlanta had observed fuel contamination.

Investigators emphasized that the sugar may have been in the plane's fuel system for some time and finally worked its way into the engine. Maintenance workers who examined the plane last Thursday noticed the fuel was discolored, indicating something amiss.

Although an FAA inspector grounded the plane the next day, its owner flew the aircraft about 20 miles from the Fulton County Airport to DeKalb-Peachtree Airport and later to the location of the parachute center in Jenkinsburg about 50 miles south of Atlanta, according to investigators.

Meanwhile, in Atlanta, William Whitley, supervisor of the FBI's narcotics division in Atlanta, said the agency was "interested in one guy" on the plane, but he would not identify the person.

However, The Atlanta Constitution quoted unidentified sources in today's editions as saying the FBI was investigating a "possible link" between David Lee Williams, 35, of Atlanta, the plane's owner who was killed in the crash, and Andrew Thornton, who parachuted to his death in Knoxville, Tenn., Sept. 11.

Thornton, 40, of Paris, Ky., was found with 75 pounds of cocaine in a duffel bag strapped to his waist.

Meanwhile, investigators also were pursuing the possibility that the aircraft was overweight with the load of fully equipped parachutists.

The plane's weight limit for the Sunday flight was 3,115 pounds, investigtors have said. The West Wind Sport Parachute Center estimated that each parachutist carrying equipment would weigh about 200 pounds, which along with the pilot would bring the load to about 3,200 pounds.

Man confesses to killing sister he may have made pregnant

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Eleven years after a 14-year-old girl's shooting death was labeled a suicide, her guilt-wracked brother confessed that he fired the fatal shot because she may have been pregnant with his child.

"I killed her with a pistol in the mouth," Kalib Valentine, 26, of suburban Bellflower said Wednesday at a news conference in his attorney's office. "I was crazy-...crazy. There's no other word for it."

Valentine, who changed his name from Michael Wilson, lived with his sister, Karen Rochelle Wilson, and their parents in Pendleton, Ore., at the time of her death in November 1974.

He and his attorney, Robert Rentzer, said Valentine flew Wednesday to Oregon and were to appear today at the Umatilla County Courthouse, said Rentzer's wife and law partner, Gail Rentzer.

Valentine has negotiated a plea bargain that allows for a guilty plea to manslaughter, Rentzer said.

Valentine's sentence will be determined by a judge, said Umatilla County District Attorney David Gallaher, who confirmed the plea bargain.

The autopsy did not indicate the girl was pregnant, Gallaher said. "If he had not come forward with this confession, no one would have known about it."

A computer specialist who served four years with the Marines, Valentine said that during the past decade he had been "living a life of torment," including a fight against alcoholism, and was finally driven to confess.

"When you screw up, you take your lumps," he said. "For once in my life I want to do something right, and this is right."

Valentine said he and his sister had had a one-year incestuous relationship when she told him she thought she was pregnant. Attempting to make her death look like suicide, he put a handgun in her mouth and pulled the trigger.

"I never want to see that expression (of fear) again," he said.

Mrs. Rentzer said Valentine talked to his father, Lavon Wilson, by telephone before making his public statement to prevent the older man from hearing the truth in a news report.

The father embraced Valentine when he arrived Wednesday night at the airport in Pendleton. The two left the airport together.

Lavon Wilson, until recently, was director of the Eastern Oregon Training Center, a state facility for the mentally handicapped. His wife died two years ago of cancer, said Mrs. Rentzer. They had only the two children.

Mrs. Rentzer said she talked to Valentine when he called in a month ago on a hotline that offers free legal advice.

"He was very emotional," she recalled. "He told me that he had killed his sister 10 years before, and he was crying and very upset."

He agreed to meet with her husband, a criminal law specialist.

"We sat and talked to him for a long time," and checked out his story with Pendleton officials, she said.

"He seems to have gone through living hell with this," Mrs. Rentzman said.

He turned to violence when his sister told him she might be pregnant because he didn't know where to seek help, she said.

Friends remember Hudson's humanity, sense of humor, 'that wonderful smile'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rock Hudson's last gift is a Hollywood fight against AIDS, but friends and colleagues remembered the long-time leading man for his ability as an actor, his humanity, sense of humor and "that wonderful smile."

"As fine an actor as Rock Hudson was and as much as he shared his craft with us, I feel his greatest gift to the world was in his acknowledgement of his disease and in his willingness to educate people and raise their consciousness," said Linda Evans, who appeared with Hudson this year in the prime-time soap opera "Dynasty."

Hudson, 59, died in his sleep Wednesday, about three months after he revealed he had AIDS, first shocking, then galvanizing Hollywood into action in an effort to raise money and awareness of the deadly disease.

"I love him and he's tragically gone. Please God, he has not died in vain," said his longtime friend, Elizabeth Taylor, who co-starred with Hudson in "Giant" and co-hosted an AIDS benefit last month.

"The last time he talked to me was two days ago," said producer-director Ross Hunter, who worked with Hudson on 11 films and was believed to be the last person to see the actor Tuesday night.

"We talked about 'Pillow Talk' and all the movies we had done and about the fun times we had during all those movies," Hunter said. "His memory did not fail him. He was out most of the time, but when he came to he was very bright and that wonderful smile was there.

"It's going to be very tough for all of us who considered him part of his family...Now Rock is at peace — something I have prayed for for the last eight or nine months."

Acquired immune deficiency syndrome, which is believed to be spread through sexual contact and contaminated needles and blood products, strips the body of its defenses against disease. Most victims are homosexuals, intravenous drug users and hemophiliacs.

In the last weeks of his life, Hudson established the Rock Hudson AIDS Research Foundation to raise money to find a cure for the disease.

"Oh, my God, what can I say," said Doris Day, breaking into tears as she talked about her co-star in a number of romantic films. "This is when our faith is really tested.

"I saw him as big, healthy and indestructible...Life is eternal and I know I will see him again."

President Reagan, Gov. George Deukmejian and entertainment figures praised Hudson for his kindness and sense of humor.

"Nancy and I are saddened by the news of Rock Hudson's death. He will always be remembered for his dynamic impact on the film industry, and fans all over the world will certainly mourn his loss," Reagan said in a statement. "He will be remembered for his humanity, his sympathetic spirit and well-deserved reputation for kindness. May God rest his soul."

"I think we all have lasting memories of Rock Hudson's performances on the screen during his wonderful career. We also will long remember his courage and character off screen in the closing weeks of his life," Deukmejian said.

FBI seeks ex-CIA agent

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — A vanished ex-CIA officer is being sought by federal agents on charges of plotting to sell defense secrets to a foreign power.

Edward Lee Howard, charged with conspiracy to deliver national defense information to an unspecified foreign government disappeared from here 13 days ago, just ahead of FBI agents who searched his house.

A U.S. official said Howard, who worked for the New Mexico Legislative Finance Committee, is probably one of two ex-CIA officials identified as Soviet agents by Vitaly Yurchenko, a ranking KGB official who recently defected in Rome.

The FBI said Wednesday Howard worked for the CIA from January 1981 through June 1983.

Missing children 'fine'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two missing children, discovered in Arizona after their pictures were featured on grocery bags, egg cartons and billboards, are doing fine after reuniting with their father, the father said.

Matthew Vignau, 5, and his sister Sara, 3, were found Tuesday in Phoenix with their mother, Kathleen, who is being held on a federal fugitive warrant, said FBI Agent Richard Swensen in Phoenix. The children disappeared July 4, 1984, when the mother allegedly violated a custody award to their father.

"They're doing just fine," Steven Vignau said. He said his son's hair had been dyed, both of the children had been given new names and they had been told by their mother that they should fear their father.

Quake hits California

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif. (AP) — No damage or injuries were reported from a strong earthquake that rocked and rolled Southern California for about 15 seconds, authorities said.

Seismologists said the 4:44 p.m. temblor Wednesday, centered about six miles southeast of San Bernardino, registered 5.0 on the Richter scale, said Dennis Meredith of the California Institute of Technology in Pasadena.

Mexico City team trying to reach boy

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Rescuers tunneled desperately today toward the faint tapping of a 9-year-old boy trapped for almost two weeks under 20 tons of rubble from an apartment building destroyed by a killer earthquake.

Dr. Enrique Camacho Romero, a veterinarian in charge of one rescue team, told reporters late Wednesday that rescuers were three feet to five feet away from the boy in the rubble of a three-story apartment building in downtown Mexico City. However, progress was very slow.

He said they last communicated with the child, calling his name into a microphone and listening for his knock, around 10:30 p.m. Wednesday (12:30 a.m. EDT today).

The boy's tapping was faint because "it is difficult for him to raise his hand," he said. Workers and doctors who visited the site said it appeared the child, Luis Ramon Mazerati, was too weak to talk.

Relatives said they were sure both the boy and his grandfather, buried with him when the Sept. 19-20 earthquakes ravaged the city, were alive.

Meanwhile, the U.S. Embassy on Wednesday raised the number of Americans killed in the Sept. 19-20 quakes to 10. The latest victim was identified only as Ronald Patterson, and the embassy said his body was found in the collapsed Regis Hotel.

The embassy also released the names of 14 Americans believed to be missing and asked for help in finding them.

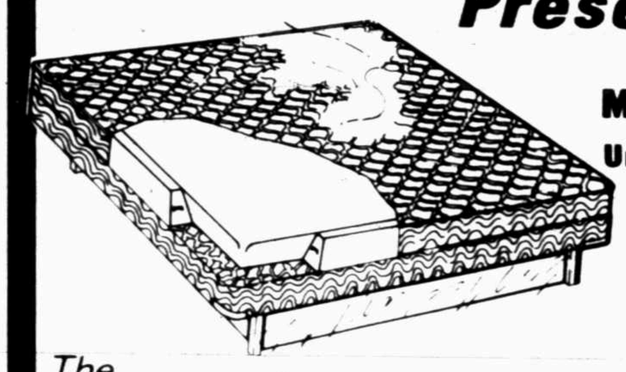

They are: Magdalene Armstrong, Jim and Debbie Buchan, Claudia Cuevas, Nathan Goldsmith, Rochelle or Michelle Gregory, Linda McRae, Daniele Nava, John Stanaway, Ricardo or Richard Perez, Carol Suerth, Gina Thompson, Margaret Villanueva and Sharry Zeitlan.

Relatives said that the boy and his grandfather, Luis Maldonado, 57, were the only ones in the family apartment when the first quake toppled hundreds of buildings and killed thousands of people.

Mutual targets

Now the shoe's on the other foot. But it's still tight.

When the United States seemed to be the nation of choice where terrorists were concerned and the next hostage crisis lay just around the corner, it may have been convenient for Americans to feel sorry for themselves as the object of all this world animosity. It was even easy to rate it as an "us-against-them" rationale with "them" being the uncultured, heathen population of the backward nations.

That may have been a comfortable "out," but the fallacy of that reasoning crashed home Monday when three Soviet diplomats and a doctor were kidnapped from their cars in West Beirut. The Moslem kidnappers demanded the Soviet Union use its influence with Syria to halt fighting in the northern city of Tripoli or, threatened the terrorists, the hostages would be killed. One of the hostages had been killed by late Wednesday afternoon.

This latest hostage situation suddenly makes it strikingly clear that it definitely is an "us-against-them" pairing, but perhaps not in the context originally thought.

Although evidence abounds that the Soviet Union has taken an active role in promoting the rise of what might be called terrorist nations such as Cuba and Syria in the past several years, the kidnapping of the Soviets revealed bluntly that fanatical Moslem groups operating in the Middle East and particularly in Lebanon do not abide by the same code of conduct — or misconduct — guiding the superpowers.

It's also obvious that the terrorists intend to use kidnappings, bombings, and murders — and assorted other terroristic techniques — to pursue their own questionable ends, and that they hold no allegiance to any civilized nation or ethic. They were thought to be leading an assault against Western civilization, but now it's obvious the assault is against anything not fitting their warped vision of life, as dictated by the Moslem religion.

Rarely have the United States and the Soviet Union been forced into the position of needing to join forces to counter the assault of a common enemy. The two nations were allies against a common enemy in World War II and customarily have resisted much in the way of binational unity since, except for brief exchanges of uneasy friendship such as in the early days of space exploration.

Maybe it's time for the two nations to join forces to overcome the threat of terrorism. It's an understood fact both nations are targets. That's an uncomfortable position for nations to discover themselves.

Another View:

Reynolds' cynicism

Are schools lowering academic standards to ease the way for minority students? William Bradford Reynolds, the Reagan administration's civil rights chief, thinks so and regards that as an "offensive" form of discrimination. He's certainly right, if that's what schools are doing. But what's even more offensive is the administration's perverse policy. Even as it professes concern for the academic performance of minority students, it has continually sought to cut federal aid for programs to help them.

Reynolds acknowledges an academic achievement gap between white and minority students. It arises in part from teachers' low expectations, the disproportionate number of minority students assigned to special classes for the mentally and emotionally disturbed and the diversion of minority students into vocational or non-academic tracks.

A recent study by the College Board observed that, "Overall, the evidence suggests that black students are exposed to less-challenging educational program offerings which are less likely to enhance the development of higher order cognitive skills and abilities than are white students."

The federal government knows how to help bridge this gap, by helping to equalize educational opportunities in schools that serve large minority populations. Yet the Reagan administration has offered more resistance than support. It repeatedly sought funding cuts in compensatory programs for economically and educationally disadvantaged children. And it has vigorously resisted federal financing for voluntary desegregation efforts that might result in enriched curriculums for minority students.

That happened in Chicago in 1980. The Chicago school board agreed in court to desegregate more schools, and federal officials promised to seek "every available form of financial resources" that could be used to upgrade curriculums and instruction in schools that remained racially isolated. But Reynolds's Justice Department reneged on the deal. A recent study of Chicago high schools suggests that the lack of federal funding denied college-preparatory courses to black students.

In another case, the Department of Education concluded that a South Carolina school district wasn't justified in segregating minority students as low achievers. But when the case was referred to Justice, Reynolds, citing a lack of adequate evidence, refused to file suit. Now he says that even if he found such evidence, he would be more inclined to negotiate rather than litigate. That attitude telegraphs to offending districts his apparent desire for less-than-effective enforcement.

There's probably only one word to describe this attitude when he now turns around and attacks school districts for lowering standards. Cynical.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's highlight in history:

On Oct. 3, 1863, President Abraham Lincoln declared the last Thursday in November as Thanksgiving Day. (The holiday would move to the third Thursday of November in 1939 before Congress would move it to its present location: the fourth Thursday of November.)

On this date:

In 1922, Rebecca L. Felton of Georgia became the first woman to be seated in the U.S. Senate. Mrs. Felton, a Democrat, was appointed to serve the remaining term of Thomas E. Watson.

In 1941, Adolf Hitler delivered a speech in Berlin in which he said Russia had been "broken," and would "never rise again."

In 1942, President Franklin D. Roosevelt established the Office of Economic Stabilization and authorized controls on farm prices, rents, wages and salaries.

In 1944, during World War II, U.S. troops cracked the Siegfried Line north of Aachen, Germany.

In 1955, "Captain Kangaroo" and "The Mickey Mouse Club" made their debuts on CBS and ABC, respectively.

In 1962, astronaut Wally Schirra blasted off from Cape Canaveral, Fla., aboard the Sigma 7 on a nine-hour flight.

Today's birthdays: Author Gore Vidal is 60. Actress Madlyn Rhue is 51. Rock-and-roll star Chubby Checker is 44. Sen. Jeff Bingaman, D-N.M, is 42. All-star outfielder Dave Winfield is 34.

Thought for today: "Words once spoke can never be recalled." — Wentworth Dillon, English poet (c. 1633-1685).

RUSSELL BAKER

Dirksen's law doesn't fit trillions!

NEW YORK — Mrs. S.K. of Trenton notes that the national debt is approaching $2 trillion, says she doesn't know what $1 trillion looks like, much less $2 trillion, and asks for help.

Russell Baker

"I once read that Sen. Everett Dirksen, scolding the Senate for adding millions of dollars to a money bill so they could all get re-elected, said, 'A million dollars here, and a million dollars there, and pretty soon, gentlemen, you're talking about real money.' Is this true? Is $2 trillion real money?"

Yes, Mrs. S.K., the late Sen. Dirksen did once say something very close to the line you quote. (Not, however, until after the Senate had added a few million dollars for the state of Illinois, where he was facing a tough re-election campaign.)

Dirksen's law was accepted for many years as a great profundity. Often, while voting each other dozens of fresh millions to keep their back-home folks happy, senators cited Dirksen's law in subtly self-congratulatory context that was not lost on their constituents. The message conveyed to voters was that they were getting so many silly millions heaped on them that they added up to real money.

We now know, of course, that the Dirksen law — a million here, a million there, and pretty soon you're talking about real money — is not valid if applied to an infinite number of millions. This explains why Mrs. S.K. cannot imagine what $1 trillion looks like. One trillion dollars, Mrs. S.K., is not real money.

Like the light year, the trillion is an abstruse philosophical idea that can interest only persons with a morbid interest in mathematics. This explains why most people go limp with boredom when told that the national debt will soon be $2 trillion, or $20 trillion, or $200 trillion. The incomprehensible is incomprehensible, no matter how you number it.

This is where President Reagan has once again outwitted his critics. They are trying to outrage and alarm us about the size of the debt he has run up in less than five years, but the only people who can understand what they're talking about are mathematicians.

Four or five years ago the debt was still way down there in the hundreds of billions. Not many of us had a firm grip on the billion, but we did know it was a powerful sight of money. Oil people had billions. Lawyers might not quite have billions, but they might get a crack at them if inflation kept rising.

You could even guess what it would be like to have a billion. You would buy some yachts and castles, maybe take up horseback riding, open a Swiss bank account, collect Rembrandts, save an opera company from bankruptcy.

A billion seemed like a nice number to have in dollars, but you would have hated owing it to anybody, and here was the United States Government owing hundreds of the things and getting in deeper every day, and where was the Government going to get the cash to meet the bills?

They were going to get it from you and me, who between us did not have a single billion. It was worrisome. Pretty soon the debt hit one thousand billion dollars. That was truly worrisome, or would have been if someone had not pointed out that one thousand billion can also be called a trillion.

The significance of this was lost on everybody but the president. Democrats said a trillion-dollar debt was insufferable and should be reduced by raising taxes. Republicans and Democrats together said it could also be cut by slowing down the arms race.

The President must shake his head in amazement at how easy it is to outfox these people. Raise taxes? What American ever loved his president for the taxes he raised?

Cut back the armament buildup? That would mean economic hardship for General Dynamics, General Electric, United Technologies, McDonnell Douglas, Raytheon, Litton, Lockheed, Hughes, Boeing, a company called TRW and hundreds more, as well as their work forces and all the states that lived off the armament boom. What had once been the military-industrial complex had now become the entire nation.

Reagan knew why that nation loved him as it had loved few persons since Shirley Temple outgrew her curls. Instead of raising taxes and blocking gravy sluices, he blithely let the trillion-dollar debt double to $2 trillion.

The result? Most of us go limp with boredom. The billion we could almost understand, but the trillion is beyond all human comprehension. Reagan had seen the fallacy in Dirksen's law. He understood that if you amended it to read, "a thousand billion here, a thousand billion there," pretty soon you wouldn't be talking about real money any more.

JACK ANDERSON

Postal Service problems mounting

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Postal Service has a billion-dollar surprise for Congress: That's the amount it needs, give or take a few million, to bail itself out of difficulties caused by the agency's mismanagement.

Jack Anderson

Even if Congress, which is searching for ways to cut the $200 billion federal budget deficit, comes up with the money, you can look forward to yet another increase in the price of a first-class letter.

According to Postal Rate Commissioner John Crutcher, we'll be paying 24 cents as early as January 1987 — despite promises to the contrary by Postmaster General Paul Carlin. That's less than two years after last February's introduction of the 22-cent stamp, a 10 percent increase that was supposed to cover the Postal Service's projected $588 million deficit for 1986.

What's the billion-dollar bailout all about?

According to the proposal adopted by the Postal Service's board of governors on Sept. 6, the money will be borrowed from the Treasury for "capital purposes."

The capital investment will be in multi-line digital scanners that will be capable of quickly and accurately sorting mail that bears the nine-digit "ZIP Code plus four," which narrows delivery zones to a city block or even a large office building.

The machines the Postal Service has now cost some $480 million — but they can't do the job. The service is spending up to $2 million each day on salaries of 700,000 workers needed to finish the sorting work the machines can't do.

The result of the inadequate machines and the human supplement is that mail-sorting speed is far below what the Postal Service figured it would be. This year, for example, the service estimated its scanners would be able to read 22.9 billion pieces of nine-digit ZIP mail. Instead, the total will be more like 6 billion.

So why wouldn't it be a smart idea to "retrofit" the underachieving sorter machines and bring them up to snuff? It would be — if the Postal Service board of governors knew what it was doing. But there's no reason to think that the same people who bought $480 million worth of machines that don't work will do any better upgrading them.

In addition to retrofitting the 500 readers it already has, the Postal Service has also ordered 862 more readers — which will, of course, have to be upgraded if they're to perform properly. That's why the agency wants to borrow $1.02 billion from the Treasury.

But there is another way: buying new machines that can do the job. A Dallas company, Recognition Equipment Inc., claims it has a system ready to go. In fact, Crutcher told us, "I have seen REI's equipment and I'm very impressed with its operation."

But Senior Assistant Postmaster General Jerry Lee said it would be illegal to buy REI's machines without inviting competitive bids from other companies. So the Postal Service will seek bids from REI and two foreign firms, Electrocom and AEG-Telefunken.

REI claims that if it were given the contract now, its system would be operational within a year. According to postal officials, the two foreign firms are still developing their readers, and would need two-and-a-half years to get them on line.

Meanwhile, the Postal Service seems determined to try to patch up its existing system — and to continue losing $2 million a day.

CONFIDENTIAL FILE: Vietnam, desperate for hard currency to bolster its mismanaged economy, is reluctantly courting that veritable caricature of capitalistic exploitation — Big Oil. The Hanoi government has been holding quiet discussions with American and European oil companies over possible offshore exploration deals. The Vietnamese have become disillusioned with their Big Brother, the Soviet Union, which hasn't made much progress in its search for offshore oil. Why? The best guess of our intelligence sources is that the Kremlin doesn't want to encourage the independence its satellite would gain with the big bucks an oil strike would bring.

MINI-EDITORIAL — Did French President Francois Mitterrand hire the consulting firm of Nixon, Haldeman, Ehrlichman and Dean to advise him on "l'affaire Greenpeace"? Sure sounds that way. French secret agents blew up the Greenpeace ship, killing a photographer who was aboard. Newspapers exposed the scandal. The government hotly denied official involvement, then finally owned up to it. But who were the first people the French government charged with violating the law? Three French army men who allegedly leaked the story and thereby endangered "the national security." We are beginning to hope that the Greenpeace cabal suffers the same ignominious fate as the Watergate crew.

Use of aborted fetusus worrisome

WASHINGTON — So overflowing with incident is modern life that newspaper readers encounter statements like: "The retrieval of tissues from abortuses (aborted fetuses) is a whole ticking time bomb. There are a lot of people who are just crazed at the thought of using abortuses for anything."

George F. Will

Those words are from a bioethicist quoted by the Los Angeles Times in a story concerning the use of tissues from fetuses for the treatment of diabetes. That disease causes much blindness, kidney failure and death. Scientists in Australia and now Denver have transplanted fetal pancreatic tissue into diabetics in the hope that such tissue will be more resistant than adult tissue to rejection. This use of fetal remains has some people worried — not crazed, worried. Here is why.

Americans are addicted to reducing controversies to clashes of "rights." But questions about, say, experiments with human life that is begun in vitro, in laboratories, can be, and I think should be, considered without reference to the "right to life." Rather, the crucial consideration can be this: What respect should be shown to any sort of human body, even after life has left it?

You may wonder why anyone feels anxious about the use of aborted fetuses. After all, cadavers are dissected routinely for the social good of training doctors. Organ transplants are becoming routine. Babies are conceived in laboratory dishes and brought to term in surrogate wombs (and someday, perhaps, in artificial wombs). Cosmetic surgery that rearranges the body is common; gender-change surgery is no longer astonishing. So why view any use of any sort of human body as anything other than the subordination of the human body to human will — an affirmation of our autonomy as creatures with minds?

However, consider this question: If the use of fetal tissue for therapeutic purposes is a matter of moral indifference, would the deliberate production of fetuses, either in women or laboratories, for that purpose be equally innocuous? And if the use of fetuses for medical purposes is a matter of moral indifference, what if some industrial use were found for fetal material — say, in making cosmetics.

Prof. Leon Kass, a University of Chicago biologist and physician and philosopher, notes that when a woman miscarries, we feel sorrow about the human potential that will be unrealized, but we do not accord the remains a funeral or other ritual disposal. However, we recoil (Kass apologizes for the shock required to illustrate a thought) from the idea of eating fetal remains, should someone decide they are a delicacy. We feel, as an irresistible intuition, that at no point should a human body be regarded as merely meat. We should listen to the language of such intuitions.

Human beings are neither mindless matter nor minds isolated from the physical matter of bodies. Ideas and even minds may be intangible, but particular ones belong to particular "embodied" persons — persons with bodily natures. To be human is to be "embodied," to have the form, powers, capabilities and limits of the human body.

The instinct to show some respect toward any human body — even a cadaver, even an aborted fetus — is natural, and is not a mere residue of pre-scientific superstition. It expresses the felt conviction that a body is never "merely" a body, because a human being is never merely a ghost in a corporeal machine.

Diminishing suffering from diabetes is a noble goal. But diminishing suffering is not a goal that sweeps everything out of its way. The time-honored medical maxim is negative. It says, "Do no harm." It does not say, "Do good at any cost." The purpose of the maxim is to protect patients. But medicine can do social as well as personal harm. It can injure our understanding of ourselves — our grounds of self-respect.

There is a danger when we treat the material of "embodied" life as merely raw material for use in achieving whatever we desire. There is a danger even when what we desire is scientifically serious and morally sound. The danger is less tangible than medical advances, but is not less real. It is the habit of hubris. It is the belief that our willfulness should be autonomous, unconstrained by respect for the natural or awe when dealing with the material by which life is embodied.

War is a dangerous business, and the use of military metaphors should alert us to danger: We speak of the "conquest of nature" by science. But perhaps the result will be the surrender of human nature.

It is far from clear that the use of fetal tissue for therapeutic purposes is wrong. But it certainly is wrong to dismiss as "crazed" those of us who think there is something going on that justifies reflection, and worry.

Singing on the bus, some of the 43 Kansans on a bus tour to see northern New England's foliage sing to pass the time, passing through Johnsbury, Vt.

New England leaf peepers 'lookee here, lookee there'

By JOHN DONNELLY
Associated Press

CABOT, Vt. (AP) — Vera Faulconer couldn't hold in her excitement as she shouted into the bus intercom and flailed her arms.

"Lookee there, lookee there," she cried. "Over to your right, you'll see colors you'll never believe."

Behind her, 42 necks angled for the view: black-and-white Holstein cows in front of a Vermont hill ablaze with reds, yellows, oranges and greens.

It was a little after 8 a.m., but the coachful of retired Kansas teachers and friends wasn't going to miss anything.

"It's breathtaking," murmured Jean Jones, a retired music teacher from Topeka. "Just gorgeous."

They had traveled halfway across the country to see the northern New England colors, 43 of the estimated 3 million tourists expected this foliage season. Vermont alone will attract 1 million leaf-peepers, the state Chamber of Commerce estimates, including roughly 150,000 by bus.

"It's a big, big industry," said the chamber's Christine Salembier. "And it's a very tight market. Fall foliage bus tours are booked (in motels and lodges) a year, maybe longer, in advance. It used to be kind of a low-budget way to travel, but now it can be very glamorous accommodations."

The Kansas group is in the midst of a 19-day tour, organized by the Topeka Area Retired Teachers Association at what they say is a cut rate: $1,095 per person. The two tour guides — one is Faulconer — are not paid. They receive a free trip.

"Everybody in Kansas wants to come for the fall foliage in New England," said Emma Davis, the other guide. "We've just been 'ooohing' and 'aaahing' ever since we got here."

First stop Monday was at the Maple Grove Maple Museum in St. Johnsbury. The 43 filed out and went into the gift shop. Some bought trinkets and maple candy, but more than 30 headed for the restrooms.

"That's the favorite attraction at all these stops," said Faulconer.

Soon they were back on the bus. Next stop, Mount Washington's Cog Train Ride, over the border in New Hampshire.

Some said they wished they could have stayed longer and others acknowledged that leaf-peeping by bus has its drawbacks.

"I wish I could get in more with, you know, the natives," said Wilma Scott, a former principal in Topeka. "You know what I mean. I'd love to be on the back roads where the farms are."

Jean Jones was focusing on a farm high on a hill, its backside flush with the colorful woods.

"My first time here, it was a few years ago, I was just looking out at the colors with tears in my eyes. It was so beautiful," she said. "I wanted to come back a second time to make sure I didn't dream it. I didn't dream a thing."

Are Southern men proud of pot bellies?

NEW YORK (AP) — When anthropologists venture into the American marketplace, the notes from their journals might surprise even Margaret Mead.

Consider, for example, the finding that Southern men take pride in their pot bellies, and the little-known common denominator between cannibals and non-joggers.

Steve Barnett got his doctorate in anthropology at Chicago University, then taught at Princeton, Brown and MIT before joining the consulting firm of Planmetrics.

Now, instead of observing cultural forces in India, where he did his academic research, Barnett is helping to sell clothing, diapers and nuclear power.

Barnett has assembled an anthropological version of the "A-Team" in New York — five anthropologists, a sociologist, a social psychologist and a statistician who are called in for the tough jobs, when traditional market research fails. Where other marketers use focus groups, direct questioning and opinion polls, Planmetrics uses direct observation. Barnett's group analyzes what it sees.

The technique, which can cost anywhere from $5,000 to $300,000, appears to be working. Planmetrics' clients include Royal Dutch Shell, Proctor & Gamble, Westinghouse, Kimberly-Clark, Del Monte Foods, and the U.S. Department of Energy.

The $300,000 job was for a government agency and "it involved secrecy, that's all I can say," Barnett said.

"I get called into projects that have proved intractable by normal research methods," he said.

For example, a traditional public opinion survey among maintenance workers for a public utility found the vast majority approved of nuclear power. So the company — Barnett prefers not to identify clients with projects — decided to use the workers to "talk up" nuclear power with its customers.

When the idea didn't work, Planmetrics put a few anthropologists in the same uniforms as the repair crews to find out what was going wrong.

"We discovered that even a pronuclear employee did not take a pronuclear stand with a customer," Barnett said. "They'd say, 'Hey lady, I only work here.'"

Planmetrics advised the company to drop its employee spokesmen.

It was during a project for a department store chain that Barnett made his amazing discovery about pot-bellied Southern men.

Planmetrics was asked to determine what features made certain styles of casual jackets popular with men. "We felt if you looked at how they tried them on, you'd find out what's important to them," Barnett said, so the team put video cameras behind one-way mirrors in the mens' clothing section.

The technique worked and the client was satisfied, but it was one irrelevant observation which fascinated Barnett: In Southern stores, pot-bellied men would choose jackets that looked too tight, then turn sideways and admire their bulging profiles.

"We discovered people were quite proud of having grown that belly," Barnett said. "Rather than get a looser jacket that would hide it, they got one to show it off."

A project for a soup company led Barnett to see a connection between the exercise boom and cannibalistic culture.

When it comes to exercise, many Americans believe in what anthropologists call "contagious magic" — the belief that prompts cannibals to eat their enemies to obtain their power.

It is the same belief that prompts some loafers to call themselves joggers when all they've done is gone out and bought running clothes. Barnett found that some Americans — you know who you are — act as if "owning jogging clothes is as good as if you jogged."

One client spent $20,000 on a two-month project to find out how to improve disposable diapers. Barnett set up video cameras in child care centers and watched 70 volunteer parents diaper their babies.

Suburban cattle rustlers plague San Francisco Bay-area ranchers

WALNUT CREEK, Calif. (AP) — Ranchers and law enforcement officers say cattle rustling, 20th century style, is becoming a serious problem on the ranges east and south of San Francisco Bay.

Investigators say some of the rustling is done by professional cowboys who drive trucks to corrals and quickly transport the cattle out of the state, but much is done by suburbanites living on the edge of the ranchlands.

Gordon Strain, a part-time employee of the Contra Costa County sheriff's department, says the most common rustling is done by "roadside butchers."

The county produces about $15 million in beef and dairy products annually.

Rancher Jim Coelho, who runs cattle on 5,000 acres in the Fremont hills, said it was not unusual to find animals slaughtered along a roadside by thieves out for free steaks.

"You always come up short" in head counts, Coelho complained.

Often, he said, he finds the hindquarters missing from these animals, neatly removed as if by professional butchers. Sometimes he finds his cattle shot dead by what he calls "sports hunters."

Strain called the gunmen "frustrated deer hunters (or) some little rich kid...with a brand new .22. Maybe a 30-year-old unemployed guy."

WEATHER SUMMARY

TEMPERATURES: 50s, 60s, 70s, 80s, 90s

PRECIPITATION: Rain, Showers, Snow, Flurries

FRONTS: Cold, Warm, Stationary, Occluded

Conditions forecast for 8 p.m. Thursday

In North Texas, mostly sunny and warmer with highs around 80. Fair and not as cool tonight with lows from the mid 50s northwest to mid 60s southeast. Highs ranging from the mid 70s northwest to the mid 80s southeast.

In West Texas, fair tonight except turning cooler Panhandle late tonight. Mostly sunny and cooler Friday, except a little warmer mountains westward. Lows tonight upper 40s Panhandle, otherwise 50s. Highs Friday 68 Panhandle to 81 southeast, mid 80s far west and low 90s Big Bend valleys.

In South Texas, partly cloudy tonight and Friday. Warmer. Lows tonight mostly in the 60s north and west to the low and mid 70s lower coast and extreme south. Highs Friday mid and upper 80s north to near 90 south.

Warmer temperatures anticipated

From Staff and Wire Reports

Warmer temperatures and sunny skies are in the picture through Friday, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal.

Tonight will be clear with lows expected in the mid-50's and westerly winds blowing at 10 to 15 mph.

Friday's high temperature should be near 80 degrees with northerly winds at 10 to 20 mph and gusty.

The highest temperature ever recorded for Wednesday's date was 97 degrees set in 1951. A low of 42 degrees for today's date was recorded in 1961.

STATE

A weak high-pressure cell that influenced Texas weather the past few days was slowly being replaced by a trough of low pressure across the northwest Plains early this morning.

Meanwhile, clear skies outlined the coastal waters, the Rio Grande plain, the southeast and northwest, while high clouds were visible over the remainder of the state.

Temperatures before dawn had cooled into the 50s and 60s over most sections, but the mercury had dipped into the upper 40s in the northern Panhandle. The 4 a.m. temperature extremes ranged from 49 degrees at Amarillo to 69 degrees at McAllen, the National Weather Service said.

A south wind of 10 mph or less breezed the Panhandle, South Plains and North Texas, while light winds were noted elsewhere, the weather service said.

In the forecast, tonight should be fair to partly cloudy and not as cool with lows in the 60s and 70s, except for some upper 40s in the Panhandle.

Friday should be mostly clear except for some cloudiness in South and West Texas. Highs should be in the 70s and 80s to the low 90s in the Big Bend valleys.

NATION

Rain drenched the nation from the East Coast through the southern Rockies early today, with the Middle Atlantic States veiled in dense fog.

Thunderstorms broke up over the Florida peninsula by morning, but not before dumping more than 2 inches of rain on Fort Myers Wednesday night, the National Weather Service said.

Norfolk Naval Air Station, Va., got more than an inch of rain in the six-hour period ending at 2 a.m. EDT.

Past haunts Lee Friday at Abilene Cooper

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

ABILENE — Two years ago Midland Lee took a heavily favored Rebel team into P.E. Shotwell Stadium to take on the Abilene Cooper Cougars only to have a Doug Hadley to Alan Gunter 83-yard touchdown screen pass late in the fourth quarter put the Rebs in a hole they just missed climbing out of.

The narrow defeat, 23-21, didn't come until the final minute of the ball game after Lee took the ensuing kickoff and rammed Isaac Garnett down the Cougars' throats into field goal range where kicker Craig Kamradt lofted a perfectly straight kick down the left hash mark. Unfortunately for the Rebels, the goal posts lie between the hashes and the attempt was wide.

"I remember we held Garnett to only 276 yards that game," said Cooper head coach Mike Garrison, a former Lee assistant coach.

That upset in 1983 turned out to be the deciding factor in the District 4-5A title chase. The Rebels ended up with two losses and finished second behind Odessa Permian, despite beating the Panthers. Earlier in the season, Lee fumbled away its' only other loss — before the state championship game — to San Angelo.

According to Rebel head coach Jack Tayrien, losing to the Cooper Cougars in '83 was nothing novel.

"I think they're going to be fired up and ready to play us," said Tayrien. "We've beaten them only once since 1978 at P.E. Shotwell Stadium and that was in '78. Most of these kids were 10 years old the last time we beat them there. And, we had to come from behind to win, 28-25."

In the 22-year history of Lee-Cooper football, the Cougars hold a decided edge, 14-7-1. "We won three of those games since '78," added Tayrien.

The last Lee victory came a year ago at Memorial Stadium, 28-7, one of the 12 that propelled the Rebels to a 12-2 record and a quarterfinal playoff berth.

THIS YEAR'S meeting has a few similarities, namely the condition of both teams.

"We were pretty bruised up against Angelo, it was a pretty physical game" said Tayrien. "We have some people out."

One of those people is quarterback Tuey Rankin. "He's got a bruised shoulder and it's highly doubtful he'll be ready," said Tayrien. "It will depend on what happens between now and Friday but that's only 48 hours away."

Tayrien has listed junior Rodney Johnson as Rankin's replacement. Also, junior John Bradley, 196 pounds, will replace injured Paul Sherrick at linebacker.

On the other side of the injury situation, the Rebels are also getting a player back, defensive back Terry Young, who has been out for five weeks with a broke wrist. "He was given the player's release so he can go," said Tayrien. "He still has a cast on and it will have to be padded. He's awfully rusty from missing so much practice."

Last year, Young was a starter in every game in the secondary.

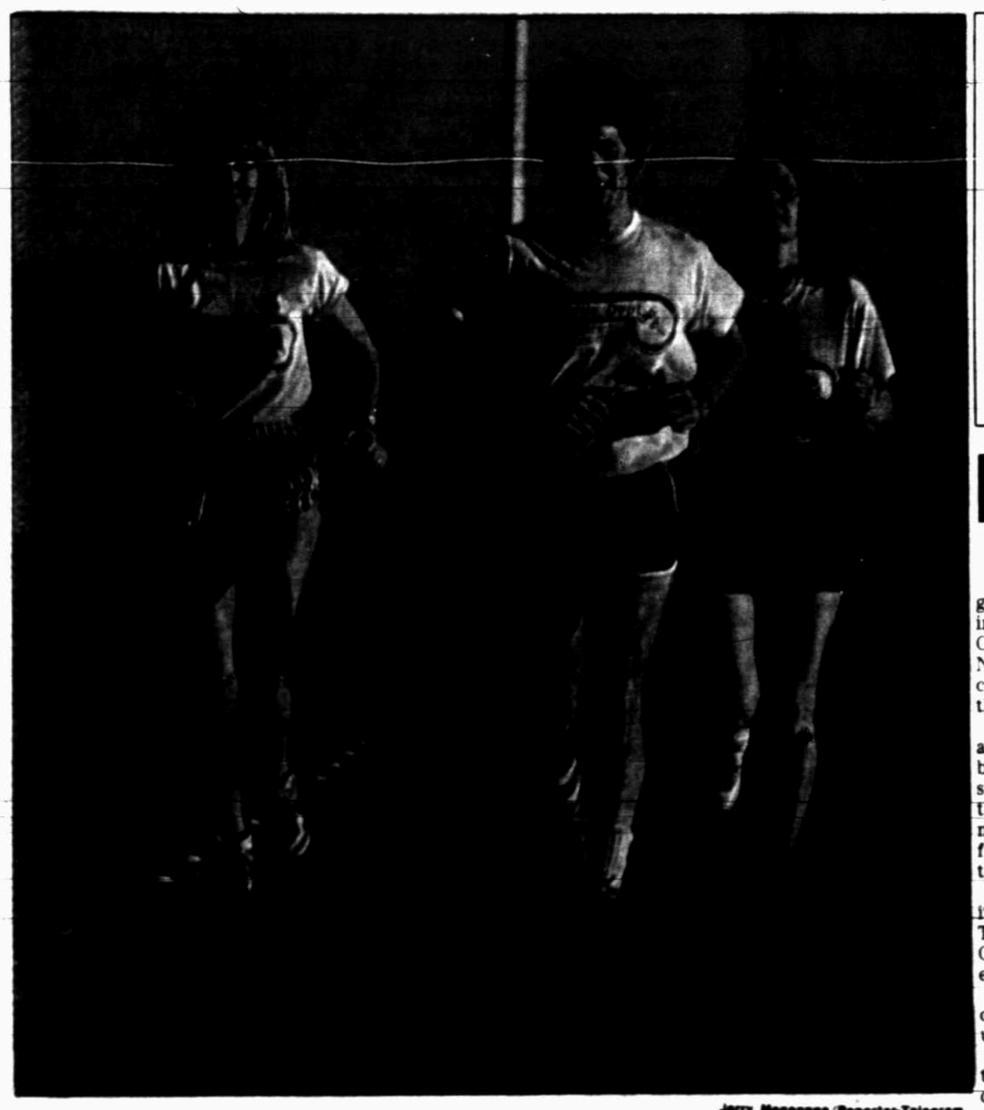

At Cooper, Garrison is also claiming a banged up squad. "We lost two starters against Odessa High," said Garrison. "It was a very physical football game, a typical 4-5A game. We had seven players hurt going in and lost two more."

But, the Cougars are also getting players back, like '84 honorable mention fullback Jay Tollison, who "rushed for 900 yards last year and had about 460 yards at this time a year ago. So far, he has only 46 yards this year."

Both Garrison and Tayrien agree that the Cougars have had a tough four-game schedule.

"We feel like we've played three district champions," said Garrison about his team's losses to Brownwood, Wichita Falls and Temple. "Odessa High is definitely a contender in 4-5A."

MRT/YMCA slates marathon, relay

The Midland Reporter-Telegram/Central YMCA distance run, the half marathon with the relay twist, is scheduled for 9 a.m. Oct. 26. The race will begin in the Courtyard at Midland Park, located Midkiff and Loop 250.

The individual run will be 13.3 miles and the four-runner relay will be divided into 3.3 mile segments. The age divisions for the half marathon are 19-and-under, 20-29, 30-39, 40-49, 50-59 and 60 and over for men and 19 and under, 20-29, 30-39, 40-49 and 50 and over for women.

The relay will be run in men (under 120 years, 120 years and over), women (120-and-under, 120 and over), mixed (under 120, 120 and over) and corporate divisions. No age categories are placed on the coporate division.

A Fun Run of one mile will also be offered. This will be for free, but contestants must sign a waiver.

Entry fee for the half marathon and relay is $10 by Oct. 23, $12 after Oct. 23; $40 per team by Oct. 23 and $48 after Oct. 28.

A long sleeve t-shirt will be given the first 400 entrants and an official race medallion will also go to the first 400. Top finishers in all age groups will receive awards.

A pre-race spaghetti dinner will be held 6-8 p.m. Oct. 25 at the Holiday Inn.

Entries and checks may be mailed to the the Central YMCA, P.O. Box 954.

FBI probes Dallas Cowboys

DALLAS (AP) — Three-year-old allegations involving drugs and point shaving by certain members of the Dallas Cowboys are being investigated by the National Football League while the FBI conducts a probe into its handling of the original case.

The allegations — that five current and former Dallas Cowboys fixed football games in exchange for cocaine — surfaced in 1982 but were ignored by the FBI because officials felt the information was too sketchy. A spokesman for the bureau said it will investigate the handling of the case by its agents.

"I hope the NFL and FBI investigate it and do it quick," Cowboys President Tex Schramm said. "It indicates five Cowboys were involved but doesn't even name them.

"We're helpless now ... every member on the team will be suspect. We're all under a cloud.

"People will see the headlines and think the Cowboys were involved in cocaine and point shaving. But when it's cleared up it won't get the same space or attention — and it will be cleared up," he said.

DALLAS FBI Supervisory Agent Jim Siano said he received the report in February 1983 and filed it away without ever showing it to his superiors or conducting an investigation because the information was too vague to be useful.

"I'm the one who handled the report and I'm the one that decided what to do with it," Siano said. "Nothing was done here because nothing should have been done."

"I see informant stuff every day involving sports figures or famous people," said another senior Federal law enforcement official. "You record it and either evaluate it yourself or pass it along to another agency or whoever has jurisdiction, and they decide whether it merits followup."

A review of most of the Cowboys' games in 1981 and the strike-shortened 1982 season shows the team covered the point spread, used by bookmakers to establish gambling odds, in 15 of 22 games.

NFL spokesman Joe Browne said the league had learned of the allegations about a week ago.

"We are in the process of reviewing them as we routinely do with reports or rumors of this type," he said.

OLIVER Revell, FBI executive assistant director, told The News that the bureau would investigate the matter "on my behalf."

"Our focus will be to determine precisely what information was received, whether the assessment of it was valid and then determine whether or not it was handled properly," Revell said.

The News said the statements about the Cowboys were contained in a December 1982 report by former FBI Special Agent Daniel Mitrione, who then was in good standing with the agency but has since pleaded guilty in Miami to federal charges of bribery, conspiracy and possession of cocaine with intent to distribute.

"I think that tells you something about the story right there," said Schramm. "Nobody believes a thing this guy says. The whole thing is ridiculous.

"I'm not naive on the matter of drugs in sports," said Schramm. "I've seen too much of what's happening in baseball. I'm for hanging them (the players) if they do it (cocaine). But it's not right to prosecute them if you don't have a substantial base to suspect anything."

AT THE TIME Mitrione wrote the report, he was assigned to the Miami FBI office and was working on an investigation dubbed "Operation Airlift," a Fort Lauderdale-based drug sting.

Ex-Cub Martinez clinches it for LA

Associated Press

The Los Angeles Dodgers became the first team to clinch a divisional title this season when the San Diego Padres, with former Midland Cub Carmelo Martinez hitting a tie-breaking home run in the eighth inning Wednesday night, defeated the Cincinnati Reds 5-4.

The result set off a mid-game celebration in Los Angeles where the Dodgers were in the process of beating Atlanta 9-3 as Orel Hershiser won his 11th straight game to run his record to 19-3. Mike Marshall led a 17-hit Dodger attack with three hits, including his 27th home run, and three RBI.

The New York Mets, with Dwight Gooden outpitching Joaquin Andujar in a duel of 20-game winners, moved within a game of St. Louis in the National League East with a 5-2 victory over the Cardinals.

Meanwhile, in major league baseball's other showdown series, Kansas City defeated California 4-0 to tie for the lead in the American League West.

"What more can you ask of a man?" Kansas City Manager Dick Howser said of Bud Black, who tossed a three-hitter. "That was a redeemer. That's what that was."

Padres 5, Reds 4

Martinez's solo homer, his 20th of the year, came on a 3-2 delivery by Tom Hume, 3-5, working in relief of Cincinnati starter Tom Browning, who was seeking his 12th consecutive victory. Rich Gossage, 5-3, worked the final two innings to gain the victory for San Diego.

Mets 5, Cardinals 2

Gooden, 24-4, struck out 10 batters — the 11th time he had fanned 10 or more this season — but was forced to weather a ninth-inning jam, retiring Tom Herr on a line drive to second baseman Wally Backman with the bases loaded and a run in. The victory was the second straight for the Mets over the Cardinals in the three-game series, which concludes Thursday night. George Foster had three of the Mets' 13 hits, including his 21st homer leading off the seventh against Andujar, who fell to 21-11.

Royals 4, Angels 0

George Brett hit a three-run inside-the-park home run in support of slump-ridden Black. Black had struggled through one five-week stretch this season without a victory. Brett's inside-the-park homer off Ron Romanick in the first inning scored Lonnie Smith and Willie Wilson as the Royals forged a tie for the lead for the eighth time since Sept. 18.

Tigers 4, Blue Jays 2

Detroit's Darrell Evans became the first player ever to hit 40 home runs in both leagues when he and teammate Kirk Gibson, who got his 29th, homered to back the five-hit pitching of Jack Morris and Chuck Cary. The 40-year-old Evans, who hit 41 homers for the Atlanta Braves in 1973, also is the oldest AL player ever to hit 40. Morris, 16-11, scattered five hits over the seven innings before Cary came on to earn his second save.

Brewers 1, Yankees 0

Milwaukee rookie Teddy Higuera, 15-8, pitched a six-hitter that ended New York's six-game winning streak. The game's only run came in the third inning against Bob Shirley, 5-5, who pitched a four-hitter. He walked Paul Molitor with two out and Randy Ready followed with a shallow fly ball to right field that tipped off the glove of a diving Dave Winfield for a triple.

Astros 7, Giants 2

Jim Pankovits' leadoff homer touched off a four-run eighth-inning rally by Houston in a game spiced by a bench-clearing incident an inning later. Kevin Bass' 15th homer and Glenn Davis' 20th in the ninth came off San Francisco's Mike Jeffcoat, who hit the next batter, John Mizerock, to start the mele.

Expos 3, Phillies 1

Montreal's Tim Raines had two hits, stole three bases and scored twice, while Bryn Smith, 18-5, and Jeff Reardon, who got his major league leading 39th save, combined on a five-hitter in the opener to hand Philadelphia its 11th straight loss. In the second game, Charles Hudson pitched a six-hitter and drove in a run for Philadelphia. Raines stole his 70th base of the year, making him the first major leaguer to reach that plateau five years in a row.

Tors' Williams no longer wonders, 'Where's Beef?'

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

LAMESA—The addition of a few extra pounds of bulk on the offensive line has posed some novel problems for Kenneth Williams, the star tailback of the Lamesa Tornadoes — he isn't able to push them around anymore.

Last season, as a junior, Williams gained nearly 1,100 yards rushing behind an offensive line that averaged around 165 pounds. No one would've blamed him for asking, "Where's the beef?"

"I could move most of those guys out of my way because I was bigger than most of the linemen last year," Williams says.

This season however, Tors coach Clyde Noonkester assembled a collection of behemoths any runner would be proud to run behind. Seniors Ray Earnest (280), Shawn Holladay (230), Bobby Guyer (245), Michael Hernandez (210) and Jade Froman (165) combine for an average weight of 230 in the Tors' front wall.

"They get in my way sometimes because I run into them, but I guess that comes with being big," Williams laughs. "But they're really doing a good job. They're coming out and making blocks I didn't think they could make."

"AND DON'T get the idea Williams, a smooth 6-0, 185 pounds, doesn't appreciate his new-found blocking wall.

"I'm not nearly as sore after a game this year."

The combination has worked magic in the early season for Lamesa, which is 3-0 heading into Friday's District 2-4A opener with Andrews, 1-2. Williams has already rushed for 426 yards and four touchdowns in just three games this season. His last performance was a 223-yard, two-touchdown display in a 20-3 win over Seminole.

The pace leaves him on target for another 1,000-yard plus season, even though he is not carrying the ball nearly as much as last season. In hopes of relieving some of the pressure from Williams, and stop opposing defenses from zeroing in on his game-breaker, Noonkester is striving for a balanced attack.

"LAST YEAR (teams) would send everybody my way and I couldn't break any big runs," Williams said. "Now, we're trying to establish a balanced attack instead of just me all the time. So if they try to key on me, Greg (Hogg, the fullback) or Keith (Bryant, the quarterback) can break out alone.

"Last year I got all my yards in small chunks, five or 10 yards at a time. This year I've been getting them in big chunks."

Williams' talents have attracted more than a few letters of inquiry into his future football plans. For the moment, he will only say that he is interested in a school with a winning tradition. His sights are firmly set on only the present, and Friday's showdown with Andrews.

"There's always a thing between us and Andrews, it doesn't matter if one of us has a sorry team that year, we always get up for each other and play well. But I think this is our year.

"We have to press (Mustang quarterback Danny) Neighbors into making bad passes. Coach said if he's under a lot of pressure, he'll put it up for grabs, so we need to make some interceptions.

"ON DEFENSE, they do a lot of stacking of their ends, so I'll have to break to the outside on my moves."

If he can get outside, Williams' 4.6 speed in the 40-yard dash can cause a lot of problems for any defense. And that's just what Noonkester and Williams have in my mind.

"I think we can move the ball on any team in the district, but we have to establish our passing game," Williams said. "But like they say, if you have a good running game, why pass?"

As yet, with Williams anchoring the land attack, no one has forced the Tors offense to look skyward.

Midlander leads

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Beckys Playgirl, owned and shown by Nonie Casselman of Midland, Texas, took the first round lead Wednesday in the National Cutting Horse Association Breeders Cup in the non-professional with a 219.5.

San Tari, owned by Rae Dell Shelton and ridden by Ralph Shelton of Arlington, was second at 219.0. Thursday, the open division second round will be competed with 121 horses vying for 60 semifinal spots.

MC hosts WJCAC golf

From Staff Reports

College golf action moves to Midland's Green Tree Country Club Friday when Midland College hosts its annual conference tournament. The one-day, 18-hole event tees off at 8:30 a.m.

The Chaparrals hope to take advantage of a home course to get in front in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference standings. Last week, the Chaps finished second in the conference opener at Levelland.

Odessa College, defending WJCAC champs, won the even. New Mexico Junior College finished third, New Mexico Military Institute fourth, South Plains College fifth and Western Texas College sixth.

Six conference schools participate in men's golf, with each college hosting one tournament during the year. Three tournaments make up the fall schedule. WTC is scheduled to host the final event of the fall on Oct. 19.

As expected, the Chaps are being paced by their sophomores. Randy Winn from Boulder, Colo., and former Midland High player David Pritchett had 72s in the SPC event. Raymond Cole, from San Antonio, is averaging 75.Another soph, Eddie Valdes of Del Rio, and freshman Steve Alexander, of San Angelo, complete the team.

"With the rain we've had, Green Tree should be in good shape and out players enjoy the course," said MC head coach Delnor Poss. "We need to take this one to get into at least a tie for first place. With just one tournament at each place, you have just the one home course advantage. We won last year at Green Tree with Pritchett shooting a 68, and we'd really like to have a couple of scores like that Friday."

"I think Cooper played the toughest pre-district season of any team in the district," said Tayrien. "Temple is our only common opponent, and we both got beat by them. I look for a tough game out of Cooper."

ACCORDING TO Tayrien, tailback David Nowlin is another backfield player the Rebels have to be on the look out for, saying, "he's a good one. Of course, they've also got great speed at wide receiver in D.C. McDonald and Bill Dehlinger does a good job at quarterback and is a threat, not only running, but throwing the ball."

"They're making us check our hole card," countered Garrison. "We didn't stop Odessa High last week and this will be the second week in a row we've got to face the wishbone. We have to do a whole lot right this week."

Garrison also commented about Rankin without knowing the senior quarterback was doubtful. "Rankin is an excellent quarterback and (Dexter) Traylor, he caught two excellent passes last week. Shoot, we're in a whole lot of trouble. The best chance we've got is if their bus breaks down like it did in 1983. I guarantee, if the bus breaks down on the highway, we've got a chance."

Baseball

First baseman Don Mattingly of the Yankees was named the AL's player of the month for the second straight month, while Charlie Leibrandt of Kansas City captured the September pitching honor. Mattingly hit .325 with 11 homers and 37 RBIs. He struck out just seven times and had a slugging average of .684. Leibrandt, 4-1 with a 0.91 ERA in September, allowed just four earned runs in 39 2-3 innings...

San Francisco Giants owner Bob Lurie wants to move the team to Oakland next season, a decision that ends months of speculation about the club's future. Lurie said he has not discussed his plan with officials from the Oakland Coliseum, the Oakland A's or the city of San Francisco, but added that he anticipates no opposition...

Hiroshima Toyo Carp raked Rich Gale for five runs on seven hits in five innings and beat the Hanshin Tigers 6-3 in the Japanese League. Gale is 11-8 this season. Steve Ontiveros singled home a run to trigger a five-run first leading Seibu to a 5-2 victory over Nankai...

Football

Two Western Kentucky, Robin Phillips, 19, sophomore running back, and senior tackle Mike Scott, 21, were arrested and charged with trafficking in marijuana after police found a small amount of the drug in a dormitory room...

Rams quarterback Dieter Brock is the NFL Offensive Player of the Week after completing 16 of 20 passes for 215 yards and two TDs against Atlanta...

The Senior Bowl in Mobile, Ala., is seeking corporate sponsors for the first time in the bowl's 37-year history, citing dwindling revenues. Senior Bowl GM Eric Tillman said the cost of putting on the football game, popular with pro scouts, has risen faster than revenues from ticket sales and broadcasting rights...

Clovis (4A), Ruidoso (3A), Jal (2A) and Reserve (1A) are ranked No. 1 in the New Mexico high school poll....

Iowa running back Ronnie Harmon breaks out of tacklers grasp on way to touchdown and No. 1 ranking for the Hawkeyes, who hope to prove their worthiness of the ranking against Michigan State Saturday.

Fry's Hawkeyes pick over MSU

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Is this going to be another one of those college football seasons in which the No. 1 ranking is the kiss of death?

Iowa Coach Hayden Fry requested the voters in the Associated Press not to rank his Hawkeyes No. 1 after they walloped Iowa State 57-3 last Saturday. But sports writers and sportscasters being sports writers and sportscasters, they didn't listen.

So, for the first time in 24 years, Iowa is the No. 1-ranked team in the land. Its schedule, however, has been decidedly second-rate thus far — Drake, Northern Illinois and Iowa State went down by a combined score of 163-23. But the first two opponents were replacements for Miami of Florida and Kansas, which asked out of games with the Hawkeyes.

Fry called the schedule changes "very, very fortunate," adding: "I am not prepared to defend our ranking. I'm not prepared to defend our schedule. I go back and look at people who have won conference championships and national championships and their schedules are just dotted with people like we've been playing. This is not anything new."

What is new is Iowa's exalted ranking. As recently as 1980, the Hawkeyes held the major-college record of 19 consecutive non-winning seasons, since broken by Rice.

But George Perles, who brings his Michigan State team to Iowa City on Saturday, says that "Iowa, according to all the things I've seen, is well deserving of being the No. 1 team in the country."

Fry: "I can't say if we deserve it or not because of the differences in schedule. Some teams may have played a tougher schedule than we have. Some might not be ranked as high as they deserve to be right now."

The Hawkeyes are 17-point favorites over Michigan State, which obviously was looking ahead when it squeaked past Western Michigan 7-3 last week. The pick is . . . Iowa 28-7.

Last week's record was 36 right, 15 wrong and one tie for a percentage of .706; for the year, it's 142-58-5—.710. Against the spread, last week's score was 22-16—.579; on the year, 65-73-1—.471.

No. 2 Oklahoma (favored by 33) at Kansas State: The Sooners should breeze but K-State's defense makes the line a little too big . . . Oklahoma 30-3.

No. 3 Southern Methodist (by 6½) at Arizona: You can bet Arizona was looking ahead when it got stung by Colorado last week . . . SMU 21-14.

No. 5 Ohio State (by 2½) at Illinois: A small line for the 3-0 Buckeyes against the 1-2 Illini, whom Coach Mike White calls "a very poor football team right now" . . . Illinois 27-24.

Tulsa at No. 6 Oklahoma State (by 21): Forget the point spread when these folks tangle . . . Oklahoma State 24-14.

Wisconsin at No. 7 Michigan (by 14): Bo Schembechler said the Maryland game would tell how good the Wolverines are. After a 20-0 victory, he says of the seventh-place ranking, "We're probably not that good." Some snow from Bo . . . Michigan 24-7.

College Picks

No. 11 Florida (by 2) at No. 8 LSU: The Gators have got to be looking ahead to next week's long-awaited war with Tennessee, which helped strip them of their 1984 SEC championship . . . LSU 24-21.

No. 10 Arkansas (by 16) at Texas Christian: Jim Wacker, who suspended seven players for accepting money from boosters, obviously never met Abe Lemons, whose basketball teams didn't have a curfew "because it's always your star who gets caught" . . . Arkansas 35-14.

New Mexico at No. 13 Nebraska (by 45): Lobo Coach Joe Lee Dunn can hit a golf ball 190 yards with a pitching wedge, which won't help him against . . . Nebraska 56-7.

Mississippi at No. 14 Auburn (by 11½): This was the week for an upset with Auburn between Tennessee and Florida, but the Tigers already have been upset . . . Auburn 27-13.

No. 15 Brigham Young (by 23) at Colorado State: The Cougars start the quest for their 10th straight WAC title . . . BYU 38-17.

Wake Forest at No. 16 Tennessee (by 18): Wake catches the Vols between Auburn and Florida but it won't matter . . . Tennessee 35-13.

Notre Dame at No. 17 Air Force (by 6): No, this isn't a typographical error. The Falcons have beaten the Irish three years in a row. Who'd have ever thunk the Irish would be underdogs in the Upset Special of the Week . . . Notre Dame 30-24.

No. 19 Baylor (by 5) at Houston: The surprising Bears get caught looking ahead to SMU . . . Houston 27-20.

Rice at No. 20 Texas (by 25): A little bird — make that a little Owl — says Rice's Watson Brown may be the next coach at Vanderbilt . . . Texas 45-14.

Lurie wants to move...

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — San Francisco Giants owner Bob Lurie says he wants to temporarily relocate his team across the Bay in Oakland. The Oakland A's and Oakland Mayor Lionel Wilson, however, said Lurie hasn't received approval for such a move.

The A's organization and Wilson had sharp words for Lurie on Wednesday after the Giant owner and San Francisco Mayor Dianne Feinstein announced the intention to move the team while a new downtown stadium is being built in San Francisco.

"I don't think this idea makes any sense for Oakland," said Wilson, adding that Lurie and Feinstein showed "awfully poor judgment" in announcing the plans before consulting with him or the board of Oakland's Alameda County Coliseum.

The A's issued a statement Wednesday night saying team officials were willing to talk it over with the Giants, but so far had agreed to nothing.

Feinstein said at Wednesday's news conference that the plan was "a last-ditch effort to keep the team here." She said the plan called for Lurie to pay San Francisco "several million dollars" to buy out his lease at Candlestick Park, the Giants home since 1960.

The lease expires in 1994 but, Lurie said, "The San Francisco Giants will not, under my ownership, play at Candlestick Park beyond this season."

... no wonder

SAN FRANCISCO — The San Francisco Giants have lost their 98th game, tying the franchise record with four chances to set a new one. Only 1,213 fans turned out at Candlestick Park Wednesday to see the Houston Astros beat the Giants, 7-2. It was the smallest crowd since Sept. 17, 1975 when only 1,141 people showed up and the 12th smallest in the team's San Francisco history.

Not much of a crowd for a professional baseball game, but not bad for a high school fight night. So the spectators were provided with a brief display of fisticuffs. The benches cleared when Giants reliever Mike Jeffcoat hit John Mizerock with a pitch in the ninth.

Pirates 9, Cubs 4

Johnny Ray hit a three-run homer in the sixth inning to cap a four-run rally by Pittsburgh. Joe Oruslak had four of the Pirates' 15 hits and R.J. Reynolds had two RBI. Ryne Sandberg hit his 26th home run for Chicago. Rick Rhoden, 10-14, was the winner, and Rick Sutcliffe, 8-8, the loser.

Indians 12, Mariners 2

Mike Hargrove went 4-for-4, with three singles and a double, and Andre Thornton hit a two-run homer, his 22nd, for Cleveland, which collected 17 hits. Keith Creel, 2-5, allowed only five hits, struck out seven and walked none in eight innings.

Twins 3, White Sox 1

Minnesota's Frank Viola, 18-14, pitched a three-hitter to win his fifth consecutive game, striking out five and walking none for his fourth straight complete game and ninth of the season. Greg Walker hit his 24th homer for Chicago.

A's 14, Rangers 3

Mike Davis, Steve Henderson, Mike Heath and Steve Kiefer hit home runs as Bill Kreuger, 9-10, pitched a five-hitter for Oakland. Heath also had three singles, batted in two runs and scored three times as the A's pounded out 20 hits.

White-tail hunting outlook good

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Prospects for the white-tail deer season are good for most of Texas, according to Texas Parks and Wildlife Dept. officials, who say deer are numerous, antler development is good, and habitat conditions much better in most areas than a year ago.

In 1984-85, hunters took an all time high 373,000 whitetails, including more than 108,000 anterless deer.

"That kind of harvest will be difficult to match," says Horace Gore, of the TPWD, "Even with improved range conditions most areas have more deer than they can support.

Gore adds, "This year also is shaping up as an excellent one for deer, with the animals in excellent body condition, but favorable weather and resulting good range conditions may hold the harvest below last year's levels because the deer may not be moving around as much."

Gorse says prospects for hunter success will be better later in the season than in the first week or two. The season begins Nov. 9 and runs through Jan. 5 in most counties.

By areas, the outlook....

Edwards Plateau— The Hill Country west of Austin is the number one deer producer in the state and the Llano Basin boasts some of the highest deer densities in the nation. Last year's harvest of about 163,500, however, may not be matched this year because of less movement.

"The unusual thing about this year is the high number of mature deer in the population," says biologist Fielding Harwell.

Trans Pecos— Things could hardly look rosier in the rugged Trans-Pecos, Biologist Bill Russ said the mule deer herd, which had declined to an alarming degree three to four years ago, is on a vigorous rebound after two excellent fawn crops in succession. "We are seeing a lot more mule deer on our spotlight lines and that includes some real trophy bucks."

Russ said rainfall in the spring and summer have made the usually arid terrain fairly lush with vegatation.

High Plains— Hunting in the Texas Panhandle may be one of the state's best kept secrets. "People in other parts of Texas may not realize it, but the Panhandle has some areas of high white-tailed deer densities. We also have a lot of mule deer, especially in the Palo Duro Canyon and Canadian River areas," says David Dvorak, TPWD biologist.

Cross Timbers and Praries and Rolling Plains— Roughly bordered by Jacksboro, Abilene and Big Spring on the north and San Angelo and Goldthwaite to the south and Waco and Fort Worth to the east, body condition and antler development are much improved over last year. Biologist Larry Holland says "range conditions have been excellent in most of our areas this year, and fawn production and survival have been outstanding." He said the abundance of acorns and and pecans for deer feed may keep the harvest down because the deer won't have to move far to eat.

COOLER weather changed patterns at Lake E.V. Spence with an increasing number of crappie showing up in reports, along with blue and channel catfish. The big ones, however, continued to be striped bass, the largest 18½ pounds by R.L. Flanagan, Robert Lee. John Casassa, Andrews, took a 15-pound, 11 ouncer....

At Oak Creek Lake, crappie fishing, according to Ike Pate, proprietor of Sportsman's Lodge, "is as good as we have seen here in a number of years with strings of 15 to 25 fish rather comming and the weight going between The brush reef built a few months ago, located between inlands, is one of the better places on the lake to catch these crappie."

J.L. Gregston, Midland, was one of the more successful crappie fishermen with 30 per day in the brush reef...in the Sweetwater Bass Club tournament, Jack Hazard took first place with 5-0 and 4-15 bass for a total of nine pounds, 15 ounces....

Fishing rods come long way

By BRUCE LEE SMITH
Valley Morning Star

PORT MANSFIELD (AP) — The fishing rods Guy Bailey makes are a long way from a piece of string, a hook and a bamboo pole.

"Fishing poles are getting a lot more sophisticated," he said. "They don't give the fish much of chance anymore."

Bailey, 47, crafts his rods into one-of-a-kind treasures for sports fishermen. His store, Thread Art, is lined with poles for Gulf, bay or bass fishing.

His most intricate work can be found just above the handle. In the space before the first eye on the pole, Bailey weaves or wraps thread to make designs.

The designs vary in color and complexity. They can be anything from a name to a boat with a fish on the line.

Bailey moved to the Valley in 1969. He used to live in Houston where he was a saucier for the Houston Country Club.

"I was in the business world, and I wanted to get out of it," he said, "so I decided to go fishing."

Bailey worked as a commercial fisherman until state fishing regulations changed in 1981. He began building fishing rods at home. By 1983, his business had become so good that he started building a store.

In 1984, Bailey built approximately 400 fishing poles. This year, he is building an average of 10 poles a week.

"Rod building is basically simple if a person has the patience," he said. "That's where most people lose out working on their own rods — they just don't have the patience to work with thread."

A pole usually takes Bailey five days to complete, and he is often working on 20 at a time. He will work on one pole's design for 30 minutes, then dry the coating or put the eyes on other poles.

By not working on the intricate designs for extended periods of time, he avoids straining his eyes.

"If I just sat here weaving these designs all day, my eyes wouldn't last three or four days," he said.

Bailey helps customers select the type of rod they need for the fishing they plan.

"Surprisingly, there is no such thing as a universal fishing pole," he said.

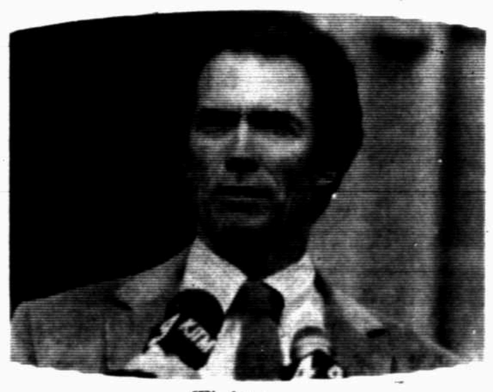

A rod minus the handles and eyes is called a blank. Bailey works with fiberglass, graphite and boron blanks. Out of 10 blanks, a fisherman may only like the feel or flexibility of one of them. After a blank is selected, a design is decided on.

"Most of the time people let me do what I want. They give me a basic design and let me do my thing," he said.

Dollar rises

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar posted modest gains early today against all key European currencies in quiet trading after steep losses earlier in the week. Gold prices were mixed.

Other dollar rates at midmorning, compared with late Wednesday:

—2.6465 West German marks, up from 2.6440

—2.16375 Swiss francs, up from 2.1490

—8.0775 French francs, up from 8.0450

—2.9815 Dutch guilders, up from 2.9675

—1,788.00 Italian lire, up from 1,780.00

—1.3670 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3650.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $324.60 a troy ounce, down from $324.70 bid late Wednesday.

At midmorning Thursday, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $324.35.

In Zurich, the bid price was $324.75, up from $320.20 bid late Wednesday.

Economic worries prompt lower sales expectations

Home sales down; factory orders up

Associated Press

Business leaders' expectations for sales, profits and employment in the final three months of the year have slipped since the third quarter because of worries over the sluggish economy, a new poll says.

In addition, the departments of Commerce and Housing and Urban Development reported sales of new, single-family homes in August hit a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 705,000. That followed a 5.5 percent increase in sales during July, a figure the report revised upward from an original 1.4 percent decrease.

The government also reported that orders to U.S. factories increased a modest 0.9 percent during August to $197.5 billion.

The business leaders' poll released Wednesday by Dun & Bradstreet Corp. said expectations for the quarter were near a two-year low. But the business information company said the expectation level was still relatively high compared with recent years.

Expectations among 1,400 executives polled Aug. 12-23 about improvement in sales, inventories, employment, profits and prices generally all had decreased since the third-quarter poll, D&B said.

Many U.S. businesses have been reluctant to build inventories because of fears they might not be able to sell their products in the face of competition from imports. And many private analysts have said they expect the nation's huge trade deficit to keep the economy restrained in the final months of this year.

The nation's continued trade problems, and protectionist legislation being considered on Capitol Hill, were targeted by a package of trade proposals the Reagan administration plans to submit to Congress in the next several days.

U.S. Trade Representative Clayton Yeutter said Wednesday the plan was intended to open more foreign markets and give lawmakers "something positive to rally around" rather than simply seeking defeat of the protectionist bills.

The package would include provisions for opening more foreign markets to U.S. telecommunications equipment as well as strengthening existing trade laws, cracking down on trademark and copyright infringement and speeding up the trade dispute resolution process, he said.

Yeutter discussed the trade package at a meeting of the American Business Conference in Washington, D.C., as the Senate began debating a bill to further restrict textile and shoe imports. Yeutter repeated President Reagan's intention to veto the bill if Congress passed it.

Also Wednesday, Reagan announced the formation of a "trade strike force" for creating a battle plan against unfair foreign trading practices. Formation of the task force followed a promise he made in his Sept. 23 trade speech. It will be headed by Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldridge.

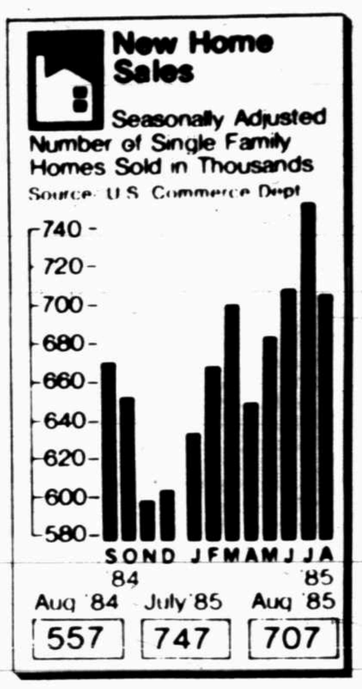

Meanwhile, analysts downplayed a government report that new home sales in August dropped 5.6 percent from their 1985 peak in July.

Analysts said the August decline was not disconcerting because sales during June through August still ran 6.4 percent ahead of the previous quarter and lower mortgage rates probably will keep housing demand strong.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said the sales figures combined with a low supply of unsold homes indicated active residential construction in the coming months.

Also, the government reported that orders to U.S. factories rose slightly in August. The rise, which partially offset a 1.2 percent drop in July, was restrained by a temporary drop in demand for food products, according to some analysts.

And although some analysts had expected a larger rise in factory orders, a healthy 3.6 percent increase in orders for non-defense capital goods seemed to indicate greater spending for business expansion and modernization in the near future, they said.

Chrysler Corp. cutting 1986 auto prices

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp.'s announcement of a 2.7 percent average rise in prices for 1986 cars finishes a round of Detroit price hikes that amount to as much as $2,000 on some models.

But within days of marking up their sticker prices, automakers began offering goodies like extra options and warranties that cut into the increases. And market analysts say that in a few weeks, cut-rate financing and rebates may reappear and negate most of the increases.

"It's conceivable we'll see a return to incentives by the end of the month," Harvey Heinbach, an automotive industry analyst at Merrill Lynch in New York, said Wednesday.

Chrysler Corp. announced its prices Wednesday, following General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co., which earlier announced rises of 3 percent and 2.9 percent, respectively. American Motors Corp. raised its prices an average 2.4 percent.

That puts 1986-model prices up to $2,000 above those of 1985 models sold in late August and in September during Detroit's financing and rebate war.

But hidden cuts in real car prices are coming the way of consumers, in the form of more free-of-charge options and warranties.

In recent days, GM has announced it would expand engine and drivetrain warranties of three years/36,000 miles from a few cars to all its nearly three dozen lines. Ford said it would begin selling optional equipment in cost-saving packages.

Even with incentives, prices are not what they used to be. The average retail price paid for a car in 1970 was $3,430, according to industry journal Automotive News. A year ago, it was $11,100. The prices include options that buyers have been adding to their cars at brisk rates.

Pickens wants to up natural gas prices

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — The primary reason Mesa Petroleum Co. wants to drill more wells in the vast Hugoton field in southwest Kansas is so it can charge more for the natural gas it recovers, maverick oilman T. Boone Pickens said Wednesday.

Pickens, Mesa president and board chairman, said his company wants to take advantage of Natural Gas Policy Act regulations that allow companies to charge higher unregulated prices for gas from new wells.

"The federal government is giving you a chance to upgrade the value of the Kansas natural resources, which you did not have before," he said.

Since July, the Kansas Corporation Commission has been having hearings on changing the spacing of wells in the Hugoton from the current one well per 640-acre unit to two wells per unit.

State conservation statutes require the companies proposing the new wells, including Mesa, to show the field can't be effectively and efficiently drained without additional wells. Proponents claim as much as 8 trillion cubic feet of gas that can't be reached by existing wells would be recovered by infill wells.

Opponents of infill drilling, including several utilities and pipeline companies, claim existing wells eventually will drain the gas in the field. They claim the move is a ruse to raise natural gas prices.

Current Hugoton prices average about 50 cents per thousand cubic feet, according to KCC figures. Infill opponents say infill well gas could sell for as much as $3 per thousand cubic feet.

J.D. Steelman of Tulsa, an attorney for infill opponent Northwest Central Pipeline Co., said it sounded like Pickens was acknowledging price as the primary motivation for Mesa's support of infill drilling.

"It's certainly consistent with what we've been saying is behind it," he said.

T. Boone Pickens

Tom Taylor, spokesman for infill opponent KPL Gas Service Co., said Pickens' statement is proof of "a scheme by the producers to get a higher price for exactly the same gas."

"That simply confirms what our argument has been all along," Taylor said.

Brian Moline, KCC general counsel, said the testimony and arguments before the commission have concerned whether the field is being effectively and efficiently drained by existing wells. But he said the proponents wouldn't have filed the application for infill unless they were planning on getting the price reclassification.

Moline said infill opponents wouldn't be fighting against the application so hard i they didn't fear the impact of the higher prices.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Officials approve voting trust for Frontier

HOUSTON (AP) — The U.S. Department of Transportation approved Texas Air's application for approval of a voting trust for Frontier Holdings Inc. common stock, Texas Air officials said Wednesday.

The Texas Air is offering to buy seven million shares of Frontier Airlines stock at $20 per share. Frontier has 11,629,780 shares of common stock oustanding and 1,016,785 shares reserved for issuance, Texas Air officials said.

An Frontier employee coalition has made an offer for a stock buyout plan of $17 a share.

Texas Air officials said it will, subject to approval by RKO Enterprises of Ohio Inc., purchase its tendered shares. RKO Enterprises owns a large share of Frontier stock. Texas Air will buy the stock if RKO Enterprises agrees to retain at least one and one-half million shares of Frontier common stock until Texas Air receives approval to take control of Frontier, officials said.

Texas Air officials also said it would extend the present Oct. 18, 1985, expiration date of its offer to buy stock from Frontier Airlines employees.

Unilever NV drops Vicks takeover attempt

WILTON, Conn. (AP) — Unilever NV has dropped its attempt to take over Richardson-Vicks Inc., saying the company is not worth the $69 per share Procter & Gamble Co. intends to pay for it under the terms of a friendly merger.

Unilever also said Wednesday it was dropping court action against the company's takeover defenses.

Unilever had offered $60 a share for Richardson-Vicks if the takeover were approved by the Richardson-Vicks board of directors, and $48 a share if not.

Revlon weighs sweetened offer from Pantry

NEW YORK (AP) — Revlon Inc. said Wednesday its directors are weighing a liquidation or leveraged buyout of the company against a sweetened $1.5 billion takeover offer from Pantry Pride Inc.

Revlon said another company, whom it identified only as a "major U.S. corporation," also is ready to discuss a takeover of the cosmetics and health-care concern.

Revlon said Wednesday that its directors met for an hour Tuesday night to consider the proposals, but took no action. It urged Revlon's shareholders to "not make any decisions with their Revlon investment pending further advice from the Revlon board."

No date has yet been set for the next board meeting, Revlon said.

More demands on Palo Verde may hurt plant

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (AP) — Company officials say any more demands made on El Paso Electric to reduce the economic impact of the Palo Verde Nuclear Generating Station will bankrupt the utility.

"We literally are on the brink of bankruptcy with these plans," said Bill Bostic, executive vice president of EPEC. "One more penalty and we'll go."

EPEC officials say four or five rate-moderation plans currently under study seem to be acceptable, but each imposes severe penalties in attempting to lessen the effect of the utility's $1.5 billion investment in Palo Verde on New Mexico ratepayers.

Palo Verde, located 50 miles west of Phoenix, Ariz., is co-owned by utilities in Arizona, California, New Mexico and Texas.

Textile bill survives Senate battle

WASHINGTON (AP) — Toughened trade legislation to aid the import-battered textile, shoe and apparel industries has survived the opening round of its Senate floor battle but now faces a filibuster threat.

"It's going to be close," Sen. Dan Evans, R-Wash., said Wednesday after textile forces declared they would move to choke off his filibuster in advance next week and push for an early vote on the textile bill.

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., and other textile lawmakers moved Wednesday night to curtail a filibuster immediately but backed off when GOP Leader Robert Dole of Kansas warned that their timing was wrong.

That skirmish came after the Senate, in its first floor vote of the year on a major import measure, defeated 53-42 a move by Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, to kill the textile bill, currently the focus of the debate in Congress over the nation's skyrocketing trade deficit.

A similar measure is moving toward a floor vote in the House.

The measure has been the target of veto warnings from the White House, which blasts it as guaranteed to disrupt world markets and set off retaliation against U.S. products abroad. Supporters call it the only way to save domestic industries from imports that have cost 300,000 American jobs in five years.

Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., told reporters Wednesday he now believes President Reagan would sign the Senate version of the measure, which recently was redrafted to win new support.

Hollings said "a very highly reputable executive of the textile industry" told him he was on hand for a meeting at which Reagan indicated he might sign the measure "if we took care of China." He declined to name the businessman. The White House said it could not confirm the report.

"As of this evening, we remain opposed to the bill — that's all I can tell you," White House spokesman Rusty Brashear said.

The re-draft, unveiled by Thurmond last week, removed China and eight other nations from a list of countries that would take the brunt of import rollbacks required by the bill. The earlier draft applied only to textile goods and apparel but the new version adds shoe and luggage quotas.

Action on the textile issue opened when Thurmond moved to harness it to an obscure pact to revise U.S. ties to the Marshall Islands and the Pacific atolls of Micronesia. Before voting on McClure's move to table, or kill, the measure, the Senate defeated 87-9 an effort by Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., to junk it in favor of still another plan.

Hollings, speaking for nearly two hours, argued for the tightened quotas, saying Japan has used "state of the art protectionism" to block U.S. goods while "we run around like ninnies saying, free trade, free trade, free trade."

"We're not bashing Japan," Hollings declared. "We're bashing Washington. Washington, wake up. There's no free trade, there's no fair trade. There's competitive trade ... We have a real, red-hot trade war."

Free-trade senators struck back. "This would force the Third World into bankruptcy, and we're going to produce a financial crisis such as this world has never known," said Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas. He said uneven treatment of Asian nations under the measure "shows the dirty underwear of the whole process."

After the bill survived its key test vote, Hollings told Dole that textile forces wanted an immediate vote on attaching it to the Micronesian pact. But the GOP leader said the time had arrived to shelve it temporarily in favor of urgent legislation to raise the ceiling on the national debt "so the government can pay its bills."

House skeptical of upgraded OSHA plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration says it is toughening its inspection of U.S. chemical plants, but the chief House overseer of workplace safety is taking a show-me attitude.

"I've seen a lot of inspections and concepts come around," says Rep. Joseph Gaydos, D-Pa., chairman of the Education and Labor subcommittee on health and safety.

"None of them have worked," he said Wednesday after the new inspection plan was outlined by Patrick R. Tyson, acting head of the Occupational Safety and Health Administration. "The same old malarkey is going to be served up."

The pilot program announced by Tyson represents a sharp departure for OSHA, which has been criticized for generally making inspections only in the wake of worker complaints or industrial disasters.

Tyson said that rather than waiting for trouble to find OSHA, the agency will be sending inspectors into about 80 of the nation's 11,000 chemical plants in the coming year to check facilities and procedures used to make the most hazardous substances.

He said if the pilot program is successful, it will be expanded to other areas of the chemical industry, which was pushed into the public spotlight last December when at least 2,000 people were killed by methyl isocyanate gas escaping from a Union Carbide plant in Bhopal, India.

"The focus (of the new program) will be on prevention of future hazards as well as discovery of existing ones," Tyson told the hearing, called to look into the Aug. 11 leak of aldicarb oxime from a Union Carbide plant at Institute, W.Va.

"Inspections ... will pay particular attention to safety processes in order to assess the adequacy of those processes in preventing and containing spills and leaks," Tyson said.

OIL & GAS REPORT

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Howard strike pumps 265 barrels

From Staff Reports

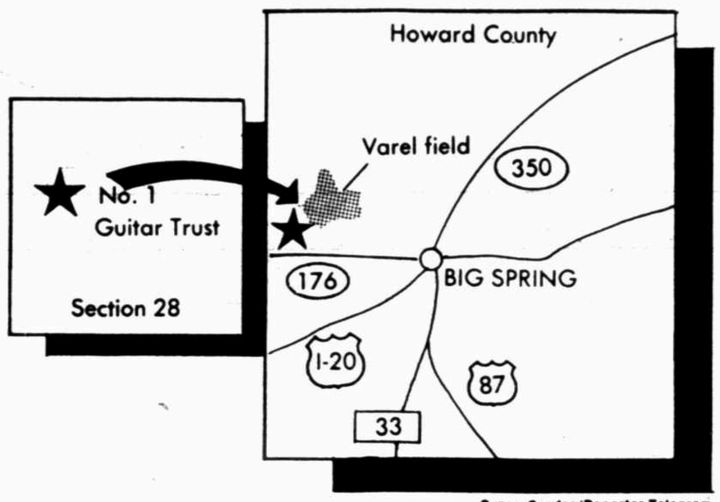

UNION TEXAS PETROLEUM CORP., Midland, has completed a high gravity Fusselman discovery in Howard County, approximately a half-mile west of production in the Varel field.

The No. 1 Guitar Trust tested to pump 265 barrels of 58 gravity crude, 12 Mcfd and three barrels of water through perforations 10,450 to 10,469 ft. The production interval was acidized with 2,800 gallons of 15 percent HCL acid. Gas-oil ratio is 45:1.

Scheduled as an 11,500 ft. test, Union Texas drilled the well to 10,469 ft., with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 10,450 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 2,525 ft., include the Fusselman at 10,455 ft., Woodford at 10,352, Lower Mississippian at 10,120, and the Upper Mississippian at 9,940 ft. Pay was topped at 10,333 ft.

Location is 3,300 ft. from south and 900 ft. from west lines of Section 28, Block A, Bauer & Cockrell survey, 15 miles northwest of Big Spring.

Bone Springs strike tested for 39 barrels

Eddy County gained a Bone Spring discovery, slightly east of the Mesquite and south of the Tamano fields with completion of HARVEY E. YATES No. 1 Mesquite "3" with re-entry of an abandoned Pennzoil Co. well.

The well potentialed to pump 39 barrels of 38 gravity crude and 65 barrels of water through perforations 7,723 to 7,935 ft., which had been acidized with 5,000 gallons of 7.5 percent acid and fractured with 150,000 gallons of frac and 400,000 lbs. sand.

The well was re-entered and cleaned out to 13,106 ft. and plugged back to 8,296 ft., with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 12,016 ft.

Pay was topped at 7,723 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from north and west lines of Section 3, T18s, R31e. Ground elevation is 3,752 ft.

Yates re-entered the Pennzoil No. 1 Federal "A", which had been plugged at a depth of 13,106 ft.

Pecos County field gains Wolfcamp well

The Chenot field of Pecos County gained a Wolfcamp gas producer with completion of RKG ENGINEERING, INC., Odessa, No. 6 El Wedo "A".

The well tested for a calculated absolute open flow of 4.05 Mmcfd through perforations 4,756 to 4,975 ft., which had been acidized with 3,000 gallons of 15 percent acid.

Drilled to 5,849 ft., the well was plugged back to 5,538 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 5,581 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 2,974 ft., include the Queen at 1,570 ft., Wichita Albany at 4,415, Wolfcamp at 4,940, and the Granite Wash at 5,750 ft. Pay was topped at 4,756 ft.

Location is 2,640 ft. from north and 1,350 ft. from east lines of Section 76, Block 11, H&GN survey, 11 miles southwest of Girvin.

Tenneco to create artifical reef

HOUSTON-(SWN)-One of the largest artificial reefs on the east coast is being created by Tenneco Oil Exploration and Production.

Retired oil and gas production platforms will be placed in the Atlantic Ocean between Fort Lauderdale and Miami to increase fish populations and the diversity of marine life in the area to benefit sport fishermen and divers. The platforms will be submerged October 3, approximately 1.5 miles offshore near the Broward/Dade county line.

The new reef is the second established by Tenneco Oil offshore Florida. The first, also a complete platform, is 22 miles southeast of Pensacola. Local charter boat operators report that it began producing excellent fishing almost immediately after its installation in September 1982.

"We have shown with our initial reef that these platforms not only concentrate existing fish but attract additional species and increase the overall production of the marine ecosystem, which improve fishing in the areas," said Philip Oxley, president of Tenneco Oil Exploration and Production.

In addition to the reef, Oxley said his company and an affiliate-Tenneco Oil Processing and Marketing-will fund a $25,000 grant to a Florida university to determine the ecological benefit of the south Florida reef.

Endevco expanding gas treating capacity

DALLAS (SWN) — Endevco, Inc. has announced the expansion of its Gun Point Gas Treating Plant in DeWitt County, Texas. The plant, which presently consists of three parallel units with a combined gas treating capacity of 80 million cubic feet of gas per day, is being expanded to include a fourth unit, bringing the plant's total treating capacity to 110 million cubic feet of gas per day. The fourth unit is expected to be in service by November 15, 1985.

Carr resigns as Roberts Oil head

HOUSTON-(SWN)-Leonard Carr, former chairman and president of Oxoco, Inc., has resigned as a director of Roberts Oil & Gas, Inc. of Houston.

Earl Roberts, president and chief executive officer of Roberts Oil & Gas, said Carr's resignation, which is effective immediately, was for personal reasons. Roberts said there are no immediate plans to name a replacement for Carr on the company's board.

After six years of dormancy, Three Mile Island restarts today

MIDDLETOWN, Pa. (AP) — The restart of Three Mile Island's Unit 1 began today as technicians pulled control rods from the reactor that has been dormant for 6½ years since the worst U.S. commercial nuclear accident occurred at the adjacent Unit 2, officials said.

A U.S. Supreme Court ruling Wednesday cleared the way for operators to create a self-sustaining nuclear chain-reaction for the first time since 1979.

Sixteen people were arrested when 45 anti-nuclear power activists responded to the Supreme Court action with a protest at the plant's main gate.

In an 80-minute process that began at 4:28 a.m. today, technicians lifted most of the eight sets of control rods out of the reactor, said Doug Bedell, spokesman for GPU Nuclear Corp., the plant's operator.

At 5:50 a.m., technicians began a slow process of drawing out cooling water laced with boron, a chemical that inhibits the nuclear reaction, and replacing it with pure water. With the control rods out and the boron reduced, neutrons move more freely and hit more atoms.

A self-sustaining reaction, known as "going critical," was to be reached sometime after 2 p.m., plant spokesman Gordon Tomb said.

Outside, in the early-morning darkness, mist and fog shrouded the plant and its trademark twin cooling towers. There was no sign that the dormant reactor was rising from over six years of enforced slumber. A train could be heard in the distance. The only other sound was crickets.

Technicians won't push the reactor too fast, Tomb said. It will stay at 0.001 percent of power for about a week, then go to 15 percent and take three months to reach full power.

"It's a very sobering time to be at," said Bedell. "This is just the beginning of the period in which we must show we can run the plant safely, like we said we would."

Unit 1 was not affected by the March 1979 accident, when Unit 2 lost its cooling shield of water and nuclear fuel melted, releasing radiation into the environment. Unit 1, which later required extensive repairs to corroded heat exchange tubes, has been in "hot standby" status since early June.

The plant could produce some power by the middle of next week and be at 100 percent of its capacity in three months, Bedell said.

Operators plan to begin removing fuel from the damaged Unit 2, closed since the accident, later this month. Plant officials have estimated that the cleanup will take two years.

After the accident, the former operators, Metropolitan Edison Co., pleaded guilty to one count of filing false safety tests at Unit 2 in the months before and entered a number of no contest pleas.

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission followed the Supreme Court action by issuing the first of two necessary authorizations to restart the reactor, he said. The final authorization, from NRC regional administrator Thomas Murley, was expected today.

Hours after the court lifted a stay on restart, about 45 chanting protesters marched in a chilly drizzle on the main gate. Sixteen were charged with blocking a utility right of way when they refused to budge from the locked gate. They were released and face fines and costs of $73, police said.

At least four protesters had to be dragged away by state troopers.

"You know God will judge you, don't make faces. God will judge you," Elizabeth Chavey, 62, of Middletown, said with tears streaming down her face to a TMI employee behind the gate.

The Supreme Court voted 8-1 to lift the stay, rejecting an emergency request from TMI Alert, which said a restart was too risky without additional hearings on plant management.

The ruling does not preclude the possibility the justices will agree to hear the group's appeal of the NRC's decision in May to allow the restart. The stay was in effect while TMI Alert pressed its case in lower courts.

EPA may seek to regulate butadiene

WASHINGTON (AP) — A chemical widely used in manufacturing synthetic rubbers and plastics for tires, automobile and appliance parts and non-metal piping may soon come under government regulations as both an occupational hazard and a cancer-causing air pollutant.

The Environmental Protection Agency announced Wednesday that it intends to list 1,3-butadiene as a hazardous carcinogen under the Clean Air Act.

The agency also notified the Occupational Safety and Health Administration that the chemical may be causing up to 23 cancer cases a year among employees in the synthetic rubber and plastics industry who work with it daily.

EPA spokesman Chris Rice said most of the health risks, both to workers and the general public, come from the production of the chemical and in polymerizing it to produce tires, synthetic fibers and high-impact plastics for pipe and automobile and appliance parts.

"Workplace exposures ... present an unreasonable risk of injury," EPA said in its formal notice to OSHA.

Aside from the occupational exposure, EPA estimated that industrial sources pour 5,200 metric tons of 1,3-butadiene into the atmosphere each year.

As a result, officials said, a person living near one of those sources and exposed to the maximum possible annual levels could expect a 30 percent increase in the chances of having cancer over a 70-year lifetime.

"This risk is expected to be borne by a very small number of individuals ... whereas most people are expected to be exposed to much lower lower levels and therefore much lower risks," Rice said.

Even so, the agency's computer calculations indicate the air-polluting emissions of 1,3-butadiene may be causing 19 non-occupational cancer cases a year nationwide.

EPA estimated that 1 million metric tons of the chemical were produced in the United States in 1983 and another 2.6 million metric tons were imported.

Rice said EPA may take action on its own to regulate the use of the chemical in the workplace if OSHA does nothing in the next six months. He estimated it would take another four years before regulations are actually in place to reduce air-polluting emissions by industry.

EPA now regulates only seven substances as air pollutants — among them asbestos, mercury, vinyl chloride, benzene and radionuclides.

Prior to Wednesday's action and after much prodding by Congress, the agency in the past nine months has proposed adding chromium, carbon tetrachloride, chloroform and ethylene oxide to that list.

Chihuahua Tectonic Belt to be discussed at WTGS meeting

Tim Berge

Tim Berge will be the speaker at the luncheon meeting of the West Texas Geological Society on Tuesday, October 8th. His talk is entitled "Structural Evolution of the Northern Chihuahua Tectonic Belt."

Berge received his BS degree in 1976 from the University of Wisconsin, Madison and his MA degree in 1981 from the University of Texas, Austin. He worked the Austin chalk play as a mudlogger and consultant prior to receiving his MA at the University of Texas. Since 1981, he has worked for Exxon Co., USA, Western Division, Exploration Department in Englewood, Colorado, primarily as an interpreter in the "overthrust" areas of Utah, Wyoming, Idaho and Montana and lately in the "foreland uplift" areas of Wyoming, including the Wind River Basin. He is a member of AAPG, SEG, WTGS, DGS and RMAG.

The portion of the Chihuahua Tectonic Belt that lies within the U.S. is 300 miles long, extending from El Paso to Presidio. The frontal thrusts of the Chihuahua Tectonic Belt lie against the Diablo Platform and are coincident with part of the Texas lineament.

The stratigraphic sequence involved in thrusting ranges in age from permian to upper cretaceous. Low angle thrusts mapped from seismic data form a decollement in permian evaporites near the Malone and Northern Quitman Mountains. The exposed permian rocks display source-reservoir relationships similar to productive facies in the Delaware Basin. Along the frontal part of the belt south of the Quitman caldera decollement on jurassic evaporites is widespread.

Stratigraphic analysis of the Jurassic Malone Formation demonstrates that it is a fan-delta system resulting from early jurassic normal faulting. This event may be correlated with the opening of the Gulf of Mexico and formation of the Chihuahua Trough, beginning in late triassic. The Chihuahua Tectonic Belt includes the rocks deposited in the Chihuahua Trough and later deformed during laramide events. The inferred sequence of tectonic events is:

- Late triassic — early jurassic normal faulting and formation of the Chihuahua Trough
- Laramide folding and thrusting
- Basin-and-range faulting

The meeting will begin at 11:30 am. at Midland Center, 105 N. Main and the cost is $7.00. Reservations should be made by calling the Society at 683-1573 before 4:00 pm. on Friday, October 4.

Texas Mid-Continent Oil & Gas Association meeting begins today

AUSTIN — Between 500 and 600 petroleum industry leaders and their guests are expected to gather Thursday morning at the Westin Hotel in Dallas' Galleria for the beginning of the 66th Annual Meeting of Texas Mid-Continent Oil & Gas Association.

Guest speakers for the Friday morning general session include Dr. Kenneth Lay of Houston, president of HGN/Internorth Inc., a diversified energy company; Richard Fisher, president of the New York securities firm of Morgan Stanley Group, Inc. and Lawrence Rawl, new president of Exxon Corp. of New York, the nation's largest industrial concern.

J.C. Walter, Jr., of Houston, chairman of the Association and president of the oil and gas company that bears his name, will lead off the Friday session at 9:30 am. with the traditional report to the membership on the activities of the Association during 1985, as well as look at recent developments within the industry.

Registration for the meeting will begin Thursday at 8:00 am. and continue throughout the day. Committees and subcommittees of the Association will begin meeting Thursday morning. After a reception and buffet luncheon for registrants and guests at noon, committee meetings will resume at 2:00 pm.

Chairman and Mrs. Walter will be honored Thursday at 7:00 pm. with a reception, buffet dinner, and entertainment.

The 50th annual Distinguished Service Awards Luncheon, scheduled to begin at noon Friday, will conclude the meeting in the traditional manner. The highest honor bestowed by the Texas petroleum industry will be awarded this year to A.V. Jones, Jr., Albany independent operator, and Rawleigh Warner, Jr., chairman of the board of directors and chief executive officer of Mobil Corp., New York.

This convention is the only annual gathering which hosts persons engaged in all phases of industry activity in the nation's No. 1 energy-producing and processing state. The membership of Texas Mid-Continent includes independent oil and gas operators, executives of all the major energy companies operating in Texas, and other persons with an interest in petroleum industry activities.

TRA set to have second meeting

The Texas Restaurant Association will hold its second meeting at the Ector County Coliseum in Barn A at 7:00 pm. on October 8, 1985.

Guest speakers will be Anthony Duggan of the Pelican Restaurant in El Paso, and Kent Hughes of the TRA in Austin. Duggan will discuss the restaurant business trends of West Texas. Hughes will discuss the new TRA computer network in relation to restaurant personnel, cuisine and services.

Sid Clark of Catfish Station will cater the meeting. Cost will be $10.00 per person. A brief announcement session will be held by Leon Vandergriff, current President of the local Permian Basin chapter of the TRA, to inform the members about the new membership drive to be led by Keith Shoates of Austin.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Rollover IRAs sheltered until withdrawal made

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I am in the process of a career change. During 22 years of employment with a major corporation, I was in a special pension fund. On leaving that company, I will receive $30,000 from that fund. Where would you advise me to invest that money? I have been considering bank certificates of deposit and money market deposit accounts.

My objective is to accumulate assets for a comfortable living when I retire in 25 years.

Doyle

A. It's likely that the $30,000 qualifies to be put into a rollover IRA. Assuming that's that case, you definitely should do just that with it.

By placing the money in a rollover IRA, you won't have to pay income tax on the $30,000. That money, as well as everything it earns in interest and/or dividends, will remain sheltered from tax until you start making withdrawals after you retire.

If you have the opportunity to go the IRA route and pass it up, you'll be making a big financial mistake. You have 60 days after receiving money from a qualified retirement fund to place it in a rollover IRA.

You can have your rollover IRA, or a regular IRA, at a bank, savings and loan association, mutual fund, insurance company or brokerage firm.

Because you want to build a fund for retirement two and a half decades from now, there's no sense in putting your money into a money market deposit account or some similar thing paying relatively low interest.

If you want to avoid all risk, you should consider long-term CDs, which pay higher interest. If you're certain you're not going to touch the money until retirement, put it into zero coupon bonds due to mature in the year 2010. You'll get an even better yield.

You have a multitude of other choices. In your shoes, I'd put at least part of that $30,000 into a growth stock mutual fund or individual growth stocks through a self-directed IRA at a brokerage house. That, of course, would involve some risk, which you might not want to take.

• • •

Q. My husband, 66, has had a massive stroke. He has individual retirement accounts in money market mutual funds and certificates of deposit. This money must be made available to pay medical bills. How can it be obtained, without great penalties?

A. There needn't be any penalties.

Anyone 59 1/2 or older or who is permanently disabled can withdraw money from his or her IRA without paying a tax penalty. If IRA withdrawals are made before age 59 1/2 or total disability, there is a 10 percent tax penalty.

Of course, regardless of age or health, regular income tax must be paid on all IRA withdrawals.

There is never any penalty for withdrawals from money market mutual funds. You can take money out of those funds on any business day, just as you can from a money market deposit account at a bank or savings and loan association.

The CDs can be a slightly different story. Banks and S&Ls are not required to levy early withdrawal penalties on money taken out of IRA CDs before maturity if the IRA participant is 59 1/2 or older or is disabled. However, some banks and S&Ls do lay on that charge.

If the bank or S&L at which your husband has his IRA CDs refuses to waive the early withdrawal penalty, that institution is being run by very hard-nosed individuals.

• • •

Q. I am 76 years young and working full time. My husband is retired. We both collect Social Security. May I open an individual retirement account, thereby reducing our income taxes?

A. You can, only if your husband is under 70 1/2. If that's the case, you can open a spousal IRA and contribute $2,000 a year for your husband. You can't put money in an IRA for you because you're past 70 1/2.

Congress created IRAs as "retirement" vehicles. You can put money in during what are considered normal working years. Then, after age 70 1/2, you're required to start taking money out — and pay income taxes on the withdrawals.

STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE℠

HOW TO USE STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE

1. Call the StockQuote Hotline number listed below. A computer voice will answer and ask you for the Account Code.
2. Enter the Account Code, then depress the star key (*) on your telephone. The computer will then ask you to enter your Stock Code.
3. Enter the Stock Code for the stock you wish quoted, the computer will quote the Ticker Symbol, Current Price and Net Change from the previous day's close.
4. After the stock is quoted, the computer will ask you to enter another Stock Code. You have two options.

A. You may request the quote for another stock simply by repeating Step 3, or...

B. You may request additional information on the stock just quoted by once more depressing the star key (*) in which case the computer will respond with the Price, Net Change, Volume, High and Low. The computer will then ask you to enter another Stock Code (repeat Step 3).

You may enter up to 10 requests per call.

STOCK CODES

All Stock Codes are based on industry standard Ticker Symbols provided by your broker or available from any Standard & Poor's Stock Ticker Guide. Codes are made up of a series of two-digit numbers, each representing one of the letters in the Ticker Symbol.

To determine the two-digit code for any letter of a Ticker Symbol, remember: The first key to be depressed is always the one on which the letter appears. The second key is always a "1," "2" or "3" indicating that letter's position on its own key (first, second or third position). EXAMPLE: "IBM"="43 22 61"; "BX"= "22 92." Remember to depress the star key (*) after entering each code.

ADDITIONAL ASSISTANCE

Call the StockQuote customer service number (915) 682-5311 (Monday thru Friday 8 a.m. - 5 p.m.) for additional information or to report any problem with the service.

HRC awake to needs

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Rita Jimenez

The Human Relations Council is getting back on its feet again after going to the edge of its grave.

Established in 1970 during the height of desegregation and busing issues when communication among the various neighborhoods was needed, the council's goals have changed along with the issues. Today, the council serves as a clearinghouse for all local social service agencies and is increasing its coordination of services with City Hall.

Rita Jimenez, who left her job with Mental Health/Mental Retardation a year ago to become HRC's executive director, is optimistic about the direction the agency is taking.

HRC was designed to have three field workers — a black, Hispanic and anglo — and a secretary. Today, it's just Ms. Jimenez and her secretary-assistant who has become a Jill-of-all-trades, Nerissa Teel.

"It's just Nerissa and me and I'm being pulled 10 different ways," said Ms. Jimenez. "We're finally getting back on our feet and getting a good relationship with the community."

When she walked in the door on Oct. 1, 1984, as executive director — and Ms. Teel coming a week later — one task was waiting for them, that of taking applications for the city's housing rehabilitation program financed with a Community Development Block Grant.

But the year has given them a chance to become familiar with HRC's work, the needs of the community and other agencies and to design a plan for the next year.

HRC still is taking applications for the housing program, but this year the forms will be revised, she said.

"THESE PEOPLE WHO apply are real honest. They're elderly and they need their homes fixed. But HUD (Department of Housing and Urban Development which supplies the grant) has a list of what can and can't be done. Some houses are so bad they should be condemned and HUD won't do any work on them," said Ms. Jimenez. But the problem comes, she said, "in how do you tell these people" their houses won't qualify.

HRC will work with the city's CD coordinator and City Council next year when hearings begin for CDBG funds. This past year, some minorities charged the city hadn't notified them of the hearings. Next year, HRC will help to notify those groups in advance of the public hearings and to coordinate their plans.

Because there were different opinions presented this year to the council as to what residents in south and east Midland wanted done with the CD money, HRC may be designing a questionnaire and surveying all the citizens living in those regions.

This questionnaire, said Ms. Jimenez, would explain the difference between penetration paving and paving with curb and gutter and then would ask the citizens which they would prefer. Part of the difference is the cost with the latter costing about 10 times more than penetration paving. By using CD money to pave the streets in south and east Midland, fewer could be paved if curbs and gutters were added.

IN ADDITION, the HRC has been asked to inform those residents about the Police Department's Neighborhood Watch program. Although several areas in north Midland have banded together under that program to cut down on vandalism and crime, very few have heard of it in south and east Midland. Ms. Jimenez said the Police Department is prevented from advertising it, but they will talk with the people if called.

The HRC is posting notices about the Neighborhood Watch program with all the churches, schools, PTAs and day care agencies and with the major businesses in that area, she said.

"This announcement is in English and Spanish and asks people who are interested to call us and we will help set up the Neighborhood Watch meeting," she said.

Ms. Jimenez keeps in contact with all the social service agencies and spends part of her time referring people who ask her for help to the appropriate agency. "Our goal is to stay in touch with all the social service agencies, not to be in competition with them."

Suspended teacher allegedly showed grade-schoolers VD film

From Staff Reports

Oscar Villa, a Santa Rita Elementary School physical education teacher, has been suspended with pay for allegedly showing films on venereal disease to first-, second- and third-grade students.

Midland Independent School District Board of Trustee President Bill Jackson said the first-year schoolteacher allegedly showed the films — designed for junior and senior high school students — to primary students during physical education classes on Sept. 26.

The allegations were brought to the attention of school administrators this week by parents of students in the P.E. course, MISD Superintendent Dr. Joseph P. Baressi said.

Jackson said the board will evaluate the results of an investigation into the allegation by school administrators at its regular meeting on Tuesday.

He said the film reportedly was borrowed from the Region 18 Education Service Center, as is all other audio visual material.

MISD has no "official policy" prohibiting teachers from showing films on communicable disease to students in the primary grades, Jackson said.

However, "we hope people will use good judgment in determining what material they use," he added.

According to Baressi, MISD asks teachers to "preview" films before showing them to students and that the material be "appropriate" to the subject matter, the age and ability of the students.

Register by Friday to vote in Nov. 5 amendment election

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

Friday is the last day Midland County residents have to register to vote and become eligible to participate in the Nov. 5 constitutional amendment election, said voter registration officials.

The Election Administrator's Office, 709 W. Washington, will also accept voter registration forms postmarked before or on Sunday, said Voter Registrar Janeice Builta. The Elections Administrators Office is open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Out of a 113,000 population, Midland County has 54,647 registered voters, Ms. Builta said.

However, Ms. Builta said the voter turnout for the November election will probably be low.

"It's always been low. Anything that isn't a primary or general election is low," Ms. Builta said. She said in the past voter turnouts for constitutional elections has been as low as 5 percent, 9 percent and 10 percent of the registered voters.

Midland County residents who turn 18 on or before Nov. 5 may register to vote, Ms. Builta said. New residents are eligible to register as soon as they move to the county, she said. Persons who have new addresses also need to re-register.

The amendments will appear in the following order on the ballot and include:

— No. 1 - authorization of the issuance of an additional $980 million of Texas Water Development Bonds to create special water funds for water conservation, water development, water quality enhancement, flood control, drainage, subsidence control, recharge, chloride control, agricultural soil and water conservation and desalinization; to authorize a bond insurance program; and to clarify the purposes for which the Texas Water Development Bonds may be issued.

MCHD board deciding fate of bonds

By JULIE HILLRICHS

The Midland County Hospital District Board of Directors will determine whether it will sell, delay or choose not to sell $21.5 million in municipal bonds when it meets next week with representatives of the investment firm of Rauscher Pierce Refsnes Inc.

Midland County Hospital District Board of Directors authorized Rauscher Pierce to submit a proposal for refunding bonds at its Aug. 2 meeting.

The board engaged the firm to proceed in preparing the proposal to refund existing 1983 senior and junior revenue bond indebtedness.

MCHD had considered other proposals by E.F. Hutton and Underwood Newhouse, but decided to examine the Rauscher Pierce offer.

Ron Peterson, vice president of MMH finance, said the refinancing is designed "not to create money for new projects, but to refund bonds for the purpose of reducing interest expense."

He added that the refinancing is "strictly a money-saving effort for the hospital at this time" and that the measure could "reduce the hospital's debt service by $1 to $2 million."

Last week, the board moved toward the refinancing when it voted to transfer $1.9 million from the construction fund to the operations account.

Peterson had said the funds must be transferred out of the construction fund to "allow the trustee to make a higher profit."

"This will save us $200,000 over the life of the issue of the bonds," he said. The bonds have a 14-year issuance.

"The $1.9 million is the amount of excess funds in that account," Peterson said. "The construction monies have to be spent at the time of defeasance. It's a legal requirement."

Jerry Walker, vice president of Rauscher Pierce Refsnes Inc., said the $21.5 million in Triple A bonds would not be secured by taxing revenues. Instead, the bonds would be secured by MMH's other revenues. Maturation dates vary from 1986 to 1999.

Rauscher Pierce is the fifth largest provider of hospital financing in the nation, according to Walker.

He said the risks for those investing in special project bonds such as the MMH issue are changing due to the "explosion of variable rate bonds into the market" and because "bond insurance companies are entering the market to ensure payment of municipal bonds."

Walker estimated only 3,000 U.S. hospitals are able to borrow money tax exempt despite the health care industry being the second largest employer in the nation behind the agricultural industry.

'Album of History' sells out at signing

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

Texans love their history, and the 150th anniversary of Texan independence from Mexico is a great excuse to go through it all again.

Publishing houses are responding to the occasion with an outpouring of books about the Lone Star State, from James Michener's soon-to-be-published historical novel to "Texas: An Album of History," by James L. Haley.

Clearview treatment center opens with festivities

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

More than 300 people were invited to the opening ceremonies today of Clearview, the new $4.3 million alcohol and drug treatment center.

"We won't actually be open until Oct. 7," said Cathy Clayton, a spokeswoman for the facility. "We're having the opening ceremony first, with the ribbon-cutting on Friday."

Several speakers, including medical and governmental leaders, were scheduled to address the crowd gathered in the adult day room of the new center, located west of Loop 250 and Thomason Drive on 10 acres of land donated by the Scharbauer family.

The ceremonies were to have begun at 10 a.m. with Phil Lundberg, director of Clearview, serving as emcee.

Key speakers were Luther Goehring, vice president of regional operations for Samaritan Health Service and president of the Clearview board of directors; Daniel Capps, chief executive officer of Camelback Hospitals; Tevis Herd, president of the Midland County Hospital District board of directors; Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland and Jay Gibson, a member of the Governor's Task Force on Alcohol and Drug Abuse.

Other guests include members of the Mental Health and Mental Retardation Center of Midland, Council Against Substance Abuse Inc., Midland Memorial Hospital, Midland Independent School District, Executive Committee of the Chamber of Commerce and others.

The guests were to have been given an invitational tour of facility with a brunch following.

With three weeks left in the United Way campaign, Chairman Tom Madonna announced that $1,147,833 has been pledged to date toward this year's goal of $2,120,000. This total represents 54.1 percent of the goal and was reported at a luncheon rally in the Midland Centennial Plaza today.

The campaign totals to date are: Special Gifts, $361,100; Independent Oil, $72,450; Residential, $4,235; Major Firms, $260,704; Pacesetters, $23,640; Small Business, $2,749; Major Oil, $226,134; Intermediate Oil, $56,680; Trailblazers, $66,217; Education, 0; Government and Services, $35,916; Professional, $22,775 and Wildcat, $15,233.

Today's rally was the second of four report luncheons to be held in order to reach the $2.1 million goal. More than 200 campaign workers took part in the rally, with entertainment by Ron Franklin of Midland College and folk singer Dick Bowden. Ed Clements and Joann Bagwell of KCRS radio emceed the luncheon.

The third report luncheon will be at 11:45 a.m. Oct. 10, at the Midland Centennial Plaza.

Denver City man held on $56,000 bond after police chase

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA - A 42-year-old man remained in the Ector County jail today in lieu of $56,000 bond on charges of kidnapping, car theft, carrying a prohibited weapon and unlawfully carrying a weapon.

Chester Mason Gregg of Denver City, was arrested by Odessa police early Tuesday morning following a brief chase that ended near the intersection of West University and San Carlos streets after Gregg allegedly rammed an unmarked detective unit.

According to a news release issued Wednesday afternoon by Det. Lt. M.L. Crumrine, Detectives Harold Salmon and Daniel High had been alerted to the fact Gregg was armed. As they got out of their damaged vehicle, Salmon saw Gregg bend over toward the floorboard of his vehicle, and thinking he was reaching for a gun, Salmon fired a single shot that knocked out the left rear window of the vehicle Gregg was driving.

After the shot was fired, Gregg got out of his car holding one of his two small children as a shield in front of him, police said. Crumrine said the two Gregg children, ages 14 months and 7 months, were not visible to officers during the brief chase or as the vehicle stopped.

Once Gregg was taken into custody, officers searched the vehicle and found a 20-gauge sawed-off pump shotgun and a .22-caliber revolver.

A motor vehicle check revealed the 1982 Oldsmobile Gregg had been driving belonged to M&H Well Service of Denver City and had been reported stolen. A weapons check through the National Crime Information Center revealed the .22-caliber revolver had been stolen in Atlanta, Ga. in September 1973, police said.

Gregg was arraigned Tuesday before Municipal Judge J.E. Weatherly on charges of aggravated kidnapping, unauthorized use of a motor vehicle, carrying a prohibited weapon and unlawfully carrying a weapon. Weatherly set bonds totalling $56,000 on the four charges. Gregg was also to be charged with criminal mischief in connection with nearly $1,400 in damage to the police unit, police said.

The kidnapping charge stemmed from a Sept. 24 incident that involved Gregg and his 29-year-old wife, Vickie, from whom he had been separated for about three weeks, according to police reports.

Gregg allegedly went to his wife's home at 2702 Brazos about 2:30 a.m. Sept. 24 and abducted his wife at gunpoint. He is accused of taking her to a remote area, where he allegedly attempted to sexually assault her, then struck her several times before returning her to her home nearly two hours later, police said.

Mrs. Gregg, who said she was in the process of seeking a lawyer to handle a divorce, filed a complaint the following day (Sept. 25). An arrest warrant on a charge of kidnapping was issued for Gregg as well as an arrest warrant from Yoakum County charging him with unauthorized use of a motor vehicle.

The events that led to Gregg's arrest began about 3:15 p.m. Tuesday, when Gregg allegedly entered a home at 2704 Brazos, where his children were being kept by three people. Gregg allegedly held the three people at bay with the sawed-off shotgun while he took his children and fled in a vehicle police were still trying to locate late Tuesday, police said.

No charges had been filed in connection with this incident at last report.

DEATHS

Mrs. John Kelley

Graveside services for Mrs. John Kelley, 94, of Midland, will be at 2 p.m. Friday in Roscoe Cemetery at Roscoe, with the Rev. Bob Porterfield officiating. Handling arrangements is Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Kelley died Wednesday morning at her home following a lengthy illness.

She was born Feb. 11, 1891, in Comanche and was reared there. She moved to Roscoe as a young woman. She was married Dec. 17, 1910, to John B. Kelley in Roscoe. In 1930, the family moved to Sweetwater and then to Hobbs, N.M., in 1937, and to Lubbock in 1942. Kelley died in 1954, and Mrs. Kelley lived in Lubbock until 1959, when she moved to Midland.

She was a member of the First Baptist Church since 1959 and was active in the Sarah Sunday School Class.

She was preceded in death by a daughter, Faye Kelley Lunsford.

Survivors include two sons, J. Bill Kelley, of Midland, and Charles H. Kelley, of Fort Worth; a daughter, Fern Kelley Thorn, of Midland; two grandchildren; six stepgrandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

Bond $200,000 each for two held on heroin charges

From Staff Reports

A Los Angeles couple arrested at Midland Regional Airport Tuesday remained in city jail this morning after being charged with possession of heroin with intent to deliver.

Justice of the Peace Robert H. Pine set bonds of $200,000 apiece for Lorenzo Gallegos Herrera, 41, and his 38-year-old wife, Ramona Herrera. They had been arrested about noon Tuesday when airport security guards found syringes and other drug paraphernalia in Herrera's boot, according to police. A check of his suitcase turned up 78 balloons of heroin, a loaded revolver and $3,000 in currency, reports said.

The street value of the heroin was estimated at about $100,000 by narcotics detectives, who said it may be the largest amount of heroin ever confiscated in Midland.

In other reports, a 27-year-old rural Midland man was listed in stable condition in Midland Memorial Hospital after being injured early this morning in a one-car accident, according to police and hospital reports.

Johnny Dale Grimes, Route 3, Box 484, was heading north on Andrews Highway in a 1973 Dodge Dart when he struck the traffic-signal pole at the Illinois Avenue intersection, police said. The accident occurred about 1:48 a.m.

Jewelry worth about $2,855 was taken from a home on County Road 135 East in one of several burglaries and thefts reported to the Sheriff's Office and Police Department Wednesday.

A $1,500 gold ring, an $800 diamond ring and a $300 wedding band were among the $2,855 worth of property reported missing by Donna Wentworth, #3 Southern Meadows. The burglary occurred sometime between Tuesday and Wednesday, reports said.

Raymond Chambers, 1700 N. Terrell, reported the loss of a stereo component worth about $460 in a Wednesday burglary of his home, reports said.

A $300 car stereo was reported stolen by Nickel Used Cars, 101 E. Florida. There was about $175 in damage to the car window and dash in the burglary, which occurred Tuesday, reports said.

James Walker, 2405 W. Kentucky, reported the loss of two cable converter boxes worth a total of $300 in a theft which occurred at 603 W. Storey, reports said.

Friday, the "M" Squad from the Midland Chamber of Commerce and the Gold Jackets from the Odessa Chamber of Commerce are scheduled to perform ribbon-cutting ceremonies at 1 p.m. A public open house is being held from 1 to 6 p.m. Sunday, according to Ms. Clayton, with a tour of the center and refreshments offered. The center will open for business on Monday.

The 36,500-square-foot facility is a joint venture between MMH and two Arizona firms, Camelback of Scottsdale and Samaritan of Phoenix. It is administered by Midland Camelback Samaritan Group Inc., a group formed from all three firms.

Although Clearview will open next week, it is expected to take some time to build up a patient load.

"I know of two patients for sure that will be here," said Ms. Clayton. "The staff is doing pre-admission interviews right now and there has been a lot of inquiries."

"The sequicentennial is upon us," Haley said Wednesday at Oak Leaf Books on Garfield Street just north of Wadley Avenue, where he was autographing copies of his book.

Until he ran out, that is.

"Texans in general are interested in their heritage, but particularly in Midland," said store owner Judy Hubbard, who told several disappointed customers she'd have more copies of Haley's book next week.

"We sold those 20 in about an hour" at $24.95 a crack, she said.

Haley, a 34-year-old western historian who is not related to Midland historian J. Evetts Haley, said his new book "is a history book for people who don't like history."

Many people are put off by dull lists of dates, but Haley's book is more informal: He concentrates on telling stories, especially the stories which have been left out of conventional history books.

"History is people," he said, and people do interesting things which their ancestors often prefer to forget: "A lot of frontier history has been rewritten to reflect modern sensibilities. There's an awful lot of history that has been laundered out."

Interested readers can get the unexpurgated version in Haley's book, he said, along with hundreds of rare photographs which he dug out dusty, forgotten files in the back rooms of various archives.

"The thing that sets this book apart is that many of these photographs have never been published before," said Haley, adding that the text is based on direct sources.

"I used letters and diaries and things like that" to give an accurate view of such lively historical figures as Sam Houston. The book, which includes a photo of a dust storm in Midland, ends with the Spindletop oil discovery at the turn of the century.

"I had to cut it off at the end of the frontier," he said. The publisher had only allotted 250 pages (stretched to 270), and the frontier material Haley had dug up in three years of research was "too good to pass up."

Haley's previous books were "Apaches" and "The Buffalo War."

HRC

The agencies are talking about setting up an Information Hotline on computer in the HRC office. "They want HRC to become a clearinghouse of referrals," she said.

Ms. Jimenez explained that several agencies have a policy of helping people who need money once a year. But some of those people also go from agency to agency seeking money. This information could be stored on computer and other agencies could check to see where that person has sought assistance.

Few agencies are capable of assisting with money and Ms. Jimenez said she would like to see a fund established "where people could be helped more."

BECAUSE SHE IS bilingual, Ms. Jimenez also is often asked by agencies, hospitals and schools for interpretation assistance. She cited the case of the young mother who had a mentally retarded baby, and it was Ms. Jimenez who was asked to explain the problem to the woman.

"There's a lot of services people don't get because they only speak Spanish," she said.

HRC also posts job listings from Texas Employment Commission, Job Training Partnership Act, city of Midland and federal government. And the agency sets up monthly programs on topics such as Medicaid, Medicare changes at Hillcrest Manor, the housing project for low-income elderly and/or handicapped persons.

The major problem, said Ms. Jimenez, is the agency is always looking for funding and operates on a year-to-year basis. This year, the City Council had eliminated it from the budget. But after a request was voiced, $25,000 was allotted.

"For the last seven years or so, it's been cut down," she said of HRC. "We need to look at getting more monies. It would be better to get the financing set up so we don't have to go looking for money each year."

Hobbs needs experts to investigate fire

From Staff Reports

HOBBS, N.M. — The Hobbs Fire Department has requested help from "experts in the field" in its investigation of a huge fire and explosion Wednesday that left one man dead and three injured at a truck supply warehouse.

"Both the Hobbs fire and police departments are conducting an investigation of the explosion but we have asked experts in the field to help out," said Jay Vickers of the Hobbs Fire Department.

According to Vickers, firefighters responded to the scene about 6:30 a.m. Wednesday and found Robert Lovas, an employee of Watson Truck and Supply Inc., dead at the scene. Three others, Paul Sours and Roger Hivner, also Watson employees, and James Males, an employee of Expert and B&M Oil Well Service were injured in the explosion.

Hivner was listed in very critical condition at Bernalillo County Medical Center Burn and Trauma Unit in Albuquerque with burns over 75 percent of his body. Sours, with burns on 25 to 30 percent of his face, neck, chest and arms, was in serious but stable condition, and Males, with 15 to 20 percent of his face, neck and arms burned, was also in serious but stable condition.

All three were transported to the burn center at 10 a.m. Wednesday from a Hobbs hospital.

Vickers said the explosion, which was felt for seven miles around Hobbs, left sections of the city without electrical service temporarily.

"When we arrived at the scene, there were flames leaping 15 feet high out of the south side of the warehouse," he said. "There was debris scattered for thousands of feet around."

Five units responded to the fire which engulfed the corrugated metal structure and left nothing but rubble. The fire was extinguished after firefighters worked more than an hour.

Residents who live near the warehouse reported some damage to their houses, although Vickers stated that there was no damage to the surrounding residential area.

One man, Ray Hernandez, reported that the explosion caused the ceiling in his bathroom to collapse, causing about $500 damage. Other neighbors said their windows had been shattered. Hernandez lives about 75 feet from the site of the explosion.

Noel named UT Distinguished Alumnus

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Prominent Odessa business leader-philanthropist William D. (Bill) Noel will be honored Friday night with the presentation of the University of Texas Distinguished Alumnus Award during a ceremony in the Lyndon B. Johnson Library Auditorium in Austin.

The award is the highest honor paid by the 46,000-member ex-students' association to graduates "whose lives and work have brought pride to their alma mater." Only 105 UT graduates have received the award since it was first made in 1958.

Noel, known for his business successes, community service and philanthropies, grew up in Fort Worth. He studied business management and finance at the University of Texas, graduating in 1935 when unemployment was more than 25 percent.

Noel first went to work as a roustabout for Gulf Oil in Wickett, but by 1940, he and two partners formed Trebol Oil Co. After drilling 52 producing wells in the Permian Basin, he expanded his business interests, which resulted in the El Paso Products Co., hub of the world's largest inland petrochemical complex.

He retired as chairman of the board of El Paso Products in 1980, but returned in 1983 when he was asked to take part in an employee buy-out of the company. In 1984, he became chairman of the boards of Rexene Corp. and El Paso Products Co.

Noel's endeavors have earned him a place in the Halls of Fame for Texas Business, the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, U.T. Austin College of Business Administration and the Heritage of Odessa's Hall of Community Statesmen.

Noel and his wife, Ellen, have contributed generously to educational institutions, including U.T. Permian Basin. They endowed a fund that has enabled more than 1,000 students to attend Permian Basin colleges.

The Noels helped build the Midland-Odessa Symphony building at the Air Terminal and support many fine arts, youth and health programs.

Two jailed on cocaine charge

From Staff Reports

ODESSA - A 36-year-old couple remained in the Ector County jail late Wednesday on charges of possession of cocaine.

Bobby Louis Houston and Patricia Ann Houston, both of 919 E. Monahans, were arrested about 11 p.m. Tuesday by search warrant-armed Odessa police narcotics officers, DPS troopers and Ector County sheriff's deputies, after a search of the residence produced about 15 grams of cocaine.

The Houstons were arraigned before Municipal Judge J.E. Weatherly, who set bond at $5,000 each on the narcotics possession charges.

MHS inducting two alumni

From Staff Reports

Midland High School alumni Bo Baskin and Dr. Glen "Gus" Baker will be inducted into the Midland High School Hall of Honor during half-time ceremonies Friday at Memorial Stadium.

Baskin, a 1973 graduate of MHS, is an investment banker with First Boston Inc. in New York, N.Y., specializing in energy mergers and acquisitions.

Baker is a professor in the Department of Industrial, Vocational and Technical Education at Texas A&M University at College Station.

Crime Stoppers probes armed robbery

This week Crime Stoppers is seeking information on an armed robbery at the the La Quinta Motor Inn, 4130 W. Wall.

At 10:40 p.m. on Sept. 21, a man entered the motel, pointed a blue steel automatic pistol at the clerk and demanded money from the register. He then ordered the clerk into a back room, took the money and left.

The suspect was described as being white, about 25 years old, five feet four inches tall, with short, wavy, reddish-brown hair. He was wearing bright, blue-framed sunglasses; a gray, long-sleeved sweat shirt torn at the back of the left shoulder; blue jeans and white tennis shoes.

Crime Stoppers will pay $1,000 cash for information leading to the arrest and indictment of the man who committed this robbery. Call 694-TIPS in Midland or 333-TIPS in Odessa. Callers can remain anonymous.

In September, Midland Crime Stoppers received 87 calls, which led to the arrest of 22 people and the clearing of 44 cases. Nine rewards totalling $1,275 were paid out, and $37,310 in stolen property was recovered with the help of information supplied by the program.

Since it began in January 1984, Midland Crime Stoppers has helped clear 244 cases and recover $193,671 in stolen property.

Defiant AIDS carrier seeks treatment

HOUSTON (AP) — A 30-year-old transient afflicted with acquired immune deficiency syndrome, who ignored the city health director's order to abstain from having sex, admitted himself into a Houston hospital, said authorities.

Fabian Bridges who had boasted he would continue having sex with strangers, even though he knows he carries the fatal disease, was admitted on Wednesday evening to Ben Taub Hospital to be treated for AIDS, police said.

City Health Director Dr. James Haughton sent Bridges a letter on Monday ordering him to "desist from having sexual relations and donating blood."

"A person who deliberately spreads a fatal disease is a danger to others and should be subject to psychiatric committment," Haughton said.

Four undercover officers were assigned to follow Bridges, but prosecutors said officers could not arrest him unless he solicited sexual favors from them or they actually saw him having sex.

"This is a real tough one for them," Capt. Jack Fulbright of the Houston police vice division said of his officers. "It would be a real moral and ethical dilemma for them to watch someone get in a car with him and just stand by and watch, knowing what he has."

Ted Busch, assistant to Harris County District Attorney John B. Holmes, said, "Without eyewitness proof, what law has he violated? I have come up with nothing at this juncture."

Violating the health order is a third-degree felony, carrying a maximum sentence of 10 years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

Haughton had said earlier that if Bridges were arrested, health officials would ask that he be committed to a psychiatric hospital.

Haughton said he learned from an Ohio reporter that Bridges was in Houston.

Ohio health officials searched for Bridges last month after being told by a Minneapolis television crew that he had AIDS and had sex with as many as eight people in Cleveland.

Bridges was arrested Aug. 23 on a disorderly conduct charge, but later was released, Ohio officials said.

He also was arrested Aug. 14 in Indianapolis following the theft of a bicycle, authorities said. After authorities discovered he had AIDS, he was given a one-way ticket to Cleveland, where he has relatives, officials said.

STATE IN BRIEF

Home starved patient

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A Texas City nursing home starved, neglected and abandoned an 87-year-old woman who died after 47 days in the facility, a nursing consultant has testified in state district court.

Dolores Alford, a gerontological nursing consultant from Dallas, said her review of records from Autumn Hills nursing home on Elnora Breed showed "nursing failed this lady. They abandoned her."

The testimony came during the murder trial of Autumn Hills Convalescent Center Inc. and five of its current and former employees.

They are accused of murder by neglect in the Nov. 20, 1978, death of Mrs. Breed.

The nursing home records showed Mrs. Breed was being fed 600 calories a day through a tube, an amount Ms. Alford said was equivalent to a starvation diet.

TV ads boost FarmAid

DALLAS (AP) — Even though the benefit FarmAid concert fell short of its goal to raise $10 million for needy farmers, concert promoters say the project is "gaining momentum" and is realizing its objective, a spokesman said.

"We didn't expect to raise $10 million in one week," advertising executive Jim Nicholls said Wednesday. "So far we have had 350,000 calls. We should be hitting 400,000 soon. We're nearing $8 million right now."

Nicholls attributes the momentum to "celebrity commercials featuring various Hollywood stars asking viewers to call a toll-free number and pledge money for American farmers.

The commercials, offspring of the Sept. 22 concert initiated by singer Willie Nelson to raise money for struggling farmers, have been aired as public service announcements across the country, Nicholls said.

Stars appearing in the FarmAid commercials include Nelson, Jessica Lange, Sissy Spaceck, John Denver, Bill Cosby and several others, Nicholls said.

Lucas killed 'only one'

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Henry Lee Lucas, who has confessed to about 60 slayings nationwide, said he only killed his mother and did not commit the other murders.

Lucas' comments on Wednesday come in the wake of disclosures that a Delaware teacher, Robert D. Hughes, 38, of Milford, confessed last week to killing his wife, Serita, in a slaying that Lucas earlier said he committed.

"It was the next-to-last case I solved, in April," Lucas said. "Attorneys showed me pictures, pictures of the body, the house, where she was killed. I knew how she died. They already told me that."

The one-eyed drifter, awaiting lethal injection in Texas for the slaying of an unidentified hitchhiker known only as "Orange Socks," insists the only reason he previously confessed to that killing and hundreds of other slayings was because he was taking Thorazine, a tranquilizer. In April, authorities in Waco, where he was jailed at the time, refused to continue giving him the drug.

Lucas, 49, said he is expecting all but one of the confessions he has made to be dismissed and estimates he already has been absolved of about 230 cases.

Stay is 'temporary'

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Texas Death Row inmate John Michael Lamb, who was granted an execution stay, said the order blocking his scheduled death is only temporary.

"It's obviously a very temporary stay," Lamb said Wednesday. "I expect I'll have another date in a couple of months. I can't see a district judge is going to rule in my favor."

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals postponed the execution because Lamb's attorneys have not been able to get in touch with the sentencing judge, E. Paul Banner of Greenville.

Fish frozen

By LINDA ANDERSON

It's nice to come home from work to an already-prepared supper. Unfortunately, most of us don't have that luxury. The next-best thing is a supper that can cook itself while we soak in a soothing bath.

Many of these meals are frozen "TV" dinners. Don't laugh — some of the newest brands are quite exotic and can be tasty (not the cardboard-flavored variety we all grew up with).

And for the health-and-nutrition conscious (which is a large segment of the population), many of the newest brands are also "lite" or "lean." Reduced-calorie frozen dinners can be a gold mine for the manufacturer, provided the meals also taste good.

Because several varieties of fish are naturally low-calorie and low-fat, light frozen foods often consist of a fish teamed with a green vegetable and topped with sauce.

For many years Mrs. Paul's has been a leading manufacturer of frozen fish products, including fish sticks, breaded fish and breaded shrimp. Unfortunately, while fish itself may have few calories, the breading on it and fats used in preparation make the fattening qualities of this type product skyrocket.

It seems fitting that the company should now introduce a line of light one-serving fish meals.

As the expert low-calorie-diner in our house, I tested two of these dinners for taste, price and advertising accuracy. The two youngest taste-testers also sampled the meals — they always want bites of whatever I am eating.

Mrs. Paul's Fish Mornay with Broccoli cost $2.59 for a 10-ounce, single serving box. Fish Dijon with Asparagus was priced at $2.39 for an 8½-ounce, single serving box. (Prices listed are from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.)

Mornay's label nutritional information listed the dish as containing 230 calories as well as 35 percent of the protein, 20 percent of the vitamin A and riboflavin, 45 percent of the vitamin C, 10 percent of the niacin and 15 percent of the calcium in the U.S. Recommended Daily Allowance.

The Dijon's nutritional information listed the product as containing 250 calories, 35 percent of the protein, 10 percent of the vitamin C, riboflavin and niacin and 8 percent of the vitamin A, calcium and iron in the U.S. RDA.

Fish Mornay is, according to its package label, "made with a premium cod fillet and tender crisp broccoli, topped with a delightful Mornay Sauce with a hint of white wine." Fish Dijon is claimed to be "made with a premium cod fillet, asparagus, delicate seafood, mushrooms, and the finest Dijon mustard sauce with a hint of white wine."

With all this repetition of premium cod fillets and hints of white wine, the Dijon proved to be more flavorful than the Mornay — but not by much.

In both taste-tests, the sauce was a tasty white-colored sauce — we could tell no difference in the flavors (couldn't even taste the hint of wine), though the Dijon sauce was more full-bodied, thanks to the pieces of "delicate seafood" in it (I figured it was chunks of artificial crab so popular now in supermarkets, but was never sure).

The broccoli was satisfyingly green and delicious, and the asparagus tasted as if it had never seen the inside of a can.

But the "premium cod fillets" were disappointing. Both were too dry.

That didn't stop us from eating and enjoying both meals, though. Fish is tasty, nutritious and low-fat (and one of my favorite foods).

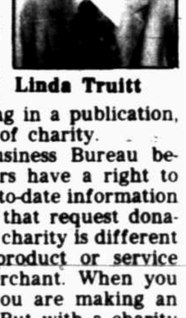

And nothing ends a long, hectic day as comfortably as a meal I don't have to cook.

BETTER BUSINESS

Standards benefit charities

By LINDA TRUITT

Linda Truitt

Chances are, during the past year you or your company have received some sort of charitable solicitation. You may have been asked to make a direct donation, buy tickets for underprivileged children to go to a circus, or buy advertising in a publication, all in the name of charity.

The Better Business Bureau believes contributors have a right to complete and up-to-date information on organizations that request donations. Giving to a charity is different than buying a product or service from a local merchant. When you buy a product you are making an equal exchange. But with a charity you are handing over your hard-earned money on faith it will go to a worthy cause.

Because Americans are very generous and the amount contributed to charity increases every year, over $74 billion in 1984, fund raising has become big business. Today many fund-raising events are conducted by professional fund raisers who collect 70 percent to 90 percent of the gross receipts. This is often not disclosed when the promoter solicits from the public.

Therefore the BBB is asking all individuals and non-profit organizations collecting money for charity to conduct their fund raising campaigns in accordance with the BBB Standards for Charitable Solicitations.

In a letter mailed recently, the BBB has requested local organizations supply information related to their purposes and programs, governing body and structure, and future plans for fund raising. A report will be written about each organization based on the information provided.

The BBB feels asking organizations to make disclosures and abide by the standards will not hinder people from making contributions, but will actually encourage it. People should be more confident their money will help those who truly need it. Some of the more important standards are:

- Soliciting organizations should provide on request written information explaining the organization's purposes, descriptions of overall programs and activities; eligibility to receive deductible contributions; and information about the governing body and structure.
- Soliciting organizations should provide on request complete annual financial statements. Those statements should show that fund raising and administrative costs do not exceed 50 percent of total income. At least 50 percent of total income should be spent on programs and activities directly related to the organization's purposes.
- Solicitations should include a clear description of the programs for which funds are requested.
- Solicitations in conjunction with the sale of goods, services or admissions shall identify at the point of solicitation (a) the benefiting organization, (b) a source from which written information is available, and (c) the actual or anticipated portion of the sales or admission price to benefit the charitable organization or cause.

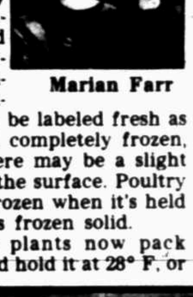

For a copy of the BBB Standards for Charitable Solicitations call 563-1880.

'Fresh' chicken not frozen

By MARIAN FARR

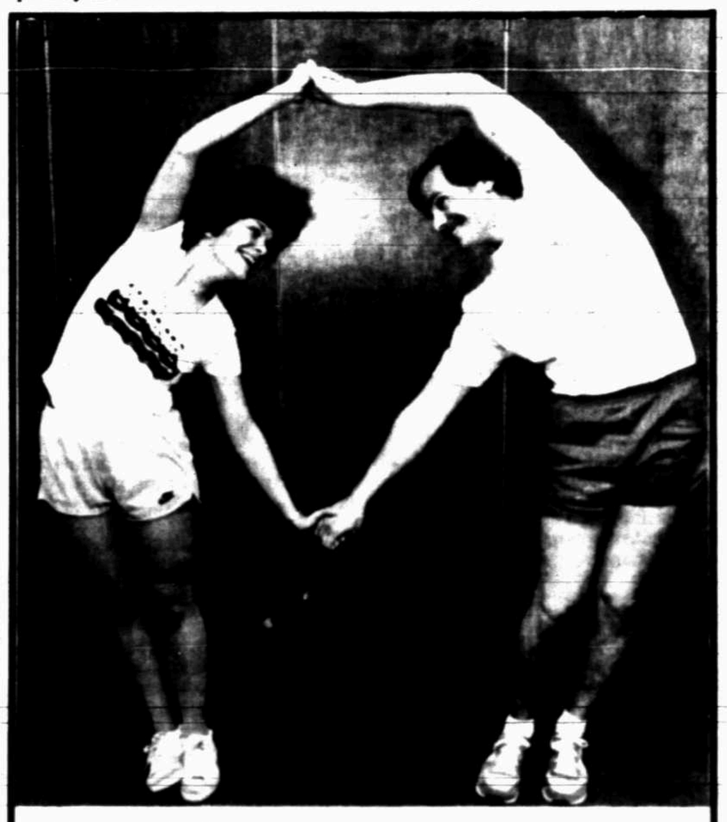

Marian Farr

Some Texas consumers are expressing concern about buying poultry labeled as "fresh," only to discover at home that it seems partially frozen. According to United States Department of Agriculture rules, a poultry product may be labeled fresh as long as it is not completely frozen, even though there may be a slight frozen crust on the surface. Poultry is classified as frozen when it's held at 0° F until it's frozen solid.

Most poultry plants now pack poultry in ice and hold it at 28° F, or chill the birds with nitrogen. The results of these quick-chilling processes is a slight crusting of ice crystals on the surface of the birds. The surface feels frozen, but the inside is not, therefore the bird is still basically fresh. These quick-chill techniques remove body heat from the poultry and preserve it enroute to the supermarket. Once at the store, it will stay fresh in the refrigerator case for five to seven days.

Since fresh poultry crusted with ice crystals is not frozen, you can cook it using the same temperature and cooking time you use for unfrozen poultry, or you can freeze it for later use.

Re-using postal stamps serious offence

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Postal Service is cracking down on people who wash the postmarks off stamps and re-use them or sell them to others to be used again.

Washing stamps has grown into a significant business in recent years and postal inspectors report recovering 62 million such stamps, with a face value of $13.7 million this year.

The people in this business buy large quantities of used stamps from many sources, often contacting utilities and mail order firms offering to cart away empty envelopes bearing used stamps.

They then clean the stamps and offer them for sale at a "discount."

People caught using such stamps as postage can face fines of up to $5,000 and as much as 15 years in prison, the Postal service points out.

Now that the cool weather is here, we invite you to come in for refreshments and look at the fall merchandise. The time is right to put your Christmas merchandise in lay-a-way at a 20% savings.

Sakowitz in move to shut more stores

HOUSTON Sakowitz, Inc., is planning to close at least three and possibly four more of its main outlying stores, leaving the firm with four stores in the Houston area.

The plan was outlined by Robert Sakowitz, chairman, president and chief executive officer, during an interview Monday afternoon.

The family-owned store, which recently filed for protection under a Chapter 11 reorganization, will close the units in the Sakowitz Village shopping center in Dallas, the Kensington Galleria in Tulsa, Okla., and its Midland, Tex., unit. The fate of the Scottsdale, Ariz., branch is undecided because the store has done well, said Sakowitz. No timeframe was given.

The firm also has decided to close its distribution center here. In addition, Sakowitz plans to reduce its number of boutiques from an original seven to two. The Shamrock Hilton in Houston and the 1,000-square-foot Valentine boutique in River Oaks, Tex.

The larger stores that have been closed so far include the Houston square store in Tulsa and the Amarillo, Tex., unit, which was...

Meanwhile, Sakowitz has met in bankruptcy court Monday. They hope to [illegible]

DEAR ABBY

Reader thinks harnessed kids sign of lazy parents

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: From reading your column, I know that you regard children as subhuman creatures who were put on earth to serve as flunkies for adults, and as such they are not entitled to the same basic human dignity as adults. But your wholehearted support for "Careful Mother," who puts a harness on her 2-year-old child, struck me as particularly outrageous, even for you.

A child is not a dog, Abby. There are plenty of ways to keep a child from wandering off without subjecting him to the humiliation of being leashed. As I see it, using a harness to control a child is an admission that the parent is too lazy to (1) teach the child as soon as he can walk never to leave the parent's sight, and (2) keep an eagle eye on the child every minute.

Heaven only knows what kind of psychological scars those harnessed children will bear the rest of their lives as a result of being publicly humiliated. — JANE BARRETT, EVANSTON, ILL.

DEAR JANE: Assuming harnessed children feel "publicly humiliated" (your opinion, not mine), I say, better to be publicly humiliated than privately buried.

I have heard from many parents whose children impulsively darted into the street. Within seconds they were struck down by speeding vehicles — and one child was trampled to death by a horse! Others related horror stories about children who wandered away from lakeside picnics, amusement parks and shopping malls. One grieving mother sent me a picture of her 3-year-old daughter who had disappeared in a crowded discount store in June 1984. She's still missing.

All expressed admiration for the mother who cared enough to harness her child in spite of comments from rude onlookers. "Careful Mother" still has my vote.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 54-year-old single woman. I have never been married and plan to wed a wonderful man I met at work. I would like very much to place a small announcement of my engagement in the local paper, and also in the paper in the town where I lived with my family for many years.

However, I can't say "Mr. and Mrs. X announce the engagement of their daughter, etc." as my parents are no longer living.

Also, we are having a small church wedding, but I don't want anyone to "give me away." Is that an essential part of the marriage ceremony? If so, how should I handle it? — AUTUMN LOVE

DEAR AUTUMN: You and your fiance may announce your own engagement with a simple: "Jane Doe and John Smith take pleasure in announcing their engagement, etc."

It is not imperative that you be "given away." Ask the clergyperson who will officiate at your wedding to omit that portion of the service. The marriage ceremony is not carved in granite. Your wedding can be as creative and comfortable as you want it to be. Just check with the clergyperson to be sure it's legal. Good luck to you and your beloved.

Sales of small appliances to increase

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (AP) — Appliances with the latest technology and the most convenience will lead small appliance sales gains in 1985, said Ken Homa of Black & Decker.

The overall market growth is expected to be in the 5 to 10 percent range over 1984 when small electric appliance industry sales exceeded $8.1 billion, he added.

Homa said space-saving and cordless kitchen electrics as well as electronic, automatic shut-off irons were expected to be strong sellers.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Friday, October 4, 1985

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Patience is the key to getting what you want. Reacting angrily to a "maybe" could make the answer "no." Play a waiting game. A previously-rejected proposal could win approval now. Update your presentation. Romance and travel go hand-in-hand in December. Start saving money for a mini-vacation. Family members are supportive when you let them know your plans in advance. Avoid springing surprises on a conservative authority figure. CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: President Rutherford B. Hayes, newspaperman-author Damon Runyon, comedian Buster Keaton, actor Charlton Heston, actress Susan Sarandon, Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige, the Chicago Cubs' Larry Sorenson and Billy Hatcher.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): An authority figure continues to play a major role in your life. Do not allow this person to make your decisions for you. Contact old friends.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): An enlightening conversation could turn you in a new direction. Avoid acting in haste. Additional information will help you solve a financial puzzle. An older person asks questions that trigger new ideas.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Be more sensitive to loved one's needs. Shared interests could turn a platonic relationship into a romance. A newcomer needs a helping hand. Offer your assistance.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): An especially productive day for those who are self-employed. Follow through on an urge to write poems or stories for publication. You could have real talent! Give responsible teen-agers more leeway.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Be patient with a young or inexperienced person and you gain a new ally. Benefits and rewards come from an unexpected quarter. A self-improvement project boosts your ego.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): An expert offers excellent investment advice. Follow it! A special message or package brings you great joy. Accepting an invitation puts you in touch with exciting, new people. Wear something glamorous.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Self-discipline helps you complete a difficult task in record time. Ask friends to share the names of their favorite discount stores or wholesale contacts with you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your finances are about to improve. Do not play hard-to-get or you could lose out on a wonderful opportunity. Consolidate recent business gains. An impromptu meeting could lead to happy romance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A project may have to be redone. Rising costs dictate a budget revision. Further research helps you put the finishing touches on a report.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A good day to review accounts and answer correspondence. A delicate personal matter requires careful handling. A direct approach will probably work best. Talk things over with mate before making a final decision.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your intuition serves you well today. Ignore petty criticisms. Curb your temper when dealing with loved ones. A friend wants to play matchmaker. Better decline if your intuition says, "no."

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You may need to sit down and rethink your priorities. A candid chat with a family member proves very enlightening. Take off the blinders and face reality. Loved one needs your help.

Here's another hand from the recent Summer North American Championships in Las Vegas. It appeals to us even though the contract was only a modest two diamonds doubled. The declarer was Nancy Gruver of Ellicott City, Md.

We were not told the meaning of West's double of two diamonds. Obviously, it must have been intended to show support for the other suits, and our sympathy goes to East who cannot be blamed for converting it to penalties.

West led the queen of clubs. East won the ace and returned the suit to declarer's king. It seemed certain that declarer would have to lose at least two spade tricks, two trumps, a heart and the club. However, a slight miscue by East allowed declarer to come home in spectacular fashion.

At trick three declarer led the queen of hearts. West won the ace and continued with a third club, and East misjudged when he elected to sluff a spade as declarer carefully ruffed with the six. The queen of diamonds went to the king, and East exited with the ace. Now East deeply regretted having parted with a spade — he was left with only red cards.

He tried to avoid the end play by exiting with his seven of diamonds. Declarer won the ten and threw West back on lead with her carefully preserved deuce of trumps to East's three.

Now East was forced to lead a heart from his jack into dummy's K-10 tenace, and declarer's two spade losers went away. Declarer had traded a trump trick for two heart tricks and her contract — she lost only three trumps, a heart and the ace of clubs.

Pity poor East. His partner had opened the bidding and he took four tricks on defense, yet his side did not beat a two-level contract.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country music star Ricky Skaggs will perform in Israel and Jordan next year at the request of the governments of both nations, his record company says.

Skaggs, whose hits include "Country Boy," "Heartbroke" and "Highway 40 Blues," will perform in Jordan Jan. 4, in Galilee Jan. 6, and in Jerusalem Jan. 9, Epic Records said Wednesday.

Country groups The Whites and The Cannons also will perform.

Skaggs is a finalist for six awards to be presented by the Country Music Association Oct. 14.

WINNIE, Texas (AP) — Gov. Mark White, former Los Angeles Rams quarterback Roman Gabriel and Miss Texas Jonna Fitzgerald are among those expected for the annual salute to rice beginning today in the heart of East Texas' rice country.

Rice is the main food supply for half the world, but is often overlooked in the United States, said Susan Gaust, an organizer of the 16th annual Rice Festival. "Most rice farmers are just barely holding on. Every year we lose a few more that go bankrupt or drop out. This is our own brand of farm aid. We educate people about rice and encourage them to eat more of it."

The festival, which runs through Saturday, features a bishop's blessing of the crop and rice-eating and cooking contests.

The mementos from stars brought $400 recently in an auction for the New Albany High School Blotter, said faculty adviser Joy Creps. Ford's tie brought the top bid of $60, she said.

ITHACA, N.Y. (AP) — Novelist Alison Lurie, 1985 winner of the Pulitzer Prize for fiction, was charged with criminal trespass after a sit-in at Cornell University's administration building to protest the school's investments in South Africa.

Ms. Lurie, 59, a Cornell English professor, was arrested shortly after the building closed at 5 p.m. Wednesday, with a student who had volunteered to be arrested with her. Fifty-six demonstrators left after a police warning.

About $110 million of Cornell's $700 million endowment is invested in companies that do some business in South Africa, whose official policies of racial discrimination have drawn widespread protests in the United States.

PEKING (AP) — China has canceled a tour by the Australian rock band Men At Work because the government is alarmed by growing foreign influence on young people, an Australian diplomat says.

The clean-cut, Grammy-winning band, which has produced several best selling albums, had planned to tour Peking and other cities next month with approval of Communist Party General Secretary Hu Yaobang, who visited Australia in April.

Carillo Gantner, the Australian Embassy's cultural counsellor, said Wednesday the cancellation was blamed partly on reaction to shows by Britain's pop duo Wham!, the first big-name foreign rockers to perform in this country.

The pair put on a loud two-hour show in Peking and Canton in early April, with go-go girls clad in skimpy black leather and a videotape of young lovers shown during intermission. Police stopped fans who tried to dance in the aisles.

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Miss America Susan Akin says the arrests 21 years ago of her father and grandfather in connection with the slayings of three civil rights workers in Mississippi should have no effect on the way she is judged.

"I'm Miss America and my family is not," Miss Akin, 21, of Meridian, Miss., said Tuesday when reached by telephone in her Chicago hotel room.

Her grandfather, Bernard Lee Akin, was indicted on federal civil rights charges in connection with the slayings of Michael Schwerner, Andrew Goodman and James Chaney near Meridian in 1964.

Bernard Akin, described by the FBI at the time as a member of the Ku Klux Klan, was acquitted after a trial and died several months later. He had been charged with knowing about the killings and allowing people who were going to participate in them to fill their cars with gas at his mobile home lot.

Miss Akin's father, Earl, was charged with withholding information from investigators. The charges were dropped and he was never tried.

"Why judge me on something that happened with my family years and years ago before I was even born?" said Miss Akin, who was born two months after the slayings.

"I don't even know the facts about these things because I don't want to know," she said. "It's horrible that those things went on."

Pageant Chairman Albert A. Marks Jr. said the charges will not affect Miss Akin's relationship with the pageant.

"I don't think anything in her family background should be related to the young lady herself," said Marks.

Several magazines this week carry articles detailing alleged activities by her father and grandfather.

"It's just bad judgment to try to link her with something that was connected with her father," said Obie Clark, president of the Meridian chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Earl Akin, contacted at his mobile home business in Meridian, refused to comment.

"I got no problems with my relationship with my daughter," he told the Jackson (Miss.) Daily News. And asked by The Press of Atlantic City if he was a member of the Ku Klux Klan in 1964, he said, "I've got no comment about that."

Miss Akin's parents are divorced. Her mother, Dorothy Little, said, "People will not hold this against her as an individual."

Sakowitz wants to shut down 5 stores

2 in Houston, one each in Dallas, Midland, Tulsa

Sakowitz said Monday that it plans to close five department stores, including its downtown and Gulfgate Mall operations.

The Houston-based department store chain has operated under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy code since Aug. 1.

Hearings on the closing proposal are scheduled for 3 p.m. today in U.S. Bankruptcy Court

capital to the financially ailing firm.

If approved by Wheless, stores to be closed by the end of their leases include the two Houston stores and stores in Village on the Parkway in Dallas, Midland Park Mall in Midland and Kingston Galleria in Tulsa.

The two Houston stores would be closed by Nov. 10, with the Midland, Dallas and Tulsa stores closing by Jan. 31.

April-Marcus, a firm that specializes in storing weakened retailers, agreed Aug. advance Sakowitz $2 million cash and lion worth of inventory to replenish s now plans to pump an additional $2 the Houston company.

Humor found in Romanian cemetery

SAPINTA, Romania (AP) — Visitors, leave your sadness at the gate. The brightly colored crosses and cheerful epitaphs in this cemetery may take away some of death's sting.

Locals in this northwest Transylvanian village call it the Merry Cemetery. It attracts tourists from around the world, and people all over Romania are ordering up their headboards in the local style.

Nestled among forested hills, the grounds are dominated by 280 gaily painted oaken crosses, many with tongue-in-cheek couplets about the life — and death — of the deceased.

Most of the crosses and inscriptions are the work of Ion Stan Patras, a master carver who died of leukemia in 1977, age 69. His own remains lie under a vividly colored cross he fashioned himself.

Written in first person, the four- to 10-line epitaphs all tell something about the person they represent.

The fate of Dumitru Holdis, who died after years of drinking tzuica, the local plum brandy, is described in this way:

"Tzuica is a genuine pest; It brings us torture and unrest; Since it brought it to me, you see; I kicked the bucket at 43."

Fate gave another hard drinker more time on earth:

"Patac George has been my name; Both at work and merry game; While the world was dear to us; We played pranks over the glass; While we were in our good health; We strove much to amass wealth; Gone is now our wealth and past; To the grave we've come at last; I gave up my life to heaven; At the age of 77."

Dumitru Pop, a Patras apprentice who continued where his late master left off, said the idea of mirth in death was rooted in the tradition of the Dacians, the ancestors of today's Romanians.

"The idea of this cemetery is based on the philosophy of the Dacians, who used to meet death laughing," he told a recent visitor. "They believed that another life started after their passing away."

Pop said ancient traditions and beliefs were better preserved in this isolated region than elsewhere. This part of Transylvania is girdled by mountains, about a mile south of the Soviet border. The main occupations remain forestry and farming.

The epitaphs rhyme, but not all of them are funny. Here is one written about a mother who forgives her son for murdering her:

"I have lain here since I came; Braic Ileana is my name; Sons I had in my life five; Would God keep them all alive; Griga, may you pardoned be; Even though you did stab me; When you came home full of beer; Well have you laid me down here; In the chapel's shade, but you; Shall some day come hither too."

WORLD IN BRIEF

Students boycott schools

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Thousands of students boycotted classes across South Africa today, and some of them attacked their school buildings with gasoline bombs. Police used tear gas and rubber whips to break up the crowds.

Police headquarters in Pretoria said that a riot patrol shot and killed a black man in King William's Town in the eastern Cape Province during a clash with rock-throwers on Wednesday. News reports said the stabbed bodies of a caretaker and lay preacher were found in a burned-out church in East London.

Police also said they arrested 81 blacks in a stone-throwing crowd in Stutterheim, the second mass arrest in two days of violence in that small eastern Cape town.

In Durban's Kwa-Mashu township, firebombs caused more than $40,000 damage at three schools, police said today. Youths also set fire to the car of a school inspector.

Students stoned cars and buses in Soweto, the black township outside Johannesburg, where about 100,000 students boycotted classes on Wednesday. There was no estimate of school attendance today.

Fire sweeps Foreign Office

LONDON (AP) — A pre-dawn fire swept through the British Foreign Office today, heavily damaging the roof and two upper floors of the building across the street from the prime minister's official residence, officials said.

No was hurt, and the fire was brought under control within 45 minutes.

Deputy Fire Chief Gerald Clarkson said the cause of the blaze was unknown but that it was believed to have started accidentally in an section of the 109-year-old building that was being renovated.

Clarkson said there was never any danger of flames spreading to No. 10 Downing St., Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's official residence located about 300 yards from the part of the Foreign Office where the fire occurred.

Mrs. Thatcher and her husband, Denis, were asleep when the fire broke out and were probably unaware of it until later, said Ian Murray, a spokesman at No. 10 Downing St.

Solidarity activist arrested

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Police have arrested Andrzej Michalowski, a Solidarity activist in the northern city of Gdansk, for "aiming to disturb public order," the official Polish news agency PAP reported.

PAP described Michalowski as the head of an illegal group calling itself the "regional coordinating commission" of Solidarity and said he had been in hiding.

"He was detained with documents of the organization, cash and plans and guidelines for illegal activity," PAP said in its report Wednesday.

The agency did not say when Michalowski was arrested or give further details.

Solidarity became the only free union federation in the Soviet bloc when it was chartered by the government following nationwide strikes in August 1980. It was suspended when Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski imposed martial law in December 1981 and subsequently was outlawed.

Colombian piracy reported

CARTAGENA, Colombia (AP) — Pirates masquerading as drifting shipwreck survivors killed the captain and 10 sailors of a ship that picked them up in the Caribbean, authorities said.

The four Colombian pirates then seized control of the ship, the Mister Bee, an official report released by the Administrative Security Department said.

The report issued Wednesday said the pirates spared one crewman to run the ship and a 12-year-old boy found aboard. When the ship ran out of fuel off Honduras, the sailor was left aboard alive.

The boy was taken by the pirates in their launch to the Colombian island of San Andres, the report said, where he was released and made his way to police. The report said the piracy took place two weeks ago, but gave no date and little additional information about the ship.

Heavy floods hit Vietnam

TOKYO (AP) — Vietnam was hit last month by flooding that caused "heavy losses" of life and property, China's official news agency Xinhua reported.

Xinhua, monitored in Tokyo on Wednesday, said that according to Vietnamese press reports, 975,000 acres of rice paddy had been inundated in mid-September by what was referred to as Vietnam's worst flooding in five years.

Details about deaths and property damage were not disclosed, the agency said.

Rescue work was continuing, Xinhua quoted the Vietnamese reports as saying. No information on the flood was available directly from Vietnam.

BUYERS GUIDE
IMPORTANT: Spoken promises are difficult to enforce. Ask the dealer to put all promises in writing. Keep this form.
WARRANTIES FOR THIS VEHICLE:
☐ AS IS—NO WARRANTY
YOU WILL PAY ALL COSTS FOR ANY REPAIRS. The dealer assumes no responsibility for any repairs regardless of any oral statements about the vehicle.
☒ WARRANTY
☐ FULL ☒ LIMITED WARRANTY. The dealer will pay 100 % of the labor and 100 % of the parts for the covered systems that fail during the warranty period. Ask the dealer for a copy of the warranty document for a full explanation of warranty coverage, exclusions, and the dealer's repair obligations. Under state law, "implied warranties" may give you even more rights.
SYSTEMS COVERED: Engine: Cylinder Block and All Internal Parts, Cylinder Head Assembly, Timing Case, Camshaft, Main and Connecting Rod Bearings, Valves and Valve Springs, Rocker Arms, Valve Lifters, Timing Chain and all Internal Parts, Timing Gears, Water Pump, Manifolds, Flywheel, Clutch Assembly (Except Clutch Disc), Transmission Case and all Internal Parts, Torque Converter, Drive Shaft, Rear Axle, Transfer Case and all Internal Parts, Universal Joints, Wheel Bearings, Cardan Shaft, Front Wheel Drive Axle Shafts and Constant Velocity Joints, Differential Case and all Internal Parts, Transmission Mounts, Engine Mounts, Rear Wheel Drive Axle Shafts, Constant Velocity Joints, Universal Joints and Yokes.
DURATION: All listed components are covered for 3 Months from the vehicle sale date or 3,000 miles from the vehicle's odometer reading at the time of vehicle sale, whichever comes first, after purchase by the customer of the first item of covered repair costs for each repair visit.
☐ SERVICE CONTRACT. A service contract is available at an extra charge on this vehicle. Ask for details as to coverage, deductible, price, and exclusions. If you buy a service contract within 90 days of the time of sale, state law "implied warranties" may give you additional rights.
PRE-PURCHASE INSPECTION: ASK THE DEALER IF YOU MAY HAVE THIS VEHICLE INSPECTED BY YOUR MECHANIC EITHER ON OR OFF THE LOT.
SEE THE BACK OF THIS FORM for important additional information, including a list of some major defects that may occur in used motor vehicles.
