Daniloff leaves 'more in sorrow than anger'

MOSCOW (AP) — American reporter Nicholas Daniloff was freed by the Soviet Union today and headed for West Germany, signaling the apparent end of a month-long diplomatic showdown that had threatened to wreck superpower relations.

The 51-year-old journalist, Moscow correspondent for U.S. News & World Report for five years, told reporters he was leaving "more in sorrow than in anger."

The release of Daniloff, who had been accused by the Soviets of spying, came after long hours of negotiations in Washington and New York between U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze.

But it was not immediately clear whether Gennadiy Zakharov, a Soviet charged with espionage in New York, would also be freed as part of a superpower deal.

The U.S. attorney's office in Brooklyn, N.Y., where Zakharov was indicted, said today there was no change in his status.

New York sources have said the final arrangement might also include the release of some Soviet dissidents. The Soviets, meanwhile, have sought a relaxation of a U.S. order expelling 25 Soviet diplomats from the United States.

Daniloff had been living in the U.S. Embassy in Moscow since Sept. 12, when he was released into the U.S. Embassy's custody after 13 days in Lefortovo Prison.

At the same time, U.S. officials released Soviet U.N. employee Zakharov, who was arrested Aug. 23, into the custody of Soviet Ambassador Yuri Dubinin.

Daniloff, accompanied by U.S. Charges d'Affaires Richard Combs, rode out of the U.S. Embassy compound today in an embassy vehicle and flashed a "V for victory" sign to waiting reporters.

He and his wife, Ruth, later arrived at Sheremetyevo Airport, accompanied by Combs, the U.S. News & World Report deputy managing editor, Henry Trehwitt, and Jeff Trimble. Daniloff's replacement here, and caught a Lufthansa flight to Frankfurt, West Germany. It took off at 7:15 p.m. (11:15 p.m. CDT) and was scheduled to land at 8:30 p.m. local time (2:30 p.m. EDT).

"I was informed sometime this afternoon that I would be allowed to leave," Daniloff told reporters at the airport. "My passport was returned by the Foreign Ministry with my multiple-entry visa and my press card, which is still valid."

"I want to say that I don't know the terms of the arrangement," Daniloff said. "As far as I know, I am leaving independently."

Ruth Daniloff said it felt "terrific" to be going home.

They were escorted through a special customs channel by a Lufthansa agent and headed for passport control.

U.S. officials had asserted that Daniloff was arrested on trumped-up charges of espionage in retaliation for Zakharov's arrest. The Soviets denied a link between the cases, and for their part insisted Zakharov was framed by the FBI.

Christian hardliners murder army officer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Christian hardliners killed a senior army officer in his bed this morning after his troops fatally shot two Christian militiamen in the central Lebanese mountains, police reported.

The killings came only hours after the regular army and the 8,000-strong Christian Lebanese Forces militia teamed up in 24 hours of fierce combat in east Beirut to crush an attempted comeback by an ousted pro-Syrian militia commander.

Police today put the casualty toll from the weekend fighting at 65 killed, 200 wounded and 55 missing.

The slayings of the army officer and the Christian fighters, however, indicated growing friction between the military, which is loyal to President Amin Gemayel, and the Lebanese Forces, the dominant militia in the nation's Christian heartland.

Police said Lebanese Forces militiamen broke into the house of Col. Khalil Kanaan in Christian east Beirut's Hazmieh district before dawn and sprayed his bed with submachine gun fire.

The colonel died from 28 bullet wounds and his wife was seriously wounded, police said.

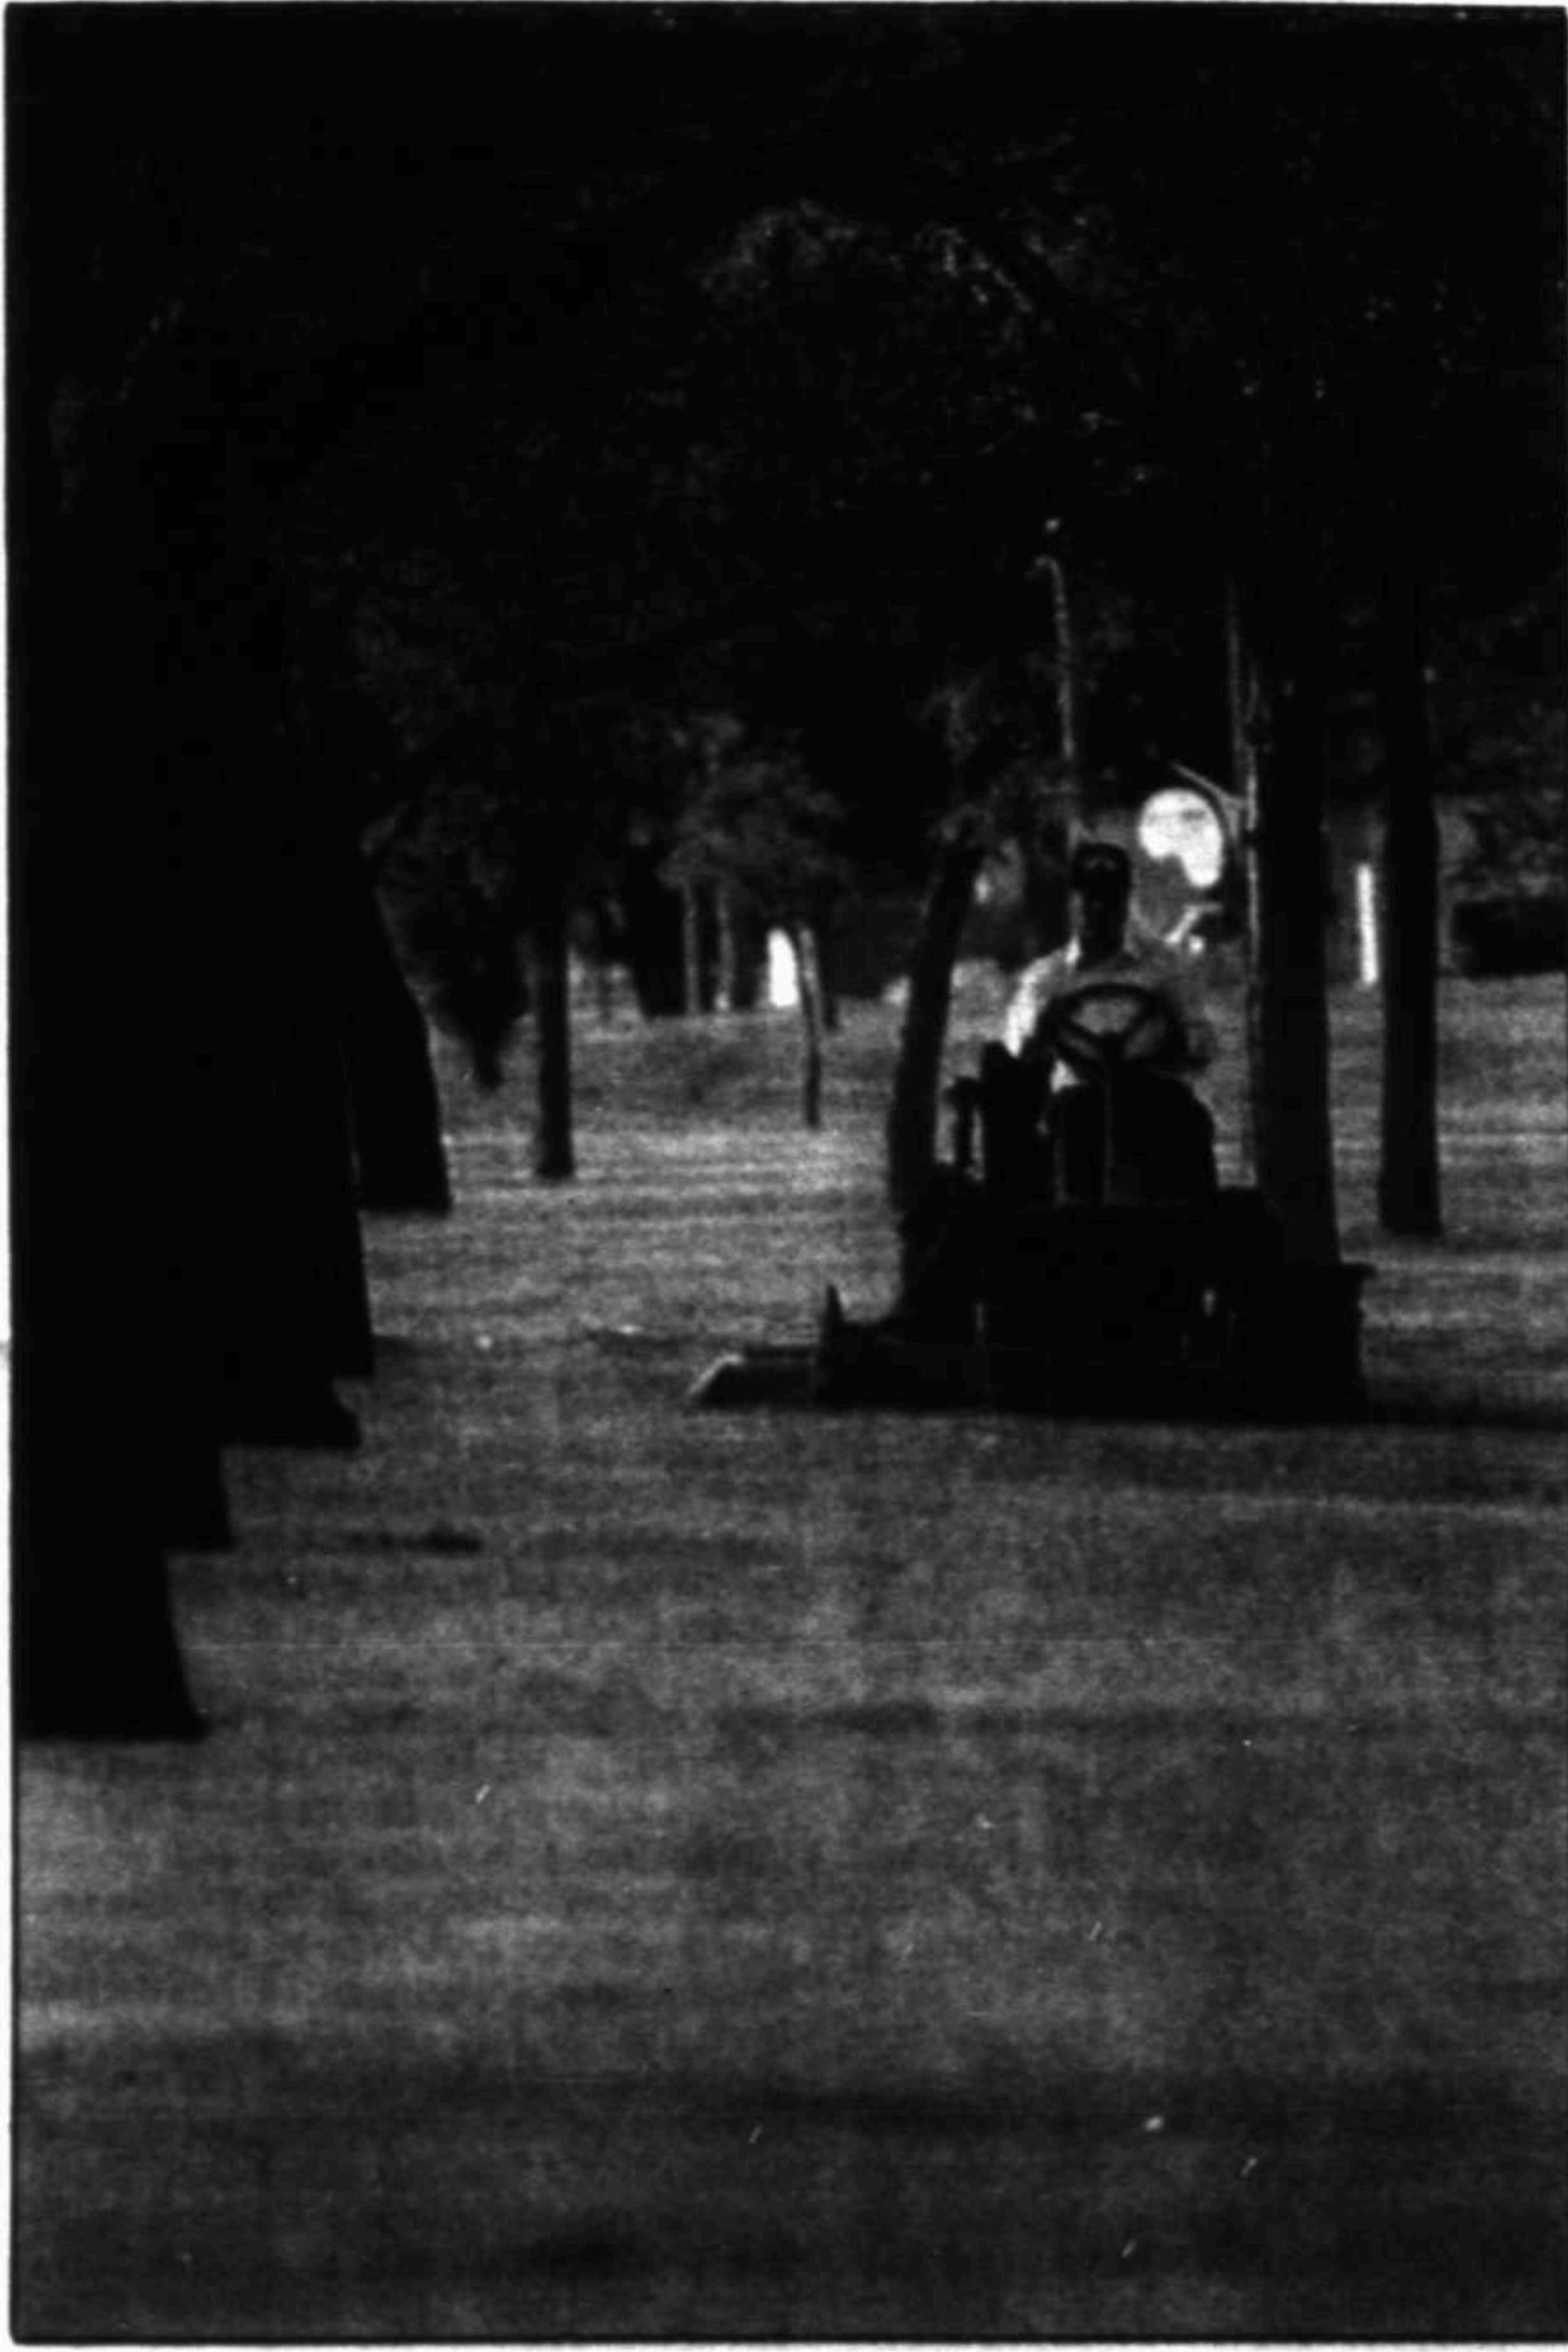

Kanaan, 55, was the commander of the army's predominantly Christian 5th brigade. His troops killed two Lebanese Forces militiamen at a checkpoint near a military garrison in the central mountain resort of Monteverde on Sunday, police said.

Lebanese Forces commander Samir Geagea dispatched a militia contingent to the mountaintop resort on Sunday without consulting the army command.

Lebanese Forces spokesmen said the move was intended to reinforce the army against a possible thrust by pro-Syrian Christian dissidents following their weekend defeat in east Beirut.

But officers of the 5th brigade garrison ordered the Lebanese Forces contingent to remove a checkpoint near an army position. Soldiers opened fire when the militiamen ignored the order, police said.

Ex-autoworker indicted for alleged war crimes

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel today indicted retired U.S. autoworker John Demjanjuk on charges of personally causing the deaths of hundreds of thousands of people at the Nazis' Treblinka extermination camp during World War II.

Demjanjuk's trial, not expected to begin before late December, will be the first of an alleged Nazi war criminal in Israel since Adolf Eichmann was convicted 25 years ago for masterminding the slayings of 6 million Jews during World War II. Eichmann was hanged.

The Ukrainian-born Demjanjuk, 65, was charged in a 26-page indictment with "crimes against the Jewish people, crimes against humanity, war crimes and crimes against minorities."

Demjanjuk, formerly of Cleveland, Ohio, is accused of being the sadistic guard "Ivan the Terrible" at the Treblinka camp in Nazi-occupied Poland where at least 900,000 people, mostly Jews, were killed.

The indictment, presented at Jerusalem District Court, said Demjanjuk's alleged crimes were "of incomparable severity."

"He took part in forcing Jews and others into the gas chambers at the camp, he operated the motor by which they were asphyxiated and in this way caused the deaths of hundreds of thousands of people," the indictment read.

Noted Midland oilman dies in auto accident

John J. Redfern Jr., 73, prominent Midland civic and petroleum industry leader whose community service spanned decades and encompassed virtually all areas of civic life, died Sunday in Dane County, Wisc., following an automobile accident.

Mr. and Mrs. Redfern and other family members had been attending Parents Weekend activities for their grandson at the University of Wisconsin at Madison. At the time of the accident Redfern was enroute to a business meeting alone while members of the family were returning to Midland by plane.

The family has announced there will be no funeral service but friends may call at the home between 5-7 p.m. Tuesday and Wednesday. It has been requested that, in lieu of flowers, donations may be made to the Midland Memorial Hospital Foundation or a favorite charity.

French cameraman missing

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A French free-lance cameraman is missing and presumed kidnapped in Moslem west Beirut, French embassy spokesman Francois Abi Saab said today.

The victim was identified as Jean-Marc Sroussi, 41, who has been living in the Lebanese capital since 1982.

Abi Saab said Sroussi was last seen by acquaintances driving across Beirut's dividing Green Line from the Christian to the Moslem sector Sunday.

He said Sroussi's disappearance was reported to the embassy by his Lebanese fiancée Mona Habshi.

A witness, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said he saw Moslem gunmen at the Green Line's Mreijeh crossing climb into Sroussi's car and race away.

They were overheard saying that they were taking him back to east Beirut.

Sroussi became the 20th foreigner missing or kidnapped in Lebanon.

They include six Americans, two of them abducted this month, and nine Frenchmen.

Hobby calls temporary tax hike 'good bill'; It awaits Senate action

AUSTIN (AP) — A $869.2 million increase in sales and gasoline taxes was awaiting Senate action today, and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said the Legislature might adjourn its budget-balancing special session by midweek.

"I think it's a good bill," Hobby said Sunday after a five-minute meeting in which the Senate formally received the tax bill from the House.

The House passed the tax bill Saturday, along with $582 million in spending cuts to help the state out of a $2.8 billion budget deficit brought on by the oil price drop.

A majority of senators had resisted deeper spending cuts and pushed for a tax hike since the Legislature's back-to-back special sessions began on Aug. 6.

The temporary tax package would raise the sales tax from 4 1/2 percent to 5 1/4 percent, and add 5 cents to the 10-cent per-gallon gasoline tax. Both would take effect Jan. 1 and expire on Aug. 31.

The spending cut bill would eliminate nearly 2,000 state jobs and wipe out a 3 percent state employee pay raise scheduled for 1987.

Also approved by the House was a provision to allow counties and cities not now collecting a transit tax to add a half-penny to their local sales taxes.

At a session attended by only three senators, Hobby said the Senate Finance Committee would hold a hearing on the tax bill today.

State accuses anti-abortion center of misleading pregnant women

FORT WORTH (AP) — The state attorney general's office claims an anti-abortion center is violating deceptive trade laws by misleading women about what the clinic does. If the Pregnancy Problem Center continues to disguise its true intentions, the state says that it will seek to close it.

Inside the clinic, women seeking information on abortions are instead shown graphic films of abortions, impassioned counseling and offers of financial assistance, the attorney general's office says.

The center, which uses graphic films and offers of financial assistance to convince abortion-seeking women to carry their babies to full-term, was scheduled to face a court hearing today.

Advocates on both sides of the abortion issue say the case could affect the futures of such centers across the country.

The center's anti-abortion operators counter that because they do not charge for their services, they should not be subject to state laws governing commerce.

Center operators say they are competing with abortion clinics for customers. Citing a success rate of 77 percent, or nearly 1,000 babies saved in two years, they say they are fully convinced that the end justifies the means.

"I understand that under other circumstances, it would be improper to go as close to the line as we go...avoiding telling people we're pro-life," said Chuck Pelletier, who opened the center in June 1984 after meeting pro-life advocate Robert J. Pearson.

"The bottom line is we're in competition with the death chambers for the same lives," he said.

Pupils' anti-drug club something to crow about

HOUSTON (AP) — Many Houston schoolchildren are proud to be "chicken" when it comes to drugs, say student members of a club that has turned the tables on traditional peer pressure tactics.

It's called the CHICKEN Club, a successful peer pressure program sponsored by the Houston-area chapters of Optimists International. The letters in the club's name stand for Cool, Honest, Intelligent, Clear-headed, Keen, Enthusiastic, and Not into drugs.

Pupils are exposed to the club through a sports personality during school assemblies such as the one recently attended by about 1,000 students at the Levy Fry Elementary School in Texas City.

"Everybody keeps telling us how bad drugs are. I believe them. It seems like anyone who would try drugs is stupid," said Wes Tipton, 10, a fifth-grader, after hearing a talk by former New Orleans Saints and Houston Oilers running back Earl Campbell.

"I'm joining the club because I don't do drugs, and I don't want you to do them either," Campbell, who was wearing a club T-shirt, told the students.

"I play football myself, and I look up to Earl Campbell," said Dominic Clay, 10, also a fifth-grader. "If he says stay off drugs, I'm going to listen."

Ground broken for vets' memorial

DALLAS (AP) — In a driving rain that left them soaked but not scattered, Texas Vietnam veterans gathered at the State Fair to break ground for a monument to their missing and dead.

The crowd of about 350 stood at attention, rapt in the National Anthem struck by the moment that was, for some of them, 20 years in the making.

"Five years ago they would have never stood there for us, in the rain like that," said Roy Benavides, a Vietnam vet who wore around his thick neck the pale blue ribbon of the Medal of Honor. "Years ago, the civilians were burning flags and draft cards. It moved me that things have changed enough for them to stand with us in the rain."

The veterans had arrived Sunday in sunshine only minutes earlier from suburban sanctuaries and veterans' hospitals with friends or their families. They had a Marine band and color guard, a dais of dignitaries and the names of the 3,405 Texans known dead or missing in action on red, white and blue balloons.

The dead militiamen were brothers from the powerful Christian Rahmeh clan. Their relatives, members of the Lebanese Forces, carried out the attack on Kenaan's house, a mile from Gemayel's presidential palace, police said.

The killers then raided the village of Ghazir, 12 miles northeast of Beirut, and destroyed the house of Maj. Antoine Krayyem, the commanding officer of the army's Monteverde garrison. He was not in the house, police said.

The collapse of Hobeika's thrust consolidated Geagea's position as the strongman of Lebanon's 1.8 million Christians, who, though outnumbered by Moslems, have traditionally dominated Lebanon politically.

Hobeika was ousted from the Lebanese Forces command in January in fighting that left 350 people dead.

The Lebanese Forces claimed that Syrian troops and Moslem militias provided active support for Hobeika's thrust.

But the Syrian command and its Moslem militia allies denied any involvement, describing the fighting as a Christian power struggle.

Geagea, in launching his takeover bid in January, accused Hobeika of giving too much Christian power away to Moslems in a peace pact signed with Moslem militia leaders on Dec. 28.

The Syrian-brokered accord was an attempt to end the civil strife that has killed more than 100,000 people in Lebanon in the past 11 years. Syria is the major power broker in Lebanon, its neighbor to the west.

Although the White House had consistently ruled out a swap of Danilo off for Zakharov, U.S. and Soviet officials had discussed the case intensively for weeks.

Daniloff was arrested by eight KGB agents after, he said, a Soviet acquaintance handed him a package which he believed to contain press clippings.

When the package was opened at Moscow's Lefortovo Prison, it turned out to be filled with maps marked secret and photographs of Soviet military installations, equipment and soldiers.

The KGB held Danilo off at the prison until Sept. 12, putting him through 30 hours of intensive interrogation, before releasing him to the U.S. Embassy's custody. The terms of his release from prison restricted him to Moscow, and he remained under indictment, a three-count charge that roughly paralleled the charges filed against Zakharov.

In their fourth unannounced meeting on the subject in six days, Shultz and Shevardnadze met for three hours late Sunday in New York.

The Danilo off case has been one of several problems blocking progress toward arranging a second summit between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

While the U.S. concern was focused on the spy charges filed against Danilo off, the Soviets objected strongly to the U.S. decision to expel 25 Soviet diplomats attached to their U.N. mission. All have been ordered to depart by Wednesday.

The United States, contending that the mission is excessively large and engages in spy activities, has ordered a phased withdrawal of 106 Soviet diplomats over a two-year period.

Shultz indicated the explosion order was not negotiable, but Soviet spokesman Gennady Gerasimov suggested Moscow would retaliate unless the decision was reversed.

Number of women officeholders up

WASHINGTON (AP) — Women hold elected city offices in greater numbers than ever before, a trend that extends to all regions of the country, a study by the National League of Cities said today.

The report said women hold more than 15 percent of the mayors and city council positions in the nation's 2,858 cities with populations greater than 10,000, and the 297 smaller cities that are members of the League of Cities.

In those 2,858 larger cities, 3,175 women serve as mayors or council members, said the report. "Women in Municipal Government"

John Joseph Redfern Jr., was born Oct. 4, 1912, in Jersey City, N.J. He married the former Rosalind Kapps in Troy, N.Y., on June 26, 1936. The couple had celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary this past June.

He attended the University of Oklahoma in 1938-39 and received his degree in civil engineering from Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute at Troy.

In June of this year, Redfern had marked his 47th anniversary in Midland, coming here in 1939 after living in Tulsa and Oklahoma City. He went on to found Flag-Redfern Oil Company here, one of the most successful independent oil companies in the Permian Basin.

Redfern was active and held positions of responsibility in virtually all professional organizations related to the petroleum industry. He was a member and past director of the Independent Petroleum Association of America, a member and executive committee member of the Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association, a director of the New Mexico Independent Petroleum Association and member of the board of executors of the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum.

In 1975 he was selected as one of four oil business leaders to appear before the U.S. House of Representatives and provide background information on the industry.

He maintained a lifelong interest in education and was a trustee of Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute from 1957-81 and served as secretary of the board of trustees. He was a member of the University of Texas Chancellor's Council, the Texas Tech University President's Council and the president's council of the University of Texas M.D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute. He also served on the Southwest Center for Advanced Studies and the Texas Council for Higher Education.

His contributions to civic and cultural life in Midland were equally strong. Among those were: member of Midland Memorial Foundation-Hospital Board of Governors from 1952-84 and chairman from 1977-84; past president and member of Permian Basin Diabetes Association, member and chairman of the Midland Community Theatre board of trustees and member of the boards of Midland YMCA and Museum of the Southwest.

Other civic activities included membership in the Midland Lions Club, past president of Midland County Tuberculosis Society, member of the Exchange Club of Midland and district governor of the National Exchange Club. He was a life member of the Texas PTA and founder and first commissioner of the Midland Junior Baseball Association and is thus credited with being responsible for what was to become Midland Little League.

At the time of his death and since 1979 he had served as a member of the board of Redfern Foundation.

Among the many honors Redfern had received on behalf of his service and support were an honorary doctorate of laws from Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, recipient of the Optimist Club Friend of the Boy Award in 1950 and recipient of the distinguishing service award presented by Midland Memorial Hospital in 1985. His interest in health and medical issues resulted in a special award "for outstanding contributions to the program of tuberculosis control in Texas," presented by the Texas Tuberculosis Association in 1961, and an award for distinguished service presented by the American Diabetes Association in 1980.

Redfern, whose interest in diabetes was sparked when a family member was diagnosed as being diabetic, had served as honorary chairman of Midland's chapter of the American Diabetes Association, participating for years and into his seventies in the annual diabetes bike-a-thon at Midland College.

He was named Outstanding Young Man in Midland in 1947 and had been listed in Who's Who in America since 1959.

Survivors include his wife, Rosalind, one son, John Joseph Redfern III of Midland, and two daughters, Rosalind Redfern Grover of Midland and Roberta Redfern Garst of Irving, and three grandchildren.

CRIMES

It accused Demjanjuk of the "murder of numerous Jews... whom he tortured to death," and of other crimes, including the cutting-off of a prisoner's ear.

Demjanjuk, if convicted, could face the death penalty.

Defense attorney Mark O'Connor, a U.S. citizen, has said that the case against Demjanjuk resulted from mistaken identity, and that "Ivan the Terrible" died in a camp uprising in 1943.

Prosecutors said they would ask that Demjanjuk continue to be held at the maximum security Ayalon Prison near Tel Aviv until his trial, and that a custody hearing would be held later this week.

The indictment procedure in Israel, which has no grand jury system, consists of the presentation by the prosecution of the formal charge sheet to a judge.

CENTER

Three women who said they were misled into going to the clinic and then were emotionally battered filed suit in March 1985 against Mother and Unborn Baby Care of North Texas Inc., which operates a Pregnancy Problem Center.

Two of the women have since dropped out of the suit and a trial date has not been scheduled, attorney B.C. Cornish said.

During a court hearing in April 1985, a woman testifying under the name Elizabeth Collins said an anti-abortion counselor called her a murderer after she told her that she had had a previous abortion.

The case scheduled for trial today is an outgrowth of the women's action. Attorneys say what goes on inside the clinic is not at issue because of free-speech guarantees.

"This is not a lawsuit to try a woman's right to an abortion," said Steve Gardner of the attorney general's office. "What's going on in the clinic is not part of our lawsuit. It is how they're getting them there."

J. Shelby Sharpe, the Fort Worth attorney defending the center, contends that free-speech guarantees should give clinic operators the right to reach abortion-seeking women any way they can.

Bill Price, director of the Texas Coalition for Life, sees the challenge as evidence that the clinics are making an impact.

"They're changing people's minds on abortion," Price said. "These cases don't have anything to do with women who have been emotionally traumatized."

But Bill Baird, a pro-choice advocate, said the clinics are undermining the Supreme Court decision that legalized abortion in 1973.

"Their main goal is to frighten these women (so as) not to exercise their right to choose," Baird said. "It's vitally important for the protection of the public that these fake clinics be exposed for what they are — fake clinics."

Asked if he expected the special session that began Sept. 8 to wrap up Tuesday or Wednesday, he replied, "Something like that."

Hobby, who initially had sought a permanent tax increase to 5 cents to cure the state's money woes, said the temporary tax hike was the best this special session could do.

"Certainly, this is not a perfect result. It's a Band-Aid result. But it's better than the catastrophic result that appeared likely two weeks ago" when the House was insisting that no new taxes be allowed, he said.

House Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, said that after talking with Hobby, he thought the Senate would accept the House-approved plan without amending it.

"We have gone over the entire bill with him, and he indicated to me he thought it was a good bill and he would be working very hard to keep it intact," Lewis said.

For six weeks, Lewis had led tax opponents. But when the issue finally reached the House floor, he cast the first "yes" vote.

Lawyer goes on trial for buying, selling babies

DALLAS (AP) — The trial of a lawyer accused of buying and selling babies in an illegal adoption scheme is set to begin this week in state district court.

Robert I. Kingsley, 61, was arrested July 16, 1985, during a police raid of the office where he practices family law. Officials said more than 20 of his adoptions were investigated by the Texas Department of Health and Human Services.

Prosecutors claim Kingsley bought the infants from their natural mothers and illegally charged the adoptive parents fees unrelated to medical and legal expenses, which are allowed by state law.

Kingsley has denied wrongdoing, and one of his attorneys, Tom S. McCorkle, said his client is the target of state and local authorities who oppose private adoptions handled outside state agencies.

Jury selection in the trial in state District Judge Gerry Meier's court was to begin today.

Naming of three Arab mayors aimed at breaking PLO

By ALLYN FISHER

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel's appointment of three Arab mayors is aimed at breaking the popularity of the Palestine Liberation Organization and encouraging moderates in the occupied West Bank.

The appointments Sunday in Hebron, Ramallah and El-Bireh means the removal of the last of the Israeli officials who ran the 25 cities in the occupied area, military governor Brig. Gen. Efraim Sneh said.

Israel, which captured the territory from Jordan in the 1967 Middle East War, is hoping its actions will help meet U.S. demands to improve the quality of life for the West Bank's 800,000 Palestinian residents.

The move, however, met sharp opposition. Extremists have lashed out with assassination threats against leaders accused of cooperating with Israel.

The last Israeli-appointed mayor,

Zafer el-Masri of Nablus, the largest city in the West Bank, was fatally shot on March 2, three months after assuming the post. Responsibility for the shooting was claimed by two Syrian-backed Palestinian guerrilla factions.

Hebron's new appointee is Dr. Abdel Mejid Zir, 55, an internist who heads the city's health department; former Ramallah mayor Khalil Musa Khalil, 70, assumes the post again, and Hassan El-Tawil, 70, becomes mayor of El-Bireh.

"It is clear they have some courage to have taken such an initiative," a Defense Ministry official said of the appointees, describing them as pro-Jordanians known to oppose the PLO, an organization rejected by Israel.

Jordan tacitly approved the appointees, the official added.

Uncertain still is whether the Israelis will meet Palestinian demands for elections, which have not

Only six mayors in the West Bank were elected in 1976. The rest were appointed by Israel to replace mayors deposed by the army for protesting military rule.

Israel fears that a poll published three weeks ago may galvanize support for the PLO in the area. The opinion survey indicated that 71 percent of the Palestinians in the occupied areas support PLO leader Yasser Arafat.

"We are not talking about people who have political aspirations but people who want to serve their cities and not politics," said Sneh, explaining Israel's choices.

Hebron's former mayor, Mustafa Natshe, deposed by Israel in July 1983, protested the latest appointments as a "violation of our rights."

"This doesn't meet the wishes of our people,"

Former Nablus mayor Bassam Shaka, deposed in 1982, said the new mayors were being used "to counter the rights of the Palestinians."

"It is a political action against the PLO and against national determination for the Palestinian people," Shaka said.

Moderate Bethlehem Mayor Elias Freij urged Israel to allow new elections in the West Bank. But, he added, "What is the alternative? Having an Israeli officer as a mayor?"

The appointments also drew protests from Jewish settlers, who number at least 50,000 in the West Bank. The Gush Emunim settlement movement issued a statement warning that "installing Palestinian mayors in these cities is liable to renew incitement to murder Jews."

Some members of Gush Emunim were convicted last year in three car bombings attacks in 1980 on former Palestinian mayors. Shaka lost his legs in one of the bombings.

The appointments were not announced earlier in an apparent attempt to duck pressures from Palestinian extremists who have been threatening the moderates since Jordan's King Hussein shut 25 PLO offices in his capital, Amman, in July.

A top Jordanian-paid health official, Dr. Yassir Obeid, was stabbed and wounded in Ramallah on Friday, an attack described by police as politically motivated.

Last month, pamphlets distributed in the West Bank warned that "the revolution is watching our every step. The occupation authorities won't protect you from the hands of our revolutionaries."

Hebron, the second largest city in the West Bank after Nablus, has been run by an army officer since Israel deposed Natshe in July 1983. Natshe was fired after a Jewish settler was stabbed to death in the city center.

Ramallah, just north of Jerusalem, has been run by an army officer since Israel fired the elected mayor, the late Kharim Khalaf, in 1981 for his outspoken opposition to the military government.

El-Bireh has been run by an Israeli clerk since its elected mayor, Ibrahim Tawil, was deposed in 1982, also for opposing army practices.

India begins family planning campaign

By EILEEN ALT POWELL

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Nihal Singh waits pensively at a family planning clinic. She is about to undergo a sterilization operation.

One of eight children herself, Mrs. Singh says she and her husband, a security guard at a New Delhi factory, have decided to limit their family to their 6-year-old son and newborn daughter.

"We have high aspirations for our family," the 25-year-old housewife said. "We want to be able to take care of them well, to get a good education for our children."

Those also are the aspirations of India's government in a new family-planning campaign designed to break a cycle of overpopulation and poverty.

It is a formidable goal for India, but if left unchecked its current population of 760 million will increase to 1 billion by the year 2000 and 2 billion by 2050, according to one official projection.

Each year India adds more than 15 million people, equivalent to the whole of Australia, to its population and is rapidly moving to surpass China and its 1.05 billion people as the world's most populous nation. China's birth rate is falling because of a strict program for one-child families.

India's family-planning program is undergoing a comprehensive overhaul on orders from Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi, who earlier this year made "a two-child norm" part of his 20-point anti-poverty program. His government has budgeted more than $2.6 billion for family planning through 1990.

Krishna Kumar, the deputy minister for health and family planning, said in an interview that success will require a social revolution in a country where families of five, six or more children are commonplace.

Already, newspaper ads and posters are advising that "son or daughter, one or two will do." Sex education classes are being developed for the schools, counselors trained for rural health clinics, and folk art groups recruited to both entertain and carry the two-child message to the hinterlands.

Financial incentives such as preference for government loans and government job promotions are also being studied, Kumar said.

The idea, he explained, is to link family planning to all other government programs to try to change the conditions and traditions that have encouraged the perpetual baby boom.

These include widespread illiteracy among women, a preponderance of teenage marriages, rural poverty and a marked preference for boys that often leads to the birth of numerous, less-desired daughters in the quest for sons.

"Population is the most crucial component in India's development program," Kumar said. "It will be critical for the removal of poverty and the transition of the society to a point where the population becomes a resource rather than a handicap."

The government's efforts to enroll people in birth control programs so far have been most successful among urban families, who tend to be better educated and are more exposed to mass media campaigns.

But Satish Chander, education officer for the New Delhi branch of the Family Planning Association of India, says that even in the cities there's a big gap between awareness of the need for family planning and use of birth control.

"Getting people to accept family planning requires face-to-face and heart-to-heart communication," he said. "This is where the emphasis must be now."

He notes Mrs. Singh had her tubal ligation operation at his association's clinic after being brought in by a government counselor.

Return to land of youth both bitter, peaceful

KISHINEV, U.S.S.R. (AP) — For 46 German emigres from this land once known as Bessarabia, a long-awaited return to the hamlets of their youth has brought both bitter disappointment and peace of mind.

"I didn't find it like I had it in my dream," said Alois Kopp, a retired mechanic from Ander, West Germany, after a visit to the Bessarabian village of Ammanal earlier this month.

"We are happy we came here because we have more freedom in the backs of our minds," Kopp said. "We are now free from the homesickness and free from the dreams."

Bessarabia is part of Moldavia, a fertile agricultural region on the northern end of the Black Sea. The area was under Romanian rule from 1918 to 1940 when it was annexed by the Soviet Union.

Thousands of Germans had lived in farming enclaves in Bessarabia since the mid-18th century when their ancestors were lured there with promises of land by Catherine the Great of Russia, who wanted to expand her empire.

When the Soviet Union took possession of Moldavia, the Germans were given the choice of staying or going to Nazi Germany. The option was one of the stipulations included in the Hitler-Stalin nonaggression pact of 1939.

About 89,000 Germans left just before Germany invaded the Soviet Union in June 1941. Many of those who stayed behind were deported to Siberia or the central Asian republic of Kazakhstan because they were suspected of being potential collaborators with the invading Nazis.

"We left because the Russians moved in," said Gabriel Hershey, a retired contractor who was born in the village of Krasnoye and now lives in Kelowna, British Columbia.

WORLD IN BRIEF

West Berlin's security plan brings refusal to Arabs

BERLIN (AP) — Several Arab diplomats based in East Germany have been turned back from West Berlin as part of a new anti-terrorist security plan, a West Berlin official said Sunday.

Hans Birkenbeul, a spokesman for West Berlin's interior affairs department, declined to give the nationalities of the diplomats. Security sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said they were primarily Libyan and Syrian officials.

The Western Allied powers that administer West Berlin under post-World War II agreements imposed random checks on Arab diplomats crossing from East Berlin to West Berlin following the April 5 bombing of a discotheque in West Berlin by terrorists.

Two American soldiers and a Turkish woman were killed in the attack, and 229 people injured, including 63 Americans.

Chinese man released

PEKING (AP) — Authorities have released a Chinese man who was detained in July for traveling through restricted areas of the country with a New York Times correspondent, sources said Monday.

Zhang Daxing, 27, initially was held and questioned by the State Security Ministry and then transferred to a Peking prison, according to the sources who spoke on condition of anonymity. They said he was released last week and was not charged with any crime.

Zhang and a U.S. Justice Department lawyer, Edward McNally, accompanied New York Times reporter John F. Burns, 41, on a motorcycle trip through central China in early July. Most rural areas in China, including some they traveled through, are off limits to foreigners.

Jet aborts flight, injures 10

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A jetliner carrying 195 people aborted its takeoff today after an engine caught fire and plowed off the runway into a field, injuring 10 passengers, the United News of India reported.

The news agency quoted an air-traffic official in the southern city of Madras as saying that the Bombay-bound Indian Airlines Airbus had begun speeding up for takeoff when

The official in Madras, who was not identified by name, said the pilot applied the jet's emergency brakes and that the plane bumped through a field for about one-third of a mile before it came to a stop.

Reporters in Madras said that the jet's two engines and both front wheels were torn off in the emergency stop.

Pakistan threatens Games

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Pakistan threatened Sunday to boycott the Asian Games closing ceremonies if maps of Asian countries to be shown on the stadium scoreboard include a disputed border region as part of India.

At the opening ceremonies Sept. 20, the maps shown on the scoreboard did not include the disputed region. India said it would not take part in the games' closing ceremony, scheduled for Saturday, if this were done again.

Ashok Kumar Mattoo, head of India's delegation, said the games' organizers sent a letter of apology promising to show the disputed region, Kashmir, as part of India. India was satisfied, but Pakistan was angered.

By Jeane Dixon
Tuesday, September 30, 1986

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY:
The secret to winning now is in knowing what you can and cannot do. Remain true to yourself and you will find new satisfaction in both business and your personal life. Romance will be exciting but for the relationship to last, you will have to work at it. Others come to your rescue when you find yourself in a tight spot. Help build confidence in your children.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES:
Angie Dickinson, Irish tenor Kenny Baker, singer Johnny Mathis, Scottish-born actress Deborah Kerr, former Georgia Gov. Lester Maddox, author Truman Capote, columnist Jody Powell, singer Marilyn McCoo.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Pretending to approve of an idea or individual you distrust could do great damage. Others look to you for leadership. Be careful what you say and write.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Doing something unusual could enhance your road to success. Go after what you want. Put some money away for a rainy day. Romance needs more time to mature.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A relationship could be strengthened by quiet reflection today. Discuss any recent disagreements and move forward on a better footing. Changes in another country's economy stimulate business.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Long-distance travel may not be as satisfying as you hoped. Extra time and energy can turn a failure into a success. A financial trend will shift in your favor.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Keep closer tabs on your expenses when traveling. Put receipts in a safe place. A better understanding of new tax laws helps you maximize savings.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Seek professional help if you are disturbed about an unusual situation. Completing a special project on time could earn you a bonus. A phone call shows you a shortcut to success.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): New romantic happiness is within your grasp. Your gift for gab helps you cement an important relationship.

Take stock of your assets and debts and act in a responsible manner.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Learn to accept praise and gifts graciously. Someone who holds you in high regard wants to reward you. Let him! Do what you can to open new doors to a child.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A day calling for tact and diplomacy. Philosophical disagreements could put you at odds with someone you love. Seek the company of those who share your recreational interests.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Stay calm and you will have little to worry about today. Leave your work at the office this evening. You need rest and relaxation in order to be refreshed for tomorrow.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Finalize your travel plans now or you could find it difficult to get out of town at Christmas. Seek out people who are creative and willing to try out your ideas.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Those you have worked with a long time make the most reliable allies now. Daydreaming could interfere with productivity. Get better organized at home and work.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠Q9832 ♠AK63 ♠AQ92

The bidding has proceeded:

West North East South

1 ♠ Pass 1 ♥ ?

What action do you take?

A.—There is a school that believes in never making a takeout double when you hold five spades. Paraphrasing Sam Goldwyn: "Include us out!" If partner has long clubs and short spades, you could easily have a game or slam in clubs. We'd double.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠854 ♠K3 ♠KQ6 ♠J9652

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East

Pass Pass 1 ♠ Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—If your side does not have the values for game, the most likely spot is three no trump. If you now raise to two clubs, partner might think you have an unbalanced hand and, with no inclination to play for 11 tricks, pass. Therefore, we prefer one no trump. That implies a club fit, since you did not bid a new suit at the one level.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠KQ7 ♠AKQJ42 ♠AK103

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East

2 ♠ Pass 3 ♠ Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—You are certainly going to contract for at least a small slam, and a grand slam depends only on partner having the ace of spades. Blackwood won't help—you need a cue-bidding sequence. Jump to four hearts. Since three hearts would be forcing, the jump must be a cue-bid, for the moment agreeing clubs as the trump suit.

Q.4—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:

Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one heart. What action do you take?

A.—You certainly intend competing to the four-level at least. Should you overcall one spade and should the bidding be at four hearts when next it is your turn, you will then have to bid five diamonds. However, if you overcall two diamonds now, you will then be able to compete with four spades, a level lower. So that gets our vote.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠K76532 ♥6 ♠J10 ♠AQ93

The bidding has proceeded:

East South West North

1 ♠ Pass 1 NT 2 NT

Pass ?

What action do you take?

A.—Partner's two no trump is unusual, a takeout for the minor suits. You have a very good hand for him. Don't even think of taking your chances at no trump. Jump to four clubs to show a hand with good minor-suit values that would be perfectly happy to play a game, should partner so desire.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠AK63 ♥7 ♠AK6542 ♠K10

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East

1 ♠ Pass 1 ♥ Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—You have a very good hand, but your shortness in partner's suit and the lack of intermediates in your long suits should cool your ardor. Bid one spade. If partner can't act over that, we doubt that your side will have missed a game.

Have you been running into double trouble? Let Charles Goren help you find your way through the maze of DOUBLES for penalties and for takeout. Daughter reveals Richard Nixon pursued wife Pat with love letters

NEW YORK (AP) — Richard Nixon pursued his wife, Pat, with love letters, nightclub tangos and a diamond ring hidden in a May basket, according to a book by their daughter Julie Nixon Eisenhower.

Mrs. Eisenhower's biography "Pat Nixon: The Untold Story" also tells how her mother held hands with the president at the White House when she thought no one was watching.

"I wanted to give a full picture of my parents together, because so many times they've been viewed from controversy," Mrs. Eisenhower said in an interview published in Time magazine.

Mrs. Nixon was said to have been more upset about the pardon Nixon received from President Ford than from the resignation itself. For Mrs. Nixon, the pardon was the saddest day of her life, since she believed Nixon had done nothing wrong, according to the book.

"Watergate is the only crisis that ever got me down," she told her daughter. "He was always thinking about the country and not himself."

LONDON (AP) — The infant daughter of British actor Anthony Andrews will have a royal godmother — Princess Anne.

Anne, a longtime friend of the actor and his wife, Georgina, attended the christening of their daughter, 5-month-old Amy-Samantha, in the Andrews' country estate in Berkshire, England, on Saturday.

Andrews is best-known to television audiences as Sebastian Flyte in "Brideshead Revisited."

He and his wife have two other children.

Collins

LONDON (AP) — Joan Collins plans to quit her role as Alexis in the television series "Dynasty" in 18 months to produce movies, it was reported Sunday.

Britain's domestic news agency Press Association said the British star revealed her plans in a five-part television interview to be broadcast this week.

"Dynasty will be going on for another year and a half as far as I'm concerned," Miss Collins was quoted as saying.

When pressed, she was quoted as saying: "Yes, I am going off, I'm going to produce my own movies." But she added, "I am allowed to change my mind."

The television show centers on a Denver millionaire named Blake Carrington, played by John Forsythe, and co-stars Linda Evans as his wife and Miss Collins as his vindictive former wife. It has been among the top-rated television shows of the decade.

Press Association quoted Miss Collins as saying, "I feel at the moment I've done 5 1/2 years. In another year and a half I think the possibilities of what they can do with her (Alexis) will have been exhausted."

She also was quoted as saying she feels the pressure of non-stop work. "It is not so much the work, but it is just the constant primping that really gets to me after a time."

NEW YORK (AP) — This year's cast of "Saturday Night Live" will have only three holdovers from last season, NBC says.

The comedy series, in its 12th year, had hinted of wholesale changes by portraying the entire cast caught in a fire during last season's final show.

The survivors — Nora Dunn, Jon Lovitz and Dennis Miller — will be joined by newcomers Dana Carvey, Phil Hartman, Jan Hooks and Victoria Jackson, NBC said Sunday.

Lost in last season's shuffle were Joan Cusack, Robert Downey, Anthony Michael Hall, Terry Sweeney, Randy Quaid and Danitra Vance.

SNL makes its season premier on Oct. 11 with "Aliens" star Sigourney Weaver as guest host, NBC said.

ATLANTA (AP) — The frequent use of color photography and copying machines during Jimmy Carter's four years in the White House is complicating the job of National Archives librarians trying to preserve his presidential materials.

Millions of pages of documents, memos and letters along with 15 million photographic negatives are being assembled in the Carter Presidential Library, which takes up 70,000 of the 130,000 square feet in the Carter Presidential Center.

The center will open to the public Thursday, one day after Carter dedicates the center with a ceremony in which President Reagan is expected to participate.

The library will be deeded to the National Archives and Records Administration while the rest of the $25-million privately financed Carter Presidential Center remains in the hands of an operating foundation.

Although most of Carter's presidential papers have been moved to the library from storage in a former Atlanta post office, the photo negatives remain in Washington, said Donald B. Schewe, director of the library portion of the center.

The library's collection will not be open to researchers for at least another month, and then only the portions that have been processed will be available for examination.

"We just can't open everything at once," Schewe said. "The volume of material is so great that, if we had to process everything, the staff would be huge."

When Franklin Roosevelt was in office, from 1933 to 1945, he generated a small number of photographic plates and files totaling 5.5 million pages. Carter's materials include more than 27 million pages, 1.5 million negatives, 3.8 million pages of campaign records and 18,000 gifts presented to the White House during his term.

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Frank Sinatra, returning to sing in the land of his parents for the first time in 24 years, carried his audience on a nostalgic trip through an American "supermarket of dreams."

The 70-year-old singer turned on the charm and the verve, willing away the ghosts of Italian performances past and repeatedly bringing 9,000 spectators to their feet Saturday night.

Millions more — lacking one of the $71 to $360 tickets to the Palatrussardi tent-theater on the edge of this industrial city — watched the 85-minute concert live on television.

"Sinatra hasn't grown older at all," said Aldo Diuri, a 40-year-old fan from Bergamo, north of Milan. "He's a legend. He can't grow old."

There was a hint of gravel in his voice when he sang in a low whisper, "my last goodbye," from "What Now My Love," and some of his highest notes seemed strained. The hair has silvered and thinned and the boyish face that inflamed passions now is slightly puffy.

Behind the rhetoric

Arms control, 1986-style, is an exercise in paradox. Chilly U.S.-Soviet relations would seem to create an inhospitable climate for an arms agreement or a fruitful summit between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev. But in this case, appearances don't tell the whole story. Much of what has been put out by both sides is for public posturing purposes only. Believe it or not, beneath the harsh rhetoric and the distraction of a spy incident, there's real reason to hope for an arms accord.

President Reagan's speech before the United Nations this week — a speech greeted with silence from the audience and optimism elsewhere — is a case in point. It conveyed both toughness and conciliation.

The president blasted the Soviets for imprisoning an "innocent hostage," Nicholas Daniloff, the Moscow correspondent for U.S. News & World Report. He also delivered a lengthy criticism of Marxist-Leninist ideology and Soviet foreign policy.

Clearly, the Daniloff case casts a pall over the prospect of a Reagan-Gorbachev summit. U.S. and Soviet officials must find a way to break the impasse over how to free him and what to do with Gennady Zakharov, the Soviet U.N. employee arrested by U.S. officials for alleged spying.

But at the same time, the president, in his U.N. speech, gave a clear signal that the Daniloff incident has not completely overshadowed the more important issue of global security. Reagan offered the Soviets a seven-year delay in deploying a Star Wars yet-to-be-developed defense system. Even after 1991, the nation deciding to deploy Star Wars technology would have to come up with a plan to share the new system and eliminate ballistic missiles.

The president's proposal for delayed deployment may help pave the way for an agreement with the Soviets. We are especially pleased with the possibility of a massive U.S.-Soviet missile reduction in Europe.

If there is a summit that ends in an arms agreement, it will come despite U.S.-Soviet tensions, despite the Daniloff incident and despite opposition to arms control from some elements in both countries. It will come because President Reagan and Gorbachev do not want to inflict on their countries the terrible cost of an unbridled arms race.

Another View: Balancing freedoms

In human affairs, very few cases are open and shut. A plausible argument can almost always be made for both sides (or every side, if there are more than two), and reasonable people can honestly disagree about who is right.

This is especially true in matters of law, where it is all but impossible to enunciate hard-and-fast principles that always apply no matter what the circumstances. Almost without fail, whenever such principles are announced, a new set of facts comes along, and applying the principle to those facts produces the "wrong" answer. This paradox makes the law forever incomplete and endlessly fascinating.

What judges do, then, is to balance competing interests, putting each side's arguments on the scales and deciding which has the greater weight. Frequently, the competing interests involve fundamental principles and values. For example, there is a fundamental tension between freedom and order, both of which our society cherishes.

Every law is an infringement of your freedom to do what you like. Yet we all give up a certain amount of freedom in the interest of an orderly world. Where to strike the balance between freedom and order is a judgment that each of us makes individually based on our personal preferences and beliefs, and that we make collectively through the political process.

Consider three familiar situations that have much in common: screening of air passengers and their baggage, police roadblocks to catch drunken drivers and random urine testing for illegal drugs. In each of these circumstances, large numbers of innocent people are searched in order to catch a few who are guilty. Yet, while hardly anyone objects to airport screening, many people, ourselves included, object to wholesale, mandatory drug testing without individualized cause. Sobriety checkpoints are probably in the middle.

The difference in these cases comes in the balancing. Society's interest — and each passenger's interest — in preventing airplane hijackings is large and immediate. The search that is conducted is minor, and each passenger knows beforehand that his hand baggage will be X-rayed and may be searched. In weighing society against the individual, society wins hands down.

In the case of drug testing, many people believe that the social danger is also great, though the immediate threat to others is not so palpable. The invasion of the individual, however, is much greater. A urine sample must be produced and usually it must be produced in the presence of someone else, who certifies that it comes from the person being tested. When these interests are balanced, the result is different than it is for airport screening. To our mind, the individual's rights outweigh society's.

Sobriety checkpoints are the troubling middle ground. As in the airport case, drunken drivers present an immediate danger to others, though not as great as an airline passenger with a bomb. And the police "search" is more of an intrusion than X-ray screening but less than imposed by a urine test. A California state appellate court ruled last week that sobriety checkpoints are unconstitutional. Another appellate court in San Francisco had previously held them to be legal. On balance — notice the balancing — we'll live with the roadblocks, though they make us uncomfortable.

Some judges, including the new chief justice of the United States, invariably balance on the side of society, finding in almost all cases that the broad social interest outweighs individual rights. Other people, including us, put their thumbs on the scale of the individual in weighing competing claims.

The answer cannot be found in the law but in each person's sense of what is right. Overarching principles are a valuable guide, but each situation must be decided on the specific facts and their relative weights.

'War on drugs' starts war over funds

WASHINGTON — The White House and Congress have declared all-out war on drug dealers. Assuming the fervor lasts beyond Election Day, millions of dollars will soon start flowing to federal drug fighters.

The scramble for these funds has already begun among the various enforcement agencies — a battle that is almost as intense as that between the lawmen and the dope smugglers.

There's nothing particularly new either in the drug problem or in the turf battle. A decade ago the CIA and the Drug Enforcement Administration were engaged in a jealous squabble over the sharing of intelligence on dope traffic.

Now it's the DEA, the Customs Service and the Coast Guard vying for the prestige, personnel and budgetary pie that go to the agency that makes the big busts. Our associate Donald Goldberg has dug up some examples of the internecine bureaucratic bickering that began even before President Reagan and his wife made their joint television call to arms. Here are just a few:

— In Minnesota, DEA and Customs are contesting for jurisdiction over a drug case involving close to $500,000 in gold, silver, coins and cash, according to Justice Department sources. The case was actually broken by an alert bank officer, who reported that the suspect and two associates had been exchanging Swiss francs for dollars in amounts just under $10,000 — the threshold above which such transactions must be officially reported to the government. The suspect has pleaded guilty to possession of 2 pounds of cocaine with intent to distribute.

Customs originally took the lead in the investigation, on grounds that there might have been an international money-laundering operation involved. But DEA officials have been trying to wrest the case away from Customs. The day after the Reagan's TV appeal, a high-level meeting was called at the Justice Department to discuss which agency will get the case. The winner could get the contraband $500,000.

— Customs and the Coast Guard are scrapping over the use of four radar-equipped E-2C aircraft provided by the Navy to patrol the entire southern border. Not only Treasury Secretary James Baker (who runs Customs), but Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., and Rep. Glenn English, D-Okla., have written Attorney General Ed Meese on behalf of the Customs Service.

Customs, the two members of Congress wrote, "has the statutory mission; it has the aircraft capability to carry out a total drug interdiction mission, including surveillance, intercept, tracking and arrest in all environments, and it has a decade of experience in operating a sophisticated, full-scale air drug interdiction mission."

The Coast Guard, meanwhile, says it could operate the Navy planes around-the-clock, while Customs would have to pay its crews overtime. An internal Coast Guard position paper acknowledges that a different airplane would be preferable, "but in order to get the mission, Coast Guard is willing to operate the Navy E-2C aircraft on an interim basis."

— Mexican authorities have forbidden U.S. drug-busters to chase suspected smugglers across the border, but the Bahamas permits such pursuits. This is a great advantage, because some 70 percent of the illicit drugs entering the United States come from the Caribbean.

Customs has responsibility for the operations, but the State Department has jurisdiction over relations with foreign governments, and Foggy Bottom wants DEA personnel aboard each interdiction flight in the name of inter-agency coordination. Customs officials point out that their crews fly out of Homestead Air Force Base, about an hour's drive south of Miami, where DEA is based. Customs argues that the smugglers could be long gone by the time the DEA agent shows up.

FAST-FOOD FAST-TALK Our recent story on the expansion of fast food outlets on military bases raised the ire of Rep. Dan Daniel, D-Va., a member of the Armed Services Committee. Acting as if he were a spokesman for the Pentagon, he fired off a letter to The Washington Post in which he described our report as "inaccurate" and "unrealistic."

We will concede one error. We stated that none of the fast-food outlets on military posts pay taxes. We have since learned that the McDonald's restaurants on Navy bases pay sales taxes. Other than that, we stand by our main point — that most of the fast-food emporia operate tax free and thereby enjoy a business edge that is killing their competitors outside the gates.

'Daniloff hands not totally clean' official says

WASHINGTON — While President Reagan publicly raps the Soviet Union for taking Nicholas Daniloff hostage, a very senior official in his administration has been privately putting out word that the American reporter does not have totally clean hands.

This official, whose authority rivals the president's, has been responding "no" when asked whether he is suggesting there is substance to Moscow's espionage indictment. But he adds Daniloff got himself into deep water by giving cameras to Soviet citizens and asking them to take pictures for him. That violates Soviet law, the official noted.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

A spokesman for Daniloff's magazine, U.S. News & World Report, said he knew nothing about the cameras but added that would only be innovative reporting. Talk by a senior Reagan administration official about Soviet "evidence" against Daniloff looks like an attempt to justify a spy swap that releases Daniloff.

BUCHANAN FANS AGAIN
White House communications director Patrick J. Buchanan was rebuffed again by chief of staff Donald T. Regan when he advocated a bright young conservative as a presidential speechwriter.

The competition had boiled down to Grover Norquist, a U.S. Chamber of Commerce staffer, and Clark Judge, who has been a speechwriter for Vice President George Bush. Buchanan recommended Norquist, an ardent Reaganite considered one of the brightest conservative activists in Washington. But Regan picked Judge.

As overall speechwriting supervisor, Buchanan's personnel selections are subject to what might be expected to be routine review by Regan. But the chief of staff has repeatedly turned down his communication director's recommendations of conservatives to head or join the writers.

CAP'S ENTREE EASED
Ronald Reagan for the first time has set aside a regular weekly meeting with his old friend, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, who has never had the private time with him in the Oval Office that Secretary of State George Shultz has long used to influence policy.

The change was arranged by Vice Adm. John P. Dole, Reagan's national security director. Weinberger, who seldom intrudes on the president, did not request it. When Ponder explained the unequal situation to Reagan, he immediately approved regular talks with Weinberger.

But hard-liners who hope this may steer Reagan away from adopting the State Department's arms control plan may be disappointed. Shultz sees the president alone whenever he likes, sometimes twice a week, and that will not change.

DOLE STIFFS CASEY
Submerged by the load of Senate business preceding adjournment, Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole spurned an effort by Central Intelligence Director William Casey to postpone the CIA's regular authorization bill.

Casey was worried about the amendments to the bill by Sen. Jesse Helms, who is furious at reports that the CIA had investigated his staff. So, the night before the bill came up, Casey quietly requested Sen. Paul Laxalt to ask Dole to "put a hold" on the bill.

Laxalt, general chairman of the Republican Party, did just that. But Dole exploded with a quick "no." If the amendments were all that bad, he said, Casey could get the president to veto the bill. It passed with most of the Helms amendments, and no veto is expected.

WELCOME TO THE GOP

Secretary of Education William Bennett, a newly-converted Republican, was ready to make a two-day Midwestern fund-raising swing when the money-starved, confused campaign of Bill Lucas, Republican candidate for governor of Michigan, told him to unpack his bags and stay home.

A Sept. 16 letter from John Moellenaar, a fund-raiser for Lucas, told Bennett that "regrettably" the campaign would "not be able to host the Oct. 21 event in Holland, Mich. A missed Bennett took this as a disinclination and cancelled the trip. He had looked forward to speaking for Wayne County (Detroit) Executive Lucas, like Bennett a recent GOP convert.

But Mary Paterson, Lucas's campaign manager, told us the state Republican Party was hosting the event and expected Lucas and Bennett both to be in Holland. She had not checked with the secretary of education, who is learning like a child that it is difficult in the Grand Old Party.

CHARLEY REESE

Remember, television's only an industry

The first mistake many people make is to assume that television is a thing that requires critics.

Television is an industry built around a device that transmits sound and pictures through the air or over lines to receivers. To buy into the industry's hype that television is an aspect of entertainment or journalism is to miss its significance.

As an invention, the television transmitter-receiver has more far-reaching social consequences than the machine gun or the airplane. As for entertainment or journalism, television transmission is to those fields what the pipeline business is to the oil industry.

Because it developed in a capitalistic society, which views the universe itself as a marketplace, television transmission has been seen as a way to make money. It makes enormous amounts of money. It has done what every salesman since human society began dreams of doing — planted itself permanently in the customer's living room.

What the owners of the transmitters care about transmitting are the sales messages. In their view, everything else is merely bait to attract watchers for the sales pitches. They view this filler material with indifference or contempt. All of it, whether entertainment or so-called public affairs programming, is judged by one standard: its effectiveness as bait for the sales pitches.

Only when the Federal Communications Commission began to grumble about the garbage being transmitted did the industry become concerned with its public image. Its response was typical. It would employ the same techniques used to hawk beer and patent medicine to improve its image. It would hype its own paid performers. It would hype itself.

The contempt for the content of the transmissions is nowhere better seen than in the three network morning shows where technology and large amounts of money are devoted to trivializing human life.

Snippets of life, interspersed with commercials and network hype for its own products, are presented by people chosen for pleasant personality and appearance and the ability to be chatty-chatty in 60- and 120-second segments.

To juxtapose life-and-death matters with inane trivia cheapens life itself. Here, look at these starving children; now watch these grieving survivors of a terrorist attack. OK, time out for a sales pitch. Now let's talk with this rock star. Now a sales pitch. Now a snippet about cancer research. Another sales pitch. Now here is a man who paints faces on eggs.

Ayn Rand correctly observed that the way to destroy greatness is to enshrine mediocrity. The television transmission industry does this continuously, for the effect of giving equal billing to the important with the unimportant is to diminish the important.

The power of the technology and the aura of wealth masks this intellectual abuse of watchers. Money buys admiration in America. If you pay a monkey a million dollars a year, people will want to look at it, talk to it and try to get its autograph. Journalists are not immune. They will interview it and write features about it.

The television transmission industry is neither entertainment nor journalism. It is a technological industry, like the atomic power industry. It has the same neutral potential for either great good or great evil, presently loosely regulated, and harnessed to the task of making money.

As the public gradually becomes benumbed, the transmission industry grows more desperate to wake them from their television-stupor. There seems to be no limit to its bad taste or civic irresponsibility in either its programming or its transmitting sales pitches.

The industry tries to wrap itself in the mantle of the First Amendment. Just remember it operates a government-granted monopoly. With the grant of a government monopoly goes a right to regulate. A responsible government should not abandon that right.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's highlight in history:
On Sept. 29, 1978, Pope John Paul I was found dead in his Vatican apartment by his personal secretary. He had served only 34 days as head of the Roman Catholic Church.
On this date:
In 1789, the War Department established a regular army with a strength of several hundred men.
In 1902, impresario David Belasco opened his first Broadway theater.
In 1918, allied forces scored a decisive breakthrough of the Hindenburg Line in Germany in World War I.
In 1943, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower and Italian Marshal Pietro Badoglio signed an armistice aboard the British ship Nelson off Malta.

In 1956, Nicaraguan leader Anastasio Somoza Garcia died as a result of an assassination.
In 1963, the second session of the ecumenical council Vatican II opened in Rome.
In 1975, baseball manager Casey Stengel died at a hospital in Glendale, Calif., at the age of 85.
In 1982, seven people in the Chicago area died after unwittingly taking "Extra-Strength Tylenol" capsules that had been laced with cyanide. The crime remains unsolved.

Weinberger calls House demand for military to stop drugs 'absurd'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, labeling as "absurd" the House's demand that the military intercept all drug shipments from abroad, said the only way to search every aircraft crossing U.S. borders would be to start shooting them down.

Weinberger says the military already is "doing a very great deal," to fight drugs, including sharing intelligence data with law enforcement agencies and providing logistical help to other nations for drug raids, as was the case recently in Bolivia.

But Weinberger, interviewed Sunday on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press," noted that 76,000 airplanes cross the U.S. borders every day, and, "We haven't yet discovered the means to know what's inside each one of them."

To meet the mandate of the House bill, which would require the military to seal U.S. borders against smugglers, "We'd have to start shooting planes down," he said. "I don't think you want your military out acting like local police I don't."

The House anti-drug bill also establishes the death penalty in major drug sales cases.

The Senate, in a rare weekend session necessitated by a heavy legislative crush as Congress prepares to adjourn for the year, put final touches on its own version of the bill early Sunday.

But the senators backed off from the sealed-border approach and the death penalty provision the House had approved. Final passage of the bill was put off, and the Senate expects to return to the $14 billion measure Tuesday.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger

Senate passage would send the bill to a House-Senate conference committee to reconcile the differences between the two versions. That panel will try to work quickly so both chambers can pass the same bill and send it to President Reagan before Friday's scheduled adjournment.

The death penalty provision was withdrawn from the bill even after a majority of the Senate effectively voted for it, and only 14 senators supported expanded use of the military.

The Democratic-controlled House approved the imposition of the death penalty for persons convicted of large-scale drug sales. A similar amendment to the Senate version was offered by Sen. Mack Mattingly, R-Ga., who called it a good way to deal with "murderous drug kingpins."

An attempt to kill Mattingly's amendment was voted down, 60-25, thereby leaving the provision in the bill, but after winning that key test Mattingly withdrew it for fear death penalty opponents would filibuster final Senate action on the bill.

The military amendment was rejected 72-14 after opponents argued that it would violate individuals' civil rights and would detract from the military's chief mission of defending the nation against armed enemy attack.

"It's about time we used the resources of this country to fight a real war," said Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., as he spoke in favor of forcing the military to fight drug pushers.

However, Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., said using Navy and Air Force equipment to fight drug smugglers would require far greater resources than are now available and would strip all planes and ships now used for other types of surveillance against potential enemy forces.

The Senate did vote 83-4 approval of an amendment that would give the secretary of defense three months to send Congress a list of what actions the U.S. military can take to aid anti-drug efforts by civilian agencies.

Study blasts anti-terrorism measures

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bureau of National Affairs and the inability of American leaders and agencies to understand unconventional warfare are leaving the United States unprepared to deal with terrorism and guerrilla conflicts, a Pentagon study says.

"The peculiar nature of low intensity conflict, the diversity and murkiness of the individual and collective threats, the uncertainty as to our own role and purpose, and conflicting views and varied institutional interests create an atmosphere that encourages confusion and inaction at best, mistake and blunder at worst," said a report prepared over the last year by a joint team from the Army and Air Force.

Many government departments and agencies of the United States fail to comprehend the nature of low intensity conflict, a term used to include terrorism and guerrilla warfare of the type being waged in Central America, the Mideast and the Philippines, the report said.

There are no plans to publicly release the document, although a copy was made available to The Associated Press.

Since it took office, the Reagan administration has quadrupled, from about $440 million to $1.6 billion, spending for special operations forces, including the Army's Green Berets and Navy's SEALs.

But critics say the special operations forces are scattered among the four services and resented by mainstream military officials who have no training in unconventional warfare. Proposals are pending on Capitol Hill to unify all the special forces within a single organizational umbrella.

However, the problem is larger than the organization of special operations forces, the Pentagon study said.

America's vast and powerful military machine was built to fight a nuclear war or a large-scale conventional war, particularly in western Europe, but was not structured to cope with the current situation, which the report notes is "neither war, nor peace."

"As a nation, we do not understand low intensity conflict," the study said. "We respond without unity of effort, we execute our activities poorly, and we lack the ability to sustain operations."

"Short of war, we have no strategy or comprehensive plan to address the challenges of political violence," the study said.

While the authors were military, the report also looked at civilian agencies such as the State Department and the Central Intelligence Agency.

The report said it is intended as "a start point" for the U.S. government to understand the problem and wasn't designed "to recommend those few relevant 'fixes' that would settle this bothersome problem once and for all. As such, the project is not a blueprint, but a dialogue."

A central feature of the Reagan administration's foreign policy has been to strike back at terrorists who hit U.S. citizens, such as the bombing raid on Libya earlier this year.

Soldiers, officers face new fitness tests

WASHINGTON (AP) — After nearly a year's warnings that they should get ready, the soldiers and officers of the Army must begin meeting new physical fitness standards on Wednesday.

While the new standards for the semi-annual fitness exams show little change for younger men, things are about to get tougher for the Army's women as well as men over age 40.

Last November, the chief of the Army's Individual Training Branch distributed an all-points directive, informing soldiers that the Army had decided its physical fitness standards weren't tough enough to encourage regular, year-round exercising.

"The new standards are reasonable, but will require soldiers to participate in regular exercise programs," wrote Lt. Col. Robert Tetu, the chief of the training branch.

"Under the old standards, many soldiers could pass the test without regular exercise. The Oct. 1, 1986, effective date was selected to provide adequate time to work up to, or exceed, the new standards."

It's too early to know whether the soldiers took the advance warning to heart. But some of the new standards do represent a significant toughening of the requirements.

Female soldiers, for example, will have to perform almost twice as many sit-ups as they do now to achieve a passing score. The new standards also will be applied to all members of the National Guard and Army Reserve.

Each of the nation's military services uses a different physical fitness test and scoring standards, with the Marine Corps' test considered the most difficult.

Conditions forecast for 8 AM Tuesday

Partly cloudy skies, possibility of thunderstorms

The National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport is calling for a high in the middle 80s on Tuesday, along with partly cloudy skies, for the Midland-Odessa area. Winds will be out of the south at 10-15 mph.

Tonight, under partly cloudy skies, winds will be out of the southeast at 10-15 mph with a low in the middle 60s. The NWS forecast also calls for a 30 percent chance of thunderstorms tonight.

Sunday's 81-degree high was 19 degrees below the record high set for that date in 1977. Today's low was 30 degrees above the record low of 41 set in 1945.

STATE

Moist tropical air continued to move into Texas today from the Gulf of Mexico as the state's weather pattern was dominated by a large ridge of high pressure over the East Coast.

The moist air produced warm and humid conditions over most of the state and threatened to produce showers and thunderstorms across the state through Tuesday.

Some of the showers and thunderstorms over West Texas might become severe tonight, National Weather Service forecasters warned.

Lows tonight will be mostly in the 70s except for the mid 50s in the mountains and Panhandle and in the lower 80s in extreme South Texas. Highs Tuesday will be mostly in the 80s and 90s except in the Panhandle where readings will be in the 70s.

Showers and thunderstorms were reported at dawn over portions of the Permian Basin and eastern sections of the Panhandle and South Plains. Some isolated showers and light rain fell over parts of North Texas and Central Texas and some widely scattered showers were reported along the coastal plains early today.

NATION

Early Autumn storms continued to plague the Midwest today as tornadoes touched down in Iowa and thunderstorms stretched from Kansas to Michigan.

A tornado hit near Mingo, Iowa, Sunday night while strong winds leveled a house east of Colwell, Iowa. No injuries were reported. Trees were downed in Marne and marbled-sized hail fell at Rockwell, Iowa, as severe thunderstorms moved across the area.

Severe thunderstorms also moved across the Great Lakes on Sunday, bringing strong winds and hail to the region. Wind gusts of over 60 mph were recorded near Lennon, Mich. Strong winds blew a roof off a house at Lavonia, Mich. Intense thunderstorms were also found across southern Wisconsin early Monday.

Arnold Palmer
...crashes win column

Palmer wins one

CAPE ELIZABETH, Maine — Arnold Palmer shot an eagle on the par-5 16th hole Sunday, for his first tournament victory since June, a three-stroke triumph in the $165,000 Union Mutual Seniors. Palmer's 68-200 was good for $38,000. Don Janu-ary finished second at 203, Billy Casper, third, at 207. "You need to win once in a while," Palmer said. "When you don't, getting back on the winning trail is difficult." He said an opening-round 65 "put me in a position to do something in the tournament."

Holly Farms 400

NORTH WILKESBORO, N.C. — Darrell Waltrip grabbed the lead from Geoff Bodine with 11 laps left in the Holly Farms 400 and won his first race at North Wilkesboro Speedway since 1964. The victory allowed Waltrip to move back into second in the Winston Cup standings, just 122 points behind leader Dale Earnhardt. Waltrip has 3,651 and Earnhardt 3,773. Tim Richmond is third with 3,629.

Pepsi 250

BROOKLYN, Mich. — Bobby Rahal won his third straight race, outrunning hard-luck Michael Andretti to win the Pepsi-Cola 250 at Michigan International Speedway, by 3.25 seconds, earning his 13th career victory and fifth of the season.

SW Classic

ABILENE — Seven months ago, Mark Calcavecchia was serving as a caddy for Ken Green in a PGA Tour event in south Florida. "Winning a tournament was the furthest thing from my mind. I was just hoping to be able to get into five or six tournaments. That was my whole plan for the year." He got into a tournament the next week and won a five-figure check, kept on finding ways to play and on Sunday capped one of the great comebacks in golf with a three-shot victory in the Southwest Classic. "That's the hardest thing I've gone through in my life," Calcavecchia said after struggling to a hard-won 71-275 for his first career victory.

Baseball

CHICAGO — Tom Haller placed his name in nomination Sunday for the post of Chicago White Sox executive vice president-baseball operations, left vacant with the resignation of Ken Harrelson. Haller, who was named GM last June when Roland Hemond was kicked upstairs into a secondary role, revealed, "I feel with my background it is a situation I can see myself playing a role in, and I am therefore a candidate for the job."

Cards menacing foe for Cowboys

ABC-TV 8 P.M.

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Dallas not only will be coming off a defeat and playing without Tony Dorsett, but will be facing a team that probably figures a win over the Cowboys would make up for a lot of early season disappointments.

And Tom Landry hopes the Cowboys won't pay a penalty tonight for letting a player slip away and join the St. Louis Cardinals.

"We felt that we needed to make a change," Landry said of safety Dennis Thurman, whom they chose to release after eight NFL seasons. "When you lose a guy like Dennis, it hurts you. It hurts us in coordinating our people, and I think he'll do a super job for St. Louis."

The 30-year-old Thurman, whose 36 career pass-deflections make him the leading active interceptor in the National Football Conference, agrees. "I'm happy to be where I am Sometimes you need a new start," the one-time Southern Cal star said. "I had gone as far as I could go. All I was going to be was a 'nickel' back the rest of my career."

With the Cards, whom he tormented as the ringleader of "Thurman's Thieves" in Dallas' defense, the ex-Cowboy has so far maintained a low profile.

"I've had to take a low-key approach because I came in late," he said. "I have to prove to these guys that I can play football and that I do belong."

Thurman is, of course, only one of several former Dallas team members looking forward to Monday night's reunion.

Gene Stallings, who cut his National Football League coaching teeth under Landry for 14 seasons, is St. Louis' new head coach. His assistants include offensive coordinator Jim

ABC-TV 8 P.M.

Shofner, who served the Cowboys in the same capacity, and defensive backs coach Mel Renfro.

Renfro makes it clear, however, that the Cards are not being molded under Stallings as clones of Landry's perennially strong units.

"Dallas was a finesse team," said Renfro, a former NFL all-pro defensive back for the Cowboys. "That's not Gene's style. He wants to push the opponent off the ball, to beat your man one-on-one."

So far, the scheme has not produced the desired results for St. Louis, 0-3. But there are unmistakable signs of a turn-around.

The Cards, who a year ago ranked near the bottom in the NFL on defense, this year stand fifth. Their pass defense is first, although they rank 25th against the run — a Dallas forte.

However, the Cardinals will not have to contend with Cowboys running back Tony Dorsett, who will not play in Monday night's game because of injury.

Dorsett, who sprained his knee last week against Atlanta, will be replaced by Herschel Walker. It's only the fourth game in 157 that Dorsett has missed in his 10-year pro career. It also will end a 94-game streak.

Stallings cites a multitude of early-season injuries and the team's penchant for picking up costly penalties as particularly devastating.

"I think they're playing with a lot of determination, but we're playing sort of shorthanded," the coach said. "They're doing the right things, but they're not getting in the win column."

A year ago, St. Louis rallied in the second half of a Monday night contest for a 21-10 upset of the Cowboys — one of two Cardinal victories in their last 15 games.

"Basically, we're on the right track except for one thing — the final outcome," Cards linebacker E. J. Junior said. "If we can get out there and play with the intensity we have the first three games ... there shouldn't be any reason why we shouldn't beat Dallas."

Landry said he expects St. Louis to emerge from its doldrums under Stallings, who was his coaching protege until last February.

"Injuries and stuff are hurting him. When that hits you and you lose players, there isn't a heck of a lot you can do," the Dallas coach said. "Once he gets it straightened out, I have no question about his ability."

Pittsburgh beats Oilers in overtime

HOUSTON (AP) — It's developing into another long season for the Houston Oilers, after such a promising start, but as it turned out, beating Green Bay like a drum was no remarkable feat. Everybody's doing it.

Sunday the butter-fingered Oilers lost again, 22-16. It was so much the loss, but to whom? The Pittsburgh Steelers are just a notch above the Packers.

It started out like a typical Steeler effort. Quarterback Mark Malone missed his first eight passes and Gary Anderson missed his first field goal attempt ever in the Astrodome. Gary hasn't had much practice this year. The Steelers seldom get close enough to anyone's goal to try a field goal.

It took overtime, but the Steelers beat the Houston Oilers 22-16 and snapping a three-game losing streak to open the season.

Malone surprised Houston with bootleg runs of 45 and 11 yards to set up two scores. Anderson added three field goals and Walter Abercrombie scored the winning with 2:35 gone in the overtime.

Return specialist Rick Wood, playing despite a broken thumb, started the winning drive by returning a low punt by Houston's Lee Johnson 41 yards to the Oiler 15-yard line.

Malone ran his 11-yard bootleg to the 3 and Abercrombie scored on the next play.

"Because I had the cast, I just wanted to make sure I caught the ball," Woods said. "We had a left return but when it is that low, you just take it and run. I just wanted to try and get good field position."

Malone earlier rolled to his right 45 yards on a bootleg to set up Anderson's final field goal.

"It was a designed trap play, a read on my part," Malone said. "It's not a play I called in the huddle. The play called was a strong side run. But at the snap, I read the linebackers and made the decision."

The Steelers now are 1-3.

"We got some things straightened out today but still made some mistakes," Malone said.

Abercrombie felt confident about his game-winner.

"We worked hard but the thing I remember is the eyes of the offensive linemen were reflecting more desire than I had seen all year."

It will be back to work for the Oilers, who won their season opener and now have lost three in a row.

"We just didn't play it well," Coach Jerry Glavinski said. "We've back down in the corner now, and we'll show what we're made of."

Houston quarterback Warren Moon now has been sacked 13 times this season. "They were coming with more guys than we had blockers," guard Mike Munchak said.

Johnson said he let his fingers role too much on his final punt to Woods.

"All because of the low punt, he caught it on the run and had momentum," Johnson said. "The guys had no chance to form a wall."

Boston Red Sox pitcher Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd and catcher Rich Gedman embrace after Boston clinches American League East championship with win over Toronto Blue Jays Sunday.

Bosox win flag; Boggs hits 200

Incaviglia snaps slump as Witt wins

Associated Press

BOSTON — Wade Boggs became the first Boston player to get 200 hits in four consecutive seasons Sunday as the Red Sox clinched the American League East championship with a 12-3 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.

With a 93-61 record and their first division title since 1975, the Red Sox will meet the California Angels for the AL pennant in a best-of-7 series opening here on Oct. 7.

The AL East was the last of the major league's four divisions to be settled and marked the earliest date since division play began in 1969 that all races were over.

Boggs drove in three runs and Marty Barrett had four RBI for the Red Sox with a bases-loaded walk and three singles.

American

Boggs, bidding for his third batting championship, walked twice and lined out to right before getting his 200th hit with a two-run single through the middle in the fourth. He went 1-for-4 as his average fell a point to .352, two percentage points better than New York's Don Mattingly.

Yankees 10, Tigers 2

NEW YORK — Don Mattingly homered, hit two doubles and drove in three runs, raising his batting average to .350. Dave Winfield homered and had three RBI for the Yankees. Mattingly went 3-for-5 to move shave three percentage points off Boggs' lead in the batting race.

Royals 6, A's 2
KANSAS CITY, Mo. — George Brett, Frank White and Jamie Quirk hit consecutive home runs in the fourth inning for the first hits off Dave Stewart, 9-4, powering Kansas City to 2 victory.

Brewers 10, Orioles 2
MILWAUKEE — Charlie Moore singled, doubled, homered and scored twice, and Milwaukee blew it open with seven runs in the eighth inning.

Twins 6, White Sox 1
CHICAGO — Gary Gaetti walked with the bases loaded to snap a 1-1 eighth-inning tie, and Minnesota scored five more runs in a ninth inning highlighted by Mickey Hatcher's two-run homer.

Mike Smithson, 12-14, worked 7 2-3 innings, as the Twins ended a four-game losing streak. George Frazier finished up for his sixth save.

Rangers 4, Angels 3
ANAHEIM, Calif. — Pete Incaviglia snapped out of an 0-for-25 slump with a seventh-inning grand slam off Mike Witt, 18-10.

Texas rookie Bobby Witt, 10-9, allowed four hits in 6 1-3 innings as the Rangers clinched a second-place finish in the American League West behind the division champion Angels.

Indians 5, Mariners 4
SEATTLE — Former Midland Cub Joe Carter reached on Jim Presley's throwing error in the 12th inning, and Cory Snyder followed with a run-scoring single as the Indians completed a three-game sweep of their series.

TED BATTLES

Guilt shows through disguise

On the ramp outside the Baylor dressing room Saturday, the attempt to pass as a representative of a large eastern state university trying to land a game with a SWC team for 1987 or 1988 didn't work.

The dark glasses, UNJ sweat shirt, which had been a t-shirt at the start of the long afternoon, and the placard declaring, "Bears scared of the Mosquito's bite," didn't work.

Philip Ward said, "You're really Ted Battles, aren't you?" He then wanted to know if it was true, "that you were taking Tech by nine points?"

It was the polite way of saying, "You donkey, how could you?"

"Er, ah, well, you see...."

HOW DO you explain about homecoming, home field advantage, SWC opener, letdown after loss to a USC—all those intangibles which are the roots of upsets.

I mumbled something about the gambler's points, but someone who went from Midland High to play on the Baylor's 1980 Cotton Bowl team didn't seem sympathetic with the explanation.

Really, neither was I. But how are you supposed to guess when Baylor Coach Grant Teaff is going to eschew his pregame pep talk and delve into his bait box to inspire his team.

My only consolation is that I don't put my money where my mouth is.

TECH'S 45-14 loss to the Bears was bad enough in itself, but was compounded by the interminable length of this televised game.

Maybe if it were a hotly contested, big game, it could have survived the commercial time out after what seemed like every exchange, turnover, first down or score. This, however, was a game decided in the first three minutes.

The outcome was so conclusive, fans were leaving the stadium by early in the second period. It took 56 minutes to play the 15-minute first period, so maybe they thought it was much later.

MANY more games like this and rugby or cricket could become our national game.

Before it was over, fans were wondering whatever became of Woody Hayes and recalling fondly the days of one platoon football, natural turf and those wonderful memories of three-yards-and-a-cloud-of-dust football.

Basketball has the same television induced problem with its final two minutes, a flaw that ruins a wonderful sport for some of us. The final two minutes sometimes take longer than the previous 38 minutes.

IN GAMES like the one at Tech Saturday, it is suggested all timeouts allowed the teams be eliminated and the clock be allowed to run through the commercials, penalties, and extra point attempts.

A game that is history in its first three minutes should be relegated to the dusty shelves of the past as quickly, noiselessly and painlessly as possible.

Still, how many times have I relegated a game at Jones Stadium to the lore of the ages with as little as a minute or two left only to have to rewrite history before leaving the press box.

In looking back on Saturday's game, perhaps I should be thankful. At least, we were spared instant replay decisions.

Rebels, Bulldogs intra-city scrap only the beginning

Vin turns Orange Bowl into his stage

By HAL BOCK

MIAMI (AP) — It was as if the ghosts of Heismans past had called an emergency meeting and appealed to Miami quarterback Vinny Testaverde's sense of history to make their trophy safe for the offense again.

And he did.

At issue was Brian Bosworth, Oklahoma's Heisman candidate who plays, of all things, linebacker. Who ever heard of that? A linebacker for the Heisman, a tackler instead of a tackle.

Bosworth is like a volcano, spilling lava over the landscape. He plays defense like Attila the Hun, spitting, cursing and being generally unpleasant. He has a haircut that drifts in the twilight zone between mohawk and punk and he wears an earring advertising his number.

The Heisman folks have never given their award to a defender. They are college football traditionalists who love running backs and quarterbacks, glamour guys who don't roll around in the dirt. And it doesn't hurt to resemble Captain America instead of Commander Outrageous.

Testaverde, curly-haired and ear-ring-less, qualifies. He looked like the product of a Heisman laboratory while passing No. 2 Miami to a 28-16 victory over No. 1 Oklahoma Saturday.

It was not that Bosworth played poorly in this showdown between the nation's top two teams. Ten tackles, four assists and one sack is not exactly shabby. It's just that Testaverde, the classic quarterback, was better.

Consider the numbers. He completed 28 of 48 attempts for 261 yards and four touchdowns. He hit 14 straight over one stretch, setting a school record. And he just wore down Oklahoma, Bosworth included.

The most telling sequence occurred when the score was still 0-0 in the second quarter.

On a first-and-10 from the Oklahoma 48, Testaverde dodged two tacklers to throw a 13-yard pass to Alonzo Highsmith. Two plays later, the Sooners came after him again. He broke two tackles running right, sidestepped a couple of others going left and zig-zagged his way to a 10-yard gain that required, oh, perhaps 50 yards of cross-field running and ended with one of his shoulder pads flapping casually outside his jersey.

Oklahoma's defenders, winded by the chase, called a timeout, delaying Miami's first TD only temporarily.

"I forget the play," Testaverde said later. "I know it was a pass. I scrambled right. I wanted to run and I cut back to the left, picked up a couple of blocks and got some yards."

All this and he's humble, too.

Throughout the run-for-your-life scramble, he kept looking downfield as if he was going to throw, even while on the run. By then, Oklahoma's defenders had seen enough to believe he might just do that.

"Looking downfield keeps the defense honest," he said. "They sit back, waiting for you to pass and you can get those few extra yards."

It was Oklahoma's second scrape with Testaverde. He beat them a year ago 27-14, the Sooners' lone loss in a national championship season. So Bosworth and Co. had the revenge motive working for them. It hardly mattered, though.

How good is Testaverde?

"He is a fantastic young man," Miami Coach Jimmy Johnson said. "He is complete. He can control the game with his mind, read defenses, and set 11 players in motion. After the mental part, he can perform the physical part. It's amazing what he's able to accomplish."

And how good was he against Oklahoma? Sooner Coach Barry Switzer put it in the simplest possible terms.

"He is the best quarterback we've ever played against," Switzer said. "His understanding of the game, his ability to scramble. He is just a guy who makes things happen."

Would Switzer like another shot at him and Miami, perhaps in a bowl game, perhaps with a national championship on the line?

"I don't want to play him again and I don't want to play them again," he said.

Midland High and Midland Lee are headed in opposite directions after the Rebels' convincing 38-6 victory Friday night, but there is still a burning question needing an answer for the second week of District 4-5A play. What will the Bulldogs and Rebels do for an encore?

Midland Lee plans homecoming activities for this week as it prepares for Odessa High while Midland High will find out what it's like jumping from the frying pan into the fire when they travel to Odessa to take on No. 2 state ranked Permian at Ratliff Stadium.

Both Lee coach Earl Miller and Midland High coach Doug McCutchen see some negatives for their teams this week, but it's the Bulldogs who face the real gut test after an emotion draining loss to cross town rival Lee.

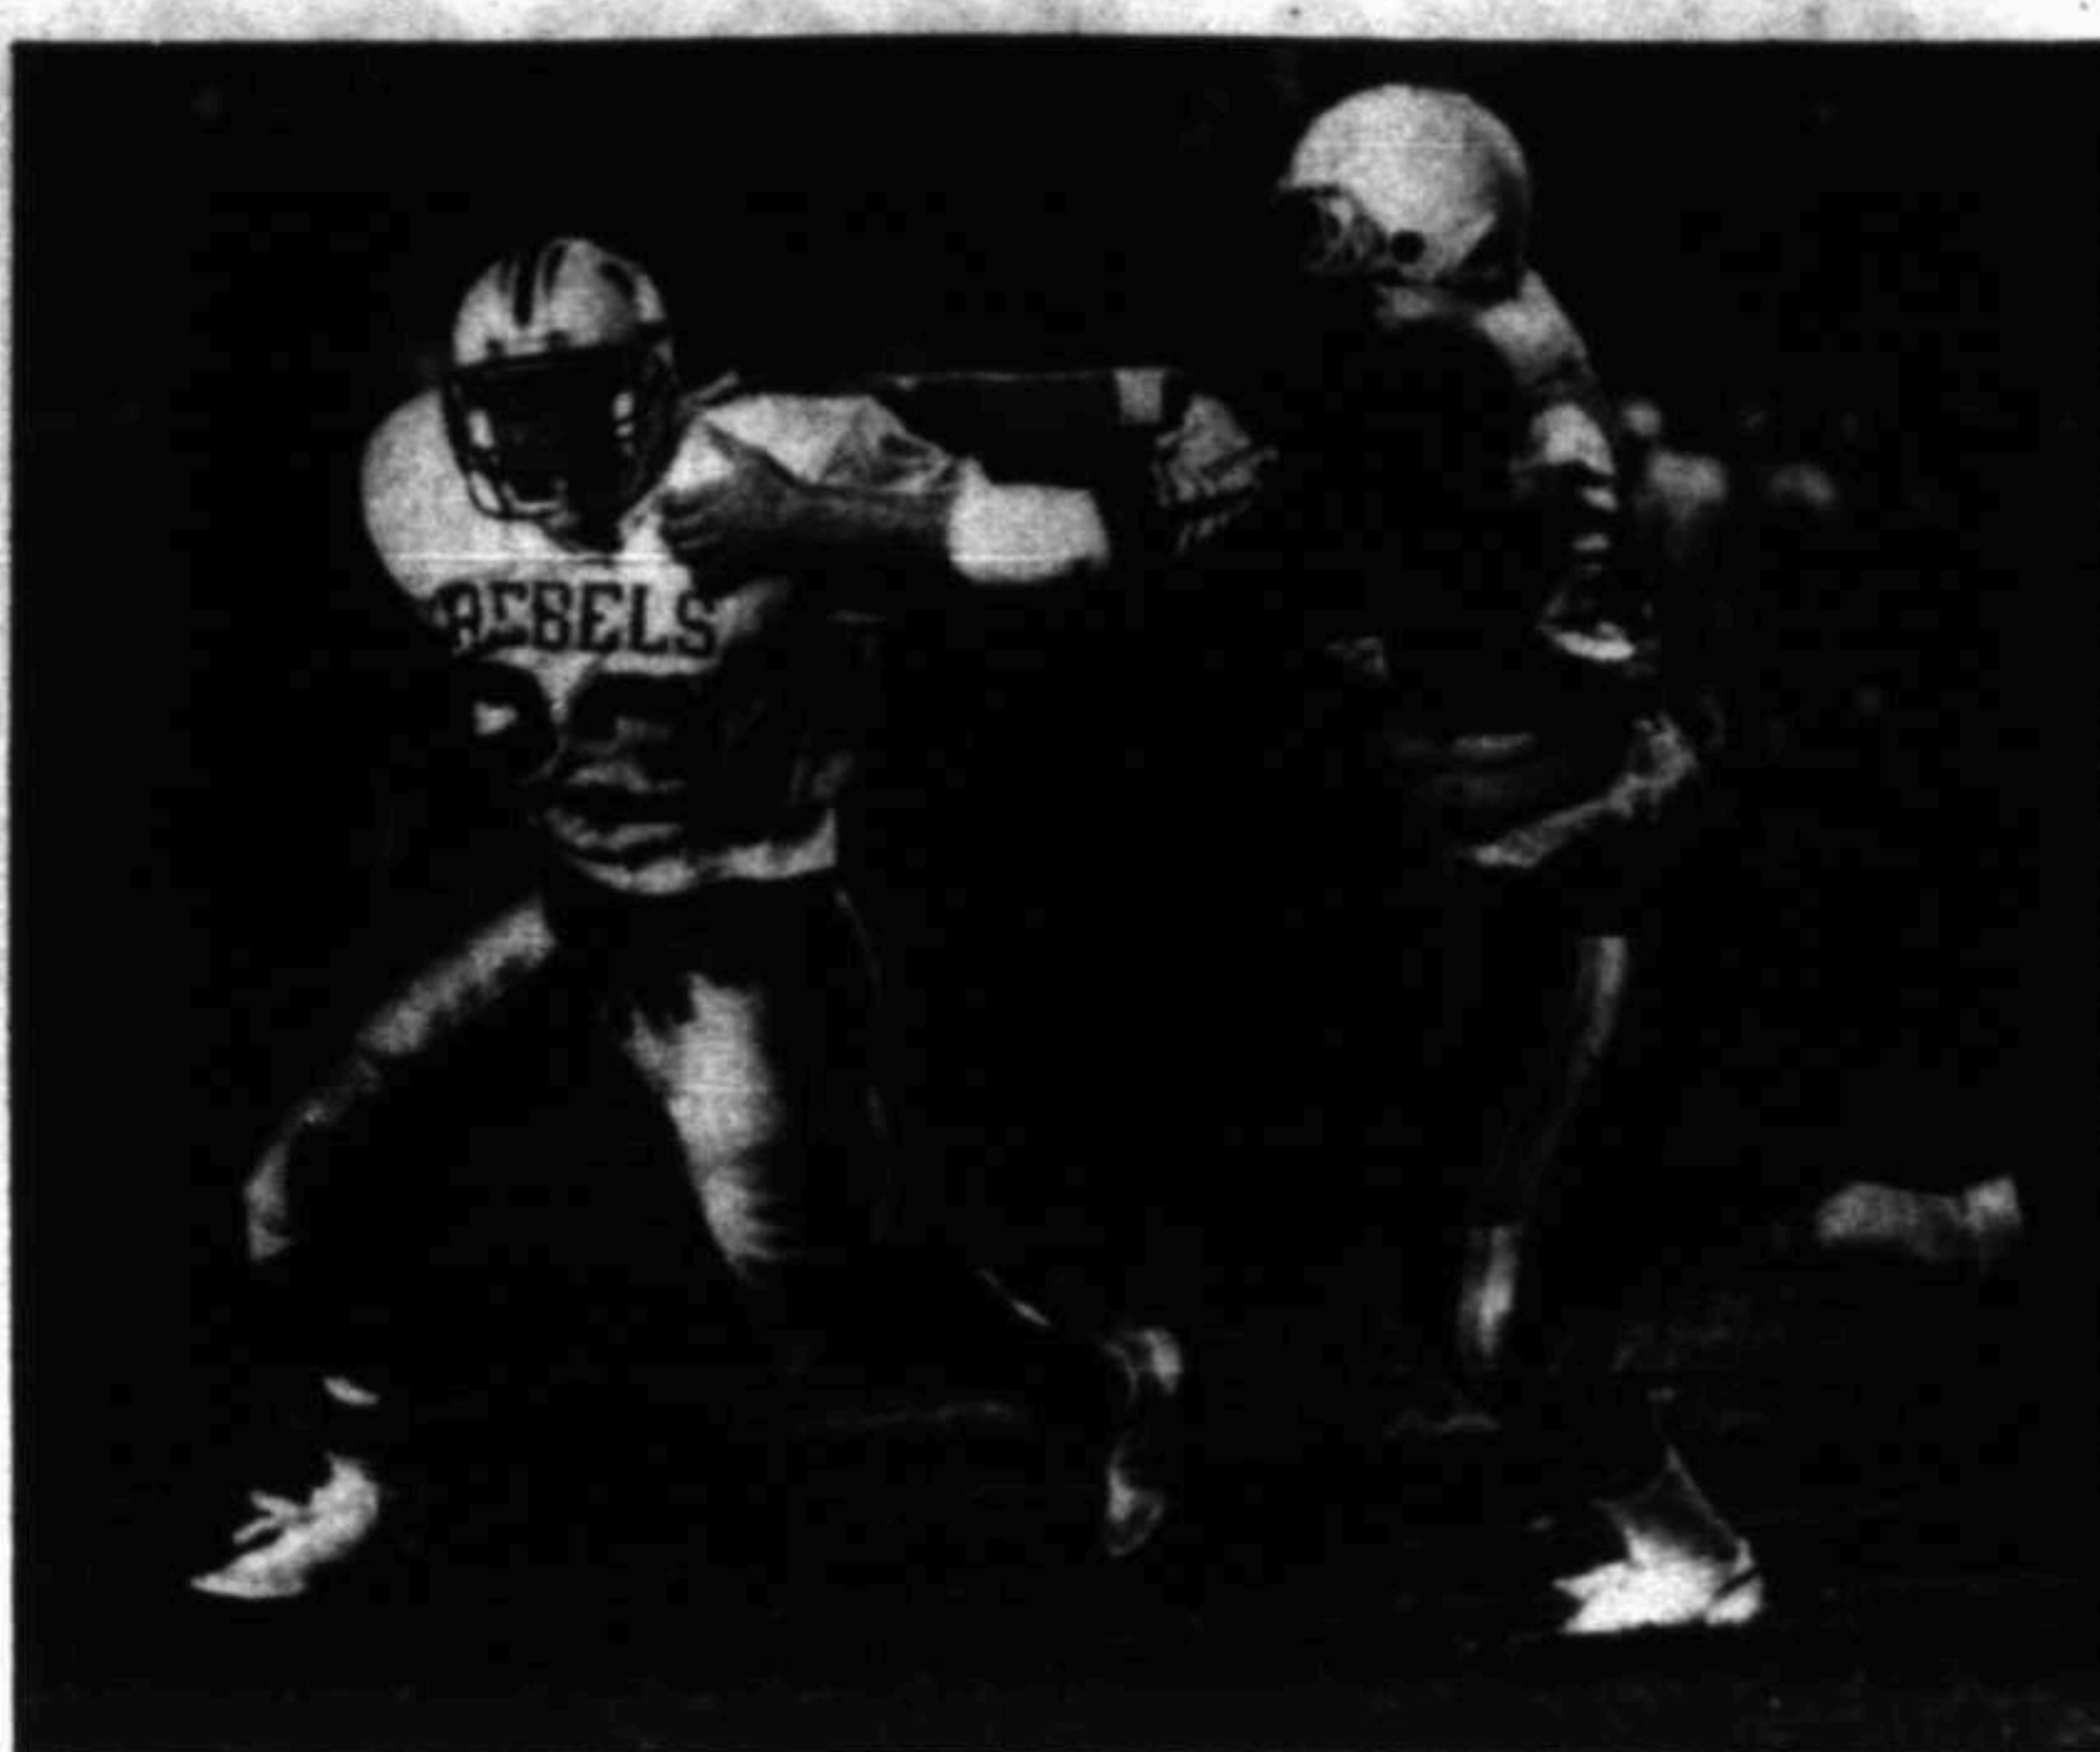

Lee, on the other hand, has some problems to face, but Miller readily admits he likes his situation best.

"Homecoming activities always seem to drain your concentration. If you're not careful, mums, bonfires and parades can make you forget football in a hurry," said Miller. "Of course, we're aware of these distractions and will be reminding our kids of that fact of life often this week."

"I feel our kids will take homecoming in stride. I think they liked winning Friday night and they know that you win in practice during the week. This group has worked hard and have done what we have asked. I don't see any reason for that not to be the case this week."

Odessa High lost a 14-10 decision to Midland Lee's Rodney Johnson, 23, tries to give Midland's Anthony Adkinson, 32, the slip in intra-city game at Memorial Stadium Friday night.

Prep Game: Lee-Odessa

John Vaughn / Reporter-Telegram

Midland Lee's Rodney Johnson, 23, tries to give Midland's Anthony Adkinson, 32, the slip in intra-city game at Memorial Stadium Friday night.

Abilene Cooper in what a lot of people were calling a battle for the league cellar this year. However, OHS is 2-2 on the year and always tage this week in the recognition factor," noted Miller. "Odessa uses a split back attack and this makes the third week in a row that we have faced split backs. That should be an advantage to us."

McCutchen will be searching for ways to get his Bulldogs back in gear after a disappointing loss.

"There's no question that losing to Lee was a tough loss for our kids," said McCutchen. "We were up emotionally for Lee, but it's a big let down when you don't perform like you expected."

"We face a tough task this week. Everyone knows what kind of team Permian has. It would have been easier to go up against them with a win under our belt."

"But that's the big thing about this league. You can't think about last week's game very long or you're in for some tough knocks. You've got to get back up fast because there is always a good team waiting just around the corner."

Permian, state ranked and undefeated, rolled over Abilene High 41-7 last week and have scored under 40 points only once in its first four games. That's an omen that's a little scary for Bulldog fans this week.

Still, it's a big game. MHS is just one victory from being back in the thick of the 4-5A race and Permian could be the sling shot that revives a weak heart.

MHS is still in position to prove that it can win a big game and no game each year is bigger than Permian in this district. Permian has won six straight district titles. If you want a payoff berth, you start by thinking of Permian, a path that every team must cross in 4-5A.

Best Streak Ends — Arkansas' record of not allowing a rushing touchdown ended at 50 quarters against New Mexico State.

New Streak Begins — Baylor's Grant Teaff has now become the school's winningest football coach with 84 victories and counting.

Old Streak Continues — SMU has now beaten TCU 15 consecutive times.

OPEN

As for Whiteside, the WT Open ended the golf season. "Except for the Oldsmobile Scramble qualifying at Mission Monday. The winner goes to Florida, but 35 teams are competing for one berth."

Bob Beck won the first flight with a 79-228, but the best round of the final day was turned in by Ken Howard, 71-231. In the second flight Frank Mullins finished with a 77 for a winning 241 and Chester Farmer won third flight honors with a 254, despite a closing 90 after rounds of 83-81.

The Middle Linebacker's Dream — Baylor's Aaron Grant returns an interception 22 yards for a score.

Record — Baylor's 45 points against Texas Tech were the most ever by the Bears against the Red Raiders.

Longest Touchdown — David Davis' 66-yard scoring strike from Cody Carlson for Baylor against Tech.

Longest Placekick — Texas A&M's Scott Slater hits a 48-yard field goal against Southern Mississippi.

Best Offense — Baylor's 568 yards against Tech, including 377 rushing.

Best Defense — A&M allowing Southern Mississippi 99 yards.

Marathon competitor drops dead

BERLIN (AP) — A 37-year-old West Berlin jogger died immediately after crossing the finish line of the city's 13th annual marathon race Sunday, police said.

The man collapsed moments after completing the 26-mile run. A doctor at the finish line could not save the man's life, police said.

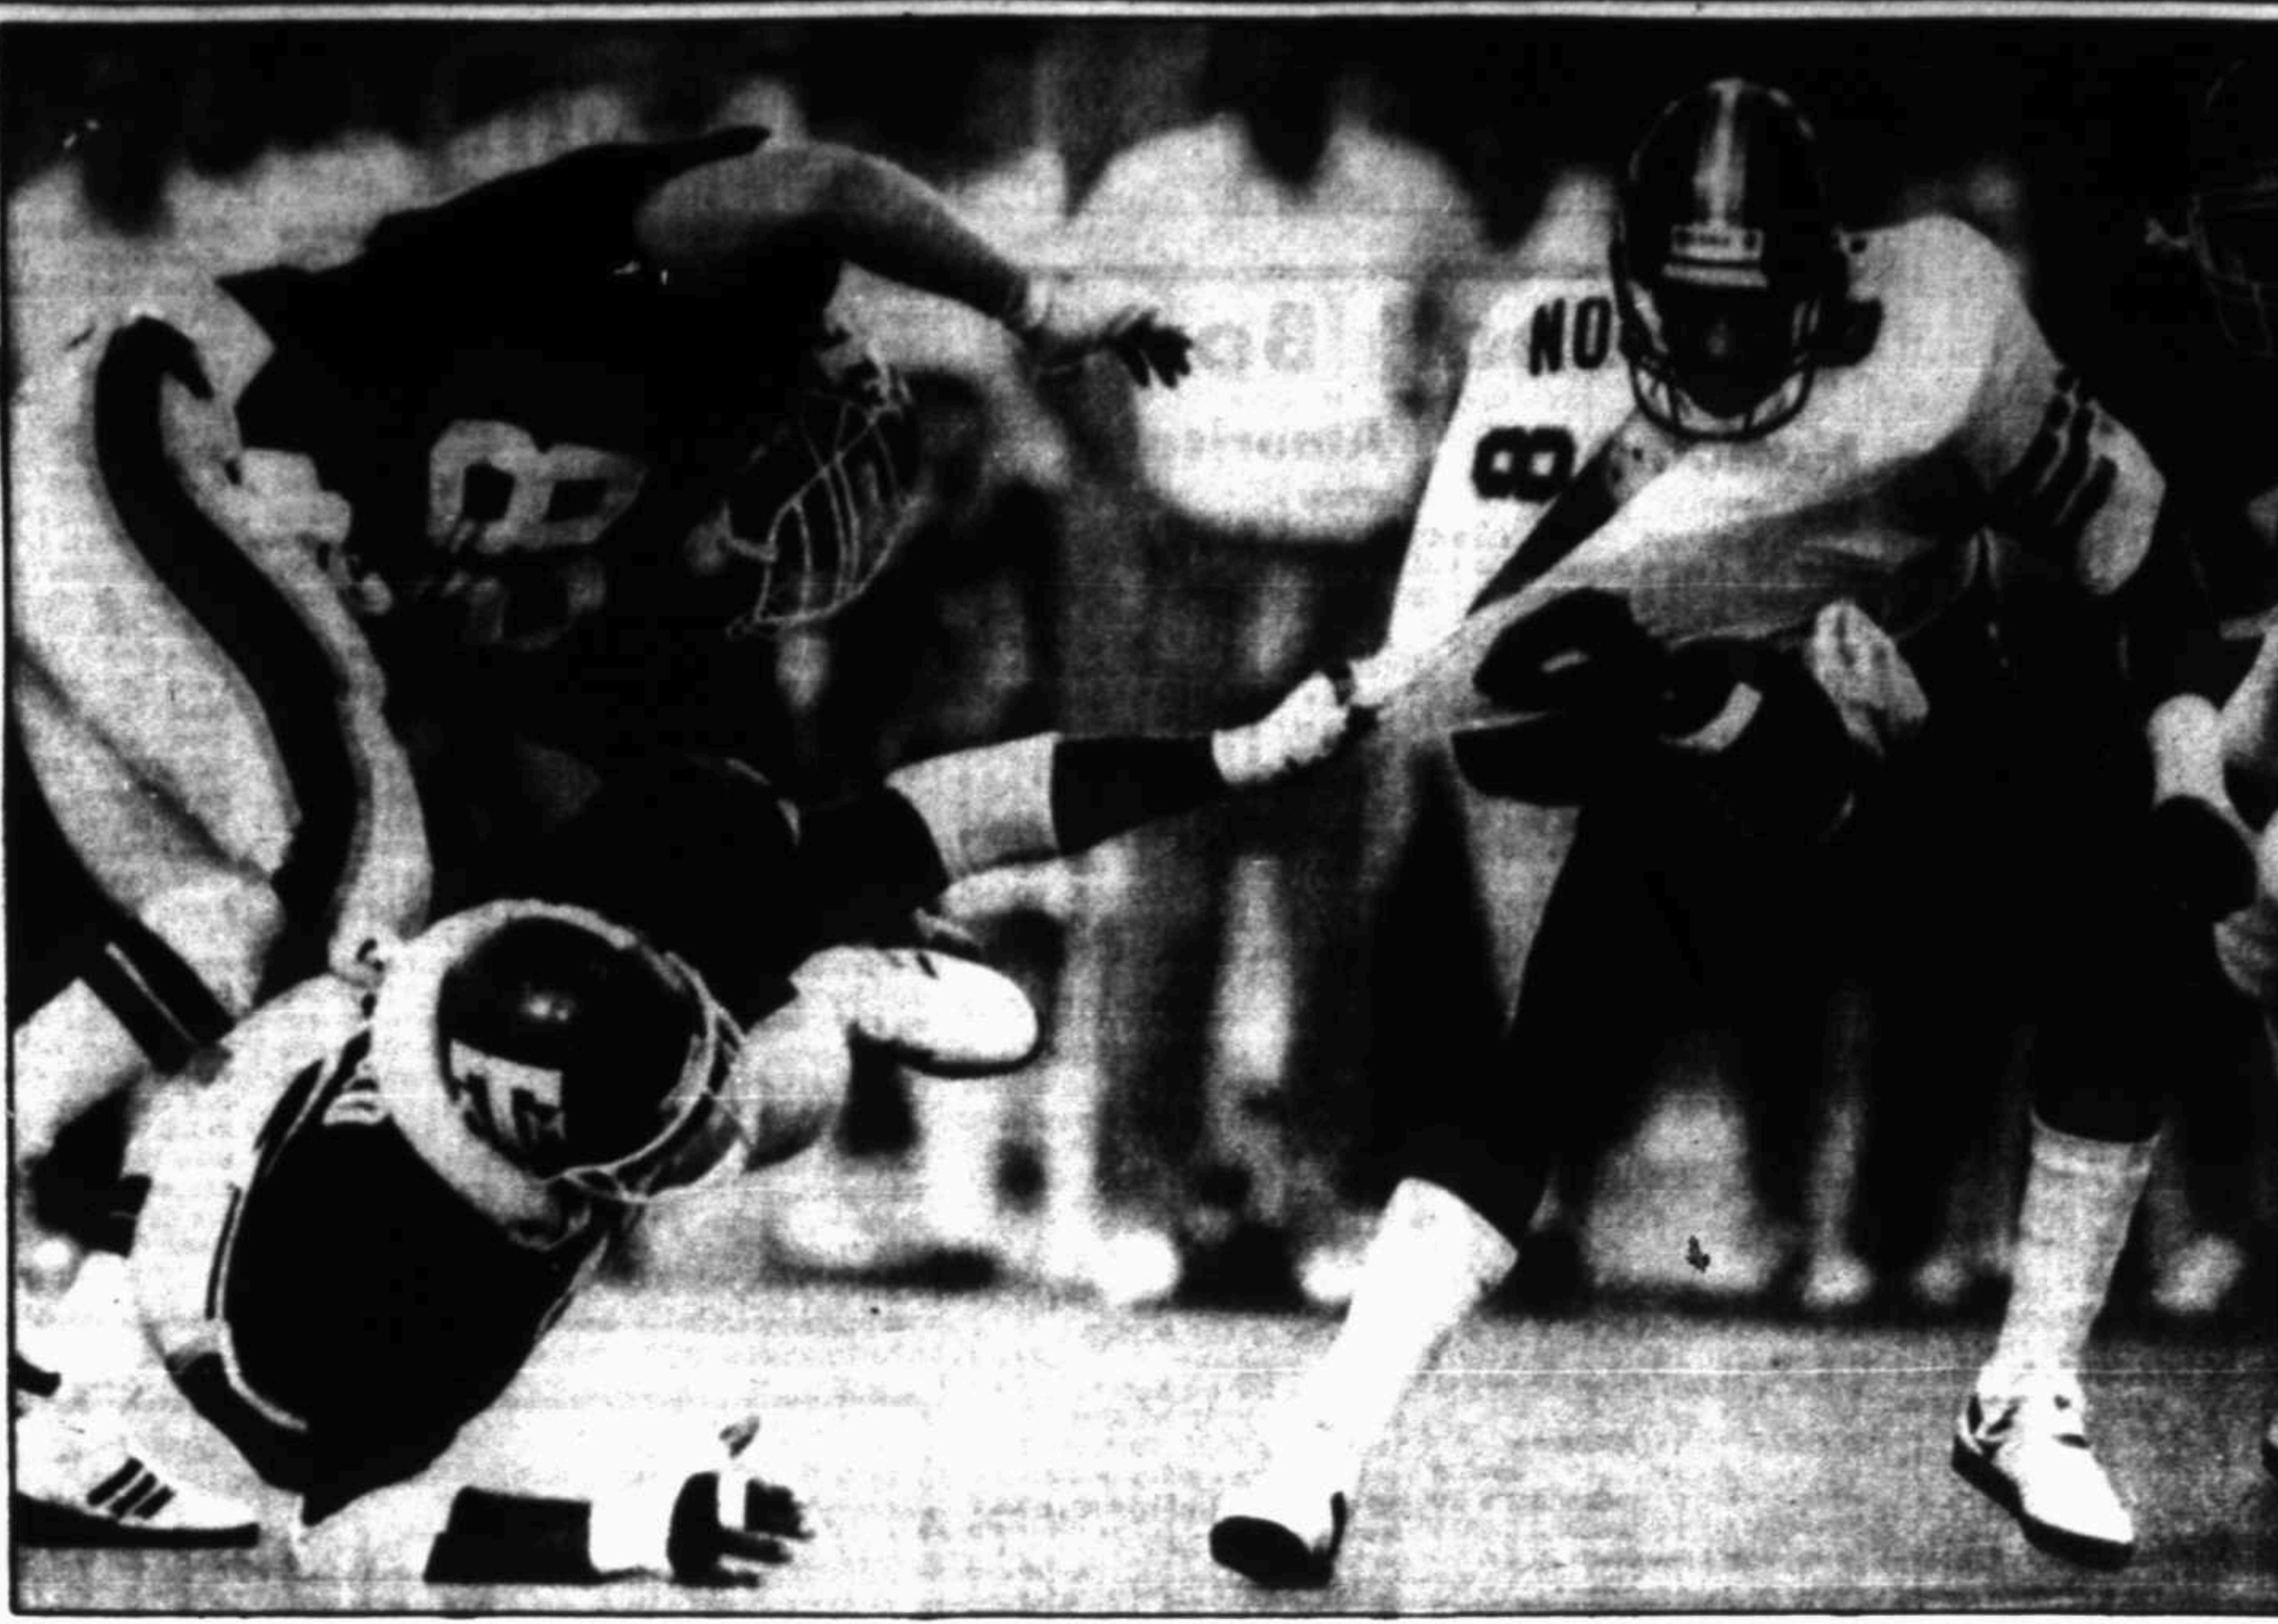

The cause of death was not immediately known and police declined to identify the victim.

Boguslaw Psujek of Poland won the race by covering the distance in 2 hours, 11 minutes and 3 seconds.

Henrik Joergensen of Denmark finished second in 2:11:49, while Gabriel Kamau of Kenya was third in 2:12:35.

Charlotte Teske of West Germany won the women's race in 2:32:10, ahead of Magda Illands of Belgium, who clocked 2:33:53. Another West German, Monika Schaefer, placed third with a time of 2:34:06.

A total of 13,682 runners, including 1,068 women, took part in the race.

GOLF—Greg Norman became the first man to win $1 million in a single golf season Sunday when he led Australia to victory in the final of the Dunhill Cup team tournament, with a 30 blanking of Japan and shared the top prize of $300,000, boosting Norman's personal earnings for 1986 to a staggering $1,008,000.

Yoko Kobayashi shot 69—214 to win the $194,000 Asahi Cup women's tournament by two strokes in Chiba, Japan.

BASEBALL—The New York Mets sold out their remaining League Championship Series tickets in 5 1/2 hours after they went on sale Sunday. The approximately 9,000 tickets, about 3,000 for each game, for Games 3-5 Oct. 11-13 against the National League West champion Houston Astros, went on sale at noon EDT through the Teletron phone reservation system. Game 3 was sold out at 1:30 p.m., Game 4 at 2:15 p.m. and Game 5 at 5:30 p.m. Randy Bass hit his 45th Japanese League homer to power Hanshin Tigers over Yakult, 10-6.

MARATHON—Canada's Jeff Martin won the Milan, Italy, marathon Sunday, covering the 26 miles in 2 hours, 17 minutes and 4 seconds. Boguslaw Psujek of Poland won the 13th West Berlin marathon, covering the 26 miles in 2 hours, 11 minutes and 3 seconds.

TROTTERING—Davidia Hanover of the U.S. set a world trotting record for mares en route to winning Finland's most prestigious race, the Finlandia, at the Verno Racetrack Sunday. The 4-year-old, owned by American-Swede Hans Enggren and trained by Per Ericsson, was timed in 1:12.8 in the qualifying heat of the one-mile race. The previous record of 1:13.0 was held by U.S. trotting mares Selena Lobell, Armbr Devonan and Grades Singing.

FOOTBALL—Dallas running back Tony Dorsett and linebacker Jesse Penn will not play in tonight's NFL game against St. Louis because of injuries. Dorsett, who sprained his knee last week against Atlanta and Penn jammed his neck against the Falcons.

College Game: TCU-Arkansas

TCU faces tough test at Arkansas

From Staff Reports

TCU may not be all the way back from last year's "lost season," but the Horned Frogs showed they were on the road to recovery, pressing SMU to the finish despite a 15th straight loss to the Mustangs.

Whether Jim Wacker's young bunch is up to challenging Arkansas is something else. The Frogs face the nationally-ranked Hogs this week in the treacherous Ozark hills.

Baylor, meanwhile, beat Texas Tech, 45-14, to make up for the 17-14 loss to USC last week. Well, a win over Tech isn't exactly an even trade out, but then a loss to USC is a lot better than a loss to Tech, if it comes to trade outs.

Unbated and ninth-ranked Arkansas coasted to a 42-11 win over New Mexico State, while Baylor bombed Texas Tech 45-14 on the Red Raiders' homecoming.

SMU downed TCU 31-21 in the Cotton Bowl.

Texas A&M defeated Southern Mississippi 16-7, while Houston was stopped cold 24-14 by Tulsa and Southwest Texas State, stunned Rice 31-6. Texas was idle.

In games this week, TCU is at Arkansas at noon; Texas Tech travels to Texas A&M for a 2 p.m. game; Houston is at Baylor in a 6:45 p.m. clash. Texas visits Rice at 7 p.m. and SMU hosts Boston College at 7:30 p.m.

New Mexico State ended Arkansas' streak of not allowing a rushing touchdown at 50 quarters but that was all the visitors could do against the Razorbacks, 3-0.

"I'm kind of glad the money is off our back on the streak," said junior noseguard Tony Cherico. "Now everybody will quit talking about it and quit making such a big deal of it."

Arkansas Coach Ken Hatfield said, "I've never been a part of a defense that had a streak like ours did. I've never heard of that happening before in college football."

Baylor's Grant Teaff became the school's winningest coach with the victory over Tech. Teaff now has 84 victories, one more than Morley Jennings.

Teaff, who was raised in Snyder and was a former assistant at Tech, said "It's nice that in came in my home country."

Tech quarterback Billy Joe Toller, who was intercepted three times, explained his off-day with "even Betty Crocker burns a cake every once in a while."

At Houston, where school officials say the athletic department may lose $1 million this year, the Cougars fell on their face against Tulsa before only 12,000 fans.

Rice lost to a Division I-AA school before an estimated 10,000 fans in Rice Stadium. New Coach Jerry Berndt watched Mark Comalander throw five interceptions.

"Offensively we never got it going but I thought we played hard," said Berndt.

Texas A&M, the defending SWC champion, held Southern Mississippi to only 99 yards, but had trouble offensively.

"You saw a lot of our players on defense look like they did last year," said Aggie's Coach Jackie Sherrill. "Linebacker Johnny Holland was a pleasure to watch."

The SMU-TCU game was dubbed the "Probation Bowl" because both teams are under NCAA sanctions and can't play for a championship or go to a bowl game. The game was moved from Texas Stadium to the Cotton Bowl to celebrate the state's birthday and the State Fair's 100th birthday. Only 35,000 fans braved the heat to watch it.

Eastern NM takes over 1st in LSC

Associated Press

Eastern New Mexico, the new league leader in non-conference games at 4-0, was the only Lone Star Conference football team to win over the weekend.

The Greyhounds beat Adams State 36-12 Saturday night in Portales with 508 yards of total offense.

Former LSC member Sam Houston State downed Angelo State 38-21 in Huntsville. Arkansas State drilled East Texas State 44-0 in Jonesboro. Central State (Okla.) dumped Howard Payne 31-7 at its homecoming in Edmond, and Mississippi College defeated West Texas State 34-24 in Canyon.

Defending champ Texas A&I 30-7, and Abilene Christian didn't play.

All seven league teams play final tuneups this weekend before league play begins Oct. 11.

Eastern New Mexico scored on the first play from scrimmage on a 54-yard pass from Tommy Gonzalez to Robert Griggs. The Greyhounds led only 13-12 at halftime, but broke open the game in the third quarter with its two-quarterback system. Gonzalez threw for 163 yards and John Paul Cantu passed for 110 yards and two touchdowns. Rufus Smith of ENMU ran for 173 yards.

Angelo State twice led Sam Houston State in the first half on touchdown runs by Freddie Capers and Ned Cox, but the Bearkats took the lead 35 seconds before halftime on a 12-yard pass from Reggie Lewis to J.J. Middleton, who also had 191 yards rushing.

Keith Majors ran for 172 yards to lead the Rams, now 2-2.

Arkansas State, ranked second in the latest NCAA Division I-AA poll, piled up 624 total yards and took advantage of five ETSU turnovers to raise its mark to 4-0-1. The Lions are 1-2.

Winless Howard Payne got its only touchdown on an 11-yard run by Todd Smith.

West Texas State, 1-3, led Mississippi College, ranked fifth in NCAA Division II, 17-10 at halftime. However, LSC playing leader Tod Mayfield threw three second-half interceptions.

Mr. Dorfman never forgave Big Apple

I don't know where he is, or even, for that matter, who he is, but I know that Mr. Dorfman, God bless him, has got to be a sad man today. Mr. Dorfman and I have never met but I truly feel I know him well. You see, we have a mutual friend, the lively and inventive Jerry Izenberg, a colleague who writes for the Newark Star-Ledger and other Eastern newspapers.

From the time I met him, Jerry has kept me apprised of the goings-on in the world of Mr. Dorfman and his views on same, particularly in the world of sport.

Mr. Dorfman, you see, to hear Izenberg tell it, was an expert on the Talmud and privy to its overview of the world of sports as we know it. Jerry quoted Mr. Dorfman frequently on the Talmudic assessment of things athletic. Once, for instance, when we were in a press box and a ballplayer broke for second base on an aborted double steal and wound up as the second runner on one base, Jerry was ready with his Talmudic assessment. "The Talmud frowns on stealing in general but it categorically forbids stealing an occupied base," he explained.

THE TALMUD according to Mr. Dorfman would probably not have advised pitching to Jack Clark in last year's playoff, Izenberg said, and, once, when we were flying to a sporting event in Africa — Muhammad Ali vs. George Foreman in Kinshasa — by way of Iceland, Izenberg noted: "The Talmud specifically warns against going to Africa by way of Iceland. The Talmud did not even approve of the route of the Titanic. The Talmud says you should never pass icebergs on the way from New York to the Congo."

Mr. Dorfman would be sad today for a melancholy reason: his favorite ballplayer died the other day.

You see, you know a great deal about Mr. Dorfman when you realize his favorite baseball team of all time was the Detroit Tigers.

Now, this is a little bit unusual, in that Detroit is a long way from New Jersey, where Mr. Dorfman pursued his scholarly studies, but Mr. Dorfman was well able to control his enthusiasm for and support of the more nearby teams, the Yankees, Giants and Dodgers. It's almost safe to say he despised them.

Look at it this way they didn't sign Henry Benjamin Greenberg to play for them, did they? Never mind any la-dee-da explanations that they already had Babe Ruth or Lou Gehrig or Bill Terry or even Harry (the Horse) Danning, they did not sign the greatest player in the history of the Bronx, New York.

The Detroit Tigers did and from that day on, Mr. Dorfman never wavered in his affection for and loyalty to the Detroit Tigers. They let Greenberg play for them, didn't they? A righteous group.

MR. DORFMAN is not a man whose affections are lightly given. The only other athletic team that earned his undying gratitude and loyalty were the Chicago Bears. They signed Sid Luckman at quarterback. A Columbia man. You think the lordly New York Giants would ever do that? Ptoeey.

Mr. Dorfman was a lifelong Detroit Tiger fan. A man, after all, has to have his priorities straight.

So, when Hank Greenberg died here the other day at 75, it must have been an occasion of great sorrow to Mr. Dorfman. As Norm Crosby would say, the end of an era (CQ).

Mr. Dorfman was not wrong. Hank Greenberg was one of the greatest ever to play the game. Four times he won or tied for the home run championship. And he played during the times of Ruth, Gehrig, Jimmy Foxx, Ted Williams and Joe DiMaggio. In fact, Stan Musial. Four times he led the game in runs batted in. He was one of the most natural sluggers who ever lived. Only four men put up a better slugging average than he did — and they were the registered giants of the game, Ruth, Williams, Gehrig and Foxx.

Only two men, Ruth and Roger Maris, hit more homers in a season than he did. Only two, Gehrig and Hack Wilson, batted in more runs in a single season than he did. Greenberg hit 58 homers in 1938 and drove in 183 runs in 1937. He spent five years in the Army Air Corps at the height of his career. He led the Detroit tigers to four pennants even in the days when the New York Yankees had, putatively, the greatest baseball teams of all time.

YET IT WAS the great sadness of Hank Greenberg's career that he did not play in New York. There, he would have had millions of Mr. Dorfman's. There, he would have been the toast of Broadway. There, he belonged. He was a landsman.

He was a victim of prejudice throughout his career. But not the kind you might expect.

The prejudice against Hank Greenberg was not religious. It was emotional. It was directed equally at the gentle, Jimmy Foxx, the year he hit 58 home runs.

Nobody wanted to see Babe Ruth's single-season home run record broken. And Hank Greenberg was the one most likely to do it. The year he hit 58, there was still a week left in the season when he got No. 58. Greenberg seldom saw a pitch that week that wasn't in the dirt — or in his ear.

Actually, Hank Greenberg was as lovable and gregarious as Babe Ruth ever was. Hank was a man almost without enemies. He was a natural. Nine times he batted over .300, and twice he led the league in doubles. In later life, he became a gifted tennis player who could beat athletes one-third his age without moving much more than a foot either way from where he served.

But he was, on balance, a benighted star. He played in the wrong place, at the wrong time. He got upstaged by a war, by geography, by Babe Ruth.

But he always had Mr. Dorfman. And his name was legion. Scholar, patriot, superstar, Hank Greenberg was the first Jewish player, so far as is known since religious stats weren't taken, to make the Hall of Fame. Whatever the Talmud would have to say about him — or the Sporting News — Mr. Dorfman had the word for him. A mensch.

Motley, McLean in big showdown

Associated Press

Around Texas, Lubbock Estacado, Daingerfield and Refugio battled to remain atop the AP high school football rankings, but another important battle occurred in the small West Texas town of Matador.

Motley County, which had lost 23 straight games, was host on Friday night to McLean, which had lost 24 in a row.

Motley County Coach Chip Hollenback leaped high into the air when the game ended, his club a 6-0 winner.

"I'm telling you, when it was over, we started celebrating," said Hollenback, his voice cracking.

The game drew media attention from across the nation after the Associated Press published a story about the upcoming game matching the teams with long losing records. School officials got calls throughout the week from CBS Radio, USA Today and radio stations from as far away as Boston.

Senior Jeffrey Burkes dived over from three yards out with only 2:48 remaining in the game for the only score. Burkes, a senior, hadn't been part of a victory since his freshman year.

"It feels great. We're ready to do it again," Burkes said.

Meanwhile, Estacado scored 40 points in the first half for the second straight game and pounded city rival Lubbock Dunbar 53-14 Friday night to strengthen its hold on the Class 4A top spot.

No. 2 McKinney defeated Denison 16-11, thanks to Randy Simmons' 100-yard kickoff return with 1:07 left in the game. Only one ranked 4A team lost. No. 6 Sweetwater fell to Big Spring, 22-17.

In other 4A games, No. 3 Corsicana didn't play; No. 4 Carthage tied Mt. Pleasant 0-0; No. 5 West Orange-Stark beat Nederland, 28-10; No. 7 Jasper beat Houston Forest Brook; No. 8 Sulphur Springs beat West Mesquite 50-6; No. 9 Wharton beat Navasota 38-16; and No. 10 Hereford beat Frenship 35-0.

San Antonio Holmes, No. 1 team in Class 5A at 3-0, was idle but second-ranked Odessa Permian ran away from Abilene 41-7; No. 3 Cypress-Fairbanks beat Stratford 29-3; No. 4 Dallas Carter beat South Oak Cliff 41-19; fifth-ranked Beaumont Central beat Aldine Nimitz 35-0; sixth-ranked Houston Yates, the defending state champion, blitzed Galveston Ball 33-0; seventh-ranked Temple was upset by Round Rock Westwood 53-28; eighth-ranked Duncanville beat Mansfield 47-7; ninth-ranked San Angelo Central beat Hobbs, N.M. 38-0; and No. 10 North Mesquite beat Lakeview 51-13.

In Class 3A, top-ranked Daingerfield rolled on via a 36-6 rout of Henderson. No. 2 Cuero beat Rockdale 44-7; No. 3 Ballinger (4-0) beat Colorado City 32-7; No. 4 Kirbyville beat Beaumont Kelly 14-0; No. 5 Mexia beat Rusk 16-6; No. 6 Medina Valley beat St. Gerard 30-0; No. 7 Universal City Randolph beat Yoakum 42-0; No. 8 Port Arthur Austin beat No. 10 Huffman Hargrave 24-0; and No. 9 Tulla beat Sanford-Fritch 52-0.

Meanwhile, 2A kingpin Refugio steamrolled past Woodstock 40-0. Eastland, the No. 2 team in 2A, rolled up 547 yards in total offense in out-manning Albany 48-14. No. 3 Shiner beat Brazos Consolidated 26-0; No. 4 San Antonio Cole beat Lytle 49-0; No. 5 Goldthwaite beat Coleman 21-0; No. 6 Mason beat Eldorado 45-0; No. 7 Abernathy beat Dimmitt 20-6; No. 8 Seymour beat Hamlin 21-6; No. 9 Franklin beat Wortham 36-0; and No. 10 Pilot Point beat Henrietta 27-7.

Flaton, ranked second in 1A, was upended 25-21 by Schulenburg.

Third-ranked Munday beat Electra 28-15, fourth-ranked Meridian beat Tolar 47-0, and fifth-ranked Axtell whalloped Valley Mills 76-12.

Wheeler, which held the No. 1 spot in Class 1A the first three weeks of the season before losing last week to Hobart, Okla. and falling to sixth, got back on the winning track with a 21-0 win over Vega.

Seventh-ranked High Island beat West Hardin 32-20; Eighth-ranked Bremont beat Midred 32-6; Ninth-ranked Apple Springs defeated Tena-

This Day In Baseball

Sept. 29

1913 — Walter Johnson of the Washington Senators finished the season with 36 victories by virtue of a 1-0 decision over the Philadelphia A's.

1915 — The Philadelphia Phillies clinched their first National League pennant, beating the Boston Braves 5-0 behind Grover Alexander's one-hitter.

1935 — Augie Galan of the Chicago Cubs played in his 154th game without hitting into a double play, a major-league record.

1954 — Willie Mays made his famous over-the-shoulder catch of Vic Wertz's long drive to center field and pinch-hitter Dusty Rhodes homered off Bob Lemon in the 10th inning to lead the New York Giants to a 5-2 victory over the Cleveland Indians in Game 1 of the World Series.

1963 — Stan Musial ended his Hall of Fame career by going 2-for-3 as the St. Louis Cardinals defeated the Cincinnati Reds 3-2 at Busch Stadium. When he left baseball, at age 42, he had more career hits than any player in National League history.

1963 — John Paciorek of the Houston Colt .45s, in his lone major-league appearance, went 3-for-3 with three RBI and four runs scored against the New York Mets. A back injury ended his baseball career the next season.

Northern Michigan defeated Northeast Missouri 34-0 at Marquette, Mich., in a game that was delayed almost 2 1/2 hours at the start.

Rain and fog diverted the Northeast Missouri plan to Chicago on Friday. On Saturday, Northeast Missouri landed at 1 p.m. — the scheduled kickoff time — at K.I. Sawyer Air Force Base near Marquette. The Bulldogs arrived at the stadium at 2:15 p.m. and the game started at 3:22 p.m.

It's Better To Give Than To Receive
Portland State defeated Weber

State 27-22 despite seven turnovers — four fumbles and three interceptions.

Georgia defeated South Carolina 31-26 despite six turnovers — four fumbles and two interceptions. The Gamecocks also had six turnovers, two fumbles and four interceptions.

Harvard committed 11 turnovers in its 41-0 loss to Holy Cross, tying a Division I-AA record with nine interceptions. Princeton had seven turnovers in its 37-0 loss to Northwestern and Dartmouth had seven in its 66-12 loss to New Hampshire. Dartmouth had not given up that many points in 100 years, since a 70-0 loss to Harvard in 1886.

Bustin' Out
No. 15 Iowa scored on all of its first-half possessions to take a 41-7 halftime lead in its 69-7 victory over Texas El Paso. The Hawkeyes hadn't scored that many points in 29 years since 70-14 victory over Utah State in 1967. In its first three games, Iowa has outscored its opponents 169-17. The Miners had minus-30 yards rushing in 29 carries and committed six turnovers.

Numerology
No. 9 Arkansas allowed its first rushing touchdown in 50 quarters in its 42-11 victory over New Mexico State. New Mexico defeated San Diego State 38-34 with the teams combining for 1,215 yards of offense. Jacksonville State rushed for 25 first downs, a Gulf South Conference record, in a 52-34 victory over West Georgia. Jackson State defeated Mississippi Valley 26-8 despite 18 penalties for 169 yards.

Louisville defeated Memphis State 34-8 and broke a 14-game losing streak against Division I schools. Tennessee-Chattanooga quarterbacks were intercepted seven times in 34-14 loss to Georgia Southern. No. 13 Maryland's 28-16 loss to N.C. State ended a 17-game Atlantic Coast Conference winning streak. The Terrapins have won three straight ACC titles.

McEnroe at top of game in win

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — John McEnroe, playing his best tennis since coming back from a 6 1/2-month layoff, defeated Jimmy Connors 7-6, 6-3 Sunday night in the final of the $289,000 Transamerica Open tennis tournament.

McEnroe served 10 aces to capture his second straight tournament. It was also McEnroe's 10th victory in a row against Connors over a three-year span and 19th in 31 career meetings.

McEnroe, who won last week's Los Angeles Volvo tournament after getting knocked out in the first round of the U.S. Open earlier this month, earned his biggest paycheck this year with the $44,000 top prize.

The former No. 1 player in the world, who took the long layoff from tennis while his wife, actress Tatum O'Neal, had a baby, showed all the skills and concentration he had in years past.

McEnroe opened the match with an ace and took a 3-0 lead in the first set after breaking Connors' serve in the second game and winning at love in the third game.

Connors, who picked up $22,000 for second place, evened the match by breaking McEnroe in the fifth game, and each held service to 6-6.

McEnroe double-faulted to start the tiebreaker, but rallied back from a 2-4 deficit to take the next four points. Connors evened the score again, 6-6, with a dramatic exchange at the net that was the highlight of the match.

McEnroe made a lunging backhand, Connors stretched to return it, McEnroe barely got it back again and Connors dove to hit a crosscourt winner.

After that point, McEnroe lay on the indoor carpet at the Cow Palace like a knocked-out fighter and Connors was sprawled on the other side of the net. The crowd gave both a standing ovation.

Connors won that point but went downhill from there. McEnroe won the tiebreaker 8-6 with a volley winner on the next point and a backhand error by Connors at set point.

McEnroe took a 3-2 lead after rebounding from a service break to break Connors for the second game in a row, made it 4-2 on his serve and closed out the match by breaking Connors in the final game.

49ers, Kemp deal more misery to porous Dolphins

Associated Press

Dan Marino and the Miami Dolphins continued to struggle Sunday in a day of NFL action that also featured an upset of the Los Angeles Rams and a near-upset of the New York Giants.

Marino, the millionaire quarterback who signed a lucrative, long-term contract earlier this year, threw a career-high four interceptions as the Dolphins lost 31-16 to San Francisco. The defeat was the third in four games for the Dolphins, their worst start since the 0-3-1 beginning in 1969, the year before Don Shula took over as coach.

"We've never been in this position before where you walk off the field embarrassed, upset and disappointed. That's where we are," Shula said. "I'm bitterly disappointed in my football team, including myself."

While the San Francisco defense was frustrating Marino, Jeff Kemp hit Jerry Rice with two touchdown passes.

The 49ers accomplished their victory over Miami in much the same way the 49ers beat the Dolphins the last time the two teams met — San Francisco's 38-16 win in the Super Bowl 19 months ago. While Marino completed 27 of 46 for 301 yards, he was constantly hurried and never got his rhythm.

Kemp, subbing for the injured Joe Montana, completed 14 of 29 for 168 yards but made the game's big play — a 50-yard connection to Jerry Rice with 15 seconds left in the half. It came just three plays after the Dolphins, sluggish for most of the half, had cut the lead to 10-9 and gave the 49ers a 17-9 advantage at halftime.

Eagles 34, Rams 20
Quarterback Ron Jaworski's three touchdown passes and a defense that stopped NFL rushing leader Eric Dickerson carried Philadelphia over the previously unbeaten Rams.

Jaworski, who left the game with 8:34 left in the third quarter with a slight concussion, completed 17 of 27 passes for 213 yards as the Eagles silenced the Veterans Stadium boobirds, who after three losses were shouting for Ryan's scalp.

The Eagles, last in rushing defense, stonewalled Dickerson in the first half, allowing him just 19 yards on eight carries. He wound up with 58 yards on 17 rushes.

Giants 20, Saints 17
Phil Simms threw a 4-yard touchdown pass to tight end Zeke Mowatt with 8:03 to play as the New York Giants rallied from a 17-point first-half deficit to beat upset-minded New Orleans.

The touchdown pass was the second of the day for Simms and capped a seven-play, 72-yard drive that the Giants quarterback ignited with an 18-yard scramble. The pass gave the Giants their third straight victory, raising their record to 3-1.

Redskins 19, Seahawks 14
George Rogers rushed for 115 yards and two touchdowns to lead undefeated Washington to victory over previously unbeaten Seattle.

Rogers' second score, from 7 yards out, gave Washington a 16-7 lead late in the third quarter. The run capped a 74-yard drive and gave the Redskins some breathing room after they had used a team-record 57-yard field goal by Steve Cox to take a 9-7 halftime lead.

Seattle's Steve Largent caught three passes to equal Harold Carmichael's NFL record of catching a pass in 127 consecutive games.

Bears 44, Bengals 7
Sore-shouldered quarterback Jim McMahon threw three touchdown passes to inspire a sluggish Chicago offense to its most productive performance of the season.

The 40 Bears routed the 2-2 Bengals in style reminiscent of their 1985 Super Bowl season, using McMahon's leadership to cash in on five interceptions by their hard-hitting linebackers and defensive secondary Chicago built a 21-0 first quarter lead that was never in jeopardy.

McMahon, making his first start since separating his shoulder three weeks ago, dove 1 yard for the Bears' first score, tossed a 2-yard scoring pass to running back Walter Payton, then launched a perfect 53-yard scoring bomb to wide receiver Willie Gault to complete the biggest first-quarter scoring blitz against Cincinnati in five years.

Vikings 42, Packers 7
Tommy Kramer threw six touchdown passes and surpassed the 20,000-yard career passing mark, leading Minnesota over winless Green Bay. For only the second time in their storied 66-year history, the Packers have started a season 0-4; the other was in 1975. The Vikings, 3-1, snapped a five-game losing streak to Green Bay.

Kramer threw two scoring passes each to Steve Jordan and Hassan Jones and one each to Darrin Nelson and Mike Mularkey.

He completed 16 of 25 passes for 241 yards, giving him 20,004 career yards.

Browns 24, Lions 21
Gerald McNeil returned a punt 64 yards for a touchdown and ignited the tie-breaking drive with a 36-yard kickoff return, leading Cleveland over Detroit.

McNeil's third-quarter punt return was the longest in Browns' history, and his fourth-quarter kick return started a 10-play, 58-yard drive capped by Matt Bahr's 24-yard field goal with 11 minutes to play.

The field goal gave Cleveland, 2-2, a 17-14 lead. Curtis Dickey then ran 1 yard for his first touchdown since 1984 to clinch the Browns' victory with 7:45 to play. The Lions, 1-3, lost their third straight.

Kansas City 20, Buffalo 17
Nick Lowery kicked a 46-yard field goal with 1:07 left to boost Kansas City over Buffalo. The Chiefs scored twice in the game's final five minutes and were helped when Buffalo quarterback Jim Kelly threw an interception to Deron Cherry late in the fourth quarter after the Chiefs had scored the tying touchdown.

Cherry's interception gave Kansas City the ball at the Buffalo 45 with 3:58 to play and the Chiefs drove close enough for Lowery's field goal, which snapped a 17-17 tie.

Broncos 27, Patriots 20
Sammy Winder and Gerald Wilhite scored second-half touchdowns and the Denver defense smothered New England in that half, rallying the unbeaten Broncos past the Patriots.

Trailing 13-3 at halftime, the Broncos scored on four of their five possessions in the second half.

John Elway — who endured a dreadful first half, hitting on only six of 18 passes for 48 yards with one interception — returned to form on Denver's opening possession of the second half. He completed passes of 17 yards to Steve Watson and 32 yards to rookie Mark Jackson, then found tight end Clarence Kay for the 1-yard scoring toss.

NFL Roundup

Jets 26, Colts 7

Pat Leahy's four field goals extended his string of successful attempts to 19 in a row, the third-longest in NFL history, as the New York Jets beat winless Indianapolis.

The Jets survived four turnovers, then halted three Indianapolis drives in the second half by forcing the 0-4 Colts to turn the ball over each time. The only Indianapolis score came on a 3-yard touchdown pass from rookie quarterback Jack Trudeau to rookie Bill Brooks with 14 seconds to go.

Leahy, whose last miss was in the 10th game last year, extended his own club record for consecutive field goals with successful attempts of 34, 48, 47 and 24 yards. The NFL record for consecutive field goals is 23 by Mark Moseley of Washington.

Raiders 17, Chargers 13
Marc Wilson threw two touchdown passes in a span of 41 seconds to spark the Los Angeles Raiders to their first win of the NFL season, a come-from-behind victory over San Diego.

The decision left both teams with 1-3 records. The Raiders, playing without star tailback Marcus Allen, who was sidelined because of a sprained ankle, opened the season by losing their first three games for the first time in 22 years.

Los Angeles won despite turning the ball over five times, four in San Diego territory, and allowing Wilson to be sacked eight times. Wilson completed 19 of his 28 passes for 314 yards.

Falcons 23, Bucs 20, OT
Mick Luckhurst's third field goal of the game, a 34-yarder 12:35 into overtime, lifted Atlanta over Tampa Bay. The game-winning kick came at the end of a 10-play, 52-yard drive that consumed 6 minutes, 29 seconds and completed the Falcons' comeback from a 20-7 halftime deficit.

The Falcons' 4-0 start is the best in the franchise's 21-year history. Tampa Bay, trying to reach the .500 mark for the first time since the sixth week of the 1984 season, fell to 1-3.

Gerald Riggs, who rushed for 129 yards on 27 carries, launched the second-half rally with a 1-yard touchdown run in the third quarter. Luckhurst, who kicked the game-winning field goal last week in a 37-35 victory over Dallas, hit field goals of 43 and 34 yards in the fourth period to force the game into overtime.

Mad Dogs & Midlanders

The game that has been called the seed of modern professional football, which began at a school in Rugby, England, in 1823 when an intramural soccer game got out of hand, is alive and well in Midland.

Walter Dueease, match secretary for the 11-year-old Midland-Odessa Rugby Football Club, said the group has an active roster of 30 to 35 players. "Our season is from September to early December, and then we take a break for the holidays," Dueease said, "and then we go again from mid-January through April. The season culminates with the state championships."

Dueease said some 45 organized clubs in the state belong to the Texas Rugby Union. The Midland-Odessa group, which plays at University of the Permian Basin in Odessa, plays 10 matches a year within its division.

Piano duo like 'two playing as one'

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Staff Writer

An accident when the two were teaching at the same college brought pianists Dorothy Jonas and Joshua Pierce together.

"It was quite an accident that we got together," Ms. Jonas says during a recent telephone interview. "He asked me to accompany him on a concerto. We played together, and there was this certain rapport on the piano — we jelled like one. The critics gave us such rave reviews; they all heard such musical unity, that here we are."

The two have been recording and concertizing together since 1979 in the United States and Europe. They will perform the Texas Premiere of Miklos Rosza's "Spellbound Concerto Fantasy" for the opening concert of the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Choral's 1986-87 season.

The performances will be held 8 p.m. Tuesday in Lee High School Auditorium and 8 p.m. Thursday in Bonham Junior High Auditorium.

Single admission tickets are priced at $12 for reserved seating, $9 for general admission and $4 for senior citizens and students. For reservations or information on season tickets call 563-5269.

The concert, entitled "Hollywood and the Classics," will also feature R. Strauss' "Also Sprach Zarathustra," Toccata and Fugue in D minor by J.S. Bach and Skowronczewski and Music from Great Texas Films: Polovetzian Dances by A. Borodin. The chorale will perform with the symphony in the Music from Great Texas Films.

Ms. Jonas, who was born in San Antonio, traces her interest in piano back to childhood. She began playing when she was 5½ years old and performed her first solo recital when she was 9 years old.

Duo pianists Joshua Pierce and Dorothy Jonas

"I knew that playing the piano was what I was going to do," she said. "My mother entered me in a lot of competitions. Winning was the thing to do."

The dedication and work paid off. Ms. Jonas was a scholarship student at the Juilliard School, where she earned her bachelor of music degree and pursued graduate studies. "I loved Juilliard," Ms. Jonas says. "I was very happy there."

A winner of the National Piano Tournament and, for 10 years, recipient of the Hertzberg Award, Ms. Jonas has toured throughout the United States, Canada and Europe, appearing in concert with such conductors as Igor Stravinsky, Andre Kostelanitz, Max Reiter, Nicholas Flageolo, Ettore Stratta and Elmer Bernstein.

Pierce, who was born in New York

City, appeared on the Ed Sullivan and Mike Douglas shows when he was 13.

"When I was very young, I went to the piano and something happened," Pierce says, his voice soft over the phone. "I knew that's what I wanted to do."

"I asked my parents to buy me a piano," he said. "My family was heavily connected in show business. My father had been a director in Hollywood and New York, but he had left the business."

Pierce remembers what his father said.

"He told me, 'If you're going to end up being a mediocre player, I don't want the instrument in the house.'"

His parents did buy a piano, and his father started giving him lessons. Pierce went on to become a scholarship student at Juilliard, where he won seven Heckshire Foundation awards.

Unlike Ms. Jonas, Pierce "wanted another experience" and didn't "want to stay in one school."

He was the recipient of a full scholarship, the Victor Babin Award, at Cleveland Institute of Music, and a scholarship student at the Manhattan School of Music, where he earned his bachelor and master of musical arts degrees.

Pierce has recorded the first American recording of Mendelssohn's Concerto in A minor for Piano and Orchestra with L'Orchestra da Camera di Roma, directed by Nicolas Flageolo, over 23 piano and prepared piano compositions by John Cage; works by Joseph Alexander; and Four Chopin Ballades for the Musical Heritage Society. He has received citations from Downbeat Magazine and Heavy Metal Magazine for his contributions to contemporary discography.

Pierce recalls what Heavy Metal Magazine referred to the recordings as "two of the most outstanding albums ever recorded in contemporary music post war years to present time."

As a duo, Ms. Jonas and Pierce have introduced and recorded a number of new American and 20th century works.

"Most of us are turning into machines, duplicating the same copy," Pierce says. "It's the individual mavericks that lead the way." He pauses, then adds, "The worst thing is to hear people play who don't say anything. What sets apart the ordinary and the great performance is that something happens. The score is only the blueprint, you have to have something to say."

The "Spellbound Concerto-Fantasy," which will be performed locally, was written for Pierce and Ms. Jonas as was Rosza's "New England Concerto" and Paul Turok's Piano Sonata.

The two have also recorded works by Cage, Walter Piston, Mozart, Bohuslav Martinu, Rachmaninoff and Benjamin Britten, including the world premiere recording of Britten's The Scottish Ballads for Two Piano and Orchestra. In addition, they have recorded a crossover album, "Two Pianos on Broadway," and garnered four Grammy award nominations.

Fugitive of two years dies in auto mishap

From Staff and Wire Reports

LUBBOCK — A West Texas man wanted for more than two years in the fatal shooting of a poker partner died Sunday following an auto accident, authorities said.

Department of Public Safety Trooper Salvador Abreo said the man was identified as John Torres Briones, 42.

Briones was fatally injured when his van struck an unoccupied car parked along U.S. 87 about four and a half miles south of Lubbock, DPS officials said.

Briones, who was alone in the van, died at Lubbock General Hospital, the DPS said.

He was wanted in connection with the Sept. 25, 1984, shooting death of Jose Alfonso Hernandez Perez, 26, at an Odessa nightclub, said Ector County District Attorney R.C. Augesen.

According to Odessa police spokesman Cpt. John McAbon, Perez was shot in the early morning hours during an altercation at the El Trocadero Club, 1107 S. Dixie Boulevard.

Briones was indicted Jan. 23, 1985, by an Ector County grand jury on a charge of murder with bond set at $25,000. He had been sought unsuccessfully by law officers since his indictment.

Augesen said investigators thought Briones had been moving back and forth between towns in New Mexico and Texas during the past two years.

According to Midland County Assistant District Attorney David Rosado, Briones had been indicted in August of 1984 by the grand jury on a charge of aggravated assault on a peace officer. Briones had never been arrested on the Midland warrant, he said.

Two Odessans arrested

MATADOR, Texas (AP) — Two Odessa men were arrested Saturday afternoon, according to Motley County Sheriff Alton Marshall, when a state trooper sniffed out 415 pounds of marijuana in the back of a van he had stopped for speeding, authorities said.

Department of Public Safety trooper Dudley Speed said he was checking to see if the occupants were complying with the mandatory seat belt law when he noticed an odor coming from 20 sacks in the back of the van.

The men said the sacks were filled with horse feed, but Speed discovered marijuana he estimated to be worth $400,000.

Marshall said he expected the two Odessa men to be formally arraigned on drug possession charges shortly after noon today.

The suspects were held Sunday night in the Dickens County jail, pending the filing of formal drug charges. Motley County has no jail.

He was a member of St. Luke's United Methodist Church.

Survivors include his mother, Dorothy Gillett Mason of Midland, one brother, Joseph Holland of Midland, and two sisters, Betty Frazier of Nacogdoches and Shirley Moran of Downers Grove, Ill.

The family requests memorials be directed to St. Luke's United Methodist Church Building Fund.

He was born Feb. 3, 1960, in Fort Worth and was reared in Midland, attending school here. At the time of his death he was employed with HCW Drilling as a driller.

He was a member of St. Luke's United Methodist Church.

Survivors include his mother, Dorothy Gillett Mason of Midland, one brother, Joseph Holland of Midland, and two sisters, Betty Frazier of Nacogdoches and Shirley Moran of Downers Grove, Ill.

Truck stop scene of arson, reports say

From Staff Reports

An arson incident occurred early this morning at the Warfield Truck Stop Restaurant on West Interstate 20, Midland Sheriff's Department records show.

The report stated an unknown person or persons set fire to a toilet tissue roll in the mens' restroom at about 1:30 a.m.

Records indicated there was smoke damage only.

Sheriff's department reports also showed that Patty Stanley, 31, Rt. 10,

Police Roundup

Box 10208, was burglarized Sunday afternoon.

Taken from Ms. Stanley's residence was a $600 microwave oven, records showed.

About $1,600 worth of cartons of cigarettes were stolen from the One-Stop Food Store Sunday afternoon, Midland Police Department records indicated.

The report listed 115-120 cartons were stolen at about 4:40 p.m.

"We have so much traveling involved, we have trouble with people being able to keep up with the sport," he said.

Duease said rugby demands that player be in top condition.

"It requires a tremendous amount of individual commitment to be in shape," he said. "With two 40-minute halves and only a short intermission, it's almost constant action."

The game resembles American football in that players can kick the ball, pass it, and run with it. But rugby differs in that the action is continuous, while football action occurs in plays.

"Most rugby players enjoy football, but they enjoy playing rugby more," Duease said.

Bush attacks White in campaign for Clements

HOUSTON (AP) — Vice President George Bush attacked Gov. Mark White as he campaigned over the weekend for White's opponent, former Gov. Bill Clements.

Bush, campaigning for Clements in San Antonio and Houston, said Clements, who was ousted from the governor's mansion by White in 1982, will at least "return phone calls."

"It's hard for people in the administration when a governor just seems to delight in going after the president, and, very candidly, there was some of it I thought was very personal a couple of years ago," Bush said of White on Saturday.

Clements would make a better governor because he is someone the Reagan administration can work with, Bush repeatedly told about 600 supporters attending a $500-a-plate fund-raiser in Houston Saturday night.

"He'll return phone calls, for one thing," Bush said. "He (Clements) isn't out there carving us up all the time."

At the Houston fund-raiser, Clements said his campaign must do well in Harris County in the Nov. 4 election to regain the governor's seat.

A new Gallup poll shows Clements and White tied with 46 percent of the votes, while 8 percent of the voters surveyed remain undecided.

"Bill Clements, when he was governor, was known as the pro-education governor," Bush said. "He has been a strong supporter of education, as has been demonstrated by the funding levels he was able to bring about, and we respect that enormously."

Because of sagging oil prices, oil-dependent Texas faces a large budget deficit and legislators have been trying to work out a solution during two special sessions.

Bush said the administration doesn't agree with White or Clements on the need for an oil import fee, a move that has been resisted by President Reagan.

STATE

Alcohol death lawsuit could impact like cases

SAN ANGELO (AP) — A suit trying to pin the blame for the death of a 17-year-old boy on the host of a party where the youth got drunk could have a long-term impact on similar cases in the future, a law specialist says.

The family of David L. Hasty, who died in a 1985 traffic accident, filed a suit claiming David Vallandingham, 18, was responsible for the death of Hasty and the serious injuries of Richard W. Goins, 18, a friend of Hasty's.

The driver, David Brent Adams, 18, of Dove Creek, was killed, but his family is not involved in the suit.

Ralph Dreyer, the Hasty family's lawyer, said the chief issue to decide is whether Vallandingham, as the seller of the alcohol, should have protected the patrons of his party.

"The law is going in this direction," he said. "This is not an off-the-wall case. We have a real social issue that needs to be litigated so we know what the law is in Texas."

Michael Morrison, a tort specialist at the Baylor University School of Law, says the case could have a long-term impact in this generally uncharted territory of Texas civil law. Alcohol-related accident liability is a new area, he said, in a story published Sunday by the San Angelo Standard Times.

Hasty, Goins and Adams became intoxicated at Vallandingham's party on Aug. 15, 1985, the suit contends. Vallandingham was convicted in Tom Green County Court at Law in March of selling alcohol at the party without a permit.

The civil suit and evidence at Vallandingham's criminal trial say he sold advance tickets, collected an admission fee at the gate and sold vodka-laced punch at the party attended by many other minors.

As the three boys drove home on a rural road, their pickup truck veered off and flipped over, killing Hasty and injuring Goins, the suit alleges.

The accident and resulting injuries and death were the direct result of Vallandingham's unlawful serving of alcoholic beverages, the suit contends. No amount of damages is specified in the suit.

Vallandingham declined to comment on the case.

Morrison said Texas courts traditionally have held that a person becomes intoxicated because he drank too much, not because alcohol was provided to him.

Historically, appellate courts have been hesitant to trace liability to individuals, believing party host liability is a social issue better handled by the Legislature, he added.

The law professor said the legal questions to be addressed are whether a party host is negligent for not protecting someone who is intoxicated, whether it is reasonable to provide alcohol to minors, and whether the accident was caused by the host's negligence.

The fact that the youths were juveniles may not have much impact on the case or on Texas law, Morrison said.

The case could have more long-term impact if the lawyers place full responsibility on the host instead of spreading the blame both to the host and to the victims' ages, Morrison said.

"It's not likely that the fact they were 16 or 17 years old will make a difference concerning their own negligence," he said.

But Dreyer said, "There's even that much more of a duty in that minors were served (alcohol). In the case of underaged children, the state decides for them when they can do certain things, when they can drink, when they can choose which parent he wants to live with, when they can consent to have sex."

Sixteen-year-old kills father in fear he'd kill her mother

DALLAS (AP) — A 16-year-old girl fatally shot her father because she feared he would kill her mother, police said.

George Thomas Punch, 45, died Friday of two bullet wounds to the chest and side, police said.

The 16-year-old was really frightened that her mother was going to be killed. At the time, she felt she had to do what she had to do, homicide investigator Jack Allison said Saturday.

He said the case will be reviewed by a grand jury.

FORT WORTH (AP) — Metal detectors were installed outside a Tarrant County courtroom in preparation for the capital murder trial of a man accused of killing a convenience store clerk with a pickax.

Ray Anthony Jennings, 27, of Arlington was to go on trial today in the Jan. 4, 1985, robbery-slaying of James L. Dudley, an Arlington night clerk whose body was discovered with the pickax still buried in his head.

State district Judge Clifford Davis is the second judge in Tarrant County to use a metal detector since the shooting death of a man in a courtroom this summer.

Arrested in the Dudley case along with Jennings was Kenneth Bernard Givens, also of Arlington. Givens, 26, pleaded guilty to aggravated robbery in exchange for his testimony against Jennings.

Bloody trail leads to body

NEW BRAUNFELS (AP) — Officers followed a trail of blood to the body of a Comal County teen-ager who had been stabbed 13 times, authorities said Sunday.

The body of Tanaya Otterpohl, 14, was found near the mobile home where she lived with her mother and sister, said Comal County Sheriff Walter Fellers.

Her mother returned home early Sunday to find the girl missing and her bedroom spattered with blood. A deputy followed the blood to the girl's partially-clothed body, Fellers said.

The victim's 11-year-old sister, who was asleep in another room, said she didn't hear anything, the sheriff said.

Fellers said Hilario Escalante Valensuela, 22, of Canyon Lake, was arrested Sunday as he walked along a road not far from the Otterpohl mobile home.

Valensuela was charged with murder and was held in the Comal County Jail in lieu of $150,000 bail set by Justice of the Peace Harold Krueger, the sheriff said.

SUGARLAND (AP) — Authorities say they are unsure how a state prison inmate serving a 55-year sentence for aggravated rape escaped from his cell.

Donald Lewis, 26, was discovered missing from the Texas Department of Corrections Central Unit in Fort Bend County during a Sunday afternoon head count.

TDC spokesman Charles Brown said Lewis was serving a sentence for aggravated rape and is considered dangerous.

Officials believed Sunday the inmate was still inside the compound. It was the 37th escape for the year from the state prison system, TDC officials said.

Lewis, 5-foot-9 and 144 pounds, has brown eyes, black hair and a dark complexion. Officials said he has a small cut scar on his upper chest.

Space 'water hole' may be communication key

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — There is a "window" in deep space that astronomers call the water hole, a spot where painstaking analysis has identified the presence of hydrogen and hydroxyl molecules, the elemental components of water.

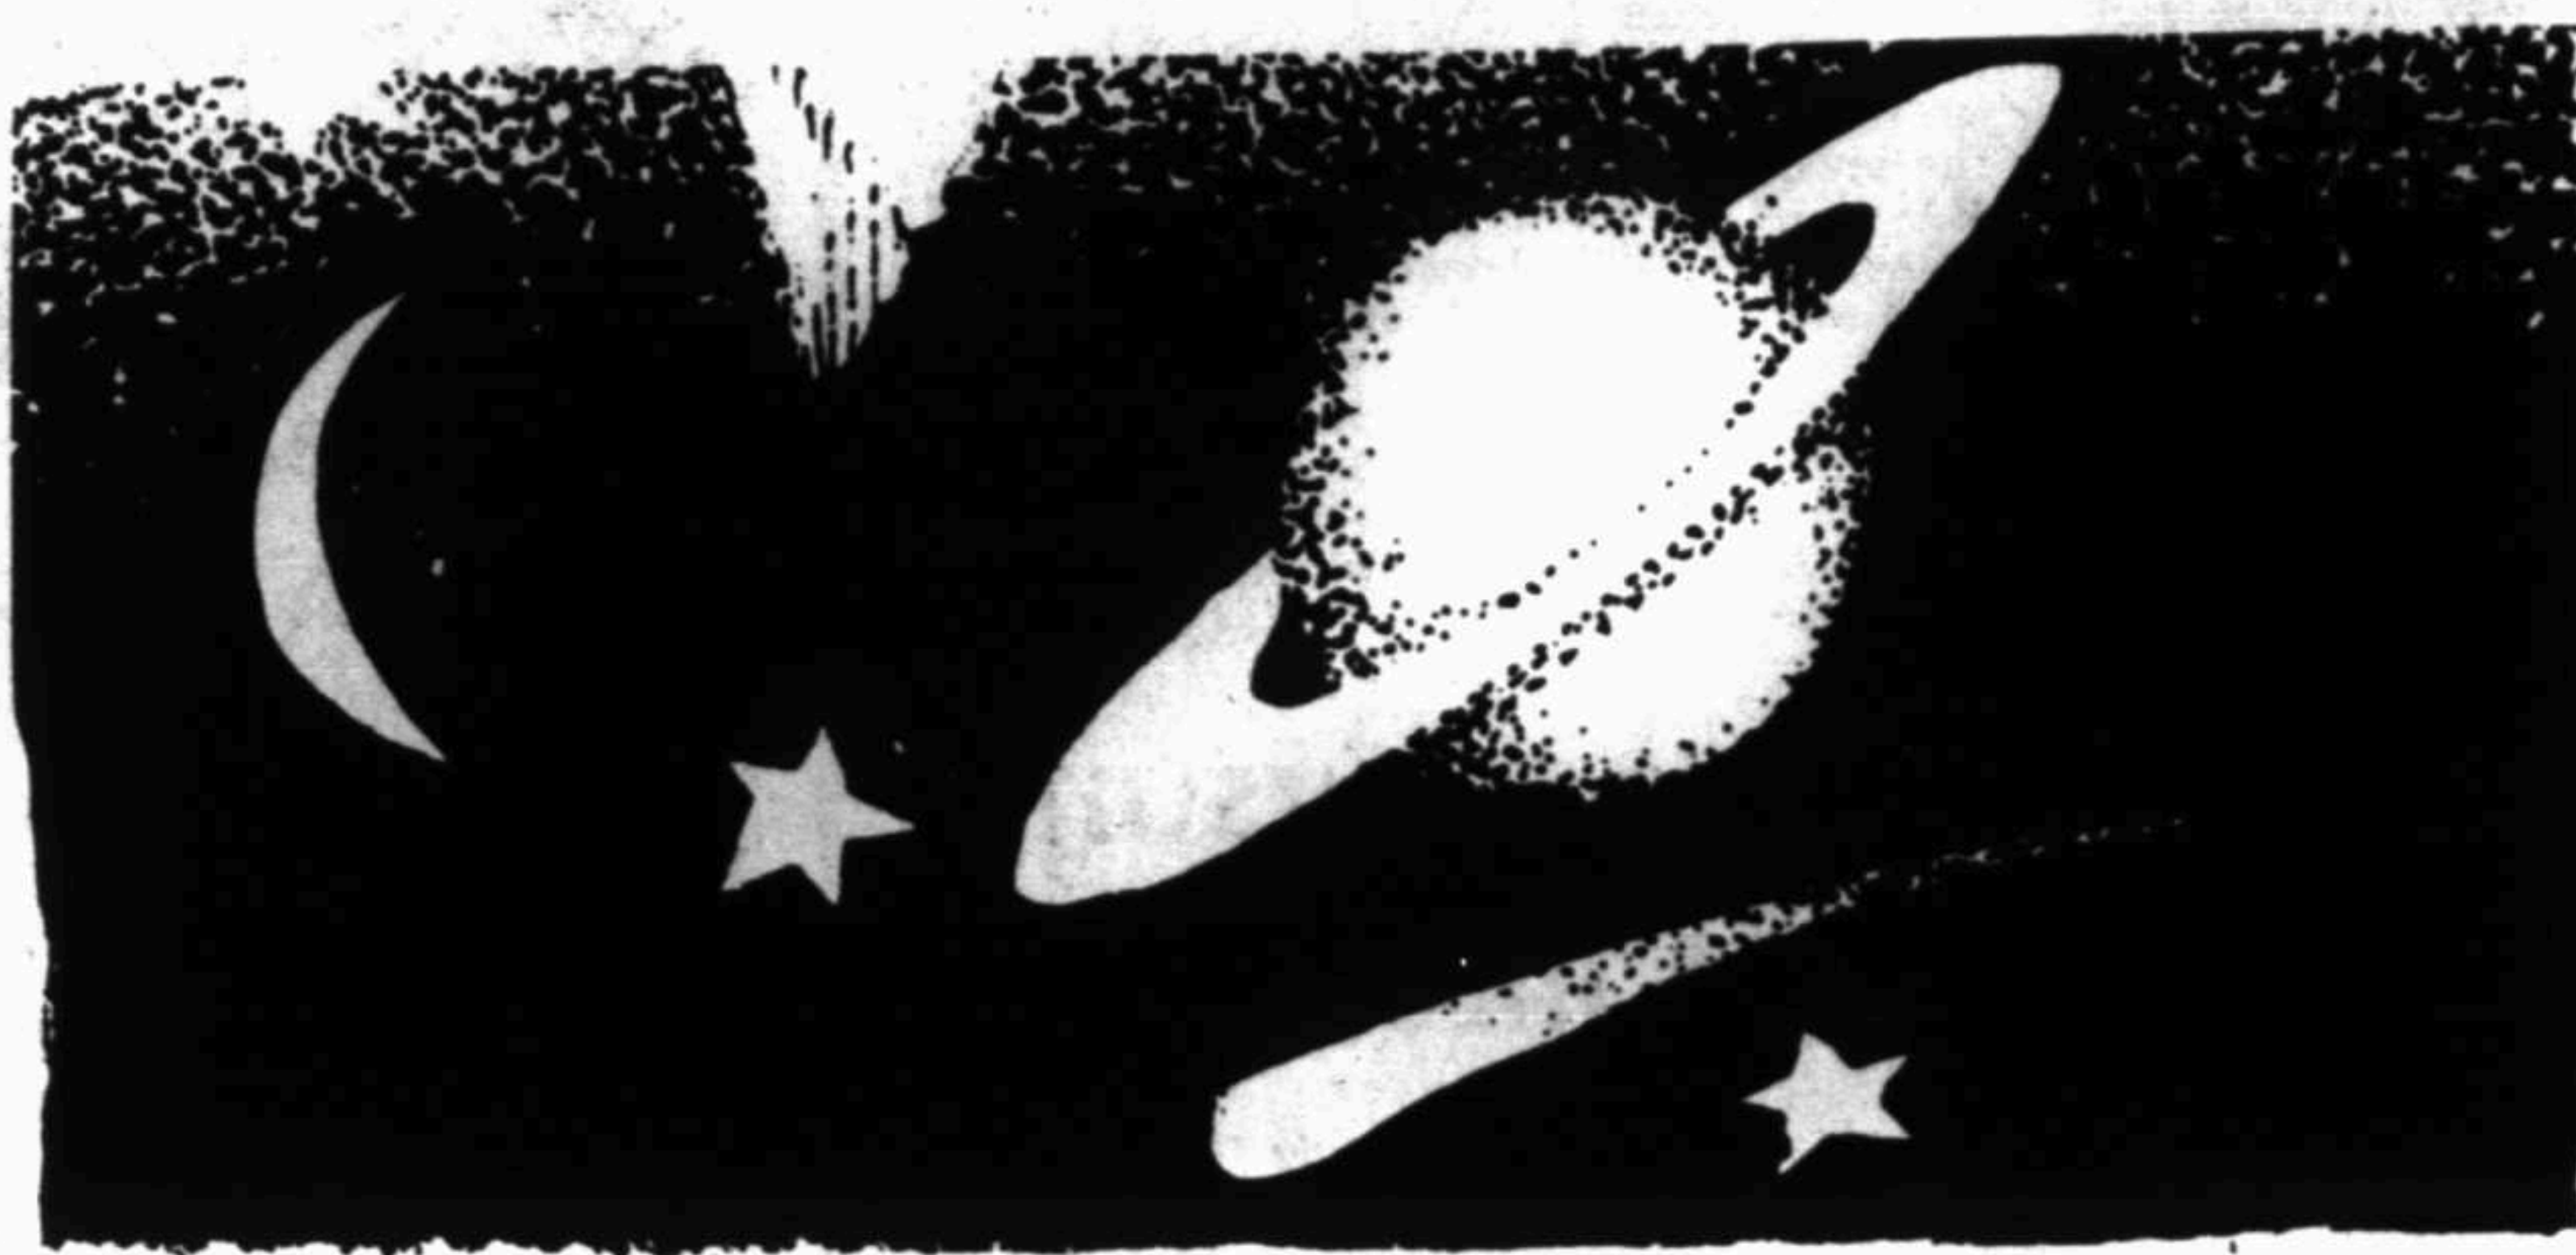

As it turns out, that same window on the microwave band is relatively quiet and free of interference from interstellar noise caused by electrons spinning in magnetic fields and other natural radio emissions. It is that vast expanse, hundreds of thousands of light years away, that scientists think is the most likely area of the universe to search for messages from distant civilizations. Other civilizations may "congregate their signals at the water hole, at least that's the hope," said Thomas McDonough, president of the Planetary Society, which since 1983 has been helping finance a search at Harvard University's Oak Ridge Observatory for signals from other worlds.

"It's something akin to the water hole of the old west where the settlers gathered out in the desert," said McDonough, who also teaches at the California Institute of Technology.

THE NATIONAL Aeronautics and Space Administration is betting on the likelihood of extraterrestrial civilizations and is now mounting the largest research and development effort to date in search of distant life.

NASA scientists are seeking $75 million in the fiscal 1988 budget to finance the system over 10 years. It is expected to be 300 times more sensitive than other systems used to eavesdrop on the universe.

There always has been a serious interest in searching for extraterrestrial life but technology now makes in-depth searches possible, according to astronomer Carl Sagan of Cornell University.

CNS Graphic

"It is not that we more fervently than any other people in the history of the world want to know the answer, it's just that we have the technology to try to find out," he said. Sagan says it is possible hundreds of distant civilizations exist out there.

"The kind of evidence we're looking for is a radio signal or beacon, perhaps, that indicates communication in our general direction," said Michael Klein, SETI (search for extraterrestrial intelligence) project manager at NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena.

RESEARCHERS AT JPL are collaborating with scientists at the NASA Ames Research Center in Mountain View, Calif., which already has received $8 million to develop an observing system that will be linked to NASA's current network of ground-based antennas.

The new NASA SETI project will explore more than 1,000 sun-like stars and scan the microwave band in search of distant neighbors in the universe.

Scientists expect to begin the search in 1992 and conduct the survey over a five-year period. "With this program we eventually would be able to expand the coverage to look at 10 million frequency channels at once," Klein said. "And that system would be able to find either a strong or weak signal."

If NASA allocates the $75 million needed to produce the equipment and run the project, Klein said information gained through the search could add tremendously to the body of knowledge about the universe, even if a beacon is not detected.

"I view this experiment as an attempt to try to learn how abundant life might be in the universe," Klein said. "This is just a moderate-sized program as far as NASA's concerned but it has the potential to do so much."

FROM NASA'S Deep Space Network antennas in the California desert, Australia and Spain, incoming messages from anywhere in the universe could be detected regardless of Earth's angle during the spin on its axis or rotation around the sun.

Added to this network, Klein said NASA scientists also would connect SETI computers and microwave monitors to the National Science Foundation's massive 1,000-foot diameter radio telescope near Arecibo, Puerto Rico.

That device, among the most sensitive high-powered radio telescopes is situated in a quiet mountainous area of that Caribbean island and has been used by Paul Horowitz, director of Harvard's SETI program, to search for distant signals.

Single lens simplifies binoculars

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — A single lens that combines features of the two separate lenses now commonly used in binoculars has been produced by scientists at the University of Rochester's Institute of Optics.

They say that this is the first time in this country that a lens making technique called gradient index fabrication has been used for a real-life application.

This method may result in weight, space and cost savings for a wide range of instruments, such as camera lenses, telescopes and microscopes.

DEAR ABBY

Father's letters legacy of love for sons

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR READERS: Once upon a time there was a young father named Patrick Connolly, who suffered from a conflict many busy parents face. He left for work before his children woke up and frequently got home after they had gone to bed. His sons were 8 and 10 when he started to leave little notes for his sleeping children, offering advice, encouragement and loving messages to let them know that he was thinking of them. He even illustrated some notes with a cast of characters that included every member of the family plus the family dog. These notes were varied, from little poems, riddles, wholesome bits of philosophy to simple reminders — "I love you, guys."

One note offered this helpful bit of advice: "Be fair and friendly and friends will come. The important thing is not how many friends you have, but what kind of friends."

Another reads: "It's a new day. God gives us new days so we can continue with our successes, or start over if we goofed yesterday." Each note was signed, "Love, Dad."

Two years ago, the Connolly boys received their last daily note from their dad. At the age of 41, Connolly died suddenly of a massive heart attack. After his death, his family looked through the priceless collection of notes that Mrs. Connolly had saved in a shoe box and selected the most meaningful to publish as a book.

The result is "Love, Dad," the best of these daily notes written by a busy but loving father who had found a wonderful way to communicate with his children. This little jewel of a book is filled with commonsense messages that will ring a bell with all parents who want their children to grow up to be decent, honest and hardworking. It's written with a sense of humor, yet contains some important moral lessons without being preachy. It touched my heart, and I think it will touch yours.

If your bookstore does not have "Love, Dad" by Patrick Connolly, order it from the publisher: Andrews, McMeel and Parker, P.O. Box 419150, Kansas City, Mo. 64141. It's in paperback and costs $5.95 plus $1 for postage.

DEAR ABBY: When I read the letter from the reader signed "Hearing Things in York, S.C.," I recalled that some years ago there was an article in the medicine section of Time magazine on the subject of medical detective work.

One of the examples cited involved a man who went to a psychiatrist complaining that he was always hearing radio broadcasts. Thinking to humor him, the psychiatrist asked what he was hearing right then. The man replied he was hearing Rudy Vallee broadcasting from the Steel Pier in Atlantic City. The psychiatrist turned on his office radio and, sure enough, he heard Rudy Vallee! He became so intrigued that he conducted an extensive project with his patient.

After much questioning he discovered that the man worked in a glass bottle factory and had gotten some silica crystals in dental cavities. The combination of the silica, saliva and some bridgework in his mouth had literally transformed him into a walking crystal radio receiver!

The psychiatrist referred the patient to a dentist who gave his teeth a thorough cleaning, filled the cavities and redid the bridgework. As a result, the patient "went off the air," was able to concentrate, and lived happily ever after. Hope this helps your reader. — R.T. HOLLAND, LOS ANGELES

DEAR MR. HOLLAND: Thank you for a fascinating letter. Now, does anyone doubt that truth is stranger than fiction?

Child's death from AIDS haunt's family

By MARCIA DUNN

CRESSON, Pa. (AP) — There has been no reprieve from pain for Patrick and Lauren Burk since they lost their 1½-year-old son to AIDS.

Anger, guilt and fear haunt Burk, a hemophiliac who apparently contracted the deadly disease from blood products, and his wife, who has AIDS-related symptoms. And the tears have yet to subside.

"There are days I just don't want to get out of bed. Pat has those days, too," the 25-year-old Mrs. Burk said recently in the family's mobile home.

"I get very upset, I get very disgusted when he (Pat) doesn't feel good. Those are my worst days. You're just always wondering, 'Is he going to get so sick he's never going to get better?'" she said.

Her husband, a quiet, frighteningly frail man of 28, was stricken with the AIDS virus, apparently from his regular doses of blood clotting concentrates. He unwittingly passed it on to his wife, who became pregnant with their son, Dwight.

Dwight died Dec. 13, 1985, at 20 months of age.

"The thing that's in my mind constantly is the day he died," Mrs. Burk said, staring at her lap and twisting her fingers. "That's what haunts me the most, hearing, 'Mrs. Burk, his heartbeat is only 10. Mrs. Burk, he's gone.'"

"I hate to drive by myself because I just start crying. It's terrible because I think of that, that's the first thing. That's why I try to have my radio up so loud that I can't think of anything else but the radio."

Lauren Burk and her 5-year-old daughter Nicole

The couple's sole relief has been Nicole, a healthy 5-year-old from Mrs. Burk's first marriage who has adopted Dwight's Cabbage Patch doll.

"She's really helped us," Mrs. Burk said. "When we cry, she says, 'Mommy, why do you cry now for him when he doesn't have any tubes and he's not hurting anymore?'" "She'll also be outside at night and she'll say the brightest star is Dwight up in the sky. She'll say, 'Hi, to it and wave.'"

Coping with Dwight's death has been particularly difficult for Burk. In May, he nearly died of an overdose of sleeping pills that his wife called accidental. A month ago, he returned to the hospital after his weight dropped from 165 to a dangerous 110 pounds.

He has regained 20 pounds but takes medicine to calm his nerves, his wife said, adding that he has taken up pool and photography to pass the time.

"He doesn't talk a lot" about Dwight's death, Mrs. Burk said. "But I know he feels totally responsible."

Early last year, a British medical journal, The Lancet, identified Dwight as the first child of a hemophiliac to be born with AIDS.

Dwight's case prompted the National Hemophilia Foundation in April 1985 to advise the approximately 20,000 U.S. hemophiliacs to postpone having children until more could be learned.

Only two other cases like Dwight's have been confirmed, according to Dr. Peter H. Levine, the foundation's medical director.

Dwight's case "helped focus national attention on the need to know more" about how the AIDS virus is spread and how it manifests itself in infants, Levine said.

Acquired immune deficiency syndrome has killed 14,097 of 25,515 U.S. victims reported by Sept. 22, according to the national Centers for Disease Control. The incurable disease, which destroys the immune system, strikes mainly male homosexuals and intravenous drug users, but 229 reported victims have been hemophiliacs.

The Burks have prepared a will and purchased tombstones and cemetery plots next to their son's grave.

Still, they keep abreast of medical developments and have told doctors they will try any treatment that might prolong their lives.

Mrs. Burk, a diabetic, suffers from AIDS-Related Complex, an illness that doesn't necessarily lead to AIDS. Her symptoms include swollen lymph nodes, weight loss, exhaustion and a persistent cough.

Although she could return to her job as a registered nurse at a home for the mentally retarded, she prefers to stay home and care for her husband. Burk, a former nurse's aide, has been unable to work for nearly two years.

The family relies on donations to a trust fund to offset medical expenses.

To help make ends meet and to provide for Nicole, the Burks are suing a Pittsburgh hospital, a blood bank, three doctors and six pharmaceutical firms over Dwight's death.

"You feel bad that you have to sue somebody. But you think that when the fund runs out, there's no way we can survive," Mrs. Burk said.

Regardless of the lawsuit, the couple harbors no grudge against those responsible for contaminating the blood products that Burk received.

Penn State responds to students' needs

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — Guy Martin and Steve Katona long thought their kidney disease made college impossible, but they now attend Pennsylvania State University while living in a dormitory for dialysis patients.

The year-old "dialysis dorm," occupying three floors of a condominium three blocks from campus, has six residents, and organizers expect between 16 and 20 students by this time next year.

The dorm features furnished apartments, specially balanced meals prepared by a dietician, and transportation to a hospital for dialysis. A dialysis unit with six stations is to be installed in three to four months, along with doctors' and nurses' offices.

An education coordinator and a resident counselor are on the staff to help the students, many of whom have led sheltered lives because of their disease, to adjust and become more independent.

"I want to have the people that are in this program, whether they are 19 or 35, de-emphasize their health care, de-emphasize dialysis, and re-emphasize what everybody else has to do in life — be a contributor, pursue things they want to pursue," said John McQuary, project administrator and treasurer of the non-profit corporation that runs the experimental program.

Martin, a 21-year-old freshman from Neptune, N.J., began working toward a business degree this fall.

"This gives me a chance to do what I always wanted to do — go to college and get a degree," he said last week as he lounged in a hospital easy chair for his dialysis.

Martin, who as a child "hardly ever got sick," played basketball in high school and had planned to attend Clark College in Georgia before his disease was diagnosed in 1983. He tried a series of jobs, even attended a community college near home, but the schedule of dialysis and night classes was too much, he said, and he dropped out.

When his social worker showed him the brochure about the Penn State dialysis unit, Martin jumped at the opportunity.

Thousands show support of Central American refugees

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thousands of people from churches and communities offering sanctuary to illegal Central American refugees marched past the White House in a festive protest parade.

Police estimated 2,000 marchers from across the country joined the parade, which featured giant paper-mache figures and colorful banners. It was part of a four-day Sanctuary Celebration held in Washington area churches.

"In El Salvador, if you are a student you are branded a terrorist, a revolutionary," said Omar, 18, who asked that his last name not be used because he is an illegal immigrant.

"In America, your biggest fear is being deported back to El Salvador," he said.

Omar joined a masked Guatemalan who gave his name as Felipe and a half dozen religious workers to describe for reporters a cause which has spread across the United States.

More than 330 churches, 22 towns and the states of New Mexico and Wisconsin have defied U.S. immigration practices to offer sanctuary to refugees fleeing war-ravaged El Salvador and Guatemala, whose governments are both supported by the United States.

Democratic Gov. Anthony S. Earl declared Wisconsin a sanctuary for political refugees Sept. 10. Aides called it a "symbolic gesture," saying the state has no authority exceeding that of the federal government in immigration matters.

The movement has continued to grow despite the May conviction of eight sanctuary activists in Tucson, Ariz., said the Rev. Gustav Gus Schultz of Berkeley, Calif.

Sanctuary Celebration organizers say more than 1,000 people from religious, student and civic groups across the country have been attending the events in Washington. Another 1,000 from other groups joined the march through city streets to the Lincoln Memorial.

NATION IN BRIEF

Plane crashes into homes near Chicago airport

CHICAGO (AP) — A pilot who radioed that his small plane had lost an engine crashed about a half-mile from Midway Airport, plowing into three homes and setting one of them ablaze, officials said.

The pilot died in the crash late Sunday in the South Side neighborhood, but no one on the ground was hurt, said Fire Department spokesman Tom Sheppard.

"I heard two big explosions," said Catherine Zadio, who lives several houses down the block from the homes struck by the plane. "I thought it was a bomb going off, or thunder."

Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Mort Edelman said the pilot of the twin-engine Beechcraft took off from Midway at about 11 p.m. and radioed moments later that he was returning because he had lost an engine.

"Then the tower lost him," he said. Officials said the plane apparently crashed while trying to make its way back.

The pilot was tentatively identified as Frank Jaax, about 50, of DuPage County, said Frank Schwarz, an investigator for the Cook County Medical Examiner's office.

Study: Homeless increasing

WASHINGTON (AP) — A study of 21 cities nationwide shows the number of homeless people has increased 25 percent in the past year, an advocacy group for the homeless says.

The National Coalition for the Homeless said it contacted shelter operators and local government officials for its survey, which concluded, "In city after city, town after town, record numbers of Americans lack even the basics: a bed to sleep in and a meal to eat. Today, in the richest nation on earth, growing numbers of Americans are engaged in a primitive struggle for survival."

But the head of a federal task force on the homeless was skeptical of the coalition's claims.

"Any time you start talking about numbers in relationship to the homeless you've got a problem. First of all it's very difficult to count the homeless," Harvey Vieth, chairman of the three-year-old task force, said in a telephone interview Sunday. And he added, "Twenty-five percent in one year would seem awfully high to me."

"Nobody knows how many homeless there are and we can't gauge it precisely," conceded coalition spokesman Bob Hayes. He added, however, "What we can gauge precisely is the change over 12 months time in the number of people showing up for help." Hayes said his organization estimates there are between 2 million and 3 million homeless in the country, while the official figures from the Housing and Urban Development Department put the number at slightly more than 300,000.

Speed compromise offered

WASHINGTON (AP) — A New Jersey congressman is offering a compromise he hopes will spur Congress to approve a 65 mph speed limit before it recesses for the year.

The proposal by Democratic Rep. James Howard would allow the higher limit on rural interstate highways if states ban radar detectors, require drivers to wear seat belts and ensure compliance with the new limit.

Howard, chairman of the House Committee on Public Works and Transportation, offered the proposal Friday as a way to break a deadlock on highway bills approved by the House and Senate.

The $52.3 billion highway bill passed last Wednesday by the Senate would allow states to increase the speed limit to 65 mph on interstate highways outside communities with populations of more than 50,000. It would affect about 70 percent of the system. The House highway measure contains no such provision.

Howard said he was making his proposal in advance of a House-Senate conference committee meeting on the bill in hopes of getting it approved before Friday's planned congressional recess.

Experiments now restricted

RICHLAND, Wash. (AP) — Most U.S. prisons now have rules prohibiting the kind of experiments in which the testicles of 131 Northwest inmates were irradiated in the 1960s and 1970s, officials say.

Documents released by the U.S. Department of Energy show tests were conducted on 67 Oregon State Prison inmates from 1963 to 1971 and on 64 inmates at the Washington State Penitentiary between 1963 and 1973.

Such so-called intrusive experiments have been banned in most U.S. prisons since 1976 and have been forbidden by Washington state for more than five years, said W.L. "Kip" Kautzky, director of the prison division of the Department of Corrections.

Volunteers' testes were exposed to varying amounts of radiation from X-rays to determine the relationship between biological effects and radiation dose, the documents indicate.

Shortage of black teachers plagues rural South

ATLANTA (AP) — A shortage of black teachers is plaguing Southern rural schools, sending administrators scrambling to hire a shrinking number of new graduates and keep the ones they have.

Much of the shortage stems from affirmative action hiring orders and civil rights gains that pushed industry to recruit actively black college graduates who otherwise might have entered teaching.

While some school districts use aggressive, often expensive recruiting campaigns, some blacks say not enough is being done to attract black faculty.

In South Carolina, the number of minority teachers has dropped by 25 percent in 10 years, and educators say that is not unusual for the Southeast.

The numbers are important for students as well as teachers, said Beverly Lindsay, an associate dean at the University of Georgia's College of Education in Athens.

"Teachers represent authority and power," she said. "Students need someone they can identify with, someone from the same background in a position of leadership and authority, a role model."

White students also need to see black teachers, she added.

"The need for minority teachers touches a two-sided social issue," she said.

In Georgia's Lamar County, a shortage of black teachers triggered a boycott of the district's three schools by black students in August. Twenty-eight percent of the county's teachers are black compared with 50 percent 10 years ago. Half of the student body is black.

Local NAACP leaders claimed the county has tried to run off black teachers and hire only white ones.

In the Lamar County town of Barnesville, Theodore Bush, a retired teacher and member of the NAACP chapter that called the boycott in August, said black teachers still get a rough ride.

"The bleak picture being painted about the shortages is not totally true," said Bush.

"We look for black teachers with all our hearts," countered Raymond Ackridge, district superintendent. "All I'm saying is that we're not coming up with an adequate supply of replacements."

"In 1985, the historically black colleges in Georgia graduated 171 black teacher candidates.

Special team storms house, fails to find ex-mental patient

WRIGHT CITY, Mo. (AP) — Special weapons teams stormed a vacant house here today but did not find Michael Wayne Jackson, the fugitive sought in a three-state crime spree since last week, authorities said.

Searchers had been led to the house by bloodhounds that picked up a scent at a vacant trailer where authorities found evidence linked to Jackson, said Hal Helterhoff, agent in charge of the FBI's St. Louis office. The house was just one block east of the search command center.

Police evacuated 13 families in the neighborhood before dawn as a precaution, said Sgt. Jim Lee of the Highway Patrol.

He said the SWAT teams moved in at 6:45 a.m. and took turns checking the three floors, but found no sign of the fugitive.

Jackson, 41, of Indianapolis, has been at large since Sept. 22, when authorities say he began his three-state spree of murder, abductions and theft. Fears about him shattered the calm of this eastern Missouri community of about 1,200 people, and residents began arming themselves and locking their doors.

The searchers converged on the vacant trailer home Sunday after authorities received a report of a possible break-in there, said Lee.

Inside, they found razor blades, hair and a broken mirror, suggesting that the heavily-bearded Jackson might have shaved there, Lee said. Fingerprints and partially eaten food also were found, he said.

Sgt. Ron Wiedemann of the Highway Patrol said that until the evidence was tested, it could not be conclusively linked to Jackson.

Helterhoff said whoever was inside, entered the trailer between Friday and Sunday night.

Officers found a door open on the trailer home, but weren't certain if there had been a break-in, he said.

He said bloodhounds followed a scent from the trailer home to a three-story house just one block from the Wright City Police Department, the search command post.

Earlier Sunday, volunteers were seen circling over a wooded area near where Jackson was last seen, and about 50 officers combed the area. Nothing was found.

Indian inmates denied 'sweat lodge'

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A decree that Indian inmates cannot have a ceremonial "sweat lodge" at the state prison has angered Indian leaders who say such a structure is vital to the practice of their religion.

"It's a matter of religious freedom," said Lester Chapoose, chairman of the 2,200 member Ute tribe. "People practice their religion whether they are in jail or out."

In a recent policy statement, corrections director Gary DeLand said people of all religions are free to use the non-denominational worship area at Utah State Prison. But "it is unreasonable to expect the institution to allow a mosque and a minaret for the Moslems, a shrine for the Buddhists, a temple for the Latter-day Saints and a cathedral for the Catholics," he said.

A sweat lodge ceremony usually lasts two to three hours. It takes place in a willow, wood and blanket structure where participants are seated around hot rocks upon which water is poured during prayers, meditation and chanting.

MONEY

Dollar lower

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar opened lower on European currency markets today, pushed down by the weekend meeting of finance ministers of the leading Western industrial powers that published no conclusive decisions.

Gold was down. Dealers said the dollar was also reacting to U.S. Treasury Secretary James Baker's remark that the dollar will have to decline further if West Germany and Japan do not do more to stimulate their economies.

The dollar opened slightly higher in Europe compared with its lows in Asia, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins. Dealers said this was because the Bundesbank bought dollars in Asia.

The German central bank also intervened in Europe when the dollar fell to 2.0225 West German marks in early European trading, they said.

In Tokyo the dollar fell 0.78 yen to a closing 153.65 yen from Friday's 154.43. Later, in London, it was quoted at 153.95 yen.

The British pound came under renewed pressure, its trade-weighted index falling to a record low of 68.6 percent of its 1975 value before the Bank of England intervened and pushed it up to 68.8 percent.

In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.4388, compared with $1.4355 Friday.

Gold fell sharply because dealers felt it was overpriced and expected a price drop, bullion dealers said.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $428 a troy ounce, compared with late Friday's $432. At midmorning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $429.45.

In Zurich, the bid price was $427, down from $432.50 late Friday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold fell $3.50 to close at a bid $424.39.

Silver was quoted in London today at a bid price of $5.62 a troy ounce, down from Friday's $5.67.

IMF tones down forecast as representatives gather

WASHINGTON (AP) — The International Monetary Fund is toning down its rosy forecast for the world economy as representatives of 151 countries gather to discuss how to correct economic problems.

The week-long meetings of the IMF and World Bank are chiefly concerned with the record U.S. trade and budget deficits and the heavy indebtedness of Third World countries.

The focus in preliminary meetings today was to be on an attempt to fashion a $12 billion package to help Mexico meet its payments on $100 billion in debt. The IMF has said it expects commercial banks to agree with Mexico on loans to wrap up the rescue package by the end of the business day.

With the exception of Taiwan, Switzerland and the Soviet Union and some of its allies, virtually all the countries of the world belong to the IMF and the World Bank and are represented at the meetings.

President Reagan and leaders and finance ministers of other countries are among the officials expected to address the formal sessions, which are to begin Tuesday following days of preparatory meetings involving smaller groupings. The schedule of speakers is not announced in advance for security reasons.

An IMF staff report on Sunday said the "rather disappointing" economic results of the first half of 1986 caused it to scale down its projections for economic growth in 1986.

"However, economic activity is still expected to pick up in the second half of the year and in 1987," the report said.

One of the key disappointments was the U.S. economy's lackluster growth of only 0.6 percent on an annualized basis in the second quarter, down from 3.8 percent for the first quarter.

The revised predictions are that the U.S. economy will grow 2.7 percent this year and 3.5 percent in 1987. As the second quarter was beginning last April the IMF had said the U.S. economy would grow 2.9 percent this year and 3.6 percent in

In the revised report, growth for the industrial world as a whole was put at 3.1 percent in 1987 instead of the 3.3 percent predicted in April.

The report predicted a growth rate of 3 percent for developing countries this year, unchanged from the April forecast. But it said the rate would remain at that level in 1987 instead of increasing to 3.4 percent, as the IMF had predicted in April.

The U.S. deficits were the subjects of speeches and meetings during the weekend.

Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III had sought to persuade West Germany and Japan to cut their interest rates as a way of stimulating their economies and increasing demand for U.S. exports.

He conceded he was unable to win immediate agreement, but said, "We are really dealing in these meetings as much with the medium- and long-term economic outlook and picture as we are with instant, short-term gratification. And this is a healthy debate (on interest rates) that we've had and it will continue."

Baker's statement followed two days of meetings between the finance ministers of the United States, Japan, West Germany, Britain, France, Canada and Italy at which the world's richest nations pledged close coordination of economic policies to solve world problems.

The U.S. trade deficit is expected easily to exceed last year's record of $147 billion by the end of this year, even though a steep decline in the value of the dollar has cut prices of U.S. goods abroad.

Driven down by coordinated policies of the United States, Europe and Japan, the dollar has lost about 40 percent of its value against the West German mark and Japanese yen in the past 18 months.

In February 1985 many economists and government officials said it was overvalued at 3.40 marks and 250 yen.

Theoretically, the lower prices for U.S. exports makes them more competitive with products from competiing nations, but the decline has yet to result in an improvement of the U.S. trade balance.

British Chancellor of the Exchequer Nigel Lawson told the meeting of the policy-setting IMF Interim Committee on Sunday that officials shouldn't expect instant improvement in the U.S. trade deficit as a result of the dollar's decline.

A committee representing more than 500 commercial banks from different countries have been negotiating for months with the Mexican government on that country's debt, aggravated by the decline in world oil prices.

R.N. Malhotra, head of the Indian central bank, urged Western governments and international banks to ease the debt burden of Third World countries by improving terms on government, IMF and World Bank loans.

Including Mexico, 15 heavily indebted Third World countries owe about $450 billion.

Quaker Oats, pet food rival agree to merge

CHICAGO (AP) — Quaker Oats Co., the Chicago-based food giant, and Anderson, Clayton & Co., makers of pet food, have signed a definitive merger agreement.

The merger will make Quaker the No. 2 pet food company in the country, the firms said in a joint announcement Sunday.

Under the agreement, Anderson Clayton shareholders will receive $66 a share in cash for all outstanding shares, the companies said in a statement.

Quaker reported that it had purchased 2,865,100 shares in market transactions last Thursday. It also reported that it has purchased or has arranged to purchase 3,776,658 shares from members of the Clayton family group at $66 a share in cash.

These purchases give Quaker more than 53 percent of Houston-based Anderson Clayton stock. Under the merger agreement, Quaker will promptly make a cash tender offer of $66 a share for all of the remaining shares of Anderson Clayton, followed by a cash merger of the same price.

"The acquisition of Anderson Clayton and Co. makes good sense strategically and is consistent with Quaker's stated strategy of increasing share in our core businesses, which is part of our overall objective of maximizing shareholder value," said William D. Smithburg, chairman and chief executive officer at Quaker.

Auto, oil industries at odds over fuel injection systems

DETROIT (UPI) — The oil and auto industries have been at odds on what is pumped into the tanks of new cars. They also disagree on how it is pumped.

The first issue concerns fuel injection, a system that is appearing more and more in place of the carburetor. Expected to be under the hoods of nine out of every ten new cars by 1990, it uses an injector that sprays a fine mist of gasoline into the engine cylinder through a nozzle not much thicker than a strand of human hair.

The problem is that in time these tiny nozzles or pintles can become gummed up, causing stumbling, uneven acceleration and stalling.

Automakers claim the problem, which has become a significant warranty expense, is caused by an inferior grade of fuel. Oil companies in turn charge the problem is poor design of the injectors.

Both are working to solve the problem, however, said John E. Lauck, supervisor of fuels and lubricants for Shell Oil Co. in Houston, Tex. Oil companies are adding "detergent packages" to gasoline to keep the nozzles clean. Automakers are readying a second generation of injectors that are less sensitive to clogging.

"The problem arose because the technology between the automakers and fuel companies crossed over," Lauck said.

"In this case, auto companies had to do their development using quality fuels. Unfortunately many drivers do not use such fuels," he said, adding that using numerous brands may introduce too many variables.

General Motors Corp., which will have fuel injection on nearly 80 percent of its models next year, touched off the clogging controversy earlier this year when it released a memo implying that it recommends Mobil Corp.'s fuel for its cars.

Lauck said GM recently released a list of fuels that perform satisfactorily on fuel injected cars.

Lauck recommends that drivers choose a name brand gasoline and stick with it. "They should select a gasoline that is recognized brand," he said, adding that using numerous brands may introduce too many variables.

General Motors Corp., which will have fuel injection on nearly 80 percent of its models next year, touched off the clogging controversy earlier this year when it released a memo implying that it recommends Mobil Corp.'s fuel for its cars.

Lauck said GM recently released a list of fuels that perform satisfactorily on fuel injected cars. Lauck said most people think all gasoline is the same if the octane rating is equal. "This fuel injector problem pointed out this is not the case," he said.

Most carmakers recommend a minimum octane rating of 87 for new cars, and higher ratings for performance engines.

In Shell's case, a series of chemicals is added to its gasoline under a patented formula. "There are several chemical classes that can do this kind of job," Lauck said. "Everybody handles their own and keeps their formulas close to the vest."

Dairy's bankruptcy has impact on Midland stores

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

The bankruptcy filing of Knudsen Foods, parent company of Foremost Dairies, has had an effect on Midland shoppers, who may have noticed difficulty getting their favorite milk at Albertsons and Skaggs Alpha Beta over the week-end.

Foremost furnished milk under both the Albertson and Skaggs Alpha Beta brand, and the dairy's shutdown left the Midland stores scrambling to fill the dairy shelves and find a new supplier for their private labels. Managers from both stores now say that customers shouldn't have any problem finding the product they want.

Borden has agreed to furnish Albertson's store brand, while Gandys will take over furnishing milk for Skaggs Alpha Beta. "We'll be carrying 90 to 95 percent of what we were carrying," noted an Albertson spokesman. "There will be only a few minor changes." He added that, although Borden is slightly higher-priced than Foremost, the store won't be raising the price on its dairy products.

The only problem at the Skaggs Alpha Beta store was during the transition, when Gandys had to suddenly take on a larger load, said a spokesman for the store. "If Foremost doesn't go back into business, we'll never get all of the products they carried, especially in some ice cream products. Otherwise, the customer won't have any problem getting what he wants."

Both stores will continue carrying some Foremost brand ice cream products.

Winn Enterprises, parent company of Knudsen Foods, bought San Francisco-based Foremost Dairies, Inc. last year for $50.1 million. Knudsen has been operating under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code since Sept. 17.

Bankruptcy Judge William Lasarow has scheduled a hearing for Oct. 2 on the proposed sale of half of Knudsen Foods to Hughes Markets and Kraft, Inc., a subsidiary of Dart & Kraft, for $68 million.

Kraft and Hughes, in a joint agreement announced last week, intend to buy three plants in Los Angeles as well as plants in Visalia, Modesto and Fresno, Calif. and Las Vegas, Nev. Hughes will own some of the plants and Kraft will own others. Kraft will also contract with Hughes for some cultured products from a Hughes owned plant in Los Angeles.

The sale would save more than 1,500 jobs and ensure the survival of the Knudsen and Foremost brands.

Knudsen and Foremost ran into financial trouble last year, but in mid-July missed $18 million in payments to suppliers.

Geophysicists plan seminar

The Permian Basin Geophysical Society will host "Velocity as an Interpretation Tool," an SEG-developed Continuing Education Program.

The three day school, scheduled for Oct. 1-3, will be held at the Midland Holiday Inn and will be conducted by instructor Melvin Carter. The class should be of interest to all geophysicists and other explorationists who need better depth control and need to extract more information from seismic data.

For additional information, call John Daniels at 682-6561.

Hughes executive to visit Basin economists

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — After a summer hiatus, the first speaker opening the second year of the Permian Basin Economics Club will be the Hughes Tool Co. executive responsible for keeping the rig count.

L.C. "Ike" Kerridge Jr., economist and vice president with Hughes, will discuss the outlook for the oil and gas industry with special emphasis on drilling and exploration during the Tuesday noon luncheon meeting at Mission Country Club. He will also address the anticipated affect of some of the tax changes on the energy industry.

Kerridge, who received a master's degree in economics from the University of Texas in Austin in 1962, has been with Hughes Tool since 1966. He is a member of the Houston Society of Financial Analysts, National Association of Business Economists, International Association of Energy Economists and the National Investor Relations Institute. Kerridge is also a member of the Independent Petroleum Association of America (IPAA) and past chairman of the finance and cost study committee.

PBEC President Jim Williams urged members, as well as prospective members to attend, saying the meeting will afford an opportunity to "hear a leader in the industry that is so vital to the economic health of the area."

Williams said Dr. Richard Browning, Exxon staff economist, who addressed club members last year, is tentatively scheduled to be the speaker for next month's meeting. Browning, if his schedule permits, will discuss areas of growth in the U.S. economy that present opportunities for diversification of the Permian Basin economy.

The price of the luncheon for members is $9 and $15 for non-members and guests. Reservations may be made by con-

Stock Market

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market showed a broad loss today in selling attributed to concern over rising interest rates and the outlook for the dollar.
The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 21.52 points to 1,748.17 by noon on Wall Street.
Losers outnumbered gainers by nearly 4 to 1 in the overall tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.
Analysts said traders were unhappy that financial leaders of the United States and other leading industrialized countries didn't make much apparent progress over the weekend in meetings on interest-rate policies, the dollar and international trade imbalances.
Prices of long-term government bonds, which move inversely with interest rates, dropped about $5 for every $1,000 in face value in early credit-market activity today.
Among the blue chips, American Express fell 1 1/4 to 54 1/4. International Business Machines 1 1/4 to 133 1/4. Chrysler 1/4 to 35 1/4. American Telephone & Telegraph 1/4 to 22 1/4.
Federal Express led the active list, up 6 1/4 to 62 1/4 on turnover of more than 1.1 million shares. The company announced plans to discontinue its Zap Mail service and to drop a venture into the sale and rental of facsimile equipment.
Hewlett-Packard lost 1/4 to 37 1/4 on top of a 7 1/2-point drop last week, when it said the first shipments of its Spectrum minicomputer would be delayed six months by software problems.
The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks dropped 1.49 to 132.45. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 2.42 to 259.56.
NEW YORK (AP) — First there was the "old boy network." Then, inevitably, came the "new girl network." Now, the ambitious — men and women — are finding fresh, accessible ways of networking together.
The networking now becomes quite different, says Phyllis Tama, an executive search consultant with the firm Thorndike Deland Associates.
The tough-to-crack "old boy network" has lost much of its importance in the corporate world, Miss Tama said. The "new girl network" has been helpful to women, but has its limitations.
There are few companies or industries among whose hierarchies are composed of a small group of men who all went to the same school or belong to the same country club," Miss Tama said.
"For better or worse, corporate mergers, acquisitions and restructurings have helped to destabilize many relationships in the business world," Miss Tama said. "After a takeover, the winning company looks at productivity and the bottom line — not how to maintain the old boy club. It's simply no longer good business."
"Add to this the relentless rise of women in the white-collar workforce, and you see why things have changed," she said.
In the past 15 years, women have rushed to establish networking groups for themselves.
"Women have taken their cues and capitalized on what men have done over the years. They are doing it in a very professional manner. It is a fantastic networking system as respect of one professional to another," Miss Tama said.
But many of these new groups have been limited to women and to certain industries, so they don't provide easy access to powerful men and people in other lines of work.
Changing corporate attitudes — plus a rise in entrepreneurship — have resulted in new, imaginative forms of networking for business development and career advancement, Miss Tama said.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Stocks with not much activity trade in 10-25- and 50-share round lots

By BILL DOYLE

Q. Brokers have turned me away when I have attempted to sell stocks I own. I have five different stocks, in lots of 132, 222, 84, 164 and 101 shares. I do not want to purchase additional shares to round out my holdings. How can I sell these stocks?

A. You should be able to do it through a brokerage firm. Most stock trading is done in "round lots" of 100 shares, with smaller numbers of shares being "odd lots." Some stocks in which there is not much activity trade in 10-25- and 50-share round lots.

But you don't have to buy additional shares, so that you will have round lots available for sale. You can sell or buy round lots, odd lots or both.

You might or might not get a slightly lower price — typically 12 1/2 cents per share — for an odd lot than for a round lot of the same stock, depending on how the brokerage executes the sales. There are a number of ways odd lots trades can be handled and the methods can vary from one brokerage firm to another.

If your five stocks are all low priced, it may be that the brokers you approached aren't interested in executing relatively small transactions. Some brokerage firms have policies under which they won't handle sales or purchases involving less than a certain dollar amount, say, $2,000. Even those firms usually make exceptions for established customers, but not for "walk-in" business.

By contacting more brokerages, you should be able to find one willing to sell your stocks.

Q. I delivered a certificate for 200 shares of stock registered in my name alone to a broker and instructed him to sell 100 shares. I assumed a certificate for the 100 shares I had not sold would be sent to me. It was not. Instead, it was held at the brokerage in "street name." I didn't mind that, as I thought I might sell those shares later. My husband also does some business with that firm.

When I received a statement from the brokerage firm, it listed the 100 shares in my name

Doyle

"and" my husband's name. How could this happen, without any word from me?

A. Based on the information in your letter, it shouldn't have happened. The brokerage firm made a mistake.

You have an account at that brokerage. Your husband has another account there. You don't mention whether or not the account through which your husband buys and sells is a joint account, in both your names. If it is, that could be the source of the error — with the brokerage firm fouling up by crediting your 100 shares to the joint account.

Assuming you want the 100 shares in your name alone, you should instruct the brokerage to transfer those shares to your individual account. And, if you want the certificate, "order it out." It should be sent to you, post haste.

Q. After investing in the stock market on a small scale for about 30 years, I grew tired of the high commissions I paid at two "full-service" brokerage firms. I decided to try a discount brokerage.

After opening my account, I called the discount broker to buy a stock my daughter had told me about. There are two stocks with similar names. They neglected to tell me this. I feel they should have done so. Certainly, either of my other brokers would have. Am I dealing in a vacuum?

A. You're dealing with a discount broker, in order to save commission dollars. Most discount brokerages do nothing except execute buy and sell orders. Although some discounters provide investment information and other services, the vast majority don't.

Unless you can prove the broker bought for you a stock you didn't order, I'm afraid you're stuck. The similarity of names makes your job of proving the broker's error mighty difficult.

Before you buy even more stock, I urge you to do some research and, as sensible people do, "investigate before investing."

Changing corporate attitudes, rise in entrepreneurship nets new 'networking'

By COTTEN TIMBERLAKE

NEW YORK (AP) — First there was the "old boy network." Then, inevitably, came the "new girl network." Now, the ambitious — men and women — are finding fresh, accessible ways of networking together.

The networking now becomes quite different, says Phyllis Tama, an executive search consultant with the firm Thorndike Deland Associates.

The tough-to-crack "old boy network" has lost much of its importance in the corporate world, Miss Tama said. The "new girl network" has been helpful to women, but has its limitations.

There are few companies or industries among whose hierarchies are composed of a small group of men who all went to the same school or belong to the same country club," Miss Tama said.

"For better or worse, corporate mergers, acquisitions and restructurings have helped to destabilize many relationships in the business world," Miss Tama said. "After a takeover, the winning company looks at productivity and the bottom line — not how to maintain the old boy club. It's simply no longer good business."

"Add to this the relentless rise of women in the white-collar workforce, and you see why things have changed," she said.

In the past 15 years, women have rushed to establish networking groups for themselves.

"Women have taken their cues and capitalized on what men have done over the years. They are doing it in a very professional manner. It is a fantastic networking system as respect of one professional to another," Miss Tama said.

But many of these new groups have been limited to women and to certain industries, so they don't provide easy access to powerful men and people in other lines of work.

Changing corporate attitudes — plus a rise in entrepreneurship — have resulted in new, imaginative forms of networking for business development and career advancement, Miss Tama said.

Slowed consumer spending ahead may threaten economic growth more

By CHET CURRIER

NEW YORK (AP) — Along with its other worries, Wall Street is now debating the possibility that consumer spending may slow in the months ahead, posing a new threat to economic growth.

For much of the 1980s, robust spending by American consumers has been an important source of strength for the economy while it struggled to surmount problems in manufacturing, capital spending and international trade.

"In recent months consumption has shown some signs of tiring," said Evans Economics Inc., a forecasting firm, in a report on the economic outlook.

Those programs continue this month. "By October," Yardeni says, "consumers are likely to cool it — spending should fall below income. Given modest income gains and a near-zero savings rate, the latest buying binge just isn't sustainable."

Yardeni says a slowdown in consumer spending is "a key assumption" in his forecast that the gross national product, after adjustment for inflation, will show a decline for the second half of 1986.

Cheap loans aren't the only reason analysts cite for recent heavy spending for cars and other big-ticket items.

They note that the public is apparently scrambling to make those purchases before the end of 1986, while sales taxes are still deductible on their federal income tax returns. The tax bill now awaiting final action by Congress and President Reagan eliminates the deduction starting in 1987.

For many taxpayers, the change will easily add $400, $500 or more to the cost of a typical new car," say economists David Levy and S. Jay Levy in the latest issue of their publication Industry Forecast.

"Come the new year, competition for sales of home furnishings and automobiles will become tougher, and other purchases will suffer as consumers make payments on their increased debts."

"Moreover, some of the recent and current sales of automobiles and other items are at the expense of holiday season sales."

The tax bill has been widely discussed as a prospective stimulant to consumer spending, on the straightforward reasoning that lower tax rates will put more money in the public's pockets.

"Tax revision will probably boost consumer spending, but the full effect will not appear until 1988," say Merrill Lynch analysts in a new report on the legislation.

Doctor says of cocaine: Something bad on streets

AUSTIN (AP) — An Austin doctor says increased cocaine poisonings sending several people seeking medical treatment could be caused by an unknown additive mixed in the drug, or a more powerful cocaine available on the streets.

"There is something bad on the streets," said Dr. David Jacoby of Breckenridge Hospital.

Between Thursday and Sunday, 22 people were treated for cocaine poisoning.

He said authorities have found methamphetamine, heroin and aspirin in samples tested in the past several days.

The increase in cocaine poisonings represents "a 5- to 10-fold increase" from normal, Jacoby told the Austin American-Statesman.

Most of the victims appear to be long-time drug users who injected the cocaine intravenously, Jacoby said. He said the victims did not appear to know each other, leading him to speculate that a large batch of cocaine may be causing the illnesses.

Police said officers took small amounts of a white crystalline substance from two people they took to the hospital, and the substance is to be analyzed Monday at the police laboratory.

Jacoby said those treated in recent days suffered from a variety of symptoms associated with cocaine poisoning — confusion, paranoia and violent behavior.

"They usually don't know who they are or where they are," Jacoby said. "They babble. They say words that don't make any sense."

Cocaine, taken in large enough quantities, can cause an irregular heartbeat, which can be fatal.

Crime Stoppers boasts being in nearly 600 cities

WASHINGTON (AP) — About 600 U.S. cities now have Crime Stoppers programs, a system of cash awards to tipsters which has helped close the books on 92,000 unsolved felonies, a federal study shows.

Each case solved through Crime Stoppers recovered an average of more than $6,000 in narcotics or stolen goods, and each felony arrest cost only $73 in award money, concluded the study conducted for the National Institute of Justice in the Justice Department and released Sunday.

The locally run programs — also called Crime Solver, Secret Witness or Crime Line programs — join the news media, community and police in offering anonymity to people who call in information about unsolved crimes.

First started in Albuquerque, N.M., 10 years ago, the programs disseminate information about the crimes through local newspapers and radio and television stations.

About 92,000 felonies have been solved through Crime Stoppers, with $562 million worth of stolen property recovered and narcotics seized, according to statistics supplied by an umbrella group, Crime Stoppers International, and included in the report.

"Crime Stoppers has emerged as a significant grass-roots movement, locally managed and funded," said James K. Stewart, director of the National Institute of Justice.

Set up to handle dead-end cases that have remained unsolved for months, Stewart says the process is "sending the message that fighting crime is not a responsibility of law enforcement alone."

The programs succeed even if the award amounts are as little as $100, the study concluded.

One portion of the report focused on Lake County, Ill., and found that variations in reward size had almost no effect on the tipster's satisfaction or intention to participate in the program in the future.

Crime Stoppers programs have been criticized by some journalists, defense attorneys and legal scholars because of questions about civil rights and privacy.

Voyager likely to fly this week

DALLAS (AP) — Jeana Yeager is eagerly awaiting the latest challenge in aviation history — a non-stop flight around the world on a single tank of gas.

The self-made pilot from Fort Worth, along with retired Air Force pilot and longtime companion Dick Rutan, is expected to get her chance to go down in the record books soon.

One day soon, probably this week, Ms. Yeager and Rutan are expected to take off from the Mojave Desert in a spindly-looking craft called the Voyager. They will spend 12 days in a cockpit the size of a bathtub, surrounded by 1,173 gallons of fuel costing $2,111.

Their answer for why they're doing it is not a surprising one.

"For the challenge," replies Ms. Yeager, 34, who is not related to Chuck Yeager, the pilot who broke the sound barrier.

She and Rutan, 48, live in test-pilot territory — near Edwards Air Force Base north of Los Angeles. There, they have spent five years planning the flight that will use the latest in aviation technology and will rely on a delicate craft that somewhat resembles a dragonfly.

"It's a real mission," Rutan told The Dallas Morning News. "The last frontier in aviation. When I think about it, I still get chills running up my spine."

If the Voyager flight is a success, it will smash the record for non-stop unrefueled flight — set in 1962 when a U.S. Air Force B-52 flew 12,532 miles from Okinawa to Madrid.

Aviation enthusiasts, engineers and relatives are gathering to watch the takeoff, which is likely this week.

"I'm overwhelmed," said Evaree Winters, Ms. Yeager's mother, who drove in from Fort Worth for the event. "We're excited about it and apprehensive. And if she doesn't (set the record), we'll still love her."

Ms. Yeager left Texas in 1977 to work for a private enterprise shuttle venture that is now defunct. She has eight world aviation speed and distance records and is completely unflappable, according to her father.

"She doesn't get excited," said Lee Yeager, a retired Mesquite High School teacher who lives in Commerce. "I think if she were going to crash in the ocean, she would be calm and talk to you all the way down."

"I think if anyone can do it (the flight), we can do it," Ms. Yeager said. "We complement each other in the work that has to be done. Half the battle is having a good compatibility in the cockpit."

Rutan is a retired Air Force lieutenant colonel who brings to the task more than 25 years of jet-fighting experience, including 105 missions over North Vietnam.

Rutan, who has received the Silver Star, five Distinguished Flying Crosses and the Purple Heart, met Ms. Yeager at an air show in Chino, Calif. in 1980.

The idea for the flight was born a year later when the couple dined at the Mojave Inn cafe with Rutan's brother, Burt, whose fuel-efficient aircraft designs have captured the attention of many in the aviation field.

Rutan said his brother sketched out the unusual design for the Voyager.
