Tibbs, who has negotiated the purchase of nine cars since setting up his Auto Buyers Assistance and Lease Co. three weeks ago, says he also saves consumers time and aggravation.

"People don't like to sit there and hassle. They get emotionally involved," said Tibbs, who sold new and used cars for 34 years before switching sides.

Howard College initiating 'I Can' program

By RUTH FRIEDBERG

January 12 will mark the day that Mamie McCullough teaches Howard County residents to say "I Can."

"I Can" is a philosophy developed by McCullough, a motivational speaker with Zig Ziglar Corporation, to help people boost self-esteem. Project Coordinator Elaine Oliver said Friday.

The presentation will be part of the activities planned between 5 and 8 p.m., beginning with a spaghetti dinner and concluding with the presentation.

McCullough's seminar is part of Howard College's three-month-old "Go Forward Together" program, a joint effort of the College and the local Jobs, Training Partnership Act office, Oliver said.

JTPA funds the project, JTPA Coordinator Virginia Belew said.

The purpose of "Go Forward" is to determine the severity of Howard County's school dropout rate over a five-year period. The plan is aimed at encouraging youngsters at all grade levels to remain in school, Oliver explained.

"I think anything that will help us, or families, encourage and keep students in school and prevent them from dropping out ... is certainly beneficial," said Big Spring Independent School District Superintendent Lynn C. Hice.

One of the bonuses of the project includes a mentor network system that provides student and professional role models for potential dropouts, including those who have already left school.

A potential dropout is a student who leaves school without a forwarding address, or fails two or more classes, Oliver explained.

State body faces hard decisions

By SCOTT ROTHCHILD

Austin Bureau
AUSTIN — When state lawmakers begin meeting in regular session Tuesday, they will look toward the future — a future of crippling budget deficits and increased demand for money.

But their eyes also will be focused on Gov.-elect Bill Clements.

Yet, facing an immediate $1 billion deficit and a $4.8 billion hole for the next two-year budget period, Clements wants to increase funding for prisons, the mentally handicapped and law enforcement.

He also wants to maintain the portion of the state budget dedicated to education, which represents 51 percent of state spending.

And, Clements wants to do this without increasing taxes.

After enduring criticism from the governor-elect for raising taxes and cutting higher education funds, many lawmakers are more than willing for Clements to take the lead and show how this bit of budget wizardry is possible.

"I'm not going to get out front and take the abuse," said House Appropriations Committee Chairman Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, remembering his budget clashes last year over spending cuts and

Army notes jump in holiday gifts

The Salvation Army of Big Spring provided toys to 397 families with 1,041 children during a busy Christmas season that included several increases over last year.

In addition, the charity service reported it will receive a windfall gift as a result of the death wishes of an east Texas donor. The gift is to be used to purchase another home to house the commanding officer's family.

Both the Christmas activities and the gift were cited in reports made to the Salvation

Army's board of directors on Friday.

The board was told that $35,127 was raised this year for the Christmas Cheer and Winter Relief Fund — compared to $31,000 a year ago.

Capt. Carroll Braun, commanding officer, noted that the purchase or construction of another home for the commander's family had been in the building plans about five years ago, but was eliminated as something considered not feasible at that time.

Board Chairman Robert Crowell explained that the idea is to get the commander's family away from the Welfare Center. He said the family deserves to have some privacy and a break from the frequent interruptions and demands that come at all hours as a result of living next to the center.

Crowell reported that a month ago the Big Spring chapter was advised of a will that named the Salvation Army of Texas as the recipient of money to be used for capital improvement or

Commissioner reports test score improvements

By JACK KEEVER
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — State Education Commissioner W.N. Kirby reported Saturday that test scores for high school mathematics and language students are on the rise.

Kirby distributed to the State Board of Education test results by 11th graders on the TEAMS, or Texas Educational Assessment of Minimum Skills, comparing October 1985 to October 1986.

"What I am very pleased to report to you is that across the board for all different categories... improvement is being made from one year to the next on our 11th grade students," he said.

He called particular attention to the "tremendous increase" in minority scores.

"The districts that have the greatest percentage of minorities are increasing the most," he said.

For example, the combined math-language score by blacks in two districts with a black enrollment of 75 percent or greater showed a gain of 59, compared with a gain of 29 in 695 districts that have a black enrollment of under 10 percent.

The overall score for the two predominantly black districts was 1,418, compared with 1,557 for the districts with under 10 percent black enrollment.

Kirby also told the board he had been asked about back orders on books by board member Katherine Raines of Cleburne. A list he distributed Saturday showed there is a back order of 22,511 books.

"With 3.2 million students and every student having five or six books, that may be a pretty small percentage in total books. But it is my position that if we have any student out there without a single book, we have a problem," Kirby said. "And to think that we are short some 22,511, I think is an intolerable situation."

Asked what had caused the shortage, Kirby said, "In some instances districts simply forgot to order books. In other instances students come in and the enrollment increase is unanticipated by the district."

Also, he said, publishers are "cutting it too close" in the number of books they store in depositories.

local schools about students believed to be on the brink of leaving, as well as those who had already left.

The mentor program involves Howard College students and the project's 17-member advisory board, comprised of college staff and community professionals.

The board members were selected on the basis of their profession so students could see the variety of vocations available to them once they finished school, Oliver said.

Participating youngsters are given a list of names and phone numbers so they can select their own mentor according to who they get along with best, Oliver said.

Other aspects of assistance provided the youngsters include counseling and tutoring, both on the college campus, Oliver said.

Parents are also encouraged to become involved in the program so they will stress the importance of education at home.

At the same time, adults who attend may find themselves inspired to go back to class, Oliver said.

Oliver said she hopes to make the project county-wide.

construction projects only — not operating expenses.

With some of that money, the Big Spring Salvation Army was advised that it could buy a home, with a minimum of 20,000 square feet and at a maximum cost of $100,000, to house the commanding officer's family.

Receipt and use of the money — for that purpose only — required board approval, which was given unanimously.

The Christmas activities report, presented by Chairman Dock Voorhies, noted that 19 more families and 125 more children received holiday toys this Christmas. Last year's totals were 378 families and 916 children.

His report also showed an additional 196 families were provided holiday dinners. The total was 624 families, compared to 428 a year ago.

He added that two holiday parties were conducted for 110 people of varied ages this year — a service not provided last year.

Figures in a few other categories showed declines this year.
Gifts from the "Live Angel Tree" dropped from 338 a year ago to 236 this season. The "Living Tree" gifts declined from 278 last year to 184 this season, and gifts provided to nursing homes, the Veterans Administration and state hospitals dropped from 943 a year ago to 789 this year.

The number of cafe-style Christmas turkey dinners served at the Welfare Center also dipped slightly, from 120 a year ago to 107 this year. Voorhies' report noted.

He cited a substantial increase, however, in the number of volunteers assisting in this season's campaign. The total was 130 volunteers this year compared to 156 a year ago.

Thumbs down on pills

OAKLAND, Calif. — Despite the approval of the school board, parents and most students, a high school health clinic will not dispense contraceptives as originally proposed, officials said.

The birth control option at the Fremont High School clinic was voted down 19-3 by a community advisory committee set up to decide how the clinic will be run, clinic administrator Dorothy Patterson said Friday.

The clinic will open in February and provide services ranging from immunization to physical examinations, said Patterson, a registered nurse who heads the district's Teen Parent Assistance Program.

The clinic will provide referrals to students seeking information on birth control, said Patterson, who proposed the clinic last year. Fremont High was selected because of the school's 51 percent dropout rate.

A school district survey found that 60 percent of the school's students were sexually active, and half who responded to the survey said they never used birth control.

Bulb missing from train

BALTIMORE — One bulb from a set of lights that display track speed signals was missing from a Conrail locomotive after it collided with an Amtrak train. However, the engineer said it was working before the crash, an official said Saturday.

Investigators are not sure whether the missing bulb in the Conrail cab reflects tampering with evidence or whether there is a more benign explanation, said William Bush, spokesman for the National Transportation Safety Board.

The Conrail locomotive rolled past a stop signal on Jan. 4 and jumped a switch in front of a high-speed 12-car Amtrak train. The crash killed 15 and injured 176. One of the injured remained in critical condition Saturday.

Reagan ready for battle

WASHINGTON — President Reagan warned Congress on Saturday that he is bouncing back from surgery and ready to fight for his new trillion-dollar budget.

"My doctors tell me I'm coming along just fine and that's exactly how I feel — just fine," Reagan said in his weekly radio address. "It won't be long before I'm suited up and back on the playing field."

In response to Reagan's challenge, Rep. Jim Howard, D-N.J., told the president in the Democrats' weekly radio address that a new confrontation over the once-vetoed $18 billion environmental bill awaits him.

Noting the strong bipartisan backing that exists for the measure, Howard advised Reagan not to "further isolate yourself and the presidency" by vetoing the bill again.

"This time, we will vote to override your veto," he warned. The legislation, designed to tackle pollution of the nation's waterways, passed Congress with overwhelming support last year, but was vetoed by Reagan.

Fire threat

44 plane passengers are safe

By BARTON REPPERT
Associated Press Writer

CHANTILLY, Va. — A man demanding to speak to Black Muslim leader Louis Farrakhan threatened to start a chemical fire on an airborne jetliner Saturday but was arrested after the plane's 44 passengers disembarked safely at Dulles Airport, authorities said.

No one was injured in the incident involving New York Air Flight 581 from Newark, N.J., to Washington Dulles International Airport, about 25 miles west of the nation's capital.

Norwood Emmanuel, about 50 years old, of Brooklyn, N.Y., was ushered off the plane by FBI agents without incident shortly before noon, about four hours after passing a note containing his threat to a flight attendant, said Joseph Krahling, acting special agent in charge of the FBI's Northern Virginia office.

The flight took off from Newark at 7:23 a.m. EST, said Stephen Hayes, spokesman for the Federal Aviation Administration.

About midway into the flight, Emmanuel gave the flight attendant the note and she slipped it under the door of the crew's cabin, he said. The FBI agent did not disclose names of the five crew members.

"He was basically threatening to burn the plane with chemicals," Krahling said.

Krahling said Emmanuel had a cigarette lighter and "a very small packet" with him on the plane. He declined comment on what was in the packet.

Forty-four passengers and five crew members were aboard the flight that landed at Dulles at 8:13 a.m., just behind schedule, said Clark Onstead, a vice president of Texas Air Corp., which owns New York Air.

Krahling said that after the plane was taken to a "secure area" of the airport, the pilot "sat down next to the hijacker, engaged him in conversation while the crew went about quietly telling the passengers to deplane."

Emmanuel told the pilot he wanted to speak with Farrakhan and then allowed the pilot to get off, Krahling said.

Farrakhan is leader of the Nation of Islam Black Muslim group, which has headquarters in Chicago. Phone numbers for Farrakhan in Chicago went unanswered Saturday.

Norwood Emmanuel, about 50 years old, is escorted by FBI agents to his arraignment in Alexandria, Va., Saturday. He threatened to start a chemical fire on an airborne jetliner and was arrested after the plane's 44 passengers disembarked safely.

Some of the approximately 40 FBI agents who were sent to the airport first began speaking to Emmanuel over a loudspeaker.

They eventually entered the plane from the stairs and gave Emmanuel a cup of coffee and pack of cigarettes, which he requested. Shortly afterward, they persuaded him to get off the plane and he was arrested, Krahling said.

Krahling said Emmanuel had been living in "some type of a mental treatment facility, halfway house if you will."

He was taken for questioning to the FBI office in Alexandria, Va., and then arraigned in that Washington, D.C., suburb before U.S. Magistrate W. Curtis Sewell. He was held without bail on charges of threatening to set fire to an aircraft.

Krahling said FBI dogs examined the flight's luggage and "got a hit" on a box that was Emmanuel's. He did not say what the dogs detected, but he said said the packet the man carried and the box checked with the luggage will be handled by a bomb disposal unit.

One passenger, Tony Luburto of Hoboken, N.J., said he had noticed the man during the flight.

"He was just sitting there," Luburto said. "I thought the guy was either drunk or sick or whatever he was or on cocaine."

Passenger Rose May of Robbinsville, N.J., said she didn't realize the plane had been commandeered until it landed.

"I felt the crew handled it very well. Nobody panicked," she said.

Marty Bader of Little Ferry, N.J., said that after she and other passengers left the plane, "The captain told us to walk. He then told us to run. We ran across a couple of hundred yards and then stood there in the rain."

Government bars group

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — The government issued a ban, effective today, barring meetings of an unofficial education group that wants to develop new courses for black schools focusing on black history and culture.

The order, issued at midnight Friday in the Government Gazette in Pretoria, affects the National Education Crisis Committee, an emerging force in black education.

In other developments, the government blamed the outlawed African National Congress guerrilla group for two bombs that exploded at a Johannesburg supermarket Friday, five minutes after hundreds of shoppers were evacuated. The blast shattered windows, but there were no injuries.

Arms buy in the news

LISBON, Portugal — A Lisbon newspaper said Saturday a company owned by retired U.S. Air Force Maj. Gen. Richard Secord ordered arms from Portugal that were supplied to Contra rebels fighting the Nicaraguan government.

The Expresso newspaper, an independent weekly, said arms ordered by Secord's Energy Resources International company were part of more than $8 million worth of weapons and ammunition supplied to the Contras by Portuguese arms manufacturers from 1984 to 1986.

Portugal also has been used as a transit point for shipments of Israeli and Eastern bloc arms to the rebels in Nicaragua, according to the newspaper. Several sources previously had mentioned Portugal as a key center for the purchase of Contra weapons from international arms dealers.

Sikhs kill prison head

CHANDIGARH, India — Sikh terrorists assassinated the top prison administrator of Punjab state near his home in Chandigarh on Saturday and then escaped on a motor scooter, police said.

Trilok Chand Katoch, 57, inspector-general of prisons, was the highest ranking police official to be killed since Sikh extremists launched a terrorist campaign in 1980. He was due to retire in September.

Hours after the assassination of Katoch, a Hindu, underground rebels ambushed a paramilitary police patrol and killed one trooper near the Sikh holy city of Amritsar, state police said. Four soldiers were wounded.

Brake failure kills 10

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — A passenger train jumped the rails near the southern city of Masaya early Saturday, killing at least 10 people and injuring 35, officials said.

Sergio Aguirre, manager of the state-owned railways, said in a telephone interview the accident occurred about 6 a.m. near the village of Pacaya, 4 miles west of Masaya, which is located 22 miles south of Managua.

Congress picks at wrong issue

Congress is worried that college students are overburdening themselves with federal loans that could affect their career choices and postpone homebuying, marriage, and even the decision to have children.

Yet, the dramatic increase in federal loans to college students during the last 10 years strikes us as a positive sign that young people appreciate the value of a college education.

The congressional concerns are contained in a report released recently by the Joint Economic Committee. The study notes that federal loans to students have nearly tripled since 1975, when loans constituted less than one-fifth of student aid.

Today, three-fourths of the $20.7 billion in total loans and grants come from the federal government. Last year, students in private four-year colleges and universities accumulated an average debt of $8,950 at graduation, while their counterparts' debt in state-supported institutions averaged $6,685.

The increased debt is a result of the government reducing federal grants and scholarships that do not have to be repaid. In an effort to curb federal spending, such funds have dropped from $13 billion to $5 billion, a decline of 62 percent.

This reduction has prompted many students to apply for additional assistance in the form of federally subsidized loans that come due 10 years after graduation or after the student leaves school.

Clearly, many college graduates are deeper in debt today than they were a decade ago, given corresponding increases in the cost of higher education. But no one is putting guns to their heads to borrow the money. They are doing so because they understand that a college diploma greatly enhances their potential earning power.

That so many young Americans are investing in higher education ought to be seen as a plus, not a minus. It suggests they have their priorities straight, and that bodes well for the nation's future.

The real problem occurs when the federal government fails to take repayment enforcement steps. Too many student loan recipients are allowed to get away without repaying as long as 20 years later when they're earning high salaries.

Congress should be much more concerned with resolving those situations.

Battling over money

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: We argue about money all the time and I'm afraid it's going to destroy our marriage. No matter how many resolutions we make, we still end up fighting about our bills. With the bills from Christmas coming in, I feel overwhelmed. — Mrs. S.D.

DEAR MRS. S.D.: Don't let money destroy your marriage — as it does to so many homes. In God's plan, money should be our servant, not our master. And yet surveys repeatedly have shown that arguments about finances are one of the leading causes of broken marriages.

What do you do? First, you and your husband need to learn to communicate with each other without getting angry. That means you both need to listen, and even be willing to change.

All too often the real problem in a marriage is a "powerful struggle" in which neither partner is willing to give in or admit he or she may be wrong. Your problem can be solved as you work on it together — but unless you are learning to listen to each other and respect each other, it will not happen.

Second, get your priorities straight. What is most important in your lives? Keeping up with your neighbors? Having lots of material things? Financial security?

Be honest, because your pro-

blems with money are a symptom of something deeper. Only God should have first place in our lives, and whenever you put anything ahead of Him and His will for your life, you will be in danger of wrecking your lives.

Our society often worships money. But God alone is worthy of being the center of our lives. The Bible says, "For the love of money is a root of all kinds of evil" (1 Timothy 6:10). Get on your knees together and yield your lives to Christ.

Then take practical steps to get your finances under control. Your pastor may be able to point you to someone who has practical business experience and can help you.

Unwilling feline humbles editor on his way to work

By DARRELL BERKHEIMER
Austin Bureau

"It won't take but a couple minutes," my wife said.

If that statement didn't trigger a premonition of trouble, it should have.

Past experience often has revealed that those chores that "only take a couple minutes" are the ones that cause most of the hassles.

The two chores she wanted me to accomplish that next morning were taking my daughter to school and the cat to the veterinarian.

The first was easy. I do it frequently and without trouble. But seldom is anything involving the cat accomplished in a simple manner.

The problems began early — when it was time to leave.

Our cat — named E.T. — decided he wasn't going to get into his pet taxi. He wouldn't even go into the piece of turkey meat we put inside.

Already, it looked as if daughter April might be late to school and I would be late to work.

To get things moving, I carried the cat in one hand and the pet taxi in the other out to the truck. As April got in, I arranged the pet taxi on the floor with the door open in case E.T. decided to cooperate.

Along the way, we realized I had failed to ask my wife about which veterinarian she had made the appointment.

That meant I had to telephone her from the school — another time waster.

Rather than stop briefly at the curb, I had to pull into the parking lot. And with E.T. being left unattended, I decided it was best to lock the cab of the truck.

Berky's babblings

Of course, I locked my keys inside as well. This story wouldn't be half as interesting had I not done that.

Because our old station wagon was in the repair garage, I was forced to call the office to appeal for help. That meant all the co-workers in my department would hear about my blunder.

I had to ask someone from our office to drive to our house, get another set of keys from my wife, then deliver them to me at the school — all because the city police department no longer helps people get into their locked vehicles.

"We don't carry those tools in our cars, anymore," the officer said when I tried the police department first.

Although it wasn't the first time I pulled the locked-keys stunt, or tried to help someone else who did the same, it was the first time I found the police either unwilling or unable to help.

E.T. meowed continually and paced nervously about the inside of the truck as we both waited — somewhat less than patiently. Already I was more than a half-hour late for work.

My thoughts reminded me of my wife saying: "It won't take but a couple minutes..."

I wish I could say the troubles ended there — with the delivery of the other set of keys.

While driving to the vet's, however, I learned the nervous wait was just too much for E.T. He dozed both my suit coat and pants with a spreading wetness.

I have some strong liquid deodorizer in the truck. It's considered concentrated, requiring only a few drops each usage. But I squirted it liberally on both the seat of the truck and my suit.

The suit has since been cleaned, but E.T.'s nose still tells him exactly where he did it.

Now I'm the nervous one every time I wear that suit — around him or any other cats.

The trouble at the vet's was anticlimactical, when E.T. dug his claws into my shoulder and would not let me put him into one of the cages.

One of the employees, wearing heavy gloves, made it look easy as he calmly and efficiently accomplished the simple task.

It was a red-faced morning for me as I left the school that way, left the vet's that way, and arrived at work that way.

About two weeks later we learned how easy it is to put E.T. in the pet taxi — if you push the rear-end in first!

Texan may chair House arms panel

By JIM CRAIG
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Trying to organize themselves last week, House Democrats, in a surprise move, dumped the chairman of a most powerful committee — the House Armed Services Committee.

And maybe — just maybe — Texas will turn out to be a winner in the deal.

In a closed session, the Democratic caucus voted 130 to 124 to depose Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., as chairman of the House Armed Services Committee.

The House and Senate routinely arrange their chambers, issuing committee assignments and naming or reconfirming committee chairmen, at the start of each Congress.

This year, what was to have been a routine reaffirmation of a House committee chairman has turned into a battle that could have profound effects on Texas — a state with traditional ties to a strong national defense, a state with important defense contractors, and a state with a lion's share of military installations.

As Aspin was handed a vote of no confidence by his colleagues, Rep. Marvin Leath, D-Waco, emerged as a prime candidate for the job as chairman of the armed services panel.

It's not that the armed services committee has been unkind to Texas. The state's hefty share of military installations — an important part of the economy — is evidence that there have been no Texas enemies chairing the committee.

But Texas congressional sources admit that having a Texan at the armed service helm in the House would be having a good thing get even better.

Aspin's ouster was the fifth time a House committee chairman (the third head of the armed services panel) has been rejected by Democrats since they adopted the procedure in 1975 to issue a vote of confidence to its leaders during the organizing caucus.

A final decision on who will be selected chairman won't be made until Jan. 23. It is possible that Aspin can convince enough of his colleagues to change their vote and keep him in the post another two years.

But the stunning no-confidence vote last week opens the door for Leath, who has the vote announced he has support for chairmanship from five of the panel's six subcommittee chairmen. The sixth subcommittee chairman is seeking the top armed forces job for himself.

So Leath is not alone in the field of folks hoping to take the helm of the House committee that oversees the Pentagon and must approve defense expenditures. Rep. Nicholas Mavroules, D-Mass., and Rep. Charles E. Bennett, D-Fla., also are hoping to unseat Aspin.

From most accounts on Capitol Hill last week, Leath, a conservative who has actively campaigned for the job and has carefully aligned support, appears to be the leading challenger.

With more than $120 million in new Navy homeport construction planned in Corpus Christi and Galveston, millions yet to be spent to accommodate the B1 bomber based in Abilene, and millions to support military facilities and personnel across the state, having a Texan in the chairmanship of the armed services panel clearly would be beneficial to the state.

In another armed services matter last week, Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, switched his membership on Senate armed services subcommittees that are important to the state.

The senator, who used his influence as member of the Senate Armed Services Committee to help win Texas the new Navy homeports, has become a member of the military construction subcommittee, conventional forces subcommittee and defense industry and technology subcommittee.

Peeking at what's ahead

By JIM DAVIS
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — For some reason, letting go of 1986 has been difficult. The year died right after midnight on Dec. 31, but I keep resurrecting it when dating checks and other documents.

That sort of thing always is a problem with a new year, but this time it's especially bad. And that seems strange since few of us Texans are shedding tears over the passage of this particular 365-day period.

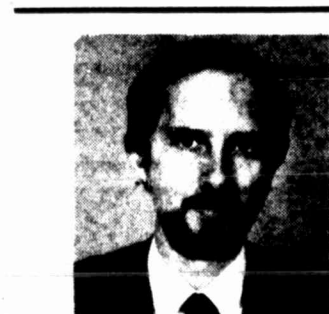

Part of the pain of 1986 came from the shattering of the illusion we were going to have such a great year, with special celebrations of Texas' Sesquicentennial and an expected continuation of the 1984-85 economic boom.

The Sesquicentennial generally was a good thing, and a lot of people got excited when Prince Charles came to Texas for it. But much of the celebrating fizzled as oil prices dropped and unemployment and the state budget shortage grew.

Other "lowlights" were the two special legislative sessions that produced magnificent evasion of real problems and a gubernatorial election campaign marked by supreme nastiness.

Personally, there are memories of telling the family the vacation was canceled because of the special sessions and of realizing we invested some savings in the Austin real estate boom only days before the bust.

So, why do I let go of 1986 so reluctantly? Could it be a fear that 1987 will make last year look like the good ol' days?

There certainly appears to be a basis for such a fear.

Last year legislators sputtered and stalled before finally creeping and creaking to a temporary and partial solution of a budget-deficit problem for the current fiscal year, which ends Aug. 31.

Their actions — and inactions — still leave a state budget imbalance of almost $1 billion that must be solved by Aug. 31 with either new spending cuts or additional revenue. On top of that is the budget problem for the next two fiscal years, which will require massive cuts in state services or new revenue totaling $4 billion to $5 billion.

The problems are huge, and many legislators and other Capitol observers are predicting that they won't be solved in the regular session that ends May 27.

If that's true, one or more special sessions will be required this summer to reach a compromise between budget cuts and new taxes that will be acceptable to both legislative houses and to the new governor, Bill Clements. The possibilities for a long and bitter fight are there.

But two facts bring hope: 1. Last year was an election year, and this one is not; 2. Clements says he has no ambition to run for governor again in 1990.

Last year's political races, particularly the one for governor, eroded efforts to solve the state's budget problems. Almost every decision made in the special sessions was considered for its political impact.

Gov. Mark White knew he was fighting for his political life, and that knowledge had to affect his actions. Even many legislators without opposition wondered how their votes would affect other races, including the one for governor.

This year, state leaders have at least a one-year cushion between their actions and an election. Politics can never be far from their minds, but that won't be as big a factor as in an election year.

And then there's Clements. If he is serious about never again seeking election, he becomes totally free to do what he thinks is right without worrying about the political consequences.

Texas red tide threat returns

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Red tide has reappeared in the Gulf of Mexico, forcing an indefinite halt to shellfish harvesting along a part of the coast ravaged by an outbreak of the toxic bloom last year.

The harvesting ban went into effect after the fish-killing microscopic organism was found Thursday in Corpus Christi Bay, a state health department official said Friday.

Dr. Robert Bernstein, state health commissioner, on Friday ordered the closing of Aransas Bay and adjacent St. Charles Bay to shellfish harvesting effective at 12:01 a.m. Saturday.

Other area bays have not been reopened to shellfishing since the health department closed them in September because of the earlier red tide infestation, Thompson said.

The latest closure coincides with a Texas Parks and Wildlife Department decision to shut down oyster harvesting in all but San Antonio Bay, near the Aransas National Wildlife refuge.

The Parks and Wildlife decision, which will be in force from 12:01 a.m. Tuesday until Feb. 20, was to protect Gulf waters from over-harvesting of shellfish. Their closure would eventually include San Antonio Bay as well.

The latest red tide outbreak is "nothing to get concerned about, and certainly not a problem for the Chamber of Commerce," said Kirk Wiles of the Texas Department of Health in Corpus Christi.

Wiles said the only immediate threat to public health would be from eating oysters, mussels and clams from the affected areas. The red tide toxins become highly concentrated in shellfish, he said.

"Fish, shrimp and crabs are perfectly safe," Wiles told the Corpus Christi Caller-Times. "We're not even talking about the same situation we had this summer."

This restaurant bite proves costly

DALLAS — A jury has recommended that a former cocktail waitress receive $190,000 from a restaurant patron who bit off part of her nose during a fight.

The recommendation, returned Friday by a state district court jury to Julie Brock, 29, included $100,000 in punitive damages against Maureen Regan, 38.

According to testimony, Ms. Regan bit Ms. Brock's nose in a scuffle Dec. 7, 1984, at the now-defunct Le Louvre restaurant. The jury recommended no award for the restaurant owners, who alleged the incident drove away business.

Ms. Brock had plastic surgery to restore skin to the quarter-size area of her nose. Ms. Regan was placed on four years' probation last year after pleading guilty to aggravated assault.

The waitress had given Ms. Regan's boyfriend a business card just before the fight broke out, according to testimony. The card, devised and printed by Ms. Brock and a friend, advertised "Rent-a-Wife Bachelor Service."

Offering "errands," "shopping," "cooking" and "miscellaneous," the card said, "Anything a wife can do, we can do and look better doing it."

Ms. Brock and her friend testified that the cards were designed to solicit part-time housework at homes and offices. But Ms. Regan's attorney argued that the card carried sexual innuendoes.

Misstep fatal for veteran zoo worker

FORT WORTH — An animal handler at the Fort Worth Zoo was crushed to death Saturday when he was kicked and then stepped on by an elephant during a routine work procedure, officials said.

Michael Bell, 35, of Fort Worth, who had handled elephants during most of the 14 years he had worked at the zoo, was pronounced dead at the scene, said Ken Seleske.

The zoo's assistant supervisor of education, Seleske said it was the first fatal accident in the zoo's 80-year history.

Bell was stepped on about 1 p.m. by Sam, an elephant in his early 20s who had been at the zoo since mid-1986, Seleske said. The elephant is one of seven on exhibit.

Seleske said Bell was in an outdoor holding area with another handler, John Legg, when the mishap occurred. Seleske said he was uncertain of the details of the accident, but had been told it occurred during a routine work procedure.

A Fort Worth police spokesman said Bell was trying to separate Sam from another elephant when the animal kicked him, knocked him down and then stepped on him.

There had been no major problems with the elephants, said Seleske, who added that neither the elephant exhibit nor the zoo was closed after the mishap.

"They are large, powerful animals, but there hadn't been any trouble," Seleske said.

'Yes' to the girls, 'No' on absences

AUSTIN — The State Board of Education voted Saturday to allow junior high school girls to play football but rejected a recommendation that lawmakers kill a provision forcing school districts to fail students who have more than five unexcused absences.

A motion to eliminate the absences rule failed 7-7 Saturday, after the board on Thursday had tentatively voted 7-5 to do away with the requirement.

The board voted 12-2 to change University Interscholastic League rules so that girls can play football in junior high. The amendment had been approved earlier by the UIL Legislative Council.

The rule against more than five unexcused absences a semester was hailed by some board members as a key to public school education reform adopted by the Legislature in 1984.

McBride said, "I don't know a job we can expect our children to have where they can have more than five unexcused absences."

"The rule is very important in a symbolic sense," said board member Charles Duncan of Houston.

Board chairman Jon Brumley of Fort Worth and William McBride of San Antonio opposed the girls' football participation proposal, which was triggered by a lawsuit by 13-year-old Tina Trejo and her parents against the UIL and Austin Independent School District.

Tina played for Bedichek Junior High under a court order after the rule against girls playing had been used to remove her from the squad.

Only one girl, four decades ago, has ever played football on a Texas boys' high school team and such participation is now banned.

Leaders polishing vo-ag proposal

AUSTIN — Agricultural leaders have prepared a plan to update the 70-year-old vocational agriculture program in Texas public schools, it was announced Saturday.

Friends of Vocational Agriculture quoted Jay Eudy, director of Agricultural Education for the Texas Education Agency, as saying, "Changes have got to be made. And to make these changes we brought the Who's Who of vo-ag together as an advisory committee to initiate these changes."

Finally, according to Friends of Vocational Agriculture, there will be public hearings.

$51 million hospital addition opens

LUBBOCK (AP) — The $51 million South Tower opens today at Lubbock's Methodist Hospital, making the hospital one of the largest in the Southwest.

First envisioned in 1965, the project is the second largest in the West Texas city's history. The new eight-floor building increases the number of hospital beds at Methodist from 549 to 715, making it the largest health facility between Dallas and Phoenix, officials said.

Construction on the new 227,000 square-foot building began in April 1984.

Hospital President William D. Poteet III said a major objective of the new project was to bring all of the hospital's critical care services under one roof, a concept that Poteet said other hospitals are just now considering.

Before the opening of the new building, the hospital's surgical, medical and cardiac intensive care units were located in different areas of the hospital's east and west buildings.

Special features include 12 VIP rooms on the seventh-floor, using four different design schemes: Oriental, 18th Century, Southwest and the Garden Room.

The Centre for Cardiac Rehabilitation and Fitness is located on the eighth floor and features an indoor track, Nautilus equipment, showers, locker rooms and office and meeting rooms.

The first floor of the building doubles the size of the hospital's lobby, which now extends from the 19th Street entrance to the new 20th Street side. The south side of the new building has a canopy covering two lanes of traffic, with valet parking available for hospital patients and visitors.

A dedication ceremony is scheduled for 2:30 p.m. Sunday with the ribbon-cutting ceremony to follow at 3:15 p.m. A public open house is scheduled from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday.

Assuming role is nothing new for convict

DALLAS (AP) — Pretending to be someone else was nothing new for Wesley Don Crowder.

He did it in 1983, assuming a false identity to get a job to rob an Addison safe-deposit company of $1.5 million in cash, jewelry and coins.

But eight days later he walked in to the Addison Police Department, admitted the theft and served 15 months in prison.

Crowder said he used his skill to pose as another man and beat a polygraph test to win a sales job at Tower of Jewels in a local shopping center.

"You can walk in and get on a polygraph as someone else and answer all the questions as they would and you're not lying. When I walked in there, I wasn't Wesley Don Crowder," said Crowder, indicted on charges of stealing $250,000 in jewels on Aug. 9, his second day on the job.

"I was someone else. And everything came out truthful."

In a jailhouse interview Friday with the Dallas Times Herald, the 36-year-old Dallas native said he staged the identity ruse at Tower of Jewels for a job that would provide money to leave the state with his three children. The children, who had been living with him, had been awarded to the custody of his ex-wife.

Crowder fled with them to Florida in August and was arrested New Year's Eve after telephoning his ex-wife and telling her where she could send Christmas presents to the children. He was returned to Dallas Friday.

HOW TO CHOOSE A PLASTIC SURGEON.

Today, you no longer have to live with a nose you hate. Or wrinkles that make you look older than you feel. Or an unflattering figure. Modern plastic surgery can improve these and many other conditions.

If you're considering plastic surgery, you should make sure you select a doctor who is qualified as a specialist in plastic surgery.

Because of the level of expertise needed, a specialist in plastic surgery has completed five to seven years of supervised training. To be a board-certified plastic surgeon, the physician then is required to pass a series of stringent examinations.

However, the average consumer may not know that a doctor can legally claim to be a cosmetic surgeon without specialized training or board certification.

How can you tell? Check his credentials thoroughly. Is he certified by the American Board of Plastic Surgery? Is he a member of the American Society of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgeons? Does he get good references from his patients? Is he listed in the Directory of Medical Specialists? Is he affiliated with an accredited hospital? Make sure you check before you choose.

Sylvan Bartlett, M.D. is a board-certified plastic and reconstructive surgeon and otolaryngologist. He is a member of the American Society of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgeons and the American Academy of Otolaryngology. Dr. Bartlett is a specialist in plastic and reconstructive surgery including hand and microvascular surgery, and otolaryngology as it applies directly to problems in plastic surgery.

"I work at Nalley-Pickle & Welch Funeral Home because I enjoy helping others and being needed."

Eva Sue Anderson

I find great satisfaction in listening, helping and comforting the bereaved. The loss of someone dear to us is always a difficult period. That's why I'm glad to be able to help with the funeral service. It's only the first step in the process that takes place after a loved one dies but my main objective is to do all I can to help and to be there for the families we serve. Some may not think a staff or funeral home selection is all that important, but I know it is.

Staff Writer

One of the best games in town.

Probably the best thing about being a sportswriter is that privileges come couched as duties. Tomorrow night, I have to go see the Howard College Hawks play basketball. I beg thee not for pity, Big Spring sports fans...

But I wouldn't mind a little company. It's not that Hawks' and Hawk-Queens' games aren't well attended, it's just that it could be a lot better. Row upon empty row at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum begs for a father and son to spend an evening rising from its seats to yell for the Howard College teams. Were they filled, that is what would happen, for the Hawks are an exciting team.

The Hawks don't have any choice — they have to be exciting. When your tallest player is 6-4, and your opponent always has one or two 6-7s, if not 6-9s, then you better hustle. The Hawks do hustle, and they've shown they can beat those taller teams.

It's my feeling they'll finish in the top four in the conference and make the playoffs. My reasons:

- Coach Larry Brown. Coach Brown is a winner, having captured two consecutive state championships in division 5A at Bryan High School. He compiled an 18-3 playoff record in his last five years at Bryan, and that's phenomenal. Brown has already shown Big Spring he's a mover and a shaker. Those who saw the NBA Shootout know it was one of the most entertaining nights of the year for local sports fans.

Brown is ambitious, committed, and smart. He will win at Howard College. Of that there is no doubt, absolutely none.

- The Hawks pre-conference schedule was perhaps the toughest in the nation. Their record would be much prettier than 9-7 had the Hawks not taken on defending national champion San Jacinto and West Texas power Midland College when they didn't have to. But that kind of competition will make the Hawks that much tougher in February, and the more Brown and the Hawks know about Midland, the better their chance to beat them in conference play.

- Kevin Bradsher and Dennis Rhodes. Both these players played on the two state championships under Brown, so you know they know how to win. That's much more important than knowing how to dunk, which, by the way, Bradsher knows how to do.

The 6-1 sophomore is averaging close to 25 points a game, and he is a magnificent athlete. If you like poetry in motion, watch Bradsher. If you want to watch a player humiliate his defender, watch Bradsher.

Rhodes wins with defense, passing, whatever it takes. He hurt his shoulder in late November, and played with pain in December. The injury held him back from his early season form, but Brown said his point guard is 100 percent. Without a healthy Rhodes, it's doubtful the Hawks could go far this year. With him, it will be fun to see what they can do.

- The three point shot. The 19-foot, nine inch extra pointer has been decried by basketball purists everywhere, but if Brown has disparaging words for the half circle, he'd probably grin mischievously as he spoke them. The three pointer helps the Hawks, no question. For Bradsher, Sam Williams, Robert Barley and Walter Walker, 19 feet is well within their range.

- Walker. Walter Walker started for the Hawks in 85-86, and probably would have started this year. He stayed, made his grades, and Brown has said he expects Walker to play a lot the second half of the season. Walker was an all-state quarterback in North Carolina, so you know he's a good athlete. His quickness, defense, and, as above mentioned, his shooting ability, will be a significant addition to the Hawks.

- The other Hawks. Myron Wright plays with emotion, and plays taller than his 6-3. Wright's lunging, powerful dunks also provide Hawks' fans with some of their most thrilling moments.

Williams and Barley both have it in them to score 20. If Williams, at 6-4, can improve his rebounding numbers he'll help the Hawks where they most need help. Barley is a smart player and is explosive. He scored 16 points in the second half of the Hawks' 95-86 win over Tyler Friday night.

Mitchell Porter and Billy Giggins, both returnees from last year, are two of the Hawks' biggest bodies. Giggins nursed a bad ankle for most of the first half of the season, but in his brief appearances he showed he can bang the boards and shoot. He's healthy now. Porter can score points in bunches, and is a smart, experienced player.

Bruce Mitchell is the Hawks' Mr. Hustle. He's a good rebounder, a good medium range shooter, and he plays a great rover on the Hawks' press. Matt Brown, who played a lot in Rhodes' absence, gained experience that will help the team in the second half of the season.

Perhaps the most exciting thing about watching these players is that they're such nice people. I've been fortunate enough to spend some time around them, and they're a friendly, happy, fun-loving bunch. More than anything, they want Big Spring to watch them play basketball.

Bradsher said this earlier in the season: "I like Big Spring, but I'd like it a whole lot better if people came out and watched us play. I'd feel a whole lot better."

Teammate Sammy Jackson added, "That's who we want to play for, the people of Big Spring."

They want to show off, and as anyone who's seen them will testify, they have a lot to show. Watch the Hawks once, and you'll be hooked. You'll also have something else to look forward to in your week.

Take a seat, watch the Hawks. They're fun. They'll make your blood flow.

CLEVELAND (AP) — The Cleveland Browns played like champions during the last six weeks of the NFL season. The Denver Broncos did that during the first six weeks.

When they meet for the American Football Conference championship Sunday, neither team will be thinking about those streaks. They will be concentrating, instead, on streaking to Pasadena, Calif., for the Super Bowl.

"It's down to four quarters now," Browns tight end Ozzie Newsome said. "This is as close as we've been and we won't be backing off now."

The Browns won their final five games of the regular season, going 12-4, the best record in the conference. The Broncos were 6-0 before losing a Monday night game to the New York Jets. They finished 11-5 after splitting their last 10 games.

"That has no bearing on this game," Coach Dan Reeves said. "I think we are ready for the Browns and, if we play as we can, we'll be fine."

A temperature in the upper 20s is forecast for gametime, along with an overcast sky. The National Weather Service also said there will be snow flurries during the game, with winds from 10 to 15 miles an hour.

The Broncos and Browns have not met since 1984, when Sam

Rutigliano was coaching Cleveland and heading for a 1-7 start, which got him fired and Marty Schottenheimer hired. Denver won 24-14.

Last weekend, the Browns rallied with 10 points in the final two minutes, then beat the Jets 23-20 in double overtime. It was Cleveland's first postseason victory since 1969.

Denver, meanwhile, defeated New England 22-17 for the Broncos' first playoff victory since taking the AFC championship in 1977 before losing to Dallas in the Super Bowl. Reeves was 0-2 in the playoffs as a head coach.

"We're both here," Newsome said, "no matter what happened before."

Newsome has some unhappy memories of playing the Broncos, who, in a 1978 game, held him without a catch. Only Washington has done that before, and Newsome ended this season with a string of 114 games with at least one reception.

Denver's secondary is as strong as ever. So is Cleveland's — the defensive backfield might be the strongest unit on both sides.

"Dennis Smith is an All-Pro, Louis Wright is an All-Pro and Mike Harden is screaming that he ought to be," Newsome said.

Eastern powers meet for NFC championship

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — The New York Giants are 15-2, winners of 10 straight and last week demolished San Francisco 49-3 in what even Coach Bill Parcells conceded was a near-perfect game.

Can the Washington Redskins, who have already lost twice to the Giants, be in a better position when they try to become the first NFC wild-card team to make it to the Super Bowl? They will find out Sunday when they meet New York at Giants Stadium for the National Football Conference title and a trip to Pasadena.

The game will be played under a mixture of clouds and sun with temperatures in the upper 30s according to the National Weather Service. Winds will be "brisk, from 15 to 20 miles an hour, with higher gusts," the forecast said.

"No one expects us to win, so all we have to do is go up there and play our best game," quarterback Jay Schroeder said.

"They're the heavy favorites so we've got nothing to lose," echoed linebacker Rich Milot. Indeed, 1986 has been the year of the Giants — a team that has never played in a Super Bowl and is in its first championship game since 1963.

Even with two games to go to achieve their ultimate goal, they have been anointed by the football world as a worthy successor to the Jim McMahonless Chicago Bears, dumped by the Redskins from the playoffs last Saturday.

So confident are Giants' fans that a controversy developed last week over New York Mayor Edward Koch's decision not to throw a Super Bowl victory parade for the team, because it plays five miles from downtown Manhattan on the New Jersey side of the Hudson River. The controversy was resolved when American Express offered to underwrite the celebration for up to $700,000.

The confidence, nonetheless, may be warranted.

Playing one of the NFL's toughest schedules, New York rolled to a 14-2 record to capture the NFC East, earning the title by beating Washington 27-20 in Giants Stadium on Oct. 27 — the same Monday night the Mets won the World Series. It then survived the challenge of four straight games against contenders, three of them on the road.

That stretch was capped by a 24-14 win in Washington where Schroeder was intercepted six times and sacked four times — three of those by Lawrence Taylor, who led the NFL in sacks and became only the second defensive player to be named the league's most valuable player.

The Redskins game was the only one in a seven-game winning streak won by more than a touchdown, but it seemed to give the Giants the last boost they needed.

They finished the regular season by beating St. Louis 27-7, routed Green Bay 55-24, then opened the playoffs with that 49-3 victory over San Francisco as Joe Morris, the NFL's second leading regular-season rusher with 1,516 yards, ran for 159 more and Phil Simms passed for four touchdowns. The defense knocked out Joe Montana with a concussion, its fourth quarterback KO of the season — Ron Jaworski, Danny White and Tommy Kramer were dispatched in successive games in November.

"They just shattered us," San Francisco Coach Bill Walsh said.

The rest of the football world concurred; the Giants, three-point underdogs entering that Dec. 7 game at Washington, were immediately installed as seven- to eight-point favorites over the Redskins.

Washington's season, ironically, may have turned on another quarterback injury inflicted by the Giants — the broken leg sustained by Joe Theismann when he was sacked during a Monday night game in November 1985 by Taylor and Gary Reasons. Since then, the Redskins under Schroeder are 19-5, 12-4 this year.

Queens win consolation

ODESSA — The Howard College Hawk-Queens captured consolation honors in the Odessa Chamber of Commerce Tournament of Champions Saturday night as they took a 69-64 win over Temple.

After the losing the first game of the tourney to Central Arizona, Howard responded by defeating Panola Friday night and downing Temple. Howard now sports a 14-6 record.

The Queens never trailed in the contest, taking a 33-29 halftime lead and stretching it to 19 points midway through the second half.

Guards Terri Powell and Trena Jackson keyed the win. Jackson scored 17 of her game-high 26 points in the first half. She ended the game with a 12 of 26 shooting performance. Powell followed with 20 points. Forward Stefanie Massie led Howard with eight rebounds.

The Queens' next game will be Monday, Jan. 19 in Levelland versus South Plains College. Tip off is 6 p.m.

Chiefs name new coach

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Frank Gansz was named Kansas City Chiefs coach Saturday night after team President Jack Steadman announced a club reorganization in which he would no longer be responsible for day-to-day operation of the football team.

Gansz, 48, succeeds John Mackovic, who was fired Thursday after posting a 10-6 record in his fourth season with the Chiefs and taking them to the playoffs for the first time in 15 years.

Gansz coached the special teams last season, a unit given much of the credit for the Chiefs' success. He had resigned Wednesday, saying he was seeking a job as an offensive coordinator as a stepping stone to a head coaching job.

Several Chiefs players had met Thursday with Steadman at the home of placekicker Nick Lowery to bemoan the loss of Gansz. Mackovic, who had been offered a two-year extension a week ago, was fired hours later.

General Manager Jim Schaaf said at a news conference at Arrowhead Stadium that Gansz was uniquely qualified to coach the Chiefs and possessed attributes of a winning coach that included leadership, ability to motivate, ability to discipline and ability to pay attention to detail.

"I am flattered and honored about being chosen to coach the Kansas City Chiefs and I am very excited about having the opportunity to be a head coach," Gansz said. "I think all of our players are winners right now and that will be our objective."

Gansz said his first priority would be to improve the Kansas City offense, which ranked last in the NFL last season and gained its fewest yards since 1977.

"We definitely are going to build on our offensive line," he said. "I want to have the best offensive line in the NFL. I think that's the cornerstone of your offense. I want to have a well-drilled offense that can control the ball, run the ball and pass the ball."

Gansz said he had not made up his mind on who the starting quarterback would be. Todd Blackledge, a first-round draft choice in 1983, started the first eight games this past season, but was replaced by Bill Kenney.

Outdoor trails

By H. BOYCE HALE
"You are the luckiest hunter I've ever seen," I said to Tom when he told me he had killed a deer and a mountain lion.

Tom Balderach lives at 7 Glenwick Cove in Big Spring and he was hunting on the Boyd Chambers ranch in Presidio County during the 1985 hunting season. He and I were among 20 hunters on the Chambers' ranch.

The hunting area was north of Candelario and west of the Sierra Vieja Mountain range, where everything either stings you, sticks you or bites you.

The annual rainfall, according to owner Chambers, is 10 inches. But from the meager soil between the rocks comes some grass, cacti, ocotillo, yucca and a few ash and cottonwood trees. As you might expect, mesquite thrives in this environment.

A few miles from the Chambers ranch is Capote Fall, the highest water fall in Texas. The water cascades down 150 feet, dropping into Capote Creek and forming a natural pool at the bottom.

I have been told that the early tribes of Indians used this pool to bathe in. Now people swim in it.

Downstream from the fall, you can find ash and cottonwood trees growing in Capote Canyon, and if you are fortunate to be there in the autumn, the yellow leaves are a great treat.

On opening morning of the hunting season, Tom Balderach and Bill Hale of Sterling City Route, Carlsbad, were hunting together.

They had spent the night on the mountain in an old abandoned ranch house called "Cathy House." Tom and Bill had split at dawn. Tom took the high trail, just under the top of Sierra Vieja, and Bill took a lower trail.

Tom was easing along the trail

when the hair on his neck bristled and goose bumps raised on his body. He instinctively realized that danger was near. Turning his head slowly, his whole body stiffened. Only a few feet away was a crouching mountain lion.

Without hesitation Tom swung his rifle and fired at the lion. The cat disappeared.

Wondering if he had wounded or killed the lion, Tom took a page out of his Vietnam experiences. He began to circle the area so as to approach the possible wounded lion from the rear, or to get into a position to finish it off.

Tom was being cautious while approaching, going very slowly. He realized that a wounded lion can be very dangerous.

Suddenly an eight-point mule deer bounded right out in front of him, and Tom almost had heart failure. He just knew that a lion was going to eat him.

Recovering quickly, he shot the deer.

Tom thought to himself, "Now what do I do. Should I clean the deer first or should I continue searching for the lion?"

He decided to field dress the deer. With much difficulty, and frequent nervous glances around him, he completed the work while on a very steep side of the mountain.

Then, gathering his gear, he continued to search for the cat.

Easing along the steep mountain side, Tom crept over to the area where he thought the cat might be. Moving slowly, he would stop, listen and look, but didn't detect anything. However, he again sensed danger.

Slipping around some boulders, Tom saw the cat and it looked dead. Tossing a small pebble at it, he didn't see any movement. Easing closer, he poked the rear end of the cat. It still didn't move.

Relieved, Tom stared at his kill for some time, thinking how lucky he was to have killed a deer and Bill Hale had heard the shots and came over to see what was going on. "Wow," he yelled when he saw the cat.

They skinned it and took the hide to the ranch house where all the hunters in camp paraded over to see it.

It wasn't long until the bragging started. In short time, the veteran hunters had had enough. Listening to this "rookie" tell us how to kill lions and deer was about all we could take.

In jest, the seasoned hunters told Tom that they had voted to bar him from future hunts. Tom was visibly shook because he thought they were serious.

But all of us, down in their hearts, were proud of this man because he had fulfilled all of our dreams on the outdoor trail.

Readers who have information to submit for use in this column may contact Hale by writing to Sterling City Rt. Box 157-F, Big Spring, 79721 or calling 267-6957.

NFC

Washington, which matched the Giants game for game until Dec. 7, beat the Los Angeles Rams 19-7 in the NFC wild-card game and the Bears 27-13 last week.

Schroeder twice beat the Chicago blitz with touchdown passes to Art Monk and the defense challenged the inexperienced Doug Flutie with a five-man line that, in effect, said, "We don't think you can pass against us."

That's unlikely to be the defensive deployment against Simms, an eight-year veteran who has taken considerable abuse in New York, but who is regarded around the league as one of the NFL's toughest clutch quarterbacks.

"Simms is a great leader and he makes all the big plays," says Washington Coach Joe Gibbs, who for the second week in a row is making it sound like there's no way his team can possibly win.

"Up there the running game killed us. Then they came back here and killed us with the pass. When you get that kind of balance and you throw in a defense like they've got, you've got a great team."

Washington's best chance would be to neutralize Taylor, Leonard Marshall and the New York pass rush, giving Schroeder time to find Monk and Gary Clark against a New York secondary missing free safety Terry Kinard, who was injured in the game at Washington. Tackle Joe Jacoby, beaten badly by Taylor in Washington, will be playing with a broken hand and guard Russ Grimm has sore ribs, but both held up well against Chicago's often fearsome pass rush.

New York, meanwhile, seems confident, but not smug.

"It's a one-game season now," cornerback Elvis Patterson said. "It doesn't matter what we did in the other games."

"I've thought all along that Washington is the best team we've played and we expected to see them again," Parcels said. "It doesn't make any difference now that we beat them twice or what we did last Sunday or what everybody thinks about us. We've got to go out on the field and do it again. That's what makes it such a challenge."

AFC

been around since Adam was a little boy. That's a great secondary."

As for Cleveland's defensive backs, led by All-Pro corner Hanford Dixon, Reeves said, "Their cornerbacks are very comparable to the Raiders' and the Kansas City corners, and we think they are the best in the league."

The comeback win over the Jets reinforced the Browns' belief that they are the best in the league and heading for their first Super Bowl. "This is a different team than last year," Browns linebacker Clay Matthews said.

The 1985 Browns won the AFC Central with an 8-8 record, the worst of any division winner in NFL history. "We were just happy to be in the playoffs last year. This time we expect to win, even when we are 10 points behind. We just have a special feeling we can do it," he said.

Cleveland's improvement since last year centers on a more varied offense under assistant coach Lindy Infante. The Browns had a pair of 1,000-yard rushers in Kevin Mack and Earnest Byner in 1985, but injuries shortened their seasons. They played in only one game together all year.

The Browns then turned to a short passing game behind quarterback Bernie Kosar. Even though Newsome was hurt for most of the season, that attack steadily improved as the 23-year-old Kosar matured into a first-rate NFL passer.

"A team goes as its quarterback goes," Newsome said, "and that says it all right there. Imagine what this guy will be able to do when he gets to be 25."

Kosar will see plenty of pressure from defensive end Rulon Jones, who led the AFC with 15½ sacks, and linebacker Karl Mecklenburg. His ability to handle that pressure might determine the Browns' fate.

Reeves has no fear about placing the fate of his team in the hands — and the arms and feet — of Elway. The fourth-year quarterback hurt an ankle near the end of the first half last week, but didn't miss a play. He also ran for one touchdown and threw for another against New England.

Elway won't have guard Paul Howard protecting him after Howard hurt his knee. And his favorite receiver, running back Gerald Willhite, hurt his shoulder against the Patriots.

For the Browns, inside linebacker Eddie Johnson (knee and ankle) is listed as questionable.

Denver's defense is No. 1 in the AFC against the run, and, coupled with that tough, deep secondary, could give Kosar and Co. nightmares.

But Browns linebacker Chip Banks doesn't seem worried.

"We're rising at the right time," he said. "If we aren't the best team in the AFC, we proved we can play with the best. We're right there."

Reeves realizes that.

"If we play less than our best, we will be watching someone else play in Pasadena," he said. "We think we are the best in the AFC, but have to go out and prove it. This is probably the biggest game we have all been involved in."

Back to nature

Couple decides to live in the wilderness

By CARLEEN EVERETT
Lifestyle Editor

Tom and Barbara Purcell are getting back to nature.

In the process, they are undertaking a major change in their lives.

They've quit their jobs and are moving to Pennsylvania — taking with them a duffle bag, a bedroll, and a plastic cup, knife, fork and spoon — to live in a wilderness camp for troubled youths.

They'll sleep in teepees and cook on open fires and leave behind the finer things in life such as their home (equipped with all the modern conveniences), furniture, and vehicles, which they will store until they return.

The couple, married five months, is both excited and apprehensive about the prospect of the adventure.

"We don't know what to expect," Barbara says.

The decision was made "on a whim," Tom added.

"One day Tom called me and said 'I've read about something and want to show it to you,'" Barbara said. "I thought Tom had found an ambulance position in the Dallas area or something. Then he showed me the article about a company called VisionQuest. It wasn't what I was expecting, but I told him, well, let's look into it." And they did.

"We called and flew to Dallas for an interview. We applied, gave references and they ran an FBI check on us."

The couple leaves Big Spring on Jan. 17 and fly into Philadelphia.

VisionQuest officials will meet and take the couple to Ft. Muslin, a VisionQuest camp on the south end of the Philadelphia Airport grounds where the Purcells will work as counselors with delinquent juveniles in the wilderness setting. Tom will also serve as a paramedic.

The term VisionQuest is a "Plains Indians' rite passage into adulthood," Tom explained.

The purpose of the camp is to help troubled young adults through "good, old-fashioned work ethics. They have daily responsibilities and are taught self-discipline, trust and respect for themselves, others and their environment."

"They're also taught how to face and deal with their problems," Barbara added.

Most of the youths in the camps have been in trouble an average of seven times, Tom said. "We'll be working with the toughest, street smart kids this country has ever produced."

The Purcells explained the typical scenario for a youth's participation evolves from an option between a prison sentence and VisionQuest.

Officials from VisionQuest interview each prospect and upon acceptance an individual treatment plan is written and the camp site is selected for the individual. After two months at the wilderness camp — also called an impact camp — the youth can go on to another wilderness experience or another phase of VisionQuest, such as a wagon train.

After that, if the individual has successfully completed the treatment plan, he can either return home or go on to another camp like OceanQuest, which is an elite group, the Purcells said.

The couple doesn't seem too worried about being in a camp with troubled youths. With a sense of relief, Tom noted that "VisionQuest does not accept murderers, rapists and arsonists."

Parenting will be the main thrust of their jobs, Barbara explained.

"They didn't sugarcoat anything at the interview," she said. "They asked questions like, 'Can you handle kids cussing at you — and manipulating you? Can you handle not taking a bath for a week?'"

"They didn't want anyone to have a romantic idea about it — it won't just be fun and games. It will be tough, too. But it will also be fun."

Despite the challenges awaiting them, the Purcells are excited about their new adventure.

"For the last nine years, I've known everyday what my day would be like. When we get there, every day will be different," Barbara said.

"It's a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity," Tom said. "If we like it — and there are a lot of unknowns — we'd like to stay in the East for about two years."

The income is an attractive aspect of the job.

"We're both getting considerable raises," Tom said. "We expect to save $32,000 in two years," thanks to greatly reduced room and board expenses.

If they don't like their jobs, then they can quit. No commitments have been made, Tom said.

"If you aren't happy and don't enjoy it, they would rather you not stay, because you wouldn't be helpful to the kids," Barbara said.

"At first, my thought was 'I don't want to be away from family and friends,'" Barbara said.

Tom's only hesitation is the extreme difference in weather they've become accustomed to in West Texas.

On their days off — they'll work five on and two off — they plan to travel.

"We'll be close to Philadelphia, New York City and Washington D.C., we want to see it all," Barbara said.

VisionQuest Camps are an alternative to prison

Vision Quest is a national organization with programs in Arizona, Pennsylvania, California and Florida.

Since 1973, VisionQuest has provided successful programs for juveniles ranging in age from ten to twenty-one. Youths generally come to VisionQuest with multiple referrals to the criminal justice or mental health system. They have not been able to develop or maintain satisfactory relationships with their family or friends, and have not been able to adapt to the school environment.

VisionQuest offers an extensive network of responsive programmatic alternatives to these youths. These programs include: wilderness camps, wagon trains, sailing and biking expeditions, group homes, at-home treatment and learning centers.

A dedicated and caring staff provide guidance and support to juveniles and their families during all program phases.

VisionQuest's goal is to prepare these youths to re-enter their homes and communities by providing services that promote self-respect and social survival skills, while redirecting self-destructive and anti-social behavior.

All VisionQuest programs emphasize physical, mental and emotional challenges. In each camp, the youth attend school for four hours each day.

The Wilderness Camp, operated in seemingly remote areas of Arizona, Pennsylvania and Florida, offer youths the illusion of isolation and wilderness adventure. Juveniles and staff live together in a teepee village and learn to live with changing seasons and each other.

Youngsters typically spend three months in physical training, learning outdoor skills related to their specific geographical location. Quests include different wilderness skills such as hiking, canoeing, rappelling, horseback riding or cross-country skiing.

The Wagon Train is a rigorous and tightly structured program. The group travels 15 to 20 miles a day and set up camp at night live together as a tepee family. Participants stay on the wagon train for a specific number of miles, usually for three or four months.

The basic tenets of sail training are taught on OceanQuest. For youths who select to participate in OceanQuest, their first challenge is to complete basic training. Staff and youths receive training in water safety, swimming and seamanship.

After completion of two high-impact programs, the youth can participate in the Group Home Program. They must demonstrate the ability and willingness to successfully live within a group home family and interact with the community.

HomeQuest is for the youths who are ready and capable of living at home and successfully coping with the social demands of the community. Staff make daily phone calls and regularly visit the youth, family, peers and school officials.

Parents are encouraged to visit the youths while they are in their programs in order to share in their child's accomplishments and help through important issues.

Buyer's remorse: A common ailment

By NAOMI HUNT

County Extension Agent
As the bills for holiday expenses come rolling in this month, many consumers will be feeling a good case of "buyer's remorse."

That's simply a fancy term for the depression that follows overspending. For some of us, overspending may be an occasional problem, for others it can become compulsive.

Compulsive spenders usually have the sense of being out of control and often hide their purchases out of embarrassment. A poor self-image is worsened by more buying because the underlying need for approval or excitement often is not met.

Impulse buying, or buying that is not a part of an overall plan, affects virtually everyone at one time or another. For example, have you ever gone to the grocery store to pick up a gallon of milk and walked out with two bags of groceries, personal care items, magazines or other merchandise? Impulse buying is not automatically "bad." But it does add up, and can mean that important items cannot be purchased because the money has already been spent in other ways.

Focus on family

The marketplace contributes to both compulsive and impulsive buying. For some people the attraction is the pleasant activity of shopping and buying. Others

"can't pass up a good bargain."

If your New Year's resolutions involve improving your family financial management, examining spending habits can be a good place to start.

"Buyer's remorse," or the feelings of depression that can follow overspending, may be relieved with some thought and action.

Know when you have shopped enough. Since shopping takes time, effort, energy and money, it makes sense that you should spend the most time shopping for the most expensive items.

Avoid shopping for items you know are too expensive for you to afford. Also consider the total cost for shopping, including the gasoline, food, parking and the product or service.

Make a spending plan. If you can't afford to buy everything you need or want at one time, a plan for buying one thing at a time over a certain period may help.

If you are angry and go shopping, leave your credit cards at home.

Try window shopping to calm down and think through the buying decision before you make a purchase.

You may want to look one day and buy another. A cooling-off period helps put things in perspective.

Work on developing wants other than "more things." Seek adventure and diversions that do not cost money.

Keep in mind that "defensive spending" or the "I can spend as much as you can" syndrome can quickly wreck your bank account and probably will not make you feel any better.

Controlling spending is a good first step toward better financial management. It can also help you conquer feelings of "buyer's remorse" and substitute the greater satisfaction of achieving your financial goals.

Ways to grow garden transplants

By DON RICHARDSON
County Extension Agent

Many home gardeners grow their own vegetable transplants either in the home near a well-lighted window, in cold frames or hot beds or in a hobby-type greenhouse.

Growing your own plants is less expensive than buying, they are available when you need them and you can easily obtain seed of recommended varieties and are not forced to accept substitutes.

Here are some steps to insure success in raising your own vegetable transplants.

- Vary seeding rate according to soil temperature and expected percent germination.

- Avoid seeding too thickly to prevent spindly seedlings. A stand of about 10 plants per foot of row results in stockier plants than if they are more crowded.

- Do not try to force plants to grow too rapidly either by heavy fertilization or with warm temperatures.

- Provide adequate light to prevent spindly growth.

- Better plants are produced if the temperature at night is about 10° cooler than in the daytime.

For most vegetables, daytime temperatures should range from 65 to 75°, with nighttime temperatures of 55° to 65°.

For your garden

Seedlings of some vegetables are difficult to transplant because roots are damaged easily and are slow to recover. Start seedlings in small pots or peat pots to minimize damage.

If you grow your own plants, it is important to use a sterile soil mix to prevent seedling diseases and plant loose. Several excellent sterile soil mixes are available at local garden centers and nurseries.

If you prepare your own soil mix for transplants, use equal parts of sifted sphagnum peat moss and vermiculite. To each bushel of this mix, add 8 tablespoons of limestone, 4 tablespoons of super phosphate and about 10 tablespoons of a complete fertilizer such as 10-10-10.

When you are ready to blend the soil mix, dampen the peat moss by sprinkling with about a gallon of warm water. Thoroughly mix the peat and vermiculite, add the dry fertilizer materials, then turn the mixture until it is thoroughly blended. Be careful not to contaminate the medium with any outdoor soil.

After sowing the seed in whatever type container you choose, cover the seed lightly with soil; then water lightly until the entire mixture is moist. Be careful not to soak the mix. Once you seed the flats, put them in an area where they will get plenty of light and where the temperature is fairly constant. Most vegetables seed germinate best at 75° to 85° F.

Only joint injuries lead to arthritis

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am a 37-year-old male who has studied martial arts for the past nine years. I have had a number of strains, fractures, contusions, body bruises, etc. Most of these are the result of learning joint-locking techniques and being slammed onto a mat. I am not in pain and 99 percent of the time I feel great. My wife feels that this kind of activity will eventually lead to arthritis in later years. Please tell me that she is wrong. — A.V.C.

Joint injuries lead to arthritis later. It is called traumatic arthritis. Ask any football player you know who has had serious and repeated joint injuries during his

That is your bad news. The good news is that bumps, bruises and strains that don't involve a joint will not make the joint arthritic. Even joint-locking techniques and being slammed onto a mat won't cause arthritis if the joints are not injured in the process.

If you have never had a direct joint injury, your chances of getting arthritis later is about the same as mine area.

In response to reader requests, Dr. Donohue's publisher now has a complete listing of all the booklets on various medical problems. Readers wishing this list can write him in care of the Big Spring Herald, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, IL 60611, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for return mailing.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Woman's live-in lifestyle breaks dad's heart

DEAR ABBY: For the second time in two years, our divorced daughter has moved a male friend into her home, not more than two blocks from us. Her mother not only condones this far-out lifestyle, but seems to welcome each newcomer with open arms, while I am condemned for not being friendly.

I feel very uncomfortable with our daughter's living arrangements, especially when she and these live-in men are present in our home — an all-too-often occurrence because she lives nearby.

Once I tried to explain my feelings, only to be told that my attitude would lose us our daughter — something that happened long ago.

Please give me some guidelines to help me cope with this situation.

BROKENHEARTED DAD

DEAR DAD: I presume your daughter is an adult, in which case she doesn't need your permission to live in the lifestyle of her choice. It is your right to disapprove, but for you to make her and her friend uncomfortable in your home will only drive her away. Be the gracious host. To be judgmental about their lifestyle (in word or action) would be counterproductive if you really want to "cope" as you say you do.

DEAR ABBY: I became a widow at 29. My husband was 35. We had only seven years together, but they were wonderful in every way. I have two sons with him, and a daughter from a previous marriage. (It was annulled.)

I am now married to a man who has many fine qualities and I do love him, but there is very little intimacy in our relationship. Why? Because he is physically repulsive. He is a hard-working, honest, decent man, but when he comes home, he washes only if he feels like it. I can't stand to have him come near me. I can't remember when he last brushed his teeth or used a mouthwash, or cleaned his fingernails. He does not bathe or shower before coming to bed. If I complain, he says I am nagging him, and I should please just leave him alone.

Well, I have left him alone — for four months. I haven't mentioned divorce because he's a very good provider, but I must admit, the thought has crossed my mind. He wasn't this way when I married him.

Abby, how does a 105-pound woman get a 200-pound man to clean up?

END OF MY ROPE

DEAR END: She tells him in language that he can understand at the proper time and in the proper tone. Your reaction is understandable and valid, but there could be more to his refusal to clean up than meets the eye (or nose). He needs to see his physician for a complete physical examination. His unexplained change of behavior could be the result of a neurological disorder.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing this from my hospital bed after giving birth to my fifth daughter. She is a beautiful baby, and, of course, I am grateful that she is a healthy child, but I had prayed for a boy!

My husband was so sweet when he heard it was another girl. But I could see the disappointment in his eyes. This was our last try, Abby. After our first daughter we kept hoping for a son, but it never happened.

I'm writing this with tears streaming down my cheeks. I feel like such a failure. It's as though I let my husband down. I know there are many women who would be thrilled to have the five daughters I have, so go ahead and tell me I deserve a spanking for complaining. However, if you have a few words of consolation for me, I could use them now.

MOTHER OF GIRLS

DEAR MOTHER: In the first place, you're not a "failure," and you didn't let your husband down. The male determines the sex of the child. But if you are determined to have a son, why not adopt one?
