Suspect arrested in two slayings

AP Laserphoto

John Plunckett, with his daughter, discover that his other daughter, Helen Barnard, was fatally shot during a robbery.

PORT ARTHUR, Texas (AP) — Port Arthur police said early today they have arrested a man in connection with the slayings of two savings and loan employees during a robbery Tuesday and were holding him in lieu of $200,000 bond.

Authorities would not release any information on the suspect except to say that he is a Jefferson County resident.

A statement released to the news media said, "During the night a Jefferson County resident was taken into custody and is being held on an accusation bond set by Judge (John) Borne for $200,000 in connection with the Jefferson savings robbery."

The statement also said that "the case is still under active investigation and further details will be released later," according to police spokeswoman Jo Callison.

Late Tuesday police said they were searching for a pot-bellied, middle-age man recorded on videotape just before the two employees were fatally shot in the vault during a robbery.

The videotape, recorded by a security surveillance system at a Jefferson Savings and Loan branch, showed the "calm and calculating" man chatting with his victims shortly before he killed them, the Beaumont Enterprise reported today in a copyright story.

Investigators told the newspaper that the 12- to 15-minute tape showed the gunman entering the savings and loan at 9:43 a.m. Tuesday.

The suspect chatted with one teller for about 10 minutes while the other teller took care of customers at the drive-up window. Then the gunman talked a few minutes more before announcing the holdup and rifling three cash drawers before signaling for the two women to join him in the lobby and taking them to the vault area, investigators told the newspaper.

The tape shows the gunman leaving the bank and returning a short time later to disengage the branch's video recorder. Investigators speculate he wanted to take or destroy the tape but couldn't figure out how to extract the cartridge, the Enterprise reported.

The bodies of branch supervisor Helen Jean Barnard, 28, of Groves, and 23-year-old Diana Joy Jackson of Port Neches, a teller, were found by a Port Arthur police officer about 10 a.m. Both had been shot with a .45-caliber pistol and the robber fled with at least $5,000, police said.

Ms. Barnard, with a wound to the head, was pronounced dead at the scene. Ms. Jackson, shot in the back, died at Park Place Hospital at 10:44 a.m., said hospital spokeswoman Gayle Yarbrough. Both women were found in the bank's vault located in the back of the bank.

"It looked like they were shot in the vault," said Borne.

Borne said the videotape showed the suspect, a white male in his early 50s with a pot belly, entering and leaving the bank Tuesday morning. He said other bank customers had been in the bank, which opens at 9 a.m., prior to the incident.

Jury duty may have saved another employee's life, officials said.

Charlotte Middleton reported to jury duty in Beaumont Tuesday morning instead of going to work at the Jefferson Savings & Loan Association in Port Arthur, officials said.

At first, authorities believed Ms. Middleton had been abducted by the robber since she wasn't at the bank.

Police Officer Ken Corona came by the bank minutes after the shooting, noticed no tellers at their windows and found the two bodies in the bank vault, Jefferson Savings & Loan Association vice president Lloyd Patterson said.

"We've been held up before, but never, never has it been anything this extreme," Patterson said.

Corona occasionally dropped by the savings and loan to visit Ms. Jackson, a single mother with a 3-year-old daughter, who had been working at the bank for four months, the Enterprise reported.

FBI spokesman Ron Kettler said FBI agents were taking part in the investigation.

Reagan's vital signs stabilize, his spirits 'good'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, after his "best night" since cancer surgery four days ago, said today he felt as if it were "Christmas in July" when doctors removed a tube running through his nose into his stomach, the White House reported.

Reagan was examined by his medical team at Bethesda Naval Hospital shortly after 8 a.m. EDT. The doctors reported his condition as excellent, his vital signs as stable and spirits as good, said a statement by presidential spokesman Larry Speakes.

He said the doctors reported the president had "the best night ever" and was not experiencing any discomfort.

When doctors removed a tube used to draw out gas and fluid secreted in the stomach, the president, who earlier had complained of some irritation from the device, said, "This is Christmas in July."

On Tuesday, Speakes said Reagan was anxious to be "up and at 'em" as he regains strength and received get well wishes from friends and foes alike.

Meanwhile, Vice President George Bush said it was "business as usual" at the White House.

The vice president, along with Reagan's wife, Nancy, and White House Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan, are playing key roles in the drama of Reagan's recovery from an intestinal operation Saturday that doctors believe removed all cancer from his body but left him subject to possible recurrence.

Aides said Reagan did not appear to be brooding over his illness. In fact, one senior administration official who spoke on condition of anonymity said that during a visit with the president Tuesday, "I didn't bring it up; he didn't bring it up."

"The president is not one to dwell on anything of that type," Speakes said.

"I think you can say the president is beginning to question some of the restrictions that are on him at the moment," Speakes noted. "He's chomping at the bit. He's already talking about his schedule and return to work. So, I think the president is, in his own mind, ready to be up and at 'em."

Speakes said the president is still expected to be released from Bethesda Naval Hospital over the weekend or early next week. By that time, experts say, Reagan will be back on a normal diet, regaining

Patients testify on behalf of doctors

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Current and past patients of the father-son team of Odessa orthopedic surgeons testified in federal court here on Tuesday that the surgeons performed work ranging from "good enough" to procedures which made them feel "fantastic" and "super."

The surgeons, Dr. Edward T. Driscoll and his son, 40-year-old Stephen E. Driscoll, are seeking more than $900 million in damages in their joint suit against Medical Center Hospital in Odessa, the hospital's administration, insurance carriers handling workers' compensation cases and agents, and "rival" surgeons Dr. Thomas Meek, Dr. Phillip Zeeck and Dr. Ronald Manicom. These physicians, the Driscolls contend, libeled and slandered them by terming their surgical procedures as "incompetent," "horrible" and "unnecessary."

Further, the Driscolls contend the hospital staff conspired to "blacklist" them by referring to the Driscolls as being "knife happy" and "incompetent" and that insurance carriers and claim adjusters had called them "knife happy." The Driscolls claim there was a conspiracy to eliminate them from the competitive orthopedic-surgery market in Odessa.

The hospital's surgical committee had charged the Driscolls with such practices as using "unprofessional language and behavior" in the operating room; carrying out "superficial evaluations" which resulted in "early or unnecessary operative interventions;" use of excessive medication and "conflicts" with nurses and "unorthodox use of traditional treatment."

WHEN THE lawsuit was filed in January, the hospital ad hoc committee was preparing to hold hearings on barring the Driscolls from practicing at the hospital.

However, while the case is being litigated, U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton has ordered the Driscolls' professional rights not be violated.

Testifying on behalf of the Driscolls was 25-year-old Billy Oscar Duncan who was injured in an oil derrick mishap in 1982.

"I thought Dr. Driscoll was doing a good-enough job," he said, "and I didn't need a second opinion." He said his injured hand today is "just fine."

A cowboy, Tim Mackey, who suffered a fractured leg after a horse fell on him, said Dr. Stephen Driscoll had operated on his leg.

"The leg is getting stronger," he said. "I can walk somewhat now with a cane."

The cowboy entered the courtroom on crutches.

Mackey said he had consulted Zeeck, an orthopedic surgeon, who "told me that I would never cowboy again" and that the leg might have to be amputated if the infection did not clear up "so I could get along with my life." He said Zeeck told him he was "stupid" for doing cowboy-type work.

Keith Mansell, 32, who said he suffered lower-back injuries when he was loading pipe in 1983, said Driscoll removed two discs from his back. "It's better than it was."

ANOTHER DRISCOLL patient, 49-year-old operating engineer Bob Coonce who was injured in a fall from a crane he was operating, said he was satisfied with treatment by Dr. Stephen Driscoll. He said an

Manned Mars flight possible, experts say

WASHINGTON (AP) — It would take a major political decision, $30 billion and some fancy engineering to keep the crew from being dead on arrival, but the United States could send manned flights to Mars in two decades, say leading advocates of such a flight.

"Let's do it right" and invite the Russians to share the glory and the costs, says Sen. Spark Matsunaga, D-Hawaii, who wants to revive the spirit of cooperation that led to the Apollo-Soyuz space linkup during the bygone days of U.S.-Soviet detente.

Two Soviet cosmonauts who took part in that mission also think it might be a good idea to do something like it again.

All this talk about U.S.-Soviet space cooperation and trips to Mars was re-launched Tuesday at a 10th anniversary Apollo-Soyuz celebration sponsored by the Planetary Society and the American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics.

The Planetary Society and its president, astronomer-television star Carl Sagan, have been in the forefront of a movement to send a human to Mars by the year 2010, and argue that the best way to get there is with U.S.-Soviet cooperation.

Given the high cost of a Mars mission, its launching "is more likely if we throw (money) into the pot together," said Deke Slayton, one of the U.S. astronauts on the 1975 mission.

"Programs of that kind are expensive and in resolving the problems involved it would be useful to unite the efforts of a number of countries," said Valery Kubasov, one of Slayton's Soviet capsule-mates.

Harking back to that mission, former Soviet cosmonaut Alexei Leonov said, "When we were instructed to do this kind of work we did it perfectly."

Smiling broadly as he turned to Slayton, Thomas Stafford and Vance Brand, the aging U.S. veterans of the linkup, Leonov added, "If such a decision were to be taken we would not object at all to doing it with the same men participating."

With the decline of U.S.-Soviet relations in the 1980s, space cooperation has been abandoned, although there have been discussions about a project involving the U.S. space shuttle and a comparable Soviet craft.

Reviving the relationship with a Mars mission is "a decision at higher levels," said Leonov, now a Soviet major general.

Going only slightly farther, NASA Administrator James M. Beggs added, "given the enormous scope of such an effort, the

The United Way of Midland took the first step toward reaching its 1985 fund-raising goal of $2.12 million by kicking off its pilot campaign today.

The pilot campaign's goal is to raise about 30 percent of the total before the full campaign begins on Sept. 11, according to a United Way press release. Pilot Campaign Chairman Tom Wageman is emphasizing the preliminary campaign's value as "practice time" to give volunteers a running start on the fall campaign.

Ruling incites judicial attack

By KEN HERMAN
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — A Court of Criminal Appeals ruling that critics say erodes a defendant's right to a fair trial has sparked a series of colorful dissents from one of the appeals court's judges.

"Today we witness another startling valid legal reason why this court should have aborted, rather than to have given birth to, the monster child now known in our legal circles as 'Almanza the Terrible,'" Judge Marvin Teague wrote.

"Almanza the Terrible" is Teague's pet name for a February ruling in a Fort Worth case in which the Court of Criminal Appeals changed the ground rules concerning a judge's instructions to jurors.

The instructions, crucial in many cases, specifically tell jurors of what they can convict a defendant, and what they must find in order to convict.

Before Almanza, errors in those instructions could have led to automatic reversal of convictions. Now, Teague says, the instructions are close to appeal-proof. The difference is the appeals court now says the error must have been so "egregious" as to block a defendant's right to a fair trial.

Teague says the egregious test cannot be passed by a defendant. He compares the rule to the much-discussed "no-pass, no-play" rule that bars failing public school students from extracurricular activities.

"Perhaps this is the 'no-pass, penitentiary' rule of this court," he said in a related opinion.

Since the decision, hardly a week has gone by without the Almanza case affecting at least one case handed down by the Court of Criminal Appeals. And Teague — the lone dissenter — gets his shots in frequently.

"It is now permissible for trial courts to give to jurors pieces of what may appear to them to be a jigsaw puzzle, for them to figure out what they must find in order to convict a defendant or what they must find in order to acquit a defendant," he said in an April case.

The state should require, at least, near-perfection in a judge's instructions to jurors, according to Teague. Almanza sets a harmful, lesser standard, he said.

"No longer will it be required that the charge to the jury should resemble a gem that has been cut and polished by the hard edge of legal experience obtained from both within and without our criminal justice system. It will now be permissible to serve juroros with a flawed jewel," he said.

Almanza is Cipriano Ramon Almanza Jr., a Tarrant County man sentenced to 30 years in prison in the aggravated rape of a retarded woman in her home. The Fort Worth Court of Appeals, operating under the Court of Criminal Appeals old standard on errors in jury instructions, ordered a new trial. Prosecutors appealed, producing the Court of Criminal Appeals new standard.

The Almanza case now is back in the Fort Worth Court of Appeals, where judges must decide if the jury instruction error was "egregious."

"I don't really understand the ruling. In fact, most people don't," said Lee Ann Dauphinot, a Fort Worth lawyer who is handling Almanza's appeal. "We think it means now if there's any way a jury could have ignored the court's charge and done it right in spite of the court's charge, the conviction is going to be affirmed. I'm really not sure."

Ms. Dauphinot said an error in the jury instructions in the Almanza case could have allowed jurors to convict of him of aggravated rape while only actually finding he had committed rape. Aggravated rape carries a possible life sentence. The harshest punishment for rape is 20 years.

"We cannot anymore rely on the requirements that the trial judge properly instructed the jury. Now, basically, if they get close enough, that's enough to sustain a conviction. It's frightening," said Ms. Dauphinot.

And the Court of Criminal Appeals has given "absolutely no guidance" as to what type of error is "egregious," she added.

Judge Sam Houston Clinton, who wrote the majority opinion in Almanza, agreed the result will be fewer reversals of convictions. Is that good or bad?

"It depends on whether your ox is being gored. It will be an improvement in economy and efficiency (for the courts). Fewer reversals are always beneficial to the system. But the poor old defendant who remains convicted is not going to like it," he said in an interview.

"Once you have an error, that's not the end of it anymore," Clinton said of the new standard. "The reviewing court has to study the record in light of all relevant factors to see if it caused such harm as to deny the accused a fair and impartial trial."

There goes judicial economy, right out the window, said Teague.

"Say you have a case with a 5,000-page record. Somebody's going to have to read that whole 5,000-page record" to put the error in context, he said. "Before we had a very simple test. Now it's very, very complicated. It will make defense lawyers more money. It will make appeals court judges old before they're supposed to be."

Others may write charges

AUSTIN (AP) — Some Texas judges apparently let court reporters or others prepare the instructions that tell jurors what to look for in their deliberations, according to Court of Criminal Appeals Presiding Judge John Onion.

Writing in the Almanza case, Onion said some judges do not review the instructions before reading them to jurors. That can led to errors that force retrials.

"Too frequently the error was due to mistake, oversight and plain sloppiness in the preparation of the charge," Onion wrote.

"It appears that trial judges are allowing court reporters and others to draft the charges, and attempts are made to follow pattern jury instruction forms and old charges without striking inapplicable portions or trying to tailor the form to the allegations of the indictment in the case.

"There are often few or no objections to these charges, and trial judges are apparently reading the charge to the jury without observing the obvious mistakes therein. Trial judges should personally develop some expertise in the drafting of charges and supervise the preparation of he same.

"And when the trial judge reads the charge to the jury, it should not be the first time he has read the charge," said Onion.

Man recalls life as courier for Pancho Villa's rebels

By CHARLES STEWARD III

ALICE, Texas (AP) — Fidel Rul was 13 when he strolled into an encampment of Villistas — members of Pancho Villa's rebels — outside Mexico City to deliver clothes for his father, Jesus. From that day on, the Mexican Revolution would become more than just what he heard about at home.

He had just arrived at the camp when Federales under Victoriano Huerta launched a surprise attack, routing the confused Villistas. "My father didn't know what to do with me," said Rul. "He left me in the care of a man named Monterola. To tell the truth I cried. I was scared."

This would be the first of several times he would be separated from his father. "They kept moving me from one group to another," he called. "I couldn't do anything else. I had to follow orders.

"We would travel on horseback or on foot," he added. "When the horses were killed, I had to walk. I sure had a hard time then. How I survived, I don't know."

Food was "anything you could find," and water also was scarce. "The Federales would sometimes poison the water," he said.

The modern weaponry of the Federales and the way loyalties changed from day to day made survival that much harder. "Your friends of today could be your enemies tomorrow," he said. Of the then modern weapons, he remembers machine guns being especially devastating.

"I didn't know how to hide or keep from being hit. One time I lay among the dead until the fighting was over and the troops had left." Quick to learn the lessons of survival, he recalled others were incapable of learning.

"Some men were too brave and would run right into the gunfire. I would lie on the ground or get behind a tree."

Although "machismo" characterized Mexican culture, women fought alongside men.

Rul recalled one such woman known as "La Malanche," a blond-haired, blue-eyed beauty who could handle a gun as well — if not better than — most of the men.

"My goodness she was a brave woman," said Rul. "We thought she was foreigner, but she was Mexican. She taught many soldiers how to shoot."

Other fierce soldiers recalled by Rul included the "Ruales," the dreaded elite of Francisco Madero "who were so mean they could kill you smiling." Also, there were Felipe Angeles, an ally and adviser to Villa; a general referred to as "El Tejon" because of his ability to hide and who "was amazing with his accuracy" directing field artillery using only his eyes to sight in on targets; and "Los Dorados," Villa's bodyguards who could be identified by an emblem of an eagle sewn on the back of their shirts.

In time Rul became a courier for Villa, crossing enemy lines with messages from Villista leaders Jesus Centora, Inez Chavez Garcia, and Jose Alta, Miran. It was during his service as courier that he personally met Villa.

Due to his risky exploits as a courier, Rul was held in high esteem by other soldiers, but to him, it was no riskier than anything else. "I was too young," he said, "I didn't know the importance of what I was doing."

Messages were concealed in his shirt collars and cuffs and in his shoe soles. He also delivered messges between Villa and the Federales.

'Sick' teen suspected in girl's murder

Mother 'felt something like this would happen'

STATE

FORT WORTH (AP) — The anguished mother of a 16-year-old youth suspected of strangling 4-year-old Melody Ann Flores says the boy is sick and that she has tried for years to get him help.

"I kind of felt like something like this would happen," she said Tuesday as she and her husband nervously awaited a detention hearing for two of their sons.

The 16-year-old son is accused in the slaying of the neighbor girl, and police are seeking to charge him as an adult. Their 12-year-old son is being held in juvenile detention for questioning.

"There's something wrong with (the 16-year-old). He's sick. I've tried to get all the help I can," the mother said softly in a waiting room outside juvenile court.

"When he was a baby he had something in his head. I don't know if it was a spider. His head swelled up real big. After that, even when he was little, he was different. He's a sweet child in his way, but he does things."

His former school principal said the 16-year-old is mentally retarded and was so disruptive at a special education school that he was forced to drop out a year ago.

"(THE BOY) WAS a discipline problem in school, he was a failure, he wouldn't go to class," said Harold Shoemaker, principal at Kirkpatrick School of Occupations, part of the Fort Worth Independent School District. "It just got to the point where we couldn't meet his needs."

The mother said that her son was examined by a psychologist while in the special education program at Kirkpatrick.

"They said there was nothing wrong with him, but we knew there was," she said.

Shoemaker also said the 16-year-old had been examined by a psychologist, and "as far as I know he came up mentally retarded."

When neighbors and family began combing the East Rosedale neighborhood for Melody Ann Saturday evening, the 16-year-old's mother joined in the search. She said she didn't dream the trail would lead to her own home.

At her house, two doors away from the Flores home, Melody Ann had returned a pink-and-white playhouse she borrowed. And at her house, police believe, Melody Ann was killed and then stuffed in a garbage bag.

TUESDAY IT WAS the mother's task to tell her 6-year-old daughter that her playmate, Melody Ann, had been killed. Later, during the detention hearing, the 6-year-old sat on the knee of her 12-year-old brother, clutching a doll.

Fighting back feelings for Melody Ann and her sons, the mother sighed when asked if the 16-year-old could have killed Melody Ann.

"I don't know. I knew he would do mischievous things, but I never thought he would do something this bad," she said.

She asked him Monday night if he knew anything about what happened to the girl, and he blamed it on someone else — the same as he often does when he's accused of misdeeds typical of a teen-ager, she said.

"He told me, 'I wonder how something like that could happen,'" she said.

She did not hesitate in defending her 12-year-old son. He has had no emotional or mental problems, the mother said.

"He was not (involved)," she said. "No, he would have told us."

THE MOTHER SAID she left the 16-year-old alone when she went to wash clothes Saturday evening. The 12-year-old was at a friend's house three blocks away, she said.

In the detention hearing, the two brothers sat side by side. They did not have a lawyer present but were represented by a juvenile caseworker. Despite the difference in ages, the 16-year-old, at 5 feet, is barely taller than the 12-year-old.

Jo Ann Flores, Melody Ann's mother, said Tuesday that she hadn't known that the youth was as old as 16.

Ms. Flores said she didn't notice any emotional problems in the 16-year-old. She said the only behavior that stood out was his anger.

"He was just like all the other kids, playing around. He had a bad temper. That's just about it. I thought he was normal like all the other kids," she said.

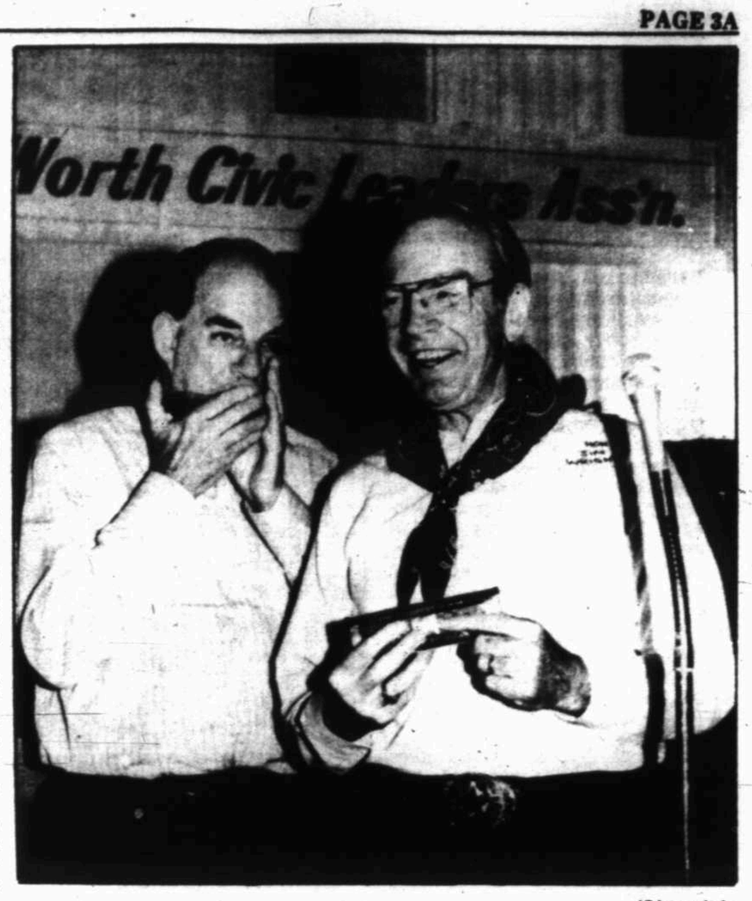

A neighborhood convenience store manager agreed. Lester Taylor of One Main Place said the 16-year-old stopped in his shop to buy cigarettes and play video games. Sometimes he left the cigarettes behind, he said.

In a drama that will have no happy ending for either family, the 16-year-old's mother is hoping her son finally will get the help she's wanted for him.

"I hope that if they find he is guilty of this, he will get the proper help he needs because I know for a fact he needs help bad," she said.

She hasn't talked to her neighbors.

"I can't. I don't know what to say," she said. "I can't find the words to say."

Sweetwater Foam Crafts fire puts 100 on unemployment

SWEETWATER (AP) — A city councilman said he has told the 35 people working for him in his private business to "go apply for unemployment" in the wake of a blaze that forced the evacuation of 100 people, destroyed half a city block and caused up to $1 million in damage.

Frankie SoRelle watched his business, Foam Crafts Inc., go up in smoke Tuesday night as the blaze, which started about 6 p.m. and was fueled by plastics and paint, swept through the three-building complex.

Police Chief Jim Kelley said about 100 people in a four-block radius of the warehouse-area business were evacuated and "we're going to keep them out until we are sure there won't be any further danger."

By 9 p.m. the fire was under control, but firefighters were forced to tear down a metal shop building attached to the main 61-year-old brick structure.

The cause of the fire is under investigation, assistant fire chief Marlon Williams said.

SoRelle, a Sweetwater city councilman, said he would not rule out arson.

He said he was the only one in the building at the time of the fire and was nearly overcome by smoke when he smelled something burning and opened the door from his office to the warehouse.

Foam Crafts manufactures decorative wall crafts, figurines and other plastic resin products as well as geodesic buildings. SoRelle estimated property damage at $1 million.

George Wright of San Antonio, owner of the neighboring B and W Toy Co., projected smoke and water damage to his building at $35,000.

California offshore-drilling moratorium pushed

By PEGGY ROBERSON
Washington Correspondent

"American Petroleum Institute believes the agreement...totally ignores the energy security of this nation and will jeopardize this country's ability to meet its energy needs in the next 15 years."

WASHINGTON — An Interior Department commitment to protect most of California's coastline from offshore oil development and drilling for the remainder of this century drew fire Tuesday from Texas Rep. Tom Loeffler, R-Hunt.

Loeffler said he believes energy policy should be designed to help all American citizens, not to appease a vocal minority of Californians.

The agreement between Interior Secretary Donald P. Hodel and the California congressional delegation came up while the Appropriations Committee was deciding on Interior's budget for the next fiscal year.

Before the meeting, Loeffler — a member of the committee — thought he could count enough votes to strip away the moratorium against exploration attached for the past four years to Interior's appropriation.

In exchange for dropping the moratoria, the Californians and Hodel decided to air their preliminary agreement. The pact cannot be made final until the California governor and legislature also agree.

Rep. Sala Burton, D-San Francisco, a chief sponsor of the moratorium, said, "The agreement, while not perfect, is an important milestone for our state. San Franciscans will not be looking at oil rigs off the Bay and will not have to be concerned with this question for another 15 years."

Loeffler, through a spokeswoman, said the "extra-curricular bargaining by Hodel" could hurt the entire outer-continental shelf exploration process.

Texas has raised no objections to offshore drilling and exploration, but is involved in a long-running feud over fair division of money from leases and of royalties of joint federal-state ocean lands.

Under the preliminary agreement between Hodel and the Californians, 150 of the 6,460 tracts contained in the current moratorium would be offered for leasing in accordance with environmental safeguards required by existing law. Of the remaining tracts, 3,610 would be protected until the year 2,000. They could be explored and developed, however, in the event of a national emergency.

A way to negotiate agreements on coastal drilling between the states and the federal government is spelled out in the Outer-Continental Shelf Lands Act and has worked pretty well, Loeffler said. The congressman, who reprents the Texas "oil patch," believes that by going outside the act, Hodel risks unraveling the entire process.

The American Petroleum Institute also reacted negatively to news of the agreement.

"API believes the agreement...totally ignores the energy security of this nation and will jeopardize this country's ability to meet its energy needs in the next 15 years.

"This agreement would preclude the environmentally safe development of oil from areas that government and industry surveys indicate are among America's most promising untapped resources."

The petroleum group said that while "a glut" of oil exists on today's market, "it will not last long and the long lead times — 8 to 10 years — to bring new oil and gas discoveries to the market can only mean increased dependence on unreliable foreign oil or supply shortages."

Pilgrims visit site where Atomic Age born

TRINITY SITE, N.M. (AP) — For some, it was a time to marvel at the memory of the event that gave birth to the Atomic Age. For others, it was a chance to pray that history would not repeat itself.

By twos and threes and fours, speaking softly, pilgrims followed a tawny dirt road to the place where the first atomic bomb was tested 40 years ago Tuesday.

Some laughed self-consciously as they posed for snapshots beside a black lava obelisk at Trinity Site National Historic Landmark.

They peered quietly through windows in the corrugated metal roof of a low 20-by-60-foot shed that covers part of Ground Zero — where the bomb exploded at dawn on July 16, 1945. The exact time was 5:29:45 a.m. Mountain War Time.

Through the windows, they could see bare earth and bits of green glass called trinitite that were formed when the bomb melted the desert sand.

Buses took the visitors two miles to the small, stone ranch house where scientists from Los Alamos assembled the bomb, known as "The Thing" or "The Gadget."

Trinity Site sits just below the center of New Mexico, about 100 miles south of Albuquerque in a stretch of desert the Spanish conquistadores called "Jornado del Muerto" — Journey of Death.

When the bomb exploded atop the 100-foot tower that day 40 years ago, flashes like sheet lightning lit the sky more than 150 miles away.

On the bomb's anniversary, the temperature hung around 88 degrees and a light wind blew — a cool day in the desert.

The blue-shadowed Oscura Mountains — the Dark Range — embraced the site on the south and east and cumulus clouds towered above them like cotton in the blue sky.

Tyrene Lozano, 8, from Socorro, N.M., plays on the replica of the atom bomb that was dropped on Hiroshima 40 years ago. The bomb was on display at Trinity site where the first nuclear blast occurred.

The visitors were drawn by curiosity and awe.

Father Layton Zimmer, pastor of St. Alden's Episcopal Parish in Albuquerque, led a group of about two dozen in a prayer for peace. They drew close together about 50 feet from the monument.

A stocky man with a graying beard, Zimmer wore a white robe over his clerical collar and black trousers. A broad-brimmed straw planter's hat shielded him from the sun. His prayer was from the Episcopal Communion Service.

"I represent the Episcopal Peace Fellowship of the Rio Grande Diocese," he said. "But this is an ecumenical group here — Catholics, Jews, Quakers and other Protestants.

"We gather here every time the site is open — always the first Saturday in October. We never have any trouble. The Army welcomes us. The Army prays for peace, too."

Another member of the group, Sidney Steinberg of Albuquerque, said he and his wife, Jeanne, are "just hoping for peace in the world — and who isn't?"

Dr. Vincent DiZinno of Rio Rancho, N.M., had not come to pray.

He had closed his dentistry office and brought his wife to marvel at what happened here.

"I get excited by this," said DiZinno, a small, wiry, fast-talking man with a shock of gray hair. "I guess you could tell it by my gait as I got near. My wife had to hold my hand to keep up.

"I'm happy that I could be in it today. It was an event that changed the world."

Mothers and fathers tried to explain the meaning of the stark site.

"Try to remember this," a man said to a toddler. "A big thing happened here. It was when I was about your size."

A spokesman at the White Sands Missile Range said about 1,000 people visited Trinity Site on Tuesday, although there were perhaps no more than 500 people on the site at any one time during the five hours it was open.

Asked whether the site was a fitting place to pray for peace, Zimmer said, "Of course. This was a great event, a great breakthrough. And the fact that we misused it and threaten to misuse it again does not lessen the fact that we should gather in respect and even fear."

Scientists recall role in developing bomb

OAK RIDGE, Tenn. (AP) — In Oak Ridge, a city born in 1943 to help develop the atomic bomb, scientists remember their work as a race against Nazi Germany's accelerating technology.

The 40th anniversary of the "Trinity" plutonium bomb test in New Mexico was not officially observed Tuesday in Oak Ridge, known as the "Atomic City."

But some retired scientists in the community spent part of the day quietly recalling their part in America's development of the atom bomb before it was unleashed on the Japanese at Nagasaki and Hiroshima in 1945.

Oak Ridge, constructed secretly during the country's Manhattan Project in the early 1940s, manufactured plutonium and also supplied uranium for the atomic bomb "Little Boy" that was dropped on Hiroshima on Aug. 6, 1945.

"I guess people were pleased to hear about it (the Hiroshima bombing). You must remember, there was was a war on. People were getting killed," said Alvin Weinberg, a Manhattan Project scientist at the Oak Ridge National Laboratory.

"The anniversary causes me to think once more about nuclear weapons," Weinberg said. "The world is in a dangerous state, and we have to devise some way to live."

Weinberg, now retired as director of ORNL, says he doesn't regret dedicating a large part of his scientific career to the Manhattan Project which led to production of atomic weapons.

"I have some mixed emotions. But we didn't have a choice at the time. We had to go through with it," he said. "We thought Hitler was making progress on the same project. Imagine what the world would be like if Hitler had been the first one to drop the bomb."

Arthur Snell, a Weinberg associate who retired in nearby Kingston, looked back with regret on the Hiroshima bombing but not on the nuclear research that led to it.

"I was a little shocked at the immediate, direct use of the bomb because I thought the correct thing to do was to have a demonstration on an isolated spot," said Snell, a physicist.

Both Snell and Weinberg say they were among the project scientists who advocated demonstrating the bomb to Japan before using it.

Ed Westcott, a government photographer in Oak Ridge, knew almost nothing of the Manhattan Project when he was sent to Washington two days after the plutonium bomb was exploded.

Westcott said he had been sent to the nation's capital to take photos of Gen. Leslie Groves of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers for official news releases about the bomb research.

"I started photographing him at his desk. The phone rang and I kept photographing him," Westcott said. As he shot, Westcott said Groves drew circles and crosses on his pad.

Westcott, now retired and living in Oak Ridge, later learned that Groves was describing the nuclear test to the Secretary of the Army, he said.

"He had this whole thing drawn right out in front of me, but I still didn't know what he was doing," Westcott said.

SUIT

agent for an insurance carrier had termed the Driscolls "a little knife happy."

A truck driver, Russell Peek, said he has been "more than satisfied" with treatment by Dr. Stephen Driscoll.

"I don't think I would be walking without his treatment," he said.

Yet another patient, Merle R. Dunn, 36, said he was doing "great, super" and was "getting around a lot easier" after Dr. Edward Driscoll performed surgery on him. Afterward, however, he said he "had a sneezing attack, and I messed up my back again." After additional surgery to repair a ruptured disc, Dunn said he was feeling "fantastic."

Andrews mechanic Raymond Douglas, 57, was injured in 1983 while he was repairing a flat tire. "I just got worse and worse; I couldn't walk without crutches."

"IT'S IMPROVED a whole lot (following surgery by Dr. Stephen Driscoll)." I can walk without crutches," Douglas said. "I wouldn't want no other doctor; I just think he's the greatest."

Earlier in his treatment, Duncan said he had consulted Meek, a neurosurgeon, and remarked that he would seek a second opinion.

"'Oh, you have a damned lawyer working on this case?'" he said Meek responded. "'Drop the damned lawyer and come back and I'll help you. Otherwise, I'll not do a damned thing for you.'"

Antonio Coria of Pecos said he initially was treated by Zeeck after he injured his back and ankle.

"Before surgery, I only had pain. After surgery," he said, "I couldn't even walk without falling down." But after surgery by the Driscolls, Coria said he is doing much better.

In his opening comment to the jury, Peter Fulton, attorney for the Driscolls, said the senior Driscoll had "developed a very successful orthopedic practice" in Midland from 1949 to 1973, had been chief of staff at Midland Memorial Hospital and Parkview Hospital, and practiced elsewhere before he opened a practice in Odessa in 1982. The younger Driscoll graduated from the Texas Tech University Medical School in 1976 and later joined his father's practice.

"THEY HAVE NOT treated them (patients) as second- or third-class citizens," Fulton said. He said the Driscolls "shook the foundation" of insurance carriers in the carriers' attempt to control treatment.

He alleged the Driscolls' surgical records were "unfairly scrutinized" by the hospital's committee. The Driscolls had been on provisional probation at the hospital and were applying for regular staff privileges.

"I imagine there would be 'clunkers' in my files," Fulton said. "No one is 100 percent perfect."

The hospital's attorney, Jim O'Leary, told the jurors "We are not conspirators. We are not racketeers."

"They (physicians) are very similar to lawyers working in a courthouse," he said, and treat those "who are ill or injured."

The Driscolls had a relatively high number of "clunkers" and that they allegedly did superficial diagnoses, performed excessive surgery, gave inappropriate surgical procedures, ordered excessive medication and engaged in disruptive conduct.

El Paso lawyer Charles Jones, attorney for Meek and Zeeck, noted that hospitals need bylaws and regulatory means, such as committees of physicians, to control and maintain quality.

"We take for granted that there will be good hospitals and competent doctors," he said.

REAGAN

some of the weight he has lost. He will need to regain his strength, however.

In the meantime, Bush told reporters, "Life goes on. Business as usual. I think the best thing I can do is just try to be helpful and do my job."

Speakes said Bush "will stand in when it's appropriate" while the president is convalescing.

The vice president substituted for Reagan today at a breakfast with Republican members of the Senate Finance Committee and on Thursday at a luncheon with the panel's Democratic members. The committee is considering Reagan's tax simplification plan.

The senior official said Bush "is trying to be as helpful as he can to the president. He's asking 'Do you want me to do things?' or 'Tell me what you need.'"

Asked if more decisions were being made at the staff level than usual, Speakes said, "Perhaps a few more, but not that many."

Of Regan's role, the spokesman said, "I think Don would be the first one to tell you he's not running the country; the president is."

Bush said Regan is "doing a darn good job running the White House. That's his job. He is chief of staff. He's got his hands full but he's doing a good job."

The senior administration official said the president was not second-guessing his staff's decisions during his absence.

"He figures we're trained for it, we're supposedly knowledgeable people. We're supposed to know what we're doing and he's letting us do what we're supposed to be doing," the official said.

The official said the president's aides and his wife were encouraging him to follow the doctors' orders and "be quiet and get a rest." Reagan is expected to make his first formal appearance at the White House next wek upon the arrival of Chineses President Li Xiannian for a state visit.

Asked why he had not visited the president, Bush said, "I want to be a little considerate of his feelings, his family's feelings and the doctors' feelings. They think that the less crowding in the better, the more chance he has to rest, relax and recover, the better."

Mrs. Reagan walked with her husband in a hospital corridor on Tuesday and said he "looked well," her press secretary, Jennefer Hirshberg, reported.

Ms. Hirshberg said the president's wife was tired and had not been sleeping well but was keeping to her schedule "because he wants her to." She planned an abbreviated trip today to the aircraft carrier USS America to speak on drug abuse.

Nancy Reagan tours carrier

ABOARD THE USS AMERICA (AP) — First lady Nancy Reagan, in an abbreviated tour of this giant aircraft carrier as part of her anti-drug campaign, today gave the ship's officers and crew a message from her hospitalized husband.

"When I kissed the commander-in-chief goodbye,...he said, 'Nancy, will you tell them how proud I am of them, how often I think about them? And tell them there are no Americans I have greater respect or affection for than those fellas out there defending us.'"

Mrs. Reagan had originally planned to stay the night on the carrier to observe the Navy's drug and alcohol abuse efforts, but cut the visit to about eight hours after President Reagan underwent cancer surgery Saturday at the Bethesda Naval Hospital.

Indeed, said spokeswoman Jennefer Hirshberg, the first lady was carrying through with the trip "because he wants her to."

Ms. Hirshberg said Mrs. Reagan was drained by the president's ordeal, had been sleeping fitfully and was tired.

Mrs. Reagan, accompanied by her brother, Dr. Richard Davis, and Navy Secretary John Lehman, flew by helicopter to the 1,047-foot carrier, which has a crew of 5,000 and is at sea about 50 miles off Norfolk, Va.

Mrs. Reagan was also eating with the crew and observing flight operations.

Mrs. Reagan has received praise for her grace and handling of the president's illness.

White House Chief of Staff Donald Regan quoted the president as saying his wife had been a "a real trouper" throughout the medical ordeal, which began Friday when Reagan went to the hospital for a routine procedure to remove a polyp. He returned for more surgery to eliminate a larger polyp Saturday.

On learning Monday that the growth was cancerous, "she drew a deep breath and maintained her composure" as she went into the president's room and he was told the news, Regan said.

Mrs. Reagan, who has been spending much of her time at the president's bedside in nearby Maryland, filled in for her husband at a diplomatic reception at the White House Monday night.

She took time out Tuesday to call and congratulate television actor Stacy Keach for his frank testimony on Capitol Hill.

Fed's Volcker defends unchanged monetary policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. economy is plagued with "gross imbalances" that cannot by rectified by changes in monetary policy alone, Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul A. Volcker told Congress today.

Volcker, in testimony prepared for the House Banking Committee, said conflicting economic crosscurrents at this time make any strong action designed to bolster the economy inappropriate.

He spoke in defense of the board's decision to leave monetary policy intact for the time being, despite a sluggish economy and a rapidly growing money supply that could threaten to drive up inflation.

"As things now stand, some policy actions that might seem, on their face, to contribute toward easing one problem could aggravate others," Volcker said.

There had been some speculation that the board might act to pave the way for lower interest rates in an effort to bolster the lethargic economy. But it announced Tuesday it would hold to the same neutral course it has followed most of the year.

Volcker, citing the nation's enormous trade and budget deficits, told the panel in his mid-year assessment of the nation's economy: "We are dealing with a situation marked by gross imbalances that can neither be sustained indefinitely nor dealt with by monetary policy alone."

He said the recent, unexpected growth in the nation's money supply during the past few months likely will taper off on its own — although he conceded that "excessive growth of money, sustained over time, will foster inflation."

The nation's basic money supply, called M1, surged far above the board's targets in May and June.

"Against the background of a high dollar, the sluggishness of manufacturing output and relatively well-contained price pressures, quick and strong action to curtail the recent burst in M1 has not been appropriate," Volcker said.

The board announced on Tuesday it was changing its accounting methods and slightly increasing its money-growth targets — instead of taking direct action — to accommodate the money-supply surge.

In a meeting with reporters on Tuesday, Volcker declined to predict the future course of interest rates, but indicated the board was sticking to the basic course it has followed this year.

Volcker said the recent surge in the M1, which consists of checking deposits and currency, may be "extremely temporary."

resources required and its benefits to all mankind, it is tempting to say outright that it should not be done unilaterally."

Alone or with the Soviets, it would be a major technical achievement, according to the experts.

A spacecraft for six to 10 astronauts, their fuel, food and equipment would be too heavy to escape Earth's gravity and would have to be built in space with equipment ferried by as many as 20 shuttle missions.

NASA planner John Niehoff, who said the project would cost about $30 billion, described several possible flight scenarios, involving way-stations orbiting Mars, special landers like those used on moon missions and various routes using the gravitational forces of Venus or the sun to help propel the spacecraft homeward.

Shields against cosmic rays would be needed. To combat solar flares emitting radiation that would kill in minutes, the spacecraft would require a revolutionary detector and a water-jacketed shelter the crewmen would dive into if a flare approached, said NASA biomedical expert John Billingham.

Engineers might also have to design a spinning spacecraft, shaped like a barbell, to create gravity of perhaps one-third the Earth's power, to avoid longterm weightlessness that has sickened many astronauts, even on short trips.

Cancer shouldn't affect president's lifestyle

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's cancer should have practically no long-term effect on the way he functions as head of state or even on his favorite hobby, horseback riding.

The 74-year-old president's doctors and other experts in the field agree that unless Reagan has a recurrence of his disease, which they say is possible but not likely, the worst residual effect of his surgery will be the nuisance of frequent medical tests to check for signs of cancer spread.

By the time Reagan leaves Bethesda Naval Hospital this weekend or early next week, they say, he will have lost several pounds but will be eating a normal diet again and will regain his strength during the course of the next few weeks.

Without a hamburger or his favorite macaroni and cheese, his spokesman said Tuesday, the president could be expected to lose "a few pounds," but he wouldn't disclose Reagan's weight.

Unless future tests turn up another tumor, which could require further surgery, Reagan can expect to return within a few months to the life he loves, riding horses, cutting brush at his California ranch and tending to the affairs of state as he did before he entered the hospital.

Although tentative plans for Reagan to attend a Republican fundraiser in Richmond, Va., and the "Frontier Days" rodeo in Cheyenne, Wyo., later in the month had to be scratched, the president's aides expect him to make his first formal public appearance next week for the state visit of Chinese President Li Xiannian.

Reagan's talks with the 78-year-old Li may be curtailed somewhat and held in the residential quarters of the White House to save both men the walk to the West Wing offices. But Reagan is expected to spend much of the day and evening participating in the formal ceremonies and black-tie dinner customarily accorded a visiting head of state.

Reagan has not eaten since last Wednesday, when he began a fast in preparation for the intestinal examination that led to the discovery of his tumor.

The subsequent removal of a two-foot section of his colon left him temporarily without bowel function, and he has been fed intravenously since the surgery. But presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said Tuesday there were signs Reagan's normal functions were beginning to return.

He was expected to begin a liquid diet soon and progress to bland foods, then regular solid food before he is discharged from the hospital.

Although his abdomen hurts somewhat when he gets up to walk or sits in a chair, that should disappear during the normal healing process.

Life returns to normal in Cedar Rapids

Cedar Rapids fire and safety officials plan strategy for putting out the fire which produced a toxic cloud of hydrogen chloride at an old sewage treatment plant in the Iowa town Tuesday.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa (AP) — The air was pure and life returned to normal today in Iowa's second largest city a day after a fire spewed toxic fumes, forcing up to 10,000 people from their homes in the largest evacuation in state history.

"Everything's open again except we still got a couple barricades up down in the area of the old sewage plant, but that's basically to keep spectators out of the area," police Capt. Ron Hansen said Tuesday as residents began returning home.

The spectators were people curious to see the abandoned Cedar Rapids Water Pollution Control plant, where a fire smoldered for 21 hours, fueling the toxic gas fumes that hung over the city.

The few spectators aside, most people simply wanted to get home Tuesday and put the previous night and day behind them.

"I'm glad to be going home. It was OK here but I hope we don't have to come back," Barbara Lacy of Cedar Rapids said Tuesday as she and her daughter hurried out of a shelter at Taft Junior High School towards their car.

City officials called an end to the evacuation about noon Tuesday as a black cloud of fumes dissipated.

Between 5,000 and 10,000 people were evacuated, said police Capt. Howard Gardner. About 1,000 of those were sheltered by the Red Cross in Linn-Mar High School and Taft Junior High.

Area hospitals treated and released 56 people complaining of tearing eyes and scratchy throats but no serious injuries were reported.

The cloud of foul-smelling, thick, black smoke contained hydrochloric acid, an eye and respiratory irritant.

The fire began when a worker touched a dome made of polyvinyl chloride with a torch during demolition of the plant. The fire was quickly controlled, but water sprayed on burning material apparently created the toxic fumes.

During the next 16 hours, the cloud drifted into southwest sections of the city and then into the nearby village of Ely, the Johnson County town of Solon, and the Lake MacBride area of Johnson County, setting off further evacuations.

Mexican protests hurting Arizona businesses

DOUGLAS, Ariz. (AP) — Merchants in this southeastern Arizona community say their businesses are being hurt by a continuing protest which has blocked vehicle traffic across the U.S.-Mexican border.

The sit-down protest, which has not affected pedestrian traffic, began Friday night on the Agua Prieta, Sonora, side of the border and is related to recent elections in Mexico.

A similar sit-down protest blocking the crossing between Naco, Ariz., and Naco, Sonora, was broken up Tuesday when about 25 people — said by a Mexican official to have been residents tired of the protest — scuffled with about the same number of demonstrators.

In Douglas, the chamber of commerce on Tuesday issued a statement saying its members were sympathetic towards the protesters but that they wished the sit-in was being staged away from the border.

The chamber's statement said surveyed merchants reported trade down by up to 35 percent since the protest began.

"For the past few months business has been sluggish due to the Peso devaluation, but since the sit-in began Friday, business has been really tough," said Frank Ruiz, manager of a chain discount store.

Ruiz estimated that business at his store, which is not within easy walking distance of the border, was down 10-15 percent since the protest began.

Ernie Alvarado, manager of a grocery store closer to the international line, said his store's business was off 30-35 percent. If the vehicle blockade continued much longer, his store would have to cut employees' hours, he said.

The protests were staged by supporters of Mexican's chief opposition party, the Partido Accion Nacional.

PAN leaders have alleged irregularities in elections held July 7 and won by the ruling Partido Revolutionario Institucional, or PRI.

Harold Mims, senior U.S. Border Patrol agent in Douglas, said the Naco blockade "was broken up by people from the Mexican side wearing civilian clothes."

Another U.S. official, who declined to be identified, said the confrontation began at about 6 a.m. Tuesday.

"There was some scuffling, people pushing people, but I couldn't really see if there were blows."

Teens' computer scam compared to 'War Games'

SOUTH PLAINFIELD, N.J. (AP) — Seven teen-agers who used home computers to commit credit fraud, cheat on long-distance phone bills and learn access codes for Pentagon generals are the tip of a scam "like 'War Games,' only it's real life," a prosecutor says.

"I'm sure they think they're having a good time, putting it over on the big corporations," said Middlesex County Prosecutor Alan Rockoff on Tuesday. "They get that Robin Hood syndrome...They're common little thieves and they're going to be treated as common little thieves."

At least 500 people nationwide may have used the "electronic bulletin boards" in which the youths listed telephone numbers of Pentagon brass and information on making free telephone calls, fake credit card purchases and explosives, Rockoff said.

The seven used the nicknames Beowulf, Store Manager, Vampire, N.J. Hack Shack, Treasure Chest, Private Sector and Red Barchetta, Rockoff said.

One youth was arrested in June after postal authorities reported that a Connecticut resident noticed an unauthorized purchase on a credit card and that someone apparently had been using a post office box under a fictitious name for credit card fraud, Rockoff said.

Another youth was arrested Tuesday and the rest were expected to be rounded up today on violations of a 4-month-old state law making it illegal to gain access to a computer system without authorization, he said.

The youths are charged in arrest warrants with juvenile delinquency in connection with theft, computer fraud and conspiracy, and their computers and software have been seized, the prosecutor said.

"We think we have the tip of the iceberg," Rockoff said, adding that investigators would analyze computer modems, floppy disks and computer memories to learn whether other people had access to information the youths shared.

The youths had telephone numbers for private work lines in the Defense Department, for companies handling financial and medical records, and a computer system belonging to TRW Inc., a defense contractor, he said.

"It's like 'War Games,' only it's real life. It's happening today," Rockoff said, referring to the popular movie about a youth who breaks into computers that affect national security operations.

"They got into a defense command computer program," he said. "In that defense command screen, there were direct lines into the supervisors of sensitive sections of the armed forces."

Authorities do not know if the youths used any of the telephone numbers, said police Detective George Green. Authorities declined to reveal the names and ages of the youths, but said they all lived in northern New Jersey.

The youths shared information about getting credit card numbers and using them to order equipment like stereos and radar detectors from two Stamford, Conn.-based companies that take orders via computer, Rockoff said.

They had the goods sent to post office boxes, which were closed soon after the deliveries, he said.

The seven also made long-distance phone calls and had them billed to other numbers, Rockoff said.

"They were changing the positions of satellites up in the blue heavens" to make overseas calls, he said, adding that in one instance they disrupted telephone communications on two continents by reprogramming a satellite.

East Germany replaces land mines with traps

By MARK HEINRICH

WEIMARSCHMIEDEN, West Germany (AP) — East Germany is pulling up deadly land mines from its border with the West, but it has installed sophisticated traps that still can foil all but the luckiest escapees.

The mine-clearing follows the dismantling last year of "automatic death" shrapnel-firing devices mounted on the fences nearest to Western territory. The shrapnel guns were triggered by vibrations or trip wires.

The two-part program began in late 1983 as part of an effort to improve relations with West Germany. The aim was to cut down on the number of fatalities among people trying to flee.

But the East Germans also have been installing an extra steel fence three miles inside East Germany. It is equipped with sophisticated bugging devices to alert sentries to escape bids.

Also still lining the 840-mile border are electrified fences, watchtowers, trenches and troop bunkers.

Fewer than 200 East Germans escaped across the border to the West last year — a fraction of the thousands who fled annually in the 1960s. In the last 25 years, 184 people are known to have died while trying to escape, according to a Western monitoring group.

An Associated Press reporter recently accompanied officers of a West German border patrol along a serpentine stretch of rural frontier near the village of Weimarschmieden, in southeastern West Germany about 85 miles northeast of Frankfurt.

The land mines are being taken up by orange-helmeted work brigades. The operation is expected to be completed next year.

"There has been a humanization of the border, in that the chances of death or injury to escapees have diminished," said Hilmar Dinglreiter, deputy chief of West German border police in Bavaria state.

"But the chances of an escape attempt failing are just as high as before," he added in an interview.

A West German Interior Ministry official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said, "Escapes have become rarer as border installations have been perfected, but as long as East Germans have their freedom of movement unnaturally restricted, escape attempts will continue."

The "Iron Curtain" descended across Germany in the late 1940s after the country was partitioned into Soviet and Western zones by the victorious World War II Allies.

East Germany was formed out of the Soviet zone, and the Communist government there started lining the border with physical barriers in the early 1950s to stop a flow of illegal emigration.

Looking into East Germany from Bavarian monitoring points near Weimarschmieden, a three-mile zone of steel fences and watchtowers interrupts a panorama of rolling farmland dotted with villages distinguished by Gothic church spires.

Special permits are needed to live or travel between towns in this zone.

Beirut calm under Syrian security plan

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A Syrian-backed security plan kept west Beirut calm today, but Syrian soldiers intervened in the eastern Bekaa Valley and the northern port of Tripoli to halt fighting between Moslem factions.

The Syrian-sponsored plan to bring order to the Moslem sector of the Lebanese capital and the airport entered its second day today.

With some 25,000 soldiers in eastern and northern Lebanon under an Arab League peacekeeping mandate, Syria is the main power broker in Lebanon. This is Syria's first major effort to calm hostilities in Lebanon since the withdrawal of most Israeli forces last month.

Beirut newspapers and Syria's government-controlled press proclaimed the first day of the Beirut security plan a success and called in editorials for new Moslem-Christian talks on political reforms to bring a final end to the civil war.

Police said traditional hostilities along the Green Line that bisects Beirut into Christian and Moslem halves had "remarkably decreased" since the start of the west Beirut security plan.

In the Bekaa Valley, Syrian army units intervened late Tuesday to halt a series of abductions in and around the town of Brital that threatened to lead to a confrontation between Palestinian guerrillas and the Shiite Amal militia.

The abductions were touched off by the discovery in a field outside Brital of the bullet-riddled body of a Palestinian allegedly kidnapped by Amal militiamen last Saturday.

Palestinians then abducted 11 Amal militiamen and the Shiites captured five Palestinians in retaliation, police said.

The Syrians secured the release of all 16 hostages and disbanded the hastily deployed Shiite and Palestinian military reinforcements around Brital, which is 35 miles east of Beirut and seven miles west of the Syrian border.

Amal attacked Palestinian refugee camps in Beirut on May.

An excavator sifts through the rubble of a demolished building Tuesday searching for more bodies feared buried after a suicide bomber's car stuffed with explosives blew up near the village of Kfar Tibnit, in Israeli-controlled south Lebanon Monday.

Ethiopian Jews protest forced conversions

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Hundreds of Ethiopian Jews who came here in a clandestine airlift blocked roads, marched and held an airport sit-in in a nationwide wave of protests against forced conversion rituals.

Immigration officials said Tuesday that Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir would meet with the Ethiopians, who objected to the demand by Israeli rabbis that they immerse themselves in a ritual bath in order to be considered Jews.

Most demonstrations broke up with the prime minister's offer. But about 30 people vowed to continue their protest today in a march from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem.

The protests began Tuesday morning, as about 700 Ethiopians set out from five immigration centers in northern Israel, heading toward Ben-Gurion International Airport outside Tel Aviv.

Dozens of marchers dropped out along the way, succumbing to hunger and heat, Israel radio reported. But others continued for 10 hours in summer heat.

"I'm willing to die rather than convert," said Uri Mashala, one of the protest organizers.

The marchers — young men with backpacks, women carrying babies, elderly men leaning on walking sticks — consider themselves direct descendents of the Biblical tribe of Dan, and have practiced Old Testament laws for thousands of years.

Two groups of marchers blocked two main highways in northern Israel — one leading out of the port city of Haifa and the other outside the town of Carmiel — and were forcibly removed by police, the radio said.

One demonstrator threw a stone, smashing a car windshield and injuring its driver, the radio reported.

In the southern town of Kiryat Gat, some 500 Ethiopians demonstrated and tried to storm the rabbinate building. Police held back the angry crowd which chanted: "We are Jews to all intents and purposes."

Israel launched a secret operation in 1984 to fly at least 10,000 Ethiopians from Sudan, after they walked for weeks from their homes in the famine-stricken areas their country.

Peres said he wanted to meet with Israel's chief rabbis to hear their explanation of the immersion rite and "to see how we can prevent additional suffering" for the Ethiopian immigrants.

The premier told reporters on a tour of farm communities in northern Israel that the rabbis had already ruled that "there's no doubt about the Jewishness" of the Ethiopians, who have been outside the mainstream of Judaism for 3,000 years.

The Ethiopians held a three-day protest strike earlier this week, refusing to attend Hebrew classes at immigration centers.

Three blacks die in rioting across South Africa

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Three blacks were killed in widespread rioting across the country, police said today. Students in the black township of Soweto stoned a bus carrying 15 German and American tourists, but none was reported hurt.

The police divisional commissioner, Brig. Jan Coetzee, said the bus was stoned by a crowd of about 100 girls and boys dressed in school uniforms.

"Three windows were damaged but, as far as we know, nobody was injured. Police escorted the bus out of Soweto," Coetzee said.

The government and at least one private company run tours of Soweto, the segregated bungalow city of 1.5 million near Johannesburg. The government tours focus on day-care centers and clinics built by South Africa's white-minority government, but also include drives through impoverished areas.

Soweto was the flashpoint of 1976 black student riots that lasted nearly a year and took at least 600 lives.

Witnesses said police also fired tear gas inside a courtroom in Soweto today and whipped students gathered outside of it. The outbreaks of violence were the worst in recent weeks of increasing unrest in black townships throughout the country.

After police and soldiers on horseback broke up crowds of blacks at the Soweto court, blacks marched to a Roman Catholic Church about three miles away. There, witnesses said, riot police again fired tear gas and broke up the noontime meeting before it could begin.

Youths then gathered on nearby streets and stoned passing cars. Five buses were stoned and several others were hijacked by young blacks, the bus company serving Soweto said. Bus service into the township was halted, and police set up roadblocks at some intersections.

Soweto Mayor Edward Kunene's house was attacked and burned down by a mob, a reporter said. The attack occurred at about the same time as the clash at the courthouse, where dozens of defendants were appearing on charges of demonstrating illegally outside Kunene's house on Saturday.

In Soweto, unrest began as nearly 1,000 youths gathered outside Protea magistrate's court, where more than 100 people were to appear on charges of meeting illegally over the weekend to protest proposed rent increases. Some youths entered the court and sang freedom songs.

Witnesses who spoke on condition they not be identified, said police fired tear gas in the court to clear it. Outside, police on horseback charged into the crowd, swinging long whips, they said.

The witnesses reported an undetermined number of injuries from the whippings, and said that police also arrested some people.

Convicted auto thief flees police in stolen car

AMARILLO (AP) — A convicted auto thief who bolted from a Dallas courtroom before he could be sentenced has eluded authorities a second time by leaping from a window and driving away in a car, officials said.

Harry Eugene Harrison, who has been sought by police since running from the Dallas County Government Center to a waiting bus last week, jumped out a second-story window Tuesday, leaped into a car and drove away as two officers looked on.

"He never was in custody," said police officer Eddie Duncan. "The officers went to talk to him and asked him for some identification. He told them he had it in his apartment and he'd get it. They followed him upstairs and when they got inside he jumped out the window, got in a car and drove off."

Duncan said Harrison, of Wichita Falls, was last seen Tuesday traveling east on Interstate 40 toward Oklahoma in a yellow car reported stolen shortly after Duncan jumped out the window.

Man held for mischief

PANHANDLE (AP) — An anti-nuclear activist has been charged with trespassing and criminal mischief after allegedly dismantling railroad tracks leading into a nuclear-weapon finishing plant, police said.

Richard L. Miller, 26, of Des Moines, Iowa, was in the Carson County jail Tuesday night in lieu of $11,000 in bonds after police said he pulled up a rail from the Santa Fe Railroad spur leading to the Pantex plant.

The plant, about 17 miles northeast of Amarillo, is the final assembly point for the nation's nuclear weapons.

Bearing a banner that proclaimed "Pantex Equals Auschwitz; Stop The Train," Miller was arrested at about 1 a.m. Tuesday near the U.S. Department of Energy plant.

Cocaine load seized

EL PASO (AP) — An El Paso man was in an Otero County, N.M., jail today after being charged with transporting the largest load of cocaine ever seized in an automobile in that state, authorities said.

More than 267 pounds of cocaine worth an estimated $40 to $50 million was seized Saturday night at a U.S. Border Patrol checkpoint about 20 miles south of Alamogordo, N.M., police said.

Henry Harrison Flores, 19, was arrested and jailed in lieu of $500,000 bond, authorities said.

Larry Richardson, El Paso Border Patrol chief, said Flores' truck was stopped by New Mexico state police conducting a routine driver's license check.

Officers became suspicious when they noticed the butane gas tank in the bed of the truck was freshly painted and looked like it had been altered, Richardson said.

Richardson said the butane tank was blow-torched opened and the cocaine was discovered inside.

Birthing centers close

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A national cutback in malpractice insurance for certified nurse midwives has forced the closure of three birthing centers and left dozens of pregnant women scrambling for places to have their babies, officials say.

The three publicly funded clinics are located in Cameron and Willacy counties where one in nine children is delivered by a certified nurse midwife, the Dallas Times Herald reported today.

Baez too 'offensive' for textbooks, woman says

AUSTIN (AP) — Singer Joan Baez does not belong in Texas public school textbooks because she offends "people with traditional values," says a Mesquite woman who also wants to make sure the books do not glorify the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

The complaints about King and Baez came Tuesday as the State Textbook Committee continued its hearings on proposed textbooks. The hearings end today. Committee members then go to work on their recommendation to the State Board of Education, which will pick $92.9 million worth of books in August.

Mary Lassiter of Mesquite criticized references to King and Baez in a proposed Spanish supplementary reader.

She said Ms. Baez's views of "peace and freedom...may have stirred emotions but reflects a total lack of intellectual analysis."

Peace and freedom as propounded by Ms. Baez, according to Mrs. Lassiter, are mutually exclusive.

"Clearly, you can't have both peace — which in Miss Baez's philosophy is a lack of resistance to oppression — and freedom, or at least the freedom...enjoyed by our founding fathers when they escaped from totalitarian tyranny," Mrs. Lassiter said.

"Furthermore, it is offensive to people with traditional values to hold up Joan Baez as a role model as she advocated lawbreaking," she added. "The use of Martin Luther King Jr. as a role model is objectionable on the same grounds."

She called for deletion of the Baez references and editing of the King references "to eliminate the praise for lawbreaking."

Mrs. Lassiter also complained about a textbook's comments about newscaster Connie Chung, who was quoted in the book as saying, "I would say it definitely helped me to get hired, the fact that I am a woman and from a minority."

Mrs. Lassiter said, "One gets the feeling that the author is rejoicing in the change that our democracy is undergoing whereby the majority is made to be guilty for being the majority, and the minority deserves more just for being the minority."

Tuesday's schedule also included review of art textbooks. In prefiled testimony, Clova Wood of Garland complained about an art book that offered a critic's interpretation of Grant Wood's "American Gothic" painting, which depicts a farmer and his wife.

The book offers an interpretation in which the farmer is seen as the devil.

"I don't understand his interpretation at all and it might not be appreciated by the artist either," said Mrs. Wood.

Cable-service pirates urged to confess or face jail

AUSTIN (AP) — People who pirate cable service are being warned that beginning Sept. 1, such thefts are a crime that could bring jail sentences.

"If they are receiving cable TV programming and not paying for it, the show's over," said Bill Arnold, executive secretary of the Texas Cable TV Association, which began issuing the warnings Tuesday.

For the next 45 days, cable companies will conduct an advertising campaign to alert Texans of the new law and urge them to comply, Arnold said.

"Our goal is not to put people in jail. Our goal is to stop the theft of our product by educating the public," he said.

The Legislature this year enacted the law making cable TV theft a Class B misdemeanor, punishable by up to six months in jail and a $1,000 fine.

Arnold said the law won't apply to people who receive signals via satellite dishes, but will include those who tap cable lines or tamper with channel selector equipment.

He said cable operators estimate that one of every eight people in Texas receiving cable service obtains some level of it without paying.

Revenue losses are estimated at more than $50 million annually, with the loss in state sales tax revenue estimated at more than $5 million, Arnold said.

Arnold said cable operators hope to convince Texans to come forward and pay up before Sept. 1. and understand that they are committing a crime.

"You're not going to convert every illegal customer to service out there. But you're going to make known to those folks that indeed you're serious about the theft of cable service now," he said.

Disneyland's start disastrous

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — It was meant to be the most glorious day in the illustrious career of Walt Disney, and it turned out to be the worst.

Sunday, July 17, 1955: The culmination of Disney's long-held dream was to take place in this Orange County town — known principally for its orange groves — with the formal opening of Disneyland, a wholly new concept in amusement parks.

He explained what he wanted Disneyland to be: "A happy place, a place where adults and children can experience together some of the wonders of life, of adventure, and feel better for it."

The entire Disney organization was mobilized for the grand opening. Nine thousand tickets were issued to studio workers, Disneyland building crews, news media and dignitaries.

The rest of the nation would be able to watch the festivities on a television special featuring Disney, Art Linkletter, Robert Cummings, Ronald Reagan, and "Davy Crockett" stars Fess Parker and Buddy Ebsen.

Today the park observes its 30th anniversary with a 30-hour birthday party featuring 30,000 balloons, free cars and Disneyland's standard array of magic — world-class amusement honed by lessons learned the very first day.

The sun beamed unmercifully on that Sunday. Motorists who had started out at dawn found themselves stalled on the Santa Ana Freeway. Major streets within 10 miles of the park were soon jammed and that was just the beginning.

Tickets had been counterfeited and immense throngs clogged the entrances. Fantasyland was closed because of a gas leak.

Decks of the Mark Twain riverboat were awash because of overcrowding.

Rides broke down from too many patrons.

Women's spiked heels stuck in the sun-softened asphalt of Main Street.

Food and drink disappeared after a few hours. Babies cried and parents grumbled. Where was the magic in Walt's Magic Kingdom?

Disney himself was blissfully unaware of the disaster; he was too busy hustling around the park for the television show. But he soon learned what had happened.

"Disneyland a Disappointment" was the theme of most of the reviews.

One columnist even accused Disney of skimping on drinking fountains so he could sell more soda pop. Disney telephoned her to explain that because of a plumbers' strike, he had to install toilets first, drinking fountains later.

Walt summoned his staff to repair the damage of "Black Sunday," as he called it. Traffic flow within the park was improved, along with ride capacity and food service.

To placate the press, he hosted small dinner parties at the park and gave personal tours to reporters and their families.

Soon Disneyland was operating smoothly, and within seven weeks 1 million people had passed through the turnstiles.

Thirty years later, Disneyland has been visited by 250 million people. Most of them have gone away happy, but not all.

In 1970 the park was invaded by more than 300 members of the radical "Yippies" movement, who staged Vietnam War protests until quelled by police.

In 1980 two male teen-agers were ejected for dancing together on Date Night. They sued and a judge agreed that their civil rights had been infringed.

Last summer Disneyland workers decided the park was not such a happy place to work. Their strike lasted 22 days.

But these are only a few blemishes on what has been an unparalleled three decades of providing entertainment.

Hobo King doesn't like problems of being celebrity

LA CROSSE, Wis. (AP) — "Don't ever get yourself appointed Hobo King," is the advice of the Hobo King himself, Frying Pan Jack. Born John Fisk more than 70 years ago in Washington state, Frying Pan Jack has been living free since he began riding the rails in 1928.

But as Hobo King, Jack has hands to shake, reporters' questions to answer and pictures to pose for while he's passing through this Mississippi River city of 50,000 on his way to the 85th annual hobo convention Aug. 1-3, in Britt, Iowa.

"You see what a job it is?" he said. Jack plans to arrive early for the convention, attended by 22,000 people last year, because he's making stew and his famous chicken neck soup. He expects to be replaced by a new Hobo King and will return to riding the rails without the attendant problems of celebrity.

A pudgy little man with a goatee, Jack wanders the country eight months a year and rents a room by the tracks in Seattle for the other four. Through the years he's worked as a busboy, railroad worker and dishwasher. Now he collects an Army pension and Social Security.

Coke drinkers win

There's simply not enough to cheer about these days and, as a result, the American people really get excited when one of those once-in-a-million-years reasons to cheer comes along.

Now we've got one — Coca Cola Company's decision to bring back the old formula under the name "Coca-Cola Classic."

Don't snicker; it isn't a snickering matter. The decision definitely is a victory for lovers of the old Coke who were steamed when the company not only changed the formula used to make the soft drink but also discontinued production of the drink under the old formula.

A soft drink such as Coca-Cola, with millions of loyal drinkers, becomes more than a passing fancy; it becomes a way of life. It's advertised and marketed as such. It becomes ingrained in a society. Telling those loyal drinkers that their favorite concoction is being cast aside for something their palates may not accept overnight — or even later on — is a little akin to attempting to wean a small child from its nightly bottle: It can cause earaches and loss of sleep for the parents.

That's exactly what Coca-Cola officials learned the hard way. And the victory has been appropriately heralded as the "Davids" of the world collectively overcoming the "Goliath" of corporate America.

There are more than enough frustrations in this life in the 1980s — "wonder" machines that don't function properly, Shiite airplane hijackers and murderers, the pressures of everyday living in a hectic-paced society — 5 o'clock traffic. When Americans are told their favorite soft drink is being changed — in taste — and there's nothing they can do about it, it's just a little much to bear.

This time Americans didn't stand for it. They held their ground, made their complaint known and, by golly, got some results. We showed the world what we're made of.

Now nothing can hold Americans back. Today the Coca-Cola Company; tomorrow the world!

Sober anniversary

In the profusion of anniversaries being marked by most of the the civilized world — the conclusion of World War II, the birth of the United Nations, etc. — an important milestone in the history of one international group passed with scant notice except by its own following.

That, however, is exactly the way Alcoholics Anonymous would have it. The 44,000 recovered alcoholics from 50 countries who assembled in Montreal to observe the 50th anniversary of AA did so mainly in celebration of their own liberation from the despair of compulsive drinking.

AA collects no dues, does not even maintain membership rolls. It never drafts petitions, never pickets, never demands any special legislation or treatment. And although the members acknowledge they cannot use alcohol for a host of physical and psychological reasons, they show no animosity toward the liquor industry or toward people who do drink.

Their mission is to stay sober on an individual basis by abstaining from alcohol "one day at a time" and to help their fellow sufferers do likewise through person-to-person and group counseling and encouragement.

Because of AA's determined reticence, it is difficult to estimate with any accuracy how many lives it has reclaimed since its founding in Akron, Ohio, by two men who pledged to keep each other sober. But the influence exerted by some 63,000 AA groups worldwide with possibly 1.3 million members must have saved many more millions of individuals and families.

May AA long prosper and continue to bring the joy of recovery to those whose lives are blighted by enslavement to alcohol.

Stars fighting drugs

Recent indications are that the use of illegal drugs by celebrities is increasingly frowned upon in Hollywood. If the rejection of drugs becomes widespread in Hollywood, it would be encouraging news.

Film and music stars are, for better or worse, role models for some young people. The stars have a responsibility to set a good example. That is particularly true regarding drug abuse, one of the most serious problems facing young people.

Three years after the death of John Belushi from an overdose of heroin and cocaine in Hollywood, his brother, Jim, a member of NBC's "Saturday Night Live" cast, was quoted by the Detroit Free Press as saying: "You don't want to work with people who do drugs anymore. People won't hire you if you do coke (cocaine). Can't take the risk."

Another reason for the possible decline in drug use in Hollywood is that there isn't much tolerance of drug users on some sets because rising production costs have pressured actors and production crews to be more efficient.

Some people say Hollywood is being influenced by the growing national emphasis on health and fitness, which is incompatible with drug abuse.

Shock over Belushi's death also is given as a reason that more entertainers have turned away from drugs.

A widespread and emphatic rejection of drug use by stars in the entertainment industry would be welcome and potentially effective.

Actor Stacy Keach, who was released last month from a British prison where he had served a sentence for possessing cocaine, said he wants to discourage drug abuse. Keach said he plans to campaign around the country, speaking at schools.

Other entertainers could make a contribution to the war against drugs by speaking out with the message that it is easier to get to the top, and stay there, if you don't use drugs.

Soviets winning 'race for minds'

WASHINGTON — There are new developments on the psychic-warfare front: The Soviets are outspending us by at least 70 to 1 in occult research.

Jack Anderson

Most responsible scientists take a dim view of such self-proclaimed parapsychological practitioners as mind readers, voodoo pin-stickers and psychic spoon-benders.

We've reported in the past on such obviously ludicrous concepts as the "anti-missile time-warp machine." The Pentagon once considered developing this contraption to blast incoming missiles back into a prehistoric era, where they would theoretically harm only a few dinosaurs or Cro-Magnons.

For years the Pentagon psychic warriors were allowed to pursue any nutty will-o'-the-wisp that flew by, with annual budgets reportedly as high as $6 million. No weapons were ever developed — of course — and now the budget has dwindled to less than $1 million, for exploration of potential capabilities of the human mind.

Meanwhile, the Kremlin has been working overtime to open a military "psycho-gap." The latest top-secret CIA review of Soviet efforts in parapsychology estimate that it would take a budget of anywhere from $500 million to $1 billion for the United States to play catch-up. Operating at much lower labor costs, the Soviets are probably spending $70 million to $80 million a year, but possibly as much as $350 million.

The delightful irony of the Soviets' parapsychology extravagance is that it began as a response to the perceived threat of U.S. progress in the art. Several years ago, the French reported that U.S. psychics had communicated with the nuclear submarine Nautilus via mental telepathy. This gave Soviet scientists the ammunition they needed to lobby for research funds — even though the reports were later exposed as a hoax.

Western scientists may chuckle, but the Soviets take their psychic-warfare experiments seriously. In 1977 a Los Angeles Times reporter in Moscow was arrested by the KGB and charged with obtaining a secret state document that revealed the existence of parapsychological research at several laboratories in the Soviet Union.

The CIA currently estimates that research is being conducted in at least two dozen labs in 10 Soviet cities — 14 in Moscow alone. The experiments range from "dowsing" for minerals and oil to testing "remote psychological monitors" that are supposed to measure the heartbeat and breathing rate of persons thousands of miles away.

From there, according to intelligence reports, Soviet scientists hope to be able to affect the heartbeat and respiration of faraway victims, much in the manner of Haitian witch doctors. The Soviets have even claimed, secretly, that several experiments were successful, with targets nearly suffering heart attacks or suffocation.

In 1977 a Soviet emigre, August Stern, told U.S. intelligence agents of his work on "psychic energy" in a laboratory at Science City in Novosibirsk, Siberia. He said 60 scientists in Special Department No. 8 of the Institute of Automation and Electrometry had "unlimited funds" for such experiments as trying to hypnotize people from a distance and giving kittens electric shocks to see if their mothers showed any reaction three floors away. The lab was transferred to a KGB facility in Moscow in 1969, he said.

How serious does U.S. intelligence take all this? In 1972, the Defense Intelligence Agency said the Soviets might one day be able to learn the contents of secret U.S. documents by psychic techniques, make U.S. weapons malfunction by negative thinking and even brainwash or disable American leaders by willpower.

A 1978 CIA study, which cost $100,000, was more cautious, but it still warned that the Soviets may have tested and deployed second-or third-generation psychic weapons. So the psycho-gap widens. Can we shrink it?

DIPLOMATIC DIGEST: Is living in Paris a hardship? According to the State Department, it is. Long the most sought-after post in the Foreign Service, Paris now qualifies U.S. diplomatic personnel for a 10 percent pay bonus because of the danger of terrorist attack. (One embassy officer was assassinated and others have narrowly escaped harm in recent years.) But the French tourist mecca is not considered as great a hardship as other posts, where climate, living conditions and danger contribute to the diplomat's misery. The worst diplomatic posts of all are Kabul, Afghanistan; San Salvador, El Salvador; Beirut; Kuwait; Kampala, Uganda; and anywhere in Colombia.

MINI-EDITORIAL: Nicaraguan Foreign Minister Miguel d'Escoto's plan to protest U.S. actions against his country by going on an all-water diet is an interesting experiment. We'll be watching with quiet fascination. Offhand, we'd say his chances of influencing President Reagan's foreign policy by starving himself are, well, slim.

Common sense — a commodity sometimes in short supply among the Nicaraguan ideologues — suggests that Reagan wouldn't mind seeing the Sandinista leadership waste away, a pound at a time. With any luck, these high-level protest fasts might catch on in Tehran.

FLORA LEWIS

Trouble awaits 'Fifth Republic'

PARIS — There was a downpour in the middle of the traditional military parade this Bastille Day, a symbol perhaps of the muddle ahead for France's Fifth Republic.

Flora Lewis

Before next year's national holiday, there is almost sure to be a constitutional crisis. The politicians are doing all they can to foreclose available solutions. They don't want to make things worse. But that is the effect of the maneuvering now going on for the spring 1986 parliamentary elections, with the 1988 presidential election in the background.

Ironically, there is greater underlying consensus in France on major policies than there has been in decades. But the leaders and the parties have developed such an intricate pattern of rivalry that there is no figure in a position to embody the basic national view.

The central problem is that the Constitution, which was hand-tailored for the outsized Charles de Gaulle, draws no clear line between the powers of the Assembly and the president but gives them different terms, five years for the legislators and seven for the president.

Until now, the president's supporters have always controlled the Assembly so the dilemma was never faced. No one doubts that President Mitterrand's Socialists will lose their absolute majority next year. They'll do well to win a quarter of the seats. Elsewhere, that would make a coalition government inevitable and the big question would be about how to cut the deal.

There are people Mitterrand could choose as premier with whom he could probably work and who probably could have patched together enough blocs to hold the legislature. That has been made far more difficult by a reform reintroducing proportional representation instead of the current two-round, single-member constituency system. As usual, PR enhances the power of the established party apparatuses that draw up the lists, leaving less room for mavericks.

Mitterrand has made clear that he does not intend to resign, as some in the opposition demand. But he has also come down on the side of the Socialist Party's tough-minded secretary, Lionel Jospin, in a recent quarrel with Premier Laurent Fabius about running the campaign.

Fabius wanted a strategy of opening toward the center, which would make a future coalition easier. Jospin argued that this would weaken the inner structure of the party and that it would be better to be driven into opposition for a time. The Communists, who were the Socialists' initial partners but are now their all-out detractors, say that this is planning for defeat. For once they are right.

It is hard to see how Mitterrand intends to govern with his own party in opposition to his ministers. He could, in de Gaulle's contemptuous praise for a powerless chief of state, resign himself to "inaugurating chrysanthemums." But that isn't Mitterrand's style at all.

He says now that trying to remove foreign policy from supreme presidential decisions would amount "to a coup d'etat." Since most key issues including economic and military policy involve France's partners and allies, that amounts to insisting on about as much power as de Gaulle wielded.

The French have devised the provocative term "cohabitation" for the prospect of power-sharing between a president and a premier from opposing parties. Two of the major leaders against Mitterrand, former President Valery Giscard d'Estaing and his former Premier Jacques Chirac, have said they would accept, but only on their own terms, which provide for dismantling much of what the Socialists have done since 1981.

The third and most popular opposition leader, former Premier Raymond Barre, says he won't cohabit. All three are positioning themselves to run for president, so each is more concerned with highlighting his own profile as an effective leader than in making government work.

There is lot of fervent talk about the ideal versus the menace of socialism and the virtues versus the vices of capitalism. But that isn't what the fight is about. It's about the government's sorry economic record and personal ambitions, the first obvious and the second boring to the public, so there isn't an atmosphere of general tension. The electorate isn't worked up yet.

Nonetheless, the crisis is coming and it is going to make France even more than usually difficult to deal with in the period ahead. The Fifth Republic, founded by de Gaulle in 1958, seemed to have taken firm root and demonstrated stability when for the first time power was transferred smoothly to the opposition in 1981. But the hidden flaw was lurking. It's what comes of making a constitution to fit a man.

Quiet can spoil any vacation!

Is this the Noise Pollution Authority?"

"Yes, it is."

"This is RFD 142. I'm on vacation at Tashmoo Pond and I haven't heard any noise all day long."

Art Buchwald

"Just a minute, let me check the book. You were supposed to have a crew cutting down a dead tree in the next yard at 6 o'clock this morning."

"Well, they didn't show up, and I slept until 8 o'clock. I've felt rotten all day."

"Did a private jet fly over your house at dawn?"

"No. I haven't heard a plane all morning. What kind of an authority do you people run when a guy can't get sufficient noise to satisfy his basic vacation needs?"

"We're doing the best we can. We put you down for a bulldozer to clear the land behind your house, but we had to send it over to Lesley's Pines because the couple there only rented a house for a week and claimed priority."

"You people should have enough pollution devices to satisfy everybody. New York City does."

"We're not New York. As matter of fact, our authority couldn't stay in business if we didn't have noise pollution volunteers available for a large percentage of our work."

"I'm sorry. We city people are used to getting noise when we want it. Look, the silence is driving me crazy. I sit on my porch in my rocking chair and all I hear are the tweeting of birds and the occasional voice of the turtle in the land."

"Did the boy show up with his electric hedge cutter at the Tiltons'? He was scheduled to be there from 2 to 5 when you were taking your nap."

"He did not. I complained to Bob Tilton and he said it was none of my business when he has his hedges cut."

"Bob's very much against noise. We've had complaints about him before."

"It's 6 o'clock and I'm having guests for drinks. Why don't you send over a garbage truck so we can't hear ourselves think?"

"We don't send out garbage truck crews after 5 o'clock. Would you consider three or four motorcycles revving up in front of your house?"

"At this stage I'm willing to take anything."

"Wait a minute, I misspoke. The dispatcher said we had an emergency. There is an old lady in Oak Bluffs who just got home from the hospital and he sent the Hell's Angels there."

"You must have someone who can disturb the peace."

"We have a bunch of beer-drinking college kids who will play hard rock ouside your bedroom window. But they're booked up until Friday."

"This is the worst summer I've ever had. I've been here 10 days and spent three of them in utter silence."

"Please don't exaggerate. We sent out a road crew to dig up your street yesterday."

"They used their pneumatic drills for four hours and then broke for lunch. I don't call that noise."

"The authority is doing the best it can. Everybody wants noise pollution when they are on vacation. But no one is willing to pay for it."

"I don't want you to tell me how tough your life is. All I care to know is are you going to send someone to get on my nerves or aren't you?"

"If you don't tell anyone, I believe I have good news for you. They're going to start building a condominium across the street from you next week, and it should take two years. The noise from digging a new foundation will be enough to drive you up the wall."

"I'll believe it when I hear it with my own two ears."

Belgium government stays — for now

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — At the request of King Baudouin, Prime Minister Wilfried Martens says his government will remain in office to finish a few pieces of business before early elections can be held, probably in October.

Martens submitted his resignation Tuesday after six French-speaking conservative Cabinet members, including Deputy Premier Jean Gol, quit to protest the interior minister's refusal to share responsibility for the May 29 soccer riot in which 38 people died and more than 450 were hurt.

The king rejected the resignations, but Martens told reporters after meeting with the king that the scheduled Dec. 8 election probably will be moved up to October.

Martens, who has led five coalitions since becoming prime minister in 1979, has carried out a previous government's pledge to deploy U.S.-made NATO nuclear missiles despite public opposition. Sixteen of the 48 missiles have been put in place.

Although he rejected the government's resignation, Baudouin told Martens that there is only a "limited program" he can ask Parliament to finish before the elections.

Martens Tuesday night met with his three deputy premiers, Gol, Interior Minister Charles-Ferdinand Nothomb and Frans Grootjans, to agree on the minimal program which they will try to achieve before the elections. The three represent the different parties of Martens' coalition.

This program will have to include at least tax cuts, on which Gol's French-speaking Liberal Reformer Party insists, a job creating scheme, which Nothomb's French-speaking Christian Democratic party wants, and a few articles of the constitution which both want changed in order to give more autonomy to the Flemish- and French-speaking communities.

The government crisis came to a head Monday in a dispute between two of the parties in Martens' four-party coalition over security at the soccer stadium.

A parliamentary investigation concluded that while English fans who attacked their Italian rivals before the start of the European Cup soccer final were mainly responsible for the casualties, the Belgian security forces also should take some of the blame.

Pilots' conversation ended abruptly

BOMBAY, India (AP) — Cockpit voice recorders from the downed Air-India jet indicate conversation came to a sudden stop, but experts said the discovery did not mean the plane was bombed. They filtered the recording today to listen for any sound of an explosion.

Local news reports said the abrupt end of the cockpit conversation buttressed Indian officials' theory that a bomb exploded in the jetliner before it plunged into the Atlantic on June 23, killing 329 people.

Canadian investigators have said bodies and wreckage recovered from the ocean off the Irish coast gave no indication of an explosion.

"The cockpit voice recorder is just one piece of the puzzle. It is too early to say whether there was any kind of explosion," a U.S. expert told The Associated Press, speaking on condition he was not identified.

Another foreign expert, also speaking on condition he not be identified, said the public should not jump to conclusions about the sounds on the recorders.

"Anything can sound like an explosion on tape...even someone coughing," he said.

Aviation experts used special equipment from India's atomic research center to filter sounds registered by the voice recorder. Sources said the filtering process would focus on the last few minutes of the tape to determine if the sound of an explosion could be isolated.

The flight originated in Toronto and was headed to Bombay via Montreal and London. Two anonymous callers claiming to represent India's Sikh minority claimed responsibility for blowing up the plane, but Sikh leaders said the calls were phony.

Extremists among the Sikhs have been fighting for autonomy for Punjab state, where they have a slight majority. The Sikhs are about 2 percent of India's predominately Hindu population of more than 700 million people.

WORLD IN BRIEF

De la Madrid: Mexico ready to solve problems

MEXICO CITY (AP) — President Miguel de la Madrid says his government will take "profound and energetic" measures to solve its economic problems.

"We cannot adopt superficial decisions and much less hasty ones. We do not want to take measures that could appear to be spectacular but that didn't go to the bottom of the problems," he told officials of the Mexican Regional Labor Confederation on Tuesday.

"We don't want to take measures that will only be palliatives," he said.

De la Madrid noted that the nation's economic crisis has dogged his administration since it came to power in December 1982.

Mexico has been struggling to pay interest costs on its $94 billion foreign debt and restore its economy to health.

In the first half of the year, the nation's economic problems worsened with declining demand for its oil, weak sales of non-oil exports, sharp fluctuations in its peso currency, and high inflation and government spending.

Last week, the government slashed its prices for the crude oil that it exports to other countries and devalued the peso on the tourist market.

U.S. speech conciliatory

NAIROBI, Kenya (LAT) — In a surprisingly conciliatory speech to the United Nations Women's Conference, Maureen Reagan said Tuesday that the United States has no intention of denying Palestinian women or South African women opposed to aparthied the use of the conference as a platform to voice their grievances.

The same speech, however, which evoked qualified praise from women representing the Palestinian Liberation Organization, the anti-apartheid African National Congress and the government of Nicaragua, was denounced by American feminists. They called Maureen Reagan's boasts about the advancement of American women "total double talk" and charged that women's rights have eroded under the Reagan administration.

The U.S. delegation to the conference, which Maureen Reagan heads, had come into this conference vowing to keep "political issues" from dominating "the unique concerns of women," which it had maintained were the only "legitimate" business of the conference. While the president's daughter did not explicitly back away from that position Tuesday, she said that "the question of apartheid in South Africa...is of utmost importance" to the Women's Conference. She also referred specifically to the problems of "Palestinian women."

Soviets: 'No progress'

GENEVA, Switzerland (LAT) — The second round of the nuclear arms talks between the United States and the Soviet Union ended here Tuesday with the Soviets flatly reporting "no progress" and American sources saying that the discussions have actually slipped backward's on intermediate-range nuclear weapons.

While waiting for Ambassador Max M. Kampelman and the U.S. negotiating team to arrive at the Soviet mission for a final meeting that lasted barely one hour, chief Soviet delegate Viktor P. Karpov was asked if he was satisfied with this round.

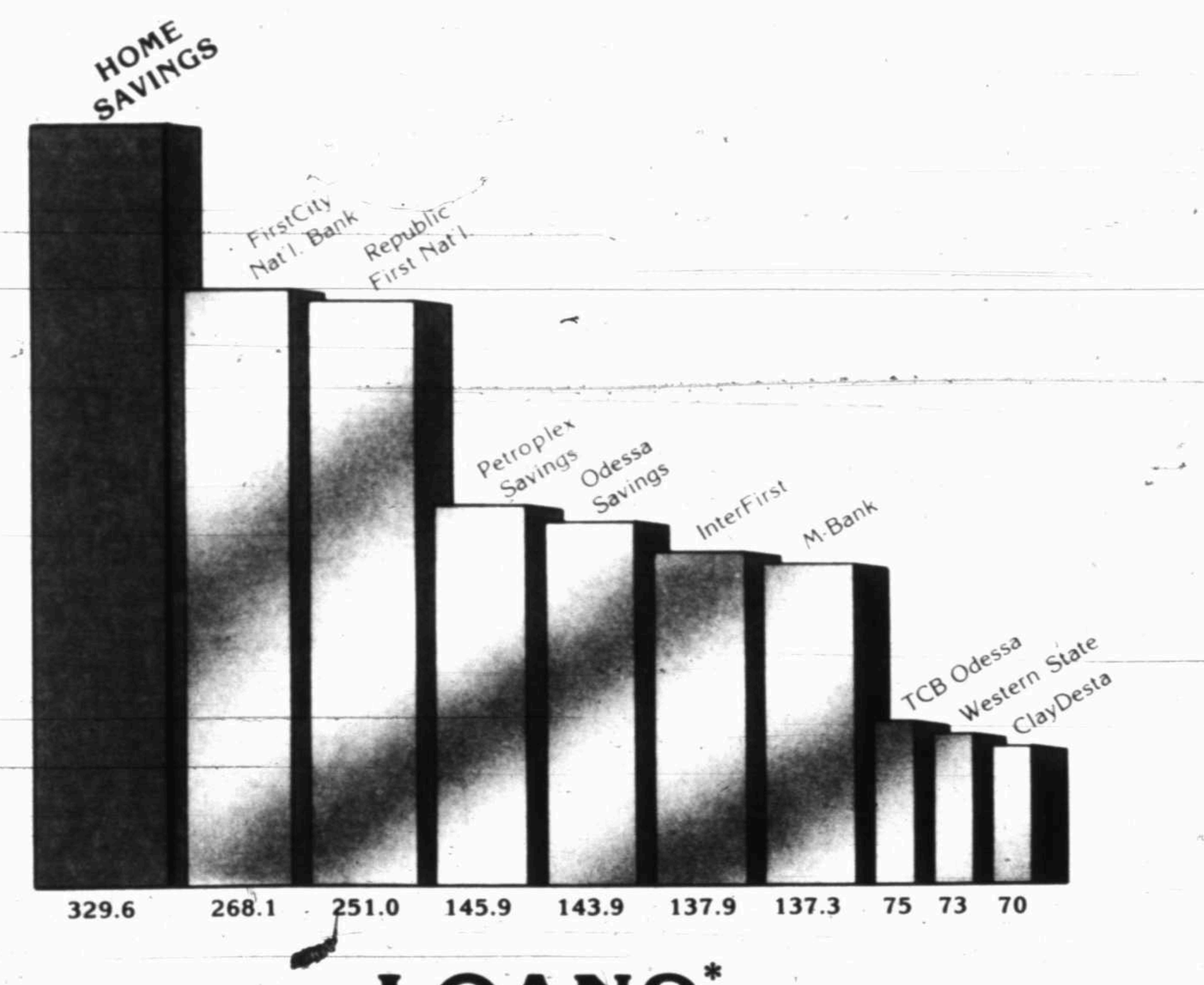

"No, I am not — not at all," he said. "No progress."

Israel reveals treasures

JERUSALEM (AP) — In a secret 2-year salvage operation, Israeli divers have recovered coins, bronze jewelry, and swords dating back 35 centuries from sunken ships off Israel's coast, the Israel Museum said.

The finds comprise "one of the largest treasures ever found under water, not only in quantity but in historical value," Kurt Raveh, a diver from the government's Department of Antiquities, said Tuesday. The treasures go on display at the museum July 23.

Thunderstorms in area picture

From Staff and Wire Reports

Possible mid-summer thunderstorms are in the picture for tonight and Thursday afternoon, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal.

Partly cloudy skies and a 20 percent chance of thunderstorm activity are forecast for tonight with light and variable winds. High should be in the upper 90s.

Thursday also will have partly cloudy skies, light and variable winds and isolated thunderstorms in the late afternoon.

The record high temperature for today's date was 101 degrees set in 1980. The record low was a chilly 60 degrees in 1936.

STATE

Fair skies and mild temperatures were reported across most of Texas today.

A few widely scattered rainshowers were detected across portions of north central texas along the remnants of a weak frontal boundary that extended from near Texarkana to Wichita Falls.

Another area of light rain and thundershowers was noted over southeast texas and offshore in the gulf. Isolated patches of locally dense fog had formed across some parts of east Texas reducing the visibility to less than one mile at Lufkin.

Temperatures were in the low to mid 70s statewide.

A light south wind prevailed across all of Texas except along the Red River, where light easterly breezes were observed.

The National Weather Service said conditions should remain mostly fair through Thursday, with scattered thunderstorms through tonight. Highs Thursday should be in the 80s and 90s in South Texas and in the 90s elsewhere. Tonight's lows should be in the 70s.

NATION

Patches of rain dotted the nation from the Rockies to New England today and high pressure cleared skies and lowered temperatures in Michigan.

A cluster of showers and thunderstorms lingered across southeast Texas after drenching rainfall Tuesday evening, in which 2.5 inches of rain fell in 45 minutes at Magnolia Springs.

Thunderstorms were scattered from the northern Gulf of Mexico across southeast Georgia and southern South Carolina.

Showers dotted southern Florida and the region from eastern North Carolina through eastern New England.

NL hums same song, another verse

By MICHAEL WILBON
Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

MINNEAPOLIS — The American League had superior players in arguably seven out of eight positions. But the National League could have fielded a neighborhood softball team behind the brilliant pitching it got Tuesday night, and the result may have been the same.

Five National League pitchers allowed just five hits and one run — an unearned one at that — to shut down the American League, 6-1, before 54,960 in the 56th All-Star game in the Metrodome.

Did the American League starters really have 118 home runs among them? It certainly didn't seem to faze San Diego's LaMarr Hoyt, who pitched the first three innings and got the victory, Nolan Ryan, Fernando Valenzuela, Jeff Reardon or Goose Gossage, who struck out Boston's Jim Rice and Rich Gedman to end the game.

THE AL came into this mid-summer classic clearly superior in overall talent but wound up losing for the 13th time in 14 years and 36th time against 19 victories and a tie. After taking a 1-0 lead in the first on an unearned run off Hoyt, the AL couldn't score again.

The NL took a 2-1 lead in the third on a run-scoring single by San Diego's Steve Garvey, made it 4-1 in the fifth on a two-run single by Philadelphia's Ozzie Virgil, and closed the scoring in the ninth on a two-run double by St. Louis' Willie McGee.

The biggest surprise other than the lopsided result was that no home runs were hit — especially by the AL — in a park where balls routinely fly better than 400 feet.

But as NL outfielder Darryl Strawberry said, "Everybody saw the home run hitting contest (Monday) and thought the game would be like that. But the pitchers are no dummies; they saw the same thing."

Hoyt, the 1983 Cy Young winner with Chicago in the AL, who Tuesday night was named the game's most valuable player, said, "In this league, I've seen pitchers who can absolutely dominate a game. I don't think I saw quite the same kind of pitching in the AL. Our pitchers were pumped up to the max about pitching in this game."

One has to wonder if the AL would have managed as much as a single hit if it had to face the NL's two best pitchers, Dwight Gooden, (13-3) who didn't pitch, and Joaquin Andujar (15-4), who didn't even show up, in addition to Hoyt, Ryan and the rest.

NEW YORK's Rickey Henderson singled to start the game, stole second, went to third on catcher Terry Kennedy's throwing error and scored on George Brett's sacrifice fly. That's it.

The AL stole three bases as part of an All-Star record of five. But the Americans took themselves out of a possible eighth-inning rally with bad base running.

Toronto's Damaso Garcia singled to start the inning, stole second and tried to go to third when the throw bounced off Ryne Sandberg's glove. But Reardon got off the mound in time to pick up the ball and throw out Garcia at third. The bonus for the NL was that Seattle's Phil Bradley had struck out for what amounted to a double play.

The AL-oriented crowd here kept hoping to get a man or two on base and see a multi-run homer, but it never happened.

Ryan got tough twice when he had to, in the fifth and sixth when Yankees Henderson and Dave Winfield came to the plate, with two out and two on in each situation.

Ryan, who said his control wasn't the best, dusted Henderson with a pitch under the chin, then struck him out to end the fifth, then put Winfield on his seat before inducing a routine ground out to finish the sixth.

THOSE WHO expected the AL power hitters to prove the NL's low-scoring season is a farce, waited in vain. And Hoyt had a most reasonable explanation for what happened to the AL hitters, Tuesday night and in general. "They've got a lot of big swingers over there, big boppers who can go deep. But they all can be pitched to and it tends to show up in All-Star games."

Hoyt said he was surprised the National League didn't hit any home runs, but said he knew once he left the game after the third, "that they weren't going to hit any home runs off any of those other guys."

NL Manager Dick Williams of San Diego went into the game with a plan of letting Hoyt and Ryan go three innings; Valenzuela and Reardon once each, and having Gossage mop up. Done.

Hoyt gave up two singles, Ryan two more and Reardon one.

The American League pitchers, meanwhile, were roughed up. Jack Morris obviously didn't have his best stuff; he bounced several balls in front of the plate. In fact, the vaunted Detroit staff got pushed about pretty well in front of their AL skipper, Sparky Anderson.

MORRIS, the starter, gave up the first two runs. And Dan Petry could retire only one batter, while walking three. The record will show that the 1984 Cy Young winner — relief ace Willie Hernandez — did not allow an earned run of his own.

But it should also note that Hernandez gave up McGee's double, which if it didn't bounce over the wall might have ended up as an inside-the-dome homer.

Morris ended his streak of five scoreless innings in All-Star play. "I didn't pitch as well as I would have liked. I had a lot of rest and I was probably rushing too much. ... It's more fun to hit here (than it is to pitch)."

Brett, despite what he called "a lot of vim and vigor on our side," said he thought Monday's home run hitting contest, which the AL won, 17-16, before 46,000, was more exciting than the game.

To that, the NL's Virgil replied, "It wasn't boring to us. We won."

American League's Ricky Henderson, left, and Dave Whitfield, right, react quickly when National League's Nolan Ryan comes inside with fast ball. Do you suppose Nolan resents Yankees?

AL's Sparky still not convinced

BY HARRY ATKINS
Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — Despite the fact that his American League squad was humiliated by the National League again, Manager Sparky Anderson remains convinced that he had the better team.

That may seem like a bold statement in view of the fact that the NL pinned a 6-1 defeat on his club Tuesday night in the Metrodome, but Anderson is serious.

"I think it would have been interesting to see these two teams play seven games," said Anderson, who stayed with most of his starting lineup through five innings. "I wanted to win this one."

ANDERSON was quick to concede that the quality and depth of NL pitching seems superior to that of the AL. That much was obvious, anyway, after five NL pitchers throttled the AL on five hits — all singles.

It was only the seventh time in All-Star history that a team had failed to come up with an extra-base hit.

"There's some good pitching over in that league," New York Yankees first baseman Don Mattingly said. "You know, we didn't even see (Joaquin) Andujar or Dwight Gooden tonight.

"But it's tough to judge. We've certainly got some good hitters. It's just really hard to explain why we don't win more of these games. I was a little surprised somebody didn't hit a home run for us."

BALTIMORE'S Cal Ripken, who had one hit in three at-bats, said he wasn't sure NL pitching was that much better. He thought it more a matter of coincidence that the National League now enjoys a 36-19-1 edge in these games.

"Just looking at this lineup, you have to figure somebody would hit a ball in orbit," Ripken said. "It just seems like our bats haven't gotten going. When that happens this many times, though, you have to look across the field and say maybe it's pitching.

"They have some great arms over there. We have some great arms in our league as well."

Jack Morris, the Detroit right-hander who won three post-season games to help the Tigers win the World Series last year, appeared ready for another prime-time performance.

Morris, who was born just across the river in St. Paul, Minn., mowed down the first three batters to the roar of 54,960 fans — the largest baseball crowd in Minnesota history.

But the NL got to Morris for one run in the second and another in the third before Toronto's Jimmy Key relieved him with two outs.

"I THINK it's just the fact that good pitching beat out good hitting," said Morris, who was saddled with the loss. "It's just the way things happen.

"I'm not making any excuses. They did what they did and I did what I did. Hopefully, I'll get a chance to come back and atone."

Anderson also was disappointed at being thwarted in his attempt to become the first manager ever to win an All-Star Game in both leagues.

"He wanted to win it," Toronto catcher Ernie Whitt said. "He told us yesterday he desperately wanted to win this ballgame."

Kansas City third baseman George Brett, who was playing in his 10th All-Star Game, said he thought the NL might be a little more relaxed.

"That's because they've had so much success in this game," said Brett, who drove in the AL's lone run with a sacrifice fly in the first inning.

Nettles can't explain it

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — San Diego's Graig Nettles has been on both sides in the All-Star Game — and he can't explain why National League usually wins.

"The National League has dominated," he said after the NL won 6-1 Tuesday night. "I don't have any explanations.

"Tonight they didn't hit the ball. We just got good defense and good pitching."

The National League has won 13 of the past 14 games. Nettles was a five-time American League All-Star for the New York Yankees before making the NL squad for the first time this year.

Steve can't get enough

The National League is undefeated in his 10 appearances on the All-Star roster.

"It's fun and the game is exciting," said Garvey, who had a run-scoring single in Tuesday night's 6-1 victory.

"I told Chub (National League President Chub Feeney) that he should take me for a good-luck charm," he added.

Garvey thought that seeing American League starter Jack Morris in last year's World Series was an advantage for him Tuesday night. And he didn't hide the information.

The National League scored two runs on five hits before chasing Morris with two outs in the third inning.

Hoyt lands All-Star MVP award

BY MIKE EMBRY

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — In a game dominated by the appearance of the usual cast of stars, a few role players led the National League to its 13th win in the last 14 games.

While starting pitcher LaMarr Hoyt took the Most Valuable Player award in the NL's 6-1 triumph Tuesday night in the All-Star Game, he got a lot of help from Montreal's Tim Wallach, Philadelphia's Ozzie Virgil, Houston's Jose Cruz and San Diego's Terry Kennedy.

Those are not exactly household names on a roster that contains the likes of Steve Garvey, Dale Murphy, Dave Parker, Darryl Strawberry, Ozzie Smith and Nolan Ryan.

"He wasn't our only star," National League Manager Dick Williams said of Hoyt. "It could have easily gone to Ozzie Virgil, Tim Wallach, Darryl or Ryan. Any of them could have gotten it and no one could have beefed."

Kennedy, the San Diego catcher, had a run-scoring single with two outs in the second inning for the National League's first run.

Virgil replaced Kennedy in the fifth and promptly stroked a two-run single to give the National League a 4-1 lead.

"I was happy," Virgil said. "But I was just a spectator after that. I rounded first base just praying for the guy to score."

Wallach came through with a double that preceded Virgil's hit. He also knocked down a smash from Cal Ripken in the sixth inning that prevented a runner from advancing to third.

And Cruz ran down Eddie Murray's drive to the gap in left-center for an out in the sixth that would have scored a run.

THE NL also was blessed with a combined five-hit performance from five pitchers that took the muscle out of the American League bats.

"Tonight they didn't hit the ball," said San Diego's Graig Nettles, the National League's third baseman. "We just got good defense and some good pitching."

Hoyt and Ryan each worked three innings and gave up only two hits apiece. Hoyt gave up an unearned run in the first inning.

Fernando Valenzuela, Jeff Reardon and Goose Gossage pitched the final three innings.

"Our guys seem to go out and challenge the hitters," said San Diego's Steve Garvey. "They don't throw too many changeups.

"This league has a tremendous amount of depth as far as pitching is concerned."

THE POWERFUl American League lineup could muster only singles in a park considered ideal for the long-ball hitter.

"I thought there would be more runs scored," said Kennedy. "I thought it would be a 10-8 or 12-10 deal.

"They had a guy (Carlton Fisk) with 23 home runs hitting in the eighth spot," Kennedy added. "That scared me.

"But when you get good pitching, I don't think it matters."

While the National League wasn't exactly overpowering at the plate, it used aggressive baserunning to make the most of its nine hits by collecting four doubles.

"We had good pitching and timely good hitting. We played it hard and took the extra bases and came out with another win," Garvey said.

Now's time to renew options for grid tickets

From Staff Reports

Midland High and Midland Lee football season tickets go on sale to current option holders next Monday. Purchases may be made at the Memorial Stadium athletic office, which will be open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Option holders have until Aug. 9 to renew options. Beginning Aug. 12, all remaining tickets will be sold to the general public on a first come, first serve basis, if any options are left.

Tickets are now being sold to non-option holders from the available list.

With Odessa Permian coming to Midland for both the Rebels and Bulldogs and San Angelo opening district play at Memorial Stadidum against Lee, the demand for tickets is expected to be heavy.

A book of tickets to Lee's five home games is $20 and the Midland book for five home games is $20.

Madrid throws no-hitter

From Staff Reports

BIG SPRING – James Madrid fired a no-hitter as Midland Eastern defeated Big Spring National, 3-1, Tuesday night in the Division III Little League tournament. It gave Eastern, now 3-0 in the tournament, back-to-back no-hitters.

Paul Zarata had turned the trick last Thursday with a 14-1, 11-strikeout win over Big Spring International.

Madrid hooked up in a fierce pitching duel with National's Neal Mayfield, who allowed just three hits. Each pitcher struck out 13 batters.

In three games, Eastern pitchers have allowed just two hits. J.J. Johnson pitched a two-hitter in the Midlanders' first game of the tournament.

Big Spring's only run came in the first and it was unearned. An attempted pick off throw at third base wound up in left field and the run scored.

Midland scored in the first, collecting two of its three hits as Manuel Galindo singled and scored on Johnson's double.

That made it 1-1 and Midland's winning runs came in the fourth when Joe Dominquez scored from third on an infield out. The collision at the plate knocked the ball loose and while the catcher was looking for it, Charles Trauber scored from second.

Billy, George grow up

Bronx Zoo is in the past

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON

NEW YORK (AP) — For a change, New York Yankees owner George M. Steinbrenner III and manager Billy Martin, Act IV, seem to have outgrown the Bronx Zoo histrionics of their first three go-rounds and are sticking strictly to baseball.

Well, almost. There has been a touch of controversy like the off-day workout a while back when Martin criticized the team's lack of fundamentals — it was interpreted as a slap at Yogi Berra, his predecessor — first baseman Don Mattingly criticized the workout in general and Steinbrenner criticized Mattingly.

Outfielders Ken Griffey and Omar Moreno still want to be traded and relief ace Dave Righetti still yearns to return to the role of a starter.

BUT those incidents are minor compared to events of the past. How long has it been since the Yankee clubhouse has been this devoid of turmoil for this long a period?

"Pretty far back," says pitcher Ron Guidry, who has been around since 1977.

Peace, it's wonderful.

"That's why we're winning," Martin says.

Of course, one wonders whether it's peaceful because the Yankees are winning or whether the Yankees are winning because it's peaceful.

AT THE All-Star break a year ago, they were sixth in the American League East with a 36-46 record, 20 games behind first-place Detroit. Now, thanks to a current six-game winning streak and a 23-7 roll, they are 49-36 — the best since 1981 — and in second place, only 2½ games behind Toronto after trailing by nine games barely a month ago and by 7½ as recently as June 30.

The surge even has Martin cracking jokes.

"We sent out letters to all the other clubs asking them to comply with us until the All-Star break," he said.

The Yankees were only 6-10 when Martin replaced the beloved Berra on April 29 — the New York press had a field day blasting George and Billy and predicting doom — and quickly slipped to 6-12 before things picked up. The record under Martin is 43-26 but there are certain members of the media awaiting what has become the inevitable blowup between owner and manager.

Martin knows his critics are waiting to pounce and insists that "this time, I'm not going to foul up."

AS LONG as Rickey Henderson, Don Mattingly and Dave Winfield keep hitting and Guidry keeps winning, the Yankees should remain a contender. The first three missed most of spring training with injuries and all four, like the team, started slowly.

"I could see we had guys who could do the job," Martin said. "The question was getting them to do it together instead of one guy this week and one guy next week. We've gotten more consistency out of the starting pitching, the bullpen has done a good job and we're getting awful timely hits.

"I like the way our pitching has come around after what people said (that it was the team's Achilles heel). I knew the ballclub over-all better than I did the pitching. I knew Guidry and Righetti, but I hadn't seen (Joe) Cowley, I didn't know (Ed) Whitson and I'd never seen (Phil) Niekro pitch except on TV. When I was a little kid I used to watch him. I had heard about (Brian) Fisher. When we were trying to make a deal with Seattle (for Ken Phelps), they kept asking for him.

"We're playing good baseball, outstanding baseball. If we keep going the same way we're going now, we've got a good chance. We're in good position. Potentially, this is as good a team as I've ever had. Our combination of speed and power is awesome. If we stay healthy, we've got the ingredients out there to do it."

Still, it is too soon to say the Yankees will be in the race down to the wire. On Thursday, they begin a 15-game road trip to Minnesota, Kansas City, Texas and Cleveland. And while they are 18-3 against those teams at home, they are only 5-5 in previous visits — and 17-23 over-all away from Yankee Stadium, where they have the best home record in baseball (32-13).

"WE'RE AS good right now as I thought we could be," said Guidry. "But the turning point is going to be on the road. We don't have a good record on the road. This trip will be a crucial time for the club. I think that will be the biggest hurdle. We don't necessarily have to sweep any series, but we have to have to take two of three, two of three. I think 9-6 would be outstanding, but we'd like to win more than that.

"When you win consistently, it's contagious. The guys have been hitting well and we're getting good pitching. When you do that, you have some fun days."

Fans oppose DH in phone poll

NEW YORK (AP) — Fifty-nine percent of the callers disapproved of the designated-hitter rule in a three-hour nationwide telephone poll conducted by NBC during Tuesday night's baseball All-Star game.

An NBC spokesman said 234,482 calls were made during the game, with 138,456 calling the "no" number and 96,376, or 41 percent, dialing the "yes" number.

The results were almost identical to a similar poll conducted April 20 during a Saturday game of the week. That poll had 66,108 callers, with the "no" calls outnumbering the "yes" 58 percent to 42 percent.

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — Mike Giomi, kicked off the Indiana University team for cutting classes last season, reportedly has begun writing a book about his 2½ years playing for Coach Bob Knight. "I don't think he's bitter about what happened. I just don't think he got a fair deal and he doesn't either," said Martha Calaberse. "He plans on having the book done by the time he's done with school, but he doesn't want to make any waves." Mancini & Mancini, specialists in nose bleeds

It is customary in our civilization for the skills of a trade to be passed on from one generation to another. You may see a sign in Switzerland "F. Bessmeyer & Sons, Fine Watches Since 1610." Diamond cutting may stay a family secret from the time of Charlemagne.

Fathers like to see sons take up the family business.

So, the world concluded, it must have been a great source of joy and comfort to one Lenny Mancini when, in the summer of 1979, a young son, Ray, embarked on the ancestral trade.

You pictured the firm's sign over the door: "Mancini & Mancini, Pere & Fils, Since 1930, Specialists in Nosebleeds, Eye Cuts, Body Blows and Involuntary Anesthesia. Office Hours Flexible. Call For Appointment."

Pugilism is not ordinarily thought of as an heirloom industry.

It is considered a sacrificial lifestyle, something the father does to provide a better chance for his offspring, like putting out oil well fires, walking high iron, sandhogging under the East River or mining anthracite, the price one generation pays so its sons and heirs won't have to do it in succeeding ones.

The staple movie theme has the son (Golden Boy?) concealing from his parents, who think he is studying the violin, his pugilistic life, which he takes on for all the wrong reasons – blond, booze and the mob.

A GREAT many people thought the Mancini family saga was different, that this was one scenario where the father rejoiced in his son's choice of career, even encouraged it.

This was because Mancini, the son, had announced in advance that his motives were revenge, that he was going to make an industry, which had snubbed his father in denying him a title shot, pay for its blot on the family.

The father, the original "Boom Boom" Mancini, had been a moderately successful pugilist of the '30s and '40s who had fought some of the best, but always at the sub-championship level. "He drew with Servo. He busted up Castellani," boasts his son proudly.

But, Lenny, the father, had fought for the most honorable of reasons – to eat.

And he had paid the price. He virtually lost the sight of one eye, he had the obligatory broken nose.

His style was simple: attack. And he was doing that at Metz in World War II when he stopped 13 pieces of shrapnel, some with his backbone.

"They said he'd never walk again but he even fought again," says his son. "My father was tough. They had heart in them days."

STILL, IT was a common mistake to think Boom Boom the First approved of the choice of career of Boom Boom the Junior.

"My father didn't want no fight career for me. My mother, neither. No mother wants to see her son bleed. And my father said to me, 'Listen to me, Ray, it's no life. It's tough and it's lonely. I had to do it. It was Depression times. We didn't have no choice.'"

Boom Boom the Younger, of course, like sons everywhere, didn't listen.

Anyone could write the Hollywood sequel to that. It would show the son with dark glasses and a dog selling pencils outside the fight arena in later days, trying to tell passers-by about the time he fought the Bomber or how he could have been a contender. A walking Clifford Odets play. A part for Brando.

Actually, the real-life Boom Boom Mancini story is as upbeat as "The Sound of Music."

Boom Boom II showed up in a posh Sunset eatery just west of Bel Air the other day, awash with gold chains, designer sweater and bench-made shoes.

You had to look close to see the scar tissue atop the eyes, the nose wasn't swollen and the eyes were clear and bright and 20/20. He didn't talk as if he were being strangled.

They have already made the Boom Boom Mancini story into a TV movie. "It's a love story. The story of a love between a father and son," he explains.

He has won the lightweight championship three times. He has grossed nearly $6 million in the prize ring. He is studying acting and is weighing a role in a TV series.

"I HAVE saved 73 percent of the money I made in the ring. I own a condo in Brentwood and a house in Youngstown. I may fight again – I have been offered three fights at one million apiece – but I don't have to. And I'm only 24 years old."

A remake of "On the Waterfront," it ain't.

F. Scott Fitzgerald's friend, Gerald Murphy, once aphorized "Living well is the best revenge." If so, Boom Boom Mancini, the original, has been well avenged.

The family business is flourishing.

Sports In Brief

BASEBALL

MINNEAPOLIS — Baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth, who said early this week that he thought a player strike was possible, was more optimistic on Tuesday, predicting that a strike deadline will put pressure on negotiators to agree on a new collective bargaining agreement.

On Monday, the Major League Players Association set an Aug. 6 deadline for agreement on the pact that expired last December. After more than 30 meetings over the past nine months, the owners and players are still far apart.

"I'm kind of happy about it," said Ueberroth of the strike deadline on NBC-TV's "Today" show. "It puts the pressure on everybody ... I think they'll get it done."

BASKETBALL

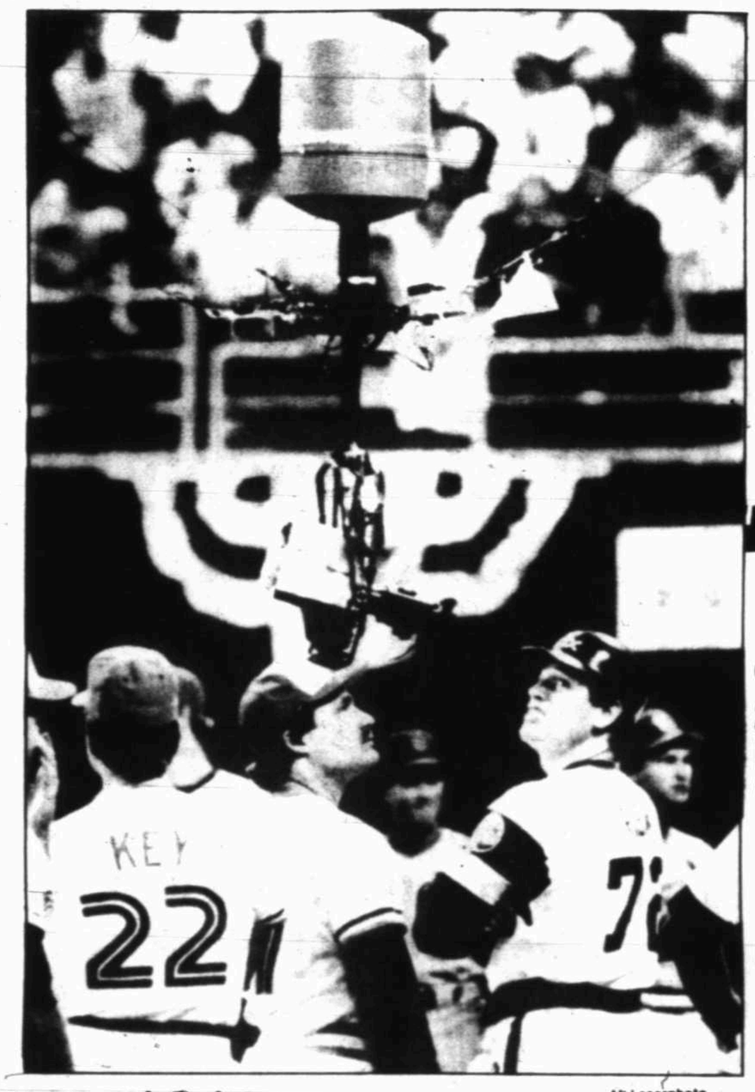

MILFORD, Conn. — New Jersey Jammers' swingman Derrick Rowland, who averaged 22.8 points per game for the week of July 8-14, was named as the United States Basketball League's player of the week.

TENNIS

BASTAD, Sweden — Emilio Sanchez of Spain surprised second-seeded Anders Jarryd of Sweden 4-6, 6-1, 6-2, in first-round action at the $125,000 Swedish Open Tennis Championships.

In other first-round matches, Damir Keretic of West Germany outlasted Brad Drewett of Australia 6-7, 7-5, 6-3; Jonas Svensson of Sweden beat Matt Doyle of Ireland 6-3, 6-3; Alessandro de Minicis of Italy downed Guillermo Rivas of Argentina 6-1, 7-6; and Goran Prpic ousted fellow-Yugoslavian Marco Ostoja 2-6, 6-0, 7-5.

WASHINGTON — Sweden's Stefan Erikksson surprised Chile's Hans Gildemeister 6-2, 6-1 to advance to the second round of the $200,000 D.C.

Grand slam in ninth beats Midland Angels

LITTLE ROCK, Ark— Third baseman Jim Lindeman hit a grand slam in the bottom of the ninth to give the Travelers a 10-7 victory over the Midland Angels in Texas League action Tuesday.

The Travelers led 3-1 after the second inning, and Midland never led until left fielder Phil Stephenson homered to put the Angels up 7-6 in the top of the ninth.

In the bottom of the ninth, Lindeman's homer came with the bases filled by designated hitter Jeff Ledbetter, catcher Tim Wallace and first baseman Dave Kable.

Relief pitcher Mike Rhodes, 1-2, took the win for Arkansas. Julian Gonzales was tagged with the loss.

El Paso 9, Shreveport 6

The El Paso Diablos exploded for five runs in the bottom of the ninth inning Tuesday night to knock off Eastern Division leader Shreveport 9-6 and retain their No. 1 spot atop the West.

Alan Cartwright capped the wild ninth with a three-run homer to left.

The Diablos entered the ninth inning behind 6-4 after Mike Aldrete's solo home run to left in the top of the inning.

Billy Joe Robidoux got an infield hit, Joey Meyer ripped a one-out RBI single to drive in one run. Robidoux later scored the tying run. Cartwright's homer ended the game.

San Antonio 5, Tulsa 3

Jeff Hamilton led off a second-inning rally for San Antonio with a one-out walk, his second of the game and one of 10 the Dodgers got during the course of the game. Hamilton scored when Driller catcher Larry Pott tried to pick off Jon DeBus leading off second and threw the ball into center field.

The Dodgers, by winning, ended a nine-game losing streak as 19-year-old Greg Mayberry retired the Drillers in order over the first six innings.

Jackson 5, Beaumont 1

Beaumont scored its only run at the top of the seventh, gaining a 1-1 tie when Benito Santiago singled and Shane Mack singled him in.

But Jackson responded with four runs of its own in the bottom of the inning. David Magadan and Barry Lyons walked. Randy Milligan drove in Magadan with a single, and Jason Felice then drove in Lyons and Milligan with a double.

Pittsburgh may make a deal

PITTSBURGH (AP) — City officials are willing to discuss changing the Pittsburgh Pirates' lease at Three Rivers Stadium to allow the team to leave Pittsburgh if attendance fails to reach a specified level, a city attorney said.

The lease binds the National League team to Pittsburgh through the year 2011 and is considered an obstacle in the Galbreath family's efforts to sell the team.

The Pirates have lost at least $23 million since 1970 largely due to poor attendance at the publicly owned stadium.

"We've stated our willingness to negotiate changes in the lease, and an escape clause is something we would consider. But nobody has come to us and said, 'We're interested in the team. Let's talk about changing the lease,' " Marvin Fein, a deputy city solicitor, said Monday.

Fein says the present lease is unbreakable and has threatened to sue in court to stop any attempts to move the Pirates without changing the agreement.

"A lawsuit is a last resort because four or five years of litigation and its expense likely would only make things worse, and the city would be left with a shell of a franchise," he said.

"The real question is what kind of future does baseball have in this city. Any kind of escape clause the city would agree (to) certainly would be constructed to give Pittsburgh amble opportunity to prove it wants the team," he said.

Pirates President Dan Galbreath has praised a lease for the Seattle Mariners at Seattle's Kingdome. The document allows the American League team to leave the stadium if the Mariners draw an average of fewer than 1.4 million people per year in 1985 and 1986 and fail to sell 10,000 season tickets for the 1987 season.

The lease, revised with the help of mediators, also gives the club free rent, a higher percentage of concession revenue and an exemption from Seattle's 5 percent amusement tax.

The Kingdome lease is "terrific ... something that would make our team easier to sell," Galbreath said.

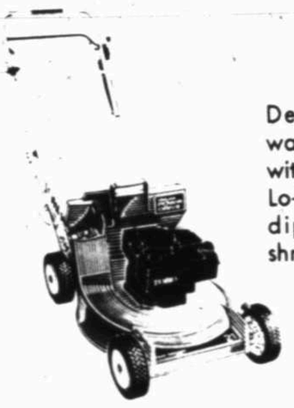

The Pirates sued the city of Pittsburgh in 1981 to revise the team's original Three Rivers Stadium lease, arguing that burdensome terms of the agreement contributed to losses of $11 million between 1970 and 1980.

Team officials say the Pirates lost $6 million in 1984 and will lose be even more this year. Figures are not available for 1981 through 1983.

The Galbreath family owns 51 percent of the organization, formally known as The Pittsburgh Athletic Co. Inc. Warner Communications Inc. of New York owns 48 percent.

Players who slavishly follow bromides such as "lead through strength" or "cover an honor" frequently end up with egg on their face. These platitudes were designed to cover general situations and are often not suitable for specific cases. But usually they are right, as a defender learned to his sorrow at the trials to select the 1985 U.S. team for the world championships, to be played later this year in Sao Paulo, Brazil.

The contract was four spades in both rooms. Here, South's three clubs asked North about his distribution, and four clubs denied a singleton.

In the other room West led a low club, and declarer had no chance. He had to lose at least one trick in each suit. Where we watched, declarer was given a chance when West elected to lead a low trump.

Had declarer chosen to play the table's ten to the first trick, he would have been in command. However, it was more likely that West's lead was away from the king of trumps rather than the jack, so he called for dummy's queen. Now East could have paved the way to defeat the contract by covering with the king — the defenders would then have had time to shift to a club when next they gained the lead.

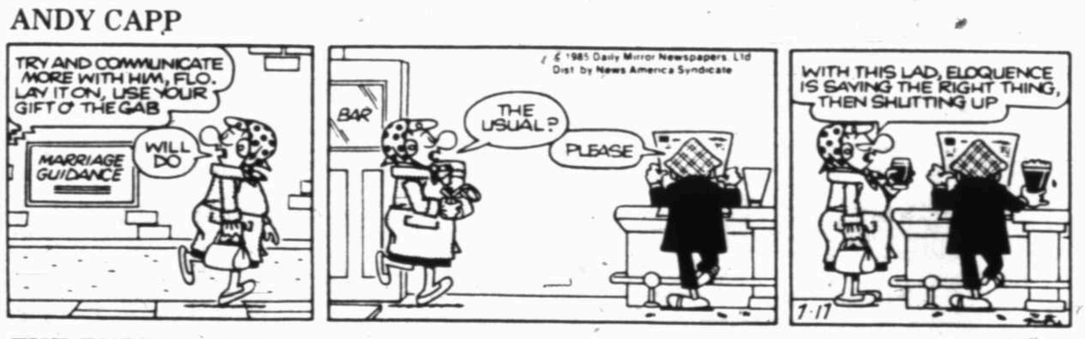

However, East was not sure of the situation and chose to follow with a low spade. Declarer was quick to seize his opportunity. He continued with a spade to the ace, felling the jack. Now three rounds of diamonds set up his 13th diamond.

East won the queen of diamonds, cashed the king of spades and shifted to a club, but it was too late. Declarer won the ace, came to hand with the ace of hearts and discarded the board's club loser on his good diamond. Although he still had to concede a heart, the contract was home.

Parton theme park proposed

Dolly Parton

PIGEON FORGE, Tenn. (AP) — Buoyed by the economic and tourism prospects of a Dolly Parton theme park in the country superstar's home county, leaders of this resort town are saying, "Hooray for 'Dollywood.'"

Miss Parton has asked to appear next Monday before the Pigeon Forge City Council to propose converting the 400-acre Silver Dollar City theme park into "Dollywood," city manager Earlene Teaster said Tuesday.

Negotiations have begun between Miss Parton and Silver Dollar City's owners, said Ted Miller, manager of the Sevier County attraction.

Miss Parton has expressed an interest in running a theme park near her home, said publicist Sylvia Weiner in New York.

Ron Reagan

NEW YORK (AP) — President Reagan's son Ron has signed a contract with ABC as a journalist and reporter for the network's entertainment division, ABC announced.

"Ron Reagan is a young man who, over the past few years, has shown remarkable development as a journalist and broadcaster," Gary L. Pudney, Vice President, Special Projects and Senior Executive in Charge of Talent for ABC Entertainment, said Tuesday in a statement announcing the agreement.

The president's son had announced his new job Monday during an appearance on ABC's "Good Morning America."

"ABC got in touch with me a while back and expressed interest in having me do some on-camera work for them, and I thought that was an idea fraught with the possiblity for fun, so I said 'Sure,'" Reagan said.

The ABC statement released Tuesday said Reagan will be involved with a variety of entertainment programs but provided no further details.

Reagan has written articles for publications including "Newsweek," "Interview" magazine, "Ladies Home Journal," "Parade" and "Playboy," and also was a film critic for "The Source," an NBC radio network, the statement said.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Maxim Shostakovich, the acclaimed Soviet conductor who defected to the West, says he accepted "with pleasure" his appointment as New Orleans Symphony music director beginning in the fall of 1986.

"I want to be principal conductor in New Orleans because it has a good orchestra, and I had a good relationship with the orchestra when I was in the city earlier this year," Shostakovich said Tuesday from Philadelphia.

The New Orleans Symphony's board of directors announced Tuesday it had approved a three-year contract with Shostakovich, but did not release a salary.

Shostakovich, 47, in April conducted an all-Russian program here, including Symphony No. 5 by his father, Dmitri Shostakovich, who died in 1975 in Moscow of a heart ailment.

The conductor and his 19-year-old son, Dmitri, defected to West Germany in 1981 after a European tour with the Moscow Radio Symphony Orchestra. Granted political asylum in the United States, he lives in Ridgefield, Conn.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — Linn Yann, the Cambodian refugee who became a spelling champion in 1983, had only one real question when she met the director of a movie about her: "Do you all know who's going to play my part?"

The ABC-TV movie to be shown in January is the first in a series of 20 new family productions from Disney Studios, said Simon Wincer, director of "The Linn Yann Story."

"They're not cutesy movies. They're very 1985, very moving, very warm and very good," said Wincer, whose credits include "The Man from Snowy River" and "D.A.R.Y.L."

"I'm excited about you all making the movie and I want to thank you," said Miss Yann, 14, as she was introduced Monday to Wincer and other officials.

Wincer declined to identify the actress, saying only that she had been chosen from 50 to 60 candidates who auditioned and that "she's perfect for the role." The $2.5 million movie will be filmed in Canada beginning July 29.

Miss Yann could speak only 10 words of English when she came to the United States six years ago, fleeing the communist Khmer Rouge. She was a runnerup in the city's spelling bees in 1983 and 1984 and missed the word "verdigris" in last year's National Spelling Bee.

The poster will feature Dali's "Cosmic Athlete" — a painting currently hanging in King Juan Carlos' Zarzuala Palace residence — along with Dali's signature topped by his favorite symbol, a crown.

HAMLIN, W.Va. (AP) — Retired Gen. Chuck Yeager, a test pilot whose exploits were included in the book and movie "The Right Stuff," will be honored this fall when his hometown vocational school is given his name.

The idea of the Chuck Yeager Career Center "has been in my mind for years," said Lincoln County School Superintendent Charles McCann. "I was just waiting for somebody from Hamlin to do something but nobody did, so one night I just brought the matter before the board. They thought it was a good idea."

Dollar falls

LONDON (AP) — Jitters over the U.S. economy and President Reagan's health pushed the dollar to its lowest level in a year on foreign exchange markets today. Gold bullion prices edged up.

The dollar opened broadly lower in the wake of an announcement late Tuesday by the Federal Reserve that it was revising its anti-inflation growth targets for the basic U.S. money supply.

Selected morning trading rates compared with levels in Europe late Tuesday included:

—2.8540 West German marks, down from 2.8780.

—2.3665 Swiss francs, down from 2.3905.

—8.6725 French francs, down from 8.7355.

—1,866.50 Italian lire, down from 1,871.50.

—3.2330 Dutch guilders, down from 3.2375.

—1.34825 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3500.

In Tokyo, the dollar slid to a new one-year low of 237.63 Japanese yen, down from 238.10 yesterday. Later in London, the dollar fell further, to 236.375 yen.

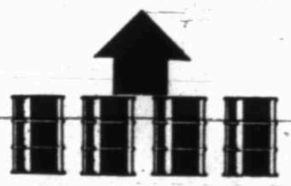

The value of gold bullion rose in reaction to the dollar's weakness.

London's five biggest bullion houses fixed a recommended midmorning gold price of $321.70 an ounce, up from $319.75 late Tuesday.

Earlier in Hong Kong, the metal gained $1.86 to close at a bid of $319.68. Gold was bid at $320.50 in New York late Tuesday.

Stockholder sues First National of Chicago

Case alleges loans made to failing Hunt companies

CHICAGO (AP) — Officers and directors of First National Bank of Chicago mismanaged the bank's funds by making loans totaling more than $300 million to failing companies controlled by trusts in the family of Texas oil tycoon H.L. Hunt, a suit charged Tuesday.

Stockholder Joel Starrels filed the suit in Circuit Court on behalf of the First National Bank of Chicago and of the holding company that owns it, First Chicago Corp.

The suit asks that the bank's officers and directors be assessed unspecified damages.

The suit contends that, in addition to making unsecured loans to companies controlled by Hunt trusts, bank officers and directors bought for the bank 44.5 percent interest in a Brazilian financial institution that had more than $100 million in liabilities.

The transaction involved "some amazing banking gymnastics," said Marshall Patner, an attorney for the plaintiff.

Pete Soraparu, a spokesman for First National, said bank officials would have no comment until they had more time to study the suit.

"The suit claims mismanagement," Patner said, adding that it charges either that loans were not reviewed by proper committees before they were approved or, as in the case of the Brazilian bank, records were not properly evaluated. "No one has put his hand in the till," Patner said.

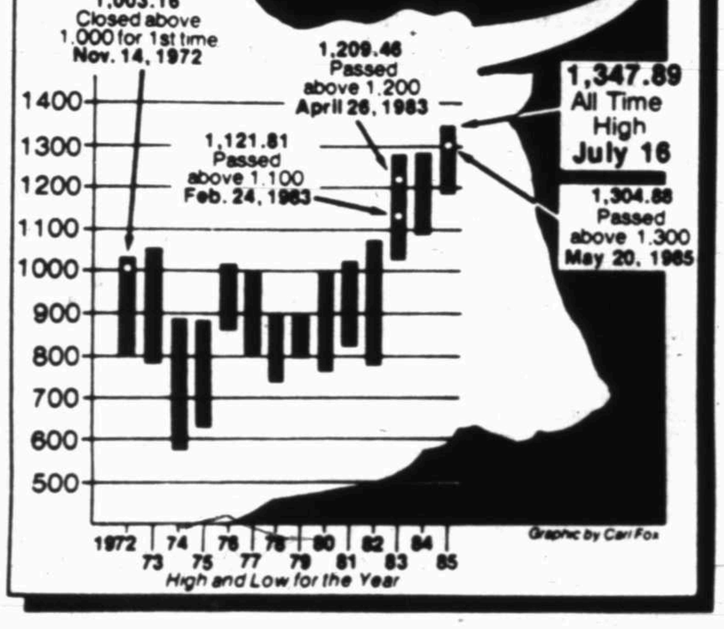

He outlined four major allegations:

— Loans totaling more than $260 million were made to three sugar subsidiaries of Hunt Internatinal Resources Corp., owned and controlled by trusts of Nelson Bunker Hunt and W. Herbert Hunt. The subsidiaries, Great Western Sugar Co., Godchaux-Henderson Sugar Co. and Northern Ohio Sugar Co., filed for protection from creditors in bankruptcy court in Dallas earlier this year.

— Loans totaling tens of millions of dollars were made to an offshore drilling concern called Penrod Drilling Co., owned and controlled by trusts of the Hunt brothers, including Lamar Hunt.

— An investment was made ultimately costing First National $12 million after another Hunt International subsidiary, Offshore Investment Ltd., defaulted in a speculation on American dollars versus Japanese yen.

— The bank in July 1984 bought 44.5 percent of the Banco Denasa de Investimento for $15 million, but First National officials failed to realize the Brazilian bank had severe loan problems.

Volcker says money policy to stay steady

Associated Press

The Federal Reserve Board plans to hold monetary policy steady for the rest of the year in a move likely to stabilize interest rates.

At a meeting with reporters Tuesday, Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker indicated that the bank was sticking to the basic monetary course it has followed all year long.

The stock market, meanwhile, reached new peaks Tuesday as the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 12.43 to 1,347.89, topping the record high of 1,338.60 it set Friday. Several broader market measures also hit new peaks.

As the nation's central bank, the Federal Reserve tries to provide enough money to keep the economy growing at a healthy pace while guarding against allowing the money supply to expand so rapidly that it sparks inflation.

Economic growth has sagged this year as the Fed's M1 measure of the money supply has grown well above the initial targets set by the central bank.

Volcker said the Fed has decided to measure growth from this year beginning with the period from April through June, providing a higher starting base than the final three months of 1984.

Some analysts view the change as a way to permit the Fed to account for the rapid money growth without being forced to dramatically tighten controls — and drive interest rates higher — at a time when economic growth remains sluggish.

Volcker was asked whether he was concerned that the Fed's decision to rebase M1 would tarnish his image as a staunch inflation fighter.

"I am as concerned about inflation as I've ever been and I don't think we are yielding," he said. "We are making reasonable judgments which we think don't present inflationary risks."

In addition to changing the base period for calculating M1 growth, the central bank also slightly expanded its target range to growth of 3 percent to 8 percent instead of the previous target of 4 percent to 7 percent growth. M1 is a measure of checking accounts and cash.

In other economic developments:

—Unemployment rates in 17 states in May were above the levels of a year ago, the Labor Department said. Only West Virginia at 11.6 percent and Louisiana at 11.1 percent had a double-digit jobless rate. Massachusetts had the nation's lowest unemployment rate, 3.4 percent, and 19 other states reported rates below 6 percent.

Midland K mart joins in nationwide campaign to locate missing children

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

The Midland K mart store has joined in a nationwide campaign to assist families of missing children.

Experts say that more than 200,000 children are officially reported missing each year. Until the television movie "Adam" focused national attention on this problem, many families suffered in silence, wondering what happened to their children.

K mart Corp. says it hopes to help these families by joining with its five photofinishers in a nationwide drive to make Americans aware of the tragedy of missing children. The Lost Child program, put into effect the first of May and recently reaching the Midland store, will distribute photographs of missing children as well as safety tips for children and parents through every U.S. K mart store.

According to Charron Rumple, assistant manager at the Midland K mart store, studies show that half the population will visit a K mart during one month. "We will be reaching a large part of the population," she added.

Displays at the front of the store and in the camera and jewelry department will hold photographs of missing children as well as safety tips for children and parents on how to save children from being abducted. The photographs will be changed every 30 days, Rumple said.

In addition to the store displays, similar flyers will be included in every photo processing order through the corporation's five photofinishers, Guardian Photo, American Photo, Colorcraft, Bicknell, and Phototron. According to corporate figures, there are more than 43 million photograph orders processed through 2,000 plus stores nationwide.

Customers will be asked to call the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children hotline - 1-800-843-5678.

While Rumple stated that it would be worthwhile if this program helped find one child, she emphasized that the main thrust of the program is education. This was echoed by K mart vice chairman Samuel G. Leftwich, who said "The Lost Child Program will serve as an educational resource, with an objective of building a general awareness of child safety and ultimately lessening the number of future disappearances."

He added that "K mart stores will serve as a community resource, offering information through speakers and other materials, working with the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children in the disseminationof information and the identification and recovery of children, regardless of the circumstances of their disappearance."

As part of the educational objective, Rumple said both she and store manager Denny Denton will be available to present talks to school groups or service organizations. She noted that the store has gotten a lot of positive feedback from local customers.

According to figures compiled by the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children, approximately 11 percent of missing children end up as victims of criminal or sexual exploitation.

While thousands of children are abducted by noncustodial parents yearly, laws governing parental stealing and recordkeeping are unclear, so gauging the depth of the problem is difficult. The rest - up to 20,000 children and more, are abducted by unknown persons. Again, inconsistent statistics and investigative procedures, a myriad of grouups compiling information as well as sporadic efforts at public awareness have compounded the problem.

The 1984 Missing Childrens Assistance Act created the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children as was authored by the Center's executive director, Jay Howell. The center is joined by local businesses such as dairies, soft drink bottlers, advertising distributors, all featuring photographs of missing children on their products. Church groups, school teachers, professionals and law officers are also joining in the effort.

Hospital Corp. to drop three area hospitals

From Staff Reports

The Federal Trade Commission has announced Hospital Corp. of America, the largest for-profit hospital chain in the U.S., has agreed to divest itself of two of its Midland hospitals and one hospital in Odessa. The hospitals are in the Forum Group, Inc.

HCA acquired most of Forum's hospitals for approximately $195 million. However, a complaint issued with the settlement alleged that the acquisition may substantially reduce competition in two geographic areas. One area is the Viginia area, and the other is the Midland/Odessa area.

As part of the agreement, HCA has agreed to divest Parkview Hospital, a general hospital in Midland. At the time of the acquisiton, HCA operated under a management hospital contract, called Medical Center Hospital in Odessa, one of the three other general hospitals in the Midland-Odessa area. HCA also agreed to divest its interest in a planned new hospital in Midland, Doctor's Hospital of the Permain Basin, that is to replace Parkview.

HCA agreed to divest the hospitals to commission-approved acquirers within 12 months after the order becomes final. If the company does not meet that time limit, the commission will appoint a trustee to make the divestitures. For ten years, HCA may not reacquire the asset of any of the divested hospitals, without prior FTC approval.

In addition, HCA agreed to provide the FTC advance notification for ten years before acquiring any psychiatric hospital or unit, or any general hospital operating a psychiatric unit in the Norfolk area, or any general hospital in the Midland/Odessa area. However, HCA may purchase such hospitals without advance notification if the purchase price is at least $1 million.

HCA is based in Nashiville, Tenn. They own, lease or manage more than 350 general acute care hospitals in more than 25 psychiatric hospitals in the US. In 1983, its revenues from these hospitals was more than $3.7 billion. Forum, with headqurter in Indianapolis, owns and operates nursing homes, retirement living complexes and facilities for the disabled. It had 1984 operating revenues of approximately $110 million.

The consent agreement is scheduled to appear in the federal register shortly. It will be subject to public comment for 60 days, after which the commission will decide whether to make it final.

Any written comments should be sent to the Office of the Secretary, Federal Trade Commission, 6th St. at Pennsylvania Ave., NW, Washington, DC 20580.

Located about 100 miles east of Karachi, the South Mazari No. 1 well was tested at a combined rate of 3,395 barrels daily from two zones in the late cretaceous lower Goru formation.

The lower zone flowed 2,032 barrels daily of 43.6 degree API gravity crude oil on a one-inch choke from perforations between 3,976 feet and 3,988 feet. The upper zone flowed 1,363 barrels daily of 42.8 degree API gravity crude oil on a one-inch choke from perforations between 3,920 feet and 3,930 feet.

Union Texas, as operator, has a 30 percent interest in the discovery. The remaining interest is held by Occidental Petroleum with a 30 percent interest and Oil and Gas Development Corporation, the Pakistani government-owned oil company, with 40 percent. Including the South Mazari find, the Union Texas group has discovered nine oil and gas fields in the Badin area and is conducting an ongoing exploratory drilling and seismic program. Under its licensing agreement with the Pakistan government, the Union Texas group explores for and develops oil and gas on 2.2 million acres in the Badin area.

Reform, funding longtime needs of Texas prisons

By MICHAEL L. GRACZYK
Associated Press Writer

HUNTSVILLE — Reform and money.

Those words pop up again and again in the 143-year history of the Texas prison system, which over those years has earned status as among the best in the nation and scorn as among the worst.

The Texas Congress hobbled the prison system's beginnings in 1842 by passing an act to establish a penitentiary but failing to appropriate enough money. The money was finally approved, but by 1856, punishments meted out to inmates required the first reforms to be put on the books.

Today, the nation's second-largest and perhaps deadliest prison system, with 25 inmates killed in 1984, is preparing to enter another new era.

Approval of a settlement ending a 13-year court battle is expected soon from U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice, who has a hearing scheduled on the matter Monday, July 15.

If Justice approves the expensive reform package, the Texas Department of Corrections will have come full circle — again.

The proposals trace back 13 years to a hand-scrawled civil rights lawsuit filed by inmate David Ruiz, a convicted robber.

Ruiz accused the prison system of discrimination, overcrowding, inadequate medical care and security, and improper food and sanitation.

After 159 trial days stretched over two years, 349 witnesses and 1,565 exhibits, Justice released his decision in 1980, taking 249 pages to take apart the Department of Corrections and put it back together the way he thought it should be.

The state appealed and won some reversals 18 months later. But the die had been cast.

The Texas Legislature this year gave the department a whopping $539 million for its operations in 1986, an increase of $300 million over this year and more than four times the amount the state spent on prisons just five years ago.

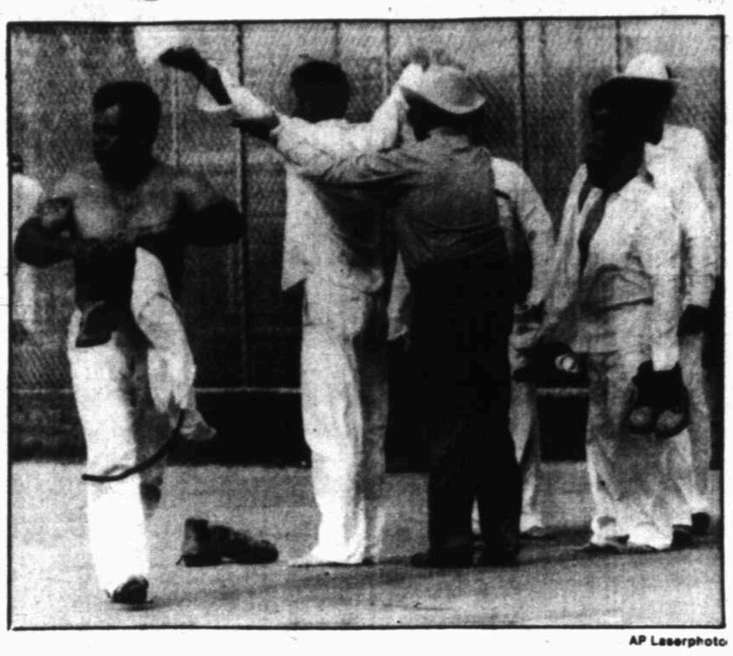

Under the settlement, new prisons will be built and new guards will be hired; the final price tag may run to $1 billion. It is designed, officials and inmates' attorneys said, to reduce overcrowding, inmate stabbings and murders and occasional attacks on guards.

Some reforms are already in place.

Building tenders, a system that used inmates to guard inmates, were eliminated.

Also eliminated was the practice of cramming three inmates into a 9-foot-by-5-foot cell because there were too few cells.

A new prison management team was hired, headed until this spring by nationally respected corrections specialist Raymond Procunier.

Inmates are searched by a prison guard as they return to an Ellis Unit cellblock following a work detail.

In 13 months, Procunier, who would later say he found things 100 times worse than he expected, brought the system into the 1980s. He trained new guards, shook up the warden ranks, separated first-offenders from hardened criminals and assembled a two-binder manual of rules for the department — something the system had never had.

Some 11,600 people now work for the corrections department, more than twice the 4,600 employed there five years ago and a jump of 2,000 in each of the past two years.

The overcrowding issue wasn't resolved until May of this year when the state and attorneys for the inmates finally agreed to a capacity of 34,210 prisoners, about 4,000 fewer than the number of inmates currently in the 27-prison system.

Texas officials are now committed to building a series of trustee camps and a new maximum security prison to ease the crowding, which Lane McCotter, Procunier's successor, believes contributed to the increase in violence.

"Prisons in 1970 that were model prisons with 1,000 or 1,200 inmates had 2,200 to 2,400 inmates with the same support facilities," he said.

Last year, 404 inmates were stabbed and 25 others were killed. This year, although fatalities are keeping pace with last year's rate, stabbings are down by about 25 percent.

Procunier termed his rescue effort a success and quit in June, saying the new leadership could proceed but he was burned out.

His No. 2 man, McCotter, a former Army corrections administrator, was elevated to the top job in June and believes the Ruiz settlement will have a "tremendous" effect on prisoners, particularly those good-behavior men who will be assigned to new trustee camps.

Michael Vines, a convicted killer from Fort Worth who has spent 11 years behind bars, thinks the problems are not over, but things are better.

"The food is better, the medical care is better," Vines said. "No question about that. You can't even compare to what it was."

But few expect the changes to end the assaults.

"The settlement didn't change people," said Kermit Gabel, serving a life term. "This still is a violent place. This isn't a Boy Scout camp. It's a place for social misfits."

"We are natural enemies here," added Vines. "There is one group with power and another group that believes it shouldn't be under that power."

McCotter worries that the facilities awaiting construction won't keep pace with time deadlines mandated by the agreement.

Estimates based on population growth say 11,500 more inmates will be put behind bars in the next four years. The prison population, which five years ago counted 30,300 inmates, is nearing with 38,000.

The century-old cycle of reforms will continue, not only in Texas but throughout the country, McCotter said.

"All prison systems are facing overcrowding problems at a time when fiscal constraints are at an all-time high," he said. "We must continually look for better ways to do things and cheaper ways to do things but just as effective ways to do things."

Justice acknowledges image

By CANDICE HUGHES
Associated Press Writer

TYLER — A sleek black sports car noses down the highway. At the wheel is one of the most controversial and, some say, powerful men in Texas.

At 65, U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice shows little sign of slowing down.

He jogs, works out at the local gym and regularly puts in a six-day work week, presiding over a docket of 800 cases that is twice the national average.

"He's the most famous district judge in Texas, one of the most famous in the country," said Lino Graglia, a professor of constitutional law at the University of Texas.

Prisons, schools, voting boundaries, juvenile homes and public housing projects — Justice has changed many aspects of Texas life. On July 15, he may preside over another change at a hearing into a vast prison reform package.

Justice's past rulings have set precedents, enraged conservatives, delighted civil libertarians and, for years, made him one of the most despised residents of conservative Tyler.

But after 17 years on the federal bench, Justice has also reached the age when many people begin to consider their legacy.

"I've achieved notoriety," he said. "I have not paid attention to it. I'm too busy. Even when I'm shaving in the morning, I'm thinking about what's coming up that day."

But Justice, who recently granted his first television interview, is keenly aware, and a trifle bemused, by his popular image as a reclusive reformer, an ascetic "living on yogurt." He finds it far too dour.

He bought his first sportscar, a Jaguar XK 150, in 1961 and has driven hot cars ever since.

Given more free time, Justice said he'd play a lot of tennis. And given a more hospitable climate, Justice said he and his wife, Sue, who once cha-chaed and rhumbaed away many a warm East Texas evening in their youth, would probably socialize much more than they now do.

"We go to the big parties...but not the small intimate gatherings, if you get my drift," he said. "I'll be an outsider to the end of my days."

The slender, courtly, self-confident man with thinning hair cruises Tyler's red brick streets, pointing out the magnolia-shaded mansions built by cotton, oil and mercantile fortunes.

He speaks of his native East Texas, which nurtured him, shaped him and finally, rejected him.

"I grew up under the full influence of the Confederate mystique," said Justice, who was born in nearby Athens.

His place in the annals of law and the history of the state is secure. But that place, like the man, is the subject of intense dispute.

To admirers, Justice is one of the great civil rights judges of the South. In 1982, he was named the most outstanding federal judge in the nation by the Trial Lawyers of America.

To others, he is a capricious, self-righteous and tyrannical abuser of judicial power.

"The proper role of a federal judge is to enforce and apply the law," Graglia said, "not to make up the law according to his own preference."

Justice has reshaped the state's voting boundaries, integrated its schools, changed the lives of thousands of mentally retarded citizens, blacks, Hispanics, juvenile offenders and convicted criminals.

He ordered racial integration of a public housing project and set the precedent that children of illegal aliens are entitled to a free public education. His rulings have cost the state hundreds of millions of dollars.

"It's been my lot in life to be thrust into the middle of these very controversial lawsuits," he said.

Within a year of his 1968 appointment by President Lyndon Johnson, Justice had issued the first of his major desegregation orders. The following year brought his landmark ruling in the United States v. Texas, which essentially put him in charge of desegregating most of the state's public schools.

The reaction to his desegregation orders was swift and virulent. Justice soon became known as the most hated man in East Texas. For years, "Impeach William Wayne Justice" stickers adorned local bumpers. The judge said his wife couldn't even get her hair done in Tyler.

"He handles it with total aplomb," said Athens attorney Bill Kugle, Justice's former law partner. "He's never demonstrated any outward signs of anguish. He told me once in a private conversation that it didn't bother him a bit, but he worried about his wife."

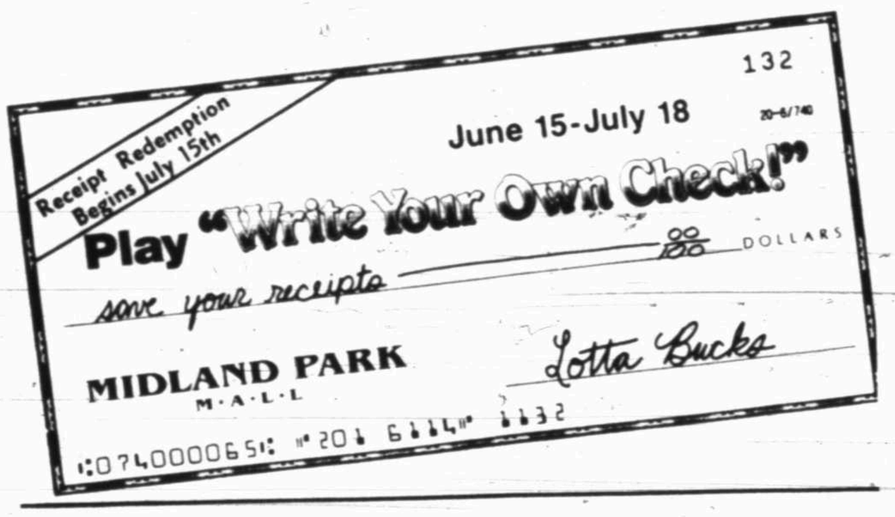

Former state school board member Bob Gregg, a Jacksonville banker, said he has wondered "from time to time ... if he was trying to bankrupt the state of Texas." But like many critics, Gregg finds Justice so likeable that his anger is "a hard thing to wrestle with."

"He's like Prince Charming," Gregg said. "He's extremely polite, extremely knowledgeable, truly a gentleman."

Justice said he'd like to be remembered as "professional," a judge who listened to the facts, divined the truth and then properly applied the law.

And he said he wanted to be seen as a man with his heart in the right place.

"I hope people regard me as well intentioned," he said. "I'm by no means certain that things are going to come out all right. But it was my intention to try and better things."

Easterner's accent now on getting job, back pay

By ROBERT SCHWARTZ
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — He was arrested, fired from his job, forced into thousands of dollars of debt and jailed for nine months because his thick East Coast accent was mistaken for the voice of a persistent bomb threat caller.

He was cleared of the charges only after an English dialects expert, using tapes of the two voices saying "a bomb is going off," disarmed the prosecution and astonished the judge by proving that the voices could not have come from the same person.

The bomb threat caller was clearly from the Boston area, the linguistics professor said, while the defendant had a distinct New York accent.

Paul Prinzivalli, a native of Long Island, N.Y., is now fighting to reclaim his job at Pan American World Airways Inc.

Prinzivalli, 39, was arrested on Feb. 16, 1984, while on duty at Pan Am's cargo warehouse at Los Angeles International Airport, and charged by the Los Angeles County district attorney with making a series of false bomb threats to Pan Am flights. Company officials and police believed after listening to tapes of the bomb threats that the "East Coast voice" of the caller belonged to Prinzivalli.

Last May, after having spent nine months and seven days in county jail while awaiting trial, Prinzivalli was acquitted — largely, the judge and the prosecutor say, because of the extraordinary testimony of Prof. William Labov, a sociolinguist from the University of Pennsylvania.

Labov, an expert on English language dialects, was able to discern fine differences between the two voices and demonstrate that the bomb threat calls were made by a man with a Boston accent, and could not have been made by Prinzivalli.

Now, Prinzivalli wants his job back, along with about $30,000 in back pay.

But Pan Am says he is not entitled to lost wages, and will only rehire him if he agrees not to sue the airline for damages.

The stocky cargo handler, a self-described malcontent, says that is an offer he cannot accept.

"I don't think I could go back and live with myself if I let them off the hook like that," said Prinzivalli, the grandson of Sicilian immigrants. "What they're doing is like sticking a knife in me and then asking me if I want a Band-Aid. Maybe it should be enough, but it isn't."

Pan Am officials argue that the company was the victim, not the perpetrator, of a crime, and if a mistake was made in arresting Prinzivalli, then it was the district attorney's fault — not theirs.

In his attorney's offices, a nervous and sometimes teary Prinzivalli retold his bureaucratic nightmare, which has left him with a bitterness "that will always be there."

His ordeal began in October 1983, when Pan Am received the first phone call saying there was a bomb on a flight to the South Pacific.

About 25 calls came in over the next five months, all apparently from the same man, and always forcing Pan Am to unload the same flight, one of its big moneymakers.

For that reason, says Deputy District Attorney James Baker, who prosecuted the case, investigators suspected that it was an inside job.

When company officials and investigators heard an "East Coast, New York-type accent" on snippets of the threats recorded by reservations clerks, "someone in cargo said 'Hey, that's Prinzivalli,' " Baker said.

Prinzivalli lived in Elmont, Long Island, for 27 years.

A tape of Prinzivalli's voice was prepared by detectives, who then asked several Pan Am employees if they thought the voices were the same.

"I hate to think that we went after him just because he had an Eastern accent," Baker said after the trial. "But maybe anyone with an Eastern accent would've sounded like the bomb threat caller to us because we're from the West Coast, and can't really tell them (East Coast accents) apart."

Other company employees who had worked closely with Prinzivalli, including a woman who had been Prinzivalli's direct supervisor, told investigators that the bomb threat voice was not his.

"Inflection, accent, tone, depth, pronunciation, timbre," said Linda Deschaine, when asked how Prinzivalli's voice differed from the caller's.

Prinzivalli was arrested in February, however, on the strength of the tapes and some evidence regarding motive provided by employees who described their colleague as a loner who had a beef with the company, and who had sworn "to get back at Pan Am."

Prinzivalli admits he was unhappy with his job assignment at the time of the bomb threats, but said his vow to get even with the company meant only that he would call in sick, and he says he never did carry it out. "I had 45 to 50 sick days coming, but I never abused them," said Prinzivalli, who had 16 years seniority with the company.

Ms. Deschaine, his former supervisor, confirmed that Prinzivalli was a discontented loner, but she said she never had cause to officially reprimand him. "We've had better employees, and we've had worse," she said in an interview.

Upon his arraignment, Prinzivalli was able to post $20,000 bail, but when the bomb threats continued in April, he was arrested again, and held on $50,000 bail in the Los Angeles County Jail.

There he remained until January, when his bail was lowered to $10,000. Prosecutors had offered him a plea bargain in June — time served and five years' probation for a guilty plea on the first three counts. Prinzivalli refused, although he knew he faced a possible six to eight years in prison if found guilty at his trial.

"I told my lawyer to let them throw the book at me," Prinzivalli said.

Interviewed last week, Superior Court Judge Gordon Ringer said that, based on the subjective comparisons of the two tapes and on motive evidence presented at the preliminary hearing, it would have been difficult for him to find Prinzivalli not guilty.

But at the non-jury trial before Ringer, Prinzivalli's lawyer, Ronald A. Ziff, called a new witness to the stand — Prof. Labov.

And in what Ringer describes as "fascinating, decisive" testimony that hushed the courtroom, Labov — with the aid of a small Swiss loudspeaker that has near-perfect clarity — demonstrated exactly how the two voices differed, and why they could not have come from the same person.

"Every single sound the bomb threat caller used fit into the eastern New England pattern, explained Labov, who in 1966 authored The Social Stratification of English in New York City. "All of the defendant's sounds fit into the New York City pattern. From the first time I heard the tapes, it was evident to me — and to colleagues and ordinary people who heard them back east — that the voices came from two different people."

Say CHEESE

TRIPLE CHEESE QUICHE

1 tablespoon butter
⅓ cup sliced green onion
¾ cup (3 ounces) each: shredded: Cheddar, Swiss and Jack cheeses
2 cups light cream OR half-and-half
1 tablespoon cornstarch
4 eggs slighty beaten
¼ teaspoon each: salt, pepper
1 unbaked frozen 9-inch pastry shell

Saute green onion until butter in tender, about three minutes. Combine sauteed onion and cheeses. Stir small amount of cream into cornstarch until smooth. Add remaining cream, eggs and seasonings. Pour over cheese mixture; mix well. Place mixture in two-quart freezer container. Cover and freeze. (Quiche mixture will keep frozen up to three months.)

Thaw quiche mixture in refrigerator 24 hours. To bake, preheat oven to 375-F. Stir thawed quiche mixture. Pour into frozen pastry shell. Bake 40-45 minutes, or until knife inserted near center comes out clean. Let stand 10 minutes before serving.

FETA FRUIT SALAD

Combine orange and grapefruit segments, seedless grapes, quartered cherry tomatoes, diced feta cheese on a bed of lettuce.

Sprinkle with chopped filberts. Serve with a light dressing.

⅛ teaspoon salt

CABBAGE SALAD WITH GREEN GODDESS DRESSING

Combine chopped ham and cabbage with diced fresh or frozen cooked vegetables and fresh chopped onion.

Add sliced apples dipped in lemon juice to prevent discoloration. Top with diced feta cheese.

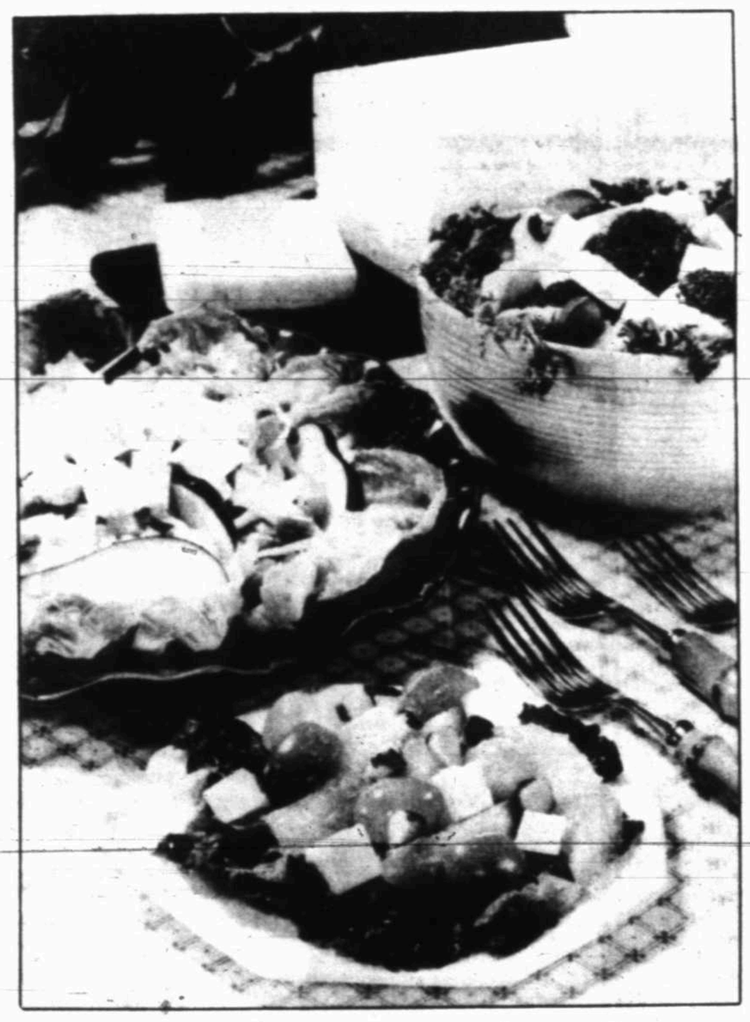

Serve with a light Green Goddess dressing.

GREEN GODDESS DRESSING

¼ cup yogurt
¼ cup chopped parsley
3 tablespoons vinegar
1 tablespoon lemon juice
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon basil

Mix ingredients together in a blender until smooth. Stir in ½ cup mayonnaise.

Makes one cup.

FETA GARDEN SALAD

Add diced feta cheese, broccoli flowerets, sliced mushrooms, sliced cauliflower, tomato chunks and seafood, such as shrimp, scallops or tuna, if desired.

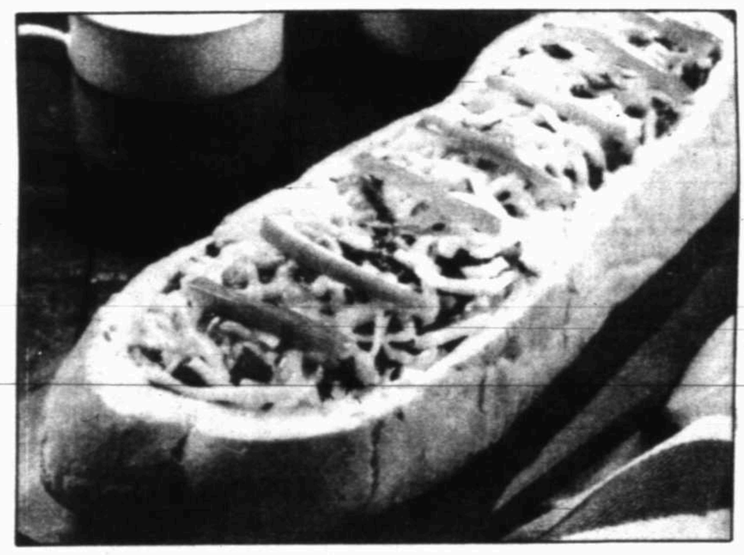

Serve with Sesame Dressing.

SESAME DRESSING

½ cup mayonnaise
½ cup oil
½ cup toasted sesame seeds
6 tablespoons lemon juice
½ teaspoon salt

Mix ingredients together in blender until smooth.

Makes 1½ cups.

SPINACH PIZZA BREAD

1 one-pound loaf Italian bread, round or oblong, unsliced
6 slices bacon, chopped
1½ cups each: sliced onion, chopped red and green pepper (combined), sliced fresh mushrooms
1 package (10 ounces) frozen chopped spinach, thawed, well drained
1 can (8 ounce) pizza sauce
3 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
1½ cups each: shredded Mozzarella, shredded Provolone cheese, combined red and green pepper strips, if desired

Preheat oven to 375-F. Cut bread horizontally in half; freeze top for later use. Scoop center out of bottom half, leaving a ½-inch shell. Place shell on baking sheet and bake 10-12 minutes, or until inside is crisp. Remove from oven onto cooling rack; cool completely. Meanwhile, saute bacon in large skillet until crisp. Remove bacon from skillet and drain on paper toweling; reserve 3 tablespoons drippings. Saute onion and peppers in drippings until tender, about eight minutes. Stir in mushrooms. Saute three minutes longer. Remove from heat. Combine spinach, pizza sauce, Parmesan cheese and 2½ cups combined Mozzarella and Provolone cheeses. Stir in vegetable mixture. Spoon into hard shell. Wrap bread shell in aluminum foil, making sure edges are covered to keep bread from becomimg too hard. Do not cover filling. Place on baking sheet. Bake 20-25 minutes, or until cheese is melted and filled is hot. Remove from oven and sprinkle with remaining ½ cup combined Mozzarella and Provolone cheeses. Garnish with red and green pepper strips. Return to oven until cheese is melted, about three minutes. Serve immediately.

American cheesemakers discovering old craft

Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

When some people say cheese these days, they may mean made in America.

They're not talking about the plasticized material that is result of processing in the name of long shelf-life. What they are referring to are the fresh, natural cheeses, made by hand on farms or in small factories where much of the labor remains unmechanized.

There's nothing new about domestic natural cheese. Most people are familiar with the Vermont, New York State and Wisconsin Cheddars, the Colbys, the West Coast Jacks and others that have been made in the United States since the mid-1800s. And natural blue, brie and Camembert have been made commercially (some high-tech, mass-produced) since the early 1900s.

But because of the increased interest in recent years in fresh cheeses, consumers appear to be rediscovering some of America's oldtime products, or searching out the newer farmstead or specialty cheeses being made mostly by young dairy farmers who are trying to emulate European farm techniques and recipes or are developing their own.

The fresh-cheese mania that has hit here in the last 10 to 15 years stems mostly from the heightened awareness of a more-traveled public that has led to greater consumption of imports. It also comes partly from the momentum of the 1960s back-to-nature movement.

Most of the newly marketed cheeses are being made from goat's milk, which up until a few years ago was in very limited and private production in this country.

Frank Kosikowski, who has been teaching cheese making and wine making at Cornell University for 45 years, said he thinks the next new interest of small producers will be in attempts at sheep's-milk cheeses.

American chevre got its first big boost in California, which is still the home of its two largest makers, both owned by young women, and the only ones with wide distribution.

Enthusiasm for goat cheese has been generated not only by so-called trend-setters in the food world, but by people who are allergic to cow's milk, or who are looking for lower-calorie cheeses. There now are at least 30 goat-cheese makers in the United States, many of them women.

"Dairying has always been women's work," said Sadie Kendall, one of the California producers.

CHEESE

"We are rediscovering that heritage," she said. "The thing that excited me about this (the move to natural, fresh cheeses) is the effect it may have on the cheese establishment (mass producers). If we create the demand, they will move in."

Here is a mini-catalog of some of the many new or long-established American farmstead and specialty cheeses and their makers:

— Coach Farm. Probably the newest East Coast entry in the goat-cheese business is the operation at this 300-acre farm in Galatinville, near Pine Plains, N.Y.

The owners, Miles and Lillian Cahn, who also own Coach Leatherware Co. in Manhattan, put the fresh and aged cheeses on the market this spring, exactly a year, Cahn said, from when they started the project.

The cheeses are priced from about $1 for the small disks, called buttons, to $9.98 for the half-pound domes at Fairway, 2127 Broadway; also available at Zabar's, Bloomingdale's, Macy's and Pasta & Cheese outlets all in Manhattan.

— Laura Chenel's California Chevre. Chaleix was one of four French cheese-makers with whom Chenel apprenticed before setting up shop in 1980 in Santa Rosa, Calif. What started as a hobby is now an operation in a five-room factory with three refrigerator rooms where she and a staff of six produced 60,000 pounds of cheese last year. She hopes to hit 80,000 this year.

Chenel was the first of the domestic goat-cheese-makers to gain national attention — and distribution — after her discovery by some of the top California chefs and the publication of her book, "Chevre! The Goat Cheese Cookbook."

For mail order, call or write San Francisco International Cheese Imports, 1908 Innes St., San Francisco, Calif. 94124; (415) 648-5252.

— Goat Folks Farm. Eight years ago, Ian Zeiler and his wife, Denise Forant, went to France, where they stayed with French families and friends who made cheese and "fell in love with the goats," he said. They decided to come back to the United States and try making cheese.

They started five years ago ("It seems like forever," said Zeiler) to make the pasteurized, soft-ripening cheese together at their farm in Interlaken, N.Y.

"The demand from day one has always been more than the supply."

Zeiler's cheese is sold to several highly rated restaurants in Manhattan and in a few retail stores, including Balducci's, Dean & DeLuca and Fairway.

— Hawthorne Valley Farm. The raw milk cheese made on this farm in Ghent, N.Y., is part of the operation of the Rudolf Steiner Educational and Farming Association.

The cheese maker for the past seven years has been Edie Griffiths, who went to work as an apprentice at the farm where her husband, David, is assistant manager, and cheese making sort of just happened."

By mail: mild, $3.50 a pound under 10 pounds, $2.50 a pound over 10 pounds; aged, medium and caraway, $4 a pound under 10 pounds, $3 for more than 10 pounds. All plus mailing cost. Hawthorne Valley Farm, Box 225A, R.D. 2, Ghent, N.Y. 12075; (518) 672-7500. Also available at the Saturday Green Market, Union Square, Manhattan.

— Kendall Cheese Co. Like Chenel, Sadie Kendall started her interest in goats and cheese making and its history as a hobby.

Four years ago, after six years of study, during which she got her degree in dairy manufacture, took courses in microbiology and did a lot of studying on her own, she began her commercial operation on the grounds of the state hospital at Atascadero, Calif.

Kendall's products may be ordered from Solomon's, 217 Willow St., Chicago, Ill. 60614; (312) 943-0691. In approximately ½-pound quantities: chevrefeuille, $9.50; petit chevre, $5; Camembert, $6.95; chevre sec, $4; chevre frais, $4.75; creme fraiche, $4 for 9 ounces, $22.50 for half gallon (4 pounds). All plus mailing charges. Send for a complete price list.

Many varieties of lettuce bring green goodness to salads

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

Green salads are served at almost any point of lunch and dinner, depending on your preference. They are at their best this time of year and, if you are a greens buff, can be the feature of a hot day meal.

The ingredients used in green salads are virtually endless, ranging from watercress to Chinese cabbage, but a major role is played by lettuce.

At most supermarkets, the lettuce section is dominated by iceberg — big, round, compact heads. This type should be clean, crisp and free of leaves that have ragged, brown areas.

Other favorites are Boston, whose soft, loose head has tender leaves ranging from green to light yellow; romaine, known for its crisp, green leaves with heavy ribs, and field lettuce, which comes in small clumps. This variety does not ship or keep well and is usually sold only near the areas where it is grown.

All types of lettuce should be kept cold, preferably in a plastic bag. Even then, lettuce rarely keeps more than a week. Iceberg is in the market all year long, but the other types are usually available only in season.

Lettuce has ancient origins. Historians say Persian kings enjoyed it as far back as the 6th century B.C. But in Rome it apparently was not served until the 1st century A.D. Roman writers mention about a dozen varieties, but the main emphasis was on romaine. Which may explain why the name resembles that of the Eternal City.

Lettuce can be cooked and served in soups and even stews, but it is usually the centerpiece for a green salad. Success of such a dish depends to a large degree on the dressing used. French dressing is good with mixed greens, and a mayonnaise base is often used for dressings on fruit or vegetable salad. Sour cream or yogurt is also popular on greens.

Here is a sprightly salad featuring cucumbers.

CUCUMBER SALAD

3 medium-size cucumbers
3 teaspoons salt
8 ounces sour cream
1 tablespoon olive oil
½ cup diced celery
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 medium head iceberg lettuce, broken into bite-size pieces

Pare cucumbers, slice thin and mix with 2 teaspoons salt in medium bowl. Cover bowl and let stand 45 minutes. Pour into strainer and let drain. Mix sour cream, olive oil, celery and remaining salt and pepper in bowl. Stir in well drained cucumbers and chill until serving time. Fill a large bowl with lettuce. Pour cucumber mixture over it and toss to coat greens. Serves 6 to 8.

Pistachioes grown in U.S.

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

It is a distinctive green nut about the size of a cherry, and for years Americans regarded the pistachio as no more than an exotic tidbit.

Only a few hundred trees were growing in this country, with most nuts imported from Europe and the Middle East. Now we are growing thousands of trees, and the pistachio is soaring in popularity, both as a snack and as an addition to cakes, sauces and vegetables.

The pistachio goes far back, to the days of the Queen of Sheba, who loved the distinctive buttery flavor of the nut.

For centuries it grew wild in the desert regions of the Middle East. But by the Middle Ages, pistachio trees were being grown in Europe.

Americans acquired a taste for the pistachio in the 1880s, when immigrants from Europe and the Mediterranean brought them to this country.

Pistachio trees were first grown here in the 1920s, but our methods were not refined enough to produce a commercial crop. All that changed a couple of decades ago, when we learned more about growing them and California's pistachio began to make great strides.

By the early 1970s, the trees were being planted on a mass scale and today, more than 45,000 acres of them are thriving, with the number increasing at the rate of 4,000 acres a year.

Recently, California swept past Turkey, to become the world's No. 2 producer of the nut, after Iran. This is all the more remarkable since it takes from seven to 10 years from planting to the first significant bearing.

The pistachio today has many uses, such as in this recipe for stuffed mushrooms.

STUFFED MUSHROOMS

20 medium-size mushrooms
3 tablespoons minced onion
Butter or margarine, as needed
⅓ cup dry bread crumbs
¼ cup chopped, shelled pistachios
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
¼ teaspoon marjoram, crushed
¼ teaspoon salt

Remove stems from mushrooms and chop the stems fine. Saute stems and onion in one quarter cup of butter until tender. Add bread crumbs, pistachios, parsley, marjoram and salt. Mix well. Spoon the stuffing into mushroom caps. Place on baking sheet; drizzle with 3 tablespoons melted butter. Bake at 350 degrees for 5 minutes, until hot. Makes 20 appetizers.

Rosemary memorable in microwave recipes

By DESIREE VIVEA
Copley News Service

"Parsley, sage, rosemary and thyme ... remember me to the one who lives there. She once was a true love of mine."

Remember the words of the old Simon and Garfunkel tune? They're particularly apt since, as Opehlia told Hamlet, "There's rosemary. That's for remembrance."

Rosemary has been symbolic of lovers' fidelity since the days of ancient Rome. And it was once a tradition in England to present the bridegroom with a bouquet of the herb on his wedding day, to ensure faithful and enduring love.

If you've forgotten to add a jar of rosemary to your spice rack, why not remember it next time you're at the market? You'll find so many unexpected uses for this sweetly fragrant herb, you may wonder how you did without it.

Rosemary is an evergreen, a member of the mint family. Its leaves are grayish-green and pointed like pine needles, with a flavor reminiscent of mint. Excellent with lamb, pork, chicken and seafood, it's an herb to use sparingly — but often.

A standard ingredient in poultry stuffings, rosemary also is found typically in commercial "Italian seasoning" blends, and in wine marinades for meats. Try infusing one-half teaspoon of dried rosemary in a cup of boiling water for a tangy, fresh-tasting herbal tea.

Zucchini, spinach, green beans, peas and potatoes all can benefit from a pinch of rosemary.

Available fresh or dried (whole leaf or ground), this herb of remembrance and true love adds a hint of minty-sweet flavor to the following microwave recipes.

HERBED LAMB STEW

1½ lbs. boneless lamb
2 medium-size onions, sliced
1 clove garlic, minced
¼ cup flour
2 cups water
⅓ cup tomato paste
1 tsp. instant chicken bouillon
½ tsp. crushed rosemary
¼ tsp. each salt and pepper
½ cup frozen peas

In 2-quart glass casserole combine lamb, onions, and garlic. Sprinkle flourover top and toss gently to coat.

Combine water, tomato paste, bouillon and seasonings; blend thoroughly. Pour over lamb mixture.

Cover and microwave on HIGH (100 percent power) 5 minutes. Stir. Reduce setting to MEDIUM (50 percent power), and continue cooking 30 to 35 minutes, stirring every 10 minutes, until meat is tender.

Stir in peas and microwave 5 minutes longer. Let stand, covered, several minutes before serving.

SAVORY SAUCE PORK

2 tbsps. butter or margarine
1 lb. boneless pork, cut into 1-inch cubes
¼ cup flour
¼ tsp. each garlic salt and pepper
½ cup sour cream
¼ cup water
¼ cup red wine
½ tsp. crushed rosemary
Chopped fresh parsley (for garnish)

Place butter in 1½-quart glass casserole and microwave 45 seconds to 1 minte, until melted.

Place pork in bag with flour, garlic salt and pepper. Shake well to coat meat.

Turn meat into casserole and microwave, uncovered, 5 minutes; stir. Microwave 4 minutes longer.

Combine sour cream, water, wine and rosemary; pour over meat. Cover and microwave 10 to 13 minutes, stirring after 6 minutes, until meat is tender. Let stand, covered, 3 to 4 minutes.

Serve over hot cooked rice or noodles, and garnish with chopped fresh parsley.

Serves 4.

CHEDDAR ZUCCHINI CUSTARD

5 cups shredded fresh zucchini, packed
½ tsp. salt
1 cup shredded cheddar cheese
½ tsp. each garlic powder, pepper and crushed rosemary
3 tbsps. chopped fresh parsley
¼ cup commercial biscuit mix
4 eggs, well beaten
2 tbsps. butter or margarine
Dash paprika

Place zucchini in large bowl, sprinkle with salt, and set aside for 1 hour.Turn into colander and press out liquid.

Return zucchini to bowl and add cheese, garlic powder, pepper, rosemary, parsley, biscuit mix and eggs Blend thoroughly.

Place butter in shallow 10-inch glass baking dish and microwave 30 to 45 seconds, until melted. Spread zucchini mixture evenly in dish and microwave, uncovered, 5 minutes.

Stir, sprinkle lightly with paprika, and microwave 5 minutes longer. Let stand 3 to 5 minutes before serving. Serves 4 to 6.

Beer drinkers quaff more imported brews

Copley News Service

The day is coming — if, indeed, it is not already here — when talk of beer will focus on the mystique of a very good year. Were the hops blessed by nature's hand? Can the barley crop promise a worthy nectar?

Good, bad or indifferent — only the brewmaster may know for sure. Beer, for all its blue-collar tradition and mass-market blandness, has come of age. Brewed in a variety of ways, with care and sophistication designed to appeal to an increasingly discriminating consumer, it may even be considered the wine of the '80s.

"It's following in the footsteps of wine," insists Bob Bridges, a brewmaster who contributes to the publication All About Beer. "Beer is where wine was seven or eight years ago. Because of different wines, our palates are sophisticated. we're demanding more than the traditional American lagers."

Indeed, statistics supplied by the National Brewers Association indicate that import beer consumption in the United States has jumped 24 percent over the past three years. Its national share: 4 percent.

THE TRADITIONAL domestic lagers, on the other hand, have either declined or remained stable — flat, as the beer merchants are wont to say — in sales over the last three years.

Noting this trend to the imports, San Diego-based Vienna Importers Inc., has introduced a new beer into the American market: Gold Fassl Vienna Lager, a product of Vienna's 150-year-old Ottakringer Brewery.

The beer — a deep, rich lager that will retail between $4.59 and $4.95 per six pack — also is being distributed in Phoenix. By 1987, say the importers, it will be available nationally.

Bridges compares the trend in beer consumption to that of automobiles. The foreign market is making inroads, he says, because the domestic market is not giving the consumer enough options.

The future of beer, Bridges suggests, is with food. "Think of beers with food," he said, "for the nuances you find in wine." There is an appropriate style, he suggests, for each course — a wheat beer, for example, with appetizers; an ale with the entree, a porter with dessert. Heavy beer for heavy food, lighter beer for lighter fare.

"There are many different styles," he said. "A smoked beer, for instance, is dynamite with barbecue or lox."

IMPORTS PROVIDE the greatest choice, and they're not, say the connoisseurs, to be sloshed down like an American low-calorie beer. Nor are they designed to be consumed ice cold.

"Get the aroma," suggests Bridges. "Swirl it in the glass for the bouquet. Inhale, then exhale through the nose. Gulp it down and enjoy it."

There are taste sensations, nuances, to be savored. Let it breathe. Let it sit. Let t'e nuances prepare to emerge.

Unlike most domestic beers, imports such as Gold Fassl are sold exclusively in bottles. "Beer is always better from a bottle," said Bridges. "After four weeks in the hull of a ship, with no air conditioning, glass is more protective."

Gold Fassl enters an import market dominated by Heineken, the Dutch brew introduced to the United States 50 years ago. Its importers point to the fact it was rated the No. 1 lager beer among 1,350 brands tasted by a 45-member panel whose evaluations were published in the "Connoisseur's Guide to Beer" by James D. Robertson (Jameson Books, $11.95). Gold Fassl achieved a ranking of 82 out of a possible 90, compared with 65 for Heinken and 62 for Beck's, 54 for Corona and 24 for Molson Golden — four of the more popular foreign imports.

THE TOP-rated brews in the blind tasting: Prior Double Dark, brewed by the Adam Scheidt Brewing Co. of Norristown, Pa., and Kulmbacher Schweizerhofbrau bock, a German beer, both with 87. The fabled Pilsner Urquell of Czechoslovakia — considered state of the art among lagers — was assigned a surprisingly low 65.

Gold Fassl contains 3.99 percent alcohol for the American market, down from the 4.2 it carries in Austria and the 32 foreign countries to which it is exported. Were it to exceed 3.99, it would have to be labeled an ale according to U.S. regulations. Its ingredients, conforming to the Bavarian purity law that prevails in Europe, are water, barley, yeast and hops. Calories? Probably more than 150 for 12 ounces, said David Hubbard, president of Vienna Importers.

"Most European beers," said Hubbard, "contain 10 to 15 more calories than their American counterparts."

Czechoslovakian hops and spring water from the Austrian Alps are used along with malted barley in the Gold Fassl brewing process. It is aged 2 to 3 months in oak casks before being exported.

Coors, by comparison, is aged 49 days and Budweiser one month, according to the "Connoisseur's Guides to Beer." Some beers are aged no longer than a week, said Hubbard.

While one's knowledge and taste in wine often is linked to his social status, the same soon may be true of beer.

DEAR ABBY

Readers don't split hairs over 'Rapunzel' letter

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: "Rapunzel Legs," a hairy feminist in Everett, Wash., refused to shave her armpits or legs, and now she's screaming "sexual discrimination" because she's not welcome at private swim centers and exercise clubs. I think she deserves all the grief that comes her way.

Doesn't she know that in this country women shave their legs and armpits in the interest of good grooming? Underarm odors are bound to be trapped in all that hair, so it's also a matter of hygiene.

If "Rapunzel" let her hair down for me, I'd send up a case of Right Guard. — DENVER READER

DEAR ABBY: Sure it's sex discrimination to ban "Rapunzel Legs" from swimming centers because she doesn't shave her legs and underarms.

Are men banned from swimming centers because they have beards and hairy chests, hairy legs and hairy arms?

Personally, I'd be happier if men and women got rid of all their body hair before swimming in a public pool. They don't realize that all that hair clogs the drains and filter system. — EX-POOL MANAGER

DEAR ABBY: That woman who refused to shave her legs should be named "Repulsive" instead of "Rapunzel."

If she's too lazy to shave, she should move to Europe. — RITA, CHARLOTTE, N.C.

DEAR ABBY: "Rapunzel" should realize that allowing her dark and plentiful hair to grow in an unsightly manner is uncouth, unfeminine and unsanitary. In America we consider hairy legs and underarms gross. In Europe it's considered sexy. But then, Europeans don't use deodorants; they think sweat and other natural body odors are "sexy." Pee—ooey! — ALL-AMERICAN GIRL

DEAR READERS: And now, equal time for "Rapunzel Legs":

DEAR ABBY: No woman should shave her legs if she doesn't want to. I haven't touched a razor for years, and when some no-class, big-mouth comments on my hairy legs, I say, "I'll shave my legs when my husband shaves his!" — LOTTA GUTS IN RICHMOND, VA.

DEAR ABBY: Hooray for "Rapunzel"! I think hairless women are a multibillion dollar conspiracy dreamed up by the manufacturers of razors, razor blades, electric shavers, shaving creams, depilatories, waxes and the electrolysis business.

Shaving is a bloody nuisance (literally!) and often leads to infections, ingrown hairs and razor burns. Thanks for sticking up for a woman's right to be herself. — HAIRY IN HOUSTON

DEAR ABBY: Like most American women, I learned early in life to tweeze, pluck, shave or wax away offensive body hair, but I always hated the chore. Now that I'm more mature, I'm able to face a few rude stares or comments rather than return to scraping my skin with a metal blade.

I'd like "Rapunzel" to know that seeing other unshaven women in public gives me permission to be myself, and I thank her for her courage in being a pioneer. Women are taught to hate their bodies, and to believe that their natural selves are somewhat disgusting. I see it as just one more way we're kept busy being self-conscious and thinking about trivial things (like men's opinions of us), so that we won't figure out where our real power lies. — FEMINIST

DEAR ABBY: Tell "Rapunzel Legs": Yes, it is sex discrimination to demand that women shave their legs while men walk around like gorillas.

And if "Rapunzel" wants to go topless — like a man — she won't get any complaints from me. — RED IN PARIS, TEXAS

Australian acacia seeds nutritious

Copley News Service

The seed of Australia's national flower, the acacia, is a potentially valuable food source. A study at the University of Sydney has found that the seeds of nine of the 12 edible acacia species contain greater energy, protein and fat than cereal crops and even some meats.

Protein levels range from 12 percent to 27 percent, compared with only 1 percent to 2 percent for wheat.

Pandowdy dessert defined

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

DEAR CECILY: Will you settle an argument between two good cooks — both friends of mine? What is the difference between a cobbler and a pandowdy? — MEDIATOR.

DEAR MEDIATOR: According to Webster, a cobbler is "a deep-dish fruit pie without a buttom crust and with a thick biscuit top crust." A pandowdy is "a deep-dish apple dessert that is spiced, sweetened with sugar, molasses or maple syrup and covered with a rich biscuit crust and baked; served warm with a sauce or cold with the crust cut into the apples."

Nowadays a cobbler often has a cakelike topping and a pandowdy is often made with fruits other than apples. Here, for example, is a recipe for a Pear Pandowdy.

PEAR PANDOWDY

1½ teaspoons ground cinnamon
¼ teaspoon ground allspice
¼ teaspoon ground nutmeg
½ teaspoon grated lemon rind
1 tablespoon lemon juice
2 tablespoons water
3 pounds (about) ripe pears
Topping, see recipe

Butter a shallow 2-quart baking dish.

In a large bowl stir together sugar, cinnamon, allspice, nutmeg, lemon rind, lemon juice and water.

Pare pears, halve, remove seeds and stem structure; slice and as you do so add to sugar mixture; toss to coat. Turn into prepared baking dish. Drop Topping by rounded tablespoons on pears. Bake in preheated 425-degree oven for 15 minutes. Reduce heat to 375 degrees and bake until pears are tender and topping is golden — about 30 minutes longer.

Makes 8 servings.

TOPPING: Stir together 1½ cups all-purpose flour, 1 tablespoon sugar, 2 teaspoons baking powder, ¼ teaspoon ground nutmeg and ¼ teaspoon salt. Add 1 cup heavy cream; stir with a fork until dry ingredients are moistened.

HOW TO PICK PLUMS....
Select fresh looking Plums that are plump, with good color. They should be fairly firm to slighty soft, yielding to slight pressure. At home, allow plums to soften at room tremperature for a few days, to bring out their full flavor. Then refrigerate and use as soon as possible.

Strawberries brighten summer

By BETTY WILSON
Hearst News Service

Fresh strawberries are just about everyone's favorite fruit this time of year. Whether you pick your own or buy them, you'll get the most for your money if you know how to select and care for the fresh fruit. The pick of the patch are bright red with fresh green caps attached. Berries with white tips are under-ripe and will not gain sweetness or flavor.

Buy only the amount of strawberries you plan to use in one or two days. At home, sort and remove any soft or spoiled fruit, then refrigerate, unwashed. Berries will keep longer if you spread them out on a tray. One or two days' storage in the refrigerator is all that is recommended.

Wash the berries just before using. A drop of dish detergent in cold water will help loosen sand. Handle carefully and avoid letting berries stand in water. Remove caps last.

One quart of berries will make about 2 cups of crushed fruit, and will serve 5 to 6. Two quarts of fresh berries will make 3 pints of fruit for the freezer, four 8-ounce jars of jam without added pectin or about six 8-ounce jars with pectin added.

Strawberries are low in calories — about 55 per cup. One cup of strawberries contains about the same amount of vitamin C as a 6-ounce glass of orange juice. They are also a source of iron and fiber.

Strawberries are naturally sweet. To keep calories low, serve the berries unsweetened on cold cereal. For a colorful, tasty low-calorie salad, surround a scoop of cottage cheese on lettuce with fresh red berries.

Mashed with a sprinkle of sugar or sweetener, strawberries are good on waffles, crepes, pancakes or shortcake. Strawberry sundaes are pleasing, but with plenty of calories. For a light dessert, serve strawberries alone or stretch a few with economical bananas in a fruit cup.

Preserve strawberries for winter meals. Although sugar or syrup is recommended for freezing, this is one of the few fruits which freeze well without sugar. Persons on low-calorie or sugar-free diets can try sugar-free jam.

SUGAR-FREE STRAWBERRY JAM

2 cups crushed strawberries
4 teaspoons unflavored gelatin
1½ tablespoons lemon juice
2 tablespoons liquid artificial sweetener, to equal 1 cup sugar

Soften the gelatin in ½ cup juice from the crushed berries. Heat remaining 1½ cups of crushed berries to boiling. Remove from heat and add the softened gelatin, stirring until it is dissolved. Add lemon juice and artificial sweetener. Return to heat and bring to boil.

Cool. Pour into containers suitable for freezing. Store opened jam in refrigerator up to four weeks. Makes two 8-ounce jars. Frozen, the jam will keep up to a year.

STIRRED CUSTARD OVER FRUIT

2 eggs, slightly beaten
2½ tablespoons sugar
1½ cups skim milk
¼ teaspoon almond extract
¼ teaspoon vanilla extract
2 cups fresh strawberries, halved
2 kiwi, peeled and sliced
1 can (11 ounce) mandarin oranges, drained

Combine eggs, sugar and milk in heavy saucepan. Cook over medium-low heat, stirring constantly, until custard thickens and coats a metal spoon. Remove from heat and add flavorings. Cover with wax paper and let stand 5 minutes. Stir and refrigerate.

Combine fruit and chill. Divide fruit among 6 individual serving dishes. Spoon custard over furit to serve. Serves 6, with about 128 calories per serving.

STRAWBERRY RHUBARB CRISP

2 tablespoons cornstsarch
⅛ teaspoon cloves
1 pint fresh strawberries, clean or 1 package (10-ounce) frozen
3 cups diced rhubarb
Red food coloring
⅓ cup soft margarine
⅔ cup brown sugar
½ cup quick-cooking oats
½ cup flour
1½ teaspoons lemon peel
½ teaspoon nutmeg
1 tablespoon cinnamon

Combine the first 6 ingredients in a buttered 1½-quart baking dish. Mix remaining ingredients with pastry blender or fork until crumbly. Sprinkle over fruit. Bake in 350 degree oven 40 to 45 minutes. Serves 6.

Mangoes tasty but some people allergic to them

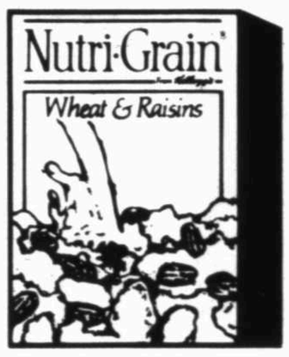

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Mangoes, like poison ivy, poison oak and pistachio fruit, are members of the cashew (Anacardiaceae) family and can cause varying degrees of toxic symptoms in individuals. Obviously, the toxicity is milder in mangoes, a universally popular fruit, than in poison ivy or poison oak. The cashew fruit has also been known to cause allergic reactions for some people.

Unfortunately, there is no way of knowing whether one is sensitive to mangoes until the fruit is tried and symptoms are exhibited. In Hawaii, some restaurants offer emergency relief (antihistamine treatment) to some people who, after eating the fruit, show allergic symptoms like respiratory blockage. Some individuals are also sensitive to the oil in the skin of mangoes and therefore cannot touch the fruit but surprisingly can eat the fruit without any problem.

In other parts of the world the skins of unripe or half-ripe green-skinned mangoes are eaten with the firm, crisp and whitish flesh. These are eaten as a condiment or snack with salt or sometimes preserved into pickles and chutneys. A 3½-ounce edible portion of mango (about half of a mango) contains 66 calories and is an excellent source of vitamins A and C, as well as potassium, calcium and phosphorus. There is a little more Vitamin C in green mangoes than in ripe ones.

New Permian High principal named

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Ector County School District trustees Tuesday night approved extension of the school day for first and second graders by 45 minutes, increased the price of lunches five cents, named a new Permian High principal and considered pay schedules proposed for teachers and administrators in the 1985-86 school year.

ECISD business manager Dr. Bill Walker told board members that under the proposed pay structure plan, slightly more than $58.3 million has been budgeted for salaries in the 1985-86 school year, with pay increases averaging about 3.8 percent.

The proposed salary budget represents an increase near $4.8 million, or about 8.95 percent more than the salary budget in the 1984-85 school year. The $4.8 million would be earmarked for "other payroll expenses," which would include substitute teachers; part time, temporary and substitute workers; overtime pay; employee stipends; group health, life, workers' compensation and unemployment insurance; retirement system contributions and severance pay for accumulated sick leave.

Regular salary costs will increase about $2.25 million from last year, Walker said.

One teacher addressing the issue of teacher pay, Bobbie Duncan, 1601 Wedgewood, said that under provisions set forth in House Bill 72, the education reform legislation approved by the legislature, teachers would advance only one step a year until Step 10, with annual pay increases amounting to about 6 percent.

Ella Ruth Anderson, describing herself as speaking "on behalf of experienced teachers and as a concerned parent," said she was interested in quality education. While she has no objection to bringing in new teachers, the district must take care of experienced teachers, she said.

School trustees named a new principal at Permian High, who will succeed the retiring Dr. Charles Broughton, but the vote was not unanimous.

Board member Vickie Gomez abstained from voting, which named Hood Junior High principal Jerald H. McClary to succeed Broughton. Later, Ms. Gomez said she withheld her approval because she felt the board had acted too quickly to fill the vacancy.

Ms. Gomez said the board should have waited to see who might apply for the post and try to obtain a person with the highest possible academic credentials to take the helm of the school district's "flagship school."

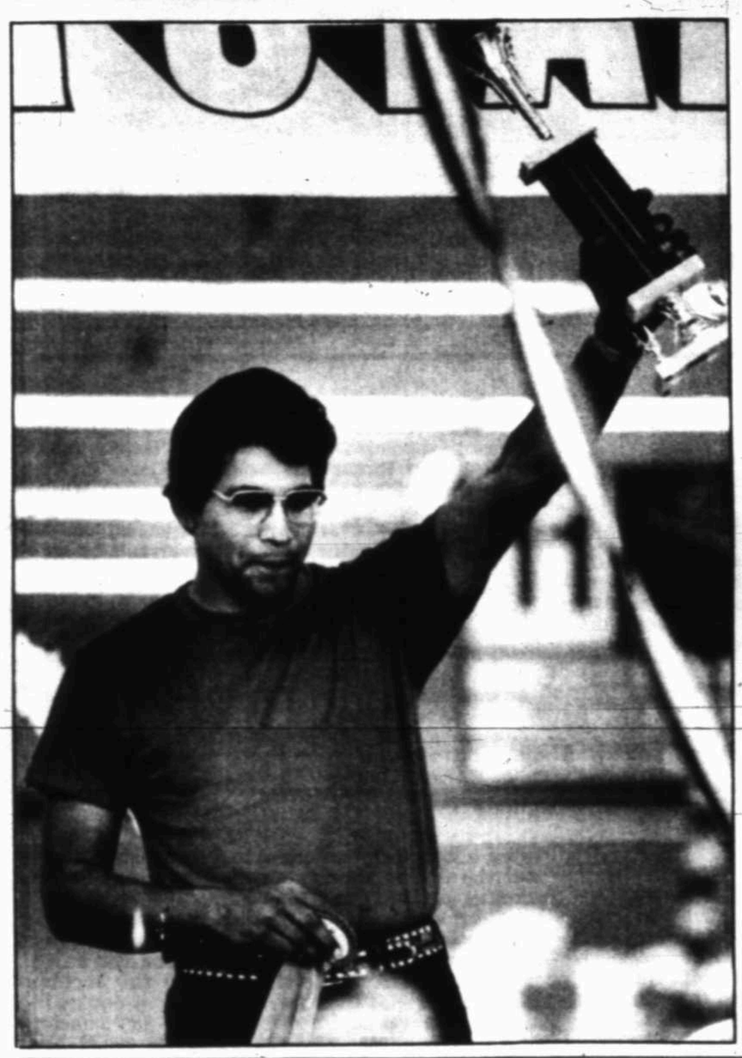

The rationale for increasing the length of the school day for first and second graders, according to Superintendent Bill Holm, is that it will provide more time for teaching, will reduce some stress for students by providing more time for classwork, and will solve the problem of tutoring for students in those grades.

Holm also said the lengthened day would be "an asset to parents by dismissing younger and older students at the same time, as well as reducing teachers' duty requirement of watching buses.

Trustees also voted to reduce the Homestead Exemption for the 1985-86 tax year from 40 to 30 percent. This was mandated by state law, which allowed the 40 percent deduction last year to compensate for implementation of new appraisal districts. In the 1986-87 tax year, trustees will have the option of allowing the Homestead Exemption to remain at the 30 percent level. After that, they will be required to reduce the exemption to 20 percent, where it can remain as long as ECISD board members choose to leave it there.

Food services director Ron Clark told board members the five cent increase in school lunches this school year is necessary because of a 4 percent to 5 percent increase in payroll costs, food cost increases of 2 percent to 3 percent, non-food cost hikes of 5 percent and what he described as "minimal federal reimbursement increases.

According to Clark, this is the first lunch price increase since 1983. The price of breakfasts in schools will not increase.

Kent Porter/Reporter-Telegram

Bagging a winner

White assures coaches he'll 'help refine' rule

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White has assured a group of Texas high school football coaches that the controversial no-pass, no-play rule is a good idea but says he will help them work to "refine" it.

The governor was joined at a Tuesday news conference by Texas A&M coach Jackie Sherrill, who arranged the meeting of 20 coaches from throughout the state with White.

"I am trying to refine what I think is the finest (school) reform package in the nation," White told the news conference. "I'm going to try to be imaginative in seeing how we can accomplish what we agree needs to be accomplished. That is to open the door of opportunity to our students."

The coaches were unavailable for comment, disappearing down a back elevator in the governor's office while the news conference was under way.

Sherrill told reporters the coaches in the meeting did not want to talk with reporters "because this group is not speaking for all coaches of Texas...they did not want to speak to the press until they had the whole feeling of their coaches' association."

Sierra Club wants appointment

From Staff Reports

AUSTIN - While Sierra Club officials remain unsupportive of a $1.18 billion statewide water plan passed by lawmakers this year, the environmental group's chief lobbyist says they will not oppose constitutional amendments necessary to finance the plan if Gov. Mark White appoints an environmentalist to the Texas Water Commission.

Although it's "doubtful" the Sierra Club would campaign for the water package under any circumstances, lobbyist Ken Kramer said the organization might decide to remain neutral on the issue, which he added could affect the passage of the constitutional amendments in November.

"It's going to make a difference in the passage of the water packages," Kramer said. Previous water plans adopted by the legislature have failed at the polls after being opposed by the Sierra Club, which Kramer noted, "has been in the forefront of organizing campaigns against water bonds, especially in 1976 and 1981."

Constitutional amendments authorizing the issuance of up to $1.18 billion in state bonds for water development projects, including those for flood control and agricultural assistance, will be on a statewide ballot this November. Top state officials, including White and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby are expected to campaign in support of their passage.

While the Sierra Club concedes the 1985 water plan is better than previous packages passed by legislators, Kramer said they are still concerned about protection of coastal bays and estuaries, groundwater management and conservation measures which are not adequately addressed by the plan.

"We've strongly suggested to the governor he needs to appoint a good environmental person to the water commission," Kramer said.

One of the three commissioners serving on the Texas Water Commission, Dallas attorney Lee Biggart, has a term which expires Aug. 31. Commissioners make decisions on water development projects, which must be submitted to the state for approval.

A tentative decision on the Sierra Club's official position could be made this weekend at a meeting in Galveston, especially if word is received from the governor's office about a possible appointee.

"We've had no feedback," said Kramer, who noted a list containing six or seven names has been submitted to White for consideration.

Even if someone from the list is appointed by White to the water commission, Kramer said the Sierra Club would probably not support the plan.

Marquez murder trial defense begins

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A 70th District Court jury of eight men and four women this morning began hearing defense testimony in the murder trial of 24-year-old Gilberto Rico Marquez.

Marquez and his 27-year-old brother, Estaban, are accused of the Jan. 20 fatal shooting of 25-year-old Nathan Florez at the La India Club, 1103 S. Dixie Blvd. No trial date has been set for Estaban Marquez, who remains free on $10,000 bond.

Involuntary manslaughter trial nears end

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The prosecution began calling its final witnesses in the involuntary manslaughter trial of 34-year-old Frank Granado Fierro when 244th District Judge Joe Connally reconvened court at 9 a.m. today.

Connally recessed the trial late Tuesday afternoon at the request of Assistant District Attorney Preston Stevens, who said some prosecution witnesses had been delayed.

Fierro is accused of being intoxicated when he was involved in an accident May 18, 1984, that claimed the lives of 26-year-old Wesley Durr of Canyon and two of his children, 3-year-old Erica Durr and 5-week-old Cody Durr. Durr's 30-year-old wife, Laverne, his 5-year-old daughter, Heather, and a friend, Harold Hanning, 34, of Fritch, were seriously injured in the accident.

Fierro allegedly was driving a McMinn Furniture Co. van toward Odessa on Interstate 20, west of FM 1936, when the van swerved and struck the side of a passing semi-trailer tractor rig. According to testimony Tuesday, the van apparently went out of control, crossed the center median, westbound traffic lanes and a ditch, then collided head-on with the Durr vehicle that was westbound on the north service road.

VIEWPOINT

Some Midlanders wonder if Live Aid raised consciousness

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Pledges continued to pour in by mail four days after the Live Aid benefit as organizers report that the super-concert raised up to $70 million worldwide to aid the starving in Africa.

Live Aid, a 16-hour trans-Atlantic rock concert, featured 61 of the world's biggest rock acts who performed simultaneously in London and Philadelphia. Reportedly, 162,000 fans watched in person while an estimated 1.5 billion more heard the music on radio and television in 150 countries.

Despite the praise and interest, some Midlanders wondered whether more attention was focused on musical history in the making or on the famine that threatens 130 million people in sub-Saharan Africa.

Of the 10 persons questioned, several expressed doubts that the concert would raise consciousness about the plight of starving Africans.

"It's a good effort but I don't know if it was worth it," said Arthur Valencia Jr, 801 S. Pecos.

Valencia, a job supervisor, said he did not pledge money to the Live Aid organization, adding, "They say that the money is getting there, but you don't see actual proof of purchase orders for food or airline freight."

Bryant

Welmaker

Green

Haney

Sheri Welmaker, 3319 Windsor Place, said she believes the Live Aid benefit is a "great effort, but I don't know how much is going to get over there.

"I think it's real good that they're trying," said the Midland secretary, "but we're fighting the communists over there. I think they're (the African governments) either keeping the money or storing the food until it rots."

Susan Bryant, 3603 Imperial, said she did not pledge to Live Aid, though she would have had she had the money at the time. "I would sure do it if I had the money," the Lee High School student said.

Calling it a good cause, Miss Bryant noted that if Live Aid organizers can guarantee that "100 percent of the money goes to (the starving), it's worth it."

However, her companion, Kim Haney of 3602 Shell, said, "It's not worth it if it's (food) not getting" to the hunger-torn region.

Miss Haney, also an LHS student, said she saw most of the Live Aid performances that featured reunions by such rock groups as Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young as well as the Pretenders and other top rock bands of recent years.

The youth praised the performances, but added that "they (the performers) get more publicity than anything else."

Despite the reservations, Kathy Green, 510 W. Hickory, said, "Any effort is a good effort because I don't want to see anybody go hungry."

Said James Woodruff, 1717 E. Maple: "Just the discussion about keeping someone from starving is worth the effort.

"I certainly hope it gets there," the assistant materials coordinator said.

Bill Parker of rural Midland said the success of Live Aid "shows what capitalism and free enterprise can do. I thought it was a good cause."

He was born March 30, 1918, in Amarillo. He moved to Midland in 1960 from Houston. In 1983, he retired from Drilco Industrial Division of Smith International Inc. as an engineering assistant, after working for the company since 1966. After his retirement, Bush operated a rubber stamp manufacturing business and a small appliance repair business.

Survivors include his wife, Virginia Bush, of Midland; and a brother, Damon W. Bush, of Lower Lake, Calif.

Farm cuts won't effect honors for land in production 100 years

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Despite legislative budget cuts, families which have kept their land in continuous agricultural production for 100 years or more will continue to be recognized by the state, Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower said.

Since 1974, more than 1,800 Texas farms and ranches have been in production for at least a century. Last year, 92 properties were recognized, including the 218-year-old Trevino Circle T Ranch near Zapata.

"Keeping the same land in continuous agricultural production for 100 consecutive years is no easy task, and these families certainly deserve the recognition and thanks," Hightower said.

"While we celebrate their achievements of the past, the Family Land Heritage Programs also points out the importance these family-run farms and ranches hold for the future: we need every one of these family farms and ranches in production for another 100 years," he added.

The oldest property recognized in the state is the Noriecitas Ranch, which was founded in 1740 by Simon De Hinojosa under the authority of the King of Spain. The ranch is located near Hebbronville in South Texas and was honored by the TDA in 1976.

Most of the farms and ranches recognized so far are located in East Texas, said program coordinator Carolyn Baethge, explaining it is because early development in the state started there.

Not surprisingly, Houston County deep in East Texas holds the record for the most properties placed in TDA's registry, with 48 families recognized by the program. Austin County is second with 44 properties recognized; DeWitt County is third with 39; Guadalupe County is fourth with 38; and Cherokee and Mason counties are tied for fifth with 32 apiece.

Ms. Baethge said qualifications for inclusion in the program are quite specific.

"The land must have been in agricultural production since 1885," she noted. "The owners must reside in Texas and must actively manage and direct the everyday operation of the farm or ranch."

If the land has ever been leased to someone outside the family, it cannot qualify, Ms. Baethge said. But if only a portion of the land was leased and at least 10 acres was retained by the family for agricultural production which netted sales of $50 or more annually, the property will still qualify.

The eight-page application is available from county judges, county historical commissions and directly from the TDA. Persons seeking an application may write to the Family Land Heritage Program, Texas Department of Agriculture, P.O. Box 12847, Austin, Texas, 78711.

All the families recognized in the 1985 edition of the registry will be honored at a ceremony in the State Capitol in November, according to Ms. Baethge.

Applications will be accepted by TDA through Aug. 30.

Former teacher turns director

Bryan, 74, writes, guides town musical

ROBERT LEE, Texas (AP) — Lucile Bryan is at her best when she stands at the top of Robert Lee's amphitheatre, pulls out her bullhorn and tells people what to do.

On rehearsal nights the 74-year-old Robert Lee resident can be found hurrying among benches in the outdoor theatre, hopping on and off the stage and offering suggestions to actors and actresses practicing for her annual musical.

"Ole Coke County, Home of the Rabbit Twisters," written and directed by Mrs. Bryan will be performed July 20-21 and July 27-28 at Mountain Creek Amphitheatre in Robert Lee.

Mrs. Bryan has been involved in the production since its Bicentennial debut at Robert Lee High School in 1976. It has been staged outdoors since 1978 when the amphitheatre, built by her husband, Wilson, was completed.

"Lucile is the heartbeat of the pageant. If she goes, it goes," said Bill Helwig, Coke County attorney. "It just doesn't happen without Lucile. It's almost a vocation with her.

The dictionary defines vocation as "a state or regular occupation; a call to, or fitness for, a certain career; the work or profession for which one has or believes one has a special fitness."

Mrs. Bryan doesn't consider what she does work. But she thinks constantly about the pageant.

"It's nothing unusual to hear that typewriter at 3 or 4 a.m.," her husband said.

"Well, that's when I'm really creative," Mrs. Bryan responded. "If I'm dreaming about something, I better get up and write it down or I'll forget it."

By December, Mrs. Bryan has usually completed at least one scene.

"I want to start before Christmas. If I don't have a scene finished before then I get nervous," she said.

The play, presented by the Coke County Pageant Association, chronicles the history of Coke County from the days when Indians roamed the area to the 1900s, when the county was voted dry. Scenes and dialogue in the pageant change from year to year, but the basic story line remains the same.

Actors and actresses are volunteers from Robert Lee, Bronte and surrounding communities such as Sanco and Tennyson. Some participants have been in the play since its beginning.

"Last year I was in three different scenes. This year I'll be in two scenes," said Edna Havins, Robert Lee city secretary and Mrs. Bryan's assistant director this year.

Mrs. Havins said jokingly she bought a bullhorn for the soft-spoken director last year because "we got tired of her shouting at us."

Helwig, who has been in the play twice, said he believes Mrs. Bryan's quiet style of directing has earned respect from the cast.

"I would say it's a little motherly persuasion, I guess. It's more like a sweet, little 'ol gray-haired lady asking you to do something for her," he said.

"It's something for her," he said. "It's hard to turn her down. And if you do, you repent every night for doing it."

A former teacher, Mrs. Bryan still hasn't lost her desire to motivate people to learn, explore and improve themselves. She was a teacher for 39 years and spent 21 years teaching at Robert Lee public schools.

"When I was teaching, it was my greatest joy to get all of my students on stage for a musical. So when I retired 12 years ago, I wrote this play," she said. "One of the main purposes with this play is to draw people out and see them develop on stage. We have ranchers, doctors, bankers — people of all walks of life. And these people who have been in this thing for years are like professionals. They know how to project their personalities and their voices. And it's such a joy."

As she spoke about the pageant, Mrs. Bryan occasionally recited lines from the play. She has memorized nearly all the parts.

She said she doesn't get tired of working on the play.

"If we didn't do it (the musical) every year, people would forget. If it's an annual thing our crowd increases every year, and we get a bigger following," she said.

Although Mrs. Bryan's work on the play is more public, her husband supports it by maintaining the amphitheatre, suggesting the correct ranching lingo to use in certain scenes and enduring the busy schedule.

Bryan owns a concrete and construction company in Ballinger. He served as mayor of Robert Lee three times and has been honored as Citizen of the Year.

Mrs. Bryan, who is active in the Texas Federation of Women's Clubs, also has a Citizen of the Year award and plays organ at First United Methodist Church on Sundays.

"Some of the children when I taught school — they thought I was about to die then. And it just amazes them that I'm still afoot when they knew me as a gray-haired teacher years ago," Mrs. Bryan said. "Seventy-four is a great age. We can't help it if we are born, but after we are, it's not a disgrace to keep living. It's an accomplishment.

"It's not how old you are, it's your attitude toward life."

Assistant District Attorney Dennis Cadra concluded the state's case against Marquez Tuesday afternoon by reading to the jurors a voluntary statement Marquez gave investigating officers after his arrest.

Marquez's court-appointed attorney, Sandy Torres, tried to block introduction of the statement, questioning if it was voluntary and whether Marquez, who speaks little English, understood the nature of the document signed for Odessa police detective Jose Trevizo.

Trevizo, during his testimony, explained to jurors he is bilingual, that he translated Marquez's statement, typed it in English, then read it to Marquez to make sure he understood it.

Judge Gene Ater last Friday, during a pretrial hearing, appointed interpreter Juan Garcia to sit with Marquez throughout the trial.

Torres began calling defense witnesses when court reconvened at 9 a.m. today.

Late Tuesday afternoon the District Attorney's office issued subpoena's and arrest warrants for several rebuttal witnesses expected to be called today.

The jury was expected to begin deliberations early this afternoon.

Testimony from prosecution witnesses Tuesday indicated Flores was shooting pool at the club when the Marquez brothers allegedly began chasing him around the pool table. Flores reportedly tried to escape from the two men, but allegedly was gunned down as he tried to go out the front door.

TRIAL

Fierro's defense attorney, John Pratt, Tuesday afternoon cross-examined 21-year-old Joe Cardona, who had been in the van with Fierro at the time of the accident.

Pratt questioned Cardona about why he had given two statements at different times to DPS officers investigating the accidents. Pratt pointed out that Cardona, in the first statement, had stated Fierro was not intoxicated and in the second statement said he and Fierro were intoxicated. Cardona stated he couldn't remember the first statement, but the second one he gave investigators was correct.

Fierro's attorney also questioned Cardona concerning who was driving the furniture company van and if he was authorized to drive it. Cardona said he was, but that Fierro was driving when the accident occurred.

The case was expected to go to the jury sometime this afternoon.

Man gets 50 years for burglary

From Staff Reports

A 43-year-old Midland man was sentenced Tuesday to 50 years in prison for burglary of a habitation, according to the Midland County District Attorney's Office.

Alfredo Hernandez faced a minimum 15-year sentence in the Tuesday trial because of a previous conviction for unauthorized use of a motor vehicle. The 142nd District Court jury could have given him up to 99 years or life, according to a spokesman in the DA's Office.

Another Midland man tried Tuesday was awaiting sentencing from 238th District Court Judge Vann Culp this morning after a jury found him guilty of possession of heroin.

Antonio Hernandez, 39, faces a minimum 25-year sentence because this is his third offense, according to the DA's Office.

Man arrested near store break-in

From Staff Reports

A 26-year-old Midland man was expected to be charged with burglary today after being arrested about 4:17 this morning near the Preston Milk Store, 438 Andrews Highway, according to police.

The man had blood on his hands, and blood was also found near the broken glass door of the milk store, reports said. Nothing had been taken from the building, apparently because the burglary was interrupted by police, reports said.

In other reports, an 83-year-old Midland man injured in a Thursday accident has been upgraded from serious to fair condition, a Midland Memorial Hospital spokeswoman said. Roy Thomas Williams, Route 3, Box 470, was hurt when his 1982 Ford LTD collided with a pickup on Andrews Highway near Kansas Avenue.

Max Cain, 3217 Durant, reported the theft of a videotape recorder, two rings, a watch and two guns worth a total of about $1,150. The burglary occurred sometime between Saturday and Tuesday, reports said.

Patricia Bryan, 4714 Elma, Tuesday reported a burglary in which a $600 camera, a $499 videotape recorder and two guns worth $347 and $234, respectively, were taken.

Guns, coins, cameras stolen from homes

ODESSA — Burglars hit two Odessa homes sometime between 10:30 p.m. Monday and 11:15 p.m. Tuesday and took more than $6,300 worth of personal property.

Gary Rowe, 1412 Nabors Lane, notified Odessa police Tuesday that someone broke into his home sometime between 10:30 p.m. Monday and 7:15 a.m Tuesday and took several guns, holsters, a stereo, a television set and camera equipment valued at $4,460.

Investigating officers said entry to the Rowe home was gained by someone who used a pair of pliers or channel locks to twist a doorknob.

Jerry Alton Davis, 1600 N. Washington St., reported to police someone entered his home between 7:15 and 11:15 p.m. Tuesday and took three deer rifles, a hand gun and a money lockbox containing a class ring and assorted coins. Davis estimated the loss at $1,900.

Pavarotti's goal to increase public's interest in opera

Luciano Pavarotti

By DONALD DIERKS
Copley News Service

Anyone could guess the voice was that of a tenor, even over the phone.

Speaking from Berlin recently, where he was to sing a recital and appear as Cavaradossi in a production of Puccini's opera "Tosca," Luciano Pavarotti's voice was pitched high and lightly weighted — softly modulated as if he were saving it for more important things than mere talking.

After scheduled performances in Hamburg and Munich, he isback to Italy for rest and recreation during until during July and August in Modena, the city where he was born in 1935.

"For these two months I will lie on the beach at home and relax with my family, although I do have three performances to give and some recording sessions scheduled during this vacation time," he said. He seemed to be saying that three performances and recording would be light work compared to what he does the other 10 months of the year.

"There really isn't an off-season for opera singers anymore," Pavarotti observed. "Winter opera seasons are longer than they once were, there are summer opera festivals, and the speed of jet plane travel makes it possible for singers to intensify their schedules — especially if they fly Concorde, although I do not because it is too expensive. There are many opportunities for overwork, but I try to pace myself and stay healthy and in good voice."

The programs he has sung in Madison Square Garden and other sports palaces around the country begin with popular opera arias by Puccini, Verdi and Donizetti, and end with Italian love songs in arrangements for voice and orchestra by Henry Mancini. This relatively short list of songs and arias is calculated against the sure demand by the audience for encores, and Pavarotti has five of these prepared, including four Neapolitan songs and concluding with "Nessun dorma," Calaf's aria from Puccini's opera "Turandot."

Asked if this light, popular kind of program will broaden the general public's interest in opera, Pavarotti replied, "This is the whole point!" A cynic might concede that promoting opera in this way is a part — even a large part — of Pavarotti's purpose, without dismissing the idea that the promise of rich remuneration is at least a consideration.

Often hailed as the premiere tenor in the Italian repertory in the world, Pavarotti has, almost from the beginning, earned top fees. He began singing lessons with his father when he was only 4 years old, and his first big operatic success was his debut at La Scala with Herbert von Karajan in a production of "La Boheme" in 1964 when he was 26.

In 1965, he was acclaimed with Joan Sutherland for their Australian performances in "L'elisir d'Amore," and it was with Ms. Sutherland in a 1966 production of "The Daughter of the Regiment" that he became the first tenor since Donizetti's time to sing Tonio's first-act aria and cabaletta, with its seven high Cs, in the original key. Debuts in Rome, San Francisco and at the Metropolitan Opera in 1968 added greatly to his growing reputation. He has since sung in virtually every major opera house in the world.

Is there a major house in which he has not sung? The tenor replied: "Yes. Two, I believe. The Teatro Colon in Buenos Aires, where I am scheduled to sing in a coming season, and at the Bolshoi in Moscow. I toured Russia with La Scala, but in Moscow we performed in the hall named for Tchaikovsky. I want to go back to Moscow sometime and sing at the Bolshoi. It is an important house."

Pavarotti had never heard that Sir Rudolf Bing, former general director of the Metropolitan Opera, fired the late, great Wagnerian soprano Helen Traubel in the 1940s for singing light, popular concerts, especially one at a casino in Las Vegas. "Really?" Pavarotti said. "Well, that was a long time ago and 40 years can make a big difference in attitudes, and this is good for us."

NBC's 'The Cosby Show' helped revitalize TV situation comedy

ENTERTAINMENT

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When the new television season opens this fall, America's first family of comedy, the Huxtables, will face a familiar family ordeal: the first day of school.

"The Cosby Show" became television's most popular program in its first season with its comic portrayal of everyday situations, and executive producers Marcy Carsey and Tom Werner say this season will offer more of the same.

Bill Cosby's favorite soft drink, Coca-Cola, may have been reformulated, but not his favorite program.

"Oh, there may be some subtle changes. Kids grow, you know," said Carsey. "But this family will evolve slowly."

The series' reality has helped revitalize the TV sitcom. Not only has "The Cosby Show" boosted NBC's follow-up Thursday night comedies, "Family Ties," "Cheers" and "Night Court," but it has accelerated the development of other cozy, domestic comedies, including several with blacks in the leads.

ABC has at least one black family comedy in the works and CBS will introduce "Charlie and Company," starring Flip Wilson and Gladys Knight, this fall. Wilson becomes defensive at suggestions that he owes something to "Cosby." Wilson said he proposed a family comedy vehicle for himself 12 years ago.

"Time just caught up to my idea," Wilson said.

Carsey and Werner are amused by the "Cosby" clones. They say there's nothing original in the concept of family comedies; they've been around for three decades. But what's different is the tone of a close-knit clan mining humor from life's ordinary ups and downs.

"And what this show also has is Bill Cosby, and Bill is unique," said Werner.

The issue of which reality "Cosby" should be depicting has provoked the series' only significant criticism. A story in Philadelphia magazine attacked the show for not dealing "with the persistence of racism, the lack of role models, the dilemma of assimilation and other problems... central and unavoidable in middle-class black life."

Cosby consistently has dealt with this charge by asking why his show has to tackle issues of discrimination and assimilation when Bob Newhart's show does not.

"It makes me crazy," said Carsey. "Bill Cosby has always had a universal voice. He unites people; he doesn't separate them."

Brandon Tartikoff, president of NBC Entertainment, says "Cosby" works because it "plays totally colorless."

"The Cosby Show" just won a Humanitas writing award for an episode in which Cliff (Cosby) and his wife, Clair (Phylicia Ayers-Allen), find a marijuana cigarette in their son Theo's book. The program approached the drug issue from a different slant, with the parents believing their son's ignorance about the joint.

The intention of Cosby and the producers is not to go on a soapbox or isolate problems particular to a single group, but to demonstrate that people have more in common — good and bad — than they realize.

Asked if a story touching on discrimination might ever be done, Carsey said maybe, "but that's certainly not the thrust of our show."

From the beginning, "Cosby" has taken small-scale domestic events — such as the death of Rudy's (Keshia Knight Pulliam) pet goldfish or Theo (Malcolm-Jamal Warner) trying out for the football team — and then advanced the episode with the family's reactions and responses, particularly Cliff's.

NBC was a little anxious about this approach, having for years thrived on grabbier, more exaggerated domestic-crisis storylines, such as "Lucy wrecks the car and tries to hide it from Ricky, who has accidentally locked himself in the bathroom."

When Carsey and Werner were ABC programmers, they unsuccessfully tried to coax Cosby into series TV. As independent producers, they were able to land him by allowing him to structure a "Cosby Knows Best" around his own childraising attitudes and experiences. Like Cliff, Cosby has five kids.

The producers' major creative disagreement with Cosby came over the Huxtables' professional and financial status. Cosby wanted to be a more populist limousine driver and his wife a plumber. But the producers felt it would be more credible to make him an obstetrician and Clair a lawyer.

Sculptor hangs car pelt on garage

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Sculptor Dustin Shuler says the car is an endangered species, but that didn't stop him from skinning one to hang its "pelt" on the San Francisco Parking Authority garage.

Shuler, 36, cut a 1971 red Fiat Spider sports car into sections with a torch, then fastened them to the garage facade with a nail gun.

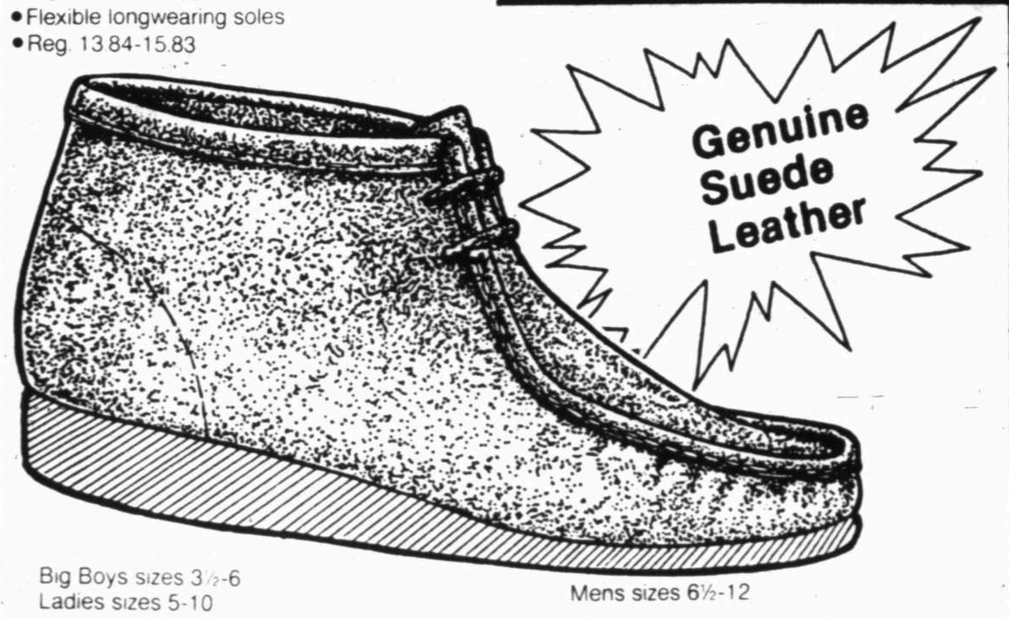

"It's an auto pelt and it looks a lot better now than when I found it" in a salvage yard, he said, adding he created the work — for a $12,500 commission — because "there are no buffalo and autos are an endangered species."

The sculpture "is kind of easy if you look at it as a bear rug," said Shuler's wife, Karen.

Ex-'lousy cook' now Heinz spokesman

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Vic Tayback took a lot of kidding about his cooking in the nine years he played the owner of Mel's Diner on "Alice."

"If I walked into a restaurant the other diners would look around and say, 'I hope you're not cooking,'" he said.

Mel's cooking was a running gag on the CBS comedy series. Everybody came to Mel's Diner, and everybody complained.

That was just the sort of thing Heinz U.S.A. was looking for in a new spokesman for its Heinz 57 Sauce. The theme: "I used to be a lousy cook."

"We tested commercials with Vic and the reaction was that people smiled," said Beth Adams, a spokeswoman for Heinz. "That's why we chose him."

Tayback did four commercials, which began showing up more than a month ago.

"I used to do a lot of commercials before 'Alice,'" he said. "I consider commercials partly responsible for the success I've had in this business. It sustained me for years. That was a time when people were telling me not to do commercials and do only movies and television.

"I tell young actors to do anything that will sustain them. If it pays money it will keep you going. Too many actors get on an ego trip and won't do commercials. So they sit around for 2½ years between jobs."

Tayback does the Heinz commercials as himself. The Mel character is owned by Warner Bros. Television.

"But it was because of my reputation for being a lousy cook that I was hired," he said. "The show is gone, but the image remains. The theme of the commercials is that I used to be a lousy cook but now I'm a culinary master because I've discovered Heinz."

Tayback spent nearly a month traveling across the country to promote the commercials. He did talk shows, radio shows and interviews.

"I even cooked on a radio show in Chicago," he said. "And people kept asking me so many questions about Heinz that I had to bone up so I could answer them. A lot of people also told me they had a dog or a cat named Heinz 57 because it was a mixture like the sauce.

"It was a very exciting tour, but a little tougher than I thought it would be. I met a lot of nice people, and I think America's in good shape. We were on tour during the hostage situation in Beirut, and I got a lot of questions because I'm of Syrian and Lebanese descent."

His parents were born in Aleppo, Syria, but Tayback was born and raised in Brooklyn, N.Y.

"I learned to speak the Syrian language but I left home when I was 16," he said. "I'll never deny my heritage. I'm proud of it. But I don't understand what's going on over there."

"Alice" was a TV spinoff of the 1975 movie "Alice Doesn't Live Here Anymore," for which Ellen Burstyn won a best actress Oscar in the title role.

"Before 'Alice' I couldn't get much work in comedy," Tayback said. "I was always the heavy. Before 'Alice' I'd done a comedy pilot, but the network turned me down. They said I was a heavy. Now, I have to show them I can do dramatic things."

Since the end of the series earlier this year Tayback has starred in "12 Angry Men" at the Henry Fonda Theater in Los Angeles and played Willy Loman in "Death of a Salesman" at Radford, Va.

"I hated to see 'Alice' end," he said. "I was very attached to those people. You see them every day and you don't realize how close you were until you don't see them."

Melville, Poe in American Poets' Corner

NEW YORK (AP) — Writers Herman Melville and Edgar Allan Poe recently have been inducted into the American Poets' Corner in The Cathedral Church of St. John the Divine in New York City.

The formal dedication of the corner took place in 1984, and the first writers to be elected were Emily Dickinson and Walt Whitman. Washington Irving had been previously selected to commemorate the bicentennial of his birth.

Chicano's poetry now full of compassion

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Guillermo Perez was an angry young poet. Out of the crucible of his impoverished childhood in Laredo, his experience in Vietnam and the emerging Chicano consciousness of the late '60s and early '70s came statements in his poetry like, "Kill the gringo."

Perez, who is now a junior high school English teacher and the father of two young boys, is still a poet. But he is not such an angry one now. Compassion and understanding have become guiding values in his life and poetry.

And instead of writing exclusively about the barrio experience, Perez now also writes about emotions common to everyone, whether they are Chicano, black or white.

Several recent poems deal with the longing people have for meaningful connections with others. One uses the imagery of a butterfly flitting about and being ignored to convey this emotion. Another uses the image of "unfinished picnics which we never began."

Perez says he is ashamed of the profanity and anger in his earlier work, but he also recognizes its value to him.

"My earlier poetry was nationalistic, even racist, but it was a beginning for me. It made me reach an internal peace," he said in an interview in his Tom Browne Junior High classroom.

He is also philosophical about the hopes Chicano poets had and the reality of what they accomplished.

"One of the objectives of the Chicano literature movement that grew in the '60s and '70s was to force white America to know the barrio," said Perez.

"I don't think we were very effective," he continued. "We restricted ourselves too much."

Nonetheless, Perez grew to know himself and what was important to him through his writing.

"All my experiences added to what I am today — an educator, a poet and a better human being. Today my most powerful feelings in life are toward my family, my students and other human beings."

Perez recently had two of his poems published in Imagine, an international Chicano poetry journal, that is edited by Tino Villanueva, a native of San Marcos who now teaches at Wellesley College in Massachusetts, and Luis Urrea, who teaches writing at Harvard University.

There is little, if any, of the militancy of earlier Chicano poetry journals in Imagine. Its aims are to reach a bilingual literary audience, not to instruct and inform an Anglo audience.

In the introduction to the first volume, Villanueva writes, "...Imagaine expects to transcend the confines of American political and literary boundaries without abandoning the cultural and historical wealth of Chicanos, in the broader conviction that one should ever be enriched by one's particular heritage, but not limited by it."

One of Perez's poems included in the first volume of the journal, "El Mudo," is mostly in English with just a few words of Spanish. It is about an encounter with a mute on the bus to Alice and the "conversation" the two had.

"He spoke with his hands; he laughed with his heart. He cried with his face, and he cursed and prayed with his alma (soul)," Perez says of the mute.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sputtering congressional budget talks are slowly rolling again with Senate negotiators considering a final offer from House Democrats for a compromise, $273 billion deficit-reduction package.

Nonetheless, no one is ready to express optimism about the outcome of the negotiations.

Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, said Tuesday he was "not that much more encouraged" after the House bargainers made their offer.

The conferees were meeting again today to discuss the House plan in an effort to draft a compromise version of 1986 budgets passed by each chamber.

While not yet delivering a formal response, Senate Republicans are indicating the House offer may not go far enough in meeting the Senate's higher level of military spending authority or do enough to enforce domestic spending cuts.

Rep. William H. Gray III, D-Pa., chairman of the House Budget Committee, told senators his three-year, $272.6 billion deficit-reduction package was "a 60 percent split in your favor" compared with the $295.2 billion deficit-reduction plan that had been passed by the Senate. The orginal House budget contained savings of $259.1 billion over three years.

Gray said the new House offer went $24 billion beyond the original House budget in domestic spending reductions. However, Senate Republicans had said they wanted to see the House ante up about $40 billion in additional cuts.

The House plan:

— Provides $298 billion for military spending authority next year compared with the $302.5 billion Senate position. The original House proposal was $292.6 billion for fiscal 1986.

— Drops $12.2 billion in savings over three years the House had claimed for changing federal contracting procedures. The Senate had disputed these savings all along.

— Imposes a new user fee on electric utilities that generate nuclear power.

— Makes additional cuts of $1.95 billion in agriculture programs.

— Makes additional cuts in various domestic programs such as the Small Business Administration, mass transit subsidies, rural housing, public housing financing and others.

— Agrees to the Senate position on phasing out general revenue sharing for local governments.

— Agrees to a Senate plan to reduce the federal civilian work force by 4 percent through attrition.

"We feel this is very close to a bottom-line offer," Rep. Martin Frost, D-Texas, said.

Gray agreed with Frost's assessment.

The House offer followed a day in which administration officials and Republican congressional leaders made a show of unity on the deficit issue.

"The country wants to see the deficit down," Vice President George Bush told reporters following a luncheon meeting on Capitol Hill with GOP senators. "But I must say we are not very optimistic right this minute."

He added, "We've got to get the House to come along now."

After a separate meeting with White House Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan and Budget Director David A. Stockman, Republican leaders said the president and Senate Republicans never intended to give up a one-year freeze in Social Security cost-of-living adjustments, which had passed the GOP-led Senate, without getting more cuts from House Democrats.

But House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, denied there had been agreement that the House would find further cuts to make up for the changes agreed to last week.

"There was no implicit agreement of any kind that we would find equivalent savings to some mythical figure," Wright said.

While the budget talks drag on, Congress has begun moving on the 13 money bills necessary to finance the federal government in the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1.

Those bills are supposed to follow passage of a budget, which, under congressional rules, is to be in place by May 15.

But with the outcome of the budget talks in doubt, leaders have decided to begin work on the money bills.

The first, a $15.3 billion package containing money for hundreds of new and continuing water development projects around the nation, was approved on a voice vote Tuesday in the House.

The House was beginning work today on a money bill for the State, Justice and Commerce departments.

NATION IN BRIEF

Ex-GE officials indicted in defense contracts probe

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Two former managers and a supervisor of a General Electric Co. division that have admitted a scheme to defraud the government have been indicted as investigators move up the chain of command, authorities say.

The indictments were "a very substantial step" in assessing responsibility for $800,000 in overcharges on a $47 million Re-Entry Systems Division contract to refurbish Minuteman Mark-12A intercontinental ballistic missiles, U.S. Attorney Edward S.G. Dennis Jr. said Tuesday.

Thomas E. Shaw, 54, of Lexington, Mass.; Richard S. Davis, 53, of Springfield; and Forrest J. Yocum, 51, of Newtown, were indicted Tuesday along with Joseph Calabria, 51, of King of Prussia.

General savors victory

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A retired two-star general acquitted of embezzling from a $450,000 secret Air Force spy fund said convincing jurors of his innocence was sweeter than any victory in his 26-year military career.

Retired Maj. Gen. Richard B. Collins was cleared Tuesday on six counts of stealing from the account he managed in Swiss banks from 1975 until he retired in 1978. Collins hugged his lawyer when the verdict was read after jurors deliberated two hours and 20 minutes.

Another body identified

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A body stuffed in a sleeping bag in a shallow grave has been identified as the neighbor of a survivalist who took videotapes of the neighbor's girlfriend pleading for the return of her baby, authorities say.

At least 11 bodies have been found in and near the remote hillside hideaway of Leonard Lake, who has been linked to 22 deaths or disappearances, but that of Lonnie Bond, 27, is only the second to be positively identified.

Bond was identified Tuesday through fingerprints, said Calaveras County Coroner Terry Parker.

Pentagon study revealed

NEW YORK (AP) — Confusion over the treatment of casualties from the 1983 truck bombing of U.S. Marine barracks in Beirut revealed serious weaknesses in American military medical facilities in Europe, according to classified Pentagon studies disclosed in a published report.

"There was not then, nor is there now, an effective, coordinated plan assuring continuity of care, speedy evacuation, and regulation of the victims of terrorist acts into the most capable medical treatment facilities," the New York Times reported today, quoting a previously secret Pentagon report.
