ANSWERS CALL OF TINY ASIAN ALLY

JFK Sends Marines Into Thailand

BANKKOK, Thailand (AP) — Thailand tonight invited the U.S. Marines waiting on its doorstep to enter the country and help defend its frontiers against pro-Communist forces in nearby Laos.

President Kennedy in Washington immediately gave orders for the Marines to begin landing.

About 1,800 Marines are expected to come ashore at dawn Thursday.

Premier Marshall Sarit Thanarat announced the decision in a broadcast to the nation after making a helicopter flight to the southern city of Chachengsao where a U.S. naval task force is waiting off the naval base of Sataheep with the Marines aboard.

The Marine force will back up 1,000 U.S. combat troops already here for Southeast Asia Treaty Organization exercises.

Pro-Communist Pathet Lao forces, stiffened by Communist North Vietnamese battalions, captured Nam Tha, a provincial capital, 12 days ago and swiftly swept over all northwest Laos.

About 3,000 Laotian soldiers fled into Thailand from Houei Sai, a Laotian town just across the Mekong River.

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Kennedy today ordered 1,800 U.S. Marines into Thailand, and the Defense Department said U.S. military forces there will be built to about 5,000 men.

The announcement made plain said of the dispatch of Marines to Thailand.

The White House said the Marines would go ashore at dawn Thursday, Thailand time. This would be about 5 p.m. EST, Wednesday.

The Defense Department said the Marines probably would be landed at the Bangkok naval base by helicopter from the Valley Forge, a carrier converted to a helicopter and troop-carrying ship. The Valley Forge draws too much water to move into the docking area.

In a follow to the announcement, Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara said the U.S. military force in Thailand would be given a new over-all command and increased to about 5,000 men.

The buildup will include the 1,000-man Army battle group already in Thailand.

To this will be added the Marine battalion of about 1,800 men, from the 7th Fleet. The Marine contingent also will have its own tactical air units.

Additionally, about 1,200 Army forces from the Pacific area will be sent in.

The Pacific Air Force will provide tactical units to give air cover to the Army ground troops.

Both the Air Force and Marine air units will be based in Thailand.

Gen. Paul D. Harkins, now U.S. commander of the 6,000-man force in South Viet Nam, will be given the job of heading U.S. forces in both Thailand and South Viet Nam.

A Pentagon spokesman said that Lt. Gen. James L. Richardson Jr., the deputy commander of U.S. Army forces in the Pacific, has been designated to command the combat elements of Harkins' over-all command.

The reference by the Pentagon spokesman to combat elements pointed out that this is no mere assistance outfit going into Thailand, but a fighting force.

Harkins' force in Thailand will include, also, the joint Military Assistance Advisory Group of a little over 300 men which has been there for several years.

Kennedy's statement said the U.S. military forces were being put into Thailand so that "we may be in a position to fulfill speedily our obligations" under the 1954 Manila Pact, a defense agreement approved by the Senate.

The President recalled that the U.S. secretary of state and the foreign minister of Thailand had referred to this pact in a joint statement on March 6. The key portion of the statement gave U.S. assurances that this country regarded defense of Thailand as an inherent right to take collective measures for self defense.

Kennedy said that he had directed that the United Nations be notified of the actions this country is taking. He said, too, that "We are in consultation with SEATO governments on the situation."

Kennedy said in his statement that there is no change in U.S. policy toward Laos, "which continues to be the re-establishment of an effective cease-fire and prompt negotiations for a government of national union."

In advance of the White House announcement, there had been reports that Kennedy had informed congressional leaders at an early forenoon meeting that U.S. Marines would begin landing in Thailand within a matter of hours.

The President was understood to have told the bipartisan group in a 45-minute meeting that the primary purpose is to help defend Thailand against the Red threat from neighboring Laos.

House Republican Leader Charles A. Halleck of Indiana said after the White House conference that the situation in Southeast Asia is "certainly very difficult."

As to the nature of the discussion with the President, he would only say "There were no commitments asked and none given."

The developments came in the face of a statement in Moscow that the United States was "taking another dangerous step fraught with serious consequences" in Laos by concentrating forces in the Southeast Asian area.

That was part of an article in Pravda, the Communist party paper.

It reinforced a suspicion among Western diplomats that the Soviet Union is giving the Communists in the area something like a free hand in the Laos area and will not back U.S. and British efforts to restore the cease-fire.

In addition to reassuring the nervous Thai leadership at Bangkok, Kennedy had two other purposes in view in rushing U.S. forces toward Southeast Asia, spearheaded by the 7th Fleet task force.

One was to make the presence of American power felt in the region to offset the diplomatic reverses arising out of local defeats of government forces in Laos by the pro-Communist Pathet Lao.

The other has been to get U.S. forces into position to move quickly into Laos itself if Kennedy decided that step was necessary.

Halleck said Kennedy did a lot of the talking. "I didn't say a word," Halleck said.

Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson, another of the leaders attending the meeting, brushed by newsmen without comment.

Administration leaders at the meeting included Secretary of State Dean Rusk; Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara; Central Intelligence Chief John McCone; Gen. Lyman L. Lemnitzer, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff; presidential national security adviser McGeorge Bundy, and

58 Appeal Cases Ousted

Fifty-eight of the 100 appeal cases which were before the Howard County court Monday have been ruled invalid because of faulty appeal bonds. Many of the others, not yet disposed of, may be thrown out of court Thursday afternoon for the same reason.

Judge Ed Carpenter ruled that the cases could not be tried in the county court because, without valid appeal bonds, the court had no jurisdiction to act.

A jury panel, which had been ordered into court Tuesday morning, was notified by telephone Monday afternoon that it would not be needed.

The mass elimination of these appeal cases, all of which were from the city court, grew out of an attack made by the state, through county attorney Wayne Burns, on the appeal bonds posted in each case.

INVALID

Burns charged the bonds were invalid on the grounds that they were not signed, as the law requires, by two sureties. He contended, (and attorneys in the courtroom conceded the contention was true) that the signatures of all sureties on the bonds were made by the attorney. Burns said the defense lawyers had signed their own names as one surety and then had signed the name of

NOT OPPOSE

Wayne Basden, who is counsel for 48 of the defendants and who is surety with David Gomez on each of their bonds, topped the hearing when he announced he would not oppose the state's position. His action sent nearly half of the cases back to the corporation court without a fight.

George Thomas, another attorney who had six cases, sought to dissuade Judge Ed Carpenter from remanding them. The court ordered them sent back to the corporation court as it did in the case of four other matters in which John Richard Coffey was counsel.

Harvey Hooser, Hartman Hooser and Jack Little, other lawyers in the cases, obtained a continuance to Thursday at 1:30 p.m. Also slated for disposition at that time are cases in which R. H. Weaver and H. C. Hooser Sr., are attorneys. Neither was in court Monday. None of the defendants was present in person.

What happens next in the matter was debated by lawyers.

The cases sent back to the corporation court cannot be appealed again to the county court because the time for filing a valid appeal has expired. The city-police can, if they choose, issue a capias against each of the defendants and bring them into court to pay the fines assessed in their cases. It is also possible for the police to file new complaints and bring in defendants for a new trial on the charges.

However, attorneys pointed out, if this is done, the defendants may file petitions for writs of habeas corpus alleging they have been subjected to double jeopardy. These writs could be sought in the 118th District Court.

WIDE CUSTOM

The custom of an attorney posting a bond for a defendant by signing his own name and that of another person is widely practiced in this county, lawyers said. An estimated 90 per cent of all bonds filed are signed in this manner.

The defect in the appeals, as indicated in the 100 cases called on the docket Monday, is found in the bulk of the hundreds of other appeal cases which were filed in county court last year, lawyers point out. In addition to the fat file of older city court appeal cases, there are several hundred justice court appeals also waiting disposition. The same sort of bonds, too, have been posted in the cases set up from the justice courts.

Cases still to be disposed of Thursday include 24 in which Harvey Hooser Jr., is attorney and bondsman; 13 in which Hartman Hooser is named; three each in which R. H. Weaver and H. C. Hooser Sr. are lawyers, and one case where Jack Little is counsel.

Police Plan Rigid Action On City Cases

"We are going to issue 'capias profines' for all those whose cases were appealed then returned Monday," Chief Jay Banks said this morning, "and collect the fines or place the persons in jail."

Banks made the statement after being notified that some 58 appeal cases had been returned to city court because of improper bonds.

"We are also going to cooperate with the corporation court judge in seeing that future bonds are properly signed. We may require some pretty rigid rules to be followed in this."

Banks said "capias profines" meant that police would be sent out to collect the fines or to place the person, on whom the complaint was filed, in jail.

"It's possible that the attorneys for arrested persons may get writs of habeas corpus for their clients and haul them up for a hearing before the judge," Banks said. "But until they do and the judge rules our complaint or charge illegal, we are going ahead as soon as the city attorney gives us approval."

City Attorney John Burgess was not available for a statement before noon but Mayor George Zachariah said the city commission would back the police department and city attorney on any step taken to get the backlog of appeal cases whittled down.

The city commission, at a meeting last Tuesday, instructed both the police department and the city attorney to "get going" on the cases which are stacking up.

The commission also approved immediate action on requested jury trials on an around-the-clock basis which meant that those demanding jury trials would be tried

A Big Howdy

Don Yarborough, Democratic candidate for governor of Texas, waves to friends who came to the Howard County Airport Monday afternoon to see him during a brief stop. Yarborough is on a four-day aerial jaunt which is taking him through West and North-west Texas. He stayed here about 40 minutes to deliver his campaign message and answer questions.

Candidate Again Calls For Debate

Don Yarborough, Democratic candidate for governor of Texas, took sharp notice at his opponent in the runoff election and again challenged him to a public debate of "the issues" during a brief stop at Howard County Airport Monday afternoon.

"As potential public servants, we owe it to the citizens of Texas to discuss the issues in public, where each can offer rebuttal to the other's words," he said.

The 36-year-old Houston attorney received an enthusiastic welcome from about 40 supporters who were on hand to meet him. Yarborough arrived about 1:45 p.m., 45 minutes late, and took off again about 2:20 p.m.

While here he made a campaign talk and answered questions for representatives of news media. He was greeted by Frank Hardesty, county Democratic chairman.

"Connally's failure to accept the challenge of open debate has lost him voters by the droves," Yarborough said. "Formerly, Daniel and Wilson all accepted the challenge before and now many of the voters who supported them have come to our side."

Yarborough said he believes he has cut down the 100,000 vote lead John Connally had after the primary elections, attributing this to a temporary cessation of campaigning by his opponent while he has not slackened his pace.

He spoke out strongly in favor of repealing the sales tax. This, however, would have to wait until other propositions of his platform had been instituted to replace that revenue source.

His platform, basically, is to repeal the sales tax after oil allowances have been raised, tourist traffic has been stimulated and more taxes are levied on interstate pipelines.

Raising the oil allowance by five to seven days would help the small independent producer and could replace a part of the revenue needs for which the sales tax now is used," he said.

"I want to see us spend $2 million, perhaps less will be needed, to double or triple the tourist trade (See CANDIDATE, Page 6, Col. 4)

400 Attend Band, Choir Performance

Nearly 400 persons packed the High School auditorium Monday night for a joint performance of sixth grade choir students and the High School band. About that same number of performers were on hand for the program.

This was the first time sixth graders have performed in public en masse. Students at the various public schools had practiced separately and joined to form a choir of between 300-400 voices after only one rehearsal together Monday afternoon, according to Doug Wiehe, band director.

"Everything went well," he said, "and the students seemed to enjoy doing the program. Similar performances will probably be scheduled again in the future."

The two groups performed individually and together. This is the final scheduled concert of the year for the band.

"We have considered putting on a program of this type for the past few years," Wiehe said. "It gives the sixth graders something to work for in the way of public appearances."

Sixth grade classes which participated are those taught by Mrs. Mary Christensen, Mrs. Joyce Bradley, Mrs. Mildred Meacham and Mrs. Donna Wiehe.

The choir presented six selections and the band performed five numbers.

Reverse Freedom Rider Lands Job

HYANNIS, Mass. (AP) — Reverse Freedom Rider David Harris landed a job today at the Cranberry Goose restaurant in Yarmouth Port.

The Negro bachelor, 43, had several interviews Monday at the Massachusetts employment office in this Cape Cod community and decided to take a kitchen job at Cranberry Goose. He will start next week.

In the meantime he will live at the home of Joseph Montiero. If Harris qualifies as a chef he can earn from $125 to $150 a week.

Plane Missing

HARLINGEN (AP)—Harlingen Air Force Base said today one of its T-29 navigation training planes with nine persons aboard, on a search mission in Mexico, was overdue at the base and presumed down.

But No Strings Attached, He Says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Ralph Yarborough, D-Tex., acknowledged today the receipt of $1,700 in contributions from Billy Sol Estes toward payment for his weekly radio broadcast to Texas constituents.

Yarborough, in a statement, said there were "no strings to these contributions," which he said were received at a time Estes "was being lured by Chambers of Commerce as the ideal young American."

"I knew him as a devout lay church worker and a devoted family man," Yarborough added. "As far as I knew until late March, he was a responsible business man."

In advance of Yarborough's statement the Dallas News had reported that Estes' journal of expenditures listed a $1,000 payment to Yarborough May 23, 1961. The newspaper said there were additional monthly payments up to $300.

In commenting on the news story Yarborough had said he would produce proof he did not receive the $1,000, but would withhold further comment until he had checked versions of the story against his own records.

Estes is now under indictment in Texas on fraud charges in connection with the financing of storage tanks for his big fertilizer business, and there is a spreading inquiry in Washington into his relations with government agencies, in connection with farm programs.

PROBERS AT WORK

Yarborough's statement on his radio programs came as Senate investigators tried to fit together the pieces of the puzzle and Republicans rifled new charges and called for Secretary of Agriculture Orville Freeman to resign.

Yarborough said that after his election in 1958 he began a weekly radio broadcast to the people of Texas over about 100 stations. He said the cost of this program since Jan. 1, 1959 was about $24,400.

"I have paid $20,384 on this amount since and now owe the Senate Studio $3,982.90," he added. "Of this amount paid, Billy Sol Estes, who had contributed to several of my campaigns for office in Texas, has contributed a total of $1,700 to this radio report, as others have also contributed, his last contribution being on Dec. 4, 1961."

NO STRINGS

"There were no strings to these contributions. I have fought the entrenched economic and political powers in Texas in all my campaigns, and I have always turned down all offers of contributions that have any strings to them whatsoever, and those turned down included proffered contributions several times as large as the total of Billy Sol Estes' contributions to my radio report fund."

Rep. Robert Dole, R-Kan., suggested an investigation of the case of Mary K. Jones, an offshoot of the Estes affair, by the House Judiciary and District of Columbia committees.

Miss Jones is former secretary to N. Battle Hales, an Agriculture Department official recently shifted to a new job out of contact with the records on Estes' affairs. Hales has contended that Estes received favored treatment in the department.

TO HOSPITAL

A few days after Hales' transfer Miss Jones was taken to a Washington hospital for mental observation. Republicans charged in the Senate Monday she was "railroaded" for "refusing to cooperate in covering up corruption." Miss Jones later was discharged from the hospital as sane.

Dole wrote the chairmen of the Judiciary and District of Columbia committees that it appeared "her rights were abused" and that either the District (of Columbia) code was not followed (in her commitment) or it is so loosely drawn as to need sharp revision. . . .

Col. Dessert Armed Forces Day Speaker

Col. Kenneth O. Dessert, former assistant to Air Force Secretary Eugene Zuckert and now chief of the systems plan directorate for technical training, will be the Armed Forces Day speaker at Webb AFB Saturday.

Col. Wilson H. Banks, wing commander, said that Col. Dessert, who is assigned to the office of the deputy chief of staff for technical training, will address the luncheon set for the Officers Club at 11:30 a.m. Saturday.

Immediately after this function, the celebration of Armed Forces Day will move rapidly to a climax along the line—where the aircraft are kept—where there will be numerous types of planes on display along with several static exhibits.

While this is going on, there will be fly-overs by four types of aircraft at the base, including the new supersonic trainer, the T-38. One flight will make a pass over the field at just under the speed of sound, and the spectators will get to see the uncanny climbing abilities of this new plane.

Col. Wilson H. Banks has issued an invitation for everyone in this region to attend the open house from 12:30 p.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday.

Negligent Death Charges Filed In Fatal Collision

LAMESA (SC)—Charges of negligent homicide were filed Monday in Dawson County court against Richard W. Hagan Jr., driver of a truck involved in a fatal collision at Patricia.

Highway Patrolman Sam West filed the charge against Hagan in connection with the traffic death of Guyon Dale Wheeler, 26, former Midland resident who had been living in Climax, Colo.

Wheeler's wife, Sandra, also 26, was injured in the collision and is reportedly improving in Medical Arts Hospital here. A son, Corky Joe, 3, was unhurt.

Hagan was driving an oil field truck, which reportedly made a left turn into the Wheeler car as it was heading toward Midland on State Highway 349, which passes through Patricia. The trucker posted $1,000 bond and was released.

U.S.-German Differences Are Reduced To 'Details'

BONN, Germany (AP) — The United States and West Germany have reduced their differences to what they call "details," but informed sources said one detail is a key provision of U.S. proposals to the Soviet Union for a Berlin settlement.

A communique issued after a two-hour meeting between U.S. Ambassador Walter C. Dooling and Chancellor Konrad Adenauer Monday said the two nations were in "full agreement in all essential points."

"There will be further talks over several details," the communique added. "It is the intention of both sides to remain in close touch."

Informants said disagreement continues to center on the U.S. proposal for East German representation on a 13-nation authority to control access routes to West Berlin.

The Bonn government, after seemingly rejecting the whole idea last week, once again says it favors the basic principles of an international authority but objects to East German participation. The West Germans fear that this would imply further international recognition of East Germany's Communist regime.

Adenauer also objected to inclusion of three neutral nations on the authority. He said this would give them control and place on them a responsibility they would not accept.

Informants said there was also disagreement over other points but further details were not disclosed. The communique said the meeting concerned U.S.-West German relations with "special consideration of the German-Berlin question, problems of European unity and the general world political situation."

President Kennedy ordered

Dowling to call on Adenauer after the chancellor indicated at a Berlin news conference last week that he felt the U.S.-Soviet talks on Berlin should be broken off.

Publicly agitated, Kennedy at his news conference invited the West Germans to make their own proposals. It was understood that none have been made so far, but that West German counter-proposals could be expected soon.

Wide Amnesty

Djilas, Critic Of Communism, Back In Prison

BELGRADE (AP) — Milovan Djilas, critic of Communism who was once President Tito's heir apparent, was back in prison today under sentence of eight years and eight months for disclosing state secrets and violating parole.

A three-judge tribunal convicted the former vice president at a closed one-day trial Monday. Djilas, 51, was sentenced to five years for divulging state secrets in his new book "Conversations with Stalin," which is to be published in the United States later this month.

The court added three years and eight months to cover the unexpired part of a nine-year term from which Djilas was paroled last year.

Presiding Judge Miodrag Stenovic said Djilas had disclosed confidential information and added his own impressions "to give reactionary circles a tool to pour oil on the fire of the cold war."

The judge said information that could harm Yugoslavia was contained in the manuscript. Djilas turned over last year to the New York firm of Harcourt, Brace & World Publishing Inc.

Stenovic said Djilas obtained the information during 1944-45 as a representative of the Yugoslav government in official talks and confidential exchanges. He said Djilas did not offer his book to any Yugoslav publisher or inform authorities, as he was obliged to do under terms of his parole.

Djilas was sent to jail twice before for writings criticizing communism. While in prison in 1957, he was tried for writing out a book, "The New Class," which was published abroad. It dealt with the thesis that communism creates a privileged class.

THE ABUSE OF GIVING

By A Christian Writer

1. Men sometimes give to impress their fellow men. Churches sometimes take advantage of this weakness in men to get more money out of them. "Take heed that ye do not your alms before men, to be seen of them." Matt. 6:1.

2. Some try to purchase a controlling interest in the church by their large giving. Peter would say to such a one, "Thy money perish with thee, because thou hast thought that the gift of God may be purchased with money." Acts 8:20. Let us give and forget!

3. Some give just whatever they find in their pocket at the time. We are told to purpose (design or plan) and to give as we have been prospered. 1 Cor. 9:7; 1 Cor. 16:2. When this is done properly, one offering a week provides the church with ample funds. This is the Bible way. 1 Cor. 16:1, 2. We are interested in your soul; not your money.

Presbyterians Affirm Links With Council

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP)—The Presbyterian Church in the U.S. (Southern) has, in effect, reaffirmed its membership in the National Council of Churches.

It did so by a vote of 294 to 91 Monday night, as commissioners (delegates) to the annual general assembly rejected a proposal to pull out of the council.

Contentions that council statements have a Communist slant, and fall outside the range of Presbyterian doctrine were voiced during the debate.

The assembly ends today. One final report was from a committee which urged action to support enforcement of laws against obscenity to stem pornography.

The vote on the National Council of Churches was the second defeat for conservatives. The other decision was on the content of the laymen's Bible commentary, put out by the John Knox Press, official publishing agency for the Southern Presbyterians.

The commentary was attacked as a departure from proper interpretation of the Scriptures, and defended as an aid to Bible understanding through modern research and scholarship. Criticism of the commentary was rejected, and its work praised, by a wide margin.

Randolph Lee of Patrick, S.C., charged that National Council leaders are "doing everything they can to support the Communists." He said he agreed there might not actually be Communists involved in the Council, but he asserted, "Socialism is the Trojan Horse through which Communism gets into both our church and our nation."

The Rev. Daniel Carlton of Asheville said he made no claim that National Council leaders are Communists, but "They are saying the same things the Communists are saying."

The Rev. William Elliott Jr. of Dallas, a former moderator, said withdrawal would be tragic.

Resigns

Assistant Secretary of Labor Jerry R. Holleman of Texas resigned his $20,000-a-year post after admitting he accepted a $1,000 gift from Billie Sol Estes, West Texas financier, under indictment for fraud. Holleman is the first man close to cabinet rank to resign in the growing Estes case.

Moslems Hit Back With Terrorism

ALGIERS (AP)—The first major Moslem terrorist attack since the March 18 cease-fire in Algeria was seen today as a warning of worse to come unless the European Secret Army Organization is checked.

Police said at least 19 persons were killed and more than 30 wounded by commands of the Moslem National Liberation Front who drove wildly through Algiers Monday with machine guns blazing. Seventeen of the dead and most of the wounded were Europeans.

Meanwhile 10 Moslems—including three women—were killed by secret army terrorists continuing their daily slaughter. Shortly after the Moslem attacks began, European terrorists began lobbing mortar shells into a Moslem quarter in the Belcourt sector of Algiers. At least three Moslems were killed.

The Moslem rampage ended only after authorities imposed a curfew in the city and ordered police to shoot on sight anyone caught on the streets. Before the violence stopped, police had killed some of the Moslem commanders and arrested a number of others.

By nightfall Algiers' streets were empty except for long convoys of French army vehicles and heavily guarded barricades thrown across major streets. Two department stores were gutted by bottles of gasoline hurled by the commands.

The European secret army's goal has been to provoke the Moslems into reprisal attacks on Europeans in hopes this would bring the French army over to its side and torpedo the Evian peace agreement. But the secret army had hoped to trigger a mass Moslem uprising, not cold-blooded killing by commando forces using the same tactics as the secret army.

Even at the height of Monday's Moslem attacks, nationalist agents roved through Moslem districts holding the people in check with the same iron discipline that has prevailed over the past two months.

The Moslem commands obviously were operating according to a prepared battle plan. They struck simultaneously from speeding cars in every sector of the city except the center. The apparent intent was to warn the secret army—and to prod the French government into more vigorous measures to crush the European terrorism.

Primaries At A Glance

Here's a brief rundown on the primary elections in three states today:

Maryland — Gov. J. Millard Tawes running for Democratic gubernatorial renomination against six opponents. Former Congressman Frank Small Jr. has three opponents for Republican nomination. Both parties choosing nominees for Senate seat to be vacated by retiring Sen. John Marshall Butler, and nominees for eight House seats.

Pennsylvania — Rep. William Scranton opposed by State Grange Master J. Collins McSparran for Republican gubernatorial nomination. Former Philadelphia Mayor Richardson Dilworth has two opponents for Democratic nomination. Only eight of 27 incumbent House members have primary opposition. Rep. James Van Zandt, Republican, and Sen. Joseph S. Clark, Democrat, unopposed for nominations for Clark's Senate seat.

Nebraska — Former Secretary of Interior Fred Seaton has two opponents for Republican gubernatorial nomination; Gov. Frank Morris seeks Democratic renomination with two opponents. Congressmen Phil Weaver and Ralph Beermann and two other candidates vie for Republican nomination in new House district resulting from decline in state's representation.

COLEMAN, Tex. (AP)—G. L. Hunter, 70, died Monday in a strange traffic accident. Officers said Hunter apparently blacked out while driving in the business district. His foot became tangled in the accelerator pedal and he hit a row of parked cars.

Estes Case Is Injected Into Atty. Gen. Race

The Billie Sol Estes case was injected squarely into the Democratic runoff for the Texas attorney general's nomination Monday night.

Rival candidates Waggoner Carr and Tom Reavley each asserted the other has links to affairs of Estes, the West Texas farm financier charged with fraud and theft.

"Estes' behind the scenes activities in politics call for stern, uncompromising action by the next attorney general," Carr said.

"I cite the fact that my Democratic runoff opponent has had a relationship as lobbyist for two big finance companies which helped finance Estes' operations."

"The record shows that while my opponent was lobbying for these companies, and was being paid $1,500 monthly for his services, he was at the same time posing as an anti-Communist spokesman of a citizens' committee."

Carr also said the fact that his Lubbock law firm has been retained to represent several clients with claims against Estes was not a conflict of interests.

Reavley, stumping at Temple, declared:

"The involvement of Waggoner Carr's law firm in the Billie Sol Estes fiasco, as disclosed in a news story appearing in Sunday's Houston Chronicle, cast another serious shadow on the fitness of Mr. Carr to be attorney general."

"The newspaper account, based on court records, states that Carr's firm has taken the side of the Heller Co., a Chicago money lender, against Texas farmers who claim to have been defrauded by Estes and the Heller Co."

Candidates in other races plugged along busily while state executive committees of both the Democrats and Republicans met to certify winners or runoff opponents decided in the May 5 primaries.

Don Yarborough, on a hedge hopping flight across West Texas, again chided John Connally about a challenge to debate the issues in their contest for the Democratic nomination for governor. Connally has said he views such a debate as worthless.

At Big Spring, Yarborough claimed Monday he has picked up enough votes from two defeated opponents—Gov. Price Daniel and Atty. Gen. Will Wilson—to offset the lead Connally took in the first primary. At Sweetwater, Yarborough said the June 2 runoff is not a conservative-liberal fight as some have styled it but one "between independent business men, farmers and working people against big Eastern lobbyists."

No Husbands

MEXICO CITY (AP)—The Roman Catholic church said today half of Mexican mothers are without husbands, and blamed it on lack of proper religious and moral education. Church officials said 20 per cent of Mexico's mothers were abandoned or divorced and thirty per cent were unmarried.

DEAR ABBY Help Build Their Spirits

DEAR ABBY: We moved into a new home about a year ago. The first neighbors we met were the people next door. They are nice people, but they are so depressing! All you have to do is talk to them in the morning and your day is ruined. You don't dare ask them how they are feeling. They are always "miserable"! They complain about everything. We've met other neighbors and want to give a get-together. I would feel guilty excluding these people because they were so nice to us when we first moved in. They are lonely. But I'm afraid if we invited them they would ruin the party for everybody. What would you do?

UNDECIDED

DEAR UNDECIDED: If you are friendly enough with them to give them some tips on how to be better company and, consequently, more popular and less lonely, by all means do so. If you aren't, let them stay home and tell each other how miserable they are.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are separated and I am expecting. I am getting a divorce as soon as the baby is born. How should I word the birth announcements? Should I say, "Mr. and Mrs. Henry Brown announce the birth," etc.? Or should I say, "Mr. Henry Brown and Gloria Tomlin Brown (which will be my legal name after I am divorced) announce the birth," etc.?

SEPARATED AND EXPECTING

DEAR S. AND E.: Under the awkward circumstances, I suggest you skip the formal announcements. Write a personal note to those you wish to inform.

DEAR ABBY: I am a normal teen-aged girl of 13. Like any other girl I like to talk on the telephone when I get home from school. I never talk more than two hours. My mother says that is too long, yet she doesn't stop me. Do you think two hours is too long to talk to friends?

PHONE BUG

DEAR PHONE BUG: Indeed I do. About an hour and forty-five minutes too long, to be exact.

DEAR ABBY: I read with interest the letter from the young woman whose "ex" owed her $300. Her problem stemmed from the fact that she had no note from him acknowledging the debt.

If the woman were to write to her "ex" and demand that he pay her the $300 he owes her, she would hear from him promptly protesting that he did not owe her $300 — but only $300. This should be sufficient evidence for her to collect the debt in any court.

Oil Production Declines Again

TULSA (AP)—U.S. oil production declined again last week, with the biggest drops in Louisiana and Texas, the Oil and Gas Journal said today.

Average daily production last week was 7,249,330 barrels, down 34,700.

Louisiana output of 1,275,850 barrels per day was down 21,850 from the previous week and about 50,600 daily below the April average. Texas production of 2,533,325 barrels per day was down 13,275 from the previous week and 33,400 from April.

New Mexico was down 4,685 barrels daily to 300,250; Oklahoma, down 1,850 to 552,500; Arkansas, up 2,150 to 82,000; and Colorado, up 1,500 to 121,900.

A Devotional For Today

The poor widow of her want did cast in all that she had, even all her living. (Mark 12:44.)
PRAYER: Heavenly Father, we thank Thee for Thine immense sacrifice, giving us Thy dear Son, so that we may inherit eternal life. Forgive us for our small sacrifices that are worth little before Thy holy eyes. Help us to give Thee our lives and all we possess. In Jesus' name. Amen.

All The Facts May Be Hard To Get

Insistent demands by Republicans for a full scale investigation of the operations of Billie Sol Estes have inescapable political overtones. Yet there should be no disposition on the part of Democrats or Republicans to avoid getting to the bottom of the whole affair.

As far as Estes is concerned, very little in the way of immediate information logically can be expected. He is under indictment in federal and state courts in connection with credit manipulations in the financing of liquid ammonia tanks — many, if not most, of the tanks cannot be found.

Only Estes himself is in possession of all the facts relating to the complex agricultural industrial empire that he built up. He has declined to issue any statements on the subject. He may or may not be called to testify before a U. S. Senate investigating committee which has its agents in the field. If he were subpoenaed to appear and did testify there would be a strong possibility that in the process he might acquire immunity from any prosecution that might be contemplated.

Secretary of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman made it clear at a press conference that he had called upon the FBI to make a complete investigation of Estes' grain storage operations. Freeman said that the government had not "lost a dime" in the process, but that charges of favoritism toward Estes and reports of gifts to department representatives were being investigated in detail.

The people of Texas and the nation are entitled to all the facts in the Estes case. If improper influence has been exerted it should be exposed at whatever level of government is involved.

But it should be conceded that the full story cannot be developed without the testimony of Estes. Thus it is possible the complete story may never be revealed.

Anti Trust Suit At Last Settled

What has been one of the bitterest anti-trust struggles in American history has come to the end of a long trail. The E. I. du Pont Co. has now been told by a Chicago U. S. District Court how to divest itself of 63 million shares of General Motors. And for the first time in this legal battle covering 13 years, neither government nor company appealed the court's decision. The way is now clear for the huge chemical concern to distribute its unrelated GM shares to Du Pont stockholders.

This antitrust litigation, which has spanned the administration of three presidents, had two main objectives. The first was to disengage from influence in General Motors affairs an entity which controlled 29 per cent of the stock. And when that matter had been decided a way had to be found to remove Du Pont's interest without ruining its value. It took an unprecedented act of Congress to accomplish the latter, an act which cost the government a tax potentiality of more than a billion dollars.

It is in the public interest, and in the interest of business generally, that the matter has at last been settled.

Marquis Childs Our Policy On Nuclear Deterrent

WASHINGTON — The decision that the President reached on April 16 after two months of the most-searching and anxious debate is a milestone on the policy course for the second Kennedy year in the White House. It was, above all, a clear and cogent restatement of a policy that for nearly a decade or more has been fundamental to other decisions in the high and lonely area where nuclear war or peace hang in the balance.

THE PRESIDENT'S decision was that the nuclear deterrent must be kept undivided for the defense of the West. While the deterrent is in American hands, the objective, as expressed in the NATO meeting 10 days ago in Athens, is to share the responsibility for the control and disposition of nuclear weapons so that all nations will feel equally protected.

That sounds simple enough. But, since it involved the acute sensitivities of President de Gaulle and the refusal of the French to integrate their forces in NATO, the deep concern that went into the decision can hardly be exaggerated.

THE DEBATE began with a proposal last fall from American Ambassador James Gavin in Paris. Gavin proposed that the United States make nuclear know-how available to the French so that they could thereby greatly reduce the time — and the money — needed to get nuclear weapons. The United States would also sell to France the very special compressors that are needed by the hundreds to produce enriched uranium.

WITH THE INITIAL sale of compressors, plus know-how, the French would go from what is today a hand-to-mouth production of U-235 to large-scale production. And they would at the same time save many hundreds of millions of francs. The Joint Chiefs of Staff, enthusiastically backing the Gavin recommendation, urged that the proposal be conditioned on France putting additional force into NATO.

The President believed that the Gavin recommendation should be studied. Perhaps it was a way out of the dead-end to which Franco-American relations had come. Soon, however, basic questions were raised. The sale of the compressors and providing the know-how for their construction could not be considered a violation of the McMahon Act, which forbids the sharing of nuclear secrets. But would not this in fact be a breach of the long-established rule against any further spread of nuclear weapons? Was it not merely quibbling with words to say that compressors were not actually part of weaponry?

AS SO OFTEN, the appalling burden of responsibility for the deterrent weighed on all concerned. If in this phase France got the compressors, an equally strong argument could be made for providing help in later and even more complex stages so that more time and more money could be saved. And if France were helped toward a French deterrent, then certainly the Germans would push their claims with the resolve that Germany must not be discriminated against.

Support for the French position gained momentum. It included the JCS and Assistant Secretary of Defense Paul Nitze, whose province is international affairs. After Gen. Maxwell Taylor, the President's military representative, visited Paris and talked with the French military, he declared for re-arguing the whole French case.

BUT BY THIS TIME, late in March, the President had come to believe in one central thesis — the deterrent must be kept indivisible. To contribute toward fragmenting it into separate national deterrents was to invite disaster. Secretary of Defense Robert McNamara was wholly in accord with this view. With the concise grasp he brings to bear on the vast problems of defense he put his convictions in the brilliant and solidly effective speech prepared for delivery at the May 4 NATO meeting in Athens.

IN THE FIRST part of his speech he disclosed to startled NATO members far more than had ever been told before about the impressive size and range of America's nuclear deterrent. They were almost literally overwhelmed by what they heard. Then he presented the argument against independent national deterrents.

A NATIONAL deterrent, such as France is in process of trying to create, can never be sufficient really to deter. Nor can it be large enough to knock out an enemy's capability after a first strike. Therefore, as McNamara developed his argument, it would imperil the fundamental strategy of the West which is to use — if attacked — the massive nuclear force to destroy completely an enemy's retaliatory capacity and, even after a first strike, to afford some maneuverability to prevent the mutual destruction of the cities of both sides. McNamara further contended that a weak national deterrent held by each of several countries might even seem to give an enemy invitation for a pre-emptive strike aimed at any one of them.

MANY ELEMENTS went in the final policy paper. There had always been uncertainty about whether the French President or influential persons close to him had actually asked for nuclear help or whether the pressure had been largely generated by his American partisans.

The conclusion was that even if every request were granted and France moved rapidly toward a nuclear deterrent, de Gaulle would be neither more nor less unyielding in his refusal to integrate with NATO and his determination to restrict the European Common Market to a "Europe of Fatherlands" which may, if he has his way, exclude Britain. In fact, this appraisal of de Gaulle, in his all stubborn, passionate, unyielding pride may really have been the clincher.

BABE IN THE WOODS

James Marlow Sorry Example Of A Strong Man

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Algerian mystery is not how the Secret Army Organization is able to kill Moslems in bunches every day but why French President de Gaulle has not used the French army to smash the assassins.

It raises an unpleasant question about De Gaulle who takes such a strongman role against the Russians that he has refused even to join the United States in discussing a Berlin settlement with them.

HOW COULD HE hope to cope with the gigantic Russian military power if he lacks the ability, or the will, to crush the comparatively small group of organized murderers in Algeria?

The answer is simple enough: He couldn't stop the Russians for five minutes without American help, although this might not be guessed from his attitude toward American efforts with Russia.

Through months of murder, committed on the public streets, the French army in Algeria has arrested a few leaders of the secret army but has never made any wholesale effort to crush it.

It has stood by while the murderers piled up. In these months, while the secret assassins slaughtered their people, the Moslems refrained from fighting back. They feared it would eventually involve them with the French army and destroy their hopes of independence.

THEY FINALLY reached the breaking point Monday after scores of their women had been shot down, and cut loose.

Until last March in Algeria,

Moslem nationalists fought the French more than seven years for their independence.

In 1958 when De Gaulle's predecessors in office headed toward a settlement with the Moslems, the regular army joined the settlers in revolt against the government in Paris.

The thought of losing Algeria, the last big remnant of French colonialism, seemed too overwhelming for the French troops who had seen their empire cut away from Lebanon, Syria, Tunisia, Morocco, and Indochina.

IT WAS AFTER this that De Gaulle took over. In time, last March, he worked out a settlement with the Moslems which was intended to keep Algerian links with France but let the Algerians choose independence.

After the history of their years of revolt—and the fact that they outnumbered the European settlers 9 to 1—there was no doubt the Moslems would choose independence.

The decision was to be made in a referendum about next September. The secret army, which had already turned Algeria into its own private slaughterhouse, redoubled its efforts.

Any head of a competent state might be expected to act against organized murder. De Gaulle's reluctance to do so doesn't speak well for the ability of the French government, under him or someone else, to control its destiny.

It has been said he fears that an attempt to use French troops against their countrymen among the assassins might cause an army revolt on behalf of the settlers who don't want the Moslems to run the country.

BUT THIS is one more example in a sorry history of French inadequacies, both at home and in its former colonies. For example: the endless succession of French governments since the war.

Another example: the French disaster in Indochina where it had practically no support among the people and where the French army was crushed by the Communists.

In some smaller and less pretentious nations this record might not have much significance.

But De Gaulle, the difficult ally, is the one who has visions of France as a leader of the West and the strongest power in Western Europe.

Hal Boyle Settle Your Nerves

NEW YORK (AP)—Jumping to conclusions:

Nervous tension is one of the leading ailments of civilization. But eight out of 10 people would feel less tense if they'd simply get one more hour of sleep a night, walk a mile more a day in the open air—and worry a third as much about the other fellow's problems as they do their own.

All my life I've heard about kids earning their way into the circus by carrying water for the elephants. But I've never met one who did.

Some men pride themselves on the number of keys they carry on their key ring; actually, the fewer things you have to look up the happier you probably are.

The most boring jobs I can think of offhand are driving a bus, or being a professional hockey player, politician or movie star. The fellow who first conceived the idea of serving cocktail canapes didn't invent stomach trouble—but he gave it a great big push forward.

If you have to tip the headwaiter to get a seat in a good restaurant, either it really isn't a very good restaurant—or you don't belong there.

Have you already made out your Christmas shopping list? If so, your life is probably too well-planned for enjoyment.

Did you ever notice that when you get the hiccups or a lame back, everybody knows a sure cure? But if you get a gum boil nobody ever heard of a remedy.

A man often will spend his last penny during a night out on the town. A woman always comes home with some money left in her pocketbook.

The men who whistle most at pretty girls going by are construction workers at lunch time.

Only really lonely people feed pigeons on rainy days.

Most girls don't seem particularly thrilled by muscular men who do handstands at the beach to attract attention.

As soon as a teen-age daughter is old enough to be of real help to her mother in the kitchen, she suddenly finds other interests.

An independent girl is one who insists on buying her own cigarettes; while out on a date, but whoever met one that independent?

A born cheapskate is the guy who always drinks highballs faster at your house than he serves them in his own.

The surest sign of a woman's age is how she sits down. If instead of seating herself gracefully, her legs suddenly let go and down she goes—kerflop!—with a quick sigh of relief, she's been out of high school a long, long time.

To Your Good Health Pityriasis Is Acute Skin Inflammation

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: Please write about the skin disease, pityriasis. If it is not contagious, how might one get it? — K. M. W.

There — another question that exposes our unwilling ignorance about the skin.

Pityriasis rosea (pity-rye-uh-iss ROSE-ee-uh) is a common but unexplained skin disorder that afflicts women more than men, is commoner from fall to spring, and for some reason starts on the covered parts of the body, usually the trunk. Unless stopped it may spread in patchy fashion.

It's not dangerous but is a nuisance and can be scary if you don't know what it is, and it can last from 10 days to 10 weeks. Then it usually disappears.

Technically pityriasis seems to be an acute inflammation of the skin, but of a feeble sort in comparison to eczema or a boil.

Researchers have been unable to find any sign that it is contagious; neither have they been able to find a cause but suspect that a virus or other such organism may be responsible.

Since it occurs on covered parts of the body, the suspicion, quite unproved, arises that perhaps clothing has some role. Could it be new garments that are worn without first being laundered? Could some sort of mold, yeast or virus be picked up in manufacture or shelf storage? A baffling question!

As to treatment, a dilute solution of iodine has been used with success (if applied early) to prevent spread of the irritated area. Otherwise, ointments containing salicylic acid and mild antiseptics help.

The principal harm consists of itching and appearance.

Dear Dr. Molner: I've heard it is possible to contaminate an individual with an injection needle even though it has been sterilized, the worst offender being the hepatitis germ. I know the army is using air injection, but should a private citizen insist on a doctor using disposable needle heads, good for that time only? — J. B.

I disagree with the idea that a properly sterilized needle can transmit germs, because the very term, "sterilize," means removal of all living organisms, including germs.

The air-injection method is used by the armed services (and by health departments, etc.) because it is efficient for large numbers of patients. The equipment is too expensive for ordinary use. (A small needle-less hand-operated injector is being developed and may be on the market in less than a year.)

Disposable needles are excellent and I've used a good many of them myself. Thrown away after one use, they save the labor of sterilizing. But a properly sterilized regular needle is entirely safe.

Dear Dr. Molner: My sister and I are teenage girls who share the same bedroom. She says I talk in my sleep and say all sorts of things I would never think about doing, and even tell about places and things I never heard of before. She believes all this stuff which makes me feel awful. Could it be that I'm about to lose my mind? I try not to show it but I'm getting terribly worried. — B. N.

Sure your sister isn't teasing you? It's usually difficult to understand what a "sleep-talker" is saying. Much of it is just a mumble. And no, don't worry about your mind. One thought: If your sister is teasing, maybe you can turn the tables by demanding that she write down everything you are supposed to have said. She might get tired of that pretty soon, and admit that she's been making this up.

Around The Rim Human Nature Is Still At Work

I see by the papers that a newsman from Florida way won a Pulitzer award for a campaign he waged recently to oust a sheriff he alleged was crooked. Apparently the effort worked for the sheriff was ousted.

Then the ousted sheriff filed for re-election. I presume, campaigned on the theme of "vindication." He ran against the man named as his successor.

Election day and the day that the Pulitzer committee announced its awards hit about the same time. The crusading editor got the Pulitzer award. The ousted sheriff got re-elected.

WHICH, I AM SAD TO say, seems to be the usual history of campaigns to clean up corruption in officialdom.

Some journalist or other individual, shocked by evidence of evil all around him, goes to bat against it. Occasionally his crusade leads to his getting beaten up. On a few occasions it has led to his assassination.

Winning a Pulitzer prize is a great honor for a newsman, and I am sure the editor was pleased. I imagine however, much of this pleasure was eradicated when his fellow citizens turned right around and undid all of his efforts by returning the kinglypin of the whole situation to his official post.

I HAVE HAD MANY "good" citizens come to me and point to some situation which prevailed in the community where I lived.

"That's a bad situation," they told me.

"Why don't you start an editorial campaign to get it corrected? Let's put the rascals out of business."

"Good," I replied, "Let's do that — you and me. I'll write the facts, and you stand with me and we'll lick 'em. I'll quote you as one of those who want this bad thing corrected."

"No! No!" protested the good citizen. "Don't get me involved. I'll help, but I have to stay out of it as far as the public is concerned. I can't get in the midst of it — it might be bad for business."

OR, WORSE YET, I have seen instances where a newsman has launched a drive to stamp out an unsavory condition in his town and had to face a committee of leading citizens who didn't like what he was doing.

"We know that the thing is bad," they apologized. "But it brings in business. If we put it out, we will drive away the trade. It may be a pleasant situation, but we can't risk angering the bunch that runs it. So we think you'd better lay off."

I HAVE JUST about concluded that the average citizen had rather allow some evil to go on in his town than take a personal step to end it.

It's like Thomas Jefferson wrote nearly 200 years ago:

"All experience has shown that mankind is most disposed to suffer, while evils are sufferable, than to right themselves by abolishing the forms to which they are accustomed. . . . — SAM BLACKBURN

Inez Robb Differences Of Opinion

This is the day I want to borrow a line from Harry Golden. Surely, it could happen only in America when two world-famous men, picketing the White House, must race back to their respective lodgings to change from their signboards into formal dinner clothes before lashing back to the Executive Mansion for a dinner in their honor.

And, on arrival at the White House, he met with superb courtesy, warmth and honors.

SINCE THE White House dinner honoring the Nobel Prize winners, I have received a spate of angry mail. Its tenor has been that the two picket-guests, Dr. Linus C. Pauling, a Nobel Laureate of the California Institute of Technology, and Dr. Clarence E. Pickett of the American Friends Service Committee, should have been given the old heave-ho when they showed up at the Executive Mansion for dinner.

Well, I couldn't disagree more emphatically. If difference of opinion makes horsesharing, it has also made this country GREAT. The Messrs. Pauling and Pickett (the latter so aptly named) have been picketing the White House in protest against President Kennedy's nuclear policy, particularly the current series of tests.

NOW, I FEEL strongly on the side of the President; just as strongly as Pauling and Pickett feel again. But I also feel strongly that the glory of the United States of America is the right to dissent in front of the White House and still get a good meal in its State Dining Room an hour later. What other country can make that boast?

To be honest, I suspect the same thing could happen in England. In all probability Lord Russell could march up and down in front of Buckingham with a sandwich board reading: "I'd Rather Be Red Than Dead" and still be invited inside for fish and chips. And with Her Majesty.

IT IS A MEASURE of the nation's weakness but of her great strength that Pauling and Pickett quit the protest march to dine at the White House. We are still "the land of the free and the home of the brave" where a man can be free to stand up and proclaim what he is brave enough to advocate.

And people need not come whining to me because the President of the United States invited one of the world's greatest living scientists, Dr. J. Robert Oppenheimer, to dine with his peers at the dinner for Nobel Laureates.

I HAVE BEEN wondering when this Administration would have the guts to undo the dishonor and injustice done Oppenheimer when lesser men, who had not done a fraction as much for their country as he, pulled him down out of jealousy in 1954 by denying him a security clearance.

The nation should be ashamed of its shabby treatment of one of its distinguished sons. Maj. Gen. Leslie R. Groves, in charge of the Manhattan Project, said that his trust in Oppenheimer was always implicit.

I TALKED TO Groves in '54 when Oppenheimer was denied security clearance. The general said then that his faith and confidence in the scientist as a patriot and a loyal American were complete.

It is to be hoped that this invitation to dine at the White House is but the first step in restoring Oppenheimer, head of the Institute for Advanced Study in Princeton, N. J., to his rightful place in society. (Copyright, 1962, United Feature Syndicate, Inc.)

Holmes Alexander The Road To State Atheism

WASHINGTON — Separation of Church and State in America does not mean that religion and politics are unrelated. Both religion and politics are human activities. They are interwoven in our national life.

Although it is a delicate subject, I see no reason why the relation of current legislation to our traditional beliefs should not be discussed occasionally.

SOCIALISM is entirely anti-religious because it sets the material above the spiritual. Communism, the ultimate of socialism, is atheistic. Socialist tending legislation, like the Administration's medicare plan (H. R. 4222 and S. 909), is a move toward godlessness and (with the U. S. A. founded in divine worship and trust) is un-American in the deepest sense.

Medicare attacks religion at the Fifth Commandment, which reads, "Honor thy father and mother." This legislation is incompatible with the Commandment. Under Medicare, most workers would have their pay checks nicked for an extra percentage, and these total takings from the national payroll would provide medical care for persons of 65 whether or not they needed the provision.

THUS, THE STATE and not the children are caring for the aged. The legislation is not going to pass simply because old persons are for it. The best chance of cramming it through a resistant Congress is the Administration's belief that young people see the legislation as a chance to shuck off the Biblical obligation to "honor" their aged parents.

It is typical of Modern Liberalism that intimate, personal relations are dismissed in favor of mass treatment. The AFL-CIO News claims parental dependence upon their children a "sorry reward" and a "catastrophe" of old age. This Laborite journal declares that "in most cases (care of the old folks) is beyond the means of willing children" in this most prosperous of all nations.

MEDICARE GOES anti-religious in other places. It assumes a stigma upon poverty which no religion on earth has ever countenanced. The Founder of Christianity said that the poor are "blessed." The one excuse that Marx had for so-called religion, the "opium" of the people, is that spiritual grace takes the stress of poverty and riches alike.

One omnipresent argument for Federalized medical-care for everybody under Social Security is that it avoids the means-test or "pauper's oath" which would require an applicant to prove his need of public assistance. But everything in religion states that being poor is no disgrace. Only the liberal politicians seem to think so — or seem to be trying to teach Americans to think so.

MEDICARE is anti-democratic in the worst way. The present law, known as the Kerr-Mills Act, gives money to the States on a matching basis, requiring State authorities to decide who gets medical care because of age and need. But an apostle of liberalism, Labor Leader Walter Reuther, has no confidence that Congress and State legislatures will continue to do what they have promised. Reuther has said:

"... the Kerr-Mills bill will require action each year on the part of the Federal government to appropriate money for the coming year. It will require action of the part of the 50 State bodies, where they will have to appropriate money."

REUTHER, THE anti-democrat, does not trust our national and local legislators to do this.

Medicare attacks the so-called Protestant Ethic, which is the philosophic-historical term for the Renaissance ideal of self-reliance and personal initiative. Along with the whole package of welfare-for-all legislation, Medicare does not encourage the citizen to put aside something from his earnings and to go into the marketplace to purchase suitable insurance. Medicare does these things for the citizen.

MEDICARE WILL not improve medical practice in America. It will not bring better medical treatment to more persons. All the evidence shows that private medicine is superior to such socialized medicine as we now have in the Armed Services and Veterans Administration.

When President Eisenhower was laid low with a heart attack, amid socialized Army doctors, the authorities wisely sent for Dr. Paul Dudley White. The only persons who will get more under Medicare are the bureaucrats.

Mural Built Like Puzzle

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP)—A 1,200 square foot jigsaw puzzle, each piece weighing several hundred pounds, has been constructed at the entrance of the new University of Kentucky Medical Center.

Workmen put together 170 pieces of granite to form a mural depicting various stages of development of medical science. They created a little, working from a diagram which showed where each piece should go.

Austin Speaker At Toast Mixers

The newly formed Toast Mixers Club at Big Spring State Hospital, with the sponsoring Tail Talkers organization, presented a program Monday evening at the hospital. Capt. Ronald Austin was guest speaker.

Mrs. Leland Younkin served as the Toastmistress' coordinator, assisted by Mrs. Hila Weathers, volunteer service director at the hospital, and a coordinator for Toastmistress. Also assisting was Mrs. Cecil Earp, industrial therapist.

Mrs. Al Short, topic mistress, presented a musical quiz game in which all Toast Mixers participated. Capt. Austin, president of the Flying Tumbleweed Chapter of Toastmasters, told of the basic principles to be carried out in public speaking and how to train in such a program of work as is followed in the club. Mrs. Younkin also gave pointers to follow, after which Capt. Austin evaluated the entire program.

The group agreed to meet twice a month on Monday evenings. Twenty seven members were in attendance and will appoint a nominating committee at their next session.

Senate May Shelve Literacy Test Debate

WASHINGTON (AP) — With all sides reasonably satisfied that political profit has been squeezed out of it, the Senate may shelve today the administration's voter literacy test bill.

Before members in a motion by Majority Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana to put aside the measure. If it prevails as expected on a roll call vote, that will be the end for civil rights legislation in the 87th Congress.

Politically, there was something for everyone in this outcome.

Southern opponents could brag at home they had killed another civil rights bill by their filibustering tactics. Advocates of the measure could assure interested minority voters they had done their best and would be back to try again.

Democrats and Republicans each could blame the other party for the lack of results.

The bill itself was designed to establish a sixth grade education as the only literacy test for qualification to vote in federal elections.

It was aimed primarily at about 100 counties in the South where its supporters said state tests were used to keep Negroes from voting. Southerners called the measure an unconstitutional invasion of the right of states to fix voting qualifications.

The 52-42 vote by which the Senate Monday refused to limit debate sealed the measure's fate for all practical purposes.

But advocates would not let it be buried without a proper wake. They took over the talk from the Southerners who had used up most of the time of 14 working days since Mansfield and Senate Republican leader Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois first maneuvered April 24 to bring the measure before the Senate.

Sen. Paul Douglas, D-Ill., blamed what he called an unholy alliance of Southern Democrats and conservative Republicans, mostly from the West, for the Senate's failure to get action on the measure.

He said that Republicans—who pledged in their 1960 platform to back such legislation—found it easy to vote against limiting debate after having been given a chance last week to record themselves in support of the bill.

That chance came on a 64-33 vote refusing to shelve the measure after a debate limitation had been denied by a 53-43 count, far short of the required two-thirds affirmative vote by which that vote could be curbed.

Sen. Spessard L. Holland, D-Fla., said the only reason the bill was brought up at all was so that its sponsors could say they tried to get a civil rights measure passed and couldn't break a filibuster against it.

"This is the most blatant bid for minority political support that I have seen in my 16 years in the Senate," Holland shouted.

Sen. Clifford P. Case, R-N.J., and Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., lambasted the Kennedy administration for not doing more to get the bill passed.

On the key motion to limit debate, 11 Republicans joined 31 Democrats in voting for a cutoff. Opposed were 30 Democrats and 22 Republicans.

THAT'S WHAT THE LAW SAYS

DALLAS (AP) — Police looked today for a hit-run cow.

Daniel Bradford, 29, told officers he was driving west on Loop 12 at 11 p.m. Monday when a cow's horn suddenly came smashing through his windshield.

Stopping his damaged car, he told officer J. P. Hollingsworth, he spotted a cow dashing away through a pasture of weeds.

Hollingsworth, bound by law because of the damage to Bradford's car, filed a hit and run report on the cow and cited her for failure to leave identity at the scene.

The cow remained at large.

The U.S. aid is being extended under an agreement with Thailand "to act to meet the common danger" in case of Communist threat.

On the key motion to limit debate, 11 Republicans joined 31 Democrats in voting for a cutoff. Opposed were 30 Democrats and 22 Republicans.

The hurriedly called White House session displaced Kennedy's usual weekly meeting with congressional Democratic chiefs. Invited to the special conference were Democratic and Republican leaders of both houses.

These late reports were found by U.S. policymakers to be signs of hope for a peaceful outcome to the Laotian crisis.

1. The fighting that started with Red seizure of the Lao government stronghold of Nam Tha will end in Laos all but ceased. While this is not a cease-fire in the legal sense of returning government troops to positions they have lost, the fighting now is practically ended.

U.S. authorities thus have concluded that there was not a general rupture of the year-old cease-fire in Laos. In fact, they now question how far the Communists actually pushed beyond Nam Tha.

Earlier reports had the Reds driving practically to the Thai border. 2. Neutralist Prince Souvanna Phouma, the Laotian supposed to head up a nationwide government if it is ever formed, has given word to U.S. diplomats that he will end his lengthy Paris vacation and return home for negotiations on forming a coalition government.

OAS Leader Begins Trial, Death Penalty Expected

PARIS (AP)—Secret Army Organization leader Raoul Salan went on trial today before a special court that is expected to condemn him to death.

The ex-general, who once wore many of France's highest military decorations, was ushered into the courtroom by four gendarmes and took his place in the prisoner's box.

There was a hush when court President Charles Bernet asked Salan to identify himself.

Salan rose, a wry smile drifted across his face, and he replied in a strong voice:

"My name is Raoul Salan, ex-general of colonial troops, Military Medal, Grand Cross of the Legion of Honor, wounded in action."

The court clerk read the accusation, which charged Salan with helping organize a putsch in April 1961, and then of being the leader of the secret army, which seeks to retain French rule in Algeria.

One of Salan's attorneys argued that the special high military court was not competent to hear any evidence on Salan's activities in the secret army.

Andre Galvada, the prosecutor and legal adviser to the court, rejected the defense contention and the court withdrew to deliberate the question.

The legalistic objections of the defense delayed a lengthy statement from Salan which he intends as the basis of his defense.

President De Gaulle's government enforced extraordinary security precautions around the rambling, historic Palace of Justice to prevent any desperate attempt by rightist terrorists to free their hero.

All other courts were cleared from the palace wing housing the trial, and only one entrance was open there. Automobile and pedestrian traffic was diverted from the building, and all parking was forbidden in the area.

Persons with admission cards for the narrow, rectangular courtroom had to clear three checkpoints and undergo a thorough search. A strong guard surrounded the building and was stationed on the roof.

Salan, 62, former supreme commander in Algeria, was arrested April 20 in Algiers along with his wife and daughter. The black mustache and black hair dye that were part of his disguise for a year have disappeared. The mustache was shaved off and the hair has returned to its natural gray.

The specific charges against Salan are that he took part in the short-lived generals' revolt in Algiers in April, 1961, and later took command of the underground secret army's terror campaign.

Both insurrections were staged to the court documents and testimony charging that Salan, as head of the terrorists, was responsible for more than 2,000 attacks defeat Algerian independence.

The prosecution will lay before in Algeria and 400 in France, which caused more than 400 deaths and 1,100 injuries.

Salan denied none of the charges during the pre-trial investigation. Instead he asked the court to call De Gaulle and 132 other witnesses in an effort to widen the scope of the trial beyond the general's revolt and the Secret Army campaign.

He apparently will attempt to discredit De Gaulle, to link him with an unsuccessful attempt to assassinate Salan in 1957 and to prove that De Gaulle by agreeing to let Algeria choose independence betrayed the French army and the Algerian Europeans who brought him back to power in the 1958 uprising.

The court of three judges, four military officers and two civilians is expected to refuse to call most of the witnesses demanded by Salan. The French constitution bars any such appearance by De Gaulle as the chief of state.

"I am ready to die," Salan has said, "but first I intend to defend my honor."

Public Invited To Welcome Connally

A broadside invitation to join in greeting John Connally, gubernatorial candidate, when he arrives here by special train Friday was issued by his supporters.

Connally is crossing Texas from Texarkana to El Paso on an unusual "whistle stop" tour, and his three-car train is due in here at 4:30 p.m. Friday. He will make a brief talk at the T&P station, then will be available for visits with friends.

Mrs. Connally and their three children reportedly are to be on the train with the candidate.

Big Spring is an overnight stop, and the Connallys will have time to see friends here during the evening.

Connally's "Victory Special" leaves Texarkana Thursday morning, with stops at all stations to Fort Worth, where there will be a night stop. Friday, the stops are towns between Fort Worth and Big Spring. Saturday, the special train runs from here to El Paso.

Connally headquarters said that perhaps a score of newsmen met on the train. Roger Brown, chairman of the Connally activities here, said an informal press event will be arranged here Friday night for the visiting press.

Officials Plan To Attend Meet

Acting City Manager Roy Anderson, Director of Public Works Bruce Dunn, and as many city commissioners as are able to go, will attend a hearing called by the Fort Worth District of the Corps of Engineers in Ballinger May 22.

The hearing is called for interested parties to express their views in regard to improvements in the Colorado River basin and will include drainage and pollution problems.

The hearing is called for the same day on which the Big Spring city commission meets, but those attending will be back in time for the meeting at 7 p.m.

the fact those responsible for initiating commitment proceedings did not appear at the hearing; the fact that she was appearing in normal mental condition all times prior to her commitment . . . certainly raise many reasonable questions," Dole said.

Sen. John L. McClellan, D-Ark., chairman of the Senate Investigations subcommittee that is exploring the complicated ventures of the indicted Texas financier, said he would meet with two subcommittee investigators who questioned Estes in Texas. They apparently got little from him, McClellan said Monday.

The investigators—subcommittee counsel Donald O'Donnell and Paul E. Kaminer—also are expected to brief McClellan on reports of other investigators trying to spread up evidence in Texas on Estes' wheeling and dealing and any profitable connections he may have had with government officials.

The Dallas Times Herald quoted Varborough as saying he expected to produce photographic proof he did not receive the $1,000 check in question. He declined further comment, explaining he had not seen the published report.

"As I have had three different versions of it related to me, all erroneous in some respects, I shall defer further comments until such time as I see the report and compare its statements to my record," he said.

Meanwhile, Republicans in the Senate and House peppered the Agriculture Department and its chief with more stinging words.

Sen. Gordon Allott, R-Colo., called for Freeman's resignation in a Senate speech Monday. Allott also said the White House had maintained a "strange silence about alleged influence deals linking Estes with Agriculture Department officials."

CRIMINAL REPRISALS
He and Sen. John J. Williams, R-Del., charged that possibly criminal reprisal had been taken against people at the Agriculture Department who wanted to disclose or investigate facts about Estes' deals.

Allott contended that the secretary's actions in the case have resulted in the coining of the word "Freemanized" to mean "white-washed or glossed over." He said the agency was "too important to be tainted and sullied."

Williams said a woman secretary in the department had been "railroaded" into a mental institution here for "refusing to cooperate in covering up corruption" in the department. Freeman's office promptly issued a statement disputing this and said the department regretted that the medical problems of an employee had been made into a political controversy.

He and Williams both questioned whether the law had been violated because, they said, she had no chance to talk to her own doctor or lawyer, there was no reason to believe she might need mental care and she was found to be sane.

Williams said Dr. Lee K. Buchanan, the Agriculture Department doctor who sent her to the institution, had not been available since.

The department said in its statement:

"The woman, Mary K. Jones, was taken to D. C. General Hospital on April 25 on the advice of two physicians. One was her own personal physician and the other was the doctor assigned to the department. The department's physician accompanied her to the hospital."

STATEMENT
Later the department added this to the statement:

"The department's doctor acted only after consulting with her personal physician and only on his instructions. The psychiatric test at D. C. General Hospital occurred that she needed immediate hospitalization."

"She was under the care of the psychiatric staff at the hospital until she was released to the custody of her own family with the understanding she should receive further treatment."

Miss Jones was secretary to N. Battle Hales, an Agriculture Department official whom Williams said was shifted to an insignificant job and stripped of access to files for demanding an FBI investigation of Estes' dealings. Williams said Hales himself was questioned by the FBI instead, and that this marked the start of what he termed the harassment of Miss Jones for being loyal to Hales.

Hales, in a news conference two weeks ago, argued that Estes had received favored treatment at the agency. His superiors denied that this was true.

SHARP TURN
The Estes case took a sharp turn late Friday night when Assistant Secretary of Labor Jerry R. Holleman resigned, saying he had accepted $1,000 from Estes. Holleman, also a Texan, said that Estes was a friend and the gift was a "personal matter" that had "no connection with Mr. Estes' interests or responsibilities."

Holleman drew fire and praise Monday.

In the Senate, Allott and Sen. John Tower, R-Tex., demanded an inquiry into wage rates for Mexican labor fixed by Holleman.

Allott said the order set a 70 cents an hour wage rate for the Mexicans in Texas compared to 90 cents in Colorado. Estes was a user of Mexican labor in some of his operations.

Baptist Association Hears Rev. Polk On Loyalty

A need for returned loyalty to the local church was stressed by the Rev. Robert Polk, pastor of the First Baptist Church, in the sermon for the workers' conference of the Big Spring Baptist Association Monday.

NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING BUILDS VOLUME AND PROFITS 5 WAYS!

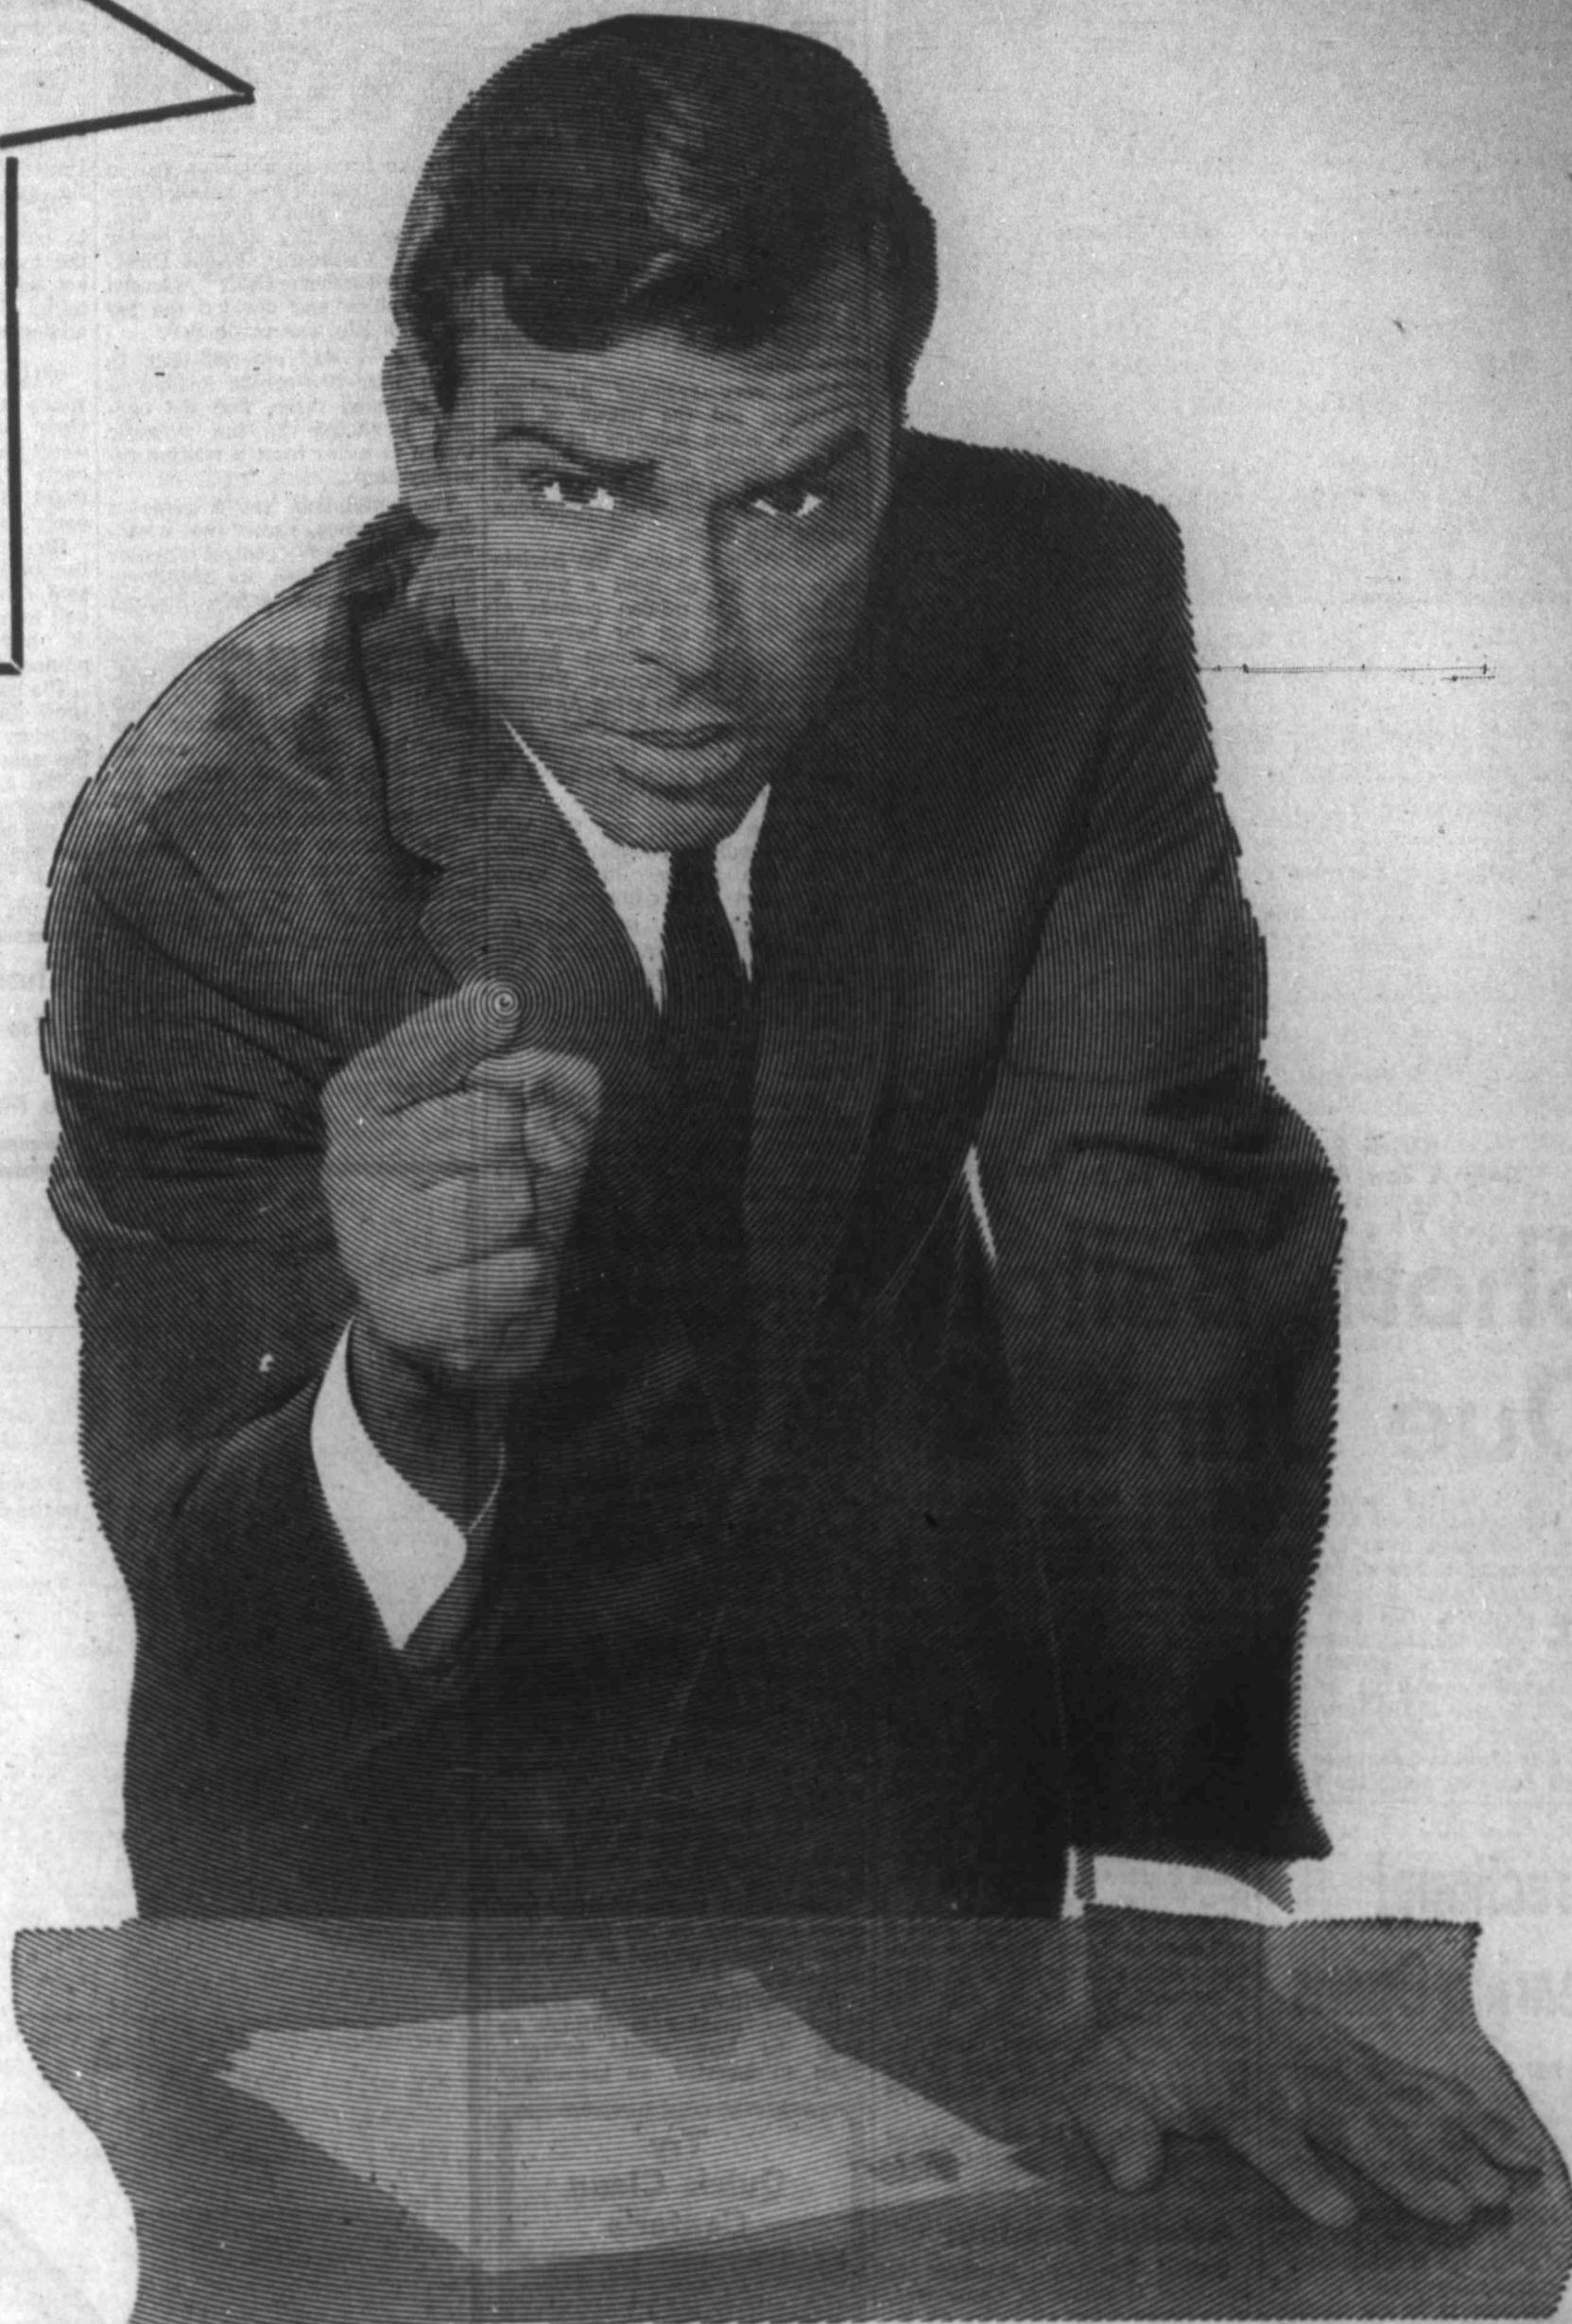

1. Advertising can build a highly desirable reputation for your store; and far faster and more economically than it can be built without advertising.

2. Advertising can attract new customers through your store's doors; many more, much faster, than will exert the effort to seek you out, or just "happen by" without your advertising.

3. Advertising can help you not only meet but overcome the severe competition typical of these times, by holding present customers and furnishing a steady stream of new ones.

4. Advertising is sufficiently flexible to permit you to step up traffic and volume whenever you want to or need to; clear inventories; develop strong departments out of weak; lead to expansion through the penetration or creation of new markets.

5. Advertising can enlarge your margin of profit by increasing volume; and as you well know, the most effective way to meet the challenge of the greater expense of doing business is to build volume as swiftly as possible. Consistent, intelligent newspaper advertising will do just that!

The staff of our Display Advertising Department are specialists in recognizing and solving sales problems. They have helped many merchants in this community to increase their sales, by understanding their particular problems. They can help you!

Gay Hill, Center Point Hold Graduation Program

Twenty-five elementary school graduates in Gay Hill and Center Point Common school districts were presented diplomas at exercises held Monday night in the Gay Hill auditorium.

Speaker for the occasion was the Rev. Darrell Robinson, formerly a teacher in the schools but now pastor of the Sand Springs Baptist Church. Music was provided by Diana McWhirt and Betty Lou Little, Gay Hill students.

The presentation of the diplomas to the young graduates were George Archer, principal of Gay Hill school; M. G. Kilgore, principal of Center Point school; Robert E. Van Meter and Billy J. Daugherty, eighth grade teachers in the two schools.

Gay Hill students who graduated included Mary Elaine Hall, but she could not be present as she is confined to her home with the mumps. Mrs. Ulysses Hall, her mother, and the wife of a member of the school board, accepted her daughter's diploma from Archer.

Two Honored By Y Clubs

Two local young people were awarded plaques for being the outstanding members of the Hi-Y and Tri-Hi-Y clubs of the YMCA, at a fire of friendship ceremony Monday night.

Katherine Heppner, Tri-Hi-Y member, and Robert Mahoney, Hi-Y member, were awarded the plaques by Wade Choate, chairman of the youth activities committee of the Y. The two winners for 1961 had been selected by other members in the various clubs.

Presentation was the highlight of the program, the last event on the schedule for senior, junior and sophomore Hi-Y and Tri-Hi-Y clubs during this school year. It was conducted at Cosden Lake.

Between 60-70 persons turned out for the ceremony, Joe Leach, physical director of the Y, said.

The ceremony started with a prayer before the group formed a circle and read scripture. A poem was read expressing the meaning of the Hi-Y, Tri-Hi-Y triangle.

The group sang "Blest Be the Ties That Bind." This was followed by the benediction and burning of a cross located across the lake.

Connie Felice Smith, David Glen Tubb, Marcia Lynell Weatherman, James Thomas Womack, and Jeanette Lucille Wylie.

The 1961-62 school term at Gay Hill school will close Wednesday. Center Point school ends its term May 22. Howard County's other common school district—Vealmoor—ended its school year today.

Grand Jury In Session

Howard County grand jury, which has been in recess since April 18, was back in session today.

The jurors filed into their deliberation room at 10 a.m. An hour later they were still in conference and none of the dozen or more witnesses waiting had been called into the room.

The grand jury was recalled on April 18 to extend its investigation into a case alleging theft of crude oil from a Howard County lease. It recessed after one day to permit Gil Jones, district attorney, to line up additional evidence it wanted to consider.

First witness on the grand jury list slated for questioning is A. K. Turner Jr., under indictment in the case for receiving and concealing stolen property.

Jones estimated the evidence he has assembled can be completed today.

Sheriff Files Hot Check Cases

Sheriff Miller Harris' check department filed 11 worthless checks cases in Howard County court Monday afternoon, according to Wayne Burns, county attorney.

The 11 complaints are in accordance with the policy on the sheriff's department that hot check writers — who are proven repeaters — would be dealt with sternly.

Complaints were filed against the following defendants: Jim Beard, James Harrington Jr., Jack Coats, Mrs. Sherman Padgett, Ray (Budd) Spillers, Charity Welch, Mrs. Bessie Appleton, Mrs. Frances Girard, Marvin Parker, James E. Nesmith and Mrs. Claude L. Sant.

Last week, the sheriff's office filed three felony check complaints in the district court.

Jones Lamar Is Recovering

— Jones C. Lamar, 605 Lancaster, underwent surgery in the John Sealy Hospital, Galveston, Monday. Mrs. Lamar called friends late Monday and reported that her husband was recovering well from the operation. Lamar has been sewage treatment plant superintendent for Big Spring for many years.

J. G. Sloan Dies Monday

COLORADO CITY (SC) — John Grady Sloan, 56, an electrical contractor, died at 9:35 a.m. Monday while in the I. J. Lantham Electric Shop. He had heart trouble.

Mr. Sloan was born Aug. 7, 1905 in Hardin County, Tenn., and was married to Margaret Morris Nov. 1, 1928 in Sweetwater. He came to Colorado City in 1929. Mr. Sloan was a member of the Oak Street Baptist Church.

Funeral was to be at 2:30 p.m. today in the Kiker and Son Chapel with the Rev. E. V. Brooks, pastor of the Oak Street Baptist Church, officiating. Burial was to be in the Colorado City Cemetery under the direction of Kiker and Son Funeral Home.

Survivors include the widow; his mother, Mrs. Cynthia Ann Sloan, Stamford; one son, Grady Morris Sloan, Big Spring; one daughter, Mrs. Gean Alexander, Irving; two brothers, Howard Sloan, Sweetwater, and Curtis Sloan, Australia; two sisters, Mrs. N. R. Calfee, Fort Worth, and Mrs. T. Geer, Stamford; and three grandchildren.

Jones Requests Revocation Of Ryan's Probation

Commodore C. Ryan Jr., who was found guilty of theft and given a three year probated sentence some months ago in 118th District Court here, has since been convicted of conspiracy to commit theft, in California, according to a report to Dist. Atty. Gil Jones.

Jones said Monday he had filed a petition with the district court asking that a three year probated sentence granted Ryan here be revoked.

Judge Ralph Caton said he had set hearing on the matter for 2 p.m. May 23. Ryan drew a four year probated sentence for the California conviction, Jones said.

Ryan was one of a number of Big Spring men involved in the theft of gasoline from the Cosden Refinery last year. He entered a plea of guilty to the charge against him after being indicted by the Howard County grand jury.

Two Burglaries Are Reported

About $68 was taken from the mail sack in the safe at the Kent Oil Co. warehouse, US 80 west, some time Sunday night or early Monday morning, Bob DeGarmo, manager, said the money was missed after opening Monday.

Another burglary was reported at Ellis Homes, Ronald D. Brooks, Webb AFB, said a pistol and holster valued at $75 were taken. A. E. Clanton, 619 E. 18th, reported a cold box, lantern and maul, and a water can, taken from his garage over the weekend.

Thefts of hub caps were reported by two men. One of them was Patrolman Walter Lee Johnson of the police department. He said two hub caps, valued at $25, were taken from his car while parked at his home, 1104 Nolan. Larry Elroy, 1308 Scurry, reported loss of two hubcaps valued at $20.

Barbecue For Students Planned

A barbecue for visiting ROTC students who will be here for summer training at Webb Air Force Base was planned by the Base-Community Division of the Chamber of Commerce at a meeting Monday.

It will be held June 26. Cosden Country Club, the site of the event last year, has been tentatively chosen.

Col. Wilson H. Banks, commander of Webb, invited local citizens to come to the base for the show and festivities planned to celebrate Armed Forces Day Saturday. He and co-chairman Ike Robb presided over the meeting. About 50 persons were present.

Five Absentee Votes Are In

Five absentee votes were processed by the Howard County Clerk's office on the first day for such voting in the runoff primary.

The ballots for the election arrived Monday morning and the clerk's office immediately set up machinery to receive absentee votes. Deadline for absentee voting expires May 29. The primary will be held June 2.

Storms Die Down

By The Associated Press
More rain splashed across northern Midwest areas today but severe storms that caused property damage and injured at least nine persons diminished.

Graduation Set At O'Donnell

LAMESA (SC) — Baccalaureate and commencement services for O'Donnell High School have been slated for May 20-21, it was announced by Tom Hoskins.

Tom Hoskins, 17, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Hoskins, was announced as the class valedictorian with a grade average of 94.79. Gerald Aldridge, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. O. Aldridge, who compiled an average of 93.23, is the 1962 salutatorian.

The Rev. Calvin Partain, pastor of the First Baptist Church of O'Donnell, will deliver the baccalaureate sermon at 8:30 p.m. Sunday.

Dr. Morris Wallace, head of the education department at Texas Tech College, will be the principal speaker for the commencement exercise, during which 21 graduates will receive diplomas. Both services will be held in the school auditorium.

In Recital

Sue Beard, junior student at the University of Corpus Christi will assist Antonin Guerrero in a recital Thursday, in the Recital Hall. Miss Beard is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry B. Beard, Coahoma. She will play the first movement of the Beethoven Concerto No. 1 in C Major. Guerrero's selections will include works of Handel, Carissimi, Schubert, and Schumann.

Cecil Cornish Is Booked Here For Rodeo Show

Cecil Cornish has been booked again for the specialty act at the annual Big Spring Cowboy Reunion and Rodeo May 30-31-June 1-2.

He will present his famed Liberty Horses in one act, and then he will put his trained Brahma bull through a routine. Several years ago he was on the rodeo program here and drew much favorable comment.

Junior Miles is to be the clown for the rodeo, it was announced by local officials.

Representatives from the Dublin outdoor decorating company are expected here within about a week to begin selling and erecting overhead and other street decorations to be used prior to and during the rodeo.

American Business Club members are arranging for the program and for operation of the concessions.

Where Do You Fit In?

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—Television, largely for commercial reasons, is engaged in endless study of its viewers—who they are, how they live and, most of all, what they like.

The most recent—aimed directly at the sponsors' pocketbooks—undertakes to pinpoint the program preferences of some important "consumer targets," which is the Madison Avenue phrase meaning viewers with money to spend.

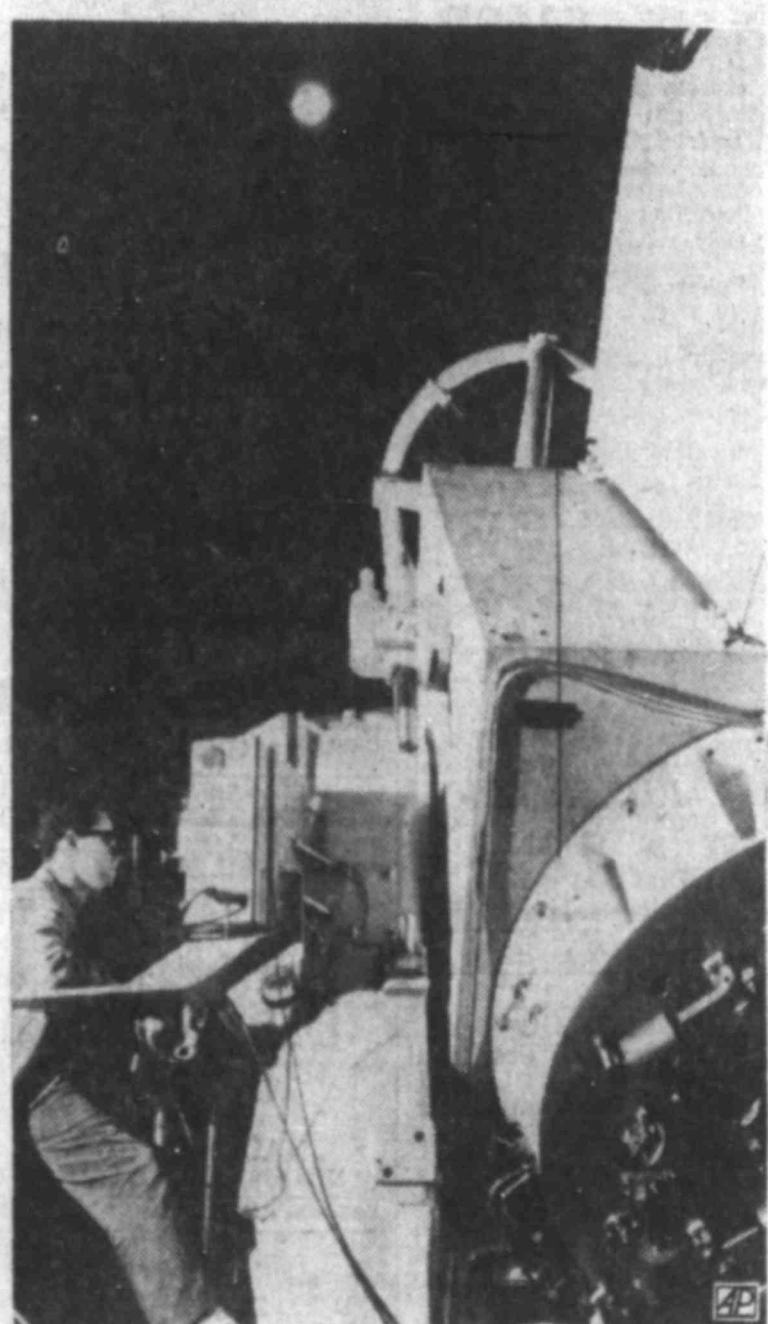

For instance, this one purports to show that women buyers of hair sprays prefer mystery, adventure, variety, drama, news and documentary shows, but women buyers of color rinse for hair add situation comedy programs to the list.

Female cigarette smokers prefer mystery-adventure and drama but male cigarette smokers also enjoy news-documentaries. Both young men (up to 39) and older men (40 plus) particularly like westerns but neither young nor older women have them on their list of favorites.

Families that use more than a dollar's worth of soaps and detergents a week were found to enjoy mystery-adventure, westerns and drama, while families that use more than three cans of scouring powder a month choose mystery-adventure, drama, news and documentary.

This is all pretty fascinating, but I can't seem to figure out a real relationship between scouring powder and a score of westerns, or for that matter, see why heavy tea drinkers go for horse operas while coffee drinkers prefer whodunits.

Moon Hit

A Massachusetts Institute of Technology student, Peter A. Mandics, of Denver, checks instruments as a series of 20 intense flashes of light were beamed at the moon. In the first experiment, the team hit the moon and then caught the reflection back on earth. The light comes from four lamps beamed through a ruby optical maser, then aimed at the moon with a telescope. The light on the moon is not visible but is recorded electronically. Part of the double telescope system is at right.

3 States Hold Primaries Today

By The Associated Press
Voters in Maryland, Pennsylvania and Nebraska pick nominees for state and federal offices in primary elections today. Turnouts of less than half the registered voters in each state were predicted.

The Maryland campaign has been liberally laced with charges of corruption and patronage peddling. The Nebraska and Pennsylvania campaigns have been more sedate. None of the Democratic primaries has directly involved President Kennedy.

Former President Dwight D. Eisenhower is involved to some extent in Nebraska and Pennsylvania. His personal choice, Rep. William W. Scrantom, 44, is the front-runner in the Pennsylvania gubernatorial primary. Fred Seaton, who was secretary of the interior in Eisenhower's Cabinet, appears a shoo-in for the Nebraska Republican gubernatorial nomination.

Seven Democrats seek the gubernatorial nod in Maryland, including incumbent Gov. J. Millard Tawes. His stiffest opposition has come from George Mahoney, a contractor who has scored some near misses in losing biennial tries for the Democratic nominations for Senate or governor since 1950. David Hume, an attorney, has no organization to match Tawes or Mahoney but was ranked as a darkhorse possibility.

The campaign was a rough one. Baltimore political leader Jack Pollack, who supported Tawes in 1958 but has switched to Mahoney this year, produced a tape recording portraying his alleged gift of $5,000 to Tawes in exchange for the right to name several Baltimore judges. Tawes conceded he discussed patronage with Pollack in 1958 but said the politico's demands grew too great and he broke with Pollack in 1959.

Despite the heat of the campaign, some Maryland observers think many Democrats will stay home, cutting the vote total to less than 50 per cent of registrations.

Frank Small Jr., a former congressman, is favored to win the Republican nomination for governor following a comparatively quiet campaign.

Aggies Favor New Name, Coeds, Voluntary Corps

COLLEGE STATION — Texas Aggies have voted by a narrow margin to admit girls to A&M, change the school's name to include the word "university," and to make membership in the school's Corps of Cadets noncompulsory.

Results of the informal student poll conducted last week were announced in the Battalion, the student newspaper. The vote was initiated by Texas A&M President Earl Rudder to determine student opinion on the three controversial issues.

A total of 46.2 per cent of A&M's student body voted in the poll, conducted by campus voting machines.

Here is the breakdown on the individual questions:

1. Would you favor co-education at Texas A&M? Yes—1,748; No—1,599, or 52.2 per cent favoring co-education and 47.8 opposing.
2. Would you recommend a name change for Texas A&M eliminating "college" and adding "university"? Yes—1,943; No—1,395, or 58.2 per cent favoring a name change and 41.8 per cent opposing.

3. Would you favor maintaining the present compulsory two years of ROTC? Yes—1,444; No—1,892, or 43.3 per cent in favor of compulsory military training, and 56.7 per cent opposed to it.

A more detailed analysis showed that on the co-education question 699 Corps students and 1,049 civilian students voted yes, while 1,290 Corps students and 309 civilian students voted no.

On the name change issue, 925 Corps students and 1,018 civilian students voted yes, with 1,062 Corps students and 333 civilian students voting no.

For retaining the present compulsory two years of ROTC training, 1,133 Corps students and 311 civilian students voted yes, and 861 Corps students and 1,031 civilian students voted no.
