Continental flies new lower fares, broader service into basin gates

By John Paul Pitts

Continental Airlines announced Monday that it would institute new lower fares and expanded service to Midland.

Don Valentine, senior vice president of marketing for Continental, said the airline would restore its service to Denver Airlines with two flights daily through El Paso, and would reduce fares to St. Louis, Houston, Kansas City and Louisville. Lower fares to St. Louis, and Kansas City became effective Monday, with other fare changes set to take place on March 7.

Under the new structure, the one-way fare from Midland to Houston has been reduced from $246 to $115. The top fare from Midland to Kansas City has been reduced from $354 to $244, and the fare from Midland to St. Louis has been reduced to $284 from $436. Those are also one-way prices.

Fares for new service also have been priced according to Continental's Peanut Flights. New service to Louisville will be $189, and new service to El Paso is $84. Both are one-way.

"These are unrestricted and fully refundable fares and are available every day for every seat," said Valentine.

Restored jet service to Denver, set to begin March 9, is not among the Peanut Flights, and fares will be approximately the same as before. The highest price will be $299 one day, and the lowest fare will be $345 round trip with 14 day advanced purchase.

In a move to cut fares even deeper, Continental has initiated "Add a Penny, Add a Pal Fares" for its El Paso, Houston, Kansas City and Louisville flights.

"That means you can take a pal for only one additional penny, provided you make reservations one day in advance and stay at least one night. This would make it possible

Fed chief signals rate rise

Greenspan sees increase to ward off inflation

■ Economists expect change in overnight rate for loans among banks any time between next month, end of spring.

Associated Press

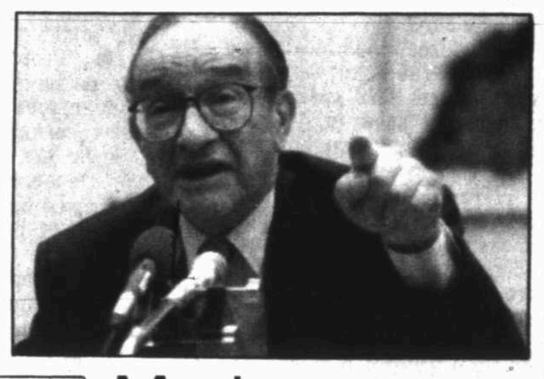

WASHINGTON — Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan said Monday it's a matter of when — not whether — the central bank raises short-term interest rates, and he warned that waiting until inflation worsens would only mean harsher rate increases later.

"Short-term interest rates are currently abnormally low," he told Congress' Joint Economic Committee. "At some point, absent an unexpected and prolonged weakening of economic activity, we will need to move them."

He carefully avoided saying exactly when, but private economists widely expect an increase in the overnight rate for loans among banks anytime between next month and the end of spring.

It would be the first increase in this federal-funds rate in five years, when the rate peaked at 9.75 percent, and the first change of any kind since September 1992 when the rate fell to a

Crews hit roadways to lay traction

City and state street crews were out in full force Monday to help melt the way for Midland motorists.

"I've got the entire street division out," said Mike Butler, Midland's assistant director of engineering and development, Monday morning. That equates to about 35 employees.

The city's street department hit the roadways about 5 a.m., he said.

"We use brine water on major thoroughfares and railroad crossings, and sand and gravel on the bridges," Butler said. "We kind of work from the west side of town to the east side of town."

Marines open fire on crowd, kill 8 Somalis

■ Reports conflict about what started shooting; U.S. officials say convoy came under sniper attack.

By Eric Schmitt
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — In the worst violence involving Americans in Somalia since last October, U.S. Marines opened fire on Monday in a crowded street in Mogadishu, killing at least eight Somalis and injuring 12 others, U.N. officials said.

There were conflicting reports about what started the shooting. American officials said that 22 Marines shot in self-defense after their five-vehicle convoy, which was escorting two American diplomats, came under fire from at least six Somali snipers in a one-minute barrage. No Americans were hurt.

The commander of Bangladeshi soldiers guarding a nearby traffic circle told the Associated Press that his troops did not see any snipers when the Marines opened fire with machine guns. "The first fire that attracted our attention was American fire," said Maj. K.G. Haider, commander of the Bangladeshi unit, which is stationed in Mogadishu as part of the U.N. peacekeeping force.

He said that he did not rule out the possibility that shots were fired at the Americans. But he stressed that he believed the Marines fired "indiscriminately toward the crowd."

Dallas suffers 'Buffalo breath' by '93 standards

DALLAS — Ho-hum.

By last year's standards, this city's Super Bowl hangover was a bummer. Maybe a mild headache. An upset tummy. A sore throat or two. Buffalo breath, at the worst.

Gillooly lawyer: Harding helped plan assault on rival Kerrigan

By Michael Janofsky
N.Y. Times News Service

PORTLAND, Ore. — Jeff Gillooly, the former husband of Tonya Harding, has told investigators that Harding helped plan the assault on her figure-skating rival, Nancy Kerrigan, Gillooly's lawyer said Monday.

Ronald H. Hoevet, the lawyer, said Gillooly told federal investigators last week that Harding had given final approval for the Jan. 6 attack in Detroit, where Miss Kerrigan was struck above the right knee and kept from competing in the national championships.

The lawyer said Gillooly's account was fully detailed, and included many points that could be corroborated by phone logs and bank records.

Harding, who initially denied any knowledge of the plot, said last week that she had learned

Richards, other governors mull lawsuit over illegal immigration

By Ron Hutcheson
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Texas Gov. Ann Richards joined governors from California and Florida on Monday in threatening to sue the federal government over its failure to stop illegal immigration.

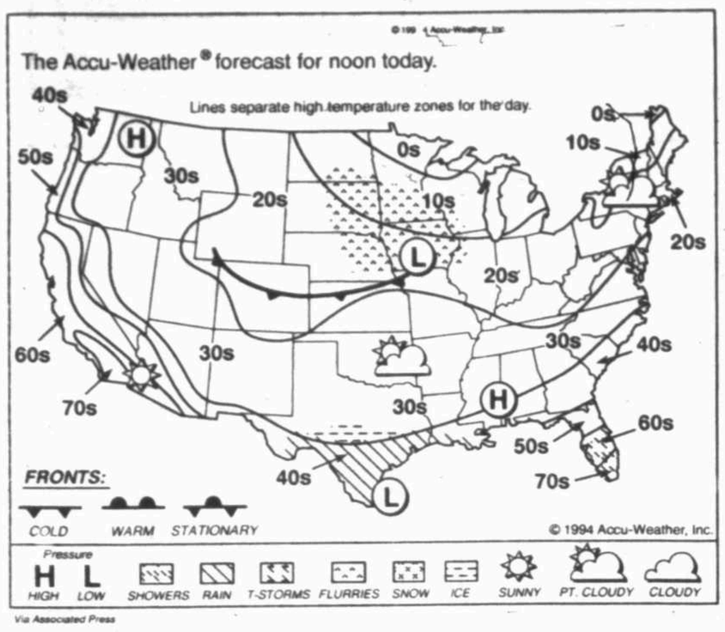

Seeking relief from the financial strains caused by large numbers of illegal residents, Richards and officials from California, New York, Florida, New Jersey, Illinois and Arizona urged administration officials to get tough at the border or pay the consequences.

"The federal government has really got two choices. One is to enforce the immigration laws. The other is to pay for the costs if they don't," Richards said.

Richards said she has asked Texas Attorney General Dan Morales to join threatened legal action by Florida and California several days after the attack that several people close to her had been involved.

However, in more than 10 hours of interviews with investigators on Jan. 18, she consistently denied knowing anything in advance about plans for the attack.

Gillooly identified Harding as an important figure in planning the attack only after he learned that she had told authorities that he had played the central role, his lawyer said. She had been telling him privately that she did not implicate him in her statements to the investigators, Hoevet said.

Harding's lawyer, Robert C. Weaver, Jr., did not return several telephone messages left for him.

Gillooly, 26, a former warehouse worker who is currently unemployed, is scheduled to appear in court Tuesday morning to accept a plea bargain offer from the Multnomah district attorney's office.

Hoevet said that his client has accepted a proposal of pleading guilty to a single count of racketeering and a fine of $100,000 in exchange for telling his version of what happened and a maximum jail term of two years, one year less than he could have received on the original charge of conspiracy to commit assault.

As part of any plea bargain agreement in Oregon, the court routinely makes public reports by law enforcement agencies, including the FBI, which interviewed both Harding and Gillooly. Norman W. Frink, the deputy district attorney, said he assumed that those statements would be released Tuesday.

Hoevet said he was speaking out now to send a message to U.S. Olympic officials that Harding should be "eliminated from the Olympic team."

"She is entitled to due process, for sure," Hoevet said of Harding. "But we would be a morally bankrupt nation if we send to the Olympic games as teammates, Nancy Kerrigan and Tonya Harding, a woman who helped get her whacked."

Skating officials are making their own inquiry. They had no comment on Hoevet's statements. Mike Moran, a spokesman for the U.S. Olympic Committee, said it would be inappropriate to comment on the Harding matter.

In a 30-minute interview Monday, in which he revealed many of the details of Gillooly's 17 hours of testimony over two days last week, Hoevet made these general points, based on his client's assertions:

■ Harding, who lived with Gillooly at the time despite their divorce, was involved with Gillooly in planning the assault from a point in early December after she finished fourth, a disappointment, at a skating competition in Japan.

■ Gillooly identified a Pennsylvania woman well-connected in figure-skating circles who Harding called to ask for help in learning Kerrigan's home address in Stoneham, Mass., and details of her training schedule at her practice rink on Cape Cod.

■ Investigators have compiled a wealth of corroborating evidence that bears out much of what Gillooly told them, including telephone logs, money transfers and videotape surveillance of movements around Portland by Gillooly and Harding after they returned to Portland from Detroit on Jan. 10.

On one tape, Hoevet said, federal investigators have pictures of the couple driving back and forth in front of the home of Shawn E. Eckardt, Harding's one-time body guard, at a time they knew Eckardt was being interviewed by the authorities.

SNOW: City slips in storm

(From 1A)

10 inches of snow blew into the area about 1 p.m., causing temperatures to drop from 52 at noon to 41 by 6 p.m., said a National Weather Service spokesman. The snow began falling between 9 and 10 p.m. Sunday.

The cold front mainly affected the Panhandle and West Texas, according to the NWS spokesman. Ten inches of snow in Amarillo closed schools and some businesses. San Angelo reported about an inch of snow Sunday while Lubbock received a trace of snow. Rain changed into moderate snow late Sunday in Abilene, which reported an inch of snow, and Wichita Falls and Greenville area.

A winter storm advisory was in effect from about 1 p.m. Sunday until Monday morning, as winds picked up to 30 mph and about two inches of snow blanketed the area. The NWS spokesman said it was hard to get an accurate measurement on how much precipitation fell because of the high winds.

"We would have had a lot more acculumation if it weren't for the wind," the spokesman said. "The snow basically blew horizontal for awhile."

Schools in Midland started classes two hours later than normal Monday because of icy road conditions caused by the precipitation and temperatures that dipped into the lower 20s overnight.

Temperatures reached only into the upper 20s Monday, which kept the snow from melting, but also turned roadways into slush, which forecasters are predicting will ice over again tonight.

Icy conditions Monday morning were blamed for several minor accidents in Midland and the surrounding area. Midland police reported 23 minor accidents between midnight and 3 p.m. Monday.

"It's mainly due to driver inattention and people not adjusting their speed to the condition outside," said Midland Police Sgt. David Garcia. "People are driving at their normal speeds on ice, which is highly dangerous."

Odessa reported 13 minor accidents during the morning hours and the Department of Public Safety reported working 15 minor accidents in Midland and Ector counties. In the surrounding areas, Andrews reported only one minor accident due to the weather.

No major accidents or fatalities were reported for the Permian Basin.

Forecasters are urging motorists to take it easy this morning. While the clouds and precipation was expected to have left the area by late Monday, the clearing will drop temperatures from around 20 degrees to about 10 by 6 or 7 a.m. today, said the NWS spokesman. The hard freeze will ice up all roadways again, making travel difficult during early morning hours.

Today should be partly cloudy with a high in the upper 30s and southwest winds at 5-15 mph. Tonight should be mostly clear with a low around 15.

Wednesday should be mostly sunny with a high near 50.

After an overnight low of 23, Monday's high reached 28, compared to the record high for that date of 80 set in 1963. The record low was -8 in 1985.

SIGNALS: Greenspan warns of rates increase nearly 30-year low of 3 percent.

A rise in the rate engineered by the Fed eventually could translate into increases in consumer rates on auto loans, adjustable-rate mortgages and bank deposits.

Long-term rates, such as those on corporate bonds and 30-year mortgages, are set in financial markets and would not necessarily be affected by a Fed move, at least not at first.

At the White House, President Clinton said "there's no evidence that inflation is coming back," but he sounded almost resigned to a modest increase in short-term rates.

"What I hope is that it won't raise long-term rates because there is no need to do it. And I hope that the stock market won't take an adverse view because we've still got good strong growth in this economy," he said.

The Democratic chairman and vice chairman of the joint committee — Rep. David Obey of Wisconsin and Sen. Paul Sarbanes of Maryland — urged Greenspan to postpone any rate increase as long as possible

"I think the economic ship is on course. I think steady as she goes is the lesson all of us should draw from the current situation," Sarbanes said.

Greenspan acknowledged that many of the forces that restrained inflation to 2.7 percent in 1993, the second best showing in 29 years, will work to hold down prices this year.

Still, he noted "upward pressure on prices of a number of industrial materials" and warned it would be a mistake to delay raising rates until after inflation clearly had gotten worse.

"By the time inflation pressures are evident, many imbalances that are costly to rectify have already developed and only harsh monetary therapy can restore the financial stability necessary to sustain growth," he said.

Greenspan depicted an economy with enough vigor currently to withstand a modest rate hike. He said the 5.9 percent growth rate in the gross domestic product, recorded in the fourth quarter, wasn't likely to last. But, neither was the economy likely to lapse to a near standstill as it did a year ago, he said.

ILLEGAL: Richards, others threaten lawsuit against the federal government.

"If there are any opportunities for us to join in a suit, we're going to do that," Richards said. "We want the federal government to assume its responsibility and pay for them if they are not going to enforce the law to keep them out."

Although Richards was the most outspoken in threatening a lawsuit, the Texas governor said she expects other states to join the legal action.

Richards and the other state officials delivered their ultimatum at a late-afternoon meeting with Attorney General Janet Reno, White House budget director Leon Panetta and Health and Human Services Secretary Donna Shalala. Other governors at the meeting included two Republicans, Christine Todd Whitman of New Jersey and Jim Edgar of Illinois.

New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, who was unable to attend the session, has also called for federal action against illegal immigration.

The Heritage Foundation, a conservative public policy organization in Washington, recently estimated that illegal immigrants cost federal and local governments about $6.5 billion in 1992, even though immigrants contributed an estimated $1.2 billion in taxes.

Another recent study, conducted at Rice University in Houston, put the total cost at about $7.6 billion.

The state of Texas estimates that illegal immigrants cost the state and local governments about $456 million a year, but contribute about $290 million in taxes. The difference leaves a net cost of about $166 million a year.

Most of the expense — an estimated $299 million — is related to the cost of educating more than 72,000 immigrant children.

"It is literally breaking the backs of some local governments," Richards said. "They are costing local governments a great deal, particularly in education and in public hospitals."

withdrawing since an ill-fated Army raid last Oct. 3 in Mogadishu left 18 Americans dead and 75 wounded. President Clinton ordered all American troops to leave Somali by March 31.

About 1,900 American troops remain in Somalia, with an additional 3,000 Marines and sailors stationed offshore.

White House Press Secretary Dee Dee Myers declined to comment on the episode. "We're still looking, trying to determine" what happened, she said.

In an unusual move that reflected the political sensitivity of the episode, the White House and the National Security Council referred all inquiries about the shooting to the Pentagon. Earlier in the day, the Pentagon had referred all questions to the State Department.

The streets of Mogadishu, where violence has ebbed and flowed over the last several months, have in recent weeks lapsed back into increasing banditry.

"There has not been any pattern of harassment, but there has been a decline in the overall security situation," said a State Department official. "There are sporadic instances of banditry or people brandishing weapons in Mogadishu. It's a growing concern and a fact of life."

Inside and outside the capital, international relief workers have been attacked. Last Friday, 13 Somalis were killed in a gun battle between rival clan groups north of Mogadishu. The clan violence has also produced the first food shortages in outlying regions since American-led forces arrived.

Somali clan elders recently reached a peace agreement in Mogadishu, and thousands of people marched across the city's treacherous cease-fire line in support of the accord. But militias are rearming and taking control of bases abandoned by the U.N. forces.

U.N. officials said on Monday that a military investigation into the shootings had begun. They added that they hoped the deaths would not set back the elders' peace accord.

An American diplomat, Stevenson McIlvaine, told reporters in Mogadishu that the shooting occurred about 11:15 a.m. on Afgoye Road, a major artery.

for more hazardous driving conditions than the Friday night/Saturday morning snowstorm.

"Saturday the roads were warm from the day before and it all melted off," he said.

The few inches that fell on Midland Sunday night and Monday morning coupled with low temperatures made the streets icy for Monday morning motorists.

Butler said that if weather conditions remain snowy and icy, workers will be put on 24-hour stand-by at his department's operations center.

Also out to clear the roadways were workers with the Texas Department of Transportation.

A spokeswoman said state crews began work about 10 p.m. Sunday putting a fine gravel/salt combination on state roads including Loop 250, Interstate 20, and Business 20 which includes Front Street.

Half of the department of 21 worked through the night, and were relieved by the other half during the day Monday.

If the icy weather persists, "we'll probably work all night around the clock," she said Monday.

koski confessed last year as he clutched a cold beer at the Addison Point, a popular north side sports bar.

"I didn't wake up today. I came to," said his buddy, Craig Shaffer.

After Sunday's victory, it was more like the hair of the puppy.

"It just wasn't that frenzied," said Casey Gotcher, who surfaced at the Point shortly before noon Monday. "Last year, everybody went crazy. This year, it was more subdued.

"It's really kind of bizarre."

Police made only a couple of arrests for drunkenness Sunday night. There were no reports of injuries and only a few rowdy incidents.

Police did rebuke some 27 screaming and shouting fans packed into an El Camino creeping through the historic downtown West End entertainment complex, which was a madhouse last year.

Anticipating another wild celebration, 312 extra officers were scattered around the city's hot spots, almost half of them in the West End.

But there was more honking and hollering than brawling.

Monday morning, nobody showed up at the West End's Outback Pub, the scene of one of the city's biggest Super Bowl bashes Sunday.

"They got their partying done last night," laughed general manager Donnie Mixon. "We were packed to the gills, but they were a lot calmer than last year.

"A year ago, it was just mayhem."

With the 'Boys trailing by a touchdown at halftime, the mood across the Dallas-Fort Worth Metroplex was a mite subdued, but not gloomy.

"Our group had a feeling something good was going to happen in the second half," Mixon said. "And sure enough it did."

The Outback crowd "hit the rafters" when James Washington returned Thurman Thomas' fumble for a touchdown early in the third quarter.

Everything was downhill from then on.

"The first half and second half were like two different ballgames," said Gotcher, the Addison Point regular. "I don't know if the Dallas dynasty's back. But we proved one thing — last year was not a fluke."

Gotcher and bartender Anita Joyce insisted that no one's actually blase over the Cowboys, it's just that the 1993 Super Bowl victory was the perfect end to a magical season.

"We're just getting a little cocky and arrogant, but that's the way it should be, because we're the Dallas Cowboys," Gotcher said.

Said Ms. Joyce, obviously a believer in Cowboys coach Jimmy Johnson:

"I think we're going to go back a third time and set a record. Why not? Jimmy's going to do it just to hack off everybody in the NFL."

In Las Vegas, professional oddsmakers have made Dallas a 3-1 favorite to win next year's Super Bowl. San Francisco is 5-1, Houston 7-1 and Miami and the New York Giants 12-1.

Tampa Bay and Cincinnati are the longest shots at 200-1.

And the Bills, who have lost four straight? They're 12-1, but, says one oddsmaker, "They might as well be 100-1."

Butch Weatherby, a regular at the Scoreboard in nearby Fort Worth, was one Cowboy fan just content with Sunday's verdict.

"My financial future and the harmony of my household were in jeopardy most of the night," he confessed. He was one of the many who bet the 'Boys, giving 10½ points.

FLIES: Airline drops fares, adds service for two people to travel to Houston for $115 and a penny, and two people to travel to El Paso for $84 and a penny. We will even have jars of pennys at the ticket counter for those that need them," said Valentine.

However, if no pal is available, Continental also will have economical, limited seating fares available for Houston and El Paso. Limited seating fares, which will require one-day advance reservations, will be $79 to Houston and $49 to El Paso.

Valentine said the new services and new fares are part of a campaign by Continental to become more productive by using its airplanes more and spending less time waiting at terminal hubs.

"When we fly from point to point, instead of from a hub, we can turn a plane around in 20 minutes. But it takes at least an hour at a hub."

Valentine also noted that the Midland fares and service were an expansion of a plan first implemented on the Eastern Seabord in October of 1993. The plan is now being expanded to nine cities in Texas. He said that since the Peanuts Flights were begun, gate departures had nearly doubled.

Israel asked for delay on peace plan, PLO says

JERUSALEM (AP) — The Palestinians had expected to sign a draft agreement on implementing the PLO-Israeli accord during talks in Switzerland but Israel asked for more time, PLO leader Yasser Arafat said Monday.

He spoke a day after he and Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres concluded two days of talks on untying some of the knots blocking the historic accord. Although no agreement was signed, both sides reported progress.

On Monday, Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin was studying a draft agreement drawn up by Peres and Arafat in Davos, Switzerland.

And despite the lack of a signing during the weekend, Cabinet ministers in Israel and Palestinian negotiators were optimistic.

"There is a breakthrough, in that the engines will be started and the first stage will be on," Housing Minister Binyamin Ben-Eliezer told reporters after a Cabinet meeting, where ministers received copies of the draft agreement.

Peres and Arafat were to meet again Sunday, and talks between the PLO and Israel are to reopen today in Cairo, Egypt.

The agreement promised an initial stage of self-rule for the Palestinians in the Gaza Strip and in Jericho on the West Bank. But talks bogged down over the size of Jericho, the securing of settlements in the Gaza Strip and the control of the borders between Jordan and Jericho, and Egypt and Gaza.

"It was expected that last night we were going to sign the first initials in the Davos agreement, but the Israeli side asked for some more days to study the new drafts," Arafat said Monday in Bern, Switzerland.

"I am a pragmatic man. I can say no more than I hope. The tango needs two partners," he said, according to Israeli TV.

The chief Palestinian negotiator, Nabil Shaath, said there were no disagreements about the overall issues of the crossing points or Jericho, only about the details.

Shaath told reporters upon arriving in Egypt that "I believe we are not far from reaching an agreement."

Mentally ill get chained near old cemetery

DIWAN SAHIB, Pakistan (AP) — Mohammed Yer is receiving the treatment that draws the mentally ill from miles around: He's chained to a tree on the edge of a dusty graveyard, waiting to be relieved of his torment by a Muslim saint buried nearby.

Yer had been bound to the tree by one ankle for four days, given only a straw mat for sleeping and an occasional meal of bread and water. Other mental patients have been chained for weeks, months, even years in this remote village in central Pakistan, 250 miles south of Islamabad.

"I've been sick for 10 years," said Yer, a drowsy-looking, apathetic man of 37 with five children. "I've tried many doctors and many medicines. I will just have to wait here until I am better."

Shackling patients, even harmless ones, is a tradition and a thriving business in Diwan Sahib, home of the saint Haji Sher, who died around 750 A.D. and is believed capable of curing mental illness.

Haji Sher is buried beneath a white, domed mausoleum on the village hilltop. His legend has spread far in Pakistan, where health care is scarce and the illiterate are guided by customs that clash with modern medical practices.

One physician, Dr. Mohammed Akram, has been treating the chained patients with shots for the past year, and wants the bondage stopped. But faith in the saint is so strong that Akram has refrained from confrontation and has not attempted to unchain the patients.

People from hundreds of miles in all directions bring mentally ill family members to the village and allow them to be chained in the belief it will cure illnesses such as schizophrenia, hysteria and depression.

Most patients are chained for up to nine days and nights. The faithful believe the saint will heal the patient, and the proof comes when the chains are unlocked in a seemingly mysterious fashion. An estimated 1,300 patients underwent the bizarre ritual last year in Diwan Sahib.

Yer was one of three men tied to separate trees on a patch of barren land next to the cemetery.

Guerrilla revolt scares tourists out of Mexico

By Leon Lazaroff
N.Y. Times News Service

SAN CRISTOBAL DE LAS CASAS, Mexico — In the handsome courtyard of the Cafe Colonial, a young waiter stands reading a comic book. It's 2 in the afternoon, but no one has arrived for the usual siesta lunch.

"It's rare to see a tourist now," said Gonzalo Gordillo with a shrug. "When the fighting began, they all left," the waiter added.

The fighting began Jan. 1, when about 800 peasant rebels of the Zapatista Army for National Liberation invaded San Cristobal, with its many charming hotels, good restaurants and warm plazas usually filled with European and American travelers looking for a taste of old-world Mexico.

Each year, about 1.2 million tourists stop by this relaxed colonial city to walk its cobblestone streets, visit nearby Indian villages or journey a few hours away to the stunning Mayan ruins of Palenque.

But on New Year's Day, visitors awoke to find the city's main plaza filled with armed guerrillas.

A few visitors stayed, but most quickly departed.

Although the rebels have largely retreated far south into the Lacandon Rain Forest, the city of San Cristobal, which relies almost totally on tourism for its economic health, is discovering the difficulties of restoring an image scarred by war.

Serbs mobilize forces for 'conclusion of war'

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (NYT) — Secessionist Bosnian Serbs ordered a general mobilization on Monday to push for "a successful conclusion of the war" by a military victory.

"The entire able-bodied population will be mobilized, either into military or labor units, and special women's units will be formed," the breakaway Srpska Republic's general command announced.

The mobilization appeared to presage a new offensive against the Muslim-dominated Bosnian government, which has shown increasing military power and earlier this month beat back a large Serbian offensive near the key road junction of Olovo.

Serbian military leaders ordered the mobilization after a meeting of commanders in Bijeljina on Sunday. Among the measures is a crackdown on black-marketeering, apparently aimed at an illicit arms trade in which the Bosnian army has been buying arms from Serbs.

The Serbian announcement, coming amid reports that Croatian forces are preparing their own offensive against the Bosnian government, seems aimed at forcing the authorities in Sarajevo to abandon their struggle to regain territory, and instead to accept an international mediation team's plan to partition the country into three ethnically based cantons, with the Serbian and Croatian cantons expected to be annexed by Serbia and Croatia. The Srpska Republic's sponsors in the Belgrade government, hard-hit by international economic sanctions, are becoming increasingly desperate for an end to the fighting.

In an announcement carried by the Tanyug news agency in Belgrade, the Bosnian Serb leadership said: "Given the fact that the international community has decided to support the Muslims' war option and recognize the results of their struggle, the Srpska Republic's high command, exercising its legal authority, has taken a number of of decisions and measures whose goal is the mobilization of all the Srpska Republic's potential for a successful conclusion of the war, which presupposes that not only the Muslims will recognize the results of the conflict, but all the other sides will as well."

The Serbian forces also expressed defiance of the United Nations, which wants to reopen an airfield at Tuzla, a government-held town in northern Bosnia, for aid flights. The United Nations has said it is considering the use of air strikes to force the Serbs, who are within artillery range of the airport, to permit relief flights to land unmolested. The Serbs have refused, saying Muslims would use the airport to smuggle weapons.

"Not a single aircraft will be able to land at the Tuzla airport using force," said Manojlo Milovanovic, the second-ranking general in the Bosnian Serbs' militia. "If this happens, the aircraft will never take off again."

Other measures in the mobilization are to include a roundup of deserters and draft dodgers.

North Korea ties nuclear inspections to U.S. missiles

TOKYO (AP) — North Korea warned on Monday it may nullify promises to accept some nuclear inspections unless the United States drops plans to put Patriot anit-missile batteries in South Korea.

That would mean renewing its withdrawal from an international treaty designed to limit the spread of nuclear weapons, North Korea said.

The resistance of North Korea's hard-line Communist government to nuclear inspections has increased suspicions it is trying to develop atomic weapons. The North Koreans deny doing so, saying their nuclear program has only peaceful purposes.

For a second straight day, North Korea's official news media strongly criticized U.S. plans disclosed last week to send Patriot batteries to South Korea to defend against a possible North Korean rocket attack.

"We are prepared either for dialogue or for a war," an unidentified spokesman for North Korea's committee for reunification with South Korea said in a report carried by the Korean Central News Agency. The report was monitored in Tokyo.

The spokesman said the United States also had stepped up espionage against North Korea

IRA leader talks peace during historic U.S. trip

By Francis X. Clines
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — After long years of ostracism by Washington, Gerry Adams, the political head of the Irish Republican Army, was permitted onto American soil on Monday and immediately predicted that Northern Ireland's 25 years of urban guerrilla warfare would enter a climactic stage toward peace.

"Let me be quite clear about this: this generation of republicans is going to see peace in Ireland," Adams said upon arriving for a conference about the intransigent politics and deadly troubles of Ulster.

Adams, an articulate and enigmatic partisan leader in a centuries-old struggle, commended President Clinton for reversing his visa ban. At an airport news conference, he expressed optimism in the long run but made no predictions of a peace breakthrough during his New York visit.

"It's a small step," he said of finally reaching America, with its influential political and news media institutions. "But it's also a small victory for free speech." As president of Sinn Fein, the IRA's political arm, Adams has been subject to censorship in Britain and, until recently, in the Irish Republic.

His supporters were busy on Monday booking him onto television news shows, most likely guaranteeing him more exposure in his two days in New York than he has been able to achieve in years of muted coverage at home.

His very arrival, after eight earlier denials of a visa, was hailed by his jubilant Irish-American partisans as a historic step of recognition for his side in the agonizing warfare that has long afflicted Northern Ireland and British mainland targets.

"He's been brought out of the shadows by Clinton," said Rep. Peter T. King, the Nassau County (N.Y.) Republican and staunch Adams ally, who hailed the administration's decision to end the exclusion of Adams.

"This finally recognizes Sinn Fein and the IRA as a legitimate force in Northern Ireland — not bad for an ex-bartender from Northern Ireland," said King, who predicted that the visitor would make the most of his 48-hour visit in explaining the IRA's position in its 25 years of violent resistance to British rule in Northern Ireland.

Some British and American diplomats were complaining that Adams had made no real change, as the White House insisted, in his long-standing defense of IRA violence.

Study profiles sexual mores of British people

LONDON (NYT) — A recent survey of sexual attitudes and behavior among the British has turned up results that have surprised some sociologists and pundits: the vast majority of people practice monogamy and only a small number admit to engaging in homosexual sex.

The findings seem to undercut the popular notions, fed recently by an unfolding series of sex scandals among government ministers, that adultery is widespread in British society and that more and more men and women are abandoning heterosexual roles.

"We were surprised by the strength of the idea of monogamy," said Kaye Wellings, a medical sociologist at the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine who was a principal investigator. The main conclusion, she said, was that "while sexual behavior may seem to be diverse, the ideal for most people is a one-to-one relationship with a steady partner."

The study, the National Survey of Sexual Attitudes and Lifestyles, found that fewer than 1 in 20 married men and fewer than 1 in 50 married women reported having had more than one sexual partner over the past year. Even fewer, roughly 1 in 100 married men and 1 in 500 married women, reported having had more than two partners.

Among single people, however, more than 1 in 4 men and more than 1 in 6 women said they had had multiple partners over the previous year. The results for people who lived together but were not married were in between but closer to those for single people.

In fact, the people who reported having had the most partners were not those who had never married but those who were separated, divorced or widowed, especially men between the ages of 25 and 44. This group, it was suggested, might be a more appropriate target for safe-sex campaigns to cut down on the risk of HIV infection than young people.

Although some replies were given in face-to-face interviews, answers to the most sensitive questions were given in written questionnaires that were filled out anonymously.

The findings on homosexuality, indicating that only 3.5 percent of men had had a male partner at some point in their lives, were controversial. By contrast, earlier studies found that 1 of 10 men are homosexual. The new findings, appearing in excerpts in the press in recent weeks, were immediately attacked by gay rights groups at a time when the House of Commons is considering a bill to lower the age of consent from 21 to either 18 or 16.

Among those who said they had had a male partner, only 1.4 percent had had one in the previous five years and only 1.1 percent in the previous year. The picture was roughly comparable for women, the investigators found.

The survey, described as the most comprehensive ever in Britain, involved 18,876 people between the ages of 16 and 59.

Administration endorses U.N. plan threatening air strikes in Bosnia

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Clinton administration endorsed a U.N. report Monday threatening air strikes against Bosnian Serbs while intelligence sources reported 5,000 to 10,000 Croatian troops had crossed into Bosnia.

Endorsement of the U.N. secretary-general's report gives new impetus to the threat of air strikes if the Serbs attack peacekeepers in two key towns.

In a worsening situation, U.S. intelligence estimated Croatia was pouring troops into Bosnia-Herzegovina in an apparent attempt to offset gains by the Muslim-led government's army.

An administration official, insisting on anonymity, said this could lead to U.S. moves in the United Nations to impose the tough economic sanctions on Croatia of the kind that has crippled Serbia's economy.

German Chancellor Helmut Kohl said he could not substantiate reports of Croatian troops moving across the border in large numbers. But he said if true he would disapprove "very severely and find a way to pour my disapproval into practice."

The statement indicates Germany would support the United States in seeking sanctions in the U.N. Security Council.

At the same time, the administration continued to pursue an allied consensus as President Clinton met at the White House with Kohl. It could be part of a final concerted diplomatic effort to settle the bloody conflict in the former Yugoslav republic before military action by the NATO allies.

Kohl was tight-lipped about the session. "We talked about a number of possibilities that I wouldn't want to make public just yet," he said later at a news conference.

The White House had even less to say, just putting out a written statement saying their talks "covered a range of international and bilateral issues, including developments in Russia, Ukraine, Central Europe, Bosnia and the Middle East. They agreed on the need for vigorous follow-up on NATO summit decisions." Clinton plans to visit Germany in July after the economic summit.

Study: Smoking, drug usage increase among teens after decade of decline

WASHINGTON (AP) — Smoking and drug use among American teen-agers are increasing after a decade of decline, a study showed Monday, and its author warned that "the stage is set for a potential resurgence of cocaine and crack use."

University of Michigan researchers said they noticed a relaxing of attitudes about the dangers of drugs among eighth-, 10th- and 12th-graders in a yearly survey.

"These attitudes and beliefs, specifically the dangers believed to be associated with the use of these drugs ... play a critical role in deterring use," said Lloyd Johnston, who directed the study. "When they begin to soften, as they did last year, an increase in use can be expected."

He said the issue of drug use "fell off the radar screen," during the previous decade and "we may have been lulled into a false sense of security."

The study found a three or four percentage-point rise in the last year or two among students who reported any use of marijuana in the previous 12 months. In 1993, nine percent of eighth-graders smoked marijuana, 19 percent of 10th-graders and 26 percent of 12th-graders.

There has been a rise in cigarette smoking, too, after 10 years of fairly steady decline.

After falling from favor in the last 15 years, LSD use has been increasing gradually and there has been a rise in the use of inhalants like glues, solvents and aerosols.

"With more young people smoking cigarettes and using marijuana, and with the psychological and social constraints on use declining, the stage is set for a potential resurgence of cocaine and crack use in this population," Johnston told a news conference.

He said that in general, black students reported the lowest rates of use for virtually all the drugs, legal and illegal, and that this was true for all three grade levels.

"This study also shows us that we have to increase our efforts to convince young people that drugs are dangerous," said Health and Human Services Secretary Donna Shalala. "As the perception that marijuana is harmful increases, marijuana use decreases. But now, the perception of harmfulness is going down, and marijuana use is on the rise."

In his State of the Union message last week, President Clinton said the United States must reclaim its streets from violent crime, drugs and gangs.

Education Secretary Richard Riley said Clinton will include a $660 million request for safe and drug-free schools in the budget he presents to Congress next week. The government spent $491.6 million last year.

The Michigan researchers surveyed 51,000 high school and eighth-grade youths in more than 400 schools.

U.S. faces lowest blood supply since WWII

By Lawrence K. Altman
N.Y. Times News Service

Once again, the nation's blood supply is perilously low. But this winter the shortage has been the worst and longest since World War II.

The situation was so bad, blood bank officials said, that if more people had been injured in the Jan. 17 earthquake in Los Angeles, there might not have been enough blood to treat them, increasing the death toll.

At that time, the supply around the country was down to less than a day from the preferred five to seven days.

"The blood supply in Los Angeles and surrounding areas was in incredibly bad shape, and there was no blood to send in from anywhere," said Marcia Lane, a spokeswoman for the American Association of Blood Banks in Bethesda, Md. The association represents 2,400 blood banks, including those in the American Red Cross, that collect and process 80 percent of the blood transfused in the United States.

Officials offer a number of explanations for this year's shortage, ranging from severe weather to the flu outbreak to potential donors' irrational fear of contracting AIDS. But the severity of this year's shortage combined with the predictability of seasonal shortages in general raises an underlying question about the reliability of the blood collection system.

Transfusions of blood and blood products are crucial to the repair of many injuries and to much modern surgery as well as to the treatment of heart disease, cancer and other conditions.

Some 4 million patients in this country receive transfusions each year, using 14 million units of blood collected from 8 million volunteer donors drawn from among the 189 million Americans who are 17 and older. The blood must be used within 42 days or discarded.

In the past month, blood supplies reached dangerous levels in more than 40 cities and resulted in postponement of elective surgery in several areas. In an unprecedented action, the blood bank association and the Red Cross made a national emergency appeal for blood donations. Americans responded, easing the crisis. Now the supply has a two-day margin.

Clinton to governors: I'll bend on mandatory health alliances

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton assured governors Monday he is willing to bend on the spending limits and mandatory alliances in his health reform plan. Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole said Republicans were open to compromise, but not to "turn the system upside down."

GOP governors welcomed the president's overture, but said there was still a major disagreement over Clinton's insistence on making all employers pay for health insurance.

The governors, after a two-hour closed-door session at the White House, said Clinton told them he was flexible on how to control medical costs and on his plan to force most Americans into new, exclusive insurance purchasing alliances.

South Carolina Gov. Carroll Campbell, chairman of the National Governors Association, said Clinton made "very clear that he want to maintain employer mandates." That's a real obstacle for Republicans, he said.

Dole, addressing hospital executives, charged the White House was "more interested in finding villains than solutions," but acknowledged, "we do need health care reform."

The Kansas senator recited a list of changes that Republicans can support: requiring individuals to get coverage, setting up voluntary purchasing cooperatives, simplifying billing, and guaranteeing renewal and portability of insurance while limiting exclusions for preexisting conditions.

"They may not turn the system upside down as some envision at the White House, but (they) will make a big, big difference," said Dole.

"What I and my colleagues refuse to accept is the destruction of the best health care delivery system in the world ... in the guise of making health care available to all," said Dole.

Clinton will make his own pitch Tuesday to the hospital executives, who are wary of his Medicare cuts and spending limits, but support making all employers contribute toward health insurance.

Clinton has threatened to veto any bill that does not guarantee private insurance for all Americans. He did not say when the guarantee would have to kick in, and White House officials have said they are willing to discuss a phase-in longer than the 1998 deadline specified in Clinton's bill.

Medical examiner: 2 'execution-style' slaying among four dead at Taco Bell

CLARKSVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Investigators conceded Monday they are starting with little evidence and no known witnesses to the murders of four Taco Bell workers shot to death after their late-night shift ended.

Every person who works near the fast-food restaurant located at a busy intersection about a five-minute drive from downtown is a potential witness, said Jim Taylor, special agent of the Tennessee Bureau of Investigation.

Detectives hope someone who drove by the restaurant in the early hours of Sunday will come forward with some tip that will help solve a quadruple murder that shocked this city of 76,000, 40 miles northwest of Nashville.

The four workers were finishing a Saturday night shift at the restaurant when they were shot to death — two "execution style," according to the medical examiner — during an apparent robbery.

The bodies were discovered Sunday morning by the restaurant manager arriving to open for business, some five hours after the murders.

Taylor said investigators know, but he wouldn't reveal, how the assailants entered the restaurant. He confirmed there were no signs of forced entry and the doors were found locked.

How much money was taken is not known. Evidence gathered at the scene was being analyzed at the Tennessee Bureau of Investigation in Nashville.

Cowboys 'magic' returns to Dallas

If Dallas fans watching the Cowboys' 30-13 win over the Buffalo Bills on Sunday experienced the sensation of deja vous, it should be no surprise. It was the two teams' second meeting for the Super Bowl in the same number of years and the Cowboys walked away with the victory for the second time, leaving the Bills in a state of remorse for having come to football's top game four times only to see it slip through their fingers.

There's another reason for that feeling that Dallas fans have been here before, though. Watching quarterback Troy Aikman smoothly and confidently direct the Cowboys' offense brought back the unmistakable feeling that the Dallas team's execution is as good as it was when Roger Staubach was calling the Cowboys' plays.

And watching Emmitt Smith hammer out yardage and James Washington turn Buffalo miscues into scores also recalled that earlier Dallas magic — the quality that originally brought the nickname of "America's Team" to the Cowboys.

Dallas has proven twice now that it is a World's Champion team under the coaching of Jimmy Johnson, and we're of the opinion that they have convinced thousands of fans around the nation that the team is again deserving of the nickname.

Sunday's victory also boosted Aikman, a superb athlete endowed with the unquenchable thirst for victory, to the status heretofore reserved for Terry Bradshaw, Bart Starr, Joe Montana and Bob Griese — quarterbacks who have won back-to-back Super Bowls. That's an elite group since Dallas is only the fifth team of 28 to accomplish that feat.

Congratulations to the Cowboys on their victory and we look forward to next season — along with thousands of other Cowboys fans!

Congress should allow prosecutor to do work

Attorney General Janet Reno kept her word, appointing a respected, experienced and strong-willed independent prosecutor to lead a three-pronged investigation of two failed business ventures in Arkansas and the suicide of a presidential aide.

All three situations have strong connections to the Clinton White House. That's not disputed. Special prosecutor Robert Fiske, a Republican, will look for possible illegalities.

Fiske, it is important to note, won the immediate stamp of approval from Senate Minority Leader Robert Dole of Kansas. Dole had pushed hardest for the special prosecutor, for reasons not entirely free of political opportunism. But the appointment has now been made and those in Congress who wanted the appointment made should step back and let Fiske work before they start spending even more of the taxpayers' money on any kind of congressional inquiry. . . .

It is Fiske's task to determine if any of pre-presidential connections and business dealings violated the law. It's also his sad task to determine if the tragic death of a bright, respected lawyer (Vincent Foster) stems from any illegalities involving those connections.

The complexity of the professional and personal dealings in a person's past doesn't necessarily mean something crooked happened. But if it did, those facts need to be brought forward and taken into an appropriate court. Until or if that happens, the Clintons have and deserve the presumption of innocence.

Youths must be punished for committing adult crimes

A study released by the Children's Defense Fund includes the horrifying fact that one teen-ager or child is killed every two hours in the United States by firearms.

We need to support major gun restrictions, such as those imposed by the Brady Bill.

Kids see violence everywhere and, horrifyingly, have become so callous that as long as it's not their lives, they don't care.

It's time to start punishing kids who commit these crimes. If they're old enough to start committing adult crimes, they're old enough to be tried as an adult, and, consequently, old enough to take adult punishment.

And start looking at the parental supervision. Stop letting these people off. Let them know that they are responsible for their children's behavior and punish them accordingly.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, Feb. 1, the 32nd day of 1994. There are 333 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Feb. 1, 1790, the U.S. Supreme Court convened for the first time, at the Royal Exchange Building on Broad Street in New York. However, since only three of the six justices were present, the court recessed until the next day.

On this date:

In 1861, Texas voted to secede from the Union.

In 1893, inventor Thomas A. Edison completed work on the world's first motion picture studio, his Black Maria in West Orange, N.J.

In 1893, the opera "Manon Lescaut," by Giacomo Puccini, premiered in Turin, Italy.

In 1896, the Puccini opera "La Boheme" premiered in Turin.

In 1898, the Travelers Insurance Company of Hartford, Conn., issued the first auto insurance policy.

In 1920, the Royal Canadian Mounted Police came into existence as the Royal Northwest Mounted Police merged with the Dominion Police.

In 1943, one of America's most highly decorated military units of World War II, the 442d Regimental Combat Team, made up almost entirely of Japanese-Americans, was authorized.

In 1946, Norwegian statesman Trygve Lie was chosen to be the first secretary-general of the United Nations.

State of Union message brings yawns

What was the family doing when the State of the Union came on television? Eating, I think. Takeout from Boston Chicken. Television isn't allowed during dinner.

Murchison

And afterward — when the speech finally went away, an hour or so later? I can't remember what was going on at the house. Homework, I imagine. Honest, Officer, I can't remember exactly what I was doing between 9 p.m. and 9:30 p.m., Central Standard Time. What I know is, I wasn't watching TV.

Why bother? Nothing ever comes of those dreary exercises in self-congratulation and vision projection, with Congress members rising on cue to applaud and earnest commentators, silhouetted against the White House, explaining to us The Meaning of It All. Spare me.

This sounds cynical. It is — alas! — the way of things, as you know when you have watched 20 or 30 of these carefully crafted events.

State of the Union messages exist in their own comfortable ambiance, sealed off from uncomfortable realities, like a rich kid in a Park Avenue penthouse. Here, everything good is possible, and none but the most malicious of opponents could cavil at the chief magistrate's statesmanlike exhortations. A week later, no one remembers what was said, oratorically or analytically.

In the case of William J. Clinton, there may be one unfortunate — for him — exception: his pledge to veto any health-care bill that falls short of universal coverage. This was the line patently tailored for the headlines and network sound bites. We are to take away from the State of the Union message, 1994, the clean perception that this president means business.

He probably does. Bill Clinton means lots of things when he says them — this attribute being his weakness inasmuch as the things he says sometimes cancel each other out. He wants, for instance, to strengthen families; then he proposes, among other things, a system of government medicine that is certain, if enacted, to throw family breadwinners out of work and narrow, rather than enlarge, the medical options most Americans enjoy today.

The Clinton health-care plan is overkill; the first couple proposes throwing the baby out with the proverbial bath water. Subsidies — if we must — for the uninsured, coupled with tax credits for medical savings, would do the trick. But in the grandiose vision of Washington D.C.'s pharaohs, that just won't do. We have to have monuments instead of markers — pyramids that proclaim the greatness of the architects.

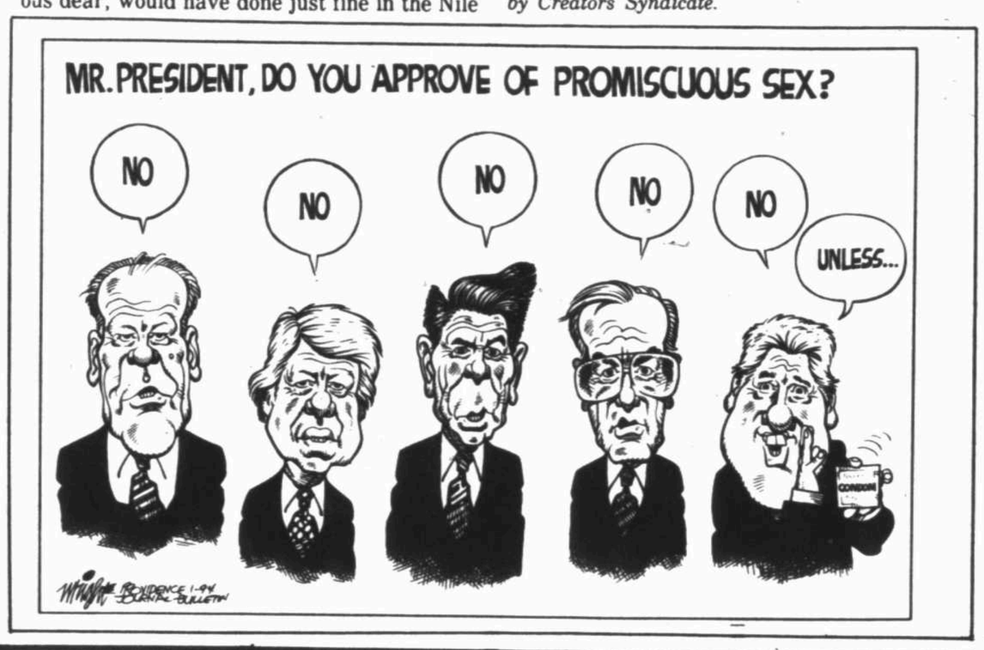

Pharaoh Bill I, the megathinker, the ponderous dear, would have done just fine in the Nile Valley, circa 1200 B.C. He'd have hitched the whole population to his vision. Crack! Get going, you slackers! Pull! Pull! Build! Build!

We'll be pulling all right if the pharaoh talks Congress into federalizing the world's best health care system at a cost of — well.

Will the pharaoh truly veto any bill that fails to meet his royal expectations? With Bill I, who is known for his frequent changes of mind and emphasis, you never know. All we know is, he's out there with a megapromise he may find drastically inconvenient before the year is out. So it goes sometimes with scripted applause lines in State of the Union messages.

CHARLEY REESE

Folks should remember Palestinians' plight

While Middle East negotiations continue, it's a good idea to remember that it is the Palestinians, not the Israelis, who are the aggrieved party. It is the Israelis who occupy Palestinian land and who deny the Palestinians the right to self-government.

Reese

One has to keep this in mind because the Israelis are slicker than synthetic oil in presenting themselves as victims. They conned our poor, malleable president and campaign-money-hungry Congress into paying them to consider — not do — what international law has demanded for decades: vacate territory occupied by military conquest.

Now, with many American space and defense workers in the unemployment lines, President Clinton has opened up U.S. space projects for Israeli industries. These government-subsidized industries will, of course, take more jobs away from Americans. The $77 billion that Congress has shoveled to Israel in recent years, not to mention the $10 billion loan guarantee or the tons of military equipment handed over, has not done either peace or the U.S. deficit much good.

Clinton justifies this as rewarding Israel for "taking risks for peace." This cliche is nothing more than a cover for the bald sellout of American foreign policy.

What risks? Israel is a regional superpower with the Middle East's most powerful and advanced air force, a super-equipped army, missiles and nuclear weapons. Israel could defeat all the Arab nations combined in a matter of weeks, if not days. The Israelis know it and the Arab countries know it.

Furthermore, the Palestinians and the Arab countries have said they want peace, but it's the Israelis who are hemming and hawing.

Moreover, even if Israel completely vacated the West Bank and the Gaza and the Golan Heights — all of which it seized in the 1967 war — it would be in the same geographic position it was in from after the 1948 war to 1967. With this difference, it is infinitely more powerful militarily today than it was in 1967.

But after the 1948 war — when Israel did not control Gaza and did not control the Golan Heights and did not control the West Bank — who invaded whom? Did any Arab country invade Israel? No. Did Israel invade an Arab country? Yes — Egypt in 1956 and Jordan, Egypt and Syria in 1967.

So if you know anything about the region, the complaint that Israel would be vulnerable if it gives up the West Bank rings bitterly hollow. When it didn't have the West Bank, it was the Israelis, not the Arabs, who invaded. It was the Arabs, not the Israelis, who were vulnerable. And it is the Arab world today that is vulnerable, not Israel. Israel has the nuclear capability of killing 20 million to 30 million Arabs in a matter of minutes.

A number of authors, using the Freedom of Information Act, have shown how the Israelis operate.

The Israelis came to President Lyndon Johnson before the 1967 war with a big tale of woe that they desperately needed more weapons because the Arab countries were threatening them.

Johnson asked the CIA for an evaluation. The CIA came back and said Israel, with its existing forces, could defeat Egypt, Syria and Jordan in 10 days. Johnson talked to the Israelis again. "Oh no," they moaned, "we are about to be overrun. We are weak. We are outgunned." So Johnson went back to the CIA and asked them to check their figures.

The CIA came back to LBJ and said, "We did make a mistake. It's our estimate that Israel could defeat the three countries in six days, not 10." The 1967 war is known as the Six-Day War.

Before you worry about Israel's ability to defend itself, I suggest you read these books: "The Samson Option," by Seymour M. Hersh (Random House), "Taking Sides" by Stephen Green (Amana Books) and "Dangerous Liaison" by Andrew and Leslie Cockburn (HarperCollins). You might also consult Jane's authoritative references on the world's armies and air forces.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

U.S., Russian policy makers' shifts tell story

PARIS — Two relatively young and sophisticated men, both setting policy at their nations' foreign ministries, have changed their positions radically in the past few months. Their shifts reveal much about the deterioration of Russian-American relations.

Safire

One is Strobe Talbott, longtime friend and Oxford roommate of Bill Clinton's. He stepped down from the power and prestige of Time magazine columnist to handle President Clinton's dealings with the nations of the former Soviet Union, and was recently named deputy secretary of state.

Although he was widely blamed for being the impetus behind Clinton's unfortunate choice for defense secretary last November, his friends charge that the current finger-pointing is the handiwork of David Gergen, who Talbottites claim was himself the leading advocate of the withdrawn nominee. The Clinton inner circle is not a happy band of brothers.

But the serious, urbane Talbott (to use Time's old, two-adjective style) has learned more than the art of White House infighting.

To his credit, he has exhibited a refreshing willingness to reverse a position when it is shown to be mistaken, which we can hope may lead to a re-examination of his whole accommodationist Weltanschauung.

Little more than a month ago, Talbott reacted to Russian voter dissatisfaction with reformers' "shock therapy" by talking up "less shock, more therapy." That was a terrible blunder; it encouraged Boris Yeltsin to follow his go-slow instincts, undermining reformers and endangering Russian economic recovery.

That American position was modified when Clinton went to Moscow to promise "more reform, more support"; Talbott apparently thought that bought a Yeltsin commitment to continue reform. He was misled; reformers were double-crossed and the power shifted to the old apparatchiks.

Just as the invasion of Afghanistan awakened the accommodationist Jimmy Carter to Kremlin realities, the sellout of the reformers awakened Clinton and Talbott. Last week, the deputy secretary-designate made a 180-degree turn: in tough testimony to Congress, Talbott warned that aid to Russia depended on reform, and that reform had to come first. It was an epiphany.

Meanwhile, half a world away, another high-level diplomat was undergoing his own profound change. Short, boyish Andrei Kozyrev used to be a Certified Good Guy. His April Fool's Day speech last year alerted the world to the danger of militant Russian nationalism. Unafraid to ad-lib in English, he wowed those who interviewed him then with his good sense and good humor and support of a new Russian respect for its neighbors.

But in Moscow last month, a harder edge was evident: he had just won his election in Murmansk, a military area, by talking tough about the "near abroad." When I asked about the withdrawal of 13,000 Russian troops remaining in Latvia, he switched the subject to what he called discrimination against 11,000 retired Russian soldiers and their families living there (many in confiscated homes, infuriating native Latvians).

That was the new, disturbing Kozyrev. Two weeks ago, he seemed to carry that hard line to an extreme, in a speech telling Russian diplomats "we should not withdraw from those regions that have been the sphere of Russian interests for centuries."

As nervous Balts went ballistic, the Talbott State Department spokesman promptly said "we don't accept" that old-style hegemony.

That rebuke caused a Kozyrev flunky to bluster about "mass media . . . deliberate distortion of the minister's pronouncements" and for Kozyrev to lash out at Latvia for "massive and crude violations of human rights" of the well-off colonists — but also to call in the U.S. ambassador to assure him troop withdrawal would take place this year.

Both Russians and Latvians are waiting for Talbott to suggest a compromise of letting a few hundred Russian troops rent the Skrunda early-warning radar facility for four years; when he does, I hope Latvia grabs the deal to get occupying troops out. Nor would it hurt for Latvians to assure long-resident Russian-speakers of ultimate first-class citizenship.

Kozyrev has taught Talbott to begin to toughen up; we can hope that Talbott will now teach Kozyrev to drop his crowd-pleasing, phony-tough attitude.

Children express feelings, try to cope with quake

By Peter Larsen
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — With a thick pencil and a sheet of wide-lined paper, 8-year-old Rita Mendez sat at her desk at Montague Street School last week and wrote a poem about that scary morning when the earthquake hit — and her joy at still being alive.

At Balboa Boulevard Magnet School, 11-year-old Steven Sauk wrote and drew his memories in an earthquake journal. As he worked on the project, his anger at the death of a friend in the quake started to ease.

Six-year-old John Chi was scared to leave his mother and return to Saticoy School last Tuesday. Then he drew a picture of his house during the quake, and the sight of flowerpots flying from windows made him laugh and feel better.

As children returned to Los Angeles schools last week, teachers everywhere handed out pencils and paper, crayons and color markers, and asked their students to express their feelings about the deadly Northridge quake in any way they liked.

"It really was amazing," said Kim Todd, a first- and second-grade teacher at Saticoy School in suburban North Hollywood. "When I picked them up in line on Tuesday, we had a couple crying and some were afraid to leave their mom and dad.

"When they entered the room and saw the tiles that fell down and the bookcase down, they said, 'Oh my,'" Todd said. "But by writing and drawing, they release it and feel better."

Ilene Feinstein, a school psychologist whose rounds include Balboa Boulevard Magnet School in suburban Northridge, said it is important that children use whatever means necessary to express their emotions after a major disaster like the 6.6-magnitude quake.

"It's really helpful if they can work through it and express what they're feeling," Feinstein said.

Last week, as students in schools throughout the district drew pictures and wrote stories, teachers said they began to see their children start to relax. Wrinkled brows turned into happy smiles.

"When they came in on Tuesday morning, their faces were white, they had circles under their eyes," said Jackie Friedman, a third-grade teacher at Montague Street School in suburban Pacoima.

Molly Hanlon, 6, looks for direction from her teachers as her first-grade class at the Little Red School House in Los Angeles practices taking cover after the Jan. 17 earthquake.

"But they're back in an environment where they feel secure and safe, and they can get out their fears and express themselves," Friedman said. "They're coming back to their old selves. The color is coming back to their faces."

(begin ital)"Houses falling
'Jumping houses'
Scared animals
Dogs barking
Cracked streets
People crying
Broken windows
Water pipes broken
Broken freeways
Broken doors
But I am still alive!"(end ital) — Poem by Rita Mendez, 8, a second grader at Montague Street School

Like most of her classmates in Friedman's third-grade class at Montague Street, Rita was terrified when the earth began to rumble and roll in the middle of the night.

"I went to the doorway and then my daddy came to get me and I went outside to my truck and then I went back to sleep," Rita said.

Later, as the time came to prepare for returning to school, Rita wondered what she would find there.

"I was worried if my teacher was OK and if my room was OK and if all my friends were OK," she said.

Her teacher and friends were fine. And after learning a little about why earthquakes happen, and working on her earthquake poem, Rita said she began to feel that things would be all right.

"I felt fine then," she said shyly.

While Rita wrote, others in her class drew detailed pictures of those things they remembered from the beginning of the quake.

Eight-year-old Maria Gascon drew a four-panel picture that showed what happened at her house after the quake.

"The mom tells the dad, 'How is our little boy?'" Maria said, describing her drawing. "The little boy, he wants to tell his parents that he's afraid to die of the earthquake, he says, 'Mom, dad, I'm afraid to die.

"This part shows the cracks in the walls and everything that got messed up in the living room, and this is the kitchen, with all the broken dishes," Maria said.

"I thought it was the end of the world," Maria said, as she copied the rough draft of her picture onto a larger piece of paper.

The work with ballpoint pens and colored markers helped her feel more secure about living on the uncertain earth.

"I wrote something and then I put the people who are in it safe," she said. "And then I think better and I'm not scared anymore."

In her story about the earthquake, 8-year-old Qwyneshea Fields expressed fears of dying in a quake.

"Once upon a time, there were two kids and they were coming from school and there was a big earthquake," wrote Qwyneshea in a story co-authored by classmate Adam Feliciano. "And we ran and we were sad and the earthquake stopped.

"Then a big aftershock come and it was a 6.1," the story continued. "We almost died but we didn't. Then we got help from Mrs. Friedman. Then another one come and then the ground cracked open and I almost fell in!

"It was deep and I fell in. I saw a rope and I climbed back up and I was scared but I was happy and so was my friend. The end. Bye bye."

Qwyneshea said the story made her feel safer when she and Adam were done with it.

"When I start thinking about what happened and write a story, then I forget about it," she explained.

Friedman said that many in the class had started at Montague Street in bilingual classes but now are making a transition into English-only classes. Even with their fledgling language skills, the students had done nicely in describing their quakeful reactions, she said.

"The more they get involved with the earthquake, from a creative aspect and a learning aspect, the more comfortable they'll feel," Friedman said. "I think the children being able to express themselves through multimedia, it's helping them get it all out.

"After we've done that, we'll move on to other lessons," she said.

"The most frightening thing was it wasn't 'The Big One.' If this isn't, what is?" — Journal excerpt by Michael Tsiang, 11, sixth-grader, Balboa Boulevard Magnet School.

At Balboa Boulevard, a magnet school for gifted students, the earthquake struck nearby with devastating fury.

A few blocks north of the school, a Kaiser Permanente medical complex partly collapsed. The nearby Northridge Fashion Center Mall was badly damaged.

The school itself, however, rode out the quake and survived with few visible scars.

Still, teachers there worked most of the week with their students to address feelings of loss or anger or fear.

Eleven-year-old Steven Sauk was touched more closely than many by the deadly potential of the quake: a friend, 14-year-old Jason Lee, died in the collapse of the Northridge Meadows apartments.

In working through his feelings, Steven, a sixth-grader from nearby Chatsworth, both wrote and drew of his experience.

In a neatly drawn, four-panel picture, the fourth block shows the Northridge Meadows. The bright colors belie the seriousness of the drawing.

"This is the most disastrous thing that happened," Steven wrote beneath the section of the picture that showed the Northridge Meadows. "Both buildings used to be three stories high. The first floor just disappeared. One friend of mine got killed because he was sleeping on the first floor.

"He was 14 years old and his name is Jason Lee."

Serious and quiet as he talked about his feelings about the quake, Steven said he had never really thought about he or his friends dying in such a sudden and violent way.

"I didn't think he would get killed," he said. "It just happened, though."

All theories were wrong: Man survived explosion

By Meda Freeman
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — When a quake-ruptured gas line on Balboa Boulevard exploded into a tower of flames, nearly everyone on the street had a theory about what had happened to Jimmy Menzi.

Some onlookers said Menzi, who sparked the inferno when he turned the ignition of his stalled pickup, died in the fiery explosion and his body was trapped in the charred Chevrolet truck.

Another said he saw Menzi float down the street in the torrents of water spewing from broken pipes.

Others said Menzi had been pulled from the fireball that destroyed five houses and was rushed by ambulance to a hospital.

Nobody guessed that Menzi, 30, had walked away from the fiery explosion, unaware of his severe burns as he trekked six miles to check on his mother.

He left the chaotic scene as 70-foot flames spread to both sides of the street, burning down homes and scorching the tops of palm trees.

Despite second-degree burns on 30 percent of his body, Menzi was intent on completing his trip to suburban Canyon Country to learn if his mother and sister survived the 6.6-magnitude quake.

"I just kept walking," Menzi, of suburban Simi Valley, said in an interview from Henry Mayo Newhall Memorial Hospital where he is recuperating.

"I was always 100 percent clear in my mind what I was doing. I had a plan in my mind, and that's what I was doing. I'd get tired and stop for a minute and try to hitchhike."

With the help of a motorist who picked him up on the Sierra Highway, Menzi finally found his mother and sister about three hours after his disastrous attempt to drive down Balboa Boulevard.

"I don't normally pick up hitchhikers. But it was a time of crisis, and you had to know the guy needed help," said Rodney Geist, the 38-year-old Canyon Country resident who gave Menzi a ride. "His hair was all singed on his left side. He definitely had a redness to him, and he looked pretty wild."

Menzi says that when the quake jarred him from his sleep on Jan. 17, his first thought was that he had to make the approximately 15-mile drive from Simi Valley to Canyon Country to check on his mother, sister and 2-year-old nephew.

He tried to call them first, but the quake had knocked out phone service. He loaded up his truck with food, clothes, tools and his two dogs — Bimbo and Shep — and started driving down the Simi Valley Freeway (118).

Menzi was forced off the freeway because a bridge had collapsed. Broken water lines had flooded Balboa Boulevard, and stranded cars blocked the Rinaldi Street intersection. Menzi used his truck to push a few cars out of the street and then continued north on Balboa.

Just south of Lorillard Street, the water became too deep. Menzi tried to back up, but his truck stalled. He started it again. It died a second time. He turned the key again — unaware of a major gas leak in the street.

"I got it running, and after it started, there was a giant explosion, and I can remember a ball of fire rolling on the windshield," Menzi said. "It was extremely hot inside the truck."

The flames quickly began engulfing the cab. Menzi, wearing a flannel shirt and Levi's, threw open the door, fell through the fire and into the flooded street.

"The water was running so fast, I was actually floating on my back," he said. "I didn't try to stop for awhile, but then I was able to grab on to a stop sign or no parking sign."

When he got up, his shirt was missing, and his thighs, back, arms, and face felt burned. But the sensation was more like a sunburn, so he didn't think he was seriously injured.

By then, his truck was surrounded by flames. He figured his dogs were dead. "I heard one of them yap, and that's when it really bothered me," Menzi said.

He found a police officer and told him what had happened. The officer asked if he needed an ambulance, but Menzi said he didn't.

"At that point, I was kind of walking around in a circle," he said. "I didn't know what to do. I was without a vehicle.

L.A. disaster leaves long path to recovery

By Keith Stone
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — When city inspectors slapped a yellow tag on Joni Mann's suburban Sherman Oaks townhouse, she joined the ranks of thousands who had lost their homes to the Northridge Earthquake.

But unlike many in this new class of homeless, the 53-year-old legal secretary didn't move to a tent city or line up for free food. Her friend offered her a place to live until the 12-unit building is rebuilt.

Mann said she measures her plight against those now living in city parks and in cars — and considers herself among the lucky ones.

"I have earthquake insurance, and I have a lot of friends," Mann said. "I do have a job — you cannot really feel sorry for yourself."

Yet like many, Mann finds that the path to recovery is a long, twisting one, and her mood changes direction accordingly.

"One day is good, and one day is bad," she said. "You think you have it together — and then something happens."

Nearly two weeks after the quake, the city revised its inspection, lifting the yellow tag and replacing it with a green one. The building is now deemed safe to occupy, although Mann and her neighbors have already moved their belongings and do not believe it is safe to return.

Suddenly Mann's initial confidence has stretched thin.

She is unsure about the insurance and does not look forward to the process of applying for a government loan to cover what she suspects will be a $15,000 deductible for the building and her belongings.

"I am under a wall of papers, but I just have to take care of things," she said.

Like Mann, not all of the newly homeless are bankrupt, but that has not softened the quake's psychological and financial blow on the San Fernando Valley's middle class.

The Skutches had lived in their suburban Woodland Hills house for 21 years, and within seconds it was reduced to a shell.

They are among nearly 10,000 families that the American Red Cross says had lost their homes when the earth shook.

Like Mann, Ira and Elizabeth Skutch did not move into a tent, and they won't be in line for government loans.

Although city inspectors deemed the house unsafe and it will have to be demolished, the Skutches have not lost all because they had earthquake insurance.

Ira Skutch said the insurance could leave him and his wife with a check for about $140,000, which is less than half of what he suspects the house was worth the day before the quake.

"I try not to think about it," Ira Skutch said, and then laughed. "I'll tell you how I look at it — that was a paper profit."

When they bought the house 21 years ago, they paid only $61,000.

"We will get all the money we put into the house and a few bucks more," said Skutch, 72, who helped usher in television's Golden Age as a director and producer of early shows.

And then there is the tax write-off for a catastrophic loss, he said.

As for the lot, it once was a prime parcel, but now it remains unclear whether it can be sold or whether it will be left vacant, unsuitable for building.

For now, Ira Skutch and Elizabeth Skutch, 71, are living with a daughter and will move into a rented apartment, taking with them memories of their home of 21 years.

"I'm just to old to start rebuilding," Skutch concluded.

For several days after the quake, Andres Huertas' family slept in a tent, but one set up in the backyard of their Woodland Hills house, next to the pool, sauna and a 170-degree view of the San Fernando Valley.

Huertas' wife, Kaya Huertas, said she is afraid the dip in their backyard is a prelude to part of the house sliding over the slope.

Quake sends many to jobless line for 1st time

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Laborers, sales clerks, waiters, nurses. Many who spent their lives in the workaday grind were laid off without warning by an earthquake ruder than a mean-spirited boss.

The novice jobless are making uncertain journeys through a maze of unemployment red tape.

"I've never done this," said Maria Johnson, 66, a supervisor at a quake-ruined department store as she waited in an unemployment line.

"I don't even know what I'm doing," she said. "I have no idea what will happen or how long it will take."

The magnitude-6.6 earthquake that struck Los Angeles on Jan. 17 didn't discriminate. It wrecked stores, warehouses, insurance agencies, dental offices and restaurants. It hit whole shopping centers, strip malls, office buildings and factories.

Some will be closed just a few weeks as the chaos is put right: others will be closed much longer. Some may never reopen.

St. John's Hospital and Health Center, Santa Monica's largest employer with 2,000 workers, sustained such heavy damage to its north wing that the structure will have to be demolished. The south wing also was severely damaged, but hospital officials hope to reopen it by August.

Spokesman Gary Miereanu said administrators were still evaluating what services can be brought back immediately in the east and west wings, and what staffing will be required.

Many St. John's employees will be laid off for months, and some jobs — once thought secure — will be lost forever.

The hospital has encouraged employees to file for unemployment benefits, Miereanu said. Severance packages are being developed and health benefits have been extended through February.

An employee assistance fund was set up for workers whose homes were damaged. Hospital officials are sick about the damage and the loss of loyal employees, he said.

"Our CEO keeps breaking down in tears when she addresses the employees," Miereanu said.

State unemployment offices, especially in the hard-hit San Fernando Valley, had trouble of their own, said Suzanne Schroeder, a spokeswoman for the California Employment Development Department.

Six offices had to close at least for a day.

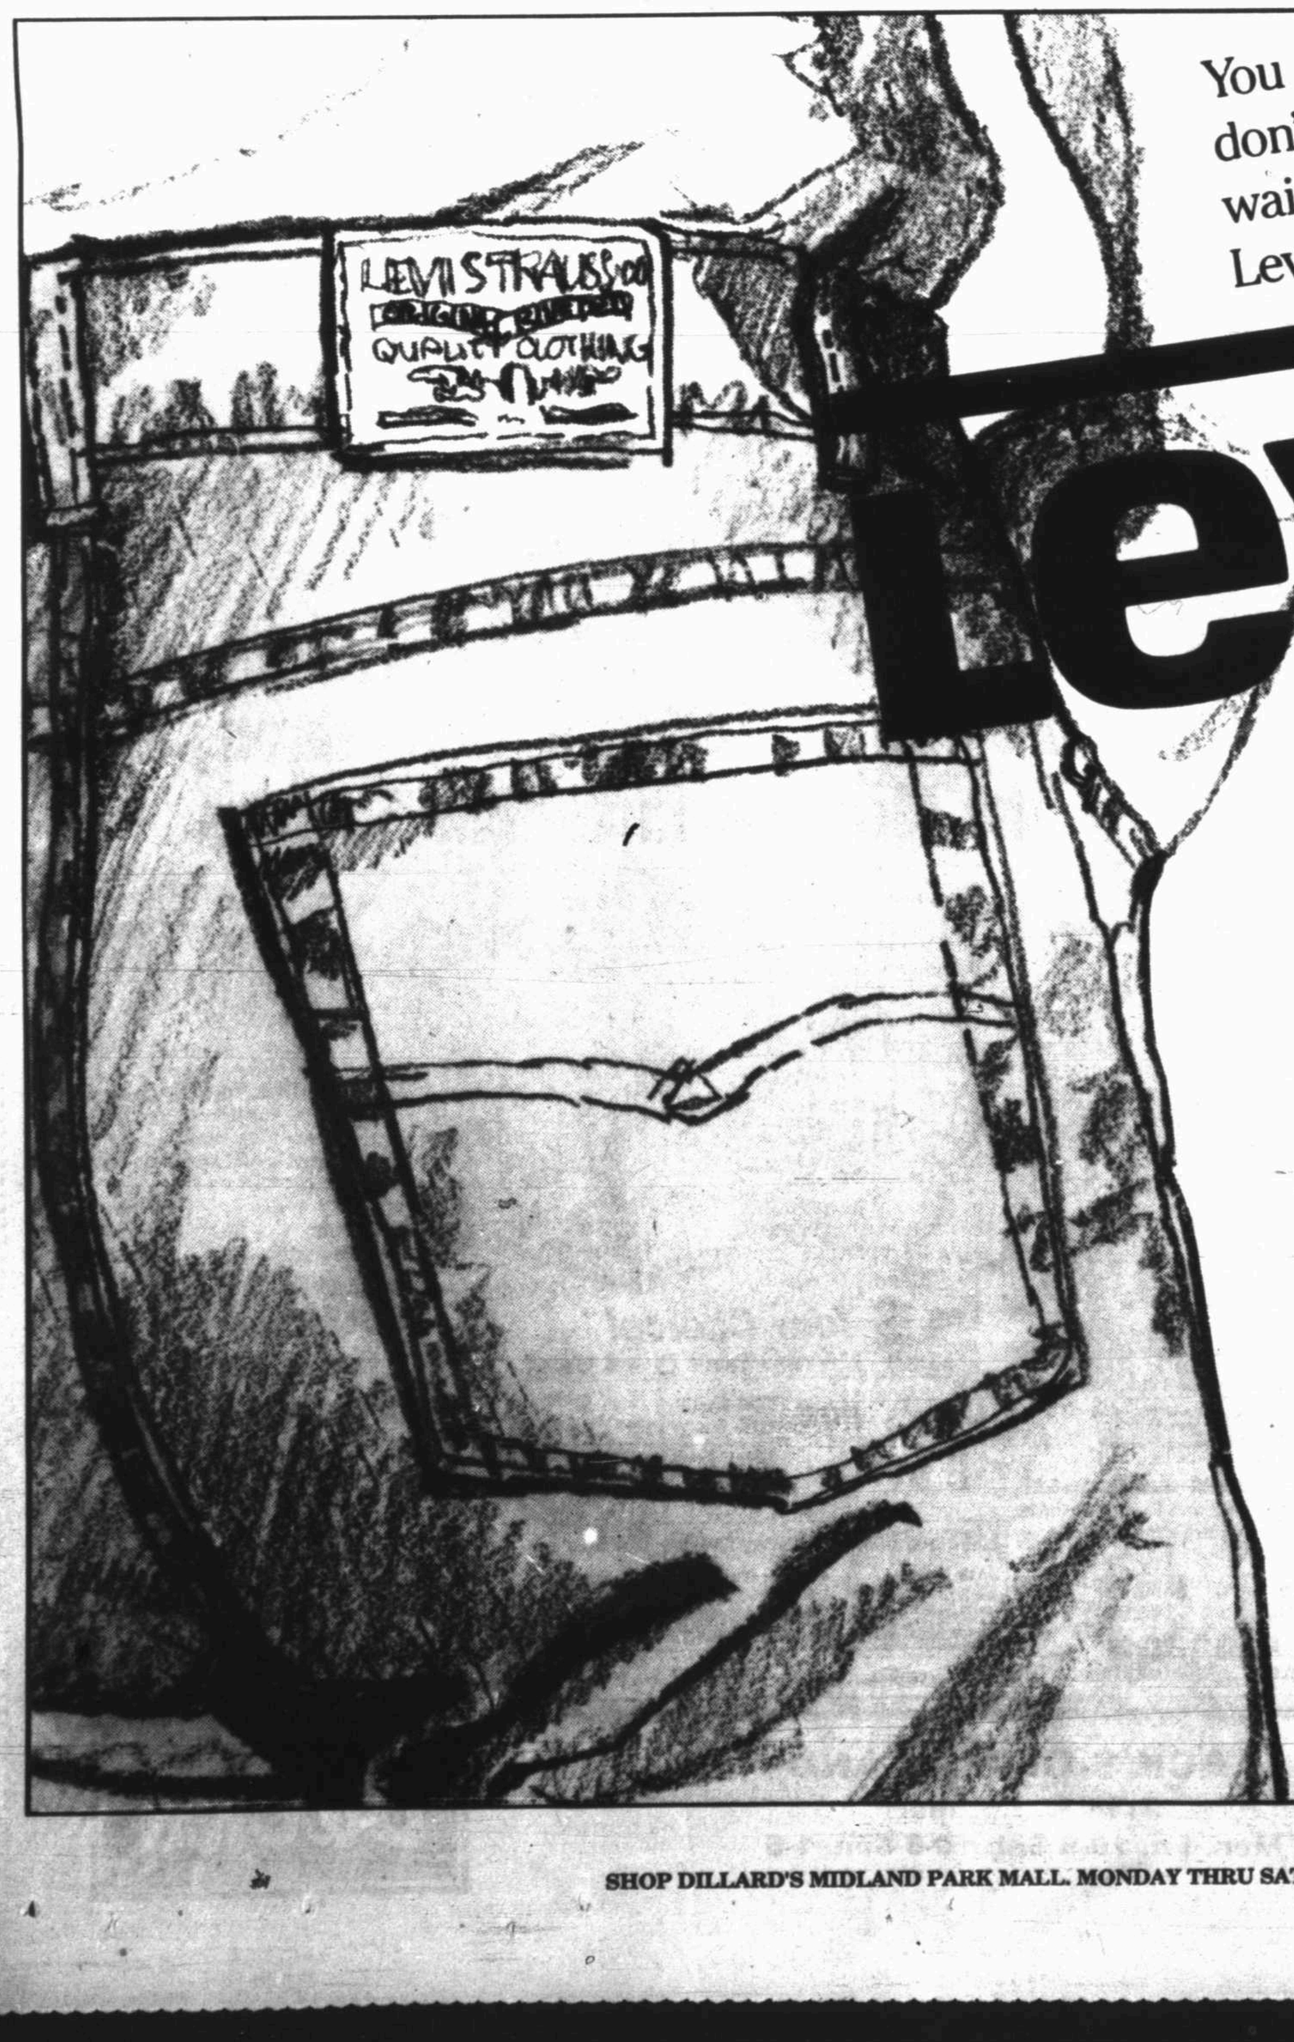

"A lot of the people who work in our offices had damage to their homes ... and we had to call in people from other offices to help out," she said.

Schroeder said 2,750 jobless claims had been filed by earthquake victims in the first four days after the quake hit. She said the claims will likely continue for weeks to come.

Hardest-hit, perhaps, was the retail industry, which employs an estimated 107,000 in the San Fernando Valley, said Jack Kyser, chief economist for the Los Angeles County Economic Development Corp., a private nonprofit business association.

Eight shopping malls were closed. The 265-store Northridge Fashion Center may not open its doors for another year.

There are no estimates on how many workers were left jobless, but two of them are Johnson and her friend, Robbie Mercy.

MISD snow policy

Because of a decision early Monday to delay school for two hours rather than to cancel classes altogether, Midland Independent School District officials had difficulties with some Midland parents who thought the streets were too perilous to be safely traversed. Because of phone calls received, MISD Superintendent Joseph Baressi sent out a statement that any parent who believes his child should stay home could keep them home for an excused absence, according to an MISD spokeswoman. This, however, led to an exodus of secondary students at Midland high schools, who apparently thought the statement freed them from school duties. "It was chaos," the spokeswoman said. The district had workers driving the streets as early as 5 a.m. to determine if school should be delayed, begin on schedule or be closed. The decision to delay school Monday was made when these employees reported that morning business traffic should alleviate much of the danger of icy roads, she said.

Richards on Cowboys

WASHINGTON (AP) — If the world champion Dallas Cowboys ever are in need of coaching advice, they might want to turn to Texas Gov. Ann Richards.

The governor, who was in Atlanta for the Super Bowl, offered some tips of her own as the Texas team trailed the Buffalo Bills 13-6 at halftime.

"I was up there coaching from the stands," Richards told reporters Monday outside the White House. The advice she gave Cowboys quarterback Troy Aikman?

"I just shouted to him. I said, 'Troy if the guy can't catch it, give it to Emmitt, and so he did and it worked," said Richards.

The rest is history.

New report cards to tell more

Plan makes room for positive, negative comments

■ MISD board OKs more descriptive elementary student grading system for next year.

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Parents of Midland elementary school students will receive much more information regarding their child's academic performance next year when those Midland Independent School District schools begin using a new report card format.

The MISD board of trustees voted Thursday to approve the latest presentation from a report card revision committee appointed to develop the new grading procedure, according to Lucinda Windsor, coordinator of language arts for MISD.

The committee's June 1993 presentation was sent back for further revision because board members wanted more information on how the individual components of language arts would be weighed for the overall grade.

Ms. Windsor presented the latest plan to the board, saying the new system will provide for positive or negative comments regarding many areas of the student's performance, rather than the standard checklist of current grading.

The new grading system will include descriptive phrases for several areas of education in grades two through six. "This will better reflect the developmental process," Ms. Windsor said. This developmental process is important to define in young children, because not all children develop at the same rate. Identification of the developmental stage of the child will allow teachers and parents to better tailor teaching to the child's needs, she said.

For example, a numerical grade will still be given for language arts. This category will be broken into a numerical grade for reading and another for language/composition. Unlike current report cards, spelling and handwriting will be included in the language/composition grade next year.

Barring further changes to the grading system, however, report cards next year will include five descriptive phrases for reading and five for language/composition. Teachers will choose these phrases from a list of 28 for reading and 28 for language/composition, Ms. Windsor said.

Work in other courses will be graded along another

For many defendants, going to court can be nerve-wracking. It can be even worse if he or she doesn't speak English. But, that is when Magda Montes steps in to make things run a little smoother.

Ms. Montes, interpreter/translator for the U.S. District Court in the Western District of Texas, helps Spanish-speaking defendants by translating court proceedings to them during their hearings.

She lives in Pecos, but works for U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton in his jurisdiction in both Midland and Pecos.

Ms. Montes has been a certified translator for the U.S. District Courts since 1981. The federal certification tests are given every two years and

Trial begins for man who's accused of molesting minors

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

Testimony began Monday in the indecency with a child trial of Lee Lenderman, who is accused of molesting two children almost two years ago.

Lenderman, 32, was indicted on two counts of sexual contact with a child alleged to have occurred on May 25, 1992.

The victims, who were 8 and 9 at the time, testified Monday.

The girls are children of a couple with whom Lenderman was staying in May 1992.

The nine-woman, three-man jury listened to about two hours of testimony before being sent home at 4:30 p.m. because of icy road conditions expected later in the evening.

The older child, now 11, testified she was in the third grade when the alleged incident occurred. She said Lenderman was staying with her family in their two bedroom apartment and sleeping in the living room.

She said her two sisters slept in the bedroom with her and her parents shared the other bedroom. The girl said, on the night of May 25, 1992, all three girls were sleeping in the same bedroom. She said that night Lenderman came into her bedroom and she awoke with him pulling her shorts off

Civic leader Vogler seeks District 3 City Council seat

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Civic leader and former Airport Advisory Board Chairman Ed A. Vogler — promising to watch tax dollars, improve economic development and serve Midlanders — announced his candidacy Monday to represent District 3 on the Midland City Council.

Vogler

"I want to run for the position because I think I have a lot of experience to offer," said the 78-year-old consulting geologist.

Buddy Sipes, who currently represents District 3, has said he will not seek re-election. Vogler is the first to publicly announce his candidacy for the position.

If elected, Vogler said he will be "extremely cautious" with the expenditure of tax dollars, and work with and for his constituents and all Midlanders.

As for the local economic outlook — a foremost issue facing the City Council — Vogler said, "We must all work to-

ATF sniper describes 2nd firefight at cult compound

By Kelley Shannon
Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — A government sniper told jurors Monday he spied defendant Woodrow Kendrick through his high-powered rifle scope during a second shootout near the Branch Davidian compound last February.

Guthrie

In other key testimony, two gun dealers said they sold assault-style rifles to defendant Paul Fatta, though under defense questioning said they never witnessed anything illegal.

Agent Roger Guthrie of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms testified Kendrick did not obey officers' orders to surrender. Kendrick, 63, was arrested later at a mobile home, where two guns were recovered, according to testimony.

The second firefight occurred in a ravine and brushy area several hours after a failed raid and gun battle at David Koresh's compound Feb. 28, 1993. Four ATF agents were killed and six Davidians are believed to have died in the compound gunfight.

Earlier, Guthrie said, at the Davidian compound, he had fired at a gunman on a water tower and said it was "highly probable" he was killed. He also said he fired at two other people with guns.

Eleven Davidians are charged with murder and murder conspiracy in the slaying of the four agents.

DEATHS

Josie Miller

BIG SPRING — Graveside services for Josie S. Miller, 84, of Big Spring, will be held at 1 p.m. today at Trinity Memorial Park in Big Spring with Dr. Kenneth Patrick, pastor of First Baptist Church of Big Spring, officiating. Nalley-Pickle & Welch Funeral Home is in charge of arrangements.

Mrs. Miller died Sunday in a Big Spring hospital.

She was born May 23, 1909, in Many, La. She married Chester Miller on March 2, 1929, in Many. He preceded her in death on April 1, 1982.

Mrs. Miller was a homemaker and a longtime Big Spring resident.

In addition to her husband, Mrs. Miller was preceded in death by one son, Joe Donald Miller of Midland in 1992.

Survivors include one son, James Dudley of Colorado City; two sisters, Bertha Howard of Louisiana and Audrey Palmer of Houston; two brothers, George Salter, Jr., of Many, La., and James D. Salter of Lake Charles, La.; one grandson, one great-granddaughter and numerous nieces and nephews.

The family requests memorials be directed to a favorite charity.

Barbara Burgess

Services for Barbara Ann Burgess will be at 2 p.m. today at Mount Carmet Baptist Church with the Rev. John Mitchell officiating. Burial will be in Fairview Cemetery under the direction of Bill C. Thomas Funeral Home.

Ms. Burgess died Thursday at her residence.

She was born on Feb. 2, 1946, in Midland, where she lived all her life.

Survivors include a daughter, Vickie McGrew of Midland; two sisters, Mary Houston and Ella M. Schrock, both of Midland; three brothers, John C. Smith, Otis C. Smith and Otis L. Smith, all of Midland; and two grandchildren.

Billy Mitchell

Graveside services for Billy Mitchell, 65, will be at 10 a.m. today at Fairview Cemetery under the direction of Bill C. Thomas Funeral Home.

Ms. Mitchell died Jan. 24 at a local hospital.

Survivors include a daughter, Harriet M. Young of Fort Worth; a brother, A.B. Toney of Sheppard; and two grandchildren.

Leora Trice

Services for Leora Simmons Trice of Midland are set for 1 p.m. Wednesday in the Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with Rev. Bob Porterfield of West Kentucky Street Baptist Church officiating. Burial will follow at Resthaven Cemetery with Ellis Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

Mrs. Trice died Saturday in a local retirement center.

Pallbearers will be her grandsons: Jimmy Trice, Eddie Lynn Trice, Harold Ray Simmons, David Simmons, Gene Simmons, Mike Simmons and Scott Simmons.

Daisy Kubena

Graveside services for Daisy A. Kubena of Midland have been set for 3 p.m. Friday at the Aurora Cemetery near Decatur. Ellis Funeral Home is in charge of arrangements.

Mrs. Kubena died Sunday at a local nursing care center.

ODESSA — Services for Guy Goodyear, 80, of Odessa are set for 2 p.m. Wednesday at the Hubbard-Kelly Funeral Home Chapel with Dr. Ernest Easley officiating. Burial will follow at Sunset Memorial Gardens with Hubbard-Kelly Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

Goodyear died Sunday.

He was born June 2, 1913, in Anson. He married Pauline Wood.

He moved to Odesaa in 1951 from Snyder. He worked for Permian Mud Services & Texas Reamer. He retired in 1984.

He was a member of Odessa's First Baptist Church and the Ector County Sheriff's Posse.

Survivors include his wife; one son, Craig Goodyear of Odessa and two grandchildren.

ABUSE: Victim pretends to be asleep

and pulling her panties down to her knees.

She said she pretended to be asleep because she "was scared." She indicated, in child's language, that Lenderman then performed oral sex on her. She said it lasted for a few minutes and when he stopped, he ducked down beside the bed and she sat up and pulled her panties back up and tried to go to sleep. Then, she said, he left the room. She said although the room was dark she knew it was Lenderman.

Midland County Assistant District Attorney Teresa Clingman asked the girl how that act made her feel. The child responded, "Kind of funny."

She said she didn't tell her mother until after school the next day.

The younger child, now 9, began to sob uncontrollably and a recess had to be taken when the prosecutor asked what Lenderman did to her that night. Later she testified Lenderman came in that same night and pulled her nightgown up and her panties down and rubbed his hand on her vaginal area.

She said he did this for "about a minute" before putting her underwear back on her, covering her up and leaving the room.

Neither child indicated she saw Lenderman approach the other. Both also contradicted each other's testimony by stating the third sister was sleeping with the other.

The girls' mother testified that Lenderman lived with the family for about two months after he and his wife had split up. She said prior to the children telling her of this incident she never suspected any inappropriate behavior on his part with her daughters.

She sobbed lightly as she testified the day after the incidents allegedly occurred the older girl came home from school crying. Lenderman and the girls' cousin walked the girls home from school that day.

The mother said the older girl had gotten in trouble at school, but appeared as if something else was bothering her, too. She said she took the child in a rear bedroom where the girl told her Lenderman had molested her.

The woman said she then called the other child into the bedroom and asked her if Lenderman "had ever touched" her before. The girl said yes he had.

She said she called Lenderman back to the bedroom where he volunteered, "I didn't do it" before she accused him of any actions.

She said she told him to get out of the house that day. She said she reported the incident to police soon after finding out. However, police reports indicated the incident was reported two days after she learned about it.

The woman said she couldn't remember dates, but insisted she told police immediately.

Defense attorney Glen Aaron, who along with Robert Stevens is representing Lenderman, questioned the woman if she asked the girls leading questions regarding the alleged incident as well as if she sought any counseling for the children after the event.

The mother said she did not seek any counseling for the children and just asked them what happened.

Aaron then asked the woman if she knew about her common-law husband's criminal record. He cited convictions of burglary and possession of cocaine and marijuana. The woman cried softly as she indicated she knew nothing of the convictions until this case arose.

She said she has been involved with the man for about three years.

Testimony is expected to continue today and the jury may begin deliberating tonight or Wednesday.

GIFT: Court interpreter studies in Mexico out of 135,000 people who have taken them, only 5,000 have passed, she said.

She said the test entails a written and oral part which includes a simultaneous interpretation, consecutive interpretation, the translation of the judge's instructions to the jury and sight translation of reading English and speaking Spanish.

Ms. Montes said she was working in the courts in El Paso when she met Bunton and he asked her to come to work for him in Pecos. She makes the trek to Midland about once a week.

While she enjoys translating in a courtroom atmosphere, she can get very tired during trials when the talking is non-stop. Ms. Montes said the different aspects of law are also very interesting.

Many of the various types of translating she does can be memorized such as the court instructions during pleas and sentencing.

U.S. District Courtroom Deputy Clerk Kathy Long said the court runs with very few interruptions when Ms. Montes is interpreting.

"She's really good. She does the simultaneous translations so she is usually just a word or a word-and-a-half behind the judge," Ms. Long said. "Then when she is translating back to the judge (from the defendant) she'll allow him to talk for a sentence then translate for the judge."

Ms. Long said she relies on Ms. Montes for smooth translations in the courtroom. She also said Ms. Montes is dependable and will come to court with only an hour or two notice.

Before becoming a court interpreter, Ms. Montes, 50, worked as a conference interpreter for about 25 years.

The translator said she grew up bilingual living in Juarez, Mexico, and El Paso. She said knowing two languages "opens doors" by providing many more opportunities than those available to persons who speak only one language.

"I'm not only bilingual, I'm also bi-cultural. The two cultures are completely different. There is a great difference between Mexican-Americans and Mexicans," she explained.

Ms. Montes is the only non-American citizen in her family. She was born in Juarez and holds resident alien status. She hopes to become an American citizen by 1995.

She majored in languages in college and spent one year at interpreter's school in Mexico City, Mexico.

"It's not really hard for me. God gives us all a little gift," Ms. Montes said with a smile. "If you have the knack, it's pretty easy. You need to like to read to get the vocabulary necessary and you need to study languages."

ney Gerry Morris that Guthrie "could have pulled the trigger and ended Mr. Kendrick's life" when he had his head in view in his scope. Guthrie testified he thought Kendrick was "an extreme threat to our safety," but that he had not determined if Kendrick was armed.

Branch Davidian Michael Schroeder was killed in the second gun battle. His body was left in the brushy area for several days, even after authorities returned to examine it, agents have said.

"He was laying in a culvert with the firearm (pistol) in his hand, finger on the trigger. The firearm was still pointed in the direction of the gunfight," Guthrie said.

Several agents have testified defendant Norman Allison, 25, came out of the wooded area with his hands up and surrendered after Schroeder was killed.

Monday that, armed with a search warrant, federal agents recovered credit card statements, phone bills, utility bills and gun purchase statements but no guns at the "Mag Bag," a garage and office where Kendrick and Allison lived.

"Is it your understanding that with this search warrant you can go and drive through a building?" defense lawyer Mike DeGeurin asked.

Dwight said agents entered the building March 8 after a Bradley armored vehicle was used to "gently push" a wall of the building located near the compound.

ATF agent Marvin Richardson said that when asked if he had a weapon, Allison gestured toward his pocket that contained a pistol. The agent said it appeared the gun had not been fired. He said Allison cooperated with authorities.

Agent Daniel Dwight testified

"If we think it's necessary, yes," said Dwight, who later said officers had believed there might be explosives in the building.

gether in an attempt to achieve economic development."

"We should do everything possible within reason to bring business to Midland," he said. "And encourage people to come forth with ideas they may have to assist us and the Chamber of Commerce in economic development."

Vogler emphasized his commitment to Midland and his community service experience as qualifications to be on the City Council.

"My philosophy is anytime you see a job that needs to be done and you have the time and the knowledge to do that job, volunteer for it. That's why I've been so involved since I arrived in Midland," Vogler said.

"I've served numerous civic organizations in my 44 years in Midland," he added.

Vogler served 14 years, a majority of that time as chairman, on the City of Midland Airport Advisory Board. He said he assisted in bringing the Confederate Air Force to Midland by selling Midland as a volunteer community.

Vogler currently serves on the Chamber of Commerce transportation committee.

In the past, he has served on the boards of the Museum of the Southwest and Keep Midland Beautiful, and on the tax review board of the Midland Central Appraisal District.

He has also served on the board of the Midland Community Theatre, where he and his wife, Anna Marie, are honorary life members.

Vogler was formerly active in the Boy Scouts and Junior Achievement.

Vogler was one of the original organizers of Little League Baseball in Midland and the Free Tape Lending Library. He currently serves on the Visual Aid News Mobile board.

Vogler is a member of Permian Basin Petroleum Association, Society of Independent Earth Scientists and West Texas Geological Society.

He is an ordained elder and deacon with the First Presbyterian Church.

Vogler has been recognized by several organizations. He has received commendation by the City Council, the Texas Senate and the Texas House of Representatives for his community service.

The City Council and U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm recognized Vogler for saving tax dollars by cutting construction costs of the Stacy Dam Reservoir project by spearheading research to show the Concho River snake was not an endangered species.

Vogler has received the O.P. Schnabel Award from Keep Texas Beautiful in 1989, and was honored by National Conservation Committee of the Daughters of the American Revolution last year.

set of 28 descriptive phrases. The phrases are in groups of two, both of which describe a specific part of the child's performance. For example, a teacher would choose either the phrase "turns in work promptly" or "does not turn in work on time" as more descriptive of a particular student's performance.

These descriptive phrases are intended to provide parents with a more detailed picture of how their child is progressing.

At first glance, the meaning may be lost in some of these descriptive phrases, according to MISD board member Garv Willis.

Phrases such as "chunks information" or "uses picture clues" or "reads a variety of genre" may not immediately convey an idea to the parent, but a separate list of explanations of each descriptive phrase will make the remarks clear, Ms. Windsor said.

Because of restraints created by the school district's electronic grade reporting, the descriptive phrases were limited to 29 characters including spaces.

The explanations of these descriptive phrases will be included in campus handbooks, PTA newsletters and other materials to provide parents the information.

Other descriptive phrases such as "Needs more help in spelling" or "handwriting is legible" or "daily work not turned in" are readily understandable by most parents.

Work is continuing on the new grading system, Windsor said. Computer programming work will need to be completed before the grading system can be established next fall.

Authorities believe co-pilot may have sabotaged aircraft

LUBBOCK (AP) — Federal agents who arrested the co-pilot of a disabled cargo plane Monday also were investigating other suspected sabotage of aircraft.

The 29-year-old man was accused of removing a fuel filler cap from an aircraft he was scheduled to co-pilot on Jan. 26. He was caught at Lubbock Aero by an FBI special agent and United Parcel Services representatives, according to the FBI.

A one-count criminal complaint was filed against the suspect Friday in the damaging and disabling of the civil aircraft. The offense carries a maximum sentence of 20 years and a fine of $100,000.

The man was not in custody Monday night, said a Lubbock county jail officer. A call to the Lubbock FBI office's telephone answering machine was not immediately returned.

Officials of United Parcel Service, who leased the aircraft, estimated they have spent more than $50,000 on damaged and disabled planes, including replacement of several hydraulic lines, following suspected sabotage between April 1993 and January.

Holes were found in lines to landing gear retractors, according to the FBI.

The 29-year-old suspect was scheduled to be co-pilot for all the flights but one, according to FBI documents.

State GOP chairman: Richards lied about phone records

By Scott Rothschild
Associated Press

AUSTIN — Texas Republican Party Chairman Fred Meyer said Monday that Gov. Ann Richards and her aides have lied about when her long-distance telephone records were destroyed.

"Gov. Richards and her staff have attempted to lie their way out of trouble, changing stories, falsely placing blame on others, and raising disturbing questions about the governor's credibility," Meyer told a news conference.

But Richards' campaign said the GOP was stepping up its criticism of the governor to coincide with the upcoming trial of U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, a Republican.

"The timing of this attack on Ann Richards is politically motivated," said Chuck McDonald, her campaign spokesman.

"There has been no allegation of any wrongdoing of any kind against Ann Richards, but the Republicans want news articles the week before the trial, making the same allegations against Ann Richards that were made against Sen. Hutchison," he said.

State GOP executive director Karen Hughes denied the charge. "We are responding to Ann Richards' failure to tell the truth to the people of Texas," Ms. Hughes said.

At dispute is why and when Richards began to destroy her itemized long-distance telephone records after each month's bill was paid.

Last week, Richards said her office was following the same procedure as former Gov. Bill Clements by destroying the records monthly.

Clements, a Republican, denied that and has demanded an apology.

Later, Richards' staff said the decision to destroy the records was made in 1992. They changed that to 1993 in later statements.

Over the weekend, Richards' press secretary Bill Cryer said the office likely will start preserving the records.

Meyer said he didn't know if the records were destroyed illegally, and he stopped short of charging that they were destroyed to cover up something.

"Obviously they were concerned about something that was in there, or they wouldn't have done it," he said.

Richards, in Washington, D.C. attending the winter meeting of the National Governors Association, didn't think the controversy was that important.

"It just tells me that this is political season," the governor said.

She added, "We tried to follow the letter of the law, the staff did. And they are going to assemble, I think, everything they possibly can assemble for anybody that wants to see it."

The Travis County district attorney's office has said they will ask the governor's office for an explanation about the destruction of the records.

Meyer noted the decision to destroy the records was reached about the same time that an investigation opened into Mrs. Hutchison's tenure as state treasurer. She was elected to the Senate in a June 5 special election runoff. Her Treasury office was raided June 10 by the district attorney's office.

Super Bowl ticket scandal grows thicker

FORT WORTH (AP) — Six hundred football fans were left without Super Bowl tickets, but those involved in cinching the deal for seats were pointing fingers at each other Monday about who is to blame.

The Mexican football fans staged a disturbance at a suburban Atlanta hotel when they found they weren't getting seats to Sunday's big game after paying a total of $500,000 in a package deal. The enthusiasts watched the game on television and were to fly home today.

Police were called to the hotel where the fans were staying Saturday night, but there was no violence, officers said.

Attorney Bill Magnussen, who represents Capital Ticket Agency of Bedford, said a Mexican travel agency missed the deadline to send money for all the tickets and afterward prices began soaring.

"It wasn't a scam," Magnussen said, explaining that others who followed the terms of their contracts with Capital Ticket Agency received tickets.

"This wasn't his first rodeo," Magnussen said.

Mexico City travel agent Victor Ortiz, the owner of Viaje Filor SA, said he followed the terms of the agreement and has the paperwork to prove it.

"He can tell a lot of stories," Ortiz said. "My lawyer here in Atlanta has all the receipts."

The visitors paid for a package tour including airline tickets from Mexico City, rooms in area hotels and the game tickets. Twenty hours before the game, Ortiz told the crowd they had apparently been cheated, police said.

Police said some Mexican fans lost $5,000 or $10,000, while apparently the fans' airline tickets and at least some of the hotel rooms were covered.

"We've got the case under investigation," Assistant Police Chief Jack Bencale of the College Park, Ga., said Monday.

Police have called Ortiz "legit" and said he "just got caught in this."

'Alternative' media descend on Branch Davidian trial

By Diana R. Fuentes
N.Y. Times News Service

SAN ANTIONIO — As the murder-conspiracy case of 11 Branch Davidians stretches into its fourth week, much of the mainstream news media have left the courtroom.

But that doesn't necessarily mean there are fewer reporters here. The seats vacated by correspondents for national television networks and other major news outlets have been snatched up by representatives of the alternative media.

James Pate, who covered the U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms for Soldier of Fortune magazine in the year preceding the agency's failed Feb. 28 raid on the Branch Davidian compound, was in Waco, Texas, the morning after the raid.

Pate has covered the story since then, and has been covering the Davidians' trial since it began the week of Jan. 10.

Richard Sokolow writes for the National Alliance weekly newspaper, which is connected to the New Alliance Party, an independent political entity that birthed Lyndon LaRouche. It bills itself as "pro-democracy."

"I don't think (the trial) is getting proper coverage, not just in quantity (of stories) but in how it's covered," said Sokolow. "One of our main concerns is the government's characterization of the Branch Davidians as a cult.

"That's letting the government determine what is and what is not a legitimate religion. It's a violation of the separation of church and state.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Business will demand your full attention in the coming months. Do not let things slide. By meeting challenges head-on, you will let others know who is in charge. Romance and travel prove especially rewarding in the summer. Be careful not to take loved one for granted. Showing your affection and appreciation in tangible ways will make the magic last! A vacation will make next December particularly merry.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Laura Dern ("Rambling Rose"), poet Langston Hughes, actor Sherman Hemsley ("Amen" and "The Jeffersons"), Lisa Marie Presley.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Work is busier than ever, even if the profits are smaller. Put a secret plan into operation. A money-saving idea could win you a bonus or new perks. Be more realistic about romance.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Being practical about your personal relationships is difficult. Give yourself more time to decide exactly what you want. You could decide to buy a knockout outfit while shopping with a friend.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Trust your intuition — something major is in the works. Emotions are building to a fever pitch. Keep a low profile around someone who tends to fly off the handle. Be selective in romance.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Move with the times and you will make an excellent impression on someone prominent in business circles. A newcomer expresses an interest in you. Your mate is still your most loyal ally.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): As you tackle new projects, surround yourself with trustworthy associates. Careful research pays off when making a presentation. Return favors as quickly as possible. Your love life accelerates. Simplify your financial investments.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A good day to shop for office supplies or other useful items. An exchange of ideas will benefit shared financial interests. Try something new but practical.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Clamp the lid on extravagance! Performing more services for yourself will save you money. Put your best foot forward when dealing with older relatives. Be diplomatic but tell it like it is!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Someone may want to confide in you. Be sympathetic but avoid getting caught in the middle of a dispute. Your service to the community receives new attention.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Recent worries evaporate into thin air. Someone involved in a business deal could be unpredictable. The news you get from those at a distance is startling. A recovery is possible. Move swiftly.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): News of a former lover could put you in a pensive mood. Focus on new beginnings. Become an ambassador of goodwill for your community or church. Reach out to someone who is lonely.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Do not worry about going unnoticed. Even when you are not feeling your best, you make an excellent impression. Your quiet charm draws admirers like a magnet. Wear something special this evening.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Tying up loose ends will put your mind at ease. An unexpected check or windfall arrives in the nick of time! Pay bills promptly to protect your credit rating. Romance could be puzzling.

The term "dummy reversal" simply means you take your ruffs in the long-trump hand, using the holding with the shorter trumps to draw the opponents' fangs. With the proliferation of transfer bids, declarer is often the hand with fewer trumps.

Here's an example of what could be termed a "declarer reversal."

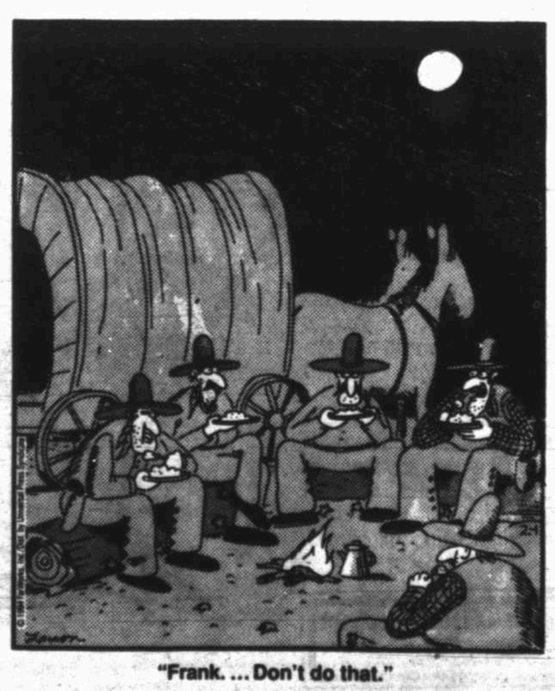

After first making a transfer bid, North described a spade-diamond two-suiter, possibly with slam interest. That improved the South hand. After the jump to game, a cue-bidding sequence convinced North there would be good play for all the tricks.

West led a trump and declarer could count 12 tricks. There were two possible lines to develop a 13th if spades were 3-2. One was to draw two rounds of trumps, then play off three top diamonds. If the diamonds broke 3-3, all was well; or if the defender with the third trump also held diamond length, declarer would be able to ruff a diamond for the fulfilling trick. The other is to use the long-trump hand, in this case dummy, to ruff hearts while declarer's spades serve to draw the enemy's trumps. That depends only on a 3-2 trump split and East not being able to overruff the third round of hearts.

Obviously, the latter plan is considerably better. So win the ace of trumps, cash the ace of hearts and ruff a heart. Come to hand with a trump to make sure they divide 3-2 and ruff another heart. The ace of diamonds and queen of clubs are the entries to ruff a third heart with the jack of spades and draw the outstanding trump, on which one of dummy's low diamonds is discarded. With nine tricks in the bank, dummy's king-queen of diamonds and ace-king of clubs take the last four.

Lawyer for alleged shoe stealer attacks Marla Trump's character

NEW YORK — The lawyer defending a man accused of stealing shoes from Marla Trump attacked her character Monday, asking if she had been a kept woman or submitted a phony insurance claim.

Lawyer asks if Trump had been a kept woman.

Anthony Morosco also used his innuendo-laced cross-examination to suggest that the accusations against Chuck Jones were meant to cover embarrassment about nude photos he said her then-boyfriend Donald Trump had taken of her.

Jones, 52, of Greenwich, Conn., was Mrs. Trump's publicist. He is accused of stealing dozens of pairs of shoes, underwear, photographs and other personal items from her apartment.

He faces up to 15 years in prison if convicted of burglary, criminal possession of stolen property and criminal possession of weapons.

Jones has claimed that Mrs. Trump got a phony sales slip from a friend for about $1,000 worth of items and filed a fake insurance claim. When asked about that by Morosco, Mrs. Trump said she filed a legitimate claim that was never paid.

Morosco also asked Mrs. Trump if she had earned $3,000 for all of 1989 and whether Donald Trump was supporting her.

"I wasn't totally supported by Mr. Trump," she said.

Morosco claims Mrs. Trump allowed the charges against Jones to proceed because she thought he would keep naked pictures Donald Trump took of her before they were married. When reporting the thefts to police, Mrs. Trump said some "family photographs" were missing.

"Would you include under the subject of 'family photographs,' nude photographs of you taken by your married lover?" Morosco asked.

"Sir, he wasn't married at that time," Mrs. Trump replied.

Trump, who was divorced from his previous wife, Ivana, in 1992, was married to Marla Trump in December.

TOKYO — When Empress Michiko was expecting her first child in 1959, Japan's traditionally tight-lipped palace staff said she was merely suffering a cold. Now, Crown Princess Masako has the same official ailment.

Rumors began after the palace said two weeks ago the princess would miss some official duties because of a cold and fever. The palace denies it's anything more than that.

"It really is just a cold," a palace official who spoke on condition of anonymity said Monday. "She's getting better."

That hasn't stopped Japan's tabloid press from publishing newspapers with such headlines as "Princess Masako Pregnant," and "Princess Masako, the Road to Motherhood."

LAS VEGAS — Siegfried & Roy are marking their fourth anniversary at the Mirage this week, proving magic is a moneymaker on the Las Vegas Strip.

The illusionist team has grossed $157 million at the Mirage. Casino head Steve Wynn says that's a record.

"It's probably one of the best investments we've ever made," Wynn said.

Wynn paid $25 million for a custom theater for the entertainers and producer Kenneth Feld invested more than $30 million to stage the spectacle.

When Siegfried & Roy came to Las Vegas a quarter-century ago they were told magic acts would never succeed in the gambling mecca.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — Tom Cruise and Meg Ryan better clear some space on the mantle. They were named man and woman of the year by Harvard University's Hasty Pudding Theatricals.

The awards are presented annually by the theater group, whose officers dress in drag for the occasion. They go to performers who've made "a lasting and impressive contribution to the world of entertainment."

Ryan, who will receive a traditional brass pudding pot, is to be saluted with a parade through Harvard Square on Feb. 15.

The star of "Sleepless in Seattle" joins such previous winners as Whoopi Goldberg, Jodie Foster, Lucille Ball, Cher, Beverly Sills and Elizabeth Taylor.

Cruise, star of "The Firm," will be honored Feb. 22 when the group presents its 146th annual satirical play.

He joins a list that includes Chevy Chase, Clint Eastwood, Robin Williams, Sylvester Stallone, Sean Connery, James Cagney, Paul Newman and Bob Hope.

TUCSON, Ariz. — Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist traded the Supreme Court for the classroom Monday to teach a course at the University of Arizona on the high court's past.

The two-week course, "The Supreme Court in the History of the United States," is open only to second- and third-year students in the university's College of Law.

The course is being conducted while the Supreme Court is in recess.

AT WIT'S END

Some children get 'camera gene' at birth

By Erma Bombeck

Between the 6 o'clock news and David Letterman, nearly everyone has seen Andrew Giuliani's performance at his father's swearing-in ceremony as mayor of New York. As Rudolph Giuliani took his oath, his 7-year-old son waved, giggled, poured water down his dad's pants leg and read a few lines of the oath along with his father.

Bombeck

Let those of you who have never given birth to a child who came from the womb waving and making faces cast the first stone.

Whoever is responsible for assigning children to couples mercifully gives only one hyperactive kid to a family. He's the one who ruins every family photo because he has his mouth open and his tongue hanging out. He's the child who gets more attention at weddings than the bride and groom. His shirttail is always out, his hair uncombed, his body in motion. He is a walking stain.

I know as sure as I'm sitting here that Andrew never started out in the front row next to his father at the lectern. My guess is that he was being guarded over by someone large, with the instructions, "Sit on him if he moves!"

Every time we watch old home movies showing our family, a shadowy UFO will dart across the screen and a guest will utter, "What in heaven's name was that!"

"That" is our older son, who felt compelled to sail airborne in front of the camera at every family outing. We could be recording a sunset over Lake Michigan and suddenly a face with a mouthful of teeth covers the entire lens.

These children are born with a camera gene. Whenever one is within a radius of 15 miles, the gene kicks in. They start to wave both hands when there is nothing and no one to wave at. They pull down their eyes until the whites show and dangle their tongues on their chins. They show their backs and wiggle their behinds. When that becomes tiresome, they begin to jump up and down as though there are springs in their arches.

We have footage of an Easter egg hunt. The other two siblings are walking around the grass, timidly peeking under rocks and smiling when they find a treasure. The hyper son appears like a rocket, takes an egg out of his brother's basket and cracks it against his head. Then he turns his back to the camera, bends over, puts his head between his legs and eats the egg.

That's one of the reasons why his father never ran for public office.

DEAR ABBY

Paper plates irritate mom on Thanksgiving

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I know exactly how "Holiday Visitor" felt, and I disagree with your answer. ("Holiday Visitor" and her husband went to visit their daughter for Thanksgiving, and the mother was terribly upset to find the table set with paper plates and paper napkins, knowing that her daughter had plenty of fine china and lovely silverware.)

Van Buren

She said she thought it was "tacky" — and you said, "... the epitome of tackiness is criticizing the hostess who fed you."

Abby, my husband and I went to our married son's home for Thanksgiving dinner, and I nearly had a heart attack when I saw the table set with paper plates, no tablecloth, and the food served in plastic bowls!

They are quite well-to-do, have a nice set of china, an electric dishwasher, and a 17-year-old daughter to help.

I say, if people want to eat from paper plates, they should have a picnic. — BEEN THERE

DEAR BEEN THERE: Here's a letter from another "mom" with a different view of using paper plates for a holiday dinner:

DEAR ABBY: In response to the mother who was aghast that her daughter served Thanksgiving dinner on paper plates:

Oh, that we had nothing more serious to worry about than the kind of plates we ate from!

Our family of 14 married children and grandchildren were home with us for nine days at Christmas. Not only were paper plates used, we had plastic forks, spoons and serving bowls.

After everyone had finished eating, my son-in-law went around the table with a large plastic trash bag, and everyone tossed the paper plates and plastic "silverware" in the trash bag.

I am sure that everyone there wondered if that would be their last Christmas dinner with the entire family.

I have had two mastectomies in the last six months, and only God knows what's next. People should pay attention to the things that are really important in life, and count their blessings. — MOM IN MURRAYSVILLE, PA.

DEAR MOM: Thanks for a gentle reminder. We can all use it from time to time.

DEAR ABBY: Maybe you can settle this between me and my fiance. He proposed to me, and I accepted. Then he gave me the same engagement ring he had given to another girl. She had returned it after their engagement was broken two years ago. I didn't know him then, and I would not have known it was a secondhand ring if he hadn't told me.

Abby, I feel funny wearing that ring, knowing its history. His whole family knows, and I'm too embarrassed to tell anyone.

It's a beautiful one-carat diamond in a platinum setting. What is your advice? I really love him, but this bothers me. — FEELING HURT IN BRIDGEPORT, CONN.

DEAR FEELING HURT: Tell your fiance exactly what you have told me. Then, suggest that he take the ring to the jeweler from whom he bought it and ask that the diamond be used in an entirely different setting.

To receive a collection of Abby's most memorable — and most frequently requested — poems and essays, send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby's "Keepers," P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054-0447. (Postage is included.)

'Star Trek' becomes 1 man's major Enterprise

By Eve Nagler
N.Y. Times News Service

ELLINGTON, Conn. — Jeffrey H. Mills remembers precisely when he first became acquainted with Captain Kirk, Mr. Spock and Dr. McCoy. He was a student at Plant Junior High School in West Hartford in 1973, and began watching "Star Trek" reruns with a friend every day after school.

"I fell in love with the show," Mills recalled. "James Kirk was my hero."

It has been a love affair that has never ended, and in fact, has grown as offshoots of the original television series have been broadcast. Now 32, Mills is a self-employed graphic designer and marketing communication consultant, working out of a small office in his home here. He is also a prolific teacher, writer and lecturer on "Star Trek" adventures.

Mills is a well-rounded Trekker, the preferred term for a "Star Trek" fan. (The term Trekkie has groupie connotations, Mills said). He talks about "Star Trek" as "cultural anthropology" with episodes that have "mythological overtones" for a modern-day America.

He teaches a course called The Cultural Relevance of "Star Trek" at several adult education programs in central Connecticut. In the course, he encourages students to see deeper meanings in "Star Trek" plots.

But Mills also enjoys the entertainment value of the original "Star Trek" series, as well as "Star Trek: The Next Generation" and "Star Trek: Deep Space Nine."

He publishes a chatty 12-page monthly newsletter that he writes almost entirely by himself. It contains articles about upcoming episodes, including news of another "Star Trek" series (scheduled for January 1995) and a new movie (to be released next Christmas), featuring "The Next Generation" stars.

The newsletter also has a gossip column, called "The Rumor Mills," where Mills reports tidbits like the fact that Brent Spiner (Lt. Commander Data) hates cats although he has to play opposite his character's pet; and how Jonathan Frakes (Commander Riker) helped Gates McFadden (Dr. Beverly Crusher) at a party honoring the late "Star Trek" creator Gene Roddenberry by sewing up Ms. McFadden's dress in a hotel bathroom.

In the same spirit of fun, Mills also recently began teaching a second course called "Star Trek: Spoofs and Bloopers, where he shows video outtakes from the shows as well as "Star Trek" skits performed on television programs like "Saturday Night Live" and "In Living Color."

Mills stepped over the line from a weekend Trekker to a serious aficionado when he was studying at Oberlin College in Ohio in the mid-1980s. That is when he first designed and taught his Cultural Relevance course about "Star Trek" at Oberlin's Experimental College, a program run by students.

After graduation, he returned home and taught the course for the first time in Connecticut at The Learning Exchange in Hartford in the spring of 1987.

He has since taught courses about "Star Trek" at the credit-free program at Manchester Community Technical College, the Life Learn Program in West Hartford and continuing education classes in Farmington and Vernon. In the spring he will also teach at the Live and Learn program in Windsor.

Each class Mills teaches revolves around an issue, such as the "prime directive," the "Star Trek" credo that prevents the television space crews from trying to shape new worlds in their own image.

Mills begins a class by lecturing on the topic, and then shows clips from the programs from his vast "Star Trek" video library that touch on the theme. Afterward, he invites discussion.

"Without fail, the discussion leads into side conversations and tangents," Mills said. "The cultural relevance of 'Star Trek' becomes a springboard to discuss how issues are played out in our world. For example, does the United States have a prime directive today? Should it? Under what circumstances does that make sense?"

Over the years, Mills has faced the skepticism of some who find the notion of relevance in a television series to be ridiculous.

"I've worked alongside people who hate 'Star Trek,'" Mills said. "Some people approach any kind of science fiction with a totally closed mind. The question is, should we teach 'Star Trek' alongside Shakespeare? I answer there is room in the curriculum for both. What we do in the classroom is talk about social issues affecting peoples' lives, which is the goal of just about all teachers."

Mills expanded the scope of his course after October 1987, when the "Next Generation" series was introduced. "There was a group of fans who withered away when the new series came out," Mills said. "They insisted that 'Star Trek' is Kirk, Spock and McCoy and that's it. But I was very excited. After all those years of watching reruns, I couldn't wait to see fresh 'Star Trek' every week."

The "Star Trek" bandwagon kept rolling in the fall of 1992, with the beginning of the "Deep Space Nine" series. Mills said choosing his favorite "Star Trek" series is "kind of like asking me which one of my children do I like better. How could I pick one over the other? I will say, though, that 'Deep Space Nine' is growing on me.

"It was advertised as a darker, stormier 'Star Trek' and it is. There is more dissent among the main characters, which has been a major criticism of 'The Next Generation.' However, I don't think anything matches the classic 'Star Trek's' raw chemistry between the triad of Kirk, Spock and McCoy."

There has been a bit of chemistry in Mills's classes, too. After the five-week course he taught in Hartford in 1987 was over, the students decided they were having too much fun to let it end.

The class, including Mills, began meeting in one another's homes to continue their "Star Trek" discussions. About 15 to 35 people still meet once a month, now six and a half years later. They call themselves the Central Connecticut "Star Trek" Support Group.

"We are not a chapter of anything," Mills said. "We're not a fan club, like Starfleet International, which is a more formal organization that collects dues. We're just a group of people that need to get together every 30 days to talk Trek."

Mills named his newsletter, which he began in the summer of 1990, the CCSTSG Enterprises. The initials stand for the name of his "Star Trek" group.

Despite the provincial name, Mills said his small subscriber base of almost 200 comes from across the United States and five countries. Guests columnists of the newsletter include Dr. Letitia Naigles of Yale University, who wrote in the September 1993 issue about how she uses "Star Trek" episodes to draw analogies in her psychology classes.

As he sat in his home office, surrounded by "Star Trek" books, comics, posters and newsletters, Mills reflected on his life as a Trekker.

"I certainly didn't expect to see myself doing this 20 years ago, when I first started watching the show. Nobody in my family is a 'Star Trek' fan. Even my wife is only a weekend Trekker. When people ask me why I married her, I tell them, 'At the time, it seemed the logical thing to do,'" Mills said, echoing some Vulcan wisdom, courtesy of Mr. Spock's father, Sarek.

"'Star Trek' provides wonderful intellectual stimulation and entertainment for me," he added. "It has also provided me with a terrific network of friends."

Book cites other jobs for those with law degrees

By James Barron
N.Y. Times News Service

A lawyer by any other name would still be a lawyer, right? Even if he took a job as a self-determination specialist, energy efficiency officer or intellectual resources director?

Of course, says Linda P. Sutherland, an organizer of a seminar on "400-plus things you can do with a law degree other than practice law."

For $145, Ms. Sutherland promises not to "waste your time reviewing the reasons lawyers are disgruntled and might want to move away from traditional practice," but to focus on "growth careers."

The 400-plus jobs do not make for light reading. But some sound as if they were coined by people who would call an elevator a vertical access device, or a crushing financial loss a significant writedown.

"These job titles are something else," Ms. Sutherland said. "We see them coming in by the bagful" in employment listings at Federal Reports Inc., a Washington-based publishing company where Ms. Sutherland is an editor. The company publishes materials for lawyers, including a monthly job bulletin.

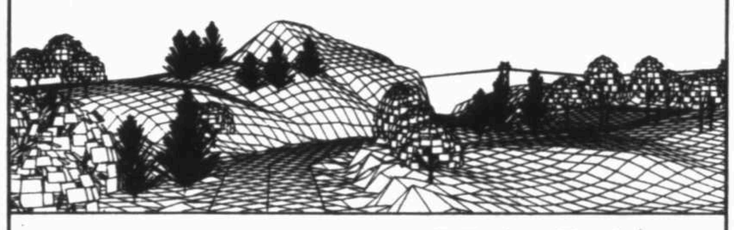

There is a mineral appeals analyst, which sounds like the perfect job for the Holly Golightly character in "Breakfast at Tiffany's"; an intellectual resources director, which could have been a principal in NBC's tug-of-war over who owned David Letterman's jokes, and a vessel traffic specialist, who may or may not be the captain of his own destiny.

A workbook that will be distributed at the seminar provides details on some of the 400 jobs, along with potential salaries, prerequisites and, most important of all, guidance on where to send a resume. The seminar is being cosponsored by Legal Times, a Washington-area weekly.

The workbook has more details on professions like hearing officer ("presides over administrative hearings, reviews records and writes findings of fact") and contract specialist ("drafts requests for proposals," "develops positions on contract claims and protests").

Alternative legal careers appeal to a range of wannabe former lawyers, from law school graduates who cannot find employment with a law firm to associates who do not make partner.

Nike to rescue

PORTLAND, Ore. — Nike Inc. contributed $25,000 on Monday to help national figure skating champion Tonya Harding defend her place on the U.S. Olympic Team.

Chief Executive Officer Philip Knight said he feared Harding, who does not have a contract with Nike, would be forced off the team before the criminal justice system has rendered judgment on whether she had a role in the attack on rival skater Nancy Kerrigan.

"There's a real drive to declare her guilty before she's had a trial," Knight told ESPN.

Chaps pluck Howard

■ Midland College moves into a second place WJCAC tie with the Howard College Hawks by virtue of a 97-76 runaway.

By Bill Petitt
Staff Writer

Midland College continued its climb back into the thick of the Western Junior College Athletic Conference race Monday at Chaparral Center by whipping the Howard College Hawks, 97-76.

With the win, Midland College moves into a second place tie with Howard at 4-2 in the league, two games behind front-running Odessa College. The Chaps, 21-2 overall, will meet the Wranglers next Monday at the OC Sports Center.

"I thought from top to bottom it was the best performance of the year," said Chap coach Steve Green. "We rebounded well and had excellent shot selection. I can look at this game and find a lot of positives. The game was a lot closer than the score indicated. I thought all along that it played like and eight-point game. They fought back and we had to work for everything.

"I think our fullcourt pressure was the difference in the game. Our pressure caused them to make a lot of mistakes."

It also forced the league's leading scorer, Howard guard Kovossy Franklin, to play a fullcourt game, which took away from his usual high-scoring antics. Franklin, who averaged 21.8 points per game prior to Monday, was held to nine points on 3-of-7 shooting from the field and committed six turnovers.

"We put Kevin Rice on him and Kevin doesn't like people scoring a lot on him," said Green.

Midland, ranked seventh in the latest national poll, bolted out to a 9-2 lead in the first five minutes of the game and increased that to an 18-4 bulge with 12:46 to play in the first half after an Earl Tyson free throw. Rice scored six points during the early run to lead MC.

Howard mounted a comeback, trimming the Chap lead to five, 33-28, after a Joe Smith follow shot with 6:06 left. But Midland held off the Hawks and led 46-38 at half.

Howard forward Charles Poe, who led the Hawks with 23 points and 11 rebounds, opened the second half with a basket off a steal to cut the lead to six, 46-40, with 19:30 to play, but Howard could never draw closer as MC big men John Brown and Steve Walston took over the game with physical inside play.

"J.B. and Steve were head and shoulders better than their inside people," Green said. "They were more active underneath the basket."

Brown and Walston combined for 25 points and nine rebounds in the second half. Midland outrebounded Howard 42-26 for the game as Walston, Brown and Kirk Ford led with seven boards apiece.

"We just focused on our half court game in the second half," said Walston, who scored 15 points in the second half after going without a point in the opening half. "Coach (Green) told the

Jerry vows to spend bucks

■ Dallas owner Jerry Jones says he will open his pockets for a third Super Bowl run.

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

ATLANTA — Dallas owner Jerry Jones vows he'll dig deep into his billfold to keep the Cowboys together for a run at a record third consecutive Super Bowl victory.

"I want to keep this good thing going," Jones said after the Cowboys defeated Buffalo 30-13 in Sunday's Super Bowl. "I think we'll be able to do it. The salary cap is tough but we've put ourselves in good position for it."

Some of the more important Cowboys eligible to become free agents on Feb. 13 include middle linebacker Kenny Norton, fullback Daryl Johnston, center Mark Stepnoski, offensive linemen Nate Newton, Kevin Gogan and John Gesek, wide receiver Alvin Harper, defensive tackle Tony Casillas, quarterback Bernie Kosar and placekicker Eddie Murray.

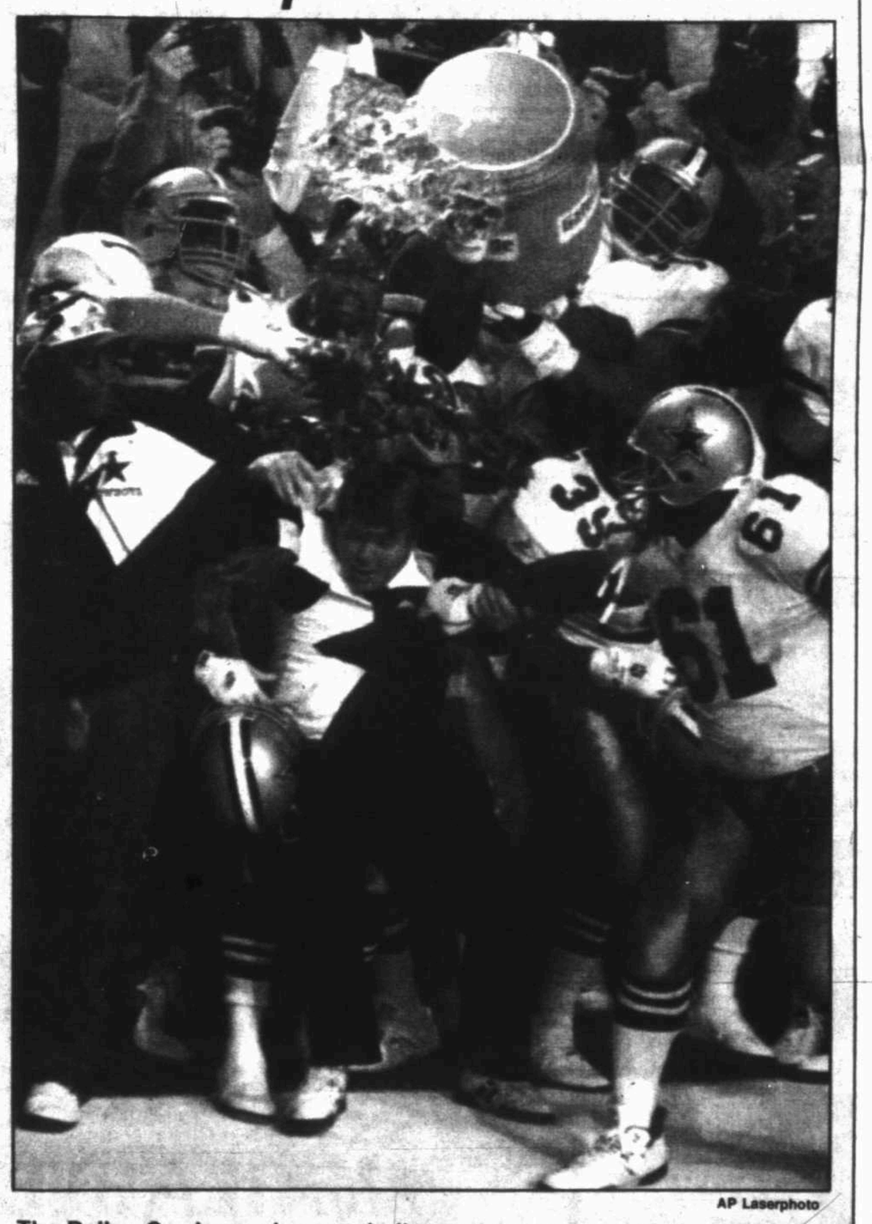

Also, Jones must deal with wide receiver Michael Irvin, who is demanding that his $1.4 million salary be renegotiated.

"It's all up to Jerry," Irvin said. "There are tremendous possibilities for this team. Jerry just has to keep all the guys together."

The Cowboys also have health concerns. Surgery may be needed on Emmitt Smith's shoulder, Norton's torn right bicep, defensive back Kenny Gant's shoulder, and Troy Aikman's sore shoulder.

Smith, the regular season and Super Bowl MVP, said, "I'll decide in four to six weeks what to do about my right shoulder. We'll just sit

Weather toys with 5-5A tilts

By Mike Butts
Staff Writer

As District 5-5A soccer enters its second week, the weather overshadows the games as the big story. Midland Lee's boys have had their game with San Angelo postponed twice, Midland High's boys have had four games cancelled because of bad weather and today's league games could get postponed if field conditions don't improve.

Midland Lee's game with San Angelo was postponed from Saturday to Monday. But Monday morning's snowfall again set the game back, this set for 2:45 (JV) and 4:30 varsity on Thursday.

The Midland Bulldogs (1-0 in district, 6-0 overall) are playing well despite the four missed games.

"I'm sure if we played all of them we'd be 10-0 ... (but) it disrupts the continuity of our team," said Midland coach Tom Esikhati. "When you miss a game you miss a practice."

Today's games have Midland Lee's boys at Odessa High at 5:30 p.m., Odessa Permian boys at Midland High at 2:45, Odessa High girls at Midland Lee at 4:30 and Midland High girls at Odessa Permian at 5:30.

Midland's boys are coming off a surprisingly tough 1-0 win over Lee in both teams' league opener Tuesday. The Bulldogs were scheduled to play El Paso Eastwood in a non-district game that was cancelled Saturday because of snow.

"So far I'm pleased with our performance (but) we still have to be cautious," Esikhati said.

4-5A doubleheaders set for Midland, Odessa

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

The Midland and Odessa basketball teams will be allowed to dance together again tonight as each city hosts a girl-boy District 4-5A doubleheader.

Midland Lee will host Odessa High at 6:15 and 8 p.m. at Chaparral Center while Midland High will play at Odessa Permian at the same times.

The four games have varying degrees of importance, but none may be bigger than the one the 5-3 Lee boys will stage against 0-8 Odessa High.

The Bronchos are winless in loop action this year, but Lee is the playoff "bubble" team at this date, tied for third place with Abilene High. Since the Eagles are idle, Lee can gain sole possession of third place in the league race with a win.

Lee still has Abilene High, Abilene Cooper and San Angelo on the road in this half, making it doubly important that the Rebels win at home.

"If we win out, things will work out nice for us and that's what we're planning on doing," said Lee coach Jon House. "Some of our kids would rather play on the road and we have done well on the road this year. But if you lose one, it makes it that much tougher. Then you have to have a little help."

Lee beat OHS by 10 points in the first half as Sean Low drained 29 points.

The MHS boys escaped 3-5 Permian by only four points at home in the first half as Jumon Hailey had a big fourth quarter in a 24-point night. The Bulldogs stand at 5-2 in sole possession of second place, but would fall into third with a loss. Still, MHS can afford a loss more than Lee at this point with one place in the standings to give up and still own a playoff shot.

"I like the way we are playing right now and I like our position in the race," said MHS coach Jack Stephenson. "Still, it's important to win the games against the teams you are ahead of in the standings or you could find yourself in trouble."

MHS has two victories over Permian this year, one by 22 points in a pre-district tournament. They haven't played Permian on the road as of yet, however.

The Midland High girls are already state playoff bound by virtue of its perfect 9-0 district record thus far, but the district championship isn't in the pocket yet since the OHS girls are just a step behind at 8-1.

The Lady Bulldogs ripped 3-7 Permian 77-44 in the first half as Amy Alcala hit 21 points and Julie Chancellor 15, but MHS coach Jim Raughton isn't one to take any team lightly at this stage of the season, especially since his girls are so close to claiming back-to-back 4-5A titles.

"Every game is still big for us even if we are in the playoffs," Raughton said. "It's a huge advantage to win the district championship because you get that first round bye. Our goal is to win the district championship."

The 2-7 Lee girls are on the verge of playoff elimination. Any loss by Lee or win by San Angelo will drop the Lady Rebels from contention. OHS easily defeated Lee in the first half despite the 15 points from Krissy Woodard.

"We're playing our best basketball of the year right now," said Lee coach Elise Kail. "The team is excited again about going out and playing and we'll just try to win all our games down the stretch without thinking

Blue Devils claim ever changing No. 1 post

Associated Press

■ New AP Top 25 Rankings

In a record year of changing No. 1s, there's a familiar name atop the rankings.

On Monday, Duke became the sixth school to hold the No. 1 spot this season. It was the fifth straight poll with a different team on top.

The Blue Devils (15-1) are No. 1 for the third straight season, and their first game with the new ranking will be Thursday night at No. 2 North Carolina, the first 1-2 matchup since top-ranked UNLV beat Arkansas 112-105 on Feb. 10, 1991.

This was supposed to be a good Duke team, but not as good as the ones before it that made the Final Four part of their regular schedule.

"I'm very surprised," Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said Monday.

"I think that going into the year we had a lot of questions about our group and midway through the year we still have a lot of questions. I've had opportunities to coach teams that have been No. 1 before and this team is very much a developing team. We think it is an honor to be voted No. 1 at any time because you may never be voted No. 1 again."

The Blue Devils got the chance to be No. 1 when UCLA (14-1), the top team for just one week, lost to California 85-70 Sunday. The other teams to hold No. 1 this season were North Carolina, Kentucky, Arkansas and Kansas.

Since Arkansas' five-week run ended last month, there has been a different top-ranked team every week.

Duke was No. 1 for five weeks last season and was the top-ranked team the entire 1991-92 season, the year the Blue Devils won their second straight national championship.

Being No. 1 can still be special even for a program that successful.

"I wouldn't say it is not important because it's always nice to be honored," Krzyzewski said. "It is an honor but it's not an accomplishment, an achievement or something you strive to do. It just happens.

"What I think it shows is that there are a lot of good basketball teams but not the dominant ones that have been there the last few years."

The previous record for No. 1s in a season was five in 1989-90, when UNLV, Syracuse, Kansas, Missouri and Oklahoma all spent time at the top.

Duke got there this week by being named No. 1 on 51 ballots and receiving 1,587 points from the national media panel to easily outdistance the Tar Heels (17-3), who received three first-place votes and 1,429 points. Kansas (19-2) was four points behind them with two first-place votes.

UCLA, the last unbeaten team this season, dropped to fourth with one first-place vote, while Connecticut (18-1), which had seven first-place votes, reached its highest ranking of the season at fifth. The Huskies were followed by Arkansas, Kentucky, Purdue, Louisville and Temple.

Massachusetts led the Second Ten and was followed by Arizona, Michigan, Indiana, Syracuse, Wisconsin, Alabama-Birmingham, Saint Louis, California and Missouri.

California (12-4), ranked sixth in the preseason, returned to the rankings after a one-week absence with the win over UCLA. Florida (16-3) and Cincinnati (14-5) were the other newcomers this week.

guards to get the ball to me and John. Coach knows I get frustrated without getting the ball on offense."

Midland returns to action Thursday at the Chap against Frank Phillips to open the second half of conference play. Frank Phillips' game with Odessa College was postponed Monday due to bad road conditions in the Panhandle. Game time is 7:30 p.m.

CHAP NOTES: During Midland College's current three-game winning streak, the Chaps have shot 59.3 percent from the field... guard Earl Tyson, who shot 2-of-18 during the two-game losing streak, has scored in double figures in all three games since. Tyson, a freshman from Washington, D.C., has scored 39 points (13 points per game) during the streak.

Ventura, Thigpen sign deals with AL teams

Associated Press

Third baseman Robin Ventura and the Chicago White Sox have avoided an arbitration hearing by agreeing to terms Monday on a new four-year contract worth nearly $21 million.

The deal for $20,725,000 includes an option year.

In another baseball transaction, the Seattle Mariners announced Monday they have signed 30-year-old relief pitcher Bobby Thigpen to a minor league contract and invited him to spring training.

The 26-year-old Ventura won his third straight Gold Glove at third base last season. He also batted .262 with 22 home runs and 94 runs batted in.

"We're very happy that Robin agreed to a multiyear contract," said Ron Schueler, senior vice president of the club's major-league operations. "He has played a significant role in the success of this ballclub over the last four seasons."

Ventura made $1,845,000 last year. He asked for $4.05 million in arbitration and the White Sox offered $3.3 million.

Ventura is a lifetime .269 hitter with 66 home runs and 348 RBI in 639 games since joining the White Sox in September 1989.

Thigpen set a single-season major-league record with 57 saves for the Chicago White Sox in 1990, but hasn't been the same since. He had one save last season after combining for 52 in 1991 and 1992 for the White Sox.

In 25 games with Chicago in 1993, the right-hander was 0-0 with a 5.71 ERA and one save. After being traded to the Phillies on Aug. 10 for pitcher Jose DeLeon, Thigpen was 3-1 with a 6.07 ERA in 17 games.

In his eight-year career, Thigpen has a 31-34 record with a 3.35 ERA. His 201 career saves rank 15th on baseball's all-time list.

No. 3 Kansas falls to Missouri

■ Top 25 Roundup

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Melvin Booker led a balanced attack with 16 points, all but two in the second half, as No. 20 Missouri took control of the Big Eight with a 79-67 victory over No. 3 Kansas on Monday night.

The Tigers (15-2, 6-0) ended a six-game losing streak against the cold-shooting Jayhawks and took a two-game lead in the conference over Kansas (19-3, 4-2), which has won the conference regular-season championship the last three seasons.

Steve Woodberry scored 19 points for Kansas, which lost for the second time in five games. The Jayhawks shot 43 percent and had 17 turnovers.

Missouri has held its last 11 opponents to sub 50-percent shooting.

Mavericks turn back to losing ways in NBA

Associated Press

■ NBA Roundup

DALLAS — Dominique Wilkins scored 14 of his 24 points during a 36-19 third-quarter charge Monday night as the Atlanta Hawks overcame a sluggish start to hold off the Dallas Mavericks, 90-85.

Dallas had a late 11-2 rally to close to 88-85 with 47 seconds left, and Jamal Mashburn attempted to tie it with a 3-pointer. But the shot from the left wing with 3 seconds to play failed to hit the rim.

Mookie Blaylock's two free throws with 0.9 seconds left sealed the victory.

The Hawks, playing for the fifth time in seven days, rallied from a six-point halftime deficit to carry a 73-62 lead into the fourth quarter.

Wilkins became the 11th player in NBA history to score 23,000 career points with a dunk during the third quarter spurt.

Blaylock had 18 points and Kevin Willis added 17 points and 16 rebounds for the Hawks.

Cavaliers 107, Pistons 103

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Mark Price scored six points down the stretch and Cleveland defeated Detroit as the Pistons tied a club record with their 10th straight home loss.

Pistons, just 5-17 at The Palace, have lost 20 of their last 21 overall and six in a row. Their last win at home was a 98-92 overtime victory over Cleveland on Dec. 18. The home losing streak matches a record set by the 1979-80 club.

The Pistons, despite scoring just one basket during a span of 5:32 in the fourth quarter, still managed to take a 95-94 lead on a bucket by Terry Mills with 3:32 remaining.

Warriors 110, Clippers 96

LOS ANGELES — Latrell Sprewell scored 20 of his 32 points in the first quarter to propel Golden State over the Los Angeles Clippers.

The Warriors, who embarrassed the Clippers by 46 points in their previous meeting Dec. 23, avoided what would have been their first three-game losing streak.

Races to continue despite ski death

More Sports/8C

GARMISCH-PARTENKIRCHEN, Germany (AP) — The international ski federation said Monday it will proceed with men's downhill and slalom racing here this weekend despite the death of a downhill racer.

"This tragic accident has shaken all of us deeply. But the whole sports enterprise can't stop because of that," said Heinz Krecek, the German representative on a ski federation jury that decided Saturday's and Sunday's competition will be run as planned.

Ulrike Maier, a two-time world champion and the mother of a 4-year-old girl, broke her neck in last Saturday's downhill race here and died 2½ hours later.

Germany's Sports Information Service said Maier's Austrian teammates will not participate in weekend World Cup competition in Spain because of Maier's death.

The SID quoted team chief Herwig Demschar as saying, "We wanted to give a signal that we can't immediately carry on as usual."

There had also been talk of postponing the men's weekend World Cup races as a gesture of mourning for Maier.

But Krecek said the federation jury voted unanimously to go ahead with a Saturday downhill and slalom on Sunday.

Hubert Schweighofer, Maier's fiance and the father of her child, said he will to sue race organizers and the ski federation for alleged negligence.

"I will do everything I can to bring those who are responsible to account," Schweighofer said.

Maier, 26, slid off line and apparently hit a timing post at a speed of more than 62 mph.

Schweighofer on Monday blamed the timing post for the fatal injury. "It stands too close to the course and the padding is insufficient," he said.

World Cup officials said they had taken steps to make the course safe. Three years ago, officials drew up a 40-point list of safety regulations for each World Cup venue. Slopes are checked regularly for compliance.

Schweighofer, who planned to marry Maier on Sept. 14, broke down in tears when he visited the crash site over the weekend.

Maier, who had planned to end her career after the Lillehammer Olympics and take over her father's ski school, is to be buried Thursday in her hometown of Rauris, Austria.

Ulrike Maier career highlights

Highlights in the World Cup skiing career of Ulrike Maier of Austria, who was killed Saturday in a fall during a downhill race at Garmisch-Partenkirchen, Germany:

- Dec. 9, 1984 First World Cup points with a 14th-place finish in a combined at Davos, Switzerland.
- Nov. 30, 1988 First World Cup podium finish, third in a slalom at Courmayeur, Italy.
- Feb. 8, 1989 Super-G gold medalist in World Championships at Vail, Colo., despite being pregnant.
- Jan. 29, 1991 Repeated super-G victory in the 1991 World Championships at Saalbach, Austria with infant daughter Melanie in the finish area.
- Feb. 2, 1991 Silver medalist in the World Championships giant slalom.
- Nov. 28, 1992 First World Cup victory, a giant slalom at Park City, Utah.
- Dec. 13, 1992 Second World Cup victory, a super-G at Vail, Colo.
- Jan. 16, 1993 Third World Cup victory, a super-G at Cortina d'Ampezzo, Italy.
- March 28, 1993 Completed most successful season, finishing fifth in the overall standings and second in the super-G standings.
- Nov. 27, 1993 Fourth World Cup victory, a giant slalom at Santa Caterina, Italy.
- Jan. 21, 1994 Fifth World Cup victory, a giant slalom at Maribor, Slovenia.

Newest Angel says he's healthy, trim

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Bo Jackson, the newest member of the California Angels, says he is healthy and trim and willing to accept his role as a part-time player.

He's also sharpening his one-liners, if Monday's news conference at Anaheim Stadium was any indication.

When asked how his life has changed since he received an artificial hip 22 months ago, he said: "I've spent a lot of time at the metal detector at the airport.

"That's about it. I'm still doing the things I once did with my kids. I am able to live a normal life."

He has been working out in Phoenix with Angels designated hitter Chili Davis.

"That consists of working your buns off, really,' he said. "In the past 3½ weeks, I've dropped about 10 pounds and 2½ inches off my waist. That's all without weights, just exercise."

Jackson, 31, became a free agent three weeks ago, and agreed to terms with the Angels on Sunday.

After missing most of the 1991 season and all of 1992 because of his hip problems, Jackson hit .232 with 16 homers and 45 RBIs in 85 games for the Chicago White Sox last season. He turned down an arbitration offer from the White Sox to become a free agent.

Jackson will receive a contract for $1 million from the Angels, with incentives that can take it to about $2 million, the Los Angeles Times reported. He will receive about $475,000 if he is released before opening day.

Based on what Jackson and Angels general manager Bill Bavasi said Monday, that seems unlikely.

"I really don't think I got my fill the last time I was employed on the West Coast," Jackson said, referring to his four-year pro football career with the Los Angeles Raiders. "To come back to California, I thought would do a lot of good, a change of scenery.

"I don't think I would be standing up here if I wasn't in good health. I'm not here to try to take someone's job. My role is as the fourth outfielder. My role is to play wherever I am needed."

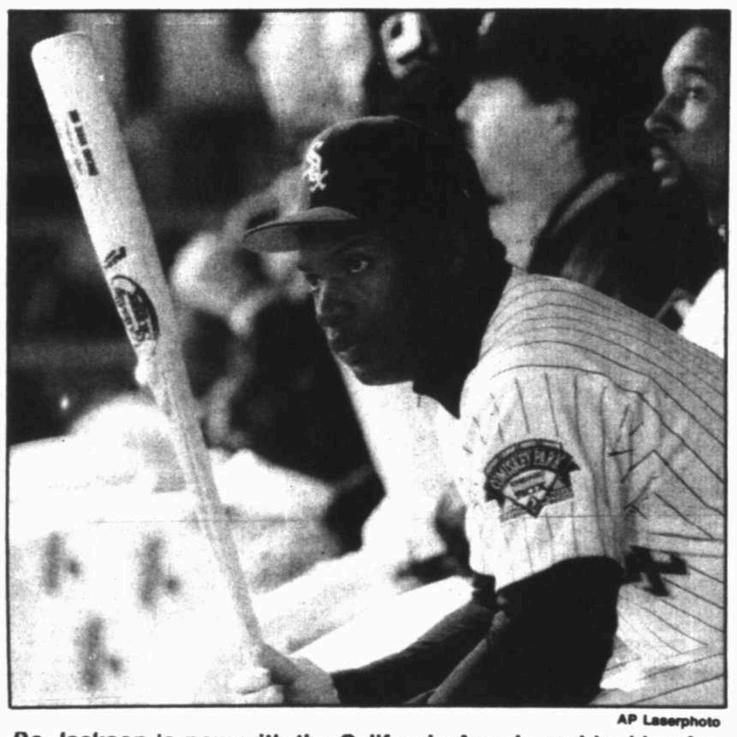

Luis Polonia, the Angels left fielder since early in the 1990 season, has signed a free-agent contract with the New York Yankees, leaving a job open. Chad Curtis and Tim Salmon are penciled in at the team's other outfield positions.

"I myself would say nothing's closed to him," Bavasi said of Jackson. "If he can beat somebody out, he has a spot. I would say left field is the obvious spot. I don't want to do Buck's job."

Bavasi was referring to Angels manager Buck Rodgers.

"As of today, we would like to have Eddie Perez playing left field," Bavasi said of the son of former Cincinnati Reds star Tony Perez. "He's a young player with a lot of talent.

"Whatever Bo puts his mind to, if people want to bet against it, I would probably cover his action."

Smith pays Mickey visit

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — Emmitt Smith, making the perennial Super Bowl MVP visit to Walt Disney World on Monday, said he gave words of encouragement to his friend and Buffalo counterpart Thurman Thomas after the Dallas' victory.

"I just wished the man well," Smith said. "I told him I loved him ... to go away, have fun, relax and continue to work hard and perhaps he would be there again someday and they'll win."

Thomas' two fumbles led to 10 Dallas points, while Smith led the Cowboys to their second consecutive Super Bowl win against Buffalo.

Despite only one hour's sleep, Smith was energetic, shaking hands with Mickey Mouse and jumping on the back of a fire engine for a parade down the Magic Kingdom's main street.

When the vehicle's engine died, it was no problem for the running back. He sat among a crush of fans, smiling, waving, signing autographs and chatting with Mickey before the fire engine was restarted and the parade headed for Cinderella's Castle.

Smith was named most valuable player for his two-touchdown, 132-rushing-yard effort in the Cowboy's 30-13 triumph. He later spent more than two hours answering reporters' questions at another Disney park, Epcot Center.

He turned down several big network TV shows and numerous personal appearance offers because he knew that past Super Bowl MVP had visited the theme park, he said.

"I always wanted to be the one to say, 'I want to go to Disney World,'" Smith said.

The Pensacola native and former University of Florida running back said he was glad to be the first MVP for both the regular season and the Super Bowl.

NBC big Super Bowl winner

Associated Press

NBC was a big winner, Buffalo was a big loser, and the poor folks in Rutland, Vt. ...

Well, if the sun hadn't come out for a few minutes Sunday, the day would have been a total loss for the residents of about 10,000 Rutland-area homes that missed 2 hours of the Super Bowl when the cable went out.

NBC estimates that its coverage of Buffalo's fourth straight Super Bowl loss, 30-13 to Dallas, was viewed at least in part by 134,844,000 people, the most ever to witness a single TV show.

NBC set the previous mark of 133.4 million with its coverage of last year's Dallas-over-Buffalo Super Bowl. The closing episode of M.A.S.H. in 1983 is the the only non-Super Bowl in the top 10 most-watched shows, with an estimated viewership of 121,624,000, good for fifth.

The A.C. Nielsen rating for this year's game was 45.4 with a 66 share, with each ratings point worth about 942,000 homes. Last year's ratings were 45.1 and 66, with each rating point worth an estimated 931,000 homes.

The highest-rated game in Super Bowl history was San Francisco's 26-21 victory over Cincinnati in 1982 on CBS at 49.1.

This year's rating might have been a little higher if it hadn't been for a problem at Adelphia Cable in Rutland.

than a winning record. Odessa Permian is 3-5.

Midland High is one-half game behind Abilene Cooper (2-0) in the 5-5A standings but holds the only undefeated overall mark among the league's boys. The Bulldogs went to a shootout with Lee Tuesday, winning 3-2.

Lee's girls may be the surprise of the district so far. They have followed their first year of soccer and a 3-8 record by winning their first two league games and doubling last season's win total with a 6-1 overall mark. That is the best overall mark in girls 5-5A. Their opponent today, Odessa High, is 0-2 and 3-7.

Forward Stephanie Smith has had the hot hand for the Lady Rebels. She has seven goals in the last four games. Smith scored twice in Lee's 4-2 win over defending district champ San Angelo Saturday in San Angelo.

Midland High's girls (0-1, 4-3) go for their first-ever 5-5A win against Odessa Permain (1-1, 4-6). The Lady Bulldogs were open last Saturday.

Lee's Rebels are 0-1, 5-2 while their opponent, Odessa High, is 0-2, 5-5.

A Lee win tonight, however, would probably be of more help to the MHS girls than to its own cause. A Lee win would give MHS a two-game lead over OHS with two games left to play.

The girls and boys may be dancing together tonight in a treat for the fans, but the outcomes definitely have a huge bearing on the outcome of two District 4-5A races. Maybe it's off to the races instead of off to the dance.

Crude retreats

NEW YORK — Heating oil and natural gas prices rose on Monday as forecasts for temperatures 15 to 25 degrees below normal in the Northeast and Midwest persisted.

The contract for near-month delivery of heating oil rose sharply at the close as so-called short sellers, who had bet on a downturn in prices, scrambled to cover their positions before the deadline to trade February contracts.

February delivery of home heating oil rose 1 cent per gallon to $53.70. The March contract, which will represent the near-month on Tuesday, finished at 49.55 cents, down 0.16 cent.

Natural gas prices were stronger as forecasts called for bitter cold in the Midwest this week. Near-month delivery of natural gas rose 2.6 cents to $2.554 per 1,000 cubic feet.

Near-term delivery of light sweet crude oil settled at $15.19 per barrel, down 15 cents at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Local crude purchasers lowered their posted price 25 cents to $13.50 a barrel.

Dollar falls

NEW YORK — The dollar fell against most key currencies Monday as investors ignored talk of higher interest rates by Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan and focused on the uncertain outcome of U.S.-Japanese trade talks.

In New York, the dollar ended at 108.63 yen, down from 109.90 on Friday.

Other dollar rates in New York compared with late Friday: 1.7340 German marks, down from 1.7425; 1.4565 Swiss francs, down from 1.4705; 5.8880 French francs, down from 5.9170; 1,689.00 Italian lire, down from 1,701.00; and 1.3305 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3244.

In New York, the pound finished at $1.5060, more expensive than $1.4945 on Friday.

Stocks soar

NEW YORK — The Dow Jones industrial average and other major market indexes soared to record highs again on Monday amid strength in share prices overseas and general optimism about the economy.

The Dow set its third consecutive record, rising 32.93 points to 3,978.36, eclipsing its previous high of 3,945.43 set on Friday.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 2 to 1 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 322.81 million shares, up from 312.38 million in the previous session. January was the busiest month on record for the exchange, with total share volume of about 6.6 billion. October 1987, the month of the Black Monday market crash, was previously the busiest, with 6.1 billion shares changing hands.

Agency imposes merger moratorium

■ Regulators' action cracks down on windfall profits for some insiders.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In a crackdown on windfall profits for some insiders, federal regulators imposed a moratorium Monday on mergers in which the stock of a depositor-owned savings and loan institutions is sold to the public.

The action by the Office of Thrift Supervision was welcomed by Rep. Henry Gonzalez, chairman of the House Banking Committee. The Texas Democrat said it is a good first step to protect depositors when so-called mutual S&Ls are acquired by other companies.

In calling a temporary halt to the merger activity, the OTS said it also intends to review standard conversions in which mutual S&Ls decide on their own to offer stock to the public. The agency said it will continue to process applications for standard conversions during the review.

"I applaud the OTS for its decision today to impose a moratorium on merger conversions, which are the most egregious type of conversion because the depositors . . . are not always able to purchase the savings bank stock, whereas the bank insiders always go home with their pockets lined," said Gonzalez.

He urged the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. to impose a similar temporary ban on merger conversions for mutual S&Ls.

The FDIC and OTS share responsibility for regulating the savings industry.

At a House Banking subcommittee hearing last week, several lawmakers expressed concern that some insiders are getting rich in the deals.

Acting FDIC Chairman Andrew Hove promised the panel it will examine the conversions more closely. He said the agency is considering requiring that when mutual savings institutions sell stock, they issue special vouchers to depositors.

The vouchers would let the holders buy stock, or they could be sold by depositors who so choose.

Acting OTS director Jonathan Fiechter said the moratorium will remain in effect until the agency drafts rules to protect depositors.

Fiechter testified last week, "We had 2,000 mutuals, now we're down to 800. If we study this for two years, there won't be any mutuals left."

Mutual S&Ls have some $250 billion in assets, about one fourth of the nations savings and loan industry.

Last year, 112 mutual S&Ls converted to publicly owned stock — including 29 that were bought by banks, industry groups reported.

OTS said that managers of the mutual thrift institutions often get lavish stock options and retirement pay when the S&Ls merge.

BMW to buy last of big British automakers

LONDON (AP) — German automaker BMW is buying England's Rover, merging two of Europe's great car names and putting the last big British-owned auto company under foreign control.

The $1.2 billion deal angered Japanese car giant Honda, a 20 percent shareholder in Rover. Opposition lawmakers also complained that workers had been given no job guarantees, and questioned whether Rover had been undersold when it was bought by British Aerospace PLC five years ago.

But industry analysts called the match a good fit. Traders sharply pushed up the share prices of BMW and British Aerospace on the Frankfurt and London stock markets.

BMW and Rover executives told a news conference they are creating the world's largest specialist car manufacturer. They will produce nearly 1 million vehicles a year, ranging from BMW's luxury cars to Rover's four-wheel-drive cars, almost doubling the capacity of BMW.

'Our differing regional strengths provide a powerful synergy.'

— Bernd Pischetsrieder, chairman, Bayrische Motoren Werke AG

"In addition, our differing regional strengths provide a powerful synergy," said Bernd Pischetsrieder, chairman of Bayrische Motoren Werke AG. For example, BMW's stronger distribution network in the United States could increase exports of Rovers, he said.

BMW's goal is to make Rover a bigger company, Pischetsrieder said, hinting he might like to bring back some English auto nameplates from a bygone era.

Victor Doolan, president of BMW North America, noted that Rover's dormant nameplates include such well-known names as MG and Triumph.

BMW already sells diesel engines to Rover, and "more of that could happen," Doolan said at the National Automobile Dealers Association convention in San Francisco. He said shared engineering and supplier knowledge would be likely even as the BMW and Rover brands remain distinct.

He said there are no plans to import a Rover sport utility vehicle that would be built or sold in the United States.

Government: Income grows by 4.7 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans' personal income rose 0.6 percent in December, helping to push earnings for 1993 up 4.7 percent, nearly twice the rate of inflation, the government said Monday.

The Commerce Department said income growth was down from 6.1 percent in 1992, but it still beat the 2.7 percent increase in inflation last year.

At the same time, consumer spending rose 6.1 percent, the biggest since a 6.8 percent gain in 1990. Consumer spending represents two-thirds of the nation's economic activity.

Consumer spending grew at a healthy pace during the last half of 1993 and helped boost economic growth 2.9 percent for the year, best in five years.

But many analysts contend that because spending outpaced incomes, consumers will be forced to slow consumption in the early part of this year.

In December, income rose to $5.54 trillion at a seasonally adjusted annual rate, up from $5.51 trillion a month earlier and the fifth straight advance. Part of the gain was attributed to retroactive Social Security payments.

Spending was up 0.5 percent, to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $4.51 trillion, from $4.48 trillion in November.

Disposable income — income after taxes — increased 0.6 percent, also the fifth straight advance.

The combination of incomes and spending meant that Americans' savings rate — savings as a percentage of disposable income — edged up to 4.2 percent, from 4.1 percent in November.

Software makers try mass merchandising

SEATTLE (HNS) — What do canned tomatoes, toilet paper, 50-pound bags of dog kibble and the latest version of MS-DOS have in common? Nothing, except you can buy all of them at your local discount warehouse outlet.

Computer software — the high-tech, high-growth product that made megafortunes in the 1980s — has gone downscale in the 1990s. Price wars and slowing growth in traditional corporate markets are forcing software companies to expand customer bases.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Treasury notes pay interest similar to CDs

By Bill Doyle

Q: My wife and I are in our 70s. We have two certificates of deposit, one for $100,000 and one for $90,000. We live on our Social Security benefits, which come to $13,000 a year, and the monthly CD interest.

Doyle

We are being advised to buy U.S. Treasury bonds or notes in order to get a little more interest income. We need the interest monthly to pay our bills, and we want no risk. But we are a little shy about changing, because we do not know much about Treasury bonds or notes. Would they be right for us?

A: Although U.S. Treasury securities are counted as the least risky of all investments, CDs are more suitable for you — assuming your CDs are covered by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.

The interest on Treasury bonds and notes is about equal to the interest on CDs with similar maturities. For example, as I write this, the average yield on five-year CDs is 5.11 percent, and the yield on Treasury notes due to mature in February 1999 is 5.13.

So, you would get a little more income from Treasury notes. But Treasury notes and bonds pay interest semiannually. You would not get income monthly unless you buy six different Treasury issues with staggered interest payment dates.

Q: What is the difference between Treasury bonds and Treasury notes?

A: The basic difference is in their maturity periods. Different Treasury bond issues come with maturities of from more than 10 years to as long as 30 years; the notes with maturities of from two years to 10 years.

Sizes can also be different. All Treasury bonds are issued in $1,000 minimum denomination and multiples thereof. Two-year and three-year Treasury notes come in $5,000 minimums; four-year through 10-year notes in $1,000 minimums.

Other than that, the notes and bonds are alike. Both are issued by the Treasury Department and are backed by the full faith and credit of our federal government. They come only in book-entry form, meaning no certificates are printed and ownership is recorded on computers. Interest is paid by direct deposit to the the owners' bank accounts.

Q: I bought a 26-week $10,000 Treasury bill in September and received an interest payment shortly thereafter. An accountant says I don't have to report the T-bill interest on my 1993 income tax return. He says it will be taxable for 1994. Why?

A: Because that payment you received was not interest. It was a discount. You will get interest when that T-bill matures next month.

Unlike Treasury bonds and notes, which are issued at or very close to face value and which pay interest every six months, Treasury bills are "discount securities." You buy a T-bill at a discount — a price below its face value — and receive face value when it matures. The difference between the two prices is interest, which is taxable income for the year of maturity.

This arrangement confuses many people who, like you, assume a T-bill discount is interest. It is not.

You receive a Form 1099, listing the amount of taxable interest, for the year in which the T-bill matures.

Q: In what denomination amounts are T-bills available, and for what maturities?

A: T-bills are issued in minimum amounts of $10,000 and in multiples of $5,000 above that minimum. They come with maturities of 13, 26 and 52 weeks.

The 13-week and 26-week bills are auctioned off every Monday — the preceding Friday or following Tuesday if Monday is a bank holiday.

Offerings of 52-week bills are announced every fourth Friday, and the auction is held on the Thursday following the announcement.

Buffalo loss becomes a four-gone conclusion

ATLANTA — The Buffalo Bills lost the Super Bowl here Sunday.

And a pie is round, water's wet, roses are red, the sky is blue and what else is new?

Dog bites man. Don't hold the presses. Put it on Page 12. The underdogs lost. They usually do.

They had a great first half. So did the German Army. So did Robert E. Lee. So did King George, Napoleon.

Back up the truck. Buffalo was "b-a-a-a-ck!" as they liked to say. Deal with it America. Well, deal with it Buffalo.

The guys in the cowboy hats and the boots beat the guys in the hard hats and the blue collars.

Buffalo's Steve Tasker said they were "looking forward to next year." Wait just a darn minute, guys. Give us a break.

They sandwiched the game between exploding fireworks, dancing chorus lines, high-kicking cheerleaders, rap musicians, Roman candles. Busby Berkeley would have loved it. You hated to interrupt it with something as mundane as a football game. The game had a good chance to be a big anticlimax. Super Bowls often are.

It wasn't. It was a very exciting. For 45 minutes. After that, order was restored.

It will come as no surprise that Buffalo was undone by a turnover. The Bills are like a sailor on leave with three weeks' pay in a waterfront dance hall. Sooner or later, they find a way to self-destruct.

They hit the button for it when the second half had scarcely begun Sunday. Pretty soon, here they were lying in a ditch again with their hair singed, clothes torn, nose bleeding and teeth loose again.

Here was their Waterloo: They were leading a Super Bowl game at the half, 13-6.

No one was really fooled. It was like watching Little Red Riding Hood on her way to Grandma's. You couldn't bear to look.

Sure enough, it happened. On the third play of the second half, Buffalo's Thurman Thomas crashed into Dallas' Leon Lett. The ball popped loose. James Washington picked it up.

Washington, in a sense, crossed his Delaware, too. He kept letting would-be tacklers fly by him as he got in the end zone for the tying touchdown.

In a sense, that was the old ball game. Buffalo never recovered.

Dallas was too fast, too tough, too lucky.

For a while, it looked as if the Cowboys were finally going to be undone by a foine broth of an Irish lad and a venerable tactic.

The "shotgun" is an offensive scheme that was introduced in the '60s by a San Francisco coach, Red Hickey, who had three quarterbacks of limited mobility. Notably one -- Bill Kilmer. Instead of having his quarterback crouch under the center and then begin a mad dash backward with the ball, he took a direct pass deep.

It didn't work long. The defenses caught up with it by the second month or so.

Buffalo's canny old coach, Marv Levy, dusted off this hoary old maneuver, which is ordinarily used on third down and long. He used it on every down. He figured to save his quarterback from the ferociously fast Dallas pass.

And, for a long time, it did. Dallas looked like a bunch of guys running for a passed bus, and Jim Kelly threw the ball for 176 yards with 18 completions in 25 passes in the first half. He was having the time of his life. The Cowboys were running around like cattle in a thunderstorm.

Dallas even threw in the dumbest play in football. This is the gaffe where a defensive player runs into the kicker on a punting situation. Why? You're going to get the football anyway. The other guys are about to give it to you with ribbons around it. Running into the kicker is like returning a present to sender. Pros shouldn't do it.

A pro named Dave Thomas did. The picture was this: Buffalo, trailing, 3-6, had just flamed out. It was fourth down and three to go on its own 41. Punter Chris Mohr kicked the ball to the Dallas 22. But Dave Thomas had crashed into the kicker. Buffalo got the ball back, first down on the 46-yard line.

That's all the break Kelly needed. Eleven plays later, Thurman Thomas had scored Buffalo's first and only touchdown.

That might have been the pivotal play except for Thomas' fumble. That fumble for an enemy touchdown seemed to take the heart out of Buffalo. More important, it put the heart back into Dallas. It put the John Wayne back in the Cowboys' makeup, the swagger back in their walk. They were the guys in the white hats again. America's team. Wyatt Earps in charge of the town.

Emmitt Smith miraculously reappeared. After a first half in which 10 carries produced only 41 so-so yards, he came back in the second half to carry 20 more times for 91 yards. He caught four passes for 26 yards. He scored two touchdowns. He carried the ball six consecutive times, then a seventh for 15 yards and a touchdown.

You can move over Red Grange, O.J. Simpson, Walter Payton and other football forces of nature. Emmitt the Eminence may be as good as any. He gains more yards with tacklers hanging on him than most guys can get in a clear field.

So, it was ultimately a victory again for the brash upstart, Jimmy Johnson. The word dynasty begins to creep in on his charges.

It would seem it takes something more than Buffalo to rate you a Dynasty. It's not a series, it's a Punch-and-Judy show. Buffalo should be punchy.

Maybe it should be like the fight game. When you've had a lot of early-round KOs, the boxing commission suspends you. Waits until the doctors can certify you healthy. Buffalo may be healthy enough on the stethoscope, but on a psychiatrist's couch the Bills may come up seeing shadows and hearing voices.

Still, the rest of their conference isn't much better. The AFC not only lost Super Bowl XXVIII, it lost Super Bowls XXVII, XXVI, XXV, XXIV, XXIII, XXII, XXI, XX and XIX. It's officially in a rut.

Maybe for Buffalo, the Super Bowl should have handles on it. For sure, the football should.

If they make it again, maybe the Bills should just mail the loss in. If they come again next year, they should at least be blindfolded. They don't execute, they get executed.

Johnson, Smith will be back

ATLANTA (AP) — Jimmy Johnson said Monday he expects to be back with Super Bowl champion Dallas next season, and not with the expansion Jacksonville Jaguars.

Emmitt Smith will certainly be back with the Cowboys. He just wants his offensive linemen to be there, too.

Johnson and Smith, the MVP of Dallas' 30-13 win over Buffalo in Sunday's Super Bowl, were up early the day after, both in reasonably good shape.

While the Bills were preparing to return home after becoming the first team in any sport to lose four straight championship games, the Cowboys were reaping the rewards in exposure after their second straight win.

Smith appeared on ABC's "Good Morning America" and Johnson was ready to postpone his island vacation for a day to tape David Letterman's late-night talk show on CBS.

But they also had to deal with the normal postgame question: Now that you've won two straight Super Bowls, what do you do for an encore?

"I don't have any thoughts right now that I'll do anything else," said Johnson, who has had a stormy relationship with owner Jerry Jones.

"But I'm not 100 percent committed to anything. The closest is that it's about 100 percent that I'll get on a plane and go to New York to do Letterman."

Johnson, who has never stayed in any head coaching job longer than five years, has just finished the fifth year of a 10-year contract with Jones.

Although he grew up in Texas, Johnson's years at the University of Miami gave him a fondness for Florida and he's been courted by the expansion Jaguars as part owner, general manager and coach.

Jones has repeatedly said he won't let Johnson out of his contract. Commissioner Paul Tagliabue, asked Monday if Johnson would be allowed out of the contract if the move was upward, replied, "I'd have to look again at our rules on that."

But for now, all is well with the Cowboys, at least until Feb. 18, when the free-agent signing period starts.

Four of Dallas' offensive linemen are free agents — guards Nate Newton and Kevin Gogan, center Mark Stepnoski and guard John Gesek, a former starter who took over at center when Stepnoski was hurt. Middle linebacker Ken Norton, defensive end Jim Jeffcoat and kicker Eddie Murray also are free agents.

That concerned Smith, who edged out safety James Washington for the MVP award by rushing for 132 yards, 61 of them on the 64-yard drive for the go-ahead touchdown in the third period. Smith, the first running back to be MVP in both the regular season and Super Bowl, was himself a holdout for the first two games of the season, both Dallas losses

"Those guys produced a three-time rushing leader," Smith said of his offensive line. "They give Troy Aikman time to throw. We want them back."

But he added: "Jerry's gonna do what Jerry's gonna do."

Smith said he would not go to the Pro Bowl so that his right shoulder, separated in the final regular-season game, would have time to heal. He said he would wait about six weeks to give doctors time to decide if surgery is needed.

He also restated his suggestion that Washington be at least the co-MVP.

The backup safety, who started only because the Cowboys used a nickel defense to counter Buffalo's three wide receivers, returned a fumble 46 yards for a touchdown, intercepted a pass to set up another TD and forced a fumble that led to a field goal.

"When you're talking about James Washington, you're talking about a guy who had the best game of his life in the biggest game you could play," Smith said.

The Bills were left to talk about the team's most enduring quality — resilience.

"You know, the thing is I can always smile about it, because we had a hell of a year, and we've shown the resiliency of this team," quarterback Jim Kelly said.

"I have to know that next year will come around, and our goal is going to be the same. So until anybody proves different, we're still the team to beat in the AFC, and we'll do it until we do it right."

Not good enough to win it all

ATLANTA (AP) — Good enough to win four straight conference championships but not good enough to win it all, the Buffalo Bills must now find the missing components that will end their four-year streak as also-rans.

It won't be a case of addition by subtraction, general manager John Butler and coach Marv Levy said. There will be no wholesale movement of players, even though the Bills lost their fourth straight Super Bowl on Sunday — 30-13 to Dallas.

"We'll evaluate, but we're not going to break up the Bills," Levy said Monday before the team departed for Buffalo. "That would be an overreaction."

Most immediately, the Bills must decide what to do with their free agents.

Two starters in the defensive backfield, cornerback Nate Odomes and free safety Mark Kelso, are in the group of players who could be signed by other teams, as are offensive line starters Howard Ballad and John Davis.

Two other special teams standouts — Steve Tasker and punter Chris Mohr — are also free agents along with offensive guard Jim Ritcher and linebacker Richard Harvey.

The Bills could protect two of those players by naming them either a franchise or transition player, which would allow the Bills to match any offer to retain the player's services.

But that is not foolproof. Buffalo named tackle Will Wolford a transition player last year, but lost him when the Indianapolis Colts came up with an ingenious contract the Bills couldn't match.

For that reason, Butler said he's not sure the franchise or transition designation "is worth the paper it's written on."

Three other Bills — defensive end Phil Hansen and safeties Matt Darby and Kurt Schulz — are restricted free agents. The Bills could match any offer they received and would be compensated with draft picks if those players left.

Don't look for Buffalo to dip into the free agent pool. The Bills are already very close to the projected $34 million salary cap the NFL is imposing next season.

"The likelihood of free agency is slim for us," Butler said.

More likely, the Bills will try to add talent through the draft. The Bills will draft next-to-last in the first round this year, but they are hopeful the league will give them an extra, high draft pick as compensation for Wolford's loss.

Free agency, and the freedom of movement it gives players, may force Buffalo away from its traditional approach of making draft choices sit and watch for a season or two.

"With the situation the way it is right now, rookies are probably going to play a lot faster."

Smith suffered a separated shoulder in the final game of the regular season.

Smith won't play in the Pro Bowl and Aikman was to learn from Dr. James Andrews in Birmingham, Ala., later Monday whether he could play. It was doubtful Aikman would go to Sunday's game in Hawaii.

Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson, who tied former Cowboys coach Tom Landry with his second Super Bowl victory, had a brief delay in his plans for a Florida vacation.

Johnson scheduled a visit with talk show host David Letterman before traveling on to Florida and Key Biscayne for some scuba diving.

Johnson said the Cowboys will switch strategy for the upcoming draft because of the free agent situation.

"We won't send coaches around the country this year, we'll just use scouts," Johnson said. "We want to keep the coaches around to look at all the free agents who become available. It would be difficult for a rookie to make this team. A free agent could make a big difference.

"Jerry is the finest businessman around and I think we may be in the best financial shape of any team in the league."

When Johnson gets back, he'll begin a search for an offensive coordinator to replace Norv Turner, who was expected to become head coach of the Washington Redskins this week.

"Everything I've seen about the Washington job is very positive," Turner said. "I'll be visiting there as soon as I can get my family settled back in Dallas from Atlanta."

Irvin said: "We're going to lose one helluva coach. I promise you I'd give up some of my salary to keep him here."

Johnson dispelled any rumors he might be leaving the Cowboys for the challenge of an expansion franchise.

"It would be difficult to leave a situation where you have great players and a great family feeling like I have with the Cowboys," Johnson said.

Johnson would like to be in Miami next January. That's where the next Super Bowl will be held.

The Cowboys joined Green Bay, San Francisco, Miami and Pittsburgh as the only team to win two consecutive Super Bowls. Dallas also joined the Steelers and 49ers as the only franchises to win four Super Bowls.

The Cowboys are 4-3 in Super Bowls and have the most appearances in the game. No team has ever won three in a row.

"We'll be looking history right in the eye next year," Irvin said.

"It could be amazing what this team could accomplish if we stay together," Aikman said.

Understanding IRA regulations

Individual Retirement Accounts (IRA's), an excellent way to plan for the future, are one of the most frequently asked-about investment vehicles in Van Pearcy's Edward D. Jones & Co. investment office in Midland. Van has listed some of the most common questions about IRA's.

Can I roll over my employer retirement plan distribution into an existing IRA? Yes. By doing so, you only have one retirement account to monitor and pay only one annual fee. However, by rolling your distribution into a new IRA, you have the right to roll those funds back into any future employer-sponsored plan. This would give you the option to use five-year or 10-year averaging, since this favorable tax treatment is only available on distributions from qualifier employer plans.

Are there restrictions on where I can establish my IRA? Yes. An IRA is not an investment itself, but rather a trust established for the individual in which specific investments are placed. The Internal Revenue Code generally allows banks, full-service brokers, discount brokers, mutual funds and other "bank-like" financial institutions to offer IRAs.

What kind of investments can I place in my IRA? Where you establish your IRA--whether a bank, brokerage or mutual fund--may limit you to the type of investment offered by that institution. For example, establishing an IRA with a specific mutual fund family limits you to the funds offered by that group. Major mutual fund families typically offer a variety of funds with different objectives and risk levels.

A self-directed IRA established with a bank or brokerage firm generally allows a variety of investments, including individual stocks, bonds mutual funds and CDs.

What if I overcontribute to my IRA, or roll over more than is eligible? If possible you should avoid overcontributing to your IRA. If this occurs to may be subject to certain penalties.

If I take a distribution from my IRA, is it subject to the new 20 percent federal income tax withholding requirement? No. Only distributions from employer-sponsored retirement plans (401(k)s, profit sharing, or money purchase pension plans) are subject to the 20 percent withholding requirement.

"IRAs are a great way of saving for retirement and offer one of the few tax benefits available to average wage earners," Pearcy said. "Don't avoid IRAs because you don't understand them. It's important to consult with an investment professional who can explain the regulations and help you find the plan that's right for you."

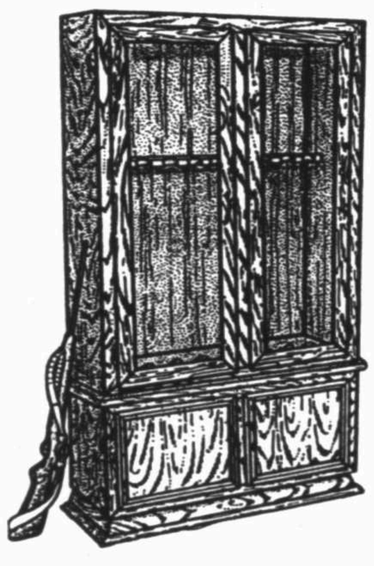

Van Pearcy has run the local investment office of Edward D. Jones & Co., located across the street from the high school football stadium at 2020 West Cuthbert, for six years. He received his bachelor's degree and master's degree from the University of Notre Dame and was born and raised in Andrews, Texas.

If you're interested in finding out if your IRA is working as hard as it can for you, call Van's office at 683-1516 for a free consultation. He'll prepare a personalized report illustrating how hard your retirement dollars are working.

"Van Pearcy, local Edward D. Jones & Co. investment representative, runs an IRA Savings Projection so that his clients can see how their IRA is performing and how much they need to save in order to live comfortably in retirement."

WHAT TO DO IF YOU THINK YOUR CHILD IS ON DRUGS.

The Telltale Signs

Chronic eye redness, sore throat or dry cough.

Chronic lying, especially about whereabouts.

Wholesale changes in friends.

Stealing.

Deteriorating relationships with family members.

Wild mood swings, hostility, or abusive behavior.

Chronic fatigue, withdrawal, carelessness about personal grooming.

Major changes in eating or sleeping patterns.

You're not a failure as a parent. You're not helpless. And you're not alone.

If you think you're a failure, consider this: There are many kids with neglectful parents who never use drugs. There are also children with seemingly model parents who do use drugs.

So the first thing to accept is that drugs, while indeed dangerous, are one more problem for youngsters to handle. And they'll do it better and faster if you're aware, involved, and don't stick your head in the sand.

THE AWARE PARENT IS THE GOOD PARENT.

Part of awareness and a major deterrent to experimentation is to talk to your kids about drugs.

But even with a lot of parental involvement, there are no guarantees. So it's important to know the symptoms of drug use and to take action if you see your youngster displaying them.

THE WARNING SIGNALS.

There are no symptoms that are absolutely reliable. But there are clues (see box).

Most of these symptoms tend to be gradual which is why parental awareness is so important.

But don't jump to conclusions.

Many of the warning signs for drug use are the same as those for depression or for the ups and downs of being a teenager. There's also the possibility it's a physical or emotional problem.

But whatever the problem, we're talking about a child who needs help. Right now.

START WITHIN THE FAMILY.

Nothing beats the power of love and family support. That has to start with a frank discussion.

Don't make it an attack. And don't try to talk with your child if he or she seems under the influence.

Wait for a calm moment and then explain that you're worried about certain behavior (be specific) and give your child every opportunity to explain. That means really listening, not doing all the talking.

At the same time, it's important to speak frankly about the possibility of drugs. And it's particularly important to talk about your values and why you're dead set against drugs.

If your youngster seems evasive or if his or her explanations are not convincing, you may want to consult your doctor to rule out illness and to ask for advice.

You may also want to have your child visit a mental health professional to see if there are emotional problems.

FURTHER ACTION MAY BE NECESSARY

If your child seems non-responsive or belligerent, and you suspect drugs are involved, immediate action is vital.

First, you'll need an evaluation from a health professional skilled in diagnosing adolescents with alcohol or drug problems.

You may want to get involved with an intervention program to learn techniques that will help convince a drug user to accept help.

For the user, there are self-help, outpatient, day care, residency, and 24-hour hospitalization programs.

The right program depends entirely on the circumstances and the degree of drug involvement. Here, you'll need professional help to make an informed choice.

Another point: If a program is to succeed, the family needs to be part of it. This can mean personal or family counseling. It may also involve participating in a support group where you learn about co-dependency and how not to play into the problems that might prompt further drug use.

If you don't know about drug programs in your area, call your family doctor, local hospital or county mental health society or school counselor for a referral. You can also call the national helpline – 800-662-HELP – for advice and a referral.

WHATEVER YOU DO, DON'T GIVE UP.

That child who upsets you so much is the same little boy or girl who, only yesterday, gave you such joy. They're in way over their heads, and they never needed you quite as much as they need you now.

No matter what they say.

For more information on how to talk with your kids about drugs, ask for a free copy of "A Parent's Guide to Prevention." Call 1-800-624-0100.

WEEKLY & MONTHLY INCOME

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has an opening on one of its few "special allowance" routes. This larger route receives a $50 check each Friday, in addition to the regular monthly route profits. The route is in the Cottonflat and Rankin Hwy.

As with all newspaper distributorships this opportunity requires a 7 day a week commitment (when you go out of town you must arrange a substitute for yourself) and it is early morning work.

Newspaper distributorships provide great supplemental income for housewives/mothers, senior citizens, college students or any other adult wanting to "moonlight".
