Campaign not perfect, governor-elect says

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Add another name to the list of those asking how Republican Bill Clements captured the Governor's Mansion after 104 years of Democratic dominance:

The governor-elect himself.

"I have talked with Nola Haerle, my campaign manager, very briefly. But neither she nor I have had time to sit down and give it that kind of in-depth analysis," he said before leaving Friday on a vacation.

"I'm not prepared to pick out the strengths or weaknesses," the 61-year-old self-made millionaire declared during a telephone interview.

He vigorously defends his almost $7 million campaign expenditure and scoffs at suggestions to limit future spending in state races.

"That's no solution," he said of state Democratic Party Chairman Billy Goldberg's suggestion to restrict future spending.

"Sure he'd like to see the Democrats in Austin get perpetuated in office," Clements retorted.

He won't call his campaign perfect.

"Undoubtedly, we made some mistakes," he admits.

But pinpointing mistakes requires time that Clements says he hasn't had since he beat Democrat John Hill by some 16,000 votes.

Neither has he had time to formulate programs to implement or propose to the Legislature. Those things will come later.

For now, the Dallasite must adjust from running a worldwide oil drilling corporation, SEDCO, to managing state government.

He already has an invitation from outgoing Gov. Dolph Briscoe to retain any of the Democrat's administrative staff in the new regime.

"He (Briscoe) told me that this transition was going to go smoothly," Clements said of his visit Wednesday with Briscoe and his wife at the Governor's Mansion.

"He said I should feel completely free to talk to any of his people, ... about recruiting and asking them to stay," the Republican said.

"I haven't talked to any members of his staff as long as I've talked to you," he said 10 minutes into the interview.

The Clements administration will include Democrats, Republicans and independents, he emphasized.

"There's one word that's going to prevail in this administration — that's excellence," he said.

Will the man he defeated in the Republican primary, Ray Hutchison, be on that team?

'I'm sure he would be considered," Clements said of the former state GOP chairman. Hutchison figures prominently in speculation over who Clements will name as secretary of state.

A united Republican Party elected Clements after he eliminated Hutchison from the governor's race. No one questions that he is the party's leader, he says.

And he plans a decisive role in the 1980 presidential battle.

"It will be an active role. I certainly will represent the people of Texas," he said. "I know I am absolutely opposed to Mr. Carter."

Long before his victory over Hill, civic leaders from his hometown began making overtures to attract the 1980 Republican national convention to Dallas.

"I think that would be marvelous. I think my election will add to our chances to get it," the Highland Park High School graduate said.

"I'm sure the Republican Party would realize they will be in a friendly meeting place," he said, noting fellow Republican John Tower's re-election also would attract the national GOP.

"I will give my assistance in any way whatsoever to further this effort," Clements added.

But before he leads Texas Repubicans into the 1980 ring, the former U.S. deputy defense secretary must play ball with the overwhelmingly Democratic Legislature.

No problems there, he said confidently.

"Those are both conservative bodies," he said of the House and Senate. "Their leadership is conservative."

Clements met with Speaker Bill Clayton and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby last week to discuss his relationship with the Legislature, composed of 156 Democrats and 25 Republicans.

"We're totally in agreement that we will fully communicate, we will cooperate and our programs will coordinate," he said.

Moroccon king to arrive in U.S. Monday

RABAT, Morocco (AP) — King Hassan II of Morocco, one of America's closest friends in the Arab world, flies to Washington Monday to give President Carter what the king calls "a geography lesson."

Moroccan officials said Hassan's talks with Carter would go "far beyond" Morocco's most immediate worry, the stalemated three-year-old guerrilla war with the Algerian-sponsored Polisario independence movement in the former Spanish Sahara.

The 47-year-old monarch is gravely concerned, the officials said, over the spread of Soviet and Marxist influence in Africa and the Middle East and is alarmed by what he sees as American blindness to possibly disastrous consequences.

Still trying to die by starvation

Convicted murderer transferred

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A condemned murderer trying to commit suicide by starving to death was transferred from Texas' Death Row to a state hospital for the criminally insane Saturday after prison doctors testified that continued force-feeding could kill him.

David Lee Powell, 27, has refused to eat since Sept. 26, after he was sentenced to die by injection for the machine-gun slaying of Austin police officer Ralph Ablanedo.

District Judge James F. Warren ordered Powell transferred from a Texas Department of Corrections hospital ward after hearing testimony Saturday from Dr. Ralph Gray, TDC clinical director and Dr. Terence Feir, chief of TDC Mental Health Services. Prison officials said Powell would be transferred to the maximum security Rusk State Hospital in East Texas Saturday afternoon.

"David Lee Powell wants to die," Feir told TDC attorney, Assistant Attorney General Bruce Green. "But he wants to die by being killed. He wants to involve as many people as possible and he wants to make it as protracted as possible.

"By forcing us to tube-feed him, he involves us in his dying process. If the tube-feeding fails, by not keeping him alive, in his mind, we have assisted in his death."

Feir said Powell, a former University of Texas honor student, is a "very bright, intelligent individual, able to make choices for himself. And he has a firm determination to die."

Prison doctors insert a tube through Powell's throat twice a day and pump a mixture of milk, sugar and raw eggs into his stomach.

Gray said the force feeding has caused a "serious tenderness" in Powell's esophagus and he was afraid continuation of the feedings might cause the esophagus to rupture.

"We are faced with a very serious dilemma," Gray said. "Continued force feeding could result in complications that could lead to his death. He's not bad now, but I searched in my mind and I decided I needed some kind of legal decision."

Powell, who weighed only 130 pounds when he transferred to TDC Oct. 6, has gained 20 pounds since the force feedings began Oct. 9. Gray said Powell is "malnourished at present, but quite clear mentally, and he is firmly determined that he will not eat."

TDC spokesman Ron Taylor said Powell refused the force feeding for the third time on Thursday, when he "hid his head under a blanket and wouldn't come out."

Prison officials said doctors have not tried intraveneous feedings because they take even more cooperation from the patient than tubal feedings.

Gray said he became concerned about possible complications from the tube-feedings when he read a newspaper account of a force-fed English prisoner who died from a perforated esophagus.

"It shook me a little bit, not that I didn't know this possibility existed," Gray said. "I decided it was time to alert others to the possibility."

"I know how rapidly we execute people at the TDC. I see Mr. Powell as a long-term inmate."

Four alleged abductors arrested

Winemaking heiress rescued

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Police acting on information forced from a captured suspect raided a downtown house early Saturday, rescued a kidnapped winemaking heiress and arrested four of her alleged abductors.

One man in the house escaped, police said.

The victim, American-born Brianda Domecq de Rodriquez, 36, who was unharmed, later said she thought the nightmare was repeating itself when officers burst through the door of the hideout.

"I thought it was a new kidnapping," she said a telephone interview.

Mrs. Domecq de Rodriguez, a mother of two and daughter of wealthy Spanish wine merchant Pedro Domecq, was abducted by six men in a shopping center parking lot Oct. 30.

She was blindfolded and held in a house near the heart of Mexico City until the police rescue at about 1 a.m. Saturday.

"I learned to live blind," she said. "It was incredible."

Authorities had been informed immediately of the abduction but kept their involvement secret to "so as not to endanger the victim's life," said police spokesman Rodolofo Leam.

He said police had captured one of the kidnappers when he attempted to pick up a $5-million ransom.

"The ransom was completely recovered by the police and the kidnapper was forced to tell the police where the victim was being held," Leam said.

The family disputed this, however, saying the suspect was arrested at a restaurant as he dropped off one of a series of ransom notes to the family.

Leam said police had feared that the kidnappers were part of a terrorist organization, "but these men are not professionals. They are just common criminals."

KIDNAP VICTIM TELLS STORY — Brianda Domecq de Rodriquez talks with reporters early Saturday morning just hours after being freed from her kidnappers. The 36-year-old mother of two was held for 12 days by the kidnappers who demanded a five million dollar ransom. She was unharmed.

Mrs. Domecq de Rodriguez said, however, she believed the kidnapping was politically motivated. She did not elaborate.

She said her captors did not threaten her and treated her well.

The kidnappers telephoned her husband, Dr. Fernando Rodriguez Campillo, three times before they sent him a note that she had signed.

Born in New York City, Mrs. Domecq de Rodriguez grew up in Mexico City and attended American High School.

Mrs. Domecq's two children are boys, 15 and 10 years old.

Vacant hotel collapses

JOPLIN, Mo. (AP) — The front portion of the vacant Connor Hotel, a southwest Missouri landmark being prepared for demolition, collapsed this morning, trapping three workmen inside, authorities said.

The condition of the trapped men was not immediately known.

The Joplin public works director, Harold McCoy, said he understood the men had been inside the nine-floor structure dismantling steel girders in preparation for the hotel's dynamiting Sunday morning.

Emergency crews clawed frantically through the dusty debris in an attempt to reach those caught in the wreckage. Authorities said cranes and mining equipment were being brought in to help in the rescue effort.

The portion of the hotel which collapsed was 70 years old and covered about one-fourth of a block in downtown Joplin, a city of about 40,000 in southwest Missouri.

Another section of the picturesque building, which had at one time been on the National Register of Historic Places, remained standing.

In the other incident, a man living with the victim apparently cleaned out $275 in clothing and currency not his own when he hit the road.

Both incidents were reported Thursday.

FBI producing tapes

Davis trial goes 'show biz'

HOUSTON (AP) — The murder-for-hire trial of Texas millionaire Cullen Davis goes "show-biz" this week, and prosecutors hope the jury finds the plot credible and chilling.

"Good drama doesn't necessarily mean a good lawsuit," smiled prosecutor Jack Strickland of Fort Worth. "But it's going to be a good show."

The FBI production includes a video-taped encounter between Davis and informant David McCrory and features the tape-recordings that form the heart of the state's case.

McCrory, 40, state's key witness, is expected to testify by mid-week.

Prosecutors contend the tape recordings show that Davis discussed with McCrory a scheme to kill a Fort Worth divorce judge and others on an alleged "hit list."

The purported target, Judge Joe Eidson, 60, testified Friday about his role in the FBI scenario designed to trap Davis, 45.

Eidson posed last August 19 for FBI photographs depicting his blood-spattered body crumpled in the trunk of a car. He then secluded himself in a hotel room until after Davis' arrest the next day.

He said he was "shaken" by the episode.

Two FBI agents, an FBI photographer and Judge Eidson appeared for the state during the first week of testimony, mostly to provide the "technical predicate" for McCrory and the corroborative physical evidence.

"I'm sure everybody is anticipating the more dramatic aspects of the case," said Strickland, 35, the handsome, wise-cracking ace of the prosecutorial team.

"They want to see David McCrory, which is all well and good. But from my perspective, the star witness of the show is the tape recordings. The tapes are the hard physical evidence. And while it may seem very dry and very boring, I feel strongly that they are going to be the significant part of the case.

"The defense wants to put the focus of attention on McCrory. I tend to think that what we have here is David McCrory corroborating our main evidence, which is the tapes."

The million-dollar defense team views the tapes in a different perspective.

"Our position on the tapes is that they show only that there was a meeting between David McCrory and Cullen Davis," said Dallas defense lawyer Mike Gibson. "I don't think anyone at this juncture takes issue with that fact. But the tapes, both video and audio, can't be properly evaluated by the jury until they are put in the proper context of the overall picuture.

"And that won't happen until we have an opportunity to bring forth our witnesses ... and develop our defense series."

Strickland and Gibson disagreed also in their assessments of the first week's testimony.

For instance, Strickland said he thought that questioning of Eidson by defense lawyer Phil Burleson, "established our motive for us even better than we did."

He explained: "I think it clearly showed that (Davis' estranged wife) Priscilla came into the marriage with Cullen with literally nothing. There was a substantial possibility that Priscilla would leave the marriage with at least a good percentage of a lot."

Said Gibson of the state's witnesses: "I don't think they really laid a glove on us."

REDGRAVES LOSE — Actress Vanessa Redgrave and her actor brother Corin talk to reporters in London Friday following the loss of a court libel action against a London newspaper. The Redgraves and four other members of the Worker's Revolutionary Party face a bill for court costs of about $120,000 to $140,000. The six lost a defamation case against the London Observer and editor David Astor, and though a jury decided that an article in the paper had defamed them, their reputation had not bee materially injured, according to the jury.

Fireman sues federal court

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A Tampa fireman fired after surgery for a malignant brain tumor has sued in federal court to regain his job.

Doctors told Randall Kester, 34, that he could not work as a fireman because he was subject to epileptic seizures. They said the fire department should give him desk work. His transfer request was denied, and Kester was fired in June 1977. Kester's suit says the firing violated his constitutional rights and the Vocational Rehabilitation Act of 1973.

Ford to sell to China

DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co. says it has agreed to sell 700 heavy-duty and pickup trucks to China for an undisclosed price. The deal includes spare parts and tools, the automaker said.

Half of the trucks, to be shipped by September 1979, will be 21,700-pound F-600 flat-bed models; the rest, 8,550-pound F-350 pickups, Edson P. Williams, head of Ford's Trade Development Operation, said Friday. It is Ford's first equipment sale to China. Chairman Henry Ford II visited the nation earlier this year.

Farmer, wife slain

ONEONTA, Ala. (AP) — Two intruders demanding money used knives and guns to kill a farmer and his wife, then left their three children and the man's badly wounded mother for dead, authorities said.

Tony Nelson, 21, played dead after he was shot in the chest, then drove his wounded brother and sister to a hospital, where authorities were alerted. Arthur Lee Giles, 19, and Aaron Jones, 26, were charged with murder Friday in the deaths of Carl Nelson and his wife, Willene, both in their 60s. The children and Annie M. Nelson, in her mid-80s, were hospitalized.

FLorida woman wins suit

BRUNSWICK, Ga. (AP) — A Florida woman has been awarded $505,000 damages from a man serving a life term for her husband's 1976 kidnap-slaying. But a federal jury cleared a former police chief, three detectives and the convict's former wife.

Martha Pennington of Fernandina Beach, Fla., sued James R. McCormick, his former wife and the police officials in the death of her husband, Rhoe V. Pennington. She charged police hired McCormick as a drug informant, even though they knew he was prone to violence, gave him the gun used in her husband's death, and tried to help him avoid prosecution.

BACK IN OFFICE — Wayne L. Hays relaxes at his home and talks about his political plans the day after winning election to a freshman legislative seat. He says the sex scandal that forced him from his congressional office two years ago is behind him and that he has thought about another congressional bid.

Hays concentrating on new state office

BELMONT, Ohio (AP) — Wayne L. Hays, forced from politics two years ago by a sex scandal, admits he has considered another congressional bid. But for now, he says, he is concentrating on his role as a freshman state legislator.

Hays, 67, a Democrat and once one of the nation's most powerful congressmen, has won three elections since his affair with Elizabeth Ray became public. The latest was Tuesday, for a state legislative seat.

Asked if his re-entry to politics would lead to another congressional bid, Hays said: "Anybody would say I was a liar if I said I hadn't thought about it, but I haven't seriously thought about it."

His victory for the state legislative seat held by retiring Democratic Rep. A.G. Lancione was slim, less than 500 votes in the unoffical tally. Hays said it was his second-closest margin in a 30-year political career, second only to a 1950 congressional race.

"I was the recipient of one of the dirtiest and most untruthful campaigns that has been put on in Ohio during my lifetime," Hays said.

His opponent, Republican George Contos, 47, publisher of the trade journal "Coal Monthly and Energy News," said, "Voters need to be reminded that Wayne Hays used their tax dollars to put a mistress on his payroll."

Hays said what hurt him more than references to the affair was his opponent's charge that he had paid unduly low property taxes on his 160-acre farm — a charge Hays denied.

Hays lives on that farm with his second wife, Pat, 35, and they raise prize-winning dogs there. He divorced his first wife, Martha, in 1976 after 38 years of marriage.

He said he and his wife would rent either a townhouse or apartment in Columbus during the legislative session and live there part of the week. The capital is about a three-hour drive from Belmont.

"I've got a lot of things I want to do, but I'm pragmatic enough to know I'm not going to get them all done," Hays said.

For example, he said he wants to abolish the state Board of Regents, which regulates colleges and universities, and to clamp down on the Public Utilities Commission, which regulates utilities.

Police beat

Multiple charges filed against man in vehicle

A tire, rim and lug bolts were stolen from a vehicle parked on the lot of Jack Lewis Auto Sales, 403 S. Scurry, between 11 p.m. Friday and 8 a.m. Saturday. Value of the items was $200.

Johnny Williams, 631 NW 4th, reported that someone illegally entered his residence and took 10 phonograph albums valued at $65. The burglary apparently occurred between 8 a.m. and 10:15 a.m. Saturday.

Burglard did some $50 or more damage to the door of Clanton Auto Sales, 4th and Goliad, and additional damage to a cigarette machine. Damage to the machine and the amount of change taken in the burglary, which occurred between 6 p.m. Friday and 8 a.m. Saturday, was unknown.

A velvet bedspread was apparently taken from the Desert Sands Motel, 2900 W. Hwy. 80, around 10 a.m. today. Value of the bedspread was $30.

John T. Demoville, 1012 W. 3rd, was arrested for drunk in auto, failure to keep vehicle under control, fleeing and eluding a police offer and resisting arrest.

According to police reports, officer Joe Diliberto attempted to stop Demoville, who fled from the patrol car. When Demoville did stop, according to Diliberto, he attacked the officer, who was forced to call for reinforcements.

It required five officers to get the man into the patrol car, the same five to get him inside the station, and an additional two to get him upstairs to the jail. Demoville is being held on $600 bond.

One minor accident was reported Friday. At 6:20 p.m. a vehicle driven by Helen D. Ebling, 2805 Cactus, apparently went out of control and struck several State Highway signs located on US -87 near IS -20. Damage to the signs was estimated at $75.

James W. Martin, 18, of 309 Edwards, was riding his bicycle on Gregg Street when someone in a brown Cadillac opened their car door into Martin's bicycle, breaking the window of the car door and cutting Martin's hand. He was treated and released from Cowper Clinic after the incident which occurred at 5 p.m. Saturday.

Former Odessan loses in vote

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — Attorney Chancy Croft, defeated in his bid to become governor of Alaska in the recent general election, is a former resident of Odessa, Texas.

Croft lost to the incumbent, Republican Jay Hammond.

Croft's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Leland Croft, still reside in Odessa. Croft won the Democratic primary in September by a 272-vote margin. Hammond beat out Wally Hickel, a former Interior Secretary, for his party's nomination.

Education Board refuses to extend bilingual plan

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Watched by dozens of disappointed Mexican-American demonstrators, the State Board of Education refused Saturday to extend mandatory bilingual education through the fifth grade.

Instead, the board adopted a policy requiring bilingual teaching only through the third grade for those who need it.

School districts will have the option of adding fourth- and fifth-graders to the program if the districts can afford it. They also must provide "English language development programs" for children with limited fluency in English in grades 4-12.

A district must provide bilingual schooling only when there are at least 20 children in a grade who need it.

The policy represents second thoughts by the board. It voted tentative approval in June to a plan providing bilingual schooling through the fifth grade and adding a "good faith" effort at bilingual education to its accreditation standards for local districts.

Many school officials protested the plan as too difficult and expensive to implement.

The board's hearing room and the hallways outside were packed as it voted. Persons in the standing-room-only crowd held hand-painted posters proclaiming such things as "Bilingual Education Says Twice as Much" and "Children Have Only Those Rights Which We Choose to Protect." Some wore brown berets with brass crossed rifles infantry insignia.

Busloads of teachers and parents, totaling more than 200 persons, came from the Lower Rio Grande Valley and San Antonio. They were organized by the Texas Association for Bilingual Education, headed by Ramon Billescas Jr., director of migrant education for the Pharr-San Juan-Alamo school district.

"I want to support you in the Legislature, but you need to exert some leadership," Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi, told the board.

Truan said if the state does not act, federal authorities will mandate "a more far-reaching and better plan."

"I would like to see us do one thing ourselves," said Truan, author of the 1969 law establishing bilingual education in Texas.

The crucial vote was 10-4 against a motion by board member Ruben Hinojosa of Mercedes to add the fourth and fifth grades to the mandatory bilingual program.

As the demonstrators filed out of the hearing room without incident, one shouted at the board, "We'll see you in federal court."

Afterward, Rep. Gonzalo Barrientos, D-Austin, told a rally outside the building that board members voting against Hinojosa's motion were "idiotas" — idiots.

"I have another word for them, but I can't say it here," Rep. Paul Moreno, D-El Paso, said in Spanish.

Drug agency tones down estimates

WASHINGTON (AP) — Eight months after HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. touched off concern over paraquat-contaminated marijuana, a federal drug agency has toned down its estimate of the hazard posed to heavy marijuana smokers.

The heavy users still could run a risk of permanent lung damage from smoking Mexican marijuana tainted by the tasteless, odorless, colorless but poisonous herbicide, according to a final report released Saturday by the National Institute on Drug Abuse.

But the institute fixed the danger level at five marijuana cigarettes daily for a year, with each containing 500 parts per million of paraquat. It makes no mention of a risk for occasional smokers.

The institute, an agency within the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, had said in its preliminary report last March that the danger existed for anyone who for several months smoked three to five joints daily containing 450 parts per million of paraquat.

It also indicated in its preliminary report that there could be a risk for those who smoked less often or fewer contaminated joints.

In its final report, the institute also warned that pot smokers have more to worry about than just paraquat contamination. The institute said regular marijuana smoke contains more cancer-causing agents than tobacco smoke.

Califano's warning on paraquat last March 12 created a stir within the nation's marijuana-smoking community. Users reacted with fear about the safety of their marijuana and resentment of the U.S. role in supplying $35 million to Mexico to support spraying the herbicide on poppy and marijuana fields.

The report released Saturday was based on examination of Mexican marijuana confiscated by the Drug Enforcement Administration in California, Texas and Arizona in 1976 and 1977.

Thirteen of 100 lots were contaminated. Institute scientists said all 13 were in 61 lots seized after Oct. 22, 1976, however, so they pegged the contamination rate at 21 percent.

But they admitted they had no way of telling if 21 percent of the marijuana actually sold on the street was contaminated. The institute says it knows of no confirmed cases of paraquat poisoning.

The institute's 13 contaminated lots contained traces of paraquat ranging from 3 to 2,264 parts per million, with an average of 455 parts per million. However, only five of the lots contained more than 92 parts per million, the institute added.

The institute report said about 97 percent of any paraquat in marijuana is destroyed harmlessly when the cigarette is lighted. But it said the heavy smoker of a cigarette contaminated with 500 parts per million still could inhale 1 part per million with each joint.

Paraquat is used by some U.S. farmers for weed control in orchards and elsewhere. The government stipulates that the fruit cannot contain more than 0.5 parts per million before marketing.

Rent-a-wreck owner says

'Cream puffs they ain't'

SHREWSBURY, N.J. (AP) — Hard as he tries, Larry Cohen is nowhere near Number Two. Or three, or four. Status isn't his bag.

Cohen, a peppy number with a large, roomy exterior and, at 29, plenty of mileage left, is the proprietor of a fast-accelerating enterprise on the Jersey shore called Larry's Rent-A-Wreck.

"Cream puffs they ain't," he says of his unwashed fleet of squeakers and rattlers, "but if you want dependable wheels that will get you where you want to go at bargain rates, I'm the guy to see."

To see Larry Cohen, you drop in at his office — serviceable interior, clean upholstery, slightly worn carpet, H and AC — and try to get in a word between phone calls.

"Sorry, sir," he says again and again into a phone jammed between ear and shoulder, "not a car left on the lot. Try me Saturday."

The lot is a fenced dirt yard out behind the garage and body shop. It is where his 40 wrecks wait to be rented, but do not wait long.

"I could use 40 more," Cohen said. "I tell you, this is a can'tlose business. Well, I damn near lost my shirt there for a time, but not because business was slow. I overextended myself. Business has been good from day one."

That was nearly two years ago. Cohen owned a used-car lot. One day, staring idly at his inventory, he had a brainstorm.

"I wasn't looking to compete with the big car-rental agencies. All I was thinking was that those perfectly good cars ought to be put to use while they were waiting to be sold.

"I went to some local garages and body shops and told them if they had customers whose cars would be tied up to send them to me. I'd rent them a car they could use temporarily.

"After three months I was out of the used car business and into the rent-a-wreck business."

Cohen does admit, though, that he was not unaware of a man in Los Angeles who rented used cars.

"His name is Dave Schwartz. I contacted him. His operation is much different. Some of his customers are movie stars who want to travel unrecognized, or be campy. They want real clunkers. You know Californians.'

"What I rent are plain used cars. All right, some are very used cars, but not wrecks. That's just for advertising. I couldn't get away with renting anything that isn't sound, not in this state.

"Now that's not always the case. I have a 6-year-old Cadillac.

JUST NEEDS A LITTLE WORK — Larry Cohen, owner of the "Rent-A-Wreck" car rental agency, shrugs as he points out a rusted panel on a 1972 Pontiac soon to be rented. Cohen, who plans to fix up the car before putting it on the road, says there is a great demand for his "slightly used" rental cars.

Democrats, yes; Republicans, no

Need for campaign spending law?

HOUSTON (AP)—The chairman of the Texas Democratic party says the legislature should take a long, hard look at election laws concerning campaign financing and his Republican counterpart answered, "baloney."

Billy Goldberg said it may be time for legislation to limit campaign spending in state races because the "average person just doesn't have the money to challenge a multimillionaire who can use his own money and suffer no burder."

GOP State Chairman Ray Barnhart said, "that is the phoniest issue I have ever heard and I say baloney. This is typical of the so-called humanitarians who say they want to serve mankind but do nothing but give the average guy the shaft."

Goldberg, during an interview, said he wanted serious legislative consideration to set "a maximum amount to be spent during a campaign. You know we have been taught that anybody and everybody can become president. With the amount of money now being spent by some candidates that is no longer true."

Republican Bill Clements, who spent somewhere between $5.2 and $6.4 million, won the Nov. 7 gubernatorial race and will become the first GOP governor in Texas in more than 100 years.

Earlier reports listed Clements' expenditures at the $6.4 million figure, but the Dallas oil drilling company owner later said the figure was closer to $5.2 million.

The Democratic candidate, state Attorney General John Hill, reportedly was outspent 2-to-1 by Clements.

Barnhart, also in an interview, said, "What is more noble than a man who earned his wealth and wants to give something back to his state and to his country? What is wrong with a man who has no financial worries to go out and try to do something he thinks is best for all of the people? It sure beats taking a million dollars and flitting it away in Monte Carlo on the turn of a wheel."

The Republican chairman added, "The Democrats think Hill should have inherited the governor's office simply because he had held other public offices.

"Take all the money Hill has spent over the years to gain name recognition and it would be more than Bill Clements spent. Remember Bill had not been feeding at the public trough all these years. He was not known and had to gain name recognition. You limit campaign spending, then you restrict the system and you are giving the Democrats a freebie and of course, that is what they want."

Goldberg said perhaps the legislature should consider a bill to require that two-thirds of a candidate's funds come from contributions, rather than from the candidate himself.

The Democratic chairman said, "In the case of Mr. Clements, he guaranteed $4.2 million in loans for his campaign. Now he may go to supporters seeking their help in repaying the money.

"That means we will never know the names of contributors to his campaign. After the election the names of those who donate money to pay off the loans do not have to be released. Thus, no one will ever know where the money came from.

"This may not be a legal violation, but I consider it a moral violation," he said.

Barnhart said, "I hope the people don't fall for that kind of garbage. It is stupid and contrary to the elective process. When you put a on campaign spending, then it is Katie bar the door and down the drain goes the free election process. It would limit citizens' participation.

"Most of the so-called reforms are phony and would only serve the vested power interests," he said.

Pretrial solicitation is Monday

EDINBURG, Texas (AP) — State prosecutors will try to succeed where federal prosecutors failed, as pretrial motions in the murder-solicitation case of suspended Hidalgo County District Attorney Oscar McInnis are heard here Monday.

McInnis has been named in a state indictment alleging he plotted in April to have a friend's ex-husband lured into Mexico and killed.

In June, a Brownsville federal grand jury indicted McInnis, 62, and Patricia Parada, 24, of McAllen, in connection with alleged plot. Both were also named in subsequent perjury indictments.

However, skillful arguments by defense attorney Frank Maloney of Austin, convinced U.S. Dist. Judge Robert O'Conor that there were no grounds for the federal conspiracy charge. The perjury counts also were dropped.

Federal prosecutors have appealed O'Conor's dismissal of the indictments.

Miss Parada was not indicted by the state grand jury.

The state prosecution — led by special prosecutor Michael Hinton of Houston — will ask visiting State District Judge Vernon Harville of Corpus Christi to move the trial out of the Rio Grande Valley. Interim District Attorney Preston Henrichson said widespread frontpage publicity of the case will make it difficult to find an impartial jury here.

Maloney said the defense will seek a local trial.

Attorneys who have kept a close eye on the case say McInnis probably would benefit from a local trial. The veteran prosecutor is still highly respected in the county and last week was unopposed in his bid for a fourth term as the top law enforcment official.

The prosecution has subpoened area newsmen in an attempt to document the widespead publicity.

The defense has countered with about 25 motions for the judge to consider.

Maloney said the defense will argue that state and federal investigators improperly entrapped McInnis. Much of the evidence was gathered by a tape recorder concealed on a prisoner who McInnis allegedly asked to arrange the slaying of Noe Villanueva. McInnis purportedly promised to aid the prisoner's parole efforts in return for carrying out the alleged plot.

A recently enacted state law regarding entrapment will be the basis of the defense argument, Maloney said.

A defense motion filed here claims that McInnis' attorneys "will show as a matter of law that the defendant herein was entrapped by agents of the United States government and of the State of Texas."

McInnis' legal problems were complicated Frday when the state filed a disbarment suit against him. The local prosecutor already had been disqualfied pending a removal suit filed by the Texas Prosecutors Coordinating Council.

'Sick leave' not meant at largess

One of the more annoying aspects of the bureaucracy to the taxpayer — whether it be municipal or federal — is the practice of allowing employees to build up a backlog of sick leave for the sole purpose of providing an extra cash bonus for themselves at the time of their retirement.

The purpose of the 'sick leave' is to prevent an employee from having to take a cut in income for medical reasons beyond his control. It was never intended to be viewed as a right to additional income in the event that the individual never gets sick during his employment.

BE THAT AS IT may, existing regulations on some levels of government allow an employee to do just that, if he is fortunate enough to avoid taking sick leave during his career, he receives a cash bonus equal to what he would have taken in sick leave.

On all too many occasions, that can amount to quite a score for the individual.

This is a complete misconstruction of the intent of sick leave provisions and costs the taxpayers millions of dollars annually. There is no doubt but that architects of some of the plans knew just what they were doing when they wrote the legislation offering such largess to the Civil Service workers.

Some of the states and municipalities are drawing up legislation to eliminate the practice, and for good reason.

ALL AGENCIES who depend on tax money for their existence should do every thing they can to tighten their laws and ordinances governing sick leave payments.

Grandfather clauses are being written into such legislation, which means employees presently on the payroll who would receive payment for such credit, as they had been promised. The proposed laws would forbid new employees to receive any payment for unused sick leave.

Such laws would eventually apply to all employees but it would take a long time before it would apply to everyone.

Cheap fares

Art Buchwald

WASHINGTON — The airlines are trying to make it up to people who have to pay more for flying in coach than those who fly on special thrift rates.

A barrage of newspaper, magazine and TV commercials are now informing us that the airlines really "revere" their "full-fare" passengers, and are making sure they get treated better than those on discount fares.

FOR ONE THING, the people who pay full coach fare will be seated in the middle of the plane just behind those in first class. The discount passengers will be placed in the rear of the craft where no one can see them.

Coach passengers will have their own check-in lines and presumably first crack at the plane's free magazines.

The reason for the sudden decision to advertise the advantages of full fare, as opposed to discount, is that the airlines have had a backlash from businessmen who travel all the time and feel they're being taken for a ride. No one likes to sit next to a person who has paid 30 to 40 percent less to go to the same place and arrive at the same time.

I believe the airlines will have to do more than just set the discount people in the back of the plane to placate the people who pay full fare. Stronger measures must be taken.

I foresee in the not too distant future that, after the coach passenger, has been seated in the middle of the plane, the discount passengers will be loaded on board in leg irons. They will be driven to the back of the aircraft by a giant black-bearded man who is stripped to the waist and craking a long whip.

ONCE IN THE back, they will be shoved down on wooden slats and chained to the bulkhead. The man with the beard will be their stewart. He will walk up and down the thirft section aisle shouting, "All right, you scurvy. There will be absolute silence in this section of the plane. Anyone who opens his mouth will get a taste of the whip on his worthless tourist back.

"Now this is the drill. Because we are flying over water part of the time, pay attention to these safety precautions. In case of the unlikley event of an emergency, a saw will be lowered from above you so that you can file off your leg irons and the chains on your wrists. There are emergency exists in the front of the plane. They may not be used until you pay a surcharge of $40.

"Once we are in the air we will be serving a delicious meal to passengers up front, consisting of vichyssoise, roast duckling with orange sauce, wild rice with raisins, and a Chateau Mouton Rothschild, 1969. As for you riffraff back here, we will pass around this wooden bucket of watery gruel, which the trusty will put in your slop bowls.

"EACH PASSENGER will be offered a choice of coffee, tea or milk. If he doesn't guess the right one, he will be hung by his thumbs from the luggage rack. One more thing, if any of you are planning to escape into coach class — forget it.

"This 747 has a snake-filled moat separating the cabins.

"All right, you miserable wretches. We're ready for takeoff. Are there any questions?"

"Sir, what is the movie playing today?"

CRACKKKKKK!!!!!!!! "Take that you penny-pinching cur. No one is entitled to a movie in discount class. Where the hell do you think you are — on some kind of vacation?"

Infant feet normally appear 'flat'

Dr. G. C. Thosteson

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What causes a baby's feet to suddenly go flat? My boy began walking a short while ago and I noticed that his arches have fallen. They used to be normal. Is this dangerous? Can anything be done? — C. P.

I doubt there is cause for concern. When a child begins to stand the arches flatten somewhat. This is normal and may continue for a year or so until the leg muscles get the strength to hold the arch in the normal position. Muscles in the legs as well as in the foot are involved. The chubby foot may give the appearance of flatness.

Your pediatrician can reassure you on this. The loss of the baby fat pads in the foot will cause a marked change in appearance. Occasionally, a serious leg muscle problem can be detected, but that would cause distinct and persistent flatfoot-like symptoms. This is readily detected by the physician.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have heard of a substance, in the testing stage, which coats the stomach and intestines to prevent absorption of calories, thus bring weight loss. I'd like as much information on it as I can get, how it works, etc. — M. K.

Never heard of it and I doubt it exists. If you want to cut down, don't depend on never-never-land programs as the one you suggest. If you need help, send for my booklet, "Lost Secrets of Reducing," which a good many readers swear by. For a copy, send 50 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to me in care of The Big Spring Herald.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: After taking the Pill for an extended period, I am experiencing emotional problems, including depression and anxiety. I can think of little in my personal life to account for depression. Could the birth control pills be a factor? — R. A. R.

A survey of physicians several years ago indicated that personality changes occur in some users of the Pill. And, in fact, one of the five chief reasons for discontinuing the Pill was listed as depression. Strangely, other studies show no correlation between Pill use and depression.

So, where does that leave you? Well, one way to find out is to use some other form of birth control temporarily and see if going off the Pill improves matters. There is no known cause-and-effect relationship between hormones in the Pill and depression. This has led some authorities to lay the depression to psychological factors. A woman's body produces the same hormones found in the Pill at the time of ovulation. Also, menstrual depression usually occurs at or just prior to menstruation when the woman's hormone levels are relatively low.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Are there any bad effects from drinking too much milk? My 13-year-old son has been drinking a gallon a day for the past couple of years. His eyes roll and twitch and blink, and he has no control over them. Could this be caused by drinking so much milk? — Mrs. S. G.

You should never have allowed this two-year milk binge to go on. It's difficult from your letter to guess what the eye-rolling and blinking may mean. Suffice to say, drinking that much of anything is probably satiating him to the point where he gets little else. Milk is a good food, but the adult needs much more variety. He could be lacking important vitamins, chiefly vitamin C, if he is not adding citrus products to his diet. This lad is very likely in serious nutritional trouble and his diet should be corrected.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: How do you know if you need extra zinc? — H. Z.

If you get your daily quota of protein, you are very likely getting enough zinc. Vegetable protein is a poor source of zinc, however. Meat, liver, eggs, oysters, and other seafoods are relatively high. (Vegetarians note.) The body uses only a part of the zinc provided in a daily intake of protein. The rest is eliminated.

Finds little help

Jack Anderson,

WASHINGTON — Somewhere in a school classroom, 6-year-old Christopher Larson is attending first grade under an alias. He is tall for his age, has brown hair, brown eyes and an olive complexion. He is not a criminal; the reason he has an assumed name is that he has been kidnapped.

His abductor is known to authoriteis. His name is John Lance Larson, but because he is Christopher's father, he is effectively beyond the reach of the law.

FIVE YEARS AGO, Christopher's mother, Vicki Gambrell of Savannah, Ga., divorced Larson and won custody of their year-old son. Larson was granted carefully controlled visitation rights. In June of last year, Christopher was picked up by his father and taken to Fort Jackson, S.C., where Larson lived with his mother and stepfather. Mrs. Gambrell hasn't seen her son since.

Statistically, what happened to the 28-year-old mother and her son is not unique. An estimated 100,000 children are abducted each year by divorced or estranged parents. But the case history of Christopher Larson lends a human dimension to the problem of legally sanctioned kidnapping.

For 16 months, Vicki Gambrell has tried every means she could afford to find her son. She and her mother first contacted Army authorities at Fort Jackson. But Larson's stepfather, Maj. Theodore Konkle, was the base provost marshal, and the Army refused to take action. Konkle and his wife, Christopher's grandmother denied any knowledge of Larson's whereabouts.

FROM GEORGIA and South Carolina judges, Mrs. Gambrell obtained court warrants which ordered Christopher's return. But since the boy's father could not be located, local and state police were unable to do anything. Even though Larson was known to have worked as a cabdriver in Columbia, S.C., and his Social Security number was thus on record, he could not be tracked down by the city's legal aid agency. Social Security officials, it seems, refuse to divulge information except in "special cases," and Mrs. Gambrell's case was not deemed special enough.

Christopher's mother cannot even locate her husband's mother and stepfather. Maj. Konkle has retired, and the Army refuses to disclose his present address.

Mrs. Gambrell Appealed for help to Rep. Bo Ginn, D-Ga., and Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C. But federal authorities will not intervene in parental kidnapping cases unless there is proof the child might suffer serious bodily harm.

Assitant Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti ruled that Larson's conviction on drug charges "does not show danger to the child." A spokesman for the Justice Department said there is "no federal role" in situations like Christopher's. "The FBI can't be out chasing parental custody cases," he said.

Uniform legislation at the state level would help Mrs. Gambrell, but only 21 states have adopted a model child-recovery statute that would encourage greater interstate police cooperation.

Meanwhile, Christopher's anguished mother, who is recovering from a four-week nervous breakdown, is still trying to find her child with limited means at her disposal. One method of tracking down kidsnatchers is through driver registration records, but Mrs. Gambrell and her mother can't afford to hire private investigators for such painstaking work.

In recent years, Rep. John Moss, D-Calif., and Sen. Alan Cranston, C-Calif., have led an unsuccessful effort to pass a federal law forbidding parental kidnappings. Citizens who wish to express their support may write to Moss at Room 2354, Rayburn House Office Building, Washington, D.C., 20515. Cranton's address is Room 229, Russell Senate Office Building, Washington, D.C. 205010.

Footnote: We tried to reach Maj. and Mrs. Konkle through a relative to get their side of Christopher's story. They never returned our calls.

DEVOUT SMUGGLERS? Aquasi-religious sect, the Ethiopian Zion Coptic Church, is suspected by federal narcotics agents of being deeply involved in smuggling drugs into this country. Their suspicions stem from a dramatic confrontation on the high seas last summer.

According to confidential government files, a U.S. Coast Guard cutter patrolling off Tampa Bay spotted a suspicious vessel, the 55-foot White Cloud. Whent he cutter attempted to flag down the White Cloud, the boat took off. During a three-hour chase, the White Cloud tried to ram the Coast Guard cutter, and the boat's crewmen were seen jettisoning packages into the water.

When the White Cloud was finally overtaken and boarded, a few ounces of marijuana were discovered. Five crewmen — one of whom had been arrested earlier in the year in the seizure of 38,000 pounds of marijuana — were arrested on charges of impeding federal officers.

A secret report to the Drug Enforcement Agency stated, "The White Cloud is owned by the Ethiopian Zion Coptic Church, a quasi-religious organization involved in smuggling marijuana and cocaine from the Cribbean and South America to the U.S. by vessel. Its members are considered unpredictable and danger."

My answer

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: My husband and I are in our 70s. He is getting so forgetful it is very frustrating, and when I try to straighten him out he gets mad and we end up in an argument. What can I do? — S. W.

DEAR S. W.: It sounds as if your husband might have a medical problem. You should check with your doctor. If this is the case, he cannot help it that he forgets things. You should be very careful about the way you correct him. No doubt he finds his forgetfulness even more frustrating than you do.

If there was ever a time two people need mutual support and love in a marriage, it is in a time of difficulty and not always easy. You need to develop patience and understanding. Instead of growing cold, your love for each other can grow deeper and more beautiful.

I believe Christ can help you in this situation. God loves you, and wants to give you strength and new love if you will turn to Him. Your letter does not indicate that you have ever turned your life over to Jesus Ch..st, and I urge you to do that by a simple act of faith.

Look at what the Bible has to say about love. Look at the 13th chapter of First Corinthians, which tells us about love: "Love is patient, love is kind. It does not envy, it does not boast, it is not proud. It is not rude, it is not self-seeking, it is not easily angered, it keeps no record of wrongs. Love does not delight in evil but rejoices in the truth. It always protects, always trusts, always hopes, always perserves" (I Corinthians 13:4-7, New International Version).

Do it yourself

If you don't have an oil well

By MARJ CARPENTER

In case you thought all oil wells were owned by big companies with massive amounts of funds, you should see one oil well near Fort Stockton.

If there ever was a do-it-yourself project, the well which has been owned now by three different owners, is definitely the best example.

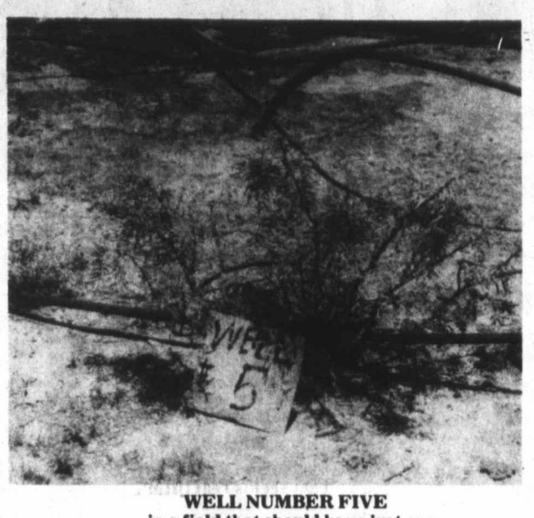
The neighbors in the area call it the Grass Roots Field.

Production was too shallow and the oil too heavy for an oil company to mess with it. And an early landowner decided he'd just get his own oil out of the ground.

He took the advertisement on television, "If you don't have an oil well, get one," seriously.

The well starts producing 60 feet from the surface, more like a water well than oil.

He attached a rope to a little motor and has one rope that takes the place of a belt. At the bottom of it, there is a pulley that hangs loose.



WELL NUMBER FIVE
..in a field that should have just one

The weight keeps the pulley down in the oil and water. As the rope goes through the fluid in the hole, it wets the rope and brings it to the surface.

Part of the gear used is an old Clorex bottle. Half of the Clorox bottle presses against the rope that is bringing out the oil and water. That fluid is then taken down in a one-inch plastic flow line to the separator.

At that point, the Grass Roots oil man drains the water off. He has a small circulating pump that pumps the fluid from the system into the tank where he seels it.

He retrieves a barrel a day. That means he makes about $3,600 per year on each well. He has several wells now in that shallow field. Nobody else wants to mess with it for that amount.

The stock tank holds 50 barrels. The separator tank holds five barrels.

The oil was first discovered in 1940 but it was so heavy that regular type pumps used in the oil industry just would not bring it out of the ground.

Normally oil is about the consistency of water. The first land owner went everywhere trying to get somebody to buy and drill his oil.

When they wouldn't do it, he set up his own oil well. It has been sold several times since. Nobody gets rich but nobody loses much either.

A normal oil well has about 20 to 40 acres around each well. This field has two or three acres between wells.

The power comes from a nearby power pole with plain old extension cords running out across the ground.

The 1800s were supposed to be the ingenious years in America when the big inventors such as Eli Whitney and Thomas Edison and Alexander Graham Bell were around.

Nobody around seems to recall for sure who started the amateur set up at the Grass Roots oilfield near Fort Stockton.

But whoever did was a determined and ingenious man. He had oil, but nobody who wanted to bring it out. But he did. And he brought it out cheaply and in a manner that nobody would believe.

Apparently, he had another motto, if you have oil — get it out of the ground one way or another.

Weary Congress 'working' again

WASHINGTON (AP) — Campaign weary members of Congress already are involved in another round of politicking, this time to determine who will wield the power when the House and Senate convene in January.

No one expects a serious challenge to House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., or Majority Whip Alan Cranston, D-Calif.

Senate Minority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., also should keep his leadership post without serious opposition, but beyond that there's likely to be some scrambling.

Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, the minority whip, faces a challenge from Sen. Harrison Schmitt of New Mexico, the former astronaut who is bidding for a leadership post after only two years as a senator.

In the House, Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, could face another challenge from Rep. Phil Burton, D-Calif., who lost to Wright by one vote in the Democratic caucus two years ago.

The House leadership survived the off-year election intact, but with 41 new Democrats and 36 new Republicans, anything can happen when the two parties hold their organizational caucuses in December.

Easier to foresee are some Senate power shifts, particularly those involving committees that will handle some of the most important issues.

If President Carter decides to try again to rewrite the tax laws he calls a "national disgrace," he is likely to find the Senate Finance Committee, headed by Sen. Russell Long, D-La., even less hospitable than a year ago to attempts to dry up the three-martini lunch.

In the 95th Congress, Carter could count on support in the Finance Committee from Sens. William D. Hathaway and Floyd Haskell. Both lost on Tuesday.

The Foreign Relations Committee, which will have primary jurisdiction over a Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty with the Soviet Union, will undergo a major turnover.

Three Democrats, Chairman John Sparkman, Dick Clark of Iowa and Muriel Humphrey of Minnesota and three Republicans, Clifford Case of New Jersey, James Pearson of Kansas and Robert Griffin of Michigan will not return in January.

It's likely the panel will continue to have a majority that would support a SALT agreement, but it's equally probable that opponents will fill some of the vacancies.

Members of the Armed Services Committee will lead the opposition to SALT. Carter could count four Democrats on that panel as likely supporters of the treaty. Two of them were defeated on Tuesday, Thomas McIntyre of New Hampshire, whose vote for the Panama Canal treaties probably cost him his seat, and Wendell Anderson of Minnesota.

Perhaps, the most startling change in the Senate will be the number of young faces in a club once dominated by septuagenarians who shuffled through the corridors of power and left a trail of cigar smoke and an air of disdain for the under-60 crowd.

Forty-three members of the new Senate will be under 50 and 10 will be in their thirties.

Drug conspiracy charges lands six in jail

PATERSON, N.J. (AP) — Six Colombian natives were in jail early today on drug conspiracy charges after a raid at a Paterson luncheonette netted three pounds of cocaine with an estimated street value of $1 million, authorities said.

The Thursday night seizure was the largest drug haul in Paterson's history, according to Passaic County Assistant Prosecutor Frank Santora.

Paterson Police Capt. Thomas Mahull said restaurant owner Gilberto Arango, 40 was in the Passaic County Jail in lieu of $50,000 bond. Arango was charged with possession, possession with intent to sell and sale.

Jailed on the same charges were Robert Alvarez, 29, Hector Ramirez, 38, Aurentino Rios, 31, all of Paterson, and Marthaluz Velez, 24, of Jamaica, N.Y. German Candalaria, 31, of Corona, N.Y. was charged only with possession.

Agents from the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration and local authorities indicated the cocaine shipment was expected.

"We were waiting for the connection to show up," Santora said. "The package arrived Thursday night."

A preliminary hearing was scheduled Nov. 28.

First major snowstorm barrels through north

By The Associated Press

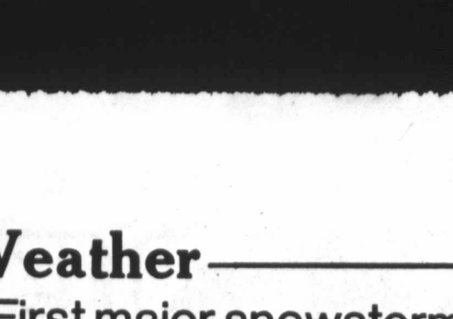
The season's first major snowstorm barreled through Rocky Mountain states today, leaving at least five persons dead and a foot of snow in parts of Montana, South Dakota and Wyoming.

Four storm-connected highway deaths were reported in Montana, and another in Wyoming on Friday as the storm dropped 13 inches of snow at Lander, Wyo., and 3-to-6 inches over Montana, Utah and other parts of Wyoming.

National Weather Service forecasters had expected the main storm to head eastward across the Colorado Rockies today. But the storm is now expected to reverse itself and drop more snow — up to 4 inches — across western Colorado, eastern Utah, most of Wyoming and east of the Continental Divide in Montana through tonight.

The storm brought an abrupt end to the region's lengthy Indian Summer. The mercury climbed to 72 degrees in Denver on Thursday, but plunged to 26 degrees there by Friday afternoon.

The storm produced heavy snows that staggered South Dakota and dropped more than a foot of snow at Deadwood and Lead. A winter storm watch remained in effect for today.



WEATHER FORECAST — The National Weather Service forecast rain today for parts of New Mexico, Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Kansas. Snow is predicted for a band of states from eastern Washington extending east to parts of the Dakotas.

Two teenagers jump to death

NEW YORK (AP) — Two teenaged Chinese-American sisters jumped to their deaths from the roof of their six-story Manhattan apartment building, police said.

Betty Hwang, 17, and her sister Jean, 13, were pronounced dead shortly after arriving at Bellevue Hospital Friday night.

Police said the older girl jumped first. Yelling "Goodby everybody," she smashed onto the roof of a parked car and rolled onto the sidewalk.

Seconds later, the younger girl teetered on the roof's edge. Looking down, she saw her 16-year-old sister Jenny. She screamed "Jenny!" and hurled herself to the concrete below.

APPENDICITIS IS STILL A KILLER

Despite all our wonder drugs, a neglected acute appendicitis us as deadly as it was fifty years ago. The average hospital admits 19 appendicitis cases a month.

They are difficult for even a physicianto diagnose. Symptoms are similar to acute indigestion. Vomiting and diarrhea may occur. Pain may become unbearable. If you ever have such symptoms which do not soon go away, never take a laxative which can cause the appendix to burst, throwing its poison into the system. Instead, call your physician. We will rush any needed medicine.

Museums doing little for prevention

Artwork gradually decaying

ROME (AP) — Bugs, pollution, moisture, excessive heat and cold are bringing gradual decay to most of the world's great masterpieces, and museums are doing little to prevent it, art experts warn.

At a conference here this week, museum curators and directors cited these examples:

—Energy blackouts and brownouts during fuel crises have cracked and split dozens of Renaissance paintings.

—Bronze disease, or corrosion by salts, are gnawing away at thousands of archeological objects throughout Mediterranean countries whose art conservation budgets cannot cover protection.

—Even masterpieces in the pope's private apartments had to be removed recently after detection of flaking because of central heating.

"People tend to think works of art are eternal but ... the unpleasant truth is that many are falling to pieces. I would say this is the case of 90 percent of the art works around the world," said Dr. Bernard Feilden, director of the Romebased International Center for the Preservation and Restoration of Cultural Property.

The organization, founded by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization nearly 20 years ago, has 61 member countries. It sponsored the week-long conference on climate control, which brought together for the first time architects and other museum experts.

"In the past, all the limelight has been on thefts and vandalism, but there has been little talk about climate control, which inflicts much more damage on a global, far-ranging basis," said Garry Thomson, scientific adviser to London's National Gallery and author of the first exhaustive study of the subject.

Among the problems: Dry air causes painted wood panels to warp. Woodscreens and sculpture split. Parchment and other fibers become brittle and crack.

"The scourge of 20th century has been central heating," noted Simon Levie, director general of Amsterdam's famous Rijksmuseum, the only museum in Europe with fully air-conditioned quarters. High costs have deterred the Louvre in Paris, Madrid's Prado, Leningrad's Hermitage and the Vatican Museum from having total climate control.

Humidity also can cause oil paintings to buckle. Sensitive glass can crack. Even visitors' coats bring the outside environment indoors.

Dr. Robert Matthai, charman of the American Association of Museums Energy Committee, said at the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, 5,000 daily visitors add up to a ton of moisture to the building's interior.

Mattahi, who works at New York's Museum of Natural History, said climate will "bedevil" museums for years. "In the case of energy crises, hospitals don't get cut off but museums do, and art works suffer," he said.

Architects were criticized at the meeting, Matthai said, "because every building since 1970 was built without energy in mind." In many cases, architects built spectacular structures without a thought to daylight variations or vibrations from traffic.

He said this was changing and predicted that in 50 years, more and more museum pieces will be encased in bubbles or buffered cases.

Showcase paintings such as the Mona Lisa will travel more easily due to technological advances in humidity control. Those at the meeting told of protection provided by zeolite or silica gel which shield paintings from changing environments.

Other suggestions include use of disinfectant doormats to avoid bacteria dragged in on visitors' shoes; elimination of carpeting which causes static electricity; moving stone sculpture inside.

But costly mistakes often occur. A few years ago, a perfectly preserved 3,000-year-old wooden barge 100 feet long, only one of a kind, was discovered in Egypt. A special museum was constructed around the bat near Cairo, but the boat crumbled to pieces due to the change in climate.

Fielding named director of development at Tech

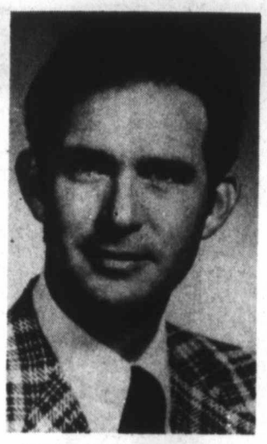
LUBBOCK — George M. Fielding has been named director of development at Texas Tech University, President Cecil Mackey has announced.

Formerly associate director of development and assistant to the vice president for development and university relations at Texas Tech, Fielding has been associated with the university since 1972.

Prior to returning to the academic field, the 36-year-old Fielding was assistant manager of the Piedmont Corp. of El Paso, manager of production control for the Ben Miller Boot Co., also of El Paso, and manufacturer's representative of the GAP Corp.'s floor division in San Francisco.

After being graduated from The University of Texas at El Paso in 1965, he served as adminstrative assistant to the UTEP dean of students.

Fielding recently was awarded the M.S. degree in management by the University of Northern Colorado.



GEORGE M. FIELDING

A lieutenant commander in the U.S. Naval Reserve, he served for three years on active duty as public affairs and special services officer for Commander Fleet Activities in Japan.

Fielding is a member of the Southwest Rotary Club of Lubbock, former loaned executive to Lubbock United Way campaigns, member of the board of directors of Llano Estacado Heritage, Inc., of Hobbs, N.M., coach of a Lubbock Soccer Association team and sponsor of the Texas Tech Women's Service Organization.

Married to the former Nancy Sonnichsen, he is the father of Shawne, 9, Gustie, 6, and Matt, 2.

"Texas Tech attracted a number of outstanding candidates for the position of director of development over the past several months. We are indeed fortunate to have had a young man of Field's experience on our staff and among the candidates. Certainly he has proven his unique abilities over the past six years at this university," Dr. Clyde E. Kelsey Jr., vice president for development and university relations, commented.

Mrs. Eugene Smith, the new development director's mother, resides at 310 Midget St., in San Angelo.

Fielding, was reared in Fort Stockton and graduated from the high school there in 1960.

Kissinger to speak

Dr. Henry A. Kissinger, former U.S. secretary of state, will address members and guests of the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce-Board of City Development at the group's annual meeting next Friday in the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center Exhibit Hall. Retiring U.S. Rep. George Mahon, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, also will be on the program.

Kissinger is tentatively scheduled to arrive that afternoon at 5:00 at Lubbock International Airport's gate six. A 20-minute press conference at the airport is being planned.

The banquet will begin at 7 p.m., with Kissinger scheduled to speak at 8:15 for approximately 30 minutes. The topic of his speech has not been released, but probably will relate to the area of current U.S. foreign policy. Advance copies of his speech will not be distributed. He will be leaving Lubbock immediately following the banquet.

Security measures are not expected to be as strict as last year when former President Gerald Ford was the featured speaker; however, a detail from the Secret Service will be accompanying Kissinger.

Arrangements have been made to place a raised platform opposite the head table for use by the television cameras. We are hopeful that cameramen will be allowed in the asiles during the banquet and the first few minutes of Kissinger's remarks. All lighting requirements must be taken care of before the banquet begins.

A patchbox will be available for use by the electronic media.

Vote recount shows no major variance

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A recheck of Tuesday's election returns shows Republicans John Tower and Bill Clements are still winners in their hot contests with Democrats Bob Krueger and John Hill.

"There is no great variance at all with the Texas Election Bureau," Secretary of State Steve Oaks told a news conference late Friday.

He said his "informal canvass" showed more votes for all four candidates in the two races with Tower's winning margin over Krueger in the U.S. Senate race increasing about 2,900 votes. Clements' winning margin over Hill decreased by 175 votes.

Oaks' informal telephone canvass of precinct reports in all counties showed Tower winning by 14,902 votes and Clements by 18,437.

Oaks said his totals included TEB figures for the governor's race in Dallas County and for both races in Bell County because new figures were not available Friday.

Oaks stressed that his "informal canvass" was not to be considered "absolute final and totally accurate."

He said the phone survey was untaken now to give candidates who might be considering an election contest time to make a decision.

Any request for a recount in voting machine counties would have to be made before counties offically canvass the votes on Monday.

Oaks' canvass showed Krueger with 1,135,218 votes, an increase of 3,677 votes over the 1,131,541 last reported by the TEB.

Writing, citizenship test

Texas scores low

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — "Johnny can't write" is a national complaint, but newly released scores from a standardized test indicate the problem might be more acute in Texas.

The Texas Education Agency reported Friday how 35,000 Texas 9-, 13-and 17-year-olds fared on writing and citizenship tests developed by the National Assessment of Educational Progress.

Young Texans in the sample generally did well on the citizenship test — at least when compared with their counterparts in a national sample, although there were notable lapses.

But the overall message of the writing test results was there is much need for improvement.

Charles Nix, associate education commissioner for planning and accreditation, said "the next big step" will be to find out why the Texas students did so poorly at writing.

"One question we might want answer is just how important do adults in Texas consider writing as a skill," Nix said.

In the test, 13-year-olds wrote letters to their principals suggesting improvements in their schools.

Nationally, 66 percent of the 13-year-olds failed to write a satisfactory letter — a poor showing in itself — but the Texas figure was 81 percent.

The 17-year-olds wrote job applications and were expected to tell what grade in school they had completed, describe the jobs they wanted and tell an employer how to reach them.

Only 8 percent of the Texas students gave all three essential elements, compared with 18 percent nationwide.

A smaller sample of students wrote essays, which were graded on writing mechanics.

Only two percent of the 9-year-olds, 2 percent of the 13-year-olds and 3 percent of the 17-year-olds in the Texas sample wrote fully developed paragraphs.

Comparable nationwide figures were 4 percent for 9-yearolds, 2 percent for 13-year-olds and 11 percent for 17-year-olds.

"Texas students in all three age groups used fewer total words per essay and fewer sentences and paragraphs per essay than did their national counterparts," the report said.

Hines' party took flight to El Paso

After M. M. (Blacky) Hines, pipeline superintendent for Cosden Petroleum Co. (now Cosen Oil & Chemical Co.), observed his 25th anniversary with the firm, the late R. L. Tollett, Cosden president, treated him to a party in El Paso.

Hines was told to invite 25 people to make the trip with him via American Airlines, if they so chose. Most took advantage of the offer but some, distrustful of flying, drove on ahead.

Among those who participated in Hines' anniversary celebration were W. L. McClendon, company carpenter, now retiring and living in Big Spring; Sonny Fuller, still active with the company; Thurman Gentry, retired foreman for treating and pumping, now living here; and the late Whitey Weeks, who came over here from Penwell.

Also Logan (Mileaway) Baker, former foreman, now retired and living here; John Harrison, shift foreman, retired, living here; Sam Moreland, shift foreman, now retired; the late J. D. Stritcher, who worked with Doug Orme in the Cosden business office; and G. L. Monroney, retired and living at Forsan.

Also E. W. (Ernie) Richardson, plant superintendent, now retired and living here.

Vincent gains 7th producer

The Vincent (lower Clearfork) field of Howard County gained its seventh producer with completion of Harper & Lawless, Midland, No. 7 W. S. Cole, link well, one location north and south of production, and 22 miles northeast of Big Spring, to pump 125 barrels of 26 gravity oil, with gas-oil ratio of 204-1.

Production was through perforations at 4,305-376 feet, which had been acidized with 3,500 gallons.

Drilled to 4,405 feet, 4½-inch casing was set at that depth.

Location is 2,202 feet from the north and 2,722 feet from the west lines of 14-26-H&TC.

Bulgarian orchestra a hit

Music lovers get a treat

By MARJ CAPRENTER

Music poured out of the City Auditorium Friday night with a flowing gentleness from the 75-piece Sofia Philharmonic Orchestra of Bulgaria.

Probably the best music presented in Big Spring at any concert in many years, the group played Beethoven and Mendelssohn for an evening of pure delight to the lovers of classical music.

All of the trappings were missing. The orchestra took down the backdrops and the front curtains so that nothing would absorb the sound of those eloquent violins.

The members of the orchestra had been in the United States only one week and the Concert Association was lucky enough to get them because they were en route from El Paso to the Panhandle.

They spoke no English and were carefully watched since they are from behind the Iron Curtain. They methodically packed up their instruments, changed their clothes, and walked down the street to the Holidan Inn.

They don't even talk enthusiastically to each other until they are out of distance of other people.

But their music speaks for them. They have been celebrated abroad for three decades and they are true virtuosi.

They are exciting and convincing and their young conductor, Dimiter Manolov, had the poise of a much more experienced maestro.

The orchestra is first rate. There is no question about it. They present their music simply as music with no big fanfares, and no special appointments.

At the beginning of the program, one quiet-speaking man simply said, "The first two numbers on the program will be substitutions," and gave the names of the selections.

Many did not catch the names of the substitute numbers, but they were immediately captivated by the Russian composer, M. Glinka's overture "Russlau and Ludmila."

It was followed by Beethoven's Concerto in B Flat with Mincho Minchev playing the piano for the three movements. He amply presented the strength and dexterity of Beethoven concertos.

The second portion of the concert was Felix Mendelssohn's Italian Symphony, inspired by his Italian visit when he was 21 years old. The bass violins marching percision in the Con Moto moderato and the French Horns perfect mellow harmony in the Saltarello were especially pleasing.

But too much cannot be said about the violins, violas and cellos as the string sections played with absolute perfect precision and expression.

When one cello string snapped, the cellist behind handed her cello to the player, and removed his without a pause or break in the melody in Mendelssohn's Andante con moto movement of the symphony.

The opener for the concert season will be impossible to beat in musical excellence. However, other programs during the year will feature some enjoyable evenings for the music lovers.

Lubbock woman is injured

Some influenza vaccine obtained by health dept.

The Big Spring-Howard County Health Department has received a limited amount of Influenza vaccine from the Immunization Division of the Texas State Department of Health. The vaccine, composed of killed Influenza viruses, is given by injection.

The Influenza vaccine, distributed this fall, has been updated to offer protection against three influenza strains which recently caused the disease, Russian, Texas and Hong Kong.

Whole adult vaccine will be available on each Friday from 8 a.m. to 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. at the Health Department, 201 Lancaster, for those persons over 65 years of age and those 26 through 64 years who are considered by their physicians to be a high risk. In those cases, a note from the physician will be necessary.

The Health Department also has a limited number of doses of whole youth vaccine for those considered high risk between the ages of 13 and 25. Two injections will be given with an interval of one month. A note from the physician will be necessary and a parent or guardian must sign an informed consent before the vaccine can be administered.

Anyone with questions regarding Influenza or the vaccinations can contact their physician or the Health Department.

Clements' win creates tremors

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Bill Clements' election as Texas' first Republican governor in a century sent shock waves in at least three directions.

—There's a new look coming in state government circles.

—There will be shifts of power in both the Texas Republican and Democratic parties.

—There's a new voice speaking for Texas on the national level.

The first tremors of Clements' new regime were felt within hours of the election returns. Telephone lines throughout Austin and elsewhere buzzed as Texas' 76,330 state employes tried to find out where they stood.

During his campaign Clements promised to cut state government costs including a cut of 25,000 state employes through attrition.

Only about one-third hold merit system civil service-type jobs with guaranteed employment. The remainder are in "exempt," positions — they serve at the pleasure of their department directors, who can be influenced by the governor.

There are 282 employees in the governor's office alone and another 250 work for the Texas Department of Community Affairs, whose director is appointed by the governor.

Another large goup of employees works for the secretary of state, who is appointed by the governor.

Most of the commissions and boards that run the 200 state agencies are appointed by the governor, usually for six-year terms with one-third being filled each two years. This means that during Clements' first four-year term he will be able to appoint two-thirds of the members of most state commissions and boards.

The Republican governor also expects to be a new legislative leader for the 25 GOP state senators and representatives, and probably a number of conservative Democrats as well.

It is traditional in Texas for the governor to be titular head of his state party as well, and past Democratic governors have pretty much moved the party the way they wanted it to go. This means Clements becomes the Texas GOP leader above State GOP Chairman Ray Barnhart, and to some extent above Sen. John Tower, who until now was the highest elected GOP official in Texas.

Some observers are wondering if the election of Clements, a Dallasite, will revive the long time feud between Dallas and Houston for control of the Texas Republican Party. Barnhart, a backer of Ronald Reagan, gained the state chairmanship last year after a close battle with Ray Hutchison of Dallas.

As Democratic nominee for governor, John Hill had already taken over the state party and installed his personal choice, Billy Goldberg of Houston, as state chairman. With Hill's defeat, the party leadership chair is vacant, with leadership duties probably to be taken over by Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, and maybe others.

Hobby has said he expects there to be a meeting of Texas Democratic leaders, after the early December mid-term national convention in Memphis, to examine "the altered posture of the party."

Clements has already served notice he expects to be an active spokesman at the national level for Texas, particularly on energy matters. He will inherit the Texas state office in Washington which has been operated as a direct extension of the Austin office.

Clements' leadership on the national level may climax in 1980 when President Carter is expected to be seeking re-election and John Connally may be one of those seeking the GOP nomination. As state party leader, Clements could lead the big Texas delegation to the national GOP convention and then play a big part in the campaign following.

Bentsen likely will refrain from taking much of a hand in the Carter campaign if the Democratic president's reputation with Texas voters is not good.

Texans visit vice premier

MADRID (AP) — Clad in Spanish grenadier uniforms and wigged, a group of 40 Texans and their wives Saturday called upon Spain"s vice premier and defense minister, Lt. Gen. Manuel Gutierrez Mellado, as part of a week-long visit to thank Spain for its help in the U.S. war of independence two centuries ago.

Led by San Antonio industrialist Carlos Barrera, the Texans presented Gutierrez Mellado some souvenirs.

The minister handed the visitors some books dealing with participation of Spanish Gen. Bernardo de Galvez Gallardo y Ortega at the battle of Pensacola where British forces were defeated.

The grenadiers, from San Antonio, Corpus Christi, Houston and Galveston, called on King Juan Carlos Friday.

A hit in Las Vegas

Harra returns Nov. 18

Johnny Harra, Elvis look alike and sing alike, will be back in Big Spring Nov. 18 straight from a successful tour in Las Vegas.

He broke records at the Silverbird Hotel and Casino in Las Vegas. Prior to going to Vegas, Harra made a stop here at the Brass Nail for a sellout performance. He could not remain for the week, but promised to come back and he is keeping the promise.

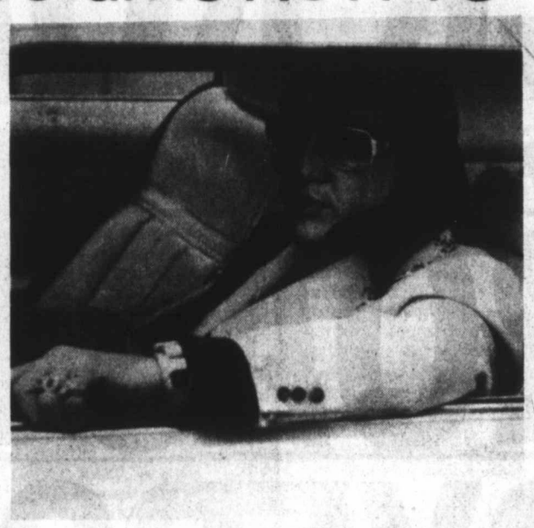
This time, Johnny Harra will appear in the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum on Saturday, Nov. 18 at 8 p.m.

Tickets are on sale for $7, $6 and $5 depending upon the seat. It is sponsored by Charlie Wash and the Brass Nail

Every night has been like opening night at the Silverbird when Harra steps out on the Continental Theatre stage, according to entertainers in that city.

Harra is emulating the King of Rock 'n Roll, Elvis Presley.

Harra is not impersonating the King. Like those others who are impersonating Elvis today, Harra does wear the jeweled costumes, does the expected moves on stage and does sing the songs made famous by Elvis. But this is natural with him.



JOHNNY HARRA
. . . due back in Big Spring

For Johnny Harra to sing, sound and look like Presley is not just an overnight thing. He has been doing so for over 18 years, ever since he was a young boy growing up in Kansas City.

"I always thought Elvis was the greatest singer alive", Harra commented. "When I first heard him, I liked what I heard and wanted to be like him."

So, when Harra began to sing, it was only natural that he sang Elvis songs. But something strange began to take place — he sounded and looked like the "King". As he grew older and his voice became stronger, the resemblance between the two men began to get even stronger, until audiences could not separate the two from their minds.

"Pretty soon, people were telling me I should stick to doing Elvis songs and begin to dress like him", Harra explained. "I never really wanted to copy him, but it just happened that way."

And the audiences have responded to Harra. During his first engagement earlier this year at the Silverbird, the six-foot, 210 pound singer broke all kinds of attendance records. Those records were broke nightly as people crowded into the large showroom to see him doing what comes naturally — singing both Elvis's and his own songs!

Research director will speak at EPE meeting

William W. Owens, director of research for Amoco Production Co. in Tulsa, Okla., and a 1978-79 distinguished lecturer for the Society of Petroleum Engineers of AIME, will speak at a meeting of the Permian Basin Section of SPE. The meeting is scheduled for next Tuesday at 6:30 p.m. at the Odessa Country Club in Odessa.

"Improved Assessment of Reservoir Production Potential Through Application of Geologic and Engineering Studies" is the title of Owens' talk wherein he will address technological advances in understanding the basic properties of reservoir rocks and the fluids they contain, as well as the character of the reservoirs.

These include the assessment of rock properties in tight gas sands and the integration of geologic and engineering data for improved reservoir description in waterflood and enhanced recovery projects. Results of studies on cores from three different tight gas productive horizons will be discissed, together with the manner of utilization of these data.

Owens graduated with the degreeof petroleum engineer from the Colorado School of Mines in 1947. He joined Stanolind Oil & Gas Co. (now Amoco Production Co.) in the research department, obtained an MS degree in petroleum engineering from Oklahoma U., and continued with Amoco in various research and supervisory assignments in the area of flow in porous media, formation evaluation, and well logging.

Nebraska upsets OU

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Fourth-ranked Nebraska ended six years of frustration Saturday at the hands of Oklahoma, defeating the top-rated and previously unbeaten Sooners 17-14 on short touchdown runs by Rick Berns and I.M. Hipp, and Billy Todd's tie-breaking 24-yard field goal with 11:51 to play.

The victory, Nebraska's ninth in a row following an openinggame loss to Alabama, thrust the Cornhuskers into the driver's seat for an Orange Bowl bid. They clinched at least a tie for the Big Eight title, taking a one-game lead over Oklahoma with one game left.

Todd's field goal marked the first time Nebraska had scored against Oklahoma in the fourth quarter since the Cornhuskers' classic 35-31 triumph in 1971 en route to a second consecutive national championship.

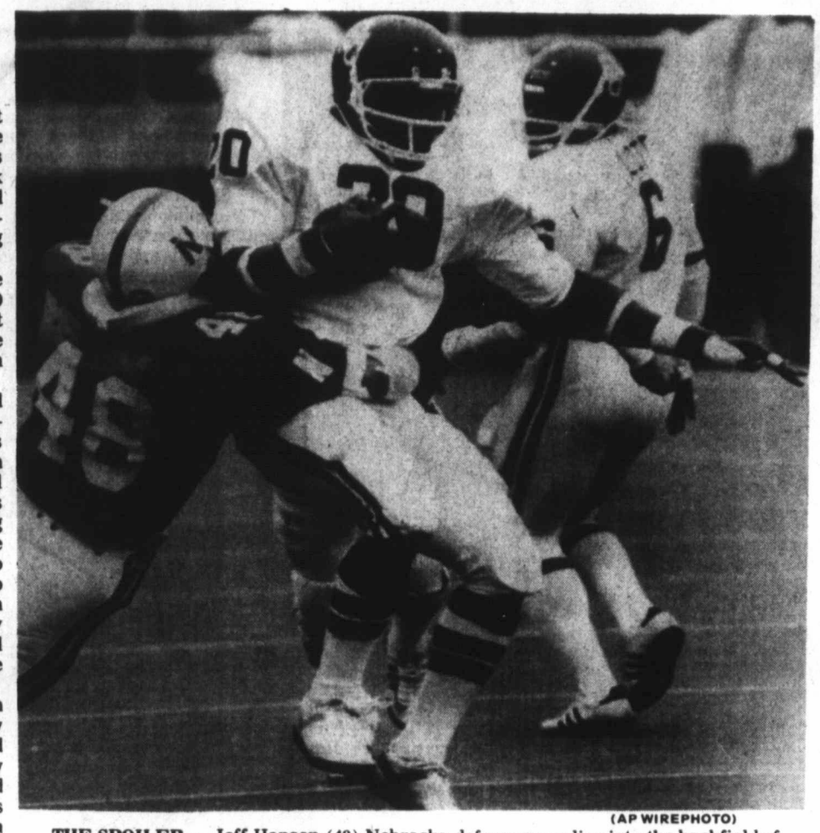
Fumble-plagued Oklahoma, which bobbled the ball away six times, blew two scoring opportunities in the final 8½ minutes. Billy Sims, the nation's leading rusher, fumbled at the Nebraska 20 and again at the 3-yard line, the latter with 3:27 remaining. Nebraska then ran out the clock.

Sims, who was averaging 155.2 yards per game, carried 25 times for 153 yards and scored Oklahoma's touchdowns on runs of 44 yards in the first period and 30 yards in the third quarter. But he saw his national record-tying streak of three consecutive 200-yard games ended by a gang-tackling, hardhitting Nebraska defense.

Sims' fumble at the Nebraska 20 with 8:10 remaining negated what would have been one of the most controversial calls in college football history.

Following Todd's go-ahead field goal, Oklahoma freshman Kelly Phelps was clobbered on a kickoff return by John Ruud and the ball squirted loose, Nebraska's John Lindstrom recovering near the Oklahoma 10. The officials, however, ruled no fumble and gave the ball to Oklahoma at its 19 although television replays clearly showed that Phelps had fumbled before he hit the ground.

Nebraska's touchdown came on a 5-yard run by Berns at 4:54 of the second period and an 8-yard dash by Hipp at 5:35 of the third quarter. Both tallies followed lost Oklahoma fumbles, the Cornhuskers driving 57 and 50 yards for their scores.



(AP WIREPHOTO)

THE SPOILER — Jeff Hansen (48) Nebraska defenseman slips into the backfield of Oklahoma to stop Oklahoma running back Billy Sims (20) after a handoff from Oklahoma quarterback Thomas Lott (6). Sims lost 1 yard on the play in first quarter action.

UH stifles Longhorns

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The daring quarterbacking of dashing Danny Davis and Kenny Hatfield's bull's-eye pressure field goal catapulted eight-ranked Houston to a 10-7 Southwest Conference victory over the sixth-ranked Texas Longhorns Saturday, all but clinching a Cotton Bowl appearance for the Cougars.

The game played under dreary skies with occasional light rain drew a crowd of 83,053 in Memorial Stadium — the largest crowd ever to see a football game in the Southwest.

Houston is now 6-0 in SWC play with only Rice and Texas Tech still on the schedule. It would take an incredible collapse for the Cougars not to earn at least a share of the SWC title and its second visit in two years to the New Year's Day classic as the host team.

Defending champion Texas is 4-1 in league play while the other conference teams have at least two losses.

The Cougars, featuring nearly the same cast that won the Cotton Bowl in 1976, scored 10 points in the third quarter and made them stand to down the younger but battling Horns.

Davis, the classy senior from Dallas, took Houston 57 yards in eight plays for a touchdown after a scoreless first half.

Davis ripped of a 29-yard keeper, his longest run of the year, then flipped a 25-yard pass to tight end Garrett Jurgajtis to set up Emmett King's two-yard touchdown run.

On the touchdown play, Davis kept the ball to the last instant then made a perfect pitch to King, who scored unmolested.

Hatfield recovered a Texas fumble to set up his own field goal that carried 33 yards just at the end of the third quarter.

Hatfield's field goal proved to be the winning points after Texas drove 72 yards in 11 plays with Johnny "Jam" Jones scoring from a yard out. The freshmen act of quarterback Donnie Little's 29-yard pass to tight end Lawrence Sampleton put Texas on the Cougar one.

The previous largest crowd for a game in the Southwest was 81,700 for Arkansas at Texas in 1972.

The largest crowd a professional team has ever drawn was 80,200 in the Cotton Bowl to see Dallas and Cleveland play.

There were only two threats in the scoreless first half.

Texas, now 6-2 for the year, drove from its own 49-yard line to the Houston 27 where a fourth down Randy McEachern pass fell incomplete. Texas passed up what would have been a 44-yard field goal attempt into a 10 mile-an-hour wind.

Seattle Slew wins

NEW YORK (AP) — Seattle Slew turned his farwell appearence into a one-horse parade Saturday by romping to a wireto-wire victory in the $103,850 Stuyvesant Handicap at Aqueduct.

The Tayhill Stables' 4-yearold colt, carrying the highest weight of his career, 134 pounds including Angel Cordero Jr., was clocked in 1:472-5 for the 1⅛ miles in scoring by 3¼ lengths over George A. Polk's Jumping Hill. Ruth E. Streit's Wise Philip finished third in the field of five, another 2¾ lengths back.

Razorbacks rob Baylor Bears

WACO, Texas (AP) — Three fumble recoveries by Dan Hampton and Mike Massey and a pass interception by Jim Howard paced No. 16 Arkansas to a 27-14 Southwest Conference victory over Baylor Saturday.

A Baylor homecoming crowd of 45,000 and a half dozen bowl scouts watched Arkansas raise its season record to 6-2, while Baylor fell to 2-7.

Jerry Eckwood capped a 67-yard second-quarter drive by scampering for a touchdown from the Baylor four-yard line and Eckwood and quarterback Ron Calcagni scored two thirdquarter touchdowns after Baylor bobbled near its goal line.

Hampton, a 242-pound tackle, set up Arkansas' second touchdown by jumping on quarterback Steve Smith's wild pitchout at the Baylor 11. Calcagni scored two plays later on a nine-yard run.

Massey, a linebacker, caught Walter Abercrombie's fumble in the air and ran five yards to the Baylor 23. Eckwood punched over from the two.

Hampton also stopped Baylor's most promising first-half drive by diving on Anthony Laws' fumble at the Arkansas five.

Howard, a defensive end, picked off Smith's screen pass on a second play from the Arkansas two and raced to the Akansas 35 to stifle another Baylor drive.

Baylor scored two touchdowns in less than a minute late in the fourth quarter. The first came on a 46-yard pass from Smith to Mike Fisher. Baylor then recovered an onside kick, and Smith threw nine yards to Ronnie Lee for another score.

SMU bombs Rice

HOUSTON (AP) — Southern Methodist's Darold Turner rushed for four touchdowns and quarterback Mike Ford and Emanuel Tolbert continued to etch their names in the Southwest Conference record book Saturday en route to a 58-0 victory over Rice.

SMU, which ended a three-game losing streak, capitalized on three Rice turnovers in the first half and hapless defense by the Owls to spurt to a 38-0 halftime lead.

A fumble by Rice freshman Weldon Meeks set up a 26-yard field goal by SMU's Ed Garcia and an interception by SMU's D.K. Perry led to a 34-yard touchdown pass from Ford to tight end Elton Garrett after only six minutes of the game.

Turner then took over the scoring avalanche with runs of six, one, one and one yards to stake SMU to its healthy halftime lead.

Ford, the nation's No. 2 passer, passed for 163 yards in the first half alone to move into third place for the most single season passing yards behind Rice's Tommy Kramer and SMU's Chuck Hixson.

Ford threw a 69-yard scoring strike to Tolbert early in the third quarter for the receiver's 10th TD catch of the year. Tolbert now is tied with former Texas Christian receiver Mike Renfro for most TD catches in one season with 10 apiece.

Garcia added field goals of 37 and 28 yards in the second half to equal the school record for most field goals in one game. Backup quarterback Jim Bob Taylor hit Clement Fox for a 31-yard touchdown pass with 2:53 left in the game.

Rice receiver David Houser also moved up in the record book, pulling ahead of Baylor's Lawrence Elkins into third place on the all-time SWC receptions list. Houser finished with four catches for the day for a 147 career total.

Houser now trails only Renfro and SMU's Jerry LeVias.

Ford finished the game with 18 completions on 29 attempts for 315 yards. Ford now has 2,539 yards for the season, trailing only Kramer with 3,316 and Hixson with 3,103.

Willis Reed resigns as Knick boss

NEW YORK (AP) — Willis Reed, unable to recreate as a coach the success he had achieved as a player, has been fired as coach of the New York Knicks.

Red Holzman, who coached Reed and the Knicks to National Basketball Association championships in 1970 and 1973 before being replaced by Reed in 1977, has been named coach of the club through the 1979-1980 season.

The moves were made after the Knicks returned home from a tumultuous West Coast road trip during which Reed had demanded a vote of confidence from management. Reed met Friday with Madison Square Garden President Sonny Werblin, and instead of getting the support he had sought, he was fired.

"We didn't make the decision based on the won-lost record," Werblin said at a news conference today. "Willie Reed made statements that created an embarrassing situation for us.

"We hope to have a happy family here. Nobody can run a business or a sports team when it is divided. And the lack of unity on our team was apparent."

Holzman said he hoped to be create the cohesiveness which the Knicks have lacked during the past two seasons under Reed.

"We've got good personnel," said Holzman. "There is a need for a little more discipline with the ball, more discipline on defense and for us to do more team things. That's what we have to work on."

The Knicks also announced they had reached an agreement with veteran guard Earl Monroe, who had been a holdout this season because of a contract dispute. Monroe, the Knicks' second leading scorer last season with a 17.8 average, agreed to a one-yar contract and will rejoin the team Sunday.

Monroe made $375,000 last season and had been seeking $300,000. The Knicks' most recent offer reportedly was $200,000.

"We arrived at a deal that was satisfactory to both parties," Werblin said without disclosing terms of Monroe's contract.

Reed, the pivotal figure as center on the Knicks' championship seasons of 1970 and 1973, wasn't as comfortable in his role as coach.

Holmes defends title with KO

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Larry Holmes is ready for any opponent, but his next one is not expected to be Muhammad Ali.

"I'll fight Norton or Young or anyone else the WBC tells me to," said Holmes after beating up Alfredo Evangelista before knocking him out in the seventh round of Holmes' first World Boxing Council heavyweight championship defense Friday night.

Richie Giachetti, Holmes manager, said that Jimmy Young would be a logical choice as Holmes' next challenger. Then if all goes well, Holmes would probably fight the winner of a Ken Norton-Earnie Shavers fight set for Feb. 18, probably in Las Vegas. Norton knocked out Randy Stephens in the third round of a preliminary to the Holmes-Evangelista fight at Caesars Palace.

As for Ali, recognized as champion by the World Boxing Association, Holmes said he talked to the 36-year-old Ali Thursday and "he said he would not fight me. I said 'quit.' He said he would when he's ready." There have been indications that Ali is ready.

Evangelista, the 23-year-old European champion from Spain, went 15 rounds in a losing title bid with an out-ofshape Ali May 16, 1976.

Against the 29-year-old Holmes, Evangelista never had a chance. It was a "mugging."

"It wasn't an easy fight," said Holmes.

That was a kind thing to say.

Evangelista, his face a swollen mask of pain, blood streaming from a cut beneath his left eye, was moving forward when Holmes launched a sweeping right hand.

The punch caught Evangelista on the side of the jaw and dropped him on his face. He struggled to his knees, then pitched on his face again and was counted out at 2:13 of the round by referee Richard Green.

It was the first knockout, or knockdown, in heavyweight championship fighting in 97 rounds. The last knockout before Friday night was by Muhammad Ali over Richard Dunn in May, 1976. Since then the Ali-Evangelista, Ali-Norton, Ali-Shavers, the two Ali-Spinks fights and Holmes-Norton passed without a knockdown.

While it was a right that knocked out Evangelista, it was really the left jab that shattered any dreams he had of winning.

Packers hoping history repeats

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The Green Bay Packers have a history of playing well against the Dallas Cowboys, and sorely need the trend to continue at Milwaukee County Stadium Sunday (3 p.m. CST).

Then again, the nationally televised showdown is equally important to the defending Super Bowl champion but currently struggling Cowboys.

The Packers beat Dallas in 1966 and 1967 for National Football League championships, upset the Cowboys in 1972 as a springboard toward a surprise division title and upset them again for their first regular season victory under Coach Bart Starr in the fourth game of the 1975 season.

Dallas (6-4) is a six point favorite this time, and the Packers need another upset to protect their one game lead over Minnesota in the National Conference Central Division. The Vikings, who have won three games in a row, are eight point favorites to beat Chicago Sunday.

Trojans batter Washington

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Quarterback vvot McDonald threw for two touchdowns in the rain and fullback Lynn Cain rushed for 128 yards on 25 carries Saturday as fifth-ranked Southern California downed defending Pacific-10 Conference champion Washington 28-10.

The Trojans' victory set up a conference championship showdown with ninth-ranked UCLA next Saturday and eliminated the Huskies from the Rose Bowl picture. Southern Cal is now 5-1 in Pac-10 play and 8-1 overall, while 19th-ranked Washington fell to 5-2 and 6-4, respectively.

Split end Spider Gaines caught a 72-yard scoring pass from Huskies quarterback Tom Porras in the third quarter.

Women like Denise Steffen, shown trying out for the Cincinnati Bengals cheering squad earlier this year, are becoming attractions in their own right.

Pats host Oilers

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — Some members of the New England Patriots are tempted to look beyond Sunday's National Football League collision with the defense-minded Houston Oilers.

"You can't help thinking about the playoffs but we have to be careful it doesn't control us," says quarterback Steve Grogan. "It's in our hands. We just have to be sure nobody sneaks up on us."

The Patriots are 8-2 and have won seven straight games.

Veteran punter Jerrel Wilson says the Patriots "have as much talent as any team I've ever played on, including the 1969 (Kansas City) Chiefs."

New England has a tenuous one-game lead over the Miami Dolphins in the AFC East and Houston Coach Bum Phillips isn't expecting the Patriots to let down.

Seagraves rallies by Stanton

Charlie Espinoza raced five yards for a touchdown with 3:56 remaining to give Seagraves a 13-8 win over the Stanton Buffaloes.

Espinoza's dash capped a 74-yard march in ten plays to rally the undefeated Eagles to an important District 5-A victory. The win insures Seagraves a spot in the state playoffs.

Seagraves scored in the first quarter when halfback Keith Ellard plunged over from the one to cap a 28-yard drive that was set up by a bad snap from center on an attempted Stanton punt. Davis Morgan kicked the extra point.

The game was a stalemate until early in the fourth quarter. Stanton wingback Richard Perez found daylight in his own territory and raced 57 yards before being hauled from behind by Johnny Castro on the Eagle 10.

Four plays later tailback Todd Smith scored on a pitchout to make the score 7-6. Fullback Mitch Elmore plowed over for the important two-point conversion.

On their next possession, Seagraves marched down the field, covering 74 yards in 11 plays. Four minutes remained when Espinoza made his game winning jaunt. The try for two failed.

Stanton made one more drive toward a victory, but quarterback Tommy Morrow was dropped for a loss on a fourth down try.

SMU downs Finland

DALLAS (AP) — Southern Methodist's basketball team decided Texas hospitality did not include losing, so the Mustangs eked out a 94-93 win Friday over the touring Finland National Team.

Brad Branson's 5-foot jump shot with 41 seconds remaining did the trick. Branson tossed in a total 20 points and led his team in rebounds with nine for the game.

"We played well tonight, well enough to win," said Finnish Coach Robert Peterson. "It seemed that every time we got close we could never pull away."

SMU Coach Sonny Allen was surprised by the Finnish talent. "Those guys can really shoot the ball," he said. "Those just weren't 12-foot shots they hit. They bombed it from way outside."

Bill Allen was the top Mustang scorer with 21.

Norton KOs Stephens

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Ken Norton has kept alive his hopes of regaining the World Boxing Council's heavyweight title by his third round knockout of Randy Stephens. His upcoming fight with Earnie Shavers could earn him a shot at WBC champion Larry Holmes.

Norton, who lost the WBC title to Holmes last June 9, scored an easy win over Stephens on Friday night in a nationally televised preliminary bout to the Holmes-Alfredo Evangelista fight.

Promoter Don King announced after the fight that Holmes would meet Shavers — probably in Las Vegas — in a daytime fight next Feb. 18.

"I think the winner of my fight with Shavers should fight Holmes," Norton said.

Norton, 220½ pounds, put Stephens, 208¾, away at 2:42 of the third round with a sweeping left hook that caught Stephens on the jaw.

TCU holds off Stubborn TCU

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Quarterback Ron Reeves hit split end Brian Nelson with two touchdown passes, and fullback James Hadnot romped for 164 yards and another score as Texas Tech pinned a 27-17 Southwest Conference loss on Texas Christian Saturday.

Hadnot's 23-yard burst early in the fourth quarter gave the Red Raiders their second touchdown in 16 seconds and broke open a close contest.

Nelson took a 25-yard touchdown pass from Reeves in the first quarter that gave Tech a 7-0 lead.

After TCU's Greg Porter kicked a 23-yard field goal and Tech's Blade Adams booted a three-pointer from 22 and 19 yards, Horned Frog running back Jimmy Allen plunged over from one yard out to close Tech's lead to 13-10 in the third quarter.

Then, in a 16-second stand in the fourth quarter, Reeves hit Nelson with a four-yard touchdown pass and Hadnot exploded for 23 yards after TCU's Russell Bates fumbled the ensuing kickoff.

Hulme's kick sinks Coahoma

By NATHAN POSS

Colorado City's Gary Hulme kicked a 20-yard field goal into a stiff cold front with 3:04 remaining in the final stanza to score the only points in a hard hitting, emotional game Friday night.

The 3-0 Colorado City victory leaves them with a one-game advantage over Coahoma and Stamford with one game left in the district action. A Wolve win next Friday night over Winters would give Colorado City undisputed championship in District 6-AA. A loss would leave them tied with the winner of the Coahoma-Stamford game for the district title, but the Wolves would still advance due to the fact that they have defeated both rivals.

Both teams were able to move the ball throughout the night in the middle of the field, but defenses stiffened in fourth down territory.

Colorado City made the first scoring threat of the game late in the first stanza, but the Big Red defense held the visitors on a fourth and three at the 21.

Coahoma dominated the second period, but came away empty handed. The first of two scoring threats was keyed by a halfback pass from Ronald Sundy to Randy Phillips, good for a first down and 38 yards into Colorado City territory. Phillips made an excellent over-the-shoulder reception on the play, much to the chagrin of the Colorado City defenders. The Bulldogs picked up one more first down before the Wolves defense forced Gary Paige to attempt a 41-yard field goal. Paige's kick had the distance, but was wide to the right.

After a Colorado City drive was aided by a pass interference, Coahoma forced a punt and took over on their own 19.

Sundy raced aound left end and sprinted 25 yards into Wolf territory. Four plays and one first down later, however, a Bulldog ball carrier fumbled the valuable pigskin without being hit, with an alert Colorado City defender pouncing on the ball at his own 16. Their was just over a minute remaining in the half.

The third quarter was a punting duel between Coahoma's Gary Paige and Colorado City's Jay Feaster. Both teams were playing conservative football, seemingly waiting for a mistake by the opponents.

With 10:41 remaining in the contest, the Wolves put together the payoff march. It began on their own 19 and moved 78 yards in 16 plays before Coahoma tightened and Hulme booted the pressure field goal.

Colorado City sophomore fullback Doug Johnson, the game's leading rusher with 80 yards on 17 carries, picked up two first downs early in the drive with some outstanding extra effort.

Ricky Sanchez then found a hole in the middle of the line, broke through and cut back to his left on the way to a 33-yard gain inside the Bulldog 35. The Wolves, which used up over seven and a half minutes on the drive, used the bruising dives of the 200-pound Hulme to move inside the ten. Three cracks into the pits of the line moved the ball to the three and set the stage for Hulme's game winning kick. The pigskin was perfectly through the middle of the crossbars, clearing the bar by five yards.

Coahoma was not through. Quarterback Gary Gee connected with the sure handed Phillips for a first down into Wolf territory, but lanky safety Tony Truelove picked off Gee's next pass to thwart the Bulldog threat.

Colorado City ran three plays into the line trying to run out the clock, but Coahoma used up all three of their time outs in hopes of landing one last desperation drive. Feaster punted 33 yards to the Bulldog 33 with 1:18 remaining.

On the first play from scrimmage, Gee launched a bomb, but Truelove snared the aerial to ice the game for the Wolves.

Colorado City, now 8-1 and 6-0 in District 6-AA play, played flawless football in the turnover category. Coahoma had a slight 247 to 215 advantage in total offense, but the first half fumble and the two interceptions were too much to overcome in the jarring contest. Coahoma is now 8-1 and 5-1 in district action.

Garden City rallies by Loraine

GARDEN CITY — Held to a 7d7 deadlock during the first half, Garden City came to crush Loraine, 28-7, in District 3-B play here Friday night.

The win was the fifth in ten starts for the Bearkats. Loraine's record fell to 4-6.

Allen Jansa scored for Garden City in the opening period on an i-yard pass from Kevin Hirt.

Loraine got on the board before the period was out when Junior Martinez took a pass from Casey Merket and went in. The play covered 18 yards.

In the third quarter, Hirt scored on a four-yard run, enabling Garden City to move ahead. David Hillger added the clincher in the fourth on a one-yard run.

Bronchos subdue Steers

By MARIE HOMEYER

ODESSA — It was a comedy of errors for the Big Spring Steers Friday night as they were defeated by the Odessa High Bronchos 45-21.

Several key plays were wiped out or voided because of penalties. In the first quarter, Eddie Puga ran a kick off back for a touchdown. It was called back because of a holding penalty downfield.

In the second quarter, Joe Willie Jones intercepted an Odessa pass, but on a controversial call, was signaled for a pass interference. call.

Odessa got the ball back on the Big Spring 21-yard line. Three plays later Broncho halfback Scott Caywood scored on a 13-yard run.

Then, three minutes later in the same quarter, Mike Evans intercepted a pass. It, too, was of no avail because of a pass interference call. This time Odessa had a first-and-ten situation at the Steer 25-yard line. On the third play, Caywood scored on a 22-yard run around the left end.

In the fourth quarter, on another controversial play, Odessa's Glen Rhodes recovered a fumble by Eddie Puga on the Steer 35-yard line and ran in for the score. The play was controversial because the ball bounced off the ground before Rhodes recovered it. In high school competition the ball cannot be advanced if it touches the ground first.

Big Spring had eight penalties for 100 yards in the first half. Odessa had seven for 41 yards. The final tally showed the Steers with 10 infractions for 110 yards and the Bronchos with 11 for 63 yards.

The Bronchos put their first points on the board with 3:20 left in the first quarter. Charlie Whittington kicked a 38-yard field goal. That was the only scoring of the first period.

The next addition of points came after the controversial pass interference call. Caywood made the 13-yard run up the middle for the score. The extra point by Whittington was good.

On their next possession, and after another interference call, Broncho Caywood scored again and the extra point was successful.

The Bronchos scored the last touchdown of the first half when they received a Steer fumble on the 12-yard line. Broncho quarterback William Alfred passed to tight end Donny Stewart for the touchdown. The extra point attempt was good. The score at halftime was 24-0.

The Steers got on the board with their first possesion in the second half. A combination of runs by Puga and pass completions from Ricky Meyers to Joe Willie Jones set up the scoring. The touchdowns came on a 26-yard pass from Meyers to Jones with 8:06 remaining in the third quarter. David Manley's extra point attempt was good.

Odessa scored on the following drive. Alred completed a 20-yard pass to Steve Shannon and Whittington added the extra point to make the score 31-7 at the end of the third quarter.

On their next possession, early in the fourth quarter, Odessa scored again. This time it was on an 11-yard pass from Alfred to Stewart. The extra point was good.

The Bronchos' last score was the 35-yard run of Rhodes after the fumble recovery.

The Steers completed their scoring with two touchdown passes. The first came with 6:07 remaining. Billy Johnson completed a 20-yard pass to Mike Evans and Manley added the extra point. The last scoring of the contest was on a 34-yard pass from Meyers to Jones. A pass was completed to Dean Barriball for the two-point conversion but it did not count because of a penalty against the Steers. Manley then kicked the extra point.

Lyle now a Ranger in 10-player swap

NEW YORK (AP) — Sparky Lyle got his wish and the New York Yankees got theirs in a 10-player trade completed with the Texas Rangers Friday.

Lyle, the American League Cy Young Award winner in 1977, had fallen into disuse when the Yankee bullpen added free agent Rich Gossage last season. The situation angered him and he wanted to be sent somewhere else, where he'd get a chance at being the late-inning stopper again.

The Yankees obliged him by trading him to the Rangers along with catcher Mike Heath, infielder Domingo Ramos and minor league pitchers Larry McCall and Dave Rajsich. In exchange, New York received outfielders Juan Beniquez and Greg Jemison and pitchers Paul Mirabella, Dave Righetti and Mike Griffin..

Yankee President Al Rosen said the key player for New York is Righetti, a left-hander who won't turn 20 until the end of this month.

"We're all in love with Righetti," said Rosen. "We've got great reports on him. He's a left-handed power pitcher and (scout) Jerry Walker thinks we've got ourselves another (Ron) Guidry. I don't think that's possible, but it's nice to think in those terms."

Righetti was 5-5 with a 3.16 earned run average at Tulsa of the Texas League last season. What caught the eyes of the Yankees were his 127 strikeouts in just 91 innings.

To get him, the Yankees had to assemble a handsome package that included an undisclosed amount of money thought to be in the area of the $400,000 limit set by Commissioner Bowie Kuhn.

Lyle is the deal's biggest name. He is one of baseball's alltime top relievers with 210 career saves, tops for any active pitcher. He has appeared in 680 games, all in relief, since coming to the majors with Boston in 1967.

Court rules on NFL draft

WASHINGTON (AP) — In 1936, halfback Jay Berwanger of Chicago University became the first collegiate player selected in the National Football League draft. He never played professional ball.

Berwanger was selected by the Philadelphia Eagles who sold the rights to him to the Chicago Bears. The All-America Berwanger demanded a 2-year, no-cut contract for $12,500 per annum.

The Bears refused to meet his terms. So, he left football to become a millionaire industrialist.

The NFL conducted its annual collegiate draft for the following 40 years in similar fashion, essetially offering a player the opportunity to play in the league but only for the team that selected him — unless the rights to him were turned over to another club.

On Thursday, the U.S. Court of Appeals upheld a 1976 lower court ruling that declared the NFL draft, as it was conducted until two years ago, an unreasonable restraint of trade and therefore unlawful under the antitrust laws.

Shortly after the ruling by U.S. District Court Judge William B. Bryant, the NFL owners signed a collective bargaining agreement with the NFL Players Association permitting a draft under a labor law exemption to the antitrust laws. However, the current draft has been reduced from 28 rounds to 12 rounds.

The three-member appellate court, with one dissent in part, agreed with Judge Bryant that the draft was illegal, but rejected his award of $276,000 in damages to James "Yazoo" Smith, a former defensive back with the Washington Redskins who was injured in his rookie year in 1968 and did not play again.

The appellate court returned the case to the lower court for a further computation of damages to be paid to Smith, Washington's No. 1 draft choice in 1968, who contended in his 1970 suit against the Redskins and NFL that the draft stifled the marketing of his football skills.

DAMAGING BLOW ... Big Spring Steer volleyball stalwart Sherry Byrd is helped off the court Thursday night by fellow teammates Pam Banks (11) and Debbie Wiggins. Byrd's absence hurt the Steers, as San Angelo took advantage to rally to the win and a trip to the state playoffs in a hard fought, emotional contest.

Deer, turkey population changing

LUBBOCK — Forecasting the deer and turkey populations for the upcoming November 18 season is like trying to forecast the weather — it keeps changing each week.

Comments from Texas Parks and Wildlife Department personnel stationed across Texas indicated deer and turkey populations are ranging from poor to good. The deer situation has improved in the Panhandle and South Plains regions over what it was earlier in the year, but the rains came too late in the year to help antler development. These late rains have helped to mature the browse conditions for deer and the herds should go into the winter with ample food supplies.

In the Texas Panhandle, the 16-day whitetail season is Nov. 18-Dec. 3 with a bag limit of one deer, buck or antlerless (anterless by permit only).

The mule deer season in the Panhandle is open for the same period from Nov. 18-Dec. 3 with a two mule deer, limit one buck or antlerless (anterless by permit) bag restriction.

In most of the remainder of the regulatory counties including the South Plains (Lubock), the rolling plains (Wichita Falls) and the edge of the Edwards Plateau, the white-tailed deer season is Nov. 18-Jan. 1 The bag limit in most of these areas is three deer, no moré than two bucks, anterless by permit.

The white-tailed deer season will be CLOSED in the northwest Texas counties: Andrews, Bailey, Castro, Cochran, Dallam, Dawson, Deaf Smith, Gaines, Hale, Harltey, Hockley, Lamb, Lubbock, Lynn, Martin, Oldham, Parmer, Terry and Yoakum.

The mule deer season will be CLOSED in these northwest Texas counties: Andrews, Bailey, Cochran, Collingsworth, Dawson, Castro, Lamb, Hale, Lubbock, Hockley, Terry, Lynn, Gaines, Martin, Sherman, Hansford, Lipscomb, Wheeler, Parmer, Yoakum.

Shooting hours for both deer and turkey are 30 minutes before sunrise to 30 minutes after sunset.

The regulations governing white-tailed and mule deer were created to enable the P&WD to manage both species more closely by being able to modify seasons and bag limits. Studies have shown that the mule deer season should not be as long as white-tailed deer season. The shorter season and bag limit on mule deer reflect the more vulnerable nature of this species.

The same conclusions about the upcoming turkey season have been made by P&WD personnel, as were made for the deer forecast. Too much dry weather during the nesting period reduced the hatch to a point well below what it was last year.

Hunters will see quite a few turkeys due to the carryover from last year's population which was good statewide. However, fewer young turkeys will be found.

The turkey season in the Panhandle will be from Nov. 18-Dec. 3 with a bag limit of one gobbler or bearded hen.

The remainder of the counties east and south of the Panhandle will have a Nov. 18-Jan. 1 turkey season with a limit of two gobblers or bearded hens.

Shooting turkeys from the roost is prohibited and the shooting hours for turkey hunters are the same as the deer hunters, 30 minutes before sunrise to 30 minutes after sunset.

Private fish deadline extended to January

LUBBOCK — The deadline for applying for fish to be stocked in private waters has been extended by the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department to Jan. 5, 1979.

Fish ordered by this deadline will be available in 1979. Bass, which cost $2 per surface acre, will be delivered in the spring. Catfish, at $4 per acre, and sunfish at $5 per acre, will be delivered in August.

This deadline extension was made because of the low number of requests. Only 526 applications have been returned to Austin for fish as compared to over 1,000 last year. Many fish applicants did not request fish this year when their ponds went dry from lack of adequate rainfall. Recent rains across Texas have put some water back into the ponds, which will allow the pond owner to restock next year.

The fish delivered by the P&WD in the spring and summer will be available for pickup at 37 locations across Texas. In northwest Texas, these locations include: Andrews, Colorado City, Dickens, Dundee fish hatchery at Electra, Levelland, Pamp, and Vega.

Applications may be obtained by writing to the Hatchery Coordinator, Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, 4200 Smith School Road, Austin, Tex. 78744.

Vanderbilt offering journalism grants

This is a college scholarship for prospective sportswriters. It provides $5,000 each academic year for four years in the College of Arts & Science of Vanderbilt University, the Alma Mater of America's most distinguished sportswriter, who died July 13, 1954. The award, which in addition to the $5,000 stipend provides $500 at the beginning of each summer and offers summer jobs with opportunities to learn one or more phases of the sport of thoroughbred racing, is financed by the Thoroughbred Racing Association of the United States, Inc. and Vanderbilt University.

One new scholarship is available each year. Applications for it should be mailed before January 15 by young people who will be qualified to enter college as freshmen the following September.

An applicant's record must show at least 15 academic units, including four years of English, at least two years of a single foreign language, and three years of college preparatory math. A candidate must take the College Entrance Examination Board aptitude test and achievement tests which are required of all applicants for admission to Vanderbilt. These tests should be taken by December or January of the senior year in high school.

The applicant's high school record must be one of preparation for a liberal arts college, since the course of study at Vanderbilt leads to the Bachelor of Arts degree. The University does not offer a professional course in journalism but makes available a liberal education designed to provide a good foundation and background for a student's special interest in journalism.

YOUNG IDEAS

By DICK YOUNG

Ron Guidry's lawyer, John Schneider, will not get the new contract he had requested for famous client, but there will be a substantial bonus, in area of $50,000. Other than that, Ron will have to struggle along for the next three seasons on the $200,000 he signed for late this past season, plus perks like a fat insurance policy paid for by club.

Phils, Padres vie for Pete

You can bet Pete Rose will stay in NL. Phils and Padres will fight it out for Charley Hustle ... Playing on artificial turf gives Phils selling point, but Ray Kroc's offer won't be chopped beef. He is salivating over Rose as if Pete were a Big Mac. Might break with precedent by offering Pete chain of McDonald's franchise ... Rose doesn't really fit into Yankees. He'd have to FH with them ... Reuven Katz, Rose's lawyer, was a draft (while Pete was in Japan with Reds). "We won't necessarily Pick the highest bidder," said Katz. "Other considerations are: Community, players on the management of the team, where Pete fits into lineup."

I've come to conclusion that most clubs use baseball's free-agent draft as a Disney Fantasyland. Here a bunch of exec sitting in big room at Plaza Hotel, acting like a kid who looks through display glass in an old-fashioned candy store, saying: "I'll take one of these, and one of these, and one of these," without it costing a nickel. It's a mind-bet game, an exercise in self-titilation. NFL draft has some sincerity, some meaning. Only one football team drafts each man and tries seriously to sign him ... In baseball, as many as 13 clubs can select same player. In 13 cities, headlines scream: "Our Team Drafts Tommy John" — and deluded fans get all excited.

Mets made sham out of No. 1 selection. They picked Rose because they dared not to. Immediately afterward, Joe McDonald told newsmen, "Obviously, Rose is not the player we can sign easiest." In next breath, Mets' GM was saying Mets would not offer any player more than what they had offered Gary Matthews to years ago — which was a $360,000 average for five years. Rose already has turned down $400,000 per for two years to stay with Reds. That proves what hollow things was Mets' No. 1 draft ... I really thought Mets would make $500,000-a-season, two-year pitch for Rose. They could have done it without betraying their payroll philosophy. Pete puts people in seats. That could have been made understandable to other Mets, who could not be envious. There was, in this case, no morale problem.

If Larry Gura, Yankees' No. 2 pick behind Tommy John, signs with them, it should be pretty solid sign that Billy Martin will not be back. They hate each other from last movie. Gura would want assurance that Martin will not be back with Yankees before signing multi-year contract.

Jet's socko comeback against Broncos is tribute to Walt Michaels' ability to keep players from quitting when 21-points down. He's Vince Lombardi without the sideline yelling.

Boxing promoter Bob Arum expanded his feud with Don King to include Sonny Werblin. Arum keeps taking shots at biz practices of Garden boss. How would Bob like to see some instant replays on a few of his deals? ... Boxing racket isn't exactly Wharton School for Business ... They're making such a big deal of lineback Harry Arson being a soap opera freak. Hell, if Rosy Grier can needle-point and Yogi can read comic books, what's big deal ... Which reminds me, Jane Kennedy, this year's Phyllis George, referred to linebacker Carson as a Giants' lineman ... And Madison Square Garden fight announcer introduced her from ringside as: "America's foremost female football broadcaster." Gorgeous she is; a football announcer she is not.

Jim Rice's agent, eager to negotiate lifetime contract with Red Sox, says his man deserves to be top-paid player in league. There's more to pay than batting stats. Reggie Jax gets $500,000 because he puts people in seats. Reggie works hard at his public relations. Maybe agent Tony Pennacchia should advise Jim Rice of that ... Jack Doane is official scorer for Montgomery ballclub of Southern League, while on leave from prison where he is doing time for having shot wife and her lover.

Diogenes Award of Year, NHL Division: To Ranger goalie Wayne Thomas, for saying, after he had blanked Colorado, 3-0: "That's the worst hockey game I ever saw!" ... Influx of Swedes into NHL has boomed to 16. Vancouver leads with four ... At Gil Hodges Memorial Dinner, Bishop Maguvero renewed appeal for Gil's election to Hall of Fame. With Willie Mays coming due this time, it will be tough for anyone else to command sufficient votes ... Don Grant will retire from Mets in a year. He just doesn't want to get out while team is on bottom. "The fun of baseball is gone," says Grant, 74 — meaning agents, strikes, dictates of ballplayers.

No easy rebounds now

Goalie John Davidson explains Rangers' success: "If goaltender on this club stops the original shot, chances are they won't get another. They used to get one or two more" ... Rutgers soon will be national football power. "By the end of the season," says alumnus Sonny Werblin, "Rutgers will have played Penn State closer than anyone."

WOLFES TWIRLERS — These pretty girls entertain the Colorado City Fans during halftime. They are Kim Hutto, Anne Marcom, and Laurie Mercer. l-r.

Drill Team puts in many hours

STEPHENVILLE, Tex. — Back for their fifth year of crowd-pleasing performances, the Tarleton State University Texas Stars drill team has been putting in nearly as many hours as the Texas football team in preparing for their 1978 halftime shows.

Under the direction of former member Penny Wright, the Stars consist of 21 pretty TSU co-eds who perform dance routines to music played by the Texan Band.

In addition to their halftime performance, the Stars are also present during many other TSU athletic and social acrivities, and have become a well-recognized representative of the University.

The Stars also make trips annually to functions like the Fiesta Flambeau Parade in San Antonio, and there is also a trip to one of the New Year's parades in New York in the planning stages.

The girls on the team must first audition, then follow a strict exercise scheduled to guarantee they'll be ready for the grueling practices Wright puts them through.

Their first performance was Saturday nigh during TSU's football game against Austin College, the season opener for both squads. The show consisted of a routine using chairs to the music of the television show, "Three's Company."

The assistant director for 1978 is Stephenville senior Sherrie Cleghorn, and thsleaders are Lipan junior Cathy Addison and Comanche sophomore Kelly Calhoun.

Other members of the team are Hamilton junior Valerie Watson; Stephenville junior Elaine Robinson; Breckenridge sophomore Kim Walker; Meridian sophomore Katy Booe; Hamilton junior Cindy Middleton; Monahans sophomore Lisa Cox; Fort Worth sophomores Kim Welch and Karie Sumner.

Others named were: David McIntire, Jan McPherson, Amy Martinez, Jody Martinez, David Massey, Glenn Mallinger, Misti Meyers, Rebecca Mills, Denise Minter, Jeffrey Minyard, Jennifer Moore, Wendy Myers, Shelly Neil, Eric Norman, Janie Perez, Kay Pollard, Roger Pipe, Araceli Ramirez, Scott Richardson, Glenn Slate, Todd Strong, Kristi Taylor, Beverly Tubb, Eric Watkins, Kim West, Lesa Wilkerson, Tracey Williams, Monette Wise, and Tracie Young.

These students receive A and B's on their report cards.

Mrs. Tanner's social studies classes studied the candidates who were running in the recent electioon. Classes learned how to use voting machines and voted on sample ballots.

When Mr. Dixon's seventh grade history classes studied about the first products of Texas, they really "tasted history." One of the well-known products was Dr. Pepper's, first distributed in Waco in the 1800's. The class had a "Dr. Pepper Party." They drank Dr. Peppers while they listened to one of Boston's first hit songs.

Mrs. Jones' sixth grade math classes are learning how to multiply with decimals.

Goliad has been very proud of its volleyball teams this year. The girls have worked hard this season, and only a few games were lost.

The last football game was played here on Thursday. Students prepared for the game with an enthusiastic pep rally. Both the balck and the white teams had a successful season, and the student body is very proud of these boys.

The choir concert that was held for the public on Tuesday was attended by a large, enthusiastic crowd. All choirs sang very well, and the mixed choir received a standing ovation for "Summer Nights."

New programs are added

COLLEGE STATION — Two programs, to aid displaced homemakers and to locate women in nontraditional jobs, have been established in the Texas Engineering Extension Service at Texas A&M University.

The latter program helps women prepare and gain employment in work traditionally done by men.

Structured to help persons in Brazos County, the programs will operate in the Special Programs Training Divison of the Extensio Service, according to Director James R. Bradley.

Patricia R. Turner heads the Special Programs Division and is acting head of th next programs. She is director of the South Central Regional Training Center in San Antonio.

Bradley noted that the new programs are related and complimentary to 14 other training divisions in the Extension Service.

Pamela S. Horne and Susan R. Yoselow have been added to the special programs staff to work in the displaced homemakers and women in nontraditional jobs preparation programs, respectively.

"These programs are unique to the university, to the extension service and the communities," Mrs. Turner said.

The programs are designed in accordance with U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare and state guidelines to aid displaced homemakers and women seeking better job opportunity.

Through counseling, job training and placement and auxiliary services, the displaced homemaker program — for women or men — assists an individual's health and welfare and enables him or her to enjoy independent and economic security, Mrs. Horne said.

Never too soon for Christmas planning

Some people may have been rightly startled to see pumpkins and masks on display beneath hanging Christmas decorations. "But it's not even Halloween!", was a common remark. Even if the stores do seem to push matters a little, it is not too soon to start thinking about Christmas.

Christmas crafts and programs take time and preparation. The Howard County Library has many books on Christmas ranging from how to make gifts and ornaments to how to prepare and serve Christmas dinner. Books for both adults and children are included

In the juvenile collection, one title representative of craft ideas to be had is "Crafts for Christmas", by Katherine N. Cutler and Kate Cutler Bogle. Simple crafts described range from nature gifts and ornaments to sweets and gift wrapping.

In the adult craft department, "How to Make Christmas Ornaments", by Harryette S. Hendricks, explores the world of beads, sequins, remnants and styrofoam forms to create sparkling ornaments and centerpieces. There is also an intriguing little book called "Greeting Cards You Can Make," by Chester Jay Alkema. The novel ideas in the book include the use of such varied materials as scrap material and magazine pictures.

Other craft books in both departments include "Making Dolls," by H. Witzig and G.E. Kuhn; "Folk Toys Around the World and How to Make Them", by Joan Joseph; "Celebrations," by Becky Stevens Cordello and many others.

For those involved in holiday program planning, there are several books of Christmas plays and readings. "Christmas Plays for Young Actors", edited by A.S. Burack, and "A Treasury of Christmas Plays", edited by Sylvia Kamerman, each contain over twenty nonroyalty plays ranging from Biblical to comedy. In addition, there are "Holiday Monologs", by Vernon Howard and on "Christmas Day, First Carols to Play and Sing", by Mervyn Horder.

Other materials are housed in the Vertical File under Christmas. Along with other materials, there are several copies of the annual editions of "Christmas Ideals", a magazine containing poems, stories, carols and occasionally crafts and recipes.

A first for veteran actor

Whitmore in miniseries

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — In the dimly lighted dubbing studio, James Whitmore watched a fuzzy black and white image of himself on the screen and waited for his dialogue cue.

It came through an earphone he held clasped to the side of his head. At the right moment, he said, "Well, that's terrible."

Whitmore was duplicating dialogue ruined by traffic noises outside the British Museum in London, where he and actor Roland Culver had filmed a scene for the CBS miniseries "The Word."

The eight-hour series, which also stars David Janssen and Florinda Bolkan, begins Sunday on CBS, continuing Wednesday.

The series, adapted from the novel by Irving Wallace, was directed by Richard Lang in London, Amsterdam, Rome, New York and Hollywood.

Whitmore plays a publisher who is about to bring out a new Bible based on a controversial archaelogical discovery that shows Christ did die on the cross, but continued preach for 19 more years until he was crucified again and rose from the dead. The document is supposedly written by James the Just, brother of Jesus Christ.

Janssen plays a cynical public relations man who is hired to promote the new Bible, but begins to doubt the authenticity of the document. He becomes involved in a deadly intrigue, as a number of people, particularly Whitmore, have an interest in seeing that the Bible is not challenged.

It is a crackerjack suspense drama that takes the viewer into the worlds of public relations, publishing, religion and archaeology. There have been few if any recent films that take such breath-taking advantage of foreign locales as director Lang does in "The Word."

It is Whitmore's first miniseries and the first thing he's done for television since he played Gen. O.O. Howard in the ABC Theater presentation of "I Will Fight No More Forever."

Whitmore also can be seen in "Bully," the movie version of his one-man show about President Theodore Roosevelt. He previously did "Will Rogers' U.S.A." on Broadway, on tour and as a television special. Then, he was President Harry S. Truman in "Give 'Em Hell, Harry." The stage version was also filmed and he was nominated for an Academy Award as best actor in 1975.

Whitmore is the veteran of three television series. He said he is proud of "The Law and Mr. Jones," but called "My Friend Tony" and "Temperatures Rising" mistakes. "I'd rather not do another, but you never know in this business," he declared.

For 'Charley's Aunt'

Final weekend appearance

For those who have not yet seen "Charley's Aunt" at the Globe of the Great Southwest Theatre in Odessa, Texas, the opportunity remains for one final weekend (Nov. 10, 11, 12). The delightful comedy is the fifth in the season's lineup at The Globe Theatre, and season ticket holders may use their boarding passes to climb aboard and enjoy the fun of an action-packed comedy. Eveing performances are at 8:00 p.m., and closing performance on Sunday at 2:30 p.m. One final play remains in the Globe's 1978 season and will be presented in December.

People who want to see the play and do not hold a season ticket may buy tickets at the box office for $4.00. Adults, $2.00 Students and Senior Citizens.

"Charley's Aunt" was written by an obscure writer and actor named Brandon Thomas and was first presented in London in 1892. It has been sending audiences into roars of laughter ever since, and it has been estimated that it is produced nearly 1,000 times a year by various professional and amateur threatre groups in the United States.

Cast members at the Globe continue to grow in their roles: Bob Welborn as Babbs who impersonates the Aunt; Don Whitmire as Stephen Spettigue who chances Bob dressed as the Aunt

Joan Rivers signs another movie contract

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — This time Joan Rivers doesn't have to mortgage her house.

The comedienne has concluded a contract with Columbia Pictures to direct and star in "A Girl Named Banana," a caper comedy in the Catskills which she wrote with Donald Westlake. The deal calls for a sizable budget and a first-class shooting schedule.

It was not the same with her first feature as writer-director-star. To make "Rabbit Test," she and her producer-husband, Edgar Rosen, hocked their Bel-Air house and jewels. Her father and sister also mortgaged their homes to contribute to the family's $492,000 investment in the comedy.

Total cost of "Rabbit Test": $997,000. The cast numbered an amazing 136, all of them working at Screen Actors Guild scale.

The story of the world's first pregnant man ("inconceivably funny"), "Rabbit Test" managed to hit the nation's funny bone, and Avco-Embassy reports $15 million in rentals.

The comedy is being rereleased in a pairing with "Kentucky Fried Movie," first film by John Landis, director of "National Lampoon's Animal House."

"I think the timing is right," observed "Rabbit" mother Rivers. "The success of 'Animal House' proves that people want to laugh."

At her newly secured Bel-Air house, the comedienne exulted over the Columbia contract, though she admitted doing business with a major studio is more complicated than making an independent movie.

"On 'Rabbit Test,' I could get a decision in 20 minutes," she commented. "We spent four months on the Columbia deal. The contract is longer than the script.

Understandably, Miss Rivers enjoys reliving the whole "Rabbit Test" experience. She shot the film in 22 days amid the most difficult of circumstances. Certain key members of her crew were unsympathetic with the directorial debut of a oneline comedienne.

"Sometimes I just put my head againt the camera and cried," she admitted.

"My assistant didn't tell me that he was the one who was supposed to yell, 'Quiet on the set!' So I ended up shouting my head off."

Her future? She has two other film projects, but she'll continue doing her funny stuff at colleges and in Las Vegas — "So I'll know what people are laughing at."

Farmer was lost instead of dead

WOOSTER, Ohio (AP) — Wayne County officials say they think 27-year-old Terry Shriver wandered in shock through fields for four days while his family believed he had been killed in a barn fire.

The young farmer stumbled into the kitchen of his home Thursday night to the amazement of his wife, Sandy, and his father, Glenn Shriver. He was shirtless, dazed and burned.

"It was too good to be true that he walked in the door," said Mrs. Shriver. "I prayed I'd find him and it came true."

Shriver had been the subject of an intense search after firefighters failed to find his body in the ruins of his barn Monday.

"He didn't recognize anybody — or not that I could tell," Shriver's father said. "He'd been out in the cold since Monday and it got down to the 20's last night."

Wayne County sheriff's deputies said Shriver had burns on his legs, arms, chest and head. His eyes were singed and he was apparently in shock. He was in fair condition early today, Wooster Community Hospital officials said.

Sheriff James Frost said authorities believe Shriver wandered in the fields of his 280-acre farm west of Shreve after the fire.

Ridin' fence

Everything's changing

with Marj Carpenter

That's what the Democrats were saying this week in Texas. "If you can't count on a Democrat being elected governor Texas, you can't count on anything any more," they entoned.

But this just hammers down the point that times are changing. With the change, there may possibly be a really and truly two-party system in Texas. Many states have thrived on this.

One of the really loyal local Democrats asked me Thursday in all seriousness, "Do the Republicans hold county meetings at the chourthouse too?"

"Yes, Virginia there is a Santa Claus," and "Yes, Republicans are real people and hold meetings too." In fact when they hold their next state meeting, they will have more delegates from Howard County than the Democrats because that is the way the system works.

The number of Republican and Democrat delegates to the state conventions for the next four years are determined by the vote in the governor's race. The formula is complicated and includes one delegate for each box that the party had more than 300 votes. Well, this year in Howard County, the GOP picked up five delegates that way and the Demos one. Then the totals are thrown together by 300 votes per delegate and the best I can figure that if a partial is included is eight plus one for a partial for theDemos and 11 plus for a partial for the Republicans.

I'm not that good at arithmetic and I'm also not that sure of the rules but it looks as though the delegates will include either 16 or 17 Republicans and either nine or ten Demos. The last four years, it was five for the GOP and 12 for the Demos.

For those who were trying to send a message to Carter, you just did it. Because those delegates will be the number during the next Presidential election year.

But all things change. Hang on to that thought, Big Spring Steers. Fort Stockton has been an underdog in its district for 21 years and it went into its game Friday night without even having been scored on this season. The school did not take a sudden spurt of growth. Something just finally clicked.

I know some of my good Coahoma friends and I love lots of folks out there were muttering, muttering at me this week for picking Colorado City.

When this column is written, the outcome of the game is unknown but I do know that no team needs to go into that close of a ballgame thinking that evrybody thinks they are the winner.

Both schools have good teams this year and both are to be commended. But by now, one of them is the winner. All things change.

"All things but that blankety blank column," you mutter. "Or all things but that newspaper," you cry.

Oh well, newspapers change too. I quote from an advertisement in the Oct. 19, 1882 "Tombstone Epitath" in Tombstone, Ariz. "We invite calls from all gentlemen, camp residents or visitors to help us celebrate Helldorado. It's a time of merriment in all th ee ok our parlours — Twenty-three are housewives have promised to help our 35 regular doves tend to every male whim." There hasn't been an ad like that in almost a hundred years.

Here's an obituary from the same newspaper that year. The headline is small and says simply "Killed by a Horse."

The obit reads: "Manuel Dellasso, a young Mexican, who had lived in Tombstone for a number of years, met with a serious accident on Tuesday which resulted in his death yesterday.

"He was riding a bronco horse, near the Boston mill. The animal attempted to buck him off, but being a good rider, he stuck on. Finding it impossible to unseat him, the animal jeared and fell backward. Manuel not being quick enough to get out of the way, was thrown to the ground, the horse falling on top of him.

"The horn of the saddle struck his breast, crushing it horribly. The horse, to make sure of finishing its master, as soon as it got onto its feet, kicked the prostrate body of the half dead boy. One foot struck him in the head. He was brought up to Tombstone where he died yesterday morning."

Gruesome, you say. Certainly it is. But then newspapers have also changed. The world has changed. Some things change for the better. Some things change for the worse — but they change — out where I ride fence.

Leader for women wants meeting with new pope

BALTIMORE (AP) — A leader of a Roman Catholic conference seeking admission of women to the priesthood says a "foothill conference" should be held with the new pope so he can better understand women's concerns.

It would not be a "summit conference, in which the great meet the great, but perhaps a foothill conference," in which representatives chosen by women could sit down with Pope John Paul II and speak of "our true concerns, including ordination," said Sister Mary Luke Tobin.

Sister Mary Luke of Denver, former president of the Leadership Conference of Women Religious, including heads of all the nuns' orders in the country, voiced her proposal Friday at the opening session of the three-day conference, which drew more than 2,000 women from across the nation and abroad.

The conference, backed by a wide array of women's rights and religious groups, including the National Assembly of Women Religious, Priests for Equality and the National Coalition of American Nuns, also attracted participants from Europe, Asia, Africa and Latin America.

Bids will be opened on two automobiles for the Sheriff's Department and general office equipment and supplies for the court house. Repairs of Sheriff A.N. Standard's department auto will also be discussed.

In other business, kommissioners will:

Retrieving 'throwaway' children

Foster parents undertake tough task

By EILEEN McGUIRE
Family News Editor

The first task that a foster parent faces with a child placed in the home is to teach that child love, according to Donna Van Ness, a Howard County foster mother of four-and-a-half years.

It's also one of the most difficult tasks, she said, "because many of these children have never known love."

Mrs. Van Ness was one of an estimated 1,000 foster parents from across the state who attended the Oct. 27-28 annual conference for Texas foster parents associations in Waco. The object of the conference was to examine the problems faced by foster parents who try to help children placed in their care.

The challenge faced by foster parents was aptly described by Dr. John Wise, a clinical psychologist and conference guest speaker.

"The task of foster parenting is tough," he said. "You're having to undo the mistakes of other people. You're having to heal scars that have been there a long time, and you're having to take a lot of (emotional) abuse from a child who is not grateful for what you've done."

The purpose of the foster home is to afford a child a temporary home and family until other arrangements can be made, according to Mrs. Van Ness who serves as president of the Howard County Foster Parents Association, vice president and Nominations Committee Chairman of the regional association, and a board member of the state association.

The replacement home may be for only one night or it may be for many months, but the final goal, she said, is to restore the child to his original home if it's at all possible.

While other agencies work with the child's parents or guardians to resolve problems in the home, the foster parents work with the child. In most cases, the child does not want to be taken out of his real home, regardless of how bad the situation is, so the foster parents may often have to deal with an initial resistance to the help offered.

"You would think that one of our biggest problems as foster parents would be with the child's family," Mrs. Van Ness said. "Since our foster children are all from this area, it's not to difficult for the family to discover where the child has been placed. But oddly enough, most of the parents whose children have been placed with us have been grateful and most cooperative. They know that their child is being well cared for while they have time to work out their problems."

During the past year, Howard County has lost two of its foster homes, bringing the total down to six. The only other homes nearby are two in Midland and 19 in Odessa. Many times, the Howard County homes have the additional burden of caring for an overflow of children from the Midland foster homes.

In the event that a large family of children must be placed or that several families run into trouble simultaneously, there is a shortage of foster homes available. There is also a problem of funding.

"Before an abused child can be removed from the home, it must be shown in court how the child will be cared for," Mrs. Van Ness said "If the child's parents are guardians to Families with Dependent Children), then the state child welfare workers have little difficulty in removing the child to a state-supported foster home.

"But if the child's family is not on welfare, it's difficult to get the child out of the home because the child is then the county's financial responsibility rather than the state's and there is no county support for foster children in Howard County."

She said that she is hopeful about the future as a meeting between the Howard County Foster Parents Association and several Howard County Commissioners is pending.

Neglected children comprise the largest number of children who enter Howard County foster homes, Mrs. Van Ness said. The second largest group are emotionally abused children and third is sexually abused kids. She described the condition that the typical child is received in.

"Most of the time the child arrives with nothing but the clothes on his back, sometimes less than that. Once we picked up a baby wearing nothing but a dirty diaper.

"A child coming to us in good physical condition is rare. Nearly all of them are suffering from malnutrition and most have lice or some kind of infection.

"In Howard County, the foster parents have set it up so that a new arrival is examined by a doctor within the first 24 hours. All of the Big Spring doctors are terrific about accepting these children under Medicaid. Medicaid also allows for three prescriptions a month which isn't sufficient for the amount of medication required by these kids.

"State support for each child amounts to $5 a day which of course doesn't allow for the number of items each one needs initially, like basic clothing necessities, a toothbrush and other personal items. The state support also doesn't allow for things like birthdays, Christmas and taking a foster child along on a family outing or vacation.

"United Way, however, has been helping voluntarily. They've allotted $150 a month to the Foster Parent Association. Anytime a foster parent receives a new charge, that child's initial needs are taken care of from that fund."

"The Texas State Foster Parent Association to which all of the local associations belong has also started a scholarship fund. At the convention, we came up with the money to send two foster kids to college and one to trade school.

"We conducted a Country Store and raised enough money from it for one complete scholarship, but there wasn't enough for the other two requests so we made some signs and went around among the foster parents collecting for the scholarships. The foster parents came through.

"A lot of these kids who'll use the scholarships come from problem backgrounds. They may not be able to achieve as much as another child in school, so our only stipulation to qualify for a scholarship is that the child tries his best. As long as he stays in school and really tries, he qualifies for the college opportunity."

The image of a couple posing as genuinely-interested foster parents in order to make an easy buck from the state is a myth as is the notion that a foster home is a terrible place to be. Exploitation of the foster parent system is impossible, according to Mrs. Van Ness who drives a school bus for St. Mary's to help with the family's expenses.

"There's no way you can make a profit by being a foster parent. In fact, we lose money. No one gets involved in foster parenting to make a living — that's an impossibility. We are all foster parents for only one reason. We love kids."

Mrs. Van Ness recalled how she and her husband James, Senior Patrolman at the Big Spring Police Department, first became involved in foster parenting.

"When we started taking in children, there were no foster homes established in Howard County. One night a child was picked up with his mother. She was detained and there was nowhere for the child to go, so James brought him home. And others after him.

"There was no compensation for what we did at that time. We just shared what we had. Later, we became licensed for foster care. In fact, we were already licensed and operating before we discovered that there was any compensation to help with the expenses."

The Van Ness home is always filled with the sounds of children. In addition to their foster children, they have three children of their own — a son Tracy, 14, and two daughters, Rahdeen, 13, and Leann, 5. Leann began as a foster child and was adopted by the Van Nesses last year.

The Van Nesses are licensed to care for any child from newborn through 18 years of age, including physically and mentally handicapped children.

"The foster parent sets the limit on how many children he wishes to care for," she said. "Many foster parents feel comfortable with only one child and some do not feel capable of caring for handicapped children. The state decides how many children a foster parent qualifies for, but the foster parent has the option of setting a limit."

In addition to there being a shortage of foster homes for children of normal abilities, she said there is a terrific need for foster parents willing to care for handicapped children.

Along with the children placed in foster homes because of neglect or abuse, abandoned and orphaned children are also placed in foster parenting care. These children, along with handicapped children, face an uncertain future. Many of them spend their entire childhood in foster care because the likelihood of adoption is slim.

"There are children available for adoption," Mrs. Van Ness said. "But most adopting parents want an infant or young child. No one wants to bother with the older child, ages 5 and up. And the chances for a handicapped child being adopted are almost nil. They are considered unadoptable."

But not always. While at the Waco convention, Mrs. Van Ness had the opportunity of meeting a couple who serve as a continual source of inspiration to foster parents throughout the country.

Bob and Dorothy DeBolt, a foster parent couple in California and subjects of the book "19 Steps Up the Mountain," are the parents of 19 children, 13 of which are theirs through adoption or legal guardianship. Each of the 13 are handicapped. Some are blind, some are crippled, and one little girl was born without legs or forearms.

The challenge undertaken by the DeBolts began with a desire to adopt one handicapped child out of gratitude for their healthy, biological children.

Gradually, they learned by accident of other children, in the United States and overseas, who desperately needed them. They also discovered that there was no existing system of bringing these "unadoptable" children and people who wanted to love and help them together.

The DeBolts founded AASK (Aid to the Adoption of Special Kids), the only organization in existence which locates and brings together these children with potential adoptive parents.

The agency requires so much time that Bob resigned from a successful career to devote all of his energy to the DeBolt cause. They support their large family by lecturing at foster parent conventions, such as the one in Waco.

"The results of what the DeBolts have done is astonishing," observed Mrs. Van Ness. "They have discovered that there are actually people who specifically want handicapped children, but up until now have had no way of finding them except by accident."

The DeBolts, as far away as they are, are an asset to Howard County. The Van Nesses are currently working through the DeBolts in attempting to place a handicapped Howard County child in a loving and permanant home.

The DeBolts' goal as parents of handicapped children is to help each one develop towards independency. They give the child emotional support while he finds his own way of fitting into a world that is not geared for the handicapped person. The DeBolts have been highly successful in their attempts and each child has become an important and contributing member of the family.

Because of people like the Van Nesses and the DeBolts and hundreds of other singles and couples who have elected to share their homes with children in need, obstacles that rob children of a good and happy start in life are being overcome for many. The "throwaway" children are being retrieved. Their right to a happy childhood is being restored.

But for every child whose story has a somewhat happy ending, there are more for whom the opportunities are not available. It's easier, quicker and far less expensive to adopt from a foster home than to go through a private agency, according to Mrs. Van Ness. And it takes only about a month to become licensed to operate as a foster home if the applicant meets some simple standards.

"But it also takes a lot of love," she cautioned.

She urges anyone who may be sincerely interested to investigate by contacting a child welfare worker.

For those who want to help on a smaller scale, Christmas is approaching. Each year, the foster parents of Howard County attempt to give children in their care a joint Christmas party. Community help is always appreciated.

The county foster parent association is also raffling off an afghan and a professional oil painting, donated by an artist who wishes to remain unpublicized. Proceeds will be used for scholarships for foster children. For more information on either project, contact Mrs. Van Ness, secretary-treasurer of the county foster parent association, 267-2977. Foster Parents Association, 267-2977.

The task undertaken by foster parents is not an easy one. And neither are the problems that so many young children must cope with. Both need help.

HAPPY ENDING — Because they love kids, James and Donna Van Ness have been helping neglected, abused, abandoned and orphaned children as foster parents for four-and-a-half years officially, twice that unofficially. Their youngest daughter, Leeann, 5, pictured with the Van Nesses, came to them as a foster child. The adoption was difficult, but she finallv became theirs last year. Many foster children, particularly the older or handicapped child, spend their entire childhoods in temporary foster homes and the number of homes available are limited. But because of people like the Van Nesses, some of society's "throwaway" children have been and will be retrieved.

UNADOPTABLE? — Labels have the mentally and physically handicapped child catagorized as "unadoptable". The label no longer fits, however, as proved by one family in California who have adopted 13 "unadoptable" children. Bob and Dorothy DeBolt operate an agency, the only one of its kind, that brings together handicapped children with people who want to love and help them. Requests for these children have poured in from all over the world — an indication that there's no such thing as an unwanted child. The children are wanted. The problem is locating the people who want them.

Cut costs on washday

COLLEGE STATION – Practice wise clothing care methods to conserve energy and possibly cut utility costs.

The greatest savings can occur with reduced water temperatures for laundering, points out a clothing specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Heating water accounts for three percent of all U.S. energy usage, Becky Culp reports.

Reduce energy consumption in doing home laundry 50 percent by using warm water for washing and cold water for rinsing rather than using hot water temperatures. Use hot water (130 degrees F., 70 degrees C.) for the most difficult cleaning jobs or for sanitation.

The bride chose a white lace gown styled with an A-line skirt and featuring long, lace sleeves and a high neck of lace. A long veil fell softly from a lace caplet.

Family unit studied

The November meeting of the Forsan Study Club took place recently in the J. F. Poyner home, with Mrs. Raymond Holguin wording the devotional.

Mrs. Bobby Evans was in charge of the program and introduced the speaker, the Rev. Jack Clinkscales, pastor of Forsan Baptist Church.

Rev. Clinkscales presented a program titled "The Confident Family." He emphasized the importance of the family unit in our society and in the eyes of God. He also expressed that man and woman were created by God to complement and fulfill each other.

Three Bible verses were quoted by the Rev. Clinkscales to explain what God expects of people as family members; Ephesians 5:25: "Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loves the church, and gave himself for it."

Also, Ephesians 5:22: "Wives, submit yourselves unto your own husbands, as unto the Lord;" and Exodus 20:12: Honor they father and they mother: that they days may be long upon the land which the Lord they God giveth thee."

Mrs. Del Hartin, president of the club, conducted the meeting. She gave a report on the Fall Board Meeting in Sanderson, at which Mrs. Jessie T. Summers, Mrs. Hamlin Elrod and herself represented the club.

Mrs. Hartin was elected to the district outstanding Teacher Committee; Mrs. Elrod was elected to the Share committee, and Mrs. Summers was elected to the G.F.W.C. News-Subscription Committee.

The club discussed a smorgasbord supper which will take place from 6 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. Nov. 17 in the Forsan School cafeteria. Each club member will bring two of her favorite dishes.

The cost of the meal will be $2 for adults and $1 for children under 12, and cookbooks will be sold at the door for $1 each. The supper will take place prior to the Forsan vs. Stanton football game.

Hostesses for the November meeting were Mrs. J. F. Poynor, Mrs. Sam Robertson, Mrs. Jack Woodley and Mrs. Summers, and Mrs. Lee Yarbrough brought a door prize.

A RECENT GUEST of Mrs. J. H. Cardwell was her sister, Mrs. J. W. Heilhecker of Abilene.

Alma Jordan of Kingsland was a recent visitor of Mrs. Henry Park. Mrs. Park was in Odessa recently to visit with her sister, Grace Davis, and her son and his family, Mr. and Mrs. Roger Park and Lori.

MR. AND MRS. D.S. Knight were visited recently by Mrs. Waylan Greer of Stephenville.

Nola Story's daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Strom of San Angelo were her guests recently.

RUBY MCELRATH has just returned home from Odessa where she visited with her sisters, Mrs. Jodie Rowe, Mrs. R. G. Edwards, Mr. and Mrs. H. D. James and Mrs. Clyde Bennett.

MR. AND MRS. C. V. Wash and Mr. and Mrs. Delan Wash of Big Spring were in Coleman recently to celebrate the 90th birthday of their aunt, Mrs. Ira Jackson. Mr. and Mrs. C. V. Wash drove on to Weatherford to visit with some friends, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Arnold. Mrs. Arnold is the former Bertha Shaw of Forsan. The two couples went to Fort Worth for both business and pleasure in the Wash's motor home. The Washes came back by Sweetwater and helped their granddaughter and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. Dub Clinton, get ready to open a children's store there, called "The Cat's Meow." It was opened Saturday morning.

THE PIONEER Sewing Club met at 2 Tuesday afternoon in the home of Mrs. D. L. Knight with 13 members present.

The group drew names for Christmas pals, and the president told those who wished to donate hand-made articles for the Big Spring State Hospital Bazaar to bring them to the next meeting. The bazaar will take place Dec. 2 in Highland Mall.

The next meeting will take place Nov. 21 in the home of Nola Story with Mrs. Doug Barber of Westbrook, the former Ann Fairchild, as hostess.

March of Dimes sponsors State Youth Conference

Young people throughout Texas will convene in Dallas for the State Youth Conference, "It's All for the Health of It", sponsored by the National Foundation March of Dimes, Dec. 1-2.

Over 300 young people will be given insight into their roles as future parents and what steps they can take to help in the prevention of births defects at the two-day conference to be held at the LeBaron Hotel, Dallas.

Highlighting the conference will be Dr. Jon Aase, a dysmorphologist from the University of New Mexico, Albuquerque, who will identify the scope of birth defects.

Louise Roy, national director of Youth Activities for The National Foundation, will inform delegates of March of Dimes past accomplishments, present activities and future goals.

Friday night activities will include disco dancing and lessons by Mike Hudgins, Dallas dance instructor and long-time March of Dimes volunteer.

Saturday's workshops will focus on fund-raising, education and community awareness.

Field area caucuses will be held to develoip statewide goals for youth activities and will be followed by a rally to demonstrate support of each field area goal.

The conference is designed to inform students and adults sponsors of ways the March of Dimes and volunteers can work together in eliminating birth defects through programs of research, community service, public and professional education, prenatal and perinatal care and genetic counseling.

"American teenagers will have one-fifth of all the babies born in the United States," according to Sherilyn Williams, Texas State Youth chairman.

"Teenagers 17 and under have the highest rate of any age group of dead or damaged babies. The March of Dimes is dedicated to educate these young people on how they can help prevent the tragedy of birth defects and does so through conferences and other educational programs."

Conference registration deadline is Nov. 15. For more information, contact your local March of Dimes Chapter, Field Office or the Regional Office, (214) 630-1470.

New skirts straight, lean, slit

NEW YORK, N.Y. – The new straight skirts are more than just straight – they're downright lean, cut to curve where you do and snugged to hug your hips, says the November issue of Seventeen Magazine. But they won't put a cramp in your easy stride because they're slit to accommodate it.

When looking for a top that works with these new straight skirts, try anything short and kropped, slit or tucked in. For example, a short, close-to-the-body sweater jacket can play up the sleek line of a herringbone back-slit skirt. And, a curvy plaid pencil skirt can take a big band-collared man's shirt -- provided you tuck it in to keep the fullness in check.

Paired with a dressier top, like a mohair camisole with a matching scallop-edged cardigan, the slim skirt takes on an out-for-a-date feeling without being overdone or fussed up. And, a tuck-in forties-style lace blouse with rhinestone buttons dresses up a boldly side-slit super leggy look.

For daytime dressing and evening wear as well, these new skirts will keep you on the straight and narrow!

Mental health of abuser is maltreatment factor

COLLEGE STATION — Modern child abuse research focuses on mental health of abusing parents, stressful home situations and the part the child plays in causing the abuse.

Today, understanding the cause of abuse is as great as knowing how to cope with the problem, says Dorthy Taylor, family life education specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

With more than 162,000 children in Texas battered or mistreated emotionally this past year, the need for child abuse and neglect answers grows more critical, the specialist explains.

Mental health of the abuser is a factor in child maltreatment. Some factors affecting mental health and linked to abuse include alcoholism, disturbance in eating and sleeping, and depression.

The most common trait among abusers is role reversal — when the parent wants the child to love him and support his needs rather than the parent giving nurturance to the child, Miss Taylor points out.

"Therefore, when the child cannot meet the parent's expectations — and the child's inability to walk, talk or control his bowels or bladder may further antagonize — abuse occurs.

"The irrational parent cannot accept the child at a child's level and expects adult behavior. This frustration leads to a total loss of self control," she says.

Abuse relates to home situations, too.

No matter how little or how much money the family has, when too much stress or pressure is present, violence will likely occur, the specialist reports.

Money shortage, unemployment, lack of or loss of power or status are traits often found in child abusers.

In addition, research reports child abusers exhibit isolation or less involvement in the community and neighborhood.

Also, abusive families tend to be larger than non-abusive ones.

Discord, disorganized household, marital quarrels and fewer systematic routines are other typical traits of families that abuse, she continues.

In addition to mental health and homelife, researchers recognize that children can influence the behavior of their parents and may contribute to the maltreatment.

Abused children tend to be "different" from their brothers and sisters, Miss Taylor indicates.

"Parents of abused children often describe the abused child as 'whiny, fussy, lazy, always crying, demanding, stubborn, sullen, pale, sickly, weak, fretful, panicky, and unsmiley.'

"This suggests that the child may be difficult to care for or that the parent doesn't know how to cope with the child's behavior.

"Therefore, the child is high risk for maltreatment," the specialist says.

Other child-centered causes of abuse that parents indicate are unwanted pregnancies that cause them to reject the child and a child not knuckling under to punishment that is less harsh than severe abuse.

For instance, no response or no tears for a spanking could threaten a parent's power and provike harsher discipline or even abuse, she explains.

Talent fair slated Saturday

Older adults sell crafts

The annual SEnior Citizens Talent Fair wil be 4:30 p.m. Saturday in the Highland Shopping Mall.

The fair features all types of handcrafted articles made by local and area senior citizens — afghans, quilts, children's toys, Christmas decorations, linens, wood work, baked goods and other decorator items.

The fair has increased in size since its beginning in 1971. Any senior citizen is eligible to participate in the talent fair. Sale prices are set by the individual seller who keeps all of the profit. The purpose of the fair is to supplement the income of those participating.

The talent fair is sponsored by the Howard County Council on Aging. The council was organized exclusively for charitable and educational purposes. Its primary purpose is to study the special needs of older adults and to develop kommunity resources to help meet those special needs and to aid other individuals in similarly concerned organizations.

Senior citizens who wish to display their handcrafts at the Fair should call the Senior Citizens Center at 263-4016, or the County Extension Office at 267-8469 to arrange for space.

Teens disagree on co-ed living

By Robert Wallace Ed. D.

Thanks to the 1,752 teens who shared their thoughts on "Should couples live together without being married?" Surprisingly 52 percent (911 teens) thought it was permissable for couples to live in "sin."

Of the 701 boys responding, 392 or 56 percent were in favor of this arrangement. Female teens were almost divided equally with 519 (49 percent) in favor; 532 (50.5 percent) opposed.

Let's hear what teens had to say on this topic.

From Anaheim, Calif.: No — the only way a mature relationship can be rewarded is by making a commitment of marriage. — Susan Opyrchal (15).

From Everett, Wash.: I believe many more people would be happier if they had lived together before they married. It would cut down on the number of divorces. — Chris Nelson, (14).

From Sidney, Ohio: No. The boy's reputation is not damaged but many feel the girl is a tramp! — Maria Toomey, (16).

From Rancho Palos Verdes, Calif.: Yes, but only if the couple is planning marriage and they want to see how it would work out. — Kathy H. (14).

From Fruitland, Idaho: No. By the time a couple has gone steady and been engaged, they should know each other well enough to marry or split. — Vickie Montgomery, (13).

From Dubuque, Iowa: Two mature people should be allowed to make up their own minds about living together without any social pressure! — Richard K. (18).

From York, Pa: No, because it is a sin. Roberta (17).

And last but in no way le , rom Rock Island, Ill.: No I don't think people should live together un-wed, unless they share the rent. — Eric W. (13).

I'd like to award a TwEEN 12 and 20 T-shirt to Vickie Thomason, 19, of Sacramento, Calif., who wrote ... "The family is a Godly institution conceived in love, and born in Holy matrimony. ..."

The next question to be discussed comes from Alma Black of Michigan City, Ind., who writes, "Would you vote for a female president, and why?"

Again, I will send a TwEEN 12 and 20 button to all teens who write regarding this question, and give a TwEEN 12 and 20 T-shirt to the teen who says it best.

Please write to me in care of his newspaper stating your sex and age.

Write to Dr. Robert Wallace, TwEEN 12 and 20, in care of this newspaper. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Washable walls best

When covering hall walls, choose a washable or spongable paper to withstand grubby marks and rubbing, recommends Sue Young, housing and home furnishings specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

Helping Hands Get A Knuckle-Rap

DEAR ABBY: Please say something to well-meaning friends and relatives who insist on crowding into the kitchen to help serve a meal even after you have said no, thank you, to their offers.

They block the passageways, the stove, the refrigerator and cabinets, and they think they're helping you. I've worked many hours preparing a good meal, but before I get it served, I'm ready to go to bed!

When a hostess refuses my offer to help, I retreat, return to the other guests and keep the conversation going. How I wish everyone would do me that way. Sign me . . .

NO HELP WANTED

DEAR NO HELP: There's a wonderful poem by Susan Sawyer that you might want to hang in your kitchen. It's been in my column, but apparently it's time for a rerun.

PLEASE STAY AWAY FROM MY KITCHEN

"Please stay away from my kitchen
From my dishwashing, cooking and such;
You were kind to have offered to pitch in
But thanks, no, thank you so much!

Please don't think me ungracious
When I ask that you leave me alone;
For my kitchen's not any too spacious
And my routine is strictly my own.

Tell you what: You stay out of my kitchen
With its sodden, hot, lacklustre lures—
When you're here, stay out of my kitchen
And I promise to stay out of yours!"

DEAR ABBY: I'm going with a dynamite guy. His friends say he has an IQ of a genius.

What's an IQ?

LEONA

DEAR LEONA: An IQ is the number which is supposed to indicate a person's level of intelligence. It is one's mental age (as shown by intelligence tests) multiplied by 100 and divided by one's chronological age.

DEAR ABBY: Please print this letter! It may open the eyes of many angry, vindictive divorced parents who are doing their children a terrible disservice.

My marriage was a mess. After many separations, reconciliations and a hundred broken promises, I decided to terminate my marriage before it destroyed me. (My handsome, charming husband had a weakness for young girls—some of them so young he nearly landed in jail.)

We had two children who didn't get to know their father very well, but they could understand what was being said to them. I never talked against him nor did I allow anyone else to. Rather, I taught my children to respect their father.

Today my children are both grown. I know they don't "love" their father the way they love me, but they don't "hate" him either. They call him long-distance on Father's Day and when he visits their town, they invite him (and his fourth wife) for a meal.

When you teach your child to hate the other parent, you do the child more harm than you do yourself good.

NO REGRETS IN DAYTON

DEAR NO: Thank you for a sensible letter. It comes at a time when many parents have agreed to disagree. I hope it opens a few eyes of those who are still able to see.

Do you wish you had more friends? For the secret of popularity, get Abby's new booklet; "How To Be Popular; You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped (28 cents) envelope to Abby, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Liz Taylor's new look gives Head challenge

Trying to make one of the world's most glamorous women look more like the rest of us is no easy feat and anyway, who would want to?

Award-winning designer Edith Head was faced with the challenge when she created the wardrobe for Elizabeth Taylor who co-stars with Joseph Bottoms in the Hallmark Hall of Fame production of "Return Engagement."

It is the first time that Hollywood's doyenne of the motion picture costume designers is doing a production with Miss Taylor in which she is a professional woman rather than a glamour girl.

Miss Taylor plays a college professor in the drama that will be seen on NBC-TV, Friday, Nov. 17 (9:30-11 p.m., EST). Joseph Bottoms plays an alienated student. They develop a relationship that is neither love nor friendship which sets them free from the personal cage each has created.

Miss Head says that Elizabeth Taylor looks glamorous, exotic, elegant. "All those things she's not supposed to be in this production," she adds. "It's much harder trying to make her not look like a star."

She talked to many teachers and found that they loved giving advice which was helpful to her in creating Miss Taylor's school teacher's wardrobe. The teachers pointed out that they were careful not to compete in dress with their students.

Miss Head based her sketches on the concept of interchangeability. "Stretch was the key word in designing these costumes for Elizabeth," she says. "I used skirts and jackets, the same skirt with a vest, sweaters, blouses — everything interchangeable. Maybe Hallmark should change the title to 'How to Dress a School Teacher'."

New American Hero is a woman's man

New York – There's a new man in the movies. He's not a ladies' man and he's not a man's man. He is, at long last, a woman's man. And according to the November issue of Mademoiselle he's also the New American Hero.

Author Amy Gross describes the New American Hero as "one hell of a nice guy, frequently mistaken for a pussycat."

Unlike the rock-like heros of the fifties, the New American Hero is usually not even a hero. Sometimes he's an underdog, must often he's just determinedly ordinary.

But don't get him wrong, the New American Hero is no pushover. He's assertive, fair and receptive, rather than domineering, bullying and bullheaded. Always sensitive, tender and vulnerable, this new man arouses a woman's compassion rather than her awe.

Irresistible stuff," says Ms. Gross. What does the New American Hero look like? If he's good looking you wouldn't describe him as handsome; he's either adorable-cute or beautiful.

Ms. Gross lists the following men as some of the newest New American Heros: John Travolta in "Saturday Night Fever," Richard Gere in "Bloodbrothers," John Ritter in "Three's Company," Nick tnolte in "Who'll Stop the Rain," John Voight in "Coming Home," Chris Sarandon in "Dog Day Afternoon," Peter Frampton, Jackson Brown, Frank Langella in "Dracula," Burt Reynolds in "The End," Sam Sheppard in "Days of Heaven," Billy Crystal in "Soap" and King Kong - as himself.
