COMMITTEES ARE DISCOURAGED AT POOR RESPONSE

'DON'T KNOW WHAT TO DO' SAY SHERROD AND ROYALTY

LUBBOCK'S BID FOR 1927 CONVENTION IS IN DANGER

"Twenty nine more tickets must be sold before Lubbock can secure a special train to the West Texas Chamber of Commerce convention and just where they are coming from, we don't know," was the report of G. P. Kuykendall, chairman of the ticket selling committee late last night.

"Our committees have combed the town, and it is hard to tell what to do," was the comment W. W. Royalty a vice chairman of the committee, and this sentiment was concurred in by Bee Sherrod another vice chairman.

Chas. Read, whose committee to date has sold the most tickets, says, "Stay in there and pitch," but the others say there is no one to pitch to.

The failure of business and professional men to respond has held up the arrangements of all the committees and with the convention only one week away, every one is at a loss just what to do.

Letters have already gone out over the district asking the support of other towns to bring the convention to Lubbock next year and it has been advertised far and wide that Lubbock would have a special train at the convention.

"Just where we are and just what to do is more than the leaders know, and while one is loath to believe that Lubbock will fall down, something has got to be done," say the convassers.

The Gas Question

AN EDITORIAL

Just now the question is receiving much thought, but more discussion, than most any other question relative to the development of the Lubbock country.

At the outset, we will state frankly that we want gas in Lubbock.

We will be so frank as to say that we do not want just any kind of gas proposition.

We believe there is good reason just at this time, to not give away to any concern the gas franchise of this city, and we find that we are not alone in this opinion; by all means. The main reason advanced being a desire to see this field thoroughly tested for gas and oil. It is our firm belief that there is an abundance of gas in this field, and while it may be all a mistake, there are many valid reasons for thinking that there is plenty of it here, and that by waiting a few months the town will not be hurt, and it might be the means of developing a great field of gas, equal to many of the best in the South. We do not know that we do not have a field equal to that of Amarillo—there is nothing impossible or out of the place in believing that we have, then why give the franchise away before this is definitely known?

We understand the city commission is evenly divided on the question, and we do not think the less of any of these gentlemen for the way they voted in the matter. They are men of good minds, and are close thinkers, and believe they are acting to the best interest of the city and the community in granting a franchise to the people proposing to string a line from the Amarillo field, but we believe that there is argument enough on the side of deferring the grant to a future date—till after a thorough test has been made, to convince these men that it should be done.

Much discussion has been heard regarding the action of the Board of City Development, and some seem to think the action of the board was very wrong, and that to not grab at this, the first opportunity to get gas, was a serious blunder on the part of the members of that organization. We happen to be a member of that board, and were glad to take an active part in the discussion of the question. We know that the men composing the group that was there, gave the matter serious consideration.

They discussed it from various angles, and without a dissenting vote went on record as recommending that the City Council not grant the franchise at this time. The promoters of the proposed line say that they are not getting an exclusive franchise, which is true in so many words, but in practice it would be. Once the franchise is granted to some long line company there would be little or no incentive for local companies to develop gas. Should they strike oil they would be right but a gas well out a few miles from Lubbock would have no chance whatever to get into the city after the town had been piped for gas connections with the Amarillo field. They tell us they have gas enough to supply any town or any number of towns, and that being the case there would be no demand for the gas from the wells here, hence it would be of no commercial value, and our local field would be useless.

Let us investigate thoroughly! We are in favor of a committee of capable representative citizens acting with the city commission, to make a thorough investigation of the territory for miles around, and see what they can think out in this line, and not force the mayor to make this decision himself. He wants to do the right thing. He is a sensible, good thinker, and his personal views, he does not mind to express, but he is representing tremendous interest when he is required to say the word either way in the matter. He wants gas in Lubbock. He wants to do the thing that is best for the town and the development of the country. We know he does. He is that type of man, but it is a question that no one man would like to take the responsibility of deciding, and while after all the commissioners are the only ones that can officially give the franchise away, the counsel of many interested citizens would no doubt be welcomed by the commissioners, each of whom believes he is acting to the best interests of the town and the people in this section of the country.

If there were no steps being taken to develop this field we would want the matter to have the most cautious action, but with the great amount of activity and the prospects of a number of test wells going in within a radius of seventy-five miles of this city and a number within a few miles of Lubbock, we feel doubly interested in the matter of granting a franchise to a foreign concern at this time. We think we should be very cautious, and give the local development every chance to prove the field.

What are considered first class geologists have said that there is plenty of gas in this section, then why not develop it? It will not cost much compared with what it would mean to the city in the nature of losses should a franchise be granted at this time and we should later discover that we have plenty of gas right at our door, and are not able to use it.

Lubbock wants a gas proposition that will induce more development. She wants a gas deal that will hold out special inducement to the manufacturer, and in order to hold out the very best inducements, we believe we should first try to get a supply of gas at home if possible, that can be furnished at a much less cost. Then if within the next few months it is proven that there is no gas here, there will be opportunities offered to pipe it here. We are confident that this is not the only proposition that will come our way, and while it looks good to the average citizen, and it sounds like we could never get one to equal it, when all the details are taken into consideration, we believe that we should not rush into the proposition without more thorough investigation of the local field.

Some people seem to think it will take much longer to get gas by developing the local field. It may do that, but should it develop that there is a good field here, then we will all agree that it was the proper thing to do, and should nothing develop, then we believe the time lost would not be equal to the gain that would be made should a good field be developed here.

One man who owns property here, is willing to write a check for $250.00 today to start an investigation, and we are confident that others would be willing to join him.

We understand the commission is to meet this morning and this matter will be taken up again. We urge for the best interests of the town and the community, the commission be very cautious. Let's get busy and test out the local field! When this is done, and if nothing is found, then we say full steam ahead for gas from other points, but before this is proven, we believe we should give the local field the benefit of the doubt and give the local companies a chance to thoroughly go into the matter.

HEDDA HOYT TALKS ABOUT THE THINGS THAT INTEREST THE BUSY WOMAN OF 1926.

Fashion Notes

NEW YORK, N. Y., June 11 — When off to the races, to a tea or a ball, we jump in a "jumper" and that's about all.

Jumper frocks are about the most important ones in the wardrobe this year. Although they are of the sports variety they are not necessarily made of sports materials such as tweeds, flannels or jerseys nor are they designed for sports wear alone.

So popular has the silk jumper frock become that it is now being worn for almost every conceivable occasion. Pastel-hued georgettes, chiffons and silk crepes in jumper lines are worn almost exclusively for afternoon occasions where formerly the more dressy was considered the smart thing.

The vogue for long sleeves and for tailored neck lines has even been adopted for evening time to some extent and we find the jumper frock doing service as an evening gown. Many smartly dressed women are including nothing more formal than jumper frocks in their summer's wardrobe choosing jerseys, flannels and tweeds for sports wear, silk crepes and georgettes for afternoon wear and chiffons and lace for evening wear.

The jumper-dress is particularly popular at out-of-town resorts. There it has almost become a uniform. One also sees this type of dress worn at smart New York hotels during the dinner hour. There are many reasons why the jumper dress has become universally adopted. The jumper frock is far more youthful than other models. It is flattering to the semi-corseted figure. It is comfortable and it is not as expensive as more ornate frocks.

The jumper portion of the frock may be of any length. It may be belted or unbelted. If belted, the belt is placed at a low waist line. Sleeves are generally short except in a few warm weather models. Skirts may be plain, pleated or tucked. The neckline is V-shaped in a few instances where the high collar is used to add tailored smartness.

One can actually be well dressed for all occasions during the summer if one possesses sufficient jumper frocks. In fact, some of the smartest women include nothing else in their wardrobes.

Carelessness in cultivation and a drought caused a big loss in Greece's current crop this year.

Polka Dot Crepe and Taffeta

Crepe de chine with black polka dots, the skirt being of black taffeta. The front of the skirt is laid in five box plaits. There are grouped tucks on either side of the front of the blouse.

Following an exceedingly smart fashion, the blouse droops at the shoulder and is lengthened with a long cuff of self-material. This section is close-fitting at the wrist and the absence of the usual cuff or other trimming is smartly apparent.

The upper front opening of the design is faced with taffeta, then turned back to form a reverse. To the neck edge a straight band of self-ribbon is added and this may be tied at one side to a smart bow or caught under a buckle in front.

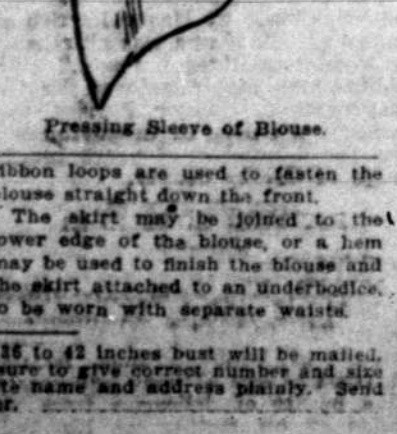

The diagram shows how to press the sleeve of the blouse after it has been joined to the extended shoulder seam. Instead of pressing the seam open, as usual, both edges are pressed toward the neck edge. If there is any fullness, it should be eased into the armhole as gently as possible.

Attractive Little Basque Frock

There is something unusually quaint about this frock that may be considered entirely apart from its piquancy and chic. Certainly there is no more effective way to combine contrasting fabrics.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

JOSEPH'S FIDELITY
International Sunday School Lesson for June 13, 1926.

GOLDEN TEXT — "Seest thou a man diligent in his business? He shall stand before kings." Prov. 22:29.

(Lesson Text—Genesis 39:1-23)

The story of Joseph is one of the interesting romances of the Old Testament. It reads like a modern story with its unexpected developments and ends with everybody happy and in prosperous condition. Joseph's character stands out in unusual prominence, being one of the old patriarchs of whom no great sin is recorded. Throughout the record the portrayal of him is one that wins respect, gains sympathy, and causes rejoicing at his ultimate great success.

Joseph's boyhood was marked by unusual traits and events. He was the favorite of his father, Jacob, being the elder son of Rachel, the beloved wife. The affection bestowed upon him and the faith entertained in regard to him by Jacob were justified by subsequent developments. Joseph proved faithful in every trust and his fidelity to righteousness and principle was remarkable.

Joseph's brothers hated him, unjustly perhaps but very easily understood from a human standpoint. He appears to have fixed his victims early in life as to the errors of life about him, and whenever one of his older brothers acted otherwise Joseph promptly carried the news to old Jacob. A tattletale, as it were, and the world, as a rule, does not admire such performances, especially the victims of such straightforwardness! However, it should be borne in mind that Jacob trusted Joseph, probably with reason, based on experience, and purposely sent him out to obtain a report on the way other sons were taking care of his business. It was Joseph's duty to report the truth and he did so, to his credit.

Modern society suffers many evils today because under a mistaken idea as to good-fellowship good men and given officers of the law wink at violation of the statutes. Often it is our duty to report, to discountenance certain customs, and only the recreant and unworthy would want another man to sacrifice the integrity of his life to shield short-comings. Men in public life allow graft to pass unchallenged rather than make a row, sit quietly by at misgovernment and political favoritism unless the issue is driven into their face in so public a way that it can not be avoided. Duty often leads to unpleasant tasks but all honor to the man who shoulders the burdens regardless of popularity or personal fortune.

Another cause of the jealousy of Joseph's brethren was the open preference Jacob exhibited in his behalf. Rather unwise for a parent, and usually creating resentment among the other sons and daughters. In Joseph's subsequent peril only one of his brothers sought to preserve him from any disaster, but he was only successful in reducing the crime from murder to selling Joseph into slavery.

Joseph had dreams, which he frankly and innocently related to his family circle. These were interpreted as indicating that Joseph would rule over the mall and another cause of envy and animosity was engendered. Only Jacob, fond parent, observed fond enjoyment in the contemplation of the heights to which

SOME HAPPY COUPLE WILL HAVE LARGE BRIDAL PARTY; TO BE WED AT FIESTA AT W. T. C. C. CONVENTION

AMARILLO, June 11.—How would you like to be married before a general gathering of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce convention, facing scores of newspaper reporters, staff correspondents, motion picture cameras and 5,000 people, including some of the most distinguished personages of the Southwest? In other words how would you like to be the official bride and groom of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce at its convention here during June 21, 22 and 23, in a ceremony surrounded by all the color, glamor and pomp that a gathering of such magnitude is able to impart? That is just the experience that will be the lot of one bride and groom immediately following the Spanish Fiesta as a fitting finale to the most colorful and picturesque evening of the entire convention to take place on Tuesday, June 22. The contracting parties have already given assent, and all other necessary arrangements are being completed. The wedding will have no particular significance except that the happy couple will have the distinction of being the first to be united in matrimonial bonds under the auspicious sanction of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce. Going through with the ceremony is not a matter of facing the minister and saying "Yes." It means facing as many people as can be packed within the four walls of the magnificent city auditorium from a stage that will cast into a setting of charm and gorgeous beauty by the consummate skill of an artist blessed by thin genius and experience in the creation of artistic impressions and befitting atmosphere. The Spanish motif—soft lights, bright shawls, roses entwined in fretted trellis-work, the inimitable, illusive romance of Old Spain and of colonial days that live in tantalizing memory—will prevail, entranced with melodies born of the passion and fire of the Castilian heart. The wedding party, made up of the bride and groom, officials of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce and the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce, and the cast of the Fiesta, will enter upon the stage immediately after the conclusion of the Fiesta. Here the ceremony, its various features designed to accord with extraordinary event and the charm of its setting, will be carried out in its completeness, and the first wedding to be held under the auspices of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce will have been presented as one of the most attractive and happy incidents of the great convention of the organization which will take place in Amarillo. The wedding is no sham affair, but a real honest-to-goodness marriage of a bride and groom, and the convention officials are eagerly preparing to give the two young people the happiest and most auspicious start possible into the great Adventure.

LOCAL MEN TELL OF OIL STRIKE

TRIPLETT AND PEARCE REPORT ON WELL AT LOVINGTON, NEW MEXICO
C. C. Triplett and Fred C. Pearce, of the law firm of Pearce & Triplett returned to their homes here yesterday afternoon following an extensive visit over the Lovington, New Mexico oil fields that have attracted much widespread interest since oil has been found in the Malinjar well just below the cap rock west of Lovington. At three thousand feet a flow of wet gas was struck, producing according to estimates 20,000,000 feet. The well was drilled on to four thousand feet where several strata of oil bearing sandy lime was found, since which time the well has flowed by heads during drilling operations. Drillers stated that they will shoot the well with a heavy charge of nitroglycerine at once, this having caused a great deal of interest in the well as it is believed that it will prove a gusher. Three other wells are being drilled southwest of Lovington. All the land in that vicinity is leased, according to the local men who made a thorough survey of conditions throughout the new field. Material is being hauled to a location fifteen miles southwest of Brownfield, in Terry county, on the Sawyer ranch. Already a contract has been made with Eastland county operators to sink a well on the south part of Cochran county five miles south and east of Bledsoe, actual operations to be started within thirty days, according to Messrs. Pearce and Triplett.

WILKINS FLYERS HOMEWARD BOUND

UNSUCCESSFUL ARCTIC EXPLORERS GIVE UP ATTEMPT
FAIRBANKS, Alaska, June 11.—Unsuccessful in their effort to explore Polar regions, members of the Detroit Arctic expedition have left their Fairbanks base and started the return trip to the United States. No definite plans for future exploration work have been decided upon. In the party entraining here Friday were Captain George H. Wilkins, leader of the expedition; Major Thomas G. Lanphier, airplane pilot; "Sandy" Smith, who led a dog team overland journey with supplies from Fairbanks to Point Barrow; Sergeant C. M. Wieseley, extra pilot, and Frederick E. Barr, newspaperman. Pilot Ben Eielson remained for an indefinite period to store the expedition's equipment. Before his departure Wilkins said that he might return here in August. He volunteered to help Lanphier start an expedition so that the two might engage in a friendly competition. The Detroit expedition has met misfortune almost continuously since its arrival in Alaska early this year. Motor trouble with two monoplane required constant attention and repairs. Finally the Alaskan smaller of the two was wrecked. The remaining Detroit proved unreliable in the air and the fact that only a small quantity of gasoline had been taken to Point Barrow made it impossible to continue the exploration project with only the one machine.

WILL BE SHERIFF EVEN IN JAIL

CHICAGO OFFICER SENTENCED FOR CONTEMPT TO "STAY IN SADDLE"
By United News
CHICAGO, June 11.—Law enforcement in greater Chicago for the next thirty days will be directed from behind the jail bars of an adjoining county where Sheriff Peter M. Hoffman is to be locked up for contempt of federal court. The jovial sheriff has been a prominent figure in republican circles here for 30 years and he does not intend that a mere month in jail shall deprive him of his official status regardless of what it may do to his rating as a political leader. "I will continue to be sheriff," Hoffman said as he tidied up his desk preparatory to going to the county jail. "I will continue to begin serving his sentence. I won't be very active due to my confinement, but I will be in the saddle just the same. I have arranged to turn my office over to Chas. Peters and George Webster, my deputy and assistant."

RADIO

By WILLIAM J. FAGAN (United Press Radio News Editor)
NEW YORK, June 11.—Ever so often some simple soul with a patriotic complex and an anxiety for publicity starts the battle cry "opera in English." Now the radio impresarios are commencing to be recipients of screeds urging the "mother tongues of the operas performed be scrapped in favor of the Anglo-Saxon. "Give us opera we can understand," the eternal wail. It used to come from the folk who were too lazy to read the librettos sold around the opera houses. With the opera season over, and the radio opera season still in full cry, radio is getting its share of suggestions. If you have an acquaintance with Italian or French, just look over the English translations on the odd pages of any favorite libretto and not two utterly innocuous most of the phrases are. If you don't know Italian or French, read over the English libretto and enjoy yourself. If you are a vocalist grab an operatic score and see how the translators have mistreated the singers in combining music and words. If you have listened to a radio opera in English, how many words could you distinguish? Or did you think it was being done in any language including the Scandinavian?

THE DUTY OF A JUDGE—"I charged your judges, saying, Hear the cause between your brethren, and judge righteously between every man and his brother, and the stranger that is with him." Deut. 1:16.

ANSWERING THE UNANSWERABLE

There are many questions man cannot answer because of the limitations of his knowledge. These, however, are the more frequently asked because of the insatiable curiosity about the things that are still a mystery to him. In fact, the less likelihood there is of a question being answerable, the greater the likelihood of its frequent repetition.

The Paris Figaro has placed such a question before the French Academy of Science: are religion and science opposed to each other? And the French savants have expressed various opinions, mostly to the effect that they are not opposed, and have gone to some trouble to explain the processes by which they have arrived at these opinions.

But these worthy scientists must know as well as we that they have not answered the question, that they cannot answer it, because they have absolutely no knowledge upon which to base an answer. Religion is spiritual and infinite, science is material and finite. They may not, however, be necessarily opposed, but we do not know that. Neither do the members of the French Academy of Science.

These questions are well enough for speculative discussion, but it savors of the ridiculous for scientists to express positive opinions on matters in which their ignorance is as colossal as that of the veriest layman.

NO LACK OF WORDS

How often do we find difficulty in thinking of just the right word to express a certain idea? Even the greatest writers must often stop to weigh their words in order to hit upon the most appropriate one, while few speakers can observe all the niceties of expression without writing out their speeches and memorizing them beforehand.

These difficulties are not due to any lack of words in the English language, however. Possibly it may be a result of our having too many to choose from. The latest unabridged dictionaries contain more than 400,000 words, and the list is increasing constantly.

Noah Webster's first dictionary, published in 1828, contained only about 70,000 words; the edition of 1864 included 114,000; that of 1890 about 175,000, as compared with the 400,000 recognized words of today.

Yet President Wilson, who was one of the most gifted masters of English the world has ever known, in 75 different public addresses used a total of only 6,221 different words. In three of his published books, however, he used about 60,000 different words. This shows that vastly more words are used in writing than in speaking.

A leading lexicographer estimates that the educated person of fair ability understands on an average about 50,000 words, but uses only a small part of that number in either speaking or writing. The mass of the people know and use less than 8,000 words out of the 400,000 available.

An interesting experiment is to inspect a few pages of an unabridged dictionary and count how many words out of a hundred you are really familiar with, both as to spelling and meaning. Try it.

THE GOLDEN AGE

What is the Golden Age of a man's life? Is it childhood, early manhood, late manhood, or senility? Does it comprise school days or work days or dull days?

The answer is—middle age. When you pass the 50 mark then you are just entering the Golden Age of life. Gone are the follies, the illusions of youth, gone a certain physical exuberance, but in their place is a balance of thought, a maturity of appreciation, a fund of patience that far overbalances the apparent carefree atmosphere of youth. All these things we should acquire before we reach the age of 50 so that we may more fully enjoy life during its most fruitful period.

THE WORLD CHANGES

One of the most spectacular effects of science on civilization is modern industry and all it has done for us and to us. In a period of less than 200 years the Western world has been changed more than in the many thousands of years preceding. In the last century the change was far greater than in the preceding century. In the last half century the pace was much faster than in the 50 previous years. The pace is ever more and more rapid. Where will the next half century take us. The reason for the increase in the speed of our progress is quite simple. Science is accumulative. It grows. The inventions that grow out of science multiply with tremendous speed. It is only reasonable to suppose that if civilization survives, it will change with ever increasing rapidity. And major change will alter our living conditions and change us personally. Therefore it behooves us to learn to be more and more adaptable to change lest we be overwhelmed with antiquity. At the same time it will be well to cultivate balance, for it is the rapid movement of civilization that has thrown the world into the present state of turmoil.

UNUSED KNOWLEDGE

The most wonderful medical discoveries will do no good unless people take the trouble to learn about them and make use of them. The medical knowledge of the world today is far in advance of utilization. This fact is pointed out emphatically by Miss Elizabeth Fox, director of public health nursing of the American Red Cross.

The public is enthusiastic, she observes, when announcement is made that some new disease germ has been isolated, or some new serum found, and immediately considers that the disease conquered and relaxes its vigilance or interest in the matter. But, she insists, our new knowledge cannot of itself work any magic. It can operate only as it becomes the property of men, women and children as well as the medical profession.

People must learn to use this knowledge, in sickness and, better still, in prevention of sickness. And they must be willing to call a skillful doctor when they need him, and go to the hospital for services they cannot get at home. Only thus can medical wizardry serve mankind.

NEW METHODS SUCCEED

The success of the new methods in school discipline have not only revolutionized the schools but has given all connected with them a new outlook on life. Especially is this true of the pupils. No longer are lessons a bore and a hardship; they are so interesting and captivating that children cry if they are kept away from them for a day. No longer are teachers stern mentors and harsh tyrants; they are pleasant comrades in the game of finding out the most fascinating new things. The children are happier, healthier, work harder and learn more.

The rapid development of our school system has been notable indeed, but the development of these new methods are of the utmost importance and the result of their influence upon the rising generation is beyond our powers to forecast. Results already attained have justified the adoption of these "new fangled" methods, once deemed so visionary and revolutionary.

THOUGHT CHANGES THE WORLD

The world has become a new world because its processes of thought have changed. Only recently, as time goes, has the thought of the mass, or even of the most enlightened individuals, been more than speculative. Galileo, just before 1600, developed a mania for seeking to substantiate his theories. He decided that he must make tests that would prove them beyond doubt or question. Previous to that time the world had theorized without much regard to proof. Gradually a more methodical and exact element dominated thought until today the ineffective method of thought of former centuries astound, and not a little amuse, us. The existence of this ever-growing body of dependable, produce-the-proof thought, with its application to the affairs of man, has produced a new world, a world in which miracles are so common that one hardly notes them. The exact sciences have already accomplished such marvels that one waits with keen anticipation for what they will yet accomplish.

TOO FAST A PACE

Economic, political and social processes once open and clear in the simple community have become extremely complex, adding infinitely to the demand upon the individual and to the danger to his health and sanity. Not only this, but the phenomenally increased speed of communication and transportation has added such an alarming amount of excitement and nerve strain, new to the human system, that it threatens to wreck man mentally and physically. This fact, while recognized by the medical profession, is too little realized by the public. Statistics of various institutions give ample proof. Unless man slows down a to a sane pace his nervous system will be shattered, and with it his mind and body. This cannot be too much emphasized. Serious attention should be given to the problem of eliminating as fast as possible the terrific strain under which we live today.

LIFE-GIVING GRASS

Medicinal fakes are not confined to America. Suit has been brought in Japan against a clever oriental who made a fortune by supplying credulous people with what he represented as "a miraculous, life-giving herb," when it was nothing but grass. He will probably go to jail for it. Yet in a way was he not right? Taken not superstitiously, but used naturally and freely, what is more life-giving than grass? Walt Whitman felt that, when he wrote: "A child said, 'What is the grass?' fetching it to me with full hands.

"How could I answer the child? I do not know what it is, any more than he. I guess it must be the flag of my disposition, out of hopeful green stuff woven. Or I guess it is the handkerchief of the Lord, a scented gift and remembrance, designedly dropped, bearing the owner's name somewhere in the corners."

When The Doctor Calls

So Think We

We think Nineteenth street should be paved from Ave H to College avenue. Avenue I connected with Nineteenth, and Sixteenth street paved to College Avenue, also Seventeenth street, and no objections could be raised to extending the paving on Thirteenth street to College avenue. This would give a good area of paved streets, divert traffic and lessen the probability of having car wrecks.

We think when people go away and send back a post card telling about what a wonderful time they are having and showing pictures of the splendid places where they have been, take all the pleasure out of it by failing to put enough postage on the thing to deliver it.

We think Lubbock should put on a big paving campaign right now, and give a lot folks employment as well and make some of the streets better. It can be done now just as well as later, and will serve a two-fold purpose.

We think that swearing is one of the most profitless, most uncalled for habit that a man can get into, and it is likewise one of the ugliest, that a man can engage in.

We think with all of the sheriff at the West Texas convention, that the deputies will have a great time keeping the home fires burning.

We think there is hardly anything that is more vexing on these hot days than to have a blow out in a hot roadbed and not even a spare tire available.

We think there is one advantage in women visiting over the telephone. It only takes one goodbye at the phone, while at the front door it usually takes about fourteen.

We think there is one time in a man's life that he does not get his money's worth and that is when a woman marries him for his money.

We think that one should always quit talking before he has said all he knows about any subject.

We think there is an over-production of paint and powder on some of the faces of the girls of this city.

We think with the heavy rail traffic through Lubbock that Lubbock should have more protection at the north Avenue H crossing, and the crossing on East Broadway.

We think some people spend so much time trying to determine what is right and what is wrong that they really do not have time to do either.

We think the few alleys that have been paved is a pretty good example of how much better they are, and many other property owners should follow.

It Is Reported

That the Lubbock Kiwanians had a fine time at the Plainview luncheon Friday.

That the only way one Mineral Wells husband can cook eggs is to scramble them, and they run together and he very often scorches them.

That Houston is celebrating the installation of the 50,000th telephone. This gives a wonderful latitude for wrong numbers.

That a Lubbock man has invented a "hootus" that fits on the automobile tire rim that makes changing tires a pleasure rather than a vexing job. He surely will get rich.

That a Plainview man was heard to say that when all the wrong numbers are busy he gets the right one over the telephone. That's an awful disposition for any man to have.

That the rules of style say that your hat band should correspond with your wearing apparel. We are in style and did not even know it. Our hat band is ragged and almost worn out.

That the Tech Freshmen were given a rousing goodbye by upper classmen as they departed for their homes after the close of the Tech.

It is reported more nickels go to church in Lubbock than any other kind of money, yet they some time think they do not get their money worth.

That some folks are going to try to pass a law against sneezing in public. Wonder if it will have teeth in it?

That lightning struck two Tahoka residences during a recent thunder storm.

WORLD TOPICS

BRITISH COAL SUBSIDY

Premier Stanley Baldwin has hinted that the British Government will "extend" to the coal industry "assistance." He does not say what form the "assistance" will take, but it is supposed that he can have no other meaning than "subsidy."

Knowing, however, that the British tax payer is getting a little impatient of subsidies it is only natural that Premier Baldwin would wish to sugar-coat the bitter pill as best he can.

There is no doubt, however, that Great Britain will have to come to the subsidy as a means of stimulating what to her is an extremely vital industry. The coal business is not a paying proposition as is and with increased wages to miners would be still less so. Since it attains somewhat the rank of a public utility there would be rather complete justification for a government subsidy.

The demand of the farmers, railroads and manufacturers for governmental "relief" or protection, has started a crusade among some others who feel the need of a few additional ducats to make both ends meet. Clerks in city stores, ministers, young lawyers, bank clerks, a goodly list of doctors, and a small army of newspaperin' guys.

The difference of opinion over the adjustment of the coal business between Lord Grey and Asquith and David Lloyd George threatens to split what is left of the Liberal Party. Because the latter has severely criticized the government

TO THE FISH THAT GOT AWAY

At first I was inclined to fret
Because you had escaped my net.
The more my fancy dwelt on you,
The larger, I believe, you grew.
That was a royal fight you gave,
Three times you broke above the wave.
Then from your mouth the hook you tossed,
And you became the fish I'd lost.
In my despair of beaten pride
Your size and weight I magnified.
While you were uppermost in thought
I fancied forgo the fish I'd caught.
I quit you were sweeter meat
Than those I had and soon should eat.

Wholesalers Win From P. O. Tailors

The Wholesalers downed the Postal-Tailors 4 to 2 in a very interesting game at the Tech park yesterday afternoon. Errors featured in the defeat of the Tailors and the Wholesaler twirlers gave them a great deal of trouble also.

Tatum of the Postal Tailors had a perfect day at the bat, getting two safeties out of the same number of trips. Baton also hit 1000. Both teams played good ball and showed development from the opening game.

MAYOR HOLDS UP DECIDING BALLOT WHEN CITY DADS TIE

Deadlocked as to whether Lubbock should accept or reject the offer of eastern capitalists represented by A. J. McMahan to pipe natural gas from the Amarillo field to Lubbock, the city council yesterday voted to defer action until this morning when the proposal will again be gone into.

The city has been asked to deliver a franchise to the capitalists, and the conditions of this franchise are the center of contest.

Mayor Pink L. Parrish started yesterday to cast the deciding vote, but expressed a desire to investigate further.

Epworth League Closes Meeting

ABILENE, June 11.—Friday evening and the convention of the Northwest Texas Conference of the Epworth league is history.

The convention has been a success. Not so much pep perhaps as was shown outside of class rooms during the past years but plenty of it from time to time and more work done than ever before.

The regular program of the day was carried out as far as possible, except of course that on the last day of such a gathering there is much business that necessarily has to be attended to. Morning watch of course the last sunrise devotionals of the convention, in the words of the Hymn One Sweetly Solemn Thought.

Classes on schedule, notebooks graded the night before and returned either O. K. or otherwise, and upon this depended the credit of the individual on his work along with his attendance upon class.

Lubbock district has shown up fairly well except that was not entered in the loving cup contest. All delegates from the entire district obtained their full two units toward the Christian culture diploma and all chapters represented have at least gained an enormous benefit.

The local Lubbock chapter of the First Church represented well enough to make Lubbock recognized at the conference. Ten certificates of two units each were awarded for work done and our pastor was a member of the faculty beside being on the league board.

Evelyn Wilson, Eva May, Ola May, Mrs. O. J. Felt, Mary Lois Thompson, Richard Cavett, Alice Egan, Sallie Bean, S. S. Pritchard, Senior Representatives, and Wesley Duak, Intermediate Representative, were those to whom the certificates were awarded at the closing session of the convention.

Perhaps the biggest and most interesting event of this day was the awarding of the loving cup in the inter-district contest. Lubbock said she didn't care for it, Stamford bid 15, Vernon 24.2, Sweetwater 24.3, Amarillo 27, Abilene 39, Clarendon thought she had it with a total score of 52.832, but Plainview said it was to be seen clearly that their total of 53.171 took the cup for the ensuing year.

At the evening hour a beautiful pageant of famous and well known Bible passages and actions were given under the direction of Mrs. Hawkins of the Clarendon district and after this the business of awarding the cup was taken up.

The closing note of the assembly was sounded by Dean Hamilton, President of the conference league board, with the awarding of the certificates. In all one hundred thirty six delegates had done work meriting two units and four for one unit totaling two hundred seventy-six units of work.

Delegates from Lubbock will start for home at five o'clock this morning and are expecting to arrive home by noon.

The Sunday evening program of the Lubbock league will be in charge of Richard Cavett and will be presented by these delegates.

The registration for the summer session will be continued over until Monday according to word given out by Registrar E. L. Dohoney last night. A steady stream of students went through the process yesterday and many more will register today. No estimate was made as to the number enrolled yesterday and the roll was not checked up.

A large number of students from other schools enrolled yesterday. Very few freshmen are attending the summer session.

Brazil Defends Smaller Nations

BY J. T. MASON
Written for the United News

The Brazilian government, following its precedent of many years standing, is defending the rights of the smaller nations in matters of international justice. The apparent decision of Brazil to withdraw from the league of nations means that the "bloc of major European powers" cannot run the rest of the world.

Brazil considers an affront has been offered her by the efforts of the dominant league members to force a chance in the Brazilian attitude toward the admission of Germany. As a sovereign member of the council of the league, Brazil believes her policies must be accepted as unquestionably as the great powers of Europe are compelled to accept one another's motives.

Since this viewpoint is not agreeable to the league's managing membership, Brazil is planning to resign.

Brazil's action is justified by the undoubted tendency of the league to become a group organization. World peace cannot be preserved by a clique, to which smaller powers are forced to show subservience. The league was organized on the principle that practical unanimity is necessary to keep the peace. But, this original basis of the organization has been gradually brushed aside by the temporary statesmen in charge of certain European foreign offices.

They have wanted to run the league, and Brazil is now in revolt against their methods of trying to over awe smaller nations who desire an equal voice in the destinies of the world.

The managers of the league are bent on saving the Geneva organization, they will try to realize the fundamental factor back of Brazil's action. This is not a sudden nose in the cart of Rio De Janeiro. It is the strict conformity with Brazil's time honored policy, which the United States encountered long before the world war, when the old Hague court of international arbitration was being organized.

The major question, then at issue was in substance similar to the present league dispute. It concerned the matter of what nations should appoint the judges for the international court. The late Joseph H. Choate, American delegate, became spokesman for the interests of the great powers at the Hague gathering. The smaller powers were in despair until Ruy Barbosa, Brazilian delegate, replying to Choate, challenged the great powers and demanded adequate representation on the bench for the smaller nations. Barbosa's argument won the support of Washington, and the American delegation was instructed to change its attitude.

The league of nations remember this precedent. If it does, and if the sensitiveness of the smaller powers is accepted as worthy of full respect, then the league will gain in influence and the cause of peace will be enriched. But, if Brazilian resentment is regarded as being simply a display of temperament, the statesmen in the great capitals of Europe will prove that the old system of diplomacy by secret alliances are in proper form or are made by foreign ministers exchanging mutual pledges. The effort is the same, Brazil, asserting her equality with members of the league, has thus put the great powers on the defensive, for if the league dies it will have been killed by the secret diplomacy of those who professed at the outset that the league was to abolish that way of running the world.

Growth of Rival League Predicted

BY HENRY WOOD
United News Staff Correspondent

GENEVA, June 11.—Pan-American solidarity through the building of the Pan-American union into a rival of the league of nations is fore seen by leaders of the league as the probable outcome of Brazil's defection from Geneva.

Before departing for their various capitals Friday European statesmen were frank to admit that the resignation of Brazil from the council and the threatened withdrawal of Spain had faced them with a grave difficulty. That other American countries may follow suit is not unreasonable to expect.

Scandal Grows In Pennsylvania

By RAYMOND CLAPPER
United News Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, June 11.—With expenditures of $1,394,000 already confessed and much more to come, the recent Pennsylvania senatorial primary race already has gained the distinction, such as it is, of having been the most costly in the most corrupt in the history of any state.

Many local organizations through the state have not reported their contributions and disbursements. Yet the total expenditures admitted thus far by the three candidates or their managers include:

Senator George Wharton Pepper, defeated, $1,056,000.

Governor Gifford Pinchot, defeated, $195,000.

Representative William S. Vare, nominated, (Personal contribution only) $153,418.

Grand total to date $1,313,000.

This is more than six times the expenditure for which Truman H. Newberry was condemned by the senate. Pepper spent practically five times what Newberry did. Such figures are likely to have a tremendous effect being drawn into the general fall campaign because of the connection of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon with the candidacy of Senator Pepper.

Although congress is denied by a supreme court decision from legislating regarding state primaries, the senatorial disclosures now being made are likely to have a tremendous effect indirectly, and can hardly escape being drawn into the general fall campaign because of the connection of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon with the candidacy of Senator Pepper.

CARL MAGEE GOES ON TRIAL NEXT WEEK, FIGHTING EDITOR FACES MANSLAUGHTER CHARGE

LAS VEGAS, N. M., June 11.—Carl Magee, famous fighting editor and for seven years the storm center of New Mexico politics, goes on trial here next Tuesday on a charge of manslaughter, the culmination of a series of trials for libel and contempt of court without parallel in the history of American newspaperdom.

Magee was charged with manslaughter in connection with the death of John B. Lasseter, a state highway department employee, on August 22, 1925. Lasseter was killed by a stray bullet from a 22 caliber pistol in the hand of Magee at a moment when the editor was prone on the floor of a hotel lobby during a physical encounter with his bitter enemy, former Judge D. J. Leahy.

The shooting of Lasseter was the tragic climax to Magee's repeated attacks on features of New Mexico's political system which he considered reformation. Magee entered New Mexico journalism in 1919 when he purchased the Albuquerque Morning Journal through the intermediation of Albert B. Fall, then just elected to the United States Senate.

The new editor's first important move in New Mexico politics was a sharp criticism of the administration of the state land office. He charged that politicians instead of school children profited most from the public revenue. Fall promptly warned him against this editorial policy and threatened to crush him if he persisted in it. Magee declared.

Instead of ceasing his criticism Magee widened it with an attack on other state officials with the result, as he charged, that two banks holding his notes refused to renew them and a local bank started foreclosure proceedings. Magee appeared to his readers to aid him and succeeded in selling $55,000 worth of bonds to keep his paper going.

It was shortly after this that Magee announced his decision to join the ranks of the Democrats, declaring that the old Republican organization was beyond reform within. Six months later he was brought to trial for criminal libel as a result of his increasingly plain-spoken editorial utterances. The judge directed a verdict of guilty and the jury allowed one dollar in damages to the plaintiffs who were members of the banking interests Magee charged were trying to ruin him financially.

Meanwhile he had found it impossible to maintain his ownership of the Morning Journal and some time after the first libel suit was compelled to sell it. In June, 1922, he started Magee's Weekly Independent to continue his editorial policy and operated the weekly until April, 1923, when he made it a daily and named it the New Mexico State Tribune. In the fall of 1923 the new State Tribune became the Scripps-Howard newspaper, the management having been attracted by Magee's political crusade and from this point on Magee was backed with the resources of that organization.

In the spring of 1923 Magee had his first court clash with Judge Leahy, the hostility between the two which culminated three years later in the death of Lasseter. Magee was taken before Judge Leahy's court in Las Vegas and convicted of criminal libel of another judge who testified he himself did not consider the comment in issue libelous. Leahy sentenced Magee to 12 to 18 months in the penitentiary. While the trial was in progress Magee continued to comment editorially on Judge Leahy's methods and after the first conviction he was again convicted and again sentenced to a year in jail and a fine of $4,000.

The militant editor's struggles had by this time become the burning center of New Mexico's political situation and virtually every citizen in the state had taken sides either for or against him. After his double conviction by Judge Leahy he was pardoned by Governor Hinkle, who declared the proceedings were "a blot on the state."

The governor's pardon failed to end the series of trials in which Magee's enemies continued to attempt to bring the editor's striking attacks to an end. Shortly after the pardon he was tried on a criminal libel charge as the result of a statement which Magee had retracted. This trial, held before Judge Reed Holloman, Santa Fe, resulted in an acquittal. On a later occasion another trial resulted in an award of a dollar damages to local bankers on criminal libel charges.

Pending contempt of court charges in Judge Leahy's court were brought to trial again in Las Vegas in the summer of 1924. Leahy found him guilty of indirect contempt on two charges. When asked if he had anything to say, Magee replied: "I deny I am being accorded due process of law and I deny this is a court." Leahy thereupon found him guilty of direct contempt and sentenced him to three months in jail. In this trial the editor refused to plead and withdrew the appearance of both his attorneys.

As on previous occasions the governor pardoned Magee promptly but this time the sheriff for a time refused to honor the pardon and Magee spent two days and nights in jail while some of his friends urged the governor to call out the National Guard to release him. He was released, however, to the jurisdiction of the state supreme court on habeas corpus proceedings. Some time later the supreme court ruled the governor had power to pardon in direct contempt cases and all charges growing out of Judge Leahy's citations were terminated.

Upon his release, Magee took the stump in the 1924 campaign in behalf of the Democratic ticket in Judge Leahy's district. Leahy was defeated in the fall election. His next personal encounter with Leahy occurred in the hotel lobby during a physical August when during a physical attack the editor's wildly aimed shot killed Lasseter. Throughout his active career in New Mexico Magee has conducted a column of comment on current news called "Turning on the Light." In it he has not hesitated to attack in the most deliberate terms practices which he considered corrupt or inimical to the best interests of the state. His plain speaking incurred the bitter enmity of many while at the same time it gained him friends who believed implicitly in his policies.

Tells of Terry County Drilling

BROWNFIELD, June 11.—In view of the fact that several articles have appeared in the Avalanche and other daily papers over the state concerning the present oil development in Terry county which are calculated to cause undue activity by lease holders and excitement among non-resident owners, the writer has decided that it would be much better to furnish the general public with the true facts and clean publicity for the section effected.

At the present time there is not any oil well being drilled in Terry county and no acreage has been secured for any deep test but efforts are being made to block up for that purpose but citizens undertaking the work are handicapped by reason that former articles have been the cause of this county and Youkum being visited by persons who undertake to lease the country in small block for the sole purpose of paddling the leases and have no idea of securing contracts for development and their activities have caused owners of land, both resident and non-resident, to become excited and refuse to place their holdings in a drilling block or to grant extensions on existing leases and this last applies to owners of land in the vicinity of the present shallow tests that are now going down in Youkum county and which are located about 25 miles northwest of Brownfield and about seven miles northwest of Tokio, a small town in the western edge of Terry county.

The record of the present test in Youkum county which has been accorded so much publicity is as follows: A small showing of oil at 220 feet and another showing at about 400 feet with a trace of gas, which is noticed in bubbles in slush pit as well as cleaned. I am also informed that the formations are similar to the Maljama well southwest of Lovington, New Mexico, and run about 1,000 feet higher.

But to sum the whole situation, according to information received from the man who owns the leases in northeast Youkum county and who is financing and drilling two wells on the block is that the leases were secured under a six months agreement to drill and that due to unforeseen circumstances in the way of delay in receiving machinery and of cave-ins, he is not able to commence operations on each separate ownership within the time limit and is experiencing some difficulty in getting owners to grant extension and he says that if the territory becomes very much more checker-boarded than it is at present that he will in self-defense be compelled to cease operations and undertake to block in some other section where more protection can be secured. In view of the above situation it would be good policy for land owners to get the leasing bug off the brain and figure from a royalty basis as after all as said, the royalty is the real money if oil is found.

NEW EMBASSY SOON.

LONDON—Ambassador and Mrs. Houghton expect to move into the new American Embassy at 13 and 14 Princes Gate—the building given by J. Pierpont Morgan—toward the latter part of July.

The two buildings have now been converted into one; the decorators have come in to carry out the architect's plans and the Ambassador expects to give up Crew House the last of July.

The offices of the Embassy—including the Chancery and the quarters of the naval and military attaches—will remain at 4 Grosvenor Gardens.

In one day at the London dog show eighteen American buyers paid fancy prices for pets.

Former Princes Charged With Embezzlement

By United Press.
BERLIN—A suit for embezzlement has been filed against the former Crown-Princess Cecily by the Berlin branch of the Association for the Protection of the Republic.

In its writ to the court, the association declares that "Mrs. Cecily, Princess of Prussia" committed the embezzlement in connection with an attempted fraud.

The organization's suit is based on the following facts, as related by the democratic deputy, Dr. Bohner, during a recent session of the Prussian Diet.

A pair of valuable Sevres vases had disappeared from the public "Schloss Museum," in the premises of the old imperial castle at Berlin.

On investigation it was learned, so Dr. Bohner asserted, that the vases belonged to the disputed property of the former crown-prince, who, however, was willing to leave them to the museum in exchange for a couple of valuable Rembrandt paintings.

The deal was concluded when the former crown-princess asked permission to see the vases once more before she was definitely added to the museum's collection. She furthermore asked, for sentimental reasons, that she be spared a visit to the museum in the old imperial castle and that the vases be brought to her for inspection at some other place.

This request was granted by the director of the museum, according to Dr. Bohner, with the understanding that the vases be returned immediately after the inspection, and the valuable art objects were transported to the Netherlands Palace, one of the former princely dwellings not open to the public.

Thence they disappeared mysteriously. They are said to be at Oels castle, Silesia, the residence of the crown-prince and his family.

On inquiry as to the whereabouts of the vases, the director of the Schloss Museum has allegedly been informed by a secretary of the crown princess that "since the state was not keeping its word, the crown-princess saw no reason why she should keep hers."

Pro Agents Must Buy Own Gas

WASHINGTON, June 11.—Prohibition agents using their own cars in enforcement work cannot get any reimbursement for them, nor for gasoline used on duty, Comptroller McCarl ruled Friday after W. F. Hinno, administrator at Minneapolis had submitted vouchers on account cars used by his agents. Not only can the agents not use their own cars and get expenses back from the government, but they cannot hire cars for raids or other work, McCarl holds.

2,000 MUSICIANS TO PLAY TOGETHER

TEXAS TOURIST TRAFFIC GROWS

HOTEL MEN NOTE INCREASE IN AUTO TRAVEL
OVER STATE

"Few people in Texas appreciate the volume of tourist travel that has developed in the state during the past four or five years and what it has meant or may mean to the growth and development of the state," declared Curtis A. Keen of The Baker Hotels of Texas, in a letter to the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce this week.

A careful check on several representative days last summer it was found that more than half of the people stopping at the Baker Hotels during June, July and August came by automobile. It is estimated that more than three million people in Texas will make some kind of tour or automobile trip of a more or less extended nature within the next ninety days. Of that number less than an even thousand can sit down and draw a rough map showing the points they will touch with their proper relation to the other cities and points of Texas. And yet everybody likes to know where they are going.

"After a close study of the tourist situation throughout the country we are convinced that Texas is due for the greatest play in a tourist way within the coming two or three years that any section of America has ever enjoyed. Surely the eyes of the world are upon Texas. Information is getting out that Texas is a combination summer and winter resort country—offering unlimited beauty spots and points of interest from sea coast to mountain peak—with atmosphere, romance, history and business opportunity, all combined. All of the tourist travel from California to Florida—and back, from the north and east to California, and from the north and west to Florida—and with the completion of the proposed highways across Mexico—from all parts of the United States to Mexico—must pass through Texas. The tourist crop of Texas will amount to as much as her cotton crop in another few years—and wise is the city that bids for favor in the great movement now."

There is a marked tendency on the part of seasoned, experienced travelers to depend upon the first class highway inns for overnight stops as the improvement of the highways warrant greater distances and less chance of becoming lost after dark in traveling cross country. Petty thieves, unsanity and crowded tourist parks, dust, dirt and worry and the comfort and happiness that come from a good bath, a good feed and an opportunity to really see something of the town itself—are the contributing factors that are doing away with the public, free tourist park and putting the visitors into the city proper, in hotels. A growing number of cities are finding their free tourist parks a problem in more ways than financial and are getting behind their local hotels in advertising the advantages of stopping downtown under conditions that really reflect credit to the city visited—rather than in some nearby camp site under uncertain conditions.

Texas is coming into its own as a tourist playground and the Baker Hotels want to co-operate with the Chambers of Commerce of the state in further developing this interest in tourist travel in Texas.

The Wife Who Wasn't Wanted

By DOROTHY A. F. MARCELL

Copyright, 1925, Warner Bros. Pictures Inc.

THE WIFE WHO WASN'T WANTED with Irene Rich is a picture of this genre.

SYNOPSIS

Eileen Manning has been visiting her son, Bob, at the jail. Bob is accused of manslaughter, having been in a car that crashed into another, killing a woman. In leaving she meets her husband, John Manning, from whom she is temporarily estranged, because, as District Attorney, he insists upon prosecuting his own son. Then she meets Jerome Wallace, John's opponent in the election. "I see what the office would enable me to do for you and your son," Wallace tells her.

Eileen turned, and this time not to betray her feelings. Into her mind leaped the remembrance of John with his resolute: "I am District Attorney. I will do my duty." It was an unpleasant memory fading before a later and fresher one. John, with his arms full of packages for Bob. He must have bought a sample of every brand of cigarettes in the world to be certain that he had not overlooked his son's favorite.

A queer picture that last compared to the first, thought Eileen, and it enabled her to get a grip on herself. Yet very much kinder was she now to Wallace. When he held out his hand to say good-bye she took it.

And not slow to take advantage of the privilege, he held it as he went on to say:

"So far as you are concerned, you are in a most advantageous position. No matter which way the election goes your son's freedom is assured. You know he is safe if Manning remains in office, and should I be elected I pledge you my support."

As the car rolled away he coolly waved a parting salutation.

And when her face lighted before his words with a joy she could not conceal Wallace still clung to her hand and even gave it ever so light a reassuring squeeze that through no possible mistake could she be unaware of his loyal friendship.

Thus they went when John Manning came forth from the jail and moved towards them. Careless at first, he displayed real surprise when he recognized Eileen's companion.

Yet Wallace awaited him with the utmost composure, greeting him with a friendliness which bordered upon effusiveness.

John, it must be said, was rather cold. Having cast a fleeting glance at his wife, he regarded Wallace rather curiously before climbing into the car with a curt nod.

Unabashed, Wallace waited upon the sidewalk as if to watch the departure of two very dear friends. And as the car rolled away he coolly waved a parting salutation to Eileen and cried in meaning tones, "Remember."

Having thus expressed himself, he watched the car disappear around a corner before he went his way. And it may be said as a curious matter of interest that in discussing the election with Dick Jennings later in the day Wallace expressed high hopes of his election. But this undoubtedly was due rather to an overwhelming confidence in the astuteness and transcendent abilities of his messenger than to any other cause.

CHAPTER VIII

Outside of the incident of the illace, it had been years since Eileen had given a thought to Wallace. She had never taken their youthful friendship seriously. A certain mystery, a hint of dark and unfathomed depths about him had claimed her girlish fancy for the moment. But it had been no more than a passing affair, disregarded with the development of her all pervading love for John Manning and forgotten with marriage, contented years which had followed. True, rumors not at all complimentary to the man had circulated freely in the circles in which she moved, but in the fullness of her own happy life Eileen had not listened to gossip.

Now, however, intent with all the resolution of her nature upon helping Bob, her meeting with Wallace, regardless of first impressions, had re-established him in her mind in a most favorable guise. Apparently through all these years she had neglected a very real friendship. A spontaneous, unselfish and generous friendship which, careless of indifference, could bring Wallace to her side with the tender of his kind offices in the very hour of her need. Thus it was that, as she drove away from the jail at her husband's side, Wallace occupied her thoughts with a completeness which spoke volumes for that gentleman's suave skill with the opposite sex.

As she reviewed their meeting she recalled, with uplifted hope, that his had been no offer of assistance, so general in its nature as to be obviously nothing more than a polite subterfuge. It had been an outspoken promise, a definite pledge without limitation or condition, seemingly leaping from a heart overflowing with sympathy to help her, or rather to procure the freedom of her son, which to her mind was the same thing. But hold. There had been a condition. True, not one subject to his control, but a condition nevertheless, and one of such vital importance that unfulfilled all else would be of little value. Wallace must be elected District Attorney. His election was the very gist of the matter. Wallace elected and Bob would go free. It was all very simple, but—

Eileen stole a glance at the big figure beside her in the car, at John Manning's fine face as his gaze rested unwaveringly upon the street ahead.

John must be defeated. There was no middle course.

From the recesses of her heart that wee small voice raised its protest. John was her husband. At the altar of God she had pledged him her troth. The very words of the marriage service seemed to echo in her ears as her eyes dropped to the ring upon her finger. "For better—for worse."

The loyalty of years, the common hopes and ambitions of their married years registered prompt objection, while her own pride in his accomplishments joined the objecting chorus. To her John's success had been a marvelous thing. She had watched him climb through the years with but a vague appreciation of the mighty part her own gentle devotion and encouragement had played, but still sensing with satisfaction a complete partnership in it all, she had striven to worthily fulfill, as the mistress of his household, the added social duties accruing to herself. Proud, indeed, had she been to be the wife of the District Attorney and with him had come to regard his re-election not so much from any desire to retain the office, but rather as a test. A justification of the policies he had inaugurated, an approval by the people of high ideals for which he had long struggled.

Even as Eileen watched her husband she realized with a tremor of fear that should John Manning fail of re-election it would mean more than defeat. Rather would it be a crushing blow delivered at the very pedestal of his lifelong endeavors. One which would shake, if not shatter, hopes closest to his heart and render futile years of his tireless labors. In that instant a great tenderness for John asserted itself in Eileen's heart only to die before thoughts of Bob and the gloomy jail; of the jangling keys, clicking locks and clanging doors, all sounding a note in that symphony of woe and loss of freedom which must best continually upon the consciousness of her son. Motherhood claimed Eileen to the exclusion of all else. Her boy must be gotten out of that prison at any price, at any cost.

POOR BAD MAN THRIVES ON HATE

BUT WAY OF MOVIE TRANS-GRESSOR IS HARD SAY WALLACE BEERY, ET AL.

HOLLYWOOD, Calif., June 11.—A screen villain's life is perhaps the most painful of any other actors, which partly upholds the biblical admonition that the way of the transgressor is hard.

While the hero of the play goes through six reels of love and action without even softening his collar, the villain must stand for several kicks in the face an d other disagreeable attentions.

On top of all this a good villain is supposed to inspire the hatred of all who see him in pictures. His worth is judged by the number of jeers and hisses he receives.

The more people that hate him the more he is paid.

Being a bad man is a pretty poor, but profitable business, and because it is also a precarious one, the association of motion picture villains hope some day to adopt the following reforms:

A picture where the wicked one ends the last reel victorious.

The privilege of knocking out the good looking hero occasionally, instead of always being the target for a barrage of bricks, loaded shoes and fists.

An opportunity of kissing the leading lady once in a while without her scratching the villain's eyes out and ruffing his temper and sense of humor.

The privilege of administering a severe beating to a bound director so that he may know how it feels to get locked without the chance to resist.

Unless these demands are met, say the villains, the profession of acting men will die a natural and hard death.

The bad man, despite their rough treatment, are among the much highly paid and because of this they tolerate the abuse they get from the poorer paid powder puff heroes.

Wallace Beery is such an effective and popular ruffian that his producers pay him in excess of $4,000 weekly. Other renowned bad men are Walter Long, Adolph Menjou—who does it smilingly—the Torrence brothers Mitchell Lewis, Matthew Betz and Victor McLaughlin.

Slaton Crop Conditions Fine

SLATON, June 11.—General farm conditions were never better. The country as a whole is some thirty days in advance of the crop conditions of this time last year. There is a splendid stand of both cotton and feed, and the rain checking up just at the time it did, has given the farmer the opportunity to give his crops an early cultivation. Thousands of acres of cotton have been plowed and are in fine shape. The feed acreage seems to be about the same as that of 1925, while the garden acreage has increased 50 per cent over last year. Quite a good deal of corn has been planted and is looking fine.

The general crop prospects were never better at this season of the year, while the morale and the spirit of the people is equally as good. The two together would render a 100 per cent general condition. Farmers, in general, are independent regarding the vegetable and meat situation. There are to be found acres and acres of fine gardens and thousands of frying chickens.

While the present amount of moisture and the general condition of the soil is favorable, if need be, to stand quite a drought, we do believe that there success in maintaining moisture is the continuous cultivation of the soil matter keeping the surface well mulched, this keeps the air cells open which admits both fertility and moisture to the interior.

Both farmer and merchants are feeling good over the present and general condition. The farmer is cautious and is guarding close his credit accounts, and the merchant likewise is holding close to shore. With these conditions it appears that both city and country will enjoy one of the most prosperous years in the history of the Plains country.

Uncle Sam's Advice to Housewives

WASHINGTON, June 11.—Unfermented grape juice has increased in popularity since prohibition, in fact has become the national drink, Uncle Sam, through the Agricultural Department, advises.

Two bushels of grapes will make a sufficient supply of the unalcoholic beverage to be handy for "special occasions," he advises. Prepared right the maker will have a refreshing summer drink with the proportions of sugar, acid and flavoring substances well balanced.

Uncle Sam tells how to select fruit for the beverage, press it, and then prepare it for bottling, through the various processes. If placed in a cask he urges that the bung be inserted and when bottled that the corks be sealed to prevent fermentation and an alcoholic content.

"After pressing, sweeten, acidity or blend the juices if necessary," he advises. "Next let it settle, then filter and place in containers. The fifth step is pasteurizing, storing and finally bottling and repasteurizing."

Grape juice is high in food value and supplies energy to the body and in addition many forms of the beverage have a mild laxative effect.

At a fashionable wedding in London recently for the guests were attired as huntsmen.

DAILY MARKETS

New York Finance

By United News
NEW YORK, June 11.—Steel common again assumed leadership of the stock market and was ably assisted by other stocks with the same banking sentiment, including General Electric, American Can and General Motors. The averages for the industrial group entered new high ground for the recovery movement and the market in general showed the effects of further forced covering operations. Shorts apparently are being pushed aggressively and are running to cover all through the list. High class rails were in strong demand and this section of the market moved forward steadily. Southern Railway, Union Pacific, Seaboard Air Line, Atlantic Coast Line, L. & N. and virtually the entire list of the carriers reflected good buying.

With steel common breaking through 134 on the up side and General Motors entering new high ground for the recovery, it was hard to install any idea of bearishness in the general list. Traders, even though somewhat bearish on technical grounds, are being forced to the bull side against their will.

This, of course, does not apply to the entire sector, and there are many real bulls who are perfectly willing and usually able to prove their contentions. They point to the fact that the worst evils which befall industry in the spring never really happened. They point to the heavy car loadings, easy money, good business, business and general betterment in the country's sentiment as the natural ground work for higher stock prices.

Efforts of bears to bring political influences into play have not proved successful so far. The victory of Brookhart in Iowa was construed as a slip at the administration while other reverses in the republican party have not been encouraging to sentiment in the financial district. However, apologists for the bull market find it easy to ignore these developments on the ground of local considerations over rising national ideas.

The street is not alarmed as yet by any threats of political unsettlement. Operations were on a larger scale, the turnover for the day exceeding 1,600,000 shares of which more than 363,000 shares represented operations in steel, General Motors, American Can, General Electric and New York Central.

HOPES MARRIAGE WILL HELP VOICE

By United News
CHICAGO, June 10.—Will Miss Claire Dux, the famous lyric soprano, continue to sing after her marriage to Chas. H. Swift, the millionaire packer?

Well, at least for charity, says the diva in answer to the flood of question that are pouring in upon her since the announcement that her marriage to Swift would end her artistic career.

All of which indicates that this modern problem of career and marriage for women is as vexing for the famous and wealthy as for those who live in a world where it is sometimes necessary for the bride to keep her job for a few months after the nuptials.

"Of course we have agreed on that," she said. "But Mr. Swift won't object, I am sure, if I sing occasionally for charity, you know, and perhaps a private concert now and then."

Also Miss Dux hopes that marriage will improve her voice.

"I'll be able to sing so much better," she said. "Every great singer marries and sings the better for it. Singers are naturally domestic."

Get Texas Back To Its Mooring Says Dan Moody

VICTORIA, Tex., June 11.—Speaking here Friday afternoon Attorney General Dan Moody scathingly denounced the Ferguson administration, and called upon the people to "bring back Texas to its moorings, and re-establish responsible Government in the State." After reviewing the Highway and Textbook controversies Mr. Moody suggested remedial legislation which he said he would recommend if elected. He defined the paramount issue of the campaign as "Fergusonism" and indulged only a brief discussion of other matters.

"When a man's house is on fire said Mr. Moody, "he does not sit down to talk about repairing the roof. He sounds the alarm, and tries to put out the fire. The House of the Government of Texas is in danger. The integrity of our institutions is threatened through the conduct of public affairs by a private citizen who is not amenable to the law nor responsible to the people he governs."

"Under his de facto administration," Moody continued, "your highway money and your public free school money have been appropriated by corporations organized in New York and Delaware, by a corporation which came back to Texas from New Mexico as soon as a new Highway Commission was organized, by corporations organized for the sole purpose of receiving warrants against the public treasury. The credit of the State is permitted to be destroyed because Jim Ferguson is afraid of a legislative investigation."

"The law provides," the candidate declared, "that the Governor shall be Chief Executive of the State, and shall discharge certain duties devolving upon the Chief Executive. It was not meant that the Governor should act through another person. When the Constitution provided that a high court of impeachment might enter a judgment disqualifying a convicted or official misconduct from holding any office of honor, trust or profit under the State, it was not intended that the judgment should be nullified, and that the impeached officer should perform the judgment by carrying wood and tending water to the State House and the Executive Mansion. When the Constitution provided that the Governor should receive $4,000 a year and no more, and should serve no individual or corporation for reward, fee, or the promise thereof, it was not contemplated that we should have a 'de facto' governor, at liberty to be general counsel for a railroad company, or to sell the 'good will' of his newspaper on the basis of what the traffic would bear."

In concluding his address Mr. Moody reverted to the same theme, saying that the conditions of the State Government are "shameful." "The framework of our State is being undermined," he said. "If the acts of James E. Ferguson are condoned by the people of Texas at the coming election, it means that they have licensed corruption. It will permit the State to be managed for the next two years by the benefit of whoever may be willing to employ Jim Ferguson's services as a lawyer, or contribute advertising space to the Ferguson Forum. It is to avert this that I am a candidate. When we have rescued the house of our Government from the immediate danger that threatens us, we shall have time to provide for a finer structure."

The candidate seems to be in fine condition, and expressed much gratification over the result of his campaign. In the course of his speech he compared Ferguson to Andy Gump, since he said, "both are always running for some office, and neither can get his name on the ticket." Referring to Ferguson's declaration of two years ago, that if elected Governor "he would bring home the bacon and bananas, too," he said, "but the smoke-house is empty, and we have no bananas to-day." "The ambition of the Ferguson campaign for vindication should be called, 'I ain't goin' to graft no more,' but he asked, 'how can we tell you ain't goin' to graft no more?'"

Democrats to Meet Here June 19th

A meeting of the Lubbock County Democratic Executive Committee will be held here June 19th, according to R. J. Murray, county chairman. An estimate of the cost of printing the county ballots will be made at that time and candidates will be notified of the amount of expense to which they will be subjected in getting their names on the ballot. Drawing for places on the ballot will also be made at that time, and in fact all business of the committee that will be attended prior to the July primary will be given due consideration, Mr. Murray said. Members of the committee from all parts of the county will attend the meeting.

MAKE MARRIAGE EASIER

BERLIN—Berlin city fathers have decided that marriage is too difficult. Hence they voted for the abolition of red tape, hitherto involved in the ceremony before the magistrate. Henceforth young Berliners who want to get married may obtain the necessary registration papers within one day from one bureau, while heretofore they had to make the rounds of half a dozen bureaus. Wigs colored to match the wearers' gowns are being worn by society women of Paris.

Above is the Tech Concert Band which will meet for a four day training period preceding the opening of the Tech next fall. They will have complete uniforms and will present a variety of stunts and drills for the Pep Squad. The Tech Pep Squad will also meet with the band during this training period and make ready for the student leaders to put the Tech on the map next year opening games of the season. It is the plan of them so far as real lively spirit is concerned. The entire squad and band will be uniformed according to the Spanish motif and will take the leading part in the activities of the school.

Hog Prices to Continue Thru The Summer

WASHINGTON, June 11.—The production of hogs will be about the same this year as last, but the hogs will be heavier, it is pointed out in a review of the hog situation issued by the Department of Agriculture, June 7.

In spite of the increased weights however, reduction in storage stocks will make the total supply a per cent smaller than in the corresponding period of last year. The full text of the department's statement, prepared by C. L. Harlan, livestock statistician, follows:

The hog market during May reached the highest point for the current crop year, and likewise for six years. The average cost of packer and shipper droves at Chicago, week ending May 22, was $13.85, compared with $10.66 the low week the middle of December, and $11.86 the first week in April, and with $6.65 in June, 1925, the lowest week since the war. Top light hogs, during that week sold at $14.80, 5 cents above the highest point reached in July, 1925, during the summer peak, and the highest price since 1920.

An advance so large in May is rather unusual, never having occurred in 25 years, except during the war years when the rapid advance in all prices tended to obscure normal seasonal price changes. Hog receipts at seven leading markets during the first three weeks of May were about 12 per cent smaller than last year, and indications are that May receipts will be the smallest for the month in 10 years. The decrease in expected slaughter, however, during May will probably not show more than a 5 per cent decrease from May last year. This is because of the larger proportion of hogs going direct to packers this year than last.

Hog prices during the next five months, June to October, or until the end of the crop year, will presumably continue on a high level, supplies during this period will be a major factor in determining the height of this level. The supply of hogs during these months is indicated as about the same as for the same period last year, but average weights will probably be somewhat heavier and dressing yields higher.

With reduction in storage stocks equivalent to about 1,500,000 hogs and hog slaughter no larger than last year, the total supply of product, allowing for a somewhat increased live weight, will be around 8 per cent smaller during the next five months last year. The pig surveys of 1925 indicated slaughter for the crop year, November, 1925, to October, 1926, of about 40,500,000, a reduction of 5,600,000 from the previous crop year. With slaughter to the first of June about 25,700,000, the indicated slaughter for the balance of the crop year June to October inclusive, is about 14,800,000 compared to 14,900,000 last year. This indication is supported by a study of the past relationship between the winter slaughter November to February and the summer, July to October, which indicates a slaughter during the summer this year of about 11,000,000 compared to 11,184,000 last year. Storage supplies of products are comparatively light. Total stocks of pork and lard May 1 were the smallest in 11 years with the exception of 1922, and are 250,000,000 pounds, or 27 per cent, less than on May 1 last year. This decrease is equivalent to about 1,500,000 hogs. Because of the unusual advance of hog prices in May and the absence of the usual spring advance in the price of corn, the corn-hog ratio at the end of May is near the highest on record. If this should have the effect of increasing greatly the breeding of sows for fall litters in the western part of the corn belt as a similar condition did in 1922, the number of brood sows marketed the coming summer would be considerably decreased and the slaughter of hogs would fall below what is above indicated. The statement in the Agricultural Outlook in February was that the inspected slaughter of hogs for seven months, November to May, was estimated at around 27,000,000 head.

LARGE ATTENDANCE SOUGHT FOR CLASS IN BAPTIST SUNDAY SCHOOL

A great deal of interest in the work of the Bible Study Class of the First Baptist Sunday School has been shown during recent months, and plans for one of the largest sessions since the organization of the work under the leadership of M. H. Duncan is being made for Sunday's service. The lessons for the next few Sundays, according to Mr. Duncan, will be in the book of Romans. The theme of this book is "The Gospel as the Revelation of the Righteousness of God given to all men upon the one condition of faith in Christ." All members of the class have pledged to work for the expected increase in attendance next Sunday.

Littlefield Now Has Tourist Park

Special to The Avalanche. LITTLEFIELD, June 11.—During the past week a modern and up-to-date tourist park has been completed here costing $10,000, his park is owned by C. C. Burns and operated by J. R. Purser of this city. It goes under the name of the Burns Tourist Park.

This park is equipped with every convenience that would speak for comfort and pleasure. The management owns its own water system, having a sufficient amount of water piped to every part of the grounds. There are twenty well constructed camp cottages supplied with running water, electric lights, stoves, cot, tables and chairs. It is also equipped with showers and there are many large shade trees scattered over the grounds with grass and flowers to add to its attractiveness. That Littlefield has one of the most convenient and best arranged tourist parks on the South Plains is a fact.
