They spent most of their 20-minute segment disagreeing and interrupting each other and trying to shake off their pasts./6A

Fusion test succeeds

European team creates power

■ Experiment harnesses the power that drives the sun.

By William J. Broad
N.Y. Times News Service

After nearly a half-century of effort and many billions of dollars, scientists for the first time have produced a significant amount of power from controlled nuclear fusion.

The achievement is a major step in harnessing for constructive human use the kind of thermonuclear fire that lights the sun and produces the awesome blast of the hydrogen bomb.

The advance was made Saturday by researchers at the Joint European Torus, or Jet, at an experimental fusion reactor in Oxfordshire, England. The achievement puts a European team with scientists from 14 countries ahead of Russian, Japanese and American rivals.

The Europeans' gain was particularly painful for American researchers since they first began to look at the idea of controlling nuclear fusion almost 50 years ago and had hoped to reach this milestone first.

The goal of the research is to fashion machines of vast complexity that will produce a new kind of nuclear energy that is cheap, clean and virtually inexhaustible. If feasible, that goal might take as much as another half-century of hard work to achieve.

Yugoslav civil war heats up

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — The Serb-led Yugoslav army and Croatian rebels battled street to street for control of Vukovar, a powerful symbol in the civil war in which more than 1,700 people have died.

One day after the Serb-dominated Yugoslav leadership issued a surprise call for U.N. peacekeepers in secessionist Croatia, the army also rained more shells on another stronghold in the republic — the former tourist center of Dubrovnik.

Croatian radio said four people were killed in the shelling Sunday in the Adriatic port, but one radio station in Dubrovnik put the toll at 11. Reporters in the city said some fearful residents stood on their balconies and fired automatic weapons or even pistols at the gunboats pounding the port. Gunfire hit at least two renowned hotels.

Following the Serb call for peacekeepers on Saturday, a leading Yugoslav army general, Nikola Uzelac, told reporters Sunday that his Serb-dominated force could leave the front in two or three days if U.N. peacekeepers arrived.

But U.N. officials said last week the world body would not send peacekeepers while the European Community, which has mediated at least 11 failed peace efforts, was involved in trying to stop the warfare.

Croatia has said it would accept peace-

Chechen residents repel Soviet troops

GROZNY, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Nationalists in the secessionist enclave of Chechen-Ingush on Sunday forced the retreat of nearly 1,000 troops sent to enforce emergency rule imposed by Russia.

The peaceful departure of the soldiers — a day after they arrived — appeared to be a slap in the face to Russian President Boris Yeltsin, who is cracking down hard on his first separatist challenge.

Gen. Dzhokar Dudayev, a former Soviet army general who was sworn in Saturday as president of the territory, predicted that more troops will be sent to the region.

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — In a warehouse 20 minutes outside of Washington, Duery Felton and Tony Porco, curators for the National Park Service, don white gloves to handle the estimated 25,000 items that have been left in memory of the dead at the Vietnam Veterans Memorial since the monument was dedicated on Nov. 13, 1982.

A popsicle stick; beer cans; a single, blue woman's pump or a pair of black lace panties seem unlikely objects for such care and cataloguing, but the curators are preparing a selection of them for national display one year from now, on the 10th anniversary of the monument, in an exhibit at the Smithsonian Museum of American History.

Grief radiates from the countless letters to the dead and the cases of flags, medals and uniform pieces.

Awed by the size and scope of the collection after a visit to the warehouse three years ago, John Wheeler, then the chairman of the National Vietnam Veterans Memorial Fund, sought to find a way to display the items permanently.

"The exhibit will meet a felt need," said Mr. Wheeler, who was chairman of the Fund from 1979 to 1989. "We can only terminate the grief by sharing it."

Grief radiates from the countless letters to the dead and the cases of flags, medals and uniform pieces.

From a 1940s-vintage southpaw baseball glove to a bridal bouquet, they all provoke the imagination to fill in the stories around them. Each object is a reaching out from the living to the dead, an attempt to heal the wounds of the most divisive American conflict since the Civil War.

Having drawn an estimated 20 million visitors since its opening, the Vietnam Memorial in Washington now receives more visitors each year than its neighbor, the Lincoln Memorial, making it the most visited memo-

China visitors arrive

Staff Report

Five citizens from the People's Republic of China arrived in Midland Sunday afternoon to spend a week delving in the mystique of West Texas culture. Several Midlanders, including Mayor Carroll Thomas, greeted the delegation at Midland International Airport.

Dongying, China, became Midland's sister city in 1986. The previous year, a group from the Midland-Odessa Symphony toured China and suggested to community leaders the idea of adopting a sister-city. The Chinese and U.S. governments decided Midland and Dongying were a good match because both cities are strong petroleum-based areas.

According to Midland attorney Barry Beck, president of the Sister City Association, the visitors will attend several

Trudeau strips under fire again

Associated Press

Searing satirist Garry Trudeau has divided newspapers once again with his "Doonesbury" comic strip. This time, Trudeau alleges a cocaine cover-up and his target is Vice President Dan Quayle.

The two-week series beginning Monday prompted some of the 1,400 newspapers and other publications that buy "Doonesbury" to compose editor's notes and stories explaining why they will — or won't — run them.

Other newspapers did nothing unusual.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Clouds, fog fill morning sky

Staff Report

The forecast for today calls for cloudy skies with areas of fog until mid-morning with a high in the mid-50s and variable winds at less than 10 mph. Tonight should be mostly cloudy with a low in the mid-30s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tuesday should be mostly cloudy with a high in the mid-50s.

After an overnight low of 36, Sunday's high reached 59 compared to the record high for that date of 85 set in 1964. The record low for that date is 16 set in 1950.

STATE

A weak cold front swept in high clouds and slightly lower temperatures as it pushed Sunday across West and North Texas.

In North Texas, the front extended from near Paris to just south of the Dallas-Fort Worth area to near San Angelo. The atmosphere was dry, and not much difference was noted across the line except a wind shift to the north.

Across the state, afternoon temperatures ranged from 39 degrees at Amarillo to 75 degrees at Brownsville.

A cold air mass in West Texas continued to push south into the Big Bend. The front was milder than the two previous cold air masses that hit the state.

Fog covered much of the Panhandle and South Plains.

In South Texas, temperatures warmed rapidly into the 60s and 70s.

Forecasters call for mostly cloudy skies Monday and Tuesday in South Texas. Highs will be in the 60s and 70s, lows will be in the 40s and 50s.

West Texans will see widely scattered rain showers through Monday night. Temperatures will range from the 30s to daytime highs in the 70s in the lower Big Bend.

Forecasters predict mostly cloudy skies in north and east sections of the state. Highs Monday will be in the 50s and 60s. Nighttime lows will dip into the 30s and 40s.

NATION

An Atlantic Storm produced a mixture of rain, freezing rain and snow Sunday from North Carolina to southeastern Ohio and buffeted the East Coast with strong wind and large waves.

It was another cold morning east of the Rockies, with low temperature records falling in many cities.

A severe ice storm glazed the high elevations of West Virginia, downing power lines and causing widespread power outages, the National Weather Service said. Many roads were impassable.

It was cloudy over much of the southern Atlantic Coast. A few showers were reported over southern Georgia and northeastern Florida.

Cloudy skies prevailed from the Pacific Coast through the northern Plains to the upper Mississippi Valley. Fog lingered over northern California, northern Nevada, Idaho, Oregon and Washington state.

Snow associated with a cold front crossing the Mississippi Valley fell in parts of eastern Nebraska, Iowa and Wisconsin.

Twenty-eight record lows for the date were reported from the Gulf Coast to the northern Atlantic Coast. They ranged from 15 degrees at Burlington, Vt., and Rochester, N.Y., to 46 degrees at West Palm Beach, Fla. The record low of 20 degrees in Mansfield, Ohio, was that city's sixth record this month.

The low for the Lower 48 states was 1 at Devils Lake, N.D.

VETERANS: Tokens left behind are preserved

rial in the United States.

The two memorials share the sentiment of healing, or, in Lincoln's words "to bind up the nation's wounds, to care for him who shall have borne the battle and for his widow and his orphan, to do all which may achieve a just and lasting peace among ourselves and with all nations."

Wheeler wants to continue the process of binding up the wounds. After directing the effort to raise the money for the building and upkeep of the Wall, as the Vietnam Memorial is informally known, he is now helping to start a project to raise money for the exhibit of mementos.

The new project, which is sponsored by a group called Beyond the Wall, will attempt to raise $200,000 to sponsor the exhibit and help the Smithsonian and the National Park Service in gathering information on the articles left there.

"To visit these items is overwhelming," Leah Miller, the director of the project, said at a recent news conference. "You look into the country's heart when you see them."

Edward C. Ezell, a curator of the Smithsonian's Armed Forces History Division, said: "Most museum exhibits are the result of a single collector who has lots of money to purchase art. This is an exhibit generated by the American people."

Wheeler said he hoped the money raised for the care of the collection would come in small donations from many people. "I'd like to see lots of small donations so that Americans in general can have a part in it."

Confident that the project can meet its fund-raising goals, Wheeler is most concerned about getting out word to those who have left things at the wall so their stories can be told.

Some stories are already known, although details need to filled in. Some who served together have come to the monument to bring gifts to old friends.

One soldier left a pack of Kools and the playing cards of a royal flush in spades for a friend who had notoriously bad luck at poker.

Another left an inscribed watch to a buddy who was always asking what time it was.

Many of the notes left behind are hard to read, personal notes scribbled to friends, and the curators of the collection need the details and the permission of those who left them before they become of part of the display.

Those who lost lovers in the war have come to the wall. Someone left a crystal goblet, the wrapper of a Hershey's Kiss, a ring, and a note "Lovers met, and spirits kissed."

Soldiers headed for and returning from the Persian Gulf paid their respects as well.

Cpl. Michael Kilpatrick of the Marines left the Silver Star he had earned in the Persian Gulf conflict below the name of his father, Capt. Donald Kilpatrick of the Air Force.

Sons and daughters have come to see the names of the fathers they never knew. They leave notes pleading for contact with anyone who served with their fathers.

The needs expressed in these letters prompted the founding of In Touch, a program that collects information on the whereabouts of Vietnam veterans and helps put them in touch with their former comrades and their families.

To send donations or provide information for the exhibit, write to: Beyond the Wall, P.O. Box 221616, Chantilly, Va., 22022.

TEST: European fusion experiement succeeds

(From 1A)

A major attraction is that the main fusion fuel, deuterium, a heavy form of hydrogen, can be easily extracted from water in nearly endless quantities. In theory, fusion could produce far more energy from the top two inches of, say, Lake Erie than exists in all the earth's known oil reserves.

The Jet advance is considered significant because it marks the first time that the principles of the research have been tested and resulted in high power. Moreover, the test was considered important because it apparently produced no surprises that might derail this and similar ventures around the world.

"This is the first time that a significant amount of power has been obtained from controlled nuclear fusion reactions," Dr. Paul-Henri Rebut, director of Jet, said in a statement. "It is clearly a major step forward in the development of fusion as a new source of energy."

In an interview Sunday, Dr. Ronald C. Davidson, director of the Princeton Plasma Physics Laboratory in New Jersey, one of Jet's main rivals, agreed with that assessment.

"This is a historic event for fusion," he said. Davidson added that his Princeton group and the United States, while hobbled by relatively tight budgets, would nonetheless press ahead and hoped to score some of its own firsts in the not-so-distant future.

Fusion produces energy by fusing, or welding, the atoms of light elements. In contrast, the nuclear fission reactors now in operation around the world generate energy by breaking apart the atoms of heavy elements like uranium. If it eventually proves practical, fusion might be better than fission because the former's fuels are easier to obtain and it would produce far less radioactive waste.

The closest natural example of fusion is the sun, where temperatures at the core are 14 million degrees centigrade and gravitational pressures are crushing. There, atomic nuclei are driven so close together that they fuse and release vast energy.

In a fusion reactor, the temperature must be even higher, around 200 million degrees centigrade, since the fusion fuel undergoes far less compression than materials at the center of the sun.

For years, the main path to controlled fusion has been to heat fusion fuel so it breaks into a cloud of electrically charged particles known as a plasma, which can be contained by magnetic fields. No earthly vessel is up to the job. Any kind of metal, ceramic or glass would melt.

So magnetism has been used to build increasingly powerful magnetic "bottles." At Jet and Princeton, such bottles are building-size machines of daunting complexity that have an overall doughnut shape, or that of a torus.

Up to now, these and similar fusion reactors have at best produced thousands of watts of power in short bursts. But at Jet, for the first time, scientists produced more than a million watts of power. The Jet team calculated that its reactor yielded 1.5 million to 2 million watts in a pulse lasting two seconds Saturday.

FIGHTING: Serbs, Croats battle in Vukovar streets

keepers along its prewar borders, not between present-day Serb and Croat lines as Serbia suggests. Serbs control about one third of Croatia after 4½ months of fighting.

The fighting began after Croatia declared independence on June 25. Serbia has said Croatia cannot secede from Yugoslavia within its prewar borders, claiming the republic's 600,000-strong Serb minority would face persecution.

More ethnic tensions have been raised in the country in Bosnia, where ethnic Serbs completed two days of voting Sunday on a secession referendum. The republic is wedged between Croatia and Serbia and fighting could break among its Muslim, Serb and Croat residents if the Serbs try to leave Bosnia with territory.

There were no reports of any violence in the balloting, and no results were expected before Tuesday.

In Vukovar, Belgrade media said Yugoslav troops had captured a strategic hill overlooking the center of the river town. A defense official in Vukovar said in a telephone interview from the Croatian capital Zagreb that the two sides were fighting street-by-street in the rubble of town, which appeared to be on the verge of falling after a three-month battle.

Sunday, Serbs and Croats fought street by street in Vukovar. Belgrade TV showed film of battles reminiscent of footage of the final Allied operations in Germany in World War II. Federal soldiers climbed through shattered windows and the rubble of wrecked houses.

A defense official in Vukovar who spoke on condition of anonymity said least 25 people were seriously wounded in a large tank and infantry attack.

Reports from both Serbia and Croatia on Saturday said the town's defenses were near collapse.

Vukovar, on the Croatian side of the Danube River boundary between Croatia and Serbia, has stood in the way of the army's efforts to seize absolute control over a large piece of eastern Croatia.

Croats outnumbered Serbs in Vukovar before the fighting started, but Serb nationalists want the city for the capital of a new Serbian region carved out of eastern Croatia.

UNREST: Chechen nationalists resist Yeltsin

(From 1A)

tonomous region of 1.3 million people declared itself independent a week ago, saying it feared domination by the Russian government.

Yeltsin refuses to allow any break-up of his federation, saying that would jeopardize market-oriented economic reforms. Friday he declared the emergency rule in Chechen-Ingush.

Government-run Radio Rossiya quoted Russian Federation Vice President Alexander Rutskoi as saying an order had been issued for Dudayev's arrest, but that Yeltsin's representatives in Grozny, the region's capital, had failed to carry it out.

In Moscow, Russian legislators met Sunday to debate the emergency rule. Ruslan Khasbulatov, an ethnic Chechen who is chairman of the legislature, called Dudayev and his advisers a "group of bandits."

But the Yeltsin-appointed interior minister in Grozny, Chechen native Vakha Ibragimov, protested the decree and resigned, Radio Rossiya reported. The debate was continuing late into the evening.

Other Russian legislators criticized Yeltsin's decree and recessed after hours of inconclusive debate. The legislature was scheduled to resume consideration of the order Monday morning.

In Grozny meanwhile, thousands of people rallied in Freedom Square for a second day to protest Yeltsin's decree.

At the city's military airport, jubilant nationalist fighters waving flags escorted 700 Soviet Interior Ministry troops in civilian buses to Beslan, a town on the border with the neighboring Russian territory of North Ossetia.

Another 150 troops who were inside the Interior Ministry also were sent to Beslan.

In the wake of the failed August coup, Yeltsin's government declared control over all Soviet Interior Ministry forces on Russian territory, ranging from regular soldiers to the feared anti-riot "black beret" forces.

COMIC: Trudeau's 'Doonesbury' under attack

(From 1A)

Some editors said the issue, as in past "Doonesbury" controversies, is censorship. Others said Trudeau exceeded the bounds of libel law and good taste with unsubstantiated allegations that Quayle bought cocaine while he was a U.S. senator.

One sequence alleges a Drug Enforcement Administration file exists on Quayle and "someone, somewhere covered up the existence of the file," said Lee Salem, editorial director of Universal Press Syndicate, which distributes "Doonesbury."

The syndicate said it was satisfied with the satirist's sources. The DEA said last Wednesday that it had investigated allegations in 1962 that Quayle, then an Indiana senator, had used cocaine and Quaaludes. The DEA said it found the allegations to be groundless. Quayle called the strips a Trudeau "vendetta."

Trudeau has shaken up his subscribers in the past with strips portraying bleak living conditions for U.S. soldiers during the Gulf War, alleged Mafia ties of Frank Sinatra and the anti-abortion movie "The Silent Scream."

"Trudeau walks the line constantly — that's the edge that creates so many fans," said John M. Walter, managing editor of the Atlanta Journal-Constitution, which won't run the Quayle series. "But sometimes he goes over and in this particular instance we thought it was uncalled for, an unfair shot."

"We're not much for censoring things," said John R. Starr, managing editor of the Arkansas Democrat-Gazette, which will run the Quayle series. "It is, after all, a comic strip."

"There isn't a political cartoon in any paper, anywhere, that's fair," said Chiara Coletti, spokeswoman for Newsday and New York Newsday, which will run the strips.

The Houston Post prepared an editorial for Monday's edition explaining why it decided against pulling "Doonesbury."

"Such actions underrate the readers' ability to make up their own minds," the editorial said. "Moreover, such withholding is ultimately counterproductive and, although quite legal, is philosophically at cross purposes with the First Amendment's guarantee of the free exchange of ideas."

The Rochester (N.Y.) Times-Union will replace "Doonesbury" with the comic strip "Fox Trot" for the duration of the Quayle sequence, managing editor John Street said.

"We feel these episodes dredge up old charges against Dan Quayle which have been found to be unsubstantiated," Street said. "We feel that the strip goes beyond what is fair and proper to publish, even for political satire."

The Chicago Tribune is withholding two episodes containing allegations the paper could not confirm, said John Lux, associate features editor. "It'd be different if they were funny. This masquerades as reporting," he said.

Editors at The Washington Post and the Los Angeles Times said those papers would run the Quayle strips.

"Doonesbury" runs on the editorial pages of some newspapers because of Trudeau's biting style.

Robert Landauer, editorial page editor of The Oregonian in Portland, said the newspaper will run the series after discussing the strips with editors at the syndicate.

"The notion that there might be a DEA file on Dan Quayle struck me as anything but libelous," he said. Prominent people often are the target of unsubstantiated charges, which might prompt an agency to open a file, Landauer said.

The Oregonian raised objections to the 1985 strips that linked Sinatra to organized crime and refused to run them. The Pittsburgh Post-Gazette also rejected the Sinatra strips but decided to run the Quayle panels.

John G. Craig Jr., editor of the Post-Gazette, said Saturday in a column that unlike the Sinatra strips, the Quayle cartoons deal with more specific charges and the subject has responded publicly.

Quayle has said the allegations have been investigated and discredited.

In 1985, the syndicate withheld Trudeau's six installments on "The Silent Scream," but allowed The New Republic to run them.

Murray B. Light, editor and senior vice president of The Buffalo (N.Y.) News, ran a front-page story Thursday explaining why it won't run the Quayle series: "The charges made by Trudeau are serious ones that have been investigated by qualified journalists and, according to them, are false."

local events and visit various sites representing the Permian Basin and the United States in general.

Itinerary for the week includes attending the second half of Midland College's basketball game tonight, a City Council meeting Tuesday and a Chinese language class at Trinity School on Thursday.

They will also tour the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, the Frank Cowden Jr. ranch, the Odessa Petrochemical Complex, the Midland International Airport and the new Confederate Air Force site.

Also Tuesday, they will visit Henry Petroleum Co.'s oil well Dongying No. 1.

Plans also call for a trip to the Midland Park Mall and Jewel/Osco grocery store. In China, most families grow their own vegetables rather than buy them from a centralized location. The concept of not seeing a garden in every yard is new to them.

According to Beck, this is the fourth trip to Midland by a group from Dongying.

"None of the five men making this trip have ever been here though," said Beck. "We have sent a group over there three times and several individuals have made other trips."

"I think the whole concept has really created a lot of friendships between many people from vastly different backgrounds. If nothing else, it has certainly been very educational," added Beck.

The five visitors from Dongying include Mayor Li Diankui; Nie Shaoguang, secretary general of Dongying; Sun Baowei, dean of the Institute of Well Drilling Technology; Hu Mingqi, director of the Dongying's economic planning commission; and Zhang Shi-chang, an interpreter with the Dongying Foreign Affairs Office.

The group will be spending the week at the Hilton. Most meals are being sponsored by members of the Midland/Dongying Sister City Association.

Envoy arrives at U.S. mission in Cambodia

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — An envoy arrived from the United States today to restore ties 16 years after the U.S. ambassador carried out the American flag ahead of the fanatical Khmer Rouge's entry into the capital.

Charles Twining, an experienced Indochina specialist, arrived in Phnom Penh as charge d'affaires of a new U.S. mission.

He is to work with the United Nations and with Cambodia's Supreme National Council, a reconciliation body, as they guide the nation to U.N.-organized elections by 1993.

Japanese diplomats also arrived Sunday to open a new embassy, four days ahead of the arrival of Prince Norodom Sihanouk, who heads the council and will lead an interim government.

Under a United Nations-brokered peace accord signed last month, the government and three guerrilla groups, through the national council, are to lead the country toward democratic elections scheduled in 1993.

The war between them raged since Vietnam invaded in 1978, ousting the ruthless Khmer Rouge, who three years earlier drove out the U.S.-backed government of Lon Nol.

As the Khmer Rouge moved on Phnom Penh in April 1975, U.S. Ambassador John Gunther Dean tucked the U.S. flag under his arm and walked to an awaiting helicopter. A news photograph of the event was one of the most enduring images of America's defeated intervention in Indochina.

The flurry of foreign arrivals included Australian soldiers in blue berets, the first of a vast U.N. force that will try to keep peace in the country wrecked by 13 years of civil war.

The 37 Australians, wearing blue U.N. berets and armed with daggers and pistols, arrived Sunday aboard two C-130 transport planes filled with tons of communications equipment.

The Australians will set up communications links between the four factions, and between each faction and the United Nations, before being joined by troops from 22 other countries to observe the truce.

An eventual $1 billion peacekeeping force will be the largest since the U.N. dispatched 20,000 soldiers and police to the Belgian Congo, now Zaire, in 1960.

"I wish you all success," Ataul Karim, a Bangladeshi who is the civilian head of the peacekeeping mission, told the Australians at a welcoming ceremony at Phnom Penh's international airport.

"I'm very enthusiastic," said Barclay Sedge, one of the Australian soldiers. "It's an opportunity to do something worthwhile and put our training into practice."

Other U.N. troops will be deployed in small groups to monitor the cease-fire signed in Paris last month among the four warring factions.

New Zealand troops, including two who were on Sunday's transport from Darwin, Australia, will teach Cambodians how to avoid the tens of thousands of land mines that are buried throughout the country.

Storm kills at least 6,000 Filipinos, official says

ORMOC, Philippines (AP) — Six thousand people probably died during last week's floods and landslides, the Philippines' civil defense director said Sunday as a new and stronger storm bore down on this island nation.

President Corazon Aquino promised more aid for this commercial and agricultural city, where most of the victims died when tropical storm Thelma hit the islands of Leyte and Negros on Tuesday. She flew here Sunday with the ambassadors from the United States and Japan to inspect relief operations.

Philippine military planes and navy barges continued to arrive Sunday with supplies to this devastated port of 160,000, which had whole neighborhoods swept away by floods and landslides.

Storm warnings were announced in the capital, Manila, and the rest of the main Philippine island, Luzon, for Typhoon Seth.

The Manila weather bureau said the storm was heading southwestward toward northern and central areas of Luzon and its effects would begin to be felt today. It said the storm was about 378 miles east of northern Luzon and had maximum sustained winds of 115 mph.

Official figures compiled by regional and national relief agencies showed at least 3,465 people died on Leyte and Negros, including more than 3,000 in Ormoc, about 350 miles southeast of Manila. An additional 2,080 people were listed as missing.

Jose Andres, director of the Office of Civil Defense, said there was little or no chance that any of the missing were still alive. He said it appeared that "more or less 6,000" people died in the floods and landslides.

Mrs. Aquino declared Leyte a disaster area Friday and ordered emergency food and medicine to the island.

Textbook errors aren't 'smart'

Jane Nelson of Lewisville, who is a member of the State Board of Education, has every right to be outraged about the history textbooks recently submitted to the board for acceptance — books that contained gross factual errors.

We're not talking about "minor" errors, either. One book stated that the United States settled the Korean conflict by "using the bomb." World War II, not the Korean War, was ended by the dropping of the atomic bomb. Another indicated that Napolean Bonaparte won the battle at Waterloo. Bonaparte certainly would have preferred that version, but it still was incorrect. Another named Gen. Douglas McArthur as the infamous "Red-baiter" of the 1950s. It should have been Sen. Joseph McCarthy, of course.

The state board wisely postponed adoption of the history books. Education Commissioner Lionel "Skip" Meno, faced with data showing an all-time high in the number and degree of errors that had made the final version of all six books, noted, "Part of the issue here is that it should not be the responsibility of the Texas Education Agency to go through page by page and edit these books. What we should be doing is getting a finished product."

He's absolutely correct. Error-free history books should always be the goal and with this many books making it to the final stage with errors, someone in the process has obviously not been fulfilling the requirements of the job.

The board is right to complain. With actual problems in the education system itself, Texas public schools hardly need erroneous textbooks to make the situation worse.

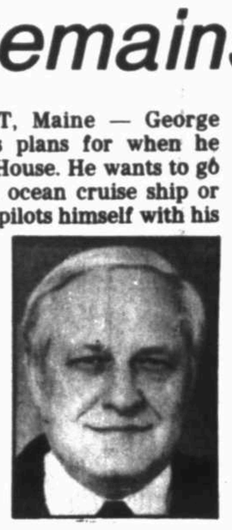
The goal of error-free material is important anytime historical matter is involved, but that is particularly so in the educational process. It's difficult enough to teach youngsters the historical facts they need to know and to give them a true picture of how this country developed when the material in history books is accurate.

It's impossible — and aggravating — when the books contain erroneous material.

JACK ANDERSON

Bush remains loyal to Kennebunkport

KENNEBUNKPORT, Maine — George Bush already has plans for when he leaves the White House. He wants to go out to sea, either on an ocean cruise ship or maybe on a boat that he pilots himself with his family as crew.



Anderson

Friends of the president told us about his retirement wish, which he said he would make come true in 1997, but has also acknowledged could come as early as 1993. Bush doesn't consider the 1992 election to be in the bag.

The president loves this coastal town, but was careful not to be too morose about the damage to his vacation home by a storm that pummeled the East Coast earlier this month. It wouldn't look good for the president to bemoan the temporary loss of a vacation home to an act of God when so many Americans are homeless, jobless and buffeted by the winds of recession.

For the same reason, the locals are speculating that the Bushes may not vacation in Kennebunkport next August as they usually do, even if the house is back in shape. Bush will be distracted by the campaign, and, more important, he doesn't want to look like the idle rich three months before the election. With the economy in a mess and the recession dealing a severe blow to Bush's popularity, there will be few photo opportunities at Walker's Point next year.

If Bush stays away, it will be only the second summer in his life that he did not have time for Kennebunkport. The first time was in 1944 when Bush was in World War II.

When Bush does come to Kennebunkport to roost, the lobstermen who have been plying these waters for decades grumble. His jaunts out on his boat and the restrictive cordon thrown up around him by the Secret Service make commercial fishing more difficult. The Secret Service uses Coast Guard boats armed with M-60 machine guns and one 155mm cannon to make sure no one comes too close.

Still, the locals admit Bush has tried to be accommodating, and they don't fault him for wanting to get away from Washington. They do fault the hordes of journalists who come with the package — all except the boat owners and others who service the journalists for jacked-up prices.

Bush's maternal grandfather and namesake, George Herbert Walker, a New York stockbroker, bought the point in 1903 to escape summer polio epidemics in the city, and he built the house. Bush bought the compound with cash in 1981 using money from the sale of his house in Houston. It was worth $2.2 million before the storm damage and is the only house the Bushes own.

Horseshoes, tennis, golf and fishing are the president's favorite pastimes here, although he sometimes lacks the patience it takes to catch the bluefish that abound in the ocean. Bush is fond of repeating an old saying that the time a man spends fishing shouldn't count toward the time God has allotted him on earth.

His true love is his speedboat "Fidelity," which he named after the stock he sold in 1973 to buy the custom-built 28-foot "Cigarette" boat for $18,000. Designed by Don Aronow of Miami, the boat is one of only a few in existence. Other owners include Kings Hussein of Jordan, Gustaf of Sweden and Carlos of Spain; daredevil Evel Knievel and oil firefighter Red Adair.

Bush shows off in the boat, jamming it to its top speed of 50 mph, leaving the Secret Service awash in sea spray and wake. He loves to make full-throttle leaps out of the water, once throwing NBC newsman Tom Pettit to the floor of the boat. Pettit threw out his back and had to take time off from work. It was one of several occasions when Bush used the boat to dispel his "wimp" image.

His love of the sea and his inability now to travel on the water because he must have jets to get him there faster make it the natural thing for him to yearn for an ocean voyage to celebrate his retirement. At least he isn't going to Disney World.

FAMILY ON TRIAL — The rape trial of William Kennedy Smith is an emotional trial for his uncle Ted Kennedy. Sources close to the senator tell us he is taking it hard. As the surviving patriarch of the Kennedy clan, he plays a father role for all of his nieces and nephews. On the eve of the trial, senators noticed that Kennedy's chin was quivering and tears were rolling down his cheeks while he was on the Senate floor. Those who know him say he feels responsible for the mess his nephew is in and feels he may have set a bad example for the younger Kennedys.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Nations of world dissolve, reassemble

LONDON — The Great Reshuffle is under way in the lives of nations. The Era of Political Dissolution is overlapping the Age of Economic Reassembly.

Political imperialism is on the wane. Russia is spinning off its losing acquisitions; Yugoslavia is breaking up bloodily, Czechoslovakia amicably; the Quebecers may part from Canadians and Scots quit Brits.

Safire

At the same time, economic unionism is waxing. In Asia, the flying tigers of trade are sitting down with the old lions; in North America, the Canadians and Mexicans are coming to see themselves as eco-Americans; and in Europe, you can hardly hear the rumble of political disintegration for the screeching of economic amalgamation.

Here is a quick way to encapsulate the Great Reshuffle: Politics is zigging while economics is zagging.

The zigging is good: with the breakup of empires, the end of statist Communism and the breaking of forced contracts binding different cultures, we are getting more personal freedom and a greater sense of the control of national destiny. Smaller nations, each speaking one language and proud of its special character, are more responsive than centrally controlled monoliths, provided new majorities respect minority rights.

The zagging, provided it is limited to the extension of economic freedom, is good too. Free-trade zones with tariffs no longer hindering trade should expand business horizons, increasing jobs and raising the standard of living. The three great trading communities (America, Europe, the Far East) will — if good sense prevails — agree to compete fairly, with the world's capitalist socks held up by the happy garter of price elasticity.

Then why, in the midst of the greatest forward thrust in two centuries of world history, all the grim faces and sour looks? Because in the zigging away from empire, there is concern about healthy nationalism's flip side of ethnic repression and local war; and in the zagging toward regional confederation, there is worry about getting free trade confused with imperialism under a new banner.

Here in Britain, fatherland of individualism and fond ally of its American colony, the fear is that the rush to European commercial union may involve a transfer of political power to French statist bureaucrats, as well as a loss of the Atlantic connection that has helped preserve its liberty.

Now we're at the spot where the zigging intersects the zagging. Economic interdependence is helpful only as long as it does not impinge on political independence; then free trade begins to bother free people.

Which force is greater — the trend toward economic union or the march to political self-determination? Extreme Eurocrats say the train of amalgamation is leaving the station, and point to how the newly independent nations of Eastern Europe and the former Soviet union are eager to join, thereby creating a superstate of over 500 million.

I think the Brits will go part of the way, linking currencies, but not all the way, linking their national life to the French and Germans. Less is to be gained on the swings of prosperity than is to be lost on the roundabouts of restriction.

'Record' deficit no matter of pride

While the Braves didn't win the World Series, fans can still be proud of their team's complete turnaround from worst to nearly the best.

But fans of the federal government have nothing to cheer about in the record our government set for Fiscal Year 1991: the record $268.7 billion budget deficit.

The record is certainly impressive, though, bigger by far than the record it broke, which was $221.1 billion, set in 1986.

It's not that the government didn't have enough money to spend. It certainly did. It had $1.05 trillion, 2.2 percent more cash than it had the year before.

Trouble is, the government spent $1.3 trillion, which is 5.7 percent more than it went through the year before.

The 1991 deficit gets added to the national debt, which is now at $4.021 trillion. To feed that monster, taxpayers must pay out $304 billion in interest this year. That's $832 million a day. The burden breaks down to $3.33 every day for every man, woman and child.

You get nothing back for the daily $832 million, except a good credit rating for your government.

It's no record to be proud of. It's a national shame, not just on Congress but on all of us, too.

Tax-cut political cry needs dose of reality

Concerned with the state of the economy, congressional Democrats, Republicans and the White House are feverishly at work on recovery plans — all said to involve some kind of tax decreases to stimulate consumer spending.

With an election year approaching, it's not surprising to hear politicians talking of tax cuts. But before things get too far, a few principles should be recalled.

President Bush has likened the federal budget deficits, now running at more than $300 billion a year, to a cancer eating away at the nation's future economic health. The president is right, and to increase the deficit would help the cancer spread.

Any net tax cut, therefore, must be matched by a spending cut. If the politicians, worried about re-election, come at us with a net tax cut unmatched by a spending cut, we should turn them down.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, Nov. 11, the 315th day of 1991. There are 50 days left in the year. This is Veterans Day.

On this date:

In 1889, Washington became the 42nd state.

In 1939, Kate Smith first sang Irving Berlin's "God Bless America" on network radio.

CHARLEY REESE

Wanted: Politicians, no experience necessary

Out of a job? Lots of people are, so I suggest you run for Congress. In 1992 there will be 435 available jobs which are among the niftiest in the Universe.

First, the base pay is $125,000 year. That alone puts you in the top 5 percent of income in the United States. You will make more money than most scholars, teachers, generals, admirals and others who have to work long and hard even to qualify for their jobs. The job of congressman, however, requires no experience, no training, no educational preparation.

Reese

All you have to do is persuade 50 percent of the turnout plus one voter to cast a ballot for you. Most of the incumbents got to be incumbents by telling lies, making outrageous promises and performing ridiculous public relations stunts.

Admittedly, a conscience, a sense of decency and duty, are a hindrance in this line of work but amazingly enough most politicians seem able to leap these hurdles as easily as Edwin Moses clears hurdles on a track.

Good pay, however, is only the beginning. The perks are almost too numerous to mention. The pension system is not only better than anyone else's in America; it's better than anyone else's — period. You get free or subsidized haircuts (beauty parlor if that's your preference — I don't want to be sexist), gymnasiums, parking, lavish travel allowances, franking privileges so you can propagandize your constituents at their expense, an attending physician, a special tax break, medical care, a generous office expense allowances and so forth.

Until just recently you could kite checks, fix parking tickets, stiff restaurants and exempt yourself from most of the laws you make other people live by.

Still, that's only the beginning. As a Congressman or woman you can travel around the world at no expense to you or take great vacations in exotic places while you conduct research with your host special interest group.

When you wish to travel in foreign countries, you can treat U.S. military personnel and U.S. Foreign Service officers as your personal lackeys and servants. I happened to be in Amman, Jordan, when ex-Klansman, Sen. Robert Byrd of West Virginia arrived for a visit. He was trailed by an entourage of 30 people and the U.S. Embassy practically had to close down to cater to him. Not bad for an ex-hillbilly fiddler.

And, still, that's not all. Once you make the first race, you will find that special interest groups will pour money into your campaign chest so that you can become a perpetual incumbent.

Moreover, a most amazing thing will happen to you. People you didn't know you knew will come forward with information about the most wonderful investments and friendly banks will, if you are on the right committees, lend you the money to make them.

One of the untold success stories in America is how many boobs, hayseeds, and unsuccessful lawyers have gone to Washington and come home well-off from astute investments that a Wall Street shark would envy.

The real beauty of this job is, as I said, the lack of any qualifications. You can be stupid, morally corrupt, uneducated, a windbag, a bigot or an ex-bigot, a drunk, an incompetent, a philanderer, or a child seducer (male or female, as I don't want to be sexist about this) and still get the job.

So all you unemployed guys and gals out there get busy and go after these 435 plum jobs. The existence of the present incumbents prove that anybody can get elected. Congress is the last outpost of Horatio Alger.

I'd try for one myself except that I'm the kind of guy who would rather sit on a stump in the rain in the woods and watch fungus grow than attend any kind of social gathering.

You do have to be somewhat sociable to get elected or at least have the acting ability to fake it.

Soldiers' thoughts compiled in book of letters

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cpl. Kevin M. Wolfe summed up the good news in just 14 words, everything his family in Clinton, Iowa, needed to know:

"The war is over. I am alive and well. I'll write for real tomorrow."

It was one of millions of letters sent during the relatively brief combat of Operation Desert Storm, but it symbolized the missives from soldiers throughout American history.

The U.S. Postal Service has compiled "Letters from the Sand," a collection of letters from soldiers in conflicts ranging from Desert Storm to the Civil War. The postal service asked service members and their families to submit letters for the book, which will be sold at post offices for $24.95.

"When we started this project, we wanted to share the sentiments and emotions of troops in the desert and those waiting at home. Soon we saw a common thread of hope, of pride of country and love of family," said Postmaster General Anthony Frank.

Lt. Mark Berger described the end of Desert Storm in a letter to his parents in White Bear Lake, Minn.

"I woke up this morning to screaming that the Iraqis had surrendered. ... Thank God it's over."

But the joy of those who survived is tempered with the tragedy of families whose sons and daughters died.

"Mom, I love you and B more than anything in the world," Pfc. Wesley Hutto wrote his mother, Lil Lambert of Andalusia, Ala. "I am fighting because I willingly joined the army to defend democracy against all enemies foreign and domestic. Hussein is an enemy of democracy. I must die for his sins."

Hutto was the first soldier from Alabama killed in the conflict.

"Dear Mom, I know this isn't much but in case I'm not around: Happy Mother's Day. I think you are the perfect mom," Lance Cpl. Gary D. Haisman wrote Pam Haisman of Fort Myers, Fla.

He died in a shooting accident May 3.

The letters cover a multitude of topics.

■ The enemy:

"I had to guard some guys that surrendered today. . . . (One) turned to me and said something in Arabic. I have never seen such fear in a man's eyes," wrote Specialist Shane Sorensen of Great Falls, Mont. The interpreter said "he was asking if I was going to kill him. He thought I was leading him to an execution. I just wished I spoke Arabic so I could tell him what was going on."

■ Anti-war protests:

"Please let any anti-war protestors back home know that there is nothing more demoralizing to a 19-year-old Marine who is about to lay his life on the line for his friends and country than to listen to a bunch of whining, ignorant people complain of him being here and what he's doing," Lt. Mike Ragoza, wrote his mother, Lenore Smith, of Princeton, N.J.

■ Thanksgiving:

"My men and I will enjoy your gifts for a long time. ... Thank you personally for the Bible. I have never been very religious, but lately I've wanted to understand the word," Capt. Rich Filippi wrote to Donna Douglas of Addison, Texas.

■ Christmas:

"All is well here and I am doing guard duty later tonight. Maybe I will see Santa and his sleigh! I hope our air defense doesn't shoot him down," Specialist James P. Raynoha said in a letter to his parents in Babylon, N.Y.

■ Good wishes:

"Dear Uncle Danny, I hope you'r not going to die. Even if you do die Heaven is a better place then earth. I went bolling on Saturday. Love," Danielle Guitierrez of Del Valle, Texas, wrote Aviation Storekeeper First Class Daniel Feliciano.

Army doctors prepare for baby boom

FORT CAMPBELL, Ky. (AP) — Nine months after the 101st Airborne returned from the Persian Gulf War, the staff at Blanchfield Army Hospital is digging in for a siege. They call it Operation Baby Storm.

The normal monthly birthrate at Fort Campbell and other bases where units shipped out for Operation Desert Storm is expected to nearly triple as a result of last spring's joyous homecomings, Army medical officials say.

"This is the fallout of literally thousands of soldiers returning from Saudi Arabia at the same time," said Lt. Col. Edwin Dale Schoonover, Blanchfield's chief of staff. "There was planeload after planeload of soldiers coming home day after day in March and April."

Contingency plans include arrangements for deliveries at nearby civilian hospitals. "We knew this would happen," Schoonover said.

At Fort Campbell the baby boom is expected to begin in December and remain high through March or April. About 375 women are due to deliver babies in January; the norm is 130 to 160, hospital officials said.

Operation Desert Stork is the name they gave the situation at Winn Army Community Hospital at Fort Stewart, Ga., where it's estimated 800 to 900 offspring were conceived in the weeks the troops returned home. The 160 births due next month is nearly double the usual rate.

Offutt Air Force Base in Nebraska also reports an increase in maternity there. The Strategic Air Command tracks births, but not pregnancies, so exact numbers on babies due couldn't be obtained.

At Fort Riley, Kan., the usual monthly birthrate of 75 to 120 is forecast to leap to between 120 and 153 every month through April.

The rush to procreate was not impulsive, say doctors and midwives who examine and counsel mothers-to-be at Fort Campbell.

"It was surprising to me that so many of these women were purposely staying off birth control," said Maj. Donna Ogg, a nurse-midwife. At first she attributed the increase in pregnancies on women simply failing to resume birth control discontinued while their husbands were at war. She was wrong.

Schoonover agreed with Ogg's reassessment.

War itself probably influenced the couples — most of them in their early 20s — to have babies, he said.

"There is something about being in a war zone, being in danger and thinking you may not come home alive, that matures a young man or woman pretty fast," Schoonover said.

Anna Burries, 28, of Washington, D.C., and her husband, Matthew, a sergeant from East St. Louis, Ill., abandoned their timetable for having their second child when he returned from Saudi Arabia.

"I always said I'd never have one in Pampers and one in my stomach. Now just look," said Mrs. Burries, who has two daughters from a previous marriage as well as a 2-year-old son from Matthew.

She passed the days of Desert Storm watching television news, wondering if her husband would come home and crying over the thought he might not.

The situation was different for Spec. Paquina Cameron. The 27-year-old mother of two girls was assigned to Saudi Arabia along with her husband, Darren, a maintenance sergeant. Both were stationed with the 101st Airborne near Dhahran.

"He was asking me before the war to have a baby and I kept saying no, but after the war, I was ready to have a baby," Mrs. Cameron said.

Duke denies he'd been Nazi party member

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — David Duke denied Sunday he was ever a Nazi Party member and again apologized for his past intolerance as the campaign for Louisiana governor moved into its last week.

Duke, a renegade Republican, and former three-term Gov. Edwin Edwards, a Democrat, sparred on NBC's "Meet The Press." They spent most of their 20-minute segment disagreeing and interrupting each other and trying to shake off their pasts.

The side-by-side meeting in the TV studio was the last scheduled joint appearance by the two before their runoff election on Saturday.

Afterward they both headed for rallies and fund-raisers.

Also Sunday, Newsweek said it was reporting in its Nov. 18 issue that one-time Duke backers have questioned whether he pocketed $19,000 he raised for a pro-white group protesting a 1987 civil rights march in Forsyth County, Ga. A Duke spokesman said the money was returned to donors unless they opted to make a "personal gift" to Duke, the magazine reported.

Duke, a state representative who has been disowned by President Bush and other GOP leaders, was grand wizard of the Ku Klux Klan in the late 1970s and was a Nazi sympathizer.

When quizzed about his qualifications to lead Louisiana and knowledge of the state, Duke couldn't identify the top three employers or the number of residents who live below the poverty line.

Host Garrick Utley asked Duke about his past, holding up a front-page picture in Sunday's edition of The New York Times showing him wearing a Nazi arm band in 1969 and carrying a sign "Gas the Chicago 7."

"I was never a member of the Nazi Party or anything like that," Duke said when asked why he preferred the Nazi philosophy as a youth.

"I reject Nazism. I reject Communism. I believe in less government, and that's what I stand for."

Duke denied ever saying Adolf Hitler was "a genius."

Duke also renounced a 1988 statement while he was running for president in which he was quoted as saying, "Zionists have long ago bought George Bush and Michael Dukakis."

Asked about his past, Edwards, a high-stakes craps shooter in Las Vegas and Lake Tahoe, said: "Well, I'm not a gambler. I could gamble every day. I don't bet on football games, baseball games, basketball games ... On occasion when I go to Las Vegas or Atlantic City, where it is legal, within my means, I gamble."

Edwards was asked if for the sake of the state he would try to recast his image away from that of a gambler, womanizer and wheeler-dealer.

He twice evaded the question, then replied: "I'm 64 years old now, and I want this opportunity to do something for myself and for my state, and I'm not going to blow it ..."

Later, at a rally in Pineville, Duke said personal attacks against him would intensify as the election neared.

"It's going to backfire. We're tired of it, aren't we?" Duke said. The remainder of his remarks were drowned out by a cheers of "Yes" from the crowd of 700.

Comedy night at the Hilton in Odessa features Gary Ingle and Joe Morrison.

Joe irons his shirt for tonights performance in his room.

Joe' s cutting impersonations include everyone from Saddam Hussein to Wally and the Beaver.

JEERS OF A CLOWN

ODESSA — Living life on the road as a stand-up comic is no laughing matter for Joe Morrison.

The 29-year-old San Antonian spends hours driving along lonely stretches of highway. He may arrive at a strange hotel to find a substandard drafty room waiting for him. And then he may be heckled by audience members who have had too much to drink.

But in the few moments when he hits his stride — and the audience is with him — it's all worth it.

"It's real exciting being up in front of people, knowing that they want to hear every word you say," Morrison said. "It's a real rush — scary, but invigorating."

Morrison said he debuted in 1984 during an amateur night. He has placed in regional comedy competitions and has been on the road traveling to performances for about three years.

"I could be making more money if I had a coat-and-a-tie job," Morrison said. "But then I might hate my boss, hate my life and even end up hating my wife."

Morrison, newly married, looks like the average artist, with long locks of unfettered reddish hair falling across his face. He dressed casually, in a t-shirt and jeans while he ironed a black shirt for his appearance at recent comedy night at the Odessa Hilton.

The comedian noted that his room was first-rate and he offered visitors soft drinks from an ice chest he carries with him on the road.

"I'm the headliner tonight," he said. "This is great because it's hard being the first one on. By being the headliner I can watch the audience and see what they respond to."

Morrison said his show the night before had gone well because he played to a full house.

"The smaller the audience, the harder it is because the energy flows toward you, and if you aren't getting that energy to feed off you have to provide it yourself. It gets real taxing."

The comic said he performed before an audience of 11 at a recent gig in the Cayman Islands where he was honeymooning with his wife.

"It was the worst," he said, noting that people become self-conscious about laughing when their numbers are few.

Morrison — a pale, unassuming man who speaks in a soft voice — suddenly changes when he hears a knock on the door. Realizing it is the other comic who will go on stage before him, he gives him a hard time.

"Who is it?" he shouts, "Sorry, I didn't order anything. If it's room service, I have my own drinks."

Then Morrison opens the door and beckons in fellow comic and San Antonian Gary Ingle.

Organ transplant teams consider many factors

By Jan Jarvis
N.Y. Times News Service

From the start, the Rev. Earl Oldham, who became the world's oldest heart transplant recipient this month, was a winner.

Never mind that he's 71 years old.

Or that there's a nationwide shortage of organs and a long waiting list of patients, all younger than Oldham.

"I could see it in his eyes — he was a winner," said Peter Alivizatos, Baylor Hospital's director of cardiac transplants. "The reverend is a man who wants to do things with his life, to be useful. This is a man who is young at heart."

Within a week, Oldham was out of intensive care in the Dallas hospital, confirming the transplant decision and illustrating that age may not be so important when it comes to selecting a transplant recipient. Many factors are involved.

MANY PATIENTS — those who don't have the money, family support or proper mental outlook — are ruled out, said Wanda Bond, spokeswoman for the United Network for Organ Sharing, a national non-profit organization. Some hospitals will not accept patients who have no insurance. Many refuse those who smoke or drink excessively.

"Transplant teams take a lot of things into consideration, including socioeconomic factors and the individual's contribution to society," she said. "They look at whether the person will have access to health care later on, whether he can afford it and whether he has friends and family members to help.

"It's a gray area, and it comes down to the individual transplant team's decision on whose life is worth more."

Put bluntly, not enough hearts are donated to go around, and no one is going to waste a heart on a candidate who is not likely to make good use of it, Bond said.

As of May, 1,984 people were waiting for heart transplants nationwide, said Chris Markal of the National Heart Assist and Transplant Fund, an organization that helps families raise money for transplants. About 25 percent of those will die before their name comes up for surgery. How many others never make it to the list is unknown.

"Everyone is very cautious about how many people they put on the list," Markal said. "Consequently, no one is put on it until they are already very ill."

IN OLDHAM'S case, the decision to transplant was based on his biological age rather than his chronological age, doctors said. Although only 2 percent of the heart transplants nationwide are performed on patients older than 65, Oldham was considered an excellent candidate by his doctors because he has the body of a 55-year-old.

"I've done transplants on younger people that were a complete disappointment," Alivizatos said. "I've seen 40-year-olds get hearts and go into retirement."

Baylor University Medical Center focuses on patients who not only will survive, but also will go on to live full lives.

"Remember, the purpose of transplantation is to restore life," Alivizatos said, "not to prolong misery."

Dr. Lonnie Whidden of Dallas' Methodist Medical Center transplant team said he has no problem with older patients, but worries that Oldham's case might give false hope to others who might not do as well.

Alivizatos said there's evidence that older bodies make better candidates than younger ones because they do not have as active an immune system, reducing the chance of rejection.

THE DECISION about who receives a heart rests with the transplant team, but there are national guidelines. Also, because a heart can survive only four to six hours, it must stay within 500 miles of where it is received, Bond said.

The blood types and physical size of the donor and recipient must match. And the recipient's overall condition must be good. Status One patients, who are hospitalized and in grave condition, are considered before those who are still at home, as Oldham was.

But before getting on the waiting list, each patient is tested from head to toe.

"All systems must be disease-free," said Jeanne Varnes, heart transplant coordinator at Methodist Medical Center. "That means no liver disease, no kidney disease, no signs of cancer."

If a transplant recipient were to develop cancer, for example, the disease would flourish because the anti-rejection drugs suppress the immune system.

Psychiatric evaluations are involved, too.

"Some patients can't handle the fact that someone has to die in order for them to live," Varnes said. "Others have problems with the idea that someone else's body part is in theirs."

AT METHODIST Medical Center, where 44 heart transplants have been performed since 1986, the team makes it clear that the patient's life will change dramatically.

"We lay all the cards on the table," Varnes said. "We want them to understand that their life will be filled with visits to the hospital, biopsies, lab work and lots of medications."

Typically, patients must take eight to 20 pills a day for the rest of their lives. Side effects range from weight gain to liver impairment. The drugs can also trigger mental problems. Some patients often must take drugs to correct problems caused by other medications.

"The immune suppressants can cause hypertension so patients take anti-hypertension drugs," Varnes said. "And the steroids can sometimes cause blood-sugar problems that lead to a type of diabetes."

'Dumbo' not true picture of circus life

By Diane Murray
Associated Press

Times have changed. Seems an animal rights group in California thought the elephants didn't need to be raising tents anymore, so the circus had to quit.

SAN ANGELO — I'm all psyched up for an old-fashioned circus tent-raising.

Just like in "Dumbo."

Someone barking commands as workers guide elephants who pull on a pile of canvas until it magically billows into a circus tent.

Several small tents and concession stands already are in place on the morning that my 5-year-old and I arrive at the Coliseum parking lot to see Circus Vargas raise the big top.

"It's too late, Mom," my daughter says. "Tent's already up."

"No, wait and see. They use the elephants to pull the tent up. It's going to be great."

"The elephants? Just like in 'Dumbo'?" She likes this idea.

"Yes. Just like in 'Dumbo.' "

We make our way over to the animal tent just in time to see sleepy-looking elephants stepping down from a tractor-trailer rig. One little girl bursts into tears and grabs her mother's legs. Other children squeal and point.

Secretly, I'm at least as thrilled as the group of toddlers surrounding me.

The group shifts to a tent that already shelters a group of ponies as the circus workers begin leading the elephants into the tent.

They have both African and Indian elephants — at least 10 of them, several with huge tusks. I'm pretty impressed.

My daughter is pretty impressed with the chocolate chip cookies the circus clown is handing out.

Wait a minute I think. They're chaining all these elephants up. What about the tent?

I look to the left and see a huge red-and-blue tent has risen on the Coliseum parking lot.

A man walks by and tells me, "They don't use the elephants to put the tent up anymore."

Apparently I've watched "Dumbo" 50 or 60 times too often.

Times have changed. Seems an animal rights group in California thought the elephants didn't need to be raising tents anymore, so the circus had to quit.

Still determined to see the tent go up, I lead my daughter through a maze of handpainted circus signs and boxes, past huge trucks and over wires and hoses and ropes as big around as my child's arm.

We peek through an open panel in the side of the tent as men hammer spikes with sledge hammers and construction equipment is used to adjust support poles inside the tent.

No one seems to be barking out orders. They've been through this hundreds of times, and everyone knows exactly what to do without being told.

My daughter peers in to the semi-dark tent, comments on the need for lights and says she wants to go play with a group of kids she has spotted.

I turn around and notice an entire community of travel trailers has sprung up right outside the Coliseum. Outside one trailer, a toddler plays with a baby sitting in a stroller. Another preschooler tugs on her big sister's arm. The older child reaches out and pats the child, then goes back to the book and writing table on her lap.

It is a school day, after all.

The children are oblivious to the tents, the sounds, the smells, the huge trucks, the ponies and elephants almost within touching distance.

They've been through this hundreds of times.

No, this isn't "Dumbo."

This is real circus life.

LAUGH: Comic proud at audience's response

(From 1B)

"We used to have comedy clubs in San Antonio," Ingle said. "But they all closed. It's Joe's fault. He went on the road for four or five years, and now there isn't so much as an open-mike night" for amateurs to try their luck as stand-up comedians.

Both the comics banter about the low pay they receive for the arduous work they do.

"It's a tough life," Ingle said. "We can only sleep 'til 6:30 (p.m.), do two shows a night and those shows could last between 35-40 minutes with no naps in between shows."

"No really, the pay is rough," Morrison said. "My wife waits tables in San Antonio. She knows that someday I'll be really rich and famous. Ha. Ha."

Then in just seconds, Morrison transforms his appearance. He combs his hair back into a neat ponytail, dons the black shirt and a dark suit jacket with classic lines and padded shoulders.

When he turns to his visitors — and a devilish grin spreads across his face — a completely distinct persona emerges.

In the following 40 minutes it's evident that Morrison was being modest about his talent. Ingle introduces the headliner as a finalist in a Southwestern "laugh off" competition.

Then the range of Morrison's talent is even more evident as he gets the audience into his corner with a minimal amount of patter.

On stage he utters a barrage of sound effects and his face seems to become rubber as he sucks air, purses out his lips, alternately grins and frowns.

Morrison tells the audience that he was a waiter prior to becoming a comic. "I used to have fun with those announcements," he said. "John, party of four, your table is ready," he says in a distinguished speaking voice. "Bill, party of three, you are still waiting."

Then Morrison pokes fun at the commercials, telephone recordings and even gang members in a swimming pool.

He darts around the stage, working the audience and the laughter ripples back. A brief look of pride washes over his face during one prolonged bout of laughter from the audience and — for a few minutes — all the sacrifices he makes to pursue his dream are forgotten and life as a stand-up comic for Joe Morrison is a laughing matter.

Murder suspect arrested in Texas

GALVESTON (AP) — A man facing a homicide charge in Utah has been arrested on a federal warrant for unlawful flight to avoid prosecution, FBI officials said Sunday.

Jeremy Abshire, 29, was being held without bond Sunday at the Galveston County jail, sheriff's deputy Cheryl Trimble said.

Utah authorities have charged Abshire with criminal homicide in connection to the Aug. 5 stabbing and beating death of 45-year-old Barbara Boggs Richardson in a transient camp along the Jordan River in Salt Lake.

Abshire had been featured on the Fox television program "America's Most Wanted" Friday night.

Special Agent James Screen, media spokesman for the Salt Lake City FBI office, said officials lured Abshire from an oil rig off Galveston after an anonymous caller recognized his photos and called the TV show's hot line.

Witnesses say Abshire and Ms. Richardson went together to a secluded area during a drinking party at the transient camp. Salt Lake County Sheriff's Capt. Bill Van Wagenen said Abshire returned alone with his arms smeared with blood.

The captain said Abshire is believed to be a member of the vigilante hobo group calling itself the "Freight Train Riders of America."

An initial court appearance for Abshire is scheduled for today, Screen said.

Illegal van lines transport passengers to Mexico

The State

HOUSTON (AP) — Scores of illegal, uninsured and sometimes dangerous small bus and van lines shuttle many poor Texans every weekend to South Texas and Mexico to visit relatives.

Known by the Spanish term "las camionetas," most of the van services in Houston and statewide operate without required licenses or insurance. Despite occasional crackdowns by state and federal regulators, however, they generally conduct their business with impunity.

Passengers and operators of the services tell of hot, crowded vehicles that sometimes break down, stranding them for hours, and about untrained drivers who drink or struggle to stay awake after long hours behind the wheel. Some passengers say drivers often demand additional money from them to pay bribes at the border.

In February, five months after state regulators determined that one Houston company was operating illegally, the company's van crashed in Mexico, killing a 63-year-old Houston woman. Investigators said it appeared the driver was going too fast as he rounded a dangerous curve.

But while the camionetas operate outside the law, they represent a critical lifeline for much of Houston's Hispanic community.

Operators of the camionetas say larger bus companies have shown no interest in serving immigrants who need convenient, affordable transportation to visit relatives in Mexico.

"The reality is there are a lot of people traveling every day on these vans between Mexico and Houston — we are talking about people who don't have much money," said Roberto Gonzalez, commercial attache for the Mexican consulate in Houston.

"It is an important service, but they don't offer the minimum security to the passengers. When we see an accident, there is little we can do to help the relatives who suffer this," Gonzalez said.

No one knows exactly how many of the illegal van services exist, but a Houston Chronicle investigation has turned up an estimated 45 companies operating in Houston alone, the newspaper reported in Sunday's editions. Only five have the required state or federal operating permits and registered proof of commercial insurance, government records show.

Scores of other illegal van services have cropped up in Dallas, San Antonio, Austin and in South Texas.

On any Friday night, dozens of the vans depart Houston's east side en route to Brownsville, Laredo, Monterrey and other cities along the border and in Mexico. Each van typically carries 12 to 15 passengers, and some operators estimate that as many as 10,000 passengers a month travel on the weekends alone.

Some of the vans pick up passengers at their homes. Others collect passengers in grocery store parking lots or near Mexican restaurants.

A trip to Monterrey can cost as little as $25. That compares with the $48 cost of taking a Greyhound or Valley Transit bus to a border city, then transferring to a Mexican bus line. Mexican law prohibits U.S. bus companies from operating in that country.

While locals discuss the dangers posed by the vans, few of the cases have been documented or investigated.

"When you buy a ticket on one of these things, it's like buying a risk," said Carlos Pedroza, a Mexican attorney who represented the family of Irene Herrera de Bujanda, the Houston woman killed in Mexico.

"Public transportation is very delicate — in both Mexico and the United States — and it shouldn't be left to just anybody," Pedroza said. "If public transportation is left in the hands of unqualified people, accidents will happen. People will die."

Five months before Ms. Herrera de Bujanda was killed, state officials investigated the company that operated the van on which she was traveling.

Assault victim still in hospital

BEAUMONT (AP) — Attended by her daughter and granddaughter, 73-year-old Myrtle Conner lies comatose in a Beaumont hospital, the most severely injured of 11 elderly women attacked here between June and October.

Police believe the same man is responsible for assaulting the women, whose average age is 80. One of the women was attacked twice. Beaumont detectives said three of the victims — including Ms. Conner — were beaten so savagely, they will endure lifelong ailments.

Ms. Conner is kept alive by a feeding tube. Her gray hair is growing back slightly after being shaved for brain surgery. Her skin is pale, her mouth is sunken and she has suffered a bout with pneumonia and two violent seizures.

In October, officers arrested a 19-year-old Beaumont parolee in connection with the 12 assaults.

She doesn't respond to her relative's soft voices. "We miss you, grandma. We want you to come home with us," said her granddaughter, Kendra Quilleon.

Bobbie Quilleon and her daughter Kendra, both from Florida, are trying to lure Ms. Conner out of the coma. Once active, the mother of five and grandmother of 15 refinished furniture, put on garage sales and sewed Raggedy Ann and Andy dolls to sell to neighborhood children.

Ms. Conner was stitching a pair of arms and legs onto a rag doll when she was attacked Sept. 27.

The robber slipped over Ms. Conner's backyard fence, slashed the screen door with a butcher knife and entered her sewing room.

Using the weapon to threaten her, he stole the cash she had made from a recent garage sale, beat her about the head and threw her through a screen door. The robber broke Ms. Conner's nose, fractured her jaw, cracked her ribs and sliced her palms with the butcher knife.

No charges have been filed in connection with the assault.

In October, officers arrested a 19-year-old Beaumont parolee in connection with the series of 12 assaults. He remains in the Jefferson County Jail in lieu of $1 million bond. Authorities have filed charges in connection with two of the attacks, and charges in a third assault are pending, officials told the Beaumont Enterprise Journal in Sunday's editions.

Beaumont police Detective Cliff Orr said investigations into all the cases are continuing. He said police are gathering more evidence, including DNA samples in one of the attacks.

Orr said detectives are not giving up on filing charges in any of the other cases. "Believe me, these old ladies are not forgotten," he said.

"I pray night and day that police will be able to get the necessary evidence," Ms. Quilleon said.

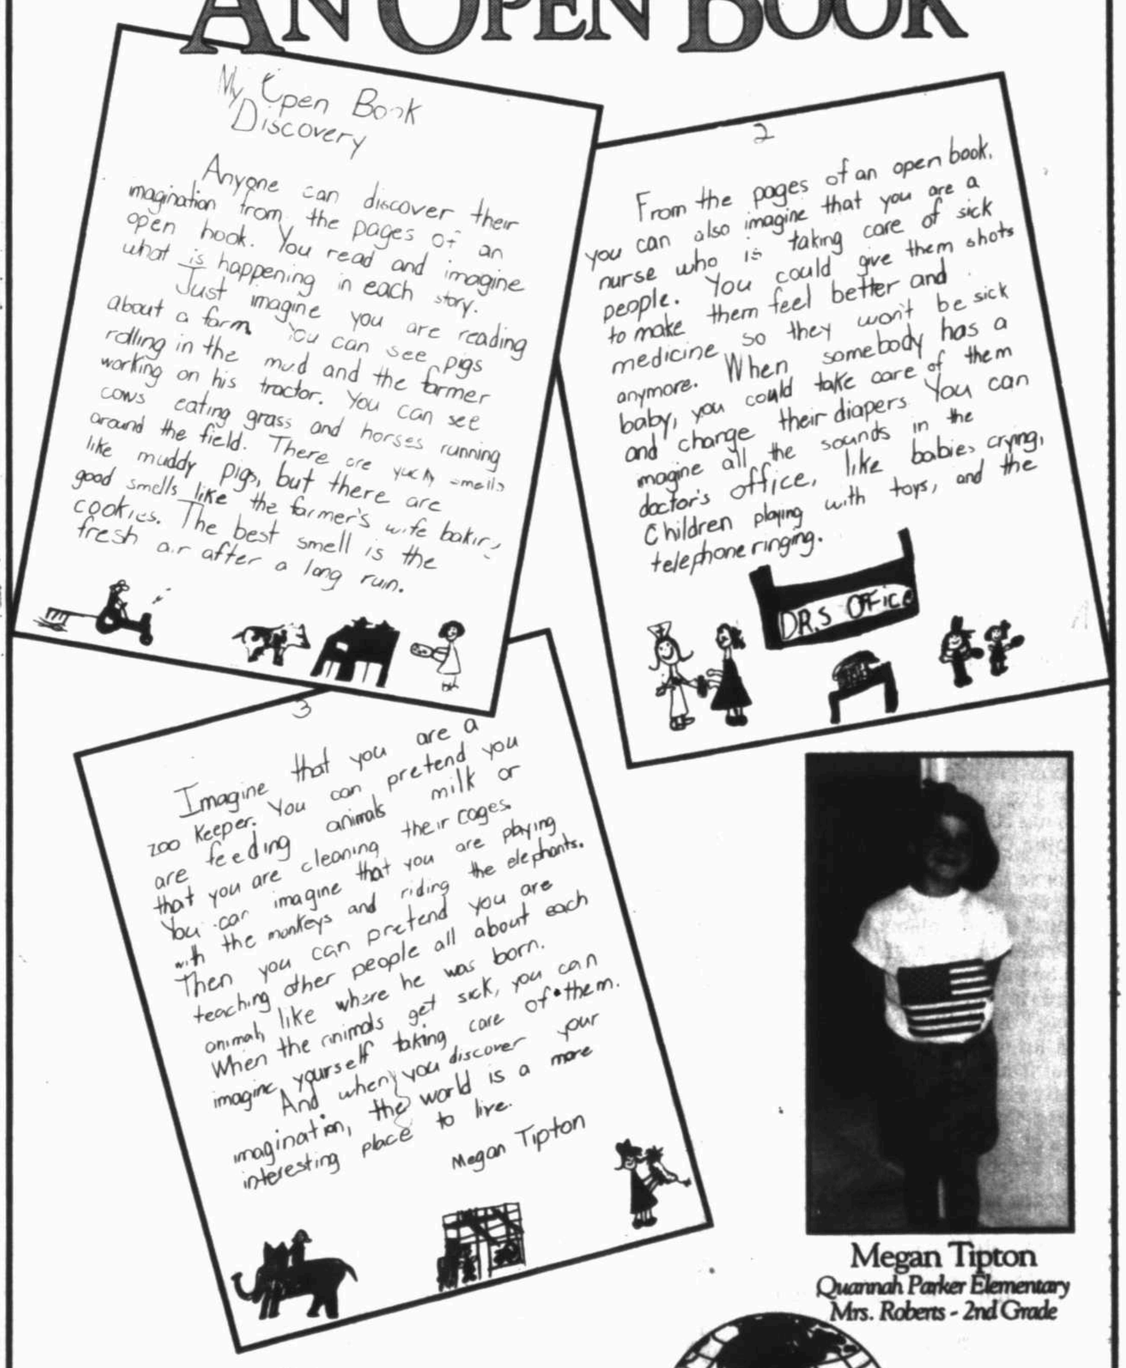
THE WORLD IS AN OPEN BOOK


My Open Book Discovery
Anyone can discover their imagination from the pages of an open book. You read and imagine what is happening in each story. Just imagine you are reading about a farm. You can see pigs rolling in the mud and the farmer working on his tractor. You can see cows eating grass and horses running around the field. There are yucky smells like muddy pigs, but there are good smells like the farmer's wife baking cookies. The best smell is the fresh air after a long run.
From the pages of an open book, you can also imagine that you are a nurse who is taking care of sick people. You could give them shots to make them feel better and medicine so they won't be sick anymore. When somebody has a baby, you could take care of them and change their diapers. You can imagine all the sounds in the doctor's office, like babies crying, children playing with toys, and the telephone ringing.
DR.'S OFFICE
Imagine that you are a zoo keeper. You can pretend you are feeding animals milk or that you are cleaning their cages. You can imagine that you are playing with the monkeys and riding the elephants. Then you can pretend you are teaching other people all about each animal like where he was born. When the animals get sick, you can imagine yourself taking care of them. And when you discover your imagination, the world is a more interesting place to live.

Representatives consider stripped-down bank bill

By David E. Rosenbaum
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — In the face of increasingly partisan wrangling on the verge of an election year, Congress will take one final stab this week at passing banking legislation.

After several days of negotiations last week, administration officials and lawmakers from both parties said the chances were about 50-50 that a key proposal from President Bush, to allow banks to open branches nationwide, would be enacted.

Paradoxically, the main factor in favor of such a measure is not what it would do for banks but that it could provide cover for legislators who have no alternative but to approve billions of dollars to bail out failed banks.

If they pass a bill that includes the bailout money and authority for interstate banking, the latter will probably dominate the headlines.

Other main parts of the banking proposal, which Bush said at the beginning of the year was his top domestic priority, are dead at least for this year, and maybe for years to come.

They would permit banks to sell insurance and stocks and underwrite securities and allow commercial enterprises like retail chains to own banks.

Last Monday, the House of Representatives voted down comprehensive changes in the nation's banking laws. In the end, the Bush administration worked against the bill because it had become bogged down with rules limiting the operations of banks.

The next day, the House Banking Committee approved a stripped-down bill that would do little more than provide a $30 billion taxpayer loan to the deposit insurance fund to pay off depositors of failed banks and increase by billions of dollars the ability of the insurance fund to borrow money to buy the assets of banks that fail.

Every responsible lawmaker knows such a bill must be enacted.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.'s insurance fund is now down to about $2 billion, and with a number of bank failures in the offing, the fund will become insolvent early next year.

Without the new loans, blameless depositors would not be reimbursed when their banks fail next year, and that could lead to a run on banks like the ones in the Depression that led the government to begin insuring bank deposits.

'Talking' chip

Texas-made golf clubs go worldwide

HUMBLE (AP) — Although clubs made by Wood Brothers Golf are coveted by golf pros and celebrities, the small company in northeast Harris County likely is known to more Japanese than Americans.

The company exports 90 percent of its pricey, classic oil-hardened persimmon woods and forged irons to Japan and the Far East.

Japan's prime minister loves them, while former Secretary of State George Shultz has sets stationed throughout the United States, and O.J. Simpson ordered an autographed set signed "The Juice."

Dave Wood, 36, and brother Charlie Wood, 30, have purposely kept a low company profile in the community. Now, they are looking to expand Wood Brothers' presence in the United States.

Founded as Texas Golf Co. in Humble in 1977, the company initially was involved in restoring classic clubs, which led Dave Wood into manufacturing clubs in 1982.

In 1985 at the Houston Open, the company sold several drivers to the pros passing through town on tour. Among them was Bob Tway, who the next year used his Wood Brothers clubs to win the PGA Championship in a playoff with Greg Norman.

After Tway's victory in 1986, the company's business skyrocketed, so much so that the firm was forced to lock its doors and take orders by appointment only for a time.

The Wood Brothers' small plant now employs about 15 people in downtown Humble. The company makes about 24,000 clubs a year and had sales of about $3.5 million in 1990.

So far, the company's reputation has come from word of mouth among pros, for whom the Woods have done custom work and repairs and sold the signature woods that put the company on the map.

Last year, Dave Wood, who founded the company, sold a 48 percent interest to Nihon Hymo Industries, a large Japanese company that distributes Wood Brothers clubs throughout the Pacific Rim.

The Woods recently hired the former president of Dunlop Worldwide Golf, Mike Orr, to help them break into the U.S. market.

Dave Wood concedes that his company entered the market making wooden-head woods just as the popularity of metal-head woods was taking off in the early 1980s. Still, he feels there will always be a market for traditional woods.

Orr agrees. "Metal-head woods represent performance improvement, but there is still a significant market out there for people who want the more traditional clubs," he said.

Rolling out a new product line into a market as large as the golfing industry in the United States is difficult, Orr said. "The pros do have quite a bit of influence, though," he said.

Although most of the clubs are standardized versions, the special-order clubs usually have a distinctive geographic design for the soleplate. Clubs made for Steve Ballesteros have a plate in the shape of Spain. The set designed for Shultz has a plate shaped like the United States.

Calamities limit pecan availability

ALBANY, Ga. (AP) — Pecans, a popular treat at Thanksgiving and Christmas, may cost consumers more this year because a series of calamities in the Sun Belt has reduced the supply of top-quality nuts.

The U.S. Agriculture Department revised its crop estimate last month because of disease problems, insect attacks and weather woes. The crop now is expected to total 271 million pounds, 7 percent less than the September estimate.

In Georgia, the nation's top pecan-producing state, the crop estimate was lowered from 115 million pounds to 95 million pounds. Second-ranked Texas is expected to produce 65 million pounds this year, despite disease problems.

Georgia growers have had to contend with one problem after another all season.

Heavy rain early in the growing season promoted fungal diseases and increased production costs by forcing farmers to apply more fungicides.

Then they had to battle black and yellow aphids, insects that feed on plant juices and defoliate trees. They were further hampered by scab, a major pecan fungus that can defoliate trees and destroy nuts. Now they're in the midst of a two-month drought.

Mike Horne, president of the 400-member Georgia Pecan Growers' Association, believes production will be less than the latest estimate.

"My guess would be around 80 million pounds and it might be a little less than that," said Horne, who has 500 acres of pecan trees in Sumter County.

Horne said consumers should be able to buy good quality pecans, despite the problems.

"Prices will be higher, but there will be good pecans out there. Demand is very stable and very strong," he said.

"A lot of farmers are really disappointed," said Rhen Bishop, county Extension director in Dougherty County, which has 20,000 acres of pecan trees. "This has not been a good year."

Pecans are grown in at least 12 states, stretching from North Carolina to California. New Mexico is expected to produce 29 million pounds and Alabama, 13 million pounds. The Alabama crop estimate was reduced 13 percent last month because of scab.

"The harvest is well under way, but the quality is not as good as last year," said Bill Goff, a pecan specialist at Auburn University.

U.S. growers produced only 205 million tons last year, but received record high prices because of short supplies. Georgia's production totaled only 65 million pounds, the smallest crop in a decade, because of a drought.

KJ calls for tests

WASHINGTON (AP) — A top professional basketball player Sunday called for "some form of uniform testing" of players for AIDS in the wake of Magic Johnson's disclosure that he has the virus that causes the fatal disease.

A leading college basketball coach, however, said that singling out athletes for mandatory testing would be a violation of their privacy.

Kevin Johnson of the Phoenix Suns and Coach John Thompson of Georgetown University appeared on ABC-TV's "This Week with David Brinkley."

Magic Johnson announced Thursday that he was retiring after a brilliant career with the Los Angeles Lakers because he has the virus that triggers AIDS.

Kevin Johnson, asked about mandatory AIDS testing for athletes, said: "I think now that there will be some form of uniform testing."

He conceded that the privacy question arises, but said he believed the NBA "will come up with something that we players and the Players Association can accept, just to set an example for young people."

Lee hoists playoff flag

Big School, small school, it's all the same to Miller's Rebels

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Midland Lee sets sail on its ninth consecutive trip to the Class 5A state football playoffs this week with no gripes about its position in the Small School bracket.

The 9-1 Rebels face the prospect of playing two teams in the first two weeks that they have already met and beaten.

Lee will face Amarillo Palo Duro at noon Saturday at Dick Bivins Stadium in Amarillo in the bi-district round. The Dons are 4-6 for the season and already have been beaten by the Rebs to the tune of 34-7 during the third week of regular season play.

Lee is highly favored to beat the Dons again, and if they do as expected, the Rebels most likely will meet old regular season and playoff nemesis El Paso Andress in the area round.

Rebels vs. Dons

Bi-District Playoff: Midland Lee Rebels (9-1) vs. Amarillo Palo Duro Dons (4-6).

Site and Time: Noon Saturday at Dick Bivins Stadium in Amarillo. (Following the game, Odessa Permian will face Amarillo Tascosa at 4:30 p.m. in a bi-district doubleheader).

Placement: Lee is the second place team in District 4-5A while Palo Duro is the second place representative from District 3-5A.

History: Lee has a 1-1 playoff record against Palo Duro.

Tickets: Adults $6, students $3 if purchased in Midland. All tickets at the gate in Amarillo will be $7. (Lee season ticket holders may purchase tickets all day Tuesday at the Memorial Stadium ticket office. General public may purchase tickets from 8 a.m. Wednesday until 1 p.m. Friday.)

Andress is 9-1 on the season, suffering its only loss, 13-6, to Lee in the season opener for both teams. Andress eliminated Lee from the state playoffs last year in El Paso on a 21-21 tie in a game that the Eagles won on penetrations by a 5-3 margin.

Lee coach Earl Miller is happy with his team's placement in the playoff picture.

"We like where we are," Miller said. "We think we will be up against teams that we have a chance to win against in the first three rounds. That doesn't mean we will win those three games, but we have a chance to play with any of them.

"But let's face it. We have a team that has to play flat all out every game to win and it will be up to us to get ready for that challenge. If we do play to our best, we have a chance to go pretty far. And the further you go, the more confidence you build. You get a few breaks and anything can happen.

"We haven't done all that well in the playoffs because we may have placed more emphasis on the district championship in years past. Maybe, we should concentrate more on the playoffs from the mental side."

Lee has struggled with Andress the past couple of seasons, but Miller isn't disappointed at seeing the Eagles back in Lee's path.

"First, Andress has to come to Midland if we can beat Palo Duro. That's the first big task. It scares you a bit to play a team you've already beaten. You wonder if the kids won't take them seriously," Miller said. "But you want to play Andress at home. That will help because its a rough trip to El Paso."

Andress is the only team that Lee has the prospects of playing that has as few as one loss. In the third round, the Rebels can meet no team with less than two losses. Sherman (8-2), Arlington (8-2) and Fort Worth Dunbar (8-2) are in Lee's third round path. All are solid teams, but not great teams of the likes of Odessa Permian and Arlington Lamar, which are on a sudden death third round

Washington's Mark Rypien

Rypien downplays seven TDs

Associated Press

Mark Rypien, his passing game kept under wraps for most of the season, kept the Washington Redskins rolling with a record-shattering performance Sunday, and the Indianapolis Colts finally showed some horsepower.

Rypien had a career-high six touchdown passes, threw for a career-high

NFL Roundup

442 yards and broke the 43-year-old NFL record for average gain per completion, leading the undefeated Redskins to a 56-17 victory over the Atlanta Falcons.

"It's more of a thrill to be 10-0," Rypien said. "It's a team football game — I don't need to go in and break records."

Rypien, whose performance came against the NFL's fifth-ranked pass defense, completed 16 of 31 passes for an average of 27.63 yards per completion. That broke the NFL record of 18.58 by the Redskins' Sammy Baugh against Boston on Oct. 31, 1948. Baugh completed 24 passes for a team-record 446 yards on that day.

Kicker pays off (finally)

■ A week after losing to Washington on a missed field goal, Houston defeats Dallas 26-23 in overtime thanks to the leg of Al Del Greco, the Oilers' newly-signed — and suddenly popular — kicker.

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Al Del Greco gave his Houston Oiler teammates a flashback Sunday, and then he joined Warren Moon to give them a victory.

Del Greco, who signed with the team on Tuesday, kicked four field goals, including a 23-yarder with 29 seconds left in overtime, that lifted the Oilers to a 26-23 victory over the Dallas Cowboys.

The flashback came when Del Greco missed a 41-yard field goal with 35 seconds left in regulation play that forced the overtime. A week ago, former Oilers kicker Ian Howfield missed a 33-yarder with one second to play in regulation, and Houston went on to lose, 16-13, to Washington in overtime.

"I wouldn't allow myself to have any flashbacks," Houston coach Jack Pardee said. "They came back and had a chance to win it, and that's when we finally got the big plays that helped us win."

Moon completed 41 of 56 passes for 432 yards for the game and was masterful in the drive to Del Greco's winning field goal. He attacked the Dallas defense with eight straight completions.

Del Greco's first field goal of the day was a career-long 52 yarder, and he also had kicks of 19 and 22.

"Warren had a super day," Pardee said. "Offensively we didn't have a turnover, and Warren made the plays when he had to."

Moon completed a 7-yard pass that Ernest Givins scooped off his shoetops to the Dallas 15 and Lorenzo White reversed his field and ran 12 yards to the three.

White lost two yards on a fumble that he recovered prior to the winning kick.

"We should have kicked a down earlier," Pardee said. "The kicker had been with us three days, and I thought if we could get the win without putting him through that it would be good. But he came through like a champ."

Del Greco was pleased he got a second chance after his 41-yard miss.

"As soon as I hit it, I thought it was right on target, but I guess that's when the bubble burst. The fairy tale ending didn't come true. I'm just glad I hit the next one, and I'm glad to be here."

In the overtime, the Cowboys moved into position to win the game. Emmitt Smith ran 7 yards to the Houston 18 before he fumbled. Houston's Bubba Mc-

JIMMY PATTERSON

It's early, but there's cause for optimism

Granted, only two games have been played at Chaparral Center this junior college basketball season, but if Saturday night's crowds was any indication, the sports popularity may be returning.

Patterson

Attendance has been on the downturn the last couple of seasons — 26 losses in two years will keep people away, to be sure — but Saturday night, those in attendance played an integral part.

"Make no mistake about it," MC head coach Steve Green said, "the crowd had a big impact. They made a difference."

It was a vocal lot to say the least that witnessed Midland's 101-97 win over Angelina College in the final game of the Chap Classic.

The Chaps appear to have several players who could become draws for the partisan crowds — Ari Rodriques, Fabian Mina, Chris McKinney and Kelon Haynie, not to mention returning sophomore Charles Sanders.

Only problem is a lack of consistent home dates: MC plays tonight at 7:30 against Cisco and next Tuesday against Ranger, and then they're gone for a month. One presumes, however, that if MC returns to Chap Center January 3 against Seward boasting an 11-2 or 12-1 record, the fans will also return.

Unfamiliarity is easily forgotten with a little winning.

The Chaps, while not at home, play a close-to-home tournament Thanksgiving weekend at the Odessa Turkey Classic.

A couple of new basketball rules worthy of note here: For the first time this season, three referees instead of two will police JUCO courts, which has Dee Carter and every other ref breathing a sigh of relief, literally.

Another new rule says that — and I'm serious, here — a player who has been knocked unconscious cannot re-enter a game now without a doctor's permission.

In the first place, it kinda strikes me as odd that a player would actually want to come back into a game after being out cold.

Maybe next will come a rule to allow players to play while they're unconscious.

Most difficult thing to watch during the past few days pertaining to Magic Johnson are all the replays of his moves on the court. The no-look passes, the shots that somehow fell in. Unbelievable.

Sort of unfair, isn't it, that Magic has an indiscretion and gets a positive result back on his HIV test. Meantime, Wilt Chamberlain has 20,000 indiscretions and gets a book on the best-seller list.

Forget Larry Johnson. And Kenny Anderson. And Billy Owens. NBA Rookie of the Year this year will be Dikembe Mutombo. It's money in the bank.

It'll be a bit odd this season watching the Clippers become the dominant team in the City of Angels, and the L.A. Sports Arena supplant the Fabulous Forum as the place to be. Maybe not that drastic a change, but it won't surprise too many if the Clippers finish better than the Lakers, at least record-wise.

For your reading pleasure: If for some reason you want to know what sports writers are really like (snicker, snicker), get yourself a copy of Dan Jenkins' latest book "You Gotta Play Hurt."

Keep it away from the kiddos, though. It won't be appearing on the Moral Majority's Top 10 List of Must Reads.

Jimmy Patterson is assistant sports editor of the Reporter-Telegram.

Cleveland's Bernie Kosar set a new record for most pass attempts without an interception (308) with this toss, but ironically was picked off later Sunday.

NFL: Colts finally win first game

(From 1C)

Entering the game, Washington was ranked first in the NFL in rushing and 16th in passing yards.

Ending the NFL's last winless streak this season at nine games, the visiting Colts scored 21 points in the third quarter to beat the New York Jets 28-27. Jeff George threw for three touchdowns — two to Jessie Hester — and Clarence Verdin returned a kickoff 88 yards for a score.

"This just shows what a bunch of players pulling together can do," George said.

Indianapolis had not scored a touchdown in five games — spanning 329 minutes, 26 seconds — since Sept. 22. But the Colts, playing without suspended running back Eric Dickerson, dominated the highly rated New York defense in the second half.

"You have to come together as a team," George said. "And when you lose a star player like Eric, we realized we must play harder and come together more."

Chiefs 27, Rams 20

Linebacker Derrick Thomas made a game-winning play and a game-saving play in the last 2½ minutes for visiting Kansas City.

Thomas scooped up a fumble on the Los Angeles 23 and raced into the end zone with 2:25 remaining to give the Chiefs the lead. Then, with the Rams threatening to tie, he swatted the ball away from Rams quarterback Jim Everett and recovered at the Chiefs' 31.

Bills 34, Packers 24

Jim Kelly, forced out of the game for several plays in the third quarter with a sore back, passed for two first-half touchdowns and then ran for another in the fourth quarter as Buffalo (9-1) beat Green Bay (2-8) at Milwaukee.

Chargers 17, Seahawks 14

John Carney kicked a 54-yard field goal, the longest of his career, with 18 seconds left, giving San Diego the victory at home against Seattle.

Carney, whose previous longest field goal was 48 yards in a loss at Pittsburgh on opening day, had been 0-for-3 from beyond 50 yards during his three-year career.

Saints 10, 49ers 3

Steve Walsh, ineffective for most of the game, hit Eric Martin for 8 yards and the game's only touchdown, leading New Orleans over San Francisco at the Superdome.

Walsh, replacing the injured Bobby Hebert, completed 10 of 25 passes for 116 yards and the touchdown, while Steve Bono, subbing for the injured Steve Young, was 15 of 32 for 109 yards.

Eagles 32, Browns 30

Jim McMahon passed for 341 yards and three touchdowns as Philadelphia overcame an early 23-point deficit at Cleveland.

The Eagles (5-5) didn't lead until McMahon hit Calvin Williams with a 5-yard touchdown pass with five minutes left. The touchdown came three plays after Cleveland's Webster Slaughter fumbled a punt away at his own 2.

Buccaneers 30, Lions 21

Vinny Testaverde played error-free football and Reggie Cobb pumped life into the NFL's 27th-ranked offense by rushing for a career-high 139 yards and three touchdowns as Tampa Bay won at home against Detroit.

The Buccaneers (2-8) forced four turnovers by Lions quarterback Erik Kramer and kept Barry Sanders from taking over the game when the Lions faced a 23-7 halftime deficit.

Steelers 33, Bengals 27, OT

Eric Green caught a 26-yard touchdown pass from Neil O'Donnell in overtime to give Pittsburgh the victory at Cincinnati.

Raiders 17, Broncos 16

Marcus Allen, returning from a knee injury, passed for a touchdown on an option play, Jay Schroeder threw to Tim Brown for another score, and Los Angeles blocked two kicks in the fourth quarter at Denver.

Giants 21, Cardinals 14

Jeff Hostetler ran 47 and 4 yards for New York touchdowns.

The visiting Giants (5-5) kept alive their hopes of a Super Bowl defense as they halted a two-game losing streak at the expense of the Cardinals (4-7), who have lost three straight.

Dolphins 30, Patriots 20

MIAMI — Dan Marino broke out of a year-long slump with three touchdown passes, including a game-winning 32-yarder to Mark Clayton with 1:47 left as the Miami Dolphins beat the New England Patriots.

Miami squandered a 20-6 third-quarter lead but still improved to 5-5 with its sixth consecutive victory over New England.

LA wins without Magic

Associated Press

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — The Los Angeles Lakers followed Magic's message and won for the first time since their superstar's emotional retirement, beating the Minnesota Timberwolves 96-86 Sunday night.

Sedale Threatt, who took the point guard job left vacant by Johnson, scored 27 points and had 14 assists, both highs since joining the Lakers this season, as Los Angeles won for only the second time in five games.

Before the game, James Worthy told the crowd of 16,833 how difficult a time the Lakers have had coping with Johnson's announcement that he has the virus that causes AIDS.

"There's one thing we've decided as a team, that's to do what Magic would want us to do," he said. "He's given us so much over the last 12 years. ... It's very important to us that we continue to play, continue to have the same attitude and continue to win.

"It's only fair that we give him in return the same courageous faith and courageous confidence and courageous support he's given us."

Minnesota was led by Tony Campbell with 14 points. Tyrone Corbin and Doug West each added 13.

Threatt and Byron Scott combined for 19 of the Lakers' 29 points in the third quarter. Threatt started the period with a pair of steals that each led to a dunk by Scott.

Scott put the Lakers ahead 68-51 on a 3-pointer with 5:18 left in the quarter. Threatt's free throw with 2:45 left gave the Lakers their biggest lead of the game, 78-60.

The Wolves came back to close it to 80-66 at the end of the third quarter on a hook shot and two free throws by Randy Breuer.

Pistons 85, Bullets 79

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Joe Dumars scored 12 of his 24 points in the fourth quarter, including the go-ahead jumper with 2:45 left, giving the Detroit Pistons a victory over the Washington Bullets.

Detroit trailed by nine points going into the final period, but allowed the Bullets only 13 points in the quarter.

Trail Blazers 116, Celtics 90

PORTLAND, Ore. — Clyde Drexler scored 26 points, including Portland's first 10 in the decisive third quarter, as the Trail Blazers rolled over Boston for their most one-sided victory over the Celtics in 14 years.

OILERS: Muffed punt leads to OT

(From 1C)

Dowell recovered at the 15.

"I was sandwiched between two guys and it just popped out," Smith said. "I take pride in not losing the ball. Maybe I was trying too hard."

It was Smith's first fumble of the season.

"The fumble was just one of many plays in the game," Cowboys quarterback Troy Aikman said. "We did what was necessary to win the game. Emmitt didn't cost us the game."

White scored on a 4-yard run with 4:46 to play in regulation, giving the Oilers a 23-16 lead.

But the Cowboys tied the game for the fourth time with 2:45 left in regulation. The score came on a 10-yard touchdown pass from Aikman to Michael Irvin the first play after Bill Bates recovered a fumble that bounced off Houston defender Steve Jackson at the Oiler 10 after a Dallas punt.

"I saw it coming down and it looked like it hit him," Bates said. "I know you can't advance the ball, but I didn't want them to take it away from me."

The Cowboys bottled the Oilers with pinpoint punting most of the game until Moon drove the Oilers 76 yards in the fourth quarter, hitting key passes of 18 yards to Givins and 20 yards to Tony Jones.

Moon hit Hill with a 9-yard pass on third down that gave the Oilers a first down at the Dallas 15 preceding White's bullish 4-yard score.

The Cowboys startled Houston in the first quarter when they blocked the first two punts by Greg Montgomery and turned them into a 10-0 lead. Dallas later answered Houston's second-quarter rally for a 13-10 halftime lead.

Issiac Holt batted down Montgomery's first punt and Robert Williams grabbed it and ran 18 yards with 7:54 elapsed in the game.

Montgomery's next punt was blocked out of bounds on the Oiler 27 by Darrick Brownlow, leading to a 35-yard field goal by Ken Willis with 12:49 elapsed.

The Oilers came back to tie it in the second quarter on Allen Pinkett's one-yard dive, capping an 88-yard drive, and Del Greco's career-longest 52 yard field goal.

With only 1:47 to work with, the Cowboys got the lead back with six consecutive first down plays, driving 70 yards to Willis' 37-yard field goal with two seconds left in the half.

course.

Lee could very well vault to the quarterfinals before meeting the Permian-Lamar winner and that would be the week after those two teams battle it out in one of the state's key games. There is a possibility that the winner could leave something on the field of play.

The point is that Lee is in good position to make the most of the 1991 playoffs. Now comes the time for commitment to such a challenge. Hopes are higher for Lee than a week ago after beating San Angelo, 29-22. It may have been Lee's finest hour in 1991. Not a bad way to launch a playoff campaign.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 11, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Be prepared for new professional challenges. If you handle them well, terrific financial gains are likely! The survival of a personal relationship depends on your willingness to compromise in 1992. Try not to be overly protective of your loved ones in February. Your quiet charm will win you many new friends and well-wishers next summer. Even strangers sense your strength and make you the repository of their innermost thoughts. Save some time for romance.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Bibi Andersson, comedian Jonathan Winters, author Kurt Vonnegut Jr., golfer Fuzzy Zoeller.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Pace yourself to keep up with heavier demands at work. Your business instincts are excellent now. Member of opposite sex holds the key to greater security. Be a good listener.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Highlighting your creative and artistic talents will boost profits. The way you handle yourself in a crisis situation wins you new respect. Travel will give you an entirely different outlook.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): New romantic vistas could open up today for those who are unattached. You are unlikely to see eye-to-eye with your partner on a financial matter. Be certain you are on firm ground.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Get together with influential people who can send business your way. A blowup is possible unless you make a special effort to settle your differences with your mate or partner. Be conciliatory.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Social events give you a chance to make valuable contacts. Influential people are unusually supportive. Self-improvement activities will enhance your image. Unlock the doors to romance tonight.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Treat an authority figure as a friend, not a foe. Defining your goals will help you make the right decision. Some uncertainties conveyed in a letter can be corrected in a phone call.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 Oct. 22): A former associate could approach you about forming a new business or partnership. Do not forget a special anniversary or birthday. Certain people may blame you for the late delivery of goods.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Concentrate on projects you can best handle alone. Give an older relative a helping hand. Performing more services for yourself is the best way to cut household expenses.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A love triangle could cause embarrassment. Keep your personal life and professional life strictly separate. Stay out of the limelight at work and concentrate on learning new skills.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A friendship could turn into something really special. Beware of mixing business with pleasure. A romance develops that throws you off-balance. Learn from past mistakes.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Good judgment leads to new financial gains. Reward those who have been loyal and loving. Family relationships improve when you share your dreams. You receive useful information.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A brilliant idea could turn the whole day around. Do not start doubting yourself or others will follow suit. Use the telephone, fax machine and express mail in place of expensive travel.

GOREN BRIDGE

With Omar Sharif and Tannah Hirsch

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A974 ♡6 ◇AQJ87 ♣AKJ
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♠	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—No raise in spades fully expresses the value of your hand—not even a leap to four spades. Tell partner of your powerhouse and ambitions for slam by jump-shifting to three clubs, then supporting spades vigorously at your next turn.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K76 ♡KQ632 ◇QJ6 ♣52
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
1 NT	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—Two hearts now would show a weakish hand with a six-card heart suit, so that is out. So is a jump to three hearts, which also promises at least six hearts and is invitational or forcing, depending on your methods. Correct is an invitational raise to two no trump, describing a balanced hand of 11-12 points.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KJ4 ♡KQ82 ◇AQ6 ♣762
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
2 NT	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—This is simply a matter of arithmetic, and the answer is the same whether your range for the jump to two no trump is 18-19 or 19-20. The combined hands have enough for a small slam, but not enough for a grand, so jump to six no trump.

Q.4—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K943 ♡85 ◇9 ♣J97542
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
3 ♠	Dbl	?

What action do you take?
A.—Partner has shown a weak hand and your holding, too, is devoid of defensive capability, so it looks as if the opponents can make a slam in a red suit. To muddy the waters, we would raise gently to four spades, intending to pass if the opponents are content to go no higher than the five-level, but to sacrifice should they bid any slam, including a grand!

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠Q765 ♡K1093 ◇83 ♣982
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♡	Pass
2 NT	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—Despite the fact you have announced a hand of some 6-9 points, partner is inviting you to game. With a ruffing value in diamonds and four trumps, it is tempting to bid four hearts, but be realistic. This holding is a minimum, so correct to three hearts to advise partner you prefer a suit contract to no trump and are not strong enough to accept the game try.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K962 ♡A107 ◇KQ93 ♣J5
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
2 ♣	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—You have the equivalent of an opening bid facing an opener, and a balanced hand. You want to be in game, and the obvious one is three no trump, so bid it. Don't make the mistake of bidding only two no trump. That's not forcing and partner might pass.

Ferrell finds some benefit in maintaining hefty shape

RADNOR, Pa. — Conchata Ferrell finds many benefits in being overweight. For one thing, it helped land her a part on NBC's "L.A. Law."

Ferrell was added to the cast this season playing entertainment lawyer Susan Bloom. She says that at her audition she told the producers what fat people always say: "I swear I'm on a diet."

The reaction was unexpected.

"They said, 'You don't have to be on a diet. The weight is part of who the character is," Ferrell said.

Ferrell doesn't want to be thin, she said. For one thing, she said, fat insulates a woman from sexual harassment.

"Nobody makes passes at you, nobody makes chicken sounds at you on the street, nobody puts their hands on your rear in a bar. Nobody wants to," she said.

An upcoming episode of "L.A. Law" allows Ferrell to air her feelings on the subject. "I get to say something I truly believe. Fat people are the last minority it's OK to treat badly," she said.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — For sale or lease: Jane Seymour's four-bedroom, six-bath Bel-Air home; furniture included.

The asking price is $2.83 million or, if renting, $16,500 a month.

Miss Seymour and her business manager-husband, David Flynn, bought the home about 16 months ago for $1.2 million and remodeled it. The decorator was the British-born actress herself.

Seymour

The English country-style home features a drawing room, a library sitting room and a family-media room, said the real estate agent, Jana J. Jones.

Miss Seymour and Flynn live in Santa Barbara most of the time.

LOD, Israel (AP) — King Taufa'ahau Tupou IV of Tonga arrived in Israel Sunday to visit Christian holy sites on the Jordan River and pay a visit to Israeli President Chaim Herzog.

"Tonga has very good and friendly relations with Israel but also with the Arabs. We do not make discrimination," the king of an estimated 108,000 subjects told reporters at Ben Gurion International Airport.

Just five years ago, Herzog visited Tonga, a chain of 169 islands in the South Pacific.

With the king on his three-day trip is his wife, Queen Halaezalu Mata'aho.

From Israel, they'll go to Italy to watch Tonga's national soccer team play its Italian counterparts.

LOS ANGELES — Roseanne Arnold says she severed ties with her parents since disclosing that her father molested her.

"It's like they drove off a cliff and got killed," Mrs. Arnold said in a recent interview.

You don't choose your family, said the star of ABC-TV's "Roseanne," and "nobody says you have to love or forgive."

Barr

Mrs. Arnold's parents deny her accusations.

She said reconciliation will occur only if her parents acknowledge they need help — and get it. Until then, her parents "have to just be dead to me, and they are," Mrs. Arnold said.

CINCINNATI — Award-winning filmmaker William Greaves says he tried to inspire five youngsters when he reviewed and discussed their videos recording oral histories in black neighborhoods.

"I hope this will feed their creative minds and they will emerge as videographers and filmmakers on the black experience," Greaves said. "What's so wonderful about this, is we're getting them at ages of 14, 15, 16."

Greaves has three feature films to his credit, including "Bustin' Loose," and more than 200 documentaries and won more than 60 international film awards.

Sunday he completed a stint as artist-in-residence at the Taft Museum in Cincinnati.

The five students met with Greaves Saturday to discuss their work for the Harriet Beecher Stowe Oral History Project. The oral histories they gathered will be go into a 30-minute videotaped play for public access broadcast next year.

PENSACOLA, Fla. — Actor Dennis Quaid made it. So did talk show host Chuck Woolery, and Los Angeles Rams quarterback Jim Everett.

But not Madonna. The singer-actress lacks the right stuff to fly in the backseat with the Navy's Blue Angels on one of its many publicity flights, an official said.

"Her role model is not what we are looking for," said Petty Officer 2nd Class Cathy Konn of Columbus, Ga., a Blue Angels spokeswoman, explaining the flying team's effort to maintain a wholesome image.

Celebrities invited for VIP orientation flights are part of the squadron's public relations and recruiting efforts.

"We want someone who is going to present the military in a positive way," Konn said.

Baker urges Japan to broaden global role

By Donald M. Rothberg
Associated Press writer

TOKYO — Secretary of State James A. Baker III encouraged Japan today to broaden its global role beyond "checkbook diplomacy" to assume greater responsibility for improving human rights and halting the spread of nuclear weapons.

The secretary of state also said it was time that the United States, Soviet Union, China and Japan look for ways to lessen tensions between North and South Korea.

In a speech to the Japan Institute for International Affairs, Baker referred to North Korea's "repeated failures" to allow international inspection of its nuclear facilities.

"The only firm assurance against a nuclear arms race on the Korean peninsula would be credible agreement by both Seoul and Pyongyang to abstain from the production or acquisiton of any weapons grade nuclear material," he said.

Baker noted that South Korea had proposed such an agreement. "We now look to North Korea to respond in kind," he said.

North Korea rejected the Seoul initiative on Sunday.

Baker called the U.S. relationship with Japan "our most important bilateral association in the world."

But he went on to say that the economic relationship between the two countries required "openness on both sides. Otherwise, we will not be able to sustain our political partnership."

Baker called on Japan to make greater efforts to open its markets to products from other countries.

He called Japan "a major beneficiary of the global system" and said, "Japan must be a leader in the promotion and evolution of this system.

"This call for leadership should not just apply to the field of economics, but also in building democracy, respect for human rights, stopping the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction, and in facing transnational challenges in areas such as the environment, narcotics and refugees."

Baker said the United States recognizes that "Japan's 'leaders and its people are now grappling with a difficult adjustment in Japan's world role.

"Your 'checkbook diplomacy' like our 'dollar diplomacy' of an earlier era is clearly too narrow," he said.

Baker arrived in Japan Sunday, prepared to discuss ending a ban on Japan sending its troops overseas.

Prime Minister Kiichi Miyazawa is pressing the Japanese parliament to lift the ban on sending Japanese forces outside its border, in place since the end of World War II, but is mindful of possible international reaction.

He emphasized in a speech three days after taking office that he remains committed "to an exclusively defensive posture and not becoming a military power such as might threaten other countries."

A senior State Department official said during Baker's flight from The Netherlands to Tokyo that Japan's new willingness to consider making its forces available for U.N. peacekeeping activities was attributable to the Persian Gulf War.

"The Gulf crisis produced soul searching in Japan about the issue," said the official, speaking on condition his name not be used.

"The result of the crisis has been a significant shift in Japanese public opinion," said the official. "For the first time, over 45 percent of the population approves involvement in U.N. peacekeeping and less than 37 percent are opposed."

After two days in Tokyo, the secretary of state will go to South Korea to attend the Asia Pacific Economic Cooperation ministerial meeting and conclude his Asian tour with a visit to China.

A highlight of the Seoul meeting is expected to be the admission of China, Taiwan and Hong Kong to APEC membership.

In an article in the current issue of Foreign Affairs magazine Baker praised Japanese willingness to enlarge its defense responsibilities.

But the secretary of state also took note of the continuing "economic tensions in our increasingly interdependent relationship."

During the first eight months of 1991, Japan accounted for 67 percent of the U.S. trade deficit of nearly $40 billion. Although the overall trade deficit for that period was 37 percent below the figures for the same months in 1990, the deficit with Japan actually edged up nearly 1 percent.

"Many aspects of the Japanese economy are still constricted by exclusionary business practices," wrote Baker.

"We have a clear problem with Japan," said House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., last week when he introduced legislation to toughen procedures for responding to countries that have large trade surpluses with the United States at the same time they exclude U.S. products from their markets.

So far, Japan has resisted pressure from the Bush administration to open its market to rice imports which currently is banned in the Pacific nation.

Baker flew to Japan from the Hague where he and Bush attended a meeting of European Community nations.

Iran to supply water to Qatar

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iran agreed Sunday to supply fresh water to the Persian Gulf state of Qatar via a 1,118-mile pipeline, Tehran radio reported.

The agreement was signed at the end of a four-day visit to Tehran by Qatar's crown prince, Sheik Khalifa bin Hamad Al Thani, said the broadcast, which was monitored in Cyprus.

Four other agreements for cooperation in education, labor, trade and air transportation were also signed, it said.

According to the radio report, the pipeline could also provide water for "the rest of the southern and Arab countries of the gulf."

A joint statement released in Tehran and Doha, Qatar's capital, urged more cooperation between Iran and the countries of the Gulf Cooperation Council — Qatar, Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Oman, Bahrain and the United Arab Emirates.

John and Harry Bettis have been in the oil and gas exploration business in Midland for ten years, putting together drilling deals from the ground up. And when a unique opportunity presents itself, they need a bank that can respond quickly. That bank is Texas National. More than once, their banker's same-day answer to a financing request has made the difference in a deal for them. We have a strong working relationship with the Bettis brothers, based on a solid understanding of their business and their banking needs. Come on by and see why we're John and Harry Bettis' banker. And why we're Midland's Banker.

MOONLIGHTING!
The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several distributorships which need to be filled with responsible individuals.
OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:
Is it worthwhile for adults also?
Yes! Our current distributor force is already 90% adult and 10% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:
• ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
• MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a distributor, you do not need daycare!
• COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
• SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.
How much money can I make as a distributor?
Depending on the size of the distributorship from $300 to $700 monthly! Some make even more!
How long does it take?
The actually delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the distributorship. Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!
When do papers have to be delivered by?
6 a.m. Monday - Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.
Do I ever get a day off?
The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, distributors do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!
RESERVE YOUR DISTRIBUTORSHIP NOW!
