TROUBLE! Sometimes that can be a mighty big word, especially when a Linotype in involved. We have been having trouble the past two weeks, and plenty of it. We installed a new piece on our machine and I discovered after worrying with it until Thursday of this week trying to get some type out of it, that one must be a pretty fair mechanic to understand all the workings of a Linotype. I am not a mechanic but I learned a little more about a Linotype this week.

Because of all our trouble The News will be late again this week. We now have our trouble fixed and we hope it will stay fixed. We don't like to be late with the paper but this time we couldn't help it.

TRUETT BARBER LEAVES DISTRICT ATTORNEY'S OFFICE FOR NAVY

Awaiting orders to report for active duty as an Aviation volunteer Specialist, U. S. N. R., in which he has been ocmmissioned Leutenant (jg.), District Attorney Truett Barber this week announced that Benton Templeton had been appointed to administer the duties of the District Attorney's office of the 32nd Judicial district composed of Mitchell, Nolan, Scurry and Borden counties.

Mr. Barber has served as District Attorney since 1939. Before that he was associated with his brother, Dell Barber, and Chas. C. Thompson, in law practice.

In connection with his entrance into the service and the selection of a successor to discharge the duties of his office, Barber made the following statement:

"While there has been a pronounced decrease in felony law violations since Pearl, Harbor [illegible] need of our government for [illegible] bodied men of military age [illegible] steadily increased. Being well within military age and physically fit, I offered my services to the United States Naval Reserve in February, 1943. Mental and physical examinations and interviews followed, resulting in my acceptance on May 28 as an Aviation Volunteer specialist, and the issuance of a commission as Lieutenant (jg), U. S. N. R. I now await orders to active training duty in the Navy's Air Combat Intelligence school.

"For the balance of my elective term of office, B. L. Templeton of Colorado City, will discharge my duties as Special District Attorney, under appointment by me, ratified by the District court. Former County Clerk and County Judge of Mitchell county Mr. Tmpleton has more recently served three years as Trial Examiner, Motor Transportation Division, Railroad Commission of Texas, performing duties of a quasi-judicial nature and about a year as Chief Law Enforcement officer for the Commission, directing the activities of some forty plain clothes investigators and officers, all of which will be of benefit to him in entering upon the duties of a prosecutor.

There remains only the June term of court at Snyder before the summer court recess period, and I will continue through this period. Mr. Templeton will enter upon the active duties of the office with the next regular term at Sweetwater in September."

The daily vacation Bible school is in progress at both Methodist and Baptist churches this week. All children from beginners thru the intermediate ages are invited to attend and enjoy these daily hours of play and worship together.

Reagan Boys Prisoners Of Japs

Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Reagan had a telephone call from Washington Wednesday stating that their son, Stanly Reagan, is a prisoner of the Japanese. He was taken prisoner when Corregidor fell and his parents have been unable to hear from him in any way until the word came this week They rejoiced at the news but were disappointed not to hear from the other son who was also in the Phillipines.

Mr. and Mrs. Reagan received word Thursday that Loyd also is a prisoner of the Japs.

You Never Can Tell How They'll Turn Out. By PERCY CROSBY

Russian Relief Clothes Asked

Have you anything else?

The Russian Relief drive for warm clothing and bedding has been enthusiastically supported by this county. The response from our generous people who are aware of the needs and distress of these homeless, war and famine stricken allies is one more way of doing our bit at home.

When any call comes from your local Red Cross you will always be glad you responded.

Sixty garments and pieces of bedding have been sent to county headquarters.

How To Apply ForNew A Book

Applications for renewal of Basic A books in all states outside of the gasoline shortage area may be made any time after June 22, 1943, by mail at the local ration boards.

The boards will distribute OPA Form R-570 to centrally located filling stations. These forms will be picked up by the applicant and filled in properly. The application will be similar to application form and Part B the new Tire Inspection Record. The applicant must completely fill in all of the spaces enclosed within the heavy borders on both Part A and B.

With the application he must send in his current Tire Inspection record which must show at least one tire inspection has been made and approved. Also the back cover of his present Basic A book. This should have the applicant's signature and address in the spaces provided therefor.

If these rules are not followed, it will be necessary to return the application to the applicant and this will take more time.

The Mitchell County Rationing Board has not as yet received the Forms R-570 but hopes to receive them in time to distribute them before the 22nd and asks that the people of the county cooperate in having their applications made out properly, neatly and with ink or typewriter. Ordinary pencil will not be accepted.

The Board will attempt to secure volunteer help to process the applications and anticipate their peak load of applicatons from July 15, to July 22 and two weeks thereafter for the necessary cleanup process. If anyone will volunteer their services for any time during this period, they are asked to contact Mr. Jerold Riordan, Chairman of the Mileage Panel.

Although the applications may be turned in at any time after the 22nd of June the new books with their tire inspection records will not be mailed out until July 21, as this is the date the present A books will expire.

YOUNG PEOPLE MEET

The Young Peoples S. S. class of the Methodist church held its meeting at the home of their teacher, Mrs. Lily Bennett, on Wetnesday evening, June 9.

Merrill Martin had charge of the business meeting. Eleanor Green, secretary, read the minutes of the last meeting. The class reported they almost had money sufficient to buy their first bond. Rev. E. C. Raney dismissed the meeting with prayer.

After the business meeting the group enjoyed games directed by Gloria Martin.

Refreshments of orange punch and cake were served to Albert Givens, Gloria Martin, Wanda Mae Smith, Mary Love Walker, Eleanor Green, Alene Walker, Forest Meadows, Louise Hallmark, Merrill Martin, Bryan Mahon, Jean Henderson, Bonnie Ruth West, Louella Bruce, and Rev. and Mrs. E. C. Raney and the hostess.

Mr .and Mrs Homer Smith and son Corp. Carlos Smith of Pueblo Colorado, visited with relatives in Stanton Monday.

Mrs. M. L. Rice of Sweetwater visited her sister. Mrs. E. P. Kuck, Monday and Tuesday.

Visitors in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Coffee from Thursday until Sunday were Mrs. Coffee's parents Mr. and Mrs. Roy Edwards of Olton, and Pfc. Roy G. Edwards of Lubbock flying field. They, with Mr. and Mrs Coffee and daughter Paula Jean were visitors in the Marvin Edwards home in Sweetwater Saturday evening and enjoyed a fish fry.

Mrs. Earnest Hall and son of Colorado City and Mrs. Carl Stanley and son of Sweetwater were visitors in the home of their parents, Mr. and Mrs . J. J. Land Tuesday.

Notice Veterans!

Mr. J. R. Mitchell will be at the Fred B. Ison store Monday, June 21, to work with veterans on their claims.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

French Unity Speeds Victory Plans; Mediterranean Under Heavy Attack by Allied Naval and Air Concentrations; Chinese Crush Jap Yangtze Offensive

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

FRENCH UNITY:
Worth Waiting for

Although General Giraud and General DeGaulle at first could not agree any better at close range in Algiers than they had at long range between Africa and London, Allied leaders were confident that factional gulfs would be hurdled and long-hoped-for French unity would be consummated.

This optimistic view was justified when a "French committee of national liberation," headed jointly by Generals De Gaulle and Giraud, was formally established to "pursue the war at the side of the Allies until total victory over the enemy powers."

Comprising a seven-man group which eventually will be expanded to nine, the new liberation committee will direct the French war effort until France is freed and able to elect its own government. In addition to the co-presidents, Giraud and DeGaulle, the committee includes Gen. Alphonse George and Jean Monnet, named by Giraud; Rene Massigli and Andre Philip, appointed by DeGaulle; and Gen. Georges Catroux, designated by both presidents.

That the new committee meant business was immediately apparent by personnel replacements that eliminated French-African officials with former Vichy ties.

COAL:
WLB Sustained

When President Roosevelt, acting as commander-in-chief, tersely ordered the 500,000 striking mine workers back to work after a 30-day truce had been ended by another walkout, he had left the next move squarely up to mine union chief John L. Lewis.

In his brief statement the President did not consider the possibility that his order might be ignored. But measures of a stern and effective nature were open to him and the force of public opinion was marshaled overwhelmingly behind him—in the event of continued mine work stoppage.

The President's order had completely supported the War Labor board which Mr. Lewis and his United Mine Workers had defied, setting forth plainly that "Just as soon as the miners return to work, the disposition of the dispute . . . will forthwith proceed under the jurisdiction of the War Labor board."

ARGENTINA:
Neutrality at Stake?

While close censorship had veiled early reports of the "military movement" in Argentina, observers were confident that it concerned the course of the nation's future international policy—whether the government would pursue its trend of benevolent neutrality toward the Axis, or would follow the rest of South America in breaking with the Axis.

The military reaction gained added significance, coming as it did on the eve of the Conservative party's national convention preceding the Presidential elections. For this convention had been scheduled to proclaim Senate President Robustiano Patron Costas as its candidate. Costas had been endorsed by "neutrality-minded" President Ramon Castillo.

CHINA:
Japs Lose 30,000

As Chinese forces had continued to press back the Jap invaders in the middle Yangtze valley, a report from Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's headquarters disclosed that the drive in Central China toward Chungking had cost the enemy more than 30,000 casualties in a two-week period.

The Tokyo radio admitted the reverses in a report announcing that the Jap invasion forces had retired to previously prepared positions. Principal theater of Chinese gains was the Yangtze river in southern Hupeh province and northern Hunan. Here General Chiang's forces wiped out encircled enemy units and seized huge stocks of supplies and equipment, a communique said. As a first step in the recapture of strategic Ichang, the Chinese had regained possession of all points around Changyang, strongly held "doorway" to Ichang.

MEDITERRANEAN:
Mussolini at Bay

Mussolini's defenses at sea hao been no more impressive than in the air when Allied forces struck at the island approaches to the "soft underbelly" of Italy.

Target of the first assaults was the island of Pantelleria, closest of Italy's Mediterranean outposts to Africa. Here Allied warships made heavy bombardments that were unopposed. The Italian fleet that had been reported on the alert had made no effort to come out and fight for Pantelleria which already had been shaken by Allied bombers. In none of the attacks did the Allied fleet units suffer casualties. The only resistance offered was from the ineffective Italian shore batteries.

Only 45 miles from the tip of Tunisia's Cap Bon peninsula, Pantelleria was an easily reached target for Allied air forces. As wave after wave of bombers swept over the island blowing up port facilities, other Allied planes kept up a damaging series of forays against Sicily and Sardinia.

The extent to which the Mediterranean was becoming an Allied lake was indicated by a report announcing that the Allied destroyers had sunk two merchant vessels and an escorting torpedo boat and driven a burning Italian destroyer ashore.

TRADE PACTS:
Two Years More

Final approval by the senate of President Roosevelt's reciprocal trade agreements program came after administration supporters, aided by some Republicans, defeated five amendments that would have restricted the President's authority. The house had previously voted favorably.

The President had originally asked for a three-year extension. But because this would throw the policy into the next presidential administration for more than a year, both house and senate measures cut it to two years. The senate's action, however, meant that members of the United Nations could be assured that this government's present trade policy would be continued until June 12, 1945, or nearly five months after the next presidential inauguration.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

DREW PEARSON

Washington, D. C.

BRITISH-INDIA PROBLEM

It will probably be denied, but th inside fact is that U. S. Ambassado. Bill Phillips came back from India with a blunt, in spots bitter, report against the British.

He felt that the United States should do something about the festering Indian political situation, that the Indian army and people could not be a force in the war until the question was cleaned up. Also he was straight-from-the-shoulder in his criticism of Field Marshal Wavell whom he feels is not suited for the job and should be removed.

Phillips not only gave this report to the President but he also had a conference with Winston Churchill.

Ambassador Phillips' report is most significant, because he has been pro-British, served as minister to Canada, has been a consistent believer that our policy must go hand-in-hand with the British. Phillips is mild, not addicted to crusading, but a thorough, conscientious diplomat, reporting what he believes to be the facts.

Among other things, Phillips reported that mediation between different Indian factions and the British government was possible now; also desirable. He feels that if some such move is not undertaken now, he should not go back to India, nor should any other U. S. ambassador, since the presence of an American envoy would be taken as the stamp of U. S. approval for British policy.

What the President said to Churchill on the Indian problem is his secret. But it is known that Roosevelt has hoped for a year that the British would do something about India. However, he also feels very strongly that the United States should not interfere in Britain's colonial problems.

Meanwhile, the British, with an army large enough to handle any problem inside India, seem content merely to sit on the lid—despite American pleas that the Burma road must be reopened and despite the fact that Indian troops will not fight the Japs wholeheartedly unless they have a small investment in the Four Freedoms for which they are supposed to fight.

WOMAN WATCHES ARMY COOKS

Miss Mary I. Barber, Washington's first dollar-a-year woman, has now begun to bring long-needed thrift to army mess kitchens. If Miss Barber has her way, the army's 250,000 cooks will be persuaded to make soup out of the left-overs and cut down the quota for the garbage pails.

In fact, her save-left-overs idea has already gone so far that certain pig farmers near army camps are complaining that they don't get enough garbage these days.

Miss Barber was borrowed by the quartermaster corps from the Kellogg company at Battle Creek to teach tough mess sergeants, among other things, that a camp menu does not have to be arranged one week in advance, and stuck to religiously. If, for instance, a camp mess has several hundred chickens left over from Sunday dinner, they can be used on Monday, not thrown into the garbage pail.

Unfortunately, a lot of mess sergeants had been doing that, partly because the menu for Monday was already arranged. Also it is against the law for the army to sell food, nor can it be given away. It must be thrown away. This has been done in the past via garbage trucks to the highest bidding hog dealers.

Now, however, Miss Barber is helping to arrange master menus, which though they specify soup, do not name the variety. This gives the cook an option to make soup out of whatever his left-overs permit.

This all sounds simple to the average housewife, but believe it or not, it has not always been done by the army.

Another trick is to save all dripping fats from bacon or sausage, and use them in a cream sauce for cauliflower, or other vegetables.

WHITE HOUSE BLACK MARKET

The White House is having its troubles with the Black Market. The White House architect called up the Georgetown Electric company recently to buy No. 12 copper wire for rewiring a part of the Executive Mansion. But there was no copper wire to be had.

"Where can we get it?" the architect asked.

"Baltimore, on the Black Market—only it will cost you 20 cents a foot instead of seven cents."

"Well, we can't have anything to do with the Black Market," was the White House reply, and the architect went shopping elsewhere."

Coast Guard Cutter Blasts an Undersea Killer

On the Hard-Won Guadalcanal Battlefront

At the site of some of the bitterest fighting of the war, a senior medical officer of the United States naval construction battalion is shown, at left, giving a blood transfusion to a Seabee in a foxhole on Guadalcanal island in the Solomons. At right, several husky natives line up to receive their pay as stevedores. The Seabees—men of the naval construction battalion—are making a base of this island which was wrested from the Japanese after a long battle in which both sides suffered heavy losses in planes, ships, and men.

Macabre Epitaphs Teach Fliers Care

Two photographers recline in the "cemetery" at the army air forces school of applied tactics at Orlando, Fla. Serving as warnings to students about to engage in real warfare the epitaphs on the crosses read as follows: "He showed a light at night." "His gas mask leaked." "He lit a match on board a convoy ship." This school gives the final polish to army fliers by putting them under actual combat conditions.

Late Afternoon:

A book of verse that said what we could not . . .
A sheaf of letters inked in young romance . . .
The wistful charm a two buck brownie shot . . .
A wilted flower from some forgotten dance.
These are the old, familiar souvenirs
That lonely men have used to carry on,
Mementoes of the gay and fragrant years
Before the shadows lengthened on the lawn.
Thus I set out to make the sloping hill
That rises high above the teeming town,
Where dreams are dead and all the world goes still
As pilgrims watch the evening sun go down . . .
Not much, I know, to see a journey through
But these are all I have and they must do.

Things you prob'ly didden know til now: That some years before the Declaration of Independence was signed a fellow named Appollos de Revoire changed his name to Paul Revere so that his neighbors and friends would better savvy it. It has been estimated that more than half the Smiths in the U. S. originally were Schmidts or Smeds. Many Johnsons were once Jansens. President Polk traced his name back to Pollock, while Herbert Hoover traced his to Huber.

General Pershing is the descendant of one Pershin, who changed his name from Pfoersching. General Custer was the great-grandson of a man named Koester, and Admiral Dewey's ancestors were named Duce. Charlie Lindbergh's grandfather was born Mannson; and if you want to make something out of name-changing try changing the fact that America came from the name Amerigo.

Collier's runs what it believes is a scoop on the until recently hush-hush subject of Radar.

One columnist got into lots of hot water for simply mentioning the word.

Mechanix Illustrated ran a detailed technical story (complete with drawings and diagrams) of how this secret war weapon works—in its January, 1942, number. The title of the article was "Now Power Is Broadcast," and Thomas J. Naughton auth'd.

Shortly after, the Satevepost ran a piece on Radar describing it thoroughly. But all the while there was strict censorship in the United States. Censorship, despite the fact that when the Graf Spee was scuttled off the coast of S. America there was Radar equipment on the mast. And it was Radar that caused the great casualties at Dieppe. The enemy had it all the time. But it was against the law over here to mention it.

To make faces redder—as early as 1932 the principles of Radar were written up at length in German scientific magazines.

Congressmen have been urging Americans to make sacrifices. And they have scolded John L. Lewis because he hasn't made any. But the news is that because the Senate dining room didn't have bean soup on the bill of fare (because of the food shortage) 25 Senators left their tables in a huff.

Can you imagine the cause celebre the Senate would make out of that if Mrs. Roosevelt or Mrs. Harry Hopkins did that?

The N. Y. Sun editorial page offered this fond farewell for Admiral Yamamoto who is said to have led the sneak attack on Pearl Harbor: ". . . A hard, tough graduate of a hard, tough school. Yamamoto was a fighting man, every inch of him. He knew his job thoroughly and did it well."

The inventor of one of our most highly rated airplane engines was lunching with a Congressman in Washington. The legislator asked him if he didn't consider it unfair that whenever we enjoyed a big victory in the air, the credit always went to the fliers who used his engines, instead of to him.

"Not at all," replied the inventor, "who ever heard the name of Paul Revere's horse?"

The decision of the Kremlin to disenfranchise the overseas Commy groups is just a bit embarrassing to the American comrades.

Kinda takes official recognition of them as nuisances.

Eddie Doherty, one of the better newspaper men, who is now writing the story of the Sullivan Boys (who died in battle), has his favorite news story lead. It was written, he says, by Jack Lawson for the old Chi. Record-Herald.

Mark Twain had passed on, and the obit notice was assigned to Lawson, who led off with: "Tom Sawyer and Huckleberry Finn are Orphans."

If the Nazi air force has a song it probably is: "Don't get around much any more."

Land Bridge Across Pacific

By Corey Ford

(WNU Feature—Through special arrangement with Collier's Weekly)

Toward the middle of August last year, our American pilots in the Aleutians began bringing back reports of sudden and furious Japanese activity on Kiska island. Road construction had been started there, two seaplane hangars and ramps were built, huts and camp buildings were hastily thrown up, sandbagged and revetted, a submarine base was constructed west of Salmon Lagoon.

Telegraph poles, brought all the way from Japan, lined the company streets. New gun emplacements were dug on North and South Heads, underground passages were channeled beneath the rocks, and anti-aircraft grew steadily more intense.

With Oriental thoroughness they even gave Kiska Island a new name —Narukima, which means "Ringing of the Gods." What that means is anybody's guess.

U. S. Army Engineers Busy.

But while the Japs were developing their base, our army engineers were not idle. On an island in the Andreanof group, only a fighter plane hop from Kiska, intelligence scouts had secretly surveyed a site for a new landing field. Now, as August drew to a close, one of the most remarkable armadas of the war set sail from the Alaska mainland under the protecting cover of a navy convoy and the ever vigilant PBYs. There were lumbering transports, a few old freighters, a fishing scow or two, several converted barges, a side-paddle river boat, even a little tug hauling a four-masted schooner loaded to the gunwales with gasoline. Every hold was jammed with guns, crates, construction gear. Every inch of deck space was jammed with men.

U. S. Flotilla Heads West.

Curtained by dense fog—and for once everyone gave devout thanks for the foul weather—the strange flotilla headed westward. No Jap patrol plane marred the murky [illegible] no prowling submarine spotted them from the sea, as the convoy crept at snail's pace past the dangerous reefs and shoals that mark the shores of the Andreanofs, breasted the mountainous tides and anchored safely at last in the shelter of the island.

The rattle of chains in the hawsepipes had hardly died away before our troops under full field equipment had clambered down the rope nets into the landing barges. Driving rain and icy seas soaked them to the skin, but at least the storm insured the landing operations against air attack. Artillery protection was quickly established. Jeeps, command cars, caterpillar tractors, trucks splashed toward the beach.

New Base Takes Shape.

The members of the ground crews pitched in and carried on their backs the equipment for the base that was fast taking shape under the noisy activity of bulldozers and caterpillars. For ten days, they worked in sopping clothes, ate out of tin cans and snatched occasional hours of sleep in the mud and rain.

The expedition landed on Sunday, August 30. On Friday, September 11, the vanguard of a squadron of fighter planes dropped out of the gray skies onto a finished runway.

At last with a base only a couple of hundred miles from the enemy, we were able to cut down the worst of our weather losses and to put a striking force of fighters and medium bombers over Kiska.

Our initial visit was in the nature of a celebration. The mediums went in over Kiska at 50 feet—believed to be the first deck-level mission ever conducted by American bombers—and destroyed three large transports. Fighter planes swarmed over the target like small boys raiding an apple orchard, shot up everything on the water, and shot down everything in the air.

Week after week, month after month, the aerial slugging match went on. All fall and winter and spring, amid the foulest flying conditions anywhere in the world, the navy patrol planes would scout the lonely seas. Now and then, when the skies opened up, army bombers and fighters would take off to drop another lethal load.

They knew the staggering toll the weather was taking in ships and men; they knew the hopelessness of dislodging the enemy by intermittent bombing raids alone. But they knew that slowly, ever so slowly, we were inching westward closer and closer to the Kiska guns, and our forces were readying themselves during the spring for that all-out offensive which would drive the invader forever from our islands.

"There are many roads which lead right to Tokyo," President Roosevelt said recently, "and we shall neglect none of them."

DEEP WATERS

THE STORY SO FAR: Robin Dale, a young artist, goes to Moose Bay to see her fiance, Will McPhail. Just after her arrival, Will is accidentally killed. Learning that Will's brother, Angus, blames her for his death, Robin goes to his fishing cruiser to wait for him. She falls asleep and awakes to find the boat at sea, bound for Labrador. Another cruiser comes abreast of them just long enough for them to recognize a man named Jenkins, and later they see a government patrol trail Jenkins. Shortly after they leave the next port the engines suddenly stop. They discover that Jenkins has taken over the boat. Jenkins has just said, "I forgot a while ago."

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER XI

McPhail looked puzzled. "Forgot what, Jenkins?"

"You'd figure it out, give you time; and when you figured it out, you wouldn't care what you'd promised me. You'd be up for trouble, promise or no promise. Nothing doing on promises, McPhail."

Angus said in a low tone: "If I understand you, you feel that I have some personal cause for—disliking you."

"Skip it," the other man said briefly. He said: "See here! Got a hammer aboard, some nails?"

"There's a hammer in the tool box in the engine room, I think. Some nails in a tobacco tin in the galley."

Jenkins spoke to Robin. "Go get 'em," he directed.

Robin obeyed him. The nails were in a flat tobacco can on the shelf above the little stove. The hammer was black with grease and oil, staining her hands. It was comfortingly heavy. She tried it, hefting it in her hand; and she saw Jenkins watching her from where he sat, a few feet away. He grinned faintly.

"All right," he assented. "No hard feelings. I would in your place. Come back and sit down where you were." When she was seated, he spoke to McPhail again. "You can like this or not, but here's what you'll do." He looked at Robin and chuckled and said to McPhail: "I'm giving you a break, at that. You and Miss Dale both go into the stateroom. I'll fix the door so you can't get out easy. Then I'll know where you are."

Robin said simply: "I'd like that, please, Mr. McPhail." Angus met her eyes; and she saw in his the embarrassed confusion of a boy. She spoke to Mr. Jenkins. "I'm very sleepy, already, in spite of all the excitement. Maybe it's the sea air. May I go to bed first? I can take the upper berth, Mr. McPhail. You can sleep in the lower one."

"That's sensible," Mr. Jenkins agreed. "Go ahead."

She considered how to prepare for the night. It would be a long time till tomorrow, and—anything might happen. She had in her packsack heavy whipcord riding breeches, ankle length, which she sometimes wore for tramping through meadows or along the shore to find a vantage point from which to make her sketches; and she changed into them, and a flannel shirt and a sweater. The air pouring through the port was sweet and fine; but it was astonishingly cold. The weather, she decided, must be changing. She drew on wool stockings, and climbed into the upper berth, and reached the latch from where she lay and thrust the door open.

"I'm abed," she said. She could see Mr. Jenkins across the cabin; saw him look with surprise at her sweater, and she explained: "I'm sleeping in my clothes. I'm cold."

Angus came into the stateroom. His cheek was congested with rage. He closed the door behind him and backed away from it, watching it, standing beside the narrow bunk. Robin felt him like an animal crouched to spring. She gripped his arm.

"No," she whispered.

Another nail, and then another, pinned the door to the frame. A dozen of them were driven home. Then there was a curious dragging sound in the cabin. She whispered, "What's that?" She was lying propped on one elbow on the upper bunk.

"He's nailing the salmon trap over the door, the way poachers spread a net over a rabbit's burrow after they've put the ferret in." His voice was low, his lips near her ear; Mr. Jenkins was busy just outside the door. Angus said through tight teeth: "I'll get my hands on him, somehow. I know now what he meant."

"Meant by what?"

"By saying I'd figure it out. Will was drunk on alcohol Jenkins had brought into Moose Bay. He means I'll blame him for Will's death."

"Oh!" Robin had forgotten Will. It was strange to think how completely he was gone out of her heart and mind. Her cheek burned, and she lay down, hoping the dim light from the single bulb in the stateroom was not enough to let Angus see.

Jenkins spoke to them through the door. "Now be sensible, McPhail. I've fixed it so you can't get out quick enough, or quiet enough, to do yourself any good." They heard his chuckle. "You ought to like the spot you're in. Most men would change places with you in a minute. Relax, McPhail. Relax and enjoy it."

Angus stared at the panels of the door with deep burning eyes. They heard Mr. Jenkins go through the engine room and forward; heard his feet almost above their heads as he stepped up into the pilothouse to speak to Romeo there. A few drops of rain came through the open port. Robin asked:

"Where are we going? Where is he taking us?"

"He'd probably head straight offshore, south or southeast, to cross to Newfoundland. I don't think he's a navigator. We've no instruments aboard except lead and compass, anyway." Angus was silent, thinking.

Robin lay looking up at him, standing here close beside her. She watched the line of his jaw tighten, watched the muscle at the angle of his jawbone knot, and his forehead furrow. She had never noticed how his eyebrows bristled. They were, she realized, a little gray. Perhaps they were what made him seem gray; made her think of him as gray. His shoulder was lean and powerful, his neck straight and strong. She wanted to reach up and touch the curve of his head behind his ear.

"He wouldn't go offshore," he said, half to himself and half to her. "He must be planning to meet the schooner in some sheltered bay along the Newfoundland coast;

"I'll get my hands on him, somehow."

some place where there's no town, no port authorities. Plenty of good places, from Bay St. George clear up to the Straits. Probably he'll just run till he sights land and locates himself, and then work up or down the coast to the place he's looking for. It will take us anywhere from eight to fifteen hours to cross, depending on his compass course."

She did not speak. Compasses were nothing to her now. Angus was the center of her world, the focus of all her thoughts. He would always be.

"Our compass isn't too good, either," he murmured, his lips near her ear. "And we've no log. Unless he's good at dead reckoning, with this wind, and the tide, no telling where he'll hit Newfoundland."

She whispered: "Will the plane be hunting us?"

He shook his head. "Not unless they've stopped his boat and found out he's not aboard. That's their job, till it's done; to follow his boat, see where it goes."

Something like fine shot spilled through the port upon her blankets; something that stung coldly on her hand. She said: "Oh, sleet!"

He closed the port. "We'll be cold enough before morning. Think you can sleep?"

"I'm sure I can."

"We're all right, I'm sure. This will straighten out. He only wants to get away."

"I know." She smiled up at him, said softly: "I'm all right. Don't worry about me. I can reach the switch. I'll turn out the light after you're in bed. Good night, Angus."

He nodded in a brusque embarrassment. "Good night, Miss Dale." When he was in the bunk below her, she snapped off the light; but she did not sleep for a while. She thought, smiling a little, of what old Jeff Plaisted used to say about apple trees, and about people. She wondered whether it was because they were in danger together that she loved Angus now. He was there, three feet below her. Probably he too was awake, so near. She wondered if he was as conscious of her nearness as she was of his. Sleet lashed the closed port, spattered along the roof of the stateroom close above her head. The cruiser rolled lazily, plowing through the rising seas.

The next day began with a minor mishap and continued through exasperating and interminable hours of tightening tension. Robin woke without knowing why, and felt someone near her in the darkness; and the cruiser lurched sickeningly, rolling in the trough of great seas. Then she realized that the engine had stopped; and Angus, hearing her low exclamation, snapped on the light. She blinked against the sudden glare of it. Then Jenkins spoke, outside their door.

"McPhail, are you awake?"

"Yes."

"Something's gone wrong with the engine. Romeo's fixing it. Take it easy."

Angus looked quickly at Robin. "Pat can fix it," he told Jenkins. "Romeo doesn't know anything about engines." Jenkins did not answer; and Angus leaned close to whisper in her ear: "He'll have to let Pat do it. Romeo's thumb-handed. Pat can make an engine sing; but he can cripple one as easily."

"Would that do any good?"

"Delay. Delay us till someone finds us. They won't follow Jenkins' boat clear up to the Straits. They'll stop it, sooner or later; and as soon as they find out he's not aboard her, they'll guess what happened."

"The plane couldn't find us in the rain."

This was true. He did not deny it. They could hear the sounds of Romeo's activity in the engine room, and a grumbling of voices; and then Mr. Jenkins spoke to them again.

"You're right, McPhail," he said. "Romeo doesn't know which end of a screw driver is which. I'm going to make the Irishman do the job. He might start trouble, and you don't want that. You call to him. He'll hear you."

McPhail shouted, "Pat!" From the forecastle, divided from their stateroom by the longitudinal bulkhead, Pat answered in a great voice:

"Aye, sorr!"

"Do whatever they tell you, Pat. We're all right as long as we don't make trouble."

"Aye, sorr!" Pat assented, almost cheerfully. "I'll have us under way in no time at all." He added: "There's dirt in the gas, I'm thinking, by the way it sounded."

They heard him ask Mr. Jenkins: "Did ye strain the gas when ye filled the tanks a while back?" Robin remembered the tins of spare gasoline in the after cockpit. Mr. Jenkins murmured something; and Pat said cheerfully: "That's it, then. A dirty lot of gas it was. I'll be having to take the carbureter apart, like as not."

Mr. Jenkins must have been releasing him while he talked; for now the two in the stateroom heard Pat come into the engine room; heard him say, "Ye're a nervous man, Mr. Jenkins." There was a chuckle in his tones. "I never could do a good turn on an engine without a piece of eating tobacco in my cheek. There's a twist in my hip pocket and I want mightily to reach for it. Think ye your nerves would stand the strain of seeing me reach for my hip?"

Mr. Jenkins said: "Go ahead, man. Maybe it will stop your talk."

In the stateroom Angus looked at Robin, and she saw a deep excitement in his eyes, and wished to ask some questions; but he made a sign of silence, shook his head.

Dawn grayed the narrow port before at last the motor caught and ran again. When they were under way, Pat at McPhail's order once more submitted to his bonds. Then McPhail called:

"Now, Jenkins, let us out of here."

"You'll do all right where you are," Jenkins decided.

"Man, I don't want any trouble; but I'm coming out. Will you pull the nails—or shall I break the door?"

"Have I got to put a bullet through your head?"

"You'd be a fool to." Robin, tense and still, lay watching Angus, watching the play of his features as he spoke, amused to see that his expression was at once good-natured, persuasive and determined. She thought he was like a person arguing over a telephone, whose facial play matches his tones even though the listener cannot see his countenance; yet also he was white with the strain of keeping his voice steady. "I'll play along with you, Jenkins; but I'll not stay penned in here."

After a long moment Mr. Jenkins said doubtfully: "Okay. I'll get a pair of pliers or something, pull those nails." They heard him presently begin.

Robin cooked breakfast that morning for them all. When she fed Pat, the Irishman winked at her so elaborately that she guessed he sought to convey some message; but she had no clue to what it was till an hour later the motor failed again. It was the first of half a dozen such occasions. That day they spent more time drifting helplessly in the trough of the waves than under way. Each time the engine stopped, Angus and Robin were ordered into the stateroom, while Mr. Jenkins from the cabin, Romeo from the forecastle, kept their weapons on Pat as he labored with the carbureter. Each time, the engine ran sweetly enough for a while, then coughed and died.

Improved Uniform International SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

JOHN DESCRIBES TRUE CHRISTIANS

LESSON TEXT—I John 2:1-6; 3-13-18; 4:15-17.

GOLDEN TEXT—But if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin.—I John 1:7.

Religion and life go together. To hold the tenets of Christian truth in one's head and not to have them move the heart is to deny the very faith one professes. Yet this is the danger which faces the believer—a temptation before which many have fallen. The result is that much of "what passes for Christianity in these days is very thin stuff, very remote from the original" (Shoemaker).

John was not content with such a weak imitation, and in his writings he set up the true standard of a forgiven and transformed life, living itself out in love and sacrificial service. If we have forgotten what God meant us to be in Christ, or are members of a church which has strayed from the true and living way, this lesson affords an opportunity for penitence and works meet thereunto.

The true Christian life must have

I. Sin Forgiven and Life Transformed (I John 2:1-6).

Not only at the beginning of the Christian life is sin dealt with and put away, but day by day—yes, moment by moment—we have the cleansing power of the blood of our Divine Advocate.

This is of the utmost importance, for God can only use clean channels for the outgoing of His power and grace to the world. We know our own weakness and the defiling presence of the world. But unlike the unregenerate man, we do not submit and go down; we turn to Christ for forgiveness and cleansing.

The transformation of life which thus comes to the believer is shown in obedience to the commandments of God. In the early church there were those who said that if they only believed in Christ as Saviour it made no difference how they lived—and they have their followers in our day.

Be sure of this, the essential thing in Christian profession is not how you talk about Christ, but how you walk in obedience to His commandments.

Real Christianity will cause us to be

II. Hated by the World and Loved by the Brethren (I John 3:13-18).

The world, that is, unregenerate mankind, hates a genuine Christian no matter how kind and loving he may be. Why? "Because the Christian believer gives the non-believer an uncomfortable sense of inferiority. The presence of high Christian ideals in marked contrast to his own selfish policies arouses his anger and resentment" (Douglass).

The presence of a clean, godly life in a community makes every sinner look that much blacker, and the world, the flesh, and the devil will do everything possible to break down and destroy such a testimony.

We, as Christians, should not be surprised that the world hates us. In fact, we should be troubled if it does not hate us, for if our Christianity really means anything, it is distasteful to a God-hating world. Beware if sinners find nothing in your life which distresses them and convicts them of sin.

In the midst of enmity the Christian is not afraid, for he is

III. Indwelt by God and Unafraid in the World (I John 4:15-17).

A sincere confession of Christ as Saviour brings a man into that close relationship to God which is expressed in the words, "God abideth in him, and he in God" (v. 15).

The full depth of meaning of these words is obviously beyond our limited understanding, but we accept the fact by faith and rejoice in it. We recognize that it means that we are brought by our faith in Christ, into the very center of God's love. Christ, the well-beloved Son, who stands in that blessed place, draws us into the circle and there we stand in Him.

God's love showed itself in the giving of His Son as the Redeemer of the world. It was and is unselfish and sacrificial devotion to the eternal welfare of those who merited only judgment. We do not love until we reflect that quality in our lives.

Such love casts out fear. Fellowship is impossible in an atmosphere of fear, but love rules it out. In Christ we realize that God first loved us, and then our hearts go out in warm devotion to him.

Not only does the Christian no longer fear the day of judgment, but he is unafraid in the present evil world. This is not because of his own strength or ability, but because through faith in Christ he is "in God," and "as He is, so are we in this world" (v. 17). No more perfect or blessed ground of assurance could possibly be provided. Let us recognize our position in Him, and be strong and unafraid.

Long Trousers Adopted During French Revolution

Wartime services of many kinds undertaken by women account for the fact that there are more wearing trousers today than ever before.

It was during a period of great national stress that men adopted the fashion of wearing long trousers.

Before the days of the French Revolution well-dressed men favored knee breeches, while the poorer people wore blue linen pantaloons. When the French monarchy fell, anyone whose dress suggested that he might be an aristocrat went in danger of his life. Consequently, men of all classes began to wear long trousers.

In 1812 Cambridge university decreed that students attending hall or chapel in long trousers should be considered absent.

Letter To Service Men

Dear Soldiers:

Another week and time for our letter to you. And we must get in to this letter at the very beginning and not make this one too long.

Service boys visiting parents and home folks here this week are Pvt. Robert Bruce who surprised his parents when he arrived last Friday morning. Corp. Carlos Smith of Pueblo, Colorado, arrived Friday and visited with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Homer Smith. Jack Allbright was here from Camp Wolters over the week end, and we have just heard that Billie Joe Hale S2C of the U. S. Coast Guard of Buford, S. C., arrived Tuesday night for a visit here with his parents and wife who came here from her home in Maryneal to be with him.

Expected home any day now is Marine Vern Preston who has been suffering from Malaria. Word received from him last week by his parents was that he would be home on a 30 day furlough. Of course the rejoiced parents began to meet buses and trains until another letter arrived telling them it would be a few days before his arrival. And we know that the town would turn out to welcome Vern home if we knew just when he will be here. Vern has seen plenty of service in the war zone we understand, and we are sure that he has had many experiences to relate if he can be persuaded to talk.

We heard this week that Mrs. Forbus had received word that her son, J. C. Jr., who was wounded on April 22 in North Africa is due home about the last of July. We welcome these our first home boys from the fighting front. They could be continually feted and praised and then not enough we feel.

Another of our boys, Royal James, who has been in Naval Reserve, received his call last week to report at T. C. U. on July 1st for Navy College work. The James family will now have to exchange their two-star service flag for one with three stars. W. F. (Chubby) who is a 2nd Lt. is now statjoned at Del Rio, going there from Tarrant Field. Corp. Robert James is stationed in Lubbock as link operator.

Others from here who have recently left for service are Loyd Ray Finch who left about three or four weeks ago and the anxious parents were waiting to hear where he was sent from Camp Wolters, as Loyd had written they were sending most of them to Wisconsin or Maryland, but when the news came Loyd was at Camp Barkeley in Abilene. Of course that was a break right at the start for Loyd and the parents too.

Hubert Thomas, who is in the Navy and stationed in San Diego, California, wrote this week to Inez that he was one of 10 out of 150 that had made the Rifle team Their company then had competed with nine other companies and came out 2nd. All this competing took time of course and the bunch got out of a twelve mile hike because of it. It seems there's something about the hikes they just dont like.

Others leaving about the time Hubert left were Jack Coffee, M. D. Cheek, and Russell Coffee, who are in the Sea-Bees and have been stationed in Camp Peary, Va. A letter from Jack to Russell's parents says that Russell has been assigned as right guide on Squad and Platoon and will be in lead of his Battalion and, that he would be leaving Camp Peary soon to go to Rhode Island. M. D. and Jack were still at Camp Peary. M. D. tells his mother he is fit as a fiddle. He is in school.

Word from North Africa where so many of our boys are now, tells us that two of them at least have finally been fortunate enough to be together. Charles Reeder wrote home that he had seen James Jarratt. Although Charles and Ray Preston were so fortunate to be together while in training in the U. S. they have never met since going to Africa. Ray said every day five of the boys got to go to town and they always enjoyed the entertainment that is made possible by the Red Cross. We should be more ready to help in the Red Cross work and donations when we hear that our boys are getting the benefits from our donations over there. James said he had met some of his friends who were in training with him in California and they were in the same Company with Johnny Walker, but that he and Johnny had not met yet. We are not quite sure that we know just what dog tents are like, but James said that's where they have been sleeping and he bought two woven mats from the Arabs for 50 francs each which he put in his tent to sleep on. Another thing of interest to us that James told was the Arabs method of farming. They live almost entirely on wine and bread, and in their fields they plant two rows of grapes and the third row of wheat. They farm with two mules or two oxen, driven one in front of the other instead of side by side as we see them. James said they all got so hungry for meat they thought they would buy a yearling and butcher it but changed their mind when they found it would cost them about $100.

Johnny tells his sister about some things he saw over there when he was on a few days leave With an Arab as guide they visited the ruins of a Roman city on the edge of the great Sahara desert. He, with six other American boys, attended the wedding of a French officer and a beautiful blond French woman. Of course he said they couldn't understand the language but it was interesting and something to remember. Johnny sent Alene a 5 franc piece which he says is worth 10 cents in our money. Now we can check and see the cost of James' mats he bought. Not bad. Although 50 francs sounded exhorbitant, didn't it?

Another boy who made the mother very happy last week was William Bowlin when he called her from Camp Butner, N. C., where he is stationed in the Field Artillery. Although they couldn't hear very clearly, William said, Mom its good just to hear your voice.

Did you hear this one about the Rookie who asked "Did you know that my Sergeant talks to himself? Second Rookie, "So does mine, but he doesn't know it. He thinks someone is listening."

It has been said that someone was worried at the beginning of this war whether our soldier boys might be "too soft" for the hardships of war. We are sure no one would worry about that now after hearing of the continued heroic sacrifices and hardships you are so bravely going through but sometimes it looks as though you soldiers could worry about that of the folks back home. Although we believe they are less and less who complain of making a sacrifice, when in reality we do not know what the word means so far as really sacrificing is concerned.

Let us at home and all you boys remember that prayer be placed at the top of the list of weapons to wn this war.

We close this by quoting Abraham Lincoln when he said: "I am not bound to win, but I am bound to be true. I am not bound to succeed, but I am bound to live up to what light I have. I must stand with anybody that stands right, stand with him while he is right and part with him when he goes wrong."

Don't fail to write a line home to the anxious parents who watch and wonder what the news will be this day..

A Mom.

Pvt. Frank Gibson arrived Tuesday from South Carolina, for a few days visit here with his parents.

Will Rogers' Humorous Story

By WILL ROGERS

THEY say the dude ranch business is getting to be a right profitable business, and lots of business men are going into it. They take good care of the folks that go out to these ranches, and if a fellow don't know about ranch life, they ease it to him right gently.

But a few years ago, before they got so much business efficiency into it, there used to be rough guys working on some of these ranches that used to like to see a city guy get throwed off a horse. Course, that wasn't good for business, and it ain't done any more.

There was one city guy with a lot of dough went out to a dude ranch, and one of the cowboys brought around a horse for him. The guy was all dressed up in swell riding togs, and he had a swell pair of spurs on, but he said to the cowboy, just when it was time for him to get into the saddle, "Say, I feel kinda funny. Do you know, bo, I've never been on a horse before?"

"Oh, that's all right, mister," says the cowpuncher. "You ain't got nothing on this here pony. He feels kinda funny too. He ain't never been rode before. So the two of you kin learn together."

OUR BOYS IN SERVICE

North Africa,
May 25, 1943

Dearest Mama, Dad, and Ben,

The African campaign is about over now, so we are allowed a few more privileges with our writing. I can tell you that I have been in the vicinity of Casablanca, Orran, Constantine, Algiers, and a number of the smaller towns. If you will get your map of North Africa and find these places on it you can see where I have been. We have been practically all the way across North Africa. I've seen some of the most beautiful country I ever saw in my life. These valleys and low lands are all very ferile and the natives can raise almost anything. The Arabs are great farmers. They don't have the best tools and equipment to work with, but they have the few pieces of farming equipemnt that they have made themselves. Most of the work is done by hand.

Yesterday the Chaplain and I went to some Roman ruins which have been excavated about thirty miles from where we are located and saw some very interesting sights. There is not much way of telling how old the place is, but I'm sure it dates back before Christ's time. We saw the public bath houses and a very large swimming pool which still had water in it. Off to one side there was a large amphitheater located on the side of the mountain. The seating capacity is about five thousand people I imagine. The French government has control of it and they are still excavating. It was evidently practically buried at one time. Everything is built of stone and it is really a sight to see how those Roman people carved those stones out to fit just perfectly. There are large gates and archways built of nothing but huge stones.

There is a French family close by there who looks after the place. This French man has done quite a bit of digging himself. He showed us some tools and jewelry which he had dug out. He also had a large life sized statue of a Greek god which had been taken out of the ruins. We went into their house and talked with them a long time. Finally they brought out a jug of home made wine and they wouldn't let us leave until we had a glass of their wine. Then the woman brought out some French pastery and before we knew it, it was almost sundown. They had a piano and after they found out I could play, I had to play some for them They were a pretty wealthy family. They had two grown daughters and they were very nice.

I don't know much to tell you except it is getting hotter and hotter over here. I took my driving test the other day and now I can drive the Chaplain anywhere he wants to go in the jeep. Mama you can send me anything that doesn't weigh over five pounds and isn't too fragile. Some of the boys have already been receiving packages lately. I could stand some candy as we aren't getting so much of it now.

Love,
Kent McGawon

Several visitors are expected.

VACATION CHURCH SCHOOL

The annual Vacation Church School of the Methodist Church opened Monday, June 14, with about 25 children enrolled. Others will probably enroll later. Four units are being taught by leaders and their assistants.

The Beginners group, under supervision of Mrs. Martin Dobbs is studying "Our Happy World" by Esther Freivogel

Mrs. Bennett Blair is leading the primary group in studying "Exploring God's Out of Doors" by Rebecca Rice.

Mrs. Al Simmons is in charge of the juniors studying "The Land Where Jesus Lived."

The intermediate boys and girls have Mrs. Arlie Martin as their leader.

Mrs. Bennett Blair is acting as general director of the school.

Mrs. E. C. Raney is directing the music in each group, and Miss Gloria Martin is pianist for the school.

Each division has a devotional class, play, music, and construction period.

The school will continue thru Saturday, June 19.

Defrost Your Electric Refrigerator Regularly

When the layer of frost that collects on the freezing unit of your electric refrigerator gets about as thick as a pencil, it is time to defrost. This frost actually acts like a blanket, for it keeps the cold from reaching the food that you want to keep fresh and wholesome It also lowers the operating efficiency of your refrigerator and adds to the operating cost.

To save money and to get more satisfactory service from your electric refrigerator, defrost it regularly Consult your refrigerator instruction book for a recommended method of defrosting, and for other tips that will prolong the life of your electric refrigerator.

Solving the Golden Riddle

By IRVIN S. COBB

THERE was a frugal German who ran a delicatessen store in the Flatbush district of Brooklyn. One evening a newspaperman who was living in the nighborhood dropped in to buy a Camambert cheese and found the proprietor absorbed in deep study.

"What's ailing you?" inquired the customer.

"Vell," said the German, "I got a frient named Felix vot has sent me an invidation to golden vedding, und now I haf got to send him a present. Und I hate it—gold is so expensive!"

"Must it be something in gold?"

"Sure! Ain't it a golden vedding?"

The patron went away, leaving the delicatessen owner still thinking hard. The next night, when he passed the store again, the proprietor was smiling broadly.

"I fixed it," he said, "und it didn't cost much neither."

"Did you send him something that was gold?"

Sure—for forty cents!"

'What could you get that was gold for forty cents?" inquired the other.

"A glass globe mit zwei goldfish in it!"

TASTY, NO-SUGAR ALL-BRAN MUFFINS ARE EASILY MADE!

Serve your family these delicious muffins soon! Their tempting texture and flavor come from crisp, delicious KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN. Here's the recipe in a wartime version, using no sugar. Try ALL-BRAN Muffins for breakfast tomorrow!

Kellogg's All-Bran Muffins

2 tablespoons shortening	½ cup milk
⅓ cup corn syrup	1 cup flour
1 egg	½ teaspoon salt
1 cup Kellogg's All-Bran	2½ teaspoons baking powder

Cream shortening and corn syrup thoroughly; add egg and beat well. Stir in All-Bran and milk, let soak until most of moisture is taken up. Sift flour with salt and baking powder; add to first mixture and stir only until flour disappears. Fill greased muffin pans two-thirds full and bake in moderately hot oven (400° F.) about 30 minutes. Yield: 8 large muffins, 3 inches in diameter, or 12 small muffins, 2¼ inches in diameter.

Lefthandedness

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.

Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

"I met a very remarkable man . . . I learned through him for the first time in my life what true love can be."

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

THE one cure for all our troubles is the hardest one for us to accept. It is time.

Nothing is harder than to patiently endure painful or difficult situations, and wait for time to help them. Time works slowly, but it works inevitably. There are no circumstances in your life today that the slow unrolling of the weeks and months and years is not going to change.

You will change, too. Many of your ideas will change, softening and shifting. So that what seems to you a completely insufferable burden today may prove to be tomorrow's blessing. The person who seems your enemy now, the person whose very presence renders you miserable, may turn out to be truly your friend in the time to come.

Looking back at your life you can see a thousand instances of this, but it is much harder to look forward and believe that the future will follow the same pattern.

We all make mistakes. We get ourselves into wretched mix-ups; we find ourselves in positions when there seems no honorable way out. Someone has to be sacrificed; someone has to be hurt; the natural instinct is to break up everything, end this particular set of troubles as fast as possible—no matter what follows!

Time Straightens Out Troubles.

And as a result the troubles multiply and grow worse; presently there really is no way out. Except time.

If some of the hundreds of women who are contemplating divorce today; desperately arranging to be separated from their children; appealing to their friends for sympathy and their families for help, would only quiet down, compose their nerves, strengthen their spirits to bear injustice and discomfort for awhile, and leave the cure to time, we would not only be a much happier nation, but a much stronger one.

Here is the case of "V. T.," a woman of 34, who has so hopelessly tangled her domestic problem that no matter what she does several innocent persons are going to suffer. The innocent persons are a boy of 14, two small girls of 7 and 5, and a little boy of 2. All these are "V. T.'s" children, by a first husband whom she divorced ten years ago, and by the second husband, whom she wants to divorce now. "V. T." is apparently a pretty, intelligent, normal woman, but she certainly has done her best to wreck all these lives, and is on her way to wrecking a few more. She wants to know what the "solution" of her problem is, as if one could toss off a cut-and-dried solution for a situation that has been moving in the wrong direction for 15 years!

"I married at 18," says her letter. "Of course it was too young and of course I was unhappy! My baby was born before my nineteenth birthday, and born lame—this was as bitter a blow to my husband and me that by mutual consent we left the baby most of the time with his mother, who has him still. Judson was a college athlete, holding several championships, and to have his child crippled was a continual grief to him. He and I were divorced when Stanley was four; I went abroad with my chum and we stayed in Paris for a year, studying. I then met Bob and we were married; two little girls were born, we had a nice home and a circle of friends.

Finds Genuine Love.

"However, when Jo-Ann was two I had a serious illness following a miscarriage; they were afraid I was going into tuberculosis, and I took both girls to the mountains. Here I met a very remarkable man, of whom I will only say that I learned through him for the first time in my life what true love can be. He is a professional man, admired and courted wherever he goes; he also had had an unfortunate marriage, but was divorced.

"With returning health and strength this wonderful love came to me, and I accepted it. We had a few idyllic weeks, and when I came home I asked my husband for a divorce. This he refused. Some months later my son was born, and from the first my husband took far more interest in this child, a remarkably beautiful and intelligent boy, than he ever had in the girls. His mother and he want full control of the baby, saying that I may have the girls if I will give him up.

"When I told my husband the whole story he still persisted that he wants the boy. My beloved came to plead his own case; it surely is not his fault or mine that this tragic love has come to us. We only ask freedom to live our own lives. My girls are at troublesome ages, needing much attention for schooling, dental care, dancing school and so on, and I would be willing to leave them with their father. But to this he will not agree. The result is constant quarreling, of course.

"Meanwhile my beloved has been commissioned to paint the portrait of my oldest boy, now 14. He is already a gifted violinist, and my heart is torn with longing to know him better, to be just to my girls, to keep my precious baby, to make Raoul supremely happy and to enjoy myself that fullness of living to which every woman has a right. The worry of it all has driven me half mad; I cannot sleep, I am nervous and tearful, no good to myself or anyone else. Tell me what is the wise thing to do, for myself and those I love."

Woman Wrecks Happiness.

This letter deserves no answer, and will get none from me. V. T. expects to wriggle out of her troubles now in a few minutes. It cannot be done. She has systematically ruined her own chances of happiness, as well as those of everyone toward whom she holds any responsibility. Her only hope would be to settle down to the job of raising three children and keeping a comfortable home for them and their father, and leaving something to time. But if I have gathered anything about V. T.'s character from her letter, that is just what she won't do.

The older boy, who so much needed the sympathetic help of his father and mother, has apparently been fortunate enough to find a good grandmother in their place, but nothing will ever make up to the two little girls the injury done them through the constant quarreling, and their own sense of being unwanted.

TIME A HEALER

Time heals our wounds if we help its soothing balm with patience. To rush from difficulties by a rash action that may hurt others usually brings more trouble. Kathleen Norris writes of a woman whose lack of patience in love and marriage may bring sorrow to her four children. The selfish manner with which she treated her first child, a lame boy, was repeated with two husbands and now she refers to a third man as her "beloved." Her lack of patience and understanding are backfiring and she asks for advice.

In the Navy a floor is a "deck," doors are "bulkheads," downstairs is "below," and a cigarette is a "Camel." At least, Camel is the favorite cigarette among Navy men, as it is among men in the Army, Marines, and Coast Guard. (Based on actual sales records from service men's stores.) And a carton of Camels is a favorite gift. Though there are now Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men, you can still send Camels to soldiers in the U. S., and to men in the Navy, Marines, and Coast Guard wherever they are.—Adv.

Hibernating Animals

When animals are in a state of hibernation they are only a step or two from death. Their heart beat is very slow, their body temperature falls way below normal, and their breathing is not perceptible by ordinary means. If you dig up a ground squirrel in hibernation, you can shake it, pinch it, drop it on the table, even stick it with pins, and it will remain as limp as though dead. Only fairly long exposure to warmth will revive the rodent.

There are days when most people are thinking of getting better established financially. The money side of life absorbs most of our time and energy. Yet we have only a small percent of the people who are really in dire need. In most instances this is due to a lack of thrift and economy, bad management, being swindled by a smooth business shyster, or the failure of some enterprise in which investments were made.

But there are riches which many never know and it is really these riches that we long for if we knew our inner self and heart How does this story relate to many? A New England banker went to a village pastor saying, "You will wonder why I have come to you. Well this is what I came to tell you." The minister was of course sympathetic and heard the story of the banker. "Last week I had my seventieth birthday. And I was not happy. And when I looked out at my window and saw Bill Green going to church, I knew why. I have spent my life making money. I have seldom been to church since those days when Bill and I were boys together in the Sunday school."

The banker paused to get hold of himself. "Well, Bill hasn't made much money, but he has stuck to the old church. and since I saw him walk by my house that morning, I know that Bill has something that I don't have. And I need it. I must have it.'

"There is a peace that passeth understanding; There is a joy the world can never know; There is a light, you will not find it burning on land or sea where'ere you go. This joy is not of earthly making, Tho you may find it in the sun set's blush; Above the noise and din of human striving There is a presence and a holy hush."

There was nothing wrong in the banker or any one else making his money if he did it honestly but he went all out for money, thus shutting God out and stabbing the finer sensibilities of his life, his heart, and spirit. He might not have had quite as much money as he did but he could have had some money and Bill's riches too. Bill may have been just as ardent a Christian and had more money with which to serve God and man had he been a little more judicious in his economic life. No where does the Bible put a premium on poverty as such.

Rather the Bible teaches industry and economy. Proverbs, "Go to the ant thou sluggard and learn of her." "The sluggard will not plow because of the cold, therefore shall he beg in the harvest." Paul, "Dilligent in business, fervent in business, serving the Lord." In both of these quotations there is a spiritual and a material application.

Next Sunday is Father's day and we shall have service in the morning in recognition of fathers Come. The other services of the day will be worth your time.

Baptist Church Notes

Mrs. D. W. Haralson

"Still as of old man by himself is priced for thirty pieces, Judas sold himself. not Christ.'

Our Sunday school lesson was on God's exceeding great promises. We are told that there are more than 3,200 promises in the word of God and all are for those who will meet the conditions which are given in the Bible.

„They are great because the giver is great and because the purpose is great. It is through His great promises that we become the children of God. God not only saves us, he calls us, guides us, protects and inspires us. Peter tells us that we are to grow as christians. We are to add to our faith, virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly love, and charity. These can not be developed in a few days, but must be a continual growth. They are as closely connected to each other as the strands of a rope which are intertwined to make one great whole. ,

May I express this thought as a prayer in the following words. "'I humbly ask that in time, I may grow according to thy plan divine. Give me faith that I may see what Christ really did for me. To my faith add virtue, according to the scripture; And may I knowledge gain while temperance in my life doth reign. Patience is my greatest need; Also for godliness I plead. Give me love for all mankind, and charity will surely be mine. Bless me dear Lord, with all of these, I beg of you and I will strive thy precious will to do."

Madame Chiang Kai Shek said "with me religion is a very simple thing. It means to try with all my heart and soul and mind and strength, to do the will of God".

The pastor preached on ""The Blood of the Lamb" Sunday morning. The following thoughts were left with us: "Christ our passover has been crucified for us." He was without a spot or blemish. God said, "When I see the blood I will pass over." Without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sins. Rom. 16. Blood is applied to the hearts of all who believe by faith. Paul said, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved."
