GOP hopeful woo followers of Perot

■ Pat Buchanan clearly carries day with independent activists.

N.Y. Times News Service

DALLAS — Republican presidential candidates paid homage Saturday to Ross Perot and his flock of independent voters, portraying themselves as fellow revolutionaries fighting to cut the federal government's power and scope.

"The federal government does a lot of good things ... but it's gotten too big," Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole of Kansas told Perot's United We Stand America (USWA) conference. "We've got to reign it in."

Despite his front-runner status in the contest for the 1996 GOP nomination, Dole received only a polite response from the 3,000 delegates gathered at the Dallas Convention Center for the three-day UWSA conference.

Conservative commentator Pat Buchanan electrified Perot's followers with his blistering denunciation of the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA), his vow to seal America's borders against illegal immigration and his promise to stop sending U.S. troops into battle under United Nations command.

To chants of "Go Pat go," Buchanan said world trade agreements are putting Americans out of work and vowed that on the day he takes office, the "new world order comes crashing down."

Buchanan endorsed term limits not only for members of Congress, but also for federal judges to discourage them from blocking voter initiatives such as California's recent proposition to end government services for illegal aliens.

Conflicting emotions tear at victim's family

Relatives fight frustration, appeal for calm

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel

A Midland family is torn between mourning the loss of the young man they knew as a son, grandson and friend, and the frustration they feel with the justice system.

The family of James Irvin "Jip" Poole, who was murdered just two hours after his 18th birthday, is concerned that rumors and misconceptions will lead to more violence among the youth in the community.

They also are frustrated that the two men accused of the stabbing death are free on $15,000 bond each. Charged with murder are 17-year-old Tommy John Rains and 19-year-old Jason Neil McClelland.

Jip died from a single stab wound to the chest that penetrated his heart and lung, officials said. He was stabbed on 1010 S. County Road 1233 — the roadway leading to Midland Memorial Rehabilitation Hospital off Loop 250 — about 2 a.m. on July 28.

Jip's family is disturbed that misinformation about the death is fanning the flames for youngsters to take matters into their own hands, and despite the frustration the Pooles feel with the justice system, they want everyone to know they should let the law handle any punishment that is to be doled out.

Sonny and Kerri Poole, Jip's father and stepmother, and Pennie Poole, Jip's mother, want people to know the truth about their son's death.

MISD carves out across-the-board payroll increases

By Myra Lee Salcedo

All Midland school district personnel will get a salary increase this year, including central office staff, after some hedging from school-board trustees.

"If we have limited resources, they should go to students in the classroom," said trustee Dianne Anderson, at Tuesday's school-board meeting. "Not one person — from the janitor to the superintendent — is more important than another. They all have a job to do. But we want to hold down the line on tax dollars and I want to keep money at the campus level."

After nearly reaching an impasse on district salaries during the board meeting, trustees voted to adopt a schedule — for teachers and librarians — offering $550 between steps (or each year of experience) for those with a bachelor's degree and $575 for educators with a master's degree. Teacher salary increases range from $535 to $3,350 per year, with for an overall increase averaging 4 percent.

'Trophy' development begins to take shape

Plans to construct about 1,500 residential units, a 55-acre lake, a village shopping center and an amphitheater in north Midland are being made by the Montana Tribe.

"It's not just a project. They're building a trophy project," said Margaret White, project manager for the Montana Tribe and investment banker in Las Vegas, Nev.

The Montana Tribe — based in Alberta, Canada — owns 640 acres of land east of the Green Tree North subdivision, or between Midland Drive and Midkiff Road north of the planned Green Tree Boulevard.

Tribe and city officials both said they have been working aggressively to pursue the development. The Montana Tribe is making plans for a symbolic ground breaking and "huge party" this fall.

Summer '65: Beatlemania, SpaghettiOs — then, Watts

By Jennifer Bowles
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — The summer of '65: Beatlemania was in full swing, SpaghettiOs hit grocery shelves, an American astronaut was walking in space and in Vietnam the nation was becoming entrenched in war.

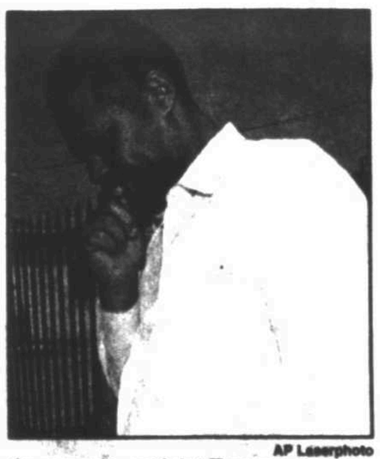

And, on the south side of Los Angeles, then known as the city's "colored" section, a simmering stew of unemployment, poverty and deteriorating police relations was about to boil over.

Just a little more heat would do it. It came on a sweltering August night 30 years ago in a dilapidated neighborhood known as Watts.

Marquette Frye, 21, was at the wheel of his mother's Buick when he was arrested Aug. 11, 1965, for alleged drunken driving. A scuffle ensued. Frye, his mother, Rena, and stepbrother, Ronald, were taken into custody.

The crowd watching the arrest of the black family by white officers soon swelled to 1,000, with young black men,

A mother's overdose

Once-poor-man's drug climbs social ladder

By Rick Hampson
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The mile up Amsterdam Avenue from 83rd Street to 106th is about the longest in America. It begins in the hip, comfortable Upper West Side, land of Zabar's and the Museum of Natural History, and winds up in a shabby crossroads where drug dealers wait for cabs bearing yuppies.

Richard and Patricia Marback lived at this mile's southern terminus, in a nice apartment in a nice building with two nice children.

She was the kind who'd hold the elevator with a smile while you got your mail. He was the kind who'd get you something if he was going to H&H, the famed bagel emporium on Broadway.

But when he stepped out the lobby door on Saturday, Aug. 5, Richard Marback was not crossing Broadway for bagels. He was heading north for heroin.

Twenty-four hours later, the love of his life was dead.

AP Laserphoto

Col. Gen. Ratko Mladic, Bosnian Serb army commander-in-chief reviews troops during his visit to Bosnian Serb Air Force base in Banja Luka, some 10 miles northwest of Sarajevo, Saturday.

BANJA LUKA, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Allied Croats and Muslims, seeking to capitalize on recent victories that have altered the fortunes of war, unleashed new offensives Saturday against Serbs in southern and western Bosnia.

Several thousand Serbs already have fled the new fighting and may end up joining the flood of refugees from last weekend's Croatian blitz. Aid officials charged that ethnic Croats were being forced out of their homes in Serbia and Serb-held parts of Bosnia to make room for the more than 100,000 Serbs who fled the Croatian army's advance.

There had been little fighting anywhere since Monday, when Croatia wrapped up its drive to recapture the lion's share of land taken by Serbs there during their 1991 rebellion.

But early Saturday, Croats around the resort city of Dubrovnik began a cross-border attack toward the Serb-held town of Trebinje in southern Bosnia. Bosnian Serbs are within shelling distance of the picturesque port city, and hit its airport Saturday.

Under a military cooperation agreement with the Muslim-led Bosnian government, the Croats were apparently trying to push into Bosnian Serb territory and relieve the threat to Dubrovnik.

Local Trebinje radio said three civilians were wounded in the Croatian attack. Dubrovnik hospital officials said they were treating three wounded Croatian soldiers.

AP reporter Shawn Pogatchnik reported seeing traces of artillery smoke over the corners of the city as he arrived in Dubrovnik late Saturday, but no shelling of the city itself. Croatian soldiers were in high spirits. "We're going to Trebinje," one said.

About 105 miles to the north, Bosnian government forces launched an attack on Serbs around the town of Donji Vakuf. That offensive appears aimed at the larger town of Jajce. Its capture would be a big morale boost for the Bosnian army and put it closer to the Serb stronghold of Banja Luka to the north.

A local U.N. spokesman, Maj. Carlos Alonso, said the fighting continued into Saturday evening and "the Bosnian army is making progress."

He could not say how far Bosnian forces had advanced. The United Nations said progress of the two offensives was difficult to gauge because access had been restricted.

But the Croatian and Bosnian armies clearly were trying to keep the pressure on the Bosnian Serbs, who for the first time look vulnerable.

Croatian soldiers captured a couple of key towns in western Bosnia last month, and followed up by slicing through adjacent territory in southern Croatia. Serbs had controlled the area since they rebelled in 1991 against Croatia's declaration of independence from the old Yugoslav federation.

That offensive has shifted the balance of power and given international mediators new hope of cobbling together the solution to the war that so far has eluded them. Both Russia and the United States stepped up their diplomatic activity in the past week.

Son-in-law who defected declares campaign to overthrow Saddam

AP Laserphoto

Iraqi and Jordanian security people surround Hussein Kamel Al-Majid, center, former Iraqi minister of military industry, as he arrives at the Royal Palace in Amman, Saturday, where he gave a press conference.

■ Former defense minister says he left because Saddam was more interested in defying outside world than bringing end to U.N. embargo.

Associated Press

AMMAN, Jordan — In his first public appearance since fleeing Iraq, Saddam Hussein's son-in-law and former right-hand man condemned his longtime chief for bringing misery to the Iraqi people and announced a campaign to topple him.

The threat from Maj. Gen. Hussein Kamel al-Majid, a former defense minister, could be the most serious challenge to Saddam's rule since the 1991 Persian Gulf War.

Al-Majid masterminded Iraq's secret nuclear armament programs in the 1980s and built up the army's elite Republican Guard units, which spearheaded Iraq's 1980-88 war against Iran.

He said he left Iraq because Saddam was more interested in defying the outside world than bringing about an end to the economic embargo imposed by the United Nations after Iraq invaded Kuwait in 1990. The sanctions have led to severe shortages of food, medicine and other supplies in Iraq, although the elite, al-Majid said, was not affected.

"We were not being harmed ... in the leadership," he said. "But the people are suffering."

He said he made his criticism plain to other members of Saddam's inner circle in recent months, but unfortunately no correction was made."

Therefore, "we'll work to overthrow the existing regime ... through political and through military means," he told a news conference at King Hussein's al-Qasr Al-Sagheer palace.

Al-Majid also said he was willing to reveal secrets pertaining to Iraq's secret weapons program "if it is in the interest of Iraq."

Meanwhile, a British newspaper reported Sunday that two Iraqi agents disguised as journalists were thwarted from killing al-Majid and possibly his brother, Col. Saddam Kamel al-Majid, at the news conference.

Jordanian intelligence officers overpowered and disarmed the agents hours before the major general addressed reporters in Amman, The Mail on Sunday newspaper said. It quoted unidentified senior Jordanian intelligence sources.

The al-Majids traveled from Iraq to Jordan in a convoy with their wives, Raghad and Rana, both daughters of Saddam. The colonel did not speak at the news conference.

In Washington, a White House official said al-Majid's news conference "underscores the extent of Saddam's isolation."

Speaking on condition of anonymity, the official said "his insider's account of the situation in Iraq shows clearly who is responsible for the suffering there."

Asserting that Saddam had deployed Republican Guard soldiers on every street in Baghdad, al-Majid called on "all officers in the Iraqi army in the Republican Guard ... and all government officials, to be prepared for the coming change, which will turn Iraq into something modern."

Iraqi officers "know what this call means," he said, though still referring to Saddam as "President."

Al-Majid said he had established contacts to carry out his plans with officials inside Iraq and with foreign governments, but said there was no dialogue with Washington yet.

"We will establish new and developed relations with the world and get rid of what is shameful and what caused the backwardness of the society," he said.

The White House official would not comment on whether U.S. or U.N. representatives have talked to al-Majid.

The news conference was al-Majid's first public appearance in years out of a military uniform — he wore a dark Western suit, white shirt and tie.

Speaking in measured tones, he said his group, which included the two couples' children, a cousin and 15 army officers, passed the border unimpeded. "I am a known personality and I don't think that a checkpoint of a few soldiers would dare to stop me."

Al-Majid said he was "astonished" by Saddam's accusations that he had embezzled millions of dollars before leaving, and warned he might retaliate to continued charges by revealing some "extremely serious and dangerous" secrets about the Iraqi leader.

Saddam on Friday accused al-Majid of "betrayal" and "stealing millions of dollars" of the Iraqi people's money. He indicated he would continue to press for the return of the defectors.

On Saturday, Iraq's state-run newspapers vilified al-Majid, calling him a "traitor dwarf" who sold out to foreign powers.

MISD: Trustees vote an increase for all personnel teacher with no experience is $23,500. A new teacher with no experience, but with a master's degree, will start at $24,750. A teacher with a bachelor's degree and 12 years of experience will make $30,100, and a teacher with the same degree and 30 years of experience will make $40,000.

Following disagreements on salary schedules for the rest of the district, school-board trustees voted to table the issue until another meeting. But after a late-evening executive session, trustees came out close to midnight Tuesday and voted to give the rest of the district a 3.5 percent salary increase (at midpoint of the salary schedule) with the exception of persons who were not directly involved with working with students at the campus level.

"We were interested in trying to resolve the payroll with school starting on Monday," said school-board president Robin Hightower, so trustees came back and voted despite the late hour.

According to MISD administrators, those receiving the 3.5 percent increase (at midpoint) are school principals and those in the clerical/technical category — teacher assistants, clerks, receptionists, cashiers, data processors, bookkeepers, food service workers and transportation dispatchers; manual trades workers — grounds workers, food service workers, bus monitors, security patrol officers, bus drivers, custodians and maintenance workers.

Some trustees said they were hesitant to give raises to personnel not working directly with students.

"Everyone automatically assumes there is always going to be a salary increase across the board, but not everyone is getting raises across the city of Midland every year," said trustee Jackie Hamilton at the meeting. "People are still being laid off and we have to be real. This is a business and people expect us to be frugal with their tax dollars."

Discussion of the issue resulted in a vote to give a 2.5 percent increase to those considered noncampus-based, the district's health services and foreign language specialist, the special education supervisor, a coordinator and director of purchasing/warehousing, executive directors, MISD Superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr., directors of athletics, compliance, finance, food service, maintenance/district architect, transportation.

Trustees also parted ways when hashing out the salary supplements for coaches. They voted not to increase supplements for coaches, to keep the same supplement schedule as last year for them. Varsity assistant football coaches will receive a supplement of $4,300, as they did last year.

All fine arts sponsors received a supplement increase of 5 percent, with the exception of band directors, who received substantial supplement increases. For example, high school band directors' supplements went from $3,800 to $6,600. "Band supplements were increased to make MISD competitive with other school districts," according to MISD executive director of business services Art Martin.

Some teachers said they were happy with the salary schedule, others were concerned that it was only a short-term solution.

"The only thing wrong with the schedule, is that in many places it will be below state base next year," said Steve Buck, Midland educator and president of Midland Federation of Teachers.

"The salary is well worked out, we appreciate that," Buck told school board trustees at Tuesday's regular meeting. "But we would really like to have a teacher salary schedule on hand before the (possible upcoming) bond election."

Buck said trustees have delivered a message "loud and clear" that "we don't want to raise taxes." However, he said a bond election would raise taxes, and trustees will need to find money next year to continue to raise teacher salaries up to the state base, "and you'll be doing that on the back of a bond issue," the educator said.

Trustees allowed that the salary schedule only brings teachers up to state base this year.

Ms. Anderson said a large concern was in fixing "inequities between what teachers and administrators make." She also said district personnel should "get your raises based on the goals achieved that we set for the district."

WATTS: America remembers riots 30 years later

many shirtless, hurling rocks at officers.

The 1965 Watts riots, the first in a series of racial disturbances to sweep the nation during the late '60s, raged for six days across 50 square miles of south Los Angeles.

When the smoke cleared, 34 people were dead, 1,032 injured and 4,000 others arrested. Damage amounted to $40 million.

One of the rioters was Tommy Jacquette, now a community activist who heads the Watts Summer Festival, an African-American cultural celebration held every August.

"It was an opportunity to get back at the Los Angeles Police Department for all the times we were called nigger, pulled over for no reason and generally disrespected by the LAPD," recalled Jacquette.

"We had them on the run and in a situation they couldn't handle."

An automotive student at Los Angeles Trade Technical College, Jacquette roamed the streets for several days, pitching rocks and flaming bottles filled with gasoline at officers and white passers-by.

"It never entered my mind that I might be killing someone. When you're in war you don't stop and think about the enemy," he said.

Driven by a local disc jockey's battle cry of "Burn, Baby, Burn," rioters looted and torched stores and pulled white drivers from their cars to beat them.

Amid the chaos, Battalion Chief Kenneth Long and his crew of firemen dodged sniper fire while trying to douse the infernos around them.

"It seemed ludicrous to me that people would attack firefighters. It's just nonsense. It's just crazy," recalled Long, now retired and living in northern California.

Having worked in the area for several years, Long was devastated to see the charred remains of 600 structures, most of them food markets, liquor stores, furniture stores and pawn shops.

"I can remember pulling up to a curb and seeing a black attorney I knew. He was standing there with tears in his eyes. That's how I felt," he said.

Longtime residents say not much has changed at the riot flashpoint on Avalon Boulevard — a busy thoroughfare lined by earth-toned, stucco bungalows with wrought-iron bars covering nearly every window and door.

The two-story apartment building where Frye's friend lived — his destination when police arrested him — still stands. A "for rent" sign on its fading yellow stucco is written in both English and Spanish, reflecting the changing demographics of a community once 98 percent black. Next door is a Baptist church, one of several in the area.

"I'll probably die here," says Jacquette. "I don't know where else to go. I hope I die working for the liberation of our people."

Jacquette says its disappointing that the Watts riot didn't put an end to racial inequality, "but it's eye-opening that the problem was so deep. We just scratched the surface."

In the aftermath of the Watts riots, the governor's McCone Commission issued a 101-page report that blamed a cycle of poverty and despair for the violence and called for ambitious reforms including job training and improvements in public transportation.

"So serious and so explosive is the situation," the report said, "that, unless it is checked, the August riots may seem by comparison to be only a curtain-raiser for what could blow up one day in the future."

Unemployment in Watts was still as high as 40 percent in 1992, when four white officers were acquitted in the beating of black motorist Rodney King. That sparked four days of rioting on the city's south side that killed 55 people, injured 2,383 and caused $1 billion damage.

The Rev. Frank J. Higgins, a Baptist minister who tried in vain to help police restore calm during the Watts rioting, says he didn't condone the violence though he understood its origin.

"It was like fighting fire with fire," Higgins explained.

"There is a fire of the spiritual nature that is stronger than physical fire and that fire is racism. And it's a fire that burns the mentality of a person, it diminishes the will of a man, it demeans that person, robs him of ever being free," he said, pausing.

"There is a fire out in America that is still burning."

TROPHY: Plans call for lake, 1,500-unit housing

(From 1A)

"It's going to be long-term project. It's probably going to take 10 years," Ms. White said.

Plans call for a hand-shaped lake surrounded by housing, a village shopping area along the water and an amphitheater for plays, concerts and other events. The project is being fashioned after the Desert Shores development in Las Vegas, Nev.

"It's going to be gorgeous," Ms. White said.

City officials expressed enthusiasm as well. "It's a very high quality development, upscale development, that few areas of this entire country could tout as part of their community. It's that unique," Assistant City Manager Glen Hackler said.

"This has great potential for great things to happen in the development of Midland," he added.

The Montana Tribe's project coincides with three other development groups — the Moss Partnership, the Mathis Group and Red Oaks Realty — that have plans or considerations for land in north Midland.

The Montana Tribe is the largest land holder. Red Oaks Realty holds about 400-plus acres, and the two other groups have roughly between 100 and 150 acres each, city officials said.

The area of Midland targeted lacks necessary infrastructure: sewer lines, drainage, water lines and street paving.

City officials plan to construct main sewer lines, and possibly a drainage system, through creation of a sewer district which would include a large portion of north Midland and would involve financial participation of all benefiting land owners, Hackler said.

The largest infrastructure cost will be an estimated $2.3 million, 24-inch main sewer line.

City ordinance permits the city only to pay for all materials over the cost of a 10-inch sewer line except under extenuating circumstances approved by the City Council. City officials have estimated the city's share at 20 percent, plus another 20 percent to relieve existing development needs in the Green Tree subdivision.

Specific cost sharing will be worked out by the city and developers.

OVERDOSE: After 10 years of marriage, two children, female broker dies slept in the bed next to hers for 15 years to the neighbor who knew him only by sight — describes their family the same way: picture-perfect.

Richard, founder of a medical journal, remained an avid rollerblader and biker despite the approach of his 40th birthday. At 6-foot-2, with light, salt-and-pepper hair, he cut a strikingly athletic figure.

They had two children: Natasha, 8, a little blonde known to all as "Tashi" who had thrilled her parents by getting admitted to a public school for gifted students; and John, 2, who spent days at home with a baby sitter.

You'd always see them together, loading the car for weekends in the Hamptons, or cycling to Central Park, or walking Henry, their tail-wagging golden retriever.

THEY LIVED IN a 16-story brick apartment house on West 83rd Street. Richard had moved in some 15 years ago, and Patricia had joined him.

Just before noon on Sunday, Aug. 6, the police were called to the building. Detective Joseph Waters took the elevator to the 14th floor, where he was met at the Marbacks' door by Richard and the children.

It was a beautiful place, a spacious contrast to the apartments that were subdivided after the war. The walls were covered with dozens of family photographs. There was a living room overlooking Broadway, and three bedrooms. In one, Patricia was dead of a heroin overdose.

Marback gave Waters two small bags of heroin. Then he led him to his dresser drawer, where the detective found a rolled up dollar bill that had been used to snort another three bags' worth the night before.

As word spread through the building, the reaction was something like this: The Marbacks seemed like the perfect family, but we are not unsophisticated; we could understand what happened if it was marijuana or cocaine, or if the Marbacks had been at a party, or if they had no children.

But heroin? Copped at the edge of Harlem? Snorted in the apartment while the kids were home?

"It's inexplicable to everyone," said a neighbor, Maxwell Yerger.

Not to the police, who have been watching heroin, once the poor man's drug, make its way up the social ladder.

In the past decade, world opium production has quadrupled, driving heroin's price down and its purity up.

The white stuff now on the street is so strong that those leery of needles can inhale it, instead of injecting it. It's pure enough to intoxicate even veteran junkies; pure enough to lure recovering addicts; pure enough to kill a young mother at home in the safety of 222 W. 83rd.

PATTY WINSTON was 15 the summer she met Richard Marback. They were both doing odd jobs at an optometry shop in Great Neck, N.Y., where Patty's family had moved when she was 6.

It was, they said, love at first sight, and their relationship endured — through high school and college, even though she studied psychology at Boston University and he went west to study business.

Both came back to New York, and married in 1985. Patty rose to associate director at Bear Stearns & Co., selling stocks and bonds to what the firm describes as "high net worth individuals." They were, her sister says, "people you've heard of, people in Who's Who."

Richard told neighbors he'd been so successful selling ads for medical publications that he started his own.

They were well off, but not rich. Their income went into his business and to pay the usual Manhattan tariffs: the $3,000 monthly rent, baby sitters, garages and all sorts of classes for Tashi, including horseback riding at an academy on Long Island.

Their personal lives seemed as successful as their professional ones.

Richard struck acquaintances as happy and uncomplicated. "He loved being married," said Robert Sawyer, who moved into the Marbacks' one-bedroom apartment when they moved upstairs. "Some married men seem to envy me because I'm single, but Richard would say, 'Robert, it's time you got married.' "

ON THE UPPER WEST Side, with its cast of singles and loners, eccentrics and non-conformists, the Marbacks seemed almost absurdly wholesome, "the sort of people with whom Newt Gingrich would like to repopulate America," as one neighbor put it.

The family attended Friday nights services at Temple Rodeph Shalom, where Tashi sang in the choir. They took Henry to visit nursing home residents. Patricia helped out with Tashi's Girl Scout troop.

On the Thursday night before she died, Patricia and Richard met her parents for dinner at a restaurant on Long Island. Afterward, Patty led her father over to a 1995 Cadillac parked outside. "Why don't you sit in this car, Dad?" she said, and handed him the keys. It was a gift.

In a busy, self-centered city, Patty always kept in touch.

"She never let a relationship die out, and she liked to help people," recalls her 34-year-old sister, Claire Behar. "Doing that was the calm in her day, in her very frenetic life."

Like many other city couples with big jobs, young children and small apartments, their lives were interesting but anxious, exhilarating but arduous. Richard was nurturing his new business, and Patty sometimes had to be in the office at 7 a.m., yet back in time to cook dinner. It seemed they were always working or with the children, or racing in between.

"THEY LIVED A very stressed lifestyle and did what they could to get through," Patricia's sister recalls. "They worked nights and weekends just to make ends meet and to build a future."

That included their special dream, a house of their own in the Hamptons.

Despite the pace, Behar adds, "They had a romance and they kept it alive. They'd send each other letters, even though they lived together. They lit candles. They called each other all day long."

And they planned a special celebration for Sept. 29, their 10th anniversary.

On Monday, Aug. 7, Richard Marback was arraigned on charges of drug possession and endangering the welfare of minors. The judge postponed his case and released him on his own recognizance; he probably will get no more than probation.

His relatives and friends had filled two rows in the courtroom. As Richard walked out, he put his head on one of their shoulders and cried.

Outside, his lawyer was reduced to telling reporters that the Marback family, once picture-perfect, "has no prior record," and that the parents had used heroin only once or twice.

Two days later, Patricia Marback was buried.

HER SIX BROTHERS and sisters helped compose this eulogy:

"She was generous and loving and quick to laugh. Her glorious red hair, which seems now to us like a radiant halo, illuminated her life. Our darling Patty was too kind, too beautiful and much too young to die. Her death is an unbearable loss; our family, still so vast, will never again be whole."

They did not blame her husband.

"We love him and we will stand by him," said Claire Behar. "He is our parents' son, and we will help him raise his children."

Her voice faltering, she added: "He's no villain; there's no blame here. Patty loved Richard, and we're keeping that love alive."

Last week, the widower and his children stayed at Behar's home on Long Island, sleeping in the same bedroom. "They wanted to be together," she explained.

Claire Behar runs through her mental thesaurus: "It was an accident, an aberration ... an isolated incident, just experimentation. Unfortunate, yes; senseless, yes. But beyond that, there's no story."

In an afterthought, she adds: "They did not do things for kicks."

But the Marbacks' case comes at a time when some young professionals who once sniffed cocaine to speed up are sniffing heroin to slow down.

The New York Daily News quoted an unidentified source in the district attorney's office as noting that when he reached 106th Street, Richard "bought three glassines (envelopes) of heroin from one guy, then crossed the street and bought two more from another guy. Does this sound like a novice who doesn't know what he's doing?"

Accusations over drug money stir talk of Colombian president's resignation

■ Documents seized by police in raids seem to provide evidence that has shaken Samper administration.

N.Y. Times News Service

BOGOTA, Colombia — Allegations that President Ernesto Samper accepted nearly $6 million in campaign contributions from drug dealers in exchange for promises of leniency in the courts are plunging this country into its gravest political crisis in decades.

With grainy images of Richard M. Nixon appearing on Colombian television and references to Watergate abounding in political circles, Samper's possible resignation has become a matter of open debate.

While Colombians give the president high marks for dismantling the leadership of the Cali drug cartel, with six of its top seven leaders now in jail, the arrests have done little to divert attention from questions regarding his ties to drug traffickers. Rather, documents seized by the police in recent raids against drug traffickers seem to be providing much of the evidence that has shaken the Samper administration.

Since the raids began in June, more than a dozen congressmen, the comptroller, the attorney general and other political figures close to the president have been indicted, in addition to his campaign treasurer. Last week, Samper's defense minister, Fernando Botero, resigned after the campaign treasurer, Santiago Medina Serna, told the police that as campaign manager, Botero had ordered him to solicit money from leaders of the Cali drug group.

In one raid last Sunday, in which the Cali cartel's most powerful fugitive was arrested, the police reported that they had discovered a suitcase whose contents hinted at how thoroughly the traffickers' influence had penetrated Colombian society: they included files showing over $25 million in payments to some 2,000 politicians, journalists, police officers, soldiers, soccer players and entertainers.

"Political parties are losing credibility, and the political system is in the midst of uncertainties," said Francisco Thoumi, who heads the Center for International Studies at Los Andes University here. "For the first time since the 1950s, the system itself is shaking."

The president has said that if his campaign collected money from drug dealers, it was done behind his back, but the denial seems to have done little to quiet criticism and doubt. In a statement, Samper dismissed the latest allegations as "moral intimidation," and he has sought to portray Medina as an architect of a conspiracy to topple him because of the crackdown on the Cali drug cartel.

The arrests and raids have been ordered by Alfonso Valdivieso, Colombia's chief prosecutor, whose office operates independently of the executive branch. Valdivieso can forward his findings only to Congress, which can weigh the evidence and forward any recommendation for prosecution of the president to the Supreme Court.

In recent weeks, business leaders and members of the president's own Liberal Party have lent lukewarm support to the president, while Conservatives have postponed a decision on whether to withdraw their three ministers from the government.

Rather than insist on the president's innocence, political supporters of Samper have responded to allegations of impropriety by asserting that leaks from prosecutors are undermining the integrity of the investigation and threatening political institutions.

Fear also appears to play a sizable role in attempts by the president's supporters to quell the agitation for answers: fear of guerrillas' gaining the legitimacy the president stands to lose; fear that Samper's downfall could open the way for a populist priest and former mayor of Barranquilla, Bernardo Hoyos, to come to power; fear that a serious inquiry into the influence of drug traffickers would taint figures of all political parties, in all spheres.

For the moment, the political tremors have not caused major economic eruptions. The business sector seems to be distancing its interests from Samper's personal political fortune, and dismisses talk of guerrilla or populist takeovers as alarmism.

Internationally, however, some here fear that foreign investors could be frightened off if stability appears uncertain. "Dollars are already taking time to get here," Pretelt noted.

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Police clashed Saturday with Catholics trying to block a Protestant march through their neighborhood, giving new urgency to efforts to bring peace to Northern Ireland.

Catholic politicians called the violence the worst since the Sept. 1, 1994 Irish Republican Army cease-fire and said it seriously threatened chances for peace.

Ten civilians and 12 police officers were injured in skirmishes that broke out after police tried to remove 200 Catholics who had blocked a bridge over the Lagan River. When protesters pelted them with bottles and stones, police fired rubber bullets, wounding one man in the face.

Later, police held back Catholics as some 30 members of the Apprentice Boys, a fraternal organization that celebrates Protestant defiance against Catholic King James II in the 17th century, marched across the bridge while a band played.

As they approached the betting shop where Protestant gunmen killed five people in February 1992, one of the marchers mimed spraying the shop with machine-gun fire.

The fighting, which closely mirrored a clash between Catholics and police on the Lagan bridge over a Protestant march on July 12, increased pressure on politicians to restart Northern Ireland's stalled peace process.

As the first anniversary of an Irish Republican Army cease-fire approaches, parties remain deadlocked over Britain's refusal to admit the IRA-allied Sinn Fein party to all-party talks until the outlawed group surrenders its weapons.

Later Saturday, hundreds of Apprentice Boys marched around the walls of Londonderry, 60 miles northwest of Belfast, to mark the relief of the city in 1689 when 13 Apprentice Boys slammed its gates shut on James' army.

Summertime in Paris: Thick pollution causes health alerts in City of Lights

■ Ozone levels soar to 7 on scale of 1 to 10, trigger caution to residents, tourists.

A cyclist wearing a surgical mask to filter out some of the microscopic grit in the air pedals on the Alexander III bridge in Paris, Saturday.

PARIS — Ah, summertime in Paris. They're strolling down the Champs-Elysees, smooching at sidewalk cafes — and choking on air so thick it's almost like breathing bouillabaisse.

"The Pollution is Back," the daily Le Parisien headlined Saturday after health officials put the City of Lights on yet another second-stage pollution alert.

Ozone levels soared to 7 on a scale of 1 to 10 late Friday, automatically triggering a public information campaign cautioning residents and tourists to take it easy.

Officials in the Paris region of 10.6 million people urged children, the elderly and people with allergies, asthma, and respiratory illnesses to avoid "unnecessary outdoor physical activity."

Stifling air pollution isn't limited to Paris. There have been scattered alerts around the country this summer, most recently in the eastern city of Strasbourg near the German border.

But the air is at its worst in the heart of the capital, where innumerable cars and tour buses belch diesel fumes. On a bad day, even the Eiffel Tower is shrouded in a blue-gray haze.

"When we flew in, we noticed it right away," said Sudhir Khanal of Nepal, leading a group of Boy Scouts on a tour of Paris. "We could see it from the airplane."

Temperatures in the high 80s to mid-90s and a lack of air-scrubbing ocean winds have made matters worse, said AirParif, the agency that monitors air quality in greater Paris.

"We're getting lots of calls. People say it's really bothering them," said Agafer Dgebbar, who was manning an AirParif hotline Saturday. "We're telling them, especially if they're asthmatic, not to overdo it."

Thick air pollution has become a pressing health issue in Paris, which has hinted it might follow Rome's example and consider limits on traffic.

The Environment Ministry last month called for higher diesel prices, tolls to enter the city and expanded pedestrian zones. One environmental group demanded measures to encourage the use of bicycles and scooters in Paris.

During a pollution alert on July 13, officials asked Parisians for the first time not to drive "except in absolute emergencies." Mayor Jean Tiberi has said he won't hesitate to crack down again if it helps clear the air.

Peru's president confronts church over birth control issue for country

LIMA, Peru (AP) — After defeating leftist guerrillas and taming astronomical inflation in his first term, President Alberto Fujimori is confronting the Roman Catholic Church as he begins his second.

The issue is birth control.

Fujimori threw down the gauntlet in his July 28 inauguration speech, announcing the government would make family planning services available to low-income Peruvians. The campaign is part of his overall goal of fighting poverty.

"If we speak of the future we have to talk about planning or birth control," Fujimori said, adding that there was no room for "sacred cows" in his government.

He said state involvement would ensure that families with low income and low education would have the same access to artificial birth control as the upper classes. But he denied that abortion, which is illegal but available at a price, would be part of the "aggressive" campaign.

Nevertheless, the speech set off alarms within the church hierarchy, which supports only natural birth control methods.

"To push in a massive and aggressive way artificial methods of birth control runs the risk of not solving the root problems that have to do with education and culture," said Bishop Fernando Vargas Ruis of Arequipa, Peru's second largest city. "It encourages a sexuality that is not based on the family."

The Peruvian Bishops Conference issued a letter saying artificial contraception was "morally unacceptable."

The controversy has also dismayed some in Fujimori's ruling coalition, which usually provides him with unwavering support.

"As a Catholic, obviously I object to artificial methods that are against Christian morality," said Congress president Martha Chavez, a strong Fujimori backer who has links to the conservative Catholic group Opus Dei.

This is not the first time Fujimori has raised the issue of family planning. A similar effort nearly two years ago ran into a wall of opposition from the bishops.

Since then, however, Fujimori's standing has improved markedly. He was reelected by an overwhelming margin this year to another five-year term and maintains an approval rating of around 65 percent.

And although Peru is 90 percent Roman Catholic, a poll last year showed that many Peruvians supported Fujimori's position on birth control the first time he raised the issue. No more recent surveys were available.

Fujimori, the son of Japanese Buddhist immigrants, says he is a Catholic.

Fujimori has emphasized that controlling the country's birth rate is key to improving the country's standard of living. With Shining Path guerrillas virtually eliminated and inflation now under 15 percent a year, he is focusing on economic growth and fighting poverty in his second term.

Free at last, Congress faces busy fall workload

WASHINGTON (AP) — The new Republican majority has won a stack of key votes and suffered few defeats during Congress' hectic opening seven months. But as senators belatedly joined House members in summer recess, much of what the GOP wants has yet to become law.

Lawmakers will face an enormous workload this autumn — and likely veto battles with President Clinton — over efforts to balance the budget, cut taxes, revamp Medicare, Medicaid and welfare, and rewrite laws overseeing telecommunications, clean water and perhaps lobbying.

"We're on track," said Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., before senators left town Friday, a week after the House. Both chambers return after Labor Day.

House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., was upbeat, too, as both leaders touted Congress' accomplishments in a year that has seen the legislative agenda shift well to the right of where it was for 40 years under Democratic control.

So far this year, Clinton has signed three high-profile bills into law, all of which were GOP initiatives. One requires Congress to comply with laws that govern the rest of the country, another limits Congress' ability to impose requirements on state and local governments without providing money and a third chopped $16 billion in already-approved spending from the budget.

Several others have made it through the House and Senate but have not yet been shaped into compromises that Congress can send to Clinton. Included are bills limiting product liability for manufacturers, easing regulations on telecommunications companies, and giving the president the line-item veto power to eliminate individual items in spending bills. The fate of each is uncertain.

As senators belatedly join House members in summer recess, much of what the GOP wants has yet to become law.

Yet, in spite of their control of both chambers, Republicans have seen other measures rejected. These include the Senate's one-vote defeat of the balanced-budget constitutional amendment and a proposed overhaul of the regulatory process, and the House's rejection of a constitutional amendment limiting members of Congress to 12 years in office. Constitutional amendments require two-thirds majorities for approval — margins that Republicans lack in both chambers.

Numerous other bills are still inching through the House and Senate. Because so little has been enacted so far, Democrats claim that, thanks to them, Republicans have little to crow about.

"This is a year when Democrats have made a real effort to try to keep bad legislation from becoming law," said Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D., summing up life on Capitol Hill since members took their oaths of office last Jan. 3. "I believe we've succeeded beyond our expectations."

The House, where procedures give the majority nearly an iron hand, claims a longer list of successes than the Senate. Of the 10 measures House GOP candidates included in their "Contract With America" last fall, all but one — term limits for lawmakers — made it through the chamber. Contract victories included House passage of bills cutting taxes, toughening criminal laws, reshaping welfare, reducing U.S. support for the United Nations, and a balanced budget constitutional amendment.

The House has also approved bills making it harder for the government to impose regulations on business and weakening water pollution controls, and completed 11 of the 13 annual spending measures financing federal agencies.

In the Senate, where debating rules give the minority party greater power to grind progress to an almost imperceptible crawl, things have moved more slowly. Another reason for the slowdown is a split between moderate and conservative Republicans. Senators have adopted a measure boosting funds for anti-terrorism efforts, and only six of the annual spending bills have been approved.

Ahead lies a whirlwind of an autumn.

Atlantic hurricane strengthens, should hit Bermuda by Monday

MIAMI (AP) — Felix, the most powerful Atlantic hurricane in two years, intensified Saturday and headed for Bermuda, where forecasters warned it could cause serious damage beginning tonight.

Felix's top winds grew to 125 mph, and its eye was winding tighter, to a compact 18 miles wide — a sign of further strengthening, according to the National Hurricane Center in Miami.

In the Pacific, Hurricane Flossie spawned storms that raked the Southwest with hail, rain and 76 mph winds, knocking out electricity around Tucson, Ariz., and causing flash floods that killed a motorist. Flossie weakened into to a tropical storm Saturday as it moved farther out to sea.

Tropical Storm Gabrielle, meanwhile, dissipated Saturday after dumping more than 2 feet of rain along Mexico's Gulf Coast, forcing evacuations and filling near-empty reservoirs to almost half of their capacity.

At 8 p.m. EDT, Felix was about 540 miles south-southeast of Bermuda, moving northwest at about 14 mph on a path that would probably carry the eye 30 miles west of the island at 5 p.m. Monday, the hurricane center said.

Forecaster Lixon Avila cautioned that hurricanes are unpredictable and that the center's predictions could be off by as much as 100 miles to the east or west when the eye passes Bermuda.

Still, hurricane-force winds of 75 mph and above extended up to 40 miles from the eye of Felix, so even a near-miss could cause significant damage on the island, which could get ocean swells and tropical storm-force winds by late tonight.

Gavin Shorto, the British colony's information officer, said a hurricane watch was in effect, and residents were securing their boats and buying supplies. Also, a Tuesday referendum on whether to declare independence from Britain may be postponed, he said.

Some tourists cut short their vacations and many guests were watching the weather channel on Saturday as workers packed up the beach chairs, said Neal Stephens, manager of The Reefs, an upscale 65-room beachfront hotel.

"Tomorrow we will be boarding windows," Stephens said. "Right now, we have guests sitting at the beach and in the swimming pool. It all looks pretty normal. But we have others who have decided to leave early."

Felix was not expected to hit the United States, the center said.

The storm's low pressure — 27.52 inches — and high wind speed rated it a Category 3 storm.

"You start talking about death and destruction with a Category 3 storm," forecaster Miles Lawrence said. "It's strong enough to do major structural damage to buildings, and the winds can put people in danger."

The last Atlantic storm to attain Category 3 status was Hurricane Emily, which brushed North Carolina's outer banks in September 1993.

Public memorial to allow Garcia fans opportunity to say goodbye

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Grateful Dead fans who have already spent days mourning Jerry Garcia will get a chance today to remember him at a public memorial that promises to turn a park into a sea of tie-dye.

A private funeral was held Friday for Garcia in nearby Belvedere. The public memorial at the Polo Field in Golden Gate Park will give fans an equal opportunity to share their grief and experience the mourning together," band manager Cameron Sears said.

The City of San Francisco, Bill Graham Presents and the Grateful Dead jointly announced the event, scheduled for between 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

A specific ceremony was not planned, but a large alter was to be erected and fans were encouraged "to leave a poem, light a candle or say a prayer to his memory," organizers said.

There was no live music planned and Grateful Dead band members were not expected to attend.

"We'll all be sitting around in our tie-dye uniforms," said Officer Rob Corley, a non-Grateful Dead fan in the park's police district. "I think it's going to be real mellow."

Some fans had already been camping at the park even before the memorial was announced. Garcia died Wednesday at a drug rehab center of an apparent heart attack. He was 53.

Witness payment

By Jennifer Bowles
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — For each hour that DNA specialist John Gerdes works on the O.J. Simpson case, he's paid $100. Forensic pathologist Michael Baden charges $1,500 each day he works for Simpson in Los Angeles.

If a lay witness makes any money, however, especially from the tabloid media, it can cast doubt on their testimony. In some cases, it's enough to keep them out of the trial completely.

What's the difference?

"We don't expect an average citizen to take money when they're going to offer testimony," said Tom Hoopes, a Boston criminal defense attorney and former prosecutor. "They're expected to step up as good citizens and do their civic duty."

Expert witnesses are seen in a different light, said Laurie Levenson, a Loyola Law School professor and former federal prosecutor.

"They have usually achieved a certain level of prominence," Levenson said, and jurors expect them to be paid because "they are taken away from their jobs to testify."

Jose Camacho testified at Simpson's preliminary hearing that he sold Simpson a 15-inch knife. Yet he's not expected to be called at Simpson's trial, after defense lawyers ridiculed him for selling his story to the National Enquirer for $12,500, which he shared with two colleagues.

Jill Shively testified before a grand jury that she saw Simpson speeding through the streets near the crime scene around the time that Simpson's ex-wife and her friend were killed.

She was dropped as a witness after prosecutors learned that, among other things, she took $7,600 from supermarket tabloids and TV's "Hard Copy" for her story.

"The district attorney made a tactical decision, right or wrong, that they could get hurt if they called Jill to the stand," said her attorney, James M. Epstein.

AP Laserphoto

The prosecution, Hoopes explained, "is always expected to produce fair, unbiased, ethical witnesses. Any witness who's getting paid pulls them down off that road."

In direct response to the Simpson case, the California Legislature passed a law making it a crime for prospective witnesses in criminal cases to accept payment from journalists. But the so-called checkbook journalism law was ruled unconstitutional last week on free-speech grounds by U.S. District Judge Fern Smith in San Francisco.

> 'We don't expect an average citizen to take money when they're going to offer testimony. They're expected to step up as good citizens and do their civic duty.'
> — Tom Hoopes, Boston criminal defense attorney

Among the expert witnesses, Baden, the pathologist from New York, has said his bill for the trial is more than $100,000. Gerdes, from Denver, testified that his lab will receive about $30,000 for his work for the defense.

Bloodstain specialist Herbert MacDonell said he has been paid $10,500 and has yet to bill the defense for his time since April 2.

Such payments could lead jurors to perceive that a paid expert is slanting his testimony, and "sometimes juries are snowed by hired guns," said Stan Goldman, a Loyola Law School professor and former public defender.

To help convince jurors that compensation makes no difference to their testimony, experts "try to keep a demeanor of objectivity. They try not to be an advocate of one side or the other," Epstein said.

Hiring such experts typically falls to the defense because the prosecution has access to experts who are paid government employees, such as police officers, coroner's officials and employees of the FBI and Justice Department.

But while the prosecution can point out that a defense expert is earning money for his testimony, that can lead the defense — as often as been done in the Simpson case — to argue that prosecution experts "are part of a conspiracy and that they tip their testimony in favor of law enforcement," Hoopes said.

"It's just a different bias you're arguing," Epstein said.

Eventually, however, it lands in the jurors' laps.

"In the end," Hoopes said, "money or no money, they're going to believe them based on what they say and how they say it."

Homicide rate in many U.S. cities drops sharply in first half of year

■ Many criminologists point out that recent data show demographic shift that could predict increases again as the number of teens rises.

N.Y. Times News Service

DETROIT — The homicide rate in many of the nation's biggest, most-violent cities dropped significantly in the first half of the year, and if current trends continue, a number of urban areas will close out 1995 with the fewest killings since crack cocaine spawned a culture of gangs, guns and violence in the mid-1980s.

But some experts caution that the cause of the decline is unclear, with such possible explanations as more aggressive police tactics, an increase in the number of criminals in prison and changing patterns of drug use.

What is more, many criminologists also point out that the most recent data show a demographic shift in the population that could portend increases in murder again as the number of teen-agers increases.

Some researchers even say the recent drop in murder rates may be no more than a return to a statistical middle ground after years of rapidly rising homicide rates dating to the advent of crack in 1986.

A similar encouraging reduction took place nationally from 1980 to 1985, only to skyrocket again starting in 1986.

"It's like the Dow Jones average," said James Alan Fox, dean of the College of Criminal Justice at Northeastern University. "What goes up must come down. Certain cities are winning battles, but I don't think we have won the war against crime."

On the other hand, many officials celebrate any reprieve from what had seemed to a nervous public to be an irreversible trend for years.

"It is nice to see something that indicates progress and I think the numbers are large enough that they mean something," said Dr. Mark Rosenberg, director of the National Center for Injury Prevention and Control at the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta.

"The homicide rate seems to be going down. It is a very real phenomenon."

One of this year's winners is Detroit, which for as long as William Rice can remember has been known as Murder City.

Year after year, Detroit kept was among the top 10 cities with the highest homicide rate. A local radio station once even put up a billboard tabulating the city's daily death toll.

But for the last three years, Rice, now a homicide lieutenant in the Detroit Police Department, has watched with surprise and pleasure as the number of homicides has dropped. The city had a 9 percent decrease in the first six months of 1995. If the trend persists, Detroit will record its lowest number of killings since 1984.

"It is hard to get rid of the stigma," Rice said. Even so, he said, he senses that "people are not as afraid."

The biggest reductions have been achieved in New York and Houston, which both had nearly one-third decreases in killings in the first half of 1995. In both cities, the good figures represent an acceleration of a steady three-year drop in killings, and if they can maintain the trend, it would be their lowest annual homicide total in almost 25 years.

Similarly, this year's homicide rate in Los Angeles was down 6.6 percent through June, while it has fallen 19 percent in Chicago in the same time.

Of the five cities with the highest homicide rates in the nation last year, four, New Orleans, Richmond, St. Louis and Washington, are recording decreases.

Even so, the trend is by no means universal.

The number of homicides is continuing to rise in Gary, Ind., which now has the highest rate in the nation, as well as in Dallas and Phoenix. And in Minneapolis, which has long enjoyed one of the lowest homicide rates, the number of murders doubled to 51 in the first half of the year, from 24 in the period last year, said Deputy Police Chief Greg Hestness.

(From 1A)

Dole avoided any mention of NAFTA, which he supported and which is staunchly opposed by Perot and most of the members of his political organization. Instead, he dwelled on his longtime service in Congress.

"I'm not perfect, but I've been tested," he said. He asked the delegates to allow him to "march by your side" in "the last great crusade of this century" against the power of the federal government.

Dole urged Perot's supporters to help him "stiffen up" some senators who this year opposed a proposed constitutional amendment to balance the federal budget.

And in an appeal to the fiscal austerity advocated by UWSA members, Dole promised to end federal tax financing of the national conventions of the Republican and Democratic parties.

Like Dole, Sen. Phil Gramm of Texas avoided any mention of NAFTA, but added his voice to the Republican chorus against foreign aid and affirmative action and in favor of tax reform, a balanced budget, family values and less government.

"Bill Clinton believes that a brighter future will be won with more government," Gramm said in prepared remarks. "I believe it will be won with more freedom. ... If we are bold enough in defining our vision of an American future dominated by freedom and family, Bill Clinton will be remembered as the last president of a liberal era when big government arrogantly thought it knew best."

Perot, who received 19 percent of the vote as an independent in the 1992 presidential campaign, did not indicate any preference among the Republicans who addressed his gathering Saturday.

But Buchanan clearly carried the day with Perot's activists, perhaps the nation's most stubbornly independent voting bloc and one of the keys to next year's presidential campaign.

"Buchanan talked about what was on his mind, but Dole came to politick," said Anna Richards, a UWSA delegate from Joshua Tree, Calif.

Today, the final day of the conference, the delegates are planning to take up the issue of whether to form a third party to challenge the dominance of the Republican and Democratic parties.

The candidates competed to portray themselves as in step with the principles of Perot's movement.

Former Gov. Lamar Alexander of Tennessee said the revolution begun by Perot as an independent presidential candidate in 1992 and carried forward by Republican congressional candidates last fall has stalled in the hands of career politicians.

'Everywhere I go in America, I find people outraged by the federal government's failure to secure our nation's borders against massive illegal immigration, and outraged that Washington actually mandates states to provide costly services to illegal immigrants — rewarding them for breaking the law.'

— California Gov. Pete Wilson

Without mentioning any opponents by name, Alexander warned that if the GOP nominates an "inside the Beltway" candidate, "we run a grave risk that ... President Clinton will be reelected and the revolution will fail."

Gov. Pete Wilson of California praised Perot's followers as "patriots eager to put our nation back on track," undoing "decades of substituting big government for personal responsibility."

Wilson also reminded the UWSA delegates of his recent efforts to end affirmative action in California and his pioneering "three-strikes-and-you're-out" anti-crime initiatives.

Although Sen. Richard Lugar of Indiana reminded the Perot audience that he has proposed replacing the federal income tax with a national sales tax, he spent most of his time on the podium warning of the increasing access terrorists have to nuclear materials.

Perot's supporters sat silently as Lugar detailed the availability of nuclear material on the black market and warned that such proliferation "must be considered the greatest threat to the national security of the United States."

But Alan Keyes warned that the greatest threat to America comes for the nation's refusal to end abortions. Keyes, who is black, compared abortion rights to slavery in America.

"I will not let it happen again, not to my people and not to the great unborn," he said.

President Clinton declined an invitation to address the gathering, but his longtime friend and adviser, Thomas "Mack" McLarty, spoke Friday evening.

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Shannon Faulkner took her place in a long gray line Saturday at The Citadel, becoming the first female cadet in 152 years of all-male Southern tradition at the publicly funded military college.

Ms. Faulkner entered the campus by a side gate, not seeing protest signs at the main gate, including a banner held by a dozen women that read "Save the Males."

"It's a black day for The Citadel," said Sallie Baldwin. "Shannon does not speak for us. She's not welcome here."

On the opposite corner were about 50 supporters, with signs reading "The Males are Saved" and "The Citadel Mentality is Not Now a Reality."

Ms. Faulkner, stern-faced, would not talk with reporters when she arrived on campus shortly after 7:30 a.m. with her parents and lawyers. She was escorted in by federal marshals.

"All I can say is everything is going well," she said as she walked into her band audition later, her flute case and sheet music tucked under her arm.

Ms. Faulkner has said she will not be the last woman to wear The Citadel gray uniform. College President Claudius Watts, however, said that while the school accepts the courts' decision to allow Ms. Faulkner into the Corps, it will press on with appeals to keep other women from following her.

"The courts have ruled. It's a lawful order. As a military person I salute and move forward," Watts later told an assembly of relatives that included Ms. Faulkner's parents.

On Friday, two U.S. Supreme Court justices rejected the school's latest bid to stop her.

"I feel disappointed in how the case ended up," said junior David Williams, a member of India Company, Ms. Faulkner's cadet unit.

AP Laserphoto

"Hopefully everything will work out. I'd obviously prefer it stayed all male."

As knots of cadets watched from across the courtyard of Law Barracks, Ms. Faulkner was greeted by cadet Alex Pettett, a senior who commands India Company. Other cadets helped move her luggage upstairs.

"I would say a couple days ago, it hit me a little harder, but since then our cadre has been training and is prepared for this, and she'll be treated no differently. Today is just another day," Pettett said.

"I'd say confidence is extremely high. Morale is very high, too," he said.

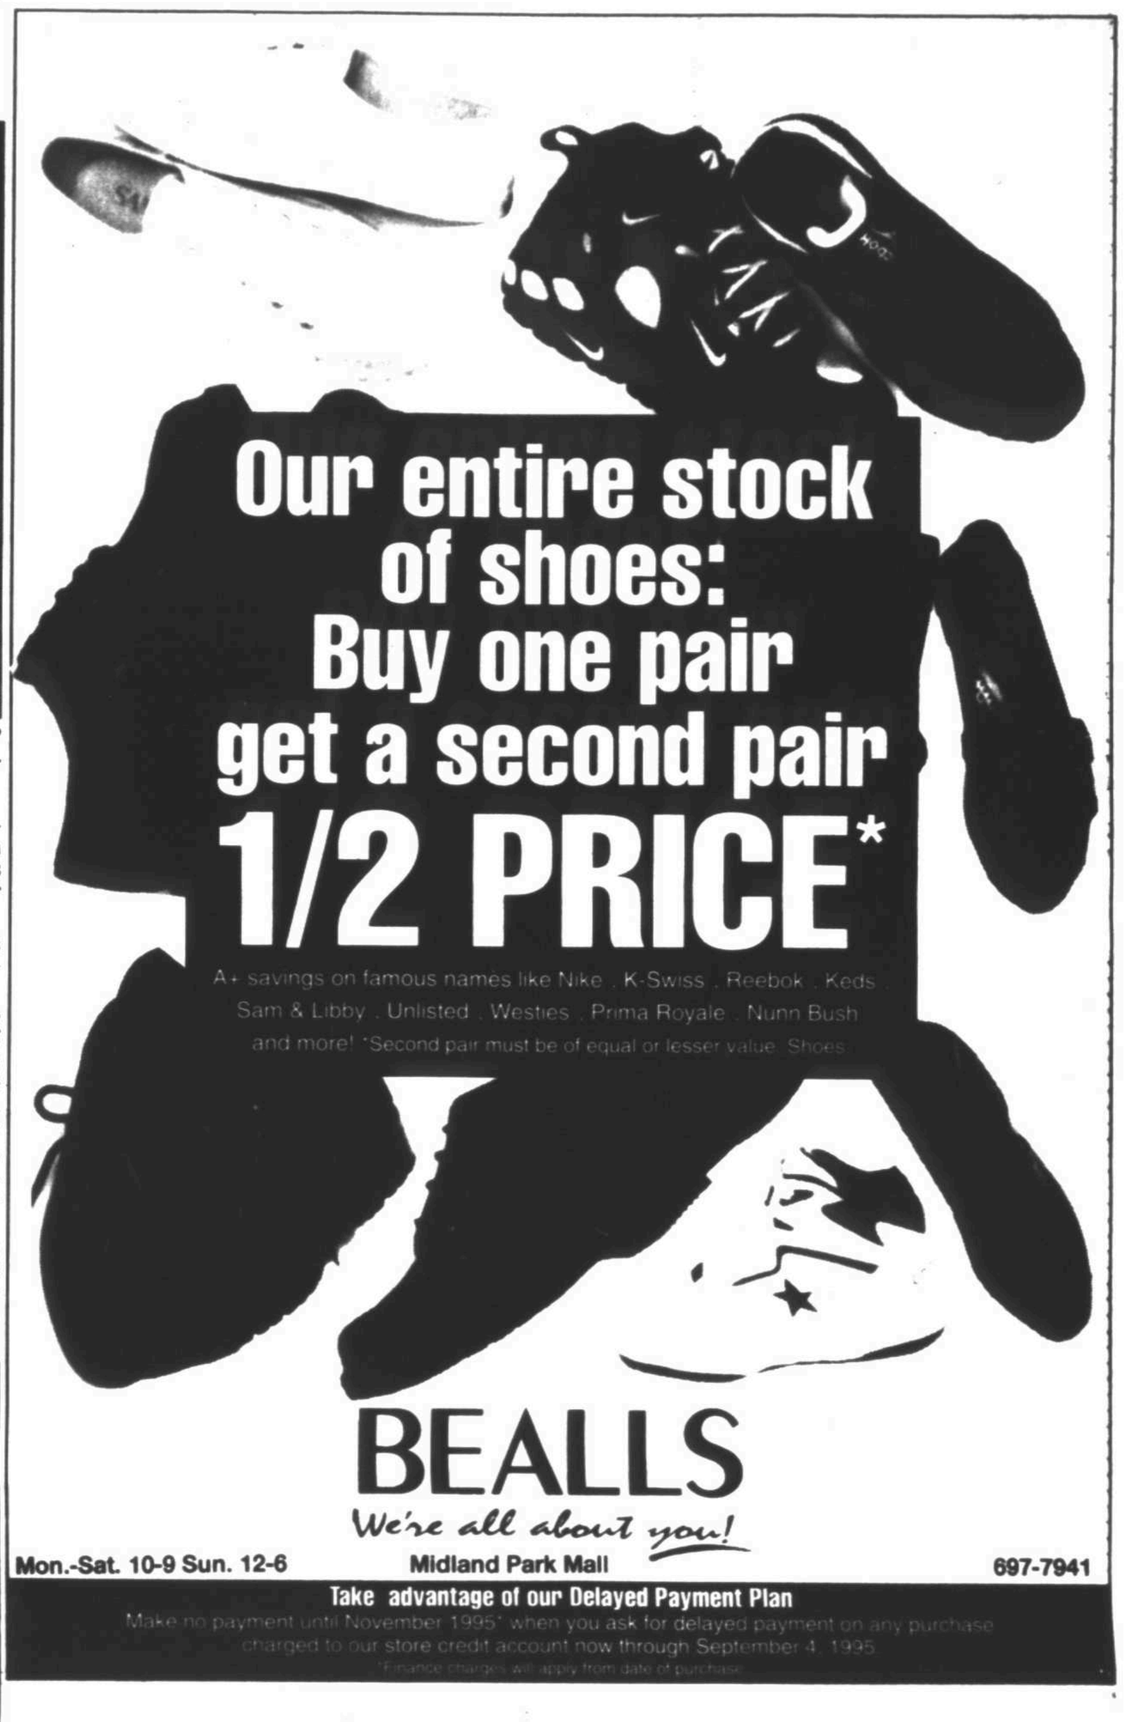

But other male cadets appeared to ignore Ms. Faulkner as they assembled in a courtyard, one indication of the isolation she could face.

Unlike other cadets, Ms. Faulkner, a 20-year-old junior, will have a private room, with video cameras monitoring the hallway outside for security.

Ms. Faulkner has taken classes at the 2,000-student school since January 1994 under court order.

But she was not allowed to take military training as a member of the corps of cadets until The Citadel's last-ditch appeals were turned down twice at the U.S. Supreme Court on Friday — first by Chief Justice William Rehnquist, then by Justice Antonin Scalia. Neither gave a reason for the rejections.

The college wanted the justices to bar Ms. Faulkner until the court could resolve whether public single-gender education is constitutional.

TEAR: Family fights conflicting emotions

in a fight in which he was beaten up by three boys, Poole said. This was apparently the long-standing feud police said sparked the deadly fight. The friend then went to Jip, who was celebrating his birthday at his mother's home with some friends.

Poole said his son arranged for the friend and Jip to have a fair fight later with Rains and McClelland to settle the dispute once and for all.

Media reports that the fight stemmed from a Little League fight years ago were not accurate, the Pooles claim, and Jip was not involved in the earlier fight, they said. Jip's mother said Jip never played Little League baseball.

Jip's father said the boys went to the remote location to fight and Jip was stabbed in the altercation.

He was taken to the hospital by his friend. Poole said he wanted people to know Jip was not "dumped" in the parking lot as police said, but rather fell out of his friend's car and his friend was unable to pick him up before emergency workers came to his aid.

Jip died at the hospital.

Jip's mother also wants to clear the air about the kind of person Jip was. She stresses that he was not involved in any gang activity and never had been.

"Jip is not the bad guy," she said.

Kerri Poole said she notified police after receiving threatening and harassing phone calls. She said a boy was calling people on both sides of the dispute and trying to start problems.

"We want to let the law take care of this. Retaliation and violence is not the answer," she emphasized.

Pennie Poole's boyfriend, David Stidham, said that with all the murders Midland County has had so far this year, now is the time for it to stop.

"We're not going to let him be forgotten," his stepmother said.

"He was the best friend anyone could ever have. He was taking care of a friend that night," said Jip's best friend, Patrick Harrison. "Family and friends were important to him; they were his main focus."

Patrick's mother, Gloria Harrison, said Jip had good manners.

His father said children looked up to Jip and he returned the affection. More than 300 people attended his funeral with about 200 of those friends from school.

"That was the kind of impact he had on people," said his stepmother. "All kinds of kids were there — from preps to cowboys, druggies and even gang members. There was a diverse group there with kids from all walks of life gathered."

Soon after Jip's death, the family encouraged his friends and youths in the community not to retaliate for the stabbing. They gathered at Jip's grandmother's home with several ministers there to counsel the youths.

On Saturday night, the family rounded up teens again with the same theme in mind. This time, they had Sheriff Gary Painter there to answer questions and offer advice to the youths.

"We want to touch other kids and prevent this from happening again," said Jip's grandmother, Lois Bisbee.

Despite their efforts to allow the justice system to run its course, the family is still frustrated at that very system.

They don't understand how the men accused of the crimes could be freed after posting $15,000 bond when some bonds are set at $20,000 for people involved in property crimes with no acts of violence involved.

"They're walking the streets and we have Jip laying in the funeral home," Poole said.

"What kind of message is this sending to our kids?" Kerri Poole said.

Pennie Poole expressed her concern that her son was a "nobody," therefore the powers-that-be aren't worried about what happened to him or what could happen to his family.

She also is fearful that other youths will try to retaliate against her family.

Jip's girlfriend, Becca Moody, sat next to Jip's mother and sobbed softly before having to leave the room from the emotion. Pennie Poole leaned on her boyfriend for support from time to time.

Emotions bordered, at times, between anger and sadness while the group discussed the situation.

"We can't go anywhere without coming face-to-face with them," Jip's stepmother said. "Why are the victims punished when the thugs and the punks do bad things?"

Cathy Anderson, the mother of one of Jip's friends, said she was amazed at the Poole family for "putting aside their grief to hold these kids together ... their house has been open to them. This is about Jip and they have gone out of their way to help."

Jip's other grandmother, Winnie Hill, is encouraging people to write their elected officials to try and get laws changed to keep criminals and those charged with crimes behind bars.

Jip's mother was upset by the fact that murder is considered a crime against the state yet state prosecutors don't represent her.

"They can't tell me it's not a crime against me until they come to my house and sleep in my bed and wait for my son to come home at night," Pennie Poole said.

The family is also frustrated that Jip's car and some personal belongings aren't being released because they are considered evidence.

"The bottom line is we just want justice," Poole's father said.

Through it all, the family carries some guilty feelings for what they could have done to prevent the murder.

"There are so many 'should haves.' I had hoped to have a party for Jip that night, but I had to work 16 hours and couldn't do it," his father said. "People wonder why he was out at 2 a.m., but he was a good kid. Sure he had been in fights before, but he went out there for a fair fight. He was always with his friends late at night and a lot of the time they were out playing basketball.

"People need to know they don't need to fight unless they're put up against a wall," Harrison said. "They ruined their lives and Jip's life."

Green ribbons are being worn to remember Jip. His stepmother said green was his favorite color and to her that color now represents victims' rights.

Mantle update

DALLAS — Mickey Mantle remained in serious condition Saturday at Baylor University Medical Center where he was resting with his family, a hospital official said. Chemotherapy for the 63-year-old baseball Hall of Famer, who is battling an aggressive cancer that doctors hoped to beat when they removed his liver June 8, has been postponed indefinitely. "They'll be observing him and re-evaluate that if he improves," said Paula Garrison, Baylor nursing administrative supervisor.

Kile demoted

HOUSTON — The Houston Astros demoted starting pitcher Darryl Kile to Class AAA Tucson on Saturday and called up pitcher Craig McMurtry, who was a replacement player for the Astros during spring training. McMurtry had a 6-1 record in 13 starts for the Toros this year and a 1.29 ERA. Kile had struggled most of the season and compiled a 4-12 record with a 4.87 ERA. McMurtry will be making his first appearance in the major leagues since 1990 when he was with the Texas Rangers. He's expected to be in uniform for tonight's game against the New York Mets.

Kile struggled in his last start, pitching 4 2-3 innings and allowing six hits and five runs in Friday night's 7-5 loss to the New York Mets.

Els heats up, leads PGA by 3

■ South African has a 16-under-par 197 going into today's final round of the PGA Championship.

By Ron Sirak
AP Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES — Mark O'Meara and Jeff Maggert matched the lowest 54-hole score in the history of the PGA Championship and still trailed Ernie Els by three strokes.

That says a lot about how easy the Riviera Country Club is playing. But it says even more about how well Els is playing.

Holing out once from a bunker and later chipping in from the rough for an eagle, Els shot a 66 on Saturday to go into the final round at 16-under-par 197, three strokes ahead of O'Meara and Maggert.

The last time Els had a lead going to the final round of a major championship, he won the U.S. Open in a playoff. If he keeps playing like this, he won't need extra holes to put away the PGA Championship.

"It was what I wanted to do," Els said. "I played the round I wanted to play."

What will Els need today to win?

"Two or three, five under par to make it safe," he said "You don't get too many chances to be where I am. You can't waste an opportunity like this."

As easy as Riviera had been playing, the winner will almost certainly have to shoot in the 60s today.

"I don't think you'll see a lot of backing up out there," said Maggert, who got into contention with a 65 on Saturday. "I don't think the condition of the course is going to let that happen."

O'Meara, who had a third-round 69, agreed.

"I don't see Ernie shooting par," he said, "so that shows what the rest of us will have to do."

There is no telling how low the scores would have gone if putts didn't bump along over spike marks on their way to the hole.

Els' 197 was the lowest 54-hole score ever in the PGA Championship, by score and by relationship to par. Raymond Floyd was 10-under 200 after three rounds at Southern Hills in 1982. Mike Reid was 13-under 203 at Kemper Lakes in 1989.

Colin Montgomerie shot a 67 and was alone in fourth place at 11-under-par 202. Craig Stadler shot his second straight 66 and was at 203 along with Steve Elkington. Jay Haas shot a 64 to get to 9-under along with Jeff Sluman and Justin Leonard.

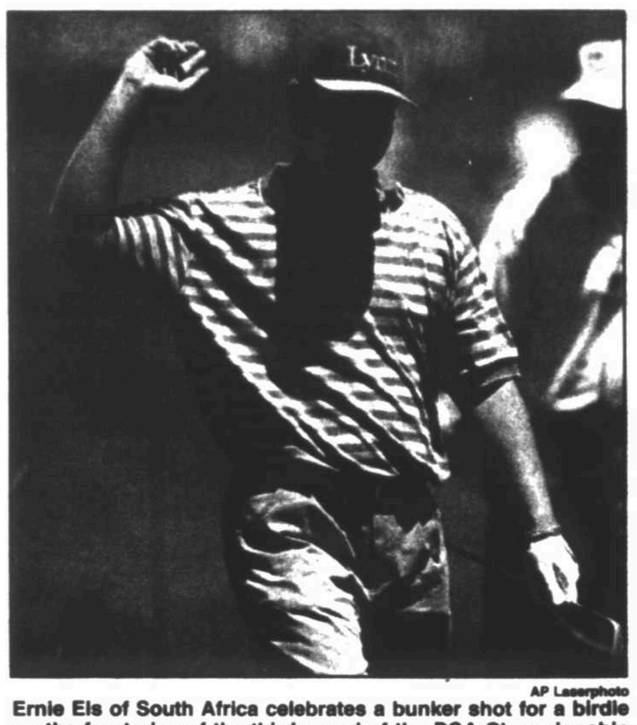

Greg Norman failed to make a move, shooting a 70, and was 8-under, seven strokes behind Els.

"I had a two-shot lead going to the last round of the U.S. Open and I managed to get into a playoff," Els said about his victory last year at Oakmont. "I'll feel safe if I have a five-shot lead going to the 18th hole."

Els may not feel safe yet but he appeared comfortable and in total control.

"This is exactly the same stuff I grew up in in South Africa," Els said earlier in the tournament

Bills bust the 'Boys

■ Buffalo finally beats Dallas in a bowl game, this time a 9-7 victory in the American Bowl.

By Bucky Gleason
AP Sports Writer

TORONTO (AP) — The Buffalo Bills didn't get to see much of Jim Kelly, but at least they finally beat the Dallas Cowboys in a bowl game.

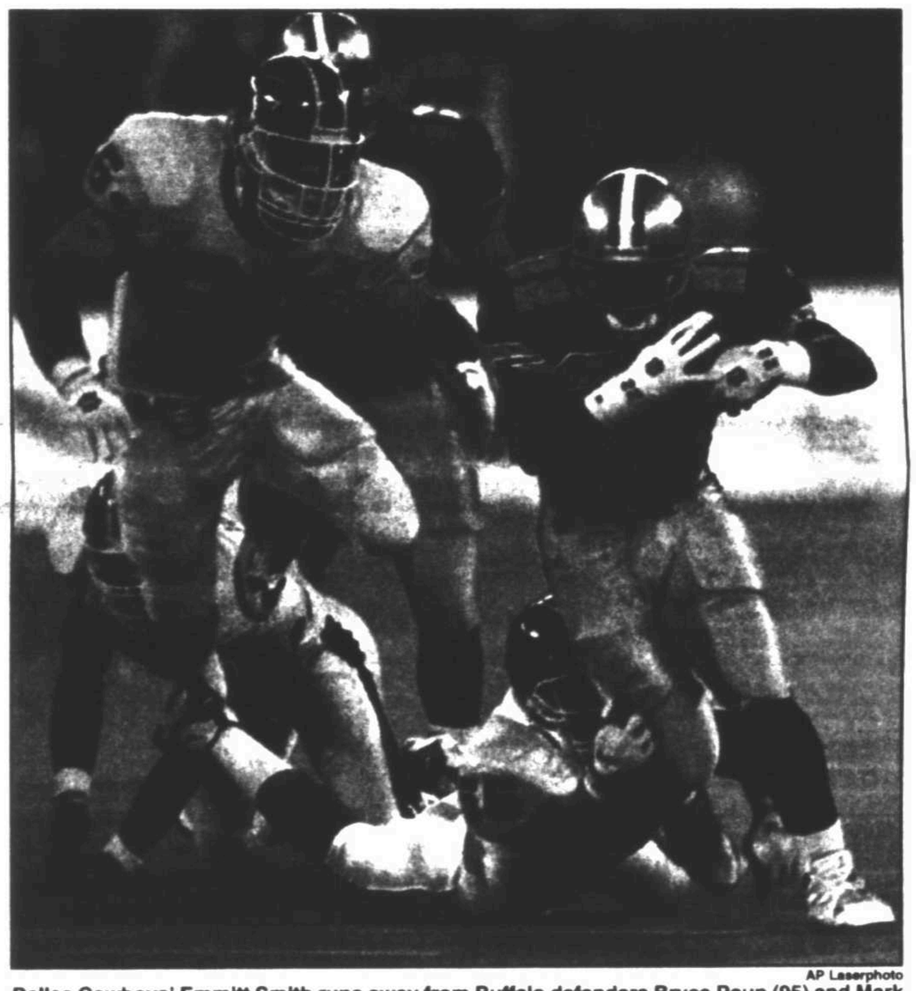

Kelly, playing in his first game since undergoing knee surgery during the offseason, played just two series over the first 18 minutes before Buffalo's reserves took over and beat Dallas 9-7 on Saturday night in the American Bowl.

"The knee feels great," Kelly said. "It was very refreshing to know I wasn't worried about it. But I was in there for only two series and, boom, I was out."

Kelly took only nine snaps and was 1-of-3 for 1 yard before heading to the sidelines. He was expected to play only a quarter, but Dallas controlled the ball for 12:10 of the opening period.

Troy Aikman was 7-of-10 for 61 yards before leaving the game early in the second quarter for Dallas (1-2). Emmitt Smith, who was held out last week with a hamstring injury, gained 42 yards

Former Aggie holds on to beat Angels

By Terry Williamson

For a time at Christensen Stadium Saturday night, former Texas A&M quarterback/pitcher Jeff Granger must have felt like he was running the naked option with no blockers in front.

But he hung around long enough to get the victory in Wichita's 10-6 win over the Midland Angels, as the Wranglers protected their three-game lead over San Antonio in the Texas League second half West race.

Granger (3-6), who played both football and baseball at A&M, fell behind Midland by a 4-0 count through the first four innings. But he didn't leave the game until the eighth, holding a 9-6 lead as the Wrangler offense got untracked and rocked the Angels.

"When I got down 4-0, I was just thinking that I needed to put up some zeroes," Granger said. "Midland's pitcher (Korey Keling) was baffling our hitters, but he ran into some problems in the fifth and sixth. This win shouldn't go to me, but to our hitters."

Midland outhit Wichita by a 13-12 count, but six of those hits came in the first two innings and had only three runs to show for it.

Wichita sent nine men to the plate in the sixth inning to take the lead for good as four different Wranglers drove in runs against Keling (8-4), who lost for the third time in a row.

"Early in the game I was trying to get the first pitch in as a strike and Midland captilized on it," Granger said. "However, when I got past that, my slider was working good and I had seven strikeouts."

The strikeout served Granger well. He

Murray kicks Redskins over Oilers

By Tom Sharp
AP Sports Writer

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — Forgive Washington coach Norv Turner if he's feeling a little vindication at this point.

Turner picked up veteran kicker Eddie Murray this week after Chip Lohmiller was cut. Murray repaid the kindness by kicking three field goals, including a 53-yarder, in Saturday's 16-13 exhibition victory over Houston at Tennessee's Neyland Stadium.

"That's the Eddie Murray I know," Turner said. "He has a new center and a new holder, and it's a big adjustment for him. He's not fazed and he just kicks the ball through the uprights."

Murray hit a 24-yard field goal in the first quarter, had a 47-yarder called back by a penalty, then edged the 53-yarder just over the cross bar to tie the game 13-13 with 13 1/2 minutes left to play.

He won it with a 34-yarder 3 1/2 minutes into the overtime.

His performance was the only offensive bright spot for Washington.

Quarterback Heath Shuler marked his return to the University of Tennessee's Neyland Stadium with a touchdown pass, but he threw it to Houston defensive back Chris Dishman.

That was the lowlight of a lamentable evening for Shuler, a former Tennessee star now in his second year with the Redskins. He completed his first two passes for 63 yards, but finished 3-for-11 for 74 yards, no scores and the interception. He played three possessions in the first half.

Gus Frerotte relieved and was little more effective. He finished 7-of-19 for 99 yards before getting the wind knocked out of him with 39 seconds to play. He returned as the holder on the winning kick.

Third-stringer Trent Green directed the winning scoring drive of 58 yards following the overtime kickoff. He ran 24 yards on a bootleg on a fourth-and-3 to set up Murray's winning kick.

The Oilers thus lost their first game in what could be their home for the next two seasons. Owner Bud Adams is negotiating with Tennessee officials to move the team to Nashville; if he does the Oilers would play either in Knoxville or Memphis in 1996 and '97 while a stadium is being built.

Houston starting quarterback Chris Chandler also threw a touchdown to the wrong team when Washington's Muhammed Oliver intercepted his pass on the Oilers' first possession.

Three for three

Texas A&M garners third No. 3 ranking in as many days with AP Poll votes

By Jimmy Burch
N.Y. Times News Service

For the third time in three days, Texas A&M was selected yesterday as the No.3 college football team in America.

This time, the Aggies were picked third by voters in The Associated Press' preseason rankings. It marked the Aggies' highest preseason start in an AP poll since 1957, when they were second. It is also the school's highest ranking by the wire service since Dec. 1, 1975, when A&M was No.2 before a season-ending 31-6 loss at Arkansas.

A&M received six of 62 first-place votes in balloting by sportswriters and broadcasters. The Aggies, with 11 starters returning from a 10-0-1 team, rank behind No.1 Florida State and No.2 Nebraska in the AP poll.

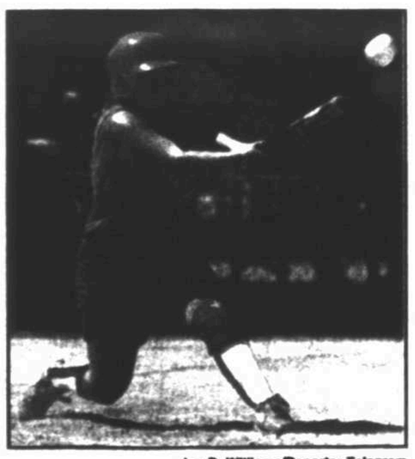

The same three schools were ranked in identical order in the preseason USA Today-CNN coaches' poll released Friday. A&M also was picked third by "Sports Illustrated," whose college football issue arrived at newsstands Friday.

With the Southwest Conference champion no longer tied to the Cotton Bowl, the Aggies' status in the two major polls will be pivotal to their national championship hopes during the 1995 season. The two highest-ranked teams available under guidelines of the Tier I bowl alliance will meet in the Fiesta Bowl on Jan.2.

The Aggies hope to be there, and starting at No.3 in the preseason poll will make the climb to the top that much shorter, coach R.C. Slocum said.

"We're where we'd like to be. I would much rather be ranked high and have those high expectations," said Slocum,

California teams get rematch in finals

■ Girls Fastpitch Softball

By Stewart Doreen
Sports Writer

Today's matchup in the winner's final of the Amateur Softball Association 16 and Under will be all too familiar for two California teams.

But for the neighboring Orange County (Calif.) Batbusters and Irvine Southern California Athletics, you can forget about the past. "It just depends who wants it more," said the Batbusters' Nikki Blackman. "We'll be so nervous, but we will try our hardest to pull together and relax. We know each other so well and play each other all year."

The two teams met in last year's winner's bracket final at the 14-Under ASA Nationals in Marietta, Ga. The Athletics came away with the win that time, but to getting back to the rematch would take some work.

Blackman did her part, pitching the Batbusters to a 3-2 win Saturday night over the Oregon Sun Supply. Blackman struck out four to win her second game of the tournament, but she got help early on from the offense which scored three runs in the first four innings

The Batbusters scored those runs with key hits in the third from Lindsay Fossatti and Jamie Clark, who had an RBI single. They got two more runs in the fourth with hits from Erin Tucker and Veronica Lopez. They also took advantage of an Oregon error to finish off the scoring.

"It takes pressure and stress off me,"

NIKE Permian Basin Open

Tournament purse, winner's share increased in fourth run of tourney

■ All three past tournament champions and 1993 Nike tour champion will tee off in fourth installment.

ODESSA — It's time again to put away the golf spikes and slip on your favorite pair of walking shoes.

The Nike Permian Basin Open is back again for the fourth time at The Club at Mission Dorado, and the best of the Nike tour will do battle to come away with this West Texas prize.

Activities take place all week starting Monday with qualifying at Ranchland Hills Country Club. Players will have practice rounds at Mission Dorado on Monday and Tuesday. Signups for Wednesday's Pro-Am tournament at Mission will be on Monday and Tuesday.

Stories by Stewart Doreen

Design by Amy Wolfenbarger

On Thursday play in the first round begins and runs through Sunday's final round.

"I'm definitely looking forward to getting back to Odessa, said 1993 champion Franklin Langham. "It gets better every year and the depths of the field have been unbelievable."

Langham joins 1992 champion Taylor Smith and defending champion, Bruce Vaughn, who has earned a spot of the PGA tour but tentatively decided to forgo the PGA event at the International in Castle Pines, Colo. to compete at Mission Dorado. 1993 Nike tour champion Sean Murphy of Lovington, NM, is the leader in career wins on the tour with six and will also come back to the Permian Basin.

The event will draw many of the other top Nike players, looking to stay on top of the tour's money list. The top ten on the money list at year's end automatically qualify for the PGA tour giving extra assurance to a quality field in Texas' only Nike stop. Right now, Jerry Kelly leads the money list with more than $150,000. Louisiana's David Toms is second , a little more than $2,000 dollars behind. Tom Scherrer, Chris Smith and Matt Peterson round out the top five.

The rest of the top ten consists of Allen Doyle, Stan Utley, Brad Fabel, Murphy and Langham, who is tenth at $83,127. But when you consider that the difference between the 10th and 18th is less than $20,000, there is still work to do for players like Langham.

"I guess that is how you look at it," said Langham. "I've been through the worst part of my year, so to be on the top 10 that is a good feeling, but no body is safe. You just have to play good. It can be pressure, but only if you put it on yourself."

Last year, Vaughn tamed the Mission Dorado course with a 269, 19-under-par score for a four-stroke victory to earn a first-place check of $31,500. This year, the winner's share will be $36,000 of a $200,000 purse (up from $150,000 in 1994).

This year the course, under the supervision of first-year superintendent Mitchell Kiser, could play more difficult. Though the Bermuda grass fairways and bent grass greens are still in excellent shape, there have been some alterations to make the course play tougher.

"I think it's going to play a little different," said Kiser. "We tried to put the emphasis on the course so it is more of a target golf setting. With our recontouring of the fairways, you would think it would increase somewhat. I feel good about the course."

And how good are the players on this tour? Well, consider that three major titles have been won by Nike's Alumni (John Daly and Ernie Els). Also, 18 PGA tour events overall have been taken by those off the Nike tour, including last week's Buick Open by Woody Austin.

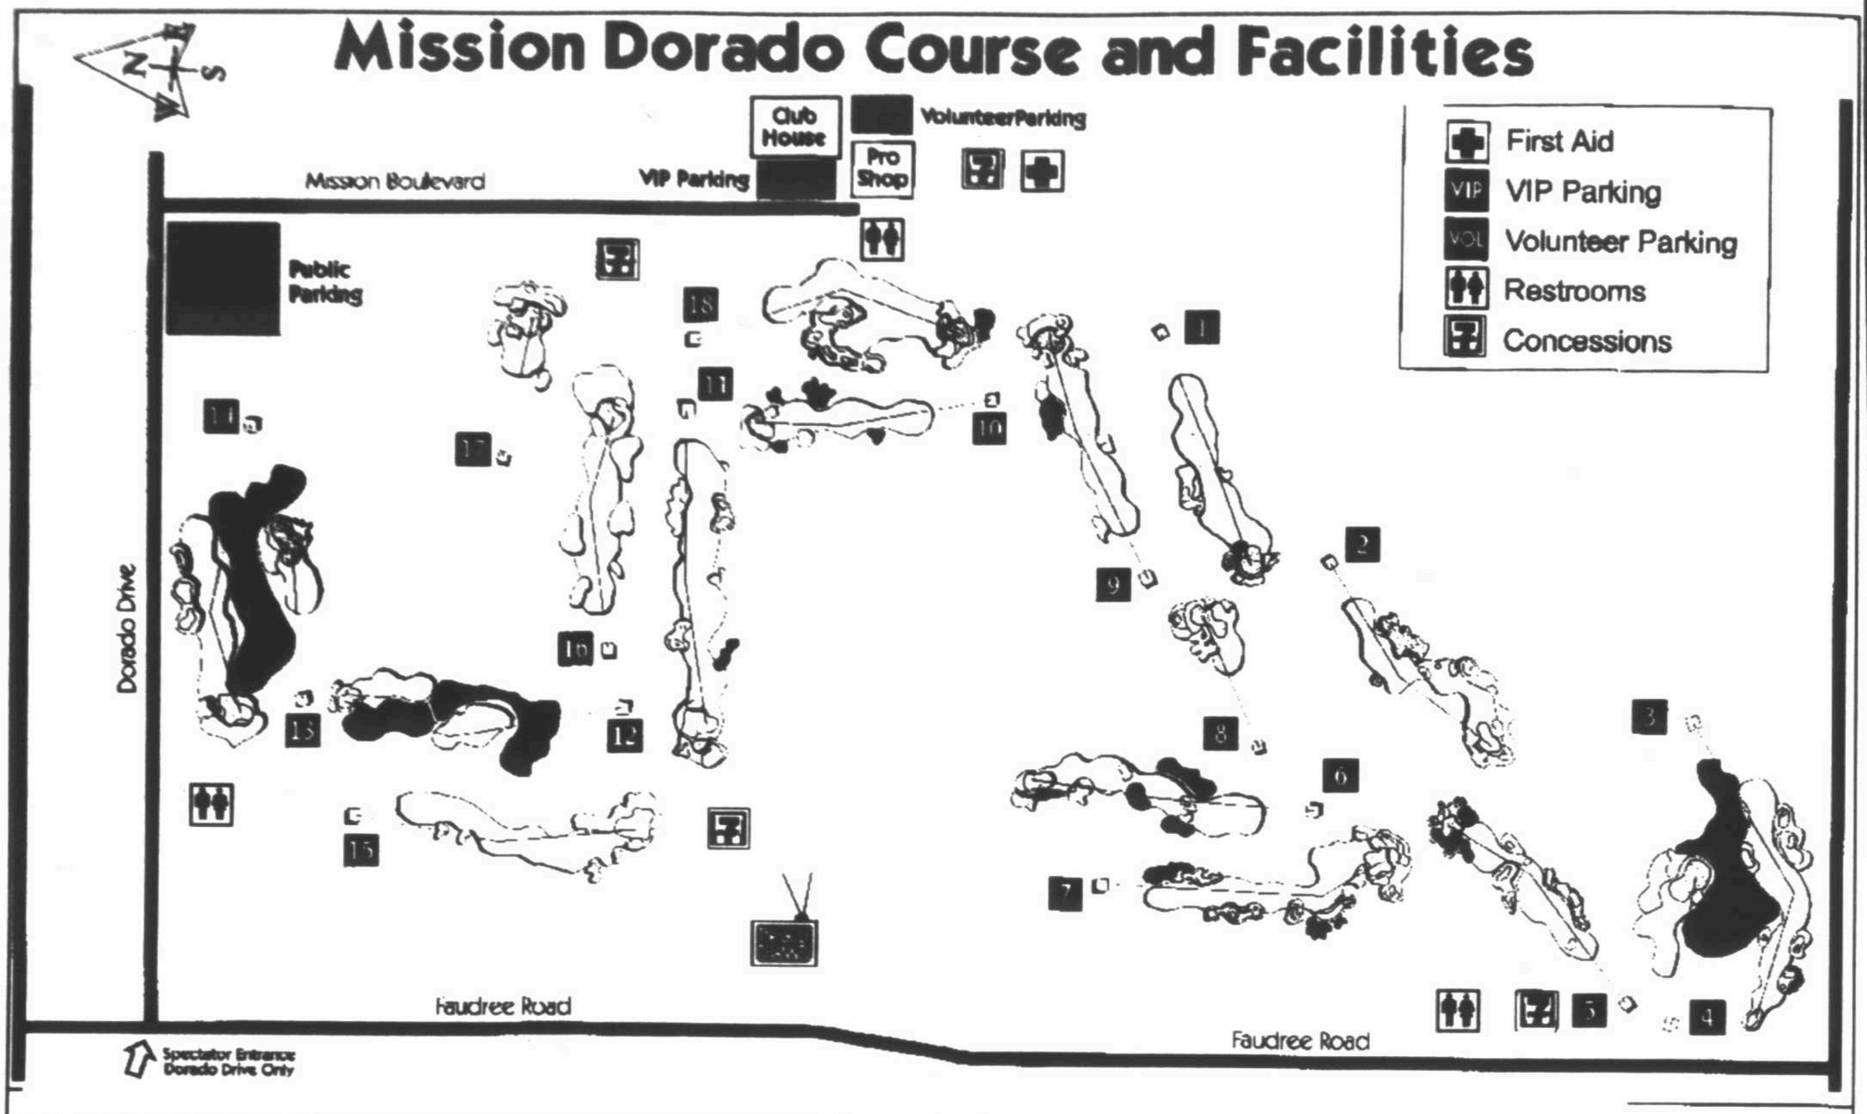

"It is a feeder system," said Bill Oakley, Manager of Sponsor Relations for the Nike Tour. "Golf doesn't have the numbers that the other sports have. It is harder to make the PGA tour than any other sport in the world with 250 players that own a tour card of some way or another.

"The 251st player in football is probably a millionaire, but the 251st player in professional golf will be on the Nike tour and be in Midland/Odessa."

For the Midland group that has brought the Nike event to the Permian Basin, there are lot of other positives about this year's tournament. It is Texas' lone event and the Golf Channel will broadcast all four rounds in 77 hours of coverage.

"The area will be pleased that we are the only stop in Texas in the Midland/Odessa area," said Glen Atkins, tournament chairman and President of the Medical Center Development Corporation. "Now that it is being televised the publicity is a real plus — publicity you couldn't buy. They can't get over the West Texas hospitality."

Another benefit is the community support for the tournament that in return gives back to its charities. In the past, the Nike Permian Basin Open has donated in excess of $40,000 to its charities like the Odessa's Medical Center Hospital, and this year, with a volunteer army of 400 to 500 people and the sponsorship of 7-Eleven, more money should find its way to the people who need it most.

Hole by Hole Preview

No. 1: This par-4 gives the golfers a chance to let loose with the driver right away and come away with a birdie. The virtually straight hole has no real threats even with a leftside fairway bunker and greenside bunker.

No. 2: This 370-yard dog leg left will give the golfer a choice off the tee. Some golfers will go right for the green off the tee. Others might use an iron and take their chances with a wedge from a zig zag fairway. Either way birdies are realistic.

No. 3: The first par-5 doglegs gradually to the right and will play all of the 585 into the prevailing wind. Water goes along the right side and lack of rough on the left side gives the golfers an opportunity to bail out. Greenside bunkers should gather any bad approach shots into the green.

No. 4: This par-3 three plays to a two-tiered green guarded by water and greenside bunkers that surround the one of the courses largest greens. A player may be forced to play for the center of the green, especially with the tricky pin positions that are expected.

No. 5: This par-4 that will give a chance to again the driver. The hole is straight and like the first is a very realistic bridie hole. The only problem might be pin position on the back tier of the green.

No. 6: This par-4 is a tougher driving hole but most problems for the golfer will come on the approach shot to the green. A bunker to the left of the green could cause problem, especially on Sunday's pin placement.

No. 7: This par-5 plays at 560 yards and usually plays into a stiff win. Reaching it in two will be a problem as will the many deep bunkers that surround the green. Birdie, however, will be the score many will walk away on one of the courses easiest holes.

No. 8: The par-3 will play long and will bring long irons out of the players' bags at the 195-yard hole that could play as long as 215. To make matters worse, a crossway green with a bunker in front will challenge the golfer to play left to right to get the ball close.

No. 9: This 445-yard par four again can play up to 475 yards if the tees are pushed back. However, the problem at this hole is a sloping green with bunkers in front and back that will punish bad shots.

No. 10: The back nine mimics the front nine with a 415 yard, par-4 that gives the golfers a chance to hit a long drive and come away with birdie with a good second shot to the large, triple-tiered green.

No. 11: This par-5 is dog-leg left, trying for those looking to make the cut or play themselves into contention on the last day. The 530-yard hole is reachable in two, but traps in the front and back of the green will catch many lackluster attempts.

No. 12: This fun par-4 is a dog leg right and irons will be choice of most golfers off the tee. Water that runs along the left of the 385-yard hole.

No. 13: The 205-yard par-3 starts the toughest two-hole combination on the course. With water guarding the front and bunkers to the front and back of the crossway green, dreams of winning or losing could start here.

No. 14: Last year, this par-4 played tougher than any other hole on the course with a 4.384 stroke average. Water on the right from tee to green forces a player to play right. This sets up a difficult shot to a green protected by the Mickey Mouse bunker. The 445-yard hole demands accuracy, and par not birdie should be the desired score.

No. 15: This par-5 starts with a drive to a narrow fairway. The 550-yard hole has water on the left and bunkers all around a three-tiered green.

No. 16: The par-4, 400 yard hole gives the player a last birdie chance. The fairly straight-away hole will pose no real threats to golfers looking for that last scoring punch.

No. 17: The shortest par-3 on the course played slightly above par last year probably due to the severe tiered green. Bunkers in front, behind and left also test the few remaining nerves left on Sunday.

No. 18: It is hard to imagine why this 465-yard hole plays over par, but it does. The finishing hole is a par-4, daring the golfer to try to fly a group of trees on the dogleg right. The generous green can offer difficult placements especially with the undulations in the middle.

Permian Basin Open

Past Winners: 1992-Taylor Smith, 1993-Franklin Langham, 1994-Bruce Vaughn, 1995-?

1994's Toughest Hole: The toughest hole during the last year's Nike Permian Basin Open was the par-4, 14th. The hole played at a 4.384 stroke average and yielded only 29 birdies, 92 bogeys and 43 scores at 6 and above. The par-4, 18th hole was a distant second, playing at a 4.195 stroke average.

1994's Easiest hole: Far and away, the easiest hole was the 11th. The vulnerable par-5 gave up only eight eagles, but also 178 birdies en route to a stroke average of 4.842. There were only 35 bogeys and five scores higher than 6. The runner up for next easiest hole was another par-5. The straight-away No. 7 had an average of 4.742.

1994's lowest-scoring round: Want to make the cut? Well, so does everyone else and that is why last year's second round had the most golfers finish under-par. Compared to 62 in the first round, 74 golfers finished below par with 39 scoring below 70.

Tournament Past

1992: Taylor Smith's second-round 66 paved the way for the 1992 Ben Hogan Permian Basin Open title. The six-under round gave him a one-stroke lead over Stephen Ames and Pete Jordan. A final-round 68 gave him a three-day score of 204 (-12) and a one-stroke victory over Jordan and Andrew Morse. Smith picked up a cool $30,000 for his efforts.

1993: Franklin Langham won the 1993 Nike Permian Basin Open in the tournament's first-ever playoff. After the Langham and Doug Martin finished regulation play at 202 (-14), Langham birdied the first playoff hole to win $27,000.

1994: The Nike Permian Basin Open expanded play to four rounds, but that did stop Bruce Vaughan from shooting sub-70 rounds in each and every round. Vaughn won his second Nike tournament of the year with a 19-under-par, 269 total, finishing four strokes ahead of two players. Vaughn also pocketed $31,500.

Proving Ground?

The Nike Proving Ground: Think the players on the Nike tour can't win on the PGA tour? Think again! The Alumni list of the Nike tour includes names like Daly, Els, Maggert, Lehman.

John Daly has two of golf's majors (the 1991 PGA Championship and the 1995 British Open) and two other events on the PGA tour.

Ernie Els is one of golf's up and coming superstars with the 1994 U.S. Open and 1995 Bryon Nelson Classic as his tour wins.

Tom Lehman has won two PGA tournaments (the 1994 Memorial Tournament and 1995 Colonial National Invitational).

In all, 13 Nike Alumni tour players have won 19 events on the PGA tour.

Golf Channel makes West Texas broadcast

It is the world's first cable network devoted to the great game of golf, and the 1995 Nike Permian Basin Open is a stop for the Golf Channel.

"Locally, it is a feather in the cap of the tournament (it broadcasts from)," said Bill Oakley, Manager of Sponsor Relations for the Nike Tour. "It does a first class job, and does more coverage than the networks do."

When the Golf Channel started its relationship with the Nike Tour at this year's Nike Pensacola Classic, you would have thought the Gods or the most powerful TV executives weren't exactly happy. Rain drenched the course, but the broadcast and tournament went on with the whole four rounds and had Clearance Rose, for PGA tour member, as the champion.

Now, the Golf Channel has six tournaments under its belt and is getting stronger in terms of production and marketing ability. This is with the hope of reaching the 24.5 million people who play golf (11.3 of whom play more than eight rounds a year).

I think it is going better than we thought," said Mark Oldham, Golf Channel's Vice President of Tournament affairs. "Our first six Nike events went very well. We'll have 77 hours of televised golf. We feel good about the coverage and that we can put our telecasts up against anyone around."

Marketing is another area that have the people at the Golf Channel excited. It can be seen in the homes of nine million people, thanks to the satellite dish, Direct TV and some cable companies around the country that offer it as a premium channel or a part of basic cable.

Oldham feels improved technology will let more cable stations offer more channels and telecommunications regulations, and that will open opportunities for telephone companies to move into the cable business. This will put the golf channel into more homes in the future.

"We knew it wouldn't be overnight," Oldham said. "We are signing cable operations every day. We have 9 million homes right now. We will increase that by the end of the year.

"There are a lot if systems that would like to carry the Golf Channel but couldn't due to technology."

The Golf Channel, the $80 million investment co-founded by Arnold Palmer and Joe Gibbs (not the former NFL coach) offers instructional nightly programming, in-depth programming, nightly golf-only newscasts similar to ESPN's Sports Center, a travel segment, call-in show, weekly tournament coverage of selected Nike, LPGA and PGA tour events.

"The mission of the golf channel is to expose the sport," said Oldham. "Our target audience are those people who are golfers. There are also those who like watching golf on TV who don't play."

Like its big brother on the PGA Tour, a big part of the Nike tour is doing its part to raise money for local charities, accumulating $7 million dollars since its inception.

The Nike Permian Basin Open is no different. This year's tournament will benefit the Pediatric Special Care Unit and the expansion of children's services at Odessa's Medical Center Hospital. The PCSU provides health care to patients who require constant observation. Since the Permian Basin Open started in 1992, the tournament has raised $40,000 for the medical center which should benefit all of the Permian Basin.

"It goes to fill the need in pediatrics and child care," said Glen Atkins, Tournament Chairman and President of the Medical Center Development Corporation. "It was set up to take care of the children's needs in the hospital. We have the equipment for people around the Permian Basin, so they won't have to go to far away."

The Permian Basin Open will also make a $5,000 donation to the Boys and Girls Clubs of Odessa.

Like the PGA, which has raised $250 million over the years, the Nike Tour is firm behind its belief in helping its communities.

This year the Nike tour is hoping to raise $1 million, said Atkins. "Nike is really high on charity."

Helping the Permian Basin Open is the presenting sponsor, 7-Eleven. The convenience store chain has taken care of the event, giving an additional $50,000 to help the tournament with costs. That helps Medical Center Hospital generate more revenue for the charities. Add to that the work of the 400 to 500 volunteers and increased prize money and support and the tourney should continue to raise more money.

"When we got into it, the purse was quite less," said Atkins. "You need that type of support to hold a tournament. It has to be a whole community activity."

Richard Myers, who finished third, made it a clean sweep for Midland in that division. Terry Bates finished seventh. Vasquez won the spectator drags division while Pyle finished second.

ASA: Winner's bracket finals set for today

(From 1B)

Blackman said. "It's easier for a pitcher if the team scores runs for you. Our team is capable of doing that for me."

Oregon was able to score two runs on four hits in the bottom of the sixth, but that would not be enough to take down the California team.

In the tourney's other semifinal, the Athletics jumped on the Gordon's Panthers for two runs in the first three innings. Keying both efforts was Shauna Chapin. Chapin hit a 2-2 offering from the Panthers' Amanda Freed and drove it in to left field, scoring Nicole Thompson. In the bottom of the third, Chapin smacked a double to left to score Shealee Dunavan to make the score 2-0.

The Panthers, who hammered the America's Pastime for 18 hits earlier Saturday, got one run back in the top of the fourth when Rian Standley singled to drive in Adrienne Ratajczak.

The Panthers then tied the game in the top of the seventh when Christy Ring's infield single off scored Jennifer Spigner.

Instead of hanging their heads, the Athletics shot back with by loading the bases in the bottom of the seventh, setting the stage for Steph Tolton. Tolton took an offering from the Panthers' Kristi Martin and singled to center to score Dunavan.

"There was definitely pressure," said Tolton who went 3-for-4 in the game. "I was just thinking I got to get on and I got to get a hit. Then I relaxed and just struck the ball."

Tolton also said the team's confidence was not shaken by the Panthers' comeback.

"It wasn't hard to comeback," Tolton said. "Our pitcher did a great job holding them and the team did a great job.

The Athletics and the Batbusters will meet today at 8 a.m. in the winner's bracket final. The winner will clinch its spot in the 1:30 p.m. championship game. The loser will have to meet the winner of the 9:15 a.m. loser's bracket final game. That third-place game will begin at 11:30.

■ In Saturday's quarterfinal, the Gordon's Panthers did what no other team had done in the tournament, score on America's Pastime. The Panthers not only scored but blasted 18 hits in the 10-1 win.

■ Nicole Di Salvio, of the Southern California Athletics, threw and two hitter and struck out 10 Colorado Legend hitters in the A's 14-0 win.

■ Oregon Sun Supply beat the Southern Streaks 2-1, but it was the pitchers who proved dominant. Oregon's Crystal Draper had 16 strikeouts while the Ashley Lewis had 12 K's in the losing effort.

■ The strike-out happy Britni Sneed, 15, just keeps on going. The Houstonian had fired 59 strikeouts in first five games for the Hit-N-Run team.

ANGELS: Arias bat finally comes around with 2 doubles, homer

struckout the side after putting the first two runners on in the third and had a strikeout to end the Midland fourth.

He did give up a two-run homer to Midland slugger George Arias, who extended his Texas League homer lead to 29, one short of the Midland franchise record held by four others.

Arias came into the game with only two homers since July 20 and was hitting at a meager .186 clip during that span that also coincides with the departure of cleanup hitter Todd Greene to Vancouver. Since moving up, Greene is hitting .253 at Triple-A with 10 homers and 21 RBIs in just 22 games.

The return of the Arias bat was the good news for the Angels.

"Arias is a good fastball hitter, but he got hold of one of my sliders. I knew it was going out when it was hit. I was just hoping it would hit the top of the fence," Granger said.

Midland leadoff hitter Orlando Munoz drove in three runs for Midland, including a two-run single in the second.

It was also old Southwest Conference night with an Aggie and Longhorn going against each other. That battle was pretty much a draw. Midland shortstop Tim Harkrider (the former Longhorn) got two hits against Granger, and infield hit and a double, but also struckout twice.

"Harkrider played with Texas two of the three years I was at A&M. They beat me 21-7 one game, so I've been known to give up a few runs to them," Granger said.

ANGEL DUST: Wichita plays its final 15 games at home to make up for the long road trip to open the season... Midland is a little short on the bench. Luis Raven was "designated for assignment" after being taken off California's 40-man roster and is not eligible to play again until Aug. 18... Outfielder Steve Hosey has been promoted to Triple-A Vancouver... Midland has now lost three games in a row and now is seven games out of first place with 18 games to play... The series continues tonight at 7 p.m...

DALLAS: Cowboy starters outplayed Bills starters but could not score on 11 carries before leaving with the starters.

"We came into the ballgame wanting to run the ball," Aikman said. "The plan was to work Emmitt into the game early. The offensive line did a nice job opening up some holes, and Emmitt did a nice job running."

Buffalo (1-2) scored on a 44-yard field goal by Steve Christie in the second quarter and a 29-yarder by Steve Kratz in the third. Christie added a 22-yarder with 2:41 remaining in the game. Dallas' touchdown came on a 5-yard run by Sherman Williams with 19 seconds left in the game.

Dallas' starters outplayed Buffalo's in the first quarter but could not score.

The Cowboys were unable to capitalize in the first half after Bill Bates recovered Ken Irvin's fumbled punt at the 22. A penalty pushed the Cowboys back 10 yards, and four players later, Jon Baker pushed a 28-yard field goal attempt wide right.

"We made too many mistakes on offense," Dallas coach Barry Switzer said. "We had plenty of opportunities to score in the first half, but we didn't take advantage of them."

POLL: Florida State, Nebraska 1-2

who termed a national championship a "realistic goal" for his team. "But a lot of factors are involved with winning the national championship over which I have no control. Penn State went 12-0 last year and did it in style, but they still didn't win it.

"I'd like for these players to get a shot at it. To me, it would be a pride thing to get a Texas team back on top. When you say Texas high school football is the best, it would be a way to back it up with your play on the field."

Jays at 'Witt's' end in pitcher's return

The Associated Press

■ AL Roundup

ARLINGTON — Bobby Witt celebrated his return to Texas by taking a shutout into the seventh inning, and the Rangers beat the Toronto Blue Jays 6-3 Saturday night.

Witt, 68-72 for Texas from 1986-92, won in his first appearance for the Rangers since they got him from Florida on Aug. 8 in a trade for pitcher Wilson Heredia and another minor leaguer. Witt was 2-7 with a 3.90 ERA in 19 starts for the Marlins. He earned his first win for the Rangers since July 25, 1992, by allowing two runs and five hits in six-plus innings. He struck out six and walked three.

Twins 6, Angels 4

MINNEAPOLIS — Rookie Jose Parra held baseball's highest scoring team to three hits over six innings to win his first major league game as Minnesota beat California. Parra (1-0), obtained July 31 from the Los Angeles Dodgers in a trade for Kevin Tapani and Mark Guthrie, retired 12 of the first 14 batters he faced.

Athletics 8, White Sox 2

CHICAGO — Terry Steinbach had four hits and four RBIs and Todd Van Poppel got his first win as a starter in more than a year as Oakland beat Chicago.

Van Poppel (2-4) picked up his first victory as a starter since last Aug. 7 by allowing five hits and two runs over seven innings with two walks and seven strikeouts. His other victory this season came in relief as his first 21 appearances came out of the bullpen.

Yankees 3, Indians 2

NEW YORK — Jack McDowell threw 142 pitches and kept New York from turning to its beleaguered bullpen Saturday night, ending the Yankees' four-game losing streak with a 3-2 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

Cleveland had won three in a row from New York, coming back each time — including twice in the ninth against closer John Wetteland.

Tigers 8, Brewers 2

MILWAUKEE — Lou Whitaker hit a three-run homer and Jose Lima earned his first major league victory as Detroit beat Milwaukee, snapping a four-game skid. Whitaker's three-run shot capped a four-run, two-out rally off Jamie McAndrew as Detroit went ahead a 5-2 in the fifth. He also had an RBI single in a three-run seventh.

Royals 7, Mariners 2

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Kevin Appier, making his first start since July 25, gave up two hits in six scoreless innings and Kansas City's rookie-laden lineup beat Seattle. The Royals, who shocked their fans the night before when they unloaded veterans like Vince Coleman and Pat Borders and brought up four rookies, started five first-year players against Tim Belcher (8-7).

Red Sox 7, Orioles 0

BOSTON — Roger Clemens struck out a season-high nine for his first win in nearly a month, leading Boston to its 10th straight victory, 7-0 over Baltimore.

The Orioles have lost 10 of 13 games since July 30 to fall 13 games behind first-place Boston. On July 30, they were in second place just 4 1/2 games behind.

Any AL East contenders not already scared off by the Red Sox winning streak will now have to take notice that Clemens is playing better.

■ NL Roundup

HOUSTON — The Astros snapped their six-game losing streak and ended New York's six-game winning streak, beating the Mets 3-1 Saturday night and getting a save from Mike Henneman in his first appearance for Houston.

Mike Simms hit a two-run homer and Mike Hampton allowed just four hits over seven innings before Houston turned to its new bullpen rotation.

Former closer Todd Jones pitched a pitched a perfect eighth and Henneman, acquired Thursday from the Detroit Tigers, took over for the ninth. The right-hander allowed a pair of singles, but the game ended on a fly ball to center on which Rico Brogna was doubled off second by John Cangelosi.

Hampton (8-4) gave up a single to Tim Bogar in the first inning but didn't allow another hit until Chris Jones led off the seventh with a single. Hampton struck out six and walked three.

Expos 4, Phillies 3

PHILADELPHIA — Darrin Fletcher homered and Jeff Fassero allowed only one earned run in eight innings as Montreal beat Philadelphia.

Fletcher went 2-for-5 and scored twice to make a winner of Fassero (11-9), who allowed six hits and struck out seven while walking five. Dave Leiper got the game's final out for his second save as the Expos won for the fourth time in their last five contests.

Rockies 16, Braves 4

ATLANTA — Andres Galarraga and Larry Walker hit three-run homers Saturday night as the Colorado Rockies beat the Atlanta Braves for just the fourth time in 32 games, 16-4.

Vinny Castilla and Ellis Burks hit two-run homers during a seven-run eighth inning, helping Colorado set a club record for runs on the road.

Marlins 7, Reds 3

MIAMI — Kurt Abbott hit his second inside-the-park home run in four days and Florida extended its winning streak to five games by beating Cincinnati.

Following Abbott's three-run blow in the second inning, Bob Natal hit the next pitch over the left-field fence for his first homer since July 4, 1993. Natal added two-run double in the eighth, giving him a career-high three RBIs.

Martin hopes The Glen is still his track; De Ferran sixth at Miller 200

The Associated Press

WATKINS GLEN, N.Y. — Despite his success at Watkins Glen International, Mark Martin figures there are no givens on the Winston Cup circuit.

"I've been racing a long time. If you want to win, which is the only reason I race, it never gets easier," said Martin, aiming to win from the pole Sunday for the third straight year in the Budweiser at the Glen.

As usual, consistency, patience and a bit of luck are likely to decide the outcome at the 11-turn road course, where newly repaved corners and a sturdier Goodyear tire will bring faster laps.

In qualifying trials Friday, Martin turned in a speed of 120.411 mph, a full 1.293 seconds faster than his qualifying lap record in 1993. Next to him on the front-row grid is Bill Elliott, a 1988 Winston Cup champion with just one victory since 1992.

"When Bill ran what he ran (120.332), I said, 'Phew, that's going to be tough,'" Martin said Saturday. "So I just went out there and got my best lap. That was enough, just barely enough."

Thirteen drivers beat the old qualifying mark of 119.118, notably Jeff Gordon in fifth place and Ricky Rudd, the only other two-time Glen winner, in seventh.

Miller Genuine Draft 200

LEXINGTON, Ohio — Jacques Villeneuve held on to the pole position for today's Miller Genuine Draft 200, even though he appeared on the track only briefly to ready his race-day tires.

Villeneuve had broken the track record Friday with a fast lap of 121.192 mph on the 13-turn, 2 1/4-mile Mid-Ohio road course. He stayed in the pits until about 8 1/2 minutes remained in Saturday's 30-minute qualifying session, drove two laps, pitted, changed tires for one more lap.

Bryan Herta, whose best lap Friday was 120.150, will start alongside Villeneuve in the first row.

Michael Andretti qualified third at 120.065, and Mauricio Gugelmin, fourth Friday, retained that spot Saturday and boosted his speed slightly to 119.326.

The Associated Press

■ NFL Roundup

CLEMSON, S.C. — The Denver Broncos' revamped defense returned to its 1994 form, and the result was a 19-10victory for Carolina in their inaugural home exhibition game.

The Broncos, who had the NFL's worst defense last season, gave up two big passing plays that helped the expansion Panthers to a 16-point second quarter.

All that didn't help as the Panthers, playing in front of 57,017 rowdy fans, rolled through the Denver defense for 161 second-quarter yards, one touchdown pass and three field goals.

Eagles 13, Jets 10

JACKSON, Miss. — Third-string quarterback Jay Fiedler led Philadelphia to a field goal in his only series as the Eagles beat the New York in an exhibition game.

Fielder drove the Eagles 91 yards, primarily against the Jets' third-team defense, on the opening drive of the fourth quarter. He completed a 37-yard pass to Derrick Witherspoon and Charlie Garner had a 34-yard carry to set up Gary Anderson's 28-yard field goal.

Patriots 21, Vikings 14

FOXBORO, Mass. — Hassan Graham and Scott Zolak connected on a 67-yard touchdown pass play with 2:40 left in the fourth quarter Saturday as the New England beat Minnesota.

Jay Kirchoff's 43-yard field goal 26 seconds earlier had given the Vikings a 14-13 lead, capping a comeback from a 13-3 deficit.

After the late TD, New England (1-1) pushed the lead to seven points when Zolak threw a 2-point conversion pass to Andre President.

Bobby Phillips' 1-yard run at 6:39 of the fourth quarter and Chad May's conversion pass to Chris Walsh brought Minnesota (1-1) to 13-11. Key to the drive was Vernon Lewis' pass interference penalty on third and 13 at the Patriots 25, which gave Minnesota a first down at the 1.

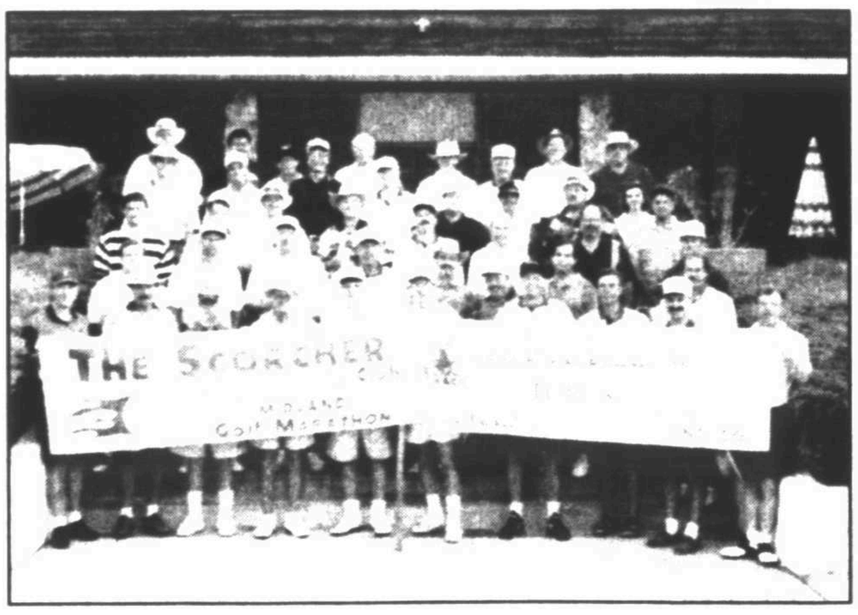

Bledsoe, who was 13 of 19 for 153 yards, threw his touchdown pass to Brisby 47 seconds into the second quarter.

Additional security is necessary step

Although the tighter security imposed on the nation's airports will likely mean delays and in some cases inconvenience for some air travelers during coming months, that was the only reasonable course in light of concerns for security raised by law enforcement and intelligence agencies.

Security was tightened beginning Wednesday at airports — including Midland International Airport — after Transportation Secretary Federico Pena announced the measures were needed "in order to prevent and deter any possible criminal or terrorist acts."

While authorities did not reveal any specific threat that had been received, there are ample reasons to justify a prudent tightening of security at airports. Among them, the upcoming visit of Pope John Paul II to the United States, the meeting of the United Nations General Assembly next month, the recent arrest of alleged Islamic terrorist leader Mousa Abu Marzuk and the continuing New York trial of 11 people charged with conspiring to plot terrorist acts.

In fact with the bombing of the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building in Oklahoma City on April 19, the fear of additional terrorism is much greater today — whether carried out by foreign or home-grown terrorists. So it makes sense for the federal government to issue a mandate to tighten security measures at airports and other facilities if officials have reason to suspect forthcoming acts of terrorism.

As we noted earlier, after the Oklahoma City bombing, there is a definite reason now for Americans to fear the growth of terroristic acts in this country. This tightening of security may be the first of the ways in which the nation begins to adjust to the greater threat of terrorism today.

Land mines prevent return of refugees

WASHINGTON — Most of the world's 20 million refugees would love to return home, yet for many of them a single evil stands in their way: land mines.

The world is in the midst of a mine crisis. Experts at the United Nations estimate there are about 100 million active land mines in the world today, spread across 62 countries. These mines kill or injure more than 26,000 people each year, mostly in Third World countries that have been beset by civil war or other strife.

Anderson

One-third of the victims are children. In many cases, these deadly weapons continue to take life and limb indiscriminately long after the conflicts they were designed for have subsided.

Nobody is more passionate about the subject than U.N. Secretary General Boutros Boutros-Ghali, who notes that mines are often placed in commercial or civilian areas rather than military venues to prevent innocent people from moving about.

"There is a global land mine crisis going on, and we need to do more about it," he told our associate Dale Van Atta in a recent interview. "They put them everywhere — in village fields, so the people have been fearful to plant crops, at power stations, in water treatment plants — everywhere. So even when people want to return home, they can't. They must wait for the mines to be cleared and that is taking longer than we hoped."

Cambodia is a good case in point. Ravaged for years by fighting between the Khmer Rouge and other factions, the country has since become a symbol of triumph for U.N. peacekeepers. After peace was restored several years ago, the U.N. launched a largely successful program to repatriate all Cambodian refugees by promising land. But they had to renege because so much land was unusable because of mines. So the United Nations simply paid out cash grants of $50 per adult and $25 per child for returning.

The United States currently contributes a lion's share of the nearly $40 million that the U.N. spends each year on the effort. Though Boutros-Ghali wouldn't say so, his aides claim he is very disappointed at the small amounts of money that donor nations — particularly those that produced the mines in the first place — are willing to give to the demining effort.

Without international assistance, U.N. officials note, the mine problem is only going to get worse. In Cambodia, where one of every 236 citizens is an amputee due to mine blasts, an estimated 7- to 9-million mines remain scattered across the countryside.

The U.N. estimates the total cost for removing a single mine is between $200 and $1,000. Since Cambodia's annual per capita Gross Domestic Product is only $200 per person, that means the cost of demining would take every penny produced in the economy for the next one to five years.

Even countries that can afford demining find they can't do it fast enough. At a cost of $700 million, the Kuwaiti government has cleared more than 1.6 million mines since the end of the Gulf War. But the effort claimed the lives of 84 workers, and more mines still remain.

While the U.S. government and U.N. officials are trying to reduce the problem, more mines are being laid — at the rate of 500,000 to 1 million a year. Experts estimate that $33 billion would be required to remove all the mines worldwide, but at the current pace it would take more than 1,000 years to do it — and that's only if new mines are not planted.

In many cases, the demining effort has failed to gain the attention of the very people it would benefit. U.N. demining chief Patrick Blagden told us of a recent project in Cambodia where mine fields were marked with plastic signs.

"But soon we found the villagers were taking them to use them as roof tiles," Blagden said. "So we poked holes in them to make them permeable, but they still disappeared. Now we sometimes mark the minefields with stones colored with paint, and they aren't removed as rapidly."

Americans lose inspiration for great projects

HOOVER DAM, in Nevada and Arizona — First, the Colorado River had to be temporarily moved. And it was. Then, thousands of men working in three shifts around the clock every day except Christmas and the Fourth of July, and paid $6 a day — from which $1.60 was subtracted for food, housing and transportation — poured 4.4 million cubic yards of concrete, enough to pave a highway 16 feet wide from New York to San Francisco. They did this in less than four years, finishing two years ahead of schedule, 60 years ago this summer.

Will

Let us now praise those who conceived and executed this still breathtaking marvel in the Black Canyon. And let us pause during this season of discontent with the federal government and all its works to consider what we have lost that the country had when it had a will for such great works.

The dam is named for the president who was an engineer and who encouraged the project. He was secretary of commerce in 1922 when the Colorado River Compact allocated the river among the states it serves. Today half the population of the West is to some extent dependent on the river he helped subdue.

The dam, says an inscription here, was "inspired by a vision of lonely lands made fruitful." Back then, even the Los Angeles basin was relatively lonely. Today Southern California and Arizona are the biggest users of the electric power generated here. Just down the road there is a novel form of fruitfulness — the fastest growing city in the nation: Las Vegas, population 1 million. In 1935 its population was about 7,000.

Behind the dam — 660 feet thick at its base — is 110 miles of Lake Mead, enough water to cover Pennsylvania a foot deep. Construction of the dam cost the lives of 110 men, some of them victims of heat prostration in temperatures that often topped 125 degrees deep in the canyon. Flood control, irrigation, power generation, water storage — the dam serves many functions. But could it be built today?

Perhaps, if it did not unduly inconvenience some cousin of the snail darter, and if all the impact statements and racial set-asides could be negotiated before everyone decided the whole thing was too much trouble. But back then, before it was considered correct to be a conscientious objector to the "conquest" of nature, America had an appetite for big conquering projects.

As the dam was being completed trains were rolling west from Pittsburgh carrying steel beams bearing banners that proclaimed "Bound for the Golden Gate Bridge," which was completed in 1937. The bridge, like the dam, expressed the soul of the nation as Stephen Vincent Benet had sung it:

We made this thing, this dream,
This land unsatisfied by little ways.

Or by slow paces. Around 1940, when the government got interested in atomic physics, it asked some leading scientists what they needed. They asked for $6,000 worth of graphite. By 1944 investment in the Manhattan Project equaled investment in the prewar automobile industry.

In the 1950s the first Republican president since Hoover produced the biggest public works project in the nation's history to that point: the Interstate Highway System had been born in the brain of young Maj. Eisenhower in 1921 when he was assigned to take a convoy across the country to test equipment and demonstrate the inadequacies of the nation's roads.

In 1969 the Apollo Project fulfilled a government vow made in 1961. In 1995 the movie "Apollo 13" is thrilling audiences for whom the exhilaration of collective achievement through government is but a rumor about long ago.

Speaker Gingrich recently called for "rethinking how we mobilize the American people." He said:

"We need a series of large projects. You don't hold together the free people of the planet by small things: 'Let's get another 30,000 thousand cars in this year.' That's not exactly a noble battle cry. ... We ought to be back on the moon. We ought to be on Mars. And we ought to do it with all the free nations of the planet participating, so that we build a momentum of the human race. ... "

Many people will be surprised, and certain kinds of conservatives will be scandalized, by the speaker's belief that government is competent for, and has a duty to attempt, the peacetime mobilization of people for projects explicitly designed to elicit nobility through collective action. His belief is incompatible with the agenda of those conservatives who are bent on instilling indiscriminate skepticism about government's utility.

But he has much modern American history on his side. It is as clear as black and white — the soaring affirmation of glistening white concrete, shimmering in the desert sun between the black canyon walls.

Social Security woes gone with age hike

As it is, Social Security is not a retirement program; it is what the name suggests, a program to ensure some economic security in the twilight years; it is supported by taxes, not investments.

Obviously, future benefits could be covered by raising taxes but they would be intolerably high. Benefits could be cut to match the expected income.

The idea of cutting benefits strikes fear in the hearts of citizens already on Social Security and others who are counting on the benefits in a few years. They need not worry.

But for citizens who are Rep. (Steve) Largent's age (40), a cut in benefits would be expressed in simply raising the retirement age. And, to use the good congressman's personal situation even further, wealthy citizens such as him should be subjected to a means test.

Americans live and work much longer today than they did in 1935. Age 70 today is certainly comparable to 65 in 1935.

Americans are wealthier by far than they were in 1935. A total 12 percent payroll tax would have been impossible politically and practically in 1935. It is not today.

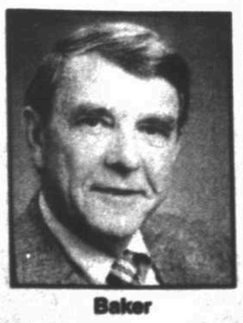

Most, if not all, of the Social Security problems will disappear if the age at which benefits begin is gradually raised.

Seawolf submarine is another make-work project

When you heard the Senate had voted to spend $1.5 billion to buy another Seawolf submarine you doubtless said to yourself, "The Seawolf — isn't that the gigantic submarine built to keep the Soviet Union from conquering the free world?"

Baker

Then, unless I miss my guess, you said, "Sure it is, but hasn't the Soviet Union gone with the wind?"

If you are careful like me you thought to yourself, "I'd better check on that," and after doing just that you probably shouted: "By George, I thought so! The cold war is over, the Soviet Union is kaput, and the free world is safe at last."

Went to bed feeling terrific, didn't you? Maybe had a nightcap before turning in. "Just a little toddy to celebrate the end of the cold war," you probably said to a spouse.

Then you woke up at 3:30 a.m. Sat right up in bed. Remember what you wanted to yell? "Why are we spending $1.5 billion on a submarine to fight a defunct menace?"

For weeks you'd read about cutting. Cut spending for life's losers. Cut this, cut that. Cut, cut, cut. Cutting was chic. Great — as long as they weren't cutting you. Great! So why buy a $1.5 billion submarine for a war that was over and won?

So you woke a sleeping spouse saying, "I'm going to break down and cry." Probably babbled a little: "Superfluous sub. Defunct Soviet menace. One and one-half billion dollars."

And that calm spousal voice said, "If you'd read the newspapers, darling, all would be clear, for you would know that Senator Lieberman, D-Conn., has said the Seawolf submarine 'will insure continued undersea superiority, a position the United States cannot give up.'"

Talk about making one thing perfectly clear! How right the Senator was. The United States must never yield undersea superiority to anyone. Suppose Qaddafi or Saddam or some ayatollah, some Captain Nemo in a tarboush was out there in the deep at this very moment with a submarine right out of Jules Verne.

We already have two Seawolf subs to stop him, but this third one with the $1.5 billion price tag — hah, Qaddafi! — you'll think long and hard now, my friend. After this you probably slept like $1.5 billion.

I'm not sure, though, that you're as humane as I am. Maybe you didn't wake up next morning as clear-headed and warm-hearted as I did. With night's fog lifted from my brain I clearly saw that the $1.5 billion Seawolf vote was not about submarines at all. It was about keeping working people from losing their jobs.

Building unnecessary submarines provides work for thousands of people in Connecticut and Rhode Island. Stop the Seawolf and all those families suffer. Like a lot of Pentagon spending these days, the Seawolf is a government make-work project.

In the Depression when Washington spent heavily to make jobs that might save families from despair, conservatives denounced this sort of thing as "boondoggling." It is the very essence of the big-hearted old New Deal in its assumption that government ought to try to help victims of its economic policies.

My question next morning, however, as I silently applauded the Senate's decision, was whether $1.5 billion couldn't buy us something more useful than a submarine.

For instance: I had just cut my hand trying to open a cardboard milk carton with a butcher knife. You know these milk cartons. "To open," they always say, "Push up here." Sometimes they open when pushed up there, often they don't, so you have to go in with cold steel and fingernails.

Surely an industry that can build those magnificent submarines can provide America with an easy-to-open cardboard milk container.

Another obvious need: My car has developed a sound suggesting the entire bottom is about to fall off, but its source is a mystery. These great New England sub builders, so wise in the art of sound detection, should easily be able to design and build a mysterious-car-noise detector which fits into an auto dashboard and instantly points to the exact location of any untoward sound.

Thousands of such useful industrial miracles ought to be rolling out of refitted defense plants where ingenuity and skill are now frittered away in boondoggles. Is the government afraid that if it doesn't kill, America can't make it anymore?

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's Highlight in History:

On August 13, 1961, Berlin was divided as East Germany sealed off the border between the city's eastern and western sectors in order to halt the flight of refugees. Two days later, work began on the Berlin Wall.

On this date:

In 1704, the Battle of Blenheim was fought during the War of the Spanish Succession, resulting in a victory for English and Austrian forces.

In 1846, the American flag was raised for the first time in Los Angeles.

In 1899, movie director Alfred Hitchcock was born in London.

In 1910, Florence Nightingale, the founder of modern nursing, died in London.

In 1932, Adolf Hitler rejected the post of vice-chancellor of Germany, saying he was prepared to hold out "for all or nothing."

In 1946, author H.G. Wells died in London.

In 1960, the first two-way telephone conversation by satellite took place with the help of Echo I.

In 1989, searchers in Ethiopia found the wreckage of a plane that had disappeared almost a week earlier while carrying Texas Congressman Mickey Leland and 15 other people — there were no survivors.

Mexico to bear its part of corridor cost

With reference to Hugh White's recent letter, we appreciate very much his conclusion that the development of a freeway connecting Interstate 10 along the route proposed by MOTRAN "makes economic sense." However, we believe that we need to clarify and correct White's understanding of what is being proposed by the governor's office of the State of Chihuahua.

The concept, construction and financing of the Mexican portion of the "La Entrada al Pacifico" corridor is being handled solely by Mexico. The idea and plans for highway additions in Mexico were initiated by the Economic Development Department of the state of Chihuahua, and it was their decision to direct the corridor to the Port of Topolabampo on the Pacific.

The cost of the Mexican portion of the corridor would be borne by Mexico. Motran has never suggested otherwise.

Based on indications from TxDot officials our belief is that the construction on the U.S. side could be 20 years in coming.

In discussions with Mr. Terrazas and his staff, they have indicated that they expect that the majority of the new construction needed in Mexico will be financed by toll roads, and the construction on the Mexican side of the border can be completed in 5 to 10 years.

If these timetables prove to be correct it will be ironic that Mexico will be waiting on the United States to finish our part of La Entrada.

Prohibitions destroy rights of citizens

If we haven't enough violence, gangs and rogue cops because of unconstitutional drug and gun laws that violate individuals' inalienable rights to liberty and property, add tobacco to the list. If you are against tobacco prohibition, your arguments damn all prohibition.

Government's attempted regulation of adult non-violent behavior failed with alcohol prohibition and its drug and gun prohibitions have gone on to destroy the privacy and property rights of all citizens; making it possible for large, lawless groups to form inside and outside the law to prosper on the contraband. Because there is no legal court to settle disputes, violence and death reign as judge and jury; catching up the innocent with the guilty.

Alcohol and drugs only became dangerous national problems after their prohibition. It's time we admit we're mistaken in our efforts to force people to be successful by shooting or jailing them, breaking up their families and spending money they never had to defend themselves from us if they are peaceful. If people are not violating anyone else's body or property, it is not a power of the government or the majority in a free nation to interfere by threat of violence. Violence should only be used against violent people.

The only persons benefiting from prohibitions on voluntary adult behavior are the courts, lawyers, doctors, police, rehab facilities and gangs; they have a vested interest in promoting and maintaining laws against private adult behavior. The losers are everyone else. Instead of focusing on education and volunteer rehab organizations that work, we waste our money and energy in violent actions that violate inalienable human rights. I call it the "domineering mother syndrome" and it is even more persuasive and self-righteously violent than Big Brother.

I am afraid for all of us when I consider that a nation with our heritage of liberty and freedom now finds even people that fought for it, sacrificing it for false security. Burgeoning police, court and prison budgets bankrupt us and the sheer volume of "political or religious cases" inhibits the ability of those agencies to go after and jail violent thieves and criminals. This we can no longer afford.

Greenwood needs sheriff's services

Our county commissioners' jobs should be as dispensable as their decisions to dispense with the Greenwood community! We pay the same tax rate as everyone in Midland County. One difference is our land value is higher than other areas in Midland County. After all my tax statement says Midland County, not "excluding Greenwood."

The commissioners stopped funding the DARE program and they cut funding in our sheriff's office so that it cut our neighborhood patrols. Our commissioner resurfaced our roads just before re-election time and now what we have is a better road but we now have fly-by-day-or-night caliche dust, because of dry road conditions and people using the road for the Indy 500 — Texas style! I should require commissioners' services to clean my home of this dust on a daily basis. If our commissioners think that Greenwood is such a safe community, they need to walk our safe streets!

Our streets are not safe for our kids, much less for us. We too have our alcoholics, DUIs, addicts, thefts and break-ins. If we can't get help from our sheriff's office because of lack of funding who do we turn to? Our typical bureaucrats? Good luck! They will just hang up on you. So where does that leave you standing? Is it now legal to take the law in your own hands? We need our sheriff's office, too. What we don't need is the slapping of the hands that they are getting. We also need to settle the dust down, not to keep it stirred up!

License procedure is very tiring

Lest I be considered ungrateful, let me state in the beginning that I have been overwhelmed by the kindness and consideration shown to me during the past 11 months that I have been recovering from a badly broken leg, followed within a matter of months by a stress fracture in my foot. This kindness and consideration was shown not only by my friends but by the people I encountered in various day-to-day activities.

Perhaps it is because of this thoughtful consideration that I find it hard to understand the lack of thoughtfulness and consideration that is shown to those who must acquire a handicapped parking placard at the tax assessor/collector's office. It is puzzling to me why a person must go first to the tax assessor/collector's office to pick up a permit, then go to the doctor's office to have it validated by his signature, then go back to the tax assessor/collector's office to obtain the placard.

Driving the car is not difficult; getting in and out of the car with a walker or a cane, walking the necessary distance to the offices, and dealing with heavy doors — that is difficult. I am dismayed that the people least able to do these things are required to do them not once, not twice, but three times in order to receive a placard that allows them to park in designated areas. Is there some simple explanation for this time-consuming, very tiring procedure? Can it not be changed?

America shouldn't let atrocities prevail

We are led to believe this is a great country and it is, but I think we have some distinct problems.

One I am concerned with is the war in Bosnia. With it growing every day in human lives and property destroyed, what is America going to do? I know every war comes with a price, usually the ultimate price of human life!

I can't see what this country stands for if it lets these atrocities prevail. The U.N. forces aren't keeping up with their own in the war. I knew this would be a very weighty decision for the president to make, but he must decide, if not for us, for the innocent lives threatened and taken every day in this war that should have been over long ago!

What will it take for this country to back up our allies? Do we have to let this war go into the borders of neighboring countries? I don't think America should get into every conflict or war in the world, but we seem to be the policeman of the world. I know America doesn't want to go to war, but if we don't, what will be the ultimate and final price paid for this war?

Senior citizens must be aware of crisis

Most older Americans are unaware that Medicare is in danger of financial collapse. I urge you to run stories alerting senior citizens in our community about this crisis.

Congress must not "fix" Medicare as they have in the past. Simply cutting spending in Medicare will lead to rationing.

I support the position of the Seniors Coalition to give me the option of innovative free-market choices in health care, or allow me to stay on Medicare if I want to. Please call their Washington offices at 1-800-273-9009 for more information on their solution to the crisis.

Reader's views on: Unitary status for MISD schools

3 diverse groups have chance to lead

I'd like to commend the Midland Independent School District board on their recent decision regarding unitary status. I know there were strong opinions on both sides of the issue and I feel very strongly that if the time frame alloted is utilized in a manner in which a consensus can be reached by MISD, the League of United Latin American Citizens (LULAC) and the intervenors, this will be the second step in becoming a unified community. Those three very diverse groups have a great opportunity to exemplify maturity and leadership that can be modeled by the rest of the community. Our tax dollars will be invested wisely and the future of our children will be promising.

As a taxpaying citizen I'd like to hear more from these groups and the city of Midland within the coming three years. I want to be invited to open-forum meetings among them where I can hear and see issues disclosed, discussed and resolved openly.

The conflict I see is growing out of similarities in needs and values of everyone in this city. We are relying on parts of a system that is governed by a majority that is in control and is demonstrating very selfish and closed-minded behavior. As I look over the city I can clearly see that injustices in the spread of the economic growth and development that has been all but fair. This is an opportunity for the city of Midland to step up to the plate and develop plans that include all of our neighborhoods. I look at the new schools that have been developed recently and the well-orchestrated plans of new homes being built all around them. All except one, Coleman High School. Why, may I ask, are our neighborhoods excluded from the plans for economic growth and development? We work and pay taxes like everyone else, why can't we be included?

If taxpayers' money (my money) is being spent to gain unitary fairness in this city, whose fairness is being purchased? Certainly not that of south or east Midland. Where are our dollars being spent? Certainly not in south or east Midland. Portable buildings on school campuses in south and east Midland triple those in north and west Midland. Don't take my word for it. Get in your car, drive around and see for yourself. Our children are important, yet our attitudes and actions speak differently. Maybe our definitions of fair are different. Visible inequities... Is this a version of FAIR?

Minority applicant isn't considered

I am writing about the issue of unitary status with Midland Independent School District (MISD). My concern is about the hiring practices of minority teachers. I am a minority who has applied with the district for the last three years. Over these three years, I have gone on numerous interviews that have gone well (I have been told by the principals that did the interviewing), but yet I still have not been hired. The article in last week's paper stated that very few minorities were applying to MISD. I feel that if this was so, why have I not been hired? If MISD wanted to hire minority teachers, I would have been given some consideration.

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification. Letters not including this information will not be considered for publication.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations. The briefer the letter, the better its chance of publication.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.
- Letters will be edited for length, taste and legal reasons and are accepted only on that basis. Letters which are difficult to reduce in length will be returned to the writer to be edited before being re-submitted.
- We do not publish "open" letters, copies of letters sent to others or multiple signatures.

Because we cannot research and verify all information in letters, by publishing them we neither imply nor guarantee the accuracy of information stated by writers.

Letters should be sent to: The Editor, Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland 79702, or you may fax to 682-3793.

Council should give citizens airport vote

By Thomas H. Dollahite

Thomas H. Dollahite, longtime resident of Midland, is a pilot for GuyMabee. He also has been a candidate for Midland City Council.

Why won't the Midland City Council let the citizens and taxpayers vote on the construction of a new terminal building at the Midland International Airport? It has recently been revealed that the proposed financing of the project will most likely be completely changed because of a cutback of Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) grants. I feel that it is only morally right for the City Council to give the citizens a vote in the matter.

The construction of the proposed new terminal building will be by far the biggest hoax and boondoggle that has ever been pulled on the citizens, and we can't even vote on it! Is democracy dead here, or does the council not trust us to make a rational decision at the polls once the facts of the matter are known?

We don't need a new terminal building. The present terminal is more than adequate for our present and foreseeable future needs. The present terminal is never overcrowded, even on the most traveled days of the year. The parking garage, baggage carousels, ticket counters, car rental, restaurant, bar, restrooms, boarding gates, and airport administrative offices are closely and conveniently located together. There is more than adequate ramp space available to park as many large aircraft as may be reasonably expected to ever use the airport.

The present terminal is structurally sound, and can be readily expanded on both the north and south ends should the need ever come up. The parking garage was originally designed for additional floors to be added as necessary. Granted, some repairs and renovation are necessary now, as the terminal has been badly neglected for years. The passenger facility charges (PFCs) and other airport revenues will easily pay for needed repairs as well as bring the terminal up to standards regarding access for the disabled.

Southwest Airlines, the biggest user of the terminal, is opposed to the city's plans to construct a new terminal. Herbert Kelleher, their president, states in a letter of April 25, "On numerous occasions, we have taken the opportunity to voice our opposition to the project with city leaders, Midland airport executives, and the Federal Aviation Administration. Our objections have been completely ignored by everyone and at all levels."

Airport boardings are not proving to be as great as expected in the current airport master plan, which calls for construction of a new terminal. The plan forecasts boardings in 1995 to be 805,000, but actual boardings will prove to be nowhere near that figure.

We have been badly misled and misinformed about not only the need for a new terminal building but the proposed financing plans as well. At this time, there is a very serious question regarding the availability of promised FAA funds for the proposed new terminal. Common sense should tell us that with massive cutbacks in government spending that may even include Social Security and Medicare benefits that there is little chance for an unneeded airport terminal building to be funded.

If local money only is to be used to finance the approximately $30,000,000 terminal project, a simple amortization schedule will show that the payout will be virtually impossible without the use of Midland tax funds (anybody want to guess how much Odessa will contribute?). Bonding and interest costs are never mentioned by proponents of projects of this sort, but anyone who has purchased a house or car knows what interest does. The airport master plan forecasts a deficit of $143,696 for net income from the airport for 1995, (not including depreciation) and forecasting PFC revenue of $1,569,561. This sort of performance will never pay off any bonds without going to the Midland taxpayer for help.

Enough said? The proposed new terminal building project has more holes in it than a sieve, but of even more importance is the reluctance of the Midland City Council to let us vote even though the ground rules are completely changed, and the taxpayers of the city will most likely pick up a large part of the tab!

THE SONG OF THE RIVER

The snow melts on the mountain
And the water runs down to the spring,
And the spring in a turbulent fountain,
With a song of youth to sing,
Runs down to the riotous river,
And the river flows to the sea,
And the water again
Goes back in rain
To the hills where it used to be.

And I wonder if life's deep mystery
Isn't much like the rain and the snow
Returning through all eternity
To the places it used to know.
For life was born on the lofty heights
And flows in a laughing stream,
To the river below
Whose onward flow
Ends in a peaceful dream.

And so at last,
When our life has passed
And the river has run its course,
It again goes back,
O'er the selfsame track,
To the mountain which was its source.

So why prize life
Or why fear death,
Or dread what is to be?
The river ran
Its allotted span
Till it reached the silent sea.

Then the water harked back
To the mountain-top
To begin its course once more.
So we shall run
The course begun
Till we reach the silent shore.

Then revisit earth
In a pure rebirth
From the heart of the virgin snow.
So don't ask why
We live or die,
Or whither, or when we go,
Or wonder about the mysteries
That only God may know.

PGA: South African at home on Riviera Country Club grass

(From 1B)

about the grass at Riviera Country Club. "This is the only kind of grass we have. Kikuyu is a tough grass and lucky for me I learned how to get out of this stuff."

That's exactly what he did, time after time, the best shot being a chip from the rough behind the 11th green. Els chopped dov n on the ball, it popped onto the green and skidded 30 feet across the putting surface and into the cup for an eagle.

When O'Meara followed by three-putting from 8 feet, Els had a three-stroke lead. They had started the day tied at 11-under-par and O'Meara had taken the lead at No. 9 when his approach shot bounced past the hole and spun back to within 2 feet of the cup.

But Els birdied the short par-4 10th hole and then made the eagle at 11 to take control. He rolled in a 4-foot birdie putt on top of O'Meara's birdie on No. 17 to keep his two-stroke lead, then finished the round with a curling 20-foot birdie putt on the last hole to be three ahead.

It gave Els rounds of 66-65-66 as the elite field continued to have its way with Riviera, where the brown, spike-marked greens have been kept wet so they won't burn out. As a result, players have used them as dart boards, throwing shots at the hole and having them stay there.

Former Midland Lee golfer John Adams, who shot a 65 on the first day of the PGA Championship, continued his slide down the leader's board. After shooting a 76 on Friday, Adams shot a 71 on Saturday for a total of 212.

O'Meara and Els, playing together, both had their problems with the kikuyu. O'Meara bogeyed No. 7 when he chunked a greenside chip, not even getting it on the green, and Els bogeyed the next hole when he chunked a similar chip. But it was Els' only bad shot out of the rough on the day. The 25-year-old Els was in control all day. Before his round, he looked the picture of confidence as he sat on a fence in the shade near the practice green sipping bottled water.

When he holed out for a birdie from the sand on the third hole, Els high-fived his caddy, O'Meara's caddy and O'Meara. Then he shook his head as if shaking off sleep after a wonderful dream.

Els made a sparkling par on No. 6, known as the doughnut hole because of the pot bunker smack in the middle of the green. It's a two-tiered green and Els was on the slope between the two levels with the bunker between his ball and the hole. He could not putt at it so he chipped brilliantly right over the corner of the bunker with good spin to 4 feet and saved par.

The Associated Press

■ Golf Roundup

COON RAPIDS, Minn. — Lee Trevino was 5-under par through 14 holes Saturday to grab a share of the lead in the rain-suspended second round of the Burnet Senior Classic. Bud Allin also was 4-under through 14 holes to join first-round leaders Gibby Gilbert and Graham Marsh at 9-under on the Bunker Hills course. Gilbert and Marsh, who tied the tournament record Friday with 8-under 64s, were 1-under through 11 holes.

The 49 players left on the course when play was suspended at 6:30 p.m. are scheduled to complete the round Sunday morning before the start of the third round. In a near repeat of Friday's rain delays, lightning and rain pushed starting times back 4 1/2 hours.

Trevino birdied his first two holes and added a third on the sixth hole, giving him a 3-under 33 on the front nine. Allin birdied three of his final five holes.

Gilbert birdied No. 3 to take the lead at 10-under, but dropped a stroke on the ninth with his first bogey of the tournament.

LPGA PING-Welch's

CANTON, Mass. — Colleen Walker birdied the last two holes, the second after a sparkling bunker shot, to complete a 67 and tie Beth Daniel for the lead after Saturday's third round of the LPGA PING-Welch's Championship.

Daniel, who started the day two strokes ahead, had a 69, her worst round of the tournament, to join Walker at 14-under-par 202.

The pair will enter Sunday's final round four strokes ahead of Meg Mallon, who started the day tied with Jane Geddes three strokes behind Daniel. Mallon shot a 70 and Geddes a 71 to fall into a tie at 206 with Maggie Will, who posted a 68.

Agassi, Chang to meet for ATP

MASON, Ohio (AP) — Andre Agassi adapted his ensemble to the heat, then pushed Thomas Enqvist to a quick meltdown Saturday to reach the final of the ATP Championship.

Agassi made Enqvist run all over the court and ultimately run out of gas in 95-degree heat Saturday for a 6-4, 6-2 victory. Agassi has reached the finals of his eight hardcourt tournaments this year.

The world's top-ranked player will face defending two-time champion Michael Chang for the title Sunday. Chang outlasted eighth-seeded Michael Stich 4-6, 6-2, 7-6 (7-5) in an evening match with temperatures still hovering around 90 degrees.

More searing heat and draining humidity are expected Sunday.

"This is hotter than the desert," said Agassi, who was born and raised in Las Vegas. "This is as hot as I've felt all year. You don't play tennis in this heat but a few times all year."

A thermometer on the court topped 120 degrees during the 69-minute match. Agassi discarded his usual garb — blacks socks and shoes — for white ones and donned a white bandana.

Stich, who played six sets in the heat Friday — three singles, three doubles — appeared to slow down in the middle of his match.

"I was just a little tired and he started playing more aggressive and I was too defensive," Stich said.

He found a burst of energy to pull even at 4-all in the third set and take it to the tiebreaker.

Chang, coming off a three-hour, three-set quarterfinal match, played better as the match went on. He got up in the tiebreaker when Stich hit a backhand into the net, then finished it with an ace, his third of the night.

Chang has come from down a set to win three times in the tournament, reinforcing his reputation as a more dangerous player when he's behind.

"That's definitely been the case this week," Chang said. "It's not my choice to start a match on the losing end."

Police recommend curfew change

By Katherine Poteet
Staff Writer

A change of time will be the only revision the Midland police chief will recommend for the city's curfew at the end of its year-long trial run.

Midland Police Chief Richard Czech said he plans to recommend moving the hours for the curfew back when he meets with the Midland City Council to look at the curfew and its affects after one year, which he expected to be in November or December.

"We'll probably back it up about an hour or an hour and a half," Czech said. "We seem to have a problem with younger teen-agers, 12- and 13-year-olds, out at that time."

Midland's current curfew is 1 a.m. to 6 a.m., seven days a week, and affects teen-agers 16 years of age and younger.

Czech said many other cities, including Dallas (which the Midland curfew was based on) have curfew set at 11 p.m.-6 a.m. Sunday through Thursday and midnight to 6 a.m. on Friday and Saturday.

Czech indicated his support of moving the curfew back at the Midland City Council meeting Tuesday, when he presented eight-month statistics for the new curfew.

According to the stats,10 percent of youngsters out after curfew have been 13 years old or younger.

Since December 1, police have caught 159 youngsters violating the curfew, issuing 112 citations and 47 warnings. During the first two months of the curfew, only warnings were issued — except to repeat offenders — as a means of educating juveniles to the new ordinance, police officials said.

The hour with the highest incidence of curfew violations was between 2 a.m. and 3 a.m., which accounted for 30 percent of curfew-breakers.

Saturday was the most popular night for youngsters being caught although violations occurred on all nights.

Czech said he will recommend no other major changes to the curfew.

"We are doing pretty good for what we have and we are having an effect," he said. "We knew the first year would be a trial to work the bugs out.

Violation of the curfew is punishable by a fine not to exceed $500. Exceptions to the curfew include traveling to and from work, school and church, emergencies, being with a parent or guardian, or being married.

Judge nomination

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — President Clinton has nominated a Corpus Christi district judge to the federal bench.

Hilda G. Tagle, who received confirmation of her nomination on Friday, grew up in Robstown and started her career at 16 as a certified beautician.

"That's quite an inauspicious start for someone who may wind up on the federal bench," she said.

Clinton has forwarded the nomination to the U.S. Senate, which will take it up after returning from the Labor Day recess next month. Hearings have not been scheduled, and the process can take months.

Fingerprint database is DPS security measure

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

If you are one of Texas' 12.5-million licensed drivers, beware or be aware. They've got you — or soon will.

If you haven't been already, you will be fingerprinted electronically within the next four years, as your license comes up for renewal. Your fingerprint, photograph, and the usual information, date of birth, color of eyes, height, and gender, will be registered instantly in the Texas Department of Public Safety's database in Austin. It's done as quickly as it takes electronic impulses to zip from here to there.

Getting your new plastic driver's license processed and in the mail still takes a few weeks, but the process is being speeded up.

The new calling-card-size license is a magnetic, bar-coded, color-keyed, numbered, fraudulent-resistant card, which features your photograph in bright colors on the right side if you are 21 or older. Otherwise, your image will be on the left-hand side. It's a quick way to determine if you are "under-age" for certain privileges, such as buying beer, wine or liquor, and night-clubbing.

Big Brother is no longer just an Orwellian muse, such as in "1984," the science-fiction novel about omnipresent, totalitarian government.

"I think of it as more security than invasion of privacy," said Texas DPS Examiner Jennie Bright, of Midland.

And in another respect, "We're catching up, you know. It's the technological space age."

"In the future, as we build the database, we will be able to catch these people (criminals, impersonators, and bearers of fraudulent cards) by matching fingerprints or thumb prints," Ms. Bright said.

The conversion to the digital-imagining database was launched in Austin in January 1995 and was set up in Midland in July.

Staff Report

The 50th anniversary of the end of World War II and Victory in Japan in the Pacific will be commemorated at 10 a.m. Monday at Confederate Air Force headquarters at Midland International Airport.

The dedication ceremony in the CAF Memorial Garden will honor American veterans who served in the war's Pacific Theater.

Featured speaker will be Midlander Earle Craig Jr., a World War II Republic P-47 Thunderbolt pilot who flew fighter-escort, dive-bombing, and napalm-bombing missions in the Pacific Theater of Operations in July and August 1945.

Following the ceremony, there will be a flight of the missing-man formation by CAF aircraft to honor the war dead.

Craig, who was assigned to the United States Army Air Force 507th Fighter Group, 463rd Fighter Squadron, near Okinawa, was airborne and witnessed one of two atomic-bomb explosions over Japan in August 1945.

Following the ceremony, there will be a flight of the missing-man formation by CAF aircraft to honor the war dead. World War II was waged from September 1939 to mid-August 1945.

The ceremony, open to the public, is being sponsored by the CAF and the American Airpower Heritage Museum. A reception will follow the ceremony.

Three months prior to V-J Day (Victory in Japan) on Aug. 15, 1945, the Allied forces in May 1945 had conquered Adolf Hitler's German forces in Europe. V-E Day (Victory in Europe) is commemorated on May 8.

Lions Club dedicates new eyeglass center

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

The Midland Downtown Lions Club has officially dedicated the old Hodge Theater at 200 Plaza St. as the Texas Lion Eyeglass Recycling Center.

"There is still some work to do, but we are now fully operational as an eyeglass recycling center," said Ike Fitzgerald, a member of the Downtown Lions who coordinates the recycling effort.

While the Lions have currently remodeled only the upstairs and lobby area of the old Hodge Theater, plans call for the eventual remodeling of the entire two-screen complex to make a 78-by-131 auditorium that can be used for other functions.

Plans also call for an eye clinic to be established at the Texas Eyeglass Recycling Center to serve the sight needs of those in the community who cannot afford examinations. "When we are finished here, we will have a facility that will serve the needs of the Midland Downtown Lions for 50 years into the future," said Fitzgerald.

John Paul Pitts/Reporter-Telegram

He noted that the Center now had approximately 50,000 eyeglasses ready for shipment, and was still in need of used glasses. We recently picked up 24 new missions in Mexico and there is now talk about establishing a mission in Russia, said Fitzgerald.

Reporter-Telegram offers readers CashBack card

Better shopping bonuses await some Reporter-Telegram readers, because of the newspaper's new association with the CashBack Card, which provides cash back to its users.

The Extra Card is being dropped in favor of this new discount card. The CashBack Card provides benefits both to shoppers and to retailers.

For the consumer, CashBack Cards are used to keep track of all purchases at participating retailers, and 10 percent of each purchase goes to a special account, explained Tracy Newton of the CashBack sales office.

Every 90 days, if the amount in an individual cardholder's account is greater than $10, a check, redeemable at participating merchants, is mailed out to that consumer, Ms. Newton explained.

The CashBack Card is available to all Reporter-Telegram readers who subscribe and prepay for intervals of at least three months.

GARY OTT

'Unbearable agony' are only words for early morning pain

Webster defines "pain" as: A state of physical or mental lack of well-being, or physical or mental uneasiness that ranges from mild discomfort or dull distress to acute often unbearable agony.

Ott

Lack of well-being?
Physical uneasiness?
Mild discomfort?
Dull distress?

Give me a break, Mr. Webster. You certainly dropped the ball on this one. The only words that are even remotely close to the real thing are "unbearable agony," and quite frankly, I'm not sure they go far enough.

What we're talking about today is dead-solid, drop-kick pain, the kind that makes you scream out in horror, the kind that makes you wish you were dead, the kind that causes an otherwise brutish man to fall to his knees and weep unashamedly.

Yes, today we will be discussing, in excruciating detail, that greatest of all pains: the one that occurs at the precise moment when your big left toe connects with the corner of the end table in your living room at 2: 30 in the morning.

You know what I'm talking about. It has happened to all of us.

You awake in the middle of the night with this strange craving for a giant swig of cold milk. You try to put the thought out of your mind, but it does no good. So you take a deep breath — actually it is more of a grunt — and sort of roll out of bed, not unlike a beached whale attempting to find its way back into the water. Once on the floor, you somehow manage to crawl to your feet and then wallow toward the kitchen, bouncing off of walls along the way.

For some reason, like men who decline to ask directions when lost in a strange town, you absolutely refuse to turn on the lights, leaving yourself no choice but to "feel" your way toward the kitchen, extending your hands in front of your body in a rather silly-looking attempt to avoid banging head-first into the bookcase or anything else taller than five feet.

But, alas, that doesn't include the aforementioned end table, which stands only two-and-a-half feet tall and is strategically located at the corner of the living room, practically begging you to come its way.

"Come on, big boy," it teases seductively. "I've got something for you."

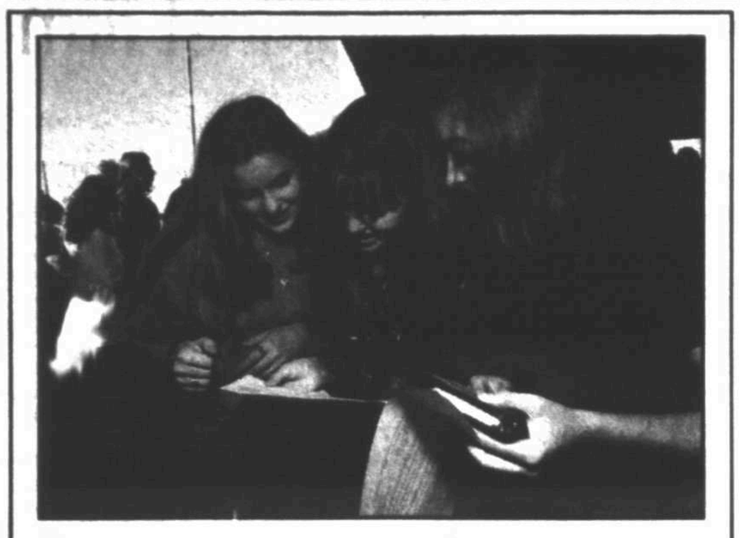

Because you have always had a weakness for seductive voices, even when coming from an inanimate object at 2: 30 in the morning, you prod along in its general direction with some vague hope of "getting lucky."

You don't. (NOTE: You never do, so why should you start now?)

But as you turn the corner from the hallway to the living room you do get a surprise.

WHAM!

Ready for school

New Midland Freshman High School students Ashley McWilliams, left, Laurel Rhodes and Katie Hinterlong study new class schedules.

(From 1C)

During the past year, the Center received 293,250 pairs of used eyeglasses and shipped 63,100 eyeglasses to needy individuals at missions in Mexico, Panama, Honduras, Africa, Guatemala as well as a number of organizations in America, such as Feed the Children in Oklahoma City. Fitzgerald said donations of eyeglasses may be mailed to the Center at 200 Plaza Street, Midland, Texas, 79701.

The Texas Lions Eyeglass Recycling Center in Midland is one of five in the U.S. and is staffed solely by volunteers from the Downtown Lions and other Midland Lions Clubs, who sort, measure, clean and catalog eyeglasses for distribution.

CARD: Merchants, consumers benefit from CashBack program

(From 1C)

Others can participate for a nominal fee by calling 685-3424.

"(Participants) go back into these same stores and spend it again," Ms. Newton said.

The cards will be effective on Oct. 14 and will be mailed out to qualifying Reporter-Telegram subscribers a few days prior to that starting date.

Participating merchants have the added benefit of computer analysis of the buying patterns of CashBack Card users as a group.

"Our sophisticated computer system can, for instance, track the number of CashBack cardholders that purchase fast food. We can then provide reports showing where the fast food customers live, how often they purchase fast food, and days of high and low sales," CashBack officials say.

Participating merchants can use this information to target specific segments of the population, increasing the power of their advertising dollars.

Participating merchants are further benefited by cooperative advertising plans and free advertising promoting goods and services available for purchase with the CashBack Card.

(From 1C)

The big toe meets the end table.

And it is at that precise moment that you learn the true meaning of the word "pain." And sorry, Mr. Webster, it ain't "mild discomfort."

No indeed.

You immediately begin hopping around on one foot, screaming a series of profanities that would make a drunken sailor proud. You then slam your fist into the wall, which, of course, accomplishes nothing but making your hand hurt as much as your big toe.

Your cat, a most unsympathetic sort, gives you a hateful glare for interrupting her 18 hours of beauty sleep, so you cuss at her.

But that does no good, either.

So while attempting to hop up and down and scream at the same time, you manage to bite your tongue, causing blood to spew forth.

This, quite naturally, makes you panic which, for some peculiar reason, results in you losing your balance.

You trip over the couch.

It is right then and there — while sprawled out on the floor, staring into the darkness — that it suddenly dawns on you that there is one thing worse than physical pain: the realization that you forgot to go to the store that evening and, as a result, there was no milk in the refrigerator.

Dairy offers bounty for information

DALLAS (AP) — Who says milk money is small change?

After more than two decades and $200,000, Dallas-based Schepps Dairy continues to offer rewards for information leading to the capture of criminals.

Harmon Schepps started the program in 1973 after Bill Moon, an employee at a grocery store then operated by the company, was fatally shot during a robbery.

"We were very disturbed. We felt we had to do right by our employees," said Schepps, 77. "I wanted my employees to know that we would do everything we could to help capture these people."

Schepps bought a newspaper ad offering $5,000 for information on Moon's killing. The information he passed on to authorities helped capture the gunman, who was later convicted.

Since that time, Schepps estimates, the company has offered almost $1 million in reward money. About one-fifth of the offers have been paid out.

FINGERPRINTS: New database prevents fraud

(From 1C)

The DPS had been fingerprinting new driver's-license applicants and newcomers to Texas since 1967 with ink on paper. The mandatory fingerprinting is being accepted without apparent protest.

"It's fine with me," said Amy Michelle Walker, a 22-year-old Midland schoolteacher, a recent Sul Ross State University graduate from Pecos. "I guess it's just a protective device."

Midlander Marshall King Jr., 51, dropped by the DPS headquarters to get an identification card, which is available to all Texans, motorists or not.

The fingerprint does not appear on DPS-issued cards — driver's license or ID card — but is stored in the data base.

"I'm a Jet-Age fellow," King said. "I was born in the Jet Age, and I've adapted" to the Computer Age.

Agnes Byron, 81 and widowed, recently returned to Midland from Rhode Island and didn't seem to mind being fingerprinted for the first time.

"They are doing it for a reason," she figured. "I don't ask questions. Why bother? I don't have anything to hide."

With implementation of the database, "We start cross-checking fingerprints found at crime scenes," said a DPS spokesman in Austin. "It also prevents fraud if someone tries to get a license in your name."

'Fingerprinting is the most standardized way to identify a person's identity. It is very difficult to fake.'

— Dr. Prerak Doctor, Midland psychiatrist

But, as DPS Trooper Martin Santiago pointed out, "There is still going to be fraud. If they are using somebody else's documents, and they are not in the system, they can get away with it. And even if they get married, they can't get away with it because they have a different name."

One tested scheme is to copy a name from a tombstone, purchase a copy of the deceased person's birth certificate at the courthouse, represent it as your own, and apply for a driver license. Hot-check artists have used that or similar ploys in a fraud to get driver's licenses and then set up bank accounts in order to steal money or merchandise by writing hot checks. The driver's-license number then becomes the "golden key that will get you just about anything you want," noted a Midland DPS official. "Most people are honest."

Currently, the DPS accepts as proof of someone's identity a birth certificate or driver license from Texas or from another state.

"It's not foolproof," reasoned Santiago, who acknowledged that many criminals "are not that smart to beat the system."

However, the DPS official recalled the case of college students who almost "beat the system" in making fake driver's licenses. They were caught only because "the quality was too good" — superior to that of the DPS.

The expansion of electronic databases, the use of numbers to identify people and, now, the electronic fingerprinting all can be viewed as a form of depersonalization, according to Midland psychologist Dr. Johnny Worley.

"Instead of being people and treated as individuals, we are now part of a computer bank as opposed to being a person," Worley said. "In the ever-growing data bank on people, we've got all of these records and agencies selling those records to companies for marketing purposes. And people don't like that; I don't like it.

"It's just one more level of intrusion that the government has got its number on you."

Worley said that the depersonalization combined with "the bureaucracy" leads "to lots of mistakes," since computers and their operators are fallible.

"The IRS, of course, is getting more and more data on people," Worley noted. "They say it is private and confidential, but there have been reports of IRS agents going in and looking at people's records for purposes of getting at them or selling the information. I think it's a problem. It's getting worse — not getting better."

While Midland psychiatrist Dr. Prerak Doctor surmised that "it is easy to manipulate the system" with numbers alone, the addition of identifying photographs and fingerprints would make identification more reliable.

"Fingerprinting," he said, "is the most standardized way to identify a person's identity. It is very difficult to fake. In fact, in some of the Third-World countries where the persons are illiterate and when they have to be paid for their services and they cannot sign their name, the usual way is to take their fingerprint.

"You can alter somebody's sign, but you cannot alter somebody's fingerprint. It is probably a good way to do that (identify by fingerprinting). How efficiently we all can do that is another thing. How fast are you able to identify? You need a good reading."

Bridge construction begins at Jal Draw to upgrade, accomodate development

Staff Report

Construction of a bridge in northwest Midland has begun and an alternate roadway is being opened to accommodate nearby residents.

The bridge is being constructed on Norwood Street at the Jal Draw — between Lehigh and Westminster drives — as an upgrade to the temporary culvert at the location and to accommodate development upstream, city officials said.

Norwood Street will be closed during construction.

A parallel roadway to the east — Boulder Drive — has been temporarily paved to allow north-south access to residents, city officials said. Previously, Boulder Drive did not go through at the draw.

"This will provide another outlet for that subdivision," said Harvey Hansen, the city's director of engineering. "Mainly those people north of the draw (with Norwood Street closed) have only one outlet on Loop 250."

Bridge construction is slated to be completed by November 14. "Hopefully it will open sooner than that," Hansen said.

The bridge, along with protective posts and cables, is costing the city nearly $400,000. The work was contracted out to Desert Paving of Odessa.

Computer expert files countersuit against firm

HOUSTON (AP) — A Texas A&M University computer expert is fighting back against accusations he left a high-tech think tank with a goldmine of secrets.

Pak Kay Yuen says the Houston Advanced Research Center falsely accused him of preparing to flee the country with a new video technology he helped develop.

"I don't think he was treated fairly at all in this," attorney Andrew Spalding said of his client, Yuen.

Yuen was sued by The Woodlands firm last month for breach of contract over the potentially lucrative video compression technology.

In a countersuit filed Friday, Yuen said HARC injured his reputation, invaded his privacy and inflicted emotional distress. He is seeking unspecified damages.

HARC officials declined to comment on the matter, having yet to see the lawsuit.

HARC officials accuse Yuen of stealing the technology stored on computer hard drives. The company's suit also claims Yuen jeopardized negotiations with companies interested in licensing the technology. HARC officials, who had intercepted recorded messages from an answering machine in an apartment HARC had leased for Yuen, believed Yuen was preparing to sell the technology to foreign competitors.

Yuen, 37, is a British-educated computer expert and Hong Kong citizen who was recruited to Texas A&M University in January 1993 to work as a research associate under a contract funded partially by HARC.

Among other things, they said a new software invented by Yuen would allow VHS-quality video with full-screen, full-motion and full-color to be sent by a laptop computer over high-capacity phone lines.

Yuen was recently informed the funding for the employment contract has not been extended. Spalding said Yuen, who has a wife and two young boys, now faces the prospect of having to leave the country by Sept. 30 unless he can find another job.

The dispute is in contrast with last March when HARC officials trumpeted new inventions as breakthroughs in computer compression. Among other things, they said a new software invented by Yuen would allow VHS-quality video with full-screen, full-motion and full-color to be sent by a laptop computer over high-capacity phone lines.

Such a development could solve a fundamental problem holding back the development of the Information Superhighway — storing and transmitting huge data files.

It is a third piece of HARC-C, a technology for which HARC officials have already filed two patents. Under a technology ownership agreement, HARC would receive 50 percent of royalty payments, while Yuen would split the rest with Charles Chiu, the other inventor.

But Yuen and HARC had a falling out in July when negotiations began to license technology for potentially millions of dollars in royalties.

Yuen claimed in court documents that the dispute resulted after HARC officials began negotiating with BMC Software, a Houston software firm.

The countersuit says HARC officials falsely claimed that the full-motion video technology could transmit images at a 200-kilobit per second rate when it could not. He says it would take five to six months of work to reach that level.

Oil baron's widow, heirs prepare for battle over burial, cremation

Texas law apears to back a widow, giving her first say on such matters as disposition of the body.

HOUSTON (AP) — The burial of 90-year-old oil man J. Howard Marshall has been put on hold as widow and former Guess? model Anna Nicole Smith prepares for a court battle over her husband's remains.

Marshall's funeral is scheduled for today, but the millionaire who died Aug. 4 won't be laid to rest.

On Monday, attorneys for the former Playboy Playmate and Marshall's children will argue how to dispose of the remains when the issue goes before Probate Judge Bill Scanlan.

Smith is opposed to the family's desire to cremate Marshall's body. The buxom 5-foot-11 Smith, who first met Marshall in 1988 when she was dancing in a topless bar and married him in June 1994, wants her husband entombed in a mausoleum.

Texas law appears to back a widow, giving her first say on such matters as disposition of the body.

In court documents filed Friday, attorney Joseph S. Horrigan outlined a case for letting Marshall's son Pierce Marshall, make the decision.

Calls by The Associated Press to attorneys for both sides were not immediately returned on Saturday.

Horrigan's "application for authority regarding disposition of remains" said the elder Marshall gave his son power of attorney July 14, 1994, and a subsection of that document covers funeral arrangements.

It entitles Pierce Marshall to "arrange and contract for my funeral including appropriate arrangements and instructions for my funeral service or memorial service, including purchase of a burial plot or other appropriate disposition of my body."

Horrigan's motion also included a copy of the Marshall family's $6,149 pre-paid funeral benefits contract with Geo. H. Lewis & Sons funeral home. Dated Jan. 27, it includes mention of a $1,995 solid poplar cremation casket and a $475 crematory fee. The document features Howard Marshall's squiggly signature.

The position of the funeral home, where the body remains, was outlined in a document from attorney Thomas E. Moran, who represents Geo. H. Lewis.

It says the funeral home has been advised to take no action pending an agreement between the feuding widow and son or a formal court order.

The funeral home has been instructed not to divulge the time of Marshall's funeral.

Monday's hearing is scheduled for 1:30 p.m.

School names interim provost

HOUSTON (AP) — In a move that makes him a prime candidate to take charge of the school, James Douglas, Texas Southern University's law school dean, has been named the college's interim provost.

"In dialogues with faculty, deans and other administrators, Douglas was named as best able to provide a provost's academic leadership," Ms. Horton said. "His ability to work as part of a team and his knowledge of procedures and budgets are unmatched."

Campus insiders say the promotion puts Douglas in the position to take over for Ms. Horton when she leaves the university. Regents announced in June they won't extend Ms. Horton's contract which expires at the end of next summer.

Douglas, a 1966 graduate of TSU, was a top candidate for TSU's presidency during the last two searches in 1987 and 1993.

Pricing your home

When you sell your home, should you start the process with a higher price than you will ultimately accept?

Kay Sutton, Kay Sutton Realtors

Legally, as the owner of a home, you are entitled to ask any price you wish. But, the idea of starting high, so that you have 'room' to come down, should however, be studied very carefully. Prospective buyers often know the maximum price they can pay to still qualify for financing. They may eliminate an overpriced property from consideration without even looking at it; or they may realize that that the sellers might be willing to sell at a lower price which would better fit their financing limits.

Another consideration in pricing your property should be to look at the competition because many buyers shop for a home by comparison. They look at several homes and then eliminate the ones they feel are not competitively priced.

Sellers often think purely in terms of the cash they will receive when the sale goes through, and it is tempting to price high. What sellers need to remember is that most buyers borrow money to buy a home and the lending institution will almost always require that the home be appraised, to ensure that that the home is being purchased at a fair market value.

It is easy to see what an inconvenience it would be for all parties to have the transaction fall apart at the last moment because the property was priced unrealistically and either the loan was refused or the buyer was required to increase his own cash down payment.

Sellers should also be aware that there are hidden costs involved when overpriced homes do not sell rapidly: such as the seller's continued liability for the interest on the mortgage, real estate taxes and hazard insurance. In addition, the overpriced home may become 'stale' on the marketplace. When these hidden costs are considered, often the seller may end up with less money, even though he or she held out for a higher price.

Contact your local realtor for answers to your questions about pricing, or any other aspect of selling your home.

Rate-Locks

Bill Jackson Prudential Adobe Realtors

Imagine this - - you are shopping for a home but you are afraid that interest rates will go up while you are looking. How can you assure yourself of the low rates currently available? By simply requesting a 'rate-lock', which guarantees your low rate will not increase before the transaction is complete.

The rate-lock, which is also referred to as a 'lock-in' makes sense, especially if the borrower fears a rise in rates during the next 30 to 60 days. (It is a good idea to make sure that the lock-in period is at least 60 days from application).

However, rate locks can backfire if lending rates fall during the guaranteed period with the borrower locked in at a higher rate. Borrowers who lean toward the rate-lock for its guarantee should make sure that it is 'unconditional' to prevent the lender from changing rates and terms for any reason.

Rate-locks are cost free. In fact, charging a fee is illegal in many states. The only time a fee is requested by a lender is when a rate lock for more than 60 days is sought. The longer the borrower wants the rate guaranteed for: the higher the fee.

A good example of a significant saving using a rate-lock would be the borrower who secured one for 7.5 percent on a $100,000 loan. The monthly payment for the 30-year, fixed rate loan would be $699.21. If the borrower, however, had not been able to obtain a rate lock and the interest rate increased to eight percent, the payment would have automatically increased by $34.55 a month to $733.76.

To give an idea how rates impact payments, examine the chart below which is based on a 30-year, fixed-rate $100,000 loan.

Interest Rate	Monthly Payment	Change in Payment
7.5%	$699.21	-N/A-
8.0%	$733.76	$34.55
8.5%	$768.91	$35.15
9.0%	$804.62	$35.71
9.5%	$840.85	$36.23
10.0%	$877.57	$36.72

Earnest Money

Norma Pine Chaparral Realtors

Earnest Money is a deposit a buyer puts up when making an offer to purchase a house. This deposit, usually $1,000 (even more if it is a very expensive house) represents the buyer's serious intent to purchase the property: that he will not walk away from the contract.

In the offer to buy, that the buyer and seller sign, it states that the earnest money is only refundable if the contract does not close due to fault of the seller, or if the buyer cannot arrange financing. Should the buyer just back out of the contract, then he forfeits the money and it goes to the seller. The seller can then put the property back up for sale.

The buyer can add other contingencies to the offer besides obtaining a mortgage loan to be able to get the money back. If a buyer has another house to sell before he can obtain a new loan, or if the repairs exceed a certain amount, the buyer can still get the earnest money refunded should the contract not work out.

Who holds the earnest money? Normally it will be put into an escrow account at the title company where the property will close. The money is deposited when everybody has agreed to all of the terms of the offer, and all have signed. The money shall then be applied to the down payment at closing.

If the property does not close for some reason, the title company will require a release form to be signed by both parties before the money is refunded to one party or the other.

Should one party be unreasonable about signing the release, the title company can turn it over to the real estate commission for mediation or to a local court for litigation.

Midland is pulling for you

MANDY

If you tune your television to CBS Tuesday evening at 8 p.m., you'll have the opportunity to be one of the estimated 250 million viewers to watch the Miss Teen USA pageant, and don't be surprised when you see a little bit of home too.

As Miss Texas Teen USA, Midlander Mandy Jeffreys will be representing the state of Texas in the pageant. During the two hour telecast, broadcast live from the Century II Performing Arts and Convention Center in Wichita, Kan., Mandy will be one of 51 contestants — one from each state and the District of Columbia — vying for the Miss Teen USA crown and banner, as well as the opportunity to travel as Miss Teen USA for a year.

The telecast will begin with each contestant being introduced during the opening number. This will be Midlanders' first opportunity to see Mandy.

Next, the finalist will be announced. If Mandy is selected, viewers will get to see her compete for the remainder of the telecast in interview, swim wear and evening gown competition, which will be intermingled with prize films and "fun films" of the contestants' activities during their two weeks of rehearsal and fun preparing for the show.

You may have seen Mandy Jeffreys on the sidelines of a Lee High School football game cheerleading or gracing the cover of the newspaper's Fall Fashion section. You will see her photo in the September issue of TEEN magazine as a top seven finalist in the magazines Model Search Contest and find her back on court side this fall as a cheerleader for Midland College.

And don't be surprised if you notice that same familiar face on national television Tuesday evening during the Miss Teen USA Pageant. Your eyes aren't deceiving you.

Midland's own Mandy Jeffreys will represent Texas in the national pageant 8 p.m. Tuesday on CBS. She earned the honor to compete in the Miss Teen USA Pageant by winning the Miss Texas Teen USA Pageant last November in Padre Island. During a regionally televised show, Mandy succeeded over 122 other contestants for the title.

Since then, her life has been busy trying to keep up with school and extra curricular activities, as well as her appearances as Miss Texas Teen USA.

Mandy left Midland Aug. 1 — on her 18th birthday — for Wichita, Kan., where the national pageant is being produced this year.

"When she got there, they had a big surprise birthday party for her and sang to her. The had a cake with the state of Texas on it. She said it was a wonderful ice breaker," said Mandy's mother, Julie Pollock. "She said it gave her a great opportunity to meet so many of the girls."

Beyond the surprise birthday party, Mandy and the other contestants have been keeping quite a busy schedule. They are up no later than 5:30 a.m. every morning and at breakfast by 6:30 a.m. By 7 a.m. they are at the Century II Performing Arts and Convention Center for a day of rehearsal, which usually ends around 5 p.m. The girls are then escorted back to the hotel where they have until around 6:30 p.m. to prepare for the evening's activities and appearances.

"By the time they get home at 10:30 or 11, Mandy said they just dive into bed," Mrs. Pollock said. "She's exhausted, but she said they are having so much fun."

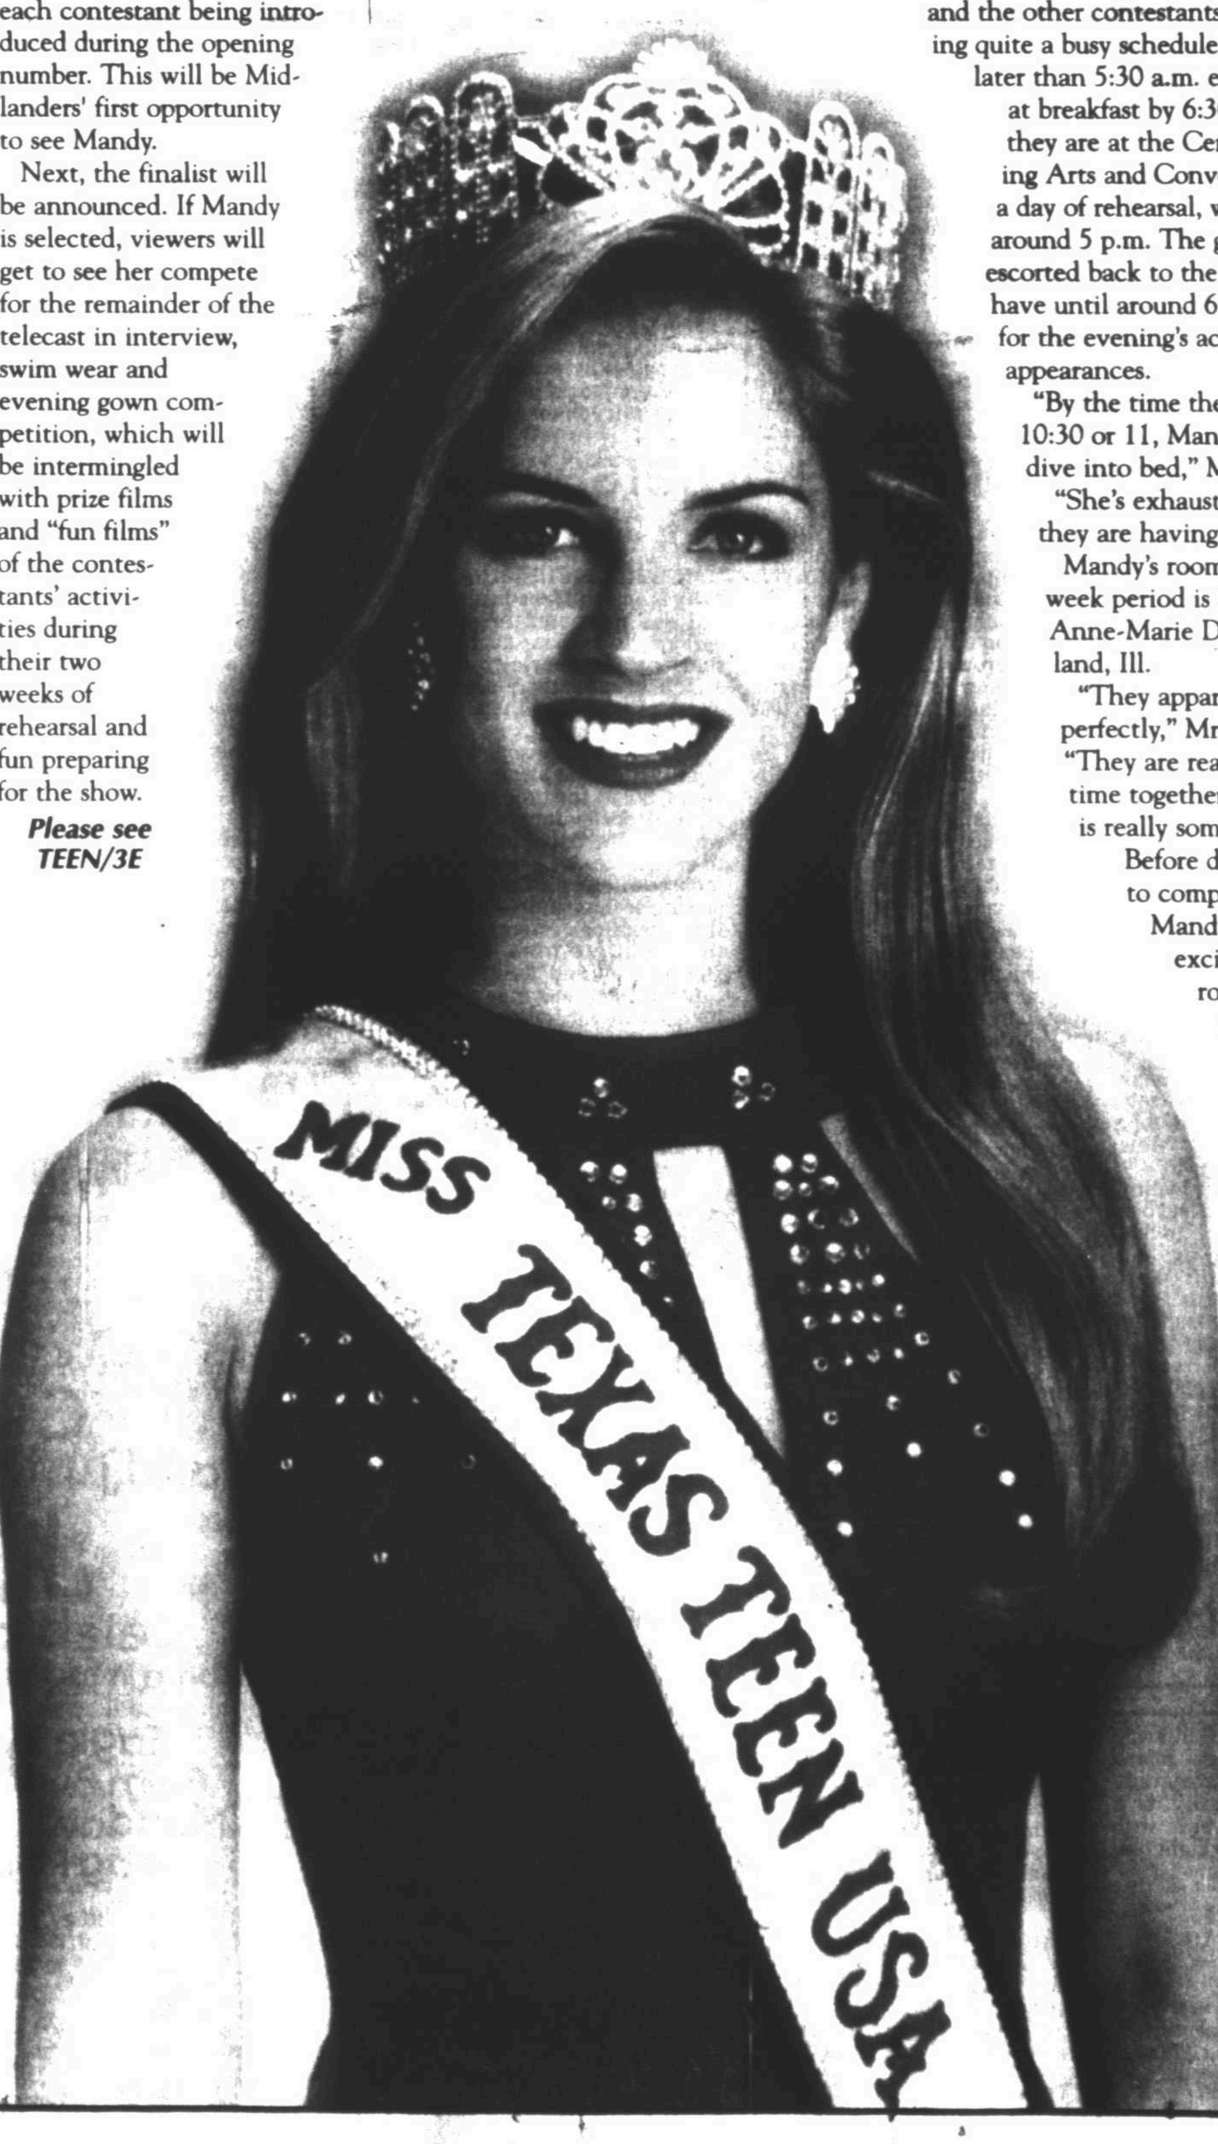

Mandy's roommate for the two week period is Miss Illinois USA Anne-Marie Dixon, 17, of Highland, Ill.

"They apparently just hit it off perfectly," Mrs. Pollock said. "They are really having a good time together. Mandy said she is really somebody neat."

Before departing Midland to compete in the pageant, Mandy said she was excited about having a roommate from the north.

"I haven't traveled much, so I'm really looking forward to meeting the girls and getting to know my roommate,"

By Marilyn McKnight-Harrison

Internationally renown musician Lillette Jenkins-Wisner brought her incomparable style of jazz and marvelous sense of humor to the West Texas Jazz Society's recent concert. With the lights of Midland sparkling in the background, she entertained a huge crowd at the Plaza Club atop the Clay-Desta Building.

McKnight-Harrison

Lillette's program included gospel hymns, Duke Ellington and Gershwin songs and music from "Ain't Misbehavin' " and "Porgy and Bess." She brought the audience to their feet for a standing ovation as she closed the program with our personal favorite, Ellington's "Satin Doll."

She was accompanied by local musicians, Mark Lowe on bass and Neal Goates on drums.

In addition to being a superb jazz pianist and vocalist, Lillette is a classical concert pianist, recording artist, teacher, composer, arranger, organist and actress.

Among those enjoying an incredible evening of jazz were Sue and Bill Marshall, Bea and Searle McGrath, Patricia Wettstein with her daughter, Laura, and Laura's fiance, Byron Wilson; Wilma and Jerry Cleaver and Carol and Bob Boyd.

DEE MIDKIFF HANKS was honored on her 90th birthday on Aug. 2 with a party at her home. Serving as hostesses were her many nieces.

Dee is the daughter of Midland County pioneers, the late Thomas Oscar and Lillie Midkiff.

The serving table was decorated with a beautiful bouquet of summer flowers, a gift from Linda Kakos of Dallas. A large cake and the floral tablecloth and accessories carried out a color scheme of purple, hot pink and turquoise.

A large number of family, old friends and members of the Myrtle Sunday School Class of First Baptist Church called on the honoree.

Guests included Dee's brother, Hunter Midkiff of Midland, and from out-of-town, Carolyn Strange of Tampa Fla., Mrs. Kakos and Lynn Hensley, Jane Witt and daughter, Jessica, and Mildred Moore, all of Lubbock.

MIDLANDER H.K. Thomas, a 1928 graduate of Plainview High School, recently attended the all-school reunion held in Plainview.

Mr. Thomas also enjoyed visits with his niece, Kay Hanna Persefield and her husband, Jim, of Longmont, Colo., who were in town for the reunion, and with his sisters, Marguerite Hall of Tulia and Gladys Little of Olton, who celebrated her 100th birthday last September.

Mr. Thomas tells us that he is currently writing a biography about his late wife, Rubalee. He plans to publish this in a book, entitled "Life's Journey Together." However, he is taking some time out to visit his son and daughter-in-law, Richard and Jerri, who live near Lake Lavon, close to McKinney. Adding to the pleasure of his visit will be the opportunity to see "Phantom of the Opera" in Dallas.

MARK YOUR CALENDAR now for Sept. 30. That is the date selected for the Children's Service League's biennial Beefeater's Ball, one of Midland's premier fall social events. Proceeds to go the Midland Cerebral Palsy Center.

Since the ball is being held at Midland Country Club this year, a video presentation of auction items will replace the live auctions of years past. Silent auction bidding will take place throughout the evening in a special party tent.

The entertainment promises to be top-notch. When "The Really Big Show" takes the stage, the audience is in for a real treat. The band is known for its exciting costume changes, audience participation and great music for dancing.

Meanwhile, pianist Doug Montgomery of Santa Fe will entertain in the Grill room, and the band, "Uninvited Guests," will be playing a variety of music in the party tent.

Get creative juices flowing with melons

By Beverly Bundy
N.Y. Times News Service

Plain and simple, they get no respect.

Think of how we speak about melons. "Use your melon," "melon head," — well, you get the picture. Melons, particularly beloved Southern cantaloupes and watermelons, deserve better treatment.

Even the way we eat cantaloupe and watermelon shows our lack of respect. Cantaloupe is usually a slice served at breakfast, when we're groggy and hardly appreciative of its luscious flesh. Watermelon, if it's possible, gets even more derisive treatment. Some of us don't even wear shoes when we tuck into a dripping ruby slice at the backyard picnic table or on the cool front porch.

You'd think we'd be more appreciative. While the two-legged ones of us are darting from air-conditioned car to air-conditioned office to air-conditioned home, melons are reveling in the hot weather. They suck up the heat and keep on going.

Take a moment and think about how lucky we are.

Several years ago, an American friend living in Germany decided to try growing watermelon. His German neighbor was quick to tell him it would never work: too wet in Germany, he said, too cold.

Frontier spirit aplenty, the American went out in the dark of night with a flashlight. He dug around in a secluded spot away from his neighbor's view and planted his watermelon seeds. He finally got some vines, he even got some fruit, but the little melons simply sat on the ground and rotted away. Too wet, too cold.

Here's what to look for when bringing a cantaloupe or watermelon to your table. Cantaloupe should have a sweet, musky aroma and should yield only slightly on its blossom end when pushed. The rind of a ripe cantaloupe should have a golden netting covering a creamy yellow background (if the background is green, it's not ripe), and the surface should have no dents or bruises.

A good watermelon, too, will have no dents or gashes. The blossom end won't give on this heavy melon, and the heavier the melon for its size, the better. A watermelon may have a white spot where it lay on the ground, but don't buy a melon with a yellowed spot.

Following are recipes that will give melons a little more priority at the table. The first is from the marketers of California's Westside Cantaloupes. The second is from "Sorbets!" by Jim Tarantino (Crossing Press, $8.95). The third is from Mark Miller's "The Great Salsa Book" (Ten Speed Press, $14.95) and the pickle recipe is from "Soul and Spice" by Heidi Haughy Cusick (Chronicle, $16.95).

SKILLET PORK CHOPS WITH CANTALOUPE BALLS 'N' GINGER SAUCE

1 medium cantaloupe (6-inch diameter)
4 boneless pork loin chops (about 1 pound), trimmed of visible fat (3/4-inch thick)
1 teaspoon sesame oil
1 cup tropical, peach or mango nectar
1 tablespoon finely chopped crystallized ginger
1 tablespoon plus 1 teaspoon cornstarch
3 medium scallions, sliced diagonally
½ cup short, thin sweet red bell pepper strips
2 cups hot cooked rice (no salt added)

Cut melon in half crosswise; remove seeds. With ½- to 1-inch melon baller, scoop out balls of melon to yield 2 cups; set aside. In large nonstick skillet, sprayed with no-stick cooking spray, quickly brown pork chops in oil over medium-high heat, about 5 minutes. Add ¼ cup nectar and ginger; bring to boil. Reduce heat; cover and simmer 8 minutes. Stir together cornstarch and remaining ¼ cup nectar. Push chops to one side; add cornstarch mixture, green onions and red pepper. Cook, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens. Add cantaloupe balls; heat. To serve, arrange chops on hot rice and spoon sauce and melon balls over both. Garnish with fresh mint leaves, if desired. Serves four.

CANTALOUPE CHAMPAGNE SORBET

1 ripe cantaloupe
½ cup powdered sugar
1 cup champagne
Mint sprigs, to garnish

Scoop out fruit from cantaloupe and place in colander over bowl to drain off juice. Reserve juice. Combine melon pieces with sugar and champagne in nonaluminum pan. Bring to a boil. Simmer for 5 minutes. Remove from heat and cool. Pure mixture with reserved cantaloupe juice in food processor or blender.

This mixture can be frozen in a one-quart ice cream freezer, using manufacturer's directions, or use the following method.

Pour mixture into two 8- to 10-inch round cake pans or a 9x13x2-inch sheet pan. Don't use a glass pan. Place filled pan in freezer, covered. Let freeze until mixture forms a 1- to 2-inch frame of ice around inside of pan. This will take 1½ to 2 hours. Remove sorbet from freezer, scrape ice from side of container, and stir with a whisk. Or pour into a mixer bowl and use an electric mixer to break up ice crystals and to incorporate air into mixture.

Return to freezer for 30 to 50 minutes and repeat process. You may have to repeat process 1 to 2 more times, but the time between stirring and returning to freezer will be briefer. The sorbet is finished when it has the consistency of day-old snow (you'll be able to form it or scoop it into a shape). If you intend to serve the sorbet later that day, repeat stirring process about once every couple of hours to keep it from hardening. Make sure sorbet is tightly covered in freezer so it will not pick up other flavors. Makes six servings.

Nutritional analysis per serving: 62 calories, trace fat, 14 grams carbohydrates, no cholesterol, 8 milligrams sodium, 4 percent of calories from fat.

MELON SALSA

¼ cup diced honeydew melon
¼ cup diced cantaloupe
¼ cup diced watermelon
1½ teaspoons minced serrano chile, with seeds
1½ teaspoons minced fresh mint
1½ teaspoons sugar
1 tablespoon fresh lime juice

Thoroughly combine all ingredients in a mixing bowl. Serve with grilled shrimp or chicken. Makes 2½ cups.

Nutritional analysis per tablespoon: 4 calories, trace fat, 1 gram carbohydrates, no cholesterol, 1 milligram sodium, 6 percent of calories from fat.

WATERMELON RIND PICKLES

1 watermelon rind, from a 4- to 5-pound watermelon
2 quarts water
¼ cup pickling salt
4 cups cider vinegar
5 cups sugar
1 piece ginger, about 2 inches long
3 cinnamon sticks, broken
1 tablespoon whole cloves
1 tablespoon whole allspice

Prepare rind by scooping out the red part of the watermelon. Using a knife or vegetable peeler, peel off green rind. Cut white rind into cubes or sticks. You should have about 8 cups. Combine water and salt in glass, plastic or ceramic container and stir in rind pieces. Soak 8 hours or overnight. Drain, but don't rinse. Place watermelon in heavy, nonaluminum pot and add cold water to cover. Bring to a boil. Reduce heat to medium and cook until rinds are just tender, about 15 minutes. Drain.

Combine vinegar and sugar. Place ginger with spices on piece of cheesecloth and tie securely with kitchen string. Add to pot. Bring to boil over high heat, and boil, stirring frequently, until sugar is dissolved and forms a syrup, about 5 minutes. Stir in watermelon rinds, reduce heat to medium-low, simmer, uncovered, until rinds turn clear, about 1 hour. Using slotted spoon, transfer rinds to sterilized canning jars. Ladle in syrup to cover rinds completely. Seal with lids and rings. Store in refrigerator up to 6 months. Makes four pints.

To can: If you are canning to make pickles shelf-stable, make sure syrup comes up to within ½ inch of the rim. Wipe rim with clean, damp cloth and seal with lids and rings according to manufacturer's directions. Process in hot-water bath for 15 minutes. Check for proper seals, then store in cool, dark place in pantry for up to 1 year.

Nutritional analysis per ¼ cup: 22 calories, trace fat, 6 grams carbohydrates, no cholesterol, 47 milligrams sodium, 1 percent of calories from fat.

Summer tough for those hypersensitive to chemicals

By Ray Bragg
N.Y. Times News Service

FORT DAVIS — Every August, Robert McIntyre and Kari Pratt leave their homes in the Davis Mountains or face an unseen assassin. Day-to-day life is bad enough for Pratt and McIntyre, friends suffering from incurable hypersensitivity to thousands of everyday chemical compounds, but the dog days of summer are especially trying in this mountainous area about 200 miles southeast of El Paso.

For Pratt, McIntyre and a handful of other chemically sensitive patients who've sought refuge here for 10 years, August is a month of bunking in truck beds, roadside parks, parking lots or the driveways of friends' homes.

This time, the ill winds came early and without notice.

McIntyre, a former Austin bank trust officer, said the pair barely made it out of their homes before succumbing to the invisible attack.

Pratt says they're still feeling the effects — burning pain and disorientation — of exposure to bug spray applied miles away and carried to them on stiff West Texas breezes 11 days ago.

For them, the enemy isn't the pesticide-carrying winds, but a century-old religious retreat where 3,000 men, women and children from around the nation gather annually for a week of sermons and services.

THREE MILES from the Davis Mountains Resort subdivision where Pratt and McIntyre live, officials at Bloys Campmeeting Association, a nonprofit group that stages the nondenominational worship services, say they've done nothing wrong.

Fritz Kohl, the mayor of nearby Marfa and an association leader, says his group has bent over backward to help Pratt and McIntyre, by changing to a more costly, less effective method of spraying.

Camp custodian Jim Watts also uses Malathion, a commercially available pesticide that's the safest he can find and afford. And Watts makes routine checks of the septic systems that serve the camp's 400 cabins, making sure there are no cracks or leaks that might draw insects.

In the end, however, Kohl said, it's difficult for him to understand how a small amount of spray, diluted by the wind, can travel for miles. And he says camp officials have been doing it the same way for decades.

"This thing has been here for 106 years," a bewildered Kohl said. "How long do you think (Pratt and McIntyre) have been here? Ten years? Would you say they moved into the problem?"

Pratt, a former Iowa homemaker who says pain is her constant companion, acknowledges the camp's need to make the place sanitary for worshippers, but she says it's callous for the group to spray knowing it could kill afflicted neighbors.

"Malathion doesn't do away with people as effectively and quickly as handgun," she wrote in a letter to three weekly newspapers last week, "but it gets the job done — slowly and insidiously over a long period so that no one can pin the rap on the perpetrators."

MULTIPLE CHEMICAL sensitivity is an actual medical disorder and has prompted migration of patients to remote communities such as Wimberley, south of Austin, because there's less urban development, and the climate is favorable.

The chemically sensitive community here has shrunk in recent years, but at one time consisted of several dozen families, most of whom claimed that overexposure to certain toxins — pesticides or industrial chemicals — in mainstream society effectively bruised their immune systems and made them refugees from the modern world, Pratt and McIntyre say.

Some must soak magazines and hang them out to dry in order to wash away ink residue. Others must wash their clothes, which only can be made of natural fiber, in lemon juice because detergents had chemical residue they couldn't tolerate.

Another had wrapped most of his house in aluminum foil to keep it from absorbing microscopic molds and had to change trucks yearly because the vehicles' upholstery became sponges for toxins he couldn't handle.

Pratt, 47, came to the mountains in 1984 after coming down with unexplained illnesses that she attributes to overexposure to pesticides sprayed at a neighbor's home in Des Moines.

UNABLE TO work or leave the area easily, she says she spends the days in her Brushy Canyon home trying to stay awake and do household chores. McIntyre, 58, lives in a steel and concrete shack atop High Lonesome.

He came here a year after Pratt and says his illness stems from an accidental overdose to pesticide similar to Pratt's. He spends his days walking, listening to the radio or sleeping. He lives on disability payments and food stamps.

For years they've fought to make the region a pesticide-free zone. A major battle was won when a nearby vineyard switched to organic pest control.

These days, most of their neighbors for miles around have taken to that method, or at least give the chemically sensitive folks a call before they have to use potentially harmful sprays.

MANDY: Teen to compete in national pageant

(From 1E)

Mandy said.

Some activities — other than rehearsals — the contestants have participated in have included a family night dinner, a taping for the CBS Morning News (which will air Monday or Tuesday morning), a fashion show and a charity auction. For the charity auction, each contestant brought an item representative of their state to be auctioned off. Mandy's item was a 1993 Dallas Cowboy Super Bowl autographed football.

"She really wanted to get a signed Houston Rockets basketball since they won the championship this year, but we didn't have enough notice to do it," Mrs. Pollock said.

"Mandy said the girls sing the theme song for the CBS Morning News and that she's the one in the center of the front row wearing a white, one-piece swimsuit standing next to Shauna Gimbal, the current Miss Teen USA," Mrs. Pollock said.

Saturday evening, the contestants participated in preliminary evening gown and swimsuit competition. Personal interviews with the judges will be conducted today and Monday.

"They separated the girls into two groups. The first group interviews on Sunday (today) and the second groups has their interviews on Monday. Mandy is number 17 in the first group," Mrs. Pollock said.

The pageant has added a new competition this year, as well. It is the Salon Selective Hair Competition. Each contestant's hair is judged on how well the hair is maintained, its style and the contestant's self-analysis of why she has chosen that style.

"Mandy said she likes the long, silky look because it fits her lifestyle. She can pull it back in a ponytail while she is cheering or wear it in an elegant twist for appearances," Mrs. Pollock said. The winner will be announced during the telecast.

And don't be surprised if you hear a lot of fans cheering for Miss Texas Teen USA. Although there are not a lot of people from Midland or Texas who were able to attend, Mrs. Pollock is originally from the Wichita area and many of her relatives still live close by.

"The pageant was either going to be in Texas or in Wichita, Kan., so I think I had an advantage either way," Mandy said. "If it had been here (Texas), I would have had the home state advantage and everybody would be behind me. Since it's in Kansas, that's where all my mom's family is, so we're having our family reunion during the pageant and I'm going to have quite a cheering section.

"I'm really looking forward to seeing family I haven't seen in a long time and meeting some of my cousins I've never met before."

The Miss Texas Teen USA cheering squad reserved a block of 30 tickets in the first four or five rows in the center of the balcony, and all of those tickets are spoken for.

In addition, Mrs. Pollock has 12 large Texas flags which the group will be waving in support of Mandy.

"We hope to create enough ruckus to get everybody's attention," Mrs. Pollock said. "I told Mandy that I hoped we wouldn't embarrass her, and she just told me to go for it."

WHEN ASKED if being a beauty queen was a life-long dream for her daughter, Mrs. Pollock said when Mandy was 4 years old, she told her she wanted to be a Dallas Cowboy Cheerleader or a beauty queen.

"We were getting ready to take her to her first day of kindergarten, she wanted to know if she could have a limo ride. I told her she would have to wait until she was a beauty queen for that, and now that dream has come true. Part of the pageant's standard contract is that the winner is picked up in a limousine.

"Probably her only dream that hasn't come true right now is owning a '57 Chevy," Mrs. Pollock said.

While the 5-foot, 8-inch blonde with green eyes is very up-to-date on all the latest fashions, she confesses to loving the '50s.

"I'm a '50's fanatic. I love '50's music, clothes and especially the cars," Mandy said.

When back in Midland, Mandy is a recent graduate of Lee High School where she was an LHS cheerleader (all four years), a member of National Honor Society, Senior Girls, the Art Club and the Rebelee and Homecoming Courts.

Her summer was spent planning and going on her senior trip to Cancun, Mexico; attending a cheerleading camp in Athens, making appearances at city and area pageants as the state queen and two weeks getting her wardrobe together for the national competition.

She was able to spend a couple of weeks in Midland before leaving for Kansas, when she took time to relax and spend some time with friends, family and her golden retriever Bogey. She also was a special guest at the Miss Permian Basin USA Pageant where she passed on her crown to her successor and was the guest of honor at a special "send off party" July 28 at Michael's Charcoal Grill with cake and ice cream. Numerous well-wishers came by to send Mandy on her way to the Miss Teen USA pageant with lots of luck. Many who attended had the opportunity to look at Mandy's photos from the Miss Texas Teen USA pageant.

When asked what she has enjoyed most about being Miss Texas Teen USA, she didn't mention the fur coat, the crown diamond ring, the Miss Texas Teen USA gold and diamond necklace or the $32,000 scholarship to any university in Texas. She didn't mention the crown or banner, the swimsuit wardrobe, the evening gown wardrobe, the workout wardrobe or any of the other clothes.

THE MOST enjoyable aspect of her reign:

"It would have to be meeting the people from all over the state. I didn't realize how many cultures make up the state of Texas, how diverse the state was. I was in South Texas when Selena was killed and I could see how the people there reacted to it," Mandy said.

As for the one memory of her reign up to now that she will always remember, Mandy said it would be all the little girls.

"The little girls love it (seeing beauty queens). They don't care if you're Miss Watermelon Queen or Miss Universe. They just care that you paid attention to them and made them feel special. It's so neat," she said.

"I also really enjoyed being a special guest for the Miss Texas USA pageant. It was neat to be on the other side of the pageant and it gave me an idea of what to expect at Miss Teen USA."

In speculation of winning Miss Teen USA, Mandy said, "I don't have a clue what I would do. I already can't think . I can't keep my mind on one thing.

"After they named the top five at Miss Texas Teen, everything was a blur. I couldn't remember anything," Mandy said. "When it got down to just me and Miss San Antonio, I remember thinking I was so happy I had made it this far. But I knew I wasn't going to win. This was her third year to be in the pageant and she had made top five all three years. I figured, 'third time is a charm,' and she was going to win.

"When the tape of the pageant came in the mail, Mom and I raced to the TV so we could see what happened. I couldn't remember anything and Mom was being congratulated by everybody, so she didn't get to see my walk or anything. It was really exciting."

As for Mandy's plans for her future, she will attend MC this fall where she is a cheerleader ... that is unless there's another crown in her future.

Midlander Mandy Jeffreys has spent the last two weeks in rehearsals at the Century II Performing Arts and Convention Center in Wichita, Kan., in preparation to represent Texas in the Miss Teen USA pageant to be broadcast live 8 p.m. Tuesday on CBS.

(From 1E)

At the end of the telecast, it is possible that Permian Basin residents could witness their own Mandy Jeffreys being crowned Miss Teen USA by the reigning queen, Shauna Gambill.

The new Miss Teen USA will win approximately $150,000 in cash and prizes, as well as the opportunity to make appearances representing the pageant for the next year.

While the selection process during the telecast may seem rather quick, really, it is the culmination of two weeks of rehearsals and work by the contestants and many months of work by pageant officials and staff.

The contestants arrived in Wichita Aug. 1. After fittings for swimsuits and costumes, the rehearsals and appearances began.

The preliminary pageant was Saturday evening, where judges had their first view of the contestants and began their selection process by judging each contestant on stage in swimsuit and evening gown competition. Today and Monday morning, the judges will have the opportunity interview each girl, one-on-one. From these preliminary events, the judges selections will be made known with the announcement of the finalists during the live broadcast Tuesday evening.

Once the finalists are announced, all previous scores are erased and each contestant starts over.

During the live telecast, viewers will be shown the judges' scores for each contestant during each category of the final competition.

The contestants range in age from 15 to 18, with Miss Colorado Melissa Schuster and Miss Iowa Chelsey Ridge, being the youngest contestants.

The show will be hosted by Bob Goen, weekend anchor and correspondent for "Entertainment Tonight," and co-hosted by Maty Monfort, host of ABC daytime show "Mike and Maty." Vocal quartet All-4-One will perform "I Can Love You Like That," from their newly released album. Other guests will include 1995 Miss Universe Chelsi Smith and 1995 Miss USA Shanna Moakler.

The Miss Teen USA Pageant debuted in August 1983 in Lakeland, Fla. The location of the pageant has moved to several states, even coming to El Paso in 1987, the only time Texas has hosted the teen pageant.

So don't miss out on what could be history in the making for the Permian Basin if Mandy becomes the new Miss Teen USA.

Make bridal showers relaxing for couple

By LoAna M. Gonzales
Associated Press

The bride-to-be of the '90s has a lot of things are her mind:

Finishing school, holding down a job, planning the wedding, and finding a place to live after the "I dos" have been spoken are possible areas of concern.

Fortunately, bridal showers are one place that the guest of honor can leave the planning to someone else. Family friends and relatives of the bride can help in that department.

Patty Veselka, who recently had several parties thrown for her, said bridal showers gave her a chance to relax during the most hectic time of hner life.

"It was just so much fun to be around our friends, the people who made the whole thing special," Veselka said of the showers.

"But mostly, I have to admit, Brent and I were glad to relax and see someone else do the planning and the running around," she said laughing.

The following list should come in handy when planning a shower for the future bride and/or groom:

■ Wedding showers can begin as early as four months before the big day, especially for the bride who will have multiple showers.

■ A shower theme is a good idea. It will liven up the party and give the guests some gift ideas.

■ The bride-to-be should arrive at the shower in plenty of time to introduce guests who may not know each other.

■ Guests of honor should show their host or hostess appreciation with a small gift of thanks, such as flowers, the day of the shower.

■ Keep in mind that anyone who is invited to a shower should also be invited to the wedding. However, it has been said that office showers are an exception.

■ For the more traditional bride who will have mostly women-only showers, try to plan at least one affair where the groom can also get in on the festivities. After all, this is his big day, too.

■ The absolute latest a shower should be thrown is two weeks before the wedding. Any time after that will be too hectic to enjoy.

■ Make sure someone at the shower is planning to bring a camera or videocassette recorder and has plenty of film.

SEEDS FOR THOUGHT

Gardeners' questions about fruit crops are answered

By Deborah A. Benge

Go ahead! Take a big, juicy bite from that peach just picked from the tree.

What could be better than picking fresh peaches from a tree in your very own backyard? Many of us have had that vision, and as a result there are lots of backyard peaches in the area. No doubt there's at least one peach tree on every residential block and probably many more.

Benge-Frost

With that many peaches in home gardens, there are lots of questions that pop up concerning them. Here's some of the questions that are commonly asked this time of year.

Q: My peaches are almost ready to pick, but I am afraid the birds are going to beat me to them. What can I do to keep them from destroying the entire crop?

To try to keep birds away from your precious peaches is to take action as soon as they show up. Don't delay, or scare tactics will have less impact. As soon as you notice the first signs of bird damage, begin to use an alternating series of scare tactics.

Visually frightening devices can be helpful, such as kites and balloons which are designed to look like threatening predators with flashing eyes and movement. Shiny mylar tape or shimmering foil strips that move in the wind and flash in the sunlight can be helpful for a while. It's important not to put these scare tactics out until the first signs of damage.

Frightening sounds have very limited effect on keeping birds away, so don't rely too much on this one.

If push comes to shove, bird netting may be helpful, but you must try to close all openings to keep bird out. Actually the netting is easier and more effective when used on grapes, berries and smaller crops.

Q: I've got wasps of every size and description on my peaches. A large brown and green metallic beetle that looks (and sounds) like a miniature flying Volkswagen is munching out too. What can I do?

A: Not much. The wasps and beetles are attracted to ripening fruit. There are always a few fruit that will ripen before the others. Fruit with a wound, caused by hail, insects or birds, will ripen before undamaged fruit will. The open wound and smell of ripening fruit will attract various wasps, beetles and other insects who like sweet or fermenting fruit.

Not much can be done about the insects. You can spray sevin (carbaryl) without it having much effect on harvest. After spraying sevin there's a one-day waiting period, but the sprays are not going to control that many insects. It might be better to put up with some of the bugs and perhaps pick a little earlier (firm ripe stage) than you normally would.

Some people have made a trap using overly ripe or fermenting cantaloupe, watermelon or peaches cut open and sprinkled with sevin dust. This should be placed in a bucket, dish or other container close to the tree but out of the reach of pets and children.

Q: When should peaches be picked for the best flavor and fewest blemishes? Are there some guidelines I can follow?

A: "Mature" and "ripe" are not synonymous terms when applied to most fruits. Mature fruit have all of the internal components necessary to fully ripen even if they are not ready to eat. But a ripe fruit is at the point at which it is ready to eat. Many fruits, including peaches, reach maturity while still hard, several days before they ripen.

For the backyard gardener, the best flavor is obtained when you leave the fruit on the tree until it is ready to pick and pop in your mouth.

But if you have a bad bird or bug problem, picking fruit when mature rather than ripe may be the more practical thing to do.

Characteristics that can indicate maturity in peaches are normal size, a subtle background color change from green to yellow, plus the normal colors typical of that variety, and texture that's hard to firm. This is very subjective and experience will improve your ability to determine maturity and ripe.

A: Sap or dark crumbly substance at or near the soil line of any stone fruit (peach, apricot, plum, cherry) is an indication of peach tree borer.

Peach tree borer is the larval stage of a moth. The larvae bore into peach or other stone fruits close to the soil line. Heavily infested trees may be girdled, which will kill the trees.

It is not known how many peachtree borers larvae it takes to cause economic damage. A single feeding worm can devastate a young tree with a 1- to 2-inch truck diameter.

There are several generations a summer, but it is the last generation that is the most damaging because they spend the fall and winter as larvae in the tree. Adult moths lay eggs about mid- to late August. A protective trunk spray will help kill larvae as they emerge from eggs so they never bore into tree trunks.

This pest is best controlled in mid- to late August. For best results, post-harvest, thoroughly spray or paint the lower limbs, trunk and soil line with a recommended pesticide, like chlorpyrifos or endosulfan.

Or in October paradichlorobenzene crystals can be applied in a ring around the base of the tree, not touching the tree, to help kill borers that may still be in the trunk.

Q: I have peaches that bear fruit at different times of the year, but the vary greatly in flavor. The spring pick peaches have a cling stone and they are not as sweet as my July harvested peach. The July harvested peach is free stone and has a very sweet flavor. Why is there so much difference between the two?

A: Early season peaches leaf out in March and may need picking as early as April or May. During that time period a tree is blooming, setting fruit, developing roots, leafing out, growing new wood and filling fruit, so there's not much time for the tree to be making excess sugars to be stored into peaches.

Meanwhile, mid- and late peaches have almost all season to grow and develop so fruit will naturally be higher sugars.

One disadvantage to the mid- and late harvested peaches is the increased insect pressure and other potentially damaging factors like hail, bird damage, etc.

As for the peach pit, typically spring harvested peaches are generally cling peaches and mid- and late season peaches are largely free stone.

These are just a few of the questions and problems that come into the Extension office this time of year concerning peaches. One thing to remember about growing peaches is that they are subject to many insect, disease and weather-related problems and as a result they are a short-lived fruit tree.

Wood floors should be treated with respect

Associated Press

If your old house boasts original plank, strip or parquet wood floors, giving them the proper care is the key to retaining their authenticity. You should think of them as an antique underfoot, and therefore treat them with the respect and dignity they deserve.

What you decide to do with your old wood floor depends. first of all, on what type of floor you're dealing with, the appearance you're striving for, how authentic you want to be and, finally, how much maintenance you're willing to devote to keeping the floor in shape.

This can run the gamut from leaving an old plank floor unfinished to varnishing or shellacking a Victorian strip or parquet floor.

Knowing a bit about wood floors, along with the choices you face as a sensitive restorer, will help you deal with this part of your restoration wisely.

Up until about the middle of the 1800s, the wood floors in most American houses were made from wide planks, often pine. Although some favored painting and stenciling these early floors, for the most part they were left bare or unfinished.

Generations of use allowed the wood to wear and cup naturally, creating an aged patina that can't be duplicated. It is these years of living that give an unfinished plank floor its charm and mellowness. So, in many cases, the most authentic way to treat an old unfinished wood floor is to leave it that way — unfinished.

Sometimes, though, folks are concerned about exposing the bare wood to the ravages of daily living. Food and pet stains can wreak havoc with untreated boards.

For those who desire the period look but want some protection on the planks, some restorers suggest treating the planks with a clear penetrating oil, followed by a coat of wax. Depending on the kind of usage it sees, expect to rewax the floor every year or two.

If the floor is in bad shape, how to bring it back for 20th-century use is often a professional call. More than likely, the job will begin with a good cleaning. Often, all that's used is trisodium phosphate (TSP) and water. We don't suggest trying to sand down an original plank floor. They are usually so worn that you risk ruining the floor.

Early plank floors were butted together — rarely tongue and grooved. In some cases, you can flip the boards around to expose the never-before-walked-on side. A light sanding should give you a beautiful new "antique" floor.

Shirts are always in latest style

From oversize shirts to shrunken T-shirts to polo shirts and back to classic shirts. That's how fashion goes round and round.

The newest look in shirts is close to the body, like those Cacharel shirts women in the 70's used to preshrink to the right body-hugging configuration.

Saks Fifth Avenue has MAG Magaschoni's white cotton shirt ($92), Donna Karan's pique shirt ($225) and a sleeveless version in a viscose-nylon blend by Parallel ($88).

Barneys New York has Vivienne Tam's nylon mesh shirt in pink, yellow, black or white ($118); Vivienne Westwood's cotton-spandex in peach or black ($212), A Line Anne Klein's in white cotton ($78) and Barneys' own in peach or ivory silk ($290).

Bloomingdale's has nylon shirts in hot pink by Joe's Tees ($48) and in black stretch nylon mesh by Parallel ($78).

Engagement rings come in sizes and shapes for everyone

Hearst News Service

Engagement rings can be something old, something new or something blue — there are styles for everyone.

The classic, round brilliant-cut diamond solitaire is the ring leader with 59 percent of all engagement rings in 1993 boasting round diamonds, according to an article in the July issue of Town & Country, but it's not the only ring in town.

Shapes, facets and settings all have alternative looks. In shape, marquise, emerald, square, pear-shaped and oval cuts are gaining in popularity.

"Many customers love fancy shaped diamonds," said Jeanne Daniel, senior vice president of merchandising at Tiffany & Co., "which is why we are developing designs founded on the intrinsic character of these shapes."

Tiffany's latest is the bold 18-karat-gold "Atlas" engagement ring with a horizontal emerald-cut diamond.

There's also news about facets. Suberi Brothers, a diamond-jewelry manufacturer in New York, has employed the latest advances in cutting technology to create a series of five new cuts. They have between 62 and 64 facets, while the traditionally cut diamond has 58. Suberi claims a diamond cut this way will appear about 50 percent larger than its actual carat weight.

In 1886 Tiffany gave the world the six-pronged setting and to this day the "Tiffany setting" is the most popular way to wear a solitaire. Now the company offers a bezel-set diamond "Etoile" engagement ring. In both the 18-karat gold and platinum versions, a small tube of platinum cradles a round or emerald-cut diamond so that none of the stone's brilliance is sacrificed.

Platinum once again is the metal of choice for engagement rings. The bridal market has driven the popularity of platinum up 300 percent in the past few years.

"Platinum used to be just a material to hold the stone in place," said Laurie Hudson, president of the Platinum Guild International. "Now it's showcased as an important design element."

As for something blue, at one time only royalty set colored gems in engagement rings — but not any more.

"From artists to bankers, look at their fingers," said Susan Reinstein of Reinstein-Ross. "Color is in."

Her firm, known for its handmade jewelry of high-karat gold and vibrantly colored gemstones, carries sapphire rings in every hue, from the customary blue to the unusual, such as purple and orange.

Paul Morelli also designs unconventional rings, with colored stones and with diamonds accenting the bands. Color is particularly popular with women who are getting married for the second time.

Many couples prefer to use a family heirloom for an engagement ring, but sometimes such jewelry is already spoken for. But with all the fine antique rings available these days, finding "something old" is entirely possible.

"Couples in search of antique rings are drawn to the overall artistry of them," said John M. Boening, president of James Robinson Inc., in New York City, "as opposed to just being conscious of the value of a stone."

Another appeal of buying old is originality.

"I don't want to wear anything that I might see on someone else," recently engaged Tricia Barroll, a New York City marketing executive, says. "I want to find something like what my grandmother wore, an old mine-cut diamond set in platinum with just a bit of filigree."

Retail merchant William Whiteley called himself 'the Universal Provider'

LONDON (AP) — Retail merchant William Whiteley (1831-1907) came to London from Yorkshire in 1851 and began working in a drapery business. By 1863 he had his own drapery store in the Bayswater area. It became highly successful, thanks to Whiteley's innovative policies.

Whiteley marked prices of all goods in plain figures, "dressed" his store windows attractively and took only small profits from the business. By 1866, Whiteley had added various departments offering different items, and he called himself "the Universal Provider."

In January 1907, Whiteley was shot dead in his office by a man named Horace Rayner, who claimed (wrongly) to be his illegitimate son.

The murderer's death sentence was commuted to penal servitude.

By David J. Elrich
N.Y. Times News Service

Once the province of doctors and bond traders, pagers have become indispensable to all kinds of people on the go, as much a home electronics necessity as the personal computer and the fax machine.

Pagers, or beepers, are now used by parents to keep in touch with roaming teen-agers or their own elderly parents, to allow baby sitters to get in touch with them in an emergency, to alert someone to pick up a forgotten item on a shopping list or to save money (by giving out the number for the pager instead of the cellular phone, which is more expensive to use).

Singles give out their pager numbers so they don't have to sit by the phone waiting for Ms. or Mr. Right to call. And hip restaurants use pagers as electronic leashes, giving them to diners who may want to take a walk while they wait for a table.

Pagers are simply an adaptable way to stay in touch — without wires. The industry estimates that half of the three million people who will become new pager subscribers this year are everyday consumers — not physicians or plumbers.

Because they're easy to use and affordable, 85 percent of the 27 million pagers in use are numeric, meaning that they show numbers only. When the device pages you — by sounding a beep, playing a melody or silently vibrating, depending on how you set it — a number appears on a small one-line screen. This can be the phone number of someone who wants you to call or even a code containing a special message; for instance, many teen-agers assign a number to a meeting place.

Only about 15 percent of pagers in use are alpha-numeric, displaying one to four lines of text (letters and numbers). Although useful, they cost more and are more cumbersome because the message has to be sent through an operator or a computer.

IN THE OLD days, you had to go to an office supply store to buy a pager. But now any large consumer-electronics retailer like Radio Shack or The Wiz will clip a beeper to your belt, purse or backpack.

A standard numeric black beeper costs around $75 plus a monthly service charge of about $10 to $15. Alpha-numeric pagers cost about $125 plus a monthly service charge of about $25. The cost of either type can be much less if it's on sale or if you sign up for an extended period with a service provider. As with cellular phones, there are activation fees of $10 to $20, but the fees are often waived.

Pagers are simply an adaptable way to stay in touch — without wires. The industry estimates that half of the three million people who will become new pager subscribers this year are everyday consumers — not physicians or plumbers.

There was some fear in recent years in the paging industry that cellular phones would make beepers obsolete. This hasn't happened, mostly because pagers are now cheaper and provide a way to save money on cellular phone bills. Cellular phone users pay for incoming and outgoing calls.

If a call to a pager isn't important, the device can store the number in memory and then you can return the call from a less-expensive phone booth. The average monthly pager bill in 1994 was $13.10, as against an average cellular phone bill of about $50, according to Economic and Management Consultants International in Washington.

BASIC SERVICE for a numeric pager usually includes 500 beeps a month, or about 16 a day. If you have an extended family, you may want more. Many numeric pagers show the time and date of the page and have a lighted display that can be read in, say, a movie theater. (Please put your pager in vibrate mode, rather than annoying everyone around you with a beep or a melody.) Advanced models hold 8 or 16 pages in memory even when turned off.

Paging services cover a limited geographic region, so be sure the service you choose covers the region you need. The retailer should have a map for quick reference. Nationwide paging services are available, but they cost about $50 a month and are overkill unless you travel a lot.

Pagers have also evolved from black hunks of plastic to slightly more inviting shapes and colors. Motorola's Bravo Express line of pagers offers fashion colors like Bimini Blue and Vibra Pink. The top-of-the-line Motorola Gold Line numeric pager ($229 suggested retail) is for the Montblanc set with its fountain-pen shape and gold clip. Most pagers are manufactured by Motorola, although competitors like AT&T will soon be making their own.

ALL NUMERIC pagers work the same way. You dial a pager number, hear a tone or several beeps, enter your number and hang up. An element of electronic faith ensues, since you assume the page has been sent out over the radio waves. But if the person you're paging is riding the subway, you're out of luck — signals will not travel underground.

And as more people use pagers, the amount of signal space (or spectrum) available on the radio waves is getting tight. Most pages are sent and received in 30 seconds, but at heavy traffic times like Friday afternoon, there can be delays of up to 10 minutes.

If you're facing an emergency (not just asking someone to bring home some freshly made capellini) this is nerve-racking; all you can do is page again until you get an answer. But the Federal Communications Commission has opened up more radio frequencies, which should eliminate the problem by next year.

Sending alpha-numeric pages is much more involved than simple numeric messages. You call an operator, dictate the message and it's sent. Or, if you're sitting at a PC and have the proper software, you can send it yourself. Or, Motorola has a Wordsender ($249), a telephone with a special keyboard that transmits pages.

MobileMedia is working with America Online on a method that will allow the sending of alpha-numeric pages through that popular on-line service. Hand-held computers like the Sharp Zaurus let you send them as well. The basic $25 monthly service fee for alpha-number pagers includes 50 operator-assisted pages plus 250 self-sent messages. Or, you can choose 25 alpha messages and 250 pages for $8 month.

WITH PROLIFERATING pagers, excuses are dwindling for forgetting to bring home the triple-cheese pizza or staying out beyond curfew without permission. Unless, of course, you leave the pager in a desk drawer or turn it off or the battery dies (now there's a good excuse).

Aging places parents' brains in 'Jeopardy'

EDITOR'S NOTE: This column originally appeared Oct. 9, 1990.

By Erma Bombeck

My kids tell me I am losing 100,000 brain cells every day of my life. They base this on the fact that I cannot finish a sentence anymore without three or four people to help me fill in the blanks. They say it's like talking to a contestant on a game show where the audience participates.

Bombeck

I read where one author said we feed our minds intellectual junk food so that our brains are like globs of Elmer's glue. They harden before you can do anything with them. That's disgusting.

I prefer to regard my brain as a cheap computer that sorts information. Over the years, it has stored so much useless stuff that it is on overload and takes a little longer to bring the information up on the screen. I can recall my phone number when I was 9 years old, but I can't recall important things like who played opposite Gregory Peck in "Gentleman's Agreement." Give me a minute ... it's coming. Oh, you know, she played in "Oklahoma" ... her name begins with a B ... it's on the tip of my tongue. Wait a minute ... CELESTE HOLM!

When one of the kids said, "If you don't use it, you lose it," that made sense. I started to take Isaac Asimov's quiz that appears in our newspaper every morning. Without fail, I reached the Ph.D. level. However, I cheated so badly, I lost all respect for myself. So I started to watch "Jeopardy."

Every afternoon at 4 p.m. I would stop what I was doing and sit in front of the TV set in a straight-back chair and concentrate. I knew the answers. It was just that I didn't remember them until the middle of the 6 o'clock news. It was demoralizing to watch a 16-year-old answer questions in history when I couldn't come up with the answers. And I had been there.

Also, I became quite morose one day when I did pretty well during the game, but lost all my winnings when the final question had to do with Greek mythology. Where do they find these people? Are they all little endowments from a genius sperm bank?

I think the brain does go on overdrive as you get older. I blame this on the kids. When they were small, my brain was on call 24 hours a day. I figured out once I made on the average of 35 decisions an hour — not major decisions, but questions where an instant answer was required.

Now that I've stopped running their lives, I've sort of kicked back and let them come up with their own answers. One of them called the other day and asked if he had had mumps as a child. I thought a second. "What is Centerville, Ohio, in 1965?" He said, "OK" and hung up.

I'm really proud of myself, but face it, he's losing it and he's only in his 30s.

Cajun spices, Louisiana recipes are hot stuff, in more ways than one

By Art Chapman
N.Y. Times News Service

JOSHUA — I had the opportunity to visit with Ben Benoit, his son Ronnie, and son-in-law Joe at their business here 20 miles south of Fort Worth.

Benoit is pronounced "ben-wah." It is a Cajun name and Ben and Ronnie are certainly that.

"You have to be from South Louisiana and you have to speak French," Ronnie said of Cajun qualifications, although instead of Cajun, he used a more colloquial term. Nothing else will do. You can't have the recipe for blackened redfish and call yourself a Cajun. You have to do more than just own two of Paul Prudhomme's cookbooks.

The Benoits were showing me their kitchen; a spick-and-span stainless steel place where they blend their own dynamic brand of boudin: a pork, spice and rice mixture that the Benoits make into both links and fried balls.

The boudin is extraordinary. Some people say it is an acquired taste, and I suppose it might be. But to me, acquiring a taste for boudin is an easy task indeed.

I wish I could share their recipe with you, but first of all, they didn't share it with me. Ben said he once gave the recipe to a relative back in Jennings, La., but even then the recipe was for a hundred pounds. "I left it up to him to get in down to a smaller amount," Ben said with a laugh.

Also, I'm afraid it wouldn't exactly be low-fat, especially the boudin balls, which are formed with an ice cream scoop and then dropped into a deep-fat fryer.

But as we sat and talked about the boudin, and catfish court bouillon, cochon de lait, and other Cajun dishes, my appetite for the bayou spices ran wild, and as soon as I got home, I went to the bookshelves. What could we fix? What was available at the grocery store? What wouldn't take all day to prepare? And what was low-fat?

Narrows it down a bit, doesn't it?

Here's what I came upon. It is a shrimp dish, but you could use crawfish if you prefer. You can even use a firm, white fish like cod if you like. It's from "Enola Prudhomme's Low-Fat Favorites" (Hearst Books, $17.95).

SHRIMP SAUCE PIQUANT

2 cups chopped onions
½ cup chopped green bell pepper
½ cup chopped celery
1 (14½-ounce) can salt-free whole tomatoes
3 tablespoons tomato paste
2 cups salt-free chicken broth
1 bay leaf
1 tablespoon low-sodium Worcestershire sauce
1 teaspoon brown sugar
½ teaspoon granulated garlic
½ teaspoon dried basil, crushed
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon ground red pepper (cayenne)
1 pound medium shrimp, peeled and deveined
¼ cup finely chopped green onions
¼ cup finely chopped fresh parsley

Spray the inside of a 5-quart Dutch oven with nonstick vegetable cooking spray and place over high heat. Add the onions, bell pepper and celery and saut for 8 minutes. Add the tomatoes, tomato paste, broth and bay leaf; stir for 20 minutes. Add the next 6 ingredients; cover and cook for 5 minutes. Add the shrimp, green onions and parsley. Reduce the heat to medium and cook, covered, 10 minutes longer. Serves six.

Nutritional analysis per serving: 114 calories, 1 gram fat, 148 milligrams cholesterol, 355 milligrams sodium, less than 1 percent of calories from fat.

Gloves can be hip or classic

By Anne-Marie Schiro
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Once, a woman — young, middle-aged or elderly — wouldn't leave the house without wearing gloves. Look at old photographs or vintage movies for proof. But after the radical 1960s turned many traditions upside down, gloves simply became a way to keep the hands warm.

No more.

This fall two extremes of fashionable women, the conservative and the hip, will be wearing gloves for their own sake.

The hip will look for shiny black patent or animal prints, the classicists for white or black leather or some shade of suede.

Bergdorf Goodman has wrist-length suede gloves in beige tones and pastels to complement fall's colors ($75). Saks Fifth Avenue has prim white leather gloves with pointelle trim ($98) and mod black or white patent gloves with fabric palms ($80).

Henri Bendel's mod gloves are in black stretch polyester with silver zippers ($45) and in leather with turned-back cuffs of leopard-patterned suede ($110).

"Women my age have special health care needs. Luckily, we also have Planned Parenthood."

Surprised that a woman my age is going to Planned Parenthood? Well that's understandable. Because a lot of women think Planned Parenthood is only for the young and people who need birth control. But it's so much more!

Planned Parenthood people completely understand my special health care needs. I can take advantage of a wide range of affordable services like menopause counseling, gynecological exams, breast exams, Pap tests and hormone therapy. And their knowledge and professionalism make me feel very secure.

What I also love about Planned Parenthood is that they take the time to know me and answer all my questions in plain, simple language. Planned Parenthood people are sensitive, understanding and courteous. And everything is private and confidential. To put it simply, they really care.

As far as I'm concerned, there's no place better than Planned Parenthood for all my special health care needs. It's a very important part of my life.

For workaholics, vacations are out of the question

By Lynn Steinberg
N.Y. Times News Service

Year after year, as others depart for dazzling destinations around the globe, Stanton Beck stays firmly planted in his office chair.

"I don't take vacations," he said. "I don't go places because it's not worth the hell you pay when you get back."

Beck is 35, a partner in the Seattle law firm of Lane Powell Spears Lubersky, a man so driven he says he likes being interrupted by clients on weekends or late at night.

"It makes me feel like I'm providing a service these guys deserve," he said.

Beck doesn't know how much vacation he has coming; he supposes he earns at least four weeks a year. But the matter is moot since he never seems to get away. In the past 10 years, he has taken 12 days off.

"It is," he said, "the price of doing business."

Beck has a wife and two children, ages 6 and 3, who he said are similarly motivated "Type A" personalities.

"We're just a hyperactive nucleus of a family," he said.

APPARENTLY, THE Becks aren't alone.

A just-released survey commissioned by Hilton Hotels Corp. showed 38 percent of the 1,025 adults questioned have not taken a vacation in at least one year; 21 percent have not taken a vacation for two or more years.

Corporate downsizing has meant heavier workloads for many employees, and some say they can't break away. They worry something will go wrong while they are gone or that their absence will be interpreted as something short of commitment, particularly at competitive, highly charged companies.

In the book "Hard Drive," authors James Wallace and Jim Erickson write about computer programmers once so obsessed with their work at Microsoft, they had to be temporarily locked out of their offices.

BUT JOB security is only part of the picture. A pioneer work ethic and plain old neuroses also keep some folks behind their desks day in and day out.

These are the people who must be dragged off for a week of fun and frivolity, who cannot fathom idle time at the seashore.

"Sitting on a beach for a week sounds delightful," said John M. Bryce, a 46-year-old customs broker who runs his own business, W.J. Byrnes & Co. "The question is, 'Can you relax?' I wouldn't, I couldn't relax."

Bryce's longest absence from work was in 1975 when he took five days off. He was sick with pneumonia.

Bryce even cut his weeklong honeymoon short 12 years ago. He and his wife, Marti, were married Saturday and left Sunday for the San Juan Islands north of Seattle. They were home Wednesday afternoon and Bryce was back in the office Thursday.

MARTI BRYCE is good-humored about her husband's work habits and seems resigned to a vacationless existence.

"His father was like that and his father's father was like that," she said. "I knew what I was getting into."

The Bryces, who have children ages 10, 8 and 5, do indulge in one short trip a year — to Lake Chelan for Mother's Day.

"We leave Friday after work, and we're home Sunday," said Marti Bryce. "We've done that close to eight years. That's it."

Her husband explains: "I'm third-generation in a family business that was built by being there and taking care of clients. It takes a long time to build a clientele and a short time to lose them."

MAYBE THAT'S why Brett Bader's vacations have been so few and far between.

'You spend two or three weeks working 10-hour days, getting all the meetings done, making sure all the loose ends are tied up. Then you come back. You're exhausted, you're playing catch-up, dealing with all the stuff that happened while you were gone, all the voice mails and the e-mails. Sometimes it just isn't worth it.'

— Theresa Tamura, communications project specialist

Bader is the 35-year-old president of the Madison Group in the city of Bellevue, across Lake Washington from Seattle, which does political consulting and corporate relations.

Then in April, he broke down and accompanied his wife and two children to Disneyland. In May, he spent a week in New York. Yes, he called his office three times daily, and yes, he spent a good part of dinner at Sardi's outside the restaurant, on the phone tending to business.

But he was on vacation. Interruptions go with the territory.

"It's the thing any small businessman has to deal with," he said.

But those interruptions, that constant need to stay in touch, erodes what little free time Americans have.

"MOST PEOPLE look at leisure and say, 'I have no time to play,' but play is an important part of life," said Charles Whitcomb, chairman of the Department of Recreation and Leisure Studies at San Jose State University in California.

Whitcomb and his staff preach the gospel of "the balanced life." But we live in a society that believes in delayed gratification: work now, play later.

Alas, "later" sometimes never comes. Vacations in this country already are among the shortest in the industrialized world, according to data compiled by Hewitt Associates, a human resources consulting firm based in Lincolnshire, Ill.

In Europe, where vacation policies generally are set by the government, workers enjoy far more time off than Americans.

Austrians get 30 days' vacation after one year on the job; Finns and Swedes, 25; Germans, 24.

By comparison, a survey of 1,035 U.S. companies, which all set their own vacation policies, showed that 82 percent allowed employees only 10 days off after a year of service.

And some people don't even take that.

LARRY HILE, a partner in the downtown Seattle accounting firm of Deloitte & Touche, uses only one of the four weeks vacation he gets each year. He loses the rest, but said he has no choice.

His clients expect him to be there.

"Not just the firm," he said, "but you personally."

Likewise, Dennis Gove, a 47-year-old stockbroker at Piper Jaffray Co. in Seattle, can't seem to tear himself away from the office.

"This is kind of a hands-on business," he said. "Things don't happen unless you initiate them. If you take time off, that's time lost. You lose out on what's going on."

Gove's last real vacation was three years ago when he and his wife took their three children to Disneyland. They were gone three days.

It wasn't always like that. There was a time when he took at least one week off a year.

"But it was a different business then," Gove said. "The world has changed. Information has become instantaneous. Things happen so much quicker."

If something goes wrong with a company today, the stock can plummet almost overnight. In years past, it might have taken a month or two.

TECHNOLOGY WAS supposed to make life simpler.

"But instead of liberating us, it is doing just the opposite," said Brad Googins, director of Boston University's Center on Work and Family. "This is a runaway locomotive. People universally recognize and talk about the decline in the quality of life brought on by this, but no one is sure of how to stop it."

The pressure is always on.

Lawyer Beck puts it this way: "You've got all this electronic bombardment. Before fax machines, voice mail and e-mail, people anticipated there being some delivery time in a transaction. Now everybody is used to having everything instantaneously."

There is always a deadline.

Rebecha Cusack, a 44-year-old legislative analyst for the Metropolitan King County Council, took no vacation last year. She was on deadline. There was the county's comprehensive plan to finish. Seattle is in King County.

The year before, there was another crisis project, another deadline. She took no vacation that year either.

But unlike San Jose's Whitcomb, Cusack believes in deferred gratification.

"If you give your word to see something through, you see it through, even if it is a temporary inconvenience," she said. "Then you rejuvenate your batteries and your spirit."

Which is what she did this year, when she visited her mother, then went to Santa Cruz, Calif., with her husband for a week.

SURE, THERE are times during the dry spells when she longs for a few days away, when she is so fatigued she can barely get out of bed. But she keeps her nose to the grindstone and tells herself there will be time for vacation later.

"Some people would question my sanity," she said, "but it works for me."

It so happens that the King County executive, Gary Locke, also is a renowned workaholic. His recent marriage to KING-TV reporter Mona Lee may be his salvation.

"It's civilized him" said Locke's spokesman, Frank Abe.

Locke spent four days in Hawaii last year, and five days honeymooning along the California coast. He said he couldn't remember his last vacation before that, and doesn't know how much time he's got coming. (Two weeks a year.)

"I've never asked," he said.

His longest vacation was more than a decade ago when he went to Maine to visit former landlords. He spent a week and a half there, helping remodel a 120-year-old farmhouse in the dead of winter. The work was "soothing and relaxing," he said. "I like physical labor."

WHILE VACATIONS are supposed to be a respite for weary workers, preparations for a week away can be daunting.

"You spend two or three weeks working 10-hour days, getting all the meetings done, making sure all the loose ends are tied up," said Theresa Tamura, a communications project specialist for Group Health Cooperative of Puget Sound.

"Then you come back. You're exhausted, you're playing catch-up, dealing with all the stuff that happened while you were gone, all the voice mails and the e-mails."

"Sometimes," she said, "it just isn't worth it."

Delinquent youths spend summer paying community back

By Angela Neaves
N.Y. Times News Service

SAN ANTONIO — Some youths hang out all summer at local malls, but those who've had a brush with the law have lost that privilege.

Those young offenders — whose exploits include stealing cars or toting guns — spend their days paying the community back for their crimes.

But is it punishment enough?

A 16-year-old probationer, sentenced to 75 hours of community service for breaking into a school, doesn't think so.

"It's too easy of a way out," he said while sanding a porch at Commander's House Senior Center in San Antonio.

"The young kids won't get back into trouble, but for myself, I don't know."

The other juveniles on his crew, ranging in age from 10 to 16, say a hard day's labor is a stern dose of medicine.

"It keeps me off the streets," said a 15-year-old who'd reveal only that he'd "gotten in a lot of trouble."

The teen has painted houses for the elderly and cut too many yards to count as part of his 200-hour sentence.

"By the time I get home, I just go to sleep," he said. "I'm too tired to do anything else."

The Community Service Restitution Program is under the supervision of the Bexar County Juvenile Probation Department. The program not only shows offenders the errors of their ways, it also gives the community reparation for the youth's crimes, said Chief Probation Officer Jose E. Castillo.

"Young violators face the consequences of their crimes," Castillo said. "They work, they sweat and they get things done."

Case aide Ceasar Garza says job sites are usually trouble free.

"Sometimes people worry about rival gang members possibly working on the same job," Garza said.

"We've had no fights so far this summer. They know they're here to get the job done and it's only possible through teamwork."

DEAR ABBY

Woman still paying big price for using 'little cocaine'

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My letter is intended for all those, young and old, who might be tempted to try cocaine.

Van Buren

I was 35 years old and going through a bad time in my life when someone I thought was my friend gave me some cocaine and said, "Try it. It will make you feel better."

I should have known better.

At a young age, I had worked at the New Hampshire State Hospital and saw for myself what drugs do to people. However, I was feeling low, and thought, "Well, once won't hurt."

Let me tell you what happened to me. I lost a good-paying job with General Electric. I sold everything I owned. Then I sank so low I started stealing from friends, family and strangers to support my habit.

I lost my beautiful home, all respect for myself, and the respect of my children and grandchildren.

I am now in prison for the second time and will be doing a lot of time for theft and selling illegal substances.

Please print this. It might help all those people who think a little cocaine can't hurt. And send me a copy in care of the New Hampshire State Prison in Goffstown, N.H. Please use my name. — MRS. ELIZABETH HILL

DEAR MRS. HILL: It is unfortunate that you will never know how many people (young and old) you have helped because you had the courage to write this letter. God bless you.

DEAR ABBY: This is for the "T.J. in San Diego" who asked what she should say to people who told her she would be much better-looking without her glasses.

I had the same problem with a family friend years ago. Every time he saw me, he mentioned how much prettier I would look without glasses.

One day I got so fed up, I obliged him by removing my glasses. Then I said, "I don't know if I look any better, but YOU certainly do!" — FOUR EYES IN FLORIDA

DEAR FOUR EYES: The first time I heard that one, I kicked the slats out of my crib, but it's still a snappy comeback.

I am reminded of a college contemporary who said she liked to date guys who wore glasses because when they took them off, she knew they meant business! Read on for another response:

DEAR ABBY: Do you remember that little ditty, "Men seldom make passes at girls who wear glasses," attributed to the late Dorothy Parker, American poet and short-story writer?

The late Dorothy Kilgallen, an equally witty newspaper woman who appeared on "What's My Line," countered with: "Men who seldom make passes at girls who wear glasses, are asses." — FOUR EYES IN FORT WORTH

DEAR ABBY: Recently you advised against sending a gift in a box from a fancy store. It brought back a story I would like to relate:

Linda was opening her gifts at her bridal shower when she noticed a large, expensive-looking box tied with a fancy satin bow. The box had the name of a famous French fashion designer.

The gift card read: "Wear this on your wedding night and you will have a long and happy marriage. Love, Grandmother."

Eagerly, Linda opened the box — to find it was empty! — DEAN BUNN, MINNEAPOLIS

DEAR ABBY: Many years ago, you printed a letter from a young mother with three preschool children and a husband who was serving in Vietnam. She kept her husband's picture in the laundry room and was getting a lot of flak from his relatives who thought it was an inappropriate place for her husband's picture.

I am getting the same argument from my mother-in-law because I keep photos of my husband and his three children from a previous marriage in my kitchen. The kids live with us, and I love them dearly. The pictures aren't taped to the fridge; they are in nice frames.

"Mom" thinks those pictures belong in the living room, and she reminds me often. What do you think? — CRITICIZED IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR CRITICIZED: I think the pictures belong where YOU think they belong.

DEAR ABBY: Recently I lost my beloved stepmother to cancer. She faced her illness with courage, humor and determination, and she helped her family deal with it in the same way.

I would like to share something we did for her that helped us deal with our grief after she was gone.

During her final weeks in the hospital, she slept a good deal of the time, and consequently missed many of her visitors. She was disappointed when she didn't get to see them, so we placed a guest book on the table by her bed. If she was sleeping when a friend came by, the visitor signed it and left a message for her. When she awoke, she enjoyed reading the thoughts and memories, humorous stories, hopes, and wishes.

After she died, this book became the text of her eulogy. As it was read, her family and friends were able to laugh and cry together as they remembered this special woman.

I hope your readers will find our experience of value and use this idea in their own lives. — RUTH, OTTAWA, CANADA

DEAR RUTH: My sincerest condolences on the loss of your stepmother. Thank you for sharing a unique and wonderful idea.

DEAR ABBY: Please help me clean up America.

Every day, I drive 15 miles to work, and my car is bombarded with cigarette butts flying out the windows of passing cars.

The beach I go to in Florida looks like a large ashtray. When I try to build a sand castle, I find at least five butts in a 2-foot area.

If you canoe around the lakes in Minnesota, you will see many butts floating in the water or washing up to the shore with the waves.

I have seen many adults tossing the butts out of their car windows when they have children in the car. What kind of example is this for the children? How can they learn not to litter when they see their parents littering every day?

What is the solution to smoldering butts? I have a solution: Smokers, carry a can of sand in the car, or plan ahead and take a receptacle with you when you are out on the streets or in parks.

Please help me stomp out cigarette butt littering, Abby. — SICK OF BUTTS IN ST. PAUL, MINN.

DEAR SICK OF BUTTS: You have lots of company in your desire to call a halt to this kind of littering. And your suggestion for carrying a can of sand in the car is an excellent solution.

DEAR ABBY: Regarding the letter about people who let children play around power rotary mowers: These are the same no-brainers who let their children ride in the back of pickups, stand up in moving cars, play in the streets, leave them and their pets in locked cars while shopping, and leave them alone in the house while visiting neighbors.

If they read your column, they will never believe that this applies to them. Thanks for the forum. Just sign me ... CLIFF, OKC, OKLA.

DEAR ABBY: Your advice to "Jill and Jane" about sitting down with their husbands and explaining that they had neither the time nor energy to do all the work around the house was somewhat glib.

Granted, there are women out there who don't speak up — they enjoy being martyrs — but you know what? There are men out there who still believe that they need not be responsible for anything except the power lawn mower. Some men are just plain lazy, uncaring and selfish, and to get them to change would require an act of God!

I solved that problem with my husband of 30 years, who had never lifted a finger to help me. No amount of begging worked. I am a nurse, and after a particularly exhausting day and fighting with him at night because he wouldn't help me, I turned to him and quietly said, "I did not sign on to be your mother or your maid. I am sick of you as a person. You no longer have my love or respect. I want a divorce. Furthermore, you can leave right now — start packing!"

He knew I meant it, so he packed up and left. It was a month before I heard from him again. He had gone to live with his sister, and after two weeks at his sister's, SHE told him to get out, that he was a hog, and was not welcome to stay any longer!

Another month passed. He began calling and asking if we could talk. I said, "Not if it's going to degenerate into a shouting match." He promised it wouldn't. He came over, and gone was the "attitude" and the arrogant swagger. I laid down the ground rules and told him I wouldn't consider taking him back until we saw a marriage counselor and resolved some serious issues.

A year later, we are back together, but it took some real tough love. He helps around the house and asks what else he can do to help me. — NO MORE BULL

DEAR NO MORE BULL: Thanks for a valuable letter. Successful marriages are those in which both partners work at nurturing each other. And marriage counseling works best when the husband and wife commit themselves to doing whatever is necessary to save their marriage. Congratulations.

THE MOST IMPORTANT VIDEO YOU'LL EVER OWN

August is KIDPRINT® Month.

Children are America's most precious resource. Tragically, according to the U.S. Justice Department, more than 1.4 million children are reported missing strike any family, even yours.

But now, there's something you can do to safeguard your children in the unfortunate event they are ever reported missing.

KIDPRINT®, a not-for-profit initiative, provides parents with a permanent videotape record of their child should the child ever become missing. This year, the free KIDPRINT service will be offfered at over 2,800 participating Blockbuster Video stores nationwide throughout the month of August.

Police say videotape has proven to be an excellent tool in the search for missing children. Unlike a still photograph, video captures the likeness, mannerisms and voice of the child.

Since the inception of KIDPRINT in 1990, more than 900,000 parents and their children have participated. And thousands of dollars have been donated to the program's beneficiary, the National Center for Missing & Exploited Children.

KIDPRINT takes only a few minutes. Best of all, both the service and the special KIDPRINT videocassette are free of charge.

This August, be sure to take advantage of KIDPRINT. It's the most important video you'll ever own.

Visitors who stick to core lose part of Big Apple

By Jennifer Merin

NEW YORK (AP) — Most visitors to the Big Apple stay close to its core. But there's more to New York City than Manhattan. The city's four other boroughs — Brooklyn, Queens, the Bronx and Staten Island — have their own attractions.

Develop your itinerary with the free New York Convention & Visitors Bureau "Big Apple Visitors Guide." The subway will provide access to most attractions, with directions from the Metropolitan Transit Authority (MTA) telephone hotline.

From Manhattan's east side, ride the IRT Lexington Avenue line, trains No. 4, 5 or 6, across the famous Brooklyn Bridge to Brooklyn Heights, an area of Long Island settled by the Dutch 350 years ago. The Brooklyn Historical Society on Pierrepont Street is within walking distance of the bridge.

Nearby, Bargemusic, a former Erie Lackawana coffee barge on the East River, offers free chamber music. The Brooklyn Academy of Music, on Lafayette Street, is one of New York's top performing arts institutions, presenting concerts, dance and theater.

BROOKLYN'S CROWN Heights neighborhood has an unbeatable combination of museums and gardens. The Brooklyn Museum is famous for Egyptian art and artifacts and great American paintings. The Brooklyn Botanic Garden is a 50-acre floral wonderland. In Prospect Park, Lefferts Homestead, a restored Dutch farm, shows what life was like during colonial days. For kids, visit the Children's Zoo and Brooklyn Children's Museum.

Queens, adjacent to Brooklyn, is New York's largest borough, but all most visitors see of it is from the expressways leading from JFK or LaGuardia airports to Manhattan.

Queens was set aside for farming when the British took New Amsterdam from the Dutch in 1664. Now more urban, it still offers outdoor attractions in or near Flushing Meadow Park, accessible on the subway's No. 7 train from Times Square in Manhattan.

On the site of the 1964 World's Fair, there's the gigantic filigree globe known as Unisphere, the Fountain of the Planets and the Queens Museum, featuring contemporary art.

Also within the park are the New York Hall of Science; the Queens Botanical Garden; the Panorama of New York City, a scale model of all five New York boroughs and some 835,000 buildings; Shea Stadium, home of the New York Mets; and the USTA National Tennis Center, site of the U.S. Open tournament.

FOR HISTORY buffs, the Queens Historical Society maintains the Kingsland Homestead and Browne House, adjacent 18th-century homes in Flushing. Nearby is New York's oldest living landmark, a 120-year-old tree, a weeping beech.

North of Manhattan is the Bronx, the only borough on the mainland. Take the IRT No. 4 or the IND D subway to the borough's two most famous attractions. The Bronx Wildlife Conservation Center, better known as the Bronx Zoo, has 5,000 animals from around the world, many in natural habitats. Nearby is the New York Botanical Garden, a 250-acre floral enclave, including a rose garden with 2,700 bushes.

Bronx historic houses include the Bartow-Pell Mansion built in 1832-46; Edgar Allan Poe's residence from 1846-49; the Valentine-Varian Home, an 18th-century fieldstone farmhouse; and Wave Hill, a 19th-century estate overlooking Hudson River. It once was home to Mark Twain, Theodore Roosevelt and Arturo Toscanini, and now is a cultural and education center with a sculpture garden filled with works by Willem de Koonig, Henry Moore, Alexander Calder and Louise Nevelson.

City Island, a patch of the Bronx in Eastchester Bay, is more typical of a New England village than New York City borough. It is a enclave of seafood restaurants, crafts shops, art galleries, yacht clubs, fishing piers and small beaches.

TAKE THE scenic and affordable Staten Island Ferry from the southern tip of Manhattan to New York City's fifth borough, Staten Island. St. George, where the ferry docks, is the place where the final shot of the American Revolutionary War was fired in November 1783. A short walk from the ferry is the Museum of Staten Island. Exhibits include a collection of antique musical instruments.

Prior to 1898, Staten Island was an independent county named for the Duke of Richmond, illegitimate son of King Charles II. Richmondtown, the county seat, is now Historic Richmond Town, a 96-acre restoration of the settlement dating from 1690 to 1910.

Additional historic buildings and sites dot the borough. The Jacques Marchais Center of Tibetan Art, the largest collection outside Tibet, is housed in two Tibetan-style stone buildings. One, resembling a temple, is set in a garden with panoramic views of New York Harbor and the Statue of Liberty.

Snug Harbor is an 80-acre national landmark district with 28 restored buildings in the Greek revival, Italianate and beaux arts architectural styles. There are various exhibitions and performances and artists' work spaces and galleries.

New Mexico is land of lore and legends

By Jerry Flemmons
N.Y. Times News Service

GLENWOOD, N.M. — Cool and green, is this shady little no-place town settled into a thin canyon straddling U.S. 180, an explicit sanctuary from the butte-and-mesa ranchland that serves as a buffer for the high Diablo Mountains and desert.

Arizona is just down the road, southwest New Mexico behind, and this summer morning is rich with sunshine and purple cholla blossoms, legends and lore.

I have passed through the communities of Buckskin and Cliff and stopped to read all the historical markers, sped by the stray convenience stores called "trading posts," and realized that the new icon of Western America is the TV satellite dish which brings CNN and "Roseanne" civilization here to the nether regions beyond the Continental Divide.

Glenwood has tall trees and a pair of creeks, Whitewater and San Francisco, 450 people, a fish hatchery, the Crabapple Cabins for overnighting, Ellie's Restaurant has drawn the pickup trade. The Blue Front Bar & Cafe is hurting for customers, and the Lizard King Gift Shop is doing no business at all.

All Glenwood is, is a retreat from the monotony of vastness, and the turnoff to Whitewater Canyon, five miles east toward the mountains. In the canyon is the Catwalk, a remarkable feat of frontier engineering.

The Catwalk — a mostly metal walkway placed along the south canyon wall, 20 to 30 feet above Whitewater Creek — is a relic of early mining efforts back in the mountains. It follows the path of a one-time water pipeline serving an ore mill, and is 2½ miles long, clinging to the wall in a sometimes perilous way. At points the canyon walls are so narrow the walker almost can touch both sides.

Aside from all that, the engineering achievement and canyon's physical beauty, there is another attraction. Butch Cassidy, the western bad guy, once worked around here and probably trod the Catwalk, maybe even involved himself in a robbery or two. A Butch Cassidy factoid definitely makes the Catwalk more interesting.

That is the way of things out here, where everything is scenery and legend, and if either involves bad guys and western mythology, so much the better. A historical marker north of Glenwood, for example, flaunts the exploits of Wild Horse Mary, who had a successful career as a cattle rustler long before affirmative action and gender equity could have found a spot for her in what traditionally was a man's job. The marker points the way to her former hideout back in a distant canyon.

Just beyond Wild Horse Mary's sign, the town of Reserve boasts of one of the West's most famous shootouts. Reserve today looks its role, being little more than one street with a courthouse, Uncle Bill's Bar and the Rode Inn Motel.

The story here is that in 1884, Reserve, then called Milligan's Plaza, was a ranching center, and a rough place, mostly because all the cowboys were from Texas and enjoyed drinking and annoying the locals.

Elfego Baca was 19 and deputy sheriff. A cowboy named McCarty got drunk. Baca arrested him. In rode 80 cowboys to rescue McCarty. Baca retreated to a small adobe and wattle jacal, and the gunfight began.

The legend says Baca held off the cowboys for 36 hours, killed four and wounded eight. 4,000 rounds of ammunition were fired; the hut's front door had 367 bullet holes. Baca didn't get a scratch.

That's mostly hype. Few bullets were fired, only one cowboy was killed. Baca was tried for murder, acquitted, later became a district attorney, dying at age 80 in Albuquerque.

But a movie about the gunfight made him a legend and subject of roadside historical markers.

Deeper into the mountains, reached by a nine-mile one-time wagon road, is the residue of another legend, the graying remnants of Mogollon, a rich mining town.

Government scrutinizes air-ticket ads

By Betsy Wade
N.Y. Times News Service

The government has fly-specked the small type in travel advertisements and found that the consumer who flies is often getting incomplete information on prices.

In mid-July, the department of transportation sent a four-page letter to top executives of 100 domestic and foreign airlines and to heads of 46 major travel agencies, counseling them to tell readers clearly and consistently all the possible costs of buying an "air tour package," including such unanticipated items as hotel "energy" or "linen" charges, airport "passenger facility charges" and port charges on a cruise.

The department said that airlines had often been warned but that this was the first notice sent to travel agencies of the requirements. If there are no results, according to legal officials in the department, a sterner letter will go out, after which the department can levy fines.

IN THE LAST five years, according to officials in the department, most of the major airlines have been fined for violations of the rule requiring the presentation of the full price. The fines ranged from $10,000 to $125,000, and Pan Am paid the biggest fine.

Hoyte B. Decker Jr. of the Airline Consumer Protection Division at the department said that the letter of "guidance" was not prompted by consumer complaints. Overall, he said, advertising provokes less than 2 percent of the complaints the department receives, and complaints about prices in ads would hardly register on the meter. He said that the effort was part of the department's project to help consumers, begun in January.

Samuel Podberesky, assistant general counsel for aviation enforcement and proceedings, who signed the letter, said the department wanted the travel industry to "clean up its ads." He said the government became concerned a few months ago after it collected and studied ads in major newspapers for packages that include air travel — the department of transportation has jurisdiction only where air travel is involved. He said a particular concern was the disparities in the way add-on charges, those not included in the price listed in big type, were described in travel agency ads offering different trips from various suppliers: package tours, special hotel promotions, cruises, air-and-car-rental combinations and the like.

REFERRED TO as co-op ads, they are placed by agencies to provide a virtual catalogue of seasonal values or new offerings. The cost of the advertising is shared by the travel agent and the tour operators, airlines, hotels, resorts, car-rental companies and others.

Podberesky said that the department called up some of the larger agencies — he would not identify them — to suggest improvements and that the agencies said in effect that they did not want to alter advertising in a way that would put them at a competitive disadvantage. Following up on the conversations, the letter was sent on July 16.

Larry Organ, a lawyer in Podberesky's department, said in an interview that what the department wants for the consumer is a level playing field. "It doesn't matter if all the extra charges are included in the overall price, or listed separately in the small type," he said, "so long as all the items in the ad do it the same way."

TO ILLUSTRATE, he cited one typical ad. "It had 10 packages advertised. The small type on item 1 says: 'Includes all taxes.' On item 2, it says: 'All service charges and air taxes included.' On item 3, it says 'Tips and departure taxes included.' You can't compare these. It gives the idea that a lot of things are included but the reader doesn't know if all the applicable charges are included." In its essence, Organ said, the department regulation permits tour operators and agencies to omit from the large-type cost, and to isolate in small type, any per-person fee or tax imposed or approved by a government if it is to be collected by the seller. Examples are customs fees, immigration fees, departure taxes and airport passenger facility charges that are collected as part of the package price. But "their existence and amount" must be clearly indicated in the ad, the government's letter says. Many of these are even itemized on an airline ticket.

If the fee is collected by the government or agency — for example, a foreign airport departure tax to be paid on the spot — the ad should note its existence and the fact that it will be payable later.

HOWEVER, OTHER taxes and fees not levied on a per person basis, for example, percentage taxes on tickets, or per-day fees on car rentals, or per-room energy charges, should be included in the big-number price for the trip, Organ said.

In no case may the United States government's 10 percent tax on a domestic ticket be omitted from the ticket price given in an ad, Organ said. But it does happen.

Paul Sheehan, an Australian journalist living in New York, complained about one such occasion. After the United States and Canada removed air restrictions earlier this year, Sheehan saw an American Eagle ad for introductory one-way fares from Kennedy International Airport: $79 to Halifax, Nova Scotia; $69 to Quebec City or $59 to Montreal or Ottawa.

Writing on the Op-Ed page of The New York Times on July 19, he reported booking two trips at these prices, only to learn that the round-trip cost for the $79 ticket was not $158, but $158 plus $42.10 in taxes and fees: $15.80 for the 10 percent federal sales tax, $10.80 for Canadian transportation taxes, $6.50 for a U.S. customs fee, $6 for a U.S. immigration fee and $3 for a passenger facilities charge at Kennedy Airport in New York. The real price of $200 seemed too high for a whim, Sheehan wrote, and he canceled his reservation.

The ad Sheehan cited appeared in The Times on May 16; the introductory fare expired June 30. Eight lines of small print at the bottom itemized the restrictions on the tickets. Part of the small print says: "Government taxes and fees are not included." But the 10 percent U.S. government tax on domestic tickets is not supposed to be omitted from large-type ticket prices. One fluke is that this tax does not apply to international fares — except to destinations in Canada and Mexico that are within 225 miles of the U.S. border.

Al Becker, a spokesman for American Airlines, said that it was "accepted industry practice" not to add the 10 percent tax in quoting prices on tickets to Canada where it applied.

Air Canada and Delta, airlines that also serve Canadian airports within the buffer strip, both said that they included the 10 percent tax in the ad prices. Organ and other officials at the department of transportation said omission of this tax violated the regulations on specifying the full ticket price.

New cookbooks feature recipes for summertime

By Carol Deegan

NEW YORK (AP) — While testing recipes for her previous grilling book, Melanie Barnard noticed that her family's eating habits were changing — as were her grocery lists — less butter and oil, smaller amounts of meats.

"Grilling was making the difference in the way we were eating," Barnard writes in her new cookbook, "Low-Fat Grilling: Fabulous Food from the Backyard Barbecue," (Harper-Perennial, $10).

"Whereas lots of oil is needed for deep-frying, and the flavor of browned butter is integral to the success of many sauteed dishes, grilled foods require little or no added fat of any kind, and instead take most of their taste cues from the cooking method itself."

IN HER NEW cookbook, Barnard serves up recipes for grill-smoked turkey with curried peach salsa, plantain slices, molasses mustard chicken, and such improbable candidates for grilling as polenta, potato chips and apples. Her side dishes, accompaniments and desserts complement grilled foods and also provide satisfaction without the fat.

In addition to the recipes themselves, Barnard provides suggested menus for entertaining, ideas on getting the most from your grill, nutritional information and general hints on how to cut back on fat without compromising taste. Barnard is the author of "The Best Covered and Kettle Grills Cookbook Ever."

"Flexibility is of paramount importance for the serious picnicker," writes Gail Monaghan in "Perfect Picnics for All Seasons" (Abbeville Press). "Nonetheless, much can and should be planned ahead. There is no pleasure in hiking halfway up a mountain carrying a bottle of Bordeaux only to discover the corkscrew has been left on the kitchen counter."

AMONG HER suggestions:

- When packing, make sure liquids, sauces and other leaky foods are tightly capped. Place any questionable container inside a sealed plastic bag. Use masking tape when in doubt.
- Carry easily damaged foods in sturdy containers.
- Protect delicate glassware, dishes and platters with picnic napkins, tablecloth or blanket.
- Keep iced cakes and delicate pastries in boxes.
- To prevent spoilage, keep highly perishable food refrigerated until the last minute.

'Flexibility is of paramount importance for the serious picnicker. Nonetheless, much can and should be planned ahead. There is no pleasure in hiking halfway up a mountain carrying a bottle of Bordeaux only to discover the corkscrew has been left on the kitchen counter.'

— Gail Monaghan, author of 'Perfect Picnics for All Seasons'

Monaghan has divided her book into menus for picnics by the water, in the mountains, on the road, at the concert, at work, in love and with the children. Among her recipes: herbed oven-fried chicken, double cornbread and lemon-glazed cupcakes.

IN "PICNICS" ($9.95), editor Heidi Haughy Cusick brings together 48 recipes from the Country Garden Cookbook Series by Collins Publishers San Francisco.

Cusick has selected six festive theme menus for picnics, including an All-American Independence Day Barbecue, with recipes for corn on the cob, potato salad and apple pie, to an Autumn Courtship in an Italian Garden, with recipes for arugula, roasted red peppers and prosciutto on panini, olives spiced with lemons and herbs, and lemon squares.

The recipes were selected from six Country Garden cookbooks: "Apples," "Berries," "Greens," "Lemons," "Potatoes" and "Tomatoes."

Cusick also provides food packing and transporting suggestions, barbecuing tips, location ideas and lists of picnic-basket essentials.

"The Random House Barbecue and Summer Foods Cookbook," by Margaret Fraser ($15) is a basic cookbook for summer grilling, with over 175 recipes for outdoor cooking and entertaining.

ORIGINALLY PUBLISHED as "The Canadian living barbecue and summer foods cookbook," Fraser provides recipes for beef, lamb and pork; burgers and hot dogs; fish and seafood; vegetables and salads.

The book features 10 barbecue menus including a western barbecue, kids-style barbecue, Fourth of July celebration picnic and Labor Day supper, with recipes for grilled steak with garlic and black olive sauce, spicy grilled chicken and barbecued beans.

Color photographs accompany the recipes.

"The Outdoor Chef's Bible," by John Weiss (Doubleday, $12) is a guide to cooking on the trail, in a permanent campground or in your own backyard.

Weiss describes the best foods for outdoor excursions, how to pack them and keep them hot or cold, plus the necessary stoves, grills, cookware and utensils. He shows how to build a "grub box," a portable cupboard that fits in a station wagon or car trunk, and is always ready for a trip. And he explains outdoor cooking techniques, including charcoal, open fire, Dutch oven, foil and freeze-dried food cookery.

RECIPES RANGE from stick-to-the-ribs staples such as macaroni and cheese to sourdough pancakes and corn on the cob. The book is illustrated with black-and-white photographs and drawings, many of them step-by-step guides to recipe preparation. Summer Cookbooks

Delia Smith, a best-selling cookbook author in England, has adapted her recipes for American cooks in "Delia Smith's Summer Collection: 140 Recipes for Summer" (Viking, $22.95). Among the recipes: savory feta cheesecake, oven-roasted ratatouille and pesto rice salad. With menus for summer entertaining and more than 50 color photographs by Peter Knab.

Firefighting is serious work, so dinner also is taken seriously

By Michelle Green
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Most evenings around 6:30, the sleek red pumper from Engine Co. No. 18 pulls up to the Jefferson Market in Greenwich Village and a half-dozen firefighters, ready for action in waterproof boots and suspendered pants, pile into the store. They grab a cart and inspect the meat, bread and produce counters — debating the merits of arugula versus radicchio and hammering out the menu for the evening's meal.

On a recent Sunday, the crew allowed a visitor to return to the firehouse on West 10th Street and join the meal. Steve Gonzalez, who lives in Staten Island with his wife, a dietitian, and their two children, was the chef for the 24-hour tour, when the firehouse would be home to the crew.

An experienced cook who learned paella from his Spanish grandmother, Gonzalez comes from a family where, he says, "eating is considered an art." Growing up in Chelsea, he watched Graham Kerr on television; later, he cooked in an Italian restaurant and helped with his brother's catering business. Assigned to the engine company three years ago, he said he volunteered to take over at the six-burner Garland stove "after having a couple of meals I didn't like."

THAT NIGHT, Gonzalez and his men arrived at the market shortly before 7 p.m., just as firefighters from Ladder Company No. 3, on 13th Street, were trooping out. Like Gonzalez's crew, they all hop onto the truck whenever it leaves the station; in full gear, they are ready to jump back on if a call comes.

The convivial Jefferson Market is an institution in Greenwich Village. "The quality is good," Gonzalez said, "and it has a relaxed feeling. We'd rather shop here than at a grocery store because they make us feel at home. And I think they like having us here, because of the old idea that firemen know food."

Surveying the meat counter, Gonzalez said, "I feel like Italian — what if we do chicken Parmesan and pasta with a nice marinara?" While the counterman wrapped the chicken breasts that Gonzalez will debone and slice into cutlets, firefighters John Channell, Bobby Stanton, Patrick Kelly and Manny Mojica were dispatched for rigatoni, onions, canned tomatoes, French bread, garlic, salad greens and mozzarella.

Firefighters, Gonzalez said, have become more careful about what they eat. "Instead of getting doughnuts for breakfast, guys will bring in a bag of oranges," he added.

Time and money are important, too: firefighters pay for their own food, and there's always the risk of having to abandon a half-cooked dish to battle a blaze. "We have to fix something that can sit — no burgers or fries," Gonzalez said.

THE MEALS are always serious, though. Gonzalez usually spends an hour and a half cooking dinner for six. And quality is a priority: butter, not margarine, will go on the garlic bread, and the cutlets will be fried in virgin olive oil. Mojica, a compact, muscular man who bakes for the engine company, was only half joking when he said, "You've got to eat good because, God forbid, this could be the last time."

On the way back to the firehouse, they stopped at St. Vincent's Hospital to visit an 11-year-old boy; at lunchtime, they had been on the scene at 10th Street and Greenwich Avenue, when the child had been hit by a car. "He's not doing great — his hip was smashed," Gonzalez said. "I'll never look at that corner the same way."

Back in the narrow kitchen, Channell and the boisterous Kelly helped unpack groceries. The tab for the night's meal: $6 a person.

THE EQUIPMENT there is basic — in addition to the Garland stove, there is a microwave, an oversize refrigerator, two racks full of deadly sharp knives and a collection of enormous pots and cast-iron pans.

Accustomed to teamwork, Channell, Kelly and Gonzalez got the marinara going first. Onions were chopped and thrown into a pot to sweat in olive oil; a quarter-pound of sliced mushrooms, six cans of crushed tomatoes, a can of whole tomatoes, a half-cup of sugar and a can of tomato paste followed.

Pulling out industrial-size containers, Gonzalez threw about two tablespoons of parsley and basil, one-half teaspoon of thyme and a teaspoon of oregano into the fragrant sauce. Although he loves strong flavors, he said: "I don't like to kill with salt or garlic. When you're cooking for six people, you want everybody to like it."

Cozy and slightly shabby, the crew's quarters have the air of a frat house: along with secondhand sofas, the lounge has board games, a stereo and a fish tank; the walls are lined with photographs of luaus and other outings, and a black cat called Snowball pads about, waiting for supper. While Kelly fried the cutlets and Channell assembled the salad, Mojica turned on the television, looking for a report on the boy.

At 8:45, Gonzalez announced, "We're almost there." The mozarella-topped cutlets, arranged on a vast aluminum pan and surrounded by the tomato sauce, were pulled from the oven and brought to the long table. Snatched from the broiler, the garlic bread, dusted with Spanish paprika, was cut into chunks and heaped in a plastic bowl. A pot of rigatoni, the vat of marinara and a generous salad went on the table as well, and the men helped themselves.

BEFORE A SINGLE fork had been lifted, however, the loudspeaker snapped on. Everyone froze, listening to the dispatcher. "Fourteenth and Eighth," Lt. Tom Moody repeated, shoving back his chair. Clapping metal covers on their plates, the six leaped for a pole in the corner and slid from sight. The pumper was out the door in 45 seconds.

Just 20 minutes later, the crew was back at the table: the call, it seemed, was to a subway station where bystanders had reported smoke, but there was no fire. Happy that the food was still warm, they ate quickly. The chicken was rich and savory, and the rigatoni piquant. Washing down the garlic bread with iced tea, everyone talked at once. By 9:45, they were ready for an Entenmann's chocolate cake and coffee.

Rising to clear the table, Mojica grabbed the tray that still held five cutlets. "Am I going to have a great sandwich tomorrow!" he said.

Gonzalez looked pleased.

Campus improvements benefit community

■ Rudy Gonzales believes in a 'change in mentality' that accomodates the community college concept, the school's business operation and, most of all, the student.

Rudy Gonzales, Midland College vice president of Administrative Services, is surprised at the perception that he has been quick to bring about changes in the job he began in July of 1994.

"I kind of thought I was taking my time," he said. "When I first came on board, my approach was going to be to take two or three months just to look at things, analyze things in my mind and understand why things were being done.

"I wanted there to be a reason why I was making changes, with the understanding that the reason for making the changes was for the betterment of the students and for the betterment of the college," he said.

Nevertheless, while Gonzales has been pondering the changes, he also saw improvements that needed to be made right away with the emphasis on making things easier for students.

"We've got to think who our customer is—the student," he said. He talks about a "change in mentality" that accommodates both the community college concept and the school's business operation. With that goal in mind Gonzales has moved the cashier from the business office to the Student Services area so that students may register for classes and pay fees at the same time.

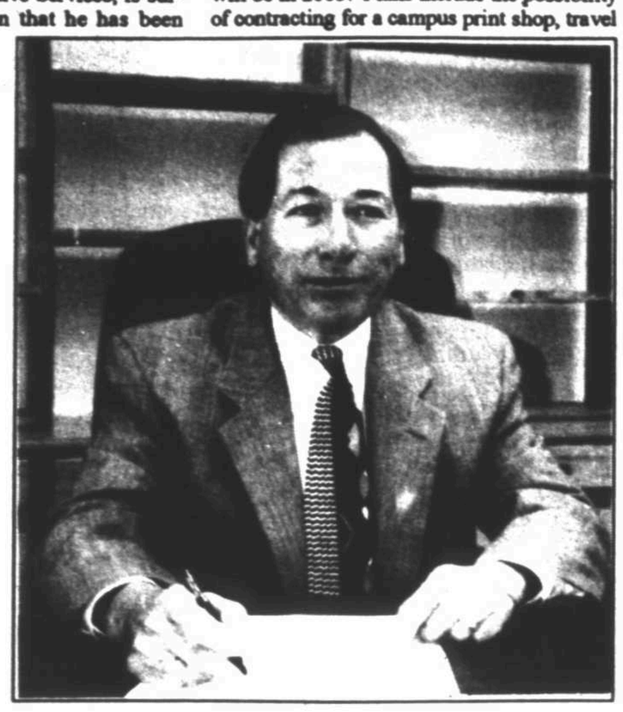

Orientation sessions for all employees are in the planning phase. "One of the first things I noticed about Midland College was the sense of employee pride," Gonzales said. "These orientation sessions will give all employees information they need to answer students' questions about their college."

"We are all here to serve the student—from the groundskeeper to the president," he said.

A big challenge has been the implementation of an energy conservation project that will mean the college can pay for improvements to the heating, cooling and lighting system with the energy savings gained from installation of new equipment and be in compliance with federal environmental guidelines.

Of course, the new system has another advantage. "It's going to improve the comfort of the students and staff. Better controls will take care of hot spots and cold spots. It will have an effect on those problems," he said.

Since financing of the energy conservation project is in place, Gonzales said other concerns are being moved from the back burner. He has begun to develop a master plan that projects what the college's needs will be in 2005. Plans include the possibility of contracting for a campus print shop, travel agency, and addressing the problem of building maintenance.

The college is facing major repairs around the campus and Gonzales said he would like to budget on a yearly basis for anticipated building maintenance. "This has caught up with us," he said. "We are going to have to sell the idea that you have to pay now or pay big later." The issue of a tax rate increase for these repairs will be addressed at the Midland College Board of Trustees meeting Monday, August 15.

"The projected rate hike for the average home owner is estimated to be between $3.67 and $4.89 per year. The campus is more than 20 years old—repairs will cost even more later. Considering all that Midland College offers this community, that is a small price to pay," Gonzales said.

Another recent change is in the area of food service. Applications of potential contractors were evaluated with specific needs in mind, Gonzales said. "We needed someone with the ability to provide a variety of foods at a reasonable cost, handle catering for the campus and produce attractive meals for students and organizations. Since many organizations conduct their meetings on campus, the food service system must be able to accommodate them," he said.

"We are also addressing the need for evening meals for students and our athletes. "This is just one more way we can meet the needs of our students," Gonzales said.

Gonzales is just as concerned about attracting students to the MC campus. He has ideas for improving the registration process, in particular expanding the phone registration and opening other registration locations in Midland, to encourage more people in the community to enroll at Midland College.

Another step forward for the college is a campus computer network that will "open a lot of doors," Gonzales said. "What's going to happen is that it's going to put at your fingertips information that you've never had before." The electronic mail network will make it easier to get information around campus and will also save paper. A survey being conducted by an independent firm will offer further information concerning cost and labor efficient use of paper and copiers. "We want the taxpayers to know that we are monitoring ourselves—that we are being prudent and efficient in our expenditures," Gonzales said.

Gonzales is interested in preparing students to use the most up-to-date technology possible. Advances in media learning and the use of the Bulletin Board Service allows MC to offer the latest technology to more students. "When a student leaves this campus, whether it is with a degree, a continuing education class or a class to upgrade skills, they need to be ready to use the technology of their job market," he said.

The challenges Gonzales faces at Midland College are not new ones, and he said he has not encountered any real surprises. The problems of funding and maintaining and expanding the physical plant and facilities remain the same.

Before his job in Houston, Gonzales spent 14 years as Dean of Administrative Services at Southwest Texas Junior College in Uvalde, a system that includes 11 campuses. In Midland, Gonzales said he feels the same sense of community he felt in Uvalde.

Gonzales has been a resident of Midland for more than a year now. He serves as the Vice-Chair of Finance for the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce and is involved with Junior Achievement. "I have the same feeling in Midland that I had in Uvalde—that I want to get involved in the community. "In Uvalde it seems like I was a member of every organization in town. I felt I could make a difference in the community as opposed to Houston," he said.

Gonzales is past president of the Texas Association of Public Junior College Business Officers and also served as a Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board Committee member. He is a former Uvalde City Council member.

Volunteerism gives student 'compassionate' experience

"Please, can you help me?" The young woman standing on the other side of the information desk was trying to balance a huge potted plant on one arm and her purse and a travel bag on the other. Her car keys were still in her hand. She must have been in a tremendous hurry to get into the building from her car. "My mother...," she tried to speak, tears welling up in her eyes and her voice faltering. "Here," I said, "put that plant down on the counter and let me help you."

"Thank you," she said after getting a bit more settled. "My mother is here somewhere, having surgery. They found cancer...." Her voice trailed off again. The fatigue she was suffering showed in every movement she made.

I was glad to be in a position to help her. My own mother has been ill for years with a chronic, sometimes fatal muscle disease, so I knew exactly what she was going through.

In times like these, the community service I perform through the Memorial Hospital and Medical Center Auxiliary becomes more than just answering questions, giving directions and selling popcorn. I am involved in the life of this woman, however briefly and what I am doing is important. My assistance can also make a difference, both in her life and in mine.

After giving her directions, I realized that she was so distraught she probably would not find the room, so I picked up the plant and offered to take her there myself.

As a member of the MHMC Auxiliary, it is my job to provide a variety of assistance. I give directions to the cafeteria, gift shop, waiting rooms and, most of all patients' rooms. I am confronted with many questions which I answer with confidence and clarity. I place magazines and books in various waiting areas throughout the hospital. Making and selling popcorn is another of my responsibilities. I provide these services for two very fulfilling hours a week.

The dispensing of information may seem unimportant in the great scheme of things, but the knowledge gained by the individual who is doing the asking is usually vital in a hospital setting.

My community service involves more than providing information and selling popcorn. The personal touches are most appreciated

Mummers Celebrates 47 seasons

Design by Missy Hallmark

The 1974 Summer Mummers Olio included Cherry Jones and Ron Hughes in a "Fred and Ginger" number.

The hanging was about to commence. "So end all traitors to the cause of our beloved Confederacy," declared General Robert E. Lee, portrayed by Judge Perry Pickett, as he signaled with his sword to pull the rope.

"Amen to that, General, Sir", agreed Billy Bob Beauregard, played by Art Cole.

"Grogglewullop," murmured the villaineous Simon Seward, played by Robert Cullins, as he swayed slowly in the air.

Thus ended another performance of the Summer Mummers melodrama, "The Rebel's Revenge," by Sig Aronson of Austin. Or did it?

The villain was supposed to be quietly hanging in the noose, getting his just desserts for his foul machinations. Suddenly, Cole realized that "Geeglewhoozle" was a plea for help from Cullins to not let him strangle out here on stage in front of everyone.

"Quick," Cole whispered, "Lift him up. The harness isn't working." With Cole on one side of him, and another actor on the other, they held Cullins up and frantically signaled for the curtain to come down.

"We got him out of the harness, dusted him off, fanned him, and held him up while we took our curtain calls," recalled a cast member. "Afterward, we inquired as to his well being. His hoarsely croaked answer seemed to indicate that he would survive. In future shows someone stood close by in case the harness again did not work properly."

"The hanging" is one of many memorable happenings in the 45-year history of the Summer Mummers. One of Midland's foremost summer entertainment options, the production had its birth in the spring of 1949, when a group of theater people met to devise ways to increase income for the theater budget.

The decision was made to produce an old fashioned melodrama in the summer. The show would be staged just as such plays were 100 years ago. Most of the entertainment and any of the humor would come from the stilted language, and the overacting of the participants, thus the style of performance would be much like the movies of the "Silent Era" that are still enjoyed today. The show would be presented in a cabaret setting. Drinks, popcorn and peanuts would be available.

& Summer Mummers participant

By the close of this season, just over 1,000 Summer Mummers performances will have played to audiences who have cheered on the heros and heroines, while booing, hissing and throwing popcorn at the villains.

This summer alone, around 12,000 people will see "Catawamped Among the Cacti" — last presented in 1985 — during 31 performances that continue through the Saturday before Labor Day. This particular script by former Midlander Randy Hicks was written for Midland's centennial.

Although Mummers has become an expected annual entertainment event, many Midlanders don't know how it all began or its course through five decades, which has kept people active and involved in volunteering their time to ensuring its con

The name, Mummer, is from an old English word for an actor — "One who makes sport in disguise." It was then a derogatory term. Other words used were masker and mountebank. A modern precedent for this type of melodrama was staged in Los Angeles in the 1950's. Its popularity kept it running for at least a decade.

The melodrama chosen for the first summer was a classic tale of its time, "the Drunkard." It was billed as "a morality play presented for the edification of proper Ladies and Gentlemen."

"The Drunkard" ran for three weekends, and was a huge success. Each evening, following the play, an "Olio" was staged. This is a vaudeville type show of skits, blackouts, songs, and dances. For the Finale, all of the performers were on stage singing "I'm A Yankee Doodle Dandy" and "It's A Grand Old Flag". This brought standing ovations, and has become the traditional ending to a Summer Mummer show for 45 years.

The next four years produced "Ten Nights in a Barroom," "The Drunkard" again, "Gold in the Hills," and "Dirty Work at the Crossroads." By 1954, the Summer Mummers was well established, and even the few detectors who had lobbied for a summer musical or opera gave up and joined the fun.

The style of presentation changed over the early years. Intentional humor and local references to people and places appeared and were enjoyed. The more comic and topical the shows became, the more involved and vocal the audiences became. The traditional melodrama style fell away except for a few classic gestures and speeches.

This evolution in acting style called for some adaptations that some performers did not quite grasp. Leonard Vickerstaff fell into that category.

Vickerstaff was the victim of bad timing. Had he played the villain in 1949 or 1950, he would have been applauded for his performance. Thirteen years later, he was hooted as a ham.

He had been in a number of plays at Midland Community Theatre and elsewhere and was a very accomplished actor. He had a good sense of comedy, and was outstanding in serious roles as well. One summer he was cast as one of the villains in the Summer Mummers production.

Vickerstaff worked hard at his role, and was enthusiastic about being in a melodrama, a medium new to him. Then came the weekend when he was on in the part, and the show was rolling along nicely. When Vandergriff went on stage the first couple of times, he aquitted himself very well.

A Summer Mummers show is always a rather frantic affair, and the rest of the cast was concerned about their own business and not paying attention to Vickerstaff. Then cast members began to realize the "sound" from out front didn't seem quite right.

"We began to observe Leonard's performance," said a fellow cast member. "He was delivering all his lines, and moving about the stage in the proper manner. There was one complication. He was not portraying the cartoon villain in a hokey, summer evening of fun. He had reverted to the original style of the classic melodrama, and was taking himself completely seriously. If there is one thing audiences at these performances will not stand for, it is that. More popcorn and ice came his way."

Loud, ribald, not given to tolerance, a Mummers' crowd can turn on a thespian in a minute. Vandergriff persevered, and tried to regain some rapport with those in the audience. The more he tried to impress them with the brilliance and range of his talent, the more he got bombarded.

Finally, he retaliated! He scooped up some popcorn from the stage, and threw it back at his tormentors.

This was his Pearl Harbor. He was buried in popcorn, lashed with a blizzard of ice, and bruised with empty beer cans. Driven from the stage he stood in the wings picking popcorn from his locks, digging ice out of his ears, and plaintively saying, "What's the matter with those animals out there?"

He hadn't learned never to challenge a Summer Mummers audience after the First Act and the second beer.

He finished the show much subdued, playing his scenes against the back wall of the set whenever possible to lengthen the distance and trajectory of his assailants. He retired from the Summer Mummers that night, and was not seen the rest of the summer.

Bill Heck, the actor playing George Washington in "Discombobulated on the Delaware," was declaiming his lines at the very front edge of the stage in the old American Legion Hall. Here, the front tables were only a few feet from the edge of the stage. As Heck gave his lines some fellow at a front table, who was "feeling no pain," reached over the footlights and calmly tied Heck's shoelaces together. Heck, just as calmly finished his speech, and reached down and untied them before clumping off stage.

A number of the "traditional responses" from the audience first surfaced in the beer buttressed brain of some member of the audience. When the heroine originally voiced the plaintive cry "Would you force yourself on an innocent maiden?"; the reply from someone in the crowd yelling, "You better believe he would!", created mass hysterical laughter. From then on those lines have been in every melodrama, and it is a race to see whether the villain or the audience can get the reply out first.

Another exchange has the hero saying "I know not how to act." This, of course, is followed by the reply en mass, "You can say that again."

By the middle '50s, the Summer Mummers season had extended to six to eight weekends through July and August. The show was playing to packed houses almost every performance.

The antique melodrama scripts had been replaced by scripts by contemporary authors, but still written in the old style. After a few years, these shows gave way to new scripts that were written by local authors.

Now the sky was the limit as far as material was concerned. Politicians — local and national — were insulted. Jokes about local institutions, and national news stories were included, and no sacred cows were left unmilked. Nothing and no one was spared.

Peanuts were abandoned as too messy; and because a small bag, unopened made a handy missile. A few boos, hisses, and off-the-cuff comments, along with being showered with popcorn and occasional pieces of ice, added to everyone's enjoyment, and the performers came through relatively unscathed.

In 1968 "Skulduggery In the Skies" was the entre served up by the Summer Mummers. This hilarious tale about combat flying in World War One was written by local Petroleum Engineer Bill Davis, who had already created several other melodramas.

Davis struggled with the problem of portraying aircraft in combat. The idea of small planes on wires a la Peter Pan, seemed ridiculous and impractical. He decided to seek Hollywood films of aerial dogfights. This was done, but he did not stop there. Davis wrote some more scenes, which were filmed by the Mummers and integrated into the stage script.

In the methods used by North-South, North's rebid of two clubs, the fourth suit, was game-forcing. South jumped to show a good suit and, after partner rebid hearts, drove the auction to the no-trump slam without further ado.

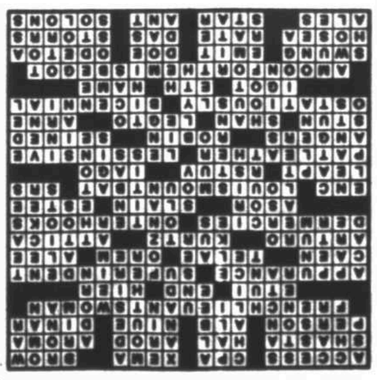

West led the jack of spades, and declarer could count seven tricks outside the diamond suit. Five tricks were needed from diamonds, therefore, to fulfill the slam. Most players would start by cashing the ace of diamonds, and West's club discard was a mortal blow to declarer's prospects. No matter how declarer twisted, 11 tricks were the maximum available since hearts were equally unproductive.

Declarer had bad luck — if the diamonds were no worse than 4-1, declarer could give up a diamond trick and get home easily. But the pessimistic declarer would have taken the most evil distribution into consideration, and would have found a way to counter the actual lie of the cards.

South should win the first trick in hand and lead a low diamond toward the ten! If the diamonds are no worse than 4-1, the defenders are welcome to win the first diamond trick, after which declarer will collect the remaining cards in the suit by leading diamonds from the top. If West has five diamonds, the defender must rise with the jack or else the ten will win. Dummy's ten and the high honors in hand will then clear the rest of the suit, setting up a long diamond in the closed hand.

If West shows out on the first diamond, the table's ten loses to the jack. But now a finesse of the eight of diamonds will allow declarer to pick up the rest of the suit, and the slam is no longer threatened.

YEARS: Mummers has seen many changes

(From 1F)

Thus the Summer Mummers "Movieola" was born.

This addition to the staged melodrama was an instant success. Every summer since then the audiences have enjoyed the hero, heroine, villain, and assorted characters not only on stage, but also on film.

The short film sequences contributed the added advantage of ending an act with a "cliffhanger" climax signaling an intermission. The following act continues the movie and encourages the audience to get back in their seats and quiet down.

Now, the citizens of Midland know that when they see outlandish characters in weird costumes doing silly things in the parks and on the streets of town that it is alm "Watch that blunderbus!"

"The Rebel's Revenge," which was directed by this writer, produced another occurance reminiscent of "the hanging." During one wild scene, an old Confederate Colonel, played by Bill Davis, came on stage with an antique pistol, and confused the audience with the enemy. He pointed this blunderbuss at them and yelled, "Take that, you damn Yankees", and fired into the crowd. After a few performances, the "gunsmith" who constructed the pistol told the Colonel: "You know, that thing does fire blanks, but they do have a wadding in them. Maybe you ought to fire it at the ceiling. After all, we don't want those wads to hit anyone in the audience."

Davis, as the Colonel, did as suggested for the rest of the run of the show. When dismantling the set at the end of the season, it was discovered that the ceiling of the Legion Hall was pockmarked with holes made by the wads fired from the pistol. How the audience escaped being peppered by these missiles was never discovered.

The Summer Mummers began it's long run in the American Legion Hall next to MCT's home, the City-County Auditorium. This was because of beverage regulations, and because the Legion, which was a little larger, was all set up to handle beverages. This was the Summer Mummers home until 1962, when a fire precluded it's use.

The Mummers moved to the V.F.W. Hall, and spent 4 years performing there. Lured back to the rebuilt Legion Hall in 1966, Mummers stayed there until 1981. Then MCT arranged a 99-year lease on the historic Yucca Theatre. A valuable old landmark was preserved, and the Summer Mummers had a permanent home. The Yucca Theatre provided a much larger plant with amply backstage space including two stories, and a slanted auditorium floor and balcony for better viewing.

While performing in the Legion Hall, which was adjacent to the quonset hut theater, the Mummers used the quonset hut for dressing and makeup. The two small rooms flanking the Legion stage were mostly filled with sound and lighting equipment.

Although the buildings were adjacent, it was more than a few steps between the legion stage and the quonset hut. In one of the early shows Cole, who was playing the hero, had a fast costume change. To save seconds he appointed a stagehand as "dresser" to help him with his change. This duty was to help him out of his pants as he, Cole, was busy changing the upper half of his outfit. They got into a rhythm with this exercise, and it worked quite well.

However, it never is wise to get complacent about such a complex operation; and one night there was a sharp detour from established procedure. Cole rushed over to the auditorium and began his change, but the dresser was absent. Cole frantically enlisted someone else standing nearby and got his costume changed, including the pants. At the instant that he was poised to rush back to the legion, the tardy dresser appeared behind him, and with both hands pulled Cole's pants down to his ankles as Cole screamed "No. No!"

Like the change of seasons, he wanted to spring forward, but fell backward. Instead, a few moments of furious activity "redressed" the situation, and Cole was off and running.

In 1957, when The City-County Auditorium was torn down to make way for the new county library, cast members had to dress and make up in the alley, or behind their cars in the parking lot.

One evening, cast member Judge Perry Pickett, a prominent local official, was changing his pants when a police car cruised down the alley and shone it's spotlight on him.

After a moment Pickett said, "Well have you seen enough?" Car 54 recognized whom they were spotlighting, and rapidly proceeded on down the alley.

Some kind soul arranged for a trailer to be parked in the alley for several summers, so the women at least had a decent place to change and make up.

And speaking of costumes, this writer was blessed with wearing a World War I heavy woolen olive drab outfit during his career, while playing three colonels and two generals in Summer Mummers shows. I became quite attached to this uniform, and in fact I almost had to have it peeled off of me at the end of the season. Oh, what we go through for our art! But 45 years of happy audiences indicate that those of us involved with this annual event are doing a lot of things right.

And so, the years have seemed to pass by in a hurry. Now, Mummers has had at least two families volunteering three generations of its members to the cause.

The first year, 1949, the melodrama ran for three weekends, and was seen by 3,800 people. The met profit was $1801.00.

In 1994, over 14,000 people attended the Summer Mummers, and 33,000 bags of popcorn were sold. The gross take was $240,000.

Even allowing for 45 years of inflation, that represents tremendous growth. If there is really such a thing as perpetual motion, the Summer Mummers' history serves as a great example.

In 1949, several Midland Community Theatre supporters were sitting around the City-County Auditorium reminiscing and talking of ways the theater could make more money.

"The budget was very small those days," said Art Cole, director emeritus of MCT. "Any dollars at all that we could earn for the theater would be a great help.

"One guy came up with the idea of doing 'The Drunkard. And he (Norris Creath) said, 'I'll play the villain. You, Art, play the hero. Bill (Pennebaker) here will produce it. And Bill (Pomeroy) here will direct."

Mummers was born. The first season brought in $1,800, which was around 20 percent of the theater's budget. In the early 1980s, Cole said, "Its almost maintained that percentage to the total budget through all these years because as the Mummers makes more money, the budget for the theater has risen proportionally. So that income is very important to Midland Community Theatre."

Today, the annual fund-raiser brings in around 30 percent of MCT's gross budget, said Doug Heck, third generation Summer Mummers volunteer and producer of the 1995 melodrama. "In fact, over the past few years, Mummers grossed more than MCT membership sales."

In 1974, the Mummers acquired its international reputation and billing when the production was staged at the Maytime International Festival in Dundalk, Ireland.

"Not less than 30 people put the show on the road complete with the show and the olio," said Ann Semple, a longtime Mummers participant who was not on the trip. "It was a real curiosity and a huge hit. Oddly, it was only performed at midnight each evening." The Mummers returned to Ireland in 1977.

At the Maytime International Festival, lawyer and retired judge James Fitzgerald was almost ejected from the audience.

Ron Hughes, former president of the Summer Mummers Board of Governors and previous longtime Mummers hero, recalled the story. FitzGerald had for a long time been the voice or heckler for the production, he explained, but the Irish were not familiar with this aspect of the show.

Thus, one night, a most upset female patron left her seat, walked to the box office and said, "there is someone yelling things at the Americans. And I think he ought to be thrown out."

It wasn't any easier to explain to her, than it was to another patron who told teenager Barry Fleming, a member of the Mummers' entourage, who had been asked to throw peanuts — "Throw one more of those peanuts and I will have you ejected" — that it's all part of the act, Hughes said. Nevertheless, he added, "The Irish seemed to love it."

In this decade, Midland and her sister city Dongying, China, were searching for a cultural event to take to China. The vehicle had to be non-language driven and the Summer Mummers Olio was considered to be an appropriate choice.

Thus, 10 actors and three technical people were selected to make the two-week trip in the fall of 1993.

Playing in some fascinating and often unusual places such as Chiang Kai Shek's home in Beijing and a theater in Guangrao where bats flew around during the 1st first act, the troop entertained thousands of smiling if not amused Chinese, said Ms. Semple.

In 1981, the Mummers entered a new era with the acquisition of the Yucca Theatre. Feeling the need for an on-going organizational structure, operational guidelines were sit up and a board of directors elected.

The first group to sit in that capacity included Ron Hughes as president, Joe Hill, Jim Salners, Ann Semple, Katie Heck and Ed Vogler. Since then, Arlen Edgar, Joe Hathaway, Doug Heck, Harry Harrison, and Barbara Slaton have served as president of this board.

The style of the show has remained constant with the exception of 1983, when a Musical Mummers was done. "'Rip Snorting on the Roaring Fork' was most unique and forgettable," Ms. Semple said.

Mummer involvement in community events has expanded in the past 10 years to include parades, entertainment for walkathon, events at the CAF, Keep Midland Beautiful Days, Celebration of the Arts and Septemberfest.

In 1991, Ms. Semple said, "We felt that Midland might need a lift in December, so we did nine performances of the only year for 'Winter Mummers'."

The latest "new event" is taking, Ms. Semple said, "The Olio 'on the road' to entertain in neighboring communities. The first of these was the Chamber of Commerce Banquet in Seminole, which was a huge success."

Through the years, popcorn has become as much of a Mummers' regular as the melodrama and olio. As Pennebaker said in the 1978 MCT program for "The Sunshine Boys," "Income from the sales of popcorn in a given summer will exceed income from all sources realized during the 1949 season."

In 1994, at $1 a bag, the sale of popcorn brought in $32,000.

Volunteers have made it possible.

"We've got about 400 volunteers that we utilize throughout the year," said Heck. "That includes the people who are crazy enough to be down here every night or the person that has only been able to give us one or two nights. Keep in mind that the average number of volunteers it takes to operate a single night's performance — house managers, performers, bartenders, technicians, pop corn poppers, etc. — is about 100 and that we are able to rely on them not just one or two nights, but three nights a week for 11 weeks each and every summer.

"There are a lot of good, fund raising events in this town that employ a lot of good, dedicated volunteers, but I know of no other project that employs so many across such a long period of time. I've always known Mummers was fun to work, but quite obviously our volunteers are getting more out of the experience than the satisfaction of raising money for a good cause. They're having fun."

OIL REPORT

SUNDAY, AUGUST 13, 1995 SERVING 54 COUNTIES IN WEST TEXAS AND NEW MEXICO

BRIEFING

Prices recover

Crude futures prices moved higher during the past week on the New York Mercantile Exchange, boosted by a larger-than-expected drop in the nation's crude supplies and strength in gasoline futures, which rose on news gasoline supplies had fallen to 12-year lows.

Late in the week, West Texas Intermediate closed at $17.89 a barrel, the posted price at $16.25.

Oilex acquisition

HOUSTON -- Oilex International Investments INc. has acquired a 10 percent working interest in the Sublime Prospect in Lavaca County, Texas. The Sublime Prospect has primary oil and gas objectives in the shallow Catahoula/Frio, Yegua-1, Yegua-2, and Yegua-3 sands.

Based upon seismic, radiometrics and subsurface geologic well control, the structural high serving as the trapping mechanism for hydrocarbons extends throughout the 1,100 contiguous acreage block position that OLEX will participate in. Engineering and geologic data and studies of the field on the 1,100 acreage position indicates an estimated 20.25 Billion Cubic Feet of Gas in place as well as 4.5 million barrels of oil.

Drilling improves

Drilling activity was mixed for the first week of August, according to Baker Hughes Inc.

The Permian Basin rig count continued to rise, gaining four rigs to 119 for the week. A year ago the count was 110.

Arch drills

FORT WORTH--Arch Petroleum Inc. announced that drilling has begun on the Summerour No. 1-320 exploratory well located on the Sherman/Dallam County line of the Texas Panhandle to a planned total depth of 7,000 feet. The well has been designed to be a multi-pay test and is the first of a three well exploratory program scheduled for drilling between now and the end of the year.

Over the last 30 months, Arch has assembled a position of over 70 square miles in this prospect area which is located on the west flank of the Anadarko Basin and adjacent to the western edge of the Hugoton Field. Arch is utilizing 3-D seismic technology to identify multi-pay quality drillable prospects. The area has hosted several recent discoveries, most notably in the Phillips Petroleum -- Craig Ranch Morrow Field in Sherman County.

Petroleum asset managers conference set

■ Midland conference will bring deal-makers together, examine oil property issues.

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

For operators and investors wondering where their next oil and gas property deal will come from, the 1995 Petroleum Asset Managers Conference might provide the answers.

Hosted by Petroleum Strategies Inc. of Midland, the conference is set for Thursday, August 31st at the Midland Petroleum Club and will bring the oil industry's deal makers together to get better acquainted and discuss critical issues involved in oil and gas portfolio management.

"The purpose of the conference is to bring together for face-to-face meetings the top acquisition and divestment people from the major players in the petroleum asset marketplace," said Dale Brown, president of Petroleum Strategies Inc. Other deal-makers conferences have been held in Houston and Dallas, but this is the first time such a conference has been held in Midland.

Brown said Petroleum Strategies organized the conference at the request of its clients, and that he hoped it would be the first of many to come in the Basin. He said such networking conferences, which feature break-out sessions, often stimulate acquisitions and divestments, trades and mergers which are good for the industry.

"We have been told time and again by our clients that the main key to an oil and gas transaction is to know the guy on the other side of the desk. This conference will help build personal relationships among oil and gas asset managers," said Brown, whose firm has facilitated $650 million in oil and gas trades over the past three years.

In addition to building a network of new friends and associates, Brown said the conference would also offer information useful to those making trades and selling and buying properties.

Two well-known industry figures with strong track records in building oil and gas companies will be the featured luncheon and dinner speakers. Scott Sheffield, chairman, president and CEO of Parker and Parsley Petroleum Co., will speak at the luncheon on the "Challenges of Rapid Growth." Clayton Williams, president and CEO of Clayton Williams Energy Inc., will be the dinner speaker and will tell conference participants that "Relationships Outlive the Deal."

The lead off session will be "Growing Through Acquisitions" featuring Robert Watson, president of Abraxas Petroleum Corp. He will discuss strategies for getting the right asset mix; beating the competion and skills for good guys. He will also provide insight on finding hidden value, finding the right people for growth, new approaches to property data management and debt versus equity decisions.

The second session will feature Tony Best, president, Arco Permian, who will examine the other side of the equation and give a presentation on "Grow-

Midland man nominated for SPE president

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

A Midland petroleum engineer stands in line to become the next president of the Society of Petroleum Engineers, and for the first time in history two candidates are running for the office.

Hickman

Midlander T. Scott Hickman is the candidate chosen by the SPE Nominating Committee. Philip C. Crouse is the petition candidate, nominated through a petition signed by SPE members. Ballots are due September 15, and the results should be known by early October.

"I'm certainly flattered and honored to have been nominated for the position," said Hickman, president of T. Scott Hickman & Associates Inc., a consulting firm specializing in reserve evaluations and reservoir studies for improved oil recovery. Noting that the SPE has 53,000 members from 125 countries, Hickman called the SPE "a significant society and I appreciate the honor of being nominated."

He observed that, if he is elected, it will mean a three-year commitment: One year as president-elect, one year as president and one year as immediate past president, quite a commitment for a self-employed businessman with a busy consulting practice. As president, he would attend board meetings, appear at many SPE functions worldwide, and visit as many local SPE sections as pos-

Acquisition markets stabilized

■ Reserve values show slight increase in second quarter.

Staff Reports

HOUSTON - Domestic reserve values rose 7 cents in the second quarter to a median value of $4.17 per barrel of oil equivalent, a good sign that the acquisition market has stabilized after a dreary first quarter of low activity, low reserve values and low gas prices.

The median was derived from 69 transactions, a 57 percent increase from the revised number of deals, 44, closed in the first quarter. The aggregate value of the total transactions was $862 million, representing over 143 MMBOEs traded, a 21 percent decline from the revised $1.1 billion traded in the first quarter.

The Enserch/Dalen merger represented 53 percent of the value traded. The remaining transactions completed were valued below the $55 million mark with only four between $20 and $55 million. Deals less than $50 million represented 97 percent of total transactions, up from 94 percent reported in the first quarter. The average transaction size was $14.6 million, including the Enserch/Dalen merger and $7 million excluding it.

During the second quarter, natural gas dominated, controlling 61 percent of the reserve transactions. In terms of actual reserves traded, gas was again dominant, accounting for 68 percent of reserves traded, up from 47 percent in the first quarter. The median price paid for transactions involving a significant amount of natural gas was 69 cents per

TECHNOLOGY FOR TOMORROW

Schlumberger debuts new tool

■ Platform Express is faster, better, shorter and more reliable than Triple Combo.

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

When low-keyed, soft-spoken, Schlumberger decides to go high profile with bands and buffets to announce new technology , one might suspect that the pioneer oilwell logging company is on to something big.

"It's the biggest technological thing to come our way in the past 20 years," says Linda Silinsky, Manager of Public Relations for Schlumberger. "It's so big that all the technology we now use will go into the dumpster. This is the introduction of revolutionary technology"

It's so big that Schlumberger has invited 3,000 members of the Permian Basin and and around the industry to Midland for a full day of demonstrations, a buffet lunch and a Country & Western Ball featuring Jerry Jeff Walker and the Gonzo Compadres.

Midland, Calgary and Bakersfield were chosen as the three oilpatch towns to debut the powerful tool, with the Midland party being the biggest. "We have never introduced anything on this magnitude before." says Silinsky.

Developed in Houston and Paris at a cost of $40 million, until now the industry has heard only whispers and rumors about Platform Express as the new logging tool made its way around the oil patch. The tool underwent worldwide testing in five separate locations, including the Permian Basin. What makes Platform Express revolutionary, say Schlumberger officials, is that it is less than half as long, three times more reliable and twice as fast as conventional logging tools.

With a short design, integrated circuits, sensors located at the bottom of the tool, flex joints, and a better designed density tool, the Platform Express can run at 3600 feet per hour, and seldom gets stuck. Compare this to Schlumberger's Triple Combo tool, which is over 90 feet long and runs at 1800 feet per hour.

The Platform Express also provides real time capability with one-foot vertical resolution on wells. "Before, with the Triple Combo, we had vertical resolution of six feet and had to physically calculate for the space between the sensors," said John Cunniff, Schlumberger Sales Engineer for the Midland area. "Now what you see on the screen is what you get. Each tool reads the same part of the bore hole, and decisions to run a DST can be made instantaneously."

All time-savings combined, Silinsky says the new technology can cut an average off seven to ten hours off of rig time, while saving on drilling a deeper rathole.

Platform Express was tested in the Permian Basin by Amoco and Collins & Ware. Michael T. Moylett, geologist for Collins & Ware, was in charge of the test on the company's No.1 Garden City discovery well, which was completed on July 26.

"We logged the well twice as fast with better results than we could have gotten with a conventional Triple Combo, and saved four to five hours of rig time," said Moylett, who compared the technological gap between Platform Express and the Triple Combo as about the same as that between 2D and 3D seismic. "It's just better electronics that allows you to see more stuff and acquire the data faster."

Moylett said the smoother running tool had a more powerful resistivity log which allows geologists to better differentiate between shales and sands and better identify bedding surfaces, fractures and vugs — and porosity.

ing Stronger Through Divestment."

Best will offer strategies for deciding what to sell, what to keep and getting top value for assets. He will also examine the skills needed for making a good sale, how to keep the right people and tax considerations for selling.

Break-out sessions will examine trades, using other people's money, technology-motivated alliances, and sales strategies. The session on sales strategies will cover auctions, bids and negotiated sales.

Bill Earnest, Conoco Inc., will facilitate the Trade Session, with Dale Brown of Petroleum Strategies as resource. Porter Trimble of Merit Energy will facilitate the finance session assisted by Phil DeLozier of Tenneco Ventures and Bryant Patton, Association of Energy Managers. David Santley of Anadarko Petroleum Corp. will lead the session on sales stategies with Jack Randall of Randall & Dewey Inc. and Ken Olive of Oil & Gas Asset Clearinghouse acting as resources. The breakout session on technology-motivated alliances will be led by Steve Melzer, of the Center for Energy and Economic Diversification and industry partners to be named.

The final session for the one-day conference covers "Trends in Acquisitions & Divestitures" and examines who is buying and selling, current asset pricing, financial resources, sales packaging and in-house versus outsourcing for A&D services.

Individuals or companies interested in attending the conference may contact Petroleum Strategies at (915) 682-0292.

TOOL: Revolutionary technology

pled with flex joints, and a caliper arrangement that pushes the pad tighter to the formation account for much of the improved density readings. "The closer the pad is to the formation, the better the reading," said Moylett.

Field tests validated an eight-fold increase in reliability, according to Don Sweet, Midland District Manager for Wireline and Testing, and a great deal of that reliability came from the ruggedness built into tools by Anadril, a Schlumberger's unit which manufactures MWD (measurement while drilling) tools for horizontal drilling.

John Cunniff is confident the new and improved logging tool will have great application in the Permian Basin, not only helping operators to quickly spot more zones of interest in newly drilled wells, but also to identify by-passed oil in old fields.

"This is a mature area, but there are a lot of holes yet to be drilled in old and new areas and improved logging is bound to turn up some new production. After all, the best place to look for oil is in an oil field."

SPE: Midlander runs for president

sible during that three-year rotation.

It is a commitment Hickman said he is willing to make. "The committee asked me and I said that if I was elected I would serve. I stand ready to honor the commitment."

A 1957 graduate of Texas Tech University, he joined the SPE that same year, the year he joined Texaco Inc., serving in a variety of petroleum engineering assignments in north Texas, the Arkansas-Louisiana-Texas area, south Louisiana and the Gulf of Mexico.

Hickman has noticed an evolution in the profession he has worked in for 38 years.

"The technology has expanded almost exponentially in recent years," he observed. "It's become a full-time job, almost, just to keep up with new and emerging technologies. This is where the SPE is so valuable, because the bulk of its efforts is in technology transfer. As there's more technology to transfer and as companies downsize and reorganize, there's usually fewer people to apply these technologies; with the economics of the oil business being fairly marginal, in many cases we have to work harder and use better technology to make a profit."

Of the organization he joined 38 years ago, Hickman noted that it, too has evolved over time and faces the challenges of the rapid changes currently happening to the petroleum industry throughout the world as the industry undergoes reorientation, downsizing and reorganizing; there's a rapid transfer of assets from one company to another and companies are moving from one theater of operations to another, many moving to international operations.

"For the SPE, this is a very challenging time. Currently, approximately 40 percent of the society's membership resides outside the United States, and this trend is continuing to grow very rapidly. In fact, by shortly after the turn of the century, half or more of our membership will be non-U.S. residents. Obviously as the organization rapidly internationalizes, that presents a challenge because you're dealing with different cultures," Hickman said. "The SPE so far has responded to this internationalization, I think, in a very honest manner as reflected in its board of directors, which has quite a number of non-U.S. residents on it."

This growing trend toward internationalization is an area he plans to emphasize if he wins the election, Hickman said.

"We're dead in the water without that. We've got to continue to service people around the world. We've recently opened an office in Malaysia; several years ago we opened a London office. We have to continually be checking ourselves to be sure we're meeting the needs of the industry worldwide. We have a lot of exciting events; Sections have been established in Russia, established in China; these are historical events of tremendous significance to the society - we're talking about potentially thousands of new members from these sources; how do we service them? How do we provide them with our services? There are significant, interesting problems in that area."

At the same time, he said, "We have to recognize that North America is still, in terms of total membership, where the majority of members live. With the rapid changes in the industry in North America - people are familiar with companies going overseas or downsizing, we have to be sensitive to this and try to serve the needs of members in more mature producing areas, of which the United States is one, as well as other areas of the world that will rapidly become mature and experience these same changes."

Hickman served as chairman of the SPE's South Louisiana section in 1966-68 and as a director of the Permian Basin section from 1984-86. He also was an SPE Distinguished Lecturer for 1994-95. His awards include a 1988 West Texas/New Mexico Regional Service Award and selection as Engineer of the Year for 1987 by the Permian Basin chapter, Texas Society of Professional Engineers.

MARKETS: Rebound from first quarter

(From 1G)

Mcf, a 1 cent increase from the first quarter median of 68 cents per Mcf.

The most newsworthy event was the reversal of the median values trend of gas dominated deals over oil dominated deals, which hasn't existed in almost two years. The $4.87 per BOE for oil dominated deals represents approximately a 30 percent premium over the $4.82 per BOE for gas dominated deals. Continued weak gas prices coupled with relatively strong oil prices contributed to this event.

The ratio of reserve values to wellhead prices in the second quarter depicts a market in favor of the buyers for the second consecutive quarter. The ratio, .26 percent, remained below the historical average of 30 percent.

Parker & Parsley reports quarterly loss

MIDLAND — Parker & Parsley Petroleum Co. announced financial and operating results for the second quarter and six months ended June 30, 1995.

Parker & Parsley reported a net loss of $62.4 million ($1.77 per share) on revenues of $158.6 million compared to net income of $3.5 million (12 cents per share) on revenues of $100.9 million for the second quarter of 1994. The second quarter net loss excluding nonrecurring items was $4.9 million (14 cents per share). The second quarter nonrecurring items included the following:

- $65.9 million after tax charge ($1.87 per share) associated with the early adoption of Statement of Financial Accounting Standard (SFAS) No. 121 "Impairment of Long-Lived Assets;"
- $3.5 million after tax charge (10 cents per share) relating primarily to the amortization of deferred compensation earned in 1993 included in general and administrative expenses;
- $3.4 million after tax charge (10 cents per share) for financing fees associated with the Company's acquisition activities which had previously been capitalized and expenses associated with existing legal matters included in other expenses; and
- $15.3 million after tax gain (44 cents per share) on disposition of nonstrategic assets.

The decline in net income is primarily the result of lower gas prices, significantly higher DD&A and interest expense.

Scott D. Sheffield, the Company's Chairman, President and Chief Executive Officer, stated, "The company has sold or agreed to sell a total of $178 million of nonstrategic assets. These divestitures along with additional measures taken should provide an overall reduction in the company's cost structure (interest expense and production costs) going forward. In addition, general and administrative expenses for the second quarter excluding the nonrecurring expenses exhibited an annual run rate of $26.7 million. The Company is well on its way to achieving its goal of a $25 million general and administrative expense level for 1996."

For the second quarter of 1995, cash flow from operations, before changes in operating assets and liabilities, increased 30 percent to $42.6 million compared to $32.8 million for the same period in 1994. Despite lower gas prices, the increase in cash flow is directly attributable to higher oil and gas production levels along with higher oil prices. During the second quarter of 1995, the Company had 35.2 million weighted average shares outstanding compared to 28.3 million in the same period in 1994.

For the six months ended June 30, 1995, the Company reported a net loss of $77.2 million ($2.19 per share) on revenues of $288.0 million compared to net income of $3.9 million (14 cents per share) on revenues of $203.8 million for the first half of 1994. The six months net loss excluding nonrecurring items was $15.0 million (43 cents per share). For the six months ended June 30, 1995, cash flow from operations, before charges in operating assets and liabilities, increased $18.2 million or 32 percent to $74.4 million from $56.2 million for the same period a year ago. The Company's weighted shares outstanding were 35.2 million compared to 28.1 million.

For the second quarter ended June 30, 1995, Parker & Parsley's daily crude oil production increased 9,618 barrels or 35 percent to 37,030 barrels compared to 27,412 barrels for the same period in 1994. Parker & Parsley's average crude oil price increased $1.50 per barrel or 9 percent to $17.33 per barrel compared to $15.83 per barrel in the second quarter of 1994. The company's second quarter daily natural gas production increased 41 percent to 239 million cubic feet from 169 million cubic feet for the same period in 1994. In the second quarter of 1995, natural gas prices decreased 5 percent to $1.84 per mcf from the $1.93 per mcf realized in the comparative period for 1994.

Also, in the second quarter, Parker & Parsley's Australian daily crude oil production averaged 4,377 barrels of oil per day and daily natural gas production averaged 22.9 million cubic feet. In Australia, the Company received average second quarter prices ($US) of $19.24 per barrel of oil and $1.86 per mcf of natural gas.

For the six months ended June 30, 1995, Parker & Parsley's daily crude oil production increased 9,803 barrels or 36 percent to 37,086 barrels compared to 27,283 barrels for the same period in 1994. Parker & Parsley's average crude oil price increased $2.48 per barrel or 17 percent to $16.98 per barrel compared to $14.50 per barrel for the first six months of 1994. The Company's daily natural gas production increased 51 percent to 242 million cubic feet from 160 million cubic feet for the first half of 1994. In the first half of 1995, natural gas prices decreased 11 percent to $1.80 per mcf from the $2.02 per mcf realized a year earlier.

Also, for the six months ended June 30, 1995, Parker & Parsley's Australian daily crude oil production averaged 4,279 barrels of oil per day and daily natural gas production averaged 22.4 million cubic feet. During this period, in Australia, the Company received average prices ($US) of $18.99 per barrel of oil and $1.88 per mcf of natural gas.

Clayton Williams Energy reports $804,000 loss for second quarter

Staff Reports

Clayton Williams Energy Inc. has reported a net loss of $804,000 or 14 cents per share on revenues of $13.6 million, compared to net income of $329,000 or 6 cents per share on revenues of $12.6 million for the second quarter of 1994.

The principal factors contributing to the change in operating results were higher interest expense during the 1995 quarter, attributed chiefly to higher interest rates, and the recognition of a $600,000 gain on settlement of litigation during the 1994 quarter, which did not recur in 1995. For the first six months of 1995, the loss of $1.5 million remained flat compared to the same period of 1994.

The company has divested its interest in two gathering systems and a gas plant. In August, XCEL Gas Co., a general partnership in which the company owns a 77 percent interest, sold its gas gathering assets and the company also sold its 43 percent interest in its Wharton County processing plant and gathering system. The company used the aggregate net proceeds of approximately $7.7 million to repay indebtedness on its secured bank credit facility

Also in August, the company filed a Registration Statement with the Securities and Exchange Commission to register the sale of up to 2 million shares of common stock pursuant to a shareholder rights offering to be made only to stockholders of record as of a date to be selected in the future.

The actual number of shares to be offered and the actual price per share at which such shares may be offered will be established concurrently with the effectiveness of the Registration Statement. The proceeds of this offering will be used to repay indebtedness under its secured bank credit facility.

In addition, the company obtained a commitment from Bank One, Dallas, N.A. to loan the company up to $5.5 million under a subordinated debt facility which provides for interest at a minimum rate of 14.25 percent per year, payable monthly, with all principal due at maturity on July 31, 1998. This commitment expires on December 31, 1995.

The company does not plan to utilize this subordinated debt facility unless the funds available on the secured bank credit facility, after giving effect to the application of net proceeds from the sale of assets and rights offering, are inadequate to finance the company's planned capital expenditure program during the remainder of 1995.

'Deal-Makers' conference scheduled

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

The 1995 Deal-Makers Exposition and Conference, hosted by PLS of Midland, has been set for August 28-30 at the Westin Galleria Hotel in Houston.

Featured speakers for the conference include former Redskin quarterback Joe Theismann and Ed Foreman, a former two-time Congressman and motivational speaker.

Exhibit spaces allow participants an opportunity to show a selection of exploration and development deals, waterflood projects, producing property opportunities and other projects for trade, sale or partner consideration.

It also provides an opportunity for companies to meet other companies, individuals with deals for sale, investors and independents with money to buy, said Ron Wise, president of PLS.

It is also a format for handing out the Pelzi awards to the top "dealmakers" in the oil industry. Winners in 1994 included: Parker & Parsley, Hunt Oil Co., Louisiana Land & Exploration, Samedan, Flores & Rucks, Apache, Anadarko, Phillips, Amoco and Forest Oil. Parker & Parsley who was a winner last year, has been nominated for another award this year.

The Pelzi Awards, coined from the acronym PLS, are intended as a positive and enthusiastic forum for rewarding performers, says Wise.

Among the educational programs on the agenda are such topics as: Environmental Concerns in A&D; Capital Sources for Independents; Employee Hurdles & Pitfalls in Property Sales; Determining Market Value; Changing Face of U.S. Exploration, and A&D Tax Considerations.

Wise said 400 attended the conference last year, which featured Jerry Jones, as a speaker, and an equal amount was expected this year.

Other features of the conference include: a golf tournament at Cinco Ranch Country Club, a Prayer Breakfast and Power Breakfast.

ACTIVITY HIGHLIGHTS

Andrews yields 51-barrel Clearfork strike

Staff Reports

FAGADAU ENERGY CORP. has completed a Clearfork discovery in Andrews County, on an undrilled 640-acre tract straddling the Andrews and Gaines county lines, two miles northwest of nearest production in the Fullerton field, 18 miles northwest of Andrews.

On potential test, the No. 1 County Line pumped 51 barrels of 30 gravity crude and a trace of gas from perforations 6,416 to 6,425 ft. The interval was treated with 1,200 gallons of gel.

Permitted as a 7,200 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 7,340 ft. and plugged back to 6,900 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 6,553 ft.

The well topped the Yates at 3,040 ft., San Andres at 4,610, Glorieta at 5,902, Tubb at 6,892 and Lower Clearfork at 7,240 ft.

Hockley County gains Wolfcamp discovery

Hockley County has gained a Wolfcamp discovery, three miles east of Levelland, offsetting Clearfork and Wichita Albany production in the Hamilton field.

WHEELER OPERATING had scheduled the No. 2W Bullin as a water injection well and instead completed it to pump 132 barrels of 31 gravity crude and 250 barrels of water from perforations 8,380 to 8,385 ft.

Total depth was 8,642 ft. and the well was plugged back to 8,600 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 8,100 ft.

The well topped the Wolfcamp at 8,100 ft. on ground elevation of 3,496 ft.

Location is 1,157 ft. from north and 1,388 ft. from west lines of Labor 8, League 26, Lamar CSL.

Terrell County field gets third producer

A third producer has been completed in the Branch South (Strawn) field of Terrell County, 21.2 miles southwest of Sheffield.

UNION PACIFIC RESOURCES CORP. tested the No. 2 University "36-2" for a calculated absolute open flow of 25,400 Mcfd from perforations 10,965 to 11,557 ft. Gas-liquid ratio was 28,571:1 and gravity was 56.1 degrees API.

Total depth was 11,835 ft. and the well was plugged back to 11,558.

PLS continues growth with new products and services

Steve Upp with Parker & Parsley accepts last year's Pelzi award for Deal of the Year with Louis Dreyfus Natural Gas. Keynote Speaker Jerry Jones of the Dallas Cowboys made the presentation.

Petroleum Listing Services (PLS) continues to grow and add services for the oil and gas industry. Started as a multiple listing service for oilmen buying and selling properties and prospects, the firm has grown and expanded to add other information, marketing and networking services in the U. S. and Canada.

Oilmen were originally skeptical of the listing service, said Ron W. Wise, President and founder of the Midland-based service company. However, many have come around to the various new ways of conducting business. Since 1988, PLS has been responsible for over 100,000 introductions between buyers and sellers, thousands of new business relationships and hundreds of properties and prospects sold.

Today, over 1400 oil and gas companies and professionals subscribe (with dues of $250-$650/year) to PLS' various listing services and newsletters. Specifically, the company alternately publishes Acquisition News , a list of properties for sale and recent M&A and A&D activity for chief financial officers, engineers and landmen; Exploration News for geologists and landmen and PLS Review (every 5-6 weeks), a composite summary listing report detailing all properties and prospects for sale.

The company is also getting ready to go back online with electronic dissemination of information. PLS was online from 1989 through 1992, but the service was rarely used. "I guess we were a little ahead of our time," said Wise, "but now with the Internet, we think oilmen are ready for immediate access to what's for sale."

> "I guess we were a little ahead of our time, but now we think oilmen are ready for immediate access on what's for sale."
> Ron W. Wise, president
> Petroleum Listing Services

In addition to listings and editorial reports, PLS has also started TradeBank, a new data base and listing service for oilmen desiring to trade properties. Along with a separate trade listing service, PLS has put together an exclusive data base of what companies own. Mike Allen, Director of TradeBank in PLS' Dallas office said, "Historically the ability of companies to trade and manage their portfolios has been limited by a lack of information on what everyone owns, but not any more. Through TradeBank, companies can access non-operated ownership positions."

By sharing information, portfolio management and property trades should be easier. Twenty-one companies already subscribe to PLS' TradeBank service.

In 1989 PLS also started directly marketing properties and prospects for sellers and is now one of the largest purveyors of sealed-bid and negotiated sales.

Since that time, PLS has handled over $650 million dollars in asset sales for clients including Apache, Gulf Canada, Hardy, Kerr-McGee, Meridian, Mobil, Morrison, PetroCanada, Santa Fe, Texaco and Unocal. Current packages include Costilla, Meridian, Parker & Parsley and Snyder Oil (a mineral package). Though members receive priorities on packages, non-members, if active, should register their buying preferences with PLS.

Finally, PLS has scheduled their annual convention for August 28-30 in Houston at the Westin Galleria Hotel. This year's keynote speaker for the annual Pelzi Awards Banquet is ESPN co-anchor Joe Theismann. Over 65 companies will be exhibiting properties and year-end drilling deals for sale, and PLS is expecting between 650-800 registrants.

If you are active in buying and selling working interest and royalties, you really should take advantage of this networking and marketing exposition opportunity.

Questions can be directed to PLS' Midland office at 915-687-1200 or Houston at 713-650-1822 or Dallas at 214-891-0100.

PLS has scheduled this year's convention for August 28-30 in Houston. Call 915-687-1200. Over 850 oilmen are expected to attend.

Energi keeps clients out of the regulation 'hot seat'

"One of my greatest challenges is educating companies about the services available through a full service staffing company, like Energi Personnel," said Judi Hansler, owner of the locally- owned staffing company.

For years companies have relied on staffing firms to provide clerical personnel on a temporary basis. That's old news.

The thing many people don't realize is that a staffing company can provide a much wider range of skilled personnel as well as "temp to hire" services, permanent placement and payrolling services.

Energi Personnel employees include the traditional clerical people, plus manufacturing assembly-line workers, roustabouts, pipe fitters, food service personnel and a vast range of other skilled personnel.

Each employee is thoroughly tested and references are checked before an assignment is made. This protects the client company and saves the client critical hours of advertising, interviewing and selection time.

Judi Hansler, owner of Energi Personnel, spends a great deal of her time educating her clients about the benefits of non-traditional personnel services, such as payrolling and 'temp to hire' programs.

Client companies can also be sure that temporaries placed in safety sensitive positions have already undergone safety training, which Energi Personnel is also able to provide for the companies themselves.

The "temp to hire" program allows client companies to evaluate a prospective employee for 90 days before making a decision about hiring.

"While skills testing may be quite straight forward, determining how office personalities will mesh may take some time," Hansler explained.

Unemployment insurance and wrongful dismissal costs may be driven up when a client company dismisses an employee they have hired. On the other hand, if the person is a temporary, Energi Personnel can simply work on making a better match at a new assignment for that employee.

Besides cutting those costs out, Energi Personnel also lets clients get rid of the painful job of telling temporaries the job is over. "Let's face it, firing someone is no fun," Hansler said. "All our clients have to do is call our office when they want to change temporaries. We talk to the temporary ourselves."

Payrolling services allow client companies to avoid all the taxing paper work and many liabilities involved with employees they intend to keep for a while.

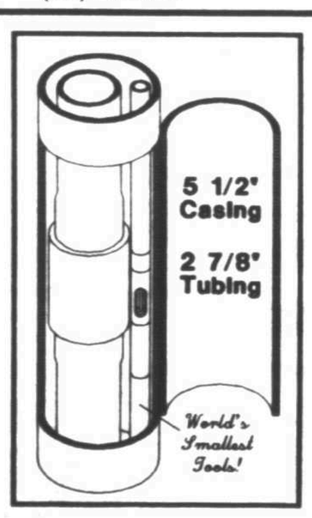

Energi payrolling provides several benefits over the frequently used contract labor arrangement. Many contract arrangements fail to meet the Internal Revenue Service definition of "contractor," as well as the guidelines set by the Texas Employment Commission. This costly risk can be avoided by utilizing the payrolling service. Energi will maintain all the required insurance and taxes, while the client has a simple invoice and a quality staff to show for it.

Many companies have also found this arrangement to be helpful during hiring freezes.

Energi Personnel is a full service staffing firm with offices in Midland and Odessa. They supply temporary, permanent, part-time and full-time personnel, as well as payrolling services. Their Midland number is 683-7277 and their Odessa number is 337-0440.

Hansler: Personnel business is a win/win proposition

Judi Hansler, owner of Energi Personnel, said, "I love this business because it's a win/win proposition. On the one hand I get to provide companies with much needed personnel, while on the other hand I get to place people that really need work."

"We get personally involved with the people we place. Because we take an interest in their lives, it is especially exciting to see them in the jobs they need," Hansler said.

The people placed by Energi Personnel are employees of Energi. Even though their positions are temporary, they can earn benefits.

The company's benefits include:
←Health Insurance
←Paid Holidays
←Paid Vacations
←Training Opportunities

Of course, the greatest benefit is an opportunity to work.

Energi Personnel places clients with a wide range of skills. In addition to placing clerical workers, Energi also places light industrial workers (including roustabouts, pipe fitters, inspectors), manufacturing staff, food service personnel and many others.

Energi also has training opportunities for their clients to develop or improve a variety of skills.

The process for becoming an Energi Personnel employee is pretty straightforward. Once a person applies, Energi will administer a variety of assessments. Hansler will also check references and provide an orientation program.

It usually takes about two weeks to get a new employee into their first position, though light industrial workers and experienced word processors are in tremendous demand.

> "Thirty percent of the positions we fill become permanent placements for our clients."
> JudiHansler, owner
> Energi Personnel

Energi's staffing service is valuable to those that have been laid off and are looking for more permanent work.

"Thirty percent of the positions we fill become permanent placements for our clients," Hansler explained.

"Temporary work also helps people fill in the gap between their unemployment checks and their previous income and to extend their unemployment benefits," she added.

While the income may reduce the size of the unemployment check it does not reduce it dollar for dollar so some extra income is enjoyed. Moreover, the less unemployment a client collects each month, the longer that person will be able to collect those benefits.

Energi Personnel accepts applications at their offices in Midland and Odessa between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m., Monday-Friday.

Energi Personnel, a locally-owned and controlled staffing service, was established in 1992. The Midland office is located at 4400 N. Big Spring St., Suite 202; phone 683-7277. Odessa's office is at 835 Tower Drive, Suite 16; phone 337-0440.

MEETINGS

History of 3-D seismic to be topic for WTGS

Jim Geitgey will be the guest speaker at Tuesday's luncheon meeting of the West Texas Geological Society. The meeting will be at the Midland Center beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Geitgey, with Range Exploration, will present a paper he co-authored with Paul Barwis entitled "Past, Present and Future Applications of 3-D Seismic in the Permian Basin."

He notes that while 3-D seismic was shot in the Permian Basin as early as 1973, the current boom is attributed mainly to several exploration applications in the late 1980s and early 1990s and 3-D has been shot in nearly ever trend in the Basin. Areas of improvement may include increased utilization of seismic attributes, improvements in the ability to image complex structures and the ability to better account for surface and near surface complications.

Cost is $7 per person and reservations can be made by calling 683-1573.

SIPES chapter to host Dallas oil executive

The Midland chapter, Society of Independent Professional Earth Scientists, will meet Wednesday at the Midland Country Club beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Guest speaker will be Hank Gruy, who will discuss "Unusual Oil and Gas Reservoirs I Have Known."

Gruy, chairman, president and chief executive officer of H.J. Gruy & Associates Inc. in Dallas, has encountered many interesting and unusual oil and gas fields in his illustrious career.

Atlanta to host AGA conference in October

The American Gas Association will hold its 1995 American Gas Conference October 1-2 in Atlanta.

Themed "Operating in a Competitive Environment," the meeting will feature general and breakout sessions on such topics as marketing challenges for local distribution companies, impact of electric restructuring on the natural gas industry, pipeline safety, and an update on federal legislative and regulatory actions.

Chevron signs deal for South China Sea tract

SAN FRANCISCO —Chevron Overseas Petroleum Ltd. has signed a two-year geophysical agreement with the China National Offshore Oil Corporation (CNOOC) to explore a highly prospective area of the South China Sea.

Geophysical studies will begin early next year on the 1,300-square-mile (3,300 sq. km.) offshore tract, designated Block 50/20 and located in a gas-prone area of the South China Sea approximately 60 miles (100 kilometers) southwest of Hainan Province. In the event the technical results are positive, Chevron will have the option to negotiate a petroleum agreement with CNOOC. A neighboring exploration block, 62/23, was granted to Chevron earlier this year.

Hughes Resources acquires 378 wells

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. --Hughes Resources Inc., a Nevada corporation, announced that it has successfully completed the purchase of 378 producing oil and gas wells and a 50-plus-mile natural gas gathering system from non-affiliated private companies.

This acquisition is expected to produce an additional $1.2 million of gross revenues and add $300,000 to corporate profits. The total consideration paid for the purchase is $5 million of convertible preferred stock. The preferred stock is convertible in one year to not more than 1 million shares of Hughes Resources common stock.

Benton, Texaco complete Rabbit Island well

CARPINTERIA, Calif.--Benton Oil and Gas Co. and Texaco Exploration and Production Inc. have successfully completed their second well on the Rabbit Island Field in St. Mary and Iberia Parishes, LA. The Rabbit Island State Lease 340 No. 211 well has commenced production at a rate of 20.0 million cubic feet per day (MMCFD) of natural gas and 150 barrels of condensate per day on a 32/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 3,620 pounds per square inch. The well was drilled to a measured depth of 11,207 feet and encountered a total of 70 feet of net pay in the 14C sand. The well was perforated at intervals between 9,924 to 10,000 feet.

Mobil, partners drill second test in Vietnam

HANOI, Vietnam (AP) — MJC Petroleum Co., Ltd., a joint venture between Mobil Corp. and three Japanese companies, has started drilling its second exploration well in Vietnam's Blue Dragon field, a company official said.

The company's first effort to find commercial quantities of oil or gas in Blue Dragon (Thanh Long) ended in failure in February.

MJC plans to finish drilling the new well in December, unless offshore typhoons force it to interrupt operations. The typhoon season usually begins in October.

The new well will be Vietnam's deepest so far, with a planned depth of 16,400 feet, Darken said.

Marathon announces Texas gas discovery

HOUSTON -- Marathon Oil Company has announced that the No. 1 Riley Trust discovery well in Robertson County, Texas has tested natural gas at the rate of 21.9 million cubic feet per day (mmcfd) at 3,100 psi. flowing tubing pressure from a Cotton Valley Reef.

This is the fifth successful reef well in the trend, where Marathon has extensively employed three dimensional seismic technology to evaluate prospects. The company has secured over 40,000 acres containing a large inventory of reef prospects which continue to be drilled.

Marathon has a 75 percent working interest in the Riley Trust discovery; Eastern Exploration (Broughton & Associates) holds the remaining 25 percent.

Parallel Petroleum completes discovery in Horseshoe Atoll

MIDLAND —Parallel Petroleum Corp. has completed a Canyon Reef discovery well, the R. L. Adkins Corp. Hickman 699 No. 1, in the Horseshoe Atoll area of Scurry County, Texas through the use of three-dimensional seismic imaging.

The well was potentialed for 100 barrels of oil and 300 barrels of water per day on a pump. Production is from the Canyon Reef limestone through perforations at 7,088 to 7,100 feet. The well is located approximately 15 miles northwest of the city of Snyder, Texas. This discovery is from the same formation and along the same trend as the eight successful wells drilled by Parallel during the last two years in Howard County, Texas.

The Company owns a 12.5% working interest (9.5% net revenue interest) in the well and in an area of mutual interest covering approximately 10,000 gross acres. Patterson Energy, Inc. (NASDAQ: PTEN), Snyder, Texas, owns a 6.25% working interest, and R. L. Adkins and other private individuals own the balance.

Interactive Exploration Solutions, Inc. (INEXS) of Houston provided the 3-D seismic technical support.
