International Boundary-- North American Style

A big commercial transport plane was flying from Cleveland to Detroit the other day. Taking the shortest route, it swung northwest across Lake Erie, flew over a sizable corner of Ontario, and then crossed the Detroit river and glided down to a landing at the Detroit airport.

One of the passengers was a young man who recently spent upwards of a year in Germany with the branch office of an American firm. When he got out of the plane he remarked:

"That was the most thrilling thing that has happened since I got back to America."

"What—this flight?" asked an acquaintance.

"No," said the young man. "The way we flew over the international boundary without anybody noticing it. We crossed from the United States, flew over Canada, and then flew back—and nobody said a word. That's the sort of thing that couldn't happen in Europe. Planes don't cross international boundaries there, not without a lot of negotiation and formality. They go far out of their way to avoid flying over a little strip of foreign territory. If they didn't, the pursuit planes would go after them."

Which is just another way of saying that we who live in North America never realize how lucky we are—until we see what we would be up against if the European system prevailed over here.

But perhaps it isn't entirely luck, after all. When you stop to think about it, there is nothing to prevent the United States and Canada from distrusting each other and glaring sullenly across the border in the European manner—nothing except the fact that each nation uses good sense and neighborly forbearance.

The United States, for instance, could easily claim that it "needs" the raw materials which Canada has. It could argue that unless it "controlled" the supply of these things its whole economy would be endangered. And it could go ahead and lay plans for the conquest of the Dominion.

Canada, on the other hand, could point out that its liberty was endangered by the colossus to the south. It could complain about the disruptive influence of American visitors—those C. I. O. organizers who have disturbed Ontario's premier, for example—and it could close the border with patrols, forts and so on.

The situation that would result would be every bit as logical as the situation which is commonplace on almost every European border.

That peaceful boundary between the United States and Canada is, as the young traveler remarked, an immensely thrilling thing. But it doesn't exist by accident.

It is what it is because the people of the two countries have chosen to act sensibly.

Carte du Jour

The Italians seem to be getting all kinds of bright ideas these days. First it was the liberation of the neck from the tight-fitting collar, and now it's the liberation of the restaurant-goer from the menu studded with foreign words and phrases.

The Fascist policy-formulators in the field of public feeding have declared that "exotic and foreign names" must go. The official explanation is the government wants to discourage snobbery, but it looks from here more like a simple move to intensify the affection of the people for its government.

The "exotic" names that fall within the scope of the new edict include "hot dog," "roast beef," and the extraordinary labels that have been affixed to various cocktails. The thought of a hot dog going under any other name is a little distressing, and what Italian names "Manhattan," "Bronx," and "Planter's Punch" will assume staggers the imagination. "Roast beef," of course, might be changed to the international label, "ross-biff."

Anyway, it's a good idea. Some American candidate for political office might do well for himself by pledging war on the exoticisms on American menus. Platform: "Potage paysanne, pommes frites, pasta asciutta must go!"

All law students know that marriage is a civil contract, but they don't find out till later that often the contract's the only thing that's civil about it.

A news headline states the Russians have promised to defend their border. If the Japanese hear about that they'll probably get pretty sore; they think it's their border.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9. — Echoes of the celebrated Madison oil trial, what with various oil companies and executives just fined after anti-trust convictions months ago, others being granted a new trial and still others facing a grand jury on separate charges, recall to defense and government lawyers the headaches of that first trial.

In May, fourteen defendant companies and eleven oil executives of another group awaiting trial pleaded nolo, electing to pay $400,000 in fines and costs. Profiting from the first trial's lessons, they didn't want to spend a few months in Madison at great expense. They didn't like Wisconsin juries and an adverse decision was likely. Cost of lawyers alone would have been more than fines. Other defendants elected to fight.

At least 30 lawyers served the defense in the first trial. The juror, kept four months from their families except at Christmas, were more irate than the defendants, thanks to constant bickering as to whether they should go to the movies or play pinocle. They had to take recreation in a body.

The oil men had a press-agent who handed them a manual on how to act. They were asked to go to church and avoid drinking in public. The manual was suppressed. Dr. Glenn Frank invited the defendants to a cocktail party. The party was suppressed too. Numerous veterans of the first trial still threaten to write a hilarious book.

NO KIN OF THE OTHER EDMUND.

THE New Deal has an Edmund Burke. You may hear more of him. He is no descendant of the great British orator, but he has been sent to New York by SEC to handle the new Chandler act covering corporate reorganizations. A young Harvard law graduate, Burke had much to do with writing the Chandler act and explaining it to Congress.

"TOMAYTO" QUEEN COMES A-VISITING.

She is 18, and her name isn't Peggy Walsh, but the big tomato canner who had her in charge wouldn't let her tell her real name. The Queen had a bushel of tomatoes for Mr. Roosevelt, but these were turned over to Bill Hassett, assistant to Secretary Steve Early and highest ranking White House occupant at the time.

CONGRESSMEN TOO BOISTEROUS.

TOO MUCH OF A BOOM.

Radford of Chicago stop advertising that demand for students of his commercial art courses is greater than can be supplied and that students will obtain steady employment within seven weeks.

STORIES IN STAMPS

Followed His Father to the White House

HISTORY played providentially with the distinguished Adams family of Massachusetts. John Adams was chosen second President of the United States to climax a brilliant career. His son, John Quincy Adams, became sixth President, rounding out an equally great career.

Rising through a long diplomatic service to become secretary of state, John Quincy Adams in 1824 looked forward to the presidency as the next step, even as Madison and Monroe had moved up. But there was a revolt against the old nominating system. The result was a battle between four candidates.

Jackson received 99 electoral votes; Adams, 84; Crawford, 41, and Clay 37. So the contest was thrown into the House, and there the Clay interests joined those of Adams and effected the defeat of Jackson. Adams, upon his succession, made Clay secretary of state.

Thus he not only heaped upon himself charges of corruption but won the undying enmity of the rapidly growing Jacksonian forces. These troubles hampered him throughout his term and in 1828 he was overwhelmed. But instead of retiring the diligent Adams returned to the House of Representatives. Here he served conspicuously until paralysis struck him in his House seat Feb. 21, 1848. He died two days later. He is shown above on a stamp of the new U. S. regular series, enlarged.

The Town Quack

Meanest young married man—the one who made charcoal sketches with the toast his wife prepared for breakfast.

Beginning Monday morning, August 22, every man who fits the downtown streets, stores or public places is supposed to be wearing rodeo regalia of some sort. The rodeo committee and chamber of commerce officials formed a collusion in which all men will be asked to dress the part so as to concentrate public attention on the rodeo.

It was pointed out that the rodeo September 3-4-5, is of supreme importance to the business of Midland, as it will bring to the city thousands of visitors, all of whom will leave some money behind. The rodeo committee can't do the job alone, and it's an opportunity for the business men to be a part of the Midland Rodeo.

For the sake of barbershops and barbers, there won't be any compulsory growing of beards, although some tonsorial art would add greatly to the western touch. You might turn out a pointed beard or a pair of handle bar mustaches, going to your barber regularly to have them shaped and trimmed.

It is likely that there will be some policing of the downtown section to see that everybody gets in on this dress rehearsal. Penalties may accrue to those who forget to wear the big hats, boots, rodeo shirts or Levi breeches. You don't need to wear the whole outfit, but wear something to let the world know you are a part of the rodeo.

There always has been too much reserve, dignity or something around here, forming a sort of a barrier between store clerks and cowmen and oil men and farmers, but now is the time to break down such lines of distinction. It's going to be everybody for the rodeo this time, and that means you!

Don't wait until August 22 to buy your rodeo shirt, or whatever you are going to wear. The stocks will be run down low and it's too late to reorder in great quantities and expect to have the goods here in time. So get something together and be ready to wear it. If you can't do any better, carry a rope, but be sure not to lay it down anywhere.

FEMININE FANCIES

By KATHLEEN EILAND

One of the pleasant things about concluding a vacation is hearing a few staunch friends say, "We missed you," when one returns to the treadmill of daily work and play—especially work.

Very little is said about men's jewelry as a usual thing, despite the fact that every man (like every woman) possesses something, watch or ring, or tie holder which may be classed as jewelry.

A Midland jeweler recently showed us something new in the way of men's rings. The heavy gold settings (yellow gold, be it noted) hold a new semi-precious "cat's eye" stone. These come in clouded brown or gray and at night are said to reflect light so that they shine like cats' eyes, this quality giving rise to the unusual name. The rings are handsome, too, just the thing for the One Man's birthday gift. And definitely masculine in style.

An innovation in wrist watch design has been made with the convenience of masculine wearers in mind. This is the "side wrist" watch. The watch is not curved to fit the side of the wrist but is housed in a narrow rectangular case which is supported in a holder designed to clasp around the arm and hold the timepiece snugly in place where a downward glance will show the wearer the hour.

It is queer how the idea of getting something for nothing allures even the most level-headed of humans—who should know that in nine cases out of ten some kind of payment is made somewhere and somehow and sometime for everything acquired. CARDINALS RETURN HOME AGAINST CLOVIS PIONEERS TONIGHT

RED BIRDS SLUG OUT 8-7 VICTORY AGAINST LUBBOCK

The Midland Cardinals return home today after the worst road trip of the year, having won only two games of the six played. Opposition during the next three nights for the Cardinals will be the Clovis Pioneers, third place team and only a game and a half behind the second place Cardinals.

Following the visit of the Pioneers, the Lubbock club will be here for three games, after which the Cardinals take to the road until August 23, returning home on that date to wind up the season with three games against Wink and two with Big Spring.

The Cardinals finally broke their losing streak of four in a row last night when they came from behind and nosed out the league leading Lubbock Hubbers, 8-7.

In winning last night's game, the Cardinals defeated Ralph Marshall ace of the Lubbock pitching staff. Jerry Soule pitched eight-hit baseball, including homes by Ged-zius, Carr and Miller, in a game tied four times. Four Hubber errors caused the downfall of the league leaders, although the bottom end of the Card batting order plastered the ball heavily. Morris, Evans, Barnhill, Beers and Soule accounted for most of the damage.

A double by Evans, triple by Beers and single by Soule brought in the winning runs in the eighth inning.

Score by innings:

Lubbock	001 211 101 7 8 4

Safety First Ball Players Play Only to the Averages

Fourth of a five-part series, "Changing Baseball."

By HARRY GRAYSON
Sports Editor, NEA Service.

Safety first ball players of today play more to the averages than anything else.

Unlike the old-timers, they have neither the love for the game nor the ambition to take all the law allows and as much more as they may be able to get away with.

"Baseball is no brotherly love convention," Ty Cobb used to say.

now, however. The spirit of Cobb has passed from the sport. And a good share of it was rubbed out by umpires who chase athletes for little more than a dirty look.

Years ago major league outfits carried only 17 or 18 men. They lugged their own suit rolls and bat bags. There were no such things as trunks. Most of the noble athletes slept in upper berths, and the teams stayed at second-class hotels.

Pirates, is a throwback to the old school in the National League. The Cardinals of 1934 were the last old-fashioned ball club of the kind that runs the other side right out of the park. Joe Medwick, Pepper Martin, Ernie Ott, and Dizzy Dean brought happy memories throughout that exciting campaign.

Little Lee Handley ... got $20,000 for signing with Pirates.

BEST NOT GOOD ENOUGH.

Now the best is not good enough. There are plenty of complaints. The big league player limit is 23, and clubs travel in two private cars, with all hands in lower berths.

Players formerly slid bases when they were black and blue. They realized that it was when a player humored himself that he was most likely to get hurt. Catchers caught with broken fingers, etc.

Today a player goes out of the lineup at the slightest excuse. He is rested when he suffers a slump. There are reservists for all hands.

It used to be that a player didn't care or dare to give the other chap an opportunity to take his job.

Superlative performers once had to battle their way up through the minors ... spend several years in doing so, and then they would be fortunate to get $5000 a year for starring.

Baseball salaries have tripled.

Players get huge bonuses for signing. Tom Henrich, while still in the minors, was paid $25,000 for coming to terms with the Yankees when Judge Landis declared him a free agent. Lee Handley collected $20,000 from the Pirates under similar circumstances. A club as conservative as the Athletics gave Sam Chapman $8500 for joining it direct from the California campus.

BASEBALL IS BUSINESS NOW.

Bucky Harris and the Washington Nationals' veteran trainer, Mike Martin, assert that they haven't seen more than a half dozen good aggressive players in the American League in a decade.

Harris names Frank Crossett of the Yankees as one. The Rifles' shortstop has his head up at all times. He's everlastingly trying to pull the hidden ball or some other trick. Joe Cronin is a hustler from 'way back. So are Harland Clift and the ancient and honorable Goose Goslin. Bill Werber has a tinge of what Harrier and Martin mean.

Little Jepp Handley, the Bradley College boy perking up the Tom Henrich ... collected $25,000 from Yankees as free agent.

There are exceptions, certainly, but the average young fellow coming into the majors today has little more in mind than what he can get out of it financially.

Generally speaking, baseball is strictly business now.

NEXT: Major league prospects coming up.

12 Graduates of Texas American Legion Baseball Program in Professional Ball

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—Twelve graduates of the Texas American Legion Junior Baseball Program are making good in organized baseball this year according to partial returns from a nation-wide survey being made by the National Americanism Commission.

Returns made by 118 clubs of the 277 in the country's 39 professional baseball leagues to whom the Commission sent questionnaires, showed that 521 graduates of American Legion Junior Baseball were carving out careers for themselves during 1938 in the major and minor leagues.

California topped all the other departments of the American Legion in sending Junior Baseball talent to organized baseball, having 102 of its junior stars in the professional ranks this year. Illinois was next with 47, Pennsylvania had 31, Missouri 30, New York 26, Michigan 20, Minnesota and Louisiana 18 each, Alabama 17, Georgia and Indiana each 16, New Jersey 15, Iowa and Wisconsin 14 each, Ohio and North Carolina 13 each, Oregon 12, Oklahoma 10, and so on.

Among the cities, Chicago led with 34, St. Louis was runner-up with 21, Los Angeles had 19, San Francisco 14, Detroit and New Orleans each 13.

All of these figures are expected to be increased materially when all of the returns from the survey are received at National Headquarters. A total of 159 clubs are yet to be heard from.

Great 1938 Prospects.

Reports from all over the country indicate that the 1938 Junior Baseball Program of the American Legion is one of the most successful in the 11-year history of this big sports classic. More than 500,000 boys under 17 years of age again are enrolled in the nation-wide program. Many of these boys undoubtedly will graduate into moneyed players.

The primary purpose of the American Legion in sponsoring Junior Baseball, however, is to develop sturdy bodies and sound characters for the boys who enroll in this ac-

Wink's First Golf Tourney Slated for Saturday, Sunday

WINK, Aug. 9 (Special).—The first annual invitation golf tournament ever held in Wink will get underway here Saturday and continue through Sunday.

Three months ago work was started in the organization of a Wink country club. There are now 200 members, a beautiful club room and a revamped golf course which is declared to be one of the best natural layouts in West Texas. The course is being put in top condition for the tournament and committees are working daily in their efforts to devise entertainment for golfers during the tournament.

Saturday afternoon at 5 o'clock, hot barbecue will be served with all the trimmings. The Calcutta pool auction will be held at 8:30 in the club room, followed by a dance at 9:30 with music furnished by Ned Bradley's orchestra.

One of the largest and most expensive lists of prizes offered at a tournament this year in West Texas has been put up for the Wink tournament, and outstanding golfers from this area have already signified their intention of entering.

Chandler Offers Barkley Support

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Aug. 9. (AP).—Re-nomination conceded, senate majority leader Alben W. Barkley last night had a lead of more than 50,000 votes over Governor A. B. Chandler as additional returns from Saturday's democratic senatorial primary was tabulated.

Governor Chandler from the mansion at Frankfort in a congratulatory telegram in which he pledged his active support to Barkley in the November election. The senator at Paducah, replied thanking the governor for his message.

Mrs. Chandler at Frankfort in an interview charged her husband's defeat was due to federal money "promised or spent" in Kentucky.

The latest unofficial tabulation from 4,058 precincts out of 4,313 in the state with 118 of the 120 counties reporting complete, gave Barkley 274,312 and Chandler 213,800.

When the season opened, will fight it out in the annual Junior World's Series. The 1937 event was won by East Lynn, Massachusetts.

Texas is grouped in Region 12 which pitted the Lone Star Junior Baseball championship team against Louisiana and Mississippi in the regional tournament.

Although Texas Junior Baseball teams have always rendered good account of themselves, none has yet survived the grueling competition leading to national semi-finals and finals. However, this may be the year when a fighting team from Texas may charge forward to write Dixie Junior Baseball history by copping the national title.

July Is Wettest Month in Eagle Pass

EAGLE PASS, (AP).—July, with 5.5 inches rainfall, was the wettest month of 1938 in Eagle Pass. C. P. Dodge, weather forecaster here, announced. In Quemado Valley, irrigated farming district 12 miles north of here, however, the precipitation was almost double that in Eagle Pass, causing flooded creeks on three occasions.

Since the opening of the irrigation project in 1932, Quemado, or "Burnt" Valley as it was known, has been converted from a desert-like region into one of the most most sections in southwest Texas. Humidity from 13,500 acres of irrigated land is believed responsible for the increased rainfall.

FHLB Members Given Dividends

WASHINGTON—More than $4,500,000 was received by Government agencies as dividends on their investments in 1,343 savings and loan associations during the first half of 1938, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board reported today. A tabulation showed that practically every association paid a dividend for the six-month period.

The Board announced that 1,078 Federal savings and loan associations paid average annual dividends of 3.56 per cent, while 265 state associations paid an average of 3.45 per cent. Since Government agencies were first authorized by Congress to invest in qualified thrift associations which sought funds to expand their home-financing operations, dividends paid the Government have totaled approximately $17,793,000.

Of the total dividends received during the first half of '38, amounting to $4,538,000, $3,668,000 represents earnings on $21,997,610 invested in shares by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation from a $300,000,000 fund authorized by Congress in 1935. The outstanding HOLC investments in Federal chartered associations on June 30 totaled $170,995,300. In state-chartered institutions of the Federal Home Loan Bank System, HOLC investments amounted to $41,002,310.

The remaining $870,000 of Government dividends for the six months came from an outstanding investment of $47,802,000 of U. S. Treasury funds in Federal savings and loan associations, which was authorized by Congress in 1933.

The Government's purchase of shares in the various associations was undertaken to provide needed funds for home-financing, but that need has subsided with the resumption of investments by the general public.

Cowgirls' Roping to Be New Feature of Big Midland Rodeo

Cowgirls' roping definitely will be on the program of Midland Rodeo September 3-4-5. It has been announced by members of the general committee. A purse of $100 put up by the rodeo, with entrance fees to be added, will add to the program each afternoon and night a contest in which at least six skilled cowgirl ropers will compete, being roped to catch and "bell" the calves.

Among those promised for the show are Mrs. Louis Roberson, Jewel Duncan and Isora DeRacy of Pecos, one from Oklahoma and one from South Texas, one from the Davis mountains and possibly Curly Seal of Baird. The contest is new at Midland Rodeo and has no connection with the annual cowgirl sponsors' contest.

TULSA, OKLA. (U.P.) — Free thousands persons are alive in the United States today who can thank the current extensive highway safety campaigns for their survival, according to the American Petroleum Institute.

During the first half of this year, highway fatalities were one-fifth below those for the corresponding period of 1937.

"Although many factors enter into the remarkable trend toward highway safety, including normal precautions against danger, it is believed that the major factor is to be found in the rapidly growing "safety consciousness" on the part of the public.

WASHINGTON, (U.P.) — More than 6,000 acres of a rocky wilderness weather - sculptured in fantastic shapes has been added by presidential proclamation to Chiricahua National Monument in Arizona.

Spires, pinnacle, balanced rocks, the figures of beasts, birds and men have been carved into the volcanic rock which hardened millions of years ago. The Apaches regarded the region as sacred as the haunt of departed spirits.

"ALGIERS"

A Photo-serial in six chapters based on the WALTER WANGER screenplay starring CHARLES BOYER and released thru UNITED ARTISTS

CHAPTER 6

Ines meanwhile has followed Pepe out of the Casbah. Realizing that Pepe loves another woman and has cast her aside, she rushes to Gaby's hotel. The place is surrounded by Inspector Slimane and a police force. They have counted on Pepe's arrival, never dreaming that he would go straight to the liner leaving for France. Inadvertently Ines informs the police that they have miscalculated—that Pepe has gone to the boat. Slimane, who has always admired Pepe though he has been hunting him, is enraged at the girl's betrayal and upbraids her, telling her that because of her jealousy she has killed him rather than let him go free. Slimane looks at his watch—a few minutes more and Pepe would have escaped forever. Now, there is just time for the police to capture him on the boat. The officers seize Pepe and take him off the boat before he has a chance to find Gaby. As the boat starts to leave the dock, Pepe appeals to Slimane to give him enough time to wave a last goodbye to Gaby. Slimane agrees not to handcuff his prisoner. Gaby, her face agonized and sorrowful, goes on deck for her last look at Algiers.

Pepe sees her at last, but his shouts of farewell to her are swallowed up by the whistle of the ocean liner. Gaby covers her ears to shut out the sounds. Pepe goes to face his captors and Ines contritely reveals that she unwittingly set the officers on his trail. He forgives her, telling her that she has done what her heart dictated, and then gives himself up to the fate that awaits him.

Surgeon-General Tells Why Gov't. Should Sponsor Health Program

By DR. THOMAS PARRAN
Surgeon-General of the United States.

WASHINGTON.—There are two points of view concerning the place of health in our economic scheme in the United States.

It may be urged on the one hand that since poor health is directly associated with low income, poor food, bad housing, that a health program is secondary and that it is necessary first to effect sweeping economic reforms which will automatically solve these problems by raising the standard of living.

As against this view, the Technical Committee on Medical Care proposes health as the first and most appropriate object for national action.

The obvious reason for that decision is that we know how to proceed in the fight for health. Medicine has perfected its techniques. Public health administration has worked out in detail the means of applying them in many American states and communities. The political scientist and the economist have not similarly perfected their methods.

We cannot let men and women die, children grow up to weakness and disability while we are waiting for a Utopia of economic reform to be ushered in.

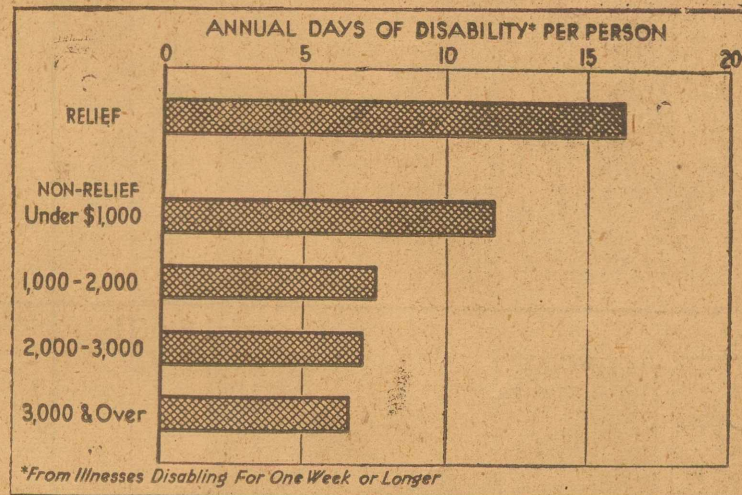

Recently a conference met in Washington to consider the first national plan for health. Drawn by experts who based their recommendations on a four-year study of needs, the plan was laid before the president in February. It was he who suggested the conference which brought together physicians, public health officials, industrial, agricultural, labor, and consumer leaders to consider the findings and express their opinions on the proposals which were made.

Common, ordinary folks are beginning to get the idea that we know how to do a good deal more than is being done to keep them well and to cure them when they are sick. The findings of the Technical Committee on Medical Care, which drafted the proposals, verified that popular impression. It found maternal care to be inadequate, that our efforts to conserve child health fall far short of what needs to be done, that hospital facilities are insufficient, and that a great gap exists between what we know and what we do for the health of the people.

The committee recommended a 10-year program of health and medical care which will call ultimately for an expenditure of $850,000,000 a year by federal, state, and local governments. That program involved:

1. The establishment of adequate and competent public health organizations in every community under local auspices, with state supervision and federal financial and technical aid.
2. The expansion of hospital facilities to make urban hospitals more adequate and to provide health and diagnostic centers in areas now inaccessible to hospitals.
3. New and intensive efforts to save the lives of mothers and babies.
4. A program of grants-in-aid to the states to provide medical

Every year 70,000,000 sick persons lose more than 1,000,000,000 days from work in the U. S. Medical bills, plus loss of work, cost the nation $10,000,000,000 per year. The chart above illustrates one contention of those who sponsor a national health program, namely: that by far the greatest amount of illness occurs among low-income families who are least able to pay for medical care.

care for the needy: (a) those for whom state and federal governments have accepted responsibility under the Social Security Act and, (b) those who, although able to provide their own subsistence from their own resources, are not able to procure adequate medical care when serious illness strikes.

GREATEST AID FOR GREATEST NEED.

Development under all proposals would follow the pattern of action already so successfully demonstrated under the Social Security Act. It would involve grants-in-aid to the states, a progressive development over a 10-year period, and the giving of the greatest aid where the greatest need exists.

Eight hundred and fifty million dollars is a large sum of money. The problem is large. The human resources we seek to conserve are as valuable to the nation as all of its material resources.

Every year 70,000,000 sick persons lose more than 1,000,000,000 days from work in the United States. Illness and premature death cost the United States approximately $10,000,000,000 a year.

That estimate includes only those factors which can be expressed by dollar values. The definitely possible achievement under an adequate public health program would run far in excess of $1,000,000,000 a year. One hundred per cent would seem a very adequate return on such an investment if we view the matter as cold economics and omit all human considerations.

FEDERAL RESPONSIBILITY.

The federal government has, moreover, assumed responsibility under the Social Security Act for disability and dependency. As a matter of good business it cannot afford to permit unnecessary disability and dependency to threaten the stability of its undertaking.

No radical change in medical practice is contemplated. On the contrary, the national health program proposes to provide for every community in the country and all groups of the population the measures for health protection and a medical service which now is had only in some communities or for the more privileged groups of the population.

Such a proposal in no way justifies the application of that well-worn epithet, "socialized medicine." It in no way implies a central control from Washington or an interference by non-professionals in the relation between the physician and his patient. Programs of medical care can be operated only by physicians. Hospitals, whether one finds them under private endowment, or public taxes, are always run by physicians. The relation between the physician and the patient can be as direct in the public hospital as in the private.

These proposals would help the doctor to give better medical care. They would bring the medical profession into a direct relation with many who are not now their patients but who ought to be.

Those of us who are concerned with the progress of medical science usually think that the great events of medicine occur only in the research laboratory or the operating room. We have witnessed here in Washington another kind of progress in medicine—an effort to put medical science to work. The National Health Conference may well be the greatest event in medical science which has happened in our time.

Baptists to Vote On New Parsonage

Deacons of the First Baptist church, at a meeting last night, voted to propose to the church membership Wednesday evening, at a business meeting, the raising of the present parsonage, at Main and Ohio streets, and the building there of a six-room modern home, of brick veneer construction.

All possible materials from the present home would be used in the new one, it was planned.

At a business session last Sunday morning, the church voted down a proposal for repairing and repainting the present structure, referring the matter back to the board of deacons for a new plan to be voted on Wednesday evening at the prayer meeting hour. All members were asked to attend.

Soil Utilization Contests Feature Conservation Week

ABILENE, Aug. 9. — The West Texas chamber of commerce soil and water utilization contest, launched last June 15, is one of the features of Texas soil and water conservation week, August 7-13. The week was set aside for statewide observance in a proclamation by Governor Allred.

With its soil and water contest, sponsored to stimulate and promote more and better conservation work and already entered by 65 West Texas counties, the WTCC is considered one of the leading agencies in the state for advancing soil and water conservation work. For several years the regional organization has been promoting conservation and advocating passage of state conservation legislation.

"Records show that for ten years West Texas has led the Southwest in conservation activities," says Clifford B. Jones, Spur, chairman of the WTCC agricultural board. "The fine interest shown by West Texans in the soil and water utilization contest sponsored by our organization is most gratifying. Through the entrance of some sixty-five counties, fifty million acres of West Texas land already are destined to receive scientific treatment through a contest which was

Nazi-Czechoslovak Tension Increased By German's Death

BERLIN, Aug. 9. (P). — New German-Czechoslovak tension was indicated today by attacks from the controlled Nazi press. The attacks grew out of the slaying of a 28-year-old Sudeten German, Wenzel Baerle.

The present conditions in Czechoslovakia have reached the limit of what is bearable, one paper said.

Adolf Hitler's paper Voelkischer Beobachter called Czechoslovakia a "lawless country where people are attacked and even killed daily."

calculated to simulate all modern standard conservation practices for both farm and ranch lands. We are glad that Texas has become conscious of the dire necessity of perpetuating our soil and water resources, and the West Texas chamber of commerce is happy to participate in the Texas soil and water conservation week."
