Israel declares cease-fire with Syria, not guerrillas

By The Associated Press

Israel and Syria declared a cease-fire Friday between their forces in the six-day-old Lebanon war, but heavy fighting raged on at the southern approaches to bloody Beirut between the Israelis and Palestinian guerrillas.

Israel's defense chief said his country has "no cease-fire with the terrorists." A guerrilla leader declared his fighters "are not concerned by the cease-fire in any way."

The Israeli-Syrian standdown took effect at noon, just minutes after Israeli jets devastated Palestinian guerrilla headquarters in furious air and sea bombardments of the Lebanese capital. At least 120 people were reported killed in those attacks.

Within three hours of the cease-fire, Palestinian artillery crews and Israeli tanks were again trading shellfire near Beirut's airport and southern beaches, where Israeli units apparently had gained control of the village of Khalde.

Israeli warships cruising offshore joined in the shelling, which continued unabated until nightfall. Israeli aircraft reappeared overhead to bomb and strafe, and Palestinian anti-aircraft batteries opened fire on the jets, lighting up the nighttime sky, Beirut reports said.

A Lebanese report said Syrian gunners also joined in the artillery exchanges with the Israelis. But this could not be confirmed, and the Israeli military command said the Syrians appeared to be honoring the truce.

Beirut reports indicated the Israeli-Syrian cease-fire, which apparently was arranged with U.S. help, was holding elsewhere in Lebanon. In the hours leading up to the truce, the Israelis reported shooting down 18 more Syrian jets.

The invasion was launched with the stated goal of driving the guerrillas 25 miles back from the Israeli border, to stop their shelling of northern Israel. But in six days the estimated 40,000 Israeli troops lunged 50 miles northward, right to Beirut's outskirts, and collided with the Syrian forces that have been in Lebanon for six years as peacekeepers between the Arab country's warring factions.

The Israeli onslaught covered 1,000 square miles of Lebanese territory, an area containing the bulk of Lebanon's 500,000 Palestinians and their guerrilla bases.

Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon claimed Israel's invasion had achieved its objective — the Palestinian guerrillas "suffered very heavy casualties and their infrastructure was destroyed," he said.

But he said his forces would continue to search out guerrillas in Israeli-held territory. "We have no cease-fire with the terrorists," he said.

The chief Palestine Liberation Organization spokesman denied that the Palestinian command had been eliminated, despite the last-minute Israeli air attack that demolished a six-story apartment building in southern Beirut housing PLO military headquarters.

None of the PLO's top leaders had been killed or wounded, said spokesman Mahmoud Labadi, and Palestinian resistance continued.

In a radio broadcast, Salah Khalaf, the PLO security chief also known as Abu Iyad, said of the cease-fire, "We have not been consulted...so we are not concerned by the cease-fire in any way."

The Palestinians were clearly angered by Syria's cease-fire deal with Israel. "We have to rely on ourselves," said Labadi.

Near the battlefront in south Beirut, camouflage-uniformed Palestinian officer Abu Obeidah, 31, told Associated Press reporter Scheherezade Faramarzi, "We will fight them until victory. Their only strength is their air force." As for the cease-fire, "It is between them and the Syrians, not with us," he said.

Observers on the Syrian-Lebanese border reported Syrian armor rolling out of Lebanon in large units to set up new defensive positions on their side of the frontier.

Syrian President Hafez Assad said in Damascus that he ordered his troops to stop firing with the understanding that Israel would withdraw its troops from Lebanon. But in the United States, Israeli Ambassador Moshe Arens said a pullout from Lebanon is not likely in "a matter of days or weeks."

White House spokesman David Gergen, traveling with President Reagan in Berlin, said the cease-fire was "a significant step but clearly it is not all we sought. We continue to seek a withdrawal."

Glorifying Old Glory

The stars and stripes fly high — and low — to welcome President Ronald Reagan upon his visit Friday to Germany's Charlottenburg Castle. Over 20,000 people showed up as Reagan toured the castle as part of his official visit to West Germany. Reagan also visited the Berlin Wall Friday.

Welcome meant great planning

WASHINGTON (AP) — The elaborate welcome-home ceremony for President Reagan Friday didn't just happen, even if the chief executive exclaimed "I have to tell you this is a very great surprise to us."

The event at Andrews Air Force Base in suburban Maryland was carefully coordinated by the White House, the State Department and the Republican National Committee, which rented dozens of yellow school buses to help transport thousands of government employees to the airport.

Air Force Maj. Mark Rosenker, a spokesman for the base, estimated the turnout at 15,000.

The President, after stepping from Air Force One and his flight from West Germany, drew a roar of laughter from the crowd when he declared "I have to tell you this is a very great surprise for us. And adding to the surprise is that it's still daylight, and it's 43 minutes past midnight" — meaning his watch was still on European time.

A State Department spokeswoman said the entire diplomatic corps, including embassy staffers and their families at the 178 foreign embassies in Washington were issued color-coded invitations.

She said 80 percent of the embassy personnel who got invitations said they would be at the airport.

"We've personally called every embassy and invited every ambassador, every staffer and every family," said Rodney Rawding, a protocol officer.

She said each embassy was providing transportation for its staffers to Andrews Air Force Base, about 18 miles from Washington.

Several busloads of congressmen and their staffs also were making the trip.

Reagan's ceremonial arrival, including a red carpet, long, gold herald trumpets and two military bands was timed to coincide with the start of the television networks' evening news programs.

"It means you wing your broadcast a bit," said Bill Headline, assistant news director at CBS news in Washington.

One Washington lobbyist for a major defense contractor said tickets for the welcome-home hoopla distributed to his office were not exactly being gobbled up.

"The last thing I want to do is go to Andrews at rush hour," said the lobbyist, who asked that his name not be named.

Administration spokesman Anson Franklin said White House employees would be allowed to leave work in mid-afternoon to attend the welcoming rally.

"Most everyone here usually works a 12-hour day," he said. "Maybe some of them are taking it as a late lunch hour."

Republican National Committee spokeswoman Jennifer Hillings said the committee mailed invitations to Republicans living in Washington, Maryland and Virginia and that 30 to 40 buses were hired to ferry guests from the White House and committee headquarters to Andrews.

'Log runners' enjoy birling for life

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

They perpetuate an elemental art first learned by "river pegs" who kept timbers from jamming during long-ago "log runs."

They are logrollers, these men who are involved in a 20th century joust, Robin Hood-Little John style, to see who is truly king of the river.

Four feet sprinting a 9.5 hundred in unison. A 12-foot length of timber sluicing endless revolutions in water. Whoa! Watch that opponent's feet. Keep your balance. He spins, you spin, with short steps. Look out! He's reversed directions! On your heels, you modern-day lumberjack! Backpeddle like a shortstop chasing a Texas leaguer. Watch him over your shoulder! Too fast! Make that jump, turn, sprint with your back to the plate like Willie Mays outrunning that Vic Wertz 400-footer in the '54 Series.

Stop. Jump on the end, dislodge your opponent. Bob, you 400 pounds of wood. Thrash up and down like a see-saw in convulsions. What's wrong with that guy? Is he glued to that wood, the way his feet hug it like a cowboy riding a frenzied bucking bronc? What's it gonna take to give him a free bath?

KICK WATER in his face! That's it — blind the sucker! I gotcha now! It's all over for you, you — .

Whoa! Flail your own arms! Feel those legs weaken, that lower back ache! Watch that browned timber whirl like the vortex of a tornado! Look out! It's getting away! The feet, they can't keep up! The water's at a 45-degree angle! Too late! Cry out! Here it comes!

Ker-splash!

For this modern-day lumberjack, this logrolling competition is over — for now. But like the perennial cry of the 1950s Dodgers, "wait'll next year."

"Next year" for Jim Fischer, 31, came in 1972, when he won the World Logrolling Championship, while perhaps this will be the year for 1980 third-place finisher Jerry Neuman, 28.

Unlike their home's namesake — Stillwater, Minn., — these two throwbacks to an earlier era left the water anything but serene Thursday afternoon in demonstrating their unique sport in the most unlikely of places — the riverless, treeless expanses of the Permian Basin.

"BASICALLY, THE sport originated on log runs down the rivers, starting in the east and spreading west," explained Fischer, who sports a full beard the color of a wood-soaked timber. "A couple of river pegs got together to see who could stay on a log the longest, and it grew into a contest. Back in the late 1800s it was the main recreation in logging camps."

Neuman's flaming red hair and beard fit the part of an oldtime woodsman to a T, and though neither of these men ever have logged, they are among the best logrollers the world ever has seen.

Fischer's dad proved the impetus for launching each of them into the sport

Rapist's modus operandi hard to figure

By RICHARD ORR

A man arrested on burglary charges after allegedly breaking into a Midland woman's northside apartment Tuesday night has been charged with rape in an unrelated case and also faces charges in an Odessa rape case.

Justice of the Peace Robert Pine set $25,000 bond Friday on Stephen Ray Ferguson, 29, of 3310 Bedford Ave. He is charged with the May 9 rape of a Midland woman. In addition, he is suspected in the May 31 rape of an Odessa woman, who police said picked him out of a lineup earlier this week.

A former Dallas resident, Ferguson was paroled from prison March 31 after serving 11 months of a five-year sentence for burglary in Dallas County, according to local parole officials.

Ferguson was arrested Tuesday night after police found him being held by neighbors who came to the assistance of the northside woman, who told officers she was cleaning a bedroom in her apartment about 10:15 p.m. when she stepped into the hallway and saw a man standing in the living room.

Police said he ran out the back door and was attempting to scale a fence when the pursuing woman grabbed him around the waist and held him until neighbors came to her aid. Police believe he did not know the woman was home and had entered the apartment to case it for a potential rape later.

Sgt. Jerry Compton, who heads up the narcotics division of the Midland Police Department, was assigned to the May 9 rape case because he had taken an FBI course on interpersonal violence and had specialized in sex offenses prior to transferring to the narcotics detail.

The course taught him how to profile sex offenders. Based on information gained from the Midland and Odessa rape victims, and working with the Odessa Police Department, Compton put together such a profile and called Ray Hazelwood, a behavorial science instructor at the FBI Academy in Quantico, Va.

Compton called Hazelwood Monday, the day before Ferguson's arrest on the burglary charge. Hazelwood not only confirmed Compton's analysis of

Clements applauds Texas anti-crime tactics

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

ODESSA — "Your efforts are producing results," Gov. Bill Clements told a large, enthusiastic audience during a Friday noon address at the annual Texas Police Association conference here.

"In 1981, for the first time in five years, we actually reduced the crime rate in Texas by 1.5 percent, and I think this is an outstanding accomplishment. Furthermore, the volume of crime increased only 2.5 percent. That's our lowest percentage increase since 1977.

"As fast as the state is growing, an increase in the number of crimes is inevitable, but at the same time you have succeeded in keeping the crime growth less than our population growth."

Clements went on to say that the tough anti-crime package he pushed through the legislature last year — especially the wiretap bill dealing with drug cases — is effective and has already resulted in the arrest of 36 defendants and the seizure of five pounds of cocaine and 60,000 pounds of marijuana worth more than $35 million.

During a news conference following his speech, Clements said he was only vaguely aware that the federal Drug Enforcement Agency plans to close its Midland office — a move local law enforcement officers oppose because of the financial resources and sophisticated equipment provided by the agency.

While the DEA reportedly plans to use the personnel from its Midland office to beef up other offices in the state, sources say the effect will greatly weaken drug enforcement in the Midland area, which narcotics officers contend is the cocaine capital of West Texas.

Clements, who faces Democrat Attorney General Mark White in the gubernatorial race, indicated he would confer with officials and see what the result of closing the Midland office would be.

In his speech, Clements ticked off a list of laws passed by the legislature during his four-year tenure as the state's first Republican governor since Reconstruction.

They include stiffer penalties for drug traffickers, the outlawing of head shops, the use of oral confessions in court, increased penalties for aggravated rape and crimes against children and the establishment of halfway

Humidity, thunderstorms forecast

With a touch of thunder, Midland may be graced with rainfall and bogged in sultry humidity today.

But the off-chance of Midland getting rain via thunderstorms is 20 percent today, said the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Today's high is to be in the upper 80s. Low tonight is to be in the mid-60s, and Sunday's high is to be in the upper 80s. Winds are to southerly and southeasterly at 10 to 15 mph today.

Late Friday afternoon, rainfall sprinkled from Lamesa to Stanton, but fell heavily in Big Spring. Lightning struck a battery of two oil tanks near Elbow southwest of Big Spring and set off fire and smoke. Howard County firemen responded to the fire.

The high temperature Friday was 95 degrees, which was somewhat below the record high of 104 degrees for the date in 1959. The overnight low was 68 degrees; the record low for date is 55 degrees in 1979.

Duo rolls around on logs for fun of it in the Minnesota thousand-lakes area. Having learned the event from an actual lumberjack, the elder Fischer had his son birling at age 7. Neuman, meanwhile, lived across the street and by age 7 had first trod upon this primitive craft under the watchful eye of the older man.

The requisites for success in this little-known event, say the two men, differ from any other sport. While Fischer noted that gymnastics might aid in balance and roadwork builds leg strength and endurance, "what it really takes is to go out on that log and practice," said Neuman.

And not just for hours or days, but years.

RULES OF competition are simple. Two men climb aboard a 15-inch-diameter, 12-foot northwest cedar, grooved at the midway point. A participant can do anything possible to dislodge his adversary — spin the log, bob it, stop it, kick water in his face — short of crossing the center line or knocking him off. A match consists of best of three falls. And if no one makes a visit to the home of Davy Jones' locker within two minutes, the men then joust successively on a 14-inch log with a four-minute time limit, a 13-inch log with a 6-minute limit, and, ultimately, a 12-inch log until one or the other walks the plank to the end.

And that usually doesn't take long on a 12-incher, which barely supports the weight of two men, said Neuman.

Fischer and Neuman consider themselves fortunate to be full-time, professional logrollers. When they are not competing in tournaments, which are held weekly during the summer, they are barnstorming across the nation.

To keep in shape in the off-season for the rigors of their vocation, they practice on a dry log attached to bearings, while Fischer also finds the pursuit of a racquetball to be a stamina-builder and Neuman practices karate to further his agility.

DURING THEIR shows at Water Wonderland, which will continue today and Sunday at noon, 2:30 p.m., 4 p.m. and 6 p.m., the men are offering members of the audience $10 just to remain on the floating log 10 seconds.

Offer an "easy" buck a second and takers are innumerable, especially when Fischer agrees to support the log while feet find wood and equilibrium is attained. Upon his release, however, novices quickly discover a degree of difficulty seldom encountered in other sports.

During Thursday's demonstration, a dozen persons sought that coveted tenspot. None lasted more than a couple of seconds. And then, as if to add insult to injury, the logrollers displayed the birling wizardry of their terrier, Gypsy, whose fleet four feet scampered unerringly about the spinning timber.

It was obvious to see why, during 10 years of barnstorming, Fischer has given away only $40.

"You have to have somebody help you, and spend a heckuva long time learning it," explained Neuman. "It's a completely different kind of balance from any other sport. You take short steps, watch your opponent's feet and not let it spin too fast for you."

BECAUSE EXCESSIVE weight on any craft results in over-drafting, the optimum size for a champion logroller seems to be 5-8 or 5-9 and 150 or 160 pounds, dimensions of which fit both Neuman and Fischer, who says during his championship year he weighed only 140 pounds. A low center of gravity and an ability to arch the back are essential as well, they noted.

ABC's Wide World of Sports covers the world logrolling championship annually, and during this year's competition both Fischer and Neuman have hopes of rolling across the nation's television screens in triumph. But like boxing in which "styles make fights," styles make logrolling contests as'well. And that fact may stand Neuman in good stead in this year's competition, says Fischer.

"A person naturally either looks over one shoulder or the other on a log," explained Fisher, who is a "left-shouldered roller" like most professionals. "Jerry looks over his right shoulder, which makes it really tough on anybody else."

Left, right. Spin, bob. Stop, turn. And hang on for dear life. Don't taste that water. Save it for the other guy.

And hope he obliges.

Pontiff prays for peace, plans meeting with government

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Pope John Paul II, on an unprecedented personal peace mission, met with Argentina's ruling military junta Friday and prayed for an end to the bloody Falkland Islands war with Britain.

Tremendous crowds — certainly numbering in the millions — turned out on a blustery, rain-driven autumn day to see and cheer the pontiff and encourage his prayers to end the fighting. Many waved yellow-and-white Vatican flags and blue-and-white Argentine banners.

JOHN PAUL WENT TO Argentina's holiest shrine, the basilica of Lujan 40 miles northest of Buenos Aires, for an afternoon Mass. His return trip was marred by tragedy when a man threw himself in front of the papal train, the privately owned DYN news agency reported. It said the train was held up for five minutes because of the death, but it was not known if the pope was told of the suicide.

The pope went from the train station by car to the Vatican Embassy, where thousands of people jammed the streets, hoping he would address them from the balcony. He appeared briefly to the cheers of the throng, smiled and blessed them and then retired for the night. He is to address Latin American cardinas and bishops at the embassy Saturday morning.

There were no signs of resentment over the pope's recent visit to Britain — a long-planned ecumenical trip he almost canceled lest it appear he favored the British side in the war. Instead he hastily arranged the "counter-balancing" visit to Argentina.

"I have come to pray for peace — for a dignified and just solution to the armed conflict," the pope told Argentine priests and nuns in the Metropolitan Cathedral.

Then he crossed historic Plaza de Mayo, the square where Argentina's most important political events have been announced, and met the military triumvirate that currently runs the nation.

Large security forces guarded the pope, who survived two assassination attempts in the past 13 months. Deployed throughout his route were some 30,000 security people — nearly four times the estimated 7,000-7,500 troops holding the captured Falklnds capital of Stanley.

In the gold-chandeliered White Room of Government House, president and army commander Gen. Leopoldo F. Galtieri, air force commander Gen. Basilio Lami Dozo and navy commander Adm. Jorge Isaac Anaya, knelt and kissed the pope's ring for a blessing.

GALTIERI HAD MADE A similar gesture at the airport when the pope arrived.

Noticeably tired after a 15-hour flight from Rome and a 20-mile motorcade to the cathedral, John Paul appeared surprised when the Argentine leaders, all Roman Catholics, fell to their knees instead of reaching out to shake his hand. But the pope and the president quickly sat in gilt-trimmed chairs and started chatting informally.

The pope, who speaks Spanish, fingered the gold crucifix draped over his simple white tunic, and Galtieri, hatless and dressed in a military uniform without medals, broke into a wide smile.

The pontiff then met privately with the junta for half an hour. There was no official word on what was discussed, but a political adviser to the junta said John Paul expressed his belief that a negotiated solution to the Falklands conflict could be reached.

The source, who asked not to be identified, said the pope told the junta it was "their moral obligation to do everything possible to avert further bloodshed."

In the cathedral, John Paul said "I have come to pray for all those who have lost life, for the victims on both sides and for the families who are suffering, just as I did in Great Britain."

In an airport arrival statement, John Paul termed his visit here "pastoral and ecclesiastical" and "above all political intention."

"It is simply a meeting of the father of the faith with his children who are suffering," he said.

During his May 28-June 2 British visit, the pope met with Queen Elizabeth II, her country's head of state and temporal leader of the Anglican church. But he gave up his plans to meet with Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher to avoid any appearance of taking sides with the predominantly Protestant nation over largely Roman Catholic Argentina.

houses to help parolees merge with society.

"The criminals don't like what we've done with these new laws," he said; "but it's past time for us to restore full protection of the laws to all our law-abiding citizens.

"None of our legislative accomplishments would have been possible without the strong support of law enforcement agencies, organizations and officers across the state. You made our legislative success possible. You supported our package fully. And you went to Austin and testified on behalf of these anti-crime bills."

Turning to the issue of the state's overcrowded prisons, Clements said he called a special session of the legislature and came away with a $50 million increased appropriation for prison construction. "Until more facilities are completed," he added, "we have no alternative but to use tents. And if tents are good enough for our servicemen, they are good enough for those prisoners."

To loud applause, Clements also said he opposes the unionization of police officers. "I thank the Texas Police Association for backing me up on this and for going to Austin to make it clear that the majority of police officers in this state make the fight against crime their top priority, not labor issues."

Among those in the audience were Midland Chief of Police Wayne Gideon and Odessa Police Chief Alan Stewart.

Asked during the news conference if he would favor the state supplementing police pay like it does teacher salaries, Clements indicated Texas likely could afford such a move.

But he fell short of actually endorsing it, saying instead that the possibility should be suggested to Department of Public Safety Director Col. Jim Adams, who heads up Clements' Task Force on Crime.

$7.3 million UTPB budget approved

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — University of Texas Regents Friday approved a budget exceeding $7.3 million for the University of Texas of the Permian Basin for the 1982-83 school year beginning Sept. 1.

At a meeting in Port Aransas, the regents approved a budget of $7,328,920 for UTPB.

In addition, the regents approved $4,984,699 for expenses of revenue-bearing property and $2,988,000 for conservation and land use projects, including vineyard development, on university lands in West Texas.

UTPB's budget includes $6,695,733 in educational and general funds, $631,685 in auxiliary enterprise funds, and $1,500 in gifts, grants, designated and other funds.

Staff benefits will increase 18.3 percent, from $154,168 to $182,328.

In other action, the regents announced that a $50,000 bequest from the estate of the late Florence Thelma Hall, Big Spring, will be used to establish the Florence Thelma Hall Visiting Centennial Professorship in Law at the UT Law School.

Teachers say more pay, less Clements

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Teachers would like to see more money in their pay envelopes but less of Gov. Bill Clements, according to a recent survey.

The Texas Federation of Teachers mailed a questionnaire to 30,000 teachers in January, and 3,112 — just over 10 percent — responded.

Of the 30,000 teachers, half are members of the federation, which is the statewide AFL-CIO affiliated union for Texas teachers.

Odessa man turns self in ODESSA, Texas (AP) — A man sought in connection with the car bombing death of a former business associate has surrendered to police, authorities said Friday.

John Skelton, named in a capital murder warrant issued May 11, quickly posted $150,000 bond and was freed from jail Thursday evening, said detective Jerry Smith.

The 53-year-old Odessa man had been sought in connection with the April 24 death of Joe Neal, whose pickup truck exploded as he turned the ignition key.

Neal's truck was parked in a shopping center parking lot about 80 feet away from his house when it exploded shortly before 7:30 a.m.

The 46-year-old man was preparing to take his daughter to meet a bus for a choir trip to New Mexico when the truck blew up. The 14-year-old girl had returned to the house to retrieve a forgotten item.

Figuring reasons behind rape not always easy for police

the attacker, but added that the man probably had been recently released from prison. That piece of information was derived from the fact the rapist had a penchant for anal intercourse and also forced his victims to open a door or window as an escape route, never touching anything in their apartments himself.

"That's not common with rapists unless they've got a record or have been handled by the police before," said Compton.

Although the rapist wore pantyhose over his head during both attacks, the Odessa victim said she had gotten a look at his face just prior to the rape. The man apparently had been casing her apartment complex on foot and the two looked at each other as she emerged from her car and entered the building.

A few minutes later, a man matching the height and build of the same man entered her apartment and raped her.

Compton was awaiting a composite drawing of the attacker when he learned of the northside Midland burglary Tuesday night. It fit the rapist's method of entering his victims' unlocked apartments beforehand to determine if a man also lived there, and a lineup was ordered. When the Odessa victim identified Ferguson as her attacker, he confessed to the rapes, according to Compton.

Ferguson also confessed to another recent Midland rape, but charges will not be brought in that case. Said Compton: "The woman has suffered enough already and it won't get him any more time."

Rapists typically fall into two broad categories, according to Compton: Those who want to punish women for real or imagined wrongs, and those with low self-esteem who derive a sense of power by dominating women. The categories were drawn from studying the backgrounds of rapists after being caught.

"Rape is a sex act," said Compton, "but it's not for sexual gratification."

And since the feeling of domination doesn't last long, rapists repeat the act and often escalate the violence. In the rape case that won't go to trial, Compton said the woman finally submitted in the face of her attacker's threats, then "fought like a tiger" and drove the man away when he began choking her after the rape was over.

Japan and U.S. join to form trade group

By the Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON — Recent leaps in solid state technology in both the United States and Japan, combined with Japanese trade policy changes, appear to be leading these two industrial nations to closer cooperation in the field of high technology trade and development.

Among the Japanese trade initiatives announced last month was the proposal for a joint U.S.-Japanese working group in which, according to U.S. Trade Representative William Brock, the U.S. will "seek to develop . . . a set of rules of the game . . . that we believe ought to be predicated upon the principle of equivalent access to each other's markets and each other's technologies."

Brock spoke before an audience of Japanese and U.S. government and industry representatives at a seminar on high technology management sponsored by the Electronics Industry of Japan.

In the wake of rising trade competition and resulting Congressional protectionist sentiment, the seminar addressed the problems of technology development and interdependence. "Nations are interdependent in technology as they are in trade," Brock said.

The field of semiconductor trade exemplifies this statement.

While U.S. semiconductor manufacturers have had operations overseas for up to two decades now, it is only in the past few years that the manufacturers have included Japan on their lists of foreign bases. Texas Instruments, Intel, Fairchild Camera and Instrument, Signetics, and Motorola have all set up Japan operations ranging variously from manufacturing to sales, and several more companies are expected to follow.

Peacekeeping forces needed in hot spots?

By The Hearst Feature Service

PARIS — The wars in Lebanon and the Falkland Islands are thousands of miles apart but have one thing in common. Both may require the presence of American soldiers to re-establish anything resembling a lasting peace.

The possibility of America joining a peacekeeping force in the Falklands once Britain has completed its reconquest already has been mooted, admittedly without great enthusiasm, in Washington. But some diplomats consider that the presence of U.S. forces may be the only means of solving long-term problems posed by the Anglo-Argentinian crisis.

The intense Middle East fighting also has raised the prospect that a solution to Arab-Israeli confrontation in Lebanon will necessitate sending a substantial U.S. contingent there.

Experienced European politicians have been struck by two aspects of the latest Middle East conflict.

— The existence of a small, militarily and politically impotent United Nations force in Lebanon proved utterly incapable of preventing war or limiting it once it had started.

— The Russians, whatever their reasons may be, showed unprecedented reliance on the Americans to bring the crisis under control, preventing it from spilling over into an open-ended Syrian-Israeli War.

Former French Prime Minister Maurice Couve de Murville said that "future hope of stability in the region may now depend on American willingness to impose peace."

He added, "This can be done only if a genuinely effective, neutral military force can be disposed on the ground. In the past, this seemed to be out of the question because the establishment of a large American force would have immediately entailed Soviet counteraction. But there is reason to believe the Russians may now be ready to accept an American presence in exchange for guarantees for their Syrian ally."

According to former British Foreign Minister David Owen, "if there is to be a new peacekeeping force installed somewhere in the Lebanon, one may call it what one likes, but it will have to be largely American in composition and powerful enough to mean a difference in military terms."

He said that a UN or multinational peacekeeping operation could be effective only when the participating nations could influencethe nations that they were policing.

Library's climate controlled

WASHINGTON (AP) — Air-conditioning equipment in the Library of Congress here does more than provide a comfortable atmosphere for its many visitors throughout the year — it also contributes to the survival of millions of books in the historic repository up the hill from the Capitol building.

The chemical reaction to the alum in most paper made since 1850 can make the paper brittle, reducing it almost to dust, and the rate of decomposition doubles with each 10-degree increase in temperature. So humidity and temperature control are vital to the library's contents.

Prime rate to fall only two percent

Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration, which earlier this year forecast a four percent drop in the prime interest rate by the end of the year, now says a two point decline to around 14 percent is more likely.

Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan told reporters Thursday the persistently high interest rates now put a four percent reduction out of reach, even if Congress were to approve the fiscal 1983 budget favored by the White House.

The prevailing prime interest rate, which major banks charge their preferred commercial customers, is 16.5 percent.

Regan said that despite the scheduled July 1 cut in personal income taxes, which will put more spending money into consumers' hands, substantial economic recovery will not be achieved until interest rates drop well below 14 percent.

Regan also said the latest military conflict in the Middle East could delay recovery in the United States if oil-producing Arab nations cut supplies to the West or raise prices in a punitive manner.

"Retaliation would be very alarming; it would have a very serious effect," he said.

Regan said the Republican budget proposal of Rep. Delbert L. Latta of Ohio, which would cut the federal deficit by $300 billion over three years, "would encourage business, (financial) markets and loaners of money that we're capable of governance here in Washington."

The House of Representatives was scheduled to vote on the Latta and other proposals earlier this week.

While an upsurge in consumer spending would mark the start of the recovery, increases in housing sales would be among the last beneficial effects because high interests rates will not drop as fast as consumer confidence will rise, Regan said.

Although the administration earlier had forecast prime rates of around 12 percent by the end of the year, Regan said 14 percent now is a more likely level.

Chemical defects may cause suicide

DETROIT (AP) — A chemical deficiency in the brain may cause suicidal tendencies in some people, according to a scientist who hopes the finding may help doctors detect and help potential suicide victims.

Dr. Michael Stanley, an associate professor of psychiatry and pharmacology at Wayne State University, said earlier this week that his study of suicide victims found deficiencies in the way their brains used serotonin — a neurotransmitter that maintains chemical contact between brain and nerve cells.

The finding could lead to a screening test to detect potential suicide victims and a chemical treatment to correct the defect, Stanley said.

Stanley and other researchers compared brain samples from nine suicide victims and nine people who died of other causes, such as homicides, heart attacks and auto accidents.

"Any time we can find some biochemical abnormality that seems to be related to mental illness, we're very happy," he said.

The scientists also found that cortexes of suicide victims who had been receiving imipramine — an antidepressant — contained 44 percent fewer "binding sites" where the drug could accumulate and have a beneficial effect.

His research also found similar abnormalities and suicidal tendencies among victims of other mental disorders and abnormal behavior besides depression. Low serotonin activity, the research suggests, seems just as common in highly aggressive and impulsive people as in depressed people.

"This is very important," said Stanley, noting "the biochemical threat" that may determine suicidal tendencies may exist whether a person suffers from depression, personality disorder, schizophrenia or alcoholism.

"We found the (chemical) levels were decreased even though not all of (the subjects studied) were depressed. And this made us think that maybe this was something that cut across all diagnoses — that maybe you didn't have to be depressed to commit suicide," Stanley said.

"If we could chemically enhance this (serotonin level) to perhaps restore a balance by using some form of drug therapy, we might be able to treat or have a lower incidence of suicide in patients," said Stanley, who presented his findings last month at the American Psychiatric Association meeting in Toronto.

He said such treatment might also be used for depression.

Stanley, who heads Wayne State's division of pharmacology at the school's Lafayette clinic, will publish his findings next week in Science magazine, the journal of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Naturalist for Zion National Park delights in interpreting beauty

By KEVIN McCULLEN

ZION NATIONAL PARK, Utah (AP) — Victor Jackson greets visitors to this spectacular national park with a friendly word or pamphlets saying, "Der Zion Nationalpark" or "Parc national de Sion."

He hands maps written in German or French to some of the international visitors who annually make up about 20 percent of the total visitors to this park in Utah's southwest corner.

He also oversees a language interpretation program that one of his supervisors considers the best in the National Park Service's six-state Rocky Mountain region.

"The international visitors come here and there's people all around them, but they have an empty feeling, they don't know who to turn to," said Jackson, a naturalist and language interpreter for the park service.

"Because of my background, I have empathy for these people. I know what it's like to be alone in a crowd."

Jackson, 49, was born and reared in Vietnam, where his parents spent 36 years as evangelical missionaries.

He recalls being raised by a Vietnamese nanny, attending a school when he was 6 to learn English, of shuttling between French- or English-speaking schools and of spending six months in a concentration camp during the Japanese occupation of Vietnam in World War II.

The ebullient Jackson also recounts being repatriated to the United States, graduating from high school in Asheville, N.C., and returning to Vietnam briefly after the war to translate Vietnamese for missionaries.

Jackson has bounced from Tupelo, Miss., to Grand Teton, Wyo., since joining the park service in 1958. At each location he sought to accommodate growing numbers of international tourists, but was unable to start a translation program until arriving at Zion in 1973.

"The program here has been a dream of mine," Jackson said. "When I went to Teton, they had many French visitors but no way to help them. I felt these people were coming here, that we couldn't ignore them.

"I felt we needed a book for these people. I wanted to write one there, but they didn't have the capital to publish a book."

Jackson in 1976 began writing and shooting photographs on his own time for a book describing the mesmerizing sandstone cliffs and lush canyons of Zion, where an estimated 250,000 of the park's 1.40 million visitors last year were from abroad.

His book, "Discover Zion," contains passages written in English, German, French and Japanese. It was published in 1978 by Zion Natural History Corp., a private non-profit group which sells maps and books to visitors and helps pay for park projects.

Last year, through the corporation, park information pamphlets were printed in German and French. Each is color-coded to match a country's flag.

Jackson's efforts haven't gone unnoticed by his superiors.

"I think his program is the best in the Rocky Mountain region," said Wescott Wolfe, executive assistant to the service's Rocky Mountain regional director.

"He's a very innovative and enthusiastic naturalist," said Harry Grafe, Zion superintendent. "Vic's the type of guy who, if there's a need, he meets it."

Detroit police officers hold two brothers, Gerald and Robert Harrington, who are being held as suspects in a Friday shooting spree in a Detroit office building which left one woman dead. Which brother is which is unknown.

Pennsylvania abortion law changes

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Gov. Dick Thornburgh on Friday signed into law a measure requiring doctors to offer female patients information about fetus development at least a day before the patients undergo abortions.

The law also says a minor hoping to have an abortion must first get consent from at least one parent.

Opponents of the law threatened to take the issue to court.

"Our clients are willing to proceed in a lawsuit, but we won't file immediately," said Kitty Kolbert of the Women's Law Project in Philadelphia. "We're going to wait and see how the commonwealth implements it."

The new law, which takes effect in six months, says women planning to have abortions cannot have the procedure until 24 hours after they are counseled by a doctor.

Cardinal John Krol, archbishop of Philadelphia, called the new law "one of the best pieces of pro-life legislation in the country."

"I'm absolutely thrilled," said Rep. Stephen Freind, R-Delaware, who led the two-year fight to enact the legislation. "I'm a little numb. It's hard to believe. I think it's the most significant victory in the history of the Pennsylvania pro-life movement."

The Pennsylvania Medical Society, which opposed the bill, said Thornburgh's action will result in "new legal liabilities...beyond the risks already inherent in the practice of medicine."

PMS spokesman Arnold Cushner said the new law could discourage physicians from doing abortions.

The governor signed the bill after vetoing an earlier version in December because of what he said were unconstitutional restrictions. Afterward, the administration worked with the bill's backers to draft a version to overcome the governor's objections.

The new law met the provisions Thornburgh addressed in his veto message, including less severe penalties and in some cases the removal of criminal sanctions.

The governor reiterated his view that he does not approve of abortion except in cases of rape, incest or when a woman's life is endangered by pregnancy.

The Senate on Tuesday sent Thornburgh the bill, which generated hours of bitter debate among lawmakers this week and when the earlier version passed in December.

Detroit shooting spree leaves one dead

DETROIT (AP) — A disgruntled client opened fire with a sawed-off shotgun in his attorney's eighth-floor office Friday after he was refused an insurance check, then set off a firebomb next door. Police said a woman was slain, four people were wounded by gunshots and 34 were injured in the fire.

At least two of those injured fell from window ledges where they and others took refuge to escape the gunman and smoke from the blaze, which burned for about an hour after it was started around noon.

The gunman, Robert Harrington, 35, had gone to the law offices to complain that the firm had inadequately represented him in a dispute over money with an insurance company, said Homicide Inspector Gilbert Hill.

POLICE SPOKESMAN George Anthony said the gunman was taken to Detroit Receiving Hospital in stable condition with unspecified injuries. He said police would seek warrants charging him with murder and probably assault with intent to murder from the district attorney's office on Saturday.

"The brother was only trying to stop him and almost lost his life in the attempt," Hill said. "A private investigator saw him (Gerald) with a shotgun he'd taken from his brother and thought he did the shooting." Hill said the private investigator shot at Gerald Harrington six times and missed.

Police helicopters rescued some people who fled to the roof of the 26-story Buhl Building in downtown Detroit.

Eventually, the gunman was overcome by smoke from the fire and were captured by police.

Eyewitnesses said the gunman opened fire after his lawyer, Edward Bell, refused to give him a $2,500 insurance check that was overdue in the mail. Bell was shot in the side.

Doug Wartell 27, a lawyer whose office is down the hall from Bell's, reported seeing the gunman's clothes on fire.

"I heard one shot and I thought somebody was just goofing around," said Wartell.

"Then I heard screaming, then there was another shot and my door...was filled with buckshot," Wartell said. "I dove under my desk and I heard him come into my office. He was swearing up and down about something but I don't think the dude knew I was in there. Then I heard another shot and I dashed out the door."

AN UNIDENTIFIED worker in the building said there were 15 to 20 gunshots. Police officer Kenneth Ballenger said the 12-gauge shotgun was cut off less than an inch from the trigger.

While the shooting was under way, a firebomb was tossed in a library next to Bell's office, officer Kyron Bradstrom said.

The gunman then took three of the wounded people as hostages and barricaded himself in Bell's offices, said Thomas Hogue, an officer in Detroit Police Technical Services Section.

In all, 34 people — including 16 policemen and two firemen — were treated for injuries suffered in the fire or in falls, said Dr. Ronald Krome, chief of emergency medicine at Detroit Receiving.

"Two of the attorneys (in Bell's office) jumped from the (eighth-floor) ledge," said Larry Benton, 25, Bell's senior law clerk. Benton, who tentatively identified the two as Saunders Dorsey and Lester Hudson, said the two men fell "four or five floors" and landed on a roof extension of the building.

"I heard a thump...like an explosion and then breaking glass...screaming," said John D. Honeymoon, an attorney with eighth-floor offices in a building across the street. "I looked out and saw this man falling."

"That's when I noticed that there was already one man down there."

Hudson, 34, who also was shot in the head, was in critical condition, Krome said.

Krome said said Eve August, 24, of Southfield, Mich., an office secretary, died of five bullet wounds to the chest and right thigh.

TWO OTHER unidentified people were wounded by bullets, Krome said.

Bell said the hour-long shooting spree and fire started after the gunman walked into his office and "asked for a $2,500 insurance check that had not come in the mail."

"I told him he would have to come back, that the money wasn't here, but he said he wasn't coming back," Bell said.

"He reached into his coat and pulled out a gun and started firing."

Robert Harrington had hired Bell's firm to help him collect money from a company that had insured his fire-damaged house, said Benton a few days ago, demanding money because he was dissatisfied with the way the case was handled.

PATCO decertification upheld by court

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal appeals court upheld on Friday the government's decertification of the air traffic controllers union, but it criticized a federal labor panel's procedural handling of the case.

The three judges said the Federal Labor Relations Authority acted correctly last October in stripping the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization of its bargaining powers because of its support for an illegal strike.

The court said the decertification was "supported by substantial evidence" that PATCO engaged in unfair labor practices by calling and participating in the walkout by more than 12,000 controllers last August.

"We also hold that the (labor authority) did not abuse its discretion in denying PATCO a continuance to prepare evidence...or in revoking PATCO's exclusive recognition status," the U.S. Court of Appeals said.

The three-member Federal Labor Relations Authority is an independent agency created by Congress to handle disputes involving federal workers.

PATCO president Gary Eads said while he is disappointed in the ruling he hoped the decertification of PATCO as exclusve bargaining agent for the controllers might improve the chances of some controllers getting back their jobs.

"Beyond any shadow of a doubt and practically speaking the United States government has proven its point. It has defeated a labor union which they felt conducted an illegal strike," Eads told reporters.

But Eads, who took over PATCO last December, said the court defeat "doesn't change our objective" of getting the fired controllers back to work. He indicated the organization may, however, pursue its cause under another name.

Earlier this week Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis reiterated that no rehiring will take place, except in isolated cases where fired controllers prove they had been unable to work because of intimidation or other circumstances.

The controllers walked out despite a law prohibiting a strike by federal workers. President Reagan gave them 48 hours to return and then fired about 11,500 of those who didn't.

Since then, nearly 11,000 controllers have challenged their firing through civil service procedures, with those decisions still pending. Many have found other jobs and some reportedly have gone to foreign countries to work as air traffic controllers.

The union, which has new leaders and still maintains a Washington office although it does not legally represent any controllers, argued before the court that it had not been given adequate time to present its case and that all the circumstances leading up to the strike had not been considered.

Those arguments were rejected by the three judges in their unanimous decision.

The appeals court also examined allegations that several members of the Federal Labor Relations Board, which is an independent government agency, had improper discussions with individuals who had interests in the case during the months prior to a ruling.

Officials hope arrest will cool gang killings

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The arrest of a 21-year-old waiter in the bomb slaying of a top mobster has given police their first big break in a two-year string of gangland killings, authorities said Friday.

Theodore "Ted" DiPretoro was arraigned Thursday on a charge of murdering Philip "Chicken Man" Testa.

"It is rare in the history of organized crime that an assassination has been resolved," said Malcolm Lazin, an attorney who is chairman of the Pennsylvania Crime Commission.

"This is the first significant break we've had," said Chief Inspector Frank Scafidi of the police homicide division.

Testa, 56, was fatally injured March 15, 1981, when a nail-filled bomb went off on his concrete front porch as he was about to enter his home. The bomb blew a 30-inch hole in the porch.

He was one of 16 Philadelphia crime figures who have been killed since Angelo Bruno, the reputed one-time leader of the city's crime family, was murdered 27 months ago.

Officials allege DiPretoro killed Testa with the aid of Rocco Marinucci, 30, a pizza parlor owner who was found shot to death in a Philadelphia parking lot March 15 — exactly a year after Testa's death. Police count Marinucci as one of the 16 reputed gangland victims.

DiPretoro was arraigned on one count of murder and on weapons and conspiracy charges before Municipal Judge Alan Silberstein. He was ordered held without bail at an undisclosed site, police spokesman Don Fair said.

DiPretoro also was held as a suspect in the slaying of Edward Bianculli, 21, whose skeletal remains were found in a marsh near the Philadelphia International Airport in December 1980, Fair said. Bianculli had no known mob ties, he said.

Lazin said police believe DiPretoro played only a small part in any mob activity.

DiPretoro was arrested by FBI agents June 4 as he left Old Original Bookbinders Restaurant where he worked as a waiter, police said.

He was questioned by FBI and city police until Thursday when a news conference was held to announce the charges, Fair said.

Jack Bronstein, vice president of the restaurant, described DiPretoro as a "nice, baby-faced kid.

"There was not a single thing that would lead us to believe he was not a great guy," Bronstein said.

Dennis O'Callaghan, supervisor of the FBI's organized crime squad, said he thought DiPretoro's arrest — and connection to Marinucci — supported a theory that the killings of Philadelphia crime figures are part of "an internal struggle" for control of the Bruno mob.

If the killings were directed from outside the city, he said he would have expected retaliations against gangland figures outside Philadelphia. But that was not the case.

"It would be the only time the casualties were all on one side," he said.

President Ronald Reagan pauses at Checkpoint Charlie, the crossover point in the Berlin Wall, Friday. During his last day in West Germany, Reagan visited the wall and Charlottenburg Castle outside Berlin.

Police keep riot scene away from Reagan

BERLIN (AP) — Thousands of riot police used clubs, tear gas and water cannon Friday on hundreds of masked and helmeted militants hurling rocks and gasoline bombs to protest President Reagan's visit to West Berlin.

Authorities seized more than 350 people in eight hours of brawling.

At one point, protesters set the battle to music. From a "safe house" near Winterfeldplatz, loudspeakers blared the entrance music to the movie "Apocalypse Now" and the soundtrack of a helicopter battle in the film.

Reagan, shielded by the tightest security 9,000 police could impose, saw and heard nothing of the riot as he praised western freedom in a speech at the city's Charlottenburg Palace and glimpsed Communist East Germany across the Wall at Checkpoint Charlie.

In Charlottenburg, thousands of Berliners waived American flags and pennants declaring "Welcome Mr. President."

Half a mile away, rioters turned parts of the American sector into an urban battleground, hurling paving stones and gasoline bombs at helmeted police wielding clubs and protected by riot shields.

Police said the fighting died down when a heavy rain fell after about eight hours of rioting. By then police had reported 280 arrests. Another 74 people were taken into custody at checkpoints on highways leading into Berlin, where police searched cars looking for weapons and potential troublemakers.

The Berlin trouble began punctually with Reagan's arrival at 10 a.m. An estimated 6,000 to 7,000 militants asnswering the call of underground literature to defy a ban on demonstrations during the presidential visit massed in the city's Nollendorf square.

The police were ready. Armored vans containing at least 1,000 police lined each of the six streets leading into the square and officers stapled barbed wire to the sidewalks and streets to cordon off the protesters.

Angry at seeing themselves surrounded, the protesters began chanting obscenities and shouting that Reagan was a "fascist."

Police responded by warning the protesters they were defying a court injunction against street protests. Some 200 militants surged forward, showering police with paving stones and gasoline bombs to send them scurrying into their vans.

That was the signal for about another 500 masked and helmeted rioters to rip boards from the windows of a nearby furniture store and use them to crush the barbed wire and break down the cordon.

Ducking teargas cannisters and skirting water cannon, the militants speedily built barricades with furniture from the looted stores and cars parked on the streets.

The square rapidly filled with clouds of billowing black smoke from the burning vehicles. Demonstrators choked and wept as police continued to fire tear gas rounds and make sporadic charges on foot and in their vans.

The well-organized rioters, equipped with special eye liquid to fight the effects of tear gas, held sway over the battlefield for about an hour. Their numbers depleted as hundreds followed police appeals to leave the square through two special checkpoints.

But about 1,000 then charged down Bulow strasse toward another square where more rioters were battling police.

Spotting a van abandoned by the sometimes violent and plainly scared police, scores of demonstrators overturned the vehicle. Thirty seconds later it was ablaze.

Police wore down the demonstrators with repeated charges, driving their vans, sirens blaring, at high speeds through the riot-torn streets.

Cease-fire doesn't end mourning for dead

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israel mourned its soldiers lost in the Lebanon invasion and Prime Minister Menachem Begin attended the funeral Friday of the highest-ranking officer ever killed in action.

The military command said 91 Israeli soldiers were confirmed dead, and Defense Minister Ariel Sharon and Begin both said the number of fatalities was over 100 — a number felt deeply in a country with a population of 4 million.

The Israeli forces also suffered 664 wounded, 18 missing and one prisoner of war, the command said.

The operation called "Peace for Galilee" clearly had been an expensive one in terms of the lives of Israeli soldiers thrown into combat against a Palestine Liberation Organization army on the PLO's home territory of southern Lebanon.

The number of dead in the five-day invasion was five times the number who died in Israel's 1978 invasion of southern Lebanon. Eighteen were killed in 91 days but that fighting was limited to an advance of roughly 15 miles compared to this week's 45-mile push to the outskirts of Beirut.

The death that stunned Israel was that of Maj. Gen. Yekutiel Adam, 55, a Tel Aviv-born veteran of all Israel's wars.

Begin attended Adam's funeral in the Kiryat Shaul military cemetery in Tel Aviv and revealed that Adam was to have been appointed on Sunday to head the Mossad, Israel's foreign intelligence service.

Turkey protests 11 deaths in fighting in Lebanon

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — Turkey delivered a protest to Israel Friday for the deaths of 11 Turkish nationals caught in the fighting in Lebanon, the Foreign Ministry announced.

Israel not sure Lebanese land securely held

QANA, Israeli-held Lebanon (AP) — Palestinian ambush teams and snipers still endanger Israeli forces in Lebanon, and large areas of captured territory remain insecure, Israeli officers said Friday.

"I think our job has just begun," one officer said at noon, just as Israel began a cease-fire and halted a lightning advance into Lebanon that began Sunday.

But the Israeli government emphasized that the cease-fire applied to the Syrian forces in Lebanon. As to the guerrillas of the Palestine Liberation Organization, Israel said its troops are under orders to continue seeking them out and capturing them. There is resistance, say officers in Israeli-held territory.

This town of 14,000, seven miles inland below Tyre, is in U.N.-protected territory, watched over by the Fiji battalion of the U.N. Interim Force in Lebanon.

But, an Israeli officer asserted, "the place was full of Palestinians."

A visiting correspondent watched Israeli troops by a hilltop church use binoculars to follow several suspected guerillas and signal their position to a pursuing patrol.

Similar operations could be seen throughout southern Lebanon as Israeli troops stormed buildings and scoured fields for Palestinian guerrillas who melted away into hiding during the rapid Israeli advance.

Beirut 'resting' uneasily

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Beirut's streets were filled Friday night with burning piles of garbage and frightened children running through the shadows behind their parents.

The streets echoed with rattles of submachine-gun fire, long bursts of anti-aircraft fire and the howl of Israeli jets still flying overhead.

Palestinian guerrillas retreating into Moslem-controlled west Beirut added to the chaos of a city where scores were killed in Israeli bombardments in the hours before warring Israeli and Syrian forces began observing a cease-fire at noon Friday.

In one attack, about 20 people were reported killed and an undetermined number wounded when at least three large shells fired by Israeli warships exploded in civilian areas of west Beirut. In a later Israeli air attack on the Palestine Liberation Organization military headquarters, the PLO reported more than 100 people killed. It said most were civilians.

Despite the Israeli-Syrian cease-fire, shellfire exchanges between the Israeli forces and guerrillas continued.

The shelling by the Israeli gunboats, cruising off the once-elegant Lebanese beaches, was the first time Israel's guns have aimed at areas of the city where there are no large concentrations of Palestinian guerrillas.

Most west Beirut shops have been closed for three days and shortages are taking their toll. Three men with submachine guns pulled into one of the few operating gasoline stations Friday and ordered the attendant to fill up the tank of their four-wheel drive vehicle.

Titusville, Fla. celebrates sisterhood with Netherlands

TITUSVILLE, Fla. (AP) — The people of Titusville have a spectacular next-door neighbor and they're eager to show it off to Queen Beatrix of the Netherlands.

Queen Beatrix

Titusville is holding a formal celebration later this month declaring the city and the Dutch community of Soest sister cities. The celebration coincides with Queen Beatrix's plans for a six-day visit to the United States to help celebrate 200 years of unbroken diplomatic ties between her country and the United States.

It also coincides with the June 27 liftoff of the space shuttle Columbia from America's space center, which is next door to Titusville.

City officials have invited the queen to be their guest for the start of Columbia's last test mission.

Soest, which is similar to Titusville in population and industry, is the queen's primary residence. Both cities have populations of about 30,000 and rely on the aerospace industry.

Even if the queen is unable to attend, Holland will be represented — Soest Mayor Paul Scholten and Alderman Gunter Plomp are to be here.

Vidal

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Author Gore Vidal, whose short campaign for U.S. Senate ended in a second-place finish, says the electorate may not have seen the end of Vidal the candidate — but on the other hand, he may just write about his experiences.

Vidal lost to Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. in the Democratic primary. Brown will battle Pete Wilson, San Diego's Republican mayor, in the November general election.

Despite his defeat, Vidal said he's glad he tried.

The campaign he began March 9, months after Brown mounted his unofficial race, ended Tuesday night with about 15 percent of the vote, compared with Brown's 51 percent majority.

By Wednesday the author of "Myra Breckenridge" and "Burr" was back in the literary world — autographing his latest collection of essays at a Westwood bookstore.

"The press isn't equipped to cover the issues," he said. "It's a shell game, with the candidates trying to give the appearance of motion while avoiding ideas and controversy and the press just running along to keep up with them."

Shuttle schedule ahead of plan

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Preparations for the June 27 launch of the space shuttle were proceeding smoothly after completion of a hazardous fueling operation, Kennedy Space Center officials said Friday.

An engineering team finished fueling the Columbia's steering and manuevering engines and reaction control systems Friday morning, about four hours ahead of schedule. The chemicals, monomethyl hydrazine and nitrogen tetroxide, are highly toxic and combustible.

"The whole operation went very smoothly. The fact that we picked up early shows that we're getting near to the operational status," spokesman Ken Senstead said.

He said there was a flight-readiness review scheduled by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration in Washington on Monday.

On Friday night technicians were to begin pressurizing the shuttle's on-board storage tanks which contain the maneuvering propellants, an operation expected to be completed Saturday afternoon.

Family changes may aid cities

CLEVELAND (AP) — The growth of two-income families with fewer children could help revitalize the nation's cities, a federal official said Friday at a national urban recovery conference.

Demand for housing, which in the last three decades has focused on the suburbs, is now starting to refocus on the cities because of changes in the family, said Dr. E.S. Savas of the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

With both the husband and wife working and less need for space because of fewer children, more families are seeking smaller homes with less upkeep, closer to jobs, Savas told a session of the Cities' Congress on Roads to Recovery.

The government is responding with the proposed Enterprise Zone program to revitalize distressed inner cities and rural towns, Savas said. The proposal, now before Congress, would reduce taxes and various regulations at the federal, state and local levels and would provide for improved services for the designated areas, he said.

Urban revitalization in the future will depend on economic recovery of the nation as a whole, greater reliance on non-government institutions and more emphasis on local leadership, Savas said.

But as cities are reborn, they will not detract from the suburbs, said Paul R. Porter, chairman of the Cities' Congress and director of the Urban Recovery Project at Cleveland State University.

Senior citizens' group wants to halt mandatory disclosure

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Senior Citizens Law Center went to court Friday in a bid to prevent the Social Security Administration from forcing 4 million welfare recipients to disclose their tax records.

Bruce M. Fried, a center attorney, said the group hopes to get an emergency hearing Monday on its request for a temporary restraining order against the government agency.

The agency sent all Supplemental Security Income recipients a notice last month asking them to sign a form giving Social Security access to interest statements that banks file with the Internal Revenue Service.

The agency says it will cut from the rolls anyone who refuses to comply. It expects to save $140 million in fiscal 1983 by cracking down on an estimated 88,000 welfare recipients with unreported bank accounts and other income.

"The problem is they're using a misleading notice," Fried said in an interview. "They're creating an eligibility requirement Congress did not intend and they're seeking to force people to disclose information Congress has determined is confidential."

Geologist fights to save sphinx

By GEORGE W. HACKETT

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Walking along the top of the Great Sphinx, he could hear the stones popping — like potato chips.

"I could see chips flaking away," said Dr. K. Lal Gauri. He also noticed that salt crystals had formed just beneath the surface. "It was just as I had suspected."

Gauri believes that salt, and not the desert wind, is responsible for the decay that threatens the monument, chiseled from rock 25 centuries before the birth of Christ.

He has made three trips to inspect the 64-foot-high figure and is preparing for another, at the request of the Egyptian government. It is afraid that if the erosion isn't halted, the statue will be damaged irreparably.

Gauri, chairman of the geology department at the University of Louisville and an internationally known expert on stone preservation, has worked on such historic treasures as the Taj Mahal, the Acropolis and St. Paul's Cathedral in London.

Gauri said his chemical analysis of the Sphinx indicated that salt, already in the limestone, was causing the trouble.

"The desert has alternating temperatures — extremely hot days and cool nights. Water in the air condenses and dissolves the salt. When the salt crystallizes again, this puts added pressure on the monument. Pieces begin falling off."

Gauri became involved early in 1980 after the American Research Center in Cairo learned about a plan to build a wind barrier around the Sphinx. The cause of the erosion hadn't been analyzed and the center asked for Gauri's opinion.

He concluded that stone to be used for the wall would add to the problem, and the idea was dropped.

In October 1981, a rear section of the Sphinx collapsed and the government summoned a team of scientists, including Gauri, to Cairo to find a way to save the 240-foot-long statue. Gauri said he made another trip to the site last February when "the government asked me to tell them what to do."

He and graduate students at the University of Louisville have been completing a pilot study on a vacuum system. It would suck air from the Sphinx and, at the same time, pump water into the stone to flush out the salt deposits.

"Afterwards, parts of the veneer would be replaced with low-salt stone and mortar," he said.

"This is something the Egyptians may want to try," said Gauri, who has been at University since 1966. A native of India, he earned a doctorate at Bonn University in West Germany and spent a year in post-doctoral research at the California Institute of Technology.

When he isn't teaching or fighting to save the Sphinx, Gauri may be found on the tennis court.

"I'm as good as my competition," he joked. "I only play with members of my family."

Cases bring lawyers notoriety

By DAN WEIKEL
Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — When attorney William Charvet saw the envelope in his briefcase just before a court hearing, he thought it was a little strange. He didn't know who put it there or why.

Inside was a piece of coat hanger — similar to a weapon used by Charvet's client, Roy Norris, and his accomplice, Lawrence Bittaker, in the macabre torture-slayings of five teen-age girls in 1979.

Along with the length of hanger was a note: "If Norris gets off, your're next."

The attorney said he never found out who put the envelope in his briefcase, but he took it seriously.

For Charvet and Tracy Stewart, both attorneys, it was among the first in a chain of threats accompanying a move into the public spotlight as the defense team for two notorious mass murderers.

The first was Norris, who pleaded guilty to killing five teen-age girls and provided testimony that helped convict Bittaker.

The second was Freeway Killer William Bonin, who was convicted of 10 counts of murder and faces additional sex-murder charges. He is suspected of the sex-murders of 44 young men.

THE CASES brought the defense team notoriety, new clients, professional acclaim and the possibility of book royalties, which in the Norris case would be in addition to court-paid fees.

But their involvement in the Norris and Bonin cases also cost them clients, and brought threats and emotional stress.

In a sense, while Norris and Bonin were in court on murder charges, Stewart and the soft-spoken Charvet were being tried on professional and personal levels.

"These cases are difficult to handle," Stewart said in a soft Texas accent. "Not every attorney wants them or looks forward to them with all the emotional strain, long hours, client backlash and gruesome details of the crimes."

The attorneys agreed the cases would be a great challenge, and that the defendants deserved fair hearings.

"They have rights, too, and they must be protected like anyone else who has been accused of a crime," Charvet said. "It's innocent until proven guilty. Sometimes people forget that."

The first of the two celebrated cases was the grisly Bittaker-Norris trial. Because of the brutality of the crimes, it was the most difficult case they have ever handled.

IT INVOLVED the kidnapping and slaying of teen-age girls, who had been tortured to death with pliers and coat hangers slowly tightened around their necks.

During one killing, Norris and Bittaker tape-recorded the screams of their victim as they slowly murdered her in the back of a van. It was that tape that nearly kept Charvet out of the case.

"I looked at the pictures of the victims and listened to the tape. It really freaked me out. It was the first time in my life I was actually hearing torture and murder," Charvet said.

The 47-year-old attorney, who said he is politically "to the right of Attila the Hun," withdrew from the case at that point. "I told the district attorney, 'I quit,'" Charvet said. "I couldn't handle it mentally. It was awfully gruesome."

But Norris was insisting on Charvet, who had managed to get an earlier rape charge dismissed.

If he could not have Charvet, Norris said, he would withdraw his guilty plea and an agreement to testify against Bittaker.

The prosecutor, Deputy District Attorney Stephen Kay, wouldn't take no for an answer from Charvet.

CHARVET RECONSIDERED. He and his family, he said, had a long discussion about his duty as a defense attorney.

Charvet recalls asking himself, "What if we put him back out on the street? Could I live with that?"

He eventually decided that he could because, among other things, choosing not to defend Norris might aid Bittaker, who emerged as the mastermind of the killings.

Stewart said she and Charvet feared Bittaker would plead guilty in exchange for escaping the death penalty and testify against Norris.

"It was all a matter of who got to the bargaining table first," she said. "We decided it was probably best to get in there and plead Norris rather than have it the other way around."

Kay said, however, that he would not have considered a plea bargain with Bittaker because Bittaker was the leader.

There was one condition in accepting the case: Charvet, who had been revolted by the torture tape when he heard it during trial preparation, would not have to be in the courtroom when the tape was played at Bittaker's trial.

Stewart, who was assisting in the case, said she tried to think of the tape in abstract terms — as though it was from a movie or a television show.

"THEN I HEARD it," she said. "I lost control of the fictional aspect. I was actually hearing someone being tortured to death."

More problems began when some clients of the small law firm found out who they were sharing their attorneys with.

"Some of my clients were opposed. I know I lost at least one good client over this," Charvet said. "They told me, 'If you have those type of people, we don't want you.'"

Stewart said some of her clients became disillusioned with her. "They would tell me: 'How can you represent this person? How do you feel talking to him? You're handling my divorce. This is not the profile I had envisioned for you.'"

The 37-year-old lawyer also had to deal with her boyfriend and her mother.

"My boyfriend freaked out over me handling this case," Stewart said. "Then my mother phoned me about it. She was incensed that I was involved with this case. She wanted me to get off of it right away."

Stewart continued to represent Norris throughout Bittaker's trial. Their client received a 45-year-to-life prison term and Bittaker got the death penalty.

Haig spurns Israeli invitation

By JOHN P. WALLACH
Hearst Feature Service

BONN — Secretary of State Haig earlier this week spurned an official Israeli invitation to visit Jerusalem because he said Israel still has made no commitment to even conditionally withdraw from Lebanon.

Haig also confirmed that Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev sent an urgent message to President Reagan that was a "frank expression of Soviet concern about the widening military conflict." But Haig said so far there has not been a "dramatic stepup" in Soyiet arms supplies to Syria.

An obviously confused Haig told newsmen that he has no idea what Israel's new objectives are in pushing to the outskirts of Beirut or in continuing to challenge Syrian forces along the Lebanese-Syrian border. Haig volunteered that he had been invited by Prime Minister Begin to visit Israel.

But he said he decided against going now because Israel "has not evidenced sufficient flexibility to make a visit worth while at this time." Haig added after meeting with Saudi Arabia's Foreign Minister Saud el-Faisal that "we're more concerned than ever" about an expansion of the war.

The Saudi Prince, in a 45-minute meeting with President Reagan, did not repeat a threat made earlier in the day to put Saudi forces and arms at the disposal of Syria or any other Arab nation that requests them, Haig said. Saudi Arabia has been the principal bankroller of Syrian forces in Lebanon.

The 30,000 Syrian troops have been there in the guise of an Arab peacekeeping force put into place by the Arab League after the 1978 Israeli invasion to protect the Moslems and Palestinians against Christian onslaughts. Saudi Arabia therefore would be ideally suited to play a new peace role.

But Saud el-Faisal was said to have told Reagan that it cannot do so without a complete and total Israeli withdrawal.

Asked if the Israeli invasion already was endangering U.S. ties with the Arab world, Haig said: "I've said from the outset that I'm concerned about the impact on our relations with the moderate Arabs." But most important was the suggestion Haig made that he may have been double-crossed by Begin.

Gotlieb discusses issues between U.S., Canada

Copley News Service

EDITOR'S NOTE: Allen E. Gotlieb, Ottawa's ambassador to the United States, in an interview with Copley editors, discussed economic and environmental issues that lie between the United States and Canada. Here is the interview.

Q: How, on a very broad basis, would you characterize U.S.-Canadian relations at the moment?

A: At the moment, I guess I would say they are not brilliant, but steady.

• • •

Q: What is the main hang-up? Is it the Foreign Investment Review Act (FIRA)?

A: I think basically FIRA is No. 1, and Canada's new National Energy Program (NEP). There are a number of other things, but those are the high-profile items.

• • •

Q: Is FIRA working, from the Canadian point of view?

A: I think so. FIRA, of course, was never designed to prevent foreign investment, and foreign investment is coming through fairly substantially. Ninety percent of all the applications are passing. But I think that, as a result of FIRA's screening mechanism, we are obtaining more sensitivity to the need for large enterprises to worry about things that Canadians worry about, in terms of research, developing managerial experience and sourcing in Canada, not just importing. We feel this is definitely working. The only political question encountered is that there are critics who say it should be tougher.

• • •

Q: Wasn't the purpose of FIRA to have Canadian industry at least 50 percent Canadian-owned by 1990?

A: No. NEP's purpose was to have the oil and gas industry at least 50 percent foreign-owned by 1990. FIRA was simply to screen new investment coming into Canada and foreign takeovers to ensure that they were of significant benefit to Canada. I think 47 percent of our manufacturing industry is foreign-owned; yours is about 3 percent. But our government never set a target such as trying to reduce the manufacturing industry to 30 percent or 20 percent foreign ownership, or anything of that nature.

• • •

Q: Some oil and gas industry spokesmen say there has been a measurable shift of investment in oil and gas development away from Canada and into the United States as a result of the NEP. Is that correct?

A: I don't think I would subscribe to that. There has been a shift in the pattern of investment, and I think this probably was in the cards, in the sense that looking for gas, for example, has been affected by the fact that there is more gas than markets for it, at least in the short-term. The purpose of the NEP was to encourage and quicken the pace of the economic activity in the Far North, where the rate of development had been quite slow. This was a part of bringing about Canadian self-sufficiency in oil, and that is taking place. Yet, according to figures filed by U.S. oil companies, they expect to increase their investment in Canada in 1982. I think about 28 percent.

Q: Is there contradiction here if U.S. investments increase by about 28 percent in 1982, and yet your purpose is to discourage this kind of thing because Americans now own 70 percent of Canada's energy?

A: Actually, instead of investment, we are talking here about spending for exploration and development. That's not a contradiction, in the sense that we want this activity to take place. U.S. companies are a very vital part of our picture, right now owning 64 percent. That 50 percent is an extraordinarily modest objective. There isn't one other industrialized country that has such a modest objective in terms of ownership. If I may say so, I think anything near that level of foreign activity in the United States would cause Congress to pass laws immediately. The sensitivity to foreign ownership here is higher, I think, than it is in Canada.

• • •

Q: Canadians are investing very heavily in the United States. Are they investing proportionally as much in Canada?

A: It is true that Canadians are investing a lot in the United States. Canada is a maturing country economically. We are developing strong multinational companies and are becoming a very entrepreneurial country. I think we feel the same way about it, by and large, as you feel when you consider your foreign investment. You don't think it is a bad thing, and we don't think our foreign investment is a bad thing either.

• • •

Q: Another point of friction between Canada and the United States is trade. As I understand it, the United States has taken issue with Canada under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT). How is that coming?

A: That's important, I think, for two reasons. The first reason is that we've agreed to deal with our differences in a civilized way. We've been receiving a lot of criticism from the United States — too much, I think — about the activities of FIRA. We haven't said FIRA is perfect. We have admitted that there is room to streamline procedures and there are some administrative problems that the government has said it would address. Some of the issues are fairly technical and specific, but instead of giving speeches on both sides of the border about the virtues or the vices of this kind of activity, and raising the intensity of the matter, I think the decision on the part of the United States to seek exa ination in GATT is the right way to go. By the way, the United States is not challenging all FIRA activity, particularly not the notion of screening capital. But to some extent I think the criticisms are out of proportion to the issue and out of proportion to the nature of our relationship.

• • •

Q: Does Canada have a problem with Japanese imports?

A: Our situation is different from yours in that we have a net trade surplus with Japan. We export to them more than they export to us, and that has been true for many years. However, we share a similar problem with you in that we are able to send Japan only a very small percentage of manufactured goods. Most of our export trade to Japan is in raw materials, some of it processed and upgraded. The mix has been improving, I believe, but we have a very difficult time in selling manufactured products in Japan. Needless to say, we are having similar problems to yours in the automotive trade.

Americans are developing taste for sake

By SUSAN WARFEL
Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES — In an ironic turn of consumer tastes, Japanese sake is developing a real following among Americans at the same time that many Japanese are switching to Scotch whisky and other traditionally Western drinks.

Americans drank some 800,000 gallons of the rice wine last year, up about 40 percent from 1980, according to Take Numano, president of Numano International Inc., the leading American producer of sake. Numano said sake sales grew another 30 percent in the first quarter of this year.

Meanwhile, in Japan, the taste is switching to "mizuwari onzarokku" (scotch and water on the rocks), or to "jizake," a second-class home brew that is stronger and drier than commercially-produced sake. Japan's National Tax Agency reports that about 390 million gallons of sake were consumed in that country in 1981, five percent less than in '79.

Sake, with an average 17 percent alcohol content, is considerably stronger than American wines, which are usually 10 or 11 percent, Numano noted. The beverage traditionally is heated to about 120 or 130 degrees and is served in a special pitcher, to be poured into a small, shallow cup.

Numano International was established three years ago when Numano formed a joint venture with Pacific International Rice Mills of San Francisco. Last year the company produced nearly 300,000 gallons.

Heathen Church back in Iceland

By ROLF SODERLIND

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (AP) — The Heathen Church has brought Thor and his pantheon of Viking gods back to Iceland after almost 1,000 years, but the cult is winning few converts among island's 230,000 people, mostly Protestants.

Banned in the year 1000 by the Althing, the world's oldest parliament, the Heathen Church regained the blessing of the Icelandic government in the name of religious freedom in May 1973.

But today its congregation numbers only about 100 members. Nonetheless, it is a reminder to Icelanders of their cultural heritage.

The Icelandic sagas are still widely read here. The Heathen Church is based on these heroic tales and mythological poems of the Vikings and their divine pantheon.

The high priest, who goes by the ancient title Allsherjargodi, is Sveinbjorn Beinteinsson, 57, a pipe-smoking sheep farmer with a huge white beard.

A traditional poet in his own right, he chants Icelandic poems in the ancient rhythms. Occasionally, he performs at rock concerts and is loudly applauded.

The Heathens call themselves the Aesir cult, after the family of old Norse gods that include Thor, the god of thunder; Odin, the god of wisdom; Freyr, the god of crops and prosperity; Njord, the sea god, and all the rest.

The sect has 12 commandments, the first of which recognizes the gods and others, "including elves and other mighty beings."

Such superstition is deeply ingrained in Iceland, where roads sometimes are detoured to avoid spots that people believe are inhabited by elves.

Although admitting "we don't forbid anything, we don't demand anything," Jormundur Inge Hansen, one of eight priests who serve Beinteinsson, denied it is an easy religion to follow.

"A Heathen priest does not have the power to forgive someone his sins. Our faith places all responsibility on yourself," he said.

Says the cult's eighth commandment: "Aesir cult faithfuls can worship in any way that suits them best, as long as they do not break the laws of the country."

Unlike their ancestors, at times advocates of human sacrifices, Beinteinsson and his followers do not sacrifice even animals. That would be against the law.

They also don't fill their drinking horns with strong beer, which is banned in Iceland nowadays, for the vitally important drinking portion of their ceremonies. Mead, the genuine Viking drink, isn't made anymore.

"What we drink is not important. We drink schnapps or anything," said Beinteinsson, sipping a weak beer at the Mokka Cafe, a focal point for artists in Reykjavik.

He said the sagas, as written down by Christian scholars in 1100-1200, failed to detail rituals of the old heathen times. The rituals were banned when the Althing declared Iceland a Christian country 70 years after the parliament was created in 930. Thus, modern Heathens have had to improvise their worship of the old gods.

"A feast is sanctified to a god," said the high priest. "Then we may recite old poems, and drink.

"We see how it works each time. We look for signs that the gods are pleased. If the ceremony was good, then we get a good crop."

Heathens gather for three feasts a year — in April, August and October.

The August feast usually is held at Beinteinsson's small sheep farm near Draghals, 55 miles north of this coastal capital, where Heathens have erected a 6½-foot image of Thor on a rock.

There is no temple, not even an office for would-be converts to turn to. For indoor feasts a Reykjavik meeting hall is rented.

The church gets by, barely, on member fees equal to the government's official church tax, about 100 kronur ($10) a year, Beinteinsson said.

Elected high priest for an indefinite period, Beinteinsson is authorized by the government to conduct Heathen baptisms, weddings and funerals.

So far, he said, he has officiated at four baptisms and five weddings but no funerals.

Hansen said a few members of the Heathen Church had died but they were buried with Christian ceremonies at the request of their relatives.

According to the Heathens' seventh commandment, a Christian funeral is acceptable.

Study conducted on drivers 'under the influence'

The Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON — Staying off the road while you are "under the influence" may not keep you in one piece anymore.

A federal study found that four out of 10 drivers involved in automobile accidents in upstate New York had traceable levels of alcohol, marijuana, tranquilizers, or other drugs in their bloodstreams.

Among the 500 drivers tested, alcohol was the most common of the substances found, claimed the study conducted by the Transportation Department's Highway Traffic Safety Administration.

Alcohol was found in 25 percent of the drivers, marijuana in 10 percent and tranquilizers in eight percent.

One out of every 10 drivers tested was found to have two or more drugs in his blood.

Twenty percent of the drivers found with alcohol in their system would have been considered legally intoxicated in most states.

These "legally" intoxicated drivers appeared to be at fault in almost all accidents, the study claimed.

The report indicated that drivers under the influence of marijuana were likely responsible for more than half of their accidents.

The study involved drivers who had been treated for injuries at a hospital in Rochester, N.Y.

The majority of those with alcohol or marijuana in their blood streams tended to be males 31-years-of-age or less. The 25 to 50 year olds, male and female, were found more frequently to have tranquilizers in their blood.

Up-and-coming artists take over schools

By MICHAEL MESSINA

NEW YORK (AP) — Three of New York City's public-school buildings, left vacant by a shrinking student enrollment, have been grabbed up by an artistic community in need of valuable urban space, and have been transformed into thriving new centers for young, up-and-coming artists.

Since 1975 a total of 82 school buildings have been removed from their original use and are no longer under the jurisdiction of the Board of Education.

In 1976 an organization called the Institute for Art and Urban Resources obtained P.S. 1, the first public school built in the borough of Queens in 1890. Alaina Heiss, founding director of the group, got a 20-year lease from the city of New York for only $1,000 a year and the pioneering artists themselves began repainting and refurbishing the rooms into raw exhibits.

The large red-brick structure, nestled in the industrial-working-class environs of Long Island City, had been slated for demolition since 1963 and was in a derelict state.

Today the freshly painted, sunlit classrooms make an unusual, ideal environment as exhibition, studio and performance space. P.S. 1 attracts experimental artists from across the United States as well as Europe and is the largest alternative space in North America, according to Institute spokesman Tom Finkelpearl.

As opposed to more traditional, slicker museum space, school buildings such as P.S. 1 prove a continual surprise to the viewer with their large-scale installations and the utilization of hallways, closets, windows, and even bathrooms by artists.

At a "survival show" to raise funds for a second, similarly used former school building on Manhattan's Lower East Side, visitors peeking into a principal's office, instead of a desk and filing cabinets found a lush jungle environment on display. Or, peering down a dark stairwell, they saw a life-size cardboard woman in a flowing wedding dress.

The juxtaposition effectively throws familiar school memories completely off-balance.

Strange, green bird escapes Argentina

ANDERSON, S.C. (AP) — When her son spotted "a strange, green bird" nesting in a backyard oak tree, Lena Loskoski thought he had been drinking.

Then she saw for herself — a blue-green bird with a yellow breast and a dark, curved bill.

Since the bird arrived two weeks ago, Mrs. Loskoski and her neighbors have identified it through books as a Monk Parakeet, a native of Argentina. They think it may be a descendant of a group shipped from Argentina that escaped at Kennedy International Airport in New York four years ago.

"When they told us the bird is from Argentina, we figured it left the country to get away from the war over there," Mrs. Loskoski joked.

Playwright, composer turns author

By CAROL DEEGAN

NEW YORK (AP) — Already an accomplished playwright, composer and director, at the age of 31 Elizabeth Swados has added novelist to the list of her achievements.

Her original Broadway musical, "Runaways," received a record-breaking five Tony award nominations. Her musical version of "Alice in Wonderland" starred Meryl Streep. She has worked with theatrical director Andrei Serban and New York theatrical producer Joseph Papp.

Now she has written her first novel, "Leah and Lazar," which at first she considered publishing under another name.

"The seemingly radical or sudden transition from theater person to writer concerned me," she said in an interview. "It concerned me that the book would not be taken seriously and read as a first novelist who is really trying to accomplish that — and not as a show-biz person who was taking a year off and thought, well, I might try something different.

"Generally, I would say that my career up until now has been music for theatrical pieces, be they theater or movies, but I've always written, simultaneously to that, prose and poetry and things like that."

MS. SWASOS was born in Buffalo, N.Y. She began studying the piano at the age of 5 and later studied classical guitar.

As a teen-ager, while attending a private girls' school in Buffalo, Ms. Swados said she wrote songs for a school singing group and plays for the school drama club. She also had a folk singing group with twin boys — "we were sort of trying to be Peter, Paul and Mary" — and a "semisoft rock 'n' roll group."

"I was having a desperate attempt, from the time I was a freshman in high school, to get my poetry published and get my stories published, and I had a whole bulletin board of rejection slips, which I thought was just great — I'd sort of send things out to get the rejection slips," she said. "And the same thing with my music, I'd send tapes."

After high school, she attended Bennington College where she was graduated with a bachelor's degree in music for theater. She became a professional composer when she was 19 years old.

Ms. Swados won an Obie at the age of 20 for her music for Andrei Serban's production of "Medea." In addition to her own original musical, "Runaways," she did a musical version of the book on the Vietnam War titled, "Dispatches," written by Michael Herr. She composed the music for the film, "Four Friends."

Finally, last year, at the age of 30, Ms. Swados said she had decided to collate material she had been gathering for six years to write her first published novel, "Leah and Lazar."

"LEAH AND LAZAR" is the story of a brother and sister, growing up in the 1960s and 1970s, each tormented by his and her own inner thoughts and motivations and their relationship to their family and to one another.

Ms. Swados said that aside from the "narcissistic, author-like need to make something," she was motivated in writing the novel by her belief that "whatever goes wrong in the bigger scheme of things begins in the family, begins in the home and begins in the habits that we teach our children."

"Leah and Lazar are parentless children, for all intents and purposes," she said. "I've encountered a lot of parentless children, either by choice or because of circumstance...and the way they survive has always been a fascination to me."

She explained, "I have an enormous interest and I would say investment in young people."

Ms. Swados says the novel also represents people of her generation growing up in the 1960s and 1970s who had a romantic view of trying new and dangerous things.

"I lived in an atmosphere all the time with people who were testing the edge. Some made it and some didn't. Lazar represents some who didn't. Leah represents some who did," she said.

MS. SWADOS, who lives and works in New York City, said she was now working with a group of 10 children, between the ages of 9 and 16, setting works of literature to music for CBS Cable television. The authors include William Blake, Grace Paley and Mark Twain.

("Leah and Lazar" is published by Summit Books.)

Bridge repair costly

The Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON - It could cost taxpayers $47.6 billion to repair or replace the nation's bridges, according to a report delivered to Congress by U.S. Secretary of Transportation, Drew Lewis.

The report says that over half the nations 557,516 bridges inventoried are defective or no longer able to safely serve their current load.

The complete bridge situation is highlighted in the report on the Highway Bridge Replacement Program.

New York's bridges aren't quite falling down yet. But the national study found that 60 percent of the state's bridges are restricted to light traffic, closed, or need immediate repairs to stay open.

The Texas case appears even worse. Texas has the greatest number of structurally deficient bridges in the U.S. with 16,767 of them badly in need of rehabilitation.

Irrigation method tested in Brazil

PETROLINA, Brazil (AP) — Israeli irrigation techniques are being used on a pioneer farm project here in Brazil's arid northeast. The hope is it will create a new industry and more jobs in the poverty-stricken area.

The aim of the Petrolina experiment is to grow cassava, a starchy root from which tapioca is made. But the Brazilians will make alcohol for use in motor vehicles from its root and burn its leaves and stems to run electric generators.

"We are using an area that was not fit for anything and we are creating jobs," says the farm's co-director Hilson da Rocha Leal.

The key to the project is the irrigation system, developed in Israel for use on hilly land where normal irrigation canals are useless. The Brazilians have adapted the system, using untreated river water instead of well water and increasing the plantation's size 300-fold.

In its first stage, the plantation will cover 7,113 acres, employ 550 workers and supply cassava for a 31,200 gallon-a-day alcohol distillery. If it's a success, the project will be expanded.

But there are risks, the project's managers say. This type of irrigation has never been used before on cassava or on a plantation this big. And the cassava plant, though hardy, is not native to this region in the state of Pernambuco.

"The basic research hasn't been done," said Antonio Jose Simoes, research head at the government's center for semiarid tropic studies. "But if the project works, it will open badly needed possibilities for this region."

Petrolina lies in the heart of Brazil's huge Northeast drought zone, an area 1.5 times the size of Texas and one of the poorest places in the world.

Sparse scrub covers most of the rocky, desert-like soil. Rain comes seldom and at the wrong time of year for crops. The few farmers left around here say they lose 9 harvests in 10.

The cassava project was the idea of a local businessman, Alcedo Baptista Cavalcanti Filho. In the 1970s he bought 79,000 acres of land near here "for next to nothing" and put his Agroindustrial Camaragibe S.A. company to work on the project.

The first phase cost an estimated $12 million excluding the land, he said.

On the farm, pumps suck water from the nearby Sao Francisco River and force it into a system of quarter-inch tubes that run across the fields in parallel lines two feet apart. Along the tubes, every two feet, a specially designed spigot allows water to escape drop by drop. A cassava shoot is planted by each spigot.

Djalma Gomes, the project's chief agronomist, explained in an interview that "the sand has few nutrients, so we mix fertilizers and almost everything else the plants need with the water. All the soil really does is hold the plant up."

Planners say they ran into unexpected problems in the early stages of the project but that most have been resolved.

Acyr Ribeiro Ribas, an engineer and top managerial assistant on the site, said that in the beginning irrigation tubes became clogged by the muddy river water — a problem the Israeli designers never faced because they used crystaline underground water.

"We had to develop special filters and a special spigot," he said, adding that this seemed to solve the problem.

Ribas also said the impracticality of using wheeled vehicles on the sandy soil had been resolved with the use of vehicles moving on treads, although he said this made the project more costly.

The model farm is nearly ready to enter production early next year. But people close to the project say they are worried about possible long-range problems.

Ribas said, "As far as we know, no one has ever tried this type of irrigation on a project this large. We really don't know what problems we'll face when we start full-scale operation."

Agronomist Gomes added, "We are completely changing the ecological system of the area. We could even be killing the natural enemy of some plague that could wipe out the cassava. We simply don't know what will happen."

Wheat farmers grow third record crop

AGRICULTURE

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite Agriculture Secretary John Block's program to control the U.S. grain surplus, America's winter wheat farmers are growing their third straight record crop.

The Agriculture Department's Crop Reporting Board says this year's winter wheat harvest — expected to amount to three-fourths of the U.S. wheat production this year — should hit 2.13 billion bushels, up 2 percent from the 1981 record of 2.1 billion.

That estimate, based on June 1 field conditions, is 3 million bushels higher than the preliminary forecast department analysts made last Dec. 22, several weeks before Block announced that wheat farmers would have reduce their acreage by 15 percent this year to remain eligible for federal price supports.

Last month, the department's first estimate of the season had put the 1982 harvest at 2.06 billion bushels, which would have still been the second-best crop ever. In 1980, farmers took 1.89 billion bushels of winter wheat from their fields, a record at the time.

In releasing the June forecast Thursday, officials estimated the average yield this year at 36.8 bushels per acre, compared to 35.8 bushels in 1981.

Over the past 10 years, the June estimate has been below the final production figures six times.

Winter wheat is planted in the fall and harvested the following spring and summer. The rest of the annual crop is planted in the spring and harvested later the same year.

Alarmed about a growing stockpile of U.S. grain and a slump in the export market, Block announced the acreage reduction program early this year, hoping to hold down production of wheat, feed grains, rice and cotton.

In order to stay eligible for price support and related benefits, farmers had to sign up by April 16 to reduce 1982 acreages by 15 percent for wheat, rice and cotton and 10 percent for feed grains.

Although the sign-up was heavy — about 80 percent — farmers still have some weeks or months, depending on the crop and region, to commit themselves to the acreage cuts. The department said last week that farmers operating about 38 percent of the base wheat acreage in 18 states had made that commitment.

The USDA currently estimates that wheat prices in the marketing year ending June 30 will average about $3.70 per bushel, compared to $3.91 in 1980-81. Block has said a successful acreage reduction program could add 10 to 20 cents to the price in the coming crop year.

Critics of Block's plan have warned that few farmers would participate because the program was announced late and the financial incentives were not attractive enough.

In its forecast, the Crop Reporting Board said farmers nationwide expected to have about 58 million acres of winter wheat for harvest this year, down 1 percent from 58.6 million acres harvested in 1981.

While winter wheat is grown in most states, the Great Plains is the major area, and the report showed farmers in Kansas and Colorado adding 250,000 acres between May and June to the amount of winter wheat area they intend to harvest for grain.

Kansas, the nation's leading producer, expects to harvest 488 million bushels compared to 305 million last year.

The report said winter wheat was in "mostly fair to good" condition in the major producing areas prior to June 1. But persistent wet weather since then has caused some problems, especially in the Southwest.

U.S. Wheat Associates, an industry group, said this month that the crop in Oklohoma, the second leading winter wheat producer, was beginning to deteriorate because of wetness and the harvest could fall below last year's.

Cuts in price supports could boost U.S. dairy production

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Midwest farm economist is warning Congress that if it cuts the federal dairy price support to rein in the growing dairy surplus, farmers will produce more milk, not less, before many smaller operators are finally forced out of business.

"Increased milk production is the only logical decision for a dairy farmer faced with high fixed costs and high interest rates," says Robert Cropp of the University of Wisconsin at Plattesville.

"In fact, the reaction of many agricultural lending institutions to a cut in milk prices is to advise their farmer customers to increase milk production in an attempt to maintain cash flow and meet expenses," Cropp says.

Cropp, along with dairy-state congressmen and industry officials, continued their campaign against Agriculture Secretary John Block's price support reduction plan Wednesday, urging the House Agriculture dairy subcommittee to support an alternative that would combine at least short term production controls with incentives for those complying and penalties against those who don't.

Faced with a dairy surplus that totaled nearly 16 billion pounds of milk equivalent last week and is growing larger, Block wants full discretion on the support level with the stated intention of cutting it from $13.10 to $12 a hundred pounds on Jan. 1.

He said that should shave $700 million from the expected 1983 price support bill of about $2 billion.

Block claims the support level has gotten too high, and only an actual reduction will bring it more in line with market forces while convincing dairy farmers to to halt excess production.

Cropp said that would probably happen within a year, but at the expense of many young, efficient farmers who have large debts.

"These operations represent the type of family dairy farm structure that everyone agrees should be preserved," he said.

In the meantime, however, Cropp said those farmers, facing fixed expenses for land and equipment, will have no choice but to expand production since that only means an increase in variable expenses like feed.

Customs agents seize chess-playing computer

NEW YORK (AP) — A chess-playing computer is back home after spending a month in the hands of U.S. Customs agents who thought it might leak strategic secrets to the Soviets.

"Belle," a computer about the size of a camper-refrigerator and worth about $6,000, was seized at Kennedy International Airport in a government crackdown on the export of defense-related technology to the Soviet Union.

"A very harmless device," said Godfrey K. Preiser Jr., a lawyer for Bell Laboratories, after Belle's return to company headquarters in Murray Hill, N.J., earlier this week.

Dancer fulfilled dream of body tattoo

By MIKE LEIDEMANN

HONOLULU (AP) — It took four years, $35,000 and a search that extended from Western Samoa to West Germany, but Ioteve Puhetini has finally fulfilled his greatest dream. He's an illustrated man.

Puhetini, an entertainer in a Polynesian dance troupe in Honolulu, was 17 years old when he first got the idea of receiving a full body tattoo in the style of ancient warriors from his native Marquesas Islands.

He had migrated to Papeete, Tahiti, from the Tiiohi district in French Polynesia when he first saw drawings of his ancestors tattoed from the neck to the ankles.

"It made me so proud, I wanted to do something to honor my people," Puhetini said.

Tattooing, however, had been outlawed in the islands more than 120 years before by missionaries who viewed the practice as heathenish, idolatrous and unhealthy. Since then, the art had been lost entirely in the islands, and there was no one to tattoo him.

EVENTUALLY, PUHETINI found his way to Honolulu where he linked up with the popular dance review headed by Matagialalua Tavana, a Tahitian-born chief known for helping young islanders arriving in Hawaii.

"When Teve first started talking about getting a full tattoo, I didn't know if it could be done," Tavana said. "I didn't know if he could stand the pain." But Tavana took the young singer and dancer into his extended family, and soon began giving more and more thought to helping Puhetini.

Tavana bristles at the suggestion that the idea of an illustrated man was a publicity stunt designed to impress the hundreds of tourists who see his show each night.

"Teve begged me," he said. "But I wouldn't let him do it until I was sure everything would be authentic. I'd never let him put a tattoo on that didn't belong to him."

To guarantee authenticity, Tavana began more than a year of research into the methods and designs of ancient tattooing. The research took him from Honolulu to Tahiti and Samoa and eventually to Germany, whose early visitors in the islands had left some of the best descriptions of ancient ways.

IT WAS IN a West German archive that Tavana found the design Puhetini wanted — a 19th-century lithograph of a fully tattooed warrior of Puhetini's own Teii tribe.

Tavana hired Honolulu artist Jordon Lum to transform the 6-by-8-inch lithograph into a lifesize drawing suited to Puhetini's tall, muscular body.

Meanwhile, he began negotiations with Western Samoa's Minister of Culture Asi Elkeni, who oversees the four men still licensed there to practice tattooing by ancient methods.

The tattooers, or "tufugas," use pieces of shaved bone, ranging in size from 5 centimeters to nearly 2 inches across and attached to a wooden handle, to tap a mixture of ash soot and water into the bodies of the bravest men and women in the islands. The soot mixture produces a uniform blue-gray ink color.

NROMALLY A full-body tattoo would be applied over several years to minimize the pain and danger of infection. But Tavana asked "tufuga" Lesa Li'o to reproduce the Marquesan designs on Puhetini's body in six weeks to keep down the expenses of their stay in the islands. For good measure, and because he considered it his duty as Puhetini's chief, Tavana decided to have a wide swath of his back and abdomen tattooed as well.

So, for six hours a day, five days a week beginning last August, the two lay in an open-air home near Apia, Western Samoa, while Li'o tapped and chiseled away at their bodies, beginning with the back first, then moving on to the sides and finally the stomach and legs.

"It hurt the most in the groin and the underarms," Puhetini said. "But all of it was horrible."

"Like 20 bees stinging your body at every minute," added Tavana. "Like 40 bees."

To ease the pain, the two would have their temples massaged, then soak in large tubs of icewater each afternoon. And to fight off the danger of infection, they took large quantities of antibiotics. They said they took no pain-killing drugs.

The Samoans, who had never seen as complete a tattoo as Puhetini's, were so impressed with his bravery that they paid him the rare honor of making him a "matefili" or prophet. To make it official they tattooed the word on his left foot.

Book of Byron letters published

LONDON (AP) — The last volume completing a modern edition of the letters and journals of Lord Byron has come out in London, thanks to an American professor and the poet's own publisher, 158 years after Byron's death in Greece.

The 12 volumes contain 2,900 letters of Byron, hundreds more than were ever issued before, and were edited by Leslie A. Marchand, professor of English from 1937 to 1966 at Rutgers University, New Brunswick, N.J., and now retired.

"Marchand is recognized as the world authority on Byron. He has written books about him and probably knows more about him than anyone else," said John Gammons, spokesman for the publishers, John Murray.

"The last collection of Byron letters came out at the turn of the century. They were edited by a chap named Prothero and were expurgated — he cut out the naughty bits. Today's readers get everything that is available."

Murray's was founded in 1768 in Edinburgh and later moved to London. They first published a Byron work, the epic poem "Childe Harold's Pilgrimage," in 1812, the same year they moved to Albemarle Street off Piccadilly, where the firm has been ever since.

The second John Murray was alive in Byron's lifetime. The sixth, John Grey Murray, is the present head of the firm. Joint editor of a book about Byron, he lists "Byron" among his recreations in "Who's Who."

"It sounds extraordinary, but Mr. Murray is also Byron's legal executor," Gammons said.

"He inherited that position and it means that nothing can be published about Byron without his permission. The firm has held it for so long because we own all the copyright material, all Byron's manuscripts. They must be worth a fortune, but they are not for sale."

American scholars have a habit of becoming the leading experts on the great figures of English literature and have written the finest biographies of Charles Dickens and George Eliot, among others.

British scholars grudgingly tend to explain it by saying that American universities give their members more time and money to pursue the necessary research.

The first two of the 12 new Byron volumes were issued in 1973 and, like all the subsequent volumes, took their titles from Byron's own phrases, "In My Hot Youth" and "Famous In My Times."

The final volume, consisting of an anthology of memorable passages and an index to the whole series, is titled "The Trouble of an Index," again a phrase of the poet.

"The volumes confirm Byron was one of the greatest letter-writers and they add to our knowledge of him," Gammons said.

"Professor Marchand started in 1970. It was remarkable that so many letters turned up and in so many parts of the world. They tended to flow toward him, and some still do. We may have to do a supplement."

Byron's marvelous poetry made him an adored figure. His rebellious nature and love affairs scandalized society and eventually drove him abroad.

In 1824, he went from Italy to Greece to help in the liberation struggle against the Turks, giving the Greeks large sums of money for the war effort. He died of fever at Missolonghi, age 36, before he could see action.

"Forward, forward, courage. Follow my example, don't be afraid," he is said to have cried out as he lay dying.

'Abscam'-style operations move to Galveston

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — The Sheriff won and the FBI lost Thursday when it was spy versus spy in Galveston.

"The sting got stung," said Galveston County Deputy Sheriff J.D. Irwin after his men had taken into custody an undercover FBI agent who offered bribes to three county officials.

Sheriff Joe Max Taylor said his department spent two months investigating what they thought was a drug smuggling operation only to learn that it was part of an FBI undercover attempt to catch county officials accepting bribes.

An FBI spokesman in Houston confirmed the events, in part. FBI agent Johnie Joyce said, "We were involved down there and the sheriff's office did, indeed, take in one of our people."

Joyce said an operation under way there "was interrupted and we did at that time terminate the situation." Beyond that, said Joyce, he could not comment.

But Sheriff Taylor is happy to.

According to the sheriff, his investigators marshalled a full-scale undercover operation of their own aimed at trapping what they believed to be bribery suspects.

Thirty officers were working on the case, along with videotape and audio recording equipment borrowed from a Houston television station. District Judge Don B. Morgan was recruited to act as a "crooked" judge and meetings, under the eye of a hidden camera, were arranged.

It turned out, said Deputy Irwin, that "it was spy versus spy. We did a better job than they did."

The FBI spy, identified as L. Carlos Villa, arranged to meet with two of the sheriff's spies at the plush Galvez Hotel on the Galveston Island beach front.

The federal agent, playing his role as a front man for a drug smuggling operation, offered to pay $25,000 in bribe money to each law enforcement officer or judge involved in assuring the safe delivery to Galveston of drug shipments.

The sheriff's men took the agent into custody. Another agent, also part of the federal undercover scheme, fled.

Taylor said the FBI operation had apparently been under way for some time. The local authorities became suspicious, he said, "because of some of the things (the agents) were doing."

Deputies began monitoring radio messages coming from an FBI-occupied aircraft circling the Hotel Galvez on Thursday and then later played their hand.

The sheriff's men didn't release the undercover FBI agent until they were assured he was, in fact, with the FBI. This required a long meeting Thursday between Galveston County officials and representatives of the Houston FBI office.

FBI agent Joyce refused give any details of the meeting but insisted, "it's not because we're embarrassed," but because of Justice Department policy.

Woman, daughter found dead in shallow grave

KERMIT, Texas (AP) — The bodies of a Kermit woman and her 8-year-old girl were found in a shallow grave Friday after the woman's nude, 14-year-old daughter hiked five miles across rugged rangeland to get help, authorities said.

Brenda Kay Broadway, 31, and Christi Mechelle Elms, 8, were found dead in a 26-inch-deep grave near a cattle-watering tank about 11 miles south of Kermit, said Winkler County sheriff's deputy Kyle Hinkle.

The two apparently died of "stabbing and/or strangulation," and were killed at another stock tank two miles away, Hinkle said.

Woman pleads guilty

A Midland woman who allegedly threatened to kill Stanley O'Neal, about 25, last Jan. 19, in order to break a voodoo curse has pleaded guilty in 238th State District Court to aggravated kidnapping.

The accused, Alice Mayes, about 30, was charged with threatening to shoot O'Neal to death after, Ms. Mayes claimed, O'Neal's mother supposedly had placed a hex on a mutual friend of theirs and the only means to break the spell was to kill "his mother's favorite son."

O'Neal managed to wrest a .22-caliber pistol from the woman and held her and a teen-aged companion at bay until police arrived at O'Neal's home in northwest Midland.

The penalty range for aggravated kidnapping is five years to 99 years or life in prison.

Attorney considers interpreting ethics laws tough

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — If the state's ethics laws were literally interpreted, virtually every elected official in Texas could be convicted of at least one violation, a defense attorney told a state ethics panel Friday.

Defense lawyers and prosecutors alike told the Public Servants Standards of Conduct Advisory Committee that well-meaning ethics laws should not be part of the penal code as written because they are too vague.

Buck Wood, an Austin lawyer who helped write the laws and later was prosecuted along with House Speaker Bill Clayton for allegedly violating them, told the committee that regulating official conduct has been "one of the most notably unsuccessful areas of human endeavor."

Wood was accused in the federal "brilab" investigation but was acquitted along with the other defendants.

"These provisions are trying to regulate conduct which may be absolutely necessary to the legislative process," Wood said.

He said no one could "sit here with a straight face" and say there is no link between campaign contributions and expectations that an elected lawmaker will vote a certain way.

"We don't need to be ashamed of it," Wood said.

Wood and Alan Hill, the panel's counsel, agreed the laws, passed as part of the 1974 penal code revisions, are too broad to be enforced fairly.

"I can plead virtually every official in the state of Texas on one of those," Wood said of the violations listed in the code.

After Hill described a law making it illegal for a public official to threaten to withhold an official act, Rep. Stan Schlueter, D-Salado, the panel chairman, asked if that applied to legislators threatening to bottle each other's bills up in committee.

"If you take this provision literally, a class A misdemeanor has just occurred," Hill said.

"This provision, as you've described it," said Schlueter, "would make the whole legislative process illegal."

Wood said he had no good suggestion for changing the laws, but said "backing a truck up to the Capitol and hauling everybody off to the penitentiary" was no solution.

Travis County District Attorney Ronald Earle, whose Public Integrity Unit investigates official wrongdoing, said he is confident in grand juries' "reasonableness" in issuing indictments based on what he admitted was a "vague, amorphous" set of laws.

Two state residents sentenced for food stamp fraud schemes

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston judges have sentenced two persons to prison terms in connection with separate schemes that defrauded state agencies of more than $30,000 in food stamps and welfare payments.

Lurleiene Ervin, 32, was sentenced Thursday to five years in prison after pleading guilty to charges that she collected $13,096 worth of food stamps and welfare payments over a two-year period even though she was working.

Prosecutors said the woman collected the benefits under her real name while she was working at a rubber company under another name. The scheme was discovered when a computer matched her Social Security number on a Texas Employment Commission roster with the same number on the Texas Department of Human Resources welfare rolls.

Billie Sol Estes' sentence changed

DALLAS (AP) — A federal judge has denied Billie Sol Estes' request for early release, but altered the convicted swindler's sentence to allow the U.S. Parole Commission to decide when he should be freed.

Drunk drivers unwelcome in Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — A drunk driver coming into or leaving Harris County's northside this weekend will face a formidable law enforcement task force lined up with citation pads in hand and a paddy wagon ready to cart violaters to jail.

As many as 100 police officers and 35 units will participate in saturation patrolling of major thoroughfares as part of the first coordinated crackdown of city, county and state agencies against drunk drivers.

The traffic safety blitz is the combined work of the Texas Department of Public Safety, State Department of Highways and Public Transportation, Harris County Sheriff's Department and the Houston and Pasadena police departments.

"Instead of eight or 10 units in that area, there will be 35 to 40," said Department of Public Safety Lt. Harold Couch, a member of the Traffic Safety Awareness Task Force. "We will not only be looking for drunk drivers but for all violations that might endanger motorists' safety."

The effort, announced Wednesday, will begin Friday about 6 p.m. and continue until about 6 a.m. Saturday. It will be coordinated from a central post to prevent agencies from overlapping patrol areas.

Officials admit that carefully combing one area will not solve the overall problem.

"I don't think this will solve the problem but by concentrating on one area the public will at least be aware that we are trying to do something," said task force chairman Jim Freeman of the state highway department.

Couch said the DPS has individually attempted similar blitzes without lasting success.

"We have never been able to establish a deterrent but we hope with a concentrated effort of all agencies, we'll create one," Couch said.

Law enforcement officers have studied statistics to formulate their task force activities.

"Statistics tell us that most drunk drivers hit the road about 8 p.m. and they are still out there until about 5 a.m.," Couch said. "We plan to be out there to meet them at 8 o'clock."

The county recorded 691 traffic fatalities in 1981, and National Safety Council studies showed more than 50 percent of those were caused by drunks. Freeman said about 25 percent of all traffic accidents in the state occur right here in Harris County.

Major C.W. Rust of the Harris County Sheriff's Department, said drunk drivers would be taken to the Humble, Texas, jail to be charged.

PLO military said to be in desperate situation

By Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON – "Al Fatah" and other military arms of the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) are in a desperate situation as result of the Israeli invasion of Lebanon, according to defense sources here, and the organization faces its most critical outlook since its foundation 18 years ago.

A spokesman for the PLO said the organization is "still fighting" and will continue to do so if defeated in Lebanon. But the sources point out that the PLO is simply running out of ground on which to mount effective operations against Israel, other than minor guerrilla forays from inside the country.

The cease-fire in Lebanon, the sources say, has a tenuous chance of holding between the Israelis and the Syrian army. But they note that PLO forces must fight if they expect to avoid capture by the Israelis, who have now seized most of their bases and operating territory, and that this is apparently happening now.

"Our situation is quite serious in Lebanon," conceded Dr. Hatem Husseini, director of the Palestine Information Office in Washington D.C. "But in no way can the PLO be crushed. More than 70 percent of the Palestinian forces are intact and still fighting in Lebanon, regardless of censored reports from Israel to the contrary."

Dr. Husseini said total PLO forces consist of about "60,000 to 80,000 armed men," a figure regarded as high by expert observers. Maj. Gen. Menachem Meron, the military attache at the Israeli embassy in Washington, said that Palestine forces in Lebanon were in the region of 15,000 men.

PLO forces, ousted from base cities such as Tyre, Sidon and Damur, and perhaps in flight from Beirut, are now faced with the choice of fighting the Israelis — a "suicide option," according to one source — or trying to seek shelter with Syrian forces in the Bekaa Valley region of Lebanon.

But if they enter Syrian-dominated areas of Lebanon, the sources note, they will fall under Syrian control, an eventuality that PLO chairman Yasir Arafat has tried to avoid for almost a decade.

"In this sense the Israeli attack has achieved its objectives, at least for the immediate and maybe long-range future," a U.S. military source noted. "The PLO is not able to fire into Israel or mount raids from Lebanon, or indeed from anywhere else, since the governments of Syria, Jordan and Egypt don't let it do so from their countries, either. So what is the PLO going to do?"

The PLO's operational outlook indeed appears the bleakest since its founding in 1964, following a stormy meeting in the Arab sector of Jeruselem, divided between Jordan and Israel until the 1967 Middle East War, which resulted in the unification of the city under Israeli control.

The meeting, held by the "First Palestine National Council," elected Ahmed Shukairi, later the Saudi Arabian ambassador to the United Nations, as its first chairman. Shukairi was followed by Yehya Hamouda, who was succeeded by the present PLO chairman, Yasir Arafat, now reportedly in Beirut.

Under the overall PLO "umbrella," Arafat heads an often divided military organization which includes its principal group "Al Fatah," which translates roughly as "Palestine National Liberation Movement," and other elements of varying political orientation.

The "Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine," is a Marxist group headed by a former Palestinian physician, George Habash. Other PLO military groups are the "Palestine Liberation Army (PLA)," the "Popular Front-General Command," and "Saiqa," a group under the operational command of the Syrian army.

"Sixty per cent of the PLO's funding comes from taxes imposed on Palestinians in various Arab states, and the rest from Arab governments," Husseini said. He said the overall PLO annual budget is about $900 million.

Israeli official sources said the PLO has received $85 million to $90 million since June 1981 from Arab states, in the following ratio: $28.6 million from Saudi Arabia, $20 million from Libya, $20 million from Iraq, $13 million from Kuwait and $5.5 million from Qatar, an oil-rich state on the Persian Gulf.

"The PLO has also continued to absorb large quantities of arms and ammunition, mostly Soviet-made, which it receives via Syria by sea and air from Libya, Saudi Arabia, Syria, South Yemen, Hungary and the Soviet Union," the Israeli embassy in Washington said.

Ear malady linked to virus

BOSTON (AP) — The development of vaccines to prevent common colds in children might significantly reduce the incidence of a common ear infection called otitis media, a study concludes.

The research found that cold viruses contribute to the development of this inflammation of the middle ear, which can result in hearing loss.

Dr. Frederick W. Henderson, who directed the research, said his finding has no immediate application for preventing the ear inflammation.

It is no accident that men, the world over, have built clocks into the steeples of their churches.

Reduce life to its simplest components and what have you? TIME and GOD.

Time marks the beginning of life. It measures the growth of our bodies. It provides opportunity for our work and play. It reveals to us our human limitations, and then, one day, Time leaves us behind . . .

But God is the origin of life. He measures the growth of our souls. He provides our strength and forgives our weakness. He reveals to us His limitless Love. And, never deigning to leave us behind, God beckons us on-even beyond the circle of time.

A parable then: the clock in the steeple!

Man finds material security and temporal happiness as he learns to respect Time.

Man finds spiritual security and eternal happiness as he learns to love God!

Southern Presbyterians to consider ending schism born during Civil War

RELIGION

ATLANTA (AP) — Southern Presbyterians meeting this weekend will consider ending a schism between northern and southern churchmembers that dates back to the Civil War.

The 122nd General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States also will elect a new moderator, consider human rights resolutions and decide whether to ordain Christian education workers.

The annual meeting begins today and concludes Thursday. It is expected to draw 1,500 ministers, laymen and family members to the Iron Works Trade and Convention Center, a recently renovated foundry in Columbus that manufactured cannons for the Confederacy during the Civil War.

The question of a reunion with the Northern Presbyterian Church overshadows all other business before the assembly, said Marj Carpenter, a spokeswoman for the southern church. Representatives of the northern church are not attending the conference.

The southern church separated from the main body of the Presbyterian Church on Dec.4, 1861, eight months after Confederate forces attacked Fort Sumter at Charleston, S.C.

The new denomination declared itself "neither the friend nor foe of slavery," and adopted the name Presbyterian Church in the Confederate States of America. After the war ended, it took its current name.

If the Atlanta-based denomination's 360 voting commissioners approve the reunion resolution at the General Assembly, the question goes before the southern church's presbyteries, or regional governing bodies, for consideration over the next year.

Three-quarters of the southern church's 61 presbyteries must approve the merger, Ms. Carpenter said.

Later this month, the northern church will consider an identical reunion plan at its General Assembly in Hartford, Conn.

Two-thirds of the northern church's 150 presbyteries then must approve.

If the merger is approved by the presbyteries of both churches, the two denominations will meet jointly in Atlanta next year for a final vote on reunion, Ms. Carpenter said.

Christian leaders critical of Israeli military action

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Christian leaders are strongly critical of Israel's deep push into Lebanon and urged strong U.S. action, including sanctions against Israel, to halt the fighting and gain a quick withdrawal.

For the moment, there was little comment from Jewish organizations.

Several church officials sent telegrams to President Reagan, recommending firm steps to bring about an end to fighting and hasten a pullout. Israel announced a cease-fire Friday, but the communique made no reference to withdrawal.

"Israel has clearly transgressed the bounds of legitimate self-defense," said the the presidents of two major Protestant denominations.

In a joint message to Reagan, the Rev. Avery Post of the United Church of Christ and the Rev. Kenneth L. Teegarden of the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) said:

"You have our wholehearted support for the making of firm demands, backed by sanctions, for Israel to immediately stop military action in Lebanon and return its forces to its own territory.'

They and others cited widespread civilian casualites, destruction of medical facilities and food shortages caused in Lebanon, urging an immediate U. S. relief effort, and said churches would help in it.

While supporting the U. S. commitment to defend the existence of Israel, United Presbyterian officials said "that commitment must not be misused to cover such aggressive action against neighboring countries."

The church's chief executive, Willliam P. Thompson and the Rev. J. Oscar McCloud, program director, cited reports that American-made planes were being used in bombings that have killed non-combatant civilians.

The churchmen urged that the U.S. government take steps to "stop present and future use of American arms against the people of Lebanon," provide immediate rehabilitation aid and guarantees of Lebanon's sovereignty.

Two top Roman Catholic leaders, Archbishop John Roach of Minneapolis, president of the national Conference of Catholic Bishops, and Cardinal Terence Cooke of New York, appealed for an immediate cease-fire and Israeli withdrawal.

"The United States, as a major power in the United Nations and as a close ally of Israel, should use its good offices to expedite these two goals," the two said in a joint statement.

United Methodist Bishop James Armstrong, president of the National Council of Churches, including most major Protestant and Eastern Orthodox denominations, wired Reagan:

"Urge you to take strongest measures to achieve immediate cease fire in Lebanon before further death and destruction imposed on that tragic country."

He and others called for new diplomatic initiatives to bring about Israeli-Palestinian negotiations, adding: "Your situation requires bold action unencumbered by formulas of the past."

The council has previously advocated talks with the Palestine Liberation Organization to help resolve the Middle East stalemate, a proposal strongly criticized by American Jewish leaders.

The American Friends Service Committee (Quakers) said the roots of the conflict lay in the failure of Israel and the leadership of the PLO "mutually to recognize each other's rights to national self-determination."

Calling for immediate Israeli withdrawal, the committee said all parties, including the PLO, must be brought into negotiations.

While Jewish leaders generally volunteered no immediate comment, Harold M. Jacobs, president of the National Council of Young Israel, said Israel's intervention came only as "a last resort" against attacks.

It is "in the long run, the only way to save lives," he said, "not only of Israeli citizens in northern settlements under direct attack, but also of Lebanon's own long-suffering citizens.

"As long as there is a PLO military presence in Lebanon, Lebanon can never regain its status as a free and independent country."

Outgoing Baptist head cautions church

HOUSTON (AP) — The outgoing president of the Southern Baptist Convention says born-again Christians are the only Christians on earth and cautioned that the "social gospel" of liberal denomimations has done little for humanity.

The Rev. Bailey E. Smith, a fundamentalist preacher from Del City, Okla., made the comment in an advance text of his farewell address to the convention.

Copies of the speech Smith is scheduled to give in New Orleans when he steps down June 17 were obtained and distributed by Southern Baptist moderates. Parts of the text were published in Wednesday's Houston Chronicle.

"We will not escape the deadness of the so-called social gospel that has done very little good for society and has no gospel. They speak of race relations, world hunger, temperance and human ethics, but it has alway been the evangelistic Bible-honoring church that has opened its doors to all races and put food on the table of the hungry.

"No one in hell is glad that he went to a liberal church," the speech said.

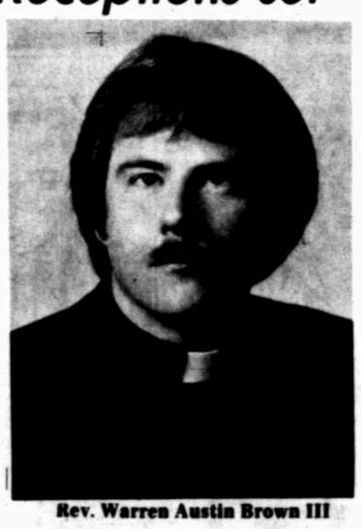
Smith, who once said God does not hear the prayers of a Jew, also insisted there is only one kind of Christian in the world and that it is "inexcusable" for Southern Baptists to be a humanist, teach evolution or say the Book of Genesis is not fact.

"There is only one kind of Christian on Earth and that is born-again Christian. If you have not been born again, you are not a Christian ...," the speech said. "A person without Jesus Christ is one heartbeat from eternal hell."

He also chastised Southern Baptists who have strayed from the conservative line.

"It is inexcusable for a Southern Baptist to say he is a humanist and proud of it. It is inexcusable for Southern Baptists to pray for the opening of a brewery," the speech said.

Former Midlander ordained to priesthood; Receptions set



Rev. Warren Austin Brown III

Warren Austin Brown III, a resident of Midland since 1959 and a member of St. Ann's Catholic Parish, was ordained to the priesthood Friday. He will celebrate a Mass of Thanksgiving at 9 a.m. Sunday at St. Ann's. Receptions will follow both Masses.

Brown, the son of Warren Jr. and Mary Frances Brown of Midland, attended St. Ann's School before entering St. Anthony High School Seminary in San Antonio in 1969, graduating in 1973. Following a year and a half at the University of Dallas at Irving and a semester of studies at their Rome campus, Brown completed his undergraduate degree at the University of Texas at Austin, where he graduated with honors in 1977 with a bachelor of arts degree in government.

His theological studies were obtained at Oblate School of Theology at San Antonio. During the past year he has been serving his internship at St. John's Parish in San Juan. Brown will return to San Juan following his ordination.

Brown is a member of the religious order of the Oblates of Mary Immaculate, who have served St. Ann's since 1933. Though not the first Oblate to be ordained from Midland, he was the first one ordained at St. Ann's.

Midlanders attend handbell festival, perform concerts in the Netherlands

Members of First Presbyterian Church Ladies Handbell Choir augmented by members of the First Methodist Church Adult Handbell Choir recently attended the first International Handbell Festival in the Netherlands.

Directed by Donald E. Allured, conductor and composer of handbell music, 50 handbell ringers from throughout the United States toured Holland, Belgium and Germany, playing several concerts in cathedrals in Holland.

The outstanding program presented was at the Memorial Day services honoring American World War II dead at the Netherlands American cemetery outside Margraten, where the group witnessed Queen Beatrice of the Netherlands place a wreath on the tomb of the American Unknown Soldier. The 1982 services were especially significant because they marked the 200th anniversary of unbroken Dutch-American friendship and commerce.

The Midland group was prepared and directed by Tom Roberts, director of music at First Presbyterian Church. Members of the group included Marian Reeder, Susie Roberts, Faye Smith, Marinelle Dreeman, Jane Ward, Doris Chalfant, Monta Jo Johnson, Betty Sappington and Marge Thompson.

The Newspaper BIBLE

YOU HAVE TO DIE IN ORDER TO LIVE

When you came to Christ he set you free from your evil desires, not by a bodily operation of circumcision but by a spiritual operation, the baptism of your souls. For in baptism you see how your old, evil nature died with him and was buried with him; and then you came up out of death with him into a new life because you trusted the Word of the mighty God who raised Christ from the dead. (Colossians 2:11-12)

Since you became alive again, so to speak, when Christ arose from the dead, now set your sights on the rich treasures and joys of heaven where he sits beside God in the place of honor and power. Let heaven fill your thoughts; don't spend your time worrying about things down here. You should have as little desire for this world as a dead person does. Your real life is in heaven with Christ and God. And when Christ who is our real life comes back again, you will shine with him and share in all his glories. (Colossians 3:1-4)

Should we keep on sinning when we don't have to? For sin's power over us was broken when we became Christians and were baptized to become a part of Jesus Christ; through His death the power of your sinful nature was shattered. Your old sin-loving nature was buried with Him by baptism when He died, and when God the Father, with glorious power, brought Him back to life again, you were given His wonderful new life to enjoy. (Romans 6:2-4)

'Ministry in Sexuality' begins

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — In an unusual appointment among United Methodist clergy this spring, the Rev. J. Benjamin Roe was named to a "Ministry in Human Sexuality."

As head of an agency of that name providing education, consultation and counseling services, he says "my ministry tries to respond to people who need to hear some good news about sexuality."

He says the 12 percent of Americans who are "highly spiritually committed" are happier, more community-minded, their families stronger and are more tolerant of people of different races and religions.

Pontiff's plays published in Italy

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Two plays written by Pope John Paul II as a young man in the 1950's have been published in Italian by the Vatican publishing house.

One of them, "Brother of God," deals with a 19th century Polish artist who gave up painting to devote his life to evangelization. The other, "Rays of Paternity" portrays a man's discovery of love and self-fulfillment through his relationship with his son.

Poll indicates 'spiritual quest'

NEW YORK (AP) — Pollster George Gallup says a "spiritual quest of fast-growing proportions" is under way in the country, but most Americans haven't integrated faith into their lives.

He told the annual meeting of the American Bible Society that survey data indicate that "the final two decades of the 20th century could be a period of profound religious renewal in our society."

A "key challenge" of religion today, he said, "is to move the populace to deeper levels of spiritual commitment."

Christian Science leaders gather

Christian Scientists from the United States and foreign countries heard the church's leaders appeal June 7 for greater attention to spiritual courage in the face of the world's present dangers.

"We face threats of conflict and the brutality of conflict," acknowledged Michael B. Thorneloe, chairman of the Christian Science Board of Directors at the denomination's 87th annual meeting in Boston.

"There is a great yearning throughout the world for the elimination of nuclear dangers. The only answer to this yearning comes from an understanding of God and divine power. It unfailingly guides thought and action toward solutions not yet seen," Thorneloe stated.

Several thousand members of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston were present for the meeting which included three inspirational sessions as well as reports by church officers on the group's publishing, membership and informational activities. The church was reported free of debt and details were given of expanding "secondary" use of its newspaper, "The Christian Science Monitor," through print and radio syndication and in a television news format test program.

Thorneloe told members, "Christendom has its work cut out for it in these times. And Christian Scientists must do their part with courage, wisdom and much love."

'June Allyson' offers different view of actress

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — During her heyday in movies, June Allyson was the perfect picture of the happy, persevering wife, and she seemed to play the same role in her marriage to Dick Powell.

A different view is offered in "June Allyson" (Putnam, $14.95), written by the actress with Frances Spatz Leighton. The Powell-Allyson union had its joyful times, but it was also marked by tensions that helped send her into a brief, apparently platonic romance with Alan Ladd. She writes that Ladd left his wife, Sue Carol, because of it.

ENTERTAINMENT

"I had been warned about working with Alan Ladd," says Miss Allyson of their co-starring in "The McConnell Story." "Sue, Alan's wife, was also his agent and manager and never left the camera area, I was told. She watched every scene and every shot — and all shots had to favor Alan, even to the detriment of his leading lady.... And then I was given the final warning: Alan was a very cold and distant man, they said."

She learned at the outset that Mrs. Ladd did indeed keep a watchful eye on how her husband was handled. But he wasn't cold and distant, Miss Allyson found. Just scared, like her.

The co-stars became soulmates, and their close association began making the gossip columns. Sue called Dick Powell: "Don't you know that Alan is in love with your wife June?" Answered Powell: "Isn't everyone?" He shrugged off the rumors until they became too persistent.

Confronted by Powell, June admitted she loved Ladd though she wasn't having an "affair." She also loved her husband "only you're always going away without me and you never come home from the office and you haven't any time for me." The Powells patched up their marriage, Ladd went into a decline and almost died from a gun wound that was described as accidental.

The Ladd saga is the juiciest of "June Allyson," basically a sad story about a poor, neglected girl whose buoyant personality made her the girl that World War II G.I.'s wanted to come home to.

In her new book, "June Allyson," written with Frances Spatz Leighton, Miss Allyson reveals that her on-screen image of the satisfied wife often was not the way of her own life.

E.T.: Childlike but not childish

By CAROL OLTEN
Copley News Service

The E.T. of Steven Spielberg's remarkable "E.T. The Extra-Terrestrial" has curious, rolling blue eyes and its body resembles what a two-legged turtle would look like if the reptile were suddenly shell-less.

Shuffling around in our suburban "alien" world, it's immediately lovable — like an ugly teddy bear or space muppet.

With harmless gestures and semi-discernible dialogue, E.T. communicates with earthlings, especially kids, who become his friends. He, or more precisely it, has magical powers, causing toys to defy gravity and bicycles to fly.

But the extra-terrestrial takes advantage of earthly pleasures, too, raiding the frig, watching TV and drinking beer. It is not without taste, for it knows that potato salad laced with additives is not what it wants for lunch.

E.T. is intelligent and, at long last, is a space creature only the stupid, bad forces on earth view as a menace.

There's a luminous, uplifting quality to this movie, which is childlike and innocent without being childish. It radiates good vibes. Children oriented in the fantasy hardware of spaceships in hyperdrive should find "E.T." an entertaining adventure that deviates a bit from the normal movie display of high-tech special effects. Adults, oriented to the same space fantasies, may best appreciate the movie for its gentle awe of alien life and its often sharp sense of fun.

Like "Poltergeist," the other summer Spielberg movie already playing here, "E.T." uses the turf of American middle-class suburbia as the setting for its story. Unlike "Poltergeist," however, there is little frightening here, beyond the worry of what some trash earthlings might do to harm the creature.

"E.T." opens with a spaceship lifting from a richly forested area one dark night in a glowing light that is reminiscent of Spielberg's "Close Encounters of the Third Kind." In the haste of departure one of them does not make it back on board. It's E.T., who soon finds shelter in a shed behind the tract home of the Taylors — Mary, a recently separated mother, and her three children, Elliott, 10, Michael, 16, and Gertie, 6. The Taylors also have a friendly brown dog — the same canine that figured prominently in "Poltergeist."

Elliott is played by young Henry Thomas who, with his experience in "Raggedy Man," is becoming one of the most talented child stars now working in films.

The boy finds E.T. in the shed when he arrives home one night with a take-out pizza. Fearing his mother will become annoyed by having an alien move in, Elliott smuggles the creature into his room and begins to communicate with it and take care of it. His brother and sister soon become accomplices in seeing to E.T.'s survival.

Shortly, the movie spins into a story of E.T. and the kids of the neighborhood against the establishment of parents, police, government exterminators and a particularly nasty group of doctors and scientists.

"E.T." is rich in sci-fi movie references, not the least of which is a Halloween night scene in which kids costumed as space creatures, including Yoda, populate the suburban streets.

"E.T." has a good chance of becoming the brightest movie of the summer as well as a coup for Spielberg, who directed and co-produced (with Kathleen Kennedy).

Besides Thomas, the laudable cast includes Dee Wallace as Mrs. Taylor, Robert MacNaughton as Michael, Drew Barrymore as Gertie and Peter Coyote as Keys, a prominent scientist.

"E.T." is rated PG.

Columnist finds 'moving finger' writes, points

RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — "Where do you think is the best place for a columnist to live?"

The question from the floor, after my recent speech to an only mildly hostile audience, still haunts me. I forget what my answer was then — probably "right here in this lovely little ol' town" to pander to a fractious public — but I lie awake at nights contriving a better one.

When asked essentially the same question, William Faulkner answered, "The best job that was ever offered to me was to become a landlord in a brothel. In my opinion it's the perfect milieu for an artist to work in.... The place is quiet during the morning hours, which is the best time of the day to work. There's enough social life in the evening, if he wishes to participate to keep him from being bored.... He has nothing to do because the madam keeps the books. All the inmates of the house are females and would defer to him and call him 'sir.' All the bootleggers in the neighborhood would call him 'sir.' And he would call all the police by their first name. So the only environment the writer needs is whatever peace, whatever solitude and whatever pleasure he can get at not too high a cost."

The way the mail has been going lately, I don't know whether to hie myself to a bomb shelter, a bee-loud glade, a wayside shrine or the laughing academy. In their writing, the readers have been threatening, poetic, adoring and concerned about my sanity.

After my making fun of Sherlock Holmes in a column about a pub named for him in London, a Midwestern Sherlockian society, Hugh's Companions, invited me to their annual dinner in Chicago celebrating the great detective's alleged birthday.

"We could disguise you as a non-conformist clergyman, or a rakish hostler, or even a plumber, to insure that no member of the H-C (named for Sir Hugo Baskerville) would seek redress for the dubious and questionable statements in your now infamous article," the H-C secretary suggested in his invitation.

Having no appetite for way-out mushrooms, consomme of gila monster and other lethal hors d'oeuvres that might be fun features at a Holmesian banquet, I declined the honor. Any day now I expect to receive five orange pips in the post.

Michael Loving, who from his letterhead apparently toils for the McCann-Erickson flackery in Atlanta, Ga., aims a satirical dart at my effrontery (or somewhere in that neighborhood) in attacking the nudity and simulated sex in the TV version of Evelyn Waugh's "Brideshead Revisited."

"Sorry to hear you find the human body so disgusting. I, myself, often take a shower with my eyes closed."

I fear, however, it is Mr. Loving who is naked before his enemies. That column produced nearly 100 letters, all of them, except his, supporting my outrage at TV dirtying up a classic to pander to the prurient.

Typical of the torrent against tastless television was this comment from Mrs. John Kucich, a reader right here in Ridgefield, whom I have never met: "Congratulations and thank you.... For a very long time I have felt, to quote you, that 'the hills around our pantheon of the arts are alive with a heap of rubbish.' As a parent of two teen-agers I feel like a commanding general in the army, constantly watching, planning, maneuvering to outwit the forces trying to destroy the family relationship, my children's bodies, minds and futures.... The media and the arts, in my opinion, have contributed many pressures teen-agers feel today."

Hostile and friendly fire erupted when I suggested that Johnnie can't write since he doesn't read, and that he is praised by trendy teachers for writing nonsense poems when he doesn't even know what a poem is.

Young readers swarmed around these hoary locks like angry hornets.

"I think you underestimate the judgment and intelligence of most young people," wrote Julia Miele, editor of the literary magazine at a high school in Nyack, N.Y. She who reminded me that Shakespeare left school at 14. "Our teachers, for the most part, do a more than adequate job of teaching us. A student will never be interested in something that is shoved down his throat."

The last thrust was in retaliation for my suggestion that children be required to memorize poems, since they have the mental equipment to endlessly playback TV jingles, comedy routines, rock music lyrics and sports numbers.

"As for TV jingles and sports statistics," asks John Storlie Jr. of Madison, Wis., "are not these effective means of communicating information? We live in a fast-paced, technological society where the bottom line reads SELL. I've seen 10- and 12-year-old boys so adept at relating batting averages they sounded like NASA engineers preparing for Columbia's launch.... Many scientific and engineering positions demand only the ability to communicate scientific data in a concise and logical manner." To prove kids can write, sixth-grader Michelle Alford in Fort Walton Beach, Fla., sent an original short story. Wish there was space to run it.

The majority of the correspondents on this issue would seem to agree with Peggy Yaw, a proofreader-copy editor on the Logan Daily News in Ohio.

"Our paper is old — established in 1863," she writes. "If you dig back in the files you can find beautiful writing by people who never went to college. I am old too — 68 — but when I was in high school I was required to read the classics and, best of all, write a theme every weekend, in addition to numerous shorter pieces every day. Where did it all go? Anyhow, I just wanted to tell you how much I admire your work and to say don't ever quit!"

Among the barbs and the posies, Geraldine Murphy of Corbin, Ky., writes to say that at St. Camillus Academy, Mulligan's Stew columns "grace the bulletin board in the room in which I teach English literature and I share them with my students...thank you again for marvelous reading."

Who said the schools are going to hell in a trash basket? Guess it was I. Well, at least I didn't say "me" and provoke another avalanche of abuse.

The way the mail has been going, I don't know whether to hie myself to a bomb shelter, a bee-loud glade, a wayside shrine or the laughing academy. In their writing, the readers have been threatening, poetic, adoring and concerned about my sanity.

Christopher Rubenstein, 2 1/2, hangs back a little as his mother, Mrs. Edward Rubenstein of Devon, Pa., tries to coax him to feed the elephants that are with the Ringling Bros., Barnum and Bailey circus. The circus was in Philadelphia for a 12-day stint. Christopher refused to be coaxed.

Play about Mao applauded

By PHIL BROWN

PEKING (AP) — When we last looked in, Defense Minister Lin Piao was declaring dramatically his plan to seize power from Chairman Mao Tse-tung.

As we rejoin the action, the plotters, led by Lin's son, Lin Liguo, are at work on how to deal with Mao.

This is part two of "The Sept. 13 Incident," a play named after the date in 1971 when Lin Piao reportedly died in a plane crash in Mongolia while trying to flee after his plot against Mao failed.

There are no surprises in the work. It ends with photographs of airplane wreckage and bodies — purportedly those of Lin, his wife and son — being flashed on a screen,

Perhaps the greatest interest focuses on the portrayal of Mao, long revered as the "Great Helmsman" who led the Communist Party to victory and founded the People's Republic of China in 1949.

PUBLISHED CHINESE comment on the play has applauded its boldness in bringing major, and sometimes controversial, figures to the stage so soon after actual events.

And comment assembled from prominent viewers by the air force drama troupe that performs the play is generally favorable, with some reservations about the accuracy of Mao's accent and some of his mannerisms.

"It makes people feel that Chairman Mao is a man, not a god," says one comment included in a report by the troupe.

The play also is praised for treating Mao in accordance with the verdict of a major Communist Party meeting last June. That verdict praised his contributions to the revolution, but found him guilty of mistakes in his later years, including the launching of the chaotic 1966-76 "Cultural Revolution," which turned into a decade of purges and factional fighting.

The play does not dwell on his mistakes. But there is an awkward scene in which a Peking Opera star, long persecuted and kept off stage by the policies of Mao's wife, Jiang Qing, drops a sword while dancing for Mao and apologizes for being out of practice. Mao asks why she is.

As she leaves, she asks, "How long is this Cultural Revolution going to go on?" Mao has no answer.

IN FACT, the party verdict on Mao had not been announced when part one of the play went on stage in late 1980.

But Jiang Qing, who has a major role in Part 1, and several of the other characters in the play actually were on trial then. Jiang Qing was convicted of frame-ups and persecutions and given a suspended death sentence.

Her co-defendants from the leftist radical "Gang of Four" also were imprisoned, along with five generals accused of plotting with Lin Piao to kill Mao.

Part 1 covers the period from early in the Cultural Revolution up to a party conference in September 1970 where Lin failed in efforts to have himself named China's president.

Mao's role in Part 1 was small, although then, as in Part 2, people in the audience murmured "what a resemblance" when the Mao character came on.

In Part 2, he is given a scene where he mourns the death of his second wife (Jiang Qing was his fourth) at the hands of Nationalist Chinese authorities years earlier, and the death of a son in the 1950-53 Korean War.

HE ALSO complains about Lin Piao, who declares that every sentence of Mao's is worth 10,000 sentences, but doesn't listen to even one.

Mao asks two woman attendants what is on their minds. One wants a pay raise, and the other wants to have a baby boy.

Published Chinese comment on the play has applauded its boldness in bringing major, and sometimes controversial, figures to the stage so soon after actual events...Comment is generally favorable, with some reservations about the accuracy of Mao's accent and some of his mannerisms.

This scene, intended as part of the effort to humanize Mao, has been criticized on grounds that Mao's staff would not have raised such matters in his presence.

Part 2, with 27 scenes, runs just over two hours and is accompanied by electronic music, sometimes somber, sometimes sinister.

Mao is played by Wang Ren, 50, a veteran actor who studied historical material and films of Mao, and reportedly practiced Mao's accent, from southern China's Hunan Province, until his throat became inflamed.

Bo Guanqun, 40, plays premier Chou En-lai as a man persisting in hard work despite serious illness. Chou died in January 1976, eight months before Mao.

The actors who have met Lin himself can't help exclaiming in surprise: 'It's him.' "

Sheik's park donation has conditions

SOUTH PASADENA, Fla. (AP) — A rich Arab sheik has agreed to donate a park to the city of South Pasadena, but he's set a few conditions.

Vice Mayor Arno Liebman said Sheik Mohammed Al-Fassi agreed to donate a park if the city:

—Extends an official invitation to Al-Fassi.

—Names the park Al-Fassi.

—Names a street Al-Fassi.

—Names a room in City Hall Al-Fassi.

—Proclaims an Al-Fassi Day.

—Grants the sheik honorary citizenship and a key to the city.

—Supplies him with seven escorted limos when he arrives to formally donate the park.

—Picks up the tab for advance men at the posh Don CeSar Beach Resort Hotel.

—And provides a news conference, airport clearance for his jet and plaques for presentation to him and his family.

The city has several pieces of property under consideration for parks. Officials say the sites could be converted for $725,000 to $1.1 million.

The City of Opa-Locka, a suburb of Miami, has agreed to name a weed-covered empty lot across from City Hall "Dr. Sheik Mohammed Al-Fassi Square" in exchange for $30,000 to beautify the city.

Al-Fassi has been sued by his estranged wife, Sheika Dena Al-Fassi, for $3 billion. He caused a stir in California when he erected nude statues on the lawn of his Beverly Hills mansion and painted them green.

Weird coupon taken seriously

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — To a used-car dealer's surprise, a couple redeemed his one-of-a-kind coupon.

As an advertising gimmick, "Weird" Wally Smith had a billboard painted like a coupon offering a free used car.

Jackie Bower and her brother, Jack Warne, dismantled the sign hours after it was put up Wednesday, loaded it on top of their van and took it to Smith's car lot Thursday morning.

Mississippi mayor's role hard to define

By RON HARRIST

TCHULA, Miss. (AP) — In this impoverished Mississippi Delta town, former mayor Eddie Carthan stands either as an oppressed black man who champions racial justice or a frustrated power broker with only a handful of followers.

It depends on who you ask about Carthan, the first black mayor in a community where 80 percent of the people are black and nearly one-third are unemployed.

For four years, he was embroiled in a constant battle with his city board and what he calls the white power structure. He ended up with state and federal convictions and jail terms totaling six years.

Although out of office, he's still fighting, this time in a battle that has involved the United Methodist Church and members of its local churches in this cotton-farming area of west-central Mississippi.

In the latest controversy, the 32-year-old Carthan stands accused of hiring two men to kill one of his political opponents, Roosevelt Granderson, a popular black alderman and local high school basketball coach.

Granderson was shot to death last summer during a robbery at a convenience store where he worked part time. One of the gunman pleaded guilty, the second disappeared.

Out of jail pending appeals, Carthan has traveled the country raising money for his defense and claiming racism is at the bottom of his problems.

"The fact is, we're fighting today against the same kind of trickery and tactics that were used to get blacks out of office over a hundred years ago and the same injustices that sent us out on the streets in the 1960s," Carthan says.

His local supporters brought the case to the United Methodist Church which, through its national ministries division, donated $13,000 to Carthan's defense fund.

That donation has angered local white United Methodist churches. The Mississippi Methodist Conference has called for a church investigation into the gift and has sought a halt to any future donations.

The Rev. Dudley Brown, a spokesman for seven white churches in Holmes County, said the ministries division of the national church had treated them like a "bunch of sold-out bigots."

Carthan has been a controversial figure since he was elected mayor of Tchula — pronounced chew'-la — in 1977.

Problems arose after a three-member board majority composed of Granderson, another black and the board's one white alderman aligned against him.

The three charged repeatedly that Carthan tampered with town records, made unauthorized payments from city funds and ignored the wishes of the majority. At one point, the aldermen locked Carthan out of city hall for eight weeks.

"He was a dictator who thought he could veto the decisions of the majority and then do what he wanted," said one white official who asked to not be identified. "When things didn't go to suit him, he'd just scream race."

Carthan and his supporters see his problems as an effort by white landowners and businessmen in Holmes County to keep blacks dependent on white plantation owners for jobs. They contend the "white power structure" discredited Carthan to keep him from attracting new industry in a town where cotton and soybean farms provide most of the jobs.

Carthan's opponents say he abused his office and mismanaged programs that could have helped the community. Rather than bringing in promised jobs, his administration soured the federal government on offering help in the future, they claim.

But Carthan says whites opposed him because "I'm black and because I refused to become their little boy and go to them to get decisions and instructions."

There were also his troubles with the law.

In May 1981, Carthan was sentenced to three years in prison on a charge of assaulting a white policeman in a dispute over who should become police chief.

In February, Carthan drew a three-year prison term and a $5,000 fine on a federal court conviction of making false statements on a friend's loan application. Both sentences are being appealed.

In April, Carthan was charged in connection with Granderson's death. He goes on trial in October.

B.T. Taylor Sr., a white who is a member of the governing Holmes County Board of Supervisors, says Carthan's claims that he is a victim of racism and persecution is "the biggest lie that has ever been told."

Since leaving office, Carthan, a church deacon, says he has been forced to sell the several convenience stores he owns to pay his legal bills.

He said that if "the law is based on what's right, the evidence and the facts, I know beyond any shadow of a doubt I'll be vindicated. But if it's based on politics, then I'm in trouble."

Carthan resigned shortly before his term ended and didn't run for re-election in 1981. He was succeeded by former mayor Lester L. Lyon, who is white. Carthan says disgusted blacks, despite their voting majority, did not turn out at the polls to support black candidates.

Former Tchula, Miss., mayor Eddie Carthan already faces six years in prison for prior conviction and now faces a capital murder charge in the death of Tchula alderman Roosevelt Granderson. Carthan also has become embroiled in a religious controversy connected with donations to his legal defense fund.

Delta area becoming black-majority area

OXFORD, Miss. (AP) — The Delta area of Mississippi will become the seat of a black-majority congressional district under a court-approved reapportionment plan.

A three-judge federal appeals court approved the new 2nd District in west-central Mississippi on Wednesday, and it will remain in effect unless the state Legislature can come up with a plan that meets Justice Department approval.

The Legislature's original plan was challenged as unfairly diluting black voting strength. The judges also set Aug. 17 as the date for primary elections in the state's five congressional districts.

Mississippi has not elected a black congressman since the post-Civil War Reconstruction era.

Holmes knocks out Cooney in 13th to retain title

San Diego topples Astros, 6-2

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Luis Salazar hit a three-run homer and knocked in four runs to back the combined six-hit pitching of Tim Lollar and Gary Lucas as the San Diego Padres posted a 6-2 victory over the Houston Astros Friday night.

Lollar, now a surprising 6-1, went eight innings, allowing one earned run on five hits, while walking two and striking out six. Lucas pitched the ninth.

Houston starter Don Sutton, 7-3, allowed all six Padres runs.

With one out in the fifth, Sutton walked Sixto Lezcano and Terry Kennedy followed with a sharp single to right. Salazar then hit his third home run of the season on Sutton's first pitch to erase Houston's 2-0 lead.

Houston scored an unearned run in the fourth to take a 1-0 lead. Alan Knicely singled, moved to second on Kiko Garcia's sacrifice and scored when third baseman Salazar threw away Luis Pujols' grounder.

In the fifth, Scott Loucks singled, moved to second on a balk by Lollar and scored on Phil Garner's single.

The Padres put the game away in the seventh with three runs. Lezcano opened with a walk and Kennedy doubled him to third. Salazar followed with an RBI single to center which chased Sutton and put runners on first and third.

WBC heavyweight champion Larry Holmes rocks Gerry Cooney with right early in Las Vegas fight.

Champ still king of hill

By ED SCHUYLER JR.

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Larry Holmes knocked down Gerry Cooney in the second round, almost knocked him out of the ring in the sixth and battered him into submission in the 13th to retain the World Boxing Council heavyweight championship Friday night.

In the 13th, Holmes landed nine straight right hands to Cooney, then an uppercut. Then he landed several more shots to the head as Cooney reeled back to the ropes and began to fall, keeping himself from going completely down when he caught a strand of the ropes.

Then referee Mills Lane stopped it as Cooney's trainer, Victor Valle, jumped into the ring.

IT WAS a fight that had everything, drama and power throughout.

In the ninth round, after a hard right to the head by Holmes, Cooney landed a hard punch that bent the champion over.

Lane then stopped the bout for about a minute to give the champion time to recover and deducted two points from the challenger.

Lane, who warned Cooney several times for punching low, deducted another point in the 11th round.

After Holmes landed several good right hands, including two before the bell ending the 12th, the 32-year-old champion, who has risen to the occasion so many times in an unbeaten 40-bout career, ended it at 2:52 of the 13th.

FOR A BRIEF moment in the second, it looked as if Cooney would be the victim of an early knockout.

After a jab and an overhand right to the jaw by Holmes, Cooney fell to his knee and then fell over. He quickly got up and took a mandatory eight count.

But the power-punching Cooney rallied in the third and fourth rounds, scoring well to the body and shaking Holmes with a hook in the fourth.

Holmes, who opened a cut over Cooney's left eye and a cut on his nose, scored with three good rights and a good 1-2 in the fifth, then almost ended it in the next round.

IN THE SIXTH, Holmes landed a right-left that had the challenger wobbly and as he went backwards after more punches, he almost fell through the ropes.

But the 25-year-old Cooney fought back in the final 30 seconds.

"Larry Holmes wants to win this fight even more than when he won the championship," said Holmes' trainer, Eddie Futch.

And Holmes certainly fought that way, using all the skills he built in a career that started in 1973 and included stints as sparring partner with Joe Frazier and Muhammad Ali.

"A typical opponent is one that hits and doesn't move well," said Futch.

HOLMES HIT and he moved well although he got caught several times by body punches.

"I'm not a big bag hanging from a chain," Holmes said before the fight. "I will fight Cooney like he is King Kong."

And that's how Holmes fought Cooney, with respect for the challenger's power that had knocked out 22 opponents in 25 fights.

But this time it was the 6-foot-7 Cooney who couldn't go the distance and, moments after the bout was stopped, he said over the public address system from center ring, "I'm sorry, I'm sorry."

He was crying.

It was Cooney's first fight in 13 months and the first time he had ever gone more than eight rounds, and the challenger from Huntington, N.Y., appeared tired after the 12th round.

MANY BOXING observers had given Cooney a big chance of winning after Holmes was knocked down by a single punch by Renaldo Snipes in the seventh round of his previous defense Nov.7, 1981. Holmes got up from that punch and stopped Snipes.

On this hot night in this desert gambling den, before a near-sellout crowd of 32,500 in an outdoor stadium, Holmes never appeared in danger of going down and he was not marked. He showed once again he could take a heck of a wallop.

The majority of the crowd seemed to be rooting for Cooney. There has been a racial undertone to this fight ever since it was announced.

Cooney and his managers said they thought Holmes might be a racist but the champion scoffed at those charges. However, he freely admitted that he thought Cooney made his way quickly up boxing's ladder because he is white.

The last white heavyweight champion was Ingemar Johansson of Sweden, who knocked out Floyd Patterson on June 26, 1959, and lost the title back on June 29, 1960, to Patterson.

COONEY ALSO was the glamour boy in this fight. His picture was on the front of Sports Illustrated, while Holmes was on the underfold.

Time magazine came out with a cover that featured Cooney and Sylvester Stallone, who gained fame as the movie fighter "Rocky."

Several times before the fight, Holmes said, "If I win, they'll say he couldn't fight."

Nobody is going to say Gerry Cooney can't fight any more. He answered questions in this fight that he left unanswered in many of his quick victories, showing heart and stamina and fighting splendidly.

HE WAS the kind of opponent that surely will bring Holmes the kind of recognition he has been seeking in the four years he has been champion. Holmes won the WBC title here on a split decision over Ken Norton on June 9, 1978.

Holmes gave away seven years in age and 4 inches in height, and at 212½ he was 13 pounds lighter than the challenger.

But he had a tremendous edge in experience and he used that edge to cut down Cooney.

At the end of 12 rounds, all three judges had Holmes ahead in what would turn out to be the richest fight in boxing history. The promoters have said the gross could top $50 million and each boxer could make $10 million.

The scoring of judge Duane Ford had it 113-111. Dave Moretti had it the same and Jerry Roth had it 115-109.

WITHOUT the three penalty points, however, Cooney actually would have been ahead on the cards of Ford and Moretti.

Dodgers post 8-5 victory over Cubs

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

San Antonio jumped on Midland starting pitcher Carlos Gil to build up a 6-2 lead after three innings and then went on to post an 8-5 Texas League victory Friday night at Cubs Stadium.

The Dodgers' attack began with the first two batters they sent to the plate, Lemmie Miller and Mark Sheehy who set up a first and third situation with a pair of singles. The Cubs got Tom Beyers to ground out, but allowed Miller to score in the process.

Tony Brewer connected for San Antonio's first of five doubles on the night which brought Sheehy home and then came home himself when Scot Madison grounded out to second baseman Bruce Chaney.

Despite trailing 3-0, the Cubs were able to take advantage of a San Antonio error (like the doubles, the first of five) to cut the lead to 3-2. With one gone, Fierro reached first via a walk. He would have been forced out at second if shortstop Alex Tavarez' throw hadn't been wild. Tavarez made an excellent diving play to get to the ball that Henry Cotto hit to his right but, on the throw from his knees, his throw was wide and ended up in right field. Fierro went on to third and Cotto stopped at second.

Fritz Connally followed with his only hit of the night as a designated hitter, a position he's playing because of an injury he suffered earlier in the week. His two-run single went into left-center and the Cubs were down by only one.

Two innings later the Dodger knocked Gill off the mound. Sheehy led off with a double to center and one out later Brewer hit an RBI single to center and Amalung brought Brewer home with his double to right field. Gil walked Madison to put runners at first and second and got German Rivera to hit a grounder to shortstop Dave Owen who forced out Amalung at third with his throw to Fierro. Alex Tavarez got the third double of the inning to score Madison and Gil left the mound for reliever Ken Pryce who got the final out of the inning.

"You should have seen the smile on Tony's face. It was unbelievable, just like someone turned on a light. When Tony saw him, he just smiled and smiled and smiled." — Sal Conigliaro, father of Tony Conigliaro, the former baseball player who was in a coma for 15 days, following a visit from Al Davis, boss of pro football's Oakland Raiders.

Verplank wins Texas Am

LUFKIN, Texas (AP) — Seventeen-year-old Scott Verplank fired a four-under-par 68 Friday to take the second-day lead at the Texas Men's Amateur Golf Championship at the Crown Colony Country Club.

Verplank, who graduated from W.T. White High School in Dallas two weeks ago and plans to play golf for Oklahoma State University, had a two-day total of 140 for a one-stroke lead over John Slaughter of Abilene.

Slaughter, a University of Houston golfer, had led by two strokes after Thursday's first round.

Texas A&M golfer Jacky Lee of Houston was in third at 143, followed by Todd Mavis of Houston in fourth at 144 and defending champion Mark Brooks in fifth at 145.

College Series

Shockers expel Longhorns, 8-4

By TOM VINT

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Russ Morman and Dave Lucas drove in two runs each as second-ranked Wichita State used a 6-run third inning to eliminate No. 1-ranked Texas 8-4 in semifinal action at the College World Series Friday night.

The victory moves the 73-13 Shockers into Saturday's contest against the winner of Friday's late game with Maine meeting tournament-unbeaten Miami. Should Miami win Friday night, a Saturday victory for the Hurricanes would be for the NCAA Divisioln I kbaseball title.

WICHITA STATE, having lost to Texas by scores of 2-0 and 12-0 early in the season, jumped on the Longhorns early. Loren Hibbs singled, stole second in the first, then scored on a Phil Stephenson single. Texas bounced in front in the bottom of the first on a 2-run single by catcher Jeff Hearron.

The Shockers then exploded for six runs in the third as Morman lofted his 23rd homer of the season with one man on. Jim Spring followed one out later with a single and Mark Grogan and Tim Gaskell walked to load the bases for shortstop Lucas. Lucas slapped a single to left to score two more runs. Jim Thomas then singled off reliever Mike Konderla to bring home the fifth run.

HIBBS, BATTING for the second time in the inning, then loaded the bases as his ground ball was mishandled at third base. Stephenson walked on five pitches to bring home the sixth run before Morman struck out with the bases loaded to end the inning.

Texas scratched back within three runs with Tracy Dophied scoring in the third and Mike Livermore scoring in the fourth, but the Shockers' Bryan Oelkers slammed the door thereafter.

Oelkers, improving his record to 18-2 on the season, scattered three hits over the last five innings to send Texas home with a 59-6 record.

Penny Hughes...waits for putt to drop.

By CHAD PUERLING
Sports Writer

Penny Hughes' hometown name describes how things went for the former Texas A&M player. She came 'far' and played 'well' in winning the 47th annual Women's West Texas golf tournament Friday.

Hughes never completed the 5,439 yard, par 69.7 course, as she took only sixteen holes to score her 3-2 victory over Juanita Jones of Amarillo. She hails from Farwell, near the New Mexico border.

Hughes added the Championship flight trophy to her team trophy, which she won in qualifying, with her mother and partner Sharron Hughes. Penny was the No. 3 seed in the championship bracket while Jones was second seeded and was the senior medalist.

Ann Coombs, of the national champion Midland College team, won the consolation bracket of the Championship flight with a 2-1 victory over Luisa Searls of Odessa.

In the First flight, Odessa's June Moore defeated LaNell Guelker of Andrews, 2-up. But it was the consolation bracket that held the interest of most Midlanders because there were two Midlanders vying for the title. And despite playing on her home course, Jo Dickson lost to Margaret Vann, of Green Tree Country Club, 2-1.

ANOTHER MIDLANDER, Marion Spears, was the only Tall City entrant to make a finals draw. She had a chance to take the Second flight crown but lost a close 1-up match to Nancy Swan of Odessa.

Charlotte Marburger was the second GTCC member to win a consolation bracket as she defeated Ruby Holmes of Amarillo 1-up in the Second flight.

Johnnie Rowoldt has the distiction of being the only No. 1 seeded player to win a division title. The San Angeloan took a 3-2 victory over Sammie Espy of Sonora for the Fourth flight championship. Diana Bowser won the consolation bracket 4-3 over Verdell Hicks of Lubbock.

In the Third flight it was Marie Dean of Amarillo, 1-up over Carol Fraley of San Angelo for the championship. Bobbye Pritchard of Odessa lost the consolation bracket to Mary Bauer of Amarillo, 7-6.

If your hometown began with the letter 'p', then the Fifth flight is where you belonged. Pampa's Lavonna beat Diana Ratliff of Paducah, 5-3 for the championship. In the consolation bracket it was Bonita Pyatt of Plainview over Jimmie Johnston 7-6.

THE SIXTH and seventh flights were the upset divisions of the tournament and were near mirror copies of one another.

Fifteenth seeded Sandra Hill of Odessa played the 16th seed, Delores Key of Snyder for the championship of the Sixth flight. The two bottom seeds went at each other for nineteen holes before Hill went 1-up and took home the victory.

The Seventh flight was another contest between the two lowest seeded players, and again the 15th seed won. Amarillo's Betty Smith took a 3-2 triumph over Dorothy Keith of Wichita Falls.

Ranchland Hills' Betty Howell used the home course advantage to win the Sixth flight consolation bracket over Betty Pat Humphries, 3-2.

In the Eighth flight Ethel Olson of Sonora defeated Amarillo's Louise Wilson, 3-2.

Other consolstion winners were Ruth Florey, Seventh flight, and Barbara Hickman in the Eighth Flight.

Cards top Mets behind Andujar

National league boxes

NEW YORK (AP) — Joaquin Andujar scattered nine hits and drove in two runs and batterymate Darrell Porter knocked in three more with a two-run homer and a single as the St.Louis Cardinals downed the New York Mets 7-3 Friday night.

Andujar, 6-4, notched his fourth complete game, striking out four any walking one.

The Cards jumped out to a 3-0 lead in the second inning. Lonnie Smith led off with a double and Darrell Porter followed with his fifth homer of the season, a 375-foot drive into the right-field bullpen. One out later, Ozzie Smith singled to right, moved to second on Andujar's sacrifice and scored on the first of Willie McGee's two RBI singles.

The loss was the seventh in the last nine games for the Mets.

Expos slide by Cubs, 9-8

MONTREAL (AP) — Tim Raines lashed a two-run double with one out in the eighth inning Friday night as the Montreal Expos defeated the Chicago 9-8, extending the Cubs' losing streak to 11 games.

Chicago had taken an 8-7 lead with five runs in their half of the eighth, highlighted by pinch-hitter Keith Moreland's three-run homer off reliever Woodie Fryman, 3-2.

Fryman also allowed an RBI single by Leon Durham, while Ryne Sandberg tagged starter Charlie Lea for an RBI double to account for the other Chicago runs in the eighth.

Montreal rallied against reliever Bill Campbell, 0-3, as Tim Wallach and Chris Speier sandwiched singles between Warren Cromartie's fly out. Pinch-hitter Brad Mills walked to load the bases and Raines followed with a double to right.

Lacy's hit beats Phillies

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Lee Lacy broke up a scoreless game with a one-out home run in the top of the ninth inning and John Candelaria and Kent Tekulve stopped Philadelphia on four hits as the Pittsburgh Pirates edged the Phillies 1-0 Friday night.

Lacy's homer, his second of the year, came on the first pitch from Larry Christenson, 3-4, and snapped the Phillies three-game winning streak.

NFL ignores warnings

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — The National Football League knew that nine top collegiate prospects had been found to have traces of cocaine or other illegal drugs in their bloodstreams but took no action, a spokesman said Friday. All nine were later drafted by NFL teams, one on the first round.

Urinalysis tests administered to 150 prospects at a tryout camp were disclosed earlier Friday by the Orlando Sentinel. The report was published in the wake of former player Don Reese's claims in a copyright story in this week's Sports Illustrated magazine that cocaine use is rampant in professional football.

Reese, meanwhile, expressed alarm Friday at a Dade County, Fla., judge's comments that the former defensive lineman's admitted continued use of cocaine could constitute a violation of probation set when he and another former player, Randy Crowder, were released from jail in 1978. Reese served a one-year sentence for selling cocaine to undercover policemen.

League officials and players have dismissed Reese's account as exaggerated and have denied his accusation that the league turns its back on the problem.

However, Jim Heffernan, director of public relations for the NFL, confirmed that the league received a report with the urinalysis results and the players' names after the January tryout camp, which was conducted by the Tampa Bay Buccaneers under the auspices of the 16-team United Scouting Combine.

Dick Berthelsen, an attorney for the NFL Players' Association, said the urine tests may have violated the collective bargaining agreement with the league and the NFLPA is considering filing unfair labor practice complaints against the teams involved. Complaints to the National Labor Relations Board also could be expanded to include the NFL and its bargaining unit,

Murphy's 18th paces Braves, 5-3

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Dale Murphy, the major league's leading home run hitter this season, cracked his 18th homer in the first inning to drive in two runs and lead the Atlanta Braves to a 5-3 victory over the San Francisco Giants Friday night.

Chris Chambliss added a solo homer in the third as the Braves stretched their winning streak to four games and improved their road record against National League West rivals to 12-0.

The first four Atlanta runs were off Mike Chris, 0-2, who pitched only one full inning. Atlanta starter Bob Walk, 5-4, pitched six innings, giving seven hits and all three Giants' runs. Steve Bedrosian then relieved and pitched into the ninth inning before Al Hrabosky and Gene Garber came on to get the final three outs with Garber picking up his 10th save of the season.

Claudell Washington walked to lead off the first and was sacrificed to second by Glenn Hubbard. Murphy then followed with his home run to right field.

Atlanta added two more runs in the second as Chris walked leadoff batter Rufino Linares. Bruce Benedict and Rafael Ramirez both singled, driving in Linares with Benedict stopping at second. Walk then sacrificed against reliever Fred Breining and, after Washington walked loading the bases, Benedict scored on a sacrifice fly by Hubbard.

The Giants scored a run in the first on an RBI grounder by Chili Davis and got two in the fourth, when Jack Clark cracked an RBI single and Tom O'Malley drove in a run with a grounder.

Australian gains nod

MARSAILLES, France (AP) — Australian Tony Mundine outpointed Mustapha Wasajja of Uganda in a close, hard-fought 10-round light-heavyweight bout Friday night.

The victory puts the 31-year-old Mundine in line for a possible title shot against either World Boxing Council champion Dwight Braxton or Michael Spinks,

Burgmeier tames Tribe

BOSTON (AP) — Tom Burgmeier pitched eight innings of three-hit relief and the Boston Red Sox capitalized on Lary Sorensen's error, wild pitch and two balks for four first-inning runs to defeat the Cleveland Indians 6-2 Friday night.

Burgmeier, 3-0, relieved injured starter Bobby Ojeda at the start of the second inning when Ojeda pulled a hamstring muscle in his left leg. The reliever struck out two and walked two.

Sorensen, 5-5, was the loser as the Red Sox triumphed for the sixth time in their last seven games.

Cleveland grabbed a 2-0 lead in the top of the first as Toby Harrah was hit by a pitch, went to third on Mike Hargrove's single and scored on Andre Thornton's single. After a wild pitch, Hargrove scored on a groundout.

Leading off the Boston first, Jerry Remy bunted for a single and went to second when Sorensen threw wild to first on the play. Dwight Evans walked and both runners advanced on a wild pitch.

Jim Rice singled them home, took second on a balk and third on Carney Lansford's single. Another balk scored Rice and moved Lansford to second. Lansford went to third on a single. Rich Gedman then flied out to left fielder Miguel Dilone and Lansford scored when Dilone's throw back into the infield was wild.

Jan Stephenson
....something to prove

Jan out front on 69

MASON, Ohio (AP) — Jan Stephenson, whose sexy good looks have been exploited to promote the women's golf tour, is hungry for a major victory to prove there's more to her than meets the eye.

"It's really important for me to win a major (tournament)," said Stephenson, the leader at 6-under-par after 36 holes of the $200,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association Championship.

"I've won one; one could be a fluke, but two couldn't be. Now that I've won enough tournaments, you make more of a mark winning the majors. It's very important to my respectability as a player."

Stephenson won the Peter Jackson Classic last year. That tournament, the LPGA and the U.S. Women's Open are considered the Big Three of women's golf.

After she broke a bone in her right foot early this year, Stephenson missed seven tour events. She's playing confidently now, and at the halfway point in the tournament has bogeyed just two holes.

Stephenson fired her second consecutive three-under-par 69 Friday to become the tournament front runner, where she said she plays best.

"Today was fun. Now I can set the pace; I like that position," said Stephenson, who held a one-stroke lead at 138 over Beth Daniel.

Daniel, who shared the first-round lead with Stephenson and Therese Hession, was in trouble early Friday and for a time was 3-over for thehday.

But she rallied with three birdies on the back nine, and then rolled in a 30-foot putt to eagle the 470-yard par-5 18th hole to end the day with a 2-under-par 70.

Pat Bradley, Janet Coles, Jeannette Kerr and Sandra Palmer all trailed by two strokes at 4-under 140.

Stephenson had five birdies and two bogeys over the par-72, 6,298-yard Grizzly Course at the Jack Nicklaus Sports Center near Cincinnati.

She had a chance to build a bigger lead, but dropped back from 7-under for the tournament when she hit into a bunker on 17 and then two putted for a bogey.

Stephenson called that bogey a "dumb mistake," and said she had hurt herself by being too agressive.

Roenicke, Ripkin spur Orioles over Yankees

BALTIMORE (AP) — Gary Roenicke and Cal Ripken Jr. drove in three runs apiece Friday night as the Baltimore Orioles defeated the New York Yankees 9-4 to continue streaks for teams moving in opposite directions.

It was the sixth victory in seven games for the Orioles, while the Yankees have lost six of their last seven.

Roenicke connected for his 14th homer during Baltimore's five-run first inning after John Lowenstein's two-out, bad-hop double over first baseman John Mayberry's head. Ripken followed with his fifth homer and added a two-run single in the seventh.

Dave Winfield reached above the left-field fence to prevent a homer by Lowenstein in the sixth but he couldn't hold the ball and it went for a double.

Loser Mike Morgan, 3-3, retired the next two batters with Lowenstein holding, but reliever Shane Rawley yielded an RBI pinch-single to Rick Dempsey.

Dennis Martinez, 6-4, recorded his 13th straight victory at Memorial Stadium with three innings of relief help from Tippy Martinez.

Twins, Texas rained out

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — The American League game beteen the Texas Rangers and the Minnesota Twins was postponed Friday night because of a torrential rain which hit Arlington Stadium about 30 minutes before game time.

The game will be made up as a doubleheader when Minnesota visits Arlington Stadium in September.

El Campo wins 4A baseball title

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Darrell Harton slammed a two-run homer in the sixth inning to help El Campo to a 9-7 victory over Weatherford for the Class 4A state high school baseball championship Friday.

In other finals Friday, Crockett defeated Midlothian 8-6 for the Class 3A championship, Southlake Carroll beat Pineland West Sabine 7-3 for the 2A title, and Palmer routed Burton 11-4 in Class A play.

El Campo built a 6-2 lead by the third inning. But the Weatherford Kangaroos narrowed the gap to 6-3 in the fourth and erased the advantage in the fifth on RBIs by Mike Wallace, Bryan McConathy and Scott George, and Jack Holladay's score on a passed ball.

With two out in the Ricebird half of the sixth, Tim Parma singled and Harton followed with the winning shot, 375 feet over the leftfield fence.

Harton and Greg Swoboda each went two-for-four at the plate and Parma was two-for-three.

Crockett pitchers Dean Melton and Isiah Clark combined for a three-hitter and Clark and Troy Bolton scored hits as the Bulldogs beat Midlothian.

Crockett made three errors and Clark and Melton walked eight to keep Midlothian in the game. The Panthers scored two in the second, without a hit, to take a 2-1 lead that faded when Crockett exploded for four in the bottom of the inning.

Center fielder Ronald Mask, who had three Crockett hits, and Clark had RBI singles in the second. Third baseman Bolton added a two-run single as the Bulldogs chased starter Buddy Blair.

Bolton also got an RBI in the fourth with a double that knocked in Mask, who smashed a double off the left field wall. Crockett added two big runs in the bottom of the sixth on Clark's second sacrifice fly and second baseman John Frederick's single.

Midlothian threatened in the top of the final inning with a two-run rally keyed by Blair's booming triple to right. The Panthers added a second run on an infield out, but Clark got final hitter Bruce Rodgers to ground to the mound.

Melton, 10-3, picked up the win for his five innings of two-hit ball.

Clark, who started at shortstop, give up one hit in his two innings of relief.

White Sox spoil Kison's gem, but Angels win, 6-5

CHICAGO (AP) — Bruce Kison pitched a perfect game for 6 1/3 innings and Doug DiCinces slapped two sacrifice flies as the California Angels held off the Chicago White Sox 6-5 Friday night.

Kison retired the first 19 White Sox hitters before Tony Bernazard hit a 2-1 pitch into right field for a triple in the seventh inning. Bernazard scored on Steve Kemp's groundout for Chicago's first run.

Kison, 5-2, was taken out of the game after Bill Almon's two-run double in the eighth. Angel Moreno checked the White Sox in that inning, but needed relief help himself in the ninth from Doug Corbett.

The Angels took a 1-0 lead in the fourth inning. Bobby Grich led off with a single and Reggie Jackson drew a walk, Fred Lynn walked to load the bases and DeCinces flied to right to score Grich.

Consecutive doubles by Bob Boone and Brian Downing triggered a four-run fifth for California. Downing's hit drove in the first run and he moved to third when Dotson balked. Rod Carew then singled to score Downing and Grich followed with another single to put runners at first and third and end Dotson's night.

Reds' Seaver isn't finished yet

Despite his troubles, pitcher Tom Seaver still has a long career ahead of him, says Reds' coach Bill Fischer. Seaver, 3-6, has won two in a row and his ERA has dropped to 5.31. "Sometimes along in the first half of the 1984 season he should be going for number 300 — unless he has a serious injury," Fischer said. Two weeks ago Seaver, a two-time Cy Young Award winner, was 1-6 with a 6.86 earned run average.

"The whole thing is that he didn't have much spring training," because of illness, said Fischer. "And then when he started pitching, he wasn't strong. If you're not strong, you try to overthrow the ball. he wasn't staying closed, he was rushing and he was forcing the ball. One thing leads to another. Naturally, his$confidence was a little shattered."...

The Yankees reinstalled Clyde King as pitching coach, replacing Stan Williams. King, 57, began his first stint as Yankees' pitching coach in 1979, and was replaced by Williams at the end of the 1981 season and became an advance scout...

Terry Whitfield's two-run homer Friday highlighted a seven-run third inning as the Lotte Orions beat the Seibu Lions, 8-4, in Japanese baseball...

TENNIS—Top-seeded Jose Luis Clerc beat Alejandro Ganzabal 6-3, 7-5 to gain the City of Venice semifinals along with Jim Brown, 2-6, 6-4, 6-4 winner over Steve Krulewitz, and Pender Murphy, winner over Floren Segarceanu, 6-1, 6-0...

Billie Jean King moved to within range of winning her first singles title since October 1980 by defeating Leslie Allen 6-3, 7-6 to gain the semis of the Edgbaston Cup at Birmingham, Eng. She now plays Betsy Nagelsen, winner over Nancy Yeargin...

Jimmy Connors eliminated Mark Edmondson 6-1, 6-2 Friday to gain the London Queen's Club Stella Artois semifinals. John McEnroe struggled to ousting Chip Hooper 6-3, 6-4. In other quarterfinals, Kevin Curren whipped Brian Gottfried 6-1, 6-1, and Chris Lewis outlasted Fritz Buehning 6-2, 4-6, 6-1...

Gomez KOs Lopez to retain title

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Wilfredo Gomez knocked down Juan Antonio Lopez with a right to the head in the first round, then knocked him out in the 10th Friday night to make his 15th successful defense of the World Boxing Council super-bantamweight championship.

Lopez, who had been knocked out in the seventh round of a title bid against Gomez four years ago, dropped in a heap from a right to the ribs. He jumped up and started toward Gomez but referee Davey Pearl had already counted 10 and the fight was over at 1:02 of the 10th.

The victory came on the Gerry Cooney-Larry Holmes heavyweight title card at Caesars Palace.

The 25-year-old champion from Puerto Rico appeared on the verge of a quick victory, but after the knockdown in the first he got a tough battle from the Mexican challenger although he dominated the action.

Gomez used his greater hand speed to score well to the head and body, especially with left hooks.

Reuss fires one-hitter

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jerry Reuss, pitching his second one hitter of the season, retired the last 27 batters he faced after giving up a leadoff double as the Los Angeles Dodgers pounded out 13-hits and battered the Cincinnati Reds 11-1 Friday night to snap a four-game losing streak.

Reuss, 6-5, gave up the hit to Eddie Milner on the third pitch of the game. Milner, who was a last-minute replacement for Cesar Cedeno, was sacrificed to third by Ron Oester and scored on a groundout by Dave Concepcion.

Floyd's 68 tops Memphis golf field

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Mark Lye, his closest pursurer, forecast another good round Friday for Ray Floyd and the hottest player on the PGA Tour responded with a 4-under-par 68 for the Danny Thomas-Memphis Classic lead.

Floyd's performance gave him a 36-hole total of 135, 9-under for the Colonial Country Club course.

Floyd, the loser of an Atlanta playoff three weeks ago and the Memorial champion two weeks ago, opened a 3-shot lead over non-winner Lye at the midway point.

Former U.S. Amateur champion Hal Sutton, Jim Nelford, who shot a record-tying back nine, and Mike Holland were tied for third place at 139.

Nelford fired a 63 while Sutton and Holland carded 67s. The trio was at 139, 5-under for 36 holes.

After his morning round, Lye looked up at the press-room leader board and said of Floyd: "I think Ray will shoot well again. He's just beating us up, isn't he? He takes last week off, returns and says, 'I'm back, boys.'"

If he wins here Sunday, Floyd will have earned $167,400 in his last three tournaments, making him the sixth man in this game to surpass $2 million in career earnings.

Floyd, 39, with 16 victories in two Tour decades, is not surprised at his streak.

"There's no reason a good player shouldn't sustain it for a long period," he said. "(Jack) Nicklaus did it. (Tom) Kite has done it for 1½ years. And last year I was on a streak all year."

Floyd's display overshadowed a Nelford's 6-under-par 30 on the back side. The Canadian used it to vault into contention for his first American title.

His back nine tied the course record shared previously by Fred Marti and Al Geiberger.

Nelford, another non-winner in his fifth American season, shot a 63 for a 139 total.

Sam Snead disqualified

MARLBORO, Mass. (AP) — Sam Snead, who had shared the opening day lead with Arnold Palmer, disqualified himself from the $150,000 Marlboro Classic Friday after accidentally signing an incorrect score card.

Snead, who had a 3-under par 68 on Thursday, soared to a 3-over 74 Friday but noticed a discrepancy in his score when he looked at a leader board while entering the clubhouse.

Snead then returned to the scorer's table to point out that he had signed a card crediting him with a par-4 on the 15th hole while he should have had a bogey-5.

"He in effect disqualified himself," PGA Senior tour spokesman Dick Slay said.

Kathy Manning is just over five feet tall and weighs 105 pounds, somewhat smaller than the 50-foot long tractor-trailer that she cannonballs around the country. From British Columbia to the Great Salt Lake, over-the-road drivers call Kathy "Sweet Drifter," and describe her as that "pretty little thing," an acknowledgement that the king of the road is a woman.

"I can do it all, all by myself," says long-haul driver Kathy Manning. She drives 10 to 12 hours a day, stopping only for fuel, food or coffee. When she gets tired she pulls over and sleeps. "If you break down," she says, " there's not much you can do but crawl up in the sleeper and wait for daylight.

By RONALD B. TAYLOR

Washington Post News Service

Night darkened the cab as Kathy Manning downshifted the big 18-wheeler and pulled off the freeway, queuing up behind other trucks at the Castaic, Calif., scales along Interstate 5.

She let the 72,500-pound semi-tractor and trailer roll slowly across the scales, got the green clearance light for the load of metal ceiling grids and gunned the powerful diesel.

Checking her mirrors for oncomming traffic, she wheeled the rig onto the freeway. As she shifted up through the gears, Manning yelled over the engine's roar: "If I ever meet a man I can love, I'll settle down, quit drivin' truck."

She took a pinch of snuff, tucked it between her lower lip and gums and continued, "But this is something I can do. I've mastered it. I'm a truck driver and I like it."

Here, at the beginning of a long, looping trip that would carry her through four states in eight days, is where Manning is happiest. The anticipation of new places and the chance meetings with old friends filled her talk.

From British Columbia to the Great Salt Lake, over-the-road drivers call her "Sweet Drifter" and describe her as that "pretty little thing." She stands just over five feet tall and doesn't weigh more than 105 pounds.

Manning, soon to be 30, is one of a small but growing number of women who drive trucks for a living. In California alone 2 percent of the 308,731 drivers holding Class 1, big-rig licenses are women.

HOWEVER, MOST of these women drive local hauls or work as part of two-driver teams, typically a husband and wife, driving as owner-operators of long-haul trucks, officials explained.

"It's very, very rare to see a woman driving alone over the road. It's hard, lonely work," said an officer of the California Highway patrol at the Castaic scale.

Manning is one of the solo long-haul drivers, working for a trucking company that pays her 25 percent of the freighting fees, plus $25 a day for expenses.

She runs anywhere in the West, wherever the Ralph Opperman Trucking Co. finds a load for her. One 2,700-mile trip took her from Los Angeles to Seattle, Wash., then into Canada for a load of lumber for Fresno, Calif., earning her $1,400 in 10 days.

"If I worked the year round, I could make maybe $25,000 or $30,000, but in the summers I go back into the mountains," Manning said, flipping on her signal blinkers as she swung the truck out to pass a slower-moving rig.

"I love the mountains," she said, explaining that she works summers as a trail cook for the Red's Meadow Pack Station, preparing meals for people on mule trips into the back country.

But when the summer's over and the snow begins to fly in the mountains, Manning is back out on the highways.

Manning works on a day-by-day schedule, never knowing in advance where Opperman's dispatcher will send her. That, she said, is part of the allure of the job.

BECAUSE THE national economic slowdown is affecting the trucking industry, she sometimes has to wait three or four days for a load, living on the $25 per diem, sleeping in the truck's cab.

On a recent day she was scheduled to pick up a 45,000-pound load of long metal ceiling grids in Vernon, Calif. It was her first load on what turned out to be an eight-day swing through four states.

But there were problems at the outset. Her "jake brake," an auxiliary system to give trucks more safety going down steep hills, was not working.

Manning had the truck's hood open and was standing on a tire, leaning over the oily engine, working on electrical circuits to the auxiliary braking system.

She never did get the brake fixed. "Well, we'll just have to come off the Grapevine (a steep, mountainous section of Interstate 5) real slow. It'll take more time, but there's no real danger."

Manning directed the two forklift operators placing the load on the trailer, then belted and strapped it down, using all of her strength to lever the ratchets tight.

Because weather reports predicted no rain between Los Angeles and San Francisco, she decided not to put the heavy tarps over the load, saving herself an hour of sweaty work.

At 3:35 p.m. she checked the load straps one last time and climbed up into the cab, resting her booted heels on wooden blocks set in place to keep her feet on the pedals.

THE BIG yellow semi-tractor snorted to life, puffing black diesel smoke from its chrome stack. Manning let the engine run a few minutes to build up the air pressure, then released the parking brakes and eased out into the afternoon traffic.

Her conventional tractor-trailer is more than 50 feet long and weighs more than 36 tons, making driving through city traffic difficult.

Manning started driving truck nearly six years ago to spell her husband at the wheel. After getting divorced she passed her licensing tests and started hauling plastic pipe between Los Angeles and San Francisoc.

When Opperman offered her a job, she jumped at the chance. But, while she has neitherreceived a traffic ticket nor banged up a truck, the job has given her ulcers.

"There's a lot of stress out here on the road," she said. "Getting the truck loaded right, finding a warehouse in a strange town, getting lost or having to chain up and drive an icy road in a snowstorm can get to you.

"If you break down, there's not much you can do but crawl up in the sleeper and wait for daylight."

Manning drives 10 to 12 hours a day, stopping only for fuel, food or coffee. When she gets tired she pulls over and sleeps. For entertainment she has a CB radio and an assortment of Western music on tape.

"You have a lot of time to yourself, just to think," she added.

And there is the competition. While the men "respect me because I can do it all, all by myself," there is still some resentment about her pushing into a man's world, taking a "man's job."

"I LIKE TO let 'em know I can do it," she said. "If I'm pullin' a hill and pass a guy, I let 'im know a woman just sacked him."

She laughed, adding, "They come on the air and say I'm just runnin' light, but even if I am, I lie to them, let them think I've got a heavy load."

But when she is having problems with a shifting load, or in tarping up in a storm, men drivers often are gallant, stopping to help her.

At the truck stops, Manning turns heads as she climbs down out of the cab, checks her load, and thumps an iron on her tires.

She has no steady boyfriend, she said, and then, with a big grin she yelled across the cab, "You can write that in big words. If I meet a man I can love, I'll settle down, quit driven' truck."

Once when she thought about quitting, she applied for a clerk-typist job with the Los Angeles Police Department.

"I passed all tests, went in there and I watched those clerk-typists at work for a while, then I turned and walked out. That kind of work's not for me," she said, adding, "I want to be out on the road."

F-18 jets vital for U.S. defense

By JOHN HARRIS
Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON — British successes in fighting for the Falkland Islands would have been achieved more efficiently if they had been supported by high-performance aircraft like the U.S. Navy's forthcoming $25 million F-18 fighter-bomber, described as "awesome" by Marine Corps and Navy officers.

More than 1,300 F-18 "Hornets," built by Northrop Corp., Los Angeles, Calif., General Electric, Lynn, Mass. and McDonnell Douglas, St. Louis, Mo., are on order by the Marines and the Navy as their first-line carrier-borne attack aircraft for the late 1980s and into the 1990s.

"A study of Falkland Islands combat reinforces our belief that the F-18 and the entire concept of aircraft carrier task forces is vital to the future of U.S. Defense," a senior Marine officer said, amid controversy here over the future of large carriers and other major surface naval vessels.

The controversy has been engendered by successful Argentine use, against a destroyer and other vessels, of the french-built "exocet" anti-ship missile, a type of weapon that some experts predict signals the eventual doom of surface navies due to its accuracy and relative imperviousness to radar and other defenses.

"If the British had a U.S. Navy-style carrier task force and an awesome plane like the F-18, the Argentines would never have gotten close enough to launch that missile," the Marine officer said. The missile, and others like it, can be launched at a target from a plane or a ship more than 20 miles away through a radar-based homing device.

Marine Corps Lt. Col. James G. Hart, a fighter pilot,demonstrates triple the reliability and needs only half the maintenance of any existing U.S. combat aircraft.

"At speeds of 650 to 750 miles per hour — the critical speeds we fight at — the F-18 will accelerate faster than the F-4 and F-14 and will also out-accelerate any navy aircraft," Col. Hart noted. He said the plane has a greater range, a better missile system and more accurate bombing capability than any other aircraft in the world.

"We have every confidence that the F-18 will demonstrate superior capability in its ground attack role," said Vice Admiral Wesley L. McDonald, Deputy Chief of Naval Operations. "During training deployments over 95 percent of all scheduled sorties were flown. Fleet personnel, from the maintenance technicians to the pilots, are unanimously enthusiastic about the technical and tactical advances the F-18 represents."

The F-18, it was learned, recently underwent nine days of rigorous tests aboard he carrier USS Carl Vinson, the Navy's newest neclear-powered aircraft carrier, off the Virginia coast. The F-18's only previous sea trials were held aboard the carrier USS America about three years ago.

The tests aboard the USS Carl Vinson — double the length of those on the America — were carried out under combat conditions with each plane carrying 46,000 pounds in fuel and weapons. The tests were carried out at night and with what the Navy said were "different combinations of weapons and difficult catapault conditions."

Trash collectors in Port Arthur recently found something to smile about when they came across what may have looked like someone having a bad day. It was really just half a mannequin left for the local land fill.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices held dead even in May, marking the third straight month they have hovered around zero and bolstering predictions that inflation for the year will be well under the 7 percent of 1981.

In Friday's report, the Labor Department said energy prices fell for the fifth month in a row to wipe out increases in food prices.

That kept the overall Producer Price Index at the same level it was in April and meant that for the first five months of the year, inflation at the wholesale level rose at an annual rate of 0.4 percent.

The sharp recession and worldwide oil glut have been largely responsible for the better results on inflation, according to private analysts.

"THIS REPORT underscores that the U.S. inflation rate is clearly on a new lower plateau," said Allen Sinai, senior economist for the consulting firm of Data Resources Inc. in Lexington, Mass. "Progress on inflation has been nothing short of sensational."

A Reagan administration official, who asked not to be identified, called the report "good news" but cautioned, "We can't expect (the low figures) indefinitely."

Other analysts warned that energy prices are likely to turn around and start climbing again as the oil surplus diminishes and oil stocks tighten.

Several expressed surprise that those prices were down as much as they were in the May report, although the Labor Department noted that the costs of refined petroleum products lag by a month in the index.

And Donald Ratajczak, economic forecaster at Georgia State University, said consumers already are seeing higher gasoline prices at the pump. "This report is history," he said.

Nariman Behravesh, economist for Wharton Econometrics here, said the May wholesale price figure was "a little surprisingly low." But he quickly added, "Nobody's complaining."

The producer price measure rose a seasonally adjusted 0.1 percent in April, after declines of 0.1 percent in March and 0.3 percent in February. The February figure was revised from the 0.1 percent decline reported earlier.

Wholesale prices have risen a total of 3 percent during the past 12 months.

The new report provided these details:

—Energy prices tumbled 3.1 percent in May, after plummeting 5.2 percent in April. Gasoline prices in May were down 5.9 percent, not as much as the 7.2 percent fall of the previous month. Home heating oil prices fell 1.1 percent, after a sharp 8.8 percent drop in April. Natural gas prices rose 1.8 percent last month, less than the 2.2 percent gain of April.

IN ALL, ENERGY prices have plunged at an annual rate of 27.5 percent in the first five months of the year.

—Food prices rose 0.7 percent in May, less than half the 1.6 percent advance of the previous month.

Meat price increases slowed, with pork prices rising 4.4 percent after soaring 13.5 percent in the previous month. Beef and veal prices were up 0.9 percent after climbing 3.7 percent in April. Prices for fish, fresh vegetables, poultry and sugar also were up last month. Costs of eggs, fresh fruits and coffee fell.

For the first five months of this year, food prices were up 9.4 percent, calculated annually.

All the price changes are adjusted for normal seasonal variations.

In all, the unadjusted Producer Price Index for finished goods stood at 277.7 in May, meaning that goods costing $10 at wholesale in 1967 would have cost $27.77 last month.

The department's annual price change calculations are based on more precise monthly figures than those made public.

PRICE CHANGES that show up in the Producer Price Index are a good barometer of how food, energy and other commodity prices will move at the retail level, as measured by the Consumer Price Index. The CPI, though, checks costs for a broader range of items, including housing and medical care, than does the producer price measure.

The Consumer Price Index rose a seasonally adjusted 0.2 percent in April after a 0.3 percent fall in March, the first drop since April 1965 and the sharpest decline since 1953.

Inflation at the retail level was up 8.9 percent last year, in comparison with the 12.4 percent rise of 1980.

Nazi hunter's home bombed

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — A bomb exploded near the front entrance of Nazi hunter Simon Wiesenthal's home Friday night, causing heavy damage but no injuries, police reported.

Wiesenthal, inspecting the damage with a flashlight, said he and his wife, Silla, were at home and asleep when the blast occurred around 10:45 p.m. (4:45 p.m. EDT).

"A police expert just told me it must have been a primitive bomb — a powerful explosive charge put into a pot," Wiesenthal told The Associated Press in a brief telephone interview three hours after the explosion.

Asked about possible motives behind the attack, Wiesenthal said: "I am a party in trials against neo-Nazis and they are currently riding a terror wave."

The explosion knocked out electricity, shattered every window in the house and caused severe damage to the entrance, witnesses said.

Wiesenthal, 73, heads the Jewish Documentation Center in Vienna. The one-time concentration camp inmate founded the center in the 1960s to track down fugitive Nazi leaders and war criminals.

"As long as my center exists, the Nazis will have a bad sleep," Wiesenthal once said in an interview. "The moment we give up, we will surrender to cowardice and political opportunism."

He said he will seek police protection for his home and the center.

The extent of damage to his house was not immediately determined, but police described it as serious and said the blast also shattered windows of nearby houses in the city's 19th district residential area.

Ludwig Mueller, deputy mayor of the district, promised to see that the damage was repaired immediately.

Wiesenthal said police told him there had been similar explosions in Austria and that foreigners were not believed responsible.

While enjoying respect and popularity abroad for tracking down thousands of Nazis, Wiesenthal has encountered political trouble at home.

He clashed with Chancellor Bruno Kreisky in 1975 after charging that Friedrich Peter, then leader of the right-of-center Freedom Party, was a former member of a Nazi SS unit engaged in persecuting Jews and other civilians in wartime Russia.

Wiesenthal has been pursuing Nazi war criminals for 37 years. Earlier this year, he offered a $50,000 reward for information leading the capture of Josef Mengele, former chief medical officer at the Auschwitz concentration camp.

The new yardstick.

Our 1982 Honda Accord Hatchback could be the new yardstick for commonsense luxury and engineering. Inside and out.

A new aerodynamic look combines function with style. To deliver smoother, quieter, more fuel-efficient performance.

Complete with front-wheel drive, new ventilated front disc brakes, 4-wheel independent suspension and 5-speed transmission. Plus a stylish new interior and plenty of thoughtful finishing touches.

Like a maintenance reminder/electronic warning system, tachometer, quartz electric clock and a headlights-on warning chime.
