Pair of suspects apprehended in stabbing of local bartender

By Rick López
Staff Writer

For bartender Brad Jones, Thursday seemed like a typical night at Riley's Bar & Grill.

A familiar rock tune piped out of the sound system. A group of men — each of whom he knew on a first-name basis — huddled over a worn pool table.

And as Jones cleared empty glasses from the counter, two young strangers stumbled into the bar. They appeared to be exhausted from a hard day's work.

Jones, a part-time bartender at Riley's, isn't one to shun strangers. So, he offered them a drink and struck up a conversation. The men told Jones they were cabinet-makers from Dallas and came to Midland on contract work.

Almost an hour later, the strangers said their good-byes and left Riley's. Jones thought he had just made two more friends.

Shortly before midnight, when the crowd dwindled down to 10 patrons, the strangers from Dallas came back for another visit — only this time, they were shirtless.

"They seemed all hyped up," 34-year-old Jones said. "I told them they didn't have shirts on, so they had to leave."

The men told Jones they were running from police and needed a place to hide.

Without hesitation, the bartender instruct-

CAF-piloted warbirds collide in Wisconsin

By Ed Todd

A breakdown in communications at takeoff apparently contributed to the near-fatal, fiery collision of two vintage World War II "warbirds" piloted by Texas members of the Midland-based Confederate Air Force Thursday at the Experimental Aircraft Association's AirVenture in Oshkosh, Wis.

"None of the planes that were directly involved in the incident were CAF aircraft," CAF spokeswoman Tina Corbett of Midland said.

A gaggle of four warbirds, including the Grumman F8F Bearcat and the Vought F4U Corsair, was preparing for takeoff at the world's largest aviation exposition when the gull-wing Corsair, piloted by Laird Doctor, 56, of Dallas, revved up, gained speed, and, just as its tail raised up to give the pilot forward visibility, the aircraft clipped the Bearcat piloted by Howard Pardue of Breckenridge.

Doctor, a CAF member and director and chief pilot of the Cavanaugh Flight Museum at Addison, was thrown from the fiery Corsair, which cart-wheeled, threw its 2,000-horsepower radial engine, and burned.

Pardue, who apparently was doing a pre-flight engine-runup in his Bearcat, was not seriously injured in the accident.

A Cavanaugh Flight Museum spokeswoman reported on Friday that Doctor's

Metal detectors to greet courthouse visitors in Midland

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

With shootings in the nation's schools, courthouses and now daytrading offices becoming all too frequent, Midland County Courthouse will be stepping up security to protect judges and others vulnerable to violent outbursts.

"Security is paramount," Sheriff Gary Painter said on Friday as the security system was being fine-tuned. "Anyone that comes to the courthouse is subject to search."

Beginning at 7:30 a.m. Monday, only two entrances, the front (south) entrance and the less-used, wheelchair-accessible west-end ground-floor entrance, will be accessible to the public.

To enter the courthouse, individuals — except for on-duty, certified law-enforcement officers — will be required to pass through a metal-detector, to be subject to a search by sensitive metal-detecting wand, and to place any briefcases, purses, and bulky materials into a $30,000 X-ray machine.

The X-ray machine, which projects color-coded images of items, is designed to help the operator discern organic and inorganic materials and to detect explosives and other contraband.

Judge ponders evidence in Herrera Law Firm contempt case

By Rick López
Staff Writer

It could take days or weeks for a U.S. District Court judge to render a decision in the criminal contempt trial of the Herrera Law Firm.

The firm, which is staffed by attorney Jesse Herrera and his private investigator Eli Salinas, was tried in federal court Friday for allegedly violating a court order that barred them from representing convicted drug kingpin Nelson Gonzalez.

In May, 48-year-old Gonzalez was sentenced to 30 years in prison for operating a drug enterprise that shipped large loads of narcotics from the West Texas-Mexico border to Youngstown, Ohio.

According to testimony from Friday's bench trial, U.S. Magistrate L. Stuart Platt ordered the Herrera Firm to cut its legal ties with Gonzalez because the judge believed the firm's involvement would create a conflict of interest.

A former member of the firm, Ish Herrera, was accused of threatening Ector County District Attorney John Smith and his assistant Linda Deadrick to drop charges against Gonzalez who had been charged in connection with a drive-by shooting that injured an Odessa woman.

Ish Herrera had told Smith and Deadrick that Gonzalez was a dangerous man and could harm them if the case was not dismissed, according to Friday's testimony.

As a result, Platt ruled that it would be inappropriate for the Herrera Firm to represent Gonzalez in federal court. He testified Friday that the allegations about Ish Herrera's threat could be damaging to the firm and its client "if there was any validity to them."

In March 1998, Platt issued an order denying the Herrera Firm entrance to Gonzalez's case.

However, the firm continued to offer legal advice to Gonzalez and his family, Assistant U.S. Attorney Mark Roomberg told the court Friday. Gonzalez paid the firm $10,000 to represent him, Roomberg said.

Court officials testified that even after the order was issued, Herrera continued to make calls to Platt about the Gonzalez case. Platt testified that he didn't return the attorney's call, but issued another strongly-worded court order instructing the firm to end its contact with Gonzalez.

Roomberg alleges that Herrera hired another local attorney under the pretense of "double counsel" to continue involvement with Gonzalez.

At one point, Herrera was seated at the counsel table during one of Gonzalez's pretrial hearings, witnesses testified Friday. Herrera excused himself from the table when confronted by another prosecutor.

Roomberg also claims that Salinas maintained his involvement in the case by volunteering to translate conversations between Gonzalez and his new attorney.

Defense attorneys Paul Heagy and Tom Morgan contend the firm was not aware of the changes in counsel.

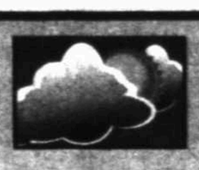

"It was a careless mistake. All this firm was trying to do was help Nelson Gonzalez," Heagy said.

Morgan told the court that there's no evidence that the firm intentionally failed to follow Platt's order.

"The order of conflict would have been known before the March order was written," U.S. District Court Judge Royal Furgeson, who is presiding in the Herrera case, said. "What you want me to believe is that Mr. Herrera does not know what is going on in his own law firm? I'm very unhappy to hear this

Chamber hosts lunch for new teachers

By Jeff Stevens
Staff Writer

About 40 new teachers were greeted with lunch and officially welcomed to Midland Friday.

The Midland Chamber of Commerce hosted its annual New Teachers Picnic Lunch at Lee High School.

"I would suspect that it's one of the oldest events that the chamber hosts," said Bruce Partain, communications manager for the chamber. "It's been around longer than I have."

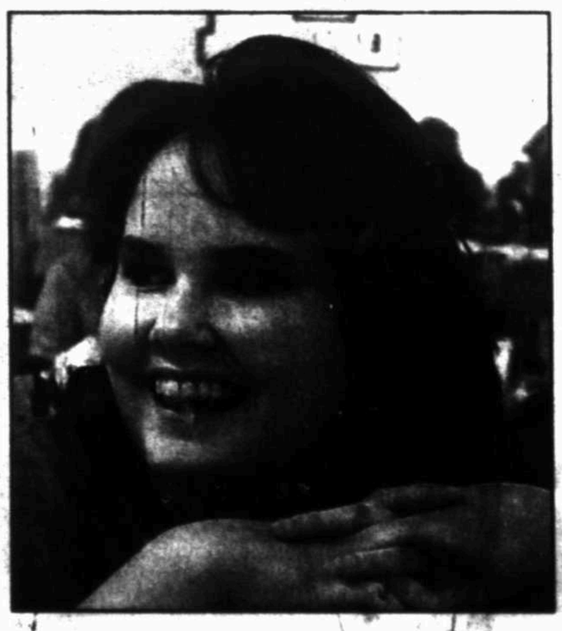

Partain, who came to Midland in 1976, said the chamber hosts the event every year because of the excitement new teachers bring to the community.

"It's so exciting for the community to have a new teacher come to town," Partain said. "It relates back to the old west — when the new teacher would come to town the whole town would show up and meet her. This is the modern-day equivalent."

Partain said the chamber also used the opportunity to welcome the newcomers to the community, provide them maps and information about Midland.

"I think it's very nice. It's very welcoming," said Stefanie Herndon. "MISD is a wonderful place to be."

World leaders pledge to build an undivided Europe

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — In a city symbolizing both war and rebirth, world leaders pledged Friday to help bring prosperity and freedom to struggling Balkan countries and build a Europe "at long last undivided, democratic and at peace."

The summit of nearly 40 nations underscored the isolation of Yugoslavia's Slobodan Milosevic, blamed for four wars that killed more than 250,000 people and left millions homeless over the last decade.

"I do not believe that we should give reconstruction aid to Serbia (Yugoslavia's dominant republic) as long as it rejects democracy and as long as Mr. Milosevic is in power," President Clinton said. "We have had enough of ethnic cleansing."

Seven weeks after Milosevic's troops began withdrawing from war-bloodied Kosovo, Western allies pledged to help Balkan countries move beyond the ancient hatreds that have exploded into violence many times since World War I.

The leaders endorsed a broad Stability Pact envisioning a brighter future for the Balkans and southeastern Europe. The goals include creating stable democracies, prosperity, ethnic tolerance, respect for human rights and efforts to combat corruption and organized crime.

Clinton's armored limousine rode into Sarajevo along "Sniper's Alley," the route once used only by travelers willing to brave bullets and mortars during 3 1/2 years of armed siege and ethnic warfare.

The city's war scars were evident in buildings with shattered windows and bullet-pocked walls, homes with collapsed roofs and fire-blackened timbers and a hillside graveyard filled with the victims of violence.

Because of intense security, Sarajevo's streets were as deserted as they were during Serb shelling. About 4,000 NATO peacekeepers patrolled the streets to protect the leaders. Nerves were jarred momentarily when a peacekeeper's weapon discharged accidentally near Croatian President Franjo Tudjman's motorcade.

The leaders met at Zetra Stadium, built as an ice skating arena for the 1984 Winter Olympics and then heavily damaged by Serb shelling in 1992. It lay in ruins until last year when a reconstruction program began.

Milosevic was not invited to the meeting but his political opponents were. Milosevic would have been subject to arrest on a war crimes indictment if he had tried to attend.

The leaders offered encouragement to Montenegro, Serbia's Western-leaning partner in the Yugoslav federation. The summit pledged to "consider ways of making the republic of Montenegro an early beneficiary of the pact and reaffirm their support of all democratic forces."

Opening the meeting, Finnish President Martti Ahtisaari said, "The Stability Pact envisions a Europe at long last undivided, prosperous and free — a Europe where war becomes unthinkable." Ahtisaari helped broker the end of NATO's bombing campaign in Kosovo.

German Chancellor Gerhard Schroeder said the Balkans' economy can thrive only when Yugoslavia is a partner in the effort. "However," he said, "it would be a disservice to their striving for freedom and democracy if we once again strengthened the regime in Belgrade."

French President Jacques Chirac said, "When a democratic regime is installed in Belgrade and liberty regains its full rights there, we will be the first to welcome this great nation to modern Europe and the international community."

"No good will come about in the war-torn land of the Balkans by its own volition," said Slovenia's President Milan Kucan. "And if the Sarajevo summit is intended to be the harbinger of something new, then much hard work awaits us."

In a final declaration, the leaders asserted, "We reaffirm our shared responsibility to build a Europe that is at long last undivided, democratic and at peace."

Amid the promises of assistance, Clinton stepped forward with a package of concrete help. "We cannot pretend our victory is complete when the people of a vast region of Europe are still suffering from the disruption brought about by a decade of violence," the president said.

Clinton said he would ask Congress to eliminate tariffs on imports — on everything from shoes and glassware to strawberries — from southeastern Europe.

Officials said the duty-free program would cost taxpayers up to $80 million over five years.

Further, Clinton said the Overseas Private Investment Corp., a U.S. agency, would establish a $150 million investment fund for the Balkans and provide an additional $200 million in credit for American companies seeking to set up operations in the region.

Moreover, Clinton said the United States would contribute up to $50 million to the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development to spur business ventures, provided the bank targets an additional $80 million for the region.

The United States was the only country offering a significant pledge.

In Washington, Commerce Secretary William Daley announced he would lead a U.S. trade and investment mission to southeastern Europe in the fall at the president's request. The delegation will seek ways to promote growth and modernize regional economies, in which there are barriers to investment, he said.

Palestinian Americans leave their mark on West Bank culture

RAMALLAH, West Bank (AP) — A red BMW convertible with a California license plate and Puff Daddy blasting from the stereo skids to a halt in downtown Ramallah. The driver is greeted with high-fives and a chorus of "What's up?" by boisterous teen-agers wearing baggy pants and backward-facing baseball caps.

Nearby, Palestinian women dressed in traditional embroidered robes frown disapprovingly. "They should speak Arabic," one woman mutters to her friends.

Such scenes have grown increasingly common in the West Bank — especially in Ramallah, the area's closest thing to a metropolis — since thousands of Palestinian Americans have returned to their homeland.

In some cases, entire families have resettled, lured by the growing prospect of peace with Israel. More often, the father stays in America to work, while the mother and children move to the West Bank to live with relatives.

Many Palestinian Americans fear the lure of American culture is so powerful that their children will forget Arabic and discard Palestinian traditions based on strong family ties.

They worry especially about their daughters, who they often send back to the West Bank at the onset of puberty to shield them from American dating rituals frowned on by conservative Palestinian society.

"We thought we could teach our kids the culture, religion and the language," said Shukri Zayed of Cleveland, who moved his family back to his hometown of El Bireh last year.

About 300,000 Palestinian Americans live in the United States and about 30,000 live in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, according to U.S. figures. In the summer, the number of West Bank visitors swells by thousands more.

"It's like a mini-America in the summer," said Dalia Abid, 19, whose family moved to Ramallah from Falls Church, Va., in 1992. "You see people from America everywhere."

For many newcomers, it's not easy to make the transition from a society that celebrates individual achievement to one that enforces strict roles based on age, gender and place in the family.

Ali Karakra, a 17-year-old high school student in El Bireh, said it was difficult for him to fit in when his family arrived from Falls Church seven years ago.

"You don't understand them and they don't understand you," Karakra said. He and his Palestinian American friends often refer to those raised in the West Bank as "the Arabs," while they are known simply as "the Americans" to West Bank natives.

While most Palestinian American parents hope their children will soak up Palestinian mores while living in the West Bank, often just the opposite occurs.

That's because American cultural imports are everywhere: West Bank-born boys wear narrow dark sunglasses; girls dress in miniskirts or tight pants. Sweatshirts with Gap and Calvin Klein logos and T-shirts in bold Tommy Hilfiger colors are everywhere. Songs by Ricky Martin, Mace and Jennifer Lopez blast from car stereos. U.S. flags and bumper stickers grace cars.

As the number of Palestinian Americans in the Ramallah area increases, more and more businesses cater to their needs.

"Sometimes they go overboard trying to appear American," said Mohammed Itayim, 17, of the Brooklyn borough of New York, whose family moved to El Bireh in 1993 so the children could be raised in the Palestinian way — no partying, alcohol, dating, smoking and drugs.

There is frequently competition between the two groups, creating resentment among native Palestinians. In school, the Americans are often more popular. They have more money, drive fancier cars and wear more fashionable clothes.

At Checkers in Ramallah, an American fast food restaurant and teen-age hangout with red neon lights, the two groups rarely mix.

As the number of Palestinian Americans in the Ramallah area increases, more and more businesses cater to their needs. Six new private schools in the Ramallah area serve primarily Palestinian Americans, whose Arabic isn't good enough to study in public schools.

Conflicts often erupt in extended families, with the returnees criticized by their West Bank-bred relatives for not speaking enough Arabic or dressing improperly.

Elderly Palestinians accustomed to complete obedience suddenly encounter back talk from Palestinian American youngsters used to defending their views. The Americans sometimes refuse to eat the Arabic dishes prepared at home, offending relatives.

Still, many eventually embrace their West Bank heritage.

Itayim said he learned a lesson about identity when Israeli soldiers shot him in the eye with a rubber-coated steel pellet during a stone throwing clash in 1997.

Itayim, who lost his left eye, said he never felt more Palestinian than after his injury.

"This is my home country," he said of the West Bank.

STABBING: Suspects match description in another assault ed them to leave. Instead, the men unleashed a stream of obscenities and started threatening the pool players.

(From 1A)

Jones and a friend approached the men and shoved them out the doorway.

One of the strangers pulled out a switchblade and the other began throwing punches. For a few seconds, Jones defended himself with a pool cue — until one mighty blow broke it in half.

The other stranger reached into his pockets and whipped out his own knife. They each grabbed a corner of Jones' T-shirt and lunged at him.

After suffering several stab wounds, Jones broke away and ran to a cordless phone on the other side of the counter. Jones used one hand to hold the receiver up to his ear and talk with a dispatcher. The other hand held a wad of blood-soaked rags against his neck, which has been slashed from his right ear to the middle of his neck.

Jones had escaped death by half an inch.

Had the slash continued just a little to the left, his esophagus would have been punctured, doctors told him when they treated his wounds.

Though the pain began to set in, Jones walked outside to check on his patrons. No one was out there — not even the two attackers. As the ambulance sirens grew louder, Jones discovered more wounds on his body.

"My shirt was all cut up, and it just turned red real fast," he said.

However, Jones continued to hold the phone to his ear and talk to authorities — even though a stream of blood dripped down his forearm and formed puddles in the caliche beneath him.

It took doctors three hours to sew up all of Jones' wounds.

The injury to his throat — which was half an inch deep — required at least 100 stitches and sutures. Doctors surgically implanted a tube that drains the healing fluids into yards of gauze wrapped around his head.

To put things in perspective, one of his smallest wounds required 10 stitches.

"I just wanted those guys to leave — that's all," Jones said Friday. "I'm just glad that this happened to me and not to my friends. For a while, I didn't think I would get to see my two kids again.

"I thought they (the attackers) were going to kill me. I'm sure of it."

Midland police officers apprehended the two men who attacked Jones and arrested them on charges of aggravated assault. They were identified as William Taylor, 32, and Sonny Bradford, 25, both of Crandall.

Authorities said they both remained in the Midland County jail as of Friday, where bond was set at $20,000 for each suspect.

Police tracked the men down Friday by using two crime scene dogs. The K-9 teams followed the men's scent from the bar to the motel they were staying at just six blocks away. Officers said they recovered weapons that they believe were used in the attack.

Police spokeswoman Tina Jauz said Taylor and Bradford are also suspects in a stabbing that occurred about 15 minutes before Jones' attack.

Just three blocks from Riley's, 30-year-old Jose Tobias was slashed from his neck to his mid-torso by two suspects matching the description of Taylor and Bradford.

Tobias, of Lubbock, told police he was driving eastbound on Wall Street when the two men walked in front of his work truck. He sounded his horn to warn them, but the two men returned the gesture by shouting vulgarities.

Tobias and his two co-workers got out of the truck and began arguing with the men. The suspects pulled out their knives and stabbed Tobias, police said. The two other men got back into the truck and were not injured.

A hospital spokeswoman said Tobias was released from Memorial Medical Center and Hospital on Friday.

On Friday, Riley's patrons gathered around a large TV set to watch a local television interview with Jones.

Minutes after the broadcast, the front door flew open and brought sunlight into the low-lit barrom. Jones walked into the bar and was greeted by patrons eager to shake his hand. Among them was Mark Carlton, who's known Jones through the bar for about eight years.

"He was just doing his job last night," Carlton said. "He takes care of his customers. I'm depressed that this happened to him, but I'm glad he's still here."

Jones, who operates his own business during the day, pleaded with Midlanders not to associate Riley's with violence.

"This is just going to give us a bad reputation," Jones said. "Everyone's friends in here. These (attackers) were just some punks from out-of-town. This isn't a Midland problem or a Riley's problem."

SECURITY: Lock boxes available for prohibited items

(From 1A)

"It's the same equipment that is used at airports," Painter said. "No scissors, no knives, no weapons of any kind will be allowed into the courthouse."

Courthouse visitors may store prohibited items in lock boxes or return them to their cars, homes or offices.

Earlier this year, members of the Midland County Commissioners' Court, encouraged by judges, the sheriff, and out of their own concern, agreed to spend on the security system $250,000 out of a $21-million-plus general-fund budget.

"A courthouse is a place of high emotions, criminal trials, some civil trials and certainly in domestic relations courts" involving divorces and child-custody cases, said County Judge Bill Morrow. "Texas is not exempt (from courthouse violence)."

Although the judge conceded that West Texas "is a considerably friendlier atmosphere," he added that "protection of the employees, protection of the jurors, the judges, the people who appear as witnesses" and others "is appropriate."

The Courthouse Security Staff, headed up by Sheriff's Lt. Benny J. Matlock, is in addition to the armed bailiffs who serve the four Texas district court judges and the two county-court-at-law judges.

To Midland lawyer Steve Hershberger, the bolstered security is overkill.

"I think it is restricting the citizens' access into their courthouse. It's something that has been overplayed," Hershberger said. "They don't need an entryway security system like this. It's going to make it difficult to come into the courthouse. This is the people's courthouse. They ought to be able to conduct business like they should."

As a constitutional lawyer and a taxpayer, he said, "I think we are wasting a lot of money on this that we don't need to waste."

He pointed to the recent practice of a roaming sheriff's deputy to provide courthouse security in addition to several bailiffs.

"It's just totally unnecessary," Hershberger said. "We have a safe courthouse. We haven't had an incident."

In case of fire or other emergencies, the five courthouse doors, including those two security entrances, would be electronically opened, Matlock said. A sixth ground-level doorway on the north side leads to the jail elevator.

Heretofore, courthouse entrances were at the north, south, east and west.

Serving on Matlock's staff are armed deputies Bob Mayo, Bob Caraway, Nancy Flores, Dennis Long and Carolyn Joiner.

John Westbrook, a prosecutor for District Attorney Al Schorre, noted that by Texas law any certified Texas peace officer can carry his or her firearm into any Texas courthouse. However, the Commissioners' Court policy would restrict that accessibility to on-duty officers. Others would have to relinquish any weapons.

However, Westbrook, who, like Schorre, is a certified peace officer, said that a courtroom judge may impose further restrictions.

"Judges have more authority in their courtroom than you (commissioners) do in the courthouse," Westbrook said. A judge may ban firearms carried into his or her courtroom even by an on-duty officer.

"The law provides that any licensed peace officer, whether he is on duty or not, can go anywhere in this state, including courthouses, with his weapon," Westbrook said. "The only exception in the state of Texas would be that he couldn't go into federally-controlled areas. Any judge in the state of Texas has the authority to set rules concerning his courtroom."

However, Westbrook reasoned that "if you (as a peace officer) have anything on your person that shows you are an officer, you had better be armed particularly because, one, you'll be the first target that the bad guy looks at. Secondly, citizens will look to you for help. If you are not armed, you can't provide that help. Some agencies require that their officers carry their weapons at all times. Others don't. The written policy of our (the District Attorney's Office) is that all officers will be appropriately armed at all times."

Judge George "Jody" Gilles of the 142nd Texas District Court for Midland County noted "judges have the inherit power to conduct the business of the court and that extends to the ability to control the courtroom itself and what goes on in that courtroom.

"We have to protect the decorum of the courtroom, the ability of the court to conduct business and to provide an atmosphere that is conducive for that," Gilles said. "The courts have traditionally had the ability to control what comes into a courtroom whether it be a firearm or something of that nature. The courts have the inherit authority to control weapons and direct whether those weapons are brought into the courtroom."

People who "have business with the courts or the various offices located in the courthouse" should "feel safe and secure when they come in (to the courthouse) to do those bits of business.

Courthouse visitors, workers, litigants and others, Gilles said, should "not have to be concerned" about those who are "bent on some sort of illegal or evil action."

COLLISION: Pardue is a West Texas oilman

(From 1A)

condition had been upgraded from critical to serious in a Milwaukee hospital's intensive care unit. He suffered head injuries.

About 12,000 aircraft, including vintage and classic airplanes, were at the airshow attended by about 800,000 aviation enthusiasts, according the EAA.

Jack Edwards, a Midland geologist and World War II naval aviator who piloted the Corsair in the war and the Bearcat in the post-war years, noted that "flying those old airplanes can be hazardous to your health. It is true. They don't have a label on them like a package of cigarettes. A lot of guys have gone in."

Of the Corsair, Edwards said, "You had to stay on top of it, or it would get on top of you.

"It had its tricks," he said. "It wasn't just a little old ladies' airplane."

In taxiing the tail-dragger aircraft and prior to liftoff of the tailwheel on the takeoff roll, "You can't see nothing but nose when you've got your tail down," Edwards said. In taxiing, "You make a lot of S-turns with that thing. It's extremely high performance — all of those all fighters were."

While not as tricky as the Corsair, the Bearcat, among the fastest if not, debatably, the fast propeller-driven fighter in the war, was "so high powered and so fast," more than 420 miles per hour. "You had to stay on top of that," Edwards said. "The Bearcat would jump out of the air in about 500 or 600 feet" in its take-off roll.

Pardue, who has performed at the CAF AirSho events in Midland, is a West Texas oilman and a U.S. Marine Corps veteran.

Not involved in the crash but preparing to fly a Corsair assigned to the CAF was CAF Col. Ray Kinney, said CAF colonel-pilot Bill Coombes of Midland. Coombes said that Pardue's Bearcat and another Bearcat were about 1,000 feet down the runway and holding and beyond Doctor's Corsair and his wingman.

For some reason, the Corsairs powered up for takeoff. Up the runway, Doctor's Corsair clipped Pardue's Bearcat, and the flight ended.

CASE: Herrera faces fine or suspension argument from Mr. Herrera: 'I know nothing; I saw nothing.'"

Court officials said that Herrera, if convicted, faces a monetary fine or having his license suspended in the federal court's Western District of Texas.

A spokeswoman for the State Bar of Texas said the bar will conduct its own probe into the case only if Herrera is convicted in federal court.

Suspect posts bond in pornography case

Staff reports

Gary McCoy Jr., who surrendered to police in connection with a child pornography case, was released from jail Friday after posting a $20,000 bond.

Officials said McCoy, 27, was charged Thursday with possession and promotion of child pornography — a third-degree felony — in connection with a report that police took from a drug store.

Store employees told police that McCoy had taken a roll of film there for developing that contained nude pictures of a young woman. Employees gave police a description of the man who brought the film and the name that he used.

Police contacted McCoy at his residence. They said he admitted to having the pictures, but destroyed them. Police searched his residence, but couldn't find such evidence.

However, police obtained a statement from the victim: a 15-year-old girl who said McCoy took nude photos of her.

Authorities said McCoy claims to be unemployed. Police said McCoy is a Midland resident, but jail records indicated McCoy has a Cleburne address.

OBITUARIES

George Reed

George Robert Reed was born May 24, 1962, in Houston, Texas, moving to Midland with his family when he was 5 years old. George attended Bonham Elementary, Midland Christian, Alamo Junior High and Midland High School, graduating in 1980. He then attended the University of Texas at Austin and Texas Tech at Lubbock. George started his own business in Midland in 1994, doing what he loved most, music. He purchased a retail used record store, specializing in vinyl long-play 33's, 45's and cassette tapes. Business was never great, but he enjoyed talking music with so many of his customers and found great happiness in searching out and locating items for all his regular customers. He undoubtedly knew more about records, of all kinds, than anyone in the West Texas area. He took great delight in accommodating his customers' requests. Music was his life, but not his entire life. He loved to read, starting with science fiction when he was young and branching into history more recently.

He loved people, meeting new people and just talking to them to find out what he had in common with them.

He was a blessing to so many, and will be missed greatly, but we are thankful for his 37 years here, and we're secure in the knowledge that he will now have everlasting peace and joy with God through our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

The Lord gives, and the Lord takes away. Blessed be the name of the Lord. Amen.

George died at a local hospital Thursday, July 29, 1999.

He is survived by his parents, Wanda and Dick Reed of Midland; his aunts, Francene Lawless Bateman of Montana, Joyce Lane of Mount Pleasant, Barbara Adair of Houston, and Lucille Crow of Arizona; his uncles, George W. Reed Jr. of Houston and Arthur Cooper of Mansfield, Texas; and numerous cousins, including Pamlia Vardy of Midland.

Visitation is scheduled from 7 to 8 p.m. Sunday at Ellis Funeral Home. Funeral services have been scheduled for noon Monday, August 2, at the Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with Reverend Glenn Kramer officiating. Graveside services will be at 4 p.m. Tuesday at Union Grove Cemetery in Troup, Texas under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Honorary pallbearers will be Gary Roe, Kenny Haskell, Shawn Morgan, Kevin Keller, Richard Williamson, Mark Phillips, Dale Stice, Dennis Gwin, Derek Stice and Todd Scott.

LUNCH: Teachers have been in orientation all week

(From 1A)

Of course, Ms. Herndon is slightly partial. Like a large majority of the 182 new MISD teachers hired this year, she's from the Permian Basin. The new kindergarten teacher at Pease grew up in Odessa, graduated from the University of Texas of the Permian Basin and has lived in Midland for the past three years.

Another UTPB alumnus, Farrah Thomas, enjoyed her fried chicken and pork and beans courtesy of the chamber Friday.

Ms. Thomas will be taking the helm of a second-grade class at Washington Elementary and should feel right at home.

Ms. Thomas attended Washington and graduated from Lee High School.

Though they won't be teaching at their alma mater, two new teachers at Jones Elementary should have plenty of other fringe benefits.

Angela and Audrey Strube will be sharing the rent. They can trade clothes and they can even cover for each other in class.

The identical twins were hired out of Texas Tech to teach at the same campus. They hale from Garden City, attended Howard College in Big Spring and graduated from Tech before coming to Midland for their first stint in teaching.

"We had hoped to find a school close to each other," said Audrey. "But we didn't expect to be at the same school." Angela completed.

The Friday luncheon provided a short break for new teachers, who have been in orientation at Lee High School all week. The orientation will continue through next week as the district continues to gear up for classes, which begin Aug. 10.

In addition to hosting the annual picnic, the chamber also sponsors teacher recognition programs, student scholarship programs and greases the way for partnerships between schools and businesses.

Winner of lotto remains a mystery

From Staff Reports

The question, "Who won the lotto," will remain unanswered at least a little while longer.

The winner of Wednesday's $10 million jackpot has not yet claimed the prize, said Janie Taylor, Lotto Texas spokeswoman.

She said Friday that they still don't know if the winner is a Midlander or someone passing through.

"The winner e-mailed our winner's liaison and said they were seeking legal advice."

One ticket correctly matched all six numbers drawn Wednesday night: 7, 18, 19, 21, 34 and 48.

The ticket was purchased at Bowen's Grocery, at the corner of Thomason Drive and Business Interstate 20. For selling the winning ticket, the store will receive an amount equal to1 percent of the jackpot, or $100,000.

Owner Jodee Neathery of Plano told the Reporter-Telegram Thursday night that after making repairs to the 45-year-old store, "the employees will share in a portion of the money."

Tripp indicted on wiretap charges, first in scandal to face criminal charge

ELLICOTT CITY, Md. (AP) — Linda Tripp, whose secretly recorded phone conversations with Monica Lewinsky led to the impeachment of President Clinton, was charged with illegal wiretapping on Friday, making her the only major figure in the sex scandal to face a criminal charge.

A grand jury indicted Mrs. Tripp on two counts of breaking Maryland's wiretapping law. Each offense could carry up to five years in prison and a $10,000 fine if she were to be convicted.

Mrs. Tripp's spokesman, Philip Coughter, called the indictment "the most disgraceful, transparent campaign of politically motivated vengeance in recent American history."

Her lawyers suggested Mrs. Tripp should be protected as a government whistleblower, and said they would challenge the state's authority to bring charges because she was given federal immunity by Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr when she turned over the tapes.

State Prosecutor Stephen Montanarelli waved off suggestions that the case would be viewed as politically motivated. "I can't help how it will be seen. ... I think we've done our duty," he said.

Montanarelli, a Democrat appointed to his post in 1984, said he would handle the case himself.

After a yearlong investigation, the grand jury indicted Mrs. Tripp on one count of illegal interception, a charge stemming from a phone conversation taped on Dec. 22, 1997, after she was told by her lawyer that secret taping was illegal. In conversations taped that day, the two women discussed what they should say about Ms. Lewinsky's sexual relationship with Clinton in testimony they expected to have to give for Paula Jones' sexual harassment lawsuit against the president.

Mrs. Tripp also was charged with disclosing the contents of that conversation to Newsweek magazine, which published a partial transcript of a Tripp-Lewinsky phone call on Feb. 2, 1998. A spokeswoman for Newsweek, Jan Angilella, said magazine officials would not comment on the proceeding.

The White House and representatives for Ms. Lewinsky also declined to comment.

It was Mrs. Tripp's more than 20 hours of recordings that launched the independent counsel investigation of Clinton's relationship with Ms. Lewinsky, a former White House intern.

The recordings of the two women's rambling and sometimes ribald conversations were released publicly by the House Judiciary Committee before the House voted to impeach Clinton for perjury and obstruction. He was acquitted last Feb. 12 after a Senate trial.

Maryland's wiretap law, which is infrequently prosecuted, forbids taping phone conversations without the other party's consent.

Ignorance of the law is a valid defense. But Mrs. Tripp, who recorded the calls in her Columbia, Md., living room, testified for Starr's grand jury that she taped several conversations in late 1997 even after an attorney told her it was illegal.

Mrs. Tripp will be allowed to arrange a time to surrender voluntarily, her attorneys said.

There was no sign of Mrs. Tripp at her home on Friday. No one answered a knock on the door and neighbors said they had not seen her for about a week. A spokesman at the Department of Defense, where she works, said she had not come to work since Tuesday.

Mrs. Tripp, 49, has said she began taping her friend's phone calls to protect herself because she was being pressured by Ms. Lewinsky to lie in Mrs. Jones' lawsuit against the president.

Ms. Lewinsky confided her sexual encounters with the president to Mrs. Tripp after the pair became friends while working together at the Pentagon. Ms. Lewinsky wanted Mrs. Tripp to deny knowledge of the relationship in an affidavit for Mrs. Jones' sexual harassment case.

Mrs. Tripp said Ms. Lewinsky also wanted her to lie about her knowledge of an alleged sexual advance by the president against White House volunteer Kathleen Willey.

Starr gave Ms. Lewinsky immunity from prosecution in return for her testimony against Clinton.

New York book agent Lucianne Goldberg, who testified in Starr's investigation last November, said she had urged Mrs. Tripp to start taping.

Mrs. Tripp also talked with Ms. Goldberg about writing a tell-all book about her years at the White House.

Clinton administration aide Bob Weiner — who was questioned by Starr's team about his calls to a Democratic group that urged the state to investigate Mrs. Tripp — said it was "gratifying that the law may finally recognize her abuses."

"Her violations of privacy were an affront to the meaning of friendship," Weiner said.

Office killer's note says he wanted to spare children from 'lifetime of pain'

ATLANTA (AP) — The gunman who killed nine people at two brokerage firms had lost roughly $105,000 in stock trading in less than two months and left a note vowing revenge on those who had "greedily sought my destruction," authorities said Friday.

Mark O. Barton, a chemist turned day stock-trader, walked Thursday into the office of two brokerage firms where he traded and fired randomly at traders and employees. Nine died and 13 were wounded. Hours later, he killed himself as police pulled over his van.

His wife, son and daughter were found bludgeoned in the family residence. In his note, released Friday by police, he said he wanted to spare his children a "lifetime of pain."

Officials at Momentum Securities said that Barton traded at the Atlanta office for a total of 15 days beginning June 9, and the trading resulted in an approximate $105,000 loss. All-Tech Investment Group would not release any details of his trading.

Also in the note — left in the family's apartment — Barton denied killing his first wife and mother-in-law in 1993. In the van with his body, police found the two guns used in the shooting, two additional handguns, 200 rounds of ammunition and two pairs of handcuffs.

Authorities said Barton, who had taken out a $600,000 life insurance policy on his first wife two months earlier, was the prime suspect in the bludgeoning of Debra Spivey Barton and Eloise Powell Spivey at an Alabama campground, but he was never charged.

"There's no reason for me to lie now," he wrote.

Barton settled with the insurance company for $450,000, according to federal court records. Of that, $150,000 was to be held by Barton for his children.

After the rest was divided among Barton's lawyers and his children's temporary guardian, Barton was left with about $194,000.

It was unclear whether Barton had used the insurance money to begin his stock-trading career.

The note also referred to an overpowering fear that drove him to murder, but contained no references to his recent financial losses.

"I wake up at night so afraid, so terrified that I couldn't be that afraid while awake. It has taken its toll," Barton wrote. "I have come to hate this life and this system of things. I have come to have no hope."

He killed his family by hitting them with a hammer while they slept and holding them underwater in the tub to make sure they wouldn't wake up. Later, he tucked the children's bodies into bed with their favorite toys.

Barton's note focused mostly on his 11-year-old son, Matthew, and 7-year-old daughter, Mychelle.

"I killed the children to exchange them for five minutes of pain for a lifetime of pain," he wrote. "I forced myself to do it to keep them from suffering so much later."

Dave M. Davis, a forensic psychiatrist and director of the psychiatric clinic at Piedmont Hospital in Atlanta, said Barton's letter indicates he was severely depressed and paranoid.

"When we have these multiple murderers, who are quite different from serial killers, they tend to kill people like themselves," Davis said, noting Barton killed other stock traders.

Barton was worried that his mental problems would be passed on.

"The fears of the father are transferred to the son. It was from my father to me and from me to my son," he said. "I had to take him with me."

The notes, written on Wednesday, also said: "I don't plan to live very much longer. Just long enough to kill as many of the people that greedily sought my destruction."

After the shooting spree in Atlanta's Buckhead commercial district, Barton fled to the city's northern suburbs.

He shot himself in the head when he was cornered by police about five hours after the manhunt began.

The bizarre letter described a person far different from the doting father and Boy Scout volunteer that neighbors described. He did homework with his son and stayed up late playing video games with his children.

Neighbors were shocked to see his photo all over TV Thursday.

Sabrina Stowers, a former neighbor in Morrow, said Barton never seemed stressed, even though he worked in the pressure-cooker world of day trading.

Barton drove Matthew and Ms. Stower's son, Brian, to Boy Scouts every Tuesday, she said. And he would play video games with the boys during sleepovers, always getting them to school on time the next day.

Kent Woerner, principal of McGarrah Elementary School in Morrow, said Barton was active and concerned with his children's education. Despite their mother's murder, the children never exhibited emotional problems, Woerner said.

Michael Hauptman, Barton's former criminal lawyer, said the gunman was a knowledgeable chemist who could have taken even more lives than he did.

"While this thing is tragic, I don't think the city realizes how lucky we are," Hauptman said.

"With his extensive knowledge of chemistry and the availability of chemicals on the open market, he could have walked into that building with a homemade bomb sufficient to blow up the whole building."

Victims were planning everything from pilgrimages to birthdays

ATLANTA (AP) — Dean Delawalla's daughter Shahala turned 4 on Thursday, but he was saving the big bash for Sunday — a trip with her school friends to Chuck E. Cheese.

"The way it looks, the funeral may be Sunday," said Delawalla's brother Fred.

Dean Delawalla, 62, who had given up his law practice last year to focus on options trading, was gunned down in his broker's office Thursday.

Eight other people were killed in Mark O. Barton's rampage at two Atlanta brokerages, and 13 were injured. Barton also killed his wife and two children, and committed suicide as police moved in to arrest him.

Another victim was Texas native Kevin Dial, 38, office manager at Momentum Securities, where the shooting started. Dial was the son of former Pittsburgh Steelers and Dallas Cowboys wide receiver Buddy Dial.

"I never saw the guy without a smile on his face — never, not once," said Eric Blaier, who works down the hall as a sales manager with Allegiance Telecom. He stood with a Diet Coke and stared in disbelief at the satellite trucks ringing his workplace. "Probably one of the happiest guys I ever saw."

Like Delawalla, other victims were in the offices to day trade on the stock market. One of them was Edward Quinn, 58.

The father of three was only a couple of years into his retirement after decades with United Parcel Service, where he last served as Southeast regional director for security and loss prevention. Friends and neighbors said Quinn seemed to have three passions besides his family — his lawn, fly-fishing and golf.

"When he retired, his plan was to begin traveling the world and playing at all the great old courses across the planet," said Ken Sternad, a UPS spokesman who had known Quinn for 10 years. "That was his goal."

Charles Allen Tenenbaum, 48, was another of the day traders.

Tenenbaum jogged several miles a day, was president of his synagogue and ran his family's grocery business, Great Savings.

His synagogue's rabbi, S. Robert Ichay, said Tenenbaum was planning his first pilgrimage to Israel next year. And last week, he talked with his wife about getting burial plots.

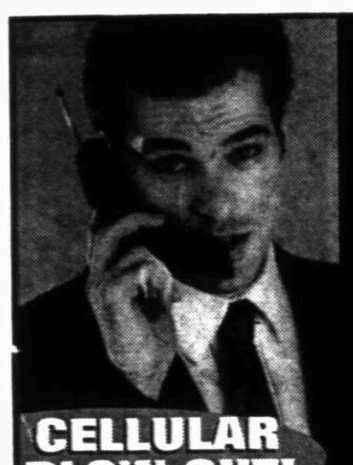

"I don't think he had a premonition of anything," Ichay said. "But he knew that life was not always the way we imagine it, or the way we would like it to be — that things could happen. And therefore he was a great believer in doing things and not missing opportunities — and doing them with people he loved."

Senate passes GOP's $792 billion tax cut bill, courts veto struggle

Democrats abandoned Clinton's initial approach of targeted tax relief in favor of broad-based tax cuts, although on a far smaller scale than the GOP wanted.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republicans pushed their $792 billion tax cut through the Senate on Friday, courting a classic veto struggle this fall with President Clinton and Democrats who claim the measure shortchanges Medicare and other domestic programs.

The vote was 57-43 — largely along party lines — in favor of the GOP plan. The 10-year measure includes broad-based tax relief as well as provisions designed to address the so-called marriage penalty and make it easier to accumulate retirement savings and pay for education.

Passage was followed by the beginning of efforts at forging a quick House-Senate compromise. Congressional GOP leaders hope to speed the final measure through both houses next week, although it won't be sent to Clinton until after Labor Day.

That would leave time for the GOP rank and file to trumpet the benefits of tax cuts during Congress' long August break.

"We want to cut taxes and the president wants to spend it," Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., said of projected federal surpluses. "That's what this fighting is all about. We are determined to give working Americans the tax relief they are entitled to."

Clinton wasted little time renewing his oft-stated veto threat. "The Republican tax cut is so large it would undo our fiscal discipline and imperil our prosperity," he said in a written statement. "It would crowd out our commitments to pay down the debt, to save Social Security and to strengthen and modernize Medicare with a long overdue prescription drug benefit."

The Senate measure includes a reduction from 15 percent to 14 percent in the lowest personal income tax bracket, effective in 2001. Beginning in 2006, it would gradually shift some income currently taxed at 28 percent into that lower bracket.

It also includes provisions to reduce the marriage penalty, in part by slowly raising the standard deduction for married couples to double the amount allowed for individuals. Individuals currently may claim $4,300, and couples $7,200.

Moments before final passage, the measure was amended to let investors exclude from taxes the first $1,000 in long-term capital gains.

Under the bill, more students would be allowed to deduct the interest on their education loans; limits on deductible contributions to individual retirement accounts would rise gradually to $5,000, and there would be liberalized tax incentives for individual and corporate donors to charities.

The bill also would create a new deduction for the cost of long-term care insurance, and raise the estate tax exemption — already scheduled to increase to $1 million — up to $1.5 million in 2007.

Throughout three days of debate on the Senate floor, Republicans said their budget would set aside the vast bulk of projected surpluses for Social Security. The tax cuts, they stressed, would consume less than 24 cents of each dollar of predicted surpluses.

"It helps the family and it helps the country," said Sen. William V. Roth, R-Del., chairman of the Finance Committee and architect of the legislation.

But Democrats and the president contended the GOP bill would dip into Social Security surpluses beginning in 2005, and leave little or nothing for other domestic programs. They also said that by providing tax cuts based on economic forecasts that might not materialize, the Republicans were risking a return to the days of large federal deficits.

"This is another riverboat gamble with the American economy," said Sen. Byron Dorgan, D-N.D., in an echo of the rhetoric used in the early 1980s when Republicans cut taxes.

Democrats countered with a smaller tax cut of $290 billion, which was rejected earlier in the week. Efforts to fashion a bipartisan compromise at $500 billion collapsed Thursday.

A final compromise is still a possibility at year's end, but the immediate prospect is for a veto confrontation driven by competing readings of the electorate's wishes 15 months before the next elections.

Republicans, who called their measure the Taxpayer Refund Act of 1999, hope they can force Clinton to bend to their wishes on tax cuts, and say the president and other Democrats will pay a political price otherwise.

Democrats, meanwhile, believe they can frame the debate as a choice between risky, overlarge tax cuts on one side, and the fate of Medicare and other politically popular programs on the other.

Throughout the three days of floor debate, both sides sought to shore up potential weaknesses in their position. For their part, Republicans parried Democratic claims about Medicare by pledging to address the issue of prescription drugs this fall.

Democrats abandoned Clinton's initial approach of targeted tax relief in favor of broad-based tax cuts, although on a far smaller scale than the GOP wanted.

With an eye on the 2000 elections, when eight first-term Republican senators will seek new terms, Democrats forced a series of politically charged votes, including one on a proposal to reduce the tax cut to make room for prescription drug benefits for Medicare recipients. The amendment failed.

On final passage, the bill was supported by 52 Republicans, Sen. Bob Smith, I-N.H., and Democrats Mary Landrieu and John Breaux of Louisiana, Bob Kerrey of Nebraska and Robert Torricelli of New Jersey. In opposition, there were 43 Democrats and two Republicans, George Voinovich of Ohio and Arlen Specter of Pennsylvania.

At a news conference, Lott and House Speaker Dennis Hastert, R-Ill., outlined an ambitious schedule that calls for a compromise by Tuesday, with final votes in the two chambers by the end of next week.

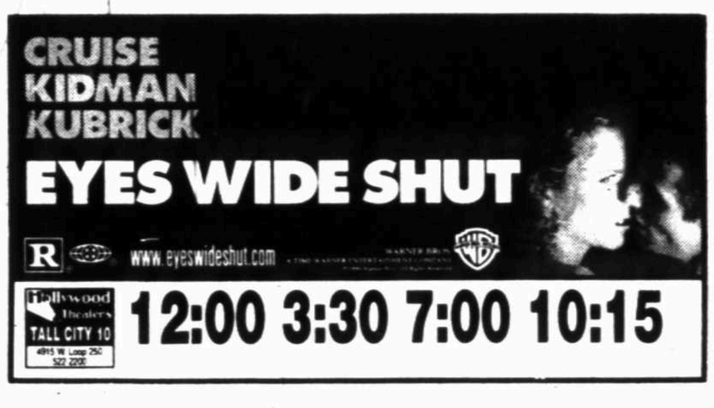

There are numerous differences between the bills. One is a House-passed provision that calls for a 10 percent across-the-board income tax cut rather than the reduced income tax bracket the Senate approved.

Lott told reporters "there's a lot of support" among Senate Republicans for an across-the-board cut, adding, "That is the fairest."

It will fall to Lott and Hastert to prod the chairmen of the tax-writing committees, Roth and Rep. Bill Archer, R-Texas, to avoid prolonged haggling that would slow the broader GOP political strategy.

Chicago works to avoid repeat of deadly heat waves of '95

CHICAGO (AP) — Guzzling down bottled water under the searing midday sun, police Officer Mike Sanders began his shift Friday checking to see how senior citizens were faring in the heat.

Knocking on the door of one high-rise apartment, he got no answer. Inside, he found 81-year-old Mary Powls lying on the floor of her sweltering home. Her windows were closed, and she had no fans or air conditioning.

The groggy woman said she had fallen and couldn't get help.

"It's a good thing that we came around when we did," Sanders said. He later checked on her in the hospital, where she was admitted in stable condition with a 104-degree temperature.

As an unrelenting heat wave kept its grip on much of the nation — from the Plains states to the East Coast — Chicago officials deployed hundreds of workers on the streets to avoid a repeat of 1995, when scorching summer heat was blamed for more than 700 deaths.

The current heat wave has been linked to at least 91 deaths in 17 states across the country since July 19. The Midwest has been hardest hit, with Missouri logging 29 heat-related deaths, Illinois 23 and Ohio 10.

Temperatures neared 100 degrees in many cities, and the heat index — a measure of temperature and humidity — rose past 110 in several places.

By midday, it was 98 along the Chicago lakefront and 99 in Kansas City, Mo. — the 15th straight day that state had seen temperatures in the 90s.

Across Illinois, noon temperatures were 94 in Quincy, 93 in Peoria and Springfield, 98 in East St. Louis and 99 in Mount Vernon.

In other areas, the temperatures had broken through the 100-degree mark by early afternoon. It was 104 degrees in Louisville, Ky., and 102 at the Little Rock, Ark., Air Force Base.

It's been so bad in central Arkansas that Danny Mahan, safety director for a construction company there, said workers pouring concrete have been arrived at work at about 3 a.m. to avoid working in the afternoon heat.

Chicago issued an extreme heat warning Friday, sending workers door-to-door checking on senior citizens and urging people to take advantage of 30 air-conditioned cooling centers. Officials hired extra ambulances and issued stern warnings for people to stay inside.

"If there was ever a day that hot weather threatened the lives of people in Chicago, it is today," said Fire Commissioner Edward Altman, who has been coordinating the city's heat relief efforts.

Chicago had no formal heat emergency plan until the death tolls started mounting during the 1995 heat wave.

On Thursday, the heat index crept toward 120 degrees in Chicago, according to the National Weather Service.

No relief was in sight until Saturday, when a cool front was expected to move in and return temperatures to normal in many parts of the Midwest.

Thunderstorms were also expected to help cool things off along the central Great Lakes and through the mid-Atlantic states.

In South Carolina, temperatures were in the 90s for the 14th straight day on Friday, with the National Weather Service bureau in Raleigh reporting the heat index as high as 110 in some areas.

Even so, produce farmer Tony Southerland of Wilson's Mills, S.C., said he didn't have much to complain about, considering his field had been "blessed with rain" for most of the summer.

"The heat's tough, but it's July," Southerland said. "You get out and load watermelons, and you'll have a new appreciation for heat in the sunshine."

Spacecraft to search for water on moon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Speeding at 3,800 miles an hour, the Lunar Prospector spacecraft was to smash into a frigid crater of the moon early Saturday in its final task for science: a search for evidence of lunar water.

The 354-pound spacecraft was targeted to collide inside a constantly shaded crater near the moon's south pole, where scientists believe pockets of frozen water exist.

The heat and fury of the impact — equal to a two-ton car smashing into the ground at 1,100 mph — was expected to throw a cloud of vapor and debris high above the crater. An arsenal of telescopes on Earth and in space were to be watching, searching for the telltale chemical signature of water.

Lunar Prospector was launched Jan. 6, 1998, and has spent about 18 months orbiting the moon. Its five instruments have analyzed the chemistry, gravity and magnetic fields of the moon. Findings from one of the instruments led to the plan to crash the spacecraft into the surface.

The instrument detected the chemical signature of hydrogen, a finding that to scientists suggests the presence of water. By some estimates, there could be as much as 200 million metric tons of water mixed in the top 18 inches of lunar soil near the poles.

David Goldstein of the University of Texas came up with the idea of testing for the presence of water by crashing the spent Lunar Prospector into a frozen crater.

The idea was quickly approved by project scientists, but most admitted the chance of a total success is low.

"It is really a tricky maneuver," said David Folta, head of the NASA team controlling the guidance of Lunar Prospector.

It's like trying to hit a pie pan at home plate with a baseball thrown from second base at more than 100 miles an hour, Folta said.

The plan is for the spacecraft to fire rockets to slow down and start a speedy dive toward a crater. It will come in at a very low angle, clear a half-mile-high rim by about half a mile, then crash into the 2 1/2-mile-deep crater.

Ground controllers will not see the rockets fire, he said. The engineers will send instructions the Lunar Prospector as it circles the moon for the last time. Following the instructions, the spacecraft is to fire its rockets over the back side of the moon. It will crash before radio contact is restored with Earth.

"If the rocket burn goes as planned, we'll never see it again after it goes around the back of the moon," Folta said.

Alan Binder, the principal scientist for the Lunar Prospector mission, said the crash is a fitting end for the little spacecraft.

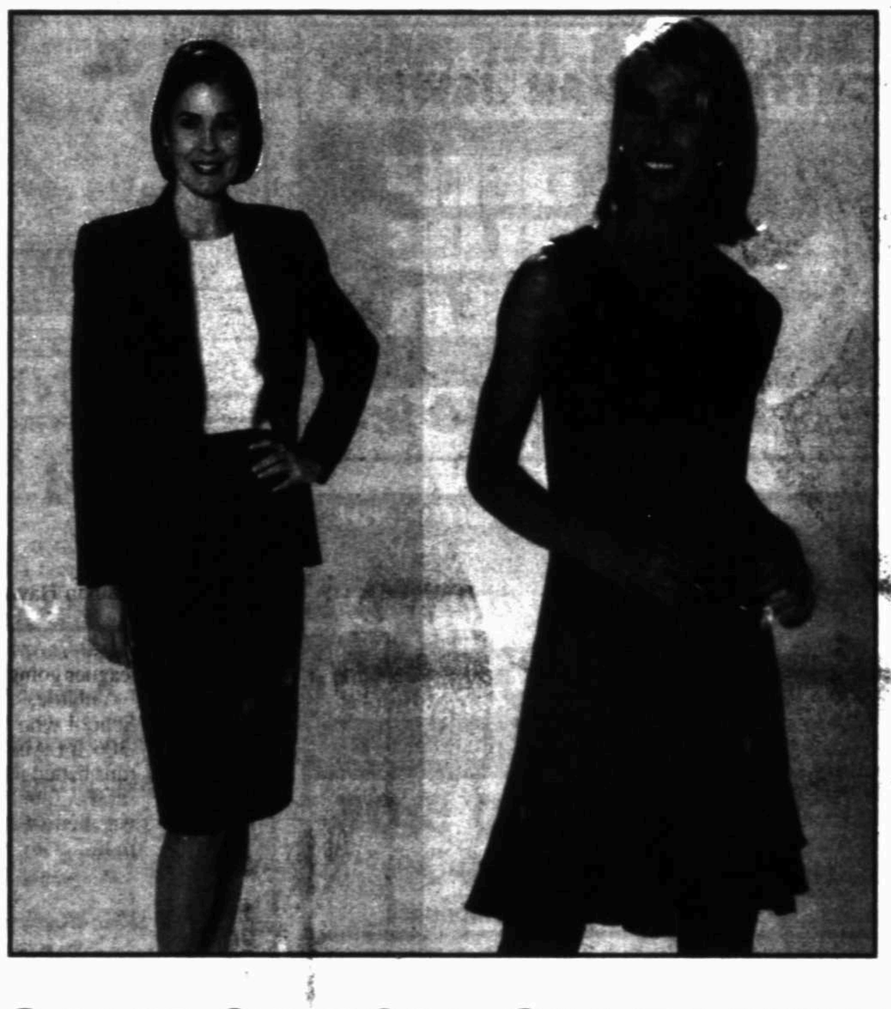

"It has never failed us," said Binder of Prospector's 18-month exploration of the moon. "It got 10 times more data than was expected. It has flown perfectly."

The mission was to end Saturday anyway, and Binder said by crashing Prospector into the moon, "We'll get one final bit of science out of it." If all goes well, he said, the crash will produce a plume containing about 100 pounds — 12 1/2 gallons — of water.

Collegians lead City tournament

By Stewart Doreen
Assistant Sports Editor

For the first time in a long time at the Chase Bank Midland Men's City Golf Championship, older wasn't better.

Friday during the first round of the city tournament, two relatively new members of the twenty-something age bracket — Charlie Prince and Ben Clark — scorched the Hogan Park golf course, carding 66s to share the Day 1 lead.

While the young guns took center stage, they couldn't put too much distance between them and a pair of older and more experienced players — Tim Phillips and Ron Jumper.

Phillips, the West Texas Amateur champion, fired a 68. Jumper carded a 69. Between Phillips and Jumper, they have won three city titles in the 1990s. Prince, Clark, Phillips and Jumper were the only four players to shoot under-par scores Friday on the par-70 Hogan Park layout.

Rolly Hughes is fifth at 70. Former city champion Jeff Moses is sixth after a 71 while Jason Hewett and Bobby Welborn are tied for seventh. Both players shot a 72.

Defending champion Jon Christian, who set a 54-hole tournament record of 198 in his first appearance in the city tournament, didn't have as much success the second time. Christian fired a 73 and is tied with Derek Edmonds for ninth. It was Christian's first city tournament round in the 70s.

For Prince, 21, the first round was an almost picture perfect example on how to start a three-day event like the city tournament. Prince carded four birdies and no bogeys.

"I didn't want to make a bogey. That is the key out here — not to make any bogeys," Prince said. "I went for the middle of greens and never had a tough par putt. I hit the ball really well, for me."

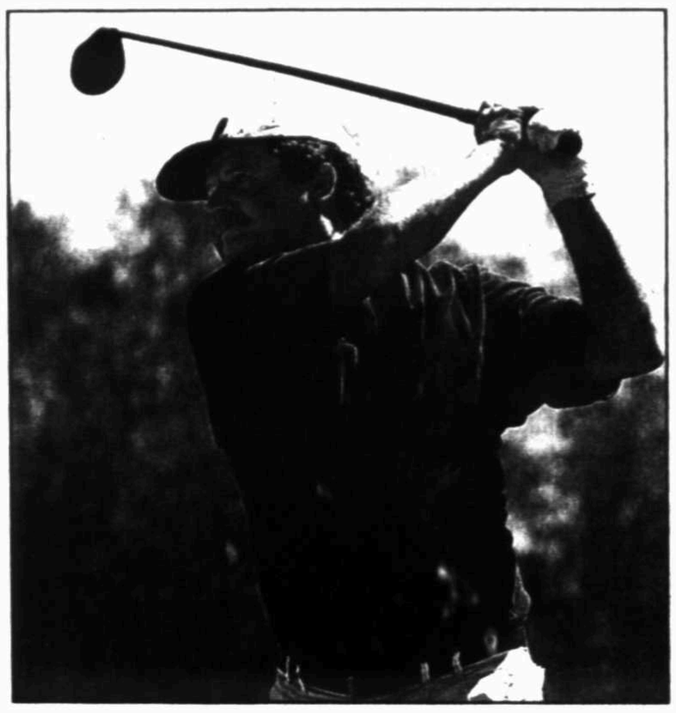

The round could have been better. Prince missed four birdie putts of less than 10 feet, including a five-footer on 12 and a four-footer on 14.

The putter may be the key for Prince to put together the three consistent rounds needed to collect his first tournament win of any kind since he won the District 4-5A title as a senior at Midland Lee. Prince currently plays at the University of Texas-El Paso, where he took fifth in the 49er Classic at Long Beach State. Before his Miner career, Prince played at Midland College.

Last year, Prince tied Christian for the city tournament lead midway through the second round before hitting back-to-back three-putts.

"He (Prince) is capable of winning it," Phillips said. "He is playing really well now and he could have shot 6, 7, 8-under par if he Ronnie Jumper follows through on a drive during Friday's first round of the Men's City Championship at Hogan Park. Jumper fired a 69 and trails by three shots.

BASEBALL'S TRADE DEADLINE APPROACHES

Teams look for pitching before trade deadline

By Ben Walker
AP Baseball Writer

Chuck Finley to the Indians? Kevin Appier to the Red Sox? Jesse Orosco back to the New York Mets?

Those possible deals, plus several others involving the New York Yankees, were shaping up as baseball approached its nonwaiver trading deadline at Saturday midnight EDT.

As usual, most teams were on the prowl for pitching.

Andy Pettitte of the Yankees, Rolando Arrojo and Roberto Hernandez of Tampa Bay, Brad Radke and Mike Trombley of Minnesota, Arthur Rhodes and Orosco of Baltimore and Darryl Kile of Colorado were said to be available.

"I would be shocked if we don't do something," Cleveland general manager John Hart said.

Cleveland, looking at a potential playoff matchup with the Yankees, hoped to close a deal with Anaheim for Finley, 16-9 lifetime against New York.

The Yankees also eyed Finley, along with Arrojo and Hernandez. Pettitte, who has struggled all season, seemed the most likely player to depart the World Series champions, with Houston, Philadelphia and Seattle interested.

"We've had things presented to us, we've had offers made to us," Yankees general manager Brian Cashman said.

Certainly, the AL East-leading Yankees had enough prospects to swing a deal. Especially if it meant heading off the AL Central-leading Indians.

"With the Yankees, you do things short-term, anyway," manager Joe Torre said. "You always want to win now."

The Yankees may have a deal in the works to bring Jim Leyritz back to New York.

Leyritz, who's hit clutch postseason home runs for both the Yankees and the San Diego Padres, could be dealt from San Diego to New York by Saturday night's deadline, several people familiar with the talks said Friday night on the condition they not be identified. The Padres would probably get a prospect or two in return.

Padres general manager Kevin Towers would say only that trading Leyritz remained a possibility. Sources said Leyritz apparently asked the Padres to send him to New York, where he played from 1990-96.

Kansas City was fielding a lot of offers for Appier, its longtime ace.

"In all likelihood, we will make a trade before Saturday night," Royals general manager Herk Robinson said. "I can't tell you who it's going to be with. It's whoever wants him the most, I guess."

A few deals have been made already.

In the last week, San Francisco got former World Series MVP Livan Hernandez from Florida, the Mets acquired Kenny Rogers from Oakland and Toronto got first baseman David Segui from Seattle.

Late Thursday night, the Athletics tried to boost their wild-card chances by getting infielder Randy Velárde and pitcher Omar Olivares from Anaheim for three minor leaguers.

"When you compare apples to apples, just by numbers Omar was having a better year than Kenny," Oakland general manager Billy Beane said. "Omar was on a wish list. We were trying to prepare ourselves for him in the week since we traded Kenny. We knew he was going to be moved, but we weren't sure when."

Last year, there was a flurry of activity on July 31 with more than 10 trades.

In the big deal, the Astros acquired Randy Johnson from Seattle. The Big Unit helped pitch Houston into the playoffs, but went 0-2 — despite a 1.93 ERA — against San Diego in the division series.

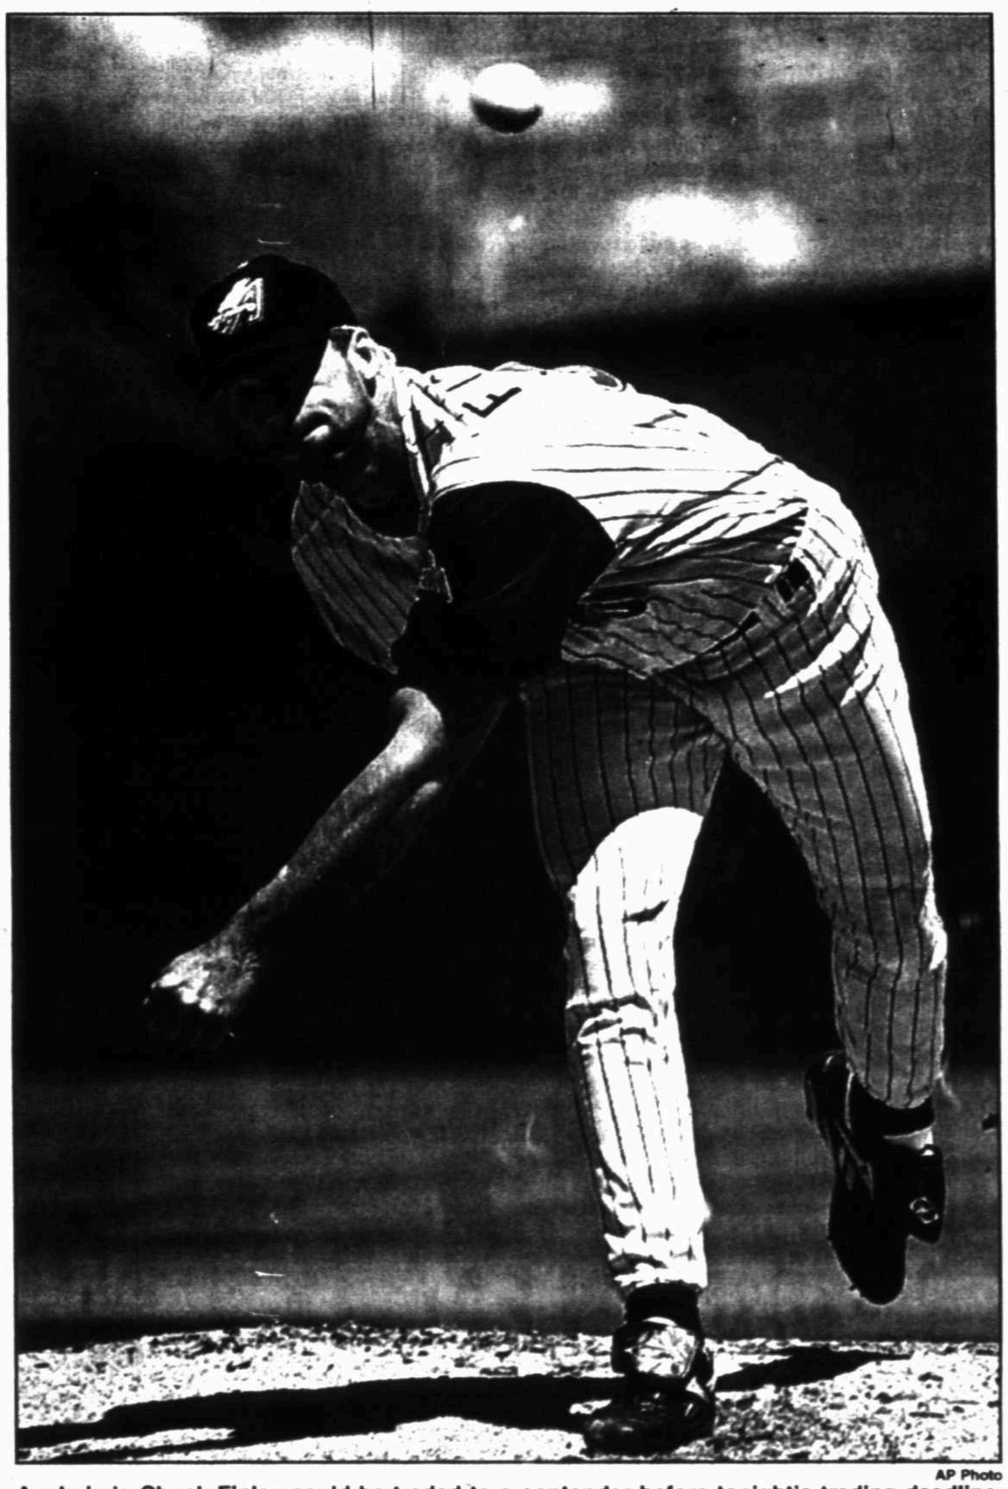

Also last season, Texas got Todd Stottlemyre, Royce Clayton and Todd Zeile in separate trades with St. Louis and Florida, Los Angeles got Mark Grudzielanek and Carlos Perez, San Francisco got Ellis Burks and Baltimore got Juan Guzman.

Usually, these late deals are made for minor leaguers or young major leaguers. And while such trades may seem one-sided at the time, often they look a lot different a year later. Consider the Cardinals' acquisition of powerful Fernando Tatis, along with Darren Oliver, from Texas for Stottlemyre, now in Arizona, and Clayton.

Starting Sunday, trades can still be made. But from that point, players must pass through waivers, a tricky proposition at this time of year. With so many teams in contention, it's more and more unlikely a club would let a key player slip through to a rival.

Last Aug. 31, the last day a team can acquire a player and have him eligible for the postseason, San Diego got utilityman John Vander Wal from Colorado and Cleveland acquired infielder Joey Cora from Seattle for David Bell.

The Mets were said to be looking at Orosco, the bullpen ace from their 1986 World Series team, and Rhodes.

AP Photo

Anaheim's Chuck Finley could be traded to a contender before tonight's trading deadline. As an outstanding starting pitcher who is playing for a non-contending team — Anaheim was 16 1/2 games behind Texas going into Friday night's games — Finley is prime trade bait.

A's acquire Velarde for 2 'Hounds

■ Athletics also get Olivares from Angels in deal that includes total of three minor-leaguers.

Staff and Wire Reports

The Oakland Athletics acquired second baseman Randy Velarde and pitcher Omar Olivares from the Anaheim Angels as the team looks to strengthen its roster for a run at the American League wild card.

DaVanon

Anaheim receives three minor leaguers — including Midland RockHounds Elvin Niña and Jeff DaVanon — for the two veterans in a trade completed late Thursday night. Nathan Haynes, a speedy outfielder from Class A Visalia, is the other minor-leaguer going to Anaheim.

Velarde, a graduate of Midland Lee High School who is 36 now, was hitting a team-high .306 for Anaheim, with nine home runs and 48 runs batted in. He also led the Angels with 57 runs scored, four triples, 43 walks, 13 stolen bases and was tied with Garret Anderson for the team lead in hits with 115.

Velarde's acquisition should help provide stability at second base for the Athletics. Tony Phillips, Jorge Velandia and Scott Spiezio have all been used at the position this season.

A 13-year veteran, Velarde has a .273 career average with 70 homers and 336 RBI in 941 games with the Angels and New York Yankees, with whom he broke into the majors.

Olivares, 32, was 8-9 with a 4.05 earned run average in 20 starts for the Angels. The right-hander led Anaheim in wins and innings pitched with 131 and is tied for second in the AL with three complete games.

In 10 major league seasons, Olivares is 60-67 with a 4.36 ERA in 271 games, with 189 starts, for six different teams.

Oakland has posted a surprising 51-50 record this season and trails the Boston Red Sox by four games in the American League wild card race. The trade came only a week after Oakland traded starter Kenny Rogers to the New York Mets, drawing criticism that the team was giving up on the season to early.

DaVanon, 25, has been a key cog in Midland's offensive machine all season. The outfielder has hit .341 — currently third in the Texas League — with 11 homers and 59 RBI in 99 games. He also had 126 hits, 29 doubles and 11 triples and started the Texas League All-Star game.

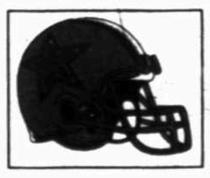

Niña, a 23-year-old right-hander, was a combined 8-4 with a 2.87 ERA in 24 games at Single-A Modesto and Midland. He was 3-2 in seven games in Midland.

Haynes was called the ninth-best prospect in the Oakland organization by Baseball America, but he's had problems with injuries the past three seasons. Haynes, 20, hit .313 with one homer, 14 RBI and 12 stolen bases in 35 games this season at Single-A Visalia.

Spellman is happy to be in Dallas, in NFL

By Jaime Aron
AP Sports Writer

WICHITA FALLS — There was a time when Alonzo Spellman was willing to quit football rather than leave the Chicago Bears. That was before his life fell apart.

After spending the last year out of the NFL while trying to contain a mental illness, Spellman was ecstatic to pull on the silver helmet and blue jersey of the Dallas Cowboys for the first time Friday.

"It's a great opportunity for me to come back and do some good things on the field," Spellman said following his first practice. "It feels great to be back."

McNabb ends holdout, agrees to seven-year deal with Philadelphia

Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Donovan McNabb and the Philadelphia Eagles agreed to a seven-year contract worth as much as $54 million with incentives Friday night, ending contentious negotiations marred by racial accusations by his agent.

McNabb, the No. 2 pick in the draft, agreed to the deal and got on a plane to Philadelphia. His flight was delayed three times, and he finally walked into Veterans Stadium after midnight with a look of exasperation — and relief — on his face.

"I'm excited that it's done," McNabb said. "It's a dream come true to finally be a part of an organization which I've

Generals generate 21 runs vs. 'Hounds

Staff Report

JACKSON, Miss. — The pitching staff that is the worst in the Texas League showed why Friday.

The Midland RockHounds gave up run after run to the Jackson Generals, falling 21-2 in a Texas League game at Smith-Wills Stadium.

Midland (19-19) fell into a three-way tie with El Paso and San Antonio for second place in the Texas League West. All three teams trail Wichita by 4 1/2 games.

Jackson improved to 20-17.

The outing was another disastrous one for the RockHounds' pitchers, who have allowed more than their fair share of runs to Texas League opponents.

The RockHounds, whose ERA was 1.29 runs higher than any team in the Texas League going into Friday's game, have given up 10 or more runs 21 times this season and are 1-20 in those games. This is the fourth time the 'Hounds have allowed 20 or more runs this season.

Friday's total by Jackson was large, but it was two away from the season-high 23 Midland allowed to San Antonio in a 23-8 game on June 10.

It was the fourth time in seven games that Jackson scored 10 or more runs against Midland. Jackson came into the game ranked as one of the two worst hitting teams in the Texas League.

The game turned out to be another heavy hit on a Midland team which has taken a great deal of them. The list of RockHound players who have been called up or traded grew late Thursday night when it was announced that the Oakland Athletics traded RockHounds outfielder Jeff DaVanon and pitcher Elvin Nina to Anaheim for major league pitcher Omar Olivares and second baseman Randy Velarde, a product of Midland Lee high school.

Friday, two more 'Hounds left the game, creating speculation that more trade casualties are on the way. Shortstop Josue Espada came out early and may be a victim of an arm injury. After leaving the game, Espada was seen trying to throw in the 'Hounds bullpen. He was ineffective.

Catcher Cody McKay left the game after the fourth inning, never to return. The team's only other catcher, Willie Morales, was in the lineup as the designated hitter, so McKay's departure meant the 'Hounds lost the DH and their pitchers were forced to hit. So the move to pull McKay could mean that McKay was being discussed as part of a trade.

GAME NOTES: Midland's Chris Enochs (3-5) gave up eight runs in less than two innings of work... Jackson had 24 hits and left 12 runners on base. Midland had five hits and left seven on base... The Generals scored runs in every inning... Jackson's Bryan Braswell (7-6) picked up the win...The win snaps Midland's two-game winning streak. The two teams have split the eight games they have played this season...

First workout costs Dallas some injuries

Associated Press

WICHITA FALLS — The first full-squad workout for the Dallas Cowboys was a costly one as two likely starters for the preseason opener went down with injuries Friday morning.

Right guard Mike Kiselak, playing with the first-team because of two other injuries, seriously damaged his left knee and defensive end Kavika Pittman broke several small bones in his right hand.

Coach Chan Gailey said Kiselak's injury is so bad that "the only question is whether it's a season-ender." Losing him is yet another blow for a line that already is without starter Everett McIver and top backup Tony Hutson.

"It puts a dent in your plans, but, hey, that's part of the game," Gailey said. "You have to overcome that."

McIver tore the anterior cruciate ligament in his left knee last November. He's expected to return around the season opener. His preseason replacement, Hutson, sprained the medial collateral ligament in his right knee Thursday and will be out two to four weeks.

Gailey said the most disappointing part of the injuries is that Hutson and Kiselak will miss quality practice time they can only get when McIver is out.

Second-round pick Solomon Page takes over at right guard, with World League refugee Chris Brymer and former CFL star Freddie Childress also seeing action.

"Even though Solomon has not spent significant time at guard, we certainly believe he has the ability to play there," Gailey said.

DALLAS: Spellman happy

when he refused to have surgery on his ailing shoulder. When the team talked about dumping him after the season, he said he'd retire if they didn't want him.

Then his life fell apart. As he struggled to control a bipolar disorder, he went through a six-month ordeal during which he lost his job, his marriage and, at times, his sanity. A reminder of those days will come Aug. 19 when he's scheduled to be in a Michigan court facing felony weapons charge and misdemeanor charges for having open alcohol in a car and driving with a revoked license.

"I just ran into a whole lot of problems," Spellman said. "They're behind me now. Now I'm ready to keep on going with the Cowboys. ...

"I'm not even looking back, to tell you the truth, I'm looking forward. That's the No. 1 thing. If you look back, there's no way you can walk ahead."

Several teams have been interested in Spellman since he was released last summer. But when he decided last month that he was ready to return, Dallas was the only team contacted by his agent Leigh Steinberg.

Part of what made the Cowboys so attractive is their player programs department led by consultant Calvin Hill and their promises to help Spellman with his illness.

"It's a wonderful organization," said Spellman, who signed a one-year deal for the veteran minimum of $400,000 on Thursday. "There's so many leaders on the team. They know how to get to the big one, how to get it done already.

"It's not a thing where I would have to come in and be in a limelight role. It's the perfect opportunity, the perfect place."

Spellman gives the Cowboys the experienced end they were missing. His 86 games are 25 more than the combined total of fellow ends Kavika Pittman, Greg Ellis and rookies Ebenezer Ekuban and Peppi Zellner.

Although team owner Jerry Jones insisted Spellman wasn't brought in to address a need, the Cowboys were extra happy to have him Friday when Pittman broke his right hand in the opening minutes of practice.

Spellman told defensive line coach Jim Bates that, physically, he's about 60-70 percent of where he should be. Bates promised to be patient as Spellman knocks off the rust from his 17-month layoff and learns the playbook.

"I don't think we'll see the true Alonzo Spellman until say the fourth, fifth game of exhibition season," Bates said. "We will see some flashes, I'm sure, because he's just that type of football player. But it's going to take awhile."

Bates said he believes Spellman is headed in the right direction.

"He's very serious about getting back to the status of being a quality player in the NFL," Bates said. "I don't think there's any doubt about that."

Waltrip plans to quit racing following 2000

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Darrell Waltrip, a three-time Winston Cup champion, will retire as a driver following a farewell tour in 2000.

His retirement will be announced Thursday during the opening day of practice and qualifying for the Brickyard 400 at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

Waltrip was not available for comment today, but personal representative Keith Waltz told The Associated Press the announcement will be "no surprise to anybody."

"When Darrell signed that two-year contract, he said that would probably be it," he said. "Darrell will announce his plans for next year and for his future at the press conference."

Waltrip signed a two-year contract last December with team co-owners Travis Carter and Carl Haas to drive the No. 66 KMart Ford Taurus in NASCAR's top stock car series.

Carter, who also owns a team that fields cars for Jimmy Spencer in the Winston Cup series, said, "Darrell hasn't made any secret of his plans."

Waltrip, 52, of Franklin, Tenn., leads all active Winston Cup drivers with 84 career victories but has not won a race since Darlington in September 1992. He finished 25th at last week's Pennsylvania 500 at Pocono Raceway and is 38th in the season points.

Greene wins a scorching 100

STOCKHOLM, Sweden — Maurice Greene ran one of the fastest 100 meters ever Friday, surging from the blocks and winning in 9.87 seconds at the DN Galan Grand Prix meet.

With almost no wind, Greene was just eight-hundredths of a second off the world record he set last month in Greece.

"It just thrills me how well I'm running at the moment," Greene said. "This is a special stadium, a special meet. But it was not even close to a perfect race."

Michael Johnson had a far rougher day. The double Olympic champion in 1996 abandoned the 400-meter race after about 100 meters, apparently pulling a right thigh muscle. Jerome Young of the United States won in 44.64.

"This is not the way I would have wanted to win with Michael having to pull out," Young said. "But a win is a win. I just concentrated on my own race and I never was aware that Michael stopped."

Johnson left the stadium without comment and with a bandaged right thigh.

Tour de France drug tests all come out clean

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (AP) — All the cyclists in the Tour de France passed their drug tests, world cycling's governing body said Friday.

The International Cycling Union said it tested riders during every stage of the three-week race and there were no positive results.

The showcase event was won by Lance Armstrong, whose remarkable comeback from cancer was dogged by suggestions in the French media he was aided by banned drugs. He was found to have taken an approved prescription skin cream for saddle sores.

Armstrong, appearing on "Late Night with David Letterman" in New York on Friday, said the accusations came from "a few isolated journalists." He joked that he must have had "performance-enhancing chemotherapy."

dreamed about playing in."

Agent Fletcher Smith, whose comments about race playing a role stalled the negotiations, said the deal doesn't include voidable years like those signed by top quarterbacks Tim Couch, Peyton Manning and Ryan Leaf.

It includes an $11.3 million signing bonus and incentive clauses that would trigger higher salaries in the final three years of the deal — a similar structure to the one running back Ricky Williams got from New Orleans.

"I always said the voidable structure was a structure I was interested in getting, because it had been done for the other top quarterbacks," Smith said. "If I could not get that structure, I would be happy with a contract that gave us the same kind of things as the voidable structure."

The bottom line: While McNabb's total package could be worth more than Couch's $48 million, seven-year deal, it guarantees nothing more than a minimum salary beyond the fourth year if McNabb doesn't play in the first three.

Rangers rout Royals behind Zeile, Pudge

ARLINGTON (AP) — Todd Zeile and Ivan Rodriguez each had three RBIs, leading the Texas Rangers to a 9-2 victory over the Kansas City Royals on Friday night.

Rodriguez went 3-for-5 and Zeile drove in the go-ahead run with a fifth-inning sacrifice fly as the Rangers won for the 11th time in 12 games.

Texas is 4-0 against Kansas City this season and 16-4 against the AL Central.

Esteban Loaiza (3-1) allowed two runs and six hits over six innings to win his third straight decision as the Rangers began a season-long 13-game homestand.

Mike Sweeney's two solo homers off Loaiza gave the Royals a 2-0 lead. Sweeney opened the second with a blast to left-center, then added his 17th homer leading off the fourth.

Royals starter Jay Witasick (4-8) shut out the Rangers on three hits over the first four innings before Texas broke out with three runs and four consecutive hits in the fifth.

Mark McLemore and Rodriguez had one-out singles and Rusty Greer's single drove in McLemore. Rafael Palmeiro followed with an RBI single to tie it, then Zeile's sacrifice fly put the Rangers ahead 3-2.

Texas broke the game open with a four-run sixth. Roberto Kelly and Royce Clayton singled to knock out Witasick. Rodriguez singled against reliever Glendon Rusch, scoring Kelly, and when Carlos Beltran failed to pick the ball up cleanly in center field for an error, Clayton crossed the plate.

Zeile followed with a two-run single for a 7-2 lead.

Witasick allowed five runs and nine hits over 5 1-3 innings.

Rodriguez added a two-run single in the seventh to extend Texas' advantage to 9-2.

Notes: Kansas City's Joe Randa went 3-for-4. ... The Rangers are honoring Nolan Ryan before each of the three games over the weekend. The new Hall of Famer was joined before Friday night's game by Hall of Famers Ferguson Jenkins and Gaylord Perry, both of whom also pitched for Texas.

Astros improve to 7-0 against Padres

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The Houston Astros improved to 7-0 against the San Diego Padres this season, winning 5-1 Friday night behind another strong effort from Shane Reynolds.

Reynolds (13-7) held the Padres to an unearned run and five hits in eight innings, struck out nine and walked one. He beat the Padres for the third time in seven days, including the completion last Friday of the game that was suspended June 13 when Astros manager Larry Dierker collapsed in the dugout.

San Diego has lost eight in a row.

Reynolds has allowed the Padres just one earned run in 23 innings this year. He also hit a sacrifice fly, while rookie Daryle Ward hit a two-run homer and Craig Biggio had a two-run double for the Astros.

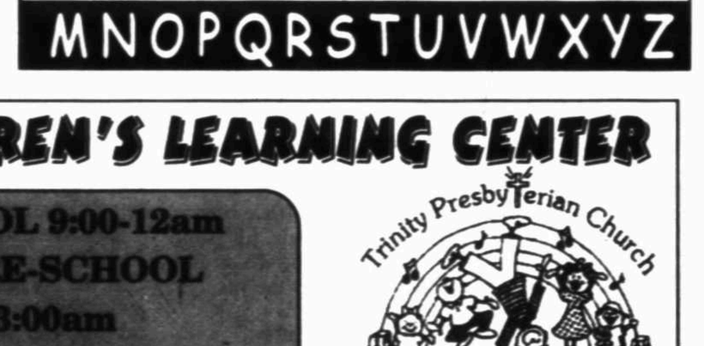

Tony Gwynn went 0-for-3 with a sacrifice fly, all but dashing his hopes of getting his 3,000th career hit at home. Gwynn is nine hits shy of the milestone, and after this three-game series, the Padres begin a three-city, 11-game trip to St. Louis, Montreal and New York. After hitting the sacrifice fly in the first, Gwynn grounded into two straight double plays.

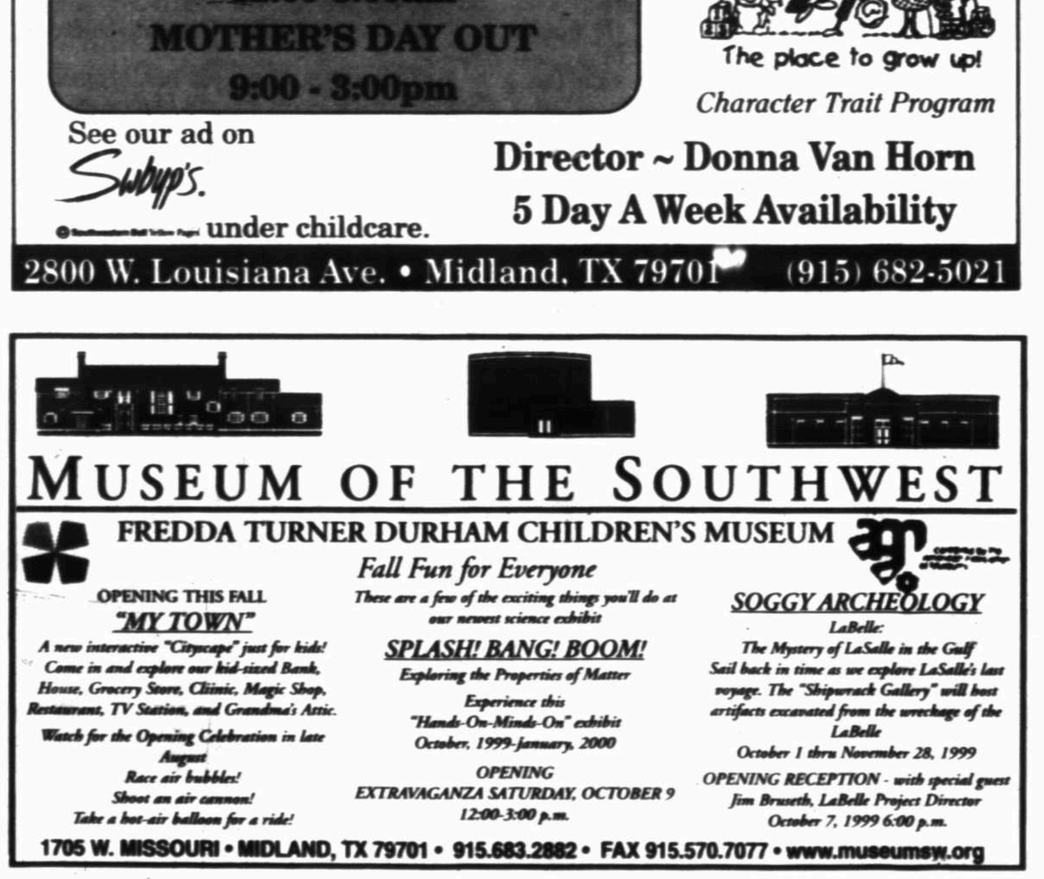

The Padres defeated Houston in the first round of the NL playoffs last year and went on to reach the World Series, but they haven't been able to beat the Astros since. The Astros swept two series in Houston and are two victories away from sweeping the season series.

San Diego starter Matt Clement (5-10) walked the bases loaded with none out in the second inning and Reynolds hit a sacrifice fly to tie the game at 1. Clement then walked Craig Biggio, but was bailed out when Bill Spiers grounded into a double play.

Ward homered off Clement in the third, and Biggio hit a two-run double off Carlos Almanzar in the sixth.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll have: 5-Dymanic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, July 31, 1999:

Creativity is high; you come up with solution after solution. Others want to tap into your incredible ingenuity. Listen to your inner voice, but don't worry needlessly. Solve problems as fast as you can. Career and bosses can be unusually demanding; do what you must in order to make this area of your life work. If you are single, you'll find yourself feeling quite hot and spicy this year! An intense relationship graces your life. If attached, the more you reveal of yourself, the closer your bond becomes. Passion runs high. PISCES wants to know you intimately.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★ Allow greater flexibility; a loved one responds. Your intuition is right on with money. Know where to establish limits in this area. Even though it is the weekend, work energy drives you. Discuss what is on your mind, then let it go. Take time for yourself, even if it means just taking off for a day trip.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★★ You know what you want and won't hesitate to communicate it. Others will help you make a domestic desire real. You'll be delighted with what goes on. Listen to a friend; get together with others.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★ Others trust you to bring organization and clarity to ideas. Get into the moment, socializing and enjoying partners. Move past any shyness or need to stay within. Others clearly adore you. Think about what you are spending before you get the end tally!

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★★ Schedule a day trip; take off and enjoy yourself. You might manipulate finances to make what you want possible. Others are full of ideas. Turn that dream into a reality. Stay focused on the long term. Your high drive seems to unearth new possibilities and get others motivated.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ Getting together with a special friend lightens your spirit. You snare many secrets together. Opening up is easy. Your playfulness encourages others to cut loose and be themselves. Curb a tendency to exaggerate or go overboard, even in your mind.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★★ Others find you exciting and delightful. Invitations come left and right, but you might feel obligated to keep plans you view as dull or an obligation. Aim for what you want; don't compromise. Make calls; reach out for friends.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★ Pace yourself and don't let others push you. You know what works for you. If you need to make a change, do it, even if it means disappointing another. Make plans with an older relative who appreciates your thoughtfulness.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★★ A usually constricting tie loosens up. Take off for a day trip or browse through a historical area. Take the high road with others. Give friends the benefit of the doubt. Review your budget before you make a long-awaited expenditure. Allow spontaneity to play a role in your choices.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ Your presence makes a difference to family members. You might feel like another is pushing you hard. Be sensitive to a partner who verbalizes many ideas now. Make plans for a visit or vacation soon.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★★ You might be out the door before you even know it. Others knock on your door. Catch up on news; visit with friends. You won't believe what others share, but listen. Creativity seems down, but your day is action-packed. Having no plans might be more fun; let events and people lead.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★★ You certainly see a friend in a new light. How you view another and what role he plays in your life could change substantially. You have a lot of errands to run. Check out a major purchase before making it.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ Touch base with others; make that additional effort. Share a new hobby with a family member or someone you put on a pedestal. Together, you have a ball and enrich your bond. If single, an encounter could prove to be most interesting. . .

Jeffrey Katzenberg has new boss

LOS ANGELES — Fresh from settlement of a bonus dispute with his former employer, Jeffrey Katzenberg has some new bosses — at the DreamWorks SKG studio, where he is a principal owner.

Katzenberg said Thursday he is taking over as interim head of production at DreamWorks, the studio he founded with Steven Spielberg and David Geffen. He replaces Robert Cooper, who is forming his own production company.

Overseeing day-to-day film development, Katzenberg will report to Spielberg and feature-film chiefs Walter Parkes and Laurie MacDonald, while technically remaining one of Parkes and MacDonald's bosses.

"I'm back where I was in 1981 and glad to be there," said Katzenberg, referring to his time as a production executive at Paramount before he went to Disney in 1984.

Katzenberg this month settled a three-year legal fight with Disney over bonus money owed him from his tenure as studio chief.

ATHENS, Greece — American soprano Jessye Norman will perform at an ancient Greek theater in September despite concerns from archaeologists.

Culture Minister Elisavet Papazoi on Friday allocated the open-air Epidauros theater, about 35 miles southwest of Athens, to the singer for a performance commemorating the centennial of jazz great Duke Ellington's birth.

An advisory board had recommended that Norman appear at a smaller theater next to Epidauros, where performances are limited so the ancient site is protected.

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Trevor George Smith, better known as rap star Busta Rhymes, has been sued by a woman who claims he is the father of her child.

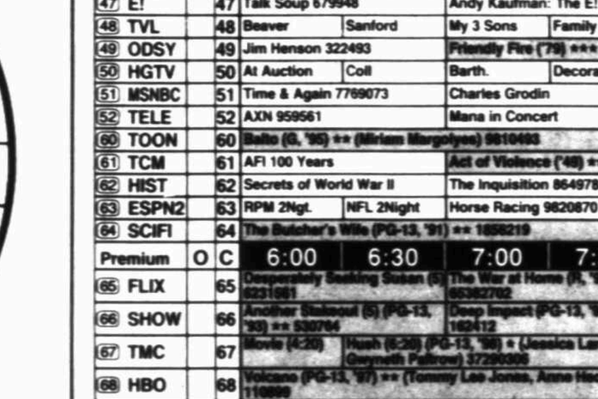

Jill Miskelly, 25, filed the paternity suit earlier this month.

She claims the child, Mariah Elizabeth Miskelly, is Smith's, the result of a night they spent together in January 1998.

A paternity test showed that the chances are 99.996 percent that Smith is Mariah's father.

In January, Smith started voluntarily making child support payments of $1,250 a month, but Miskelly's attorney said that was not enough.

North Carolina law typically calls for child support to be set in proportion to a parent's income.

Amy Carter, daughter of former President Jimmy Carter, has given birth to a baby boy. Ms. Carter is shown here with her husband James Wentzel.

BOSTON — The Artist formerly known as Prince has dropped his lawsuit against Uptown magazine.

Lawyers say the nonprofit fan-written and -produced publication has agreed that, among other things, it will no longer publish discographies of bootlegs of The Artist's recordings.

The Chanhassen, Minn.-based musician also wants Uptown to stop using the unpronounceable symbol that he adopted in 1993 in place of his name. Uptown officials said they had been using the symbol "out of respect."

The agreement guarantees Uptown's First Amendment rights, and the right to freely comment on The Artist's music — unreleased and released — as it has since it was first launched as a fanzine in Sweden in 1991.

ATLANTA — Amy Carter has given birth to a baby boy, the 10th grandchild of former President Jimmy Carter, 74, and his wife Rosalynn.

Hugo James Wentzel was born Thursday about 9 p.m., weighing 7 pounds 13 ounces and measuring 20 inches.

Both mother and child were doing fine, Carrie Harmon, a spokeswoman for the Carter Center, said Friday.

Ms. Carter, 31, and her husband of three years, James Wentzel, live in Atlanta near the Carter Center, where she was elected to the board of councilors in March 1998.

Inkster's 69 puts her halfway home to Hall of Fame

PRIDDIS, Alberta (AP) — Juli Inkster isn't playing her best golf in the du Maurier Classic. The scary thing for the rest of the field is that she's still in the lead, halfway home to a third straight major title and a place in the LPGA Hall of Fame.

Despite sloppy bogeys on two par-5s and a constant battle to find a swing she could trust, Inkster pieced together a 3-under 69 on Friday that left her tied with Canadian Dawn Coe-Jones.

"I made a lot of mistakes that I got away with," said Inkster, at 7-under 137 and the only player to break 70 in both rounds at Priddis Greens Golf and Country Club.

Under cool, cloudy skies that produced showers in the afternoon, Coe-Jones had the best round of the tournament with a bogey-free 65 that gave the Canadian gallery another contender to celebrate.

Laura Davies, bombing drives in the thin air near the Canadian Rockies, made four birdies on the five par-5s for a 66 and was one shot behind.

GOLF: Clark, Prince lead City tourney

would have made some putts. If he putts better, (he can win)."

Like Prince, Clark, 20, has Midland College ties. Clark will be a returning sophomore the Chaparrals. Clark went to high school at Westlake High School in Austin and established residency in Midland this year. Unlike Prince, Clark has won since his prep days, winning three tournaments this past year with MC.

"I have been in the lead before," Clark said. "The thing you have to look out for, especially here, is that you can get too defensive. You have to stay aggressive."

Also, Clark's strong suit is with the putter.

"He is the best putter I have seen," Prince said of his playing partner in today's second round.

Clark made five of those birdie putts in his city tournament debut to put himself in that final pairing with the other twenty-something leader, Prince.

"That will be good. We will feed off each other," said Clark of the pairing with Prince. "We played out here the other day and made the turn at 4-under par. We were going back and forth."

THE HOME-COURSE ADVANTAGE: The leaderboard of the Midland city tournament definitely has a Hoganesque look after the first round. The top four golfers (Prince, Clark, Phillips and Jumper) call Hogan Park their home course. Four of the last five city tournament winners are from Hogan.

"Coming out here is a huge advantage," Clark said. "You get the feel of making a lot of birdies at the Day Game and find the nooks and crannies of the golf course that play to your advantage."

CITY NOTES: Tommy Conner leads the President's flight after shooting a 71... Today's championship flight round will be played on holes No. 10-27...

Two tie atop GHO board

CROMWELL, Conn. (AP) — Brent Geiberger and Pete Jordan, good friends in search of their first PGA Tour victory, were tied Friday at 11-under-par for the second-round lead of the Greater Hartford Open.

Gieberger started the day three strokes off the lead and shot a 63, the low round of the day and his lowest this year on tour.

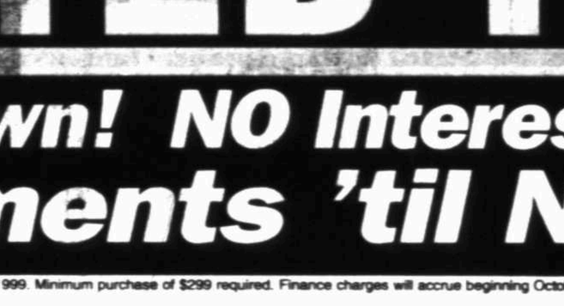

Jordan began the day at 6-under, one stroke out of the lead, and was even par at the turn. He birdied five of the last nine holes to finish with a 65, hitting 13 of 14 fairways at the TPC at River Highlands.

Honda-ridin' holy man launches ministry at Big Spring truck stop

By Jimmy Patterson
Staff writer

BIG SPRING — They know he's coming. Sometimes even before he's rounded the corner.

Eddie Tubbs is not the prototypical Southern Baptist pastor, often making visits to the hospitalized or the homebound on his Honda Gold Wing motorcycle. A self-described country boy from Dumas, Tubbs is grounded enough to take the time to go riding with the head custodian at First Baptist Church in Big Spring, where the nameplate on the preacher's desk reads, "Eddie Tubbs, PPHM.' That's 'Paid Professional Holy Man,' not exactly a title which connotes years of schooling, but one that Tubbs likes anyway.

Tubbs

Tubbs knows there are some things in life that should be taken seriously — God's work, for instance — and there are some things in life that deserve a little levity, such as professional titles that are longer than the professional's name the letters modify.

When he's not spreading the word, Tubbs rides his bike as a way of enjoying life and making the most out of what God intended as a celebration. He wears pullover sports shirts, boots and faded blue jeans to the office. And when he climbs aboard his Gold Wing, the University of Texas-Galveston Medical Branch graduate cranks up his stereo and listens to country, classical and often music by the Fightin' Texas Aggie Band. Tubbs even says the music of that Little ol' Band From Texas, Z.Z. Top, is "good ridin' music."

By now, it's fairly obvious that Tubbs is a free spirit. But when there is work to be done, he knows when to set aside the joys of biking for the seriousness of the Gospel. Which is why he so willingly helped establish a truck stop ministry at Rip Griffin's Truck Stop in Big Spring earlier this year.

"There are almost 9 million truckers in the country, and only 90 truck stop ministries," Tubbs said. "If you study the Scriptures today, I think you'll find that, in today's managerial parlance, Christ was proactive. He went out and met people. He didn't wait for them to come follow him. That's one of the issues of the church today."

Tubbs said that on any given Sunday anywhere from zero-to-13 truckers will congregate in the upstairs truckers' lounge for the informal service. Drivers more often than not attend just as they dress on the job: in t-shirts, tennis shoes and shorts.

The truck stop ministry begins Sundays about 7:30 a.m., when a team of church volunteers hits the lot at Rip's, talking to truckers, and distributing pamphlets and tapes that contain testimonials from truckers. Before any would-be volunteers are allowed on the lot at Rip's, though, Tubbs said a simple course in trucker etiquette is necessary.

"Trucker etiquette is, 'Don't touch my truck, don't come up behind me and don't stand outside my truck and

Relief trip to Bosnia fills West Texas men with sense of peace, appreciation

By Jimmy Patterson
Staff writer

James Finn and Mauro Sotelo say they're changed men. Two weeks in Bosnia will do that.

Finn, of Midland, and Sotelo, who lives in Stanton, recently returned from a work mission in the war-torn region, sponsored by La Promesa Foundation. The journey was both to help the people of Bosnia, and to visit Medugorje, considered one of the holiest sites on earth by Catholics devoted to Mary.

The trip is the product of the Dallas-based St. David's Relief Foundation and its Roofs Across Bosnia camp and pilgrimage. Over 40 volunteers helped install roofs on a number of homes in the Bosnian village of Bodariste. Midland's La Promesa, a non-profit Marian Catholic organization, sponsored Finn and Sotelo as well as Arturo Gandar, of San Antonio; and Henry Clay and W.T. Hunt, of Brackettville.

"It was a purely selfish trip. Somebody like myself doesn't normally get an opportunity to go to Europe," said Finn. "What ended up happening was more exciting than even I was thinking would happen."

Finn said he returned to Midland with "a real sense of peace."

"I was able to see the miracle of Medugorje," Finn said. "And to see Catholics and Muslims working together on roofs. We were able to communicate with them despite the language barriers. It was a life altering experience."

Finn said he didn't know if the sense of peace he returned with was divine in nature, or the result of working with others toward a positive result in a country torn apart by war.

"We had to fight for roof space there were so many of us," he said. "Although we were there to restore buildings, we were also there to tell the people of Bosnia-Herzegovena that they're not forgotten or forsaken. To help with the roofing was wonderful. To

Local churches use Web sites to spread word

Editor's note: This is part one of a two part series on how local churches are using computer technology.

By Matt Josefy

"Feed my sheep," Jesus said, and clergymen have struggled for centuries, developing different methods to carry out the command.

Perhaps the most recent development in the effort to care for a congregation is the use of modern technology. Computers, the internet, and e-mail provide a whole new avenue for ministry. Chat room evangelism is possibly a new art form.

Area churches are not far behind in the wave of tech-

The Good Book: II Corinthians (Pt. 47 of 66)

Overview:

Paul's second letter to the church at Corinth was written after a painful visit by Paul to the church. Paul had written a letter and visited the church in order to correct some problems in the congregation. Now Paul writes to the congregation in order to console, encourage, and let them know of the "abundant love" he has for them. In the second portion of the letter Paul reminds the Corinthians of an offering being collected for poor Christians in Jerusalem. Paul wants the church to be prepared to present this offering to those whom he is sending so that his boasting of them may not be in vain.

Theme passages:

2 Corinthians 8:9 "For you know the generous act of our Lord Jesus Christ, that though he was rich, yet for your sake he became poor, so that by his poverty you might become rich." 9:6 "The point is this: the one who sows sparingly will also reap sparingly, and the one who sows bountifully will also reap bountifully."

VINCENT KITUKU

Mere presence helps bereaved souls

Recently, a friend of mine invited me to speak at her husband's funeral service. We don't work together or go to the same church or any other social events. We first met on businesses matters and with time got to know one another.

Kituku

When I arrived, I saw Kellie, another business colleague who works with my bereaved friend. We sat together and after a while Kellie exclaimed, "I am the only one who came from our department." My bereaved friend has been working in the department, within a state university, for about five years. But, only one co-worker sacrificed her time to be with a grieving colleague.

If you have lost a child, parent, spouse, or a close friend, you know the pain of grief. You also know the crucial role that other people play in helping you go through your nightmare. The presence of these people, even if they say nothing, is invaluable. It makes the bereaved know that his or her grief is shared with others. Or someone cares. Somehow this makes the pain bearable.

This is the time when the grieving have the future blurred, life without the deceased seems meaningless. Emotional toll takes a different angle, loss of identity, guilt, insecurity and anger. The presence of other people helps stabilize the magnitude of these emotional impacts.

We are a busy generation. But, we can be with the grieving especially if we know them. We can't be so insensitive that someone we work with or know can lose a loved and we neglect spending a few moments of time with him or her!

In some African cultures, the pain of death is shared by the entire community. People from the community came whether they knew the deceased or his/her family members or not. Their presence helped start the healing process for the bereaved family, they grieved with the bereaved family.

In all the incidents recorded about Christ Jesus, there is only one that says He cried-the death of Lazarus (John 11:35). The sting of death of a loved one has no equal. The Bible says Jesus was touched by the grief on Mary and Martha's face.

Jesus had the power to heal their brother without being present. People had invited Him to go to their places and heal their sick ones. But, He healed them without going there.

However, in this situation, Lazarus was dead and his sisters and members of the family and community were grieving. Jesus came to be with them. He grieved with them before bringing healing, the resurrection of Lazarus.

In Luke 24: 13-35, Jesus again shows the importance of being with the grieving. Two of His disciples were walking to a nearby village on the day of His resurrection. They had heard about His resurrection, but had no assurance. They talked about their great loss. Jesus joined and walked with them and asked them what they were talking about. Their response holler at me.' And there are reasons for this. Those of us who are not in the trucker business forget that that truck is their home, and anybody who walks up to it needs to treat it with respect. It'd be like a stranger walking up to your home and looking in the window unannounced. When you stand on their truck and they're sitting there in the cab and they look over and your face is right there, that's a threat to them. You have to treat their truck as if it's their home. As long as they know you are there, the vast majority will be very polite."

Tubbs first recognized the need for a truck stop ministry last year when former trucker and Cheyenne, Wyoming, resident LeRoy Jones spoke to the congregation at FBC-Big Spring late last year. Tubbs was won over and made efforts to start the ministry then. It opened in January of this year.

"Truck stop ministries were very, very sparse when I was driving," Jones said this week from Wyoming. "We've always been evangelistic in nature, and we've had marriages put back together, suicides prevented. These guys who drive trucks are on a time table, they get frayed out with nerves, and we're there for them. One day we may see them in Big Spring, the next day in Iowa or Wyoming."

Jones said he first benefited from a truck stop ministry in Lewisville in the 1970s.

Truckers learn about locations of ministries via CB radios, or through the ministry's national 800 number (800-545-7600). On the other end of that phone call is Glen Coop in Iowa, who co-founded the ministry with Jones.

Tubbs is helped at Rip Griffin's by former Big Spring Police Chief Joe Cook, who conducts Bible study each Sunday; guitarist Glenn Jones, a retired U.S. Air Force, and a host of other First Baptist members.

"The church has to go into the world instead of us sitting back and waiting for the world to come to us," Tubbs said. "My basic attitude is that everyone wants to know who Christ is. The ministry is predominantly Southern Baptist in nature, but it's sponsored by the North American Mission Group and it's very inter-denominational. It's not our agenda to turn all truckers into Southern Baptists. Our ministry is to let them know that Jesus loves them."

One of God's purposes, Tubbs said, is to encourage everyone — from pastors to bikers to truckers — to enjoy life.

"The whole thing about life," Tubbs said, "is that God gave it to us to celebrate, and that's what we miss a lot of today: the joy. Through the good times and the bad times, it's still worth celebrating.

"We look for the promised hope of Christ in the bad times. God's presence can grow even closer to us in those bad times. One of the things about the difficult times is that it shows me my dependence on God should be greater, and I think that we have forgotten that the real art of suffering is when it brings man closer to God.

"The hope (through the bad times) is that Jesus' presence is with you today and will continue to grow with you as you walk through the days to come, and that gives you hope to celebrate life.

"Then you get on a motorcycle and get out in the country and celebrate life and say, 'Hey, this is cool, man, just don't let that furry little varmint run out in front of me, or that big deer come out and nail my hide.' "

BOSNIA: Natives teach West Texans to have deeper appreciation of life

see the countryside is mind-blowing. Anybody who did not go because they were worried for their safety, I've got bad news: it wasn't dangerous at all.

Many Catholics believe that Mary appeared 18 years ago on a hill in Medugorje. To this day, it is believed that two natives — adults now but children at the time of her first reported appearance, still claim to see her on a daily basis.

Sotelo echoed Finn's sentiments, saying his journey to Bosnia was different than any trip he has ever taken. Despite the poor conditions the people of Bosnia live in, Finn said the people were giving and kind. Living amid them for two weeks helped him view his life in a different light.

"It was a wonderful experience," Sotelo said. "Especially in Bodariste, living the way the people there live. No water, no bathrooms. We had to walk 3-4 blocks to take a shower. There was no luxury, period. It made me appreciate what I have here. Visiting with the people who live there and getting to know them and the suffering they went through during the war was very touching, very emotional. We stayed with some of the older men there and one of them showed us pictures of his home that had been bombed out and told us stories of how his son had been killed during the war.

"What is really neat about it is you see all the towns like Sarajevo and the other towns that were shelled during the war, then you go to Medugorje, and no bombs hit. We believe the Blessed Mother protected the town. Bombs fell but never actually went off. It's a blessed town."

KITUKU: Comforting the grieving can be a person's hardest job shows how they felt powerless. Their hope was shattered. They were confused to hear from "some women" that He was no longer in the tomb. These reactions are experienced by anyone after the death of someone so dear. For the grieving, life makes no sense at all.

Comforting the living, who are grieving after the death of a loved one can be the hardest thing you or I will ever have to do. This is even harder if the death was sudden. Being with the grieving does not mean giving your opinion. "I am sorry" or "I am praying for you" or "My thoughts are with you" suffices. You hurt someone who is grieving when you say that you understand, especially if you have never gone through the same kind of loss.

We tell the grieving "Call me if there is anything I can do for you." You are not called, yet you can do something. Call and ask how they are doing. Visit and be with them. Let them talk about the good life they had with the deceased. When they tell their story, they heal. If someone cries, don't tell them to "Keep quiet, everything will be fine." For the grieving, it is hard to see how "everything" will be fine, in the absence of a loved one.

Are you going to be, "...the only one...?"

TECHNOLOGY: Ministers see up side to Internet presence

(From 1C)

nology.

Clay Hopkins, youth minister of Crestview Baptist Church, has an e-mail based devotional ministry that reaches more than 100 students each weekday, which are made up of both youth in his program as well as their e-mail pen pals.

After getting the idea from a friend in April, he and his wife prayed about it. Then, they sought out two youth and one college student to each write original devotions one day out of the week.

In May, the program kicked off with more than 30 addresses. Now, a devotional is sent out to more than 80 addresses, some serving more than one person, in addition to forwards.

"I've received e-mail from two people I've never heard of thanking me for the program. With this, we can hit the students with something that so many of them use everyday. The coolest thing is that in the time it takes them to click a few buttons and check their mail, we can be ministering to our students," Hopkins said.

Molly Row, a ninth grader, said, "It's a neat thing because you can go online in the morning and it's there. (The program) gets you to open the Bible. Since it's online, if you're checking your e-mail anyway, it makes it easier to do a devotional."

In the future, he foresees possible programs such as cyber-spiritual mentors, where he could match a struggling student up with another individual who has gone through similar problems, or ongoing Bible study discussion boards.

Drew Anderson, business administrator of First Presbyterian Church, is planning ahead as well. Eventually, when youth are on trips like they were this week, he plans to upload pictures taken with a digital camera onto a web page for parents to be kept abreast of the activities taking place.

He said that the church probably spends in the neighborhood of $8,000 per year on technological purchases. Recently, the church bought a Palm Pilot systems for the staff. "Technology is touching ministry. We're working on a forms page, so if parent forgets a permission slip or something like that, they can download it off of the internet."

When the church does a pictorial directory in the next few months, they plan on also photographing individual members with a digital camera. This will help the staff of the larger congregation to put a face with a name every time they speak on the phone.

"Sometimes, a pastor could be doing counseling over the phone with someone he is not extremely familiar with. This way, when he sees that person on Sunday, he'll be able to better identify with the person," Anderson said.

While these and other uses may be down the road for a large number of churches, already dozens of churches have already taken the initial step of creating a web site to serve various purposes.

Gary Dyer, pastor of First Baptist, said that his church's Internet site serves multiple purposes. "For one, it's an advertisement to get the word out about our church. Secondly, it's an information source for our membership."

Eric Siegmund, a layman who manages First Baptist's site, introduced the idea to Dyer. "A couple of years ago, I started noticing that a handful of churches had web sites, and realized that there would probably be a lot more in the future."

He took it upon himself to learn html (a programming language), and now feels that the site can serve the same purpose as a real estate listing for people moving into town. "It gives them a feel for what the church is like."

The site is more comprehensive than many, with sermons and a growing membership directory of e-mail addresses. Use of the Internet adds to the current use of television and radio broadcasts.

Next week: Clergymen will further discuss the potential and current uses of technology in ministry, in addition to the costs involved. A preliminary directory of Midland church web pages will also be published.

At activists' gathering, Catholics hear praise and criticism

LOS ANGELES (AP) — On a hot afternoon, a group of men and women wearing name tags trudged up Seventh Street in MacArthur Park, a run-down neighborhood. They passed a row of faded storefronts and a bedraggled man pushing a shopping cart.

The group members were Catholics in town to talk about social activism at Jubilee Justice, a national convention earlier this month. Their guide was Philip Lance, an activist Episcopal priest who had good news and bad for the Catholics.

The good news came as Lance led a tour of Pueblo Nuevo, one of several sites showcasing Catholic-funded anti-poverty efforts during Jubilee Justice.

For five years, Lance has managed Pueblo Nuevo, a thrift store and janitorial cooperative employing poor, Hispanic men who have few skills. Employees can eventually opt for part-ownership of the company.

The enterprise expects to turn its first profit this year, about $25,000. Lance says a dividend of running the venture is watching the employees warm to the concept of owning the business, as in a recent meeting to learn about balance sheets.

"A lot of people were nodding their heads because they were getting it," Lance said. "You could really see the veils of mystery starting to fall away."

While expressing gratitude for seed money and support from the Catholic Church's Campaign for Human Development, which helped get Pueblo Nuevo started, Lance took the opportunity to speak out against church policies he considers unjust.

He faulted Catholic hospitals for their response to unionizing efforts by employees, and Lance, who is gay, criticized church attitudes toward homosexuals.

"I'm going to offend some people here," he said sheepishly. "But hopefully we can start a dialogue ... ."

In fact, there was little real discussion among the 25 Catholic lay people and clergy on his tour. Some said much work remains on the issues Lance raised, and they congratulated him for speaking his mind.

Just as Jubilee Justice was set to begin, the Catholic Church disciplined a priest and nun in Baltimore who had started a nationwide ministry for gays and lesbians. Many convention participants expressed dismay.

"The church is saying that gay people are disordered," Lance said. "That is something we find very difficult to deal with."

Catholic bishops recently published a document called "Always Our Children" that urged treating homosexuals with dignity and deplored anti-gay violence. Nonetheless, the church teaches that homosexual practice is sinful.

Also at the conference were union organizers eager to take the church to task for what they say are union-busting efforts at Catholic Healthcare West, a group of California hospitals founded by Catholic nuns.

Among other things, hospital administrators have met one-on-one with workers targeted in the unionizing efforts, a practice that union activists said goes against traditionally church teachings about workers' rights and economic justice.

Hospital officials said they were simply trying to give workers their side of the issue.

Lance told the group members that controversy could temporarily hamper expansion efforts for Pueblo Nuevo.

He said Pueblo Nuevo had considered applying for a loan through a fund sponsored by the hospital group. But Pueblo Nuevo board members backed out when they learned of the union troubles.

Summarizing his critique after the tour, Lance said, "It did give me a chance to get up there and say, 'You guys are really off-base on certain issues.' "

It's a confrontation that Catholics don't often face from this sector.

For almost 30 years, the church's Campaign for Human Development has been funding anti-poverty programs organized by both secular and denominational groups.

It started operations in 1969 with a $10 million donation from the pews. This year, it expects to disburse that much in grants for projects as diverse as a crime hot-spot campaign in Springfield, Mass., and a literacy program for ex-convicts in South Central Los Angeles, said Douglas Lawson, the campaign's associate director for programs.

The campaign often works with churches that disagree with Catholics on theological points. Most of the time, the divide remains out of the picture.

Israeli court rules Latin numerals can be inscribed on tombstones

JERUSALEM (AP) — In what supporters call a victory for religious freedom, Israelis now have a choice between religious and secular calendars for date inscriptions on their tombstones.

Israel's Supreme Court ruled in favor of a petition from the family of Rosa Greital, who died in 1986 and was buried in a cemetery in Rishon Lezion, a city south of Tel Aviv.

The family requested that Western dates be inscribed on her tombstone, but the ultra-Orthodox burial societies that oversee almost all Israeli cemeteries permitted only the Jewish dates. The Jewish calendar dates back more than 5,000 years and uses a Hebrew lettering system for numbers.

The Supreme Court, in a 2-1 decision, ruled Tuesday that the burial societies could not require families to abide by their rigid religious rules.

"If, in this non-theocratic state, the court fails to set the limits of religious freedom, we will be totally neglecting the feelings of the population," Chief Justice Aharon Barak wrote in the majority decision.

Lobbyists for religious freedom in Israel said the decision to allow secular dates marked a great step forward in limiting the powers of ultra-Orthodox Jews in Israel.

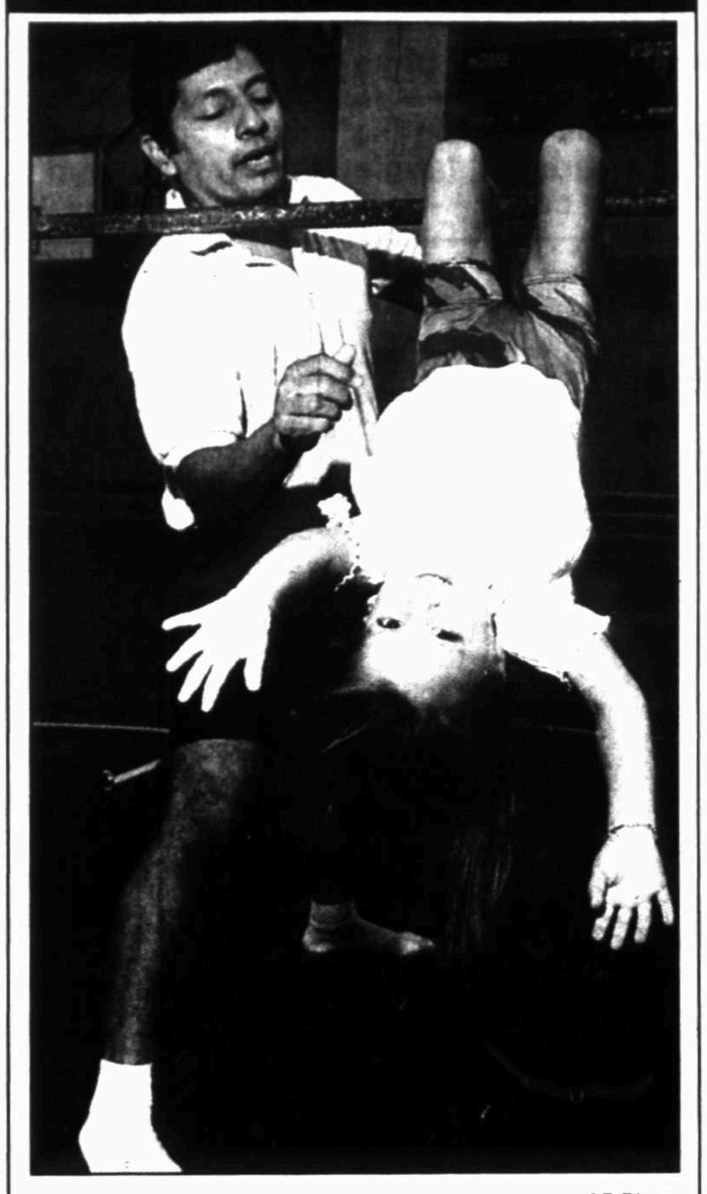

The Israel Religious Action Center, which represents the liberal movement of Reform Judaism, helped the family take the case to the Supreme Court.

Uri Regev, head of the Religious Action Center, said he hoped the decision meant the Supreme Court would continue to rule against religious coercion.

"For decades, these institutions have used their monopoly on religious matters to tell Jews how they must live and die," Regev said in a statement.

Nursing student charged with death of daughter

By Mike Finger
Associated Press

DALLAS — A woman charged with killing her 7-year-old daughter with a butcher knife was apparently depressed at the time, police said Friday.

Decretsha Bowers, a 25-year-old student in the vocational nursing program at El Centro Community College, was jailed at Lew Sterrett Justice Center in lieu of $100,000 bond. Dallas Police Department officials said her daughter, Desiree, died Thursday night of multiple stab wounds to the abdomen.

Police said Ms. Bowers, who was in the middle of a two-week work rotation for nursing students at Scottish Rite Hospital, had recently failed a test that would have allowed her to become a nurse. They also said the death of her father two weeks ago might have contributed to her unstable emotional state.

"We strongly believe that the mother was responsible for this crime," said Senior Cpl. Chris Gilliam. "She seemed to be in a depressed state; that's how her behavior has been characterized."

Gilliam said a neighbor called about 9 p.m. Thursday to report a domestic disturbance at Ms. Bowers' apartment in the Oak Cliff section of South Dallas. As police entered the apartment, they heard Ms. Bowers singing, Gilliam said.

Sgt. Jim Chandler said Ms. Bowers was kneeling beside her daughter's corpse.

"Several bad things have happened in her life," Chandler said. "But certainly that does not excuse this type of behavior."

Ms. Bowers' 26-year-old boyfriend, Kendrick Bowie, was arrested on outstanding warrants and questioned as a witness in the girl's death.

Prior to Thursday, Ms. Bowers had been involved in two other domestic disturbance calls to police. On Oct. 12, 1998, she called police to report an unknown male kicking her door.

Then on Jan. 5, she called police again and accused Bowie of striking her. Bowie was not present when police arrived, but Gilliam said a warrant was issued for his arrest.

Scottish Rite Hospital spokeswoman Peggy Black said Ms. Bowers began work at the facility on Monday. She was part of an El Centro program that allowed vocational nursing students to gain work experience at hospitals.

Black said that Scottish Rite does not administer tests to nursing applicants. The El Centro admissions office confirmed that Ms. Bowers was enrolled in classes for the second summer semester, but a college spokeswoman did not return phone calls from The Associated Press Friday.

"Any time stuff like this happens to a child — basically it's defenseless," police Sgt. Anthony Jackson said. "We all have children, loved ones, and it's a terrible situation."

Resendiz indicted in slayings of Weimar pastor and wife

By Mark Babineck
Associated Press

HOUSTON — Accused serial killer Angel Maturino Resendiz was indicted Friday on two more charges of capital murder as prosecutors seek to ensure maximum punishment for the rail-riding drifter.

Maturino Resendiz, who turns 40 Sunday, is suspected of killing nine people in three states and already faced five charges that carry possible death sentences: two in Texas, two more in Illinois and another in Kentucky.

"I was satisfied going in that we wouldn't have any trouble getting an indictment," said Assistant Colorado County Attorney Joe Fling, who said the grand jury there took little time to act.

The latest charges accuse Maturino Resendiz with the sledgehammer slayings of the Rev. Norman "Skip" Sirnic and his wife Karen, both 47, as they slept inside the parsonage behind the United Church of Christ in Weimar, about 80 miles west of Houston.

Their bodies were discovered May 2. A month later, the community was terrorized again by the similar killing of Josephine Konvicka, 73, at her home three miles from the Sirnic home.

Maturino Resendiz, awaiting a scheduled Feb. 14 capital murder trial in the beating and stabbing death of 39-year-old Dr. Claudia Benton in the Houston area, also is suspected of killing Ms. Konvicka.

Fayette County Sheriff Rick Vandel, who investigated Ms. Konvicka's death, said authorities there don't intend to seek an indictment for now because they're confident a Harris County jury will convict Maturino Resendiz.

"We're going to come down there in the punishment phase (if there is a conviction) and tell the jury what a bad actor this guy is," Vandel said. "They've got a real strong case, and the district attorney's office (in Houston) feels real good about it."

Charges also are pending in the June slaying of Houston teacher Noemi Dominguez, 26. As in Fayette County, prosecutors are content to save evidence from that case for a possible punishment phase.

Defense attorney Allen Tanner said he was unaware the grand jury was considering the indictments, which he learned about from a reporter.

"I think it's interesting that they're doing this now," Tanner said. When asked to elaborate, he replied, "It's just interesting."

The Harris County district attorney's office is expected to seek the death penalty if Maturino Resendiz is convicted. However, Fling said that wouldn't rule out another prosecution by his office.

"I don't know that one death sentence is enough," Fling said. "They all go up on automatic appeal, and they probably get overturned more than any other kind of sentence. There's something to be said for multiple sentences from multiple jurisdictions."

Public sentiment on whether to undertake an expensive capital murder trial might play a role in whether prosecutors act on Friday's indictments, Fling added.

Officials suspect link between killing, lawyer payments

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Mexican authorities are investigating whether whoever hired murder suspect Jose Luis Del Toro to kill a mother of quadruplets in 1997 also paid high-powered attorneys to fight his extradition to the United States.

Carlos Pujalte, director of legal affairs at the foreign relations secretariat in Mexico City, said the federal attorney general's office is investigating, the San Antonio Express-News reported Friday.

"In the case of Jose Luis Del Toro, we always speculated that the person who was paying for the defense of the hit man was the same person who contracted him," Pujalte said.

The caliber of defense attorneys Del Toro had "was not normal" for his circumstances, Pujalte said.

Del Toro, 23, a former high school football star, had a poor family background growing up in Uvalde.

After spending 20 months in a Mexican jail after fleeing across the Texas-Mexico border, Del Toro was extradited July 12 to face a first-degree murder charge in Sarasota, Fla., in the slaying of Sheila Bellush.

Mrs. Bellush, a 35-year-old mother of six, including toddler quadruplets, was shot and stabbed to death Nov. 7, 1997, in her Sarasota home shortly after moving from San Antonio.

Del Toro's cousin, Samuel Gonzales, 28, pleaded guilty last year in Florida then testified in January that Del Toro was the triggerman in a murder-for-hire plot hatched in San Antonio.

Gonzales' friend, amateur golfer Daniel Rocha, 30, is serving a life sentence in Florida for his conviction in the conspiracy.

At Rocha's trial, prosecutors claimed his former golfing partner, San Antonio businessman Allen Blackthorne, 44, masterminded the scheme.

Blackthorne and Mrs. Bellush went through a bitter divorce and custody battle over their two adolescent daughters. Mrs. Bellush had quadruplets in her subsequent marriage.

Blackthorne has denied any involvement in Mrs. Bellush's death and has not been charged with any crime.

As Del Toro waged a lengthy extradition battle, questions arose as to how his defense was financed, the Express-News reported.

His case was handled by at least five lawyers from the prominent law office of Enrique Fuentes Leon, a well-known Mexican attorney who was extradited himself from San Antonio in 1995 to face bribery charges in Mexico City.

One of the attorney's sons, Enrique Fuentes Ladron de Guevara, had said in past interviews that he was representing Del Toro at no charge. A month ago, however, a secretary in his office said the firm was no longer handling Del Toro's case.

San Antonio lawyer Roy Barrera Jr. represented Fuentes Leon during his nine-day extradition hearing in San Antonio.

Barrera initially was hired by Blackthorne to deal with speculation that he was involved in his ex-wife's death. He has said the two never discussed Del Toro.

Prosecutor: 'There's no federal crime here'

SULPHUR SPRINGS (AP) — The prosecutor handling the investigation into the death of a black man said Friday there's no evidence so far that the killing was motivated by race.

H.W. Walker, 53, was found dead near the Rains County town of Emory on June 2. His remains appeared to have been burned, officials said. A 16-year-old suspect was arrested the next day and remained in custody Friday in Greenville.

Civil rights advocates said Thursday that the killing of Walker apparently was motivated by race because of evidence that he was tied to a tree and burned and because the suspect is white. They also cited witness statements that the youth was associated with a hate group.

But Frank Long, district attorney for Rains, Franklin, Delta and Hopkins counties, said there's no evidence of a hate crime. He wouldn't elaborate on any evidence.

"There is an FBI agent that's going to look at it, but there's no federal crime here based on the evidence as we know it," Long told the Sulphur Springs News-Telegram on Friday.

"We don't have any specific evidence that this crime was committed because of someone's race, although we are still investigating different areas to determine the motive for the death."

The Texas Department of Public Safety, which had the Texas Rangers look into the Walker slaying, has said the motive apparently had to do with narcotics, although Walker's family said he wasn't involved with drugs.

Local law enforcement has refused to discuss the case and did not return calls Friday. NAACP officials in Dallas and the group's state headquarters also did not return calls from The Associated Press.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, after conducting its own probe, approached federal prosecutors with the case, and U.S. Attorney Mike Bradford's office has started an investigation.

"This is because of the NAACP," Bradford said Friday. "They came forward with some information and we decided to look into it further. I would think we could have some kind of handle on this within a couple of weeks."

Long predicted federal authorities will find no grounds for civil rights charges.

"Knowing what I know about the case, that's not going to happen," he said.

Long told the newspaper his office has petitioned to try the 16-year-old as an adult in Walker's death. Long also said his office won't handle the case after Sept. 1, when a new Rains County prosecutor's post is established.

A Sulphur Springs attorney representing the 16-year-old has not returned several telephone calls since Thursday.

The status of an autopsy report was unclear Friday. The NAACP has said the Dallas County medical examiner gave a report to Rains County Justice of the Peace Allen Stuart, but Stuart says that's not so. The medical examiner's office said Friday an autopsy wasn't complete.

Church youth volunteer faces sex charges

GEORGETOWN (AP) — A one-time church youth volunteer has been indicted on 24 counts of molesting eight boys in Williamson County.

Most of the alleged victims were members of Austin's Riverbend Church, where Thomas Reid Jones, 28, had volunteered, said Ken Anderson, Williamson County district attorney.

The teen-aged boys, all younger than 17, were molested in 1998 and 1999, with one charge dating to 1993, Anderson said after Thursday's indictments.

Jones, who volunteered at the church for three to four years, was arrested in May on charges of sexually assaulting two boys. He remains jailed in Williamson County on $250,000 bond.

Moonraker: Astronomer's ashes headed for lunar resting place

HOUSTON (AP) — Colleagues of a late researcher noted for his expertise on outer-space collisions came up with an astronomical way to honor his memory.

Assuming all went to plan, a vial carrying an ounce of Eugene Shoemaker's ashes slammed into a moon crater at 3,800 mph before dawn Saturday, riding shotgun along NASA's Lunar Prospector science craft.

"He is the very first human inhabitant of Earth to be laid to rest on another celestial body," said Carolyn Porco, a University of Arizona professor and Shoemaker's college on NASA's Voyager expeditions. "That's very significant because it says we have arrived at our place in the solar system, the solar system is our own and it's beckoning us."

It was Ms. Porco who spearheaded the tribute effort and designed an epigraph that accompanies the ashes of Shoemaker, who died two years ago in a car crash while crater-hunting in Australia.

Credited along with his wife for the discovery of about 20 comets and 800 asteroids, Shoemaker gained worldwide fame as a co-discoverer of comet Shoemaker-Levy 9 that slammed into Jupiter in 1994.

Lunar Prospector was expected to hit the moon at 5:52 a.m. EDT.

David Morse, spokesman for NASA's Ames Research Center, called the memorial "a special honor for a special human being."

1999 PROPERTY TAX RATES IN MIDLAND COUNTY HOSPITAL DISTRICT

This notice concerns 1999 property tax rates for the Midland County Hospital District. It presents information about three tax rates. Last year's tax rate is the actual rate the taxing unit used to determine the property taxes last year. This year's effective tax rate would impose the same total taxes as last year if you compare properties used in both years. This year's rollback tax rate is the highest the taxing unit can set before taxpayers can start tax rollback procedures. In each case these rates are found by dividing the total amount of taxes by the tax base (the total value of taxable property) with adjustments as required by law. The rates are given in per $100 of property value.

Last year's tax rate:

Last year's operating taxes	$7,143,957
Last year's debt taxes	$0.00
Last year's total taxes	$7,143,957
Last year's tax base	$4,740,515,370
Last year's total tax rate	$0.1507 /$100

This year's effective tax rate:

Crawford residents hope Bush will create a Texas White House

By Katie Fairbank
Associated Press

The old Prairie Chapel School, right, is located on land about 90 miles southwest of Dallas. "It's the only address I've ever had," said Ken Engelbrecht, left, referring to his land in Crawford, 90 miles southwest of Dallas. Bush says he's interested in the property, but won't say whether a closing date has been set.

Although many in the 700-resident town like the idea of Bush moving in, the sale will be bittersweet for Ken Engelbrecht, who has lived on the family homestead his entire life, farming the property and raising cattle.

CRAWFORD — It's not just George W. Bush's bid for the White House that has residents abuzz in this one-stoplight town. The Republican presidential front-runner also has made a bid on a local ranch.

Regulars at the coffee shop and gas station say they hope the Texas governor will follow the example of native son Lyndon B. Johnson.

The former president often returned to the LBJ Ranch near Johnson City and delighted in showing off the land to foreign visitors.

"I think that might be his intention. If that happens, it's something we could be proud of," said Randy Sherman, a Texas history teacher at Crawford High School.

Bush says he's interested in the property, about 90 miles southwest of Dallas, but won't say whether a closing date has been set.

A work team recently made a survey of the nearly 1,500-acre ranch and crews are researching whether Bush could build a private 100-acre fishing lake on the land. That report will tell Bush whether he can build a stock tank on the property, which would be important to the avid fisherman.

Although many in the 700-resident town like the idea of Bush moving in, the sale will be bittersweet for Ken Engelbrecht, who has lived on the family homestead his entire life, farming the property and raising cattle.

Engelbrecht said one reason the family is selling its holdings is to move his mother closer to her dialysis treatments, which she undergoes three times a week in Temple, 30 miles away.

"It'll be better when they're there," he said of his parents. "They're all ready to go."

Still, it's difficult for him to sell land that has been in his family since just after the Civil War.

"It's best for the land," he said. "You want to sell to somebody who will do your town good, your neighbors good, the land good."

The house in which he has lived is not part of the sale. Bush would have to build his own residence.

The property in western McLennan County adjoins Rainey Creek, a tributary of the Middle Bosque River. It never was listed with local real estate agents, although the land is worth an estimated $800 to $850 an acre.

A hay crop recently was shorn from the rolling pasture, while bordering ranches sprout cactus, herds of longhorns and goats and an occasional emu.

A couple of landing strips are nearby, as well as the Hughes Unit prison farm, which ranges from minimum to maximum security.

Bush has visited the local coffee shop in the neighboring town of McGregor.

"He walked up to my table and shook my hand," said Leah Driver, whose parents own The Coffee Station in Crawford. "He said he was going to come over and eat at our place but we're closed on Sunday."

INS selects long-jailed immigrants for release

HOUSTON (AP) — Some 300 immigrants detained on criminal charges, most of them in Texas, have been selected for release by federal immigration authorities because they were jailed for nonviolent crimes and are appealing deportation orders.

"What district directors are doing is exercising their discretion," Immigration and Naturalization Service spokeswoman Mariela Melero said Friday.

The 308 people recommended for bond are not considered a public safety or flight risk, have completed criminal sentences prior to last October and are not recipients of INS final orders for removal from the country.

Ms. Melero said some of those who may have been held for more than a year have been released already and those who can't meet the bond of between $1,500 to $5,000 can go before an immigration judge for a ruling on personal recognizance.

Among those released is Roberto Obregon, whose wife, Miriam, said having him back at work means she can afford school supplies and a few extras.

The family of nine lost their income and insurance when Obregon was picked up in March by INS agents who discovered that in 1996 he picked up a third drunken driving citation.

"We need him for moral and economic support," Mrs. Obregon told the Houston Chronicle. "When he was (in detention), I had a hard time buying food for the house. My kids would ask me why I couldn't buy soda water from the store, or something from a restaurant."

Ms. Melero said Obregon had been a legal permanent resident for 10 years, has a family and has equity in the community.

"Chances are you don't have that much of a flight risk," she said.

The July 12 change in policy was based on rulings from 13 federal courts that the INS has some discretion in detention matters. The agency had interpreted the Immigration Reform Act of 1996 as mandating detention, pending deportation for immigrants who had felony criminal convictions.

The 1996 law dramatically changed the status of all immigrants, including resident aliens, by broadening the list of crimes that trigger deportation to include theft and even some infractions for which an immigrant received deferred adjudication.

And because the law is retroactive, an immigrant who has had a good record for years after a minor scrape with the law could find himself behind bars awaiting deportation.

Austin's housing woes may pose economic threat

AUSTIN (AP) — A new report says that Austin is facing a crunch in affordable housing that could pose a threat to the area's economic health.

The report by a task force of business and community leaders says residents from service industry workers to teachers and police officers are facing increasing difficulty finding homes they can afford within the city limits.

The 18-month study by the Community Action Network Working Group on Affordable Housing suggests some solutions that would require cooperation from local government and industry, the Austin American-Statesman reported Friday.

The report suggests establishing a housing trust fund that would offer financing to developers who build affordable houses and low-interest loans to home buyers who qualify. It suggests changing zoning laws to allow denser, thus cheaper to build, development and giving residents tax abatements for refurbishing older houses.

The group, a public-private partnership of community leaders and social service providers, also suggests that employers shoulder some of the burden for providing housing that's affordable to their employees.

The report also warns that if housing costs continue to rise unchecked, the likely result will be increased suburban sprawl, an increased tax burden for central city residents and economic problems as workers and their companies begin to feel that Austin has grown too expensive to stay.

The federal government considers housing affordable if residents pay no more than 30 percent of their gross income toward rent or mortgage payments.

Things could get worse for middle-income workers, say members of the group that compiled the report, because fewer new housing developments include homes that are considered affordable for people making less than the area's median income.

"I knew things were getting expensive, but you really can't recognize the magnitude of the problem until you consider that, out of 483 new (housing) communities in the Austin area, less than 5 percent of them in the five-county metropolitan area (offered homes) for less than $100,000," said Terry Mitchell, vice president of Milburn Homes and chairman of the Community Action Network task force.

Thousands of houses and apartments are being built, market analysts say. But developers are cashing in on profits from the high-end market.

Of the 6,202 homes built so far this year, only 20 percent were priced below $110,000, analysts say. Only 15 percent of the 4,312 apartment units that came on the market in 1998 were moderately priced, said Capitol Market Research.

"Few affordable properties have been built in Austin in the 1990s," said Charles Heimsath, president of Capitol Market Research. "The demand, if they were available, would be at least twice as is being delivered for non-luxury units."

Local business leaders are keeping an eye on the housing crisis in California's Silicon Valley, often characterized as the country's worst, and its consequences. In Santa Clara County, a high-tech mecca, the median price of a house has been driven up to $410,000.

By Andy Mikonis

Q: My 1990 Buick Skylark was overheating, and I noticed the electric cooling fan wasn't working. I presumed the motor had burned out, but when I took it to the shop, they said it was just the switch. I didn't check to make sure the fan was working and two weeks later the car overheated. The fan was not running. Now the mechanic is saying I need a new head gasket. Do you think the fan motor was bad all along, or maybe the new switch defective? J.M.,Chicago, IL

A: Actually, the Electronic Control Module (ECM) starts the fan, based on data from the temperature sender. The switch you refer to is probably the relay.

To determine whether the fan motor or the relay is bad, unplug the fan motor and carefully connect a jumper wire from the positive battery terminal to the plug. If the motor is good, the fan should run. If the temp sender goes out, the ECM is supposed to turn the fan on.

It is hard to say what happened since the work was not checked. The new relay could have gone bad or the fan motor could have coincidentally burned out in the meantime.

Chicago has had a cool spring, and on short trips the car may have been getting hot, but not hot enough to turn the warning light on. Maybe a longer stint in traffic finally overheated it. It is hard to tell without a temperature gauge.

(We have been receiving a lot of four-wheel drive questions from Chicago drivers recently. Perhaps the blizzard of '99 took its toll on those complicated drive-lines. Here are few questions from Windy City sport-utility and truck drivers.)

Q: I am unable to switch on one of my manual hubs on my 1989 Isuzu Trooper, and my mechanic doesn't want to work on it. What should I do? B.K.,Chicago,IL

A: We have always maintained that 4WD owners are best off taking their drive-line needs to a specialist. Someone who is doing 4WD stuff all the time is familiar with the mechanics of the systems, knows the fastest and easiest parts solutions, and very importantly has all the special tools.

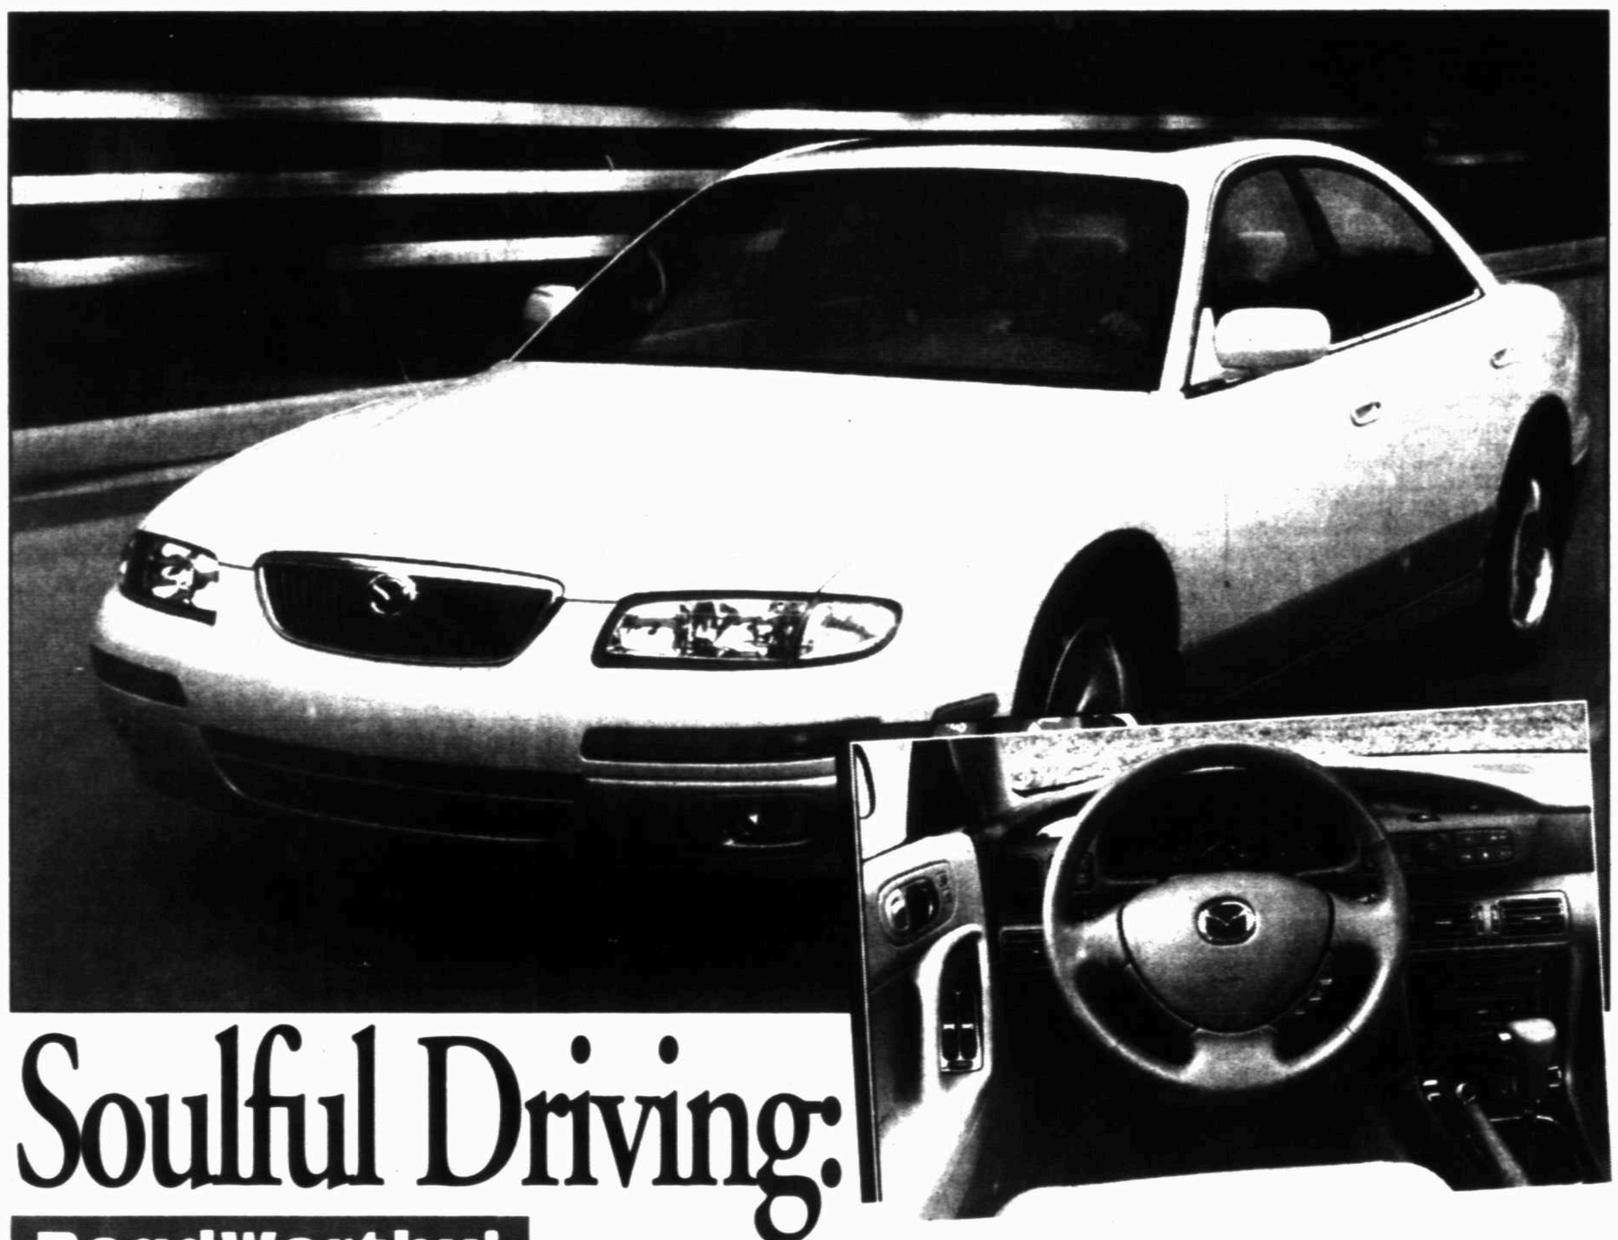

Your mechanic is surely capable of doing the work, but would have to spend some time familiarizing himself with the setup and may not have the manual and tools needed. It would probably be cheaper to take it to a specialist.

The hub probably seized up due to lack of lubrication; make sure to have them greased periodically. They take a lot of abuse and are subject to road salt, too.

Q: After getting a brake job done on my Nissan Pathfinder, the four-wheel drive didn't work. Also, when taking a turn, there is a clicking noise from the front. M.A., Chicago IL.

A: Sounds like the axle drive-shaft has become detached from the hub. The 4WD is actually "working" but all the power going to the front is just spinning that loose axle. It probably happened during the brake work.

Here again, maybe the mechanic was not familiar with the setup, and if he or she cannot straighten it out, take it to someone who can. It should be a fairly simple matter, unless something got torn up in the process.

Soulful Driving:

RoadWorthy!

By Ken Chester, Jr.

1999 Mazda Millenia S sedan

The Mazda Millenia is the heart and soul of the Mazda brand. Everything the automaker is now and aspires to be in the near future is built into the soul of this sedan. Yet not many consumers are aware of this Japanese gem.

For the 1999 model year, the "company's best-kept secret becomes its secret weapon" in the marketplace. Mazda reduced the price of its flagship Millenia S sedan by $5,550 or 15.2 percent and the Millenia by $2,450 or 8.4 percent.

"At Mazda, we believe driving is expression, exhilaration, liberation" beckons the text in the Millenia brochure. Available in Millenia and Millenia S models, this Mazda is for the driver looking for something more than just automotive transportation.

With its seductive sheet metal, this front driver entices the buyer to take a closer look.

Driving a Millenia S equipped with the "Miller cycle" 2.3L V-6 joined to a four-speed automatic transmission is exhilarating. That's right, it has a small displacement six-cylinder engine that generates as much horse power as some eight cylinder engines. To put this in perspective, the 2.3L Miller Cycle V-6 makes 210 horsepower while Ford's refined 4.6L V-8 engine found in the Lincoln Town Car also makes 210 horsepower — from double the engine displacement!

On the road the Millenia delivers awesome performance from the power-train at all speeds. Nimble handling and control from the suspension bits help keep everything in check. The beefy Dunlop SP Sport 4000 A/S P215/50R17 tires keep the car glued to the road under most driving situations.

Inside the cabin, the driver's view of the road is good from the very comfortable driver's seat. Displays and controls are excellent. Everything falls easily to the driver's hand.

The rear seating area is roomy and comfortable for two adults with an armrest as a welcome addition. Nifty touches abound inside the passenger cabin such as the power tilt wheel control, storage space in the door armrests, and heated leather seats (part of the $300 optional Four Seasons package.)

By the Numbers

Engine performance numbers are: 2.5L 170 hp @ 5,800 rpm and 160 lb/ft of torque @ 4,800 rpm; 2.3L 210 hp @ 5,300 rpm and 210 lb/ft of torque @ 3,500 rpm. EPA fuel economy figures are 20 city/27 highway for the 2.5L (regular unleaded) and 20 city/28 highway for the 2.3L (premium unleaded). Under-hood fluids are easy to reach but not clearly marked.

Standard safety equipment includes: dual front airbags, anti-theft alarm with remote keyless entry, side impact door beams, electronic traction control and four-wheel disc brakes with anti-lock.

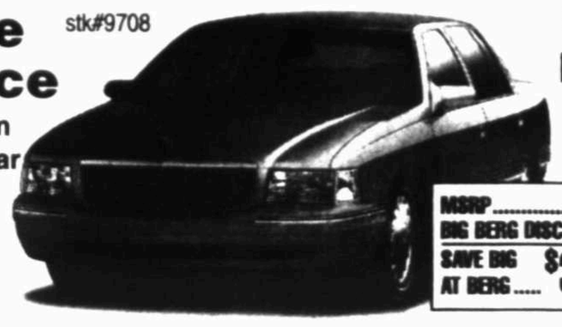

Retail sticker prices start at $26,745 for Millenia and $31,245 for the Millenia S sedan. Destination charge adds $450. Supplies of the sedan are good and there are no rebates currently available.
