In Brief

Mexico-U.S.

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The government says it has asked for the extradition of two Americans for abducting a fugitive in Mexico and whisking him to Arizona to serve a sentence for a drug crime.

The request to Washington came only days after the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that the United States was justified in the 1990 kidnapping of a Mexican physician wanted in the killing of a U.S. drug agent. The ruling jarred U.S.-Mexican ties.

The Mexican attorney general's office said Thursday it was seeking two private investigators suspected of abducting Teodulo Romulo Lopez Saturday and spiriting him over the border to Arizona.

Thrift fraud

DALLAS (AP) — Former Caprock Savings and Loan Association chairman George F. Dillman was sentenced to nine years in prison Thursday for defrauding the thrift he led.

Dillman was convicted in March. The government estimates that the bailout of the failed thrift has cost taxpayers $100 million.

"There is an enormous loss involved here," U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders told the former chairman.

A co-defendant, William C. Hatfield, who headed Caprock's executive committee also was sentenced to 6 12 years in prison. Neither men have a possibility for parole.

Supporters crowded the courtroom on Thursday and Judge Sanders received more than 100 letters written on the men's behalf.

Gas regulators battle measure on prorationing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Opponents of a House measure that would restrict state control of natural gas production are finding a sympathetic audience in the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee.

The committee chairman, Sen. Bennett Johnston, left no doubt Thursday where his feelings lie.

The House amendment is "dead wrong, it is not necessary and it is not based on any evidence," said Johnston, a Democrat from Louisiana, one of the nation's largest gas-producing states.

Johnston promised to fight the amendment, which would change the energy bill to prevent gas-producing states from using state regulations to restrict production and raise prices.

The debate was sparked after Texas and Oklahoma recently approved measures, known as prorationing, which regulate natural gas production in-state. The actions, which were taken independently, are being examined by Louisiana, which may follow suit.

Together, the three states account for 60 percent of the nation's natural gas production.

Investigators vow to pursue evidence of possible POWs

PECHORA, Russia (AP) — U.S. investigators said today they found no evidence that an American prisoner of war was imprisoned in a Stalin-era labor camp in northern Russia. But they said they would continue pursuing information on hidden American POWS.

The Russian side of a joint commission said it turned up new evidence ethnic Germans had been held at Camp No. 5, one of 10 prisons in the remote Pechora region where Soviet leaders sent dissidents as well as criminals.

"The information ... will require additional research," said Col. Anatoly Volkov, the Russians' spokesman. He gave no more details.

Stalin imprisoned thousands of Soviets and others who he believed opposed the war against Nazi Germany.

"We found no evidence of the presence of an American," said William Davnie, a political officer at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow and commission member.

"But work will continue and our report will be made public only after everything has been analyzed," Davnie said at a news conference here after visiting Camp No. 5, about 900 miles northeast of Moscow.

The U.S. investigators have been spurred on by President Boris Yeltsin's talk this week of the possibility American POWs are still in Russia.

"We don't have any Americans here," Maj. Gen. Leonid Khamluk, chief of the Pechora area of northern Russia, said Thursday. He oversees about 10 labor camps built before and during World War II.

The American investigators arrived in the Pechora area Thursday to probe reports a U.S. pilot held near there was still alive.

The trip was quickly organized following the disclosure by Yeltsin that American prisoners of war held in the Soviet Union during the Vietnam War might still be on Russian soil.

American officials have said Yeltsin's leads were puzzling but will be thoroughly checked.

In Israel Thursday, former Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev denied he knew American POWs from the Vietnam War were transferred to the Soviet Union, as Yeltsin claimed. "I know nothing of the existence of such facts that Yeltsin was talking about," Gorbachev said at a news conference.

The delegation had said it was searching for a man believed to be calling himself David Marken.

A private American group searching for POWs, the Ark Project, said it believed the man being sought near Pechora was 1st Lt. Robert Martin, who was taken prisoner by North Korea during the Korean War. Further information about him was unavailable.

State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler said in Washington that the investigators had received information that an American POW might have been at the camp "as recently as 18 months ago."

Soldiers, inmates and prison officials all said there were no Americans present.

"We heard some rumors that somebody was around here, but nobody has ever seen him. And I don't believe them," said

Walk-a-thon set Saturday by inmates

More than 200 Price Daniel inmates are expected to take part in Saturday's Child Abuse Walk-A-Thon.

Chaplain Stan Wilson is coordinating the fund-raiser which will benefit Parents Anonymous. The organization was founded in 1970 to help in stopping child abuse.

Inmates have written friends and family in the free world asking for pledges for the number of miles walked by the inmate. The money and pledge card is sent to the organization's headquarters in Austin.

Parents Anonymous began after an abusing parent in California and her therapist experienced a fruitless search for a support system that reinforced the positive changes in her behavior.

The organization has grown to become the largest child abuse public education and treatment program in the world with more than 1,500 chapters in the U.S. and four foreign countries.

Parents Anonymous of Texas was founded in 1979 and serves as an information, training and resource center for the network of programs throughout the state. The group serves a growing number who recognize their own real or potential child abuse and family issues and who desire a positive behavioral change.

Inmates at the Daniel Unit have set a goal of walking 1,000 miles between the hours of 3 and 9 p.m. Saturday.

Parents Anonymous has a 24-hour hot line, 1-800-554-2323.

Murder trial...

Jury selection enters 5th day

Jury selection in the capital murder trial of Bruce Wayne Nelson entered its fifth day today in 132nd District Court.

As of noon, 35 potential jurors had been interviewed. Only four of those were selected for jury duty.

Jury selection, expected to take a week to 10 days, began Monday morning. One hundred-fifty potential jurors have been called for questioning by attorneys in the case.

Nelson, 33, is charged with the Jan. 1, 1991 beating and robbery of Arnulfo Ronnie Hernandez, who died of head injuries the following day at St: Mary of the Plains Hospital in Lubbock.

Thirty-three-year-old Melvin Riggins was found guilty of aggravated robbery in connection with the case in July 1991. Another man, 32-year-old Christopher Maurice Thompson, has also been charged. His case has not been tried.

Nelson is being represented by Sweetwater attorney Zollie Steakley. Prosecuting the case is District Attorney Ernie Armstrong. Gene Dulaney, 132nd District Court Judge, is presiding.

Otis Francis, in the Sweetwater Reporter, commented on the parents in Florida who were working to keep violence out of school books.

You may have read about the school district in Florida who pulled "Snow White" from the library shelves because of complaints that the fairy tale contained graphic violence.

Remember the Wicked Witch wanted Snow White killed and her heart torn out. Instead, a hunter killed a wild boar and presented the boar's heart to the Wicked Witch.

Talk about violence, Francis is fearful that somebody will get the idea about the best-selling book of all times — the Bible.

The Bible contains many thoughts of love, but it also has its share of violence. Remember the giant being taken down with a sling-slot, or the flood that killed all but one family, the woman who looked back and became a pillar of salt, or the murmuring thousands who were swallowed up by the earth...

Concluded Francis, "The Florida parents' goal is admirable, but their aim is bad."

Jimmy Carr, in the Vernon Daily Record, reported that a computer expert has calculated that it would take a hundred employees working hundreds of years to make a mistake as big as a single computer can make in just a 1/1000th of a second.

Lawmakers playing games with collider project, workers say

WAXAHACHIE, Texas (AP) — Some workers on the $8.25 billion superconducting super collider say Capitol Hill lawmakers who decided to cut funding for the giant atom smasher are playing election-year politics.

"Everyone wants to show the folks back home that they're tough," said Dick Rudzinski, 52, a Westinghouse worker contracted to build SSC magnets with General Dynamics.

"A lot of games are being played and that's going to hurt a lot of people."

The U.S. House voted 232-181 Wednesday to cut the funding for the giant particle accelerator from $483.7 million to $34 million in the year beginning Oct. 1. President Bush had recommended $650 million.

The House said the money should be used to shut down work on the collider, a 52-mile underground oval under construction in rural Ellis County south of Dallas.

Nearly $1 billion in federal funds and $200 million in Texas money has been spent on the project, which would be the world's largest scientific instrument.

Some Waxahachie residents never thought much of having the collider in their hometown.

"How many nuclear scientists, how many nuclear physicists live in Waxahachie? You can probably count them on one hand and then have some fingers left," Munns said Thursday.

A letter given to SSC employees by director Roy F. Schwitters noted the House vote, although "a serious blow," is only a "first step."

"The budgeting process moves now to the Senate were we will vigorously pursue restoration of the president's $650 million budget request," he said.

Others hope they fail.

"A majority of the people working on it don't shop here, don't live here, don't eat here," said Joyce Munns, who joined her husband at the 1879 Townhouse Restaurant in the town's historic district.

"The rest of the people are poor working-class people like us. It's difficult to find anyone down here in support of it."

Before the coming of the collider, Waxahachie, a town of about 14,000, had been best known for its Victorian neighborhoods and its frequent use as a backdrop for such movies as "Places in the Heart" and "Tender Mercies."

North Texas economic boosters estimated the collider would contribute billions to the region's economy through the 1990s. So far, its economic effect had been principally felt in nearby Dallas, where the first research lab was set up in 1989.

In Ellis County, $30 million in property tax revenue was lost when the state bought land for the collider. But the recent recession was soothed somewhat locally by the project's growth, said Richard Rhodes, director of the county appraisal district.

State probes discrimination complaints

LONGVIEW, Texas (AP) — An investigation has been launched by the Texas Education Agency into complaints of racial discrimination within the Tatum Independent School District, a state official says.

Joey Lozano, spokesman for the agency said this week that an investigator is looking into complaints involving the district's hiring practices and cheerleader selection.

Tatum is about 140 miles east of Dallas.

One complaint involves the transfer of a black teacher from a regular classroom to a class for students considered to be drop-out risks.

"It's a total shock to me," said Jack Clemmons, Tatum superintendent. He told the Longview News Journal he does not understand why such a move would be perceived as discrimination.

The second complaint concerns the cheerleader selection process, after an all-white judges panel failed to choose a black cheerleader for the 1992-93 middle school squad.

Patient Pleads for Compassion When Doctor Balances Books

DEAR ABBY: About the letter from the physician who complained because he had $154,000 on the books:

While I'm sure that letter reflects the situation many physicians are in, there are plenty of doctors who drive brand-new Cadillacs, Lincoln Continentals, Mercedes, Lexus, BMWs, etc. Their wives do not work, they send their children to private schools, and they vacation in Europe and the Far East every year.

My husband was laid off two years ago and I am the only person working in my family. We are heavily in debt and I am an insulin-dependent diabetic. Because I am insured by an out-of-state insurance company, my physician asks to be paid in full for every visit. He charges $100 a visit, so I do not see him unless I'm in serious trouble.

I'm sorry that physicians have a small fortune on the books, but they should be a little more understanding with patients who have fallen on hard times. A sick person often needs medical attention whether he's in a position to pay immediately or not. And a dead patient can't pay a doctor at all.

The Hippocratic Oath states: "First, do no harm." It doesn't specify whether the harm is mental or physical. And the way the economy is today, we all have to tighten our belts, and help each other.

BARBARA B. IN MIRAMAR, FLA.

DEAR BARBARA: Well said. Let us hope that the well-heeled doctors who read this heed this. And as for those who are lacking in compassion, "Physician, heal thyself!"

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I am deeply disturbed over a new product being distributed for children. They are called "killer cards" — similar to baseball cards. However, instead of trading heroes, the kids trade cards with pictures of Jeffrey Dahmer, Charles Manson, Ted Bundy and "Son of Sam." These cards have comic book likenesses of infamous murderers!

Abby, what are these people thinking? How can people manufacture such terrible cards to sell to young children? And how about the people who sell them? Don't they have children of their own? What message are they sending to our children? "Kill someone, and get your face on a trading card!" We have enough to contend with, such as drugs, suicide, and keeping our children and ourselves safe from these psychopaths they are trying to immortalize.

Who can I contact to get this garbage banned?

LOVES CHILDREN, CLIFTON, N.J.

DEAR LOVES CHILDREN: The best way to "ban" such garbage is simply to refuse to patronize the store that sells it.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I have just returned from a trip to Panama and was shocked to see a wedding invitation that included a small card with the following message:

"Suggestion: Your cash gift (or check) will be appreciated. Our checking account at Citibank is No. ( )."

Abby, where we live (New York), we sometimes give checks as wedding gifts, but never have we seen an invitation to a wedding with a request for money.

I have promised my friends in Panama that I would write to you and find out how you felt about it. Personally, I think it is in the worst possible taste. What do you think?

MIRIAM FROM NEW YORK

DEAR MIRIAM: You may tell your friends that Abby's opinion is the same as yours.

Bingo parlor worker wins $1 million

DALLAS (AP) — Annabel Huerta, a 23-year-old bingo parlor worker from Abilene, Thursday won the first million-dollar cash prize in the Texas Lottery.

"I feel breathless right now. I guess now I can make all of my family's dreams come true," Mrs. Huerta said after opening a mock safe containing a fake money bag of money promising $1 million of the real stuff.

Mrs. Huerta was one of seven people whose name had been drawn from among thousands who qualified for the $1 million prize.

Mrs. Huerta said she had bought 200 tickets, one of which qualified for the drawing for the big prize.

Dallas skaters Kevin Day, 28, and Elisa Curtis, 22, escorted the seven jackpot finalists down a red carpet and onto an elaborate stage at a downtown Dallas hotel after their performances on a nearby ice rink.

Once on stage, the finalists picked one of seven 10-gallon cowboy hats from a giant hatrack. The hats included numbers that corresponded to seven pingpong balls drawn by a security representative.

Mrs. Huerta and Juanita Saldivar, 38, simultaneously opened two safes.

Mrs. Saldivar won $50,000. Both she and her husband are unemployed. She said she had never won anything before she won her entry into the jackpot.

The remaining five finalists, and their winnings, were:

—Carlos M. Gonzalez, a 54-year-old mechanic from San Antonio, $25,000.

—Louise Rabe, a 62-year-old library aide from Emory, $15,000.

—Maria De Los Santos, a 42-year-old housewife from Houston, $15,000.

—Kenneth Bernhardt, a 69-year-old retiree from Pasadena, $10,000.

—Theresa Pawlawski, a 68-year-old widow from Houston, $10,000.

The grand-prize drawings will be held each Thursday through Sept. 3 in different cities around the state.

Some smokers with patches have heart attacks

NEW YORK (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration is investigating reports that people wearing nicotine patches while smoking have suffered heart attacks, a newspaper reported today.

Sturdy Memorial Hospital in Attleboro, Mass., told the FDA that five such heart attacks occurred between April and mid-June, The Wall Street Journal reported.

The patches, worn like adhesive bandages, contain nicotine that is secreted into the skin. They are often prescribed by doctors to help people quit smoking, and carry warning labels that caution against smoking while wearing them.

Dr. Gott

By Peter M. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Please discuss alcoholism and cirrhosis of the liver. Could cirrhosis turn into cancer?

DEAR READER: Alcohol causes liver inflammation and a buildup of fat within the organ. Over time, the inflammation and fat combine to form a type of scarring known as cirrhosis. As the scar tissue appears, it crowds out normal liver cells. As a late complication, the scars contract, thereby shrinking the liver and further reducing its efficiency. Liver failure usually ensues.

Early symptoms include weakness, weight loss and abdominal enlargement. Later, jaundice, muscle wasting, abdominal fluid and bloody vomiting may appear.

Treatment consists of stopping alcohol. This may prevent progression of the disease; however, in the late stages, liver transplant may be necessary.

To answer your specific question, cirrhosis is associated with a high incidence of malignancy of the liver.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Our precious 45-year-old daughter-in-law has been diagnosed with Parkinson's disease. Can you tell us what we can expect as to her future and what, if anything, we as family members of her support team could do to improve the quality of her life?

DEAR READER: Parkinson's disease is a neurological affliction, common in late mid-life and old age, marked by slowness of movement, muscular rigidity, resting tremor and postural instability. Although the cause is unknown, the disorder is associated with a loss of nerve tissue in a specific portion of the brain called the substantia nigra; this depletes a chemical (dopamine) that is necessary for normal neurological functioning.

Some forms of Parkinson's disease are caused by manganese poisoning (from industrial sources), tumors, strokes, rare degenerative diseases of the brain, and the use of heroin. Some prescription drugs, notably reserpine, formerly used for high blood pressure, can cause a Parkinson-like syndrome.

Patients with Parkinson's disease are almost always helped by treatment with levodopa, a medication that replaces the missing dopamine. Available in several strengths and in combination with other therapeutic substances, levodopa can produce miraculous results: Bedridden patients may walk again and mildly affected patients may return to normal.

I believe the best way to help your daughter-in-law is to treat her like a normal person. While taking treatment, she may exhibit some characteristics of Parkinson's disease (such as a tremor and difficulty initiating movements), but these should be minor and will not materially affect her life.

You obviously love your daughter-in-law. Showing her that you care is the greatest gift you can give her. If she needs help or advice, she will feel free to come to you. In this way, you won't have to predict her needs; she'll be upfront about them.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Help I — Physical Illness." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

AIDS vaccine has promising results

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chimpanzees inoculated with an experimental vaccine were protected against the AIDS virus even when they were injected with virus-contaminated blood cells, researchers say in a study published today.

Patricia Fultz of the University of Alabama in Birmingham, lead author in a report in the journal Science, said the chimps that received the AIDS vaccine remained free of viral infection for up to a year after injections with contaminated blood.

"This proves we're on the right track," she said.

The study tested how effective an AIDS vaccine would be against a virus that is contained within blood cells. The vaccine in an earlier study was tested against free-floating virus, which are virus particles in the plasma of the blood, but not within the blood cells. The human immunodeficiency virus, or HIV, that causes AIDS is known to be infective in both forms.

"Many people felt this was a stronger challenge for the vaccine because infected cells have the potential of producing much more virus," Fultz said in an interview.

The research involved three chimpanzees inoculated with a vaccine and then injected with HIV-infected blood cells.

Fultz said the vaccine used mimics the molecules found on the outside of the HIV virus and on the outside of cells that are infected with the virus.

After inoculation, all three chimps were injected with doses of blood cells from a chimp that has an HIV infection.

One chimp died of heart failure, not associated with AIDS, after seven months, said Fultz. Tissue samples taken from this chimp were cultured for six weeks and there was no evidence of viral infection, she said.

The other two chimps were found to be immune to the HIV virus for a full 12 months.

"This tells us that the vaccine candidates with which we are working have the potential to protect against both forms of virus and that we don't need to revise our vaccine at this point or try additional types," said Fultz.

She said that using infected blood cells is a good test for what happens when drug users share dirty needles. Patients with HIV typically leave a residue of infected blood in a needle. A person sharing such an unsterilized needle then could put these infected blood cells into his own bloodstream, possibly leading to an HIV infection.

A primary target of the AIDS virus is the white blood cell, or lymphocyte, that normally circulates in the blood stream. The virus links with a molecule on the lymphocyte surface and then moves inside the cell. The virus can also do this with macrophages, another type of blood cell.

Although the new test has the promise of an AIDS vaccine, Fultz said much more work needs to be done before it can be tested in humans.

She noted, for instance, that one of the chimps that was free of HIV for a year was later injected with cell-free virus and developed an HIV infection.

In 1565, a Spanish expedition landed at what is now St. Augustine, Fla., and established the first permanent European settlement in North America.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your financial trends look extremely encouraging today and, if you apply yourself, profitable results are likely — whether you're buying or selling.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) An important objective can be achieved today through some shrewd political maneuvering on your part. Let your intuition govern your mode of action.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Desirable results are likely today — if you flow with events rather than attempt to dominate them. Let nature run its course.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Try to involve yourself today with friends who stimulate your thought processes. A very beneficial exchange of ideas could be in the offing.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Put forth your best effort today; individuals who are in the position to make things materially easier will be looking for ways to reward you. The compensation could be generous.

Slain officer went beyond call of duty

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Lubbock police veteran Kenneth Fowler could have retired from the force 10 years ago.

But the 59-year-old sergeant decided to put in one more year.

On Thursday, the 36-year police veteran was making a call on a shooting as he had done hundreds of times before when he was shot and killed at a Lubbock apartment.

Mental patient James Kevin Voyles, 35, has been charged with capital murder in Fowler's death. Voyles also was charged with murder in the death of James Edwin Haliburton, 48, a part-time community aide for the Lubbock Regional Mental Health Mental Retardation Center.

Fowler's death marked the first time a Lubbock police officer has been killed on duty since Jack Stevens was shot by a robbery suspect Feb. 9, 1973.

The shootings apparently erupted after Voyles walked out of a doctor's appointment and Haliburton went to check on him, police said.

Police were called to the Moonflower Apartments early Thursday by neighbors who reported hearing gunfire. Upon arrival at 9:26 a.m., officers found Haliburton laying between two apartments that faced each other.

Fowler and officer George Arce were covering Haliburton's body with plastic when Voyles apparently opened his apartment door behind the officers and fired several shots at Fowler, said Lubbock police chief Don Bridgers.

"There was nothing they could do," Bridgers said. "Our men were ambushed."

Arce escaped injury.

Justice of the Peace Jim Hansen set bond for Voyles at $500,000 for the murder charge and denied bond on the capital murder count.

During his arraignment, Voyles seemed disoriented, repeatedly saying he did not understand the charges against him. When it was further explained that he was charged with killing a police officer, he responded, "Oh, OK."

Voyles finally surrendered to police after a two-hour standoff during which he fired several random shots through the south wall of his apartment.

No other injuries were reported.

Fowler was known affectionately among colleagues as "Growler Fowler" because he was gruff on the outside but a teddy bear on the inside, said police officer Michelle Fletcher.

"He loved his job and would help any new officer," Miss Fletcher said.

A letter from Lubbock resident John Hewlett to the editor of the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal that was published June 7 thanked Fowler.

In the letter, Hewlett says Fowler responded to a call involving the death of his son.

"When officer Fowler found out the deceased was my son, he held on to me. He talked to me and encouraged me to yell, scream or whatever it took if it would ease my pain. He even offered to let me hit him if that would help!" Hewlett's letter said. "... I thank God officer Fowler was the one who responded to my call."

Fowler, who joined the Lubbock police force in 1956, had been eligible to retire since 1982.

"He was talking about retiring this year, but then he decided to hang on for another year," said police Sgt. Don Davidson, who had known Fowler for nearly 30 years. "He was doing his job and that was it. That's they way he would have looked at it."

Officials at the Lubbock Regional MHMR Center say Haliburton had served as a community service aide since January 1992.

"Mr. Haliburton was a valued member of our center family and we all mourn his death," MHMR officials said in a statement.

Haliburton's "responsibilities included providing individual attention, support and socialization to persons receiving services from the center," the statement said.

Officials refused to comment about any treatment Voyles may have received at the MHMR center.

One of George Bernard Shaw's characters said: "Well, sir, you never can tell. That's a principle in life with me, sir, if you'll excuse my having such a thing." Maybe Shaw was a bridge player; maybe not. But if he was, he would probably have found the solution to today's hand.

Cover the East-West cards and plan the play in six hearts. West leads the diamond jack. Without much confidence, you call for dummy's queen, but East covers with the king. How do you continue?

North's three-heart rebid was aggressive. South bid what he thought he could make.

If the trumps are 2-2, the contract is easy. So, after jack, queen, king, ace of diamonds, you should cash the heart ace and play another trump to dummy's king. (If you played a heart to the king and a heart to the ace, you would go down with this layout.)

When you see that West has a guaranteed trump trick, you have to be able to discard all three of your diamond losers before West ruffs in. This requires finding West with four clubs. But if he has the queen, you will be unable to run the whole suit. Your only chance is to find East with queen doubleton of clubs.

At trick four, lead a low club from the dummy and finesse your 10. Next, cash the club ace, bringing down East's queen. Finally, cross to dummy with a spade and run the clubs, discarding all your diamond losers. West ruffs the last club, but that is too late to defeat you.

If East had had three hearts, you would have had to assume that West had Q-9 doubleton of clubs.

GOP support for Bush said wavering

IRVINE, Calif. (AP) — Republican loyalty in Orange County, which helped elect the last two GOP presidents, is wavering just when George Bush needs it most because of the recession and the growing popularity of Ross Perot.

A Perot rally Thursday, upstaging Bush's arrival here today, drew 5,000 supporters, many of them dissatisfied Orange County Republicans who see Bush as a business-as-usual insider and Perot as the agent of change.

"Bush isn't doing anything for this country right now," said Sonja Comer of Mission Viejo, a registered Republican who came to the Perot rally. "Perot may not be able to either. But I know Bush couldn't."

She's not alone. Although Bush got 62 percent of the Orange County GOP vote in the June 2 primary, an exit poll for the Orange County Register found that voters would prefer Perot over Bush in November by a margin of 41 percent to 27 percent. Likely Democratic nominee Bill Clinton got 13 percent.

The polls show Bush's support slipping. In April, Perot and Bush were in a statistical dead heat in Orange County.

The Perot petition drive also illustrates the Texas billionaire's strength in Orange County.

Of the more than 1 million signatures gathered in California to put Perot on the ballot, 156,181 came from Orange County.

U.S. Open...

Golfers tame Pebble Beach

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Except for Gil Morgan, nobody thinks this kind of scoring can continue.

So who are you going to listen to — the guy leading the tournament or all those other guys blinking in disbelief, trying to remember that this is Pebble Beach and this is the U.S. Open?

With its greens soft and its ocean winds still on Thursday, Pebble Beach played more like it was hosting the Phoenix Open than its third U.S. Open, doling out birdies and low scores with unprecedented generosity.

"The course was absolutely there for the taking this morning," Mark McCumber said. "There was never more than a 2- or 3-yard wind, and the course is in perfect condition.

"Pebble Beach will get its due before it's over."

Round One went to the players, 45 of whom shot par or better in the opening round.

Morgan made eight birdies and shot a 6-under 66, the lowest first round in any of the three U.S. Opens played over the scenic oceanfront course. Curtis Strange made seven birdies and was one back at 67.

Andy Dillard, a qualifier playing in his first Open, birdied the first six holes of the championship and was one of three golfers at 4-under 68. Phil Mickelson, playing in his first tournament as a pro, and Steve Pate also shot 68s.

"This is June and this is a pretty docile time for the weather," Pate said. "I think you're going to see a lot of single-day good scores, but nothing terribly low for the tournament."

There were 29 sub-par scores in the opening round. In addition to 419 birdies, 11 eagles were made, including Ted Schulz's 183-yard 7-iron for a 2 on the 464-yard, par-4 ninth hole, considered Pebble's toughest.

Payne Stewart, the defending champion, was 4-under through eight holes before going double bogey, bogey, bogey on Nos. 9, 10 and 11. Stewart shot 73.

Ex-NC State coach Valvano has cancer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Jim Valvano, the colorful former North Carolina State basketball coach and television analyst, has cancer, Valvano's agent and a television network say.

ESPN, the sports network Valvano went to work for after leaving the Wolfpack in 1990, said Thursday night that Valvano had been diagnosed with the disease. In a brief report, sportscaster Bob Ley said Valvano, 46, is at his Cary, N.C., home "in excellent spirits" but did not elaborate on the type of cancer nor the extent of Valvano's illness.

Valvano's phone number is unlisted and he could not be reached.

But his agent, Art Kaminsky of New York, told the News & Observer of Raleigh, N.C.: "There are malignancies."

Kaminsky said it is not known what type of cancer Valvano has, or what the prognosis is.

"We're going for more tests in the next couple of days," Kaminsky said.

Valvano will undergo tests at Memorial Sloan-Kettering Hospital in New York City, he said. Sloan-Kettering specializes in caring for cancer victims.

"He still looks great," Kaminsky said. "Now his focus is just to get better."

Roughstock leaders change

BOZEMAN, Mont. (AP) — Clifford Mize of Hill College in Texas jumped into the second go-round lead of bull riding with a 78-point ride during Thursday night's performance at the College National Finals Rodeo.

Mize was one of three new leaders as the second round in the rough stock events got underway.

Charles Soileau of Tarleton State and Jerome Davis of Odessa College of Texas had shared the first-round bull riding lead with rides of 75 points.

James Boudreaux of McNeese State took the bareback bronc riding lead in the second go-round with a 75. An 83 score by Montana State's Shawn Vant held up as the best in the first go-round.

Western Texas College cowboy Troy Cattoor scored a 67 in Thursday's second go-round of bareback riding, taking third in the go.

Cattoor, in fifth place at the end of the first round of saddle bronc riding, gets his second mount in tonight's performance.

Teammate Travis Whiteside took the lead in the bareback average with a 62 in Thursday competition. That score, combined with his second-place 80 in the opening go give Whiteside a two-head 142.

Benji Fontenot, a roughstock specialist for the Westerners, took a 62 on his bareback horse and finished out of the average. Fontenot was also bucked off in Thursday bull riding.

Thad Little was tossed off in the saddle bronc event and Eric Mouton missed his spur-out and negated a good ride, according to WTC coach Bob Doty.

"Eric not marking out and Benji getting bucked off really hurt us bad," said Doty. "We came up here with our strength in the roughstock events, and that seems to be everybody else's strength, too. It's really tough.

"But we're still hanging in there."

Michael Ferguson of Panhandle State jumped into the early second round saddle bronc lead with a 66 ride. First-round honors went to Justin Andrade of West Hills with a 78.

No new leaders were established in the second go-round of the timed events Thursday night.

But Roy Brown of Utah Valley Community College posted an 11.9-second time in calf roping for the second round and took the lead in the average with a two-run time of 20.8 seconds.

Carter Edmondson of Tarleton State holds eighth overall with a 27.3 time on two calves.

Former Western Texas College standout Russell Merchant, now competing for Southeastern Oklahoma, remains the top steer wrestler with an 11.1 clocking on two head. Howard College's Brad Stewart is third with an 11.7.

Fights, vandalism sparked when free concert is stopped

BOSTON (AP) — Concert-goers rampaged downtown after police stopped a free outdoor show that officers feared was getting out of hand. At least two dozen people were injured and about 20 were arrested, police said.

"Everyone just went crazy," said Mike Martin, 19. "The emcee on stage said, 'This isn't L.A., don't be like L.A.' ... People were running everywhere. It was like a swarm of people."

Police decided to stop the comedy and music concert Thursday night at City Hall Plaza after the "unruly crowd" of about 20,000 ignored orders to quit surging toward the stage, said police Superintendent William Bratton.

Several minor fights had broken out by that time, he said.

Martin, who was visiting from Houston, said people, many of whom had been drinking alcohol, threw milk crates and bottles upon hearing that the show was done. Three acts had already performed.

Several hundred people spilled out into a nearby neighborhood, smashing the windows of cars and stores and setting fires in trash cans and mailboxes, police said.

An athletic store was looted and a convenience store was ransacked by a mob of about 30 people. The store manager was hit in the face, said store clerk Nahusenay Kassa, 18.

Police had the area under control within a few hours.

At least two dozen people were injured, some who were assaulted and others who were pushed around in the crowd at the concert.

Most seriously injured was a 16-year-old boy who was stabbed in the stomach, Bratton said. James J. Harvey III underwent emergency surgery at Massachusetts General Hospital; nurses refused early today to provide his condition.

A child was "trampled a little" by the crowd and was admitted for observation at New England Medical Center, said hospital spokeswoman Dinah Vaprin. She declined to release more information.

Bratton said one police officer was cut by a bottle thrown at him.

At least 18 people were arrested. Police were unable to provide a precise number early today. Most of those arrested were charged with disorderly conduct.

The crowd was racially mixed and young, mainly ranging from 15 years old to 19, Bratton said.

Radio station WZOU and the Boston Herald sponsored the show, the Free Summer Jam '92, which included pop, reggae and rap acts. Scheduled to appear were Mr. Big, Meli'sa Morgan, Stacy Earl, M.C. Brains, Arrested Development, the College Boys and other acts.

Supporters of super collider ponder their next strategy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Backers of the super collider are mapping their strategy to rescue the $8.25 billion giant atom smasher, which fell victim to the House's sudden thirst for budget cuts.

There seems to be only one road to take.

"All signs point to the Senate," said Rep. Jim Chapman, D-Sulphur Springs, who as a member of the House Appropriations Committee battled hard to spare the project from the chopping block.

In a stunning vote late Wednesday, the House pared $450 million from the House Appropriations Committee's approval of $483.7 million for the project in fiscal 1993, leaving only $34 million to shut down operations.

"I've picked myself up, kind of dusted myself off trying to get the tire tracks off my chest, looked around and cleared the cobwebs from my head," Chapman said Thursday.

Even though the 232-181 vote to kill the project was unexpected — and exceeded even the collider foes' wildest dreams — Chapman and others said all hope was not lost.

"I expect the Senate to save us," he said.

But the path through the Senate won't be without its pitfalls.

Senate opponents will make their own case that the super collider is too costly in an era when federal spending needs to be reined in.

Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., will reintroduce an amendment he offered last year to kill funding. It failed 62-37.

Lincoln reunion scheduled

The fifth Lincoln School Reunion begins this evening and will run through Sunday.

Activities will include registration and a reaquaintance party at Smith's Recreation Center tonight, sponsored by ex-Lincolnites of the Dallas/Fort Worth area.

On Saturday, registration continues at the Lincoln School with various games and a group picture. A banquet will begin at 8 p.m. in the former gym area.

Activities conclude with church services on Sunday.

Lincoln School's last graduating class was in 1965 when students were integrated into the Snyder public school system. Lincoln remained open for an additional year as an elementary school and housed the Head Start program for a short period of time.

All parents, former students and teachers and friends are urged to take part in the activities.

Officers work burglary, mishap

Local police investigated a burglary, worked a one-vehicle accident and made one arrest Thursday.

At 6:55 a.m., Dollie Harrison informed officers that someone had broken into a residence in the 1200 block of 34th Street and stolen some household items. An offense report for burglary of a residence has been filed in the case.

At 1:22 p.m., officers arrested a 24-year-old man at 28th Street and Avenue M for driving with a suspended license.

Police worked an accident at 5:14 p.m. in the 100 block of East Coliseum Drive. Involved was a 1978 Kenworth driven by Alex Salazar Trinidad of Colorado City, which struck a Dairy Queen sign post.

Among other activity, police filed a report of family violence at 3:05 p.m. in reference to a disturbance in the 1400 block of Avenue M and were notified of a gasoline drive-off of $12.49 at Town & Country at 8:43 p.m.

Police also investigated two prowler reports early this morning. No suspects were located in either complaint.

Man mailed wife's suicide weapon to his elderly aunt

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — Henry L. Sanderson's personal tragedies over the last few years seem to dwarf his current legal troubles.

Last November, Sanderson sent his seriously ill, 73-year-old Aunt Betty the same .38 caliber handgun that his wife, also very sick, used to take her own life.

Sanderson mailed the gun, along with a book on suicide, as a Christmas present. His aunt, Elizabeth Domako of Audubon, shot herself to death a few days after receiving the gun, which Sanderson sent from Texas.

On Thursday, Sanderson pleaded guilty in U.S. District Court to a federal firearms violation.

Worse still, Sanderson himself has terminal cancer and two to four years to live, his lawyer said.

Sanderson, a 62-year-old retired IBM executive, surrendered June 3 to federal authorities near his summer home outside Chicago. He also has a home in Corpus Christi, Texas.

He appeared Thursday before U.S. District Judge Anne E. Thompson. The lawyer, Michael Chiarella, said that under a plea bargain his client would be sentenced for failing to notify the express mail carrier that a gun was being transported. That is less severe than the original charge of illegal interstate transportation of a weapon.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Kevin Smith said Thursday that Sanderson's guilty plea will give him the possibility of receiving a lighter penalty under federal sentencing guidelines. Sanderson faces up to five years in prison and a $250,000 fine at his Sept. 8 sentencing.

Chiarella said Sanderson has been plagued by family medical problems over the last few years. Sanderson himself had one kidney removed and the remaining one is cancerous, the lawyer said.

"The last couple of years for him have had some heartache and despair," Chiarella said.

Sanderson was free on a $20,000 personal recognizance bond and planned to return to Chicago Thursday, Chiarella said.

Along with the .38-caliber handgun, Sanderson last November sent his aunt bullets, handwritten instructions on how to use the firearm, and a copy of a book by right-to-die advocate Derek Humphry, titled "Final Exit," Smith said.

The package was addressed to "Aunt Betty" from "Sandy."

Sections of the book were underlined.

In the chapter detailing suicide by shooting, the book's instructions to "put the gun into the mouth and shoot upwards toward the brain" were highlighted with a yellow marker. In the margin were the words, "This will cause you no pain."

Three years ago, Sanderson's wife, Jane, who had emphysema, committed suicide using the same handgun at the couple's Glenview, Ill., home, Chiarella said.

Investigators were led to Sanderson after he wrote a letter to the Camden County Prosecutor's Office acknowledging the gun was his — and asking that it be returned.

County Prosecutor Edward F. Borden Jr. has said it is unlikely Sanderson will be charged with aiding and abetting a suicide.

Yeltsin wins Middle America over with his type of populism

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — From the peasant villages of Russia to the wheat fields of Middle America, Boris Yeltsin has won over the people with his brand of populism. He even stunned the American politicians who were his hosts.

"I'd like to keep him a week and make him my campaign manager," Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., joked Thursday as Yeltsin departed for Canada after a five-hour visit to Kansas following the summit in Washington.

Dole's fellow Kansas Republican, Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, agreed that American politicians could learn a lot from Yeltsin.

"We were saying we all ought to go to his school," Kassebaum said. "He's a natural. He's got great instincts and won a lot of friends."

Yeltsin arrived Thursday night in Ottawa. He was to address Parliament today, meet with Prime Minister Brian Mulroney and plead for $2.4 billion in aid.

Earlier this week in Washington, Yeltsin addressed Congress, pleaded for aid and was hailed as a world-class statesman for negotiating landmark nuclear missile reductions with President Bush.

In Kansas, he proved himself an outstanding showman.

And winning the support of the American people is important. Yeltsin is trying to prod Americans, and Congress, to back a $24 billion package of Western aid and credits to Russia. The package is stalled in Congress, which is preoccupied with domestic spending.

He used a mixture of charm, down-to-earth humor and even slapstick, as when he insisted the chairman of Hormel Co. take his suit jacket as a gift in exchange for a leather jacket.

Mayors conference president says cities need help now

HOUSTON (AP) — The president of the U.S. Conference of Mayors left Houston today before the kickoff of the organization's six-day gathering, saying he had to take care of his own community first.

Mayor Raymond L. Flynn flew back to Boston before 8 a.m. after he was told a free music and comedy show at City Hall Plaza erupted into violence, complete with looting, car burnings and the injury of at two dozen people.

"I think it really expresses that the mayors are, in fact, on the front lines of urban America," Flynn said. "You go day-by-day here, never able to plan on anything (that could) take you out of your city."

Flynn was scheduled to appear at a morning news conference to talk about the needs of America's cities. But in a telephone call from Houston Intercontinental Airport, he said the Thursday incident in his city points up the troubles in the nation's communities.

"I came down from Boston last night to take care of the problems of the cities, particularly addressing the problems of the homeless, hunger and unemployed," Flynn said.

Regulators battle measure

tioning would create a "domestic OPEC" and allow gas-producing states to cut production and hike prices, Reps. Edward Markey, D-Mass., and James Scheuer, D-N.Y., last month introduced their amendment.

The measure drew little favor with several natural gas regulators who testified Thursday before Johnston's committee.

The measure "rests on unwarranted fears. And it would provoke unnecessary and unwarranted disruption in the regulation of natural gas," said Texas Railroad Commissioner Bob Krueger.

"Nothing that we have done in Texas would constrain supply in order to raise prices," he said.

But Markey and others contended at a news conference prior to Thursday's hearing that without the measure, gas-producing states could engage in price-fixing.

"We are not here today to challenge the authority of states to proration gas production across the board," said Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio. "But when prorationing is used as an economic device to fix prices, it becomes an abusive act."

Prorationing emerged during the 1930s oil boom in Texas as the method of protecting rights of different producers who draw natural gas from a common underground supply.

In the months since Texas and Oklahoma approved prorationing measures, natural gas prices have soared 44 percent, Markey said.

The Markey-Scheuer amendment drew a somewhat hostile audience in the Senate energy committee.

"What we have is an unsubstantiated fear of a domestic OPEC," said Johnston, who has promised to oppose the amendment when House and Senate negotiators meet to iron out differences in their energy bills.

Johnston wasn't the panel's only oil patch member. Republicans Pete Domenici of New Mexico and Don Nickles of Oklahoma also found fault with the measure.

"The Markey amendment is a giant step in the wrong direction," Nickles said, noting that 39 states have prorationing regulations.

"The Markey-Scheuer amendment ignores (a) long history of legitimate state regulation of natural gas production and, if enacted, will destroy the existing proration laws of Oklahoma and most other gas-producing states," said Cody L. Graves, a member of the Oklahoma Corporation Commission.

U.S. drops claims against Russian for bugging embassy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is dropping a $30 million claim for the bugging of the new Embassy in Moscow as part of a property deal signed during Russian President Boris Yeltsin's visit, a U.S. official revealed.

The listening devices were planted by workers selected by the Soviet government. After negotiating with Congress, the Bush administration decided to build a new building nearby.

In the meantime, the Soviets, in retaliation, were prevented from occupying their new embassy in the Mount Alto section of Washington.

The deal struck at the summit but not made public would drop the U.S. claim for construction losses. In exchange, the United States would get property and other considerations estimated to be worth $45 million — an overall gain of $15 million, the U.S. official disclosed.

Secretary of State James A. Baker III, appearing Thursday night on public television's "MacNeil-Lehrer NewsHour," declined to confirm or deny the U.S. decision to drop the $30 million claim. He said only that the two governments finally would be able to occupy new embassies.

18-year-old Alexander Babenko, one of a half-dozen young soldiers posted at a guard house overlooking the camp.

The joint commission, headed by Russian Gen. Dmitri Volkogonov and former U.S. Ambassador Malcolm Toon, said in March it had found no evidence of American servicemen from the Vietnam or Korean wars in the former Soviet Union.

But it did produce death certificates of eight Americans who were held in Soviet prison camps following World War II. It was not known whether they were U.S. servicemen or Nazi sympathizers.

Russia is hampered by voluminous files that until now had been classified, many of them in handwriting, with no cataloguing or indexing.

PENNIES FOR MISSIONS — Four-hundred-and twenty pennies were collected in buckets for foreign missions during Vacation Bible School at First Baptist Church June 8-12. Church fires pastor, but he sticks around HOUSTON (AP) — The Rev. Robert L. White preaches from the pulpit every Sunday, but some congregation members would like to see him in court.

Leaders of the First Missionary Baptist Church said they fired White six weeks ago, but he keeps coming to church on Sundays to preach and has even changed the locks on the building, according to a lawsuit filed against him.

The suit, which represents about 40 of the church's estimated 60 members, is seeking $10,000 in damages and an injunction to prevent White from acting as pastor or interfering with the church, an attorney said. A hearing has been scheduled July 8.

Attorney Matthew W. Plummer Sr., who represents the church members who filed the suit, said Thursday his clients voted to remove him "because they thought he was incompetent as far as pastoral duties are concerned."

"They thought he was just generally incompetent," Plummer said when asked for specifics.

White told the Houston Chronicle in Thursday's editions the plaintiffs "do not have a case, and the court will not hear a 'he said, she said' argument."

White did not immediately return a telephone call Thursday from The Associated Press.

The 49-year-old pastor told the newspaper he founded the church nearly seven years ago, owns the building and will continue preaching there.

"I don't know who the title is vested in, but my people are paying the notes," Plummer told the AP.

Tony Killings, chairman of the board of deacons, and Joe Hicks; chairman of the finance committee, filed the suit on behalf of the church. It claims White's actions have injured the church in that members are abstaining from financial support and attendance.

Richards announces programs for youth

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards is challenging businesses to hire young people this summer after meeting with religious and community leaders who were called together in the wake of the Los Angeles riots.

"The kids of this state are the future of Texas," Richards said Thursday, "and the business community well knows it."

She urged businesses to each hire at least one young person, and announced a toll-free state hotline that's meant to connect prospective employers with job-seekers between the ages of 14 and 21.

Richards also announced state-backed projects in Houston, Fort Worth and El Paso targeted for young people considered drop-out or lawbreaker risks.

Such projects are "only a beginning," said Richards, who met with about 100 people from around the state who have been asked to work on solving racial discord and developing ideas for summer youth programs.

Richards asked the local leaders to send her their community goals, their plans to implement them and how the state can help.

She also asked them to report on their successful summer programs.

Richards urged the ministers and others to contact local businesses and lobby for summer job programs. She told them to ask their elected officials to do the same and stressed the importance of working with local law enforcement officials, judges and others.

Employers can call the state's toll-free number — 1-800-JOBS-YES — to give the Texas Employment Commission a job listing. The TEC, which has offices around the state, will work to match up young job-seekers with the jobs.

Businesses that hire a young person through the program will get a window decal, Richards said.

Richards also announced the "Governor's Clean Machine" project in Houston, which will involve 130 students in an inner-city community improvement program. The state is committing $200,000 to the effort.

New pastor

Effective June 28, Jesus Delgado will be the new pastor of Emmanuel Methodist Church in Snyder.

Decision clears way for limitation efforts in property tax issue

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Supreme Court decision upholding a California property-tax limitation clears the way for similar voter initiatives in two other large states that could mean vastly different tax bills on identical homes.

Michigan voters will decide this fall whether they want similar restrictions on city and county property taxes. In Florida, a petition drive will continue through August and could force a vote in November.

The Supreme Court ruled 8-1 Thursday that a California initiative approved by voters in 1978 is constitutional, even though it often results in starkly different taxes on side-by-side homes of equal value.

The law, known as Proposition 13, requires that property taxes on homes bought since the law was enacted be based on purchase price — not current value. A home bought before 1978 is assessed at its 1975 valuation.

In either case, annual assessment increases are limited to 2 percent.

California property values have soared by far more than 2 percent a year since 1975, resulting in disproportionately higher taxes on recent home purchasers.

For example, Stephanie Nordlinger, who filed the suit on which the court ruled, paid $170,000 in 1988 for a Los Angeles bungalow, and her first-year tax bill was $1,700. Neighbors who have lived in comparable homes for several years pay as little as $320 a year.

A family in a riot-scarred section of Los Angeles can pay as much tax as one in posh Beverly Hills.

Justice Harry Blackmun, writing for the court majority, said such disparities may frustrate the dream of home ownership for many younger and poorer families. But the law is a reasonable way for the state to give a tax break to existing homeowners, Blackmun wrote.

Whatever the inequities, the court concluded, a prospective purchaser is aware of future tax liabilities before a home is bought and can back out if the burden appears too large.

Justice John Paul Stevens, the lone dissenter, said Proposition 13 has given many homeowners "a tremendous windfall and ... has created severe inequities in California's property tax scheme."

"Just because the law is constitutional doesn't mean there aren't policy problems with it," said Chris Zimmerman of the National Conference of State Legislatures. "There are people who find an element of inequity in two property owners next to each other with comparable homes but paying vastly different tax bills.

The ruling "might be a big deal, but if there are any immediate implications for other states they aren't apparent," Zimmerman said.

"The decision could send a message to other states ... that the court has spoken, that there is a capacity to create a limitation on the growth of assessments," said Randy Arndt of the National League of Cities.

"LET'S GO HUNTING!" IN TODAY'S LANGUAGE THAT PHRASE BRINGS TO MIND A PLEASANT DAY IN THE FIELDS WITH A GOOD DOG, THE TAKING OF A PHEASANT OR TWO—FINE SPORT! NOT SO, IN BIBLICAL TIMES! TOO OFTEN IT WAS A CALL TO THE UNPLEASANT DUTY OF RIDDING THE COUNTRYSIDE OF SOME BEAST OF PREY—USUALLY THE FEROCIOUS LION! THE BOOKS OF THE BIBLE CONTAIN MANY REFERENCES TO THE LION AND, ALTHOUGH HARDLY A ONE CAN BE FOUND TODAY IN WHAT IS TERMED THE BIBLE LANDS, THE AREA ABOUNDED WITH THEM IN THOSE TIMES.

ANCIENT WRITINGS, PAINTINGS, AND SCULPTURE, HAVE REVEALED MANY RECORDS OF LION HUNTS. THE PLENTITUDE OF YOUNG KIDS, LAMBS, ELDERLY PEOPLE, AND SMALL CHILDREN, ALL EASY PREY, ATTRACTED THESE BEASTS AND, WHEN THEIR DEPREDATIONS BECAME TOO NUMEROUS, A LION HUNT WAS ORGANIZED TO WIPE THEM OUT, OR AT LEAST DRIVE THEM OUT OF THE AREA.

THIS DUTY USUALLY FELL TO ROYALTY AND THE UPPER CLASSES BECAUSE THEY HAD HORSES AND CHARIOTS AND PLENTY OF SOLDIERS OR SERVANTS WHO WERE EXPERT WITH BOW AND ARROW. ALTHOUGH HORSE RACING HAS BEEN CALLED "THE SPORT OF KINGS," YOU MAY BE SURE THAT LION HUNTING EARNED THIS TITLE LONG BEFORE—EXCEPT, UNFORTUNATELY AT TIMES, IT WAS FAR FROM WHAT WE TODAY WOULD CALL SPORT!
