Son of Monroe Man Describes Horrors of Dachau Prison

(Editor's note: The horrors of Dachau Prison camp and the brutality of the Nazis are vividly described in this letter from 1st. Lieut. James D. Cope, to his wife. Lt. Cope was with the 7th army. He is a son of H. A. Cope of near Monroe, and a nephew of Mr. and Mrs. A. Cope of Abernathy. Before entering service, he was manager of J. C. Penney Co. at Gainesville.)

... About the trip to the Dachau prison camp (concentration). Dachau was the only name of any camp I remembered, although there were others just as horrible at Buchenwald near Weimer, one near Karlsruhe, and several others. I've read reports on Buchenwald, conducted by responsible high Allied officers, and the description is the same as I could say of Dachau. ... Now, I'll tell you what I actually saw (and smelled!!) Dachau is a quiet little town about 26 kilometres north of Munich. There's an air of some commercial, small shop prosperity about this little town not present in the usual little places of similar size. Like most of these places, the streets are narrow and winding, and since there weren't too many G. I.'s around, it was hard to find out where the camp was. I asked several G. I.'s and it seemed they all wanted to know themselves. Most of the bridges had been blown, so there had to be only one obscure way to go. ... Finally I saw a number of French soldiers who obviously had been prisoners, wearing the usual tri-color ribbon on lapels, and with mixed uniforms, or no insignia, or rank. That is always the way. Again I can be glad of being able to speak French. Most of them can speak German and French, but no English. He was very enthusiastic, and offered to conduct me there personally. ... I learned from him on the way out, between "a gauche," "a droite apres le pant," "l'oujour tout droit," that he had been captured in 1940 along with the British who couldn't get away at Dunkirk. He was immediately put in Dachau, which then mostly had political prisoners, except for the Poles who had been taken from Poland. His lot had been fair — he looked in fair condition. However, for "plusieurs," days just before the Americans came, no one had received any food at all. He had learned that they intended to take the strong and kill all the weak who couldn't go back with the Germans. ... We went to the entrance, nothing seemed sinister about it.

There was a wall, of course, not very high, with barbed wire, covering about 60 acres. (I found out why, later, the wall wasn't very high; all the prisoners were too weak from hunger to get over it). ... There were the usual stone "Kaxernes" (or barracks.) On the left, for the U. S. officers, on the right of the boulevard, were the "unteroffizier," or NCP barracks. Inside the walls in less elegant quarters, were the guards. Then, last but not least, were the workshops and barracks of the inmates. This camp held around 50,000 living people—and there was adequate, if you want to call those little sheds that, room for about 2,000. People were forced to sleep on shelves and on the floor, or whatever they could. These shelves were about 8 feet by 6 feet by 6 feet, and seven people slept on each shelf. The aisles between the two rows of shelves were just wide enough to let two people squeeze past each other. The shelves were about 18 inches to 20 inches above one another, so the man nearest the wall had to get in first and get out last. If he had to relieve himself during the night he did so in his place. There were no toilet facilities or heat, even in winter. Each blanket, which was smaller and skimpier than the little single sheets you used to buy for 49c, was intended to serve two inmates. Not all even had these. When they were crowded (when the deaths could not keep up with the arrivals), they slept in shifts. When your shift was over (perhaps 6 hours), you got out and let the other shift in. If a prisoner died between roll calls, his comrades were required to carry his body to the disposal place. The barracks were organized in small groups. Frequently, for some small infraction, the whole group would be beaten or put to death, or both.

The food they had was slop. Beet juice, potato soup, black bread. Red Cross packages never went to Jews, very little to anyone else. The S. S. took what they wanted and distributed the rest to the civilians, or, in some instances to the more favored prisoners. The prison garb was a light cotton suit not unlike pajamas, with blue and white stripes running vertically. Some of them, the military, kept their uniforms. I saw warehouses full of victims' clothing, all carefully sorted for reclamation. On the railroad tracks in a nearby

Dear Buford: I am in the Army AAF BU, BTC, Sqdn. R, Area 2, Air Forces and I am stationed at Bks. 693, Sheppard Field, Texas. It has been raining here almost every day ... It took six days for me to be processed and then I was shipped out from Ft. Bliss to my present station ... The Air Forces are all right. The food is good, and the work is easy, and after only a month of basic training I can get a ten-day furlough. There is plenty of recreation here, there are movies, service clubs and libraries, etc. ... I will be here about three months, so, if you want to, send the paper to me now. Sincerely, Pvt. Roy J. Sandefur, 3706 3/c.

Dear Buford: I enjoyed my recent visit in Abernathy very much. Wish time would have allowed me to visit with more of our friends there. In accordance with Post Office Order No. 27851, it is necessary for me to make personal request to the publisher of the paper before it will be accepted by the FPO. Please accept this as such. I am still in the states and expect to be for some time yet, but our mail comes thru the FPO. Thanks, J. P. Settle, ART, 3706 3/c.

Dear Buford: I've kind of neglected writing, but I'm not much hand at writing. I thought I would drop a few lines to let you know I'm still getting the good ole Abernathy paper. I enjoy it more every copy and I'm sure every boy and girl in the service over here will tell you the same. So, just keep them coming ... Oh, yes, I read in the copy of May 17 that Lieut. Mary Lee Carpenter was on the U. S. S. Comfort when it was bombed. I saw the ship a few days after it happened, but I didn't even give it a thought about anyone I knew being on it. However, I've been pretty lucky meeting people I know. Not long ago I was with Bill (my brother) and Jack (an uncle), whom you know well, also, a cousin, and several other people. In fact, there is a guy on the ship with me I knew before coming into service ... How is everything coming back in the states, or where ever that place is. I've been gone 14 months now—seems like that many years to me—but I don't think it will be too long before I'm back. At least, I hope not ... However, I don't have any room to kick for there are other guys who have been out longer than myself—and who have seen a lot more than I have. Really, the ship I'm on is like a paid vacation, but I'd rather spend my vacations somewhere besides on some South Pacific island ... Well, there's nothing more to say, so I'll run along for this time. Tell every one hello—just keep the paper coming, please. As ever, Davis Perry, 32/c, June 20.

Mrs. Owen Benn has returned home from a Lubbock hospital. Greeting cards for all occasions.—Pinson Pharmacy.

Whether we will or not, we are our brother's keeper and our method of keeping him determines what we shall be. If we keep him in a spirit of helpfulness, brotherliness and encouragement, it will increase these desirable factors in us. If we keep him with the idea of economic profit and exploitation, it will dwarf us and we shall be the smaller for our conduct.

Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, addressing the National Council Scouts, raised this question, "Am I My Brother's Keeper?" He answered in an affirmative. Each one has a definite responsibility to the other—not to force his way of life upon others are too much for their means of support to counsel and help them to per- ply and this creates dissatisfaction feel their way of life. Especially is and trouble. We must learn to live together in a helpful way and not in a hurtful way.

The channels through which we may help are: Sunday Schools, Youth meetings under sponsorship of the churches, Boy and Girl Scouts, Y. M. and Y. W. C. A., De- Molay and any others that may be functioning.

The warden of any reform school will tell you that many, if not the majority, of his cases can be traced directly to homes that have been broken thru bad economic conditions—lack of money in the home to supply the needs, or may, the wants, of the youth.

(When you ask them, they all protest "Nicht Nazi! Nicht Nazi!" Remember "Me no Goliad! Me no Alamo!") For instance, here is a about the ONLY type you can be sure of. He said that he had run across a German that day, a former Deputy of the Reichstag. He had been a prisoner since 1933, when Hitler came to power. You easily see why Hitler got the consent vote of the Reichstag! Some of the things I told you came from the report on Buchenwald (the organization, etc.), but, the places mentioned and the people here are the ones I saw! He then showed me where the real treatment was applied to the prisoners. . . . The cure! . . . Just before I got into the camp there was a railroad with a string of cars on it extending into the camp. There are two types of cars on the siding, which was in use up to the time the Americans came about the first of May. One type looked like a troop-sleeper except it just had shelves of wood to lie on. More people to crowd into it stacked like that. The other type was an ordinary open freight car. Prisoners came in on the first, alive. They were stacked like cordwood, all stripped of any clothing, in the flat cars, and shipped out, dead! That's the only way they were ever permitted to leave. . . . When the Americans came, these cars were full, about 20 of them, and since rail lines had been cut some time before, and the weather was hot — they were not very pleasant. When I got there two or three days later, only the flies and stench and filth, oozing through the planks of the floor remained! The Americans, for sanitary reasons, had got a civilian detail busy with wagons, had them stack the bodies by a huge fire they had built, and push them in with a bulldozer. . . . They were burning when I was there. The Frenchman said there were about 6,000 rotten bodies on that train. They were so starved they didn't require much shipping space! . . . Then we went to the gas chamber (one of them.) The Frenchman said it was the "little" one. There were two others — one larger, the other about the same size. They were housed in the crematorium. It was convenient to take them from the gas chambers and shove them right into the furnaces. As we approached the crematorium I didn't smell anything any worse than the usual foul smell of the camp, and the German rural towns, for that matter. They all stunk! . . . And, then I hit it! You can't understand how brutally revolting, how violent that stench is. My throat, nose, stomach seemed covered with the filthy slime I saw running slowly down the cement steps of the buildings. The first thing I noticed was the flies. They were having a field day. You couldn't have put a pencil point down on the small window sill without spearing one. We went around the corner of the building to get a better view of the steps down which the slime was oozing. The stuff was about an eighth to a quarter of an inch thick, about the color of white salmon. Inside the room, stacked along the far wall like cordwood were about 200 bodies. I didn't walk in. I could have reached around their thighs just above the knee with the thumb and fingers of my right hand. They were that starved. They were adult men, I could see that. (They were naked.) But, they looked like boys, they had shrunk so in height. Some of the hip bones had actually punched thru the rotted flesh, which was a dull, bruised colored blue. Some of them had dark brown stains around their mouths and chests. Blood. It was customary to save everything, even the gold teeth. George Howard saw one man who had been cut in two just under the ribs. Part of the body was at angles a small distance from the other, still clothed, but severed completely, even if ragged at the edges. They had sawed him in two with one nice long, sustained burst of a "burp gun," the machine gun that spews out 1,200 to 1,500 slugs per minute—over 20 shots a second! . . . We then went to the door of the next room. About 300 there. . . . Now don't get a bad impression of the Germans. They aren't sloppy in any of their work—they pride themselves on efficiency. But, an unforeseen contingency arose. It really wasn't their choice to have such filth around. Here's the story:

Remember, this was a crematorium, one of three. The furnaces are brick ovens, like baking ovens. Bodies put out good heat — after they begin to burn. But, it requires a hot coal fire to start them. When the coal supply failed to come in, during the winter, they couldn't burn them fast enough, so they stacked them around until they could find out what to do with them. They had a bright idea. The train! So they loaded it up (the prisoners did), put a prisoner detail on the train, sent it out into the forest along the way, where they had a big ditch dug. The prisoners threw the bodies into the ditch and covered them as they went along. When they had almost used up the ditch, the S. S. guards shot the prisoner burial detail, threw them in the space left, and covered them up. The Americans caused them to have to leave with a batch on hand. The Frenchman said that early in March they had about 4,000 to 6,000 bodies stacked outside. It was cold, so they weren't too bad — but, when it got warmer, it was a problem! They killed, or some died, on an average of 200 to 600 people a day. Always it was the same. When a prisoner detail went into the yard enclosing the crematorium from the rest of the camp, they never came out. . . . Here's another clever thing the efficient Germans worked out: They would herd in a batch of 42 prisoners. They went into a clean, neat, white painted little hallway. To the left were three little locked doors with the warning death-head signs of "Danger! Poison Gas!" — they were small gas chambers. The victims, suspecting their fate, began to get excited, shrink from going in the chambers. (They had already been told to take off their clothes and stack them neatly in a corner.) Then the guards pointed to a large door in the hall to the right, over which was painted "Badeanstalt" (Bath House), opened it up and herded them in to take a shower. Overjoyed, relieved at finding it was only a badly needed shower they were getting, they didn't wait to be urged — just rushed pell-mell into the small room and waited for the water. The guards quickly (that was the whole point—speed in handling large numbers the easiest way, which was hard because they were frightened) closed the door. Then they turned on the gas. This gas is a special gas, a type of cyanide gas reputedly more potent than that used in our executions. It comes in cans—neatly stored in a little closet next to the chamber. There was an ample stock on hand. . . . They were efficient! . . . Then there were the unfortunate persons who were targeted. One of the wives of the S. S. men saw an unusual amount on the bared body of one of the men as he worked. She had a novel idea. The man was killed, skinned, his hide tanned, and, lo! she had an unusual lamp shade. The idea was catchy — it soon became a fad. At Buchenwald, despite S. S. efforts to cover up, the investigation commission picked up six! . . . I could go on. I won't. You can't get any idea from this description because I can't write onto paper the vile smell—the lumpy ooze that was on those floors. . . . Perhaps even now, this will not get by the censor. I hope it does. I think it will despite its gruesomeness. It's no secret anymore. Papers are full of it. We were warned about it, by people, the very few, lucky ones, who escaped. Even they hadn't actually seen what I saw, because those who saw, died, too. . . . I never really believed it, really. At least not all of it. I know that if you don't keep this, I'll not believe it 10 years from now. . . . Let us read this when our daughter, Katie, says, 20 years from now, "They can't be really bad. A lot of that is just propaganda." I'll remember, so will a lot of other guys. . . .

HICKS-IVEY RITES READ AT BAPTIST CHURCH TUESDAY

(From Hale Center American)

In a double-ring ceremony, performed Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock at First Baptist church here, Lieut. Orville Hicks and Janelle Ivey were wed. The marriage was performed by Rev. F. N. Allen, pastor here, as more than 100 friends of the former Hale Center high school classmates watched.

Traditional wedding marches were played by Mrs. Roger Pinson, pianist, who also accompanied the sister of the bride, Miss Jeanne Ivey, who sang "Always."

Lighted tapers flanked the altar, and baskets of summer flowers were arranged in an eye-catching effect around the principals of the wedding.

Best man was Pvt. James Radford Pinson, recently returned veteran of the war in Europe.

Matron of honor was also a sister of the bride, Mrs. Escar Parker of Roby.

Usher was Wesley Barnes, storekeeper, 2c, home on furlough from duty in the Pacific with the navy.

The bride was given in marriage by her father.

Mrs. Hicks is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Ivey of this city. For her wedding, she was attired in a white jersey dress, and carried an orchid atop a white Bible. For something borrowed, she carried a pocket-handkerchief, belonging to her grandmother, Mrs. J. J. Caudle. She wore a strand of pearls with a diamond clasp, a gift of the groom.

The sisters, attired in matching black dresses, wore pink rose corsages.

Mrs. Hicks attended Wayland college and Howard Payne college, and has taught in schools at Abernathy, Hale Center and Olney.

Lieut. Hicks, recently liberated from a German prisoner of War camp where he was interned when a B-24 bomber he was piloting was forced down in Yugoslavia, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Hicks of Odessa. After his graduation here, he attended Draughton's business college, Abilene, then entered the army.

air corps in September of 1942. He trained at Sheppard Field, Tuscon, Cuero, Waco, San Antonio and received his commission as a flight officer at Lubbock Army Air field on Aug. 30, 1943, when his bride-to-be pinned on his silver wings. Further training in multi-motored ships at Biggs Field, El Paso, McCook, Nebr., and Clovis followed before he went to Italy in July, 1944.

After the ceremony, the wedding party adjourned to the J. J. Caudle home where a reception was held. The bride and groom cut a three-tiered wedding cake, topped with miniature bride and groom, and the cake and punch were served to callers.

The couple left in a few minutes for a honeymoon at Ruidoso, N. M. For her going away costume, the bride wore a light blue gaberdine suit with brown accessories, and a pair of hand-made natural pig-skin gloves, a gift of the groom who had brought them from Italy.

The pair will return here Monday, then will go on to McKinney, Texas, where Lieut. Hicks is receiving medical attention at the army hospital for injuries he received in the crash of his plane.

Out-of-town residents attending the wedding and reception were Mr. and Mrs. W. V. Cunningham of Abernathy, Mrs. Escar Parker and babies of Roby, and Miss Mary Dea, Carrell, Lockney, and Mrs. Glen Carrell, Plainview. Miss Carrell was a college classmate of the bride's at both Wayland and Howard Payne, and a fellow faculty member at Olney.
