AGREE ON EMBARGO REPEAL

CHAPEL IN THE WOODS, a building built on the campus of Texas State College for Women at Denton by NYA workers, was dedicated Wednesday by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt. Here she is shown as she spoke from the front of the new building. Acme Telephoto.

First Freeze

Freezing weather moved into Childress area last night for the first time since early last spring and the mercury here dipped to a low of 27 degrees. There was no frost but ice was plentiful.

Farmers today did not believe that young wheat was damaged to any serious extent, but summer vegetation was killed.

Temperatures rose today and warmer weather is scheduled for the weekend, but a heavy frost and another freeze are due tonight.

The cold wave which swept through the entire midwest was more severe than was expected, according to the United Press. Minimum temperatures of 12 degrees were reported in the extreme northern Panhandle and Amarillo reported a low reading of 20.

Wheat in the northern Panhandle was damaged considerably.

Light snow fell yesterday afternoon in the northern part of Oklahoma, but no other moisture was reported in the southwest.

Shell to Preach Here Sunday

Rev. Garland Shell, pastor of First Presbyterian church at Temple and former pastor here, is to speak at both services of the Presbyterian church Sunday on an exchange of pulpits with Rev. Frank Travis.

Rev. Travis is at Temple with Mrs. Travis, who underwent a serious operation in a hospital there the first of the week. He returned to conduct services here last week, but this Sunday he will preach to Rev. Shell's congregation.

Subjects for his sermons have been announced by Rev. Shell as follows: Sunday morning at 11 o'clock service, "Life Is Like That," with the text, "Before the open window facing Jerusalem Daniel kneeled and prayed . . . and they brought him and cast him into the den of lions"; for the vesper service, "If," with the text, "If thou canst do anything, help us. Jesus said, If thou canst believe."

It Was Gunfire, Not Explosion

A muffled blast, which attracted attention in northwest Childress about 9 o'clock last night, turned out to be a negro's pistol fire rather than an explosion.

The negro, at the rear of the J. J. Pigott residence, fired at two men who were attempting to scale the fence to his chicken pen, he told investigating officers.

Another Drunk

One drunk appeared before Justice of the Peace George Faulkner this morning and on a plea of guilty, he was fined $20 and costs. A total of 25 drunks and three drunk drivers have been arrested and fined here this week.

Final Draft Is Being Prepared This Afternoon

WASHINGTON (UP)—Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley announced today that the house and senate conferees had agreed on a final draft of the neutrality bill repealing the arms embargo.

Barkley, who entered the conference room shortly before 1 p. m., emerged in a few minutes to tell newsmen:

"Well, they are agreed but it will take a couple of hours to get it into shape."

The house approved the bill, almost identical to that passed by the senate, by a vote of 243 to 181 late yesterday.

All evidence indicated that the repeal of embargo will touch off a history making boom in American war plane production, a boom tintured with rosy estimates of orders and imaginative forecasts of an airplane procession by sea and air across the Atlantic.

Wall street speculators climbed aboard the aircraft bandwagon, and aviation shares opened at an all-time high.

Industry experts predicted that the allies might buy as much as $1,000,000,000 in this country in addition to $1,000,000 already placed.

Actual new foreign orders amounting to $159,000,000 have been issued to American aircraft manufacturers or will be issued as soon as final action is taken on the neutrality bill.

In Paris security prices jumped on the strength of the house vote for repeal.

Reports from London indicated that war orders would not be limited to airplanes. Officials said Britain would buy machine tools, raw materials, and ultimately some ammunition.

Germany too is welcome to all American war planes she can buy, if she can find some way of transporting them past the British blockade under the cash and carry provision of neutrality bill.

Monday Will Be Bargain Day

Now through December is the buying peak of the year and Childress merchants have loaded their shelves with thousands of items.

Most of those items, in the leading stores, will be placed on sale at special bargains Monday.

It is the regular monthly Trades Day!

Leading Childress merchants are of the opinion that goods must be sold and if bargains will sell, there will be a rush in Childress Monday.

Read your Sunday's Index, then shop Monday and save!

Turkey Show All Set

AIR FIGHT REPORTED

LONDON (UP)—An Edinburgh dispatch to the London Evening News today said it was believed that a fight between British planes and German raiders occurred today a few miles at sea from the Firth of Forth.

The air battle occurred, the dispatch said, when British planes intercepted German raiders attempting to land.

Fire Damages Royal Home

Fire seriously damaged the roof of the Charlie Royal residence, 1209 E. NW, early this morning.

Royal and his family were out of town and the blaze was discovered by neighbors. The fire did not spread to the lower part of the house, but furniture and wall paper were damaged some by water and smoke.

As the fire started in the roof, defective wiring was blamed.

Nazis Hint of Sub Campaign On U. S. Shipping

BERLIN (UP)—Nazis, bitterly critical of United States embargo repeal action, hinted darkly today at a merciless submarine campaign to stop an expected flow of war planes, guns and munitions to the allies.

Unofficial nazi quarters charged that repeal of the embargo would mean outright American support of the allies.

"Now all that remains is to see whether France and Great Britain can get the stuff across," said one informant.

Official quarters refused comment until they had time "to examine the full significance" of repeal. A spokesman for the foreign office and propaganda ministry said merely,

"It was not surprising. It was to be expected."

Surprising or not, nazis were angered at legislation which they felt favored the allies as against Germany.

Progress in the campaign of Childress county farm leaders to encourage increased production of better turkeys will be in evidence tomorrow at the second annual Turkey Show, which will be staged in the vacant building, two doors north of The Index, on Main street.

More turkeys and better turkeys than were exhibited in the show last year are expected to be on display.

Cash prizes totaling $75 will be awarded to the winning birds. The

ADDITIONAL SIGNERS FOR REA REQUIRED

Fifty additional signed consumers or an equal number of agreements from present signers to use more than the minimum amount of electricity will be necessary for final approval of the Gate City Electric cooperative's proposed rural electric project.

This information was received today by Henry Givens, project coordinator, from REA officials in Washington.

The proposed line, which extends through Childress and Cottle counties and into the edges of Hardeman and King counties, was approved and no changes and extensions were recommended. However, due to the fact that a bare minimum of signers had been secured along the route, the additional work was recommended.

Givens said today that he felt that the additional signers could be secured without delay and that the project will be approved soon.

Mayor Speaks To BPW

A talk by C. V. Jones, new mayor of Childress, acquainted members of Business and Professional Women's club with the city government of Childress as they continued a study of "Women In a Democracy" at their dinner last evening.

As councilman for several years and now mayor, Mr. Jones was able to give information about the city's affairs and the system of management used in various departments. Miss Faye Maxwe'll had arranged the program, which closed with songs by the new club chorus.

Committees for a social event and a proposed civic project were appointed by Mrs. Herbert Cliff, president.

The civic project is operation of an NYA project house here, for which the club may become sponsor. Mrs. Jimmie McKenzie, Misses Nell Rogers and Reba Curtis were named to the committee to investigate the cost and value of the proposed work.

The social event is a tea to be given on the afternoon of Nov. 19 honoring Miss Miriam Coleman, state executive secretary of Texas Business and Professional Women's clubs, who will be a visitor here. Miss Lula Mae Carter is general chairman of arrangements.

Members of the executive committee will act as hostesses. Miss Curtis was appointed to head the refreshment committee, Mrs. George Robertson the program committee and Mrs. J. O. McMinn the seating committee.

Miss Aileen Morris of Amarillo was a club guest.

US WOMEN

By Sue Vinson.

Warned by forecasts of cold weather, most Childress gardeners protected their choice fall blooms last night against the freeze and will have them ready for the flower show Monday.

While chrysanthemums and the sturdier flowers can stand a little freeze, roses aren't so adapted to frigid weather and I hope that some of the many lovely ones here were saved for the flower show. We have enjoyed one magnificent rose bigger than a teacup and with a stem fully two feet long, here at the office this week. It came from Mrs. W. E. Bradford's yard, where there are also some beautiful chrysanthemums.

Mrs. A. D. Ward's back yard is turning into a striking scene as her chrysanthemums start blooming. She seems to have more than ever this year.

Mind Your Manners

Test your knowledge of correct social usage by answering the following questions, then checking against the authoritative answers below:

1. Should a man expect a girl to go with him to a party to which he has been invited, but she has not?
2. When a girl is sitting out a dance with a man away from the dance floor, is it all right for another man to go up to them and ask her to dance?
3. Is it permissible for a man to cut back on the man who took his partner from him?
4. At a dinner party where is the man second to the male guest of honor placed?
5. Is it good manners to talk much more to one partner than the other at a dinner party?

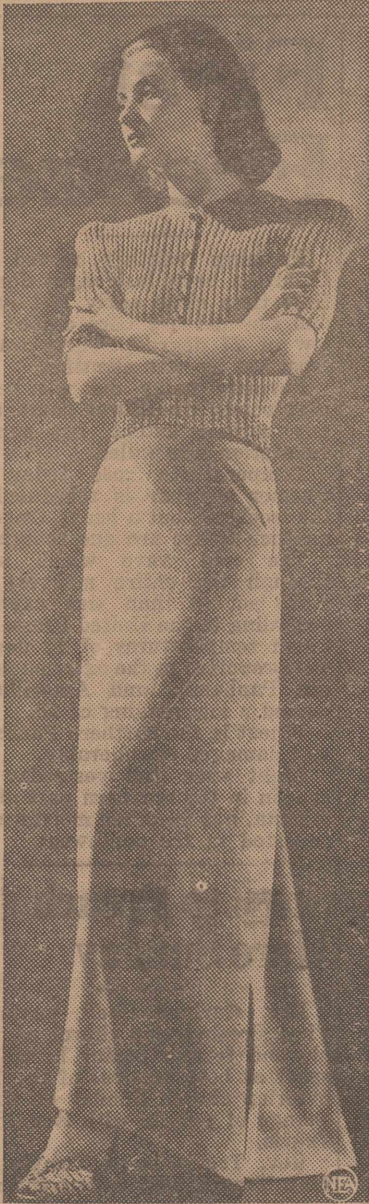

What would you do if—
You are a hostess and a young man tells you that he would like to bring a girl that you have never met to your party. Would you—
(a) Say, "By all means bring her along?"
(b) Say, "I'd love to have her. I'll invite her at once?"

- Answers
1. No. And she shouldn't go if he does ask her.
2. No. He should wait until she is out on the floor again.
3. No. He must wait until she is

Larkspur Garden Club to Expand Membership List

Installation of a water system at the club plot on the highway intersection just west of town, was planned by Larkspur Garden club at a meeting in the home of Mrs. A. M. Privitt yesterday. Members voted to secure the necessary pipe to supply water for improvement of the plot.

A membership campaign is to be started in the club at once, it was announced, and women who are interested in its projects are invited to join the group.

Mrs. Ross Ivie and Mrs. J. D. Van Sickle were appointed as a committee to have charge of programs through the winter. Mrs. T. B. Pryor, president, was in charge of the meeting, devoted to business. The hostess served molded salad, icebox cookies, coffee and candy to Mmes. H. H. Mamilson, Frank Haralson, Homer Coats, Dick Bellah, M. D. Vinson, Pryor, Ivie and Van Sickle.

Ready for the opening at 8 o'clock Saturday morning, the Bobcat Mothers club's rummage sale will offer a large collection of usable clothing and household articles to early shoppers. Home-made candy will also be on sale, and all proceeds will be used to finance the annual banquet for high school football players and their fathers.

Final plans were made at a regular meeting of the club yesterday at the high school building. Mrs. George Thompson, general chairman, reported that a large stock for the sale has been donated, but that other contributions will be welcomed as a ready demand is anticipated.

The sale will be conducted in the building on Main street where the Alexander drug store was formerly located. Members of the club will be on duty as saleswomen throughout the day.

Because of this sale, it was announced that the American Legion Auxiliary has postponed a forget-me-not sale planned for Saturday also.

Present at the club meeting yesterday were Mmes. Joe Gibson, W. M. McDonald, Buck Taylor, M. T. Bates, Earl Williams, Thompson, Sid Holland, Gertrude Dorsey, Homer Coats and C. E. Morgan.

Former Resident Weds Recently

Announcement has been received here of the marriage of B. A. Stamps, former Childress resident, and Mrs. Ida Parker of Guymon, Okla. Rev. J. B. Thompson of Stratford, former pastor of King Memorial church here, read the ring ceremony.

After a short trip the couple is at home near Guymon, where Mr. Stamps is a farmer. The bride has been honored with a shower by her neighbors since her marriage.

Knights of Pythias Are Hosts at Barbecue Dinner for 110 Guests

A chicken barbecue dinner, prepared and served by Knights of Pythias who were hosts last evening, was enjoyed by their wives and a number of other guests at the Pythian hall here.

Among the guests were a party of members from the Paducah lodge and their families and also a group from Wellington.

F. B. Mitchell welcomed the visitors briefly and invited them to help themselves at the long table, after an invocation by E. R. Reeves. The chefs had placed heaping pans of barbecued chicken, pails of ranch-style beans and steaming coffee on the table with bread, pickles, potato chips and onions. Iced drinks were also served.

The informal service of the meal was typical of the spirit of the evening, as guests filled their plates, chatted, listened to recorded music and joined in impromptu games. Mrs. J. J. Pigott and Mrs. W. M. Hannah were delegated to greet visitors at the door and assist the Knights of Pythias in welcoming them. About 110 were present. J. M. Crawford spoke in the only serious program feature.

Loco Club Sees Demonstration Of Upholstering

A chair that had seen better days was given new usefulness in the demonstration presented by Miss Reba Curtis, county agent, to Loco Home Demonstration club this week. The meeting was at the home of Mrs. Silas Crawford.

Miss Curtis showed how to strip worn upholstery from a chair, tie the springs with binding twine to restore their shape, cover them with a piece of heavy materials, pack with excelsior and pad with cotton, fasten the padding securely with another piece of stout material, and finally cover it all with upholstery.

The demonstration was given in the afternoon, following a covered dish luncheon, a short business session and a morning of quilt piecing.

Members present were Mmes. W. M. Durfey, W. D. Durfey, A. A. Harbin, W. F. Harbin, R. E. Foster and the hostess. The next meeting will be with Mrs. W. D. Durfey.

Misses Albritton Are Hostesses

Misses Beth and Colleen Albritton were hostesses to a Halloween party for Christ Cadet BTU of First Baptist church at the home of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Albritton, Tuesday evening.

Embargo Repeal Restores U. S. Neutrality-FDR

WASHINGTON (UP) — President Roosevelt said today that the neutrality bill on which congress is about to complete action, restores the historic position of United States neutrality.

Authorizing direct quotations of his remark at a press conference, Mr. Roosevelt said:

"I am very glad that the bill has restored the historic position of neutrality of the United States."

The president expressed gratification at the 62-vote margin by which the house yesterday approved repeal of the embargo on arms.

Policeman Gets Two-Year Term

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UP)—Otto Higgins, who admitted accepting $1,000 a month as police director to protect a thriving Kansas City gambling racket, was sentenced today after he pleaded guilty to income tax evasion.

He entered the plea before Federal Judge John Collet. Higgins, once a top-flight captain of the Pendergast forces, was indicted last week by the same grand jury that sent Pendergast and other machine leaders on their way to the penitentiary. Higgins was charged with failure to pay $5,816 taxes on an unreported income of $74,448.

Good Joke

KELOWNA, British Columbia (UP)—Halloween pranksters stuffed an apple into the automobile exhaust pipe of Angus McMillan, 46-year-old Vancouver insurance salesman.

His body was found today, slumped over a steering wheel with the motor running, a victim of asphyxiation.

Red Newspaper Charges Finns With War Plot

MOSCOW (UP) — The official communist party newspaper Pravda today charged Finland with preparing for war against the soviet union and expressed Russian determination to break all Finnish resistance.

The newspaper also accused Swedish politicians under pressure from "their bosses in the west" with attempting to frustrate plans for soviet security in the Gulf of Finland.

The pronouncements severely jolted the Finnish delegation waiting here to confer with Joseph Stalin and Premier Molotov and tell them that Russian demands on Finland are unacceptable.

Pravda, which inferred that Britain and France control Sweden and have exerted pressure on Finland to force Russia into war, said that Finnish Foreign Minister Erkkko has directly threatened the soviet union in a speech which cannot be appraised as other than an appeal for war with the USSR. Erkkko said in a speech this week that Finland would defend her independence.

72 Indicted On Charges of Lottery Fraud

BOSTON (UP)—The federal grand jury has indicted 72 individuals and two corporations in connection with a $20,000,000 lottery fraud which allegedly operated for at least ten years in 16 states, it was announced today.

The indictments announced by U. S. Attorney Edmund Brandon maxed a long investigation during which the grand jury witnesses included Mrs. Will Rogers, widow of the humorist, and New York Financier Owen D. Young.

The corporations indicted were the Will Rogers Memorial Hospital Inc. and the South Park Credit Co. Inc. both of Chicago.

Of the 72 individuals named, only one has been arrested.

Brandon said that coincidental with his announcement of the indictments, deputy U. S. marshals and postal inspectors were conducting raids in 16 states to round up the other defendants.

Cogdell Child Dies at Abilene

Friends here have learned of the death of Martha Ann Cogdell, 13-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Cogdell, former Childress residents. The girl died in an Abilene hospital of a long illness that followed an appendectomy last spring, and was buried Sunday at Snyder.

She attended Childress schools and the First Methodist church while the family lived here. Mr. Cogdell was manager of the Buckle-L ranch south of Childress for a number of years, and his family lived at the ranch and in the city. They have been living at Snyder and on a ranch near there, in recent years.

In addition to her parents, Martha Ann is survived by a sister, Johnnie Sue, and two brothers, D. M. Jr. and Billy.

A cat and twelve pigeons were released 20 miles from home in Belgium, and the cat reached home first.

Britain Cheers Repeal of U. S. Arms Embargo

LONDON (UP) — The prospective lifting of the United States arms embargo will place an "arsenal of unlimited resources" at disposal of Great Britain and France, Minister of Supply Edward Burgin said today.

When the embargo is lifted as expected, Great Britain will renew her own arms production and then fill any shortages from the United States, Burgin said in a speech that gave the first official reaction to the American embargo repeal legislation.

Official quarters said that hundreds of patrol, fighting and light bomber land planes and big flying boats awaited shipment in New York and California as soon as President Roosevelt signed the repeal bill after its final approval by the senate and house.

Harris to Preach At Kirkland

Clifford Harris will conduct services at Kirkland Baptist church Sunday, preaching at the 11 a. m. and 7 p. m. services. Sunday school will start at 10 a. m., with W. O. Cobb, superintendent, in charge.

Harris is the son of Rev. H. T. Harris, who recently resigned as pastor of the Kirkland church to become minister of Calvary Baptist church here. Rev. Harris and his family have moved to Childress, and he will conduct regular services at Calvary church Sunday.

BARBS

It is estimated that it costs an alumnus $23 to attend his alma mater's homecoming football game. Only the rich can afford to be loyal.

Meteorologists forecast an unusually cold winter for Canada. In fact, the chill became noticeable right after Lindbergh's second speech.

The British house of commons virtually ignored Herr von Ribbentrop's speech. Only insults from Hitler and Stalin are being considered this season.

Clean-up in Building Trade

Home owners should regard with glee the current investigation by the United States Justice Department on the high cost of building. Whoever may be responsible for high prices—contractors, unions or both—the entire matter should be laid open to public inspection. Prospective builders of family dwellings have already suffered too long from unreasonable building costs.

Attorney General Murphy has pointed out that in some communities, at least, there are sufficient grounds to believe that unscrupulous contractors and certain groups of unionists are directly responsible for high building costs. Certainly no one believes that the majority of contractors or the bulk of A. F. of L. unionists is anxious to impede building progress through obstructive tactics. But it takes only a handful of persons, engaged in nefarious schemes, to wield their influence over an entire industry.

It has been charged that collusive bidding among building contractors is one factor responsible for high costs. This is a system whereby builders get together and agree in advance on what bids are to be made on a project. Contractors can in this way completely eliminate competitive bidding.

Murphy's chief complaint against the A. F. of L. is the series of jurisdictional strikes that have disrupted home building efforts from time to time. There is no argument with the A. F. of L. or any other labor organization on the right to conduct peaceful and legitimate strikes for the attainment of lawful ends. There is, however, considerable objection to carrying on inter-union battles at the cost of the innocent home-builder.

A great deal may come of this nationwide investigation in the way of general reform in the building industry. Unionists and contractors alike may be indicted on a wide-spread scale to answer questions the public has been asking for years.

But if nothing more is gained than complete dissection of this problem, the purpose of the inquiry will not have been altogether lost. Home-owners will know, at least, where the blame may be justly placed. The road for future action will have been paved.

Meanwhile, another element, disturbing to anyone contemplating construction of a home, has entered the picture. Plans are afoot for development of C. I. O. building unions to compete with A. F. of L. organizations in the construction industry. If this program goes through, helpless builders will be faced with the unpleasant prospect of having their union workmen picketed by rival unions.

The only way anyone can judge to what extent home-builders would be affected with both the C. I. O. and the A. F. of L. vying for contracts is to reflect on what has happened in other industries where there have been similar disputes. Arguments resulting from such dual jurisdiction have brought untold injuries to innocent business men and their patrons. Perhaps the Justice Department, while it is looking into the building industry, will devote some time to the possibility of this new complication.

The House That's Built Jacked

• BRUCE CATTON IN WASHINGTON

By BRUCE CATTON

WASHINGTON.—A parliamentary tangle unique in the nation's history may come to a head now as the arms embargo is out of the way. The administration hoped that with the fight at an end congress immediately will shut up shop and go home.

But the solid Republican bloc in the House of Representatives is going to vote to stay in session, and if enough Democrats join in this move—as is quite possible—the administration then would be in the dilemma of having one House of the Congress voting to adjourn while the other House refused to do so.

Parliamentarians say that under such circumstances the president is authorized by law to prorogue Congress—to adjourn it by executive order, in other words. This power has never been exercised because this situation has never before arisen.

MARTIN MAY FORCE 'BUM'S RUSH' ACTION

The understanding here is that the administration is perfectly willing to take this action if it becomes necessary in order to get Congress out of town. It might prove a politically damaging thing to do, however, and if the administration should be forced to do it it can thank Joe Martin, the canny republican leader of the House.

"I understand there is an emergency," says Mr. Martin. "The President seems to think it is such a pressing emergency that he has said he would like to have Senator Barkley, Senator McNary, Vice-President Garner, Speaker Bankhead, Mr. Rayburn and myself stick around here after Congress adjourns so he can consult with us if necessary."

"If that's the case, why wouldn't it be better to have the whole Congress on hand? Besides, there is a lot of pressing business the Congress could handle.

"There are defense funds to be voted, for instance. There is the railroad problem. There is the problem of drought relief. It will take new legislation to regularize Colonel Fleming's appointment to the Wage and Hour Division.

"No, when they move to adjourn the House now that neutrality bill is disposed of, I am going to demand a roll-call. I think the Republicans will support it to a man, with perhaps one or two exceptions."

It is anticipated that some support for Martin's idea to stay in session will come from the Democratic side—just how much, no one knows. If as many as 50 Democrats should flip over, Martin could carry his point.

Administration leaders are confident that an adjournment resolution can be put through the Senate without much trouble. The isolationists, of course, would eagerly vote to stay in session; but if they can't beat the repeal issue they would have scant chance of beating the motion to adjourn.

Meanwhile, if confronted by a House refusal to adjourn—the administration should decide that proroguing Congress was too risky, compromise could probably be arranged without trouble.

It is understood that most of the House Republicans would be happy enough with an agreement whereby only a few selected appropriation bills would be handled—drought relief, say, and possibly certain defense measures—with "skeleton" sessions being held two or three times a week thereafter.

A number of tolerably hot potatoes are on the legislative calendar for the next session, and the Republicans and conservative Democrats are in no more of a hurry to plunge into them than is the administration.

THE POET'S CORNER

OUR UNCLE SAM
By W. J. Sullivan.

Great is our Uncle Sam and great our president.

He a helping hand to many millions has lent,

Putting meat in the pantry and flour in the bin

By opening up work to millions of women and men.

The money hoarders and gougers he has almost put out

But they may get another hold on us, no doubt.

Yes, they are trying many ways to call his hand,

For they his lash don't want to stand.

There now seems to be quite an uproar

Because Uncle Sam's trying to aid the poor.

Work for the idle has been found; Men are busy instead of roaming around.

Innocent children are being fed and given clothes;

The blessings he has brought only God knows.

He has shown to them his great love

Which comes only from the throne above.

For in God's holy book we read and find

That he so loveth is born of the Father divine.

Let us not forget and do obeisance to him,

For he is a mortal man and this would be sin.

Rather give God the glory, to whom it is due,

For through human instrumentality He blesses me and you.

God is the author of all good and perfect gifts,

And he who is used of God will

• THE FAMILY DOCTOR

T. M. REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
 Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine
 Occasionally a child attracts attention because everything that he writes is reversed. In other words, the writing can be read only when it is held up before a mirror.

Opinions differ as to the cause of this strange phenomenon, and none of them has been accepted as the true explanation. Obviously the difficulty might be either in the eye, the brain or the hand.

Some experts contend every image seen by the eye is impressed on the retina in back of the eye and goes to the brain in a reversed position. It is known that photographic cameras with ground glass plate in back show the image upside down and backwards unless built to overcome this arrangement.

The normal person corrects the reversed image, but it is believed that some people have an inherited tendency to confuse the left-right order.

Another theory is that mirror writing is a natural sequence of left-handedness. Dr. Max E. Smukler, who has made a special study of the subject, feels that social, economic and physical conditions are the most important factors in producing "mirror writing". It does not represent a definite change in the tissues of the body but instead merely a symptom, he says.

At the eye clinic conducted by the Bureau of Health of Philadelphia, one or two cases of mirror writing are seen every year. There is a greater tendency for left-handed children to develop mirror writing than for right-handed children to do so.

Mirror writing may also occur among left-handed children who are mentally retarded. These children are found to be undernourished in many instances or neurotic, fretful and timid. It is said when such children are transferred to a boarding school where they are properly fed and housed, they soon begin to write normally.

Mirror writing, therefore, seldom continues after the first year of school life, particularly if every possible consideration is shown toward the child to develop him into a healthy, social specimen.

THE TACTES TEXAN

By Gene A. Howe.

Weather: Conditions are getting propitious for moisture. Something ought to be stirring by the weekend.

The feeling in New York over the European situation is very, very bitter, and sensational things may be expected.

One of the leading members of the German-American bund has stated that Winchell, who has attacked the bund, will be killed. "Maybe so," replies Winchell, "but the fellow who does it will have to be quicker on the draw."

More guns are being carried in New York City now than all of Texas put together.

But the trouble with the people who would be humorous is that they accept their own judgment and not the judgment of others. They think something is funny because it's funny to them and they've written it. But that isn't the test. The test is what others think of it.

There is an old, old saying that no writer, no matter how great he may be, is competent to edit his own articles. Many of the greatest editors submitted their own editorials to others.

The rarest thing in the world is genuine, new humor. Whoever has this gift can go places. And the person who has it, doesn't have to know how to write. All he has to do is to be humorous and to talk humorously. If he is a natural born wit, he can secure others to write down his humor.

A news reel says: Apparently the Germans think our embargo is worse than our bite.

Here is a letter from a fish expert about the freak fish caught by M. I. Huddleston:

This is the common sheep's head, a common salt water inhabiting fish which frequently does migrate into fresh water. I would suggest that this fish had been trapped in fresh water and had worked its way into the Arkansas river.

I still don't believe that Mr. Huddleston caught it in Colorado. That's too far away from the sea.

Here is a letter from Mildred and Dick Tweed and they don't seem to like it a bit that I print some jokes about the alleged sour puss back in New York.

"It seems that these folks, Mildred and Dick, lived in New York until a year ago when they were transferred to Amarillo. They say that they have come to love Amarillo and Amarillo people but that their Amarillo friends are just about the same kind of folks as the friends they left back in New York City.

And of course no one state has much on any other state when it comes to having fine people. You find them everywhere. Good folks are good folks wherever you find them. Good people who come here to Texas make friends who are good people.

Out here in Texas we make fun of New Yorkers. And in New York they make fun of Texans. You can hardly go to a show in New York, that they don't ride the hicks and the hicks to the big fellers in New York are all those who live west of the Hudson river in any towns or cities smaller than New York.

My own sister and her husband live in New York. I have at least 20 or 30 relatives who live there. But I am trying to be a humorist and I must have something to write about and of course I'm not personal about it.

Mildred and Dick say in their letter that among their fine friends back there in New York there is a feeling that Texas is the coming state in the union and that the people sure know how to live whole-some-like out here. She says they envy those who move to Texas. And they, themselves, are not disappointed.

Anyway, I apologize very sincerely and deeply if I have offended them. I don't like to offend. And they must not accept me seriously, at all. I am only trying, so inadequately, to spread a little fun and ridiculousness in this world which is away, away too serious and away too morbid.

And if they will send me in some New York jokes, old ones or new ones, I'll appreciate it. And I'll print them on Philadelphia instead of New York.

And here is a letter from Mrs. Sam Isaacs, over at Canadian. They went back to New York last June and they registered at the Commodore hotel. The clerk smiled.

"The last people from Texas who registered here were from Paris, Texas," he said. "Is Paris near Canadian?"

The Isaacs told him that Canadian was near Amarillo and asked whether he knew of Amarillo.

"Never heard mention of the place," said the clerk head.

The only town he knew of, in Texas, was Paris because someone from there had registered at his hotel.

Well, all I have to say is that clerk should be fired by the management. Any English-speaking American that ignorant of his own country shouldn't be holding down any such job. The average person out here in Texas knows not only of New York City but of most of the important cities in New York State and of their industries and so on. It's this unpardonable provincialism, if Mildred and Dick will pardon me, that makes us citizens of the hinterland sometimes peeved and upset.

Here is a letter from someone who says that to reduce your crop of dandelions for next year, run your vacuum cleaner over your lawn a few times. The cleaner will pick up most of the dandelion seeds, the writer says.

An old war story is about a Scotchman who was on a ship that was torpedoed. He wasn't bothered a bit and wandered about calmly while the others were greatly excited.

"The ship is going to sink, it's going under," someone shouted at him.

"Well, replied the Scotchman, 'it's not my ship.'"

An old, old joke revived follows: A Scotchman, who was running a business, was asked for a raise and he said:

In the year there are 365 days. You work eight hours a day, consequently you work only one-third of the time or 121 days. There is a Sunday each week or 52 days which leaves 69 days. Then you have one-half day off each Saturday, a total of 26 days, which leaves 43 days. Then you also have one hour off each day for lunch, or 13 days a year, which leaves 30 days. Each year you have two weeks vacation or 14 days which leaves 16 days. In holiday. This leaves no days. You are asking me for a raise and I'm asking you, when do you work?

Interesting facts: A nazi official's remark that "Hitler has a pipe line to heaven" is just another subtle attempt to defy Der Fuehrer, but it's not exactly new to those who remember the Kaiser's "Me Und Gott" stuff during the 1914-18 World war.

And then there was the naive old lady who remarked, "Isn't it wonderful how all these filling station people know exactly where to set up a pump and get gasoline?" ... Desperately seeking employment, Nikola Hitch of Belgrade, Yugoslavia, inserted a want ad in that city's leading paper announcing he could dance barefoot on broken glass or red hot coals, lift 500 pounds with his teeth, hold four horses pulling in four directions or let himself be run over by an automobile.

Observation of a country editor: "A great industrialist insists that the war will soon be all over, but he doesn't say all over what." ... The loss of lives among migratory birds from flying up against lighthouses, light ships, tall buildings, monuments, wires and other obstructions is terrific. And for some reason, light beams have a tremendous attraction for birds in flight at night, not unlike a flame's allure to moths.

During the decade preceding the outbreak of the World war in 1914, American railroads had purchased an average of 3,596 locomotives and 179,000 freight cars annually. But in the decade ending in 1938, their annual acquisitions of locomotives totaled only 462 locomotives and 48,000 freight cars—a decline of 87 and 73 per cent, respectively. ... Because John Steinbeck got a record $72,500 for the film rights to "Grapes of Wrath," Sinclair Lewis is holding out for $75,000 for the movie rights to his latest novel, "Bethel Meriday"—to snatch the top-price record himself.

COLUMN—

Sport Parade

By Henry McLemore.
BALTIMORE, Md. (UP)—Full details of Challedon's victory in the Pimlico Special are not yet available due to the fact that Eddie Arcaro, who rode him, is still digging himself out from under the flowers.

One unconfirmed report said that Arcaro had set up a florist shop atop Challedon's back and was doing a brisk business selling the blooms that were showered on the three-year-old when he beat Kayak II by half a length and Cravat by 10 in the third of Al Vanderbilt's horse operas at the old Pimlico course.

Certainly no horse has ever paid such a floral tribute as was Challedon after his great run of Wednesday afternoon. Born and bred in rolling Maryland hills, he seems to belong more to that state than he does to the gracious W. L. Brann. Honestly, half the hamlets, towns, boroughs, counties and precincts of Maryland had a wreath or blanket of flowers on hand at the track yesterday, and they all but smothered the colt with them when he reached the unsaddling ring.

I haven't been to a garden club meeting in years, but I counted 37 varieties of blooms draped all over the horse and the grinning Arcaro, including night blooming Jasmine, honeysuckle, and a spray of lotus buds. There's no need to worry about Challedon's ability to carry weight when he grows a bit older—he had 700 or 800 pounds of shrubs and foliage up yesterday afternoon and didn't seem to mind it a bit.

I don't know but what Challedon could have carried that much poundage and still won the special. I say that even though I did pick Kayak II to lick him, and even though the Argentine speedster was only a scant half-length off the pace at the finish. Challedon was more than half a length better than Kayak II yesterday. He took it easy through most of the race, and only in the stretch, when the Argentine made a serious challenge, did the Maryland pride turn on all he had. In that thrilling brush down toward the wire Kayak II was under the heaviest sort of punishment, with Georgie (the Iceman) Woolf raking at his flanks with his bat. Challedon needed only the gentlest sort of shaking up. When Kayak II pulled level, and then stuck his nose out in front, Arcaro whacked him two or three times.

That was all Challedon needed. He responded beautifully to pull ahead once more and at the finish he was gaining with every bound. Challedon won despite the fact that the race was not run the way he likes. He is a colt who likes a blistering early pace that allows him to lay back of the pace-setters until they are tired. The early running was so slow yesterday that he had to go on top at the start, a position he knows nothing about, and cut out

Olney Attempts To Stop Tigers In Top Contest

OLNEY.—The Olney high school Cubs will attempt to stop the progress of the undefeated Electra Tigers on their march toward the district 2-AA championship here Friday night at 8 o'clock. It will be the third conference game for the Cubs, who recently won over Graham and lost to Childress.

Although the Cubs will enter the contest as the underdogs, there is some local opinion that they may be capable of upsetting the Tigers, who have a record not much more impressive than that of the local boys. The Cubs played four hard pre-conference practice games, losing to Gainesville and to Breckenridge and winning from Cleburne and from Pampa. In the Breckenridge game, which the Cubs lost 6 to 0, a questionable pass ruling prevented a tie score with the highly rated Buckaroos.

Four Men Still Out

If the Cubs could put a full-strength team on the field against the Tigers, fans here would be inclined to look for an Olney victory, for Olney has beaten Electra in all the football clashes of these two schools. But with four of the first string men on the injured list, the Cubs' strength Friday night is questionable.

The two most seriously injured players are Daniels, left guard, and Robins, right end, both having hobbled all this week with leg injuries. Hutchings, right guard, has been on the sidelines because of a neck injury sustained in the Childress game here last week. Co-Captain Mullins has a charley horse and a bad bruise on the same leg and his efficiency, especially in the kicking department, will be impaired, even though he may start the game.

Instinct plays a great part in the lives of the so-called lower animals, but experiments have convinced most naturalists that they do have limited capacities for thinking. The fact that dogs dream indicates the possession of imagination.

the running. Arcaro gave him a perfect ride. Woolf did a nice job on Kayak II, too, altogether he might possibly have saved his challenge until a little nearer home. Had he done this, it is just possible that he might have caught Challedon napping and beaten him to the wire before Challedon could have roused himself.

Cravat didn't belong in the race. As a matter of fact, he really wasn't in it. Off last, he solidified this position throughout and at the finish was a badly-beaten horse.

NO BRODY NEEDED

Harry Thomas' Confessions May Be Results of Too Many Dives

AUSTIN.—Racketeering in the name of wildlife restoration was branded here today by the executive secretary of the Texas Game, Fish and Oyster Commission as criminal as selling gold bricks. The executive secretary pointed out reports to the Game Department of office indicate persons are attempting to collect money from communities on the pretense of being able to influence allocation of federal aid to wildlife projects. Such projects in Texas are under the jurisdiction of the Game Commission and no one has been authorized to raise funds for such projects, nor for any other work the Department is doing.

Claims, it is said, are being made that local financial assistance is necessary to qualify for projects financed through Pittman-Robertson funds. However, this is untrue as the Game Department will give consideration to suggestions of sportsmen, landowners, or nature organizations without their contributing any money, he emphasized.

A black fox, an extremely rare animal, is being sought in Comal county. Several persons, including the state game warden there, have seen the animal, one of the few, if not the only one in Texas.

White wing doves, as predicted by the Game Department before the hunting period opened, were more plentiful this season than in many years. The Department's wardens in the Rio Grande Valley estimated that 250,000 were killed the first three weeks of the season.

Mourning doves were also plentiful throughout most of the state and were remaining in the northern portions of Texas later than usual, reports to the Game Department indicate.

Concho Lake recently gave up a gold fish thirteen inches in length and weighing more than one and a half pounds. It was caught by J. W. Revel of San Angelo while he was fishing with pole and line. Goldfish are members of the carp family.

The Georgetown Country Club may be able to lay claims to being the only golf club in Texas which is raising wild turkeys. That club has two hens, a gobbler and thirteen young roaming its course and the surrounding woods and the big birds are being protected. There will be no open season on that bunch of turkeys if the club members can help it.

Texas has four species of poisonous snakes, but three of them have a variety of sub-species. Largest number of sub-species is boasted by the rattlesnake family. There are ten, namely pigmy or ground rattler, Willard's, Prairie, Western diamond back, green velvet, diamond back, green rock, mountain, black tail and cane brake. There are two varieties of Copperheads and three of coral snakes, but there is only one member of the moccasin family which is poisonous. It is the cotton mouth.

Snakes need not spoil the fun of a hunt or a tramp through the woods, Game Department officials point out, but warn sportsmen to be on the alert. A good pair of boots is the best protection. Never sit down in the woods or fields without looking, nor rest your hand on a rock without first scanning it.

Game Cancelled

CLARENDON.—With his Clarendon team trailing by one game and with a possible chance for a tie for the district 3-A title, Coach Emil Hutto today announced the cancellation of the Clarendon-Canadian football game scheduled for Friday night.

NEA Service Sports Editor.
CHICAGO.—Harry Thomas' confession that he was forced to go into the water, as the boys say, for both Max Schmeling and Tony Galento undoubtedly is the result of too many falls.

Thomas was toppled a half dozen times by Schmeling in New York, five times by Joe Louis in Chicago and five times by Galento in Philadelphia.

So, you see, the Minnesota farmer was hit by experts in the large centers.

Counting all the times the human bowling pin plummeted to the deck here and there, the distance he has fallen, if placed end to end, would exceed the Tennessee football team's total yardage.

And, as Abe Atell once remarked, your head isn't stuffed with sawdust.

Thomas, real name Pontius, was just a stooge put in there with Schmeling and Galento for the very good reason that he could be smacked solidly with the greatest of ease.

Certainly, Louis required no protection against Thomas.

Neither did Schmeling.

And, as it turned out, neither did Galento, although at the time, Joe Jacobs, aiming the Jersey bar-keep for a crack at Louis, might have suspected that he had to be careful with the rotund signor.

Monkey Business

There usually is monkey business in connection with the building up of a heavyweight, but it will require more than Thomas' pre-fight letters to friends and relatives to convince me that Schmeling was a party to any "fixing" in connection with his joust with the celebrated tumbler at Madison Square Garden Dec. 13, 1937.

Joe Jacobs denies that he went to Chicago to arrange this one, as charged by Thomas, and that probably is correct. It was no secret at the time that Jacobs had little to do with the management of Schmeling . . . hadn't had for more than two years.

If there was one thing Schmeling had in great abundance in addition to a good right hand it was supreme confidence in his ability.

He was a distrustful sort and the slightest mention of anything out of the ordinary would have sent him scampering in the direction of the first boat headed back to Germany.

The Schmeling-Thomas affair looked all right, too. The Eagle Bender was up and down like an elevator in taking a sound thumping for eight rounds . . . had to have 15 stitches taken in his lip. If he was in there simply to be knocked out, he got it the hard way.

Another famous confessor, Fred Fulton, had contracted Thomas' habit when he tried to put on an act with Tony Fuente at Culver City, Calif., some years back.

Fulton previously had confessed that his fight with Jack Dempsey in Harrison, N. J., was a fake, and further, that the Man Mauler double-crossed him to win.

Dempsey double-crossed Fulton all right . . . with a left and a right in 18 seconds, including the count.

It was in trying to help Senor Fuente break that record that Fulton got into trouble on the coast. Like Confessor Thomas in the case of Signor Galento, Confessor Fulton had fallen so far and so often and had the habit so badly by the time he got around to falling for Senor Fuente that he could no longer restrain himself until he was hit.

That always makes it look bad.

Six-Man Game, Regular Event On Program

Childress football fans will gather at Fair Park field tonight for the most unique gridiron attraction of the season—a doubleheader with one regular football game and one six-man game.

In the opener, the Childress Zippers will meet the Turkey Turks, then six-man teams from Community Center and Dodson will introduce the new game to Childress sports followers.

Coach Vernon Johnson will start his regular Zippers but will have Coot Cunningham, Fred Givens, Warren Earl Vaughn, Aubrey Powell, J. T. Morris, Walter DeArmond, Weldon Trice and several others from the Bobcat squad ready to rush into the game to fill the gaps.

Turkey's regular class B team will be here for full-time duty.

The six-man game will start immediately after the Childress-Turkey affair. The two teams are evenly matched and will be ready to stage a dazzling offensive battle on the full-sized field.

Admission will be 10 and 25 cents.

Kittens Defeat Memphis

Closing another successful gridiron campaign, the Childress Junior High Bobkittens yesterday afternoon whipped the heavy Memphis' B team, 20-13, at Fair Park field.

The Kittens took a six-point lead in the opening minutes of the game when they scored on a pass, but the visitors came back and powered to a touchdown, then kicked the point to take the lead.

Coach George Blassingame's team struck again in the second period and J. B. Hays scored after a series of end sweeps. The Kittens got a safety later in the session when Memphis halted a scoring drive on the two-yard line, then fumbled the ball behind their own goal line.

The Kittens got busy again after the intermission and Billy Brown passed to Hays for the touchdown after a series of ground and aerial plays had advanced the ball into position.

Memphis scored again on the final play of the third quarter, and the Kittens staved off all efforts during the last stanza.

The Kittens played without the services of M. C. Bennett, their ace end.

Blassingame's team this year won two decisions from Matador, one from Hollis and one from Memphis, but lost two games to the Quannah B team. All of their foes were high school boys, much heavier than the Kittens.

NOVEMBER BUSINESS IS BEST SINCE BOOM YEAR OF 1928, BABSON SAYS

By ROGER W. BABSON
BABSON PARK, Mass.—Business is cantering along at 25 per cent above a year ago. With the exception of 1928, this month is opening at the highest level for any November in history! Yet, good stocks are actually cheaper than they were last November! Stock prices are an excellent barometer of sentiment. The fact they do not rise in the face of this good news means that business men are worried. They are fearful that Washington will skim the profits through taxes. Congress, however, will not raise taxes in an election year.

BEWARE OF HIGHER PRICES

Even though there is no need to worry about Washington and taxes, business men should be concerned about commodity prices. Both the big labor parties have had their annual conventions recently. The spotlight at each was trained directly on living costs under war conditions. If prices are increased too much we may easily kill "the goose which lays the golden eggs." I belong 100 per cent to the school which teaches that prosperity comes from free markets for raw materials, manufactured goods, labor wages, and money rates. Anything which artificially holds up prices, wages, or leans retards prosperity and adds to unemployment.

Once it was believed that appendicitis could be cured by putting on hot-water bottles; but that did not work. Then the doctors tried ice bags; but they were not effective. The inflammation was still there. It was finally found that appendicitis can be cured only as the appendix is removed. Some day the people of North America will learn that only as the restrictions on wages, hours, and banking are removed will people go back to work.

CANADA ESPECIALLY VULNERABLE

I do not visualize a run-away commodity market like that in the World war when the manufacturers were completely in the saddle. Yet, all signs point to higher prices. Only a few days ago, the Fair Labor Standards Act set up a new wage and hour schedule for industrial and office workers. The minimum wage went up from 25 cents to 30 cents an hour, and the maximum work week dropped from 44 to 42 hours. This is sure to increase prices and thereby result in more people out of jobs.

Any business man who fails to watch prices and costs carefully will be licked if the war is a long one. Employers and farmers will have no alternative but to hike their prices. Business men do not stand a chance of bucking trade associations and labor unions. Organized groups are in a position to take advantage of war conditions. They may skim the cream off profits, leaving the public "holding the bag." If there is any statesmanship in Washington, however, an attempt will be made to prevent this. A post-war panic will help no one! From present signs, such a panic seems probable some day—especially in Canada.

SHORTAGE OF SKILLED LABOR

Another price factor under wartime conditions is the supply of skilled labor. A shortage already exists in certain industries which are operating at all-time peaks, such as aviation manufacturing, machine tool, and machinery. By shortage, I mean that the competent skilled workers have been all snapped up. These companies are now digging down into the bottom of the labor barrel and are being forced to take on inadequately trained workers. This would be a very serious situation if the United States were involved in a war. These three industries are the backbone of our army and our navy.

One of the reasons why a shortage of skilled men is developing is because of union rules. Unions in the past few years have refused to take on apprentices in their trades. They have done this to keep down the available supply of trained men and thus artificially to peg their pay. In fact, the government is becoming so worried over this condition that it is asking big industries voluntarily to take on capable young men for training. The restrictions on apprentices should be removed.

GOVERNMENT WARNS LABOR "TRUST"

Just as some years ago the government said to the utilities, "If you refuse to cut rates we will go into competition with you," the government is now saying to the Target for abuse in a dozen different languages from irate newspapermen whose stories have been cut, delayed or stopped, Britain's poet, painter, fiction writer and chief censor, 59-year-old Vice-Admiral Cecil Vivian Osborne, is unperturbedly attempting to improve the lot of those newspapermen obliged to cover the war from London.

Tall, slim, dignified, pink-faced and friendly, with strands of gray hair covering a baldish patch on the top of his head, the Chief Censor, in a blue lounge suit, has the air of a clergyman. He is called "Admiral" by subordinates and newspapermen.

A lifelong naval man, his manner nevertheless is devoid of the blustering ways attributed to veterans in uniform. Quiet-voiced, he listens to the problems of the newspaperman with a sympathetic ear.

Born in Queenstown, Ireland, the second son of a naval captain, Vice-Admiral Osborne's first, and as far as can be made out, only effort at poetry was made after the death of King George V, when he published a poem called "The Fleet's Farewell."

After retirement from the navy in 1933, he became an underwriting member of Lloyds. Early this year the British Council sent him to lecture in Yugoslavia, Rumania, Poland, Holland on Britain's defenses.

Last November he debated nazism with "the perfect Aryan woman," blonde Unity Mitford-Freeman, who championed the swastika. "The Admiral" was one of the first naval men to advocate publicly that Britain should give up Gibraltar on the grounds that Ceuta would make a better fortress to defend.

In 1915 he invented a mechanical apparatus which led to the introduction of the paravane mine protection.

His naval career includes command of H.M.S. Colossus, 1913; command of minelayer H.M.S. Latona, Eastern Mediterranean, 1916; mining operations off Dardanelles and blockade work off Asia Minor. He was senior British naval officer at Salonica, 1917; Corfu, 1918; commander of the naval brigade on the Danube, 1918-19; deputy director Naval Ordnance, 1919; deputy director gunnery division naval staff, 1922; vice president chemical warfare committee, 1923; director tactical school, 1925; captain H.M.S. Malaya, 1927; captain H.M.S. Resolution, 1928; rear-admiral, 1928, and director naval intelligence, 1930-1932.

Now he sleeps every other night on a gaudily colored mattress in the Ministry of Information and rarely sees his family.

unions, "If you intend to monopolize labor in your trade we will foster competition." This is a very hopeful sign. War or peace, we cannot have any lasting prosperity in America if costs—both for labor and materials—keep going up. We improve our standard of living by lowering—not increasing—costs!

What does all this mean to consumers? It means that a long war would boost your cost of living substantially. You would have to pay higher prices for nearly everything you buy. Keep this in the back of your mind. However, now is NOT the time to get panic-stricken and lay in big supplies of flour, sugar, and the like. Our warehouses are bulging with them. There will be plenty of opportunity to do this when we know more about the war. For the time being, go about your business and home purchasing in a normal way—just as you would if there were no war!

Nazis Howl That Embargo Repeal Supports Allies

BERLIN (UP) — Germany Thursday night accused the United States of giving support to Great Britain and France by repeal of the United States embargo in congress.

The allegation was made by the spokesman of the nazi propaganda ministry shortly after word reached Berlin of Thursday's action in congress.

Nazi quarters, forecasting heavy British and French orders for American arms and munitions, warned that German U-boats probably will intensify their activities in the Atlantic in an effort to sink as many arms-carrying ships as possible.

Both the foreign office and the propaganda ministry said that the lifting of the embargo was no surprise and was to be expected.

Official comment will be withheld, it was explained, until there is time to examine the full significance of the United States government's move.

But from the tone of nazi press comment in recent days on the embargo question, it is certain that congress' decision will be assailed bitterly by Nazi spokesmen and newspapers, in much the same manner that Soviet Premier and Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav M. Molotov struck at it in his Tuesday night speech before the supreme soviet in Moscow.

The nazi press has charged that repeal of the mandatory arms embargo would favor only the allies and threaten to drag the United States into the war.

Texans in House Vote for Repeal

WASHINGTON (UP) — Texas members of congress have been solidly back of President Roosevelt's neutrality program from the beginning of the fight, and every member of the Texas delegation in the house voted with the administration forces on all test votes Thursday that finally sent the senate resolution to a conference committee unchanged and without instructions from the house to retain certain provisions of the house bill. Passage of the legislation by both house and senate has been a notable victory for the administration.

For the first time in many months, President Roosevelt has been able to assert his leadership in the legislative branch of government, and many political observers look on this solidarity of democratic ranks as presaging a democratic victory in the presidential campaign next year.

Dr. Truett suggested that organized prayers be offered by the Christians of Washington for those responsible for plunging the world into war. An all-night prayer service held in Washington would prove an inspiration to other Christians and would spread to other American cities and to other Christian nations, he said.

Rayon From Whole Cotton Stalk May End Synthetic Fabric War

By JOHN A. PARRIS, JR.
United Press Staff Correspondent
MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UP) — The test tubes of a 70-year-old University of North Carolina professor may hold the solution to end the war between cotton and rayon and restore cotton to its pre-eminence in the south.

Out of the laboratory of Dr. Frank Kenneth Cameron at Chapel Hill, N. C., has come what experts declare the "most astounding" discovery in exploratory work on chemistry of cotton and its products.

It is a chemically conceived plan to harvest the entire cotton plant, stalk, leaves, boll, and grind it into a source of cellulose.

This was learned from authoritative sources in the national cotton council of America here.

Rayon Market

The Mellon institute at Pittsburgh, laboratory testing ground for the cotton council and the cotton research foundation, is working on Cameron's plan now.

If it proves practical, the cotton and rayon war conceivably could end, prominent cotton leaders pointed out, for the rayon manufacturers deserted cotton cellulose for wood only because wood was cheaper.

A harvested cotton plant would be cheaper and more quick to produce than wood.

"In this way," explained Oscar Johnston, NCCA, "cotton would regain its lost rayon market."

Others interested

In addition, he said, there is need for cellulose in paper, high explosives and plastics of many kinds.

Meantime, eight research scientists in the Mellon institute's Pittsburgh laboratories, after a year's work, have effected "the solid work for the future," according to Dr. L. W. Bass, assistant director of the institute.

They now are developing a moisture-proof cotton bagging to make it practical for cement, sugar and other commodities currently being packed increasingly in paper sacks.

A wall board has been developed from cotton stalks.

A sweeping compound, cheaper and—its proponents assert—more efficient than sawdust cleaning compound is ready to be marketed.

Several Products

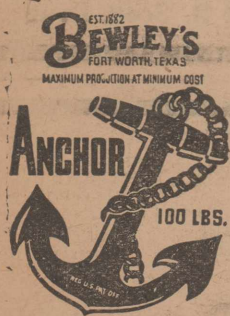

In Bass's black handbag, packed with corked test tubes, is a vial containing a synthetic resin made from cottonseed proteins from which can be manufactured fountain pen barrels, flower vases, desk sets, picture frames.

Another tube in that black bag holds cotton wax, which is washed out of cotton cloth when it is bleached. Now a total waste, this wax, Bass said, has possibilities as a basis for shoe and furniture polishes.

From cotton linters, mixed with an adhesive binder, the institute's scientists have developed a flooring tile and an art gum has been produced from cottonseed.

In the United States, 45,000,000 quarts of milk are produced annually.

WAR BRINGS NO COTTON SCARCITY

War or no war, there is still plenty of cotton.

There is a general feeling among farmers and the cotton industry generally that war will increase cotton exports and improve the price. The general price advance in early September came largely because speculators believed that war-time demands would bring further advances.

Actually, as H. H. Williamson, director of the Texas A&M extension service and member of the national agricultural advisory council, points out, there is little foundation for this belief. Price and exports fell off instead of increasing at the beginning of the last war.

U. S. department of agriculture figures, prepared by the bureau of agricultural economics, show that for the 11 1-3 months of the 1914-15 season spot prices at New Orleans averaged a little under 8 1/2 cents as compared with an average of 13 1/2 cents for the 12 months ending July, 1914, and a five-year average of 13 cents.

Total exports of American cotton for the 1914-15 season were less than in 1913-14 by 600,000 bales, or 7 per cent, and exports from India dropped 1,400,000 bales, or 44 per cent below those of the previous season.

In the first two years of the World war, foreign consumption of cotton dropped a million bales. In the third and fourth years of the war further reductions occurred abroad, and only a slight increase in consumption was noted in the United States.

Crop Short In 1915

It was two full years after the war began before domestic prices climbed back to 13 cents, the pre-war level, and then largely because the 1915 American crop was nearly 5 million bales less than that of the previous year.

Everything went up in 1917-18, cotton to an average New Orleans price of 27.83 cents, but that apparently was due to rapidly advancing general price levels and an-

Cotton Quotas Being Enforced

COLLEGE STATION.—Strict enforcement of the cotton marketing quota provisions of the agricultural adjustment act of 1938 are underway in Texas, E. N. Holmgren, state AAA administrator, has announced.

Special representatives of the U. S. department of agriculture are investigating charges of violations, he said.

Pointing to the recent decision of Federal Judge James V. Allred upholding the quota provisions, Holmgren declared that the department had already filed suit against one cotton buyer.

In this case, it is charged that the buyer collected the penalty from some cotton farmers, while failing to collect it from others, and then refused to remit any of the sums collected to the secretary of agriculture.

other short crop.

The important thing to remember is that there is a lot more cotton in the world now than there was 25 years ago. When the World war started, there was a world carryover of 3,769,000 bales of cotton; today the carryover is in the neighborhood of 11,123,000 bales.

The record shows that world consumption of cotton dropped during the last war; it is hardly likely that consumption will increase during the present one. For one thing, assuming that warring nations want more cotton, how are they going to get it, what with blockades and submarine attacks and so on?

What increase comes in the price of cotton will come with generally rising price levels. It does seem probable that domestic cotton consumption will average considerably higher than in the past year.

But war or no war, there is still plenty of cotton, and apparently an expansion of production in the 1940 crop is not warranted.

SERIAL STORY

JOAN OF ARKANSAS

BY JERRY BRONDFIELD
COPYRIGHT, 1939, NEA SERVICE, INC.

YESTERDAY: Rocco, one of the three strangers who are interested in Joan, trails her to the campus Varsity shop. He idles there, waiting for Joan and Marianne to leave. He meets Tommy Peters, who recalls seeing Rocco's picture, but Tommy can't remember the connection.

CHAPTER XXI

ROCCO hailed a cab and went downtown. At 11:30 Sam and Big Ed drew up to the intersection of two back streets and picked him up.

"Well?" Ed said.

"Ed, I'm tellin' you I know so much about that dame I even know what she's gonna have for lunch tomorrow." Rocco grinned in the darkness.

"Yeah . . . sure," Big Ed told him. "You're simply amazin', but I'll pin the medals on you later. Give out with the dope."

Rocco spoke quickly. "Tomorrow she goes on some trip with her sociology class out to an orphanage . . . she uses this Rhodes kid's car . . . she gets back at 3 and takes the car to the stadium so's he don't have to walk back from football practice . . . when she drives down to the stadium, that's when we work."

"Yeah, and what if she decides to keep the car all afternoon and take it back at 5, or maybe later."

"Nine chances outa ten she won't. I know, I'm tellin' you."

"How'd you pick all this stuff up since 4 o'clock?"

Rocco laughed mirthlessly. "Tell me, Ed . . . you know anyone as smart as your boy Rocco? I got methods."

Big Ed bit off the end of a cigar and lit it. "Sam, you get up early and give this bus a good going over, hey?"

Sam stared straight ahead. "She ain't never run better."

"Mebbe not, but you'll do what I say, hey Sam?"

"Sure, Ed . . . Sure."

IT was a beautiful fall day, and Joan, walking over to pick up Keith's car, wished it were two miles instead of two blocks to the Gamma house.

She picked up the keys from the cook and drove over to one of the dorms to call for three girls in her class who were to make the trip with her.

They joined the rest of the group at the orphanage and spent the next three hours making observations and taking notes on the institution's system of operation.

They ate a late lunch at a downtown tea shop and then returned to the university district. Joan took the other girls back to the dormitory and stopped in at the Varsity for a minute.

"Hi, Uncle Jim," she greeted. "How about some stamps?"

He pulled out his postal box. "Say, Joan, there was a fella in here a few minutes ago lookin' for a football ticket. He wanted to know if you usually stopped in during the afternoon. He was in last night just about the time you were, and asked me who you were when you went out."

Joan frowned. "That's funny. He wasn't a student, was he?"

"Nope. And I noticed he got into a big sedan across the street with a couple other fellows."

"Thanks, Uncle Jim . . . couldn't have been very important or he'd have called me at the house."

She returned to her room and wrote a couple of letters before taking Keith's car back to the stadium.

"I'll be back in 45 minutes or so," she told Elaine. "If I get any phone calls insist on a message, will you?"

SHE dropped her letters in a corner box and drove across campus. Stopping at the library to pick up a book she bumped into Dan Webber.

"Hi, there," she said. "Going down to the stadium soon? I'll take you down."

"What do you mean—you'll take me down?"

She explained she was returning Keith's car. "Can you imagine that lazy so-and-so making me walk all the way back from the stadium when I could have left it at the fraternity house?"

Dan grinned. "Sure I can. That's Keith. But maybe I shouldn't blame him at that. The way Slocum has been running us ragged this week that car comes in handy when it's time to go home."

They walked out into the bright sunlight. "Think I'll turn down your offer," he said. "The walk'll do me good. Anyhow, Slocum screams when he spots any of the boys getting chauffeur service. He claims the modern athlete is going soft because of the automobile and stuff."

"And you believe him, of course."

"Absolutely," he said solemnly. "Well, if you don't want to ride with me . . . I'm very good company, you know."

He grinned again. "Okay . . . let's get going before we start squaring off."

"Who's squaring off?" she flared, but he covered his ears and pretended not to listen.

Once in the car he relaxed deep in the leather seat and sighed. "Just think—three more days and life'll be worth living again. No more practice . . . no more charley-horses . . . no more Slocum bellowing in our ears."

"What about the Rose Bowl?" He was silent for a long moment. "We'll talk about that after Saturday's game—maybe."

"You think we'll win, don't you?"

"I think so."

She noticed his quiet confidence.

THEY skirted the university power plant and swung onto the long gravel road which led down to the stadium. At the same instant a heavy blue sedan moved out of the stadium parking lot and started slowly toward them.

Joan didn't notice the other car until she rounded a curve. The sedan came toward them slowly, smack in the middle of the narrow road.

"It's about time for that guy to move over," Dan muttered as they drew closer.

Forty yards away and the sedan showed no inclination of drawing over to its own side of the road. And then Joan noticed there were three men in the other car.

A sudden thought made her swing wide in an attempt to move around them, off the road, but around them, nevertheless.

But they swung wide with her and when she jammed on the brakes the cars were only three feet apart. She was completely blocked.

"Hey!" Dan shouted. "What's going on?"

But even as the two cars screeched to a stop, Rocco was scrambling out of the sedan.

There was an automatic in his hand. Joan gasped and clutched Dan's arm.

SAFETY OF CREW ON FLINT IS ASSURED

WASHINGTON (UP)—The German government has informed the United States that it has asked its naval authorities to exercise care for the safety for 41 Americans on the captured City of Flint, the state department revealed today.

The American charge d'affaires in Berlin reported to the department that he had been informed by a German foreign office official that the proper naval authorities had been requested to follow the wishes of the United States government in taking precautions for safety of the Flint's crew.

Nazi—

Germany and it was expected that the weekend would bring a blast of criticism from Nazi spokesmen and the inspired press as soon as Adolf Hitler had given the word.

Propaganda Minister Paul Goebbels is to address German youth by radio Sunday and it was forecast that he might mention the repeal action then.

Even in advance of the house of representatives' vote yesterday, Nazis had said that repeal not only would favor the allies but was likely to drag the United States into the war.

Nazis seemed to have hope that they could impede materially if not stop the flow of war materials to Europe from the United States. Their submarine successes have been extensively publicized in Germany. They claim officially the sinking of 115 merchant vessels totaling 475,000 tons since the war started.

Further, despite loss of life in numerous submarine attacks, it is the Nazi argument that they have not yet in this war started unrestricted U-boat warfare.

Flint to Dock In German Port

BERLIN (UP)—Responsible German quarters said today that it is most likely that the American steamer, the City of Flint, will dock at Stettin, where it will arrive after Saturday night.

Stettin is a German Baltic port on the River Oder.

ing to reach the Scottish coast. It followed intense aerial activity in the whole Firth of Forth area.

As soon as warning was given that the German raiders were approaching the British fighters took off and headed out to sea to intercept he Germans, the Evening News said. No air raid warnings were given in the Scottish towns near the Firth of Forth and no gunfire was heard.

100,000 See Cornhuskers Vie for Honors

LAWRENCE, Kan. (UP)—The $100-added cornfield derby, otherwise known as the national corn-husking contest, started shortly before noon today with a crowd of about 100,000 standing between the corn rows to watch the classic.

There was a roar from the strange assortment of farm and city spectators when the starting bomb sent the country's fastest corn pickers down their lanes picking about an ear a second. The contest lasted only 80 minutes, but it required several hours to weigh the corn and deduct for husks thrown in the wagon and grain left in the field.

The winner will receive $100 plus whatever added revenue he can make from endorsements.

show will be open to the public and there will be no admission.

The building was ready for the show today. Pens are in place and everything is set for the event.

All entries must be in place by 10 o'clock tomorrow morning and judging, by County Agent Jake Tarter of Wheeler, will start at 1 o'clock. The birds will be released after 4 o'clock.

The show is sponsored by the chamber of commerce and board of city development agriculture, livestock and dairying committee with Tom L. Hardin as chairman. County Agent V. E. Hafner is cooperating.
