Lefors' utilities superintendent resigns

By CHIP CHANDLER
Staff Writer

Lefors is seeking a new utilities superintendent after the sudden resignation Monday morning of Mark Kimbley.

After a 40-minute executive session, the city council agreed to advertise for a replacement for the position. City employee Carl Connell will fill in, taking responsibility for water, sewer, trash and street services.

Council members said Kimbley submitted his letter of resignation on a yellow Post-it note, saying he was "sick" of the job. The note did not elaborate further.

The resignation came as a surprise to the council, but at least one member was prepared to fire Kimbley for "negligence."

The city had received at least two letters of warning from the Texas Natural Resources Conservation Commission that Kimbley had ignored, council member Beth Miller said.

Those ignored warnings led to a $980 fine levied against the city by TNRCC, which offered to reduce the fine to $686 if the city did not contest the charges.

Water samples had not been submitted to TNRCC for eight months, according to the letter. Taking the samples and submitting them was Kimbley's responsiblity.

But Kimbley said today that those samples had been sent. He theorized that TNRCC got the samples too late, though, and didn't credit the town with sending them in a timely manner.

"As far as I know, those samples were sent (on time)," Kimbley said.

Kimbley said he had considered resigning for some time, saying he was "tired of everybody ... with everything that was wrong around here."

In addition, City Secretary Virginia Maples can find no evidence of sewer samples being sent to TNRCC. The commission will allow the city to send in those samples when the sewer plant, which has been down for several days, is repaired.

The city has been facing a number of problems with utility service over the past several months. In January, the Texas Railroad Commission leveled 11 violations of minimum gas pipeline safety standards against Kimbley. The city has also had numerous problems with trash pickup, leading to two proposals heard Monday night.

Local resident Bobby Gilbert and Curt Farmer, a representative of Wasteco Inc., submitted proposals for trash service, which the city will consider in an upcoming work session.

In addition, Mayor Bob Jones had purchased a dump truck for $2,500 without seeking council approval. Jones paid for the truck with personal funds, and council members voted 4-1 Monday to repay him in four installments, though they were not pleased that he bought the truck without their permission.

"We are a government set up to do certain procedures, and when you don't follow those procedures, you cause us trouble," council member Benny Watson said.

The council also agreed to allow part-time employee Michelle Helfer to work in the field in addition to office work.

In other action, the council agreed to enter an interlocal agreement with Panhandle Regional Planning Commission to allow the commission to administer a $208,000 PRPC grant for a new water well and new lines.

Mississippi man shot in flight from DPS

By CHERYL BERZANSKIS

A Texas Ranger investigation continues into the Monday evening shooting of a Mississippi man by a Department of Public Safety trooper near Skellytown.

Ronnie Tutor, 34, believed to be from Mississippi, is in High Plains Baptist Hospital in Amarillo suffering a gunshot wound to the left arm after his attempted flight from Trooper Jeanne Bangasser of Pampa, according to DPS spokesman Trooper L.B. Snider of Amarillo.

A second man, who also attempted to flee from Bangasser, is in Carson County jail today with charges pending, Snider said.

Bangasser is uninjured.

Snider said Texas Rangers are today trying to sort out the events which led to Tutor's injuries just after 7 p.m. Monday at a site about a mile inside the Carson County line near Skellytown.

Bangasser stopped the blue Chevrolet pickup for having an unlit license plate and subsequently called for Gray County deputies to back her when she discovered at least one of the two occupants had an "extensive" criminal history, Snider said.

The pickup driver, a 41-year-old man, also believed to be from Mississippi, fled from Bangasser when the deputy arrived, Snider said.

Deputy David O'Brien arrested the man after a foot chase.

Tutor, passenger in the pickup, began to make "suspicious moves," said Snider

"She believed he was likely reaching for a weapon," Snider said.

Bangasser fired four rounds from her .45-caliber Sig Sauer pistol, one of which struck Tutor, and he fled in the pickup toward Skellytown. After about a six-mile chase, Tutor jumped out of the truck and Bangasser arrested him, Snider said.

The man was taken first to Columbia Medical Center in Pampa, then transferred to High Plains Baptist Hospital, where he remains under guard. Additional surgery to his arm is being scheduled, Snider said.

The pickup has been impounded.

"They were pursuing a warrant to search the vehicle as part of the ongoing investigation," Snider said.

Also under investigation is whether the men were armed.

"We're going to have to wait on that," he said.

City OKs plan to finance landfill, repairs

By CHERYL BERZANSKIS
News Editor

Pampa city commissioners Tuesday in a divided vote directed Southwest Securities to begin preparation to issue $4,315,000 in certificates of obligation to fund closure of the present landfill, opening of a new landfill site, building repairs and equipment purchases.

Voting for the issuance were commissioners Faustina Curry, Jeff McCormick and Robert Dixon and Mayor Bob Neslage. Voting against the proposal was Commissioner Jeff Andrews.

When the debt issuance is finalized, the money will be used for:

- Landfill costs - opening a new cell, closing existing site, road construction, bond issuance and contingency; total is $2,100,000.
- Equipment purchases - compactor, two scrapers, bulldozer; total $955,000.
- Street Department - street sweeper, large dump truck; total $170,000.
- Fire Department - breathing fill station, Suburban, booster truck; total $167,000.
- Dumpster replacement - $500,000.
- M.K. Brown Auditorium - Americans with Disabilities Act architectural study, repair restroom walls, 70-ton air conditioner, new roof - $157,500.
- Water/wastewater fund - golf course/sewer effluent project; $257,000

Repayment of landfill costs is expected to occur through increased tipping fees. Dumpster replacement will be funded through current budgeted amounts for dumpster repairs. The golf/sewer effluent project is expected to repay itself in four to six years through water treatment savings.

Andrews said he voted against the $500,000 debt portion because it would be repaid through an estimated two cents per $100 valuation tax increase.

"The scary part to me is the $500,000 that is coming from the general fund that's coming from the tax rate," Andrews said.

Library advisory board tables action on draft copy of Internet policy

By CHIP CHANDLER
Staff Writer

Internet use procedures may be adopted by next month by the Lovett Memorial Library advisory board, after the board tabled action Monday on a draft copy prepared for discussion only by City Attorney Don Lane.

The recommended procedures shown to the board deal primarily with preventing minors from having unrestricted access to the Internet. Pampa city commissioners last month voted 3-2 to have both filtered and unfiltered access to the 'Net, countermanding a library board vote to have only unfiltered access.

Filtered Internet access would prevent minors from searching out sites many deem objectionable, including areas featuring pornography. A number of computer programs exist that search for keywords often found objectionable and prevent access to those sites.

The library has been given a computer to use for Internet access by the Harrington Library System in Amarillo. That computer will be used for unfiltered access; a second computer will be bought to use for filtered 'Net access.

In the procedures being considered by library board members, unaccompanied children under 18 years old would not be allowed to use the Internet at all without a signed permission form from their parent or guardian. That permission form would ask parents if their children could use filtered or unfiltered access.

Minors accompanied by a parent or guardian would be allowed to use either the filtered or unfiltered computer.

When patrons request to use either Internet computer, they would have to sign in at the circulation desk and provide some sort of identification. Library staff would check that a permission form is on file for any unaccompanied minor seeking to use the computers.

Patrons would be requested to schedule Internet sessions in advance and in person.

The board voted to purchase the second Internet computer through Harrington using money from the library's memorial fund. The computer and telecommunications equipment will cost approximately $5,800, including Internet connection costs. An additional $500 per year will be charged for continuing connection costs after the first year.

Librarian Dan Snider said he had no recommendation for a filtering program for the library to use.

In other business, the advisory board continued discussion of plans to reconfigure library space.

Providence Associates has provided the board a list of preliminary cost estimates to consider. The reorganization would include extensive remodeling and redesign of several areas of the library.

Some of the proposed changes have stirred dissension between the advisory bodies of the library, including the Lovett Foundation, the advisory board and the Friends of the Library.

A major sticking point for the Friends is the proposed use of the Texas Collection Room as storage for large-print books. The books in the collection would be moved to a designated area in another portion of the library.

Friends vice president Linda Moore called the room "a meaningful part of our history.

"Tradition should be maintained," she continued.

But board members expressed weariness at continued changes to Providence's plans.

"We have to come to the decision and stop ... changing our minds," said board secretary Betty Henderson.

The board voted unanimously to approve the preliminary cost list and ask Providence to draw up plans for the renovation. Board members did note that they will not necessarily proceed with everything in the plans at once.

Lake McClellan gains federal funds

Federa' funds totaling $600,000 have been awarded Lake McClellan for dredging and recreational improvements, said Precinct 3 County Commissioner Gerald Wright.

Wright told Gray County commissioners Monday a Senate bill sponsored by Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison was responsible for $250,000 earmarked for lake dredging while U.S. Rep. Mac Thornberry (R-Amarillo) was able to secure $350,000 of the U.S. Forest Service budget for the lake.

Another $50,000 in federal highway funds may be obtained for road improvements around the lake, Wright said.

He expects to know within the next six weeks whether the road funds will be available.

"In the 56 years of Lake McClellan's existence, this is the largest amount of funding approved for improvements," Wright said.

Recreational improvements are expected to include water and electrical hookups closer to the lakeshore, additional restrooms including a shower facility, and more picnic tables and barbecue grills.

Wright said he expects planning for the improvements to begin after the first of the year.

Jury convicts talk show guest of murder

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) – A one-time Jenny Jones Show guest was convicted today of a lesser charge of second-degree murder for fatally shooting a gay admirer who revealed his crush during a taping of the TV talk show.

Jurors opted against the more serious charge of first-degree murder against Jonathan Schmitz, which would have carried an automatic life sentence. Second-degree murder carries a sentence of up to life in prison. Sentencing was set for Dec. 4.

An Oakland County Circuit jury of seven men and five women deliberated all day Friday and about 2 1/2 hours today before reaching its decision.

Schmitz, 26, was charged with fatally shooting Scott Amedure three days in March 1995 after the two were taped for a Jenny Jones Show segment on same-sex crushes.

His lawyers said the show misled him into believing he was going to meet the woman of his dreams, and said he was publicly ambushed and humiliated when his secret admirer turned out to be Amedure.

"It's OK," Schmitz said to his mother in the gallery as he was being led from court after the verdict was announced. Connie Schmitz appeared upset and near tears.

"I think they (jurors) knew it couldn't be first degree because of his capacity being so obviously diminished," defense attorney James Burdick told WDIV television after the verdict. But Burdick said he would appeal the second-degree murder conviction.

The case focused attention on "ambush" television and titillating daytime talk shows.

Jet collision kills 351 people near New Delhi

NEW DELHI, India (AP) – A Saudi jumbo jetliner collided with a Kazak airliner today near New Delhi, exploding in flames and sending fiery wreckage plunging into the fields.

Aviation officials said 351 people were believed killed in the third-deadliest air crash ever.

The Saudi plane had just taken off from Indira Gandhi International Airport bound for Saudi Arabia when it hit a Tupolev-154 of the Kazak Airlines that was making its landing approach, Indian news reports said.

Police said the collision between the Saudi Boeing 747 and the Kazak aircraft took place after nightfall about 60 miles west of Delhi near the town of Charkhi Dadri.

A civil aviation official said seven minutes after takeoff, the Saudi plane was cleared to climb to 14,000 feet and the Kazak aircraft from Shymkent was authorized to descend to 15,000 feet.

The Saudi plane carried 312 passengers and crew and the Kazak airliner had 39 people on board, aviation officials said. All were believed killed, the officials said. The wreckage of the planes fell on farm fields, and no one on the ground was believed to have been killed.

Building contractor Rao Singh witnessed the crash: "I saw fireballs and big black smoke about three or four kilometers from my house falling into the fields," he said, reached by telephone and speaking in Hindi.

"The sky was absolutely red," he said.

Texas Baptists re-elect Wade as president

FORT WORTH (AP) –The Baptist General Convention of Texas stuck with tradition by re-electing Rev. Charles Wade for a second one-year term as president, beating back a challenge from a conservative Houston-area minister.

Only two presidents have not served a second term, and in both cases poor health was cited as the reason.

Wade, a moderate and pastor of First Baptist Church of Arlington, was elected Monday to lead the 2.5 million-member convention with 66 percent of the vote.

The Rev. Rick Scarborough, pastor of First Baptist Church of Pearland, had 34 percent.

Although conservatives hold power at the national convention level, they have long been overshadowed by moderates in Texas.

In remarks prepared for delivery Monday night, Wade disputed allegations that Texas Baptist leaders have been trying to lead Texas Baptists away from the conservative-dominated Southern Baptist Convention and into the Cooperative Baptist Fellowship, a group formed by moderates in response to the SBC.

Pentagon official says Army preparing to levy misconduct charges in Missouri

WASHINGTON (AP) – The Army is ready to take action in another case of alleged sexual misconduct at a training base, this time at Fort Leonard Wood, Mo., a Pentagon official says.

Such a move could take place as early as today against the first of several male soldiers under investigation at the Missouri base, the official said Monday.

The Army last week filed criminal charges against three military trainers and administrative charges against two more – all married – at a maintenance training base in Aberdeen, Md. The charges ranged from rape to sending improper love letters to female trainees. At least a dozen women were involved, average age 21.

An additional 15 instructors were placed on paid administrative duty.

Brad Rose, a spokesman for Fort Leonard Wood, confirmed an investigation into sexual misconduct was taking place, and stressed that it was not connected to the Aberdeen case. He would provide no details.

A Pentagon source said the charges at the Missouri base would involve sexual assault or misconduct, but not rape. Three or four individuals were involved, said the source, who spoke only on condition of anonymity.

A senior Army official, also speaking on condition of anonymity, said the investigation has been going on since September at Fort Leonard Wood, one of the Army's major training sites.

The Army officer said he also expected inquiries to be conducted at other training bases, such as those at Fort Jackson, S.C., and Fort Knox, Ky.

Gen. John Shalikashvili, who is chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said Monday the Army had to assume such improper conduct was taking place elsewhere. He said officials were looking all across the Army, particularly its training centers, to root out any sexual wrongdoing.

The Army last week asked that any personnel who felt they had been victims of sexual misconduct call a special toll-free telephone number at the Aberdeen Proving Ground near Baltimore. About 2,000 telephone calls had been made to number by Monday afternoon.

"As soon as you are off, another rings," Ed Starnes, an Aberdeen spokesman, said Monday. He added that some complaints go back to World War II.

Of the calls received between Thursday and 4 p.m. Monday, 246 were deemed serious enough to be referred to the Army's Criminal Investigative Division for further inquiry. The rest needed no follow-up, officials said.

Of the calls pertaining to sexual complaints, 56 were Aberdeen-related and 89 stemmed from complaints about other Army facilities.

The rest of the calls had to do with administrative requests, complaints concerning nonsexual matters and crank calls. The Army refused to provide details about the complaints that were being referred for investigation.

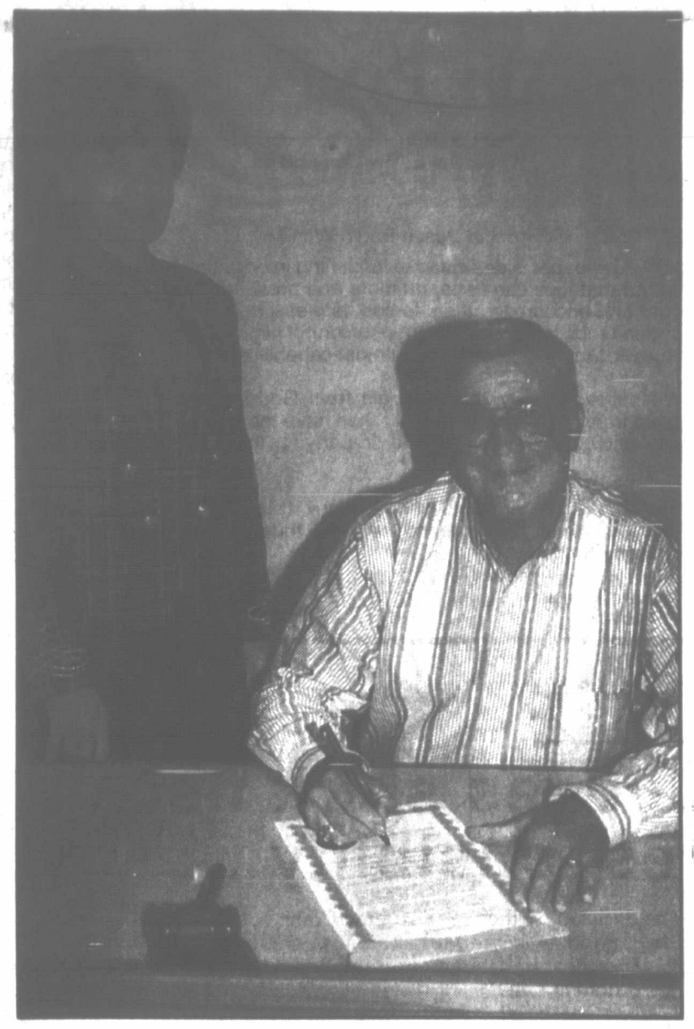

Capt. Craig Minnick, an Army lawyer, said Monday more charges were expected involving noncommissioned officers at Aberdeen.

"I don't know if we are going to see more rapes, but I think it is going to be more than love letters," he said.

At Aberdeen, one instructor threatened to kill three trainees if they told superiors he was having sex with them, the Army said in documents released over the weekend.

Army investigators at Aberdeen have said they plan to interview as many as 1,000 women who were trained at the post since the beginning of 1995, a process that could take months.

Whitewater prosecutor Kenneth Starr suspects cover up

DETROIT (AP) – Whitewater prosecutor Kenneth Starr says he believes information about the case is being withheld and that he won't give up until he gets the truth.

Starr didn't indicate who he thinks is withholding information, but said his comments should not be interpreted as a suggestion that the White House has failed to cooperate.

"The difficulty with this investigation has been getting at the truth as promptly as I would like," Starr said Monday in a speech to the Economic Club of Detroit. "That's been the heart and soul of the challenge."

Starr said he hopes more people will come forward with information on the failed Arkansas land development in which President Clinton and Hillary Rodham Clinton invested.

Susan McDougal, who was convicted in May of bank fraud along with her ex-husband James McDougal and then-Gov. Jim Guy Tucker, remains jailed for contempt for refusing to cooperate with Starr's investigation. She contends prosecutors want damaging testimony against Clinton.

In a September interview with PBS, Clinton said he agreed with McDougal's lawyer, who said there were prosecutors "out to get the Clintons."

Starr declined to comment on more specific questions about the Whitewater probe, but he denied that he and other prosecutors have a personal agenda against the president.

"I am out to do my job," Starr said. "The charge is utterly wrong."

Since Clinton's re-election, Republican congressional leaders have said they don't plan further Whitewater inquiries.

Starr said the probe has cost $9 million while expanding to include the White House travel office firings and the controversy over improper access to FBI files, as well as the failed investment the Clintons and McDougals shared in Whitewater.

Starr said the investigation has been justified because of the results, namely the convictions against the McDougals and Tucker.

"It is time consuming and therefore expensive to investigate," he said.

Kidney transplant gives much loved feline second chance at life

MESQUITE, Texas (AP) – Cats may have nine lives, but they have only two kidneys and that's what was giving Willie problems.

Willie's kidneys were bad, but he has an owner who was willing travel thousands of miles for life-saving transplant surgery. He got the kidney through transplant surgery that's still relatively complicated even for humans.

Willie, a Persian cat owned by Toni Sessions in this Dallas suburb, got sick last summer. He felt lousy, was listless, always thirst and generally out of sorts.

Sessions took Willie to veterinarian Dr. Mark C. Pirrung, who did some tests, found the kidney problems and put him on medication.

But the cat didn't seem to get better, so Dr. Pirrung sent Willie to Dr. Cheryl Harris, a veterinary internist. She did more tests and discovered that Willie had polycystic renal disease, a hereditary condition that is almost always fatal.

"In fact, all the other cats in Willie's litter had died," Dr. Pirrung said Monday. "Willie was the only cat remaining alive."

The vets told Session about the possibility of a kidney transplant at the University of California at Davis, where the surgery was first performed.

"Now, most people would say, 'That's awfully expensive. I can't do that,' " Dr. Pirrung said. "But Ms. Sessions is one of those clients who's willing to go an extra mile for her cat."

In this case it was a few thousand extra miles and about $7,000.

Sessions and Willie flew to California in late September to make sure he was a suitable candidate for a transplant. He was, but he had problems getting through the surgery.

"He was in the intensive-care unit out there for two weeks after surgery," Dr. Pirrung said. "And it was three weeks before Ms. Sessions could bring him home."

Witness in Vincent Foster case sues for harassment

WASHINGTON (AP) — A witness in the Vincent Foster case alleges in a $1.5 million lawsuit that two FBI agents and 26 other people conspired to discourage him from testifying about what he saw in the park where the deputy White House counsel's body was found.

Patrick Knowlton says the FBI falsified information he gave investigators and that he was harassed by people who followed him after his account in the Foster case became public.

The lawsuit, filed under seal Oct. 25 in U.S. District Court, says FBI agents and people who allegedly intimidated Knowlton conspired to violate his civil rights and inflicted emotional distress on him.

Knowlton's lawyer, John Clarke, said the suit would be unsealed today.

Whitewater prosecutors have been investigating Foster's death for the past three years. Two investigations have concluded that Foster died of a self-inflicted gunshot wound to the head.

Knowlton says he saw a car with Arkansas license plates that was not Foster's some 700 feet from where the deputy White House counsel's body was found on July 20, 1993, in a Virginia park.

Knowlton also said that he saw a "suspicious-looking man" in a parked car several spaces away from the car with Arkansas plates.

Knowlton says he told this to the FBI, but that the bureau's reports falsely suggest that the car he saw was Foster's and that he would be unable to recognize the man he says he saw.

Lesbian married to transsexual ordered from church

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — A lesbian who was barred from her church after marrying a male transsexual says the church is wrong to say she "seeks to mock God."

"I feel in my own eyes that no one has the right to tell me where I can go to hear God's word," Debi Easterday said Monday.

The Medina Church of the Brethren, a pacifist congregation like the Quakers and Mennonites, had a police officer escort Easterday off the property Sunday. She had attended the church for four years.

Last month, Easterday, 41, married Paul Smith, 36, who plans to change his name to Denise and undergo a sex change operation.

The church, which has 144,000 members in 1,126 churches, by policy welcomes anyone who believes in Jesus, but doesn't condone relationships between homosexuals.

In a statement Sunday, the church board said it was "deeply saddened that despite our initial acceptance, love, generosity and prayers, Debi remains unrepentant and seeks to mock God."

Measles reaches all-time low in Americas

WASHINGTON (AP) — Measles has reached an all-time low in North and South America, but the United States and Canada lead the region in cases of the vaccine-preventable illness, according to the Pan American Health Organization.

So far in 1996, the Americas have experienced 1,204 cases of measles, compared with 6,489 in 1995, according the PAHO annual report issued Monday.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Judges shirk fiscal responsiblity ...

The decision by the U.S. Supreme Court not to hear an appeal regarding judges paying taxes because of the lack of a quorum seems bizarre at first, but on examination it does have a constitutional rationale.

The fact that the effect of this decision not to decide could benefit certain federal judges, including four Supreme Court justices who said they had a potential conflict of interest, is unusual enough. But it might not be the most interesting implication of the case.

The Supreme Court, in effect, let stand a lower-court ruling that laws passed in 1983 and 1984 requiring federal judges and other federal employees to pay Social Security and Medicare taxes don't apply to some federal judges. This seems to create a privileged class exempt from certain taxes.

But the rationale is right there in the U.S. Constitution, in Article III, Section 1: "The judges, both of the Supreme and inferior courts, shall hold their offices during good behavior, and shall, at stated times, receive for their services, a compensation, which shall not be diminished during their continuance in office." Both active clauses of this sentence are intended to ensure judicial independence from the other branches of government. Federal judges get lifetime appointments so they will be free to follow their consciences and the law as they understand it, even if their decisions offend politicians. The admonition against having their pay cut is intended to prevent the executive branch from pressuring them.

Sixteen federal judges filed suit in 1989, claiming that the earlier laws, which brought federal judges – as well as members of Congress, the president's cabinet, and all new federal employees – into Social Security and Medicare, had the effect of "diminishing" the compensation of judges by making them pay taxes they hadn't paid before. Previously, these federal employees had their own retirement system and medical benefits packages.

Justice Department lawyers, who had appealed the lower-court decision, wanted the Supreme Court to handle the issue because the lower court's decision might prohibit Congress "from applying any increase in the rate of any tax, including the income tax, to sitting judges' salaries." That question is left open.

If the concern turns out to be valid, the result could be that judges would have to pay whatever rate of taxation was in effect when they first took the bench, and be exempt from subsequent federal tax increases, because such increases would diminish their compensation.

On the other hand, some argue that the six-year statute of limitations to protest the law ran out in 1989, and only the 16 judges shrewd enough to file this lawsuit will be exempt from the taxes.

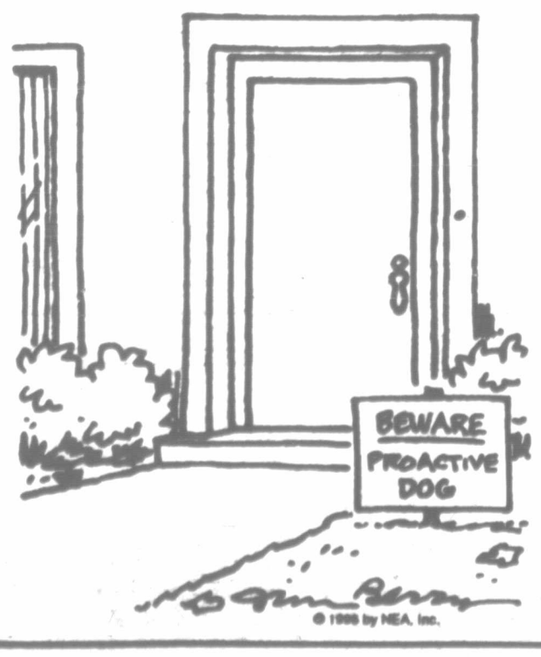

Although the constitutional provision is there, it does seem strange to create a privileged class of government employees exempt from the taxes imposed on everybody else.

This unusual Supreme Court decision could end up affecting only the 16 judges who filed the suit. But its implications could be broader.

The real reason Bob Dole lost

Stephen Chapman

Bob Dole, barring a political earthquake, will soon find himself on the receiving end of a lot of blame from angry Republicans who think he bungled the presidential campaign. He should take some comfort in knowing that the Republican Party couldn't have won this year if it had nominated Abraham Lincoln. Dole has not been a four-star candidate, but even if he had run a flawless campaign, he wouldn't have altered the outcome.

The real blame for Dole's almost certain defeat lies with two people: Alan Greenspan and Radovan Karadzic. Greenspan, the head of the Federal Reserve Board, has kept the economy growing tolerably well without an outbreak of inflation. Karadzic, the leader of the Bosnian Serbs, has declined to engage in the sort of fighting that would produce significant American casualties and rouse opposition to President Clinton's decision to send troops to Bosnia.

The country's good fortune has been Dole's undoing. Bill Clinton is presiding over peace and prosperity, and that is just about all it takes for a president to get re-elected. True, he is an extremely shrewd politician who had done a good job of recasting his image in the last two years. But no amount of cleverness would save him if the unemployment rate were 8.2 percent instead of 5.2 percent and coffins were arriving home from Bosnia.

Not since 1912, says presidential historian Richard Norton Smith, has a president been defeated for re-election without the burden of a weak economy or a foreign war – and as politicians go, William Howard Taft was no Bill Clinton. Presidents can survive legislative defeat, ethical scandals and unattractive personalities as long as the economy is reasonably healthy and no American soldiers are dying overseas. That explains Clinton's otherwise mystifying popularity.

In this century, only four incumbent presidents have lost their re-election bids, with two others choosing not to run because their chances looked remote. George Bush bore the brunt of a recession that ended a year and half before the election but lingered bitterly in public memory. Jimmy Carter suffered a 1980 mini-recession that was compounded by the highest U.S. inflation rate in modern times – and he had something worse than a foreign war, namely American hostages being held in Iran.

Herbert Hoover was demolished by the Great Depression. Taft, who lost in 1912 to Woodrow Wilson, was the lone exception to the rule – and it took an extraordinary third-party bid by fellow Republican and former President Theodore Roosevelt to create that exception.

The incumbents who won, by contrast, benefited from comparatively favorable circumstances. Richard Nixon, elected by a minority of voters in 1968, won by one of the biggest landslides in American history four years later, despite being one of the least liked people ever to occupy the Oval Office – mainly because the economy was growing and the United States was extracting itself from Vietnam.

LBJ, who acceded to the presidency following John Kennedy's assassination, was never suspected of getting by on looks and charm, but he likewise won in 1964 by mammoth proportions, owing to pocketbook issues. Calvin Coolidge, whose personality caused H.L. Mencken to wonder if he had been weaned on a pickle, rode the boom if the 1920s to a thumping victory in 1924.

Political reporters and pundits (myself included) tend to see elections as contests of ideology. When Ronald Reagan beat Carter in 1980, the prevailing interpretation was that the country had turned to the right. A shift in the opposite direction was perceived in 1992, when a Democrat won for the first time in four elections. But Americans are invincibly pragmatic. If a president can manage not to screw up on the two matters that concern them most, his philosophical inclinations will generally be overlooked or forgiven.

Colin Powell, who made the puzzling decision not to run for president this year, may have figured all this out ahead of time. He is often compared to Dwight Eisenhower, and the analogy is revealing: Eisenhower knew better than to run in 1948, when conditions were on the side of the incumbent.

It may not reflect well on democracy that accidents of timing often determine who will govern us. Six days before the election, the Commerce Department reported that economic growth has slowed enough to raise the possibility of an impending recession. A recession will come, sooner or later, but too late to help Bob Dole.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Tuesday, Nov. 12, the 317th day of 1996. There are 49 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Nov. 12, 1942, the World War II naval Battle of Guadalcanal began. (The Americans ended up winning a major victory over the Japanese.)

On this date:

In 1815, American suffragist Elizabeth Cady Stanton was born in Johnstown, N.Y.

In 1920, baseball got its first "czar" as Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis was elected commissioner of the American and National Leagues.

In 1921, representatives of nine nations gathered for the start of the Washington Conference for Limitation of Armaments.

In 1927, Josef Stalin became the undisputed ruler of the Soviet Union as Leon Trotsky was expelled from the Communist Party.

In 1948, former Japanese premier Hideki Tojo and several other World War II Japanese leaders were sentenced to death by a war crimes tribunal.

Mideast situation needs clarifying

Charley Reese

One of the more tiresome aspects of writing about the Middle East is that any time you criticize Israel, the Israeli lobby swings into action and you get bombarded with accusations of being a liar and an anti-Semite.

The First Amendment has more than a few enemies but none so consistent as the Israeli lobby. A good summary of its history of trying to silence Americans by character assassination is They Dare to Speak Out by former Rep. Paul Findley (Lawrence Hill Books, 1989).

The problem the lobby has, of course, is when it comes to abuses of human rights, the facts are on the side of the Palestinians. Hence, it resorts to attacking the critic, rather than dealing with the criticism.

Let me try to put this in perspective.

Suppose in America that when a young man is caught committing a crime, the police not only punish him but march over to the home of his parents, order them out of their house, blow it up or bulldoze it into rubble and then forbid them to rebuild it.

Would you approve of that?

Suppose a young black man commits a crime, and in addition to punishing him, the National Guard surrounds all black neighborhoods and forbids all blacks within them from leaving. They cannot go to their jobs, to schools or anywhere else outside their neighborhood. As the months of isolation go on, men lose their jobs and the people become impoverished.

Would you approve of that tactic?

But let's suppose that despite enforced isolation, another young black commits a crime, so the government orders all black Americans to be confined within their homes. They are allowed to leave only one hour a day for food and water.

Would you approve of that?

Now let's suppose a city decides it just wants to get rid of its black citizens. So in addition to isolation, curfews and blowing up their homes, the government says it will no longer recognize their deeds. Hence, their property is subject to confiscation.

Nor will the government give blacks building permits, though it issues building permits to whites within the black neighborhoods who then build on the confiscated property.

Finally, the government induces whites to move into the black neighborhoods, occupying empty buildings, arming the whites, but disarming the blacks, and telling the black Americans they have no right to control anything the white settlers do, even though these settlers bully, insult and occasionally kill unarmed black people.

Would you approve of that?

Suppose the U.S. government rounded up, say, Louis Farrakhan and 100 of his followers just because it doesn't like what they are saying. Armed guards put sacks over their heads, handcuff them, force them into helicopters at gun point and then dump them out in the desert of Mexico and refuse to readmit them to the United States.

Would you approve of that?

Then, dearly beloved, don't approve of it by remaining timidly silent when the Israelis do those things to Palestinians. The Israeli government has done and is doing all of those things to Palestinians.

That's simply wrong. It would be just as wrong if Palestinians were doing it to Israelis. The wrongness of it has nothing to do with the fact that most Israelis are Jews or with religion or with prejudice. It's just old fashioned abuse of innocent people by a government.

Americans who prattle about human rights – especially politicians and journalists – brand themselves cowards when they stand silent while the Israeli government abuses the human rights of Palestinians.

American taxpayers have paid more than $53 billion (in foreign aid) for the right to criticize Israeli actions that conflict with American values and that jeopardize American interests – protests by character assassins supporting a foreign government notwithstanding.

Why did the kiss 'shake the nation'?

Sara Eckel

I'm waiting for the media frenzy over young Charlotte Kirk. Her story has all the elements of the school-regulations-gone-wild morality tales that are popular these days, so I'm sure the helicopters will be circling her house any day now.

In case you missed Charlotte's story, which I spotted on page 24 of the Los Angeles Times, it goes like this:

Late last month, the 11-year-old from Columbia, S.C., was packing her lunch for school and included a steak knife, with which she planned to eat some leftover chicken. When she got to school, a friend told her she thought that using the knife might be against the rules. Not wanting to cause trouble, Charlotte asked her teacher if she could use her knife to cut her chicken. The teacher said no and lectured her about violating the school's policy against bringing weapons to school. Then the teacher called the police.

A deputy sheriff arrested the sixth-grader as she left school with her father that day. The officer would not even let Charlotte's father ride in the squad car with her while he took her down to the station. An Associated Press report says that she looked out the back window of the car the entire way, trying to keep her father in sight.

The story has been reported nationally, but it has not become a media sensation. Charlotte is not doing the talk-show circuit; she won't be hosting Saturday Night Live. Her arrest has largely been treated for what it is: an isolated act of stupidity on the part of some school officials. It has not stirred a national controversy. No one is questioning the value of anti-weapons policies in schools. No one is suggesting that the anti-violence crowd has gotten out of hand.

Similarly, when two Dayton, Ohio, teenagers were suspended from school for trafficking Midol, the over-the-counter pain reliever commonly used to relieve menstrual cramps, we failed to see an outcry from those who think anti-drug policies are bogus.

After all, that would be silly. We don't want our children going to schools where drugs and weapons are tolerated, and we want school administrators to be tough on any kids who would bring them to school. If, from time to time, the rules are applied incorrectly or overzealously, that doesn't invalidate the basic notion that our schools should be free of weapons and drugs.

But when the issue is sexual harassment – well that's a different story. One little boy is forced to sit out an ice-cream party, and the entire nation is in an uproar. The story of Johnathan Prevette, the six-year-old who was punished for kissing a classmate, was not the tale of a teacher who overreacted. It was not an anecdote about school administrators misapplying a basically sound principle. No, this was a story of feminist McCarthyism, of political correctness run wild. This was, as USA Today thundered, "The Kiss That Shook the Nation."

Johnathan became an instant celebrity, making the usual rounds, from the Today show to CNN. Newspapers across the country put the adorable little boy with the Coke-bottle glasses on their front page. And the pundits were thrilled.

"This is an excellent example of the total excesses of this kind of arch feminist ideology gone amuck," Camille Paglia said in the USA Today story.

Columnist Linda Chavez didn't stop there. "If the feds and their feminist allies have their way, every little boy and girl in the nation will be taught that flirting is a crime."

Yes, that's the real feminist agenda. All that talk about day care and pay equity and reproductive rights is just a cover. Really, what feminists want to do is outlaw flirtation. And the anti-drug folks are committed to eradicating the Midol Menace. And the anti-crime crusade is really about kitchen utensils.

So good people unite. You've nothing to lose but your forks.

Poll: More than half of households in Texas have at least one gun

AUSTIN – More than half of Texans say someone in their home owns a gun – and 62 percent of gun owners have more than one, according to a recent Harte-Hanks Texas Poll.

But only seven percent of Texans say they have applied for a concealed handgun permit and even fewer have been given the right to carry one.

Still, one in four Texans now approach people differently because of the concealed handgun law and law enforcement officers say it has changed the way they do their job.

"With Texas being an outdoor sports kind of state, and the tendency toward hunting, it's not surprising there are a number of guns here," said Dennis Longmire, a professor and director of the survey research program at Sam Houston State University's Criminal Justice Center. "The world has a general image of Texans being gun-toting cowboys. There's a lot of truth to that."

Even though few Texans say they have applied for a concealed handgun permit, that's enough to make 26 percent change the way they approach others.

"Texans are acutely sensitive to the fact that people may be armed," Longmire said. "People are being cautious. Some are afraid."

Texas lawmakers approved the state's concealed carry law last year. Permits began going out last fall, and permit holders could tote concealed weapons beginning Jan. 1.

Overall, 52 percent of Texans say someone in their home owns a gun. Of those, 43 percent have two to five guns. Twenty-eight percent have one gun, 19 percent have more than five guns and 10 percent don't know how many guns they have or refuse to answer.

"Texas has a more liberal attitude toward gun ownership and the right to carry guns freely," Longmire said. "But a quarter of the population now feels somewhat constrained when approaching people."

Although 26 percent of Texans approach people differently now, 71 percent haven't changed their approach and three percent don't know.

State Sen. Jerry Patterson, a Pasadena Republican who sponsored the concealed handgun bill, said it's encouraging that a majority of Texans don't approach people differently now.

"That's 71 percent who don't believe the predicted bloodbaths will occur. And they haven't," Patterson said. "Seventy-one percent of the folks don't believe it's any more dangerous out there now than it was before. And they haven't gone about doing anything differently."

But the concealed handgun law has made some Texans – specifically law enforcement officers – feel differently about doing their job, said Mark Clark, spokesman for the Combined Law Enforcement Associations of Texas.

"If you were just polling police officers, it would be 100 percent who approach people differently now," said Clark, whose group is the largest law enforcement organization in the state.

Texans applying for concealed handgun permits must pass a criminal background check and have no history of mental instability or illness. They also most be drug free.

John Kellams, co-founder of Gun Owners of Texas, said people with permits are law abiding citizens. "It means they have a spotless record – they haven't even spit on the sidewalk in five years," he said.

To date, 105,455 permits have been issued and 1,083 have been denied, according to DPS records. Overall, 110,517 applications have been received. The remaining 3,979 have yet to be processed.

Patterson has maintained since proposing the law that one percent or two percent of Texans – between 180,000 and 360,000 people – would ultimately be licensed. The seven percent who say they have applied for permits may have not completed the application process.

Part of the law's requirements are that a potential licensee take a handgun course from an instructor licensed by the DPS.

Sixty-five percent of Texans say they have taken some type of shooting instruction. Of those, 57 percent had formal training. Thirty-seven percent were taught by a friend or relative.

"It's surprising that so many have formal training," said Kellams, a DPS certified concealed handgun instructor. "A lot of people have informal training from when their Uncle Joe, or whoever, took them out and showed them how to shoot a rifle."

Federal and state laws govern where Texans can carry their guns. Areas banned include airports, schools, prisons, race tracks, hospitals, bars and churches.

And Texas employers have the right to bar guns from their workplaces.

Eighty-one percent of Texans say they aren't allowed to carry a concealed weapon into work. Ten percent say they are and nine percent don't know.

"The general feeling is that a stressful work environment and guns don't go together," said Jeff Londa, chairman of the Employment Relations Committee for the Texas Associations of Business and Chambers of Commerce. "A lot of small businesses, particularly, went through a time when they didn't know what to do."

"The underlying assumption was that if someone had a license, they could carry a gun anywhere," said Londa, also a partner in a Houston law firm. "Businesses have realized they have rights to prohibit carrying in a workplace."

Jamie Shor, spokeswoman for Handgun Control Inc., said the poll results speak volumes about Texas employers.

"Businesses in Texas have really taken a stand," said Shor, whose organization is a Washington D.C. based lobbying group for gun control. "They said they don't want guns in their workplaces."

But 48 percent of Texans believe every citizen in the United States should have the right to own a gun. Forty-nine percent disagree and three percent don't know.

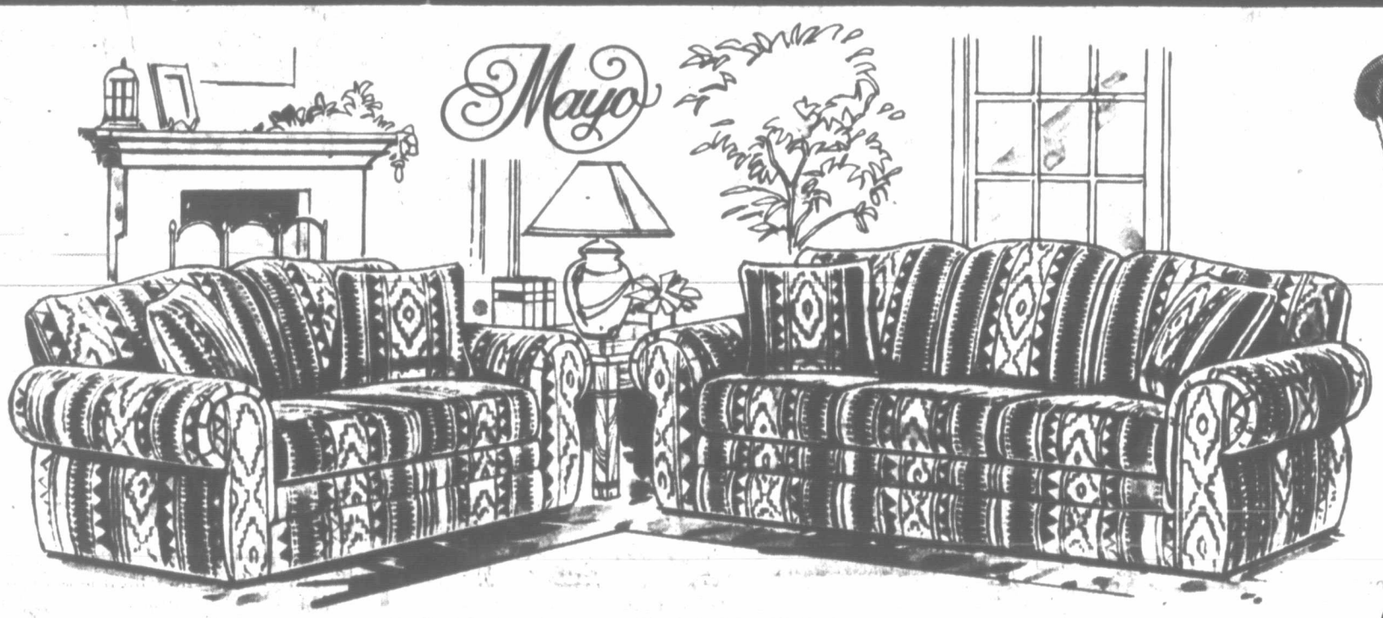

Patterson, a long time supporter of the constitutional right to bear arms, said he doesn't believe every citizen has that right. That's why Texas' law prohibits criminals and those with mental illness from applying for a permit, he said.

"The whole premise of the concealed handgun law is that it's OK for some people to carry guns but there are some people we want to keep them from," said Patterson, a National Rifle Association member. "You don't get a gun just because you're a citizen."

The poll, conducted Oct. 7-19, has a margin of error of plus or minus three percentage points. The Office of Survey Research of the University of Texas surveyed 1,001 adult Texans for Harte-Hanks Communications Inc.

Texaco investigator disputes claims of racial slurs

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) – A Texaco Inc. executive was bemoaning "poor St. Nicholas" and not uttering a racial slur during a secretly recorded conversation, says an investigator hired by the oil company.

Plaintiffs in a $520 million discrimination lawsuit against Texaco claim former treasurer Robert Ulrich said "(expletive) niggers" during a 1994 discussion of the suit among company executives.

The comments have brought criticism against Texaco, and black leaders including the Rev. Jesse Jackson have threatened a boycott unless the company remedies the alleged discrimination against 1,400 minority workers.

Lawyer Michael Armstrong, whom Texaco hired to analyze the tape, enhanced a digitized version of the recording, removing laughter that obscured some of Ulrich's words.

"The phrase '(expletive) niggers' just doesn't exist on the tape," Armstrong said Monday.

He said Ulrich actually said "poor St. Nicholas" while disparaging Hanukkah and the black cultural festival Kwanza.

Texaco Chairman Peter Bijur said the findings "merely set the record straight as to the exact words spoken in the conversations, but they do not change the categorically unacceptable context and tone of these conversations."

Cyrus Mehri, an lawyer for the plaintiffs, said, "We stand by what we said was on those tapes and transcripts as best we could hear and determine at the time we received them. ... Bottom line, even if you took out the word ... you still have all the racial hostility on those tapes."

Jackson said, "To go from regrets to denial would be adding to the insult." Jackson and Kweisi Mfume, president of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, were scheduled to meet with Texaco officials today.

In the lawsuit, Ulrich is accused of calling black workers "black jelly beans."

Armstrong's report said the remark apparently was not intended as a racial slur, but stemmed from an analogy used in a speech attended by Texaco executives. The colors of the beans were used to refer to different races.

In both versions of the tape, executive Richard Lundwall states: "That's funny. All the black jelly beans seem to be glued to the bottom of the bag."

The statements were recorded in 1994 by Lundwall, who attended meetings of the company's finance department.

Armstrong did not address the other task Texaco gave him – to determine if company officials had tried to obstruct the plaintiffs from access to company documents on the hiring and promotion of blacks.

The Wall Street Journal reported today that outside investigators hired by Texaco determined that the company failed to produce some of the requested documents. The Journal said its report was based on sources familiar with the inquiry.

IRS encourages parents to gather day care TIN numbers

DALLAS – The Internal Revenue Service encourages parents to prepare for the upcoming tax filing season early by obtaining taxpayer identification numbers (TIN) from day care providers and by double checking that dependents have Social Security numbers.

Anyone claiming the credit for child and dependent care expenses must include the name, address and TIN of each care provider on their return. If the provider is a non-profit charitable, religious or educational organization, only name and address are necessary.

A TIN is a Social Security number if the provider is an individual or an employer identification number if the provider is a partnership or corporation. The same requirement applies to a person who receives benefits through their employer's dependent care assistance program.

Form W-10 can be used to request this information from the provider. To get a free copy of this form, call the IRS toll free at 1-800-TAX-FORM.

In addition, anyone claiming a dependent born before Dec. 1, 1996, must enter that person's Social Security number on their 1996 return.

Low and moderate income families claiming the Earned Income Credit are also required to include Social Security numbers for qualifying children. According the the IRS, a refund will be reduced or delayed if any Social Security number is either incorrect or missing.

For help getting a number or resolving any questions about a Social Security number you already have, visit a Social Security Administration office or call toll free 1-800-772-1211.

The Social Security office in Pampa is located at 125 S. Gillespie, (806) 669-1010.

Crash blamed on pilot error, equipment shortfalls

FORT BLISS (AP) — The crews of two helicopters that collided during a training exercise were not watching to ensure the aircraft maintained their distance from one another, Army investigators have said.

The lack of vigilance and coordination along with equipment shortfalls caused the April 14 accident at Fort Bliss that killed three paratroopers assigned to the 82nd Airborne Division at Fort Bragg, N.C., according to a preliminary accident report released recently by the U.S. Army Safety Center at Fort Rucker, Ala.

The two-person OH-58 Kiowa helicopters were involved in a live missile drill at Fort Bliss when one aircraft drifted into the other, causing both to plummet to the ground.

Army investigators could not determine which helicopter caused the crash. But they said pilots in both aircraft failed to watch that the helicopters kept clear of obstacles and remained separated.

Travis County woman sheriff vows to win over doubters

AUSTIN (AP) — Margo Frasier has won her bid to become Travis County's first woman sheriff, making her part of a select group in Texas. Now she says she'll win over those who think being sheriff should remain a man's job.

"I think when women are in law enforcement, the initial thing you face is people wonder if you're tough enough. I never worry about proving that," Frasier said. "People will realize in the (course) of doing your job that you are."

Of 254 counties, 251 have male sheriffs. The other three female sheriffs are Carmella Jones, in the Panhandle's Armstrong County; Mary Choate, in Bowie County in Northeast Texas; and Frances Kaiser in Kerr County, west of San Antonio.

Frasier, a Democrat, last week defeated Republican Alvin Shaw, chief deputy of the Travis County sheriff's department.

Three youths escape from Giddings State School

GIDDINGS (AP) — Three youths convicted of crimes ranging from capital murder to aggravated sexual assault escaped from Giddings State School Monday after assaulting a youth activity supervisor, officials said.

Two of them were back in custody Monday night, but the third youth remained a fugitive, officials said.

Linda Ward of the Lee County Sheriff's Department said the three fled the maximum-security juvenile detention facility 50 miles east of Austin about 1:30 a.m. Monday.

The youths grabbed the supervisor, took his keys and wrestled him into a closet that they locked with one of the keys.

The youths used the same set of keys to unlock the dormitory, then crawled under a nearby fence to escape, said Tom Tye, director of juvenile corrections and halfway houses for the Texas Youth Commission.

Pain may be eliminated for millions

(SPECIAL) -- A drug that is exciting researchers in the treatment of pain has been formulated into a new product known as "Arthur Itis," and is being called a "Medical Miracle" by some, in the treatment of debilitating conditions such as arthritis, bursitis, rheumatism, painful muscle aches, joint aches, simple backache, bruises, and more. Although the mechanism of action is unclear, experiments indicate that Arthur Itis, relieves pain by first selectively attracting, and then destroying the messenger chemical which carries pain sensations to the brain, thus eliminating pain in the affected area. Arthur Itis, is an odorless, greaseless, non-staining cream and is available immediately without a prescription and is guaranteed to work or your money back.

Watchdog group advocates keeping revolving door shut

AUSTIN (AP) – Former lawmakers rake in a disproportionate share of the millions spent to lobby the Legislature, says a government watchdog group that wants legislators to be banned from lobbying for two years after leaving office.

"These legislators are using the inside knowledge and contacts they developed while serving the public's interest to then earn hundreds of thousands (of dollars) – and in some cases more than a million dollars – serving special interests," Tom Smith, director of Public Citizen's Texas office, said Monday.

"Our reforms will put them on a diet."

Texas Ethics Commission records show 67 former lawmakers are registered as lobbyists, less than five percent of the 1,440 total, said Smith.

But the ex-lawmakers reported earnings totaling between about $10 million and $22.2 million, according to a study released by Smith.

That's about 13 percent to 15 percent of the $61.2 million to $169.5 million reported by lobbyists as a whole, the study said. Lobbyists are required to report only a range of earnings.

Figures are for earnings reported beginning Jan. 1, 1996, through Nov. 4. The list isn't restricted to lawmakers who became lobbyists immediately after leaving office, but includes some who waited years to do so.

Smith, a registered lobbyist who never served in the Legislature, said the value of legislative experience is clear.

"The only reason that the smartest special interest groups in Texas would hire former legislators and pay them so handsomely is that they know that the ex-legislators have contacts and friendships that pay off by giving them an advantage in shaping legislation to their benefit," he said.

Billy Clayton, a former House speaker and a lobbyist, said the primary asset of former lawmakers is knowledge of the system's nuances. He reported lobby contracts worth between $600,000 and $1.3 million through Nov. 4, according to Public Citizen.

"If a company goes to hire someone to help them, don't they look for experience?" Clayton asked.

But he added, "As far as actually changing votes because you're an ex-legislator, I don't think that makes any difference. ... I think those guys and gals are pretty independent over there in their votes."

Public Citizen is urging lawmakers to enact a two-year ban on:

— Lobbying by lawmakers who leave office, and by their staff members who leave. This would include the speaker of the Texas House.

— Lobbying by the former staff of the governor and lieutenant governor.

— Consulting by lawmakers, their staffs and agency officials regarding how to contract with state agencies.

Gov. George W. Bush, Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock and House Speaker Pete Laney have adopted policies restricting lobbying of former staff, but Smith said the limits should be written into law.

Current law bars state regulatory agency board members and agency heads from lobbying their former agency for two years.

Public Citizen also wants to require retiring lawmakers to return accumulated campaign war chests to contributors, rather than allowing them to donate unspent campaign funds to other officeholders and candidates.

Smith said the power of such donations adds to the allure of hiring ex-lawmakers as lobbyists.

Clayton said he contributed his campaign war chest to the Democratic Party and homes for underprivileged youngsters.

State Sen. Mike Moncrief, D-Fort Worth, has said he is working on legislation to strengthen the anti-revolving door law, including applying it to lawmakers and their top staff.

Rep. Elliott Naishtat, D-Austin, said he is working with Rep. Mike Krusee, a Republican from Williamson County, on similar legislation.

But Naishtat added he has some concerns about potential opposition to extending the two-year ban to lawmakers.

"Legislators get paid $600 a month, and there may be enough out there that feel they don't want to preclude the possibility of that kind of employment. I hope that doesn't turn out to be the case," Naishtat said.

Feds weigh new regulations after E. coli outbreak in juice

WASHINGTON (AP) – The government is considering forcing all apple juices, and possibly other fruit juices, to be pasteurized to fight the dangerous E. coli bacteria that keeps surfacing in fresh foods.

Also under debate is chemically washing fresh produce or forcing manufacturers to adopt quality-control programs that prove foods stay pure from harvest to dinner table.

Once thought a threat only in undercooked meat, the virulent E. coli O157 strain now has surfaced repeatedly in apple cider, even lettuce. At least 49 people were sickened after drinking trendy, unpasteurized fruit juices. E. coli is strongly suspected in the death of a 16-month-old child Friday in Denver.

This outbreak, from California-based Odwalla Inc. gourmet juices that contained tainted apple juice, has spurred government doctors to action because it showed even large manufacturers known for quality are vulnerable.

"There's no doubt this is a different problem this time," said John Vanderveen of the Food and Drug Administration.

Just hours after Odwalla began its recall, Vanderveen called a special meeting to warn apple juice makers "to ratchet up their quality control" while the government decides the next step.

Meanwhile, Vanderveen is advising parents of young children and people with weak immune systems, who are most at risk from foodborne illnesses, to buy only pasteurized juices. Unpasteurized ones, a minority on the market, must be sold cold, so shoppers should check the label when buying any chilled juice, he added.

Kids Need Sex Education Both At Home And School

Abigail Van Buren

SYNDICATED COLUMNIST

DEAR ABBY: For some time now, I have been reading about parents who can't decide who should inform kids about sex. Some argue that the teachers should do it, Others respond that it's the parents' job. Is it me, or does this seem juvenile? Shouldn't both teachers and parents explain the facts of life to the kids? I thought the idea was to protect and educate the next generation.

Teen-agers complain that their teachers can't get past the biology of it all. They dwell so much on hormones that by the end of class nearly half the kids have their heads on their desks and they're snoring. Teachers don't like to talk about the touchy-feely stuff. (At least they didn't when I was in high school two years ago.) If kids want a discussion of foreplay, oral sex, masturbation or homosexuality, they usually have to rely on their friends, movies, magazines, etc.

The parents are usually no better than the teachers. They shouldn't wait for their children — especially their teen-agers — to start asking questions. Sex isn't something that you shut in a closet, then bring out and dust off when a kid comes of age. Sex education starts when a parent tells a child where it's OK and not OK to touch someone.

If a 16- or 17-year-old comes home and suddenly asks his or her parent's opinion about sex, it's probably already too late. But if that happens to be the case, treating the teen as if he or she has committed a mortal sin will only make the situation worse.

JENNIFER IN NORFOLK, VA.

DEAR JENNIFER: Until parents agree on the quality of sex education their children should receive, and elect school boards who will ensure that their wishes are enforced, sex education in the schools is not likely to improve.

The problem is many parents fear that talking about sex or sexuality will encourage sex, even though studies show that informed teen-agers are less likely to become sexually active than those who are ignorant. Parents must recognize that if their children don't learn about sex from their teachers or their parents, they will learn it elsewhere, and what they learn can be incorrect, confusing or contrary to the parents' beliefs. Frank communication is an important means of influencing a child's behavior before a problem occurs.

The American Social Health Association (ASHA) offers a helpful booklet titled "Becoming an Askable Parent: How to Talk With Your Child About Sexuality," which can be ordered by sending $2 (to cover printing, postage and handling) to: ASHA, Dept. DA69, P.O. Box 13827, Research Triangle Park, N.C. 27709.

DEAR ABBY: You were right as usual when you advised that a widow should be addressed by the name she prefers, and her wishes should prevail.

My name is Mrs. Kenneth A. Grow and always will be — even though I am a widow. I prefer that only my close friends address me by my first name.

It frosts me when I'm in a doctor's waiting room and a 20-year-old girl calls out, "OK, Vivian, the doctor will see you now!"

How come he's "Doctor" and I'm just Vivian? It seems that good manners have gone down the drain with the baby boomers.

MRS. KENNETH GROW, PALM SPRINGS, CALIF.

DEAR MRS. GROW: If you think the staff in your doctor's office elevates their boss to a higher level while showing a lack of respect for his older patients, I suggest you inform the doctor, who may not be aware of it.

GOLF

PINE MOUNTAIN, Ga. (AP) — After a seven-week delay — and more than a slight misunderstanding — Tiger Woods has accepted his award for being the best college golfer in the country.

Woods, now a rookie on the professional tour, was given the Fred Haskins Award as the nation's top collegiate golfer Monday night at an invitation-only dinner that was postponed when he canceled his appearance.

Woods, who played at Stanford, was scheduled to receive the award in late September during the Buick Challenge. He withdrew from the dinner when he pulled out of the tournament, saying he was exhausted, but that left a lot of people hanging.

Woods said it was an error and a valuable lesson learned.

"My actions were wrong," Woods said. "I've said that all along. I should have attended the dinner.

"I'm sorry for any inconvenience I may have caused everybody. I'll never make that mistake again."

Cecil Calhoun, secretary of the Haskins Commission, gave Woods' father, Earl, several options for the presentation.

"I ran them by Tiger," Earl Woods said. "He said, 'Let's go back to Georgia and bring it to closure.'"

Woods put a club in his son's hands at six months and has guided his career. "My heart is filled with so much joy when I realize this young man will help so many people and help the game of golf," the elder Woods said Monday night.

The two shared a long embrace after Earl Woods spoke.

AUTO RACING

HAMPTON, Ga. (AP) — Terry Labonte's trip to the Winston Cup championship was just like the man himself: nondescript and methodical.

He didn't mind if Jeff Gordon won 10 races, twice as many as anyone else. It didn't bother him that Dale Jarrett claimed the three biggest prizes: Daytona, Charlotte and Indianapolis.

Labonte just kept chugging along, hardly saying a word, always running near the front of the pack even if he rarely took the checkered flag first. The Texan was in it for the long haul, not instant gratification.

"Terry doesn't get too emotional," said his younger brother, Bobby. "He hasn't changed from the first of the year to right now."

Well, there has been one change for the driver whose known to his competitors as the "Iceman."

For the first time in 12 years, Terry Labonte is the Winston Cup champion. He clinched the title Sunday with a fifth-place finish in the NAPA 500, capping a remarkable comeback for a driver who didn't even win a race from 1990 to 1993.

On Monday, he was back in the garage at Atlanta Motor Speedway, mingling with fans at an early-morning breakfast and savoring his season championship. He didn't mind a bit that he was getting a late start on a hunting trip to Montana.

"Believe me, I was really wanting to stay," he said.

Labonte's career was in a nosedive when he was approached by car owner Rick Hendrick in 1994. Most people scoffed as Hendrick's choice, but he saw something special in the aging driver that others didn't.

Texas takes driver's seat in Big 12 South

By CHIP BROWN
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — At one point this season, Texas had lost four of five and was making a habit of losing games after leading in the fourth quarter.

But consecutive victories over Baylor and Texas Tech have put the Longhorns (5-4, 4-2 Big 12) in the driver's seat of the Big 12 South division with games remaining this week at Kansas (4-5, 2-4) and at home against Texas A&M on Nov. 29.

"We are in the position that we wanted to be in at the beginning of the season. We just took the long path to get here," Texas quarterback James Brown said Monday. "We took the difficult road. But we're here now and trying to make the most of it."

Texas wrestled control of the Big 12 South away from Texas Tech with a 38-32 victory in Lubbock Saturday after leading 28-3 in the first half.

"It was kind of scary in the end the way they came back, but we held on this time. It felt great," said linebacker Aaron Humphrey, referring to fourth-quarter leads that slipped away against Notre Dame (7), Oklahoma (11) and Colorado (3).

With victories over Kansas and Texas A&M, the Longhorns would guarantee themselves a trip to St. Louis for the Dec. 7 Big 12 championship game against the North division winner, either Nebraska, Colorado or Kansas State.

Texas could even advance with a loss to Kansas and a win against A&M, but that would put the Longhorns' fate in a progression of six tiebreakers.

"For us, we're at the head of the southern division right now, but we have to win out. We don't have any choice, in my opinion," said Texas coach John Mackovic. "Oklahoma and A&M, either one of them could get hot. Even though we are in the driver's seat, we are definitely not without some backseat drivers. There are some people in a position to make a move."

Mackovic said Kansas will present numerous problems ranging from a stout running attack led by June Henley (132 yards per game) to the possibility of snow in Lawrence, Kan., Saturday afternoon.

It's just the third meeting between the teams and the first since 1938.

"Normally, you would play a team for the first time as a non-conference game early in the season, but they haven't played us either," Mackovic said. "It's tough to win on the road this late in the season, so we'll have to play well."

Players said it won't be difficult to get up for a Kansas team they haven't seen or heard much about this season following their emotional victory at Tech.

"They haven't seen us or played against us, so both teams will be going into it blind," Brown said. "It will boil down to whoever adapts the best to the weather and the other team's game plan."

Texas defensive players said they gained confidence in stopping the run by holding Tech's Byron Hanspard, then the nation's leading rusher, to just 132 yards, 69 below his average.

"We came out and played our best," Humphrey said. "He ran hard, and we just worked hard as a team to get him contained."

Texas' defense, giving up 204 yards on the ground per game, will have another test in Henley.

"He's a player very much like Hanspard," Mackovic said. "They feed him the ball a lot, and he runs well inside and outside. We'll have to do a lot of the same things against him that we did with Hanspard.

"We can't let him get outside into the running lanes because he's hard to stop in the open field."

McLean, Groom to meet for bi-district six-man crown

McLEAN — McLean's football team, struck by injuries and illness, meets Groom in a six-man bi-district clash Friday night, starting at 7:30 in Lefors.

McLean head coach Jerry Miller is just hoping he can field enough players to have a game.

"If we had to go today, we'd be in trouble," Miller said.

Miller had as many as six players out with the flu. One of his starters, Derek Glass, is out for the season with an elbow separation.

McLean, 6-4 overall, captured the runnerup spot in District 2-1A with a 4-1 record.

The Tigers met 2-1A champion Chillicothe in the season finale last week and dropped a 60-30 decision.

Ike Hanes tossed two touchdown passes for McLean, one to Brett Montgomery for 20 yards and the other one to Jason Hooper for eight yards. Aaron Rice added a 29-yard touchdown run for the Tigers.

Groom (8-2 overall) is on a roll, winning the District 1-1A title with a perfect 5-0 record. In a regular-season game, Groom defeated McLean, 51-7.

In one other six-man playoff game, Miami meets Chillicothe at 7:30 Friday night in Wellington. Both teams have 8-2 records.

The Warriors are in the playoffs for the second consecutive season. After taking the district runnerup spot a year ago behind Samnorwood, Miami win the District 1-1A title this season with a perfect 5-0 record.

In the 11-man ranks, Wheeler takes on Kress at 7:30 Friday night in Clarendon in Class 1A action.

The Mustangs went 5-0 in district play while finishing 7-3 for the season. Kress was runnerup in District 2-1A with a 6-1 mark. Overall, the Kangaroos were 9-1.

Wheeler, the District 1-1A champs, missed out on the playoffs a year ago.

PHS cagers tip off season

PAMPA — Two seniors, three juniors, three sophomores and not much size make up the early roster for defending state champion Pampa going into the season basketball opener today against Denison.

"We're so little this season we consider ourselves all post players," joked Harvesters' head coach Robert Hale as the team prepared to leave for Dallas and Reunion Arena where the 2:30 p.m. opener will be played. "We better keep our guns loaded and be ready to go for this one. Denison isn't real big, but they're not small either. They've got three or six-foot-three kids."

With returning starters Devin Lemons and J.J. Mathis on the football team, the Harvesters will look to 6-2 senior August Larson for leadership in this first game. Larson, who was elected team captain, started part-time for the Harvesters last season.

"August is an all-around good player. He's good on both offense and defense and can rebound," Hale said. "He'll play both the guard and wing positions."

Senior Kaleb Meek along with juniors Gabe Wilbon and Jamarious Osborne will work the inside for the Harvesters. All three players are around the 6-foot-three mark.

"Gabe is a letterman and one of our outstanding defensive players. He's been really coming along in our scrimmages," Hale said.

In the backcourt, the Harvesters are missing senior guard Lynn Brown, who will be out an indefinite period of time after undergoing recent knee surgery. Brown was a parttime starter a year ago. Mathis joins Brown on the injured list. The 5-11 senior isn't expected to join the the basketball team until around Christmas time after sustaining a broken leg in football.

Shannon Reed, a junior, and Shawn Young, a sophomore, are in the backcourt.

"Shawn has really improved in our scrimmages," Hale said. "He's a good ballhandler."

Hale said the six top players will be backed up by a pair of sophomores, center-forward Zane Powers and guard Leo Ramirez.

"We call them 'Mutt & Jeff.' Zane is 6-3 and Leo is 5-3, maybe 5-4," Hale said.

Today's game will be aired on KGRO radio in Pampa.

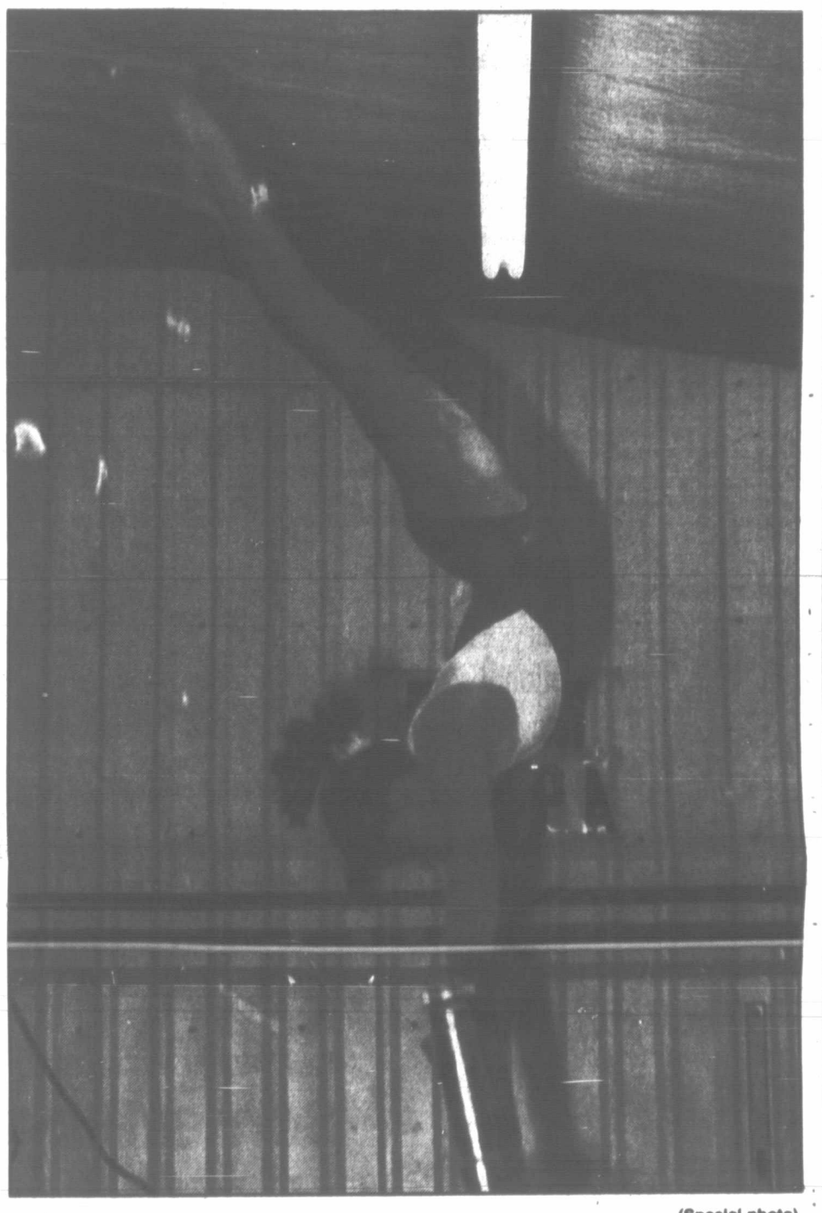

"Denison was very interested in playing us. They've got high expectations for their program. They thought playing us in a place like Reunion Arena would be a pretty good deal," Hale added.

A win over Denison would be Hale's 455th career victory as a coach. He was the Texas Association of Basketball Coaches boys' coach of the year this past season.

The Harvesters will remain for tonight's NBA game between the Dallas Mavericks and Indiana Pacers.

Pampa opens the season at home against Clovis, N.M. on Nov. 22. The Harvesters are ranked sixth in the state in the preseason Texas Association of Basketball Coaches poll.

Cincinnati ranked atop cage poll

By JIM O'CONNELL
AP Basketball Writer

Cincinnati's preseason No. 1 ranking brings the program one step closer to the school's glory days of the early 1960s.

The Bearcats were the runaway No. 1 choice in the preseason college basketball poll Monday, their first time atop the rankings since the 1962-63 season. That was when they were coming off consecutive national championships and four straight Final Four appearances. Cincinnati lost to Loyola, Ill., in the 1963 championship game.

"There's a great sense of history around Cincinnati, but not with the kids," Cincinnati coach Bob Huggins said. "Kids don't remember. The people here certainly remember."

The recent times have been good for Cincinnati, which went 28-4 and fell one win shy of the Final Four last season.

"It doesn't mean anything because we haven't played a game, but it means something to our program because we have worked so hard to rebuild this thing," Huggins said.

Junior forward Danny Fortson leads three returning starters, and a lot is expected from a recruiting class that features three junior college standouts.

Cincinnati received 34 of the 68 first-place votes and 1,641 points. Kansas, which will have to play at least the early part of the season without injured guard Jacque Vaughn, was second with 15 No. 1 votes and 1,548 points, six more than defending national champion Kentucky, which had 13 first-place votes.

Wake Forest, which has the only returning All-America in center Tim Duncan, was fourth with six No. 1 votes and 1,524 points.

UCLA, which will enter the season under 32-year-old interim head coach Steve Lavin, was fifth and was followed in the Top Ten by Utah, Villanova, North Carolina, Michigan and Duke.

Iowa State led the Second Ten and was followed by Syracuse, Arkansas, Fresno State, Massachusetts, Texas, New Mexico, Stanford, Arizona and Clemson. The last five were Boston College, Minnesota, Iowa, George Washington and Marquette.

Kentucky was voted No. 1 in last year's preseason poll, and the Wildcats went on to their sixth national championship. All but two schools in last year's preseason Top 25 — No. 14 Missouri and No. 19 Virginia — advanced to the NCAA tournament.

Eight of the teams in this year's preseason poll weren't in last season's final poll, but all except Fresno State were ranked at some point during the season.

The ranking for Fresno State, which is beginning its second season under coach Jerry Tarkanian, was its first since 1984.

Massachusetts was No. 1 in the final poll last season, and the Minutemen were beaten by Kentucky in the national semifinals. Mississippi State, which lost to Syracuse in the other Final Four semifinal, lost all five starters and didn't receive a single point in the preseason poll.

Adversity gets Cowboys going

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING, Texas (AP) — There's nothing like a little adversity to get the Dallas Cowboys to play like defending Super Bowl champions should.

Dallas improved its record to 6-4 Sunday after a 1-3 start with a 20-17 overtime win in San Francisco thanks to Chris Boniol's 29-yard field goal. The Cowboys trail Philadelphia and Washington, both weekend losers, by only a game.

"I would have been skewered if we lost that one," said quarterback Troy Aikman.

Philadelphia beat Dallas last week on an Aikman interception that backfired into a 104-yard interception and lateral touchdown.

Aikman made another late interception against the 49ers, but he got a second-chance.

Linebacker Fred Strickland's interception of Elvis Grbac on the next play set Aikman up for his game-tying touchdown pass to tight end Eric Bjornson.

Then the Cowboys won in overtime with Barry Switzer hugging Aikman until his quarterback produced a big smile. Switzer got some of Aikman's eyeblack on his face and shirt.

"The win meant a lot to both of us," Switzer said. "We had lost to them the last three times. A coach and a quarterback have a lot in common."

"We had to win this game," said guard Nate Newton. "Lose this one and drop back to .500 and it might have been all over."

Particularly with the vastly improved Green Bay Packers coming to town next Monday night.

"We've got the playoffs in our sights now," Newton said. "And I don't care where we have to play it, frozen tundra of Lambeau Field or 3-Com Park again, I don't care. We just have to keep winning."

The win proved costly for the Cowboys. Switzer said Monday that free safety Brock Marion broke a shoulder blade and could miss several weeks.

"I had one of those things once and it was two weeks before I could even raise my arm," Switzer said.

Safety Bill Bates and backup center Clay Shiver sustained concussions but both were expected to play against the Packers. Switzer said he also expected wide receiver Kevin Williams, who has missed three weeks with an ankle injury, to be ready for Green Bay.

Williams is needed because of the experiment using Deion Sanders at wide receiver. Switzer said Sanders broke off his route on Aikman's late interception.

"Deion should have moved inside on the route," Switzer said. "It takes time to learn to play that position."

Switzer gave the team off until Wednesday.

"Green Bay will come at us hard," Switzer said. "I know we had to drive 93 yards late in the game to win the last time we faced them."

Sound like an odd idea? Perhaps a better question may be: How exactly does a business perspective make the hospital work better?

First, like many businesses, we're evaluated by third-party organizations. This helps us make improvements to bring you better care.

Secondly, we ask our patients for feedback. You see, this helps us make people feel more comfortable and cared for here at Columbia.

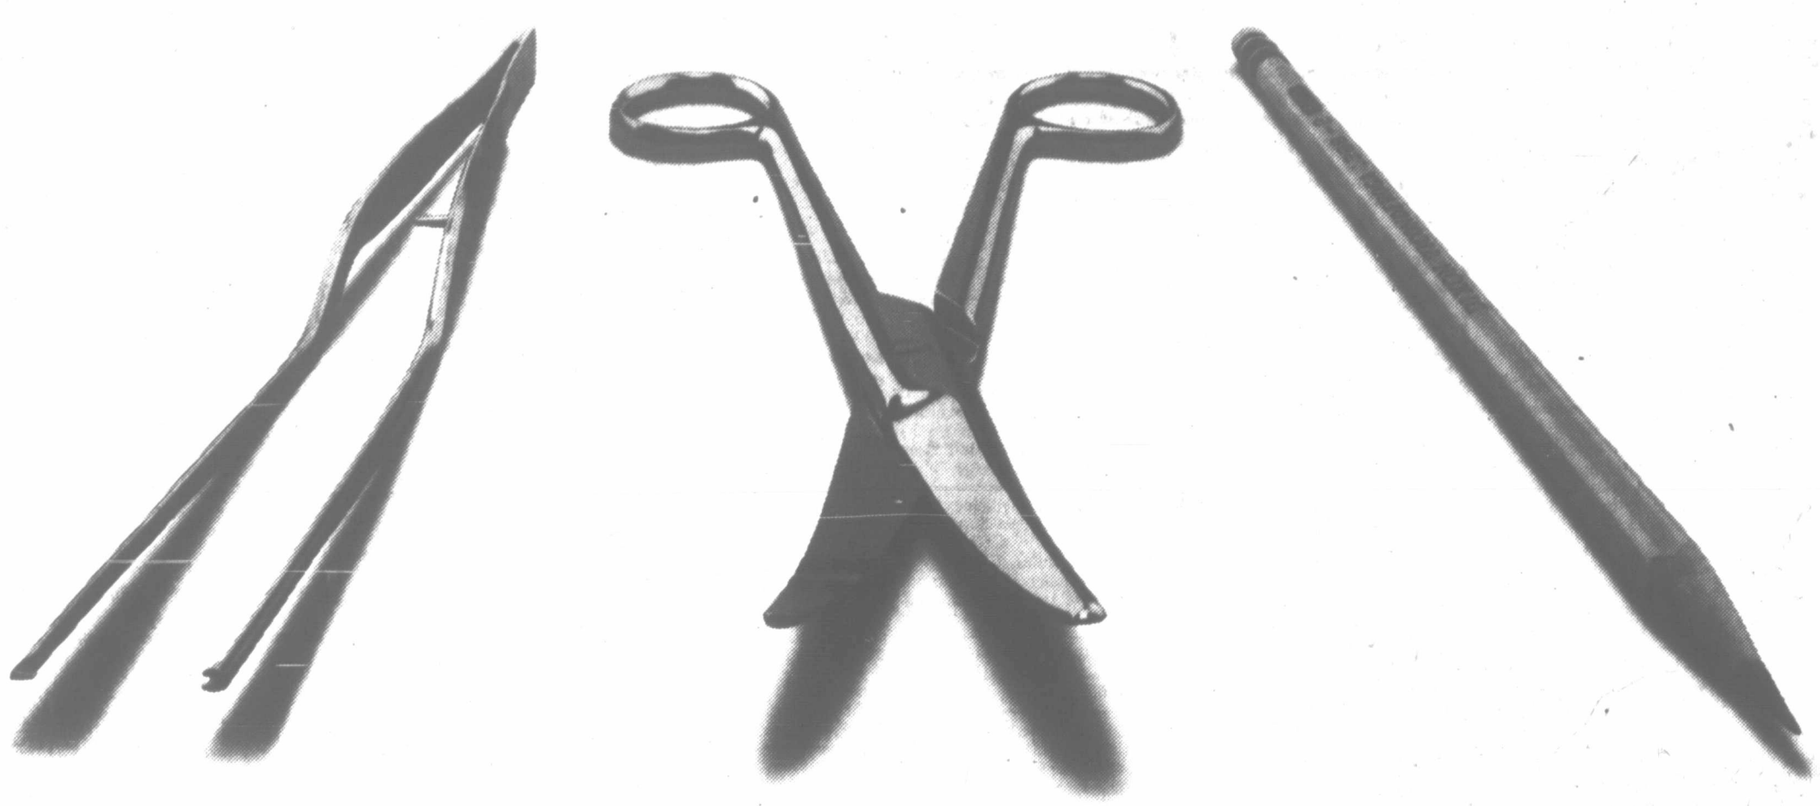

Lastly, we look for ways to be more efficient so we can bring you affordable medical care.

So, whether you're looking at provider options on your healthcare plan, facing an emergency or looking for a physician, choose Columbia.

To find out more, you can look us up on the net at http://www.columbia.net or you can just give us a call at 1-800-COLUMBIA.

COLUMBIA™

Healthcare has never worked like this before.

Forceps... Scissors... No. 2 pencil. (Hmm, what would happen if someone ran a hospital like a business?)
