Clinton fends off limits

Senate rejects bid to bar troop deployments

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton fended off a challenge to his powers as commander in chief Tuesday night as the Senate rejected a Republican effort to bar U.S. troops from serving under a foreign commander.

By a vote of 65-33, the Senate turned aside a measure that would have prohibited spending defense dollars on any United Nations operation in which U.S. soldiers were under the operational command of a foreign officer.

Instead, lawmakers voted overwhelmingly for a non-binding resolution calling on the president to consult with Congress before placing any troops under foreign command and asking for a report within 48 hours.

It adopted, 96-2, a measure stating the sense of the Senate that U.S. troops "must be under the operational control of qualified commanders; and must have clear, effective and robust command and control arrangements; appropriate rules of engagement; and

Oilers issue's hot

HOUSTON — In a head-on collision between the family values of today's sensitive man and the macho work ethic of pro football, a citywide furor unfolded over the Houston Oilers' threat to discipline starting offensive right tackle David Williams, who missed a game last Sunday because he stayed with his wife for the birth of their first child the previous evening. Callers jammed radio talk shows here to vent their views. The Oilers, apparently sensing a public-relations disaster in the making, had appeared to be backing off their threat to dock Williams $125,000. But late Tuesday, the team announced it was withholding Williams' pay for the game.

Tainted indictment?

AUSTIN — Prosecutors said Tuesday a legal error may require the dismissal of criminal charges against U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison and over 500 other indictments, including that of convicted killer Kenneth McDuff. But Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earle vowed to take Mrs. Hutchison's case before a second grand jury if the indictments are dismissed./5B

Temperatures plummet; hard rains, hail pound city

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff writer

Inclement weather blew into Midland Monday evening dumping almost an inch of rain on the city and causing the temperatures to drop some 20 degrees from the norm on Tuesday.

But, a National Weather Service spokesman said the storms and cooler weather should start its move out of the area tonight.

The spokesman said the rainy, cold weather resulted from an upper-level disturbance moving into the area from the west and combining with an abundant amount of moisture from the Gulf of Mexico kicking the thunderstorms into gear.

The spokesman said the storms had been lingering to

House pushes stake in heart of SSC project

■ Vote deals potentially fatal blow to beleaguered super collider program.

By Michael Wines
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The House pushed a stake through the heart of the $11 billion Superconducting Super Collider program Tuesday, voting emphatically, for the second time since June and the third time in 16 months, to reject financing for the vast Texas atom-smasher.

Gov. Ann Richards made a round of last-minute phone calls seeking support for the project.

Each time, the Senate has rescued the project, which already has cost $2 billion, from the House attempts to kill it. But after Tuesday's 264-to-159 vote on a crucial procedural vote in the House, its most important advocate in the Senate, J. Bennett Johnston, said the project appeared to be lost.

"The House is wrong, but they have a right to be wrong," said Johnston, D-La. "Their message on deficit reduction and the Superconducting Supercollider was clear and unmistakable." The Senate, he said, "must find a way to accommodate this message."

Johnston called the vote "a sad day for science," adding that the demise of the project called into question the na-

Draft turns Lutherans to sex wars

By David Briggs
Associated Press writer

Masturbation is healthy, the Bible supports homosexual unions and teaching teens how to use condoms to prevent disease is a moral imperative, says a task force leading the nation's largest Lutheran body into the sex wars.

Four years in the making, a draft statement going before the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America declares that the core of human sexuality should be loving, committed relationships — and not limited to heterosexual marriages.

"It is the binding commitment, not the license or ceremony, that lies at the heart of biblical understandings of marriage," says the statement. "In those circumstances where a legal marriage is not feasible, communities of faith may need to consider other ways of publicly affirming and communally supporting a loving, binding commitment between two people."

Forum's message: Disabled workers often have job skills

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

Kenneth Chandler teaches health and spelling to fourth-, fifth- and sixth-graders in Garden City. By his own description, he's just another teacher and member of the community.

"I'm not treated any different and I don't feel any different," said Chandler, a quadriplegic.

Nevertheless, Chandler said he recognizes a misconception some people — including potential employers — have of the disabled.

"They don't understand that we're just as capable as anyone else," he said.

To spread the word that disabled individuals can be capable employees, a forum will be held next week to guide employers on how to find such qualified job applicants who may have been previously overlooked.

Bosnia's 3 factions exchange prisoners

SARAJEVO, Bosnia and Herzegovina (NYT) — After 18 months of prison camp abuses, the three warring armies in Bosnia on Tuesday began a prisoner exchange involving more than 6,400 people, most of them civilian men who were seized as hostages, to prevent them becoming combatants in the war, or simply as targets for revenge.

The exchange, organized by the International Committee of the Red Cross, is designed to all but empty a score of prisons and detention centers across this former Yugoslav republic. If successful, the operation would sharply curtail a pattern of abuses, including summary executions, beatings and near-starvation diets, that has been condemned by international human rights groups.

Western television crews covering the release of more than 700 Muslim men from a Croatian prison camp at Gabela, south of Mostar, relayed pictures showing lines of gaunt-looking men with shaven heads climbing aboard trucks that were to carry them to a rendezvous point at the battlefront.

There, the Muslim prisoners were to be exchanged for over 300 Croatian prisoners held in camps run by the Muslim-led Bosnian government. On Wednesday, and over the next two weeks, the Red Cross hopes to broaden the exchange to include 4,500 more prisoners held by Bosnian and Croatian forces, as well as 900 detainees to be swapped by the Bosnian government forces and Serbian nationalists.

As the prisoners from the Gabela camp boarded the trucks, one of the Muslim detainees, Mesud Bjelic, told a Reuters correspondent that conditions were "very ugly, worse than hell."

Israel frees long-held Palestinian commander

JERUSALEM (NYT) — In a gesture to the Palestine Liberation Organization that was seen as a harbinger of a possible mass release of prisoners, Israel on Tuesday freed the Palestinian prisoner it has held the longest, 23 years.

It was the first release since the agreement on Palestinian autonomy signed last month. Israeli officials called it a confidence-building measure that could increase support for the accord in the occupied territories.

Palestinians said the prisoner, Salim Zreii, 50, had been a commander in the mainstream Fatah group of Yasser Arafat and was considered the leader of the nearly 11,000 Palestinians held in Israeli jails.

Arafat had reportedly asked Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin to release Zreii, who had been sentenced to life imprisonment in 1970 after being caught trying to infiltrate into Israel by sea. The Defense Ministry said Zreii had escaped in 1969 from the Gaza Strip, where he had carried out several attacks on soldiers, though none were hurt, and had killed a Palestinian and planned other slayings.

"Since the PLO in Tunis has not carried out terrorist attacks since the signing of the agreement, Zreii could be freed," said Oded Ben-Ami, a spokesman for the Defense Ministry.

After Zreii's release at the northern end of the Gaza Strip, he was given a hero's welcome.

Top commander sets limits on U.S. forces in Somalia

MOGADISHU, Somalia (NYT) — The top United States military commander in Somalia said Tuesday that American soldiers would not join United Nations forces in patrolling the streets of this city or in seeking to disarm any of the country's warring factions.

Outlining further limits that are being imposed on U.S. military operations here, the commander, Maj. Gen. Thomas H. Montgomery, also said the main mission of the American contingent would be to defend U.S. soldiers and their military compounds.

He added that many of the 3,600 marines dispatched to the waters off Somalia would come ashore in the coming weeks to augment a U.S. Army force already swelling beyond 10,000 troops.

A secondary task of helping to open supply routes in Mogadishu will be carried out by American soldiers only if their help is needed by the United Nations, although some independent efforts may be carried out on the outskirts of the capital, the American commander said.

As sketched by senior U.S. and U.N. military officials, including the general, the operation is notably narrower than that described in Washington less than two weeks ago, when Pentagon officials suggested that the armored forces being dispatched to Somalia would provide for a more regular American military presence in the Mogadishu area.

Speculation grows as Haitian blockade begins

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (NYT) — People familiar with Haiti's economy say that the international naval blockade that began on Tuesday may cause severe damage but that it is uncertain whether the hardships will force the military leaders to restore democracy.

Concerns about the impact of the embargo grew as an international flotilla, including six warships from the United States, gathered on the hazy blue horizon off the coast to prevent fuel and arms from entering Haiti.

The sanctions were approved by the U.N. Security Council last week in an effort to force the military to allow the return of the elected president, the Rev. Jean-Bertrand Aristide.

In the first action of the blockade, the U.S. Navy frigate Klakring stopped the cargo ship San Antonio on Tuesday, the Defense Department said in Washington. The ship, registered in Belize and bound for Haiti, carried cement, which is not prohibited under the embargo, the Pentagon said.

Diplomats and Haitian economists estimate that without rationing, the country's oil supply could last 6 to 10 weeks. During a similar embargo this summer, draconian conservation stretched supplies dramatically.

If many Haitians in the capital are worried about possible violence if the military retaliates against its enemies because of the blockade, development experts and others say the embargo could pose dangers for many in the countryside even without more bloodshed.

"I was talking to a priest in the northwest the other day, and he told me that if they are going to blockade this country he hopes they send a lot of wood," said Chris Conrad, the director of CARE's relief programs in Haiti. "When I asked him, 'Wood?,' he said, 'because that's what you'll need to build all of the coffins.'"

The arid northwest is the poorest region of Haiti, which is the hemisphere's poorest country. Conrad, whose organization feeds 620,000 people in Haiti at least one meal a day, said that after two years of political turmoil and international isolation, many in the region, particularly women and children, were barely holding on to life.

"Anything that comes down the pike at this point, be it measles or diarrhea or upper respiratory disease," he said, "the kids up there who have very little resistance already are just going to be wiped out."

Like others, Conrad said provisions in the embargo that allow relief supplies to enter Haiti would be of limited consequence because transportation will soon be frozen as the fuel supply dries up.

Alberto Favilla, a former World Bank economist who led efforts to draw up a recovery program for Haiti that is to begin once Aristide returns, said: "Because of all this country has been through recently, essential inputs like spare parts, pesticides, fertilizers and drugs have reached the bottom already. This new embargo doesn't have to go very much further to paralyze the whole country. The only remaining question is the power of the army to suppress opposition by threatening to kill everybody."

During the last two years, he said, Haiti's economy had shrunk by more than 15 percent.

Since its September 1991 coup against Aristide, the army has proven highly effective at intimidation. Several hundred people are thought to have been killed in the coup, and many more have perished since, either as a direct result of army terror or lost at sea in attempts to flee the country. The violence of the past two years led 40,000 Haitians to flee the country in a chaotic rush.

VOTE: Senate rejects bid to cap powers

clear and unambiguous mission statements."

Sponsoring this measure were Sens. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., and John Warner, R-Va. Sens. Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., and Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, were the only opponents.

The action, while a triumph for Clinton, was a prelude to a sterner challenge to his war-making powers expected later in the week by Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan.

The White House continued to negotiate with Dole on measures requiring prior congressional authorization for the use of the military in Haiti and Bosnia.

Congressional dissatisfaction with the administration's foreign policymaking has fueled Senate efforts to curb the president's power.

"I think the administration has been given a warning light," Nunn said of the debate and subsequent votes.

Meanwhile, the U.S. Navy said it stopped and boarded a Belizian ship off the coast of Haiti on Tuesday afternoon, the first such action since the reimposition of an oil and weapons embargo against Haiti at midnight Monday.

The master of the boarded ship, who said he was carrying cement, cooperated with the Navy and was allowed to proceed to the Turks and Caicos Islands, officials reported.

The Senate spent much of the past two days debating the president's right to place U.S. troops under the control of foreign commanders, with the arguments crossing party lines.

"I don't see how you can prospectively tell the commander in chief what he can do with armed forces," said Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz.

Nunn, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said, "We ought to say, 'Mr. President, slow down, slow down. We don't think you've thought through this.'"

But Nunn also said, "We should say to ourselves, the Senate of the United States, 'Slow down, you're about to alter the balance of power between the president and the Congress.'"

The White House was negotiating with Dole in an effort to modify his amendment that would restrict spending for American forces in Haiti unless Congress approves.

"I want to give the president the benefit of the doubt, particularly in foreign policy, so we can come to closure on some agreement," the Senate Republican leader said. "If not, we'll just have the debate and have a vote up or down on the amendments as they're presently drafted."

It was the second time in a week that the White House found itself fending off a single senator and his effort to restrict presidential authority.

Last week, it was Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., and Somalia.

Republican Sen. Arlen Specter of Pennsylvania said the provisions were more restrictive than the War Powers resolution, which Congress passed 20 years ago over President Nixon's objections.

That resolution requires a president to get House and Senate approval if U.S. forces are to remain longer than 90 days in "situations where imminent involvement in hostilities is clearly indicated."

"There is a real danger that the Senate, the Congress, may be going too far in the passions of the moment," Specter said.

But Specter also blamed the Clinton administration for creating a foreign policy vacuum.

RAINS: Storms to move on

the east of the area for four days before settling into the Midland area and bringing the showers along.

The upper level disturbance and cold front collided over Midland around 6 p.m. Monday and likely will continue causing showers and cooler weather until late this evening, he said.

Between Monday evening and Tuesday evening, about an inch of rain was recorded at the National Weather Service offices at Midland International Airport.

Tuesday the NWS offices were pelted with 1-inch hailstones. Marble-size hail was reported in the downtown Midland area that afternoon. The spokesman said wind gusts were measured at 43 mph during the height of the storms.

Midland County was under a tornado watch from about 12:45 p.m. until 5 p.m. Tuesday. A tornado watch indicates conditions are favorable for tornadic activity.

A downpour just before noon Tuesday flooded a number of Midland streets and slowed lunchtime traffic. The westbound lane on Loop 250 between A and Garfield streets was congested with stop-and-go traffic as rainwater filled low-lying areas.

Around 1 p.m. Tuesday, vehicles traveling on Scharbauer Drive between A and Big Spring streets moved slowly as the rainwater drained into Scharbauer draw, which was filled almost to capacity, according to a motorist.

The intersection at Scharbauer Drive and A Street was covered with about 2 feet of running water flowing into the drainage area. Residential areas did not escape the flooding streets.

The 900 block of Douglas Street was covered in water as was most of A Street between Scharbauer Drive and Wadley-Barron Park.

Several street lights were down during and after the heavy rains Tuesday including the lights at the intersection of Midland Drive and Illinois Avenue.

Midland Traffic Engineer Coordinator Gary Saunders said about 12 traffic lights went down around the city during the rain. He said eight of those could be attributed to bulbs burning out and the others to various malfunctions.

Saunders said heavy rain can cause the bulbs to go out because, although the bulbs are sealed within the signal heads, the moisture can seep into the head and damage the wiring or the bulb.

Technicians were still out after 5 p.m. Tuesday repairing three traffic lights, Saunders indicated. But, he said the malfunctions are normal and are remedied quickly.

Although the rain is forecast to remain this afternoon, the lower temperatures should begin to swing back to the normal range later tonight or early Thursday as the storm system moves out of the area, the NWS spokesman indicated.

Today will continue to be mostly cloudy with a 50 percent chance of rain. The high will be between 55-60 and winds will be northeast at 15-20 mph. Tonight should be mostly cloudy with a 30 percent chance of rain and a low near 45.

Thursday should be cloudy in the morning, becoming partly cloudy by afternoon, with a high near 60.

After an overnight low of 58, Tuesday's high reached 63, compared to the record high for that date of 90 set in 1936. The record low was 35 set in 1976.

STAKE: Vote a blow to beleaguered project

tion's commitment to expensive scientific research of all kinds.

Opponents of the program were jubilant, but skeptical that Johnston has given up the fight.

"We're on about the fifth paragraph of the obituary," said one of the program's leading critics, Rep. Sherwood Boehlert, R-N.Y. "I'd be very surprised," he added, if the battle does not go on.

Some supporters predicted that the supercollider's legions of corporate and political backers would mount at least one more effort to save the project that is being built under the plains in Waxahachie, Texas, which is south of Dallas.

"Something you learn quickly around here is that nothing ever dies," said Rep. George E. Brown Jr., D-Calif., who backs the big science project.

Tuesday's vote left Brown and his allies a breath of hope because it turned, at least in part, on complex procedural issues rather than substance.

At issue was whether the House should give its final OK to a bill allotting $22.5 billion for hundreds of water and energy projects around the country, including $640 million that the Senate had approved for continued construction of the supercollider.

House supporters of the project knew they lacked the votes to keep the $640 million allotment in the bill, and so they tried to buy time by sending the measure back to a House-Senate committee.

The Tuesday vote turned back that effort, too. Minutes later it did vote to ship the bill back to the House-Senate panel — but with orders that financing for the supercollider be removed. That proposal passed, 242-143.

A leading critic of the project in the Senate, Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., said the House votes were "encouraging, but not conclusive." The supercollider cannot be certified dead until the House disposes of the entire $22.5 billion water and energy bill, he said.

Nonetheless, the noises emanating from the House sounded a lot like death rattles for the supercollider, a program already in serious peril from staggering cost overruns, mismanagement, its own visibility and the growing political impetus to cut federal spending.

When it was first conceived in 1982, proponents said the project would cost $4.5 billion and stand as a global symbol of American technological supremacy. Instead, after repeated redesigns and additions that more than doubled its cost, it has become a potent reminder of the nation's wasted fiscal muscle.

Critics did not argue Tuesday that the supercollider was bad science or even a waste of money. What killed the program was their assertion that the taxpayers could no longer afford it.

"This may be a good program," said Rep. Sam Coppersmith, D-Ariz. "I don't dispute its merits. But there is no easy way to cut this budget."

If the vote stands, construction on the supercollider will finally come to a halt. As first envisioned, the supercollider was to be a 54-mile oval, big as a submarine and deep beneath the Earth, that would serve as a sort of race track for tiny atomic particles called protons.

BEATING: Another videotape prosecution fails

of the first Rodney King beating trial: another failed prosecution based on dramatic, presumably ironclad video evidence.

A vast majority of the public was left asking: What went wrong? Is seeing no longer believing?

The jury did find Williams and Watson guilty of several reduced charges and resumed deliberations Tuesday on two undecided counts: an attempted premeditated murder charge against Williams, one of the most severe charges carrying a maximum life prison term, and a lesser count against Watson of assault on another truck driver at the start of the 1992 riots.

"We find ourselves outraged by these verdicts, as much as we were when the Simi Valley courthouse jury acquitted the four Los Angeles police officers who beat King," The Press-Courier of Oxnard said in an editorial Tuesday. "Justice is supposed to be blind. But not that blind."

Legal experts were more understanding. They said Tuesday that videotapes are not necessarily the smoking guns of evidence. Prosecutors also must show intent to commit a crime.

"The only lesson to be learned from this," said UCLA law professor Peter Arenella, "is that a videotape can't be your whole case."

In specific intent crimes such as attempted murder, jurors must decide what the defendant was thinking when the crime was committed.

"A videotape is not always helpful in proving what was in the defendants' mind," Arenella said.

As defense attorneys frequently complain, you can't cross-examine a videotape. But both defense and prosecution can interpret and analyze to the point of total confusion.

The prosecutorial losses in high profile videotape cases are piling up.

Before King and Denny there was the 1984 cocaine trafficking trial of automobile industrialist John Z. DeLorean. DeLorean, whose company was in financial trouble, was videotaped viewing a suitcase full of cocaine and declaring, "It's better than gold."

Prosecutors said the tape proved he wanted to sell drugs to save his company. Defense attorneys said the tape showed a desperate man trying to humor unscrupulous government agents who posed as drug dealers to catch a celebrity.

The jury acquitted DeLorean.

A videotape also figured heavily in the 1991 trial of Soon Ja Du, a Korean grocer charged with fatally shooting a black teen-ager she suspected of shoplifting.

The store's security camera provided a blurry videotape that was analyzed and re-analyzed in the trial. Jurors rejected a murder charge and convicted the woman of voluntary manslaughter. The judge gave her no jail time, saying the tape showed the shooting was provoked and possibly accidental.

"It's not the big cases that are won on videotapes. It's the smaller cases, the bank robberies," said Laurie Levenson, a former federal prosecutor and professor at Loyola University Law School.

Jurors, she said, are skeptical about what they see on TV. "People blur the line between fantasy and reality. They always wonder what they're not seeing."

The most severe charges against Williams and Watson required formation of specific intent. Attempted murder requires that the defendant formed the intent to kill the victim even if he did not succeed. Aggravated mayhem requires an intent to permanently maim or disable a person.

The latter charge, Arenella notes, was enacted to deal with a rapist who cut off the arms and legs of his victim, an intentional maiming.

"The videotape shows that Damian Williams intended to throw a brick at Denny but it's open to interpretation whether he intended to cause him permanent disability," Arenella said.

Thus, the jury reduced the charge to simple mayhem.

Whatever the risks, experts agree that videotape technology is in the courts to stay.

"Videotapes can be very useful to prosecutors," Levenson said, noting that while the first Rodney King jury acquitted four policemen of assault, a jury in the federal civil rights trial of the same officers convicted two of them of violating King's civil rights.

SKILLS: Many with disabilities can fill jobs

(From 1A)

"What we're trying to do is get a qualified person with a disability an interview for a job opening," said Dale Stice, local chairman of the steering committee for Project Jobs. "People with disabilities have not really been able to access the work force."

More than two-thirds of the approximately 40 million Americans with a disability are unemployed, Stice said.

Many times, the disabled have been relegated to menial jobs in sheltered workshops for low wages, he said.

"This segment of our society has been historically discriminated against. There's a mind-set out there that a person who's disabled is not able to work," Stice said.

But many disabled individuals have the qualifications an employer wants. Sometimes, agencies that make referrals for jobs eliminate disabled workers because of their disabilities, Stice said.

Project Jobs' aim is to set up a data base between employers and potential disabled employees and let the employer decide who's qualified, he said.

"We have a vast untapped resource . . . in the form of people who are ready, willing and able to work," Stice said.

Interested employers in Midland and the Permian Basin are invited to attend the free forum and breakfast from 7 a.m. to 9 a.m. on Oct. 27 at the Plaza Club.

Project Jobs seeks employers who pay at least minimum wage, provide career opportunities and benefits, and, most importantly, allow an employee to work in an integrated environment.

Employers who plan to attend are asked to make reservations by Friday by calling 684-4356.

The event, a project of the Texas Planning Council for Developmental Disabilities and the Texas Association for Retarded Citizens, will feature State Rep. Tom Craddick, television news anchor Jay Hendricks, and disabled employees and their employers.

The local program is supported by a committee of volunteers from the Midland Association for Retarded Citizens, Permian Basin businesses, educators, adult service agencies and other non-profit groups.

DRAFT: Report praises 'created goodness of sexuality'

(From 1A)

Associated Press — is to be sent later this week to 19,000 pastors and other church leaders in the 5.2 million-member denomination.

Local churches have until next June to respond. A second draft, taking the response into account, will be prepared for a churchwide assembly of lay and clergy delegates in 1995.

The report is the ELCA's first attempt to grapple with sexuality since it was formed in 1988 by the merger of the Lutheran Church in America, the American Lutheran Church and the Association of Evangelical Lutheran Churches.

Foreshadowing current U.S. ferment over gay rights, mainline Protestant denominations have been convulsed in recent years over demands by gay and lesbian members that churches accord them formal acceptance and the right of ordination. The United Church of Christ is the only major Protestant denomination to permit the ordination of homosexuals.

In the last two years, the Episcopal Church, the United Methodist Church and the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) have rejected proposals to loosen church strictures on homosexuality.

But the issue has no more vanished from the sanctuaries than from the streets, as attested by the raucous protests by gay church members and their supporters after the votes. The Methodists, Episcopalians and Presbyterians all are engaged in new studies of homosexuality.

Within the ELCA, the 67-member Conference of Bishops has already expressed reservations about the report. The ELCA falls on the moderate end of mainline Protestantism but is more liberal than the 2.6 million-member Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod.

A motion earlier this month to postpone work on the sexuality statement indefinitely was withdrawn, but bishops expressed concern the proposal could threaten the new denomination's unity.

The wide-ranging report — developed after what task force members said was probably the most "impassioned discussion of sexuality in the history of American Lutheranism" — begins with a confession that the church has too often overlooked "the created goodness of sexuality."

For example, the task force urges children, adolescents and adults to learn the pleasures their bodies can give them. "Masturbation, a means of self-pleasuring, is generally appropriate and healthy," the task force said.

In many places, the report upholds traditional church teachings. Marriage is affirmed as a divine and blessed estate, and teenagers are encouraged to be chaste until they enter "a permanent commitment."

The report attacks adultery, promiscuity, sexual abuse, prostitution, anti-gay violence, pornography and the exploitation of sexuality in advertising and entertainment.

"This is not anything goes. There are some things we stand against," the Rev. Karen Bloomquist, director of the sexuality study, said in an interview Tuesday.

Bloomquist said the statement balances tradition with the contemporary realities of sexual relationships among unmarried people, heterosexual and homosexual.

The report cited certain "moral imperatives," including sex education regarding such traditional concerns as monogamy and abstinence while adding "preventive practices such as the use of condoms."

Bloomquist said one group the task force kept in mind while urging the church to affirm relationships between unmarried people was those elderly couples who cohabit but remain single for economic reasons.

Homosexuals in particular "have heard much condemnation but little life-giving Gospel addressed to us as gay and lesbian Christians," the report said.

The task force said it recognizes many Lutherans take literally the biblical condemnations of homosexuality in the books of Leviticus and Romans, and oppose homosexual activity as contrary to God's law.

But the task force urged Lutherans to challenge such attitudes. They argue that "responsible biblical interpretation" strongly supports the acceptance and even the blessing of committed same-sex unions and emphasizes what they say is the pre-eminent biblical command — to "love your neighbor as yourself."

Ukraine reverses stance on atomic weapons

KIEV, Ukraine (NYT) — In a sharp change of tone, President Leonid Kravchuk said Tuesday that Ukraine may keep some of the nuclear weapons it inherited from the Soviet Union, and he accused the West of not providing enough financial assistance to dismantle the 176 strategic missiles on Ukrainian territory.

Kravchuk's statement, that Ukraine may keep 46 SS-24 missiles, came only five days before Secretary of State Warren Christopher is to arrive in Kiev for talks in which Ukraine's nuclear weapons will feature high on the agenda.

Previously, Kravchuk had repeated his intent to dismantle all nuclear weapons on its territory, ratify the 1991 Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty (Start) and become a non-nuclear state.

Though Kiev has pressed the issue of financial compensation before, the threat of not complying with its agreement to disarm is new.

Ukraine is the third-largest nuclear power, with 1,656 warheads, larger than the combined arsenals of France, Britain and China. The SS-24 missiles, which can carry 10 warheads each, are the most modern weapon in the old Soviet nuclear arsenal.

Kravchuk made the surprise statement to reporters in the corridors of Parliament during a closed session on national security.

"After the ratification of Start," he said, "we will immediately proceed with the destruction of the 130," a reference to the SS-19s. "But we can approach the remaining 46" — the SS-24s — "from a different standpoint. We can only remove them from active military alert and remove the codes so that they will not be aimed at the United States."

Ukraine's turnaround comes only a month and a half after Russia announced that Ukraine had agreed to transfer all its nuclear weapons to Russia. The agreement fell apart weeks later when the Ukrainian Foreign Ministry insisted that the agreement called for the transfer of only some nuclear weapons to Russia, not all of them.

Since the Russian-Ukrainian disagreement, the Clinton administration has stepped up its contacts with Kiev in an attempt to address Ukraine's security concerns and financial needs.

Two nuclear warheads leak amid customs dispute

MOSCOW (NYT) — Two leaking atomic warheads, described as "on the brink of failure," have been languishing for two weeks in a railroad car on the Russian-Ukrainian border due to a customs dispute, a Russian general complained Tuesday.

The Russians, evidently worried about a radiation spill, have been trying to hustle the warheads out of Ukraine so they can be repaired at a nuclear weapons factory in Russia. But the Ukrainians are demanding that Russia promise to pay compensation to the Ukraine government for the nuclear materials in the warheads.

The disclosure came just as U.S. Secretary of State Warren Christopher is to leave Wednesday to tour former Soviet republics hoping to persuade them to junk most of their atomic weapons. Christopher plans to visit both Ukraine and Russia, as well as Belarus and Kazakhstan, which also have ex-Soviet warheads on their soil.

Colonel-General Yevgeny Maslin, chief of the Defense Ministry's primary department for nuclear ammunition, told the Interfax news agency that the Ukrainians either don't understand the dangers of such "misconduct" with nuclear weapons or else are distracted by "disorder in supreme power echelons."

Interfax said an unspecified quantity of "hydrogen" was found on the two weapons back in January.

If Mozart means smart, what's Rap?

Johann Wolfgang von Goethe, the 19th century German poet, novelist and playwright once characterized as Europe's most celebrated writer, wrote that, "Mozart is the human incarnation of the divine force of creation."

More than a few fans of classical music would readily agree with Goethe's assessment of the great composer, Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart, who left over 600 works when he died in 1791 at the age of 35.

Now, due to an experiment on students at the University of California at Irvine, there is another indication of the composer's "divine force." Researchers there have found that students who are subjected to 10 minutes of Mozart's piano music before intelligence tests score an average of eight to nine points higher than the scores they achieved after listening to a recorded message suggesting that they imagine themselves relaxing in a peaceful garden or to silence.

Although the researchers contend that the test results clearly indicate that listening to Mozart literally made the students smarter, the effects were only temporary. Regardless, the finding, which was to be reported in the British scientific journal Nature, is significant. It could lead to further research into the effects of neural firing patterns in the brain that would potentially benefit mankind.

One troubling aspect of the report left us thinking, however. If it's true that listening to Mozart can make individuals smarter, so to speak, then it understandably follows that listening to some other kinds of music could influence individuals in a negative manner, potentially making them dumber.

Would "rap music" be a candidate for such influence?

Morrison's perspective helps readers see as lion

Until the lion speaks, so the parable goes, the story of the hunt will always favor the hunter.

Author Toni Morrison pursues the hunter and then retools his language to tell her story, proving to us that it is indivisible from our own.

This week, Morrison won the 1993 Nobel Prize in literature.

Morrison, who taught briefly in the mid-1950s at Texas Southern University, is the first African-American and only the eighth woman to win the prize. The last time an American-born author won the prize was in 1962.

Morrison, whose works occupy reading lists for African-American and American literature, is part of the all-too-exclusive literary canon who continues to challenge.

Her stories draw portraits of characters in realistic and fine detail. In The Bluest Eye, both reader and author explore the thoughts of a little black girl who prays for blue eyes. In Beloved, reader and author enter lives haunted by the ghost of a child.

And Morrison stretches the reticent language to communicate with us all — or at least raise necessary questions.

"My work requires me to think about how free I can be as an African-American woman writer in my genderdized, wholly racialized world," she said. "My project rises from delight, not disappointment."

A lion in literature has spoken, and indeed we now can observe the hunt in a truer context.

Vietnamese refugees face harsh future in Hong Kong

The debate over extending diplomatic recognition to Vietnam has focused almost entirely on whether normalizing relations will help or hinder the United States in its search for service personnel missing in action during the war.

Unfortunately, the plight of Vietnamese refugees stranded in Hong Kong has been ignored and perhaps forgotten. There are nearly 200,000 Vietnamese stranded in the British colony, living in dismal conditions and facing an even grimmer future. . . . The refugees are not a British responsibility. The men, women and children who fled Vietnam and landed in Hong Kong are casualties of the war and its aftermath.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, Oct. 20, the 293rd day of 1993. There are 72 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

Twenty years ago, on Oct. 20, 1973, in the so-called Saturday Night Massacre, special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox was dismissed and Attorney General Elliot L. Richardson and Deputy Attorney General William B. Ruckelshaus resigned; the resulting firestorm of criticism prompted appointment of a new special prosecutor, Leon Jaworski.

On this date:

In 1740, Maria Theresa became ruler of Austria, Hungary and Bohemia upon the death of her father, Holy Roman Emperor Charles VI.

In 1803, the U.S. Senate ratified the Louisiana Purchase.

In 1892, the city of Chicago dedicated the World's Columbian Exposition. However, the exposition did not officially open until the following May.

Jersey City mayor works GOP miracles

JERSEY CITY, N.J. — This city is a stone's throw from the Statue of Liberty, but her back is turned from it.

For much of this century, it has been a blue-collar factory town on the west bank of the Hudson River that was ceded to the tired, the poor and the huddled immigrant masses.

Anderson

Corrupt politicians, drugs in the streets and schools so poor that the state had to take them over several years ago made it common for New York-based television stations to cross the Hudson to showcase Jersey City as a tragic example of urban decay and despair.

But things are changing here, and hope is alive — thanks to "a young man who just really came out of nowhere and represents a revolutionary concept for the Republican Party." That's how the high priest of conservatism, Jack Kemp, describes Jersey City Mayor Bret Schundler.

Schundler uses language from street politics to arcane sociological treatises, from bond-trading mechanisms to the Bible, to preach to this overflowing melting pot. But this young mayor has a growing congregation that is not the kind normally found in conservative temples: a lower-to-middle-class population that is 30 percent black, 25 percent Hispanic and 10 percent Asian.

In a special election last November — held to finish the term of the last mayor, who went to prison on fraud charges — Schundler emerged victorious in a field of 19 candidates, becoming the city's first Republican mayor in 75 years.

Democrats called it a fluke and pulled out all the stops to beat him during last May's election. The legendary St. Anthony High School basketball coach from this city, Bobby Hurley Sr., was impressed with Schundler's style, even if Hurley's expectations were humorously humble. "Schundler did a very good job in the few months he was in. He didn't get indicted; he didn't do anything embarrassing. By our standards, that was something," he told us.

Machine politicians unified behind a single Democratic candidate in the general election, bankrolling him with comparatively large political contributions as they dreaded the thought that Schundler would be permanent. But the machine was whipped. Schundler won two-thirds of the vote.

The voters wanted change and they got it. What Schundler and the citizens of his city have already done to turn the place around has been so extraordinary that it bears watching, especially with dozens of other financially beleaguered cities suffering from similar problems.

Schundler has done more than avoid indictment: He has reduced crime, attracted new businesses and jobs, and brought the nearly bankrupt city from a $40 million deficit in November to a surplus by May, resulting in significantly lower property taxes.

He believes this is only the beginning, and aims to be a two-term mayor who makes Jersey City — of all places — "America's Most Lovable City." Schundler has even cynics in the city believing it may have a real future. For conservatives like Kemp, Schundler is "a kind of Lincoln Republican, recognizing that equality of opportunity is what people want."

Schundler's secret weapon may be the local citizens. For one thing, there is a widely respected newspaper, The Jersey Journal, which keeps the mayor honest with solid investigative reporting and an astute political columnist.

The city also happens to be a rap music powerhouse, presided over by Queen Latifah, whose record label and management company feature some of the hottest names.

If these citizens, these ideas and this mayor can make it a success here, then it really may be a new dawn for urban America.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Some Americans forget real role of soldier

WASHINGTON — When Joe Louis was heavyweight champion of the world, he was fed a succession of pipsqueak challengers — Lou Nova, Buddy Baer, Two-Ton Tony Galento — until whoever faced him became known as "the bum of the month."

Safire

Today, the global superpower has been faced with the likes of the Serb Karadzic, the Somalian Aidid and the Haitian Cedras, but those local bums have been belting the musclebound champ all over the ring.

Ringside reaction: blame the president. The old Bush-Baker-Scowcroft team complains of a lack of leadership. This from the outfit that built up Saddam Hussein, derided Yeltsin as a buffoon while trying to save Gorbachev, pretended Bosnia did not exist and assigned the secretive Jonathan Howe to Somalia.

Dolorous legislators are using the moment to snatch more of the war power from the president. Sen. Phil Gramm seizes on the picture of an American body being dragged through the streets to say the Africans committing the atrocity "don't look hungry to the people of Texas" — ignoring the fact that those same food-stealing thugs are the cause of, not the victims of, Somali starvation. By treating Texans as such fools, Gramm removes himself as a serious candidate for national office.

We, the media, hoot at the president for demeaning American power by entering the arena with such puny pugilists. We fault him for not narrowly limiting the missions; for not foreseeing setbacks before we do.

I popped Bill Clinton early and often for meekly going along with John Major's terminal timidity in Bosnia. Even now, as shelling of Sarajevo resumes, our president's refusal to put the "special relationship" on the line to arm Muslims and to airstrike the Serbian artillery is dismaying.

But the problem in using American power, and in defining America's interest, is not President Clinton's seeming discomfort with foreign affairs. At the core of our new impotence is the unwillingness of too many Americans to expend blood and treasure in the establishment of order that protects self-rule beyond our borders.

That inclination to decry the role of "world policeman" has a long tradition here. What is new is the way so many opinion leaders have let the responsible dog be wagged by the emotional tail.

Why? Because the only violence on television we are not inured to is real violence. When Colin Powell saw our "turkey shoot" of Saddam's Republican Guard on live television, he called off the war a day too soon. Pictures of the Somalian starvation, the Bosnian rapine awakened the world conscience; but when the picture of one dead hero in the streets of Mogadishu was seen, the cry went up to "bring our boys home."

They're not "boys"; they are men and women who volunteer to be hired and trained to kill other people when necessary to defend our national interests, our citizens and — yes — our democratic ideals. In Somalia, they were neither humanitarians nor nation-builders; they were an armed force sent to establish the order necessary to stop local bandits from continuing to cause mass starvation.

But when the battered face of an American prisoner is featured on the covers of Time, Newsweek and U.S. News; when the families of casualties are interviewed on television every morning; when a drumbeat of "we're outa there" can be read on op-ed pages and heard on radio talk shows; when this revulsion at the cost of intervention reaches the halls of Congress and is played back on C-Span — how is any American president to assert power?

By doing it with grim efficiency, that's how, and by simultaneously explaining its importance; and ultimately by being successful. Regarding the bum of the month in Haiti: instead of floating out the USS Charlie Rangel, it would help to have a CIA capable of training Haitians in covert action to put the elected president in office. (This time, air cover.)

The goal of intervention anywhere is not to get out; it is to establish order, or to right a wrong, and then to get out. In this, Clinton's instincts are good. He has earned a hearing and a helping hand.

Mergers provide extra money at Christmas

Lance Hefferman is a merger specialist for Afghan, Labrador and Boxer, and he keeps me informed about all the mergers now taking place on Wall Street.

"I'm ready to call it a frenzy," he said. "The goldfish are eating the sharks and the sharks are sucking up the crabs. We're back to the '80s when companies were offering dead dogs for dead cats."

Buchwald

"What is causing it all?"

"Entertainment. Everyone wants a piece of show business because as more workers in the country are laid off, there will be more people watching television. In a few years every person will have access to 500 channels and nobody will be able to leave the house."

"Can the cable industry supply programming for 500 channels?"

"Of course not. That's why the telephone conglomerates are buying movie companies."

"Why are the phone companies so interested in show business?"

"Because they know that the phone industry is dying."

"What will replace it?"

"Voice mail. People will no longer talk directly to each other — they will leave messages on each other's voice mail. There's not enough money in phones any more even though they charge $75 for the first 10 minutes to fix one. But you can make a bundle in cable TV because once the market is sewn up, you can charge anything you want to as long as you give the subscriber a weather channel."

"I notice that Paramount was about to be bought by Viacom. Now Barry Diller of the QVC shopping channel has raised the bid and, instead of Paramount exchanging dead dogs for dead cats, the stockholders are being offered cash by an unfriendly suitor. Was that a dumb move on Paramount's part?"

"It looks that way, but nobody said that the people at Paramount ever knew what they were doing."

"There is a rumor that the telephone company wants to buy Coca-Cola. Any truth to it?"

"The story is all over Wall Street. It appears that one of their engineers has invented a way of sending Coke through the phone system so that it will pour out of the mouthpiece when a person pushes 3 on his phone. If that's true, sales of Coke will triple."

"That's fantastic."

"The phone company also plans to sell air bags for subscribers making long-distance calls from pay booths."

"Are there any other mergers I should keep my eye on?"

"Sony wants to buy Kodak since the Rochester company developed a disposable television set. You can watch three hours of prime time and then toss the set out the window."

"That's unreal. Is there anything holding up the merger?"

"Nothing except that Kodak wants to first merge with the Anti-Trust Division of the Justice Department to give it leverage when it makes a pass at Michael Jackson."

"Tell me something. Do any of these mergers benefit the country?"

"No, but they give people in the merger business some extra change just before Christmas."

U.N.'s envoy to Somalia considers nation in 1 year

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — The U.N.'s special envoy looks at Somalia a year from now and sees a country conducting a census, putting the final touches on a new police and court system and preparing for national elections.

But Jonathan Howe also sees the very real possibility that chaos, civil war and starvation could return to plague the countryside.

The retired American admiral finds himself walking a tightrope in the midst of a raging storm, buffeted by political crosswinds and accusations that the United Nations has bungled the multinational intervention in Somalia since it assumed control from the United States in May.

Still, he remains upbeat, accenting U.N. accomplishments in other parts of the country even as southern Mogadishu remains tense, warlord Mohamed Farrah Aidid continues to churn out anti-U.N. rhetoric, and the United Nations searches for a way out of a quagmire.

"The vast majority of the country does support the United Nations and does want to recover from all of the heartache and pain they've gone through," Howe said in an interview Tuesday.

"Compared with a year ago, there has been amazing progress," he said. "But it's fragile and it could easily go back to where it was."

When foreign troops came to Somalia in December, their mission was to get food past warring clans to the starving. But when 24 Pakistani peacekeepers were killed in ambushes in June, the focus of the mission changed to capturing Aidid and disarming his militia.

The shift in priorities and resulting civilian and troop casualties created an international uproar, leading some countries to question their participation in the operation and, like the United States, distance themselves from the new U.N. policy.

Still, Howe was adamant that one key to the future is making sure those responsible for the deaths of U.N. forces face justice. Since June 5, 76 peacekeepers have died, and the United Nations blames Aidid.

"If there's not a responsible accounting for these attacks against the United Nations, then there is increased potential that his whole country will degenerate back into major clan warfare," Howe said. "And there are implications for the world and how the U.N. conducts its business."

Howe said he hopes Aidid's faction takes advantage of "a window of opportunity" for peace.

"It takes two to have a dialogue and it takes two to have an interest in peace," he said. "Peace does not necessarily serve the interests of those who have attacked us, apparently. I hope it does now."

Russia weighs defensive move in Georgia fight

MOSCOW (NYT) — After an urgent appeal for help from Georgia's embattled leader, Eduard A. Shevardnadze, Russian officials said Tuesday that they were considering joint action with other countries in the Caucasus region to protect Georgia's main supply route from rebel attacks.

But Foreign Minister Andrei V. Kozyrev and Defense Minister Pavel S. Grachev ruled out any direct Russian military intervention in Georgia, where Shevardnadze is caught in a desperate fight for survival against a rebellion led by his archrival, former President Zviad Gamsakhurdia.

As Gamsakhurdia's troops continued their eastward drive, tightening the noose around the capital, Tbilisi, Shevardnadze said on Monday that his army had virtually disintegrated and could no longer fight on its own. He appealed to Russia, Armenia and Azerbaijan for military protection.

Two weeks after they seized the Black Sea port of Poti, Gamsakhurdia's troops, said to number 10,000, moved easily into the road and rail junction of Samtredia on Sunday and are now within a dozen miles of Kutaisi, Georgia's second largest city.

Gamsakhurdia, a Soviet-era dissident and ardent nationalist who became Georgia's first popularly elected president, returned from a two-year exile last month to his stronghold of Mingrelia, in western Georgia. Since Gamsakhurdia's ouster in January 1991, the region has been in open rebellion against Shevardnadze, the former Soviet foreign minister who ended up taking his place as Georgia's head of state.

Gamsakhurdia, who regularly accuses Shevardnadze of being an agent of Moscow, has said in recent interviews that he will not negotiate with his rival, but will press ahead for a military victory.

The Gamsakhurdia onslaught came on the heels of Shevardnadze's painful and humiliating defeat in Abkhazia, the westernmost region of Georgia, where separatist forces last month seized the coastal city of Sukhumi. At the time, Shevardnadze blamed the Russian military for assisting the Abkhazian separatists.

The capture of Poti and Samtredia has put the rebel forces in control of vital supply lifelines to eastern Georgia, as well as to Armenia and Azerbaijan. According to reports from Tbilisi, Georgia now has only a two-week supply of grain.

Denny jury grapples with fear, illness

■ More national news/8B

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The troubled jury deliberations in the Reginald Denny beating case suffered new setbacks Tuesday when one juror was reported to be fearful and two jurors became ill. One of the two saw a doctor.

It was the first day back for the jury after it acquitted two black men of 16 counts and convicted them of reduced charges in attacks during the 1992 riots, including the videotaped beating of Denny, who is white.

The mulitracial jury met for 3½ hours, but was sent back to its hotel after lunch when the illnesses were reported. Deliberations were scheduled to resume this morning.

Supervising Superior Court Judge Cecil Mills emerged from the closed courtroom and said the jurors felt they had been making progress but said they needed rest.

Superior Court Judge John Ouderkirk said through a court spokeswoman he did not know what was ailing the woman juror who sought medical attention.

A second woman juror was examined by a paramedic at the Criminal Courts Building and was found to have very high blood pressure. She declined medical attention, court spokeswoman Jerrianne Hayslett said.

Ouderkirk told attorneys he would reconvene today and "perhaps we'll have a medical update."

Prosecutor Janet Moore said outside court she would seek to use the last remaining alternate juror if it was necessary to remove one of the ill women.

Two jurors were replaced with alternates earlier and each time the judge ordered that deliberations begin over. One juror was replaced when her 11 colleagues complained that she wasn't deliberating, and the other left because of personal problems

Moore said she didn't think deliberations could resume if both sick jurors were lost. The law allows a jury to deliberate with only 11 members if both sides agree.

The jury was trying to decide two remaining deadlocked counts against Damian Williams, 20, and Henry Watson, 29.

The more serious unresolved count was an attempted premeditated murder charge against Williams in the beating of Denny, a white truck driver.

House GOP leaders seek Brown probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Republican leaders on Tuesday joined the call for appointment of a special prosecutor to investigate allegations that Commerce Secretary Ron Brown accepted $700,000 to help lift the U.S. trade embargo against Vietnam.

The FBI and a federal grand jury in Miami are investigating the allegations. Brown has denied them and has said he expects to be "totally exonerated" by the probe.

House Republican Leader Robert Michel, Republican Whip Newt Gingrich and three other Republican lawmakers asked Attorney General Janet Reno in a letter to appoint a special prosecutor to examine the allegations against Brown. The Republicans recommended several legal experts for the job — including Griffin Bell, attorney general in the Carter administration.

"The situation concerning (Brown) cries out for the appointment of a special prosecutor," the letter said. It also was signed by Rep. Henry Hyde of Illinois, chairman of the Republican Policy Committee; Rep. Richard Armey of Texas, chairman of the Republican Conference; and Rep. Dan Burton of Indiana.

"The morass of media reports and rumors about (Brown's) possible actions simply must be cleared up, not only to retain the public's faith in the administration's enforcement of the laws but also in fairness to Mr. Brown himself," the letter said. "He is entitled to something better than prolonged trial by press account."

President Clinton publicly defended Brown several weeks ago after Burton and Rep. Dana Rohrabacher of California, both conservative Republicans, asked for appointment of a special prosecutor.

At that time, Reno said she would not appoint one because as a fellow member of the Cabinet it might appear she has a conflict of interest.

President vows big war against breast cancer

N.Y. Times News Service

Responding to anguished pleas from thousands of women with breast cancer, President Clinton has vowed to take action.

In a meeting on Monday with a delegation from the National Breast Cancer Coalition, an advocacy group for women with breast cancer, he announced that the Department of Health and Human Services would develop a national action plan for preventing and treating breast cancer.

Clinton also said that his administration would work with advocates for breast cancer patients at a conference in December to develop the plan.

"It is important that that plan be fitted into a larger commitment to the health care of Americans," he said, "to put women's health concerns — from research to the development and delivery of health care — on equal footing with men."

The meeting with Clinton and his wife, Hillary, was the latest victory for the growing movement of advocates for women with breast cancer.

By all accounts, the movement has been extraordinarily successful. Within the last few years, Congress has awarded the National Cancer Institute a substantial amount of research funds.

In the current fiscal year, which began Oct. 1, an estimated $262.9 million is designated for breast cancer, up from $197 million in 1993, an increase of 33.5 percent.

By comparison, colorectal cancer will get an estimated $71.3 million, lung cancer will get an estimated $90.3 million and prostate cancer will get $40 million

Task force continues to work

■ Project Awaken members report progress, new ideas for combatting drug abuse in Midland.

By Katherine Poteet
Staff writer

Nearly a year after its start, members of the Project Awaken Task Force reported on its progress and failures Monday during a public forum.

The forum, conducted at City Council chambers, was conducted by Mayor J.D. Faircloth, Judge John Hyde and Claudia Egan, City Council member and chairwoman of Project Awaken.

Faircloth discussed what he considered to be significant recommendations by the special grand jury last year and what action had been taken on them.

Calling the consolidation of the Midland Police Department and the Midland Sheriff's Department "impossible," Faircloth said the two law enforcement agencies were working together more closely since the recommendation had been made.

"I think everyone recognized what the grand jury was trying to say," he said. "And, while a consolidation will never happen without a constitutional amendment, I believe the Police Department and the Sheriff's Office have and will continue to have a good working relationship."

Faircloth also called the recommendation for increased security at the Midland Independent School District a significant recommendation and told the audience that nearly all of the grand jury recommendations concerning MISD had been implemented, including a joint agreement between the district and the Police Department for increased duties for district security officers.

Faircloth also touched on a juvenile curfew and revamping of the juvenile justice system, both of which have not been implemented.

"A curfew is something that has been tried in other cities and it has been challenged as to its constitutionality," he said. "Until that is cleared up, we probably won't have one.

"The recommendations for the juvenile system came out of a frustration with the current system," he said. "However, these recommendations are just not going to happen. The juvenile laws in this country treat juvenile criminals almost as a special class."

Lee High drama students to present 'Blithe Spirit'

Staff report

Lee High School students will present Noel Coward's farce "Blithe Spirit" at 8 p.m. Thursday and Saturday in the school auditorium.

Sean O'Hara performs as Charles Condomine, a man plagued by difficulties with his wives, one of whom is deceased.

Kristen Kirby is Edith, Dayna Lyons plays Ruth, and J'Lynn Wilson is Elvira.

Charles also manages to communicate to the "other world" with the assistance of the zany Madame Arcati (Mindie Helvie). With Madame Arcati's help, a peaceful existence is no longer even remotely likely as the Condomine's friends, Mrs. Bradman (Sonja Widman) and Dr. Bradman (Charlton Taylor) soon find out.

"It's a funny and talky show," said LHS drama teacher, show director and set designer Horace Griffin. "We staged the show back in 1972 in the drama room, but now we are doing it on the big stage."

The show is presented in three acts with a 10-minute intermission between acts.

Stage manager for the show is Collin Craig. Joey Severino and Michael Pruitt are operating lights. Jennifer Garner and Nathan Boucher are in charge of sound, and Mary Schammel,

MC trustees change name of tax district

Staff report

Midland College trustees voted to change the college's taxing district name Monday at a board meeting.

The district was called the Midland Junior College District. The board voted to change it to Midland Community College District. The change will effect the taxing district only, not the name of the school, officials said.

"During the 1940s, the name junior college was accurate because these schools served as the first two years of learning for a degree and then the student moved on," said Midland College President David Daniels.

"However, during the 1960s, the colleges expanded to include technical courses, continuing education courses and became more comprehensive. This name change is to be consistent with what has happened in the past few years and to better describe Midland College."

Neighbors unite to help with widow's cotton crop

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

TARZAN — In times of grief, need and distress, neighbors in the Lenorah-Tarzan farming community unite as a family to help out friends.

That helping attitude was at work when Raymond August Pribyla died before his cotton crop had been harvested.

Neighboring cotton farmers drove their 18 tractor-mounted and self-propelled cotton-strippers and two boll-buggies to Pribyla's farm and in 2½ hours harvested about 80 acres of cotton.

"It's not so much the community," said Roy Cooper, a 38-year farmer and crop-duster. "It's the people we did it for. They are special," Cooper said of the Pribyla family — Pribyla's widow, Tillie, his children and grandchildren.

Cooper, who aerially sprayed the field to defoliate the cotton, said it "wouldn't matter what community they lived in," the voluntary help would have been there.

"It doesn't matter what happens around them, they don't waffle. They stand for morals and ethics. The Pribyla family is a fine covey of people, let me tell you," said Cooper, who characterized Pribyla as "plain old vanilla."

"They don't make them like that any more," he said.

Out in the field during the harvest, "there were more volunteers than there was work to be done, almost" said Myrl Mitchell, a cotton ginner and farmer from Lenorah.

"The family and Tillie, especially, appreciate everyone for everything they did no matter what.

"Ironically, he was born on Oct. 15 and we harvested his crop on Oct. 15," 76 years later, Mitchell said.

"Especially with all the turmoil in the world today, it just makes you feel good all over to be part of something good — holding hands and working," he said.

The turnout of friends and neighbors to harvest Pribyla's crop was "really a phenomenal thing," said Mary Sample, the third of seven Pribyla children, who are all graduates of Texas Tech University.

His two sons and one daughter are career military officers; two other daughters are married to military officers. And his other two daughters are teachers.

Mrs. Sample, a Midland teacher, said her father loved farming and cotton. "He loved to see things grow."

"I think some of those farmers will miss Daddy almost as much as we will," Mrs. Sample said. "He was a simple man. He enjoyed the simple things in life — talking about the weather and the crops. He loved animals and kids."

Don Hagle, a retired U.S. Air Force pilot who has known the Pribyla family for more than 20 years, said Pribyla "was very caring and giving of his time to the community and to the people."

While he was "one of the best" of farmers, none of his children made farming a livelihood.

"It's a tough life," said Hagle, who lives in Albuquerque, N.M.

"The girls (Carol Ann Newman, Mrs. Sample, Virginia Pribyla, Rita Lashlee and Nancy Horst) weren't too interested in farming; most girls aren't. The boys (David and Kenneth) wanted military careers."

School board recommends tax rate

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

Only one lone Midland taxpayer spoke to school-board trustees about the proposed tax rate for Midland Independent School District.

The school board conducted a tax hearing Tuesday evening to issue its recommendation that the rate be set at about $1.39 ($1.3873). The hearing was held to allow members of the public to voice opinions on the rate, which board members won't vote on until the next regular board meeting Tuesday.

The property tax rate of $1.39 per $100 valuation for the 1993-94 school year would be the same as the district's combined CED (County Education District) and Midland district rate last year.

Of the total rate, $1.25 will be used for the general operation of the district and the remaining 13-plus cents will be used to help pay the 1993-94 payments on the debt for outstanding bonds.

Even though the rate isn't an increase, taxpayers will pay more due to the abolishment of the 20 percent CED homestead exemption.

"Why has MISD's tax rate increased 24 percent in three years," Connie Reeves asked at the hearing.

"It's because the state required CEDs to raise the tax rate twice — 10 cents each year," said MISD Superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr.

"The CED rate was set by the state, which is one reason it was considered to be unconstitutional."

Ms. Reeves said the budget "seems to be out of control."

"The city, hospital and county seems to be reining in taxes. A balanced budget would be nice. The economy isn't thriving," she said.

"I'd be the first to say local property taxes are too high," Baressi said. ". . . but we are totally dependent on property taxes. Some of the others (taxing entities) get sales taxes and the hospital can raise fees.

"We have one source of revenue and the state passes mandates we have to meet (without providing the revenue to meet all of the costlier mandates)."

School board trustee Jackie Hamilton said the board "stood pretty strong about joining litigation to relieve property taxpayers from paying 70 percent of school funding. And we have cut some administrative positions to cut costs."

Ms. Hamilton said 80 percent of the district's 1993-94 total budget of $98.2 million will go to pay salaries. (Last year's total budget was $92.8 million).

Administrators said this year's budget increase is partially a result of bond indebtedness and additional staff to serve an enrollment that already this year has increased by 591 students.

"These young people have a mind-boggling amount of knowledge about the problems of alcohol and drug abuse among their peers," she said. "They are willing to stand out and I love working with them."

During a question-and-answer session, Joan Nobles, who founded High Sky Girl's Ranch (now High Sky Children's Ranch) and is currently manager of the Women's Club, discussed the club's intention of organizing a women's forum with a goal of building a community center for Midland's youth.

"I am deeply concerned for these kids," she said. "I just want to know if this is the right thing to do."

Ms. Nobles received a postive response from Faircloth, Ms. Egan and Michelle Hayward, president of the Teen Task Force.

"The problem is we need to show kids that there are things to do without using drugs and alcohol," Miss Hayward said. "We need a place to go. We definately need a community center."

Businessman files with commission

BRYAN (AP) — A Dallas businessman said Tuesday he has filed Federal Election Commission papers in his U.S. Senate bid that includes a tour of the state and meetings with Democrats.

Richard Fisher said he was the first Democrat to declare his campaign for his party's 1994 Senate nomination.

"This is the continuation of a process that started in February. In one way or another, I have been challenging Kay Hutchison ever since then," he said in a prepared statement.

Mrs. Hutchison, a Republican senator, was indicted last month on four felony counts and a misdemeanor charge accusing her of using state employees for personal and political jobs during her term.

Evangelist invites rival gangs to interdenominational crusade

FORT WORTH (AP) — An international evangelist is seeking members of rival gangs for what city officials have called the first interdenominational crusade in the Dallas-Fort Worth area in four decades.

Preparations for the Greater Fort Worth Luis Palau Crusade, which begins Wednesday night, have already drawn thousands of youths, including gang members, to religious meetings, organizers say.

"We are talking about going out into the neighborhoods to speak with young people involved in gangs," Palau said.

His areawide evangelistic effort, the first since Billy Graham held a crusade in the Fort Worth in the early 1950s, is being held at the Fort Worth/Tarrant County Convention Center.

Meetings through Saturday will begin at 7:30 p.m. CDT, with the final rally at 4 p.m. Sunday.

Palau, who is from Argentina, has been mentioned by some religious leaders as the heir apparent to Graham as the United States' pre-eminent crusader. Palau's evangelism is modeled after that of Graham, who is 74.

Palau, 58, said Monday that all segments of the community, whether rich or poor, are getting invitations to the nightly rallies.

"We would like to see spirituality reborn in the Metroplex," said Palau, whose operations are based in Portland, Ore.

In poor Fort Worth neighborhoods, where gang activity and associated violence is most intense, work with youths actually began three weeks ago, said crusade volunteer Ernie Horn.

An Oct. 9 rally inspired by planning for the Palau crusade was sponsored at a southeast Fort Worth park with help from pastors of 29 predominantly black churches, he said.

"We had some 4,000 young people show up," Horn said.

Former Mayor Bob Bolen, the crusade's co-chairman, called Palau an evangelist of integrity.

Bentsen unveils border cleanup financing plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and Mexico will use small amounts of government money to gain access to billions of dollars in private capital to finance environmental cleanup along the polluted border shared by both nations, Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen said Tuesday.

Bentsen's comments during a hearing of the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee marked release of the final details of a cleanup plan that's closely linked to the North American Free Trade Agreement.

Attention to the 2,000-mile border has been heightened by debate over the NAFTA, which has drawn strong opposition from organized labor, many environmental groups and some top congressional Democrats.

Critics suggest that lowering trade barriers would only increase border pollution problems as more U.S. factories move their operations to Mexico to take advantage of lax environmental enforcement.

Bentsen's announcement came amid a stepped-up campaign by the administration to sell the trade pact to a skeptical Congress and American public.

"We want to maximize private sector financing for these projects, based on local user fees to help service debt, but we recognize that continued funding from the Mexican and U.S. governments will be necessary in many cases," Bentsen testified.

The agreement tentatively reached last week by the United States and Mexico would create a border environment commission to help communities seek financing for water and wastewater improvements, municipal waste disposal and other environmental improvements. A separate border financing institution would funnel private and government money for applications that meet the commission's criteria.

Bentsen said an estimated $8 billion is needed over a decade for environmental infrastructure projects on both sides of the border.

The United States and Mexico each would put in $56 million a year into the border financing institution over four years to leverage up to $3 billion in private capital, Bentsen said. In addition, $2 billion in existing federal spending would be reprogrammed for border use. Also included is some $2 billion in loans to Mexico from the World Bank and Inter-American Development Bank and another $1.4 billion in U.S. and Mexican grants.

"This is the best thing I've ever seen done for the border," said Bentsen, who grew up in the Rio Grande Valley.

"We have a window of opportunity to help Americans in the border region and across the United States with new trade opportunities, new jobs and joint environmental commitments," Bentsen told lawmakers. "Your support for the NAFTA package is essential to turn that opportunity into reality."

Some committee members remained skeptical.

"The fact that we ought to take (steps to clean up the border) sets off alarm bells," said Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J., who remains publicly uncommitted about NAFTA. "It raises peculiar concerns because Mexico is vastly different from the United States."

Texas Gov. Ann Richards, who also appeared before the committee, tackled head-on charges that NAFTA will cause further environmental damage.

"How can the North American Free Trade Agreement be responsible for the maquiladoras, for the colonias, all those things that exist along the border, responsible for the environmental problems when the North American Free Trade Agreement has not passed?" she asked.

"Without NAFTA, economic and pollution growth will continue in the region," Richards said, calling the trade pact "the single most important action that we can take to help improve the living conditions along the United States-Mexican border and to clean up the environment."

Other lawmakers hailed the financing plan.

"Encouraging the private sector involvement in the border funding will help us overcome the political and ideological objections that have doomed border funding in the past," said Rep. Ron Coleman, an El Paso Democrat who chairs the Congressional Border Caucus.

But, Coleman added: "I do want to know more about where the financing for this proposal comes from. I'm not sure all the numbers really add up."

The administration has proposed a $2.5 billion tax increase to recoup the tariff revenues lost under NAFTA. The question is whether some of that tax hike would fund the U.S. environmental cleanup contribution.

The White House plan, which involves increased fees on international airline and cruise tickets and higher rail and truck fees, has drawn criticism from Capitol Hill.

Some conservative House Republicans are threatening to withdraw their support for NAFTA unless the administration drops its plans to raise international transportation taxes.

Error may cause Hutchison case to be dismissed, prosecutors say

AUSTIN (AP) — Prosecutors said Tuesday a legal error may require the dismissal of criminal charges against U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison and over 500 other indictments, including that of convicted killer Kenneth McDuff.

But Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earle vowed to take Mrs. Hutchison's case before a second grand jury if the indictments are dismissed.

Following a defense motion, Earle acknowledged that a grand juror who heard Mrs. Hutchison's case and others should have been excluded because of a 1988 theft charge that accuses him of writing a hot check for $20.04 to a grocery store.

"Senator Hutchison has raised a legal technicality which could result in the dismissal of her indictments and a delay in her trial," Earle said.

"In that event, the state will present its evidence against Mrs. Hutchison to another grand jury and fully prosecute this case."

Mrs. Hutchison's attorney Dick DeGuerin said the technical miscue was due to "sloppy work by the state."

Prosecutors said the mistake was because there is no established system for criminal history checks of a potential grand juror.

The senator's spokesman, David Beckwith, said Mrs. Hutchison would be found innocent of any charges if a second grand jury were to consider the case.

"I am confident that a fairly-selected grand jury, one with six Republicans and six Democrats, will not indict Sen. Hutchison," Beckwith said.

A final decision on whether the case against Mrs. Hutchison, a Republican, will have to be reinvestigated may come this week, said assistant district attorney Claire Dawson-Brown.

"We are going to be reviewing and studying the law about what we need to do with these indictments," Ms. Brown said. "We want to exhaust all the possibilities of saving them."

Mrs. Hutchison, 50, was indicted last month on charges of using her previous office as state treasurer for personal and political gain and then destroying records as part of coverup.

She resigned her 2½-year tenure as treasurer after winning a landslide victory June 5 to Lloyd Bentsen's vacated Senate seat. She is the first woman senator from Texas and the 10th sitting senator ever to be indicted.

Motions were filed Monday by Mrs. Hutchison's attorneys, claiming the grand jury that indicted her was improperly empaneled.

The motions claim grand juror Melvin Wrenn should have been excluded because a charge of theft by check is pending against him.

Texas law states that a grand juror "must not be under indictment or other legal accusation for theft or of any felony."

Wrenn's attorney Sam Buford said Tuesday that his client did not know there was a warrant for his arrest until the motions were filed Monday. Buford said he paid restitution for Wrenn "within the hour" of learning about the charge.

"Had he known (there was a pending theft charge), he would not have served on the grand jury," Buford said. "He's very sad about it. He respects the grand jury system."

Legal experts said because the theft charge was five years old, it would not have been found in a check of the National Crime Information Computer, which dumps misdemeanor charges after two years.

"This is the problem with the system," Ms. Brown said. "Checks can be run on the state and national computer, but it's not uncommon that theft by check of a small nature won't show up on computer. People don't know that they have a charge against them."

Every indictment handed up by that Travis County grand jury now can be challenged.

Saadi Ferris, foreman of the grand jury, said those indictments number as many as 600 and include a capital murder case against notorious Texas killer McDuff.

About 525 indictments returned by a Harris County grand jury in Houston were dismissed last month because the jury panel's foreman had been indicted on a charge of theft by check.

In a letter sent Tuesday to Earle's office, DeGuerin said, if necessary, he would seek a "special grand jury" to hear Mrs. Hutchison's case to avoid "another stacked grand jury."

Defense motions accused Earle's office of unfairly excluding Republicans from the grand jury that indicted her. Earle is a Democrat.

DeGuerin said they would again seek a speedy trial for Mrs. Hutchison.

Ms. Brown said it would be difficult to speculate when a second grand jury might begin considering Mrs. Hutchison's case.

"If these cases have to be dismissed, there is a lot of different factors about how quickly they can be redone," Ms. Brown said. "We have a lot of violent criminals whose cases may be affected and they have to be addressed too."

McDuff already is on death row for the murder of Melissa Northrup, a Waco convenience store clerk. He was indicted in Travis County for capital murder in the 1991 disappearance of Colleen Reed, of Austin.

Officials arrest seven Texans on drug charges

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Seven Texans and three Oklahomans have been arrested in the latest round of a federal investigation of the importation of illegal drugs from Mexico to Oklahoma, the FBI said Tuesday.

The arrests were made Monday by several federal agencies and the El Paso County Sheriff's Department.

FBI agents Bob Ricks in Oklahoma City and Richard D. Schwein in El Paso, Texas, said the arrests were the result of six federal grand jury indictments returned in Oklahoma City in July. The indictments charged 26 people with conspiracy to possess and distribute marijuana and cocaine.

Two other people named in the indictments were already in custody on unrelated charges, authorities said.

The "Snow Weed" investigation began in October 1990, looking at the movement of marijuana and cocaine from Mexico through El Paso and into the Oklahoma City area.

Ricks and Schwein said the 10 were arrested without incident.

The FBI estimated the organization was importing hundreds of pounds of marijuana and lesser quantities of cocaine each week into the Oklahoma City area.

Authorities are searching for 14 others.

Those arrested Monday were identified as Javier Contreras, 28, of Fabens, Texas; Ignacio Garza, 32, of Socorro, Texas; Armando Nunez, 28, of Fabens; Mary Noble, 60, of El Paso; Paul Portillo, 33, of Tornillo, Texas; Jesus Contreras, 26, of El Paso; Juan Carrasco, 29, of Oklahoma City; Joe Conway, 25, of Oklahoma City; Mary Helen Gomez, 44, of Oklahoma City and Isidro Gomez, 26, of El Paso.

Gomez was arrested in Oklahoma City.

Enrique Gonzales, 32, already was in custody in the El Paso County Detention Facility. FBI spokesman Dan Vogel said Robert D. Noble Jr., 38, was already in custody in the Western Missouri Correction Center in Cameron, Mo.

Night Hawk Foods recalls dinners

AUSTIN (AP) — The head of Night Hawk Frozen Foods, Inc. says most of 4,000 recalled Charbroiled Chicken 'N Mac dinners are already back in the company's headquarters.

The dinners were recalled because of suspected bacterium contamination.

The Buda company has recovered from Texas retailer warehouses most of the dinners, so they never made it to store shelves, said president Charles Hill. He said 240 haven't been accounted for, but retailers have reported none in stores.

It's possible there was a miscount, Hill said. But he said the U.S. Department of Agriculture announced the recall to be "abundantly careful," and that's fine.

"We obviously don't want anybody to be discomforted by our product," Hill said.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 20, 1993

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: You will make rapid progress toward your career goals. Put more money away for the future. Your shyness will not hinder your efforts to build an important relationship. Early in 1994, you find that success comes faster when you concentrate on the overall plan. Be careful not to isolate yourself from those who want to help you. Forging alliances with influential people in the spring could lead to a financial windfall next summer.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: baseball legend Mickey Mantle, psychologist Dr. Joyce Brothers, rocker Tom Petty, actress Arlene Francis.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Mixed signals may be holding you back. Try to get to the bottom of things before a tricky situation gets completely out of hand. Good luck helps you rejuvenate a valuable relationship.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A dilemma is solved to your satisfaction. What a relief not to have to depend on others! You can be very self-sufficient when the chips are down. Romance enjoys highly favorable influences.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Try not to let feelings of loneliness creep into your life. Get out and circulate more. Children take careful note of what you do and do not do. Teach them by example.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): New adventures await you. Plan ahead and there will be no stopping you! Make your move quickly. Your spirit is meant to soar. Let go of silly doubts and try something totally different.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Adjust to changing circumstances without complaint. Flattery will get you everywhere! Just make certain you are being honest with yourself about your true feelings. Learn from your mistakes.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Friends and money are not a good combination today. Steer clear of get-rich-quick schemes. Dig deeper within yourself if looking for a way to turn your life around. Think positive!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your optimistic outlook is a great asset today. Take a change in plans or procedures in stride. Influential people are impressed by your flexibility and willingness to try new things.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A show of impatience on your part will only slow things down in the long run. Pay strict attention to duty and detail. Good work habits will produce first-rate financial results!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Make sure your financial affairs are in good order. This is a time when being well-organized will really pay off for you. Wrap up a work assignment quickly to meet a deadline.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Disregard rumors that do not involve you. You should have more important things on your mind. An interesting conversation could lead to bigger and better accomplishments.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A goal you have set may be difficult to achieve. An occasional setback or delay should not cause you to lose heart. Success comes to those who persist! Dine at home tonight.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Confusing emotions could surface now. Your sensitivity to a loved one's needs will be richly rewarded. If you record your secret thoughts in a diary, keep it under lock and key.

TODAY'S CHILDREN love to be the center of attention. Fashion-conscious and daring, they will want to wear the latest styles. Count on these even-tempered Libras to be popular with their peers. Sports will provide them with a healthy outlet for their high spirits. Energetic and determined, they make wonderful employees and considerate employers.

The bidding:

1 NT	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♡

Here's another opportunity to put your dummy-play technique on the line. Decide how you would play four spades after receiving the lead of the jack of hearts.

The auction is simple enough and certainly the contract cannot be faulted. Consider yourself lucky that you do not play tranfer bids, because four spades by North would be defeated after the lead of the jack of diamonds. With you declaring from the South side, can you avoid that fate?

Suppose you cover the jack of hearts with the queen. East will take the ace, shift to the jack of diamonds and the defenders will complete their book in the red suits. You can discard a club on the king of hearts, but in the fullness of time you will have to concede a club trick for down one.

Your problem is to keep East off lead, so let's get back to the first trick and see what will transpire if you were to follow with a low heart from dummy!

Assume East does not rise with the ace. Best defense is for West to continue with a heart and you ruff out East's ace. After drawing trumps, discard a diamond on the king of hearts and you lose only one trick in each side suit—your fourth club can be ruffed on the table, if necessary.

It is no better for East to win the first trick with the ace of hearts and shift to a diamond. The defenders can take two diamond tricks, but that is all. When you regain the lead, draw trumps and then sluff two clubs on the king and queen of hearts.

Soul singer James Brown in line for street in hometown Augusta

AUGUSTA, Ga. — James Brown is in line for a street in his hometown to add to his collection of honors. He already has a star, a bridge and a state proclamation.

Brown

A portion of Augusta's Ninth Street in an area where the Godfather of Soul developed some of his dance moves may soon be renamed James Brown Boulevard.

The change awaits City Council approval at a Nov. 3 meeting. Mayor Charles DeVaney thinks it's a done deal because Brown has lots of fans on the 12-member council.

Brown, 59, has a star on the Hollywood Walk of Fame and a bridge was recently named after him in Colorado. The state of Georgia issued a proclamation in Brown's honor 1991.

"James Brown, through good times and bad times, has always been complimentary for Augusta," DeVaney said Monday. "He has never failed to benefit the community."

One council member wasn't so sure. Council member Gerald Woods cited the singer's criminal record — two years in prison for assault, weapons and traffic charges — as a problem.

"We've got to be careful not to be saying he's a role model in some of the things he's done in his personal life," Woods said. "It sends a message to young people."

SANTIAGO, Chile — It was warm in Chile for Michael Jackson. He was greeted here by screaming fans.

The noise was deafening Monday when he briefly stepped from a car taking him to a hotel and waved to hundreds of people.

Santiago is the third stop in the Latin American leg of Jackson's "Dangerous" tour. He is scheduled to perform Thursday and Saturday.

From here, Jackson flies to Peru.

LOS ANGELES — Bob and Dolores Hope are taking the road to the Hollywood Christmas Parade together.

The couple, who have been married for nearly 60 years, will be co-grand marshals of the Nov. 28 parade.

"All the world loves a parade, and equally, all the world loves Bob and Dolores Hope," Johnny Grant, honorary mayor of Hollywood, said Monday.

Past grand marshals include Jimmy Stewart, Sammy Davis Jr., Arnold Schwarzenegger, Charlton Heston and Tom and Roseanne Arnold.

The Hopes will lead more than 100 celebrities on the 3.2-mile route.

MADISON, Wis. — A music store was one display window down after Pearl Jam fans rushed the place early Tuesday.

Three people were injured by shattered glass when a crowd pressed against the window at The Exclusive Company shortly after the store opened about midnight to sell the rock group's latest release, "Vs."

About 300 fans gathered. The store sold 800 compact discs within an hour. No arrests were made.

NEW YORK — After working a full day on Friday, Paula Zahn, co-anchor of "CBS This Morning," gave birth to a boy Saturday morning at New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center.

The baby, named Jared Brandon Cohen, weighed 6 pounds, 7 ounces. Ms. Zahn and her husband, Richard Cohen, a real-estate developer, have a daughter, Haley, 4.

While the baby was certainly no surprise to Ms. Zahn, a segment on her show Monday morning was a surprise: Hillary Rodham Clinton offered her good wishes.

"Hi, Paula, and congratulations," Mrs. Clinton said on a tape shown on the program. "I'm so excited for you, and I can't wait to meet the newest addition. Take care of yourself, spend time with both of those babies and then come back so we can all see you. Lots of love . . . bye."

As Ms. Zahn and J.B., as the baby will be called, left the hospital Monday morning, they made their first appearance on "CBS This Morning," with Ms. Zahn introducing him to her viewers.

This probably won't be the program's last word on its babies. Andrea Joyce, a CBS sports reporter who is the wife of Ms. Zahn's co-anchor, Harry Smith, is due to give birth Saturday.

NEW YORK — William Norwich, who has been writing a society and gossip column in The New York Post for two years and wrote one in The New York Daily News for six years before that, had a scoop Monday. And it was about himself: he is quitting.

The only people he had told ahead of time were his friend Gabe Doppelt, former editor in chief of Mademoiselle, and Anna Wintour, editor in chief of Vogue. "She is my other boss," he said of Ms. Wintour, referring to his position as editor at large at Vogue.

In his swan-song column Monday, Norwich said he had concluded that most people don't like parties. "Parties are possessed by expectation," he wrote. "People seem so awkward at parties, even the jolliest. Parties can be such lonely enterprises. You go to them seeking community and end up with a hangover even if you don't drink."

Clinton orders Army Rangers out of Somalia

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a further step back from armed confrontation with Mohamed Farrah Aidid, President Clinton ordered a pullout Tuesday of Army Ranger forces he had sent to Somalia to capture the clan leader.

The move reflected the administration's effort to shift the focus in Somalia toward pursuing a political settlement following the deaths of 18 Americans in the disastrous Ranger raid on Aidid loyalists Oct. 3.

"Right now we are engaging in a political process to see how we can resolve our mission in Somalia," Clinton told reporters at the White House. "So right now we're in a stand-down position."

At the Pentagon, spokeswoman Kathleen deLaski said a Ranger task force of about 750 men would be withdrawn from Somalia "in the next couple of days." Officials declined to provide a full breakdown, but the withdrawal apparently includes about 600 members of the 75th Ranger Regiment and about 150 support forces such as members of the 160th Special Operations Aviation Regiment.

Sixteen of the 18 Americans who died in the Oct. 3 raid were members of the Ranger task force.

DeLaski said about 6,300 U.S. troops now remain in Somalia, of which about 2,700 are assigned to the U.N. command providing support such as logistical expertise.

Clinton said the time was right to pull out the Rangers because two Marine Expeditionary Units, totaling about 3,600 men with helicopters and armored vehicles, had arrived off the Somali coast aboard Navy ships. Clinton suggested the Marines could substitute for the Rangers if necessary, although deLaski said there were no plans to bring the Marines ashore, barring an emergency.

Clinton's announcement came two days after the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, Madeleine Albright, publicly confirmed that U.S. soldiers in Somalia had stopped trying to capture Aidid. DeLaski noted, though, that he remains wanted by the United Nations for his alleged role in a June attack in Mogadishu, the Somali capital, in which 24 Pakistani peacekeepers were killed.

"There is not an active effort to search for members of the Aidid apparatus," deLaski said.

Clinton sent an initial contingent of 400 Army Rangers to Mogadishu on Aug. 24 in response to a series of bloody attacks on Americans for which Aidid or his loyalists were blamed. Although the administration did not say so publicly at the time, the Rangers' mission was to capture the elusive Aidid.

That goal was never achieved, and the launching of the Ranger mission itself now stands out as a turning point in U.S. military involvement in Somalia. The deployment triggered a fresh burst of questions and criticisms from the public on whether the administration had a plan for getting out.

Also, Defense Secretary Les Aspin has cited the Ranger deployment in explaining why he denied the requests of U.S. commanders.

New school food T-shirt makes nutritionists gag

By Rick Hampson
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — For years, they have endured jokes about "mystery meat," tolerated cracks about rubber macaroni 'n' cheese, forced a smile when their breaded veal cutlets are called "knee pads."

But the nation's school nutritionists are getting acid indigestion over a new T-shirt — designed by one of their own customers! It proclaims: "School Food. It's Fatal. Eat it before it eats you."

The shirt's front also has a pie chart that purports to describe the fate of those who eat school lunches: "Fatalities, 70 percent; Food ate them, 10 percent; They ate food, 5 percent; Survivors, 15 percent."

It's enough to make the people behind the counter scream "Food fight!"

There's only one way to describe the shirt — "'very bad taste" — says Carol Sheeks, nutrition director for the Carson City, Nev., schools.

Hey, it's a joke, says the shirt's creator, 15-year-old Stephen Varga of Staten Island. On Monday, the New Dorp High School junior rejected the notion that he was anything other than true to his school cafeteria.

"Hey, I eat in our cafeteria every day, 'cept today, 'cause I had a lab," he said. "It's better than some restaurants. . . . They have pizza, cheeseburgers, Steak 'Ems, french fries, onion rings."

Varga and his classmates were part of a program that asked art students to create a funny, interesting or provocative T-shirt. His entry, designed on his home computer, was judged among the best of more than 6,000 from around the nation.

The company that organized the contest, Designs for Education, has made T-shirts with the best 40 designs, and is donating a dollar from each sale to buy art supplies for the schools. It expects to sell about 100,000 shirts this year.

That doesn't mollify the schools' culinary artists. They're fighting back, slinging faxes instead of hash.

Barbara Borschow, director of the American School Food Service Association, called the shirt "a cheap and truly questionable design."

About half the 25 million students who eat school lunches are poor. "For these students to see their peers displaying a shirt that says the food they rely on for nutrition is 'fatal' is both damaging and painful," she argued.

Such complaints have led to the shirt's being pulled from several stores, including Rich's in Atlanta and Seattle's Bon Marche.

Donna Wittrock, the Denver Public Schools' food services director, took it seriously enough to check scientific literature. She found "absolutely no scientific proof for your statement about school food causing death."

Administration unveils probe of Somali envoy

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The State Department is investigating whether President Clinton's chief envoy to Somalia, Robert B. Oakley, violated federal conflict-of-interest laws in his work as a private consultant, administration officials said Tuesday.

The inquiry centers on Oakley's role as a consultant to Middle East Airlines, which hired his Washington-based company this year as part of a campaign to regain its profitable routes to the United States. He has denied any wrongdoing.

When he was the State Department's senior counterterrorism official, Oakley took part in the decision in 1985 to suspend flights from the United States to the Beirut, Lebanon, airport, including those of Middle East Airlines.

This year, his company and another concern headed by a former official signed contracts that will earn them as much as $600,000 altogether if the Clinton administration permits flights to resume by Jan. 1, 1994. Administration officials said Oakley had met several times with State Department officials and urged them to reconsider the flight ban.

Federal law permanently bars officials who took part "personally and substantially" in a "particular matter" involving "specific parties" from lobbying any government agencies on behalf of a client.

Survey uncovers major cheating among students

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cheating is pervasive among the nation's top high school students, according to a survey of juniors and seniors with at least a B average. Nearly 80 percent admitted some dishonesty, such as copying someone else's homework or cheating on an exam.

The survey by Who's Who Among American High School Students covered a wide range of topics and found that principals have a lot more to worry about than providing students a good education.

"High school is a very dangerous place today," Paul Krouse, the Who's Who publisher, said Tuesday.

The 24th Annual Survey of High Achievers, completed during the 1992-93 academic year found that among the 1,957 students questioned:

—One in five of the females had been a victim of a sexual assault, in most instances by someone she knew. In one-third of the cases, the assailant was another student.

—One in three knows someone who has brought a weapon to school.

—Forty-two percent of the males have access to one or more firearms.

Blue Jays retake lead

By Ben Walker
AP Baseball Writer

PHILADELPHIA — It didn't matter where Paul Molitor played, after all. Only that he got to bat.

Molitor defused the DH debate for at least one game, hitting a two-run triple and a solo homer in leading the Toronto Blue Jays past the Philadelphia Phillies 10-3 Tuesday night for a 2-1 lead in the World Series.

AL batting champion John Olerud was sent to the bench to make room for Molitor at first base. Olerud sat placidly, trying to keep warm on a night when rain delayed the start for more than an hour, and saw Molitor fail to make three plays he might've made.

"Somehow I survived the defensive aspect of the game," Molitor said.

Molitor, however, started a nifty double play with the bases loaded that ended the eighth inning after Philadelphia rallied for one run. Besides, offense, not defense, was why Blue Jays manager Cito Gaston wanted Molitor in the lineup.

Molitor, who didn't find out until two hours before the scheduled start of the game that he was playing, tripled and scored in the first inning, homered in the third for a 4-0 lead, walked and scored in the seventh, and singled in the ninth. Molitor batted .332 this season, second in the league only to Olerud's .363, and is 6 for 11 in the Series.

Roberto Alomar, who had four hits, and Rickey Henderson, who had two, each scored twice to give Pat Hentgen plenty of support. Hentgen, who has pitched better on the road than at home all season, pitched out of a couple of jams and allowed one run on five hits in six innings.

Just where Molitor will be Wednesday night when Todd Stottlemyre starts for the Blue Jays against right-hander Tommy Greene is uncertain. Gaston said he wanted to get Olerud's bat back in business, and said he was reluctant to put Molitor at third base in place of Ed Sprague.

"I don't think I will be playing, unfortunately, because I'd like to be a part of going up 3-1. Cito's comments before the game indicated Eddie will be at third and John at first tomorrow."

"It looks to me like Cito made the right choice tonight," Phillies manager Jim Fregosi said.

Gonzo demands

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico — Juan Gonzalez, the American League home run leader who earned just $550,000 last season, said Tuesday the Texas Rangers will have to pay him more than 10 times that amount if they want him back.

The 22-year-old Puerto Rican said he soon expects to be the highest paid player in baseball.

Gonzalez said he will wait until Frank Thomas signs his $44 million pact with the Chicago White Sox, then seek a $50 million, six-year contract.

"I think I deserve it," Gonzalez said.

If the Rangers agree, Gonzalez would surpass San Francisco's Bobby Bonds, whose $7.2 million contract makes him the highest paid player in the majors.

"If the Texas Rangers are not inclined to offer me such a contract, then I will ask for $5 million in arbitration for the 1994 season," he said.

Worley traded

PITTSBURGH — Running back Tim Worley, exiled to third-team status following a year's drug suspension, was traded Tuesday by the Pittsburgh Steelers to the Chicago Bears for two conditional draft choices.

Worley, a 1989 first-round draft pick, had carried 10 times for 32 yards this season after playing just two games in two seasons due to injuries and a pair of drug suspensions.

"With Barry Foster here, Tim needs to go to an offense where he can run the ball," Steelers coach Bill Cowher said. "It's a trade that's in everybody's best interests."

The Steelers probably will receive a low-round pick in 1994 and a mid-round choice in 1995. The Bears are unlikely to have gambled away a high-round choice for a player with Worley's history of off-field problems.

Worley, 27, was suspended for six games in 1991 and all of last season for violating the NFL's substance-abuse policy. He tested positive for cocaine in 1991, then violated the drug policy again by skipping two mandatory drug tests in early 1992 to attend the NBA All-Star game.

Worley, who is making $550,000 in the fourth year of a five-year, $3.05 million contract, returned this season to find himself behind both All-Pro Foster and Leroy Thompson.

Permian thumps listless Rebels

■ Lee's lack of intensity allowed a feisty Mojo team to come from behind 10-15, 15-10, 15-4 and drop the Lady Rebels from first place in District 4-5A volleyball.

By Amy Wolfenbarger
Staff writer

The Midland Lee volleyball team was just learning how to deal with the fact it was in first place in District 4-5A with a playoff spot already clinched.

At least that's why Lee coach Anita Corder thought the Lady Rebels looked dispondent Tuesday night as they tried to hold on to that top spot against Odessa Permian.

The Lady Panthers, fighting for their playoff lives, taught the Lee players what Corder hopes is a well-learned lesson as Permian fought back from one game down to defeat the Lady Rebels 10-15, 15-10, 15-4 and knock Lee back into second place.

The Permian win not only caught the listless Lady Rebels off guard,

Ex-Cowboy again travels rehab road

■ Former Dallas receiver Mike Sherrard has faced injury many times, but his lastest could be his most serious.

By Tom Canavan
AP Sports Writer

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Mike Sherrard knows the pain of broken bones and the frustration of sitting out entire seasons with injuries.

And now, the wide receiver who was off to such a great start in his first season with the New York Giants is getting acquainted with something that might be even more severe:

"Bo's Hip."

Five games into a three-year, $4.6 million contract with the Giants, Sherrard broke his right hip Sunday at the end of a 51-yard catch-and-run against Philadelphia.

The concern now is Bo's Hip, the street term for avascular necrosis, a dying of the bone cells. Bo Jackson developed the problem after sustaining a dislocated hip in the 1990 NFL playoffs. It eventually ended his career and led to a hip replacement.

Angels name Mendoza as new field manager

Staff report

Mario Mendoza left his legacy as a player with the famous "Mendoza Line" (a .200 batting average), but now he comes to Midland in hopes of putting the Midland Angels in the Texas League playoffs.

The California Angels have named Mendoza as the field manager for the Midland Angels for the 1994 season, replacing Don Long, who will move on to Triple-A Vancouver of the Pacific Coast League.

Mendoza, who begins his third year as a manager in the California organization, comes to Midland from Class A Palm Springs where he posted a 133-138 (.491) record the past two seasons. In 1992, Mendoza had Palm Springs in the California League playoffs. He has also played and managed in the Mexican League.

The 42-year-old Mendoza spent nine seasons in the big leagues as a player, including five seasons with Pittsburgh. He was a member of the Pirates' pennant winning team in 1974 and appeared in three games of the National League Championship Series.

His best season in the majors came in 1980 with Seattle where he hit .245 in 114

TERRY WILLIAMSON

Confused? It's just real life in 4-5A

If you have been trying to look through the muddy waters of the District 4-5A positive-point system, you may be a little confused. But why should you be any different from anyone else?

Williamson

Even some coaches don't know where they stand. And the ones who do understand, get beat because of it.

San Angelo's Dan Gandy figured it out, thinking he needed to beat Odessa High by eight points. Leading the Bronchos by a 25-20 margin, Gandy had his team going for fourth down in his own end of the field late in the game. It cost him a win as OHS held and scored to win 27-25.

And that was also bad for Midland Lee, who is now short on positive points in any tie with Odessa High. The Rebels really need to beat the loser of the Permian-Cooper game by at least five points to insure a playoff berth. That's a little confusing since Lee doesn't know who that winner — or loser — will be. Permian and Cooper play next week.

Lee coach Earl Miller said it best, "Our backs are to the wall, but we control our own destiny. We just need to take care of business and win out. We did it before in 1988 with less of a team than we have this year. But it's tough because Cooper and Permian are so tough.

"It's been my experience that if it comes down to points, things usually don't turn out good for you. You don't ever want to get in a position where someone else determines your fate. And that's possible here."

Then there is the attitude of Permian coach Tam Hollingshead, who hasn't tried to figure it out.

"Our next three games (Lee, Cooper and San Angelo) are critical to our season. I know that," Hollingshead said. "As to whether we are in the playoffs with one more win, I don't know — or care. We have a challenge in front of us. That's for sure."

And then there is coach Randy Allen of Cooper, who doesn't have to figure at all. The Cougars are in the playoffs — even with losses to Permian and Lee down the stretch. He just simply doesn't have to worry about it. Still, Allen couldn't tell you for sure last Friday night after beating Midland High if he was in or not.

"I think some strange things would have to happen to keep us out, but I don't know for sure. Let's just wait a week and then we'll know for sure," Allen said.

Trying to make it simple, Lee is out and Odessa High is in if the two teams tie for third place. If Cooper, Lee and OHS tie for second, Cooper is in and Lee must beat Cooper by five points to get in, otherwise, OHS is in.

If Permian, Lee and OHS tie for second, Permian is in and Lee would have to beat Permian by five points to keep OHS out. The Bronchos have only games remaining against Midland High (0-7) and Abilene High (0-7).

Now for a look at the playoffs. If Permian, Cooper and OHS are the three playoff teams, OHS is in the Division I (Big School) playoffs while Permian goes Division II (Small School). Cooper is in the Division II playoffs under any situation because of their smaller enrollment. OHS has an enrollment larger than Permian.

If Lee, Permian and Cooper are the playoff teams, Permian goes Division I while Lee and Cooper go Division II.

"The main thing is to get into the playoffs this year," Miller said. "There aren't any tougher games in the first few rounds of the playoffs that are tougher than what we will face the next two weeks."

That's District 4-5A for you — simplicity in the face of confusion.

Carlson wins, loses job in same week

HOUSTON (AP) — It took Houston Oilers quarterback Cody Carlson seven seasons to get a starting nod over Warren Moon and less than a half to lose it with an injury.

Carlson started Sunday's 28-14 victory over New England in place of Moon, who has thrown 11 interceptions and five touchdown passes this season.

But Carlson had to leave the game with a pulled groin in the second quarter.

Moon replaced Carlson and completed 16 of 21 passes for 102 yards and two touchdowns and likely will be the starter for Sunday's game in the Astrodome against winless Cincinnati.

"It's good that we got the win, we needed that more than anything," Carlson said. "Selfishly, it's disappointing because this is an opportunity I've been waiting for for quite a while."

Carlson completed 5 of 9 passes for 46 yards and scored on a 10-yard run before leaving the game. It was on the touchdown run that Carlson suffered his injury.

He remained clear about his promotion and hopes to be able to play if needed on Sunday.

"When I got the starting position, it wasn't based on my play this year," Carlson said. "It was based on the fact that we were struggling. If we do what we are capable of and get out and put a win streak together, we won't need to make changes."

Neither player is certain what will happen when Carlson is healthy again.

"Nobody has told me anything," Moon said. "It looks as if he injury is pretty serious, but you'd have to ask the coaches."

Oilers trainer Brad Brown said Carlson probably won't be able to practice this week.

That leads Carlson to wonder if he's missed his best chance to retain the starting job.

Moon and Carlson both benefited from better protection against the Patriots behind a patched up line that included two players with injuries, another with pneumonia and a fourth at a new position.

Mike Munchak returned at guard with a new brace to protect his injured knee. Kevin Donnalley, playing with a fractured thumb, moved to right tackle and replaced absent David Williams and rookie No. 1 pick Brad Hopkins made his first start at left tackle despite a case of pneumonia.

Williams skipped the game to be with his wife, Debi, for the birth of their first child, Scot, who was born at 6:25 p.m. on Saturday.

The Oilers gave Williams permission to be with his wife until the baby was born but they expected him to then get to Boston and suit up for the game.

Hall's scoring binge gets him SWC honor

LUBBOCK (AP) — Texas Tech quarterback Robert Hall and Southern Methodist quarterback Mark Eldred had similar performances Saturday: three touchdown passes and one rushing score.

Hall

Although Hall led his team to a victory over Rice and Eldred had to settle for a tie against Houston, both share something else this week: the Associated Press Southwest Conference Player of the Week honors.

Hall's teammate, free safety Marcus Coleman, earned defensive honors.

Hall blew away three school records in completing 21 of 28 passes for 336 yards. He set new marks for career passing (6,924 yards), career touchdown passes (41) and career touchdowns (56).

Hall threw touchdowns of 51 yards to Derrell Mitchell, 44 yards to Jayson Lavender and 16 yards to Roger Corn. He also ran six yards to the end zone in Tech's 45-16 victory over the Owls.

"Robert just continues to amaze me," Red Raiders coach Spike Dykes said. "He's played great the last two weeks, and he just does so many things so well."

"There was too much Robert Hall out there, period," Rice coach Fred Goldsmith acknowledged in the locker room.

Hall ignited the offense from the second play, when he hit Mitchell for the long score.

In SMU's 28-all tie with Houston, Eldred started in place of Ramon Flanigan, who was bothered by a bruised shoulder.

Eldred threw for 399 yards and completed 22 of 38 attempts — one of which, an 85-yard pass to Erwin Wilburn, was the third-longest in school history.

He threw TD passes of 69 yards to Brian Berry, 17 yards to Wilburn and 14 yards to Kevin Shepard. He also ran for a 1-yard score at the Astrodome.

"It couldn't have happened at a better place," said Mustangs coach Tom Rossley. "The Astrodome is near his hometown of Richmond, and he had a lot friends and family at the game."

"I felt confident knowing that everyone was behind me," Eldred said. "I saw this as my chance to get the team a win.

MSA elects three to Hall of Fame

Al Wootan, Howard King and Lavell Banks were recently elected to the Midland Softball Association's Hall of Fame with presentations coming during the national slow pitch tournaments hosted in Midland.

Wootan, a Midland Lee graduate, played baseball for former Lee coach Ernie Johnson. He was Midland's first authentic power hitter, but was also an outstanding base runner and defensive player. Wootan played on Midland's first state champion, Smith Brothers Pipe, in 1973. The following year he joined Bill Williams' Goodrich team and led the 1977 and 1981 teas to the state championships and national tournament berths.

Wootan moved from Midland, but continued his outstanding play for teams in the Waco area. He returned to Midland three years ago and currently is coaching girls basketball and junior varsity baseball for Class 3A Greenwood.

King began his softball career in the late 1960's when the MSA was just beginning to grow. King was a key player on Midland's first black slow pitch team, the Washington Roadrunners. Every year the Roadrunner team vied for the MSA city championship until they disbanded in 1978.

After his playing career was over, King began to officiate slow pitch games. He attained a superior rating and became one of the state's outstanding umpires. King has worked games in numerous state and national tournament.

King, employed by Energas, is president of the Permian Basin Umpires Association. He is also active in the Midland Greater Football League and the Midland Junior Baseball Association.

Banks began playing slow pitch softball at the age of 37. The late start, however, did not dull her skills, nor dampen her desire to succeed. She was a power hitter, played first base and was an inspiration to her teammates and opposing players.

Because of her age, Banks acquired the nickname "Mother Nature". She continued to play until she died of a heart attack in 1989. At the time of her death, she was a player on the First Baptist Church team. Banks also played on teams sponsored by Mallard Petroleum, Dorlanos Rinky Dinks and Rogers Ford.

Her husband, Carl, and daughter, Karen Trout, accepted the award.

Bulldogs sweep OHS, Permian

Midland High made a clean sweep over Odessa High and Odessa Permian in the Fall Baseball League, winning four games, two from each opponent.

MHS got wins from Keith Lant in a 12-4 win over OHS and a 3-1 win over Permian while Sammy Alvarado pitched victories in a 14-5 win over OHS and a 6-1 verdict over Permian. MHS is now 17-5 for the season.

Senior Gabe Lawson returned to the lineup after missing six weeks with a broken thumb and had two doubles against Permian. Clay Johnston homered against OHS and doubled against Permian while Joel Bermea had a triple against OHS and a double against Permian. Other extra base hits came from Rick Lawson, Jason Rogers, Keith Lant (2) and Abel Sanchez

"Chad and Shawn just played sensational," said Midland College golf coach Delnor Poss.

The Chaps will continue on the road, traveling to the Bossier City Invitational Thursday and Friday.

Crane spikers top Greenwood

The varsity score was 15-6, 15-8 with good setting by Tanya Cutter and good net play by Tricia Ross. The JV lost 15-4, 15-6 and the freshman won 15-10, 15-8.

Raiders trade for Gruber

LOS ANGELES (NYT) — The Raiders traded for Tampa Bay offensive tackle Paul Gruber Tuesday, according to the Buccaneers, but the deal is being held up pending approval by the NFL.

The Raiders are believed to have offered a series of draft picks, including a first-round choice next year, but it is not known what is holding up the trade. A Bucs statement Tuesday night said the NFL would rule on the matter sometime today.

"While the terms of the trade were agreed upon, the NFL continues to review all the conditions of the trade," the statement said.

The NFL's trading deadline was 1 p.m. PDT Tuesday.

The Raiders would not comment on the matter, or even confirm that a trade had been made. "There's a possibility something could be worked out within the next day or so," coach Art Shell said vaguely, adding that he wasn't "at liberty" to elaborate.

Tampa Bay had been seeking several high draft picks — one each in the first, second and third rounds — for Gruber, who was designated their franchise player but is unsigned and out of camp.

The deal could hang up for any number of reasons.

Since Gruber is unsigned, the trade couldn't be made until he agreed to contract terms with the Raiders. The league is wary of teams structuring contracts so as to circumvent next year's salary cap and has been looking at all new contracts carefully.

Also, it is not uncommon for questions to arise about whether a deal was closed before the trading deadline.

NFL spokesman Greg Aiello said he could not comment on the Gruber matter but said generally: "If two clubs have made a trade and there's some question if it was consummated by the dealine, the clubs would be able to make their cases that it was (completed in time). The decision would be by the commissioner (Paul Tagliabue)."

Regardless of how the matter shakes out today, the Raiders' interest in Gruber remains curious.

He is considered one of the league's premier left tackles — a critical position because it protects the quarterback's blind side from some of the league's best pass-rushers.

But the Raiders already have an accomplished player at that position in Gerald Perry, whom they signed away from the Rams this past off-season for the substantial sum of $3.3 million over three years.

The rest of the Raiders' line is solid, although guard Max Montoya is in his 15th season and has been hurt often the past two years, and tackle Bruce Wilkerson was moved from the left to the right side to accommodate Perry.

Gruber's original demand of the Buccaneers was $2.5 million annually, and he rejected an offer of more than $2 million per year just before the season began.

The Raiders' highest-paid player is quarterback Jeff Hostetler, at approximately $2.5 annually.

Davis Cup coach goes after players

LONDON (AP) — Tom Gorman couldn't persuade the top American players to go to Australia. Now the new United States Davis Cup coach, Tom Gullickson, will try to get them to go to India.

The Americans were paired against India in the first round when the draw for the 1994 Davis Cup was held Tuesday.

"This is as formidable a first round as possible," Gullickson said. "Playing away and against a team that is full of confidence from this year's efforts will provide a very tough task for our team."

It's not a first Davis Cup trip to India for the United States, which won matches there in 1961 and 1963. But Mike Davies, general manager of the International Tennis Federation, said it would not be the draw the Americans wanted.

"As well as the problems of climate, the players would have to get used to the food and water, far different from what they are used to," Davies, a former British Davis Cup player, said.

"Although these players travel the world, India has peculiarities of its own A lot of sportsmen have gone over there and had stomach trouble."

When the Americans were paired against Australia for the first round of the 1993 tournament, Gullickson was unable to persuade Pete Sampras, Jim Courier and Andre Agassi to go.

Agassi wants streets named after him

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Tennis star Andre Agassi wants to have two streets in his exclusive neighborhood named after him, but it may not be so easy.

The 1992 Wimbledon champion has requested that two streets bordering his property at Spanish Hills Estates in southwest Las Vegas be changed to Agassi Avenue and Agassi Lane.

However, county oficials cite a street-naming ordinance that would prevent such a move.

Agassi wants to change two private streets now named Sheppard Peak Avenue and Bluff Top Lane to Agassi Avenue and Agassi Lane. The Agassi family said they paid for the streets when they bought the lots and originally requested the names honoring Andre.

Barkley may pitch burgers

PHOENIX (AP) — Charles Barkley is about to close a deal to do advertisements for McDonald's, a newspaper reported Tuesday.

The Phoenix Suns star either will join or replace Michael Jordan, who retired earlier this month from the Chicago Bulls, The Arizona Republic said, quoting an unidentified NBA source.

Barkley confirmed Monday a deal is likely to be signed by the end of the week, the newspaper said.

"I'm not going to be Charles Barkley forever. I've got to take advantage of it while I still can," he said.

Barkley will sign the deal in Munich, Germany, where the Suns are participating in the McDonald's Open.

Suns spokeswoman Kelly Wilson said she didn't know about negotiations between Barkley and McDonald's.

Fed officials make case for secrecy

■ Economy would be hurt if Congress forces central bank to operate in open, Greenspan, others say.

By Steven Greenhouse
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Alan Greenspan, testifying alongside 15 senior Federal Reserve officials, said Tuesday that the economy would be hurt if Congress forced the central bank to operate with less secrecy.

Greenspan, the Fed's chairman, said proposals to require detailed disclosure of its discussions would discourage the central bankers from speaking freely.

"Monetary policy would suffer, and the economy with it," Greenspan told the House Banking Committee.

His views were echoed, as if by a Greek chorus, by five other members of the Federal Reserve Board and 10 of the 12 presidents of the Fed's regional banks. More openness could upset a system that works well and injure the economy, they said.

Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, D-Texas, chairman of the House Banking Committee, called Tuesday's unusual mass hearing to ask for the bankers' views on his legislative proposals to require the Fed to disclose its decisions within a week of the meetings of its main policy-making committee.

He has also called for videotaping those meetings and releasing the tapes, with detailed transcripts, within 60 days of the meetings.

The Federal Reserve currently releases a summary of these meetings six weeks after they take place.

Gonzalez asserted that financial markets were injured by delays in announcing Fed decisions as well as by leaks of its decisions.

"Accurate information does not undermine markets," Gonzalez said. "Partial information and leaked information undermines market efficiency."

Greenspan and several other Fed officials said that if meetings were videotaped Fed officials would not debate freely, but would instead rely mostly on prepared statements.

Videotaping or requiring detailed disclosure, he said, "would so seriously constrain the process of formulating policy as to render those meetings nearly unproductive."

"The candid airing of views, the forthright give and take and the tentative posing of new ideas likely would disappear," he said.

Lawrence B. Lindsey, a Fed governor, also opposed videotaping, saying "participants would hesitate to use hypothetical or speculative examples to explain points because these examples could be misinterpreted and cause unnecessary volatility in the financial markets."

He said policy discussions would tend to take place outside committee meetings, with Fed officials coming to meetings with preconceived views far more than was now the case.

Several central bankers said the rapid disclosure of the Fed's policy decisions — which often call for raising or lowering interest rates conditioned upon an event that might not happen — could make rates jump or drop when the central bank did not want any immediate change.

Several Fed officials seemed willing Tuesday to accept one change: to allow the release of highly detailed minutes five or so years after policymaking meetings. But these officials said sensitive material, like dealings with foreign central banks, should be omitted from the minutes.

Dollar steady

NEW YORK — The dollar finished little changed against most major currencies Tuesday as traders adjusted to the greenback's rise in recent days and awaited further news on whether European countries would drop interest rates.

Gold prices rose in the United States and fell in Europe. On the New York Commodity Exchange, gold for current delivery closed at $369.10 a troy ounce, up 80 cents from Monday.

In New York, the dollar finished at 107.10 yen, down from 107.40 on Monday.

In New York, the British pound finished at $1.4897, cheaper than $1.4980 Monday.

Other dollar rates in New York late Tuesday, compared with late Monday: 1.6411 German marks, up from 1.6395; 1.4465 Swiss francs, unchanged; 5.8045 French francs, up from 5.7965; 1,599.00 Italian lire, unchanged; and 1.3253 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3250.

Stocks fall

NEW YORK — Stocks fell on Tuesday, with smaller company shares retreating significantly amid fears the market could not sustain its recent highs, and bigger issues following the downward trend.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 6.99 points to 3,635.32.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 3 to 2 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 296.27 million shares, down from 329.42 million in the previous session.

The Nasdaq composite index, one of the best-known measures of small-company shares, finally ended down 14.20 points, about 1.8 percent, at 768.71. And that eventually pulled down the entire market, said Mary Farrell, an investment strategist at PaineWebber.

Chamber lures El Cajon, Calif., company to city

By Mella McEwen

Aggressive campaigning by the Midland Chamber of Commerce — with assistance from Forward Midland and the city of Midland — has attracted a company to relocate from California to Midland.

Albers

Chamber officials announced Tuesday that Barnmaster is relocating here from El Cajon, Calif.

Dean Albers, Barnmaster president, said a key reason for the move was that "capital investment is lower here compared to California. Purchasing a building and moving here will save us considerable money."

He cited Midland's central location and its location in the Central Time Zone as other considerations, saying the new time zone will allow him to develop additional business on the East Coast and the central location will save on shipping costs.

Barnmaster manufactures a variety of modular barns for horse enthusiasts and has annual sales in the $3 million to $4 million range. Customers have included singers Michael Jackson and Olivia Newton-John and actor Robert Wagner.

The company already has hired a dozen welders, machine operators and laborers for its 23,000-square-foot facility at 2523 E. Interstate 20. Company officials anticipate having a work force of 30 people within a year.

If the Midland manufacturing facility goes well, Albers said, he may close the California plant and expand manufacturing here, which would mean an increase in the local work force.

Albers, whose wife Linda is a graduate of Midland High School, said the barns' modular components can be bolted together quickly in custom configurations.

"A 36-by-36 building can be assembled in one day," he said.

The company has assembled a network of distributors that purchases the building components wholesale from Barnmaster and sells them to customers.

Multifamily home construction surges in September

WASHINGTON (AP) — Construction of new homes and apartments jumped to the highest level in more than 3½ years in September, boosted by a surge in multifamily units.

The Commerce Department said Tuesday that apartment construction shot up 52 percent, including a 40 percent gain in buildings with five or more units.

J. Roger Glunt, president of the National Association of Home Builders, attributed the multifamily surge in part to a reauthorized tax credit for low-income housing. The program, which expired in June 1992, was extended in August as part of President Clinton's economic program.

Still, other analysts contended the increase was not sustainable even with the credit because of high vacancy rates elsewhere resulting from overbuilding in the late 1980s.

"There's no reason to build new apartments if you haven't rented out the old ones yet," said economist Mark Obrinsky of the Federal National Mortgage Association.

Overall, housing starts rose 2.8 percent in September, to a 1.35 million annual rate, highest since a 1.44 million rate in February 1990, the department reported. That helped push starts so far this year 3.9 percent above those of the first nine months of 1992.

The housing industry, particularly the single-family sector, has been one of the strongest sectors of the economy. The Home Builders are forecasting starts will total 1.24 million this year, up from 1.20 million in 1992 and 1.01 million in 1991.

President Clinton, seeking support for the North American Free Trade Agreement, told a bipartisan House delegation at the White House he was encouraged by the report, which he said indicated the economy is picking up.

"But if America wants to grow more jobs, we're going to have to increase our exports," he contended.

NATIONSBANK, with two branches in Midland, and START Inc. have begun offering a special MasterCard in Texas, making it available in 275 banking centers from the Panhandle to the Valley.

Larry Holden, president of NationsBank in Midland, said the program allows customers to set aside money with everyday purchases.

Every time a customer uses the card, 1 percent of the purchase can go into a tax-deferred annuity offered and guaranteed by Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. of New York. The contribution can grow to 7 percent of a cardholder's everyday purchases when the card is used to purchase goods and services from START participating companies such as Hertz, MCI, Days Inn or US Travel.

The card is being introduced with a special 6 percent interest rate available through March, 1994. Then card users will receive an interest rate of prime plus 9.9 percent, currently 15.9 percent, with a $20 annual fee after the first year.

fairgrounds and race tracks. The distributors are primarily in Colorado and and the west, but Albers said new distributors have been lined up in Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Vermont.

In addition to horse barns, the company manufactures garages and free-standing buildings that can be used to park recreational vehicles.

Tom Stinson, economic development manager for the Midland chamber, said the recruitment of Barnmaster was the first result of recent marketing strategies that included direct mailings, telemarketing and visits to California by chamber officials, as well as visits by representatives of California firms to Midland.

"We've filled the pipeline," he said, "so we hope to have additional companies soon," Stinson said.

He said that the chamber has 23 to 25 prospective companies that officials and volunteers are trying to recruit.

The key element in drawing the interest of California businesses to Midland is the Tall City's inexpensive real estate, potential work force and the local quality of life, Stinson said.

Sweet success

Does using artificial sweeteners like aspartame (NutraSweet) help you lose weight?

The evidence is controversial. But now a new study by Dr. George Blackburn, associate professor of surgery at Harvard Medical School, declares that consuming aspartame helps you take off weight and keep it off.

Dr. Blackburn studied 163 women, ages 20 to 60, who were 70 percent over their ideal weight. Over a three-year period, all the women got the same dietary and exercise instructions for controlling weight. However, a randomly selected group were told not to eat aspartame products; the others consumed aspartame foods and beverages.

The results: The aspartame women lost weight and kept half of it off over two and a half years. The women not eating aspartame lost weight but tended to gain it back.

Aspartame helped women control food cravings, especially by reducing cravings for sweets, according to Dr. Blackburn. Thus, such foods "help dieters stay on healthy diets longer than they could before," he says. The study was partly supported by The NutraSweet Company.

Vitamins vs. cancer

Here's more startling news about vitamins. Megadoses can help fight cancer. In a new study, they cut the recurrence of bladder cancer in half and nearly doubled the survival time of patients. "The effects were dramatic," says Dr. Donald Lamm, head of urology at West Virginia University in Morgantown.

In his study of 65 patients with bladder cancer, all took a standard immunotherapy drug called BCG. About half also got high doses of antioxidant vitamins. After nearly two years, 40 percent who took the vitamins plus the drug developed new tumors, compared with 80 percent taking only the drug.

Also the vitamin-takers' survival time was 33 months versus 18 months among the drug-only group.

"For now, I would certainly tell any bladder-cancer patient who wants to try high doses of vitamins that there do not seem to be any harmful effects and there may be some benefit," said University of Toronto urologist Dr. Michael Jewett, according to Medical Tribune, a newspaper for physicians.

But check first with your doctor. The study used daily doses of 40,000 IU of vitamin A, 100 mg of B-6, 2,000 mg of vitamin C and 400 IU of vitamin E.

Fish is brain food

If you are pregnant or are nursing an infant, be sure to eat seafood. It appears critical for proper growth of the fetal and infant brain, according to new research.

Indeed, many experts now insist that the unique oil in fish, called omega-3 fatty acid, is an essential nutrient for brain development. Animals deprived of omega-3s during early development show neurological and vision abnormalities.

After a recent review of the scientific evidence, Joyce Nettleton, D.S., at the Institute of Food Technologists, urges pregnant women to eat seafood two or three times a week.

But what about hazards to the fetus from seafood contaminated with environmental chemicals, such as mercury and PCBs? Pregnant women can avoid harm by choosing seafood carefully, say experts.

Here are some tips: Don't eat sports fish from polluted lakes and rivers. Eat various types of fish to avoid overdosing on one source. Safest are small deep-ocean fish. Dr. Nettleton recommends sardines. Farm-raised catfish and salmon are also apt to be free of toxic metals. It is wise to avoid or restrict swordfish, shark and fresh tuna to one serving a month.

ID your problems

If you have a heart condition, suffer from diabetes, or have a particular allergy problem, you might consider wearing a Medic-Alert or similar ID bracelet, card or tag that lists your health problems.

People who suffer traumatic injuries in a car accident or fall are often unable to tell doctors about their health problems or medications at the time. Or just being in an emergency situation can make people forgetful.

Many of these IDs also provide a telephone number physicians can call to obtain a patient's health records.

Care network serves Boston's homeless

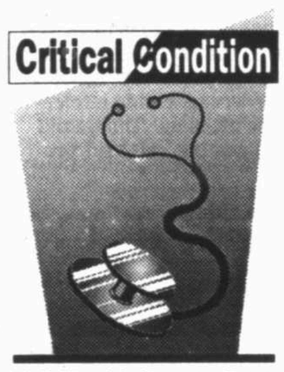
BOSTON (AP) — John Wetmore's life might seem the stuff of which sad songs or bitter poems are made.

He's rambled the country since he was 12. A weakness for alcohol has forced him to work odd jobs or live on the street.



U.S. Health Care in Crisis

But now, he must shoulder his plastic trash bag of clothes and leave the Barbara M. McInnis House, a nursing home converted to treat sick homeless people.

He's reluctant to hit the road again, even though doctors say his ribs, broken in a drunken fall, have mended.

"Yeah, I guess they spoiled me," says Wetmore, 37, his scarred face framed by shoulder-length hair and a Colorado Rockies cap. "I've been in hotels that are worse. This place is good."

It's another day of goodbyes at the McInnis House, where three out of four patients head straight back to the streets. It's also a common moment for Health Care for the Homeless, the program that runs McInnis House.

Tulane University sociologist James Wright has followed Health Care for the Homeless since it began as a national demonstration project in 19 cities eight years ago. Across the country, he said, participating doctors face the paradox of making chronically sick people well and then watching them return to the conditions that made them sick.

"There's a sense in which any money spent on homeless people is a waste," Wright said. "Once you're done spending, most of them remain homeless."

But, he asks, "What do you want them to do? Die on the streets? If the alternative to Health Care for the Homeless is body wagons going around the streets every day, I'd have to score it a magnificent bargain."

The dilemma — how to make sure the unemployed and the unemployable, such as the homeless, receive basic health care — is one of many that President Clinton's reform plan tries to address.

Overall, Health Care for the Homeless has 129 programs in 49 states (Arkansas is the exception) that expect to get about $58 million in federal funds this year.

Boston's $4.5 million program treats 6,000 to 7,000 people each year in about 47,000 visits. Besides money from the Massachusetts and federal governments, the program receives donations from a host of private foundations. Eighty-two people work for it, including doctors, nurses, dentists and social workers, said the Boston program director, Dr. James O'Connell.

The program is set up so homeless people can show up at clinics every weekday at Boston City Hospital, or three times a week at Massachusetts General Hospital. In addition, medical teams go out to 42 sites, including homeless shelters, battered women's shelters, soup kitchens and motels that house the homeless on vouchers.

Dr. Jim O'Connell, founder of the Boston Health Care from the Homeless program, checks Fred Waters lungs after a bout with pneumonia at the Boston City Hospital clinic. Waters was one of the program's first patients and has been back to see Dr. O'Connell for the past eight years.

Gerald, 59 and unemployed, was the first customer on a recent weekday at Dr. Michael Bierer's clinic at Massachusetts General. Sitting in a chair hugging himself, he waited to hear the results of tests given after a shelter nurse had detected a heart murmur.

When the results showed his condition wasn't serious, his face wrinkled with a series of toothless smiles.

"You really checked me up good. I appreciate that," he said.

"There's nothing like a good doctor," he declared, punching a fist into a palm.

Bierer and O'Connell say their job is tougher than other doctors' because few homeless people heed basic advice for good health. Common ailments include liver problems from alcohol abuse and leg ulcers from poor circulation caused by being on their feet all day long. Sunk deep in poverty, the homeless are often unable to take care of themselves, or unwilling.

"If I don't have a future, does it make sense for me to quit smoking?" Bierer asked. "I've learned not to tell anybody how to live their lives."

Keep Halloween fun and safe

By Dr. Jeffrey Fine
Associated Press

Keeping children from going bump in the night is an important safety concern on Halloween.

There are always warnings about tainted candy, but most Halloween injuries occur as a result of falls. Selection of appropriate masks and costumes can prevent most of these injuries.

Masks tend to narrow a children's line of sight and can make it difficult to see obstacles. As an alternative to masks, consider cosmetics or face paints. Just be sure to test for a possible allergic reaction, and use it sparing-

Chicken bone protein found beneficial for rheumatoid arthritis

By Paul Recer

WASHINGTON (AP) — An extract from chicken bones can teach the body to stop hurting itself with attacks of rheumatoid arthritis, a group of Boston researchers have reported.

Dr. David Trentham of Beth Israel Hospital and Harvard Medical School in Boston said that a collagen solution made from chicken cartilage and swirled into patients' morning orange juice appeared to arrest the progress of rheumatoid arthritis in a small group that was studied.

The technique, which he called "oral tolerization," seems to "teach" the body's immune system to stop inflaming the tissue around joints. Rheumatoid arthritis is thought to be an autoimmune disease caused by rogue cells of the immune system attacking membranes in joints.

Trentham said that swallowing a protein that is similar to

Doctors' bedside mannor can improve

By Doug Ferguson

While medical care in this country undergoes major surgery, from cutting costs to who will pay them, the new American Academy on Physician and Patient seeks to improve the heart of that old relationship.

For while doctors-to-be may learn skills like how to listen to coughs and understand the intricacy of the nervous system, they usually get less instruction in listening to and understanding the patient.

The academy's president, Dr. Mack Lipkin Jr. of New York University Medical Center, said in a recent

Drug-resistant bacteria becoming major health problem

By Daniel Q. Haney

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Bacteria commonly found in children and the elderly are becoming highly resistant to penicillin and other common antibiotics, and the search is on for the first vaccine to protect newborns from them.

The germ, pneumococcus, is the major cause of an ear infection, otitis media, that is the leading reason for doctor visits among the very young. U.S. physicians treat between 7 million and 10 million cases a year.

Babies have virtually no natural resistance to the microbe, and antibiotics are the only way to control the infection.

But Dr. Robert Breiman of the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention said at a conference Monday that physicians are rapidly losing their most powerful weapons against pneumococci bugs.

He said 7 percent of the bacteria isolated from people are able withstand penicillin, long the mainstay against the infection, while 10 percent are resistant to erythromycin and 10 percent to Bactrim.

"We need a vaccine now," said Breiman. "With drug resistance, we are approaching the post-antibiotic era. We don't have more antibiotics coming in. We may not have protection."

The germ also causes meningitis, blood poisoning and pneumonia. A pneumococcal vaccine has been on the market for 14 years, but it is intended only for people over age 65 and younger people with other underlying diseases.

"The biggest problem is the current vaccine. It does not offer protection in children less than 2 years of age," said Dr. David Klein of the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Disease.

The goal of current research is to develop a vaccine that will work in the very young.

Klein said at least three new pneumo-

SKILLS: Doctors are listening, learning

interview that doctors need to pay more attention to this aspect of medicine.

"They need to work on those skills, to monitor them and sharpen them and deepen them, just like they do with any other skill area," he said.

The Baltimore-based academy comprises 300 doctors, educators, researchers and scientists involved in the array of medical practice, from pediatrics to internal medicine to psychiatry.

Their central purpose is promoting skills that get past "Where does it hurt?" and "How long have you had this?"

"The physician and patient relationship is the core of all medical care," said Dr. Dan Duffy, an academy member who is chairman of internal medicine at the University of Oklahoma's College of Medicine in Tulsa.

"It's at that interface between two human beings that all the miracles of medicine occur."

Resarchers calculate that, on average, a doctor's career will include at least 150,000 interviews. The academy helps doctors make the most of them.

It does this with research on patient interview techniques; through its newsletter, Medical Encounter; and running seminars at host medical schools.

The rewards are often intangible.

FOR INSTANCE, there's the case of a young woman with diabetes who went to see Dr. Robert Rowntree, an internist in Longview, Texas, who had been to an academy seminar at the University of Virginia.

The woman had not been taking proper care of herself, slacking off on the dietary regimen prescribed to keep her diabetes in check.

"She was kind of hostile, upset at the way previous doctors had treated her," Rowntree recalled. His predecessors just scolded her, he said, instead of trying to find out why she was letting herself go.

"Before the seminar, I might have had the same reaction," he admitted.

Instead, Rowntree said he was able to draw the woman out and discover she was depressed. He prescribed counseling.

"She still sees me, and she's taking care of her health," he said.

Rowntree credits what the academy taught — or re-taught — him.

"The seminar helped me rethink why I went into medicine in the first place," he said. As a result, "I enjoy my patients more and I have a clearer idea of what my focus is."

THE DISTRACTIONS of galloping technological advances, the medical marketplace, malpractice worries and all the rest have seemingly built barriers to communication between doctor and patient.

Lipkin, an associate professor of clinical medicine at New York University School of Medicine, noted that patients and doctors have become increasingly alienated from each other.

Reversing this will be crucial in light of the changes ahead for America's health care system.

"Under managed competition, there will be an increase (in emphasis) on patient satisfaction," Lipkin said, "and these skills will have a major determination on that satisfaction."

the membrane of the joints "reinstructs the body to cease the attack on the body's own joints."

The findings were reported in the journal Science.

Dr. Arthur Grayzel, senior vice president for medical affairs of the Arthritis Foundation, said the study suggests that oral tolerization techniques have the potential of halting rheumatoid arthritis, but urged caution until there is further study.

"It has all of the problems of initial studies in this disease and that is that it is in a small number of people studied for a short period of time," said Grayzel. "Nevertheless, it does show promise."

The study used 60 rheumatoid arthritis patients selected from a group who had not responded well to conventional treatment.

They were all taken off of their other drugs. One patient dropped out and the rest were then randomly divided into two groups, roughly matched by age and sex.

A group of 28 were given daily solutions of what is called type II collagen derived from chickens. A second group of 31 received a solution that resembled collagen, but was actually a placebo.

Neither the patients nor the researchers knew which patients were receiving which substances.

After three months, Trentham said, it was clear that the drug was beneficial. "We found within the collagen-treated group there was significant improvement," he said.

Standard measurements used to gauge rheumatoid arthritis showed that patients on the collagen improved and most, but not all, of the patients on placebo got worse.

Trentham said that 13 percent of the patients taking the phony collagen actually improved, a "placebo effect" that he said is common when testing rheumatoid arthritis drugs.

The researcher said the true effect of the collagen treatment will not be verified until there is lengthy drug trial using many patients. That is scheduled to start next year, he said.

The concept of oral tolerization is based on studies that show the body will often build a tolerance toward proteins that are swallowed. Autoimmune diseases are caused by the body's wrongheaded intolerance to parts of itself. Thus, said Trentham, ingesting selected proteins can "reinstruct" the immune system and cause it to behave.

Trentham said the collagen was purified from chicken "simply because that is the least expensive way of making it and we can be sure it is free of viral contaminants."

Both he and Grayzel cautioned that the collagen used in the experiment is not the same as the collagen found in cosmetic and health food stores.

"You can buy collagen in health food stores," Grayzel said, "but there is no evidence that arthritis patients taking over-the-counter collagen have gotten any benefit."

Science, which published the study, is the journal of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

SAFE: Caution advised for costumes

ly, especially around the eyes.

If a child insists on wearing a mask, enlarge the eyeholes to improve the child's field of vision, and make sure the mask fits securely.

Keep the costumes short to help prevent tripping. Store-bought or homemade costumes should fit comfortably and not be too tight or loose. Hems can be taped in place for the evening and some costume fullness can be pleated out under the arms to avoid too much fullness.

If possible, buy costumes that are not flammable.

WHEN KIDS GO TRICK OR TREATING

Although trick or treating may be a classic Halloween event, it may not be the safest. As an alternative, consider hosting a Halloween party. But if trick or treating is on the agenda, a parent, teenage sibling or baby sitter should escort children on their rounds.

Have children walk in familiar areas on a prior established route. And equip them with flashlights so they can see and avoid obstacles in the dark.

Allow children to stop only at houses that have a light on. They should be instructed not go inside any home unless the resident is a friend of the family.

USE REFLECTIVE TAPE ON COSTUMES

To increase children's visibility outdoors, select light or brightly-colored costumes, and attach reflective tape to them so that your child is clearly visible to traffic.

Place the reflective tape on key areas of the costume such as around the shoulders and down the sides of the legs of the costume. If you're sewing your own, you can also use glow-in-the-dark fabrics and fabric paint.

In addition, avoid long, dangling accessories that can get snagged or caught in doors. Also suggest that children wear sneakers or other comfortable, secure shoes.

BE PREPARED

A little preparation by those expecting visits from young ghosts or witches can also enhance safety.

Move equipment, such as lawn mowers or ladders, away from the sidewalks or pathways that children might use.

Also keep jack-o'-lanterns out of the way. These pumpkins are often lit by candles and can present a fire hazard to children.

Most important, drivers should be very careful on Halloween night. Young goblins may be too busy thinking of candy to consider traffic safety.

Instances of tainted fruits and candies are relatively infrequent. But as a precaution, do not allow children to eat any of their treats until they get home.

Examine candy closely before letting children eat it, and throw out any items with broken seals or wrappers. Also, closely inspect fruit for signs of tampering.

Dr. Jeffrey Fine is clinical instructor of pediatrics at New York University Medical Center and is a pediatric emergency physician at Bellevue Hospital.

DRUG: Germ resistant to vaccines

(From 1D)

coccal vaccines are being tested. They are manufactured by Lederly-Praxis Biological, Merck & Co. and Connaught Laboratories.

All three are undergoing studies to see if they are safe and will trigger the body to produce antibodies against the bacteria. No one knows yet if any of them will actually protect babies from the germ.

Klein said it will probably take six or seven years for any of the new vaccines to reach the market.

Until then, the researchers recommended that much wider use be made of the currently available vaccine among the elderly, who risk having untreatable, fatal illnesses if they catch resistant forms of the bacteria.

Dr. David Fedson of the University of Virginia said that only about 20 percent of Americans over age 65 are now vaccinated. He said that while most doctors are convinced of the vaccine's value, many have not set up systems in their offices to make sure that all their elderly patients receive the shots.

The researchers spoke at the Interscience Conference on Antimicrobial Agents and Chemotherapy, sponsored by the American Society for Microbiology.

Dr. Robert Austrian of the University of Pennsylvania said pneumococcal bacteria were extremely hard to treat until the 1940s, when penicillin came into use.

While scientists knew almost immediately that the germ could evolve to be impervious to the medicine, resistance did not start to become a problem in people until the 1960s.

DEAR ABBY

Wife wants family ties to be bound with blood test

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband of 14 years just received a "Dear Daddy" letter from a 23-year-old girl! He said he had slept with the girl's mother ONE night, three days before her husband returned from the service.

Van Buren

Phil rushed to have dinner with this girl and her fiance, and now believes that she is his daughter.

Abby, how does he — or she, for that matter — know this to be a fact without a blood test?

This girl has been told by her mother since she was 13 that Phil is her father, and she believes it! I'm not saying it is not possible that she is his daughter, but I would like proof first.

Lucky for the girl, my husband is a decent, honorable man, and since he has met with her, he doesn't want to hurt her by asking for the blood test right off. He wants our son and me to meet this girl and get to know her.

I told him I do not want to establish a relationship with someone who only might be his daughter. Abby, I would accept her willingly if I knew it was a fact. Meanwhile, this has started to put a wedge between my husband and me, and today I'm calling a therapist.

My message to her and others is: Only facts are important; speculation is not. If you learn that you are not his biological child, it will have done damage to MY family. — WANTS THE BLOOD TEST FIRST

DEAR WANTS: Insisting on a blood test is not unreasonable.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 21-year-old senior in college. I've never had a boyfriend — actually, I've never been on a date or even been touched by a boy in a romantic way. I'd like to have a boyfriend, but I don't want to get hurt. I don't want to have sex out of wedlock, and my friends are always telling me guys don't want to date girls who don't "put out."

I know I have missed out, and when I see other girls who have boyfriends, I get jealous. I also have mood swings and get very depressed as the week progresses from Monday through Friday. There is a counseling department in the college I attend, but I am too embarrassed to go.

I have no male friends. If I'm not with my girlfriends, I am in my room alone. I am not gay. I am attracted to men. But whenever I meet someone who shows any interest in me, I run. If a guy asks for my phone number, I usually give a wrong number because I wouldn't know what to say if he called.

Sometimes I wish I could find a way to get involved in an arranged marriage — in about three years — because I don't know if I will be able to handle the dating and courting a relationship entails.

I have never discussed this with anyone else. It would be embarrassing. Can you help me? — HIDING IN THE DORM

DEAR HIDING: An arranged marriage is no guarantee to happiness.

Although you profess a desire to date, you seem to lack confidence and appear to fear the dating game. Counseling will help you build your self-esteem and confidence. It will also help you learn social skills, which are important if you want to attract a boyfriend.

Please don't be embarrassed to seek help. You desperately need it. Good luck and God bless.

'Healthier' pot pie surprisingly good

By Linda Anderson

One of my all-time favorite comfort foods is ordinary, store-bought, frozen chicken pot pie. Unfortunately, with its double crust (and of course my favorite brand had a top and a bottom crust), this homey food is probably high in fat too.

Anderson

Imagine my relief to discover that Stouffer's Lean Cuisine has recently developed a lower-fat, lower-calorie version of my old favorite. Lean Cuisine Chicken Pie — advertised as "New!" and being "Made with 100 percent White Chicken Meat" — was a natural for me to try. Even though I prefer dark chicken meat. Can't have everything, I guess.

A single-serving 9½-ounce box of Chicken Pie cost $2.29. That's pretty expensive as far as chicken pot pies go, but not too bad for Lean Cuisine.

Label advertising on the back of the box goes like this: "Stouffer's develops its Lean Cuisine recipes to offer you high quality and superior taste. Each product is designed with controlled calories, sodium, cholesterol adn fat to help you achieve a healthy, active lifestyle."

Well, I'll buy that "healthy" claim — since each single-serving of the chicken pot pie is supposed to contain 310 calories and 10 grams of fat (that's 90 calories from fat) — but how can a food help me achieve an "active lifestyle?" Maybe I'm supposed to each one of these pot pies and then feel an urge to run around the block or something. Nahhh!

Other nutrition information listed on the label shows that a single serving of the pot pie has 40 mg cholesterol and 590 mg sodium, and contains 40 percent of the vitamin A, 35 percent of the protein, 30 percent of the niacin, and 25 percent of the riboflavin, 20 percent of the thiamin, 15 percent of the calcium and 10 percent of the vitamin C and iron suggested in the U.S. Recommended Daily Allowance.

The taste-test was a pleasant surprise. After years of trying (and failing), a food manufacturer has finally come up with a microwaveable, lower-calorie and lower-fat chicken pot pie that tastes decent! Granted, it will never win any prizes at any state fair or take the place of anybody's Mom's recipe, but for a convenience food, it's really not bad. (One reason this pot pie is lower in fat is because the crust is so thin, but oh well... You can't have everything, I guess.)

Yes, I probably will buy it again. Winter is the perfect season for comfort foods, and even though the weather outside is anything but frightful (usually), it will be cold before you know it.

Price listed is from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.

Margarine studied

Associated Press

Why do experts now say margarine is not good for your heart? That's a confusing issue. Evidence against margarine has been growing, but two recent major studies disputed margarine's heart-disease fighting abilities.

■ A Harvard study found that women who ate four or more teaspoons of margarine a day had a 66 percent greater risk of heart disease than those who ate margarine less than once a month. The researchers blame trans fatty acids — fats that form when liquid vegetable oils are made semi-solid by hydrogenation.

■ A study at the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Human Nutritional Research Center on Aging at Tufts University also faulted margarine's trans-fatty acids. Researchers found stick margarine less friendly to the heart than the oils it is made from. Subjects with high cholesterol were given either corn oil or stick margarine. Their bad LDL cholesterol sank 17 percent on the corn oil, but only 10 percent on the margarine. Also the margarine had 10 times more trans-fatty acids.

PART-TIME INCOME OPPORTUNITY

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has early morning routes which need to be filled with dependable individuals with reliable transportation. Often asked questions:

➥ Is it worthwhile for adults also?
YES! 95% of our Distributors ARE adults! Morning Routes are attractive for:
★ ADULTS who have fulltime jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job!
★ MOTHERS who can't justify a small job AND daycare, because as a Distributor, you don not need daycare!
★ COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
★ SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added retirement income, or just wa t to work with people, neighbors, and friends!

➥ How much money can I make as a Distributor?
Depending on the size of the route(s), from $350 to $800 monthly, in some cases...even more!

➥ OK...but how long does it take?
The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday-Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, depending on the size of the route(s). Also some time is needed each month to collect from subscribers. Many Distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in the subscribers' papers and having payments mailed to them. Some collecting in person will be necessary though, particularly on some routes more than others.

➥ When do the papers have to be delivered by?
Papers must be on the yards by 6 am Monday-Friday, and 7 am on weekend mornings.

➥ Do I ever get a day off?
The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, most Distributors do take days off by finding a friend, family member, or another Distributor to substitute for them!

➥ What else?
An initial $100 refundable deposit is required.
