Bush, Mauro to debate

AUSTIN (AP) - The debate over debating is over.

Republican Gov. George W. Bush and Democratic challenger Garry Mauro agreed Thursday to face off in El Paso on Friday, Oct. 16.

And while Mauro noted that many Texans might have something else to do on a fall Friday night, both candidates said they were pleased to have the chance to discuss issues in the race.

"Debating in the Rocky Mountain time zone on a Friday night during football season is not exactly calculated to illuminate Texans on the differences between Gov. Bush and me on the issues," Mauro said.

"But I'm real pleased the governor has finally agreed to one debate. I hope it's a start and not a finish."

Bush said he and then-Gov. Ann Richards held a single debate in 1994, and he believes that one meeting would be adequate this election year.

"Some have suggested that, as a result of the polls, I shouldn't do it. I disagree. I'm really looking forward to it," said Bush, who has led Mauro in several recent opinion polls by as much as 51 percentage points.

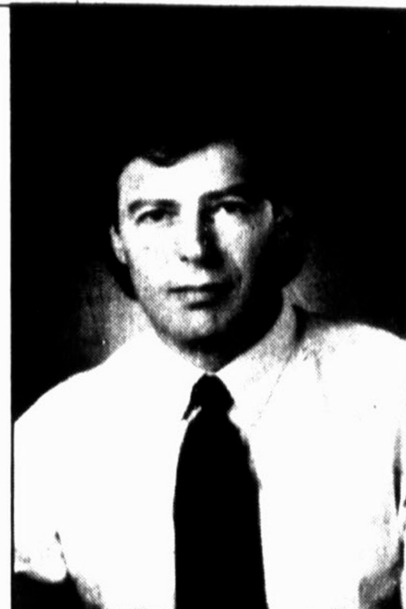

"I think it's important for Texans to see us have an honest discussion of issues," Bush said, laughing at the mention of the highly popular Friday night football pastime. "I won't take that personally."

The debate will be staged at the University of Texas-El Paso. It's scheduled for 7 p.m. Mountain time, the campaigns said, adding that they hoped the televised debate would be broadcast by stations statewide.

The two campaigns had been at odds in recent weeks over debating.

Mauro had said that no candidate for governor of the nation's second-largest state should duck debates. Bush's campaign had said Mauro was engaging in "petty and personal attacks."

Perot wants campaign to boot Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) - Ross Perot is launching a nationwide petition drive asking President Clinton to resign because of the president's White House affair with former intern Monica Lewinsky.

The 1996 Reform Party candidate called Clinton's behavior "erratic" and said the country has been left with a leadership void because of his actions.

"This man can't be in that office," Perot said Wednesday evening on CNN's "Larry King Live" show.

Firing back at Perot, White House press secretary Mike McCurry said

Popcorn in the foyer?
Of a church?

When you enter the foyer at Fellowship of Believers in Hereford, you will not see the usual brochures and church literature, although those things are likely to be found. No, standing prominently in the FOB foyer is a shiny red popcorn machine.

Starting Oct. 14, the popcorn machine will be put to use as part of "A Night at the Movies."

Pastor Nathan Stone said recently a large-screen television will be in place in the church on Thursday night and a movie will be presented.

The idea is to watch the movie intelligently, making an effort to find out the film's central message, if it describes reality, if it offers insight on how life should -- or should not -- be lived.

Stone said viewers will be urged to participate in discussion of the movie, expressing their opinions about what scenes, situations or comments most affected them.

The possible lineup of films will not be the typical "churchy" fare, such as "The Ten Commandments" or "Jesus of Nazareth," he said. The movies to be screened will be contemporary films which provide deep meaning to today's audiences. The film rating will be announced in advance, he said.

Among the movies under consideration for viewing and discussion are "Cry, the Beloved Country," "Lord of the Flies," "Defending Your Life," "The Pawnbroker," "Trip to Bountiful," "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest," "Fried Green Tomatoes," "My Left Foot," "The Edge," "Shogun," "The Apostle," and "The Quiet

Global selling spree continues; markets fear lower profits

NEW YORK (AP) - Stocks fell further on Wall Street today, extending a global selling spree amid fears of lower corporate profits and new financial crises ahead.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which tumbled 237.90 points on Wednesday, fell an additional 124.36 to 7,718.26 by late morning.

The Dow's 12.4 percent slide in the third quarter, which ended Wednesday, was its worst quarterly performance for the Dow in eight years. The blue-chip average began the day down 65.63 points from where it began this year and almost 1,500 points, or 16 percent, from its July 17 record of 9,337.97.

Broader market indicators also were losing more ground today.

Stock prices earlier plunged in Asia, with Tokyo shares falling 1.6 percent to a new 12-year low, and shares were falling sharply in Europe, where Germany's central bank left interest rates unchanged.

Blue chips in London sank 2.4 percent to new lows for the year, while the key index in Frankfurt, Germany, was down 5.5 percent late in the trading day, and the main indicator in Paris was down 3.9 percent.

The selloff in stocks has sent a flood of money into U.S. Treasury securities, a traditional haven in times of uncertainty. Yields on 30-year Treasury bonds fell further below 5 percent this morning, reaching levels unseen for long-term government bonds since 1967.

Traders were alarmed to see prices on the New York Stock Exchange nosedive 2.9 percent on Wednesday, even though the Federal Reserve had lowered a key interest rate one-quarter percentage point on Tuesday. Some traders were disappointed that the cut was not deeper amid fears a go-slow approach would not do enough to counter the economic crises that have swept through Asia and Russia and are threatening Latin America.

"The smaller-than-expected lowering of interest rates by the U.S. Federal Reserve has a chain reaction," said Lee Won-ho, an analyst at Samsung Securities Co. in Seoul, South Korea, where the main stock index fell by 1.5 percent today. "It is affecting Wall Street, the Japanese market, ours and others."

There also are worries about where the next financial market crisis may erupt after last week's $3.6 billion private bailout of Long-Term Capital Management LP of Greenwich, Conn.

Investors worldwide worry that the downturn on Wall Street could signal a possible slowdown in economic growth.

"There's a psychological impact overall, but there's also a direct impact on companies like Sony and TDK which derive a high percentage of their earnings from overseas markets," said Pelham Smithers, a stock strategist in Tokyo at ING Baring Securities (Japan) Ltd.

A new survey in Japan said confidence among small and medium-sized businesses about the economy plunged to its worst level since the Bank of Japan began the quarterly samplings in 1967.

Economy: Manufacturing activity slows in September

NEW YORK (AP) - The nation's manufacturing sector slowed in September as global economic problems hurt U.S. exporters, but the slowdown was not as sharp as economists had expected.

The National Association of Purchasing Management reported today that its monthly index of business activity was at 49.4 percent last month, holding steady from its August level. Economists had predicted the index would reveal a more severe decline.

The reading marked the fourth straight month the measure was under 50 percent, a sign of contraction in the industrial sector.

The private group's report is compiled from a survey of corporate purchasing executives nationwide. It is widely followed by economists because it is usually the first indicator of how the economy performed in the previous month.

"Major concerns continue to focus on Asia and its effect on the domestic economy - cheaper imports, reduced exports, and currency instability," said Norbert J. Ore, chairman of the association's survey panel.

Exports continued to contract in September, although at a slower pace, while imports grew at a faster clip.

In another report today, spreading economic hardship around the world is not putting many Americans out of work.

The number of first-time claims for unemployment benefits fell by 5,000 to a seasonally adjusted 289,000 last week, the Labor Department said today. That's the best since April, when unemployment was at a 28-year low.

The closely watched four-week moving average of claims hit its lowest level since 1989, falling by 3,750 to 299,250 for the period ended one week earlier.

Many analysts have been expecting joblessness, especially among factory workers, to rise as economic problems spreading from Asia to other parts of the globe dampen U.S. export sales and send a flood of inexpensive foreign goods our way.

So far, a spending spree by American consumers has helped keep the unemployment rate, at 4.5 percent in August, near generational lows.

Meanwhile, construction spending in the United States rose a tiny 0.1 percent in August, kept on the upswing mainly by government outlays as outlays for residential building flattened and commercial projects fell.

Overall construction spending inched up to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $651.6 billion, the Commerce Department said today.

That followed a similarly mild 0.1 percent increase in July as residential building broke a record, but spending for commercial projects fell. In June, big spending increases were reported in all building sectors.

A construction boom this year has been fueled by unprecedented demand for new homes as plentiful jobs have boosted family incomes and mortgage rates have fallen to their lowest level in a generation.

Low interest rates on bank loans have also spurred commercial construction.

Analysts have been expecting building to slow as spreading global economic turmoil decreases demand for U.S.-manufactured products overseas and makes imports cheaper and more attractive to American consumers.

In August, residential construction spending fell from record levels by 0.1 percent to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $296.2 billion. An uptick in remodeling projects and basically steady construction of new single-family homes were offset by declining spending on apartment buildings.

Spending on commercial construction projects fell for the third straight month in August, by 0.5 percent to a seasonally adjusted $164.3 billion. Office and factory construction were barely up, while spending on other business buildings such as hotels and shopping centers dropped.

Government construction spending increased by 0.6 percent to a seasonally adjusted $147.9 billion with new hospitals, highways and streets, sewer and water-supply systems leading the way.

In other news, stocks slid at the open, extending Wednesday's 237-point drop by the Dow, but quickly began to recover as the market began to approach its summer lows.

At 10 a.m. on Wall Street, the Dow Jones industrial average was down 45.57 at 7,797.05 after sliding nearly 95 points in the opening minutes of trading.

Most broad-market indicators also steadied after an early follow-through to the Wednesday's selloff.

Investigators probe executives' actions DPS reviews questionable conduct allegations

AUSTIN (AP) - Staff investigators have launched a probe of top officials of the Texas Department of Housing and Community Affairs, along with some projects favored by the housing department's former executive director.

The investigation of the state's troubled housing agency is the second launched by the Texas Department of Public Safety.

The Houston Chronicle and The Dallas Morning News reported today that the latest investigation resulted from a memorandum sent to Gov. George W. Bush by Howard Siegel, the department's former chief credit officer.

The memo described questionable conduct by former executive director Larry Paul Manley, the newspapers reported. The governor's office forwarded the memo to the DPS.

News of the probe surfaced after the Chronicle and The News sought Siegel's notes under the Texas Public Information Act. DPS declined the request on grounds the document is the basis of its criminal investigation. An opinion from the Attorney General's office is pending.

However, Siegel told the newspapers that the memo alleges the Bush appointee - pressured the housing department staff to recommend questionable projects for federal funding, Siegel told the newspapers.

Manley resigned as executive director on Aug. 24, saying he wanted to go into private business. On Wednesday, he denied any wrongdoing.

"There was no illegal activity whatsoever," he told the Chronicle. "I've never taken a dime from anyone that has anything to do with that agency."

Siegel said the deals involved low-income housing projects seeking millions of dollars in federal loans and tax credits that can be quickly converted into cash. He said Manley pressured him to endorse at least 10 questionable projects.

Siegel told The News that the problem deals included:

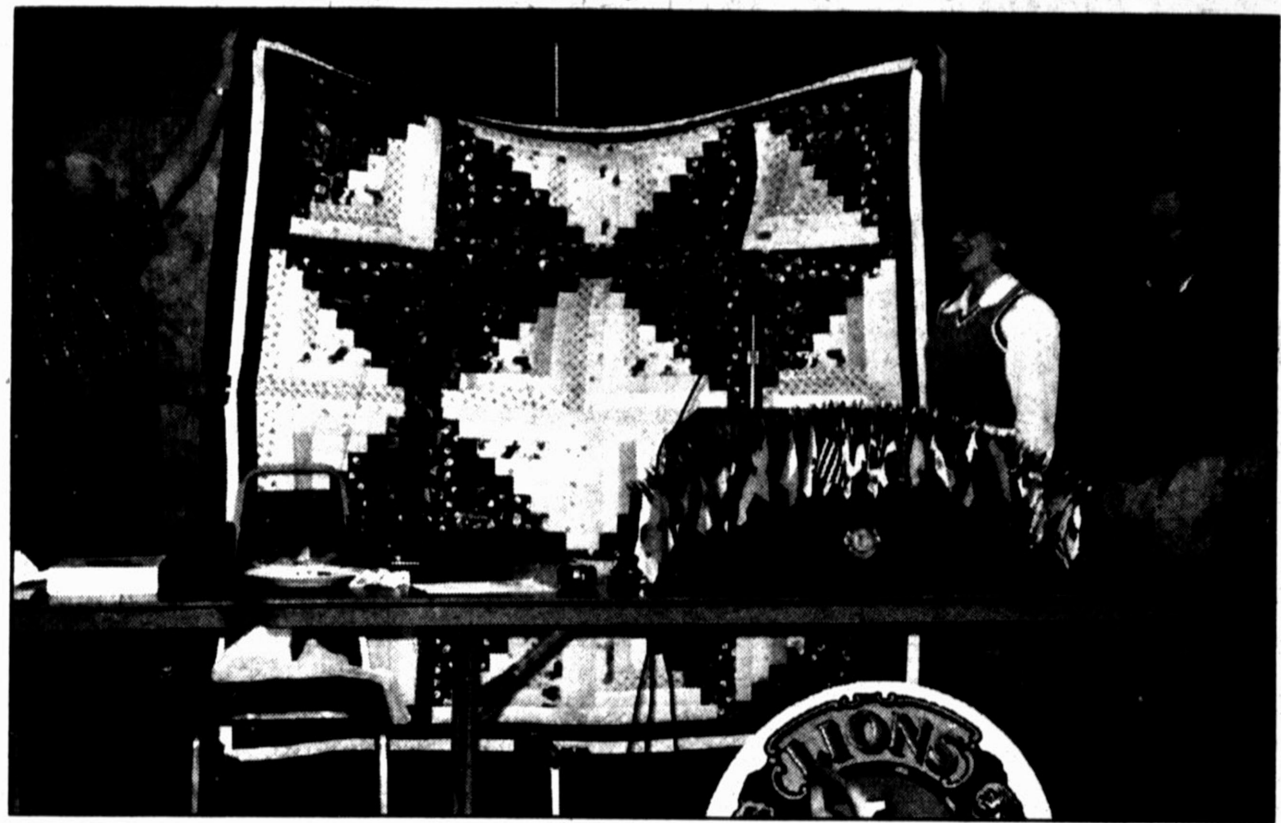

- A private project to renovate a Laredo's dilapidated Hamilton Hotel into 166 apartments for senior citizens. Currently, transients pay by the day to stay in the 83-year-old hotel, much of which has been declared unsafe. In July, the board approved $9 million in federal tax breaks, Siegel said.

- A private developer's plans to build 200 apartments in an industrial area of northeast San Antonio. The board awarded $10 million in tax breaks to the project, despite qualms about subsidizing family apartment construction next to an interstate highway in a heavy concentration of motels.

- A private project to revive the failed Sky Harbor subdivision southwest in southwest San Antonio. In June, the board approved $2.5 million in low-interest loans and down-payment help for the deal, despite doubts about a development with little private backing to be located in one of the state's top-five crime areas.

Daisy Steiner, acting executive director at the housing agency, told the Chronicle that Siegel left the agency in good standing to begin his own consulting business. However, she confirmed he did not mention the complaints in his exit interview with an ethics official in the personnel office.

An FBI-Texas Rangers probe already is under way of state housing board member Florita Bell Griffin of Bryan and alleged corruption involving tax credits. Ms. Griffin has denied any wrongdoing.

Lions quilt raffle

Hereford Lions Club will be selling raffle tickets for a handmade quilt which will be raffled at the Lions Christmas party. Club members, Benny Womble, left, and Stan Fry, Jr., and club sweetheart Emily Fry displayed the quilt at a recent meeting. Tickets for the quilt are $1 a piece or 6 for $5 and can be purchased from any Lions Club member.

Utility payment arrangements now due Heatwave is over, companies must be paid

DALLAS (AP) - Starting today, utility companies across Texas can cut off electricity to about 400,000 households behind on their bills because of the recent record-setting heat wave.

During the siege of 100-degree days, the Public Utility Commission urged residents to let their air conditioners run even if they couldn't afford it.

The agency also ordered utility companies not to disconnect anyone's service for nonpayment. However, the PUC's moratorium on disconnections is up today.

More than 12,000 TU Electric customers, including many in the Dallas area, are more than 90 days late and will be the first group targeted for disconnection, TU Electric spokeswoman Sandy Smith said Wednesday.

"It would behoove them and the electric companies to pick up the phone and call" to set up payment arrangements, PUC spokeswoman Leslie Kjellstrand said.

State regulators, electric companies and relief agencies urge delinquent customers to set up payment plans immediately to avoid disrupted service.

"We're not sitting here champing at the bit, waiting to disconnect people's service," Ms. Smith said. "We want people to contact us."

However, fewer than half of all electric customers in danger of losing service have made such arrangements, despite persistent summerlike temperatures, the PUC said.

The official high temperature in Dallas-Fort Worth Wednesday was 96, well below the record 102 set in 1979.

This summer, TU Electric bills ran 15 to 35 percent higher than usual, utility officials said.

Electric bills averaged $129 in June, $175 in July and $167 in August, officials said.

The summer of 1998 is generally accepted as the second-hottest on record with 56 days of temperatures of 100 degrees or higher. Twenty-nine of those days were consecutive. Those figures were exceeded only in the 1980 heat wave with 69 100-degree days, 42 consecutive.

State law requires utilities to give customers 10 days' notice before disconnecting them. Some TU Electric customers were sent such a notice before the August moratorium and another notice two weeks ago.

LULAC challenges Bush appointment

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - Gov. George W. Bush ran afoul of the Voting Rights Act by appointing a San Antonio lawyer to the 4th Circuit Court of Appeals, the Justice Department says.

The federal agency also said in a letter issued this week that the process Bush used in appointing Karen Angelini to the San Antonio-based court is flawed and must be reworked to ensure the full participation of minorities in the election process.

Groups that had challenged Ms. Angelini's appointment said the opinion was vindication and proof that the judge is presiding illegally.

But it was unclear if there would be any movement to remove Ms. Angelini or if the opinion had any effect on the upcoming Nov. 3 election, when she will seek a full term on the bench.

Ms. Angelini, a Republican, was appointed in January 1997 after a court fight over the resignation of her predecessor, Judge Phil Hardberger.

She initially was appointed to the 4th Court in July 1996, a month after Hardberger, a Democrat, announced his resignation in a letter to Bush. Hardberger decided to step down in June 1996 but put off his resignation for six months in hopes of triggering a special election to choose his successor.

Bush responded to Hardberger's resignation letter by deeming it effective immediately and appointing Ms. Angelini after the Texas Supreme Court ruled he could do so.

In their legal challenge, attorneys for LULAC argued Ms. Angelini should be removed from office because her appointment violated the Voting Rights Act and that a special election should be called. They said Wednesday that the federal opinion supports the view.

Secretary of State Al Gonzales hadn't decided what to do by Wednesday but apparently wasn't inclined to seek the judge's removal. "Secretary of State Gonzales is considering the response, if any, that he will make to this letter," said the spokeswoman, Jane Dees. "He has no reason to question the validity of Judge Angelini's appointment."

A Bush spokeswoman indicated the governor and his attorneys also were reviewing the decision.

"Gov. Bush fulfills his duties in a responsible way and follows the law in appointing judges," Linda Edwards said.

With the Nov. 3 election so close, many said they were unsure of any effect the Justice Department opinion might have. Ms. Angelini is facing Democrat Jim Branton in the election.

"If the (Texas Supreme) court does remove me from the bench, I guess I'm still on the ballot, and I would go forward with the campaign," she told the San Antonio Express-News.

Bill Lee, an acting assistant U.S. attorney general, stressed in the Justice Department letter that the process by which Ms. Angelini was appointed circumvented minority participation.

He noted that until the Justice Department withdraws its objection to Texas' appointment process or a different judgment is reached in the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia, the process is "legally unenforceable."

Spring senior remains FFA president

SPRING, Texas (AP) - Amanda Curry, a 17-year-old senior at Spring High School, will be allowed to remain as president of the school's chapter of the Future Farmers of America.

Miss Curry, who has a 3.3 grade-point average and several years' history of raising livestock, was selected president in April. But the Spring school board disallowed her election on grounds she lived outside the school district.

Miss Curry's parents sued the school district, and the case was scheduled to go to trial this week. Wednesday, it was announced that the case has been settled out of court.

"The case has been settled, and she is the president," school district spokesman Jerry Smith said Wednesday.

Smith said a confidentiality agreement prohibits him from commenting beyond a prepared statement.

"This matter has been resolved without any admission of liability in order to bring the matter to closure. This action is taken to avoid any more expenditure of time and resources and to allow all students to complete the school year without a lawsuit."

Jeffrey and Darla Curry said they were forthright with Spring school officials last October, saying circumstances and finances had forced them to build a one-story home 20 miles away in Montgomery County to accommodate Amanda's 11-year-old severely handicapped younger brother.

The Currys said in a July hearing that they moved because she and her husband were no longer able to carry their 100-pound son to his upstairs bedroom and bathroom at their residence in Spring.

She had attended Springs schools all her life, and she continued to attend Spring High School after the move.

They said they were complying with the advice of the Spring High principal, who told them Curry could maintain her legal residency if she and her mother "laid their heads at their Spring home in the district every night," according to the lawsuit.

The family alleged that the father of a rival of Amanda Curry conspired with others to remove her as president. They claimed the conspiracy led to an investigation by SISD into Curry's residency.

Claims against all defendants, including Eugene Yanchak, the father of the alleged rival, were dismissed.

Saturday night's drawing will be worth an estimated $18 million.

Reports by delegates are highlight of FCE luncheon at county library

Delegates to the State FCE Meeting in Corpus Christi made their reports at the luncheon preceding the Deaf Smith County Family Community Education Council meeting Monday in the Heritage Room of the Deaf Smith County Library.

Jo Lee, Maudette Smith and Mary Carter attended the state meeting. Carter attended as an alternate for Mariellen Homfeld. Lee and Smith reported on workshops they attended. Prior to the reports, the luncheon concluded with a surprise belated birthday cake for Becky Camp.

Following the luncheon, Lee called the Council meeting to order. Seven clubs were represented with four having 100 percent attendance.

Ford FCE Club had opening exercise, which included the surprise birthday cake. Katherine Paschel read the poem, "Thought for a Day."

Homfeld, TAFCE chairman, stressed the importance of members having cultural arts items for the District I meeting.

FCE members will cater for a square dance from 7 p.m.-10 p.m.

Oct. 24 at the Bull Barn.

Club dues are due at the Oct. 26 Council meeting. Each club needs to turn in a slate of new officers, addresses and phone numbers and other information for the yearbook.

The program for October club meetings will be "A Woman's Responsibility," focusing on breast cancer awareness. This will be a hands-on program using models.

The public is invited to all meetings. Call Beverly Harder, County Extension Agent for Family and Consumer Sciences, at 364-3573 for more information.

Steiert honored at dinner in Dallas

Jaime Steiert, 18, of Hereford was among 28 Texas State 4-H Council representatives to be recognized this past weekend in Dallas at the 52nd Annual Youth Honor Awards Dinner, sponsored by the State Fair of Texas.

Steiert was elected first vice president of the State 4-H Council in July and also serves as president of the District and local 4-H Councils.

Accompanying her to Dallas were her parents, Jim and Kerrie Steiert, and her 4-H advisor, Beverly Harder, County Extension Agent in Family and Consumer Sciences.

Others recognized at the banquet were the state officers of FFA and FHA. The youth dinner is held yearly as "a tribute to these officers who have achieved a level of leadership recognized throughout Texas."

The welcoming address was delivered by John P. Thompson, chairman of the board for the State Fair of Texas.

Additional activities included a

JAIME STEIERT

Texas Tech University reception for the youth leaders and their parents at the Dallas Grand Hotel. As a state 4-H officer Steiert was a guest of Texas Utilities at a formal luncheon, held in Downtown Dallas. She also received computer training and visited the State Fair during her trip.

Steiert is a 10-year member of the local 4-H program. She has been active in a variety of project areas and has won four first place titles at State 4-H Roundup. Throughout the coming year, she will serve as an ambassador for 4-H, speaking at various functions here and throughout the state.

A local native, Steiert is the great-granddaughter of Troy Womble, one of Hereford's first residents.

As a senior at Hereford High School, she is president of Hereford Orators Club, Corporal of the Drill Team and academically ranked in the top five percent of her class.

She was recently elected president of Hereford Concertees and has studied piano for 10 years. She is an active member of First Baptist Church.

Ann Landers

Should spouse who moved out make first move in resolution?

Dear Ann Landers: Two weeks ago, when I came home from the supermarket, I found a note from my husband saying there was too much pressure in his life and he needed to get away. I immediately checked our bedroom and found that all his clothes were gone.

A few days later, I learned he already had another apartment and a new phone number, which proved he had been planning his escape for quite some time. I had an awful feeling of betrayal when I realized that the person I had been sleeping next to for so many years would plan to sneak off and leave me, without saying a word.

The note he left said he would contact me in a few days. It has been nearly a week, and I haven't heard from him. My friends tell me I should phone him and find out exactly what he has in mind, but I don't want to do that. After all, he is the one who left, and I think he should make the first move. Please give me some advice.

Confused in the Midwest
Dear Midwest: Don't rush. Let the dust settle. Wait another week. If you don't hear anything by then, call and tell him you need to know what his plans are so you can make yours. You gave me no clue as to your age, how long you have been married or what your financial status is. If I knew more about your situation, I could be more helpful. Good luck.

Dear Ann Landers: I live in a nice suburb and have two well-adjusted children, a 6-year-old boy and a 2-year-old girl. The problem is the 12-year-old boy who lives three doors away. He really is strange. I rarely see him with children his own age. He often plays with kids who are much younger than he is, including my own.

Other neighbors have mentioned this boy's peculiar and unpredictable nature. They do not trust him. He once bit a child and knocked another boy off his bicycle. Recently, I had a basketball hoop installed in our driveway. As soon as the hoop went up, the boy started to play there. After a week of showing up in our driveway, I told him he had to ring our bell and ask permission. After repeated attempts to get permission, with little success, he finally got the message. He then began peering in our windows like a Peeping Tom to see if anyone was home so he could ring our bell. This spooked my wife.

Frankly, I don't want this boy around my house or my children. His father is a friendly guy but travels three weeks out of the month. His mother is cold and distant. Meanwhile, the boy continues to hang around our property.

Should I discuss my concern with the boy's father or simply continue to discourage his presence around our house? Please help. -- Worried Parent in Illinois

Dear Worried Parent: That child needs to be seen by a professional for evaluation. His behavior suggests that he has some problems that need attention. You should talk to the boy's father about your concerns, which sound legitimate to me. Meanwhile, make sure that an adult is present whenever he plays with your children.

Dear Ann Landers: Where in the world did you park your brains when you told the woman whose sister named her son Marion that the boy would have trouble in school? You suggested the mother give him a middle name so the teachers wouldn't think he was a girl.

Marion (spelled with an "o") is a perfectly good boy's name and has been for centuries. Just like Francis and Frances, Ashley and Ashlee. Shame you. -- Tex in Texas

Dear ex: At least 5,000 people wrote to tell me John Wayne's real name was Marion. The things I learn from my readers!

Hints from Heloise

SLICING CANTALOUPE
Dear Heloise: I love cantaloupe, but I hate to clean it. I found an easy way to clean and slice it and thought I would pass it on.

Cut the cantaloupe in half and remove the seeds. Lay it flat-side down and slice it 1 inch thick. With an adjustable cheese slicer (I love cheese also), adjust it to the thickness that you want to take off.

Works real well. Happy eating. — Arthur S. Blunk, Indianapolis, Ind.

TABLE TRASH
Dear Heloise: A small, deep bowl on a dining table can serve as a receptacle for unsightly table trash such as used tea bags, sugar envelopes, condiment packets, cracker wrappers and many other items. It hides the trash and is easy to clean. We have used a table trash bowl for years and I thought we were unique, but on a recent trip to Europe I found them in use in some small hotels as well. — Graham LeSturgeon, Grove City, Ohio

Rudd wins one for the little guys

By HANK KURZ Jr.
AP Sports Writer

The record book will show that Ricky Rudd's gutsy drive in the NAPA AutoCare 500 gave him a NASCAR record of at least one victory 16 years in a row.

There should be a footnote that he did it as a dinosaur in a big-bucks sport where winning in your own car is almost extinct.

There have been times this season when the Chesapeake, Va., native wondered if those days were over. He hadn't finished in the top five all year, a clear sign to him that the streak might be in jeopardy.

"The win streak, trying to keep it alive, it didn't look like we had a snowball's chance at all in the first half of the season," Rudd said.

"I've always had the strategy that you've got to log top-five finishes regularly before you can win, and mathematically the odds will put you in Victory Lane.

"We didn't do that all year, weren't close."

The problems began last year, after he brought his Ford home first in the Brickyard 400 -- the most lucrative of his 20 career victories.

"We won a lot of money ($571,000) and said, 'Now's the time. We don't have a tremendously large budget, but now we've got some money and can freshen up the cars a little bit, build some new ones,'" Rudd recalled. "And darn if everything we built wasn't worse than the cars we'd been racing."

"Now we had a fleet of slow race cars."

They also had to convert the Thunderbirds to Tauruses. When this season began, Rudd and his team were behind almost every other Ford operation.

He started 40th in the season-opening Daytona 500, and finished 42nd. He started 30th in the second race, at Rockingham, N.C., and finished 43rd -- dead last.

Six races into the season, Rudd stood 32nd in the Winston Cup points race, hadn't been in the top-10 and had failed to finish twice. That's when Bill Ingle, Rudd's crew chief in 1994 and 1995, returned to the Tide team's Mooresville, N.C., shop and started rebuilding the fleet.

Gradually, the results improved, but still were nowhere near Rudd's normal standing. He arrived last weekend at Martinsville, Va., 22nd in points and, even after qualifying second, seemed to be bracing for the inevitable bad luck.

"Getting the car to run good for long runs is another issue," he said.

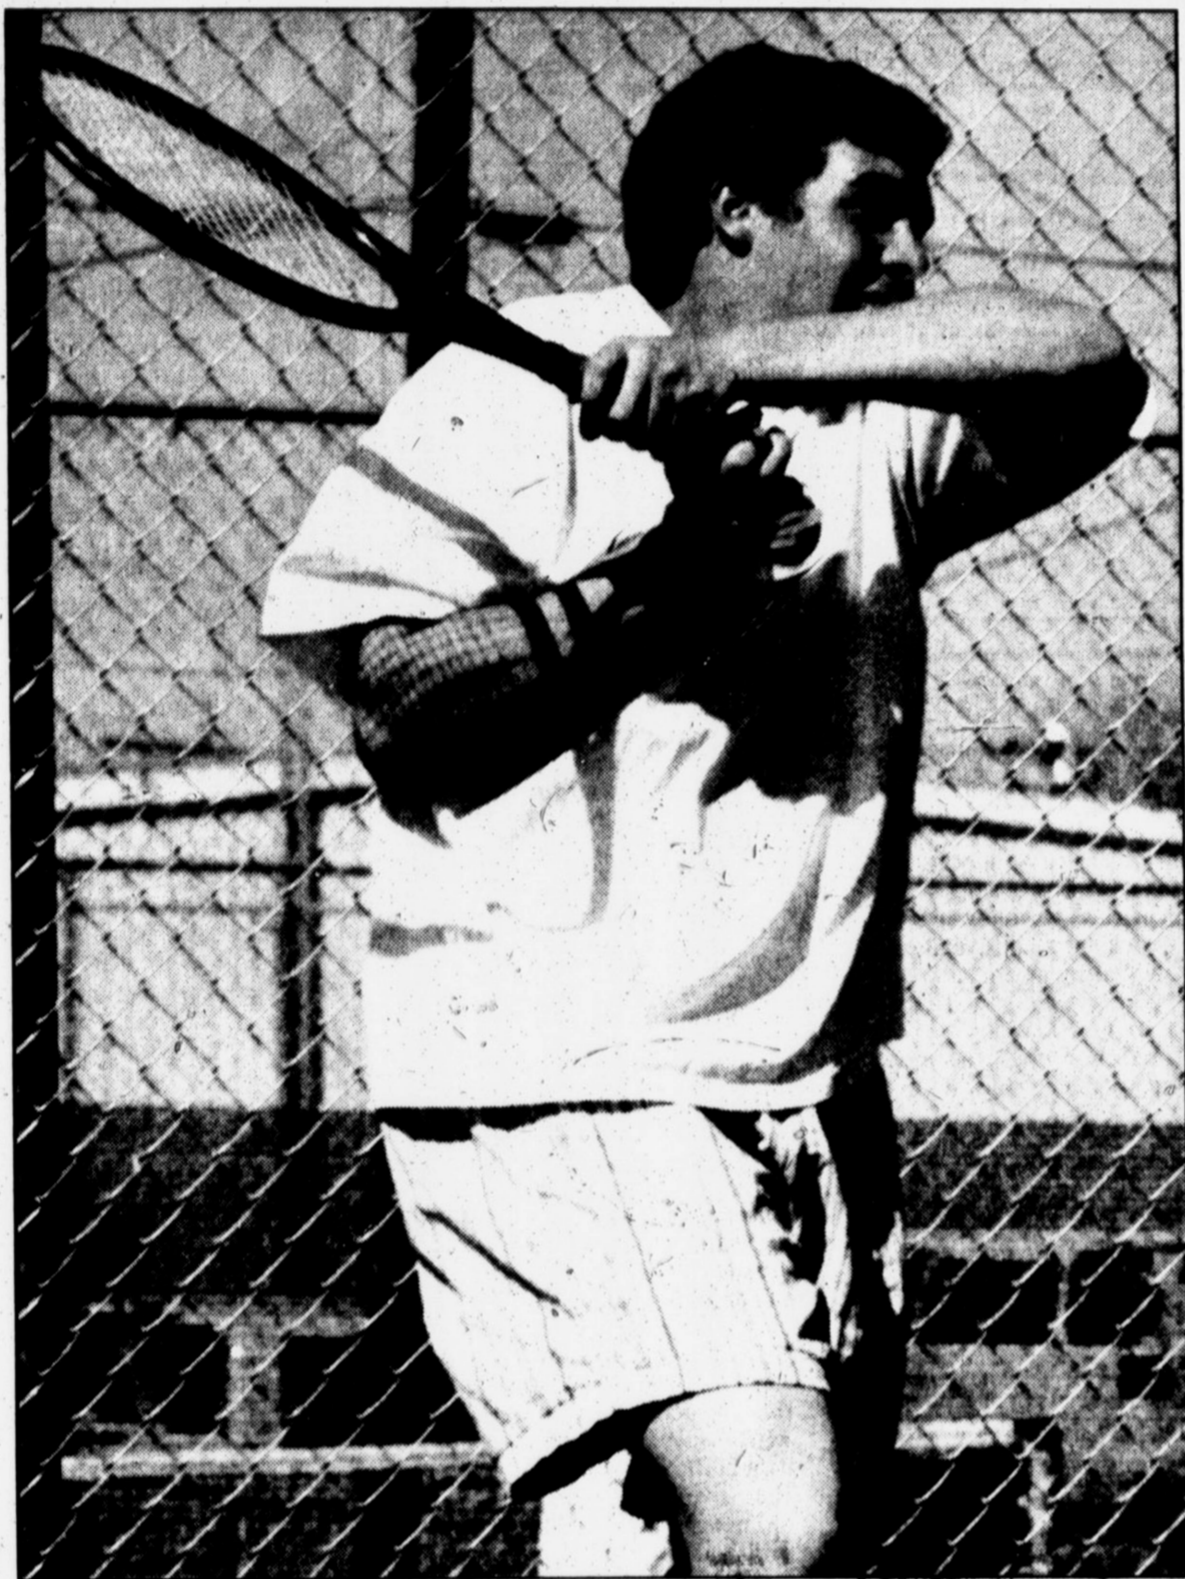

It did, and Rudd overcame intense heat that left him near delirious and won the race at Martinsville Speedway.

He said the victory was as big as Indy, and used the post-race press conference to lobby for the plight of the little guy.

"A single-car operation only

Indians even series with Boston

By TOM WITHERS
AP Sports Writer

CLEVELAND -- Once the Indians got mad, they got even.

Feeding off the energy created by the ejections of manager Mike Hargrove and starting pitcher Dwight Gooden in the first inning, Cleveland tied up its AL playoff series with Boston at one game apiece Wednesday, beating the Red Sox 9-5.

"Well, it proved they can play better without me," said Hargrove, who had cooled down enough after the game that he could joke about his ejection. "I think that the byproduct of it was it turned up our intensity and it turned our fans' intensity up."

Dave Burba, rushed into service when Gooden was tossed after 22 pitches, made it into the sixth inning, and David Justice homered and drove in four runs for the Indians.

After being routed 11-3 in Game 1, Cleveland needed a lift. And although they certainly didn't plan to spend the rest of the day watching TV in Cleveland's clubhouse, Hargrove and Gooden sparked the Indians and their fans by getting kicked out by plate umpire Joe Brinkman.

"Yesterday, we were the worst team in baseball," Sandy Alomar said. "Today, we're even."

The Indians' turnaround was nothing new to Hargrove, who has seen his team rebound from adversity many times.

"For a long time, not only this year but also last year, this team has had plenty of chances to go belly up and quit. . . They've never done that," the manager said.

The best-of-5 series continues Friday afternoon at Fenway Park with Cleveland's Charles Nagy facing Bret Saberhagen. Game 4 is set for Saturday, and the teams would return to Jacobs Field for Game 5 on Sunday if necessary.

Game 2 will be best remembered for a wild, 39-minute first inning that included the ejections, three runs, two passed balls, three walks, two stolen bases, a hit batter, two controversial calls and a lot of heated words.

There was more tension in the ninth when both benches and bullpen

Frosh quarterback Applewhite leads UT

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

AUSTIN -- Major Applewhite has a play he'd like to see on the television highlights some day.

He wants to "throw the winning TD in a championship game with my left arm while a man is holding onto my right arm."

While not a likely happenstance because Applewhite is right-handed, the fantasy is a clue to the competitive nature of this Texas Longhorn redshirt freshman quarterback.

Wide receiver Wane McGarity said of Applewhite: "He's a true born leader. He knows how to take charge. He's on the way to becoming a great quarterback."

Applewhite became the Texas starter two weeks ago against undefeated Kansas State after senior Richard Walton broke a hand. Despite a fearsome pass rush, Applewhite hit 16 of 37 passes for 239 yards and a touchdown against the Wildcats. He also was hurried into two interceptions.

Applewhite took some hard hits and kept getting up for more against the Wildcats.

Afterwards he said of the 48-7 drubbing, "I was upset we lost. I saw some negative things that I'd done and some positive things. I'm a very critical person. My dad calls me a perfectionist."

Applewhite, who played at Baton Rouge, La., Catholic High, threw 50 touchdown passes in high school against only nine interceptions in two years as a starter.

He said his teammates "treated me like a starter and that's what I expected. I didn't expect them to treat me like 'Well, this is Major. He's a freshman. If he does bad, that's what we expect.' I didn't want to be treated like that."

Applewhite stung Rice for 258 yards and two touchdowns on a 15-of-21 performance last Saturday night and didn't turn the ball over. He burned the Owls every time they put

Rangers in danger of Yank sweep

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

NEW YORK -- Add Shane Spencer to the long list of New York Yankees legends.

An unknown a month ago, the compact rookie capped his amazing September by homering in his first post-season at-bat to lead Andy Pettitte and the Yankees past the Texas Rangers 3-1 Wednesday night for a 2-0 lead in their AL division series.

"It won't be storybook until it's all over," Spencer said. "We've still got eight or nine more to go."

"I'm just riding it now, cherishing the moment. Maybe someday I'll look back on it."

Pettitte atoned for a season-long struggle and pitched perfectly into the fifth inning. Texas led the league in batting this year, but managed only five hits in a Game 1 shutout and got only five more against the AL's top staff.

"What really feels good is that the critics were there, but my manager stuck with me," Pettitte said.

The Yankees will try to sweep the best-of-5 playoff on Friday night at Texas. David Cone (20-7) starts for New York against Aaron Sele (19-11).

"We just have to get the bats going," Texas manager Johnny Oates said.

Spencer got his chance to start in left field partly because of an ominous medical report on Darryl Strawberry. Told that doctors had "found something" on his colon, Strawberry left the team for more tests Thursday. It is not known when he will rejoin the Yankees.

The Rangers had never faced Spencer, and he seemed to catch them by surprise, much the same way he startled Yankees fans with his power down the stretch.

Spencer, who said before the game that he was having the time of his life, happened to notice his name on the lineup card. He then hit a solo home run off Rick Helling in the second inning, and singled ahead of Scott Brosius' homer for a 3-0 lead in the fourth.

"He knows what that piece of wood is made for, and it's not to clean off his shoes," Oates said.

The sellout crowd of 57,360 rewarded the rookie with standing ovations all night, the way fans used to respond to the likes of Reggie and Mickey. At 26, the humble, aw-shucks Spencer had to be urged by manager Joe Torre and his teammates to take a curtain call.

"I could hear them getting loud and it was like, 'Gosh. Oh, no,'" he said. "Joe was the one who told me to go out there."

Spencer had spent eight full seasons in the minors before finally getting his chance in the majors this year. He made three roundtrips between Triple-A Columbus and New York.

Promoted for a fourth time on Aug. 31, he hit eight home runs in September and three grand slams -- joining Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig and Joe DiMaggio among the seven players in team history to hit three slams in an entire year.

Spencer, who hit 119 homers in the minors, earned AL player of the week honors for hitting six homers in the last week. But his home run against Texas drew the biggest cheer yet.

Helling, who emerged to tie for the league lead with 20 wins, struck out three of New York's first six batters and threw two fastballs past Spencer for called strikes. On a 2-2 pitch, however, Spencer launched a drive over the 399-foot marker in left-center field for the game's first run.

Helling said he knew Spencer was a good fastball hitter, but felt he could throw one more past him.

"It helps if you have an idea and you know what you've done against him before," Helling said.

Atlanta dominates Cubs, 7-1

ATLANTA (AP) -- John Smoltz's dominating performance on the mound was expected. Michael Tucker's power at the plate wasn't.

Smoltz became the winningest pitcher in postseason history, allowing only five hits in 7 2-3 innings as the Atlanta Braves cruised to a 7-1 victory over the Chicago Cubs in Game 1 of the NL division series Wednesday.

Tucker, who had just two home runs in the past three months and was dropped to eighth in the batting order, got the offense going with a two-run homer in the second inning.

Ryan Klesko turned the game into a rout with a seventh-inning grand slam against Matt Karchner, but the runs really weren't needed with Smoltz on the mound. He pushed his record to 11-3 in 21 postseason starts, breaking the record for wins shared with Whitey Ford and Dave Stewart.

Smoltz was picked for Game 1 based on his playoff success and a 12-1 record in the second half of the season. The Braves' pitching is so deep they have 20-game winner Tom Glavine and four-time Cy Young winner Greg Maddux ready to go in the next two games.

Smoltz was 17-3 and had the best winning percentage in the majors during the regular season -- a remarkable performance considering he had elbow surgery in December and went on the disabled list twice early in the season.

The Cubs, weary from a three-team wild-card race and forced to win a one-game playoff against San Francisco on Monday, were in a full-scale letdown mode, going down meekly in their first playoff game since 1989.

Through the first seven innings, Smoltz allowed only one runner past first -- Sammy Sosa on a seventh-inning double.

Applewhite

up an eight-man front trying to stop Ricky Williams.

Coach Mack Brown was impressed.

"Major had a tremendous game for just his second week as a starter," the coach said. "He did a wonderful job of checking off at the line of scrimmage. He just seemed comfortable out there."

The 6-foot-1, 195-pound Applewhite just hopes he can keep getting better and better until Walton heals.

The coaches have to chase him out of the film room.

"I love to watch football," Applewhite said. "I've been watching football since I came out of the womb. If you want to be the best, you always have to find something that you can work on."

gets seven test dates, so we're doing our testing at the race track," he said, calling each race an experiment. "In a lot of ways it's not fair, but we don't have a choice."

Points leader Jeff Gordon, part of the three-team Hendrick Motorsports operation that has won the last three series championships, said Rudd's victory showed that drivers don't need to be part of a multicar team to be successful.

Rudd paid tribute to Ingle and his crew.

Hereford's boys and girls cross country teams will both run in Lubbock Saturday.

Hereford 8th downs Friona, 16-8

From staff reports

Brice West hooked up with Johnny Esparza on an 11-yard touchdown pass in the fourth quarter to lead Hereford past Friona 16-8 in eighth-grade "B-2" football Monday at Whiteface Stadium.

Ricky Gomez scored the Whitefaces' only other touchdown on a 12-yard run in the second quarter.

"(The) kids played well together," Hereford coach Travis Schulte said, "considering they normally play as separate teams. They came together when they needed to giving themselves the chance to win."

Hereford will host Bushland at 6 p.m. Monday.

Cancer claims Quisenberry

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) -- Dan Quisenberry, a star reliever for the Royals whose droll wit and funky delivery charmed fans and baffled batters, died Wednesday of brain cancer. He was 45.

The major league saves leader from 1979-85, Quisenberry died around dawn at his home in suburban Leawood, Kan., after a nine-month battle with the illness. He had undergone surgery twice since December when sudden, persistent headaches were diagnosed as the most lethal type of tumor.

"Dan was one of the finest people I've ever known," said Atlanta Braves general manager John Schuerholz, who headed the Royals' scouting department 20 years ago when an undrafted Quisenberry had to plead for a tryout.

News of his illness last winter jolted Kansas City, where the affable, quick-witted Quisenberry had remained a popular and active member of the community.

Indians

emptied briefly after John Valentin took exception to an inside pitch from Indians reliever Mike Jackson, who picked up the save.

Mo Vaughn, who had a postseason record seven RBI in the series opener, went 1-for-4 with two strikeouts and a walk.

Gooden, seeking his first postseason win, was in trouble with Brinkman after just his third pitch. He disagreed with the umpire on a 2-0 pitch to leadoff hitter Darren Lewis, yelling when Brinkman called ball three.

The umpire started out from behind the plate as Gooden motioned to him that things were OK and he would continue. Hargrove came out to calm his pitcher, but on his way back to the bench, he argued with Brinkman and was quickly tossed.

"For me, it's one of those things that happens in the heat of battle where everybody's competitive, especially in this situation," Hargrove said. "It was just a difference of opinion. I did what I had to do and Joe did what he had to do."

Gooden walked the first two hitters, but after striking out Vaughn, Nomar Garciaparra doubled high off the wall in left. Darren Lewis and Valentin scored on the hit, although TV replays showed Valentin was thrown out.

When Brinkman called him safe, Gooden, who was backing up the play, said something to the umpire, who immediately ejected him. Gooden had to be restrained by several teammates as he tried to get at Brinkman.

"I didn't even know I got thrown out until I got back to the mound and the other umpires told me," Gooden said.

Chastity Bono mourns lack of reconciliation

NEW YORK (AP) - Chastity Bono says she never got a chance to heal a rift with her father before he died.

Sonny Bono, the entertainer-turned-congressman, was killed in a Jan. 5 ski accident. Chastity Bono, a former spokeswoman for the Gay and Lesbian Alliance Against Defamation, said she and her father had a falling out over his decision to co-sponsor the Defense of Marriage Act, which outlawed gay marriages.

"I took it very personally," she told the Oct. 13 issue of the Advocate. "It put a tremendous amount of distance between us, and then he died before we were able to resolve it." Bono's half-sister, Christy, urged her father to call Chastity and talk to her about it but he died before he got the chance.

Chastity Bono believes he went to his grave regretting it.

"Medium James Van Praagh did a reading with my mother recently and one of the things he said to her was that my dad said, 'I wish I listened to Christy. I should have called Chas,'" she said.

Chastity Bono said she would like to follow in her father's footsteps and run for public office.

BILL COSBY

LOS ANGELES (AP) - While others go gaga over computer games, Bill Cosby is remaining true to that old classic - checkers.

"This game is like a magnet," the comedian said Tuesday. "Kids and adults actually want to take a break from the computer to play it."

Cosby is backing the Bill Cosby Cube Checkers Challenge, billed as the world's largest checkers tournament. It will start next week with games at FAO Schwartz stores across the country. The Nov. 9 championship tournament will be held in New York.

Cube Checkers includes two improvisations on the original game: it's played with numbered cubes and players get two moves at a time.

The $5 application fee will benefit the Hello Friend/Ennis William Cosby Foundation, set up in memory of Cosby's son, Ennis, killed last year in a robbery attempt. A portion of the proceeds from sales of the game will also go to the fund.

him when his term is over.

But Albright isn't interested, said Lee McClenny, a state Department spokesman.

"Madeleine Albright said it clear," McClenny said Wednesday. "She was very pleased by the offer, but she already has a job she likes very much and she's not looking for another job."

NAOMI CAMPBELL

TORONTO (AP) - Naomi Campbell insists she likes Canada. Really.

In town filming a movie, the supermodel was responding to a headline in Sunday's New York Post: "Naomi gives Canada big chill."

"I chose to shoot here," she said from the set Tuesday. "I wanted to come here."

A column in the Post said Campbell's "imperious behavior - we're inured to it here - while she's been shooting her new film ... has put some Toronto noses out of joint." It also said: "There were even complaints the diva was smoking in non-smoking areas" of her hotel and throwing tantrums on the set.

Not true, said Campbell, as she puffed on a cigarette. "I don't pay any attention to stuff like that," she added.

SYLVESTER STALLONE

MIAMI (AP) - Sly is selling out. Unable to get rid of his five-bedroom mansion, Sylvester Stallone is courting an ultra-luxury hotel chain, to the chagrin of his neighbors.

London's Orient-Express Hotels Inc. has made a $24.7 million offer to build 200 villa-style rooms on the 11.7-acre property. The company would have to obtain zoning approvals to build a commercial structure in a residential neighborhood.

"I moved here because it was quiet and lovely, and I would rather not have 200 more cars or even 100 more cars per night down the street," Sandra Druckman said.

The actor has had no buyers at his asking price of $27.5 million.

JOHN CUNNIFF

Business Mirror

Social Security trapped

NEW YORK (AP) - If present trends continue, Americans won't have enough money to live in the present because so much will be set aside for living in the future.

This strange state of affairs will of necessity have to be avoided, but that outcome can't be read in current trends. Government needs and Social Security seem to have a higher priority.

The latest indication of that priority lies in the president's promise to veto a tax cut voted last week by the House. He contended that without a veto, Social Security would be denied funds needed for benefits.

One of the ironies in this is that funds for the tax cut may already have been paid, since the Federal government expects a $1.55 trillion surplus, amassed almost solely from taxes, over the next decade.

Another is that taxes have failed repeatedly in the past to lessen the growing insecurity of Social Security. In fact, as taxes rose, the financial problems of Social Security became more acute.

A Tax Foundation study indicates that total taxes paid by individuals each year, only $1,361 in 1940, will reach $9,939 this year. To make the numbers comparable, the dollars were adjusted to their 1998 buying power.

Social Security taxes in the past 50 years have risen from 2 percent of payrolls to 12.4 percent, making them a heavier burden for most wage earners than income taxes - which pay for all other expenditures.

During this period, Social Security's eventual benefits problems were growing, leaving it now with the possibility of going broke just two or three decades into the new century. Tax increases didn't do the job.

Based on experience, widespread doubts exist about tax increases as the solution, especially when they are confronted with evidence that tax increases slow economic growth, job creation and living standards.

Financial stress can now be shown clearly in bankruptcy and loan figures, but how much is tax-related vs. lifestyles isn't clear. Should the tax trend continue, taxes would undoubtedly play a significant role.

Faced with such evidence, scholars and Congress have been searching for ideas that might enhance the system's ability to pay benefits for a growing number of retirees in future years.

There, however, lies a major problem: Ideas create controversy, especially political controversy, and no subject today is more liable to be controversial than a proposal for fixing Social Security.

There's no dearth of them: Raise the retirement age, cut the cost-of-living adjustments, establish a needs test, provide tax inducements for household savings, allow workers to invest payments in the private sector.

And, of course, there is support also for continuing in the ways of the past by raising taxes while praying that doing so won't somehow overburden the economy and bankrupt households and institutions.

While that would be the worst outcome, it could happen. The merit of ideas aside, neither Republican nor Democrat wants to tamper with policies that can be interpreted, even incorrectly, as anti-Social Security.

It's in the national interest to come up with sensible, long-term solutions, but when short-term political considerations are married to long-term economic ideas that outcome can't be assumed.

Why, it's probably easier and safer to just raise taxes again.

Room."

Although the main focus of "A Night at the Movies" will be on adults, children won't be left out, Stone said. A children's movie and discussion time will be held in another room of the church, he said.

The starting time has been set tentatively for 6 p.m., with the evening's activities expected to be over by 9 p.m.

Stone said the idea behind "A Night at the Movies" is to bring together people from throughout the community to share their thoughts and stimulate the intellectual process.

Governor under scrutiny

PHOENIX (AP) - Arizona's attorney general wants federal authorities to investigate whether former Gov. Fife Symington asked tobacco companies to set up a fund to help him respond to the negative reaction he would get by ordering a lawsuit against them dropped.

Attorney General Grant Woods requested the investigation after finding handwritten notes among documents obtained in preparation for trial of Arizona's lawsuit against cigarette makers, The Arizona Republic reported today.

Symington, who resigned last year after being convicted of bank fraud but is free pending appeal, on Wednesday denied the claims and called them ridiculous.

John Russell, a Justice Department spokesman, told the newspaper the information will be given to the department task force looking into whether the tobacco industry committed fraud, perjury or other wrongdoing.

Arizona's lawsuit, filed in August 1996, demands that tobacco companies pay for the costs of treating people with smoking-related illnesses.

In October 1996, Symington ordered the Arizona Health Care Cost Containment System, the state's Medicaid agency, to withdraw. Symington said he wanted the lawsuit dropped on grounds that it was too risky, too costly and a lost cause.

Easier subpoenas

News groups to fight limit on First Amendment

NEW YORK (AP) - Several major news groups plan to challenge a federal appeals court ruling that would make it easier to force reporters to divulge unpublished or unbroadcast materials from nonconfidential sources.

Lawyer Laura Handman said nine news organizations were joining a legal brief being prepared to support NBC.

The network is appealing the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals' ruling last week that found lawyers could subpoena unbroadcast videotape from a "Dateline" segment aired on NBC.

The court left intact a principle that allows media organizations to withhold information obtained from confidential sources.

Ms. Handman predicted the ruling would "create an incredible burden on reporters."

George Freeman, a lawyer for The

New York Times, said the court erred in its ruling.

"We are very fearful that it keeps media from being objective because all of a sudden they are testifying on one side or the other in the lawsuit," he said Wednesday.

Perry Sanders, a Lake Charles, La., lawyer trying to get the videotape from NBC, said media were overreacting.

"I don't want to stifle news organizations from doing their job. I'm a fan of the news," he said.

In its ruling, the court said it doubted that highly competitive news reporters would be harmed and suggested the threat of potential court review would have a positive effect on the editorial process.

"Such scrutiny is likely to make the final news product more complete, accurate and reliable," the appeals panel said.

Richard Winfield, who represents The Associated Press in the challenge, predicted that such an intrusion on the editorial process "will have a chilling effect and the Supreme Court has said so."

"This idea of third-party scrutiny is a serious challenge to editorial freedom," he said.

The ruling came after NBC refused to turn over unbroadcast videotape from a "Dateline" segment subpoenaed in a federal civil rights lawsuit.

A Hispanic couple is suing a Louisiana deputy sheriff caught on videotape by a "Dateline" producer pulling over a rental car with out-of-state plates. The program segment was testing a theory that law enforcement officers in Louisiana were pulling over drivers because of race, nationality or out-of-state plates.

A LASTING WESTERN GIFT

Written by Hereford native, Gerald McCathern, Horns is a historical novel about the huge grasslands of the Texas Panhandle between the Comanche Indians, buffalo hunters, U.S. Army and Texas cattlemen. If you are a Louis L'Amour fan, you'll love McCathern's no-nonsense, fast-action style of writing and his ability to blend historical and fictional characters and incidents into a breathtaking novel about early Texas.

Patti LaBelle's still going strong in music business

By CHEVEL JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

NEW ORLEANS - At any given performance, Patti LaBelle may invite awestruck fans on stage for an impromptu shimmy-and-shake or to take part in an improvised duet on the chorus of one of her many signature songs.

That's typical Patti LaBelle. It is her live performances that highlight her originality, spontaneity and enviable vocal range and give her a chance to just ... be.

Her genuine, unaffected nature comes across in those soul-stirring shows that continue to wring the spectrum of emotions from fans after nearly four decades in the business.

And at 54, LaBelle is as busy now as she was earlier in her career. This year's agenda has already included the Essence Music Festival in New Orleans and a PBS special with superstars Luther Vandross and Mariah Carey.

Her autobiography, "Don't Block the Blessings," is a best seller. She's also writing a cookbook, due for release in 1999, and working on a new album showcasing her Gospel roots.

She's also involved in a variety of causes, including fighting cancer, which claimed the lives of her three sisters, AIDS, diabetes and homelessness.

Although her manager/husband Armstead Edwards has tried to persuade her to slow her touring schedule, she spends about nine months each year performing to sold-out audiences.

"It's not as if I can't get three meals a day, but if I didn't perform, I think I would get ill," LaBelle said in an interview. "It keeps me young. I just love the audience participation, it turns me on. I can't live without it and I won't try."

What about time spent in the recording studio? "I hate recording," she laughed.

"I love to sing, but going into a studio is like going to prison. You have a producer who makes you do (the song) in a particular way and I know he's right. But sometimes he may keep you on a song too long and sometimes you can go in and do it in one take. It's those 100 takes that I can't handle girlfriend, whereas on stage, I can just be myself."

"Lady Marmalade" was LaBelle's first No. 1 hit. Other song triumphs range from show-stopper "Over the Rainbow" to upbeat "New Attitude" to her latest funky hit "When You Talk About Love," from her current album "Flame."

That variety plus sticking to music she considers "age appropriate" helps with fan approval. LaBelle added: "I'm not looking for any old woman music, though."

Asked to reflect on her longevity in the music business, LaBelle paused.

"Girlfriend, I think about that every day," she said quietly. "I think about how wonderful it is that the public is still accepting me. It's as if they don't see me as a 54-year-old woman, but they see me as their girlfriend, as their mother or their sister."

"They just love me and I don't feel as if I have to prove myself to them. They love me for me. They love me anyway."

Carrey

Actor wins minor battle against magazine

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) - Jim Carrey has won a minor victory in his lawsuit against an Australian magazine.

On Wednesday, a Supreme Court judge ruled Woman's Day cannot claim the headline "Hollywood Stars Ban Groper Jim" meant the comedian was "psychologically unstable."

Justice John Hedigan noted that the headline had described Carrey as "Groper Jim," not "Crazy Jim."

Hedigan said the phrase ""psychologically unstable" is so wide as to be virtually meaningless."

No trial date has been set.

Carrey, star of "The Mask," "Liar, Liar" and "The Truman Show," is suing Australian Consolidated Publishing, publishers of Woman's Day, over the article.

Carrey claims the article suggested actresses had refused to work with him as a result of offensive behavior.

Photographer gives classic works to Corcoran Gallery

WASHINGTON (AP) - Photographer-sculptor-poet-author-composer-mviemaker Gordon Parks, 85, has given a collection of his favorite photographs to Washington's Corcoran Gallery of Art.

Among the 227 pictures is Parks' signature take on "American Gothic" - a black woman posed with broom and mop in front of an American flag. Parks called it "American Gothic, Washington D.C.," after the famous Grant Wood portrait of a white farm couple. It was one of the first Parks took in 1942 for the historic photo team of the Farm Security Administration (FSA), an agency of President Franklin Roosevelt's New Deal.

A year ago the Corcoran put on a major show of Parks' photos. The exhibit is now at the Museum of the City of New York as part of a nationwide tour. The Corcoran staff "know more about my work than anyone else, including me," Parks said in a statement Tuesday.

He has also given an important number of his photos to the Library of Congress.

Administration briefs senators on atrocities by Serbians

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Clinton administration, laying the groundwork for possible NATO military intervention in Kosovo, is briefing senators on Serb atrocities against ethnic Albanians and on international efforts to stop the slaughter.

"Clearly, the clock is ticking," State Department spokesman James Foley said Wednesday after Secretary of State Madeleine Albright endorsed a British call for a special U.N. Security Council meeting today to deal with repression in Kosovo.

Albright, Defense Secretary William Cohen and Sandy Berger, the president's national security adviser, were scheduled to give senators a closed-door briefing late today in a secure room at the Capitol.

NATO has completed plans for possible airstrikes to halt Yugoslav President Slobodan Milosevic's troops, who have since February been fighting a guerrilla movement seeking independence for the Serbian province. The pressure to act increased this week upon discovery of fresh massacres by Serbian security forces of 18 ethnic Albanians, including women and children.

"This was not an act of war. It was plain cold murder," British Foreign Secretary Robin Cook said from Blackpool, England, as he called for a special Security Council meeting.

U.S. officials also were talking tough, noting that Milosevic has ignored a U.N. resolution approved by the Security Council a week ago calling for a cease-fire and for withdrawal of Serbian troops and threatening the use of force if fighting continues.

Foley conceded that Serbs have withdrawn some military units from Kosovo but said other units have rotated into the province.

Massacre reports boost likelihood of airstrikes

GOLUBOVAC, Yugoslavia (AP) - Reports of massacres of ethnic Albanian civilians in the embattled

NEWS in brief

province of Kosovo have heightened the likelihood of NATO airstrikes against military targets in Yugoslavia.

Britain has called for an emergency meeting of the U.N. Security Council, and the United States and other leading powers were to meet today at U.N. headquarters to discuss the fighting that has left hundreds dead and forced at least 275,000 to flee.

On Wednesday, residents of Golubovac said Serb forces surrounded a pocket of refugees last Saturday and singled out at least 13 men to kill. They said the victims were already buried, but pointed to saucer-sized pools of dried blood and empty cartridges in front of a fence where they said the refugees were shot.

Farmer Naim Hodzaj said in addition to the executions, Serb police had killed several other men individually, including his 37-year-old brother Ramadan, who was doused with gasoline and set on fire. His brother's burned body lay on a path on the edge of the woods.

Earlier this week, diplomats, journalists and human rights workers saw as many as 18 mutilated bodies in nearby Obrjia, five miles north of Golubovac, including those of women and children.

The mass killings last weekend in the Drenica region, where Serb-led forces are trying to crush ethnic Albanian rebels, are among the most gruesome developments since the offensive began in February. The rebel Kosovo Liberation Army is seeking independence for Kosovo, whose population is mostly ethnic Albanian.

"We rule out any possibility that our members did something like this," Serb police Col. Bozidar Filic said. "In that area, we had clashes with terrorists and a number of them have been arrested."

GOP, Demos differ on scope of impeachment inquiry

WASHINGTON (AP) - For all their talk about bipartisanship, House Republicans and Democrats have vastly different ideas about the scope of any impeachment inquiry into President Clinton's relationship with Monica Lewinsky.

A proposed GOP resolution outlined Wednesday would give House Judiciary Committee investigators broad, Watergate-style authority to subpoena witnesses and evidence without a committee vote if Chairman Henry Hyde, a Republican, and Rep. John Conyers, the panel's top Democrat, agreed.

It also would afford Clinton's lawyers the right to cross-examine witnesses, attend all meetings and object to evidence. It would not, however, meet Democratic demands that the inquiry be limited to the allegations against Clinton in the Lewinsky matter, which include possible perjury, witness tampering and obstruction of justice.

Conyers and House Minority Leader Dick Gephardt, D-Mo., planned to meet today to hear from four committee Democrats who have been exploring ideas for a more limited probe.

Among the suggestions being weighed, according to Democratic officials, were limiting the inquiry to the Lewinsky affair, setting an expedited timetable for any further investigation or recommending a lesser penalty for Clinton, such as a censure and fine.

Another possible proposal was to delay a vote on impeachment until Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr completed the remainder of his investigation and made those materials available, Democrats said.

Conyers, D-Mich., decried any open-ended inquiry as "preposterous." A narrower alternative, he said, was to start saving more lives. favored by the public. In a closed-door meeting with House Democrats on Tuesday, Gephardt said a recent poll in his own district showed that Americans overwhelmingly favored a quick resolution.

Transplant network, feds argue over what to do

WASHINGTON (AP) - Six months after the government ordered a change in the way scarce organs are allocated for transplants, a national transplant network is still arguing with federal health officials over what to do.

The new rules were scheduled to take effect today, but they have become embroiled in lawsuits and fights in Congress. On Wednesday, a federal judge in Louisiana temporarily blocked the rules from taking effect until an Oct. 14 hearing on a lawsuit by the state of Louisiana.

In March, Health and Human Services Secretary Donna Shalala declared that people were dying simply because of where they live. She ordered the United Network for Organ Sharing to come up with a fairer policy.

But the network thinks the current system, which it created, is better. It fought back with aggressive lobbying to a receptive Congress, which already has delayed the new rules once. Talks this summer between the two sides went nowhere.

Despite all this, HHS officials say they expect the network to do as it's told and come up with a new policy. So far, the network is balking.

"The longer I look at it in this regulation, the longer I think it does allow the flexibility for the transplant community to go forward," said Dr. Claude Earl Fox, who heads the HHS agency charged with transplant policy.

As the fight drags on, the transplant system will continue to function. But all sides fear the battle could jeopardize support for organ donation if people see negative news about transplants. And HHS officials believe the new system is needed now

Americans' consumption of fruits, grains up

ATLANTA (AP) - Americans eat more fruits, veggies and grains than they did 25 years ago. Hold the applause - cancer researchers say fully one-quarter of those vegetables are french fries.

"We depend on them too much. We need to move from potatoes, particularly fried ones," said Dr. Susan Krebs-Smith, a research nutritionist with the National Cancer Institute and the author of a study in today's edition of the journal Cancer.

The explosion of fast-food joints makes potatoes - especially in the form of french fries - the vegetable people eat most, Krebs-Smith said. Half of all vegetable servings eaten by Americans are potatoes, and half of those are french fries.

Fries contain a lot of fat and few nutrients, though they do have small amounts of vitamin C.

"That's definitely not broccoli we're chewing down on," said Karen Collins, a dietitian and consultant for the American Institute for Cancer Research. "In Americans' minds, if a sandwich isn't enough, what do you add? Who would think you add some stir-fry vegetables or a piece of fruit?"

To produce the study, Krebs-Smith reviewed national food supply data, alcohol consumption figures and food consumption surveys.

The study said Americans consumed 19 percent more vegetables, 22 percent more fruit and 47 percent more grain products during between 1970 and 1995. While diets have improved, researchers said Americans need to eat even better to help reduce their cancer risk.

Virginia governor loses right-to-die case

MANASSAS, Va. (AP) - Gov. Jim Gilmore's frantic bid to prevent the wife of a comatose man from removing the feeding tube that has kept him alive for 31/2 years was rejected by a judge early today.

Michele Finn is now free to withhold food and water from Hugh Finn, allowing him to die. The family said it would not announce when the tube is removed, and no one at the nursing home where Finn lives would say whether it had happened.

In a dramatic clash over the right to die, Gilmore went to court Wednesday night to stop Mrs. Finn from removing the tube, something she said her husband would have wanted. State attorneys filed their motion little more than an hour before the tube could legally have been removed.

Under Virginia law, life-sustaining treatment may be stopped if a person is in a persistent vegetative state. Doctors have said that is the condition Finn is in.

Assistant Attorney General William Hurd argued that removing the tube would amount to euthanasia, but Prince William Circuit Judge Frank Hoss Jr. disagreed in rejecting the state's request.

Aluminum workers strike Kaiser in three states

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) - About 3,000 United Steelworkers members in three states have struck Kaiser Aluminum Corp., complaining that wages and benefits are below what other companies are paying.

The sides failed to agree on a contract to replace one that expired Wednesday afternoon. Talks continued in Minneapolis, but union leaders rejected a new proposal and workers walked out late Wednesday.

Round-the-clock picketing began at plants in Washington, Louisiana and Ohio as Kaiser resumed manufacturing operations with replacement workers, salaried employees and retirees.

No new talks were scheduled, though both sides indicated they were open to resuming negotiations that began Sept. 1.

Writing Want Ads that really sell!

Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.
 For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs." Then, remember these hints:
 --Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respond to an ad with no price.
 --Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.
 --Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.
 -- Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

Oversight of 'Net' extended

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government, which plans to largely end its management of the Internet, has agreed to extend its direct involvement at least until next week because of last-minute disputes.

The private nonprofit group expected to assume control isn't organized, and the contractor that assigns most Internet addresses is balking over how the transition will take place.

The Commerce Department said it will resume negotiations Friday with the contractor, Network Solutions Inc. of Herndon, Va., about how to end the exclusive arrangement the company has enjoyed since 1993. It agreed in the interim to extend the contract, which expired at midnight Wednesday, through at least Oct. 7.

Neither the government nor Network Solutions will describe specific issues, but others familiar with the talks said NSI wants legal protection or compensation for its investments made under the contract, such as maintaining the massive ownership lists for the world's Internet addresses.

"It's a pretty complicated agreement to iron out," said Becky Burr, an associate administrator at Commerce. "It will affect the Internet for years to come."

The Internet's growth as an information and commercial network highlights the importance of any change that might affect its reliability; the latest figures show about 70 million Americans use it.

Earlier this year, the government proposed turning over responsibility for the Internet to a private, nonprofit, U.S.-based group of 19 people. But it left the tough organizational decisions to the often fractious Internet community.

The group, dubbed the Internet Corporation for Assigned Names and Numbers, has yet to be formally organized, even with an interim board that could assume some of the Internet's management functions.

What was widely considered to be the final organizing proposal was revised earlier this week after complaints that Network Solutions retained too much influence. That revision, which Network Solutions didn't approve, threatens the fragile alliance that has been months in the making.

The government said it expected to formally receive a proposal today that would include the names of nine proposed interim board members. "We really would like to move this along quickly," said Burr.

PEROT

today, "His comments in the past several days confirm the good judgment of the American people who did not elect him president."

Asked about Perot's pledge not to run again if Clinton were to resign, McCurry said, tongue in cheek, "That's admittedly the first compelling argument we've heard."

Despite current polls showing high approval ratings for Clinton, Perot said he expects public sentiment eventually to turn against the president.

"I am totally convinced that the American people are going to wake up and understand that and I am going to do whatever I can, constructively, to say wake up America," Perot said.

Perot appealed to veterans, ministers, small business owners, community leaders and others to begin local petition drives asking Clinton to resign. Petitions could be collected by truck convoys, which would deliver them to Washington in early December. Displaying his website, e-mail address and post office box on the talk show, Perot asked viewers for feedback on his plan.

Cost of Clinton investigation now exceeds $40 million

WASHINGTON (AP) - Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr and his predecessor have spent more than $40 million on the investigation of President Clinton's Arkansas land deals that was expanded earlier this year to include a devastating probe of the Monica Lewinsky affair.

In a semi-annual audit of independent counsel costs, the General Accounting Office said Wednesday that Starr spent $3.9 million during the six months ended March 31, the latest figures available.

That brings Starr's expenses to nearly $33.5 million since he took over the Whitewater investigation in 1994. Add to that $6 million spent by Robert Fiske, Starr's predecessor on Whitewater, and the cost of investigating Clinton climbs to almost $40 million - a number that will increase significantly when updated with the past six months' activity.

Starr has estimated that he spent at least $4.4 million on the Lewinsky investigation alone over the past eight months. An exact figure won't be available until next spring.

The most expensive independent counsel probe to date was Lawrence Walsh's $48.5 million, six-year investigation of the Reagan administration's Iran-Contra dealings. Starr has said he is nearing completion of the Whitewater probe.

The biggest expense has been staff. In addition to 57 regular employees of the office of independent counsel, FBI and Internal Revenue Service agents are detailed to the investigation. The prosecutor also hires private investigators and other specialists to assist with the work.

During Starr's investigation, more than $24 million has been spent on people-related costs, including $9 million for salaries and benefits for employees of the independent counsel's office, $13 million for FBI, IRS and Justice Department employees detailed to Starr, and $2.4 million for hiring outside investigators and other specialists, according to GAO reports.

Travel expenses for Starr, his deputies and agents and witnesses totaled $4.7 million since 1994, audits showed.

Meanwhile, five other independent counsels spent just over $5 million in the six-month period ended March 31, GAO reported.

- Donald C. Smaltz, independent counsel investigating former Agriculture Secretary Mike Espy, spent $2.6 million. Espy is charged with accepting $35,000 in sports tickets, travel and lodging from Arkansas-based Tyson Foods Inc. and other probe of allegations that Henry Cisneros, the former Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, lied to the FBI about payments to a former mistress cost $1.8 million during the six-month period, including FBI costs. Cisneros' trial is set for Nov. 4.

- An investigation by prosecutors Arlin M. Adams and Larry D. Thompson of Reagan administration-era corruption at the Department of Housing and Urban Development racked up $524,860 in expenses in the same six-month period.

- Curtis E. Von Kann, who investigated and cleared a former Clinton White House official, Eli J. Segal, of alleged conflict-of-interest violations, spent $136,890.

- Carol Elder Bruce, appointed in March to investigate allegations that Secretary of Interior Bruce Babbitt lied to Congress about his role in rejecting a casino proposal from a group of Wisconsin Indians, spent $4,020.
