Gorbachev named successor to Chernenko

Gorbachev

The selection of economic specialist Gorbachev as Communist Party general secretary signaled the arrival of a new generation to power in this vast nation. But it will not necessarily mean major changes in Soviet policy.

Chernenko, a party activist for 55 years, had finally reached the pinnacle of Moscow power last year, but only as an elderly and enfeebled figurehead. He governed a mere 13 months, shortest tenure of any Kremlin chief.

He died at 7:20 p.m. (11:20 a.m. EST) Sunday "after a grave illness," the Soviet government announced today. It later said emphysema, complicated by heart and liver ailments, was the cause of death. Chernenko had been known to be suffering

Soviet delegation cuts U.S. visit short

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A Soviet delegation that includes a member of the ruling Politburo left today for Moscow, where the government reported the death of Soviet leader Konstantin Chernenko.

Two U.S. Air Force passenger planes took off with the delegates from San Francisco International Airport at 5:10 a.m., headed for New York and a waiting Aeroflot plane for the flight to Moscow.

The delegation included Politburo member Vladimir Shcherbitsky, head of the Communist Party in the Ukraine and a close associate of Chernenko during the tenure of former Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev.

He and nine other members of the 30-member group who had stayed overnight at the Soviet Consulate had no comment when they emerged before dawn.

from respiratory problems.

MOVING QUICKLY, the Soviet hierarchy named Gorbachev to head the commission making arrangements for Chernenko's funeral Wednesday, an early indication he would take over as party general secretary, the key Kremlin post.

Then, only four hours after the death announcement, the official Tass news agency reported that Gorbachev had been unanimously elected general secretary at an extraordinary plenary session of the party Central Committee.

He is expected also to be named Soviet president, but that must be done by the Supreme Soviet, the national parliament.

Though he has been a full member of the ruling Politburo only five years, the choice of Gorbachev was no surprise. His positioning in the Politburo lineup during public events in recent months had led Western diplomats to label him the Kremlin's No. 2 man.

Two persons were killed Sunday in a four-vehicle accident on Interstate 20 about eight miles west of Midland. Six other persons were injured.

Two people die in four-vehicle mishap

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

Two people were killed and six were injured Sunday in a four-vehicle accident on Interstate 20 about 8 miles west of Midland, according to the Department of Public Safety.

Betty May Loper, 50, of Snyder, and Roberto Rubio, 20, of Pecos, were pronounced dead at the scene by Justice of the Peace Charlie Sprayberry.

Pedro Calzada, 40, of Big Lake, and 8-year-old Sarah Calzada were listed in satisfactory condition this morning in Midland Memorial Hospital. Velma Calzada, 30, and 9-year-old Pedro Calzada Jr. and 2-year-old Wendy Calzada were treated and released. Marcelino Rubio, 22, was also listed in satisfactory condition, but was expected to be released today, according to an MMH spokesman.

The accident occurred at about 7:50 p.m. in the westbound lanes of Interstate 20 when a '70 Volkswagen driven by Pedro Calzada slowed to make a U-turn, according to DPS reports. It was struck by a '79 Oldsmobile driven by Arturo Rubio Jr. of Pecos, which then stopped, blocking both lanes. A '78 Ford pickup driven by Kenneth Lee Wright of Odessa then sideswiped the Oldsmobile.

One of the occupants of the Rubio car then got out to remove an injured person from the car, and Ms. Loper, a pedestrian, crossed from the eastbound lane to help. At that point, an '81 Pontiac driven by Roman Molinar of Odessa struck both Ms. Loper and the Rubio car, which then hit the people who had gotten out of it, according to the DPS.

In other accident reports, Carlos Chavez, 307 W. Front, was listed in fair condition in Midland Memorial Hospital this morning after apparently being injured in an accident at the intersection of Front and J streets at about 2:30 a.m. Sunday. The 25-year-old Chavez was expected to go into surgery today, according to a hospital spokeswoman. No details of the accident were available from police at press time.

U.S., U.S.S.R. will go ahead with arms talks

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

GENEVA, Switzerland — The United States and the Soviet Union decided today to go ahead with nuclear weapons reduction talks despite the death of Soviet leader Konstantin U. Chernenko, a U.S. spokesman said.

The decision was made at an hour-long meeting between Warren Zimmerman, a deputy to chief U.S. negotiator Max Kampelman, and Vladimir Alexandrov of the Soviet delegation.

The spokesman, Joseph Lehman, said the meeting would begin at 11 a.m. Tuesday at the Soviet mission. The session is designed to set a schedule for the next few weeks. It was not immediately clear when the two sides would begin to grapple with the issues.

"The executive secretaries of the U.S. and Soviet delegations have agreed that the heads of the delegations will meet at 11 a.m. at the Soviet mission," Lehman said.

The chief Soviet delegate is Victor P. Karpov.

Soviet journalists said it was unlikely that Karpov and the two other Soviet negotiators, Yuli Kvitsinsky and Alexei Obukhov, would go home to Moscow for Chernenko's funeral on Wednesday.

But that does not rule out a pause here for a few days.

Arms talks in Geneva usually are held twice a week. Lehman's announcement, telephoned to the U.S. press center, did not say whether a session would also be held Thursday.

Kampelman and the other U.S. negotiators, John Tower and Maynard Glitman, were in Brussels today to brief officials of the NATO governments.

The talks will open with the two sides far apart on the issues even though their stated goals are nearly identical.

Both sides have said they want to prevent an arms race in space and end it on earth, but they were split on where to put the emphasis.

The United States wants to resume the quest for deep cuts in offensive weapons, which was suspended when previous talks broke down 15 months ago. The Soviets want to stop President Reagan's space-based missile-defense program, arguing it will lead to a dangerous militarization of outer space.

On arrival in Geneva Saturday, Kampelman pledged his efforts toward the "taming and then the elimination of nuclear weapons."

Karpov said when he arrived Sunday that the Soviets also hope to attain the "truly historic goal" of eliminating nuclear weapons. He said neither side should have "unilateral advantage" over the other.

After the mostly ceremonial first session, the talks will be split into three parts — space weapons, strategic nuclear weapons and medium-range weapons.

Complicated by the sharp dispute over the space weapons system, dubbed "Star Wars," the talks are likely to be long and difficult.

Kampelman said his negotiating strategy could be summarized in "one important word — patience."

U.S. Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., one of 10 senators in Geneva to observe the start of the talks, suggested Sunday that Soviet opposition to U.S. research on space weapons may be part of a propaganda campaign designed to split the Western alliance.

Israeli army clashes with Lebanese army, guerrillas

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — The Israeli army fought today with Lebanese army troops and guerrillas during a raid on a south Lebanon village, the military command announced, saying 24 guerrillas were killed and 10 Lebanese soldiers were arrested.

The clash came one day after 12

Israeli soldiers were killed by a suicide truck bomber, and 14 others were wounded in occupied south Lebanon.

Following the attack on an Israeli convoy, Prime Minister Shimon Peres and Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin vowed that Israel would fight terrorism by whatever means were necessary.

Opposition politicians as well as some members of Peres' own Cabinet called for Israel to pull out of Lebanon immediately.

The suicide truck-bomb attack occurred just inside Lebanon north of the Israeli border town of Metulla. Zrariye, target of today's raid, is 15 miles west of Metulla.

The military command said Israeli troops "captured many suspects and weapons in great quantities" during the Zrariye operation.

Reports from Lebanon said there was heavy fighting between the Lebanese and Israeli armies in the village as helicopter-borne Israeli troops landed on the hills surrounding a Lebanese army garrison at Zrariye.

The Israeli command's announcement said: "The Lebanese army was told not to interfere in the IDF (Israeli Defense Forces) action, and only after it fired at our forces, fire was returned in its direction and 10 of its soldiers were arrested. Our forces are still active in the village, continuing searches for weapons and guerrillas."

Southwest puts in bid for Muse Air

From Staff and Wire Reports

DALLAS — Southwest Airlines officials are expected today to officially announce the terms of a conditional agreement to buy the airline's chief rival, Muse Air Corp.

The purchase agreement was confirmed Sunday by a Muse official after it was disclosed that Southwest Chairman Herbert Kelleher had sent a message to employees announcing the conditional buyout.

Kelleher said in his memorandum that Muse would continue operating as a separate airline under its present name and with its present employees, said Muse spokesman Scott Hamilton.

Kelleher also said that the agreement was subject to the approval of Muse shareholders and the U.S. Department of Transportation.

The announcement came as a surprise to officials at Midland Air Terminal and at competing American Airlines.

"We have really not been notified of the merger yet," said Tommy Jones of the Midland airport. "It was a surprise to us and I think to everyone."

American Airlines, which also serves the Midland market, did not think the merger would have any direct effect on their routes.

"We really don't think we'll see any impact," said Linda Johnson, of corporate communications for the airlines. "We serve different airports in Dallas — we're really not competing."

Hamilton declined to release details or terms of the agreement, signed late Friday, but said Muse Chairman Lamar Muse would become vice chairman of the subsidiary being formed under the new structure.

"Muse will continue to operate under its current name and present employees as a separate airline offering the same type of service as it currently offers," Hamilton said. The agreement would join two airlines founded by Muse, who started the carrier bearing his name after leaving fast-growing Southwest. Both regional airlines are based at Dallas Love Field.

Muse, which reported a 1984 loss of $17 million on revenues of $101 million, has never posted an operating profit during its four years in service.

The carrier recently sought and received additional capital from investors. Under terms of that agreement, Lamar Muse returned to his namesake airline and took the reins from his son, Michael.

GORBACHEV

The swiftness of today's succession announcement made it clear "it had been worked out in advance," said one Western diplomat, who asked not to be identified.

The ruddy-faced, white-haired Chernenko, whose ill health had kept him from public view for weeks at a time, was the third Kremlin chief to die in little more than two years, part of a revolving-door succession that has complicated already frigid U.S.-Soviet relations.

THE announcement of his death came on the eve of the resumption of U.S.-Soviet nuclear arms-control talks in Geneva, Switzerland. The delegations announced their discussions would open as scheduled Tuesday.

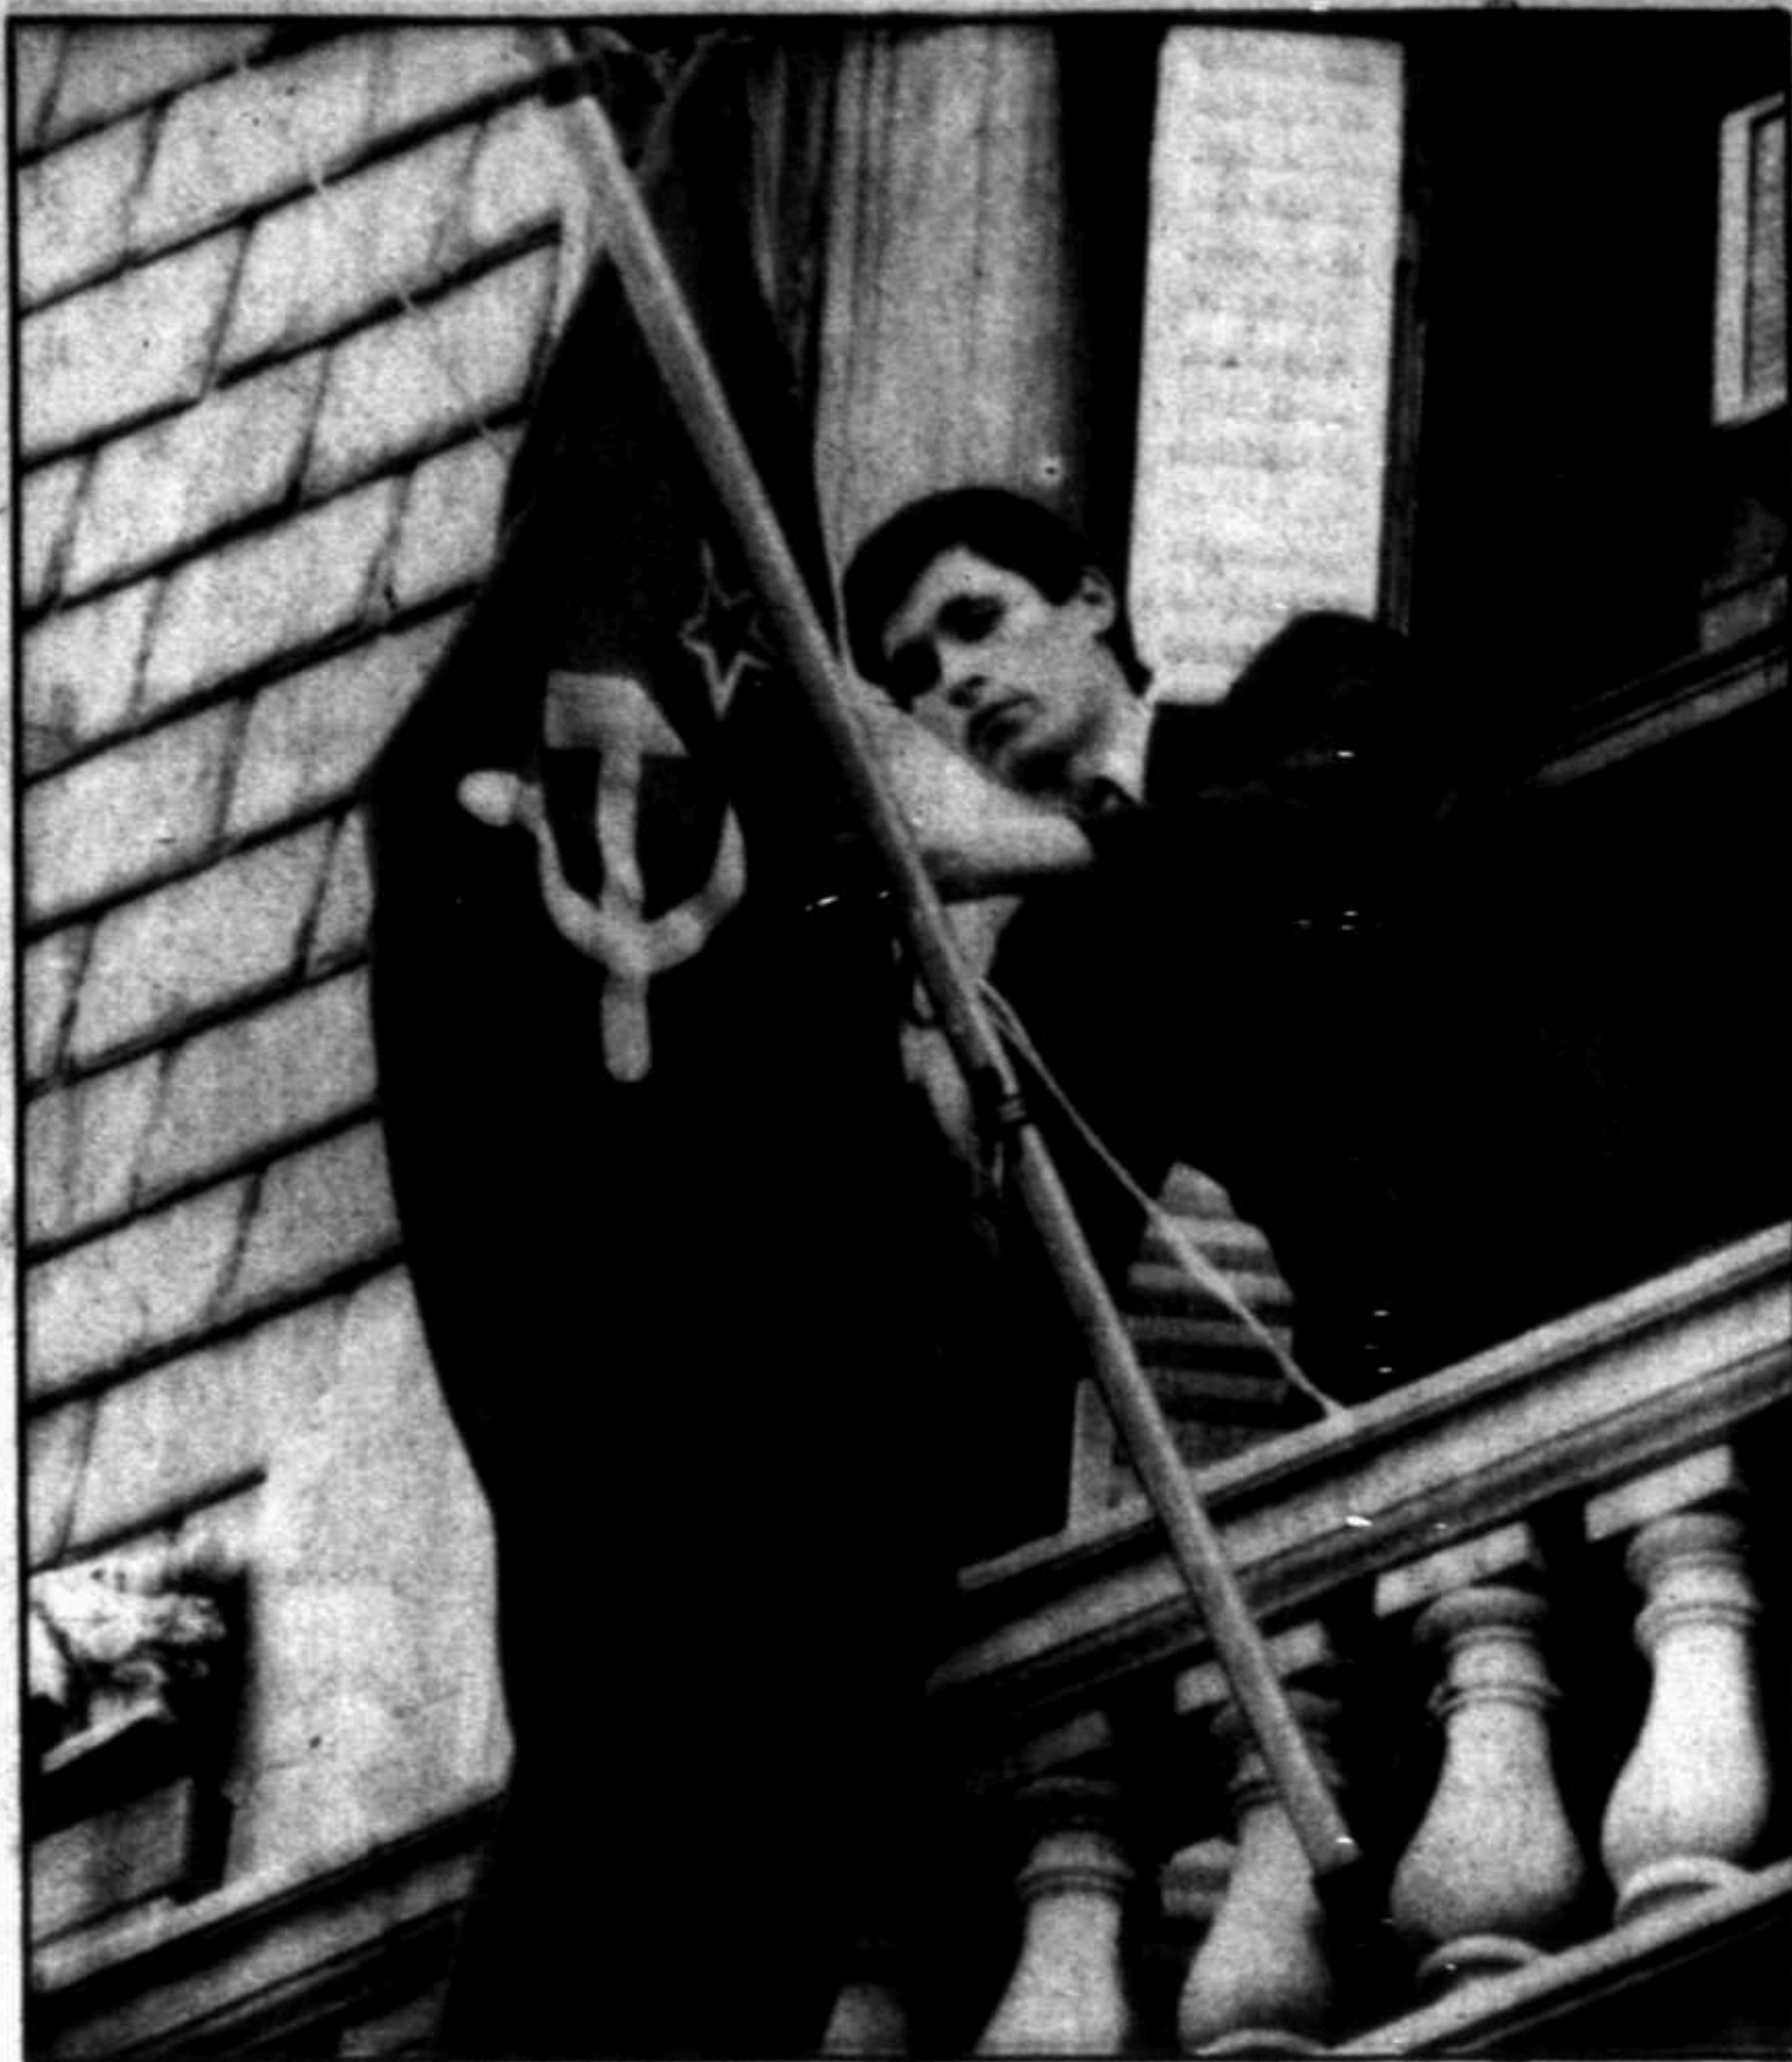

Once again, as in the past, Soviet officials waited many hours before announcing a Soviet leader's death.

Early signs of an emergency in Moscow came Sunday when high-ranking Soviet delegations in San Francisco, Yugoslavia and West Germany cut short overseas visits. Lights burned before dawn today at the headquarters of the Communist Party Central Committee, an indication of unusual activity, and Soviet radio and television switched to somber music.

The death announcement, reported by the official Tass news agency at 2 p.m. (6 a.m. EST) and read over the national television and radio networks, said:

"The Central Committee of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union, the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the USSR and the Council of Ministers of the USSR announce with deep sorrow to the party and the entire Soviet people that Konstantin Ustinovich Chernenko, General Secretary of the Central Committee of the CPSU (Communist Party) and President of the Presidium of the USSR Supreme Soviet, died at 7:20 p.m. on March 10, 1985, after a grave illness.

"THE NAME of Konstantin Ustinovich Chernenko, an outstanding leader of the Communist Party and the Soviet state and a staunch fighter for the ideals of Communism and for peace, will remain forever in the hearts of the Soviet people and of the whole of progressive mankind."

A later medical bulletin said he died of the lung disease emphysema, complicated by unspecified cardiac difficulties and chronic hepatitis that worsened into cirrhosis, or deterioration, of his liver.

In Washington, White House officials said President Reagan was notified by his national security adviser, Robert C. McFarlane, within minutes after the Moscow announcement.

Black-draped flags were quickly hung on major Moscow buildings by crews working in sunny, 21-degree Fahrenheit weather. Chernenko's portrait was placed on the front of the central House of Unions, where his body will lie in state, just across from the Kremlin's towering red-brick walls.

Tass said later the funeral was scheduled for 1 p.m. Wednesday, and Chernenko would be buried in Red Square, traditional resting place for Soviet leaders.

THE WHITE House said President Reagan had ruled out his personal participation in the funeral.

Vice President George Bush, who led the U.S. delegations to the last two funerals of top Kremlin leaders, will attend Wednesday's funeral of Soviet President Konstantin U. Chernenko, a U.S. official in Geneva, Switzerland, said today.

"Bush will stay here tonight and leave tomorrow morning," said the official, who spoke on the condition he not be identified.

The vice president had been scheduled to leave Geneva for Washington today after addressing a United Nations conference on the African drought.

The official said Bush's wife, Barbara, would not attend the funeral, but would instead return to Washington Tuesday.

The Siberian peasants' son Chernenko, a party activist for 55 years, took over as general secretary Feb. 13, 1984, four days after the death of party chief and President Yuri V. Andropov.

Chernenko was the oldest person ever to assume the top post held by Vladimir I. Lenin, Josef Stalin and Nikita S. Khrushchev.

His 390 days in power, historically the shortest tenure of any Soviet chief, were regarded by Kremlin observers as a time of collective leadership.

FOREIGN Minister Andrei A. Gromyko dominated foreign policy, Gorbachev took charge of economic planning, and Chernenko dropped from public sight for months at a time because of illness.

Gorbachev also appeared to have taken over important ideological and foreign policy duties. He visited Britain last December in a highly publicized trip that brought him more fully into the international spotlight and presented a new image to the West — of a younger, more polished Soviet leader.

A peasant's son, a onetime factory worker and a former agriculture specialist in the Central Committee Secretariat, Gorbachev is regarded as a stronger supporter of Andropov's reform-minded economic policies than was Chernenko.

If the party hierarchy had chosen to stick to the older generation, it could have turned to the 75-year-old Gromyko, or 70-year-old Moscow city party boss Viktor V. Grishin.

Chernenko was born in Krasnoyarsk, 2,000 miles east of Moscow, on Sept. 24, 1911. He was a local Communist propagandist by age 18, and later worked as a border guard. He went to a party school in Moscow in 1943, and in the 1950s began a long association with Brezhnev, first serving him as propaganda chief in the southern republic of Moldavia.

Politburo member Vladimir Shcherbitsky, right with hat, is led into a limousine outside the Soviet consul's residence in San Francisco early this morning. The death of Konstantin Chernenko forced the group of 30 Soviet leaders, headed by Shcherbitsky, to return to the Soviet Union, cutting its U.S. visit short by two days.

DELEGATION

ignoring a reporter who shouted questions in Russian. The rest of the delegation stayed at the Fairmont Hotel, and they also made no official statements.

About 10 police cars escorted their cars, along with cars carrying Secret Service and FBI agents.

The delegates on Sunday abruptly canceled the remainder of their U.S. visit. A Soviet Aeroflot jet arrived in New York City from Havana late Sunday night to transport the group to the Soviet Union.

They were scheduled to arrive at Kennedy International Airport in New York at 12:47 p.m., transfer to the Aeroflot jet and depart at about 3:30 p.m., said spokesmen for the Federal Aviation Administration and the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey.

Tass, the official Soviet news agency, today reported that Chernenko had died Sunday.

The group, the highest-ranking Soviet delegation to visit the United States in 12 years, had been scheduled to take a tour of the city and a cruise of the bay on Sunday afternoon, followed by a dinner with business and political leaders at the Bank of America building.

But at about 3 p.m., when they were scheduled to be on the cruise, reports surfaced that the delegation was actually at its hotel and within three hours it was confirmed that the rest of their itinerary, including a trip to Silicon Valley and Stanford University on Monday, had been canceled.

State Department officials then confirmed the group had cut its visit short and planned to return to the Soviet Union.

An Aeroflot jet arrived at New York's Kennedy International Airport at 11:16 p.m. Sunday, said Lloyd Schwallb, a duty officer with the Port Authority, which runs New York City's airports.

Aeroflot had been banned from U.S. airports in early 1982 as a result of martial law in Poland. But John Leyden, a Federal Aviation Administration spokesman, said U.S. officials worked out an agreement with the Soviets to allow diplomatic flights into the United States. He said that annually about 6 Aeroflot flights arrive at Dulles International Airport near Washington, D.C., and two or three go into New York's Kennedy.

Aside from Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, Shcherbitsky is the first member of the Politburo to visit the United States since the 1973 visit by Brezhnev, then the Soviet Union's leader.

The delegation last week met with President Reagan at the Oval Office, and with a bipartisan congressional delegation for discussions on arms control, Reagan's strategic defense initiative, human rights and economic relations. On Saturday, the group toured Austin and Dallas.

Reagan won't attend leader's funeral

By BARTON REPERT

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan today ruled out a visit to the Soviet Union to attend the funeral of President Konstantin U. Chernenko, a White House spokesman said.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said Reagan's decision came during a 30-minute meeting this morning with his foreign policy advisers.

He said the controlling factors in the decision included the short time available for a meeting with the new Soviet leadership and the short time for preparations for the Wednesday funeral.

The spokesman added that the United States was still awaiting word from the Soviets on the size of the delegation Kremlin would like but that Reagan would send Vice President George Bush, who is in Geneva.

In Geneva, a U.S. official who demanded anonymity said Bush "will stay here tomorrow night and leave tomorrow morning" for Moscow.

Reagan did not attend the funerals of the first two Soviet leaders who have died since he has been in the White House, Leonid I. Brezhnev and Yuri V. Andropov.

Although White House officials had suggested earlier in the day that

Analysts: Funeral might be time to improve U.S.-Soviet relations

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan today decided not to attend Konstantin U. Chernenko's funeral, even though some American observers and Soviet specialists thought such a trip might have led to better superpower relations.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., a leading congressional defense expert who is in Geneva were arms control talks are set to begin, said earlier he didn't want to give Reagan advice but the president might score points by flying to Moscow.

"I would find it to be a symbolic act which might bear dividends in the future," said Nunn, a Senate Armed Services Committee member.

"It could be a good move," Nunn said.

Agreeing with Nunn that Reagan's attendance at the funeral could be a positive influence was William Hyland, a former deputy national security adviser.

"Now, with the Geneva talks opening, and the possibility of change to a much younger man who could be there for a very long time, I think it would be good for President Reagan to go."

Yet former Secretary of State Alexander Haig said traveling to Moscow "could result in him being accused of grandstanding...I think he (Reagan) is very leery of such things."

And another former secretary of state, Henry Kissinger, said Reagan should not "aim for grandstand plays that give the impression" that he and Mikhail S. Gorbachev, the new general secretary of the Communist Party, "can come to some personal understanding."

At 54, Gorbachev is younger than many of the old guard.

time for preparations and those types of considerations" in making the decision.

It has been standing administration policy that Reagan would not hold a summit meeting with a Soviet leader unless there had been adequate preparations and a likelihood of success.

If the Soviets stick to their customary practice of inviting nations to send small delegations to the funeral, Reagan will name Bush, Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Arthur Hartman, the U.S. ambassador to Moscow, to represent the United States, one White House official said.

That official, speaking on condition he not be named, said a presidential visit would have required a major change, both logistically and politically, for Reagan, who would not be expected to make a show of warmth toward the Soviet leadership he regards with considerable distrust.

Reagan is scheduled to visit Quebec for a summit meeting with Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney next Sunday and Monday.

The president was notified by National Security Adviser Robert C. McFarlane within minutes after Moscow announced the death, a White House official said today.

the atmosphere was better this time for a Reagan visit, largely due to the scheduled reopening Tuesday of U.S.-Soviet arms negotiations, Speakes said. "We talked about the short time for a meeting, the short

World leaders send messages

Associated Press

Leaders from around the world offered their condolences today on the death of Soviet leader Konstantin U. Chernenko, singing out for praise his decision to return to arms negotiations with the United States.

Several urged a quick decision on a successor as the two superpowers prepare to resume arms talks Tuesday in Geneva, Switzerland. But they said it was unlikely Chernenko's death would hurt those discussions.

"All indications are that both sides have a serious desire to negotiate," said West Germany's chancellor, Helmut Kohl. "I don't think this death will bring a big change in that."

China offered its condolences and called Chernenko an "outstanding leader."

"Not long before his passing away, President Chernenko expressed his hope for further good development of Sino-Soviet relations...We hope that these positive tendencies in Sino-Soviet relations will further develop," said a Foreign Ministry statement telephoned to foreign news agencies.

"As of Friday evening, we have entered into a conditional agreement by which Southwest would buy Muse Air subject to approval by Muse Air shareholders and the Department of Transportation and the satisfaction of certain other conditions," Kelleher said in the message.

Kelleher said he expects the agreement to become effective the second quarter of this year.

"Financial and other details of the agreement will be released in the morning," Hamilton said late Sunday.

While some scheduling changes may be made to take advantage of the medium- and long-range jets in the Muse fleet, Muse will continue offering the same type of service it offers now, Kelleher's memorandum said.

One analyst expressed surprise at the announcement.

"When Muse stock price rose in six trading days from 6 1/4 to 8 1/4, you didn't have to be a genius to know something was going on," said Robert Joedicke, airline analyst with Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc. in New York. "But of all the possibilities for Muse, this certainly isn't the most obvious."

Kelleher said the acquisition will help both airlines.

"This proposed acquisition is in the best interests of the shareholders and employees of both carriers, and I hope that each of you will express to the Muse Air employees your delight that we are going to be working together rather than against each other in the future," Kelleher said in the memorandum.

Southwest, founded in 1971, is a low-frills carrier, serving 24 cities in 10 states — California, Arizona, Colorado, New Mexico, Louisiana, Missouri, Illinois, Arkansas, Nevada and Texas.

Southwest reported earnings of $49.7 million in 1984 on revenues of $535.9 million.

Muse, an airline that caters to non-smokers, serves 10 cities from Dallas — San Jose, Calif., Los Angeles, Las Vegas, Tulsa, New Orleans, Houston, Austin, Brownsville, Midland-Odessa and McAllen.

Max Kampelman, left, head of the U.S. delegation to the East-West arms talks in Geneva, speaks with NATO Secretary General Lord Carrington, prior to briefing NATO allies on the American position at the negotiations. In the background next to Carrington is former Sen. John Tower, a member of the three-man delegation. The briefing took place at NATO headquarters in Brussels, Belgium.

"We must wait and see why they are here and what they are up to," said Lugar, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, in an interview.

America's main European allies, while concerned about possible militarization of space, have somewhat reluctantly given Reagan a go-ahead on a research program, which might take 10-15 years. But such countries as Britain, West Germany and Italy have insisted any deployment of Star Wars technology must be negotiated with the Soviets.

Reagan has instructed the U.S. negotiating team to discuss the Star Wars plan — officially known as the Strategic Defense Initiative — but not to negotiate limitations on research or testing.

The Soviets in late 1983 abandoned talks on long-range and medium-range — after the North Atlantic Treaty Organization began deploying the first of 572 cruise and Pershing 2 missiles in Western Europe to counter a buildup of Soviet SS-20 rockets.

U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Andrei A. Gromyko, the Soviet foreign minister, set up the talks during two days of meetings in early January. They said their mutual goal in the talks would be "preventing an arms race in space and terminating it on earth."

Eight members of the U.S. House of Representatives arrived in Geneva today to join the 10 senators already on hand as non-participating observers.

Kampelman, a Democrat who negotiated with the Soviets for three years at the Madrid European Security Conference, will deal with space arms. Tower, a former Republican U.S. senator from Texas, will negotiate on long-range missiles, and Glitman on intermediate-range.

For the Soviets, Karpov will deal with long-range missiles, Alexei A. Obukov will be chief negotiator on intermediate weapons, and Yuli A. Kvitinsky with space weapons.

ISRAEL

An Israel-based reporter from The Associated Press, taken by the Israeli army to the Qasbiyeh Bridge, five miles west of Zrariye, said he heard loud explosions in the distance but could not see any fighting.

The Qasbiyeh Bridge, which spans the Litani River near the Mediterranean coast, is on the front line established by Israel on Feb. 16 after the first troop pullback in Israel's scheduled three-part withdrawal from Lebanon.

The Lebanese army command made no mention of casualties in reporting on the fighting. But privately owned radio stations in Beirut said at least 12 residents of Zrariye had been injured in the fighting.

It was the fourth clash between the two armies along the occupation front line in the past two weeks, and the second at Zrariye.

In Beirut, the Lebanese capital, a leftist group and two Islamic extremist groups claimed responsibility for Sunday's attack.

Witnesses said the blast killed the driver of the truck and destroyed an army truck that was in a convoy transporting soldiers to the north. Israeli sources, who spoke on the condition that they not be identified, said preliminary investigations indicated the Lebanese truck was carrying about 220 pounds of explosives.

"The explosion was terrifying. There was a giant fire and then black smoke shot up," said Aina Belsky, manager of the Arzaim Hotel in Metulla.

The bombing prompted some members of Peres' broad coalition government to call for an immediate withdrawal of all Israeli soldiers from southern Lebanon.

"I don't see what our prolonged stay there contributes from the point of view of security arrangements for the northern border," said Communications Minister Amnon Rubinstein, leader of Shinui, a small party in Peres' coalition.

But Peres brushed aside those calls. "Terror will not dictate the defense policy of Israel," he said in a statement. "Israel will not cease its war against terrorism."

Before Sunday's attack, the Israeli death toll in Lebanon since the June 1982 invasion stood at 620. Israel invaded Lebanon to wipe out Palestinian guerrilla bases.

In Beirut, an anonymous caller told the leftist radio station Voice of Arab Lebanon that the pickup truck was driven by a member of the "Lebanese national resistance," the term used for several groups who have been making guerrilla attacks on the Israelis in south Lebanon.

It said the attack was in revenge for a car bomb that killed 75 people and injured 250 on Friday near a mosque in predominantly Moslem west Beirut.

A mobile amphetamine laboratory, housed in the back of a Dodge truck, was raided Sunday by Texas law enforcement officials 16 miles south of Abilene on U.S. Highway 271. Two men and one woman were arrested. Officials confiscated a "large quantity" of amphetamines, several handguns and an explosive designed to destroy the evidence in the event of detection. Sgt. Don Bush, DPS Narcotics service, points to the area where the explosive had been placed.

Authorities raid mobile drug lab

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — Three people were caught in the act of manufacturing amphetamine early Sunday morning when area law enforcement officials conducted a raid on a mobile drug laboratory south of Abilene, authorities said.

Department of Public Safety narcotics officer Sgt. Don Bush said the raid was related to Friday night's arrest of a man and a woman at a rural Sweetwater residence where laboratory equipment and chemicals used to manufacture amphetamines were found by Fisher County sheriff's officials.

"It's really the first one (drug lab) this sophisticated and this mobile I've heard of in the state of Texas," Bush said.

A follow-up investigation of Friday's arrests and a tip from a confidential source led lawmen to the mobile drug lab, located on a 15-acre plot of land about 16 miles south of Abilene on U.S. Highway 277, said Bush.

About 18 officers from various law enforcement agencies took part in the pre-dawn raid Sunday.

Bush said the three arrested — two men, ages 35 and 37, and a 30-year-old woman — were heavily armed and the lab — a Dodge truck — had a booby-trapped bomb rigged under a counter.

The truck, which appeared to be used to sell potatoes, actually contained a "complete operating laboratory complete with equipment and glassware" in the truck bed, according to Bush.

Board denies change in suspension rule

AUSTIN (AP) — A member of the State Board of Education sent a letter to a state senator who wants the suspension for "no pass, no play" students reduced to one week and informed the legislator no immediate action would be taken.

Jack Strong, chairman of the Students Committee, said he sent Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, a letter informing him that his committee and the board would not decide on the fate of the suspension provision until further action is taken by the House of Representatives and Gov. Mark White.

Parker, head of the Senate Education Committee, introduced a resolution Thursday, which the Senate passed 25-4, requesting the education board consider changing the "no-pass, no-play" suspension provision from six weeks to a weekly basis.

"This is just an expression from the Senate as a result of the input we have had from our constituents," Parker said Thursday. "It is unfair to blindsides folks with a rule where there is no way out. We should offer more encouragement for our students to get on the ball."

House Speaker Gib Lewis and Rep. Bill Haley, D-Center, chairman of the House Public Education Committee, said members of the House were divided on the issue, according to Strong's letter.

Currently, students not earning a passing grade of 70 must sit out of all extracurricular activities until the next grading period shows the students are passing all courses. The grading period is based on six-week terms.

In other board action, members voted to curtail the number of contests and performances for each extracurricular activity a school can schedule per week to one.

Students participating in extra school activities will only be allowed to practice up to eight hours per school week for each activity, the board decided.

A&M students spend spring break in court

BRYAN, Texas (AP) — Hundreds of Texas A&M University students will be spending spring break in the Brazos County courthouse proving they were eligible to vote in last year's sheriff's race.

Democrat Howard Hill is challenging his loss to the sheriff, Republican Ron Miller, in state district court, claiming 450 voters cast illegal ballots at three College Station precincts.

"I don't think I was beaten fair and square," Hill said. "In the year of the Republican, I lost by only 162 votes."

Many students say they are unhappy about spending their vacation in court, but Hill's attorney, Mark Davidson, said the election issue must be settled.

"The question is whether the people voted illegally, not whether they're going to miss spring break. Citizens have responsibilities, and one of them is showing up in court when you're called," Davidson said.

Davidson said 250 students have been subpoenaed to testify in court, beginning Monday, the same day A&M's spring break begins. Another 200 subpoenas will be delivered before the end of the trial, which lawyers predict could last six weeks.

Davidson said he only has to prove that 163 votes were cast illegally and visiting State District Judge Arthur Leshner of Houston could call a new election.

If a ballot was cast illegally, Leshner could order the voter to reveal how he voted.

Chris Kling, a College Station attorney representing Miller, said Hill is grasping at straws.

"I believe we can win in court, or if not, I believe we'll win another election," Kling said.

Hill's suit contends some of the illegal votes were cast by people who were not registered. Others voted even though they were on the list of voters purged from county voting rolls in 1982 and 1984.

Another group voted in the wrong precinct, and two voters failed to register 30 days before the election, as required by law, the suit said.

However, all were permitted to vote because of an election code provision allowing them to sign affidavits at the polls if they did not have registration cards or weren't on voting lists. The affidavits said the voters were permanent residents of the county and qualified to vote.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Stop letting others determine the course your life will take. Success comes when you make your own decisions and stick to them! Be very careful when choosing financial advisers. A hunch should not be ignored. Romance will get back on track when you show more respect for loved one's wishes. Traveling alone proves more rewarding than going with a group. CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Liza Minnelli, Atlanta mayor Andrew Young, playwright Edward Albee, football's Mark Moseley, actresses Barbara Feldon and Karen Kaye, singer Gordon MacRae, Atlanta Braves superstar Dale Murphy, singer James Taylor, former astronaut Wally Schirra, the New York Mets' Darryl Strawberry.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You could be taking someone or something too much for granted. Be attentive to those you rely on. Your judgment is excellent where your career or finances are concerned.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Someone influential may be hard to please. Stick to your regular work for the best results. Shun the financial advice of a friend who has his or her eyes on your resources.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Avoid contacting those at a distance this morning. Heavier work demands could interfere with certain social plans. Mate or date will be understanding if you explain the situation.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A friend or neighbor may try to play on your sympathy. Act quickly on an expert's advice and you could make a bundle! Go ahead and accept a last-minute invitation.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Paying careful attention to detail brings in extra profits. Do everything you can to boost sales. Romance flourishes. Push ahead with a creative or artistic project. Innovative ideas are warmly welcomed.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Try to accept constructive criticism in the right spirit. An influential friend really does have your best interests at heart. Romance begins to heat up. Stick to your decisions.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): An excellent day for making new business and social contacts. Pay more attention to offspring's needs. Regular exercise and good eating habits will lead to greater energy. Exercise self-discipline.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21):

Share your knowledge and expertise with others. An unpredictable element makes romance extra happy today. Answer letters promptly and return all phone calls. A new alliance needs careful nurturing.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): The employment picture looks more rewarding now. Contractual agreements require careful review; consult lawyer or accountant. Romance perks up. Plan a special outing or candlelit dinner for two.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Avoid yielding to impulse when shopping. Nothing is a "bargain" if you cannot really afford it. A gifted Gemini enters your life, bringing both new success and glamorous romance.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A social event could introduce you to members of a powerful inner circle. Make the most of things! A new romance gives a secure feeling. A May-December alliance is possible.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Originality and self-discipline help you turn a pet project into an outstanding success. A Taurus is assessing your performance. Do your best work! Romance may have to be postponed.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠AJ5 ♥AQJ976 ♦873 ♣6
The bidding has proceeded:

| North | East | South | West |
|-------|------|-------|------|
| 1♦    | 2♦   | 2♦    | Pass |
| 2NT   | Pass | ?     | Pass |

What do you bid now?

A.—If partner has the king of hearts, or if that card is with East, three no-trump should be a cake-walk. But what if those conditions don't apply, and partner has only a single club stopper? All in all, if four hearts should be a safer contract, and we would get there directly.

Q.2—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠AK63 ♥7 ♦A94 ♣KQ652
The bidding has proceeded:

| West | North | East | South |
|------|-------|------|-------|
| 1♥   | 2♦    | Pass | ?     |

What do you bid now?

A.—There's no question about driving this hand to game — as a matter of fact, if partner has the right hand you could be laydown for a slam. The way to get that message across to partner is to start with a cue-bid of the enemy suit. Bid two hearts.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠KJ107 ♥J93 ♦82 ♣Q875
Partner opens the bidding with one heart. What do you respond?

A.—You have a hand worth just one voluntary bid. If you elect to respond one spade, almost any rebid by partner could prove embarrassing. For example, what would you do if partner rebid one no-trump? To avoid being awkwardly positioned, raise to two hearts now.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠AJ10 ♥J76 ♦AJ3 ♣A874
The bidding has proceeded:

| South | West | North | East |
|-------|------|-------|------|
| 1♦    | Pass | 1♥    | Pass |

What do you bid now?

A.—We don't want you to get the idea that, whenever you have three cards to an honor in partner's suit, you should raise — you do so only under special circumstances. Here, a rebid of one no-trump would describe your hand perfectly, so there is no reason not to make it.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠AJ954 ♥84 ♦KQ3 ♣AK5
The bidding has proceeded:

| North | East | South | West |
|-------|------|-------|------|
| 1♦    | Pass | 3♦    | Pass |
| 3♦    | Pass | 4♦    | Pass |
| 5♦    | Pass | ?     | Pass |

What action do you take?

A.—After your jump in spades, partner can't want reassurance about the trump suit. The only logical explanation for his bid over game is that he is worried about the unbid suit — hearts. Since you have two fast losers in that suit, you have done all you can — pass.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠AK752 ♥Q ♦8763 ♣AKJ
Partner opens the bidding with four hearts. What action do you take?

A.—Partner's preempt has made it impossible for you to investigate slam possibilities in a scientific manner. We would close our eyes and gamble out six hearts. Even if we should have two fast losers in diamonds, there is no guarantee that the opponents will lead that suit, in which case partner could use our black suit winners for discards.

Week 16 for artificial heart recipient could set milestone

William Schroeder looks forward to his son's wedding

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — William Schroeder enters his 16th week with an artificial heart facing several milestones, including the wedding of his son that he once said was a goal for his survival.

Schroeder, the second implant recipient, forged a first of his own Saturday when he spent 30 minutes of a spring-like afternoon riding through nearby neighborhoods, a spokeswoman said Sunday.

The wedding of his son, Terry, in his hometown of Jasper, Ind., is a family celebration doctors have said Schroeder, 53, would not have lived to see without the heart implant.

Doctors haven't decided whether Schroeder, who suffered a series of strokes after the implant, will be allowed to travel home for the wedding, but he has been fitted for a tuxedo.

Schroeder, who received the Jarvik-7 heart on Nov. 25, may be well enough for the 90-mile trip to attend the wedding at his Catholic church on Saturday, doctors say. On that day, Schroeder will have lived 112 days with the heart, equaling the time that Barney Clark survived as the first artificial heart recipient.

Clark, whose implant at the University of Utah in 1982 made medical history, died without leaving the hospital.

Schroeder's first trip away from the grounds of Humana Hospital Audubon was taken in a customized van specially equipped with "Utah drive" machinery to provide pulses of air that keep the heart pumping, said spokeswoman Linda Broadus.

"He greatly enjoyed being outside and spending time with his grandchildren, who were with him" for Saturday's spontaneous ride in the van, she said.

Schroeder had been in the $45,000 van once before but the vehicle did not leave the hospital parking lot on that occasion.

Implant surgeon William C. DeVries approved Schroeder's trip on the spur of the moment while visiting Schroeder and members of his family. He and hospital technician Larry Hastings accompanied Schroeder and five members of his family on the ride.

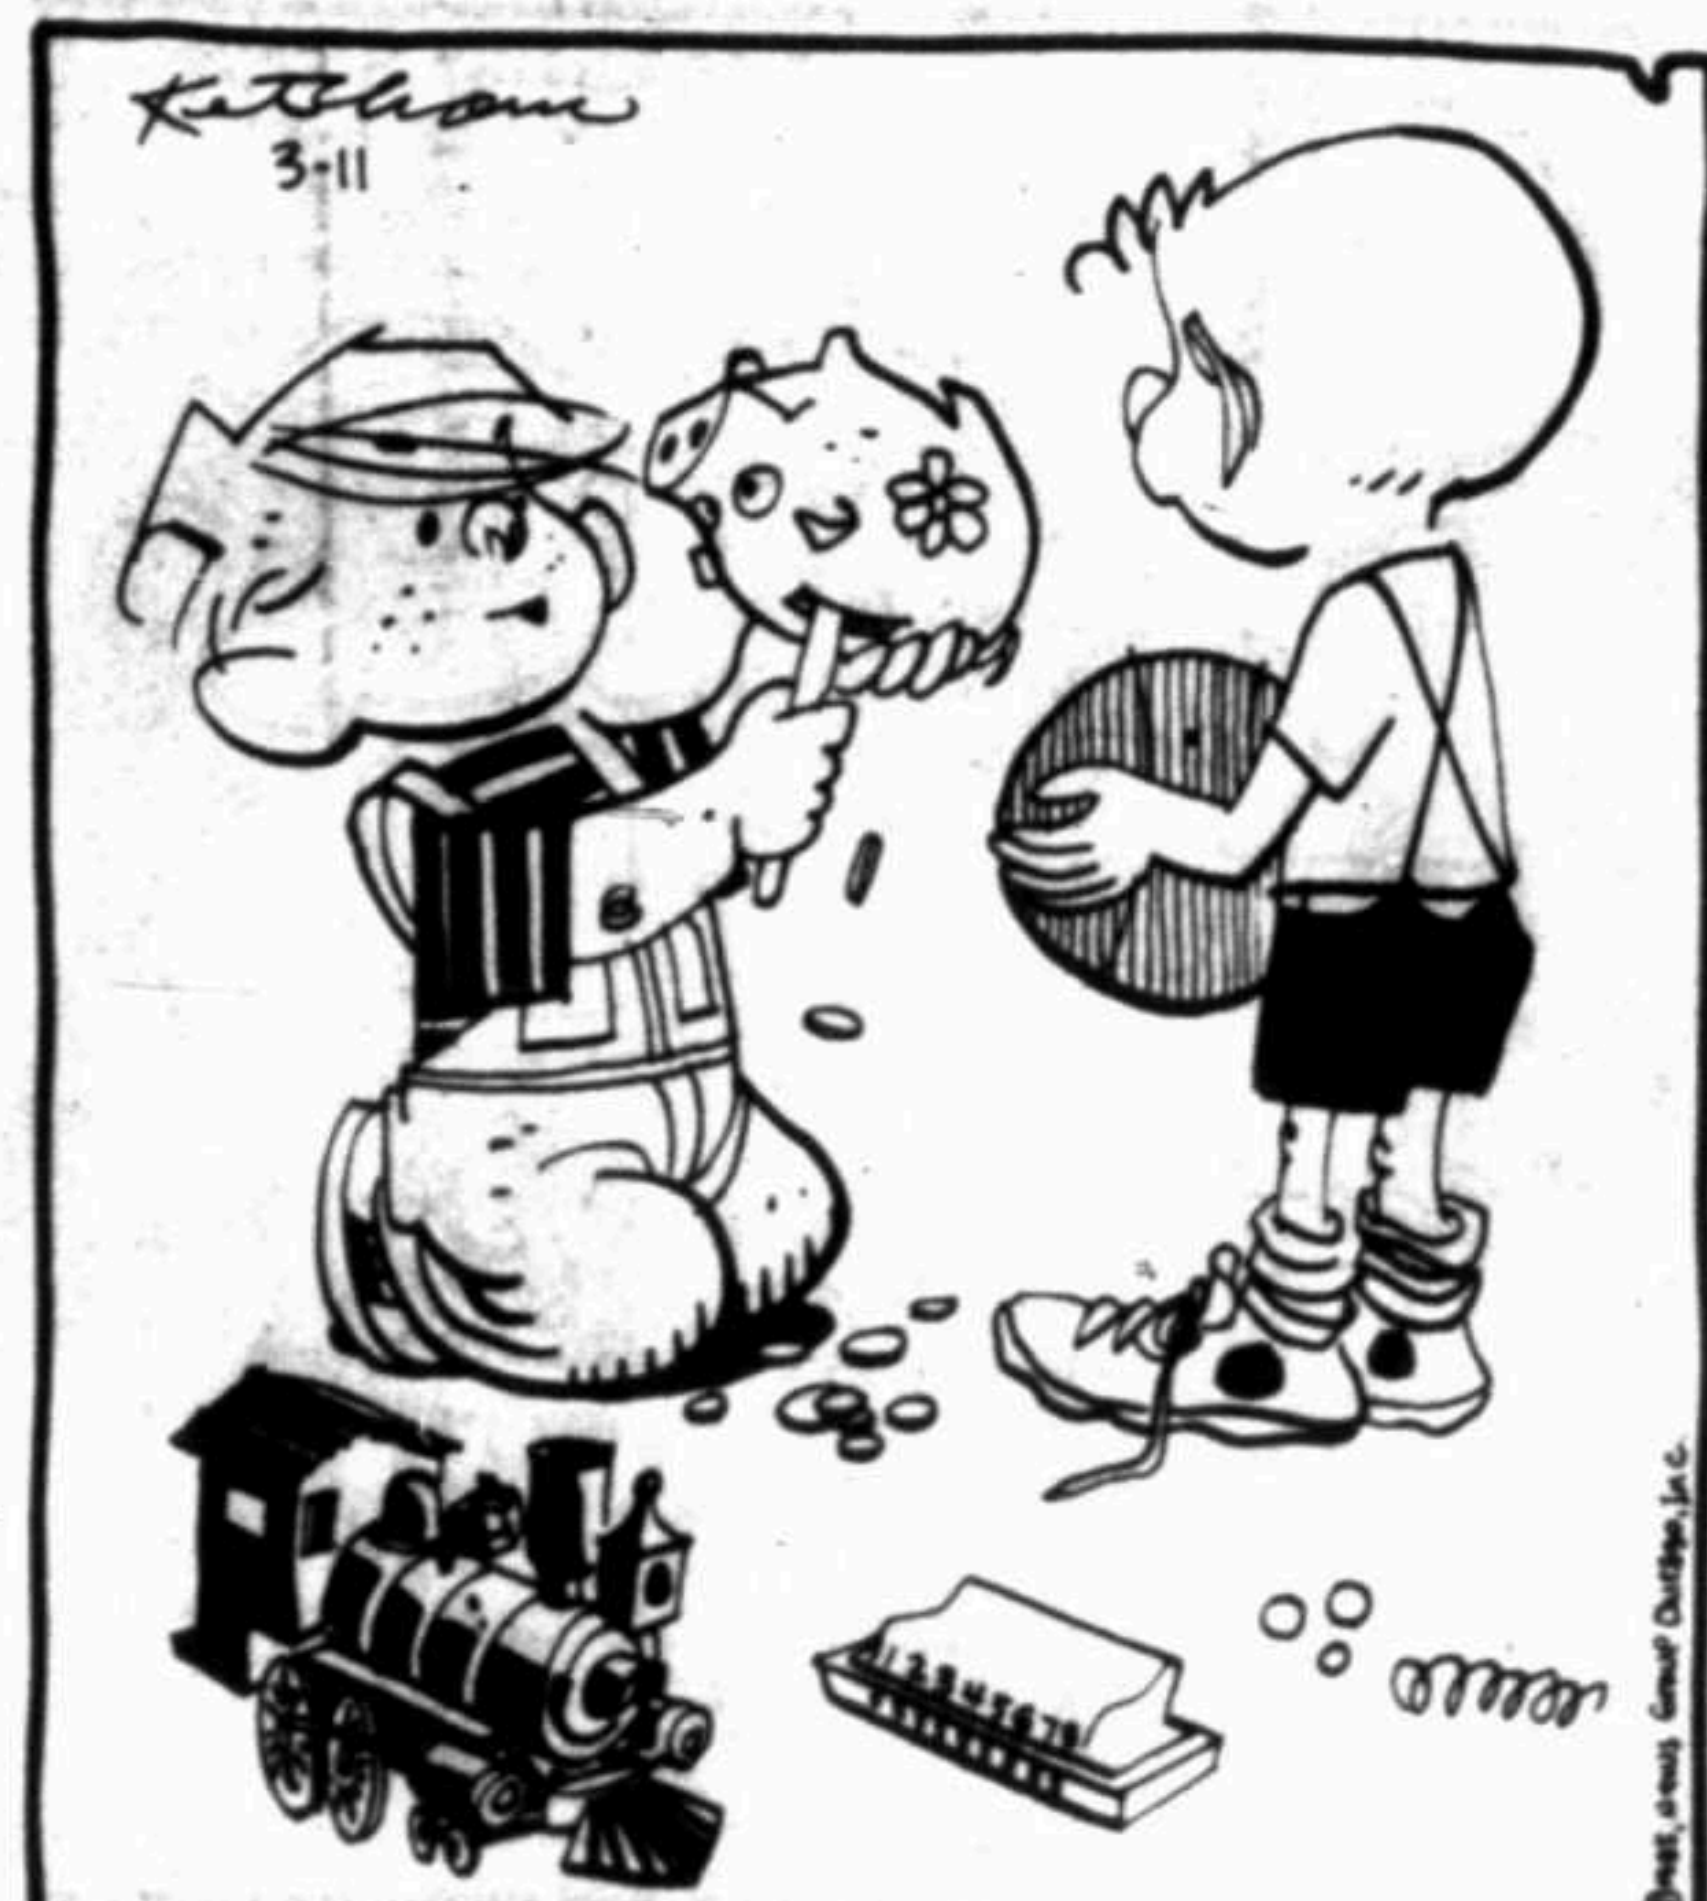

"I do not know what led up to the ride; if it was discussion about the wedding, or the weather, or what," Ms. Broadus said. "But they asked if they could take him out and Dr.

DeVries said, 'Yeah, I think that's a good idea.'"

Another first for Schroeder could be a move to a nearby apartment where he and his wife, Margaret, will gradually adjust to life outside the hospital.

No definite release date for Schroeder has been set, but doctors have boosted his exercise regime and diet in preparation for the move. He would get 24-hour nursing care outside of the hospital.

Partnership worth $4 million to government

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The Philippine government has invested $4 million in a secret business partnership between Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos and his wife, Imelda, and the owner of three Silicon Valley companies, according to a published report.

The couple owns 50 percent of Asian Reliability Co., the main holding company of Vincent Chuidian, a millionaire and former golfing partner of Marcos', the San Francisco Examiner said Sunday in a copyright story.

The Examiner quoted unidentified government and other sources as saying about $4 million had been invested in the company's stock by the Philippines' Ministry of Human Settlements, which Mrs. Marcos heads.

The 67-year-old president and his 53-year-old wife have agreed to invest $9.25 million of their money into the business, the newspaper said.

The company's holdings were listed as Interlek Inc. and Test International Inc., both of San Jose, and Tool & Die Master of Santa Clara, in the area known as Silicon Valley, one of the nation's chief centers in the computer industry.

Chuidian declined to comment on the story.

In Washington, D.C., Philippine Embassy press officer Abelardo Valencia told The Associated Press that he knew nothing about the story and that Ambassador Benjamin Romualdez was in Manila.

NEW YORK (AP) — Czechoslovakian-born film director Milos Forman became a favorite for winning an Academy Award for "Amadeus" after being honored as best director of 1984 by the Directors Guild of America for the movie.

Only twice in the 36-year history of the Directors Guild prize has an Oscar gone to someone other than the guild choice. The Academy Awards will be presented March 25 at the Los Angeles Music Center.

"I thought I knew what I would say when I got up here, but I was wrong," Forman, 52, said Saturday in accepting the award. "I'm thrilled."

NEW YORK (AP) — Bette Davis says she's sad her daughter is writing a book about life in a celebrity family but the actress isn't afraid of what she will reveal.

"I don't know what it says and we'll just have to wait and see," Miss Davis, 76, said in the April issue of the Ladies Home Journal. "I'm very sad about her doing it."

She said she does not expect to be treated like her frequent costar Joan Crawford was in "Mommy Dearest," an expose by that actress' adopted daughter, Christina.

"My Mother's Keeper," by Miss Davis' daughter, Barbara, is scheduled to be published in May by William Morrow.

SUNDANCE, Utah (AP) — Actor and director Robert Redford said it's been difficult to resolve the dilemma of being a private man in a public business but that he doesn't feel his fans are entitled to know everything about him.

"The only biography that I would ever want is the work, and the rest is my business," Redford, 47, said in an interview at his Sundance Ski Resort in Utah's rugged Wasatch Mountains.

"I happen to subscribe to the idea that you do not owe the public your private life because of the profession you're in. You owe them work, you owe them a performance on the screen."

SIoux FALLS, S.D. (AP) — The lawyer for Indian activist Dennis Banks says he'll renew efforts to free his client from jail in light of Banks' hospitalization for chest pains.

Banks, 47, in satisfactory condition at St. Michael's Hospital in Tyndal with a probable inflammation in tissue between the ribs, Dr. Robert Foley said Sunday. Banks was taken to the hospital Saturday night from the state correctional facility in Springfield.

"With this new development, it's about time that Dennis was released," said William Kunstler, Banks' attorney.

Banks is serving a three-year sentence stemming from a 1973 riot at the Custer County Courthouse. He was sentenced in 1984 after nine years as a fugitive.

WARE, Mass. (AP) — Arlo Guthrie, the folk singer best known for his 1987 hit "Alice's Restaurant," remained hospitalized in good condition today for tests on what doctors believe to be a gallbladder problem.

Guthrie, 37, son of the late folk singer Woody Guthrie, was finishing work on his latest album late Friday when he complained of stomach pains, said Linda Ebol, a receptionist at Longview Farm Studio in North Brookfield.

Bumper tattler

A new punishment in an Oklahoma City suburb has some motorists fuming — but also watching what they drink before they get behind the wheel.

The person responsible is Midwest City Municipal Judge Ken Spears and the controversial punishment is a bumper sticker he can order a person to put on their vehicle identifying them of driving while intoxicated.

The program hasn't been used without complaints. Some of the guilty persons believe it's unfairly applied since the bumper sticker punishment isn't handed out to everyone arrested for DWI. Other sentences can be a jail sentence, a $200 fine or a six-month deferred sentence.

Furthermore, the bumper stickers can be handed out along with any of those sentences or separately at Spears' discretion.

Spears says his way is best. "If you gave it to everybody ... it really loses its effect," he notes. Controversial or not, the program and others used in Midwest City appear to be working. At least statistically. According to Police Chief Jim Cox, "We seem to be having some success fighting the battle."

The stickers merely identify the drivers of the vehicles as individuals who've been arrested for either driving under the influence or driving while intoxicated, and alert other drivers that they should "report any erratic driving to the Midwest City police."

That sounds like simply another example of reliance on peer pressure to make would-be drunken drivers stay on the straight and narrow. It's something worth considering.

Shot at the law

The shot that was fired through the front window of the home of U.S. Supreme Court Justice Harry Blackmun in Arlington, Va., Feb. 28 was undoubtedly intended to injure him or to intimidate him and other judges. Luckily Blackmun, who had just left the living room, was uninjured. His wife was showered with shattered glass.

Blackmun has been protected by federal agents since he received threats citing the fact that he wrote the decision in the 1973 case of Roe vs. Wade, which held that abortion in the first trimester of pregnancy is a woman's constitutional right. No judge worth his or her salt will be swayed one iota by this lawless act. But the atmosphere of intimidation makes their lives tense and unpleasant.

Those who would undermine the rule of law in the name of human or divine rights which they determine for themselves outside the judicial and legislative process are misguided individuals, dangerous alike to others and themselves.

Incidents like this raise the question, "Is the United States a civilized country?" And the answer must be, "No, not entirely, not yet."

Another View:

Widening deficit

The American trade deficit is widening again, the January figures show. Last year's deficit was a record by a wide margin, with imports running $123 billion ahead of exports. This year, with the dollar's exchange rate higher than ever, it will probably be even larger. Trade deficits on this scale are unprecedented in economic history, and no one really knows what the full effects will be. But important changes in the traditional patterns of American trade are becoming visible.

It's not only that the volume of imports is larger than it's ever been. The composition of those imports is also quite different from past years. Until a couple of years ago, the United States imported chiefly consumer goods and oil. It exported capital goods — mostly industrial and business equipment, usually at the high end of the technology ladder — and farm products.

But within the past two years, the United States has swung from an exporter of capital goods to an importer. Still more startling, the imported equipment increasingly comes from the most advanced areas of technology. Stephen S. Roach, an economist for Morgan Stanley, the investment banking firm, points out that last summer, the latest three months for which detailed figures are available, the United States imported $69 billion worth of capital goods (excluding cars and trucks) — and nearly two-thirds of it was classified as high technology. What was it specifically? Computers, office machinery, communications equipment and instruments.

A tremendous boom of private business investment in computing and communications equipment began about a decade ago, and, with the high dollar, the proportion of this equipment supplied from abroad has been rising dramatically. Does it mean that American producers in these crucial fields are becoming less competitive? Not necessarily. Much of this imported gear is being produced abroad by American companies, with American technology and management but foreign labor. The United States, in the geographical sense, is no longer as dominant a source of supply for advanced electronics as it was earlier in this decade. But the American companies that make these products are another matter. The trade numbers alone don't tell you much about their standing, for the companies in those fields are now operating with little regard for national boundaries.

The huge trade deficit means that the country is living well — for the present — on a flood of goods for which it has not paid. It's a pleasant time for consumers. But the wave of imports is changing the structure of American industry — and the impact is no longer limited to the aging factories that plod along with obsolescent technology.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's highlight in history: On March 11, 1888, the famous "Blizzard of '88" struck the northeastern United States. In the days that followed, about 400 people died as a result of the weather.

On this date: In 1810, Emperor Napoleon of France was married by proxy to Archduchess Marie Louise of Austria.

In 1941, President Franklin D. Roosevelt signed into law the Lend-Lease Bill, providing war supplies to countries fighting the Axis.

Thought for today: "The worst sin toward our fellow creatures is not to hate them, but to be indifferent to them; that's the essence of inhumanity." — George Bernard Shaw, Irish-born playwright (1856-1950).

Paybacks don't help consumers

WASHINGTON — Does Big Oil always win? Do consumers always lose? Sometimes it sure seems that way.

Take the billions that American consumers were overcharged by oil companies during the period of oil price controls in the 1970s. The Department of Energy cracked down, and the corporations were ordered to pay back their ill-gotten gains.

Unfortunately, in several cases the DOE ordered the companies to pay their money to the state governments, not consumers — then failed to keep track of what the overcharge money was used for.

In fact, according to an unreleased General Accounting Office review of $36 million in reimbursements dating from the mid-1970s, the DOE didn't even give the overcharged customers — utilities, airlines, schools, small businesses, towns and individuals — a chance to claim their share.

The result is that some of the states have earmarked the money for programs that are only marginally related to gas and oil overcharges. In one case, the state has actually decided to use its money to help the very industry that gouged the public.

The GAO report, prepared for Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., revealed flaws in the DOE's reimbursement system. It becomes a more serious matter with the assumption that the same sloppy supervision might apply to the estimated $5 billion to $6 billion in overcharges that is yet to be distributed.

Here's what the GAO found to criticize in the DOE's handling of the reimbursements:

— Consent agreements were "improperly" entered into by the department with four oil companies because they "were made without giving overcharged customers an opportunity to present their claims through the DOE's established procedures." The four companies were Chevron, Standard Oil of Ohio, Imperial Refineries and Site Oil Company of Missouri.

— "Some of the orders have involved payments to institutions ... that were not actually injured by overcharges."

The DOE bureaucrats "agreed to settlement terms which may not provide for restitution" in clear defiance of congressional intent. These expenditures included bridge, highway and airport repairs and maintenance. In a letter to DOE Secretary John Herrington, Dingell complained that such use of the money "is hardly akin to restitution for oil overcharges."

— Texas plans to use its $798,858 share of the overcharges to finance projects at the state university's bureau of economic geology. This "would directly benefit energy producers," the GAO concluded.

— Nebraska got DOE approval to spend $100,000 of its overcharge reimbursement on a project to demonstrate how the use of trees can help reduce heating and cooling costs — something farmers have known for years. The project would "instill in students an enthusiasm for tree planting," the GAO report adds.

— Georgia got DOE approval to spend $250,380 in restitution funds to buy 642 breathalyzers. The testing of suspected drunk drivers, the DOE decided, "could reasonably be chosen by the state as a vehicle for benefiting motor gasoline consumers." Dingell wrote: "I respectfully disagree. ... The connection to overcharged consumers is remote."

Footnote: A spokesman for the state of Georgia told my associate Tony Capaccio that the DOE instructions were to spend the overcharge reimbursements "to benefit the driving public." He said, "We feel it was a very effective use of the money."

A DOE official explained that the four settlements analyzed by the GAO auditors were "very old," and said there are now procedures that allow the actual overcharged customers to make claims for refunds.

HOME, SWEET HOME: There's a window of opportunity open for home buyers in the next three or four months, but it could slam shut on your fingers by early summer. It all depends on whether Congress and the administration can agree on ways to cut the federal budget. Here's why:

The massive budget deficits force the government into the credit market, borrowing billions of dollars that might otherwise be available for such things as home mortgages. This competition for finite funds drives interest rates up. Conversely, a smaller deficit would send interest rates down and make homes more affordable.

There's a rule of thumb, in fact, that says each percentage point of decline in interest rates translates into 100,000 new housing starts.

Fixed-rate mortgages are now around 12.9 percent. They may dip even lower by the end of this month. But the consensus is that, if the federal deficit isn't trimmed by summer, the rates will start climbing again, with 14 percent or higher mortgages by late in the year.

Rates that high would mean renewed popularity for ARMs (adjustable-rate mortgages), which start out enticingly low then jump, sometimes drastically, in later years. The total amount taken in by banks through ARMs is currently running above $100 billion a year. But there's a clear and future danger cited in an internal report prepared for government banking officials. It warns:

"There is always the risk that a household can purchase a home (with an ARM) but eventually be unable to meet rising interest payments. ... There have been isolated cases in which the potential payment increase in a year was as high as 30 percent." In short, an ARM could turn into an arm and a leg.

Kirkpatrick to switch parties

WASHINGTON — Jeane Kirkpatrick, who may end up on the 1988 presidential ticket, will switch her registration from Democrat to Republican just before she is honored in Washington April 3 with a "Welcome to the Party" gathering of GOP women led by Maureen Reagan.

That will come a few days after Kirkpatrick is formally replaced by Vernon Walters as ambassador to the United Nations. Kirkpatrick felt she could not make the party switch until after leaving the U.N. post.

April 1, considered her lucky day by Kirkpatrick, is the likeliest day to change parties. That is the anniversary of her first meeting with Ronald Reagan (in 1980, when he was seeking the Republican nomination). But she vetoed plans to turn her actual registration as a Maryland voter into a media event, with Republican National Chairman Frank Fahrenkopf accompanying her to the registrar's office.

KEMP'S NO-SHOW

Rep. Jack Kemp is under attack by his closest House Republican colleagues for missing the March 4 vote on the contested Indiana House seat in order to honor a long-scheduled speaking engagement to businessmen in Merrimack, N.H.

When the Indiana vote was suddenly scheduled March 1, Kemp was urged to cancel the New Hampshire trip by his friend and ally, House Minority Whip Trent Lott. But Kemp and his political staffers decided that to rub out a two-month-old engagement in the first-in-the-nation primary state would give an incorrect signal that he was not really interested in presidential politics.

A footnote: Along on Kemp's trip was political consultant Roger Stone, who urged the congressman to fulfill the New Hampshire commitment. Stone's partner, Lee Atwater, has been advising Vice President George Bush on how to beef up his political staff. Long before the 1988 election, their firm will decide which Republican to back.

WHITE HOUSE TRUCE

A White House staff confrontation over who would run the politically sensitive public liaison office was averted when Political Director Ed Rollins convinced Communications Director Pat Buchanan that holding hands with minority groups, feminists and labor leaders was not for him.

Accordingly, the nuts-and-bolts operations of public liaison will be under Rollins. But as part of the negotiated settlement, Buchanan will deal with the issues and the interest groups with which he is most concerned: Nicaragua, right-to-life, the evangelical movement.

Buchanan's first choice to head the public liaison office, Civil Rights Commission Staff Director Linda Chavez, has lost out. The likely winner is Assistant Secretary of Education Anne Graham, a conservative who worked for Buchanan in the Nixon White House.

TRAVELING SENATORS Not a single senator invited to observe the opening of the U.S.-Soviet arms talks accepted the full-scale CIA briefing offered as essential preparation for the journey to Geneva, angering top administration officials.

Instead of taking a short walk down the hall and up two floors in the elevator to the Capitol's "secure" briefing chamber, the senators chose to wait until arriving in Geneva. Briefing conditions there are much poorer because of Soviet listening devices. Administration officials did not complain, however, out of their desire for good relations with the Senate.

A footnote: When we reported administration anger over the huge House delegation originally intended for Geneva, there were veiled threats from House Democratic leaders of retaliations against the MX missile. But the president's well-publicized telephone call to House Majority Leader Jim Wright smoothed over bruised feelings, and a slimmed-down Geneva junket was quickly laid on.

GLENN BOWS OUT

Sen. John Glenn of Ohio, up for re-election next year, reneged on commitments to join the centrist Democratic Leadership Council (DLC) once organized labor began a campaign against it.

The DLC was formed as a haven for moderate Democratic officeholders after Paul Kirk was elected Democratic national chairman with labor's backing. Glenn even supported it in a closed-door meeting with Democratic governors.

He bowed out because the DLC could be "perceived" as "divisive." Nobody from labor contacted the senator, a Glenn aide told us. But AFL-CIO operatives were on the telephone to other moderate Democratic officeholders urging them to steer clear of the DLC.

CHARLEY REESE

Wisdom allowed freedom

The forgotten part of the Bill of Rights is the Tenth Amendment. It says: "The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution nor prohibited by it to the states are reserved to the states respectively or to the people."

It's because we have forgotten that, that we have such a problem with the federal deficit.

The authors of the Constitution designed a federal system in which the powers and duties were divided. The federal government was assigned some tasks, but the majority of the duties of government were assigned to the states.

Greed, political cowardice, the collectivist lust for a strong central government have all but erased our federal system. Just look at the source and nature of the complaints about the President's proposed budget cuts. Mayors, governors, bureaucrats and do-gooders are screaming about cuts in local services.

Deeply beloved, it is not the duty of the federal government to police the streets of New York, provide the sewer system for Oshkosh, hire a teacher's aide for the school system in Birmingham, fund day-care centers in Detroit, or build a mass transit system in Houston.

Those are all responsibilities of the state and local governments. Unless we the people force state and local governments to assume their responsibilities, the federal budget will never be balanced and eventually economic ruin will strike us all.

Federal aid is nothing more than plunder thy neighbor. It's using political influence to get taxpayers in Nebraska to subsidize mass transit in Miami. It's getting taxpayers in Florida to pay for the Kennedy Center in Washington and Maine fishermen to subsidize Kansas wheat farmers.

It's taxing hard-working people in low income brackets to provide grants to so-called poets and musicians in Greenwich Village. It's a system in which political pull rather than merit determines the appropriation. It is an unjust system. It is an economically foolish system because it is based on a myth.

The federal government draws its money from the same well as every state and local government: our pockets. The Lord went out of the manna business a long time ago. There are no leprechauns who leave pots of gold in the halls of the U.S. Treasury Department. The only source of revenue for all the governments in the United States is the income of the people.

If you want some service in your city, then let your local government provide it. Why send your money to Washington and hope a part of it comes back to where it originated?

There are two reasons for doing it: (1) you hope to plunder others by getting more back than you sent which means someone else must get less back than they sent; and (2) local politicians can provide more services than they have the guts to tax you for.

A lot of services which people claim are essential they would not think are essential if they had to pay for them directly out of their own pockets. Spending federal revenues on local government services allows people to pretend that they don't have to pay for them. It allows local political opportunists to puff out their chests and brag about what they are doing for the people.

In short, it facilitates everyone at every level living beyond their means. That's why you have a $15 trillion federal debt and over $5 trillion in unfunded liabilities. What you ought to keep in mind is that there is only one source of funds to pay those debts: your future earnings and the future earnings of your children and their children.

The genius of the federal system our forefathers designed was that not only did it make it more difficult for a central government to usurp the people's rights, but it also allowed the maximum freedom. People in the states could decide for themselves the level of services which they wanted from government and for which they were willing to pay.

The selfish whines over proposed cuts in the federal budget, if they are heeded by the Congress, constitute a funeral dirge for the future of the American people.

Report says farms on verge of bankruptcy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly 14 percent of mid-sized U.S. farms holding $47 billion in debt are technically insolvent or on the verge of bankruptcy, an Agriculture Department report says.

The unreleased report says 93,000 — or 13.7 percent — of such farms that form the backbone of U.S. commercial agriculture are in trouble, which is a 45 percent increase over earlier figures and considerably higher than the 4 percent rate cited last week by President Reagan when he vetoed emergency credit to farmers.

Agriculture Secretary John Block, questioned later about the president's statement, said Reagan "misspoke" and really knows the situation is far worse.

The new report by the department's Economic Research Service, circulating on Capitol Hill, reiterates data issued several months ago indicating that some 386,000 of the 2.3 million total U.S. farms — or nearly 18 percent — are likely to be suffering some financial stress.

But it goes beyond those numbers to paint a worsening picture for the 679,000 farms that are the mainstream of production agriculture, the so-called "family farms" grossing between $50,000 and $500,000 a year.

"If the situation in early 1984 is extended to early 1985, the available data suggest that one-third of all family-size commercial farms, owing almost one-half of all farm debt, will have some degree of financial difficulty," the report says.

Several Democratic senators cited the report last week when they questioned Block about figures Reagan used in explaining the reasons for his veto of emergency farm aid legislation. A copy of the document was subsequently obtained by The Associated Press.

Another body found in area hit by serial killer

SEATTLE (AP) — Human skeletal remains have been found again near Seattle-Tacoma International Airport, and a police task force set up after a series of killings of women was investigating, police say.

In the past, the remains of five victims of the so-called Green River killer, blamed for up to 28 deaths, have been found in the same area. However, police did not immediately know if the latest remains, found Sunday, were of another victim of the serial killer.

The Green River Task Force planned to begin a search for additional clues today, said King County Police spokeswoman Sharon Rieg.

Ms. Rieg said an unidentified person led police to the site Sunday afternoon, and that the remains had been confirmed as human.

So far, the deaths of 28 women have been attributed to the serial killer over the past three years. Three victims remain unidentified. In addition, 14 missing women are feared to be victims of the same killer.

The case takes its name from the Green River in southern King County, where the bodies of the first five victims were found in the summer of 1982.

Counties forecasts

Midland, Ector, Crane, Upton, Reagan, Glasscock, Dawson, Borden, Martin, Howard, Gaines and Andrews counties: Tonight, partly cloudy with a low in the lower 50s. Wind west 10 to 15 mph becoming northeast late tonight. Tuesday, cloudy and not as warm with a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms and a high in the mid-70s. Wind northeast 10 to 20 mph.

Rain possible for Midland on Tuesday

From Staff and Wire Reports

Rain and cooler temperatures are possible in the Midland area Tuesday as the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport forecasts partly cloudy skies with lows in the lower 50s tonight, becoming cloudy and cooler Tuesday with highs in the mid-70s. Forecasters predict a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms Tuesday. Winds will be from the west at 10 to 15 mph becoming northeasterly by late tonight, shifting to the east at 10 to 15 mph Tuesday.

Sunday's high of 79 was nine degrees below the record set in 1954. This morning's low was 46 degrees above the 1948 record of 10 degrees.

STATE

Gusty March winds buffeted most of Texas today, bringing Gulf moisture over the eastern part of the state in the form of low clouds and morning fog.

West Texas reported only high clouds, but a very warm day was expected with highs mostly in the 80s and even reaching into the mid-90s in the Big Bend country.

The morning fog in East Texas prompted a traveler's advisory along the upper Texas coast.

South winds blew at 15 to 25 mph over much of South, South Central and North Central Texas, with west to southwest winds at about 15 mph in the High Plains.

NATION

Rainshowers lingered over the central Plains, the Mississippi Valley, southern Indiana and Kentucky today after heavy overnight rains dumped nearly a half-inch of rain on central Kansas.

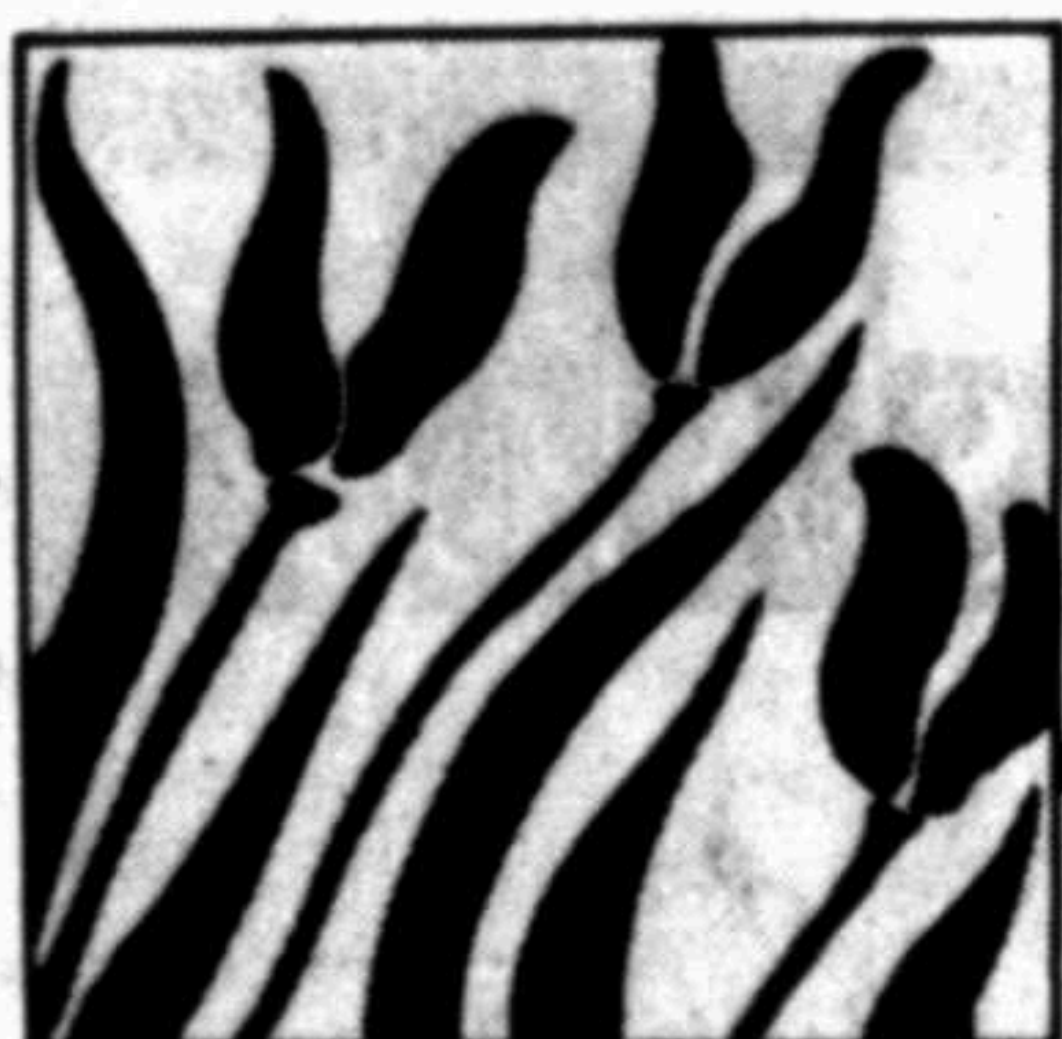

In flood-weary Peoria, Ill., where Illinois River flooding has driven more than 1,700 people from their homes, forecasters said today's light rain would not push the river higher but only slow its descent.

A flood watch was in effect today across southern Michigan, where snowmelt and possible rain could push some rivers over flood stage.

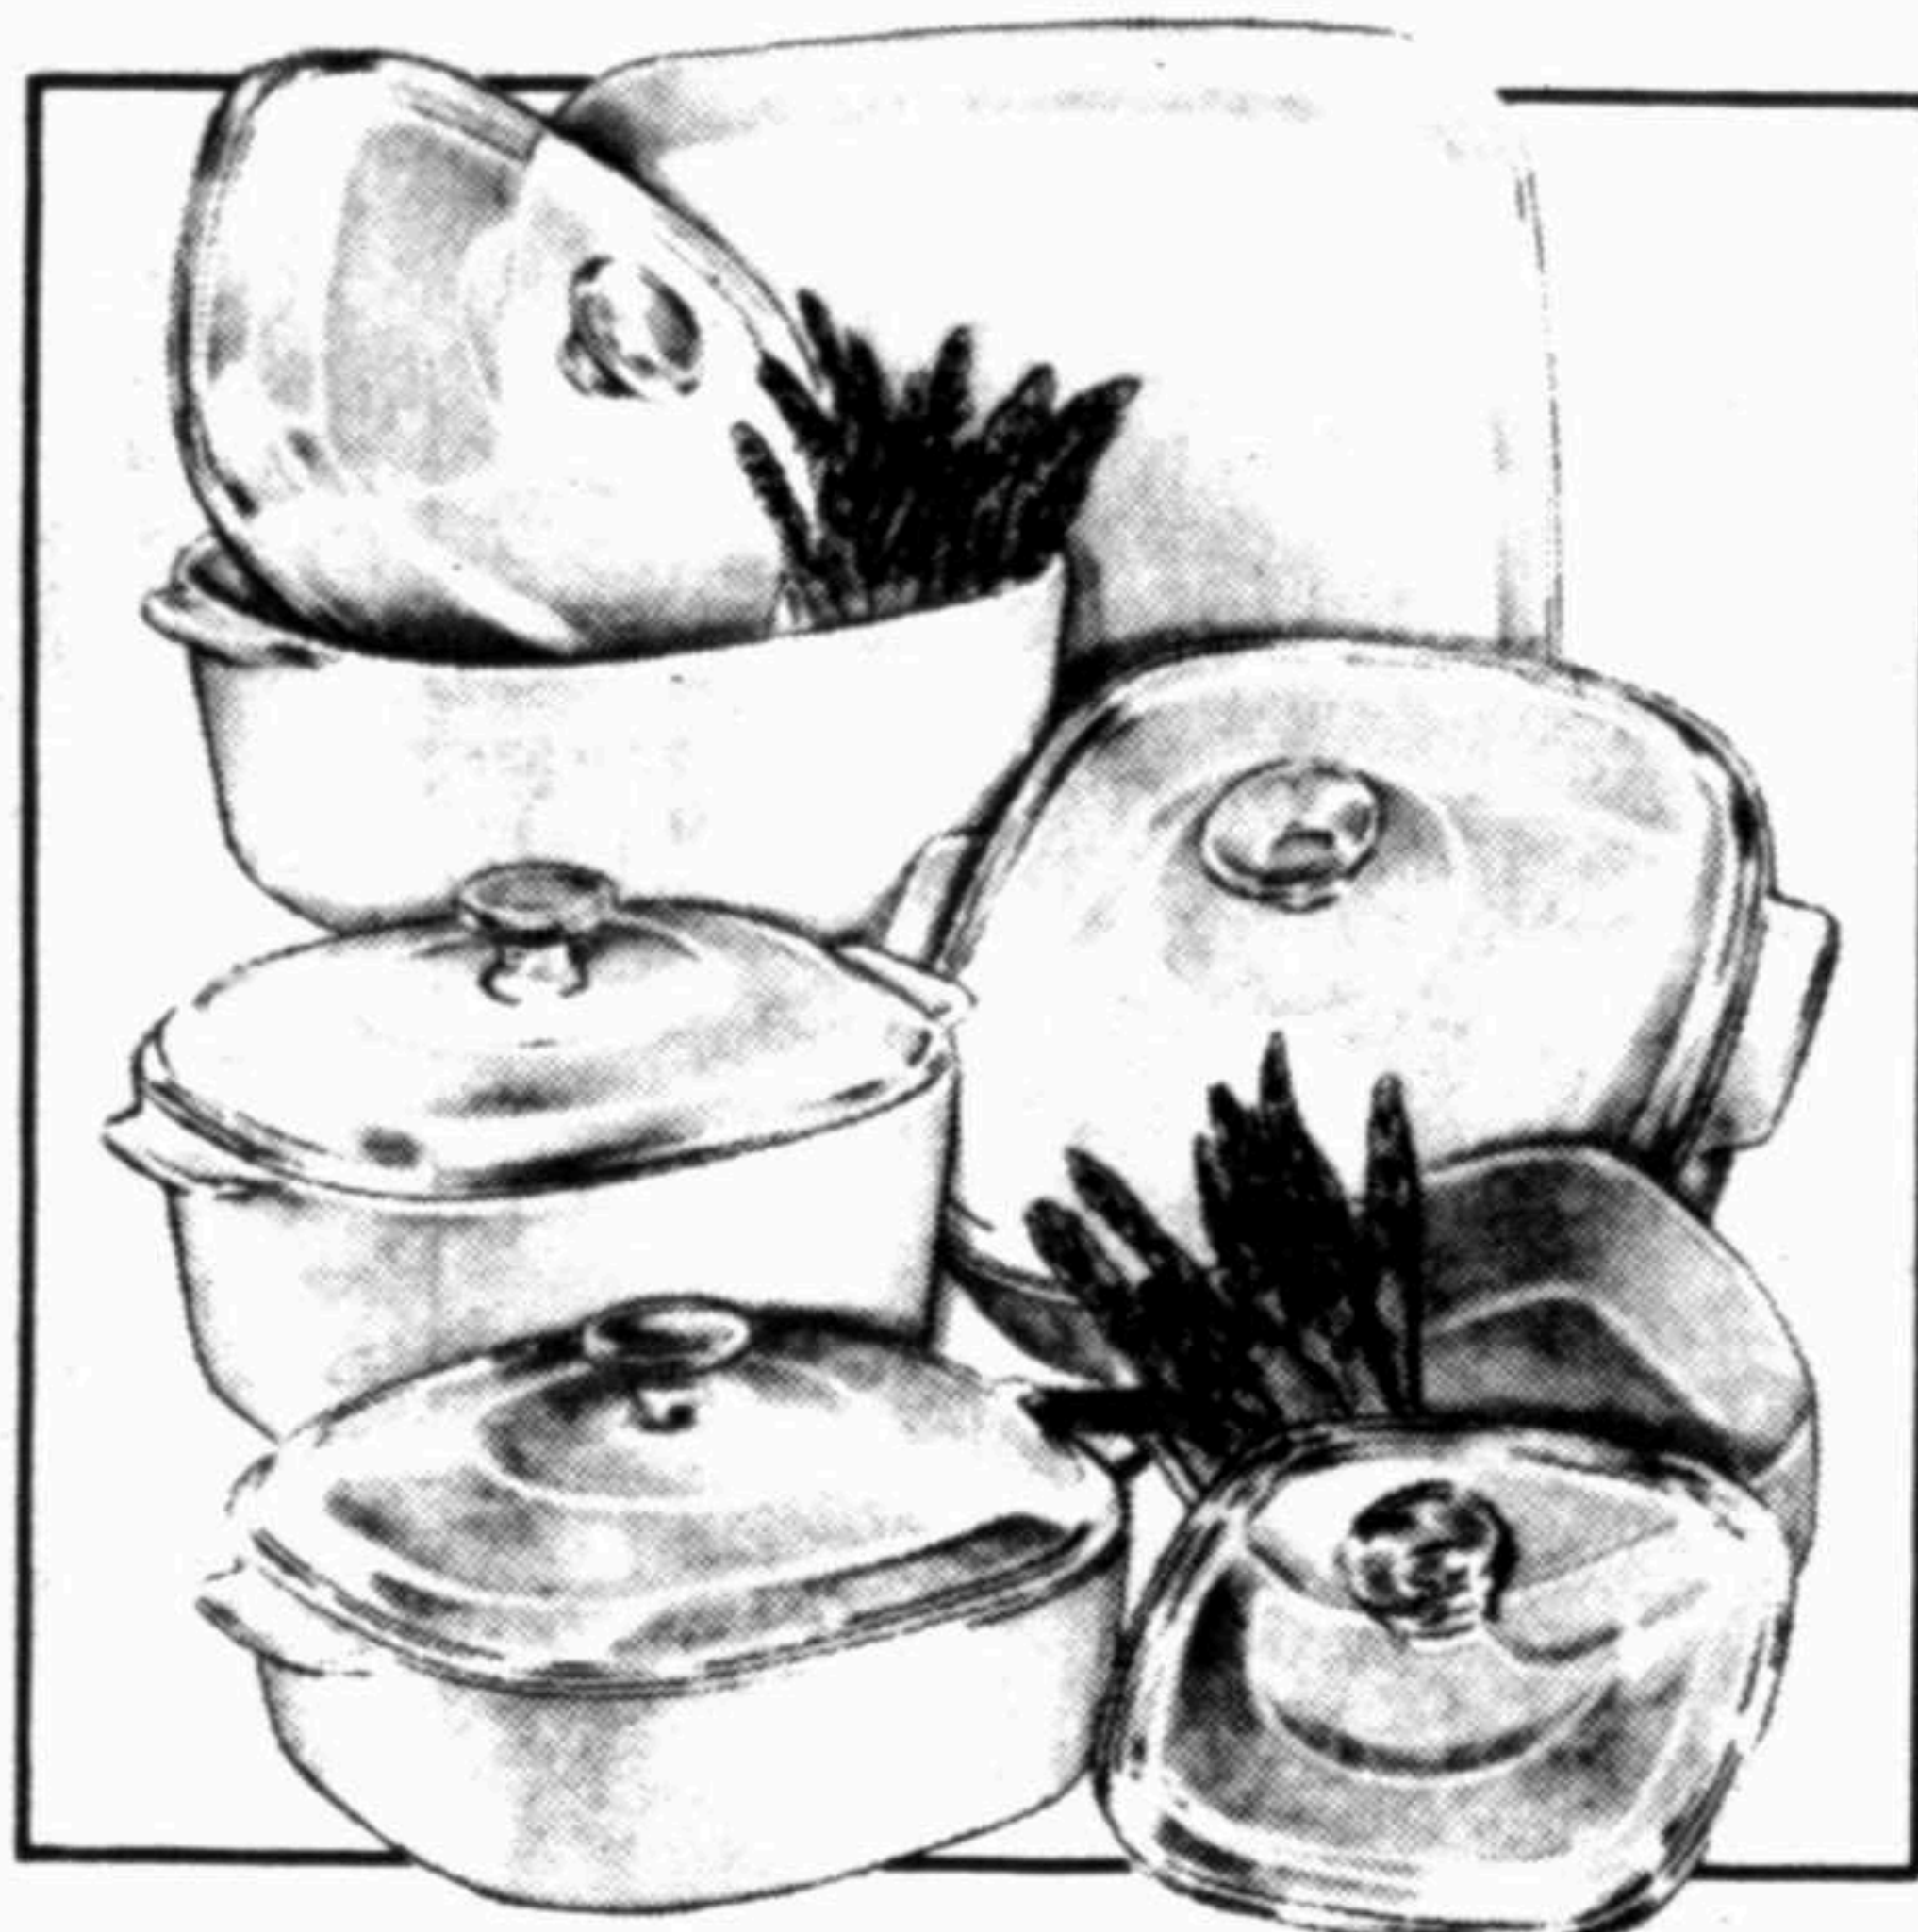

Scattered rainshowers were falling along the northern California coast while some snow was reported in the mountains from the Sierra Nevada across the northern and central Rockies.

Early morning temperatures were in the 50s as far north as Nebraska, with readings in the low 70s over south Texas and southern Florida.

Today's forecast called for rainshowers ranging from California across most of the Rockies, with snow over the higher elevations.

Big 10, Big East land six berths each

By DOUG TUCKER

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Big Ten and Big East conferences put a record six teams apiece in the 64-team NCAA men's basketball tournament Sunday, heading a field that the head of the selection committee called not only the largest but the best ever.

"We are very excited about the very difficult job we have done," said Vic Bubas, chairman of the Division I basketball committee which spent three days and nights drawing the pairings and seedings.

Defending NCAA champion Georgetown, St. John's, Michigan and Oklahoma — the top four teams in The Associated Press Top Twenty — were made No. 1 seeds in the four regions.

First-round competition begins

NCAA Pairings

Thursday around the nation and the tournament will end with the championship game April 1 in Lexington, Ky.

The committee picked 35 at-large teams to go with 29 which qualified automatically as champions of their conference or conference tournament.

"The first 20 or 21 at-large teams were easy. It was no trouble," Bubas said. "The last 15 got difficult and I'm telling you, the last six or eight, we could have stayed there a week. It was an agonizing experience."

KETTUCKY, a Final Four team last season and host of the finals this year, made the field for a record 30th time with the worst record among at-large entries, 16-12.

"The players had kind of given up hope of getting in the NCAA," said Kentucky Coach Joe B. Hall, whose Wildcats were 6-6 this season against teams that made the tournament. "I think there was a feeling we were not going to get a bid. Now that the bid is here and the pressure's off, it's time to let it all out and we can get fired up and ready to go."

Among the missing were Indiana, NCAA champion in 1976 and 1981 but a loser in six of its last seven games this season; Louisville, which won in 1980 and had been in the last eight NCAA tournaments; Houston, which had been in the Final Four the last three years, and UCLA, which won 10 titles in a 12-year stretch ending in 1975 and had not missed the tournament two years a row since 1961.

Only three independents made the field — Notre Dame, Dayton and DePaul. Among others left out, despite the addition of 11 teams this year, were 20-12 Creighton, 20-10 Richmond and 20-8 West Virginia, the regular-season Atlantic 10 champion.

Lehigh, at 12-18, is the only tournament team with a losing record, and the Engineers got in only by winning the East Coast Conference postseason tournament.

The previous record for most teams from one conference in the tournament was five by the Atlantic Coast in 1980 and 1984, the Big East in 1983 and the Big Ten in 1983.

THE ACC and the Southeastern

Conference both had five teams this year and the Pacific 10 had four. In all, 41 percent of the NCAA field comes from seven conferences.

Bubas declined to speculate how many teams had a realistic chance of winning.

"I don't know," he said. "There are a lot of them. The number is getting greater every year. The National Invitation Tournament is going to have a good tournament. There are a lot of quality players and quality teams still there."

A total of 16 teams who won at least 20 games this season were left out of the tournament. Besides West Virginia, Richmond and Creighton, they were 22-7 Montana, 20-9 Weber State, 20-9 Canisius, 22-7 Siena, 21-8 Cleveland State, 20-10 Eastern Illinois, 20-11 Youngstown State, 20-9 Fresno State, 20-7 Tennessee-Chattanooga, 23-6 Alcorn State, 24-5 Georgia Southern, 21-8 Houston Baptist and 29-8 Santa Clara.

"More and more, to the Division I basketball committee, your schedule comes into play," Bubas explained. "Everyone's schedule is scrutinized very closely — home and away, how did you do against the top 20? The top 50. The top 100? There will be some disappointed teams. There always are."

The selection committee decided that no team could play on its home court after the second round.

Three teams — Georgia Tech, Notre Dame and Dayton — will enjoy a home-court advantage in first-round play.

Myers happy with site

SMU plays Old Dominion

DALLAS (AP) — The Southwest Conference landed three basketball teams in the NCAA tournament on Sunday, but Texas A&M University with 19 victories got left out in the cold.

Texas Tech, the SWC regular season and Post-Season Classic champion, will play Boston College on Friday night in Houston in a first-round Midwest Regional game.

Arkansas, which lost to Texas Tech three times during the season including a 67-64 Classic championship finale, will play Iowa on Thursday night in Salt Lake City in the Far West Regional.

The Razorbacks lost to Iowa 71-52 earlier in the season.

SOUTHERN Methodist, losing seven of its last 11 games but finishing with 22 victories, received a bid to play Old Dominion in the Eastern Regional on Thursday at Hartford, Conn.

Tech Coach Gerald Myers was delighted to be going to Houston. The Red Raiders thought they were headed to Albuquerque.

"It's super to be going to Houston," said Myers. "We really thought we'd be going west. We're really happy to be going to that region."

Myers said Boston College "is a great team. I know (guard) Michael Adams is a super jet-quick player."

SMU Coach Dave Bliss said the Mustangs "are happy to be in the tournament again. We thought we might be going to the East. Old Dominion hasn't received a lot of notice, but we know they are tough."

THE AGGIES missing the tournament didn't surprise SWC Commissioner Fred Jacoby.

"There's a lot of politics on that selection committee," said Jacoby. "The Aggies really didn't play that great of schedule. Marquette was the best-known team."

Texas Christian Athletic Director Frank Windeger is on the selection committee and was in Kansas City when the pairings were announced.

Aggie Coach Shelby Metcalf was on a lake in East Texas fishing when the Aggies were overlooked.

However, he knew what was coming, saying earlier "I didn't even send them (the selection committee) a Christmas card. They say politics is out of it. I doubt it."

Fuzzy Zoeller
...two-stroke winner

Zoeller comeback wins first

By BOB GREEN

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Fuzzy Zoeller, whose career was in jeopardy only a few, short months ago, capped one of the great comebacks in golf's history with his 2-stroke triumph Sunday in the Hertz Bay Hill Classic.

"I'm happy for Fuzzy," said Tom Watson, who chased — but could not catch — the man who underwent major back surgery last fall.

"I heard the rumors, that he may not ever play again," Watson said.

"Lord, what that must do to you. You'd see your career passing in front of your eyes."

Then to come back, this soon, and win. That's something. I'm happy for him," Watson said. He ranked Zoeller's accomplishment with the storied comebacks of Ben Hogan — from a near-fatal automobile accident — Gene Littler — from cancer surgery — and Lee Trevino — from major back surgery.

"It meant a lot to me to win this one. I'm so relieved now," said Zoeller, who used a solid, no-bogey, 4-under-par 67 to hold off Watson's last-round challenge.

"I'm on cloud nine... Just wonderful... Great."

"I wondered yesterday if it was time for me to win again. I guess it was," he said.

After taking command with birdies on four of his first seven holes, he won it with a decisive string of 12 pars, including scrambling, one-putt efforts on the 16th and 18th.

The last one was rewarded by a big hug from his 5-year-old daughter, Sunnys Noel, who scampered on to the 18th green and leaped into her father's arms.

"I'll be honest with you. Five and a half months ago, I thought my chances of ever being here again were slim. We talked about it before I went in for the surgery," Zoeller said.

"When you're laying in a bed for a month, a lot of things go through your head. Sure, there was consideration that I might not be able to play again. That thought occurred."

"But I was very fortunate." Zoeller, an easy-going, free-spirit sort of guy who took the 1976 Masters title, was able to play only two competitive rounds last year following his playoff triumph in the U.S. Open.

He was forced out of the PGA championship and into a hospital in Birmingham, Ala. by severe back pain in August.

A month later, Zoeller, his body twisted and contorted by pain, was unable to do his job in Las Vegas. He went immediately to New York — without even telling his wife — entered the Hospital for Special Surgery and, on Sept. 25, underwent major surgery.

at Dallas Sunday as Red Raiders defeated Razorbacks, 67-64, to add post-season tournament to their regular season title.

Raiders sweep

Prove SWC title no fluke

By DENNE H. FREEMAN

DALLAS (AP) — The Texas Tech Red Raiders proved their regular-season Southwest Conference basketball title was no fluke.

Quentin Anderson scored all 17 of his points in the second half on Sunday to bring the Red Raiders a 67-64 victory over the Arkansas Razorbacks and the SWC Post-Season Classic title.

Tech will now play Boston College of the Big East Conference in the first round of the NCAA playoffs at Houston in the Midwest Regional next Friday night.

ARKANSAS received a bid to meet Iowa of the Big Ten Conference on Thursday night in Salt Lake City in the Far Western Regional.

Anderson hit two game-clinching free throws with 15 seconds.

"We didn't get much respect even after we won the title," said Anderson. "I hope this puts into everybody's mind who was the best in the conference this year."

Arkansas, losing to Tech for the third time this year, had no argument.

"Tech is super," said Joe Kleine, who was the tournament MVP and scored 36 points against the Red Raiders.

"You better be ready to play for 40 minutes when you play Tech," said Kleine. "They never did lose their composure. They have five seniors on the floor and Coach Myers is a great coach."

TECH, the SWC regular season champion, earned its first tournament title since 1976 and an automatic bid to the NCAA tournament with the come-from-behind victory.

Arkansas is now 21-12 while Tech is 23-7, including 11 wins in a row.

Kleine missed a free throw that would have tied the game with 44 seconds to play.

It was the first time that Arkansas Coach Eddie Sutton had ever lost three times in one season to the same team.

"It was a great college basketball game," said Sutton. "When you play a team as good as Texas Tech, you're asking for trouble when you miss free throws in the last five minutes. Tech is just outstanding and Bubba Jennings is a great player."

Jennings, named the league's Player of the Year, scored 23 points for the Red Raiders and hit two free throws with 34 seconds to go that gave Tech a 63-62 lead. Then Anderson iced it.

Arkansas fell behind 10 points early in the second half, but Kleine took charge, scoring eight straight points to get the Hogs back into the game.

Kleine gave Arkansas the lead at 42-41.

The Red Raiders, now 23-7 for the season, fell behind 16-7 before a technical foul called on irate fan Myers struck fire into the regular season SWC champions.

Eight-hour rule results in schedule shift

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Because of problems Big Spring is having with the new eight-hour rule governing high school extra-curricular activities, there is a break from the normal pattern of District 4-5A baseball Tuesday, the opening day for the eight teams around the league.

Instead of Big Spring at Midland

4-5A Baseball

High, the two teams have agreed to swap home dates, sending the Bulldogs to Big Spring Tuesday for a 4 p.m. game and the Steers to Midland on April 4.

"They've got another game this week and are having trouble meeting the eight hour limit," said MHS head coach Tim Whalen. "We do too, for that matter, but I said the change doesn't matter."

Midland High's second game this week is Thursday at Pecos. Saturday's MHS-Abilene High district game isn't affected by the eight-hour ruling. Activities between Friday at 3 p.m. and Monday at 8 a.m. aren't regulated by the new rule.

The Midland Lee also is on the road for a 4 p.m. Tuesday game against San Angelo.

EVEN THOUGH Big Spring is a team that few expect to be in contention for the 4-5A playoff berths this year, Whalen isn't taking them lightly. He is aware of the Steers' troubles and knows they're going to come to an end some day.

"Those guys in Big Spring, the funny thing is when you are playing them at their place, the ball can bounce funny," said Whalen. "If we can hit it down and keep it down, well be okay. But as erratic as we've been lately."

Whalen was referring to his team's habit of playing well for a couple of innings and then letting the roof fall in. Prime examples are the Lubbock Coronado game on Tuesday and Saturday's Tournament of Champions game against Amarillo Tascosa.

Window-dressing done, now it's time

Somehow the post-season college tournaments, like the regular season basketball race, just don't mean as much any more.

That doesn't mean they don't carry a certain attraction for the viewer, but no longer are they a life and death struggle for survival.

Somehow, as you watched the Atlantic Coast Conference, which started all of this conference tournament madness that has since spread like a prairie fire across the land, one knew that no matter who won, North Carolina, Georgia Tech, Duke, North Carolina State, Maryland and maybe Wake Forest were going to receive NCAA bids after it was over. Maybe even Virginia.

Knowing the ending didn't seem to detract from the excitement at Atlanta's Omni. It was still packed for every session and the frenzy continued unabated for four days.

Meanwhile, the Southwest Conference, seeking to bottle some of that post-season moonshine, wasn't having the quite the same success. However, if the SWC could arrange a tournament in which Arkansas was one of the opponents in every game, it just might make the ACC look to its laurels.

This year's tournament was staged in Dallas' Reunion Arena and the out-of-state Razorbacks enjoyed home court advantage for all its games, even Saturday's game with Southern Methodist University, the once-proud and mighty Mustangs.

The Hogs came en masse and when Coach Eddie Sutton wasn't stirring up the crowd, the band director was racing up and down the aisles goading the receptive Arkansas backers into vocal excess.

That's one of the reasons the SWC final between Texas Tech and Arkansas for the tournament championship matched, maybe even surpassed, the ACC final in excitement and viewing appeal.

That, plus the fact that Tech's Bubba Jennings and Arkansas' Joe Kleine put on the kind of shows that should have made either one a winner, if only they hadn't been playing each other.

Another plus for the SWC final was that Texas Tech was going for a double, both the league and tournament championship, and Arkansas, one suspected, might need this one to get a bid from the NCAA.

While the ACC and Big 10 get an automatic five invitations, the SWC doesn't carry the same impact, regardless of the records.

In the apparent view of NCAA selectors, the SWC is football country and, by George, the basketball better prove themselves. That's why Texas A&M, a 19-game winner, is wondering where it went wrong. It is sitting home while 12-17 Lehigh will be in the NCAA jousting for winning its conference tournament. The only solace the Aggies can derive from that is that Lehigh must play Georgetown in the first round. These kids are engineering students and might rather forfeit.

I think, though, if there's one absence I'll miss more than any other in this year's tournament, it will be that of Al McGuire, who is coaching for the wrong network.

And just one afterthought on the Raiders, who qualify for Jerry Stone's "Blue Collar" label. I wonder how many would have shown up at Chap Center back in November, if they had known what that intra-squad scrimmage would eventually lead to.

Tigers have first winning streak

Associated Press

The world champion Detroit Tigers have their first winning streak of 1985.

Alan Trammell's two-run homer keyed a three-run first inning as the Tigers beat the Chicago White Sox 4-2 Sunday and made it two exhibition victories in a row after dropping their spring opener.

Lou Whitaker led off the Detroit first inning with a double and Trammell followed with a shot over the left-field wall off Britt Burns, the first home run he has ever hit in his nine spring training camps. Lance Parrish singled and scored on Larry Herndon's triple.

"It was just nice to be in a game situation," said Trammell, who had surgery on his knee and shoulder during the off-season and played four innings at shortstop against the White Sox after serving as the designated hitter in the Tigers' first two games. "I'm just trying to get myself ready. I've been swinging the bat better the last two days. I think now that the games are starting everybody's getting the itch."

NEWLY acquired Walt Terrell started and worked three innings, allowing one run on two hits, walking one and striking out two.

"I'm very happy with the way I pitched," Terrell said. "I wanted to go out there and throw strikes, and I did that. Most guys were hitting the ball on the ground. That's what I want to happen."

"I know Trammell and Whitaker are good and they'll make a lot of plays behind me. I know this is probably the best team in baseball. When you're playing with the best team, it makes your job a lot easier."

Max Venable's bases-loaded triple highlighted a 10-run eighth inning that powered the Montreal Expos past the Texas Rangers 11-8. Trailing 8-1 entering the inning, the Expos rallied within a run against Greg Harris on five singles, a walk and an error.

Harris appeared to be out of trouble when he struck out Luis Rivera for the apparent third out, but catcher Donnie Scott couldn't hold the ball and Rivera reached first. Venable's triple made it 10-8 and Andres Calarraga followed with his second run-scoring single of the inning.

TEXAS rookie Oddibe McDowell blasted a grand-slam home run and Larry Parrish unloaded a two-run blast as the Rangers scored six runs in the seventh.

Dave Concepcion and Eddie Milner each drove in two runs to lead the Cincinnati Reds over the Los Angeles Dodgers 6-2. Loser Fernando Valenzuela gave up three first-inning runs when the Dodgers committed two of their five errors.

Los Angeles pitching coach Ron Perranoski expressed no concern over Valenzuela's performance in which he gave up two hits, walked three, committed a balk and struck out one in three innings.

"This doesn't mean anything," Perranoski said. "This is only the first game of spring training."

Dan Ford had four hits and drove in two runs as the Baltimore Orioles beat New York 5-2, their second victory over the Yankees in as many days. The Orioles scored three times off Clay Christiansen in the sixth inning to break a 1-1 tie. Ford's second double of the game drove in the lead run and John Shelby followed with a double to drive in two more runs. Gary Roenicke homered off Dale Murray in the eighth inning for the Orioles' final run.

TOM Brunansky drove in four runs, including the winner in the 10th inning, with a homer, double and a single and Kent Hrbek had a double and three singles, leading the Minnesota Twins over the Boston Red Sox 6-5.

Brunansky drove in a run with a double off Bruce Hurst in the first inning, belted a two-run homer off rookie Charlie Mitchell to tie the score 4-4 in the eighth and blooped an RBI single off rookie Rob Woodward in the 10th.

Two-run homers by Chico Walker and Richie Hebner led the Chicago Cubs to a 6-2 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers. Hebner tied the game with a sacrifice fly in the eighth inning and, after a single by Tony Woods, Walker homered to cap a three-run outburst. Hebner homered in the ninth for two insurance runs.

MIKE KRUKOW and four San Francisco relievers combined for a six-hitter and Chili Davis went 4-for-4 as the Giants nipped the Cleveland Indians 1-0. Jose Gonzalez, acquired from St. Louis in the Jack Clark trade, drove in the run with a second-inning single off Bert Blyleven.

Fred McGriff slugged a three-run homer off Minnesota relief ace Ron Davis in the bottom of the eighth inning to power the Toronto Blue Jays to a 9-6 victory over the Twins. Newly acquired Gary Lavelle pitched two hitless innings to pick up the victory.

Atlanta's Brad Komminsk collected three hits and drove in two runs as the Braves beat the Houston Astros 5-2.

Non-roster outfielder Roger Jensen keyed a five-run Chicago seventh inning with a two-run double as a split squad of White Sox defeated the Kansas City Royals 7-4. The White Sox pounded Joe Beckwith for all five runs in the seventh. Beckwith allowed three hits and gave up four walks in his only inning of work.

Ags, Houston Lamar gain NIT Berths

Associated Press

Three Texas teams are among the 32 basketball teams selected to the National Invitation Tournament that will begin this week.

Texas A&M gets an early start by playing in Albuquerque Tuesday against New Mexico. The two other Texas teams clash head-on, with the Houston Cougars going to Beaumont to battle the Lamar Cardinals, runnerup in the Southland Conference, on Friday.

Asked how he feels about going to Albuquerque on such short notice, Texas A&M coach Shelby Metcalf was philosophical.

"We don't have much choice," he said.

"I'm surprised we have to play so quick, but we'll be all right. We'll travel tomorrow and shoot on their floor tomorrow night," Metcalf said Sunday night.

The UNM basketball arena is unavailable later in the week because it is the host for first-round NCAA action in the West regionals next weekend.

Both Houston and Texas A&M had hoped to earn NCAA tournament berths, but lost ground by early defeats in the Southwest Conference Post-Season Classic over the weekend at Reunion Arena in Dallas.

Houston lost to Southern Methodist in the first round, while A&M beat Texas Christian in the first round before being eliminated by league champ Texas Tech in the second round.

Lamar Coach Pat Foster said he is pleased that the NIT chose the Cardinals to host a first-round game, but would have hoped for an easier opponent.

Houston "went to the final four the last two years, and they still have some of those people there. They don't have Akeem Olatunji, but they still have some outstanding talent," Foster said Sunday night.

"We're delighted to have them coming in here. It's a real plus for our program," Foster said.

The game is scheduled for a 7:30 p.m. tipoff Friday in Beaumont.

The first-round NIT games Tuesday through Friday will be at 16 sites throughout the country. The semifinals will be March 27 and the final March 29, both at Madison Square Garden in New York.

The New Mexico Lobos had an 18-12 record this season. They lost to San Diego State, 98-84, in the semifinals of the Western Athletic Conference tournament Friday night at El Paso, Texas.

New Mexico played Texas A&M at Albuquerque in the first round of the NIT in 1979. The Aggies took a 79-68 victory. Last year, the Lobos lost to Lamar, 64-61, in an NIT opener.

Texas A&M, which finished the season with a 19-10 record, had hoped for a NCAA tournament appearance, but Metcalf had resigned himself to a likely NIT berth instead.

In both games, the Bulldogs jumped out to huge leads—10-3 against Colorado and 11-0 against Amarillo—only to scrap at the end for the victory. Against the Mustangs, MHS ended up with a 10-9 win and beat the Tascosa Rebels by a 13-10 count.

Whalen is giving the early nod to Michael Gonzales as his starting pitcher against the Steers because "he's the only one I've got that has been consistent. He lost two tough ones in the Tournament of Champions." Those two were to Dallas Thomas Jefferson, 2-1 as a starter and to Lee as a reliever, 8-7.

"It's important for us to get that first district victory because you don't want to start off the season at 0-1," said Whalen.

Midland High is taking a 5-4 overall record into the game.

LEE COACH Ernie Johnson is also worried about his team's district opener, especially since it's going to be played in San Angelo, a tough town to win in any year, good or bad.

"I think it will be one of our hardest games, going to San Angelo," said Johnson. "San Angelo, I think, will be one of the top three teams in the district this year and this one is very important for us."

From pre-district scouting, Johnson sounds like he expects the game to turn into a hitting duel.

"San Angelo is a better hitting team than a pitching team," said Johnson. "Their pitching is good but not overpowering. They can hit the ball. We will probably give up some runs to them. They've been scoring a lot so far this early in the year."

Lee, too, has been getting some hits and runs this season and hasn't been overpowering on the mound, though effective enough to build up an 8-4 overall record. Only two teams have contributed to the Rebel loss column: Lubbock Monterey, winning 9-0-4 in games Tuesday, Friday and Saturday, and to 4-5A's Abilene Cooper in the Pre-District tournament.

Johnson is looking at Mike Small as the possible starting pitcher against San Angelo. Small is 2-2 on the year and has recently been swinging a hot bat. In the ToFC, he was named to the All-Tournament team as designated hitter.

After the Bobcats, the Rebels will have a few days to rest up and work on their game. On Saturday they host Cooper at 2 p.m. at Lee Diamond.

Lehigh gets big chance

12-18 Engineers corner Hoyas

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

The Engineers of Lehigh University, by dint of good timing if not necessarily good basketball, will get an opportunity next Thursday night to visit the insurance capital of the United States.

While in Hartford, Conn., they might consider taking out some short-term insurance. They're likely to get themselves killed. They play top-ranked, top-seeded, 30-2 Georgetown in the first round of the East Regional of the NCAA tournament.

Lehigh got into the 64-team field, the largest ever, not by virtue of its 12-18 record, the worst in the field, but because it followed up its sixth-place finish in the eight-team East Coast Conference by winning the ECC tournament with a 76-74 victory over Bucknell.

The tournament champ gets an automatic bid. This tournament champ also got a couple of snide remarks.

"I don't know what all the jokes are about," Tom Schneider, the Lehigh coach, responded. "We belong in the NCAA tournament because we won our conference and that's the rule."

He didn't add: "So there!"

But he did say, "I don't know if we deserve it with our record, but we do belong." And when the subject of playing the defending champion Hoyas was brought up before the pairings were announced, Schneider observed: "Who knows? We could play a Georgetown and win. Basketball is funny that way. On any given night, any team could beat any other team."

And Vic Bubas, chairman of the Division I basketball committee, said, "Can you imagine how excited they are at Lehigh? I think it's good for college basketball. They got into the tournament legitimately."

They may be out of it in a hurry, but they will certainly be richer for the experience — $141,600 richer, to be exact. That's a first-round loser's share of the $17.5 million divided among the 64 teams.

Proposals to eliminate automatic bids for some Division I conference or tournament champions (namely the Lehighs of the world) have been beaten back at the NCAA convention by — right! — the Lehighs of the world.

Failure to eliminate some of the 29 automatic bids automatically eliminates a few of the slots which might go to teams deemed more deserving of invitations — such as West Virginia and perhaps Houston.

Houston's Cougars, finalists each of the past two years, finished the season at 16-13. That was the same number of wins and only one more loss than Kentucky, which is hosting the Final Four this year. And which, by the good graces of the selection committee, is in the field.

Coach Joe B. Hall said his players "had kind of given up hope of getting in the NCAA. I think there was a feeling we were not going to get a bid. Now that the bid is here and the pressure's off, it's time to let it all hang out and we can get fired up and ready to go. ... If we don't play fired up, something's wrong with the youth of today."

Houston, conversely, is in the 32-team National Invitation Tournament. So are Indiana, Louisville and UCLA — sort of an oldies but not-so-goodies collection of teams which, for better than two decades, dominated the NCAA's Final Four.

Houston, 15 times in the NCAA tournament, was the runnerup the past two seasons; Indiana, 15-12, won the NCAA four of the 14 times it made the field, Louisville is a 17-time entrant in the NCAA tournament and was the champion in 1980, and UCLA, 22 times in the field, won it 10 times in a 12-year span (1964-75).

Tradition, Bubas explained, is not a criteria for selection.

RAIDERS

MYERS spiked a towel and stopped referee Jim Harvey during play to lodge a protest on calls going against Tech.

"When we had an 18-7 lead and Gerald got his technical we hit a dead spot," said Sutton. "Give them credit. They's experienced and came back on us."

Harvey's technical was converted into two free throws by Joe Kleine to give Arkansas an 18-7 edge.

The inflated Red Raiders then ripped off 10 straight points behind Jennings to pull within a point behind at 18-17.

"I haven't gotten many technicals lately," said Myers. "That's the first deliberate one I've had this year. I don't want to take credit for turning the game around or anything like that. I think our guys just hooked up at that point and started playing."

Three of Myers' players grabbed him after the incident, and he told them "Hey, I know what I'm doing."

Tech took the lead at 24-23 on two free throws by Jennings and stretched it to 34-27 on a jumper by

Bonnie Lauer returns

COSTA MESA, Calif. (AP) — Bonnie Lauer burst onto the women's golf tour in style in 1976, earning the LPGA's Rookie of the Year award then notching her initial victory the following year.

But then she seemed to drop from sight, going eight years without winning.

Now, following surgery on both her wrists two years ago and bouts of self-doubt, the 34-year-old Lauer is back in the winner's circle.

Playing an extremely steady game, she won the $300,000 Uniden Invitational Sunday, the second richest event on the LPGA tour.

Scratchpad USFL switches title contest

From Wire Reports

FOOTBALL—Commissioner Harry Usher the USFL championship game will be played at Giants Stadium in East Rutherford, N.J., July 14. The game had been scheduled for the Silverdome in Pontiac, Mich., but the league decided to move it after the host Michigan Panthers merged with the Oakland Invaders after last season and moved their operations to the West Coast.

GOLF—Garry Harvey of Scotland, who never had to win a tournament, shot a 69-278 to win the Kenya Open by one stroke over Brian Waites. Tsai Li-hsiang came from behind with a 72-146 to beat Huang Ming-chin by two strokes in Japan's opening golf tournament, the Makiji Ladies Open.

Australian Terry Gale shot a 69-270 to win the Malaysian Open by seven strokes.

BOXING—Everybody, including Milton McCrory, who easily retained his WBC welterweight title, came away from the fight disappointed. Challenger Pedro Vilella, now 18-1-1, who came out of Saturday's bout on the wrong side of a lopsided unanimous 12-round decision. But the biggest losers probably were the French organizers. Just 5,000 tickets had to be sold for the WBC championship match at Paris' modern, new Bercy sports complex for them to break even and retain any hope of staging future world class fights in Paris again soon. Just over 3,800 people showed up, and they were perhaps the most disappointed of all.

ABC-TV, which reportedly paid $500,000 to televise the bout back to the U.S., hardly could have been pleased with the lackluster combat between the two Americans — featuring a frustrated McCrory trying to hit a desperate Vilella, who was trying to go the limit by covering up and holding on.

SKIING—Favored Matti Nykaenen of Finland mastered difficult snow and weather conditions Sunday to win the 90-meter ski jumping event of the 1985 Holmenkollen Ski Festival. He was 11.5 and 15.9 points ahead of two outsiders, Franz Wiegeler of Austria and Gerard Blanche of Switzerland. Andreas Felder of Austria, second after the first round, dropped to fourth place but that was still good enough to take a one-point lead on Nykaenen in the 1984-85 World Cup competition. Felder has aggregated 195 points and Nykaenen 194. Americans Mike Holland of Norwich, Vt., and Mark Konopacke of Kingsford, Mich., placed seventh and 10th.

Maurilio de Zolt, pulling away from his chief third-leg rivals with an explosive skating start, keyed a 57-second victory for Italy in Sunday's 40-kilometer cross-country relay at the 36th Swedish Nordie Games. The Italian quartet clocked 2 hours, 12 minutes, 16.3 seconds. Host Sweden was second in 2:13:13.3 in this race counting toward the unofficial relay World Cup. Norway finished third, 2:20.

Vietnamese reportedly overrun guerrilla camp

ARANYAPRATHET, Thailand (AP) — A senior Thai army officer said a column of 800 to 1,000 Vietnamese soldiers seized the last major Cambodian resistance camp today and sent its defenders fleeing.

A spokesman for the guerrilla group denied the report.

The Thai military official said Vietnamese soldiers, backed by intense artillery and mortar fire, staged a lightning rear attack on the Tatum camp inside Thai territory after seizing a nearby hill.

The official, who is usually reliable, spoke on condition he not be identified.

However, in Bangkok a spokesman for guerrillas loyal to former Cambodian ruler Prince Norodom Sihanouk denied the camp had fallen. Truong Mealy said Vietnamese firepower had driven back some of the camp's outer defense lines, but that "it is not true" the main camp had fallen.

"They shell a lot, and we got some of our people (away) from the shell...I would not use the word retreat; we are regrouping," Mealy said. He declined further comment.

Knowledgeable non-Communist Asian diplomats said they also had received reports that Tatum had fallen, but could not confirm it. One diplomat quoted Thai Foreign Ministry officials as saying the camp remained intact early today.

The Vietnamese struck from hill 424 east of Tatum, surging into the camp after Thai air force jets strafed the base of the hill to drive them out, the Thai officer said.

The Tatum camp of Sihanouk's non-Communist supporters was the only major resistance camp not overrun by the Vietnamese during a dry season offensive.

A military source in Thailand's Surin province said hundreds of Tatum's defenders were killed or wounded earlier today when the Vietnamese bombarded the main camp with artillery and mortars.

Some shells struck a camp hospital where about 100 rebels were being treated, he said.

Earlier, Thai military officers and officials of the resistance group said the organization's military commander was killed in fighting.

Maj. Gen. King Men was killed by Vietnamese artillery fire that hit the Tatum camp, said Thai officers. He was second in command to Gen. Teap Ban, the chief of staff.

The English-language Thai newspaper, Nation Review, said today that King Men was killed last Friday when shells struck his command post.

An estimated 800 to 1,000 Vietnamese briefly took the hills last Tuesday in an effort to launch an attack on Tatum. Vietnamese were driven from the hills by Thai soldiers, backed by air strikes and artillery.

The fighting is centered in an area about 76 miles north Aranyaprathet, a key border town.

A senior provincial official said stray Vietnamese artillery shells killed a Thai villager Sunday. Vietnam's artillery assault has forced the evacuation deeper into Thailand of 2,000 people from the village of Bua Ched, 4,500 from Sangkha, and 2,500 from nearby Karb Cherng district, said the official, who spoke on condition he not be identified.

Paper: Poll shows whites support talks between government, blacks

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A survey of white South Africans shows overwhelming support for talks between the white government and black leaders, says a South African newspaper.

Rapport, the nation's main Sunday Afrikaans-language newspaper, said 82.3 percent of those surveyed answered "yes" to the question: "Do you think some form of negotiation between the government and certain black leaders of South Africa is necessary?"

Just 7.9 percent answered "no," and the rest were uncertain, Rapport said.

Most respondents said the talks should involve blacks working within the system. Fewer whites said they are willing to negotiate with legal anti-apartheid organizations and the outlawed African National Congress.

Rapport did not say how many people were surveyed or when the poll was carried out by the respected opinion firm, Market and Opinion Surveys Ltd.

In January, President P.W. Botha's government proposed an informal forum for talks with black leaders to discuss the constitutional future of the black majority of 22 million. Blacks have no national vote and are considered to have citizenship rights in 10 tribal homelands rather than in "white" South Africa.

Iranian jets strafe cities near Baghdad

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iranian jet fighters rocketed and strafed three residential areas in Baghdad today, while Iraqi warplanes bombed Iran's city of Bakhtaran as the border war between the two nations escalated, military communiques and witnesses said.

At least 83 people were reported killed and more than 500 hurt in the fighting.

An Iranian joint staff communique issued in Tehran and carried by the official Islamic Republic News Agency said Iranian jets struck at "pre-determined" points in Baghdad, inflicting heavy casualties and damage.

Eyewitnesses reached by telephone in Baghdad said the Iranian jets fired rockets and guns on the three residential areas of Kasra, Atash and Saddam city, east of Baghdad, killing at least 19 persons and wounding scores of others.

In a Tehran radio interview, an unidentified Iranian colonel said the planes did not "want to aim at innocent people" as Baghdad commuters headed for work in the Iraqi capital of 4 million people.

"We did not bomb houses, only garrisons. We flew over houses and bombed the military concentration points in Baghdad to show them our power and the fact we were able to bomb any target we choose," the officer was quoted as saying.

IRNA, monitored in Nicosia, Cyprus, also reported two Iraqi planes flew over Tehran, the Iranian capital. It said they were chased away by the Iranian air force.

An earlier Iraqi air raid today on the city of Bakhtaran, formerly called Kermanshah, killed at least 70 people and wounded more than 500 others, IRNA said. It reported more than 200 houses were demolished in the bombing.

Iraqi planes, meanwhile, bombed and damaged facilities at Port Khomeini, formerly Bandar Shahpur, on the northern tip of the Persian Gulf, IRNA said. The agency said Iraqi jets also bombed the town of Borujerd in Lorestan province causing unspecified casualties and damage.

Iran and Iraq have been at war since September 1980, but the fighting has escalated in the past week with daily reports from both countries of attacks on their cities.

The official Iraqi News Agency quoted an unidentified military source as saying "one Iranian jet fighter infiltrated across the eastern border in the morning and attacked the Fdailiyeh area," 18 miles east of Baghdad.

A black-turbaned Iraqi woman, who arrived in Baghdad by taxi along with her four children, said the Iranians fired two rockets at Saddam city, a low-income residential neighborhood.

One of the rockets hit a government-owned spare parts warehouse and the other "exploded between the houses," said the woman.

Bush says ideology, pledges won't feed starving Africans

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Vice President George Bush, saying ideology and vague pledges will not feed starving Africans, appealed to delegates at a U.N. conference today for better coordination of food aid shipments for sub-Saharan Africa.

Bush addressed the conference on Africa a day after he arrived from a week-long trip to Africa, in which he visited camps for drought victims in Sudan and met with officials in Sudan, Niger and Mali. Eighty nations were represented at the meeting.

The delegates have before them a report that total aid requirements for 21 African countries this year will exceed $1.5 billion.

Bush said he came before the conference "as one who, for the past week, has stood on the parched earth of Africa and seen the results of ecological disaster and human failure."

A greater tragedy can be avoided "if we put aside ideology, open our hearts, strengthen vital institutions of cooperation, get to the root of Africa's crisis, and have the courage and perseverance to see the problem through," he said.

"Just as threatened populations cannot eat ideology, they also cannot eat vague pledges," Bush said.

Food shipments require priority treatment because many of the hardest-hit areas are in landlocked countries, and the ports that serve them are small, Bush said. "Much more needs to be done with respect to this key question of coordination and timing," he said.

The conference opened with an appeal from U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar.

"Thirty million men, women, and children face the grim reality of debilitating malnutrition, starvation, and in many cases death," Perez de Cuellar said. "Even more are threatened."

Food aid to Africa so far "has clearly fallen short of the growing needs," Perez de Cuellar said.

"The war we wage on famine in Africa today threatens more lives than ever have been lost in any war in history. We have the ingenuity and the resources to win. What we need is the political will," he said.

Bush said he and President Seyni Kountche of Niger agreed on the importance of timely deliveries when they met in Niamey, the capital of Niger. Kountche was expected to bring a message similar to Bush's to the conference.

Leg raises and other muscle-toning exercises are part of the program at aerobics-exercise classes at the Central YMCA, but as the main idea is to keep people moving, class members spend most of their time jumping, hopping and jogging in time to the music.

Pug Davis is framed by the form of instructor Judy Reuter at a recent class. When not leading exercise classes, Ms. Reuter is adult fitness program director for the Y.

Despite appearances, this woman isn't suffering the agony of the feet — she's merely warming down after her workout.

Hand weights help Jim Everett increase the difficulty of his workout.

Fitness frenzy

Loud music, soft lighting, dozens of colorfully dressed men and women out on the floor working up a sweat: It could be a crowded disco on a Saturday night, except that all the people are dancing by themselves.

The fitness craze that hit America in the '70s sent thousands of people out onto the jogging trails for the benefit of their hearts and lungs. But the loneliness of the long-distance runner has brought many back indoors to aerobic-exercise classes such as those given at the Central YMCA. They willingly sacrifice the fresh air of the great outdoors for the more social atmosphere, the soft carpets and the steady musical beat of the aerobics class.

"I used to jump rope and jog," said Annie Faison as she prepared for a recent noon class at the Y.

"I used to ride a bicycle," added her friend Stacie Kruer. Both women prefer the convenience of the aerobics classes, which give them cardiovascular exercise and keep their waistlines trim. And the music is a big attraction.

"It helps distract you from the boredom," said Judy Reuter, adult fitness program director at the Central Y. "You move more naturally to the music."

The Y has a number of different kinds of aerobics classes, but the most popular is the 5:30 p.m. co-ed class, Ms. Reuter said. This "class" is not really instructional — the instructor acts as a leader, not a teacher. He sets the pace and provides enthusiastic grunts to inspire his sweating students. Some match his pace, but others take a more leisurely approach to aerobic fitness, skipping some of the more challenging exercises and merely running in place when their leader throws himself on the floor for a few pushups.

"What we're trying to do is teach people to find their own level," said Ms. Reuter.

The exercises are mostly variations on running in place, though the more ambitious hold hand weights and swing their arms to get a more thorough workout. The music is loud and rhythmic, with emphasis on a fast, steady beat: "Neutron Dance" by the Pointer Sisters, "Dancing in the Dark" by Bruce Springsteen, "Teacher Teacher" by .38 Special, "The Heat is On" by Glen Frey.

Most of the people at a recent afternoon class were in their 20s or early 30s, with slightly more women than men in attendance. Clothes ranged from the traditional T shirt and shorts to elaborate designer tights that would do Jane Fonda proud, with headbands and legwarmers to match.

Some attempted abbreviated conversations between gulps of air, but most kept their eyes on the instructor. As the hour-long session progressed, bright pink spots appeared on their cheeks and sweat stains began crawling down their backs, but the class members did appear to be enjoying themselves.

"Most of them are here because they're hooked on how good they feel while they're exercising," Ms. Reuter said. But Ms. Kruer gave another reason for devoting her lunch hours to aerobic exercise:

The couple finally gave up trying to pedal out of the soggy sand and pulled the cycle to higher ground.

Paralyzed writer turns out weekly syndicated column

TEMPLE, Texas (AP) — Mike LeFan's self-described "one-man band" is rolling right along. Calling himself the "chief writer, editor, salesman, bookkeeper and secretary," LeFan has for 10 years operated Mike LeFan Features, his one-person free lance writing and creative service firm, from his home in Temple.

In addition to having numerous articles published in such magazines as "The Lion" and "The Rotarian" (national magazines for the two civic clubs), LeFan is also the author of "More For Your Money," a syndicated column that appears in weekly publications in six states, including California, Illinois and Florida.

LeFan contracted polio at age 8 and is paralyzed except for his neck and left foot. He spends much of his time in an iron lung and types and paints with his foot.

HE GRADUATED, with honors, from Temple High School with the help of a teacher who came to his home. He attended Temple Junior College and earned bachelor's degrees in English and sociology from the University of Mary Hardin-Baylor.

Before striking out to free lance, LeFan was employed for several years by the Central Texas Council of Governments and edited two monthly newspapers for CTCOG.

LeFan recently donned another hat — syndicator of someone else's material — for a series of articles on health maintenance organizations. The articles were written by Florida insurance professional Joseph Silverstein.

LEFAN SAID he had recently developed an interest in HMOs because his father, who serves as minister at Western Hills Church of Christ, joined a local health plan.

"Then this came along," LeFan said, referring to Silverstein's request to syndicate his material. "I assumed he had written several people trying to sell it, but he approached me."

This is LeFan's "first real effort" to syndicate material other than his own, and he hasn't decided whether to expand.

"It's a whole lot simpler when you're handling your own material and (this way) you only get to keep half the money," he laughed. "But I suppose if it was a good deal I would try it again."

LEFAN SAID he isn't sure why he started Mike LeFan Features. "I was just writing and selling what I could. It's always good if you sell one article to more than one place — you make more money."

"It's also good credentials," he continued. "If you can tell an editor you have your own syndicated features, it makes you look more dependable."

Although LeFan's columns and articles are written on money management and money-saving tips, he has written and had published articles on other topics as well.

For example, a LeFan article titled "Managing Your Temper" appeared in the February issue of "The Rotarian." Another article he wrote, "Cars: The Number One Killer of Children," appeared in the February issue of "The Lion."

HOW DOES LeFan get ideas on such diverse topics?

He is the recipient of "all kinds of different mail. Every day, the mail is just stuffed — pounds, almost. Some of it kind of sparks an idea, then if I read another article on the same subject, I think I can do that."

In an average month, LeFan mails 10-25 query letters on ideas he has for features and receives "one or two go-aheads." He said his work is familiar with several magazines, which "makes them a lot nicer to work with. You're not approaching them cold — they've published you before."

LeFan writes one month's worth of "More For Your Money" in about two days (he types with his foot), but takes a day and a half or two for the longer articles. "They're roughed out in a day, then I leave them a while and go back and clean them up."

LEFAN IS also the author of "Shopping Texas By Mail," a shopper's guide to shopping by mail-order catalogue. In its first two months, he said, the book sold 1,100 copies per month.

Texas Monthly Press, the book's publishers, haven't approached him about a sequel, but LeFan said he hopes for at least an update. "I've been collecting new companies all along, so I'm ready when they are."

LeFan has also been approached by other publishers to write books on how to order electronics by mail and how to start one's own mail-order business, but nothing definite has been set.

He usually works seven to eight hours a day, five days a week, and combines that schedule with a rare, but occasional, Saturday. But, he never works on Sunday.

"The nice thing is, if I don't have something I have to do, I don't do it," LeFan said. "I can goof off, but I don't very often."

"There's always been something that has to be done," he said. "If I don't work every day I don't get much done. It's too easy to be lazy."

At one time, LeFan attempted to write fiction, but soon stopped. "I tried my hand at mystery but I didn't even get encouragement, much less get paid for it," he laughed.

ONE OF the first articles he remembers getting paid for was "A Beginner's Guide To People-Watching," which appeared in "Accent On Living," a magazine aimed at handicapped people.

"I wrote on what types of people you meet from the vantage of a wheelchair and gave them semi-scientific Latin names," LeFan said. "It had a very strong tongue-in-cheek flavor."

TESCO to move equipment

From Staff Reports

Relocation of a 5.3-million-pound dragline and a 512,000-pound loading shovel across Interstate 30 from one Texas Utilities Mining Company lignite to another is scheduled to begin within the next week to 10 days, depending on weather conditions and maintenance requirements, according to a press release from Texas Electric Service Company.

TUMCO, a subsidiary of Texas Utilities Company, operates fuel production facilities for the surface mining and recovery of lignite for use as fuel at Texas Utilities Electric Company power plants.

The dragline, which is longer than a football field, has been in use since 1977 at a TUMCO surface mine north of I-30 near Winfield in Titus County. It will "walk" across the highway at a point about one mile east of Winfield to a new mining area south of I-30.

Moving the dragline 2.2 miles to its new location is expected to take about eight days. Crossing I-30 will take approximately three days.

The dragline walks on two 62-foot-long, 10-foot-wide "shoes." Each step carries the machine nine feet forward and takes about 40 seconds to make, company officials said.

TUMCO has built new permanent exit ramps at the crossing site on I-30, and traffic will be rerouted off the main lanes onto the ramps while the crossing is under way. No significant traffic delays or disruptions are anticipated as TUMCO has worked with the Texas Highway Department, Texas Department of Public Safety, Texas Railroad Commission and local law enforcement officials.

TUMCO will layer dirt and sand at least five feet thick on the interstate and three feet thick on the exit ramps and the service roads to protect the driving surface.

Draglines are used in surface mining to scoop the earth, or "overburden," to uncover the seams of lignite. The lignite is then removed by an electrically-powered shovel.

Lignite mined at the two Winfield sites is used as a fuel at the Monticello Steam Electric Station, a Texas Utilities Electric Company generating plant near Mount Pleasant. Power from the plant helps serve about one-third of the population of Texas, including the service area of Texas Electric Service Company.

Two Midland men jailed on drug charges

From Staff Reports

Two 19-year-old Midland men were in jail today charged with possession of cocaine. They were arrested Sunday night outside the Crown Royal Club, 1110 E. Scharbauer Dr., by an off-duty Midland police officer who worked at the club, according to police reports.

The men were sitting in a '75 Chevy pickup parked in a no-parking zone in front of the club. When the officer approached the pickup, he noticed one of the men inhaling something from a flat surface being held by the other man. After the arrest was made, cocaine was found in the pickup, according to reports.

Franklin L. Dedon, a maintenance man at the Sandstone Apartments, 4315 Neely Ave., reported being assaulted by three men whom he approached after seeing them fighting with another man at the apartment complex about 6 p.m. Saturday. Dedon was struck in the face, and taken to Midland Memorial Hospital for X-rays, according to reports.

Armando Bautista, 21, 1401 S. McKenzie, reported being assaulted outside the Copacabana Club about 2:15 a.m. Sunday. Bautista told police he was outside the club with woman when she became involved in a fight with another woman. When Bautista and a friend got into his car to leave, some of the other woman's companions began throwing rocks, one of which hit Bautista in the head. He was treated and released from Midland Memorial Hospital, according to reports.

In other weekend complaints, Paul Hand of Anthony Mechanical Services reported the theft of $910 in tools and equipment from the rear of his '81 Ford pickup. The theft occurred between 9 a.m. Friday, after he parked the pickup in a parking lot near 600 Liddon, Apt. 48, and 10 a.m. Sunday, when he noticed that a $350 torch set, a $350 vacuum pump and two contactors valued at $210 were missing.

A $300 television set was reported stolen from a room at Terrace Gardens Nursing Home, 2901 W. Ohio. Home employee Rhonda Chammess told police the TV was taken after 1 a.m. Sunday.

Sam McGill reported the theft of a $600 utility trailer parked outside 4011 W. Wall. He last saw the trailer at 4 p.m. Saturday, according to reports.

A $295 radar detector was reported stolen from an '83 Ford Van belonging to Craig Neatherlain, 2503 Bedford. It was taken between midnight and 11 a.m. Sunday, he told police.

A '68 Camaro worth $600 was stolen Sunday from the William Raymond Roop residence, 1902 Midland, between 6:30 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. Sunday. It was recovered at a 7-Eleven at the intersection of Midland and Neely and returned to Roop, according to reports.

Huntsville officer dies

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A 28-year-old Huntsville patrol officer shot twice while responding to a domestic disturbance call has died, the first policeman to be killed in the line of duty in this community, authorities say.

Kevin Williams, one of 28 officers on the police force, was shot with a .22-caliber rifle in the forehead and shoulder early Saturday at an apartment complex in west Huntsville, acting Police Chief Michael Morse said. He died 24 hours later at Houston's Hermann Hospital, Morse said.

Patrick Curtis Havard, 23, of Onalaska, was charged Saturday with attempted capital murder. But investigators will ask the district attorney today to upgrade the charge to capital murder, Morse said.

Havard was being held without bond in the Walker County Jail.

Also wounded was Resources Unlimited security officer Jay Hubert. He was hit in the arm and was treated at Huntsville Memorial Hospital and released, police said.

After the shooting, Hubert attended to Williams before pursuing the suspect to a vehicle and subduing him, officers said.

Havard's estranged wife called police complaining her husband was harassing her, Morse said. When Williams and Hubert arrived at the complex, the woman and a friend directed them to the apartment.

The officers were fired upon as they walked between two buildings, Morse said.

Water demands curbed

From Staff Reports

BIG SPRING — A cooler, wetter winter than normal continued to curb municipal demands for water in February on the Colorado River Municipal Water District.

Municipal customers received 916,937,300 gallons of water in February, down 71,886,000 gallons from the same month last year. On the other hand, oil companies supplied out of unpotable diverted water received 128,011,315 gallons, up 48 million over February 1984. Total deliveries for February were 1,044,948,615 gallons, down 47,334,000 gallons.

During February, Big Spring received 185,154,000 gallons, down 5.05 percent; Odessa, 269,910,000 gallons, down 11.31 percent; Midland, 353,014,000 gallons, down 11.15 percent; Snyder, 63,099,000 gallons, down 16.94 percent; Stanton, 6,944,000 gallons, down 13 percent. San Angelo took 38,825,000 gallons, an increase of 34 million gallons from February 1984.

Officer testifies Port identified weapon

NEW BRAUNFELS, Texas (AP) — David Port voluntarily identified a .22-caliber pistol as the weapon he allegedly used in the slaying of Houston mail carrier Debora Sue Schatz, a police officer testified in district court today.

Irma Sauseda testified in Port's murder trial she was carrying the pistol with her as she escorted Port to homicide headquarters at the Houston police department last June 8.

"He said, 'Is that my gun?' I said, 'Do you recognize it?' and he said, 'Yes,'" Ms. Sauseda said. "He said, 'That is the gun I used to kill her.'"

Prosecutor Mary Milloy presented Ms. Sauseda with a .22-caliber handgun and ammunition clip and asked her if it was the weapon Port was talking about. The officer said it was.

Port, 18, is accused of gunning down Ms. Schatz while she was delivering mail in the fashionable Houston neighborhood where he lived with his parents.

The case has generated heavy publicity because Port's parents refused to testify before a grand jury.

Both were jailed on contempt of court charges for refusing to testify. Both have since been released and have not appeared in the courtroom during the trial. Neither has been subpoenaed to testify.

Port remained free on bond while his parents were jailed.

The trial was moved to New Braunfels because of publicity in Houston, 175 miles southeast.

In testimony Saturday, police Sgt. David Collier told jurors he has no reason to believe that Port's father, Bernard, or the defendant's 23-year-old brother, Roger, had anything to do with the shooting.

Collier conceded a resemblance between defendant and his brother, but he said he had accounted for the brother's and the father's whereabouts at the time of the killing.

The prosecution has methodically pieced together the evidence in the case, calling several police officers to the stand to describe the alleged crime scene.

Officers have testified they found several guns, bloody footprints, undelivered mail, spent shell casings, and bullet holes in the wall at the Port home.

Also testifying was Jerri Pontikes, a neighbor who said she heard screams of terror coming from the Port home the afternoon of the slaying.

Mrs. Pontikes said the screams were those of an adult woman.

Police said they found Ms. Schatz's body in a remote area northwest of Houston several miles from the spot where Port claimed he dumped the body.

Board to monitor bail bonds

From Staff Reports

A board formed to monitor local bail bonds companies will have its first meeting at 5 p.m. March 21 in the Midland County Commissioner's Courtroom. The meeting will be used to consider passage of rules and regulations, according to Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre.

"This is a way to correct the problems of the fly-by-night companies," said Assistant DA Chuck Roades. "It's a way to ensure they do their job and make sure the people appear at court."

Concerned officials have instigated the idea of the Bail Bonds Board to oversee local bonding companies.

"If a guy skips and the company folds, no one wins," Roades said.

Law enforcement officers, bail bondsmen and interested citizens are invited to attend the open meeting.

Amarillo man charged in real estate theft

they were newlyweds 24 years ago, the Deckers can no longer afford to own a house.

"We lost our life savings," Decker said. "These days, it's hard to keep plugging away."

Potter County District Attorney Danny Hill said investigators now believe Mullican sold or used as collateral for loans more than $15 million in property — including entire blocks near downtown — that he never owned.

"He had the trust of a lot of people," Hill said. "We've even had allegations he bilked little old ladies out of everything they had."

Dozens of Mullican's investors have sued him in state and federal court. And they say they have also sued each other, trying to figure out who owns what.

Mullican's dealings came under investigation after a businessman told prosecutors he made a $50,000 down payment to Mullican on a piece of rental property, then found Mullican did not own it.

Hill said his office has been inundated with complaints from investors and that the FBI has been called in to look into possible mail fraud and banking violations.

Mullican moved to Amarillo with his parents 15 years ago, the News said. He built his real estate business into a thriving enterprise, but his acquaintances say he lived a quiet, modest life.

Associates say Mullican, a 42-year-old bachelor, had only one interest outside of his business — automobiles, which he changed every few weeks.

Teaching social graces to children is woman's goal

Copley News Service

ALGONQUIN, Ill. — "Making little ladies of our little girls" is Mary Curran's quest.

Curran, the Miss Manners of Algonquin, directs girls ages 6 to 12 in "Modeling and Manners" class at the Algonquin School of Dance and Modeling.

Curran's little ladies will never be in a quandary when it comes to party manners or conducting themselves in public. "I think it can be terribly embarrassing to be in a position not to know which fork to use," their teacher said earnestly.

Choosing the proper fork is second nature to Curran, a woman who exudes a charming gentleness. "I was raised in a convent with the French sisters. They were very concerned about manners. A lot of it rubbed off on me, and I feel youngsters today don't have the training they should."

CURRAN'S ENTHUSIASTIC quest has been going on at least since 1957, when she began teaching modeling and manners for a department store.

And retirement, after running her own dance studio in Elmwood Park, Ill., for many years, hasn't dampened her enthusiasm. During a recent retirement stint in Florida, Curran's students included a young woman who later became Miss Florida. A photograph of her hangs in the Algonquin dance studio which is owned by Curran's daughter, Pamela Novak.

Each Wednesday night from October to May, Curran's proteges come giggling and eager to learn the finer art of etiquette. They dress mostly in skirts and dresses, some even in white gloves, trying to subdue their nervous giggles as they adopt a finer mode of behavior, at least for an hour.

THE CLASS BEGINS with modeling. At a recent session, the smiling girls slowly glided across the floor, single file, toes pointed, heads erect, arms slowly swinging as sedate music played in the background. "If we take a real deep breath, our stomachs go in, our chests go out and our chins go up," Curran reminded them.

She softened her reprimands with a smile. "Mario, try and remember — we put our toe down."

The girls practiced pivoting, making sleek 90-degree turns, watching themselves in the mirrored walls. "We learn to use our feet to do the breakaway, so we can model very smoothly," Curran explained.

The 30-minute practice won't be in vain, the girls know. A local store occasionally invites the girls to model.

Afterward, the girls sat demurely in chairs pulled into a semi-circle, legs crossed at the ankle, hands folded in their laps, ready for this week's lesson on manners.

First they reviewed last week's lesson on holding open the door for an adult and how to conduct themselves at birthday parties. What do they remember? Curran asked. The replies included: "You say, 'Thank you for the cake and I enjoyed it.'" "It's OK to ask for seconds, but you have to eat all of it." "When you leave, don't slam the door."

LEARNING MANNERS is far from a stern lecture in Curran's class. The girls learn much of the dos and don'ts through role playing, such as practicing introducing their mother to their teacher or a new neighbor to a friend. The girls are eager to get up and perform and anxious to please their teacher.

And Curran is quick to praise for a manner smoothly executed. "That was just beautiful; my word, that was fine." Again and again the girls take turns making the proper introductions. "They do it so many times, and they're so eager to do it, it sinks in," Curran said, explaining her method.

These young ladies aspire to be a "Pretty," and not an "Ugly" as Curran calls mythical characters with names like Mary Manners and Winifred Whiney. "Usually when people first meet us, they get an impression of us. That impression will stay with them for a lifetime," Curran told the girls.

Many of the girls dread the closing minutes of class, which means it's time for a fingernail check. Curran took a long look at each girl's outstretched hands, chiding some: "You didn't listen to what I said to you last week. Go home and file them. You've got long ones, you've got short ones." Or "I think you're biting, here and here. I don't want you biting and biting."

Others earned acclaim: "Oh Robin's are lovely, lovely, lovely," she says after the girl removes her gloves to reveal smoothly manicured nails.

Although etiquette may seem like a lost art to some, not to Curran. A decline in interest in etiquette began "with World War II, when people went to work and didn't bother about the detail of making little ladies of our little girls," Curran said.

But she believes the details of good manners are coming back. "I think people realize they're missing something, they're missing the finer things."

Successful mature women sometimes scarred by mothers' manipulation

Hearst News Service

She was an unmarried woman of 40 with a doctorate, a medical degree and a cancerous cervix — the last, a divine retribution for her wickedness, she felt. For she slept with whomever she pleased, spurned motherhood and detested her own meddling, manipulative mother, the bane of her life as long as she could remember.

Complaining of depression, she presented herself to Ruth Moulton, a psychoanalyst on the staffs of New York's famed William Alanson White Institute and Columbia University. Moulton, a 69-year-old physician, has a special interest in successful but unhappy women between the ages of 30 and 50. At a time when the women's movement has brought to public notice the problems women encounter in a system dominated by men, Moulton believes that some of women's most crippling problems can be laid to their mothers.

Moulton arrived at this disturbing conclusion in the course of a 40-year career. She estimates that at least one successful woman in 10 suffers from psychic wounds inflicted by her mother — a problem she finds particularly poignant in the mid-1980s, when more women than ever have the opportunity to attain positions of responsibility in the work place.

"THERE'S SO MUCH emphasis on how men hold women back. Well, women can hold women back — it's the 'Queen Bee' complex," Moulton said. "A lot of it comes from the mother who is jealous of her daughter and wants her child to be a homemaker, like the mother may have been. Or the mother may be frightened that if her bright daughter gets into the outside world, she won't be marriageable. And there are mothers who are competitive with their daughters, making them feel guilty for rising above them in earning ability or prestige. When I got a whole bunch of patients with undermining mothers, I was appalled. The overt barriers placed by men or male-dominated institutions are easier to observe and attack than are the covert, undermining influences of the mother. It is hard to accept that a mother can later turn against her female child."

MOULTON FOCUSED on two aspects of the mother-daughter paradox in an address to the American Academy of Psychoanalysis: sexual identity and the bond of attachment. Her study will be published in next month's issue of the journal, Contemporary Psychoanalysis.

"Professional success usually enhances the sexual identity of men, whereas it threatens the sense of femininity for women," Moulton said. "The girl who is guilty about her rage at, or competition with, mother often expects punishment from mother by way of injury to her sexual organs. She will be ugly, sexually unattractive, infertile, or struck down by cancer of her uterus or breast. Retaliation will be aimed at the very core of her femininity."

Moulton said that these irrational fears often find expression among professional women with lifestyles defined by casual sex, solitary living, childlessness and intense anxiety at the prospect of separating — literally or symbolically — from their mothers. This is an outgrowth of a little girl's initial physical and emotional dependence on her mother.

TO THE MOTHERS of today, Moulton — herself a mother — gave this advice: "Wise mothers are able to distinguish between the nourishing, protective role required in the first stages of mothering and the increasing need to help the child separate and face the anxieties of standing alone. The inherent contradiction is that the good mother is eventually not needed by her child, although she may still be useful and wanted — but in an adult way."

DEAR ABBY

Man considering future love looks past his present wife

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: How would you feel if you were a healthy woman, age 49, and your husband of over 30 years (he's 56) informed you at the dinner table that after you die, he will find himself a beautiful, young girl with sex appeal to take care of him in his old age?

I am not a slob. I am slim, neat and clean, and some people even tell me I'm pretty. — HURT IN AUGUSTA, MAINE

DEAR HURT: I hope for your husband's sake that he's as handsome as Cary Grant, rich as a Rockefeller and charming as Prince Charles, because an ordinary middle-aged man would have a hard time finding a beautiful, young girl with sex appeal to take care of him in his old age.

DEAR ABBY: You advised "Mac in the Big Apple" that if a thief used his credit card, his loss would be no more than $50 per card. This may or may not be the law in these cases, but as a lawyer who has had several of these cases, I know the reality may be very different.

I am handling a case right now where a lady, who does not speak English, came to Philadelphia and deposited her life savings of $10,900 in a major bank. The bank mailed her a card whereby the money could be withdrawn in amounts of no more than $200 without this lady ever requesting this card or knowing that it was coming.

Somehow this card was intercepted by a thief, and over a period of several months the entire $10,900 was withdrawn! The lady reported the theft immediately upon learning of it. The bank had advertised and still advertises that in a case like this, the loss is limited to $50. However, the bank refuses to pay a penny and has forced us to sue.

I expect that in several years we will recover all of this lady's money, but in the meantime, she has been forced to wait several years and incur legal fees. — FRANCIS E. GLEESON JR., PHILADELPHIA LAWYER

DEAR MR. GLEESON: If this can happen in the city of Brotherly Love, it can happen wherever such bank cards are issued. Thanks for wising up several million people.

DEAR ABBY: Someone asks, "What do you do when grandparents forget their grandson's birthday?" Your idiotic response: "Gently remind them of the oversight. And next year, remind them about two weeks in advance of the date."

I can't believe you. Why should anyone be "reminded" to remember somebody's birthday?

Just because the grandchildren happen to be relatives doesn't mean their grandparents have to remember them, or even like them. Many of the ill-mannered, undisciplined kids of today are hard to take.

We have sent many gifts and generous checks to our six grandchildren for their birthdays. In five years we received only one thank-you.

People (even kids) have a way of remembering what they want to remember. If they "forget" to say "thank you," the givers who are never thanked can also "forget" to give the next time a birthday rolls around. — FORGETTING BY CHOICE

DEAR FORGETTING: And now I am going to get a slew of letters from people insisting that givers should give for the "joy" of giving, and a pox on those who quit giving if they're not thanked.

I'm with those who hold that every gift deserves an acknowledgment.

What 'everybody knows' often just isn't so

Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

Everybody knows: You'll gain weight if you give up smoking.

Women are afraid of crawling things.

Doctors have illegible handwriting.

No one likes to be kept on hold.

It's hard to get back to work after a three-day weekend.

Baseball games are too slow.

The American Middle-Class Creed — the things we believe — often are sexist, racist, agist, in bad taste.

And untrue.

No matter. In the face of indisputable evidence, somebody still will believe (a) clothes will come back into style if you hang onto them long enough, (b) grandparents spoil their grandchildren and (c) your old car is worth more than book value.

Dr. T.L. Brink, a 35-year-old California psychologist and author of

"1,000 All-American Beliefs" (Fawcett Gold Medal, $2.95) collected his middle-class beliefs over a 10-year period, relying on television talk-show guests, letters-to-the-editor writers and frequent searches into his own head.

"Ideas come to you in the weirdest place," Brink said. "I came up with all sorts of ideas about suburban, middle-class beliefs — that renters don't care as much about their houses as home owners, for instance — while on my roof cleaning the gutters."

While he hoped his collection of beliefs would serve as an all-encompassing American credo, Brink found it was impossible to reflect all the diversity of American subcultures.

Instead, he concentrated on the middle class, a group firmly convinced of its superiority to the lower class. (The lower class tends to have children with snotty noses, tolerates dirty fingernails and tattoos and doesn't pay its utility bills on time, the middle class believes.)

Interestingly, All-American Middle-Class Belief No. 3 is that the majority of Americans believe they are middle class.

Brink expects his readers to react on three levels to his compilation of beliefs. Some will accept the beliefs in an "Archie Bunker yeah-that's-just-the-way-it-is way," Brink said.

Others will think the beliefs are funny, realizing they first heard some of them from their mothers.

And, Brink hopes, others will recognize that the beliefs are full of stereotypes and prejudices. If we accept them as true, we are guilty of being "classists," he notes.

Dollar lower

LONDON (AP) — The dollar moved lower in busy European dealing early today on word of lower American interest rates. Gold prices also were off.

Currency markets, notoriously nervous about changes in leadership of the superpowers, were not affected by reports that Soviet President Konstantin U. Chernenko was dead, traders said.

One London dealer said reports of his ill health had been circulating for so long that the markets already have absorbed whatever impact a change in the Soviet leadership might have.

The main factor in today's dealings was a weakening in U.S. overnight cash-loan interest rates, traders said.

"The governors of the West German central bank are meeting today, and that is causing concern, too," the London dealer, who insisted on anonymity, said.

Last month, the dollar reached record levels against a string of currencies and a 13-month high against the Deutschmark before European central banks, led by the West German Bundesbank, intervened to sell huge amounts of dollars.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar fell today to a closing 260.25 yen from Friday's 261.65. Later, in London, it was quoted at 259.63 yen.

Gasoline price climb to continue

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Pump prices for gasoline rose nearly 2 cents a gallon to an average $1.15 in the past month, and oil industry analyst Dan Lundberg says the trend will continue until retail catches up with wholesale boosts.

"It's going to go up some more. It's that same trend — wholesale is pushing retail," the publisher of the petroleum-oriented Lundberg Letter said Sunday.

"That (the increase) has really wiped out a lot of the price war signs that had shown up at over half the U.S. stations where gas was under a dollar a gallon," Lundberg said.

His survey of 17,500 gas stations in all 50 states showed leaded regular gasoline selling for an average $1.02 per gallon, unleaded regular $1.10 and premium unleaded $1.24. All prices are for self-serve gas, offered at nearly 75 percent of stations in America, Lundberg said.

Retail gas prices began rising in February for the first time in four months as dealers reacted to a rise in the wholesale price of nearly 4 cents per gallon. Before that, motorists had enjoyed the lowest prices since 1980.

There has been a slight decline in gasoline inventories at a time when stocks are traditionally strengthened for increased spring and summer driving, he said.

Inventories during the past week were down about 350 million gallons compared to a year ago, he said.

"That's not a critical decline, but it is a move in the opposite seasonal direction," he said.

Such a drop could contribute to increased pump prices, he said.

The decreased inventory reflects a 2.02 percent increase in consumption, and a drop in the number of working refineries, he said.

Automated teller fraud costs U.S. banks over $70 million

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. banks lost an estimated $70 million to $100 million from fraudulent use of automated teller machines in 1983, with customers forfeiting millions from lost or stolen access cards, the government says.

Banks suffered the bulk of the losses, however, as customers were able to limit their liability by quickly reporting missing or stolen cards, the Bureau of Justice Statistics said Sunday.

Overall, approximately $262 billion was processed through some 43,800 automated teller machines installed in banks in 1983. The bureau arrived at its $70 million to $100 million figure by comparing the $262 billion total to the ratio of fraud losses in the 16 major banks surveyed, and then extrapolating that to U.S. banks generally, the study said.

The bureau found that 45 percent of the approximately 2,700 troubled transactions it studied were potentially fraudulent, involving unauthorized use of lost or stolen cards, overdrafts and bad deposits.

In 30.3 percent of the cases suspected of fraud, the customer suffered the loss, the study said. The average loss to account holders in these incidents was $255.

Account-holders shared the loss with their banks in 16.6 percent of the cases, while banks took the loss in 36.7 percent of the fraudulent transactions.

In the remainder of the cases, neither the bank nor the customer suffered a loss or reports of the fraudulent transaction failed to show who shouldered the loss, the report said.

When banks shared the loss with customers, the average loss was $74, "suggesting that missing cards were generally reported within two days of discovery," Federal banking regulations provide that the liability of customers is limited to $50 if the card is reported missing within two days of its discovery, or $500 if the card is missing more than two days after discovery.

Albuquerque makes subtle bid for Saturn auto plant

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — New Mexico may not be using gimmicks like some other states but it is making a run at getting a plant General Motors is planning to build for its new line of Saturn automobiles.

"We think a technically good proposal is better than T-shirts or billboards," says Alex Mercure, secretary of the state Department of Economic Development and Tourism.

General Motors announced in January that it was looking for a site to build the plant where its new line of small cars will be produced, and it asked for states who were interested to submit offers.

The move created a stampede to Detroit as state-after-state has joined the race for the plant that will provide 6,000 jobs. Some states even have been vying for attention by putting up billboards in Detroit and using other gimmicks to attract the company's attention.

Mercure said a task force of representatives from the cities of Albuquerque and Las Cruces, Albuquerque Economic Development Inc., and Public Service Company of New Mexico have put together a proposal for New Mexico that will be presented to GM officials who are expected to make a decision on where they will locate the plant by late this spring.

Mercure also said Gov. Toney Anaya is planning a trip to Michigan to push the proposal.

New Mexico doesn't figure as a frontrunner for the plant but Mercure and others in the state believe the effort will be worthwhile.

"Instinct and 25 years of experience says we don't have much of a chance. But that's not to say we shouldn't go after it," said Dr. Lee Zink, director of the University of New Mexico's Institute for Applied Research.

Conservator leads effort to sell troubled Ohio bank

CINCINNATI (AP) — A newly appointed conservator will lead an attempt to sell the troubled Home State Savings Association, which officials kept closed today after a run on deposits at its 33 branches.

Home State closed Saturday after many depositors withdrew their accounts. Bank officials declined to say how much was withdrawn, but newspaper reports on Sunday estimated withdrawals at $60 million to $100 million.

Depositors said they closed their accounts after hearing that a securities firm with which the bank had dealt had been ordered closed by the Securities and Exchange Commission because of insufficient funds.

Arlo Smith, a retired chief executive officer of Cleveland's Second Federal Savings and Loan, was appointed conservator Sunday by Thomas Batties, superintendent of the state Commerce Department's Division of Savings and Loan Associations.

Smith's primary efforts as conservator will be "effecting a sale of Home State to another institution that will provide the maximum possible protection to remaining depositors," according to a statement released by the Commerce Department.

The bank will be closed today, said Commerce spokesman Rick Spencer. Home State officers met in Columbus during the weekend with state officials and representatives of an unidentified financial institution in an attempt to close a deal so the bank could open for business as usual today.

In the wake of Home State's closing, Gov. Richard Celeste and legislative leaders said they planned to initiate a legislative package to provide state funds "to enhance the position of the depositors at other member institutions of the Ohio Deposit Guarantee Fund" of which Home State is a member, Spencer said.

The bank began losing depositors after ESM Government Securities Co. in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., was closed last Monday. The securities firm, shut down by a federal judge after it was disclosed it had a $300 million deficit, holds Home State securities that were put up as collateral in a repurchase agreement.

Four killer whales at Sea World in San Diego demonstrate the "slide out" behavior. In the ocean, killer whales can slide out on sand bars or ice floes in pursuit of prey.

Playful whales

Not until the last 20 years have killer whales been regarded with anything but fear by travelers to the cold waters of the Arctic and Antarctic oceans. Frequently, the beasts were shot for sport. But in 1965, Sea World in San Diego, presented Shamu, the first trained killer whale.

As trainers became acquainted with the huge marine mammal, they learned the killer whale could differentiate between people and could develop relationships with them.

Such relationships are the key to the marine mammal training technique Sea World uses with its three resident killer whales, according to Jerry Roberts, publicist for the park.

"I think the most exhilarating thing about working with Shamu is being in the water with him," said Joanne Hay, one of the five killer whale trainers employed by Sea World. "All of a sudden it's just you and this incredible animal — in his environment."

An important part of each trainer's day is spent in play sessions with the animals. In addition to playtime and public shows, animals and trainers exercise and train together.

To the animals, their trainers are both coach and friend. And because of Sea World's efforts, the public has become aware of the killer whale's intelligence and gentleness.

"You realize he not only knows and tolerates you, he really seems to like having you there," said Ms. Hay. "You tend to forget he's 4,500 pounds of killer whale and not just a big puppy."

Jennine Antrim of Sea World plays with four whales. Daily play sessions allow the trainers to build up a close relationship with the animals.

Shultz meets with Sepulveda

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz is meeting with Mexican Foreign Secretary Bernardo Sepulveda to discuss ways of reducing tensions caused by the slaying of an American drug enforcement agent in Mexico.

In congressional testimony last week, Shultz said he will forcefully urge Mexico to crack down on drug dealers, but he ruled out economic sanctions as a means of pressure.

U.S. officials said tensions between the two countries have been heightened by the circumstances surrounding the murder of Drug Enforcement Administration agent Enrique Salazar Camarena following his kidnapping in Guadalajara a month ago.

Reagan administration officials have said publicly that Mexican authorities were slow to respond in their investigation in the immediate aftermath of the kidnapping. But the U.S. ambassador to Mexico, John Gavin, said last week the United States now is receiving "very good cooperation" from Mexico.

Privately, officials have said they believe Mexican President Miguel de la Madrid is eager to crack down on drug smuggling, but that corruption at lower levels has made the task difficult. Sepulveda planned a late morning meeting with Shultz followed by a working luncheon. During his three-day stay, he also was expected to meet with other officials on trade, financial and economic issues.

U.S. officials, who asked not to be identified, said many Mexicans have been angered by American allegations of malfeasance and by the exhaustive checks by U.S. customs agents of Mexican motorists at border crossing points.

The checks paralyzed traffic for hours last month and inconvenienced thousands of motorists. The strict procedures were relaxed after a week.

The officials believe that about nine Mexican families are involved in drug trafficking and that their identities are known both to Mexican authorities and to the DEA. But there are no significant arrests in eight years, according to the officials.

As for the Camarena case, one official said the absence of progress in locating his abductors leaves one "with the conclusion that payoffs are causing it."

Mexican authorities have pointed out to U.S. officials that the United States itself has had difficulty in prosecuting leading organized crime figures. Mexico also claims hundreds of its agents have been killed in recent years in an anti-drug campaign.

The State Department's annual report on worldwide narcotics production, released last month, said Mexico "continues to maintain its dual position as a major supplier of heroin to the United States and a significant producer of marijuana."

It said the size of the opium and marijuana crops continued to increase last year despite large seizures of both crops.

NATION IN BRIEF

Man charged with slaying ex-wife, held over weekend

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — A man held off shocked onlookers in a fast-food dining area with a seven-inch knife as he repeatedly stabbed and slashed the throat of his ex-wife who he said violated Islamic law by divorcing him, police said.

After she fell fatally wounded, witnesses said the man surrendered to a security guard, smiled and asked, "Is she dead?"

Ahmed Amarir, 43, was booked for investigation of murder and held over the weekend without bail, police said Sunday.

More than 150 people were gathered for lunch in the dining area of the Long Beach Plaza shopping mall when the attack occurred Friday afternoon.

FAA lets $48 million get away

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration is "snookering" U.S. taxpayers in the way it manages real estate around Florida airports, Sen. William Proxmire said while bestowing his latest Golden Fleece Awards.

The agency is letting $48 million get away by failing to supervise the use and leasing of federal land set aside to help municipal airports, the Wisconsin Democrat said Sunday in his monthly handout accusing a government agency of various misdeeds.

He said Congress authorized the FAA in 1944 to aid local airports by letting them use surplus federal lands and buildings — either for their own use or for leases to generate revenue. But Proxmire said the FAA has let the airports get away with "snookering the taxpayers" in managing the lands.

He said 9,300 acres at 23 airports in Florida "are sitting idle, home to mosquitoes and sawgrass. This land would cause real estate brokers to do cartwheels."

States willing to make trade

WASHINGTON (AP) — If Congress freezes defense spending at 1985 levels and considers reductions in Social Security spending, the states are willing to accept reduction in federal aid, state lawmakers say.

The National Conference of State Legislatures, concluding a three-day meeting Saturday in suburban Arlington, Va., said it was unfair for states to absorb an estimated $10 billion in cuts for fiscal 1986 when the Reagan administration's $974 billion budget calls for a $30 billion increase in defense spending.

"Defense spending should not be exempt from action taken to reduce the deficit," the legislators said in a resolution that called for a one-year freeze in defense spending "conditional upon ... a reduction in other federal programs."

Libertarians challenge plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Civil libertarians, including one prominent member of Congress, are challenging a plan to use computers to ferret out unauthorized telephone calls by federal employees.

"If it's surveillance, they ought to have to prove to the public that it's necessary. I'm going to ask for a public hearing," said Edwards, chairman of the House subcommittee on civil and constitutional rights.

The cost-cutting proposal by the General Services Administration has drawn fire from the American Civil Liberties Union and the nation's largest federal employees union.
