Feud Growing Over Home Health Care

Existing, Would-Be Vendors Exchange Charges As New Hearing Sought

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

THIS story has drama:

Tape-recorded testimony mysteriously disappeared. Agencies that profess to be non-profit accuse each other of being in business for the money. Nurses allege that some elderly patients may have been coerced into institutions.

The story is about home health care, a relatively new kind of service. It means having a nurse regularly visit a patient at home, perhaps as a precursor or follow-up to a hospital stay.

Nobody doubts this service is valuable. Many disabled or elderly persons need only intermittent nursing care, and it's much cheaper than having to live at a nursing home or other facility.

Medicare and Medicaid pay the bills for most such clients — provided, however, that the care is rendered by a properly licensed non-profit corporation.

The only such corporation serving the South Plains is West Texas Home Health Agency, a division of the Lubbock-based MBFA Foundation. Depending on whom you talk to, having just one home health service here is very good or very bad.

Pat Patton, administrator of Austin-headquartered Home Help Care Inc., holds the latter view. So does Gayle McComb, who last year resigned as nursing director of the existing agency here to start the Visiting Nurse Association of Lubbock.

In late 1977, Patton and Mrs. McComb asked the Texas Health Facilities Commission to allow their respective non-profit organizations to provide home health services for the South Plains region.

West Texas Home Health Agency opposed the applications, saying the need already is being met.

Hearings were held in March. Last month, the state commission announced it has denied the two applicants permission to operate here.

Patton and Mrs. McComb are angry — at the commission and at West Texas Home Health Agency. They believe they showed ample evidence that the home health needs of Lubbock and surrounding counties are too great for one group to handle alone.

"It's a political issue," said Patton. "The only agency in town doesn't want competition. They've been the only kid on the block since 1969, and they don't want somebody to come in and show them up."

Added Mrs. McComb: "There is a very definite need for additional home health care. We could have five agencies and still not meet all the needs of this area. Besides, competition is healthy. It gives people a choice."

It also helps hold costs down, Patton contends. He said West Texas Home Health Agency is top-heavy in administration and that its costs run $35 or more per nurse's visit.

In comparison, Patton claimed his group's cost would be $20 to $22 per visit. Mrs. McComb said hers would be even lower.

To which Land D. Wall, president of the MBFA Foundation, responds: "That's nonsense."

Wall produced financial statements showing that his home health division's costs are running about $28 per visit. "This is a very efficient level for the high-quality care we provide," he said.

And Wall does not believe Patton or Mrs. McComb could do any better. "We are operating to the ultimate. We have extensive experience in this field. For someone to make remarks about our administrative costs is just ridiculous," Wall said.

But why not allow competition anyway?

Wall said the free marketplace is great for other products and services, but it just doesn't work in health care. "Rather than contain costs, competition would increase costs," he said.

For one thing, competing non-profit health care agencies would duplicate administration, Wall said. And he noted Lubbock and the South Plains already have a severe shortage of nurses. If more agencies are competing for nurses, salaries — and health-care costs — will go higher, Wall said.

Patton said his agency would attempt to recruit nurses who now are inactive

Brezhnev Warns U.S. Against Use Of 'Chinese Card' In Diplomacy

Low-Key Criticism Of Administration Policy Mulled

By NIKKI FINKE

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev warned the Carter administration in a major speech Sunday not to use the "Chinese card" against the Kremlin or it "may bitterly regret it."

Efforts are being made in the United States "at a higher level and in a rather cynical form to play the 'Chinese card' against the U.S.S.R.," he said. "This is a short-sighted and dangerous policy."

Brezhnev, speaking in the west Russian city of Minsk, apparently was referring to National Security Adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski, whom the Soviet press identifies as the U.S. official leading the Carter administration into closer relations with Peking.

Follows Pravda Charge

Almost the same statement was made last week in a 5,300-word article on U.S.-Soviet relations published in the Communist Party newspaper Pravda.

Brezhnev also criticized the United States for what he called a failure "to take a constructive approach" to end the arms race.

But Western diplomats here said the Soviet leader's 45-minute speech apparently represented a response to Washington's call for a "lowering of voices" because the tone was relatively soft compared with other major addresses this year in which he focused on and bitterly attacked Carter administration policies.

Evident Omissions Noted

"I think what was very important was what he didn't say," said one diplomat. "This is surely the least mention the United States has had recently."

The Soviet leader said the U.N. conference on disarmament "showed that the leaders of big NATO countries, especially the U.S.A., evidently do not wish to take a constructive approach to the solution of disarmament problems.

"How else can one assess the session of the NATO council in Washington, where a new long-term arms program was adopted, while something quite opposite, the question of curbing the arms race and of effecting disarmament, was discussed in New York at the special General Assembly session?

"The impression is that in Washington the NATO countries make 'real policy' while in New York they took part in discussions for appearance's sake in order to avoid being justly criticized and censured," Brezhnev said. "The Peking rulers are acting in unison with this position."

Brezhnev said the Russians submitted at the United Nations a "bold and at the same time realistic program for stopping completely the arms race."

The Soviet leader made no mention of his country's involvement in Africa or U.S. criticism of Russian intervention in African affairs. Another Western diplomat said he was surprised that Africa was not brought up because the Soviet government's recent policy statement criticized the U.S. position on Soviet involvement in Africa.

"They've already said what they want to say in their two major statements on Africa and in Pravda," the Western official said. "Now they want to wait and see what happens."

West Coast Voting Specter Shadows Budget Talks Here

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

THE MOOD of Lubbock voters since the passage of California's Proposition 13 will weigh heavily on the thoughts of Lubbock city council members when they convene today to begin scrutinizing next year's budget.

The resulting awareness has produced a "bare bones" budget recommendation, City Manager Larry Cunningham said, and at least three council members seem determined to see a tax rate cut accompany the final budget.

The passage of Proposition 13, which put a lid on government spending in California, made Cunningham "more conservative about the areas of increased spending," he said.

Improvements Cut Back

Cunningham said he recommended budget increases only in areas in which they were "desperately needed."

"We haven't recommended as many improvements as we feel we need — we recommended funding what we need to hold the line as much as possible," the city manager said.

"There were a lot of very good programs and services which would have been nice, but were not recommended because of a need to hold the line."

Inflation Stressed

Cunningham refused to talk specifically about his budget recommendations which council members will examine today through Wednesday, but predicted an increase in spending around the 7.3 percent increase in last year's budget.

But he was quick to point out the increase is due to inflation and the growth of the city, making the city's operational costs greater.

In addition to recommended increases in certain departments, Cunningham said he would suggest "ways to reduce some areas of spending."

The Health Department "is likely to be" one of the departments which would receive increased funds under the budget recommendation, Cunningham said.

Health Department Director Marjorie Orr has been vocal about the department's lack of funds and staff since assuming the directorship in February.

More For Salaries?

A consultant's study which recommends the council spend over $500,000 to upgrade the salaries of city employees, may produce some increased spending for salaries.

Cunningham said he has recommended "some personnel system improvements, not just based on the consultant's study," and said "some pay adjustments are going to be needed through one method or another."

But the pressure in the budget sessions

United States, Russians Push Move Toward Disarmament Panel Reform

By WILLIAM N. OATIS

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The United States and Soviet Union, in a joint move to produce at least one concrete result from the U.N. disarmament session, were reported Sunday to be pressing for General Assembly backing of a plan to enlarge the Geneva international disarmament committee.

The big question is whether the reorganization of the Geneva body would give seats to China, which has never been a member, and France, which boycotts the committee in protest of its Soviet-American cochairmanship.

The two superpowers are said to be seeking to expand membership of the panel from 31 to either 35 or 36 states.

Their initiative improved the prospect that the five-week, speech-filled special assembly session on disarmament, moving into its last days, will come up with at least one solid accomplishment — a revamped central negotiating body for control and reduction of weapons.

The Geneva committee was formed in 1959 by decision of France, Britain, the United States and the Soviet Union and was given the mission of helping check the world arms race.

Over the years it has produced international treaties against biological warfare, against launching nuclear weapons into outer space and against placing them on ocean floors.

The committee had 10 members at its founding. The French boycott began in 1961 with its enlargement to 18 nations by U.S.-Soviet agreement. It now has 31 members. Only France is inactive.

Sixth Straight Day Over 100 Degrees Likely For City, South Plains Today

SOARING temperatures Sunday extended to five consecutive days the streak of 100 degree-plus readings, with the Lubbock mercury finally leveling off at the 105-degree mark for the day's high.

Weathermen late Sunday promised some relief from the sweltering heat today. They predicted that cooler air drifting aloft probably would float over the area Tuesday, helping to cut temperatures, although to no lower than the middle 90s.

Forecasters called for a 100-degree high in the city today but added in th same breath that conditions today wouldn't be any different from those that triggered readings closer to 106 last week.

Skies should be clear today, turning partly cloudy on Tuesday and clearing again on Wednesday for the remainder of the week. Through Friday, temperatures should hit the high 90s, possibly edging again into the 100s later in the week.

Lubbock's 105 high Sunday fell one degree short of breaking the city's record maximum temperature for the date set in 1930. Weathermen said Sunday's reading was the fifth straight day of temperatures above the century mark for most of the South Plains.

Lubbockites, though, weren't the only ones blistering.

El Paso sweltered under a simmering 109-degree high, four degrees above the old record for that date set in 1902.

Weathermen there said Sunday was the 12th consecutive day of temperatures above 100 degrees, and as such, the longest period of above 100-degree temperatures on record in 100 years.

A strong ridge of high pressure east of the South Plains-Panhandle regions that for days has kept skies clear and mercury readings high should remain nearly stationary at least through Tuesday night, the weather service said.

The high pressure should continue to exert extreme moisture stress on young crops during daylight hours, according to forecasters.

Late Sunday, a few scattered thunderstorms were cropping up in some portions of the South Plains, but forecasters said the isolated showers would dissipate by dark after producing less than one-quarter of an inch of moisture if any at all.

At 7 p.m., Plainview and Muleshoe residents reported a few storm clouds building, but said no activity had developed from the cloud systems.

Major Legislation Piling Up As Time Ebbs For Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress has dumped President Carter's proposal to overhaul federal welfare laws but still has a pile of major legislation left to do and only nine weeks scheduled to do it in.

Priority legislation left includes Carter's energy package and tax reform proposals, jobs bills, hospital cost containment, repeal of the ban on U.S. aid for Turkey and more federal aid for New York City.

More than 115 bills are still working their way through Congress and adjournment is scheduled for Oct. 1, with four weeks of time off planned between now and then.

The legislators plan to work on a number of the lesser bills this week and then take next week off for July 4th speeches and politicking back home.

The priority bills also include one to revise the national labor law. It was pulled off the Senate floor last week after a filibuster.

The Senate Human Resources Committee is to hold hearings this week on a revised version that Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., has predicted will be approved.

The bill, among other things, would make it easier for employees to organize unions.

When Congress gets back, the Senate may begin the final stage of action on one of five parts of the massive energy package.

That is the section that would cut consumption of gas and oil by requiring power plants using those fuels to convert to coal — and outlawing outdoor gas decorater lamps by 1982.

House-Senate conferees have worked out a compromise for the Senate and then House to approve and send to the president.

The conferees appear nearly finished with three other sections of the energy package, but the fifth — taxes to discourage excessive use of fuels — is still deadlocked.

Carter and Congress have reached no consensus on income tax reform but Congress must at least extend the tax reductions now in effect or they will expire and taxes will go up about $9 billion.

The House has passed a Humphrey-Hawkins bill that would require the government to take steps — short of creating federal jobs — to try to get U.S. adult unemployment down to 4 percent from the present 6.1 percent.

A Senate version is to be drafted in committee this week.

Borger Pair Killed In Wyoming Crash

DOUGLAS, Wyo. (AP) — A Texas man and his wife have been killed in a two-car accident on Interstate 80 near Douglas, the Wyoming Highway Patrol said Sunday.

The patrol said James E. Abel, 57, and Bobbie Abel, 54, both of Borger, Texas were killed about 12:50 p.m. Saturday when the car he was driving south collided with a car driven by Thomas Kysar, 20, of Powell, Wyo., who received minor injuries, the patrol said.

The patrol said the car driven by Kysar passed a semi tractor-trailer and struck the rear of the Abel car as it was returning to the right-hand lane. The car carrying the Texas couple struck a guard rail, went off the road and rolled four times, ejecting both victims, the patrol said.

Art Collection Sale To Pay Ransom Bill

LONDON (AP) — Bolivian tin heir George Ortiz packed a $2 million ransom in two suitcases last October to get his 5-year-old daughter Graziella back from her kidnappers.

The child was returned unharmed. But even after the terror has subsided, Ortiz must continue to deal with the matter — he has to pay the bill. So Thursday the London auction house Sotheby Parke Bernet will sell a treasure chest of primitive African and Oceanic art he has collected over 30 years.

Ortiz, a 50-year-old member of the Patino mining family, said the ransom payment "did not make me destitute, but raising all that cash suddenly was a great strain."

The collection is said to include the finest group of Polynesian art in private hands in the world. A Sotheby spokesman said the house expects the sale to bring upwards of $1 million.

Graziella was snatched by two men Oct. 3 outside the family home in Geneva, Switzerland, as she was being driven to school. Ortiz and his wife, Catherine, appealed to the abductors not to harm the child, their only daughter. They have three sons. Ortiz handed the ransom over on the Geneva-Lausanne highway and Graziella was dropped off in a hotel parking lot 11 days after the kidnap.

Test Your Own Knowledge Of Health And Safety

By Science Research Associates

A little knowledge is not necessarily a dangerous thing. It could save a life.

In recent years, statistics have taught us that many people who ordinarily would have died of injuries or sudden illnesses have been saved by rapid action from paramedics, cardiac units or ordinary citizens who possess a little rudimentary information.

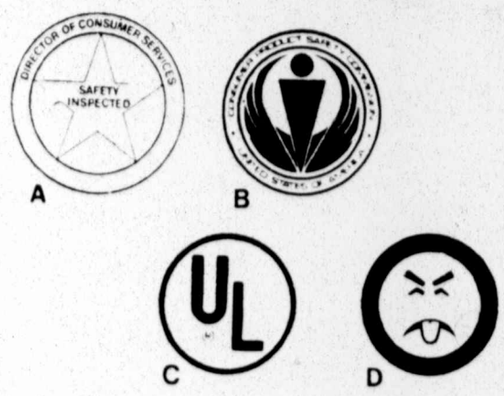
The United States, in fact, ranks lowest among the countries of the world on the rate of deaths attributed to most kinds of accidents (falls, drowning, fire, etc.), although it is by far the highest in the rate of death by homicide, and has an above-average rate of deaths from transportation accidents.

One doesn't have to be a physician to draw certain conclusions about one's health and how to safeguard it. One doesn't need to be a paramedic to know some of the live-saving techniques that can be used when accidents occur or when illness strikes.

Public information programs often are designed to provide these skills on a community-wide basis. In these programs, people are taught the Heimlich technique for people who are choking, mouth-to-mouth resuscitation for those whose breathing has stopped, and other basic life-saving skills.

Not everyone can be trained as a paramedic, but there is certain information that practically everyone could reasonably be expected to learn that could add immeasurably to the health and safety of people in any community. The most basic piece of information is knowing how to reach a doctor or paramedic quickly in your community.

Not all this information is included in the health and safety section of the SRA Coping Skills Test — but some of it is.



Mark your answers, then check with the key printed on Page 8, Sec A, to see how much you know about your health and safety.

Councilmen Face Specter As Budget Talks Open

will be greatest for a cut in the tax rate.

Cunningham said he was "hopeful" a tax reduction would be possible, and intimated his budget recommendation might include such a cut.

Councilman Bill McAlister is more than hopeful — he's adamant about the need for a tax cut.

"I'm going to be looking over the entire budget very carefully to come up with a tax reduction," he said. "A two or three cent reduction off the tax rate would be the greatest thing we could do for the community right now."

McAlister said the message from Proposition 13 is "not only to hold the line, but to reduce spending."

Drastic cuts are not favored by most people, he said, but "we should be very careful of any new programs and large expenditures."

McAlister said severe cuts in services, or the budget, wouldn't be necessary to achieve a cut in the tax rate.

"We're going to have to be really meticulous," he said.

Mayor Dirk West also said he'd approach the budget "with an idea to find room for a tax cut. We've got to offset the tax revaluations," he said.

A tax cut would be the result of a surplus in revenue, West said, which he was optimistic the budget would show.

But West said his first priority is to "look to see the police department is adequately funded," and predicted some increases in manpower and equipment might be necessary.

He said he hasn't reached a conclusion about increased funding for the Health Department, but said "in the areas of health, fire and police, I'm much more easily persuaded to give these areas help."

West also did not commit himself to the $579,000 salary increase recommended in the consultant's study, but said he's "certainly interested in paying people a living wage and enough to keep them on the job."

Councilman Alan Henry said he planned to look at the "overall budget" to make sure it was "strictly meat and potatoes."

"The public is not in the mood for any new programs," Henry said, adding he'd "like to see some tax decrease coupled with an increase in the homestead exemption for older persons."

Henry also was noncommittal about increased funding for the Health Department and said, "just because it's been awhile since it was increased is not in itself reason for an increase this year."

Councilwoman Carolyn Jordan said she has few preconceptions about this, her seventh, budget session.

Mrs. Jordan said she anticipates a need for additional police officers and said she wanted to ensure the city continued to add to its contingency fund, which is used for emergencies, and to its capital improvements funds.

"If projected revenues are substantially greater than projected expenditures, a tax rate cut would be well worth considering," Mrs. Jordan said.

"However, if we cut expenditures in order to have a tax cut, then later find the expenditures were necessary, we'd be in a bind," she said.

With zero-base budgeting, which the city began using last year, "there is no gold plating, no padding in this type of budget," Mrs. Jordan said.

She predicted the council would be "very supportive of increased expenditures for the Health Department," and said the police department and the Health Department are the "only areas I can see any significant increases in staff."

Councilman M.J. "Bud" Aderton, who took office in April, said he would "like to effect a tax cut," and pledged to "look with a critical eye at anything which would increase the tax rate.

"I'm sympathetic with the taxpayers," he said.

That sentiment was echoed by city manager Cunningham when he discussed his budget recommendation.

"We've not been extravagent — we've kept the taxpayers and citizens in mind," he said. The budget, he said, is "very realistic."

Red Spying Glory Gone

WASHINGTON (AP) — Kremlin spying has come on hard times, reduced to picking up odds and ends, because the Soviets no longer offer an ideological attraction, former CIA Director William E. Colby says.

Commitment to revolution by foreign agents got the Russians their early spying breakthroughs, Colby said. In recent cases, he said, "...the Soviets offered some guy $5,000 or $15,000 for secrets. They'll get odds and ends that way, but they won't get very much..."

The onetime Central Intelligence Agency chief, in a copyrighted interview in U. S. News & World Report, cited an FBI estimate that there are about 800 Communist intelligence personnel in America. "But I frankly think they are in hard times," he said.

Other Colby observations:

— The arrest of an American businessman in Moscow "was an act of retaliation" for the arrest of two Soviet employees of the United Nations on espionage charges in America.

— Spying charges against a U. S. woman vice consul who left Moscow a year ago resulted from the publicity given the arrest of the two Russians.

"...almost every feature of our relationship with the Soviets is based on reciprocity," Colby said. "(And) the Soviets are still hooked on the old theory of a government disowning a spy when he's caught."

That's why they denied with a straight face proven bugging of the U.N. embassy in Moscow, Colby declared. His years abroad, he added, taught him to expect bugging of U.S. embassies as a fact of life.

Collapse Of Bridge Kills Six In Spain

HERNANI, Spain (UPI) — A footbridge crowded with 50 people watching a sardine boat race in northern Spain collapsed in a tangle of wood and cable Sunday, hurling the spectators into a river 25 feet below, police said.

Six bodies were recovered from waters of the Urumea River after the accident and at least one person, a 72-year-old man, was missing. Among the dead were an 8-year-old girl and a 12-year-old boy, police said.

Most of the spectators, who had been celebrating a fiesta at this Basque town, managed to swim to the banks of the river or were rescued by the boaters.

One person was reported injured.

MASSIVE NO NUKE RALLY — An estimated 12,000 people standing shoulder to shoulder under a sizzling sun and clouds of dust toured exhibits and listened to speeches against nuclear power Sunday in Seabrook, N.H. The activities were part of the mass occupation of the Seabrook Nuclear Plant site by the Clamshell Alliance. (AP Laserphoto)

Protest Resembles County Fair

SEABROOK, N.H. (AP) — The Seabrook protest took on the trappings of a county fair Sunday as many of the 6,000 demonstrators basked in the sun, listened to folk music and heard lectures from those opposed to the use of nuclear energy.

The placid character of the demonstration was in sharp contrast to the protest of a year ago when more than 1,400 persons were arrested at the construction site and herded into National Guard armories.

The Clamshell Alliance had agreed with the state and the Public Service Co. of New Hampshire, majority owner of the Seabrook nuclear plant which is still under construction, to observe groundrules for a lawful rally.

The alliance was formed in July of 1976 to oppose construction of the $2.3 billion power plant. The group, which in the past has used some form of civil disobedience to further its goals, has expanded to serve as an umbrella for about 50 similar organizations in New England.

A faction within the alliance was upset by the agreement and said it was considering some form of civil disobedience. Members discussed options such as staying on the site past the 3 p.m. Monday deadline or returning to Seabrook in August and attempting to camp at the plant site until construction is halted.

Major highways leading to New Hampshire's tiny seacoast were jammed with cars and buses heading for the demonstration Sunday. Some demonstrators expected visitors to swell their numbers to more than 10,000.

Many of the demonstrators camped overnight in a wooded area at the site and on Sunday toured exhibits, sunbathed, listened to entertainer Pete Seeger and others and heard lectures from Barry Commoner and Dr. Benjamin Spock.

Sympathy protests by other anti-nuclear demonstrators were staged over the weekend in several other places, including Newport, Mich., Madison, Ind., Augusta, Maine, and Burlington, Kan.

In Manchester, N.H., meanwhile, hundreds of nuclear power advocates gathered in an athletic stadium for a clambake in support of the Seabrook plant. Intended to counter the Seabrook protest, the rally fell far short of the attendance goal of 3,800 persons set by organizers.

The Clamshell Alliance said it would carry its protest to Washington later in the week and demonstrate at the Nuclear Regulatory Commission Building on Wednesday.

Robin Read, an alliance leader, told a Sunday morning planning session that 500 people had signed up for the Washington demonstration.

Gov. Meldrim Thomson described the demonstrators as "hopefully, and I would underscore the word 'hopefully,' regenerated and rehabilitated."

Attorney General Thomas D. Rath said he believed the talk of prolonging the demonstration beyond the Monday deadline was an internal issue of the alliance.

"The vast majority of people I have talked with indicate they intend to live up to the spirit of their agreement," Rath said.

The Incas called their empire Tahuantinsuyu, the "Four Quarters of the World." At its peak it stretched 2,500 miles from central Chile into southern Columbia.

Tech Names New Head In Chemical Engineering

DR. RAFFI M. TURIAN

Dr. Raffi M. Turian has been named chairman of the department of chemical engineering at Texas Tech University.

Dean John R. Bradford of the College of Engineering made the announcement and said Turian's appointment is effective Sept. 1.

Turian succeeds Dr. James E. Halligan, who resigned to become dean of engineering at the University of Missouri in Rolla. Dr. George F. Meenaghan, associate vice president for research at Texas Tech, has been serving as interim chairman since Halligan's resignation.

Turian is a professor in the department of chemical engineering and materials science at Syracuse University. He earned his bachelor's degree in chemical engineering at the University of Maryland, College Park, and the master's and doctorate degrees in the same field at the University of Wisconsin, Madison.

He joined the faculty at Syracuse in 1965 and left for two years — 1975 to 1977 — to become director of the Chemical Processes Program of the National Science Foundation. Immediately following his graduation from the University of Wisconsin, he spent a year as an engineer in the Technical Development Laboratory of the Shell Pipe Line Corp., Houston.

Turian is a consultant for the U.S. government and also has consulted for air-conditioning, metallurgical, pharmaceutical, paper, drilling and pipeline companies.

His research interests include advanced water renovation, complex fluid flows, mathematical analysis and approximation, and porous media proceses.

Thomas Jefferson said, "Architecture is my delight and putting up, and pulling down, one of my favorite amusements."

New Report Challenges Warden Killing Theory

TIJUANA, Mexico (AP) — Four prisoners with narcotics records have confessed to killing a warden and seven other persons as part of an escape plot, according to Chief Francisco Palau of the Baja California State Police.

Palau's report conflicts with earlier accounts that the killings Friday at La Mesa Penitentiary had resulted from a premeditated assassination plot against the warden.

The four inmates had planned to create a disturbance in the prison yard that would result in their being placed in solitary confinement, where they planned to tunnel their way out of the crowded prison, Palau said Saturday. He said investigators linked the shootout to an escape plot after reinterrogating six acquaintances of the four inmates.

When the six were arrested Thursday, they had several new submachine guns, tanks of oxygen and many digging tools, Palau said.

The police chief said the four prisoners involved in the shootout had planned to join their six companions in digging a tunnel through which 20 or 30 convicted narcotics traffickers were to escape.

It was not determined if the killing of the warden, Salvador Gonzalez Guiterrez, and the seven others was premeditated.

But Palau said one of the inmates, a convicted narcotics dealer named Marcio Enrique Alvarez Vasquez, 27, confessed to shooting the warden. According to his confession, he shot in self-defense and not as part of an ambush.

However, a Baja California state judicial police investigator said earlier that the bloody melee started as an assassination of the warden, planned at least two days earlier.

"They read his character perfectly," the unidentified investigator told the San Diego Tribune. "They laid a trap for him. They knew how he would respond. He did. And they killed him."

Those killed along with Gonzalez, who became warden in April, were his assistant, Jose de Jesus Dominguez, two guards and four prisoners. Two others were wounded.

The 37-year-old warden had said his goal at the prison was to improve living conditions at the 25-year-old facility and to cut down on the contraband arms, alcohol and drugs within prison walls.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Q. A friend insists he is getting tax-exempt interest on a public utility bond. Is this possible?

A. If the bond was issues by a public power system, a municipally-owned utility company, its interest enjoys tax exemption just as does interest paid by a bond issues by public sewer authority or bridge authority or turnpike or highway authority.

A list of some of these companies issued by White, Weld & Co.'s public finance and municipal research departments include such names as Austin, Texas, Electric Light & Power; Chelan County, Washington, Public Utility District; Colorado Springs, Colorado, Department of Public Utilities; Douglas County, Washington, Public Utility District; Eugene, Oregon; Gainsville, Florida, Electric Water & Sewer; Grand River, Oklahoma, Dam Authority; Heartland, South Dakota, Consumers Power; Jacksonville, Florida, Electric Authority; Lafayette, Louisiana, Public Power Authority; Lakeland, Florida; Lincoln, Nebraska; Los Angeles Department of Water & Power; Lower Colorado River Authority of Texas; Massachusetts Municipal Wholesale Electric Co.; Municipal Electric Authority of Georgia; Nebraska Public Power District; N.Y. State Power Authority; Omaha Public Power District; Orlando, Florida, Utilities Commission; Platte River, Colorado, Power Authority; Puerto Rico Water Resources Authority; Salt River, Arizona, Project Agricultural Improvement and Power; San Antonio City Public Service Board; Seattle, Washington, Municipal Light and Power; Sikeston, Missouri; South Carolina Public Service Authority; Tallahasse, Florida; Texas Municipal Power Agency; Washington Public Power Supply; Western Minnesota Municipal Power.

There are many more. If interested, ask your broker.

Q. I've been told that interest rates on certificates of deposit are not fixed and that some banks may deny withdrawal of funds.

A. Don't listen to gossip. If you put your money into a 2-or 4-or 6-year savings certificate, the interest rate in effect when your money goes in is the interest rate it will earn to the end of the contract. As to withdrawals:

I'm getting a lot of confusing reports from various sections of the country. If you plan to put substantial sums into a savings institution for any specific length of time ask the bank or savings and loan officer to explain any withdrawal conditions before you hand over the money.

Q. Several years ago I bought a bond with a 10 percent coupon from a list of bonds mentioned in your column. It has since gone up in price and my broker wants me to sell because it is no longer yielding 10 percent, and buy some other bond, instead. But I can't see paying a commission to sell and another to buy.

A. I can't see the move, for any reason. The bond has gone up in price a but because interest rates are now below the level in effect when these bonds are issued. Your effective yield, of course, is down a bit. But so would be the yield of any comparable bond you bought today. Sit tight.

Q. We've held some leading paper stocks for a couple of years and have been disappointed in their record. Are they finished as a "growth" industry?

A. I'd be reluctant to write off any natural resource stock in an inflationary age. More specifically, a study by Kazi Hasan of the N.Y. Stock Exchange firm of Prescott, Ball & Turben points out that paper and paper board shipments were strong in the first quarter of the year and should continue so, what with users' inventories modest. The study believes the paper industry's operating margins will continue to improve, that second quarter earnings should exceed expectations and that price increases are expected for the third quarter. The firm's analysis mention Great Northern Nekoosa, St. Regis and Crown-Zellerbach for long-term commitment

A DAILY MESSAGE FROM

The Newspaper Bible

Mark 5:15-34, The Living Bible

15 And a large crowd soon gathered where Jesus was; but as they saw the man sitting there, fully clothed and perfectly sane, they were frightened.

16 Those who saw what happened were telling everyone about it,

17 And the crowd began pleading with Jesus to go away and leave them alone!

18 So He got back into the boat. The man who had been possessed by the demons begged Jesus to let him go along.

19 But Jesus said no. "Go home to your friends," He told him, "and tell them what wonderful things God has done for you; and how merciful He has been."

20 So the man started off to visit the Ten Towns of that region and began to tell everyone about the great things Jesus had done for him; and they were awestruck by his story.

21 When Jesus had gone across by boat to the other side of the lake, a vast crowd gathered around Him on the shore.

22 The leader of the local synagogue, whose name was Jairus, came and fell down before Him,

23 Pleading with Him to heal his little daughter. "She is at the point of death," he said in desperation. "Please come and place Your hands on her and make her live."

24 Jesus went with him, and the crowd thronged behind.

25 In the crowd was a woman who had been sick for twelve years with a hemorrhage.

26 She had suffered much from many doctors through the years and had become poor from paying them, and was no better but, in fact, was worse.

27 She had heard all about the wonderful miracles Jesus did, and that is why she came up behind Him through the crowd and touched His clothes.

28 For she thought to herself, "If I can just touch His clothing, I will be healed."

29 And sure enough, as soon as she had touched Him, the bleeding stopped and she knew she was well!

30 Jesus realized at once that healing power had gone out from Him, so He turned around in the crowd and asked, "Who touched My clothes?"

31 His disciples said to Him, "All this crowd pressing around You, and You ask who touched You?"

32 But He kept on looking around to see who it was who had done it.

33 Then the frightened woman, trembling at the realization of what had happened to her, came and fell at His feet and told Him what she had done.

34 And He said to her, "Daughter, your faith has made you well; go in peace, healed of your disease."

Hope Seen In Dallas Ruling

IN REFUSING to invalidate as unconstitutional the way Dallas elects its City Council, the Supreme Court left unanswered the critical question in a pending challenge to Lubbock's at-large election of its own five-member City Council.

The ruling is an encouraging indication, however, that the Supreme Court is not ready to deny Americans the basic human right of choosing the system of self-determination under which we will govern ourselves.

The Court left plenty of room for worry, though, in sending the Dallas case back to the U.S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals for study in light of the Voting Rights Act of 1965.

WHAT THE SUPREME Court seemed to be saying is that the 5th Circuit erred in ruling Dallas' 8-3 election system is unconstitutional but that it had not looked closely enough at how the relatively new federal law might or might not apply to the case.

Dallas elects eight councilmen from single-member districts but chooses the other two councilmen and the mayor in citywide balloting.

The 5th Circuit Court had ordered that all 11, or at least all except the mayor, be elected from single-member districts.

Federal District Judge Eldon Mahon earlier had declared Dallas' original system of electing all members of the City Council in citywide voting to be unconstitutional. He relied on a Supreme Court mandate that state legislators must be elected from single-member districts.

This "one-man, one-vote" application to city councils never was tested at the appeals court level, however. Instead, the Dallas City Council compromised the at-large principle and agreed to an 8-3 plan which Mahon okayed.

That plan was challenged and the 5th Circuit overruled Mahon, but it did not look at the original question of whether a pure at-large system was unconstitutional as Mahon had ruled.

LUBBOCK CITY officials contend that at-large voting is constitutional and are defending that position in a challenge filed in federal court here by black lawyer Gene Gaines.

In its 6-3 decision Thursday, the Supreme Court noted that it never has ruled on this basic question.

Perhaps significantly, Justice Thurgood Marshall, one of the three dissenters, took the position that "the very nature of the underlying violation (is) dilution of the voting power of a racial minority resulting from the effects of at-large voting in a particular political community."

It is therefore "inappropriate" to let three members be elected at large if it's wrong to let all of them be so elected, Marshall argued.

Happily, Justice Marshall is in the minority on the Supreme Court. The only way that an all at-large system of choosing a City Council can be found to be unconstitutional on racial grounds is to rule that one man's vote is inferior to another's on account of race.

We cannot accept that premise.

AN EDITORIAL:

Molly M'Kolly Gets Her Due

SURELY YOU remember Mary Ludwig Hays, the noted Revolutionary War heroine? All right, it's an unfair question.

Mrs. Hays is better known as Molly Pitcher, and her fame rests on what she did at the Battle of Monmouth, which took place 200 years ago, on June 28, 1778.

In honor of the battle's bicentenary, the U.S. Postal Service unveiled the design of a multicolor commemorative postcard Sunday.

Featuring a likeness of Molly Pitcher, the card will go on sale in post offices here in September.

THE BATTLE of Monmouth was fought near what is now Freehold, N.J., on a scorchingly hot day. Enter Mary Ludwig Hays.

As the American and British forces exchanged volleys, she went back and forth from a well, carrying water to the exhausted and wounded.

This won for her the sobriquet of Molly Pitcher.

When her husband fell from heat prostration, she stepped into his place beside his cannon, and filled it ably and heroically for the remainder of the battle.

As the years passed, the saga of Molly Pitcher was prettified by popular historians —the same fate that befell Betsy Ross and Barbara Frietchie. The truth, as usual, is more interesting.

"MOLLY WAS DESCRIBED by contemporaries as a short, thick-set woman," observed the Dictionary of American Biography, "of rather rough appearance and brusque manner, but industrious and kindly."

An eyewitness at the Battle of Monmouth added that she "smoked, chewed tobacco and swore like a trooper," as she helped to man her fallen husband's artillery piece.

Molly was widowed after the war and married a man called George McCauley.

It was not until 1822, 10 years before her death, that the Pennsylvania General Assembly awarded her a $40 annuity under the provisions of "An Act for the Relief of Molly M'Kolly."

Now, two centuries after her finest hour, Molly Pitcher finally is being given her due.

M. STANTON EVANS:

Communism Permeates All Terrorism Levels

WASHINGTON—When terrorists murdered Aldo Moro, the Italian Communist Party tried to score political points by deploring the violence and posing as a champion of law and order.

That pose was typical of the Italian wing of Eurocommunism, says Prof. Antonio Martino of the University of Naples, currently on a speaking tour of the United States.

In Italy as elsewhere in Western Europe, the Communists are eager to suggest that they are peaceful democrats rather than a band of wild-eyed revolutionaries.

THE RECORD shows, according to Martino, that this is a public-relations posture bearing small resemblance to reality.

Dr. Martino, a professor of economics appearing in this country under the auspices of the United States Industrial Council, points out that the Communist Party of Italy has never abandoned its allegiance to Marxist doctrine. On the contrary, he observes, the party has steadfastly plugged for the "dictatorship of the proletariat" and apologized for Soviet aggression:

Both characteristics call in question the idea that the party has changed appreciably for the better.

Equally to the point, Martino notes, the terrorists of the Red Brigades who kidnaped and murdered Moro are themselves Communists, "the natural offspring of Leninism."

Their violent actions aid the Communist goal of destabilizing non-Communist political authority, even as they permit the Communists to pose as advocates of stability and order.

COMMUNIST-SPONSORED terrorism by this method is made to serve the objectives of Marxist revolution twice over.

The degree to which the Communists are responsible for—and benefit from—the recent binge of global terror is also the theme of "International Terrorism—The Communist Connection," published this month by the American Council on World Freedom.

Written by Dr. Stefan Possony of the Hoover Institution and L. Francis Bouchey of the Council for Inter-American Security (with an introduction by Rep. Richard Ichord of Missouri), this is an authoritative wrap-up on the problem of terror around the world. The theme is summed up in the opening paragraph:

"THERE IS VIRTUALLY no terrorist operation or guerrilla movement anywhere in the world today, whether Communist, semi-Communist or non-Communist, from the Irish Republican Army to the Palestine Liberation Organization, to our own Weather Underground, with which Communists have not been involved.

"This includes non-Communist operations and movements, for Communist parties and governments always stand ready to exploit disorder in Europe, the Middle East, Latin America and elsewhere, however and by whomever it is fomented."

The almost universal use of Soviet weapons, the role of Libya as a "cutout" for aid to terrorists, cooperation among terrorist groups and the involvement of Soviet Communists, Maoists and Trotskyites are all examined in detail.

AS IN THE Italian case, the Communists have it both ways on the terrorist issue: When it suits their purposes and the atmospherics of "detente," they will publicly deplore some terrorist acts.

But they will simultaneously encourage and finance the terrorists, hoping to profit from the resulting demoralization in the West.

Unfortunately, as noted by Martino, the Communist connection with the global terror is often casually glossed over.

Perhaps if the media and Western governments started paying attention to it, there would be some chance of getting the problem corrected.

ROWLAND EVANS & ROBERT NOVAK:

Henry In Stockholm

NOVAK

WASHINGTON—On June 5, an amateur politician-turned-amateur diplomat in Stockholm fired off an excited telegram to the State Department with repercussions that show how eagerly the favor of Henry A. Kissinger is still sought.

Rodney Kennedy-Minott, U.S. ambassador to Sweden, reported in exultation that Kissinger, on his visit to Stockholm then taking place, not only endorsed U.S. foreign policy in general but also the emerging SALT II treaty on arms limitations.

When we informed him about this telegram, Kissinger told us the tyro ambassador had exaggerated his position in one stance and misunderstood it in another.

From the sieve-like State Department, the ambassador's effusive report flowed into the streets of Washington. Republicans responsible for designing their party's foreign policy—reading Kennedy-Minott without benefit of Kissinger's explanation—were mortified.

WAS HENRY RUNNING with the hares while hunting with the hounds? While collaborating with the Republicans in mordant critiques of the Carter foreign policy, was he also buttering up the President behind the scenes?

Even if Kissinger were an innocent victim in this incident, as is entirely possible, the ambassador's jubilation and the Republican dismay show with what intense scrutiny Kissinger's words still are weighed. Both sides believe he may ultimately determine whether SALT II is ratified by the Senate.

Until the election of Carter, Ambassador Kennedy-Minott was an obscure college professor in California who dabbled in liberal anti-establishment politics.

Lucky or smart enough to back Jimmy Carter early in a state where Carter ranks were thin, the professor was rewarded with the Stockholm embassy (causing gasps of surprise back in California).

So it was that he took himself to the airport to greet Kissinger when the former secretary of state arrived in Stockholm as head of the Chase Manhattan Bank's international advisory committee.

KENNEDY-MINOTT'S excitement fairly leapt from his telegram to Secretary of State Cyrus Vance: "I met Kissinger upon arrival in Stockholm and we had a good chat driving in from the airport. He was personally most agreeable and appreciative that I met him."

Then the ambassador got to the really good news: "Even more importantly, he went out of his way to express his general agreement with the lines of the administration's foreign policy...He several times stressed the facts of his approval of our policies...and particularly told me of his admiration for the secretary (Vance) and his appreciation of the job he is doing. He several times stressed the fact of his approval of our policies."

Could this be the same Kissinger who is so apocalyptic in private conversation about Carter's conduct of foreign policy? Kissinger explained to us he had merely informed the ambassador that "I always support the President's policy when I go to a foreign country. I didn't say whether I agree or disagree with it."

KENNEDY-MINOTT'S telegram next reported on "a good fill-in" given him by "our Swedish friends" of Kissinger's talks with Prime Minister Karen Soder:

"Again Dr. Kissinger gave support to the administration's foreign policy positions in general. On SALT, he was relatively optimistic, saying he expected an agreement to be initialed by about September."

Considering Kissinger's private dismay with SALT's current state, what the ambassador described as "optimistic" might have been only realistic.

What came next, however, could not be easily dismissed: "In the discussion of strategic affairs, one of the Swedish participants asked about the possible effect of the 600-kilometer limit of submarine-launched cruise missiles on Swedish and Nordic security. But Kissinger dismissed this as not a serious question."

Was he truly pooh-poohing the notorious 600-kilometer limit on sea-launched cruise missiles agreed to by Carter negotiators, a concession Kissinger as secretary of state refused and now as an ordinary citizen privately condemned?

NOT AT ALL. Kissinger explained to us. The former professor of California had got things mixed up.

The Swedish officials, displaying their national self-protection reflex, wondered whether 600-kilometer, submarine-launched missiles would be fired over Sweden en route to Russia.

Kissinger patiently told them not to worry, that a 600-kilometer missile would not be fired at Russia at all. He indicated to us that his dismay over the U.S. concession is undiminished.

"The only point I have to make," Kissinger repeated to us, "is that when I go to a foreign country I don't criticize my country's policy."

But Republicans wonder whether his praise, as cabled home by the grateful Kennedy-Minott, was a shade too abundant. Meantime, they have fingers crossed that he will end up with them on SALT and other great issues between now and the 1980 election.

HENRY J. TAYLOR:

The Cost Of War

THE UNIVERSITY of Illinois' Bureau of Economic Statistics has dealt with the cost of our wars. It finds they have cost us more than all the wealth our people have accumulated throughout the entire history of the United States since the Declaration of Independence in 1776.

The bureau estimates that our wars have cost $600 billion. All the homes in every state, all the farms, factories, shops, stores, railroads, utilities and other property in the United States is valued at about $598 billion.

In World War I the average cost of inflicting one casualty on the enemy—killing one enemy —was $21,000. But in World War II it cost $75,000 to inflict one casualty.

Our World War II population was moving toward 140 million. But, without calling on our full manpower, we had 12.3 million men under arms.

OFFICIAL ESTIMATES show that our World War II military costs alone were about $330 billion. We were in that war 1,347 fighting days. It cost about $250 million a day—most of which remains unpaid.

Our Vietnam war lasted longer than any other war. On Saturday, Feb. 3, 1967, the 500,000th American soldier arrived in Vietnam.

Another 35,000 American sailors and airmen were aboard our great U.S. 7th Fleet ships. More than 40,000 U.S. personnel (chiefly airmen) were in Thailand.

The Vietnam war meant more than 45,000 Americans killed in combat. It meant about $141 billion of U.S. spending. It brought unprecedented havoc to four primitive nations, contaminated American relations with friends and foes alike and sorely divided the U.S. public as a whole.

ALTHOUGH THE War Between the States ended 133 years ago, we have not yet stopped paying for it. Payments to and expenses for veterans exceeded all costs in the war years.

And in 1946 the Veteran's Administration reported it was still paying a pension to a decendant of a veteran of the War of 1812—which ended 164 years earlier.

All this does not take into consideration the human suffering in war. War is not a triumphant thing.

You find it difficult to see any pattern in life when you can see no selection in death, no choosing or weighing, no mercy in the choice, no blessing that we can understand.

YET STOCKHOLM International Research Institute Chairman Frank Barnaby says the world spends almost $1 million a minute on arms.

Currently, worldwide military expenditures total about $400 billion. This is 20 times more than the industrialized nations spend in helping poorer countries.

Since 1970, Third World arms trade has increased 15 percent annually. The United States, the Soviet Union, Britain and France supply 90 percent of the major weapons.

By the end of this century, at current rates, military expenditures will top $1 trillion. The United States last year on defense spent $98 billion vs. estimated $130 billion by the Soviet Union. These two countries account for more than half the world's military spending.

Tragically, the overall cost is immense.

JAY HARRIS:

The ERA Rerun...

THE THREE-RING Circus which has been underway in Illinois by ERA supporters, seeking to force approval of the controversial issue, says a lot about such "causes."

After being repeatedly rejected, and after calling in such "big guns" as President Carter and wife Rosalyn, and then Illinois Gov. James Thompson in the latest test, the ERA proponents still went down by a two-vote margin.

One would think the vociferous, militant supporters would give up. Not so. In a legislative maneuver, the final vote on last Thursday's showdown was not recorded, giving ERA backers perhaps one more shot.

If the measure, by some chance, should pass the Illinois House, it still would face almost certain defeat in the Senate, which would have to act before a July 1 adjournment.

WHY THE emphasis on Illinois? The answer is simple, and yet complex.

Illinois is the last major northern state which has held out against ERA. And the women's movement sees it as a key to getting the final three states of 38 needed for ratification.

Of course, four of the 35 which have approved the amendment have since voted to rescind their action.

And if Congress, by some colossal misinterpretation of the intent of the Constitution, should grant a new seven-year extension for ratification, even more states most likely would have "second thoughts."

As a matter of fact, Lubbock's own Joe Robbins, who as GOP representative to the State Legislature, backed ERA and in effect fought a rescinsion move, now tells us if Congress should grant an extension, he would favor giving Texas a chance to change its stand.

WE WILL GO into the details of his statement later, but it should come as no surprise.

Basically, the intent of such amendments has been that they be considered during a "contiguous" period of time in order that a "concensus" of what the various states and citizens may be thinking over a relatively similar period can be reached.

To extend the ratification time another seven years, as ERA proponents argue, and especially to do this without giving those states who have approved the proposal a chance to bring their thinking up to date, would be the most hypocritical kind of distortion.

It should be remembered that most amendments haven't even come close to taking four years, let alone seven for ratification.

REP. ROBBINS, who has been outspoken as well as controversial as a lawmaker, has taken a stand with which many in these parts will agree.

"I feel," he told us in a statement, "that a seven-year extension of the deadline for ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment would be unreasonable, inequitable and unwise.

"I still support the goal of full equality for American women. It also continues to be my view that a state which has once ratified an amendment is powerless to rescind that ratification.

"However, if Congress goes along with the backdoor attempt to win passage of ERA by extending the deadline for another seven years, it should be clearly stipulated that states' rights will be respected. This means that any state which has rescinded its vote to ratify the amendment should be allowed to let that decision stand. The same goes for any state that might want to reverse its pro-ERA vote in the future as a protest against the assault on fair play.

"If Congress is going to give more time for reconsideration by those states that have expressed themselves by turning down ratification—I will support any effort in Texas to reconsider our passage of ERA."

JOE'S STAND ISN'T calculated to make the diehard, win-it-anyway-we-can ERA crowd happy. But, it's recognition that somewhere in the game fair play also should be involved.

But, such thoughts to those pushing the "game plan" in Illinois and across the nation apparently fall on deaf ears.

Too, the issue has become involved in a whole raft of other things, including the political future of some key figures in a manner which borders on the assinine.

During the last go-round in Springfield, Illinois Gov. Thompson threw himself into the fray on the side of the ERA crowd with a frenzy that may cost him much more than just his stature as a leader in Illinois.

The governor has been prominently mentioned as a possible "darkhorse" contender for the 1980 GOP Presidential nomination. His support of the ERA alone might not prove fatal, but the manner in which he handled it could.

AFTER GAINING a delay in the vote, Gov. Thompson started calling key legislators in an attempt to sway them.

With a newsman looking on, he urgently told one GOP legislator on the Illinois House floor: "Do you understand what's at stake here? It's the end of me as the leader of the party..."

And to a legislator who was switching from a Yes vote to No: "Elmer? Elmer, if you go on we've got the 107. You voted for it before. Elmer, you can't get hurt here. You're not going to get hurt as badly as I'm going to get hurt. Well, you're letting me down, Elmer."

The governor said: "OK, that the end..." hanging up.

It may well be, not only for the ERA, but for those who insist on ramrodding unpopular legislation, unpopular taxes, unpopular foreign policy down the throats of the majority. Somewhere, "Equal Rights" means just that. For all the ordinary little people who don't have the pressure groups beating the drums for them. If not, then the "ordinary little people" may decide that Proposition 13 is an idea which may work in other areas as well as taxes.

DO YOU KNOW the one thing that shoppers most dislike about shopping in supermarkets? The numerous quick decisions they have to make therein. Or so says a merchandising expert who has made a study of the matter.

What these buyers prefer, it's thought, would be a home microprocessing memory bank on which they could compile their weekly shopping list at leisure, then simply dial up the market, press a button to order the whole shebang electronically, and sit back to wait for its delivery.

Police Arrest Suspects Tied To Motel Stickups

The old adage that you shouldn't make too many trips to the well apparently applied to two bandits here recently.

Lubbock police were notified about 3:45 a.m. Sunday that two men standing outside a room at a motel in the 1000-block of N. Avenue Q Drive had been forced to give up their wallets to a pair of bandits.

One of the victims, Murie Horacio of Corpus Christi said the two robbers ran west into an open field with the wallets, after one of the men allegedly pulled a .22-caliber pistol and demanded "all the money."

Just over two hours later, at 5:49 a.m., police received another report of a robbery at yet another motel — this one located at 501 Ave. Q.

Manager Howard Reuse, 60, said he had left the desk area and gone to his quarters when he heard the door chimes indicating someone had entered the lobby.

As he walked back to greet the "customer," Reuse said he was confronted by a ski-masked bandit who brandished a small pistol in his right hand.

Reuse said the robber tossed what looked like a plastic bag toward him and the 60-year-old manager said he also heard a "crack," as though a cap pistol had been fired.

"Man, give me the money," the nervous robber reportedly said to Reuse.

"Are you joking?" the manager wanted to know.

"I said give me the money," the bandit replied.

After relinquishing about $100 in change and his watch, Reuse said he was ordered to lie on the floor.

The bandit then left in an unknown direction, Reuse told police.

Four minutes later, at 5:53 a.m., police received a call from a man at a third motel, this one at 310 Ave. Q.

The caller told police a man was standing near the office area with a gun.

After police reportedly saw a car speeding east on 5th Street nearby, officers pursued.

The vehicle was stopped in the 1100-block of Avenue Q, police said, and the two occupants, aged 25 and 28, were arrested.

The men matched the general description of the alleged bandits in all three instances. The vehicle, in which they rode, also matched the description of a vehicle seen during the first incident.

Meanwhile, a 23-year-old Lubbock woman said she was raped sometime between 3 a.m. and 4:15 a.m. Sunday.

The victim told officers she had been waved down by two men about 3 a.m. As the trio reportedly discussed "an address," the woman said the men grabbed her and forced her into a car.

After driving her somewhere near the airport, one of the men reportedly raped her as the other pinned her arms. The second man reportedly also rifled the woman's pocketbook and took an estimated $530.

The victim said the men then returned her to the 200-block of 18th Street and released her.

David Spears of 2313 8th St. said someone broke into his home Saturday and took his television and stereo, valued together at $1,375.

Clyde Perkins of 4614 32nd St. said someone broke into his business at 1320 Ave. Q Saturday or Sunday and made off with several musical instruments, $150 cash and caused $150 damage to a cash register. Perkins estimated his loss at $2,435.

A television and stereo valued together at $800 reportedly was taken recently from Elizabeth Heaney's residence at 3900 Ursuline St.

Burglars reportedly ransacked Bertha Price's 3412 E. Colgate St. residence during the past week. Items taken included a television, a tape player, a $50 clothes bag, a .22-caliber weapon and several household items, including pictures on the walls. The loss was estimated at more than $1,020.

U.S. Troop Withdrawal Demanded

TOKYO (AP) — More than 200,000 North Koreans rallied Sunday in Pyongyang on the 28th anniversary of the start of the Korean War and demanded the withdrawal of U.S. troops from South Korea, the official North Korean news agency reported.

The agency report, monitored here, said the crowd gathered in the capital's Kim Il-sung Square, named for the North Korean president, and marched through major streets shouting slogans and carrying banners.

It said the demonstrators showed "the unshakable determination of our people to force the U.S. imperialists out of South Korea ... and reunify the country without fail."

The demonstrators shouted "Down with traitor Park Chung-hee," South Korea's president, the agency said.

An editorial in the official North Korea newspaper Rodong declared, "The basic obstacle to the reunification of our country is the U.S. imperialists' occupation of South Korea and their policy of aggression.

"Behind the signboard of the 'ground forces pullout,' the U.S. ruling quarters are reinforcing U.S. naval and air forces and the puppet army in South Korea, shipping in nuclear weapons and new type weapons."

Fighting in the Korean war ended with an armistice in 1953. North Korea has called for U.S.-North Korea talks — without South Korea — for a final peace agreement.

The United States has more than 20,000 combined forces in South Korea. Plans for a substantial withdrawal of U.S. troops were changed earlier this year by the Carter administration.

Rural Health Care System Gets Grant

The Sid W. Richardson Foundation of Fort Worth has presented a $25,000 grant to Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center to assist in the development of a Rural Health Care Delivery System now being established by the Tech School of Medicine.

To notify the school of the grant, Valleau Wilkie, Jr., executive vice president for the Richardson Foundation, said the purposes of the grant are to help provide sufficient staff for the project in its initial stages and lead the way for other funding agencies within the state that might develop an interest in the program.

"We believe that the program can provide a viable model for both rural health care delivery in areas seriously underserved and important training for family practice physicians," Wilkie said.

"This is concrete evidence of confidence in the concept of cooperation between academic institutions and local communities to solve this most critical problem. Hopefully support by the Sid W. Richardson Foundation will encourage projects," Richard A. Lockwood, vice president for the Tech Health Sciences Center, said in accepting the grant.

The first phase of Tech Medical School's Ruralh Health Care Delivery System began operating last fall at the Crosbyton Clinic in Crosbyton. It is a joint project of the medical school and the community.

The project will result in a network of care centers with centers with communications and transportation links that will serve a multi-county area. The area has been selected because a nucleus of care facilities exist which could effectively be augmented by Tech Medical School effort.

Bakke Decision To Be Broadcast

WASHINGTON (AP) — National Public Radio says it will broadcast the text of the entire Supreme Court decision in the Alan Bakke reverse-discrimination case beginning at noon EDT on the day the decision is released.

The Bakke case, in which a white man was refused admission to medical school while blacks with lower test scores were admitted, claims reverse discrimination through giving preference to blacks. The decision, expected any last 25 years.

"Quick, fragmentary reporting of a Supreme Court decision can often create an erroneous impression — and one that can last," said NPR President Frank Mankiewicz. "For that reason, we will make sure, by making available the full text of the opinion, that none of our listeners will be in doubt as to what the court has said."

Influence On Public Could Lead To '1984'

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the last in a series of articles prepared in cooperation with Purdue University).

1984

NEWS ITEM: The Central Intelligence Agency employed informants and agents to keep tabs on political activities on scores of campuses in the United States, according to recently released government documents. The CIA monitored demonstrations against its recruiters and the Vietnam War and also protests involving university issues such as special programs for black students and tuition increases.

• • •

A shove in the right direction could impose the nightmare conditions of "1984" on the American people.

Big Brother's tools are ready. Big Brother himself could emerge as a result of war or domestic upheaval. In a world fraught with international rivalry and terrorism, the impetus could come at any time.

In the late 20th century, there can be no insurance against catastrophe. No weapon can guarantee peace and no laws or police force can shield people from terrorism or oppressive government.

Some Purdue University faculty members believe the key to averting "1984" is in the way individual citizens react to difficulties.

In the 1930s the German people reacted to their difficulties by flocking to the swastika of Adolf Hitler, one of the models for Big Brother.

"The striking thing about the German situation was that the Nazis did not just appeal to lunatics and criminals. They appealed to good people and perverted them," observes Prof. Gordon Mork, a historian and authority on Europe.

"Historically speaking," Mork explains, "Germany was unique because Nazism didn't happen anywhere else. In principle, however, that same thing could occur under appropriate circumstances in any country. Even ours."

Two other Purdue faculty members who are authorities on human behavior feel that fear of crime and terrorism could provide the impetus toward an American fuhrer or Big Brother.

"We can prevent a lot of crimes if we are willing to give up certain rights," says Ronald Huff, a criminologist and assistant professor of sociology. He feels that "some people are willing to forfeit their rights because they are so afraid of crime."

Wallace Denton, professor of family studies, obseves, "I doubt that the spying eye of Big Brother would ever be imposed. It would come about in a subtle way — in other words, we'll ask for it indirectly. Things will change so gradually that we'll accept them."

"We're pliable and vulnerable to doing what we don't want to do," says Prof. Donald M. Hartsough, a clinical psychologist. "The evidence flies in the face of our belief that we can stand up to pressure."

The evidence he cites includes the prison camps of the Korean War where the Chinese brainwashed many of their American captives. He also mentions the results of psychological experiments in which subjects have been easily induced to obey authority figures. Subjects in many experiments have been willing to inflict severe pain on other persons just because the experimenter told them to do so.

Hartsough says there is no doubt that a ruthless, authoritarian government can force its citizens to obey and can promote the hero worship, war hysteria and other forms of "1984" behavior George Orwell described. He also foresees the possibility of a democratic nation slipping into totalitarianism.

Hartsough views TV advertising and programming as subtle pressures to conform to political and social ideas.

NEWS ITEMS: A convicted murderer, 15, sues the three TV networks, claiming they taught him to kill.

• • •

"The things people need to watch out for are insidious. Things we don't see as threats," Hartsough says. "We may get too soft. We may fail to maintain independent judgment and respect for those who form independent judgments."

Just as the prisoner in solitary confinement becomes more vulnerable to pressure and easier for his jailers to control, so the individual citizen becomes more easily led if he is alienated from his fellow human beings.

Hartsough asserts that "1984" depends on isolating individuals. And he views the difficulty of isolating Americans as the major obstacle to the takeover of America by a Big Brother.

"I don't think '1984' will come about — because individual couples, families and friends can be much closer, and they aren't going to let the state interfere," he says.

He cites opposition to the Vietnam War as evidence that Americans cannot be herded together.

Over the last 30 years social scientists have done a great deal of research and writing on personal relationships. Hartsough believes the research and writing is partly responsible for what he sees as greater ability of people to overcome isolation and alientation by building close relationships.

He explains that "freedom makes for solid, committed relationships. And that's the hope."

Strike Threat Persists For Texarkana Hospital

TEXARKANA (AP) — A threatened picket line did not materialize Sunday morning at Wadley Hospital here, but a union negotiator warned a strike was still possible.

"We felt the most economic impact we could put on the hospital is for our employees and members to report to work this morning," said Dale Magee of Communications Workers of America.

Magee said that by having all employees report to work the hospital would be put in an "economic squeeze" since revenues are down.

After the last meeting with hospital representatives ended Saturday night, Magee announced a strike would be called at 5 a.m.

Sunday he said Local 11271 would still strike if the hospital resumed admitting any patients other than emergency cases.

The 385-bed hospital had reduced its patient load to about 190 in anticipation of the strike, according to Charles Stewart, Wadley's public relations director.

"Mr. Dale Magee has told our hospital's consultants that there would be no strike at Wadley Hospital. Wadley will now resume admitting non-emergency patients and it will be business as usual," he said.

New negotiating sessions were not planned.

"To my knowledge, there are no meetings scheduled but our contract offer is still on the table," Stewart said.

REBELS NAB FAMILY

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Twenty heavily armed Moslem rebels kidnapped a family of nine after killing one family member, a militiaman, in a gunbattle in a southern Philippine hamlet last week, the Defense Ministry said Sunday. The victim was a member of the hamlet's civilian home defense force, officials said. The Moslem rebels have fought a six-year guerrilla war to win autonomy for 13 southern provinces.

Joan Little's Attorney Says Client Still Faces Harassment

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — The same harassment that Joan Little faced before her escape from prison last year is confronting her again, her lawyer says.

Jerry Paul, who successfully defended the 24-year-old black woman in her celebrated murder trial three years ago, said Miss Little still is treated differently and unfairly by prison officials.

Paul claimed in a recent interview that unfair treatment led to her escape last October. And even though her prison sentence could be lengthened because of her escape, she isn't sorry she ran. Paul said she's in the process now of dealing with the system, going through the prison process in airing her complaints.

Since being extradited from New York to the North Carolina Correctional Center for Women on June 9, Miss Little has filed eight complaints with prison officials. Most deal with her isolation from the rest of the prison population.

Miss Little was serving a 7-to-10-year prison term for breaking and entering when she escaped from prison last October. She was captured in New York in December.

Her attorneys, including activist lawyer William Kunstler, fought extradition, claiming on her behalf that her life would be endangered if she was forced to return to North Carolina.

Prison officials have refused to allow her to speak with reporters. However, Miss Little last week sent a copy of eight complaints to a weekly newspaper in Raleigh.

"I am filing this grievance because of the unnecessary harassment, treatment since my return to NCCW," Miss Little said in her complaint.

Miss Little complained about her isolation from other inmates, prison officials' insistence that she be handcuffed when taken across the prison grounds to the law library and that at one point she hadn't been allowed to call Paul.

Prison officials answered the complaints by saying Miss Little had to be isolated from other inmates until she had time to readjust to prison life.

Second Chapter Of 'Storybook' Unfolding

COURTING COUPLE — Philippe Junot, French businessman, tries to wave off a photographer at the Beach Club of Monte Carlo in September 1977 as he and Monaco's Princess Caroline walk together. The couple plan to wed June 28 at the palace in Monaco in a civil ceremony. A religious ceremony is scheduled to follow the next day in the palace chapel. (AP Laserphoto)

PARIS (AP) — She is 21. He is 38. She is of straitlaced Catholic upbringing. He is a playboy. She is a princess of Europe's oldest dynasty. He is a commoner.

Can Princess Caroline of Monaco find happiness with Philippe Junot of the Paris society circuit?

Her parents, by all accounts, are doubtful. It is common knowledge that there was quite a row behind the heavy oaken doors of the Monaco royal palace over Caroline's choice. Her father Prince Rainier III and mother Princess Grace, the former movie star Grace Kelly, wished she would pick someone closer to her age and less flamboyant of reputation.

But Caroline, a pretty young woman with a mind of her own, was insistent. And in ceremonies Wednesday and Thursday in the tiny principality nicked into France's Mediterranean coast, Princess Caroline Louise Marguerite Grimaldi will take an additional name: Junot.

"It is not chic," declared the French newspaper Le Matin, "but what a triumph for democracy."

Junot, an international financier and a ruggedly handsome man in the Gallic manner, has bought her a ring with a giant sapphire. But that is as far as extravagance goes in this wedding.

Perhaps reflecting the family's reluctance over the marriage, the ceremonies will be low-keyed compared with the sumptuous wedding of Rainier to Grace Kelly in April 1956.

The prince and the Hollywood actress took their vows in the Cathedral of Monaco under the gaze of 1,500 media people. Caroline's marriage — a civil service one day and a religious one the next — will be held in a tiny palace chapel accommodating 70 people.

When Rainier married Kelly, the world was captivated by the spectacle of European royalty — the Grimaldi reign was founded in 1297 — marrying Philadelphia's girl next door. The notion of Alfred Hitchcock's favorite leading lady ruling over a 375-acre country with just 4,500 Monegasque citizens and the famed Monte Carlo casino was like a fairy tale.

Ecevit Ends Official Visit With Russians

MOSCOW (AP) — Turkish Prime Minister Bulent Ecevit ended an official visit to the Soviet Union and left for home Sunday, proclaiming the opening of a "new stage" in relations between his country and Moscow, Tass reported.

The official Soviet news agency said Ecevit and his wife flew from Kiev, capital of the Soviet Ukraine, and were seen off by top Ukrainian officials.

The agency quoted him as saying his Moscow talks with President Leonid I. Brezhnev "mark a new stage in the development of Soviet-Turkish relations which will continue to develop on the basis of mutual confidence that is characteristic of the relations between our countries."

During the visit, the Turkish leader signed what Tass called a document of "good neighborliness and friendly cooperation."

After Thursday's Ecevit-Brezhnev meeting, Tass said the two leaders expressed the conviction that good relations between NATO member Turkey and the Soviet Union would help expand cooperation in Europe "on the basis of peaceful coexistence" between East and West.

Relations between the United States and Turkey have been strained since Congress cut off U.S. arms aid to the Ankara government in 1974 following the Turkish invasion of northern Cyprus. Ecevit visited Washington earlier this month and left with a pledge from President Carter to urgently seek a lifting of the embargo.

Diplomatic sources in the Turkish capital said earlier in the week that the pact with the Soviets would fall short of a more binding friendship and non-aggression agreement sought by the Kremlin.

Turkey and the Soviet Union share a mountainous 250-mile border and face each other across the Black Sea.

'BODY IS LIKE A MACHINE'

All That Running Does Serve Useful Purpose

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Men and women who have thought about or started a running or jogging program wonder what the medical benefits are. Are the tired muscles and sweat really worth it? Marathoner and doctor Art Mollen answers with a resounding YES, and explains the medical implications of a physically active versus a sedentary lifestyle in this last of a three-part series from his book, "Run For Your Life." Included are tips on setting up a healthy, but weight-reducing diet to suit your personal tastes, medical needs and running program.)

By DR. ART MOLLEN

Excerpted from the book "Run For Your Life" (c) 1978 by Arthur Mollen Steven Englund Published by Doubleday & Company, Inc.

So far, you have been propelled along in your running program on faith or hope. At some point, however, you are going to begin to wonder what, physiologically speaking, running does for you and how it does it. Every observer, from the most casual to the most rigorous and systematic, agrees that a daily running program, by lowering the pulse rate, blood pressure readings, and cholesterol levels of the runner, increases the efficiency of the cardiovascular (heart and blood) system and, thereby, insures longer, healthier lives.

Your body is like a machine. It needs energy to work. The more efficiently it burns up the energy availabale to it, the longer it will last and the more qualitatively it will "produce." The body's energy is measured in units called calories which come from the food we eat. The burning of these calories to produce energy requires oxygen, which is carried by the blood and pumped by the heart. As more work is done, more oxygen is required to burn the required extra calories. So you breathe harder to take in more oxygen.

The signs of hard-working lungs and hearts — shorter breaths, pounding heart, perspiration — were readily apparent to you 30 seconds into your first run. The muscles require oxygen to burn the calories needed to allow you to put one foot in front of the other. The lungs and heart work at an accelerated pace to provide that oxygen. Thus the thumping you feel in your chest and the gasping for breath. The perspiration is a sign that your body is rapidly heating up from the exertion and needs to be cooled — by the opening of the body's vents, its skin pores.

As you continue running, your heart beats faster. For people who are not used to running, however, the heart very quickly begins to lag in its task of supplying the body's oxygen needs. The heart of a beginner is simply not accustomed to working hard; as a result, although its rate of beats per minute increases, its effficiency does not increase — on the contrary, it diminishes somewhat. That is, each contraction of the heart muscle of an inexperienced runner pumps out far less blood into the system (hence, less oxygen for the muscles to burn) than one contraction of the heart of a physically fit person.

The question of the heart's efficiency in pumping, then, is a crucial gradient in all activity. The amount of blood passing through the heart in one minute is known as "cardiac output." For our purposes it is a less important measurement than the volume of blood the heart pumps with each contraction — the "stroke volume." This is the factor that has been shown time and again to be improvable by exercise.

A person who has followed a regular program of vigorous exercise has a larger stroke volume than one who has not. The fit person can do more work with less cardiac effort and less risk of cardiac shutdown due to overwork. That person also has a larger maximum oxygen consumption rates than the unfit; his cardiopulmonary system (heart and lungs) can take in and process larger amounts of oxygen per minute over a larger surface of the body than the system of an unfit person can.

Runners, through constant efforts to surpass yesterday's distance and pace — by challenging themselves on a regular basis — develop larger lung capacities, larger breathing capacities, larger hemoglobin (i.e., oxygen-carrying elements in the blood) capacities, and more extensive capillarization of active muscles than non-runners. Runners also carry considerably less body fat and less cholesterol than non-runners.

Physical inactivity permits the build-up of fatty deposits in your arteries — deposits called cholesterol plagues. It is not certain exactly what causes embolisms or occlusions or hardening of the arteries; but there is a great deal of evidence which indicates that a high level of cholesterol in the blood predisposes a person to heart trouble.

There is also a lot of evidence to connect cholesterol plague build-up with the speed of the blood's flow throughout the heart and the vascular system. The effect of increased and sustained vascular output — i.e., from daily oxygen-burning activity — is to obstruct and diminish plague buildup, as well as to reduce dramatically the cholesterol level in the blood.

The only sure and lasting means available to people to combat the cholesterol build-up process — which varies among people according to their genetic predispositions to it, but which can be slowed down for everyone — is not chemical or medical treatment, but the disciplined training of the heart through daily oxygen-burning workouts, of which the single best known form is running.

The cases of cardiac rehabilitation stand among the most dramatic illustrations of the positive transformations wrought by running. In case after case, people whose lives have been blighted by heart attacks, coronary artery congestion, and the like — people who could barely walk 10 paces without panting for breath — have, through jogging, rebuilt their cardiopulmonary capacity from ground zero to a degree of strength and efficiency far superior to what they were before their coronary event took place. It is not unknown, nor even terribly unusual, for ex-heart victims to become successful, even established long-distance runners and marathoners.

Nine out of 10 readers, although they may yearn to regain the lost athletic fitness of their youth, are, secretly, principally interested in running in order to lose weight. The great monkey on the back of American society turns out to be a tire around its middle: flab. No battle is more permanent, more pervasive, more persistently profitless than this one.

The bathroom mirror (or the full-length one in your bedroom) is often an even greater enemy than the bathroom scale. Men, for example, distribute their excess weight around a "center of gravity": hips, buttocks, and thighs. An "inch of pinch" in that area usually means about forty pounds of fat, an excess amount for most people since, depending on one's total body weight, the proportion of fat should not exceed 5-10 per cent.

A runnning program and your diet are closely related. In fact, these two fitness processes are inseparable, for as soon as you begin to care enough about your body and your health to begin to expend energy to maintain them, you will begin to think twice about the fuel (food) with which you stoke the furnaces.

Jogging is an excellent, probably the best, way of burning up calories; the average jogger burns up approximately 122 calories per mile. A one-mile jog is equivalent, in calorie expenditure, to riding a bike three miles, playing singles tennis for 20 minutes, or swimming for 10 straight minutes. Sports, like tennis, and exercises, like swimming and weight lifting, are fine for wind, muscle tone, and the development of the strength and pumping functions of the heart. But calorie burn-up only occurs in the process of playing, stroking, lifting — not during the intermittent rest periods that are endemic to these forms of exercise.

For those of you who are still somewhat unsure of the relationship of your body weight to dieting, etc., I will give you a rule of thumb which should prove useful until you can develop your own sense of proportions. If you want to maintain your weight at a particular level, you multiply that weight by 15, and that will give you the amount of calories you will need to ingest each day. Thus, a 120-pound woman who is satisfied with her weight will need to ingest, 1,800 calories a day to maintain it. If she thinks that she would look and feel better at, say, 110 pounds, she must then reduce her calorie intake by 150 (to 1,650). If she cuts out the danish pastry from her coffee break and runs or jogs three miles a day, she will have a 500-calorie deficit daily. At the end of one week she will have lost one pound; 10 weeks later she will be at the desired weight.

I generally suggest that people who want to lose weight by running and dieting should cut their caloric intake by 500 per day. But not the first day. That is too big a morsel to digest. You should begin with 100 or 200 calories a day, slowly working your way toward the 500 level. The changes in eating must be as gradual as the increases in running minutes; otherwise you will encourage discouragement.

By knowing the caloric expenditure of miles jogged, and keeping in mind your caloric intake of food, you can calculate the rate at which you will lose poundage. Don't rush yourself and don't make unrealistic demands on your will power. In your anxiety to lose weight, don't accelerate your daily amounts of jogging beyond a reasonable and enjoyable number of miles. Trust to the process of the running: it has a logic of its own. It will invade your psyche in its own good time, and you will only obstruct and decelerate this process if you get too hung up about weight loss.

Running, by changing your perspective on your life and your self, provides the incentive to improve your eating habits and maintain your new shape and condition. Will power is a necessary adjunct to continued running and decreased caloric intake, but it too is out of shape. Your will power needs the conditioning of a regular running program as much as your muscles, lungs, heart, and waistline do.

Getting hooked on running isn't hard. Ten minutes a day — approximately one mile — is all it takes. It is not enough by itself to give you total fitness, but it is enough to break you out of the bind of your current inertia, to give you a foretaste of the physical and psychological benefits of running, and to make your body and mind crave larger doses.

The greater paradox of this exercise is that the great demands made in a regular way by daily running are paid back a hundredfold in increased efficiency, stamina, strength. Running may take your all, but it gives back your all with compound interest: better frame of mind, improved muscle tone, greater flexibility, and, above all, heightened endurance.

South Yemen Denies Plotting Death Of North Yemen Leader

ADEN, South Yemen (AP) — South Yemen said Sunday it had nothing to do with the assassination of North Yemen President Ahmed al Ghashmi and called the killing a "dirty attempt" to wreck hopes to unify the two feuding Arab neighbors.

Ghashmi, 39, was killed Saturday in the North Yemeni capital of San'a when a bomb in the briefcase of a diplomat from South Yemen exploded. The South Yemeni envoy also was killed.

North Yemen immediately blamed South Yemen's Marxist government for the killing and severed diplomatic relations with its southern neighbor. Ghashmi was the second North Yemeni president assassinated in eight months.

South Yemen issued a statement saying it "strongly condemns and denies any kind of blame for this assassination which is aimed at pushing the Yemeni people into war planned by the imperialists."

It said "subversive elements ... working against the hopes, liberty, unity and progress of the Yemeni people" were responsible for the killing.

Premier Ali Nasser Mohammed of South Yemen sent a cable of condolence to his North Yemeni counterpart, Abdul Azia Abdul Ghani, expressing "great sorrow" over the killing. But Ghani said, "The crime was perpetrated by hands known for their perfidy and blasphemy," and he denounced the Soviet-backed South Yemen regime for "embracing the ideology that offends moral values and denies the existence of Allah."

North and South Yemen are strategically located at the southwestern tip of the Saudi Arabian Peninsula and share control of the eastern side of the mouth of the Red Sea. North Yemen has a background as a conservative monarchy and military-ruled nation, and South Yemen has a Marxist military leadership. They have been at odds over ideology for years and nothing has come of a move that began in 1972 to unify the two countries.

North Yemen is turning increasingly toward the West for support and is closely allied with the conservative monarchy in Saudi Arabia, its northern neighbor. South Yemen, a former British colony, draws most of its aid from the Soviet-led Communist bloc.

Saudi Arabia condemned the Ghashmi assassination as an "act of cowardice" and said it would "stand firm on the side of the (North) Yemeni people to protect the Islamic belief, independence and economic growth.

"We shall never permit foreign intervention to achieve any goals in that glorious Moslem country," Saudi radio said.

It said the Saudi royal court issued a statement blaming the killing on "criminals who sold out their religion and country to foreign power with the aim of dividing the Arab world."

San'a radio said a state funeral would be held Monday for Ghashmi and that he would be buried in the "martyrs' cemetery" on the outskirts of the capital. Black-rimmed newspapers in San'a eulogized Ghashmi as a "faithful son of Yemen, a struggler for freedom and economic development and a true Moslem leader."

Ghashmi was the eighth North Yemeni leader to die since the seven-year civil war that erupted after the overthrow of the monarchy in 1962. Ghashmi's predecessor, Ibrahim al Hamdi, was slain last October. His assassins were never identified.

Ghashmi became president only two months ago after serving as head of the ruling council that took over after the assassination of Hamdi, who built a close alignment with Saudi Arabia and increased cooperation with the United States.

The Iraqi News Agency said Ghani summoned foreign diplomats to the presidential palace and told them South Yemeni President Salim Robaye Ali had told Ghashmi his envoy would be carrying a list of North Yemeni refugees and the diplomat was received on that assumption.

Fish Fossil May Be World's Oldest

WASHINGTON (AP) — A U.S. Geological Survey scientist has discovered the fossil remains of what is believed to be the world's oldest fish, a species thought to have existed some 510 million years ago.

The fish, named Anatolepis, is some 40 million years older than the previously oldest known vertebrates.

The fossil remains of the primitive fish were discovered in Crook County, Wyo., the survey said.

Dr. John E. Repetski, a survey paleontologist, said the fish probably was from one to three inches long and lacked moveable jaws.

It "probably swam clumsily along the sea floor, grubbing in the muds for food," he said.

Fish lacking moveable jaws are not unknown. The lamprey eel, wich sucks blood out of fish, is one example of this type of fish.

The fossil remains were found "in rocks of undoubted marine origin, so that the previously widely held theory that the earliest vertebrates originted in freshwater habitats is dealt a serious blow," Repetski said.

The fossil remains were discovered last summer as part of a geological survey probe in northeastern Wyoming.

CLEMENTS AIRS VIEWS

DALLAS (AP) — Bill Clements, Republican candidate for governor, predicted Saturday that if Democrat John Hill is elected governor he will spend full time getting President Carter re-elected in 1980. "It is time to send Mr. Carter a message," Clements told the Texas Association of Professional Engineers. "Texans do not want him again in 1980, and we do not want Mr. Hill in 1978."

Trap Set For Seagulls

WATERVILLE, Maine (AP) — Airport employees have bought two pistols and a supply of noisy, but harmless, explosives to scare off the seagulls that clog the runway of the Waterville Municipal Airport.

The city decided to harass the gulls after federal aviation safety experts warned airport officials that they had to take measures to stop the gulls from interfering with small planes landing and taking off at the airport.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

I got a theory as to why there is so much unrest and violence in the world.

No one can afford to be by themselves anymore. Think about it. We're all being thrown together because the cost of being alone is so prohibitive.

Apartment dwellers are doubling up with roommates they don't even know. Elderly people are being forced to live with strangers. Guided vacation tours are cheaper by the busload. Car pools attract people who have only one thing in common...mobility to anywhere. There are crowds at 34,000 feet in the air and on the ocean floor.

I've been seated in restaurants with people I don't know, matched with two unknowns in doubles for tennis, and have even gone to groups with my encounters. Private rooms in the hospital are hard to come by.

Never do I get the feeling of fighting my way out of a White Sale more than when I am in New York City. Nothing moves in New York until it is filled to capacity — elevators, cabs, buses. They turn in your order for food only after the entire table has ordered. They take your luggage to your room only when the entire cart is filled in the lobby. They don't even get your car until there are two or three other orders to fill.

Where then does a person go if they want a moment to themselves just to reflect, perchance to dream.

A clean movie. You don't know what colace is until you're sitting there in a dark theater surrounded by sound and a few well-behaved children accompanied by their PG parents.

An evening with slides of your trip to Williamsburg, showing such provocative teasers as mother coming from a public restroom with toilet tissue on her shoe and daddy with his head and arms through the holes of a stockade. You will never feel so alone.

A dinner table following a meal. Just say, "Who's on for dishes?" and it becomes the last Bastille of solitude especially when there is a table of dirty dishes to be washed and dried.

Need time to talk to yourself and meditate? Go to a tennis court in a new pair of tennis shoes, a new racket and announce you are playing tennis for the first time. You will think you're the last man or woman on the face of the earth!

A friend of mine once told me the loneliest spot in the world was in a limousine Cadillac with tinted glass, by the side of the road with a flat tire. I can't relate to that.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann: I have a friend who in her younger years once told me how much she loved her little nephew and how adorable he was. She confided that when she was alone with the child she would spank him or give him a little punch to make him cry. Then she'd comfort him and love him up. She mentioned that she also did this to other young children.

My friend (now 23) is a warm-hearted person who loves children. She asked if I thought something might be wrong with her because she is doing the same thing to her baby. She confessed that she gets a kick out of making him cry by inflicting pain and then derives great pleasure from comforting him. Her question was, "Do you think something is wrong with me?" I couldn't give her an answer. Can you, Ann? — S.B.B.

Dear S.B.B.: Yes. Something is wrong with her. She has a geranium in her cranium.

Some people have the same problem — only they use words as weapons.

When a mother inflicts physical pain on her child just so he will cry and then "loves him up," she is really trying to prove she can get the child to love her no matter how she treats him. That's pretty sick.

Dear Ann Landers: I'll bet you're going to get plenty of letters complaining about your reply to the cop in Santa Barbara. He's the one who complained about being interrupted on his lunch hour by people who saw him in uniform and just expected him to serve them 24 hours a day. When the cop asked why the public assumes they have a right to expect this, your insensitive reply was, "Maybe it's because his salary is paid by tax dollars."

You are paid by newspaper dollars. Does that mean any person who reads your column in the paper is privileged to come up to you on the street and ask your advice about a miserable mother-in-law or a drunken husband?

My husband is a naval officer, also paid by tax dollars, but this doesn't mean he has to serve the public every waking moment. Why don't YOU wake up and smell the coffee? — Privacy Is A Necessity, Not A Luxury

Dear Privacy: I did get a load of letters about my comment to the cop in Santa Barbara and I'd like to set the record straight.

I do not believe that just because a person is paid by tax dollars he should be expected to serve the public 24 hours a day. SOME people do think so, however — and THEY are the ones who interrupt police officers in restaurants and give postmen boxes to take to the post office. My comment was by way of explanation — not a statement of my personal views.

The raft of angry letters once again proves that no matter how you say it — somebody is sure to misunderstand.

Dear Ann: A friend and I just got our driving permits. We had an argument on the proper way to place one's hands on the steering wheel for maximum control of the vehicle. This may seem like a dumb thing to argue about, but we'd like a reply. — A And D

Dear A and D: Pretend the steering wheel is a clock. Place your hands on the wheel so the clock says 10 minutes past 10. Got it?

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY DR. GEORGE C. THOSTESON

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please explain what happens to tissue in the case of frostbite, especially the toes. How can I get relief from the itching and swelling? Just keeping my feet warm doesn't seem to help, as the heat seems as comfortable as the cold. I have been bothered with this for years. My doctor just tells me to keep my feet warm. — M.B.

Frostbite as a topic may seem a bit out of season now, but the aftermath of true frostbite respects no season. The tissue damage can be quite complex and leave symptoms that linger for many years.

Frostbite cases have begun making appearances in unusual areas in recent years, for example, the "sunbelt" regions, which have had uncharacteristic weather in recent winters.

The chief effects of frostbite are the lingering damage (narrowing) of the tiny blood vessels in the area, loss of nerve function, even muscle damage. In severe frostbite actual ice crystals form outside the cells. These, of course, disappear, but the damage may persist and cause the itching and swelling, even the pain you report. The loss of nerve function is the chief reason why extremes of heat should never be used on a frostbitten section. The area has lost its ability to sense dangerous heat.

The advice to keep your feet warm is appropriate. But it is also important to keep them dry, especially in cold weather. Coldness and dampness are tough on the post-frostbite victim. If there is severe swelling or other dramatic changes in the skin you should see a doctor. Other things can be done. Drugs, including alcohol, may be some help. Physical therapy in the form of whirlpool baths may help perk up muscle and blood vessel tone.

In extreme cases sympathectomy is done. This is the severing of nerves supplying the area to allow the vessels to expand. However, if there is already considerable damage to nerves locally this can be more harmful than beneficial. You might have your doctor refer you to a neurologist to see if the procedure is practical in your case.

• • •

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Everyone says that blood thins out when you live in a warm climate, and when the weather gets cold a person notices this and gets cold easily. I think there is another explanation. What exactly is a blood thinner? Can you enlighten me? — H.E.L.

If anything, blood tends to "thicken" in hot weather, due to increased loss of body liquid in perspiration. Conversely, and for the opposite reason, it might tend to be thinner in cold weather.

The normal body adjusts to either condition and the "thickness or thinness" of blood is a rather meaningless term. A drink of water now and then is all the body requires to keep blood in a healthy balance between "thickness and thinness." The term blood thinner is used if a person is on a medication called an "anticoagulant," which causes the blood to clot less easily.

A feeling of coldness in the winter can be due to a low metabolism, a thin layer of body fat, inadequate protection from clothing, or anemia. Living at a high altitude might cause some "thickening" of the blood. A condition called polycythemia (overproduction of red cells) can likewise cause blood to be "thicker."

Otherwise, blood consistency remains pretty constant from season to season and has no effect on how cold a person feels.

• • •

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 58. When I started menopause, my doctor gave me hormones for menopause symptoms. I stopped them after a while. The last few months my legs have started bothering me again. Should I take the hormone medicine again? — Mrs. L.C.

For most post-menopausal women the only really useful effect of hormone medicine is relief of hot flashes or vaginal dryness. Most other symptoms are unrelated to the menopause and are psychological or of the type not helped by hormones.

• • •

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Does the use of condoms during intercourse keep one from getting sex diseases? — M.A.

It certainly does. Next to abstinence, condom use is probably the single most effective measure the sexually active male can take — for his own and his partner's protection.

• • •

Birth control is a highly relevant topic in today's society. Find out what you should know about it in Dr. Thosteson's easy to read booklet, "The Twelve Birth Control Methods." For a copy write to Dr. Thosteson, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611, enclosing a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope and 25 cents.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR FOLKS:

This is for anyone who has a small yard or patio...and wants a fish pond.

You probably think all you have to do is go buy a bag of cement mixture and then dig a hole, mix the "store bought" stuff with some water and line the hole with the mixture.

'Don't! Please don't!'

I tried and it darn sure doesn't work. It cracks. I was told I let my mixture dry too fast. But they never told me why it did and how to prevent it.

Now I've learned. And it was the hard way. If you will take notice when they build a highway they usually cover the concrete with plastic...Guess it dries too gol durn fast?

First I dug my hole. It was hard because the deeper I dug the drier the ground got...

Then I happened to think of foil! Why? I don't know but once in a while this old brain of mine comes up with something...

So I got out a box of foil and lined the hole with this magic stuff thinking that at least it would hold the moisture in the concrete mixture until it dried s-l-o-w-l-y and so wouldn't crack.

By golly and by gory it worked!

So my advice to you is: Anytime you dig a hole and try to make a small fish pond (or whatever), line it with foil before you put your cement mixture in.

Keeps the dry earth from dehydrating the concrete too fast. I also suggest that you wear plastic gloves of some kind when you do any job of this kind. Sometimes this (true) can burn your skin.

I leave you with a last hint for today. Anytime you dig a hole for a little or a big fish pond — which seems to be all the rage nowadays — make one end deeper than the other so that you can clean the lower end out easily. All the dust, etc. seems to settle in that lower end and it is far easier to clean.

I send my love to you and yours to the nth degree! — Heloise

• • •

DEAR HELOISE:

Here is an idea for little girls who rip a hole in the knee of their pants.

Place a cookie cutter on a piece of material and cut out the design.

Sew or zig-zag (if you have a modern machine) the patch over the hole.

These patches really look cute and girls love them! — J. Bess

• • •

DEAR HELOISE:

The other day at the office I accidentally ran a ball point pen across my knee and got marks on the pale pink slacks I was wearing.

I can't take full credit for this but I want to pass it along to others who might wonder how to remove ball point pen marks from clothing.

If the material is washable, just spray the area very well with hair spray.

The mark will disappear right before your eyes. — Ald

If your brand of hair spray doesn't do the job, try alcohol. It works too. The pre-wash sprays that are on the market today are also good for removing ball point pen marks. — Heloise

Concorde SST Jacket Is Newest 'In' Fashion Status Symbol, Fad

By JOHN MOODY
UPI Men's Fashion Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Two years ago, almost every store in the country was carrying a shiny silver-colored jacket with the word "Porsche" marching boldly down the sleeve and the never-ending American love affair with speed and fast cars had found a new form of expression.

But fads die quickly in on-the-move America. This year the new "in" jacket venerates the fastest-ever mode of transporation — the Concorde SST, that needle-nosed sleek streak that crosses the Atlantic at twice the speed of sound.

The supersonic airplane aroused a lot of emotions before it finally landed in New York. But now, British Airways and Air France, who operate the planes, think tempers have cooled enough to try to cash in on the aircraft's uniqueness.

Their first attempt at Concorde merchandising is the gunmetal gray-colored flight jacket designed by Bruce Kay, who, coincidentally, also gave us the Porsche jacket.

With a retail price of $85, the Concorde jacket isn't likely to become as common a sight as Kay's first design creation, and that's the way he wants it.

"It's a status symbol jacket. That's what I'm selling it as," he said in a recent interview near his Greenwich Village studio.

"It's being sold only in four stores — Bloomingdale's, Saks Fifth Avenue, Nieman Marcus and I. Magnin — and a few boutiques."

The construction of the jacket certainly isn't ordinary. "It's aluminized rip-stop nylon. That's nylon that has been suspended in a vacuum and shot with aluminum," Kay explained. "The lining is a lightweight cotton blend."

But what he hopes will sell the garment are the colorful patches that proclaim the names of the airlines, and gimmicks like snap pilot pockets and the detachable inner "cockpit pouch."

Since hitting the market last fall, Kay says he's sold about 15,000 jackets in the U.S. and Britain. He got a publicity boost when big names like Jackie Onassis, actreesses Goldie Hawn, Jaclyn Smith and Faye Dunaway and songstress Diana Ross wore the jackets at the chic spots they patronize.

He's also given one of the jackets to each member of the British Airways and Air France Concorde crews and the 100 pilots who fly the bird.

Opening lead: ♥ 5

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Oswald: "Some years ago the late Walter Wyman of Boston wrote a series of articles on high-card plays. Some were examples of correct declarer play, but many more showed defenders finding ways to mislead declarer."

Alan: "Here is a good example of a king play or should I say a non-king play."

Oswald: "Declarer won the heart lead with his king and studied the hand. He could count eight tricks and could choose a diamond or spade finesse for the ninth. Which should he take? He finally decided to go to dummy, lead the queen of spades, rise with the ace and work on the club if East's king did not appear."

Alan: "This gave East a chance to do some thinking on his own. At trick two South led a club to dummy's jack. West played the eight. Then came that queen of spades lead. East ducked quickly. Declarer rose with the ace, cashed his clubs and finally tried the diamond finesse to go down two tricks."

Oswald: "East had figured out declarer's plan and countered it by a brilliant non-king play."

Houdini Influences Unique Sweet Milk Pudding Recipe

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

You may have heard your parents or grandparents talk about the celebrated magician and escape artist Harry Houdini.

He was the man who, during the first quarter of this century, dazzled theater audiences with his sleight of hand and gained worldwide fame by performing sensational, dangerous, unique feats. Two of the latter: escaping from sealed coffins; freeing himself from police handcuffs under a river's ice-covered waters.

As a writer in the 1940s said, "The great Houdini had the flexibility of an eel, the lives of a cat and a bizarre genius that enabled him to sneer at fetters."

Houdini died in the mid-1920s, but in the past couple of years several new books devoted to his art, life and mind have introduced him to a new generation.

Collectors of "magic" memorabilia, as well as cooks, may be interested to know that Houdini contributed a recipe for one of his favorite dishes to a 1916 cookbook. It is for a dessert because, as he acknowledged, "I happen to have a weakness for sweets." After I updated the recipe, his dessert became a favorite at my house.

Interestingly enough, the dish Houdini favored is the sort of soft, sweet "milk" pudding that many of us were fed in childhood. But his pudding isn't an ordinary milk pudding. As he said in the footnote to the recipe, "This one you will not find in any other book." It's not surprising that Houdini would take pride in having a unique recipe.

Perhaps it came from his wife who, according to my friend and neighbor, Charles "Chuck" Verral, knew good food. Chuck tells me that some years after Houdini's death, his widow ran a restaurant in New York City's theater district. The Houdinis had known many theater people and they, along with publishing people like Chuck, used to lunch there. When I asked Chuck what dishes Mrs. Houdini served, he said he couldn't remember any particular ones, but all her food was the fine tearoom variety which, alas, is no more. Prodded to recall just one item on Mrs. Houdini's menu, Chuck immediately answered, "Scrambled illusions!"

BREAD-AND-BUTTER CUSTARD A LA HOUDINI

4 thin slices homestyle bread
Soft butter
1 qt. milk
6 large eggs
1 cup sugar
1 tsp. vanilla
Nutmeg, ground or freshly grated

Trim crusts from bread; lightly butter one side of each. Place, buttered side up, in a single layer in a square glass baking dish (8 by 8 by 2 inches). Scald milk by heating until bubbles appear around the edge. In a large bowl, slightly beat the eggs; add the sugar and vanilla and beat just until blended. Gradually and gently beat in the scalding-hot milk; strain over the bread — the custard mixture will look foamy. Sprinkle generously with nutmeg. Place in the center of a large aluminum roasting pan (17 by 11 by 2 inches). Pour enough hot tap water into the pan to come up as high as the pudding mixture in the dish. Bake in a preheated 325-degree oven until a silver or stainless-steel knife inserted in the center comes out clean — 40 minutes. Chill. Makes 8 servings.

Note: After this pudding was chilled, we spread it with homemade, pureed strawberry preserves flavored with kirsch. The light color of the preserves made the pudding look extremely pretty and added to the flavor. — C.B.

"That was in 1906, and my husband promised to take me on a honeymoon trip around the world even if it took him 100 years to save up enough money for the voyage. Maybe we'll both make it by 2006."

New Soap Opera Promotes Birth Control

By CAROL COOK

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — In a scene from a new Mexican soap opera, "Come With Me," an abusive, typically macho husband named Federico is berating his 27-year-old wife Victoria, mother of their five children.

At one point Victoria breaks into tears. "I don't want to be like your mother," she wails. "I want to live well. I don't want to have any more children!"

A few days later, Victoria consults a doctor, who tells her that "five children is more than enough," and warns that too many pregnancies in quick succession can cause cancer.

The soap opera, which is televised nationally to nine million viewers five days a week, is produced by the Ministry of the Interior and is designed especially to promote the government's family planning program.

"It's a typical soap opera, with the good guys and the bad guys. The good ones practice family planning, the bad ones don't," said Dr. Jorge Martinez Manautou, executive coordinator of the National Family Planning Program.

Martinez Manautou said the government will make increasing use of radio and television in its drive to reduce Mexico's annual population growth from an estimated 3.2 percent to 2.5 percent by 1982 and to one per cent by the year 2000. A radio soap opera is being planned to bring the contraceptive message home in rural areas.

But he admits "it will take almost a miracle" to achieve the target growth rates.

If the goals are met, the population will increase from about 64 million today to 100 million by the end of the century, according to Martinez Manautou. "But if we fail, the population will be 135 million — that's a big difference," he said.

The government believes Mexico's population growth rate, which had been running at 3.6 per cent, has dipped to 3.2 per cent. If the figure is correct, it means impressive results for the family planning scheme begun in 1974.

About 918,000 women joined government sponsored birth control plans in 1977, added to 1.3 million already in such programs and one million practicing contraception under the care of private physicians.

The program aims to have 8.6 million women in official birth control programs by 1982, and is turning its attention to rural areas, where medical care is scant and contraception almost non-existent.

The government also wants to shift some of the responsibility for family planning to men, promoting condoms and making vasectomy, available for those who want it.

Recent studies show that oral contraceptives are the method of choice for 44 per cent of couples, and the I.U.D. for 41 per cent. Condoms and spermicides account for only four percent.

An organization known as the Progrem for the Introduction and Adaptation of Contraceptive Technology is doing product studies of condoms to determine their acceptability in rural areas and is developing a picture instruction sheet on how to use them.

PIACT, which has grants from the Ford and Rockefeller Foundations, the World Health Organization, and the U.N. Fund for Population Activities, also is working on a pamphlet to teach use of "the pill" to illiterate peasant women. A spokesman for PIACT said he expects the population growth rate to accelerate downward rapidly.

"Mexico is a case of the people being ahead of the government on family planning. They were receptive to it when the government started it. There are substantial groups willing to practice contraception, but they have to have the methods easily available," he said.

Highlights Reveal Royal Personality

By PAUL STEINER

NEW YORK (WNS) — Friday, June 2, was the 25th anniversary of the coronation of Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II. Here are some highlights and sidelights about the life and personality of this remarkable woman:

When she visited New York City in July 1976 she shopped at Bloomingdale's, watched a fashion show there, was gifted with a 19th century Sioux pipe.

At a White House dinner in her honor, British-born Bob Hope entertained — at her specific request — and among the guests was Telly Savalas, star of "Kojak" — Queen Elizabeth's favorite TV show.

President Ford started to waltz with Elizabeth; both seemed surprised when then-Vice President Nelson Rockefeller cut in halfway through the number.

Her next task: to open the Olympic Games in Montreal where daughter Anne competed as a member of Britain's equestrian team. (A horsewoman of international class, Elizabeth could have done equally well as a competitive rider as Anne had she been able to follow a professional career, experts say.)

Jacqueline Kennedy-Onassis (then still Bouvier) covered Elizabeth's coronation for a Washington, D.C. newspaper as a beginning "inquiring photographer." (Making the crossing by boat, Jackie is said to have come up with the kind of state room gossip she eventually had to put up with.)

Painter-journalist Fleur Cowes, creator of the short-lived magazine, "Flair," attended the coronation officially as the U.S. ambassador, together with Gen. George C. Marshall, as President Eisenhower's personal representative.

"It was Clare Booth Luce's idea that I should go," Fleur recalls in her autobiography, "Friends and Memories" (Morrow). Ike agreed, appointed her.

Elizabeth's magnificent coronation ceremony was the first that could be viewed — via TV — by other than those privileged to be in Westminster Abbey.

In 1966, Elizabeth extended the first public recognition of the duchess of Windsor by the Sovereign of England, according to Frances Donaldson's "Edward III" (Ballantine) biography. The duchess was then also seen on TV, bowing to Elizabeth, but not curtseying to her. (Since childhood, Edward had always been "Lilibet's" favorite uncle.)

LeRoy Neiman, famous artist of the Hammer-Knoedler Galleries in New York, did a colorful silkscreen of Elizabeth leading her horse at Ascot, which sells for about $1,500. He told me that he enjoys sketching her at Ascot, where, in the early morning hours, coming from nearby Windsor, she rides the very course on which the famous race is run.

Neiman also recalled that when Elizabeth visited Chicago in the late 1950's she stopped at a certain private home and admired and discussed only a single art work there: Neiman's own sketch, "Ladies of the Hunt," depicting four generations of equestriennes, each in the typical riding habit of her period. (It now hangs in the London home of a Playboy executive.)

In his monumental biography, "Majesty," (Harcourt, Brace, Jovanovitch) Robert Lacey writes: "You are not supposed to shake hands with her. She shakes hands with you. Etiquette prescribes a special way of extending your hand limply to be grasped by hers...it is not polite for you to grasp back...but these days people do tend to squeeze."

Her autograph is much rarer than that of Elizabeth I, (1533-1603) dealer Charles Hamilton assured me. "Occasionally I get to auction off one of her personally signed Christmas cards. Anyone who sells her card is probably off her Christmas list for good," he said.

Rose Kennedy in "Times to Remember" (Doubleday-Bantam) recalls that her youngest children, Bobby and Jean, "were about the ages of Elizabeth and Margaret, and their parents and I could compare notes and agree that these were remarkably interesting ages in child development." (Joseph Kennedy was U.S. ambassador to Britain at the time.)

In 1953, Adlai Stevenson was presented to the queen and was invited to her box at Ascot, recalls John B. Martin in "Adlai Stevenson and the World" (Doubleday). He quotes Adlai: "The Queen invited us to tea between races. She must have asked me would I like something, and, I said yes, a glass of milk."

In the 1950s she developed a stud farm for Labrador dogs where she bred and trained them herself to develop a strain of gun dog that carried off high canine honors.

There are Elizabethan souvenirs aplenty, especially in this festive year.

Famed doll maker Peggy Nisbett introduced her Elizabethan dolls at the American Toy Fair, Hotel Americana. The Queen Doll was dressed in a ballroom gown and supported by Royal Court figures, all in appropriate robes. For the first time permission was granted to portray the Royal Herald, resplendent in gold, scarlet, blue.

British Virgin Islands issued a $100 gold coin, struck by the Franklin Mint. Its 25-sided shape reflects the significance of the 25th anniversary.

Most of all, special postage stamps will carry the anniversary message all over the globe.

The Maldives show fragments from the gold-embroidered cape worn by the dean of Westminster during the coronation, St. Lucia shows ceremonial dress of the queen's footman, state trumpeteer, postillion, horse master. Gibraltar features five royal residences, Antiuga depicts the queen with Phillip and the archbishop, Isle of Man's stamp shows the queen with "Celtic knotwork border," British Virgin Islands portrays the queen and the great iguana and Jersey, Guernsey, St. Vincent and Lundy have equally intriguing designs.

Elizabethan items have been collected since Elizabeth became first in line to the throne. Plates, cards, spoons, mugs, etc. with her image are detailed in "The Kovel's Complete Antique Price List" (Crown), along with other famous queens.

Personnel Experts Supply Job Hunting Suggestions

By BETTY YARMON
Women's News Service

NEW YORK (WNS) — How can I get my first job?

This is the time of year when thousands of young people, seniors in high school or college, begin to wonder how that crucial question will be answered for them.

And many of them who already have started the search by now feel caught up in that vicious circle that is expressed in words like these: "Every place I go for a job, they tell me I have no experience, and that without experience they can't hire me. But when I ask how can I get experience if no one will hire me, they just shrug and shake their head."

Here are a few suggestions on how to break that vicious circle, based on discussions with personnel experts, economists — and just plain sensible citizens:

1. Offer to do volunteer work. That can serve two useful purposes. First, it can give you experience that may qualify you for a paying job, particularly if you are careful to make certain that the volunteer work is of the same type found in for-pay employment. Second, volunteer work often can place you in a position to meet prominent persons in the business community, hopefully who will be so impressed with your performance that they may want you to come to work for them.

2. Accept any job offered, even if at a level below what seems appropriate for someone with your training and qualifications. And if possible, try to get an assignment near the main office or headquarters. In this way, assuming you keep your eyes and ears open, you may learn about openings more in keeping with your talents — openings that may never be known to those in the field, away from headquarters.

3. Try to work as soon as possible and as often as possible — part-time while at school, during summer vacations and holidays, and the like. In this way, you will build up an extensive preliminary work history. Beyond that, a record of such work should serve to convince a prospective employer of your conscientiousness, a quality that could tip the scales in your favor if you are being considered for a job along with dozens of others.

4. Learn the traditional dos and don'ts of using employment agencies, of responding to help-wanted ads in your daily newspaper, writing a neat and concise resume, of appearing at a job interview in the most attractive manner. Speak to people in the community who in your judgment can be helpful in these areas. They may not have a job to offer you, but more often than not they will help you prepare yourself so that you will put your best foot forward when a job does become available.

5. Look around for jobs in out-of-the-way places: at employment offices in the local "Y," churches, welfare agencies, business groups, service clubs, and elsewhere. A walk through town may locate a "help-wanted" sign in a window. Or you may find something listed on a bulletin board in a church basement, at the local post offices or community center or even at the supermarket.

6. Don't be too proud to make use of all your contacts and the contacts of parents, other relatives and friends. Remember that everyone else who is competing with you for the available jobs is doing the same thing, and you are handicapping yourself if you refrain from doing this on the basis of principle.

Very often, contacts whom you see may know of nothing, but they will, if pressed, recommend you along to friends and contacts of theirs. Be flexible about moving on from contact to contact, for somewhere along the line something may make itself available to you.

Some of the hints above may help. Possibly more important, they may suggest other innovative ways for you to look — ways you were not thinking of previously. Remember to try everything, for you never know which avenue will prove to be the right one for you — and you need only one job!

Israelis Scorn New Arab Plan Seeking Mideast Peace Accord

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel has rejected "without reservation" an Egyptian proposal calling for Israel to turn over the occupied West Bank to Jordan and the Gaza Strip to Egypt as a preliminary move toward a Mideast peace.

Spokesman Arieh Naor said Sunday following a meeting of Prime Minister Menachem Begin's cabinet that Israel is sticking with its own proposal for limited Palestinian self-rule, with continued Israeli military presence, in the West Bank and Gaza for a five-year period, after which the status of the occupied territories would be open for negotiation.

Naor said the Egyptian proposal was discussed after reports reaching Jerusalem from Cairo said President Anwar Sadat was formulating a new peace plan based on the return of Gaza and the West Bank, zones Israel considers militarily strategic.

"Israel rejects without reservation these suggestions by President Sadat," the cabinet statement said.

Although the statement appeared to reject the proposal outright, Naor indicated the problem centers on what the Israelis view as the "preconditional" aspect of the plan — that Israel give up the territories prior to negotiations on effective arrangements for Israeli security.

"The way Sadat put it, this is a precondition to negotiations," Naor said. "In effect what he is saying is, 'You accept my conditions and then I will discuss your security arrangements.'"

Naor said the Sadat plan could be put on the bargaining table if no preconditions were attached.

"Israel is willing to discuss any Egyptian proposal providing it is not presented as a precondition for negotiations," Naor said. He said Egypt has the right to make any proposal for negotiations but that Israel will not evacuate the territories even without conditions.

There was no reaction from the Egyptian government on the decision.

Begin last month dismissed the Sadat proposal after it was first aired in the news media. He said then that such a plan would require Israel to give up territories "without negotiations and without a peace treaty."

Cairo's semi-official Al Ahram newspaper said Sadat's proposal calls for Egyptian and Jordanian forces to replace the Israeli military in the West Bank and Gaza. Israel took the West Bank from Jordan and the Gaza Strip from Egypt in the Six-Day War of 1967.

Under Sadat's proposal, Al Ahram said, Jordan would assume responsibility for the West Bank and Egypt for the Gaza Strip for a five-year period, during which security measures for Israel would be discussed during Arab-Israeli negotiations.

Al Ahram said Sadat's plan also would have the Arab states negotiate with Palestinians living in occupied territories so that Israel would not have to deal directly with the Palestine Liberation Organization, which it has refused to do.

Cairo's Middle East News Agency Saturday quoted Egyptian Foreign Minister Mohamed Ibrahim Kamel as saying the proposal would be drawn up within two days and would be transmitted to the United States, which has been acting as middleman in an effort to revive the Egyptian-Israeli talks that broke down in January over the Palestinian issue.

Begin declined to answer questions on Sunday's cabinet statement after the meeting.

Asked about reports he is in ill health, he smiled and said, "As you can see, I feel fine." His personal physician, Dr. Mervyn Gotsman, told a news conference Sunday the prime minister has a mild case of diabetes but has recovered from his heart attack of last year and is in generally good health.

Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan, asked about reports he plans to meet in London next month with his Egyptian counterpart Kamel, replied curtly he had no information about such a meeting.

The Egyptian proposal apparently was being formulated as a counter-plan to Israel's suggestion for limited autonomy for Palestinians for an interim period.

The Israelis had said they were awaiting Egyptian counter-proposals so that negotiations could be resumed. But the Israeli statement Sunday left the prospect of new progress in doubt.

Last Sunday, the Israeli cabinet issued a policy statement saying it would negotiate "future relations" with the occupied lands after the proposed interim autonomy period. Israel has said limited autonomy would be granted to the Palestinians only after peace agreements were signed.

The cabinet said Sunday Israel stands by that statement, which it said was the basis "upon which free negotiations should be conducted between the parties."

Shipyard Workers Discovered Victims Of Asbestos Disease

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — About one-third of the employees who have worked at the Long Beach Naval Shipyard at least 17 years have contracted asbestosis, a lung-scarring disease that is sometimes fatal, according to a Navy study released Sunday.

"Some of these people will get worse and some won't, and we have no way of knowing who will and who won't," said Dr. Jean Felton, the medical director of the Long Beach shipyard.

Felton, who directed the Navy study, said all the people with abnormal X-rays were notified and attended a briefing where they were told there is no cure for asbestosis.

Asbestosis, a scarring of the lungs caused by breathing asbestos fibers, causes difficulty in breathing and is sometimes fatal. It also can cause cancer, and scientists believe it takes far less asbestos to cause cancer than asbestosis.

The cancers almost never show up until at least 20 to 30 years after exposure to asbestos, so there is no way to know how many shipyard workers will develop cancer.

However, this April the Department of Health, Education and Welfare warned that nearly half of the 11 million Americans who had worked with asbestos over the past 40 years may die of either cancer or asbestosis — the vast majority from cancer.

Although there had been spot checks indicating workers at the Navy's eight shipyards had asbestosis, the test at Long Beach was the first to examine an entire shipyard.

In another investigation of hazards to shipyard workers, the Boston Globe reported in February that persons who worked on the nation's first nuclear submarines at Portsmouth, N.H., Naval Shipyard have been dying from cancer at a rate more than double the national average.

Dr. Thomas Najarian, a Boston physician, said he found a potential radiation problem at the shipyard, but the Navy said its radiation standards fall within limits set by the federal government.

In Long Beach, the Navy tested 6,640 shipyard workers and found 16 percent had abnormal chest X-rays indicating asbestosis.

More than 5,300 of these workers, however, had been employed less than 12 years, and the percentage of abnormal X-rays increased in proportion to length of employment. For example, 239 of the 707 current employees who had worked at the shipyard at least 17 years had abnormal X-rays, the study said.

Felton said Navy officials were reluctant to say the workers with abnormal X-rays actually had asbestosis. The official report says the workers had "abnormal findings consistent with inhalation of asbestos fiber."

It's a question of semantics, Felton said. "In my mind it's asbestosis."

In the past, the Navy has used asbestos mainly for insulation in ships, but has reduced its use to a minimum in new ships. Most of the Navy's ships still have asbestos insulation, however, and part of that has to be ripped out when ships are brought in for overhaul. Rip-out is a messy job that sends asbestos fibers flying.

ERA Backers Find Needed Help Elusive

WASHINGTON (AP) — With time in the legislative season running short, backers of the Equal Rights Amendment are looking for one, elusive state victory to boost their chances of winning ratification by a March 22, 1979, deadline.

"Frankly, I think if we could get one state, the momentum would build again and it wouldn't be difficult to get two others," Nancy Neuman, a vice president of the League of Women Voters, said in an interview.

But opponents claimed they could hold onto the votes of opposition state legislators long enough to defeat the amendment.

"I think the momentum is going strongly against the ERA," said Phyllis Schlafly, national chairman of Stop ERA. "The 15 states which have not ratified it have rejected it again and again and again. I see no indication that the proponents are gaining votes."

ERA, the proposal Congress approved in 1972 which would prohibit discrimination based on sex, has been ratified by 35 of the 38 states needed if it is to become a part of the Constitution. But Tennessee, Idaho and Nebraska have voted to rescind their approval votes.

The Justice Department has ruled that Congress must decide if recissions are permissable.

Opponents of the proposal maintain it would erode legal rights which have been assigned to women in this society and would force women into unacceptable roles.

Backers accuse the other side of using misinformation and scare tactics in the attempt to defeat the amendment.

Supporters, who thought they had that hoped-for state victory within their grasp, were disheartened by a fresh defeat in the Illinois legislature last week. In the second vote on the amendment in two weeks, they came within two votes of carrying the House.

Illinois is considered crucial in the strategy aimed at persuading three more states to ratify. It is the only northern industrial state which has not ratified, although the question has been voted on repeatedly during the past six years.

Illinois was considered the state with the best chance of nudging the ratification movement forward. But ERA supporters aren't giving up.

Episcopal Priest Fights Removal

WEST ORANGE, N.J. (AP) — A priest whose congregation seceded last July from the Episcopal Diocese of Newark refused Sunday to surrender the pulpit to the archdeacon officially appointed to replace him.

The Rev. William F. Burns, 59, was deposed by the Episcopal Church last week on charges of abandoning the communion of the church. The rector led the secession to protest ordination of women and homosexuals, changes in the prayer book and a church policy that doesn't insist on belief of Christ's resurrection.

"You're welcome to worship with us, but you're not going to officiate at the service," Burns told Archdeacon Sydney Grant, his would-be replacement.

"I have been refused entry," Grant said outside St. Mark's Church here. "I am not allowed to officiate, so therefore I do not go in."

Skateboard Transports Legless Houston Boy

HOUSTON (AP) — For most kids, a skateboard is a toy. But for 11-year-old Joseph Montemayor it is that and a lot more; it's often his legs.

Joseph lost his legs up to his hips and half of his left arm four years ago when a freight train on which he and some friends had hopped a ride ran over him when he jumped off.

But after four months in hospitals and a summer learning how to use artificial limbs, Joseph was ready to be a boy.

His mother, Mrs. Jose Montemayor, said her son disliked being helped even at the beginning.

"When I tried to help him, he'd look at me sort of grumpy and say 'I can do it. I can do it,'" said Mrs. Montemayor.

And he can. Today Joseph can do tricks on his skateboard, swim and wrestle. He even plays softball. He runs the bases by using his right arm to swing his body along.

Mrs. Montemayor said other kids at first stared at Joseph but he ignored their stares. Now he plays with everyone willing, including his brother and two sisters.

His pride and joy, however, is his skateboard, said his mother.

"He loves for people to watch him do tricks," she said.

Feud Growing Over Home Health Care

or retired, perhaps to work on a parttime basis. Wall said such a strategy would not work and that Patton's proposal "shows he is not familiar with the situation."

The crux of Wall's argument is that there is no need for additional agencies. "We have been meeting the needs of West Texas since 1969. We have never turned away anyone who has been referred to us for home health care by a physician. The need for this service already is being provided for," he said.

"The (state health facilites) commission was convinced of this during the hearings."

Furthermore, Wall questions the motives of the two applicant agencies. He claims they both are spinoffs of proprietary (profit-making) concerns.

"We will continue to oppose these johnny-come-latelies who want to get in here and turn a fast buck," Wall said.

The applicants said that insinuation is insulting. As evidence of their commitment to non-profit home health care — and of the need for such additional services — they cite support from numerous local health experts.

Among them are the regional director for the Texas Department of Health; a program director for the Texas Department of Human Resources; medical and public health officials with Texas Tech University; the director of the City of Lubbock health department; and several nurses and doctors, a few of whom served as advisers to West Texas Home Health Agency.

The applicants say they know of home health cases that have been turned away by the existing agency. They say they would have no trouble building up a caseload to sustain their operations.

Patton said the need for home health care — like the percentage of elderly in the population — is increasing. Having more agencies would stir awareness of the service, creating even more demand, he said.

Mrs. McComb said individual home health needs are diverse, from nutrition counseling and giving injections to health education and taking blood pressure. Having more agencies would allow more specialized care, thus minimizing duplication of the same services, she said.

One of the reasons Patton is angry is that the state commission lost a three-hour tape of testimony "vital to our application. I feel this testimony might have been overlooked" in the commission's ruling.

It is partly on that basis that Patton and Mrs. McComb have asked the commission for another hearing. The commission will consider the requests Thursday.

If the rehearings are granted, the applications this time will be routed through South Plains Health Systems Inc., a regional planning agency, for a local recommendation. That agency is almost finished developing criteria for evaluation of home health care proposals.

Competition is only one issue in the home health service dispute. Another concerns the affairs of the MBFA Foundation.

In addition to home health care, MBFA runs numerous other services — including 11 West Texas nursing homes, three of them in Lubbock. Patton's attorney, H.J. "Doc" Blanchard, former Lubbock state senator, terms this a "conflict of interest."

Patton and Mrs. McComb said West Texas Home Health Agency sometimes steers its patients into nursing homes — preferably MBFA-run nursing homes — when the patients would be just as well off in their own homes.

Wall said this charge is untrue. But he thinks he knows how the allegation got started.

Wall said home health care nurses tend to become attached to their patients. What the agency has done, he said, is to stress to its nurses that "they must be objective. When patients reach the point that they can no longer live independently, we want them to consider a nursing home."

MBFA's interest in nursing home operations is "no conflict whatsoever," Wall added. He said the foundation's goal is to provide "continuity of care."

Such continuity reduces costs, Wall said. The various MBFA divisions can share administrative resources, cut paperwork in dealing with government regulations, share personnel as needed and follow patients going from one kind of care to another, he said.

He noted MBFA is involved in other services, such as a halfway house for the mentally retarded, South Plains Homemaker Service (which does housekeeping for the disabled) and Meals on Wheels (which the foundation started in Lubbock).

At any rate, some state officials — like Rep. Froy Salinas and House Speaker Bill Clayton — are looking into the matter of Lubbock's having only one home health care agency.

They say some services contracted by the Texas Department of Human Resources may cost less if firms were bidding for the contracts.

"As big as Lubbock is, if only one agency is providing the service, there's no competition on price," said an aide to Clayton.

Patton said many cities, often smaller than Lubbock, have three or four nonprofit home health care agencies.

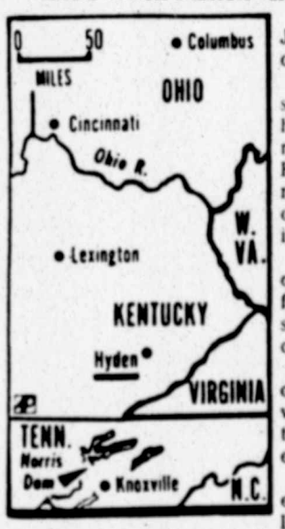
ROLLING OUT THE RED CARPET FOR NIXON — Leslie County, Ky., Judge-Executive C. Allen Muncy sits in his Hyden, Ky., office under a portrait of former President Richard Nixon. At the invitation of Muncy and other Republican officials in the county, Nixon will make a public appearance in Hyden to dedicate a county recreation center named in his honor.(AP Laserphoto)

Nixon To Attend Building Dedication

HYDEN, Ky. (AP) — The magistrates who govern Leslie County from this mountain hamlet were discussing the big event the other day.

"Should we wear a tuxedo?" asked one.



"Wear whatever you want to wear," County Judge C. Allen Muncy told the casually dressed magistrates.

Hyden has 500 residents. They traverse one street. There are six pay phones. There never has been a railroad running through town. But next weekend, there will be a big event here: Former President Richard Nixon is making a rare public appearance to help dedicate a county recreation center that is being named in his honor.

The magistrates discussed the many requests they have received from local residents for a limited number of tickets available for seats inside the gymnasium where dedication ceremonies will be held.

The judge indicated that local Republican officials, who will be handing out tickets, would be kind to those who have been kind to them in the past, although he told a reporter earlier that "this is a non-political event."

Nixon's appearance is actually an unexpected capping of the centennial celebration of Leslie County, in southeastern Kentucky. The county has 6,000 registered Republicans and 2,000 Democrats.

There are coal mines in Leslie County, and an explosion occurred at one near Hyden almost eight years ago, killing 38 miners.

But the county is one Appalachian area which has gained, rather than lost, population in the past decade. Ed Mattingly, an employee of the independent local telephone company, said the Nixon visit would highlight the progress typical of eastern Kentucky in past decades — the slow climb from poverty and emergence of a larger middle class.

The $2.5 million Leslie County Recreational Complex, a cluster of buildings and facilities less than a mile from town on a fork of the Kentucky River, is symbolic of such progress. It has a community building, pool and bathhouse, four outdoor tennis courts, two outdoor basketball courts, track and baseball fields and a picnic area.

Muncy, 32, said Nixon is being honored because he was responsible for the federal government's revenue-sharing program, which made the building of the complex possible.

The judge said everything will be ready when Nixon arrives, although the gym was still unpainted, had no bleachers or seats in place and was surrounded outside by lumpy earth and rocks last week.

As for security, "there will be no demonstrations," Muncy said confidently. One of his secretaries added: "Those who don't like Nixon should stay away from here."

But the U.S. Secret Service and Kentucky State Police are not so confident. They have a tentative plan to shield the former president from protesters who might not stay away and to handle the crowds that will jam Hyden — estimated by Muncy at at least 20,000.

The gym can hold 4,000 persons, and all will need tickets and clearance to get inside for Nixon's appearance.

Officials Eye Oil Lease

LONG BEACH (AP) — Approval by the city's Harbor Commission of a 40-year lease for an Alaskan oil tanker terminal may be illegal because the lease was agreed to before an environmental study was completed, a port official says.

"Things were done to the lease I was told would not be done," the chief of port environmental affairs, Donald B. Bright, said.

"The approach being taken is at least very unethical and also more than likely contrary to the law," he added.

The proposed $500-million Standard Oil Co. of Ohio project includes an 89-acre deep-water tanker terminal and a 36-acre tank farm along with a pipeline from Long Beach to Midland, Texas. The pipeline would carry 500,000 barrels of Alaskan oil daily to Texas, for redistributing through the Gulf Coast and Midwest.

Sohio has obtained 844 of the 847 permits necessary to begin construction, and a spokesman said the firm expects to get the remaining three permits by the end of the year.

But Bright told the Harbor Commission at a hearing Friday night that it had violated the California Environmental Quality Act by agreeing to a lease before it had a complete environmental impact report.

The CEQA requires that the final three permits, from the State Air Resources Board, California Coastal Commission and Regional Air Quality Management District, be granted before the port can have a complete impact report, Bright said.

Limiting Nuclear Arms Buildup Gets Harder As Time Goes On

By ALVIN WEBB

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — The world started on the road to potential nuclear holocaust the day the first caveman decided to build a bigger and better club to deal with antagonistic neighbors. Turning back is proving far more difficult — perhaps impossible.

That idea at the dawn of history gave birth to the arms race, currently a $400 billion a year production of everything from hand grenades to hydrogen bombs. Each, in its turn, was a bigger war club than its predecessor.

Now mankind is clearly worried — enough so that 148 nations sent statesmen to the United Nations in late May for an extraordinary session of the General Assembly, to look for ways to end the spiraling arms buildup and to begin trimming down the mountains of war machinery.

Five weeks, millions of words and scores of proposals later, the results of the world's first disarmament conference in 46 years are in — everyone agrees disarmament is a good idea, no one agrees on how to go about it.

That — and possibly a proposal that a similar conference be convened in three to five years' time — will be the gist of the session's final document when it is issued June 28. There will be no surprises, no dramatic breakthroughs.

In fact, no one familiar with the intricacies of world politics really expected more. The General Assembly is powerless to enforce any resolution, and the special session was envisioned not as a beginning, but a beginning of the beginning of the quest for a solution.

Success or failure is in the eye of the beholder. For those who saw the session as a forum for an exchange of ideas, it succeeded. For those such as the Japanese survivors of Hiroshima who demanded an immediate destruction of all nuclear armaments, it failed.

The U.N. special session was clearly crippled at the start by those who were conspicious by their absence — President Carter, Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev, Japanese Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda, Yugoslavia's President Tito.

Carter's absence even angered part of the U.S. delegation. "Some members of the delegation feel it's a tragedy the president did not come," said delegate Harold Willens, a California businessman.

Then there was the timing of a North Atlantic Treaty Organization council meeting to overlap the disarmament conference. NATO leaders found themselves shuttling between the United Nations and Washington, alternately advocating disarmament and studying ways to beef up NATO's war machinery.

"The scheduling of the NATO meeting at the same time as this session orders on the obscene," said retired U.S. Rear Adm. Eugene La Rocque, director of the privately operated center for defense information.

And through it all ran the theme of power politics and confrontation — the rift between Soviets and Americans over strategic arms limitation, China's stepped-up anti-Moscow campaign, NATO versus Warsaw Pact in central Europe, the usual Arab-Israeli and Cambodia-Vietnam slanging matches.

As each speaker went before the General Assembly to call for an end to the arms race and then explained why his or her country had special problems, disarmament seemed little more than what it was in caveman days — a utopian dream.

In the time it takes you to read this article, the world will have spent another $5 million or so on ways to make war.

It was with such appalling statistics in mind than some 90 of the world's poorer nations banded together two years ago to call for a disarmament conference, in hopes that at least some of these military funds could be channeled into their own economic development.

French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing, for instance, proposed that the United Nations set up its own "spy" satellite system to keep an eye on military buildups and force nations to live up to promises not to develop new weapons and to cut back on old ones.

It is an idea not likely to get far. Spy satellites today can identify a golf ball on a putting green, and the Soviets haven't progressed that far from the days of shooting down U-2 reconnaissance planes that they can be expected to embrace such a concept of "overflights."

One of the world's first fishing experts, according to National Geographic, was a woman: Dame Juliana Berners, a 15th-century prioress of an English nunnery who described how to tie flies in her "Treatyse on Fysshynge with an Angle."

Rhodesian Mission Massacre Reported

MASSACRE VICTIMS — The Rev. Roy Lynn, 37, and his wife Joyce, were among the 12 British missionaries killed by Rhodesian guerrillas Friday night. The massacre took place at the American Elim Pentecostal Church mission in the Vumba Mountains of eastern Rhodesia, just five miles from the Mozambique border. (AP Laserphoto)

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — The government reported a major new clash with black guerrillas near the Botswana border Sunday, and a leading cleric called on Britain to send troops here to track down the guerrillas blamed for the slaughter of 12 missionaries and dependents in the east Rhodesian countryside.

A top guerrilla leader, meanwhile, charged that the Rhodesian government's own commandos, and not his forces, were responsible for the mission massacre.

The Rhodesian military said the border battle with about 100 guerrillas firing from the Botswana side of the frontier was halted early Sunday when Botswana authorities intervened.

The communique said no Rhodesian casualties were reported during the exchange of heavy rocket, mortar and small arms fire. Guerrilla casualties were not known.

Guerrillas of Joshua Nkomo's Zimbabwe African People's Union are based in black-ruled Botswana and Zambia, while the forces of the allied Zimbabwe African National Union of Robert Mugabe operate from Mozambique. The two insurgent groups are fighting to topple the new biracial interim administration in Rhodesia.

British-born Bishop Paul Burrough, one of two Anglican prelates in Rhodesia, said in an interview in the Sunday Mail newspaper here that Britain, former colonial ruler of Rhodesia, should revert to "gunboat diplomacy" and intervene with troops to track down the murderers of the missionaries.

The bishop, who came to Rhodesia 10 years ago and had been decorated fighting for the British in World War II, has been an outspoken critic of both the previous white-minority government and guerrilla tactics in the six-year war.

Among the victims of the Friday night mission massacre, all Britons, were five children, including a 3-week-old girl. They were bludgeoned and bayonetted to death in what was the war's bloodiest attack yet on white missionaries, whose remote and vulnerable outposts have become prime targets in the war.

One woman at the mission, Mary Fisher, 28, survived the massacre, though she was badly beaten. She was in critical condition Sunday in a hospital here.

Black students at the mission, the Elim Pentacostal Church's secondary school, said the black raiders described themselves as "freedom fighters" of Mugabe's ZANU guerrilla group.

But South African Radio reported Sunday that Mugabe denied his guerrillas were responsible for the massacre and blamed it on the Rhodesian army's Selous Scouts, a highly secret commando unit said be active in the area. Many of the scouts are blacks.

The report, based on monitored broadcasts of Mozambique's Maputo radio, did not say Mugabe offered any evidence to substantiate his charge.

The Mail said in an editorial that the world should realize blacks and whites here are not fighting political opponents but "brutal murderers of the worst kind imaginable."

In a more guarded response, Methodist Bishop Abel Muzorewa, one of the three moderate black nationalists who joined with white Prime Minister Ian Smith in the transition government, made evident reference to the killing by government troops of black civilians.

"I believe this kind of thing goes on all the time, except it seems to be more news if it is white people," said Muzorewa. "There is no part in the war for the killing of children, black or white."

The state-run Sunday Times of Zambia, which normally blames Rhodesian forces for war atrocities, said of the massacre: "If freedom fighters were responsible, then the Patriotic Front (the Nkomo-Mugabe alliance) should put them on trial at a court martial."

The paper added, however, that it would not be "surprised" if Rhodesian troops killed the missionaries.

The Rhodesian announcement of the fighting in the southwest was the second report within three days of border hostilities.

Mozambique reported Thursday that Rhodesian troops attacking across the Mozambican-Rhodesian border killed 17 refugees and two Belgian nationals at a U.N. agricultural station 18 miles from the border. Rhodesia, which has admitted ordering the past three major raids against guerrilla bases in Mozambique, denied any new attack.

HOSPITALS REJECT VICTIM

PALERMO, Sicily (AP) — A man injured in an automobile accident died Sunday after the ambulance that picked him up was turned away from four hospitals because they had no room for him, authorities said. Giuseppe Di Mariano, 39, died after losing a large amount of blood, the authorities said.

Realizing Victory Comes Slowly

WASHINGTON (AP) — Freshman Rep. Barbara A. Mikulski, D-Md., had a bit of trouble Friday figuring out that she had won a game of legislative hardball.

She fought mightily to keep opponents from eliminating a provision in an Amtrak subsidy bill that would require the rail service to buy American products when making purchases of more than $100,000.

When the House headcounter announced a 29-28 informal vote against an amendment deleting the provision, Miss Mikulski jumped to her feet to demand a formal roll call of all members.

"Usually, it's the loser that asks for a roll call."

"Wait a minute. Did I win?" shouted Miss Mikulski as she plopped down in her chair, running her hands through her hair.

Then, she rose to explain to the House: "The gentlelady apologizes. She had too many crab cakes last night."

Court Victories, Publicity Bolster Nazi Gains

CHICAGO (AP) — His long-feared Skokie march never came off. But after 15 months of court victories and the kind of publicity money could not have bought, Nazi Frank Collin may have gained some points.

Collin, ironically the son of a German Jew who survived a Nazi death camp, adeptly foisted a rabble-rousing handful of followers into the national spotlight, at least temporarily. Through invaluable assistance from — also ironically — a Jewish attorney for the American Civil Liberties Union, he exercised rights guaranteed him by the U.S. Constitution.

And by posing a threat to Jewish victims of Nazism, Collin was able — and may continue — to attract serious media attention.

That attention could be useful in keeping before the public the white-power message that Collin and his followers ascribe to: Subjection of blacks and minorities and destruction of Jews.

Ostensibly, Collin fought in court for his right to free speech, both in Skokie and in Chicago parks. Others contend he only sought publicity and never intended to go to Skokie.

Who won, and who lost? And what were the stakes?

David Goldberger, the ACLU lawyer, says the Constitution is the real winner in the ordeal that began in March 1977. "After 15 months of agonizing litigation, the First Amendment has emerged undamaged."

But if the law prevailed, it was at great cost to the ACLU. Goldberger and officers in Illinois and nationwide were vilified for their defense of Nazis on constitutional grounds. National membership dropped 15 percent.

Skokie avoided a volatile demonstration at the last moment, but endured a year of agitation and the threat of a Nazi march before regaining its peace. The village hung on the edge of anticipation until the last possible moment. Mayor Albert J. Smith, who led the fight to keep Collin out, was hospitalized recently for nervous exhaustion.

Legal fees of the village came out of its regular legal budget of about $90,000 to five salaried attorneys, Corporation Counsel Harvey Schwartz said Sunday. He said there were no extra legal costs involved, although printing costs were about $3,000. There will be more legal expense if the Supreme Court hears the village's appeal of a lower court decision striking down its ordinances designed to bar the Nazis. No money was budgeted for the Nazi fight, Schwartz added.

Last week, Smith said he had no estimate of total costs to the village: "When you are talking about people's health and welfare and the welfare of the community, I don't think there's any price ... price is really not that significant."

The specter of goose-stepping brown-shirted storm troopers wearing swastikas did not become a modern reality for Skokie's Jews. But they did have to endure the agony of anticipation.

Collin displayed uncanny ability in recent days to key his moves to live television coverage — and strung everyone along by a seeming ability to play off one demand against another and maintain suspense until the end.

The furor over the proposed march in Skokie peaked last week with Collin winning still more victories in the courts — which upheld his group's right to demonstrate — and the media reporting blow-by-blow locally, nationally, internationally.

The citizens of Illinois statewide lost, to the tune of at least $100,000. It could have been at least $800,000 to $1 million, says Tyrone Fahner, state law enforcement director, if some 400 to 600 National Guardsmen and a similar number of state police had been mobilized. As it is, the state spent about $20,000 for security logistics for a Skokie march and some $80,000 for room reservations.

Anti-Nazis seemed to split into two factions, violent and otherwise. And at a Saturday Nazi rally in downtown Chicago, about 14 Nazi foes were arrested. Some counter-demonstrators vented their anger against the police who were protecting the Nazis. There were some minor injuries as police used sawhorses and nightsticks to keep the anti-Nazis at bay, while thousands of screaming protesters, some helmeted, pelted the shield-carrying Nazis with rocks and eggs, some of the missiles striking the police.

A giant peaceful demonstration was planned in Skokie while Collin's rally was on but was canceled when he called it off. Collin staged his Saturday "victory rally" at a barricaded federal building plaza, where he needed no permit, to celebrate a court order allowing him to march in city parks without posting any insurance bond.

But anti-Nazis vowed to resist Collin's efforts to speak in Marquette Park or elsewhere — as Skokians did.

Collin has won in some ways, achieving a notoriety unimaginable a year and a half ago. And the courts have said he could march.

He did it by taking on Skokie officials, seeking a permit for his National Socialist Party of America to demonstrate in front of the village hall.

Carter Trips Fail To Reverse Ratings' Decline

By LOUIS HARRIS

President Carter's new, campaign-style practice of taking more trips around the country and abroad simply does not appear to be reversing his steady decline in ratings by Americans. In the latest Harris Survey of 1,500 adults nationwide, he comes up with no better than a 65-32 percent negative rating.

This latest reading on the President is 2 points higher than his lowest 66-30 percent negative rating of late April. But it does mark a drop from the 37 percent positive standing he held in May and the 38 percent positive recorded earlier in June.

Specifically, Mr. Carter does not appear to have enhanced his standing with the public by going to Panama to sign the final Panama Canal treaties. By 47-38 percent, a plurality of the public did not think he ought to have taken the trip in the first place. The President is rated 60-29 percent negative on his trip to Panama. And by 49-35 percent, a plurality now regrets that the treaties were agreed to and ratified.

The President's latest troubles with public opinion stem from a whole host of specific low ratings accorded him on key issues he has been speaking out on:

—On his handling of the economy, Mr. Carter now is given a 75-21 percent negative rating, roughly the same as he has had in this critical domestic area for the past three months. People are deeply worried about inflation and have no real conviction that the Carter administration is moving decisively to keep rising prices in check.

—On his handling of the problem of Cuban and Russian military activity in Africa, the President is given a 62-24 percent negative rating.

—On handling the SALT talks with Russia, he does no better than achieving negative marks of 63-21 percent.

—On handling relations with Russia, he is accorded a 61-28 pefcent negative rating.

—Finally, on his overall handling of foreign policy, the President is given a 67-25 percent negative rating.

On two other key dimensions, the President also comes up with negative ratings.

—By 63-28 percent, Americans give him negative marks on his handling of relations with Congress. This dimension of the Carter record may well assume more importance, since it now appears that some vetoes of legislation by the President are in the offing. While former President Ford was not seriously hurt by his many vetoes, it remains to be seen how the public will react to a Democratic president vetoing measures passed by a Democratic Congress.

—Perhaps as important as any other area is Jimmy Carter's 64-29 percent negative rating on his personal ability to inspire confidence in the White House. This is by far the lowest mark he has been given by Americans on this point. Back in April, he had dropped to a previous all-time low of 62-30 percent negative on inspiring confidence.

By contrast, in June 1977, President Carter came up with a substantial 62-31 percent positive rating on the confidence dimension. This means that his rating on inspiring confidence has been completely reversed over the past 12 months. Without a reservoir of faith in him personally, it is going to be tough for the President to improve his standing on performance in office in any quick or easy way.

Compounding Mr. Carter's problems is documentation by the Harris Survey that this precipitous fall in his ratings translates into potential trouble for him in the 1980 elections. Back in May, among 1,500 likely voters, the President ran behind former President Ford by 48-43 percent and behind Ronald Reagan by a narrow 47-46 percent. By contrast, Sen. Edward Kennedy, as the Democratic nominee for president in 1980, ran 52-43 percent ahead of Ford and 54-42 percent ahead of Reagan.

Perhaps most disturbing for the President in these latest results is that it now is becoming clear that his moving around the country and the world for speeches, press conferences and meetings with foreign dignitaries is not the path likely to rehabilitate his low standing with the public. The public is highly critical of the substance of his performance. And now he will have to prove to a skeptical people that he has the capacity both to lead and to accomplish the essential business of governing.

EDDIE RABBITT

Singer, Comedian Added To Fair Bill

Eddie Rabbitt will bring his light, jazz swing to the Panhandle South Plains Fair here this fall, general manager Steve L. Lewis has announced.

Lewis said Rabbitt — singer, songwriter and showman — would be on stage in Fair Park Coiseum for one performance only, at 8 p.m. on Sept. 28. He'll be teamed with comedian Jerry Clower.

The 61st annual fair is scheduhled to run Sept. 23-30.

Earlier, the following shows were announced as part of the entertainment package: The Statler Brothers, Sept. 25; Johnny Rodriquez and Linda Hargrove, Sept. 26; Jim Ed Brown, Helen Cornelius and Wendy Holcombe, Sept. 27. Two other Rabbitt's music synthesizes country and country-rock with a generous helping of western swing. Earlier this year he was booked in Houston, shortly before the release of his fourth album, "Variations."

"Variations" was released by Elektra/Asylum Records, but was recorded at Nashville's Quadrafonic Studios.

Included on "Variations" is Rabbitt's own version of "Kentucky Rain," which he co-wrote in 1970 and later became Elvis Presley's 50th million-seller.

Rabbitt helped author eight of the album's 10 songs, many with his long time partner, Even Steven. He considers "Variations" a departure from his previous albums. "This album offers a little broader scope of all the things I do," he has said.

Earlier this year, Rabbitt was named as the first "Bullet Award" winner of Country Music Magazine's "new entertainer of the year" nominee.

Performing here with Rabbitt will be the popular comic, Jerry Clower, who has such credits as comic of the year accolades from Billboard, Cash Box and Record World to his credit.

The humorist from Yazoo City, Miss., is a businessman and civic worker as well as humorist. He has been director of sales promotion for Mississippi Chemical Corp. since 1971.

But on stage, Clower sells the good life — laughter — and often shows the humorous side of even the bad times. He's appeared in the South Plains area several times.

Seats for all fair shows are reserved and tickets are priced at $4, $5 and $6.

Reverse Discrimination Lawsuit Worries Groups

WASHINGTON (AP) — Women and minorities seeking equity in America are at a crossroads because of the climate created by a reverse discrimination suit before the Supeme Court, says Alexis Herman, director of the Labor Department's Women's Bureau.

"I think there is a real attitude that somehow women and minorities have had their day in the sun," she said in a speech to the Washington Press Club. "We're operating now in a climate where affirmative action programs in general are being examined."

A factual examination of the progress made by women and minorities — and the lack of progress in many key areas — "has gotten lost in the emotional rhetoric around language like 'preferential treatment' and 'reverse discrimination,'" she said.

Herman was referring to the court suit involving Allan Bakke and the University of California. Bakke sued the university after twice being rejected as an applicant to the university's medical school. He charged that a special admissions policy used by the school to give minority students preferential treatment discriminated against him because he is white.

MONSOONS TAKE TOLL

NEW DEHLI, India (AP) — Six persons drowned in rainstorms this weekend that brought the monsoons to the parched plains of northern India and halted the most severe heat wave in 11 years. The rains and flash floods ended a six-week heat wave of temperatures that often reached 115 degrees Fahrenheit, causing more than 200 deaths.

Plane Crash Kills Three

BELLEVILLE, Ill. (AP) — A light, twin-engine plane crashed and burned in a suburban area five miles west of Belleville on Sunday, killing the three persons aboard.

The St. Clair County sheriff's office said the plane was en route from New Orleans to Cahokia, Ill., when the crash occurred about 6 a.m. in a non-residential area. The three persons aboard were burned beyond recognition.

CHIC AND ALWAYS NEW — AT JAN'S — Shown wearing apparel from Jan's Casual Cottage in Indiana Gardens is (standing) Kellie Holleman, Evans 9th grade student and daughter of shop owners Ernie and Jan Holleman; and another staffmember, Margaret Dean, each emphasizing that new fall items have arrived and that current-season items are drastically reduced in price.

Jan's Casual Cottage Staging Spring-Summer Clearance Sale

Jan's Casual Cottage is conducting its Clearance Sale on all spring and summer merchandise.

This means that choice selection is available at 30 per cent to 50 per cent off regular price!

Yes, everything in spring and summer apparel (including missy, junior and career clothing) is marked to clear at Jan's, 3404 34th St., in Indiana Gardens.

In addition, fall arrivals are being placed on the racks in the most gorgeous array ever, and during the sale would be an excellent time to save on current-season wear and to select newest fashions for fall and winter, whether the need is dresses, coordinated sports wear or separates.

All merchandise is casual; all personnel friendly. Even at sale time, Jan's is a relaxing shop in which to select.

Jan's is one of the more popular stores in its field, and upon a visit there, one readily can discover why this is so.

Essentially a family operation, Jan's is owned and operated by the husband-wife team, Ernie and Jan Holleman; assisted by Jan's mother, Mary Pattillo; her daughter, Kellie; staffmember Margaret Dean and other personnel as the need arises.

Jan, Ernie and Mary each are Texas Tech grads and they maintain a staff that "are your kind of people," folks who want you to have the best in affordable casual wear, people to whom one may turn with confidence in wardrobe assistance.

Each sincerely hope you will come in at this time, taking advantage of the sale, and renewing or making new acquaintance.

Master Charge, Visa and layaway purchases are welcomed.

Selections are grouped for ease in selection.

Second Summer Session Registration Deadline Approaches At Robert Spence

My, how time flies!

Registration is now underway for the second session of summer classes at the Robert Spence School!

The new session begins the week of July 17, and early registration is advised to assure inclusion in the program.

"Have you decided what you want to accomplish this summer? If the answer is 'no,' why not give Robert Spence a call. Maybe you want to be a model, or maybe that's the farthest thing from your mind. Maybe you just want to be poised, assured, looking and sounding your best. Robert Spence School, in any event, has the training you desire."

The Robert Spence School is located in the Terrace Center, 4902 34th St., Suite 26-A, phone 797-8134, in Lubbock.

Classes will be offered with various weekly schedules from 10 a.m. to 12 noon, or 1-3 p.m. Evening classes meet once weekly from 7 until 9 p.m.

Fully Certified

All schools in Texas that are teaching any course of instruction must be certified by the Texas Education Agency. This is not only a protection for the school, but also for the students. The Robert Spence School and its staff are certified by the Texas Education Agency and is owned and directed by Brenda Becknell.

Classes Listed

Classes are offered in Self Improvement and Personal Development, Professional Modeling, the Classic Woman course, the Little Princess course and the Young Miss course, and are designed to assist girls and women toward the self-realization that leads to mature confidence in one's own image.

The instructors can impart the skills taught because the classes at the school are small; no more than eight persons are assigned to any instructor in any phase; and teachers devote individual attention to the needs of each.

Qualified Instructors

Instructors other than Miss Becknell include Mrs. Jerry (Lynette) Thuett, Mrs. Ralph (Gloria) Madrid, Mrs. Ron (Donna) Chandler, Miss Linda Wilks, and Mrs. Bill (Johnnie) Hardage. They are members of the World Modeling Association. They attend workshops and seminars in New York to update their curriculum and keep abreast of the current trends in the high fashion industry of New York.

The instructors have been speakers in the public schools, social organizations, banking institutions, small groups and clubs. They are available to give lectures and demonstrations to groups and organizations for a minimal fee. They also teach the short courses for groups of eight or more in the surrounding area towns and in the local area.

The basic course in self-improvement consists of instruction in several fundamental elements which combine to develop the truly poised person. These elements include posture and walking, skin care and makeup application, hair styling, figure correction, speaking, wardrobe coordination and personality development.

Beyond the self-improvement course, the Robert Spence School offers instruction in professional modeling which opens career vistas to many women. The school functions as an agency and has placed many women in modeling jobs in the Lubbock area, Dallas and New York.

The Classic Woman course is designed for the woman who is interested in updating her wardrobe, hairstyles, makeup and is being poised in all situations she may encounter. This course is especially successful for business organizations, clubs and area groups.

The Young Miss and Little Princess courses are designed for girls from age five to 14 to help them develop poise and manners and grooming. Pageant modeling also is offered to all ages who may be interested in entering pageants.

As a model agency, Robert Spence makes available its professionally trained models and instructors for those special occasions such as conventions, grand openings, fashion shows, commercials and photography.

Top Honors Garnered

Miss Becknell sponsored a group of advanced graduates to the World Modeling Association in New York City and brought home top honors.

Phyllis Johnson won American Model 1978 designation, most beautiful hair and makeup, and photo posing in New York and the Bahamas. Susan Purser was a Teen Finalist and won most beautiful hair and makeup. Robin Becknell was selected to dance in the opening production number directed by Gerry Gaveau of Canada. Another type of honor recently was awarded to graduate Suzette Scholz, named Dallas Cowboy cheerleader.

Miss Becknell is the owner-director of the school. She is a graduate of Texas Tech and a former teacher for Idalou Public Schools. She has taught professional modeling and pageant modeling. She is frequently a guest on "People Place" show, and has modeled and lectured for various organizations in the area.

Mrs. Thuett is a Robert Spence graduate and a resident of Post. She has taught for the school four years and has modeled for television and fashion shows in the area and is well known for her lecturing and seminars.

Mrs. Madrid, a Texas Tech and Robert Spence graduate, is a former teacher for the Lubbock Independent Schools. She frequently appears on "People Place" and is well known for her lecturing and modeling in the area.

Mrs. Chandler is a graduate of Robert Spence and Texas Tech and is involved in the fashion merchandising area and has been modeling in the Lubbock area, as well as teaching in the Robert Spence curriculum.

Miss Wilks is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wendell Wilks. She is a graduate of Coronado High School and attended Texas Tech. She has modeled for various stores and for television and also instructs all courses at Robert Spence.

Mrs. Hardage is a resident of Lamesa. She is a graduate of Hardin-Simmons and is a former teacher in the Lamesa School District. She has modeled locally and teaches various Robert Spence courses in Lubbock, Lamesa and surrounding towns.

Miss Becknell will be happy to talk to any interested person, and a phone call to 797-8134 can bring complete information.

(1) Dura' Bilt Portable Buildings is now located at 6415 Avenue H, just south of the Tahoka traffic circle in south Lubbock;

(2) For this week only, a full 5 per cent discount is enabled on any of the portable buildings on the big lot, with one asked to bring the Dura' Bilt ad on these pages to receive the discount.

What could be more appealing than tomorrow's buildings at yesterday's prices?

This is the advertised situation Dura' Bilt, 6415 Ave. H, where the dramatic invitation is extended:

"Check with all the others, check all other prices and then see us last . . . for the best!"

Still other factors make transactions at Dura' Bilt especially worthwhile:

Local Ownership

Such as the more than 20 buildings now on the big, convenient, easily reached lot, ready for delivery. Owner John and Maxine Fritz are personally on the job to assure fastest and best service possible.

No Hail Problem

The portable building — so right for numerous uses such as storage, lake cabins, offices, warehouses, workshops, etc., feature 29-gauge steel roofs. No hail problem here. Masonite siding is utilized, with the rot-free quality stressed, and available in the color of one's choice.

Trim-out is in different colors of matching metal trim.

Sand-Guard

Rubber closures are standard in the eaves to guard against blowing sand.

Plywood flooring and floor joists on 16-inch center assure further quality.

Cinnamon birch paneling is featured, together with 3 1/2-inch fiberglass insulation. Even wiring and carpeting is provided in finished buildings.

Dura' Bilt Portable Buildings are manufactured within the immediate Lubbock area, cutting one's costs; with delivery anywhere.

A very representative stock of these buildings is on display at the site, 6415 Ave. H, remember, and John or Maxine Fritz will be glad to discuss one's needs, explaining how a Dura' Bilt portable building can be built "to your specifications at a saving, still assuring quality throughout."

"Anytime you are in Lubbock, we hope you will come out to our place, just below the traffic circle on Avenue H. We look forward to your visits, now or at any time. We know we can save you in a manner economically profitable and satisfactory in every way in your particular situation."

MARIANNE MAESTAS TELLS EFFECTIVE PROGRAM, 'FREE' OFFER

Diet Centers Reveal Special Offer, Neighborhood Concept

There's something fantastic going on!

"And we want to share it with you at the Diet Center near you."

"We want you to come on over to your local Diet Center now, and we'll show you how to lose your weight quickly and safely with Diet Center's unique and effective program."

Neighborhood Concept

(1) There are four Diet Centers in Lubbock . . . one near you, with this neighborhood concept designed for maximum customer benefit. Check further in this story for the Diet Center location and phone number that best can serve you."

Free Week In Program

(2) "One full week of Diet Center programs is available free for both you and a friend enrolling at any of these Lubbock Diet Centers! Come in, learn how much satisfaction can be yours, the Diet Center way, and with a full free week of programs."

Diet Centers are located at 2321-A 50th St., phone 793-5444, and at 4807 4th St., phone 793-1387 (with Marianne Maestas and Glenda Bratcher as owners of these), and at 3417 73rd St., phone 793-3438, and at 4912 34th St., Suite 306, phone 793-5444, with Rita Pence as owner.

'NO-ROACH MEANS NO ROACHES'

Imagine having an exterminator working for you 24 hours a day for weeks at a time, to keep your home free of cockroaches, ants, spiders, silverfish, etc . . . but that's just what happens with easy-to-use, long-lasting brush-on, 'Johnston's No-Roach . . . the modern scientific formula that's proven effective in over a hundred thousand homes.

"Our dieters are showing tremendous losses in both weight and inches," Marianna has reported; "and our programs are so simple to follow. Daily weigh-ins and individual counseling are stressed because we have found in our many Diet Centers all over the country that this factor is important in staying on a diet. We have special programs to fit the individual needs and are now successful serving many out-of-town dieters who are not able to come in every day."

Knowledgeable Counselors

"An important part of the Diet Center's program is a counseling staff that understands and cares about your particular problems, and knows how to help you attain the goals you have been seeking."

'No Energy Loss'

"A good explanation for a dieter's success with us is the feeling of wellbeing you will have throughout the diet. No loss of energy or nervousness accompanies our dieting period as you have found with so many programs, because you can easily follow your diet from day to day."

Find out what it is all about, this week, at Diet Centers where you can bring a friend and each enjoy a free week of your program! Join us for six weeks at Diet Center and lose the weight about which you have been concerned."

PRE-INVENTORY SALE

Lubbock Steel and Supply is preparing for inventory.

This means that Pre-Inventory Clearance values throughout the firm's tremendous stock present some exceptional buys.

For example, there is an excellent selection of new random angles, flats and rounds, at $13.95 cwt, with some random choices at still less in bulk order!

The Pre-Inventory prices are now in effect, so select early for extremely good buys.

Gray's Boys & Girls Fashions Holds Semi-Annual Clearance

Spring-Summer Clearance is underway at Gray's Boys & Girls Fashions, 50th Street at Salem Avenue, in Sunshine Square.

This semi-annual and meaningful sale at Gray's involves all spring and summer merchandise in the wide stock . . . with substantial price reductions.

For infants through student size 20, Gray's meets every apparel need, with exception of shoes.

There is so much that makes it fun to shop at Gray's Boys & Girls Fashions (where a great pre-teen selection is noted).

Sleepwear is stocked in all sizes, and the assortment probably is the most beautiful yet presented.

For those who conceivably may not yet have become acquainted with the distinctive store, the current sale affords a banner opportunity. Come in, browse, note the pleasing decor and the convenient stock arrangement, and the quality of merchandise.

Owners and founders Tom Gray and Kay Gray are on hand to personally assure fullest in customer service.

New fall merchandise has arrived and is swelling the stock at Gray's, and the present-season items must be moved to make room.

The customer thus profits . . . from the sale and from the new-stock items, with one trip enabling full advantage of each. Gray's is open late on Thursday evenings, until 9 p.m., for customer convenience.

(Gray's will close one day only for July 4.)

Remember, there are few stores that carry such a selection within its age range as does Gray's, and the ownership must be commended for the store's continuing and successful growth, for a stock that enables easy selection for value and style.

McWhorter's Aids Vacationing Family With Tire Sale, Auto Safety Service

Getting ready for vacation trips need not be difficult . . . especially insofar as preparing the family auto, thanks to the services and products at McWhorter's, 10th Street at Texas Avenue.

For one thing, every tire in the huge stock is marked at sale price until Sept. 1!

"We also have three of the best front-end men in the city (with experience of up to 25 years with us) to aid in front end alignment and related functions."

For safety's sake and in consideration of the family and passengers in vacation jaunts, it makes good sense to have the auto checked, with needed repairs, at McWhorter's, for:

Brakes, shocks, front end alignment, tires and all.

Let the "pros" at McWhorter's take over.

The annual tire saving event is the big economic assist for safer vacations, and it is even more significant with the impressive and meaningful guarantees from McWhorter and Goodyear.

McWhorter's has a complete stock of Goodyear tires, and the right price, to enable one to put a new set on the car, so that valuable hours will not be lost during crowded vacation activities in getting flats fixed or changing tires on the road.

Whatever the tire need, there are old "pros" at McWhorter's representing that firm and the Goodyear line for years and years, and these fellows can be a real aid in assuring the dollar's worth in the right tire for the need at hand.

Long On Experience

McWhorter's is especially proud of its experienced brake and front end men, claimed to be the best in the entire Southwest. (It always is good judgment to get the car checked for brake safety and correct front end alignment before starting the vacation trip; it is a consideration the family deserves and will appreciate.)

Front end alignment is only $12.50 including complete analysis and alignment correction to increase tire mileage, and improve steering safety, with precision equipment used by the experienced mechanics.

See McWhorter's (home owned and home managed) for Monroe shocks, too.

And recaps (with all radial passenger caps at just $25.95; and regular treads at even lesser prices as outlined in the McWhorter's ads in the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal.)

Free estimates and complete brake service is featured.

There are five ways to buy at McWhorter's, some may not realize, including: cash, Visa, Master Charge, McWhorter's own customer credit plan; and 30, 60, 90, days with no handling charge.

Whatever the tire need or front end and brake service desired, now is the time, and McWhorter's is the place. And save on tires!

Slumberland, Direct Mattress Firms Under Single Ownership

"Take your pick . . . Slumberland or Direct Mattress Co., now under same ownership, but each with significant new announcements designed for fullest service to the region.

"And did you realize that Direct Mattress Co. not only has new ownership, but it has a new home, too?"

Direct Mattress is now located at 1115-B Slaton Highway, just across from the Carriage House in southeast Lubbock.

Owners are Al Clifton, Curtis Campbell and Reggie Clifton, who also own and operate Slumberland at 3532 34th St.

The same quality staff has been retained at Direct Mattress, through ownership and location change, with some staffmembers marking up to 30 years service with the firm established back in 1916!

The same high quality traditional at Direct Mattress Co. is maintained, with services including renovation and rebuilding.

'We Sell Sleep'

Even the same motto, "We Sell Sleep" is correctly utilized!

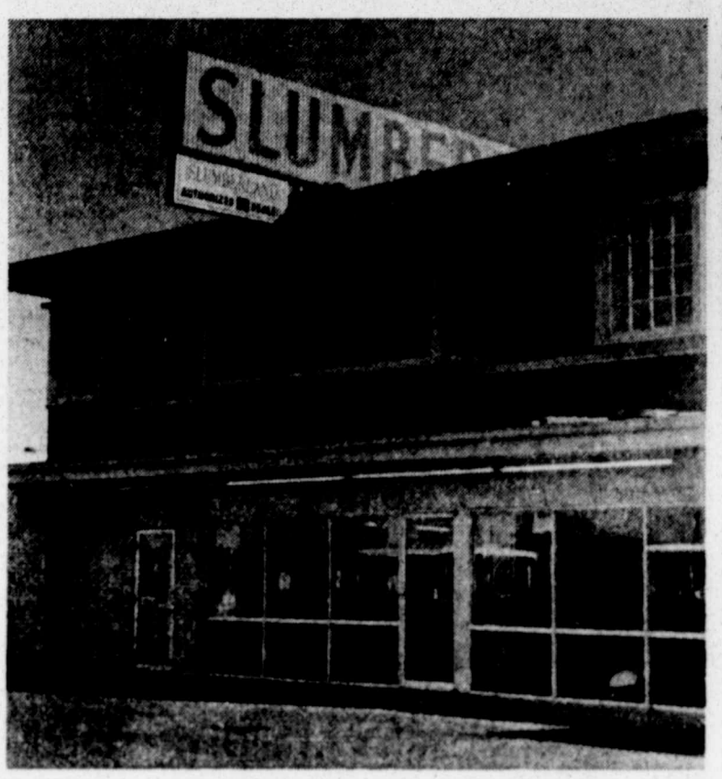
"The proper renovation of mattresses is a highly specialized profession, requiring properly trained technicians and the right kind of equipment. Through the years, Direct Mattress Co. has constantly upgraded methods and equipment, and further steps have been taken by the new ownership to assure that Direct Mattress ranks second to none anywhere for quality work.

So now, take your pick: Direct Mattress at 1115-B Slaton Highway, or Slumberland at 3532 34th St.; most likely you can use products and services from each to a distinct advantage.

More about Slumberland:

Owned and operated for about three years by the husband-wife team of Al and Shirley Clifton, the firm now has two new names associated in the ownership, Al's brother, Reggie Clifton; and Curtis Campbell, who is specializing in the commercial, tile and carpet phases of the expanded business.

Campbell is a Texas Tech graduate and is a former teacher and coach at Olton, Levelland, Roosevelt and at Evans Junior High School in Lubbock. An eight-year Lubbock resident, he has been owner and supervisor of apartments here for over two years before his announced association with Slumberland.



HOME OF EVERYTHING FOR THE BEDROOM

Another key situation is noted:

Interior Decorating, Design

Slumberland in the past has maintained a custom drapery department. Now, the firm has taken the entire second floor of its building for a new and complete interior decorating department, the "Unique Decor and Interior Design."

"We are now able to handle the needs of all our friends and customers in interior design and decorating, both residential and commercial."

"With formation of this department, we have added carpet, ceramic tile, vinyl flooring, new lines of fabrics, blinds and woven woods, and we are even adding a complete line of wallpaper.

Gary Wood, specialist in interior design for four years in Lubbock, heads the residential department. He is a graduate of Texas Tech in Interior Design and has been associated with Slumberland over three years.

"Gary or one of our other professional decorators will be glad to assist in giving new ideas, and they will be glad to give free estimates on any decorating need.

'Everything For Bedroom'

Traditionally, Slumberland has featured one of the very largest selections of bedspreads in the entire state; and this still holds true.

A complete stock of brass beds is stocked.

Also, there are gorgeous velvet headboards; and the pillows, satin sheets, round beds, lamps and even sheets and spreads for the round beds add to a complete stock of "everything for the bedroom."

Come by and meet or renew acquaintance with the staff and management. Each can be of definite benefit in just about anyone's decorating plans.

Dubose Automotive & Machine Shop Is Full-Service Facility

Dubose, at 1520 19th St., phone 765-8429, actually can handle any machine work for auto, truck and irrigation engines, in addition to its full-service garage, all at one convenient location.

"We have been telling you how very much Dubose Automotive & Machine has to offer; now it is easier than ever to see for yourself."

The big shop now is completely re-arranged, with the modern, efficient machines now grouped in an area where the customer cannot help but note the quality of tools and workmanship provided.

(Some modern machine shop installations are the only of their type in Lubbock, it is reported, such as the new Superflow 110 Flow Bench that checks the airflow in the total induction system.)

Master Charge and Visa transactions are welcomed.

Even with all other advantages afforded at the firm, the most important could well be the statement of policy:

"Our goal is to satisfy every customer, providing quality parts and service at least expense. We do what is needed, no more. If we find your auto needs additional repairs we contact you before doing more than you expected."

A trained staff is dedicated to this business concept, and every one of this staff is sent to any available training schools in the area to keep them "in the know" about the fast-changing automobile world.

Major and minor tune-ups are a specialty in the automotive section, and a guarantee of 6,000 miles or six months with limited warranty is provided.

Not only does Dubose do work for the individual motorist, but also for other garages and dealers.

The machine shop specializes in steel sleeved Vega short blocks, being among the first to offer this rebuilding service.

Dubose also now has the ability to bore small cylinders with its new equipment, enabling boring of lawn mower cylinders, motorcycles, etc.

Other service includes valve grinding, valve guide knurling and valve seat and guides replacement, resurfacing of heads and engine blocks, piston pin fitting, rod resizing, vat cleaning, brake drum grinding, disc rotor grinding, crankshaft exchange, Kwik-way bead blasting, and more.

Meet Mr. and Mrs. Dubose (Doug and Nancy) who are lifelong Lubbock residents and who have gathered around them a staff fully qualified to serve in a manner that deserves one's patronage.

SKILL, KNOWLEDGE AND RIGHT EQUIPMENT — Shown with latest machines at Dubose Automotive and Machine Shop are Doug Dubose, Tim Rowlette and Weldon Coffman with a boring bar and a new flow bench, both pieces of equipment said to be the only ones in town. The firm can bored down to 1 1/2 inch, as one of its services, providing an added benefit when small foreign cars, even mowers and other small motors are involved, together with the "big jobs." The flow bench helps to develop top performing engines, checking air flow in heads, intake manifolds, carburetors, etc.

LATHAM'S LONG HAS SERVED AREA SCOUTING NEEDS

Official Scouting Equipment, Supplies Abound At Latham's

From bedrolls to tents, if the need involves official uniforms and equipment for Scouts (Cubs through Boy Scouts, leaders and Explorers), then the place to shop is Latham's, the only official Scouting supply distributor in Lubbock.

Latham's, at 50th Street and Memphis Avenue, has stocked the finest Scouting equipment for 17 years, and most likely has the exact desired item in its huge stock.

"If it is made, we have it or we can get it," is the promise of Dick Proctor, department manager and Latham's staff-member since back in 1947.

'Enjoy It Now'

With summer vacation, trip, camping and outdoor time very much present, now is the time to enjoy the outdoor Scouting equipment to the fullest.

So very many of the items are practical, desired and available for anyone, of any age, and whether involved or not in Scouting.

If there are young folks in the family preparing for new vacation experiences, then let them go with the best . . . with Boy Scouts of America camping gear from Latham's, made tough, lightweight and field tested to last and last. There are terrific values and a wide assortment of accessories, books, craft and hobby items, camp cookware, sleeping bags, air mattresses, hammocks . . . and more . . . all at the big, friendly Latham's, 50th & Memphis in Lubbock.

'Husky' Sizes, Too

(Proctor calls attention to values and selection throughout the children's departments, boys and girls in infant and toddler sizes, girls sizes 3-6, 7-14 and 3-14 pre-teen, and boys 4-7, 8-4, 16-24 and even a "Husky" department.)

Pharr Trailer Sales, 1702 Clovis Road in Lubbock, likes to prove that travel and relaxation can take on a new enjoyment, new convenience and new thrill with the right recreational vehicle (RV) unit, accessories, equipment and service from Pharr, phone 765-6088, at the Amarillo Highway-Clovis Highway "Y" on Avenue Q in Lubbock.

Silver Streak, Coachmen, Apollo, Pharr Trailer Sales . . . these are names to know and appreciate when it comes to vacation and travel enjoyment!

Tuftwick Carpet Conducting Storewide Sale Extravaganza

Sometimes a firm conducts a sale with prices so fantastically low that even those unfamiliar with true value can recognize the exceptional savings.

Such a situation is presented in the current sale at Tuftwick. Store owners report the inventory must be reduced, so everything is placed on sale. There just isn't a better way to move quality merchandise fast than by pricing it at rock bottom!

This storewide Sale at Tuftwick Carpet, Inc. (Slide Road at Brownfield Highway in Lubbock) is special.

Examples of the savings include:

Double loop carpeting, ideal for economy, ideal for rental units, etc., begins at just $3.29, with pad attached making for easy self-installation.

And heavy nylon, with heavy foam rubber cushion attached, from $5.29!

In the vast inventory there are scads of rolls, first class carpeting, priced for immediate sale.

So...even with the always-low prices and the sales posted from time to time at Tuftwick Carpet, the current extravaganza is something most, most outstanding.

To further assist one in the sale purchases, remember these facts about Tuftwick Carpet,Inc. at Brownfield Highway and Slide Road in Lubbock, phone 795-5251:

Hours are 8 a.m. until 5:30 p.m.,Mondays through Fridays, with evenings by appointment. Saturday hours are 9 a.m. until..?

" Easy terms are available, with no money down and with up to 36 months in which to pay."

"It all is proof that Tuftwick goes all out to pass fantastic buys on to you, our valued customer, making everything as convenient for you as possible. While still emphasizing quality at low, low prices."

A shopping trip to Tuftwick is worth the trip from anywhere in the area, and the current sale makes this double so.

Extraordinary savings, even for Tuftwick, are presently enabled. Don't delay, shop now at Tuftwick Carpet, Inc., at Slide Road and Brownfield Highway to your profit, selection and complete satisfaction.

"If you have not been through the showrooms of the big Tuftwick Carpet, Inc., within the last few weeks, you are in for a real treat at your next visit."

First, there is a thrilling selection of patterns and materials.

Secondly, the prices and values simply cannot be beat.

Third reason for a trip to Tuftwick Carpet at Brownfield Highway and Slide Road could well be the most attractive display yet. Everything in the showroom has been conviently displayed for easy viewing, comparison and selection. It is an attractive, inviting place in which to shop.

The basic reason for shopping Tuftwick has not changed, however, and that is the integrity and experience of a capable staff devoting all efforts to serve the customers carpet needs as only possible with an experienced staff that "knows carpeting" and know how to please in every transaction.

PARTICIPATE IN SPECIAL OFFER — Among staffmembers at the Holiday Salon of Beauty arranging specific specials (as listed in the accompanying story) for a limited period, are Carol Becker, Jo Ann Fannin, Estella Loya, Regina Parrish, Kaye Rebber and Peggy Tooke.

Two-Week Special Price Values Told By Holiday Staffmembers

'Tis a highly qualified staff that makes for "satisfaction" assurance at the Holiday Salon of Beauty, 4935 Brownfield Highway, phone 795-8276.

"To help in your awareness of the quality synonymous with this salon conveniently located in southwest Lubbock, introductory specials are posted for a two-week period, including this week.

(Bring the salon's ad found on these pages to avail yourself of the specials.)

Check the following for specials by the various operators:

New On Staff

Carol Becker is new at Holiday Salon of Beauty, and the ownership is especially proud to welcome her as an experienced operator of some 15 years.

Carol's introductory offer includes precision cuts (men's and women's styles) at $8-$10; frostings at $20; and Uniperms at $18.50 as an extra special. Also a free hair analysis is made with prescription conditioners available.

Carol Becker is a long hair specialist and welcomes appointments for this and her other beauty aids.

Then there are the other Holiday operators likely already well known to you, but who also are posting specials for the two weeks, including:

Peggy Tooke, Jo Ann Fannin and Kaye Rebber are offering Uniperms at $18.50 and frostings at $20.

Peggy is offering (for first time customers) haircuts at one-half price with a shampoo and style!

Jo Ann Fannin is offering face lift facials for $15 "for a younger you," and precision cuts at $8-$10.

More Specials

Kaye Rebber has arranged her super special manicures at just $4. She states she has the lovely new Redken nail care products available.

Estella Loya and Regina Parrish are featuring sculptured nails at $30 a set. They also are offering the new 1978 summer haircuts, Bambi, Egyptian, Windrift, etc., at $8 to $10. Men's special styling cuts are $12.50 and body waves are $18.50 and up.

Folks To Trust

Of course Lou Cox, Hazel Cagle and Elsie Borden still are on the job, and so many nice things could be said about each. They round out the blue ribbon staff to which one can turn with confidence . . . at the Holiday Salon of Beauty, at Brownfield Highway and 29th Drive (4935 Brownfield Road), phone 795-8276.

At this season of the year, it is aptly pointed out, there are many demands for beauty attention, and the best hairstyles are in order, beginning with the proper cut.

Continuous Study

Seminars are attended periodically by the Holiday Salon staff in their continuing program of achieving the best results in newest trends.

Expert hair care for both men and women begins at the Holiday Salon of Beauty (where the natural curl look for straight hair is enabled); after all, there is no need for men's hair appearance to be drab!

"The invitation is extended to visit the Holiday Salon of Beauty at earliest convenience, with the two-week specials making this visit a real money-saving treat for every customer. You'll like the prices, the staff, the modern and convenient facilities, meeting or renewing acquaintance with the folks at the Holiday Salon of Beauty."

BENEFIT TO MOTORIST

"If you drive, then National Service Company (NSC) and Joe L. Smith Motors, 1301 19th St., can perform quite a service for you . . . in fact, several vital services are afforded."

(1) NSC provides "the newest idea in automotive history," the 12,000 mile or 12 month 100 per cent Lubricant Warranty Agreement for one's present vehicle (whether purchased at Joe L. Smith Motors or not).

(2) A rental fleet of family-size and luxury type autos, really better previously-owned cars, affords the type rentals one can really appreciate.

(3) Previously-owned autos, also of family size and luxury type, are sold by Joe L. Smith Motors, a firm proven by Smith's long record of service in Lubbock. In business since 1950, he has been on 19th Street for 12 years, and on the same prominent corner for five years.

Local Gill Construction Firm Relates Saving In Quality Home Improvement

"When your home's overhangs start to deteriorate, the entire residence begins to get that 'run down' look. Right?"

So . . . it is then time to learn of a Lubbock firm, Gill Construction Co., that utilizes the United States Steel soffit and fascia system that is more than just a cover-up for overhangs; it is more like a whole house beauty treatment.

Three (and even more) factors should cause one to give Gill special consideration:

(1) Savings of up to 30 per cent are posted in a mid-summer offer;

(2) Gill Construction Co. is an established "home town" firm, one that will be here tomorrow to stand behind its contract job and products;

(3) Gill can show you how you never need paint your home again (and with the rising costs on every hand, doesn't this appeal?)

Gill Construction Co., 1926 34th St., phone 747-5513, headed by Ike Gill who has 13 years in related business in Lubbock and the South Plains, is glad to give full details, explaining without obligation how you never need paint your overhang and facia board again ... by installing USS materials. Call collect, visit the office, or write P. O. Box 333, Lubbock.

Ike Gill can show the many, many advantages of fascia and siding, both or either, and his capable crew can install anywhere in the area — fast and immediately.

"Wouldn't it be great to eliminate painting forever? It can be done, thanks to Ike Gill and the USS buildings materials. Brick homes with wood overhang most certainly can benefit from the system, he points out.

And remember, USS siding also is installed by this Lubbock firm.

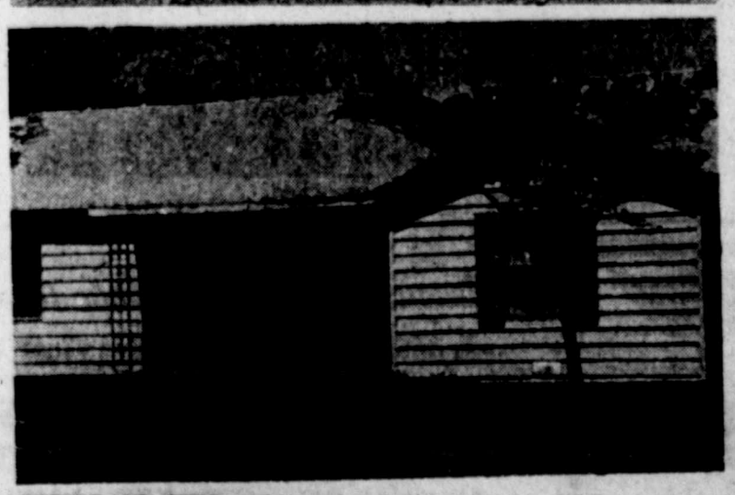
Furthermore: there is a 30-year guarantee on material and labor.

No down payment is required. Financing is available! The program is acceptable to FHA — Title I, Gill reports.

Consider the USS materials and their advantages, including:

(1) Available in a number of colors; (2) never needs painting; (3) goes up easily over old wood, asbestos, stucco or masonry walls; (4) superior insulation against heat, cold and outside noises; (5) does not support combustion; (6) will not peel, blister, flake, or warp; and (7) fast installation with professional results.

"So, homeowners take notice" it is true, with no gimmicks. You need never paint your home again



BEFORE AND AFTER — U.S. super steel siding installed by Gill Construction Co. 'makes quite a difference' in this area residence.

Electrophonic Truckload Sale Enters Final Week At Woolco

"You'll believe that it is Christmas . . . in June!"

It is the final week of the Electrophonic Truckload Sale at Woolco in Lubbock.

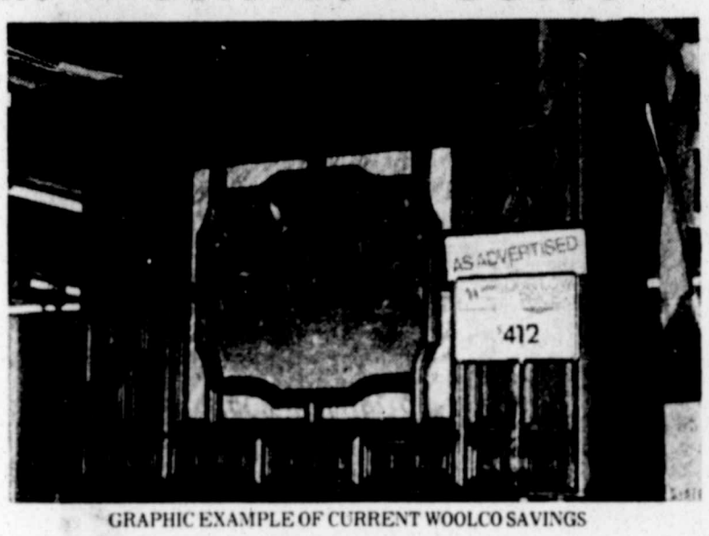
"There are some really great prices involved."

("We have some models that normally we can't even secure, but now made available . . . some at tremendous savings for you as our customers — our favorite people!"

We do not anticipate being able to pass on savings like the ones in this sale for some time, so we do urge you to come in, view, compare, select and save during this final week of the Electrophonic Truckload Sale at Woolco.

One of our best buys during the event is a stereo bar with recorder and with lights that flash to the beat of the music.

"Remember, at Woolco, your one stop for discounts, we go all out to prove we want to be your favorite store!"



GRAPHIC EXAMPLE OF CURRENT WOOLCO SAVINGS

VESELY COMPANY

??? WE TAKE THE GUESSWORK ??? out of choosing the right business!

We put people in business for themselves . . . that's our business! People just like you: ready to own and run a business, but unsure how to begin. WE SHOW THEM HOW!

First we show them our high impulse hardware & variety products that are proven sellers. Then we tell them about our national network of HHC Dealers, servicing their Handy Hardware Center displays in busy retail locations—and earning a 50% mark-up on every product sold!

We show them how they DO NO SELLING! . . . and need little business experience to begin. We show them how they can begin earning profits their very first day. We tell them how flexible our opportunity is: how THEY choose the size business that's right for them, beginning at $7950. Of course we tell them we secure all stores, train all Dealers, provide continuous promotional support and protect our Dealers with a Buy-Back Agreement. Then we show them our busy Home Office and say this: INVESTIGATE BEFORE YOU BUY!

And their choice is always easy. Because WE TOOK THE GUESSWORK OUT! Let us take the guesswork out of YOUR decision and help you choose the right business! Call or write Mr. Weston today for our FREE brochure, which spells out full details.

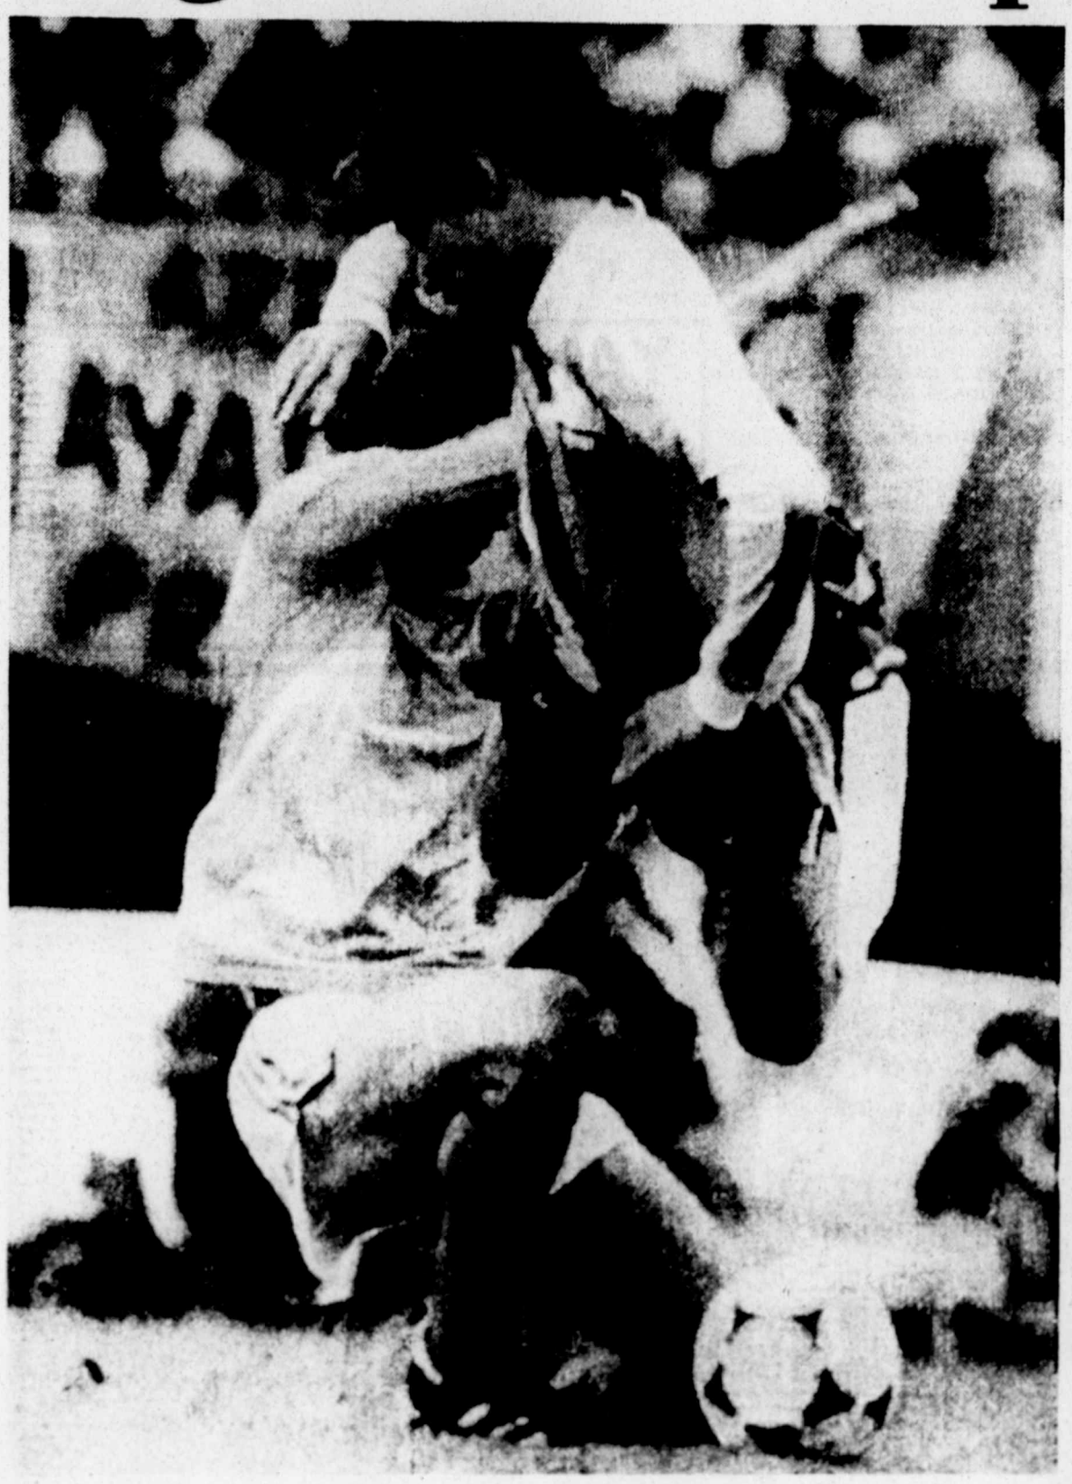
Argentina's Cup Runneth Over



ALL TANGLED UP—Argentine player Daniel Bertoni and Holland's Robert Rensenbrink show that soccer is definitely a contact sport during World Cup finals action Sunday in Buenos Aires. Argentina won the title, defeating Holland in overtime 3-1. (AP Laserphoto)

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — Mario Kempes scored two goals, the second about midway through 30 minutes of dramatic overtime, and Argentina won its first World Cup soccer championshp by beating the Netherlands 3-1 Sunday.

The rough-tackling Dutch — seeking their first Cup since coming so close in 1974 when they lost 2-1 to host West Germany — saw their scoring drives thwarted by spectacular Argentine goalie Ubaldo Fillol and had to settle for runner-up once again. No European team ever has won the Cup in South America.

A partisan crowd of 77,000 went wild, their roars of "Argentina, Argentina" thundering through River Plate Stadium to salute their country's first Cup triumph.

A nation of 25 million followed suit.

People poured into the streets with white and blue flags for a spontaneous all-night carnival.

The hero of the game was the 23-year-old Kempes, a clever striker who scored the first goal and the decider. Daniel Bertoni scored Argentina's clinching goal.

The required two 15-minute overtime periods were forced when Dirk Nanninga, who had been sent in as a substitute, scored with 9 minutes remaining in the regulation time of two 45-minute halves.

Nanninga's goal sent the River Plate crowd into stunned silence, with the exception of a small core of Dutch fans who cheered wildly.

Kempes not only tallied the deciding goal, but also topped the goal scorers' standings with a total of six for the month-long championship tournament.

His first goal Sunday was set up by Argentine captain Osvaldo Ardiles, who had been doubtful hours before the start of the game.

Ardiles dribbled past his Dutch opponents. He fell, but had a chance to push the ball to Leopoldo Luque, who passed to Kempes. Dutch goalie Jan Jonbloed, at 37 the oldest player in the tournament, came rushing out, but it was too late. Kempes, his back to the goal, suddenly turned and sent a low kick into the net for a 1-0 haftime lead.

But the orange-shirted Dutchmen fought back.

Dutch Coach Ernest Happel pulled out all stops by sending in fresh players for the second half. It almost paid off.

Nanninga and Wim Suurbier were brought on as substitutes, and Nanninga came through with the equalizer in the 81st minute of play. Nanninga leaped over a bunch of players inside the penalty area and like a crane, tipped his head to bounce the ball past Fillol.

Most of the crowd was dumbfounded. The small cluster of Dutch fans, stuck in a corner of the stadium, celebrated.

It was the first Cup final to go into overtime since 1966 when England, the host that year, beat Germany 4-2.

After Nanninga's tying goal, the Argentines gathered their forces to maintain a tradition. No European team ever has won a World Cup in South America.

Despite rough tackles by the Dutch, the Argentines pressed forward with attacking football.

Lietzke Wins Canadian Title

OAKVILLE, Ont. (AP) — Bruce Lietzke had to have the benefit of a collapse by would-be challengers to hang on for one-stroke victory Sunday in the Canadian Open Golf Championship.

"Winning this golf tournament means more to me than winning any of the others," Lietzke said after his scrambling, 2-over-par 73 was good enough to acquire the Canadian national title.

"This tells me that last year was not just a streak. This tells me I can win when I'm not playing at my absolute peak.

"This will be a big, big stepping stone in my career."

It didn't come easily this hot, sunny day.

"I'm not a super-confident person," Lietzke said. "I must have had 20 up and down periods out there. The ups were when I was practicing my acceptance speech. The downs were when I was telling myself that third or fourth wouln't be too bad.

"I don't know how the great players do it, how they stay on top all the time. Sometime I'd like to get inside their heads, the great players like Jack Nicklaus and Tom Watson and Lee Trevino, and see what they're thinking, how they manage to stay on top all the time."

Lietzke was on top for a while last year, scoring quick victories in Tucson and Hawaii and winning more than $100,000 before the season was a month old. But he'd been in a slump for more than 12 months before breaking through here.

Lietzke claimed the third victory of his career and first of the season with a 283 total. His score, one under, was the only subpar total recorded on the extremely difficult, 7,050 yard Glen Abbey Golf Club course.

Lietzke took the lead with an eagle-3 on the final hole of Saturday's third round and was never headed, though tied a couple of times in the early going Sunday.

His biggest challenges came from Australian Bob Shearer and swashbuckling Lee Trevino.

But Shearer disappeared after taking an "8" on the 14th hole and Trevino drifted back with a bogey-par-bogey-bogey string in the stretch run.

"I thought I had him and I let him get away," Trevino said. "That's just giving it away. It's my fault. I started fast just like I wanted, but I couldn't maintain the momentum."

Rookie Pat McGowan came on with birdies on 2 of his last 4 holes, including a 10-foot putt on the 72nd hole, to take second alone at 284, even par. He had a closing 72 and happily threw the ball in the pond that guards the green after he'd holed out.

Ben Crenshaw missed a 10-12 foot birdie putt on the last hole that would have tied him for second. He had to be content with a 72 and a tie at 285 with Trevino, who matched par 71.

Lopez' Streak Halted

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — Rookie Nancy Lopez, tuckered out from the grind and plagued by the distractions of her sensational success, finally ran out of gas Sunday as Pat Bradley won the Lady Keystone Open with a blistering finish.

"I'm really glad this week is over. It was the mental part of my game. My stroke was good, but I just wasn't thinking the ball in," said the 21-year-old Lopez, who shot a 2-over-par 74 and wound up 15 strokes behind Bradley's 10-under-par 206 total.

"I just really couldn't get myself started. I was getting headaches when I finished. I've got to slow down, spread my time out a little bit and concentrate more on golf," she added after faltering in her bid for an unprecedented sixth straight win.

"I'm going to rest for the next three days. I'm not going to pick up a club but I'll be ready to play next week," she said.

Lopez, the richest rookie in golf history and holder of the Ladies Professional Golf Association record for most consecutive wins, needed a miracle to overcome the eight-shot deficit she faced going into the final round of this $50,000 event.

An imploring gallery, snaking its way around the 6,398-yard, par 72 layout at the Hershey County Club, watched wistfully as their idol failed to muster a charge.

Bradley provided the fireworks, shooting a 5-under-par 67 to carve out a four-shot victory over Jane Blalock and dash Lopez's hopes.

A HAPPY FELLO—Daniel Passarella, Argentina's team captain, holds up the World Cup soccer trophy as fans carry him around the River Plate stadium in Buenos Aires Sunday. Argentina defeated Holland 3-1. (AP Laserphoto)

Soccer Boom Kicking Up In U.S.

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — "The World Cup games will serve as an inspiration to the United States to become more proficient with the sport," said John Best, vice president of the U.S. Soccer Federation.

Best and many others involved with the fastest growing sport in the United States have been in Argentina since the 16-nation tournament began May 25 — primarily as observers.

But looming close behind is the giant businessman.

One U.S. businessman, who asked not to be identified, said, "You don't realize the merchandizing potential behind this new sport — and don't ever forget the T-shirt."

Another U.S. representative, former CBS President Bob Wussler, flew down from New York earlier last week for a short meeting with Joao Havelange, president of the International Soccer Federation (FIFA), to make an offer for the world television rights for the 1982 World Cup games set for Spain.

"It's still a gamble at this point," said Wussler, accompanied by independent sports promoter Bob Kap of Dallas. Kap said the two made an initial offer of over $25 million for the next Cup games.

Wussler brought a recently edited 25-minute film of Super Bowl XII between Dallas and Denver in an effort to show U.S. television technology in hopes of swaying FIFA to grant TV rights to the United States.

Havelange had no comment on the film but was quite emphatic in his opinion about U.S. pro football.

"For me, football isn't worth anything," Havelange commented.

There is a small group of sports figures, including Joe Robbie, owner of the Miami Dolphins, who have expressed doubt that U.S. fans can support soccer along with college and pro football.

Best disagrees. "We have a half million players across the country including youths already registered with our federation and there's another half million non-registered athletes playing soccer," he said.

The soccer official argued that "both sports can live together. The National Football League season is short and the public can attend both sports in a single season."

One of Robbie's arguments is that soccer will flourish only as long as the ticket to see a game remains around the $3 price it has now, "but if soccer players become the big salary stars like in baseball and football, the teams will have to charge more to cover their costs," he said recently.

Best agreed and said Robbie "should discuss that with the Cosmos." It was the Cosmos who paid Brazilian star Pele $4.7 million in 1975 to play three years for the North American Soccer League team and has since gained the services of Franz Beckenbauer, another international star.

Best said the federation's future lies in the youth movement spearheaded by the U.S. national team which has qualified for the World Cup games only twice — in 1930 and in 1950.

Rangers Beat Angels, Nab First Place

By The Associated Press

Mike Hargrove's three-run double and Toby Harrah's two-run single capped a six-run Texas fifth inning Sunday night, backing the seven-hit pitching of Doc Medich and carrying the Rangers to a 7-0 victory over the California Angels.

The triumph completed a four-game series sweep of the Angels and sent Texas into first place in the American League's West Division.

California's Don Aase, 4-4, walked Jim Sundberg with the bases loaded for the other Rangers run in the fifth.

Medich, 2-3, allowed five hits over the first four innings, then retired 14 in a row before permitting two singles in the ninth.

PIRATES 4, METS 0

Rennie Stennett and John Milner crashed two-run homers to back the five-hit pitching of Bert Blyleven as the Pittsburgh Pirates defeated the New York Mets 4-0.

Blyleven, 7-5, struck out five and walked two en route to his third shutout and sixth complete game in 16 starts.

YANKS 4, TIGERS 2

Graig Nettles and Chris Chambliss drove in fifth-inning runs to break a tie while Don Gullett and Rich Gossage combined on a nine-hitter as the New York Yankees beat the Detroit Tigers, 4-2.

Gullett, 3-0, was replaced with two out in the Detroit eighth by Gossage, who recorded his 11th save.

CARDS 7, EXPOS 5

Garry Templeton, atoning for an error in the top of the seventh which led to two Montreal runs, doubled home the winning run in the bottom of the inning as the St. Louis Cardinals trimmed the Expos 7-5.

Starting pitcher Bob Forsch, who pounded a two-run homer for St. Louis, was the victim of three unearned runs. Reliever Buddy Schultz, 1-2, got the victory.

REDS 5, DODGERS 4

Right fielder Lee Lacy's error in the top of the ninth inning enabled Pete Rose to race home from second base with the tie-breaking run and the Cincinnati Reds beat Los Angeles 5-4.

Rose walked with one out and took second when pinch-hitter Joe Morgan grounded out. Dave Concepcion followed with a liner to right and when Lacy failed to glove it Rose scored. Concepcion then stole second and came home with what proved to be the winning run on a single by Dan Driessen.

ASTROS FALL TWICE

Dave Winfield and Oscar Gamble combined to drive in seven runs as the San Diego Padres extended their winning streak to five straight games by sweeping a doubleheader from the Houston Astros, 6-1 and 7-4.

In the opener, left-hander Bob Shirley, 4-9, pitched a four-hitter, striking out eight and walking two. Winfield collected two hits and drove in three runs and Gamble added a two-run double off J.R. Richard, 6-8.

TWINS SWEEP CHISOX

Roy Smalley's grand slam homer capped a seven-run fourth inning in the second game Sunday, powering the Minnesota Twins to a 9-6 victory over the Chicago White Sox and a sweep of their double-header.

Smalley homered and had two doubles in the opener and Mike Marshall pitched four scoreless innings of relief to give the Twins an 8-5 triumph in the first game.

Bob Randall walked to open the fourth inning of the nightcap, and singles by Bombo Rivera, Jose Morales and Dan Ford produced two runs.

JAYS, INDIANS SPLIT

Andre Thornton's solo home run in the fifth inning gave the Cleveland Indians a 3-2 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays and a split of their double-header.

Roy Howell's RBI single capped a two-run Toronto eighth inning led the Blue Jays to a 2-1 triumph in the opener.

PHILLIES 4, CUBS 2

Greg Luzinski's two-run homer in the first inning propelled the Philadelphia Phillies to a 4-2 victory over Chicago, a four-game sweep of the Cubs and a two-game lead in the National League East.

The Cubs' ace right-hander, Rick Reuschel, 8-5, left in the third inning with a stiffness in his pitching elbow after falling behind 3-0.

M's 10, BREWERS 8

Bob Stinson's bases-loaded single with two out in the ninth inning capped a Seattle comeback and helped the Mariners survive seven errors to record a 10-8 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

The Mariners filled the bases in the ninth on a single by Leon Roberts, two walks and a sacrifice. After Tom Paciorek grounded into a forceout at the plate, Stinson worked the count to 3-2, then fouled off three Bob McClure pitches before sending his hit to left field.

BRAVES, GIANTS SPLIT

Jerry Royster's two-run single and Gary Matthews' two-run double in a five-run 11th inning gave the Atlanta Braves an 8-4 victory over the San Francisco Giants for a split of their doubleheader.

John Montefusco pitched s six-hitter for his sixth straight victory and received home-run support from Bill Madlock and Mike Sadek as the Giants won the opener 9-3.

A's 6, ROYALS 3

Tony Armas belted a tie-breaking home run as the Oakland A's pushed across two runs in the seventh and defeated the Kansas City Royals 6-3.

Glen Burke doubled, stole third and scored the tying run on Jim Essian's long sacrifice fly before Armas unloaded.

Armas and Mike Edwards added insurance RBI in the ninth.

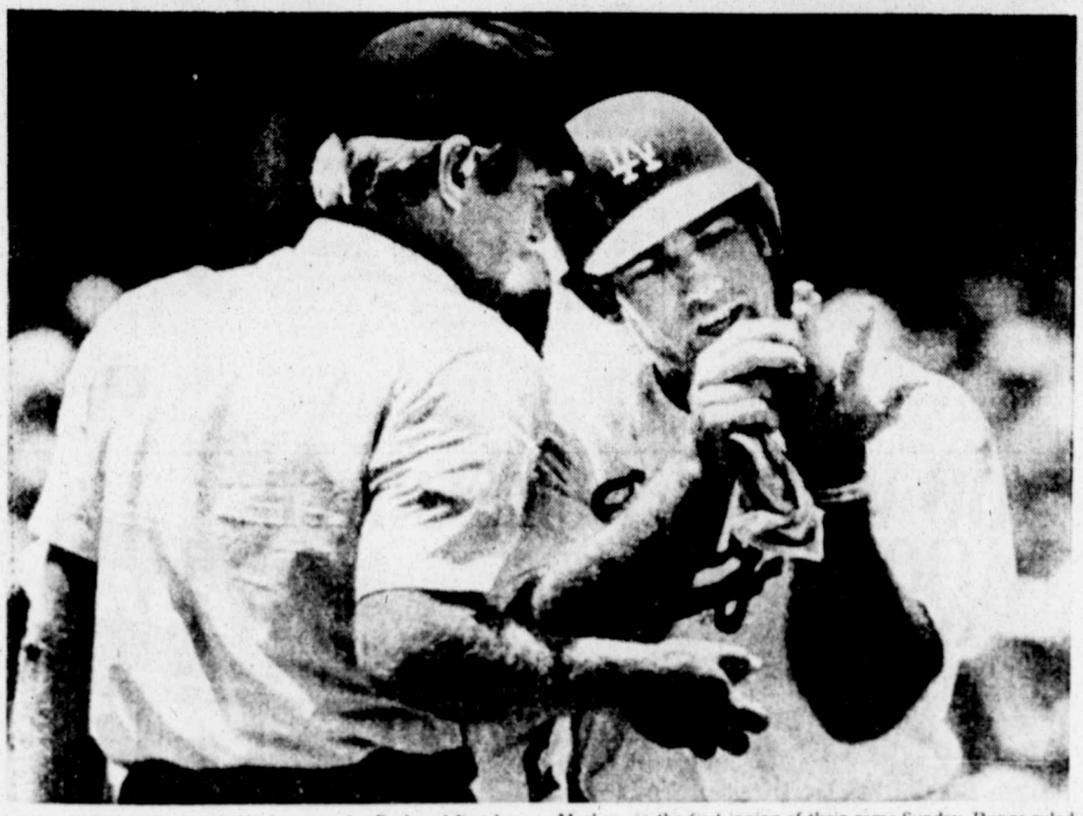
The winner in relief was Bob Lacey, 6-3, whose scuffle with Royals' catcher Darrell Porter triggered a brief brawl in the fifth. Porter was ejected but Lacey stayed in.

BOSOX 4, O's 1

Mike Torrez posted his 11th victory with the help of a fifth-inning homer by Rick Burleson as the Boston Red Sox completed a three-game sweep of the Baltimore Orioles with a 4-1 decision.

A Fenway Park crowd of 33,526 sent the Red Sox over the million mark in home attendance on their 36th playing date. Boston leads the American League in home attendance with an average of 28,000.

Torrez, 11-3, reached a season high with nine strikeouts, walked three and finished with an eight-hitter. He lost his shutout bid in the sixth when Andres Mora hit his fourth homer this season.



IT GOT ME RIGHT HERE—Los Angeles Dodgers' first baseman Steve Garvey argues with home plate umpire Paul Runge that he was hit by a pitch from Cincinnati Reds pitcher Paul Moskau in the first inning of their game Sunday. Runge ruled that Garvey wasn't hit and that proved OK to the Dodger as he hit a double and scored one run for his team. (AP Laserphoto)

Thorne Posts Dragway Win

Hollis Thorne traveled the quarter mile at Lubbock Dragway in 11.383 seconds to win first place in the Super Bracket Saturday.

Thorne, in his 1971 Camaro, outlasted Jack Tyson who broke out (exceeded his predicted time) and had to settle for runner-up in the race.

The victory was worth $300 to the Lubbock racer.

In other action, Terecia Haigood collected more championship points in the street division with a 16.559 win over Dwayne Brown.

Driving a 1969 Camaro, Haigood increased her first place point total to 15. The top 32 point getters in each bracket at the end of the summer qualify for the Texas International Hot Rod Association finals at Greenway Valley Raceway in the Dallas-Ft. Worth area.

Saturday's results are:

Johnson Grabs Lead At Dirt Track

Larry Johnson moved out of a tie with Charley Whorton and into the lead in modified stock car standings at Lubbock Speed Bowl Saturday night. And with only one more night of racing left to determine the midseason champion, Johnson will be hard to catch.

Charley's best shot was a third in the semi, while Larry won his heat, got second in the semi and won the main. Defending champ Jimmy Bilbrey, the division's other major contender, could post only a heat race second place with a "detuned" engine awaiting goodies to make it go.

Johnson's major threat was Roger Davis, who returned to the dirt track to drive the Camaro he sold here three weeks ago. The Hobbs driver won his heat and the semi and also got the trophy handed out by Lou Ann Waits.

In an extension of the trophy ceremony, Jimmy Bilbrey, Don Spear and Bobby "Cherokee" Mears were honored for having the best appearing cars in the spring show of race cars at the South Plains Mall.

In the street stock division, Ruben Perez, among the track's most improved drivers, won his heat, the trophy dash and the main event. In other racing action, Don Spear won the VW main, Jerry Winton the figure 8 race and Beralyn Whitehead, Karen Peters and Linda Spear took modified, street stock and Volkswagen honors, respectively, in the Powderpuff Derby. Argentina Wins Cup

At the 104th minute, Kempes again shot through a confused tangle of players in front of the Dutch penalty area for Argentina's second goal.

The stadium exploded with the sound of blaring horns and whirring ratchets.

The Dutch, playing with eight of the players who lost the 1974 final against West Germany, desperately tried for the equalizer. But it was not to be.

Finally, with 6 minutes left in the second extra period, Bertoni came though with the goal that brought Argentina peace of mind.

Kempes fed Bertoni on the right wing and he scored on a low grass-grazing shot through a tangle of Dutch players that made it 3-1.

Incredible scenes marked the finish of the games as fans cheered and waved national flags, kissed and hugged each other.

Tears streamed down many faces as captain Daniel Passarella stepped up to receive the golden trophy from the hands of Argentine President Gen. Jorge Videla.

Hundreds of fans invaded the field to reach up and kiss it as though it were a holy relic.

It was the climax of a dream nourished by a nation of fanatic soccer fans, and a military government. The regime had spent $700 million to prepare for a sports event estimated to be watched at one time or another by 1 billion persons around the world.

Jorge Olguin, Luis Galvan and Alberto Tarantini formed a solid defensive wall which the Dutch could not penetrate. In midfield, too, the Argentines had the best of it, with Kempes the dominant figure.

The Netherlands, a team committed to total football — a game with no defined positions — had some chances on counterattacks.

Jan Rep missed two glorious attempts at scoring in the first half. Rob Rensenbrink, who finished second in the goal scorers' standings, hit the post in the last second of regulation play and nearly robbed Argentina of the trophy.

COLLISION—Jim McElreath of Arlington, Texas loses his front tire as he crashes into the front end of Tom Bagley's auto, sending tires flying in the air after the collision on the first turn during the running of the Schaefer 500 at the Pocono International Raceway Sunday. No one was injured. (AP Laserphoto)

Al Unser Sets Schaefer Pace

MOUNT POCONO, Pa. (AP) — Al Unser, relying on the uncanny reliability of his new Lola and the smooth service work of his pit crew, set a steady pace and took an easy victory in Sunday's eighth annual Schaefer 500, giving him an unprecedented sweep of the past three events in Indianapolis car racing's Triple Crown.

Unser, who won the California 500 last fall and the Indianapolis 500 a month ago, finished 24.5 seconds ahead of Johnny Rutherford, who bumped into defending champion Tom Sneva while battling for position on the final lap. They were the only drivers to complete all 200 laps around Pocono International Raceway's 2½-mile trioval.

The victory, the 34th of the Albuquerque driver's career in U.S. Auto Club championship racing — second only to A.J. Foyt on the all-time list — hoisted Unser into second place behind Sneva in the points chase toward the 1978 national championship. Unser joined Foyt, who dropped out while in fourth just eight laps from the end, as a two-time winner of the event.

Unser took charge of the race shortly after Danny Ongais, the pole position starter and early pacesetter, dropped out with a broken transmission after completing through the 130th lap.

In the remaining 150 miles, most of Unser's closest challengers ran into difficulty.

Gordon Johncock, in second place with 100 miles left, made a 1 minute, 19 second pit stop for throttle repairs and retired a few laps later with a burnt piston.

Rutherford, who led for several laps until lap 190 because his pit sequence was different than Unser's, had to make an unscheduled stop at lap 165 to correct a tire problem.

Sneva, who just couldn't seem to make up ground he lost during the middle of the race, finished third at a crawl after touching wheels with Rutherford.

Wally Dallenbach rallied past Larry Dickson for fourth place.

Ongais jumped to a quick lead at the start of the race, with Johnny Rutherford, A.J. Foyt and Gordon Johncock close behind.

But the race was slowed after only five laps for a tow-in on Al Loquasto. Just as the green flag came out after that delay, Bill Vukovich spun going into turn two, bringing out another yellow.

Wimby Net Action Opens Today

LONDON (AP) — Who can stop Bjorn Borg and Jimmy Connors from once again reaching the Wimbledon men's singles final?

That question is on every tennis fan's lips here as Wimbledon — an institution as British as fish and chips — gets under way today.

It was Borg who beat Connors in the 1977 final. And the experts are finding it hard to name anyone in this year's championships who is likely to upset those two.

Borg, who has won the men's singles title at the world's leading lawn tennis tournament for the past two years, has a special reason for wanting a third title.

Not since 1936 has any player won three consecutive titles, although many greats have tried.

Connors, however, is hitting top form at just the right time. He came back from illness that had kept him out of the game for two months to ease past Raul Ramirez in the final of the John Player tournament, only dropping six games in three sets. Ramirez picks Connors to regain the title he held in 1974.

Connors has spent the week practicing, sometimes at Queen's Club, where he did not enter the final pre-Wimbledon tournament. Borg has not played in any warm-up tournaments in Britain.

Borg has said he could "give you a list of about 75 guys who could beat me in the first round. I'd rather not face any of them."

Certainly Wimbledon always has its upsets and Borg, who opens the tournament against the giant American Victor Amaya, could certainly have hoped for an easier start. Amaya is one of the serve and volley players who can make their mark at Wimbledon.

JIMMY CONNORS

Connors, in contrast, opens against a virtual unknown, New Zealander Russell Simpson.

Men's tennis is so competitive, though, that any one of the seeded players, if things go right, could conceivably take the title.

Last year 18-year-old American John McEnroe had to qualify before the tournament and went all the way to the semi-finals.

McEnroe is there again but the biggest danger to Borg and Connors could come from New Yorker Vitas Gerulaitis, the 1977 French Open champion.

At 23, just one year older than Borg, Gerulaitis was dubbed "the eternal second" until he won at Stade Roland Garros. Now he has the taste of winning — and he likes it.

NHL Ponders Merger Plan

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Hockey League's Board of Governors will meet in Detroit this week to decide whether to accept certain clubs from the World Hockey Association.

After reports on the status of the Colorado Rockies and New York Islanders, William Wirtz — president of the Chicago Black Hawks and chairman of the NHL board — will report on negotiations he has held with WHA officials.

Sources said three WHA clubs — Edmonton, Quebec and New England — would be proposed for admission to the NHL for the 1978-79 campaign. A fourth, Winnipeg, would be considered but probably would be admitted for the 1979-80 season.

WHA clubs not included in the plan — Indianapolis, Birmingham, Cincinnati and Houston — would be paid by the clubs shifting to the NHL. The format is similar to the payments made to American Basketball Association teams which did not join the National Basketball Association two seasons ago.

Doubt over Colorado's plans, however, has clouded the number of clubs that would be admitted for next season.

Rockies President Jack Vickers has been unsuccessful in attempts to negotiate a new lease for his franchise, and has mentioned moving to Houston — a concept not viewed favorably by the NHL directorate.

Should Colorado continue operation, three new members would boost the NHL complement to 20 teams. If the Rockies bow out, the assumption is that only two teams — Edmonton and Quebec — would enter, leaving NHL membership at 18 teams and giving New England time to reconstruct its arena following the collapse the Hartford, Conn., Civic Center last winter.

Decision on the proposed acceptance will be made at the meeting, two well-placed sources said. The matter will not linger as it did last year, when the proposed admission of six WHA clubs was voted down.

"If Wirtz twists enough arms, it will happen this week," said one source. "If it's not done at this meeting," said another, "it won't get done at all."

A positive vote of three-quarters of the NHL board would be needed for approval of the proposal.

The presidents of both leagues, John Ziegler of the NHL and Howard Baldwin of the WHA, have refused comment on the matter.

NHL Counsel Gil Stein, it was learned, has held exploratory talks with U.S. District Court Judge Leon A. Higginbotham in Philadelphia to obtain permission for admitting the WHA teams. A source said Higginbotham, who adjudicated the $50 million lawsuit brought by the WHA against the NHL 1974, gave Stein a tentative go-ahead.

Junior Golf Event Begins Action Today

More than 40 young linksmen will tee off this morning in the City Junior Golf Tournament at Meadowbrook Golf Course.

Players will compete over 54 holes today, Wednesday and Thursday in five different age groups (9-10, 11-12, 13-14, 15-16, 17-18). Tee-off time will be 8 a.m., and groups will leave the first tee at eight-minute intervals.

Meadowbrook pro Jay McClure figured a number of top local golfers would contend in each group. Brian Sheffield, Cliff Baggett and Jeff Watts rate among the top names in the oldest age group.

David Alderson, who won the 12-13 age group of the West Texas PGA last week at Meadowbrook, is entered in the 13-14 group this week. Another WT PGA winner in the 14-15 group, Miles Mathis, ranks among the 15-16 hopefuls.

Mexico Gearing Up For Miss Universe Pageant

MISS UNIVERSE '54 TO JOIN THE JUDGES — Christal Martel, right, is shown shortly after coronation as Miss Universe 1954. At left, is Ana Bertha Lepe, who came in fourth in the competition in 1954. MEXICO CITY (AP) — Organizers of next month's Miss Universe Pageant were so confident of its financial success they donated all ticket proceeds to the Mexican Red Cross — before one ticket was sold.

Ticket sales began recently for the pageant to be held in both Mexico City and the Pacific resort Acapulco. The final competition will be televised worldwide the evening of July 24.

"We expect to donate at least $250,000. The Mexican television network Televisa has promised at least $50,000 more," said Roberto Guerrero, public relations spokesman for the organizing committee.

Only 2,500 seats in the Acapulco convention center were available at $100 each. The other thousand seats were reserved for guests, judges, the media and dignitaries.

The organizing committee is headed by Ernesto Soto, a real estate attorney who has been promoting the pageant in Mexico for several years. He keeps the expected gross income figure a secret more tightly guarded than the name of this year's winner, to be selected from 93 contestants.

"This TV program is the third biggest television show on earth, right after the World Soccer Cup and the Olympics," Guerrero said. "It attracted 500 million viewers last year and we expect 600 million this year. Those aren't my figures — CBS says so."

Twelve judges include Mexico's most famous comedian, Mario Moreno — better known as "Cantinflas" — who starred in "Around the World in 80 Days," and Cristian Martel Aleman, Miss Universe 1954. She is married to Miguel Aleman Jr., a vice president of Televisa and son of former Mexican President Miguel Aleman.

Other judges are movie actor Alain Delon and actress Ursula Andress.

The eight-event pageant begins with opening ceremonies in Mexico City's National Auditorium near the legendary castle where Maximilian and Carlota reigned over Mexico in the last century. There will be sumptuous suppers at posh hotels and restaurants in Mexico City, and a parade of floats down the capital's Reforma boulevard.

The contestants will be flown to Guadalajara, Merida and Cancun on the Caribbean, the Mayan ruins of Chichen-Itza in Yucatan, and driven to Cuernavaca and Cocoyoc, where fabled Aztec emperors vacationed.

In nearby Toluca, the contestants will watch a Charro spectacle, a bull roping and wrestling event not unlike Western rodeos.

The Ballet Folklorico will perform during the pageant.

Woman Director Still Battles Stereotype

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — She saw directing as a man's job — gritty, sweaty, behind-the-cameras labor remote from the movie glamor of her dreams.

Joan Darling, an actress who has become one of America's first full-time women movie directors, still fights the sexual stereotype that dies hard in movieland.

"When I was in college studying acting, people would ask me to direct scenes," Joan recalls. "I felt so masculine I couldn't stand myself.

"I would wear jeans and smoke. I felt tough and powerful and unattractive, and I knew that no man would like me."

She became an actress instead.

"From the time I was three, I thought that being in the movies meant you could be the person you were playing," she says. "I thought you got to be a doctor or a reporter or a rich person for two years or so."

She did Shakespeare, off-Broadway, Broadway and television. But people were still asking her to direct.

Norman Lear first convinced Joan to direct the pilot and some episodes of "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman." Then she directed an Emmy-winning segment of the Mary Tyler Moore show and was signed for more episodes.

"I thought, 'Oh, my God, I can make a living!'" recalls the once-starving actress. But her early doubts lingered. "I used to come home from MTM and say to my husband, 'Do I look awful? Do I smell sweaty?' I would feel so ugly.

"Then one day I realized what was the matter with me," she recalls. "I was standing there on the set all day with no artifice. It was strictly me...not an actress in a role. As soon as I connected it up, I stopped feeling that way."

Last year, Darling directed her first feature film, "First Love," a gentle, explicitly sexual story of a college love affair. The film was a modest financial success and won some good reviews.

"It was an odd first movie for me," says Joan. "It was such a feminine movie, such a sweet, soft, sensitive story — people would expect a woman to direct it."

But "First Love" won her an invitation to set up offices at 20th Century Fox Studios to plan future directing efforts. It also convinced her that directing was in her blood.

Fire Guts Building As Onlookers Gawk

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (UPI) — Everyone thought someone else had taken care of it.

But after more than 1 1/2 hours of watching a fire at a small apartment complex, it became apparent to the 30 onlookers that no one had called the fire department.

A neighbor finally made the call, but by the time fire trucks arrived three minutes later, it was to late to to save the building.

"It was just case of everybody thinking someone else had called us," said Lt. Phil Silva, an investigator for the Albuquerque Fire Department. "If they had called earlier, we would have been able to save some of it at least."

KRUEGER BERATES TOWER

AUSTIN (AP) — Rep. Bob Krueger, Democratic candidate for U.S. Senate, said Saturday that all Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, knows about the cattle industry is what Tower has read. "John Tower's 17 years in the Senate won't lift a forkful of hay on a Texas cattle ranch," said Krueger in a speech to the Texas Independent Cattlemen's Association.

Peter Graves Recalls 'Fury' Series

DALLAS (UPI) — It has never bothered Peter Graves' ego that he was the star of a Saturday morning children's television show for years before movies and "Mission Impossible" boosted his career and wealth.

As Jim, foster father to delinquency-prone Joey in "Fury" ("The story of a horse and the boy who loved him"), Graves put in five years' work in a series of mini-fables which played in syndication longer than the once-prime time MI spy thrillers, although admittedly Fury had a decade's head start while MI is now booming in 80 nations.

Today, 23 years after the initial fury episodes, Graves smiles while acknowledging the show's equine character outearned him in the series despite a temperament which occasionally delayed shooting.

"We made those in the days 1955-59, when nobody thought about taking a percentage of the profits of a series," said Graves, 52, in Dallas on a promotional tour for the Honeywell Corporation of Minneapolis, his hometown.

"We made them for $30,000 each for 5 years and then they reran for 6 years on NBC and then went into syndication. The guy who owned the horse asked for 5 percent and got it and through the years I would see him and he'd say he just got another check for $90,000 or $65,000."

There were days, Graves recalls, when Fury — like the cast's human members — would not feel like working, but eventually his owner-trainer would berate or cajole the stallion into performing.

Graves said Fury, who was well-cured for until his death at age 29, was never allowed to breed for fear he "would never do his tricks again."

The most identifiable segment of every episode was the closing when Graves, Joey and Pete — the ranchhand pressed close to Fury. Graves or the youngster would comment on life's blessings, Fury would nicker and everyone would laugh.

"Yes, that was our tag line," Graves said. "That's when I learned to laugh without feeling like it. That, my friend, is acting.

"But Fury was a series of little Aesop's Fables, timeless stories on the benefits of the outdoor life. Every show taught something, they were constructed that way, to always teach a little lesson.

"Years from now, your kids will still be watching Fury."

Graves considers current prime time television to be both not very good nor very enjoyable from the actor's viewpoint.

"I watch less than I have but a lot of people are doing that. I'm not sure what it (prime time television) should be. People are going to watch something. But the quality is off. There are too many situation comedies with laugh track backgrounds. There was so much shouting about violence that now we have sex.

"Now it's such a numbers game and, if you don't have the numbers in the first four weeks, you're off the air."

The days are gone, he said, when a show can be kept on by a network official who believes its rating might improve during a second or third season.

Having acted in both television and films and directed segments of brother James Arness' 'Gunsmoke" and his own Mission Impossible, Graves prefers film roles.

"I love working in films and it's easier (to earn a living) if you can make two or three movies a year," he said. "You don't work as hard as on TV where the daily grind gets old.

"... acting has been good to me. It's allowed me to travel. I've been able to see a lot of the world, which is very important to me. I did a Time-Life series called 'Other People, Other Places' which was really superior and naturally went off. Maybe it was a little bit too intellectual, but I was very proud of it and thought it was very well done.

"I also like to loaf. We have a place at Lake Tahoe and I water ski and snow ski and play some tennis.

"But I love acting, basically I am an actor and I love to do that the most."

Spruce Goose Needs New Roost

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — The Spruce Goose, the massive wooden airplane that was built by Howard Hughes as a World War II troop transport but flew only once for one mile, will have to find a new place to roost.

James H. McJunkin, director of the city's harbor where the 220-foot-long plane was housed out of public view for three decades, said the Spruce Goose's heavily guarded hangar is delaying development of 20 acres of a pier as an Atlantic Richfield Co. marine fuel operation.

"Basically, they've been told to get out," McJunkin told the Los Angeles Times, adding that the lease on the hangar would be extended on a month-to-month basis for up to a year while a new home is found for the plane.

The flying boat — the largest airplane ever built — has been housed in the hangar since its first and only flight in November 1947, when Hughes took the controls for a one-mile flight across Long Beach Harbor at an altitude of 70 feet.

The plane remained tucked away in its harbor roost and patroled by security guards around the clock for the rest of Huges' lifetime.

It was not until this March, after Hughes' Summa Corp. decided to deed the Spruce Goose to a private foundation to create an "Air Museum of the West," that 70 invited guests were allowed aboard the plane.

"We hold no ill will and we hope they succeed in opening the museum," said McJunkin.

Summa Corp. holds title to the plane, but said Friday it still plans to turn it over to the museum foundation.

The foundation, headed by Los Angeles Municipal Judge Gilbert Alston, is attempting to raise $10 million for the museum, but reportedly is far short of its goal.

Originally designed to carry 750 troops across the ocean, the plane is as tall as a three-story building, has a 320-foot wingspan and weighs 200 tons. It was built of birch and cost $18 million.

By comparison, today's largest jumbo jet — the Boeing 747 — stands 63 feet tall, is 232 feet long, has a 196-foot wingspan and weighs 179 tons.

SALE OF ELECTRICITY BENEFITS BOTH COUNTRIES

Canada Valuable Source Of Power For U.S.

MONTREAL (AP) — Without it, millions of Americans in the Midwest and elsewhere might have suffered last winter and millions more might suffer in the near future. With it, Americans already are saving money and the United States might avoid a crisis.

It's Canadian electricity, and huge quantities of it are being sold to U.S. utilities by Canadian power companies. In fact, about 17 billion kilowatt hours — enough power to run New York City for eight months — was sold to the United States in 1977.

That was almost twice the amount of power exported from Canada to the U.S. Furthermore, the situation appears to represent one of those rare occurences in modern life:

"Everybody's making out, from the beginning of the system to the end of it," says Robin Palin, a spokesman for the Canadian Electrical Association, a Montreal-based society of power companies.

Canada finds a market for its excess power and achieves a boost for its faltering economy; U.S. utilities obtain a steady supply of cheap electricity and conserve expensive foreign oil; consumers in both countries save money.

States through much of the northern part of the United States are benefitting from Canadian power. But Canadian exports of electricity were never more important to the U.S. than during last winter's Midwest power crisis, when the long coal strike caused limited power cutbacks and threatened more serious curtailments.

"Canadian power was a significant percentage of the total that we brought into this area, maybe 40 percent," said Owen Lentz of the East Central Area Reliability Council, a Canton, Ohio-based group that monitors power supplies in the Midwest.

"Without that power, we would have had a lot more concern, a lot more people conserving and possibly a lot more curtailments," he said.

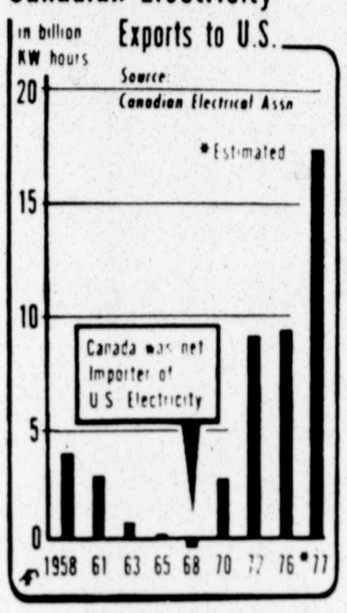
Canadian electricity is expected to continue filling a void in the United States, where experts predict that by the mid-1980s, reserves of electricity in most areas will fall below the level generally considered prudent. That means an electricity crisis could occur in which blackouts could become more common.

The situation developed primarily, U.S. utility officials say, because of regulatory and judicial delays they encountered in building nuclear and other power plants.

But, in contrast, Canada generally can produce much more electricity than it needs.

"We don't face the same opposition as there is in the states," said Bob Crichton, a spokesman for Toronto-based Ontario Hydro. "Certainly, there are some determined anti-nuclear groups here, but they're not as well organized as in the U.S. ... Our problem is the economy, which is in a little bit of a decline right now, so our capacity is not being pressed."

In addition, Canadian power demands are highest in the winter, leaving much equipment unused during the mild summers. Further south, U.S. utilities are hard-pressed during the summer to supply power for air-conditioning and other purposes.



So Canadian power officials looked south and saw the perfect solution: Sell power to the U.S.

In 1976, Canadian firms received $406 million for the electricity they sold to U.S. utilities. In 1977, although final figures haven't been compiled, more than $1 billion flowed into Canadian utility coffers from the U.S.

The money, of course, helped limit the need for rate increases for Canadian consumers. But U.S. consumers also are getting a break because the power imported from Canada — generally produced by hydroelectric or nuclear generators — costs less than if the U.S. utilities fired up their old, reserve generators which burn expensive foreign oil.

And more Canadian electricity is on the way to the United States. Within a year, Quebec Hydro will be sending up to 800,000 kilowatts of power to the Power Authority of the State of New York (PASNY) via high-voltage transmission lines.

The power will be divided between the Rochester Electric Gas & Gas Corp. and Consolidated Edison, which serves New York City. Con Ed will receive most of that Canadian electricity, with as much as 10 percent of the utility's needs coming from its northern neighbor.

"It could conceivably help Con Ed (which suffered a disastrous power failure in July 1977) avoid another blackout, depending on the circumstances," said Steve Shoenholz, a PASNY spokesman.

"It's also extremely important from an economic standpoint," said Shoenholz. "The importation of this power will save New York consumers about $40 million a year in fuel costs."

Meanwhile, Canadian officials are talking about building generators to produce power specifically for U.S. needs, officials of both nations are very pleased with the way things are working out and — during a period of growing tensions between the two countries — all is peaceful in the utility industry:

—"This is meaning millions of dollars for Quebec, and it's helping the country's balance-of-payments problem," said Hydro Quebec's Morris Hebert.

— "It's nice for us to have a market to use this stuff in the off-peak months, because most of it is hydro and we'd have to open the gates and spill the water out otherwise," said Palin of the Canadian Electrical Association.

"Working with the Canadians is so smooth, you don't think about it they're Canadians or Americans," said Lentz of the Midwest power group. "that's how closely we work together."

—"It's a great deal — the ideal deal," said Walter Brown of the National Electric Reliability Council, a U.S. power-supply group.

Enter your own permanent numbers in the chart in the bottom right-hand corner. To figure your own permanent numbers, follow these three steps:

Step 1: From the year chart, find the numbers corresponding to your year of birth. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.
