Texas tornadoes

DENTON — A line of violent thunderstorms in North Texas spawned at least two tornadoes Saturday night north of Dallas and Fort Worth. Law enforcement officials and spotters reported tornadoes about 9:30 p.m. in Wise and Denton counties. In Denton County, a tornado was spotted about 9:30 p.m. near Texas 114 on the Wise-Denton county line, about 5 miles southwest of Justin. Spotters reported at least one twister on the ground just southwest of Justin in Denton County. Winds estimated around 70 mph winds, reportedly knocked down several power transformers, authorities said. Story, page 4A.

Texas Lotto

AUSTIN — No tickets matched all six numbers drawn Saturday night for the twice-weekly Lotto Texas game, state lottery officials said. The jackpot was worth $ 8 million. The numbers drawn from a field of 50 were: 5, 15, 21, 22, 39, and 50. Lottery officials estimate the jackpot for Wednesday night's game will be $ 12 million.

$110 million MISD bond would give Midland highest school tax rate of largest basin cities

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Midland's property tax rate for the school system compares favorably with similar neighboring cities, but this could change with a $110 million bond proposed for the renovation, expansion and upgrading of local schools.

The current total tax rate for the Midland Independent School District is $1.3873 for each $100 property valuation, according to MISD Communications Specialist Susan Webb.

Of this, $1.2573 is used for maintenance and operation of the school district and 13 cents is used for the repayment of existing debts.

The Ector County Independent School District has a higher ad valorem, or property tax rate.

Odessa property owners now pay $1.4091 per $100 property valuation.

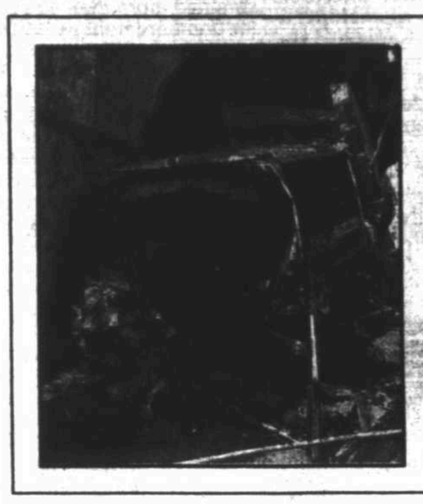

Of the Odessa tax rate, a larger portion is used for the regular operation and maintenance of schools — $1.3216 — and only 8.75 cents per $100 valuation goes toward the repayment of existing debts.

San Angelo has an ad valorem tax rate of $1.33 per $100 property valuation.

If the bond passes in Midland, the Tall City would take the lead in school tax rates for the three largest Permian Basin cities, with the tax rate jumping initially by 13 cents.

The $110 million proposed bond, if passed, would not affect the taxpayer all at once. Rather, there

Midlanders to start casting ballots in early voting for local elections

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Early voting for local elections — including the controversial plan for a new airport terminal building — will begin Monday. The election will be held May 4.

Midlanders can vote early from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday, April 22-26 and April 29-30 at the Elections Administration Office, 709 W. Washington Ave. There won't be branch voting because it isn't mandated (as during the primary and November general elections), and one location is adequate, election officials said.

On election day, Midlanders will cast votes at their designated precinct polling places between 7 a.m. and 7 p.m.

"I am anticipating a heavy turnout because of the airport issue," Midland County Elections Administrator Pat Eastup said.

And historically, about 25-30 percent of those Midlanders who vote during municipal elections do so early. That's below the early vote turnout during the primary and November general elections, when generally about 40 percent of voting Midlanders do so early.

This election, about 61,000 Midlan-

New state rules limit inquiries of child abuse

■ Texas agency begins to focus efforts on youngest, most vulnerable children.

N.Y. Times News Service

AUSTIN — Situation: A 9-year-old child on your block has noticeable bruises or welts on her legs from a whipping. You call the Texas child-abuse hotline.

Reality: Under new state guidelines, her situation rarely would merit an investigation.

Situation: It's midnight, and an 11-year-old child sits on a downtown sidewalk drinking a bottle of whiskey. You call the hotline.

Reality: The guidelines say that's not necessarily enough for a child-abuse investigation.

The public's expectations about who is responsible for keeping Texas' children from harm's way are about to change.

The Texas Department of Protective and Regulatory Services division of Child Protective Services has begun to limit child abuse and neglect investigations and focus its efforts on the youngest, most vulnerable children. Officials cite a need for statewide consistency in when to intervene in family matters.

They also say the guidelines have been under deliberation for three years, and that declining agency revenues are not driving the change. The changes come, however, amid an estimated $40 million two-year budget shortfall discovered last year that led to the elimination of 450 jobs statewide. At a time when the Austin-area population is rapidly rising, an approximate 5,000 reports of possible child abuse in Travis County last year had to be handled by a shrinking number of investigators.

In the broadest terms, the new guidelines, which are being phased in this year, mean investigators now are less likely to look into calls involving adolescents — children believed to be old enough to run away from harm or seek help.

Child advocates warn that the result might be an increase in troubled adolescents and juvenile crime. "It certainly could wind up with more children in our (juvenile court) system. This is a very good example of problems we have had in my entire history here in trying to iden-

Investigators begin task of linking evidence to Unabomber's attacks

By Carolyn Skorneck
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The arrest itself took only moments. Now comes the painstaking, unglamorous laboratory work to determine — with certainty — whether the truckloads of evidence taken from Theodore Kaczynski's remote Montana cabin link him to the 17-year string of Unabomber attacks. And that work likely will take weeks.

Federal law enforcement officials had a lot of evidence even before agents started combing Kaczynski's cabin last week. Aside from some letters and the Unabomber's 35,000-word manifesto published by The Washington Post and The New York Times, that evidence consisted mainly of the remains of 15 bombs that killed three people and injured 23. One of the Unabomber's explosives was defused.

"What they're looking for are things which are consistent with those remnants," said John Hicks, who headed the FBI's crime lab for five years until his retirement in 1994.

Kaczynski has been charged only with possession of bomb parts and not with any of the Unabomber attacks.

"There has been an extraordinary amount of work done over the last 17 years to analyze and look at the evidence from the crime scenes, the communications from the Unabomber and the physical evidence," said Milton Ahlerich, who succeeded Hicks until his own retirement in January.

That includes such things as fingerprints and tool marks, biological examinations of such things as hair, fibers and DNA and chemical analysis of explosive residue to determine the exact composition of the bombs.

And the quirks of the typewriter used to type the manifesto and other missives. All were typed on the same typewriter,

In his father's defense

Son struggles to resolve 40-year-old Sheppard murder mystery

By Sharon Cohen
Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. — He slept through his mother's murder. Then, the nightmares came.

The little boy was tormented by harrowing images of his father — or himself — strapped in an electric chair. He felt he should die. "It was my fault," he thought, "that my mother was killed."

This was Sam Reese Sheppard's childhood.

On a July morning in Ohio nearly 42 years ago, the 7-year-old was awakened and hustled down the hall past the bedroom where his pregnant mother lay dead, her face and hands bloodied, her skull fractured, her nose broken from a frenzied struggle.

His mother's murder was horrible enough. But there was more: His father, Dr. Sam Sheppard, was charged with delivering the 35 vicious blows that killed Marilyn Sheppard. It was one of the most spectacular crimes — and one of the most sensational trials — of the buttoned-down 1950s.

Dr. Sheppard was convicted and imprisoned nearly 10 years before the U.S. Supreme Court, in a landmark decision, ruled that reckless media coverage had violated his rights. A second trial ended in acquittal.

The doctor regained his freedom, but couldn't rebuild his life. To some, he was the man who had gotten away with murder. His drinking escalated, his medical career collapsed and he died at age 46.

Now, 26 years later, Dr. Sheppard's 48-year-old son has set out to clear his father's name. He knows many authorities in Ohio remain convinced the doctor was not a wronged man; they believe all the signs point to him as the only possible killer.

But with new DNA testing techniques, old evidence and a possible suspect — an

Israel steps up its military pressure; copter attack kills six in ambulance

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli gunboats blockaded Beirut's port and a helicopter attack on an ambulance killed six people Saturday, the third day of Israel's drive to wipe out Shiite Muslim guerrillas in south Lebanon.

The Israeli army chief of staff, Gen. Amnon Shahak, said the operation, which comes as Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres faces pressure to stand tough before May 29 elections, could last as long as two weeks.

As Israeli jet fighters, helicopter gunships and artillery batteries pounded suspected guerrilla hideouts and rocket-launching pads, the pro-Iranian group Hezbollah retaliated with a new salvo of Katyusha rockets at northern Israel, security sources in Lebanon said.

Israel confirmed that seven rockets landed within northern Israel, causing no injuries or damage.

The violence in the region threatened to get even worse when Palestinian militants said they might renew their deadly suicide bombing attacks in Israel and a Hezbollah leader said he activated a "human bombs battalion."

Israel said its gunships fired on a civilian ambulance in the southern port city of Tyre on Saturday because the vehicle carried a Hezbollah activist. Eight people were wounded, and of those killed, three were sisters, aged 3, 6, and 7.

"If there were children killed I am sorry for it, but they were operating in a place from where Hezbollah fired Katyushas (rockets) and where we had warned residents to evacuate," said the head of Israel's northern command, Maj. Gen. Amiram Levine.

The ambulance belonged to a local civil defense unit affiliated with Shiite political groups, according to Lebanese security sources speaking on condition of anonymity. They said the vehicle was evacuating people from Mansouri, one of 48 villages the Israelis ordered vacated before the bombardments.

AP Laserphoto

Shiite Muslim villagers flee from their village of Mansouri, near Sidon in a truck on the highway to Beirut, Saturday. Thousands of Lebanese civilians fled more than 40 southern villages, selected by the Israeli military for bombardment as part of its war against Hezbollah guerrillas.

"We picked up the people ... Then, I heard a whooshing sound. I was sucked out of the vehicle," driver Abbas Mdeihli said from his bed at the Najm hospital in Tyre.

The head of the international Red Cross, Philippe Gaillard, said the ambulance attack violated international humanitarian law.

Israel warned Lebanese to evacuate more villages near the border between the two countries Saturday and effectively cut off southern Lebanon from the rest of the country by warning against using the main coastal highway.

The onslaught against Hezbollah is Israel's most serious military action in south Lebanon since it invaded the region in 1982. The Lebanese government has protested the Israeli "aggression" to the U.N. Security Council and called for an emergency meeting of the 22-nation Arab League.'

Lebanese Prime Minister Rafik Hariri met Syrian President Hafez Assad in Damascus before heading Saturday to Egypt and France. A Hezbollah delegation also was reported in Damascus for talks.

The United States has urged Syria, which with 40,000 troops in Lebanon is the country's main power, to intercede with its allies in Lebanon.

But concerns grew that Israel's offensive might draw Syria into the fighting, after Syria said one of its soldiers was killed and seven were wounded Thursday by Israeli anti-aircraft fire.

Israeli officials insisted the Syrians were attacked inadvertently, but Syria appeared unconvinced. Syrian-Israeli peace negotiations are stalled and a confrontation would hurt the chances of achieving a settlement.

Later Saturday, Palestinian Islamic militant groups responsible for deadly suicide attacks in Israel in February and March threatened to mount new suicide bombings inside Israel — this time, to avenge the Lebanese campaign.

"Let the criminal enemy and its allies know that its crimes and terrorism against our innocent people in Lebanon will not go unpunished," said a statement issued by Hamas and Islamic Jihad.

In Lebanon, Hezbollah's leader, Sheik Hassan Nasrallah, ordered the activation of the group's "human bombs battalion."

"I call on all the suicide fighters to join their stations," Nasrallah said. "These are the days when holy war and martyrdom are sweetest ... the enemy will be sorry."

Westerners help victimize children in Asian brothels

By Nicholas Kristoff
N.Y. Times News Service

SVAY PAK, Cambodia — She giggled for a moment, a 13-year-old girl, all sparkling eyes and white teeth, her laughter washing over the grunts from a pornographic video playing a few feet away. Then the brothel owner strutted over.

The owner, a hearty, friendly woman in her late 20s, who paid good money to buy the girl, named Sriy, cheerfully and explicitly recommended her anatomical features and said the $10 fee was not so great because "she only just lost her virginity." In fact, that is a lie. Sriy was sold into prostitution two years ago.

As if to prove her point, the brothel owner reached out and, pushing Sriy's hand away, tugged down on the girl's dress to display her left breast, or rather the nipple of what will become a breast if Sriy survives to maturity. "You like?" the owner asked in broken English. "You take girl?"

Sriy endures these indignities, along with up to 10 customers a night, because she is considered the brothel owner's property. Sold by her stepfather to another brothel, which then sold her to this one, the girl must work until the debt is deemed to be repaid. Or until she gets AIDS.

If she tries to escape, she will be caught, severely beaten, perhaps starved, and locked inside her room, while still being forced to have sex with many customers a night.

A neighboring brothel burned down in mid-March, and the bodies of two girls were found in the wreckage. They had been locked up inside, forced to have sex with customers in their rooms and never allowed out, because they showed signs of wanting to escape.

Sriy is one of tens of thousands of children in Asia who are slaves working in the plantations of the 1990s: the brothels of Cambodia, India, China, Thailand, the Philippines, Taiwan and other countries.

Americans and other Westerners helped build the child prostitution trade in Asia, and many of the brothel districts date from R&R breaks from the Vietnam War, or surround former U.S. military bases. Now they sustain it with an appetite for what at home would be child molestation and rape.

A result is a partnership between local people, who run the brothels, and Westerners like the one who posted an item on the Internet informing sex tourists that in Cambodia "a 6-year-old is available for US$3."

In the seedy Maleta district of Manila, the Philippines, near the waterfront and virtually under the shadow of a large church, lives a family with four daughters ranging from 8 to 18. Until a few months ago, social workers say, the mother and oldest daughter procured for the 8-year-old and a 12-year-old among foreigners.

When a customer was found, the oldest daughter would go to school to bring her sisters home early, telling the teachers that they had some family business.

The 8-year-old was raped by American, Australian and Japanese men. When the 12-year-old tried to resist, her sister held her arms and another pimp held the girl's legs so that American men could rape her more easily.

It was not supposed to be this way. Six decades ago, Asian cities like Shanghai, Hong Kong and Hanoi were notorious for their brothels, but it had seemed that economic development would allow countries to grow out of the worst of the squalor. Now Asia has enjoyed a historic economic boom, yet child prostitution is, by most accounts, increasing.

By estimates of social workers and governments, more than a million girls and boys, aged 17 and younger, are engaged in prostitution in Asia, although all these figures are no more than wild guesses.

The slaves, in the sense of those who are locked up or owned by a brothel, are a minority of the total. But even among those teen-agers who now offer themselves on street corners, many first entered the sex trade unwillingly, sold by parents or simply kidnapped off the street.

Aid groups to pull out of Monrovia after 8 days of 'absolute anarchy'

MONROVIA, Liberia (AP) — Nearly 1,500 terrified foreigners had fled Monrovia by Saturday and even the most stalwart of aid groups planned to follow. The exodus was bitter for those left behind, abandoned in the midst of civil war with little evidence that a new cease-fire will hold.

"We are dying here," said Joseph Johnson, a Liberian. "Where is the international community?"

After eight days of looting and urban warfare, aid workers said they were pulling out because of the "absolute anarchy" in the seaside capital.

In seven years of fighting between rebels and government troops, nearly half of this West African country's 2.6 million people have crammed into Monrovia. The recent round of fighting has left 60,000 people homeless.

No one knows how many people have been killed in recent days, though dozens of decaying bodies have been seen on the streets and at least 13 people were confirmed dead.

Nearly 20,000 people, including foreign diplomats, missionaries and Liberians, have sought refuge in the complex holding the U.S. Embassy and U.N. offices, setting up a small city while they wait for rescue.

The U.S. military had ferried out 1,448 people by Saturday afternoon, and a U.N.-chartered boat was headed north toward Sierra Leone carrying its employees and foreign women and children.

Pentagon spokesman Brian R. Kilgallen said Saturday that of the foreigners evacuated, 458 were Americans. He said about 30 Americans had elected to stay behind.

The evacuation of Americans was expected to be complete by today, Kilgallen said in Washington. He said the State Department had yet to decide whether the evacuations would continue once all the Americans were out.

The plush Mamba Point Hotel, where 500 people had been hiding for days, was empty Friday night after rebels ransacked the place, destroying furniture and stealing clothes, food, money and hotel equipment.

Rebels and government troops began retreating Saturday as African peacekeeping tanks moved into the Mamba Point district, where most foreign embassies and U.N. offices are located. Along the way, they looted what little was left from burned out homes and shops, witnesses said.

The U.N. World Food Program chartered a Ghanaian boat that sailed from the port of Monrovia late Friday with 149 U.N. workers and foreigners, mainly Lebanese, on board. The boat was to arrive in Freetown, the capital of neighboring Sierra Leone, Sunday morning.

About 25 Liberians arrived in Freetown on Saturday after an exhausting overnight sea voyage. Another 1,000 were expected Saturday night. One passenger, David Freeman, described how even boys — 10 or 12 years old — were joining the violence in the capital.

"A small-boy unit has now been formed," he said, "and are the most dangerous, roaming the streets in civilian dress."

Warring factions negotiated a cease-fire late Friday with help from visiting West African politicians, according to Gabriel Anyankpele, chief of staff for the 12,000 West African peacekeepers in Liberia.

The truce appeared to be having some effect Saturday.

"Just your ears can tell you that something is different about today," said U.S. Ambassador William Milan. "You don't hear the shelling. If it is true, let's hope it lasts."

But Liberia's history inspires little hope for enduring calm: Thirteen peace accords have been broken since the war began in 1989, and a truce earlier in the week collapsed within hours.

A spokesman for faction leader Charles Taylor, who sparked the war in December 1989 and is now a member of Liberia's ruling State Council, said Saturday that Taylor agreed to the cease-fire only if rival warlord Roosevelt Johnson surrenders on murder charges.

Until then, spokesman Reginald Goodridge said, Taylor's troops would continue to surround the military barracks where Johnson is believed to be hiding with thousands of supporters.

A U.S. Marine amphibious group is to arrive in a week to help with evacuations. Meanwhile, Liberians at the diplomatic compound known as the Graystone Annex that houses the U.S. Embassy have set up a small city, organizing neighborhood associations, markets and money-changing booths.

But there is little food to go around, and almost no medicine. Already, the Red Cross has reported four deaths. Two infants died overnight in the compound of diarrhea, and two adults on Thursday of gunshot wounds. It said 10 others had been wounded by stray bullets in the compound.

The United Nations and the Red Cross said Friday that they were pulling out of Liberia, leaving behind what U.N. authorities said were an estimated 60,000 homeless people.

WEATHER WATCH

Area to see mostly sunny skies

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for mostly sunny skies, windy and cooler with a high near 70. Winds will be from the northwest at 20-30 mph and gusty, according to the National Weather Service.

Tonight's forecast calls for fair skies with a low in the upper 30s.

Monday is expected to be sunny with a high near 75.

The high for Saturday was 84, compared to the record high for that date of 97, set in 1972. Friday's low was 50. The record low is 28, set in 1957.

Thunderstorms, tornadoes blast N. Texas

DENTON — A line of violent thunderstorms in North Texas spawned at least two tornadoes Saturday night north of Dallas and Fort Worth.

Law enforcement officials and spotters reported tornadoes about 9:30 p.m. in Wise and Denton counties.

In Denton County, a tornado was spotted about 9:30 p.m. near Texas 114 on the Wise-Denton county line, about 5 miles southwest of Justin.

Spotters reported at least one twister on the ground just southwest of Justin in Denton County. Winds estimated around 70 mph winds, reportedly knocked down several power transformers, authorities said.

In Marshall Creek, at the western tip of Lake Grapevine, roofs were blown off several houses, power lines were downed and one person was injured, apparently by flying glass, Police Chief Michael Ashinhurst said.

He was still assessing damage late Saturday night

Extensive damage was reported at Northwest Regional Airport, just north of Lake Grapevine between Interstate 35W and I-35E, Denton County Sheriff's Department spokeswoman Sue Morris said.

In Wise County, law enforcement officials reported a tornado near Keeter at 9:17 p.m.

Severe thunderstorms also moved from Granbury through Dallas and into East Texas. There were no other immediate reports of other damage or injuries.

NATION

Up to a foot of snow fell Saturday around the northern Rockies and the upper Great Lakes, and rain fell across a wide swath of the eastern third of the nation.

A storm centered over Colorado spread heavy snow across parts of Colorado and Wyoming on Saturday, with thunderstorms edging out onto the Plains.

Around a foot of snow fell overnight in mountainous areas from Idaho and northern Utah into Wyoming and Colorado. Four to 5 inches had fallen by midday around Casper, Wyo., and Rapid City, S.D.

Winter storm warnings were posted for eastern Wyoming, and for Colorado's northern and central mountains.

A winter weather advisory was issued for western and south-central South Dakota. Up to a foot of snow was forecast in South Dakota's mountainous Black Hills, which got 12 to 16 inches on Thursday.

RULES: Child advocates fear more troubled adolescents

tify who does what," said Dobbs Rogers, assistant chief of Travis County juvenile probation services. "It's really going to have to be decided judicially."

Janess Sheets, a Child Protective Services program specialist, said, "What we were trying to stress is, this is not meant to limit services to adolescents, but this is designed to target services to children who are being abused and neglected. Older children have a lot of issues dealing with things that aren't necessarily a result of abuse and neglect. We have the primary responsibility of dealing with children who are victims of abuse and neglect."

In January 1995, the department had 32 or 33 child-abuse investigators assigned to Travis County; 13 months later, the county is authorized for 24 investigators. Yet, only about 14 are actually on the job because of vacancies and workers in training, said Wanda Pena, lead program director for the county.

Sheets said the agency will be asking other state agencies and community-based programs to take responsibility for children whose problems might not be directly attributable to abuse or neglect.

Those who deal with child victims, however, find the new policy alarming.

"What's troubling is they're saying they're not even going to go look (at certain calls)," said District Judge Scott McCown.

The Austin judge, who hears cases involving child victims and makes decisions on their future care, predicted the refusal to intervene in certain situations will lead to increased juvenile crime.

"I think that Child Protective Services has missed the boat on understanding the relationship between abuse and neglect and juvenile crime," he said. "When it doesn't go out and address the problems of 10-11- and 12-year olds, those are the ones who will be committing serious juvenile crimes at 13, 15 and 16. We see that over and over."

"Child Protective Services is actually a crime-fighting agency that's refused its mandate."

Workers statewide have been trained in the new "Intake Assignment Guidelines" whose stated purpose is to give "a consistent reference point" to decide whether to investigate.

In workshops, staff were given examples of a hotline call, and how the guidelines would apply. The agency stresses that each example must be weighed in light of other factors, such as whether the child has been reported previously as a potential victim, or whether there are multiple factors that would escalate the seriousness.

Here, from the training packet, are examples to be "rarely assigned":

- A newborn baby's toxicology screening shows the mother used marijuana or alcohol;
- A child 7 or older "with minor injuries to non-vital bodily areas as a result of over discipline;"
- A child 7 or older who is afraid to go home and has no "substantial history of physical abuse or current injuries, bruises or scars;"
- Lack of immunizations;
- Lack of medical treatment that does not pose a substantial risk of serious harm; including illnesses, optical or dental needs;
- A child, 10 or older, left alone or "running the streets" after 10 p.m.;
- A child, 10 or older, using drugs or alcohol;
- Children committing delinquent acts;
- Parents selling or using drugs;
- Children begging for food;
- Family living in cars, tents, etc.

"Here's one that's really troubling," said McCown, spotlighting another example from the list. "A child 12 years old and pregnant. And you're not even going to go check what's going on? If you did go look, you might find that there's no abuse and neglect, but wouldn't you at least go look?"

Pena said the effect of the new guidelines already are being seen in Austin. A positive point, she said, is that fewer calls are being assigned for investigation. "We're not getting as many cases where protection really isn't an issue," Pena said.

She conceded, however, that "there's obvious room for discussion among the staff," about the guidelines.

The guidelines might sound limiting, but Pena said local child protection workers aren't ready to turn their backs on adolescents. She said, for instance, if a caller reported the 12-year-old on a street corner at midnight drinking whiskey, that "We'd probably take that one."

"I'd say, 'Tell me more,' " Pena said. "We might find a previous history (on the child)."

BALLOTS: Early voting for May 4 elections to start Monday

ders are expected to be eligible to vote. During the recent primary election, 18,825 people voted.

The upcoming election will include races and items pertaining to city government, Midland and Greenwood school districts, the Midland College district and Midland County Hospital District.

The most publicized item is to either approve or deny the construction of a new terminal building at Midland International Airport.

The vote was called after a group opposed to building a new terminal submitted a petition to the city in December to force a referendum.

Construction of a new terminal building had been ratified with a unanimous City Council vote in October 1993. An election was not required initially because funding was to be generated through federal grants, boarding fees and airport revenues, but not tax dollars.

Because city officials plan to guarantee a loan for partial financing of the $33.2 million project with city revenues and property taxes, the measure on the ballot will read: "The issuance of $21,000,000 combination revenue and tax certificates of obligation for improvements to the Midland International Airport."

Voters also will decide whether to amend the city charter to allow the extension of City Council terms from two years to three years and require vacated seats to be filled by election instead of appointment.

Three council seats — all with just one candidate each — will be on the ballot.

Mayor Bobby Burns is seeking his second term unopposed.

District 4 representative Berry Simpson — who was appointed to an unexpired term last year — wants to continue to serve the city. And newcomer Lee Wood Jr. seeks to represent District 3; this position is currently held by Jim Webb, who chose not to run. Only voters residing in those districts vote.

Two positions on the Midland Independent School District board will be on the ballot.

District 2 trustee Adela Marmolejo is being challenged by Clarence R. "Putty" Zachery, and District 4 trustee Jackie R. Hamilton is being challenged by A.G. Brunson. Only voters residing in those districts vote.

Three places — all at-large representation — on the Midland College district board of trustees will be on the ballot.

Seeking Place 7 is Willard R. Green, who is unopposed. For Place 8, Hugh G. White III challenges incumbent Ralph L. Way. And seeking Place 9 for another term is Kenneth A. Peeler.

On the Midland County Hospital District board of directors, four seats — representing districts — will be filled in this election.

For District 1, Ora L. Williams seeks another term. For District 2, Josie D. Ramirez seeks another term. And for District 6, David K. Darmstetter seeks another term.

No one has filed to represent District 5 on the hospital board. As a result, the seat will be determined by write-in votes.

Greenwood Independent School District board of trustees has three at-large places to be determined by election.

Running for Place 3 are Eddie W. Pruett and James R. Brooks; for Place 4 are Benny Prater and James B. Mashburn; and for Place 5 are Terry Jordan and Price Robinson. Only voters residing in the Greenwood school district are eligible to vote.

MISD: Tall City would take lead in tax rate if bond passes would be an initial issue of about $50 million in bonds, which would increase the current tax rate by 13 cents, Ms. Webb said.

This would raise the debt-service portion of the school district's tax rate to 26 cents instead of 13 cents.

Property taxes for the school district would increase to $1.5173, almost 20 cents higher than San Angelo and 11 cents higher than Odessa. These figures do not include city, county, hospital and college taxes, and do not affect Greenwood school district residents.

This initial 13-cent increase would raise taxes on the average Midland homestead of $58,470 by $5.16 a month or $61.91 a year.

For a standard $100,000 homestead, the increase would amount to $9.21 a month or $110.50 a year.

In two years, an additional $30 million to $40 million in bonds would be issued, but this would not affect the overall tax rate because part of the existing debt would be retired at that time.

The dip in debt-service payments would allow the district to issue bonds to compensate, so that taxpayers would maintain the same tax rate for four years, Ms. Webb said.

At the end of that four years, the remainder of the bond would be issued, with taxes jumping six to eight cents — depending on property values at the time.

In the year 2011, there should be a drop in the tax rate because that is the date the 13-cent debt payment in the tax rate would be retired.

The MISD board of trustees will meet in a special meeting Monday at 5:30 p.m. at the Administration Building's Board Room to set the bond election for June 1.

TASK: Investigators inspect, remove truckloads of evidence

according to a senior federal official in Washington, who said investigators believed he had done so deliberately to give them a way to authenticate them.

U.S. News & World Report says in its April 22 edition that FBI crime lab experts have determined that the third typewriter removed from Kaczynski's cabin is the machine on which the manifesto and other letters were typed. In addition, law enforcement sources said FBI agents at the cabin discovered what they say is the original copy of the manifesto manuscript near that third typewriter.

Agents from the FBI, the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms and the Postal Inspection Service have been carefully inspecting and then removing truckloads of evidence from the 10-foot-by-12-foot cabin, including one live bomb, one partly built explosive and parts of the cabin itself, sources said. The evidence is all being shipped back to the FBI lab in Quantico, Va.

But the agents are not simply crating up everything in sight. A federal judge this week sealed the cabin and surrounding property for 30 days so agents can conduct repeated searches.

FBI Agent Terry Turchie said in an affidavit that in bombing investigations, "it is common to conduct multiple searches of the same premises to search for and secure evidence, the significance of which was not fully known at the time of the initial or previous search."

Armed with analyses of bomb parts, some of which can take two weeks or more, agents can look for evidence not previously sought, said Turchie, assistant special agent in charge of the San Francisco office's Unabom division.

One might think it shouldn't take weeks to examine such a small cabin. But when explosives are involved, any object might be a bomb ready to blow or a booby-trap.

"Despite what you see in the movies, where they call in the bomb squad and some guy goes in and cuts the wire as the music reaches a crescendo, you just don't do that," Hicks said.

The first order of business is to make any unknown object safe. So agents brought in X-ray equipment to scan the cabin's contents. Also useful are robots that can take X-rays or move boxes away from agents.

Another technique is to "put a string around it — a long string — and give it a yank from a distance," Hicks said. "If it doesn't go off, then maybe you take the next step."

Once the explosives are gone, agents must decide what might be evidence.

Something like copper wire might seem ubiquitous, impossible to identify as belonging to one person. However, chemical testing could reveal contaminants making it unique, such as elevated levels of lead or barium, he said. The plastic insulation also might reveal unique properties.

Wire cutters found at the cabin could provide more clues.

"Anytime you have any kind of mechanical action between a piece of metal and a tool, the tool can transfer marks from its cutting edge," he said. "If the tool has been sharpened, it might have grinding marks that produce fine scratches. Those imperfections in the tool would be transferred to anything it came in contact with."

Despite the power of the Unabomber's explosives to maim and kill, such things as insulated wires have survived and are available for comparison with the tools and other evidence found in the cabin, he said.

To see if others were in Kaczynski's cabin, agents might check for fingerprints, probably using something like a roach bomb that emits a vaporous superglue that sticks to fingerprints, Ahlerich said.

Hicks sounded somewhat wistful when asked if he wished he were back at the bureau right now.

"This stuff is exciting," he said. "This is what it's all about. All these years, the frustration that developed. ... There is a sort of feeling like gee, I wish I could be there."

DEFENSE: Son hopes to clear father's name

(From 1A)

imprisoned murderer — Sheppard hopes to prove his father was unjustly incarcerated.

"This is not just some horrible little homicide that we can turn the rock over and forget," he says. "Our family doesn't deserve to live in perpetuity with this wrongful conviction."

"It's my obligation," Sheppard says, "to pursue the truth and set the record straight."

BEFORE O.J. SIMPSON, there was Doctor Sam.

The Sheppard case didn't have the glamour of a famous athlete or glitz of California life-in-the-fast-lane, but it had all the tantalizing tabloid ingredients: a murder mystery, a handsome, pipe-smoking osteopath from a respected medical family, a mistress who had sex with him in his green Jaguar and a brash young lawyer with blazing ambition — F. Lee Bailey, who, 30 years later, stood by Simpson's side.

It sounds like a Hollywood plot and, ultimately, it helped shape one: The Sheppard saga supposedly inspired "The Fugitive" TV series (later a movie).

"People have made millions of dollars, literally, over the bodies of my dead loved ones," Sheppard says with an edge to his voice.

These days, Sheppard, a Buddhist, anti-death penalty activist and unemployed dental hygienist, lives sparely in a rooming house in this California community. A bachelor with closely cropped sandy-graying hair, blue eyes concealed by tinted glasses and an affinity for plain, dark clothes, he has long resigned himself to his notorious name.

"I never have and never will deny the connection, however much it hurts," he says. At times, he notes, people have blurted out: "Are you the doctor who killed his wife? ... It has made it extremely difficult socially over the years."

But he has gone public to lobby for his father in a legal campaign waged 2,150 miles away in a Cleveland court; the Sheppards had lived in suburban Bay Village.

Sheppard's attorney, Terry Gilbert, has won court permission to examine old files, autopsy reports, hair and other evidence and is focusing on one suspect: Richard Eberling, a murderer who washed windows in the Sheppard home.

"Our main goal is to exclude Dr. Sheppard as the perpetrator of the crime," Gilbert says.

He hopes to use DNA techniques not available 42 years ago to test a single drop of blood preserved from the crime scene to see if it matches a blood sample recently taken from Eberling.

Police never typed the trail of blood at the scene, but a defense criminalist at the second trial testified the pattern of the drops fit a bleeding person — not drops from a weapon or clothing. Dr. Sheppard had no open wounds.

What makes this quest unusual is that a top member of the Cuya-

Chernobyl's deadly legacy still haunts

Editor's note: A decade ago, a nuclear reactor at the Chernobyl power plant exploded and caught fire, spewing radiation across lands inhabited by millions of people. It shook both the rotting foundations of the Soviet Union and world faith in nuclear power. An Associated Press reporter visited the still-operating plant and the surrounding "dead zone" and also talked to officials and people affected by the disaster.

By Dave Carpenter
Associated Press

CHERNOBYL, Ukraine — The ghosts of history's worst nuclear accident lurk everywhere in the pine forests and overgrown farmland that surround Chernobyl.

Dozens of evacuated villages lie frozen in panic, house doors flung open. Vast fields serve as open graves for endless rows of radioactive trucks, tanks and helicopters used in the deadly cleanup 10 years ago.

And within full view of the hulking concrete-and-steel sarcophagus that entombs the source of the Chernobyl nuclear disaster, a once-thriving Soviet "model city" of 40,000 people — Pripyat — sits starkly empty.

Doors bang open and shut in the wind. Hastily abandoned amusement-park rides creak noisily. Snowy boulevards are dotted with wolf, boar and fox tracks outside decaying apartment high rises.

"IT'S REALLY scary at night," says policeman Nikolai Rey at a checkpoint outside this nuclear no man's land. "The animals come, and any sound echoes all over the city."

Eerier still is the knowledge that an invisible killer is still stalking many people. Thousands already are ill or dead from radiation sickness or cancer. Even after 10 years, Chernobyl's terrible human and environmental toll still isn't fully known.

"In places like Bosnia and Chechnya, the deaths of people are evident," says Liza Aulina, executive director of the victims group Chernobyl Union. "But the Chernobyl tragedy can kill a person slowly and you don't know where it will catch you or when."

The specter of another tragedy at the still-functioning, accident-plagued Chernobyl plant also darkens the future. Western leaders continue to pressure energy-starved Ukraine to shut it down, but the government has held out for a big aid infusion. Last week, after industrialized nations increased their aid offer to $3.1 billion, Ukraine reaffirmed its promise to close the plant — by 2000.

The V.I. Lenin power station, which still bears that name, was to have been the world's largest nuclear plant, another showpiece of Soviet scientific and industrial might. Its ill-fated fourth reactor was rushed into operation in 1984, winning bonuses and medals for the construction chiefs.

TWO YEARS later, in the early morning hours of April 26, 1986, the unthinkable happened.

Never warned that Chernobyl-style, graphite-core reactors become dangerously unstable at low power, engineers cut power in reactor No. 4 below 25 percent while testing emergency systems. It ignited an explosion, fire and partial meltdown of the reactor core.

Deadly reactor fuel shot into the atmosphere, contaminating some 10,000 square miles and reaching as far as western Europe. Some 5 million people in Ukraine, Belarus and Russia were affected, the World Health Organization says.

In a big lie that many feel helped topple a dying regime, Soviet officials from President Mikhail Gorbachev on down first hushed up the disaster, then played down its severity. They even sent marching bands to soothe the 130,000 people evacuated from within 18 miles of ground zero, assuring them it was only for a few days.

Evidence of the false promise can still be seen in the rubble-strewn apartments of Pripyat — skeletons of cats and dogs that were locked inside, awaiting their owners' return.

"People were in a terrible state — shocked, crying," recalls Vladimir Afonichkin, 56, a retired engineer from Kiev, the capital, who was one of more than 600,000 "liquidators," or cleanup workers. "They didn't know what was happening, but they suspected they had lost everything."

In Kiev, 65 miles to the southeast, residents remember that the birds stopped singing.

Dr. Viktor Klimenko rushed to Chernobyl from Kiev within hours of the explosion and found people washing their hair in a futile effort to get the radiation out.

Some had foolishly watched the huge fire from rooftops in Pripyat, receiving massive doses of radiation.

"CHILDREN HAD radiation in their hair, their skin. Everybody was dirty with radiation," he says, his voice catching. "I couldn't sleep."

Breathing was labored for days, too. "It was as if you had pepper on your tonsils," Afonichkin says.

Thirty-one people were reported to have died in the immediate aftermath of the accident. The death toll, however, is a matter of speculation because of haphazard tracking of the victims.

Chernobyl Union claims 150,000 people in Ukraine alone are dead from Chernobyl-related diseases and 55,000 are invalids. Others say that number is wildly overstated in an effort to attract Western aid and contend that deaths are only in the dozens.

The clean-up workers are among those who have suffered the most. Hospital beds for these workers spill out into the corridors at the Center for Radiology Medicine outside Kiev because of the growing demand for treatment.

Col. Viktor Zhelayev, 58, a retired army pilot who flew dozens of flights over the exploded reactor to measure radioactivity levels, was diagnosed with leukemia in 1993. Most of the other pilots he worked with are dead, and he can barely walk.

"I FELT a moral obligation to do it," he says, propped up on his hospital bed. "But I feel bad about the children, and the people who are only 30 or 35."

At the Children's Radiology Center across town, pale boys and girls from the contaminated zone lie listlessly, receiving intravenous treatment.

Thyroid cancer among children, almost nonexistent before the accident, has increased a hundredfold in Belarus, Ukraine and Russia.

"It's really awful for me as a doctor to see what's going on with people's health, because it's so much worse than in an average region," says Klimenko, a leading authority on radiation illnesses. "And we don't even know how bad it's going to get."

Defying the danger, a few hundred people, mostly pensioners, have returned to the off-limits "dead zone" — a Rhode Island-size area surrounded by barbed wire.

Deep in a silent forest, 53-year-old Irina Yashchenko weeps with joy at the arrival of rare visitors to the ghost town of Szheganka. She and her common-law husband, Ivan Khomenko, moved back to his two-room brick house in 1989 and remain the only residents of the former village of 600.

They have little but two dogs, a cat, electricity and each other. For provisions, they make occasional treks to the town of Chernobyl, which some service workers affiliated with the nuclear plant use as a temporary base.

"THIS IS our home," Klimenko, 58, a retired woodcutter, says with a shrug. "We don't have enough health left to worry about radiation."

For the 5,000 people who are bused in daily to work at Chernobyl's two functioning reactors — another was closed after a fire — it's a simple matter of money.

Nations pledge reconstruction aid for Bosnia

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Dozens of countries and financial organizations pledged $1.23 billion Saturday to help rebuild Bosnia, but little of the money will go to Bosnian Serbs until their war crimes suspects surrender.

U.S. deputy treasury secretary Lawrence Summers said Bosnian Serb wartime leader Radovan Karadzic and others must be turned over to an international tribunal, a key requirement of the U.S.-brokered peace accord.

But officials at a two-day donors' conference also stressed the need not to turn their back on the Bosnian Serb people and said funding for humanitarian, mine-clearing and public works programs that encompass the whole country would proceed.

"We are constantly challenged to balance these two objectives," Summers said of the need to help ordinary Serbs while isolating their leadership.

The World Bank said aid projects would continue to be planned for the Serb-dominated region of Bosnia, if only to show the potential peace dividend awaiting the population if they get rid of Karadzic and his military chief Ratko Mladic, who has also been indicted for war crimes by the tribunal.

"It's imperative that they not remain in power," Summers told reporters. He said none of the $219 million in U.S. aid pledged Saturday was targeted at at Serb areas.

The Bosnian Serbs boycotted the meeting because they refused to be part of the overall Bosnian delegation.

But in Bosnia, an adviser to Karadzic criticized the conference as an effort to isolate the Serbs.

"The cynicism, hypocrisy and perfidy which is so abundantly present in some quarters of the international community" forced the Bosnian Serb delegation to withdraw, Jovan Zametica, an advisor to Karadzic, said in Pale, the Bosnian Serb stronghold.

Carl Bildt, the U.N. official in charge of implementing civil aspects of the Balkan peace accord, said that moderate Serb forces had been willing to cooperate but had been held back.

Bosnia's total rebuilding cost is estimated at $5.1 billion over four years, with $3.7 billion needed in the Croat-Muslim area and $1.4 billion in the Serb region, which encompasses 49 percent of the country.

In all, pledges from the 50 nations and 27 finance organizations reached $1.23 billion, pushing the total international aid for Bosnia over $1.8 billion this year. Donors had already pledged $600 million in December to get reconstruction going over the winter.

Priority aid projects include reconstruction of Bosnia's roads, schools, telecommunications networks, water systems and electric grids. Donors also stressed the need for job-creation programs to put Bosnians back to work, especially the 250,000 soldiers to be demobilized in the next six months.

Cooling the Great Southwest!

It will cost us nothing if we build a new airport terminal building...

It could cost us our future if we don't!

It makes good sense!

We need it!

We're for it!

- No local property taxes have ever been used at Midland International Airport. The new terminal building is to be completely paid for by only those who use it...and 60% of those don't even live in Midland.

- In 1995, the terminal handled over a half-million outbound passengers from a 100 mile radius.
- The building, since its last remodel in 1978, has handled over 20 million persons - now over 1 million per year.
- Midland has become the seventh busiest airline market in Texas and in the top 100 in America.

If the ballot measure fails, we're left with a building which may look OK on the surface, but inside it is a disintegrating 38-year-old structure:

- with over 100 Americans With Disabilities Act violations
- loaded with asbestos, which to remove, will shut down ticketing, lobby and restaurant areas
- with 38-year-old crumbling cast iron plumbing, deteriorating electrical and telecommunications wiring, inefficient heating and cooling, all of which are stretched to the limit
- no fire sprinkler system, and it must be added now
- and, with no chance of approval for future expansion.

A new airport terminal building is our ticket to Midland's future.

Below is just a partial list of supporters of the new airport terminal building.

Hanky-panky?

Ex-GI's claim Hokey Pokey song, dance, predate its 'creators'

By Mitchell Landsberg
Associated Press

When 83-year-old Larry LaPrise died recently in Boise, Idaho, he was mourned as the co-creator of a distinctly American sensation: the Hokey Pokey.

As his daughter, Linda Ruby, recounted the tale, he and two fellow musicians had concocted the novelty song — "You put your right foot in, you put your right foot out" — in 1949 for the apres-ski crowd at Idaho's Sun Valley resort. By the mid-1950s, it had become an integral part of every American childhood.

But there may have been a touch of hanky-panky in the story of the Hokey Pokey.

After The Associated Press ran a story about the April 4 death of LaPrise and his role in the creation of the Hokey Pokey, several World War II veterans called the news agency. They had danced the Hokey Pokey in England in the closing days of the war, they said, well before LaPrise claimed to have invented it.

"I landed in England the first or second week of December 1943. The song was very popular in England at that time," said William G. O'Brien of Tigard, Ore., in a typical recollection.

"We danced that all the time over there," recalled another veteran, Anthony Elionfante of Wallingford, Conn.

Ruby, LaPrise's daughter, insisted the former GIs must have been mistaken. After all, she pointed out, her father and his bandmates, Charles Macak and Tafit Baker, were granted the copyright for the song in 1950. All three are now dead.

Referring to the servicemen, she said, "They might have done a novelty dance similar to the Hokey Pokey, but the trio wrote it and that trio didn't get together until after the war."

But a December 1945 issue of Dance magazine appears to support the memory of the ex-GIs. In that issue, a Pvt. David Houser wrote about a new novelty song sweeping England: "the Okey Cokey." It began, Houser wrote, like this:

"You put your left arm out, and shake it all about.

"You do the okey-cokey and you turn about.

"And that's what it's all about."

Houser added that the song "continues with other parts of the anatomy, starting all over again when necessary, and ending when a majority of the group has become exhausted, hysterical or both."

It is, of course, impossible to tell from the Dance magazine article what "the Okey Cokey" sounded like. But the lyrics are remarkably close to those in the LaPrise-Macak-Baker version.

Ruby said her father had served as an Army musician in France during World War II. But she was adamant that he had not learned the song then. She said she believed he patterned it, after the war, loosely after a French ditty his French-Canadian father had sung.

DEFENSE: Son struggles to clear father's name in 40-year-old murder

hoga County prosecutor's office — which tried Dr. Sheppard twice — believes the doctor was innocent.

"I don't think he killed his wife," says Carmen Marino, an assistant prosecutor. "He was not prone to violence. You'd have to believe ... he batters his wife to death in the room next to where the child is sleeping. That's asking a lot."

Despite that, Marino's office opposes Sheppard's claims.

"It's too old to make a conclusion," he says. "I don't think there's enough evidence to declare anybody innocent."

If a judge declares Dr. Sheppard innocent, his son could file a civil suit seeking millions of dollars for wrongful incarceration.

But others believe that's highly unlikely.

"There isn't anything that prosecutors haven't known for 30, 40 years," says David Doughten, a Cleveland attorney for Eberling, who declined to be interviewed.

Doughten says Eberling did not kill Mrs. Sheppard; he argues the son's campaign is a ploy to drum up interest in a book he recently co-authored.

Ohio Judge Michael Corrigan, whose father, John, prosecuted the second case and now suffers from Alzheimer's disease, agrees.

"This case has been visited and revisited every four or five years since 1954," Corrigan says. "From the perspective of access, motivation, ability ... coupled with physical evidence, overwhelmingly there's no question who committed the murder."

SAM REESE SHEPPARD, called "Chip" as a boy, still has fond childhood memories: learning to swim, talks with his dad, and walks with his mother along the beach of Lake Erie, in back of their Dutch Colonial home atop a bluff in Bay Village.

All that was shattered on Independence Day 1954, with his 31-year-old mother dead and his father the suspect.

His father told police he had been napping downstairs in the pre-dawn hours when he heard his wife's desperate cries — "Sam! Sam!" He said he ran up the stairs and was knocked out from behind. When he came to, he said, Mrs. Sheppard was dead, her pajamas were pulled above her breasts and below her knees.

After hearing a sound downstairs, the doctor said he saw a figure running toward the lake, gave chase and struggled with the man until he was knocked out again on the beach. He described the assailant as a "bushy-haired intruder" — which later became a one-armed man on "The Fugitive."

Police were suspicious: There were no signs of forced entry, the doctor wasn't wearing a T-shirt he had on that night, he refused to take a lie detector test and he was caught lying about an extramarital affair.

The media pounced fast with accusatory headlines: "Quit Stalling — Bring Him In," "Why Isn't Sam Sheppard In Jail?" "Getting Away With Murder."

His son, who had moved in with an aunt and uncle, was shielded from much of that — he didn't even attend his mother's funeral to avoid cameras in his face. But he still remembers catcalls in school and elderly women "who would just grab this poor little orphan waif and cry and slobber over me."

Dr. Sheppard's nine-week trial captivated the nation as prosecutors tore into his vague account. The coroner said Mrs. Sheppard probably was killed with a surgical instrument, but none was ever found. And there was conflicting testimony about whether Dr. Sheppard's wounds were superficial — and self-inflicted — or serious.

He was convicted of second-degree murder and sentenced to life in prison.

Within less than a month, he faced even more devastating news: His mother shot herself to death and his father died. And in 1963, Marilyn Sheppard's father fatally shot himself.

Dr. Sheppard served nearly 10 years in prison before a judge freed him, saying he was denied a fair trial.

TWO DAYS LATER, he married a flamboyant German divorcee he had been corresponding with while in prison, whose stepsister was married to Nazi propagandist Joseph Goebbels.

Two years later, in 1966, the Supreme Court ruled Dr. Sheppard's trial was tainted by "massive, pervasive, prejudicial publicity" and that the news media created a "carnival" atmosphere in court.

Jurors, for example, were not sequestered and there were numerous false media reports, including one by Walter Winchell that a woman arrested in New York was Dr. Sheppard's mistress and had his illegitimate child.

In his second trial, Dr. Sheppard, represented by Bailey, was acquitted.

But prison had taken its toll.

"He walked and talked and dressed like a convict," his son recalls. "He was this crude, weightlifting guy who thought in kind of devious ways."

Still, he says, father and son sustained one another.

"Dad would not have survived if he hadn't had a son," he says. "If he had been executed, certainly I wouldn't have survived."

Dr. Sheppard fought to win his medical license back, but soon there were malpractice suits, a failing marriage and, in the end, a shabby practice in a motel.

Dr. Sheppard, who began drinking heavily, took up wrestling, adopting the name 'Killer Sheppard.'

"That was kind of an act of despair, cynicism," says his son, who recalls his father visiting him in college in Boston, his life's possessions jammed in a car.

"I wished that I could offer him to move in with me," Sheppard says. "He was just so notorious and brought in so much heat that we really couldn't live together. That was excruciating. I reached the point where I had to protect myself from him for my future."

Shortly after, his father told him: " 'I'm going to be dead soon. I don't have anything to live for.' "

Sam Holmes Sheppard died in 1970. His son did not attend his funeral, to avoid the media's "shark frenzy." But he visited his gravesite later. The initials V.Q.P. — Latin for Vincit Qui Patitur — are etched on the tombstone. Father and son had signed their letters to each other that way.

It means "He Who Endures Conquers."

A SINGLE DROP of blood on a wood chip taken from the third basement stair.

Chisel marks on a door.

A murderer with detailed knowledge of the Sheppard home.

Cynthia Cooper, a journalist who coauthored "Mockery of Justice: The True Story of the Sam Sheppard Case" with the doctor's son, thinks these are pieces of a puzzle that could vindicate him.

Ms. Cooper accumulated 20 cartons and 2,000 computer files of material in six years of research. She and Sheppard also enlisted the help of AMSEC, a private Virginia-based investigative agency that interviewed witnesses and prepared a 170-page report that concluded Eberling was the No. 1 suspect.

"The evidence can only point you toward him," says Don Lowers, AMSEC's chairman.

It's true Richard Eberling has a troubled past.

In 1989, he was convicted of murdering and forging the will of Ethel Durkin, a wealthy widow who left him about $750,000. Her 1984 death was ruled an accidental fall but, after her body was exhumed, it was determined she had been struck in the head.

In a strange twist, one of Mrs. Durkin's sisters was beaten to death in bed — similarly to Marilyn Sheppard. That case was never solved.

Ms. Cooper conducted 10 interviews and exchanged dozens of letters about the Sheppard case with the imprisoned Eberling. "He started making a lot of bizarre statements indicating he had pretty personal knowledge about the murder and details other people didn't have," she says.

He once told her: "The Sheppard answer is in front of the entire world. Nobody bothered to look."

Even if scientific tests determine Eberling's blood matches the spot on the wood, Doughten, his attorney, says that proves nothing because the evidence was in the Sheppard family's possession for decades and there's no way to determine it wasn't contaminated.

"No court is ever going to admit this," he says.

Marino, the current prosecutor, rejects suggestions authorities botched the investigation, but says "there was too much pressure on them to focus on one person only. Other suspects that would be looked at today were ignored."

As for Eberling, Marino says his "mental aberrations certainly make him a strong suspect."

Though Marino believes Dr. Sheppard was innocent, many authorities still believe his original conviction was warranted.

Police: Woman killed by bomb had been threatened by her ex-husband

PLANTATION, Fla. (AP) — A woman whose ex-husband had threatened to blow her up was killed Friday by a package bomb that also injured three children, including an 11-year-old neighbor who carried the parcel in from the front step.

Seven people were in the house at the time; the children were home from school on Easter break.

Police said they had warned the woman not to open unexpected packages after a pipe bomb was found on the hood of her car last month.

The woman, whose name was not released pending notification of relatives, had been involved in a yearlong dispute with her ex-husband, according to police records. During that time, she tried to get a restraining order against him and he threatened to blow her up, police said.

The ex-husband has not been charged in the pipe bomb attack, which is still under investigation, and is "not a suspect at this time" in Friday's attack, said police Sgt. Mike Price. "We're just talking to him," Price said.

The man visited his children at the hospital Friday afternoon, Price said.

The motive for Friday's attack was not immediately known, said Orlando Blanco, a spokesman for the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. Agents from ATF, the FBI and the Postal Service were investigating. Federal authorities would not comment on the police report.

The bomb exploded in the back of the house but was powerful enough to blow the front doors open and knock window screens off-kilter. The blast happened on a quiet, curving street in the Jacaranda Lakes subdivision, where $280,000 homes sit amid lush hedges and towering royal palms.

"It sounded like a loud crash, like a car crashing," said 13-year-old John Zietz, who lives a half-block away.

The 11-year-old neighborhood boy handed the package to a girl, who gave it to her mother. The woman put it on the kitchen table, opened it and was killed instantly by the blast, police said. Her 13-year-old son, his 9-year-old sister and the neighbor were injured.

The girl, with a wound to her lower back, and her brother, with a cut on one hand, were hospitalized in good condition. The neighbor was treated at the scene by paramedics. The woman's boyfriend and two friends of the family, a father and son visiting from Miami, escaped injury.

The package carried FedEx markings, but police quickly established that Federal Express hadn't delivered it, Price said.

Doris Worthington, who walked her dog by the house shortly before the explosion, said: "It's the quietest neighborhood. We just don't have anything happen here."

On March 8, a pipe bomb was found inside a paper bag on the hood of the woman's car, which was parked at a neighborhood supermarket. Police evacuated about 250 people from the supermarket while the bomb was defused.

Nixon tapes: At long last, it all will hang out

By Mike Feinsilber
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — "I was hoping you fellows wouldn't ask me that. I wondered what I would say," said Alexander Butterfield, and with that the most damning secret of the Watergate scandal spilled out.

Richard Nixon, the president, had been taping every conversation that took place in his presence in the White House for nearly 2 1/2 years. Five microphones were planted in his desk in the Oval Office and two in wall sconces; microphones were hidden in the Cabinet Room and in his hideaway across the street and at Camp David.

Nixon struggled the rest of his life to preserve the secrets on the tapes and now, two years after his death, his daughters have given up the fight.

They have agreed to the tapes' gradual release. There are 3,700 hours, and when they are out America will have its most intimate verbatim view of the workings of any presidency — from high statesmanship to gutter language.

Every word spoken when Nixon was in the Oval Office, or the Cabinet Room or his hideaway in the Old Executive Office Building, was recorded on giant reels in the basement.

When the band played outside, when an ambulance rushed up Pennsylvania Avenue with its siren blasting, when coffee cups clattered, the sound was recorded.

After a handful of the Nixon tapes became public in 1974, the year after Butterfield's testimony, Nixon's presidency came to an end. He was shown to have been a party to the Watergate cover-up. He resigned to avoid impeachment and removal from office.

Butterfield, a functionary in Nixon's White House, was one of the few there who knew of the taping system. The Republican staff of the Senate Watergate Committee, suspecting there was one, asked about it and he told.

Years later, the staffer who posed the question, said, "My heart was pounding and my breath was shortened."

When Butterfield repeated his account the following Monday, before the television cameras, the news electrified America: All of the president's Watergate conversations had been recorded! It was all on tape!

Now the question that had obsessed the country could be answered: What did the president know and when did he know it? Was he or was he not a conspirator in the plot to cover up White House involvement in the 1992 break-in at Democratic Party headquarters in the Watergate office complex?

Not until April 1974 did Nixon yield. He went on television and made a show of the transcripts he was sending to the House Judiciary Committee, which was considering whether to recommend his impeachment. "The president has nothing to hide," he said; this "will tell it all."

It didn't.

The transcripts were found to be full of holes, misquotations and "expletives deleted."

Returning GOP lawmakers plan votes aimed at highlighting election issues

WASHINGTON (AP) — Still mired in fiscal stalemate with President Clinton, Congress returns from a two-week break Monday itching to change the subject to election-year debates on reining in tax increases and a balanced-budget constitutional amendment.

Lawmakers are eager to end their marathon standoff with Clinton over financing scores of federal agencies for the dwindling five months of fiscal 1996. But since Congress left town March 29, there has been no narrowing of differences over funds for high technology and police officers, Republican-sought restrictions on environmental laws and other issues.

The two sides, who may meet again Tuesday, face an April 24 deadline for settling these disputes or will stare at a new federal shutdown neither party wants. But looking ahead to the autumn elections, Republican presidential contender Bob Dole of Kansas, the Senate majority leader, and House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., plan votes — some doomed to defeat — aimed at highlighting GOP positions on other fronts.

"These are very important political issues," said Senate Budget Committee Chairman Pete Domenici, R-N.M., a close Dole ally. "We can't let the president have all the political issues. We have to make sure the public knows where we come from."

Leading off next week, the House votes Monday on a constitutional amendment requiring a two-thirds majority for Congress to approve tax increases. The measure, which itself needs a two-thirds majority for passage, is certain to be defeated, but it will let Republicans demonstrate their fiscal conservatism. When the measure foundered in the House last year, Gingrich promised conservatives a chance to spotlight the issue on this year's deadline for filing federal income-tax returns.

Dole plans Senate reconsideration of a constitutional amendment soon that would require a balanced budget by 2002. The Senate rejected the measure by a single vote last year and it is virtually certain to lose again, but Republicans savor the chance to force the proposal's Democratic opponents to vote anew against the publicly popular idea. The Senate might also vote on a version containing language requiring two-thirds congressional majorities for tax increases.

Other items Congress will tackle shortly:

■ On Tuesday, the House will probably approve a bill giving taxpayers more power in struggles with the Internal Revenue Service, such as boosting to $1 million the amount they can seek in lawsuits against the agency.

■ The Senate will debate an immigration measure that focuses on reducing the number of people entering the country illegally. The measure would make it harder for some legal immigrants to receive government benefits, but it does not contain House-approved language allowing states to deny public-school education to children of illegal immigrants.

■ The Senate is scheduled to consider a bipartisan bill this week guaranteeing health insurance coverage when workers change or lose their jobs, even if they have existing health problems. More than half the Senate has sponsored this measure, authored by Sens. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., and Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and endorsed by Clinton.

■ Both chambers may vote this week on a compromise anti-terrorism bill, perhaps in time to rush it to Clinton for his signature on Friday's first anniversary of the bombing of the Oklahoma City federal building. GOP aides are putting finishing touches on the measure, which has been slowed for months by disputes among Republicans.

Dole hopes war wounds serve as inspiration

By Katherine Seelye
N.Y. Times News Service

WEST DES MOINES, Iowa — When Bob Dole was to give a speech on affirmative action last month in California, he ended up delivering just one sentence on the subject. It turned out, he said later, that he had been given a lectern with a slanted top, and his notes kept slipping off. Because of hand injuries he sustained in World War II, Dole could not hold his notes and a microphone at the same time. So he decided to ad-lib, giving short shrift to his main topic.

The incident is but one small example of how Dole's war wounds — sustained 51 years ago today — still shape his life, which most days includes negotiating not merely legislative deals, but the most mundane tasks of living, just like the 40 million other disabled Americans.

Because Dole has learned to cope with so many potential impediments, people who work with him on Capitol Hill say they barely notice his limp right arm or useless right hand and are not aware that his left hand is partially numb. "None of us thinks about it because he works so well in this atmosphere," a top Democratic aide said.

It is easy to forget, for example, that the majority leader of the Senate cannot tie his shoes (he wears loafers). He cannot cut his food with a knife (he and his wife, Elizabeth, prefer to eat at home). As a young father, he could not lift up his daughter (she had to stand on a chair so he could hug her).

What most people see is Dole on television or in photographs clutching a pen in his right hand to ward off people who might try to shake that hand, and to keep his fingers from splaying.

Life was not to have been this way, of course. On April 14, 1945 — the day that transformed his life — Dole was a 22-year-old college athlete with plans to become a doctor. But in the time it took an artillery shell to explode, the young soldier was severely crippled. He feared that, if he lived at all, he would only peddle pencils on the street.

Now 72, Dole is one election away from becoming president of the United States. If elected, he would be the first chief executive with a physical disability since Franklin D. Roosevelt. But unlike Roosevelt, who concealed his polio from the public, Dole, who still has fragments of shrapnel in his shoulder and neck, has been making his wound and his grueling 39-month convalescence a central theme of his campaign in an effort to show that he is a "real person" and that his leadership has been tested.

Dole said in an interview on his campaign plane last week that if he does become president, he hopes to serve as an inspiration, not only to people with disabilities but also to those who can make the world more accessible to them, like manufacturers of artificial limbs.

"I'd want to do it an appropriate way," he said. "Not, 'Look at me!' Not like L.B.J. — 'Here's my scar!' Take off my shirt and say, 'Here's where I got shot!' It's your ability that counts, not your disability."

State to begin work on major street

From Staff Reports

One of Midland's busiest streets will become even busier this week as the Texas Department of Transportation (TxDOT) begins work to rebuild Big Spring Street from Wadley Avenue to Front Street.

The work is expected to continue through the summer, according to Mike Chetty, the TxDOT engineer in charge of the project.

"We expect the entire project to be completed by mid-September, Chetty said. "But the contractor has agreed to confine his work zone to a three-to-four block area at any given time, so most of the 2.4 miles section will be unaffected."

Reece Albert Construction of San Angelo, the contractor for the $1.6 million project, plans to start at Scharbauer Drive on the south-bound lanes (west side of the street) and work toward Front Street.

"When crews are working, the two affected south-bound lanes will be closed in the work zone and traffic will be diverted to the north-bound lanes," Chetty said.

"If the only access to a business is from Big Spring Street, the contractor will provide ramping to enable the traffic to cross the construction area to get to the business," he said.

"If a business has access from a side street, the business owner should encourage customers to use that access route during construction periods.

"Barring bad weather the area in front of any business should be affected for a only a brief period."

He said that the roadway is being replaced as a preventive maintenance measure because the existing road surface is aging and cracking, "and will become a more severe maintenance problem, as well as a problem for motorists, if the work is not done now."

Some of the existing material will be recycled back into the base of the road, Chetty said.

A TxDOT public information officer has gone door-to-door to businesses in the affected area to explain the project to business owners.

BASIN BRIEFING

Guest speaker

Van Pearcy, Midland representative of Edward Jones Investments, will sponsor an "Investing in Today's Market" seminar noon until 1:45 p.m. Tuesday at Midland Country Club. In addition to Pearcy, speakers include Sam Perry, marketing vice president with Putnam Investments, and Alan Meyers, local estate attorney. The seminar will focus on the different investments that are attractive in today's market for those who have maturing CDs, bonds or extra cash. Reservations can be made by calling 683-1516.

Cyclone strike

TEMPLE-Cyclone, Texas, was more than just a name for some tense moments.

A tornado tore through parts of the Bell County farming town around 7:45 p.m. Friday, residents said. No one was seriously injured. But winds damaged a ranch, flipped a trailer home and ripped up several barns.

Some tourists dining at the Cyclone Corral caught the dirty brown twister on videotape. The blown dirt made the tornado look like a "firestorm" more than a tornado, rancher Darwin Bruggman said.

There was no immediate confirmation of the twister from the National Weather Service.

Channel work

HOUSTON — The Houston Ship Channel is one step closer to a long-awaited enlargement with formal approval from the Army Corps of Engineers.

The Corps Friday endorsed the $418 million plan to dredge the channel to make it wider and deeper.

The dredging is designed to help the Port of Houston maintain its rank as one of the nation's busiest.

The plan calls for the fill to be used to create wildlife-friendly islands. Dredge material would be transformed into a 12-acre nesting island for waterfowl, a draft version of the Corps report notes.

The final draft might not come until May. By then, a U.S. House appropriations subcommittee that reviews waterway issues may have already acted.

"This is such a good project we are going to ask if they can leave us a placemarker," Rep. Gene Green said, meaning the subcommittee could reserve the money for the plan. Green's district includes the port.

The dredging would deepen the channel to 45 feet from 40 feet. The width would increase from 400 feet to 530 feet and alleviate a practice known as the "Texas Chicken" — having to guide approaching vessels on what appears to be a collision course until breaking away at the last moment to avoid grounding.

"Safety is a major concern for us," said Port spokeswoman Caleen Burton.

Academic Challenge

Controversial group ruled non-existent

PECOS — Richard Lance McLaren and his Republic of Texas following have been ordered by U.S. District Court Judge Lucius D. Bunton to pay Stewart Title Guaranty Co. $1.8 million in damages after finding that McLaren and his following had engaged in racketeering and wire fraud "to obtain money or property by false or fraudulent pretenses" and slandered and defamed the title company.

McLaren, the purported "chief ambassador and consul general" of the Republic of Texas, which insists on Texas' independence from the United States, was involved in a failed scheme to defraud $10 million in silver from Houston-based Stewart Title.

In his alleged scheme, McLaren — who had set up his consul's office in Fort Davis — apparently devised his own court in demanding money from Stewart Title, which, according to court records, has insured some land titles in the Davis Mountains Resort.

In his class action, McLaren somehow reasoned that he and his following were damaged as a result of Stewart Title's insuring titles in the subdivision.

In his $1.8 million judgment against McLaren earlier this month, Bunton found McLaren — in trying to exact $10 million in silver coins from Stewart Title — had damaged the company by $450,000. To that, Bunton added $1.35 million in damages for slander, defamation, and civil conspiracy.

Bunton said that "Stewart Title has not been validly adjudged or arbitrated liable" to McLaren and his following and that any sale by McLaren of Stewart Title property would be "void."

He ruled that the Republic of Texas does not exist; the republic ceased to exist in 1845 when Texas was admitted as a state to the United States of America, and that the purported secession by Texas in 1861 at the onset of the Civil War was "void, invalid, and without legal effect."

McLaren did not appear in court and could not be located for comment on Bunton's ruling. The judge has not yet ruled on holding McLaren in contempt for not appearing in court.

Michael T. Morgan, the Midland lawyer who represented Stewart Title in court, said Saturday that McLaren's scheme was "obviously frivolous and spurious."

National Boys & Girls Club week promotes success

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

Children looking for a positive place to go, have fun and stay out of trouble need look no farther than the Boys & Girls Clubs of Midland.

The clubs provide youths with recreation while educating them on various skills.

This week has been designated as National Boys & Girls Clubs Week as a way to promote the activities and the need for such programs, said Jon Farr, executive director of the Midland Boys & Girls Clubs.

"This is a time when we can showcase our programs on an every-day basis," Farr said of the week's designation.

Operating with the theme "The Positive Place for Kids," the clubs give children and teens opportunities they may otherwise not have.

"These days of increasing single-parent and two-job families mean that a lot of kids have too much unsupervised time on their hands and too few places to go," Farr said.

Many children turn to the streets, drugs, gangs and other forms of crime because they have no role models to turn to. That's why the clubs are so important, Farr said.

According to recent statistics, high-risk youth who are kept out of trouble through intervention and prevention programs could save society as much as $2 million a youth over his lifetime, said Rich Wieligman, director of operations for the clubs.

"This cost is calculated in terms of actual loss of earnings as well as pain and suffering. Given this statistic, is it any wonder that today more than ever Boys & Girls Clubs make sense?" Wieligman said.

Among programs the clubs offer include organized sports, arts and crafts, games and places to gather. These programs are designed to develop sportsmanship, body and mind.

Among one of the featured programs of the clubs is the "power-hour" tutoring in which children can go for help with homework and school work and the clubs provide incentives such as the top five students each month get free pizza, Farr said.

Other program areas of the Boys & Girls Clubs of Midland include citizenship and leadership development, personal and educational development, cultural enrichment, health and physical education and social recreation.

Gladney Center hosts benefit

By Joe Gaines
Staff Writer

Three Midland couples are expecting a baby — from the Gladney Center of the Permian Basin.

The local office, established four years ago, is part of the Fort Worth-based Gladney Center, a non-profit agency.

Each couple has chosen Gladney because of its reputation and longevity. In its 109-year history, an adoption has never been reversed.

Gladney Center of the Permian Basin's annual fund-raiser, "Gladney Grande," is set for 6:30 p.m. Thursday at the Petroleum Club.

The dinner and style show will be followed by inspirational speaker, John Trent, co-author of "The Blessing." Tickets are $40 a person or $75 a couple.

For more information call 686-9040. The event is sponsored by KNFM, KWES-9 and the Reporter Telegram.

Gladney helps prospective adoptive families realize their dreams of parenthood through domestic and international adoptions, nurtures young women through an unplanned pregnancies, and seeks to secure loving, caring homes for children entrusted to the agency's care, regardless of a child's race or religion.

Adoptive parents, birth parents and adopted children receive assistance and support from professional social workers who are experts in adoption matters.

At its Fort Worth campus, Gladney maintains one of the largest and most comprehen-

Southwest Airlines and American Eagle on Friday unveiled special fare packages.

American Eagle announced special weekend fares between Midland International Airport and Shreveport, La. — home of casino and horse- racing action.

The fare is $69 round-trip between Midland/Odessa and Shreveport, with a one-day advance purchase requirement. The fare is good any time Saturday until noon Sunday.

The special fares also apply between Shreveport and Abilene, Amarillo, College Station, Killeen, Lubbock, San Angelo, Waco and Wichita Falls. The fare is $59 out of Dallas/Fort Worth and $119 from Laredo.

Southwest, which just discontinued its "Friends Fly Free" discount fare promotion, Friday unveiled its "Take Along Fares" to celebrate the Dallas-based airline's 25th anniversary.

Take Along Fares allows an adult paying full fare round-trip to take up to three companions along for $25 a person each way.

For example, a round-trip between Midland International and Dallas would cost $158 full fare plus $50 for one companion. The fare between Midland International and El Paso would be $178 full fare and $50 for one companion. The fares do not include airport-assessed passenger facility charges of up to $12 round-trip a person.

Men can't keep track of phone numbers to save their life

"OK, where did I put that darn phone number. It's got to be here somewhere. I just wrote it down."

Sound familiar?

If it doesn't, then you're obviously one of those dreadful neat freaks who knows precisely where everything is at all times.

Ott

But if you're normal, like me, then you're constantly jotting down phone numbers on little pieces of paper and then immediately losing them. Indeed, these little pieces of paper can get lost faster than that one brown sock that is always walking away from your drawer, thus leaving you with still another mismatched pair that can be worn only with boots and other high-top foot apparel.

I mean, where do they all go?

Somewhere together, no doubt.

Yes, somewhere is this world, probably in the darkest corner of my bedroom closet, there are 75 socks hanging out with 83 jotted-down telephone numbers. And they are all giggling and making fun of me.

But I digress.

We're not talking socks here. Today's subject is telephone numbers ... and the inability of most people, especially men, to keep track of them.

Yes, I did say "especially men."

For some reason we are far more prone to craddle the phone to our ear, scribble a phone number on a piece of paper (sometimes with the name of the person next to it and sometimes not), race to the coffee machine for a quick cup and then return to our desk only to discover the number missing.

It just happens.

Women, on the other hand, tend to be very precise when taking telephone messages. They include the name of the person, the phone number and what the original call was all about. They also utilize a handwriting style that can actually be read by others. Not only that, but sometimes they even use personalized notepads that have their name at the top and a cutesy message of some kind at the bottom.

Yuk.

Men, thank goodness, don't do that.

No, we take the nearest piece of paper we can find and start scribbling in our own unique form of shorthand.

OTT: Phone numbers tend to get lost rather easily

(From 1B)

Some experts in the field of human behavior (namely me and the woman who cuts my hair) have suggested that this type of note-taking by men dates back to our "bar days" when we were constantly trying to pick up single women. As you no doubt recall, the bar napkin became our most popular notepad.

Many a phone number was jotted down on a bar napkin. Then it was folded neatly in quarters and placed in our wallets. The next morning we would find it and try to remember whose number it was.

Since we didn't include the woman's name on the note, it wasn't as simple a task as it might seem, especially since we were somewhat looped at the time and, as a result, couldn't even remember asking a woman for her phone number.

Now most of us have slowed down and given up the bar lifestyle. We stay at home much more and a wild night means staying up past Letterman's opening monologue.

Still, old habits die hard.

So if you are one of those people I promised to call back last week, I apologize. I lost your number.

If, on the other hand, you are a woman I promised to call back in August of 1985, again I apologize.

I still have the bar napkin with your number on it, I just can't remember your name.

In fact, I can't remember you.

Those were the days, weren't they?

CLUB: Week to help promote youth activities

(From 1B)

The clubs are collaborating with the Midland Angels this summer to have a T-ball and machine pitch leagues at a cost of $10 a child. Some children may qualify for scholarships to alleviate the costs, Farr said.

The T-ball league will be made up of kindergartners and first graders; the machine pitch league will have second-, third- and fourth-graders and the "kid pitch" will be made up of fifth- and sixth-graders.

The games will be played at Taylor and Washington parks. Forms may be obtained by calling 683-0050. Volunteer coaches, umpires and team parents are also needed. Registration ends May 17; the leagues start June 4.

"The year-round support of Midlanders is critical to our ability to reach out and serve even more disadvantaged youth in Midland," Wieligman said.

Denzel Washington, actor and national spokesman for the Boys & Girls Clubs of America, calls on concerned citizens to support the more than 1,800 local clubs nationwide.

Washington has served as a national spokesman for Boys & Girls Clubs of America since 1992.

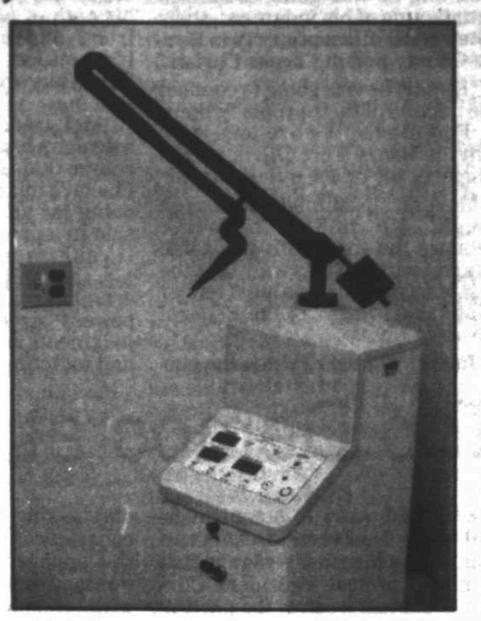

He said being the spokesman comes naturally because he is a product of the club.

He joined the club at age 6 and remained as a member and counselor until he was an adult.

"At the time it was all about fun. I actually joined because all of the kids coming out of the club had smiles on their faces ... In retrospect, it truly was about character-building. Many of the lessons I learned there I still apply," Washington said.

"Cosmetic Laser Center"
Sylvan Bartlett, M.D., Medical Director

The new Tru-Pulse Co2 Laser has a unique form of energy that eliminates prolonged post operative redness, pigmentation problems and pain.The healing time is extremely short-approximately 2 to 3 days for eyelids.
The Ruby Q-Switch Laser is used for tattoo and benign mole and pigmentation removal in a manner that does not result in scarring. The YAG, the other method commonly used for this treatment, has a high incidence of scarring. Instead of burning, the Q-Switch explodes pigment into minute particles which the patient's body picks up and eliminates.
The Copper Vapor Laser is for the removal of skin blood vessel deformities such as port wine stains, vessels about the nose, etc. In addition, the laser removes warts and pigmented elevated lesions. Frequently the dark circles around the eyes can be removed by this laser.

FRAUD: Judge orders group to pay for scheme

(From 1B)

He said McLaren had "filed his lien (against Stewart Title), claiming he was going to sell, in satisfaction of his judgment, their (Stewart's) office property in Harris County and in Corpus Christi.

"He said he was going to conduct the auction of their property there in Fort Davis. We are uncertain why he chose Fort Davis to sell property 500 or 600 miles away."

Morgan assumed McLaren sought $10 million in silver because "he apparently has some quarrel with the currency that the rest of us recognize as legal tender (and lacks) faith" in the Federal Reserve Notes.

John C. VanKirk, who is the purported president of the Republic of Texas, charged that McLaren's schemes weakened the credibility of the Republic of Texas and its cause. He said McLaren violated his oath of office and committed fraud and has been suspended from office by the Republic of Texas hierarchy for his role in the scheme.

"McLaren and his pet council members have taken an alternate course that is a far cry from what I believe this republic is capable of doing for all of Texas," VanKirk said in a press release.

VanKirk, who lives in an Antonio, said McLaren's "form of government wants no separation of powers, grand juries who make judgments instead of investigating and indicting, offers of immunity to certain radical fringe groups for heinous crimes, and radical fringe 'militia-type' groups running roughshod over the people without lawful authority."

VanKirk said that promoting the concept of Texas as an independent nation must be carried out by credible people. He said that "radicals and weak-mindedness always seem (to) go with the territory in any government."

The re-established Republic of Texas reportedly has demanded that Gov. George W. Bush "prove his authority to govern" or else turn the state government over to VanKirk and his following, according to court records.

McLaren and his faction are pressing the United Nations to recognize the Republic of Texas as an independent nation, according to court records.

VanKirk said in his press release hat the republic's "mandate is to develop a Republican form of government, based on Constitutional guidelines, and deliver it to the people of Texas prior to the convention scheduled for 1998."

VanKirk contends that the Republic of Texas, as an independent nation, would be "the solution to many of (the people's) problems" and that "life in Texas, as a Republic, can realistically deal with issues important to us all, such as our economy, education, crime, and taxation."

State to raise park entrance fees

State park visitors will be charged admission on a per-person basis beginning May 1 under a plan to help pay for $186 million in park repairs and improvements.

Instead of paying per vehicle, adults will pay fees ranging from $1 to $5 per person, with most parks charging $2 or less. Children under 12 will get in free as will certain senior citizens and disabled people.

The fee change is part of an effort by the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department to pay for state park repairs.

The Texas state auditor's office estimated in 1995 a $186 million backlog of state park repairs and capital projects needed through the end of the century.

"This agency is currently operating on a lean budget with increased customer demands and a growing backlog of deferred maintenance at state parks," said Richard Heath, a Parks and Wildlife commissioner.

Per-person pricing alone won't solve the problem but is an important step, Heath said.

It costs the agency about $32 million a year to operate state parks. Park fees generate about $21 million a year. Per-person pricing is expected to generate an additional $5 million to $7 million.

On Friday, top state park officials toured areas of Garner State Park in need of repair. Garner, located 90 miles west of San Antonio, is the most popular state campground in Texas.

Some restroom walls at Garner are rotted and an overloaded sewage system backs up on heavy days.

"Garner is a symbol of a state park system that may appear healthy on the surface but suffers from a growing need for major repairs and improvements," said Ron Holliday, the park agency's public lands director.

There are 125 state parks, 84 of which charge entrance fees.

Many of the others, such as state historic sites, charge tour fees but not entrance fees.

Top Democrat resigns over abortion issue

EL PASO (AP) — A controversial state Democratic executive committee member resigned Saturday to protest President Clinton's veto last week of the partial-birth abortion bill.

Jose R. Kennard, who also resigned as chair of the Mexican-American Caucus, said in a letter to Clinton that he could not "in good conscience" continue in his elected positions with the Democratic Party.

Kennard, 56, said he also will ask other Democrats to withhold their support of Clinton, either by active criticism or by not voting for him in November.

"I am not asking Democrats to bolt the party, nor am I asking them to support Republicans. I am only asking them to search their consciences and stand up against the apparent Clinton campaign strategy that no price is too high to win," Kennard said in a prepared statement.

Clinton vetoed legislation Wednesday that would have banned partial-birth abortions. The President contended that the procedure sometimes was necessary to protect a woman's health or save her life.

Kennard said in the letter that he could not understand how Clinton could appear to grieve over the loss of innocent children in the Oklahoma City bombing last year and the mass slaying of the children in Scotland last month, then sign an order that has the "clear effect of ordering the death of thousands of innocent children."

State Democratic Chairman Bill White could not be reached for comment on Kennard's resignation.

Kennard is a developer and former El Paso County commissioner.

In 1995, Texas Attorney General Dan Morales accused U.S. Rep. Ron Coleman of El Paso and other Democratic leaders of threatening him with political retaliaton when he considered a lawsuit against an unidentified party official.

The report, on CBS-TV's "60 Minutes," did not name the potential lawsuit target, but a Morales spokesman told the El Paso Times it was Kennard.

Coleman denied making any such threats against Morales, also a Democrat.

The alleged threat took place in 1993. Morales won his second term the following year.

sive maternity homes in the United States. The campus includes three dormitories for maternity clients, a health clinic, chapel, education building, counseling center, cafeteria and multi-purpose auditorium.

The Gladney Center is a non-sectarian, state licensed adoption agency that has been operating since 1887. Gladney has placed more than 23,000 children in homes and served more than 35,000 birth mothers. In addition to Midland there are field offices in Dallas, Houston, Little Rock, Ark., Charlotte, N.C., and Oklahoma City.

The agency has three programs of adoption — international, agency-assisted and designated. In the agency-assisted and designated programs, the parents' anonymity is assured to prevent the birth mother from finding out who they are.

The agency-assisted program connects families that want to adopt with women who have contacted Gladney about putting their babies up for adoption. Couples participating in this program begin the process by attending an orientation, followed by an application and home study.

Couples in this program are generally between the ages of 24 and 45, have been married for at least three years and have no more than one child in the home at the present time. Placement of a child will most likely occur within 12 months. Adoptive parent criteria is dependent upon the number of birth mothers seeking Gladney's services.

Midlanders Randy and Jane are under Gladney's agency-assisted program. They have a 6-year-old son and wanted a house-full of children. But because of a rare disorder, Jane had two children who were stillborn. The couple wanted another child, but didn't want to risk another life.

They spent 10 months researching the adoption process and decided to go through an agency. After talking to 33 agencies, they decided on Gladney because of its reputation and facilities, they said.

Jane said she had to fill out tons of paperwork, undergo interviews and a house visit.

"I will admit that at times I thought it was brutal and discouraging. I kept saying to myself, 'I have a 6-year-old child who is healthy and happy; doesn't that count for anything?'"

But she knew that Gladney's responsibility was to provide a safe home for the baby and that is what is most important.

They spent four weeks filling out paperwork and another two on their autobiographies.

"Randy thought he could cover all three stages of life, childhood, adolescence and adulthood, in one paragraph, so I had to keep sending him back to the typewriter. Finally, I gave up and decided his story could be told in a few words," Jane said.

Next came the home visit. The home is inspected for safety, such as fire extinguishers, smoke detectors, electrical outlet plugs, etc.

"Although I knew this was what they were going to look for, it still didn't stop me from cleaning for six days," Jane said.

The final step was an interview in Fort Worth where they met their caseworker. After six months, they were accepted into the Gladney program. Now they are waiting to be matched with a birth mother.

"You never know if the next time you answer the telephone it won't be a baby waiting just for us," Jane said.

Randy and Jane said adoption is a wonderful and positive route to take in building a family.

"It is a lot of work, emotionally and physically, but well worth it," Jane said.

Through the designated program, the adoption process can move faster and be both flexible and economical.

The adoptive family, with assistance from Gladney, works at its own pace to locate a birth mother. Caseworkers assist each family in its search by teaching how to locate a prospective birth mother. Once a family has found a birth mother, caseworkers and attorneys gather information and arrange visits with the birth mother. Families in this program are granted greater flexibility regarding age limits, length of marriage and number of children already in the home.

Paul and Cindy are in their mid-30s, have no children and are using Gladney's designated program. Before deciding to adopt, they went through six to eight months of unsuccessful fertility procedures. Doctors told them they could find no reasons why they weren't able to conceive.

They are searching for a baby through ads in city and college newspapers. Paul and Cindy pay for the ads that list their 800 number and a brief description of themselves and their desire to adopt a baby. Gladney directs them on where to place it and what to ask when someone calls. Their first ad runs today.

When a prospective birth mother calls, they will direct them to Gladney.

"They said it may not be the birth mother who calls, but a mother or relative," Cindy said.

If both parties are interested in continuing the adoption, each is assigned a caseworker who acts as a mediator.

The adopting family pays for all necessary prenatal care.

"Sometimes the girl is on Medicaid or has her own insurance," Cindy said.

They paid an initial $6,500 fee to Gladney, which charges prospective couples according to their income. Adoptions can cost anywhere from $10,000 to $30,000.

While the amount may be high, Paul and Cindy said having a child naturally is expensive.

They hope to have a baby within nine months. Their only requests are that it be healthy and Anglo.

"I always wanted a boy, but I have a niece who is wonderful, so a daughter would be great, too," Paul said. "It really doesn't matter.

"We've waited and now it's time."

They said there is a lot of anxiety involved in an adoption and the waiting is the hardest. "Our caseworker said there will be a lot of ups and downs. We're aware that at sometime we may think we have a mom, and it could fall through. So far, we've only had ups," Cindy said.

Contact is not severed after the baby is adopted. Gladney also mediates requests of the birth mother, like photos of birthdays, but the adoptive parents must agree.

They said they will keep trying to conceive and want to have at least two children.

The international program assists families in adopting children from China, Guatemala, Mexico, Paraguay, Peru and Russia. The adoption criteria, length of adoption process, travel requirements and fees vary by country.

DeAnn and Kyle McGraw are also in their mid-30s and have two boys, ages 7 and 10. They are not able to have any more children naturally because of medical reasons, but DeAnn wants a daughter.

They are seeking a baby through a Gladney's agent in Russia. They're the first Midland couple to use Gladney to get a child from another country. They chose the international program because it was easier to chose the sex of the child and because the demand for American children is greater than the number of children available for adoption.

Kyle had also seen a television show on the orphanages in Romania and wanted to help rescue a child. DeAnn said she wanted to rescue a child because after age 16, 90 percent of the girls in orphanages become prostitutes.

Children adopted from another country usually come from orphanages. Kyle and DeAnn said adoptions from Russia are quicker for children with disabilities because that is who they try to adopt out first.

"Gladney has a whole file of photos with children with disabilities," DeAnn said. "We just can't take one because the child would need 100 percent of my attention and I already have two other children to consider."

Adopting a child from another country may be quicker, but it has its risks and is more expensive. With fees and travel to Moscow to pick up their daughter, their adoption could cost around $22,000.

When a prospective baby is found, photos and videos will be sent to DeAnn and Kyle. Their pediatrician will examine the photos to see if the child has any major health problems.

Then if they decide to adopt, they're off to Moscow. When they leave, they will probably have only a week's notice, which prevents them from taking advantage of advance ticket purchasing.

They will have to plan to stay two weeks and bring with them baby items and gifts for Russian court officials to help speed the adoptive process.

When they get to Russia, their plans for adoption may fall through. "Our paperwork could be wrong or the child may not be what we were told," Kyle said.

They are given three days with the child before they can decide to adopt and must get a visa for her from the U.S. Embassy.

All three couples said adoption was a positive alternative to abortion. They said birth mothers getting their children back occur in only a small percent of all adoptions.

OPEN HOUSE AND PUBLIC MEETING

TXDOT ROUTE STUDY LUBBOCK TO IH-10 AND AMARILLO TO STATE LINE

The Texas Department of Transportation is hosting an open house and public meeting on Tuesday, May 14, 1996, at the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center, 1501 Sixth Street, Lubbock, Texas. The open house will be held from 4:00 p.m. to 7:00 p.m. and the public meeting will follow at 7:00 p.m.

The purpose of this open house and public meeting is to discuss the TxDOT Route Study to connect Interstate 27 in Lubbock, Texas, to Interstate Highway 10, and also to connect Interstate 27 in Amarillo with the Texas state line to the north. The study team will present the analysis process for corridor feasibility and the results of the process. A recommendation for either a single "freeway" or three "highways" south of Lubbock and either a single "freeway" or two "highways" north of Amarillo will be presented. Public comments are requested pertaining to the results and recommendations presented.

The public is invited to attend the May 14th open house anytime between the hours of 4:00 p.m. and 7:00 p.m. Exhibits and maps will be displayed at the open house and members of the study team will be available to discuss the project leisurely with members of the public. Forms will be provided at the open house for written comments, and a court reporter will be available to take verbal comments in a private setting.

The formal public meeting will begin at 7:00 p.m. A brief presentation will be given by the study team followed by public commenting. Verbal comments made at the formal public meeting will be limited to three (3) minutes each. If your comments are longer than three minutes, you will be allowed to submit a more comprehensive written statement to supplement your verbal comments. There will be no responses to comments at the public meeting. Citizens with questions for the project team are encouraged to attend the open house prior to the public meeting.

Written comments may be submitted at the open house and public meeting, or mailed to District Engineer Jose E. Morales, P.E., Texas Department of Transportation, 3901 East Highway 80, Odessa, Texas 79761 by May 25, 1996. Comments will also be accepted on the Route Study Telephone Hotline by calling 1-800-661-3234.

EAGLE SCOUT AWARDS

Byron Simpson, son of Berry and Cyndi Simpson of Midland has recently completed requirements for his Eagle Scout award.

Simpson

He began Scouting as a Cub Scout in September 1989 with Pack 83, sponsored by Golf Course Road Church of Christ, and later transferred to pack 82, sponsored by Rusk Elementary, in September 1990. He completed his Cub Scout tenure by receiving the Arrow of Light. He became a Boy Scout in March 1992 after joining Troop 232, sponsored by First Baptist Church.

He received his Tenderfoot, Second Class, and First Class rank in September 1993, Star rank in June 1994, and Life rank in May 1995.

His Eagle project was to organize and assist the Campfire organization move to their new location on West Illinois Street.

Simpson has held several leadership positions with Troop 232, including quartermaster, assistant patrol leader, and patrol leader.

He is an honor student at Lee Freshman High School and is active as a trombone player in the band. He also serves on the Youth Council at First Baptist Church.

Peterson

Andrew Petersen, son of Gary and Carolyn Petersen, received his Eagle rank at a Court of Honor held Tuesday, April 2 at First Baptist Church.

Andrew joined Tiger Cubs as a first grader, and advanced through the ranks of Cub Scouts with Pack 232, also sponsored by First Baptist, until receiving his Arrow of Light in May 1991. With Troop 232 he has maintained nearly perfect attendance and especially enjoys camping, hunting and skiing trips.

His Eagle project consisted of organizing a group of eleven Scouts to cut down three trees, remove roots and debris to help with the landscaping plans of First Baptist.

He is a member of Troop 232 and has held the offices of Scribe and Patrol Leader, and is in his second year as a Senior Patrol Leader.

Petersen's grandfather and uncle are Eagle Scouts, making him the third generation of Eagles in his family.

He is a sophomore at Lee High School in honors and advanced classes, active in German Club and a member of the National German Honor Society. At church he is active in Sunday School, Pioneers youth group and the youth basketball team. He is a frequent volunteer for the Teen Court jury.

He plans to continue his involvement in Troop 232.

Schumpert

Dustin Schumpert, son of Buddy and Cid Schumpert and a sophomore at Midland High School has received his Eagle Scout at Valley View Baptist Church.

He is in Troop 109 sponsored by Suburban Lions Club and has 25 merit badges. He is a Brotherhood member in Order of the Arrow and is a member of Explorer Post 901.

Dustin's Eagle Scout Project was a painting project for Valley View Baptist Church.

Jennings

Brian Jennings, son of Gordon and Wanda Jennings, was recognized for achieving his Eagle rank with the Boy Scouts of America at a Court of Honor held Sunday, April 14, 1996 at the Boy Scout Service Center in Midland.

He is a member of Troop 19 and has earned a total of 28 merit badges, plus qualifying for BSA Lifeguard in July, 1993. His Eagle project involved various improvements around the Midland West Side Lions Club building.

He assisted with the Cub Scout Resident Camp at Hughes Aquatic Base in Colorado City during July of 1993 and has since helped with the "Mom and Me" and "Lad and Dad" programs held at the Buffalo Trail Scout Ranch near Fort Davis. He has been on staff at the Scout Ranch the past two summers working in its kitchen and its trading post. Additionally, he has helped teach the Pioneering, Cooking, Communications and Wilderness Survival merit badges as well as assisting other scouts with their "Trial to Eagle." He plans to return to the Scout Ranch this summer working as a staff member of the "out back" program. He had the privilege of participating in Philmont Trek 725 H2 last year under the adult leadership of Joe Pickering, Warren Wallace, Bruce Partain and Dwayne King. Brian is a Vigil member of the Order of the Arrow and is the 1996 Vice-Chief of Communications for the Chaparral Chapter. Additionally, he is the Vice-President of Post 225, the Woapalani Native American Indian Dancers, as well as a member of the Texas Indian Hobbyists Association. He has been a volunteer for Midland's Teen Court the past two years.

Jenning's interests include hunting, spelunking, hiking, camping, backpacking, golf, art, music, photography, Indian dancing, animal care, automobile restoration, biking and roller blading. He plans to major in either mechanical or aeronautical engineering or possibly veterinary medicine and upon graduating from high school, is considering applying for enrollment to Texas A&M University or for admittance to the Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs, Colo. He is currently a sophomore at Lee High School where he is enrolled in advanced and honors classes.

TEC to help students find summer employment

From Staff Reports

Beginning in the spring and continuing into the early summer, students across the Permian Basin hit the personnel offices of area businesses looking for summer jobs.

County judges and mayors are supporting efforts of the Texas Employment Commission and Job Training Partnership Act (JTPA) to help 300 students between 16 and 21 find summer jobs.

Employers are asked to call or fax job opening information to the Midland TEC office, 682-9421, ext. 209 or fax 682-0507.

"Without a federally funded program this summer, support of local employers is desperately needed," said Margaret Livingston, local TEC representative.

Employers are asked to commit this summer to hire a student for a minimum of 20 hours a week for six weeks.

Students are filing applications with the TEC. In some cases, they attend short workshops in completing employer applications and interviewing techniques.

DENVER! LUBBOCK! NOW MIDLAND...?

Have you ever co-signed a $21,000,000.00 note?

As you scramble to file your Form 1040, consider the following facts about the proposed air terminal SNAFU (and don't forget the potential $110,000,000.00 (or 1.1 X 10^8 dollars) pending school bond issue upcoming in June):

1. "Airport of Dreams" or "Nightmare on Highway 80"?
1995 passenger emplanements at the airport are down almost 15.0% from 1982 and inched up less than 1.4% from 1994.

In terms of airport usage, minimum-wage retail jobs at the Black-Eyed Pea simply cannot replace the type of higher-paying jobs of the pending Amoco-Shell venture which were recently lost to Houston.

2. "Read My Lips-No New Taxes" or "Municipal Chapter 7"?

While 60% of the passengers who use the airport live outside the City of Midland, the remaining 40% of us will pay for 100% of any contingent liabilities caused by revenue shortfalls, cost overruns or other unforeseen contingencies. These liabilities would be paid in the form of higher property taxes which would be assessed by The City when it could not otherwise pay its obligations when they come due.

3. "The Better Mousetrap" or "Dry Hole"?

The new air terminal would have 4 gates. The existing airport has 4 gates, 2 of which are currently substantially underutilized. People won't come to Midland just to see a new terminal building.

4. "Ferrari Toy" or "Reliable Chevy"?

The existing airport facilities can be repaired and brought into compliance with legal requirements for significantly less than the $14,000,000.00 of existing and estimated future FAA grants and airport concessions which the City admits in its own projections should be available for such purposes. Thus, instead of a potential property tax increase in the event a new terminal is constructed, if the existing terminal is updated, the citizens of Midland might actually derive the benefit of a surplus (seemingly unheard of in governmental circles these days)!

5. "Tammany Hall" or "Town Hall Meeting"?

Until the recent petition drive forced them to change their minds, the City Council had inexplicably determined not to permit the citizens to vote on this colossal issue!

Do you want to replace our existing, efficient, user-friendly and underutilized terminal with an unnecessary, expensive facility which could result in a significant tax increase and will create traffic jams for at least two years?

The issue is simple: if you are discouraged or angry at increasing taxation at the federal and state level, but feel powerless to change the same, you can stop this senseless public welfare at the local level.

PLEASE VOTE NO TO THE NEW TERMINAL PROPOSAL.

Growing concern threatens 'fabric'

By now the scene has grown all too familiar. Somewhere in America, a group of people holes up in a building after making disconcerting statements about the government, society in general or the deteriorating state of life today. Similar instances have already occurred in Waco and, most recently, near Lincoln, Mont.

It's a frightening trend because of what it says about a change taking place in our society. Almost since this nation's formation, the foundation on which our society was built stressed freedom, independence and toleration of differences, notably in the areas of religion, race and lifestyles. Those components formed the glue that held our society together and caused us to collectively support the common good.

Many factors are involved in the mood in America today — uneasiness about our leadership, uncertainty about the economy and the U.S. role in a complex and rapidly changing geopolitical scene and a growing fear of the federal government. There is a fear that this "servant" may attempt to become our "master."

Some Americans may try to deny that one or more of those concerns is driving the change now taking place in America, but headlines in daily newspapers argue differently as do various polling data.

Despite that, however, there are no problems so serious as to justify the attitude a seemingly increasing number of Americans have that they are above the law.

In past years while some Americans have undoubtedly entertained notions of breaking away from American society in general, the basic tenets of democracy was the glue that kept them from doing so. Now, apparently, the pressures of our society have become so great that the glue is losing its ability to hold at least some of us together.

Yet if any person or group suddenly assumes that it is above the laws we all must abide by, that individual or group becomes a threat to our society in general and, in that regard, must be confronted by the very federal law enforcement agencies many Americans say they fear. If they have stockpiled guns or other weapons, then the agencies obviously will assume those groups pose an even greater threat to society.

If a confrontation is allowed to progress, it can lead to the inferno witnessed in Waco or to a standoff such as that in Montana.

So how do we as a society avoid recurrences of these incidents?

While we must be tolerant of those who adopt different lifestyles — just as we must be tolerant of those of different religions and races — it goes deeper than that.

When emotional and intellectual barriers go up to the extent that groups of Americans no longer feel themselves a part of the glue that holds us all together, common sense must prevail on their part.

Barricading behind walls in armed conclaves, declaring themselves above the law — especially when violations of law have been charged — won't do it. And proclaiming separate-nation status won't either.

We are a long way from being anywhere near the point where the federal government has become so repressive as to warrant armed rebellion.

And whether we approve of all of them or not, the basic laws that govern American society are not like food in a cafeteria line, items to be accepted by some, rejected by others.

While law enforcement has come under justifiable criticism for the manner in which it has reacted in some cases, the fact is that government agencies WILL react when challenged by those acting outside the law. For individuals and groups to assume otherwise is just part of this whole phenomenon that defies understanding.

ANDERSON

Corruption thrives in Russian government

WASHINGTON – The honeymoon may be over for those seeking to make a quick buck on the new Russian frontier.

Anderson

Mark Stoddard is a businessman in Utah, but his problems are thousands of miles away in Russia.

His is a cautionary tale that should give pause to international policy-makers who are eagerly boosting the Russian economy, most recently in the form of a $10.2 billion loan from the International Monetary Fund.

Since 1990 – when the Soviet Union was just starting to open its doors to the West – Stoddard has operated a small travel company that takes American tourists on river cruises through Russia's heartland. For the first five years, it was a good deal for everyone involved: The travelers got a relatively inexpensive, yet unforgettable vacation; the Russian government got much-needed hard currency by leasing part of its aging fleet of ships to an American entrepreneur; and Stoddard's company turned a healthy profit.

Like most small-business men who operate overseas, Stoddard encountered his share of problems – petty thievery, small-time corruption and underperforming staff. But nothing in his previous experience prepared him for what happened last fall.

After years of leasing his ships from the Volga River Shipping Co., a state-run organization, Stoddard was told in 1994 that he had to pay a "finder's fee" to a one of several private companies to find a ship to lease.

This arrangement worked fine until last year, when Stoddard's leasing agent demanded a $45,000 deposit for the use of a ship this summer.

But two weeks after sending the advance and signing a contract, Stoddard was told that the ship had been leased to someone else – who turned out to be a good friend of the leasing agent. Undeterred, he asked for his deposit back so he could look for another ship. The Russians refused.

In America, this would be an open-and-shut case of contract fraud. Stoddard paid a deposit and signed a contract but wasn't given a ship. But in Russia, such stories are par for the course. Stoddard explains:

"Now the corruption is so pervasive that the government bureaucrats are flaunting their corruption and openly demanding bribes, extorting and participating in illegal activities," he told our associate Jan Moller.

He has taken his case to Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, who has raised the matter with U.S. Trade Representative Mickey Kantor. He's also enlisted the help of the U.S. Commerce Department, which is working through Russian authorities to recover the money.

Stoddard has found another boat to lease in the meantime, through another government agency. And he remains confident that he'll get his money back eventually.

New book looks at perpetrators of Holocaust

WASHINGTON–Business is brisk at the Holocaust Memorial Museum here. Visitors line up more than two hours before the doors open at 10 a.m., and about 2 million pass through those doors each year, four times more than were anticipated when the museum opened three years ago. Explaining the museum's success, a member of the staff says dryly, "Human nature has been an enormous help."

Will

She means that from Bosnia, where scores of mass graves are being explored, to Rwanda, from Angola to Kurdish regions of Iraq, from Liberia to Sri Lanka, headlines proclaim the continuing prevalence of what visitors hope the museum will help them comprehend: beastliness. But that is the wrong word. Beasts do not do such things. Wanton, gratuitous, even giddily exuberant cruelty (such as one German's game of catching on a bayonet babies hurled from a hospital's windows) in the exercise of exterminating violence against categories of beings--this is a distinctively human activity.

The museum is an institution of memory for the victims of Germany rampant, 1933-45. But it also is a teaching institution, and last week was the scene of a heated symposium about a new book examining the perpetrators of the Holocaust.

Reduced to an epigram, Daniel Jonah Goldhagen's thesis in "Hitler's Willing Executioners: Ordinary Germans and the Holocaust" is that "the road to Auschwitz was not crooked." Elaborated through 619 pages of often shattering anecdotes mined from survivors' and perpetrators' testimonies, Goldhagen's argument is that genocide fulfilled the logic of 150 years of German history.

Hitler's seizure of power, says Goldhagen, was a necessary but not a sufficient condition for the Holocaust. Acculturation came first. When ordinary Germans, products of long conditioning by a culture steeped in anti-Semitism, came under the sway of a totalitarian regime's propaganda that legitimized extermination, they fell to the task with attitudes ranging from dutifulness to relish. Only such thinking, says Goldhagen, can explain the participation of between 100,000 and 500,000 persons who served in the genocide infantry--those who got gore on their sleeves from shooting children at close range.

When Goldhagen, professor of government and social studies at Harvard, says they were "ordinary Germans" who sent photographs of their butchery to loved ones, and even invited their wives to watch them smash skulls with rifle butts, the question becomes: In what sense ordinary? His answer is: Ordinary meaning the routine, predictable products of cognitive determinism. They killed Jews, often with pleasure, because an ideology told them doing so was not merely permissible but virtuous.

This monocausal explanation is made problematic by both the good and the bad that Germans did. If virulent anti-Semitism had such a vicelike grip, what explains the behavior of the significant number of Germans who abstained from, or even resisted barbarism? And if German anti-Semitism was the cause of the barbarism, why did the barbarities engulf so many non-Jews, and why were there so many non-Germans among the barbarians?

The victims of barbarism included the mentally and physically handicapped, Gypsies, three million Soviet prisoners of war, the inhabitants of the Greek village of Komeno, Italian POWs who a few days earlier had been Germany's allies, and others. And although Goldhagen insists that the "quantity and quality of personalized brutality and cruelty" inflicted by Germans on Jews flowed from a German cultural idea, many Croatians, Ukrainians and others collaborated with Germans in administering the Holocaust.

At the symposium, Christopher Browning of Pacific Lutheran University agreed with Goldhagen concerning the high degree of volunteerism on the part of the numerous ordinary German participants in genocide. But Browning, author of "Ordinary Men," a stunning study of middle-aged conscripts who became mass murderers in a German police battalion in Poland, argued that the unspeakable cruelties committed by the Khmer Rouge against fellow Cambodians, and by Chinese against other Chinese during the Cultural Revolution, cannot be explained by Goldhagen's model--by centuries of conditioning by a singular idea.

Browning charged that Goldhagen's "unremitting portrayal of German uniformity" makes history one-dimensional and dehumanizes Germans. By making Germans so alien, Goldhagen's thesis is too comforting. Browning believes that mass murder and the ubiquity of cruelty accompanying it suggests the need to seek explanations in "those universal aspects of human nature that transcend the cognition and culture of ordinary Germans."

This Tuesday, April 16, is the Day of Remembrance for Holocaust victims and survivors. Since 1945 the theme of remembrance ceremonies has been "Never again." But again Europe is sifting skulls from the earth over mass graves, this time of Muslims, victims of ... what? Ordinary Serbs?

Clinton's secret green light helped Iran break arms embargo

WASHINGTON — For two months, whenever I pressed Muhamed Sacirbey, Bosnia's U.N. delegate, about the presence of Iranian troops in his country, he ducked the question. Finally he said, "You know more about where the Iranians are than we do."

Safire

Now that mysterious response comes clear: Thanks to the hard digging of James Risen and Doyle McManus of The Los Angeles Times, we learn why Iranians are entrenched in Bosnia, radicalizing local Muslims. The reason is that President Clinton personally gave a secret green light two years ago that enabled Iran to break the arms embargo that he was publicly supporting.

Other presidents have tried to avoid congressional oversight of secret arms deals. In the past, presidential "findings" to delay lawful notification of Congress have been backdated or intelligence committees have been deceived by half-truthful testimony. But to evade oversight, Clinton came up with the best concealment device yet: Don't even tell the CIA.

Scroll back to early 1994, when Serbs were slaughtering Muslims, and many of us, including Sen. Bob Dole, were calling for "lift and strike" — lift the arms embargo that kept the Muslims from defending themselves, and launch NATO strikes from the air at Serbian supply lines. That would have saved tens of thousands of lives.

But Clinton opposed that policy because our European allies, who wanted the Muslims to surrender, objected. Then Croatian President Franjo Tudjman asked the United States secretly to OK Iranian arms shipments through Croatia to Bosnia.

On Air Force One returning from Richard Nixon's funeral(!), Clinton, Tony Lake of the NSC and Strobe Talbott of State persuaded one another that secretly facilitating arms shipments from Iran was not breaking the embargo and was "within the letter of the law," as the president's press secretary said this week when the deceit surfaced.

Clinton, Lake and Talbott sent "instructions of no instructions" — code for "tell Tudjman to go ahead and we will pretend not to know about it."

Thus, at a time when Clinton was telling us that to lift the embargo would be to endanger the French and British peacekeeping troops in Bosnia, he was secretly encouraging the shipment of arms there from Iran. That means he was misinforming Americans about why we should not send arms while Secretary of State Christopher was deceiving our allies about upholding the embargo and not endangering their troops.

When CIA agents saw the smuggling channel in operation, they took the evidence to the director, then James Woolsey, who suspected that somebody was running an unauthorized covert operation. He properly went to Lake, who bucked it to White House Counsel, who passed the hot potato to Anthony Harrington, of the in-house Intelligence Oversight Board, who conducted a six-month investigation and concluded that the green light that secretly injected Iran into the Bosnian war was not covert action requiring notification of Congress.

Now the president insists "there was absolutely nothing improper done." To him, his guilty knowledge of embargo-breaking was not improper. Deceiving our allies was not improper. Lying to the nation about why he would not send U.S. arms to Bosnia was not improper. Of course, concealing pertinent information from Congress is never improper.

Harrington, the former counsel to the Clinton-Gore campaign committee who secretly conducted the internal whitewash, tells me he is now ready to "brief" Congress but will not turn over his confidential report or transcripts of testimony (none under oath) unless directed to do so by Clinton. Here comes "executive privilege" again; we can hope the Senate Intelligence chairman, Arlen Specter, doesn't roll over.

White House defense will be: We all wanted to arm the Bosnians, so what's the big deal? The big deal is we wanted the arms to come from the West, not from Iran's Islamic fundamentalists, who now have a foothold in Europe. Subcontracting to terrorists always backfires.

The big deal is we thought we had a much-needed arrangement of comity between Congress and the executive on secret security affairs. By his silent partnership with Iran, Clinton betrayed it.

There are alternatives to congregate care

I am outraged that once again the skilled nursing home in Hondo makes network TV (Primetime, April 4) as part of an expose' of substandard care for children with severe disabilities. There will always be profiteers whose only intent in operating such resources is to pocket a quick buck, regardless of the extent of human suffering on which those dollars are made. Our problem, however, goes much deeper than weeding out a few unscrupulous providers.

What is intolerable is that we permit a system of government, charged with responsibility of regulating these homes, to continue allowing abject abuse and neglect to be visited on people unable to defend themselves. That governmental system has a long and pervasive history of being unable to protect people but is never held accountable, only embarrassed on national TV. This is not the first time Texas has been ridiculed as the example of absolutely atrocious care for elderly people or children and adults with profound handicaps. Most likely, it won't be the last.

There are excellent alternatives to unacceptable congregate care homes where residents spend endless, unattended hours, sometimes in cages, sometimes sitting in vomit or excretion, lonely, forgotten and excluded from community with others. For but a single example of an alternative, a family with a child who requires extensive care, perhaps a respirator, assistance with toileting, bathing, eating and every other task of daily living, could be provided a financial voucher, according to income, to purchase equipment and personal attendant care while the child lives in the family home with the people who care most about his/her welfare. That clearly superior, human value alternative is not available. They've got Hondo.

Human value aside, care to guess which option is more costly to taxpayers? The daily rate paid to skilled nursing homes for children in Texas averages $66 a day, a person $24,090 per year), and nothing is provided that can't be adequately and easily equaled by a loving mother assisted by an attendant with nominal training.

It is time for more than a little change. We need an overhaul.

Midlanders need to support schools

Midland residents: There is an upcoming bond election for the Midland Independent School District (MISD). I have gone to the community meetings and have seen for myself the past record of district spending, the present bond proposal and the future needs of our educational system.

MISD is spending less than half the amount per child as other schools in the state of Texas to which we are compared. In many ways this is commendable. In other ways this makes Midlanders look like they would rather keep their money for themselves than to be bothered with quality education for their children.

I have two children who are in MISD schools. As I see them attend the same schools that I did 2½ years ago I can readily see that these facilities have not changed at all.

I also work for MISD and the school where I work has had no major changes in 50 years. There are schools all over Midland that are old and in desperate need of major renovation. All I seem to hear from people around Midland is "my kids are not in school anymore, so I should not have to help out." These individuals need to remember that the community helped their children get an education; what is wrong with helping the future of America get their education?

I urge you to back your public schools, Midlanders. Support the education of the community's children. Remember that these children are the future; without them there will be no Midland to which to come home to retire.

All-Stars deserves three cheers

On Feb. 24 and 25, 20 girls from the Midland/Greenwood area represented Midland at the National Cheerleading Association National Championships in Dallas.

These young ladies joined together from three different schools to overcome rivalry and work as a team. They are all outstanding in academics, athletics and community service. They went above and beyond school activities to try out for, put in extra time for (several weekends and two nights a week) and raise extra money for the honor of being a Midland All-Star Cheerleader.

This group had three caring, giving and expert coaches: Tommy Ramos, Terrance Anders and Eddie Rodriquez. These coaches worked with the squad for a small salary. They carried out their own fund-raisers and exhibitions to show Midlanders how excited these girls were about something they enjoy doing.

In the Midland cheerleading squad's first trip to nationals, they were selected to compete in the finals. From thousands of teams around the country trying to make nationals, to only 16 teams placing in the finals, we held our own against squads from as far away as California, Kentucky and New York. Awards found the Midland All-Stars finishing in 13th place and receiving a trophy.

Three cheers to the coaches and the Midland All-Star Cheerleaders for representing Midland fantastically and making me and many other parents proud.

Prayer can make difference in lives

We can no more separate ourselves from prayer and honoring God than we can disassociate ourselves from the founding fathers who brought us to these shores. It may not be apparent to some Eastern Bloc leaders, but it is quite evident to their people — remove God and you remove society's linchpin. God and the adherence to His moral and ethical teachings in Scripture have been and must remain the very glue that holds our nation together.

Thank God, Congress unanimously sought to protect our right to pray in 1952. Signed into law by President Truman and later amended by President Reagan, the first Thursday in May remains the day our nation turns its hearts toward honoring God in prayer.

Little research needs to be done to see that our society is crumbling. Dr. Jim Nelson Black remarks: "One of the greatest reasons for the decline of American Society over the past century has been the tendency of Christians who have practical solutions to abandon the forum at the first sign of resistance. Our challenge today is not to run from conflict but to engage it." Perhaps Black's warning signs of the decline of society should be heeded: lawlessness, loss of economic discipline, rising bureaucracy, educational decline, weakening cultural foundations, loss of respect for tradition, materialism, immorality, decay in religious beliefs and the devaluing of human life.

Historical records will bear out the facts that God, not chance nor favorable winds, led our founding fathers to these very shores. Once on dry soil, they honored God on their knees. They thanked Him for safe passage, relied on Him to find provisions and sought His protection in this new and sometimes dangerous land. As time passed, they sought His guidance as they fashioned this nation's government, its laws and its Constitution.

This May 2, decide to become involved with millions of Americans on their knees as they intercede for our nation. You can make a difference because prayer honors God.

Officers deserve city's recognition

I have received some very encouraging information concerning two Midland city police officers that was shared with me by my wife. My wife is a night detention officer at the Culver Youth Center. She told me about an incident that occurred on March 26 at the center, and I felt that the professional and swift reactions of Officers R. Fuentes and R. Mobley should be commended and brought to immediate attention.

As I understand the situation, these two officers apprehended and transported a young, uncooperative and combative male, who also appeared to be under the influence of alcohol, for detention at Culver Youth Center. After a cooling off period, the officers, with detention staff nearby, removed handcuffs off the youth. The youth spontaneously punched at Officer Mobley who was grazed by the punch. Immediately Officer Fuentes intervened and both officers subdued the combative offender as he physically resisted and shouted threatening and profane language. My wife at that time placed handcuffs and leg restraints while the officers held the struggling juvenile in check. Subsequently, additional backup arrived and assisted to place the young man in a detention room without further incident.

I realize that within law enforcement this is just a routine common occurrence and there is not much fanfare by the community, as these things are rarely publicized. I also realize whenever there may be human error made by an officer, it is advertised, highlighted and usually the officer is viewed as incompetent or accusations of police brutality are sensationalized.

Contemporarily speaking, Midland is experiencing, as with the entire nation, burgeoning violent juvenile offenses that too often result in serious injury or deadly results. I am grateful that Officers Fuentes and Mobley were adequately trained and prepared to react spontaneously to a violent outbreak. I might add that I am equally proud of my wife for her reaction during the incident. My most recent thoughts have been of my wife sprawling about a concrete floor struggling with two other officers trying to subdue an alcohol deranged individual from inflicting harm upon himself and others.

Ex-West students should come forward

I wish to thank you for the very excellent coverage given to the West Elementary 50th Reunion that is to be held on Saturday, April 27.

As we contact former students, teachers, PTA members, etc., the "umbrella" effect is completely amazing to me. As a former West student, I have been truly delighted to here from others and teachers just within the past few weeks. There still are some of us who not only attended West (1956-1962 for me) but also had children attending there (sons Russell and Phillip were enrolled from 1982-1988).

One feature of a reunion is that, for us at least, attending West was very much a family event and we become quite attached to others who also attended there. One young lady, Jennifer Knight, developed cancer when she was in seventh grade and we will be dedicating a "Living Tree" to her memory as well as to the memories of all those who walked the halls of West and touched our lives in some unique way.

Our greatest difficulty thus far has been in contacting as many of the former students as we would like to — which is why I am writing this letter. I seem to recall that even one of the Reporter-Telegram editors (Gary Ott or Jimmy Patterson perhaps) wrote many years ago of covering an event only to discover it was at West - the school he attended for 5th grade.

If anyone has information (especially addresses) of former West students, please feel free to contact me at P.O. Box 5702, Midland, 79704 or call West Elementary and leave a message with the student's name and address.

Litter makes Midland far from beautiful

"Keep Midland Beautiful." Every time I see those words in print, and every time we hear them we think, "what a misnomer."

Don't you have to make something beautiful before you can keep it beautiful?

As much as it hurts me to say this, Midland is far from beautiful. Look at all the litter in every vacant tract, especially near stores or eating establishments. Look at the litter under the underpass on South Big Spring Street. Look at the weeds growing in the walks. We are sure that there are many more examples of non-beauty, such as the rampant graffiti on buildings and fences. No, we can't brag about Midland being beautiful, not just yet.

Our solution to the problem? Let all citizens of this beautiful city of ours make a concerted effort to rectify this condition. We have Great American Trash-Outs where we concentrate on the highway areas, so why can't we extend that to the vacant properties where the scrub mesquite detain the plastic bags, etc? The citizens of our detention facilities could do their part, too. The prisoners live a protective life. Put them to work in a productive way. We could go on and on, but we hope this gets our point across.

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification. Letters not including this information will not be considered for publication.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations. The briefer the letter, the better its chance of publication.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.
- Letters will be edited for length, taste and legal reasons and are accepted only on that basis. Letters which are difficult to reduce in length will be returned to the writer to be edited before being re-submitted.
- We do not publish 'open' letters, copies of letters sent to others or multiple signatures.

Because we cannot research and verify all information in letters, by publishing them we neither imply nor guarantee the accuracy of information stated by writers.

Letters should be sent to: The Editor, Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland, TX 79702.

Readers' views on: Proposed airport terminal

Citizens are asking officials wrong questions

In response to City Manager Mike McGregor's letter to H.J. Murphy's letter, I would add the following response. The city officials are not being asked the right questions. Ask "Didn't the city first ask the bonding agency for revenue bonds? Didn't the bonding agency reply they would only underwrite tax certificates of obligation?"

McGregor is truthful when he says there will be no problem in selling the bonds. What he is not saying is that the bonding agency would not underwrite the bonds without the property-owning taxpayers of Midland co-signing the $21 million bond issue.

Ask McGregor why he stated on the radio that the present terminal building is basically sound. Ask the city why airlines keep cutting flights from Midland. American and Continental airlines have dropped flights from Midland in the last three months. The only reason Southwest Airlines moved their non-stop flight to Las Vegas from El Paso to Midland is that El Paso raised their landing fees. Ask how much the airline landing fees will go up with the new terminal.

Ask why the city officials keep telling us the passenger facility charge (PFC) only can be used for construction of a new terminal, when in fact a substantial portion of these fees can be used for renovation and, in any event, PFCs can be accrued until actual airport traffic demands a new terminal building. Ask the FAA why there is only a government IOU in the aviation trust fund. Ask why the airline passenger boardings in Midland increased only 1.3 percent last year.

Ask the city where significant funds come from that are funding them to campaign for a new terminal. Ask the city why they are continuing to inflate the cost of renovating the terminal. Ask the city who else stands to personally gain, besides landowners, architects, financial institutions and airport managing personnel. Remember, the city originally did not think you, as a taxpayer, should have the right to vote on this issue. Ask the city why.

Ask yourself if you are ready to cosign for up to $100,000,000 in school bonds and $21,000,000 in new terminal bonds in the next 60 days. Remember these bonds are PLUS interest.

City can't guarantee tax revenue won't be used

Having listened carefully to both sides of the airport debate, I have some conclusions.

The City Council cannot guarantee that general tax revenue will never be used to pay for the new airport terminal. Indeed, they really have no choice but to issue the new bonds as "general obligation." But they are confident enough in their projections to promise, in writing, not to raise the fees charged to the airlines. Surely they also realize that any future attempt to use general tax revenue will be strongly opposed by many citizens.

I would like to know what genius decided to build the nice covered parking garage a few short years ago. Not a thing wrong with that building, but now it will be torn down to build the new terminal on the same site.

It is disingenuous to say that "no tax money will be used." In my book, the optional $3 passenger facility charge is a tax on passengers. The 10 percent federal ticket tax is a tax, too. It would be more honest to admit that anyone who flies will have to pay something. There is no such thing as a free terminal building.

Having said that, a citizen who does not use the airport will pay little or nothing. That person would be more likely to be taxed for renovations to the existing terminal, since federal funds and PFCs would not be available.

The federal government has no business funding local airports or libraries. The fact that they do puts every city in an unfortunate position. First we send local money to Washington. Then to get any of it back, we must spend it by their rules (i.e. you must build, you can't renovate) or else it will be spent elsewhere.

Given the facts, I'll vote for the new terminal. But I won't be happy about it.

Richard D. Bowdon

Presentation of terminal facts seems disingenuous

Your recent series on the proposed new airport terminal was very helpful in explaining the issue. However, this whole debate so far lacks the information necessary for an informed decision by either voters or city leaders. For instance, there appear to be no informed experts who do not have a personal financial interest in a new terminal. Parkhill, Smith & Cooper, who studied our current terminal and recommended replacement would build the new one. That's akin to having a new car salesman evaluate the condition of your current vehicle. In both instances, the incentive appears to be less than objective.

Building anew seems attractive because the alternative of renovation was presented as an expensive, temporary solution. However, options utilizing our current terminal seem woefully neglected, just as the building itself seems to have been. Specifically, how much of what is actually needed constitutes renovation and how much is merely (overdue) maintenance or repair? We may have legal latitude to define and pace needed work as being the latter. This would avoid federal mandates regarding airport renovations that are irrelevant to local needs, saving millions in rehabilitating our current facility.

Current federal regulations and incentives make any terminal, new or old, expensive and difficult to sustain over the long term. Building another terminal will not solve that. This fact, along with the tainted local study, gets money diverted from more prescient improvements such as upgrading our instrument landing system, improving our marginal aircraft de-icing capability or reducing consumer cost.

Now it takes two minutes to walk from remote parking to the ticket counter. How many airports match that? If we purchase a new terminal, we'll be trading that two-minute walk for a park, wait and 'ride-the-bus-around-the-construction-site' scenario for at least three years. Also, there were no plans mentioned to replace the covered parking we'll lose to the new terminal site.

It may be nice to have a swanky new terminal to impress potential investors. But to take the current information and present the idea to Midlanders as the only desirable option seems disingenuous.

Facility needs more than surface improvements

I am very concerned about the economic future of Midland. No doubt, the air terminal will either be renovated or newly constructed. But what really happens to Midland if the new terminal fails?

The building requires more than surface improvements such as paint and carpet. Imagine the condition of your home if you had two million plus people tracking through every year. Most important, the building does not comply with standards of the American Disabilities Act and requires asbestos abatement (very expensive).

The dilemma is the structure itself. Constructed in 1958, before computers, high-tech telecommunications and before add-ons, it has an antiquated electrical system that cannot support the electrical load. To make matters worse, the electrical wiring in the mechanical room is an area flooded with raw sewage. This is a potential fire hazard. Installation of a new electrical system is very costly. So where does the money come from? Taxes.

The sewer system, installed in 1958, cannot accommodate the demand on it. Raw sewage pours onto the runway when it rains. The line located under the existing ticket area will have to be replaced. Concrete will need to be broken. How will a new sewer system be funded? Taxes.

Look at what renovations did for the El Paso Airport. Cost overruns were prohibitive. Vendor fees and gate leases increased. Airlines are searching for a new hub with lower fees. Where are they looking? Midland. (Southwest has already signed a long-term lease, added more direct flights and supports the new terminal). But, the FAA has forbidden any more additions onto the building. How will we accommodate the demand for additional space (and revenue)? What about the new restaurants that want to lease at the airport?

There are some funds available for renovation. But the bottom line is renovating will cost more out-of-pocket dollars than a new terminal and will increase taxes. Where else can we acquire $7-$11 million for a $17.2-million renovation and end up with a 38-year-old building? Add to that, the debt of $1.3 million already spent on design and $350,000 in interest charges as a result of delaying construction.

Airport users will assist in terminal's funding

Midland businessmen and leaders have been trying since the bust days of the 1980s to compete for economic survival and new business development. To achieve those goals in the business world today, companies must react immediately to maintain their competitive edge.

Our geographical location, 300 miles from anywhere, creates a condition in which business people need the air services provided by our air terminal. The existing terminal building is in extremely poor condition. Midlanders, as the owners of this facility, have two options to correct this condition: remodel or replace.

Figures show that 40 percent of the airport users are from Midland, 30 percent are from Odessa and the remaining 30 percent are from surrounding areas. The FAA review and funding allocations for this airport improvement have prohibited user fees from being used toward remodeling of the existing structure. As a result, a remodeling project will be partially funded by tax dollars from Midland property owners. It seems simple enough that we should build a new facility and let those people from the surrounding areas, who use our facility, assist us in funding the cost to upgrade our airport. Let us share the financial responsibility throughout West Texas and Eastern New Mexico by voting for a new airport terminal building.

School district votes to continue fighting parent over conduct documents

HOUSTON (AP) — A suburban Houston school district is refusing to give up its three-year fight with parent Bob Lett over papers regarding his daughter's bad conduct grades.

The Klein Independent School District board has voted to appeal a court ruling favoring Lett.

Lett used the Texas Open Records Act to try to obtain documents he thought contained information on his child's behavior. But the district sued him, and a court battled ensued.

"These people have tried to bankrupt me by taking me to court," Lett said. "They have tried to intimidate me. I'm going to fight them until I win."

Klein ISD Superintendent Donald Collins says the open records law should not apply to the papers Lett wants because they are administrative notes from an investigation about possible racial bias against Crystal Lett.

"We have never attempted to withhold student information," Collins said. "None of these papers were ever in the child's records. We are trying to handle this as politely as we can."

The ordeal began in the spring of 1993 after Crystal, then a seventh-grader at Doerre Intermediate School, received three poor conduct marks. Lett alleged the teacher, who is white, may have been biased against his daughter, who is black, and asked Collins to look into it.

Collins determined the girl was not a victim of discrimination.

Lett made the open records request, and an opinion from Texas Attorney General Dan Morales favored him.

The school district then sued Morales and Lett in December 1993. A judge dismissed Morales from the case and ruled for the district. Lett appealed and last February, the 14th Court of Appeals ruled in his favor.

The Klein school board decided unanimously last Monday to appeal to the Texas Supreme Court.

"We are trying to protect our ability to conduct internal investigations professionally and efficiently," Collins said.

He said Klein officials did not want to sue Lett, and named him in the lawsuit only to keep the case in a Harris County court.

Morales spokesman Ron Dusek disagreed.

"The sole purpose of this case was to intimidate Mr. Lett. This is not about law, this is personal. Mr. Lett is entitled to these documents, and they're relevant to his daughter's situation," Dusek said.

Judge in Saldivar trial says cameras may have been OK

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Cameras might not have disrupted the trial of the woman convicted of killing Tejano star Selena, the judge in the case has told a citizens' group.

"In retrospect, it might have been OK to have TV cameras there," State District Judge Mike Westergren said. "I'm not saying I didn't make the right decision. But in this case, we had very excellent lawyers who conducted themselves honorably."

Westergren spoke to a citizens' public affairs club called the Friday Morning Group in Corpus Christi, where Yolanda Saldivar admitted shooting Selena in a motel room on March 31, 1995.

Ms. Saldivar, who said the singer's fatal shooting wasn't intentional, has appealed her conviction and life sentence.

The 35-year-old founder of Selena's fan club must serve at least 30 years before becoming eligible for parole.

Westergren didn't specifically mention the theatrics of the O.J. Simpson case, but he alluded in general to some attorneys' propensity toward seeking attention from cameras.

"Unfortunately, it's the high-profile cases that usually bring out the worst in the system because of the pressure and the stress," he said.

Many legal experts have said the Simpson trial could have been the deathblow for live court coverage. Westergren said he had no problems with the publicity of his trial, but he wasn't convinced the trial needed to be televised.

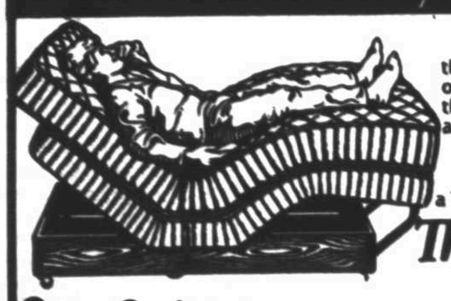

Prosecutors and defense lawyers alike opposed cameras in the courtroom. The judge said cameras have their place.

"Overall, I think there will come a time when it won't be a problem," he said. "I think the public has the right to know what is going on in the courtroom."

Westergren admitted initial surprise at the national attention the case generated. "I have never been exposed to such a media event, and I hope I never am again," he said.

Wilmer-Hutchins school district awaits impending state takeover

DALLAS (AP) — Parents of students in Wilmer-Hutchins schools know they have to take matters into their own hands when it comes to their children's education.

When David Parras' daughter was hit in the face with a rock at school, he put his house up for rent, moved his three children to a trailer in Ellis County and took them out of their Wilmer-Hutchins schools.

"I am kind of crowded in the casa here," the 48-year-old restaurant owner said while pointing to his trailer. "But I'm doing this for my kids. They deserve a better education."

Other parents with children attending the beleaguered schools also have taken unusual measures. Some used post office boxes or friends' addresses to escape from the 3,800-student school district, due to be taken over by the Texas Education Agency.

A state monitoring team is expected to begin work early this week and — once the agency gets approval from the U.S. Justice Department for the takeover — will have broad powers over administrators and board members.

"It's time to do something," said Mike Moses, Texas Education Commissioner.

For years, the TEA has had to become involved in the district's academic, financial and administrative problems. But the impending takeover is the state's most extreme step to date.

Additionally, the district may be forcibly dissolved and made to join nearby districts if it doesn't get up to state standards in two years. The agency has never forced a district to join another, officials from the agency said.

Many parents, teachers and even school board members say they welcome the takeover. The school district encompasses Wilmer, Hutchins and part of southeastern Dallas.

"Someone has to take control of this district," said trustee Joan Bonner. "There are a lot of dirty, mean, vindictive people in this district. Our children are losing the academic battle because of greed."

'Someone has to take control of this district... there are a lot of dirty, mean, vindictive people in this district. Our children are losing the academic battle because of greed.'

— Joan Bonner, school-board trustee

Board President Glenn Mills opposes the state's involvement. He has criticized the TEA and calls the takeover questionable.

"It is a pride issue," Mills said. "If other school districts can handle their business and do it properly, then we should be able to handle ours."

Last year, about 35 percent of the district's students passed all portions of the Texas Assessment of Academic Skills test. The statewide average is 56 percent. The low 1995 scores were an improvement over the previous year, when only 21 percent of students passed all tests.

"We are in a different era now with local control," Moses said. "With freedom comes responsibility. Only when there is clear demonstration that student performance is lacking should we step in. And that clearly has happened at Wilmer-Hutchins."

Many say the problem with the district is due to a power struggle between its superintendents and the board. From 1974 to 1984, no superintendent lasted more than two years.

Former superintendent Delores Roberts-Quintyn said board members' "day-to-day interference" and "self-serving fear of change" are holding the district back.

Board president Mills said the board can't be blamed for all the district's problems.

"I think we need better state laws to allow us the ability to get rid of incompetent people without having to spend $50,000 in legal fees," he said.

Roberts-Quintyn became superintendent in early 1995 and was suspended in February because of persistent financial questions. Trustees decided last month not to renew her contract, which expires June 30.

Celia Ann Parras, 15, still bears the scar from where the rock hit her just under her left eye. She said a student at Kennedy-Curry threw it, but were not the only ones throwing things.

Teachers "hit kids with an eraser in the head, threw books at you," she said. "And they gave you licks if you were late."

Environmentalists kick off learning campaign

DALLAS (AP) — Environmentalists throughout Texas and around the country launched a national campaign Saturday that they hope will reach millions of Americans and eventually the president.

More than 200 volunteers met at White Rock Lake in Dallas to pick up fliers, which they then delivered to neighborhood doors. The fliers include a tear-off postcard addressed to President Clinton and to Gov. George Bush, urging them to protect America's environment.

"The event marks one of the largest grassroots environmental outreach in decades," said Molly Seay, Environmental Public Education Campaign coordinator of the Sierra Club.

"Poll after poll shows that the vast majority of Americans share a common value, that we all want to protect the environment for our families and for our future," she said.

Rita Beving also with the Sierra Club said more than 70,000 of the 100,000 available fliers in Dallas were picked up Saturday.

Three other cities in Texas participated in the Eco Rally and Campaign Kick-off, including Galveston, Austin and Houston.

Texas has scored low in many environmental groups' ratings, which identified pollution and lagging enforcement. The Clean Air Network last year said Texas has done little to curb pollution from power plants and refineries and reduce motor vehicle emissions.

The Environmental Protection Agency's Superfund program has spent billions of dollars over the last decade and a half but has cleaned only a fraction of the state's worst toxic waste sites.

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

Gospel recording

Gaither and Friends will be taping "Homecoming — Texas Style" for TNN June 8 at Tarrant County Convention Center in Fort Worth.

A bus will be chartered from the Midland-Odessa area for gospel fans to attend. Robert Carouth with Midland's Spirit of Salvation Ministries will be hosting the Midland area bus.

The tour package includes accommodations at the La Quinta Motel and dinner at the Spaghetti Warehouse. The tickets will be for seats in the artist circle where fans will sit with the stars.

This seating is limited. Reservations must be made by Monday. For reservations call 1-800-992-7469.

Largest recital

The Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity, 1412 W. Illinois Ave., and The West Texas Chapter of the American Guild of Organists will join organists across the nation to herald the beginning of The World's Largest Organ Recital at 5 p.m. today.

More than 500 organists will perform simultaneously in more than 300 locations in 50 states for the recital.

Local organists performing today at Holy Trinity will include Linda Hill, Kathryn Hoppe of Odessa, Darryl Knapp, Robert Poer, Rebecca Sawyer and Vilia Walter.

For more information call Knapp, 683-4207.

The event is sponsored by the West Texas Chapter of the American Guild of Organists and is free and open to the public. A reception will be held in the Parish Hall following the concert.

Talent search

The Arts Assembly of Midland is conducting a talent search for the 13th annual Celebration of the Arts May 18-19.

Musicians, singers, dancers, speciality acts and other entertainers will perform continually on four stages during the two-day festival in downtown Midland.

Performers from all over the Southwest are invited to be a part of COA. For information call Patty Loftis, 699-1343, before April 15, or contact the Arts Assembly, P.O. Box 3494, Midland, Texas 79701, or call 687-1149.

COA is a regional festival which spotlights all the arts in the Permian Basin. Soloists as well as representatives of choirs, bands, dance schools and other groups are invited to apply.

Special entertainers during the festival will be Jerry Jeff Walker, classical guitarist Susan Grisanti and "Friends in High Places," a couple from New York that dances on stilts.

Theatre show

SAN ANGELO — Larry Shue's "The Foreigner" is being presented by Angelo Civic Theatre April 18-20, 25-28 and May 2-4.

With the exception of the 2 p.m. matinee April 28, all shows start at 8 p.m. For ticket information call 1-915-949-4400.

Story contest

West Texas Storytelling Guild and West Texas Writers are sponsoring a short story contest and invite entries of original stories written for children. Entry deadline is May 1.

Stories need to be for children ages 4 through 13 and be no more than 1,000 words in length. Presentation may be in any form such as fairy tale, fable, ghost, western, in verse or prose, or combined in any form for concert style story telling such as with music or drama, pantomime or puppets. If the story is for a particular age level, the age should be indicated.

Prizes including first $100, second $75 and third $50, will be awarded for first, second and third. No money will be awarded for honorable mention. The winning stories will be read by members of the Storytelling Guild in concert in 1996. The date is still to be announced.

The contest is an effort to widen public awareness of creative arts, in particular the age-old tradition of story telling.

Entries need to be mailed to Story Contest, P.O. Box 11161, Midland, Texas 79702. For more information call 699-7820.

San Antonio officials search molesters old route

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Central Texas educators are trying to reconstruct the route of a former bus driver who says he's molested more than 200 youngsters and is on the road to freedom.

North East School District Superintendent Richard Middleton has asked parents or former school employees who know anything about admitted pedophile Larry Don McQuay, who is back in San Antonio after serving a prison sentence.

"If there's anything that I can do to keep this guy in jail, I want to do it," said Middleton of the ongoing effort to try to bring new charges against McQuay.

McQuay is currently serving a two-year parole under strict supervision at an area facility. Barring a new conviction, he will be released on April 15, 1998.

Records of McQuay's old school bus routes are no longer available.

"It's very frustrating because nothing is in writing," Middleton said. "We don't have anything solid right now."

McQuay, 32, drove a route for Roosevelt High School. He claims he assaulted around 240 children. He was convicted in the case of a 6-year-old boy about a year after he completed his bus driving stint from August 1987 to December 1988.

A former supervisor recommended McQuay's firing after a parent brought a "filthy" letter supposedly written by McQuay to lure a Roosevelt student into a friendship.

McQuay resigned two days after the district reported allegations to Child Protective Services and the police.

McQuay has said his uncontrollable urges to have sex with youngsters will cause him to assault kids again if he isn't castrated. A local victims' rights group has offered to pay for the surgery.

No worried parents have called the district recently, schools spokesman Victor J. Garcia said.

The Most Important Job He'll Ever Have Just Fell Right In His Lap.

A child's squeal of delight can't be made in a factory. Or bottled in a jar. Or imported from a foreign market.

It is a by-product of the most important business in the world — raising children.

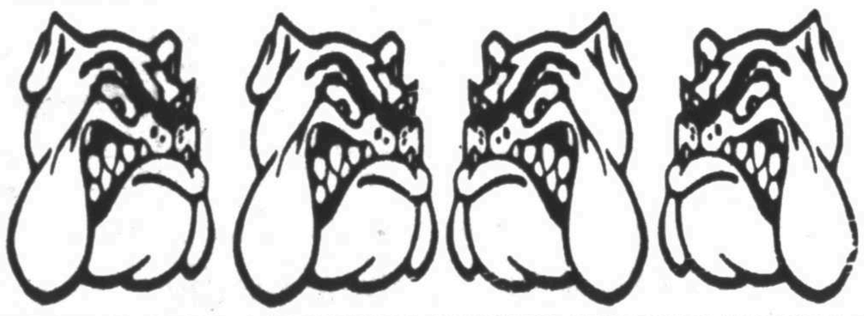

Kids need the kind of fatherly love and attention that elicits such delight. When men make family life a top priority, children are tickled pink.

Mavs sale close

DALLAS — The Dallas Mavericks could be sold as early as next week to either a group headed by Ross Perot Jr. or a hockey team owner.

Sources close to the negotiations tell The Dallas Morning News that Dallas Stars owner Tom Hicks has surpassed Perot's $115 million bid for the Mavericks with his own $125 million offer.

But sources from both sides of the negotiations tell the Fort Worth Star-Telegram that Perot, the son of Dallas billionaire Ross Perot, remains the front-runner to purchase the team from Donald Carter.

Norm Sonju, Mavericks president and general manager, indicated Friday that he did not expect a sale agreement until next week at the earliest.

Emmitt stays cool

PENSACOLA, Fla. — It has been a tranquil off-season for Emmitt Smith despite the turmoil that has engulfed the Dallas Cowboys.

Teammate Michael Irvin's indictment on drug charges, the loss of four defensive starters to free agency and other controversies have kept the Cowboys in the headlines long after their latest Super Bowl championship in January.

"I guess it's because there's nothing else to talk about," Smith said Friday during his annual high school football camp. "If it's not the Cowboys, it's not news."

Lee playoff set

The Midland Lee Lady Rebels will play Abilene Cooper in a one-game playoff for second place in District 4-5A Monday at 5 p.m. in Coahoma.

The winner will be the district's No. 2 seed for the playoffs while the loser will get the No. 3 seed. Midland High (23-8, 10-2) was the district champion and is the No. 1 seed.

Cooper (15-8, 9-3) beat Odessa Permian on Friday in its regular-season finale to force the playoff. A loss to Permian would have put Cooper in a third-place tie with the Lady Panthers.

McAfee cracks 4-5A track mark

Girls put nine entries in regions

By Amy Wolfenbarger
Sports Writer

ODESSA — Girls track and field in Midland hit rock bottom in 1994 as the Midland High and Midland Lee girls teams combined for a total of 32 points and did not qualify one single athlete to the regional meet. What a difference two years makes.

Midland Lee, led by a double-gold performance by sophomore distance runner Marisa Beck, scored 84 points alone to capture third place at the District 4-5A Track and Field Championships Saturday at Ratliff Stadium.

Midland High repeated as district champions in both the 400-meter and 800-meter relays and Tami Zachery won gold in both the 100 and 200 to help the Lady Bulldogs come away with 77 points and fourth place.

Lee hurdler sets 4-5A record in 300 meters, wins 110 race

By Stewart Doreen
Sports Writer

ODESSA — Midland Lee's John McAfee shattered a district record in one race and set a personal best in the another, but he still had not accomplished his major goal for the meet — competing with John Norman and the rest of Lee's 1,600 meter relay at regionals.

That goal, too, was accomplished as the Rebels' relay captured second place in last race of the District 4-5A Track and Field Championships held Saturday at Ratliff Stadium.

Mojo 'magic' spells win for Bulldogs

■ Midland High can still make the playoffs after beating Permian again.

By Sean Wallace
Sports Writer

There's something about Odessa Permian that brings out the best in Midland High.

Jason Rogers pitched out of a bases-loaded, no-outs jam in the sixth as the Bulldogs rallied for a 5-3 win over Permian Saturday at Christensen Stadium, sweeping both games from the Panthers in District 4-5A play this year.

"Boy, it seems like we have to hit rock-bottom to start playing well," MHS coach Lew Kennedy said with a sigh of relief. "(Rogers) was huge for us in the sixth. Coming in with no outs and the bases loaded and not giving up a run was phenomenal."

Senior Keith Lant (7-3), who no-hit Permian March 19, threw five strong innings on three days rest to earn the victory. Rogers threw the final two innings to record his first save, recording two big strikeouts in the sixth.

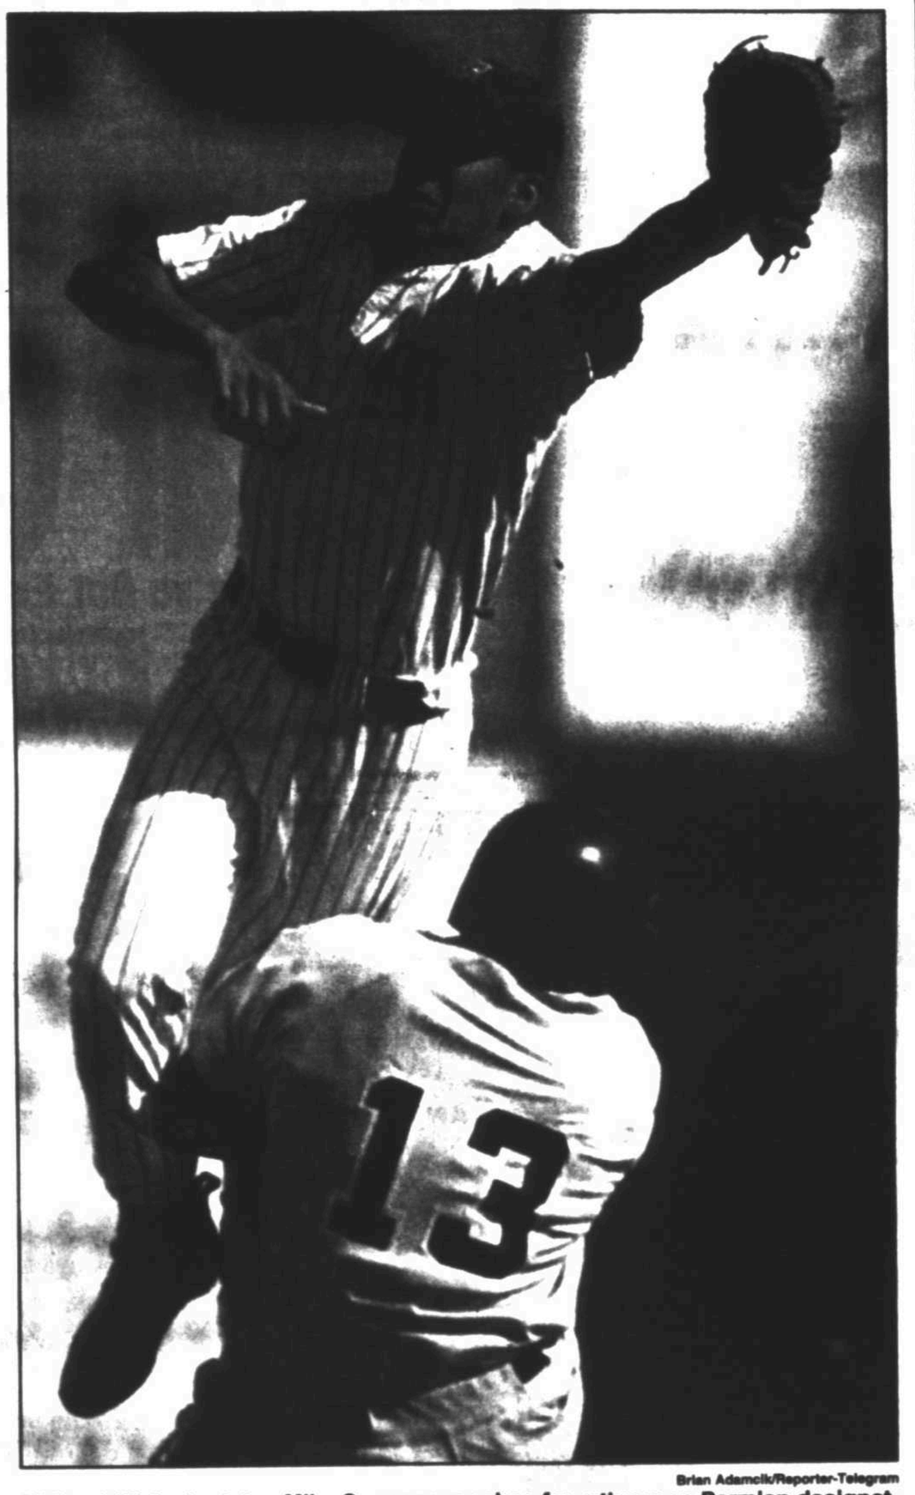

Permian starter Jeff Dinger (1-3 in district) took the loss, allowing all five runs and six hits in 4 1/3 innings of work. Nicky Bivins pitched the final 1 2/3 innings for the Panthers.

The win snapped a two-game losing streak for the Bulldogs (15-9, 4-5) and kept them mathematically alive for a playoff spot with three games left in the season. Permian, which won Midland's Tournament of Champions earlier this season, fell to 16-9 overall and 3-5 in league play.

"This was a big win for us because we knew we needed to win the rest of our games to have a chance at the playoffs," said shortstop Mike Carrasco, who had a key double in the Bulldogs' four-run fifth inning. "We need to win our last four and then anything can happen."

Midland scored four times in the fifth to erase a 3-1 Permian lead when the Panthers threatened to regain the lead in the sixth. Rory Couch and Jeremy Delcore reached on errors and a single by Louis Navarette loaded the bases, which prompted Kennedy to make a pitching change.

El Paso disrupts Angel run

■ Midland pitching finally falters in 10-8 loss to Diablos.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

The Midland Angels ended their season opening homestand Saturday night at Christensen Stadium much like they started it — with a loss. But it was those games in between that was the joy.

Despite the 10-8 loss to the El Paso Diablos Saturday, the Angels forged a 7-3 record to open the season before trucking off to face the Wichita Wranglers, the pre-season favorites to win the Texas League West Division.

The Angels came from behind to beat the Diablos 3-2 in 10 innings on Friday night, and looked to have another fireworks ending on the burner in the bottom of the ninth on Saturday.

Trailing 10-8 in the last at-bat, Midland got a leadoff single from Edgar Alfonzo and a double by Ralph Bryant with no outs recorded by Diablo reliever Jeff Kramer.

However, the Diablos elected to bring in Sean Maloney, who was the victim of Friday's miracle rally by the Angels. Maloney got his revenge by striking out Tony Moeder and then got Aaron Guiel to fly harmlessly to left and got his second save of the season by getting pinch hitter Greg Shockey to ground out to first to end the game. Meanwhile, Alfonzo and Bryant were left stranded on the base paths.

Shockey had a pinch-hit double off of Maloney on Friday night in the ninth inning to help bring the Angels back from a 2-1 deficit. Maloney got Shockey this time, making it a double revenge statement.

Midland pitching had been superb in the current homestand, but the relief corps got stung in the finale. El Paso struck for four runs off Midland reliever Carlos Castillo (1-1) in the sixth inning to take a 6-3 lead. Midland never regained that lead, making starter Steve Whitaker (1-1) a winner for the first time this year.

El Paso drove in only six of the 10

Norman opens up six-stroke lead in quest for first Masters

By Ron Sirak
Associated Press

AUGUSTA, Ga. — The only thing left for Greg Norman is to win the darn thing.

The Masters is difficult enough when a guy like Nick Faldo is breathing down your neck. But it's even tougher when you have to drag history around the Augusta National Golf Club with you.

But Norman handled it all on Saturday, making every big shot and turning every apparent Faldo advantage into a gain for himself. He posted a gutsy 71 to be at 13-under-par 203 after 54 holes, six strokes ahead of Faldo going into the final round.

"I feel good within myself," Norman said. "But I've got a lot of work to do. There are 18 tough holes to play."

After so many heartbreaks — twice finishing runnerup in the Masters, seven times settling for second in major championships — Norman was only 18 holes away from the Augusta National victory he wants so badly.

"This sure could be his time," Duffy Wal-

Hall Penzoil's De Ferran holds on for second career pole

By Mike Harris
Associated Press

■ Grand Prix of Long Beach

LONG BEACH, Calif. — Gil de Ferran, driving for Midland-based Hall Penzoil Racing, improved just enough Saturday to hold onto the pole position for Sunday's Toyota Grand Prix of Long Beach.

The 28-year-old Brazilian, who began the day atop the provisional lineup, got some help in holding on for his second career pole when Robby Gordon's engine burst, spewing oil onto a fast portion of the 1.59-mile, eight-turn downtown street circuit with just over five minutes remaining in the 30-minute qualifying session.

De Ferran's pole-winning speed of 109.639 mph in a Honda-powered Reynard, fielded by Jim Hall, broke his own track qualifying record of 109.482, set on Friday. It also gave Goodyear its second pole of the season and ended a string of two straight poles for tire rival Firestone.

"This morning, I thought the track was faster," said de Ferran, the 1995 rookie of the year in the PPG Indy Car World Series. "Then it really slowed down. Maybe it was the heat, but it was quite a struggle to improve."

Lone Star golfers part of Masters storied tradition

By Donne H. Freeman
Associated Press

■ Sports Analysis

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Maybe by the back nine on Sunday a Texan will be there again, surviving the perils of Amen Corner and putting another Lone Star brand on one of the world's greatest golf tournaments.

Of course, Ben Crenshaw made the 1995 Masters one of the most memorable in the tournament's storied history.

The script, as written by the golfing gods, had the popular Texas Longhorn winning with his late teacher, Harvey Penick, looking over his shoulder, and as some suggested, guiding his putting stroke on the back nine where the tournament is usually settled. Crenshaw had attended Penick's funeral earlier in the week.

It was the second Masters for Crenshaw of Austin, putting a Texan in a green jacket again.

That's the way it always has been at Augusta. Texans have won a lot of crystal trophies and money at the event.

Jimmy Demaret, Jackie Burke, Ralph Guidahl, Byron Nelson, Charles Coody and Ben Hogan have won on Bobby Jones' hallowed grounds.

They have a tradition at Augusta at the champions dinner where the last winner orders the menu and paid for it. There has been a lot of barbecue and Tex-Mex served on the green, green grounds of Augusta National Golf Club.

Crenshaw picks up the tab this year. And he'll be happy to do so. Tacos and brisket and Lone Star beer all around.

To expect Crenshaw to successfully defend his title, would be asking a lot for Texas golfing fans. His game hasn't been sharp. He'll be giving a lot of time for interviews which is never conducive to a solid golf game. Emotionally, Crenshaw probably won't have the same in the-zone-feeling as he did when he won one for old friend Harvey.

Perhaps some other Texan can step forward. Tom Kite has come close many times only to fall victim to someone's hot putter. In fact, Crenshaw's putter edged out Kite in the first Masters Crenshaw won in 1984. Kite was right behind Crenshaw when he holed a 75-foot monster on the 10th green that ignited a charge to the championship.

Kite, whose only major was the U.S. Open at Pebble Beach, isn't as a good a putter as he used to be and putters on top of their game usually win on the slick, slick greens of Augusta.

Kite knows the course but putting is the name of the game at Augusta.

Maybe young Justin Leonard of Dallas, who cracked the top 25 in money winners last year, can upset the form charts.

Leonard can putt. His only problem is that he is a low ball hitter. Augusta National is easiest for those players who can hit the ball high and soft to the undulating greens.

Lee Trevino never won at Augusta and the reason was his low flying shots wouldn't hold when the greens were hard at fast. Maybe if the rains come and soften up the course, Leonard can find some of Crenshaw's magic.

Mark Brooks of Fort Worth is one of the best putters on the PGA Tour but he doesn't hit the ball far enough to be a threat on Augusta's Par-5s where the long-hitters have a big advantage.

Tune in Sunday for the run around Amen Corner. Maybe a Texan will be there again.

NORMAN: Australian ready to add Masters to major wins

(From 1C)

dorf said about Norman. "No one deserves a green jacket more than him."

As much money as he has won, as many tournaments as he has taken, Norman languishes with two British Open titles. And he is haunted by those seven second-place finishes — he's the only person to lose all four Grand Slam events in playoffs.

"I don't live in the past," Norman said about his near-misses. "I don't dwell on it. People made some good shots to win those tournaments."

It is the seventh time Norman has led or tied for the lead going to the final round of a major championship. Only once — the 1986 British Open — did he win.

Norman led the 1986 PGA Championship by four strokes going to the final round and finished two behind Bob Tway. A collapse this time with so large a lead would be almost as bad as all the other missed opportunities combined.

Norman distanced himself from the field with a gutsy effort under pressure that showed steely nerve and a brilliant short game. His round lacked the glitter of his opening-round 63. But it put Norman six strokes ahead of Faldo — who shot a 73 — and seven ahead of Phil Mickelson. David Frost was nine back, along with Scott McCarron and Duffy Waldorf.

"It's far from over," Faldo said. "This is a pressure-filled golf course. If I put some heat on him, who knows what will happen? A 65 on Sunday. Who knows?"

Norman got it going after he got up and down from 80 yards to save a bogey after hitting the ball into the water on No. 12, making a testy 10-foot putt. Faldo, meanwhile, failed to get up and down from the fringe and also bogeyed.

That seemed to fire up Norman. He made birdies on three of the next four holes.

"When you do that type of stuff, it makes you feel real good," Norman said.

He made a two-putt birdie on No. 13, missing a 10-foot eagle, and totally demoralized Faldo on No. 15 when he laid up short of the water but still got up and down from 63 yards, making a 6-footer for birdie while Faldo three-putted for a par.

Norman stretched the lead to seven strokes when he rolled in a 6-foot birdie putt on No. 16. Faldo got it back to six with a birdie on No. 17.

"I'm going to go to the first tee tomorrow as relaxed and comfortable as I have been since the first day," Norman said. "There is no lead. I just have to shoot a score."

If Norman holds on, he will be the first wire-to-wire winner in the Masters since Seve Ballesteros in 1980. Norman has the largest lead going into the final round since Ballesteros led by seven strokes in 1980.

"There's no other golf tournament in the world that generates that type of feeling like it happens here at Augusta National," Norman said earlier in the week.

"We all would like to have things we've never had," Norman said. "And obviously I haven't won the Masters, I haven't won the U.S. Open, I haven't won the PGA. I'd like to have them all."

Faldo had an uncharacteristically erratic round, with only two pars on a front nine in which he made four birdies, two bogeys and a double bogey.

A key point came early in the round when Norman bogeyed Nos. 3 and 4 and Faldo lost a stroke, making a double bogey on No. 3 when he missed the green three times with approach shots.

A victory for Faldo — his third — would mean that only Jack Nicklaus and Arnold Palmer have won more Masters. And a sixth career major title — he has three British Opens — would mean only 10 players in history have more career majors.

The pairing of Faldo and Norman on Saturday was nothing like the third-round showdown they had at St. Andrews in 1990 when Faldo shot a 67 to Norman's 76.

If Norman does win this tournament under this kind of scrutiny, under this kind of pressure and with such a great player as Faldo chasing him, it will answer any questions about his heart.

"You just have to chase the elusive rainbow, the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow," Norman said about never having won one of the three majors played in the United States. "If you get it one day, you feel a great sense of satisfaction."

If he doesn't get it here, after a record-tying 63 in the first round, after taking a six-stroke lead into the final round, Norman will carry an even heavier burden of being known as the guy who came up short in the majors.

Short game falters for Faldo

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Nick Faldo had his chances on Saturday, maybe not to catch Greg Norman, but at least to apply some heat in the third round of the Masters.

And just like that those chances were gone, as quickly as a gust of wind would pick up at Amen Corner or the slippery greens of Augusta National would take a birdie putt screaming 10 feet past the hole.

Three times over the last nine holes, it was advantage Faldo. Three times he walked away with nothing to show for it.

The turning point Saturday came on No. 12, a par-3 on which anything short usually rolls back into Rae's Creek, and anything long leaves an uneviable chip downhill to the hole.

Norman, 11-under at the time and leading Faldo by four strokes, dumped his 8-iron into the water and was staring at a possible double bogey.

"I still had to hit the shot," Faldo said. "It was a difficult wind situation. It wasn't an 8-iron, it was a hard 7-iron, and I pulled it through the wind."

The ball sailed the green. Faldo spent a few minutes meticulously removing all the seed pods from around his ball on a downhill lie, then pitched up the slope to about 12 feet.

Norman hit an 81-yard sand wedge to 10 feet, and after Faldo missed his putt to take bogey, Norman's bogey putt died in the middle of the cup to keep his lead at four.

"He made a great four and I had a very difficult chip," Faldo shrugged.

Ramos pitches Lee to win

ODESSA — Senior Jesse Ramos pitched into the seventh inning and got enough run support Saturday as the Midland Lee Rebels moved into a second-place tie with Abilene High in District 4-5A with a 4-2 win over Odessa High.

The win was Lee's third straight and improves the Rebels' record to 14-11-1 overall and 6-2 in district play. Abilene High (15-8, 6-3) beat San Angelo Central 8-1 as both Abilene and Lee jumped over Central (12-12, 5-3) in the standings.

The Rebels scored once in the second, twice in the fourth and tacked on an insurance run in the sixth for a 4-0 when The Bronchos struck back for two runs. to cut the lead in half, but left runners on first and third. The Bronchos left six men on base during the game, including the bases loaded in the third.

Ramos (4-3) got into the seventh when Mike Gonzales came on in relief in to pick up the save. Odessa's Humberto Aguilar struck out five in six innings of work for the Bronchos but took the loss.

The Rebels managed just five hits off Aguilar, but four of them went for extra bases. Third baseman Britt Harper and catcher Jeff Burrows had doubles for Lee, team RBI leader Matt Withrow had a triple and Mark Holly hit his first home run of the year.

Lee JV wins 20-17 slugfest

ODESSA — Blake Moravick and Jason Buchanan each had RBIs in the seventh inning Saturday as the Midland Lee JV scored three times to take a wild, 20-17 win over Odessa High in a District 4-5A game.

Moravick went 4 for 5 with a double, triple and four RBIs as the Rebels improved to 9-7 overall and 4-5 on the season. John Purves went 3 for 5 with 2 RBIs, Cody Marcum had two doubles, Steve Wilson got a double and David Lopez hit a home run for Lee as the Rebels outhit Odessa 21-12.

Brady Simmons pitched 4 1/3 innings in relief of Michael Clinton to earn the victory. Purves pitched a scoreless seventh to record his first save of the year.

Permian JV gets by MHS

Odessa Permian came back from a two-run deficit Saturday to beat the Midland High in a District 4-5A JV game at Zachery Field.

Eric Clark pitched 5 1/3 innings and struck out eight for the Bulldogs but took the loss. It drops MHS to 13-6 on the season and 5-4 in district play.

Ralph Romero had a double for Midland to lead the hitting attack as Midland jumped out to a 6-4 lead after four innings. The Panthers scored twice in the fifth and three in the sixth to seal the win.

Lady Mustangs win softball title

ABILENE — Mindi Sheppard tossed a three-inning no-hitter and April Sheppard pitched a one-hitter Saturday as the Midland Christian softball team swept Fort Worth Pantego Christian 11-1 and 15-0 to capture the TAPPS District 2 title.

Mindi Sheppard struck out seven of the nine batters she faced in the second game of the double header as the Lady Mustangs (24-7) won on the 10-run rule.

Lacy Moore had a double and a triple to lead the hitting attack while Hope West, April Sheppard and Lisa Niemeyer also had doubles.

In the opener, Bethany Spradlin smacked a home run, Kristi Mash and Paula Brininstool had doubles and April Sheppard helped herself with two doubles to pace Midland Christian.

The Lady Mustangs finish out the season with non-district games before its bi-district playoff game against the District 3 runner-up.

Foursome win GBD Scramble

The foursome of Roy Tabb, Thomas Holland, Susie Whitsell and Robert Beeson shot a 63 Saturday to win the GBD four-person scramble at Ranchland Hills Country Club.

The group took the title from a field of 36 teams.

Summer, Wilson win Masters

Jim Summer and Mickey Wilson shot a second-round 65 for a 136 total Saturday to win the first flight of the Mission Masters at The Club at Mission Dorado.

The duo won the flight by three strokes over Eddie Madden and Chris Brashear. Other flight winners included Terry Graham and Tim Edgemon, Bill Turner and George McKenzey and Tookie Berry and Tommy Stewart.

Top three finishers in each flight of the Mission Masters:

Tyron Davis leads Buff track

Stanton's Tyron Davis won two events and placed second in two others to pace the Buffaloes to a third-place finish at the District 6-2A Track and Field Meet Thursday.

The top two qualifiers in each event advance to the Region II Track and Field Championships in two weeks at Abilene Christian University.

Davis won the high jump and the triple jump and got second in the long jump and the 110-meter hurdles.

Todd Davis was another multiple qualifier for Stanton, winning both the 100 and the 200. Leo McCalister took second in the 400 while Nicky Sanchez was second in the 300 hurdles.

McCalister also anchored the winning 1,600 relay which included Francisco Garcia, Carlos Chapa and Sanchez.

The Stanton girls, who took fourth place in the team standings, were led by a first-place finish in the 1,600 relay and a second-place finish in the 400 relay.

Tiffany Madison, Julie Adams, Laci Chandler and J. Adkins were on the mile relay while Misty Madison joined Tiffany Madison, Adams and Chandler on the 400 relay. Sandra Chapa was second in the 1,600.

Stanton won the junior varsity boys division with a total of 176 points to 130 1/2 by Jim Ned.

MHS: Rogers' side-arm seals 'Dog win

(From 1C)

"You can't say enough about the job Keith did," Kennedy said. "Keith wanted the ball and he took it and pitched really well."

Rogers came on with no margin for error and his side-arm delivery — and a well-placed fastball — were enough to keep Permian from tying the game.

"All I was thinking about going in there was to throw strikes," said Rogers. "All week in practice I'd been throwing because I thought I might have to start."

Rogers got Bivins on a 1-2 inside pitch for the first out of the sixth, then punched out Davis with a perfectly-placed strike on the outside corner. Ryan Bullard flied out to center for the final out.

Permian got a runner on in the seventh but Rogers picked him off of first and struck out Coby Harrison to end the game.

Rogers probably would have never had the chance to save the game if not for a four-run rally by the Bulldogs in the fifth, which turned a 3-1 Permian lead into a 5-3 Midland advantage.

Right fielder Kyle Cox struck out but reached base when Dinger threw a wild pitch on the third strike to open the inning. A sacrifice by Shane Jobe sent Cox to second when Carrasco blasted a double to the spacious gap in right-center field to cut Permian's lead to 3-2.

"It was a fastball which was high and outside and I just took the pitch were it was and tried to send it to right field," Carrasco said. "We knew this was going to be a big game with all the pressure. Hopefully this will give us some momentum."

Chad Villarreal, who went 2-for-3, tied the game with an RBI single and took second when Permian tried to make a play on Carrasco at the plate. Clay Johnston gave the Bulldogs the lead for good when he followed with a single, scoring Villarreal and chasing Dinger from the game.

"He (Dinger) had a pretty good breaking ball working early in the game so we were just trying to take the pitch where it was thrown," Kennedy said.

Bivins came in and got Rogers on a ground out but the Bulldog weren't done yet. Designated hitter Hector Morales followed with a double to give Midland a two-run lead.

Lant's hitless inning streak against Permian this year reached 8 1/3 innings before Permian scored three times in the second inning on five consecutive base hits.

Singles by Jeremy Delcore, Louis Navarette, Bivins and doubles by Rich Davis and Ryan Bullard in the second gave Permian a 3-0 lead before MHS cut the lead in the third.

Jobe walked to open the inning and scored on a two-out triple by Johnston, his eighth of the season.

Roberson proves he's District 4-5A's best tennis player

By Stewart Doreen
Sports Writer

ODESSA — As District 4-5A's best fought it out at the Odessa College Tennis Center, there wasn't much doubt who was the state's best boys singles player.

San Angelo Central's Charlie Roberson lived up to his billing defeating Abilene Cooper's Matt Parkhill to take home his second district title.

The San Angelo Central product highlighted Saturday's action that included Midland High's Nathan Lawrence capturing a victory for the district's third place spot.

Roberson, the tournament's No.1 seed, defeated Abilene Cooper's Matt Parkhill, the second seed, 6-1, 7-6. The win will take him to Lubbock for the Region I Championships, a tournament he has won the last two years. In this final, Roberson charged out off the blocks early and took off from there.

"I started to roll and get in a groove," said Roberson, who is ranked as the USTA No. 1 player in the Superchampionship division. "In the second set, I took my serve for granted. I could get a break and we both held. It was pretty sloppy."

Roberson lost the District 4-5A title last year to Abilene Cooper's Ryan Hughes, who was a member of the this year's winning doubles team. The Bobcat senior, however, would have loved another shot at Hughes, but will take the title no matter who he has to beat for it. Getting the title back into the Central trophy case is also a relief. The Bobcats have now won seven of the nine boys' singles titles.

"I would have thought more of the title if I would have beat him," said Roberson, who won the singles as a sophomore. "A district title is district title. I'm glad to get it back to Central."

Roberson, ranked 66th nationally, will go for the three-peat and then for a state singles title. Last year, he was eliminated at Austin in the quarterfinals, but came back to win the USTA Super Championship 18-under singles title, which most people believe is the state's crown jewel.

In the boys singles' third place match, Lawrence defeated Abilene High's Mitch Aston 7-5, 6-2. The junior's win was proof that losses can teach lessons as Lawrence closed out a tightly contested first set which he didn't do in his semifinals. In that match against Parkland, Lawrence held a 5-2 first set lead only to fall in a tie breaker.

Lawrence and Aston played and were 5-5 going into the 11th game. In that game which saw numerous duece points, Lawrence broke Aston's serve and then held to take the first set.

GIRLS: Lee, MHS teams come long way

Odessa Permian led defending district champ Abilene Cooper by just one point going into the final event, the 1,600 relay, but pulled out a winning time of 4 minutes, 3.24 seconds to beat the Lady Cougars and win the meet with a total of 137. Cooper finished with 131. Abilene High was fifth with 70, San Angelo Central was sixth with 50 while Odessa High rounded out the pack with 36.

All told, Midland schools qualified nine entries to the Region I Track and Field Championships April 26-27 in Lubbock, including three relays as the Lady Rebels finished second behind MHS in the sprint relay.

But the "Most Improved" award has to go to the Lady Rebels, who scored 13 1/2 points last year for dead last and didn't qualify anybody to regionals.

"Last year we were last place in the meet and last place in the relays," said Lee 400 relay member Kym Ward, one of only a handful of seniors on the Lady Rebel squad. "This feels a lot better. I wasn't even going to run this year but Coach (Gena) Lancaster talked me into it. And we all want to thank Coach (Randy) Smith."

Smith, in his first year at the helm for the Lady Rebels, took a mostly-sophomore team to Ratliff and now gets to take six of them, including long jump champion Toya Clater, to Lubbock in two weeks.

Beck literally saved her best for last in becoming one of only three girls at the meet to win two golds in individual events. Permian hurdler Danielle Chapman joined junior Tami Zachery as the other two double winners.

Beck came from behind in both races and ran both gun laps like she was shot out of a cannon to pass the pack for somewhat easy wins. She recorded a time of 12: 29.20 in the two-mile and came back for a time of 5: 40.54 in the mile.

She admitted she wouldn't have believed it at the beginning of this season that she would be a double district champ.

"I was worried if I didn't sprint on the last lap I wouldn't win," said Beck, who clocked a 1: 27 on her final lap of the eight-lap 3,200. "I just wanted to win. But I tried to stay close enough in the beginning because I didn't want to use it all up catching up and then die in the end."

Tami Zachery continued her year-long streak of not losing in the 100, holding off Abilene Cooper's Erycerla Willie for the gold in a personal-best time of 11.83. Zachery, who was hampered in individual events last year by a bad back, then turned around to win the 200 in a time of 25.59.

Zachery also anchored the sprint relay to a time of 47.30, this particular groups' career best. Leadoff leg Shelly Ray, a junior, staked MHS to an early lead and despite a somewhat sloppy handoff on the second exchange between junior Talitha Belcher and senior Toya Zachery — Tami's older sister — the Lady Bulldogs defended their title and will make a second trip to Lubbock.

The foursome of senior Ogonna Merritt, Toya Zachery, Ray and Belcher also defended their district title in the 800 relay as well, taking an early lead and holding on for a time of 1: 44.06.

Tami Zachery said the Lady Bulldogs did not feel any pressure to defend their titles.

"We look forward to the pressure," Zachery said. "We don't really look forward to it but we know it's there and we just have to take it and deal with it to get there."

Toya Zachery added, "What makes it good is that Talitha and I had a terrible handoff. Just think what we could have run with a good one."

Clater, another Lee sophomore, didn't let the first district track meet jitters get to her in winning the long jump with a leap of 18 feet, 1/2 inch. She led after the preliminaries (first three jumps) but still had not reached her goal of hitting the 18-foot barrier. But after her competition failed to knock her off, Clater took it easy and hit her goal on her final attempt.

"I'm happy about winning because I didn't do well in the triple jump," said Clater, who has gone 18-4 in the long jump this year. "But I just wanted to hit 18 again. I knew I was in first so I wasn't going to take my last jump but I decided to take it because I wanted 18."

Casandra Love and Clater's cousin Amanda Douglas, both sophomores, joined Ward and Clater on the second-place sprint relay to run their personal-best time of 48.84.

"We were in fourth until I got the stick," said Douglas. "I did mine for Kym because she's a senior and we wanted to get her to regionals."

Junior LaToya Strambler rounded out Lee's qualifiers with a gutsy second-place performance in the 400. Strambler came from fourth in the final 50 meters to cross the line in a time of 1: 01.25.

"In the prelims I died out at the end so I decided to save a little bit for the last in the finals," Strambler said. "That's not how I've learned to run but it worked. Usually I'd rather run like I know how to and finish fourth than to save it up like I had to today."

With only a handful of seniors graduating from both the Lee and MHS squads, Saturday's breakthrough performances could be just what both programs need to springboard back into the district's top teams. If what they did in only two years is any indication, the rise could be swift indeed.

RACE: McAfee goes to regional track in three events

(From 1C)

"I made it my goal to get them to regionals," said McAfee, who also won 110-meter hurdles and the 300-meter hurdles. "I thank the Lord we did it."

McAfee goes to the Region I meet, which will be held at Texas Tech on April 26-27, having qualified in three events and winning two.

McAfee started the day running a personal best time of 13.51 to take the 110-meter hurdles. The time is the second best run in Texas this year against times listed this week. He, however, was not content.

The senior, who qualified for regionals in the 110-meter hurdles last year, then went to the 300-hurdles and absolutely demolished the district record (36.94) and his own state's best time (37.03) with a 36.09.

He said he gained some inspiration for the unbelievable performance by the actions of a chief competitor, Odessa Permian's Andrae Gibson, who would not shake McAfee's hand and acknowledge his presence before the race.

Unfortunately for Gibson, McAfee fired out of the blocks and blew by everyone before the race hit its first hurdles.

"Gibson made me angry. He treated me like dirt and that is what fired me off," said McAfee, whose goal in the race was to get into the 34-second range. "I did not want to act out of order (right then), so I did it on the track. I was showing him I could be cruel."

For those watching the race, it was truly amazing.

"It was unbelievable," said Ratliff. "He was so determined and is one of those kids who knows how to compete when the light comes on."

McAfee is another in the line of great hurdlers. Last year, Roderick Mayfield went to state for the second time in the 300 hurdles. Now, there is McAfee, who holds the best time in Texas in the 300 hurdles and second best in the 110 hurdles. The next in the line is junior John Norman.

Norman thought this could be his time to make it to regionals in at least one of those races but he just missed in both races, finishing third. In the 110's, Norman placed third behind Permian's Chris Wilson, who set a personal best by .12. Then after the 300 hurdles, Norman not only missed out on the trip to Lubbock, but was disqualified for not clearing the hurdle with his trailing leg (which is common in the 300 hurdles). At that time, Norman couldn't believe the cruelty of the day's events up to that moment.

"I wasn't going either way and now I'm not going to get a medal," said Norman, who still had not run with the Lee mates in the mile relay. "I will make sure of that (making regionals next year). I'll be ready for next year."

McAfee thinks that Norman is on track to do just that.

"He'll be better than me," said McAfee. "One day he will be. It made me better (working with Mayfield)."

Norman, McAfee and the rest of the Lee mile relay still had their work to do in making their case for Lubbock. The travel plans started with McAfee's leadoff leg that put Lee just behind Permian after one leg.

From there, Norman took the baton and he flew around the track before giving the baton to Antwan Alexander who had the lead before dropping behind Odessa High's Jonathan Pike. Still in second, Fred Pertile gave Lee an anchor leg to remember staying in second and making sure extra reservations will be made by Lee coach Kelvin Ratliff.

"It was unbelievable," said Ratliff. "The whole relay competed extremely well. As a team we are getting better."

For Norman, this was justification and an end to an exhausting day.

"Finally," said Norman of making the regional qualification. "I left it on the track. I was getting there some way. You have to keep confidence. It (the mile relay) might have been more fun to watch."

The Lee team as a whole competed and finished with 73 points that placed them fifth.

Midland High didn't fare as well, finishing with eight points. MHS' Fernando Juarez had a fifth-place finish in the 300-meter hurdles and the MHS' 400-meter relay fared the same.

Results from the District 4-6A Track and Field Championships held Saturday at Ratliff Stadium.

Media ask judge to lift Irvin gag order

FORT WORTH (AP) — Three newspapers, a television station and a magazine have asked that a judge lift the gag order preventing those involved with Michael Irvin's upcoming drug trial from speaking out.

Attorneys filed court papers Friday calling the order "impermissibly vague" and more than what is needed to protect the rights of the Dallas Cowboys' All-Pro receiver and the two other defendants in the case, according to the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

A grand jury indicted Irvin and two women on April 1 on cocaine and marijuana possession charges stemming from a drug raid at an Irving motel room a month earlier.

Judge Manny Alvarez said Irvin is "getting very close" to causing more trouble for himself by speaking generally about the case in several recent broadcast and print media interviews.

But one prosecutor hasn't tried to stop Irvin from talking.

"As far as I'm concerned, the more he talks the deeper he gets," Norm Kinne, Dallas County first assistant district attorney, said. "I don't care if he wants to talk."

The gag order has been in place since last month.

ROBERSON: Lawrence wins third place

(From 1C)

(was the factor)," said Lawrence. "It's 6-5 and I said I'm not going to let that happen again. It was close in the first set, but it went my favor. It wasn't going to happen again."

Lawrence did breeze through the second set, playing consistently.

"I was a little more focused today," said Lawrence, who has qualified with a win in Plano to play in the USTA's Super Championships. "I wasn't going for shots and trying not to miss."

The one downside to the victory was that there was not a playback match to follow. In the district tournament, the winner of the third place game gets a shot at the loser of the final if they hadn't already played in the semifinals. Lawrence had already lost to Parkhill, the loser of the final, so a playback was not necessary.

"I would have like a playback and another shot at Parkhill," said Lawrence. "I'll get another shot (at a regional spot) next year. Our whole team will be strong."

With both finalist graduating this year, Lawrence should have good shot at regionals and the 4-5A title next year. MHS coach Tom Heiting says that his team as a whole will be stronger. He says a MHS entry into 1997's regionals for the first time since 1994 is very likely and that Lawrence's finish this year will be a reason for that.

"It should help confidence-wise that we should be able to compete with any school in Texas," said Hieting, who is in his fourth year at MHS and had one entry make the state tournament.

"It (Lawrence's win) is another positive aspect to the program."

Other district champions include Abilene High's Meiling Parks. The second seed used her powerful forehand to defeat Melissa Hodges of Odessa Permian in straight sets.

In doubles action, Abilene Cooper's Hughes and Chuck Haddox defeated the No. 1 seeds, Dusty Oglesby and Adam Knight of Abilene High. In what was a strange turn of events Oglesby-Knight were defeated in the playback match by Central's Todd Petty and Vidal Garza.

The girls doubles was an all-Cooper matchup and the Kathryn Scott and Heather Gipson took the title over Lacy Johnson and Andi Wildner. The unseeded Cooper pair bounced back to comeback in a thrilling three-set win over Jamie Quesenberry and Sarah Myers.

Saturday's results from the District 4-5A Tennis Championships held at the Odessa College Tennis Center.

POLE: Fast lap comes on driver's first set

(From 1C)

Each car is allowed to use two sets of tires during the qualifying sessions, and de Ferran's fast lap came on the first set, just 4 1/2 minutes after the green flag.

"I expected I would have to go faster to keep the pole, but the oil right at the end of the session meant that nobody could improve very much," noted de Ferran, whose other Indy-car pole came last July on the airport road course at Cleveland.

Alex Zanardi, a rookie from Italy, leapfrogged teammate Jimmy Vasser, the series points leader and winner of two of the first three races this season. Zanardi moved onto the front row, alongside de Ferran, with a lap of 109.535.

Vasser, who was unable to improve on his Friday lap of 109.310, fell to third.

"I could have gone faster, but I was right behind Robby when he blew the engine," Vasser said. "I had just put new tires on. I came right in. I knew they were going to throw a red (flag), and then they didn't. It's tough to have that happen in the last seven minutes of a session."

Paul Tracy moved from seventh to fourth with a lap of 108.985, followed by series runner-up Scott Pruett at 108.910, Parker Johnstone at 108.715, Gordon at 108.504 and rookie Greg Moore at 108.490.

Al Unser Jr., who has won six of the last eight Long Beach races, including the last two, failed to improve on his Friday lap of 108.417 and slipped from fifth to ninth.

Jockey Krone to have surgery to remove precancerous tissue

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Jockey Julie Krone revealed on Saturday that she will undergo a surgical procedure Monday at Saratoga Springs, N.Y., for the removal of what she described precancerous tissue.

A statement released through the Keeneland press office said "Krone stressed that she does not have cancer and is expected to miss a little more than one week of riding.

"Abnormal cervical tissue was discovered during a routine examination when a pap smear turned up an abnormal result," the statement said. "Currently, the tissue is not cancerous, but doctors have told Krone it could become cancerous if untreated."

Krone, the top female jockey in racing history, was tied for first with Jerry Bailey in jockey standings for the Keeneland Spring Meeting, with five wins each. She had four mounts Saturday at Aqueduct, including Romano Gucci in the Wood Memorial.

Krone, 32, said she expected to be riding again by opening day at Belmont Park May 1.

LOSS: Doty gets three hits, three RBIs runs as the Angel defense was hurt by wild pitches and four errors on the night. El Paso's Darrell Nicholas and Hector Ortega each drove in two runs.

Midland got a big game from No. 9 hitter Derrin Doty. Doty, who was hitting at a meager .200 clip coming in, got three hits, including a double and a walk, and drove in three runs for the Angels. Catcher Jose Monzon also drove in two runs with a key double in the eighth that allowed the Angels to make a run at the win. Alfonzo also got three hits.

ANGEL DUST: The Angels have the day off today, but will hit the road for the first time this season Monday with a key five-game set with Wichita. Midland will open that series with lefty Matt Beaumont (1-0, 4.26) on the mound. The Angels will move from Wichita to El Paso for another five-game set before returning home on Thursday, April 25...

Hokies quarterback arrested for fighting

BLACKSBURG, Va. (AP) — Virginia Tech quarterback Jim Druckenmiller was charged with malicious wounding Saturday by town police investigating a fight that took place outside a bar last month.

Druckenmiller, 23, was arrested in connection with a fight on March 21 outside Top of the Stairs bar.

Rangers give Gooden his second bad start, 10-6

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Dwight Gooden struggled in his second straight start for the New York Yankees, and Juan Gonzalez hit a three-run double that led the Texas Rangers to a 10-6 victory Saturday.

Gooden (0-2) was tagged for six runs on nine hits and three walks in 5 1-3 innings in his first Yankee Stadium appearance. He received polite applause when he was pulled.

Gooden was beaten in Texas last weekend in his AL debut. He allowed five runs on five hits and four walks in five innings in that loss.

Royals 3, Brewers 2

MILWAUKEE — Michael Tucker's three-run homer — the only hit off knuckleballer Steve Sparks in eight innings — lifted Kansas City over Milwaukee.

The Brewers put men on the corners with one out in the ninth, but Jeff Montgomery got Jose Valentin to ground into a double play. After Valentin hit a comebacker to the mound, Montgomery threw to shortstop Jose Offerman, whose low throw to first was scooped by Joe Randa.

■ Baseball Roundup

Mariners 14, Blue Jays 3

TORONTO — The Seattle Mariners want everyone to know that they're more than a one-man team.

Ken Griffey Jr. was the only Seattle starter who didn't reach base as the Mariners trounced Toronto.

Indians 14, Red Sox 2

BOSTON — Albert Belle homered and drove in four runs leading Cleveland past Boston and sending the error-plagued Red Sox to their worst start in 50 years.

The Red Sox lost their third consecutive game and dropped to 2-8, matching their 1945 start.

Tigers 9, Angels 5

DETROIT — Cecil Fielder hit his major league-leading sixth home run and also doubled as Detroit beat California.

Fielder's double began a four-run sixth inning that broke a 3-3 tie. Eddie Williams hit a two-run double that chased Scott Sanderson (0-1), and Mark Parent homered off Mark Eichhorn.

White Sox 6, Athletics 5, 12 innings

CHICAGO — Tony Phillips' RBI single in the 12th inning gave the Chicago White Sox a 6-5 victory over the Oakland Athletics on Saturday.

Darren Lewis opened the inning with a walk off reliever Don Wengert (0-1) and was sacrificed to second by Ozzie Guillen before Phillips singled into the gap in right-center.

Matt Karchner (1-0) picked up the win with one inning of relief.

Orioles 7, Twins 6

BALTIMORE — Brady Anderson hit a solo homer with one out in the bottom of the ninth inning, capping a rally from a five-run deficit.

Baltimore came back for its seventh straight victory at home. The Orioles won their fifth in a row overall and ran their record to 9-1, best in the majors.

Giants 3, Cubs 2

SAN FRANCISCO — Pinch-hitter Shawon Dunston singled home the winning run with two outs in the 10th inning against his former team, giving San Francisco a win over Chicago.

Dunston, who played 11 seasons for the Cubs before moving to the Giants as a free agent in January, was hugged and put on the shoulders of teammates after his hit off Rodney Myers (0-1).

Phillies 4, Phillies 2

ST. LOUIS — Jim Eisenreich's bases-loaded single in the seventh inning sparked Philadelphia to a come-from-behind win over St. Louis.

Trailing 2-1, the Phillies loaded the bases with a walk and two singles. Eisenreich then singled off reliever Tony Fossas (0-2) to drive in two runs and put Philadelphia ahead 3-2.

Pirates 9, Expos 3

PITTSBURGH — Paul Wagner, still unscored upon this season, pitched seven shutout innings and Pittsburgh avoided their worst start at home this century by beating Montreal.

Carlos Garcia, so unhappy with a 2-for-15 slump he took extra batting practice after a 13-3 loss Friday night, hit one of Pittsburgh's four homers as the Pirates avoided their first 0-5 start at home in the 1900s.

Wagner (2-0) retired the first 10 batters.

ORDINANCE NO. 7514

AN ORDINANCE ORDERING A HOME RULE ELECTION IN THE CITY OF MIDLAND, TEXAS, TO BE HELD ON SAT-URDAY, THE 4TH DAY OF MAY, 1996, FOR THE PUR-POSE OF SUBMITTING TO THE QUALIFIED VOTERS OF SAID CITY, FOR ADOPTION OR REJECTION, A PROPOSED AMENDMENT TO ARTICLE IV, "OFFICERS AND ELECTIONS", SECTION 9 "TERM OF OF-FICE", AND SECTION 10 "VA-CANCIES" OF THE EXISTING CHARTER OF THE CITY OF MIDLAND SO AS TO AMEND THE TERMS OF OFFICE OF THE MAYOR AND MEMBERS OF THE CITY COUNCIL AND ESTABLISHING TERM LIMITS; AND PRESCRIBING PRESID-ING OFFICERS THEREOF

WHEREAS, the city Council of the City of Midland, in the exer-cise of the sound discretion re-posed in it by the constitution and laws of this state, and more particularly V.A.T.S., Local Gov-ernment Code §9.004, relating to the amendment of city charters by home rule cities, deems it in the public interest and expe-dience to submit certain pro-posed amendments to the ex-isting charter of said city, herei-nafter set forth, at a home rule election to be held in said city on Saturday, the 4th day of May, 1996;

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT OR-DAINED BY THE CITY COUN-CIL OF THE CITY OF MID-LAND, TEXAS:

SECTION ONE. That a home rule election be held in the City of Midland, Texas, on Saturday, the 4th day of May, 1996, for the purpose of submitting to the qualified voters of said City, for adoption or rejection, the fol-lowing proposed amendments to the existing charter of the City of Midland.

PROPOSED AMENDMENT

Shall Section 9, "Term of Office" of Article IV, "Officers and Elec-tions", of the Charter of the City of Midland be amended so that the same shall read as follows:

Section 9. Term of Office

The mayor and each Member of the City Council shall serve for a term of three years begin-ning on the first Monday in June of the year in which they are elected and continuing until their successor is elected and qualified, and the Mayor and each Member of the City Coun-cil shall not be elected to serve more than three consecutive three-year terms of office.

This section shall not be applied retroactively and shall not affect the right of any individual who was elected to the office of Mayor or Member of the City Council prior to august 1, 1996, to serve an additional three consecutive three-year terms of office. Any vacancy or vacan-cies occurring on such govern-ing body shall not be filled by appointment but shall be filled by the qualified voters of the City.

Section 10. "Vacancies" of Arti-cle IV, "Officers and Elections", of the Charter of the City of Mid-land shall be deleted.

SECTION TWO. The method of voting (on election day and by absentee) shall be by paper ballots which are counted by a centralized optical scanner. Ballots shall be prepared in ac-cordance with V.A.T.S., Election Code, and permit electors to vote "FOR" or "AGAINST" the aforesaid measure. The afore-said measure or proposition shall appear on the ballot sub-stantially as follows:

PROPOSITION NO. 1

"AMEND SECTIONS 9 AND 10, ARTICLE IV, OF THE MIDLAND CITY CHARTER SO THAT IN CITY ELECTIONS HELD AF-TER AUGUST 1, 1996, THE MAYOR AND MEMBERS OF THE MIDLAND CITY COUNCIL SHALL BE ELECTED TO SERVE A TERM OF THREE YEARS AND ESTABLISHING TERM LIMITS FOR THE MAYOR AND MEMBERS OF THE MIDLAND CITY COUNCIL AND ANY VACANCY OCCUR-RING ON SUCH GOVERNING BODY SHALL BE FILLED BY THE QUALIFIED VOTERS OF THE CITY AT AN ELECTION.

SECTION THREE. By Resolu-tion NO. 96-033, passed Febru-ary 13, 1996, the City Council designated the precincts and polling places for City elections to be held during the voting year effective April 1, 1996, and they shall be the precincts and voting places for the election to adopt or reject the aforesaid proposed amendment to the City Charter. The City Council shall, by resolution, appoint the presiding and alternate presid-ing judges, for each precinct, for this election.

SECTION FOUR. All resident qualified electors of the City shall be permitted to vote at said election, and on the day of the election, such electors shall vote at the polling place desig-nate for the election precinct in which they reside. this election shall be held and conducted in accordance with the constitu-tional laws of the State of Texas and the provisions of the Texas Election Code; and as may be required by law, all election ma-terials and proceedings shall be printed in both English and Spanish. On election day, the polls shall be open from 7:00 a.m. to 7:00 p.m.

SECTION FIVE. Absentee vot-ing shall be conducted at the Midland County Election Ad-ministrator's office, 709 West Washington Street (north end of the building), in accordance with the provisions of the Texas Election Code §85.002, during the regular office hours of 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. each day, with-in the time prescribed for ab-sentee voting, that is not a Sat-urday, Sunday, or official state holiday. Applications for absen-tee ballots by mail shall be ad-dressed to: Absentee Voting Clerk, P.O. Box 3434, Midland, Texas 79702.

SECTION SIX. A substantial copy of this ordinance, along with the location of each polling place designated by the City Council, shall serve as proper notice of said election. Said no-tice, including a Spanish trans-lation thereof, shall be posted at each of the election precincts of said City and also at the City Hall not later than the 21st day before election day, and be published in a newspaper of general circulation published in said City on the same day in each of two successive weeks, the date of first publication to be not earlier than the 30th day or later than the 14th day prior to the date of the election. The City Secretary shall see that proper publication is made and proper notice of this election is given, in full conformity with the applica-ble statutes of the State of Texas.

SECTION SEVEN. That the proposed amendments as hereinabove set forth, if ap-proved by a majority of the qualified voters voting upon said amendments, shall be-come a part of the Charter of the City of Midland as soon as an official order has been en-tered on the Council minutes of said City by the City Council thereof, declaring the same adopted.

The above and foregoing ordi-nance was duly proposed, read in full and adopted on first read-ing, the 13th day of February, A.D., 1996; and passed to sec-ond reading on motion of Coun-cil member Brooks, seconded by Council member Schneider, by the following vote:

Council members voting "AYE": Brooks, Schneider, Webb, Burns and Simpson

Council members voting "NAY": Cuevas

The above and foregoing ordi-nance was read in full and final-ly adopted by the following vote upon motion of Council mem-ber Schneider, seconded by Council member Brooks; on the 27th day of February, A.D., 1996, at a regular meeting of the City Council:

ORDINANCE NO. 7511

AN ORDINANCE ORDERING A HOME RULE ELECTION IN THE CITY OF MIDLAND, TEXAS, TO BE HELD ON SATURDAY, THE 4TH DAY OF MAY, 1996, FOR THE PURPOSE OF SUBMITTING TO THE QUALIFIED VOTERS OF SAID CITY, FOR ADOPTION OR REJECTION, PROPOSAL FOR THE CITY OF MIDLAND TO ISSUE $21,000,000.00 IN COMBINATION REVENUE AND TAX CERTIFICATES OF OBLIGATION FOR IMPROVEMENTS TO THE MIDLAND INTERNATIONAL AIRPORT; DESIGNATING THE PLACES AT WHICH SAID ELECTION IS TO BE HELD; AND PRESCRIBING PRESIDING OFFICERS THEREOF

WHEREAS, in accordance with Chapter 271 of the Texas Local Government Code and Texas Election Laws, the City Council of the public City of Midland hereby submits at a home rule election to be held in said City on Saturday, the 4th day of May, 1996 the issue of whether to issue $21,000,000.00 in Certificates of Obligation for improvements to the Midland International Airport;

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT ORDAINED BY THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF MIDLAND, TEXAS:

SECTION ONE. That a home rule election be held in the City of Midland, Texas, on Saturday, the 4th day of May, 1996, for the purpose of submitting to the qualified voters of said City, for adoption or rejection, the following measure.

MEASURE

Shall the City Council of the City of Midland, Texas, be authorized to issue certificates of obligation of the City in the principal amount of $21,000,000.00 for: (i) the construction of improvements to the City's Airport, and (ii) professional services rendered in relation to such construction and financing thereof; such certificates to mature serially or otherwise over a period not to exceed forty (40) years from their date, to be issued and sold in one or more series at any price or prices and to bear interest at any rate or rates (fixed, floating, variable or otherwise) as shall be determined within the discretion of the City Council at the time of issuance or sale of the certificates; with a limited pledge of the surplus net revenues of the Airport pledged and with ad valorem taxes levied upon all taxable property in the City sufficient to pay the annual interest and provide a sinking fund to pay the certificates at maturity?

SECTION TWO. The method of voting (on election day and by absentee) shall be by paper ballots which are counted by a centralized optical scanner. Ballots shall be prepared in accordance with the Texas Election Code, and permit electors to vote 'FOR THE ISSUANCE OF THE CERTIFICATES OF OBLIGATION" or "AGAINST THE ISSUANCE OF THE CERTIFICATES OF OBLIGATION". The aforesaid measure or proposition shall appear on the Ballot substantially as follows:

"THE ISSUANCE OF $21,000,000.00 COMBINATION REVENUE AND TAX CERTIFICATES OF OBLIGATION FOR IMPROVEMENTS TO THE MIDLAND INTERNATIONAL AIRPORT".

SECTION THREE. By resolution No. 96-033, passed February 13, 1996, the City Council designated the precincts and polling places for City elections to be held during the voting year effective April 1, 1996, and they shall be the precincts and voting places for the election to adopt or reject the aforesaid proposed amendment to the City Charter. The City Council shall, by resolution, appoint the presiding and alternate presiding judges, for each precinct, for this election.

SECTION FOUR. All resident qualified electors of the City shall be permitted to vote at said election, and on the day of the election, such electors shall vote at the polling place designated for the election precinct in which they reside. The election shall be held and conducted in accordance with the constitution and laws of the State of Texas and the provisions of the Texas Election Code; and as may be required by law, all election materials and proceedings shall be printed in both English and Spanish. On election day, the polls shall be open from 7:00 a.m. to 7:00 p.m.

SECTION FIVE. Absentee voting shall be conducted at the Midland County Election Administrator's office, 709 West Washington Street (north end of the building), in accordance with the provisions of the Texas Election Code §85.002, during the regular office hours of 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. each day, within the time prescribed for absentee voting, that is not a Saturday, Sunday, or official state holiday. Applications for absentee ballots by mail shall be addressed to: Absentee Voting Clerk, P.O. Box 3434, Midland, Texas 79702.

SECTION SIX. A substantial copy of this ordinance, along with the location of each polling place designated by the City Council, shall serve as proper notice of said election. Said notice, including a Spanish translation thereof, shall be posted at each of the election precincts of said City and also at the City Hall not later than the 21st day before election day, and be published in a newspaper of general circulation published in said City on the same day in each of two successive weeks, the date of first publication to be not earlier than the 30th day or later than the 14th day prior to the date of the election. The City Secretary shall see that proper publication is made and proper notice of this election is given, in full conformity with the applicable statutes of the State of Texas.

The above and foregoing ordinance was duly proposed, read in full and adopted on first reading, the 13th day of February, A.D., 1996; and passed to second reading on motion of Council member Brooks, seconded by Council member Schneider, by the following vote:

Council members voting "AYE" Brooks, Schneider, Webb, Burns, and Simpson

Council members voting "NAY": Cuevas

The above and foregoing ordinance was read in full and finally adopted by the following vote upon motion of Council member Brown, seconded by Council member Brooks, on the 27th day of February, A.D., 1996, at a regular meeting of the City Council:

Council members voting "AYE": Brown, Brooks, Webb, Burns, Schneider and Simpson

Council members voting "NAY": Cuevas

PASSED AND APPROVED THIS 27th day of February, A.D., 1996.

HOMES
& Classified

Perfection eightfold

Photographs by Joe D. Williams, Text and design by Kes Gilhome

is unusual. Not just because it is a large, dramatic home set in a prestigious neighborhood, but because it contains some very unusual and original design features.

Some people might think that having an octagonal dining room fits the criteria of 'unusual'. Most would probably agree that having two dining areas, both of which are eight sided, is very rare and therefore worthy of some attention.

The formal dining room is reminiscent of an extended bay window, jutting out over the front yard. With over half of the wall space devoted to large picture windows and translucent curtains this is a bright, airy room that is a pleasure to dine in. The informal dining room offers a similar floor plan plus extras in the form of a built-in hutch with glass doors.

Of course there is more to this four bedroom house than simply two unusual dining rooms. Set on a large lot overlooking the number two green of the GreenTree Country Club golf course the house benefits from outstanding landscaping and exquisite detailing.

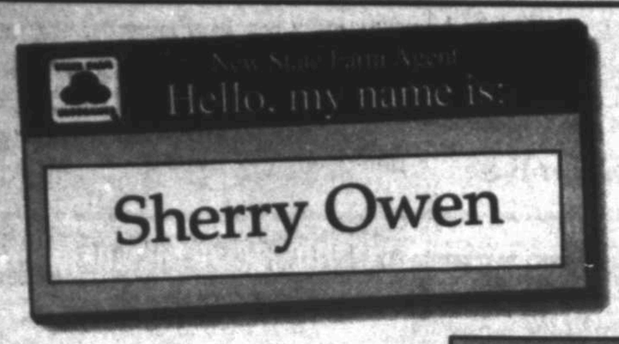

The formal front room serves as the hub of the house. Centrally located within the property this is a dramatic room which is perfect for either entertaining on a grand scale or quiet family time. A large, walk-in wet bar with built-in wine racks helps with parties as do the sliding doors to the patio and garden which help to open up the room. An imposing brick fireplace offset to the built-in combination bookcase and entertainment center provide the focal point for the room.

Listed at $179,000 (with a two percent buyer incentive) this is an attractive home that is sure to please even the most jaded of home seekers.

Although there will not be an open house this afternoon a private appointment to view can be arranged by calling the listing agent, Dana Chandler of Langston Realtors at 685-0400.

LOCATION IS BIG ISSUE

Location has always been the single most important real estate purchasing consideration. Location is a significant factor in the following:

Sutton

- Determining property value.
- The possible return on your real estate investment.
- How much you will enjoy your new home.

Neighborhoods often experience cycles in property values. A community's historical residential areas may appreciate as a new home buying generation is captivated by the established grace and charm.

A new home development may also be considered in terms of price appreciation if the neighborhood is close to shopping, schools, parks, recreational centers and churches.

Do the surrounding neighborhoods exhibit stability?

Buyers will want to evaluate potential neighborhoods for the following aspects:

- Are yards well maintained?
- Is there a balance in the local population? Are there older people as well as children?
- Is the neighborhood secure with a low crime rate? Look for local neighborhood watch indications.
- What is the noise pollution factor? What is the proximity of public transportation (such as airports) and facilities such as playgrounds and parks?

If you have children, the quality of the school system is a major consideration. Are your children small and is a neighborhood school essential to you.

Access to major thoroughfares is also important. How near is your place of work? What is the condition of the route you will need to take during high traffic hours.

Your local real estate agent can help you select the location to match your specific qualifications.

Post-sales remorse

What is it?

Regardless of how well the sale of a house goes, there is always an emotional undertow on both sides of the deal. Usually this will happen right after a deal is struck, but it can happen at any time between signing and closing. Buyers and sellers feel similar emotions, but from different sides.

Pine

Buyer's remorse involves feeling that they have paid too much for a property, or taken on more debt and financial obligations than they can afford. These buyers may stay awake worrying whether or not they'll be able to take a vacation again.

Sellers on the other hand often regret selling their home - their castle - particularly if they haven't found a new home as planned. Also, a seller may find out later that he could have got more money for the property.

Feeling that you have let your property go for less than its true value can keep you awake rerunning the deal in your mind, wondering what you could have done to come out ahead. Seller's remorse is often more complicated than buyer's remorse. The seller may be emotionally confused or distraught at the thought of leaving their home, while at the same time, worrying whether or not they sold their home for the best possible price available.

What can be done to alleviate seller's remorse There is no quick answer to this. The seller has to remember why he is selling, and what the home is really worth. If he starts believing his broker's marketing efforts, he may start thinking that the home is worth more than it actually is. Also, the seller needs to be emotionally separated from the home - to realize that he is actually moving.

This story was submitted by Norma Pine of Chaparral Realtors.

Senior sales

Buying or selling a home can be intimidating for many people. But for older adults - a large and growing segment of the home-selling public - the process can be downright traumatic.

Senior citizens, who generally have owned their homes for years and are not familiar with the current real estate market, can feel overwhelmed. That is why many turn to real estate professionals to help them navigate their way through the home-selling process.

McDonald

In addition to being a complex transaction, selling a home also can be very emotional for seniors. It often is prompted by the death of a loved one or a growing inability to care for, or afford, a large house. Some older adults may be in poor health, adding to the stress of selling a home, finding a new one and moving. Many will be leaving behind old friends and comfortable surroundings.

While such a move may be viewed as an ending of sorts, if handled properly and by the right real estate professional - it can also be a new beginning. For many seniors, it's a move that can make their lives simpler, easier and better.

If you're an older adult who's considering a move, the first step is to compare your present home wiffi your current needs. Do you feel alone or isolated? Does your community offer easy access to medical-care facilities, shopping centers, social and recreational opportunities, and public transportation? Is your current home too expensive or difficult to maintain?

If your answer to any of these questions is "Yes" you may want to contact a real estate professional to get an idea of what your home is worth in the current real estate market and to explore alternative housing options. A local expert will be able to prepare a competitive market analysis, comparing your home with others in the neighborhood that have been listed for sale or have sold in recent months. He or she can also suggest repairs or improvements that still help sell your home and maximize value.

Moreover, your sales associate can help you better define your current and future housing needs and assist you in your search for a new home. If you're interested in moving to a community with a warmer climate or additional amenities or services, an agent who is affiliated with a national sales organization will be able to refer you to offices in other areas of the country that offer those benefits.

When choosing a new home, it's important to consider what type of housing would best suit your needs. Today, there are numerous housing options available to seniors. Your age, lifestyle, health and financial situation will be important factors in the selection of alternative housing.

If you want to maintain your privacy and dependence, but reduce the time, effort and expense associated with property upkeep, a smaller single family home might be the perfect solution

By "downsizing," you also may be able to free up some equity -- and keep it, thanks to the one-time tax exclusion law. Under it, a seller can exclude $125,000 of the capital gain on the sale of his or her previous home, provided the owner is 65 or older on the day of the sale and the house was the principal residence for three of the five preceding years. Consult your tax professional for more information about this tax benefit.

If you want to be relieved of many of the burdens of home ownership, but retain and enjoy the many tax benefits, you should consider purchasing a condominium. "Condos" can be stacked in high-rise complexes or separated into duplexes or fourplexes, also called "single-family attached" homes.

When you buy a condo, you are actually buying "air space" in the unit and an undivided Interest in the surrounding walls, floors, ceilings, recreational facilities and common areas, which are jointly owned by everyone with an ownership stake in the complex. The expense of maintaining the structure and common areas is divided among all owners, who pay a monthly assessment.

Before buying a condo, you'll want to request and read the Condominium Declaration, Indentures and By-Laws, as well as review the homeowner association's current budget and state of reserves.

Regardless of what type of home you buy, it's important to consider accessibility. Climbing a flight of stairs may not be a problem for you now, but what about your future needs?

A single-story floor plan, with a level entry way and wide doorways and hallways, makes a home more accessible. Other features, such as low-pile carpet, easily operated windows, varying countertop and cabinet heights, and lever-handled faucets and doorknobs, contribute to "barrier-free" living. You'll also want to make sure the house is located near public transportation, shopping areas and medical facilities for easy access.

Another option - a retirement community - may be ideal if you want to live in an environment where various services, facilities and social opportunities are provided for you. With special housing designed to meet seniors needs, these communities can take a number of forms: A whole new town or subdivision, a new or converted apartment building, or cottages.

Costs, as well as the types of services provided, can vary. Many "active adult" communities offer residents transportation services, social activities, exercise classes, clubs, game and recreation rooms and sports facilities. Others offer meal options, 24-hour emergency aid and on-duty nurses.

A real estate professional can help you explore these and other alternative housing opportunities.

KENT KWIK
CONVENIENCE STORES

Why join TEAM KENT?

What turns you on about your job? For most people, these thoughts focus on several different areas. How does your current job stack up against TEAM KENT?

SALARY, SECURITY AND FLEXIBILITY

Our minimum starting salary is $5 hour, Manager trainees can start at $300 a week or more (depending on experience.) Our company offers stable employment year-round. If you aren't getting enough hours (at least 40) at your current job, WE CAN GIVE THEM TO YOU! If you want to work part-time, we can work with you to tailor-make a schedule that meets your needs! Our Kent Kwiks are open 7 days a week, with most open 24 hours a day.

BENEFITS

We offer medical, dental and life insurance to our full-time Team Members. We have paid vacations, a sick pay plan, college tuition reimbursement, and a profit sharing plan. There are also incentive programs available that allow you to earn extra money on a quarterly basis!

CAREER OPPORTUNITIES

95% of our Managers started at the entry-level and received the training necessary to become successful at running a small business. We offer continual classroom education in customer service and personal leadership skills. You can tell the difference high-quality training makes when you come into one of our Kent Kwiks.

SO HOW DO WE MEASURE UP?

Where will you be one year from now if you stay with your present company? With Kent, the chances are very high that you could be running one of our locations, making in the mid to upper $20's, plus bonuses! If all of this interests you, the first step is to pick up an application at any one of our Kent Kwiks, complete it, and bring it to our Midland area office (3314 No. Loop 250) between 8 A.M. and 3 P.M. Monday - Friday. If you live in Odessa, we take applications at 809 So. Crane Hwy. On Tuesdays at 9 A.M. and Saturdays at 10 A.M. You will then take a battery of tests and questionnaires which give us the information we need to determine if you have the customer service attitudes, math skills and work ethics required to be successful in our business. We also do criminal and credit background checks, and a drug test is required. Relocation within our operating areas may be available.

If you see your CashBack Card account number here, you've won a $10 CashBack Card rebate check from the Midland Reporter-Telegram. Use it just like cash at any participating CashBack Card merchant. To find out how to claim your prize, call 688-2700, Monday- Friday, 8 a.m. - 5 p.m., within seven days of publication. There are $5,550 in prizes, 456 winners - five every day. With a little luck, you could be one of them. Enter the Second Chance Sweepstakes for unclaimed prizes. See the rules below for details.

Midland Reporter-Telegram CashBack Game Rules

No purchase is required to play or win a prize in the Midland Reporter-Telegram CashBack Game. There are 456 winners, $5,550 in prizes including a $1,000 grand prize. Any U.S. resident, 18 years of age or older can enter except employees of The Hearst Newspapers and CashBack Card Inc., their promotion agencies and members of employees' immediate families.

How to play. If your CashBack Card number matches the number in the Midland Reporter-Telegram Classified pages, you win a $10 CashBack Card rebate check. Use it to buy anything you wish at any participating CashBack Card merchant. If you don't have a CashBack Card, you can get one by subscribing for 13 weeks or more to the Midland Reporter-Telegram. Call 688-2700 to subscribe.

If you have misplaced your CashBack Card, call 688-2700. We will send a replacement card without cost.

But you don't need a CashBack Card to enter the CashBack Card Second Chance Sweepstakes and by entering you could win one of the unclaimed daily prizes for the CashBack Card Game grand prize, a $1,000 CashBack Card rebate check. Use them to buy anything you wish at any participating CashBack Card merchant.

Here is how to enter the CashBack Card Game Second Chance Sweepstakes: Hand print your complete name and address and a daytime phone number on the CashBack Card Game Second Chance Sweepstakes entry form or on a 3" x 5" plain piece of paper and mail to: CashBack Card, Second Chance Sweepstakes, P.O. Box 1650, Midland, TX 79702-1650, so that the entry arrives before the deadline, June 16, 1996. Enter as often as you wish but mail only one entry per envelope.

How to claim a prize: Each day, March 18-June 16, 1996, five different randomly-selected CashBack Card numbers will appear in Midland Reporter-Telegram Classified Ads. If the number on your CashBack Card matches the one in the newspaper, you win that prize provided you claim the prize within one week of publication. Claim your prize Monday-Friday, 9 a.m.- 4 p.m. at the Midland Reporter-Telegram office, 201 East Illinois, Midland, or call 688-2700.

Winners may be required to sign and return an affidavit of Eligibility/ Release of Liability/Prize Acceptance. The acceptance of a prize constitutes permission to use the winner's name or likeness or both for the purpose of advertising, promotion and trade without further compensation to the winner.

All prizes will be awarded. Except for the grand prize, winners can collect only one prize. No responsibility is accepted for any lost, delayed, illegible, incomplete, mutilated, postage due or misdirected entries. Entries become the property of the Midland Reporter-Telegram. None will be returned. Federal, state, and local taxes, if any, are the responsibility of prize winners. Decisions of the judges in all matters pertaining to the CashBack Game are final and binding on all participants and the sponsors reserve the right to modify the rules at any time. Odds of winning depend on the number of entries received. Void where prohibited. ©1996 Midland Reporter-Telegram. All rights reserved.

Vicky Garrett

Being in real estate means far more than coordinating the sale of houses. Sure, that's the bottom line for some, but I believe homes are unique commodities that are not only a major financial investment but also a representation of a family's lifestyle, plans and future. It's important to me to understand my client's goals and help them navigate a route to that destination...buyers and sellers!
It's that perspective that drove me to achieve the designation of Certified Residential Specialist (CRS)...a level of education and expertise reached by only 4% of Realtors in the nation.

* State licensed Real Estate Broker since 1979
* Practicing in Midland since 1988
* Average 62 Real Estate transactions per year
* Certified Residential Specialist (CRS)
* Graduate of the Realtor Institute (GRI)
* Member of the local, state and national Boards of Realtors

Lisa Peterson of Advance Food Company points to some of her company's low-fat versions of chicken-fried steak and other traditional favorites.

To entice children to eat their school lunches, Fishery Products International created Sea Wonders — fish formed into fun shapes.

Staff Writer

Remember the good ol' days, when your school lunches were served by grouchy-looking women in hair nets who liked to glop mashed potatoes the consistency and color of Elmer's glue onto your plate? Remember gray vegetables? Remember that old favorite, Mystery Meat? Remember when the only good thing about school lunches was the milk — that came in a carton from somewhere else?

Well guess what — this is the '90s, and your kids won't stand for that. Neither will be food service professionals who are preparing their lunches.

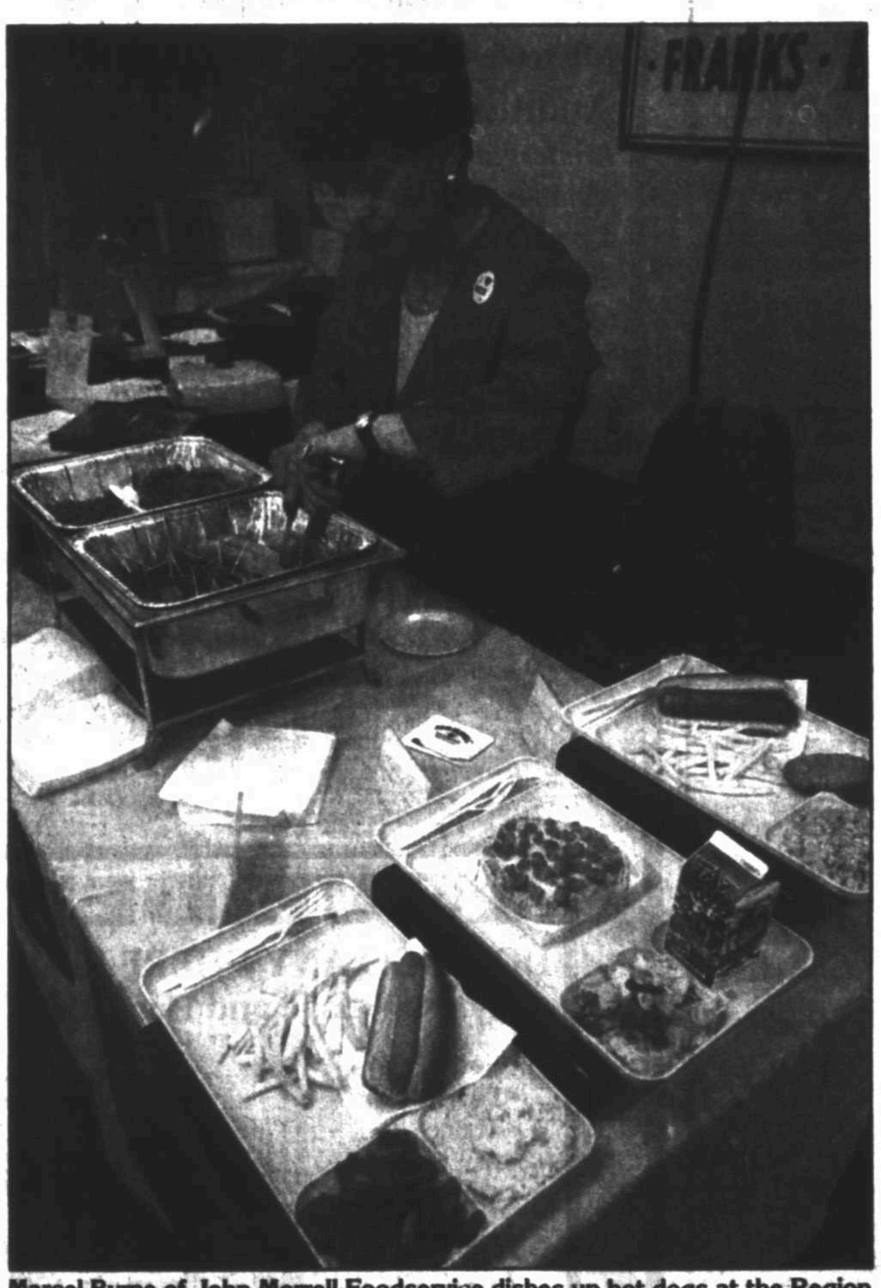

Today's school children may not be smarter than their parents were, but they are more savvy consumers, and if something doesn't look good and taste good, they won't eat it.

That was the reason behind the recent "Puttin' on the Glitz in '96" Marketing Fair, presented at Region 18 Education Service Center at Midland International Airport. Leanda Thurston, registered and licensed dietitian and child nutrition specialist for the center, said about 120 school food service professionals from all over the state attended the event, which featured vendor booths displaying signs, decorations, promotional materials, new equipment, vending/concessions, and "foods with mar-

Parade of Homes is recommended way to spend this afternoon

By Marilyn McKnight Harrison

As a pleasant way to spend a Sunday afternoon, we recommend the Midland Junior Woman's Club's 27th annual Parade of Homes scheduled from 1 to 5 p.m. today.

McKnight-Harrison

The homes of Beth and Scott Dufford, Janice and Dr. Bobby Henry, Tammy and Paul West and Mary Lou and Mark Wilson will be featured on the tour.

This year, The Kelsey Logan Angel Fund, D.A.R.E. and ADDAPT will benefit from the event.

Tickets will not be sold at the door, but they may still be obtained by calling tour chairman Suzanne (Mrs. Michael) Cates, co-chairman Sheila (Mrs. Tommy) Vineyard, or ticket chairman Janie (Mrs. Tim) Dwyer.

As a charter member of the club, we can recall the first Parade of Homes held in 1969 and wondering what the response might be. Would we give a "party" and no one would come? Tickets sold for $1.00, and our best recollection is that between 200 and 300 persons turned out.

We needn't have worried, though. The event has continued to grow over the years, and last year attracted 1,150 tourgoers and raised approximately $22,000 from ticket sales and sponsors.

Prizes have always been given to the highest ticket seller. Although gift certificates to premier Midland shops are the coveted prizes these days, we were pleased with our "reward" for selling the most tickets that first year — a wig, which was a popular fashion item of the day.

WINTER-LIKE WEATHER changed a number of plans the Friday before Easter, among them the outdoor cookout scheduled at the home of Jan Mouton.

Needless to say, the party, which was held to coincide with the Easter visit here of former Midlanders Deborah and Phillip Guest, was moved indoors.

The guests of honor, who now reside in Lafayette, Ind., were treated to a West Texas meal featuring barbecued brisket and all the trimmings.

Others present were Sherrie and Steve Rogers; Sharron and J.D. Webster and daughters, Margaret Webster and Tina Williams; Michelle Smith, James McCleary, Don Merriman and the Guests' daughters, Brandie and Alicia Guest.

A SURPRISE BABY SHOWER on April 1 honored Tia (Mrs. Kirk) Branum.

Held at the home of Linda (Mrs. Michael) Melson, the party also was hosted by Candace (Mrs. Kevin) McCarthy, Dyan (Mrs. Rod) Bramwell, Barbara (Mrs. Richard) Coe, Susie (Mrs. Roy) Fulsom, and Angela (Mrs. Cliff) Hines.

The patio was decorated with spring flowers and surrounded by yellow bows. Yellow table coverings also added a colorful touch.

Among those seen at the gathering were Sarah (Mrs. Lowell) Branum, Christi Branum and Pam Branum.

GLADYS OGLE, now residing in Midland, celebrated her 100th birthday recently.

An annual birthday party and family reunion was held in Mrs. Ogle's honor at the home of her granddaughter, Candyce Drummond and her husband, Steve, with whom she resides.

A clever four color, six page invitation designed by Candyce was sent to relatives and a seated dinner was provided for the 38 who came to celebrate.

Tables were set formally in the home to accommodate 26 adults, and the remaining 12 grandchildren, nieces and nephews were seated on the enclosed patio, which was decorated with hanging baskets of flowers, pink tablecloths and teal, plum and pink dinnerware.

In addition to the Drummonds and their daughter, Tiffany, the Midland family members present were Joann, Jill and Jody Nolen; Bert and Oweta Cornelius; Gordon, Donna, Kathy and Karie Cornelius; Opal Woodward; Yvonne Johnson, and Tommy and Katherine Woodward.

Mrs. Ogle, who was born on April 1, 1896, has resided in Midland since March of 1995. She was a longtime resident of Big Spring.

FOOD: School meals made appealing

ketable appeal; " cafeteria remake sessions with a food industry design consultant; and a multimedia presentation highlighting new and successful merchandising techniques designed for school food service departments.

IN OTHER WORDS, information to help school cafeterias become more customer-friendly for the children of the '90s.

Adele Balesh, food service coordinator for Canutillo District, located just outside El Paso, has been in the business for 13 years. Like most school food service professionals, she is looking for ways to serve appealing lunches that children will eat and stay within her budget at the same time.

"I got a lot of neat ideas" from the marketing fair, she said, including opening a bakery to tempt palates, serving finger foods such as pizza and burgers, and using paper cups and plates to cut costs.

"I have a problem with losing trays and silver (that accidentally get thrown away), so we might as well" use paper, she said, adding that from an ecological standpoint, "paper is OK, Styrofoam is not."

Children's food preferences are basically clear, Ms. Balesh said. "In our district, they will eat a good stew (on a cold day) or a good ethnic meal, but it's got to be good. I give them (the students) credit here — they know what's good."

She also plans to make the cafeteria itself a more appealing place, Ms. Balesh said. "I'm proud of the way we cook ... I need to do something with (fixing up) that drab place."

The changes she would like make in her school's lunch program will be a challenge, but a welcome one. "I'm going to try to do it (make the changes) without increasing my budget. We want to continue to be self-supporting."

As food and nutrition specialist with the Dallas Independent School District, Michelle Powe has to help plan nutritious lunches for thousands of students in 186 schools, which will jump to 202 schools for the 1996-97 school year.

"What we are trying to do is get feedback from the children," she said, in an effort to reorganize the menu for next year, "hoping to be more in tune with what they (the students) like to eat."

One way getting this feedback is "going out to the schools and having them taste some of the (new) foods" the food service professionals are creating.

Once again, budget limitations come into play. "We're on a bid system," Ms. Powe said. Once the bid for the school year is accepted, the budget is in place and the menus are set. Then, she added, "you try to be more creative with what you've got."

PLEASING THEIR young customers — while providing healthy nutrition for them — is a priority for Ms. Powe and her co-workers. "Children are very knowledgeable and know what they like," she said. "We in the food service have to be more in tune with that.

"We're always looking for ways to improve our product," Ms. Powe said. Included in those possible ways of appealing more to children are establishing bakeries and pizzarias in the school cafeterias, she added.

On hand to help food service professionals learn more ways to appeal to their customers was Frank Kohler of Your Favorite Producers, a California-based marketing firm.

"Our goal is to make school lunches 'socially acceptable'," he said. "When you go to McDonald's, you go because it's a socially acceptable place to go."

School lunches have been available for decades, Kohler said. "The school lunch program in the United States is 50 years old," having been established during the Truman administration, when it was "discovered that kids in school were not physically fit enough to serve in the armed forces. It started as a federal program under President Truman."

As a federal program, school lunches are required to fulfill a certain amount of daily nutritional requirements, he said. "The federal government mandates that school lunches must fit certain nutritional guidelines."

So, Kohler said, school lunches are "healthy meals — if they (the children) eat it."

And that wasted food that children won't eat may be the biggest obstacle food service professionals have to overcome, which is where marketing techniques come in. Using kid-friendly foods and beverages — including a new line of milk-based, milkshake-type products and fruit juices with favorite cartoon characters on the labels — choices of foods they like and colorful school lunch menus complete with word games and fun facts, Kohler and his company hope to help give school lunches a new, better-tasting, more socially acceptable reputation.

AFTER ALL, there's no nutrition in a meal that isn't eaten.

And that was the reason for the marketing fair. School food service professionals who attended digested a lot of helpful information and had fun at the same time — which is the same thing they hope to encourage students to do when they eat school lunches. Ms. Thurston of Region 18 Education Service Center said the event was very successful.

"They (food service personnel) got some information on resources and how to market their programs, so that they are more like the franchise or restaurant down the street," Ms. Thurston explained.

THE FOOD SERVICE professionals also learned "simple decorating," or how "to make a pleasant atmosphere," she added. After all, no one wants to eat in a depressing environment.

"They got to talk about eye appeal (of foods), atmosphere (of place), color of walls — get the art department of the school to paint murals on the walls; mount simple posters, but make it appealing.

"They want to try to make school (cafeterias) look like a business, which they are," Ms. Thurston said.

Presentation, atmosphere and eye appeal are just as important as taste when it comes to serving lunches to children, she said. "We want to get across that it might be a little extra work to decorate, but it's eventually worth it.

"You can give them (school students) nutritious food, but if they throw it in the trash, it's not going to help their nutrition."

"You establish your eating patterns when you are young," she said. "How you eat now affects you years later. It's a hard habit to break.

"There is a lot of good food out there (in school cafeterias), the schools are doing good things, but they have gotten a bad rep," Ms. Thurston said. Overcoming that image is a challenge for school food service professionals all over the country. "We're trying to help them learn the way to that."

Aquariums are a hobby that always entertains

By Diana E Lundin
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Pat McLean sometimes stares for hours at her brilliant array of tropical fish, watching them swim leisurely through or dart unpredictably into the crevices of coral in her 125-gallon aquarium.

"It's very relaxing," said McLean, a La Canada Flintridge resident who has percula clowns, high-fin snappers, twin-spotted wrasses and flame angels among the 23 fish she and her husband, Don, keep in their saltwater tank.

"They really have personalities. When they eat, when you see them really in action, it's real entertaining. Sometimes we just turn off the lights and watch them." As does their white Persian cat, Kasha, who sits on her own stool near the tank and becomes mesmerized by the aquatic activity.

The McLeans are having a love affair with their custom-built aquarium and the fish that call it home.

And more people are joining them in the hobby.

"It's growing at a tremendous rate, especially in the last 10 years," said psychologist Lynne Laurita, president of the Marine Aquarium Society of Los Angeles and co-owner of Aqua Trends in Canoga Park. "The development of the living reef ecosystem has really helped to spur on a new level of enthusiasm for the marine hobbyist."

The ecosystem is a complete, ecologically balanced biosystem, and it's what Laurita and her husband, Andrew Lee, have in their home.

"We re-create a piece of the living reef in an aquarium," Lee said. "Everything is alive ... literally alive, to the point it generates nearly all of its own food and eliminates its own waste. All we're doing is moving water through it."

They also add light and manipulate temperature to re-create an outdoor environment. "It's cutting-edge," said Lee, who co-owns Aqua Trends with Laurita.

Slightly more than a year old, the Marine Aquarium Society's 75 members work to educate themselves not only on fish and aquarium maintenance, but on political and ecological issues facing hobbyists, including the legitimacy of collecting certain species.

"There may not be a hobby 10 years down the road," Laurita said. "It's being threatened by certain environmental groups. That's what worries us."

Don McLean had an aquarium years ago, and when he decided to take up the hobby again, he chose a different approach. He has a custom-built tank and regular service by an aquarium specialist. His wife loves it that way.

Much higher up the evolutionary and financial scale than the average goldfish bowl, custom-made aquariums allow for a kind of living art to be a dramatic focal point of any room.

A small custom installation can begin at about $1,500 and run to $35,000 or more, depending on how elaborate the design is and what kind of fish will be collected.

One of the more sophisticated and expensive aquariums built by John Farrell and Jim Stevenson of Fish Art in Chatsworth was for a hillside recording studio that houses a ray, two California leopard sharks and an Australian black-tip reef shark in refrigerated water.

Farrell also recently designed and installed a 500-gallon circular tank for a newly restored 1930s Spanish-style mansion in Bel-Air. Encased in a dark wood, the aquarium is 5 feet in diameter, with some 40 tiny blue damsels swimming in it as "test" fish to determine when it is ready to add more tropicals. New fish are introduced slowly as the biology and chemistry of the tank become an ideal aquatic environment.

Making weekly visits to the aquariums, Farrell can tell which of his customers spend time with their fish and which don't.

"The friendliest fish are in a pediatrician's office. The kids are looking at them all day," he said.

Fish Art and Aqua Trends not only design the aquariums but come in at least weekly to rotate coral discolored by algae and to feed some of the fish with a more exotic diet, like the lion fish who won't eat anything but goldfish or, if they're not swimming too quickly, damsels that soon become distressed.

In any event, watching how the action shapes up inside an aquarium seems to hook anyone who gets near a tank.

Light touch can be budget bright

Hearst News Service

Making a home look lighter and brighter is often as simple as paring down and putting things away. For example:

Add slipcovers in a light color. In addition to concealing the dark or drab, they have that softly rumpled "British Country Home" look that's so chic.

The slipcovers of the '90s can be found in discount stores for less than $100. And almost all are in soft, washable fabrics.

If slipcovers are too expensive, cover the throw pillows with a fresh fabric. Don't sew? Wrap or tie fabric around the pillow forms.

Roll up the rugs and leave the floors bare.

If floor coverings are a must, switch to cotton throw rugs or a big sissal area rug.

Undress the windows, if it can be done without sacrificing privacy.

If window-coverings are necessary, consider sheers, or one of the sheer new roller shades.

Clean out the fireplace and put a decorative screen or a leafy green plant on the hearth.

Put away silver, brass and other accessories that look wintry and heavy.

SEEDS FOR THOUGHT

Renovating landscape requires planning, effort

By Deborah A. Benge Frost

At this time of year many home owners find themselves thinking of renovating their lawns. Bumps, dips, thin spots and a mixed hodge-podge of many grasses can drive most of us to that point. It may seem like the logical thing to do, but to be successful you need to find out the proper steps to lawn renovation.

Benge Frost

How much of the landscape should be lawn is an important question to ask yourself and one rarely asked. For balance, beauty and function, the lawn area shouldn't be more than about a third of the landscape. This rule of thumb, but landscapes should designed roughly in thirds: one third landscaped area, one third hardscape area (walks, patios, decks, drives, etc.) and one third lawn or ground cover area.

Unfortunately, many of our landscapes are 60 percent to 85 percent lawn. Why is this unfortunate? Think about it. The grass takes more maintenance, water, labor and money than any other plant in the landscape. By reducing the amount of turf area, you can reduce the amount of water, mowing, fertilizer, pest control and labor that's going strictly to your grass.

What do you replace all this turf area with? Decks, patios, mulched areas, ground covers and beautiful sweeping landscaped beds. Turf is a very important aspect of the landscape, but we need to focus on how to reduce and utilize the limited amounts of grass better.

When your are renovating your lawn or installing a new one, is the perfect time to decide on how much turf you actually need. Renovating the lawn is a big task, and requires several steps for you to be successful.

Actually, lawn renovation is basically the same as new lawn preparation, except you need to kill the existing weeds and grasses. Probably one of the best herbicides for ridding your lawn of grasses and weeds is glyphosate, a common herbicide packaged by several companies which will safely kill growing plants without harming soil. The only problem is that weeds and grasses must be actively growing for it to work. So, wait until your grass greens up and encourage it to do so by watering and fertilizing. Glyphosate will kill all green growing plants, so don't allow it to drift onto any desirable trees and shrubs.

After the existing plants are dead you can begin to prepare the soil. Soil preparation is like a foundation for your lawn — the lawn will be only as good as your foundation.

The first step is to remove all large rocks, stumps and building debris. Then determine what kind of soil you have. A sandy loam soil is ideal for lawns, but if you don't have this perfect soil, improve the soil you do have by adding organic matter, especially if you have very heavy or sandy soil. A 3-inch layer of peat, compost, grass clippings or other composted organic matter will do. Mix this into the top 4 to 6 inches of soil with repeated passes of a rototiller.

If soil must be brought in to raise the existing grade, be sure that it is a good quality top soil (free of noxious weed seeds or parts), such as nutsedge (nutgrass), Johnson grass, purple horse nettle and so forth.

Adding one soil type on top of another can cause some serious drainage problems. To keep this from happening add 2 to 3 inches of the new soil to the lawn and rototill it into the existing soil. This mixing of soil types at the interface will reduce or eliminate the potential drainage problems. Then if still more soil is needed it can added.

A soil test taken two to three weeks before the renovation will pinpoint what nutrients need to be added to your soil. Without test results, all anyone can do is guess. A new lawn will probably need a complete fertilizer with the ratio of 3-1-2 or 4-1-2. Examples of these are 15-5-10 or 12-4-8. An old established lawn that has been fertilized on a regular basis, may only need nitrogen which can be rototilled into the top 4 to 6 inches after the soil is graded.

For proper drainage, grade the area away from building foundations, walks and drives. The drop should be a 1 foot for every 50 to 100 surface feet for drainage. Smooth out highs and lows with a float fashioned from long heavy ladder laid flat on the ground, or build a temporary one out of two-by- fours in a square shape. Both methods may need extra weight for better cutting and filling; do this by adding cross ties or cinder blocks to the float. A rope secured to the float will allow you to pull or loop it around your waist and drag it across the lawn.

Pulling the float across, perpendicularly and diagonally across the lawn, will begin to cut and fill the highs and lows. Rolling the area with an empty roller, such as the rollers used to lay grass sod, will reveal even more humps and bumps that can be corrected with the float or a hand rake. Final grading with a hand rake will help prepare a fine seed bed. Walks, drives, patios and mow strips should be slightly above the soil grade for easiest maintenance and less mess.

Now you are ready for seeding, sprigging, plugging or sodding.

SEEDING

Seed should be good quality with a high percent germination and purity. This information is required by law and can be found on the bag label. Seed can hand-sown, but a hand seeder or spreader will give you more uniform results. Regardless of the method, apply one half the seed going in one direction, then apply the remainder in the right angles to the first application.

Very light hand raking can be done to just barely work the seed into the soil. Care should be taken not to rake it too deep. A top dressing of peat moss or similar material will help shading and holding moisture until seeds germinate. After seeding and light raking, an empty or weighted roller can be rolled over the lawn to give you good seed/soil contact. These two steps make a tremendous difference in germination. Seed should germinate in seven to 21 days, depending on conditions and grass species.

SPRIGGING OR PLUGGING

Sprigging is the setting out of plants, runners, rhizomes or small sod blocks (2 to 4 inches square) in rows or furrows, or broadcasting the sprigs on the soil surface. Plants, runners or rhizomes set in rows will give a quicker and more uniform cover than sod blocks or plugs; however, broadcasting sprigs usually provides the fastest cover for bermuda or zoysia.

Lawns should be sprigged in the spring or early summer, but they can be plugged any time during the growing season if you keep them moist. Sprigging is used primarily for establishing hybrid bermuda lawns.

Sod blocks or sprigs should be spaced based on the rate of growth and your rate of patience or impatience. St. Augustine grass plugs 2- to 4-inch diameter planted on 2-foot centers should cover within three months if adequately watered and fertilized. Bermudagrass sprigged at three to five bushels per 1000 square feet should cover within two months; zoysia may require an entire growing season or two. After sprigging you can top dress with a thin layer of topsoil or mulch. Rolling with an empty or filled roller will provide good sprig or root and soil contact, and will hasten the rooting and establishment period.

SODDING

The term "sodding" means laying blocks of sod end to end. The advantages of solid sodding include an instant lawn, reduced erosion, fewer weed problems and less watering. The only problem is the higher initial cost.

When sodding a lawn, lay the sod blocks or rolls like bricks on a smooth surface that has been firmed. The surface should be free of footprints, stones, depressions and mounds. After the sod is laid, roll or tamp lightly and keep it moist until it is well rooted. Do not overwater. Top-dressing with a sandy loam topsoil that is free of weed seed, stones and debris will help smooth the lawn.

When it comes to a healthy, attractive lawn, take every necessary step to build a good foundation. These are the steps that will help you build that good foundation that will result in a good lawn. Remember, it's important to have a nice lawn, but don't put in a football field if all you need is a bit of lawn for some recreation and to tie your landscape together.

DEAR ABBY

Juror can't think of justice if worried about work

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: This is an important issue that needs to be addressed, and I can't think of a better place than in your column. It concerns jury duty.

Van Buren

It seems that too many good citizens find a way to get out of jury duty. The fact is, they cannot afford to be on a jury. I know I can't. I'm a single parent with three children. Unfortunately, their father is a deadbeat dad.

I have a fairly good job, but if I don't work, I don't get paid. Most of my friends are in the same situation. The companies they work for do not pay employees when they are absent for jury duty.

Abby, the jury system is so outdated it is pathetic. By paying little more than pocket change, the courts automatically exclude a large number of the population. I would really like to serve on a jury, but if it means I won't be able to pay the rent, I must decline.

Sorry, I must remain ... ANONYMOUS IN LONG BEACH, CALIF.

DEAR ANONYMOUS: I hear you loud and clear. You are right on target. The idea of having professional jurors has been discussed in the media lately. I understand that some countries already have them. Readers, I welcome your input.

DEAR ABBY: A recent letter in your column about what and what not to say to someone who has suffered the loss of a loved one has finally prompted me to write to you.

My mom died of lung cancer two years ago, and on more than one occasion, after learning that lung cancer was the cause of death, people would ask me if she had been a smoker.

Abby, please tell your readers not to ask that question. True, they can THINK it — or ask someone else —but don't ask the grieving family members. It makes it sound like her death was justified.

Our family realized what cigarettes were doing to her, but it didn't change her suffering, or how we felt about her.

By the way, she had quit smoking more than a year before her lung cancer was discovered. But by then, her body had been much too badly damaged to recover. You may use my name. — PATTY HULL, ANDOVER, MINN.

DEAR PATTY: My condolences on the loss of your beloved mother. I am ashamed to admit it, but in the past, when I learned that someone had lung cancer, I would also ask, "Was he (or she) a smoker?"

Never again will I ask that question. Thank you, Patty. You taught me something today.

DEAR ABBY: My marriage was the result of a letter-writing campaign linking civilians and service people, much like your Operation Dear Abby.

Perhaps learning of our good fortune may encourage other readers to continue participation in such programs.

To illustrate the importance of personal mail to servicepeople, may I recount an incident that happened when I was a regimental sergeant major of the 505th Parachute Infantry during the Battle of the Bulge?

We were fighting in difficult terrain and weather when the Christmas mail arrived. Short of transportation to get it to the 14 companies, we sent the following message: "We have mail and rations, but can send only one of them today. Which shall it be?"

Every unit replied, "Send the mail!" — HOWARD P. MELVIN, REGT. SGT. MAJOR, WWII

READERS: To send mail to servicepeople stationed in Bosnia, address letters and parcels (preferably no larger than a shoebox) to: ANY SERVICE MEMBER, OPERATION JOINT ENDEAVOR, APO AE 09397 (for Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps land forces); ANY SERVICE MEMBER, OPERATION JOINT ENDEAVOR, FPO AE 09398 (for Navy and Marine Corps personnel aboard ship).

To order "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054-0447. (Postage is included.)

Midland girl chosen to be finalist in scholarship program

Staff Reports

Susan Thompson, 14, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Brock Thompson of Midland, has been selected a finalist in the 1996 West Texas National Teen-Ager Scholarship Program, to be presented April 19-21 at Wayland Baptist University in Plainview. Winner will compete in the Texas state finals in June at Texas Christian University in Fort Worth. State winner will compete in the 25th annual Miss National Teen-Ager Scholarship Program in August in Nashville, Tenn.

Regional winner and four runners-up in two age divisions — 13-15 and 16-18 — will be named. Winner of each division will receive a $1,000 savings bond, room and board at the Texas state finals and a full-tuition modeling scholarship worth $1,000 from John Robert Powers.

Senior West Texas National Teen-Ager will receive a $16,000 tuition scholarship to Mary Hardin Baylor University, $25,000 tuition scholarship to Wayland Baptist University, $16,000 tuition scholarship to Liberty University and $8,000 tuition scholarship to the University of Charleston. Junior West Texas National Teen-Ager will receive a $4,000 tuition scholarship to the University of Charleston. West Texas National Teen-Ager Scholarship Program awards more than $200,000 tuition scholarships from various universities during competition weekend. Every contestant will receive a $500 tuition scholarship to Wayland Baptist University, $200 scholarship to John Robert Powers Schools of Modeling and $200 scholarship to Dallas/Fort Worth Barbizon Modeling School.

Each contestant has the option to participate in the Volunteer Community Service Program of the event. Judging will be based on scholastic achievements, leadership ability, communication skills and poise-personality. Either talent or an oral essay may be presented.

Miss Thompson is sponsored by Dr. Curtis Nicholson, Dr. Elvira Burns, Dr. Robert Henry and her family.

Getting more difficult for parents to make the grade

By Erma Bombeck

If all the "innovative teaching techniques" guaranteed to improve education during the last 20 years actually worked, kids could now phone in for instruction. They could press 1 for the teacher, 2 for the school nurse and 3 for the field-trip schedule.

Bombeck

The drop-out rate among parents — yes, parents — has been phenomenal during these two decades. They can't help their kids with homework because they don't understand the questions.

Math is a foreign language to them, and don't even think about talking technology to a couple with a household of clocks that blink.

Possibly the one thing they understood was a report card. "A" was good and "F" was someone who didn't register a heartbeat during class.

But if some states have their way, that is about to change. In Simi Valley, California, a student could present his parents with a card that reads "Emergent."

Not having a clue what "emergent" means, the parent might way, "Well, Cindy, are we pleased with emergent?"

Cindy shrugs her shoulders.

"I don't think you realize what that means," pursues the parent. "Why don't we look it up in the dictionary?"

The dictionary gives them three choices: (a) coming unexpectedly into existence; (b) demanding prompt action; (c) newly created.

They look at one another in silence. Finally, the parent says, "How far off would I be with 'B'?

Had the child done well, the grade would not have been a letter A, but "Early Fluency."

Actually, the new report card would have 160 different ways to evaluate a student, with the emphasis being on building his self-esteem with something more positive than "You're flunking."

Self-esteem is good. Kareem Adbul-Jabbar appears in a TV commercial with a little boy who attends a camp to encourage children to feel good about themseles.

When the kid out-dribbles and out-shoots the basketball star, Kareem walks off the school yard and says, "That's enough self-esteem for one day, Timmy."

Change is also good. An elementary school in Rialto, Calif., has experimented with report card reform three times in the last four years.

My only concern is with keeping parents up-to-speed on these changes. It would behoove teachers to know who they are communicating with and at what level.

There are the mystery-challenged parents who never see the report card, the fool-factor parents who ask their youngster what the grades mean, and the worried parents whose constant fear is that if their kids keep "emerging," they could end up making license plates.

Rug merchant offers design alternatives

By Elaine Louie
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Whenever James Tufenkian, the owner of Tufenkian Tibetan Carpets, a rug manufacturer in Manhattan, looked at design magazines, he was dismayed. "There was nothing on the floors except wood or sisal rugs," he said with slight exaggeration.

Now, he is offering alternatives with Designers' Reserve, a collection of 50 contemporary wool rugs by Kevin Walz, Barbara Barry and Bill Georgis in muted shades including eggplant, celadon and wheat.

There is nothing traditional about these rugs except the way they are manufactured. The irregularities of color and weave are part of their allure. An eggplant shades into rose, a gray into charcoal, a brown into wheat. Straight lines are nonexistent. The rugs, which are made in Nepal from the unbleached wool of Tibetan sheep, are spun and dyed by hand.

"Shadows," in terra cotta, rose and soft grays, is an ode to Rome, said Walz, an American designer who lives in Italy and is inspired by the city's streets of inlaid marble, mosaics and cut stones.

In "Pampa," Georgis also embraced the quirkiness of color and weave. It is a celebration of geometric forms, with elongated gray-green triangles on a crimson background bordered in eggplant.

"Because there's irregularity and charm in the hand-knotted, hand-washed rugs, you can use big expanses of color without it going flat," said Georgis, a Manhattan architect.

Ms. Barry, an interior designer who lives in Los Angeles, designed "Swirls," a rug with caramel-colored shapes against a cream background. What makes it interesting are the textures. The swirls are looped pile but the background is cut.

"As you get closer to the rug," Ms. Barry pointed out, the textures become more apparent.

The rugs start at $3,600 for the smallest (6 by 9 feet), and are available to architects and designers. They can be ordered now for delivery in August. Information: (212) 475-2475.

LIFESTYLE POLICIES

Information for Sunday pages must be in the Lifestyle Department office by 5 p.m. the preceding Monday. For publication in a weekday paper, we must receive the information by noon two days before the information is to be published. For example, an item for Wednesday's paper must be received by noon Monday.

Engagement announcements must appear at least two weeks before the wedding date. Wedding announcements must appear within six weeks of the event. Anniversary announcements — 25th or higher — must be published within six weeks of the anniversary date or celebration.

Announcements of pageant winners will only be published for teenage pageants and older. Photographs will be published only of winners, not runners-up or contestants. These announcements will be published on a space available basis.

All articles must be submitted in writing. Forms for weddings, engagements and anniversaries, only published Sundays, are available in the Lifestyle office. All materials must include the signature and telephone number of the person submitting them.

Photographs may be submitted with wedding and engagement announcements, and with anniversary announcements of 50 years or more, but are not required.

A portrait of the bride-elect or of the future bride and bridegroom together may be submitted with engagement announcements.

Portrait photographs of the bride only or photos of the wedding couple may be submitted with wedding announcements.

A different photo must be submitted for engagement and wedding announcements. Anniversary photos should be current.

Photos should be vertical, black and white, glossy finish, studio portraits. Color pictures may be submitted, but quality reproduction cannot be assured. Snapshots generally are not acceptable and Polaroid shots are not accepted.

The MRT reserves the right to deny publication of any photo due to quality or content.

Photos can be picked up in the Lifestyle Department after publication, or a self-addresses, stamped envelope can be enclosed for the photo to be returned by mail.

There is no charge for publication of photographs and articles.

Value of dollar directly affects many travelers' vacation plans

N.Y. Times News Service

With the possible exception of the weather, no variable in planning for international travel is more subject to uncertainty than the value of the dollar.

Just consider last year. The dollar was hitting new lows against its Japanese, German and French counterparts in the spring, and it seemed unclear when the slide would end.

Then, in the middle of the summer, the dollar started surging in value, in part because the economic outlook for the United States brightened relative to other big countries. A hotel room in Paris that would have cost $200 a night on July 28, when the dollar bought 4.8 francs, would have cost $188 a night six weeks later, when the exchange rate was 5.1 francs. The difference might not seem like much, but over a seven-night stay, it adds up to $84, not pocket change even in a city as expensive as Paris.

Of course, movements in the dollar are not always directly translated into changes in travel costs. Currency values are only one of myriad factors that affect air fares, if they affect them at all. Package tours often hold their advertised prices steady even when the dollar is bouncing up or down. But a strong trend in one direction or another unquestionably filters through to travelers in big ways and small — and over the past several years the dollar has gyrated substantially against many major currencies.

In the last decade the dollar has lost value almost everywhere. After its tumble early last year, though, it has been strengthening, as the American economy has remained stable.

According to the Thomas Cook Group, the world's largest owner of foreign exchange outlets, the dollar had increased 5 percent on average against major European countries in the 12 months to the end of March. Among the biggest changes was the rebound of the dollar against the Japanese yen. The dollar was worth 83 yen last April; at the end of March it was at 106, a gain of 27 percent. During the same period, the dollar rose in value from 6.79 Mexican pesos to 7.55, a gain of 11 percent.

The question now is what to expect for the rest of this year.

It is a tricky question, given that currency values are subject to a host of economic, political and financial market factors that are hard to anticipate. But, like many analysts, Jim Dibe, the vice president for currency trading at Thomas Cook, said the outlook for the dollar is generally good.

"Overall, the scenario is very supportive of the dollar," he said. "There is low inflation, a fairly good economic outlook and politically not as much uncertainty as a while ago. Therefore most people expect the dollar to continue to gain strength, but not a lot of strength."

Dibe said his company has projected that over the next year the dollar's value should gain against French, German, Japanese, Mexican, British and Italian currency. He also said travelers should not make too much of currency fluctuations. Not only are they unpredictable, but they also rarely if ever make an inexpensive country an expensive one, or vice versa.

Three houses to be featured in Stanton's tour of country homes

Staff Reports

STANTON — A tour of country homes is planned for 2-5 p.m. April 21 in Stanton. The homes are all located along FM 829 and can be easily found. Maps will be available at the Dairy Queen in Stanton.

Homes on tour are:

■ Paula and Tee Knox's home, located on the TY Hereford Ranch north of Grady School. The home, including two guest bedrooms, is decorated in furniture and memorabilia from the Knox family's past, including quilts, magazines and a wedding dress from 1926. Family pictures grace the walls, as does a collection of Wayne Baize prints. The master bedroom features a bedspread made at the Jaberwalkie in Fredericksburg.

■ Tish and Jerry Cox's home was built in the middle of cotton fields. The home contains a collection of Early American heritage furniture collected by the couple, and the house even has a porch with a porch swing. Mrs. Cox's collection of china dolls she has painted are displayed in her home.

■ The home of Mike and Beth Black was built in 1948 and restored in 1989 by Tommy Christon. Four generations have lived there. A fireplace containing 15 tons of large rock quarried near San Saba was added when the house was restored. The ranch oak bedroom suite in the guest bedroom was ordered from Bristol, England.

The tour is sponsored by the Martin County Family Community Education Clubs. Tickets are $5 per person.

Northern Ireland can be peaceful

By Audrey Woods

AP Laserphoto

Ruins of Inch Abbey in the countryside near Downpatrick, Northern Ireland, retain the tranquil air important to the Cistercian monks who lived here in the 12th century.

DUNDRUM, Northern Ireland (AP) — Where the Mountains of Mourne run down to the Irish Sea, nature lovers prowl the sand dunes and shorebirds breed in the embrace of Dundrum Bay.

The southeast coast village of Dundrum is strung along the shore of the smaller Inner Bay, and a hill behind rises steeply to the ruined keep of a Norman castle.

On a clear day, the 13th century round tower is the place to begin a visit, with a fine view to the hazy, rounded summits of the Mournes, the rolling green patchwork of the inland countryside, and out across the glistening bay.

Three miles west along the coast road lies Newcastle, one of a handful of seaside resorts on the south coast of County Down.

Further along is Warrenpoint, better known for the Irish Republican Army massacre of 18 British soldiers in 1979 than for its tennis, golf and night life.

This, of course, is Northern Ireland's biggest image problem.

The 1994 cease-fires in the province's sectarian battle, broken by the Irish Republican Army in February, brought relief to the people of Northern Ireland, and foreigners continue to travel unmolested. But the very words Portadown, Newry and Enniskillen summon images of razor wire, roadblocks and grief.

Few outsiders would think of Northern Ireland as the pretty, rural place it is. Most of the province is farmland dotted with hamlets and villages, much like the south of Ireland. The grass is just as green. There are miles of fine coastline and the natives are just as friendly.

What it doesn't have is enough hotel rooms, but the Northern Ireland Tourist Board, which inspects and licenses all accommodation, is encouraging people to open their homes for bed and breakfast. Two hundred have opened since the 1994 cease-fires. Prices average 15 pounds ($22) per person.

The upside of a minimal tourism industry is that foreigners who do visit are treated to a landscape largely free of garish signs and fast-food litter. Fewer giant tour buses hog the gentle bends in the road.

County Down, in the southeast, is just the place for nature lovers, hikers and history hounds. It is dotted with medieval castles and churches, and neolithic burial monuments. There's a bronze age stone circle at Ballynoe, near the uphill-and-down town of Downpatrick.

St. Patrick's reputed grave is in Downpatrick, in the Church of Ireland cathedral graveyard. A permanent exhibit about the 5th century missionary can be seen at the Down Museum along with historical displays.

Less than a mile north, in a curve of the River Quoile, stands the ruin of Inch Abbey. A graceful fragment of the 12th century, it retains the air of seclusion and tranquility valued by the ascetic Cistercian monks who lived there.

The river slides silently by, the air is clear as glass, and the only sound is the gossip of rooks roosting in a tree above the parlor, where the monks were allowed to converse.

The Quoile flows into Strangford Lough, a 15-mile-long sea inlet rich with marine life and water birds. It has six national nature reserves protecting thousands of wildfowl and marine species, including sponges and coral. Common seals breed here, porpoises visit and in winter the lough is an important haven for Icelandic whooper swans, Brent geese and arctic teal.

At Strangford village you can catch a ferry to Portaferry and drive up the east coast of the lough to the National Trust's Mount Stewart house and garden, and to Greyabbey, another medieval Cistercian house. That side of the lough is the narrow Ards Peninsula, scattered with seaside villages and small farms.

Near Strangford on the lough's south shore is whimsical Castle Ward, another National Trust house in a 700-acre park. The 18th century mansion was built with one classical facade to please the owner, and one facade in the trendy "gothick" style to please his wife. The division carried into the room decorations and apparently into the marriage, which ended soon after the house was built. The trust offers two of the estate cottages for vacation rental.

Two other trust cottages can be rented on the shore of Dundrum Inner Bay, at the edge of Murlough Nature Reserve — 938 acres of sand dunes that extend to the foothills of the Mournes and support varieties animals and plants. The oldest dunes, 50 to 60 feet high, are at least 5,000 years old.

From the kitchen window of one of the whitewashed stone cottages — about 10 feet from the water's edge — you can watch wading birds forage at low tide. In autumn, as the sky turns pink with the setting sun, you can listen to the Brent geese socializing while you settle in front of a peat fire.

Dundrum is a good center for walkers. There are paths through the dunes, and two national forest parks are about five miles away.

Castlewellan park, to the north, has a lake, pony-trekking, campsites and the national arboretum.

Tollymore Park, to the west, is on the east slopes of the Mournes. There are miles of forest trails, and the River Shimna rushes through, roaring over rocks and under bridges. Unambitious walkers can sit on hillside benches and watch Ireland's constantly changing skies cast patterns on the purple, green and gold mountains.

The Mournes are traversed by only a couple of main roads, so hikers have miles of unspoiled routes to such places as Silent Valley, Red Moss, Moolieve and Wee Binnian.

You could tackle The Ulster Way, a 560-mile route around six northern counties that passes through the Mournes.

Or you could just go to the nearest pub and think about it very carefully over a foaming pint of Guinness.

Information listed to help plan trip to Northern Ireland

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Here is some useful information if you're going to Northern Ireland:

■ No visas are required for U.S. and Canadian citizens.

■ Currency is British sterling.

■ Most U.S. and Canadian airlines don't schedule flights direct to Belfast but connect via London. Flights from London on British Airways and British Midland, among others, take less than an hour. An airport bus leaves twice an hour from Belfast International Airport. The 40-minute journey to Belfast costs 3.50 pounds. ($5.75).

■ There are direct North American flights to Dublin. And six trains each way connect Dublin with Belfast on weekdays. There are fewer weekend trains. The two-hour trip costs 14 pounds ($21).

■ Rental cars are available at the international airport and City Airport from the major chains and a local firm, McCausland. This is expensive, so it's worth investigating fly-and-drive packages. Drive on the left.

■ Ulsterbus has a province-wide network and offers special one-week fares.

■ In Belfast, bed and breakfast accommodation is clustered around the campus of The Queen's University, a very attractive area handy for the Botanical Gardens and The Ulster Museum.

■ The Northern Ireland Tourist Board has hotel and bed and breakfast listings. It has two North American offices:

New York, N.Y. 10176
(212) 922-0101

111 Avenue Road
Suite 450
Toronto M5R 3J8
(416) 925-6368

■ The National Trust's Holiday Cottages brochure is available through the trust's U.S. affiliate, The Royal Oak Foundation, at 285 West Broadway, New York, N.Y. 10013, (212) 966 6565, fax (212) 966 6619 and costs $5. The brochure is free to members of the foundation. Membership, at $40 a year for individuals and $65 for a family, allows free admission to the National Trust's houses and gardens throughout the United Kingdom.

■ If you have Irish forebears you want to learn more about, a good place to start is The Public Record Office: 66 Balmoral Ave., Belfast BT9 6NY. It's best to start inquiries in advance and bring as many names and dates as possible with you. The Ulster Historical Foundation is at 12 College Square East, Belfast BT1 6DD.

Cooking skills 'whipped' into shape

By Christine Temin
N.Y. Times News Service

The only other time I took a cooking course, it was Mrs. Dakin's home ec. class at Millbury Memorial High. Mrs. Dakin taught me how to carve grapefruit baskets, how to make Five Can Casserole and how to treat an egg. "Girls," she'd say, in those days when home ec. wasn't an option for boys, "always wash your eggs before you break them. Remember where they came from."

I succeeded in blotting out the above advice and thought I'd turned myself into a pretty good cook, until I enrolled in Le Petit Blanc Ecole de Cuisine, the famous cooking school at the 15th-century Oxfordshire manse-turned-hotel, Le Manoir aux Quat'Saisons.

There were snickers on both sides of the Atlantic. Here, because Americans think British food doesn't go beyond toad-in-the-hole and bangers and mash. (That's wrong, by the way.) There, because I told people at the school that I could already cook and would be bypassing the first and second stages of the course and moving right to level three, the highest.

I LOST THAT battle. Everybody starts at stage one, and I was lucky to start at all: There is nearly a yearlong wait for the weeklong courses. I'd signed up in early February for a course in mid-December. The demand reflects the eminence of Le Manoir's proprietor, the maverick, largely self-taught French chef Raymond Blanc, owner of two Michelin stars, the man who has taught many of the best chefs in Britain and who, more than anyone else, has contributed to what amounts to a food revolution in that country.

In my week at Le Manoir I barely glimpsed Monsieur Blanc, who flitted through the kitchen only briefly. The course was actually taught by an Englishman, Clive Fretwell, who, at the introductory powwow on Sunday night, announced, "I do not teach recipes. I teach technique. Everything is designed for you to make at home. I can mask flavors or dilute them or bring them out. I play with food. This week is playing with flavors."

Clive then presented the class of eight — seven Brits and me — with a red-covered loose-leaf notebook that would be our bible for the duration. In addition to recipes and the all-important charts that convert Celsius into Fahrenheit and grams and liters into cups, it included a schedule that started every day at 8:30 and went until 4:30, with breaks for lunch and tea.

One exciting aspect of the course was its setting in the midst of a real working restaurant kitchen, with a staff of 32 gliding gracefully around one another, like elegant tango dancers, in the extremely congested space. We students slid around on the wet floors and tried to mimic the balancing acts of the pros.

Le Manoir is not about suffering. After class, students luxuriate in large, chintz-upholstered bedrooms with Jacuzzi-equipped bathrooms, and while students eat the food they've made themselves for lunch, each evening involves an extravagant dinner prepared by the pros, each course accompanied by an appropriate wine.

There was a masseuse available to soothe bodies aching from eight hours of standing in a hot kitchen, and we were told that there was even a hairdresser on call, an option no one exercised. Most important, there was a charming young chef-in-training named Andrew Topping. Andrew, who has my home phone number in case he wants to visit, did the washing up. Not one of us scoured a pan or even rinsed a glass all week.

WE WERE KITTED out with white chef's jackets and industrial-strength red aprons, but not with the most picturesque element of the chef's traditional garb, the tall toque. Our attire produced humorous reactions from fellow Manoir guests who weren't enrolled in the school and regularly mistook us for the paid help. "Could I have another drink?" a guest asked one of my classmates. "Would you like me to leave my room open so you can clean it?" another inquired.

Then there was the more gracious "Thanks for a really great meal." I kept hoping for a tip.

One reason I'd enrolled in a cooking school in England rather than France was that my French is dismal. I found, though, that there was a language barrier between America and England as well. What's arugula to us is rocket, a perversion of the French "roquette," to them. They pronounce shallots as shaLLOTS. They also pronounce the "h" in "herb," sounding as if they've taken Henry Higgins' Hertford-Hereford-Hampshire elocution lesson one word too far. On the day we practiced knife techniques, it proved extremely useful to remember that in England, a Band-Aid is a "sticky plaster."

There were also barriers in matters of taste between my British classmates and me. They were revolted by the idea of peanut butter and jelly, although perfectly content with a sandwich of cheese and jam. We compared cult appliances, their Agas vs. my Subzero. But the idea that in America there is such a thing as Thai takeout stunned them into respectful silence.

Each day was devoted to a different part of a meal, from starters through to desserts, which are all called "puddings" in England. We went from making tartare of haddock and goat cheese souffles to skinning and filleting a turbot to boning quail to sculpting chocolate in the shape of a demitasse-cum-saucer and filling it with a mousse.

THE TEACHING METHOD was simple: Clive demonstrated; we copied. Because there were only eight of us, there was plenty of individual attention.

Much of the time, though, we worked in pairs, a morale-booster. My partner was a Londoner named Roger, and our respective strengths matched the stereotypes about men and women in the kitchen. He was at a loss with pie crust, but boy, could Roger bone those quail. I, meanwhile, was kept after class for remedial quail boning after failing to keep the skin of the 6-inch-long bird intact and then kneecapping the poor thing instead of disengaging the thigh from its socket as Clive had ordered.

The knife stuff was my nadir. The day we turned vegetables into nicely rounded shapes, Clive came over to my station, announced that I had "created a row of coffins," and carved a mummy face and feet on one of my poor little carrots.

He started out stern, making us whip our own egg whites and cream instead of using electric beaters, his rationale being that it was good for our souls. But if someone's arm threatened to fall off, Clive would finish the beating. And by the end of the week, he actually hauled out an electric mixer.

There was a certain competitive aspect to the course, a desire not to fall behind. I remember the day when Clive pulled a tray of tiny souffles out of the oven, and, like a new mother facing a nursery full of squealing red newborns and trying to pick out her own, I struggled to figure out which ramekins were mine. At least they all looked more or less the same; I hadn't produced a disaster. Relief.

THE MOST UNNERVING aspect of the work, though, was that Clive timed us: an hour to prepare ravioli de champignons sauvages, 15 minutes for sauce au vin de Gewurztraminer, and so on. While I was trying to figure out how much a deciliter was, the Brits in the class were popping finished dishes into the kitchen's massive ovens. The metric system wasn't their only advantage: Some of them had clearly cheated — one even 'fessing up to training at the Cordon Bleu.

One day, Clive conducted a vinegar and oil tasting with the ceremony of a wine tasting at a French chateau. Nine olive oils were arranged according to price, from under $10 a liter to over $90, which seemed steep but proved modest compared with the vinegars, which included a 35-year-old example aged in oak and retailing at over $1,200 a liter. We were allowed a drop each, on the palms of our hands, which we licked.

I learned a huge amount from Clive, both general lessons on orchestrating flavors and technical matters as well.

During one session with a knife, I grumbled that "in America, we have Cuisinarts for this." Clive responded that if you used a food processor to chop an onion, you were stuck washing the bowl afterward. He then chopped an entire onion in, I swear, less time than a food processor takes. Clive is a Horowitz with a knife.

I'm still fumbling along, but I've made my kids hide my Cuisinart so I'd be forced to practice Clive's way.

SOME COOL THINGS I learned from Clive, a few of them heretical:

■ Remember to hang your pheasants with the intestines still in them. Why do I know I won't need this one?

■ To make individual ring molds, buy a plastic plumbing pipe and slice it up. This is much cheaper than buying stainless steel molds. Why Clive suggested this little economy to people who could afford Le Manoir is puzzling. (The cooking class is $1,800 a week, but you are invited to bring along your spouse, or someone else you'd like to share a room with, and you can both eat and drink yourselves silly.)

But there is evidence of frugality even at Le Manoir, where they save up lamb fat to sell to a cosmetics manufacturer. The idea is PC as well as profitable, sparing the whales once used for the same purpose.

■ Salting and leaching eggplants, according to Clive, is a waste of time. If they're bitter, they're bitter.

■ Drop an avocado into boiling water for 30 seconds and it kills the enzymes that discolor it, slowing down the blackening process so you don't have to wait until the last minute to peel it.

■ No need to boil the liquid for a sauce bechamel, according to Clive. I told Clive that Julia Child says to bring the liquid to a boil. Clive says that just makes another pan to wash, and that Julia Child was wrong.

Them's fighting words to a Bostonian, I tell Clive, who proceeds to make a perfectly thick bechamel with cold liquid.

Clive wins.

■ You can stuff a bird a couple of days ahead of time. Wait a minute, I say. What about all those FDA warnings every Thanksgiving, the gist of which is that pre-stuffing is an invitation to disaster? It's got to be cold stuffing in a cold bird, Clive says, to prevent bacteria from forming.

I'm still not trying this one; it's un-American.

■ Let meat rest for the same amount of time you cooked it, whether it's 20 minutes or two hours, then reheat it quickly in a very hot oven. Clive swears the result will be juicier and more tender than otherwise.

■ On telling whether meat is done: Rare meat feels like your cheek; medium, like your nose; well-done, like your forehead.

■ Brown meat in a frying pan before you marinate it. Post-marination, meat won't brown because it's wet and it will stay wet, no matter how vigorously you try to dry it.

■ Mushrooms will take some of the sting out of sauces that turn out too strong.

■ There were subtle matters of style, as well. Potholders started to look little-old-lady-ish after watching Clive use what seemed an infinite stock of thick dishtowels for the same purpose.

One cool thing I told Clive. "Clive," I said, "do you know what Americans do with eggs before they break them?"

Children can learn to avoid injuries at summer camp

By Dr. Andrew Price
Associated Press

Summer is just around the corner, and now is the time to begin making preparations for your child's summer camp season.

Parents can take several steps in the months before the camp starts to ensure that youngsters are prepared. One of the first things is to plan checkups for children at least two months before camp is slated to start. This lead time will allow the physician to examine, treat and follow up on any musculoskeletal injuries or complaints.

Checkups can also help detect ailments that hadn't been picked up previously. Left undetected, these problems can curtail a child's camp activities.

For young people who are enrolling in a sports camp, a pre-season conditioning program may be the next step in getting ready. These routines have been shown to reduce injuries and improve children's performance in school sports, so they may also help prevent injury during the more active summer months. Parents should check with an orthopedist or trainer for the most effective program for the child and his or her favorite sport.

The experience of the coaches working with your child can be another key factor in the prevention of injuries — especially when a child is attending camp for a specific sport. Experienced coaches are often good at selecting methods that can train young athletes while minimizing injuries. Sports camps workouts are often intense, so children may work out for two to three hours a day.

Information about a camp's activities, routines and facilities can ease other concerns about safety for youngsters. Take a close look at the camp pool and supervision available there — especially when it comes to diving. This sport is potentially dangerous. It should be undertaken only when kids are closely supervised, and then only in pools with designated diving areas.

Lakes and swimming holes are dangerous places to dive. Youngsters can strike unseen underwater objects. The result can be severe head or cervical spine injuries.

Sprains and strains are common summer injuries. Parents need to know about the medical personnel available to care for children if these or more serious conditions arise. Doctors and nurses should be available at the camp or at least on call at all times. Parents also need to ask the camp director about the nearest hospital and the camp's emergency procedures and policy.

And it's never too early to begin preparations for next year's camp season. Parents planning to send children to camp in 1997 can make arrangements to visit the camp during the middle of this season. This will allow parents and youngsters to see the games, supervision and equipment provided.

The idea of Gallery 1114's 1996 Open Show is to have fun and demonstrate that creativity is a part of everyone's life.

"We had 122 entries covering a broad range of techniques and points of view," said gallery member Travis Beckham Jr.

"It is a good show ... the biggest show in terms of the open show that the gallery has had," said member Mike Andrews. "Last year, we had 75."

"The typical (open) show is about 85," Beckham said. "The previous record is 92."

The show is open to all ages. "About one fifth of it, 20 percent, is 18 and under," said Andrews, who was among the jurors.

The Best-of-Show prize of $49.95 went to Christopher Hieb for his mixed-media entitled "Bird Meets Machine 1957."

"It's like you're looking at a loose rendition of a '57 Chevy coming right at you, and you've got feathers in the center of the painting," Beckham said. "The jurors said it showed real imagination in the way emotion was created within the painting and the way the materials were used — like the paper plates for the headlights and the feathers for the bird. It's humorous and maybe a little sardonic, but it is clever and creative."

In addition to the Best of Show, the gallery members also selected honorable mentions. The first honorable mention went to Brandon Borchert for his acrylic painting entitled "Space Exploration."

"There's some fairly deep and thought-provoking imagery," Beckham said. "It's got an astronaut and his space ship is above him. There are bumble bees floating around him. It's sort of a cosmic thing about the evolution of our intelligence, of our outreach. And bees are highly evolved creatures in their own right, too."

UTPB presents...

Photos by Joe D. Williams ★ Design by Missy Hallmark

Above left, rancher Bo Decker, played by Errick Huber, sweeps Cherie, played by Carla Griffith, off her feed as his ranch had and mentor Virgil Blessing, played by Al Smith, disapproves in UTPB Theatre Arts Production Class's production of "Bus Stop." Above, Elma Duckworth, played by Armanae Mancha, a naive waitress feels sorry for Dr. Lyman, played by Bob Cowdery, before she finds out he's a drunk. At left, things start to heat up between diner owner Grace, played by Kim Miller, and Carl, played by R.D. Velasquez, as Will (Jeremy Rashidi) who also is snowed in, watches.

ODESSA — An abduction, a snow storm and a small-town diner form the tapestry from which the Theatre Arts Production Class at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin has woven its spring production.

"All the work is being done by students, which makes it something that we are especially proud of," director Shawn Watson said. "They're handling all of the set design and set building, costumes, publicity, box office. They are doing a lot of the acting. Almost every one in the play, with the exception of one person, is a UTPB student and most of them are from the class. In fact, the class even chose the project themselves."

"Bus Stop," is a fun show, Ms. Watson said.

"It's a show that's humorous and humane and witty and dry and gentle all at the same time. It's a good show. It's one of those plays that just will never go away — a real classic."

A movie based on the play "made Marilyn Monroe a great star," she said. She played Cherie, "lounge-lizardy, night club singer who's been abducted more or less by a cowboy who falls in love with her. He's going to marry her and take her to his ranch in Montana."

The play is set in the 1950s, and the couple travels by bus. They become snow bound in a small-town diner that doubles as its bus stop and are trapped overnight.

"So along with the nightclub singer and cowboy, you have the cowboy's singing sidekick and a drunken professor," Ms. Watson said. "It's got a little bit of everything. The cast is rounded out by the woman who owns the diner and her teen-age waitress, plus a sheriff and the bus driver."

The play, a romantic comedy, has several romantic plots woven within its frame. "The most important is the romance between the cowboy and the night-club singer," Ms. Watson said.

The hardest role to cast was the professor.

"It's not a student," said Ms. Watson, who is an English professor at UTPB. "Wouldn't you know you'd have to go outside the university community to get someone to play a drunken professor?" Ms. Watson said. "I would have done it myself, but I was directing."

speare, will be played by Bob Cowdry.

UTPB students form the rest of the cast: Kim Miller as Grace Hoylard, the owner of the diner; Roy Velasquez, Carl, the bus driver; Jeremy Rashidi, Sheriff Will Masters; Amanda Mancha, Elma Duckworth the waitress; Al Smith, Virgil Blessing the singing cowboy; Errick Huber, the cowboy with the crush; and Carla Griffith, Cherie.

"A lot of these people are absolutely new to the stage," Ms. Watson said. "Some of them have never acted at all. Those who have, many of them haven't acted since high school. So we've got a green cast, but they are a wonderful cast; a delight to work with because they are so energetic and so eager; very good students who are taking the time out of their studies to do this work."

Tickets, priced at $5 for the general public, may be reserved by calling 552-2303, the box office number for Founders Theatre. Tickets also may be picked up at the university's PASS Office between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. Production dates are April 18, 19 and 20 and 25 and 26. Curtain is at 8 p.m. Seating is limited.

The responsibilities of UTPB's Theatre Arts Production Class include finding projects suitable for the theater and the audience.

"We finally settled on this play because it's an ensemble cast," Ms. Watson said. "Everybody has a good role. There are no bad roles in this play. It's a fairly easy play to do technically because it has one set, and we can be fairly loose with the details of the setting.

"We thought we would do well casting in the age range that we needed. And we did. We also thought that the location and the introduction of cowboys would be of interest to people in the audience. The romance of the play is just charming, so we thought it would be the kind of drama that people would like to see."

"Bus Stop" represents "a real cooperation between theaters in the area," Ms. Watson said. "We've had very generous help from Midland Community Theater — they're renting us costumes and getting us some wonderful advice about our period style and also helping us with our props.

"The Permian Playhouse has not only helped by lending us many pieces of furniture, but their technical director, Judd Vermillion, is a student in the class, and he's building the set for us. And we've had help from Center Stage Theatre. Jack Harding is trying to help us out with some of the costume problems that we've run into.

"So we feel that the university has been very fortunate to have theaters in the area come together and help us put this production on — and make all of their equipment and time and energy available to our students."

Last semester, UTPB co-produced "Crimes of the Heart" with MCT. Other productions UTPB has presented since the department formed include "The Curate's Shakespeare As You Like It," "A My Name is Alice," "Waiting for Godot" and "The Taming of the Shrew."

"I'm very pleased with the program," Ms. Watson said of UTPB's theater arts. "We have added classes, including a class in creative dramatics and a production class that will be taught next fall by Don Bachmann (MCT executive director). Our creative dramatics class that we are offering this summer is going to be taught by Tracy Goodwin (of MCT).

"Our theater appreciation class goes very strong every semester. And we look forward to adding even more classes as we hope to grow and grow. And we've had wonderful support from the faculty and the administration at the university."

Ms. Watson, who is the area coordinator of the English Department at UTPB and runs the theater arts program, hopes students will someday be able to major in theater arts.

"They can now get a minor in theater arts, but not a major. We're working on it."

Second honorable mention went to Karen Hembree for her raku ceramic entitled "This is Not For a Tea Party."

"It's a beautiful tea pot with these nail-like projections," Beckham said.

Third honorable mention went to Keenan Turner for a computerized print entitled "Camouflaged Predators II."

"It's the best computer art I personally have seen," Beckham said. "It's a big piece, looks like a painting. These fish are floating in this complicated world of fascinating images. Lots of high color. You can sense that it is a computer image, but it doesn't have that binary look to it."

The fourth honorable mention went to Becki Smith for an untitled acrylic. "It's a large colorful painting," Beckham said.

In addition, the gallery awarded simple honorable mentions: Sharon Miller for "Light in the Willows," two hand-constructed floor lamps; Toby McCarthy for a black-and-white photograph of Hiroshima; Jo Dufo for an oil painting entitled "Windows;" and 18-year-old Elliot Lunson, for his collage entitled "Fear Factory."

"The work was so strong we gave him a regular honorable mention," Beckham said, noting that at 18, Lunson's work could have been considered in the 12-18 group.

The Youth Award in the 12 to 18 category went to Erin King for "Lavar."

"It's a black-and-white face of the African-American young man laughing," Beckham said. "It's a great painting."

The award in the Youth 12 and Under category went to Alegra Apodaca from San Angelo for "We Are All Linked to This Puzzle."

"Every year, they come from San Angelo to enter," Beckham said. "It's a very skillful little mixed-media sculpture or construction. It's a statement of personal faith."

Other awards include the Odessa Camera Award, which went to Ron McFadden for "Boots;" the Midland Camera Award, which went to Ophelia Estallargas for "Homenaje a Adolfo Quinte;" and the Paint and Palette Award, which went to Joyce Howell for a mixed-media pastel drawing.

The popular open show gives all people an opportunity to see their work displayed in a gallery.

"There's no other open show in this whole area," Beckham said. "We do hang everything done in good faith, and we do not withhold work because we happen to not like it."

Gallery hours at 1114 N. Big Spring are 1 to 5 p.m. Friday through Sunday. The show will remain on view through April 21. For more information call 685-9944.

Gallery members, most of whom are artists, also present an open show for the opportunity it provides the viewer.

"When you show a broad range of work and viewpoint and content like that, you are really showing the full range of art, and the issues it can address, and the many faces it can assume," Beckham said. "And you see some surprising things go together and work that you wouldn't expect to complement one another. And that's always really gratifying."

A show of this type can demonstrate "the wheel is more than the sum of its parts," Beckham said. "It encourages the typical person to take a more open attitude and look at work they wouldn't ordinarily like."

Globe to present Shakespeare's 'Macbeth'

ODESSA — Shakespeare's "Macbeth" will be presented Friday through April 28 at the Globe Theatre.

Performances are set for 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday, and April 26 and 27 and at 2:30 p.m. April 28. For reservations call 1-915-332-1586. Admission is $8 for adults and $6 for students and seniors. Discounts are available for groups.

Midlander Marilyn Allen will be playing Lady Macbeth. The show is being directed by Midlander Sherry Engstrom. Midlander Darrell Ward plays one of the three murderers.

HOROSCOPE

SUNDAY, APRIL 14, 1996

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your career prospects show decided improvement. Think things through before making up your mind about an unusual travel offer. A close associate's enthusiasm could cause them to exaggerate the benefits while downplaying the inconveniences. Romance will be a source of joy so long as partner does not try to call all the shots. Love between equals works best! Refuse to give up something that is really important to you.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DAY: country music star Loretta Lynn, actress Julie Christie, baseball legend Pete Rose, actor Sir John Gielgud.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Take the phone off the hook and relax. Peace and quiet will give you an entirely new perspective. You could be falling in love without realizing it.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A young person's dazzling performance inspires you to do even better work. Avoid making promises you may not be able to fulfill. Actions speak louder than words.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Focus on someone's strengths, not their weaknesses. A positive, affectionate approach will work wonders. Loved ones are touched by your thoughtfulness. Write or call someone who may be feeling lonely.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Think about what you may do to someone if you make a selfish decision now. Then make the right choice for all concerned. Solo endeavors hold the greatest promise.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A student receives financial assistance from a loving sponsor. You will learn something important from sharing an idea with a trusted confidant. A phone call brings immediate results.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A half-hearted effort will not succeed. Put real feeling into whatever you do. Discuss a trust or jointly-owned property with family members. Money-saving ideas deserve close scrutiny.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A happy-go-lucky day lies ahead. Send a letter or postcard to someone you love. A new venture fills you with both joy and nervous anticipation. Give lots of thought to your preparation.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A good day for activities that will bring you and loved ones closer together. A light touch helps you make an important point without irritating a good friend.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A shared experience draws you and that special someone into a secret alliance. A simple statement is more convincing than a long explanation. Stop being a recluse.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Are you trying to persuade others or yourself? Think about it. A new approach will eliminate much of the tension in your life. Love conquers all. Encourage a family member to return to the fold.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A family member or neighbor will appreciate a friendly reminder. Be tactful. Romance could be in a slump. Get together with someone who always makes you laugh. Music will help a tense guest relax.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Today's events could change your plans for the coming week. Turn a deaf ear to someone who tries to give you a hard time. You rise to a challenge and win big! Forge ahead.

The bidding:

NORTH	EAST	SOUTH	WEST
1♣	1♡	2NT	Pass
3NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Nine of ♡ Great defenders are born, not made. Follow this spectacular effort by former world champion Bob Goldman of Dallas, from an international tournament some years ago.

Given the fact that South's jump to two no trump was invitational, the auction was straightforward. All that remained was for declarer to make nine tricks before the opponents got five.

West led a heart and declarer allowed East's jack to win the first trick, and had to hold off again when East continued with the queen. After winning the third heart, South's problem was to keep East off lead while developing the club suit.

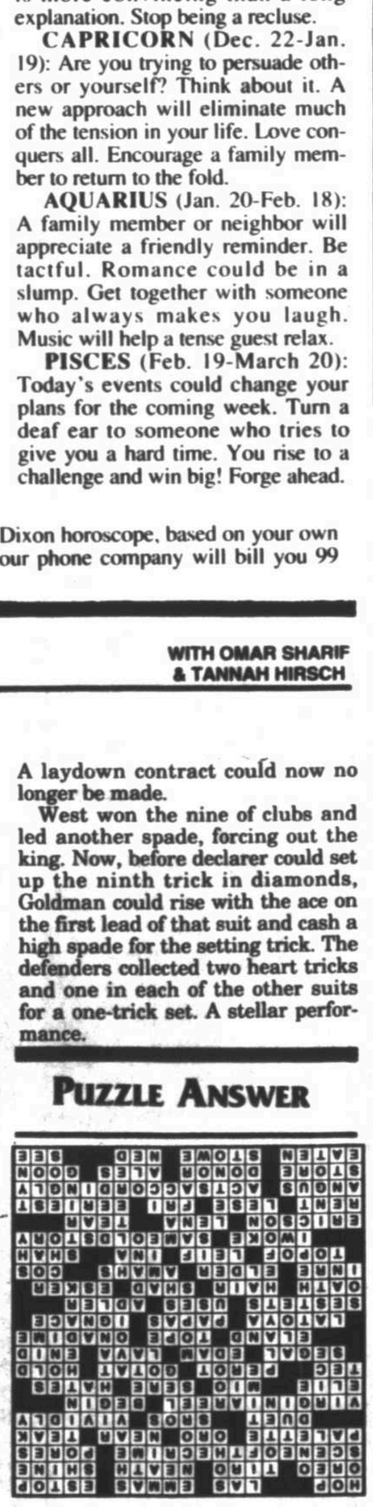

South was 1980 world champion Christian Mari of Paris, and he made a good shot when he crossed to dummy with the queen of spades and led the queen of clubs. East covered with the king, and Goldman dropped the jack under declarer's ace!

Suddenly, declarer had an opportunity for nine tricks without having to rely on West holding the ace of diamonds. It seemed that, with the marked finesse for the nine of clubs, declarer could score five club tricks, three spades and the ace of hearts without raising a sweat. That was not quite how things worked out.

Declarer crossed to dummy with the ace of spades, led the deuce of clubs and, when East produced the four, confidently finessed the eight. A laydown contract could now no longer be made.

West won the nine of clubs and led another spade, forcing out the king. Now, before declarer could set up the ninth trick in diamonds, Goldman could rise with the ace on the first lead of that suit and cash a high spade for the setting trick. The defenders collected two heart tricks and one in each of the other suits for a one-trick set. A stellar performance.

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

Play presented

ODESSA — The Kaleidoscope Company of Permian Playhouse will present "The Prince and the Pauper" 2:30 p.m. through April 21 at the Globe of the Great Southwest.

Prince Edward is played by Blair Late; the Pauper, Tom by Ted Duelser; and Tom's father, John by Chance Tomlinson. Other cast members include Chris Gutierez, Lauren Jackson, Christina Leavitt, Andrew Leavitt, Jamie Myers and Sasha Tylka.

For more information about the show, which is the company's last of the season, or ticket information call the Playhouse between noon and 6 p.m. Monday through Friday, 1-915-362-2329.

The production is sponsored by Texene Corp. and Child's Play, which is a program of the Odessa Junior League.

Singer to perform

Alex Forbes performs at Barnes & Noble 8 p.m. May 2.

Ms. Forbes, who is currently on her "Troubadour-To-Door" tour, has been a professional song writer since 1984 and has penned pop hits for Taylor Dayne, "Don't Rush Me," Alisha, "Too Turned On," and Joey Lawrence, "Nothin' My Love Can't Fix." She has just completed an album of her own with producer Tony Visconti, who co-wrote much of the material and played on the project as well.

Art show set

ODESSA — The University of Texas of the Permian Basin Program Board is hosting its "Advanced Art Students Show" Tuesday through May 16 in the Third Floor Gallery.

An opening reception is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Tuesday. The public is invited to attend.

Awards presented

ODESSA — Awards totaling $5,000 will be presented to art students from Odessa College, Odessa High School and Permian High School during a 7 to 8 p.m. reception Thursday in Odessa College's Options Gallery located in the Learning Resources Center.

The awards are the highlight of the 1996 Odessa College Art students' Exhibition and will be presented at 7:30 p.m. by Vance Gipson, OC president. The exhibit includes drawings, paintings, sculpture and mixed-media in a variety of styles by OC art students. Their art will be on display through May 3.

For more information call the OC art department, 1-915-335-6490.

Slides accepted

AUSTIN — Amateur and professional photographers are invited to submit slides of their works to the Texas Photographic Society by May 1 for the group's 11th Annual Members Only Show.

The show opens at the Niendorff Art gallery, 1017 E. 6th St., Austin, June 7. An opening reception will be held that day from 6 to 8 p.m.

Barbara McCandless, associate curator of photographs at the Amon Carter Museum, is this year's juror. She will award $750 in cash prizes.

Photographers may submit up to five slides for a nonrefundable fee of $15. Up to five additional slides may be entered for $3 per slide. The exhibition is open to all current TPS members.

For more information, prospective entrants may contact D. Clarke Evans, TPS president , care of the Texas Photographic Society, 102 Arcadia Place, Suite 702, San Antonio, Texas 78209, or telephone 1-210-824-4123 for a call for entries that explains in detail the entry process.

Activities set

Tonkawa Chief Broken Eagle and basket maker Rebecca Vogt are to be a part of Texas Archaeology Awareness activities Saturday at the Museum of the Southwest.

Basket-making demonstrations and storytelling about Tonkawa culture with displays of artifacts are set from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m.

The month of April is annually designated for Archaeology Awareness by the Office of the State Archaeologist, Texas Historical Commission. The purpose is to make the citizens of Texas aware of the rich cultural diversity of Texas as represented by archeological and historic sites and the need for preservation and protection of the sites for study and understanding the past.

For more information call 683-2882.

Meeting planned

Midland Arts Association will meet 2 p.m. today in the Stables Gallery, Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave.

Mike Andrews will demonstrate photographing two- and three-dimensional art for slide entry.

Demonstration and meeting are open to the public. All interested people are invited to come.

Program presented

The Opportunity Center Auxiliary presents "Hollywood Nights" featuring comedians Dom Irrera and the duo Mack and Jamie beginning 7:30 p.m. Friday at Midland Center.

All proceeds will benefit the Midland Association for Retarded Citizens. Admission is $125 a couple. Black tie is optional. The event includes cocktails, dinner catered by Murray and the Frenchman, a silent auction and the show.

Irrera has developed a following beyond the comedy club circuit through his television appearances. In addition to his "One Night Stand" comedy special for HBO, he's also guested on "Arsenio," "The Tonight Show," "Late Night With David Letterman," "Comic Strip Live" and "Sunday Comics."

Mack & Jamie have appeared on, most recently, "The Tonight Show with Jay Leno" and have also performed on "An Evening at the Improv," "Caroline Comedy Club," "VH-1" and "Into the Night."

The funds raised at the Opportunity Center Auxiliary's "Hollywood Nights" specifically go to support MARC's program of respite care for children with developmental disabilities.

For invitation information call Jean at MARC, 682-9771.

Soloist to perform

David Ford, a featured soloist with the Robert Shaw Chorale, performs at 6:30 p.m. today in the sanctuary of First Baptist Church.

Now living in Nashville, Ford, a former minister of music at churches in Kentucky, Oklahoma, Texas and Tennessee, has portrayed Caiaphas "Jesus Christ Superstar," The Kralahome in "The King and I," Lazar Wolf in "Fiddler on the Roof" and Ali ben Ali in "Desert Song."

Additionally, he portrays the Rev. Samuel MacAdow in "Light Among the Cumberland," a historical music-drama about the great spiritual awakening of the early 1800s presented each July at Montgomery Bell State Park west of Nashville.

Midlander to tour

ABILENE — Mark Hoover of Midland is participating in Hardin-Simmons University's Concert Choir annual tour that concludes in a spring concert at Pioneer Drive Baptist Church at 8 p.m. April 22.

Hoover, a bass in the concert choir, is a senior church music major at HSU.

Member named

Jodi Kuhn, daughter of Jim and Lorine Kuhn, recently was named a member of the Southwest Texas State University dance team the Strutters.

Ms. Kuhn is a senior at Lee High School. She has been a three-year member of the Dixie Doll Drill Team serving as captain 1995-96, lieutenant 1994-95, and sophomore spirit leader 1993-94. She received the Most Spirited Doll Award two consecutive years.

In addition, Ms. Kuhn is a varsity baseball manager and member of the Student Council Cabinet, Senior Girls, D-FY-IT, Texas Scholars, Second Baptist Youth Group, the National Honor Society and volunteers with United Way Big Brothers/Big Sisters. She's been recognized with "Who's Who Among American High School Students" and received two Optimist Youth awards.

She will be a freshman at Southwest Texas State University in the fall. She plans to major in secondary education.

Season to close

The Harlem Spiritual Ensemble closes out Midland Community Concerts' 1995-96 season 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at Midland High School Auditorium.

Those purchasing season memberships for the 1996-97 season will receive this concert as a bonus. For more information call 682-1375 or 694-1397.

The 1996-97 campaign drive is being conducted through Friday at TuElectric, 1700 W. Wall Ave. The number at TuElectric is 620-1286, 620-1287 and 620-1288.

Season memberships are $30 for adults, $10 for a student through high school and $70 for a family. After May 10, memberships will be $35, $15 and $75 respectively.

Concert performed

The Everest String Quartet performs its final concert of the group's 1995-96 season 8 p.m. April 27 at Midland College's Allison Fine Arts Building and 2 p.m. April 28 at the Ellen Noel Art Museum in Odessa.

Tickets are $10 for adults, $9 for seniors and $5 for students. Music students are admitted free.

For more information call the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale Inc., office, 563-0921.

Bash scheduled

The third annual "Bard's Birthday Bash" is set for 10 a.m. to noon April 27, at Cole Theatre, 2000 W. Wadley Ave., in Mabee Theatre II.

The special offering, which is free and open to the public, is being presented in conjunction with Midland Community Theatre and by the "Shakespeare As We Like It" reading/discussion group. The event will include dramatic presentations and guest speakers.

This year's special guest is Ann Cook-Calhoun, chairman of the International Shakespeare Association.

Ms. Cook-Calhoun is professor of English and director of the honors program at Vanderbilt University. She also is an internationally known authority on Shakespeare whose writings on the playwright include two acclaimed books published by Princeton University Press.

Her credentials also include associate editor of "Shakespeare Studies," from 1973-1980; trustee, Folger Shakespeare Library, 1985-1990; and executive secretary, Shakespeare Association of America, 1975-1987.

Ms. Cook-Calhoun is married to Midlander Jerry Calhoun.

Exhibit displayed

ODESSA — The Ellen Noel Art Museum, 4909 E. University, is displaying Odessa Art Association's 38th Annual Permian Basin Art Exhibition through April 29.

The exhibition is sponsored in part by the Odessa Cultural Council.

Best of Show went to Marvin Stevenson for "Washday."

Museum hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday. No admission is charged.

For more information call 550-3811 or 1-915-368-7222.

Paintings displayed

Peggy Catlett has her oil paintings on display at Midland American Bank through the month of April.

This Midlander has won numerous awards as well as being accepted in several juried shows. She specializes in Indian subjects and still lifes. She is a member of Midland Arts Association and the Midland Palette Club.

Museum hosts event

ODESSA — The Presidential Museum, 622 N. Lee St., is sponsoring "American Heritage Days" April 26 and 27.

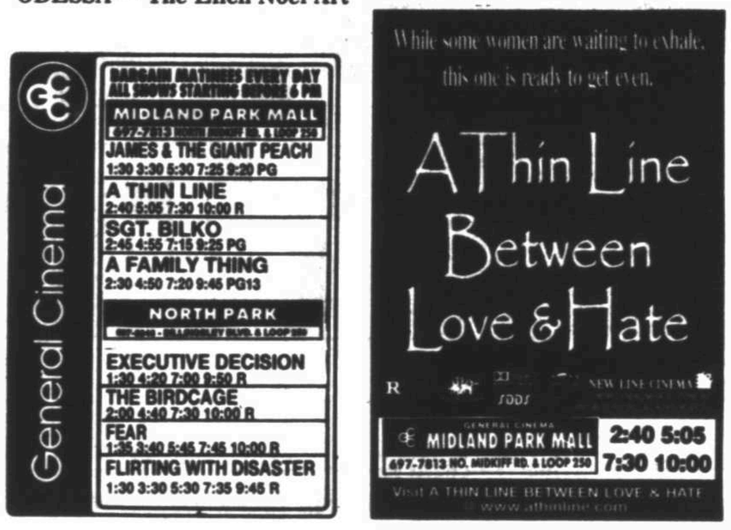

Students of U.S. history from area schools will have an opportunity to experience a full day of mind-expanding programs and demonstrations on April 26. The event is part of Odessa Stampede.

Sponsors include cities of Midland and Odessa, Ector County, Main Street Odessa, Odessa College, Parkway Inn, KWES-TV, the Odessa American and Odessa Parks and recreation.

For more information call the museum, call 1-915-332-7123.

New NORM treatment could save producers dollars

■ Method being studied by DOE could save producers thousands in clean-up costs.

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

A new concept in the treatment of normally occurring radioactive materials (NORM) could save oil producers in the Permian Basin thousands of dollars.

Presently the accepted method for dealing with NORM is to have a certified contractor clean it up and truck it to a certified disposal center. However, a new method being studied by the Department of Energy would bring the disposal center to the site.

DOE is funding a series of bench-scales tests being conducted by BPF Inc. of Dallas at three separate sites in the Permian Basin . The tests call for a mobile treatment facility to be brought to the site to separate non-radio active materials from radioactive materials, and to treat the NORM solids at the site by dissolving the radioactive ions (normally Radium 226 and 228) into an aqueous solution for reinjection into formations from which they came. No solids would be injected back into the formation.

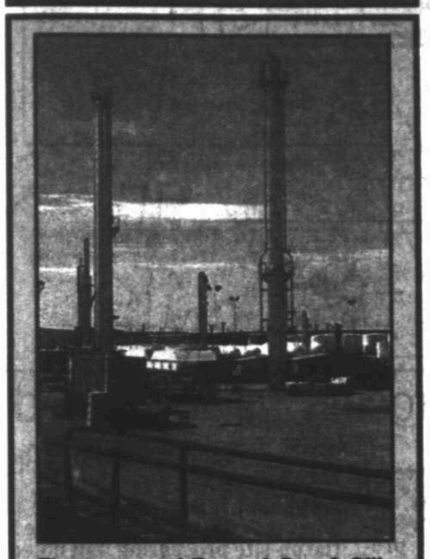

Don Capone, BDF general manager, said NORM which is normally found in produced water and precipitates out as barium sulfate is becoming more of a problem with the mature production of the Permian Basin.

BDF has two processes it will utilize for dissolving the radioactive solids. One is a thermal process, and the other is a proprietary chemical mix. Once the radioactive solution is injected into a saltwater or disposal well, the remaining benign solids will be assayed to verify that no radioactivity above regulatory limits remains.

"We are just now initiating field tests," said Capone. "Once the field trials are finished we will begin to clean up small sites and do demonstrations."

BRIEFING

Drilling increases

Drilling activity in the Permian Basin increased during the week ended April 4, according to Baker Hughes Inc.

The Permian Basin count rose four rigs to 108 for the week, below last year's count of 123.

Lea County, N.M. remained the most active in the Basin with 17 rigs, followed by Eddy County, N.M. with 10 rigs and Crockett County with eight rigs.

The U.S. rig count slipped three rigs to 725 for the week but remains above year-ago levels. Last year the count was 669.

Among major producing states, Louisiana reported the biggest gain, 13 rigs, while Texas posted the sharpest drop, seven rigs.

Oilfield acquisition

Geraghty & Miller Inc., with over 40 offices nationwide, including the former Reed & Associates Inc. in Midland, has acquired Piedmont Olsen Hensley. As one of the nation's oldest and largest environmental/engineering consulting firms, Geraghty & Miller welcomes the additional services POH brings in the areas of environmental, civil and mechanical engineering.

A pumping unit continues to bring up Permian Basin 'black gold.'

Prices climb

Crude futures soared past the $25 level this past week, levels not seen since the start of the Gulf War.

Analysts attributed the climb in futures on the New York Mercantile Exchange to reports that there remains a rocky road to an oil-for-food deal between Iraq and the United Nations.

Crude also rode the coattails of gasoline futures, which rose to five-year highs on reports of an expected strong driving season.

Late in the week WTI closed at $25.35 a barrel/

AOSC awards

Service companies from Midland and Odessa received awards for outstanding accident prevention from the Association of Oilwell Servicing Contractors.

Houston-based Pride Petroleum received a silver award for its Midland operations. Pool Co., also of Houston, received a bronze award for its Midland operations, the ninth consecutive year the company has been recognized for safe operations by the AOSC.

Highland/Corod of Odessa received a gold award and Great Basin Well Service received a president's certificate, the second year the company has been so honored.

Other area companies receiving awards include Globe Well Service, Big Lake, and Well Co. Oil Service Inc. of Brownfield, gold awards; and Van's Well Service, Forsan, silver award.

Well servicing companies representing 2,014 well servicing rigs and reporting a total of more than 28 million manhours worked participated in the association's safety awards program by following strict reporting guidelines. Winners were awarded in five groups according to the number of manhours worked.

Revamped AOSC will have broader scope

■ Organization seeks to become more inclusive.

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

When the Association of Oilwell Servicing Contractors (AOSC) meets this summer at San Francisco, the organization will officially cease to exist and will be replaced by a broader, more inclusive organization.

On its fortieth anniversary, AOSC will officially become the Association of Energy Service Companies, and membership will be open to all companies involved in well site service operations.

AOSC President Ron Boyd of Enid, Okla. said the reorganization was a big step that more closely reflected the new nature of well service contractors and would help meet the needs of its members into the next century.

"Over the past forty years, well service contractors have had to adapt to the constant changes in the oil and gas industry and the requisite regulation, labor, insurance and capital challenges," said Boyd.

Gene Fowler, AOSC second vice president, said the reorganization was in part the result of diversification within the oilwell service industry. No longer limited strictly to well servicing, many of the contractors had branched off into hot oiling, equipment rentals, environmental services, coiled tubing operations and other service areas. "This will help us bring all the service sectors together," Fowler said.

"The change was necessary, because we are no longer just oil well service contractors, but energy service contractors," said Nick Petronio of Pool Co. and a first vice president of AOSC.

The change is expected to not only make the organization larger, but stronger and more viable.

"It's going to be a better organization," said Ron Laidley, president of Yale E. Key Well Service Co. in Midland. "Membership was not exactly stagnant, but growth and new blood was needed." He noted that at some meetings attendance by affiliated members outnumbered well service contractors.

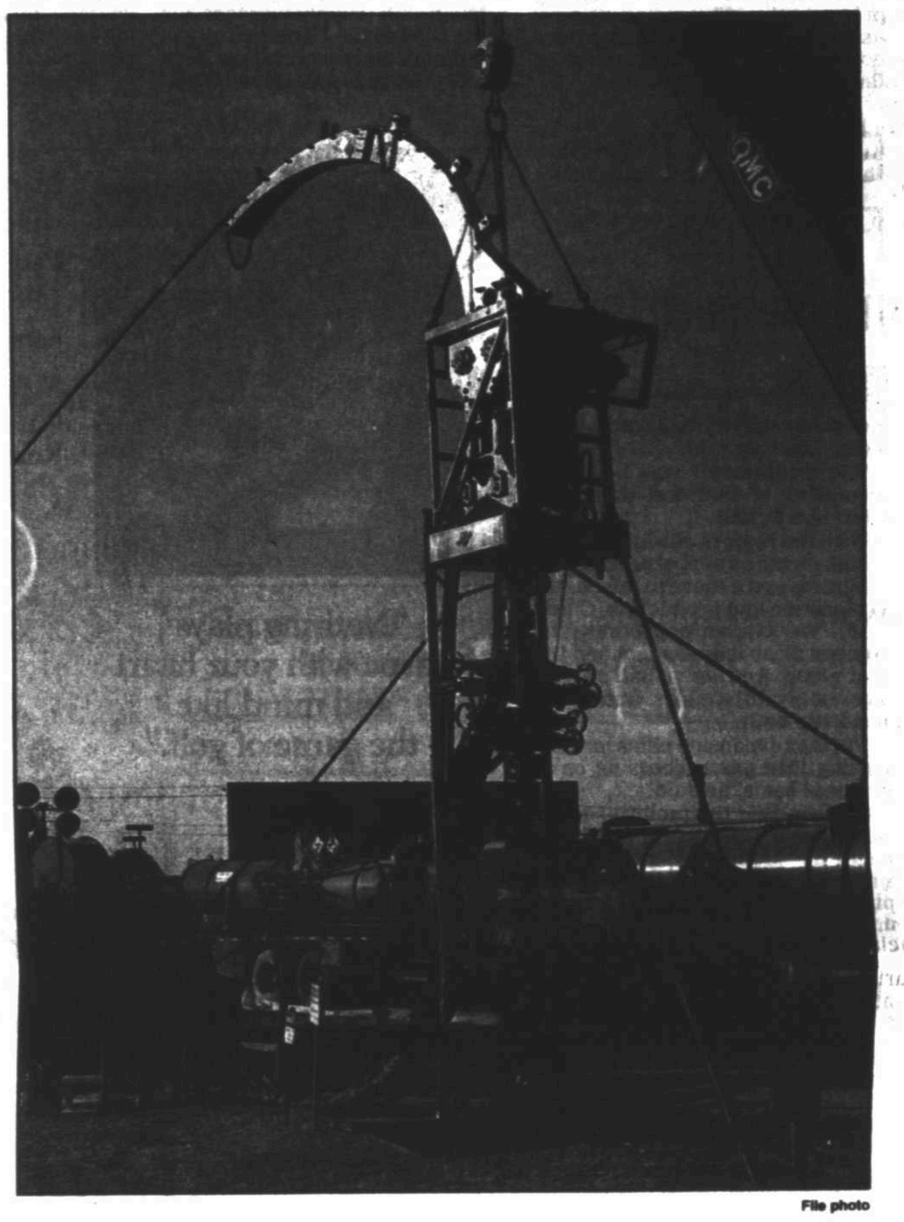

With a broader membership and more members, Laidley said he expected the Association of Energy Service Contractors to be much more active in the area of political lobbying. "I expect we will also become more educational in our approach, and will keep our members informed continually of pertinent regulation and legislation."

He said the association had been talking about making the membership more inclusive for the past ten year, but that it all began to come together in the past few years. The issue was pursued heavily during the term of Mike McDermitt of Hobbs as AOSC president. This February at the board of directors meeting in San Antonio gave its approval to the broader membership and voted unanimously to change the name to Association of Energy Service Companies. Laidley credits Mike Clark, AOSC executive, as being much of the creative force behind the restructure.

Oddly the new name was suggested by Frank Pool, founder of the Pool Co. and one of the original founders of the Association of Oilwell Servicing Contractors in 1956.

Well service contractors organized that year, because of a dramatic change in the oil industry. The major oil companies and others were getting rid of their well service rigs and turning the business over to contractors. Those contractors in the new fledgling business thought they should be organized as a trade group to become more professional.

"Once again the well service industry is responding to change in the oil industry," said Laidley. "Everyone knew this reorganization was something that had to be done. I think we will be a stronger organization for it."

When the Association of Oilwell Servicing Contractors ceases to exist this summer and is replaced by the Association of Energy Service Companies, the new association will be broader in scope and open to members involved in such operations as hot oiling, rentals, environmental services or coiled tubing, seen above. Officials say the move has been made to reflect diversification within the servicing industry and strengthen the group well into the next century.

NGL exports fuel growth for Farstad Gas & Oil

■ Company tries to fill void left by majors, take advantage of new opportunities for growth.

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

A combination of downsizing by major operators and expansion of free trade with the North American Free Trade Agreement has created new opportunities for Farstad Gas & Oil L.L.C. of Midland.

The company, located next to Warfield Truck Stop, is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Farstad Oil Inc. of Minot, North Dakota, a family-owned business that has been wholesaling gasoline and natural gas liquids for 58 years. Current owner Jeff Farstad, the founder's grandson, wanted to expand the company and built up the southern hub, located in Midland.

Recently Farstad, which has been exporting its propane/butane mix to Mexico for three years, signed a 10-year agreement where Amoco will buy Farstad's propane-butane mix from its Midland fractionator for export to Amoco.

Lee Carlson, Farstad Gas and Oil vice president and chief operating officer, said that Amoco has been a major exporter of natural gas liquids out of this country.

The agreement, he said, stems from Amoco's joint venture with Navajo and Mapco with purchased an old products line from Navajo and will convert it to transport gas liquids. Once conversion is completed, probably in the first quarter of 1997, Carlson said Farstad will be tied into a segment of the line that is located 400 to 500 yards from the company's Midland facility.

"We're seeing growth in demand from our partner to the south, Mexico," he said, which depends solely on propane and butane for cooking and heating fuel. "The demand picture for liquid propane gas, other than petrochemicals or refining, is exports, and we see that into the next century."

The facility, begun in November 1993, operates just under 100 rail cars, 13 transport trucks and employs 50. Approximately 4 to 6 million gallons of propane-butane mix is exported from the facility each month.

Bob Clark, Farstad Gas and Oil's marketing manager, said that the company's working relationship with Petroleos Mexicano (Pemex) and its marketing arm, PMI, stems back to a relationship with Mobil's Pegasus Plant that sends the plant's propane to Farstad for processing and export.

"Because of the large volumes, we looked to export those volumes," Clark said. "We had created a volume that dictated a year-round market."

The propane-butane mix is transported to PMI's terminal in Mendez, south of Juarez, which is a distribution hub for northeastern Mexico.

He said that "we've been extremely happy with our relationship with Pemex and PMI. There is a great spirit of entrepreneurship in Pemex and PMI, they're open to new creative business opportunities."

Carlson and Clark see further opportunities down the road for Farstad. The company is completing installation of a 115-boot debutanizer at its fractionator, expected to be operational by the end of May and will

Oil reserves rise in decade of stagnant prices

By N.Y. Times News Service

New York — Not only are oil companies becoming more adept at finding and producing crude, they're doing so more cheaply, too.

In 1995, for the second year in a row, all seven of the world's biggest oil companies more than replaced with new reserves the oil and natural gas they produced. That happened even as world oil production and consumption set records.

New technology has transformed both exploration and production. And this revolution came about even though oil prices averaged less than $20 a barrel during the past decade.

"This industry has done a spectacular job of living with crude prices no one thought possible," said Lucio Noto, chairman and chief executive of Mobil Corp. "We see no shortage of opportunities."

Even though crude oil futures traded on the New York Mercantile Exchange are hovering around $22.50 a barrel, after reaching five-year highs of $25 last month, few companies are raising their internal $17-a-barrel forecasts. After being burned by collapsing prices in the 1980s, when oil sank as low as $10 a barrel, companies no longer look to rising prices as the route to profit growth.

Though some analysts argue that rapid demand growth in Asia and lean inventories of crude and refined products mean prices will remain above $20 and perhaps keep rising, most reckon the greater risk is on the downside.

For one thing, Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and Iraq between them could pump at least 3.5 million barrels a day above current levels. Venezuela has vowed to boost capacity by 75 percent to 5 million barrels a day during the next decade, and fresh discoveries in such places as Colombia promise to add further capacity over the next few years.

"The world has more hydrocarbons than we can possibly imagine," said William Walker, president of New Orleans investment bank Howard, Weil, Labouisse, Friedrichs.

Proven crude reserves totaled more than 1 trillion barrels at the end of 1994, almost two-thirds above estimates of 20 years ago, according to the Oil & Gas Journal. That's enough to last 43 years at current consumption rates. And natural gas reserves, which have also grown, would be adequate for more than 66 years.

Much of the supply increase has come outside the Persian Gulf, as significant oil reserves have been discovered in places never traditionally thought of as "oil patch."

Recently, Triton Energy Ltd. said it's found more oil than expected at the Cupiagua field it shares with British Petroleum in Colombia. Though its partner hasn't endorsed some of Triton's more extravagant claims, BP still reckons Cupiagua and another nearby field contain 2 billion barrels of reserves.

In Italy, the U.K.'s Enterprise Oil Plc hopes to recover almost half the 10 billion barrels it has discovered in the Southern Appennines.

"Italy is not regarded as an oil producing nation," said Graham Hearne, Enterprise's chairman. "Olive oil, yes, but not crude oil. To which I say good. We think there is potential for us to add a few hundred million more barrels in the next few years."

While dramatic new discoveries draw the headlines, it's the increasing sophistication of oil field technology that's behind the growth in reserves, oil executives said.

New, high-powered, computerized seismic techniques allow companies to draw three dimensional maps of underground structures, giving them a better shot at figuring out where oil and gas reservoirs might lie.

"With the 3-D and 4-D seismic being developed, the economics of going back into the field is pretty attractive," said Eric Mattson, chief financial officer at Baker Hughes Inc., one of the world's biggest oil-service companies.

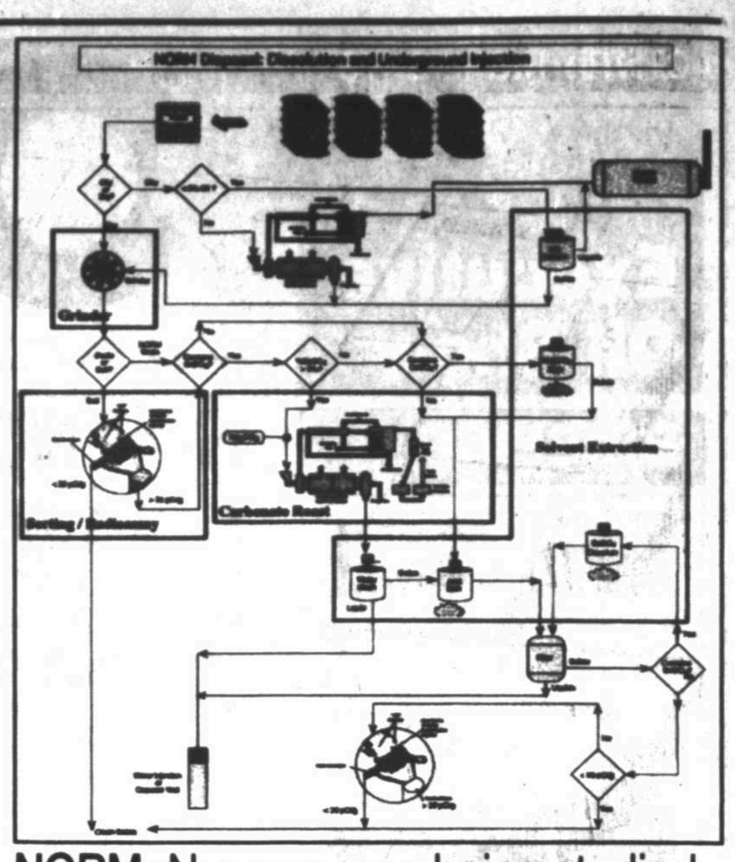

New ways of pumping oil from ever-greater ocean depths at lower cost have boosted recoverable reserves. Companies such as Amerada Hess Corp., for example, developed the use of floating production systems connected to unmanned, subsea wells, eliminating the need for costly fixed-leg platforms.

Overall, new technology helped cut finding and development costs to $4.73 a barrel last year from $5.53 in 1994, according to a weighted average of 45 companies compiled by Howard, Weill.

"We are managing this company based on flat prices," said Richard Bachmann, president of Louisiana Land and Exploration Co. "To manage the company competitively, we have to run on finding costs below $4.50 a barrel."

With operating costs falling, small fields that were once deemed uneconomic to develop have been brought onstream.

Small wonder then that early forecasts about the North Sea's productive life have proved to be woefully conservative

NORM: New process being studied

(From 1G)

· If successful, the company will build some time next year, a full-size pilot unit, capable of processing 100 barrels per day of NORM sludge. Capone noted that the average NORM clean up involves approximately 25 barrels.

He said it was too early to tell what the cost per barrel will be for the on-site processing, but noted it should be considerably less than trucking it to an approved disposal site.

EXPORTS: Firm has more plans

(From 1G)

increase capacity to 8,000 barrels a day, Carlson said.

The fractionator was begun in the spring of 1994 and went into operation in 1995.

With the majors closing fractionation plants as part of downsizing programs and a move to refocus on exploration and production, Clark said, "we saw an opportunity to come in as an independent and fill that niche. And we've had a lot of interest from majors and independents both."

Further expansion plans include getting into gas processing on a regional basis, he said.

Carlson said the facility's location, where a number of pipelines such as Mobil's Y-grade and propane pipelines and other pipelines carrying residue gas, Y grade and crude oil, will allow Farstad to tie into those lines, pull the products off and process them. That should be operational by year-end, he said.

Clark added that the growth in carbon dioxide (CO_2) use in enhanced recovery projects in the Permian Basin also offers major opportunities for Farstad.

"We have 55 acres," he noted, "so we can grow and develop other expansion plans down the road."

Credit rating firm affirms ratings on Parker & Parsley

CHICAGO - Duff & Phelps Credit Rating Co. has reaffirmed the Parker & Parsley Petroleum Co. credit ratings on its senior debt and monthly income preferred securities.

The senior debt is rated 'BBB-' (Triple-B-Minus) and the monthly income preferred securities are rated 'BB' (Double-B). This rating affects $300 million in debt and $188.8 million in preferred securities.

Parker & Parsley continues to reduce debt levels with the divestiture of assets. The company sold $175.8 million worth of properties in 1995. Most of the proceeds were used to reduce debt, which increased significantly due to the acquisition. This brings the company's 1995 yearend debt level to 4586.5 million from $708.89 million at yearend 1994. This level is anticipated to decline to $340 million with the divestiture of a portion of the company's Australian and bayou properties through a trade sale. This action will not only serve to reduce debt but also to monetize an asset that has a very long and expensive development horizon.

Parker & Parsley is refocusing its efforts on core domestic properties. Although the company still plans to emphasize exploitation and development projects for reserve and production growth, some expenditures will go toward exploration prospects in the Gulf Coast region. Due to the larger capital requirements and inherent risks of exploration, this will raise the overall risk level of the company's drilling program as well as increase the potential for greater reserve growth. Management is mitigating a portion of the risk by allocating only 11 percent of the company's total capital expenditures in 1996 toward exploration and limiting its exposure on each individual prospect to $1 million.

The operating cash flows and earnings margin of the company are steadily improving with the successful integration of the Bridge Oil Co., acquired in 1994. Management has reduced operating, finding, interest and general and administrative costs as well as increased production levels.

HALLIBURTON PROVIDES SOLUTIONS

CASE HISTORY #151
VISCOSITY CONTROLLED ACID IN THE STRAWN LIMESTONE

Location of job: Permian Basin

Type of Job: Acid Frac - Viscosity Controlled Acid (VCA)

Customer Challenge: The Strawn Limestone was typically being treated with 10,000 gallons of 15% NEFE. These wells come in strong initially (.5 to 2 MMCFPD) after the acid job.

Within an average of two months, production had fallen off to about 100 MCFPD and held fairly steady at that rate.

The customers needed a Strawn treatment that would provide better long term production.

Halliburton's Solution: Use extremely high cross-linked Viscosity Controlled Acid systems to control fluid loss. Previous acid techniques had created a network of near-wellbore wormholing, but with the VCA system, a longer etched frac length was realized due to the nature of the fluid.

Major Obstacles: Initial up front cost is, on the average, two to three times the cost of conventional acid systems. Other service company's original attempts at providing a solution had failed.

Job Details:

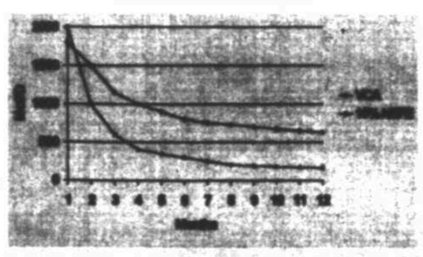

Well Depth:	7,800' to 9,200'
Well Temp:	190 to 220° F
Formation Type:	Strawn Limestone
Product Used:	Viscosity Controlled Acid (VCA)
Chemical Used:	SGAIII

Job Procedure:
The operator spots acid across the zone and breaks the formation down using an RTTS packer. A 2000-3000 gallon 20% NEFE acid ball-out job is then performed on the perforations. The load is swabbed back and the well is prepared for the VCA acid.

The acid fracture treatment is performed in alternating stages of gelled water and VCA acid with ball sealers for diversion. Twenty-five percent CO_2 is also incorporated in all of the fluids.

Results:

VCA Vs. 15% NEFE
PRODUCTION DECLINE EXAMPLE

Average results showed that wells treated with straight 15% NEFE had slightly higher initial production than those treated with VCA systems. Long term production results for wells treated with VCA systems are considerably higher than those treated with straight 15% NEFE. After one year of production, wells treated with VCA acid systems are at least double the production of those treated with straight 15% NEFE. Pressure build-up analysis on the wells indicates a fracture extension on the VCA Treatments of 180-200 feet and only a 30-40 feet extension with the 15% NEFE jobs.

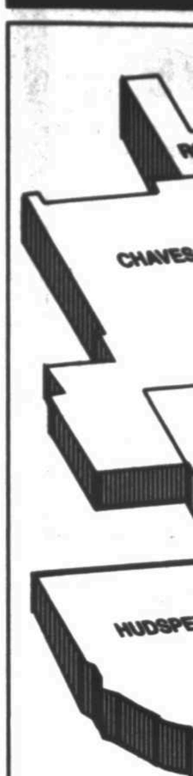

Uniqueness of Job:
Halliburton's VCA system uses extremely high cross-linked viscosity to control acid leak off into the formation providing much greater etched frac length. The uniqueness of this system over similar products offered by competitors is Halliburtons internal breaker system (VCIB). This internal breaker is capable of breaking the viscosity controlled acid at temperatures ranging from 100 to 250 °F insuring excellent formation clean up.

Future Work:
Most of the producers of the Strawn formation are now using Halliburton VCA systems for their completion stimulation work. No other service company has been able to match the success of Halliburton's VCA system. This success has also been achieved in the Canyon, Wolfcamp, and other formations in West Texas and SE New Mexico.

ACTIVITY HIGHLIGHTS

The rigs on the map above show counties in which significant drilling activity has taken place, as reported in the Activity Highlights below.

Exxon finds anomaly in Blinebry formation

Staff Reports

A plugback operation in Lea County, N.M. has apparently uncovered a "fat streak" in the Blinebry formation for EXXON CO. U.S.A.

Exxon plugged back the No. 15 J.L. Greenwood, a former Paddock producer, testing it in late March to pump 93 barrels of 38.4 gravity crude, 155 Mcfd and 23 barrels of water from perforations 5,409 to 5,764 ft. The interval was acidized with 5,372 gallons 15 percent HCL acid and fractured with 64,900 gallons gel and 235,000 lbs. 20/40 sand.

Exxon said wells offsetting the Greenwood produce 40, 30 and 20 barrels a day while the Greenwood flowed 100 barrels in the first five hours of testing. The well has been placed on pump and is choked back to allowable of 107 barrels a day and sometimes lower because the tank battery at the site fills up.

Another unusual characteristic is the well has a very low gas-oil ratio of 1,000 as opposed to the normal 20,000 to 30,000 GOR and the well continues to make low amounts of gas.

The company speculates that the workover tapped not into a new area but into a small pond not well connected to other areas since the well apparently isn't in communication with offsetting wells. Officials said when the company went in to plugback the well, it went on vacuum and gave quite a kick.

The well was plugged back in August 1989 and tested to pump 28 barrels of 37.5 gravity crude, 22 Mcfd and 189 barrels of water from Paddock perforations 5,042 to 5,178 ft.

Location is 760 ft. from south and 660 ft. from west lines of Section 9, T22s, R37e.

Brushy Canyon strike completed in Eddy

MARALO INC. has completed a Brushy Canyon discovery in Eddy County, N.M., 10 miles east of Carlsbad.

On potential test, the No. 1 Gold Rush "31" Federal Com. flowed 126 barrels of crude, 300 Mcfd and 176 barrels of water on a 20/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 150 psi. The well flowed from perforations 7,094 to 7,109 ft. No treatment was reported.

Permitted as a 14,800 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 14,200 ft.

Location is 1,650 ft. from north and 2,310 ft. from east lines of Section 31, T23s, R30e.

Chevron opens pool in War-Wink South

A new pool has apparently been opened in the War-Wink South field of Ward County with plugback of a Wolfcamp producer in the field, 7.5 miles northwest of Pyote.

CHEVRON U.S.A. Inc. plugged back the No. 1 State "XU" to flow 107 barrels of crude, 3,150 Mcfd and 298 barrels of water from perforations 6,966 to 7,948 ft. The well flowed on a 32/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 1,300 psi. The producing interval was acidized with 1,200 gallons of 7.5 percent NeFeHCL acid and fractured with 17,248 gallons of gel and 59,250 lbs. 20/40 sand.

Originally drilled to 13,000 ft., the well was plugged back to 8,020 ft. Five inch casing was hung from 10,846 to 12,999 ft.

Location is 933 ft. from south and 1,707 ft. from east lines of Section 13, Block 18, ULS survey.

Crane County field gets new gas pool

EXXON CO. U.S.A. has opened a new pool in the Sand Hills field of Crane County with recompletion of a former Tubb producer in the field, 15.5 miles west of Crane.

The No. 251 J.B. Tubb A/C 1 was tested for a calculated absolute open flow of 1,546 Mcfd from perforations 2,163 to 2,290 ft. The interval was acidized with 500 gallons 15 percent HCL acid and fractured with 121,208 lbs. sand.

The well was plugged back to 2,397 ft. from original depth of 4,797 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 4,787 ft.

Location is 1,311 ft. from south and 1,300 ft. from east lines of Section 22, Block B-27, PSL survey.

Conoco acquires Wingate system

HOUSTON — Conoco has purchased the Wingate fractionation, transportation and storage facilities in New Mexico from Meridian Oil Inc. Terms of the acquisition were not disclosed.

The Wingate system, located 70 miles south of Conoco's San Juan gas plant, has a fractionation capacity of 30,000 barrels-per-day, and includes 200 miles of natural gas liquids pipeline and 5 million gallons of product storage. Products produced at the plant include purity propane, isobutane, normal butane and natural gasoline. Products are transported to customers by rail, truck and pipeline.

The addition of the Wingate fractionator gives Conoco a total of 75,000 barrels-per-day fractionation capacity at plants located in New Mexico, Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana. Conoco owns and operates 20 natural gas processing plants in the United States.

Coastal sells Oklahoma acreage

HOUSTON — The Coastal Corp. announced that its exploration and production subsidiary, Coastal Oil and Gas Company, has sold producing properties and associated leasehold acreage located primarily in Oklahoma for in excess of $30 million to Louis Dreyfus Natural Gas Corp.

Coastal said the sale, which has already closed, involved more than 800 wells producing a total of 12 million cubic feet of gas and 375 barrels of oil per day net to the interest acquired by Louis Dreyfus Natural Gas Corp.

"Coastal previously announced that it will be consolidating its domestic E&P operations as it focuses on projects in South Texas, the Texas/Louisiana coastal plains, the Uinta Basin, and in the Gulf of Mexico," said David A. Arledge, Coastal's chief executive officer. "In doing so, we will dispose of fields which are marginal to our operations, further decreasing our overhead costs."

Coastal said it has already identified several opportunities in its core exploration and production areas where it intends to invest the proceeds from the sale to Louis Dreyfus Natural Gas.

Halliburton alliance starts $611 million BP rig

DALLAS (AP) — Halliburton Co. has formed an alliance to begin work on a $611 million project to design and build an offshore production rig for British Petroleum PLC.

The rig includes the biggest storage facility for unloading oil to ships, Halliburton said. It will serve BP's Schiehallion Field west of the Shetland Islands in the North Sea.

Halliburton said its partners in the project are Northern Ireland's Harland and Wolff, Monaco's Single Buoy Moorings and France's Coflexip.

The project, which Halliburton said will create 3,500 jobs across Europe, is scheduled for completion next February.

D-Jax introduces remote control for pump off controllers

On a marginal well, every penny of operating cost can be critical, right down to the minutes a pumper spends on site checking the well's operation.

This has led D-Jax to introduce a hand-held remote control for its Penny Pincher pump off controller. The remote will be available starting May 1.

The remote, which resembles a television remote control in design and operation, allows field personnel, engineers or technicians to change any of the operating parameters in an installed Penny Pincher. This can reduce the time required for such operations, as well as the liability associated with open gates.

The remote, which resembles a television remote control in design and operation, allows field personnel, engineers or technicians to change any of the operating parameters in an installed Penny Pincher.

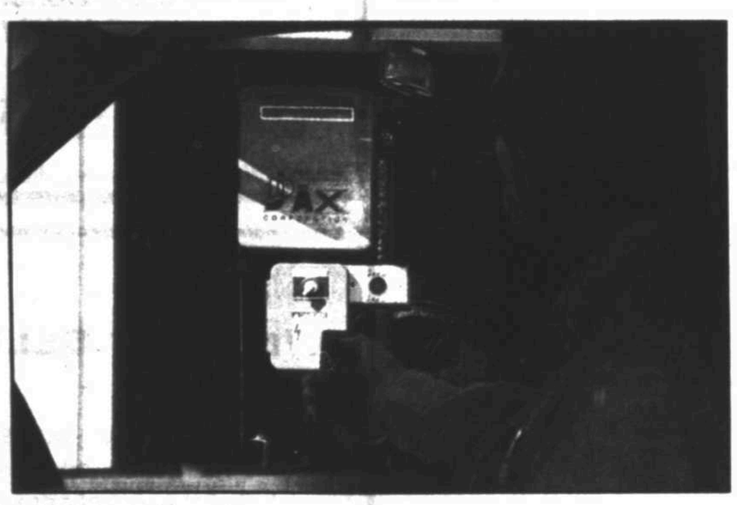

"This application of technology is a giant step into the future," said D-Jax President Dee Mills.

To insure proper security, the operator must first use the remote to enter a bypass code into the Penny Pincher. Once this is done, any needed parameter changes can be made.

In addition to the economic benefits, this new technology provides field personnel with a number of creature comforts. "You'll no longer have to unlock any gates or climb through any fences around the pumping unit," said Mills. "And you'll never have to be concerned about getting out of your comfortable vehicle to make any parameter changes in your Penny Pincher," said Mills.

You simply drive to within 20 or 25 feet of the unit and point the hand-held remote toward the LCD display through the windshield or side window of the vehicle. "You don't even have to see the characters on the controller," said Mills.

Several companies are already interested in the remote control.

D-Jax's Joe Mills demonstrates how easy it is to control the Penny Pincher by using the new remote control. This feature will save time and reduce liability for field personnel, engineers and technicians.

D-Jax has signed agreements for three companies to market its products in Argentina, Colombia and Trinidad.

"This is a very exciting time for us," said Mills. "This could mean much more business for us and more employment for Midland."

D-Jax already has more than 2000 Penny Pinchers installed in the U.S., Argentina, Colombia and the former Soviet republic of Kazakhstan.

"The Penny Pincher has already gained the reputation for being the most stable and dependable pump off control for beam-pumped wells," Mills said. "The remote makes the Penny Pincher a better and even more user-friendly pump off control."

This means more efficiency and lower costs for operators on those marginal wells.

D-Jax Incorporated was founded in 1972 by Dee Mills. The company markets the Penny Pincher as well as dynamometers worldwide. They also offer a range of oil-field services. Call them at 683-5710 or 1-800-446-DJAX.

D-Jax's Penny Pincher pump off controller is a cost effective solution for marginal wells. Its new remote control feature will let companies hold costs down even more.

THE D-JAX "Penny Pincher" Advantage!
The inexpensive "PennyPincher" Pump-off Control will: Greatly reduce your lifting cost on marginal wells. Increase the economic life of stripper wells.
The "PennyPincher" takes advantage of changing fluid entry levels. It will also: Reduce rod parts and tubing leaks caused by Pounding fluid. Cut energy costs by not operating a partially filled pump. Maximize production while minimizing costs.

PBGC CONTINUING EDUCATION

BASIC FUNDAMENTALS OF THE PETROLEUM INDUSTRY: Topics include historical aspects of oil and gas formation, exploration, legal aspects, leasing, drilling, completions, production, transportation, storage, refining and distribution, marketing, economics and politics. Qualifies for 12 RLP or 12 CPL recertification credits. Fee $260; Dr. Raymond Bass Jr., instructor; April 22-23, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

NEGOTIATION SKILLS: For personnel who negotiate sales, contracts, price and deliveries. The objective of the course is to use various strategies and tactics in negotiating, to learn counters of these strategies, to use time, to create win-win situations and to become a better negotiator. Qualifies for 6 RLP or 6 CPL recertification credits. Fee $145; Dr. Raymond Bass Jr., instructor; April 24, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

PLATE TECTONICS AND ITS RELATIONSHIP TO THE EXPLORATION FOR OIL AND GAS: Represents a continuation of the PBGC offering on plate tectonics from 1971-1981 by Drs. John Dewey, Walter Pitman and other noted specialists. During that series, it was Dr. Jack Elam's task to relate these academic specialties to the exploration for commercial hydrocarbons. Although the original series covered all of plate tectonics, Dr. Elam will emphasize rifting because the Permian Basin offers the ideal conditions for maturing, migrating, entrapping and preserving hydrocarbons, and the largest oil and gas fields on our planet overlie triple junctions. Although 3-D visualization is important because it is often ignored, many stress systems don't work mechanically. The course will be accompanied by a workshop where every participant will be offered the opportunity to test his own capabilities. Fees, lecture $40, workshop, $90, both $110; instructor Dr. Jack Elam; April 25, 7-10 p.m., April 26, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

For registration or further information call 683-2832.

MEETINGS

Mayor to address purchasing managers

Midland Mayor Bobby Burns will address the luncheon meeting of the Permian Basin affiliate, National Association of Purchasing Management. The meeting will be Tuesday at the Petroleum Club beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Burns will address economic issues facing the Permian Basin today, tomorrow and in the future.

Cost is $10 and reservations can be made by calling 684-7441.

West Central Texas chapter IADC to meet

The West Central Texas chapter, International Association of Drilling Contractors, will meet Tuesday at the Abilene Country Club beginning at 5:30 p.m.

Guest speakers Bubba Klosterman, president of Work Assessment Center, and Lisa Jones, director of Customer Relations, will discuss how to avoid hiring potentially high risk employees, how to decrease fraudulent claims and how to reduce costs related to work injuries.

Cost is $15.

Property management topic for SIPES

The Midland chapter, Society of Independent Professional Earth Scientists, will meet Wednesday at the Midland Country Club beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Michael Dunkel of Marathon Oil in Midland will speak on "Property Management Strategies for Oil Companies." He compares property management, acquisitions and dispositions to Monopoly in that the company that acquires the best property mix wins the profit game. The reasons companies need to manage the property mix are discussed along with the strategies played by small, large and all companies.

Since moving to Midland two years ago, Dunkel has worked primarily with acquisitions in the Yates Field Unit.

SPE study group schedules meeting

Jay Waldrop will address the Environmental Study Group of the Society of Petroleum Engineers Thursday at the Midland Center beginning at 11:30 a.m.

He will discuss the applications, advantages and disadvantages of electromatic surveys within the environmental field, presenting both a sandy soil and a caliche dominant study of two Andrews County fields.

He serves as health, safety and environmental specialist for Unocal.

Reservations can be made by calling 686-7329. Cost is $10.

Mobil advisor to speak to well loggers

The Permian Basin Well Logging Society will meet Thursday at the Petroleum Club beginning at 11:30 a.m.

John Gould, petrophysical advisor for Mobil Exploration & Producing in Midland will speak on "Cased Hole Resistivity: Formation Resistivity Measurements Through Metal Casing at the MWX-2 Well in Rifle, Colorado."

Cost is $12 for members, $14 for non-members. Reservations can be made by calling 684-0700.

SPE hosts technology transfer seminar

With transferring newly-developed technology from laboratories to the field a first-order priority among producing companies, the Society of Petroleum Engineers/Department of Energy Symposium on Improved Oil Recovery is entitled "Transferring Technology to Continously Improve Oil Recovery." It will be April 21-24 in Tulsa.

More than 800 engineers, scientists and managers are expected to attend the symposium with its 17 technical sessions featuring 144 technical presentations on existing advanced secondary and tertiary oil recovery techniques and new technologies for improving all stages of reservoir oil depletion.

The symposium will be preceded by five short courses April 20-21 on various aspects of IOR technology transfer.

Nuevo finals Giddings producer

HOUSTON — Nuevo Energy Co. announces the successful completion of its Houston Corporation Unit 1-H well located in the Independence Prospect, Giddings Field in Washington County, Texas. This Austin Chalk well, operated by Bexco Operating, Inc., tested at an initial rate of 18.6 million cubic feet of gas per day and 20 barrels of oil per day on a 28/64-inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 3,750 pounds per square inch.

Nuevo owns a 26.667% working interest in the well. Partners are Torch Energy Associates Ltd. with 13.33%, Bellport Oil & Gas, Inc. with 11%, Sage Energy with 7.5%, and Baker Exploration with 4.95%. The remaining 36.55% is privately held.

Nuevo, headquartered in Houston, Texas, is an independent oil and gas company, engaged primarily in the acquisition, development, production and exploration of oil and gas properties. Nuevo is traded on the New York Stock Exchange.

Tesoro Petroleum discovers oil in Bolivia

SAN ANTONIO — Tesoro Petroleum Corp. announced that its latest exploratory well in Bolivia has discovered oil and natural gas reserves. This represents the first oil discovery on Tesoro's 1.3 million acres under contract in Bolivia.

The Ibibobo X-2 well, drilled to a total depth of 7,474 feet, tested hydrocarbons in the Chorro and San Telmo sands. The Chorro pay zone, perforated from 5,624 feet to 5,640 feet, tested at 511 barrels per day (Bbl/d) of 44.6 gravity oil and 0.2 million cubic feet per day (MMcf/d) of natural gas on a 20/64-inch choke with 400 psi tubing pressure. The San Telmo pay zone, perforated from 2,891 feet to 2,927 feet, tested at 2.2 MMcf/d of gas and 6 Bbl/d of condensate on a 20/64-inch choke with 1,000 psi tubing pressure.

Extended production testing will be conducted to further analyze the size of the discovery, and additional seismic work will be performed to identify other drilling locations on the structure and to further evaluate the reserve potential.

Markets for oil exist both in Bolivia and through exports. However, additional natural gas production is constrained due to lack of access to markets and current contract terms.

Tesoro is operator and holds an approximate 73 percent working interest in the well.

Tesoro Petroleum Corporation is a natural resource company engaged in natural gas exploration and production, petroleum refining and marketing, and marine services.

Nuevo completes acquisition of California reserves

HOUSTON — Nuevo Energy Co. announces the successful completion of the acquisition of some 183.8 million barrels of oil equivalent, or million BOE, of California oil and gas properties through two separate transactions. Adjusted purchase prices payable at closing totaled $516.2 million.

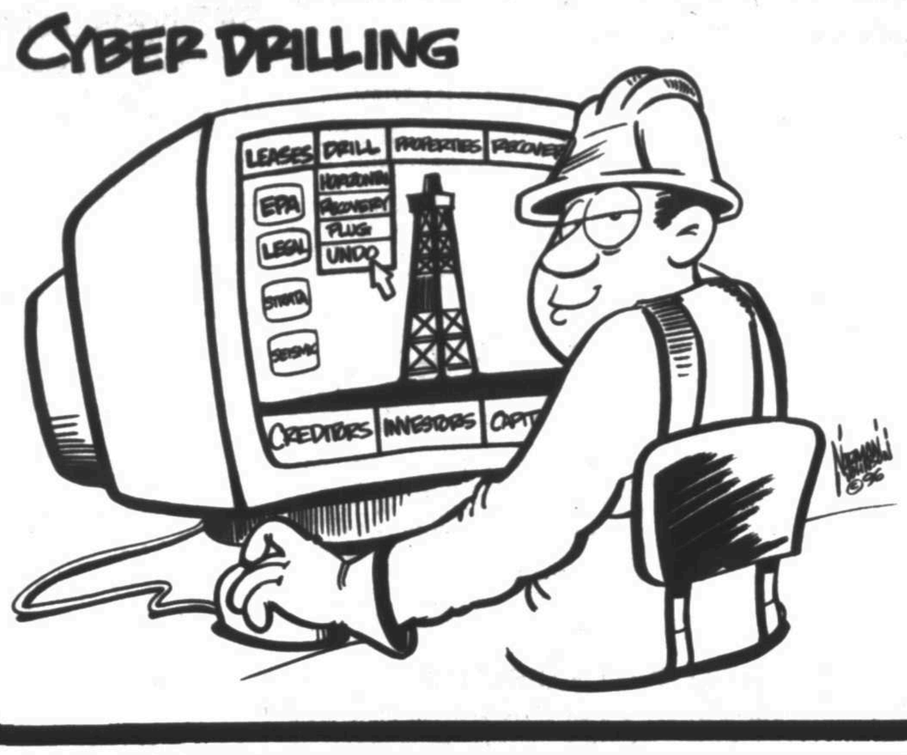

In the largest transaction, Nuevo acquired 163.9 million BOE of proved reserves from Union Oil Company of California, a subsidiary of Unocal Corporation, for cash totaling $480.5 million. The transaction was funded through proceeds from Nuevo's five million share common equity offering, its $160 million senior subordinated note offering, and funds from its committed revolving credit facility.

Simultaneously, Nuevo closed its acquisition of Torch Energy Advisors Inc.'s interest in the Point Pedernales Field and other undeveloped properties offshore California, which total 19.9 million BOE. Nuevo issued 1,275,000 shares of its common stock to Torch in payment of the $35.7 million acquisition price.

Nuevo, headquartered in Houston, Texas, is an independent oil and gas company, engaged primarily in the acquisition, development, production and exploration of oil and gas properties.

Republic Gas Partners completes buy of Mid-Louisiana companies

HOUSTON - Republic Gas Partners L.L.C. has finalized its purchase of 100 percent of the outstanding shares of capital stock of Mid Louisiana Gas Co., Mid Louisiana Marketing Co. and Mid Louisiana Gas Transmission Co. from Dallas-based Interstate Natural Gas Co. and Coho Energy Resources Inc.

Republic Gas Partners L.L.C. was formed to facilitate this acquisition. The investor group is comprised of two Midland-based companies, Cortez Natural Gas Co., a wholly-owned affiliate of Collins & Ware Inc. and Costilla Energy L.L.C., and two Houston-based companies, Republic Gas Corp. and Riverbend Gas Company Inc.

The board of directors elected Ted Collins Jr. chairman. Additionally, Jerry J. Langdon was elected president and Jimmy D. Wright senior vice president of each of the Mid Louisiana companies. Collins is the owner of Collins & Ware Inc. and has formerly held the position of president of Enron Oil & Gas and American Quasar. Langdon is the president of Republic Gas Corp. and formerly served as a member of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission from 1988-1993 and president of Texas IntraMark Gas Co. Wright was formerly president of Texas Southeastern Gas Pipeline.

The Mid-Louisiana pipeline is FERC jurisdictional. Its main asset includes 409 miles of mainly 22-inch pipeline extending from the Monroe field area south to the city of Baton Rouge serving various municipal and industrial customers along its route. The company currently has 44 employees in its Houston and Louisiana offices. Republic Gas Partners intends to retain the employees of the Mid-Louisiana companies.

Republic's management intends to expand the operations and revenues of the Mid-Louisiana companies through capital projects to access new markets in the highly competitive South Louisiana area while providing a variety of new services and supply options to existing customers.

"We believe that Mid-Louisiana Gas Co. is uniquely situated in a supply rich area of Louisiana to provide competitively priced supplies of natural gas to the growing markets along the Mississippi Rivers' industrial corridor. Our hope is that Mid-Louisiana Natural Gas will become the cornerstone asset in a much larger fully integrated natural gas company," said Langdon.

"Our banker took a personal interest in seeing our company succeed."

Randy Hill
Steve Gray
Vista Resources, Inc.

Even though Randy Hill and Steve Gray had good jobs in northeast Texas, these boyhood friends and natives of New Mexico continued to nurture long term plans of returning to the Permian Basin and going into business together. In 1993, they moved their families to Midland and started their first business. They established Vista Resources in 1995. Vista's business is acquisition, production, and exploration of oil and gas properties throughout the Permian Basin.

Starting from scratch in a challenging industry, Randy and Steve needed a banker willing to take a personal interest in the success of their business. They shopped around Midland and found a banker who took the time to provide the expertise and personal service they expected. Their bank is Norwest. Let our Norwest team of experienced bankers help you achieve the business success you seek. Norwest Bank Texas, Midland.

MISD school principal Patricia Stevens (left) gazes at an overhead projection shown by a parent speaking out against the district's multicultural curriculum at a past school board meeting. Ms. Stevens said she is in favor of the curriculum, "Celebrations." Supporters—including Judge Pat Baskin, and his wife Joan (left of Ms. Stevents), wore gold stars. Teachers and parents pack a school board meeting (above) to hear the curriculum discussed. The crowd spilled out into an adjoining room where the discussion was shown on closed circut television.Trustees had voted unanimously in favor of the curriculum prior to the discussion. Some Midland citizens, unhappy with the vote, asked that the subject be put back onto the agenda for public discourse.

'Celebrations' unhampered

Some parents vow to continue fight against multicultural curriculum

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Supporters aren't exactly getting their party hats out yet, but the school district's "Celebrations" curriculum is going forward. Although the multicultural curriculum was approved in January, some citizens have hotly protested that it conflicts with their religious and moral beliefs. A few parents also contend that the curriculum veers away from teaching basic subjects and they have filed formal objections with the school district.

"There are portions of the curriculum I and my husband (Tom) object to, but we would like to see it all thrown out of the district," said Jeanette Dragisic. The Dragisics will be taking their complaint to an MISD review committee on Tuesday.

The idea for a curriculum teaching about various religious and cultural holidays began in 1994 when Jewish families in Midland complained that too much instructional time was focused on Christmas, according to Patty Smith, social studies coordinator for Midland Independent School District.

More than two years later the curriculum was presented to board trustees. It included Christmas and the Jewish holiday Hanukkah, the seven-day African American celebration of Kwanzaa, the Day of the Dead Mexican holiday, which is similar to Halloween, and religious and cultural rituals of Native Americans, Hindus, Buddhists, Muslims and Jehovah's Witnesses.

School board trustees approved the multicultural curriculum in a 6-0 vote on Jan. 9. At that meeting teacher salaries and an MISD recruiting brochure were topics that generated the most discussion. The vote was 6-0 in favor, with Jackie Hamilton present but not voting.

"I strongly supported some things (in Celebrations), but some things I didn't like because of my Christian beliefs," Ms. Hamilton said, noting that her biggest concern was including Halloween among the holidays. The school board trustee said she was torn between "supporting many good things in the curriculum, and voting for some things I didn't like."

"I represent all children in my district of all races and religions, but there were some things in the curriculum I just couldn't quite go with," Ms. Hamilton said.

More than a month after the vote, at a Feb. 26 school board meeting, the item was put back on the agenda by concerned citizens. Ten parents spoke against "Celebrations," while 17 teachers and parents spoke in favor of it. Ms. Smith has also amassed a file full of letters from university professors and education consultants around the nation who have praised the curriculum.

PEOPLE SPEAKING out against the curriculum said it was borne from "a liberal agenda." They feared it would involve their children in pagan activities and make them question their Christian beliefs. People decried lessons teaching children Native American chants, a lesson asking them to call each other names to teach about diversity, and teaching Kwanzaa traditions.

The Dragisics, and Midlanders Billy and Janet Harris, who have publicly voiced concerns about the curriculum, said they have held meetings in the community attended by about 200 citizens.

"Plenty of people — teachers, parents and even someone from the State Board of Education — are appalled at this curriculum," Ms. Dragisic said.

Board trustees, however, supported Celebrations.

Trustee Dianne Anderson said curriculum opponents' all-or-nothing-approach was extreme.

"The group pointed out a couple of areas where I agree with them," she said. "But their proposal was to dump the whole curriculum. You don't have a group of people work a long time on something, say: 'thanks a lot,' and dump all of it out. The only thing they were going to be satisfied with was elimination, not alterations. I can't support that."

Ms. Anderson said no citizens voiced opposition to the curriculum during the board's first and second readings.

"The board really needs to be informed of opposition before the vote is taken," she said.

Ms. Anderson said she did not read every word of the five-volume kindergarten through fourth grade curriculum (about 1,000 pages).

She said she perused the curriculum and listened to teachers and Ms. Smith discuss Celebrations. "I am not a social studies teacher," she said. "And it's not the board's job to micro-manage everything."

Detractors however, said it is the board's job to go over curriculum with a fine tooth comb. "Our fight is with the board," Harris said.

At the Feb. 27 board meeting, Harris said the curriculum also

Kwanzaa raises controversy

By Myra Lee Salcedo

Parents who have problems with Midland Independent School District's new multicultural curriculum need to get specific about their concerns, according to school administrators.

Administrators and school board trustees have said detractors are too vague about their complaints. "I don't like any of it just doesn't cut it," said school board trustee Dianne Anderson. Some opponents of the Celebrations curriculum, however, have cited lessons on the African American Kwanzaa observance as offensive.

More than one Kwanzaa opponent has called the seven-day African American unifying experience "drivel" and a "made-up holiday."

Objections to Kwanzaa have raised the ire of African American school board trustee James Fuller, who has presented demonstrations of Kwanzaa foods, crafts and traditions to Midlanders in recent years.

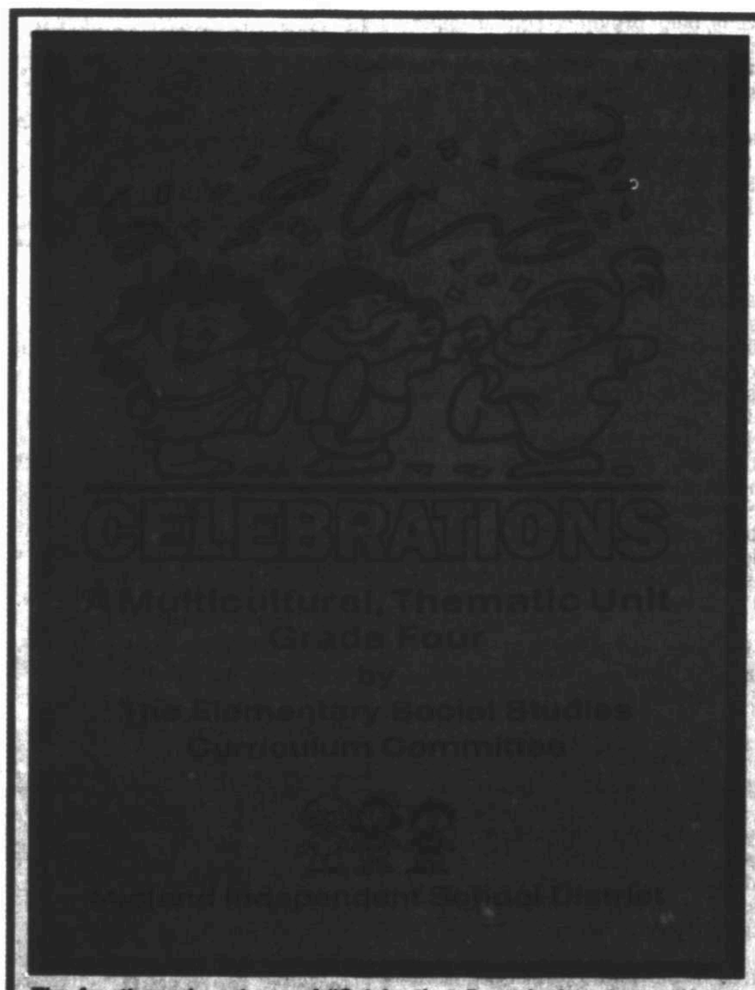

Kwanzaa is a relatively new holiday. The work "Kwanzaa" is Swahili and means "first fruits of the harvest," according to information from the American Humanist Association in Amherst, N.Y. The seven-day celebration — created in 1966 by Maulana Karenga — is carried out from Dec. 26 through Jan. 1. It celebrates seven principles — unity, self-determination, responsibility, cooperative economics, purpose, creativity and faith — one for each of the seven days. The celebration often includes African foods, music and storytelling.

Karenga was a civil rights activist who created the holiday to unify African Americans. He earned a doctorate degree and became a professor of black studies.

"The initial impression people got, was that celebrating Kwanzaa was going to interfere with Christmas," Fuller said. "It doesn't interfere with Christmas any more than Hanukkah does."

As for being a "made up holiday," Fuller said the Easter bunny and Santa Claus were later added to Easter and Christmas and have become commercialized. "I don't hear anyone speaking to those issues. There are a lot of loopholes in this rationale," Fuller said.

He questioned why only African American holidays are being singled out as inappropriate for students to learn about.

The fourth-grade volume of "Celebrations" curriculum (cover shown above) has drawn fire for including a lesson on Kwanzaa, the seven-day observance that celebrates African American cultural heritage.

Parents find some multicultural lessons offensive

The supplemental social studies curriculum entitled "Celebrations" has garnered praise from across the country — but has drawn criticism from a small group here in Midland.

A committee of 32 local educators created the supplement, which is designed to expand students' knowledge of the many cultures that comprise U.S. society, said Patty Smith, social studies coordinator for the Midland Independent School District.

Celebrations is designed around children's literature and it is adapted from a host of stories from award-winning authors, Ms. Smith said.

The main theme of Celebrations is teaching about how different Americans celebrate life — in this way, children learn about different cultures through a common reference of special times, Ms. Smith said.

"All through history, there have been different people who give thanks for different reasons," the MISD administrator said.

Although only kindergarten through fourth grade Celebrations supplements have been completed, the primary theme of celebrations as a tool for teaching about differing cultures eventually will be continued through sixth grade, she said.

The committee will continue its efforts until this curriculum supplement is completed for kindergarten through sixth grades.

THE CURRICULUM was created in response to some parents' concerns that there was no diversity taught in Midland schools but all studies being presented from a single point of view.

In the mission statement for the supplement, creators wrote:

"We will use student diversities as springboards for enriching the educational experiences offered by the social studies program, K-12. In order to empower students with the knowledge, appreciation, skills and attitudes necessary for democratic citizenship, for rational decision making and for purposeful living in the complex world of the twenty-first century, we will provide integrative, meaningful, challenging, active and value-based learning experiences for all students. Through these experiences, planned and modeled by teachers, we will encourage students to examine and evaluate character traits esteemed by members of a democratic society. As educators, we are committed to implementing instructional strategies which achieve an excellent and equitable social studies program."

The various studies in the curriculum are organized into year-long, grade-level themes. While the theme of celebrations continues through grade six, each year of school has its own theme.

The year-long theme for kindergartners is honoring special times with families; th efirst-grade theme is honoring family traditions; second-grade theme is honoring community and cultural traditions; third-grade theme is honoring life and history; fourth-grade theme is honoring a sense of place; fifth-grade theme is honoring coming of age; and sixth-grade theme is honoring the human spirit.

EACH STORY and the set of learning exercises associated with it follow the theme of celebrations and relates to the specific grade-level theme of the class, Ms. Smith said.

Finally, these exercises are tied to seasonal themes, since different times of the year are set aside for different celebrations.

As an example of how the curriculum supplement works, in the first-grade booklet there is a component taken from the story "In America" by Marissa Moss.

An adaptation of that lesson is as follows:

In this component, students read aloud a story about a grandfather who takes his young grandson, Walter, on a walk to the post office. During this walk, he talks to Walter about when he immigrated to America many years ago.

He talks about the places and the peo-

"It is a check for us to see if we have overlooked something," Rushing said. "We have an obligation to respond to parents to respect or honor their particular viewpoints. If something conflicts with a religious or moral belief we will honor that and give the child something else to do. But we won't give a blanket approval to opt out of a course, only approval to opt out of particular activities."

Rushing also said "a few parents cannot dictate what other students will learn. We as educators object to that."

The Dragisics said they will have 30 minutes each to present their case to the MISD review committee Tuesday. "It's somewhat intimidating," Ms. Dragisic said. But everybody has a choice of whether they want to do this (file a formal objection and voice complaints before an MISD committee) or not."

The Harrises and Dragisics said they are primarily concerned with the curriculum moving away from teaching the basics in social studies. Teachers and MISD administrators said the basics will be taught, that Celebrations is a supplement. However, administrators have said the Celebrations lessons will be interwoven into other social studies lessons, making it implausible for parents to opt out of all Celebrations material.

"But we are not teaching our children to read, write and subtract. The TAAS (Texas Assessment of Academic Skills) test scores show we're failing to do that," Dragisic said. "There is not going to be a TAAS test for this curriculum, so why are we bothering when we haven't taught the basics? When we are able to do that, then let's do a little something extra."

Dragisic noted that the high schools have been rated low performing by the state due to dropout rates and additional Reading Recovery (reading intervention) teachers were hired for the elementary schools last year.

"Why not spend 1 1/2 years finding out what is the matter with the reading program, instead of spending all that time on this curriculum?" Ms. Dragisic asked.

Administrators have said local demographics are changing and students need to have an understanding of the various cultures of other people, especially of people they come into contact with on a daily basis.

Of the 23,000-plus students in MISD, 54 percent are white, 35 percent are Hispanic and 10 percent are African-American. The Hispanic population is the fastest growing major ethnic group, having more than doubled in Midland County from 1980-94.

"My own kids get involved in all local celebrations of all peoples," said school board trustee James Fuller, an African American. "We have no problems with that." Fuller said parents attempting to keep their children from participating in various celebrations are "stifling them."

"They are trying to keep their kids from the inevitable," he said. "We are becoming a global community — something neither Harris nor the religious right can stop. The demographics are changing, and they need to look beyond their narrow perspectives. They can keep on doing what they are doing, but they won't stop other people from participating in community celebrations."

Dragisic said if he and his wife can't get the curriculum tossed from MISD they will take their cause to Austin and Washington, D.C. "Someone in our community has got to stop this," he said.

OTHER MIDLANDERS however, have praised the curriculum. Midland High School student Lenny Ledbetter, at a previous school board meeting, asked those offended by the curriculum to "describe an American."

"An American," he said, "is a conglomerate of several heritages and cultures. This is another form of knowledge. Would you deny us knowledge?"

At the same meeting, Midlander David Rosen said, "The curriculum is showing what others celebrate. It is not saying: 'You need to celebrate this.' "

Trustee Jackie Hamilton said she "strongly encourages" parents to go their nearest school to check out the curriculum and decide for themselves if is appropriate for their children. "Take it home. Look at it and read the activities," she said. "I've even taken the complete set to my pastor to look at."

The Dragisics and the Harrises however, said they want the curriculum thrown out, and want the district to return to emphasizing the basics.

"Our agenda is academics and a quality education," Harris said.

"We don't intend to give up," Ms. Harris said.

'The true genius of 'Celebrations' ... is that it thoughtfully and fairly addresses religious traditions. For example, you have raised the Pilgrim story of 1620 to a powerful and universal theme by focusing on the core theme of pilgrimage, whether it be a Jew from Russia or a family from Jamaica. In doing so, you will strengthen the meaning of such holidays for all children of all backgrounds. Such is the true goal of education.'

—Bert Bower, executive director of Teachers Curriculum Institute, Mountain View, Calif.

Dianne Anderson
School board trustee

'If part of the objection is religion, if religion is the issue, then take it all out. We can't possibly make everybody happy in that area.'

'This curriculum is supposed to be prejudice reducing, but it is devisive. It points out we are all different. We try to teach our children we are all God's children. We don't point out differences to our kids. Why should we have to debrief our kids when they come home from school?'

— Janet Harris, parent

James Fuller
School board trustee

'Parents are trying to keep their kids from the inevitiable. We are becoming a global community — something neither Harris nor the religious right can stop.'

'I don't mind my children knowing about other religions. But, I don't want them actively participating in them.'

— Billy Harris, parent

Jackie Hamilton
School board trustee

'I represent all children in my district of all races and religions. But, there were some things in the curriculum I just couldn't go with.'

'We have a zillion objections to this curriculum, but our main point is that our schools severely need to get back to teaching the basics — not all this touchy, feely stuff.'

— Jeanette Dragisic, parent

exercise is:

■ Remind students of these facts learned from the story: a group of singers called a "drum" sing as they beat a rhythm in unison on a large drum. (1) Listen to Indian chants. (2) Make a drum and sing powwow songs.

In the first-grade curriculum, exceptions were taken to the story "Thunder Cake," again because the story was believed to anthropomorphize nature.

It is a story of a Russian grandmother helping her granddaughter deal with her fear of thunder by baking a thunder cake — thus "shifting her thoughts from Mother Nature to warm, yummy thunder cake."

Also in the third-grade curriculum, a story is read about a grandmother who has a red birthmark on her face and is insulted by anther person for this disfigurement.

In one of about 12 exercises following this story, students are asked to:

"Talk about good and bad uses of words and their effects on others. Place students in a situation in which a friend calls another student an ugly name. Discuss how the name makes the person feel and how students may encourage their friends not to use words that hurt ..."

"I teach my kids name calling is a bad thing," said parent Billy Harris. "They try to stop this on the playground then promote it in the classroom. And once you call someone a bad name, you can never take it back.

Trustee Dianne Anderson agreed. "I don't understand the thinking behind calling a 10-year old four-eyes or freckle face. Those things can hurt. Those things are personal. I'd like to see that pulled out of the curriculum," she said.

CARVER CENTER Principal Patricia Maurer said the activity is a way to teach that name calling is inappropriate. "The bottom line is anyone can take any activity and find something wrong with it. But any teacher can take any activity and turn it into a positive experience," she said. "There is a larger political issue here about controlling public schools. There is a fear that teaching new things will diminish the richness of teaching American history. That is not true."

Finally, some concerns were raised over a section of the fourth-grade supplemental curriculum that teaches about the various celebrations around the world that utilize masks, such as the Mexican Day of the Dead holiday, which is much like Halloween.

"Day of the Dead is also All Saints Day. It depends on how you look at it," Ms. Maurer said. "Unfortunately some people think learning about other religions will shake their faith. I lived in Turkey with Moslems for some years. It only affirmed our beliefs if anything.

"As public educators we have the responsibility to bring every child to the table to eat of knowledge," Ms. Maurer said. "Race relations in this country are sorely in need of mending. Teaching about other points of view, cultures and traditions is a good start."

'Celebrations' earns accolades

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

The Celebrations supplemental social studies curriculum developed by Midland educators has garnered interest and praise from noted educators throughout Texas and across the nation.

The curriculum has been presented at educator conferences and has put the name Midland on the lips of educators from Washington state to Washington, D.C., according to letters received by Patty Smith, MISD social studies coordinator.

In response to the curriculum, Sarah W. Bednarz, assistant professor of geography for Texas A&M University writes:

"I am very impressed and wish you to extend my congratulations on a fine and imaginative piece of work to the team of classroom educators who worked under your leadership. It strikes me as a wonderfully motivating curriculum, challenging, academically rigorous and yet enjoyable for students and teachers alike.

"I wish to comment especially on the geography content. So often curricula take a very narrow approach to geography, asking students to merely locate places and, perhaps, to label maps. The activities featured in this document go way beyond that and suggest many opportunities for students to develop a deep understanding of the places that they are reading about and studying. By the end of the third-grade, Midland students will have a much better sense of the geography of their town, region, state and world...," Ms. Bednarz writes.

Walter C. Parker of the University of Washington in Seattle writes:

"I was struck, as I always am when I read your committee's work, by the careful attention to curriculum design principles and elements. Achieving a balance of perspectives and cultures is such a difficult task, especially in a society that is as culturally diverse as ours. It is a task on which reasonable people will disagree, to be sure, but in my view you have succeeded admirably. Also, helping children build powerful ideas on the basis of these lessons ... should earn your team yet another award."

DONALD DAVIS of Storyteller Inc., in North Carolina writes:

"I spend about one hundred school days each year consulting in school systems all across the country. I constantly hear verbalized needs for exactly what you have put together in the Celebrations curriculum. Your school board and your system can be proud, first of all, of the work you have done and, secondly, excited that this just may be a model curriculum for school systems not just in Texas, but in many parts of our country as well."

David G. Lazear of the New Dimensions of Learning institute in Chicago writes:

"Finally, and this may be the most important point, this curriculum prepares students to be effective citizens of our nation and our world. The students who inhabit our classrooms on a daily basis will live their lives in a world that is more culturally diverse than anything we have experienced heretofore. I believe that this curriculum not only provides children with the knowledge base needed to be effective, responsible citizens, but it provides them an opportunity to learn the human skills necessary to live as loving and caring people. I believe our future survival as a planet depends on the development and nurturing of these skills within the lives of children who are now in schools."

Elizabeth M. Lee of the Hockaday School in Dallas writes:

"The value for the students, it seems to me is incalculable. First of all ... this is the sort of curriculum that will prepare them for historical methods and literary analyses that they will employ in their history and English courses for all of their school lives. Secondly, the specifics that they will learn are necessary for life in our global world and vital for understanding the richness and diversity of our own culture. Lastly, this is a sensible and moral way to solve the celebrations dilemma. All schools face the dilemma of celebrating holidays in a way that will include the entire community..."

"It is clear from my analysis that this is a very powerful curriculum for teaching celebrations," writes Margit E. McGuire, past president of the National Council for the Social Studies.

Joyce Armstrong Carroll and Edward E. Wilson of the New Jersey Writing Project in Texas write:

"On every level the content shows the kind of depth that invites the opportunity to discover, uncover, probe, question and look at (the) students' world from a global perspective. We are, of course, pleased to see so many connections in a social studies curriculum with the basic acts of reading and writing, with children's literature, with classical thought and with basic history ..."

REX M. ELLIS of the Center for Museum Studies of the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C., writes, "it seems clear to me that a great deal of thought, consultation and vision has gone into (the curriculum's) design."

Kevin P. Colleary of the Harvard University's Graduate School of Education writes:

"In response to your questions about its usability, appropriateness and overall quality, I must say that it is one of the best, most well crafted and comprehensive examples of teacher support materials that I have ever seen for use at the elementary level. The infusion of literature in the social studies is something with which teachers constantly wrestle. This piece gives them an excellent mix of practical applications and background information with which to work."

Similar accolades were garnered from Ann Rogers of the Texas Education Agency, Bert Bower of the Teachers Curriculum Institute in California, Barbara T. Pitts of the Anti-Defamation League and other educators locally and throughout the country.

SAN ANGELO — ALFRED G. Gilman, co-recipient of the 1994 Nobel Prize for Physiology or Medicine, will be the speaker for the 1996 Roy E. Moon Distinguished Lectureship in Science, April 23, at Angelo State University.

Gilman is currently professor and chairman of the Department of Pharmacology at the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center in Dallas, a position he has held for the past 15 years. Gilman is known as a pioneer in molecular research.

His 1994 prize, which he received along with biochemist Martin Rodbell of the National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences in North Carolina, was the result of their discovery of the nature and function of key "pathway molecules" known as G-protiens, which determine cell response to non-sensory information. With their respective initial research in the late 1960's and early 1970's, Gilman and Rodbell initiated a cascade of findings, which proved that chemical signals and hormones that enter cells produce certain chemicals that require a receptor, a transducer, and an amplifier, eventually discovering and identifying the transducer's link between the receptor and the amplifier. Their observations provided for the first time a firm molecular basis for understanding certain signal processes present throughout nature.

Gilman will present two lectures at ASU on April 23. He will give a scientific lecture at 2:15 p.m. in the University Auditorium on "G Proteins and Transmembrane Signaling." His public lecture is scheduled for 8 p.m. in the Houston Harte University Center Ballroom, speaking on "Understanding Cell Communication: The Path to Tomorrow's Treatments."

Gilman has served on the editorial boards of several major scientific journals, and was the primary editor of perhaps the best-known textbook of pharmacology, Goodman and Gilman's "The Pharmacological Basis of Therapeutics," in 1980, 1985, and 1990.

THE 1996 CREATIVE Writing Contest Reception and Awards Ceremony will be at 10:15 a.m., April 28 in the Roadrunner Room of the Scharbauer Student Center.

The contest is a 22-year Midland College tradition that recognizes student excellence in poetry, essay and short story writing.

This year the prize money awarded winners in each of the three categories has increased to $100 for first place, $75 for second place and $50 for third place, according to contest co-coordinator Billy Feeler.

"We have a good creative writing program, and we want to continue that tradition of excellence," he said. "This is our small way of rewarding that excellence."

The contest is an outgrowth of Midland College's creative writing program, which offers special classes in poetry, short fiction and novel writing. The spring contest and the Hilda-Simmons Levitt Poetry Contest in the fall gives the college's student writers a chance to be published and recognized for their achievements in writing.

For more information contact Billy Feeler 6854631.

Mary Beck

Citing family, church and school as the cornerstones of her early life, Mary Beck fondly remembers the family discussions around the dinner table that later influenced her decision to teach. Beck states, "...my parents' involvement in our education was destined to have an impact on my future." A graduate of Southern Methodist University with a bachelor in music, Beck has taught choir, guitar, handbells, fine arts and music classes to students in Abilene and Midland. She has taught Fine Arts at Greathouse Elementary for the past two years. Believing that all students can learn, Beck tries to give them the motivation. "It is both my challenge and joy to find the learning key needed by each student to strive for a personal best...," Beck says. She believes that it takes the united efforts of community, students, teachers and parents to educate a child. Beck is highly respected by colleagues, parents, students and others who know her. Greathouse Principal, William Maurer writes, "As well as being an extremely talented classroom teacher, Beck is an invaluable member of our school community." Beck has participated in numerous workshops and on committees and is a member of several professional organizations. She is also very active throughout the community and her church.

MC Health Science's new 'patient' gets name

Suggestions for her name included Florence Nightingale, Minnie Problems and Ima Goodpatient.

But, a committee of doctors from the Midland County Medical Society, which donated $1,300 for the purchase of the Health Sciences division's new training mannequin, and MC Health Sciences faculty decided the best name for the star "patient" was Dona Hurtme.

A contest for Health Sciences students to name the mannequin drew more than 140 entries, but Nursing Student Holly Routh came up with the winning name and a $50 dinner for two at Venezia.

Dona is an appropriate name for the mannequin since her many uses include allowing students to practice drawing blood, starting IVs, doing breast exams, getting a simulated blood return and using universal procedures against transmitting disease, according to Nursing Instructor Pat Sullivan.

Dr. J.E. Mendez, president of the Midland County Medical Society, Dr. Ronald Boren, a Medical Society member, MC Nursing Student Holly Routh and MC Nursing Instructor Pat Sullivan look at Dona Hurtme, the new training mannequin for MC Health Sciences students. Routh won the contest to name the mannequin purchased with funds donated by the Medical Society.

"The County Medical Society realizes the contributions MC students make to the community," Dr. Ronald P. Boren, a member of the Medical Society's funds committee, said of the Society's decision to provide funds for the mannequin's purchase.

The Medical Society's President Dr. J.E. Mendez said he views the mannequin as a valuable teaching tool. "We knew this was a vital piece of equipment for all students," he said.

"This is a symbiotic relationship," Boren said. "The medical community and MC's Health Sciences Department need each other and help each other."
