Desert crash claims four elite flyers

INDIAN SPRINGS, Nev. (AP) — Strict training to keep their eyes only on the plane next to them may have led three pilots of an elite Air Force stunt squad to blindly follow the lead of a fourth and slam into the desert after a 400 mph dive.

"Normally, he (the leader) is the only one looking where he's going," said Air Force Sgt. Jack Conner. The Thunderbirds' commander, Maj. Norman L. Lowry III, died along with the three other pilots in Monday's accident during practice.

The Thunderbirds pilots, who sometimes fly as little as three feet apart in their T-38 Talons, are trained to "fly off the commander-leader," watching only the plane next to them and not the ground or instruments because of the tight formation, Conner said.

"We don't know whether it was a mid-air collision or a case of follow the leader into the ground," he said.

"At the speed they were going when they came out of the loop, I just thought, 'That's the end of that for them fellows,' " said W.G. Wood of Indian Springs, who witnessed the crash as he drove along U.S. 95. "It happened so fast I couldn't tell you if one hit sooner. It looked like all of them hit at the same time."

The loss of the four officers was the most devastating accident in the history of the precision flying team and left its future in doubt.

A resident across the highway from the auxiliary base where the flight team practiced said he heard the whine of the red, white and blue jets as they climbed to a high arch, then the scream of the engines as they plunged downward to complete the maneuver.

"Then boom-boom-boom, boom-boom-boom as they hit the ground one after another," said Loren Conaway.

George LaPointe, a construction worker, watched the jets disappear behind tree tops.

"They didn't come back up," he said. "They were going full tilt, really screaming, and at the time I thought they were too low."

Air Force officials said a panel would be formed to investigate the crash — an inquiry expected to take up to three weeks.

The crash came as the four planes were completing what was known as a "line-abreast loop" — climbing side-by-side for several thousand feet in a slow, backward loop, then hurtling down at more than 400 mph, leveling off at about 100 feet.

Besides Lowry, 37, of Radford, Va., killed were Capt. Willie Mays, 32, of Ripley, Tenn.; Capt. Joseph Peterson, 32, of Tuskegee, Ala.; Capt. Mark E. Melancon, 31, of Dallas.

Lowry became commander of the Thunderbirds in October after Col. David L. Smith died when his jet crashed on takeoff following a performance in Cleveland.

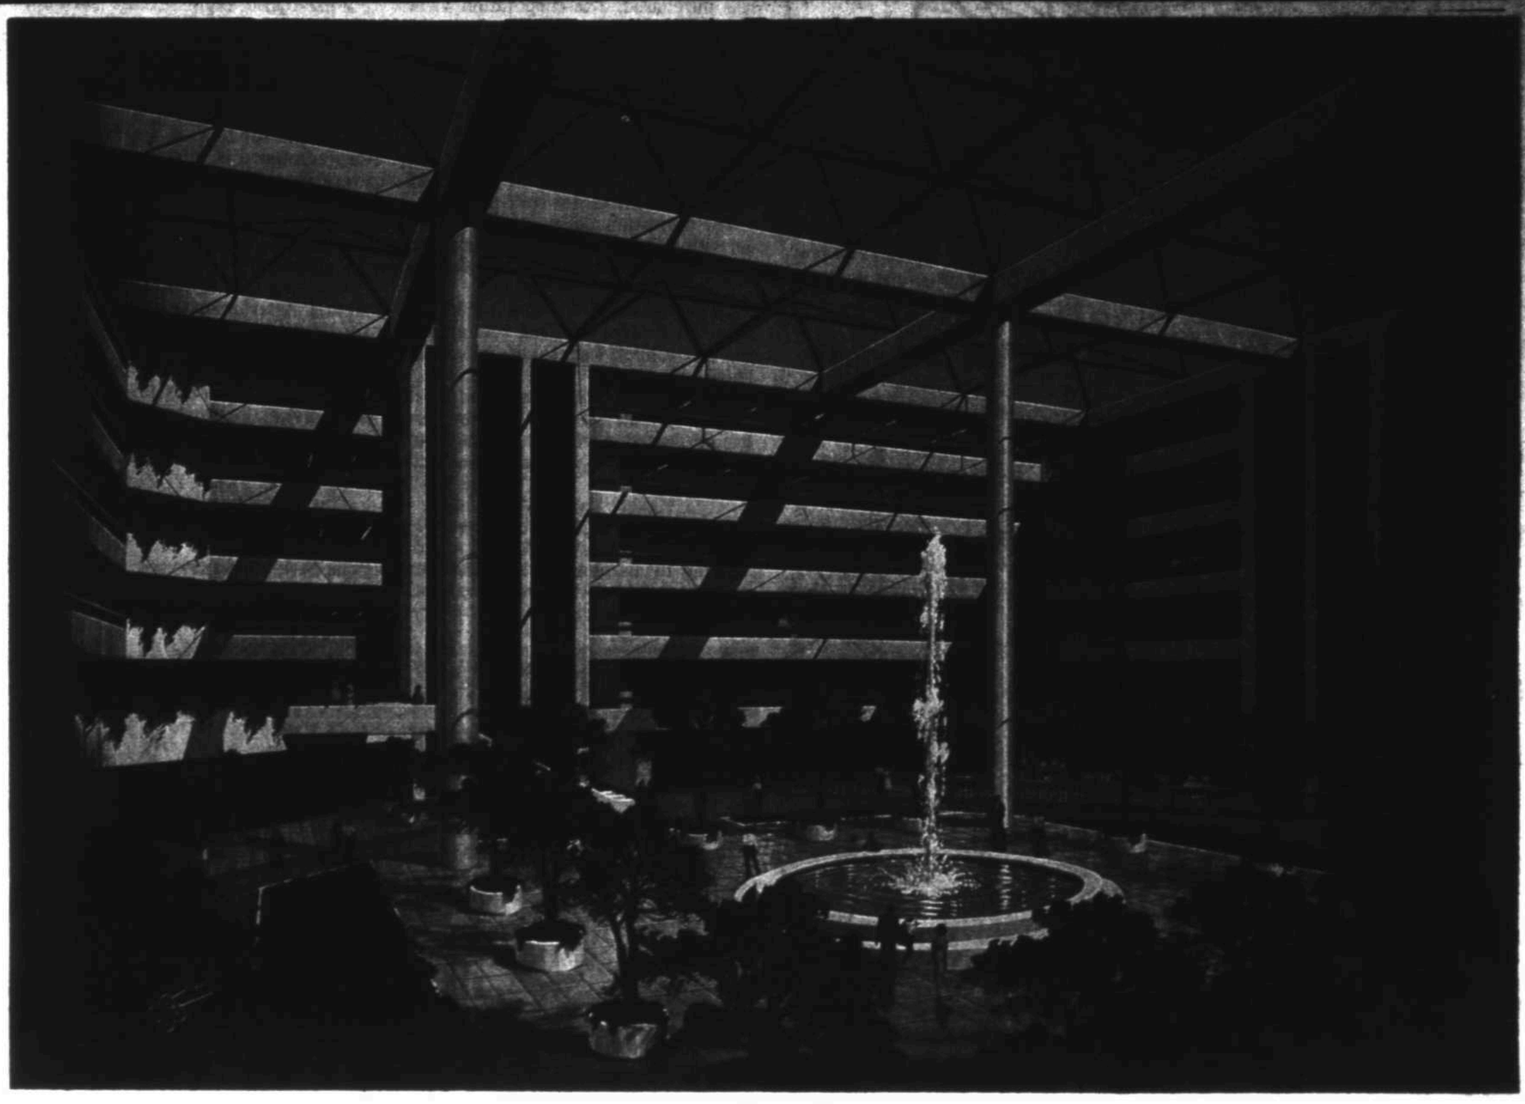
Another Thunderbird officer died in a crash last year before 80,000 spectators at an Ogden, Utah, air show.

"It's too early to speculate as to what will happen" with the Thunderbirds, said Air Force spokesman Col. Mike Wallace. "Obviously, the loss of four pilots and four aircraft is a severe blow. But we have snapped back before and could conceivably snap back again."

Two of the pilots killed Monday had talked of the perils they faced when companions were killed last year.

"Accidents in flying are something you learn to live with," Peterson once said in an interview. He added that pilots learn to accept "but for the grace of God, it could be anyone of us anytime, anywhere."

The planes crashed at Indian Springs, an auxiliary field 40 miles northwest of their home field, Nellis Air Force Base.



You can bank on it

The climate-controlled atrium of the planned ClayDesta National Bank in ClayDesta Plaza will cover 125,000 square feet and will be available for concerts, shows and other civic activities. In addition to seating areas, the atrium will feature flowering plants and flowing fountains.

Building of ClayDesta bank begins

Work has begun on ClayDesta National Bank building in ClayDesta Plaza, a 175-acre office building-business complex being developed in north Midland, according to Clayton W. Williams Jr.

The six-floor building, with about 475,000 square feet of rentable office space, will be one of the largest office buildings in Midland, according to Williams. Plans call for 600,000 square feet of space under one roof as the building will be constructed around an atrium that will cover about 125,000 square feet of ground area. Underground parking will be provided for 240 vehicles.

Williams said 13.9 acres of the 175-acre development have been dedicated to the new bank. The building should be ready for occupancy about July 1, 1983.

Among the building's major tenants will be ClayDesta National Bank which now is being organized, Cities Service Company and the Clayton W. Williams Jr. companies. Those concerns will utilize about half of the 475,000 square feet of space.

The building's ground level will be occupied by exclusive retail businesses, Williams said. The bank's offices will be located on the second floor and will be reached by escalator from the atrium area.

Four sets of elevators will serve the building.

The climate-controlled atrium will feature a winter garden effect and will include trees, shrubs, flowering plants, flowing water and seating areas. Williams said the spacious atrium area will be available for concerts, shows and other civic activities.

Each of the upper level floors will have balconies overlooking the atrium.

Meetings held on certificates of need

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Four separate public meetings were held Monday night in about five hours to consider three certificate of need applications to bring psychiatric and/or substance abuse services to the Midland-Odessa area and to consider the proposed use of a federal funds application for the Permian Basin Planned Parenthood, Inc.

Presentations to the Permian Basin Health Systems Agency Projects Review Committee by Midland Memorial Hospital and Parkview Hospital for psychiatric and/or substance abuse services were the third and fourth hearings, but were the highlight of the evening's business which lasted until 11:30 p.m.

MMH, represented by nine hospital officials, opened its presentation with a brief description of the proposed 50-bed behavioral health service facility that will be located on a five-acre plot at Wadley and Whittle avenues.

The $3.4 million chemical dependency unit will be built on 3.5 acres with 32 adult and 18 adolescent beds for alcoholism and substance abuse treatment.

FOUR HOSPITAL officials testified, including Ray Branson, MMH president; a representative from TriBrook Inc., the hosptial's long-range management firm; and a local psychiatrist.

Questions from the committee and the public included funding, indigent care policy, staffing, after-care and access to the proposed site.

Branson said there probably would be a general obligation bond issue for the funding with the possibility of community contributions if the bond issue should fail. This would tentatively be set for spring or early summer with construction of the facility to begin in September and completed in 18 months.

The indigent care policy would include working with the 17 surrounding counties to admit any patient meeting the facility's criteria. Branson said physicians who were on MMH staff would be able to admit patients, while physicians from surrounding counties will have an option to apply for courtesy staff positions at MMH so those patients can be admitted.

ADMISSIONS WILL be based on a referral basis without denial to anyone meeting the critera, Branson said. These referrals include family, school, service providers and physicians within the Permian Basin.

"We're talking about a regional facility here," Committee Chairman Durward Wright said. "We need to understand the location in relation with Loop 250 for access roads."

Branson said the facility site is less than a half-mile from Loop 250.

In regard to after-care, Branson explained that the program includes working "very closely with the family for support."

"We don't want a revolving door," Branson said, referring to the support a patient must have for sobriety.

Wright then opened the public hearing for Parkview Hospital's application to convert its 60-bed acute care facility to a 60-bed psychiatric hospital for substance abuse patients. The facility would cost $500,000 without any new construction for the proposed 38 adult and 24 adolescent general psychiatric patients and 14 substance abuse patients.

Leading Republicans see excise tax as risky exercise

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's reported plan to impose excise taxes on some consumer goods will hurt the "little guy" and risk economic and political defeat for the GOP, two leading House Republicans say.

In an apparent split within Republican ranks, House GOP Whip Trent Lott of Mississippi and Rep. Jack Kemp of New York, chairman of the House Republican Conference, said they "are deeply disturbed by the lack of political and economic common sense demonstrated in the current tax-increase campaign."

They made their remarks in a Jan. 14 letter to budget director David A. Stockman.

Reagan is expected to announce his plans during his State of the Union address to a joint session of Congress Jan. 26.

Reagan aides gave a preview of the speech Monday to Senate Republican Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee and House GOP Leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois.

Baker declared the address would be "a humdinger" but refused to reveal details.

"I think it's going be full of substance...far more than just a report; I think there'll be innovative ideas and suggestions, and I think it will chart the course for our political debate for months and maybe for years to come," Baker said.

Officials have said previously that Reagan, facing ballooning budget deficits, has decided tentatively to call for an increase in excise taxes on certain consumer goods and turn the revenue over to states.

In exchange, the states also would inherit federal programs, including some dealing with highways, education and welfare.

Under the plan, taxes would be increased on alcohol, gasoline, tobacco, telephones and perhaps some "luxury items," some sources said.

Congressional sources, who asked not to be identified, said White House advisers expected the proposal to turn several federal programs over to the states would become the dominant issue of the 1982 congressional session and elections.

These sources said Baker and Michel expected a difficult time pushing Reagan's program through Congress, adding that final decisions apparently had not been made on which programs the president would propose turning over to the states.

But sources said several days ago that the money from proposed excise taxes and perhaps other revenue would be enough to transfer as many as 40 programs from federal control.

Meetings held on certificates of need of operations and development for American Medical Center, which owns Parkview, delivered most of the presentation.

BARKLEY SAID AMC was looking for a facility to convert to a psychiatric hospital in June 1980 when Parkview was purchased. The corporation owns nine hospitals, five of which are psychiatric facilities.

He highlighted points and concerns for the facility stating that AMC has a proven track record, it has never sold a hospital it acquired, is not asking for a multi-million dollar project, has the ample funds for construction and recruitment means for staffing.

The admission policy would include accepting indigent patients for emergency and stabilization, transferring the patient to another facility.

Two witnesses for the Parkview application were Dr. Jack Walton and the Rev. Chuck Redger, of Teen Challenge.

Walton emphasized the need for a neuro-psychiatric facility in this area, but advocated it would serve the community better if it were a private facility.

"WHOM SHOULD we ask to supply us with this facility?" Walton asked, replying to his question that the government should not be allowed to "take us from the womb to the tomb" every-time a community has a need.

"When patients have been refused to Midland's tax-supported hospital, they were admitted to the private-supported facility," he said, referring to his experience as a staff doctor at both MMH and Parkview.

"This organization (AMC) which now owns Parkview is the only responsible group who pays its bills," he said.

Redger also expressed the need for such a facility, adding that a chemical dependency problem is affecting people everywhere. He said that a young family man who was denied admission to Big Spring State Hospital because of the lack of room for voluntary admission is "driving to Lubbock every other day to get his methadone so he can kick his habit — there is a need."

A surprise witness, Bob Dixon, executive director of the Permian Basin Community Center for Mental Health/Mental Retardation, came forward to address the committee.

HE APOLOGIZED to MMH, Southwest and Parkview officials because he had refused to testify for one or the other, but added that a discrepancy in Parkview's application prompted him to appear.

"There is a tremendous need in this community for these beds; I can't stress that too much," he said. "Most questions have been answered, but there is a discrepancy in Parkview's indigent care policy."

The Parkview application states:

"Patients will be admitted to Parkview Hospital without regard to race, sex, religion or national origin. To assist indigent persons in accessing the proposed facility, Parkview Hospital will seek to contract with the local MHMR Center, which funds a program designed to lend financial assistance to indigent persons who are in need of in-patient care."

"We (MHMR) are not a third party payment (organization)," Dixon said and then quickly left.

In a telephone interview this morning, Liley said "we stand corrected," in response to Dixon's comment.

He added that the deciding factor for the facility "sounds like it will be government versus private."

BECAUSE THE meeting was lengthy, the committee decided to withhold its recommendation until 6:30 p.m. Wednesday prior to the HSA Governing Board meeting. The Governing Board also will hear the Projects Review Committee's recommendation, and then will make its recommendation. It will then be taken to the Texas Health Facilities Commission for a final decision.

The committee heard testimony from Planned Parenthood first. The committee unanimously approved a $283,000 continuation grant from the Department of Health and Human Services for Planned Parenthood to continue family planning services for 1982-83.

The second public hearing was a continuation from the Jan. 12 meeting for West Plains Hospital of Southwest Health of Midland/Odessa application for a psychiatric hospital to be constructed at Midland Air Terminal.

The corporation is proposing a $4.169 million 60-bed facility to be located on 2.9 acres with substance abuse facilities.

Wright said West Plains asked to be put on the agenda for those members who were unable to attend the Jan. 12 meeting because of a winter storm watch.

"You have been furnished the transcripts," he said to the seven-member committee. "If there are any questions, they should be directed as a continuation from last week's hearing."

Questions were raised from the committee and the audience concerning noise from air traffic, the number of treatment centers Southwest already has and its after-care program.

Carla Cox, attorney for Southwest, and Michael Bullit, vice president of operations for Southwest, explained noise from the airport would not hinder treatment at the center. Bullitt added that Southwest owns another facility in El Paso, but it is not a psychiatric hospital. He also explained the after-care program.

"We want to work closely with Alcoholics Anonymous and other organizations free of charge," he said.

G. Thane Akins, 48, announced today his intentions to file for re-election as mayor of Midland.

The announcement came during a news conference in City Hall Council Chambers prior to a special council meeting.

Saying it was a difficult decision, Akins cited the problems ahead dealing with Midland's tremendous growth as the primary reason for seeking another two-year term.

Filing for the April 3 election begins Feb. 1.

DuBose plans for re-election

Judge Willie B. DuBose, presiding judge of Midland County's court-at-law since its inception in 1978, today announced his candidacy for re-election under the Democratic Party's banner.

DuBose, 42, a Lamesa native who served as the Midland County attorney in 1966-71, expressed appreciation to the people for allowing him serve the citizenry, recounted the court's accomplishments, and looked forward to the challenges in his next four-year term of office.

"I am grateful to the citizens of Midland for allowing me to serve as judge of the county court-at-law these few years," DuBose said. "We have been able to accomplish many of our objectives during this time, and I am looking forward to the challenges, as the number of cases filed continues to increase."

The county court-at-law has jurisdiction of civil cases up to $5,000, over probate cases and misdemeanor criminal cases. DuBose, who also serves as juvenile court judge, was named to that judgeship by the state district and county judges of Midland County. The county judge, Bill Ahders, is the county's chief administrative officer and is seeking re-election to that judgeship.

DuBose, a 16-year resident of Midland, is a graduate of Baylor University's School of Law. He served with the judge advocate of the U.S. Air Force and was discharged a captain in 1966. Following his six-year tenure as the Midland County attorney, DuBose was in private law practice until his appointment to the bench in 1978.

He is unopposed in his bid for re-election.

Warm weather repeat expected today

A repeat of Monday's record-tying high and unseasonably warm temperatures is expected again today, but it should turn somewhat cooler on Wednesday.

According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, today's partly cloudy skies will become mostly cloudy tonight and Wednesday. Following today's mid-70 degree temperatures, the low tonight will be in the upper 30s with the mercury expected to climb only into the middle 60s on Wednesday.

Winds will be from the west and southwest at 5-10 mph tonight, increasing to 15-20 mph on Wednesday.

Monday's record-breaking high of 77 tied the record high set in 1950, while the overnight low of 39 exceeded the record low of 8, set in 1963, by over 30 degrees.

Hannah announces candidacy

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

A former state representative, state district attorney, United States attorney and special prosecutor for the U.S. from East Texas announced his decision to run as a Democratic candidate for state attorney general at a press conference held at Chaparral Aviation at Midland Regional Airport this morning.

John Hannah, 42, of Tyler, said he made his decision to run for attorney general "because the citizens of Texas, the boards, agencies, commissions and the government of this state need a good lawyer to effectively represent them in the state and federal courts.

"I believe I am qualified to do that," Hannah continued. "I don't consider myself a good politician — but I am a good lawyer."

Hannah cited Texas' "serious violent crime problem" as his main reason for seeking the office. "The taxpayers of Texas are losing hundreds of thousands of dollars a year due to program fraud, program abuse and public corruption," he said.

Hannah, during his three terms as state representative from Angelina, Polk, San Jacinto and Trinity counties, was part of the 30-member group that helped bring about the investigation and exposure of the "Sharpstown Bank Scandal."

With public corruption set as his priority, Hannah doubled the conviction rate in Angelina County as district attorney in 1972.

In 1977, Hannah was appointed by President Carter on the recommendation of Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, as U.S. attorney for the 41-County Eastern Judicial District. During this time, he convicted over 30 public officials from charges ranging from narcotic smuggling to racketeering.

After returning to private law practice in Tyler in August 1981, Hannah was reqested to serve as special prosecutor and coordinator of probes into allegations of kickbacks and bribery in county governments by the Justice Department.

He made the decision to resign from that post in order to run for attorney general.

John Hannah

"I believe I've sent more people to state and federal penitentiaries than anyone who has ever run for attorney general," Hannah said.

Concerning the Texas prison system, Hannah said he does not believe single cells are necessary, adding "I believe they all (prisoners) should have a bed."

In addition, Hannah said medical aid is inadequate and should be strengthened, as should the guard-prisoner ratio.

During his career in public office, Hannah also was responsible for writing the first constitutional amendment providing for property tax exemption for those over 65. He was named as a delegate to the first White House Conference on Aging in 1971 by President Nixon.

Hannah also drafted the Vietnam Veterans Act in 1967, extending the benefits shared by World War II and Korean War veterans to those who served in Vietnam.

He also co-authored the first open-meeting law in Texas in 1973.

Hannah graduated from Diboll High School in Diboll, and was an honor student at Sam Houston State University where he graduated with a degree in history and political science in 1965.

Mailer says he feels responsible

NEW YORK (AP) — Author Norman Mailer, who helped inmate-writer Jack Henry Abbott win conditional release from prison six weeks before he allegedly murdered a man, says he feels "very responsible" for his role in the slaying.

But Mailer said at a Monday news conference he would help Abbott again because "culture is worth a little risk."

He acknowledged making mistakes in sponsoring Abbott, saying he "did not read Abbott well enough" to know that the budding author was not ready to "live quietly in New York" when he got out of prison.

Earlier in the day, Mailer testified about his relationship with Abbott, who is charged in the July 18 stabbing death of Richard Adan, 22, in the East Village section of Manhattan. Abbott, 37, has admitted to killing the part-time waiter and aspiring actor and playwright, but says the slaying was a "tragic misunderstanding."

Mailer said he began writing to Abbott in 1978 while working on his Pulitzer Prize-winning book "The Executioner's Song," about another convict, Gary Gilmore, who was executed in 1977.

MAILER TESTIFIED Abbott had wanted to leave New York because the halfway house he had been released to was located in the Bowery, an area "full of provocation and humiliation for him...it tightened him up."

On the witness stand, Abbott acknowledged he wrote passages in his book saying that inmates who have killed are "the most respected and honored men" in prison. Abbott's letters to Mailer became a critically acclaimed book about prison life, "In the Belly of the Beast," and Mailer helped in its publication.

Under frequently hostile questioning at the news conference outside court, Mailer called Adan's death "an absolute tragedy," and said, "I'm sorry as hell about the way it turned out."

"It's a hideous waste, it's a horror," he said. When pressed on whether he felt remorse, Mailer said: "I can't give you my blood, but you can have my psychic blood. It's something Abbott's friends are going to have to live with for the rest of their lives."

Mailer, who won his first Pulitzer in 1969 for "The Armies of the Night," added he would take the same course again.

"DEMOCRACY INVOLVES taking risks," he said, and to fail to take those risks would be "fascistic."

"I didn't read Abbott well enough when he got out" of prison, Mailer said. "I didn't pay attention to little warnings he gave me in a quiet little voice...I feel one way or another I should have been doing more for Abbott" as he was adjusting to freedom.

"Abbott is a talented man...and obviously...at this moment is not ready to live quietly in New York society," Mailer said.

Chagra conviction upheld

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jamiel "Jimmy" Chagra's marijuana-importing conviction remains intact, after the Supreme Court declined to hear arguments aimed at overturning the El Paso man's conviction and subsequent seven-year prison sentence.

The justices, without comment, refused Monday to listen to arguments concerning Chagra's conviction for trying to smuggle 54,000 pounds of marijuana into the country at Gloucester, Mass.

Chagra, 35, already was serving a 30-year prison term for his conviction on 1979 charges involving drug trafficking.

Federal agents have identified Chagra as a suspect in the May 29, 1979, shooting death of U.S. District Judge John Wood Jr. in San Antonio. Chagra was scheduled for trial before Wood when the judge was gunned down.

His Supreme Court appeal argued that the conviction in Massachusetts — coming on the heels of the drug conviction in a federal court in Texas — represented a violation of Chagra's constitutional protection against double jeopardy.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals rejected that argument last June 30.

Chagra's appeal contended that his federal conviction in Texas was based on what prosecutors called a "continuing criminal enterprise" from 1974 through 1978. His appeal said the conviction in Massachusetts, based on criminal activity conducted in 1975, would be included in the alleged activity for which Chagra was convicted in Texas.

Other major buildings under construction are the 275,000 square foot Gulf Oil Corporation Building, ClayDesta Towers, a two-building complex with 236,000 square feet, and the Southland Royalty Building. The Gulf Building should be completed in early 1983. ClayDesta Towers and the Southland Royalty Building will be ready for occupancy July 1, Williams said.

Work also is under way on the Williams Accounting Department Building and on a drive-in bank facility that will serve as ClayDesta National Bank headquarters until the main building is completed.

Williams and seven other West Texans were granted a charter for ClayDesta National Bank in December. The proposed full-service bank will be capitalized at $4 million ($2 million capital and $2 million surplus).

Wayne Williams, center, is lead from the Fulton County Jail Monday to be taken to court to begin the fourth week of his trial on charges of killing two young Atlanta blacks.

Mistrial declared in McAllen trial

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Former McAllen policeman Roberto Ramos will probably never know the names of two jurors whose unswerving position resulted in his mistrial on a charge of alleged brutality.

U.S. District Judge Filemon Vela admonished the panel Monday not to discuss its deliberations and eventual deadlock without his written permission.

Jurors did tell Vela they split 10 to two in favor of convicting Ramos on the misdemeanor charge of ordering subordinates to beat a prisoner.

"I just won't have any comment," Ramos said after the judge declared a mistrial.

"WE ARE OF course disappointed that Mr. Ramos was not acquitted but we're confident he'll be vindicated upon retrial," said defense lawyer Buck Pettitt. Ramos, 33, resigned his police post in September and is an investigator for Pettitt's law firm.

Pettitt and Ramos left the courthouse without further comment.

Vela ordered jurors to continue their deliberations once before he ordered the mistrial.

"This is an important case," Vela told them. "If you fail to reach a verdict, it's going to have to be tried again."

However, Vela accepted their announcement of a hung jury after another 1½ hours of deliberation.

Prosecutors said it will be up to U.S. Justice Department officials in Washington to decide whether to retry the case.

"There's a very strong possibility there will be a retrial, not just because of the split but because I think the evidence was very strong," said Enrique Romero, a Justice Department trial attorney from Washington.

RAMOS, THE first of five former McAllen officers to stand trial on brutality charges, was accused ordering his subordinates to beat Rene Escamilla.

The prisoner had led three patrol units on a high-speed chase from McAllen to the town of San Juan. Escamilla was unarmed, but police fired at his car during the chase. Escamilla had been followed after a reported nightclub disturbance.

A San Juan policeman testified he saw Escamilla being beaten and heard Ramos order other policeman in Spanish, "Beat him. I can't because I have too many lawsuits pending."

At the time, Ramos and several other officers were named in a civil suit filed by victims of alleged police brutality.

Another witness, McAllen Patrolman Willie Forester, said Ramos asked him, "What's happening?" and then said, "You won't say anything, will you?"

FORESTER SAID he turned around to avoid seeing what would follow. His testimony was read back to the jury Monday by the court reporter.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Lupe Salinas of Houston said worried about a deadlock after jurors requested Forester's testimony be read to them.

"I considered the witnesses to be pretty clear. I know there was a lot of conflict but for a couple of them (jurors) it was not sufficiently cleared up," said Salinas.

Ramos testified he never ordered Escamilla beaten and said he arrived after the prisoner had been handcuffed and was being placed in a squad car.

Defense lawyer John Lewis told jurors during closing arguments that the San Juan policeman who attributed the order to Ramos also said Escamilla already was being struck before Ramos arrived.

LEWIS argued Ramos could not be held responsible for a beating that began before he got there.

Salinas said the mistrial will not effect the trials of four other officers. Three former policemen will be tried together Feb. 8 and a fourth will be tried Feb. 11, all before a federal magistrate.

Evidence in the other two trials is expected to include videotape recordings made on police station monitors.

The tapes, portions of which have aired on national television, show officers beating, kicking and abusing prisoners in the booking desk area over several years' time.

Williams may have changed story

ATLANTA (AP) — After two weeks of testimony in Wayne B. Williams' murder trial, prosecutors have begun introducing the disputed evidence that they say is a cornerstone of their case — microscopic fibers found on the bodies of the two victims.

State crime lab microanalyst Richard Ernest took the witness stand late Monday to identify four packages of fibers and hairs removed from Williams' car with a special vacuum tool during a June 3 search.

Williams, a 23-year-old free-lance photographer and aspiring talent scout, is accused of murdering Nathaniel Cater, 27, and Jimmy Ray Payne, 21, and dumping their bodies into the Chattahoochee River.

CATER AND PAYNE WERE among 28 young blacks whose deaths here during a 22-month period sparked one of the most intensive police investigations in U.S. history. There have been no arrests in the 26 other killings.

One of the key elements in the investigation was the accumulation of microscopic fiber evidence taken from the bodies of Cater, Payne and some of the 26 others.

Prosecutors contended in pretrial hearings that they were able to match fibers and dog hairs taken from Cater's and Payne's bodies with fibers and dog hairs found in Williams' car and home.

Ernest said Williams' station wagon, which was seized by authorities June 3 when he was brought in for 10 hours of questioning, was searched for nearly nine hours as technicians gleaned fibers, hairs and dirt from the floorboards, seats and cargo area.

Defense lawyers have hired their own expert to examine the fiber evidence — Charles V. Morton, head of the criminalistics laboratory at the Institute of Forensic Science in Oakland, Calif. He is expected to dispute the prosecution's attempts to use the fibers to link Williams to the slayings.

EARLIER IN THE TRIAL, defense lawyers suggested that the fibers found on the two bodies may have actually come from the clothing of police officers.

Testimony Monday also focused on the FBI interrogation of Williams while his car and home were being searched during the evening of June 3 and the early morning hours of June 4.

Williams first came to police attention when he was stopped May 22 near a bridge over the Chattahoochee River after a police stakeout officer said he heard a loud splash in the river.

Two days later, Cater's body was found floating in the river downstream from the bridge. Payne's body had been found in the same area of the river a month earlier.

FBI Agent William McGrath, who questioned Williams at his home the morning after the bridge incident, testified Monday that by the time Williams was interrogated June 3, he had changed several details in his explanation for being in the area of the bridge at 3 a.m. May 22.

MCGRATH TESTIFIED EARLIER that Williams told authorities when he was stopped that he was looking for the address of a woman with whom he had an appointment the next morning for a talent audition.

But McGrath said that during the June 3 interview, Williams changed his story about the number of times he had tried to reach the woman by telephone and the places where those calls were made. McGrath said Williams also changed his account of the number of vehicles he had seen on the bridge when he crossed it, the place where he turned around and headed back across the bridge before being stopped, and the time of his appointment with the woman.

Seizure interrupts mass murder trial

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A new panel of potential jurors was summoned to court today after a man accused of killing his four children, wife and mother-in-law suffered a seizure as charges were being read against him.

King Edward Bell had the attack as he bowed over a Bible on Monday in Superior Court in front of 60 potential jurors assembled for the first day of jury selection. A prosecution request that the jurors be dismissed was granted, and 100 additional people were called.

Bell, 33, was given a brain scan after the incident. His attorney, Duge F. Butler Jr., said no tumor was found but a psychiatrist believes Bell could be suffering from epilepsy.

Bell was returned late Monday to the Marion County Jail.

At his arraignment for the Aug. 21 deaths, Bell said he was guilty and asked for the death penalty, which is being sought by the prosecution.

He has since changed his plea to insanity.

Butler said he was unprepared for his client's courtroom seizure around 10 a.m. Butler said Bell grasped a Bible he had brought into the courtroom and bowed his head as if to pray as the murder counts against him were read.

Teacher acquitted of having sex with youths

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A grammar school teacher who had recanted a confession that she had sex with two boys wept and left the court with her husband after a jury acquitted her of statutory rape and corrupting the morals of a minor.

Her lawyer, who had told the jury that the two boys "got caught in a lie," said after the verdict was announced Monday that he didn't know whether Kathleen Harden would continue teaching.

Mrs. Harden has been on unpaid leave from her sixth-grade teaching job in the Elizabeth-Forward School district since her arrest in July.

Some spectators applauded when the jury returned the verdict acquitting the teacher, believed to be the first woman tried under Pennsylvania's statutory rape law. She threw an arm around her attorney and was led from the courtroom by her husband, Gary, and refused to talk with reporters.

"Kathy was a credible witness, a truthful-sounding witness. I think that had a lot to do with the case," said defense attorney Peter Skeel. "I'm elated. I've been working my heart out."

The youths and their parents declined comment, and the younger boy wept after the jury foreman read the "not guilty" verdict.

Mrs. Harden, 31, of nearby Elizabeth, had been accused of having sexual intercourse with the 13- and 15-year-old boys last summer after she hired them to cut the lawn at her home.

Mrs. Harden was charged with four counts of statutory rape, one count of involuntary deviate sexual intercourse and one count of corrupting the morals of a minor in connection with the 13-year-old.

On-again, off-again romance doesn't apply to New York

NEW YORK (AP) — She's fallen in and out of love during her seven marriages, but Elizabeth Taylor still has a thing for New York, which solves a problem for officials of the Empire State.

When her separation from Virginia Sen. John Warner was announced last month, officials at the New York State Department of Commerce worried they would have to change an "I Love New York" commercial in which Miss Taylor appears with actor Mickey Rooney.

In the ad, Rooney leads her to center stage and says, "The lady's from Virginia." Miss Taylor then responds in a rich Southern accent: "But I loooove New York!"

The commercial's future was cast into doubt because of Miss Taylor's separation from the senator, and some New York officials thought they might have to dub in new dialogue.

But Natel Matschulat, senior deputy commissioner of the Department of Commerce and director of the ad campaign, said the commercial will be broadcast as originally shot. He said the "actions and words of the commericials have been reconfirmed by both Rooney and Taylor."

NEW YORK (AP) — Although he has become one of the standout performers on NBC's "Saturday Night Live" and has already turned down one film role, comedian Eddie Murphy says "The only thing I'm secure about is that I'm funny."

Murphy

Murphy, 20, has emerged on "SNL" as the most recognizable among the other cast members of the revamped comedy show, with such characters as Mr. Robinson — a takeoff on TV's Mr. Rogers — and movie critic Raheem Abdul Muhammad. But he plays down his importance.

"The show is good, and I just did a few pieces that happened to stand out," Murphy said in an interview in the current issue of People magazine.

He traces his level-headedness to his stable upbringing.

"I had a real good home life. I never wanted for anything, emotionally or materially," Murphy said, adding that he doesn't drink, smoke or use drugs. "I could afford cocaine, but I've never tried it because I'm afraid I might like it," he said.

ATLANTA (AP) — Jimmy Carter and Gerald Ford are back on the stump again, but this time in a common cause: ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment.

The two former presidents, who battled each other for the White House in 1976, said Monday in a statement issued by Carter's office that they have "united in the hope that legislators in unratified states will...take positive action on this amendment."

The statement also said that former first ladies Rosalynn Carter and Betty Ford, both supporters of the amendment, would continue to play an active role in working for its ratification.

The statement said Ford hopes citizens will press elected officials to support the amendment, which must be ratified by 38 states by June 30 to become part of the constitution.

Thirty-five states have ratified the amendment, but five states have rescinded approval. The recisions have been upheld by a federal judge, but his ruling is under appeal.

Efforts to retrieve recorders resume

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although disappointed that critical flight recorders were not found in the tail of the downed Air Florida jet, federal investigators say they are confident the "black boxes" soon will be retrieved from the icy Potomac River.

"We think they're right where the tail section was," chief investigator Francis McAdams said Monday night. He added that divers are continuing to hear "two distinct and separate" electronic signals from the recorders.

Investigators hope the "black boxes" will provide key information about the last seconds aboard Air Florida Flight 90 before it clipped a busy commuter bridge last Wednesday and crashed into the river, killing 78 people.

Divers were to resume probing the murky, ice-filled waters early today with recovery of the two recorders their first priority.

The 26-foot long tail section, which had housed the devices, was raised from the river Monday, but investigators soon found the two boxes had been forced free from the wreckage, presumably by the impact of the crash.

"The recorders are probably the most valuable tool in accident investigation we have. Without them it makes the investigation far more difficult," McAdams said at a news conference.

The National Transportation Safety Board believes the recording devices — one which monitors conversations in the cockpit and the other instrument readings — may provide answers to a number of key questions:

—How much speed and power did the plane have on takeoff?

—How abrupt was the angle at which the nose of the plane first rose from the runway?

—Was the pilot concerned about too much ice forming on the plane's wings?

—Were the pilot and first officer aware of what was going wrong?

These and other questions, say the investigators, are vital in determining the cause of the first crash involving a major airline in 26 months.

With the easing of the extreme cold that hampered recovery operations during the weekend, divers have stepped up the grim task of pulling bodies from the wreckage, which is in 25 feet of water.

Seven bodies were recovered Monday, bringing the total to 53 and leaving an estimated 21 yet to be found. Only two of the recovered bodies had not been identified by Monday night.

Four motorists also were killed when the plane clipped the bridge.

One of the five people to survive the crash, flight attendant Kelly Duncan, was released from the hospital Monday. The other four survivors were in fair or good condition and were said to be improving steadily.

McAdams said the voice and flight data recorders probably were ejected from the tail section because of "an unusual kind of impact."

The fuselage broke in two at almost exactly where the voice recorder was located and the flight data recorder, slightly to the rear and above a door "could have been torn lose" by the impact, McAdams explained.

McAdams, one of five members of the federal safety board, said he would be surprised if the "black boxes" were damaged since they are built to withstand the force of 1,000 Gs and temperatures of 2,000 degrees.

In other areas of investigation, McAdams said the task force has come across a number of witnesses who claim to have seen the Air Florida plane fly with its nose higher than what air safety experts say is normal under the conditions prevailing the day of the crash.

The witnesses reported the plane had its nose up 30 degrees or more shortly after takeoff when, according to McAdams, the maximum tilt should have been closer to 15 degrees.

Such a nose-high position might have been the result of not having enough air speed, especially if the aircraft, unknown to the pilot, had an unusual amount of ice on the wings. Some witnesses have said they observed ice on the plane, while others said they did not, investigators said.

Survivor believes that he can identify hero of rescue effort

WASHINGTON (AP) — A survivor of last week's Air Florida crash in the icy Potomac River says he thinks he can identify the mystery man who sacrificed himself while helping five others to safety.

Joseph Stiley, 42, of Alexandria, Va., called a news conference today at the National Hospital for Orthopaedics and Rehabilitation, where he and three other crash survivors are reported in good condition.

"He believes he knows who the man is and can identify him," said Mary Shaw, director of public affairs for the suburban Arlington, Va., hospital.

The unidentified man sacrificed himself during rescue efforts by helping five other people onto a line dropped by a hovering helicopter. He sank into the frigid waters before the helicopter could return to get him.

Ms. Shaw said other survivors to whom she spoke were unable to identify the man. Asked what recollections the survivors had of him, she said, "They are very hazy. They just can't make a positive identification."

Autopsies on the 46 bodies recovered through Sunday raised speculation that Arland D. Williams of Atlanta, the only victim found to have drowned, might have been the mystery man. The other 45 were killed on impact, the autopsies showed.

U.S. Park Police Paramedic Gene Windsor said the helicopter he was on came within 10 or 15 feet of the man and he described the man as middle-aged and balding with a heavy moustache and silver hair above his ears. Williams had a silver beard and moustache and silver hair over his ears.

District of Columbia Police Inspector James Shugart said investigators still are trying to determine whether Williams was strapped in his seat when his body was recovered Friday.

"We can't confirm or deny the position he was in," Shugart said Monday.

Police had been quoted Friday as saying all eight victims recovered that day had been confined to their seats.

Stiley, who works for General Telephone and Electronics Corp., was on a business trip to the Tampa-St. Petersburg area on Wednesday when the Air Florida Boeing 707 clipped the busy 14th Street Bridge and plunged into the river, claiming 78 lives.

Group calls for more planes to carry life vests

WASHINGTON (AP) — All aircraft operating at airports near water should be required to carry life vests that can be put on within 15 seconds, a consumer group says.

The Aviation Consumer Action Project said the vests could help save airline passengers when planes crash into water.

The group also asked the Federal Aviation Administration to order all airports near water to have water rescue equipment and a plan for getting that equipment to crash sites within 2,000 feet of the airport within 10 minutes.

Life vests were aboard the Air Florida jet that crashed into a bridge and plunged into the Potomac River on Wednesday, killing 78 people.

But the consumer group said the vests now required when flying 50 miles from land date to World War II and are "very difficult to retrieve from under the seat and put on." The group also said most airports do not have water rescue plans.

Matthew Finucane, head of the consumer group, said it is too early to tell whether the passengers would have been helped by the recommendations.

Flotation cushions are usually the only equipment that aircraft flying over water carry, said the group, which was founded by consumer advocate Ralph Nader.

"Seat cushions are not recommended for non-swimmers and require the passenger to lie on his back with his head barely out of the water, thus subjecting him to hypothermia and ingestion of water and jet fuel," it said.

Doctors unsure of tampons, toxic shock syndrome relation

Dear Dr. Solomon: I don't hear very much any more about the toxic shock syndrome. When the papers started carrying all the stories about it, I stopped using tampons. Is this a good idea? I'm very confused and hope you can help. — Phyllis, Grand Rapids, Mich.

Dear Phyllis: The use of tampons has been shown to be related to the toxic shock syndrome, but that does not mean that tampons actually cause the disease. Unfortunately, doctors don't know much more about the relationship between tampons and the toxic shock syndrome than they did a year ago.

Dr. Lamar Ekbladh, a gynecologist at the University of North Carolina, suggests that women who have had the toxic shock syndrome not use tampons. Other women can continue using them but should change them more often. If a woman becomes ill during her menstrual period she should stop using tampons immediately.

Despite all the publicity about the toxic shock syndrome, it is a relatively rare disease. The risk of death is about one in every 100,000 women who use tampons.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I read your book "Stop Smoking, Lose Weight," where you talk about the good cholesterol. I know that anything that can prevent a heart attack is important, but does this good cholesterol do anything else? — Roger, Buffalo, New York

Dear Roger: There is some evidence that high-density lipoprotein (HDL) plays a role in the development of gallbladder disease. That is, people who have low levels of HDL may be more susceptible.

Dr. Diana B. Petitti and her colleagues at the Kaiser-Permanente Medical Care Program in Oakland, Calif., studied more than 800 women twins. Of the 65 women who had a history of gallbladder disease, almost half had low HDL levels.

However, it would be premature to jump to any conclusions. For example, men usually have lower HDL levels than women, yet men also have less gallbladder disease. In addition, the risk of gallbladder disease increases with age, but HDL levels usually do, too.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I always thought that I was familiar with the disease, multiple sclerosis, because my best friend had a mild case of it for a few years. Now, he seems to be cured. I've discovered that I, too, have it, but it seems as though I'm dealing with a totally different disease with totally different symptoms. My vision is blurred, my hands shake, and I'm beginning to walk like a drunk. Why are my symptoms so different? — Lenny, Chicago

Dear Lenny: You didn't tell me your friend's symptoms, but your symptoms might feel different, because they are happening to you and not to your friend. I suspect, though, that many of them actually are different, because multiple sclerosis progresses differently depending upon what area of the central nervous system has been affected. The symptoms of MS come and go without warning and vary from patient to patient. They can range from numbness and tingling to aching, burning sensations, blurring of vision or blindness and diminished hearing to weakness or paralysis of limbs, loss of coordination, staggering walk or bladder problems.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Survey says brown lung disease incidence minimal

By MERRILL HARTSON
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new survey by the American Textile Manufacturers Institute indicates less than one-half of 1 percent of textile workers are suffering from brown lung disease.

It said only 670 of 400,000 textile industry workers surveyed for the report released today had byssinosis, a respiratory disease commonly known as brown lung that results from exposure to cotton dust fibers.

The 400,000 workers surveyed represent about half the total textile industry work force.

"This survey, the most comprehensive ever done, shows the incidence of byssinosis to be significantly lower than previous government projections," said Robert E. Coleman, chairman of Riegel Textile Corp. of Greenville, S.C., and president of the institute.

Coleman said the findings were based on the results of medical tests "conducted under federal guidelines" involving textile industry workers at 142 plants. Coleman said 150,000 of the workers surveyed are employed in textile mills and thus are covered by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration's cotton dust standard.

Coleman maintained that earlier government studies on the number of people suffering from brown lung disease were "based on much smaller samples and taken some 10 years ago." He said such studies "were open to debate."

Eric Frumin, health director of the Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers Union, disputed the textile industry's report.

"My reaction is, when you're sick, who do you go to, an accountant or a doctor? They can't find a reputable doctor who would support this."

Frumin maintained that the textile institute failed in 1977 to get OSHA to accept a similar report on the incidence of brown lung disease in the industry.

"The fact is, every time they're asked, they refuse to open their books to independent scientists," the union official said.

Edging toward defense

Japan's reluctance to assume a larger burden for its own defense has rightly annoyed a succession of U.S. administrations. Tokyo finally has begun to respond to Washington's nagging, however. If the result is belated, it is also encouraging.

Prime Minister Suzuki's cabinet has approved a 7.7 percent increase for Japan's Self-Defense Force — the first time since 1956 that military spending has increased as a percentage of the budget.

There was squawking in the Diet, particularly from the anti-military left. But there was also muttering on the other side of the aisle, from those disturbed because Suzuki had pledged no overall budgetary growth this year. The prime minister's Liberal Democratic parliamentay majority, though, should see the defense budget through.

Besides recognizing the equity of doing more for its own defense, the Japanese government bit the budget bullet out of embarrassment as well, we suspect. It has become hard for Japan to reconcile a bulging trade surplus with the United States — an estimated $18 billion last year — while relying for security on an America stretched increasingly thin, economically and militarily. Japan's prosperity and impressive industrial accomplishments are due in significant part to the U.S. assumption of responsibility for Japan's national defense.

There is neither intent nor desire to push Japan toward military superpowerdom, of course. But America's global obligations necessitate that a nation as dependent as Japan is on U.S. air and sea lifelines absorb more of the cost of its own security.

Getting off dead center

"We will go home, assess the positions we heard in both capitals and return to discuss them further."

These may turn out to be most significant words about the prospects for a lasting peace between Israel and Egypt. They came from Secretary of State Alexander Haig after he talked in Cairo with President Hosni Mubarat and in Jerusalem with Prime Minister Menachem Begin.

The object of Mr. Haig's mission to the Middle East was to get the peace talks off dead center. For the past year there has been little action on this front, partly because of the assassination of Anwar Sadat, partly because of the intransigence of Mr. Begin, partly because the Reagan administration has been concentrating on a variety of crises.

Now, fortunately, our secretary of state has decided the time is ripe to start fulfilling the promise of the Camp David accords. He toyed with the idea of appointing a special negotiator to shuttle between Cairo and Jerusalem, then abandoned the plan in favor of doing some shuttling himself.

It was a good idea. In the first place, Mr. Haig carries more weight than would any special envoy he would appoint. Secondly, his few days of discussions in Egypt and Israel have been important as an education for Mr. Haig.

His personal contacts with the two heads of state have been invaluable. He has learned first-hand the two different interpretations of that tricky word "autonomy" as it applies to the Palestinians.

Egyptian leaders want it to mean the creation of a Palestinian state. Mr. Begin disagrees. To him, "autonomy" means giving Palestinians a measure of administrative authority over their settlements on the West Bank, but not over the actual land itself.

This is one of the many ticklish problems with which Mr. Haig has become intimately acquainted in the past few days. He is now in a position to "assess the positions" of Egypt and Israel more knowledgeably, and get the Camp David peace process moving again. Washington once more is in a strategic position to mediate between Cairo and Jerusalem.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

FBI cover-up story sparks investigation

WASHINGTON — A diminutive blond housewife is telling a story that could blow the ABSCAM convictions out of the courts. She is Marie Weinberg, wife of the con man who masterminded the ABSCAM "sting" operation.

Jack Anderson

She has sworn that FBI agents and ABSCAM prosecutors covered up perjured testimony. I have submitted her allegations to the Justice Department, which has launched a major investigation.

The FBI was supposed to be supervising and directing her husband, Mel Weinberg, who lured members of Congress into committing crimes. But according to Marie's account, Weinberg was manipulating the FBI agents instead of the other way around.

Within 48 hours after I provided the Justice Department with a transcript of Marie's accusations, Weinberg told friends that he knew his wife had blown the whistle on him. He recited details that could have come only from the transcript.

One of the accused agents, John Good, also contacted Mrs. Weinberg and tried to coax her into talking to him. Instead, she telephoned my office. I sent my associate, Indy Badhwar, on the first available plane to her home in Florida. He brought along a tough private investigator, Richard Bast, and three photographers to take pictures of the evidence.

I had warned the Justice Department not to permit the FBI to investigate itself. Yet Badhwar and Bast reached Marie Weinberg just a few hours before FBI agents descended upon her house. Four agents showed up at midnight, Jan. 8, to see Mrs. Weinberg. But my associate and Bast were interviewing her at a nearby hotel; they brought her home at 3 a.m. They returned at 7 the next morning to take the incriminating photographs of Weinberg's ABSCAM loot.

A few hours later, while they were still there, four FBI agents arrived and demanded to speak with Mrs. Weinberg. Bast stood in the doorway and refused to let the G-men enter.

Once more, Weinberg learned about my associates' visit almost immediately. The information certainly didn't come from his wife; he must have been tipped off by someone in the FBI or the Justice Department.

It's not hard to understand why the ABSCAM team is worried about the evidence Marie Weinberg let us photograph. It proves that FBI agents and federal prosecutors covered up perjured testimony given to various ABSCAM juries by their ex-con setup man, Weinberg. Though he should no longer merit their protection, they now have their own skins to consider.

Weinberg denied under oath — before a grand jury and ABSCAM trial juries — that he had never received expensive gifts from potential targets of the sting operation. An FBI investigation of charges that he had extorted the gifts concluded there was no truth to the allegations. In court, chief prosecutor Thomas Puccio backed up the FBI's whitewash, and said that Weinberg had produced a receipt for one of the alleged gifts, showing that he had bought it.

But photographic evidence — which played such a crucial role in conviction of the ABSCAM defendants — clearly shows that Weinberg possessed the appliances that he was accused of extorting. They're sitting in his home in Florida.

The loot consists of three Sony 17-inch Trinitron television sets, a Betamax video recorder, a General Electric microwave oven, a Harman-Kardon stereo receiver and Genesis Three speakers.

The item Weinberg claimed to have an exonerating receipt for was a microwave oven. But it's not the one we photographed in the Weinberg home.

According to Mrs. Weinberg's sworn statement, her husband removed the serial number plate from the oven with a screwdriver and hid the oven with a neighbor when the allegations about the "gifts" first surfaced in 1980. He then had his wife drive him to a department store in West Palm Beach, where he got the receipt he showed to the FBI. Subsequently, he brought the incriminating oven back to his house. It is still there.

What makes the microwave oven so damaging is that at least two FBI agents, who had spent considerable time with the Weinbergs when they lived in Long Island, had seen the oven in his home there. Yet the agents — John Good and Anthony Amoroso — later accepted Weinberg's Florida receipt as proof that he had bought it. Incredibly, they had been assigned to investigate the charges that Weinberg had extracted the gifts from ABSCAM targets.

As for the other items, Good and Amoroso had seen them in Weinberg's Long Island home as well. In fact, Mrs. Weinberg swears, FBI agents helped them crate the television and stereo equipment when the Weinbergs moved to Florida in July 1979. Yet prosecutor Puccio accepted Weinberg's denials — which were supported by Good and Amoroso — about the other items without question.

When defense attorneys tried to question FBI witnesses in court to determine whether any of them had actually seen the gift items in Weinberg's home, Puccio raised objections — and was sustained by the judge.

Footnote: Mel Weinberg, who is no longer living with Marie, has threatened to retaliate against her if she continues cooperating with my reporters. Marie's lawyer, criminal attorney Michael Dennis, has warned Mel that charges will be filed against him if he attempts any further intimidation.

WATCH ON WASTE — Not everyone is suffering in Washington's coldest winter weather in this century. Three staff members of the House Foreign Affairs Committee recently winged off to study refugee problems in Haiti, the Dominican Republic, Puerto Rico and the Bahamas. Meanwhile, two other staffers went to study U.S. assistance in the balmy Caribbean. Their itinerary includes Jamaica, Barbados, Antigua, St. Lucia and the ever-popular Haiti and Dominican Republic.

INSIDE REPORT:

Tapping may be used by Reagan crew to control news leaks

WASHINGTON — As part of the crackdown on press contacts by national security personnel, this warning is being spread by word of mouth in policy-making levels at the State Department: If necessary, telephone-tapping will be used to make sure that leaks are plugged.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Whether or not easy-going Ronald Reagan really would resort to the tactics that helped destroy hard-nosed Richard Nixon, the warning is taken seriously at the State Department. Officials frantically cancelled appointments with reporters. Some telephone calls from reporters were not accepted.

A footnote: The crackdown comes at a time when conservative operatives outside the administration have quietly declared a resumption against the Reagan administration of their self-styled "guerrilla warfare" waged against the Carter administration — mainly through leaks. The last straw for the right-wingers was Reagan's decision against advanced warplanes for Taiwan, a decision whose leak set off the administration's security crackdown.

TOUGHER POLISH REPRESSION

The Kremlin has summoned two former Polish Politburo hardliners, dismissed in the heyday of Solidarity, to Moscow for secret talks that point to tougher repression in Poland by the communist-military dictatorship of Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski.

Stefan Grabski and Stanislaw Kociolek, thrown out of the Politburo last year, are feared and hated by the 10 million Poles who belonged to the Free Workers Movement. During the December worker rebellion in Gdansk, Kociolek argued that the only way to handle the rebellion was with bullets. Scores of workers were slaughtered.

The failure of Moscow or Warsaw to announce the visit of the two hardliners raised suspicions in Washington. Reagan administration officials believe the Russians may be plotting to reinstate Grabski and Kociolek to their former Party prominence.

KEMP'S DINNER GUEST

The mystery of why Rep. Jack Kemp pulled his punches against Budget Director David Stockman when interviewed on NBC's "Meet The Press" Jan. 10 can be explained by the identity of Kemp's dinner guest the night before: David Stockman.

Stockman telephoned Kemp and asked whether he could have dinner that Saturday night at the congressman's home in the Maryland suburbs. Knowing that Kemp planned an attack on Stockman's tax-increase policies over television the next day, Kemp's friends urged him not to invite the budget chief. But Kemp rejected the advice, refusing to burn all bridges with his former close ally.

The result on "Meet The Press" was predictable. Instead of accusing Stockman, as planned, of intentionally exaggerating budget deficit projections, Kemp said only that he and "Dave" are "friends" and "we have a friendly disagreement over this subject."

MONDALE'S ADVISERS

Former Vice President Walter F. Mondale, a leading candidate for the 1984 Democratic presidential nomination, is drawing almost exclusively on Jimmy Carter's old advisers for his new national security "study group."

With the exception of Max Kampelman (an old Hubert Humphrey Democrat who is President Reagan's envoy to the Madrid European Security Conference), the list is old-hat Carterite: David Aaron, formerly No. 2 man on President Carter's National Security Council (NSC) staff; Robert Hunter, ex-aide to Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, who also served on Carter's NSC staff; Richard Holbrooke, Carter's assistant secretary of state for Far Eastern affairs; Warren Christopher, Carter's deputy secretary of state.

All are highly respected in Democratic circles. But Mondale's list of foreign policy advisers fails to take into account what hard-line Democrats call "the new confrontation" between the U.S. and the Soviet Union.

APPOINTING A SENATOR

Outgoing Democratic Gov. Brendan Byrne of New Jersey has advised Republican Governor-elect Thomas Kean not to worry too much about selecting a successor to Democratic Sen. Harrison Williams, the only ABSCAM-convicted senator. The reason: Byrne expects Williams to resign just before Kean takes office Tuesday (Jan. 19).

Since the Senate is certain to expel Williams after it reconvenes Jan. 25, organized labor has been pleading with him to resign to permit Byrne to name a Democrat. Despite his steadfast loyalty to labor during 22 years in the Senate, however, Williams has refused to make such a symbolic admission of guilt.

Kean might be just as happy to see Byrne make the pick. Two of his top supporters for governor last year — Rep. James Courter and Jeffrey Bell, the state's 1978 Senate nominee, both conservatives — covet the appointment. So does liberal Rep. Millicent Fenwick, also running for the Senate, but she is unlikely to be Kean's choice.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, Jan. 19, the 19th day of 1982. There are 346 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

One year ago today, the United States and Iran reached final agreement on the release of 52 Americans held for more than 13 months by Iranian militants.

On this date:

In 1918, the Bolsheviks dissolved the Russian Constitutional Assembly in Petrograd.

In 1938, Gen. Francisco Franco's Nationalist Air Force bombed the Spanish cities of Barcelona and Valencia, killing 700 people.

In 1945, Soviet troops took Cracow, Poland, in World War II.

In 1964, Attorney General Robert Kennedy met in Tokyo with Indonesia's President Sukarno in an effort to ease hostilities between Indonesia and Malaysia.

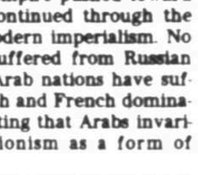
In 1966 India's new prime minister, Indira Gandhi, pledged to follow a path of non-alignment in world affairs.

Ten years ago, President Nixon said the United States would get tough with foreign governments which expropriated private American holdings.

CHARLEY REESE

Middle East history boils with conflict

Studying the Middle East can become addictive, like working crossword puzzles, and since it crops up in the news so often, I thought it might be useful to offer you a clue to figuring out what is going on.



Charley Reese

As with most parts of the world, the present is the tip of the iceberg and it rests on the past which is now submerged. It is impossible to understand what is happening today in the Middle East without knowing what has happened in the past.

You needn't feel like the Lone Ranger, however, if you have not rushed down to the public library to stuff your head with Middle East histories. A shocking number of people in government and in the press who are paid to understand the area are also ignorant of its history. Jimmy Carter, for example, did not even know that Jordan had been created out of the Palestine Mandate.

Our own State Department has often shown a remarkable lack of sensitivity to the area's history. No one who knows the central role Jerusalem plays in Jewish thinking, who knows of the cruel battle fought in 1948 over the city, who knows the bitterness created by Jordanian occupation would ever for a minute believe that Israel will negotiate the fate of Jerusalem. It will never happen. So long as there is an Israel, Jerusalem will remain its undivided capital. That's one item you can remove from the agenda.

On the other hand, no one who knows even a smattering of Arab history will be lulled into the belief that any Arab leader is "pro-Western" to use the popular phrase. The history of the Arab world is a history of conflict with the West. The conflict began when the Arab empire pushed toward Europe and it continued through the Crusades and modern imperialism. No Arab has ever suffered from Russian domination; all Arab nations have suffered from British and French domination. It is interesting that Arabs invariably refer to Zionism as a form of imperialism.

Thus, while from time to time, some Arab leaders may for tactical reasons play to the West, it is unrealistic to expect to form any strong alliances with any Arab nation in the foreseeable future. Even the late Egyptian President Anwar Sadat flatly refused to allow any permanent American bases and went to great lengths to make it clear that Egypt was not part of the Western alliance. His successor is following the same pattern.

A myth that often crops up among Westerners is the belief that there is a basic conflict between communism and Islam. While it is true that atheism which is only a minor and subsidiary part of communism conflits with Islam, there is no other basic conflict. Islam is an authoritarian religion. Arab culture is an authoritarian culture. What is missing from both Islam and Arab culture is individualism which is the basis for the Western concept of democracy. The overlay of anarchy which often seems to be present in the Arab world is the anarchy of competing groups and factions, not of individuals. There is no Islamic democracy in the Western sense anywhere.

It should be noted, too, that the dissident movement in the Soviet Union is mostly Jewish and East European. The 50 million Moslems within the Soviet Union are not a part of it. Islam, you see, teaches obedience.

The more you learn about the Middle East the more you realize that there are no easy solutions to the conflicts in the area. The Arab world has only recently emerged from colonial domination and it is in a state of flux and change with many conflicts swirling about. There is the conflict between modern technology and old ways, between the idea of Pan-Arabism and nationalism, between secular and religious rule. Even the borders of several Arab countries — drawn by Europeans — are in dispute.

The people of the Middle East are not clones of Europeans and Americans. They think differently, they have different value systems. We would be wise to find an alternative to Middle East oil as quickly as possible. It is indeed a dangerous area.

The well pumped 37.8 barrels of 42 gravity oil, plus 45 barrels of water, in 24 hours. The gas to oil ratio was 1,553 to 1.

Production was through perforations between 7,830 and 7,840 feet.

It was plugged back to 8,147 feet, with 7 5/8 inch casing set at 5,584 feet.

The project is 1,320 feet from the south, and 1,320 feet from the west line of section 17, block 23, University Lands survey.

TERRY VENTURE

The No. 1 Brown et al has been scheduled by L&B Oil Co. Inc., Houston, two miles southeast of Brownfield.

The projected 12,000-foot venture is 1,980 feet from the south, and 1,980 feet from the east line of section 89, block T, Dallas and Wichita Railroad survey.

It is 1 1/4 miles southeast of Tenneco Gas's No. 1 Watson, a 10,796-foot project, abandoned Jan. 30, 1956.

YOAKUM SEARCHER

Petro-Lewis Corp., Levelland, has scheduled the No. 1 Johnson, a 9,300-foot wildcat, 13 miles northwest of Denver City.

The wildcat is 660 feet from the south, and 1,980 feet from the west line of section 646, block D, John H. Gibson survey.

The location is just north of the Janice field, which is expected to produce from the Wolfcamp at 8,937 feet.

Record 1981 Soviet production fails to meet target

By MARC ROSENWASSER
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet oil production last year grew by less than 1 percent and fell short of the modest output figure the nation had set for itself in the first year of the current five-year plan.

It was the second straight year the country failed to meets its oil production goal, even though output in 1981, as in past years, set a new record.

State-run Radio Moscow reported today that the 1981 Soviet output was 609 million tons of oil, compared with the 1980 record of 603 million tons but still short of the 1981 goal of 610 million tons. Last year's production averaged 12.18 million barrels a day.

The 1981 target had been dramatically slashed from the original 1980 projection of 620 to 640 million tons, indicating the Soviet Union had entered the 1980s with declining expectations about the future growth of its mammoth oil industry.

The Oil Ministry said 1981 production grew largely because of the development of new oil in western Siberia. The Soviet Union is the world's leading producer of oil, while Saudi Arabia is the leading exporter.

Soviet oil production almost quadrupled between 1950 and 1980, and more than doubled between 1960 and 1970. Growth continued strong throughout most of the 1970s but fell in 1980 to under 3 percent. The 1981 growth rate of 6 million tons was .99 percent.

One view is that the slowdown in growth rates is attributable to the maturing of the Soviet economy. However, Western experts also believe the slowdown reflects Soviet difficulties in extracting oil.

Western analysts have long considered oil production a key to determining Soviet behavior overseas.

Some Western analysts have voiced fears that the Kremlin might be tempted to seize Middle Eastern oil fields if, as the CIA predicted in the late 1970s, Soviet oil production levels off in the first half of this decade and then declines. The Soviets have consistently denied that they have any need for Middle East oil, or any intention of grabbing it.

Western analysts also consider Soviet export of oil to its Eastern European allies a key to the political control it continues to exert there. Radio Moscow's report said the Soviets delivered 80 million tons of oil, or 1.6 million barrels a day, to trade partners in the Eastern-bloc Council for Mutual Economic Assistance last year. That was believed to be unchanged from 1980.

Oil sales to the West are important to the Soviets as an earner of hard currency. The Soviets often use the money they earn from the West through the sale of oil to purchase other Western goods, including grain and technology.

Such purchases have proved especially important to the Soviets in recent years because of serious domestic agricultural difficulties. Grain production has been below target for three consecutive years, leading to record imports.

Effects of dispersed oil on shellfish subject of study

RICHLAND, Wash. — Assessing the biological effects of chemically dispersed oil on marine shellfish is the subject of a research project sponsored by Exxon Production Research Company. The work is being done by researchers at Battelle Memorial Institute's Marine Research Laboratories in Sequim, Wash., and Duxbury, Mass.

This study is part of a program funded by Exxon to determine the fate and effects of dispersed oil. In particular, the researchers want to know the effects of dispersed oil.

The agent being tested is a widely used oil spill chemical dispersant developed by Exxon Chemical Company. It breaks down oil into microscopic particles which are diluted by ocean currents and wave action and subsequently biodegraded.

Chemically dispersed oil does not appear to cause the same environmental effects on beaches and wildlife as exposure to an untreated spill. "However, we need to determine whether any adverse effects occur is marine creatures are exposed over long periods of time to sediment containing oil and dispersant," said project manager Dr. Jack W. Anderson. Anderson is a staff scientist at Battelles's Marine Research Laboratory at Sequim Bay in the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

He added the United States has limited the use of dispersants for oil spills near U.S. coastlines partly because "the effects of dispersed oil are not well-established. Our tests represent a 'worst case' oil spill near shore which is dispersed using chemicals."

To determine the effects of dispersed oil, Battelle researchers are growing clams in trays containing oil and sediment or dispesed oil and sediment. Clams are also grown in trays of sediment-only as a control.

Several large trays of the mixture were placed in intertidal basins during low tide. After three months to one year, the clams and other organisms swimming inton the area are analyzed for chemical uptake and its effects.

Union approves Shell contract

DEER PARK, Texas (AP) — Almost unanimous consent was given to a two-year contract by 2,100 members of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union at Shell Oil Co. here.

Barely an hour after voting started Monday night, OCAW officials confirmed the agreement, terming the vote "close to unanimous."

No details of the contract were released but OCAW spokesman Roy Barnes said Monday the oil company's proposal was "in line with the national package."

Corporation narrows list to 11

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The U.S. Synthetic Fuels Corp. on Monday narrowed the list of applicants for the first round of research and development grants to be awarded by the government corporation.

After a daylong meeting, 11 of 28 applicants were chosen to move ahead in the selection process, said Bill Rhatican, a spokesman for the corporation.

The projects would make fuel from substances such as coal, oil shale and tar sands. All applicants have asked for either loan or price guarantees, purchase agreements or joint venture agreements with the government.

About $8.5 billion is expected to be available for the first awards.

Rhatican said the corporation board will meet March 2 in Washington, D.C., to further consider the 11 projects. All, some or none of the projects will then move into negotiations for the actual grants, he said.

"The next step is a decision by the board at the March meeting to measure the strengths and weaknesses of the projects," Rhatican said.

The 11 projects listed by state are:

—Alabama: Northern Alabama Gasification Consortium at Murphy Hill.

—California: Calsyn at West Pittsburgh; Coolwater at Daggett.

—Kentucky: Breckinridge, Breckinridge County; CoaLiquid, Shelbyville.

—North Carolina: First Colony, Creswell.

—Tennessee: Memphis Light, Gas & Water, Memphis; Tennessee Synfuels Associates, Oak Ridge.

—Utah: Paraho, Uintah County.

—Wyoming: Hampshire, Gillette County; WyCoal, Converse County.

Independent to chance offshore well

By PETER MATTIACE

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — At least one more oil company, a small independent from Texas, plans a longshot at finding oil and gas in the shallower Baltimore Canyon Trough area off the mid-Atlantic coast.

Zapata Exploration Co. of Houston, a division of Zapata Corp., a drilling and marine service company, has acquired "farmout" interests in five adjacent nine-squire-mile tracts about 70 miles southeast of Atlantic City, spokesman Barney White said Monday.

The firm plans to drill a 13,500-foot well sometime this spring in an unexplored tract leased by the Union Oil Co. of California for $16.4 million in August 1976, White said.

Zapata will take over 65 percent interest in the Union tract in return for drilling the exploratory well, White said.

There has been no exploratory drilling off the mid-Atlantic coast since late October. In nearly four years, the industry has reported 23 dry holes and strikes in five holes.

Zapata Exploration, a six-year-old subsidiary with some gas wells in the Gulf of Mexico and Bolivia, did not win any mid-Atlantic tracts in three Interior Department sales in August 1976, February 1979 and December 1981.

However, it recently acquired "farmout" interests in five adjoining tracts with Union and consortiums led by Mobil, Gulf, Tenneco and Texaco in return for drilling wildcat wells.

The five leases, sold to the major firms in 1976, are due to expire in April and May. Located in about 240 feet of water, the tracts have not been explored.

Two residents missing in boarding house fire

HOLYOKE, Mass. (AP) — A predawn fire at a boarding house in this arson-plagued city left one firefighter seriously injured and two residents missing today. Fourteen other men were driven into bitter cold.

"I think there are still two people in there," Deputy Chief Donald Yelle said at the scene of the fire that gutted the 104-year-old Dayl's Hotel on High Street at the edge of this western Massachusetts city's downtown area.

The fire was brought under control and firefighters were waiting for the embers to cool before entering the rubble to search for the missing men.

"It's an incendiary type fire, but it is not an arson fire," said police Sgt. Bill McCoy of the city arson squad. He said that arson had been ruled out and that a tenant admitted throwing a cigarette into a chair, which caught fire.

McCoy said the man, whom he refused to identify, then panicked and ran out of the building. He was in protective custody, McCoy said.

Before McCoy determined the cause, the building's owner said he would be surprised if the cause were arson.

"I really don't know what the cause was. I'd be very surprised if it were suspicious," said Stanley Wielgosz, 31, who was interviewed at the scene. "We're a real happy family. We took care of them and they took care of the place."

Holyoke was plagued by 50 fires last year, most of them of suspicious origin.

Seven people died Aug. 24 and four more died in another arson blaze in November. An elderly man died in an accidental fire in October.

Wielgosz said his family had owned the business for 50 years and that it included a bar and "a flop house for down-and-out men."

Bush to appear at meeting of AFL-CIO policy makers

By MERRILL HARTSON
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Signaling an improvement in relations between the Reagan administration and big labor, Vice President George Bush is scheduled to appear at the mid-winter meeting of the AFL-CIO's top policy-making body.

Bush accepted an invitation Monday to address the 35-member executive council meeting, which opens Feb. 15 in Bal Harbour, Fla., said the vice president's press secretary, Pete Teeley.

But Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan will not be invited for a return engagement before the labor leaders, said federation sources who asked not to be identified by name.

Asked about this, AFL-CIO spokesman Rex Hardesty said he could not discuss invitations to the week-long meeting, which is expected to set the tone for federation policies in the coming year.

Bush is the highest ranking Reagan administration official to be invited to an AFL-CIO meeting.

Breaking with tradition, the federation refused to invite President Reagan to its convention in November in reprisal for the chief executive's firing of some 11,500 unionized air traffic controllers.

Reagan subsequently brought labor leaders to the White House to talk about their differences.

Donovan became embroiled in a dispute with federation president Lane Kirkland following the labor secretary's meeting with the executive council at last February's meeting in the Florida resort.

The labor secretary and the AFL-CIO leader clashed over an account of the closed session that Donovan gave to news reporters. He portrayed some executive council members as expressing support for Reagan's economic policies.

Kirkland said it wasn't so, but Donovan stuck by his assessment.

The AFL-CIO sources said the invitation to Bush was extended personally by Kirkland, who met with the vice president the day before Reagan hosted the AFL-CIO executive council at the White House meeting.

Teeley said Bush "is close to Lane (Kirkland) and he's worked hard to bring Lane and the president closer together in recent weeks."

In a meeting with reporters a week ago, Kirkland was asked whether any results have followed Reagan's peacemaking session with AFL-CIO leaders Dec. 2.

Original U.S. Morgan Silver Dollars

Available Only Until Midnight Tonight

Philadelphia, January 1982. IMM announced today the release for sale of a small cache of less than 10,000 original U.S. Government Morgan Silver Dollars. Esteemed by collectors worldwide, Morgan Silver Dollars are among the last .900 fine silver dollars to have been struck for circulation by the U.S. Government and have become extremely scarce in recent years.

International Monetary Mint is releasing for sale these rare Morgan Dollars in Very Fine Condition at the Special Investor Opportunity price of only $35 each. Investors who respond from this publication by midnight, tonight, may purchase from 1 to 10 individual coins at this price. Because of the limited number available, all orders will be filled on a first-come, first-served basis with a strict limit of 10 coins per customer. This announcement will only be repeated in the unlikely event that coins from this cache are still available beyond the deadline published here.

The Morgan Silver Dollar was authorized by an Act of the United States Congress in 1878 and was struck for circulation from 1878-1904. Due to a bullion shortage, coinage was suspended until 1921, when Morgans were once again minted for a single year. During World War I, it is estimated that over 270 million silver dollars were melted down for bullion and as a result, all surviving Morgan Dollars are in short supply. The specimens in this offering are all in Very Fine Condition and to protect your investment each coin will be accompanied by a Certificate of Authenticity to that effect.

To qualify for this special offering, call Lee Collins toll free at 1-800-345-8700 (Dept. MDO-1573). Orders will be accepted on major credit cards only. An additional $2.75 is requested to cover insurance, postage and special handling per order. If not completely satisfied, you may return your U.S. Morgan Silver Dollars in their original condition within 14 days for a full refund.

DEAR ABBY

Daughter bites tongue when father's mouth is full

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My parents are loving, kindhearted people in their 60s, but they have the worst table manners I have ever seen.

Other family members have hinted to them over the years with no success. Now we either exclude them from dinners or make sure we surround them with people who know what to expect.

My husband and I and our two small children drive 300 miles a couple of times a year to visit them. We were there for Thanksgiving dinner, and my father once again filled his mouth so full of food his cheeks were bulging, then he started to talk. Abby, I couldn't understand a word he was saying, so I asked him to please not talk with food in his mouth. He got so angry he refused to speak to me the rest of the visit. When we left there was a lot of tension. It spoiled the whole trip for me.

I feel so bad. I wasn't mean or disrespectful, Abby, I just told him not to talk with his mouth full. Was I wrong to say anything? Should adult children never correct their parents — no matter what? We try to teach our youngsters proper table manners, and parents like mine really make it rough. — HEAVYHEARTED

DEAR HEAVY: Some parents accept criticism gracefully, and some do not. Unfortunately yours do not, so if you want to keep the peace, grit your teeth and hold your tongue.

DEAR ABBY: It's too late for this year, but I hope you will remind your readers to have a heart next year and refrain from sending candy, fruitcake, nuts and home-baked goodies to friends they know are trying to watch their calories.

I was doing just great until all these tempting no-nos arrived, then I blew my diet like you wouldn't believe!

Abby, please print this, and don't suggest we use a little willpower. If we had willpower, we wouldn't be in the shape we're in. — PIGGED-OUT IN POTTSVILLE, PA.

DEAR PIGGED-OUT: Oink oink!

DEAR ABBY: I just had to write after reading that letter from "Grampa," who mentioned your suggestion for the perfect gift to give older relatives: "Offer to do something for them that they can't do for themselves. For example: Furniture moved, windows and doors repaired, pictures and mirrors hung, trees and bushes planted, etc."

Last Christmas I took your advice and gave my 70-year-old mother, who has enough money to get herself whatever she might (reasonably) want, a gift of "cleaning up" her cluttered house. Well, it's been 12 months and my gift has yet to be redeemed.

Why? It's hard to catch my mother at home long enough to begin the job. Between her two part-time jobs (she counsels recovering alcoholics), her skiing trips to Aspen, her rafting down the Colorado River and her trips to various other places, we've yet to get together. She has to be there. I'd never tackle 25 years of accumulation myself. So what do I do now? — DARLENE IN L.A.

DEAR DARLENE: Thank God for a healthy, active mother and pray that you've inherited some of her energetic genes.

Rare book search can be rewarding

GENEVA, N.Y. (AP) — You may not be able to judge the value of a book by its cover, but don't rule out its title page, copyright date, binding or fore-edge illustration, advises Susan Mottu, catalog librarian at Hobart & William Smith Colleges here.

"Rare books can be found almost anywhere," says the 30-year-old Pittsburgh native, who has a master's degree in library science from the University of Pittsburgh. "People should check their attics, basements, closets and bookshelves. Searching for valuable old books can be easy and fun if you know what you are looking for."

Ms. Mottu became proficient at discovering old and valuable editions while serving an internship at the famous Carnegie Library in Pittsburgh. Her assignment was to locate rare books that had been overlooked at the library, some for as many as 50 years. She pored through card catalogs and reference stacks, and determined which books should be isolated with a view toward having the library create its own special rare-book areas.

"The first thing people should look for if they think they've found a rare book is the title page," she points out. "That's where you are likely to locate the copyright date. A very old date — say before 1700 — would mean the volume is probably valuable. But generally, an old date does not always indicate great value, while a more recently copyrighted volume — even some after 1900 — could have significant value."

The next step, notes Ms. Mottu, is to look at the edition number on the title page. Generally, a first edition is the most valuable because it represents the exact way the author wanted the manuscript to appear, while later editions indicate that the type was reset and significant changes may have been made.

In addition, many books are commonly recognized as existing in limited numbers because copies have been lost or destroyed over time, while others are "artificially scarce" due to a limited run of numbered copies. In either case, the book will bring its highest price when it is as close as possible to its original condition.

"Another thing to look for in a book is the author's autograph," the librarian suggests. "A similar factor that can raise the value is an 'association copy,' which would be a book owned by the author or someone else of importance. Notes, inscriptions and autographs inside the book would provide information about association copies."

Next, Ms. Mottu recommends that the book owner inspect the volume. She says to check for illustrations by noted illustrators, original art prints, very fine typography, fine vellum or leather binding and fore-edge illustrations, which are paintings found on the edge of books. Each of these categories can add great value to a book, she notes.

"The overall physical condition of the book is the final thing to evaluate. Obviously, the better the condition, the higher the price," she points out. "Remarkably, many books published before the 1850s tend to be in better condition today than those printed after that period. That is because better materials were used in earlier times, acids were not utilized in the paper in that era and the paper itself was made of linen or rag which tended not to yellow.

"Also," she adds, "the closer a book comes to its original condition — such as having its dust jacket, original binding and all the pages still intact — the higher the value."

Among the most significant discoveries Ms. Mottu made at the Carnegie Library was a 1602 edition of "The History" by Herodotus, the Greek historian; a 1549 copy of "The Praise of Folly" by Erasmus; and a first edition of Ernest Hemingway's "The Sun Also Rises" from 1926.

If you believe you have a rare book, Ms. Mottu suggests that you discuss the volume with your local librarian, then check such sources at the library as "American Book Prices Current" and "Bookman's Price Index."

"If your book appears to be rare at this point," Ms. Mottu advises, "you should ask your librarian or a local book dealer for the names of reputable book appraisers in your area. This final step should definitively decide the value of your find."

Proper care is then necessary to protect your valuable rare book, she points out. Be sure to keep the book free of dust by lightly vaccuuming it on a regular basis. If possible, keep it in a glass-enclosed case that is not hit by direct sunlight, and avoid extremes of temperature and humidity. Also, you may want an expert to chemically treat the binding and de-acidify the pages to avoid yellowing and crumbling.

"Collecting rare books can be a very enlightening and fulfilling hobby," Ms. Mottu points out. "And, remember, you always have the book itself to read and enjoy in addition to its value as a physical object."

AT WIT'S END

Running dogs

By ERMA BOMBECK

After years of being married to a man who sits around all day Sunday and watches animal documentaries, I have gotten used to people giving animals human emotions.

I've heard Marlin Perkins tell when an alligator is "bored," William Conrad describe an elephant plowing through an entire village as "playful" and Lorne Greene diagnose a penguin who won't go into the water as "crabby and sluggish."

I don't know how they do it. I'm probably the only person in the world who can't tell when a dog is smiling. I answered the phone once wearing only a hair dryer and I thought I heard a giggle, but I couldn't be sure.

That's why I was interested to read a story about dogs whose masters were into running. You see 'em all over the place . . . joggers flapping along, five, ten miles a day and beside them a ball of fur on a leash panting to keep up.

How do they know dogs enjoy running? Isn't it possible some dogs are born who don't like to chase cars, return sticks or bite mailmen? Maybe they just didn't know how to tell you.

Ironically, vets say dogs develop the same problems as runners: sore feet, shin splints, heat prostration, lacerated foot pads, arthritic hip conditions and heart problems. They even suffer from attacks from other dogs. Besides that, dogs don't sweat like people. (Did you ever see a deodorant for dogs?)

I watched a marathon once at San Diego where a runner came in with his dog on the leash. Both had gone over 26 miles of a grueling course. Both had hit the wall. Both had drawn from their reserves for every bit of energy they possessed to keep their bodies moving.

The one in the shorts with two legs got a T-shirt and a can of beer. The one in the fur coat with four legs wandered around confused with a tree wish.

There must be a way for non-running dogs to let you know if they want to run or not. Luckily, we have a dog that communicates. If you say to him, "C'mon, boy, we're going running!" he crawls under the dryer with a Marguerita and looks at you with a disgusted look that says, "I'm not moving until you call a cab."

He could be the smartest dog in the world. Or he could have picked up that trick from me.

Life on Alligator Alley lonely, peaceful

By JOHN PLATERO
Associated Press Writer

ALLIGATOR ALLEY, Fla. (AP) — This two-lane highway that cuts arrow-like across the state is 78 miles of loneliness. But, for the handful of families who live in the swamp area off State Road 84, it's an escape from city life and a return to basics.

There's little to see between toll booths on the road that links Fort Lauderdale with Naples — not a gasoline station, roadside telephone or even a light. It traverses the Everglades and the Big Cypress Preserve and both sides of the roadway abound with alligators, frogs, boars and a variety of other wild animals.

Between the 49- and 50-mile markers, there's a turnoff to the north — a pock-filled, ugly road along a canal that, as far as the eye can see,leads to nowhere.

Six miles back in the 'glades on the left behind a wall of natural swamp foliage, live five families within a square mile area. It's their Shangri-La — an oasis of calm between the teeming, crime-ridden Gold Coast to the east and the southwest Gulf Coast region that is the nation's fastest-growing area.

The Alligator Alley area, the farthest one can get away from civilization in the Sunshine State, remains virtually unchanged since Spanish explorers first came to Florida in the early 1500s.

"I love it here," said Janet Hassenplug, a hairdresser from Long Island, N.Y. "I hate city life and I'm never lonely. My days are full because everything here is time consuming."

She and her plumber husband, Dave, have lived here in a double-wide trailer for almost a year, with his three children from a previous marriage.

Outside, on a manicured grass front yard that has no fence, Shane, Michele and Aaron are playing. Nine-year-old David is riding his horse with his 4-year-old brother tagging behind. Michelle, 6, is busy with two tame goats.

"I grew up like this," said Hassenplug, "never involved with drugs or stealing or hurting others. I want to teach my children the principles I have. We tried living in the city, but there children learn more from the streets than they learn at home and you can't control that."

While conditions are primitive, electricity is available through a co-operative utility and running water is pumped from individual wells. Some of the residents have septic tanks and indoor plumbing while others use outside toilets. No telephone service is available, although one company has promised to have lines installed within a year.

One nagging problem for the Alligator Alley families is that nine children of these modern-day "pioneers" are now of school age. Those attending public school have gone to Clewiston, but that means a 110-mile round trip every day.

One of the reasons Jesse and Yolanda Seals moved here 2½ years ago was concern about their children — daughter Tanika, 11, and two sons, Running Gold, 9, and Rainbow Sky, 2.

"I don't like the complications of city life and not knowing who drives in your yard or who is with your children," said Seals, a 36-year-old bearded marine salvage worker from Enid, Okla. "It's not an easy life here, but it's definitely better for the kids."

Mrs. Seals, a Mexican-Indian from Roswell, N.M, agreed. "We lived in the city and people complained my children made too much noise or whenever my husband worked on a car engine."

She, like the other women here, has little idle time on her hands. Her days are filled with caring for her family, a vegetable garden and an assortment of animals including geese, ducks, quail, chickens and pigs.

The McCullochs are the "old-timers" of the group. Married 15 years, the last seven have been spent here in a large trailer.

Leonard McCulloch was born and raised in the Himalaya Mountains in India where his parents were Baptist missionaries. He didn't see his homeland until he left India in 1962 at age 19.

McCulloch said he, like many of his generation, used drugs in the 1960s. "I never realized what we were pioneering," he continued. "Had I known, I'd never had done it. Drugs totally destroy the peace and quiet of life." Now, he said, he neither drinks nor smokes.

He explained that he, his wife, Allison, and their two daughters — ages 5 and 7 — live here "in order to get out and find America, to feel the character of the country. This is what made America great," he said, looking at nature all around him.

"Here, we enjoy the simple tasks of life. All of America was like this at one time when people hacked their way into the wilderness. I want to give this to my children."

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Cleaning your coffeemaker

DEAR HELOISE:

I have an automatic drip coffeemaker which requires a brew of up to 10 cups of vinegar once a month to remove the lime buildup.

Can this vinegar be used more than one time? — Dorothy Wert

Sure can, but I would add one slight qualification...

Use a filter and line the basket just as you do when making coffee.

This will catch the lime deposits as they are dislodged from the coffeemaker, thus keeping the vinegar free of gunk.

You may have to change the filter more than once, as you should run the vinegar through the coffeemaker several times until the lime is no longer visible on the filter.

Once you are finished with the vinegar, pour it into a clean jar, label it, and store until the next time. Do not use it for any purpose other than to clean the coffeemaker or other cleaning chores.

While vinegar is relatively inexpensive, waste not, want not is still a good adage to remember and practice, and perhaps even more so these days. — Heloise

PULL-APART BISCUITS

Dear Heloise: My husband baked biscuits the other day and accidentally rolled the dough too thin. So, he just folded it over into two thicknesses, cut the biscuits out and baked them.

They pulled apart easily after baking into two exact halves, were smooth, and it was so easy to spread butter and honey on them.

Boy! What a great mistake! We are going to do this every time from now on. — Joyce Towns

WRINKLES AWAY

Dear Heloise: Wash-and-wear clothing which has had wrinkles set by a session in a too-hot dryer can be restored by dampening the garments, placing them in the freezer for a few hours, then pressing.

The fabric usually returns to its original smoothness. — Florence Hankinson

COOLER HOT CHOCOLATE

Dear Heloise: To cool hot chocolate (especially at breakfast time when activities are so time-oriented) spoon in a bit of vanilla or chocolate ice cream.

More nutritious and flavorful than plain ice. — Reader

CHECK-UP BY PHONE

Dear Heloise: Every member of my elderly mother's church group has developed a system whereby they call one another in the morning (not too early) and visit by telephone, which also serves the purpose of seeing that everyone is O.K. Provides welcome company too.

I suppose they gossip a lot, but the chain reaction is most positive, in my strong opinion. — Harold Staley

QUILTING KNOWHOW

Dear Heloise: Recently, someone asked about marking quilt blocks so the marks wouldn't show after the quilt was quilted. Here's what I do:

Draw the pattern on a piece of heavy brown paper, the size of the quilt blocks. Stack the blocks three deep and pin the brown paper over them.

With a rather large, unthreaded needle in your sewing machine, stitch over the pattern. The needle leaves tiny holes outlining the design. The holes will stay in for a long time.

Once, I quilted a quilt that had been put away for two years and the needle holes were still quite visible. — Alma Malek

Smart! Smart! Smart! — Heloise

Cold remedies not always effective

By SANDY ROVNER
(c) 1982, The Washington Post

Nyquil, the everything-else cold medicine, it turns out, is 50 proof. No wonder it puts you to sleep when you have a cold.

And I always thought it was just a sweet loving spouse (as in the TV ad) who goes back out in the storm to get the sick S.O. his or her Nyquil. Ha.

Personally, I prefer a shot of apricot brandy.

It is probably useless to inveigh against over-the-counter cold preparations. Everybody does: doctors, consumer groups, medical associations ... even the U.S. Food and Drug Administration.

And the cold-preparation people still haul in something like $600 million a year.

Nevertheless, even though most of you (obviously) won't listen, we'll repeat:

— Even though some of the medicines in over-the-counter remedies are effective in large enough doses, most of the OTC remedies don't have enough.

— When you have a rhino (cold) or flu virus, you will probably have different symptoms at different times. Or only one or two symptoms. It is irrational to take one medicine that purports to take care of all.

— Just because a medicine is sold without a prescription doesn't mean it is benign. And if you're on regular medication — for high blood pressure, for example, or sedatives or antidepressant drugs — some ingredients in some cold or cough remedies can make your regular medicine too strong or too weak or even turn it into something else entirely.

— Even some effective ingredients — antihistamines for allergic reactions and some nasal sprays for clearing stuffiness — are not without problems. Antihistamines can often cause drowsiness, making concentration difficult and driving deadly. And the effective ingredient in nose drops and nasal sprays can make delicate nasal tissues so flaccid that even when the original stuffiness is gone, the rebound effect will keep breathing difficult.

— Don't badger your doctor for antibiotics to treat a cold or flu. Antibiotics work against bacteria. Viruses are a different sort of microorganism altogether and no matter how successful the pill prescribed for your aunt's strep throat, it won't do beans for your cold virus. You'll just help create more antibiotic-resistant bacteria so that the next time you get a serious bacterial infection, the antibiotic won't work on that either.

The absolute cold cure is still elusive. And most of the heavily advertised anti-sniffly, sneezy, stuffy, runny, congested, coughing or whatever medicines aren't worth having around.

In the first place, there are hundreds — literally — of viruses that can cause the symptoms we tend to call a cold.

(As a general rule, if you have only one or two symptoms, such as a sore throat and a fever, you may have a bacterial infection that may be helped by an antibiotic. If you have the cold cluster, you are probably being had by a virus. If you're really feeling awfully sick, your fever is higher than 101 and your muscles ache to boot, you probably have the flu, rather than just a cold. Flu is also viral.)

In any case, you should stay home. For one thing, that might limit the spread of whatever microorganism it is you are — in the terminology of the scientists — shedding. It is not heroic to go to work. It is downright antisocial.

The arctic spell we have been having should not mean you're more apt to get a cold or the flu. A strong body of scientific thought holds that it is school, rather than cold weather, that causes the increased incidence of virus sharing during the winter. Cold and snowy weather that closes schools and keeps eople home from work tends to actually prevent the spread of flu and colds.

And there is some new thinking on how the viruses are transmitted. Sure, some are spread by the coughs and sneezes of infected people, but lots more get around literally by hand to mouth (or eyes). Viruses hang around on surfaces of almost anything, including telephone mouthpieces. Most recently, it has been held that moustaches and beards are prime hiding places for the ubiquitous microorganisms. (Shave it off or keep it shampooed, advise some researchers.)

Interferon, the natural protective substance, has been shown in some studies to prevent colds, but most research on this still-extraordinarily expensive stuff has been aimed at more serious illnesses. (Interferon nose drops have been sold in the Soviet Union for some time with, doctors report, little success. It takes a heap of interferon, about $5,000 worth a day, to show any effect, researchers say, and the Russian nose drops contain too little.)

At a recent symposium on influenza sponsored by the Mt. Sinai School of Medicine's post-graduate school, a panel of physicians, researchers and epidemiologists debated the value of some new antiviral drugs. One, Amantadine, has just been approved by the Food and Drug Administration and a couple of others are going through the process.

Influenza is caused by three basic types of virus, called A, B and less commonly, C. And a host of ever-changing sub-types. One of the problems with flu vaccine is that the virus mutates so quickly that a vaccine against one subtype one year may be ineffective (or less effective) against the prevalent virus the year it is used. A-type viruses are generally associated with more serious epidemics. B-types, which seem to strike young people more, are associated with the potentially lethal complication of Reye's Syndrome.

Another problem with the vaccine stems from what scientists, with their bent for euphemism, call "original antigenicsin." Oversimplified, this means that no matter what viruses a flu vaccine is designed to protect against, each individual's body will be stimulated to produce some antibodies against the very first flu virus it was ever exposed to. Because current viruses are probably vastly changed, the usefulness of the vaccine is at least partially compromised.

Nevertheless, it is important that people in high-risk populations — the elderly, those with chronic illnesses like diabetes or heart disease and those who live in close quarters like army barracks — keep their immunizations current. A little protection is better than none and even a little may be lifesaving.

Amantadine, which works only on A-type flu viruses, and other still experimental anti-viral drugs have been used with some success in preventing flu and in shortening its duration. But some doctors on the panel expressed concern that its wholesale use — to cut a day or two off an illness that goes away by itself anyway — might create a body of resistant viruses. The real value of these antiviral drugs, at least so far, might be to protect populations from a suddenly appering and deadly flu virus not anticipated in the vaccines.

The good news is that researchers are unlocking the secrets of the virus and if such is the case even the common cold may eventually fall victim.

The other good news is that so far this season there have been no major influenza outbreaks. Spokesmen at the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, however, caution that major outbreaks have sometimes waited until March to do their worst.

Ground plans for beautiful gardens

By HENRY MITCHELL
(c) 1982, The Washington Post

The ground plan of a garden is hardly as important as the beginner might think; and I know this sounds odd, coming from one who is forever yapping about the critical and overwhelming importance of architecture in the garden.

A gorgeous plan for a garden ensures nothing whatsoever, and an abysmally trite plan for a garden may produce a creature of great splendor.

I shall stick, as I always have done, to the Great Plan, and commend it to you, with the warning that the plan is nothing, the execution is all.

Take a square, and divide it into four equal squares. That is the Great Plan, and it works almost as well as the Better Plan, which is a rectangle divided into four equal rectangles. The first is the plan of Eden. The second, which is considerably better, is the plan of Persia.

I myself have never used either. And yet I suppose I will never have a garden that a knowledgeable garden historian cannot immediately see is based on Persian notions.

It is not that I have any special affinity for Persia; I do not, and I have less and less as the years go by. Still, when I am left to my own devices, I automatically garden as Persians do, dividing a rectangle with water, putting vast trust in upright conifers and peachtree blossoms and roses, and irises and narcissus. Like the Persians, I have nothing to say to lawns. I like rigid geometry, and I especially like the luxuriance of plants that set it all at naught.

More than anything I like water. I think I must be quite feminine, actually, since the only element I consider necessary, in all gardens in all times in all places, is pools of water. Water is a feminine element, I think, and I have always been a trifle sensitive that to me a garden is water. Period.

Of course I like land plants, too, and I like a great many more plants than even the best American nurseries seem to have ever heard of. I am not easily cowed by any American plantsmen I have ever met, and the most shocking aspect of the American nursery trade is its slowness, its conservatism, its ignorance and its general indifference to very great plants.

All the same, it is not the great plants that are the essence of the garden (though I hate to add the least fuel to the argument that plants are relatively unimportant in a garden) but the light, the light, the light. And of light, the chief servant and the chief master is water.

How often I see small, town gardens that give no great pleasure to the gardener, and how often I see that if they stopped trying to do the impossible and the wrong, and only turned to the possible and the right, there would be better gardens and happier gardeners: in a garden the size of a living room, or the size of a small house (since living rooms have become absurd in size) a third of the space should be paved, and there should be chairs on brick or stone or concrete, and there should be an arbor or a summer house over this sitting place, clothed with grapes or clemati or Carolina jasmine or some such thing, and around the boundaries of the garden there should be evergreens with enough leaf-losing plants (roses, clematis, locusts, blueberries, mock oranges, crab apples, peaches, plums or what you will) to keep the effect civilized and not too monumental or grand or funereal.

And this may be just the place to commend to you our wild native red cedar, Juniperus virginiana, which is rarely seen in gardens for one reason only: nurserymen have not thought to propagate and sell it. There is another reason, too. You have to know a good bit about plants, evidently, and you have to have pretty spectacular and unarguable taste, apparently, and you have to have had a thousand enthusiams and worked your way through them, apparently, before you at last come to the ultimate conclusion that this native wild juniper is Better, Superior to and Beyond Any Challenge of other conifers.

So it is not a question of great cost. Anybody can dig up junipers and, for that matter, raise them from seed with astonishing speed.

Once the garden is enclosed, and once the rich greens and the occasional rose and mock orange and peach have been worked in among the greens of the border, and once the paved place has been made, for sitting and eating and drinking, then the rest of the small garden may be given to water.

I know this rarely occurs to gardeners. But I am not speaking of what commonly occurs to gardeners, but of what gives intense delight.

I do not approve of swimming pools. That is, I would not have a swimming pool if you gave it to me and maintained it for me. A swimming pool is sterile, filtered, naked, banal, practical and everything else that a garden ought not be.

If you have to swim, join a club that has a pool. Or go to the beach. Or put the damned pool inside the house. It does not belong in the garden, and it will ruin any garden it is put in. Without any exception.

In great gardens, where they know what they are doing, they stick the swimming pool off somewhere where it cannot be seen. It is good to have a swimming pool in the same way that it is good to have a bowling alley, a sauna and a bathroom, but that place is not in the middle of a civilized garden that is to be occupied and luxuriated in by civilized folk.

Water, in the garden, was never meant by God or by any competent designer to be reeking of chlorine and screaming kids, nor to be a disgusting panorama of fat whales blubbering about on rubber dolphins, nor to be any of those other deplorable things that swimming pools in gardens always are.

French plainclothesemen guard the body of slain U.S. assistant military attache Lt.Col. Charles Robert Ray minutes after he was shot Monday by an unidentified gunman who then escaped into the crowd.

Security tightened after killing

By PAUL TREUTHARDT
Associated Press Writer

PARIS (AP) — U.S. Ambassador Evan Griffith Galbraith and his aides are studying special measures to protect U.S. officials in France following the assassination of an assistant military attache on Galbraith's staff, Lt. Col. Charles Robert Ray.

Security was increased for senior members of the Paris embassy staff two months ago after Charge d'Affaires Christian Chapman escaped an assassination attempt. But no special protection was ordered for lower-ranking officials, Galbraith said, because it was believed only the upper echelon were likely targets.

President Francois Mitterand and Premier Pierre Mauroy promised an intensive hunt for the lone gunman who shot and killed the 43-year-old army officer Monday and escaped on foot in morning rush hour traffic. They offered increased protection for the embassy staff, and Galbraith said the security situation was being reassessed.

A woman who saw the shooting in front of Ray's apartment house said the killer was short, with long hair, dressed in casual clothes. Galbraith said he was "probably a professional and undoubtedly an experienced killer."

A foreign news agency in Beirut, Lebanon, said it received a handwritten statement in barely legible Arabic claiming the Lebanese Armed Revolutionary Faction was responsible for the murder. Diplomats in the Lebanese capital said they had never heard of the group.

The statement said the United States was "the head of the Zionist-reactionary-fascist alliance in the region," and that "Reagan and his administration and their agents in the area are out to defeat and slaughter us."

Police said the shooting was similar to the attack last Nov. 18 on Chapman, the acting head of the embassy before Galbraith's arrival. Each American was walking from his apartment house to his car to go to work. Each attack was made with a 7.65mm pistol. And each time the gunman disappeared into the morning stream of workers.

There was one major difference, however. Ray's killer fired at close range, killing him with one shot in the back of the head. Chapman's assailant opened fire from farther away, and the American dived behind his car and was not hurt.

In Washington, President Reagan said Ray "gave his life in the line of duty as surely as if he had fallen in battle."

"Our hearts go out to his family in their bereavement, and the wanton act of his murderers reinforces our determination to stamp out international terrorism and prevent similar tragedies in the future," the president said.

Hours after the shooting, the French took extraordinary precautions at Orly Airport for the departure of U.S. Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan, who flew to New York after attending a meeting of Western finance ministers.

While police sharpshooters crouched on the roof of the terminal, security squads ordered the other 100 passengers off the Pan Am jetliner and searched the plane and the baggage. Nothing suspicious was found.

Church increasingly important to Polish people, government

By THOMAS W. NETTER
Associated Press Writer

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The role of the Roman Catholic Church in Poland has expanded since the advent of martial law five weeks ago and the crackdown on the independent union Solidarity.

The church has become the single most powerful voice addressing the Communist authorities now that the independent union has been suspended.

"And I might also say an embodiment of peoples' hopes for the future," said one Polish journalist.

Archbishop Jozef Glemp, the Polish primate, has spoken out forcefully at least three times, condemning the continued detention of thousands of Solidarity members and the practice of requiring workers to sign loyalty oaths repudiating the union to keep their jobs. He has warned that the "circle of those hostile to the authorities is spreading."

BUT GLEMP HAS ALSO called for "cooperation and dialogue" between the government and the people, and the government is trying to put across the idea that he and the church are on its side.

An official who asked not to be identified said the archbishop's meeting Jan. 9 with Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, the premier and Communist Party chief, "could be seen as a tacit expression of support by Glemp for Jaruzelski, who is also considered moderate these days."

"The basis for cooperation between church and state is the shared concern for the fate of the nation," said the new government newspaper Rzeczpospolita in an editorial Monday.

"This concern is stronger than differences dividing the state and church. It is a platform for similar sounding appeals for calm, common sense and self control."

Deputy Premier Jerzy Ozdowski, the highest ranking Catholic in the government, told a news conference Monday that dialogue between church and state "is alive and guarantees getting out of the crisis."

"Talks between the two sides have not been interrupted for one moment," he declared.

DESPITE 36 YEARS OF Communist rule, more than 90 percent of the 36 million Poles are baptized Catholics and more than 75 percent attend church regularly. In the 16 months between Solidarity's formation in August 1980 and the declaration of martial law Dec. 13, the church exerted a moderating influence on the union and its leader Lech Walesa and tried to mediate between it and the government.

Now the church has begun organizing to help the thousands of interned Solidarity members.

Church sources report Glemp has established a Relief Committee for Prisoners and Internees headed by Bishop Wladyslaw Miziolek, the church's chief negotiator with the government. Assisted by a number of laymen, the 20-member committee is charged with providing legal, material, spiritual and medical aid for the thousands sent to internment camps and prisons under martial law.

THERE HAVE BEEN REPORTS that some members of the clergy and the episcopate consider Glemp too moderate and want the church to take a more militant stand against the government. But church sources say such reports should be taken with several grains of salt.

Golan situation may influence Percy talks

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — U.S. Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., began talks with Syrian leaders today under the strain placed in relations between Washington and Damascus by Israel's annexation of the Syrian Golan Heights.

Percy, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, met with Syrian Foreign Minister Abdul-Halim Khaddam, who returned Friday from a two-day visit to Moscow with a Soviet pledge of support on the Golan dispute.

Relations between the United States and Syria were strained because of a threatened American veto to block U.N. Security Council sanctions against Israel for annexing Syrian territory captured in the 1967 Arab-Israeli War.

Percy flew to Damascus at midnight on an unscheduled flight to continue his open-ended marathon tour of the Middle East.

Earlier in Kuwait, he was quoted by local newspapers as telling a closed Kuwait Alumni Society symposium Monday night that Saudi Arabia's controversial Middle East peace plan "explicitly stipulates (Arab) recognition of Israel within secure boundaries in return for a secure Palestinian state."

Percy met with Saudi leaders in Riyadh last week.

According to Kuwaiti reports, Percy defended U.S. policy on the Middle East, saying it must take both Israeli and Arab security requirements into account.

The Saudi plan, advanced by Crown Prince Fahd last August, initially was interpreted as implying Arab recognition of Israel in return for Israeli withdrawal from Arab territories occupied in the 1967 war; the abolition of Israel's settlements in the occupied territory; the creation of a Palestinian state with Jerusalem as its capital, and for the right of Palestinians to repatriation or compensation for property lost to Israel.

Soviet group possible peace trip sponsor

By MIKE ROBINSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — First-term Illinois Rep. Gus Savage attended an anti-American demonstration in Portugal to show his support for "world disarmament, detente and for peace," an aide says.

The Democratic congressman was scheduled to return today after visiting Copenhagen, London, Paris and Lisbon on a two-week European trip that his office said was financed by the World Peace Council, a group that has been described as a Soviet front.

Herman Gilbert, Savage's administrative assistant, refused to comment on the organization, formed in Poland in 1950.

Testifying before the House in 1980, CIA official John McMahon said the group was "a political action tool in support of Soviet foreign policy goals and military strategy."

Savage made the trip to study the peace movement in Europe, according to his aides. He spoke Saturday in Lisbon before 50,000 street demonstrators protesting U.S. arms policies.

The Portugese Socialist Party boycotted the demonstration and denounced it as "an exclusive reflection of the diplomatic and military logic of the Soviet bloc."

In the text of the speech released by Savage's office, the 55-year-old congressman said: "I am here because the underdeveloped nations need training, capital and control of their resources, but they cannot have this because the imperialist nations that owe them so much for robbing them spend too much of the gross world product for destruction rather than for building, for hate rather than for love, for bombs rather than for bread."

Savage said that "even the developed nations, such as my own United States, need more employment, more health and more bread, but they cannot have this because of how much we spent to prepare for nuclear holocaust.

"I believe you know how bad the foreign policy of my government is, but I want you also to know how good the American people are," he said, referring to opposition to the U.S. role in Vietnam.

Savage's office said that on Jan. 6 he addressed the 30-member executive branch of the World Peace Council in Copenhagen. It said he was then invited to the other stops by peace councils in those nations.

U.S., China sign treaty on consulates

PEKING (AP) — The United States and China today exchanged formal ratification documents for a treaty covering the operation of consulates. It will go into effect in 30 days.

The Sino-American Consular Convention "provides a comprehensive legal basis to promote trade, travel, cultural and educational exchanges," a U.S. Embassy statement said.

It covers such things as diplomatic privileges and notice to consulates of arrests of Americans in China or Chinese in the United States, a spokesman said.

An estimated 100,000 Americans visited China in 1981.

The consular convention was signed in Washington on Sept. 17, 1980, and later ratified by the U.S. Senate and the standing committee of China's National People's Congress.

In addition to its embassy in Peking, the United States has consulates general in Shanghai and Canton and is permitted to open additional consulates in Shenyang, in northeast China; in Wuhan, on the Yangtze River in central China; and in Chengdu, capital of China's most populous province of Sichuan in the southwest.

China has an embassy in Washington and consulates in San Francisco and Houston and has permission to set up additional consulates in New York, Chicago and Honolulu.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Wednesday, January 20, 1982

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Patricia Neal, George Burns, astronaut Edwin "Buzz" Aldrin and film maker Federico Fellini were all born on this date. Social reform continues to be very important to you and you are able to see some progress directly related to your efforts. You make gradual business and financial gains. Count on romance to offer many exciting possibilities. A chance encounter could lead to a quick engagement or marriage. Interesting changes affect your employment situation in a positive way. Take nothing for granted. Contact with the public enhances your prestige. Partners are likely to be lucky for you. Make your position perfectly clear.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): An excellent day for dealing with those in authority. Speak your mind. A stick-in-the-mud attitude will not increase your popularity with members of opposite sex.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Limit the money you spend on creative projects. Your dollars can be better spent elsewhere. Investigate real estate, stocks and bonds. Consult experts only.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You profit from financial ventures undertaken with co-workers. Physical effort may be involved but the rewards will be great. Resist the temptation to be the "life of the party."

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your perform brilliantly today. Creative, original ideas count big with higher-ups. A gradual change in a personal relationship may have you wondering. Parting will not be painful.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Unexpected rewards come from unlikely quarters. Someone you thought to be your enemy could become your strongest ally. Member of opposite sex's presence may cloud your judgment.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Buy a luxury item that will add to your personal comfort. A strange occurrence will lead you to have second thoughts about a romantic alliance. Let logic prevail over emotion.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Hold down expenses, stay within your budget. Errors can be made through careless handling of a delicate situation. An old friend rises to your defense.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Have compassion for your co-workers. Think about the consequences of your actions or words. A friend asks a favor you cannot refuse. Choose associates carefully.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Events beyond your control are featured. Word from afar will not arrive. A change of plan will work in your favor even if you do not know it! Romance smiles on you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Be prepared to receive some unsettling news. Arguments with co-workers can be averted it you are diplomatic. Shop carefully. Look behind the scenes for answers.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your past efforts should begin to pay dividends. Career takes a giant step forward. Be more independent. Widen your social horizons. Friend or relative could introduce you to a new romantic partner.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Real estate can be a good source of additional income. Marital relationship improves. Influential person may ask pointed questions. You give the right answers!

The bridge expert correlates his chances and makes sure that he is not in the wrong hand at the wrong time. Watch the technique of Israeli internationalist Shmuel Lev in a rubber bridge game at New York's Cavendish Club.

The auction had the virtue of directness. North knew that, at worst, the contract would hinge on a finesse, and he had faith in his partner's dummy play.

West led a low trump and dummy's eight won. Declarer decided that his best chance was to ruff out the king of hearts—a simple matter if trumps were 2-2. So, at trick two he cashed the ace of hearts and ruffed a heart in hand. He crossed to the king of clubs, and was disappointed when East sluffed a spade.

Now declarer made a vital move. He cashed the ace of diamonds. Next, he led another heart and took care to ruff with the ace. That precaution was rewarded when West sluffed a spade on this trick.

There was one more string to declarer's bow. He led the jack of diamonds for a ruffing finesse. West tried to look like a player who did not have the queen of diamonds as he followed low, but declarer simply discarded a heart from dummy.

The rest was easy. Declarer ruffed a diamond in dummy, drew the last trump and then scored the last three tricks with high spades. To appreciate the skill with which he handled the dummy, you try and make the contract if the ace of diamonds is not cashed early so that the ruffing finesse can be taken at the crucial moment!

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. For a copy and a scorepad, send $1.75 to "Goren-Four Deal," care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 259, Norwood, N.J. 07648. Make checks payable to Newspaperbooks.

Stock market gains

NEW YORK (AP) — Led by blue-chip industrials and electronic issues, the stock market erased an opening slide and closed slightly higher Monday as interest-rate fears temporarily abated.

Among the gainers were retail, financial and entertainment stocks, while some aircraft, chemical and oil-service issues lost ground.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 5.90 at 11 a.m. EST, led the rebound and closed up 7.52 to 855.12 — matching its best one-day gain of the new year on Jan. 4. The transportation and utility measures also moved higher.

Gainers led losers 7 to 6 on the New York Stock Exchange, whose composite index rose 0.43 to 67.84.

Big Board turnover was 44.92 million shares, against 43.31 million in the previous session. Nationwide turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 51.58 million shares.

Prices were under pressure at the opening following a report late Friday of a surge in the nation's money supply. The Federal Reserve Board is trying to restrain money growth to curb inflation, and it was feared the central bank will tighten its credit reins further, putting upward presssure on interest rates.

But by mid-morning some interest rates began falling and bond prices rose following news that factory use fell to 72.9 percent in December compared with 74.8 percent in November — the lowest rate since 1975.

International Business Machines, up 2⅛ to 61⅞, led the gaining blue chips which also included Eastman Kodak 1¼ to 71⅛, General Electric 1½ to 57½, Merck 1⅝ to 82⅝ and Procter & Gamble 2⅝ to 81¾.

Electronic and computer gainers included Data General 2¼ to 53⅝, Prime Computer 2 to 23½, Teledyne 4¾ to 134¾, and Sperry 1⅛ to 32⅝.

Honeywell, despite posting lower fourth-quarter net income, rose 3 to 66½.

Chase Manhattan climbed 1½ to 55½ after reporting sharply higher fourth-quarter profit.

In the oil sector, Getty rose 1¼ to 59¾, Indiana Standard was up ⅝ to 47⅝ and Phillips gained 1⅝ to 40⅛.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index slipped 0.12 to 296.49 after having been down more than 3 points earlier.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrials rose 0.94 to 131.01, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was up 0.89 to 117.22.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market closed at 187.21, down 0.11.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

IRA investment can begin right away

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I would like to place $2,000 in an individual retirement account this year. But I will have to accumulate that amount gradually during the year. Would it be a good idea to put the money in a regular savings account and, when I have $2,000, transfer it to an IRA savings certificate? Or, is there some other high-yielding vehicle in which I can gradually accumulate the money?

A. It would be a bad idea to accumulate the money in a savings account for the simple reason that savings accounts pay much lower interest than many banks and savings and loan associations pay on IRA certificates.

Doyle

You can open an IRA at many banks and S & Ls with a small amount and add to it until you have tucked away $2,000 for the year. The minimum initial IRA deposit varies from one banking institution to another. So do the interest rates paid on IRA certificates.

Shop around for a bank or S & L that will take a small initial IRA deposit in a high-interest savings certificate. The sooner you get your money into an IRA, the sooner it will start earning tax-sheltered income for you. It makes no sense to hold off on putting your money to work at a high yield until you accumulate $2,000.

There are a number of other places where you could open an IRA. But most require relatively high initial deposits. For your purposes, an IRA savings certificate seems to be about the best thing.

•

Q. I plan to open a "self-directed" individual retirement account with my brokerage firm. As my only purchase for 1982, I plan to buy 100 shares of a $20 stock. Must I wait until my gross income for the year reaches $2,000? Must my broker retain the stock certificate and all dividends?

A. You don't have to wait. You could have put $2,000 into an IRA anytime since the beginning of this year. The new rules allow every working person to put $2,000 or 100 percent of annual earnings — whichever is less — into an IRA. Since it's obvious you'll earn more than $2,000 in 1982, you can put that amount away anytime you like — up until April 15, 1983, when you file your 1982 income tax return.

Yes, the stock certificate must be held by the brokerage firm or other trustee for an IRA. You, as the IRA participant, can't get your hands on anything in the account — until you start withdrawals. At that point, you start paying income taxes on the money you previously sheltered from tax.

Dividends and/or interest paid on an IRA also have to be held by the trustee. Some brokerage firms don't allow automatic reinvestment of dividends on stocks in self-directed IRAs and Keogh accounts. If dividends paid on stocks in your IRA just sit there and don't earn more dividends or interest, you lose money.

•

Q: When individual retirement accounts first came on the market, I was advised I was ineligible to open one, because I am drawing a pension from the U.S. Navy. Now that the rules have been changed, is it possible for a retired member of the Armed Forces to set up his own IRA?

A. It is and it has been, ever since IRAs were authorized by act of Congress in 1974. You got some dead wrong advice. Previously, any "active participant" in a retirement plan at his or her place of employment could not have an IRA. But that didn't mean a person drawing a pension and working on a job where there is no retirement plan couldn't have an IRA.

Beginning this year, every working person — covered by a retirement plan or not — can set up an IRA.

Doyle welcomes written questions, but he will be able to provide answers only through the column.

BUSINESS MIRROR

U.S. optimism may not cover recession

NEW YORK (AP) — Two weeks ago, when the National Bureau of Economic Research proclaimed that "the U.S. economy is currently undergoing a recession," most people already were looking for the recovery.

To automakers, homebuilders and the unemployed, to name just a few of the affected parties, the obvious need not be underscored. Instead, in the fine American tradition, it was better to put the bad behind.

"We're loaded for bear," said F. James McDonald, General Motors president. According to him, the nation's biggest manufacturer was ready to take full advantage of a rebound in car and truck sales.

There was less enthusiasm among the unemployed, but labor and business economists were widely quoted as looking for an increase in employment, slow though it might be, as the economy recovered in the second half.

Was it whistling in the dark? Hard to say — but there was a quality to the sound that reminded you of the time when you were a kid and you had to walk right through the toughest part of town in order to get home.

GM, for example, might be loaded for bear, but it is the Japanese that they and other domestic manufacturers have to deal with, and everyone in Detroit knows it. Chrysler has distributed a pamphlet that begins with the stark admission that "the Japanese can place a car in the United States for about $1,800 less than a U.S. manufacturer."

Equally shocking is another admission. "No action by Chrysler or any other U.S. manufacturer can offset the additional permanent tax advantage which results from Japanese government policy," it states.

In other words, the U.S. manufacturers are not able to compete in pricing, and they won't be unless the government intervenes. "No U.S. manufacturer," says Chrysler, "will be able to overcome Japan's clear advantage as long as U.S. government policy allows it to persist."

It concedes that $600 is accounted for by poorer productivity, and $550 because of wages, fringes and work rules. But $650 of the difference, Chrysler contends, comes from the tax differenial between the United States and Japan. It claims that taxes on the average U.S. vehicle are about $2,500, on a Japanese vehicle about $1,850.

MMH given approval

Midland Memorial Hospital has been awarded a three-year certificate of approval from the Commission on Cancer of the American College of Surgeons.

The approval program was established in 1956 to encourage the best in cancer therapy. It encourages discussion of cancer problems among surgeons, medical oncologists, oncological radiation therapists, pathologists and other medical disciplines involving the diagnosis and treatment of cancer, assisting the attending physician in optimal treatment planning for his patient.

In addition, MMH also meets the requirements of having a well-functioning tumor registry. This registry keeps a record of each cancer patient and makes certain that follow-up examination and rehabilitation of patients are done in a systematic manner at specified intervals. Special studies of cancer cause and treatment are possible through this registry.

Approximately 10 percent of the hospitals in Texas have approved cancer programs. A majoritiy of those are conducted at the larger teaching institutions. The requirments for approval include frequent educational multi-disciplinary conferences, quality control evaluations and lifetime follow-up on cancer patients.

The survey process, which was conducted earlier this year, included a throrough analysis of the cancer registry and activities of the medical staff cancer committee, chaired by Dr. Richard C. Schmickrath.

Bentsen to seek third term

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Democrat Lloyd Bentsen announced Monday he is running for a third term in his U.S. Senate seat, a seat sought by three Republican challengers who have been trying to out-conservative each other and Bentsen.

At a Texas Capitol news conference Bentsen said he is not the liberal the GOP contenders say he is.

"I think that's baloney. The people of Texas know that. My record's been to the right of center," he said.

"I have no intention of allowing the agenda for this campaign to be set by extremist attacks rooted in distortion and misrepresentation," Bentsen said.

U.S. Rep. Jim Collins of Dallas has called Bentsen "the most active liberal leader in the South.... He votes just like Ted Kennedy."

State Sen. Walter Mengden of Houston has said, "Although the people of Texas are conservative, we currently have a U.S. senator who admits he is not a conservative."

The third GOP candidate, Houston businessman Don Richardson, a hard-line conservative, has said Bentsen "does not represent the best interests" of Texans.

Bentsen said the attacks from the right are the work of special-interest groups which have targeted him for defeat this year.

Fly the big

Chaps hang on to defeat Wranglers, 89-83

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

No matter how big the lead, one never walks out on a Midland College basketball game. Once again the reserve-shy Chaparrals led comfortably most of the way, 14 to 17 points, but wound up scratching and clawing for an 89-83 win over the Odessa College Wranglers, physical enough to pass for the Pittsburgh Steelers, at the Chaparral Center Monday night.

It was a rough-and-tumble game that at times threatened to get out of hand and more important than MC's 15th win in 20 games this season, 5-6 Spud Webb survived without breaking.

THE FRESHMAN from Dallas Wilmer-Hutchins survived a couple of sickening tumbles that could have sent him from the game on a litter. But, although Spud may look fragile, he's made of tough stuff.

MC remained in second place behind 7-0 Amarillo College, which beat South Plains College, 65-60, in Levelland Monday. SPC is 2-5.

Just as in the Frank Phillips game last Thursday, MC had a big lead five minutes into the final half. In this case a series of turnovers and fast breaks gave the Chaps a 60-43 edge, their biggest of the game. And then just as happened against the Plainsmen, that huge iceburg melted.

IT WAS still 65-54 when Webb left with his fourth personal with 8:52 left and it was down to 67-64 when Coach Jerry Stone rushed him back into the breach with 5:39 to go and the glassy-eyed Chaps hanging on the ropes, ready to be kayoed.

And just as it happened against Frank Phillips, MC revived almost miraculously.

Lance McCain a 12-footer jumper, Webb a couple of feee throws and Puntus Wilson a couple of baskets off Webb feeds gave MC a 75-66 edge. MC never could relax and breath easy. The Wranglers lurked perilously close until the final minute.

Wilson pumped in nine points down the stretch, but his defensive play probably was as much of a factor in the Chaps' revival.

WILSON WOUND up the night's high scorer with 25 with nine of 17 from the field. Webb had 24 on seven of 12 from the floor. Six-six Chester Smith had 16 and McCain 12.

"It was a loosely called game," Stone said later, happy another narrow escape was over. "They (the officials) tried to call it like a Missouri Valley game instead of cracking down early. There was a lot of pushing and shoving. It was bad for both sides."

The win gives MC a 6-1 Western Junior College Conference record going into Thursday's game against Western Texas College at Snyder. OC slumped to 8-11 for the season and 2-4 in WJCC. The Wranglers have lost to Howard and NMMI, 67-62, at Roswell Saturday night before losing to MC in league games since the Christmas break.

It was a contest in which MC kept OC from penetrating inside in the first half in building up a 50-36 halftime advantage on a succession of turnovers and fast breaks. In the second half, the Chaps capitalized on their transition game early, but when OC had time to set up their zone, MC couldn't penetrate and the Wranglers benefited from a succession of turnovers.

"WE DID a lot of standing around for a while in the second half," Stone said.

Bigger, physically stronger and bench deepOdessa began to whittle away in the second half when they got the ball into 6-9 Paul Hamilton, 6-4 Al Penny and 6-4 Joey Garcia and it looked for a while as though they would simply outmuscle the Chaps.

Hamilton finished with 21 points, Penny with 13, 12 in the second half, and Garcia only had seven but stuffed in a couple of crucial buckets.

HOWEVER, it was MC's quicker, more agile defense that made the difference with Wilson and Webb leading the way while Jerome Crowe had perhaps his best defensive game, coming up with four big steals early in the second half.

"Jerome is taking pride in his defense now," said Stone, "And it shows."

Webb, the Chaps indispensable playmaker, lived dangerously throughout the night. On a driving layup off a fast break in the first half, Luis Clarke left Spud in a heap against the basket support as he knocked the props out from under him in mid air. At the first half buzzer, Webb went high to block a lay up by Donnell Burwell and again took a fearful tumble, picking up a personal foul for his efforts. And then with five seconds to go after a free throw, he was deliberately pushed as he stood at the line and found himself shooting again.

'On any given night...' true in 5-5A

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Sports Writer

Coaches of any sport take great pride in beginning quotes with, "On any given night...". But in this District 5-5A basketball race where four teams are crowded at the top of the standings with 3-1 marks, that type of quote has become a status symbol with a large share of credibility.

After all, it was Midland High coach Jack Stephenson who last week predicted that Odessa High would beat Abilene High. Since Odessa High was 0-3 at the time and AHS riding alone at the top with a 3-0 record, it was time to snicker behind Jack's back.

History records that Stephenson was not spilling idle words from a wishing heart. For one thing, it proved that in this league, on any given night an Odessa High can beat an Abilene High.

The Bronchos gave hope throughout the league and vaulted Midland High, Midland Lee and Abilene Cooper right back into the first half title chase, with all in control of their own destinies. Wild is the only word left to describe what could happen in the three remaining first half games.

WHICH BRINGS us to tonight's contests across the league. Midland High will face the now upset minded Bronchos at Chaparral Center at 8 p.m. while the Rebels of Lee will take its new found life against Odessa Permian in Odessa against a Panther team that could just as easily have been 3-1 at this stage instead of 1-3.

And of course, 3-1 Abilene High hosts 2-2 San Angelo while upstart Abilene Cooper, also at 3-1, takes its surprising first half express to Big Spring. Every game on the docket has a lot of meaning.

Stephenson's Bulldogs appear to have the best of the schedule with all three first half games remaining at Chaparral Center where they have not lost in the last 26 district outings. They face OHS, a team they beat earlier in the year 58-49, tonight, then face Cooper Friday and Lee next Tuesday.

The Rebels, playing better with each outing, have a tougher schedule with road games against Permian tonight and Abilene High Friday before returning to the Chap to face Midland High next Tuesday.

Abilene High also has a tough road ahead with San Angelo tonight, Lee Friday and Cooper next Tuesday while Cooper faces Big Spring, Midland High and AHS, a schedule most figure the Cougars can't handle.

SAN ANGELO, a team that beat Lee by one and carried MHS into overtime before losing Friday, still feels that it is in the race even with its two losses. It would certianly be premature to scratch them out the way things have been going so far.

MHS enters tonight's game without knowing if scoring leader Preston Robertson will be able to play. He reinjured an ankle against San Angelo. Robertson entered league play with a 20.5 per game scoring average, but is down to 18.9 now, averaging only 10 points per game in district play. The ankle has been a problem for him.

However, Don Sharnowski (14.1), Raymond Parker (13.5) and Jim Gunnels (8.9) have more than taken up the slack. Gunnels has been in double figures in every district game as has Sharnowski. Also MHS has shown the deepest bench in the league and seems to handle injuries and foul trouble better than most teams in the league.

ANDRE VAN Buren continues to lead the Rebels with a 17.9 average and has been in double figures in all of Lee's district games. Alvin Dunson is averaging 15.0 while Randy Pepper is at 9.0 after a 22-point showing against Big Spring. Barry Blackwell (7.5) has been in double figures the last two games.

However, one reason the Rebels are improving is the play from Kenneth Brown (7.4) and Olen Smith (4.9). Both have been crashing the boards lately and had 28 rebounds between them against Big Spring last Friday. The Rebs can shoot with almost anyone if they get help on the boards.

Slips can be crucial in a close race like this with as many as five teams saying they can still win or share the first half title. It's now time for one team to come to the front because there is a still a title for the taking.

Lee beats Permian to gain 5-5A tie

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Sports Writer

Thanks to Midland High's upset win over San Angelo Saturday night, the Midland Lee girls basketball team had one last ditch chance to stay alive in the first half District 5-5A basketball race and they made the most of it Monday with a last ditch 61-58 win over league leader Odessa Permian at the Lee gym.

The Rebel victory knotted the first half race with Lee, San Angelo and Permian all sharing 5-1 records. Lee can not win the first half outright, but if they defeat Abilene High Thursday they will share the first half crown with either San Angelo or Permian. Those two teams also meet Thursday in the completion of the first half race.

So Lee is back in the thick of the race, but it wasn't an easy task against a Permian team that wouldn't die easily.

"All I can say is that it was an exceptional game. I don't think there was a lack of effort at any time in the game and I'm just glad we won it," said Lee coach Shirley Stephenson. "We have Abilene High Thursday night and they are not a bad team. I don't really think there is one in the league. We'll have to play hard if we want part of the first half title."

Lee came out of the chute fast and looked as if it was going to march Permian back to Odessa about three quarters early. Lee jumped to 12-3 lead with 3:26 left in the first period as Lurdes Duran sparked the Rebels with three steals. But that was the zenith of the Rebel attack as they went on to connect on only nine of 33 shots in the first half. Still, they led 32-29 at the half thanks to 14 of 20 at the charity line.

Permian did tie it at 24 with two minutes left before the half as Jana Davis, who had 22 points on the night, canned two free throws. But Lee's Shun Harris, who hit for 15 points and sank seven of eight of eight free throws in the first half, hit from the charity stripe for a 26-24 lead.

The Rebels held the lead until the 1:04 mark of the third period when Davis hit a bomb from the top of the circle to give Permian a 43-42 margin. Permian led 45-42 entering the final period.

In the fourth period the score was tied at 47, 49 and 55 before Permian's Stephanie Sorrells gave the Panthers a 56-55 lead with 43 seconds left.

Lee's Maudie Akins, however, hit in close for a 57-56 lead with 32 seconds, stole the ball and was fouled where she connected for a 58-56 lead with 27 seconds left. Suzanne McGaha, who scored 10 points on the night, hit two charity tosses with 12 seconds left to ice the victory.

Yshun King led Lee with 19 points, with 10 coming in the fourth period. Julia Wright added 13 for Permian, 11 in the first half. Davis' 10 in the third quarter gave the Panthers the lift they needed, but Lee outscored the visitors 19-13 in the final period to take the win.

IN ODESSA, the Midland High girls didn't fare as well as they dropped a 50-48 decision to the Odessa High Bronchos in a game that nearly went into overtime.

With the Bulldogs trailing by three points, 50-47, and with no time left on the clock, Penny Griffen went to the free throw line to shoot a one-on-one. She canned the first shot at MHS coach Jane Young called time out.

During the break, Coach Young told Griffen to miss the free throw and then put up a quick shot on the rebound to tie tie the game. Griffen, who hadn't been in that situation before, threw the ball against the backboard, got the rebound and put up the tieing shot.

"She executed the play well," said Young, "but the ball wouldn't go in the hole."

The Bronchos built up a 12-6 lead in the first quarter and went into the lockerroom at halftime up by a 30-25 count. MHS was able to outscore OHS 8-6 and 15-14 in the final quarters but couldn't overcome the Bronchos in the end.

"We were a little flat last night, the ball wouldn't fall through for us," said Young. "We made 10 free throws, but missed some crucial free throws that could have helped us. They out rebounded us also. But the kids played hard."

Sheila Christian paced the Bulldogs in the scoring department with 13 points while Janice Littlefield added 11 and Penny Griffen 10. For OHS, Karen Wallace was the top gun with 16 points with Valetria Jurnigan adding 10.

Both MHS and OHS aren now 2-4 in 5-5A play while the Bulldogs hold a slight edge in the overall standings with a 13-11 mark to the Bronchos' 10-11.

SAN ANGELO stayed in the race at 5-1 with a 78-54 win over Abilene High as Lisa Champlin hit for 22, Jeanne Bryant 19 and Elsa Ornelas 14. In another 5-5A game, Big Spring defeated Abilene Cooper 44-36.

In the junior varsity game, Permian defeated Lee 59-46 as Laura Bartlett hit for 19 and was backed by Lisa Gallemore's 13 and 10 each from Bobbie Sue Tucker and Barbra Bartlett. Lisa Burnett paced Lee with 12 while Deanda Rhoads had 11 and Faye Oudems 10.

The MHS junior varsity ripped OHS, 48-23.

Lee won the sophomore game 51-43 in overtime as Tunya Mayberry hit for 25 and Elena Duran had 16, eight coming in the overtime period. Angie Keck and Sherri Griffin each had 10 for Permian.

SMU signs Collins to five-year contract

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Bobby Collins, who promised not to desert Southern Methodist for the professional ranks like the man he is replacing, said Monday night he has signed a five-year contract as the new Mustang head football coach.

Bobby Collins

Terms of the contract were not disclosed, but Collins is believed to be receiving over $100,000 a season to succeed Coach Ron Meyer, who resigned Friday to go to New England of the National Football League.

"I'm most excited by this opportunity," said Collins, who brought Southern Mississippi a national reputation as a football power. "This is quite a challenge for me because I have a great deal of respect for the Southwest Conference."

Collins, 48, who played college football at Mississippi State under Darrell Royal, was asked point-blank if he considered the SMU job a stepping stone to the pros.

"I do not," replied Collins.

"I had an excellent situation at Southern Mississippi, but my career was at a crossroads and a decision had to be made," he said.

COLLINS, WHO is known for his offensive teams at Southern Mississippi, said he believes SMU could compete in Dallas with the professional Cowboys "by putting on a good show that will attract people to the games."

He had a quarterback last season in Reggie Collier who rushed and passed for over 1,000 yards.

"We will have a quarterback-tailback option-oriented offense," said Collins.

He said he realized SMU had two 1,000-yard rushers returning in Eric Dickerson and Craig James.

"We saw two SMU game films last year and we were very much impressed with the talent ... you could see SMU is an outstanding football team," he said.

Collins, asked if it bothered him that he was not Athletic Director Bob Hitch's original choice, said, "When they called me I was the coach they wanted and that's good enough for me."

AFTER THE resignation of Meyer, who led the Mustangs to a Southwest Conference football championship last season, Hitch first offered the job to Dallas Cowboy assistant coach John Mackovic. But Mackovic declined after talking to Cowboys Coach Tom Landry and Cowboys President Tex Schramm.

Collins said he would immediately go to work recruiting after meeting with the SMU staff and football players Tuesday.

He did not say how many assistants he would bring, but Hitch announced that Collins had the option to bring his entire staff.

"The two happiest people in college football today are probably Steve Sloan at Mississippi and Emory Bellard at Mississippi State because they have Collins out of Mississippi," said Hitch.

Hitch, who had promised to hire a coach within 48 hours after Meyer resigned, met with Collins in Hattiesburg, Miss., on Sunday.

Collins was 38-30-2 in eight seasons with the Golden Eagles, who lost to Missouri 19-17 in the Tangerine Bowl. His team defeated McNeese State 16-14 in the Independence Bowl after the 1980 season.

COLLINS LED Southern Mississippi to a 13-13 tie with Alabama earlier in the year and the Golden Eagles jumped into the Top 20 of the national rankings but fell out after they lost to Missouri.

Southern Mississippi has been 9-3 and 9-2-1 in the last two years.

Hitch had also placed Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne and Mississippi State Coach Emory Bellard on his check list but both coaches withdrew from consideration.

Texas defeats TCU 105-89 to remain unbeaten

By The Associated Press

Texas' front line of LaSalle Thompson, Virdell Howland and Mike Wacker combined for 81 points Monday night as the No.19 Longhorns ran up their second-highest point total of the season to defeat Texas Christian 105-89 in Southwest Conference basketball.

Texas grabbed a 39-31 first-half lead and never was seriously threatened in extending its perfect record to 13-0, including a league-leading 5-0 conference mark.

Despite scoring the most points by any Texas opponent this season, Texas Christian fell to 7-8 overall and 2-3 in the SWC.

Thompson, a 6-foot-10, 250-pound junior, and the 6-foot-6 Howland each had 15 points in the first half. Thompson finished with 31, and Howland with 26. Wacker, 6-foot-9, had 24 points, including 17 in the last half.

Darrell Browder kept Texas Christian in the game with 28 points, 22 of those coming in the final 20 minutes.

Texas continued its free-throw mastery, hitting 21 of 23. Texas now has connected on 244 of 328 free throws in 13 games, while its opponents have made just 102 of 148.

SW Texas St 43, Abilene Christian 36

Junior forward Rick Garrison led all scorers with 14 points as Southwest Texas State downed Abilene Christian 43-36 in a slowed-down Lone Star Conference basketball game Monday.

Garrison made 12 of as many free throws and pulled down 11 rebounds. Kerry Murray and Lawrence Fowler each had 10 for the winners, while Abilene Christian was paced by Greg Williams' 12 points.

Southwest Texas improved its record to 3-1 in LSC play and 8-6 on the season. Abilene Christian dropped to 1-3 and 6-9.

Angelo State 58, Texas A&I 57

Roland Core hit a six-foot basket as time elapsed to cap a late rally and lift Angelo State to a dramatic 58-57 victory over Texas A&I in a Lone Star Conference basketball game Monday night.

The win raised Angelo State's record to 10-6 for the season and 1-3 in the LSC. Texas A&I is now 7-8 and 1-3.

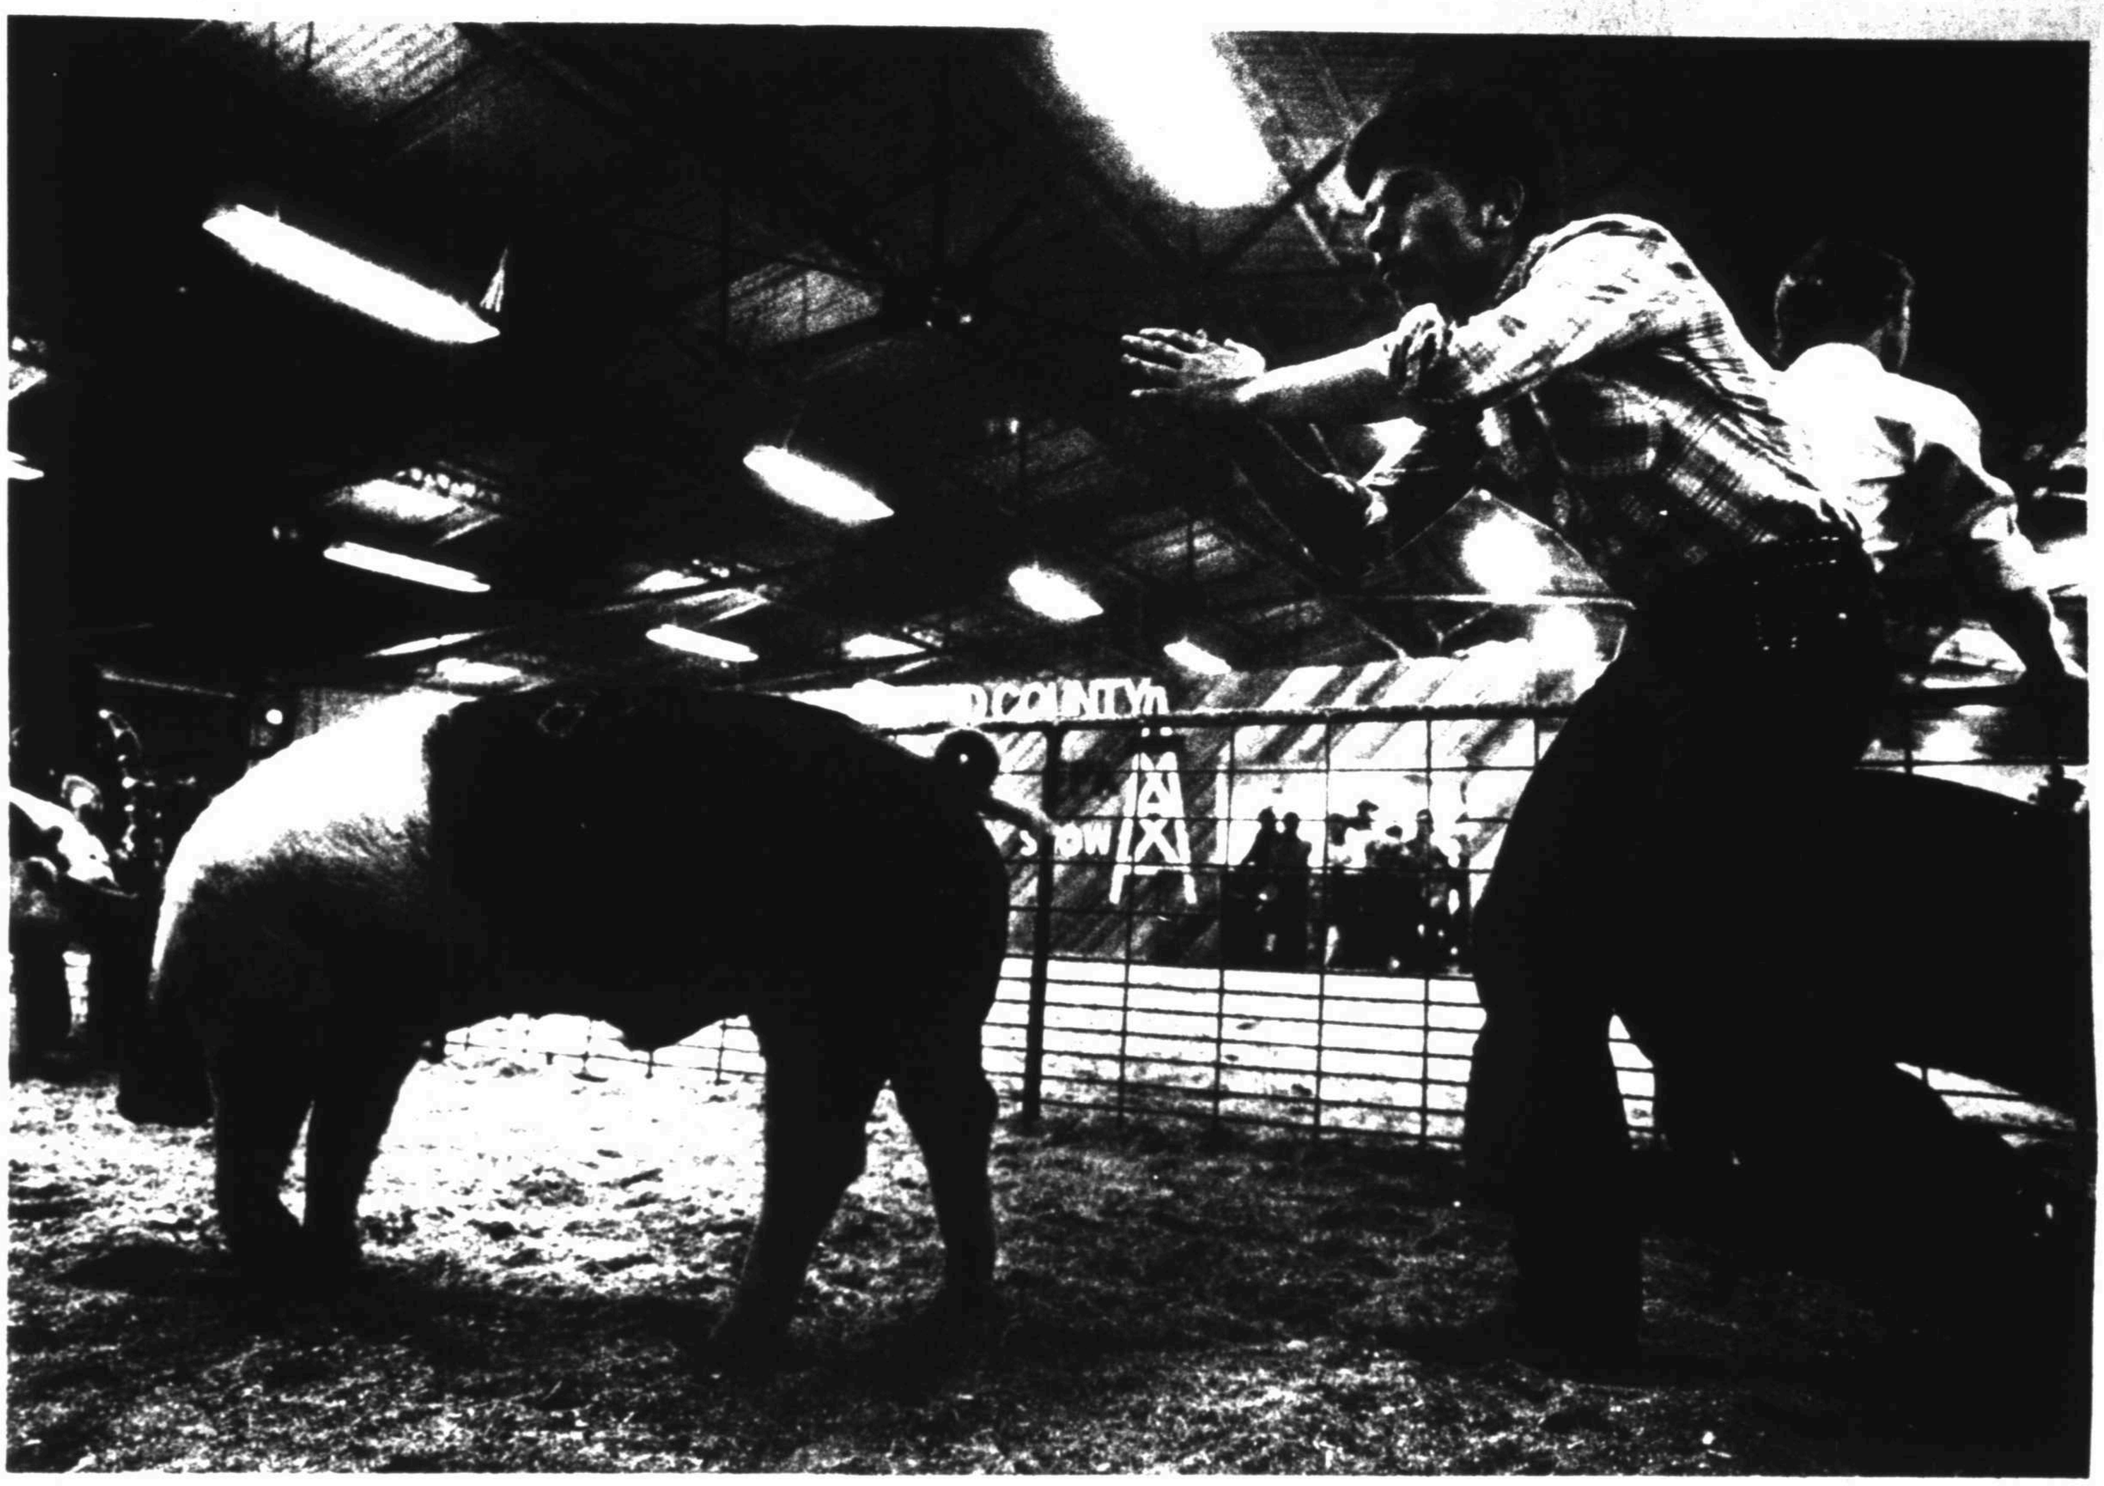
Marty Kirby is a lot older than the steer, but he's obviously not bigger.

Lance Simmons peers over his spotted lamb, as he awaits for the judge to voice his preferences in the sheep-judging contest.



Like a hunter stalking his prey, Mike Pruitt guides his pig in the arena in the swine judging Monday at the 33rd annual Midland County Livestock Show.

These sheep may think they're heading to higher ground, but the judge is just going to send them back to the pen after he decides which one is the champion at the Midland County Livestock Show.

Auction caps livestock show

The last round-up of the 1982 Midland County Livestock Show will be staged at 7 p.m. at the Midland County Exhibit Building today, when auctioneer Tommy Marricle tries to drive up the stakes.

He did last year, when the total sales of 127 prime livestock and additional animals in the floor sale breezed past the $66,000 mark. It was a record sale.

And the focus, as it always is, tonight will be on the grand champion steer.

Marricle's mission will be to pump up the bidding on the 1982 grand champion steer, a 1,100-pound black Maine-Anjou calf, shown by Paula McBryde.

Prior to the show, at 6:30 p.m. today, the 4-H and FFA youth will be presented awards for their showmanship and industry.

All told, 247 youthful exhibitors on Monday paraded their 362 lambs, barrows and steers before the judges. The show's champion lambs were shown by Shelly Coots, who exhibited the champion fine-wool lamb; Steve Sparkman, champion cross-bred lamb, and Susan Hollum, champion medium-wool lamb.

Scott Driver's swine won the show's pig championship. Dawn Brewer showed the reserve champion swine.

Robin Mertz showed her 935-pound steer to the British-breed championship. Reserve honors went to Monty Cook's calf.

Paula McBryde's 1,100-pound calf beat out Rhonda McVey's 1,335-pound calf for the exotic-breed championship and was adjuged the grand champion steer of the show.

The big calf gets a hardy slap on the rear and Paula McBryde gets a champion blue ribbon following the steer judging.Outside of the championship ribbon, here's what the 4-H Club and Future Farmers of America youth are seeking: the coveted first-place ribbon.

Haitian charged with violating neutrality laws

By MILT SOSIN
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — Bernard Sansaricq, a gas station owner who masterminded an abortive plot to invade his homeland of Haiti, is free on bond after being charged with violating U.S. neutrality laws.

Sansaricq was released Monday night from a detention camp in Miami on $400,000 bond. Two of his lieutenants were still in custody, as were 22 others ordered held as material witnesses by U.S. Magistrate Herbert Shapiro.

The rag-tag force was returned to Miami Sunday by a Coast Guard cutter after its chartered boat broke down about 50 miles north of Haiti. Sansaricq and his two Canadian lieutenants — Philippe Carre and Milo Goussel — were charged with violating the U.S. Neutrality Act by mounting an invasion from American soil.

Sansaricq said earlier this month that he planned to make Tortuga the capital of his Haitian government-in-exile. The exiles' attempt to establish a toe-hold on the island of Tortuga failed last week, and they set back to sea.

The Haitian government kept a tight lid today on news from Tortuga, an 18th-century pirate stronghold off Haiti's north coast.

At Sansaricq's bond hearing in Miami federal court Monday night, a crowd of Haitians surrounded a prisoners' van. Sansaricq's colleagues were taken to Krome Avenue refugee detention camp near Miami to be interviewed on their immigration status.

Sansaricq was taken out the back door of the courthouse to Krome for a brief interview and then freed, said his lawyer, Neal Sonnett.

Carre, a Montreal security systems employee, and Gousse, an assistant professor of geography at Quebec University, also were taken out the back of the courthouse Monday night for transfer to the Federal Correctional Institution in southern Dade County. They had been unable to make bond set at $100,000 each.

A crowd of more than 75 Haitians shouted in anger and surrounded the van as the other 22 men, who left by the courthouse's front entrance, were put in a van. Several Haitians attempted to block the van with their bodies but were pulled aside by federal marshals.

The bonds were set by Shapiro Monday afternoon and upheld by U.S. District Judge William Hoeveler Monday night.

Sonnett said he had been assured that the Haitian detainees would be freed today.

INS spokeswoman Beverly McFarland said it was her understanding "they will all either be released Tuesday or transferred to the Federal Correctional Institution."

Carre and Gousse were charged with Sansaricq in an FBI complaint which alleges that they "from within the United States did knowingly take part in a military expedition against...Haiti, a nation with whom the U.S. is at peace."

Three weeks ago, Sansaricq assembled a tiny force at South Caicos, in the British Turks and Caicos Islands, and publicly said they would invade Haiti to overthrow President Jean-Claude Duvalier. Duvalier is president for life. On Jan. 9, the Haitian government confirmed fighting on Tortuga after an invasion party estimated at eight people landed on the island. The government later said three invaders had died.

Earthquake in New England 'sounded like an explosion'

By ANDREW SCHNEIDER
Associated Press Writer

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — A moderate earthquake — the strongest in New Hampshire since 1940 — "sounded like an explosion" as it shook homes and frightened residents in northern New England.

No injuries or serious damage were caused by Monday's temblor, which officials said was unrelated to an earthquake 10 days ago centered in the Canadian province of New Brunswick.

The earthquake was centered near Franklin, a town of about 8,000, and some people thought that buildings were collapsing or furnaces had exploded.

The tremor was felt from from Maine to New York state.

Franklin Police Cpl. Stephen Adams said he was at work when the quake struck about 7:15 p.m. He said the police station is housed in an old brick building, "and I thought the place was going to come down — that's how bad it was shaking.

"I hope it doesn't happen again. It's a little nerve-wracking up here," Adams said.

Telephone service was disrupted around the state, not from the quake itself but from the resulting flood of calls to authorities that followed, officials of New England Telephone Co. said.

At Franklin Regional Hospital, a switchboard operator said the quake "sounded like an explosion," and Franklin resident Ginny Sargent said her "whole house shook and rumbled."

"It really shook us," said Rusty Green, a radio reporter in Laconia, in central New Hampshire. "Everyone who reported it said they thought their furnaces had blown up."

In Kensington, on the New Hampshire seacoast, civil defense Director Joan Bigler described the earthquake as "a long, low rumble, as though a snow plow crashed into the house."

John Hyatt, owner of Larry's Market in the neighboring town of Lakeport, said vibrating cans and bottles "sounded like a charm factory."

The National Earthquake Information Service in Golden, Colo., said the quake registered 4.8 on the Richter scale and was centered near Franklin.

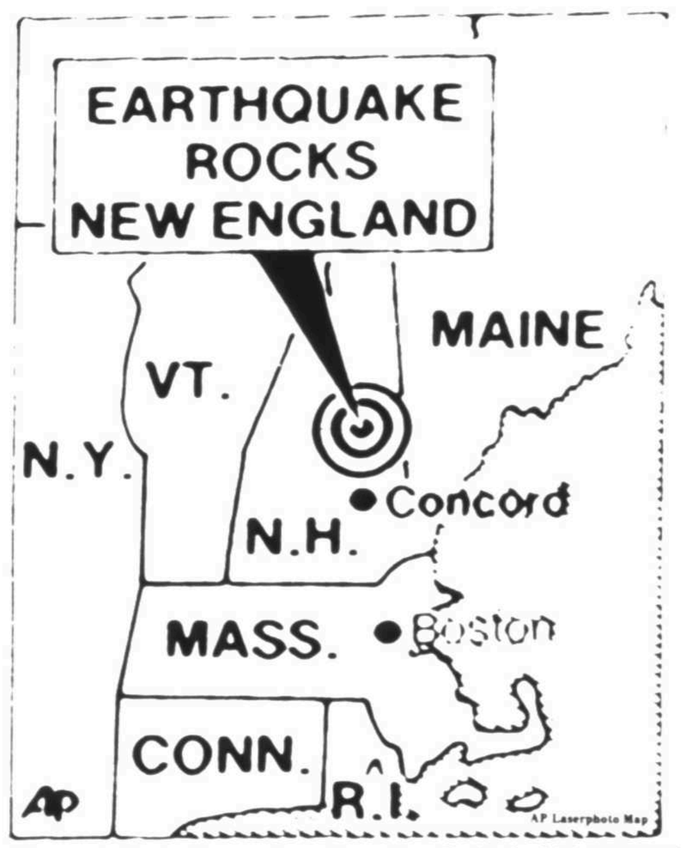
Janitor Dave Madden said he was thrown about the elevator at the Laconia Clinic by the quake.

"I just hoped and prayed it wasn't going to fall," he said.

An earthquake centered in New Brunswick, Canada, shook much of New England on Jan. 9, but John Ebel, assistant director of Boston College's Weston Observatory, said that temblor was unrelated to Monday's.

John Minsch, a U.S. Geological Survey geophysicist at Golden, also said there was no evidence to link the New Hampshire quake to the one in New Brunswick, which is 200 miles away.

On the Richter scale, a quake of 4.0 can cause moderate damage in a populated area. One of 5.0 is 10 times stronger and can cause considerable damage. A 1980 USGS document said the last strong quake in New Hampshire, 5.8 on the Richter scale, occurred in 1940 in Ossipee.



The map indicates the area in northern New England which was struck by a moderate earthquake Monday.

Reagan reverses tax exemption

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — After touching off a furor by instructing the Internal Revenue Service to grant tax exemptions to schools that discriminate against blacks, President Reagan is asking Congress to reverse his order.

The Senate Finance Committee will begin consideration of the president's proposed legislation Feb. 1, said Chairman Bob Dole, a Kansas Republican.

While the measure is pending, the IRS is being told not to enforce Reagan's earlier decision — except in the case of two schools. The administration already had promised the Supreme Court it would act with regard to the two institutions that have cases pending before the high court.

However, if the legislation passes as the administration wrote it, the two schools — Bob Jones University and Goldsboro, N.C., Christian Schools — would have to give back any benefits they gain from their exemptions. The two schools acknowledge they have discriminatory policies but maintain they are based on religious belief and are therefore exempt from government scrutiny.

This confusing state of affairs arose Jan. 8, when the Treasury and Justice departments announced the reversal of an 11-year-old policy of denying charitable institution status to private schools and colleges that discriminate against blacks. Charitable institutions are exempt from federal income taxes, and people who contribute to them may deduct contributions from their income on their tax returns.

The Jan. 8 announcement sparked an outcry from civil rights groups across the country, and the two senior black aides on the White House staff convinced Reagan his decision was being viewed as evidence of racism.

The president hastily issued a statement insisting he is unalterably opposed to racial discrimination but had been convinced the IRS policy exceeded the executive agency's administrative authority. He said he regretted any misunderstanding and announced he would ask for legislation to require the IRS to do what his administration had just ordered it to stop doing.

In a letter to the House and Senate dated Monday, Reagan said his earlier decision "reflects my belief that agencies such as the IRS should not be permitted, even with the best of intentions and to further goals that I strongly endorse, to govern by administrative fiat by exercising powers that the Constitution assigns to the Congress."

He then told Vice President George Bush, who serves as president of the Senate, and House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. that he was proposing legislation to "prohibit tax exemptions for any schools that discriminate on the basis of race" and urged them to give it prompt consideration.

The proposed legislation, Reagan said, "is sensitive to the legitimate special needs of private religious schools."

The measure would recognize the right of any religious school to give preference or priority to members of a particular religious organization or belief, but it would bar a tax exemption to any such school if its "policy, program, preference or priority is based upon race or a belief that requires discrimination on the basis of race."

Companion legislation would prohibit any taxpayer from claiming an income tax deduction for contributing to such a school.

The legislation would be retroactive to 1970, when the original IRS policy was adopted under then-President Nixon.

One administration official, who briefed reporters on the condition he not be identified, estimated that 100 schools across the country have been denied tax exemptions in the last four or five years because they discriminate on the basis of race, either in their admissions policies or in other school rules, such as one at Bob Jones that bars interracial dating.

Academy of Sciences to ignore restrictions

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — The National Academy of Sciences will no longer distribute U.S. State Department regulations governing the activities of Soviet-bloc scientists visiting American universities, the organization's president says.

Academy President Dr. Frank Press announced the decision Monday in Washington after Stanford University officials said they would ignore the regulations during a spring visit by Soviet robot engineering scientist Dr. Nikolai V. Umnov.

Under the regulations, Stanford would be required to bar Umnov from access to information about walking robot research at Stanford. He would also be forbidden to visit local industries. He would be allowed to discuss only published information.

Stanford officials said last week they could not accept the restrictions, refusing to be responsible for policing Umnov's activities. They said Stanford does not conduct classified research and that its laboratories are open.

Before the State Department can issue a visa to researchers from Communist bloc nations, it must seek a "waiver of inadmissibility" from the attorney general's office, an academy spokesman said.

The waiver can be issued only when the academy has received assurances from the American host of the visitor that restrictions are acceptable, the spokesman said.

Press said the restrictions interfered with the flow of research information unrelated to national security. He said that free discussion of research is "the daily interaction of any laboratory."

Press said he would bring the issue up for a final policy decision at the academy's governing council meeting in late February.

Dr. Greenlee decides to 'semi-retire' in Rockport

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

After practicing medicine for 42 years with 27 of those spent in Midland, Dr. Ralph Greenlee has decided it's time to leave.

"It's a difficult and emotional thing to think about giving your patients up," Dr. Greenlee said Monday.

He will be leaving Midland next week to move to Rockport where he will semi-retire.

"I'll probably do a little practice — open an office in town," he said, adding that Rockport is a small town with a population of about 6,000 located 30 miles from Corpus Christi.

While cleaning out his files and records, he reminisced about his years as a Midland internist.

"Looking through my records, I saw where I received $4 for a house call and $2 for an office call (about 27 years ago)," Greenlee said. "You don't see how people can afford to go the doctors nowadays."

He attributes some of the inflated medical expenses to new advances and technology in the field of medicine.

"Years ago, if a person got pneumonia, there wasn't much you could do except try to relieve the symptons," he recalled. "Then one day a fellow came in with some white pills — penicillin — and everyone began to get well."

Locally, Greenlee talked about his memories of Midland Memorial Hospital. He said the hospital was only about two years old when he arrived in Midland, "but it was already 20 to 30 years out of date. We (doctors) had to struggle with the hospital's physical problems for a long time."

He explained not only was the building outdated along with poor facilities, but MMH had some bad luck with the hospital administration over the years.

"We had to overcome a bad reputation from those early days, but now, beginning with the last administration, the hospital has improved. And the Allison Center started off debt free which is unheard of," he said.

Dr. Ralph Greenlee

Greenlee's associate, Dr. Abdul Baluch, will take over his patient load. For those patients who decide to change doctors, Greenlee said they should sign a release for the records to be transferred.

"I want to express to all my patients my deepest appreciation of their confidence through the years. Each one of them has been a constant inspiration to me in my attempts to be their personal physician," he said.

On Wednesday, members of the MMH boards will hold a reception for Greenlee and his wife, Winona, at Midland Center from 4 to 6 p.m. The public is invited to attend this reception and thank Greenlee for the years of service he has given to the community.
