WALTON TRAILS HOWARD IN OKLAHOMA

Robertson Opens Gubernatorial Campaign In Wichita Falls

SPIRITUAL AND PRO ISSUES BIG ONES, HE SAYS

Big Crowd Listens To Candidate Tell of His Platform.

HECKLER SILENCED

Attacks Ferguson's Wet Record' and Warns Of Coming Fight.

The spiritual and prohibition issues seem to be the dominant ones in Texas today, according to Judge Felix D. Robertson of Dallas who, in opening his gubernatorial campaign here last night declared that if the nation was to survive materially it must be redeemed spiritually—and that the beaten and disgruntled liquor interests of the state must be kept out of the governor's chair at Austin.

Big Crowd Present.

Speaking before a crowd of 1,500 or more at the American legion arena, Judge Robertson presented a few of the questions of the day as he conceived and interpreted them. His appeal was based largely on a request for fair play and an incessent reiteration of the fact that he had not been throwing mud at any of his opponents. He said nothing at all on the ku klux klan question, referred only vaguely to taxation, went into some detail on education, ignored the penitentiary system and was silent on practically all of the other issues that have been considered thus far in the gubernatorial contest.

Prohibition and the alleged activities of former governor Ferguson in this respect was dealt with exhaustively; the need for a spiritual reawakening was also stressed at the last, but otherwise Judge Robertson's address consisted of a general pledge that he would be fair himself if elected governor and that he wanted his opponents to be fair with him.

Heckler Causes Uproar.

Introduced by Rev. E. L. Finney of Burkburnett who touched on the prohibition issue in his remarks, Judge Robertson plunged at once into a tilt with a heckler who started a disturbance from the edge of the arena. After quieting the crowd which was hooting and jeering the disturber, Judge Robertson turned toward the man and said:

"If you are a gentleman, you'll keep your mouth out of this. All I ask here tonight is a square deal and fair play and if you are not willing to give it to me you are not an American citizen of the right type."

No more disturbance came throughout the address. The crowd, however, was a responsive one and calls of "pour it on 'em" and "you tell 'em" were frequent.

Attacks Ferguson.

Judge Robertson launched early into an indictment of former governor Ferguson who, he intimated, was the tool of disgruntled liquor forces of the state.

"There is one important issue that we are facing in Texas now," he declared, "and that is the prohibition issue that has become acute since the July 26 primary. The opposition that has developed against me since the primary is nothing more nor less than the old whiskey gang, banded together as one man. They are the ones fighting me and supporting my opponent because they know my election will sound the death knell of liquor in Texas.

"The liquor interests right now are planning to introduce a bill in the next legislature calling for a reduction of the penalties prescribed by the Dean law, eliminating the jail sentences and making fines only prescribed for liquor law violations. Ladies and gentlemen, if I am not elected governor the enemies of prohibition in this state will be heartened and we will soon see here a repetitoion of scenes enacted in New

Negro Faces Death Penalty Charge

BLACK IS STILL KEPT OUTSIDE CITY BY POLICE

Assault With Deadly Weapon to Commit Robbery Is Charge.

SANITY QUESTIONED

Alienist May Examine Him When Attorney Pays Visit.

Charges punishable by death were filed Tuesday against M. T. Williams, negro, who is now held in a jail outside the county as a result of an attack Monday morning on Mike Pierce, 14-year-old clerk in the J. R. Morgan grocery. The complaint, filed by Assistant District Attorney Robert K. Crain before Justice of the Peace R. V. Gwinn alleges assault with a deadly weapon with intent to commit robbery.

Punishable By Death.

Statutes provide that conviction of this offense may be punished by infliction of the death penalty, life imprisonment or imprisonment for any term of years not less than five.

In order to obtain the death penalty in this case, the state must prove that a flat-iron is a deadly weapon.

Filing of the charges yesterday was the only development in the affair which has aroused new interest in the murder on July 8 of Wesley Ashmore. Speculation was still rife as to whether or not Williams was implicated in the Ashmore death. Many officials who have had an active part in the investigation of the Ashmore mystery believe that Williams had something to do with it. Others frankly declare themselves as being doubtful of his having been involved at all.

Sanity Questioned.

So far as is known, no investigations have as yet been made of the negro, who is locked for safe keeping in a jail outside of the county. It was stated that when officers did go down to question him a physician would be taken along to test him for sanity. It was considered possible that the investigation would be made Tuesday night, but this had failed to materalize at a late hour.

GOLDING WIRES HE'S ALL RIGHT

Rumors Of Accident To Local Family Prove False.

Reports that Mrs. Dudley Golding, wife of a prominent Wichita Falls oil operator and one of the outstanding amateur golfers of the state, had been killed in an automobile accident near El Paso Tuesday morning were allayed here late yesterday with word that there had been no accident and that Mrs. Golding was alive and well.

Rumor Spreads Fast.

The rumor, which started early in the morning and spread rapidly over the city, stated that Mrs. Golding had met death when the auto in which she was riding overturned. Mr. and Mrs. Golding, Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Bowden of this city and G. A. Miller of Houston were on their way to Colorado in the Bowden automobile.

Golding Sends Wire.

The report was given credence until a message was received here by C. E. McCutcheon at the First National bank from Mr. Golding. It was wired from El Paso and stated in effect that the entire party was well and that there had been no accidents. NO JURY TRIAL IN FRANKS CASE CAVERLY RULES

Judge Again Turns Down Demand Of Attorney For Insanity Hearing.

ALIENIST ON STAND

Psychiatrist Refuses To Be Befuddled by Cross Examination.

By The Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 5.—Punishment of Nathan F. Leopold Jr., and Richard A. Loeb, for kidnapping and murdering 14-year-old Robert Franks will be determined as a result of the present hearing before Judge John R. Caverly, and the proceedings will not be turned into a trial by jury with a plea of legal insanity, the court ruled today.

Again Overrules Demands.

Judge Caverly emphatically asserted that he was fully within his legal rights in hearing testimony from experts on mental diseases in mitigation of punishment, in tones that rang throughout the court room. He said:

"These boys are sane so far as this court is concerned. They have accepted responsibility and the only thing to be determined is their grounds for mitigation. The Illinois supreme court has said that it is mandatory for me to hear any evidence in mitigation."

The court several times previously, in perfunctory manner, had turned aside demands by Robert E. Crowe, states attorney, that the hearing had reached a point where it was proper only that the court summons a jury.

In disposing of the matter today, Judge Caverly accepted full responsibility for deciding the fates of the youths.

Alienist Testifies.

Dr. William Healy, Boston psychiatrist was being cross examined when the highly pertinent ruling was made. A dialogue between Mr. Crowe and the witness resulted from the prosecutor's demand for a definition of the word "abnormal." In pursuing

Ayers, in his petition, claims that he worked for six months negotiating the sale and then had to return to his trade as a tool maker in the Ford plant without a commission. Although he never had an understanding with the Ford company Ayers asserts that he conceived the idea of securing the minority stock for the Fords and that he was encouraged.

Two Thrift Boy Scouts May Get Honor Medals For Heroism

When the Boy Scout Court of Honor meets in Wichita Falls next Tuesday night two young boys in the same troop at Thrift, Texas, which is near Burkburnett, will be recommended for the highest of all scout honors, the honor medal, which signifies that a scout has risked his life to save the life of another. W. M. Mickle, youthful scoutmaster of the boys, was in the city and visited at scout headquarters Tuesday afternoon and had in his company one of the boys that will in all probability receive a medal.

Last Friday while in swimming near Burkburnett Rudolph Eller, 14, saved the life of Oscar Williams, 12. Young Williams was in swimming and in some way became frightened and Eller swam 100 feet to him and at the risk of his own life and with the boy struggling carried him to the bank.

The other case that will be brought before the court of honor Tuesday night is that of Sie Lyon, a member of the same troop of scouts. During the recent big fire near Burkburnett, 10 days ago, when all were fleeing from the burning gasoline, young Lyon held his ground and carried a one day old baby from a burning house at the risk of his own life. Not satisfied with this feat he entered several burning houses and removed some of the furniture.

SINCLAIR RAPS FOES OF OIL

Declares Demagogues Force Reaction in Petroleum Industry of Country.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—Harry F. Sinclair, chairman of the Sinclair Consolidated Oil corporation, in a statement to stockholders today asserted that an income statement of all petroleum operations in America undoubtedly would show the industry operating at a loss.

"Demagogues are seeking to hold the industry to that level or force it even lower," he asserted, "and so long as the public gives them sympahtetic or even passive encouragement they will continue more vigorously to attack not only the petroleum industry, but all other forms of business. Their course leads to widespread unemployment, general weakening of the country's credit structure, lessened production of the necessities of life, poorer values and ultimate disaster to all American industries."

Need to Reserve Cash

Recent omission of the Sinclair common dividend, Mr. Sinclair explained was due to the desirability of conserving cash during the present unsettled condition of the industry as a whole.

"This unsettled condition," he said, "is due to over-production of crude oil, accumulation of excessive stock of refined products and recurrent public agitation, dictated in part by the selfish motives of demagogues and in part by the sincere criticism of those who do not understand the fundamental principles underlying the petroleum industry.

Find Own Solution

"The first two of these problems will find their own solution, but the third can be solved only by the public."

Mr. Sinclair announced that net earnings of the Sinclair corporation in the first half of the year were $11,876,619, of which $9,053,103 was carried to surplus and reserve account.

NO JURY TRIAL

it. Mr. Crowe again brought up "insanity" and the defense objected "that we are getting onto ground that we have been keeping off."

"If that is the way this thing is going all we can do is to call a jury," Mr. Crowe insisted.

Dr. Healy, who had been on the stand giving direct testimony for five hours, retained his composure under a terrific two and a half hour cross examination by Mr. Crowe, who tried to break down the value of the expert's conclusions that Franks' murder grew directly from the youths "diseased motivation," "boyhood phantasies" and an "absurd childish compact," in which perversion was a tie.

Admission of Influence.

"Fear and caution, the instinct of self-preservation" governed the actions of the boys at times, both in in planning the murder and in seeking to evade responsibility for it, were qualified admissions, the prosecutor succeeded in forcing from the mental pathologist. The state's attorney went over the details of the youths' confessions, step by step, attempting to show that the crime grew from the youths' admittedly high intellects, rather than from their immature emotions.

Mr. Crowe also tried unsuccessfully to bring from the expert the admission that boys of the intellectual attainments of Loeb and Leopold could have deceived him as to their undeveloped emotions, it having been testified that they were below seven years in emotional age.

The prosecutor, not satisfied with the judge's ruling on the insanity question, hammered away at it throughout the cross examination. Dr. Healy admitted that "phychosis" is a new medical term for insanity and Mr. Crowe asked if "psychosis," "insane" or "bughouse" did not mean the same, without obtaining a satisfactory reply.

Judge Receives Threats.

Judge Caverly told newspaper men, after adjournment, that he would turn over to postal inspectors some of the 300 to 400 letters regarding the case that he received daily. He declared many of them were of a threatening nature.

The hearing promises to continue at least a fortnight longer, in the opinion of Clarence S. Darrow, chief of defense counsel. "And then I am making a conservative estimate," he said.

The defense will use two or three alienists, Mr. Darrow indicated, with an undetermined number of witnesses, some of whom will probably be members of the family of the defendants.

Upon completion of Dr. Healy's testimony, Dr. Bernard Glueck of New York was called as the third defense alienist despite the fact that there was only twenty minutes of the session left and the attorneys were hinting broadly for an adjournment because of the intense heat. Dr. Glueck got only as far as his qualifications as an expert before adjournment.

ROBERTSON

York state after the legislature there modified the state laws against prohibition."

Hits Local Club.

An attack on the "Mrs. Ferguson for Governor club," formed in Wichita Falls Monday night, was launched by the speaker immediately after his opening statements. He referred to the "organization of 189" which had banded together to combat him and support his opponent, and declared that an inspection of the records would reveal a large sprinkling of "the old time, defeated, whipped and disgruntled whiskey politicians." He asserted that a man of high echaracter and proven ability had been elected head of the organization, but that he was "just unfortunate in having gotten in with some powerful bad company".

The newspapers of the state came in for a verbal lambasting later on in the address and were also linked up with the liquor rings. With the exception of the Dallas Times-Herald, Judge Robertson said, every newspaper in Texas had consistently fought him from the start of his candidacy.

Attacks State Newspapers.

"Read the Dallas News, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, the Fort Worth Record and all the other large papers of the state and you will see all the malice, spleen and hymns of hate of the old whiskey politicians. They all hate a winner and that is why they are opposing me."

This arraignment was tempered a moment later, however, when Judge Robertson declared that he was glad to see the papers "coming around" and giving him his just deserts. He declared that none of them heretofore had given his campaign the prominence it had deserved but that they are beginning to "wake up and take an interest in things." He then introduced four correspondents, one each from the Dallas News, Dallas Times-Herald, Fort Worth Star Telegram and Fort Worth Record, who were on the platform with him.

Back to Prohibition.

From this indictment of the press he swung back to a general definition of his prohibition views and declared in favor of "putting the booze interests out from beginning to end." He stated that when he was elected governor he was going to ask the legislature to stop the sale of liquor from drug stores on physicians' prescriptions. "And they'll do it, too," he said.

On the matter of education, Judge Robertson asserted his intention of seeing that West Texas got a square deal in Austin and that he was not going to cut down the aprpropriation of the West Texas Tech college. Neither will he allow a reduction in the appropriations of the University of Texas, Texas A. & M. college, the state teachers' colleges of the state and the common school districts of the state, he said. He asserted that he had always stood for a $15 per capita tax for every school child in Texas and that he conceived it to be his duty to see that the school children of the rural communities were given equal education facilities with those of the city.

Avoids Klan Question.

The ku klux klan question, which is being made an issue of paramount importance by Judge Robertson's opponents, was totally ignored last night. The name of the klan was mentioned only once and it was consistently avoided by implication. In pedging an administration fair and impartial to all alike, Judge Robertson at one point in his address declared that if he were elected it would make no difference to him what a man's religious and political beliefs might be.

"Klan or anti-klan, Catholic, Jew or gentile, friend or foe politically," he said, "I pledge myself to be fair, honest and impartial, striving at all times to serve the people of Texas as my conscience and my God direct me to serve. What more can you ask?"

Recalls Military Record.

Mention was made by Judge Robertson of his military record and he spoke of his service with the 36th division, in which 250 Wichita county men rendered service during the world war.

In his pleas for fair play, the speaker stressed again and again the lack of mud-slinging and character-assassination in his particular campaign. He asserted that from the first his hands had been clean and that he had never sought to defame those who were arrayed against him in the governor's race. In this connection he mentioned the names of his opponents in the first primary and urged that his hearers hold no ill-feeling against them.

Warned His Opponents.

Most of them were referred to as having been in "too fast company," as having "meant well" and as being "good fellows who just couldn't make the grade." He said that many of them were warm personal friends of his whom he respected and admired. He stated that at the beginning of the campaign he had warned them to get out of the race, that he was going to beat them all and that if they remained he would simply have to walk over them rough-shod.

"I gave them fair warning," he said, "so now I have no regrets at the outcome."

Makes Spiritual Plea.

At the conclusion of the talk, Judge Robertson went specifically into the spiritual issue.

"This nation cannot survive materially," he declared, "unless it is deemed spiritually. Following the spirit of Christ is what we need more than anything else and I believe that if I walk in the pathway set by our Lord and Savior my feet will unerringly follow the course of righteousness in material things.

"We must get back to the belief in and a practice of the Ten Commandments and Golden Rule. If we do that we will not have bootleggers; we will have no need for policemen; we will not need court houses and we will enjoy peace, prosperity and happiness."

Thanks Local Friends.

His supporters here in the first primary were thanked for the manner in which they had backed him, and the judge concluded his address with a promise to forget all the malice and hatred of the campaign, to treat all men fairly and with Christian consideration and to make Texas a governor "in the best way I know how."

Judge Robertson shared the platform with Rev. Finney of Burkburnett and a Dr. Graves of Electra. These with the four newspaper correspondents from Dallas and Fort Worth and one or two listeners who were unable to find seats elsewhere were the only persons on the Legion stage.

The four newspaper men in town for the address were H. C. Jefferson of the Dallas Times-Herald, John Sneed of the Dalals News, Byron C. Utecht of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram and H. B. Crozier of the Fort Worth Record.

Wife of British World Airman Congratulates U. S. Globe Fliers

The race of American and British army airmen around the world is a lesson in sportsmanship. Both have been eager to help the other when needed, and both have displayed the kindliest interest in the well-being of the other. And among the hundreds of prominent English people who have called on the American fliers in Britain to congratulate them on their achievements is Mrs. A. Stuart MacLaren, wife of the commander of the British round-the world plane.

When Baby's Sleeping

One Mother Says:

When the baby is asleep I don't tell the older children to "Keep quiet," for this only makes them wish they could make noise, and before long the repression is too much — some one wakens the baby. Instead, we play a little game; I whisper to each child the name of a quiet animal he is to imitate, such as a mouse, butterfly, mole or rabbit, and as they creep, fly and hop softly about the room each tries to guess the animal name of the other, all in whispers.

Two Want To Go To Penitentiary

A letter expressing willingness to accept their sentences of five years each and begin serving their terms has been received by the sheriff's department here from Bob Brown and Buddy Lyons, now held in the Tarrant county jail at Fort Worth. The two were taken there last week following their conviction in Wichita county on charges of theft of automobiles.

They were tried and found guilty some time ago, but had given notice of appeal and were being held in jail here pending an hearing on this. They were alleged to have been implicated in an attempt jail break last Friday night, however, and together with three other prisoners were transferred to Fort Worth for safe keeping.

ICELAND FLIGHT PROVES SUCCESS

Both Planes Land In Inner Harbor Without Mishap.

By The Associated Press.

REYKJAVIK, Iceland, Aug. 5.—Lieutenant Lowell H. Smith in the Chicago and Lieutenant Eric Nelson in the New Orleans arrived here from Hoefn Hounafjord on the cross Iceland lap of their round the world flight at 2:15 o'clock this afternoon.

Both planes landed on the waters of the inner harbor, making fine landings. The two pilots with their mechanics, Lieutenant Leslie L. Arnold and Lieutenant John Harding, Jr., were feeling well and their machines were in good condition.

The airmen accomplished the 310-mile flight in four hours 58 minutes, having left Hornafjord at 10:17 a. m. Greenwhich time, and arriving here at 3:15 p. m. Greenwich time.

In view of the 40 to 60-mile wind the aviators faced there was general relief when the cruiser Richmond, lying outside Reykjavik harbor, sighted two specks in the distance above the high headland of the rough Iceland coast.

Lieutenant Wade and Sergeant Ogden, who lost their airplane Sunday after their forced landing near the Faroes, stood on the quarter deck of the flagship eagerly watching their comrades approaching. The progress toward the goal at some points along the flight was slow, due to the head winds, but their final spurt to the landing place was rapid.

MEXICO WILL PUNISH SLAYERS

Note Declares Murder Of Woman Was For Robbery.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—The inquiry being conducted by the Mexican government into the slaying of Mrs. Rosalie Evans will probably prove that the motive of the attack was robbery, said an official statement, made public by the Mexican embassy here today. The government is confident, it was added, that the crime was in no way related to agrarian matters but was "only one of the common order, such as, unfortunately, are a daily occurrence in every section of the world."

Start Investigation.

Mexico will punish to the full extent of the law the persons responsible for the outrage, it was declared, and will proceed "with all diligence" in its investigation of the circumstances of Mrs. Evans' death.

The text of the official statement follows:

"The Mexican government is deeply interested in carrying out a most minute and energetic inquiry into this case. With this end in view and pursuant to instructions of President Obregon, the federal and the local authorities are now actively engaged in pushing the investigation.

Regrets Occurrence.

"The Mexican government regrets very deeply this unforeseen occurrence, which transpired just outside of Mrs. Evans' properties, at a time when her differences with the local authorities had been adjusted. The circumstances surrounding the case, as well as all clues thus far developed lead to the belief that the motive of the attack was robbery.

"However, since Mrs. Evans' name has been mentioned in connection with recent incidents of an international character as this fact might create the impression that the case is in some way related to agrarian matters and to Mrs. Evans' properties, the Mexican government is confident that the inquiry already under way will prove that no such relations exist and that this most lamentable crime was only one of the common order such as, unfortunately, are of daily occurrence in every section of the world.

"Notwithstanding this opinion the Mexican government declares that the persons responsible for this crime will be prosecuted and punished with all rigor of the law, and that it will proceed with all diligence in the work of clearing up the circumstances of the case in which, for obvious reasons, Mexico has the deepest interest."

Hunting Stories May Lose "Kick"

Hunting yarns of local Nimrods may carry less kick this year than in seasons past.

With nothing but his conscience to be considered heretofore, it was not to be wondered at that the havoc wrought in wild game territory by various individuals was considerable. That was because no reports were required of a season's record, and if no one happened to be on the gun toters trail throughout a season, who was to know better?

This year, however, state hunting licenses require a complete report of all deer, ducks, geese, grouse and other game shot during the season. Space is provided on the license for making the report, and it must be turned into the county clerk at the end of the shooting period. The new supply of licenses was received Tuesday by Mrs. Alma Y. Miller, county clerk.

Such restrictions have never before been imposed and it looks like hard times for the Hot Stove Hunting Post Mortem association.

Tail Tells Cow's Milk Value.

PARIS, Aug.—French veterinarians insist that a cow's tail can determine her milk output and also her milk value. The quantity and value are indicated, say the veterinarians, by the smoothness and slenderness of the tail from a sort of break in the bone structure to the end of her fly-swatter.

Germans Like Shakespeare.

WEIMER, Germany, Aug.—Shakespeare is more popular in Germany than in England, according to the German association of theatrical managers. During 1923, the association points out, Shakespeare was produced in the German republic 2,017 times, which included "The Merchant of Venice" 247 times and "Othello" 207 times.

SINCLAIR RAPS FOES OF OIL

Declares Demagogues Force Reaction in Petroleum Industry of Country.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—Harry F. Sinclair, chairman of the Sinclair Consolidated Oil corporation, in a statement to stockholders today asserted that an income statement of all petroleum operations in America undoubtedly would show the industry operating at a loss.

"Demagogues are seeking to hold the industry to that level or force it even lower," he asserted, "and so long as the public gives them sympahtetic or even passive encouragement they will continue more vigorously to attack not only the petroleum industry, but all other forms of business. Their course leads to widespread unemployment, general weakening of the country's credit structure, lessened production of the necessities of life, poorer values and ultimate disaster to all American industries."

Need to Reserve Cash

Recent omission of the Sinclair common dividend, Mr. Sinclair explained was due to the desirability of conserving cash during the present unsettled condition of the industry as a whole.

"This unsettled condition," he said, "is due to over-production of crude oil, accumulation of excessive stock of refined products and recurrent public agitation, dictated in part by the selfish motives of demagogues and in part by the sincere criticism of those who do not understand the fundamental principles underlying the petroleum industry.

Find Own Solution

"The first two of these problems will find their own solution, but the third can be solved only by the public."

Mr. Sinclair announced that net earnings of the Sinclair corporation in the first half of the year were $11,876,619, of which $9,053,103 was carried to surplus and reserve account.

NO JURY TRIAL

it Mr. Crowe again brought up "insanity" and the defense objected "that we are getting onto ground that we have been keeping off."

"If that is the way this thing is going all we can do is to call a jury," Mr. Crowe insisted.

Dr. Healy, who had been on the stand giving direct testimony for five hours, retained his composure under a terrific two and a half hour cross examination by Mr. Crowe, who tried to break down the value of the expert's conclusions that Franks' murder grew directly from the youths "diseased motivation," "boyhood phantasies" and an "absurd childish compact," in which perversion was a tie.

Admission of Influence.

"Fear and caution, the instinct of self-preservation" governed the actions of the boys at times, both in in planning the murder and in seeking to evade responsibility for it, were qualified admissions, the prosecutor succeeded in forcing from the mental pathologist. The state's attorney went over the details of the youths' confessions, step by step, attempting to show that the crime grew from the youths' admittedly high intellects, rather than from their immature emotions.

Mr. Crowe also tried unsuccessfully to bring from the expert the admission that boys of the intellectual attainments of Loeb and Leopold could have deceived him as to their undeveloped emotions, it having been testified that they were below seven years in emotional age.

The prosecutor, not satisfied with the judge's ruling on the insanity question, hammered away at it throughout the cross examination. Dr. Healy admitted that "phychosis" is a new medical term for insanity and Mr. Crowe asked if "psychosis," "insane" or "bughouse" did not mean the same, without obtaining a satisfactory reply.

Judge Receives Threats.

Judge Caverly told newspaper men, after adjournment, that he would turn over to postal inspectors some of the 300 to 400 letters regarding the case that he received daily. He declared many of them were of a threatening nature.

The hearing promises to continue at least a fortnight longer, in the opinion of Clarence S. Darrow, chief of defense counsel. "And then I am making a conservative estimate," he said.

The defense will use two or three alienists, Mr. Darrow indicated, with an undetermined number of witnesses, some of whom will probably be members of the family of the defendants.

Upon completion of Dr. Healy's testimony, Dr. Bernard Glueck of New York was called as the third defense alienist despite the fact that there was only twenty minutes of the session left and the attorneys were hinting broadly for an adjournment because of the intense heat. Dr. Glueck got only as far as his qualifications as an expert before adjournment.

Hits Local Club.

An attack on the "Mrs. Ferguson for Governor club," formed in Wichita Falls Monday night, was launched by the speaker immediately after his opening statements. He referred to the "organization of 189" which had banded together to combat him and support his opponent, and declared that an inspection of the records would reveal a large sprinkling of "the old time, defeated, whipped and disgruntled whiskey politicians." He asserted that a man of high scharacter and proven ability had been elected head of the organization, but that he was "just unfortunate in having gotten in with some powerful bad company".

The newspapers of the state came in for a verbal lambasting later on in the address and were also linked up with the liquor rings. With the exception of the Dallas Times-Herald, Judge Robertson said, every newspaper in Texas had consistently fought him from the start of his candidacy.

[illegible] State Newspapers.

"Read the Dallas News, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, the Fort Worth Record and all the other large papers of the state and you will see all the malice, spleen and hymns of hate of the old whiskey politicians. They all hate a winner and that is why they are opposing me."

BIBLE THOUGHT AND PRAYER

SEEK THINGS ABOVE:—Set your affections on things above, not on things on the earth.—Colossians 3:2.
Ye cannot serve God and Mammon.—Matthew 6:24.

PRAYER:—O Holy One, our hearts are fixed trusting in Thee.

DID YOU KNOW—

The Countess Elsa Bernadotte, niece of Sweden's king, has something more than an ordinary interest in how the other half lives. This statement is supported by the fact that one week the countess was the honor guest of Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick in Chicago and the next week she was working for $18 a week in a factory, operating a power machine which cuts tanned hides into leather parts.

And the countess did not get her job by special arrangement with her employer. She just went out and trudged the streets and hunted a job.

She came to America to attend a Y. W. C. A. convention in Washington in June and later was the guest in New York of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and when she came to Chicago was entertained by Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick. Her father is president of the Swedish Y. M. C. A. and the countess has devoted her life to philanthropic work.

Her dive into industrial life was made when the countess was told of an experiment the national board of the Y. W. C. A. was making here this summer. Forty college girls from all over the country have been invited here to make a study of industrial conditions. They went out about a month ago and got factory jobs for themselves, many of them trudging the streets for days before landing positions, as did the countess. They expect to use the experience thus gained to fit them for social service work.

Of course the countess doesn't have to work at her job any longer than she wants to, and can quit whenever she tires of her daily routine, which most other factory girls can't, but even at that there are very few young women, whose study of these things would cause them to pass up a house party with Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick for a job in a factory.

GOLDEN SALVE

Mrs. May Little Ragan Candler will not oppose the divorce suit filed by her husband, Asa G. Candler Sr., because of a cash payment to her of sixty thousand dollars made prior to the filing of the suit. Asa G. Candler Sr., married May a year ago. There came an explosion which shocked the select social circles of the Peach Tree section of the capital city of Georgia.

Now the aged millionaire has his divorce, the pretty stenographer has her sixty thousand, all the social gaps have been healed and the old world wags along just as it used to wag.

Golden salve healed all the wounds, covered all the scars and made sensational stories for the Georgia newspapers. Man wasn't made to mourn; he was made to pay if he has a superabundance of coin. Asa paid and no doubt the experience was worth the price.

AN OPEN SHOPPER

General Charles G. Dawes is known to his fellow Americans as a doer of things, and he is expected to do a lot of campaigning for the republican cause. Organized labor is on his trail. Labor editors and labor leaders say that General Dawes is the foremost champion of the open shop in America.

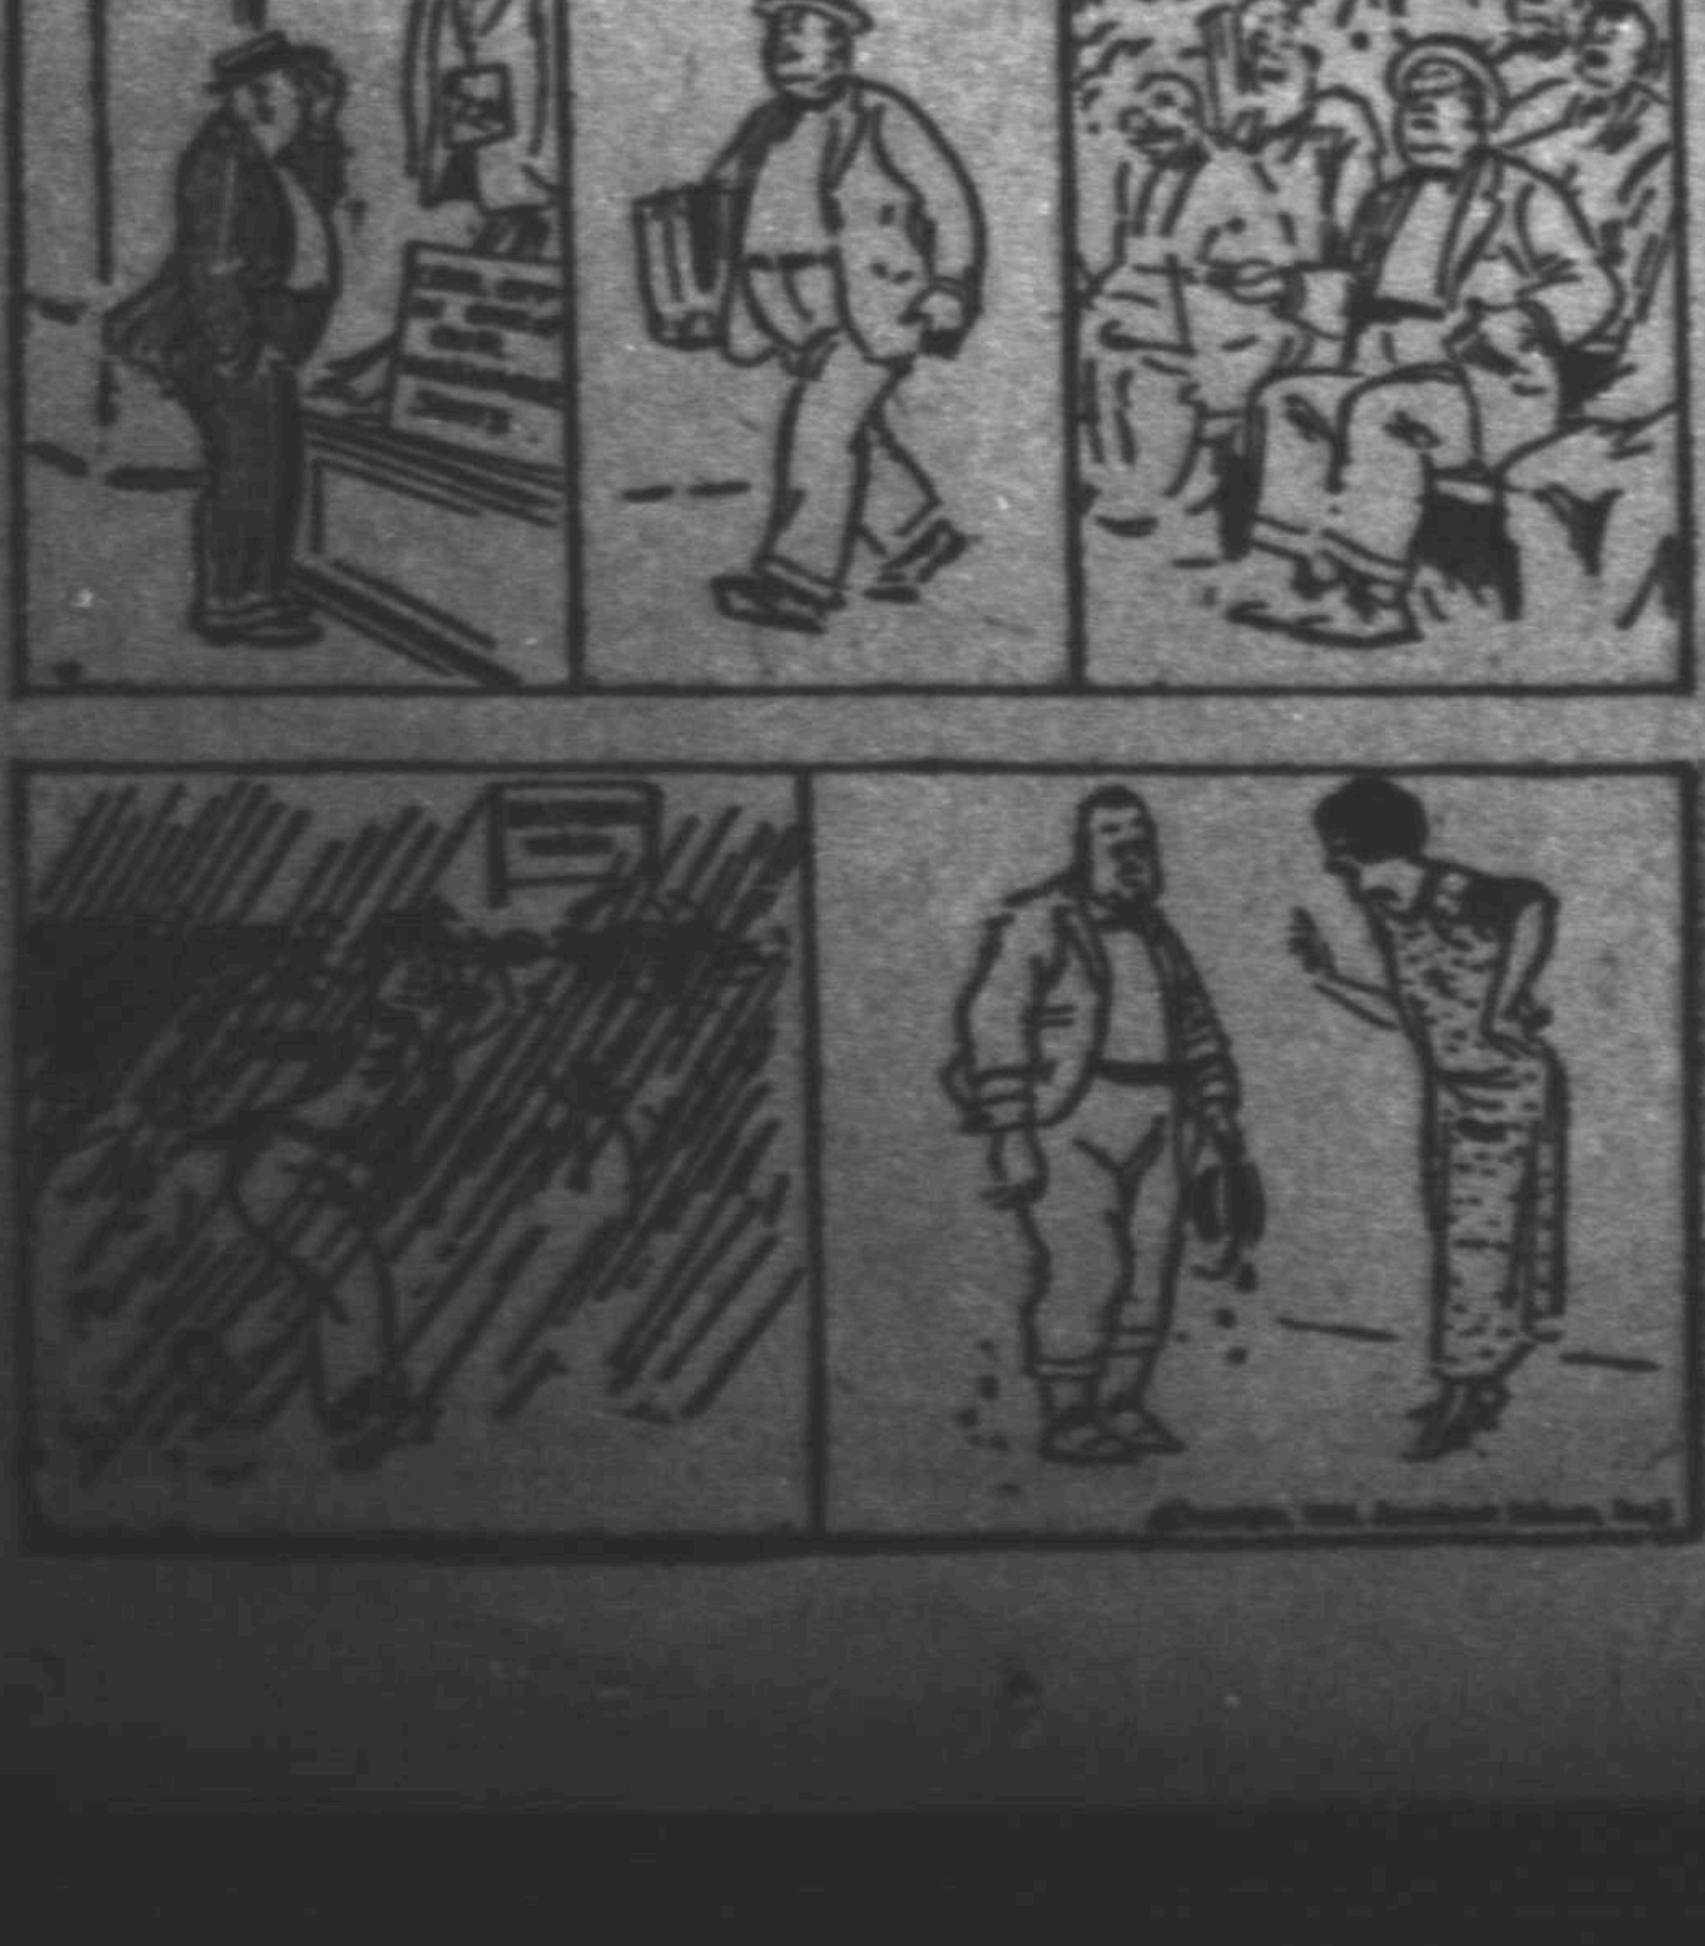
This is a free country. There is no provision of the constitution that prohibits an American citizen from being an advocate of the open shop, the closed shop, the fifty-fifty shop or the one-man shop.

It must be admitted however that a candidate for office who is an open shopper has to run the gauntlet on election day of his fellow Americans who are closed shoppers and willing to fight for the idea.

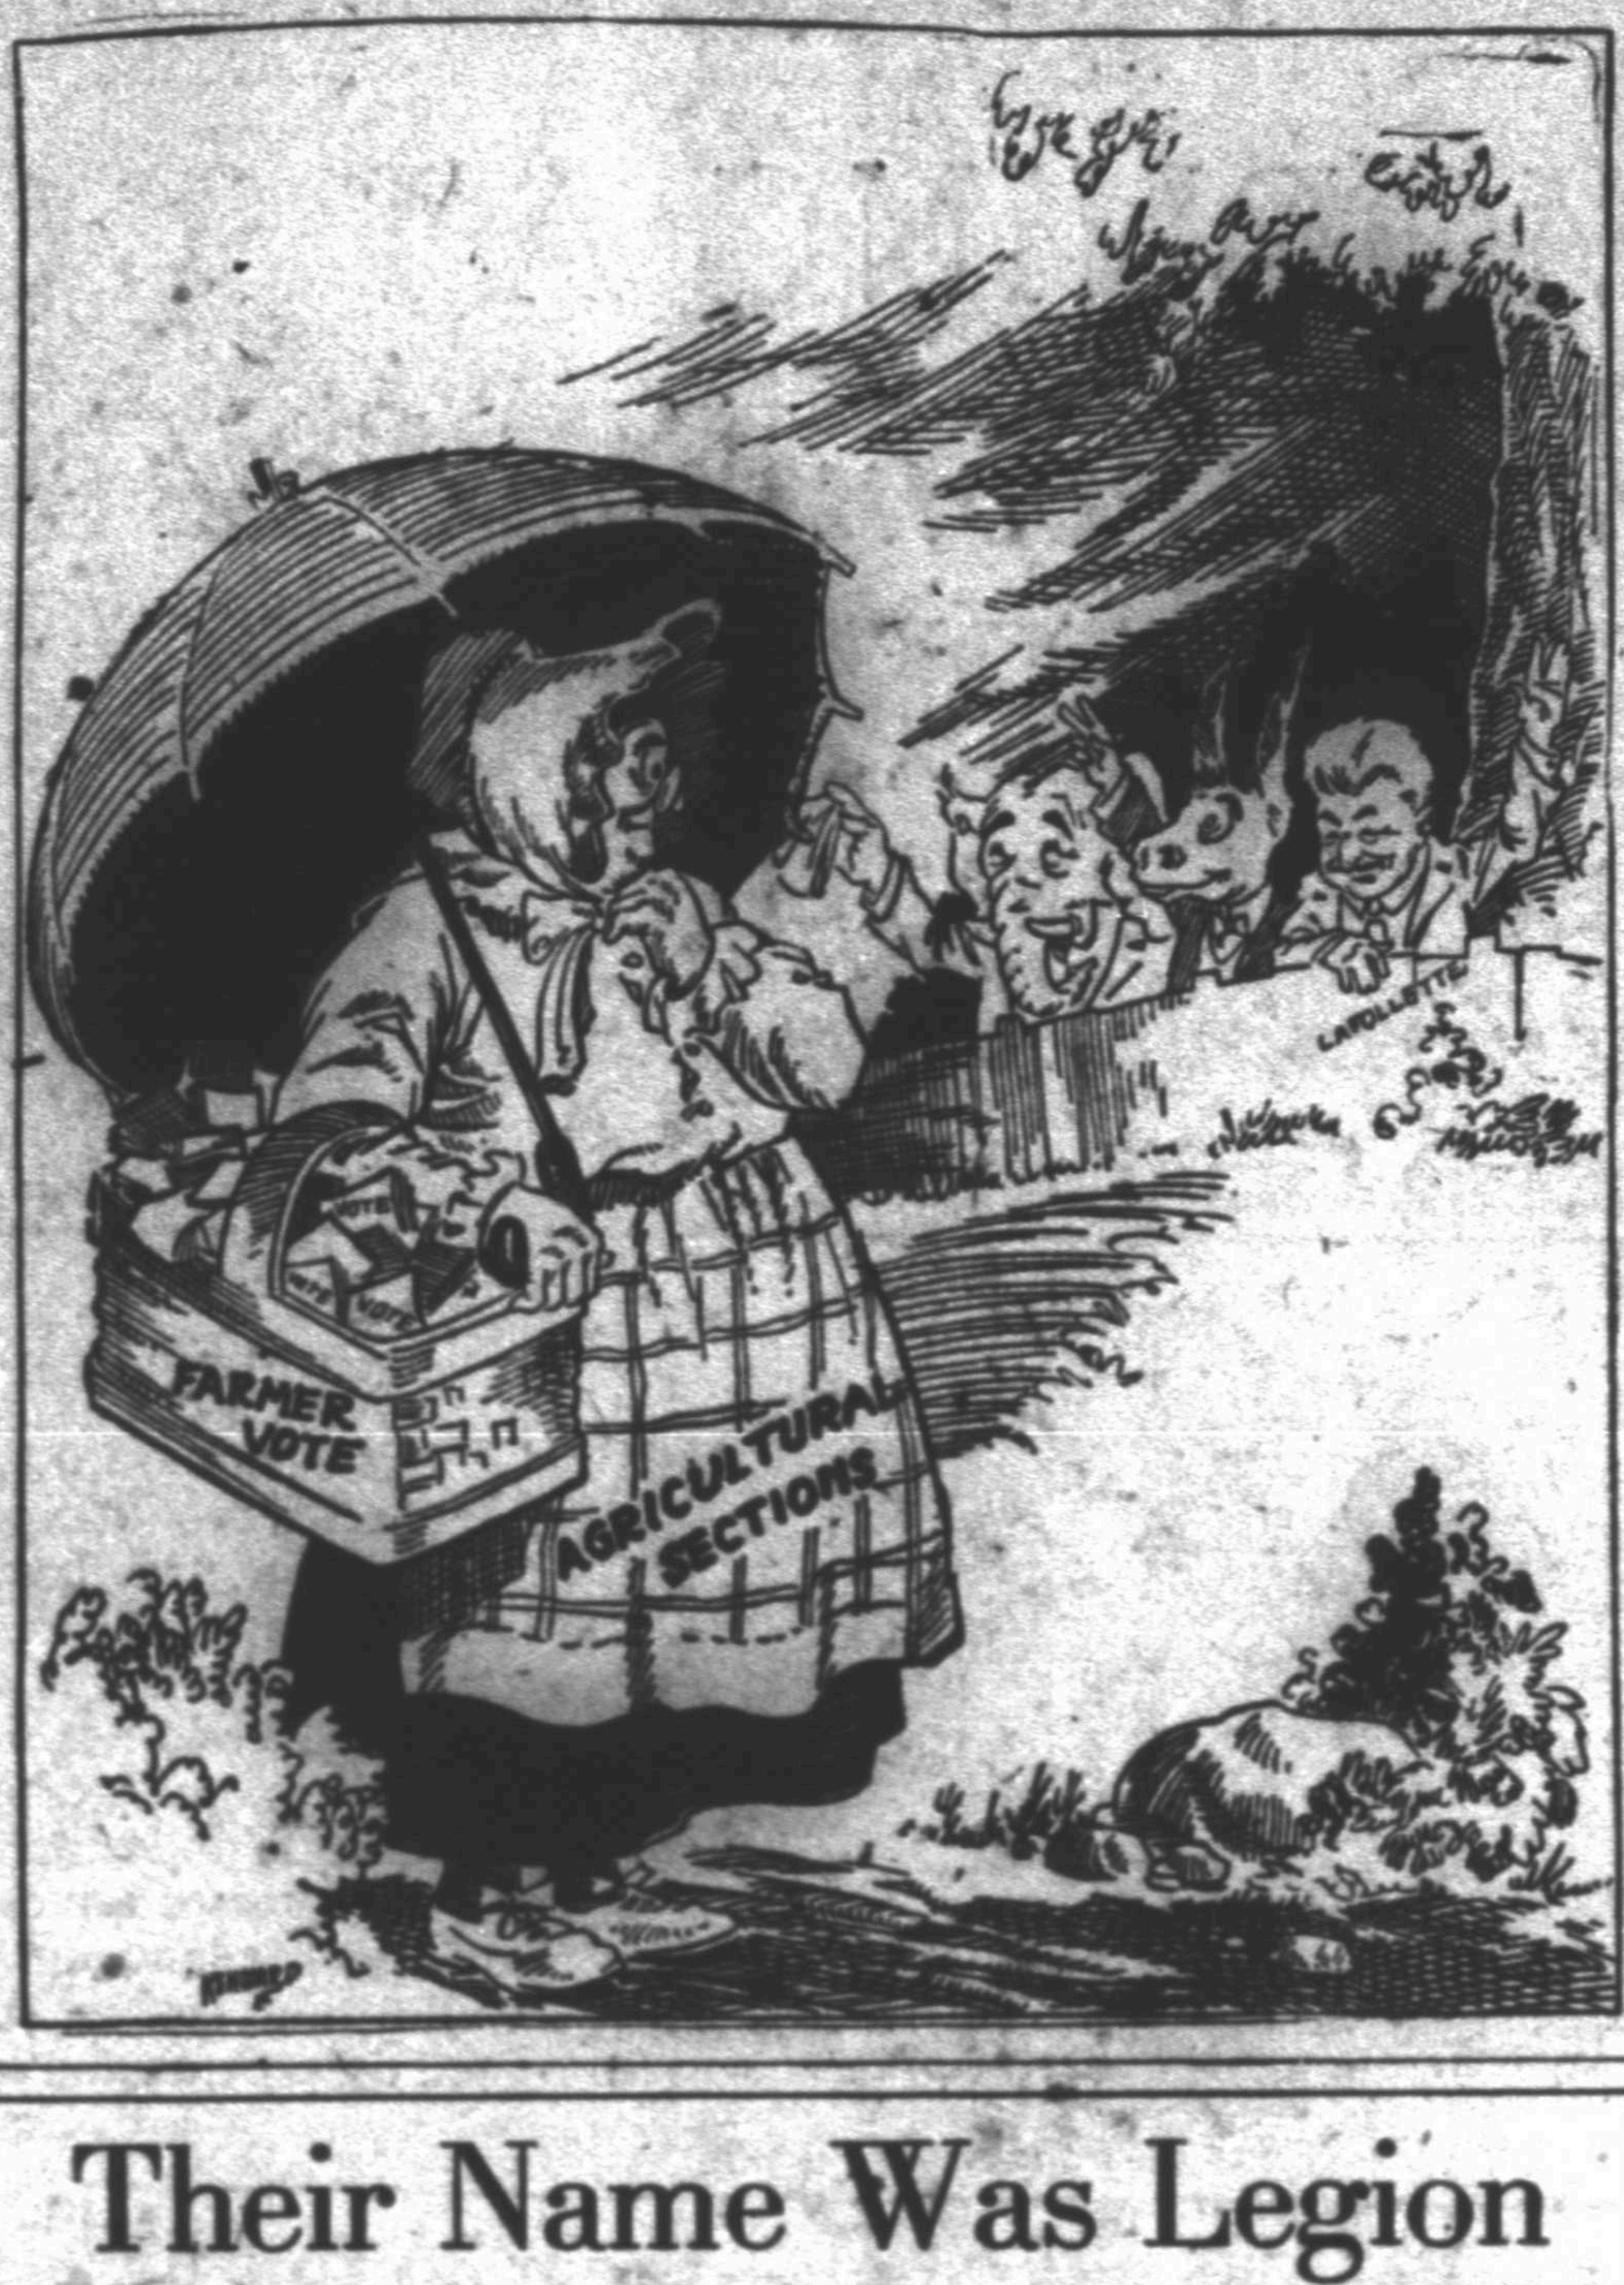
AMERICANS ARE GOOD SPENDERS

This is presidential campaign year but four hundred thousand Americans are in Europe seeking pleasure and excitement and planting their gold where it will do the most good. According to the shipping agents two-thirds of the American tourists make their reservations on wet ships of passage. Now just what is the answer?

PANTOMIME -:- By J. H. Striebel



NO SCARCITY OF SUITORS.



Their Name Was Legion

He turned away at last, pale with the realization of what had happened, trembling with the excitement of it, throbbing with the knowledge that his troubles and the troubles of the man who awaited him in the little cabin over the hill were over.

"Rich!" he gasped, and there was an instinctive reverence in the tone. "Rich! Rich!"

He swerved away now, running, plunging through the irrigation ditch in water to his armpits, then, dripping, scrambled onward, neither realizing his wetness nor caring. Over the furrowed field he raced, while an aching pound began to make itself felt in his lungs, only to be disregarded. A half-mile away lay a little cabin, just visible when he reached the top of the hill, a cabin where the rays of the setting sun had blazed the windows to ruddy gold, as though in prophecy, and where awaited the man to whom Bart Rogers longed most of all to give the news of happiness and of wealth.

"I've got to be careful with him," he said to himself. "Got to break it easy—mustn't get him too excited. Better not tell him the whole truth—better just let it grow day by day—yes, that's it—better just tell him that they've brought in oil enough so that we won't have to worry—" to a walk, so that his own excitement might not betray

Then, through sheer will power, he restrained himself the true importance of his message. Then his eyes beaming what his lips could not say, he forced himself to a leisurely pace and approached the house.

"Hello, Dad!" It was the usual evening greeting. Placing his hand upon the shoulder of the slumped figure, in the vain hope that this might be the night where there would come an answer, when some faint vocal sound would tell of a return of speech—and a chance for recovery. But there was only silence. As usual, Bart patted the shoulder, lovingly, meaningly, and, turning, groped through the gathering darkness for the lamp.

"Got a little news today, Dad," he chattered, as he shook the old oil burner and scraped the wick with the burning match. "They brought in some oil over at the derrick. Don't think it amounts to so much, but whatever it is, it boosts the price of our land. Anything that looks like oil, you know, means money. Of course, it may amount to a lot, and then it may amount to nothing, so I guess we shouldn't get excited about it. He wiped the chimney and adjusting it, set the lamp upon a table. Then he went to the chair which always awaited him; the one beside the big, comfortable one where rested the invalid.

"Yep, Dad, whatever it is, we're bound to come out ahead. "Oh," and he allowed a bit of his enthusiasm to roll forth in a laugh. "We're going to get there yet, you and I. Just wait and see. I—" He stopped. His outstretched hand had touched the placid one of his father. It was cold—ghastly cold. Suddenly trembling, he rose, and faced the form in the chair, "Dad!" he called, "Dad!" But the faint, reflected rays of the lamp showed no answering light in the set stare of the eyes. The mouth was drooped and drawn. The features were fixed. Again Bart Rogers called in a voice which bore a note of agony. Feverishly he grasped the icy hands and rubbed them—hoping against hope. He buried his head against the chest where as a tousled-headed boy he often had rested, praying—hoping— But Bart Roger's father was dead.

CHAPTER V

Late that night Bart Rogers sat again in the office of Leon Barrows. The mind of Bart Rogers was the abiding place of only vague realizations; it seemed unable to centralize its functions. At last, however, here came the sharp sound of quick steps in the hall, ad the banging of the door as Leon Barrows entered. The thin-faced attorney glanced toward Bart and went to his desk.

"Well," he asked in his snappy, sarcastic manner, "why haven't you gone to bed?"

"I was waiting for you. I didn't want to go until I was sure everything had been taken care of."

"I told you that I would do it, didn't I?"

"Yes—of course."

"Then, that should have been the end of it."

"You've taken care of everything?"

"Certainly."

"Will—will there be the necessity for an inquest?"

"An inquest?" The attorney looked at him sharply. "For what?"

"I—I didn't know. I always thought it was necessary to have an inquest when a person died without medical attention."

"You're crazy." The attorney said it in a jerky, unsympathetic manner. "Everybody knows what was wrong with your father. It's all fixed up. Looked after it personally. Hoffman, the undertaker, has got everything arranged. Isn't anybody you want to send for?"

"No"—Bart Rogers shook his head—"there's no one who would be interested."

"That I thought. Any other reason for delay?"

"On—on the funeral? I don't know of any."

"I figured it that way. Told Hoffman that we'd better have the funeral tomorrow afternoon. On account of this boom thing. This town's gone crazy—and it'll get worse every minute."

Bart nodded in dazed fashion. Leon Barrows shuffled a few papers of one of the orderly piles.

"Very well, then," came his conclusion. "Glad you look at it in that way. Thought you'd be sensible; that's why I told Hoffman to go ahead. I've gotten you a room over at the hotel. No. 21. Here's the key. Go over there and go to bed."

Bart Rogers rose and stared hazily about him.

"Thanks—for looking after things for me. It's rather taken me off my feet. I—"

"Go on to bed!"

The lawyer nodded curtly toward the door in dismissal, and Bart Rogers obeyed. A moment later he found himself on the crowded sidewalk.

From everywhere the motor cars were turning into the one main street of the village, while far away, on the long hill leading over the rolling country just to the west of the village, could be seen the headlights and spotlights of the hurrying ranchers and cattlemen.

There was noise, there was bluster; the laughter of women and girls mingled with the shouts of men. Everywhere was the enthusiasm of new-found wealth, as though every person were to share in it, and as though each one of those who crowded the streets in this outburst of joy were a part owner in that great outpouring of liquid gold that was spraying against the starlit sky out there on the blackness of the plains.

It was through this milling, jumbled throng that Bart Rogers, his eyes set and staring, his lips tight drawn, his features old and haggard, was forced to make his way to the hotel. That he should have been a part of it, he felt instinctively—yet it was all strange to him, all out of place, and, in a way, cruel. For Bart Rogers could only think of the patient person who had waited silently by the window day after day, who had undergone suffering, even privation that he might play his part—only to lose in the end. At last, however, he halted, at a touch on his arm, and looked down into the features of Anita Franmison, followed as usual, by the dog-like, gray-haired Old Jim.

"I'm so sorry," came quietly, and her hand still remained on his arm.

"You know, then?"

"Yes. I was over in the newspaper office. They're trying to get out an extra about the oil strike, and I happened to see in the proofs the story about your father."

Bart Rogers stared wordlessly at the sidewalk. There was no way in which he could answer her; he could not find the words to thank her or to recount again the agony of his discovery in the little cabin that evening. Once more he felt the slight pressure of her hand upon his arm, then, instinctively, he knew that she had gone on, content that he would know, in that silent demonstration, of her sympathy and her sorrow. Yet withal, he wondered if she had stopped; vaguely, uncertainly, he felt that someone was looking at him, looking steadily and fixedly. He raised his head and turned—to stare with something of surprise. The girl was lost in the blur of the crowd. But Old Jim had remained, to stand halting and undetermined as though something were on his lips, something he repressed only through the force of his will-power. But at Bart's first glance, he too, turned and hurried on in the wake of his mistress. Three hours later—

By his window in the darkness of his room, Bart Rogers sat watching, yet seeing nothing. Alone, his brain had begun to form pictures—of a man who had sloshed shoulder deep through the swift water of an irrigation ditch, too excited to even feel the swift touch of the water.

He saw the picture of a man lighting a lamp—and lighting it in a trembling manner which belied the casual words of his lips—a man who, a moment later, was to be sobbing at his father's side. He felt again the cold touch of the hands, and the cheek, the pang of realization as he bent to the quiet breast, the horrible clutching anguish, as, a shadow in the night, he staggered toward town with the news that—

He turned quickly, with the dazed nervousness of a person awakened from a bad dream. He waited, tense, motionless. Then it came again—a slight, almost imperceptible tapping at the door.

CHAPTER VI

"Who's there?"

The answer did not come in words—only a repetition of that clicking, nervous tap, as though some one were rapping with their fingers, trusting to the sharp, telegraphic click of the nails to carry the sound. Rogers stumbled through the semi-darkness toward the door and opened it, to instinctively stand aside as a bent, gray-haired figure slid from the faint light of the narrow hall into the shadows of the roc

WHAT TODAY MEANS TO YOU

By MARY BLAKE

LEO

As no benign aspects operate today until the evening, great care must be exercised to avoid errors, delay, loss and misunderstanding. Do not be impulsive: act only after careful deliberation and plenty of thought. If you feel urged to do something that may have an important bearing on your prospects or your life, talk it over first with a friend in whom you have complete confidence and be guided by such advice as may be given you. Be careful in making contracts, agreements or promises: sign no important documents. In the evening, the signs indicate a general betterment of conditions, portending domestic and social felicity.

A child born today will have, in infancy, more than its fair share of sickness: its future physical development will depend very much on the care it receives during this critical period. It will be fretful and cross; patience must be shown and great forbearance exercised. Its character promises to be cheerful and optimistic; its disposition will develop, under proper guidance, into one of unselfishness and affection. Its mentality will be considerable.

If today is your birthday, you are always complaining of what you call your luck, and are envious of those who have attained greater fortune than you. Nobody can hand you a ready made key to open the door of success. You must fashion your own key and find the lock for yourself.

There are no escalators to the hilltop of success, and while every man and woman must do his and her own climbing, yet there is a right road to it—as well as many wrong roads which never lead the traveler to the desired goal.

You have never made a serious, well-sustained effort to realize your ambition; you have wasted your time in speculation on whan might have been, instead of concentrating on what could be. Success, in this world in any line of endeavor is never attained without effort, and there is more genuine joy in climbing the hill of achievement, even though sweat may be spent and toes may be stubbed, than in aimlessly sliding down the path to failure.

Successful people born on this date are:

James Brewster, manufacturer.

John H. Wheeler, historian of North Carolina. U. S. Minister to Nicaragua.

Samuel P. Carter, naval officer and soldier, who served in both the Mexican and civil wars.

George T. Maxwell, physician, the first in the U. S. to use the laryngoscope.

Tarkington Baker, editor and author.

HOW IT STARTED

THE GAME OF BILLIARDS.

The invention of the game of billiards has been popularly credited to DeVigne, a French artist, who in 1571 designed the first billiard tables and drew up the code of rules upon which the modern game is founded. Previously it had been an outdoor game, played on the ground, first with round stones and later with balls, an ivory post and two heavy sticks of wood tipped with ivory.

To be quite exhaustive it must be said that some authorities claim for billiards an ancient lineage, asserting that it was brought to Europe by the crusaders from the East. But that was a crude, outdoor game, and no mention of it as "billiards" can be found until after De Vigne's sponsorship. And since his introduction of it was certainly its first known appearance as an indoor game played on a table, we should not deprive him of the fame which was his at the French court and which has made him familiar to posterity as the originator of the game of billiards.

THROUGH A WOMAN'S EYES

By JEAN NEWTON

THE OLD, OLD STORY.

"I guess there's no chance for me—I may as well prepare for the role of the maiden aunt. All the worthwhile fellows who would appreciate the serious right kind of a girl, the kind of fellow I could respect, could trust with my happiness—they are all married or dead!

"The men who are earning enough to support a wife either have one already or aren't the marrying kind.

"It seems the single men who might be eligible don't earn enough to feed themselves; while the others are either over 60 or are gay bachelors who wouldn't think of swapping the white lights for the fireside and whom few girls would want if they did.

"Certainly it seems that all the men under my grandfather's age who would be able to keep the wolf from the door without their wife's having to put the children in the day nursery and go to work, the men who are not "lounge lizards" or "skirt chasers," who don't value a bachelor's license above a woman's love and whom a girl would find worth chancing her happiness on—it certainly does seem that I'm about ten years too late or five years too early for them!"

Dead or already married! It's the old, old story. The right man hasn't come along, so there aren't any right ones.

Probably your mother said the same thing once, and your grandmother before her. And then your granddad and your daddy came along and they changed their minds.

In the minds of most girls at some time or other comes that feeling of disappointment. The men you have met have not come up to the man of your dreams—or they are already married or are in some way ineligible to become the man of your dreams.

It may not be logical, but it is natural. You haven't met him, so he isn't there.

But he is, little girl, many of him that are just the kind of man you are thinking about, and just the ones that would appreciate a little girl like you. In fact, they are looking for you too.

And I shouldn't be a bit surprised if many of them are saying right at this moment: "There's no use—all the really nice girls, the kind I should like to marry, are either already snatched up, or—well, I don't seem to meet them!"

So don't prepare for the role of the maiden aunt, don't get crabby or manhating, keep your young, wholesome hopes and ideals, keep on getting out among young folks, and one of these days, all of a sudden, you'll wake up to find "him" there, and it will seem that he has been there all the while.

More Truth Than Poetry

By James J. Montague

LET THE READER DO THE WORK

Once, when an author wrote a book,
He sat and scratched his head,
And then he boldly undertook
To tell what people said.
With conversations, long or terse,
He wrought ingenious plots,
But now his characters converse
Consistently in dots.
No more the hero tells the girl:
"You're ravishing, divine,
A priceless, peerless, perfect pearl
You must and shall be mine."
He merely plants upon her cheek
A kiss, intense and hot,
And being too much moved to speak
Says, ". . . . . . . !"
And to this passionate caress,
And to this dotty speech,
Is there a softly whispered "Yes!"
From the distracting peach?
Ah! no! her lissome form she parks
Upon the self-same spot,
And gazing in his eyes remarks:
". . . . . !"
Time what when writing books was hard
For literary gents
Found highly needful some regard
For human sentiments.
But now the author's found a way
To rest the good old bean,
We read the dots his puppets say,
And guess at what they mean!

Dr. Frank Crane's Daily Editorial

Russian Socialism

By Dr. FRANK CRANE

In all our talk of the recognition of Russia it must not be forgotten that a recognition of the Sovjet government is tantamount to a belief in the doctrines totally opposed to democracy.

That government represents the control, by the laboring classes, of the state, not by the peaceful ballot, but by force. It must not be forgotten that the Soviet government rests upon its army and not upon the suffrage of its citizens.

The Bolsheviks remain a minority of their country. Russia is governed by a minority and a minority government is totally opposed to Anglo-American instincts.

Our democracy may be bad and imperfect, but at least it is the kind of government we want. It represents a government by a majority of the people. We have only to go out and convince a majority of our fellow citizens in order to change that government when we consider it to be wrong.

An acknowledgment of the Russian state by us would give them a right to have a consul in every city and that consulate would not alone be for the protection of the Russian citizens of the place, and of Russian interests there, but it would be the center of propaganda of Russian ideas.

It must not be forgotten that with Russians their theory of government is tantamount to religion. It is believed in with all the ferociousness and fanaticism of a creed. They think their mission is to convert the world.

That condition of prosperity in the United States and other countries which is due to the sancity of property, and to the laws which govern property, is labeled by them, "Capitalism."

This they regard as their chief enemy and as an enemy to the people of the state.

We, on the contrary, know that there is no prosperity without capital and our laws should be framed so as to encourage thrift and the laying up of capital in order to develop further industries.

It will thus be seen that the theory of government among the Russians and in the United States is diametrically opposed. This does not mean that they are not at liberty to advance their ideas freely. They are. They are free to publish and to speak what they think but we are quite sure that the common sense of our people will reject any system of communism or socialism.

What we want is not less capital but more of it, more widely distributed and more available.

Irrigation

By A. M. McPHERSON

Kahn Bldg., Eighth and Indiana
Consulting Engineer

WATER

The Improvement of Water

For some months past we have been discussing soils. Soil plus water is the basis of all vegetable life and in turn vegetable life is essential to animal life. Therefore this combination of soil and water is of the utmost importance.

On an irrigation project water is the principle thing. Great dams are constructed and huge reservoirs formed so that through the miles and miles of ditches water can be applied to the farmers' soil as and when he needs it.

Human life or life of any kind soon ceases to exist unless it can be supplied with water. Different forms of life require different kinds of water. Many sea fish cannot live in fresh water.

Water is the basis of our principle modes of transportation. Ships sail the sea and our railroad trains are pulled by steam made from water. Even the vast majority of our automobiles must have water as a cooling agency.

As we saw in the study of soil, it is water that is the greatest soil forming agency we have, and it is water that puts plant foods in solution so that plants can use them.

Water, according to what it carries in solution, may be suitable or unsuitable for many different purposes.

Water that is excellent for fish life of one kind may be entirely unsuited to other kinds of fish. Water that is excellent for irrigation purposes may be entirely unfit for drinking purposes on account of the germ life it carries. Again, water that is excellent for drinking may carry such an amount of mineral matter that it cannot be used in a boiler to generate power.

The fact that water may serve for many purposes and that all water is not alike leads us to take up this discussion. We will, of course, give special attention to irrigation water, its quality, distribution, use and application.

Wichita Falls Society Shows Much Interest In Milk and Ice Fund Dance

Many Women Donating Refreshments For Charity Affair Here On Saturday

Mrs. Miriam Wilton, of the Haven Tea Room, who is giving a lawn party at the Haven Tea Room, 702 Scott street Saturday, reports that a large number of people are showing an interest in the party and dance and that several women have promised cakes for the party. All the cake and candy donated mean just that much more for the Record News milk and ice fund. All the money derived through the party will be given to the Record News Milk and Ice Fund to purchase milk and ice for the needy families of the city. It is hoped that enough money will be raised through the party to supply the fund the rest of the summer.

The house is being decorated and a dance will be in progress from 1 p. m. to 11:30 p. m., with good music by an orchestra. Due to the fact that all cannot stay for any great length of time for the dance, each dance will cost 10 cents. An invitation has been sent to Mayor Collier and the city council, according to Mrs. Wilton. Miss Glenore Fisk, executive of the Girl Scouts, has promised Mrs. Wilton that several Girl Scouts will aid her Saturday.

If anyone can not attend the party and wants to contribute for the fund, she can send a cake or some candy to Mrs. Wilton and it will be appreciated not only by her but by the hungry children of the city, who will derive the benefit of the party. Anyone desiring to get in touch with Mrs. Wilton should call at the Haven Tea Room or phone 5177.

Marriage Is a Profit-Sharing Firm, and the Husband Has No More Right to Keep His Wife in Ignorance of Their Financial Status Than if She Were a Business Partner.

The other day a woman said to me:

"I loved my husband. I honored, respected and trusted him, and when I found that he must die I felt as if my heart would break. But since he has been dead I have discovered that he played a trick upon me so low and mean, that he treated me so cruelly and unjustly, that it fills me with impotent fury against him and makes me hate his very memory, and the bitterness of my grief is that I cannot grieve for him..

"We were married when we were very young, and poor, and I was glad to do everything possible to help my husband. During all the years that we were together I worked harder than any galley slave, cooking, and washing, and cleaning, and sewing, and mending, to make a comfortable home for him and my children. Four children came, but I never had any help with them. Even when my babies were born I had no assistance but a half-witted old woman who could be hired cheaply.

"Always I practiced the most rigid economy because my husband's continual cry was, "Save! Save! Save!" He gave me the very smallest allowance on which a family could be meagerly fed and clothed, so I practiced every makeshift of economy. I learned to save the very water in which vegetables were boiled and the scrapings of pots and pans, and how to cook cheap cuts of meat, and how to turn and dye and make over old clothes, and retrim hats, and make one dollar do the work of five.

"We always lived in a poor house in a poor street and had poor furniture. I never thought of having pretty clothes, or belonging to clubs, or taking trips, or indulging myself in any amusement. What few pleasures the children had were paid for out of my heart's blood almost, because it meant that I had to pinch the housekeeping money a little closer and do without everything possible myself to get the girls a new dress or keep one of the boys in school a year longer.

"But I did not complain. I did not even feel it a hardship. I knew my husband was a hard-working man, and I thought that he did the best he could for us. I thought that he gave us all that he could afford and that he was just one of the men who have not the gift of money-making.

"But when he died, to my amazement, I found that he was a comparatively rich man. For years he had been making a big salary and had been concealing the knowledge of it from me. He had seen the children grow up without the advantages that he was able to give them. He had seen me toil-worn and weary, when he could well have afforded to have hired a servant to do the work that was breaking me down. He had seen me shabby and ashamed, when he could have given me decent clothes, and he did not do it because he loved the money better than he did his wife and children.

"But, most of all, what I resent is his unfairness. The fact that he did not give me his confidence, that he kept me in ignorance of the things that I had a right to know—that I cannot forgive.

"My daughter, who is private secretary to a big business man, says that her father only did as most other men do. She says that few men tell their wives anything about their business; that they give their families much or little, according to whether they are generous or stingy, and that their wives never really know anything about their husbands' affairs.

"It seems to me that this is not giving a wife a square deal. Marriage is a partnership in which a young couple pool their all. The woman puts into it just as much as the man does, for she not only puts herself into it body and soul, but she puts in her chances of marrying a richer man. And if she is a good and faithful wife, and makes a man a happy and comfortable home, her work counts just as much in the ultimate success of the firm as the man's does.

"So she has a right to not only half of the profits of the concern, but to know how the business is going. Her husband has no more right to keep her in ignorance of the financial status of the firm than he would to refuse such knowledge to a man who was his equal partner. Nor is it fair that she should never receive, as her right, her share of the profits of the venture. No man would dream of doling out to a business partner just what he chose to give him of the earnings of the firm.

"I think men make a great mistake by not telling their wives about their business affairs and not treating them as partners, because it would draw them closer together. It would give them a vital common interest—something to talk about. No evening would be dull at home if the husband and wife were planning new enterprises together.

"And it would steady women, give them something worth while to think about and do more than anything else to stop their extravagance. Women spend wildly because they do not know what they can afford. They know their husbands will grumble over the bills anyway, so they had as well be big as little.

"Curious about men that they are so seldom willing to deal fairly with their wives about money. They dole out the nickels to them and the first financial independence many a woman has is when she collects her husband's insurance money. That's why there are so many reconciled widows."

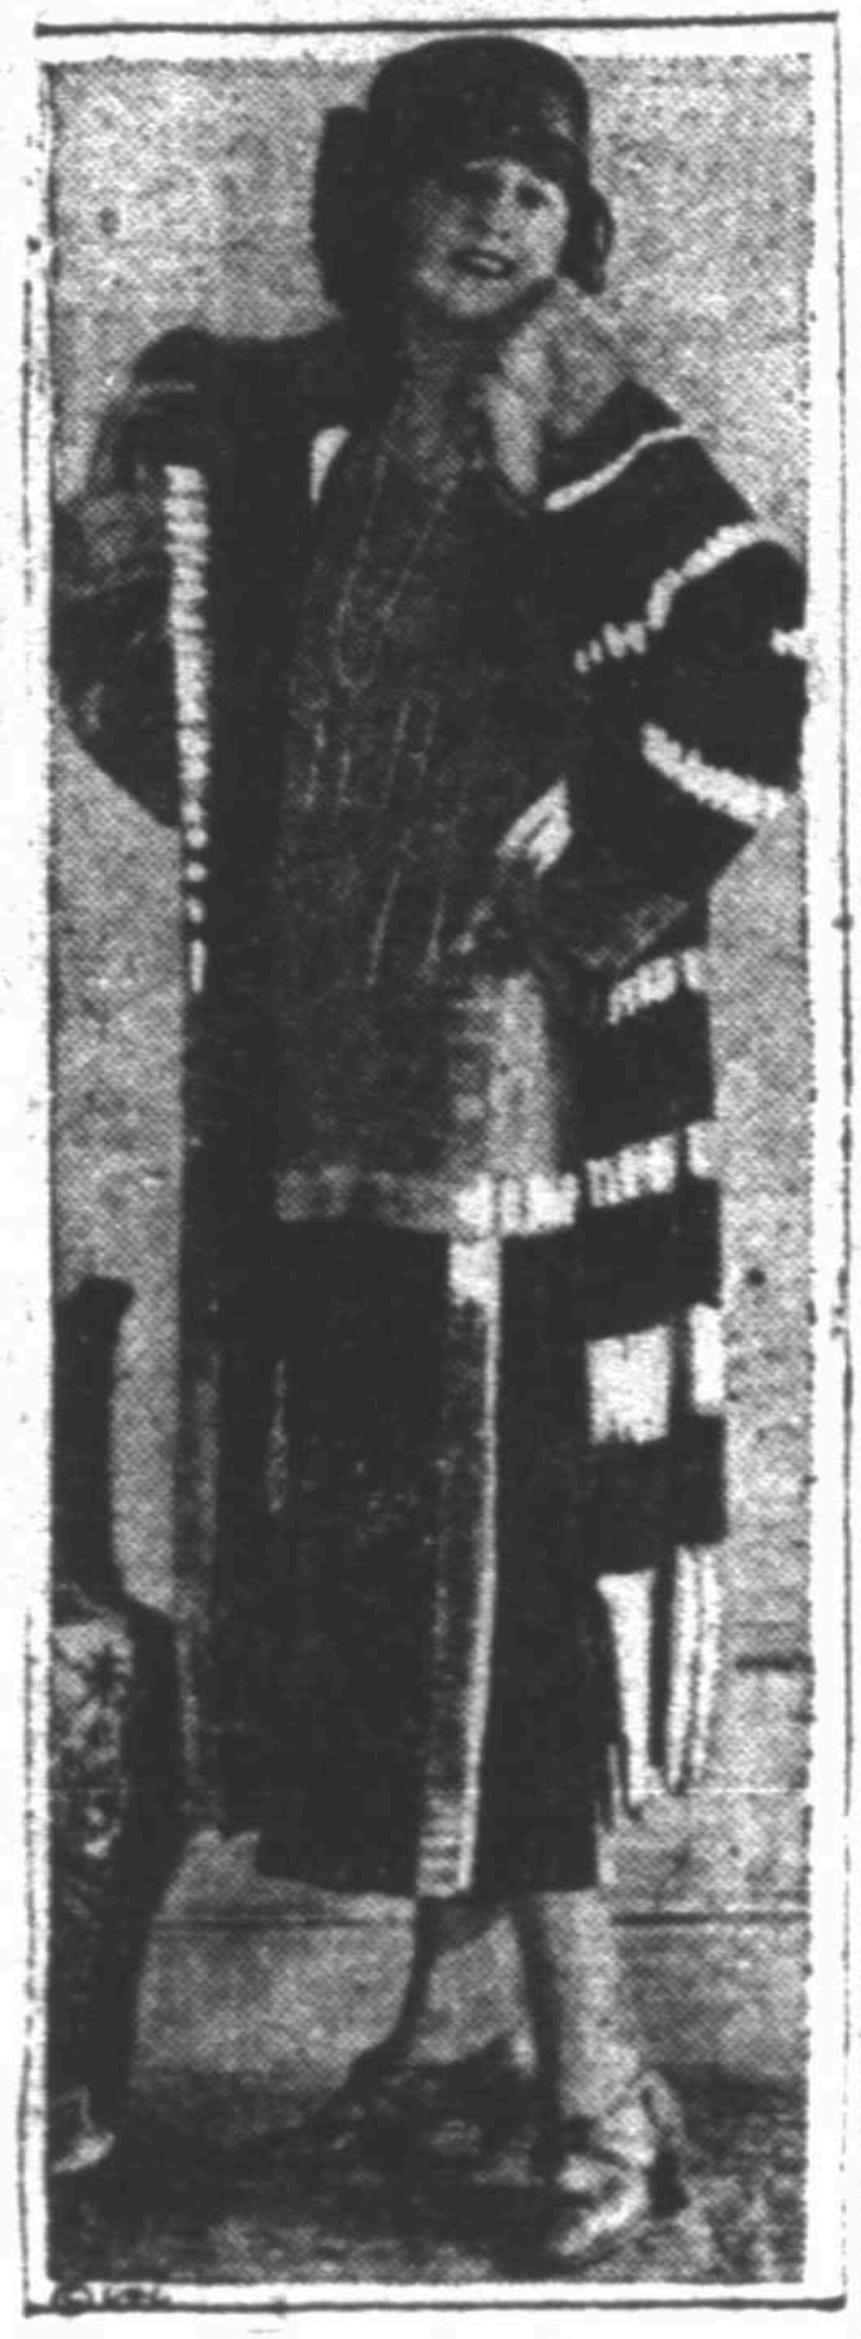
BLACK, GREY AND ROSE ARE COLORS COMBINED IN SUIT



By MME. LISBETH.

The three-piece suits are not only the smartest of the season in cut but the most luxurious as far as the fabrics used in their makeup are concerned. Cut velvet—chenille — is coming to the fore more and more as a popular trimming for frocks and suits and gives a richness to the garments on which it is used that nothing else does.

An unusually rich looking suit is illustrated here. It was exhibited recently in an advance fall showing and its color scheme as well as materials and cut, I am sure, must have recommended it to the woman who loves artistic color combinations. Black, grey and rose is the alluring union chosen for this suit.

The skirt and coat are black velva crepe and they are striped with grey chenille, the stripes being placed horizontally on the almost full length coat and vertically on the skirt. A most charming overblouse of grey and rose brocade with a banding of chenille at the lower edge completes the costume. The coat is collared with grey squirrel.

All this sounds very elaborate but the result is not complex. Nothing could be simpler than the lines of this suit, and simple lines are the smartest, as all the world knows, especially when they are developed in rich materials. Black with flashes of color still dominates the mode as it has for some time. Beige, however, is having a decided vogue in Paris and many smart women are wearing an entire ensemble—hat, suit, hose and shoes—of this color.

Your druggist or dealer sells you a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents under my personal money-back guarantee that each spoonful will clean your sluggish liver better than a dose of nasty calomel and that it won't make you sick.

Dallas Beats Wichita Falls In Opener, 3 to 1

EBERHARD BAFFLES SPUDS EIGHT OUT OF NINE FRAMES

Steer Safeties Come Opportunely—Visitors Rob Homelings Time And Again Of Base Hits

By BLONDY CROSS.

Karl Eberhard, right hand pitching prodigy of the Dallas Steers, was more than right in the series' opener Monday. The homelings sadly bowed their heads in 3 to 1 defeat at the behest of starboard Karl, and the Bovines recuperated from the quite recent lickings doled them by Jacob's Fort Worth Cats.

Eberhard was rarely in dire danger. If his hooks and slants on occasions proved not quite proficient enough his mates more than evened matters by uncanny fielding of chances usually labeled base hits.

Punch Not Spiked.

The Spuds did not pass away docilely. There was ever a potent threat, but the punch wasn't spiked; 'twas as non-alcoholic as Bill Brayn's favorite beverage.

In the ninth with two away, Locker singled sharply to right, and White followed with an infield hit, but there was no further eruption. The pair expired on the paths when Smith aviated to center.

At intervals perspiring Karl allowed the Tanner squad a look-in, but he was miserly with his safe bingles, being touched for a meager seven. During the latter portion of the seventh, Bud's Adonises squeezed over for their lonesome tally. After two were gone, and with the sacks choked, the Skipper himself elected to hit in a pinch. Bud hoisted a high one to territory a few meters from the port wall, but a strong wind blowing from the opposite direction held the spheroid in bounds, and Outfielder Griffin pulled down the catch.

Steers Threaten in First.

A runner got to second in the second with one down, but he rested his dogs there while the next two bludgeoners in order attempted desperately but failed to do their stuff.

With one morgued in the first, the Bovines menaced slightly, a meager threat which put runners on second and third but did no material damage. Donohue singled over second, and went to second when Bauman drew a free ticket. The pair enacted a double purloining foray just as Vache took his third whiff at the pellet. Griffin popped out to Locker at third.

Weis opened the domestic second with a single over the keystone bag, but was forced at second by Turgeon. Locker popped to Bauman, and Turge was obliterated in an attempt to pilfer.

Double Play in Third.

Spuds squelched Mavericks with double killing in the third. Eberhard busted one at Drake of too high a temperature to field, thereby gaining berth at initial station. Barnes bobbled in front of the platter. Jonnard pounced onto the apple with feline grace, and heaved heavily at second. Peter Turgeon leaped high like a frog with burnt tail, snared the chunk, dropped down on the cushion, forcing out Eberhard, and then pegged snappily to Coombs at First, cutting Barnes away. Donohue aviated to center.

After one had gone by the way in the Spudder third, Jonnard popped a Texas leaguer to starboard, and hoofed it all the way to second before the elusive sphere could be corralled. Bubber cooled his heels at the middle sack while Drake and Fitzgerald hoisted to the outer gardens.

Pug on Rampage.

Pug Griffin thwarted the Spuds in the fourth, plucking two from the ozone which by all laws of gravity and geometric dimensions should have fallen to safe territory. The Steer port gardner sprinted to left and swooped in vicious poke by Coombs, a catch which had it been made by a local player would have caused bedlam in the Spudder stand. Weis singled through the open spaces between second and first. There were two out. Turge followed with a drive to the left pasture boards merely to be brazenly robbed of an honest-to-gawd two-bagger. Griffin scooted back, aviated like a high jumper making or breaking a world's record, speared the pill with one paw and fell back against the fence, but came down safely with the third out of the inning tucked away.

Steers Score in Sixth.

Dallas got over in the sixth. Barnes ushered in the round with a swipe between first and second for a base. Donohue whiffed, and Bauman flied out to right. Vache crashed into one for a two-cushion drive to right center, tabulating Barnes. Vache attempted to make third on the throw in but was cut at the bag.

The Steers were performing in too darned efficient a manner in the field. Vache euchered Fitzgerald out of a safe smack in the sixth by making a brilliant running catch or slap to right center. Spuds failed to indicate that round.

Sabloskey's underlings refrigerated two more in the seventh. Griffin popped one back of second which went for two bases when nobody got to it. Segrist punched another between short and third, and Griffin scampered to the pan. Stow laid one down, advancing Segrist to second. Lingle walked. Eberhard fluked back of third, the ball falling between Locker and Turgeon, and loading the paths. Barnes pushed a long fly to right. Segrist checked in from third after the catch. Donohue aviated to left, the third out.

Spuds Tabulate in Seventh.

Homelings narrowed the lead by one run in the seventh. Coombs, first at the plate, took first on four high and wide ones. Weis singled at second. Turgeon flied out to mid sector. Locker forced Weis at second, Coombs going to third. White doubled to left, scoring Coombs. Smith hit for Jonnard, and was purposely passed. Tanner, batting for Drake, hoisted nearly to the fence, but Griffin in left made the catch easily.

Morgan went to the hillock for the Spuds in the eighth, and was greeted by Bauman with a stinging crack through short. Vache sacrificed, sending Bauman to second. Morgan struck out Griffin, and Segrist aviated to port.

Three homelings toed the medallion in the domestic eighth. Eberhard was still quite right.

BEAUMONT NOSES HOUSTON, 12 TO 11

BEAUMONT, Aug. 5.—Beaumont scored enough runs in three innings to beat Houston 12 to 11, although the Buffs fought hard to wipe out a five run lead accumulated off Barfoot in the first inning. Knaupp was forced out of the game in the first inning when Hafey collided with the infielder trying to prevent a double play. Knaupp collapsed with an injured knee after making his throw to first.

SOONER CHAMP SEEKS TEXAS TITLE

Frankie Nurdin was long heralded as champion featherweight of the southwest, but one night he limped away a sadly beaten battler.

He had made the mistake of tangling with Mr. Nick Gundy.

In one fight between the fifth and sixth rounds Nick's seconds had to empty the water bucket on him in order to revive him, and then the Irish Wop went out and whipped his man half to death.

Oh, he's tough all right.

Frankie Fink of Fort Worth, Texas featherweight title holder, may meet his Nemesis Thursday eve on the legion card in one Nick Gundy of Oklahoma City, who is labeled Oklahoma feather champ.

The pair are scheduled for the ten-round final bout. Both have been working out here this week, and are ready to go.

Nick is a veteran, and a mighty tough one, too. He packs a wallop in that right of his that will lay Frankie low if he doesn't keep his chin out of the way with avidity.

Top O' the Mornin' Stuff

BLONDY CROSS

More Steers and Spudders this afternoon at the Spud lot.

Should today's game be nearly as fast as yesterday's the gents who click the turnstiles will have no real kick coming.

Tuesday's affair was scintillating in seveal spots, with the visitors taking the lead in snappy fielding.

Neither club made an error Tuesday, but a number of the Dallas hits were certainly of the rabbit-foot type. On at least four occasions bang-up fielding should have snared flukey Texas leaguers lofted out there yesterday by the Mitchellites.

Dan Alley, hot corner guardian acquired not so long ago by the Spuds, pulled up stakes yesterday, and wended his way northward. Alley came down with an injured ankle, and just couldn't get going.

Richard, Dick Morgan's younger brother, was in Spudder uniform Tuesday. Richard has been burning 'em up out in the panhandle. He will be given a chance with the homelings. He's a pitcher, too. Put 'em out on the hill side by side, and from the grandstand you can't tell which is Richard and which is Dick.

In the Fink-Gundy ten-round featherweight tilt Thursday night, the American legion probably has one of if not the fastest number of the year in fisticuffs lined up.

Fink whose greatest argument for fame is the fact that he fought Joe Lynch to a draw, has rarely failed to thrill the most inexorable of ringsiders.

Frankie's fast; he's clever; and he can hit a hefty punch for a midget.

Gundy, of course, is speedy on his feet and with his mitts, too. Featherweights have to be swift in order to exist. Gundy's a mixer, and there is no platonic love between him and the Fort Worth small one.

Trammel and Paul, welters billed for another ten-rounder, need no introduction, especially the Duke. Trammel is picked to win, but Trammel rarely is victorious unless he puts over the dreams punch. They say the elusive Paul will evade the slugging Trammel with ease.

In our opinion, Paul is slated for a good lacing. He is wiry, and is said to be tough, but Duke is too rugged a boxer for him. Duke should win by a knockout. If he doesn't he will sorely disappoint many.

Trammel is sporting a clipping from an Oklahoma City sport page of his recent bout with Roy Fisher, Oklahoma welter champ. The referee Ben Parks, who is also a brilliant tennis player, called the bout a draw. However, Duke dropped Fisher three times, was never off his feet once, and deserved a decision, according to this newspaper. The fight was said to be absolutely the best ever staged in Oklahoma City by the American Legion.

Frankie Tucker, lightweight from Shreveport, is stopping over in Wichita Falls on his way to the west coast. Tucker, a clever fighter, according to Promoter Wofford, will probably be used on the Legion card of next week with some good boy.

And there's another Frankie on hand. Frankie McFarland of Boston, featherweight who has been fighting down in San Antonio and Mexico, blew in yesterday. Coincidentally, McFarland's bound for the coast soon, too. He'll probably be used here next week, says Wofford.

Bobby Burns, the veteran who back in 1915 or 1916 fought Carl Fleming to a draw in Wichita Falls and then came back a short time later and beat him down for a technical knockout in the third round, drove in Tuesday, also.

Burns is managing Trammel and Fink. Bobby is also quite an actor. He will be seen here on the Keith circuit this fall in all probability.

WILL MAKE NEW VOTING PRECINCT

A sub-division of Wichita county to provide more voting boxes in the Aug 23 run-off will be made by the county commissioners court next Monday. Decision to this effect has been reached, it is understood, and a number of new polling places will be named.

With only 23 boxes in the county, a number of them are badly overcrowded. More votes have been cast in them than is allowed by law, and for this reason the commissioner will provide ample voting precincts.

OIL FIELD WORKER INJURED IN ARCHER

Reports from the General hospital last night said that D. O. Starks, an oil field worker, who fell from a derrick 12 miles west of Archer City Monday afternoon was resting fairly well. Starks became tangled in some heavy cable and fell to the floor of the derrick, badly injuring his head and fracturing his left shoulder and right ankle.

The patient was in such a serious condition that he was not able to tell anything regarding himself and no particulars can be obtained about his family until he improves.

CUMMINGS AND BURNS STILL IN WEST GOLF MEET

CHICAGO, Aug. 5.—Both the defending champions Miriam Burns of Kansas City, the national champion, and Edith Cummings of Chicago, survived the first match round today in the women's western golf championship, at Onwentsia, but there was no particularly brilliant golf displayed in the 16 matches as the course was still heavy from recent rains.

Favorites won in nearly all the matches.

Two widely known players were eliminated during the day, Mrs. Elaine Rosenthal Reinhart of Dallas, twice holder of the title and once runner-up in the national championship, losing to Dorothy Kotz, of Chicago, 4 and 3, and Mrs. E. M. Fiske of Chicago, a former western champion, falling before the attack of Mrs. Stuart Henley of Detroit, 4 to 3.

BURL BRYANT BACK FROM SHORT COURSE

Burl Bryant, county superintendent, returned to Wichita Falls Monday night from College Station where he has been attending the summer course offered for a week at A. & M. college. A week's course is offered every year to county superintendents, those interested in agriculture, and editors of country newspapers. Mr. Bryant, who was one of the speakers on the program, said that the meeting was the most successful that has ever been offered by the college.

Hundreds of country boys took advantage of the opportunity and attended the course for the week and learned improved methods in farming. Mr. Bryant spoke on "financing Rural Schools." Approximately 30 county superintendents from all over the state attended the course.

What do you think of the various "trick" putters on the market?

"TRICK" PUTTERS
DON'T USE THEM—
LEARN TO HANDLE THE STANDARD PUTTER
TRICK PUTTERS ALWAYS CAUSE A LOT OF GRIEF

Answered by

BILL STRACHAN,

Golf professional of Wichita Falls Country Club.

I guess some of the fancy putters are all right for some people, but for me—I think that the three necessary things for putting are, a ball, a hole, and a straight-faced iron. I've tried out many of the freak putters, but I always come back to the old-fashioned putting cleek. I feel that using fancy putters is somewhat like a carpenter using a very fancy hammer. The chances are that the carpenter will get so interested in the beautiful mechanics of the hammer that he will hit his thumb the first time he drives a nail. Just get a good, plain putter with a fairly long handle, practice—and hope that everything will come out all right.

KINSEY BEATS TEXAS NETMEN

White Puts Up Brilliant Battle With Coast Star.

SOUTHAMPTON, N. Y., Aug. 5.—Howard Kinsey of California, conqueror of William M. Johnston at Seabright, N. J., last week, defeated Lewis N. White of the University of Texas, 6-4, 7-5 in a bitterly contested match, the features of today's play in the invitation tennis tournament here.

White gave his coast rival stubborn resistance from the start, playing beautiful, daring tennis. The Texan was never close to victory, but his powerful stroking and aggressiveness against Kinsey was roundly applauded by the galleries.

In the first set with Kinsey leading 1-5, White won three games in a row by breaking through Kinsey's service and crashing through with his own. Kinsey, however, won the next game and set.

In the second set, trailing 2-5, White brought his tantalizing chop stroke into play and by the very force of his aggressiveness, tied the count at five-all, but Kinsey quickly recovered and by masterful play, completely overwhelmed the Texan in the next two games for set and match.

Billy Whiskers

By FRANCES TREGO MONTGOMERY.

The chums were each telling the others what had happened in their absence.

"Well," said Stubby, "my story isn't much to hear. You will have a good laugh over it. I suppose though, I can assure you what happened to me was no laughing matter.

When we left here, Mr. Noland drove straight out into the country, and you must know he is a fast and reckless driver. I nearly bounced out of the car two or three times, for when he comes to a bad place in the road, instead of driving slowly he puts on more power and goes through lickety-split. As for turns and curves, I fell over on his lap every time he went around a corner. But the worst of it is he is very impatient if thede is anything in the road that he can't pass. And it seemed to me I never saw so many pigs, chickens and slow going farm wagons before. He would toot his horn, and the old farmers would not pay the slightest attention or give him one bit of the road, but just keep right on in the middle and jog along, giving us their dust. Mr. Noland would drive up close to their wagons and toot his horn until he would nearly break it. Then he would try to pass and nearly upset his machine in the deep ditches that bordered the road. But he always made it on two wheels if not on four. and as he passed he would call out all sorts of things to the stupid old drivers. His favorite expdessions were, 'Say, do you think you own the road?' and 'If you want to sleep, you better drive youd old hay rack and rattling old bones to the side of the road,' or 'Now take a little of my dust and see how you like it!' And all the time he was growing madder and madder.

"Consequently, when we came to some cows with one of them lying straight across the road and several others blocking the way as they stood across the road and several otheds blocking the way as they stood about, I hopped out to drive them out of the way. But an old cow with a calf instead of running away from me as I supposed she would do took after me and I was so busy dodging her that I did not notice another cow until I ran right into her. And she quickly lowered her head and hooked me out of the road and over the fence. "Now in this field was a flock of sheep quietly sleeping in the shade of a tree, an old ram with immense horns watching over them. I landed in the midst of the flock, which woke them up in a hurry and they jumped up and ran off, frightened almost to pieces at a strange dog falling in their midst. And the stupid things, instead of waiting to see if I was going to hurt them or not, all jumped up and ran baaing in all directions.

(We shall have to wait till tomorrow to hear the rest of Stubby's story.)

American Students Invade Dutch Town For Lectures

LEYDON, Holland, Aug.—This quiet university town, redolent of memories of William the Silent, Rembrandt and Grotius, was brimful of bustle and excitement recently owing to an invasion of hundreds of Americans. Sixty of them were students from Harvard, Yale and Princeton who had come to take a holiday course of lectures on Holland at the famous old University of Leydon which for centuries has been one of the foremost seats of learning in Europe.

Richard M. Tobin, U. S. minister at the Hague, welcomed his young compatriots. Professor Westerman recalled that it was with Holland that the United States, under the administration of President Adams, concluded its first treaty of friendship and commerce, and that one of President Adams' sons received his education here.

At the same time, a large party of American Walloon Huguenots made pilgrimages to the tomb of John Robinson and various parts of the city connected with the memory of the Pilgrim Fathers. They were received by the mayor, to whom they presented a memorial may of Plymouth, Mass., and a commemorative medal.

London Audience Goes Wild Over Old Stage Favorite

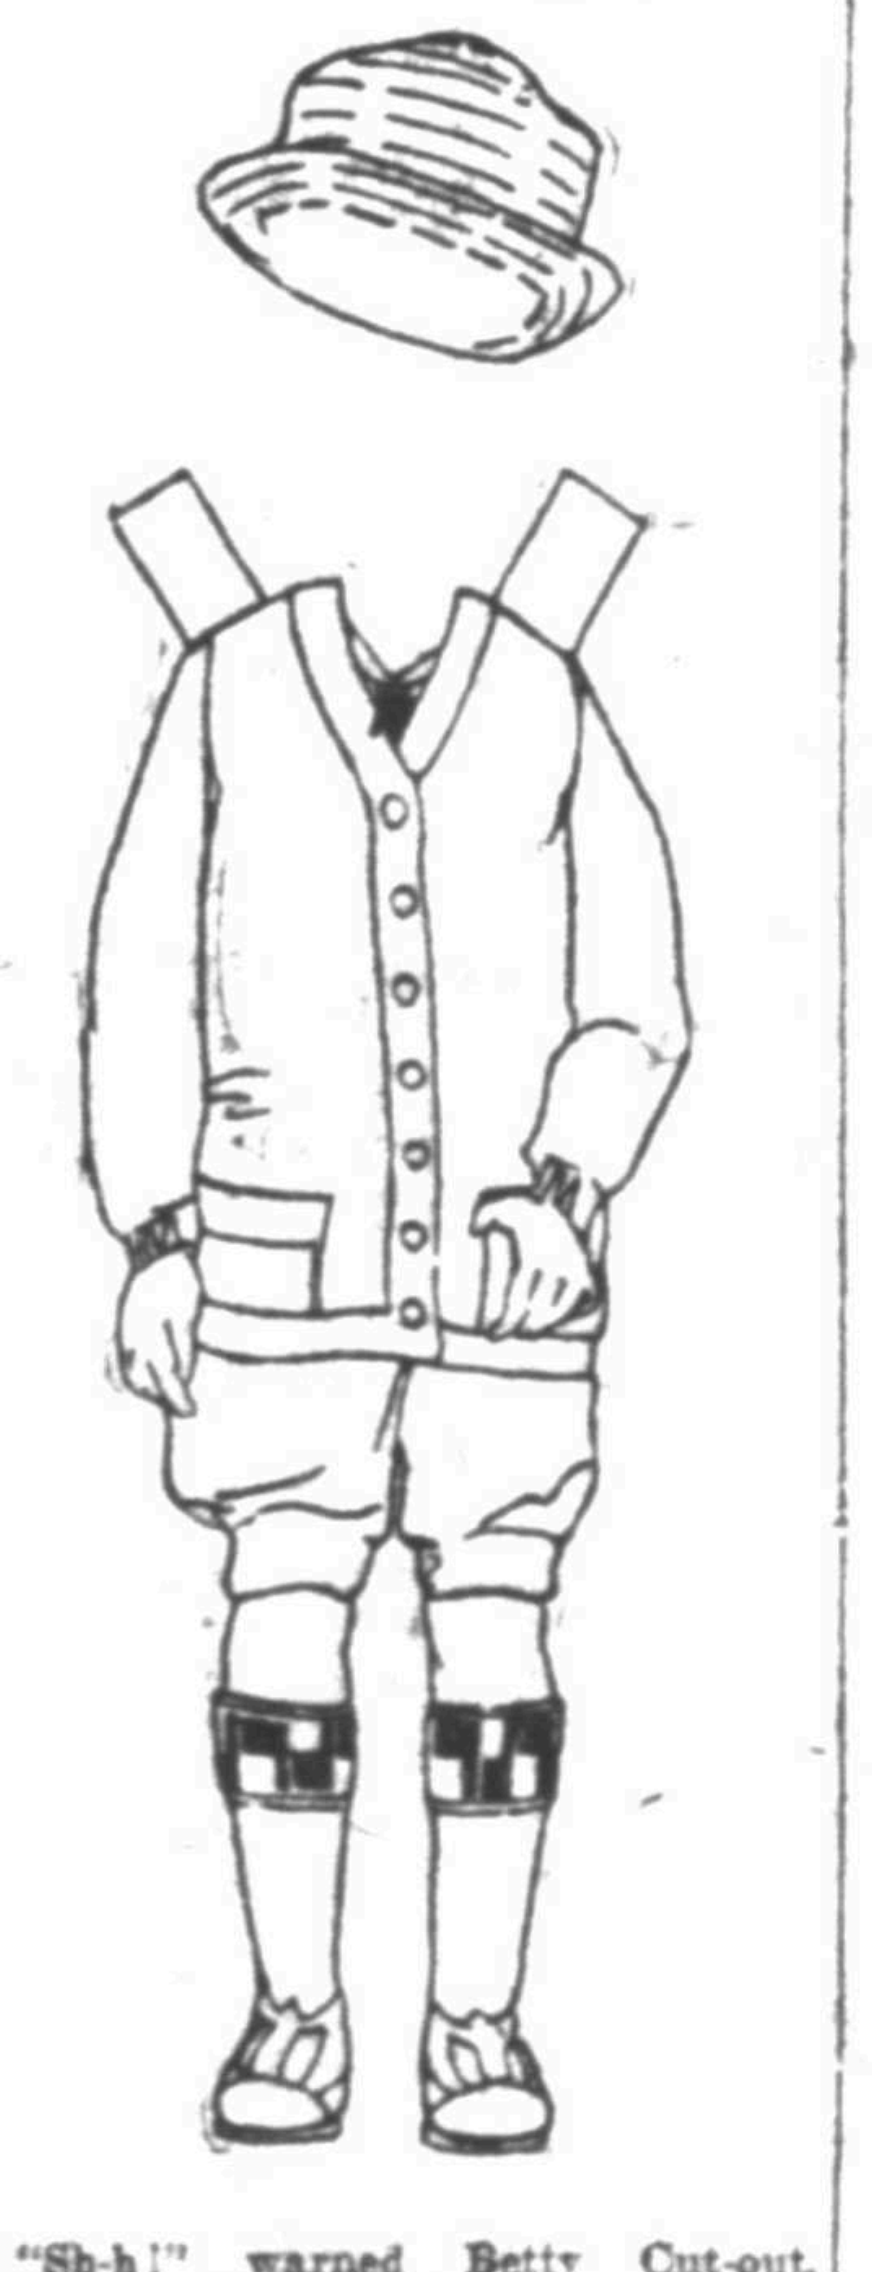
LONDON, Aug. 5.—London critics are hailing with acclaim the return of Marie Tempest to musical comedy after an absence of 25 yrs. in straight comedy roles. Her recent appearapce in a comedy fantasy occasioned an ovation on her every entry, and after the close of the last act Miss Tempest was kept on the stage for 15 minutes while the audience, English audiences are the most conservative in the world, expressed its appreciation by a gale of handclapping, cane pounding and shouting.

So overcome was Miss Tempest at her reception that once, during the second act, she completely forgot her lines, and was forced to improvise for several minutes, she confessed at the close of the evening. London criitcs said that the enthusiasm with which she was hailed was memorable.

Miss Tempest who is 58 years old first appeared on the stage in "Boccacio," in 1885.

News that a new automobile highway more than six hundred miles long, joining the Congo with the Nile, affords ample proof that complete seclusion from civilization becomes ever more difficult to find, even in darkest Africa.

Color Cut-Out



"Sh-h!" warned Betty Cut-out, with her finger at her lips, as she led Billy and their new friend, Roger, whom they had met the day before, up close to the high fence around the cottage in which the mysterious little girl lived. It was the time when her cruel old aunt always took a nap.

Soon the little girl came stealing out of the cottage and up to the fence where the three friends were waiting. Betty introduced her to Roger. "We want to help you get away from here," announced Bettty. "Why don't you write a letter to your daddy in South America telling him how badly you're treated and then let us mail it?"

"She doesn't let me have paper and pencil, and besides I don't know his address . She always addresses the letters she makes me write. We'll have to think up something else."

They all put their heads together and thought hard, but no one seemed to have any bright ideas.

Gas Bubbles On Surface Of Swamp Basis For Drilling of Discovery Well Of New South Louisiana Pool

Vacuum Oil Company's No. 1 Miller Flowing About 150 Barrels.

The Vacuum Oil company is generally credited with the opening of a new Louisiana oil field with the completion of their Miller No. 1, in the northwest of the northeast of 4-10-9w, four miles south of Lake Charles. Production is as yet uncertain, but the well has been flowing between 100 and 150 barrels a day since Saturday, oil measuring 23 degrees gravity. The depth of the hole is given as 3,812 feet, with oil coming from several sands at various depths under 3,700 feet. One hundred feet of 81 mesh wire has been set and a flow of the above proportion developed.

This is the second well drilled by the Vacuum Oil company in this section, and one of a group of four by the same company in this vicinity. None of the tests have been drilled on basis of surface geology or other gelological data usually used as a basis for making locations but were started with only gas bubbles in the surrounding swamps to indicate that oil was there.

The first well was drilled on dry land, 1,645 feet north of the No. 1, Miller, a depth of 3,900 feet being reached before pulling back to test a 1,100-foot sand and then being abandoned as dry.

After failure of this well a mile of bridgelike platform was built out into the swamp and three tests started to test a row of gas bubbles. The Miller No. 16 is the central test of the three, and the second of the four to be drilled. The third is 1,500 feet east of No. 1, Miller, on the Gray land, and the fourth about the same distance north on Boudechs land.

Setting up of the swamp platform and the building of the derricks for the tests cost the Vacuum people about $30,000, not including the cost of drilling any of the four wells. The gas bubbles, it is stated, were the only reasons for starting the tests at the spots chosen.

The Vacuum Oil company has several thousand acres surrounding the tests and practically controls all nearby land.

3-MONTHS-OLD WELL STARTS FLOWING AGAIN

After pumping consistently since the first day of May, the Shamrock Oil company's No. 6, Richardson "A" has started flowing through the 6 5-8 inch casing. The well made several such flows yesterday and gave every indication of keeping up the unusual action indefinitely. The well was started the last day of March of this year and put on the pump on the first day of May, and has pumped consistently since then until yesterday when it started flowing.

Sand depth is given as 1,335-59 feet.

Production of the Shamrock Oil company alone on their Swastika leases reached the high mark of 2,025 barrels Monday.

NEW WILDCAT LOOKS GOOD

Throckmorton County Well Has Oil Standing In Hole.

The Panhandle Refining company and Larkin and White are setting casing to test a good looking oil sand in their wildcat southeast of Throckmorton, Throckmorton county. The sand was encountered about 1,448 feet and was penetrated two feet when oil begin to rise in the hole. There is some oil standing in the hole now. Test made of this yesterday shows 39 degrees gravity. It is probable that the well will be drilled in and completed some time today.

It is located on the Conger land, TE&L survey, about twelve miles southeast of the town of Throckmorton.

Indications were yesterday that the well would make a commercial producer.

Casing Sent To Knox County Test

Casing has been ordered to the site of the Williams and Rhodes test on the Ella Lawson land about a mile north of Goree, Knox county, block 81, H&TCRR survey, with the intention of testing out an oil sand encountered in that well at a depth of 442 feet. The sand was penetrated Monday and a good showing of oil obtained and the well shut down for orders. It was not known last night whether casing would be set to test or not, 600 feet of pipe having been nevertheless sent to the ground.

This well has previously had a strong gas showing at 426 feet.

LULING FIELD IN DANGER FROM WATER

By The Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Aug. 5.—Great damage is being done to oil wells in the Luling field by water, according to Laten Stanberry, chief supervisor of the state oil and gas division. If the experiment is successful bottom plugging will be attempted on a large scale in this field, Mr. Stanberry said.

Total stock sales 1,040,200 shares.

By The Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—Reactionary tendencies developed in today's stock market when it was unable to absorb the large volume of profit taking sales. Recessions in active issues ran from one to 3 points with trading in reduced volume although total sales exceeded the million share mark for the 16th consecutive full session. While many observers stated that a reaction was warranted because the weakened technical condition of the market after eight weeks of steady rising prices, it undoubtedly received added impetus by another cut in eastern crude prices and the ommission of dividends on both issues of Pressed Steel Car.

U. S. Steel common fluctuated within a range of one point, closing 3-4 lower at 108 1-2. Baldwin, American Can, Dupont, American Tobacco B., Gulf States Steel, Maxwell Motors "A", and several other popular industries showed net losses of 1 to 2 points.

Eighteen issues established new 1924 highs during the session.

Rails were mixed, strength of Lackawana, Delaware and Hudson and the Wheeling and Lake Erie issue, all of which broke through their previous high prices of the year, besides concentrated by the heaviness of Rock Island, Great Northern preferred, Nickel Plate and Missouri Pacific preferred, all of which showed losses of a point or more.

Special weakness cropped out in Atlantic Refining on rumors of unfavorable dividend action when the directors meet next week, the stock closing nearly two points lower at 86 3-4. The Pressed Steel Car issues touched new 1924 lows.

Financial News

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—Directors of the Vacuum Oil company today declared an extra dividend of 25 cents and the regular quarterly 50 cents.

The Tidewater Oil company had a surplus of $3,323,116 after allowing for expenditures, federal tax, depreciation and depletion for the first six months of 1924. This is equal to $0.64 a share on the $50,003,700 capital stock.

The Pure Oil company's production from the Humphreys Oil company properties in the Mexia, Powedd and Currie fields totalled 9,700,000 barrels from September, 1923, to June 30, 1924, company officials announced today. Net profits before depreciation and depletion from those ten months output, including the operations of the Smith's Bluff refinery aggregated about $14,000,000.

MONEY At Work

Brief but important lessons in finance, markets, stocks, bonds and investments.

RECKLESS COMPETITION ENDANGERS TRADE
OPEN FOR BUSINESS TODAY
we carry a complete line of fine groceries
LOWEST PRICES

A retailer who opens up, runs for a while and finally fails has lost not only his own money but the money of his competitors as well.

Retailers are in business to serve you. In return for such service they are entitled to fair salaries, a return on the money invested and something in the way of profit which is a return for the risk involved in the business.

Competition in the retail field is healthful inasmuch as it forces the owners to greater efficiencies in operation. The sort of competition which is unintelligent is harmful. Often a person without knowledge of retailing opens up a business and struggles along for a while, but is unable to manage the store properly and fails.

The experimenter has lost his own money, but worse than that, he has taken trade away from an established store thereby reducing the profit to which it is justly entitled.

Grain Letter

W. N. Graham, of Wichita Falls, Tuesday received the following telegraphic communication from Clement Curtis and company:

CHICAGO, Aug. 5.—Wheat:—Market was easier for wheat selling off three to four cents. Although rust reports from Canada continue they were not accompanied by buying orders and Winnipeg declined about 1 1-2 cents. Liverpool however opened 1-2 to 7-8 higher and closed 1 to 1 1-2 higher, probably influenced by the strength in Buenos Aires and continued drouth in Argentine.

Light frost was reported in Canada but had little effect upon prices with exception that government report to be issued on Thursday will materially increase its wheat estimated, there is not so much disposition to take the long side until this report is out of the way. Millers report improved flour business and the demand for cash wheat active at a shade lower.

Corn—After opening firm, liberal realizing selling caused an easier feeling and the market closed weak at near the lowest prices of the day. This is a natural reaction after several days of advice to active long buying. Weather conditions favor the progress of the growing corn.

Oats—Market eased off in sympathy with the decline in corn holding about the same ratio. Although receipts are light, cash market was easy. Buyers holding off with expectations of more liberal movement when the crop moves.

By The Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 5.—The cotton market was not active today as it has been in recent sessions, but the trend of prices was upward. The main stimulating influences were the increasing seriousness of the drouth in the west which is gradually extending to the central belt, the very much more favorable character of foreign political news and an expanding demand for spots in the southwest at higher premiums. As Liverpool came in lower than due, October traded at 26.93 near the opening and December at 26.92, or 10 to 13 points below the closing of yesterday. Later October gradually advanced to 27.55 and December to 27.46, or 62 and 54 points up from the low. There was a moderate reaction in the late trading on realizing and the close showed net gains for the day of 34 to 37 points.

The initial cause of the advance was the failure of the weather map to show any trace of rains privately reported yesterday except a slight shower at Taylor in central Texas. Private reports from the western states, particularly from Texas, admitted that the drouth was becoming serious and that the crop was going back, shedding rather freely and blooming at the top.

SEVERE BREAKS FEATURE WHEAT

Profit-Taking Sales Prove Too Heavy For High Price.

By The Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 5.—Severe breaks in the price of wheat stock took place today, heavy marketing of newly harvested wheat together with profit taking sales proving to heavy a load for the immediate demand. Closing quotations for wheat were weak, 2 7-8 to 3 3-4 cents net lower, September 1.28 to 1.28 1-4 and December 1.32 to 1.32 1-8. Corn finished 1 5-8 to 2 5-8 cents down, oats 7-8 to 1 3-4 cents off, and provisions at 20 cents to 30 cents decline.

Corn and oats as well as wheat were depressed by selling on the part of holders who were seemingly unprepared for a pause in new buying. Besides, the weather today was of a kind to favor corn growth.

Provisions declined with grain.

DELINQUENT TAX RULES COST HIM

Person Who Failed to Pay On 3 Lots Since 1895 To Pay It All Now.

As an example of the manner in which tax costs multiply when the original assessments are allowed to run delinquent year after year, some figures have been furnished by the city tax office regarding three lots in north Wichita that have been on the delinquent rolls since 1895. Although none of the property is in an especially choice location, the owner has lost close to $100 in the last 29 years through failure to make the tax payments regularly.

10 Cent Charge.

The total taxes on the property in 1895 amounted to 10 cents. For the next nine years they were 80 cents, and then the values began to climb until last year they were $9.30 for the city taxes and $8.20 for the school. No school tax was levied until 1902, in which year the tax was 15 cents.

Penalties Are Added.

In adding up the amounts which would have been paid had the tax assessments been met each year, it was found that $81.18 would have covered the city and school charges. Now, with interest and penalties added, the total is $171.93.

It is understood that the owner has expressed a willingness to make the payment and will have this cost to make.

Wichitans Recall 10 Years Ago When War Began

Ten years ago yesterday Great Britain declared war on Germany. Because a king down in a little country in the south part of Europe defied the Austrian-Hungarian government, the war god began to growl and all Europe was plunged into that deadly struggle.

On June 28 Archduke Ferdinand was killed by a Serbian student. One month from that day passports were handed to the Serbian ambassador in Austria. All knew that it was a virtual declaration of war. On July 27 Great Britain attempted to settle the question but her offer was curtly refused. On the following day Austria declared war on Serbia.

Then came periods of stress in the United States. All living in Wichita Falls at that time remember reading the headlines in the Record News "New York Stock Exchange Closed." Then on August 2 another headline said that Germany had declared war on Russia and France began to mobilize her forces. On the following day German forces were repulsed on the French frontier before war was officially declared.

Then Great Britain, angered at Germany's actions toward Belgium and anxious to adhere to the Triple Entente entered the world war on August 5 and thus began the greatest struggle in the history of the world. Europe ran red with blood. The money markets of the world were halted. Prices soared in the United States and a wave of prosperity swept over the entire country.

While the nations of the world were battling, oil was discovered at Burkburnett and the boom started. Money was plentiful and a period of prosperity swept over Wichita Falls.

Ten years have passed since Great Britain threw her lot with the allies but during that time many of the scars have been healed and much of the hatred has been forgotten.

COMPLAIN ABOUT LOCAL DAIRIES

Several complaints recently against alleged unsanitary conditions existing in a few dairies in and about the city have instigated a searching investigation by the city health department. Thus far, it is reported, no grounds have been found for a justification of the complaints, but the probe will not be completed until every dairy has been thoroughly inspected.

In case violations of the sanitary rules for dairies are found, it has been declared, prosecutions will immediately follow.

Atticus Webb Raked Over Coals By Graham Attorney After He Endorses Felix D. Robertson For Governor

An announcement by Atticus Webb of Dallas, leader of the anti-saloon forces in Texas that he intended to support Felix Robertson for governor has brought an illuminating retort from Elmer Graham, a Graham, Texas, attorney.

Mr. Graham in a letter to Rev. Webb has made some pointed observations.

Full Report of Letter.

His letter in full, a copy of which has been received by the Record News, is as follows:

Aug. 4, 1924.

Rev. Atticus Webb,
Dallas, Texas.

Dear Sir:

Note your endorsement of Robertson for governor in yesterday's News. Consistency seems to be a lost virtue with you. Mrs. Ferguson makes the undisputed statement she has always been a prohibitionist and is for the abolition of the boot-legging drugstores and a stringent enforcement of the prohibition laws. Yet you vote, in effect, for a continuation of the liquor traffic. You vote for Robertson and endorse him to the church people of Texas when you are bound to know, if you know anything, that he is the pliant tool of Bill Hanger, John M. Mathis and Sam Sparks—three of the biggest anti-prohibitionists and exponents of the breweries that ever lived in Texas, all of them now high Moguls in the klan. They are the same bunch that kicked Harper Kirby, who has spent $100,-000 for prohibition in Texas, bodily out of the Waco convention after he had been elected a delegate to the national convention by his congressional district caucus. They are the same bunch who rode rough-shod over Mrs. Claud Van Watts, the president of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union in the same convention, and wouldn't let Cullen Thomas in for an opportunity to get kicked out.

Didn't Know Binkley.

I understand you stated in your paper you did not know J. E. Binkley, candidate for land commissioner from Young county, nor did you know how he stood on the prohibition question, when, as a matter of fact he had contributed to your anti-saloon league for twenty years and when he wasn't teaching in your Methodist colleges, was fighting for prohibition, having headed the first organized effort in Colorado county in 1887. You evidently mistake gall for godliness and bile for benevolence. What we need in Texas is more George W. Truetts to preach the gospel of the love and mercy of the Savior of the world and fewer pious frauds endorsing such whited sepulchers as Felix Robertson and Earle Mayfield, who are indentured to the will and whim of the most damnable and treasonable conspiracy against the fundamental principles of American life and liberty we as a people have yet faced. The mills of the gods grind slowly but they surely do pulverize. We are going to run over you and your peewee ku klux tool for governor with the steamroller on August 23rd and will have a harrow hitched on the back end to scatter the fragments.

With best wishes, very truly yours,
ELMER GRAHAM.
EG-s (Signed) Elmer Graham.

Carrier Pigeons Prefer Ships To Flight

By The Associated Press.

BREMERHAVE.., Germany, Aug. —American ships seldom make the trip between Bremerhaven and Southampton without having carrier pigeons as passengers. The crews of the shipping board vessels have made a practice of supplying the tired carriers with food and water, and they seem to have learned to identify the American flag and make for the stars and stripes whenever they are weary.

Usually the birds seek the ships about dusk. They apparently dislike the night flight across the North sea and English channel and prefer to ride. The birds are seldom shy. Frequently they allow the sailors to feed them from their hands and inspect the numbers of the discs about their legs.

After the birds have satisfied their hunger and thirst they seek a sheltered perch high on the masts and remain with the vessel until within a few miles of land.

Many of the birds which rest on the channel ships are doubtless engaged in the races which carrier pigeon societies are conducting between England and the various parts of Europe.

IRELAND GIVEN TWO-YEAR TERM

Found Guilty in 30th Court On Charges of Concealing Stolen Auto Casings.

A sentence of two years in the state penitentiary was imposed Tuesday afternoon on Alvin Ireland following his conviction in the 30th district court on charges of receiving and concealing stolen automobile casings. The case was tried before Judge H. R. Wilson and a verdict returned by the jury in less than five minutes from the time it began its deliberations.

Stolen From Hines.

Evidence introduced by the state alleged that the defendant had accepted some casings stolen from Ralph Hines of the Woody Hines Oil company and that he had secreted them on the banks of the Wichita river 15 miles from the city. He was arrested, it was alleged, when he took a prospective purchaser to the site to inspect the casings.

Companion Case.

A companion case to that of Ireland may be tried this week with "Catfish" Martin as defendant, Assistant District Attorney Robert K. Crain announced Tuesday at completion of the trial. Martin is under indictment for the same offense and is held in the county jail.

BURKETT WILL SPEAK FRIDAY

Defeated Candidate For Mrs. Ferguson In Run-off.

Senator Joe Burkett of Eastland county will speak here next Friday night in the interest of rM. Miriam Ferguson's candidacy for governor, according to unconfirmed reports here last night.

It is presumed that Senator Burkett will appear under the auspices of the "Mrs. Miriam Ferguson for Governor club," which was formed here Monday night and which has arranged a meeting for Friday evening. Officials of the club could not be reached last night to confirm th. report of Senator Burkett's appearance, but it was learned on apparently reliable authority that the Eastland man would be in Wichita Falls on that date.

Inasmuch as it has been announced that a speaker would be obtained by the club for that night, it is thought that Burkett is the one.

AGED NEWTOWN RESIDENT IS DEAD

BURKBURNETT, Aug. 5.—J. R. Hennis, aged 70, ried at his home near Newtown, at an early hour Tuesday morning.

The funedal took place at the family residence Tuesday morning conducted by Dr. Fred Ford of the Burkbudnett Presbyterian church. Burial was in the Burkburnett cemetery directed by Collier Brothers undertakers.

MANY APPLICATIONS FOR BALLOTS MADE

Applications for ballots to be used under the absentee voting law for the run-off primary August 23 continue to come into the county clerk's office. It is not known exactly how many have been sent out thus far, but officials state that the demand indicates even greater interest in the coming election than was shown in the July 26 primary.

No official ballots have been given out as yet but some will probably be issued today. The supply is now in the hands of the printer, who is expected to deliver them to the county clerk this morning.

Applications will be received by the county clerk up to and including Aug. 13, which is the final date on which they can be made.

PEOPLE WHO WERE ONCE GOOD LOOKING

A heartrending and yet interesting thing happened in a downtown store when a middle-aged lady got into a loud argument with a clerk. "I know what I want," she kept saying. "I have tried all those other things, but I know from what I saw it do for some friends of mine that it is Black and White ointment, which gets rid of these pimples and blotches. I was just as pretty as any girl when I was young, but I got careless and now I am in the fix you see."

So many people are now insisting on Black and White Ointment, and Black and White Soap, to get rid of pimples, blotches, eczema, rash, tetter, ringworm, "breaking out," etc., because they see and hear of the thousands of others who now know they can depend upon it. And they are more economical, too. The 50c size Ointment contains three times as much as the liberal 25c size. All dealers have both the Oitment and Soap.

GYPSY KING LOSES BRIDE BOUGHT FOR $2,500 IN SILVER

Boston police declared illegal the marriage of "Queen" Annie of the Butch gypsy tribe, sold by her father to the tribal king for $2,500 cash. The wedding ceremony consisted of jumping over a broomstick. The queenless king is trying to get back the $2,500 in silver invested by the father in a gasoline filling station.

'TWAS LOVELY MUSIC AND LOVELY VOICE; CALL AGAIN, MISS

"Record News?"

"Yes."

"Hold the wire for just a moment please, and hear something pretty."

Not knowing what was coming next the innocent reporter did as instructed and in a few seconds beautiful music came floating through the telephone receiver. Several instruments supplied the melody and the unknown patries certainly knew how to blow a wicked trombone and draw a mean bow across a violin. For several minutes the music lasted with several little interruptions when a sweet voice directed the orchestra. Then suddenly the music stopped and utter silence for a second.

"That will be all for tonight, thank you."

"Who are you and where do you live?"

"Well now that is my secret," said a sweet voice.

"Please tell me who you are."

"Goodbye," and with a gentle little laugh the owner of the voice hung the receiver on the hook, leaving a tired reporter at the other end of the wire wondering what it was all about but ready to testify that it was beautiful music—and a beautiful voice.

Evangelist Quotes Story of The Four Beasts To Crowd

"The secret things belong unto the Lord our God, but the things which are revealed belong unto us and our children." The above was the opening text used by Pastor C. U. Taylor in his Bible study at the Buchanan street tabernacle last night. He then took up the study of Daniel VII and a brief synopsis of the study is as follows:

"Daniel said, 'I saw in my vision by night * * * and four great beasts came up out of the sea diverse one from another. The first was like a lion and had eagle's wings * * * a second like a bear * * * and it had three ribs in the mouth of it * * * and lo another a leopard, which had upon the back of it four wings of a fowl; the beast also had four heads * * * And behold a fourth beast dreadful and terrible, and strong exceedingly; and it had great iron teeth; it devoured and break in pieces, and stamped the residue with the feet of it * * * and it had ten horns. I considered the horns and behold there came up among them another little horn before whom there were three of the first horns plucked up by the roots; and, behold, in this horn were eyes like the eyes of a man, and a mouth speaking great things.

"Daniel was then given a vision of the judgment and said, 'I. Daniel, was grieved in my spirit * * * and I came near to one of them that stood by and asked him the truth of all this. So he told me and made me know the interpretation of the things. These great beasts, which are four are four kings that shall arise out of the earth. But the saints of the most High shall take the kingdom, and possess the kingdom forever, even forever!'"

The study of the fourth beast will constitute the theme for the meeting Thursday night.

FIRE CAUSES $5,000 LOSS

Panhandle Boiler Works Hit By Early Morning Blaze Tuesday.

Fire of undetermined origin at 2:48 Tuesday morning destroyed a store room and another small building at the Panhandle Boiler Works north of the city, causing a property loss of about $5,000. The damage is said to have been covered by insurance.

The blaze had obtained a good start before it was discovered and firemen summoned from the central station were able to do little more than prevent its spread to surrounding structures. The close proximity of the boiler works to the Panhandle refinery and large oil storage tanks made the blaze a dangerous one.
