2-parent families

WASHINGTON — After two decades of declining numbers, two-parent families are on the rebound, according to a Census Bureau report. But, while the number of two-parent families has risen since 1990, the percentage of families headed by a single parent is continuing to rise. Nearly one-third of all American families with children were headed by a single parent in 1994, according to the survey released today. Those numbers have increased steadily from 13 percent in 1970, to 22 percent in 1980, and 28 percent in 1990; the figure rose to 30.8 percent in 1994./8A

Selena's last days

Family, employees testify about Tejano star's hectic final week.

Associated Press

HOUSTON — The last week of Selena's life was hectic.

With tax time fast approaching, the 23-year-old Tejano music star was doing her best to prove she could run her own business and launch her dream project.

"Since she was a little girl, she wanted to be a fashion designer," father and manager, Abraham Quintanilla Jr., testified last week at the murder trial of Selena's accused killer, Yolanda Saldivar.

"Her dream was to design clothing," said Chris Perez, the 26-year-old widower of Selena Quintanilla Perez.

The singer's musical pursuits began at age 6, and she went on to win a Grammy award, which

Blacks converge on D.C. to march

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Black men converging on the nation's capital for today's Million Man March described it as a unifying, uplifting event that transcends its controversial originator, Nation of Islam leader Louis Farrakhan.

"It's not about a march, a man, words. It's about a movement," the Rev. Vernon Clay said after a Sunday sermon urging the men of Lincoln Congregational Temple in Washington to attend.

The event, actually more of a rally and prayer meeting than march, is called "a day of atonement and reconciliation." Supporters describe it as a call for black men to take responsibility for their own lives

No end in sight for public's deliberation of O.J. jury

By Tony Knight

N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — The O.J. Simpson "not guilty" verdict took the jury less than four hours, but the public's deliberation over the jurors shows no signs of ending.

Jury experts interviewed last week were nearly unanimous in their conclusions that the Simpson case struck a variety of nerves by exposing subtle racial biases either on the part of the jury, the predominantly white District Attorney's Office, or white viewers who were astonished by the outcome.

For instance, jurors on the predominantly African-American jury who have spoken publicly have expressed surprise their conclusion unleashed such a public uproar, saying their decision was based on reasonable doubt, not empathy with the race of the accused.

They have pointed to holes in the prosecution's case, and such slip-ups as the bloody gloves that Simpson couldn't get to fit when he tried them on in court.

"Things just didn't add up," said Juror No. 4 David Aldana, a Latino Pepsi truck driver.

Sheila Woods, Juror No. 8, an African-American environmental health specialist, said she doubted the prosecution theory of the crime.

"There was just a couple of drops of blood on the foyer floor, a couple of drops of blood on the bathroom floor, but there was no blood anywhere else," Woods said in an interview with ABC News.

Church reinstates priest accused of molestation

Calicott became the first Roman Catholic priest in Chicago and one of few in the nation to return after being suspended for allegations of sexual abuse. He asked for forgiveness and promised to continue therapy and be monitored by an adult whenever TYLER — In her 100-pound gown with the 17-foot train, the queen of the Texas Rose Festival will take her bow.

The orchestra will play the first notes of "Pomp and Circumstance" as the lights come up on stage. A raised drawbridge hiding her will slowly fall, and the crowd will catch its first glimpse of her bejeweled dress — the color and design kept top secret for months.

She will turn to the Rose Festival president, decked out in tuxedo and tails, and kneel before him as he crowns her, tapping her shoulders left and then right. Rising slowly under the weight of her gown, she then will descend the stage's grand staircase, holding her rhinestone-encrusted scepter, wrist slightly cocked.

WEATHER WATCH

Look for a sunny, high-in-80s day

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for sunny skies with a high in the upper 80s and south winds at 5-15 mph. Tonight should be clear with a low between 50-55, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tuesday should be mostly sunny with a high near 90. After an overnight low of 46, Sunday's high reached 85, compared to the record high for that date of 94 set in 1962. The record low was 36 set in 1966.

STATE

Sunny skies will be the norm today across Texas.

North Texas will be clear with highs in the mid- to upper 80s. Tonight will be fair, with lows ranging from 53 degrees to 60 degrees.

On Sunday, sunny skies prevailed. Temperatures were generally in the 80s. Light and variable winds were reported over the eastern half of North Texas, with light southerly winds over the western sections.

South Texas will be sunny today. Lows will fall to the low to mid-40s. Highs will be in the middle to upper 80s. Winds will be southeast at 5 to 10 mph.

On Sunday, clear skies prevailed over South Texas. Temperatures ranged from 74 degrees at Galveston to 85 at Laughlin Air Force Base. Winds were variable 5 to 10 mph.

West Texas will be mostly sunny and clear through Tuesday. Highs will be in the 70s and 80s while lows will be in the 40s and 50s.

On Sunday, clear skies continued over West Texas. Temperatures were in the 70s and 80s. A west to southwest wind prevailed at 5 to 10 mph.

he is with children.

After Mass, Calicott said he never admitted being a child molester or a pedophile, only that "something occurred that should not have occurred."

Calicott recounted for parishioners at the 2 1/2-hour Mass his "hellish limbo" while he was placed on leave and counseled at a Maryland institute that specializes in treating priests.

His hourlong homily was repeatedly interrupted by standing ovations from the more than 500 people in the congregation, especially when he said doctors assured him he is not a pedophile and poses no risk to children.

Calicott fought back tears as he recounted his anger and depression during his time away from Holy Angels, asking the congregation to pray that his anger be removed. He acknowledged that some parents might never trust him and said later that he began to fear children during his suspension.

He said his treatment required talking about sexual fantasies and deep psychological issues. "They went over me with a fine-tooth comb, and then they went over me with a finer-tooth comb," Calicott said.

Many members of the congregation said they doubted the abuse allegations against Calicott and believe he needs no forgiveness. Parish leaders and parents had supported his return.

"I would trust him any day with them," said Edie Thompson, 53, touching the heads of her two grandsons, ages 4 and 5.

a reasonable doubt."

But veteran prosecutor Harvey Giss, who has been Marcia Clark's mentor in the District Attorney's Office, said he believes that the case was lost when the jury was selected.

Rather than deliberate the case based on the evidence, the nine African-American jurors voted their bias against the criminal justice system and dragged the two white and one Latino juror along with them, Giss said.

"Are you telling me that amount of evidence could possibly have been discussed and analyzed in three hours?" said Giss. "Once you had that jury in place, I don't think anybody could have pulled it off. One juror said 'garbage in, garbage out.' Garbage in, garbage out applies to the jury as well."

University of California, Riverside sociology professor Ed Butler, a defense jury consultant on the McMartin child molestation case, said the verdict was clearly the result of jury racial bias that was exploited by the defense.

"Ultimately, I believe the jurors took into account race," Butler said. "But the only way that they could do that was because O.J. Simpson had a lot of money. If this had been a typical black person, the case would have been over in two weeks and the guy would have been in the slammer for the rest of his life."

Butler said that the prosecution erred in not exercising all of its preemptory challenges to get women, and particularly African-American women, off of the jury.

"You don't want women jurors on this case. O.J. was a hero to black women," he said. "Since it was an inter-mixed marriage, I'd have gone for white males, and if you can get some red necks in there, better yet."

George Washington University law professor Paul Butler (no relation to Ed Butler) said the notion that the Simpson jury was simply voting to clear an African-American man because he is African-American is nonsense. As a federal prosecutor, Butler said he convinced many African-American juries to convict African-American defendants.

The Simpson verdict appeared to be the result of a subtle mix of racial biases, Butler said, on the part of African-American jurors whose real experiences made them more skeptical of police testimony than white people, and of white prosecutors who didn't understand that that would happen.

"What's reasonable doubt to a black person might not be reasonable doubt to a white person," Butler said. "It's a little bit mystifying to a lot of African-Americans why white people don't get it."

"I found Marcia Clark's closing argument perplexing," he added. "It seemed to me she was saying, 'Mark Fuhrman is a racist. He especially hates inter-racial couples. He plants evidence, and he lies under oath. But what does that have to do with the O.J. Simpson case?' And, of course, black jurors don't understand that argument. They don't think she is in touch with reality."

CONVERGE: Black men gather for today's rally

spending any money as a demonstration of black economic power. No one knows how many will take part.

Sunday night, several thousand black men, women and children turned out for a "prayer and praise rally" at the D.C. Convention Center, kicking off events with revival-like fervor. People stamped feet and clapped hands to gospel music as vendors sold T-shirts, buttons, fruit and bottled water.

The idea originated with Farrakhan, and he has been its chief organizer, with the help of ousted NAACP chief Benjamin Chavis Jr. But it has attracted a wide coalition of support, including Jesse Jackson, Rosa Parks and several black members of Congress and mayors and ministers. Many say it's unfair now to characterize it as Farrakhan's event.

"It was his idea, he dropped the seeds," said

Clarence White, a postal worker who traveled from San Antonio for the rally. "But it's no longer his. It's ours."

Scattered early arrivals — black men of all ages and several women, too — milled about the event site on the National Mall. Several exchanged greetings of "Brother" or "Hey, black man!"

Vendors hawked T-shirts and hats that said "One in a million," and city crews began closing some streets along the Mall.

Three members of the Coalition for Jewish Concerns appeared on the Mall with signs that said "David Duke and Louis Farrakhan — two sides of the same coin." They got in a brief shouting match with some black passersby.

Farrakhan's remarks have infuriated Jews, Catholics, gays, feminists and others. He has called Judaism a "gutter religion" and recently defended his use of the term "bloodsuckers" to describe Jews or others who open businesses in minority communities and take the profits elsewhere.

Farrakhan canceled all his public appearances Sunday to prepare for the rally.

Huge speakers and giant video screens were being set up on the grassy Mall Sunday afternoon, and yellow tape marked the spot behind the Capitol where organizers planned to erect a stage.

Crowds were expected to begin converging on the Mall soon after midnight. Some city subway stations were opening at 12:30 a.m., five hours earlier than usual, to accommodate them.

Activities start at 5 a.m. with prayer and African drumming, followed by speeches, music and more prayer throughout the day. Weather forecasters predict a sunny and breezy day with temperatures in the 60s.

CROWN: Ascending the throne is a dream of many will perform the Tyler time-honored tradition she has been perfecting for months — a reverential bow to the high society that has cradled her.

It isn't just a demure nod, a coy little dip or a flouncy curtsy. This is Texas, remember. It's a nose-to-the-floor "full court bow," also known as the "Texas Bow," or modified "Dallas Dip."

With the exception of the World War II years, the pomp and pageantry of Texas festivals and their royalty have survived and even flourished through the anti-establishment '60s, the oil-busted late '80s and the downsized '90s.

In an age when many a teenager isn't cool without a tattoo, grungy clothes or a pierced nose, Tyler is a place where young ladies are still presented to society in white gowns and kid leather gloves.

"It's very anachronistic. It's like something out of the Civil War days," says Julia Sweeney, former society editor at the Dallas Times Herald. "They make something so social such an important part of their lives."

Life in Tyler, a town of 80,000 people about 100 miles east of Dallas, revolves around the Rose Festival.

The elite families, rich in the oil money that has purchased their grand antebellum homes and country club memberships, start planning a year in advance. And girls who would be queen start practicing their bows in grammar school.

The night Martie was designated this year's queen by the festival president, who has sole discretion, her parents and brother had gathered in the living room. When she entered, the president presented her with a bouquet of roses. Then, she knew.

"It was wild," says Martie, 19, a Delta Delta Delta sorority girl who is studying fashion and design at Texas Christian University.

The anticipation has been building since Martie was named queen a year ago. If truth be told, it's been building since she was a little girl in a green velvet dress, holding her father's hand at the Rose Festival's elegant garden tea party. Her father remembers Martie's big brown eyes gazing up at the queen in wonderment.

"It was a look of 'Will I ever be like this?'" Sam Wolf recalls.

You see, Martie is a legacy. Her aunt was queen 20 years ago and her mother was a lady-in-waiting. Her father owns a lumber company and is a past president of the festival — and was his wife's escort at the 1969 coronation before they were married.

Martie has done her part to be eligible — she was a Chamber of Commerce Azalea Belle, personal attendant to the 1991 queen and volunteer at a local hospital through high school.

Ascending the throne is a dream of many Southern girls who possess the right bloodlines and bank accounts. For some, it's a birthright.

"A Southern belle is born knowing she is going to be Southern royalty," Marilyn Schwartz, a columnist at the Dallas Morning News, wrote in her book "A Southern Belle Primer, or Why Princess Margaret Will Never Be a Kappa Kappa Gamma."

"If her mother was a queen or a princess or a duchess of the Pilgrimage or the Fiesta or the Cotton Carnival, then she knows one day if she does well in dancing school, behaves herself at her grandmother's pink teas and has a daddy who is willing to mortgage the family home to pay for her royal robes, then she, too, will one day wear a crown and sit on a throne."

The parents must be able to afford the honor — a subject none like to discuss. A coronation costume often costs more than $25,000 and involves a personal designer and more than a dozen seamstresses. Parents also must throw a tea party "open to the world" at the city rose garden — and that can cost upwards of $75,000. And the queen must buy a solid white gown for the Friday night ball.

Her ladies-in-waiting also must be dressed for coronation night in personally designed costumes that complement the festival's annual theme — this year, it's "Magical Wonderland." They, too, will have white gowns for the ball, all of which must be registered to guard against duplications.

Before Martie takes her bow at the coronation Thursday, her ladies-in-waiting will have paraded on stage and each will have taken her bow.

Martie will be in her personal dressing room, waiting. Her nails will have been polished in a French manicure and her hair-dresser, makeup lady and a handful of attendants will be fluttering around her.

When she hears those first notes of "Pomp and Circumstance," the moment she has been waiting for, practicing for, will have arrived. She will descend the stage stairs, dragging her train, so heavy it will pull her back with every step she takes.

SELENA: Testimony in Saldivar's murder trial to resume

she accepted in a white sequin dress of her own design.

But on the heels of that honor, she began branching out, opening her first Selena Etc. boutique in 1994, where women could buy clothing she helped design and have their hair and nails done.

When a manager was needed for that Corpus Christi store and another in San Antonio, Selena turned to Ms. Saldivar, a registered nurse who approached the family in 1991 about founding a Selena fan club.

After that, Ms. Saldivar quickly became a close friend, receiving expensive gifts upon the club's initial success.

But trouble between the two began shortly after the second store opened in January. The singer was busy on her most ambitious project — Selena's House of Design — her father received calls from angry parents who insisted they had received nothing for their $22 fan club membership fees.

Ms. Saldivar told Quintanilla the callers were trying to get a second fan club kit for free.

Later complaints poured in about the salon businesses, where court records show bills often were unpaid.

On March 9, Selena and relatives met Ms. Saldivar at the family's recording studio to discuss missing records and plans to move the fan club.

Suzette Quintanilla Arriaga, a drummer in her sister's band, verbally attacked Ms. Saldivar, who failed to explain what happened to the records.

"I pointed to Yolanda in her face and told her she was a liar and a thief," Mrs. Arriaga said. "I knew she was lying."

WEIGH: FCC considers a clearer, tighter definition

mission, which is responsible for making sure broadcasters comply with the law, says educational and informational programs are shows that further "the positive development of children 16 years of age and under in any respect, including the child's intellectual/cognitive or social/emotional needs."

That definition, the FCC admits, is vague and has resulted in confusion and some creative interpretations. Some stations have counted reruns of "The Jetsons" and "Leave it to Beaver" as fulfilling their educational obligations.

And a study released last week by Dale Kynkel, a communications professor at the University of California, Santa Barbara, found some stations classifying "America's Funniest Home Videos," "Mighty Morphin Power Rangers" and even "Yogi Bear" as educational.

"The FCC has failed to provide a definition to give guidance to broadcasters," FCC Chairman Reed Hundt admits.

But the agency is considering adopting a clearer and tighter definition of what constitutes an educational program. Industry and public comments on this and other proposals are due to the FCC on

"Unless the FCC adopts tougher rules, you are going to see more shows move into pro-social themes, what I call 'lite educational programs' — they qualify but they are not really educational," Montgomery said.

CBS President Peter Lund agrees.

"You need a clearer definition because look at the disparate number of programs classified as educational — that are not educational or informational," he said.

However, other network chiefs interviewed saw no need for a clearer definition.

NBC President Robert Wright:

"I think the definition is broad enough today. ... When you get a definition too tight, too narrow, what generally happens is you get a show that parents love and kids aren't interested in."

Chase Carey, chairman of Fox Television, said: "I can't figure out how you'd say it — what is educational — to put it in a set of definitions. The risk with a formula like here are the five tests and I comply is that you end up with something that kids probably won't watch."

When I opened it, a ring fell out," said Richard Fredrickson, a Corpus Christi paramedic. "It was covered with blood."

Refugees struggle to survive as fighting ebbs in Bosnia

BANJA LUKA, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Fighting ebbed Sunday in northwestern Bosnia, where up to 50,000 exhausted Serbs were struggling to survive after fleeing advances by government and Croat forces.

In a bitter twist in the 3 1/2-year-long war, many of the refugees are now at Omarska, site of one of the most notorious prison camps set up when Serb rebels overran much of Bosnia in 1992.

A field hospital has been treating both civilians and soldiers wounded in the latest fighting. Aid workers say some older refugees are dying, apparently exhausted after being uprooted by rapid shifts in front lines in northern Bosnia in the past six weeks.

The U.S.-brokered truce that started Thursday was largely observed throughout the country, U.N. officials said Sunday. The Muslim-led Bosnian government claimed on Saturday that it was halting its offensive, amid reports Serbia had to threaten to send in the Yugoslav army.

A mechanized Croatian army unit, including 22 tanks, was crossing from Bosnia back into Croatia on Sunday, U.N. spokeswoman Leah Melnick said in Zagreb. In addition, more than 2,500 crack Croatian troops moved away from positions along Bosnia's northern border with Croatia on Saturday, he said.

Government army commanders met for five hours in the Bosnian capital late Saturday and dispatched a senior officer to the bitterly contested northwest, apparently to ensure that government troops there observed the truce, army sources said.

Bosnian Serb military sources cited by the Belgrade news agency Tanjug, however, claimed fierce fighting continued in the northwest Sunday, including government shelling of Serb-held Prijedor. There was no independent confirmation.

Muslims and Croats in the northwest have a powerful motive to keep fighting: revenge for reported Serb atrocities during the Serb takeover of the region in spring and summer 1992.

John Sparrow of the international Red Cross said Saturday that some of the Serb refugees were living in a mine that served as a Serb detention center in 1992, but most are in the open.

U.N. credits citizens with success in Mozambique

Editor's note: Far from the debates in New York and disasters in the Balkans, there is a workaday U.N. world of fostering peace and progress in places like Mozambique. This is the second installment of a three-part series looking at the United Nations on its 50th anniversary.

By Patrick McDowell
Associated Press

SALAMANGA, Mozambique — The men from the United Nations gingerly lay explosives next to a pair of half-buried land mines, walk to safety, and shout the command: "Fire!"

BOOM! In a cloud of smoke, two more "Black Widows" are eliminated — anti-personnel mines that destroy legs and lives around the world.

It is only one small step on Mozambique's road back from 30 years of war. But for the United Nations, it's one important reason its beleaguered staff can feel some satisfaction this 50th-anniversary year.

Criticized as inefficient, ineffective or both in settling conflicts in Angola, Somalia and Yugoslavia, U.N. officials take pride in what has been accomplished in places like Mozambique.

They quickly give most credit to the people of this southern African nation. If the war-weary Mozambicans hadn't really wanted peace, there wouldn't be any to keep.

"I sometimes compare it with a bullfight," said U.N. Special Representative Erick de Mul, a chain-smoking, plain-spoken Dutchman.

The bull becomes "confused and weak," de Mul said, and "then you get it to do what you want. Both parties were exhausted and had no alternative."

Today, from the savannas of the south to the highlands of the far north, this land of sugar cane, cotton and deep poverty is at peace for the first time since the mid-1960s.

Last October, two years after the former Marxist regime signed a peace accord with South African-backed rebels, the United Nations organized multiparty elections, at a cost of $65 million. It produced results that Mozambique's 16 million people seem able to live with.

Former dictator Joaquim Chissano kept the presidency and his FRELIMO party captured a majority in Parliament. Guerrilla leader Afonso Dhlakama's RENAMO forms a strong opposition. The warring armies have demobilized, although worries persist that former soldiers will turn to banditry once token monthly U.N. support payments run out.

Some 1.7 million refugees have returned home in Africa's biggest repatriation. They find a ravaged homeland, but U.N. refugee officials say few are leaving again.

From elections to resettlement to reconstruction, the United Nations has played a big role.

Agencies like the U.N. Development Program, the U.N. Children's Fund and the Food and Agriculture Organization are spending hundreds of millions of dollars rebuilding the country from the ground up.

Look in back of our North Lake power plant, and you'll find, you guessed it, a lake. Two years ago, a small patch of a Southeast Asian aquatic plant called hydrilla was discovered there, causing us some concern.

You see, hydrilla grows two inches a day. That's pretty fast, if you think about it. It can grow to the surface and get in the way of skiing, fishing, swimming, virtually anything you can do in a lake. Hydrilla can also clog the power plant's intake pipes, lowering efficiency. So, as you can see, it's a real problem for everyone.

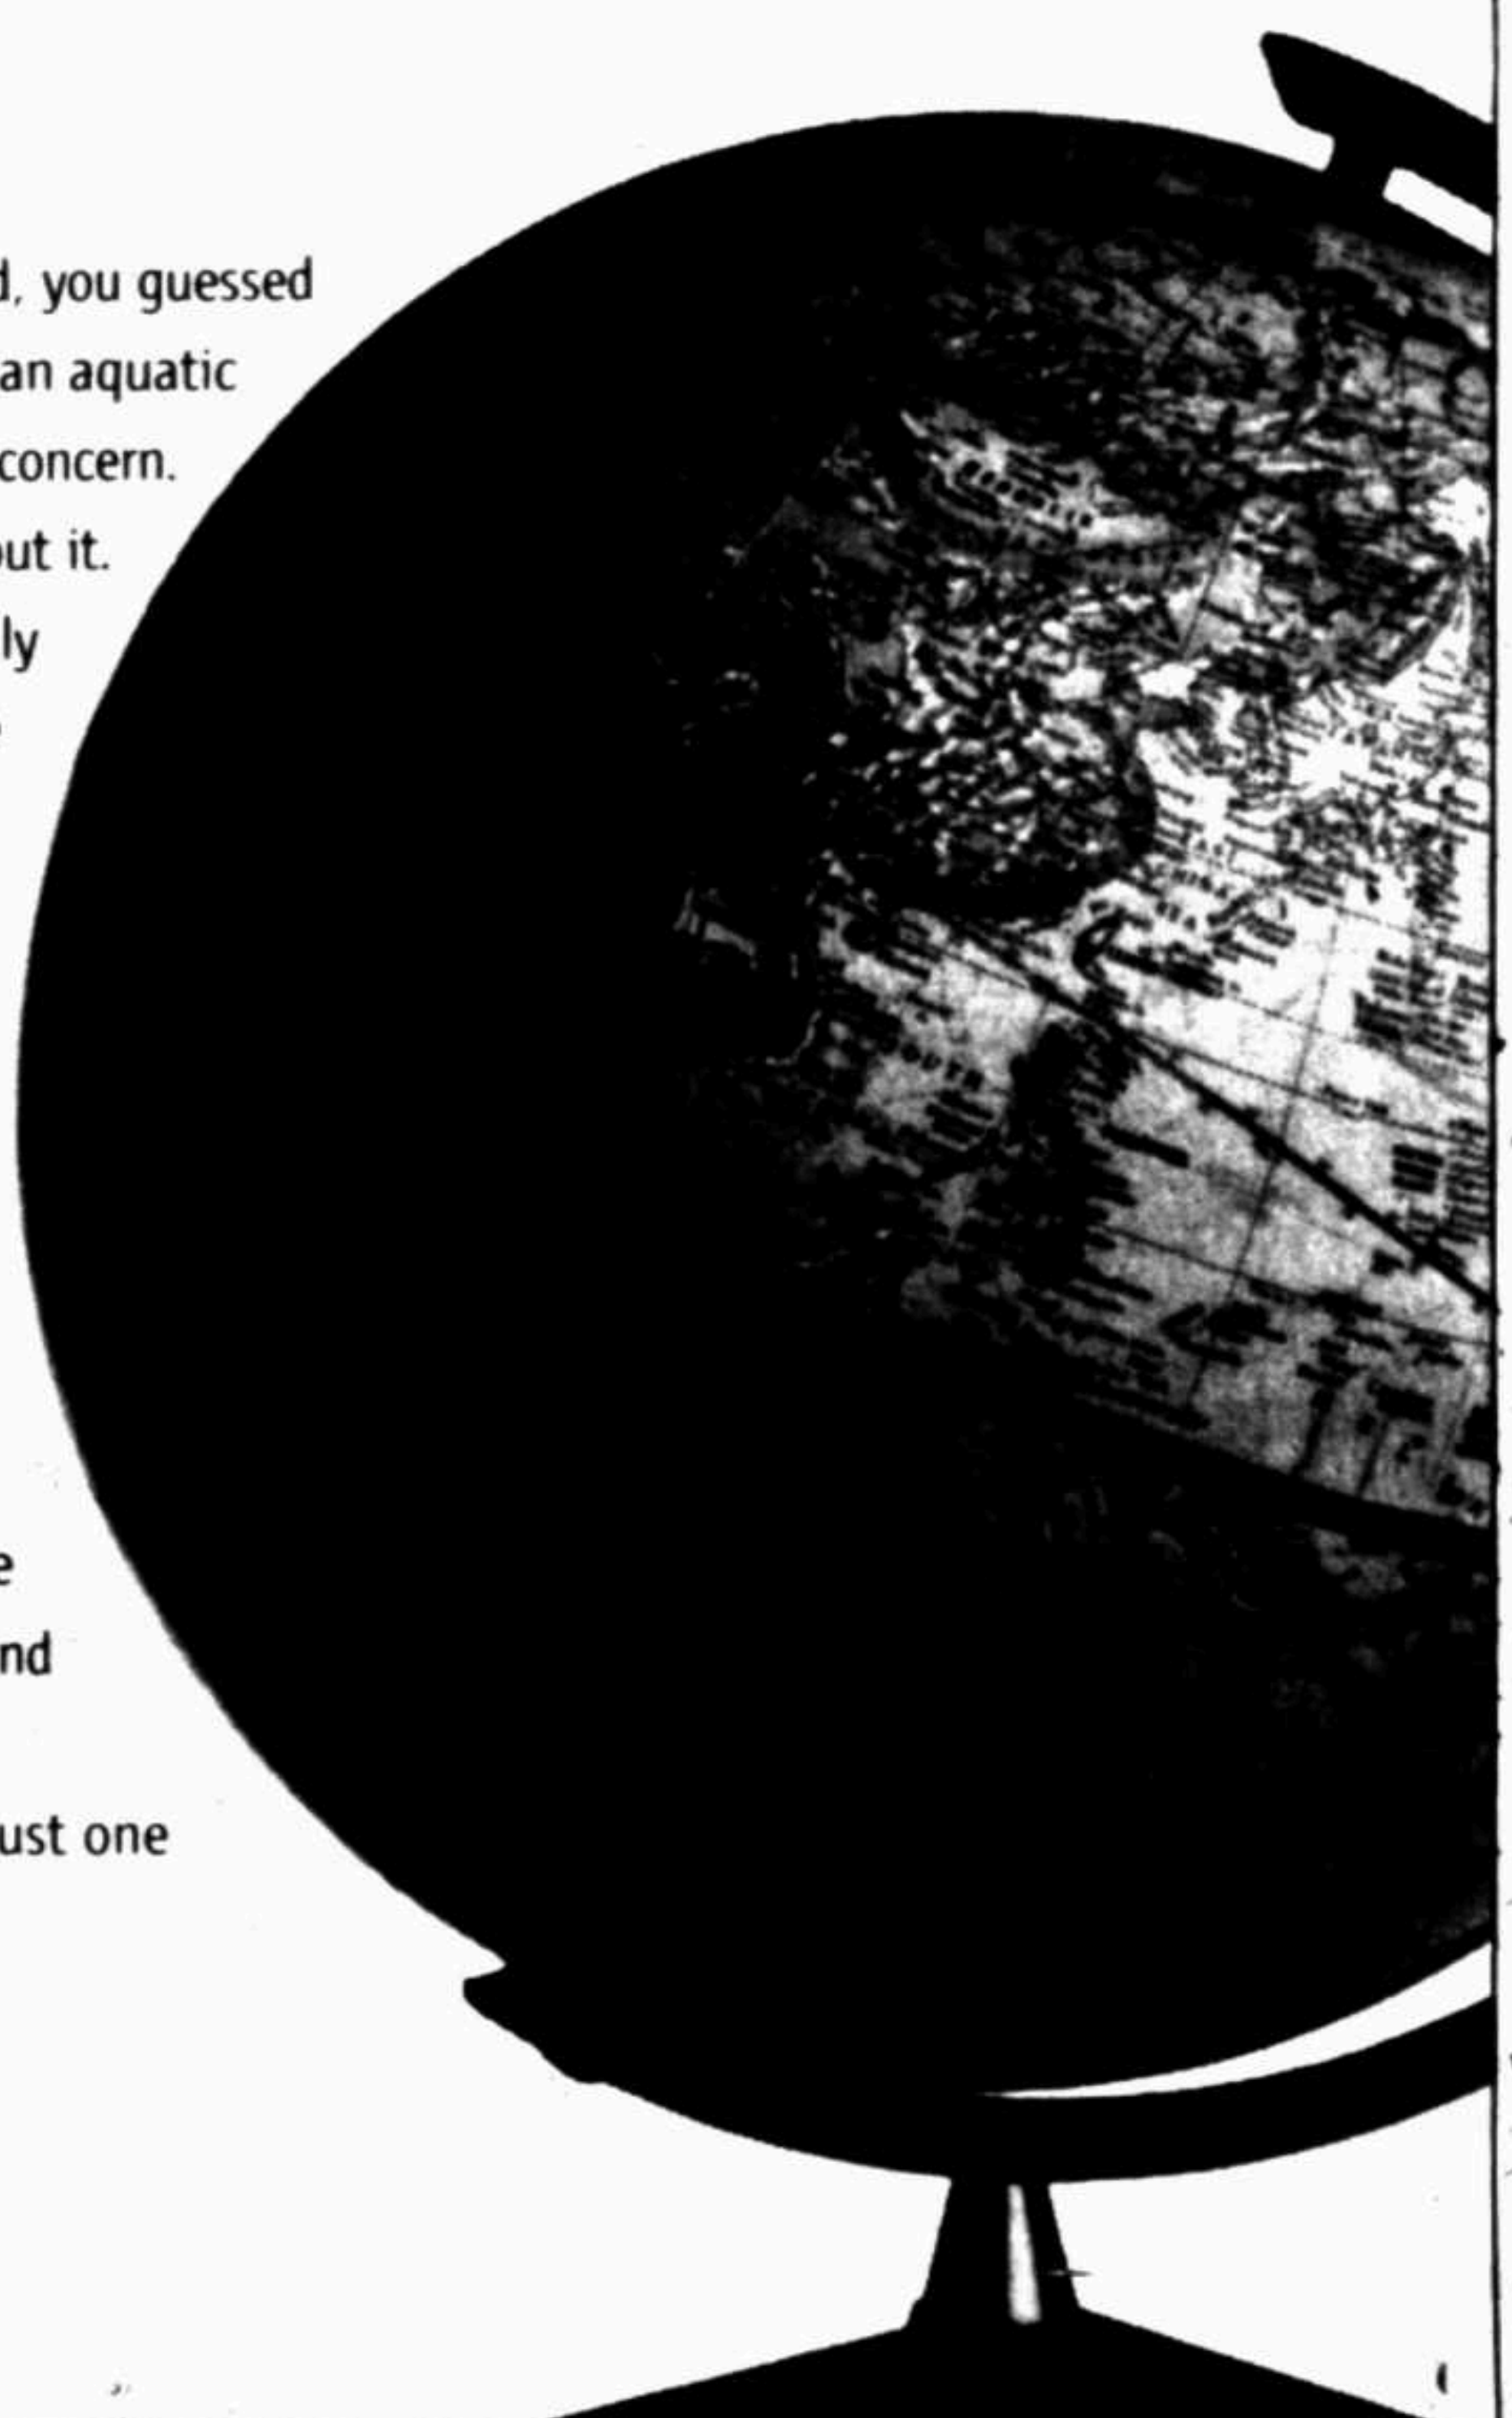

The Solution To The Problem In Our Back Yard Was Found Twelve Thousand Miles Away.

Now, there are several ways that have been used to control hydrilla. Some lakes have been completely drained while others have been bombarded with expensive chemicals. But, none of these treatments was right for us. So, we continued looking. And we found a solution that had been discovered at the source of our problem, where hydrilla came from, Southeast Asia. It's a grass-eating fish that prefers to eat hydrilla and will help to keep it in check, naturally.

Finding creative solutions like this one from halfway around the world is just one more way we're working to build a better electric company.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 16, 1995

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE:

Adopting a more conservative attitude will pay handsome dividends. Traditional values and methods count big with employers. Curb a tendency to overpund. Having a keen eye for a bargain will benefit your career this December. Once 1996 gets underway, new romantic connections will be made. An older person plays a major role in your business or financial affairs next summer. Use your fine artistic talents to turn a nice profit.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Keeping abreast of current trends will hasten career progress. You are able to turn back a challenge from a co-worker. Communicate clearly and avoid those who gossip.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You now have the power and confidence to make your dreams of romance come true. Wonderful gains are featured if you are willing to take a chance. Remain on your own turf this evening.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): To prevent financial worries, guard against extravagance and risky investment schemes. Those in the arts experience a burst of creativity. Make certain loved ones do not feel neglected while you focus on your work.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A strong belief in your long-range goals helps you overcome any obstacles. Others will want to climb aboard your success train. Let them if they are prepared to carry their share of the load.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your ability to come up with novel ideas impresses someone influential. Excitement reigns on the financial and social fronts. Put your best foot forward.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Do not take a delay as a denial. Authority figures will become more responsive once you make a serious commitment. Hang in there! Give a complex work or financial project the old college try.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A new admirer wants to get together with you. Long-distance travel could be involved. An almost-forgotten investment will pay off better than projected.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Stop wasting precious time worrying about things that may never happen. Focus your attention on immediate financial concerns. Loved ones have your best interests at heart. Listen to their admonitions but trust your own instincts.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): The emphasis now is on making a fresh start. Smarten up! Let go of disappointing projects and dead-end relationships. Solo efforts will be highly productive. Lunching with an old friend increases your resolve.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): The work week begins on a lucky note. Take a chance on an unusual idea or a May-December romance. Your words are inspiring, your allure strong. A love relationship heats up following a candid conversation.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Prominent people are influenced by your ideas now. Keep an eye on a co-worker who may try to take credit for your work. Put everything in writing to higher-ups before making an oral presentation.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Take responsibility for your actions. Day trips can bring excellent business results, reducing the need for more expensive travel. Make good use of fax and e-mail. Keep your schedule flexible to accommodate last-minute changes.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q. 1 - As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠A J 8 6 4 ♣J ♢K J 4 ♠J 7 6 4

The bidding has proceeded:
NORTH EAST SOUTH WEST
1♠ Pass 1♠ Pass
4♠ Pass 7♠ Pass
What action do you take?

A - This is a close decision, but we feel that your fit for opener's suit, fifth spade and a singleton are just enough to merit a move. The obvious choice is to show partner your support. Bid five diamonds.

Q. 2 - Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A 7 2 ♣A J 9 5 4 ♠A K J 6 4 Void
Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one spade. What action do you take?

A - Difficult hands are notoriously difficult to bid if you start with a takeout double, especially if the opponents preempt. You can tell partner about the two-suited nature of your hand by first cue-bidding and then, should partner respond in clubs, correcting to diamonds.

Q. 3 - As South vulnerable, you hold:
♠A J 9 8 ♣A J 5 ♢K Q J 10 4 5 2

The bidding has proceeded:
EAST SOUTH WEST
1♠ 1♠ 1♠ Pass 2♠ Pass
What do you bid now?

A - Don't be in too great a rush to introduce your major. If you bypass two suits to bid spades, partner will likely read you for a five-card suit. Our choice is two diamonds.

Q. 4 - Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠A K Q J ♣J 10 2 ♢J 5 ♠K Q 10 8

The bidding has proceeded:
SOUTH WEST NORTH EAST
1♠ Pass 1♠ Pass
1♠ Pass INT Pass
What do you bid now?

A - You are certainly worth another move. On this auction it is quite possible that partner has a five-card heart suit and perhaps only one diamond stopper. If that is the case, the suit contract might be preferable. Bid two hearts.

Q. 5 - Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠7 5 ♠A K Q 8 7 ♢J 5 ♠4 10 7 6

The bidding has proceeded:
NORTH EAST SOUTH WEST
1♠ Pass 1♠ Pass
1♠ Pass 7♠ Pass
What do you bid now?

A - This one should be the popular choice. Whether you play fourth-suit forcing or not, a rebid of two clubs is automatic and might elicit an unforced heart preference. Don't even think about a jump in hearts, despite the quality of your five-card suit.

Q. 6 - Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠A K 10 2 ♠A K 3 ♢J ♠A K 7 3 2

The bidding has proceeded:
SOUTH WEST NORTH EAST
1♠ Pass 1♠ Pass
2♠ Pass 3♠ Pass
What do you bid now?

A - You have not come anywhere close to expressing your strength yet — had your long suit been a major you would probably have opened with a demand bid. We would, therefore, complete a picture of the holding by bidding the heart fragment. Our choice is three hearts.

Nunn's decision leaves void in DC

Though anticipated, Sen. Sam Nunn's decision not to run for re-election is a disappointment for President Clinton and his dwindling Democratic allies in Congress. But it is an even greater blow to the cause of bipartisanship on a host of tough foreign policy and defense issues, where Nunn wielded great influence by listening, asking questions and mastering his brief. We did not always agree with Nunn's positions, but his departure will diminish the cause of reasoned discourse in Washington.

When he was elected to the Senate in 1972, little about Nunn's career as a Georgia state legislator suggested he would become a major force on Capitol Hill. His great-uncle, Rep. Carl Vinson, and another Georgian, Sen. Richard Russell, were known for their expertise and influence on military matters. If anything, Nunn exceeded their example. But he made his mark not because his colleagues could predict his views, but because they knew that he would arrive at them after careful study.

As a member and later chairman of the Armed Services Committee until the Republican sweep of 1992, Nunn championed generous financial support of the armed forces, but opposed casually sending them into combat. He supported the Reagan-era military buildup and warned more recently against financing domestic programs through defense cuts.

He consistently, and wisely, questioned the use of American force in Bosnia, Haiti, Somalia and other places of unrest, but asserted the right of Congress to approve in advance the use of American combat troops overseas. Most famously, he opposed the war against Iraq, in part because he knew that Gen. Colin Powell and other military leaders were among those urging that sanctions be exhausted first.

At pivotal moments Nunn challenged Republican policies on defense matters, playing an important role in supporting the cause of arms control. He blocked President Reagan's attempt, for example, to re-interpret the Antiballistic Missile Treaty with the Soviet Union and embark on his Star Wars defense system.

Despite his challenges to the Republicans, Nunn never fulfilled the hopes of centrist Democrats that he would run for president himself. His prospects were hampered by his more conservative record on social issues, placing him out of step with the more liberal blocs in his party. For example, Nunn opposed President Clinton's decision to lift the ban on homosexuals in the military. Nunn leaves a legacy of unusual accomplishment and independence that will be missed in the sullen discord of today's Washington.

ANOTHER VIEW

Clinton's veto could slash Republican funding bills

Zorro, the famed swordsman, slashed a "Z" on his foes. Bill Clinton's mark seems destined to be a "V," signifying his veto of GOP funding bills that target his favorite programs. Consider, for example, COPS.

Part of the 1994 Crime Law, COPS — Community Oriented Policing Services — aspires to put 100,000 more police officers on America's streets by 1999. So far, boasts Attorney General Janet Reno, the Justice Department has issued grants to fund about 25,000 new officers, and about 10,000, having completed training, actually walk the beat.

However, the Senate may follow the House in zero-budgeting COPS, instead giving the states $10 billion in block grants to fund law-enforcement needs of their choice. Clinton, unseating his Papermate, has promised to veto any bill that threatens his 100,000-cops strategy.

Congress is right to zero-out many Big Government programs. But putting more police shoes on America's mean streets isn't exactly liberal fardel. If Republicans cross swords with Clinton over this, they may wind up with a "V" on their backsides — and some tall explaining to do to crime-plagued voters.

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set a few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

■ Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification. Letters not including this information will not be considered for publication.

■ They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations. The briefer the letter, the better its chance of publication.

■ Only one letter per month per writer can be published.

■ Letters will be edited for length, taste and legal reasons and are accepted only on that basis. Letters which are difficult to reduce in length will be returned to the writer to be edited before being re-submitted.

■ We do not publish "open" letters, copies of letters sent to others or multiple signatures.

Because we cannot research and verify all information in letters, by publishing them we neither imply nor guarantee the accuracy of information stated by writers.

Letters should be sent to: The Editor, Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland, TX 79702.

JACK ANDERSON

Powell must choose path of public service

WASHINGTON — Colin Powell has virtually ruled out running as an independent candidate for president, according to sources close to the retired general.

Powell, who publicly has appeared intrigued by the idea of an independent candidacy, remains undecided whether to seek the White House as a Republican and is described by one intimate as "really agonizing this thing through." This source said Powell has decided not to wait beyond early November to announce his plans and is discussing his political options on a daily basis.

The former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff has often taken a pox-on-both-your-houses attitude toward Republicans and Democrats. He's derided Democrats for intellectual bankruptcy and for botching foreign policy. But he's also ridiculed Republican orthodoxy on affirmative action, abortion and school prayer.

Powell's advisers, however, believe there is room for detente with Republicans, and believe he would portray himself as the candidate who could recapture the party of Lincoln from extremists. This would be done by accentuating a litany of values he shares with conservatives — personal responsibility, self-discipline, moral leadership, strong foreign policy and small government — thereby enabling Powell to win the nomination despite flunking the far-right litmus tests.

Powell's current soul-searching is focused on what one top adviser told us was the "Cuomo-Kennedy question: Why do I want to be president, and what do I want to do with the presidency?" Powell understands how this seemingly simple question doomed Sen. Ted Kennedy's primary challenge to Jimmy Carter in 1980, and deterred former New York Gov. Mario Cuomo from throwing his hat in the ring in 1988 and 1992. Unlike both men, however, Powell is "not consumed by ambition," which has almost become a prerequisite for a presidential run, says a family friend who is arguing against a Powell candidacy.

While Powell ponders his future, he apparently has a rough draft of the speech he'll eventually deliver announcing his decision.

Sources say he is drawing inspiration from a 1993 speech by Teresa Heinz explaining her decision not to seek the Senate seat of her late husband, Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa. Powell had just left his post at the Pentagon when Teresa Heinz made her speech, which struck an emotional cord with Powell and moved him to tout it to friends.

Heinz helped Powell realize that there were many routes to public service and many — even most — did not lead to Washington. One source credited her with helping Powell to "break out of the cocoon in which he had been travelling for 35 years.... When he heard the speech he realized that a person like himself, who does believe in service, can render it in many ways. He had (up to that time) thought of service to the nation as something through the government or the military."

Powell clings to the core message of Heinz's 1993 speech: "The best ideas for change unfortunately no longer come from political campaigns," which she referred to as the "graveyards of real ideas and the birthplace of empty promises.... It is sad how often, in pursuing public offices, candidates are willing to sacrifice the very principles that make politics a noble act."

Inspired in part by Heinz' example, Powell has begun charting a course of public service that doesn't include elective office but doesn't preclude it either. He and his wife, Alma, have become involved in Best Friends, a privately funded non-profit foundation devoted to promoting sexual abstinence and drug-free living among teen-agers. Not only has the experience been gratifying, but it will help gird Powell against attacks that he's too liberal for GOP primary voters.

Befitting a great military leader, Powell's political battle plan is full of options.

UNHAPPY WARRIOR — Someone might want to remind Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., that he is one of the most powerful members of the Republican Congress.

Pressler bombed recently at a New York fund-raiser when, rather than boasting about his power, he ticked off a litany of reasons why he might lose in 1996. The performance distressed Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., who eventually rose to buck up Pressler and to remind the audience of Pressler's power as chairman of the Commerce Committee. Pressler told us that it was part of the "Mutt & Jeff" routine that often accompanies such events. Others believe he needs a crash course in political self-esteem.

CHARLEY REESE

Phony philanthropists should pay for welfare

What's wrong with providing $8 billion to pay for child care for welfare mothers, as the U.S. Senate voted to do?

If you don't know the answer, then you probably don't understand the immorality of the welfare state.

What's wrong with providing $8 billion to buy child care for welfare mothers is that the $8 billion must be taken from the labor of mothers and fathers who are working hard to stay off welfare.

Thus these people, families and single moms must not only pay for their own child care, their own housing and their own medical care, but they must also pay for the child care of women on welfare. And they are already paying for the welfare recipient's housing, medical care, food stamps and monthly check.

The inescapable truth, since government has no money of its own, is that a welfare state turns morality upside down. The welfare state rewards indolence and taxes labor; it rewards irresponsibility and punishes (with taxes) responsible behavior; it subsidizes dependency and punishes independence.

In other words, when you live in a welfare state and play by the traditional rules of working hard, saving, postponing gratification and taking care of yourself and your family, then you lose.

The welfare state puts a millstone around your neck so that you must not only support your family but other people's families as well. And, if you complain, you will be called selfish and other bad names.

This sordid confiscation and redistribution of the fruits of labor is bad enough, but then we have to listen to the odious rhetoric of senators pretending to be great, compassionate philanthropists.

"We must do this and we must do that," they thunder. Well, OK, you do it, senators. Take the money out of your checking accounts and provide these things you call necessities for welfare moms. Most of you are millionaires anyway.

Certainly from the look of Sen. Ted Kennedy, one of the worst of the pseudo-philanthropists, anything that would discourage him from eating and drinking his ample personal fortune would be beneficial to his health.

But don't take this money out of the hides of hard-working men and women and then regale us with hot-air speeches about your generosity. Wage earners, too poor to take advantage of loopholes and to hire fancy tax lawyers, are being taxed to death by the phony compassion of welfare-state socialists.

The present tax system — an inescapable part of the welfare state — is especially vicious because it taxes the same labor over and over. People are taxed when they earn; when they spend, they are taxed again; if they save, they are taxed again; if they invest, they are taxed again; and when they die, they are taxed again. When their children inherit — if they inherit — they fall victim to the multiple taxing system.

Americans have been duped into adopting a vile, unjust system by being fed pap about compassion not only by politicians but by the welfare industry and by the press.

Government is not human and therefore cannot deal in either charity or compassion. As a Western judge once said of corporations, the government "has no pants to kick or soul to damn."

Government can apply force (its main function) or refrain from applying force. It can confiscate money and award money. But it cannot practice charity, because to take from one at the point of a gun to give to another is theft, not charity.

Welfare should be an entirely private function, and the government should end the practice altogether at the federal level and do it only for the truly disabled at the state level.

Otherwise, polls will continue to enslave one group to buy the votes of another.

MIKE ROYKO

Legal system isn't always rigged for rich whites

It is true that the legal system is rigged so that white males with money can get away with all sorts of terrible crimes?

This is what we've been hearing from the admirers of O.J. Simpson, who keep popping up in TV interviews and on the talk shows.

It's usually phrased something like this: "Rich white guys have been doing this for years, so why not O.J.?"

Analysts say that this lack of equal justice for all is one of the reasons blacks were so delighted that Simpson was acquitted.

When something is repeated often enough on TV, it's soon accepted as gospel.

And maybe it is true. But maybe it isn't. We know that a greater percentage of black men go to prison than white men. But that has nothing to do with wealth. Young black men commit more crimes.

The problem with trying to compare the Simpson case with others is that there are no reliable statistics on rich white guys accused of killing their wives. Or on homicidal rich black guys, either.

The fact is, rich men seldom murder their wives. Why should they? One of the benefits of being rich is that you can dump her, hire lawyers to do the haggling, pay her off, and still have more than enough money left to buy a hairpiece and gold chains and run off to an island with a young bimbo.

Although murder is less costly and more decisive, a guy risks being caught and having his lifestyle seriously altered.

But occasionally, a rich guy decides to take the chance. And when he is accused of the crime, it is big news and we usually read about it.

And from what I've seen, being white and rich doesn't get a wife killer much sympathy in a courtroom.

You may remember J. Nat Davis, a North Shore swell. As a Chicago Tribune story described him:

"Two years ago, retired millionaire J. Nat Davis spent much of his time golfing at the Knollwood Golf Club in Lake Forest (Ill.), getting rubdowns at the Evanston YMCA and dining out at various North Shore eateries."

"When the chill of winter arrived, he would head to his home in Naples, Fla., for more golf and the leisure he had enjoyed since his retirement at age 55."

"In the midst of this idyllic life, Davis also spent a great deal of time plotting the murder of his ex-wife."

And he was very clever. When he shot his ex-wife, he didn't slop blood and DNA clues all over the place or go for any goofy rides in a white Bronco.

He plugged her in the privacy of her home and dumped the murder weapon in a forest preserve lagoon. He would have pulled it off if some white suburban cops, on a brilliant hunch, hadn't found the gun.

They went to court with skimpy evidence compared with that presented against Simpson. But a white judge, a white prosecutor, a white jury and the white cops sent white millionaire Davis to prison.

And his two adult white children said they wished the sentence had been harsher.

Not long ago, a Chicago executive named James Kelly was sentenced to 35 years in prison.

In some ways, the case was similar to the murder of Nicole Brown. Kelly's ex-wife was stabbed to death near the front door of her suburban home. There were no witnesses and not a speck of physical evidence that Kelly did it. No bloody clothes, no hair, no limousine driver, no DNA, no Kato — man or pooch.

So how did they nail Kelly without evidence?

He had unsuccessfully tried to hire someone to kill his ex-wife. So they prosecuted him for soliciting a murder.

The white jurors believed the white cops and the white prosecutors, and a white judge delivered the sentence.

And off to prison went Kelly, who didn't leave behind even one teeny-weeny clue.

If Kelly watched the O.J. trial, he probably asked his lawyers: "Why couldn't you find me so kindhearted a jury?"

So how do we explain the outcome of these two cases? As rich white guys, they could afford smart lawyers. Why were they found guilty?

I don't know. Maybe white suburban cops just don't like rich white guys.

Oprah or Koppel ought to do a show about that.

Guerrillas ambush, kill 6 Israeli soldiers in Lebanon

N.Y. Times News Service

JERUSALEM — In a bloody day that underscored the remaining obstacles to Middle East peace, six Israeli soldiers were killed and another was seriously wounded Sunday in an ambush by Iranian-backed guerrillas in southern Lebanon.

The dawn attack — launched when an Israeli patrol truck ran over a powerful explosive charge — was the deadliest this year in the border zone of southern Lebanon occupied by Israeli troops. It came after a similar bombing assault in the same area Thursday which killed three Israeli soldiers and wounded six.

The militant Islamic group Hezbollah, or Party of God, claimed responsibility for the attacks. In a radio broadcast from Lebanon, Hezbollah said the strikes represented an escalation of its efforts to scuttle the Arab-Israeli peace process.

The two attacks brought the number of Israeli soldiers killed in Lebanon this year to 22, more than in all of 1994 when 21 died, according to the Israeli army.

In response, Israeli artillery shelled suspected guerrilla strongholds and combat jets flew over the area. Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin called an emergency session of the cabinet for Tuesday to consider further reprisals after the Jewish holiday today of Simhat Torah.

"The escalation in Lebanon is very dangerous to all sides," Foreign Minister Shimon Peres said. The attack, near the village of Aishiyeh, is likely to further sour prospects for a breakthrough in long-stalled peace negotiations between Israel and Syria.

Israeli leaders claim Syria, as the main power broker in Lebanon, could stem the flow of arms to Hezbollah and pressure the guerrillas to halt their attacks. Israel established its "security zone" nine miles deep across Lebanon's southern border in 1985 to shield its northern towns from cross-border raids and missile attacks.

"The Syrians are not preventing Hezbollah from acting against us as they could. Of this there is no doubt," Israeli army chief of staff Amnon Shahak told reporters.

Four years of intermittent negotiations between Israel and Syria have failed to produce an agreement despite the peace accords between Israel and the Palestinians in 1993 and Israel and Jordan last year. Syria is demanding a full withdrawal from the Golan Heights, captured by Israeli in 1967, and says Israel must withdraw from Lebanon.

Signalling the deep divisions that endure, Secretary of State Warren Christopher announced last week that he would not attempt a shuttle mission between Israel and Syria when he attends an economic summit in Amman, Jordan, later this month.

NASA scrubs shuttle launch for sixth time

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — For a record-tying sixth time, NASA delayed the launch of space shuttle Columbia on Sunday because of thick, low clouds that just wouldn't budge.

Shuttle managers said they would try again Thursday, at the earliest.

Launch controllers waited as long as possible to send Columbia and its seven astronauts on their way, but finally gave up early in the afternoon. By then, it was getting dark at the emergency landing strips overseas and the weather at the launch site was not improving.

Commander Kenneth Bowersox and his crew waited in vain more than five hours for the sky to clear.

"Thanks a lot guys," said launch director James Harrington. "We gave it the college try, but the weather beat us this time."

NASA sent the astronauts to the pad an hour later than planned to extend the launch window into the afternoon. But it didn't help. A cold front stalled over the Kennedy Space Center and kept a cloud cover overhead.

Columbia — NASA's oldest shuttle — tied its own record for launch scrubs. A satellite-delivery mission by Columbia was delayed six times before finally getting under way in January 1986, almost a month late. This science mission already is three weeks late.

NASA cannot launch Columbia before Thursday because of a military rocket launch scheduled for Tuesday. The Air Force, which tracks all launches for safety purposes, needs one to two days between flights to modify its systems. If the unmanned rocket launch slips to Wednesday, then Columbia's seventh launch try will slide to Friday, said shuttle launch manager Loren Shriver. Columbia's repeated delays have disrupted NASA's flight schedule for the rest of this year, if not longer. NASA had hoped to launch Atlantis on Nov. 1 to the Russian space station Mir; that docking mission now has been delayed at least one week. If Columbia isn't aloft by next Sunday, its mission will be bumped into late November and Atlantis will fly next, Shriver said.

This was the second weather delay for the 16-day laboratory-research mission. Hurricane Opal forced a postponement as did a slew of mechanical breakdowns: a leaky engine valve, sluggish hydraulics, a failed computer signal-relay unit. Yet another delay was caused by a last-minute engine inspection.

Sunday was the closest NASA got to launching Columbia on this mission. The countdown clocks got down to five minutes.

"I don't take it very personally on a day like today when we do battle with the weather," Shriver said.

NASA officials insist neither Columbia's age nor its recent tuneup had anything to do with the recent equipment problems. As late as Friday, technicians were swapping out computer components.

Sunday's scrub cost $1.1 million in spent fuel and overtime pay.

I'd like to take this opportunity to tell you something about myself and this revolutionary method of auto repair.

Midland has been my home all of my adult life. I've been in the Air Conditioning business since 1981 and started my own business, "Air Control" in 1989. Four years ago The Paintless Dent Repair System came into my life. When I saw this amazing method of Dent Removal, I had to learn it. This method does not use ice or heat. I have specially designed tools to go behind the metal and work the dent out slowly to where it vanishes before my very eyes. What is so great about this is that you do not have to repaint and are able to keep your factory paint. Where you might have your car stay at the regular body shop for one to two weeks, I can do it in two to four "days" unless damage is severe. Thus, you do not have to worry about paint mismatches or body fillers cracking a year or two later. All in all the bottom line is that you will spend 30% to 50% less to have your vehicle fixed and brought back to original form. All work is 100% guaranteed.

With the recent hail storm there has been an influx of out of town hail damage repair businesses moving in. After the hail storms have passed, all damage repaired and the others are long gone. I will still be here. You can count on the Dent Angel now and in the future.

Thank you for your time
Sincerely,
Jim Sicard

Report: 2-parent families' numbers make comeback

WASHINGTON (AP) — After two decades of declining numbers, two-parent families are on the rebound, according to a Census Bureau report. But, while the number of two-parent families has risen since 1990, the percentage of families headed by a single parent is continuing to rise.

Nearly one-third of all American families with children were headed by a single parent in 1994, according to the survey released today. Those numbers have steadily increased from 13 percent in 1970, to 22 percent in 1980, and 28 percent in 1990; the figure rose to 30.8 percent in 1994.

The survey found sharply higher numbers among black families, where 65 percent of homes with children are today headed by single parents. Among whites, the figure is 25 percent.

"It's not good news. The trend line continues to move in a disturbing direction," said William Mattox, vice president for policy at the Washington-based Family Research Council.

Two-parent families with children, whose numbers had steadily fallen by almost 1 million from 25.8 million to 24.9 million between 1970 and 1990, increased between 1990 and 1994 to 25.6 million from 24.9 million. At the same time, though, the percentage of families with two parents fell slightly, to 69.2 percent in 1994 from nearly 72 percent in 1990.

A Census official attributed the numbers to simple demographics. And, recognizing that out-of-wedlock childbirth has become a hot political issue for welfare reformers, he cautioned policymakers against drawing any sociological conclusions.

"Baby boomers are just getting to that age where they are less likely to be divorced than when they were in their twenties, and more likely to be married with children," said Donald Hernandez, head of the Census Bureau's Marriage and Family Branch, which wrote the report.

"The numbers don't mean there's been any shift in the way people are behaving in terms of divorce or out-of-wedlock childbirth," he added.

Still, children's advocates said the report proved the folly of Republican reforms in Congress.

"This message of continued growth in single-parent families means this is a crazy time for Congress to be cutting child care systems, a crazy time for them to be shortchanging women who need child support," said Deborah Weinstein, a family-income analyst for the Children's Defense Fund.

The liberal Washington group is fighting GOP proposals to deny cash welfare to unwed teen-age mothers and charge fees to poor women seeking state help with child-support collection.

Among other findings from the March 1994 survey of 58,000 households:

■ There were about 9.9 million single mothers heading households with children in 1994, compared to 1.6 million single fathers.

■ Single fathers were twice as common in white families (accounting for 16 percent of all white single parents) as in black families (accounting for 8 percent of all black single parents).

■ Of the 11.4 million single parents, 9 million owned or rented their own home, 1.8 million lived in a relative's home and 650,000 lived in the home of a nonrelative.

■ The number of families with three or more children at home, which fell from 10.4 million in 1970 to 6.5 million in 1990, rebounded to 7.1 million in 1994.

Clown may be jailed for feeding meters

SANTA CRUZ, Calif. (AP) — A clown claims he would rather be jailed than quit illegally feeding downtown parking meters for strangers.

Mr. Twister, a.k.a. Cory McDonald, was chased down the street Monday by a meter reader who shouted for police after she saw him slipping coins into a stranger's parking meter in this popular seaside resort town.

"She was pointing me out to officers, so I started waving my arms and shouting out, 'Here I am. Come on down, boys,'" Mr. Twister said.

Police wrote him a ticket for breaking a law against "unauthorized deposit of coins" in parking meters. But Mr. Twister said he won't pay.

"No matter what they do to me, I'm never going to stop," the clown said.

A newspaper story detailing his run-ins with the law may have fanned the flames of rebellion. Mr. Twister, easily recognized in his full clown attire, said people give him coins and encourage him to keep feeding meters.

CANBERRA, Australia — An Australian man has been fined $1,500 for quacking like a duck on his radio transmitter, a court official in the Tasmanian town of Launceston said Wednesday.

Don Desmond Davey, 57, was convicted Tuesday of broadcasting something that was not speech, the official said.

Davey pleaded guilty to 16 charges over the operation and possession of unlicensed radio communications equipment and was also ordered to hand over his radio.

Bugs that die at the peak of passion are swarming again, scientists say

CLIMAX, Ga. (AP) — Love bugs, those romantic little flies that die at the peak of passion when they splatter on the fronts of cars and trucks, are swarming again from coastal Georgia to Texas.

"I think they're worse this year than they've ever been," said Dixie Hutto, owner of a restaurant in this farming community of 200 in southwestern Georgia.

Scientists say there's no practical way to get rid of the quarter-inch black flies, which swarm over Deep South highways every May and early fall.

Love bugs get their name from their mating ritual. They link in flight while the male fertilizes the 200 to 300 eggs carried by the female.

Because love bugs are attracted to the heat and exhaust fumes of highways, the mating is often fatal. Millions of the bugs, still linked, end up splattered on windshields and bumpers.

"It's a rough way to go," said H.A. Denmark, a retired University of Florida entomologist who has studied love bugs extensively. "I don't recommend it, but they die happy, I guess."

Love bugs can clog radiators, causing engines to overheat. They can smear on windshields, reducing visibility. And the acids in their decomposing bodies can ruin auto paint.

Everyone agrees that love bugs are a nuisance. Some motorists curse them. Others make jokes about them: "What is one love bug? An unloved bug."

But nobody really knows what to do about them. Some residents hang bug screens on the front of their cars and trucks. Others just wash their vehicles more often.

Leonard Hanson's dedication to Lionism comes from "the friendships you make and the benefits that you get for helping people that really need help."

A lion's share of success

The rose-colored glasses Leonard Hanson views life through have been ground in experience and tempered with reality. "I believe in trying to keep a positive outlook on everything and saying something nice to someone every day," said Hanson, a Lions' Club member since 1958.

Hanson helped organize and charter the District 2-HA1 Lions Eye Bank in September of 1972, served as its executive director for 21 years, received the Extension Award in 1984 for organizing the Midland Suburban Lions Club that year. He and wife, Shirley, is a life member of the Lions Eye Bank, The Texas Lions Camp, Texas Lions Foundation and the Century Club Key Holders of the Texas Lions Camp, and was inducted into the Texas Lions "Hall of Fame" at the State Convention in Lubbock in May of 1993.

After 35 years of perfect attendance at Lions meetings, Hanson, who received the Grand Master Key for sponsoring 50 new members into Lions International,

(and now has sponsored 75 new members), still overflows with enthusiasm.

His dedication to Lionism comes from, Hanson said, "The friendships that you make and the benefits that you get for helping people that really need help. The results you see from the hard work that we do."

In the beginning, when he was asked to join the Southside Lions in 1958, he and other members walked many a mile raising funds.

"We covered every house in town," Hanson said. "We went to the door, knocked, and sold them a mop or broom for a fund-raiser and used the money for our charities to support the things we do."

In 1986 and 1987, Hanson, then a member of the Midland Suburban Lions Club, drove countless miles as District 2-A1 Governor. For his efforts, he received the 100 Percent Governor's Award and an award from Sten Akestem, international president from Stockholm, Sweden.

"I was responsible for 70 Lions clubs and 10 Lioness clubs in an area that covered from Midland to Sweetwater to Brownwood to Goldwater, Buchanan Dam, Kingsland, Junction, Sonora, Ozona, Big Lake and back to Midland — about a 25-county area," Hanson said.

"You're required to visit every one and try to encourage them to do more service work in their respective communities. It's quite an experience; it's almost a full-time job."

Hanson had another full-time job. He moved to Mid-

Thank You Notes ...

On Saturday, October 7, I was sitting in our car (in front of Walgreens), waiting for my husband to return with my medicine. For, you see, we had just come from the doctor's office. While I was waiting, I began to have a bad reaction to a shot that had been given to me. Before I completely fainted, a man walked by the car. I got his attention and ask him if he would go to the pharmacy area, find and tell my husband to come out immediately.

This nice man looked past the fact that I am a white woman and he is a black man. He just looked into his heart and saw that another person needed help. I guess you could say he was my Good Samaritan. I believe in my heart that if everyone would do this in all matters of life, the world would be a much happier place to live, and I know GOD would be a lot happier with His children.

I do not know who this man is, or even if he will read this, but I do want to thank him publicly from the bottom of my heart.

Seldom does one have a "good teacher" — one who informs, one who challenges, one who is genuinely interested in her students and who has a sense of humor. Such a teacher is Dr. Will Morris, who was awarded the prestigious Community Award by the NSDAL.

It seems we appreciate those who inspire us after they have died, but this time we, the students, are able to recognize Dr. Morris in his prime.

For those of us who are able to spend 22 weeks a year learning about the past, present and future enriched by archeology, economics, government, math, botany, chemistry, physics, psychology, our lives will be enriched forever.

Thank you for your articles on Dr. Morris.

How to tell if you're raising a redneck

Comedian Jeff Foxworthy has become quite wealthy with his "You Might Be a Redneck ..." routine. He has recorded mega-selling comedy albums and now even has a successful television program based on his schtick.

That's all well and fine, but the objects of his one-liners are people who are already rednecks. People that can't be saved.

While there's still time to act, you, as a responsible parent, might want to observe your child closely during his or her formative years. If, during these important years between birth and six, your kid exhibits any of the following characteristics, he may be destined for redneckdom ...

His first complete sentence is "Eight ball, corner pocket."

He cries unless there are peanuts inside his bottle of formula.

Her bonnet has a Red Man emblem on the bill.

When he bends over, he exposes his backside.

Her Christmas list includes Barbie's Dream trailer, Big-Haired Barbie and Spittin' Ken.

He's afraid just because his teeth are coming in he'll be thought of as civilized.

Insists on taking Spam to lunch the first day of school — just to make a good impression.

His first pet is a garden mole.

Her diaper doubles as a cut-to-fit bed sheet.

Has a pocket knife tucked in the back of his diaper.

His nursery is decorated in a Pabst Blue Ribbon motif.

She refers to the dog's Gravy Train as "Nummy Cereal."

Likes to dip his teething biscuits in gravy.

After baths, he prefers Pennzoil to baby oil.

Her favorite meal is pureed pickled eggs and RC Cola.

His rattle is actually a beer can filled with shotgun pellets.

Is strangely drawn to large tires.

He was born with a flat top.

Has a tattoo of Barney on her forearm.

She is lulled to sleep by the sound of a revving truck with no muffler.

The Lawn Rangers: Fun in the heartland of America

I was Saturday night in the beer tent, which is where everybody goes after the day's festivities at the annual Broom Corn Festival in Arcola, Ill. A group of us guys were standing around, shouting snippets of conversation over the din of the band, when we saw a man's naked rear end advancing toward us through the crowd. The owner of the rear end was walking backward and bending over, so we couldn't see his head or upper body — just a disembodied, naked butt shuffling our way.

Barry

Next to us, a group of women suddenly noticed the oncoming butt. To say they were startled would be an understatement.

"Look!" they gasped, pointing at the butt. "He's... He's... It's..."

"It's OK," we assured them. "It's only Ranger Reeder!"

Ranger Doug Reeder is a member of an organization I belong to, the World Famous Lawn Ranger Precision Lawn Mower Drill Team. It was founded 15 years ago by some guys in Arcola, a small central Illinois town that each fall hosts the Broom Corn Festival, a celebration of the glory years when Arcola was a leading producer of the corn used to make broom bristles. The highlight of the festival is the Broom Corn parade, and the most elite marching unit in the parade, as measured in per capita consumption of keg-dwelling beverages, is the Lawn Rangers.

When you talk about dedicated service organizations — when you talk about decency, integrity and leadership — you are not talking about the Lawn Rangers. We are not one of those organizations — and here I am thinking of our arch-enemies, the Shriners — that try to justify their existence by occasionally doing something useful. What we do is push lawn mowers and carry brooms. At various points along the parade route, we stop and astonish the crowd by performing broom-and-lawn-mower maneuvers with a level of smooth precision that you rarely see outside of train wrecks.

I've marched with the Lawn Rangers in four Broom Corn parades now. My friends ask me why I keep going back, but when I try to explain it ("We're pushing lawn mowers, see, and we're wearing masks, and we're tossing brooms, and...") it just sounds stupid. This is, of course, because it IS stupid. But it is more than that: it is also extremely immature.

I refer here to what goes on during Ranger Orientation, which takes place before the parade in Ranger Ted Shields' garage. This is where we Rangers get ourselves into peak physical and mental condition by consuming refreshing beverages and a scientific training diet of bratwurst; this is also where we teach our precision maneuverers to the rookie Rangers via a brutal training regimen that can last as long as five minutes. And above all, this is where we hold the Ranger Business Meeting, which could well be the single most tasteless annual event in America, surpassing even the Christmas retail season.

Two years ago, the governor of Illinois, who was running for re-election, showed up at the Business Meeting, apparently thinking it was a collection of normal voters. As he approached us, he realized that he had made a huge mistake and stopped, with his mouth maintaining a rigid professional smile, but his eyes revealing the stark terror of a politician who realizes that he's in danger of being photographed shaking hands with, for example, a man wearing a hat festooned with a lifelike replica of the male anatomical unit.

The governor left quickly, which meant he missed the Business Meeting, including the much-anticipated performance by Ranger Reeder. Out of respect for a fellow Ranger, I am not going to comment upon Ranger Reeder's mental state, except to say that he has the kind of penetrating stare and intense smile that would make him a prize recruit for the U.S. Postal Service, if you get my drift.

He is a legend among the Rangers. Each year — this is the highlight of the Business Meeting — he gets up a ladder, turns his back to the audience, and presents an EXTREMELY explicit dramatic rendition, using props, of a song or poem involving the word "moon." Each year his performance gets more elaborate; this year, it concluded with actual fireworks shooting out of a tube that was... Well, I can't tell you where the tube was, except to say we were all amazed that Ranger Reeder did not require medical treatment. But he showed no ill effects, and was in superb form that night in the beer tent, where he continued to personify the "moon" theme by backing slowly through the crowd. Every now and then you'd look down, and there would be Ranger Reeder, serving as a proud symbol of Rangerhood, making the rest of us proud to be part of this crack (rim shot) outfit.

For the next solid year, American voters are going to be relentlessly hounded by presidential contenders, all of whom are going to assure us that they represent mainstream, heartland values. I say to those candidates: Maybe not everybody in the heartland has exactly the same values. Maybe it would broaden your perspective to come to Arcola next fall, march with the Rangers, hang out in the beer tent, watch Ranger Reeder in action. He would make an awesome secretary of state.

HANSON: Lion considers his life a success land on June 1, 1956, to be the office manager/accountant for an oil-field service company. In 1961, he and another employee, Leo Seogin, bought the business. Hanson retired from Arrow Plastics and Supply in 1990.

After forming the Midland Suburban Lions Club in 1984, he has been a member since 1985.

"It's the youngest, newest Lions Club in Midland and among the most active," said Hanson.

He spoke of the activities and projects in which Midland Suburban Lions find themselves involved. "We work together to try to bring a better quality of life to the people in each community by helping with handicapped children and senior citizens, diabetic children and adults. We also work through the school nurses and purchase many, many pairs of glasses for children that need glasses and cannot afford them."

"On a district-wide level, we support the district eye bank. We have an eye bank that helps supply corneas for cornea transplants, and we also have a summer camp at Kerrville. It's a statewide project for handicapped and diabetic children. This past summer, we served 1,325 children at that camp — 918 handicapped, 407 diabetic children."

"We have Boy Scout Troop No. 109, one of the larger Boy Scout troops in town, we host one night a month at our club building at 2550 Flynn Ave."

"The first Saturday night of each month, we host a gospel singing jubilee. We've been active as far as fund raising by having a food booth at the Confederate Air Force show. We have sold roses and poinsettias for several years. We've also sponsored a demolition derby."

In the past five years, Hanson also has found time to become active at Ranchland Heights Baptist Church. "I'm teaching a senior adult class. Now, most of them know more about it than I do." He chuckled, then added, "I have to study every week."

He's also active as an after-dinner speaker and has been a member of the Pop-Up Toastmasters Club since not long after he moved to Midland. The club is so named because it meets at 6:30 a.m.

Hanson recalled how he was invited to join. "I was calling on customers right after we bought the business, and one of the customers, Ernest Sneed, realized I needed help talking to people. He invited me to visit the Pop-Up Toastmasters Club. And it really did help me."

"By entering humorous speaking contests, I progressed into being an after-dinner speaker, which was helped by the fact that I know a million old West Texas country stories. I call myself a West Texas humorist."

He also "always" puts "some positive thinking" into his speeches as well as "some patriotism." His talks have a central theme of, "Hard work, dedication and positive attitude — try to live a clean life," Hanson said.

The farthest from home Hanson has spoken is St. Mary's, Ontario, Canada.

"That was a paid deal — they paid my expenses," Hanson said. "I was on the same program with this man from Ontario at a convention in Graham. I spoke at noon and he spoke at night. He enjoyed my speech and invited me to come up there."

His reputation as a speaker has spread through word-of-mouth. "I never have advertised."

He was surprised when he was asked to speak at an achievement banquet at Brady High School. The students who were attending had averaged 90 or above on all their subjects and were allowed to invite their parents and in some cases their grandparents to the dinner. "I was real nervous," Hanson recalled. "But it went very well."

Through the years, he's also played drums in a country band. "When I was just a young kid, I played with some of my cousins," said Hanson, who was born in San Angelo, grew up in Garden City and studied accounting, business law and Spanish at Howard College. Big Spring.

Accounting led him to playing here in a "good Western swing band," the Jack Russell Band.

"I was doing some accounting work for Mike Machen Construction, a big oil-field service company here, and one of his employees and kind of the manager there, Bobby Ellis, was a musician. Through him, I met Jack Russell. He (Ellis) played in the band too until he died."

"I did play in that band for about 30 years — played for senior citizens and rest homes, helped volunteer fire departments raise money for a fire truck, different kinds of functions. But never did I try to make a living playing music."

Although Hanson has been retired for five years, he said, his tone cheerful. "I haven't had a spare minute yet. Shirley and I are both busy all the time."

Two years ago, Mrs. Hanson's mother, Mrs. Nita Eaton, moved next door. In January, Hanson lost his mother, Vivian Bigby Hanson. Nowadays, he spends "a lot of quality time" with his father, Bud Hanson, who is 90.

"We're still raising Appaloosa horses," Hanson said, noting that Texas Highway 158 runs through their ranch near Garden City. "He's been raising them since 1945. We have about 25 head of them, most of them are registered. We have a few sheep, a few cows."

Hanson, who has three children and six grandchildren, considered what the word "success" meant to him and decided "successful is someone that's been able to either work or have a business and make a good living and pay all the bills and have some left over for themselves, 10 percent for their church and some to put back into the community." Successful people possess, Hanson said, "self-confidence and are well pleased with the way they've conducted themselves."

When Hanson reflected on the more than 30 years he's spent here, he said, "Midland's been awfully good to me. I made a good living for about 30 years. Made a lot of friends."

Perot may win spot on California ticket, despite deadline, aides say

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Despite a slow start, Ross Perot's campaign to organize a new political party for the 1996 presidential election still has a shot at winning a spot on California's ballot.

Perot aides confidently predict victory, and even critics of the Texas billionaire warn against underestimating him in the dash to next week's deadline.

"He's got the money to make it succeed, and their voter registration cards are out there," said Bob Mulholland, former political director of the California Democratic Party. "It's hard for me to believe Ross Perot would say he's going to do it and then not follow through."

Perot launched his drive to create a new national political party in California because it has both the nation's earliest deadline to qualify for the ballot, Oct. 24, and the toughest requirement — registering 89,007 voters in the new party.

By last week, the organization drive had registered just 448 voters for his Reform Party.

But Perot aides claim there are thousands of additional registrations waiting to be processed in election offices throughout the state.

"There's no doubt in my mind that we will get the 89,007 registrations," said Russ Verney, national executive director of Perot's United We Stand America organization.

Election officials and political consultants in both major parties were skeptical. But they cautioned against dismissing Perot's chances and agreed that the success of his movement nationally could hinge on his California effort.

"Mr. Perot has shown the ability to motivate people before," said Republican Bill Jones, California's chief elections officer. "It is conceivable that it is still possible. But it is a short time frame."

Veteran California campaign consultant Ken Khachigian, a political adviser to two GOP presidents, said Perot's late start on launching the new party could cost it a spot on California's ballot. "I really believe he has finally overstretched. You can't dismiss it, but I don't see it succeeding (in California)," Khachigian said. "I'm not sure that would stop him nationally, but it would be a big black eye."

DEAR ABBY

Psychotherapist disagrees on purpose of female's 'equipment'

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: How blind we mortals be! "J.G. in Philadelphia" complained that women have been forced to hide their bodies because men view female breasts as sex objects. She claimed that there is nothing inherently erotic about the female breast, but "our constant attempts to cover them makes it seem that way," and there is no basis for it in psychology.

Doesn't she realize that throughout the animal kingdom, female breasts enlarge only to signal readiness for sex or to feed newborns? The single exception to this is humans — and because human females and babies are dependent for so long, the male must be "persuaded" to hang around. The strategic instruments of persuasion are perpetually enlarged breasts that dupe the poor hormone-driven, visually addicted human male into unconsciously believing the female is always ready for sex.

Of course, what works for "evolution" doesn't always conform to reality. But if she's got the equipment, it certainly seems that way.

— CLARK T. CAMERON, PH.D., PSYCHOTHERAPIST

DEAR DR. CAMERON: I respectfully disagree with your hypothesis. I spoke with Prof. Soo-Young Chin of the Department of Anthropology at the University of Southern California who — after her laughter subsided — was quick to agree with "J.G. in Philadelphia."

The simplest way to examine such a conjecture, she informed me, is to look "cross-culturally."

"There are cultures in which the female breast is bared at all times. It is considered that part of the reproductive system intended for babies and children — not grown men."

Throughout the animal kingdom, the purpose of breasts is to nourish the young; they are not a part of the sexual arousal system.

Male animals do not fondle the breasts of female animals as part of the mating process.

Western culture's insistence on keeping the breasts hidden is what makes them erotic — that which is restricted immediately becomes more appealing.

DEAR ABBY: I never thought I'd be writing to you, but after having read the letter in your column from the New Hampshire bride-to-be who thought her wedding would be ruined if she couldn't have flash pictures taken during the ceremony, I had to write.

I was recently married in a dimly lit chapel. The clergy had very specific rules for the photography regarding flash photography. No one wanted the sanctity of the occasion to be ruined by an intrusive, disturbing flash. Abby, this is common in any church or temple.

Professional photographers are well aware of this. If the person taking pictures of her wedding is a professional, he or she will come prepared with a high-speed film that makes flash equipment unnecessary. My husband and I have beautiful pictures of the entire ceremony and not a single flash bulb went off.

Please let your reader in New Hampshire know this. Perhaps it will ease her mind. — A FLASH-LESS BRIDE

DEAR FLASHLESS: Thank you for taking the time to write. I'm printing your letter so other readers who are planning a wedding will get the picture.

To order "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054-0447. (Postage is included.)

Analysts expect Houston mayor to win re-election

HOUSTON (AP) — Despite an FBI investigation into his administration and controversy surrounding his spending policies, political analysts say Houston Mayor Bob Lanier is a likely shoo-in for re-election next month.

Lanier faces two less-than-formidable challenges — sign company owner David B. Wilson and former school trustee Elizabeth Spates — as he seeks a third and final term in the Nov. 7 election.

Although he won't likely match the 91 percent support he claimed in the 1993 vote, Lanier is expected to win easily.

"He's done a few more things that are controversial," said Richard Murray, a University of Houston political science professor. "But as mayoral elections go, this should be an easy one for him."

In nearly four years as mayor, Lanier has built considerable political capital and fostered his popularity by spending more than a billion dollars on street improvements, parks, housing and beefing up the police department.

Critics say the short-term achievements, however popular, will eventually be overshadowed by the long-term effects of Lanier's spending policies.

'What we have is a feel-good mayor out shaking hands while our city's debt service winds slowly around our knees.'

— Bill Simon, Rice University sociology professor

For his programs, Lanier has increasingly relied on borrowed money and the city has refinanced debt to lower payments, thus pushing them into the future. In a third term, Lanier may refinance the debt yet again to free up more operating cash.

Lanier also has been criticized by financing his programs partly through funds from the city's public transportation department, Metropolitan Transit Authority.

To date, Metro has transferred more than $200 million to the city, which has in turn used the money to pay for street improvements and additional police officers.

"What we have is a feel-good mayor out shaking hands while our city's debt service winds slowly around our knees," said Bill Simon, a Rice University sociology professor.

Lanier argues that all this spending on infrastructure and basic services — 1,000 additional police officers have been hired during his tenure — will bear fruit by enticing people to move back into the city. The resulting increase in the tax base would pay for all the improvements, he says.

Another potential cloud over the popular mayor is an ongoing FBI investigation into allegations of corruption in the awarding and management of a city contract.

Lanier is reportedly not a target of the investigation, but charges of cronyism surround some past and present officials in his administration.

Such allegations, even if untrue, would be enough to ruin some big-city mayors, but not Lanier. His political clout is so enormous, analysts say, that he should be able to overcome virtually any negative reaction.

"Public perception of him remains very positive," Murray said. "I think now, at the stage he is at in his life, he will start thinking more about his legacy, and how history will view him."

Ex-Army Ranger goes on trial for soldier's kidnapping, murder

LUBBOCK (AP) — High up the list of 592 prosecution exhibits in the murder trial of Louis Jones, there is a book seized from his home: "Strange Case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde."

That title hints at some of the contrasts in store in the case of a former Army Ranger accused of kidnapping and killing a 19-year-old soldier.

Federal jury selection is set to begin today.

Court records say Jones confessed to abducting Army Pvt. Tracie Joy McBride last February from a laundry facility at Goodfellow Air Force Base in San Angelo. Her body was found 12 days later under a bridge in Coke County, 27 miles north of the city.

Ms. McBride, a Minnesota native, disappeared just nine days after arriving at Goodfellow.

The trial was moved to Lubbock because of heavy news coverage around San Angelo, where more than 7,500 area residents signed a petition favoring the death penalty if Jones is convicted.

Jim McBride of Centerville, Minn., described his family as "ecstatic" upon hearing last month that federal prosecutors will seek the death penalty.

"With what he has done, he deserves nothing less," Ms. McBride's father told the San Angelo Standard-Times.

A gag order issued by U.S. District Judge Sam Cummings made attorneys mum.

But defense attorney Carlton McLarty said earlier that the death penalty would be inappropriate, given Jones' background and 22-year military career.

The defense exhibit list includes his certificate of promotion to master sergeant and an army commendation. The 45-year-old defendant was employed as a bus driver at Goodfellow.

The exhibit list filed by prosecutors includes autopsy photos of wounds to the victim's left eye, fractures to the back of her head and bruises at the base of her skull.

Other exhibits include photos of duct tape found outside Jones' house and a machete found inside.

Cummings last week denied a defense motion to suppress the confession Jones gave investigators and evidence seized from his house. Cummings also denied a motion claiming federal law permits the imposition of the death penalty in a "wanton" and "freakish" manner.

Boxer dies

GLASGOW, Scotland — Scottish boxer James Murray died Sunday of injuries suffered in a title fight with Drew Docherty, leading to a renewal of calls for the sport to be banned in Britain. Richard Morgan, a spokesman at Glasgow's Southern General Hospital, said doctors had pronounced Murray "clinically dead" Saturday but left him on a life support machine. They reassessed his condition Sunday, decided he was dead and then removed him from the machine. The 25-year-old Murray underwent brain surgery following the knockout by Docherty in the final round of the British bantamweight championship fight Friday night. Docherty, who appeared anxious about Murray's condition even as he was being hailed the winner in the ring, was said to be "shattered" by the news of his death. His manager, Tommy Gilmore, issued a brief statement that read: "Words just cannot express how badly we feel about James' death. Our thoughts are with his family and friends."

Thome home run sets up Indians-Johnson rematch

CLEVELAND (AP) — The Cleveland Indians didn't exactly win. They escaped.

Twice wriggling out of difficult situations in the late innings, the Indians beat Seattle 3-2 on Jim Thome's two-run homer Sunday night and took a 3-2 lead in the AL playoffs.

Next up: Randy Johnson in the Kingdom.

"Let's face it," Thome said. "He's a big-game type of pitcher. If you had to put somebody out there to win a game, it would be him."

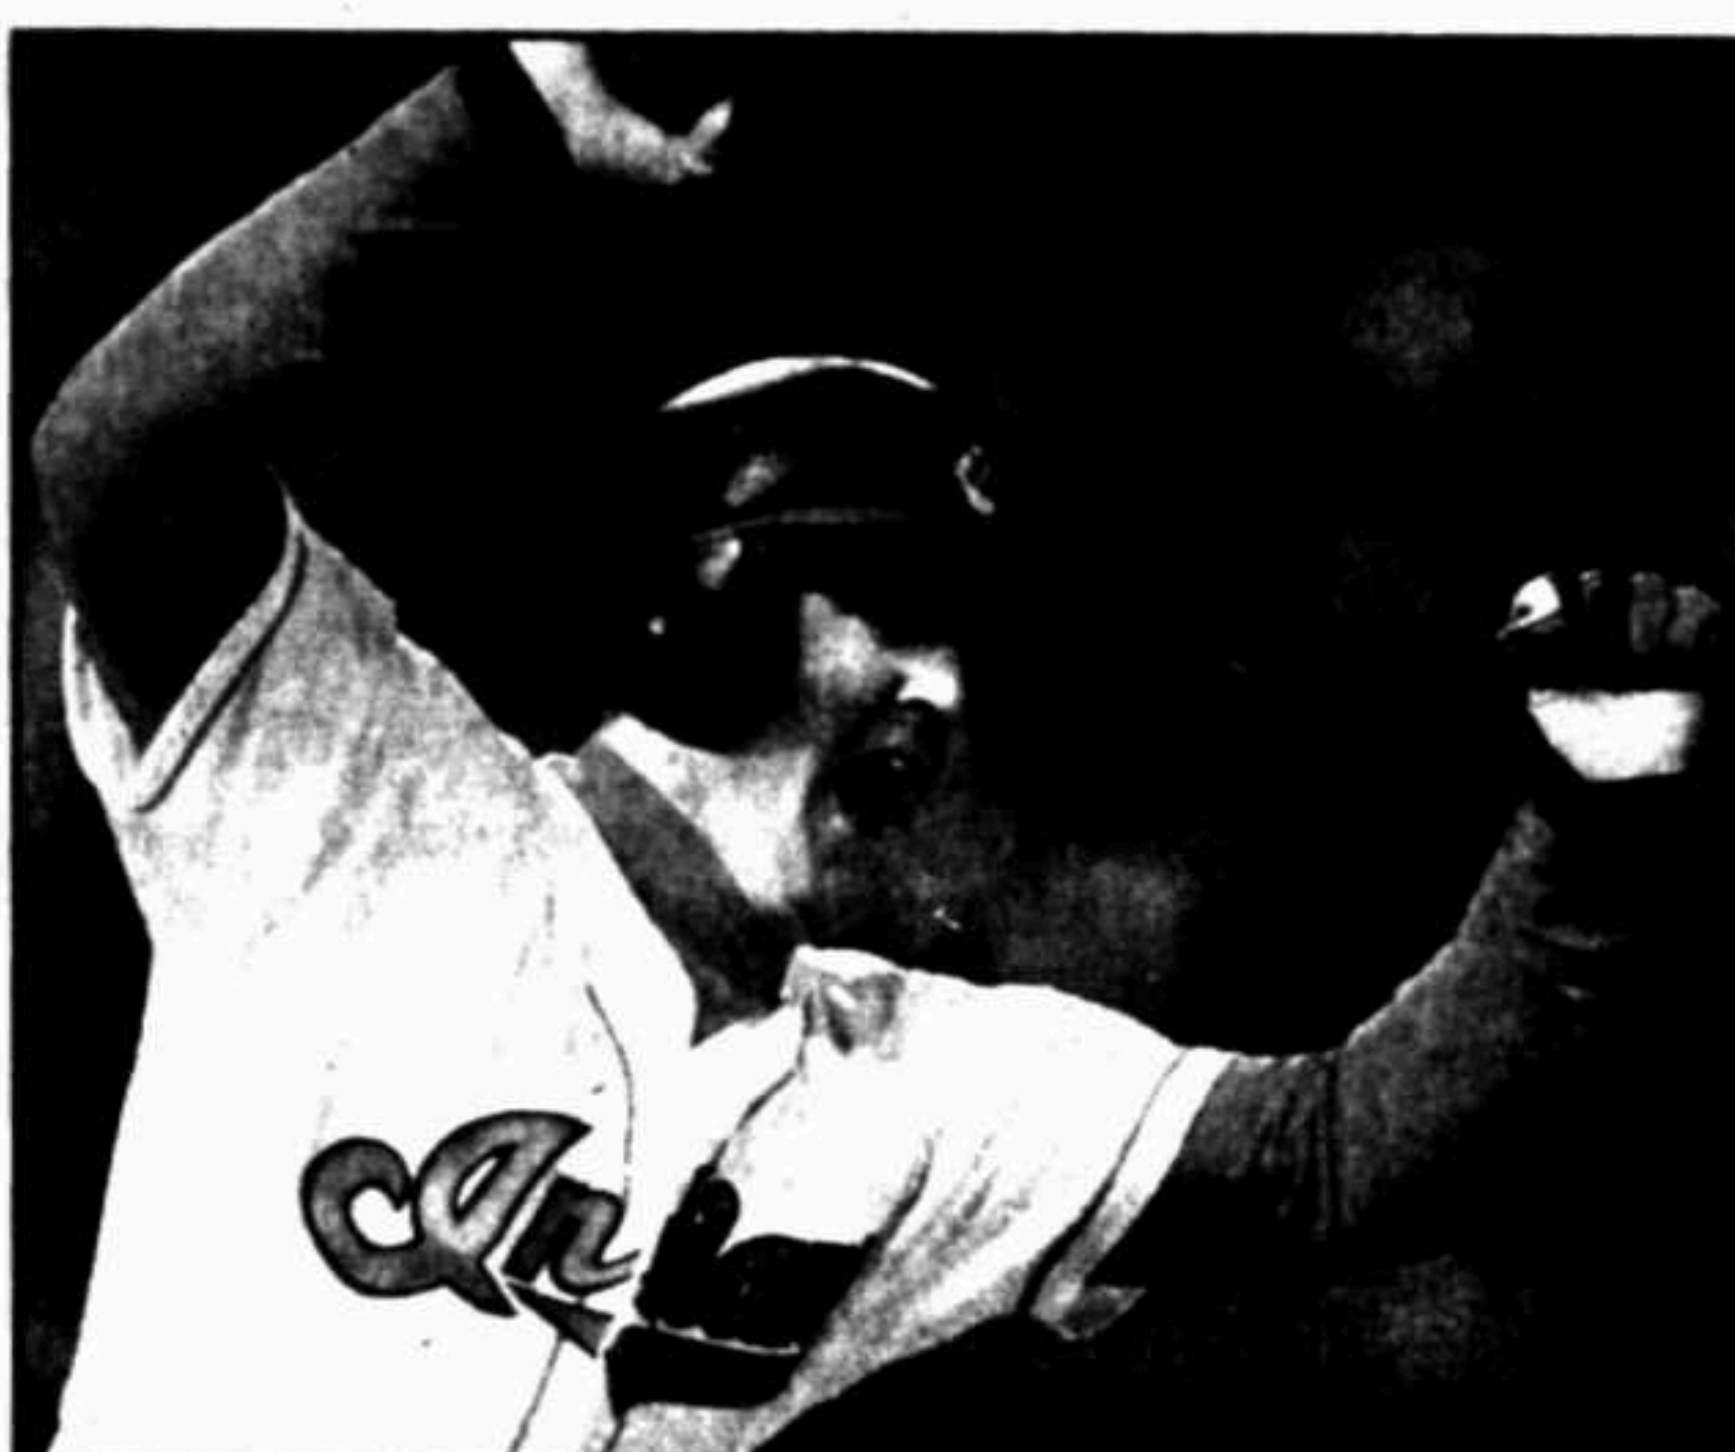

The Indians got a heroic relief performance from Paul Assenmacher, who stranded the tying run at third in the seventh inning by striking out Ken Griffey Jr. and Jay Buhner in succession.

Cleveland survived another scare in the eighth. With runners at first and second and one out, Luis Sojo hit a line drive that shortstop Omar Vizquel — formerly of Seattle — grabbed and turned into a double play.

"I was running toward second base, just caught the ball and tagged the runner," Vizquel said. "Thank God the ball was hit that way. We were celebrating big-time, because that was a big play for us."

One inning later, the game ended with Seattle's Edgar Martinez lining out to the warning track in center.

The gut-wrenching finish kept Orel Hershiser perfect in the postseason, improving his career record in the playoffs and World Series to 7-0 with a 1.47 ERA. He broke a tie with former Yankees pitcher Lefty Gomez for most postseason wins without a loss.

Game 6 will be back in Seattle on Tuesday night, and Johnson will be asked to save the season for Seattle for the fourth time this month.

"We've been in this position before," Seattle manager Lou Piniella said. "Like I said after we lost the two games in New York (in the first round), we're down but now out. We've played well all year under pressure situations."

Jose Mesa closed it out for Cleveland, his first of the postseason save after converting 46 of 48 during the regular season.

Hershiser, the MVP of the playoffs and World Series for Los Angeles in 1988, wasn't as sharp as usual, but he still managed to strike out eight batters in six innings, surpassing his own team record of seven in a postseason game.

He's 3-0 with an 0.84 ERA in three playoff starts for Cleveland.

Charger backup short-circuits as 'Boys win, 23-9

San Diego reserve quarterback Gale Gilbert finishes the day with three interceptions, one fumble and six sacks as Dallas wins its sixth game of the season.

By Bernie Wilson
AP Sports Writer

SAN DIEGO — Gale Gilbert's shot at glory kept ending up in the hands of the Dallas Cowboys.

Harassed all day by Dallas' feared defensive line, the career backup had a miserable day in relief of the injured Stan Humphries. He ended San Diego's first four drives with turnovers, two of which set up touchdown runs by Emmitt Smith as the Cowboys beat the Chargers 23-9 on Sunday.

The final damage — three interceptions, one fumble, six sacks. And to think, Deion Sanders was on the sideline, unable to get in on the action because of an ankle injury.

"I thought Gilbert played well, but you always catch a break when you play against a backup quarterback," Dallas coach Barry Switzer said.

Gilbert was hoping to do what unheralded Ed Luther did 12 years ago. Spelling Dan Fouts, who, like Humphries, had an injured right shoulder, Luther led the Chargers to a 24-23 upset over a Cowboys team that was 9-1 at the time.

It wasn't even close.

The first interception, Gilbert said, was a route miscommunication between himself and Shawn Jefferson, and Larry Brown had an easy pickoff. "The other two were just stupid throws," Gilbert said. "I think we moved the ball well. I took us out of two scoring opportunities that killed us."

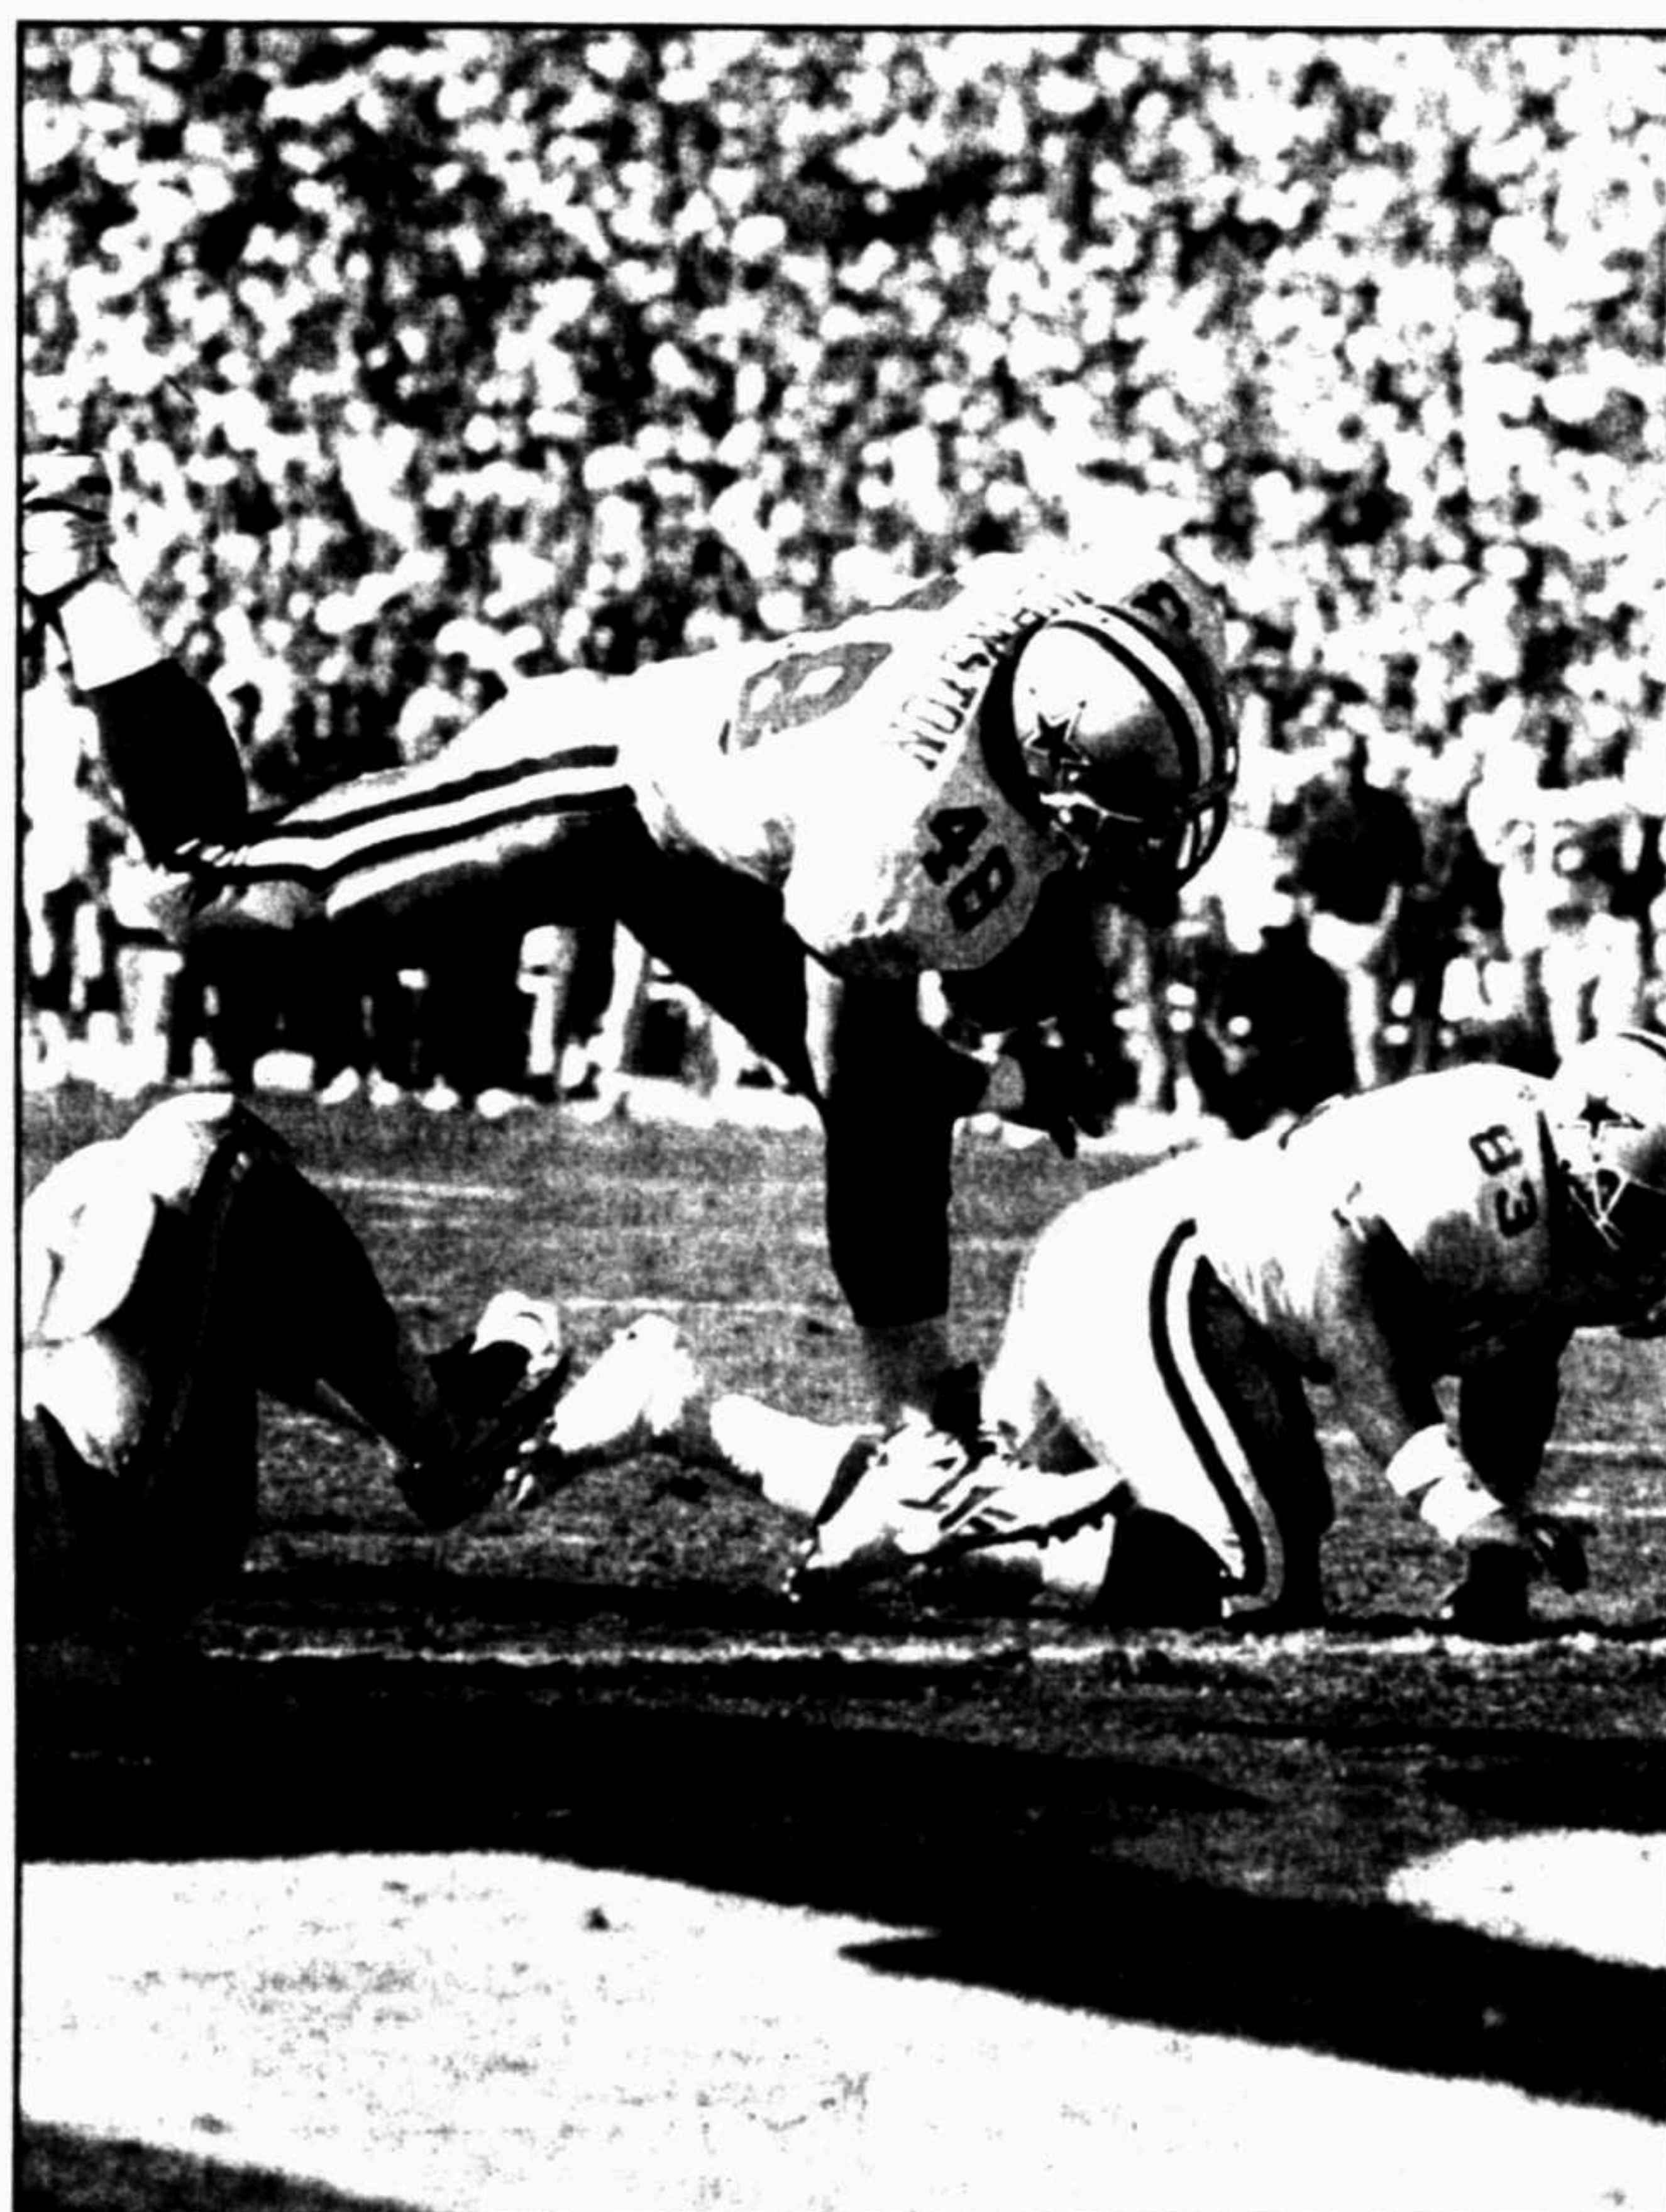

Coach Bobby Ross was steamed with the "very poor decisions on throws that were turned into interceptions. We had no business making those decisions."

Said Dallas defensive end Shante Carver: "I can't really explain some of the throws he was throwing. He threw a couple of them right to us. That might be inexperience or it might be our pressure and the DBs being in the right place at the right time."

Troy Aikman recovered from a safety on Dallas' first play from scrimmage and had an outstanding day, completing 21 of 30 passes — including his first 11 — for 222 yards and no interceptions. Michael Irvin had seven receptions for 103 yards, his team-record fifth straight 100-yard game.

Brown, Brock Marion and Clayton Holmes had interceptions, and Carver had a fumble recovery and two sacks for

Former Rebel Adams returns with PGA Tour

By Stewart Doreen
Sports Writer

The city of Midland is lucky to have one of its own represented on the PGA Tour. But when former Midland Lee Rebel John Adams can come back with a few of his touring friends to raise money for a local charity, the Tall City is especially fortunate.

Adams and friends will take part in the Birdie Blaster '95 Pro-Am at the Midland Country Club today with the proceeds benefitting the Bynum School for handicapped children.

Birdie Blaster action begins at 9 a.m. with a clinic while the 18-hole Pro-Am follows at 10 a.m. Both events are free and open to the public.

Adams, 41, is coming back to Midland after 17 years, this is his 18th, on the PGA tour. This year the Arizona State product is 76th on the money list with $237,000 earned.

Joining Adams will be Ronnie Black, Mike Standly, Phil Blackmar, Steve Jones, Howard Twitty, Ed Humenik and Brad Bryant, who won the recent Disney Classic and who ranks 28th on this year's money list.

Birdie Blaster also gives the people of the Permian Basin another opportunity to see golf at its best. Remember, unlike the players on the Nike Tour, these players have experienced success on golf's highest level.

"I think it would be a good opportunity to see guys who have been on the real tour for a period of time," said Harry Bettis, co-chairman of today's Pro-Am.

The idea for the event came about when Midland businessman Kelly Cox approached Adams about bringing players to Midland to raise money for charity. Bettis, who is active in raising money for the Bynum School, then gave Cox the charity they had been looking for.

"I wanted to get some guys back here and I wanted it to be directed toward charity," said Cox. "It was a unique situation that the Bynum School would be the benefactor."

COLLEGE FOOTBALL

Fab Five: Seminoles in good company

By Rick Warner
AP Football Writer

They are college football's version of the Fab Five.

Top-ranked Florida State, No. 2 Nebraska, No. 3 Florida, No. 4 Ohio State and No. 5 Southern Cal are all 6-0 and looking like legitimate contenders for the national championship.

Three others teams — No. 7 Kansas, No. 8 Kansas State and No. 18 Iowa — also have perfect records. But except for Kansas' 40-24 win over No. 9 Colorado, they haven't done anything impressive enough to warrant serious consideration for the national title. At least not yet.

The Fab Five, on the other hand, continue to look fabulous.

On Saturday, Florida State whipped Wake Forest 72-13.

Red River Rivalry tie proved neither team would give up

By Owen Canfield
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS — Howard Schnellenberger didn't have any trouble finding fault with his team after Oklahoma's 24-24 tie with Texas. Turnovers and breakdowns in the kicking game were easy targets.

But those mistakes — and they were huge — seemed to be balanced out by the effort Schnellenberger saw from his players.

"This is a very satisfying game for the development of men and the development of the program," he said after Saturday's game.

"It means we've got grown men who are not quitters and who are in good shape and have paid the price and who will fight to the death. And having a team that will fight to the death is very, very important."

The Sooners (4-1-1) saw Texas blitz them with three touchdowns in the span of six minutes in the first quarter. The Longhorns (4-1-1) turned a fumble into a touchdown, blocked a punt for a touchdown and got a 69-yard run from Shon Mitchell to take a 21-0 lead.

"It was like spotting them 21 points," said halfback Jerold Moore, who ran for a career-high 174 yards and two touchdowns. "It happened so fast, we just had to get our minds together and come back and make big plays."

Perhaps the biggest play of the game was one Oklahoma didn't make. It came in the second quarter with the Longhorns at the Sooner 6-yard line, threatening to go ahead 28-

The Top 5 from the Associated Press Top 25 College Football poll and their season record:

Rank	Team	Record
No. 1	Florida State	6-0
No. 2	Nebraska	6-0
No. 3	Florida	6-0
No. 4	Ohio State	6-0
No. 5	Southern Cal	6-0

Nebraska blanked Missouri 57-0, Florida beat No. 13 Auburn 49-38, Ohio State defeated No. 24 Wisconsin 27-16, and Southern Cal downed Washington State 26-14.

The runaway victories were typical for Florida State and Nebraska, both winning by an average of about 40 points.

Florida has beaten SEC powers Tennessee and Auburn, Ohio State has defeated four teams in the current Top 25, and Southern Cal is giving up only 9.5 points per game.

But all have serious challenges ahead. Florida State and Florida collide in Gainesville on Nov. 25. Nebraska has games remaining against Kansas State, Colorado, Kansas and No. 15 Oklahoma. Ohio State must play Iowa and No. 10 Michigan, while Southern Cal visits No. 17 Notre Dame and No. 20 Washington the next two weeks.

Texas quarterback James Brown (5) shakes hands with Oklahoma quarterback Eric Moore (1) after Saturday's 24-24 tie.

On second-and-5, Texas was called for holding behind the line of scrimmage.

The penalty pushed Texas back to the 21. Two plays later, James Brown was sacked for an 12-yard loss to the 33 and the Longhorns wound up punting.

The punt was downed at the 2-yard line, but the Sooners drove the length of the field for a touchdown to make the score 21-7.

Carolina lands first franchise win

■ Also getting its first win of the season was New Orleans.

By Barry Wilner
AP Football Writer

Winless no more, the Carolina Panthers and New Orleans Saints can be excused for a little celebrating.

■ NFL Roundup

For the Panthers, it's a unique feeling — their 26-15 victory over the New York Jets was the first in franchise history. The expansionists used a stingy defense, helped greatly by New York's ineptitude, as the visiting Jets gained just 138 yards against a team that hadn't held an opponent to less than 300 total yards this season.

"Now that we've got this first one out of the way, hey, let's get used to it," said safety Brett Maxie, who had one of Carolina's three interceptions of Bubba Brister.

For the Saints, a win Sunday was even more surprising because it came against Miami, one of the league's better teams. But Jim Everett threw for four touchdowns in outlasting Dolphins backup Bernie Kosar in a 33-30 decision. Kosar played in place of the injured Dan Marino and passed for 368 yards and three TDs.

"This is fantastic. It was a great win," Everett said. "It was good to have a chance for 50 of us to play well. I'm sure we made some mistakes, but this sure feels good."

One star who wasn't feeling good was Steve Young. Actually, he felt bad even before his San Francisco 49ers lost to the revitalized Indianapolis Colts.

Cary Blanchard, cut earlier this year in a tryout with the 49ers, kicked his fourth field goal, a 41-yarder with 2:36 to go, and lifted the Colts to an 18-17 victory over the Super Bowl champions. That just added to Young's woes, which included the flu and an injured back for which he will undergo an MRI on Monday.

"It's been a nightmare. I had the flu last night," said Young, whose back injury forced him from the game for one play after he was tackled hard on the 49ers last drive. But he returned to set up Doug Brien's 46-yard field goal attempt that missed.

"When you play long enough, you try to be straight up with yourself and the coach. It's not the kind of thing that if you feel you're going to injure yourself for the future you're going to stay in. I didn't feel that way until I hit it right there at the end, and then I hurt."

The host Colts (4-2) are feeling no pain after their third win over one of the NFL's top teams this season. They also handed both St. Louis and Miami their first losses of the year.

It's the first time the Colts have beaten a defending Super Bowl champion since 1973.

"Hollywood could not have written a better script for me," said Blanchard, who previously kicked for the Jets. "I knew this would be my last chance at making it in the NFL. I would have never thought in my first two games I would have kicked the game winners."

Idle this week were Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Cincinnati and Houston. The weekend began when St.

Louis beat Atlanta 21-19 on Thursday night and concludes with Oakland at Denver tonight.

Cardinals 24, Redskins 20
Dave Krieg hit Garrison Hearst with a 1-yard TD pass with 76 seconds remaining and the Cardinals (2-5) held on. Star defensive tackle Eric Swann made his first start since knee surgery Sept. 12, and was involved in six tackles, with 1 1/2 sacks. Washington (2-5) saw top rookie Michael Westbrook sidelined with a sprained left knee.

Bears 30, Jaguars 27
At Jacksonville, the Bears (4-2) held on as the Jaguars (2-5) failed to become the first expansionists to win three in a row.

Curtis Conway caught three TD passes from Erik Kramer, helping the Bears, and original member of the NFL, reach 600 victories, a record. Mark Brunell, who threw for a career-high 302 yards, hit his third TD, a 23-yarder to Cedric Tillman with 27 seconds left, and Mike Dumas recovered an onside kick, but Mike Hollis missed a 54-yard field goal on the final play.

Chiefs 31, Patriots 26
At Kansas City, the Chiefs didn't bother to work overtime this week.

The Chiefs went into OT for their first three home victories. Against New England (1-5), KC went 6-1 for the first time since its Super Bowl year of 1969 as Steve Bono passed for two scores and ran for another. Drew Bledsoe had his first two TD passes of the season.

Buccaneers 20, Vikings 17, OT
Tampa Bay (5-2) held onto first place in the NFC Central. The Bucs, who lost at least 10 games in each of the last 12 years, have a four-game winning streak, the second longest in team history.

Martin Mayhew scored on a 78-yard fumble return, Errict Rhett had a 6-yard touchdown run and Michael Husted won it with a 51-yard field goal 6:23 into OT.

Fuad Revez, who kicked three field goals in regulation, missed a 53-yarder that would have won it at the end of the fourth quarter for Minnesota (3-3).

Packers 30, Lions 21
At Green Bay, Brett Favre threw for 342 yards, Edgar Bennett gained 148 yards from scrimmage and Chris Jack kicked three field goals for the Packers (4-2), who built a 20-0 halftime lead. Favre, 7-2 against Detroit, completed 23 of 34 passes for two touchdowns.

Detroit (2-4) got 124 yards on 18 carries from Barry Sanders.

Bills 27, Seahawks 21
The host Bills (5-1) didn't miss injured Andre Reed, thanks to another veteran receiver, Billy Brooks.

Brooks caught six passes for 109 yards and two TDs in helping Buffalo to its fifth straight victory. Jim Kelly completed 21 of 36 passes for 275 yards and three touchdowns in 30 mph winds. Seattle (2-4) got two TDs from Chris Warren and a 52-yard scoring catch from rookie Joey Galloway.

Eagles 17, Giants 14
Mike Zordich returned a fumble 58 yards for a TD and intercepted Tommy Maddox's pass at the Philadelphia 40 to snuff out a late New York rally. Each team used two quarterbacks, none of whom distinguished himself, and the Eagles (4-3) managed six sacks against the host Giants (2-5), who scored on Omar Douglas' 41-yard runback with a fumble to make it close.

Last-second Aggie TD may hold redemption

By Mark Babineck
Associated Press Writer

With one well-placed pass, Texas A&M quarterback Corey Pullig turned what appeared to be the most embarrassing loss in recent Aggie history into an improbable 20-17 comeback victory against outmanned Southern Methodist. The touchdown pass to Albert Connell with eight seconds to go Saturday also might have earned the struggling Pullig a measure of redemption.

"I've said it before, Corey has contributed to our offensive problems, but so has the entire team," said R.C. Slocum, coach of the No. 22 Aggies. "It was good that he was able to go out and redeem himself, along with his teammates."

It took a frenetic 20-point fourth quarter for the Aggies, ranked No. 3 in the nation only four weeks ago, to overtake SMU, which has only one win.

FRESH START: Derek Canine became the first true freshman to start at quarterback for Southern Methodist since Mike Romo started all 11 contests in 1989, SMU's first year back from the NCAA "death penalty."

Canine was only 9-of-20 for 91 yards, but his 21-yard pass to Kevin Thornal in the fourth quarter put the Mustangs ahead 17-13 before Pullig's late heroics.

DELAYED MILESTONE: The 24-24 tie between No. 16 Texas and No. 15 Oklahoma at the Cotton Bowl delayed by at least a week another milestone in the 103-year history of Longhorns football.

When the Longhorns blew a 21-point first quarter lead to settle for the deadlock, they also lost their shot at a 700th victory and settled instead for their 33rd tie.

Texas' all-time record stands at 699-278-33. Only Michigan (752) and Notre Dame (734) have more victories. Michigan is in its 115th season on the gridiron, while the Irish are in their 107th.

TORTILLAS, FLAGS FLY:

■ SWC Notebook

Fans of No. 25 Texas Tech resurrected their tortilla-tossing tradition at Jones Stadium during the Red Raiders' victory over Arkansas State.

Since Tech won 63-25, fans had the luxury of tossing the tortillas without hurting their team.

The Raiders were assessed three unsportsmanlike conduct penalties as fans celebrated the blowout. Fans were warned before the season that officials were out to stop what had become a Tech tradition of throwing the tortillas on the field.

In all, officials assessed the Raiders 149 yards on 15 flags, something that dimmed Tech coach Spike Dykes' appreciation of the rout. "We still had a lot of penalties; tortilla penalties and offside penalties," he said.

WHO AM I?: Texas Christian's Max Knake didn't feel like himself while playing the Rice Owls.

"I felt like a different quarterback," Knake said. "I thought about it this week and I felt I wasn't having much fun. I thought maybe I was taking things too seriously. This year there's more pressure on me because it's my last year." He decided to try enjoying himself and ended up doing just that in a 33-28 Horned Frogs' victory.

CALLING OFF THE BEARS: Baylor coach Chuck Reedy began using substitutes in the third quarter of the Bears' 47-7 rout of Houston. Cougars coach Kim Helton just wanted to say thanks.

"I would like to compliment the Baylor head football coach," Helton said. "He played a lot of young players and substituted freely."

The Bears could have used an even wider margin of victory to their benefit. They entered the game one spot out of The Associated Press Top 25 poll and were in the same place after Sunday's voting was tabulated.

DALLAS: Cowboy defense, without Sanders, flusters backup

(From 1C)

Dallas (6-1).

"We had guys in his face and he was throwing off his back foot," Marion said of Gilbert. "He did throw a couple ducks up for grabs, but anytime he puts the ball in the air and we can capitalize off of it, it's a big play for us."

Gilbert, making only the fourth start of his 10-year career, was 20 of 32 for 206 yards with three interceptions and six sacks. Charles Haley also had two sacks. The Chargers have 11 turnovers in three games.

The defending AFC champion

Chargers (3-4) are on their first three-game losing streak since early in the 1993 season.

Dallas, the NFL's top offense, capitalized on two of Gilbert's turnovers and led 14-2 at halftime. Smith had both touchdowns, scoring on runs of 4 and 1 yards.

All four of Gilbert's turnovers were in Dallas territory, at the 7, 48, in the end zone and at the 15.

"It didn't so much help us as far as offensively turning them into points, it just kept them from getting points," Aikman said. "It was much like a punt, for us."

"As it turned out, those turnovers were extremely important. It's a whole different ball game when we were able to get points out of some those drives where they were certainly in a position to kick field goals."

San Diego got back into it with Ronnie Harmon's 48-yard touchdown run on a counter play in the third quarter, making it 14-9. Harmon slipped a tackle by Darren Woodson and had San Diego's longest run in nearly two seasons.

But Aikman was 6-for-7 for 52 yards on the next drive, a 14-play, 80-yard march capped by fullback Daryl Johnston's 1-yard run.

Another offensive mistake hurt the Chargers early in the fourth quarter. Shawn Jefferson was alone down the left sideline and caught a 37-yard touchdown pass. But he had stepped out of bounds without contact, costing the Chargers a down and forcing them to punt.

Chris Boniol kicked a 30-yard field goal with 5:27 to play.

Reuben Davis tackled Aikman for the safety and a 2-0 lead. But Aikman quickly warmed up.

Dallas got the ball back on Gilbert's fumble, forced by Russell Maryland and recovered by Carver at the San Diego 48. Smith capped a five-play drive with a 4-yard run for a 7-2 lead.

RED: Both teams had unsuccessful opportunities to break tie run on that (second down) play," coach John Mackovic said. "That holding call really did hurt us there."

Texas, after gaining 151 yards in the first quarter, had just 25 in the second and went to the half leading 24-10. Oklahoma controlled the third quarter, driving for a touchdown on its first possession and getting a 22-yard TD run from Moore after a fumble recovery.

Mackovic was not surprised. "It should be any game, but certainly in a game like this, one side is not going to quit," he said. "The other side is not going to lay down. We were up 21 points early, but they knew that they were going to move the ball and score some points."

The points for both teams ended with Moore's second touchdown, although both teams had their opportunities.

Texas' best chance came with about nine minutes left in the game. The Longhorns drove to the Oklahoma 11, but failed to convert on third-and-1 and then again on fourth-and-1.

The fourth-down call was an option play to the left side. Brown pitched to Ricky Williams, who was hit right away for a 5-yard loss.

Mackovic said the Sooners had done a good job shutting down the inside run on third down, and he felt Texas could get outside with the surprise call. But the Sooners changed their defensive alignment and made the play easily.

"I really felt that we needed a touchdown at that time if we could get it," he said. "They had been on the move, they had been scoring and driving, and I just felt that if we could get a touchdown that would really put a lot of pressure on them to score."

"Obviously it didn't work out."

Oklahoma's final drive started at midfield with 2:47 left. The Sooners were able to drive to the Texas 25, and on fourth-and-1 Jeremy Alexander came on to try a 42-yard field goal.

Alexander, who entered the game 11-of-11 this year, made a 33-yarder in the second quarter but then had a 53-yarder blocked. His final try, from the left hash, flew outside the left upright with 26 seconds remaining.

ADAMS: Former Rebel golfer returns

(From 1C)

Playing with the PGA touring pros will be amateurs who have paid $1,000 each for the opportunity, the same price golfers paid to play with at the Nike Pro-Am in August. In all, the tournament is expected to raise approximately $20,000 for the Bynum School, which is important because the school receives no state or federal funds. That makes this worth while to this relatively small school that hosts children from all around the Permian Basin.

Organizers of the event hope the tournament can grow and attract more golfers down the line.

"If we could get 15 to 20 pros, it would be great for the Bynum School and the city of Midland," said Bettis.

Adams and his gang will arrive in Midland after last week's tour stop at the Las Vegas Invitational. The players are on their way to the Texas Open which begins Thursday in San Antonio.

Nickelodeon boss collects valuable input from associates

By Lisa Genasci
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — Geraldine Laybourne's grandmother, a tough-talking South Dakota farm woman, once used a large stick to break the arm of a traveling salesman who was arguing with her husband.

On her father's side, her grandfather was a Republican congressman from a largely Democratic New York district and chairman of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board until he was 92 years old. Mix that with the creativity of her mother, a radio soap opera actress, writer and producer, and the business know-how of her stockbroker father, and the result is explosive.

It is at least partly responsible for the big success of the children's television channel Nickelodeon, which Laybourne has helped guide almost since its inception 16 years ago.

Since 1989, Laybourne, 48, a smallish woman with a broad face, impish eyes and tight-lipped smile, has been president of Nickelodeon-Nick at Nite. She more recently added the title of vice chairman, MTV Networks. Both Nickelodeon and MTV are owned by Viacom Inc.

Nickelodeon, best known for Green Slime, Gak and the Juicy Booger Lady, and for programs including "Gullah Gullah Island," "Rugrats" and "Clarissa Explains it All," leads the children's TV mar-

BRINGING UP BABY

By Vivian Marino
Associated Press

NEW YORK — If their friends hadn't known better, they might have thought Barbara and Joe Churchill were about to join a pious religious cult or something like that.

It all began three years ago, when the Churchills took out hefty life insurance policies and drew up wills for the first time. She quit her job at a travel agency; he started hoarding chunks of his sales manager's salary.

They even traded their large five-bedroom house for a much smaller home.

All that domestic downsizing was necessary, the Minnetonka, Minn., couple maintained, in preparation for the birth of their first child, Nicklaus, who turns 3 in April. A second son, Zachary, joined the household in July.

"It's all a matter of rearranging your priorities," said Mrs. Churchill, 34, a work-at-home mother, who believes the family's newfound frugality will only be temporary. "We figured we better get this baby thing done and get that phase of our lives over with."

While few new parents go through such extremes, most will have to make significant adjustments in their lifestyles, not to mention their household finances. In fact, sound financial planning may never be more important than at this stage, from budgeting for prenatal and hospital expenses to paying for college.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture conservatively estimates it will cost $198,060 (based on 1994 dollars) to raise a child from birth to age 18 for families with current incomes above $55,000 a year. For the first year alone, that same family will have spent $10,510 on their newest member.

Those figures don't even include the cost of giving birth, which can run from $4,700 for a normal delivery to $7,800 for a Cesarean section, according to the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists. Nor do they take into account the cost of sending junior to college, which, based on a 7 percent average annual rate of recent-year tuition increases, is expected to skyrocket to near $100,000 for a four-year public school by the year 2013.

Adopting a child costs anywhere from $2,000 to $20,000, with the average price tag at $10,000.

"Kids will really raise your cost of living. (But) if it takes a child to make you financially serious, then I'm pro-children," Jonathan Pond, a Boston-area financial planner and father of three, said half-jokingly.

Financial experts say the first order of business for expectant parents is to create a fund for expenses like unpaid parental leave and childbirth costs. Parents should check with their employers and insurance carrier to see what's covered.

After the baby arrives, parents will need to reshuffle their budget to allow for typical baby expenses, like formula and diapers, as well as child care, which could eat up as much as 20 percent of household income a year.

Before Labor Day

By The Associated Press

■ Create an out-of-pocket expense fund. That means setting aside money for unpaid parental leave and childbirth costs. Review your health insurance policy to see what's covered and discuss with your employer whether disability insurance or other benefits are available.

■ Review birthing alternatives. If medical complications aren't anticipated, you may consider less-expensive birthing methods to the traditional hospital delivery room.

■ Assess insurance needs. The baby initially is covered under the father's or mother's group policy, typically for 30 days. Afterwards, to save money, you may want to consolidate into family coverage from one provider. Now is also the time to evaluate how much life and disability insurance is needed.

■ Rethink your budget. After the baby's arrival, you'll need to reshuffle your short- and long-term budget goals to allow for typical baby expenses like formula and diapers as well as child care, which could cost thousands of dollars a year.

■ Make adjustments with your employer. The payroll department can determine how your paycheck amount will change with a new deduction to your W4 form. You also should inquire whether the employer offers a dependent-care account, which lets you use pretax dollars to pay for child care.

■ Invest in your child's future. You'll want to save a significant share of college expenses, anywhere from 30 to 60 percent. To achieve that goal it's best to put away a little at a time, rather than rely on one lump sum, and to lean heavily on growth-oriented investments.

■ Prepare, update a will. If you don't have one, now is the best time. The most important aspect is naming guardians for your child in case something happens to you before the child reaches adulthood.

Generations Xers want to be their own bosses

By L.M. Sixel
Associated Press

HOUSTON — Traditional workplace values of long-term commitment and company loyalty aren't very popular with Generation Xers.

Those "twenty somethings" have reason to be wary after watching their parents get "rightsized" out of their jobs.

Over the past 10 years or so, many twenty somethings have seen the pain and disillusionment of parents who lost jobs they assumed they had for life, said Norman J. York, executive vice president of Reedie & Co. in Houston.

Younger workers don't expect to make the same sacrifices — constant moves across the country, long hours, overnight travel — on the assumption of job security, said York, who counsels fired executives who need help finding new career paths.

Unlike their parents, Generation Xers don't expect to stay at one company — or even in one career — for their entire lives. Some employers are surprised that younger workers will not work long hours or are not subservient, and they call members of this generation slackers, York said.

But the twenty-something crowd is an aggressive, hard-working bunch. They're just working more for themselves than for the company.

For some Xers, that means becoming entrepreneurs.

Security is important to Karla Garcia, but she figures she will have more security running her own business than working for someone else. And the 24-year-old believes she'll do better financially on her own in the long run and have more flexibility.

Garcia, along with her brother, Marko, are building a trailer to house a portable taco and quesadilla stand. They're shopping for a parking lot to open 100% Taquito in a His-

Mortgage options expanding for home owners

By Nick Ravo
N.Y. Times News Service

The menu of mortgage options is becoming a buffet, with nearly every variation conceivable.

While mortgage rates are bouncing around near historic lows, a few home buyers are forgoing the promise of a low fixed-rate loan for 15 or 30 years. This group of borrowers, albeit a small one, is choosing adjustable-rate loans — often with a twist.

The standard adjustable loan carries a rate that adjusts each year. Some others, sometimes called hybrids, carry a fixed rate for 3, 5, 7 or 10 years and then adjust each year. But to convince finicky borrowers that an adjustable-rate loan could be good for them, lenders are promoting a type that adjusts every three years or five years, rather than annually.

"These loans have been around for a while," said Bruce R. Lublin, a mortgage banker with Homeric, a mortgage banker in Harrison, N.Y., and Westport, Conn. "But they were overshadowed by the other kinds of ARM's. Recently, though, as buyers learn more about different mortgages, we are finding that more people are taking the 3-3s and 5-5s," which are loans that adjust every three or five years.

The monthly payment on an adjustable loan is smaller than on a fixed-rate loan, accounting for much of its appeal. But psychologically, the leap is great. Home buyers worry about the havoc an adjustable loan could someday have on their household budgets. The promise of less frequent adjustments can calm those fears.

Generally, borrowers pay slightly higher rates for loans that adjust every three years or five years than they would for loans that adjust annually after three or five years of predictable payments.

At Homeric, the difference is 0.25 of a percentage point. Homeric is now offering a loan that adjusts every three years at an initial rate of 5.5 percent with 2.75 points down, or 6.25 percent with 1.25 points down. A point is a fee paid by the borrower, generally, at closing, that is equal to 1 percent of the loan amount. If the borrower is willing to accept annual adjustments after three years, Homeric's initial rates fall to 5.25 percent and 6 percent, respectively.

At least 30 lenders across the nation offer loans that adjust every three or five years, said Keith T. Gumbinger, a vice president with HSH Associates, a mortgage research company in Butler, N.J. "They are dusting the product off, scraping the bottom of the barrel to get people to go with adjustables," he said.

Lenders prefer to make adjustable-rate loans — except when rates are abnormally high, as they were in the late 1970's and early 80's — because these loans entail less risk than fixed loans. If rates rise, so will a borrower's payments.

MONEY WATCH

Calling it a day

Many entrepreneurs, having turned their ventures into successful companies, don't know when to call it quits and turn the business over to someone else, finds Jerome Katz, director of the Jefferson Smurfit Center for Entrepreneurial Studies at St. Louis University. For some entrepreneurs, "there's always more money to be made or more market share to be won," Katz writes in the October issue of Inc. magazine. For others, "there are always more ideas to try out," or the thought of relinquishing control is too painful. He suggests company founders broaden their interests beyond the office, which may make it easier to let go.

Leveling market

The home center business, which caters to homeowners fixing up their digs, will grow by 10 percent this year, but the growth rate will level off at 7 percent by the year 2000, says Packaged Facts, a research firm based in New York. An increase in the number of U.S. households will feed the growth. An equally important factor is that existing homes are growing older and will need to be painted and plastered as the years go by.

Road warrior

Most people who buy pickup trucks and sport-utility vehicles never take them to the one place where they could really have a good time: off the road. That lament comes from Jean Lindamood, deputy editor of Automobile magazine. In the October issue, Lindamood writes, "While others in this business learned about the joy of driving behind the wheels of sports cars, I found nirvana driving blindly over cliffs in my trucks." She offers a few tips for drivers who do decide to take the plunge — don't go out alone, carry a shovel, and survey the terrain first.

Little screen, bigger jobs

Women characters have better jobs in TV shows than they do in the movies, finds Working Woman magazine. In its October issue, Working Woman noted that on the tube, women are doctors, lawyers, news anchors and run businesses. The magazine notes that TV producers (and advertisers) are trying to reach a specific market, and to draw women viewers to their shows, they must present women characters in positive, significant roles. And since more TV shows are produced by women, this trend is likely to persist.

NETWORK: Laybourne includes audience

(From 4C)

ket. The cable network now reaches 66 percent of homes nationwide and picks up 40 percent of the children's viewing audience.

In the most recent quarter, more people watched Nickelodeon than watched any of the other basic cable services, including ESPN, CNN or MTV — about 1.1 million viewers daily. That represented a 35 percent increase over a year ago, the company said.

"American families are lucky to have (Laybourne) in charge because she cares about choice and diversity, about role models for girls, about getting kids involved in helping the planet survive," said Peggy Charren, founder of Action for Children's Television. "Within the limits of a commercial system, she makes that channel as good as she can."

Nickelodeon's secret is appealing directly to kids and constantly adapting, never sitting on a tried and true formula, Laybourne says.

The network, long popular with grade school children, is now bidding for the preschoolers who are hooked on "Sesame Street" and "Barney and Friends."

At the same time, Nickelodeon has begun its foreign expansion, moving into England two years ago and, this year, stepping into Germany and Australia.

The cable network is also branching into businesses such as publishing, merchandising and, with the merger last year between Viacom and Paramount Communications Inc., movies.

Nickelodeon is now shooting its first feature film and has 20 other projects in development; a monthly magazine reaches 550,000 homes and Nickelodeon licenses more than 400 toys and other items worldwide.

Admirers credit Laybourne for this success.

"Her attitude of encouraging people to do their best, of making space for them to do their best is a wonderful one," said Linda Ellerbee, former newscaster and now president of Lucky Duck Productions, which produces a news for kids segment for Nickelodeon. "Gerry listens to everyone whether they are an intern or vice president. She doesn't play power games."

Laybourne was born Geraldine Bond in 1947 in Martinsville, N.J., a rural community of about 400. The second of four children, she describes her parents as "leaders of our community."

Her parents, she said, fought for bond issues. And although her mother quit her soap opera career when she married at 27, she "basically ran every organization that had to do with schools."

As a child, the business world was familiar to her — her father took her to meetings.

Laybourne's mother encouraged creativity, taking the children to painting classes and turning off the television set before the end of a show so they could write the ending.

"It's sort of why I'm comfortable in either world," Laybourne said.

Laybourne's college years were spent at Vassar College, where she majored in art history. She graduated in 1969 and went to work for an architectural firm in Philadelphia, where the next year she met and married her husband, Kit.

He was an animator, a recent graduate of UCLA film school who had managed a draft deferment from the Vietnam War by becoming an educator. When the two met, Kit Laybourne was teaching media to Philadelphia school children.

That seemed much more exciting than the work she was doing and Laybourne, in her own words, quit to follow her husband. She got a master's degree from the University of Pennsylvania in elementary education and, during those years, their children, Emmy and Sam, were born three years apart.

It was Kit, Laybourne says, who taught her how to have fun.

"Raising kids together taught me about what kids need and that's what Nickelodeon is all about," she said. "Just a trip to the grocery store with him turned into a game."

After a year teaching media at bucolic Concord Academy in Massachusetts, the family moved to New York, where Laybourne, worried about the television her children were watching, co-founded The Media Center for Children.

"The objective was to help teachers bring media into the classroom and also to broaden the concept of what kids want," Laybourne said.

Later, with her husband and another animator, she created a company to bring independent film to the networks. Nickelodeon was one of their first clients.

In 1980, Laybourne signed on as program manager at the year-old network, where she initiated the focus-group approach to programming.

Nickelodeon now hosts about 250 sessions a year among children to figure out what they want. Nickelodeon's idea, she says, isn't to educate or to impose, but to entertain kids on their level.

Hence slime, Gak, the Juicy Booger Lady and the rest of it — concepts that cause parents to shudder and children to squeal in delight.

The network, which started accepting advertising in 1984, has grown into a significant commercial success as the channel of choice for the 7- to 12-year old group.

"(Laybourne's) very smart," said Charren. "She knew the best way to get kids was to make them feel it was their channel."

income.

A good financial counselor can help crunch the numbers. For the technologically inclined, Intuit, maker of the best-selling Quicken financial planning software, earlier this year put out the "Parents' Guide to Money," a user-friendly Windows CD-ROM program that helps new parents calculate long- and short-term family expenses.

In some instances, Ponds says, it simply may not be economically justified for both new parents to continue working. The following worse-case scenario of just how little that second paycheck adds to the household coffers of a two-income family with two small children supports that argument:

The second wage earner who makes $50,000 gross annual salary will likely see 43 percent of that income eaten away by taxes — 31 percent federal, 5 percent state and 7 percent Social Security — bringing the after-tax total to around $29,000. Day care for two children can run as much as $300 a week, or $15,000 a year, further reducing the income to $14,000. Job-related costs, such as transportation, clothing and lunches at work, can run around $4,000 a year, leaving only $10,000 net annual

"The second wage earner is toiling mightily for just $5 per hour of net income," said Pond.

On the plus side, however, discretionary expenses are likely to drop off dramatically for most newly expanded families.

"Many couples just don't have the desire to go out," said Michael Matheson, of American Express Financial Advisors in Minneapolis, and himself the father of a 1-year-old.

The Churchills have seen that happen.

"When you first get married, you say, 'Hey, let's spend this, let's spend that,'" said Mrs. Churchill. "We don't go out as often as we used to. We make it more of a family outing."

A large portion of what they would have spent on doing things like eating out, plus the $600 a month saved by moving from a five-bedroom to a three-bedroom house, is going toward their boys' college education.

Hank Madden, who runs Madden and Associates Financial Consultants in Jacksonville, Fla., says parents should decide ahead of time just how much of their offsprings' education they intend to fund.

GENERATION X: Many use networking panic neighborhood in Houston. "People my age want to be self-employed to have that security," Garcia said. "If you work hard, you know you'll continue to succeed."

Young workers have a different attitude today, said Garcia, who spent some time working as a bank teller.

"Why am I working my butt off if I'm going to get treated the same way (as other employees who don't work as hard)?" she asked.

It's not worth it, she said. "Companies can decide tomorrow your job is over — or if someone else comes in who's willing to accept less money, you're out of there."

Part of Garcia's ambition to do well on her own stems from the misery she has seen when older workers have been laid off after working hard for years.

Garcia said her father worked for IBM for 15 years and then started his own construction business. Even though it was tough going for a while, Garcia said her father had more time for his family and could take off whenever he wanted.

Even if they aren't running their own businesses, many Generation Xers see themselves as self-employed, York said. They realize they won't work for one employer for very long so they have to look out for themselves as they rove from one job to another. Generation Xers are more willing to take the risk of self-employment or of finding work in more unusual ways, York said. They know that the rewards can be greater and that they may get the freedom to do more of what they want.

Many Generation Xers are interested in a life as entrepreneurs, but they realize they need experience first — so they're joining big companies, said Bernie Cummins, director of career services at Bentley College in Waltham, Mass.

Even though they don't trust the big companies, they're taking jobs with them to get skills they'll need later, he said.

Students are also taking more internships and becoming computer literate so they're valuable to employers, Cummins said. On the other hand, they're not signing up to learn better communication skills even though companies are talking a lot about the importance of having good leadership skills and practicing effective teamwork, he said.

But they are good at networking. I went to an entrepreneur lunch recently, and before I got a chance to introduce myself to my dining companions, everyone had whipped out business cards and passed them around.

Generation Xers saw their parents network to get good jobs, and many realize they have to use connections to explore the marketplace as well as find work.

MORTGAGE: Fixed-rate loans gain appeal

(From 4C)

For borrowers, an often-used guideline for deciding between a fixed or adjustable loan — unless rates are very high or very low, as they were two years ago — is to take a loan with a rate fixed for the number of years you plan to live in the home.

If you plan to live in the house for five years, you can have five years of small payments and not worry about the annual adjustments that would follow. If you are somewhat unsure, though, you might like a loan that will adjust after five years — and not again for five years. This provides a measure of predictability.

"All of these mortgages are great because people just don't keep their mortgages as long as they used to," said Margaret Scott, president of Mortgage Advisory Services, a mortgage broker in Manhattan. "They either move or refinance."

Only about 23 percent of borrowers chose adjustable-rate mortgages in August, down from 59 percent in January, according to the Federal Housing Finance Board in Washington. Fixed-rate loans have gained appeal as rates have fallen. As of Wednesday, HSH Associates said the interest rate on the average 30-year loan was 7.91 percent, compared with 5.88 percent for a one-year adjustable-rate loan.

Furyk wins Las Vegas Invite this time; Els takes Europe's richest prize

The Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Jim Furyk, who last year let this tournament get away from him in the final round, came through Sunday with birdies on the 15th and 16th holes to win the Las Vegas Invitational by a shot over Billy Mayfair.

Furyk, a second-year pro with an unorthodox swing and sweet putter, captured his first PGA Tour victory with a 5-under-par 67 on the same course where he led after four rounds of his rookie season only to finish fifth.

Golf Roundup

Furyk broke a tie with Mayfair with a 15-foot birdie putt on the 15th hole, then two putted for birdie on the par-5 16th to take a lead he never relinquished. Mayfair birdied the 18th hole, but that still left him a stroke behind.

Furyk tapped in for par on 18, then raised his arms in triumph before getting a congratulatory hug from Mayfair.

"It's incredible," Furyk said. "It just hasn't hit me what happened yet. I can't tell you how happy I am."

World Match Play

VIRGINIA WATER, England — South African Ernie Els won his second straight World Match Play Championship, defeating U.S. PGA champion Steve Elkington 2 and 1 in their 36-hole final to win $270,000, Europe's richest golf prize.

The match ended when Els made a birdie on the par 5 17th and Elkington — after a tap in for his birdie — conceded the match.

The 25-year-old defending champion, who had won only one tournament since joining the U.S. tour this year, became only the second player to take the event in his first two appearances and the fourth to win in back to back years.

Hale Irwin won in his first two tries in 1974 and 1975. Gary Player and Seve Ballesteros are the other consecutive winners.

Senior Gold Rush

RANCHO MURIETA, Calif. — Don Bies sank a short par putt on the final hole to win his first tournament since 1992, taking advantage of Lee Trevino's 18th-hole bogey to capture the $700,000 Senior Gold Rush by one stroke.

Bies and Trevino exchanged the lead seven times in the final round, and the outcome came down to a pair of short putts on the last hole.

Trevino, who had two birdies and two bogeys in the five holes leading to the 18th, missed a 5-foot putt to give Bies a chance. Bies then tapped in a 3-footer to claim the $105,000 winner's prize.

Bies, who has won eight Senior Tour titles since joining the circuit in 1988, closed with a 4-under 68.

Chang return shoots down 'Scud'

TOKYO (AP) — Top-seed Michael Chang used his experience and strong returns Sunday to down unseeded upstart Mark Philippoussis 6-3, 6-4 to win the Seiko Super Tennis tournament.

Chang, the world's fifth-ranked player, handled the Australian's big serve better than anyone else in the tournament, breaking him three times, and used his speed to chase down balls that looked like winners.

Philippoussis, a teen-ager in his first full year on the tour, looked agitated for the first time in a tournament in which he eliminated former world No. 1 Stefan Edberg, fourth seed Richard Krajicek and tour veteran Brett Steven, the 11th seed.

"I think he was starting to get frustrated because I was able to get quite a few serves back," said Chang, who dropped only one set the entire week.

The 18-year-old Philippoussis, who is jokingly called "Scud" — like the missile — for his ripping groundstrokes and dominant serves, fought off three match points before Chang finished him with an overhead smash off a high defensive lob.

Philippoussis, 6 feet, 4 inches tall, had dominated with his serve, hitting 55 aces in five matches, winning a whopping 98 percent of his service games, and being broken only once.

Rate & Credit Policies

Rate charges are determined at the time of placement. All ads accepted are subject to credit approval. Some classified categories require payment in advance. Credit applications are also required for business accounts. Yearly contract agreements are available. The Midland Reporter-Telegram reserves the right to correctly classify and edit all copy or to reject or cancel any advertisement at any time.

Cancellations

The price of your ad will be based on the number of days published according to our rate structure. Call (915) 682-6222 - ask for your cancellation number. This is your record of cancellation and it is important that you have it in the event of any misunderstanding or adjustment. "Super Seller" and "Real Wheel Deal" ads may be cancelled, but are non-adjustable and non-refundable.

Errors and Adjustments

Please check your ad the first day that it appears to be sure that all of the information is correct. This will ensure that your ad is exactly what you want readers to see. Call us the first day if you find an error at 915-682-6222. To report an error in Saturday's edition call Saturday morning between 8 a.m. and 10 a.m. Errors in Sunday's edition should be reported on Monday morning after 8:00 a.m. We must limit our financial responsibility, if any, to the charge for the word or space, and cannot be held responsible for incorrect ads after the first day of publication.

Omissions of Ads

The Midland Reporter-Telegram assumes no financial responsibility in an ad beyond the cost of the ad itself, and no responsibility for the omission of an ad.

FREE BEE

FREE CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING
If you are a private individual selling one item for $50 or less you can place a 3 line classified advertisement for 4 days absolutely FREE in the Midland Reporter-Telegram.
Other restrictions apply.

"Sell It In 10" or We'll Run It Again"

3 LINES $15
10 DAYS
EACH ADDITIONAL LINE $5.00

If you have a car, truck, van, RV, motorcycle, boat or airplane we'll advertise it for 10 consecutive days. In the unlikely event you don't sell it we'll run it another 10 days at no charge. At the end of 20 days if it still hasn't sold we'll run it another 10 days at no charge, if you'll reduce the price by 10%. Price must be in ad. Only one vehicle per ad. For private individuals only (non-commercial).

Real Wheel Deals ONLY $25

If you have a car, truck, van, motor-home, motorcycle, airplane, bicycle or anything with wheels, your ad will be scheduled for 7 DAYS. When you get the desired results simply call us and we will cancel it immediately for only $25. For private individuals only.
