

Missing Deputies Traced to Illinois

Automobile Belonging To Pair Who Disappeared While Escorting Prisoners Found at Decatur.

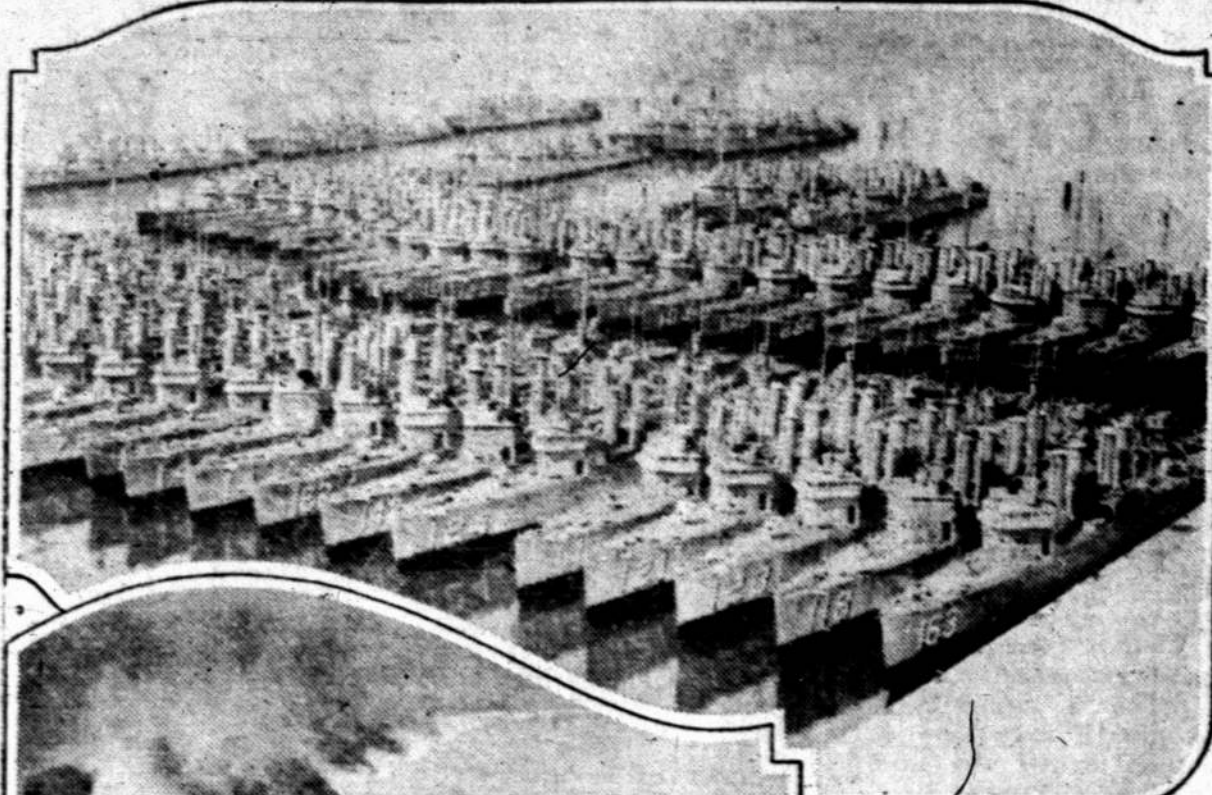

LAFAYETTE, Ind., Feb. 11.—The trail of John Burns and Samuel Baxter, youthful convicts, who disappeared Tuesday, was definitely followed to Decatur, Ill., today, when the automobile of Deputy Sheriff John F. Grove was found there in a garage. The fate of Grove and Deputy Wallace McGuire however, who dropped from sight while transporting the prisoners to the Pendleton, Ind., reformatory, was still an unsolved mystery.

A hat bearing the initials J. P. G., and identified as belonging to Deputy Grove, and a belt from a coronary coat, believed to have been worn by Burns, were picked up on a road near Maple Point, two and one-half miles east of here. Authorities said this indicated that the prisoners began a fight for freedom immediately after leaving Lafayette.

The automobile found at Decatur bore the Indiana license of Grove's car, 475-475. There was a bullet hole in the lower right hand corner of the windshield, but there were no other evidences of a struggle in the machine. Burns and Baxter previously had spent a short time in Danville, Ill., riding in an automobile similar to the one located in Decatur.

Burns, is 20 years old, height 5 feet 10 inches, weight 145 pounds, medium dark hair, and dark eyes. He was sentenced from Vermillion county, Illinois, in 1924, for one to twenty years on a larceny conviction. He again was sentenced from here on February 3 of this year, for five to twenty-one years, for robbery.

Part of Navy's Swarm of Destroyers Now Idle

In Philadelphia and San Diego, Calif., are more than 100 destroyers, like those pictured above in San Diego harbor. They are greased against rust and could be made ready for the high seas within a few days, if duty called, according to naval officers. In the inset some of the little warriors are shown laying smoke screens to keep in practice. They are trying to hide an imaginary U. S. fighting fleet from a hypothetical enemy.

ly while going back saved Tunney in the seventh round of the last Dempsey fight. I don't say he ran away. He didn't. He fought at every step and he fought Dempsey off him until he had Dempsey stepping back. It's pretty smart, you know, for a fighter to have skill and grace enough to make a tired man follow him around the ring and give him a pasting while he is trying to catch up.

"Well, as I said, I noticed his fine footwork first and thought there wasn't much more fault in his style. He still doesn't use his head enough. He ought to duck more punches than he does but he's a stand-up fighter and he wants to see his man every second. That is not a fatal fault for a man with such fine footwork and the strength that he has."

"I have thought sometimes that he doesn't shoot quick enough at an opening, but that fraction of a second of hesitation can be reduced by practice."

"Frankly, I don't think there is much to improve about Tunney. But a boxer always can tune himself by working with a good man and if he ever asks me to help him again I will. I sent him a telegram before the Dempsey fight volunteering to work with him, but I know he never got the telegram. Some of the fellows around him don't like me and though I wanted a lot of money or was spying."

French Fliers To Be Gotham Guests

Receive Plaudits of Fifth Avenue Crowds, Riding Atop Automobile In America's Metropolis.

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—The intrepid French fliers, Deudonne Costes and Joseph Lebrun, arrived at Mitchell Field today from Washington competing a 22,000 mile tour across four continents, and will be the guests of New York for a week.

Still in their flying togs, they rode up Fifth Avenue on the tumbled top of an open automobile, smiling and bowing in response to the cheers of those who lined the sidewalks and looked down upon them from above.

Lebrun speaks no English but Costes, speaking for both, said he could not reveal their plans for the immediate future. It was not likely they will fly across the Atlantic to Paris, he said, probably they will fly to San Francisco and cross the Pacific by steamer.

"It would be useless to seek new laurels by another flight to France," he said. "Col. Lindbergh's superb achievement was so excellently done that it left nothing for those who would follow his path."

Believe Hoover To Announce Soon

Prediction Is Commerce Head Will Enter Name by February 24 For Ohio Primary Vote.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—Confidence between Secretary Hoover and some of his supporters in Ohio have brought increasing indications that he will announce shortly that he is at least a receptive candidate for the republican presidential nomination.

If the commerce department head intends to enter the race and is willing to make a fight for a part of the Ohio delegation to the Kansas City convention, he must disclose his hand within two weeks. Under the Ohio law a candidate's personal consent must be given by February 24 if delegates pledged to him are to be in the field in the August primaries.

Senator Willis of Ohio, is an avowed candidate for president. Recently he received an endorsement from the Republican state central committee, by a 19 to 1 vote, but a few days later a group of Ohio republicans met in Columbus to urge the commerce secretary to mix in the April primaries with Willis, who has announced he was prepared to fight.

RAIL IMPROVEMENTS

T. and P. Makes Change to Handle Heavier Traffic

BIG SPRING, Feb. 11.—The Texas and Pacific railway will install the manual block system on the Rio Grande division between Baird and Pecos during February, if all equipment can be secured.

This measure is adopted as a safety measure to the movement of trains and is badly needed as a result of the heavy traffic that is now being handled by the T. & P. made necessary on account of the oil development in West Texas.

Grow Health and Happiness In Your Garden

EDITORS NOTE: Prior to initiating a campaign for more gardens in Lubbock county, Miss Louise Baird county home demonstration agent, has prepared the following article for the Avalanche-Journal.

GROW HEALTH AND HAPPINESS IN YOUR GARDEN

The true medicine chest is our bodies—always! This is a statement made in a recent number of the "How to Eat" magazine. That is quite true. The body is made up of 16 different chemicals, and if there is at all times a good supply on hand, they have more power to kill germs than the strongest carbolic acid.

These chemicals must be supplied to the body by the food that we eat, and if we do not eat the right kind of food, the body is not in a position to fight disease germs. These chemicals combine to form the white blood cells which act as little soldiers—always on guard to protect the body from the invading army of germs.

Regulate Development Not only must we have the proper food to supply the chemicals to protect our bodies from disease germs, but we must have certain foods in order for the body to develop and function properly. There are mysterious substances in food that have the power of producing strength, and which we must have in all parts of the body are developed normally.

These little food elements are called vitamins. It is the lack of them that causes bowlegs, knock-knees, thin and unhealthy hair, scaly complexion, nervousness, that horn-tired feeling, and many other common ailments.

Also we must have other kinds of foods to make the body function properly, just as livestock needs "roughage." The foods that can work the wonders described above cannot be found in a quick meal of fried meat and boiled potatoes, however. These foods are the ones we commonly neglect—the carrots, lettuce, uncooked beets, parsley, raw onions, tomatoes, the peeling of Irish potatoes, whole wheat flour, and many others.

Then, if the vegetables, and especially the leafy ones, and those that can be eaten raw, are the source of the food elements that give us health and happiness, why not grow them in gardens. Most people grow some of them, but probably less than one per cent of all the people in Lubbock county grow enough green vegetables to take care of their family needs during the growing season, much less enough for winter consumption. Each person should have two leafy and two raw vegetables every day, and that means that there must be a great variety to keep some of them from becoming monotonous. It means work and care—but it is worth it to be healthy.

Edgar A. Guest says: "If you would have a garden fair, Or small or very big, With flowers growing here and there You must bend your back and die."

There is another problem. Too many people think that they do not like spinach, carrots, cauliflower, and other things that are the very best foods they can get. One does not usually like the element he is in need of. It is as though the cells lost their suction power for that element, but if the foods containing it are repeatedly given to the stomach, the cells will call for it, and a strong liking is developed. Plan your gardens to be the medicine chest for the family. Plant your gardens to reduce not only the grocery bill but the doctor's bill. The gardens of Lubbock county will determine the health of Lubbock county for 1928. What will it be?

War Of Shippers In North Atlantic Begins With Five Great Nations In Race To Build Additional Steamers

United States, Italy, Great Britain, Germany, France Enter Competition While Business Increases

By NEA Service

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—The "war of the North Atlantic" brews in the passenger-carrying end of the shipping business.

Innumerable millions of dollars promise to be poured into it by five great maritime nations—the United States, Great Britain, Germany, Italy and France—before a decision is reached.

The war is on because of the demand of transatlantic passengers for two things—speed and luxury. Developments in it present or prospective include:

Building of a new American fleet of six liners of a brand new type costing $125,000,000, these ships to be in four days.

Hastening of construction of great new ships for British, German and Italian companies.

Preparations for the use of airplanes by many first class liners as a means of shortening the time that passengers must spend on the water.

A transatlantic passenger traffic that from November, 1926 to November 1927, amounted to almost a million fares—all classes included—is the prize for which the rival steamship companies are competing. A secondary consideration is the transportation of mail and fast freight.

$175,000,000 in Passenger Revenue Transatlantic travel in the year ending November 1, 1927, totaled 362,353 eastbound and 581,744 westbound passages, according to reports to the Atlantic conference of steamship companies. These figures are for all ships in the North Atlantic service exclusive of those in the Mediterranean, Canadian, Mexican, Cuban and West Indies trade. The fares paid totaled probably $175,000,000.

This volume of travel came near that of 1913, the banner year heretofore. In 1913, fares across the Atlantic were far less than they are now. Then came the World War and the severe "crimp" it put in passenger traffic, followed by immigration restrictions.

The Transoceanic corporation, allied with the American Brown Boveri Electric corporation, that proffers the $125,000,000 American thrust at the big companies of other lands. This corporation is trying to obtain a loan of $90,000,000 from the U. S. government.

If it succeeds, it is announced six liners will be built, fashioned after the new naval airplane carriers Lexington and Saratoga. They would be electrically driven, with sustained speed of 31 to 34 knots an hour.

Four day service between the U. S. and England or France would be possible at this speed. Reception and delivery of passengers by airplane with the planes landing on the ship's decks, would cut the time of passage to three days.

The Cunard company expects to add to its already imposing fleet a ship both larger and faster than the Majestic and Mauretania. The latest and the American liner Leviathan now are the queens of the North Atlantic, with the Mauretania holding the edge on speed.

Another great new vessel has been reported under construction for the White Star line, also British owned.

Germany is building the "Bremen" and the "Europa," both of which will rival the best ships now afloat. Italy is said to contemplate liners embodying entirely new principles in steamship construction, and capable of racing across the ocean at 35 to 40 knots per hour.

France at present is resting on the prestige of the new flagship, "Le de France," of the French line. The "le de France," of 43,500 tons gross tonnage, made its first voyage last summer. It is the most luxurious liner ever built. But how long it will retain this distinction remains to be seen. That the limit has been reached is doubtful.

"Where other nations build better and faster ships we still will have time to go them one better," said A. P. de Malglaive, the resident director of the French line in New York. "At present we are ahead of our competitors."

Baths for each stateroom, special restaurants and dining rooms, parlour lounges and smoking rooms, ballrooms and libraries, gymnasiums, hospital wards, swimming pools, chapels for religious services, period furniture, space for uncrated automobiles—these are but a few of the items which the new mode in steamship luxury demands.

Where $100 used to buy satisfactory first class accommodations on transatlantic ships, the minimum now is about $200, and the average probably $450.

Plans to Celebrate Thirty-First Birthday of Parent-Teacher Club of Nation; Is 'Child Welfare Day'

Many of 1700 Associations in Texas Branch To Have Programs; National Office Sends Suggestions.

AUSTIN, Feb. 11.—Mrs. Ellis Brubaker Porter, state chairman of the National Congress Birthday, states that many of the 1700 parent-teacher associations in membership with the Texas branch of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers are making plans to celebrate the thirty-first birthday of the mother organization on February 17th. She says that the movement which began its existence thirty-one years ago in the city of Washington, D. C. at the National Congress of Mothers, has in the opinion of educators and women, accomplished more for betterment of the conditions of child life than any other national international society.

Allice McLellan Birney and Phoebe Apperson Hearst have passed on with the greatest of their health, their vision and their courage, they set in motion three decades ago, a force which has grown with the years and which finds expression, not only through the organization with which their names are identified for all time, but through many other movements for child welfare and child study whose followers know not whence came the inspiration which has been the motive power for their undertakings.

The National Birthday is known as "Founders Day" because the aims and ideals of the founders is always one topic for discussion at this celebration. It is also known as "Child Welfare Day" because the great movement has been wholly in the interest of children. One of the members every where are reminded that the "love of childhood is the tie that binds them" and are asked to hark back to this and not to put their dependence in tremendous system of business administration for social betterment, or place their trust in wheels and motors rather than in the power which operates through them, namely the love of childhood.

The Texas associations which will observe the National birthday according to suggestions that have been sent to them by Mrs. Porter, have received leaflets and material which explain that the National Congress has loyal State Branches in forty-seven states of the union and in Hawaii and the Philippines.

Mrs. Porter in her message to the Texas associations states that Mrs. David O. Meeks, the National Founders' Day chairman who is pleasantly remembered by many Texans who met her at the National convention in Austin in 1923, is for the first time in ill health and has been unable to prepare her usual message to the associations for the observance of the birthday.

At the mid-year board meeting of the National Congress held in Atlantic City it was decided that in the future funds collected from the gifts on Child Welfare Day should be equally divided between the State and the National organization, the State Treasurer to retain one half of the amount, the other half to be sent to the National Treasurer. This fund retained in the State is to be used for extension work.

This equal division of the birthday fund will, I am sure be a greater incentive for us to increase our efforts towards a bounteous offering on February 17th.

PARIS, Feb. 11.—Parisian models, are expected to present their collections of spring hats early in the year, instead of showing simultaneously with the centurians. This is illogical, for the hat is the complement to the dress and in this era of the "ensemble" craze a woman would never dream of buying a dress to match a hat. Yet we are able now to say what hats will be worn, although the couturiers are still guarding their secrets of spring fashions.

Spring Hats

Flowers are being tried out as a trimming and there is no reason why they should not take, if only for the reason that women are tired of all other forms of ornamentation. Flowers, too, are decidedly feminine-looking which is in line with the movement for a greater femininity in dress which has been entirely successful, to all appearances.

The Place for Flowers Underneath the brim and close to the face seems to be the correct place for a flower, a fashion which decidedly adds poignancy to a woman's appearance. Some of these flowers are made of velvet, chiffon or even straw, in deep shades of gray or black, for example, or a black and almond green cluster on black straw. The return of the veil has been acclaimed by many men as a distinct proof that woman has leaped a long way toward the return to more feminine styles of dress and stop emulating man. It is true that a veil indicates all sorts of feminine trills and furbelows, but it seems to have got over its first timidly and is gaining ground every day. It is still only a nose veil, but to its charm is added that of the "mouche" or beauty spot, which lends it a delicate old-world air, all of which adds to the mysterious shadow which such a small wrap or veil can lend to a face.

THE JAZZ SINGER

Novelized by Arline De Haas
Taken from the scenario 'The Jazz Singer' Starring Al Jolson. Copyright, 1927, By Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.

SYNOPSIS
The New York Ghetto seethes in preparation for his important holiday. Yoni Kipper, Cantor Rabinowitz, who has taught his son, Jakie, the Hebrew songs, preparing him to be a Cantor also, is horrified by the child's statement that he wants to sing in a theater. That afternoon the Cantor discovers that Jakie is already singing ragtime in a "beer garden." He whips his son and the boy runs away from home on the Eve of the Day of Atonement. Ten years elapse and the new singer returns to a vaudeville booking office in San Francisco. An actress is crashing the gate of the manager's sanctum.

"Is that so?" the blonde reached out a hand and swept the boy to one side. "Not to me he isn't. Without stopping to knock she threw open the door to the inner sanctum and disappeared banging it behind her.
The boy stared, open-mouthed. The waiters glared hopelessly wondering why the boy watched the departed figure for a moment, then shrugged his shoulders and sat down. He pulled a piece of paper from the desk drawer, inserted it in the typewriter before him and busily hammered the keys. "Now is the time for all good men to come to the aid of their party," he wrote over and over again. Science save for the click-click of the machine, brooded once more over the room.

A very obvious Actor—spelled with a capital A—ran a hand fastidiously through his Shakespearean hair, flicked a speck of dust from his too-many-times-pressed suit, and shook his head. A pair of pretty twins in short, organdie dresses, who had arrived some hours before, were irrepressibly giggling, doing more to face their reality and resume their giggling over a crossword puzzle. A young man, slightly pudgy, with a suit that had once been well tailored but which now showed the effects of travel—and not particularly of luxe travel—decided to snatch forty winks of sleep betimes.

Again the door opened, this time to admit a personable young man obviously down on his luck. It was evident that he had made an attempt at spruceness, but his turned-up cuffs, his cheap tie, and his shiny suit told their own story. He paused, gazing irresolutely about the room, and then hesitatingly walked to the railing in front of the desk. The office boy assumed a greater interest in his work, not deigning to glance at the new arrival. The applicant cleared his throat nervously.

"I—I'd like to see Mr. Schuler, please," he began.
"Can't be done," snapped the boy, not lifting his eyes from his work. "He's in a important conference."
The young man turned slowly and swallowed a lump in his throat. It was just another turn down, and he should be getting used to them by this time, he thought. But even ten years of hunting jobs had not quite hardened his sensibilities. Ten long years and three thousand miles of weary travel from the Ghetto could work many changes, however—and had, it was a long jump from Jakie Rabinowitz to Jack Robin and it had taken the ten years and three thousand miles to make the jump. And so to the little Jakie Rabinowitz that was swallowed hard, and the Jack Robin of the snow looked about for a chair in the Star Vaudeville Circuit, San Francisco Branch office.

The pudgy, not-so-well-dressed young man had been starting at the newcomer. And now, as Jack Robin turned, the man jumped up from his chair and held out his hand.

"Well, if it ain't my old partner from the sticks," the pudgy young man laughing and pumping Jack's hand up and down with tremendous gusto.
"Buster Billings! Well, what's what are you doing here?" Jack grasped his friend's hand with an equal heartiness.
"Same thing you are. Huntin' a bookin'. How'd you get here?" he demanded.
"Long story, Buster," Jack returned. "See, it's great seeing you again. Let me see. Last time I saw you you were getting ready to climb a side door Pullman out in Cheyenne."
"Yeh, that's right," Buster laughed at the memory. "Ran onto a streak of hard luck down in Texas after that, and walked the ties for a while. Then I found an ol' pal puttin' on a song an' dance act out in Albuquerque an' he put me wise to a joint, 'Shivrin' Sal's Place'—ever hear of it?

Jack shook his head.
"Same joint, believe you me," Buster continued. "But I got a work-out there, an' they took me on for a comedy monologue in the cabaret. I got my notices all right an' a good break, but I was itchin' for Frisco, an' soon's I got enough jack ahead I beat it. Spent most of it playin' Seven-Up on the train, though," he added, laughing.
"Where're you been?"
"Yeh, let's see," Jack began. "I had a couple more weeks after you left, and then I was out for a job singing 'mammy' songs in a cabaret, but it didn't go over so big. About that time I decided I'd better move on, so I hopped a train for Santa Fe. Thought maybe I might get some some kind of a booking there, but—nothing stirrin'. I got lots of promises, but I couldn't eat them. Money ran out—well, you know that story."

Buster nodded sympathetically.
"I sure do," he grunted.
"Yeh, anyhow, I started to walk, I wanted to make Frisco myself, but I landed in Phoenix."
"Great little town—not!" Buster interrupted.
"Yeh, I got a job there, anyhow," Jack went on. "One of these night life places where there was plenty of night and not so much life. But I caught up with a little money, and then the place went bust. I took to tramping the streets again, but it was coming summer and there wasn't a thing to be had anyplace. I lasted through, but I was on my uppers by fall. Just about that time I heard of a show that was going out."
"Pretty tough, kid," Buster commented.

"Well, to make a long story short, I got hold of the manager and he talked cold turkey," Jack explained, "and after a week's rehearsal we headed for the sticks—and when I say sticks I don't mean maybe, I think we played every town hall in Arizona, Utah, and Nevada. And how!"
"Dent," groaned Buster. "I know I've been there myself, an' I hate to be remembered of them little unpleasant things. Ever strike Escalante, Nevada?"
"Did I?" Jack nodded sorrowfully. "What a town. There were three people in the audience, and not one of them cracked a smile."
"An' the Edwards House! What a joint! Did you stay there?"
"Did we stay there! Say, all we did was sleep when we could on the trains—and no sleepers for our outfit. We sat up."

"Oh, well, it's all in the game," Buster philosophized.
"Sure," Jack agreed. "Well, anyhow, we finally got as far as Sweetwater, Nevada, and the winter was pretty near gone. And I thought I was in luck because, even though I'd only been getting thirty a week, and pay my own expenses, I'd managed to keep the job going. But as I started to say, we got to Sweetwater, and our next jump was Calder, Cal. We got on the train that night—or about two in the morning. No one looked around for the manager—he wasn't so popular, anyhow, and when we woke up in Calder the boy friend was minus."
"Skipped?" Buster questioned laconically.
"Sure, and it was Saturday and pay day. He just beat it and left the whole C. O. flat. Stumped! And how. Well, we didn't have any scenery—nothing but a back drop, and nothing to hook. So we had to get on the best way we could. I headed for Frisco. Picked up some lifts along the way and some meals from farm houses, and landed in here yesterday. Say, think there's a chance of anything doing here?"

Buster shook his head wearily.
"I been comin' over here the last four days an' this guy ain't seen no one yet."
"That's not so hot," Jack commented.
The pair sat in silence for a time.
"O, by the way, there's a friend of yours playin' here," Buster smiled slyly.
"Friend of mine? Who?" Jack asked, coming to with a start.
"Mary Dale."
Jack colored and looked out of the window.

Major Hoople Talks On Temptation In Its Various Phases; Warning To All Offered by Local Philosopher

Those Who Can Meet, Greet and Vanquish Temptation Show Great Strength of Character.

By MAJOR HOOPLE MCORKLE, Avalanche-Journal Philosopher

When you run across a fellow who can resist temptation, can say "No" to the devil, can stand up to the world, a fellow with sufficient character to lead the Democratic party. A lot of people will tell you that nothing tempts them, and they think they are telling the truth. Yet they are not. They really have no idea concerning the word's meaning.

The ex-killer was tempted to thrash the world, and he made an effort to do so, but he failed. Had he been able to see the light—without the temptation, he might still be a killer.

Some men are tempted to run for office. They spend good money for campaigning, lose a year from their work and are then defeated. A few immediate friends voted for them and they had an idea they could get all the votes they wanted. The temptation was too strong.

Then there are gamblers. When you will meet men who can't pass within a block of a bottle of snake medicine without getting their snouts wet. They tell you they quit—that they won't drink any more, and that booze holds no temptation. A week later you will find them coiled around a light post in a desperate struggle with a bottle of "jake" or some other poison calculated to have the necessary per cent.

And when we talk about per cent, we say that it works on a sliding basis. Some men look for the red line on every bottle they see. One fellow went in to buy a tube of tooth paste, but when he failed to find its alcoholic content, he asked for another brand. Another chews a certain kind of tobacco because it has a chamomile flavor. Yet they tell you they can resist temptation.

We have automobile drivers who can't resist the temptation to speed! They will run a race with the 20th Century Limited and do their best to beat it. It is said that some men train with it and if they happen to "tie" it is simply awful. Yet we have a million people in America today who would take a 1914 model Ford and try to go around the Golden State limited. Can't resist the temptation—want a thrill.

Women are just as bad as men and in some ways they are worse. They don't drink quite as much and they smoke less, but look out when they hit a dry goods store. Maybe they should buy a gingham dress—it is all their husband's income will permit, but when they leave they generally have an organdy trimmed with Russian sable. They can't resist the temptation to dress and dress above their means. They may postpone others, but they are going to dress well or die. They have been doing it every since Eve learned how to sew fig leaves together with thorns. About the only difference is Eve wore more clothes than some of her granddaughters of today. Fig leaves are not transparent.

Even children fall for temptations. They will sneak across the street when they know a motor car is right upon them—they want to see if they can beat it. Often—very often they do not. Boys will play hooky from school when they know that punishment is sure. They are just tempted and fall for the temptation.

Another Temptation Young women will take car ride with men of questionable character. They know that the chances are nine to one they will be insulted, but they go just the same. The temptation for a thrill is too great. Often they have a life time to repent, but temptation in girlhood says caused it all—a temptation they could not resist.

Men are tempted to rob banks when they know that nine out of ten bank robbers are captured, convicted and sent to prison. Of course they figure they are too smart—the temptation is great so the bank is robbed. After they are placed behind prison bars they begin to realize that the temptation to rob should have been resisted.

Take a Look at Hickman. Then we have our killers, and some of them are certainly all the name implies. Hickman, for instance, is more than a killer—he admits it. Not being satisfied with slaying his victim he was tempted to mutilate her body, and the temptation was stronger than his will power. Just what Hickman's fate will be we can not say, but undoubtedly his punishment will be as severe as the laws of California will permit. Then we had Hassell-

the wholesale killer. He didn't stop with one or two murders, but was tempted to slay all the way from the Golden Gate to the Gulf of Mexico. So far as is known he held no malice toward any of his victims, but the temptation to kill was stronger than the man, so he snuffed out the lives of at least a dozen people. He has paid with his own life for his crimes. The temptation to kill was too strong.

Every day, every hour, almost every second we are tempted to do something wrong. Often the impulse passes away almost as rapidly as it came upon us, and this shows power to resist. We are tempted to lie, to steal, to murder, to wrong and to defraud. If we allow ourselves to be guided by temptation it will only be a matter of time when we will find it impossible to resist anything. Will power will be gone and we will be at the mercy of our animal instincts.

We Can Win It is pretty bad to want a cigarette, see them all around and not smoke. We can taste or smell the sweet aroma until we get dizzy, but if we refuse to smoke we are winner of the contest. It takes a real man to pass up a Scotch high-ball after he has been guzzling "roasting ear wine" and sheep dip. But if he has sworn off he shouldn't take the Scotch.

It takes a real woman to wear a last year's hat when she might have had a new one. Yet if her finances were not sufficiently stable she is better for wearing the old hat. It takes a good boy to go to school when all his chums play hooky and go fishing, but he is right when he refuses to give in to the temptation.

It Takes Character We are all tempted every day and we are tempted to do wrong most of the time. Yet if we have enough manhood or womanhood we should be strong enough to resist these temptations.

This is not a sermon, and if you will excuse us for the few remarks we'll promise you a good one next week even if we have to tell you how a dentist traded tooth pulling for a cow or why some people are red headed.

Flying Guards In Five States Are Watching Forests

Washington, Oregon, Idaho, California and Montana Hear Purr Of Airplanes As Lookouts Pass

By NEA SERVICE SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 11—The air patrol, Uncle Sam's most modern means of fighting forest fires, claims a fine record as the year starts.

Limited thus far to the three western districts of the forest service, the air patrol operates from five bases—Spokane and Seattle, Wash.; Eugene, Ore.; and Sutter Field and Griffith park, Calif. The patrol covers forests in California, Oregon, Washington, Montana and Idaho.

Several services are now rendered by the pilots. They seek new blazes, watch the progress of going fires and report to ground workers, and carry officials and men from job to job.

After Storms The air patrol was operated in California in 1920, 1921 and 1922, by the forest service in cooperation with the army air service. Airplanes—Jennys and DeHavillands—were furnished by the war department and flown over regular patrol routes by members of the air service.

After a trial of three seasons, the regular flying patrol was abandoned and the planes were held in readiness for special flights after severe electrical storms, for reconnaissance on going fires and for transporting equipment and officers.

Campaigning for Senator Curtis

Now the planes operate from five bases, each accessible to a large fire area. In normal years the patrol commences about June 15 and continues until the end of the fire season in September or October. Many trips have been made this winter, especially in Southern California, where, some serious outbreaks have been reported.

Now the War department furnishes DeHavilland planes, flying equipment and repair parts and the forest service furnishes pilots and maintenance.

Here is how the air patrol has protected western forests during the last three years:

Number flights	428	483	247
Hours in air	905	1002	546
New fires rep'd.	25	26	35
Reconnaissance flights	107	148	82

And during the three-year period there have been no serious accidents except such minor things as broken landing gears.

To secure the Republican presidential nomination for United States Senator Charles Curtis, of Kansas, Governor Ben Paulen, of the Sunflower state, has opened pre-convention campaign headquarters in New York. Here he is with Mrs. Paulen upon their arrival from Topeka.

Texas Has Mines

Shafter Mine Turns Out Much Silver

ALPINE, Feb. 11.—The Shafter silver mine, southwest of Alpine, in Presidio county, ranked first in the production of precious metals in Texas during the year 1927, according to a report made by Chas. D. Henderson, United States Bureau of Mines, department of commerce. Not only was it first, but it produced a large percentage of the total output.

During the year Texas metal mines produced 400 ounces of gold, 1,000,000 ounces of silver and 500,000 pounds of metal. The mine at Shafter has been a consistent producer since 1885 and during this time has taken out 18,687,000 ounces of metal. Shafter is only twenty miles from the town of Presidio.

Highway Officials Sound Warning On Bond Issue

State Authorities Advise Counties Considering Hardsurface Highways Concerning Initial Steps To Take

Hit Or Miss Method Will Not Avail Much, Is Claim Of Engineer In Official Statement Saturday

Proposals for county bond issues for the construction of improved highways where state funds are expected to be involved, should, for the best interests of both the county and the state, be submitted to the State Highway Commission for approval before the action is called, and the state department is on record as discouraging any bond issue for this purpose until such action is taken. It was revealed in a statement by C. B. Chisholm, state highway engineer, approved by the State Highway Commission and released here Saturday through division offices of the department.

Such action is designed not only to assist counties in arriving at the amount of money needed for the work, but to facilitate matters with the state department, and bring about a more equitable expenditure of funds on a connected system of state maintained highways, the statement said.

The State Highway Commission has many times been confronted with, and still frequently meets the problem of counties voting bond issues, with all or a portion of same to apply on state highways and in the bond order for such issues the location or route of the highway or highways involved, is often determined, the statement said. "In many cases the county's funds are insufficient for their equitable share of cost of the improvements on such highways; also in many cases such bonds are carried for highways of minor importance to the state system.

"It is the purpose of the highway commission to use construction funds at its disposal on such highways and in such manner and on such locations as will result in the maximum benefit to the greatest number of people of Texas. Such a purpose requires and demands attention to a cardinal or preferred system of connected state highways and the application of a considerable portion of construction funds on such a system.

Location Is Essential "It is also extremely necessary that the highways of Texas be on a proper location and with a proper width of right-of-way. By this is not meant that the local viewpoint should be ignored, but rather that a location be selected that will serve the best interests of the state at large with due regard to engineering economy and safety.

The commission earnestly suggests that the counties contemplating bond issues embracing construction of state highways, before issuing the election order, shall first submit their election plans to the state highway department and confer with the commission regarding same, in order that the types of highway may be generally determined in advance of financing.

Warning Is Issued "In view of the great number of bond issues already voted and the relation of available state funds to desirable projects, the commission desires at this time to discourage the voting of bond issues involving state highways unless and until the above suggested procedure has been followed. This forced the road builders to take to the mountainsides, which incurred great expense. Added to

West Virginia Engineers To Make Roads In Mountains Safe For State's Autoists

Huge gas well casings, drilled deep into the mountains of West Virginia

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Feb. 11.—West Virginia road engineers have originated an inexpensive system of safeguarding road beds from washouts and landslides. When West Virginia started a huge road building program a few years back the engineers faced a serious problem. Railroads had been built first through the state's numerous valleys and they chose the best routes, using in many cases all of the ground available between the hills and the rivers. This forced the road builders to take to the mountainsides, which incurred great expense. Added to the expense was the fear of landslides. Cut along the sides of the mountains, there was great danger of the road beds washing away in heavy rainfall.

It took a long time for the roads to settle before they could be gravelled or paved after a final grading. The engineers hit upon the idea to use abandoned gas well casings, which are numerous in West Virginia, for the hillsides.

On steep cuts and wide curves these pipes are drilled down into solid rock at the lower edge of the road. See WEST VIRGINIA Page 8

Ordinance To Be Aid To Autoists Officials Think

Traffic Regulations To Be Tightened To Better The Driving Conditions Here, Police Declare

A tightening of traffic regulations here will be effected through a new city ordinance recently passed by the city commission that is to go into effect shortly, and these regulations, if adhered to by automobile drivers will considerably lessen hazards of both auto drivers and pedestrians, police officers said yesterday.

The new ordinance, while permitting left hand turns on green lights, as has been the custom since lights were installed Christmas, provides that if at any time the commission deems it wise to prohibit left hand turns, this can be done by placing signs under the lights, without the necessity of passing another ordinance.

Another phase of the new ordinance provides for traffic lanes, two of which will be on each side of the street, and for regulations governing use of these lanes. Autoists who desire to make a right turn on the intersection must use the right lane, or the one closest to the curb and those desiring to make a left turn must use the other, in order to avoid confusion of one car making a right hand turn in front of one which would turn the other way or go straight ahead. This will greatly facilitate movement of traffic, officers pointed out. Cars which would continue straight on the

New York Paper, Telling Story Of Lincoln's Assassination, Brought To Lubbock By Wolffarth Citizen

W. M. Meek Is Owner Of New York Herald April 15, 1865; Complete Story Of Slaying Is Told

Its yellow faded leaves, bordered in black, telling the details of the assassination of Abraham Lincoln, a copy of the New York Herald, of April 15, 1865, was brought into the office of the Avalanche-Journal yesterday by W. M. Meek of the Wolffarth community, and it recalled vividly high spots in the career of the splitter of rails and binder of nations, who rose from the log cabin to the White House.

Abraham Lincoln, whose name shines ever brightly with the passing years in the scroll of illustrious men who have lived and died for America, was born 119 years ago today in a rude log cabin of Kentucky. From the humblest of environment he climbed to the highest pinnacle of fame.

His History Familiar Every school boy is familiar with the life story of Lincoln. They know the inspiring legend of his studies by the candle light in his home; of his rise, by sheer force of moral courage and inherent leadership from the farm field to the place of attorney, and then, in a bound, to a position of power in politics which had as its climax the White House.

And even more familiar to us of the South is the story of Lincoln's generosity and mercy during the civil war and especially when the side turned against the South. Even more endearing perhaps, than Lincoln's rugged statesmanship—and he has seldom had a peer—are the many stories which illustrate that primarily he was human and that primarily he loved his fellow.

Life's High Spots Recited The high spots in Lincoln's life are recited in the copy of the Herald exhibited in the Avalanche-Journal office. The paper also serves as an indicator of the journalistic standards of that early day and presents a striking contrast to the daily newspaper of 1928.

You see no banner or streamer headlines, and the paper—which had at that time been established 30 years and which was edited at that time by the famous James Gordon Bennett—was of six columns in width.

In contrast to the snappy, complete headlines that are a feature unique with American newspapers, the stories in this issue—and can imagine a "liver" story that the assassination of a president—are merely labeled—not headlined at all.

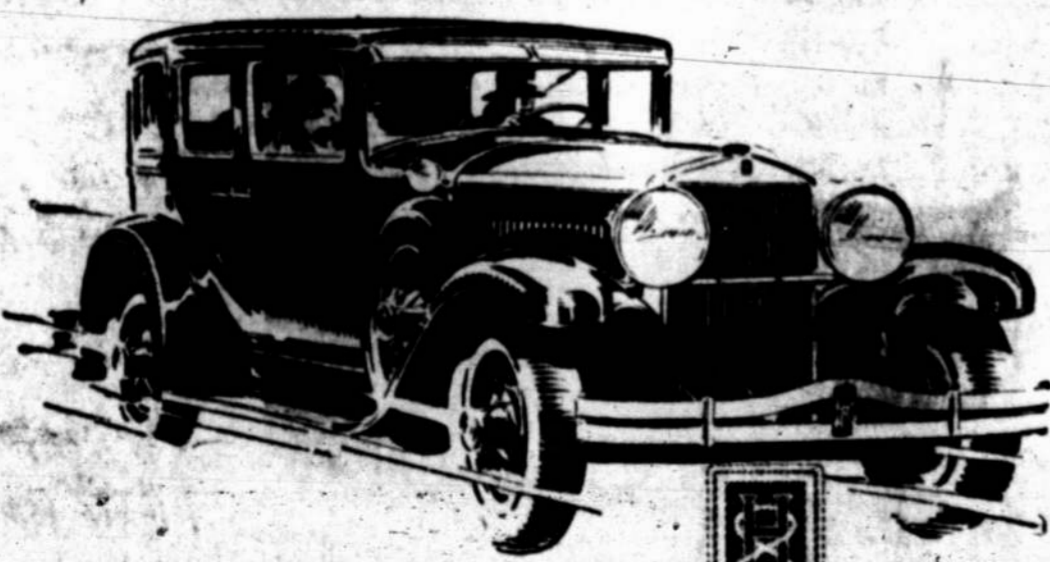

Story Labeled "Important" The story telling of the attack on Lincoln is labeled, "Important." Then in decks, one sees "Assassination of President Lincoln," and nine others taking up other details of the shooting.

Newspapers today are supposed to be absolutely unbiased in their news columns and to simply reflect

The jewel case had been opened with a steel chisel after being battered with a poker. This leads Vance to the theory that the real murderer had not opened it, but someone else, someone who was hiding in the closet when the murder was committed.

Bright Colorings On Cars Permanent

Feminine Taste, That Sets Motor Car Fashions, Asks Continuance Of Vogue In Wide Use In 1927

The vogue of bright colors which has featured automobile fashioning the past year, shows no sign of passing, and has been strongly emphasized at the 1928 New York and Chicago national shows. Experienced judges seem to agree that the vivid and picturesquely named shades which replaced the former somber and monotonous finish of motor cars are destined to occupy a permanent place in public preference.

However, say Chrysler color technicians, the trend is toward a more harmonious use of color, in chromatic blends which employ various tints of the same basic color, rather than toward sharp contrasts.

Feminine taste largely guides the selection of new automobiles just as it shapes the great majority of expenditures by American families, and it has evidently decreed a permanent vogue for the light, luscious tones which have been so popular of late in home furnishings, in dress and in beauty, though of course the more restrained finishes are still available for their adherents.

Americans of today, educated in recent years to a heightened appreciation of artistic expression, people of moderate means as well as the wealthy—have acquired an assured consciousness of quality and have definitely left behind them the timid conservatism of former times. They know the beauty of color and confidently trust their knowledge to guide their indulgence in its use.

The prospect at present is therefore that color combinations will continue to be chosen in 1928 with scientific selection of color values, as during recent months and with consistent consideration to their adaptability for each particular type and model of car.

How the Hittin Linseed Care

BY ISRAEL KLEIN
Science Editor, NEA Service

If you are using glycerine as an anti-freeze in your radiator, here are a few practical tips to help increase the efficiency of your automobile. They come in the form of a bulletin issued by the Glycerine Producers' association of New York.

Perhaps the most useful tip is that concerning the use of winter-vents or shutters.

Automatic winter-vents work by the use of a thermostat in the cooling system. Glycerine has no ill effect on its operation. In fact, if there is any defect in the operation of the winter-vent it will show up in the motor meter before the glycerine itself will boil. Glycerine has a higher boiling point than water.

Special attention, however, must be paid by motorists who have the hand-operated types of winter-vents. This is necessary because the motor meter registers the temperature of the air above the solution in the radiator, which is usually colder than the liquid itself.

Therefore the winter-vent should be opened before the red liquid in the motor meter reaches the summer average mark.

Motors are designed to work most efficiently when the water jacket temperature is between 160 and 180 degrees. When the outside temperature is between 32 and 40, the water jacket heat will reach the point of best efficiency with the red in the motor meter showing only one-third of the way up.

At zero, the red will barely show when the water jacket temperature is just right. Therefore, the winter vent should be opened up as soon as the red appears, at this low outside temperature.

Motor Car Helps Cavalry In War

Future cavalry units will be motorized, says Major General Herbert B. Crosby, shown at lower left, who is chief of cavalry in the U. S. army. He bases it on recent successful maneuvers in Texas, during which horses, men and tanks, as shown here, were transported to the "battlefields" much faster than heretofore.

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—Air-planes, tanks and motor vehicles have not eliminated the cavalry from warfare—they have only increased its effectiveness.

Since the world war, the military strategists of some nations have almost concluded that in future wars everything is to be mechanical, but our own generals have decided that while armies should be mechanized to the peak of efficiency, this process should be supplementary to the use of conventional military units.

The cavalry, for instance, didn't have much chance to function after the armistice had dug themselves in on European soil in the last war. Next time, it is likely to be different, and recent experimental maneuvers, notably those of the First Cavalry Division in the Big Bend section of Texas during the fall, have been carried out with that in mind.

Cavalry units from now on probably will be provided with tanks, armored cars and motor trucks acting as adjuncts rather than replacements.

The motor truck, instead of replacing the cavalry horse, will be used to transport the horse and rider to the point where the horse should be used. Three inches from the top is as high as the solution should go, for glycerine expands quite rapidly under heat and might overflow.

In this connection be it remembered that a car, glycerine full and parked on a hill, should face the upward. Facing down all the cavities the water supply forward, in perhaps enough to let some of it run out through the overflow pipe.

Some manufacturers recommend monthly flushing of the cooling system to keep the radiator and water-jacket clear of rust. That's not necessary with glycerine in the system, for glycerine doesn't cause rust and doesn't affect the metal lining of the radiator.

Big Gain in Time

Troop F of the Fifth Cavalry moved from Camp Maria to Fort Clark, a distance of 300 miles, in 36 hours. The same journey to the maneuvers at Maria required 75 days of marching. That's the story of motorized cavalry units in a nutshell. The advantage is that we can send cavalry units at a high speed and then have horses and men fresh to enter the fight.

Similar maneuvers were carried out successfully over border routes and country wagon roads, through rough country, dry river beds and steep arroyos. You see, another great advantage is that border troops can be stationed far apart and yet be quickly concentrated when necessary.

It's simple General Crosby points out, to move large bodies of troops by truck. An army truck will hold 20 men fully equipped. The same used to transport horses and men to concentration points ten times as fast as they can travel by themselves and land them fresh and ready for action.

Limits for Motors

Generally speaking, the extent to which motor units will be used in future warfare will depend on the stage of operations. For instance, cavalry can get into many rugged places where tanks and trucks can't go. In mountainous, roadless country, even the old pack mules will be indispensable.

"The cavalry remains supreme as a swift weapon of opportunity on the ground," says Major General Herbert B. Crosby, chief of cavalry. "Improvements in motor transportation will add to its effectiveness and the air force and the cavalry will appear as co-workers rather than rivals."

The Texas maneuvers demonstrated not only the ability of cavalry to sustain long marches and operate successfully in difficult country but also the ability and limitations of motorized units attached.

To Make Highway Of Chinese Wall

Project Will Be Result Of Years Of Dreaming; Is To Be Made Safe For Those Who Wish To Speed

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—Some time in August, Edward Barrett of New York is going to leave for China to start on his plan of converting the great Chinese wall into a high-speed automobile highway.

The project will be the fulfillment of a dream of many years. It was as a metallurgist for the Russian government in Siberia, that Barrett first had this idea. Then when he became a collector of Chinese treasure, he was able to develop the idea into something practicable.

Now, Barrett is seeking the cooperation of American automobile manufacturers for his project. But whether he gets that or not, he says he will go to China to start on this immense highway. Labor is cheap there, so he expects his cost to be low.

What it entails is practically the modernization of an ancient road and the closing of many gaps through China and Siberia. When completed it will be an unbroken highway thousands of miles long.

Only part of it, however, will be laid on the wall itself. This was built in 20 B. C. in the Chin dynasty and long stretches of it still stand. It is along the top of the wall that dips among the canyons of the Kiangnan range, that Barrett will place his road. Here it is 30 feet wide and about 25 to 30 feet high.

All it needs is paving along the top.

Banquet Program Is Arranged For History Society

Panhandle-Plains Group To Meet Feb. 17 In Annual Session With Canyon As Official Host

Special To The Avalanche Journal—CANYON, Feb. 11—The program for the Panhandle-Plains Historical society meeting which takes place February 17 is now well worked out and in the hands of the printer, according to the statement of the officers of the society.

The tickets for the banquet, which have been on sale for about a week, are going rapidly. It is expected that at least 100 people will be in attendance at the meeting.

Hobart To Preside
T. D. Hobart of Pampa, president of the society, will preside at the business meeting in the afternoon. Judge Jas. D. Hamlin of Farwell, a life member of the organization, will be toastmaster at the banquet, and J. O. Guleke, Amarillo attorney, and life member, has been invited to appear on the program.

Thomas F. Turner of Amarillo who for four years was president of the organization, will be in charge of a story telling contest which will be a feature of the banquet program. Cowboy songs will be another feature of the banquet program.

The girls glee club of the West Texas State Teachers college will sing at the banquet.

Many Relics Expected
The members of the society who gather for this event are from all parts of northwest Texas and will bring a great number of relics. This year the officers are putting the emphasis upon branding irons. It is hoped that a very large number of branding irons will be received at this time, and that a case may be filled exclusively with these. The Panhandle-Plains Historical society, located as it is in the heart of the old range region, should have the largest collection of branding irons to be found anywhere in the United States. Every branding iron will carry with it a history of the ranch, which is a feature of the banquet.

Features of Business Meeting
The officers of the historical society state that the routine business will be attended to as rapidly as possible in the afternoon business meeting so that the papers which will be read at that time will be the most interesting feature. Careful students of the Panhandle-Plains history will furnish the papers.

The J. A. Ranch, land rushes, and incidents from Crosby county's history, will be the subjects of the papers which will be read on this occasion.

Two members of the board of directors are to be elected this year.

Sunday Sermon

...of darkness the spiritual cause of wickedness in the heavenly places. Because of the antagonism between God's Kingdom and the devil's Kingdom, we are admonished to "put on the whole armor of God, that we may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil" (v-11) this conflict between the Kingdom of God and the Kingdom of Satan, will go on until Christ shall put down all rule and all authority and power: "For He must reign till He hath put all enemies under his feet" I Cor. 15: 24-25. St. Paul says (v-24) "then cometh the end when he shall have divided up the Kingdom to God even the Father. St. John tells us of the final overthrow of "the Kingdom of this world" in the end of the age when the seventh angel shall sound His trumpet. "And the seventh angel sounded and there were great voices in Heaven saying, "The Kingdom of this world has become the Kingdom of our Lord and of His Christ and He shall reign for ever and ever" Rev. 11:15. Take notice that the words "Kingdom" and "are" are not found in the quotations because that mistake of our authorized version is corrected in the Revised version of the New Testament and in every scholarly translation of which I know anything. I call special attention to this correction because it is productive of serious errors in our interpretation of the Scriptures, concerning "the end of the age."

But some will ask us what difference does it make if the plural is put for the singular? Just the difference between the truth and error. Satan's Kingdom is one, not many. As already seen he is the God of this world. The spirit that worketh in the children of disobedience II Cor. 4:4; Eph 2:2 and Eph 3:11-13.

Many have represented the world as being gradually transformed by the church, so that when Christ comes again, He will come to a world already made Christian by the church; and according to their theory, the nations or Kingdoms of the world, will have become the Kingdom of our Lord and of His Christ. This they say, is what John saw and heard, when the seventh angel sounded as recorded in Rev. 11:18. All of which is a flat contradiction of what Christ and the inspired apostles taught, concerning the spiritual condition of the world, when our Lord shall come again. Anyone familiar with our New Testament knows this to be a fact; but the obsession of a favorite theory has obscured the plain facts, so that some good and great men have been unable to see things contrary to their obsession, or mental bias.

If we make the Kingdom of God and His righteousness first we have the assurance that "all these things" about which we may be so anxious, and uncertain, will be added unto us. Do we really accept the pledge of our Saviour? This is a real test of our faith.

Don't forget that everything we look for in the Kingdom of God, "Temporal" and "Spiritual" depends upon the veracity of God. Has he ever proved false in His promises to His children? Can any say "I have trusted His promises and he did not make good His word to me? I do not know of one, who can truthfully say "I trusted in Him and He deceived me." Of course we must not forget the promise is based upon the condition that we seek first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness.

When George Mueller began the orphanage work, which has become one of the greatest, if not the greatest orphanage in the world he had no money for this venture. He felt that God could be trusted for what was necessary, both for building and maintenance. He did not advertise his needs. He did not send out appeals for money. He went to God for help and asked Him for means to carry on the work. He dared to take God at His word, and put the Almighty Father in Heaven to the test. Did he trust God in vain? Is it not wonderful that through a period of more than sixty years this man of faith, built and maintained the greatest orphanage in the world, by trusting God asking Him directly for the money necessary to feed and clothe more than two thousand children. It had been just one instance someone might have said it was just a coincidence, or it might have just happened so, but things do not happen that way for more than three score years without a Father who honoreth His own word and the faith of those who trust Him.

When we think of our weak faith that is hardly willing to trust God for the support of an ordinary family without some anxiety, in comparison with the faith of George Mueller, who risked God for the support of more than 2000 children, we feel rebuked for our little faith.

Others have put God's word to the test, and proved to the world that he is faithful as promised. Our trouble is that we often discount the promise of God and carry burdens in our heart that our Heavenly Father wants to care for. "Cast thy burden upon the Lord and he will sustain thee. "Where is your Faith?"

News Of South Plains Progress

The story of actual progress and the future possibility of the Great South Plains' section has been carried to the men of high-finance in the Eastern centers by this company. They have been told of the productivity of our soils, of the wonderful crop records we have established and of the abundance of land waiting development. They have been told of the growth of cities, towns and communities. They have been convinced of the safety of investing in securities with South Plains' properties their guard against loss.

It has been one of the greatest pleasures of this company to have laid the actual facts of this country before big men of finance. We have brought dozens of Eastern bankers to inspect this great section.

On The Threshold Of Wonderful Growth

Lubbock and the great South Plains of Texas are now entering what we believe the very threshold of building activities, colonization of lands, of such extent and magnitude that one can hardly predict the future situation with any degree of accuracy even though we look through the most optimistic eyes.

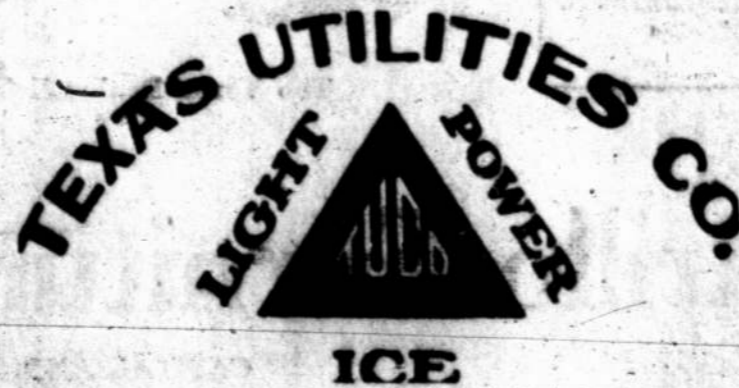

The proof has been made known throughout the country of the vastness of this section, of its low priced, high productive lands. Farm records through years of repetition and constancy of increase have proved this section a great agricultural Empire in the making. One can vision great things but rest assured the actual future will be greater and brighter than you expect.

Leadership To Mantain In Public SERVICE

To be privileged to render a service so vital to the people, so vital to the country's development, as we are in such a country of promise, is an opportunity and obligation. We wish to lead the growth by public utility service—of such character that everyone may point out to those who come later as the finest obtainable. We want our services to be available to every home in this section. We want the cost to be lower than same service is rendered in other places. We are constantly building, expanding and developing our services so that we may take every advantage offered by the section's growth and meet the obligation we owe the people.

You Are Always Welcome To Any Of Our Offices

This company, besides being an electric company, is a manufacturer of pure ice; a big distributor of this product. We solicit inquiries for service from this department from any section of the South Plains.

Are you sure of electric light efficiency in your home? Are you making this cheap power do the drudgerous housework? If not may we not have the privilege of suggesting needed appliances?
