Iran Airs Anti-U.S. Frenzy In March

By The Associated Press

MILITANT Iranians holding the U.S. Embassy in Tehran have released the embassy's Italian cook, but threatened harsh action Friday against their remaining hostages if the United States sends the shah to any country except Iran.

Luigi Salvia, the 51-year-old cook, called his mother at her home on Capri and told her he was freed Thursday. The State Department in Washington also reported Salvia had been released, but said he was the only one and the embassy invaders still hold 60 or 62 Americans and about eight non-Americans.

The Italian news agency ANSA quoted Salvia as saying he had been under "strict guard by armed Islamic students" as a "possible spy" at a house inside the large embassy compound. It also said Salvio reported that he and his Dutch-born wife and their 8-year-old daughter were staying wih Iranian friends in Tehran and could not leave for Italy immediately "because one needs special permits to leave Tehran and there is a little confusion over here."

Huge crowds of shouting marchers descended on the occupied embassy Friday in a virulent anti-American demonstration. Some 80,000 marchers clamored outside the compound after Moslem Sabbath prayers in what NBC-TV news in Tehran called the biggest march since the Nov. 4 takeover. A long line of taxis carried effigies of animals which demonstrators hit as they shouted anti-American slogans.

In Washington, President Carter told reporters there were no encouraging developments in the crisis, which entered ts 13th dy.

Foreign diplomats predicted a long siege for the hostages. Shortly after the takeover, students released some non-American hostages and there had been reports they would release the remaining Indians, Pakistanis and Salvia.

Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, the 79-year-old Moslem revolutionary leader who has played a major role in the standoff between Iran and the United States, has canceled all appointments for three weeks because of "slight fatigue and illness," the state radio said.

Receives Minister

But an evening broadcast by Tehran Radio said Khomeini, at his headquarters in the holy city of Qum, received Abolhassan Bani Sadr, the Foreign Ministry supervisor. It said Bani Sadr met with reporters after the meeting and was asked about U.S. economic measures against Iran. The broadcast quoted him as replying, "There can be no war without losses and damage," but "the losses suffered by the U.S. would be many times more than Iran's."

A spokesman for the militants inside the embassy told Tehran Radio, monitored in London: "We announce the message of the Iranian people to the world that if America expels the shah, it will be committing an offense even greater than its previous ones. The shah should be delivered to the Iranian nation with his hands tied. If America expels the shah, it must be certain that harsher decisions will be taken against the hostages." The shah is a patient in a New York hospital.

PLO Backs Khomeini

The Palestine Liberation Organization, which last week said it would try to win the hostages' release, declared its support for Khomeini's regime, according to a Tehran radio broadcast quoting the Palestinian news agency.

A PLO spokesman refused to say whether the statement declaring support for Iran's economic war with the United States also meant support of the embassy siege.

The militant students took over the embassy indeendently, but Khomeini immediately threw his support behind their demands that Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi be extradited from the United States to stand trial in Iran.

Bani Sadr appears to be shifting away from the extradition demand and has called for return of the shah's wealth and trial before an international tribunal.

In Washington, U.S. officials said the shah is free to go anywhere he wants, despite threats by students holding the U.S. Embassy in Tehran. State Department spokesman Hodding Carter said

Eight Iranians Arrested On Firearms Charges

BALTIMORE (AP) — Eight Iranians were arrested at an airport here carrying high-powered rifles, ammunition, scopes and a street map of Washington with embassy buildings marked, authorities said Friday.

Three were released Friday night on $25,000 unsecured bond after surrendering their passports and appearing at a hearing in U.S. District Court. The other five remained in custody. A hearing was set for Monday in federal court.

Court documents said one of the suspects told federal agents the guns and dammunition were destined for Iran. There was no explanation from the U.S. attorney's office of the purpose of the map or the firearms and bullets.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Herbert Better said the seven men and one woman were arrested Thursday night at Baltimore-Washington International Airport in connection with "potential violations of the federal firearms laws." He refused to elaborate.

In Washington, Les Stanford, a spokesman for the federal Office of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, said ATF agents made the arrests and seized firearms and ammunition. Undercover work by ATF agents led to the arrests, according to a court document.

U.S. Magistrate Fred Smalkin completed bond hearings for the eight early Friday morning, said a Smalkin spokeswoman who asked not to be identified.

She identified those arrested and their bonds as Friedoon Rostami, 27, $100,000; Sirous Salahvarzi, 29, $100,000; Mohammad Reza Bahadoritoolabi, 24, $100,000; Bagher Moomeney, 28, $200,000; and Seyed Abrahim Mosavi, 26, $250,000.

Angered Byrd Feels Like Taking Punch At Iranian

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd says Iranian students demonstrating in the United States make him so angry that "I'd feel like taking a punch at one myself if I could get to him."

The Senate's ranking Democrat said he wouldn't blame Americans for "throwing rocks or eggs or anything else" at demonstrating Iranian students.

Byrd's comments were a sharp change from his previous public stance, in which he asked for calm and restraint to prevent possible reprisals against the approximately 60 American hostages in the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

President Carter appealed Thursday for Americans to use restraint to avoid endangering the hostages.

A spokesman for Byrd said later that the senator was "not condoning violence but just saying that he understood the feelings of Americans" angry at demands that the Americans be exchanged for the deposed Shah of Iran who is being treated for cancer in New York City.

Byrd himself later issued a statement saying he does not "advocate or con-

Grand Jury Indicts Four In Slayings

MURDER SUSPECT Joseph Michael DePauw, apprehended Sunday in California by federal agents, was one of four persons indicted for murder late Friday afternoon by a Lubbock County grand jury.

Although the 28-year-old DePauw was indicted last month on a murder charge in connection with the October slaying of Kenneth Oland Anderson, officials with the criminal district attorney's office said the case was presented a second time to clarify the earlier indictment.

When the October grand jury handed down the true bill against DePauw, investigators were not sure how the 63-year-old Anderson died. The victim was found the morning of Oct. 4 sprawled on the floor of his 2402 Ave. J sign shop.

An autopsy revealed Anderson died as the result of a blow to the head with a blunt object, and that information was included in the indictment returned Friday by the grand jury.

DePauw was captured by FBI agents Sunday in San Jose, Calif. He waived extradition and is expected to return to Lubbock early next week in the custody of Lubbock County sheriff's deputies.

The man accused of helping DePauw kill Anderson, Herman Lee Watts, also was indicted for murder Friday. Watts, 56, is believed to be one of the men witnesses said they saw with Anderson at several bars the night before Anderson's body was found.

Watts first was sought by authorities as a material witness in the case but later was charged with murder. Authorities have been unable to locate Watts.

Diane Hankins, 30, also was indicted for murder by the grand jury, which reported its findings to 99th District Judge Thomas L. Clinton about 5:30 p.m. Friday.

Miss Hankins is accused of shooting Rufus Tillmon three times the afternoon of Oct. 27 at the 2212-C Redbud Drive apartment the couple shared.

A fourth murder suspect named in the panel's total of 157 true bills was Alvis Ray Sanders.

Sanders, 29, of 513 Ave. C was indicted in September for capital murder in connection with the Aug. 20 throat-slashing death of 74-year-old Paul Raymond Benton. The panel Friday, however, reduced the charge against Sanders to first-degree murder.

A fifth murder case was presented to the panel during its four-day session, but the grand jury declined to indict Erma Jean Ward.

Miss Ward, 25, of 1918 Ninth St., Apt. 10, had been charged with murder in the Oct. 14 stabbing death of Johnnie Louise Essix. Reports indicate Miss Essix, 30, came to Miss Ward's home and initiated a fight with Miss Ward over a mutual male acquaintance.

Six other persons whose cases were considered by the grand jury also were not indicted. They are Tony Nils Tippit, 25, of 2817 54th St., charged with burglary with intent to commit aggravated assault; Cresencio Mojica, age and address unavailable, accused of aggravated assault; Johnny Diaz, age and address unavailable, charged with unauthorized use of a motor vehicle; Durwood Eaton, 49, 5608 Ave. B, charged with aggravated assault; Tony Washington, age and address unavailable, charged with attempted murder; and Dennis Doleman Saunders, 48, 2901 E. Auburn St., charged with attempted murder.

The grand jury passed five cases for future consideration by another panel.

Hawaiian Volcano Spouting Lava

VOLCANO, Hawaii (AP) — The Pauhi Crater in the Hawaii Volcanoes National Park began spouting lava on Friday, but officials said the eruption posed no threat to life or property.

Fountains up to 30 feet were filling the crater in the Kilauea Volcano with lava, according to Harry Wills of the Volcanoes National Park.

The last eruption in Kilauea was in 1977.

King Held Guilty On One Count

By KAY BELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

INSUFFICIENT evidence, rather than Roy King's defense based on the documentary "Scared Straight," was the primary reason jurors Friday acquitted King of three of four official misconduct charges, according to the jury foreman.

"We were very torn (on the charges of which King was acquitted)," foreman E.L. Harris said following the announcement of the verdicts. But, he added, "it was pretty much unanimous" to dismiss consideration of the defense's "Scared Straight" strategy during jury deliberations.

"It might have been his (King's) intention to use scare therapy, but we didn't feel like he snapped on it right after the movie (was aired locally)," Harris added.

In fact, consideration of King's motive played a very small part in the County Court-at-Law No. 2 jury's almost 3 1/2 hours of deliberations on whether King was guilty of all four misconduct charges, Harris said.

The jury was instructed to return a separate verdict for each of the four charges, all Class A misdemeanors, and Harris said panel members relied heavily on witness accounts of the alleged crimes and a tape of a conversation between King and the 15-year-old female probationer involved in the charges.

The three counts Harris said posed the most difficulty for the three-man, three-woman panel accused King of soliciting the girl's services as a prostitute with a portion of her earnings to be returned to him; trying to engage her in nude dancing; and offering her discharge from her informal probation if she would participate in nude photography.

King was acquitted on those three charges, but the panel found the 28-year-old former juvenile offender counselor guilty of taking the girl to a known house of prostitution on Aug. 18.

King elected to have Judge J.Q. Warnick Jr., rather than the jury, assess his punishment. Warnick will hold a punishment hearing for King after receiving presentence reports from the adult probation office.

Although three prosecution witnesses testified that the taped conversation between the girl and King did not include his alleged mention of the criminal charges, Harris said the panel listened to some portions of the recording 20 to 25 times in the hope it would shed some light on the case.

"But basically," he said, "it came down to her word against his."

Harris said jurors did not believe the state had met its burden of proof beyond a reasonable doubt on the three counts of which they acquitted King. But, the foreman said, "There is too much corroboration (that King took the girl to an East 34th Street business the jury decided he knew was a house of prostitution) for us not to convict him."

King, of 1920 E. Baylor St., had told the panel he took the girl to the establishment, advertised as a nude modeling studio and massage parlor, in an effort to scare her away from life as a prostitute. He said he was convinced she was on her way to becoming a prostitute and his action was prompted by viewing the shock technique depicted in "Scared Straight."

"We (the jurors) knew that ("Scared Straight") was pretty much under controlled circumstances," Harris added. "Had Mr. King told one other person he was going to do that, it might have made a difference."

King testified he did not tell anyone else of his shock treatment experiment with the girl because "it wasn't any of their business."

Court Order Bars Woman's Worship With Lubbock Baptist Congregation

A LUBBOCK WOMAN was ordered by a state district judge Friday to stop attending Lyons Chapel Baptist Church after she allegedly threatened some of the congregation and disrupted services.

Officials with the 1704 E. 24th St. church filed a suit against Bobbie Greenwood, accusing her of attending and intentionally disrupting the church services after she was expeled from the congregation in July 1978.

Lyons Chapel members asked 99th District Court Judge Thomas L. Clinton to issue a temporary restraining order against Mrs. Greenwood to keep her from attending. Clinton entered the order Friday afternoon and set a Nov. 26 hearing on whether the order should be made permanent, as also requested by church leaders.

The lawsuit, prepared by local attorney Thomas Griffith, does not elaborate on why Mrs. Greenwood, of 2728 E. Third St., was expeled from Lyons Chapel Baptist Church. It states only that she was expeled "pursuant to internal church rules."

But despite being dropped from church membership, the petition contends, Mrs. Greenwood has continued to attend services, interrupting rites with loud and allegedly profane language and threatening physical violence to other church members.

The petiton alleges that Mrs. Greenwood's attendance at Lyons Chapel since her expulsion has been with the sole intent to disrupt the services and that she also has criticized the activities of the church membership and leaders.

Another Balmy Day Forecast For Area

YET ANOTHER pleasant fall day is forecast for Lubbock and the South Plains, with temperatures expected to range into the upper 60s after Friday's high of 65.

South to southwesterly winds in the 10-15 mph range are also expected.

The fair skies should continue through Sunday, according to the National Weather Service.

Estimated 100 Bandidos Meet Here For Funeral

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Paid respects by an estimated 100 of his motorcycle-riding "brothers," Bandido David Jones was eulogized Friday in a funeral probably unique in Lubbock history.

For all the Harley-Davidson motorcycles lined up outside Sanders Funeral Home at 1420 Main St. and the fearsome appearance of the bike's owners inside, the funeral itself was low-key and conventional except for the music chosen by the motorcycle club.

The 10 a.m. service in Sanders Memorial Chapel opened with the sad strains of a song called "The End" by the rock group The Doors, and, after a brief biography of Jones given by the Rev. Wayne Perry, "Desperado" was played to lead into the main funeral oration.

Jones, 32, was killed in a plane crash Oct. 30 near Tucumcari, N.M.

Perry, now chaplain at Highland Hospital, remarked that he performed the marriage ceremony for Jones and his wife, Ginger, and said he saw Jones when both stopped at a stoplight here a few weeks ago.

"I didn't know that he was waving bye to me," Perry said. "Neither did he."

The service was a study in contrasts. The immediate family and friends of Jones wore suits and dresses and the Bandidos were in their normal attire — blue jeans or leather pants, motorcycle boots and "colors," or jackets bearing the Bandidos' emblem and various slogans.

An American flag and Jones' motorcycle jacket were draped across the casket.

Bandidos chapters from New Mexico, Colorado, Arkansas, Alabama and California were represented in addition to several Texas chapters.

Pallbearers, Bandidos from various parts of the United States, were Bruce McCarter, Scott Crawford, Joe Benavides, Kelly Garrison, Bobby Robinson, Bob Hight and Roger Williams.

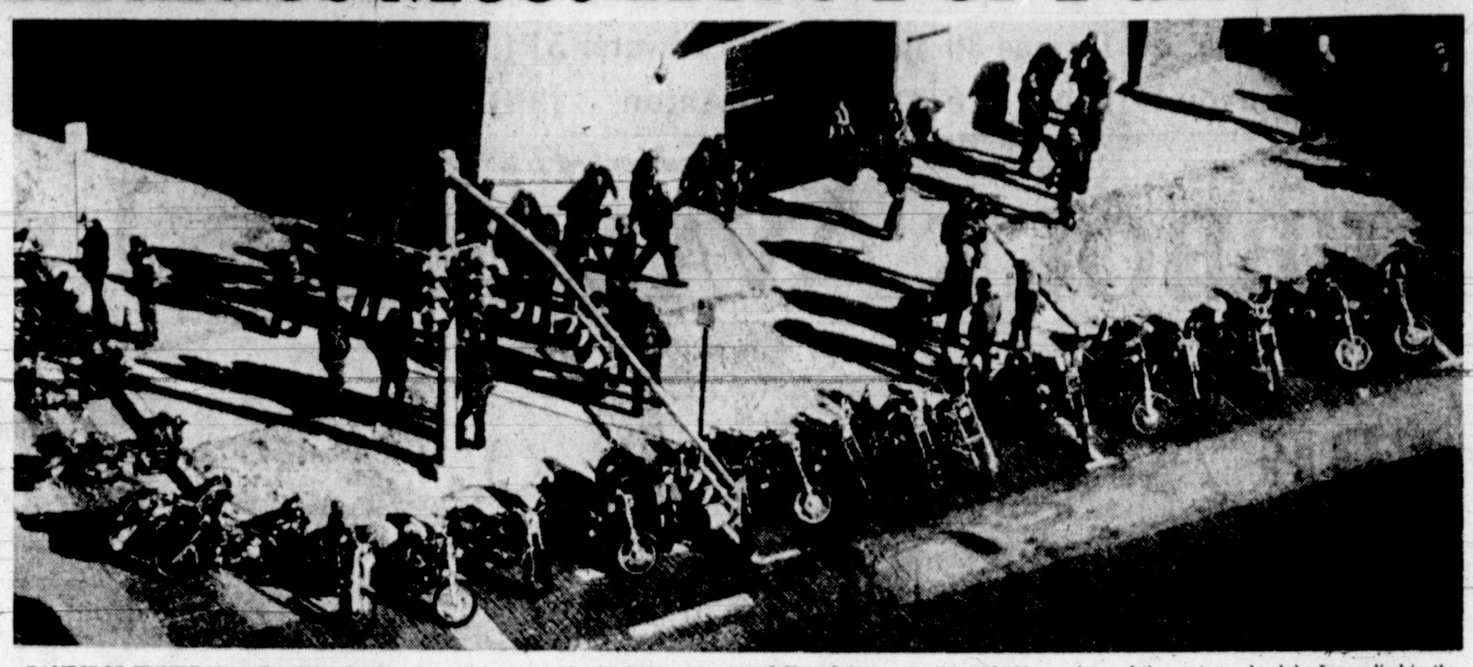

Jones was a native of Childress, and was buried Friday afternoon in Childress Cemetery.

When the 45-minute service was concluded, the Bandidos, many of them waiting outside through the service, kick-started their motorcycles almost simultaneously, and Main Street echoed with the throaty roar of the machines as the bikers led the hearse out of town.

A police motorcycle escort had to move fast to stay ahead of the Bandidos as they moved rapidly through town north on Avenue K and out Fourth Street to the Idalou Highway toward Childress.

A number of the Bandidos evidently were intending to be in Childress for the burial.

Sanders Memorial Chapel was lined with some three dozen funeral wreaths and flower displays for the service. Several were from Bandidos chapters, including one from the national club and another that said simply, "We love you, Bro."

Involuntary Manslaughter Defendant Receives Probated Term

By KAY BELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Ramaldo "Ronnie" Belasco was sentenced to a five-year probated prison term Friday afternoon after earlier being convicted of involuntary manslaughter for the traffic death of a Lubbock elementary school principal.

Belasco, 17, was on trial this week for the death of William R. Bravenec. Bravenec, principal of Rush Elementary, was killed when the Corvette he was driving was struck by Belasco's car at 22nd Street and Boston Avenue early June 16.

The Lubbock High School student also is charged with involuntary manslaughter in connection with Ballenger Elementary School principal Tommy Herring's death. Herring was a passenger in the Corvette at the time of the collision.

Belasco, who earlier testified he was speeding and had been drinking just before the collision, returned to the 140th District Court witness stand during the penalty phase of the trial.

He told the seven-woman, five-man panel he has not driven since the wreck because "I'm afraid to" and that he was "sorry they (the principals) died."

A former LHS student council member and football player now involved in the school's vocational education program, Belasco asked the jury to give him probation.

Defense counsel Mark Hall and John O'Shea also called two of Belasco's classmates to the stand as character witnesses.

During final arguments, Hall asked the jurors not to "punish for punishment's sake" and emphasized the good reports of Belasco's character.

He asked the jury to view the defendant's reputation as a whole rather than assess a penalty for "a few tragic seconds of bad judgment."

O'Shea also pointed out that Belasco's mother had told her son he had to return to the crash site after he fled the scene and ran to his 3017 30th St. residence.

"He has a fine, decent family — a mother who told him he had to meet his responsibilities — that will act as guidance if you give him probation," O'Shea argued.

Prosecutors Travis Ware and Clint Averitte, however, asked the panel to return with a prison term, arguing that the defendant had testified meeting probation conditions would be no problem and therefore no punishment for his act.

Averitte agreed with defense arguments that a prison term would not bring the two principals back to life, but told the jurors that by sentencing Belasco to a prison term they could help protect society.

"You're not destroying anyone's life," Averitte said. "You weren't on Boston Avenue on June 16.

"Other law-abiding citizens should not be forced to take a chance while the state attempts to rehabilitate this man through probation," Averitte added.

Ware termed Belasco's driving that night as senseless and unnecessary and described the defendant's car as a "cannonball" as it traveled down Boston Avenue in excess of 100 mph.

"Please make the punishment fit the crime," Ware told the panel. "Don't be swayed by this man's age or this man's past history that you are oblivious to what this man has done, how deeply he has gutted two families.

"If you vote up your sympathies for this defendent, it's grossly misplaced," an emotional Ware continued. "I'm not asking you for revenge, I'm asking you for justice."

The panel took 45 minutes Friday afternoon to arrive at the probated sentence for Belasco, and 40 minutes during the morning to convict him of involuntary manslaughter.

During morning arguments, Ware asked the jury to convict Belasco of the manslaughter count rather than the lesser charge of criminally negligent homicide.

If the jury believed the defendant was unaware of the risks he was taking by driving in excess of the residential area's speed limit, Judge William Shaver instructed the panel to find Belasco guilty of the lesser charge.

Ware said the evidence was clear that Belasco knew the danger of his actions that ended in the collision shortly before 1 a.m. June 16.

"By his own testimony he (Belasco) admitted to involuntary manslaughter," Ware said. "He was drunk and was trying to flee from someone he knew to be the police."

Hall and O'Shea contended Belasco was fleeing from a group of youths in another car who earlier had threatened the defendant.

"The defendant wasn't going 100 mph because he had drunk some beer, or he had a restricted driver's license. He was trying to avoid an altercation with a group of other boys," O'Shea argued.

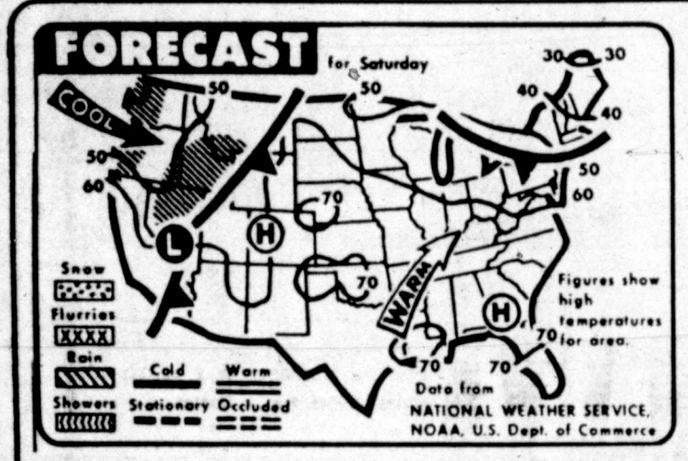

O'Shea said Belasco didn't flee the scene of the accident because he was trying to get away from it, but because he wanted his mother to be there with him.

And the defense attorney also contended that the accident was caused by Bravenec's entering the intersection without stopping. Earlier testimony by police at the scene of the crash showed Bravenec's car was traveling about 10 mph when it was struck by Belasco's Pontiac Grand Prix.

Ware, however, said evidence indicated "there is no doubt that an excessive rate of speed of the defendant was the only cause of the collision."

Ware argued that Belasco did not exercise caution, but was fully aware of the consequences of driving his car relecklessly.

Regents Expected To Narrow Large List Of Prexy Candidates

By RUTHANNE BROCKWAY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

About 15 candidates are now on the prime choice list for president of Texas Tech University, but within two to three weeks regents expect to narrow the field to the top five or fewer finalists.

The presidential search was discussed at the Friday board meeting during a closed session that lasted about an hour and a half. During the open session of the meeting, reference was made to the probability of having one or more called meetings before the board's next scheduled meeting Feb. 8.

Regent Clint Formby, chairman of the search committee, said his committee will meet Dec. 3 to narrow the list of presidential candidates and that a week or two afterwards, "I anticipate a called meeting of the board of regents."

He said that at the called meeting of the board, the search committee would recommend finalists in a closed meeting.

The full board then will have the opportunity to schedule personal interviews with each of the finalists before choosing the new president.

As for when the presidential selection will be made and announced, Formby said, "It possibly will be after Christmas now," but also added, "I will be extremely disappointed if it's not by (the end of) January."

In board action at Friday's meeting, regents increased the student service fee. Effective in the spring semester, the fee will increase from $3.60 per credit hour to $4.22 per hour. It raises the maximum fee charged from $43 to $50.50.

Dr. Lawrence Graves, interim president, told the board that the Student Association recommended the increase to cover operation costs of the new Recreation Building which is scheduled to open in March.

The board also established bachelor's and master's degree programs in computer science.

"The need for computer science has been growing in recent years, and there are two aspects of it," Graves said. He explained that "almost every student needs a conversance with computers" and that other students need training to become specialists in the field.

"In the past year or so, we've been developing a program to meet both those needs," Graves said.

The board honored regent J. Fred Bucy of Dallas with a resolution in appreciation of the first endowed chair in the College of Engineering, established by Bucy and his wife. The endowment, which requires a minimum of $600,000 to establish, is in electrical engineering.

In accepting the gift, board chairman Robert Pfluger cited Bucy as "internationally known for his erudition in the fields of electronics and business finance."

Bucy, a native of Tahoka, received a bachelor's degree in physics from Tech in 1951 and a master's in 1953 from University of Texas. In 1972 Texas Tech named him a "Distinguished Engineer."

In other board action, regents approved the sale of the former presidential residence on 19th Street to the current leasee, Don Roach, for his high bid of $127,600.

Postponed at the last board meeting was consideration of a Music Building addition. At the October meeting, Bucy requested a space needs study before giving his approval to proceeding with plans for the $2.9 million construction. At Friday's meeting, regent James Snyder of Baird pleaded the need for the music addition, saying that some high schools have better facilities for band instruments.

The board gave its approval to proceed with preparing contract documents for the music addition construction. Bids have not been taken yet.

Carter Special Assistant Speaks At Tech

By TRAVIS BROWN
Avalanche-Journal Staff

President Carter's record on women's issues was defended in Lubbock Friday by one of his special assistants, Sarah Weddington.

Mrs. Weddington was in Lubbock to speak today at a women's symposium at Texas Tech University.

During a press conference Friday, she answered a charge by the wife of a Tech regent that she was a "feminist" and that the "Prime Time for Women" symposium was a waste of taxpayer's money because it promoted radical feminist causes.

"If the feminist viewpoint is a viewpoint that says women should make all the choices to reach their potentials, then I'm a feminist," said the Texas lawyer, appointed to chair the President's Interdepartmental Task Force on Women. "I also expect women to be the best they can be."

In praising her boss, Mrs. Weddington pointed out that only six women have ever been appointed to Cabinet positions.

"And President Carter appointed three of those," she said. "These appointments will allow women to influence policy, and also help bring other women into the federal government."

Mrs. Weddington also praised Carter's initiation of federal programs to help working mothers, elderly women and rural women.

The problem of battered women was given attention by the president when he formed a special Committee on Domestic Violence within the Department of Health and Human Services.

"Each year from three to six million Americans are injured in acts of domestic violence," she said.

Under the President's Domestic Violence program, federally-funded emergency shelters for battered wives have been established and rape prevention programs begun.

Mrs. Weddington said Carter has not become involved in a squabble between the Senate and House concerning how much money the government should spend for abortions for poor women.

"But the president personally opposes federally funded abortions," she said.

Mrs. Weddington, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. Doyle Ragle of Lubbock, will deliver the keynote address for the women's symposium at 9 a.m. today at the University Center. About 200 women had registered for the all-day symposium by late Friday. Registration for the symposium, which costs $10 to attend, will begin at 8 a.m. today.

Workshop topics will include Earning Respect, The "Good Ole Boys" Network, Human Sexuality: Needs and Expectations; Lubbock's Unique Bargains and Companionship for Single Women...Be They Married, Divorced or Married Singles.

The symposium is designed for West Texas women by the Texas Tech University Divison of Continuing Education.

GSA Horror Story Unfinished

THE GENERAL Services Administration, which is supposed to save taxpayers' money by coordinating purchasing, property management and other chores, instead has produced what former GSA special counsel Vincent Alto calls "probably the biggest scandal in the history of the federal government."

In terms of fraud, corruption and mismanagement, wage earners have paid an extra several billion dollars for services never rendered and products never received over the years. But investigators believe the total cost may never be known.

In all, during the period between September 1977 and April of this year, a total of 97 persons were charged in connection with what prosecutors categorize as misdeeds. Of that number, 79 either pleaded or were found guilty.

OTHER CASES are in various stages of progression through the courts as investigations continue in Texas, Hawaii, New York and other places.

Inefficiency and irregularities have plagued the agency for a very long time, according to an article written for Reader's Digest by Carl T. Rowan and David M. Mazie.

Fortune magazine called the GSA "Washington's most durable mess" as far back as 1955, and its questionable practices make frequent headlines in the Washington Post.

It is ironic that GSA should emerge as a symbol of scandal and ineptness. It was established 30 years ago on the recommendation of the Hoover Commission to provide more cost-effective administrative services.

Instead of each federal agency buying its own supplies and managing its own office space, such tasks were to be centralized in the GSA.

TODAY, WITH 35,129 employes and a $5 billion annual budget, GSA would rank among America's 50 largest industrial firms.

It owns 2,500 buildings and rents space in another 7,500, making it the country's largest real-estate operator. It maintains 85,000 vehicles, operates a buying service and a chain of 71 self-service stores and manages an $11.5 billion stockpile of strategic materials.

But it was not until Jay Solomon took charge as GSA administrator in 1977 and launched a full-scale investigation with the aid of the IRS, FBI and the Justice Department that the extent of corruption was realized.

SOLOMON LEFT the agency earlier this year. But in his two years, Rowan and Mazie report that he did much to tighten procedures and organization. His successor is Rear Adm. Rowland G. Freeman III, a 37-year Navy veteran.

Freeman has a reputation as an expert in procurement, but his World War II combat duty may come in more handy. Whatever resources Adm. Freeman draws from he has his work cut out for him in restoring taxpayer trust in the government. Cleaning up the GSA would be an excellent place to start.

AN EDITORIAL:

Kennedy Bill Plugs Pipeline

LIKE EVERY other corporation in America, oil companies exist because people invest in them. And few investors risk their money on unknown quantities.

For example, if a prospective investor knows that a certain company is going bankrupt, or if he knows that the company's product soon will be obsolete, then he probably won't invest in that company.

Oil, unfortunately, is a diminishing resource. Oil companies, in order to attract new sources of capital, have to show the market that they can turn a profit even if there is no oil produced. The only way to do this is by acquiring outside interests.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., has introduced a bill in Congress that would prohibit the 16 largest oil firms from acquiring any company whose assets exceed $100 million.

"FAILURE OF the oil companies to remain an attractive area for investors will have an adverse effect upon their ability to attract the capital needed to carry on the exploration essential just to maintain current U.S. reserves," says the conservative National Association of Manufacturers.

NAM's reasoning is that outside profits help the oil companies recoup the losses they incur when conducting high-risk drilling, e.g., if they hit a dry well.

However, if they are prohibited as Kennedy's Energy Antimonopoly Act proposes from acquiring those outside interests, they will be forced to pay for their "miscalculations" from their own coffers. Consequently, investors will lose what they would have gained had Kennedy butted out.

Any bill, regardless of sponsor, aimed at equalizing disparity between oil producer and ultimate consumer must guarantee it will increase oil reserves and further oil production. The Kennedy bill does not meet this critical test.

UNDER KENNEDY'S proposal, exploration decisions would be made solely on the profitability of the venture, which would result in very little high-risk drilling.

"The end product," says NAM, "would be even less oil than we have now."

In refutation of the Kennedy claim that the oil companies are not spending their capital on further exploration, recent figures show that the leading 27 oil companies for the past five years spent $132 billion for oil and gas exploration, while net income was a relatively modest $70.4 billion.

THE U.S. IS sitting on more than 301 billion barrels of oil that is "too expensive for the oil industry to tap," according to the 10th World Petroleum Congress.

Such reserves could be brought to the surface if the only industry had the capital to do it. But if legislation such as the Kennedy bill is enacted, little oil is likely to be added to those 301 billion barrels of untapped oil—at a time when we can ill-afford to strangle production efforts.

ART BUCHWALD:

Trying To Cop A Plea Not Always A Bargain

WASHINGTON—"Hello, is this the federal prosecutor's office? This is Roy Bone. I'm representing the two owners of Studio 53 who are up on tax fraud charges. I'd like to make a plea bargaining deal with you."

"We have an airtight case."

"Wait until you hear me out. I can deliver the mother of one of the highest officials in the United States government."

"What did she do?"

"She committed monomania."

"Are you sure?"

"She did it in the basement of the disco. We have witnesses to prove it."

"What kind of witnesses?"

"One of them said he didn't think her son had a chance of beating Teddy Kennedy and she flew into a rage and said he was a pseudologue."

"How good is your witness?"

"He's done time for perjury, arson, fraud and embezzlement and is now out on bail for a Brink's robbery. I can personally vouch for him."

"I DON'T think you have a good enough deal."

"If you don't play ball I'll give it to the New York Times. Then they'll start asking what you people are trying to cover up."

"Don't blackmail us, Bone. You wouldn't be making this call if we didn't have you by the short pants. We're going to court."

"All right, I'll tell you what I'll do. My clients are willing to give you solid evidence that one of Carter's closest relatives deals in gasohol."

"You have to be more specific."

"If you don't want it, I'll give it to the New York Times."

"Look, Roy, I'm very busy preparing my case. We're always willing to plea-bargain if it will lead us somewhere. But you're offering us garbage."

"Did you know that all the illegal Mexicans coming into the United States are smuggled through Camp David?"

"Where did you dig up that one?"

"A client of mine doing time at Atlanta heard it from his cellmate. It would be a big feather in your cap if you could close down Camp David."

"Sorry, Roy. We're not interested."

"So?"

"WHO DO YOU know in the White House that jogs?"

"You're desperate, Bone. Why don't you just go to trial and let your people take what's coming to them?"

"Listen, my boys run a nice clean disco. People come there to relax and have a good time. If they're not having a good time they snort cocaine through a straw and that relaxes them.

"My guys made a slight mistake and forgot to pay their income taxes. People do it every day. But the difference between my clients and others is that we're willing to sell out anybody to get off the hook. Tell me who you want to get and we'll blow the whistle on him."

"Roy, we're always happy to do business with you. But we need more evidence if you're going to destroy somebody else's reputation."

The GSA Scandals (Contd.)

GEORGE WILL:

U.S. Talk Is Cheap

WASHINGTON—It is difficult, and not at all desirable, to be coolly clinical about photographs of American citizens bound and blindfolded and spat upon by rabble, but the freezing truth is that Americans had better get used to such photographs, if they are not already.

Enduring the contempt of the contemptible is just one severity that life has in store for a declining nation.

A nation that, in gestures aimed at the Middle East, sends an aircraft carrier steaming in circles in the South China Sea, and sends ostentatiously unarmed airplanes to Saudi Arabia (where many are then grounded for days because of bungled planning and support)—such a nation had better get used to enemies who think it is impotent.

A nation that loses a war it could have won by confidently employing its conventional military assets had better get used to humiliation.

A nation that has no serious response when three ambassadors are murdered (in Cyprus, Sudan and Afghanistan) had better get used to spittle on its cheeks.

A nation that, in February, orders the Marines guarding its embassy in Iran to surrender without a fight to a mob should not be surprised when, in November, another mob arrives to play with the embassy as with a toy.

A nation that uses an ally such as Taiwan as a pawn for utterly unnecessary appeasement had better get used to having fewer and fewer allies of any size, and to the worldwide conviction that it is a nation with no serious convictions.

A NATION that collaborates in throwing to the wolves an ally like the Shah should not expect respect from the wolves.

Respect? For a nation too feckless even to confine Iran's diplomats to their Washington compound when they are collaborating with the rabble of Tehran?

Respect? For a nation so inanely tolerant it does not ship home to Khomeini the thousands of Iranian "students" who are here illegally, and who adore Khomeini—from a safe distance, of course—from the comfort of what Khomeini calls "Satan America"?

You know Khomeini: He's the fellow Andrew Young said might be a saint. You remember Young: He's the fellow who symbolized the Carter administration's plan to get America loved in the Third World by appeasing terrorists in Rhodesia and subverting the Shah.

YOU REMEMBER the Shah, an ally for 37 years. During the 1973 war he was the only ruler in the region who banned Soviet overflights. He urged an end to the oil embargo, and rushed fuel to U.S. ships.

He rushed arms to South Vietnam (you remember South Vietnam: an ally deceased) before the ban on such aid went into effect under the Paris Accords. (You remember the Paris Accords: They brought peace to Indochina.)

The Shah helped the United States in many ways, but such is our trembling fear of Khomeini, that the Shah had to become a cancer patient before we would let him past the Statue of Liberty.

A nation afraid of Khomeini should not bluster at the Soviet Union. A nation that blusters about Soviet activities in Cuba being "unacceptable," and then says well, er, come to think about it, we just remembered that these activities are, well, for want of a better word, acceptable—and, no, don't worry, we won't reject SALT II; we were very decent, you must admit, cancelling the B-1 and neutron weapons, no reciprocity asked; and, oh, yes: Are you quite sure 25 million metric tons of grain will be sufficient?—a nation that behaves this way had better get used to the cackle of derisive laughter.

SPEAKING OF grain, and of photographs that take some getting used to, and of the price of losing wars, consider Cambodia.

If the people who used to rant about "American genocide" are really interested (and they really aren't) they should note this: Real genocide looks like what is happening in Cambodia now.

The starving of millions, the obstruction of relief: This is Hanoi's work and could be stopped by Moscow.

But we flood the Soviet Union with grain while the Soviet Union collaborates in keeping to a trickle the relief for the people it is helping to exterminate.

Will we make continued grain shipments to the Soviet Union contingent on Soviet cooperation about Cambodia? No.

President Carter says Cambodia is "a moral issue." Yes. But I, for one, am past trying to understand what he means by that, and past hoping he will understand that, between nations, such issues also are problems of power.

ANDREW TULLY:

A Jigger Of Koch

WASHINGTON—For those of us tempted to vote for None Of The Above in next year's election, salvation may come from—of all places—New York City. Ed Koch for President?

Ed Koch Who? The Ed Koch who is mayor of New York. The Ed Koch who's not afraid to be un-chic and hit back at vicious nuts—that's Who. The Ed Koch who believes there's a time to keep your cool, and a time to blow your top—that's Who.

The Ed Koch, in short, who called a crime a crime and did something about it.

ONE SHOWOFF named Aaron Kay has amused himself by throwing pies at the late Vice President Hubert Humphrey, New York's Sen. Pat Moynihan and California Gov. Jerry Brown, among others. None of Kay's targets seemed to mind.

Now Ed Koch. His Honor was about to deliver an address of welcome to 3,500 members of the American Public Health Assn. in a New York hotel. Suddenly, wham-o! Koch took a punch in the eye and head and was smashed in the face with two flying eggs by three assailants—two men and a woman.

Did Ed Koch grin and bear it? He did not. He helped police and security men wrestle one of the men and the woman to the floor of the stage. Then the three—all identified as physicians—were arrested and hustled off to the pokey.

SO THAT was that? That was not that. He could have left the matter up to the cops, but after delivering some welcoming remarks to the assemblage, he went to a police station three blocks away to personally press charges against the trio.

Dr. Nayvin Gordon of San Diego was charged with third-degree assault, disorderly conduct, and harassment. His wife and Dr. Charles Wright of Hindman, Ky., were charged with disorderly conduct and harassment.

That mission accomplished, Koch was treated at a hospital for damage to his eye and head and given a tetanus shot.

Anyway, Ed Koch was still sore. "You can bet I will be here," he snapped when asked if he would appear in court against the three defendants.

Gordon, his wife and Wright said they were members of something called the Health Committee Against Racism. They were protesting the Mayor's plan to close some city hospitals, a move attacked by some as unsympathetic to the poor and to minorities.

OK, KOCH SAID, but watch your manners. In his speech, he denounced "illegal protests by people who use force." He reminded his audience that "This is not Iran. Someone has to stand up against these nuts...Public officials should not be treated this way. If they can do this to me, they can do it to anyone..."

Ed Koch's face would look good on a postage stamp. But I don't think he was hunting glory. He was just trying to tell other public figures that even in these lunatic days they don't have to put up with everything.

VIRGINIA PAYETTE:

Life Is A Killer

DALLAS—Well, guess what? We're drinking less, smoking less, working harder and going bankrupt faster.

We're also killing ourselves faster, on and off the highways.

There must be a lesson in there somewhere.

Nobody has to ask why bankruptcies are up around 30 percent. With interest rates, prices and debts piling up the way they are, maybe the question should be why even more families aren't going broke. (And maybe, under the new bankruptcy law, they will.)

But it's harder to explain those other statistics. Especially when, historically, at least, a lot of folks turn to drink and tobacco to ease the pain of nagging landlords and threatened job layoffs.

THAT'S NOT the way it's working out in these double-digit days when all the experts tell us we're heading into a recession. Any minute now. Just as soon as they can find it.

Take drinking. Liquor shipments, which usually go up around three percent a year, are down. In the first six months of 1979, they declined 6.5 percent from what they'd been the year before.

And most of that was in the hard stuff. Blended whiskies were off 15 percent and scotch, 12 percent, reflecting a growing trend in recent years toward a national preference away from booze and toward the lighter drinks.

Wine, mostly white, is the "in" thing now, even with the hard-drinking suburban and country-club crowd.

TABLE WINES are up 9.3 percent, grabbing a 74-percent share of all wine shipments.

That's up from 50 percent in 1979 and 32 percent in 1960.

As for beer, even the heavy guzzlers are switching to the "light" brands.

This may change, too, in view of those recent studies that say folks who down a couple of drinks a day (and only a couple, remember) tend to live longer than tee-totallers. But there's not much research yet on how long you can live with double-digit inflation.

What's even more interesting is the national surge to protect teenagers from the dangers of barleycorn. Most adults are beginning to realize that giving 18-year-olds the right to drink wasn't such a good idea.

THIS WAS a side-effect of the 26th Amendment in 1971, which gave them the right to vote and led 18 states to lower the legal age for marrying, owning property and trying one on Saturday night.

The result was pretty frightening: 3.3 million teenage alcoholics...8,000 killed every year in drunken-driving accidents...another 40,000 crippled.

Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Maine have already shoved the legal drinking age back to 20; Montana, Tennessee, Minnesota and Iowa upped it to 19; and Michigan raised it all the way back to 21, even for beer and wine. (It was always 21 for hard liquor.)

Another big surprise is what's happening to smoking. It's down from last year's average of 3,970 cigarettes per capita to 3,900.

NOT A lot, maybe, but it has been going down steadily for six straight years, and 3,900 (which includes everybody over 18, both smokers and non-smokers) is the lowest since 1957.

In fact, per capita use of all kinds of tobacco is at a 46-year low, according to the Agriculture department. That's because the use of cigars and snuff is off, too. Chewing tobacco, though, is on an uptrend.

Apparently somebody remembers the coughing cowboy and has noted recent studies that show non-smokers live seven years longer than those who puff. And smoking isn't even against the law.

Driving over 55 is, though, and hardly anybody pays attention to that any more, no matter how often they're reminded that the low speed saves energy, money and lives.

Highway deaths last year topped 50,000 for the first time in five years.

THAT MAY change, too, with prospects of $2-a-gallon gasoline. The government has caught on that, by sticking to 55 miles an hour, we could save 10 million gallons of gas every day. And if it takes higher prices to make us do it, higher prices we'll get.

As for working harder, we're setting records. Three out of five families that include a husband and wife now have at least two wage-earners trying to keep up with the price of food.

That's 28.4 million households, and most of it is due to the increase in working wives.

Not that this necessarily follows, but the suicide rate is now up to 8.8 per 100,000. That reflects two things, according to police: an increase in juveniles who take their own lives, and the easy availability of guns and drugs.

It could be, too, in case they haven't thought of it, that all of the bad figures reflect plain old pressure, something you may have noticed a lot of lately.

L.M. BOYD:

...Pass It On

Q. WHAT'S THE difference in amateur athletics between an American track record and a United States track record?

A. American—one set anywhere in the world by an American citizen. United States—one set in the U.S. by anyone.

Q. What's "lemon squash"?

A. British for lemonade.

In one year your heart pumps enough blood to fill a two and a half inch pipeline running from coast to coast.

If that guitar string is average, it can be twanged for 40 hours before it breaks.

Q. How big is the biggest postage stamp?

A. Approximately 9-by-2-inches. China issued such in 1939.

Eighty-four percent of all colds—achoo!—occur on Mondays and Fridays.

Not everybody realizes that bread will grow stale faster in a refrigerator than out of it.

Northern New Hampshire City Closes Doors On Big Employers

BERLIN, N.H. (AP) — This small Northern New Hampshire city had always relied on big employers to provide employment. But this year one large employer closed its plant and a strike clsed the bggest employer. The city decided to dopt a new policy when it comes to seeking industry.

"If you're going to employ 1,000 people," says Roland Sherman, Berlin's new industrial development manager, "then don't come here."

The strategy seems to be working. In the last few months, the city has attracted seven small new industries, making such things as combat boots and and roller skates. They will employ more persons than the company that closed.

The turnaround for Berlin in some ways typifies the new buoyancy of the New England economy, which in past recessions has suffered more than other regions. But some eonomists think employment will keep growing throughout the region even if the widely-predicted national recession does occur.

"New England will do better than the country as a whole," predicts James Howell, a senior vice president of the First National Bank of Boston. "It will be a pleasant surprise."

Such a prediction would have stunned Berlin in June, after Converse Rubber Co. had closed its plant and thrown 400 persons out of work. A strike against the city's dominant employer, papermaker Brown Co., had thrown 2,000 persons out of work.

The situation reminded oldtimers of the day in March 1930 when International Paper Co. closed for good, leaving behind its sprawling mill and hundreds of jobless workers.

"I'm glad I'm old," 71-year-old Berlin city councilor Albert Theriault said then. "I wouldn't want to start all over again."

International's folding, the Depression and World War II all worked against Berlin, a city nestled in White Mountains in that rugged and sparcely populated area of New Hampshire known as the North Coutry.

The fragility of this community was a situation not uncommon in the Northeast with its textile mills, shoe factories and other industries born duing the Industrial Revolution and now largely abandoned.

But Berlin did not give up. As Mayor Leo Ouellet said of turning around his troubled city: "If we don't do it now, dammit, we'll never do it." And apparently they have.

"Somebody finally woke up to the fact we're a one-company town," says Sylvio Theriault, 31, who returned to Berlin, his birthplace, a few years ago, and has been prospering in the heating oil business.

The strike was settled, but the memory lingers. "I don't think anybody in Berlin wants to be a one-industry town," says new City Manager Mike Donovan. "A strike affects your whole town; a closing affects your whole town."

Donovan and Theriault are members of a group of "young Turks" who have reactivated the local chamber of commerce and spent considerable time and effort to attract new money to Berlin — investment, federal and state aid for jobs and community renewal.

The federal and state money was used to help make plant space available to the new employers.

Treasury Seeking Collection Of Overpayments

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Treasury Department was at work this week trying to collect more than $5 million it overpaid to some 400 purchasers of government securities.

"We don't anticipate problems" with the collection effort, said Richard Gregg, a Treasury finance officer. "Many people called us to ask what they should do with the extra money."

The error occurred in connection with Treasury's Tuesday issuance of $3.9 billion in 52-week bills.

The 400 persons had paid for some $7 million of the issue. Each was due a check of about $1,178 for ach $10,00 invested beause thebills are sold at a discounted rate (face value minus anticipated interest).

The Treasury Department, however, was in the process of changing the issue and maturity dates of the bill series from 364 days to 359 days so that they will mature in the future on Thursdays rather than Tuesdays.

"There was a computer error, and it wasn't caught until the checks went out," Gregg explained.

As a result, the 400 investors got checks totaling $6 million rather than the $825,000 that should have been paid

Your Personal Biorhythms

by Bernard Gittelson

For your own permanent biorhythm number for the Physical (P), Emotional (E), and Intellectual (I) cycles, just follow these steps:

	P	E	I
STEP 1. YEAR OF BIRTH
STEP 2. A-B MONTH OF BIRTH
STEP 3. DAY OF BIRTH
TOTALS

YOUR PERMANENT NUMBERS

BIORHYTHMS FOR NOV. 17, 1979

PHYSICAL
Criticals: 1, 13, 24, 36, 47, 59, 70 — A mishap day
Highs: 14-23, 37-46, 60-69 — Focus on physical activity
Lows: 2-12, 25-35, 48-58, 71-75 — Susceptible to colds

EMOTIONAL
Criticals: 14, 28, 42, 56, 70, 84 — Tension prevails
Highs: 1-13, 29-41, 57-69, 85 — Make new friends

INTELLECTUAL
Criticals: 16, 33, 49, 66, 82 — Turmoil apply
Highs: 1-15, 34-45, 67-81 — Up beat day mentally
Lows: 17-32, 50-65, 83-95 — Hard to decide day

Step 1 — Year of birth. Read down the left hand column to find the last number in the year of your birth then go across to the appropriate decade. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.

Rhodesian Peace Talks Enter Final Stage

LONDON (AP) — Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington of Britain opened the final stage of the Zimbabwe Rhodesia peace talks Friday — the task of arranging a cease-fire in the seven-year-old guerrilla war. He told the warring parties he expected them to end the conflict in "a matter of days."

A controversy erupted outside the conference, however, over whether the guerrillas will have equal status with Zimbabwe Rhodesian government forces after fighting stops. It raised the possibility of difficulties in the talks.

Cease-fire negotiations to conclude the 10-week-old talks started with Carrington putting forward an outline of a British plan envisaging strict separation of the 12,000-man government army and the estimated 16,000-member guerrilla force while a British governor takes over to supervise elections for a new black-majority government.

Carrington insisted on brisk negotiations following a major breakthrough Thursday when the Patriotic Front guerrilla alliance of Robert Mugabe and Joshua Nkomo joined the country's biracial administration in agreeing to Britain's plans for direct rule.

Conference officials reported that Carrington tapped the desk at a 30-minute meeting of all sides Friday and declared: "If we now lose the momentum achieved by our agreement we shall bitterly disappoint the people of Zimbabwe and the international community.

"It is essential we reach agreement on a cease-fire as soon as possible...I enviage a matter of days."

The guerrilla war has taken about 20,000 lives since its beginning seven years go. According to a Zimbabwe Rhodesian military communique issued in Salisbury on Friday, 47 persons have been killed in fighting since these talks began Sept. 10. It listed victims as 12 black civilians killed by the guerrillas, 3 security force men, 31 guerrillas and a black civilian slain in crossfire.

Military experts from both sides and Britain are scheduled to hold what conference officials here termed "intensive consultations" through the weekend. Carrington scheduled another formal meeting for Monday.

British sources said Carrington was determined to complete the cease-fire talks by the end of next week, meaning a British governor could be running Zimbabwe Rhodesia within two weeks.

FAA 'Taking Steps' To Prevent Bombings

CHICAGO (AP) — As the FBI investigated claims that an Iranian group mailed the bomb that exploded in an airliner's cargo hold, a federal aviation spokesman said Friday that such parcels are not routinely screened because "mail is not well-suited for a saboteur."

Neal Callahan, an FAA spokesman in Chicago, said the agency was "taking steps" to prevent similar bombings, but he refused to give details.

None of the 80 people aboard American Airlines Flight 44 was injured when the bomb exploded Thursday as the Boeing 727 was en route from Chicago to Washington D. C.

The plane filled with smoke, oxygen masks were lowered and a passenger said "people were really panicking." The plane eventually made a safe emergency landing at Washington's Dulles International Airport.

Authorities who examined a mail container in the cargo hold said they recovered parts of an explosive device, including a battery and altimeter, which could have triggered the blast when the plane reached a certain altitude.

A National Transportation Safety Board spokesman who asked not to be identified described it as a "very low yield bomb."

FBI investigators said they were checking reports that three news media offices received calls from a man claiming that an Iranian student group was responsible for the explosion. The caller reportedly threatened more bombings if there was continued action against Iranians in the United States.

President Carter this week ordered an investigation of the visa status of Iranian students in the country, in response to the holding of about 60 American hostages at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

An FBI spokesman said agents were trying to contact staff members who reportedly received the calls at the Chicago Tribune and television stations WBBM and WMAQ about 12 hours after the bomb exploded.

Fred Farrar, a FAA spokesman in Washington, said mail, luggage and other parcels shipped in aircraft cargo compartments were not inspected unless there was suspicion of a problem.

"We do have procedures, which we can't talk about, to check luggage and cargo," Farrar said. "We do not on a day-to-day systemwide basis screen mail unless we have a specific threat or intelligence of a specific threat."

"That's because mail is not well-suited for a saboteur because he has no idea what plane the mail will be on," he added. "The mail bag involved in yesterday's incident was to the best of our knowledge not screened because we had no specific threat."

R.K. Henrickson, a Chicago division postal inspector, said postal authorities had not changed their screening procedures because of the incident. He said the procedure calls for inspection of a parcel only if a problem is suspected.

"Normally there is no regular screening. If it is suspicious we inspect it," Henrickson said. "If it's fourth class we have the right to open it, if it's first class we have to get permission from the sender or addressee, and if is is highly suspicious, we could X-ray it."

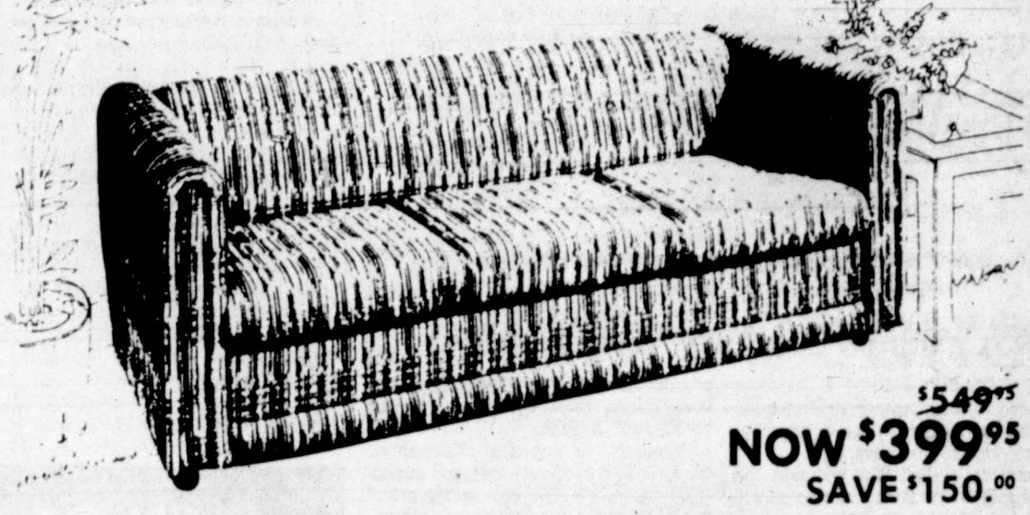

Likewise, the FAA said that while all passengers and their carry-on luggage are screened routinely before being allowed on an aircraft, other cargo is not.

"If you come up to a ticket counter with some baggage and you look suspicious they can open it," FAA spokeswoman Marjorie Kriz said. "That's the responsibility of the airline. Sometimes a baggage handler will hear ticking, there are a number of things to look for."

Burglary, Rape Intent Charges Filed In Case

By KIMBERLY PALMER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Charges of burglary with intent to rape were filed Friday afternoon against a 23-year-old man who was shot early Friday by a Lubbock police officer as the man fled a residence near Texas Tech University.

Robert Charles Baker of 2838 65th St., who was shot in the back, was listed in satisfactory condition late Friday at Health Sciences Center Hospital after surgeons removed portions of his colon and intestines.

The 28-year-old rape victim, the city's third reported rape victim since Thursday morning, was released from Methodist Hospital after being treated for mouth injuries and cuts and abrasions to her face.

A police spokesman said the suspect was shot by Officer Bill Allen after the man tried to flee from the policeman, who found him in the hallway of the residence where the alleged rape occurred.

Allen was dispatched to the residence about 2:40 a.m. after the woman called and reported a man was pounding on her door trying to get in. Arriving at the house, Allen saw the screen on the front door was open and that the door itself apparently had been kicked in.

Reports indicate that Allen, 33, walked up on the front porch of the house, reached inside the door to turn on lights and said, "Police. Anybody here?"

The suspect reportedly walked into the hallway pulling up his denim jeans and told Allen, "It's all right officer. I've known her (the rape victim) for a long time."

But the woman, her face covered with blood, looked around a hallway corner and told Allen, "I've been raped." She also told police later she had never seen the man before.

Reports indicate the suspect then reached behind his back, and Allen drew his service revolver. Allen said the man told him again that he knew the woman. But Allen told the suspect, "You're not going anywhere, anyway."

The man then reportedly came at the officer and Allen swung his pistol at the suspect, knocking him across a chair and onto the floor.

The suspect came at Allen again and the two were scuffling on the front porch when the suspect broke away and ran.

Reports indicate Allen, a six-year veteran with the police department, ran after the man and yelled at him to stop. When the man kept running, Allen reportedly unholstered his gun and fired once at the fleeing suspect, who fell to the ground.

Allen hesitated before approaching the man and the suspect jumped up and ran south into an alley.

The suspect then reportedly ran to the parking lot of an apartment complex and tried to crawl under a late-model Monte Carlo before being stopped by Allen.

The woman told investigating officers that she had just hung up the telephone after calling the police department when the suspect kicked in her front door.

The woman told police she sprayed the man with a tear gas-type spray as he approached her and swung a hammer at him.

The man reportedly knocked the woman into a bedroom, bent her over a bed and raped her. The woman told police the suspect mentioned he had a knife.

Although the suspect repeatedly told Allen he knew his victim, the woman said she had never seen the man before. She also told officers her house had been burglarized several months ago.

In other rape incidents, an 18-year-old woman told police she was raped early Thursday by a man she met at a wrestling match. About 7:30 a.m. today a woman said she was raped by a 16-year-old black youth.

Guards Arrest Plane Jumper

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A young man who said he wanted to go to jail for his own protection jumped 28 feet from a commercial airliner as it taxied down the runway at Los Angeles International Airport.

The Pacific Southwest Airways 727 had just landed from Fresno, Calif., Thursday with 135 passengers aboard when the man opened an emergency door, walked out to the wing and jumped to the tarmac.

He was unhurt and ran into a building where he was arrested by security guards. He identified himself as Wade Warner of Fresno.

Guard Ernest Benefield said Warner told him:

"I've been in the mountains for six months. A couple of people have been bumped off. They pointed the finger at me."

He said he wanted to go to jail and stay there, presumably for his own protection. He had $1,035 on him, including $900 in a sealed envelope, police said.

NTSU Names Vandiver New President

DENTON (AP) — Frank E. Vandiver has been selected from a field of more than 200 candidates as the new president of North Texas State University.

Vandiver, a Civil War historian and vice president of Rice University, will replace C.C. "Jitter" Nolen, who resigned after disclosures of financial mismanagement involving the university's private fund-raising foundation.

"I have great hopes for the future of North Texas State," Vandiver said following Friday's announcement. "It's a good school with almost unlimitless resources, and it's a university on the brink of doing great things."

The appointment of the 54-year-old vice president of academics at Rice was made by NTSU Board of Regents Chairman Winfree L. Brown. The job pays $43,900, plus a $400 monthly housing allowance and supplemental funds raised among the school's alumni.

Vandiver is the author of several volumes of Confederate history and biography, including Mighty Stonewall, a 1957 book tracing the life of Gen. Thomas "Stonewall" Jackson.

Vandiver has served as chairman of the Rice history department and during the period 1969-1970 was acting president. In 1963 he was chosen for a Harmsworth Professorship at Oxford University, where he lectured on the War Between the States.

District Judge Indicted For Misconduct

DENTON (AP) — District Attorney Jerry Cobb says he won't prosecute a state district judge who has been indicted on misdemeanor charges of official misconduct.

The indictment was handed down Thursday night against District Judge Bob Scofield, who was previously embroiled in a legal battle because of a gag rule he imposed on grand jurors last June.

Now a Denton County grand jury — not the same one Scofield tangled with over the gag rule — has accused him of misusing his powers in an unrelated case involving a police lieutenant.

Scofield denied the charges and requested a hearing in the case as soon as possible.

Police Lt. Gary Matheson has been fighting an unfavorable civil service ruling and previously filed his own complaint against Scofield. The lieutenant complained that the judge and Police Chief Robert Mills met to discuss Matheson's appeal of the civil service ruling before Scofield issued a ruling on the appeal.

Scofield denied that allegation and asked a grand jury in April to investigate whether Matheson had lodged a "false complaint."

Thursday's indictment alleges Scofield requested the grand jury to subpoena Matheson to testify about his complaint so that Matheson "would possibly perjure himself," and that Scofield intended to "advise the public of the issuance of the subpoena and ... advise (Matheson's) superior officers of the findings of the grand jury."

The indictment further alleges that Scofield acted "with the intent to harm" Matheson by causing him to be "relieved of his job and to be held up to public scorn and humiliation"

Scofield said, "I am innocent and I am confident that I will be found innocent. Because the matter creates a cloud over my judicial functions as well as those of other judges, I intend to request an immediate hearing to resolve this issue."

But Cobb says he won't prosecute the judge. "I was not present during the grand jury proceedings, and I do not intend to prosecute the case, nor do I intend for any of my assistants to prosecute the case," he said.

Scofield had ordered the old grand jury to keep secret a report after their investigation into county government. Irked over the order, the grand jurors filed a lawsuit saying their right to free speech had been abridged.

The grand jurors' report has since been released, but their suit challenging he constiutionality of Scofield's order is pending in federal court.

District Judge Sam Houston, who had appointed attorney Robert Caldwell as special prosecutor to preside over the testimony of the former grand jurors, received the indictment against Scofield and then discharged Caldwell from his official duties.

Houston set a $200 personal recognizance bond for Scofield and said he would withdraw from the case. The question of a prosecutor was left undecided.

Carol Of Lights Ceremony Tradition At Tech

It began in the late 1950's. Now, the Carol of Lights is a Christmas tradition of Texas Tech University.

Lights will be turned on Dec. 7 as the university prepares for another holiday season.

Reflecting the theme of "An Eternity of Light," approximately 28,000 red, yellow and white lights will outline the Mass Communications, Math, Science, Chemistry, Holden Hall, Administration and Home Economics buildings.

Work crews began stringing lights for the Carol in late October. More than 47,000 feet (nearly 10 miles) of electrical wiring will be used.

The idea for lighting the campus was conceived in 1958 by Harold Hinn, former member of the Texas Tech Board of Regents and Foundation Board. Hinn provided the first 5,000 lights for the annual affair.

The ceremony will begin with a torchlight procession around Memorial Circle, led by Saddle Tramps, men's spirit organization.

The Texas Tech Brass Ensemble and the Texas Tech Choir will provide music for spectators before the program begins. After illumination of the lights the audience will sing carols, and Judson D. Maynard, professor of music, will play the carillon in the Administration Building Tower.

Luminarios (lighted candles in paper sacks) will be provided by Alpha Phi Omega, men's service organization. They will line the walkways from the campus entry at University and Broadway to Memorial Circle.

Lights will be turned on every evening from dusk until 11 p.m. through Dec. 26.

This year's program is sponsored by the Residence Halls Association, Saddle Tramps and APO.

Government Says Women Underpaid

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Labor Department's Women's Bureau said its studies show that women on the average have to work nearly nine days to gross the same amount of earnings that men gross in five days.

The latest earnings data, which are for 1977, show that among full-time workers employed throughout the year, men earned $14,626 while women earned $8,618. This indicates that women earned only 59 cents for every dollar men earned, the department said.

Blinded Victim Testifies During Trial

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — The blinded victim of an alleged attempted murder testified Friday that Dr. Archie Burkhalter offered him money to quit seeing the physician's ex-wife and threatened to file criminal charges against him.

John Hensley, 34, sold and repaired boats before a rifle bullet blew out his eyes Feb. 15 as he was leaving his South Padre Island condominium.

In late September or early October 1978, according to Hensley, Burkhalter met him for lunch. Burkhalter is accused of trying to arrange Hensley's death.

"He wanted me to quit seeing Laurie," said Hensley, who testified 40 minutes in a soft, calm voice. "He offered me money to quit seeing her."

Hensley said he refused $5,000 the doctor offered. On Oct. 30, 1978, Hensley and Mrs. Burkhalter married.

Burkhalter leaned back in his chair throughout Hensley's testimony without displaying any emotion.

Hensley was the last of 38 state witnesses in the case. Assistant District Attorney Joe Hendley rested the prosecution at 10:35 a.m.

Defense lawyer Warren Burnett said he would call several of Burkhalter's relatives as witnesses.

Burkhalter also has been indicted for kidnapping.

"I knew when she was missing and where she was," Hensley said.

Hensley said the physician called him during the incident.

"The doctor said he was going to press charges against me for beating up Laurie," he said. "I told the man he had better not hurt her."

Burkhalter called the couple so many times after their marriage that they had to take their telephone off the hook, Hensley said.

Hensley testified he was shot about 8 a.m. as he was unlocking his car.

"I thought I had been shocked," he said. "As soon as I was shot, I was blind. I put my hand to my face and I could feel parts of my eye, bone and skin hanging on my face," he told the jury.

"I still thought I was being shocked and I thought I had to let go of the car. When I let go, apparently I collapsed," he said. "When I go back up, I put a handkerchief over my eyes and started walking. I threw down the handkerchief because it was sopping."

Additional surgery is necessary before he can be fitted with glass eyes, Hensley said.

S.J. Wilburn has been convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment in the Hensley shooting. Burkhalter is accused of hiring Wilburn and Scott David Minnick to kill Hensley.

While the jury was outside the courtroom, Hendley dismissed one of the three counts in the indictment against Burkhalter and Minnick.

The prosecutor said he lacked vital testimony from a missing witness in order to prove Burkhalter offered $15,000 for the shooting.

State District Judge Darrell Hester refused defense requests to dismiss another count that alleges Burkhalter offered the two men a 1977 Cadillac as part of the payoff.

"I think the state's case against the defendant Minnick is considerably stronger for the third count (murder conspiracy with remuneration of a car) than against defendant Burkhalter," Hester said.

"It seems to me he was closer to the action than the defendant Burkhalter," Hester said.

Hensley testified he thought he had seen Minnick, or at least someone of his description, before the shooting. Hensley said the man asked him to step outside a cafe and look at a boat, but he declined.

'Racehorse' Hired To Represent Policemen

HOUSTON (AP) — Defense lawyer Richard "Racehorse" Haynes has been hired to represent two policemen involved in the fatal shooting of Reggie Lee Jackson.

Haynes, back in Houston after successfully defending millionaire Cullen Davis on a solicitation of murder charge in Fort Worth, would not say Friday who hired him in the Jackson case. Police Chief Harry Caldwell has asked the City Council to authorize funds for legal representation for the two officers.

Jackson was shot to death Sept. 26.

Officers R.W. Robinson and J.C. Valentino said Jackson was shot as he pointed a gun at them as he and a second man were fleeing after Jackson's car was stopped on a traffic matter. Several civilians, however, have said no second man was involved and that they heard someone, apparently Jackson, pleading for his life.

Valentino and Jackson are still on police duty.

The case is being investigated by the Police Department's internal affairs division, the Harris County district attorney's civil rights division, the FBI and a federal grand jury.

District Attorney John B. Holmes has indicated a district judge might be asked to convene a public court of inquiry.

Haynes said he would oppose such an inquiry.

"It's too susceptible to be used as a political power vehicle," Haynes said.

The proper place to investigate is a grand jury, Haynes said.

"The concept behind a grand jury is a viable one, they have no ax to grind," he said.

Haynes said Caldwell must believe the officers innocent of wrong doing in that they have not been fired.

"It would be easier for him to throw them to the wolves," he said.

Mrs. Carter Reveals Mental Health Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rosalynn Carter says the government is "finally turning the spotlight on the problems of people who are chronically mentally ill" by starting work on a plan to phase out large mental hospitals.

The President's Commission on Mental Health recommended 18 months ago that the government devise such a plan. Mrs. Carter announced this week during a speech in Denver that Surgeon General Julius Richmond is heading the effort.

Senate Rejects Tax Slash Amendment

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate rejected an effort Friday by oil-state members to slash up to $35 billion from the "windfall-profits" tax on the oil industry.

On a 53-32 vote the Senate turned down an amendment by Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., that would have weakened the tax in an effort to spur increased production of domestic oil.

Even if the amendment had passed, it would have had no real effect since it was offered to the bill passed by the House. The Senate Finance Committee had junked that bill and substituted its own, watered-down version, which is being considered by the Senate.

However, Friday's vote on the Boren amendment did provide the first clue to Senate sentiment on the tax bill. And it indicated oil-state members will have difficulty in further weakening the tax.

Boren cited estimates that his amendment would result in increased oil production of 500,000 to one million barrels of oil per day by 1990.

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, said there is no believable evidence that such a tax reduction would result in more oil. He called Boren's test amendment "just an opportunity for somebody to cast a meaningless vote to make the people think they are voting against Big Oil."

Earlier, the Finance Committee defended its bill as a balanced plan that will increase U.S. oil production while paying for a long-range national energy program.

The bill, which would cost the oil industry an estimated $138 billion from 1980 through 1990, was described by Sen. Russell B. Long, the committee chairman, as "the largest tax increase ever levied on a single American industry."

Metzenbaum, however, said the tax bill is just one part of a misguided energy policy that will cost each person in America $5,000 over the next decade.

We shouldn't have any windfall-profits tax because we shouldn't have any windfall," Metzenbaum said. "None of us would be here debating this ... (except for) one single stroke of the pen made by the president of the United States ... decontrolling the price of oil."

Carter concluded earlier this year that federal controls were holding the price of U.S. oil at an artificially low level and denying the oil industry the profits needed to increase U.S. production and cut reliance on imports.

He began phasing out those controls. But to capture a share of the extra revenue that will result, he proposed the "windfall-profits" tax. Despite the name, the tax would not apply to profits, although by cutting into industry revenues it would reduce profits.

The House passed a tax similar to that proposed by Carter. It would cost the industry $277 billion over the next decade. The Finance Committee viewed that tax as too stiff and slashed it to $138 billion.

Sen. William Roth, R-Del., said the bill seeks to strike a balance between "those who want to kick hell out of Big Oil and those who want to get in bed with Big Oil."

Under the Finance Committee bill, one-half the tax revenues would be spent over the next 11 years to help low-income Americans pay soaring fuel costs. Another $32 billion would go out as tax incentives for improved home and business conservation and to encourage switching from oil to other fuels.

The bill also would set aside $15 billion for improving the nation's transportation system. Although not earmarked, billions would be available to help pay for Carter's plan of government assistance in development of non-oil energy.

WARC Gives Solar Project Cool Reception

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — A U.S. project for beaming vast supplies of solar energy to earth by microwave transmission has been getting a cool reception in the World Administrative Radio Conference (WARC) which completed its eighth week of work here Friday.

Sources at the closed 148-nation meeting said a U.S. request for a frequency for the power transmission brought epressionsof doubt and fear of possible harmful effects.

Project Solar Power Satellite (SPS) aims at converting sunlight into 5 billion to 10 billion-watt microwave beams directed to giant atennas in theUnited States.

From this position, about 22,000 miles out in space, a transmission antenna with a diameter of slightly more than a half mile would beam the energy to earth antennas.

The project is a joint effort involving the U.S. Department of Energy, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and a many private contractors from the aerospace industry.

The caution of the delegates here, most of whom have engineering and scientific training, centers around possible problems with interference and environmental and health effects, the sources said.

On the other hand there is general understanding so far that in order to have the project ready by the turn of the century, planning must begin now and, for the planning to begin, some frequency for solar energy transmission must be assured in advance.

This assurance can come only from this conference

Companies Accused Of Price Violations

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Energy Department accused four oil companies Friday of price rules violations totaling more than $60 million between 1973 and 1976.

Conoco, Shell, Marathon and Gulf were charged with violating refiner and natural gas pricing regulations.

The companies will have a chance to respond to the charges before any action can be taken.

Shell officials termed two of the charges against them as unjustified and said the department is distorting the intent of the law. As to a third charge, the company said it is a technical question of measuring costs and She ' is studying the method it used.

He said the company is willing to let the courts decide who is right and wrong in interpreting these regulations.

There was no immediate comment from the other firms.

•Conoco was charged with seven price violations totaling $37,320,000.

•Shell faces three charges totaling $6,295,000.

•Marathon is accused of one violation of $13,500,000.

•Gulf also had one violation charge, amounting to $3,614,000.

Gasohol Plant Plans Nixed After Ruling

AUSTIN (AP) — A Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission official Friday said a Kansas firm talked gasohol but was thinking vodka when it sought permission to build a $20 million plant in the Rio Grande Valley.

Midwest Solvents officials recently told a Senate committee the company scrapped the plans because of an ABC staff decision change. The ABC staff initially told the firm the alcohol it planned to produce was not fit for human consumption, but the ruling was later changed and the project was blocked, Midwest officials said.

However, Mike McKinney, assistant to the ABC administrator, Friday said Midwest always planned to produce liquor at the proposed Santa Rosa plant.

"We knew and everybody knew they were talking about vodka and gin and liquor, but the term used by Midwest was 'alternate markets.' I think the public and disinterested persons reading the testimony didn't really take into consideration that 'alternate markets' was certainly liquor," McKinney said.

ABC staff members recently came under fire from the special Senate Committee on Gasohol. Committee Chairman Raul Longoria, D-Edinburg, said he was trying to find a way to resurrect the project that could mean hundreds of jobs for the impoverished Santa Rosa area. Committee members asked several ABC staff members if liquor lobbyists had spurred the decision change that blocked the plant.

ABC Administrtor W.S. McBeath, in a letter to the three ABC commissioners, said the Kansas firm relegated gasohol "to a definite third-place back seat in terms of the company's stated goals."

McBeath's letter also said the company apparently planned to manufacture gasohol "only to the extent necessary" to get a federal loan guarantee.

The administrator said "the central issue is liquor, not gasohol."

McKinney said a Midwest affiliate markets 60 liquor products under 60 different labels in Texas.

"We just flat could not allow an out-of-state firm to come in and hold a permit to make liquor," McKinney said. "The Midwest officials said they dropped the project after the ABC changed its decision and ruled the 190 proof alcohol they planned to produce was fit for human consumption.

Tanker Oil Spill Reduced To Trickle

GALVESTON (AP) — The Coast Guard reported Friday that only a trickle of crude oil was spilling into the Gulf of Mexico from the burning tanker Burmah Agate, crippled in a fiery and fatal ship collision on Nov. 1.

A light to moderate wind switched from the north to the east and southeast, but no more oil was reported to have reached Texas beaches.

Geological Institute Names Prexy

Dr. Grover E. Murray, former president of Texas Tech University and now a university professor, has been elected president of the American Geological Institute.

DR. MURRAY

AGI is a federation of 18 geological and geophysics organizations that represent more than 100,000 scientists. AGI provides information to geoscientists through public awareness programs and publications such as the "Bibliography and Index to Geology" and "Geotimes." The federation has a large number of university and corporate contributions to its educational related programs.

Murray has received numerous professional service awards and has been president of several other national associations.

Throughout his academic career Murray has maintained close association with professional and industrial organizations in the areas of geology and geophysics. He also has been active in geological research and exploration, including expeditions to the Antarctic while serving as president of the university.

It was under his direction that the International Center for Arid and Semi-Arid Land Studies was established on the Texas Tech campus.

He is past president of the Association of Professional Geological Scientists, the American Association of Petroleum Geologists and the Society of Economic Paleontologists and Mineralogists. He is also vice chairman of the National Science Board, which directs National Science Foundation activities.

Murray was president of Texas Tech from 1966-1976. He became the first president of the School of Medicine when it opened in 1969. He resigned both positions in 1976. Prior to his presidency here, Murray was vice president for Academic Affairs at Louisiana State University.

He received a bachelor of science degree from the University of North Carolina in 1937. His master of science and doctoral degrees came from LSU in 1939 and 1942.

The first commercial product manufactured in America and exported to Europe was a glass bottle made in a factory near Jamestown in 1608.

Board Rejects Buffalo Lake Building Bids

The board of directors of the Lubbock County Water Control and Improvement District Number One rejected all bids Friday for a new concession building at Buffalo Lake and will request new bids for a building to be made of concrete blocks.

Some of the directors thought the present bidding situation, which included nine alternatives to be bid on individually, discouraged some of the contractors from bidding. Another problem is the scarcity of metal for making metal buildings. The decision to build with concrete blocks should encourage more contractors to bid, director Bill Sims said.

The bids for the concrete-block building will be requested and will be opened on Jan. 15. The board will meet on Jan. 17 to decide to approve or disapprove the bids.

Ford's small "Tin Lizzie" became so popular that the average price of automobiles dropped from $3,000 in 1900 to $605 by 1916. Ford's four-cylinder models were raised from $345 to $645 in 1917. Standard mass production enabled Ford to turn out his cars faster than other automakers.

Queen Elizabeth II Drawn Into Spy Scandal

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE

LONDON (AP) — Queen Elizabeth II was drawn into the Anthony Blunt spy scandal Friday as the result of conflicting statements by her palace press office. At the same time, opposition members of Parliament demanded a no-holds-barred investigation of the security coverup that kept Blunt in a royal post for years after he confessed to being a Soviet spy.

The controversy involving the queen revolved around whether she wasinformed of the confession in 1964, and thus knew Blunt, an art historian, was a spy while serving in the unpaid post of Surveyor of the Queen's Pictures.

"Queen and the Spy — Did She Know?" blazed a headline in London's Evening Standard, about the tangle in the Buckingham Palace press office.

The office first said the queen was told about Blunt, then later it retracted the statement.

The upset began when a spokesman earlier in the day confirmed Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's statement to the House of Commons on Thursday that the queen's private secretary in 1964, Sir Michael Adeane, was told about Blunt.

That was caried by th domestic news agency, Press Association, and was aired by the British Broadcasting Corp. (BBC) and a commercial radio station.

Then the Press Association advised its clients that its report was to be held back for urgent clarification.

Michael Shea, chief press secretary to the queen, put out another statement saying the comment about the queen knowing was a "personal interpretation made by a member of the press office."

What Adeane told the queen, if anything, will never be revealed because, Shea said, "exchanges between the private secretary to the queen and the sovereign are confidential."

In another development, Blunt's attorney, Michael Rubinstein, said the disgraced, 72-year-old art historian, who was earlier reported to have flown to Italy to avoid publicity, was "believed" to be in Britain, and might make a statement after the middle of next week.

Earlier, demands surged from newspapers and members of Parliament to know who else was involved and if anyone was granted immunity from prosecution, as Blunt had been in exchange for his confession in 1964.

Labor Party member of Parliament James Wellbeloved said an inquiry is needed into the "revelations of squalid treachery reaching deep into the establishment."

Blunt was named as the "fourth man" in the spy chain of Guy Burgess, Donald MacLean and Kim Philby, whose defections to Moscow in the 1950s and 1960s have haunted every British government. All three worked in Britain's embassy in Washington.

Warned that he was about to be named as a spy, Blunt disappeared after taking a taxi Wednesday to London's Heathrow Airport.

His attorney, said he passed on the warning from the Mrs. Thatcher's Cabinet office.

Political sources said the tip was from Cabinet secretary, Sir Robert Armstrong, and was made on Mrs. Thatcher's instructions as a "common courtesy."

A government source said Blunt's disappearance was of no interest to the government as it had no further use for him.

"The idea that the Cabinet office should tip off a confessed traitor to enable him to make his getaway before the story broke is scandalous and must be fully investigated," said the Labor Party's Bruce George.

Political sources said the need to keep Blunt talking to British security officials about Soviet activities was the reason he was kept in his palace post.

Prominent retired politicians who were in the Conservative Party government of 1964 said they were kept ignorant of Blunt's confession, although ultimate responsibility for state secrets rests with the prime minister.

Lord Home, who as Sir Alec Douglas-Home was prime minister at the time, said he was not told that Blunt was suspected of espionage, or that he had confessed to passing secrets to the Soviet Union as an intelligence official during World War II.

As a result of the spying disclosure, an announcement in the official London Gazette said Blunt has lost the knighthood conferred in 1956 for his work as royal art consultant.

Blunt is said to have recruited Burgess and Maclean for a Soviet spy ring in the 1930s, when they were students at Cambridge University and he was a tutor there.

Andrew Boyle, author of a recent book on the spies called "The Climate of Treason," which laid clues to Blunt's "fourth man" identity, said the group belonged to an exclusive club of cultural elitists in Cambridge kown as Th Apostles, who were professed homosexuals.

Malcolm Muggeridge, a well-known journalist, television personality and British intelligence agent in World War II, said Blunt was widely known from his student days as a homosexual.

Four Women Seized In Vice Squad Raid

Four Lubbock women were arrested on suspicion of prostitution Friday afternoon by Lubbock police vice squad officers.

Three of the women reportedly were operating out of a 16th Street residence in East Lubbock. Two of them, 23 and 20, were arrested for suspicion of prostitution and a 29-year-old was arrested for suspected aggravated promotion of prostitution, according to police reports.

In a separate incident, a 27-year-old woman was arrested at a 21st Street residence, also for suspicion of prostitution.

Information leading to the arrests was supplied by informants and from newspaper classified ads offering nude dancing and massage, police said.

Club Waitress Shot In Change Dispute

An apparent argument about 50 cents in change resulted in the shooting Friday night of a 19-year-old waitress at a downtown Lubbock club.

Police had two suspects in custody late Friday in connection with the shooting at the Sweet Retreat, 19th Street and Texas Avenue. One of the suspects was treated at Methodist Hospital for lacerations.

Police reports indicate Miss Weissinger, who began work at the club Thursday, was giving change to two men when one reportedly accused her of short-changing him 50 cents.

Witnesses told police the man got up from the table and shot the girl with what was thought to be a .22-caliber pistol. The duo then ran out of the club, witnesses said.

Schnauzer Only Understands Hungarian

ALLERTON, Ill. (UPI) — Roland Smith encountered a little difficulty relaying even the simplest commands — like, "down, boy!" — to the 145-pound giant schnauzer that recently joined his family.

The coal-black dog, named Lucifer, only understands Hungarian.

Four-year-old Lucifer is so highly trained — he once helped patrol the Hungarian borders — that Smith did not want anyone outside the family to be able to work him. So, he decided to stick with Hungarian commands.

Smith, a farmer and dog fancier, turned to the University of Illinois' Russian and Eastern European Center for help. The center put him in touch with Professor Stephen C. Schmidt of the Department of Agricultural Economics, who helped the family learn the dog's vocabulary of some 55 Hungarian commands.

Lucifer's trainers sent the command words from Hungary, and Schmidt translated them into English and tape recorded them for Smith.

Lucifer is trained as a "schutzhund" and has a "bundessieger" rating — something like the canine equivalent on a 10th-degree black belt in karate, Smith said. He believes the dog is the only giant schnauzer with such a rating in the United States.

Lucifer's schutzhund training involves "obedience — first and foremost; tracking ability," and what Smith delicately refers to as "bite work."

The giant schnauzer is a "bullog, not afraid of anything — man, machine or beast," Smith said. But he felt the working instincts were missing from giant schnauzers he saw in the United States.

There are only 387 registered giant schnauzers in the United States and Smith began corresponding with their owners.

"I located a man in Budapest, a giant schnauzer breeder and also a judge. He said he'd look around and find something for me."

Finding the dog was easy — Lucifer was located in Moscow — but Smith said the American Kennel Club would not accept Russian registration, so Lucifer, born and bred in Hungary, had to go back to Budapest before moving to central Illinois.

Meanwhile, Smith imported Bogar, a 2-year-old female who arrived last July. Bogar only understood Hungarian, too, but with Schmidt's help, Smith worked her bilingually.

Use Of Lie Detectors By Employers Studied

AUSTIN (AP) — A Sunset Advisory Commission staff report says the state needs tighter control over the use of lie detector tests by employers.

The report, issued Friday, said the legislature might even want to ban polygraph screening of employees and prospective employees.

Staff members issued the report as the commission began its review of five state boards, including the Board of Polygraph Examiners.

The staff said the increased use of the lie detection equipment has caused an increased need for regulating polygraph examiners. There are now 458 licensed examiners in Texas.

The report suggested three alternatives — including abolition of the board and/or a ban on commercial use of the lie detection equipment.

"Polygraph testing in employment situations appears to warrant greater protection than currently exists because of possible infringements of privacy rights, the intrusive nature of the polygraph, and the unproven validity of the technique in such situations," the report said.

The alternatives listed included:

•Continue the current six-member board, but with the addition of some administrative and procedural changes.

•Abolish the board and transfer its regulatory functions to the Department of Public Safety.

•Abolish the board, transfer its regulatory functions to DPS, and "prohibit the use of polygraph in employment-related matters."

The report said 17 states prohibit employers' use of polygraph exams for potential employees.

"Some states prevent even the suggestion of such activity," the report said.

Such a ban in Texas would cut 90 percent of the $10 million to $15 million annual business for commercial polygraph operators in Texas, according to the staff.

The report cited three grounds cited by states that have banned the use of pre-employment polygraph tests.

"First, there is considerable disagreement concerning the accuracy of polygraph testing and the validity of such testing in pre-employment situations. Second, even if the polygraph were a truly reliable, objective 'lie detector,' the personal nature and potential degree of coercion of the examinations administered to employees and applicants is so intrusive as to be objectionable," the report said.

It also stated "serious constitutional guarantees concerning a person's right to privacy may be violated" by such testing.

The commission, four senators and four state representatives, will hold a hearing on the board early next year. It could recommend abolition of the agency, transfer or its functions to another agency or continuation, perhaps with procedural changes.

A majority of both the senators and the House members is necessary for the commission to issue a recommendation.

All state agencies under scrutiny by the commission will go out of existence in 1982 unless continued by the 1981 Legislature.

Staff reports issued Friday said there is no longer a need for the Board of Tuberculosis Nurses Examiners, the Civil Air Patrol Commission, the Water Well Drillers Board and the Board of Library Examiners.

Chip Carter Thinks Americans Support President's Actions

AUSTIN (AP) — Chip Carter says he thinks people believe his father has taken the right course during the Iranian crisis.

"I feel that they feel he is doing the right thing," the president's son told a news conference. "I believe the people are very much with him."

Young Carter said he talked with his father Thursday night.

"This is probably the worst time in his presidency," he said. "I think he would like to do more all the time but he can't. He just has to go slow."

He said he did not know how the Iranian situation would affect President Carter's campaign. "I assume it will show up his leadership and help dinner by the Texas Young Democrats saluting Dwayne Holman, outgoing president.

"You are going to be seeing a lot of the Carter family down there," he said. "We hope to win Texas and we will be making a major effort here. You will be seeing all members of the family before it is over."

Program To Improve Air Safety Begins

WASHINGTON (AP) — "Safe Pilot '80," a nationwide campaign to improve aviation safety through increased pilot education, was announced Friday by the General Aviation Manufacturers Association.

GAMA, a trade organization which represents companies that produce 95 percent of the world's general aviation aircraft, said it will promote a greater number of safety seminars and clinics around the nation and will encourage more pilots who fly small aircraft to attend.

As an incentive, pilots who attend will be eligible for prizes, including a $50,000 airplane and more than $26,000 in free flight instructions. Winners will be determined by lot.

Langhorne Bond, administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration, commended the GAMA decision and said: "With this industry support, we hope to impress on all pilots that safety is no accident."

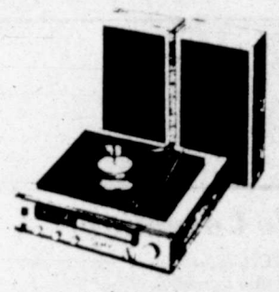

Reporter Henry M. Stanley was assigned by the New York Herald in October of 1869 to find Dr. David Livingstone, the British explorer and missionary. Stanley reached Zanzibar 15 months later and then traced Livingstone to Ujiji, on Lake Tanganyika, in November of 1871. After Livingstone's death, Stanley returned to Africa to become an explorer himself.

Lubbock Teenager Arrested For Burglarizing Patrol Car

A teen-ager allegedly burglarized a Lubbock policeman's patrol car shortly before midnight Thursday by shattering the window of the parked auto and stealing the barrel of a shotgun.

Officer Roy Wayne Vieregge said he arrested the 19-year-old Lubbock man after walking out of a restaurant in the 4900-block of Brownfield Highway and seeing the youth standing next to his damaged vehicle.

The suspect's 29-year-old male companion also was taken into custody for suspicion of public intoxication.

Vieregge said he spotted the suspects in front of the restaurant and saw that his patrol car's right front window had been broken. The officer's gun barrel was missing from inside the vehicle and the gun rack in the unit was bent, according to reports.

The officer said he took the two men into the restaurant for questioning before taking them to the county jail. The teen-age suspect reportedly admitted using a tire tool to break the car window.

The tool and missing shotgun barrel were found inside the suspect's pickup truck, according to police.

In other activity, police were looking for a man who allegedly rammed his car into a 32-year-old Lubbock woman's vehicle about 3 a.m. Friday and forced her off the road in the 1200-block of Jarvis Street.

The suspect was described as a thin black man, about 6 feet tall, wearing glasses and driving a silver-colored, mid-sized car.

Barbara Jean Hall of Route 8, Box 45, Lubbock, told police the man began following her at Avenue Q and Third Street. She said she pulled into the Health Sciences Center parking lot in an attempt to lose the motorist, but that the man followed and rammed his car into the side of her vehicle.

She told police that when her engine died, the suspect got out, walked to her car and yelled, "You better not move!"

The woman was able to get her car started and began driving on Jarvis Street when the man struck her vehicle three more times, she said. She said she jumped the curb, got out of her car and ran to a nearby service station, where she called police.

A 20-year-old Lubbock man, stopped by police about 11:40 p.m. Thursday for running a stop light, reportedly drove away while the officer was at his patrol car writing the man a citation.

After a short pursuit, the man was again stopped in the 1900-block of 10th Street and taken to the county jail, where he was booked on suspicion of attempting to elude police.

A Lubbock woman said someone stole two of her rings, valued at $1,500, in the bathroom of a nightclub-restaurant at 50th Street and Avenue T about 8:20 p.m. Thursday.

Tobi Crain of 4601 52nd St. said she had taken the rings off in the bathroom and forgot about them until about an hour later. When she went back, the jewelry was gone, according to reports.

Jury Sentences Selman To Eight-Year Term

Sammy Richard Selman was sentenced Friday to eight years in the Texas Department of Corrections for the May 26 beating and resulting death of a Shallowater man.

The man Selman was convicted of beating, Jeral Ray Kirkland, died from the injuries six days later at Health Sciences Center Hospital. A 237th District Court jury found the 30-year-old Selman guilty Oct. 11 of voluntary manslaughter for Kirkland's death.

Selman, however, elected to have Judge John R. McFall, rather than the jury, assess the punishment and after two delays, the judge pronounced sentence during a brief Friday afternoon session in his courtroom.

Immediately following the trial, members of the panel that convicted Selman of the manslaughter charge filed back into the courtroom to view the sentencing. But McFall decided to postpone the punishment hearing until later.

On Oct. 19, the judge held a punishment hearing for Selman during which prosecutor Travis Ware asked for a prison term while defense counsel George Thompson sought a 10-year probated sentence.

Four Persons Hurt In Collision

Four Lubbock residents were injured, one of them seriously, in a two-car collision about 2:05 a.m. Friday at Fourth Street and the Brownfield Highway.

Gary Lee Bilbrey of 4303 19th St., Apt. 136, was reported in serious condition Friday evening at Health Sciences Center Hospital. Bilbrey was the lone occupant of one of the vehicles involved in the accident.

A passenger in the second vehicle, Barbara Kailey, 20, of 616 Hulen Hall, Texas Tech University campus, was in satisfactory condition at Methodist Hospital.

The driver of the second car, Brian Anthony Sevin, 21, and another passenger, Keith Sevin, both of 2013 Eighth St., Apt. 11, were treated and released at HSCH.

Police said Bilbrey, 23, was traveling west on Brownfield Highway and Sevin was eastbound on Fourth Street when the two vehicles collided.

Reports indicate at least one of the victims was trapped in his car and the Lubbock Fire Department's "Jaws of Life" rescue unit was called to the scene. However, all the victims were freed from the vehicles before the unit reached the accident, according to a fire department spokesman.

Ex-POW Wants Women Off Battlefield

WASHINGTON (AP) — A former prisoner of war in Vietnam appealed to congressmen Friday not to put women into combat lest they face the life of a "crawling animal" that he suffered during seven years in a Hanoi prison.

Retired Adm. Jeremiah Denton said "it would be insanity to subject women to the horrors of war." He said, too, that women should be kept off the battlefield to save "the institution of the family."

Denton, whose book "When Hell Was in Session" became a television movie, testified before the House military personnel subcommittee as it completed a week of hearings on women in the military and whether they should be put into combat.

He said he was once "reduced to a crawling animal" with boils all over his face after he was bound hand and foot in a filthy cell with an overflowing tin can for a toilet.

"I just don't like to think of a young lady spending 10 days and nights like that," he said.

Another time, he said, Vietnamese guards tortured him and other prisoners for five days by repeatedly yanking their shackled legs hard against iron cell bars.

"I would hate to see a woman in that situation," he testified.

Denton said that another time he and a fellow prisoner forced a showdown during a forced march of prisoners through Hanoi streets, adding that he did not think two women could have done it.

Hundreds of people lining the streets were kicking and hitting the prisoners and throwing rocks and other objects at them, he said.

Gacy Victim Slated For Chicago Burial

The body of Stapleton, 14 when he disappeared in May 1976, was identified positively Wednesday through dental records. His mother, Bessie Stapleton, said the boy disappeared on his way home, and was reported missing the next day.

He was one of 33 boys or young men Gacy is charged with slaying. The body was found buried under Gacy's Chicago home.

GUYANA

Guyana lies on the north coast of South America and is about the size of Idaho. Its neighbors are Venezuela to the west, Brazil to the south and Surinam on the east. Dense tropical forests cover much of the land, although a flat coastal area up to 40 miles wide — where 90 percent of the population lives — provides rich alluvial soil for agriculture.

Accident Victim Dies Of Injuries

A 4-year-old boy, who was critically injured in a Wednesday afternoon car accident, died Friday afternoon at Health Sciences Center Hospital.

Jeremy Meyer, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Walter Meyer of 2608 Ave. P, died about 1 p.m. Friday in the pediatric intensive care unit at HSCH, becoming Lubbock County's 12th fatality for 1979.

The youngster was one of eight persons injured in the accident that occurred about 3:48 p.m. Wednesday one mile south of Lubbock on County Road 27 and 98th Street.

Department of Public Safety reports indicate that the station wagon driven by the boy's father was northbound on County Road 27 when it collided with a car driven by Katherine Farmer Rojas, 23, of 8002 Cedar Ave.

Meyer, 28, and another son, Jonathan, 5, were treated and released from HSCH.

Mrs. Rojas and four passengers in her vehicle were treated and released from Methodist Hospital.

March Ban Overruled By Judge

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge Friday night overturned a government ban on Iran-related demonstrations near the White House.

U.S. District Judge Aubrey E. Robinson Jr. said he was not convinced by the government's argument that Washington demonstrations which presented the danger of becoming violent could provoke Iranians holding some 60 Americans captive at the U.S. embasssy in Tehran.

The government ban on demonstrations had been challenged by the American Civil Liberties Union, which contended the real harm in the government's action was to the constitutional right of free speech.

Robinson said that the government failed to demonstrate a sufficient connection "between any events that might potentially arise ... and subsequent occurrances in Iran.

"Without a very substantial showing of inevitable direct and irreparable harm to those held hostage in Iran, the uniqueness does not justify the prior restraint ..." Robinson ruled. He said the ban was "a substantial infringement on their First Amendment rights."

Robinson also said that government officials have the "capability and experience necessary to discharge their constitutional obligation to prevent harm to the demonstrators and the capacity to protect both the demonstrators and others."

Shortly after the ruling the Justice Department issued a statement saying that it shared "the concern of the ACLU that all constitutional guarantees be protected." But it said "we are also concerned about the extraordinary international situation. Our effort was to protect the safety and welfare of the hostages in their perilous situation in Tehran."

"We hope and will, of course, make every effort to ensure that the demonstrations here both take place without disturbance and in no way adversely affect the situation of the hostages," the statement said.

Robinson's ruling against the government came despite testimony by Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher, who told the judge that violence to Iranian demonstrators in this country "could be a catalyst for a very tragic situation in Iran.

"Any event in the United States could be the spark that could change what is already a precarious situation," he said.

But David Landau, attorney for the ACLU, told Robinson, "The government is permitting the threat of violence by hecklers to prohibit free speech."

Carter Asks Immediate Fuel-Saving Programs

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter called Friday for strong, immediate fuel conservation programs, suggesting that states consider returning to odd-even gasoline purchase rules and rigid enforcement of the 55-mph speed limit.

Administration officials also announced the government is aiming to increase the use of "gasohol" to 10 percent of all unleaded gasoline sales next year, and would try to double the pace of converting oil-burning utilities to coal.

The actions were aimed at reducing U.S. demand for foreign oil, which the president has said makes the nation vulnerable to actions such as the takeover of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

Effect Of Cutoff

Energy Secretary Charles Duncan conceded that the effect of the cutoff of Iranian oil imports, announced Monday, will not show up for another 45 to 50 days and may well be considerably less than a 4 percent shortage.

Nonetheless, Duncan and Carter, in addressing a White House gathering of 39 governors and other top state executives, urged immediate action to conserve energy.

Some of the governors were critical of the conservation appeals. Republican Gov. Bill Clements of Texas said it was "the same song, third verse" about saving energy. "Really, it was just warming over yesterday's scrambled eggs," he said.

Gov. Jim Thompson of Illinois, another Republican, said that "to go back to our people and ask for conservation again, without any progress (on a national energy program), rubbed the governors the wrong way."

Odd-Even Sales

Duncan said later the governors were asked to consider reimposing odd-even gasoline sales plans and requiring minimum gasoline purchases.

He said 100,000 barrels of oil could be saved daily through strong enforcement of the 55-mph speed limit.

Duncan said an additional 50,000 barrels could be saved through ride-sharing and van pooling arrangements, and 200,000 barrels per day through enforcement of building temperature regulations.

He said he asked the governors to achieve a 5 percent cut in fuel use by each state government, including a 10 percent reduction in fuel consumed by state-owned vehicles.

Carter said "there is no reason to panic," and noted that supplies of fuel are better now than they were a year ago.

But he added: "Americans cannot underestimate the importance of the strongest possible conservation efforts."

He said: "An early and permanent commitment to the sharpest possible reduction in wasted energy of all kinds would be helpful."

Duncan assured the governors the government would take action to spread shortages evenly over different states and regions and among different refiners.

The cutoff of purchases of Iranian oil which Carter ordered Monday is expected to reduce the flow of foreign oil into the United States by 700,000 barrels a day, or roughly 4 percent of total U.S. consumption.

Duncan said some or all of that could be made up from other sources, but he said the administration is acting on the assumption the shortage will be a full 4 percent.

He said the administration is drawing up state-by-state conservation targets. Duncan's chief deputy, John Sawhill, said these targets would be ready by the end of the month.

Eight Iranians Arrested On Firearms Charges

in the Baltimore area, were: Mohammad S. Tofighi, 25; his wife, Shahla Ameli, 25; and Abolghsaem Karaee, 27.

All eight were charged with violation of the federal law against dealing in firearms without a license, conspiracy to violate that law, placing firearms on a common carrier in interstate or foreign commerce without notifying the carrier, and conspiracy to violate that law.

The warrant filed with the U.S. magistrate's office said the group drove to the airport from Virginia and purchased one ticket on a Trans World Airlines flight to New York. The ticket was purchased by Mosavi in the name of Moomeney, it said.

Two suitcases were removed from the car and checked in at the ticket counter but were seized by ATF agents, the warrant said. One of the suspects was carrying a black flight bag, which also was seized.

Agents said they seized 15 boxes of ammunition and three Winchester rifles. The flight bag contained two rifle scopes and a pair of receipts from the S &S Gun Shop in Randallstown, Md., dated Tuesday, along with a street map of Washington "with certain embassies maked," th court papers said.

Mosavi told agents that Moomeney planned to take the rifles and ammunition directly to Iran, according to the warrant. The warrant also said Moomeney did not plan to use the rifles for hunting because "there are no animals left to shoot in Iran."

One ATF agent, identified as Dennis Jones, worked undercover in the gun shop. The court document said Jones observed that when he paid for the rifles, Mosavi "appeared to have over $2,000 in cash and an undetermined amount of traveler's checks. He used approximately $700 in cash to pay for the rifles, scopes and ammunition."

On one occasion, Jones had to deliver a rifle to a Baltimore apartment, the court documents said. He said he observed pictures on the wall, which Mosavi said "were pictures of persons who had been tortured or killed by the shah," the document said.

done any form of violence in reaction to Iranian students who protest in our streets."

He said he thinks that "due to the unique circumstances existing between our two countries, the Iranians should not be allowed to demonstrate in any of our cities.

"I say this for the safety of the Iranians, as well as for the American hostages in Iran," he added.

Meanwhile, there were calls on Capitol Hill for Americans not to dishonor the nation by striking out at Iranians living in the United States.

Two members of Congress questioned the constitutionality of Carter's order singling out for deportation Iranian students found to be in the United States illegally. They commented before hearing of Byrd's remarks.

"Is it really being tough, picking on a bunch of students, as motley as they may appear?" asked Sen. John Chafee, R-R.I. "Let us come through this difficult period with our integrity, our self-respect and our reputation intact."

And Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., chairman of the House civil and constitutional rights subcommittee, said "it is precisely at a time like this — when emotions run high — that the government must act vigorously to protect the civil liberties of all who dwell here."

In a copyrighted interview published Friday in the Charleston, W.Va., Daily Mail, Byrd said it made his blood boil "to see some of those so-called students out there in the streets being protected by our police and running down the very government that is their host and is educating them."

Last week, Byrd told reporters the situation in Iran is a matter of such "delicacy and such sensitivity that ... it isn't a time for rhetoric ... it is a situation that requires diplomacy and restraint."

At that time, Byrd complimented the press and members of Congress for using restraint and said in response to questions about Iran, "Hear nothing, see nothing, say nothing."

In the interview, conducted Thursday, Byrd said that while he hoped for a reasoned solution it was only realistic to recognize that "we're not dealing with a government guided by civilized principles of humane treatment and international law. We're dealing with a bunch of anarchists."

He said that if the deposed shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi were to be returned to Iran to stand trial and face possible execution it would be "to our everlasting shame."

Chicagoan Appointed To Commerce Post

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter on Friday named Philip M. Klutznick, a Chicago businessman and Democratic party contributor, to become secretary of Commerce.

White Hose Press ecretary Jody Powell said Klutznick has "a great deal of experience in the two most important areas of concern to the Commerce Department" — international trade and economic development.

KLUTZNICK

Carter also named Luther Hodges Jr., who had been considered a dark horse contender for the commerce post, to fill the new post of deputy secretary in a reorganized Department of Commerce.

In that post, which will be created by a reorganization plan now making its way through Congress, Hodges would be second in command to Klutznick.

Klutznick, who would be by far the oldest member of Carter's cabinet, was described by Powell as "a very active 72."

Powell said the president met with Klutznick at the White House on Thursday. Officials, who asked not to be named, said it was at that meeting that Klutznick was offered the job.

The search for a new secretary to succeed Juanita Kreps had dragged on longer than White House officials had originally anticipated.

Powell was asked about reports that several businessmen had turned down offers to take the post. Powell said, smiling, "As I think I have pointed out on numerous occasions, no one turns down the president." That is because potential nominees are first asked if they would be interested in the job, Powell said. If they say they aren't interested, they are not offered the job.

Kiutznick is a limited partner in the Salomon Bros. investment house and chairman of a Swiss bank, the Continental Foreign Trade Bank of Geneva.

Klutznick describes himself as a "retired ambassador," having held ambassadorial rank as a member of the United States delegation to the United Nations in 1957, 1961 and 1962. He was also U.S. representative to the U.N. Economic and Social Council from 1961 to 1963. A Democrat, Klutznick had close ties to the late U.N. Ambassador and Illinois Gov Adlai Stvenson.

He has been a heavy donor to the Democratic party. Federal Election Commission records show he gave $1,000, the legal maximum, to Carter's 1976 campaign and a total of $7,500 to the Democratic Finance Committee in 1977 and 1978.

Powell, asked if Klutznick's fundraising abilities had anything to do with his apppointment, said, "I really don't know what his fundraising abilities would be."

The Commerce Department job was the only unfilled Cabinet post. Carter recently nominated Shirley Hufstedler, a federal appeals judge, to the newly created job as secretary of Education.

Carter had sought a businessman of international stature to head Commerce, which is slated to be upgraded and given the primary mission of promoting sales of U.S. products overseas.

In his search for a new Commerce chief, administration sources who asked for anonymity said Carter narrowed his choices to Klutznick and J. Irwin Miller, chairman of Cummins Engine Co. of Columbus, Ind.

These sources said that Miller lunched on Thursday with Vice President Walter Mondale, but a source close to Mondale said that Miller, who is a Republican, was not being offered the Commerce post and another source said Miller expresssed no interest in the post.

Hodges, who has been acting secretary of Commerce since the departure of Mrs. Kreps on Nov. 2, was brought into the department last June. Many believed at that time that he would eventually replace Mrs. Kreps, whose tenure was in doubt because of personal problems related to an attempted suicide by her husband earlier this year.

New Mexico Twins Born On Different Days, Cities

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (UPI) — Joy Lynn and Joanne Beth Charles were born in different cities on different days. Despite that, they are twins.

Joy Lynn Charles was born at 10:35 p.m. last Saturday at the Cuba Health Center. Her sister, Joanne Beth Charles, was born at 12:38 a.m. Sunday at the Presbyterian Hospital in Albuquerque.

The girls' parents, Richard and Sandy Charles, planned to drive to Albuquerque Sunday to wait for the birth of the twins, but Mrs. Charles began having contractions Saturday evening.

By the time the couple reached Cuba, some 45 miles from their Lybrook home, Joy Lynn was ready to be born and the Charleses went to the local hospital.

After the birth of the first child, however, complications developed and doctors decided to send Mrs. Charles to Presbyterian Hospital, where Joanne Beth was delived by Caesarean section.

During the 80-mile ride in an ambulance from Cuba to Albuquerque, a nurse from Cuba, Gladys Lehman, held the second baby in the uterus so the cord would not be pinched.

"I had the baby's life in my hands," Miss Lehman said. "I had to keep that baby up and keep the cord from being compressed."

"We did not think the second baby would make it," Charles said. "The doctor told us they usually only give an hour for the second baby to be born.

"The doctor told me that he did the fastest Caesarean section he had ever done," he said.

Joy Lynn, who weighed four pounds, 10 ounces at birth, and Joanne Beth, who weighed three pounds, 13 ounces, probably will remain at the hospital for 10-12 days, Charles said. Mrs. Charles, 28, was released Thursday.

Anti-American March Seen As 'Biggest'

the United States will not change its position on the presence of the ailing former shah "because of anything someone might have said over a loudspeaker in Tenran."

Iran has no central authority in ultimate control. The last premier, Mehdi Bazargan, resigned last week because his government was weakened by Khomeini's personal power and independent policies. A new, 16-member Cabinet was announced Thursday, but no premier was named.

Tehran Radio quoted the militants as saying, "Our conditions are known ... We denounce any negotiations concerning the hostages' release before the United States extradites the deposed shah. We remind government officials to pay attention to internal problems connected with the people, instead of negotiating abroad and paying attention to international public opinion."

Bani Sadr has been acting as chief spokesman for Khomeini but the embassy invaders apparently are backed by militantly religious forces on the powerful 14-man Revolutionary Council.

The Paris newspaper Le Monde quoted Bani Sadr as saying Iran was no longer accepting dollars in payment for its crude oil, but the country's oil minister, in a telephone conversation from his home in Tehran, denied that. The announcements caused the dollar to seesaw on foreign exchange markets.

The shah, being treated for cancer at a New York hospital, has been offered refuge in Egypt, or in Mexico, where he lived before being hospitalized. His doctors said he may have to undergo an "exceedingly grave" operation to remove a gallstone, but that the surgery would not take place for at least si to 10 weks.

Washington has refused the militants' demands and has retaliated by banning Iranian oil imports and freezing Iranian government assets in the United States.

King Trial

dicts were read. Before the jury was brought into the courtroom, Judge Warnick warned against any type of emotional outbursts during the verdict announcements.

King accepted the four verdicts emotionlessly. But he and his wife, who sat silently beside her husband during the four-day trial, smiled and talked quietly with friends after the jury and spectators left the courtroom.

During final arguments Friday morning, lead defense counsel Byron Chappel argued, "This (trial) is the result of a bad judgment call that's been blown all out of proportion."

Dan Hurley, criminal district attorney's office misdemeanor chief and lead prosecutor in the case, called King's defense incredible and said it would undermine juvenile respect for authority.

Private School Tax Break Struck Down

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — A federal judge on Friday struck down as unconstitutional a state law that provided tax breaks of up to $700 for parents who send their children to private schools.

Opponents of the law hailed the decision as "a victory for public education." But an official of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Providence criticized it as an example of the government running in "panic" from helpingreligious institutions.

U.S. District Judge Raymond J. Pettine said the 1979 tax law violated the constitutional separation of church and state.

State Attorney General Dennis J. Roberts II said an appeal will be filed next week with the 1st U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Boston. "This is a big public tax issue that I feel obligated to go ahead with," said Roberts.

He declined to say on what grounds the appeal would be made.

Ronald A. DiOrio, president of the National Education Assocation in Rhode Island, said the decision was "an expression of faith in an support of public education."

"It is our hope that governing bodies in other states will pay heed to our struggle for equity and justice in their debates on this issue," he said.

DiOrio's group was one of 11 to challenge the law, which would have been applicable to 1979 state income tax returns.

Pettine earlier barred the state from preparing income tax forms that made provision for the deduction, which would have cost the state an estimated $580,000 in potential tax revenue this year and $600,000 next year.

The statute does not specifically refer to sectarian schools, but Pettine said the parents of parochial school students would unfairly benefit from it.

He noted that 94 percent of the 29,066 Rhode Island students whose parents would be eligible for the deduction are enrolled in religious shools. Of that total, 85 percent are in Roman Catholic schools.

Pettine said the law violates the First Amendment's prohibition against public establishment of religion. "I find that the primary effect of the tuition deduction is the advancement of religion and, as such, it is unconstitutional," he wrote.

A similar law remains on the books in Minnesota, but tuition tax deductions have been struck down in New Jersey and New York.

The Rhode Island law, which won strong support from the Providence diocese, would have allowed parents of students in kindergarten through the sixth grade to claim deductions of up to $500 for tuition, transportation and non-religious textbooks. The limit was set at $700 for students in junior and senior high school.

He said the government offers subsidies and depreciation allowances to industry but "runs in panic" from helping religious institutions.

House, Senate Pass Emergency Legislation To Aid Agencies

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House and Senate, working against time, accepted an abortion financing compromise Friday and passed emergency legislation to keep four major government agencies in business.

Senate passage of the bill, on a 51-23 vote, came after the House already had recessed for a week-long Thanksgiving Day vacation. Unless both bodies had accepted the bill before Tuesday, four Cabinet-level departments would have been without funds.

The House earlier Friday had passed the compromise on a 155 to 63 head-count vote. That House vote came after opponents failed to get enough support to force a roll-call vote, which would have put each member on record as favoring or opposing the compromise.

The agreement on abortion funding was reached by House and Senate negotiators only hours earlier.

Although the departments technically would have run out of operating funds after Tuesday unless the legislation was passed, they probably could have kept operating for a week or so on left-over funds.

But one of the agencies affected is the Department of Defense, and several senators said it wouldn't be a good idea to keep its money in limbo in view of the situation in Iran.

The emergency legislation was needed because regular appropriations bills for the four departments have not yet been passed. The abortion issue is often introduced into such money bills by opponents of abortion.

The compromise would allow federal payments for abortions by poor women when the life of the mother is directly threatened and in cases of rape and incest. That is the same language that both chambers accepted one month ago on another emergency money bill.

The House wanted to limit those payments to cases where the life of the mother was directly threatened. The Senate wanted to also allow payments in cases where two doctors certify the mother could suffer long-term health damage unless the pregnancy was ended.

The abortion issue has been difficult to settle. It, and a controversial pay raise for congressmen, were the factors that kept the House and Senate from quickly agreeing on the first emergency resolution last month.

As a result of the lengthy disagreement last month, an estimated 1.5 million federal workers temporarily went on half pay.

Departments affected by the funding bill are Defense, Labor, Transportation, and Health, Education and Welfare. The legislation also contains emergency funds for foreign assistance and military construction.

The new funding measure would be in effect until Sept. 30, 1980, or until regular appropriations bills can be passed.

The House-Senate conference on abortion was far from smooth and the compromise far from unanimous. House negotiators didn't want to formally go on record as proposing any compromise. Both Sens. Warren Magnuson, D-Wash., and Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., voted against the compromise.

But Rep. Jamie Whitten, D-Miss., noted that government activities could be severely upset.

Prime Rate Raised Record Percent

NEW YORK (AP) — Major banks raised their prime lending rates to a record 15¾ percent on Friday, drawing an immediate charge of "profiteering" from a key congressman.

Citibank, the nation's second-largest bank, was the first to announce the increase from 15½ percent. Most other major banks promptly matched the increase, including No. 1 Bank of America, although Chase Manhattan, ranked third, held back.

The increase was called "completely unjustified" by House Banking Committee Chairman Henry S. Reuss, D-Wis.

"The banks are simply profiteering by these continuing hikes in the prime rate," he added.

But Citibank said conditions in the market justified a 16 percent prime rate and claimed it showed restraint by imposing the smaller increase.

The prime rate is the rate banks charge their most credit-worthy corporate customers. Other commercial and industrial borrowers pay higher rates.

The rate does not directly affect consumer or mortgage loans, but is closely watched as an indicator of short-term rates.

The rate stood at 11¾ percent in early August, but has risen rapidly since then, especially since the Federal Reserve Board tightened credit on Oct. 6. Until this year, the record high for the prime rate was 12 percent, set during the 1974 recession.

In the last ten days, however, some short-term interest rates have dropped, as Reuss noted in denouncing the banks. The average rate banks pay on certificates of deposit over $100,000, for example, fell to 14.28 percent this week from 14.53 percent the prior week.

Despite that, many Wall Street analysts agree with Citibank's claim that the prime rate has not risen unreasonably. "There's a cost squeeze going on at the banks," said Donald Maude, an analyst with Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith Inc.

Maude noted that since early October banks have lost $6.7 billion in deposits in regular savings accounts, which pay only 5¼ percent, as investors have sought higher yields.

"The prime is now much closer to the CD (certificate of deposit) rate than it was in March and April, when there was not nearly the hue and cry," said William Gibson of Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co.

Reuss has been criticizing the banks since the prime rose to 15 percent on Oct. 23, but so far other prominent Washington officials have not joined in the criticism.

The situation is in stark contrast to the one that prevailed in 1974, when political pressure helped hold the prime rate at 12 percent although many bankers believed higher rates were justified.

House Boosts Solar-Energy Satellite Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — A controversial program that could lead to the eventual orbiting of 60 solar-energy satellites — each roughly the size of Manhattan — got an important boost Friday from the House of Representatives.

By a 201-146 margin, the House approved and sent to the Senate a special $25 million authorization to speed up and expand the Energy Department's research on the solar satellite concept.

If the full plan is ever realized, the satellites would be constructed in space in 2,200-mile high orbits over a period of 30 years.

Each would have solar collectors with surface areas of 55-square miles to gather the sun's energy. The solar power would be beamed back to earthbound antennas in the form of microwaves and then converted into electricity and fed into the nation's electric-power grid.

Although the program is still in the formative stage, advocates see it as a visionary way of making the nation more energy self-reliant for the 21st century, and want research stepped up.

But foes depict it as a expensive Rube Goldberg scheme concocted as collosal bailout for the U.S. aerospace industry.

"It's a boondoggle. But members are afraid to vote against anything that has 'solar' in the title for fear of being labeled anti-energy," said Howard Wolpe, D-Mich., the leading opponent, after Friday's vote.

The legislation approved by the House would only strengthen an existing $16 million government research program — but foes contended it would open the door to going ahead with the full project.

The legislation faces an uncertain fate in the Senate, where a similar bill died in 1978.

Several opponents, including Wolpe, took some solace in Friday's vote by noting the bill had passed by a smaller margin than last year's 267-96 vote.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration puts a $500 billion to $800 billion price on the complete project. Critics claim the figure could run into the trillions.

Sponsors insisted that the $25 million legislation does not commit the government to building this demonstration satellite. Instead, it only "moves the nation closer to determining if solar power will be a part of our energy future," said Rep. Ronnie G. Flippo, D-Ala., a sponsor.

But Wolpe claimed that further studies are not needed and that the legislation was largely an attempt by aerospace industry lobbyists to get a commitment from the goverment for a major new U.S. space program.

"There's been an awful lot of space industry interest involved in this project," Wolpe said.

He claimed that, at best, power from the solar satellites would make up no more than 10 perent of the nation's energy needs.

The $60 billion that a demonstration satellite would cost could be better spent — and would save more energy — if it were distributed as $1,000 grants to better insulate the 60 million homes the Department of Energy has identified as being under-insulated, Wolpe said.

New UMW President Calls For Union To Unite

WASHINGTON (AP) — Saying he hoped the United Mine Workers would again become "truly united," Sam Church was sworn in Friday to replace the ailing and controversial Arnold R. Miller as president of the embattled union.

Church, 43, assumed the post after the union's governing board voted unanimously to accept the resignation of Miller, who had held the post since 1972.

"Today has been a very emotional day for me," Church said. "My greatest desire is that we can ... all work together to fulfill the dreams of those brave men and women who founded this union."

Internal disputes have fractured the union in recent months as Miller's subordinates questioned whether the former West Virginia coal miner was capable of running the union. But Friday's meeting of the international executive board was unusually harmonious, according to board members.

"Everything this board did today was unanimous," said Joe Davidson, board representative from southern West Virginia.

Two weeks ago, Miller accused Church of plotting to overthrow him, and said the UMW vice president would not be on his re-election ticket in 1982.

Despite the split — which Church has refused to discuss — the new union president praised Miller's administration of the union.

"Starting with a small rank and file organization, he worked tirelessy to reform a great institution that had lost is way," Church said of his predecessor.

"Fatigue, persistent physical illness and the curse of black lung did not stand in his way. He will long be remembered as a labor leader whose uncompromising dedication to union democracy brought new hope to hundreds of thousands of his brothers."

The UMW faces serious problems. Its financial position has been eroded, both by inflation and by the lengthy coal strike of 1978. Its membership is declining as the national focus of mining shifts from the hills of Appalachia, where the UMW is virtually invincible, to the broad fields of the traditionally non-union West.

At the same time, many union leaders have been apprehensive of Miller's frequent illnesses and his practice of disappearing from union headquarters, often during periods of crisis.

In his letter of resignation, Miller said his physical condition "makes it impossible to continue to serve effectively as your president" and offered "my best wishes to brother Sam Church in serving as your new president."

The board made Miller president emeritus, a post that was created in 1960 for the UMW's legendary leader, John L. Lewis. Miller will receive his present salary and benefits until his term of office expires on Dec. 22, 1982, Church said.

After that, it will be up to the executive board to decide whether to continue his salary.

A special election will be held to choose a vice president, Church said.

Church named Eldon Callen as his press aide, but said he presently plans no other changes in the union staff. Callen was Miller's press aide, but the UMW president fired him in August during a fiery dispute.

The new union president also said he plans no immediate changes in union policy. He did say, however, that he hoped to increase the union's organizing efforts, particularly in the Western coalfields.

"I would like to step up organizing in the West, but — like anything else — it costs money."

Church said it will be up to the union's constitutional convention, which convenes next month in Denver, to approve a dues increase to finance an expanded organizing department.

"I would urge them to do this," he said.

Miller has been in fragile health for several years, and he was hospitalized Monday after he suffered what doctors termed a "mild" heart attack while hunting.

It was Miller's second heart attack. He also suffered a stroke in 1978 and suffers from spinal arthritis and black lung disease, both the result of the more than 20 years Miller spent in the mines of West Virginia.

Congressman Criticizes Forced Retirement

NEW YORK (AP) — A larger and more vigorous group of elderly in the coming decades will make it necessary to end forced retirement, Senate Majority Whip Alan Cranston said Friday.

"We cannot afford to begin the 21st century with a mushrooming population of dependent old people who are no better off than many who are in nursing homes today," Cranston, D-Calif., said in remarks prepared for the Lasker foundation awards presentation here.

The foundation gave its annual awards for medical research Friday to two American and two British scientists. The winners had been announced earlier.

Cranston said 23 million Americans — 11 percent of the population — are over 65 today, and the number is growing by half a million a year.

He predicted that with new research, people in their 70s and 80s in the future may have the "physical health and resilience associated with middle-aged people today."

"Elderly Americans who work, produce for the economy and pay taxes will help us salvage much of the expense and wasted resources we now assume are inevitable with an aging population." That will make it necessary to end forced retirement and find new jobs, he said.

In a related development, the National Institute on Aging said that a researcher at the University of California at Irvine has found that some age-related changes in the central nervous system of rats may be reversed by drugs.

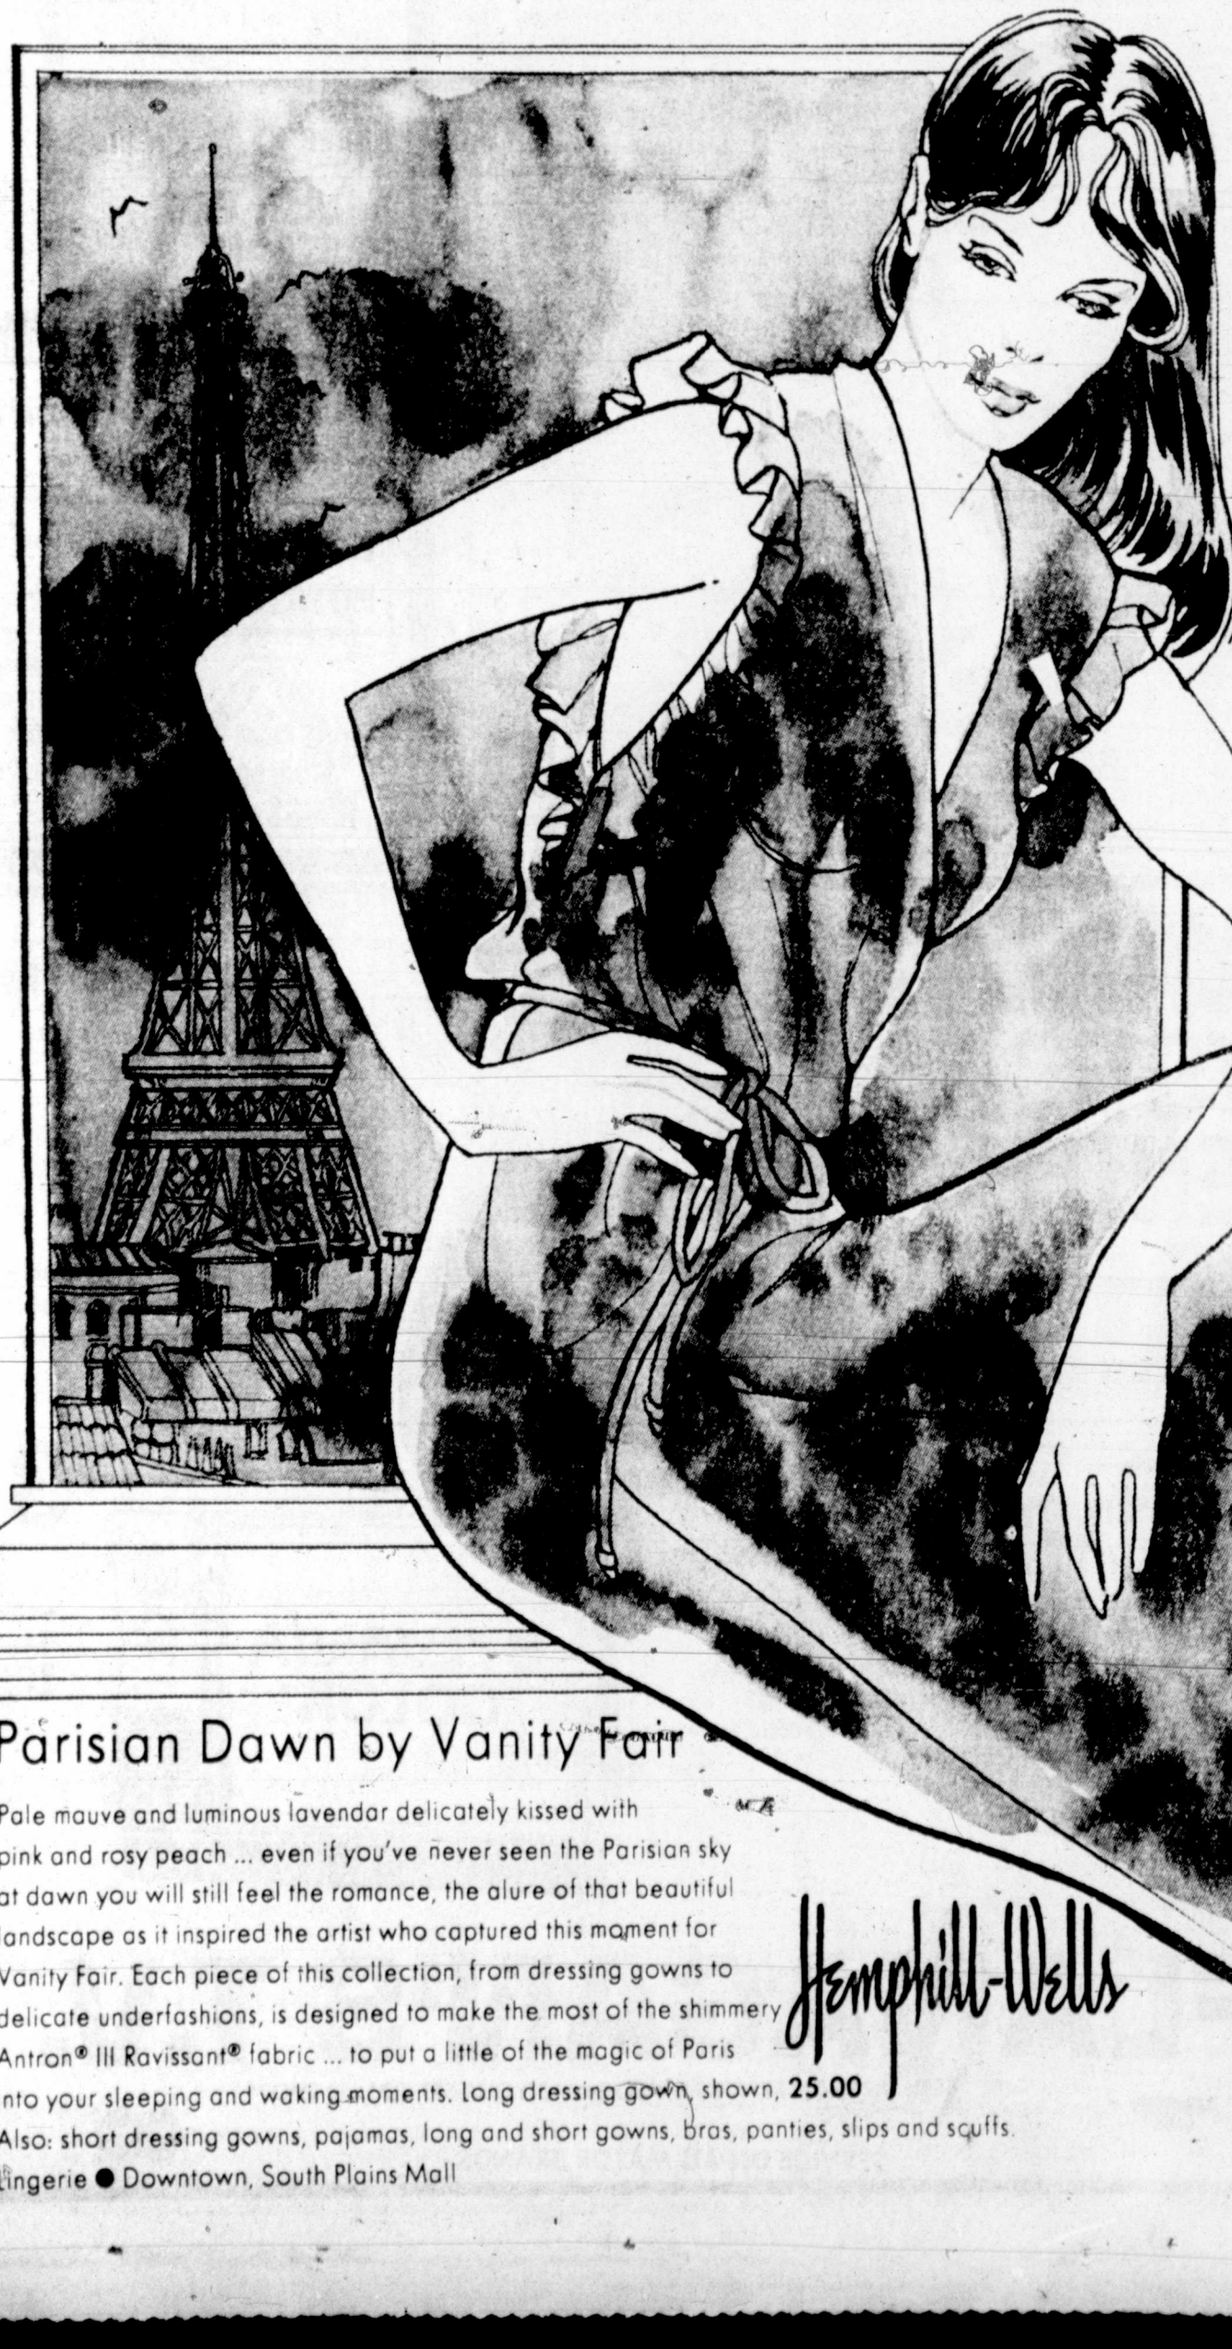

The institute said that Dr. John Marshall of the Department of Psychobiology has found that some motion impairments in aging rats can be corrected with the drugs L-dopa or apomorphine.

Recipients of the foundation's awards were Dr. Roger Wolcott Sperry of California Institute of Technology for his pioneering work on the brain; to Drs. Walter Gilbert of Harvard and Frederic Sanger of Britain's Medical Research Council, who worked out new methods of deciphering the genetic code of living things; and to Sir John Wilson, a British international activist for the blind.

Training 'Seeing Eye Birds' No Joke To Animal Handler

SUNLAND, Calif. (AP) — Hollywood animal trainer Ray D. Berwick says most people react with a skeptical chuckle when they hear he is training big red macaws to become "seeing eye birds" for the blind.

But he says a lot of skepticism fades when the scoffers see the birds perform.

Berwick, 52, and a bird-trainer for 2½ decades, said he became convinced that parrot-like birds could handle guide dog duties while training a cockatoo named Fred, former star of the now-canceled television series "Baretta."

Berwick, who talks to Fred in complete sentences, insists the bird "understands words probably as well as a 3-or 4-year-old kid."

It is too soon to judge if Berwick's birds might someday join guide dogs as mobile eyes for the blind — whether they could do the job or would be welcomed.

But a pair of colorful macaws named Sylvester and Jo-Jo, riding on homemade perches and manipulating bells, buzzers and straps, can lead their sighted trainers around an assortment of obstacles and even identify red or green traffic lights in exchange for bits of food.

Berwick admits the fairly simple, repetitive tasks at his noisy aviary-training center at Sunland, a semi-rural suburb of Los Angeles, are a long way from the real world.

But, he said in an interview, "We've only been at this for a couple of months. The next step is to go out on the sidewalks and teach them that it's not just here that they have to perform."

Berwick trains animals for movies and television. His credits include "The Birdman of Alcatraz" and, of course, Alfred Hitchcock's "The Birds."

Berwick says that big talking birds such as parrots, macaws and cockatoos offer some advantages over dogs as guides for the blind.

The most important, he said, is that the big birds live almost as long as humans, often reaching ages of 50 to 60 years compared to about 15 years for dogs. Berwick also says birds could be twice as fast as dogs, do not eat as much and do not have to be walked everyday.

One drawback, he admits is that the brilliantly colored macaws, about two feet long from beak to tail tip, sell for about $1,500 each in retail pet shops.

He has formed a non-profit corporation called Seeing Eye Avians and says several organizations for the blind have agreed to look at his birds.

Berwick has developed a mount something like the tray vendors hang from their necks at ball games. The bird perches near the front of the assembly and guides his master around a 30-foot obstacle course. By tugging with its beak on various loops and levers, the bird rings a bell to signal an impending obstacle or step and sets off buzzers of different tones for red or green lights. He advises a right or left turn by pushing the appropriate neck strap with his foot.

Judge Dismisses School Breast-Feeding Suit

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — A federal judge dismissed on Thursday a suit brought by a teacher who insisted she had a right to breast-feed her child in school.

U.S. District Judge John A. Reed Jr. called the arguments raised by kindergarten teacher Janice Dike "frivolous" and "without merit."

Earlier this year, the judge threw out a request for a temporary injunction.

Mrs. Dike, 27, breast-fed her infant daughter in a locked classroom at lunchtime for more than three months last spring before the principal at Azalea Park Elementary School found out about it. He ordered her to stop.

Mrs. Dike was not immediately available for comment on the ruling.

She filed a civil suit and sought the temporary injunction claiming that she was being discriminated against and that the school board rulings covering her case were unconstitutional.

Orange County School Board policies forbid teachers from bringing their children to their work locations or leaving school premises during the work day.

Mrs. Dike later took unpaid maternity leave until the end of the school term. She is now a teacher at Ocoee Elementary School in Orange County.

The judge agreed with School Board Attorney John Bowen's arguments that "the issue is not breast-feeding ... the issue is the school board's right to set and maintain policies."

Reed said the school policy was not discriminatory because it applied equally to men and women teachers and was "intended to avoid the diversion of the attention of the school employees from their assignments."

The argument that Mrs. Dike could breast-feed her child on campus without causing disruption "is without merit," the judge said.

Man Says Church Brainwashed Family, Caused Alienation

By TOM TIEDE

CARLISLE, Pa. (NEA) — Robert Bear did something unwise a few weeks ago. He went to a local market where he kidnapped a woman and tried to force her to go home with him.

She didn't like it.

Neither did the police.

Bear was arrested, and is now awaiting prosecution on the counts of assault, false imprisonment and disturbing the peace.

TOM TIEDE

But Bear, a farmer, is not ashamed of the occurrence. Nor is he unhappy with the result. The woman in question was his estranged wife, and he staged the kidnapping to get publicity. He wants the nation to know that she has wronged him, that, in fact, she is part of an astonishing conspiracy to wrong him.

The nation is already aware of Bear's assertions, actually. He's gotten publicity before. He is the former Mennonite who, in 1972, was severely punished by his church for breaking its laws. What he did was criticize the church elders. He was excommnicated and ordered to be shunned by the congregation.

The congregation included all his friends. Worse, it included his wife; to comply with the church order, she separated from Bear, moved out, and took their six children along.

Bear did not care about the excommunication. But the alienation of affection devastated him. He says neither his wife nor his children really wanted to leave, but the church elders forced each of them to observe the shun. That, Bear insists, was beyond the bounds of Christianity and legality.

Bear sued, and, after some haggling over the points of the church and state separation, a trial was held in 1975. It took three days. No ruling was made as to whether the church had a right to destroy Bear's home, but the judge did say that his religious freedoms had not been violated. Case dismissed.

Combining as it did matters of faith vs. family, the trial was painful, and no doubt both church and court hoped Bob Bear would go away and start a new life. But he did not. Today, a long seven years after the medieval shunning began, he is still battling to get his wife and children back.

The recent kidnapping attempt was the fifth of a series. He's also tried to coax his children to return, taking one from a school bus. Each time the police warn him of the consequences of his actions. Each time he takes the risk anyway. "What more can they do to me?" he asks, "I'm already in hell."

The hell Bear mentions is that of circumstances. He says the church and court have ruined his normal existence. For one thing he's spent as much as $20,000 fighting for what he percieves to be his human rights; to pay the debt he's had to sell a fourth of the acreage from his once-prosperous farm.

Also, Bear's purgatory includes the hatred of his children. He says the church has turned all six of them against him: "If I see them on the street and try to talk, they call me names. When my middle daughter was taken away she was 5. Now she's 12. Recently she called me a 'bastard.'"

Bastard, perhaps, is one of the gentler names Bear has been called these past seven years. Once, when he tried to take a daughter from the school bus, he was nabbed and sent to a mental clinic. Doctors there declared him normal, but the stigma is indelible; "Now everybody says that I'm touched."

Bear doesn't know if his wife thinks he's crazy. But she has publicly called him a "swine," and a "dog" as well. She refuses to file for divorce, because her branch of the church, called Reformed Mennonites, does not allow suits; however, she gives no indication of wanting a reconciliation.

Bear believes this is because the church has brainwashed the woman. He says she's been told that if she rejoins him she too will be excommunicated and shunned. "She's plain scared," Bear thinks. "She believes the church as the power to send her to hell, and that's why she won't come back home."

That's also why Bear continues to fight for her return. "I still love her," he says. "I don't like what she's done to our family, but I understand why she's done it. Remember the Jonestown massacre? Remember the power of that cult? The Reformed Mennonites also have a stranglehold on their members."

Bear now publishes a newsletter that attacks the church. It's one more way to get publicity for his struggle. Few read it, though. Bear's saga is too old now to generate sustained interest. "I keep trying," he sighs, "but not many people care anymore. Today I'm just one man against the world."

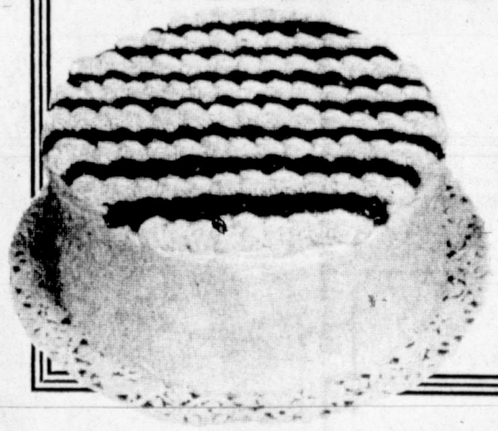

Meantime, the 50-year-old farmer still awaits a court date for the last time he tried to kidnap his wife. It may come in December, and he could get up to 10 years in prison. But so what, he says. "There are worse things than going to jail for the sake of your family." Besides, think of the publicity.

SHUNNED BY FAMILY — Robert Bear criticized his Mennonite church elders in 1972. Because of that he was excommunicated, and ordered to be shunned by the congregation, which included his wife and children. He's fought to get his family back but his efforts so far have only landed him in jail and in a mental clinic. (NEA Photo)

To Your Good Health

By PAUL DONOHUE, M.D.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Recently, I began having severe chest pain. All the tests were negative and I was put on pain pills. I still get the attacks, though. Finally, one doctor told me I have "devil's grip." If I have an attack at night I go to the emergency room and try to tell the doctors there it's devil's grip. But they look at each other and then at me as if I practice voodoo or something, then order stomach x-rays and heart tests.

Can you comment? What is devil's grip? — J.R.

Devil's grip is a descriptive name given to a viral disease of the chest muscles. "Grip" refers to influenza (which this is not). There is sharp pain over the breastbone and lower ribs, made worse by coughing or sneezing.

An attack usually lasts from three to seven days. I suppose it was given the name, "Devil's grip," because it hurts like the devil. It is more properly called pleurodynia or Bornholm's disease, less voodoo-sounding terms.

This pain may recur, but not with the frequency you imply in your letter. May I suggest that when you go to an emergency room you ask the doctors there to speak with your personal physician?

Dear Dr. Donohue: My brother told me that squeezing an acne pimple on the face can somehow affect the brain. Is that true? — F.M.

In the first place you shouldn't be squeezing acne pimples. Your brother is technically correct, though. There is an area of the face, especially around the bridge of the nose, from which infected material can be drained backward toward the veins of the brain. This is quite rare, but serious. See the booklet, "Controlling Acne, Blackheads and Pimples," for a fuller discussion. For a copy, send 35 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Donohue, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

• • •

Dear Dr. Donohue: I hope you can help me make a decision, even though I realize the decision is mine to make. What I want is information.

I have a lipoma that's almost three inches round. It's back of my arm between the shoulder and the armpit. It protrudes outside sleeveless dresses and is unsightly. I am extremely self-conscious about it.

About 10 years ago I had a radical mastectomy on that side. I've had the lipoma about 15 years. I also had lymph glands removed. My surgeon said he could remove the lipoma, and he's quite sure it would heal.

But I understand that the lymph glands take care of the healing process, and without them the healing wouldn't occur. That's what worries me. Please comment. — Mrs. L.B.

If your arm is not chronically swollen, I would accept the surgeon's advice. The place where your lipoma (a benign fatty growth) is located would not be greatly affected by the lack of lymph nodes removed during your breast surgery. To ease your concern, why not seek a second firsthand opinion on this matter. This is what second opinions are all about. The patient is not "hurting the doctor's feelings."

• • •

Dear Dr. Donohue: I am 65. For the past eight months my right leg has been slowly getting smaller. There is no pain, and I am in good health.

I've been advised to have a spinal. Will this cure it? Or is there no cure? — C.M.Z.

I don't think your doctor meant that the "spinal" would be a cure. That is done to make a diagnosis. The cure depends on the cause. If you are losing muscle bulk in one leg the problem may be with the nervous system (spinal cord or nerves). Your doctor is trying to find the reason why this is happpening to your leg. Then the proper treatment can be given. The spinal referred to is the removal of spinal fluid for analysis.

• • •

Dear Dr. Donohue: Can you explain what causes the iris of the eye to turn opaque around the edges? — M.J.

Arcus senilis, the whitish rim around the iris, may indicate high blood cholesterol or high triglycerides. It can also signify nothing at all. It does not effect vision.

How too get rid of leg cramps and foot pains? The answer may be simple — write to Dr. Donohue, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611, for a copy of the booklet, "How to Stop Leg Cramps and Foot Pains." Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 50 cents.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: My closest friend is getting married soon and needs your help in making a very important decision. "Harriet's" mother left her father when she was just a toddler. Her mother has remarried, and Harriet thinks the world of her stepfather — even though she loves her natural father very much and sees him all the time.

Harriet's mother is a very domineering person. She insists on paying for the wedding, selecting the reception hall, etc. She also wants her husband to give the bride away.

My friend is no match for her mother, but she has made one thing clear: if she can't have her own father walk her down the aisle, she will not permit her stepfather to do the honors. The question is this: Would it be proper if Harriet's mother walked her down the aisle? Or should Harriet walk alone? Please don't suggest a favorite uncle, because she has so many she doesn't want to risk hurting anyone's feelings. — Friend Of The Puzzled Bride

Dear Friend: It would be inappropriate for the bride to walk down the aisle alone, or with her mother. I suggest that she put the names of her uncles in a hat and ask you to draw the name of the one who is to walk her down the aisle. Then no one will be offended.

• • •

Dear Ann: We raised our only grandchild in a loving home. We saved the money her father sent us for her support. When the time came, she was able to go to college and have a car.

On her 18th birthday, we went to a lawyer and had everything put in her name. She met and fell in love with a boy who didn't have anything. We fed, clothed and loved him as if he were our own. Now they are married, and he has come to our home demanding that we give his wife the balance of the money.

We refused, so they are not speaking to us. I still feel that to give them this money would be the same as throwing it away. But is withholding it worth the price? — Gram And Gramps

Dear Gram and Gramps: There are some conflicting statements in your letter. For example: If you put everything in your granddaughter's name on her 18th birthday, why do you still have the legal right to withhold the money from her?

Of course, it would be sad if the young woman squandered her savings, but it's hers to do with as she pleases. Better talk this over with the attorney who handled the transaction when she was 18. If possible, the money should be transferred to the granddaughter and not her husband — just in case.

• • •

Dear Ann Landers: Your letters from "Mama's Boys" and "Daddy's Girls" made me decide to write you one about a "Mama's Girl." I need help.

When I was going with Cathy she always said her mother would come first, and now she's proving it. We haven't had an evening alone for six weeks. Either her mother is here for supper, or we are at her place. Last Sunday Cathy got the flu and went to her mother's house to be nursed back to health. I am by myself. Where do I stand? — Lancaster, Pa.

Dear Lan: Second to your mother-in-law, which is where Cathy said you stood before she married you. You can't say she didn't warn you, Bub.

Hints From Heloise

DEAR READERS:

We have had many, many requests for the formula that removes "ring-around-the-collar" and other stains — it's a surefire remedy! — so here we go again.

Fill a plastic shampoo or dish detergent bottle that has a squirt top with a solution of one third household ammonia, one third liquid dish detergent and one third water.

Shake well. Apply to soiled collars, cuffs or other areas; put the garment in the washer with the rest of the laundry.

This solution is perfectly safe but one word of warning: never, never, never mix bleach and ammonia or any product containing ammonia.

The formula for removing "ring around the collar" works wonders and, best of all, it is so inexpensive! — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

My job requires a great deal of traveling and this means that I am often on the highways alone.

A short time ago I was on one of my business trips (on an interstate) when my car's fan belt broke.

Since I am not mechanically inclined, I didn't have the faintest idea what to do except "hitch" a ride to the next town and have someone come out and fix it.

Suddenly a highway patrolman appeared. Discovering my problem, he asked if I had an extra nylon stocking.

He used the twisted stocking as a fan belt. In no time, I was on my way into the next town where I purchased a new belt.

Thank goodness, there are still people who will stop and render aid to a stranded motorist. — Marge Johnson

DEAR HELOISE:

All aerosol cans carry a warning to "keep out of reach of children." But they don't say how to dispose of them.

My grandson and his friend found a can of spray to kill flies. They were spraying each other, luckily no harm was done.

It's so easy to take a second and wrap an aerosol can in paper or put it in a bag so it won't attract children. That could save someone's eyesight.

Love your column. — Mrs. A. Fitzpatrick

DEAR HELOISE:

While eating an eight-ounce cup of yogurt, I decided there should be something else to use these cups for.

How about washing them out and stacking them along side of the sink so the kids can use them when they want a drink of water. — Jacqueline Clark

DEAR HELOISE:

Save extra sequins — older childen will enjoy decorating pictures or drawings with them. The sequins can be attached with white glue. — Delores H.

DEAR HELOISE:

Of course each got what she wanted for her "birthday" because each knew which of my daughter's toys she wanted. — T. Ramsey

"Congratulations!" said North in his most sarcastic manner. "You just tied the world record for chucking a lay-down game."

"What could I have done?" asked South.

We can't give North's answer, but will explain in printable language.

South won the diamond in his own hand and led the queen of spades with close to the speed of light. West took his king and led a second diamond. South won and played a second trump, but game had evaporated. West won, put his partner in with a heart and ruffed a diamond for the setting trick.

If South had stopped to think at trick one, he would have seen that his only danger was to find West with all three trumps. There was really no way that West could have the singleton four.

South should have led a heart at trick two to foil West's plan in case his diamond lead had been a doubleton. It would have worked. West could not ruff the second diamond and East's entry would have been eliminated.

Suppose West held a singleton diamond and ace-four of trumps. He would get a ruff with the four, but then the ace and king would fall together.

Former GM Executive's Book Surprises Company

NEW YORK (AP) — The way John Z. DeLorean sees it, General Motors Corp. sold cars it knew were unsafe, regularly engaged in monopolistic practices, and has an inept management populated by fawning sycophants.

None of those are original charges, but DeLorean's book has surprised the business world simply because he used to be a top executive of GM, and at one time was thought to be the leading candidate for president of the giant automaker.

DeLorean quit GM in 1973, stunning the auto world, and wrote the book over the next two years in collaboration with J. Patrick Wright, a Detroit reporter.

But DeLorean decided to go back into the industry, forming his own company to build a small sports car, and apparently feared GM retaliation if the book was published. He withdrew it, and most auto executives thought it would never surface.

That didn't sit well with Wright, and this month reporters found the book sitting on their desks, carrying Wright's byline but written in the first person as DeLorean's story. Wright had published it himself.

DeLorean kept his counsel for a week before confirming it was his book. He would have liked it to be "tamer," he said, but the ideas and beliefs were his. He said he had been surprised by the publication, but would not sue Wright.

The book "On A Clear Day You Can See General Motors," has quickly become a best seller among auto executives, although copies are not easy to find in bookstores. GM has maintained an icy silence about the book.

It provides a unique view of America's largest industrial corporation, written by a man who compiled a brilliant record, by his own account as well as others, while running the Pontiac and Chevrolet divisions.

He is sharply critical of GM's treatment of its suppliers and dealers, telling tales of dealers forced to buy overpriced parts and of suppliers whose ideas are stolen without compensation.

"Within our corporate walls, we engaged in business practices which were not only monopolistic, but sometimes were downright violations of the free-enterprise system. We stifled competition."

Such actions might have been necessary for GM, because the company pictured by DeLorean was not one very well managed. He portrays a firm whose top management is constantly appointing task forces and committees, which then hold meetings that executives sleep through.

Meanwhile key decisions, such as on the tooling for new cars, are delayed until hundreds of millions of dollars must be spent on unnecessary overtime.

Part of the problem, he claims, is that the executives who rise to the top are not the best managers, but the men most skillful in flattering their bosses.

"A system which puts the emphasis on form, style and unwavering support for the decisions of the boss almost always loses its perspective about an executive's business competence," he wrote.

The bosses expect such attention, he said. He tells of one Chevrolet sales executive who liked to have his hotel room equipped with a refrigerator stocked with food for a midnight snack. The door of one hotel room wasn't large enough, so subordinates took out the window and lifted the refrigerator in by crane. The window was replaced for the night, then removed the next day so the crane would take the refrigerator out again.

With that kind of management, why has General Motors been so successful? It is, he says, largely due to "its tremendous economic power and total dominance of the market."

DeLorean provides little new on the Chevrolet Corvair, an car he calls "unsafe as it was originally designed" that would go out of control when being turned under some conditions. Recalls were eventually forced and the publicity killed the car even though the problem was fixed. Ralph Nader grew famous as a result of his expose of the car and GM's bungling effort to turn up some dirt on him.

DeLorean says GM engineers warned the car was unsafe but that GM went ahead anyway. He was then running Pontiac and, he says, managed to keep that division from issuing a version of the Corvair.

But why didn't he blow the whistle then? "I was simply a guy who wasn't completely confident in his own opinions," he told a news conference last week.

DeLorean quit GM in 1973, at the age of 48, after he was promoted to oversee all the company's North American car and truck operations. It was a staff job and he found the paperwork and meetings appalling.

DeLorean's future is with his own company, which is building a plant in Northern Ireland and plans to begin producing two-seat sports cars, priced at $16,000 or more, sometime next year.

It was fear of retalation, at least in part, that kept DeLorean from publishing the book, but he now seems glad the book is out. His view are getng attention, and he has managed to leave the impression he didn't mean to be as harsh as the book is on many GM Executives.

Mystical Technician Heads Service

DALLAS (AP) — If your mysticism is a little out of whack, there's a guy in Dallas who says he's the only fully trained, mystical technician in the western world.

He's Gregge Tiffen, and don't give him any of the psychic stuff.

"The world of psychics is a lot of baloney," says Tiffen, who is head of the Metaphysical Intelligence Services international headquarters in Dallas.

"I don't consider my work phenomenal, just as I don't consider the Olympic medal-winning performance by a runner phenomenal or unusual," Tiffen said recently. "I'm trained as a competent technician, and I really get upset with someone saying that what I do is a special gift."

The sum of that counseling, Tiffen says, is to link human consciousness with several non-physical counsciousnesses, thereby gaining back personal control being eroded by government and technology.

Tiffen also can do things like lifting a table through mental concentration, but he scorns such performances.

He made his way to Tibet, but won't say how because he's saving it for a book. "I knew I would have to resign my commission in the Army and go to Tibet, the only repository of mystical knowledge," he said.

"I realized that I was part of some enormous universe, that there was certainly something metaphysical to our existence — something out of the ordinary."

He returned from his studies with what he called a messianic complex. "I knew so much, I wanted to change the world. For a while, I put on demonstrations, showing off my so-called psychic powers. But I got out of that because people always figured out a way not to believe what I was doing.

"So I knew personal counseling was what I wanted."

So far, Tiffen says he has given readings to 25,000 clients.

"This is the one chance to help turn people into decent, intelligent human beings running decent companies," he said.

NEW RELEASE

NATURAL ENEMIES (R) — Hal Holbrook. (Drama) Intended to be a profound portrait of the last day of a man who plans to kill his wife (because she is frigid), his three kids (because they watch too much TV), and himself (because he finds his job unfulfilling). We learn nothing about the kind of a man who would commit such an act — as Holbrook pontificates about the meaninglessness of life — except that he doesn't need a gun. He could bore them all to death. GRADE: F

GENERAL RELEASE

AND JUSTICE FOR ALL (R) — Al Pacino, Jack Warden, John Forsythe. (Drama with comedy) A hard, funny, frightening look at our judicial system, with perverted judges and innocent victims and laughs and tears — the only real flaw is that the film asks you to shift mental gears between comedy and tragedy too often and too quickly. But every one of the countless bit parts is acted superbly, along with the leads, of course. GRADE: A-minus

APOCALYPSE NOW (R) — Martin Sheen, Marlon Brando, Robert Duvall. (Drama) This is Francis Coppola's long-awaited and very expensive epic — and worth the wait and the cost. It is a study of the madness of war, and Coppola has created a procession of insane images of Vietnam and that terrible war to make his point. It is long and flawed, but must be rated an American classic. GRADE: A-plus

AVALANCHE EXPRESS (PG) — Lee Marvin, Robert Shaw, Linda Evans. (Spy thriller) A confusing mess, about (perhaps) a defecting Russian leader who is placed on a train (why?) and the attempts of the bad guys to stop the train. Some exciting moments, but mostly a lot of shooting and dreadful acting and lines that are silly. GRADE: C-minus

BREAKING AWAY (PG) — Dennis Christopher, Dennis Quaid, Daniel Stern, Jackie Earle Haley. (Romantic comedy) This American film is the kind of thing the French do so well; warm, funny, a little romantic, tied up must right. It's set in Bloomington, Ind., a college town, the summer the local boys finally realize they don't mind being "townies." Briefly, it's the "Rocky" of bicycle racing — but so much better. A fine job by these four young actors. GRADE: A

LUNA (R) Jill Clayburgh, Matthew Barry. (Drama) This is the story of a sensuous widow, an opera star, who becomes physically involved with her adolescent son. The acting is excellent — Clayburgh shatters her "nice girl" mold — but the film moves fitfully and is too long. Ads discreetly warn that parts of the film may be too intense for some viewers. It's true, incest is uncomfortable viewing. GRADE: B-minus

METEOR (PG) — Sean Connery, Natlie Wood, Brian Keith. (Adventure) This is the latest disaster movie, and the problem now is a huge chunk of meteor, zooming towards us and there's no way to stop it. But wait! Maybe the Russian and American scientists, working together, can blast it out of the sky. Good special effects and some exciting moments — as well as some pretty dumb ones. GRADE: B

ROSE, THE (R) — Bette Midler, Alan Bates, Frederic Forrest. (Drama with music) This story of the tragic decline of a Janis Joplin-like singer is ugly and unpleasant, but tremendously effective and moving. Midler's performance is truly outstanding, and you'll find yourself aching with her, as booze, drugs and men destroy her. Caution: Gutter language. GRADE: A

RUNNER STUMBLES, THE (PG) — Dick Van Dyke, Kathleen Quinlan, Maureen Stapleton. (Drama) Producer-director Stanley Kramer always aims high, and does so again with this film version of a play about a priest, a nun, a romance (after a fashion) and a murder. The trouble is it sounds more exciting than it is, and the film is very slow going. The runner may stumble, but the film falls down. GRADE: B-minus

10 (R) — Julie Andrews, Dudley Moore, Bo Derek. (Romantic comedy) You've heard about guys who rate girls on a scale of 1 to 10? Well, this is about a girl who is a 10, and how that assessment mightily affects a songwriter, as well as the girl and her new bridegroom. Nothing weighty here, just good clean fun — and some of it isn't so clean. GRADE: B-plus

YANKS (R) — Richard Gere, Vanessa Redgrave, William Devane, Lisa Eichorn. (Drama) Story of American GIs stationed in a small English village in 1942 and of the local women they become involved with. Slow, richly textured and splendid to look at, but the romances ultimately sink into a state of fuzzy dispassion. So does the movie. Caution: Some strong subject matter, language. GRADE: B

(Film grading: A — superb; B — good; C — average; D — poor; F — awful)

LUCKY SIAMESE — Julie Hyett, London airport Heathrow quarantine worker, holds LUCKY, a 2-year-old Siamese cat, which was rescued from the cargo hold of a jumbo jet after an incredible 32-day trip of terror around the world. Lucky's ordeal began on Oct 9th in Guam on a plane bound for Miami. On arrival she was missing from her crate and inspite of a lengthy search could not be found. She finally was located by cargo workers when the plane arrived from San Francisco -trapped under the cargo floor. She was starving and had a damaged leg but she was expected to be fit enough to be flown to her original destination. (AP Laserphoto)

Surviving Quints Attend Funeral

CORBEIL, Ontario (AP) — The three surviving Dionne quintuplets made a rare return home Friday to attend the funeral of their father, Oliva Dionne, from whom they had been estranged many years.

Elzire Dionne, the 71-year-old mother of the five celebrated girls, has been ill for many years, was not among the 150 mourners who attended the funeral service at a local Roman Catholic Church.

The three famous sisters, Cecile, Annette and Yvonne, of St. Bruno, asuburb of Montreal, went almost unnoticed as they entered the modest church at the crest of one of many hills on the rolling, snow-covered countryside.

The two other quints — Emilie and Marie — are dead. Emilie suffocated during an epileptic seizure when she was 19 and Marie died in 1970 from a blood clot in the brain.

A landslide of publicity that followed the quints birth May 28,1934, and the circus-like life style they led, caused family friction. In 1952 the quints left home for good, maintaining only loose ties with their parents.

Babysitter Rescues Young Girl From Fire

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A teen-age babysitter rescued a 2-year-old girl from a flaming house, raced back in to save her puppy, then wound up in a hospital suffering from smoke inhalation, authorities say.

Melinda Faulk, 14, was still hospitalized Thursday, but said she was feeling better after the Monday fire in her home at Clair Mel City, east of Tampa.

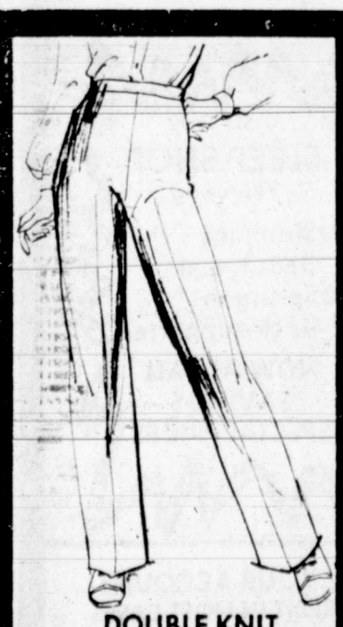

She was babysiting Heather Marie Shores when the fire started in a television set.

"I heard this pop and the TV started smoking," said the 9th grader. "I didn't know what was going on so I called my sister and her husband said to uplug the set."

But the house caught fire anyway.

Melinda fought her way through the flames and the thickening smoke and put Heather outside, then ran inside to a back room and rescued her 11-week-old puppy, Chico.

Niagara Falls No Longer Honeymooners Delight

By JOY ASCHENBACH
National Geographic News Service

NIAGARA FALLS — By now, even the comment, "Niagara Falls is a cliche," has become a cliche.

The daredevils who used to go over the falls in barrels or walk above them on tightropes are long gone. Laws on both sides of the border took care of that. Their barrels are safely secured in a museum.

All the graffiti have been removed from the rocky cliffs. And couples now honeymoon in places like the Caribbean instead. "Years ago they used to come in here on the passenger trains and stay at the grand hotels for a week or two," a spokesman for the New York state park at the falls said. "Now the falls are just a stopover for people in campers."

Nevertheless about 12 million tourists a year visit the Canadian side — considered the best view — and about 4 million still take a look from the American side.

For someone seeing the falls for the first time and prepared for the worst in cliches, it was all there — on a recent sunny Sunday afternoon, the kind of day you see on the picture post cards they sell in the sourvenir shops.

There were Niagara Falls heart-shaped pillows of black velvet, red satin, and gold tassel fringe; Niagara Falls tea cups and saucers, playing cards, coasters, dish towels, trays, place mats, salt and pepper shakers, scarves, and T-shirts. And, of course, red and white heart buttons saying, "Niagara Falls, Yours Forever."

Ringing the area around Canada's flower-filled Queen Victoria Park on the falls, there was Ripley's Believe It or Not Museum, Tussaud's Wax Museum, plus the Boris Karloff, Castle Dracula, and House of Frankenstein wax museums, the Houdini Magical Hall of Fame, and the Guinness Museum of World Records.

Parked outside a hotel overlooking the falls was a car decorated with two interlocking hearts of baby blue and pink tissue-paper carnations. Not far away in another car, with multicolored signs on front and bakc, there was a real honeymoon couple, wearing shiny gold wedding bands.

He was 20 and she was 21, and they had driven here from Streetsboro, Ohio. Why Niagra Falls? Because he lost a bet, so they didn't go to Florida, he said. She had seen the ice-frozen falls in the winter once and always wanted to come back when it was warm. "What better time than a honeymoon," she said.

With the falls as a backdrop, there were plenty of couples on both sides of the Niagara River holding hands, walking arm in arm, and hugging and kissing.

And just as the guide books said, there was even a spectacular rainbow arching across the river from Canada's Horseshoe Falls to the American Falls. "It is probably one of the few places on earth where you can stand on top and look down on a rainbow," someone remarked.

Filtering out the worst, there was still the best: the not-to-be missed awesome power, force, and majesty of the thundering falls. "Just listen to that," someone on the Canadian side said as he watched all that water roar down Horseshoe Falls 176 feet to the river below.

Over on the American side someone said that words sounded insignificant in the face of all that power. "Lot of water there," he remarked.

Sigma Delta Chi Names President

NEW YORK (AP) — Howard Graves of The Associated Press was elected president-elect of the Society of Professional Journalists, Sigma Delta Chi at the society's annual meeting.

Graves, chief of bureau at Portland, Ore., will become national president in November 1980. He served this year as national secretary of the organization and the previous year as national treasurer.

The election was held Friday.

The society is the nation's largest journalism organization with an estimated 3,500 student and professional members.

Graves was named chief of bureau for Oregon on March 1, 1977, after serving in a similar capacity in Albuquerque, N.M., for 14 years. He also held assignments in Little Rock, Ark.; Denver and Helena, Mont.

Southern forests and wood-lots produce 67 percent of pulpwood cut in the United States, 30 percent of the lumber and 30 percent of the plywood.

WHAT'S UP?

What's up in heroes?

Alex Weiner and Deanne Stillman posed that question to the 1,005 25- to 37-year-olds they polled for their new book, "Woodstock Census."

When those surveyed were asked which figures of the 1960s they most admired and were most influenced by, their leading responses were:

1. The Beatles
2. Bob Dylan
3. John Kennedy
4. Martin Luther King
5. John Lennon
6. Ralph Nader
7. Robert Kennedy
8. Joan Baez
9. Eugene McCarthy
10. Janis Joplin

1. Bob Woodward, Carl Bernstein
2. Lily Tomlin
3. Carlos Castaneda
4. Mel Brooks
5. Alexander Solzhenitsyn
6. Jerry Brown
7. Bella Abzug
8. Chevy Chase
9. Jimmy Carter
10. Barbara Jordan

Bob Dylan: '60s Hero

LA's most interesting

Playwright Neil Simon recently caused a furor with his off-hand comment that while there are 2 million interesting people in New York, there are only 78 in Los Angeles.

Everybody was talking about it, and in its November issue Los Angeles magazine did something about it. Specifically, they undertook the formidable task of isolating the 78 most interesting people who actually do call Los Angeles home.

Among the people author Maurice Zolotow deemed worthy of inclusion on his less-than-serious list are: Muhammed Ali; a former Miss Liverpool named Eileen Anderson who allegedly runs for every office in the city; Joan Didion; Norman Lear; and Richard Pryor. Among the missing: Mayor Tom Bradley, Lt. Governor Mike Curb and Tom Hayden.

Day in life of a child model

Riding subways to Manhattan, pounding the pavement, smiling through a dozen "cattle calls," standing for hours under hot lights while people poke makeup brushes and light meters in your face — is this any way for a 14-year-old girl from Long Island to spend her after-school hours?

Lisanne Falk thinks so.

For years, Lisanne has played the All-America girl in ads, commercials and, last February, on the cover of Seventeen magazine.

Lisanne Falk

Lisanne talks about how she broke into professional modeling (with a 99-cent supermarket photo mailed to the Ford Agency) and how she feels about it now ("It's like playing make-believe when you were younger.") in the recently published "Lisanne: A Young Model" by Diana Jewell with photographs by former model Betsy Cameron (Clarkson N. Potter, Inc., $10.95).

The text is Lisanne's own ramblings as she goes through a typical week. "After class you can find me pigging out at the local pizza parlor — and going for a cone for dessert. Who says all models diet?"

Lisanne also ponders the future. A successful child model has no guarantee that she'll make the transition into a successful adult model. In fact, few do.

"I'm sure there will be other good things that will happen if I keep on modeling, but right now that's a big if," says Lisanne. "You can't go around worrying about how tall you are, or how much you weigh, or how pretty you are all the time. I don't but I do wonder about what I'd like to do next."

What's up in plants?

Instead offer a peach blossom, which means, "I am your captive."

Almond: Stupidity. Indiscretion. Thoughtlessness.
Apple: Temptation.
Basil: Hatred.
Buttercup: Cheerfulness. Childishness. Ingratitude.
Corn: Riches.
Cucumber: Criticism.
Daisy: Innocence.
Fern: Sincerity.
Iris: My compliments. I have a message for you.
Lettuce: Cold hearted. Coldness.
Lily of the valley: Return of happiness.
Marigold: Grief. Pain. Chagrin.
Mushroom: Suspicion.
Oleander: Beware.
Orange blossom: Chastity.
Palm: Victory.
Pineapple: Perfection. You are perfect.
Pomegranate: Foolishness. Foppishness.
Raspberry: Remorse.
Rhododendron: Danger.
Sunflower: Haughtiness.
Thistle: Austerity.
Tulip: Fame.
Turnip: Charity.

BIRTHDAY ALMANAC

Compiled by the editors of The World Almanac

Nov. 18 — Clarence Day (1874-1935), the writer whose satirical portrait of his family experiences, "Life with Father," was dramatized in 1939 by Howard Lindsay and Russell Crouse. It became one of the longest-running plays in Broadway history with more than 3,200 performances.

Nov. 19 — Dick Cavett (1936-), the entertainer who began his career as a television comedy writer and nightclub performer. Since the 1960s, he has hosted several television series, most in the talk-show format.

Nov. 20 — Robert F. Kennedy (1925-1968), the U.S. attorney general (1961-1964), U.S. senator from New York (1964-1968) and principal adviser to his brother, President John F. Kennedy. He was assassinated while campaigning for the presidential nomination.

Nov. 21 — Stan Musial (1920-), the baseball hall-of-famer who compiled a career batting average of .331 in his 22 seasons with the St. Louis Cardinals. He won seven National League batting titles and was chosen the league's most valuable player three times.

Nov. 22 — Billie Jean King (1943-), the tennis star and women's activist. She has won the Wimbledon singles championship six times and the U.S. national singles title four times.

Nov. 23 — Boris Karloff (1887-1969), the British character actor who achieved fame with his portrayal of the monster in the 1931 horror classic "Frankenstein." His success in the film led to his being typecast as a villain for most of his career.

Nov. 24 — Scott Joplin (1868-1917), the ragtime pianist and composer whose best-known works are "Maple Leaf Rag" and the folk opera "Treemonisha."

Ohio Town Still Remembers 'Nation's Weakest President'

By ED HEINKE

MARION, Ohio (NEA) — It's doubtful that anyone ever proposed chiseling Warren Harding's visage into Mount Rushmore alongside those of George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, Abraham Lincoln and Theodore Roosevelt.

The 29th president, who owed his rise more to affibility than to intellect, is usually ranked by historians among the weakest of the nation's chief executives.

Yet, Harding's memory is still accorded all due respect in this Ohio town On the south edge of town is an $800,000 memorial of white Georgia marble in which are entombed the bodies of the former president and his wife, Florence. Harding died in 1923 after little more than two years in office; Mrs. Harding died three years later.

And at 380 Mount Vernon Ave. stands the home where the Hardings lived from its construction in 1891 until they moved to the White House in 1921. It was from its old-fashioned circular porch that Harding conducted the famous "front-porch campaign" that led him to the presidency.

True, the state legislature recently had to vote $50,000 for repairs to keep the historic porch from rotting away.

But the house itself is said to be structurally sound. It has been restored to resemble not a museum but a lived-in home of the turn of the century.

"When you visit the home, you get the feeling that the family has just stepped out for a little while," says Dr. Thomas H. Smith, director of the Ohio Historical Society, which has taken over operation of the home.

"Should Warren or Mrs. Harding enter the house today, they would find it as they last saw it," adds Dr. Warren Sawyer, a retired physician who headed the campaign to restore the home in 1964 and 1965. His grandfather, Dr. Charles E. Sawyer, was Harding's doctor.

The younger Sawyer and his volunteers were assisted in their restoration efforts of 15 years ago by a complete plan of the home and a map showing the locations of every article in it at the time the Hardings lived there. The plan was provided by Abigail Lewis, the president's sister.

The rooms were filled with period furniture. The original gaslights, rewired for electricity, were put back into place. Decorations, including the wallpaper, were duplicated in authentic detail.

"We found all the dishes all right," he continues, "but the silver had disappeared through the years. There were 30 complete silver place settings worth thousands of dollars, but we were never able to find it."

Yet many of the Hardings' personal possessions remain, hanging in closets or lying in dresser drawers. The couple's twin beds stand side by side, the original mattresses covered with the sheets they once used.

The linen coats and matching suits that Harding favored in summer still hang in the closet along with dresses of the light "Harding blue" made fashionable by Mrs. Harding.

IN AMERICA

Visitors may also see Mrs. Harding's stunning black-and-white satin gown, heavy with bead work and matching black-and-white velvet coat. Flower designs adorn her shoes.

There are intimate items such as her accordion-pleated slips carefully folded in dresser drawers.

A razor strap hangs on the doorknob. Inside the medicine cabinet are Harding's own bottles of Sloan's Liniment, Cathartic Pellets No. 1, Bellans (for indigestion), witch hazel, Elner's Spirits of Camphor.

Then there's the bar of Pearson Transparent Soap, the Hy-glo Manicure Set, the mosaic marble washbowl with a faucet to turn on cistern water for washing hair, the toilet with a wooden tank. And a deep 6-foot bathtub fit for a man of Harding's size.

As pristine as the bathroom is the kitchen with its A.B. New Idea eight-burner gas stove, 100-pound icebox, flat iron, waffle iron, fly swatters, original Regulator clock and long lighter for the gaslights.

Perhaps the Hardings had a fondness for ice cream. The kitchen also contains an old-time ice-cream freezer to be packed with alternating layers of ice and rock salt, covered with a gunnysack and cranked by hand.

"Ah, memories," says Margaret Augenstein, who with her husband lived in the home from 1948 to 1974 as caretaker. "You still have the feeling they are gone for a visit and will return in a little while."

Do the Hardings ever return as spirits late and night to visit their former home?

"Ghosts?" Mrs. Augenstein laughs. "Never."

About 38 percent of the families in the United States own dogs.

Scientist Collects Rare Marine Bones

By DONALD J. FREDERICK
National Geographic News Service

WASHINGTON — A few years ago when an American scientist combed the lonely beaches of Argentina's Tierra del Fuego archipelago for plant specimens, she stumbled upon some bones.

They turned out to belong to some of the whales and dolphins that swim the remote waters off the tip of South America, many of them rare species. The scientist, Rae Natalie Prosser Goodall of Lexington, Ohio, thought she might be on to something.

"Not much is known about the dolphins and some of the smaller whales that swim in the waters off southern South America," she said at the headquarters of the National Geographic Society, which is supporting her research. "So when I showed a few bones I had picked up to some scientists who had stopped off on their way to antarctic research stations, they became quite excited and urged me to collect more."

Mrs. Goodall, who already had gained a reputation among botanists by collecting and classifying more than 500 plant species and illustrating many of them for a book on Tierra del Fuego flora, then turned much of her efforts to the search for bones. The result is a collection of more than 750 specimens of whales, dolphins, and porpoises that fill in many of the gaps about marine life at the bottom fo the world.

One of the most unusual finds was the skeleton of a Hector's beaked whale. A live specimen has never been sighted, and the skeleton was the first of the species found in the area.

Mrs. Goodall also has found 150 specimens of the spectacled porpoise, an animal with distinct markings around its eyes. Only nine other specimens are known to exist.

Many of the bones come from whales that may have been stranded on the beach by the surge of the sea, perhaps while chasing smaller prey. Tides in the area can reach a towering 30 feet.

With dolphins it's usually another story. Fishermen sometimes inadvertently snare the animals in their nets, where some die, are discarded, and washed ashore. Lately, people aware of Mrs. Goodall's work have turned dead dolphins over to her.

Most of Mrs. Goodall's collecting now is done on the mud flats bordering a remote, wind-swept bay seven bone-wearying hours from her home in Ushuaia, Argentina. Camping by the bay can be a challenge in itself. One night a surging tide threatened to wash her tent away. On another, Mrs. Goodall and her Australian assistant, Ian Stuart Cameron, returned to find that a storm had glazed the camp with ice. They had to chop their way into their tents.

Despite the hardships, Mrs. Goodall has assembled the bones with consummate care, and the collection has impressed marine mammalogists around the world, as well as the Argentine government. The Argentine navy has offered use of a helicopter for some of her future bone-seeking expeditions.

Carter Cancels Political Trip

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter has cancelled a political trip to St. Petersburg, Fla., and a week's vacation in Georgia to keep track of developments in Iran, the White House announced Friday.

A brief announcement said the president had decided to cancel his travel plans "in order to closely monitor the situation in Iran."

Carter's wife, Rosalynn, will make the trip to Florida on Saturday to appear at the state's Democratic convention, the announcement said.

Population, Lifestyle Changes Will Reflect In 1980 Census

By ROBERT C. RADCLIFFE
National Geographic News Service

WASHINGTON — Look at yourself, America, and see 10 years of dramatic change in population and lifestyle.

The Census Bureau, about to hold a mirror before the nation, already has a good idea of what the 1980 census will reflect, and here is the image that is emerging.

There'll be 222 million of us — citizens and foreigners — living in the United States next year, say the Census Bureau demographers. That's more than ever, of course, but the census will actually reveal a slowdown in the population's growth.

The number of people living in the United States is expected to show a growth of 9 percent since the last census. That would be the smallest increase of any 10-year census period since the first nose count in 1790, except for that found in the 1940 census following the Great Depression.

Other pronounced changes will be in our family life, our income, what we pay in rent or in buying a house, and how we are moving around the country. Three billion items of information collected in the census and then sifted and sorted are expected to show that:

In the 48 million American households with both husband and wife, both work in about half the families.

There are now about twice as many unmarried men and women living together as 10 years ago.

Less than a third of the nation's households, the lowest percentage ever, are made up of the traditional family of mother, father and one or more children.

Eight million families are now headed by women without husbands, a 50 percent increase since 1970.

Inflation of the '70s has largely wiped out family income gains of the '60s. Only a 4 percent income gain in the last 10 years will be shown by the census figures, it's expected, compared with a 34 percent increase between 1960-70.

Economists say this is not only because of economic sluggishness, but because — as the census will show — a higher percentage of the heads of families are younger and yet to reach higher income brackets and because more families are headed by single parents, who tend to have lower average incomes.

There is little change in the number of poor people since 1970. However, a smaller proportion now live in the South and more live in families headed by women.

Some trends noticed during the last year or two also are expected to show up strongly in the 1980 census:

In population shifts, more blacks are now moving to the South than away from it, reversing a trend of more than 100 years.

The most spectacular population gains since 1979 will continue to reflect findings in a recent survey: Alaska, up 33 per cent; Nevada, 35 percent; Arizona, 32 percent; Wyoming, 27 percent; and Florida, 26 percent. Biggest population losses are expected to be shown in New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, and the District of Columbia.

When the 1980 census results are used to reapportion Congress, a majority of members of the House of Representatives will be Southerners and Westerners for the first time in the nation's history.

Population trends expected to emerge include a greater increase for blacks than whites. Since 1970 the black population has grown about 13 percent, compared with about 6 percent for whites.

A higher divorce rate for younger couples also is expected, especially for those between the ages of 30 and 44. And there will be a decline in the number of elementary schoolchildren, leaving communities with empty classrooms.

Housting trends, a major part of the census questionaire, also are expected to be a barometer of change. Altogether, the number of housing units in the country — apartments, houses, condominiums, trailers, even tents — will have increased 20 percent since 1970, twice the population growth.

Almost seven out of 10 houses will be single-family units, and about three-fourths of them will be in the suburbs. And, the census will show, the number of people buying houses is increasing faster than the number of those who choose to pay rent.

Egyptians To Eat More American Chickens

WASHINGTON (AP) — Egyptians will be eating a lot more American chicken — about 11 million pounds more.

Egypt buys its American chickens under a $250 million loan from the U.S. Agency for International Development.

DISPLAYING MAMMOTH FIND — With classmates lending a little moral support at his first press conference, sixth grader Derek Saunders displays a fossilized section of a mammoth rib recently in his classroom in Irving. Derek's career as a paleontologist started about 10 years earlier than he expected when he unearthed the fossilized rib he discovered while riding his bicycle in a dried up creek. Other fossils he has collected are on the table. (AP Laserphoto)

Mammoth Bone Finder Begins Career Early

IRVING (AP) — Derek Saunders' career as a paleontologist got off the ground about ten years earlier than he had expected.

Scientists at East Texas State University determined that a bone the 11-year-old found in a creek bed is 12,000 years old.

Derek, a sixth-grader at Irving's Lamar Junior High School, found the bone last year while walking his bicycle through a local park. He showed it to his fifth-grade teacher and brought it to class again this year.

His current science teacher, Ann Miesch, took the bone to a meeting with professors from ETSU's Earth Sciences Department. A month later, the bone came back with a note identifying the bone as that of an elephant that lived in the Pleistocene Epoch of the Ice Age.

The bone is really that of a mammoth, Derek says, because no elephants lived in that time.

"I thought it was pretty old," he said. "Young bones are white, and it takes them a while to fossilize."

Derek said he has returned to the creek bed for more digs, but so far has found only cow bones.

A self-described "rock hound," Derek says he wants to be a paleontologist when he gets out of school. He started his collection of rocks and fossils when he was 7.

"I'm always aware," he said. "I'm always looking for things like that."

Derek's parents are Robert and Linda Adkins. He has two brothers — David, 12, and Aaron, 6.

Mrs. Adkins said she tried to throw away the fossil "about three times" before it was identified.

"It was in a plastic bag on the dresser and kept falling off," she said. "I can't remember when he hasn't been bringing things home. The first book he took out of the library was on dinosaurs."

But Mrs. Adkins can be rid of the pesky bone now. Derek is thinking of loaning it to the Dallas Museum of Natural History.

Paintings Viewed First Time In U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A selection of 57 Italian, Flemish, Dutch, German, Spanish and French old masters goes on view Saturday for the first time in the United States.

Scientist Calls Self 'Super Trekkie'

NEW YORK (Special) — It seems ambiguous to hear the prominent space scientist refer to himself as a "Super Trekkie." But Jesco von Puttkamer finds nothing strange about his dual interests.

Tall and silver-haired, he looks the part of a distinguished "Senior Staff Scientist" whose official title is Program Manager of Space Integrated Long-Range Planning Studies, which is the job he holds in Advanced Programs with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Away from his NASA office in Washington, D.C., and working on his own time, he recently served as Science Consultant on Paramount's new space adventure-drama, "Star Trek: The Motion Picture," slated to open Dec. 7 at Showplace Six in Lubbock. He admits to having been an avid "Star Trek" fan for years.

"It really goes hand-in-hand with my work for NASA," he explains. "I feel certain the television show has helped to establish a better awareness of the space program in the public's mind. Previously, the public was turned off by all the technical lingo they heard from scientists.

"The connection now between NASA and 'Star Trek' is what I call the 'Space Connection.'"

Jesco first had his eyes opened to the Trekkies in 1975, when he represented NASA as a speaker at a Chicago "Star Trek" convention that attracted over 14,000 fans. Up to that time, it was the biggest of the conventions that have played an important role in the "Star Trek" phenomenon that has swept the country during the past decade.

"I was smitten with the reception the real space program received," von Puttkamer remarks. "I found the fans to be very practical-minded and interested in the real future as well as fantasy. It became clear we were dealing with young people — and often with their parents and grandparents — who felt 'Star Trek' was a portrayal of what the real future could be like someday, if we just do it right.

"It depicted an optimistic future, with man the master of his destiny rather than the victim of it, and it showed that man would still be around, enjoying life without limitations. And, it achieved what NASA hadn't been able to do — it gave people an understanding of the future in space."

Coming from his native Germany, where he was a scientist with the National Aerospace Research and Test Establishment in Aachen, von Puttamer joined Dr. Wernher von Braun's rocket development team in Huntsville, Alabama, in 1961.

He since has been honored by NASA with special awards for his contributions to various space programs — development of the Saturn V launch vehicle that carried astronauts to the moon, the Apollo lunar landing, the Skylab I mission — and for his efforts in developing future programs such as the concept of Spce Industrialization.

He also was involved in the development of America's pioneering Space Shuttle, which subsequently was named Enterprise after the "Star Trek" spacecraft. The real space world may seem far removed from the fantasy of Hollywood films, but von Puttkamer doesn't see it that way.

"Much of 'Star Trek's appeal to those fans, as well as to the scientific community, is a result of its science fiction being handled in such a way that it could become science fact of the future," he maintains.

"I was very pleased when the producer, Gene Roddenberry, emphasized to me his insistence on scientific accuracy in 'Star Trek: The Motion Picture.' I also felt we shared the same interest in the future and concern over where mankind is headed."

According to von Pattkamer, his first discussions with Roddenberry and Robert Wise, the Academy Award-winning director, were concerned with general phiolosphy regarding the future of man and space. Then, as the screenplay was developed by Harold Livingston from a story by Alan Dean Foster, he went into more technical and scientific aspects, page by page.

His knowledge of "Star Trek" since attending his first convention and his expertise in science fiction drama allowed him also to contribute some helpful, non-technical plot ideas to "Star Trek — The Motion Picture." An author himself, Jesco has published a number of books and articles dealing with space, both in the factual present and the fictional future.

Paramount brought him to Hollywood several times when his NASA duties permitted, to verify the scientific validity of key scenes during the filming of "Star Trek: The Motion Picture."

He is openly critical of many science fiction films of the past for their failure to accurately depict the future.

"They should have checked with science," he declares. "But, it isn't just a matter of technology, like how are computer codes and radio codes encoded and decoded. More importantly, it's a matter of humanistic involvement, the reactions and inter-reactions of people.

"Here again I found myself in total agreement with the 'Star Trek: The Motion Picture' filmmakers. They were determined to stress their human story and the characters in it.

"Our hopes for the future is that technology will be a servant, a friend of man — not his master.

Secret Garden Auction May Bring $1 Million

FEASTERVILLE, Pa. (AP) — Fred Bergman's secret garden will be sold this weekend, and it could bring $1 million.

Horticulturists all over the world know about it. But only a handful have ever strolled among the strange, even grotesque, flora, some of which exists nowhere else on this planet.

There's a small mutated pine tree so flexible that it can be twisted like a pretzel without snapping. There is a plant that grows in the shape of an elephant, another resembles a 50-foot tall woolly mammoth. There are pine trees that are green on the top and blue on the bottom. And there's an entire acre of bamboo.

Bergman created and bred, often from genetic mutants, thousands of one-of-a-kind conifers, spruces and hemlocks; weeping and prostrated plants and contorted trees. Many are expected to bring prices of $20,000 or more.

Bergman grew his Eden on 30 acres of Bucks County soil during 35 years of quiet isolation. And it came to be known as the Raraflora Nursery Collection. Last December, Bergman died at age 62.

He was very protective of his leafy companions. He discouraged visitors, even potential buyers, and made only rare appointments for people to see the collection. Once he turned down a check for $45,000 for a single bush. He was worried the purchaser would propagate it, thus diluting its value.

For most people, the garden will remain a secret. The others — hortculturists willing to pay a $500 deposit — will gather here Saturday, Sunday and Monday to bid on Bergman's treasures. Those who purchase nothing, will get back only $400, so it's unlikely they'll be any browsers.

Investors purchased the property on Stump Road after Bergman's death. A spokesman for the group says the sale will be without restriction, meaning that buyers can propagate the plants from the secret garden.

And so one of Bergman's worst fears will be realized. His strange creations will be allowed to multiply upon the earth.

Heart Attack Victim Gets Quick Aid

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — If Donald Waite had suffered his heart attack anywhere else, he probably would be dead.

But Waite, 51, a San Jose furniture dealer, collapsed Thursday in his car outside a hospital just as a cardiac support class happened by.

The class, consisting of a heart surgeon, a physician's assistant and several nurses, quickly grabbed the heart-reviving equipment in a nearby classroom and went to work.

"If he hadn't gotten the immediate attention that he received, he would be in the morgue right now," said the surgeon, Dr. T.E. Dye.

Waite, of Moraga, Calif., had left his San Jose furniture store complaining of indigestion and headed for the hospital. That's when his car smashed into a tree in front of O'Connor Hospital, just as the cardiac support class was ending for the day.

PEOPLE PLACES THINGS

Singer's Manager Given Order

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Rock star Elton John's 30-year-old manager has been ordered to do 25 hours of community service for hitting a doorman with a cane.

JOHN REID

John Reid, the manager, was in London when Municipal Court Judge Lucy Kelly McCabe issued her order Thursday. He has not entered a plea to the charges and was represented in court by his lawyer.

Reid applied for the crime diversion program after he was charged with striking a doorman at the Fairmont Hotel with an ebony and silver cane on Sept. 25. They had gotten into a dispute as Reid and John were racing to catch a plane.

The manager was also ordered to pay the doorman's medical expenses.

New Mayor Given 'Bomb'

VOINOVICH

"I thought Dennis was going to give me a nice transition. He gave me a time bomb," Voinovich said of Dennis J. Kucinich's agreement to give 11 percent pay raises to members of Municipal Foremen and Laborers Union Local 1099 as of Jan. 1.

Voinovich said Thursday the agreement was signed by Kucinich and by Bob Weissman, Kucinich's personnel director, five days after Local 1099 president Paul Wells endorsed Kucinich for mayor.

In making the endorsement, Wells said all he wanted from Kucinich was "a fair shake."

Spaghetti Dive Idea Nixed

The idea was to invite local media personalities to search for a rubber meatball in a tub filled with 400 pounds of spaghetti.

But sponsors of Hunger Awareness Week objected to the exhibition, and Dave Birdsell, chairman of homecoming committee, decided they had "a very good point."

The dry spaghetti was donated to local food banks.

Bank Gives Play Money

DETROIT (AP) — Elna Bass put her bank card into one of those 24-hour money machines, and the automatic teller gave her an envelope stuffed with bills.

About an hour later, she opened the packet. She found one U.S. dollar. And a wad of Monopoly money.

Back at Detroit Bank & Trust Co., Miss Bass found a reception in progress to celebrate the opening of the branch office where she had done her banking earlier Wednesday night. The money machine, it turned out, was not supposed to be available to the public and was rigged with play money.

Cafe Oyster Yields Pearl

Ruppert had oysters with a dish of fettucini Alfredo for lunch Thursday, and one of the oysters contained a pearl.

There was no extra charge for pearl, which Ruppert said he plans to have appraised. He also said just might become a regular patron of the cafe.

High-Speed Train Makes Run

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union's new ER200 high-speed train between Moscow and Leningrad made its first passenger run Friday, carrying a VIP delegation, the government newspaper Izvestia reported.

The newspaper said the train, with a maximum speed of 125 mph, will cut travel time between the Soviet Union's two largest cities, 400 miles apart, from 7-8 hours to 3 hours 50 minutes.

The new train, which underwent test runs for three years, carries 512 passengers in eight passenger cars.

It was not reported if the train reached its maximum speed during the inaugural run, or when it will begin regular service.

Woman Answers Santa Letters

NAPERVILLE, Ill. (UPI) — Jane Heim started out three years ago trying to help Santa Claus. She wound up being an amateur child psychologist.

Mrs. Heim and a small staff of neighborhood mothers answer children's letters to Santa, the Easter Bunny and other gift-givers at $2 per letter.

Mrs. Heim started on a small scale during the 1976 Christmas holidays in the neighborhood and from there it spread by word of mouth.

"We don't just insert a name into an already-typed letter," she said. "As we receive each child's letter, we sit down, read it and then — taking a lot of time — we answer it, handprinting our answer on bright red stationery with 'Santa' Headquarters — North Pole' at the top.

"It takes an enormous amount of time. But each child's letter is precious. And that's how we treat it."

Some parents, she said, send a note along with their child's letter, adding a few requests. She has been asked to remind children not to bite or hit their siblings ... "I feel like I'm a psychologist, counselor and minister all rolled into one."

Dealer Fined For List

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — The sign at Jim's Gas for Less filling station near Grafton said: "Due to dishonest people, I can no longer extend credit or accept checks from anyone whatsoever."

Posted nearby was a list of 25 customers who allegedly owed the station $970.

The state attorney general's office announced Friday that James H. Reed, the station proprietor, had agreed to take down the sign and list, release the listed customers from debt, and pay the state a $100 civil penalty.

Reed signed an "assurance of discontinuance" in which, without admittingpast violation of the state consumer protection law, he agreed to stop disclosing information on customer indebtedness to anyone except a credit reporting agency.

Youth Principal For Day

MILWAUKEE(AP) — Twelve-year-old Steven Banks was principal of Lee Elementary School for one day and said afterward, "I'd like to do that kind of work when I get grown."

Steven, a sixth grader, was chosen for the special assignment Thursday on recommendation of the teachers. He traded jobs with Principal George Hughes, who handled Steven's crossing guard duties wearing a T-shirt with a picture of a yak, the school mascot.

At one point, Steven had to break up a fight between his brother, Scott, 11, and another student. Steven said he took the two aside, talked to them and "made them shake hands."

After spending the day with a sixth grader in command, 150 of the school's 537 students volunteered for a similar exchange. Hughes said he planned to have a pupil-principal exchange one day a month in the future.

Miss Lorre Escapes Strangler

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Catherine Lorre, 29-year-old daughter of actor Peter Lorre, almost became a victim of the Hillside Strangler murders two years ago, police say.

Kenneth Bianchi, one of the two men accused in the 10 slayings that occurred in the Los Angeles area, told police that he and his cousin, Angelo Buono Jr., had planned to kidnap and kill Ms. Lorre, according to the Los Angeles Times and radio station KNX.

Bianchi said they flashed phony police badges at her and asked for identification. When she opened her wallet, they saw a picture of Peter Lorre and realized who she was, Bianchi reportedly said.

He added that they had planned to order her into their car, but decided not to when she told them she was headed to an appointment "just down the block."

Bianchi has admitted a role in the 10 murders, but his cousin has pleaded innocent.

Smoke Fills Fireman's Home

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Nobody got hurt in the fire and nothing was damaged, with the possible exception of Linda O'Connor's pride.

Mrs. O'Connor had a roaring fire going in the fireplace and forgot to open the chimney damper. An engine and ladder truck responded to the alarm Thursday and firefighters used fans to clear the smoke.

"I'm really embarrassed," said Mrs. O'Connor.

Former Bank Manager Jailed For Spanking His Customers

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A former bank manager, whose lawyer said he was caught in a "vicious cycle," was sent to jail Friday for mishandling delinquent accounts by spanking his customers.

David Charles Rhodes, former manager of the Century National Bank in Baden, was sentenced to three years in prison by U.S. District Court Judge Paul A. Simmons for misappropriating more than $80,000 in bank funds.

Rhodes, who used a wooden paddle to spank customers in his office, said he thought the corporal punishment was an effective way of extracting the payments, until some of the customers threatened to tell his superiors.

"I didn't want to hurt the bank, yet I couldn't stop what had started," said Rhodes, adding he was relieved when bank auditors detected the scheme. "I wanted to keep the bank's customers, to help the bank flourish, but it turned into a nightmare."

Rhodes, who was arrested by FBI agents on Aug. 10, told Simmons the spankings started as a joke but then snowballed out of control into extortion.

The 38-year-old former banker said he paddled more than 50 persons. "I never had any trouble with them afterwards," he said.

Rhodes, father of two teen-agers, estimated he averaged about 1,500 loans a year at the Beaver County bank from 1964 until his discharge in 1978.

However, Rhodes told the court he was forced to make eight unrecorded loans totaling $88,268 when six of those who were spanked threatened to report him to his superiors.

One of the six, none of whom has been charged, demanded more money or "he was going to make it out as a homosexual activity," Rhodes told Simmons.

Rhodes spanked only men under middle age, said defense attorney Robert W. Lewis, who added psychiatric and polygraph tests disproved any homosexual tendencies. FBI officials also were satisfied Rhodes never pocketed any money, Lewis added.

Although he was aware the loans were illegal, Rhodes said he didn't turn himself in because he didn't think the authorities would believe his story.

Defense attorney David Joyce said Rhodes, now manager of a cigar and candy firm, had no previous criminal record and enjoyed a spotless reputation in the community prior to his arrest.

"He was involved in a vicious cycle," said Joyce, who called the crime "an offense of poor judgement."

Plane Crash Fatalities Reported Erroneously

GRAND CANYON, Ariz. (AP) — A tourist plane crashed on the south rim of the Grand Canyon on Friday afternoon, and a federal aviation official said all 44 persons aboard survived.

Feldman said there were no fatalities in the 4:53 p.m. EST crash, but that four persons were injured. He said 41 passengers and three crew members were aboard the flight, which was headed for Las Vegas.

A Nevada Airlines spokeswoman Sharon Wicks said Arizona Air Traffic Controller Frank Spencer had advised that all the passengers were able to disembark at the site of the crash.

"The only injuries we were advised of were crew members, and we were talking to them on the phone. They're all right," Ms. Wicks said.

The airline said the plane went down because of a "mechanical failure."

Earlier, Bruce Shaw, assistant superintendent of the Grand Canyon National Park, said the plane crashed and burst into flames near a tourist hotel. He said at least 35 persons were killed.

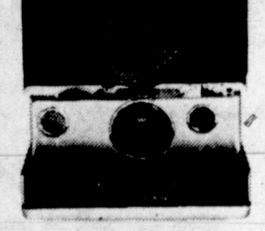

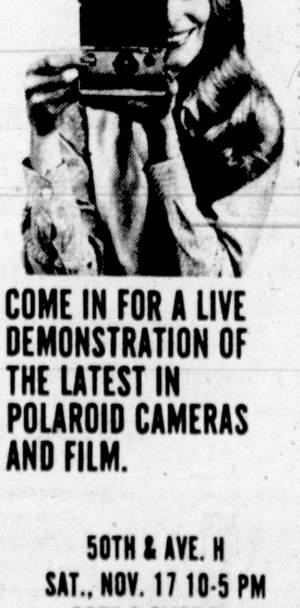

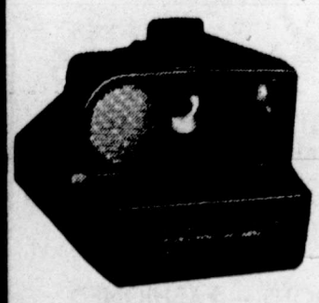

Shaw said later of the report: "We had grievous amounts of errors in our original reports and I'm trying to get it straightened out. Original reports were that there were a number of people killed and right now there are none that we known of."

Less than 15 percent of the total land area in China can be used for farming because the rest of the soil is too poor, too high or already exhausted. Most of the cultivated land is in eastern China. Industrial plants are also located in the farminbg area.

PSYCHOLOGY TODAY

Experts Feel Hypnosis Involves 'Two-Minds'

By the Editors of Psychology Today

What happens in a hypnotic trance? Recent research suggests that hypnosis may reduce the usual dominance of the brain's hemisphere in matters involving thought and speech, and liberate the more spacial and emotional right hemisphere.

Under hypnosis, people often seem quite literally to be of two minds. Psychologists Ernest and Josephine Hilgard of Stanford tell of a man who did not react at all to loud noises or questions during a period of deafness that was induced by hypnotic suggestions. But when he was asked to indicate whether "another part" of him was aware of the sounds by moving his finger, the finger wiggled. The current study suggests that the two "minds" within the brain may indeed be involved.

Lynn Frumkin, Herbert Ripley, and Gary Cox of the University of Washington School of Medicine, put 20 men and women through a series of listening tests.

This time, they reported the sounds they heard in the right ear only slightly more often than those they heard in the left. After the hypnotic trance ended, the large right-ear advantage reappeared.

The change in hemispheric dominance under hypnosis helps explain several well-known hypnotic effects. One is the ability of researchers to induce strong emotional states in people who have beeen hypnotized: The right hemisphere plays a more important role in emotions than the left one does.

Hypnosis also dramatically improves a person's involuntary memory — recall of information that has not been deliberately memorized. Other research indicates that this ability, too, is governed primarily by the hypnotically liberated right hemisphere.

While psychologists have made much of the "empty nest syndrome," or depression some mothers feel when their last child leaves home, few researchers ever thought to ask how fathers feel. Now a systematic survey has been conducted, which shows fathers have some similar feelings.

The study polled 118 randomly selected couples from a wide variety of socioeconomic backgrounds in Northeast Georgia. Nearly as many fathers (22 percent) as mothers (23 percent) said they felt "very unhappy" after their last offspring packed up and took off.

Other recent studies have shown that fewer women than psychologists once assumed are depressed by the empty nest; many women now look forward to new interests or careers once their children leave. At the same time, many fathers seem to be taking an increased interest in their children.

Ironically, suggests the study's main author, Robert Lewis, a sociologist who directs the Center for Family Studies at Arizona State University, "the number of dispirited postparental fathers could be multiplying at the same time it appears that fewer mothers are experiencing crises with the launching of their children.

Research Claims Retirement Unhealthy

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Retirement may increase a man's risk of dying of a heart attack, according to preliminary results of a scientific study described here Tuesday.

"We found an 80 percent higher rate of death from coronary disease among those (in the study) who had retired compared with those who had not," said Dr. Charles H. Hennekens of Harvard Medical School.

"It may be that some people who retire get all nervous about it and kind of tense," said Hennekens. "That may be a way of explaining this, but I just don't know."

Interviewed before the study was presented at an American Heart Association conference, Hennekens emphasized that the results were preliminary and drawn from research originally intended for another purpose.

But, he said, the study is strong enough to encourage new research to determine if it is possible that "retirement is bad for you."

Heart disease is the leading cause of death among men in the United States.

Hennekens said he and his colleagues are trying to set up a long-term study of up to 10,000 elderly persons to determine their physical and mental responses to retirement. Among variables not included in the current data, he said, were length of retirement, changes in life style and attitudes toward retirement.

The last may be very important, he said, since "for some people, retirement is a reward for a lifetime's work and they look forward to it. But for other people, it is a punishment for growing old. Those who feel that way perhaps might be the ones who get nervous, but we don't have that breakdown."

Hennekens said he was surprised at the preliminary findings because "this was sort of a fishing expedition." The study actually began earlier this decade when Hennekens collected data on 568 fatal heart attack victims in Florida to see if coffee drinking is related to heart disease.

He found little or no connection, but still had the data when a co-worker, Ward Casscells, suggested a study of retirement and heart attack.

The research was not designed for that question, Hennekens said, but did include data on age, occupation, and a number of risks, including previous heart problems.

Each victim was matched with another man of similar age living in the same neighborhood. Of the 568 pairs of victims and controls, 102 included one retiree and one person still at work.

Of those, Hennekens said, 76 of the dead men were retirees, while only 26 of the living men had retired.

After adjusting the information for age differences and other variables, he said, "there was still this 80 percent association."

He said the tentative findings apply only to men, in whom coronary disease is much more common than in women. By age 60, one in five American men will have had a coronary problem while the figure for women is about one in 17.

KIDNAPPING DEPLORED

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department said Friday it deplores the kidnapping of Spanish parliamentarian Javier Ruperez. "The United States government condemns this act of terrorism as it does all such acts in the strongest possible terms. There can be and there is no justification for such actions," department spokesman Hodding Carter said.

Doctors Concerned Over Report That Drinking Helps Heart

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — A panel of doctors, nervous about reports that two drinks a day may protect against heart attack, says the risk of alcoholism is too great to justify ever recommending liquor to non-drinkers.

"I can't see us ever telling someone to start drinking (to protect his heart). It's just too risky," Dr. William P. Castelli of the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute said Thursday.

"You might tell somebody who is prone to alcoholism and that would destroy his whole life and his family."

The problem, he said, is that many people simply will not be able to take two drinks a day and then stop. He cited proven health hazards of excessive drinking and said the United States already has about 17 million alcoholics.

But the three doctors, speaking at a news conference during an American Heart Association conference here, also agreed with a recently published study on drinking and heart disease.

That study, published in the Nov. 2 issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association, said "daily consumption of small to moderate amounts of alcohol has been shown to be associated with lowered risk of coronary-heart disease."

Each of the doctors speaking here has done research confirming the finding that moderate drinkers of beer, wine or liquor are less likely to have heart attacks than non-drinkers.

"I think everybody would agree that drinking large amounts of alcohol is unheathy, both to the cardiovascular system and to other systems of the body," said Dr. Arthur L. Klatsky, chief of cardiology at the Kaiser-Permanente Medical Center in Oakland.

But, he said, "The question people really want to know about is: Is it OK to have a couple of drinks?"

When a doctor in a position to evaluate a patient's drinking record is asked that question, Klatsky said, "the proper thing for the doctor to do is just to tell the facts.

"And the facts are, we believe, that there is no evidence that one or two drinks a day is harmful and there is fairly strong suggestive evidence that it may decrease the likelihood of heart attack."

If a person has been drinking moderately with no problems, "then in light of the current situation, it's OK to drink."

But Klatsky also agreed with Dr. Joseph J. Barboriak of Wood Veterans Hospital in Milwaukee, who said: "We are definitely not ... ready to suggest limited drinking as a public health measure. We simply don't know enough about the effects on people who might be genetically predisposed to alcoholism."

Barboriak said strong evidence suggests that some people inherit from their parents a high susceptibility to alcoholism. So far, no one has learned to identify those who carry that trait.

"I just don't think we can say that here we have an easy and pleasant way to reduce heart disease," Barboriak said.

Army Chief Against Cut In Service's Strength

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army chief of staff says he would fight any move to reduce that service's total strength below the authorized level of 774,000.

It wouldn't be sound policy to let the Army's manpower level "float to whatever you can get," Gen. Edward C. Meyer said.

Stock Market Sees Decline

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined moderately Friday, faced with new questions about the outlook for interest rates and the dollar.

The widely recognized average dropped 5.63 to 815.70, closing out the week with a net gain of 9.22 points.

New York Stock Exchange volume was a moderate 30.06 million shares, down from 32.38 million Thursday.

Federal Reserve statistics issued late Thursday showed a sharp rise in the money supply, dealing a setback to hopes that the Fed could pursue its anti-inflation plan without further credit-tightening.

Graham Man Operates $18 Million Company With God As Geologist

By LEON HOOTEN

GRAHAM, Texas (NEA) — With the Lord as his geologist, Tom Brightman has built an oil business worth about $18 million from a two-barrel-a-day well he purchased in 1968 for $5,000.

The Tom Brightman story isn't the classic rags-to-riches yarn.

It is the story of a man and his wife who are deeply religious and who live their beliefs seven days a week — and who aren't ashamed to proclaim their faith in the Bible and the Lord.

Brightman has been in the oil business all his life. That goes back to 1923, when he was born in a Gulf Oil camp near Breckenridge.

Today that oil-field baby is president of a multi-million dollar firm that proudly calls itself the Praise the Lord Drilling Co.

But the company is young in relation to Brightman's years in the oil business.

On a warm afternoon in their spacious home, Brightman and his wife, Mae, tell their success story interspersed with quotations from the Bible.

It was in the summer of 1940 that Brightman began his career in the oil business as a roughneck. Through hard work, he was eventually elevated to contract pumper.

"When I was 45, the good Lord told me to form my own oil company," he says.

Brightman didn't have an extensive religious upbringing. But he and his wife had begun to realize that the time when they would meet their maker was getting nearer. So, they gradually turned to God and the Bible for guidance.

With $3,500 in savings and $1,500 borrowed on his pickup truck, Brightman bought that first well.

"And if you remember," he says, "that was in 1968 when thousands of independent oil operators were going bankrupt and everyone said I was crazy for going into the oil business on my own.

"And, of course, this was long before the oil embargo. Oil was selling for less than $3 a barrel."

That well paid for itself but didn't make them rich.

For $4,000, Brightman bought a second well — one he almost concluded was a loser.

"It did nothing but pump water for seven days," he recalls. "The evening of the seventh day I went home and told Mae that it was no good."

But she refused to give him supper until they returned to the well and tried it one more time.

Brightman says they went back to the well — and it started pumping 30 barrels of oil a day. He estimates that it has earned them about $250,000 and still brings in about $40,000 a year.

Brightman then bought a third well. He walked up a nearby deserted road and sighted two abandoned wells on the rocky side of a hill.

DRILL FOR GOD — Oil millionaires Mae and Tom Brightman credit their religious faith for the success of their Praise the Lord Drilling Co. "If you trust in the Lord and work hard, He will take care of you," Mrs. Brightman explains.

The equipment on the wells was about gone, but with some reworking and sand fracturing Brightman began pumping oil from 1,600 feet.

"Then the Lord told me to drill to 2,600 feet, and we did and struck a new field that flowed 400 barrels of oil a day, he remembers.

The discovery has earned the couple about $1 million. In sincere Brightman manner, that field and several other sand formations they have since located bear Biblical names.

But how did the company come to be named Praise the Lord Drilling?

Mae is responsible for that," Brightman says.

Mrs. Brightman reaches for her Bible and reads Proverbs 3:6: "In all your ways acknowledge him and he will make straight your paths."

"If you trust in the Lord and work hard, he will take care of you," she explains proudly. "So that's where I got the name."

Annual Episcopal Council Convenes

The 21st annual council of the Episcopal Diocese of Northwest Texas opened yesterday with registration at the South Park Inn. Some 60-100 delegates and visitors from throughout the Diocese, which includes the Panhandle area south to Big Spring, were expected.

Episcopal Church Women will hold their annual meeting from 4:30-6:30 today at South Park Inn with Mrs. Robert I. Bowen of Coleman, president, presiding. A wine-and-cheese party at St. Christopher's Church, 42nd Street and Elgin Avenue, has been set for 6:30-8 p.m. Special events for young people have been planned through the Episcopal Campus Ministry.

Business meetings will begin today, starting with a "State of the Diocese" address by the Rev. Willis R. Henton, Bishop of Northwest Texas. Speaker for tonight's banquet will be Eleanor Robinson of Great Falls, Mont., an outstanding layperson who has served on the parish, provincial, diocesan and national levels. The Rev. Dr. William Green of the Seminary of the Southwest, Austin, will preach at the Sunday Eucharist which concludes the council.

Methodist Bishops Meet

ALBUQUERQUE (Special) — United Methodist bishops from many parts of the world met here this week for the Fall Meeting of the Council of Bishops.

Bishop and Mrs. Alsie Carlton of Albuquerque were the hosts for the 45 bishops of the nine million-member church.

A major portion of the meeting was devoted to preparation for the church's General Conference which will be held in Indianapolis in April.

In a statement before the opening of the meeting, Carlton, bishop of the Northwest Texas-New Mexico Area, said part of this meeting would be spent "considering the priorty of the church for the next four years."

The schedule for the meeting included reports from the Executive Committee, meetings of standing committees, and worship services.

Wayland Professor To Speak

Dr. Dan G. Kent, associate professor of religion at Wayland Baptist College in Plainview, will be the pulpit guest at First Baptist Church Sunday.

KENT

Kent was graduated from Baylor University and received his ministerial education at Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary.

He is a member of the American Academy of Religion, the Society of Biblical Literature and the Association of Baptist Teachers of Religion.

Kent has taught numerous workshops for both the Amarillo Baptist Association and the Lubbock Baptist Association.

Kent has written several articles on working with youth in the church.

Methodists Celebrate Anniversary

HALE CENTER (Special) — The First United Methodist Church will celebrate its 90th anniversary and homecoming and community Thanksgiving Service Sunday at 11 a.m. The Rev. Wesley Putman, pastor, will preach. Johnny Ray Watson will present special music.

Following the service, dinner will be served in the fellowship hall.

A special musical presentation at 2 p.m. will be led by Putman and Watson.

The Methodist Church is the oldest established institution in Hale Center, older by four years than the city itself. The church was originally founded in the community of Epworth, to the southwest of the present site of Hale Center. The Rev. Horatio Graves, a retired minister from New York and the founder of Epworth, first organized a Sunday School which met in the school.

Throughout its history, the church has been served by 43 pastors including five interim ministers.

Church To Present Film Series

The First Church of the Nazarene, 46th Street and Avenue Q, is presenting a series of films called "Focus on the Family." The series will be shown each Sunday evening for the next six weeks. The films will begin at 6 p.m. in the church auditorium.

The film series is prepared and narrated by Dr. James C. Dobson, associate clinical professor of pediatrics at the University of Southern California.

The title of the film for this Sunday is "Shaping the Will Without Breaking the Spirit." Topics for subsequent weeks will include "Christian Fathering," "Preparing for Adolescence," and "What Wives Wish Their Husbands Knew About Women."

Anglican Church Updates Prayer Book

LONDON (AP) — The Anglican Church has modernized the 300-year-old Book of Common Prayer despite the last minute efforts of prominent Britons to preserve the old prayers — a foundation stone of the English faith that migrating Englishman carried to the ends of the earth.

The Church of England on Friday approved the Alternative Services Series, a streamlined version of the old book which was largely the work of King Henry VIII's ally, Archbishop Thomas Cranmer in the 16th century.

The U.S. Episcopal Church, an independent body but a member of the world-wide Anglican communion, gave final approval to similar revisions in its Book of Common Prayer at the national convention in Denver last September.

In the Anglican Church changes, Thy becomes Your. Give us this day our daily bread is abbreviated to Give us today. Our trespasses now are our sins, and Englishmen and women on their knees on Sundays no longer will plead not to be led into temptation, but will ask to be saved from the "time of trial."

The decision was taken by a crushing 225 votes to 3 at the general synod, leadership council of clergy and laity of the church.

The rewriting process has gone on for 10 years, with new prayers introduced bit by bit. They are not compulsory and vicars can use the old forms if they like. But the old book already has disappeared from many churches and been replaced by little booklets of new prayers.

David Martin, professor of sociology at the London School of Economics, organized a petition to retain the old book. "The liturgy is a national possession. The furniture of the mind is being dumped," he said.

Martin wrote more than 800 letters seeking support and got it — from judges, generals, Knights of the Garter, actors, writers and lawmakers. Even atheists signed, saying it was a national question, not just a concern of the church.

The synod's response was that a crowd of intellectuals, many of whom never go to church, was trying to tell the church its business.

The old book, known as the 1662 version from a revision of that year, was based on Archbishop Cranmer's work 100 years earlier. He made the change from Latin to English so ordinary people could understand what they were praying for.

Cranmer supported King Henry VIII in breaking with the pope in Rome and establishing the Protestant Church of England. When Henry's daughter, the Roman Catholic Mary, became queen and switched the nation back, Cranmer resisted and was burned at the stake. Protestantism was restored by Queen Elizabeth I.

The U.S. Episcopal Church adopted changes in its Book of Common Prayer at a convention in Minneapolis in 1976 and voted final approval at the Denver meeting this year. A church official said the changes involved "updating the language for contemporary use" and added some prayers for specific occasions.

Changes In Church Noted By Prayers

LONDON (AP) — The following two versions of the Lord's Prayer are an example of changes the Church of England has made in updating the centuries-old Book Of Common Prayer.

First is the old version, with punctuation and capitalization as given in the Book of Common Prayer:

"Our Father which art in Heaven, Hallowed be thy Name, Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done, in earth as it is in heaven. Give us this day our daily bread; And forgive us our trespasses, As we forgive them that trespass against us; And lead us not into temptation, But deliver us from evil. For thine is the kingdom, the power and the glory, For ever and ever. Amen."

The new version, as taken from An Order for Holy Comunion, Alternative Services Series 3:

"Our Father in heaven, hallowed be your Name; your kingdom come, your will be done, on earth as in heaven. Give us today our daily bread. Forgive us our sins as we forgive those who sin against us. Do not bring us to the time of trial but deliver us from evil. For the kingdom, the power and the glory are yours now and for ever. Amen."

Judge Drops Suit By Florida Teacher

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — A federal judge has dismissed a suit by a teacher who said she had a right to breast-feed her child in school.

U.S. District Judge John A. Reed Jr. called the arguments raised by kindergarten teacher Janice Dike "frivolous" and "without merit."

MRS. ELEANOR ROBINSON

Episcopal Diocese Council To Meet

Mrs. Eleanor Robinson of Great Falls, Mont., will address the banquet tonight of the 21st annual council of the Episcopal Diocese of Northwest Texas, meeting at the South Park Inn.

Business sessions, consisting of election of officers and committees, allocations of budgets, and presided over by the Rt. Rev. Willis R. Henton, Bishop, will occupy the delegates to the council throughout the day today. The council will conclude with Eucharist tomorrow at the Inn.

An active layman, Mrs. Robinson delivered the one speech at the 1976 Minneapolis GDneral Convention that received standing applause. A native of LIvingston, Mont., she is a teacher who has served the church on the parish, provincial, diocesan and national levels. She has served as advisor to a local youth group and president of her parish Churchwomen's organization. She also served on the executive council of her Diocese and was president of her diocesan churchwomen.

In 1971 she was elected provincial representative to the national executive council of the church, where she served two terms, including committees dealing with lay ministry, stewardship and national and world mission. While assigned to world mission, she attended one of the first Partners in Mission consultations, which was held in the Province of Central Africa. She also served on the planning committee for the mission consultation sponsored by the church in 1977. In addition, she served two terms as a member of the board of directors of the Presiding Bishop's Fund for World Relief.

Theme of the Saturday banquet will be "Celebration of Ministry." The Rev. Dr. William Green of the Seminary of the Southwest, Austin, will preach at the Sunday Eucharist.

High Interest Rates No Longer Necessary

WASHINGTON (AP) — "There is no excuse for banks to keep the prime rate at 15½ percent any longer," says the chairman of the House Banking Committee.

Rep. Henry Reuss, D-Wis., charged this week that banks which keep their prime rate at that level are "profiteering."

Church Briefs

Michial Ratliff will be the guest speaker at a Family Night sponsored by the Full Gospel Businessmen's Fellowship Saturday at 7 p.m. in Room 107 of the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center. The meeting will include dinner, fellowship, testimony and music.

• • •

The Oakwood Baptist Church Deaf Department will sponsor a weekend of preaching and spiritual inspiration today through Sunday. Leaders are Rocky Shiflet of Fort Worth, Steven Latimer of Austin and Robert Trevino of Dallas. Catholics Rate TV Programs For Children

NEW YORK (AP) — The "Gong Show" and its producer, Chuck Barris, were singled out Thusday by the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of New York for presenting "vulgar and degrading" prime-time entertainment to children in the metropolitan area.

In its condemnation of the "Gong Show," the archdiocese gave this capsule description: "Entire thrust is to demean and ridicule its guests while furnishing a platform for the crude and vulgar comments of host Chuck Barris."

A spokesman for Chuck Barris Productions in Hollywood said: "We believe in the separation of church and state. They're as free to recommend what to watch as we are free to make what we want."

"Mork and Mindy," which made the archdiocese best-for-kids list last season, was criticized this time around for "suggestive remarks" but still listed as suitable for joint viewing and follow-up conversations by children and parents.

"Mature adults will obviously have different norms for deciding what to watch," the statement added. "Our primary interest is the healthy development of the minds and characters of children, who, we know now, are deeply affected by what they see and hear on television. We offer these reviews to parents who share that concern."

The listings of 120 shows reviewed are scheduled to be distributed after Mass next Sunday throughout the diocese.

Also listed among the 15 worst shows were "$1.98 Beauty Show," "Dallas," "Dating Game," "Dukes of Hazzard," "Last Resort," "Match Game," "Misadventures of Sheriff Lobo," "Newlywed Game," "Real People," "Ropers," "Saturday Night Live," "Soap," "Three's Company" and "Three's a Crowd."

Only "Three's Company" and "Dallas" on the 15 worst list were among the 15 top-rated national TV shows for the past week.

Among the programs listed by the archdiocese as best for children was the "Muppet Show," characterized as "quality entertainment for the young and not so young, it is pure delight."

Thanksgiving Is...

Thanksgiving Is a world pausing to consider its dependence on the goodness of God.

Thanksgiving Is a nation knowing its destiny must rise or fall in the spiritual vitality of its people.

Thanksgiving Is a visit to Grandma's, a happy day with aunts and uncles and cousins. Grandpa saying grace.

Tech Play Takes Agonizing Look At Reality

By WILLIAM D. KERNS
A-J Entertainment Editor

Just because one leaves the Texas Tech University Theater's current production of Eugene O'Neill's "Long Day's Journey Into Night" absolutely drained, don't jump to the conclusion it is solely due to the fact the running time of the play is five hours and 22 minutes. Though that is certainly no small part of it.

A-J THEATER REVIEW

Director George Sorensen and his extremely gifted cast have treated O'Neill's work faithfully, fleshing out every bit of anger and resentment and guilt from its characters. Not only the length, but the pacing and acting as well, all serve to give us the feeling we have lived with the Tyrone family — that we, like these characters, have been trapped by life.

"Long Day's Journey Into Night" was not performed until 1956, three years after O'Neill's death. An autobiographical play about his own family, his own upbringing, it is easy for an audience to understand how the pain of seeing it performed might be too much for the playwright to bear. But it is just as easy to understand how such a masterful work became the only one to win a posthumous Pulitzer Prize (1957), as this tale of misery and family breakdown is heartbreaking in its depth and attention to detail.

The play deals with a family called Tyrone: father James, a miserly sort of actor whose love is consistently overshadowed by a self-imposed fear of the poorhouse; mother Mary, clinging to the past while sticking needles in her arm to alleviate her addiction to morphine; son James Jr., an actor whose drinking only serves to bring out any suppressed resentment and hatred; and son Edmund, bitter and now dying of consumption. Each and every one of these characters has his own anger billowing just below the surface, ready to rise up at the slightest hint of provocation. Each has his own guilts, his own accusations, his own resentments.

But we're left with the feeling that this is not just one family, but instead a playwright's view of life itself. That life is the indefeatable enemy we must battle every waking hour, with no hope of victory. At one point, James says, "Life had me right where it wanted me," as if to ask why one should even bother to fight. Edmund, in his wisdom, asks, "Who wants to see life as it is?" and Mary, her "poison" not yet clouding her vision, tells us, "The past is the present, isn't it? It's the future, too. We all try to lie out of that, but life won't let us."

And in four long, often agonizing acts, O'Neill does not spare us from the same conclusion. We are not just looking in on the Tyrone family; we cannot leave and we are as much a part of the battle as the characters themselves. We are not allowed to shrug off this gloomy outlook, but must wear it as our own albatross for at least those five hours and 22 minutes — and perhaps even longer as our depression rides home with us. By examining his own family — the character of Edmund represents O'Neill — and with the help of directors like George Sorensen who realize that every movement, every expression, every nuance must help create this atmosphere of helplessness, the playwright may force many into their own inner discoveries.

Sorensen wisely keeps most of his characters walking in and out of shadow, throughout, the outer fog often invading as though to shield any searchers from a way out of their misery. The set is well designed, allowing us to see characters not only in the dining room, but on the porch, in the hallway and on the second level — enticing us, at times, to look for something that is not yet there. But it is Sorensen's wonderful cast which brings this play across. Three Ph.D. candidates, Steven J. Peters, Mary Anne Mitchell and Jerry Cotton are cast as James, Mary and James Jr., respectively. And the years of experience show.

All have worked with Sorensen in the past, and perhaps this knowledge of each other's expectations and talents helped — because there's no denying these are four of the best performances we've seen in Lubbock, especially the bravura portrayal of the addict-mother by Miss Mitchell. She is perfect at expressing her paranoia and her regrets; it is through her performance, often demanding long stretches of dialogue, that we grow to understand the failure of the family to change, to find any sort of "cure." We watch her clutch the curtains as she recalls a past no doubt brighter in memory than in fact; and we know she speaks for all when, asked if she can ever forget, she abruptly stops rocking and says "no."

Peters is also magnificent as the father, a man bellowing in accusations and almost whimpering in explanations, a man who feels he's been let down without ever coming to grips with his own shirking of responsibility. Cotton, looking quite a bit like a young Stacy Keach on stage, also knows how to slowly tear out our hearts in bloody fashion, clearly demonstrating his own supreme ability at hurting and pecking away at already raw wounds. And Posey, so steadfast initially in his efforts to retain an impossible calm, also airs his resentments and loves and fears in believable and effective style.

What comic relief there is is supplied by Vanessa Hill as the serving girl, who proudly but drunkenly explains she was invited to share the family whiskey. But there remains very little to laugh at during the production. What we see is the decay of relationships, the destruction of any hope and the explanation through O'Neill's words and selections of poetry that this is not the first or last time it will happen. Indeed, the writer's torment has never come through more vividly than in "Long Day's Journey Into Night," and the Tech cast is to be applauded for its courage in taking all the time necessary to make its point.

Steven Peters as James Tyrone

Jerry Cotton as James Tyrone, Jr.

Mind you, audiences still should take advance notice of the long running time. It is a hard play to take emotionally in any case; it is no doubt easier if you enter the theater well rested.

Eugene O'Neill's "Long Day's Journey Into Night" will be staged at 8:15 p.m. today through Tuesday at the Texas Tech University Theater. Reservations and ticket prices are available by calling 742-3601. Due to the running time, University Theater officials will be serving complimentary coffee and cookies during the two 10-minute intermissions.

University Theater officials have also designated this production of "Long Day's Journey Into Night" as Tech's entry into 1979-80 American College Theater Festival competition. It will be performed in "area competition" Dec. 1 in San Angelo.

Trespassers Unwelcome At Fort Knox

By TOM TIEDE

FORT KNOX, Ky. (NEA) — The third fairway of the golf course on this military post is not particularly imposing, but the penalty for misplaying it can be most discomforting.

A hooked tee shot may land on the grounds of the U.S. Bullion Depository, where grim guards aim guns at trespassers.

No duffer has been wounded, yet.

But one never knows.

Indeed, the security force at America's famed gold vault is licensed to shoot to repulse anyone who wanders too close to the stock. At least 147 million troy ounces of glitter are locked inside. It is presently worth about $58 billion, and the government is dead serious about protecting it.

The depository is in fact one of the most secure installations in the nation. By law, only designated employees of the U.S. Mint are allowed passage. Everyone else — including members of Congress, inquiring journalists and tourists — is forbidden from getting even close to the front entrance.

Not that people don't try. This year, as the value of and interest in gold has become cosmic, the Mint has been deluged with requests to see the Fort Knox depository. Each request has been rejected. Even the director of the Mint has to make special arrangements if he wants to visit the vault.

Quite naturally, the rejections do not set well with the public. The bullion here has been purchased with tax money, and many people think they should have the right to see it. Over the years some critics have threatened the Mint with lawsuits; a few have even protested outside the depository gate.

The public frustration has also resulted in the development of an ongoing conspiracy theory. Rumors forever circulate that there is no money at Fort Knox, that it has all been spent. The reason no one is allowed in the vault, then, is because the government doesn't want anyone to know it's empty.

Early in the decade the conspiracy theory reached national proportions, and forced the Mint to make a rare concession. In 1974, dozens of congressmen and reporters were invited to tour the bullion depository; those who did confirmed that a prodigious amoung of gold was still in the hold.

But was it the right amount?

For that matter, was it real?

Mint officers concede that as long as people have no access to the vault there will always be suspicions. But this problem has no solution. Dr. George Hunter, acting director of the Mint, says the depository was never designed for visitors, "so it would be impossible to accommodate them."

Hunter says the policy is also tied to economics. If tourists were allowed in the Fort Knox facility, expensive restructing would be required. Also, the security arrangements would have to be modified, which is to say increased. Hunter says it would cost millions more to protect the gold.

Of course, no one seriously thinks tourists would jeopardize the bullion. The depository is one of the most impregnable structures in the world. The 1,325 feet of outer wall, for example, is constructed from 16,500 cubic feet of granite, 420 cubic yards of concrete and 1,420 tons of various steels.

Then there is the vault itself, a two story, compartmentalized behemoth that is fronted by a 30-ton door. No one man has the combination to the vault. When it's opened, various Mint officers take turns on the dial; each has a portion of the lock combination, and it's known only tohim.

Even if a visitor did break into the storeroom, it would do him little good. The gold itself is stacked in bricks that weigh more than 27 pounds apiece. Somebody might get four or five of them, a value of $8 million, but, says a Mint wag, "He'd have a damned hard time on his getaway."

The getaway would have to be through Fort Knox, home of 40,000 soldiers, where the military police are specially trained to rush to the aid of the vault guards. Besides this, there is a contingency plan that would, if necessary, mobilize the entire air, armor and infantry capacity of the reservation.

And yet, despite all this muscle, the U.S. Mint has no intention of testing it with lines to tourists. Dr. Hunter says the old policy will continue: nobody is welcome. The only outsiders who see the inside of this treasury are the laborers hired to move the bullion during the annual audit.

In short, keep out.

The sign of the gate here says, "Halt," and that means everyone. Even the highest official ever to visit the vault was forced to obey. He came almost 40 years ago, unannounced, and was stopped outside the fence; the grim guards called Washington before they would admit President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Author Encourages Children's Rights

In a controversial departure from orthodox thinking, John Holt, author of seven books on learning and education, has proposed that the rights, responsibilities and independence of adults be made available to any child who wants to use them.

Holt is a teacher, writer and educational and social reformer. He will discuss "Teaching and Learning at Home: the Number One Issue of the 1980's" at the Texas Tech University Center Theater at 8:15 p.m. on Nov. 29.

He believes that elementary school children do not learn but instead seek to avoid mistakes, trouble and danger. These adult-pleasing strategies kill most of their natural curiosity and intelligence. In his books, he offers suggestions for adults in homes and schools on ways to encourage effective learning.

"Instead of Education," his most recent book, details a way to break the school's monopoly on learning and make it easier in all parts of society for independent learners to have access to the tool resources and people who will help them learn what they want to know.

7 Ways to Beat Laziness Before It Beats You

Maybe, like most people, you have plenty of energy for the things you really like to do — it's getting the other stuff done that's the problem. Learn the seven ways to beat those delaying tactics. But there's more to laziness than meets the shut-eye. There may be psychological reasons for procrastination. Read about this fascinating roadblock to doing in this week's FAMILY WEEKLY. (Don't delay it!)

Down payments vary from nothing down G.I. to minimal FHA. 2 are FINISHED NOW. 5 are under construction, or we have a fine selection of plans for your choosing. Buy a Gordon Deering home now. You will not regret it.

YOUR NEIGHBOR SINCE 1931...YOUR REALTOR FOR OVER 25 YEARS.

CAUGHT YOU looking in the West section, didn't I? Wish no longer. Extremely attractive 3 bedroom and den, 2 bath home that is well located, and sure enough nice and just as affordable. $35,000. Nothing down VA, or purchase on one of five types of FHA loans. This home deserves your immediate consideration.

OLDER AND VERY NICE. This 3 bedroom home was constructed in 1933. It is built and was maintained well. One owner. The price reflects the age by being less than equivalent newer properties. It is $18,000, and can be purchased with NO down payment if you are a veteran.

WALK TO BAYLESS & Atkins. FHA appraised at $48,500, this lovely 3 BR, 2 bath home can be yours at preferred interest rates. Great S.W. location. Call today for appointment.

GET AWAY FROM IT ALL. 2 acres; good well; 4 bedroom house; 2 baths and lots of fruit trees. Good school district in Southwest area. Equity buy with no qualification on VA with no down payment.

S.R.O? Standing Room Only? Is your present house getting too small? See this super sharp 4 BR, 3 bath home w/over 2400 Sq. Ft. of living area in Melonie Park. Kitchen has all the built-ins, fireplace in den, & covered patio and well landscaped yard. $84,500.

ORDINARY HOME? No-O-O-O WAY!!! Master BR has cathedral beamed ceiling. Step-down den w/beams also. Several lovely arches in den and M/BR makes this 3 BR, 2 bath home stand out among others in Raintree. Many other extras. Only $54,000.

HUDDLE WITH HUBBY See this great investment, to reduce taxes, slow inflation, and provide a super home located in Melonie Park. 3 BR's (Isolated master), 2 baths, fireplace, new cedar shingle roof, many extras. Just $67,500.

GOODBYE MOWER -Hello swimming pool, party room. Townhouse living at its finest. 3 BR, 2 bath, 2 story, maintenance free yard. Redwood arbor over patio; complete kitchen facilities includes Jen-Aire range, microwave, compactor, many, many extras, West Lubbock. $72,500.

PARK YOUR MOBILE HOME on 2.787 acres North of City. Just a short drive to T.I. or Airport. Only $6,500, and owner may carry paper.

Mazda GLC

Take one look at what you get:
• 1.4 - litre, 4-cylinder OHC engine
• Reclining bucket seats • Flip-open rear windows • Power-assisted front disc brakes
• 4-speed transmission. Look at GLC for value.

29 ESTIMATED mpg — 39 EST. hwy mpg

Remember, compare this EPA estimate to the estimated mpg of other cars. You may get different mileage depending on how fast you drive, weather conditions, and trip length. Your actual highway mileage will probably be less than the estimated highway mileage.

The most important purchase of your life.

Buying a home, condominium or townhouse is perhaps the most important single purchase that most people make.

The kind you buy and where you buy has long range effect on your life and lifestyle.

It's a decision that should be made with care, with sufficient time and information so that you will be as satisfied in the future as you are at the time of purchase.

A Realtor or Real Estate Broker can help you find what you are looking for and you'll find that the real estate classification of this newspaper has the most complete overview of the market available anywhere.

The best starting point for you, in buying a home and selecting a Realtor, or Broker is to study the Real Estate classification for current, factual and reliable information that will guide you in your search for the right living accommodations for you and your family.

FONDA AS REPORTER — Earlier this year, Oscar-winner Jane Fonda starred as a news reporter who played a crucial role in bringing public attention to the unsafe conditions of a nuclear power plant in Columbia Pictures' "The China Syndrome," left. As a feisty network news reporter in "The Electric Horseman," right, she focuses public scrutiny on a story of a different order. This time the subject under observation is Robert Redford as a five-time world champion rodeo star who kidnaps a multi-million dollar thoroughbred from the conglomerate that has hired Redford and the horse to promote a line of breakfast cereals. Chasing him across Nevada and Utah, she gets an exclusive national story for her network and a relationship she hadn't bargained for. "The Electric Horseman" opens Dec. 21 at the South Plains Cinema

Officials Asked To Calm Americans

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter canceled a trip to Florida and his Thanksgiving vacation Friday because of the hostage crisis and he asked Americans not to make innocent Iranians scapegoats for their fury.

The White House announced Carter was canceling both a trip to Florida Saturday and his scheduled vacation next week on Sapelo Island along the Georgia coast "in order to continue to closely monitor the situation in Iran."

The White House said Rosalynn Carter will travel to Florida Saturday in place of her husband, who was to attend a state Democratic convention in St. Petersburg.

Carter discussed the hostage situation publicly in a speech to about 40 governors and other state leaders at the White House Friday.

He said he is trying to protect American honor — as well as the hostages — and assured the state officials there is "no reason to panic" about potential fuel shortages because of his decision banning Iranian oil imports.

The president asked the officials to try and calm angry Americans in their states so that there will be no repercussions against the 62 U.S. Citizens held by Iran at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

"I've just gotten a report that there are maybe 80,000 Iranians demonstrating outside our embassy in a highly emotional state," Carter saidduring a talk in the East Room.

"We're trying as best we can to protect the honor of our country and protect the lives of the hostages," he said. "I would like to add one word of caution."

Then the president, outlining the strong public reaction the White House has gotten against Iranians living in the United States, asked Americans not to use the foreigners as scapegoats.

He said there was a "considerable" outpouring of "sympathy for our hostages and strong condemnation of what is going on in Iran by Iranians, particularly those who live in our country, who have been here for years as responsible citizens."

"It would be a serious mistake for us to deprive them of their rights, deprive them of their citizenship, deprive them of our friendship," Carter said. "There is an inclination in a time of crisis to condemn every person who has a connection with Iran."

The president urged governors and other officials to "caution all Americans ... not to abuse the fine, tens of thousands of Iranians who live in our country."

It was the second day Carter has spoken at length about the two-week old hostage crisis. The main theme of his talk to the governors was that the state and federal government need to work together to spur conservation programs.

Checks Find Some Iranians In Violation

By The Associated Press

Immigration authorities said Friday that about 10 percent of the 4,000 Iranians interviewed so far under orders from President Carter are subject to deportation, and protests continued around the nation against the holding of American hostages in Iran.

Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd said Iranian demonstrators make his blood boil and he wouldn't blame Americans for "throwing rocks, eggs or anything else." But there was also some opposition to Carter's order to check the visas of all 50,000 Iranian students in this country.

The U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service reported in Washington that agents had interviewed about 4,000 Iranian students since the president ordered a check on the status of all Iranian students living in the United States.

Of those interviewed, INS spokesman Verne Jervis said, about 400 are subject to deportation because they dropped out of school, held jobs without INS permission or attended college only part time.

With some 60 Americans being held hostage in the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, there were these developments in the United States:

— Seven men and a woman, believed to be Iranians, were arrested by federal authorities on illegal weapons charges in Baltimore. An assistant U.S. attorney said the eight were arrested Thursday night at the Baltimore-Washington International Airport carrying high-powered rifles, ammunition, scopes and a street map of Washington with embassy buildings marked. Court documents said one of the suspects told federal agents the weapons were destined for Iran. There was no immediate explanation of the street map.

— The school board at Greenville (S.C.) Technical College voted to bar Iranian students from classes during the quarter beginning Nov. 28, if the American hostages are not released. About 100 Iranians are enrolled at the two-year college.

— The Students for a Liberation Society denounced plans to deport Iranian students with invalid visas, comparing the attempt to the internment of Japanese-Americans during World War II.

— An estimated 2,500 persons, many in uniforms ranging from that of the military reserve to baseball togs, gathered on the Southeastern Oklahoma State University campus in Durant for what was billed as an old-time American rally. Just two days earlier on the campus, some Iranian students had to seek refuge in the student union until college officials were able to disperse 40 sign-carrying students.

— An immigration official in Seattle said some Iranian students found to be out of compliance may be elilgible for reinstatement. He cited the example an Iranian woman who has married an American and may be able to avoid deportation by becoming a permanent U.S. resident.

— In Cincinnati, Lloyd Harris of the immigration service said the crackdown on Iranians "could never become a witch hunt. They have the right to a constitutional court process; they have their rights and benefits under law, just as everyone else does."

— An ABC News poll showed Carter receiving strong public support for his handling of the situation. The random nationwide telephone survey of 502 Americans on Thursday showed 64 percent of those polled approved of his actions, while 23 percent disapproved.

Twelve percent of those polled favored returning the deposed Shah of Iran to his homeland, as militant students holding the hostages have demanded.

— Calling the deposed shah a "criminal," more than 1,200 black ministers demanded his deportation "as quickly as possible."

At the final day of a week-long National Black Pastors' Conference in Detroit, the ministers also urged the Carter administration "to end its harassment of Iranians in America" and issued a position paper urging release of the American hostages.

— Officials in two Southern states reported a sharp increase in the number of Iranian students wanting to marry Americans.

Donna Ambrose, head of the Dade County, Florida, marriage license office said: "We've probably had a dozen (Iranians) that have come in here in the past week or so and apply for marriage licenses. It's been kind of strange — a majority act like they don't know each other very well."

An Associated Press spot check of probate officials in Alabama indicates a similar pattern in their state, where there are about 1,000 Iranian students.

Americans married to foreign citizens may seek permanent residency for their spouses, but federal officials may deny the request if they determine the marriage was arranged for the purpose of staying here.

— Hundreds of American students at Northeastern University in Boston and at Syracuse University in New York State held demonstrations demanding release of the hostages. Students burned effigies of the Ayatollah Ruhollah Kohmeini, the Moslem leader now controlling Iran.

In Madison, Wis., about 200 persons marched at a rally opposing the shah and protesting the government's threat to deport illegal Iranian aliens.

Enraged Texans Protest Holding Of Hostages

DALLAS (AP) — Led by a pickup bearing red, white and blue banners, about 200 persons marched through downtown Dallas Friday to protest Iran's refusal to free 60 American hostages.

The marchers' ranks swelled as workers on their lunch hour joined the "March for Glory," sponsored by newly formed American Citizens for American Citizens.

They carried banners and signs that proclaimed, "Do Not Ask U.S. to Back Down Again," "If the Hostages Die, Iran Dies," and "Allah Bestow More Earthquakes to Iran."

The protesters ranged from businessmen to elderly women to long-haired students. Some wore T-shirts with messages: "I Am Not Iranian" and "Iranians Go Home."

Hundreds filled the sidewalks and leaned out windows, yelling support as the marchers chanted, "Eat your oil" and "Khomeini Go to Hell."

"When one nation violates the principles of all nations, that nation should no longer exist," John Kuehn, 30, told the protesters. "... Should American blood be shed, surely their blood will shortly follow."

"America has united — black, white, Mexican, Jewish," a man yelled from the crowd.

John Conway, who owns a home improvements company, said he joined the march because "it shows the irresponsible people in Iran that we mean business ... We don't plan to submit to blackmail."

Forklift operator Roger Clark, 19, said he would cut his shoulder-length hair and join the Army if the United States takes military action.

"We're behind our country," he said. "Somebody's got to do something."

Organizer Richard Hatch called for the government to withdraw of aid, military training and educational support for Iran.

In Houston, about 30 protesters gathered outside the federal courthouse, where Iranian students were being interviewed by the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service spokesmen in Denton said they found fewer than a dozen Iranian students in violation of their visas during the first day of interviews Thursday.

Officials interviewed 100 to 150 of the estimated 386 Iranian students at North Texas State University. They said they could not estimate the exact number of violations, adding none was arrested or detained.

In Lubbock, government officials confirmed that President Carter's freeze on Iranian assets includes a weekend house once occupied by the son of the shah of Iran.

Ownership of the house, which has a reported value of $285,000, was transferred to Khomeini's regime after the fall of the shah.

Matadors Ramble To 1-AAA Crown

By CHUCK McDONALD
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Woody Hayes would've hung his head and cried if he'd been among the crowd of around 3,500 Friday night at Lowrey Field.

Because here were the Estacado Matadors ignoring every sound offensive priniciple he'd ever expounded and still coming away a 36-14 winner over Canyon. That gave the Matadors their second straight District 1-AAA crown as they close out the regular season with a 5-0 district slate and a 9-1 record.

The Matadors will now meet the winner of the Monahans-Odessa Ector battle to be played today to decide the District 2-AAA represenative. Canyon finishes 4-1 in loop play and 6-4 on the year.

Estacado took Woody's "three-yards and a cloud of dust" philosophy and replaced it with one of its own. For the Matadors it was more like "50-yards and a string of chin-straps."

The Canyon Eagles totally dominated the first half but still found themselves on the short end of a 20-14 score at the intermission.

Almost unbelieveably, Canyon had possession of the football for 18:09 of the first half to Estacado's 5:51. So how did the Mats manage to score three TD's in such a short time period.?

To put it simply, the Matadors were explosive. They had scoring drives — if you could call them drives — of four, three and two plays. In a grand total of nine plays, the Mats had picked up 179 yards and scored three touchdowns.

"We feel like we can score from anywhere on the field," said Estacado's Louis Kelley. "I feel like we've got a lot of weapons in the backfield."

Probably the Mats most awesome weapon Friday night was the Jerry Gray to James Rose pass connection. Those two hooked up for two passes that covered 88 yards and resulted in one touchdown. Gray also passed to Rose for two two-point conversions.

But the Mats had plenty of heroes Friday night, and Kelley was proud of all of them.

"It sure feels good to win this thing," said Kelley. "This year we had the pressure on us and came through — I think this is the first time that the team that's been picked to win it, has.

"The kids really hung in there tonight," he added. "Canyon put it too us in the early going but we came back — and I think that's the sign of a good team."

Canyon stunned the Matadors as it took the opening kickoff and marched 66 yards in seven plays to take a quick 7-0 lead. It was the first time that the Mats have given up a first quarter TD in 10 ballgames.

Quarterback David Harbin hit three passes for 63 yards to key the drive before Barry Watson plowed over from the

Grid Playoff Games Set

Monterey, the winner of District 4-AAAA, will meet 3-AAAA champion Amarillo High in a bi-district playoff game Friday night at Lowrey Field at 7:30 p.m., according to MHS head coach James Odom.

Amarillo advanced to the state playoffs by edging Pampa 13-10 Friday night.

The last time the two teams met in post-season play Monterey edged Amarillo 7-3.

Amarillo (9-1) or Monterey (9-1) will then meet either District 1-AAAA winner El Paso Coronado or 2-AAAA champ El Paso Bel Air in a regional contest the following week. Coronado and Bel Air square off in bi-district play Friday night in the Sun Bowl.

Also in Class AAAA play, 6-AAAA winner Lewisville (9-0-1) takes on 5-AAAA champion Abilene Cooper (10-0) at 7:30 p.m.

Raiders Hope To Bounce Back

By NORVAL POLLARD
Executive Sports Editor

Two Southwest Conference football teams with similar tales of woe in 1979 will be trying to salvage a victory to build upon in 1980 when they collide today in Dallas.

Texas Tech and Southern Methodist, both plagued by injuries and disappointment this grid season, are expected to put it all on the line at 1:30 p.m. in front of a sellout crowd at Texas Stadium.

Tech, which has won three games, lost four and tied two this year, owns a seven-game winning streak over Southern Methodist dating back to 1972. Tech has been victorious in 17 of 26 meetings with the Mustangs. The Red Raiders put up a valiant goal-line stand last year in Lubbock to secure a 19-16 triumph over SMU.

SMU, which brings a 4-5 record into the contest, is coming off a 34-0 romp over Wichita State. The Mustangs jumped out to a 3-0 start this campaign, but were hit hard by injuries and dropped five consecutive outings before rebounding last week.

The most crucial injury suffered by SMU this season came during the third week of battle. Junior quarterback Mike Ford, the second-leading passer in the nation and the NCAA total offense leader as a sophomore, was lost for the year with a knee injury.

Ford was replaced by sophomore Jim Bob Taylor, who has been erratic, but led the Ponies to their highest point output of the year against Wichita State.

Other key starters were in and out of the lineup with a variety of hurts and the Mustangs slumped. SMU enters Saturday's matchup in relatively good physical condition.

"SMU has had some problems the last few week, but Ron Meyer still has a good football team," conceded Tech mentor Rex Dockery earlier this week. "They've had quite a few injuries, but some of their young players are playing again now and that has to help them.

"They are throwing the football more and they have gone back to the I-formation. Obviously they are not as dangerous a passing team without Mike Ford, but they have developed a good running game and there are several of those backs who are capable of breaking the long run at any time."

Dockery is well aware of what losing a starting quarterback can mean to a football team. Two weeks ago against the University of Texas, Red Raider signal-caller Ron Reeves suffered a separated right shoulder and was lost for the remainder of the season.

With Reeves out of commission, Dockery was forced to go with freshman Jim Hart last Saturday against Texas Christian. That game ended in a 3-3 tie.

Today, it will be Hart and Mark James, another first-year player, sharing the field general duties for the Red Raiders. Hart turned in a good performance against TCU, rushing for 67 yards

Brown Guides Hornet's Win

LORENZO (Special) — Lorenzo quarterback Bobby Brown returned a kickoff 80 yards for a score, rushed for another and threw two touchdown strikes to give the Hornets a 35-8 victory over the Petersburg Buffaloes.

The Hornets finished the year at 5-5 for the season and 4-2 in District 4-A action, while the Buffaloes finished at 4-5-1 on the year and 3-3 in District play.

In the first period, Brown threw a 33-yard scoring pass to tight end Todd Jenkins and Arthur Garza added the extra point.

George Roberts added another touchdown for the Hornets in the opening stanza on a 3-yard plunge. Brown passed to Jenkins for the two-point conversion.

Brown scored on a 2-yard run in the second period to give the Hornets a 21-0 buffer at the half.

Brown had his 80-yard kickoff return in the third quarter and Garza added the extra point.

Petersburg got on the board in the third period on a 1-yard quarterback sneak by Todd Shurbet and tailback Mike Phillips ran the ball in for the two points.

Plainview Blisters Coronado

By ERIC GALE
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

PLAINVIEW — A rabbit, the symbol of multiplication, strayed across the field during first quarter of the Coronado-Plainview District 4-AAAA football game here Friday night.

But Coronado absorbed a lesson in division as Plainview split the Mustang defense and reduced the Mustang offense to unimpressive yardage in the course of a 33-13 Bulldog victory.

The Mustangs, who finished the season 5-5 and 1-3 in the district, went no where in their first four possessions of the game. They managed 18 yards on six carries, two pass completions and eight attempts, and threw two interceptions as, for the first half, yardage total was 39.

Those 39 yards translated into a mere two first downs as the Bulldog defense baffled Coronado's offense.

Plainview's offense was at less of a disadvantage as it scored touchdowns on five of six possessions at one point in the game.

After a scoreless first quarter, the Bulldogs marched 75 yards and 220-pound fullback Ervin Davis pushed over from the 1 yard line with 5:30 left in the second period. Stan Sherwood booted the extra point for a 7-0 Plainview lead.

That touchdown ignited a Plainview rampage when, on Coronado's succeeding possession, Ken Storey intercepted an Alan Harp pass to give Plainview field position at the Mustang 43.

Davis, who gained 122 yards in the first half alone, went 43 yards for a touchdown on the very next play. Sherwood again added the point-after for a 14-0 lead with 4:21 remaining in first half.

"We played poorly in the first half, particularly on defense," said Jack Quarles, Coronado coach. "We were in the process of getting completely slaughtered. We knew what we were supposed to do, we just weren't doing it."

Plainview stretched its lead to 33-0 midway through the third quarter.

On the Bulldog's first play of the third quarter, quarterback Jeff Gould fired a 31-yard scoring pass to end D.C. Coleman. That bomb was set up by Michael Black's recovery of a Harp fumble.

Davis scored his third touchdown of the game on a 53-yard ramble with 7:56 left in the third period as Plainview's lead ballooned to 26-0.

Halfback Pat Brown's 54-yard touchdown run two minutes later, and Sherwood's extra point, concluded the Bulldog's scoring and set the stage for a Coronado mini-comeback.

He scored the points himself on a 19-yard touchdown run with 2:02 left in the third quarter. Ricky Melvin kicked the extra point.

Brock, who completed eight passes in 11 attempts for 87 yards, directed another scoring drive on the Mustang's next possession.

This one, a 68-yarder, culminated in fullback Lance Washam's 1-yard run with 6:19 to play in the game.

"It's tough to play well when you're getting bombed," Quarles said. "We were able to get a little bit back at the end. Brock came in and did a real good job. He played well, but we knew he was that kind of player."

When asked why he did not resort to Brock earlier in the debacle, Quarles replied, "I wouldn't second guess myself at all. We probably have some people around who would second guess me; we have a number of them.

"Alan's been our quarterback, has given us the leadership to play well, and he took us to the point we are at. You don't just drop your quarterback."

Plainview finished with 489 yards of total offense and Davis rushed for 202 of those. The Bulldogs generally moved the ball as they pleased and two turnovers within the Coronado 5-yard line prevented more extensive damage.

"Plainview is very capable," Quarles said. "I thought they were the best team in the district. They could have played like this every week — but they haven't until tonight."

Playoffs Set

Friday at Texas Stadium in Irving.

In Class A playoff action, New Deal, the champion of District 3-A, takes on 4-A winner Kress at 7:30 p.m. Friday in Plainview. Also, Seagraves, of 5-A, meets McCamey, 6-A, at a site to be determined today.

In Class AAA play, Estacado (9-1), the winner of District 1-AAA, will meet the winner of tonight's 2-AAA contest between Monahans and Odessa Ector at a site to be determined. San Angelo Lake View, of District 3-AAA, takes on 4-AAA winner Burkburnett at 8 p.m. Friday at Shotwell Stadium in Abilene.

In Class AA action, Muleshoe, 3-AA, and Idalou, 4-AA, officials will meet today to determined the playoff spot between the two schools. Also, Slaton, winner of a coin toss to break a three-way tie between Tahoka and Seminole in District 5-AA, will go against Stamford, the 6-AA winner.

Woebegotten Raiders, Ponies Square Off In Texas Stadium and completing eight of 14 passes for 96 more.

"I think Jim did a fine job considering the circumstances," Dockery said. "He will start for us Saturday, but Mark is also going to see action. I think Mark has come a long way in two weeks and it's important for us to let both of them get game experience."

It's true that both teams have had their share of injuries. But both squads possess healthy athletes who are quite capable of breaking a football game wide open.

SMU has four of the finest freshmen running backs in the country in Eric Dickerson, Charles Waggoner, Craig James and Lott McIlhenny.

Dickerson, who has been hurt at times, has 442 yards rushing in eight games. He will start alongside Waggoner, who is the sixth-leading rusher in the SWC with 612 yards in nine contests.

All-America wide receiver Emanuel Tolbert hasn't had the type of statistical years he did as a sophomore and junior, but he is dangerous. He currently is ranked fifth among conference receivers with 20 catches for 248 yards and one touchdown. Tolbert's seven receptions against Wichita State put him in the conference record book as the career receptions leader.

Senior fullback James Hadnot is the man the Red Raiders call on to move the football. Hadnot leads the SWC in rushing with 1,131 yards in nine games or 125.7 yards per outing. Those figures make him the sixth-leading runner among major college backs.

Hadnot has carried the football 238 times so far in 1979, but he has yet to score a touchdown. He would like to cure that today.

Waiting for Hadnot at the line of scrimmage will be two outstanding defensive linemen. Sophomore Harvey Armstrong, a 6-2, 256-pound sophomore, and senior Charles Hunt, the 6-0, 225-pound noseguard in SMU's odd-man defensive alignment, are considered two of the better down linemen in the league.

The Mustangs also have two outstanding linebackers in junior Byron Hunt and sophomore Eric Ferguson. Sophomore free safety James Mobley is considered one of the finest young secondary men in the SWC.

Tech's defensive unit has overcome injuries to become one of the toughest and stingiest defenses in the conference. The Red Raiders have allowed only 133 points this season.

Senior Larry Flowers, picked as an all-conference strong safety before the season began, missed a great deal of action during the first six games because of an ankle injury.

Flowers' replacement, sophomore Tate Randle, has bloomed into one of the best safeties around. Randle is second in the SWC in interceptions with five and because of his rapid improvement, Tech coaches have left him at strong safety and moved the recovered Flowers to a starting cornerback position.

Dunbar Ends Season Winless In District

DUMAS (Special) — The Dunbar Panthers wound up the season winless in District 1-AAA play, buckling under to the Dumas Demons 30-6.

The Demons ended the year with a 3-7 district mark and 2-3 in district play, while the visiting Panthers could manage only one victory in nine outings.

Dumas received the opening kickoff, and 11 plays later, capped a scoring drive on a 4-yard run by tailback Bobby Norris with 7:15 left in the quarter. Randy Davis kicked the extra point.

After the Panthers lost the ball on a fumble on the following kickoff, the Demons took only two minutes to score after a 7-play drive, which ended when Norris went over from 3 yards out. Davis kicked the PAT.

With 2:12 left in the third quarter, cornerback Jodie Presser intercepted a Panther pass and scored a TD from the 12 yard line. Davis kicked the extra point.

Dumas rushed 229 yards and got 21 first downs, while the Panthers could manage only 51 yards on the ground and 10 first downs.

Springlake Ties Longhorns 21-21

EARTH (Special) — The Springlake-Earth Wolverines and Hart Longhorns, both owning disappointing season slates, were at a standoff at the end of the District 3-A contest, tying 21-21.

The Longhorns have a 3-6-1 mark and the Wolverines own a 2-6-2 record for the season.

The Wolverines were the first to score in the opening period on a 74-yard pass from quarterback Jim Gonzales to halfback Ronnie James. Raymond Olvera kicked the PAT with 9:35 left in the period.

About two minutes later, Wolverine runningback Ronnie James scored on a 65-yard run, but the extra point failed.

Hart quarterback Derek Rich went over from 11 yards out with 3:52 left in the quarter. The extra point kick again failed.

With 8:10 left before the half, Longhorn halfback Isaias Ponce scored on a 4-yard run, and were good for the two-point conversion. On the last play of the half, Rich scored on a quarterback sneak and the PAT was good.

Slaton Gains Playoff Berth Despite 20-0 Setback

By RUSS PARSONS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

TAHOKA — By now it's an old familiar feeling, but that doesn't mean Slaton coach Ed Cook likes it any better. His Tiger football team was beaten 20-0 by Tahoka Friday night, throwing District 5-AA into a three-way tie for the championship.

This makes three years in a row Tahoka has beaten the Tigers in the last week of the season to throw the district into a tie, but it also makes the second year in a row Slaton has won the coin toss to represent the conference in the playoffs. This is the fifth year in a row the district has ended in a tie, and the third time in that span the Tigers have won the right to represent.

"Just put in whatever you want, I don't have anything to say," Cook said when approached outside the visitor's dressing room.

Pressed, he relented. "We just got our ol' tails whipped. They played the kind of football we played last week against Seminole (in a 17-7 win).

"We just didn't get ready for this one emotionally," he said. Asked whether last week's big game against the Indians had any effect, he replied "With everything riding on this one, we shouldn't have had any problem getting up for it."

Unlike the other Tiger losses to Tahoka, Cook didn't have Bulldog boss A.D. Shaver to glare at on the opposite sideline. Shaver's father died Thursday and the coach was home in Seymour making funeral arrangements and so missed the big game — physically, that is.

"Just put in the paper that we played this one for Coach Shaver," one assistant said afterwards. When the team circled up for it's post-game drill, one player was heard to say "Let's do these loud enough for Shaver to hear."

If the exercises weren't loud enough to carry across the distance, the beating probably was. Tahoka soundly whipped the Tigers, outgaining them 238 to 130.

Offensively, the game was supposed to boil down to a matchup between two pairs of talented running backs.

Needless to say, Tahoka's pair (Tracy White and Clifford Oages) took the decision easily. White ran 30 times for 95 yards and Oages 23 times for 93.

Their Tiger counterparts, Lance Bownds and Jesse Titus, were held to 12 carries and 10 yards and 12 carries and 75 yards respectively.

Slaton had it's chances early. The game's first drive ended with a Tiger 49-yard field goal falling well short of its mark and then, later in the second period, Bownd's had a one-yard touchdown run called back by a holding call. Two plays later quarterback Kevin Johnston threw an interception.

Tahoka got on the board first, on the last play of the first half.

Capping a 46-yard drive that started with a Danny Thompson recovery of a Johnston fumble, Tahoka quarterback Todd Brown found receiver Johnny Alvarado in the corner of the end zone for a six-yard scoring pass. It was his only completion of the game.

Later, in the third period, Tahoka moved 40 yards to set up a 16-yard scoring run by Oages. He turned the corner on the sweep, ripped clear of the Slaton pursuit and dove across the goal line for the score. Kevin Elmore's kick made it 13-0 Tahoka with 4:32 left in the period.

Despite the relative closeness of the score, Slaton never really mounted a threat after Bownd's called back touchdown and Johnston's interception.

The closest the Tigers could get to smelling paydirt was the Tahoka 46, and the way the Bulldog defense played, that was a long way away.

Pair Leads Longhorns Over Idalou In 15-13 Upset Win

LOCKNEY (Special) — Lockney will probably get a note of thanks from Abernathy as the Longhorns upset Idalou 15-13, throwing District 4-AA into a tie for the league title between Idalou and Abernathy.

Despite the loss, however, Idalou will still represent the district in bi-district action next week by virtue of a 26-6 win over Abernathy earlier this year. Both teams posted 3-1 district marks to share the crown.

The win enabled Lockney to close out the year at 5-4-1 on the season and the Wildcats are 8-2.

A 76-yard sprint by Curtis Ford for one touchdown and a blocked punt return by Byron Brock for another score led the way for the Longhorns in their upset victory.

Idalou fullback Robin Reyes scored in the second quarter on a 15-yard run before Brock returned the blocked punt for Lockney's second period touchdown. Steve Warren added a Lockney field goal but the Longhorns trailed 13-9 at the half.

Ford had 175 yards on 21 carries to lead Lockney's 246 yards in total rushing.

Luna's Rushing Leads Antelopes Past Tigers

WOLFFORTH (Special) — Post's tailback Alonzo Luna grounded out 305 yards rushing on 26 carries to lead the Antelopes to a 35-13 slashing of the Frenship Tigers.

The Antelopes wind up with a 6-3-1 mark for the season while the Tigers managed only two victories in 10 outings.

Luna got the first TD with 4:29 left in the opening period when he scored on a 2-yard leap, followed by a successful PAT by Larry Rodriguez. Luna continued to frustrate the Tigers, scoring on an 82-yard gallop with 1:37 left before the second period. Rodriguez again was good on the extra point.

Frenship put the only second quarter score on the board when quarterback Pat Molina rifled a 62-yard pass to split end Victor Buggs. Steve Bradford booted the extra point.

Post quarterback Drew Kirkpatrick opened up the scoring after the half on a 6-yard run and Rodriguez kicked. Still in the third quarter, Luna tallied again on a 38-yard run, followed by a Rodriguez-boot.

Chaparrals Host OCC

OKLAHOMA CITY (Special) — Short on manpower but making up for it with accuracy, the Lubbock Christian College basketballers will run into a team tonight which it knows well.

The Chaparrals will play host Oklahoma Christian College in a 7:30 p.m. contest, and the hosts already hold a decision over LCC. OCC won in Lubbock last week, and the Chaparrals will enter tonight's game with a 2-2 record.

They have split at home and on the road and tonight will be opening a five-game swing into Oklahoma. Next Tuesday, they will play Panhandle State at Goodwell.

The Chaparrals are playing but eight men, with the eighth, Mike Buckner having played but four minutes each in the last two games.

As a team, however, the Chaparrals are hitting 58.4 percent, headed by the 67.6 effort of 6-7 postman Kevin Wharton. Forward Keith Gardner is hitting 67.3 percent.

Coach Larry Hayes will go with the 6-6 Gardner and 6-6 Jim Steensma at forwards, Wharton at center, and 6-2 Bruce Gardner and 6-0 Marshall Smith at guards.

The two reserves, in addition to Buckner, are Bill McGee and Rick Murdock.

Gardner, selected the school's athlete of the week after hitting a school record 33 points in a home game last week, is leading the team in scoring with a 24.5 point average. Gardner is hitting 17.8 per game, Wharton 13.3, Steensma 9.8 and Smith 7.2. Wharton and Gardner lead in rebounding with respective 9.8 and 9.0 averages.

Tonight's game will be LCC's third in a week. LCC tripped Jarvis Christian Monday but fell to Paul Quinn Tuesday night.

Seminole Blasts Cooper To Earn Tie For Crown

SEMINOLE (Special) — Seminole's 61-0 blasting of the Lubbock Cooper Pirates put the Indians in a three-way tie with Tahoka and Slaton for the District 5-AA championship. However, a coin toss late Friday night gave Slaton the right to represent the district in the playoffs.

Seminole finished the season with a record of 8-2 for the season, and 5-1 in the district. Cooper finished with a 2-8 season record, and was 0-6 in district play.

For the Indians, Jim Hill carried 26 times for 255 yards and scored four touchdowns. All four of those came in the second half. He scored on runs of 56, 2, 8 and 4 yards.

Another Indian, Ricky Greene, gained 226 yards on nine carries and caught two passes for 65 yards. He also scored touchdowns on runs of 8, 57 and 76 yards and scored on a 39-yard pass from quarterback Mike Grass.

Panthers Clip Andrews 21-14

ANDREWS (Special) — Fort Stockton quarterback Robbie Roberson passed for one touchdown and ran for another to lift the Panthers to a 21-14 win over the Andrews Mustangs.

Andrews ended the season with a 7-3 record for the year and a 1-3 District 2-AAA record.

Fort Stockton's Tomas Rodriguez scored the first of the Panthers' three touchdowns on a 1-yard plunge in the opening period. Billy Ray added the extra point.

Andrews quarterback Keith Brooks scored on an 8-yard run and Van Eisenbach added the extra point.

'Cats Frustrate Mustangs 33-0

LITTLEFIELD (Special) — Littlefield tailback Ruben Torres scored three touchdowns to lead the Wildcats to a 33-0 thumping of the Olton Mustangs in District 3-AA action.

Littlefield finished the season with an 8-1-1 record, while Olton closed out with a disappointing 2-8 record.

Torres first score came early in the first quarter when he blasted 62 yards for a touchdown. Another first quarter score came when Joe Paul McCanick scored on a 26-yard run.

ENMU Closes 1979 Season

PORTALES, N.M. -The Eastern New Mexico Greyhounds close out their 1979 football season today at 12:30 p.m. against Fort Hays State in Hays, Kan.

The Greyhounds are currently 4-5 and will be seeking a victory to even their record at 5-5. Fort Hays State is presently 4-6.

Last season the Tigers downed the Greyhounds 14-6 to mark Fort Hays' first victory over ENMU in the five meetings between the two schools.

Longhorns Trample Farwell 27-13

FARWELL (Special) — Vega edged out the Farwell Steers 27-13 Friday night, putting both teams in a tie for second in District 3-A.

Vega finished the season with a 6-3-1 and 3-2 record, while Farwell finished 3-6-1 and 3-2.

Vega scored in the first quarter when Brian Cannon ran the ball in from 12 yards out. Rob Groves scored for the Longhorns in the second quarter on a 6-yard run.

Matadors Explode Past Canyon

four. With the PAT it was 7-0 and the Eagles looked like they were going to get more.

But on third-and-long, cornerback George Irven came up with a big interception to get the Mats out of trouble. One possession later, Estacado began to rumble.

On third-and-10, Gray found Rose open for a 34-yard gainer down to the CHS 22. On the next play Gray connected with Preston Davis for a TD and Kenneth Cade's point-after kick tied it at 7-7.

That was the first explosion. The drive covered 54 yards in four plays and took just over a minute off the clock.

Then, on a third-and-eight, Gray threw on the dead run to Rose who was well-covered. Canyon's Gary Fletcher deflected the pass but Rose still came up with it and sprinted 15-yards down the sideline for the score.

Bang — the Mats had gone 56 yards in three plays to lead 14-7.

But Canyon came back with a textbook drive that covered 68-yards in 14 plays and nearly seven minutes to tie the contest at 14. Watson again picked up the TD going 11 yards off tackle.

Let's see, the first Matador drive had taken four plays, the second one took three — so it should've been obvious that they would need only two plays this time.

And that's exactly what happened. Fullback Alvin Davis, who finished the night with 102 yards on only six carries, burst off-tackle for 29 yards down to the CHS 40.

On the next play, Gray faked the outside pitch, spun completely around and rambled 40 yards right up the gut of the Canyon defense.

Blam, it was 20-16 (the PAT kick failed) and the Eagles were not to threaten Estacado again.

"We just don't have that kind of speed."

Estacado put the game out of reach in the third period when the Mats scored again on another incredible two-play drive.

Starting at their own 42, the Mats gave the ball to tailback Kelvin White who rambled for 28 yards down to the CHS 30. On the next play the give was to Alvin Davis who powered for 30 yards and the TD. Gray passed to Rose for the two-point play and it was 28-14.

Linebacker Kenneth Davis made a diving interception on Canyon's next series and the Mats went 34 yards in nine — things were getting tough — plays for the night's final score.

Preston Davis scored his second touchdown of the game as he juked his way over from three yards out. Again Gray hit Rose for the two-pointer for the game's final 36-14 margin.

After giving up 156 yards and 11 first downs in the opening half, the Estacado defense stiffened and Canyon wound up with 244 total yards and 16 first downs. Still the Canyon stats were the best any team has done against the Mats all year.

But CHS quarterback Harbin, who opened the game with three straight completions, finished five-of-18 for 68 yards.

Offensively, it was a grand night for the Mats. They managed 19 first downs, 426 yards of total offense and their biggest point production of the year.

After being held to only 13 yards in the first half, tailback White finished with 124 on 17 carries to lead all rushers.

"White started hitting the seam in the second half," said Kelley, "and he really started running. But we had a lot of good performances tonight.

"I guess you have to though, to have the kind of season that we've had.

"Right now I don't care who we play," said Kelley. "We're just glad to be here."

Redskins Picked To Whip Cowboys In Renewal Of Long Rivalry

By The Associated Press

The history of the Dallas Cowboys-Washington Redskins games is one of total, unrelenting, take-no-prisoners warfare. Things will be no different this Sunday.

A year ago, when the Cowboys invaded the nation's capital, Mark Moseley kicked their teeth in with field goals of 52, 42 and 27 yards for a 9-5 National Football League victory.

Moseley's talented toes may well be the difference this time, too. Our guess is that the Redskins, in the week's Upset Special, will down Dallas and turn the National Conference East race into a mad scramble that won't be decided until the season's final Sunday.

This week's picks:

WASHINGTON 23, DALLAS 20: It could just as easily go the other way (that's called hedging) but the Cowboys have looked sick for the better part of a month and the Redskins are not the kind of team to cure them. Still, it's nice to see an NFC division with two teams worth watching.

PITTSBURGH 28, SAN DIEGO 20: The Steelers have allowed 7, 3, 7 and 3 points in their last four games. The Chargers should equal that total — but it still won't be enough in this possible preview of the American Conference championship.

TAMPA BAY 14, N.Y. GIANTS 13: New York handed the Bucs their first loss — and the Bucs will respond accordingly.

CHICAGO 28, N.Y. JETS 17: Clark Gaines plus Scott Dierking plus Kevin Long doesn't equal Walter Payton.

OAKLAND 31, KANSAS CITY 10: They used to stage great gunfights — but the Chiefs are low on ammo.

DENVER 20, SAN FRANCISCO 14: The Broncos force mistakes.

Amarillo High Rallies To Snare 3-AAAA Crown

AMARILLO (Special) — Mark Mathiasmeier scored on a 32-yard run with 1:25 left in the game to lift Amarillo High to a 13-10 come-from-behind win over Pampa in a crucial District 3-AAAA football contest Friday night.

The Sandies, now 9-1 overall and 4-0 in district play, now advance to the bi-district playoffs where they will meet Monterey at 7:30 p.m. at Lowrey Field.

Pampa jumped out to an early 7-0 lead on a 5-yard run by Arthur Williams and a Billy Grimes PAT kick.

However, AHS, which rolled up 209 yards of total offense, managed to cut the lead to 7-6 on a 1-yard burst by Ty Richmond. The PAT kick was blocked.

The Harvesters took a 10-6 lead into the halftime lockerroom thanks to a 20-yard field goal as time was running out in the second period.

The two teams then battled to a scoreless draw in the third period before Mathiasmeier, the leading ground gainer for both teams with 79 yards on 12 carries, raced in for the winning score.

Had Pampa won the game then it would have advanced to the playoffs opposite MHS.

Highly-Ranked Seagraves Breezes Past Ropes 42-0

SEAGRAVES (Special) — The highly-touted Seagraves Eagles embarassed the Ropesville Eagles, running for 533 yards in a 42-0 District 5-A victory.

Undefeated Seagraves, ranked high in state polls, owns a birth in the bi-district championship contest next week against McCamey.

Following a scoreless first period, Seagraves opened up in the second quarter when fullback Davis Morgan scored on a 2-yard run. Morgan then kicked the extra point. Still in the same period, Morgan went over again on a 1-yard leap, but the PAT failed.

Seagraves showed their strength in the third quarter, scoring 21 points against the underdog Ropesville team.

Morgan, who wound up with 114 yards for the game, scored from 9 yards out, but the 2-point conversion pass failed. Halfback Ronnie Griffin was the next to get points when he scored on a 3-yard gallop. Morgan ran for the 2-point conversion.

Still in the third quarter, Griffin broke free for a 63-yard scoring run, and Wayne Mahler booted the extra point. Griffin led in the rushing statistics, pounding out 178 yards.

In the final period, Seagraves fullback Lynn Addison went over from 2 yards out, and quarterback Richard Pollock passed to end Richard Espinoza for the 2 points.

Other rushing standout for Seagraves were Johnny Castro with 108 yards and Addison with 107 yards.

Seagraves, who never had to punt in the game, are ranked third in the United Press International poll and fourth in the Associated Press books.

Mule Mania Defeats Indians 27-8

MULESHOE (Special) — Muleshoe halfback Zeke Pesina scored on runs of 12 and 18 yards to lead the Mules to a 27-8 romp over District 3-AA rival Morton.

The Mules now are 8-1-1 for the year and 5-0 in district play while the Indians fell to 5-4-1 on the year and 3-2 in district action.

Muleshoe quarterback Mike Northcutt scored on a 3-yard run in the first period while halfback Felix Norman added another in the second quarter on a 27-yard dash and Pesina scored his first touchdown to give the Mules a 20-0 halftime lead.

Pesina scored again in the third period on a 18-yard run and Sam Whalin added the extra point.

Chiefs Pound Lamesa 38-0

LAMESA (Special) — Running back Randy Cornelius returned the opening kickoff 94 yards for a touchdown to lead the San Angelo Lake View Chiefs to a 38-0 shut out of the Lamesa Golden Tornadoes.

Cornelius scored his second touchdown in the second quarter on a 1-yard plunge and Gonzales added the two-point conversion.

Chiefs quarterback Bly scored in the second quarter on a 4-yard run. Also in the second period, Bly threw a 30-yard scoring pass to split end Rex Ford and the kick by Medders was good.

Gonzalez scored the Chiefs' fourth touchdown in the first half on a 10-yard run and Medders added the extra point to make it 35-0 at the half.

Shallowater Demolishes Winless Bulldogs 51-12

ANTON (Special) — The Shallowater Mustangs exploded for 20 points in the second quarter and 19 in the fourth en route to a 51-12 victory over Anton in District 5-A action Friday night.

Anton finished at 0-9-1 while Shallowater finished at 7-2-1 (5-2 in District).

Quarterback Neal Luck led the Mustangs' romp with a 20-yard run to paydirt in the first quarter, a 25-yard TD pass to Glen Kersey and a 30-yard TD pass to Robert Maldanado in the second quarter.

Quarterback Jungman took over in the second quarter and ran 12 yards for a TD and then fired a 20-yard TD pass to Kersey in the final quarter. Maldanado scored from 1 yard out in the final stanza to round out the TDs for the Mustangs for the night.

Oakley booted three PAT kicks for the winners.

Runners Vie For Regional Honors Today

It's some 400 miles to Austin, and schoolboys from as far away as El Paso will be running two miles here this morning. For many of them, that two miles will be just far enough to make it to Austin.

Two regional cross-country meets, for all classes of UIL schools, will be staged here this morning, with both boys and girls teams bidding for spots in next weekend's state meet.

Class AAAA schools will be competing in Class A, and all other classifications will run under the Class B designation today.

Competition begins at 10 a.m. at Mae Simmons Park, 19th and Quirt, with the Class B girls starting the morning's competition. Class A girls will follow at 10:30, followed at 11 a.m. by Class B boys and at 11:30 by the Class A boys.

The top three teams (five members each) will make it to the state meet from each classiciation. Also, if any individuals from other schools finish among the top ten spots, they will rate tickets to the state meet. Actually, the state meet will not be held in Austin, but nearby, in Georgetown.

The individual battles could be the strongest among the Class B girls, where the top three finishers in last year's regional will be returning.

Brownfield's Elizabeth Holguin is the defending champion, having covered the two-mile course in 12:27. Second a year ago was Hope Fullwood of Highland with Abernathy's Ramona Irlbeck third. However, Miss Irlbeck was second in district earlier this month, coming in behind Tulia's Sherrie Painter.

Class A girls will find El Paso High's Patsy Norman returning as defending champion. She ran 12:15 to win a year ago. Mindee Mayfield of Monterey, who set a new district record last week, will lead her team. She was tenth individually a year ago in regiona.

Buffaloes Stampede Past Forsan 50-6

STANTON (Special) — The Stanton Buffaloes rushed 294 yards and tacked on 136 more yards in the air to crush the Forsan Buffaloes 50-6 in a District 5-A contest.

Stanton scored 20 points in the opening quarter, 16 in the second period and 14 more in the final period, while Forsan could get only 6 in the third quarter on a 1-yard run by fullback D.F. Stanley.

Stanton has a 3-2-1 slate in district play and Forsan owns a 1-5 record.

Fumbles Aid Wildcat Win

HOBBS (Special) — Hobbs fumbled six times and Clovis scored after four of them to lead the Wildcats to a 34-14 victory and a berth in the District 4-AAAA playoffs next week.

Clovis' defensive back Scott Schmidt ran back the ensuing kick off 90 yards for the Wildcats first score of the game. Jay Wright added the extra point.

Evans Wins 7-0, Captures Title

Howard Alford scored on a 1-yard run and Stewart Brann kicked the extra point to give Evans a 7-0 win over Matthews in the ninth grade city championship Friday.

Matthews had defeated Evans 24-12 earlier in the season. Both teams finished the year with 8-1 records.

Snyder Ends Season With 21-0 Victory

SNYDER (Special) — Fullback Bobby Degrate ran for a first-quarter TD from 1 yard out and then quarterback Mike Roemisch fired a pair of TD passes in the second and third quarters to lead Snyder's Tigers to a 21-0 win over the Brownfield Cubs here Friday night.

Snyder finished the year with a 6-4 slate, 3-1 in District 3-AAA play, while Brownfield dropped to 3-7 and 2-2.

Sterling City Klondike Meet For 3-B Title

COLORADO CITY (Special) -The champions of District 3-B's East and West zones will meet here at 7:30 tonight to decide the loop championship and who will get the playoff berth that accompanies it.

Sterling City, which won the east zone last weekend with a 14-0 win over Jayton, will play West Zone champ Klondike, holders of a perfect 10-0 record and the No. 1 team on the South Plains.

Klondike boasts awesome statistics both offensively and defensively. The Cougars are gaining an average of 360 yards a game while allowing only 130.

Most of their running chores are handled by Lonny Ferguson, who is averaging 135 yards running the ball. Included in that total are two games over 200 yards.

Bulldogs End Year With 20-0 Victory

Levelland finished the year at 3-7.

Sedrick Love ran 3 yards for the first Borger TD in the second quarter. Shawn Harrington passed 27 yards to Brett Foster for another TD in the third quarter.

Bobcats Kill Friona 28-2

FRIONA (Special) — Dimmitt Bobcat tailback Jimmy Stewart was tackled in his own end zone here Friday night less than four minutes after the opening kickoff for a safety, but the speedy youngster made into the Friona end zone twice before the final gun to lead Dimmitt to a 28-2 win over Friona.

Defensive end Scott Fangman put Stewart to the turf in the Dimmitt end zone for Friona's only points for the night.

San Angelo Crushes Big Spring 42-14

SAN ANGELO (Special) — The San Angelo Bobcats pounced on the Big Spring Steers 42-12 in a District 5-AAAA contest.

The Bobcats scored 14 points in each of the quarters before the half and got 7 more in each of the remaining periods. The Steers could muster up only 6 points in the second and final periods.

Bowl Picture Should Clear Up Partially Today

By The Associated Press

And even the high-and-mighty Rose Bowl has suddenly rejoined the ranks of the worriers with the possibility that it might lose unbeaten-but-tied, fourth-ranked Southern California.

With second-ranked Ohio State and No.13 Michigan preparing to square off for the Big Ten berth in Pasadena, the Pacific-10 Conference dropped a bombshell Thursday night by ruling that Arizona State must forfeit its three league victories because it used eight ineligible players.

Since one of those triumphs was over Washington, the decision thrust the 16th-ranked Huskies back into the Rose Bowl picture with a 5-1-0 Pac-10 record to 5-0-1 for Southern Cal, which is idle Saturday while Washington entertains Washington State. Southern Cal winds up its regular season next week against UCLA.

By Saturday evening, the Rose Bowl will know its visiting team — Ohio State can lose to Michigan and still go to Pasadena if No.12 Purdue wins at Indiana — but the host squad could be in doubt unless Washington State upsets Washington.

That, however, is small potatoes compared to the plight of the Sugar Bowl. Unranked Georgia, a four-time loser, can win a trip to New Orleans by beating No.15 Auburn at home and there's nothings top-rated Alabama can do about it, even though the Crimson Tide is fit to be tied with Georgia atop the Southeastern Conference.

If Georgia loses, though, Alabama can represent the SEC and dry those Sugar Bowl tears by defeating Auburn on Dec.1. The Tide entertains Miami, Fla., in a non-league game as the second half of an ABC-TV doubleheader which begins with Ohio State at Michigan (11:30 p.m. CST).

Third-ranked Nebraska tunes up for next week's Big Eight-Orange Bowl showdown with Oklahoma by hosting Iowa State while the seventh-ranked Sooners visit Missouri.

In the frantic Southwest Conference-Cotton Bowl chase, fifth-ranked Texas entertains Texas Christian and No.8 Arkansas visits Texas A&M while ninth-ranked Houston has the week off. All three leaders have one loss apiece.

Rounding out The Associated Press Top Ten, fifth-ranked Florida State plays host to Memphis State in a night game while No.10 Brigham Young puts its Western Athletic Conference lead on the line against runner-up Utah at home.

Elsewhere in the Second Ten, No.11 Pitt visits Army, No.14 Clemson is at Notre Dame, No.17 Wake Forest at South Carolina, No.18 Temple at Penn State and No.19 Tennessee vs. Mississippi at Jackson while Baylor hosts Rice and Tulane, tied with Baylor for 20th, is idle.

Ohio State-Michigan is the weekend's only meeting of two Top Twenty teams and one of them will be the Big Ten's Rose Bowl representative for the 12th year in a row. A standing room only crowd of around 104,000 is expected in Michigan Stadium.

"It will be a great game because it is a great rivalry," says Earle Bruce, who has led Ohio State to a 10-0 record in his first year as head coach. "I know from my days here as a player, and later as an assistant coach, there's nothing quite like an Ohio State-Michigan game.

"We expect a great, great game. We have waited for this moment all year long. It's great to be playing a team like Michigan for the title. That's what it's all about. It really doesn't matter whether Michigan won or lost last week. The important thing is what happens this week."

What happened to Michigan last week was a 24-21 loss to Purdue.

Welsh Among Choices

BALTIMORE (AP) — Navy football Coach George Welsh is a leading candidate to take the same job at LSU next year, the Baltimore News American said Friday.

The paper quoted unidentified sources in New Orleans as saying that Welsh was one of three coaches being considered to succeed Charlie McClendon, who has been the Tigers' coach for 18 years.

The other top candidates are North Carolina State's Bo Rein and Arkansas' Lou Holtz, the paper said.

The LSU Board of Supervisors has decided to replace McClendon after this season. McClendon has compiled a 134-58-7 mark at LSU, including a 5-4 log this year.

Capt. J.O. "Bo" Coppedge, Navy's athletic director, said LSU officials had received permission to talk with Welsh about the job.

Welsh, in his seventh year as Navy's coach, declined to comment on the News American report.

"I don't have anything to say, at least until the season's over," said Welsh, whose team is 6-3 and being considered for its second consecutive bowl appearance.

"I've decided at this time of the season that I shouldn't say anything," he continued. "I know from the past that for three or four weeks, that's all I'm going to hear.

"I don't want to jeopardize our football team. We still have two games to play and we're on a three-game losing streak ... I still have a job here. I don't want to comment any further than that."

For the last three years, reports have surfaced that Welsh was on his way to a bigger football school. But he has remained at Navy, where he was a star quarterback in the 1950's, and helped returned the academy grid program to respectability.

Tony Perez Traded To Red Sox

BOSTON (AP) — Veteran Tony Perez, a slugging first baseman whose 1975 World Series home run still haunts Boston, agreed to terms Friday for a guaranteed three-year contract with the Red Sox.

The 37-year-old former Cincinnati Reds star, who has played with the Montreal Expos for the past three seasons, is viewed as the replacement for another right-handed slugger, Bob Watson, signed off the Red Sox roster as a free agent by the New York Yankees.

Perez played 12 seasons with the Reds and helped Cincinnati to a seven-game comeback by blasting Bill Lee's sixth inning blooper pitch far into the night.

Lockwood, a native of Norwood, Mass., pitched for the New York Mets last season but arm trouble idled him the second half of the season.

Perez' lifetime batting average is .283 with 2,238 hits, 323 home runs and 1,357 RBI. For the Expos last year, he slumped to .270 in 132 games with 13 homers and 73 RBI.

He will be used as both a first baseman and designated hitter, as was Watson — who had been acquired from Houston last June.

The loss of Watson to New York had left the Red Sox with only 40-year-old Carl Yastrzemski as a potential first baseman. Catcher Carlton Fisk — whose mysterious elbow injury made him a spectator most of 1979 — also was mentioned.

Arizona State Forced To Forfeit Three Games

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Arizona State University's academic counselor for athletics said Friday he was under constant orders from former football coach Frank Kush to keep players academically eligible or face dismissal.

At the same time, ASU on Friday lowered its 1979 football record to 0-9 and braced for additional penalties in the wake of an extension course scandal that cost eight players their eligibility.

He said Kush, suspended on Oct. 13, threatened to fire him on several occasions and that the pressure always increased as the football season neared.

"There was never any doubt as to what Frank felt my role was," said Rehfield.

On Thursday, the university declared the eight Sun Devil players academically ineligible for the remainder of the season, and the Pacific 10 Conference ruled the school must forfeit its league victories over Washington, Washington State and Oregon State.

The action stemmed from an extension course offered in Gardena, Calif., last summer by Rocky Mountain College of Billings, Mont. The eight players had claimed credit for the course, but the university said the eight have admitted that they had not met any of the course's requirements.

The forfeits revised ASU's league record from 3-3 to 0-6 and had the effect of putting the University of Washington back into the Rose Bowl picture.

On Friday, Dick Mullins, ASU sports information director, said the school also would offer to forfeit nonconference victories over Toledo and Utah State.

"For all intents and purposes, we are 0-9," he said.

Meanwhile, Rehfield explained that his role concerning the course was to collect the money for it from the players and to write the college to request that the transcripts be sent to ASU.

"I was not made aware of any class attendance requirements or work requirements," he added.

In a statement, ASU Athletic Director Fred Miller said:

"I regret that ASU has had to declare football players ineligible because Rocky Mountain College has withdrawn transfer degree credits which were previously awarded to those players."

"I have the deepest respect for those eight players who testified honestly and forthrightly about the extension course, despite the fact that they knew the information they provided jeopardized their continuing eligibility."

The statement went on, "... it would be unjust for them to bear the responsibility alone. The responsibility ... rests in the first instance on the head football coach and the academic advisers to the athletic department and in the second instance on those who actually had a responsibility to actually conduct the extension course."

An anonymous phone call received by Miller early in October brought the Rocky Mountain case to his attention.

"The minute we started checking into the information provided by the caller, we realized it was accurate," Miller said.

One of the eight players, fullback Arthur Lane, said Rehfield filed their applications to attend the Rocky Mountain class using false California addresses for the players.

Rehfield declined to respond to Lane's remarks, except to emphasize that he was under continuing pressure by Kush to ensure that the players earned enough credits to be eligible to play.

New Deal Overwhelms Crosbyton 49-0

CROSBYTON (Special) — The New Deal Lions, who clinched the District 4-A championship last week, scored on their first and third possessions of the game to begin a 49-0 slaughter over the Crosbyton Chiefs.

The Lions, 9-1 for the season and undefeated in district play, combat the Kress Kangaroos for the bi-district championship. The Chiefs are 6-4 for the season and 3-3 in district.

With 10:27 left in the second quarter, Adams leaped over from the 1-yard line and then kicked the PAT. About five minutes later, Lion end Russell Nichols snatched a 9-yard TD pass from quarterback Ricky Smith. Adams kicked.

The Lions mustered only 7 points in the third quarter which came with 3:03 showing on the clock when Smith scored on a 1-yard quarterback sneak, followed by an Adams boot.

Lion second-team quarterback Keith Venable contributed to the rout when he rifled a 4-yard TD pass to Adams with 6:38 showing in the final period. Adams got the extra point.

The Lions were good for 22 first downs and 332 yards rushing, compared to a meager 19 yards on the ground and three first downs for Crosbyton. New Deal completed two of four passing attempts, both for touchdowns, while the Chiefs completed two of 12 passing tries for 23 yards. The outmatched team suffered three interceptions.

New Deal used eight runningbacks, and Howell led the field with 72 yards on 15 carries.

Osuna Guides McAdoo Past Spade 45-44

MCADOO (Special) — Hector Osuna tossed in 15 points to lead McAdoo to a 45-44 win over Spade here Friday night. McAdoo also took the girls' game, 41-28 behind the 12-point scoring of Linda Childers.

Bill Reed led the Spade scoring with 14 points. C. Caddel paced the Spade girls with 12.

McAdoo's girls are 4-0 and the boys, 3-1. Spade's girls are 1-4 and the boys are 4-1.

DAWSON SWEEPS NEW HOME

Joel Bennet hit 21 points as Dawson defeated New Home 46-44 in boy's basketball play. Marty McClintock led New Home with 15 points. It was the season opener for both teams.

In girl's play, Dawson (1-1) defeated New Home 46-43 as Karen Gartmen poured in 18 points.

SMYER DOWNS LOOP

Smyer is 1-0 and Loop 0-1.

WELLMAN RIPS WESTERN HILLS

Bill Pankersley poured in 21 points to lead Wellman to a 57-41 victory over Western Hills and spoil the WH homecoming.

Wellman is 1-0 and WH, 2-4. Jeff Shadden led WH with 14 points.

In the girls' game, Wellman romped to a 54-14 triumph behind the the 8-point effort of Pam Reine. Julie Harrelson scored 6 for WH. Wellman is 1-0 and WH, 0-5.

ABERNATHY TRIUMPHS

Ramona Irlbeck and Carrie Lutrick both poured in 14 points apiece to lead Abernathy to a 47-45 double-overtime win over Plainview at the AHS gym Friday night. Gay Hemphill hit 27 points for the Bulldogs.

It was the season opener for both teams.

Floydada Clips Hornets 18-14

TULIA (Special) — Floydada ended the season with a 6-4 won-loss record by defeating Tulia 18-14 in a District 4-AA matchup.

The Whirlwinds got a first-quarter TD when split end Tracy Womack scored from 11 yards out. Joey Luna's PAT kick failed, leaving FHS with a 6-0 lead.

Floydada continued to roll in the third period as fullback Mack Collins scored on a 3-yard run and Troy Marquis bulled over from 2-yards out. Both conversion attempts failed.

Tulia managed to get on the scoreboard in the final period on a 5-yard run by tailback Kevin Crooks and a 64-yard pass from quarterback Wade Littlefield to split end Kirk Thompson. Anthony Davis booted both PAT kicks.

Cowboys Edge O'Donnell 7-6

O'DONNELL (Special) — Lance Williams' 8-yard touchdown run in the first quarter and the extra point kick by John Curtis was enough to give the Plains Cowboys a 7-6 win over the O'Donnell Eagles in District 5-A action.

Plains finished its season with a 6-4 record, while O'Donnell was 3-5-2.

Mustangs Edge Roosevelt

DENVER CITY (Special) — The Denver City Mustangs edged the Roosevelt Eagles, 14-8, to close out action in District 5-AA.

Both teams finished the season with 4-6 records.

Denver City scored again late in the fourth quarter when quarterback David Milligan threw a 5-yard scoring strike to end Steve Adcock. Brewer kicked the extra point.

Hale Center Kicks Jackrabbits 35-0

RALLS (Special) — Halfback Gordon Compton ran 23, 4 and 2 yards to TDs and fullback Robert Smith scored from 4 and 1 yards out as the Hale Center Owls kicked Ralls here Friday night 35-0.

Kress Whips Bovina 28-6

BOVINA (Special) — District 3-A champions Kress Kangaroos whipped the Bovina Mustangs 28-6 and will play District 4-A champion New Deal Friday in Plainview.

Kress' record in district play was perfect 5-0, while Bovina was 0-5.

The Kangaroos first score came in the first quarter when quarterback Henry Amardor threw a 35-yard scoring strike to end Thomas Young. Amardo also kicked the extra point. Kress picked up a safety when Larry Monkers tackled Bovina quarterback Len Read in the end zone.

The Kangaroos scored twice in the second quarter, on a 44-yard touchdown pass from Glenn Carroll to Young and on a 20-yard run by Michael Williams.

Amardor scored for the Kangaroos final score in the third quarter when he ran the ball in from 3 yards out.

Coronado Cagers Launch Season Tonight

SAM LAW

SCOTT WILLIAMS

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

It isn't the lack of Coronado's size that seems to be worrying head coach Barry Arnwine these days — it's all that peach fuzz on that lack of size.

"We can compensate for size," commented Arnwine on the eve of CHS' season basketball opener against Odessa Permian tonight at 7:30 p.m. in the Mustang gym. "But we can't compensate for the lack of experience, especially on the front line."

Only guards Sam Law (6-2) and Scott Williams (5-11) are back off the starting lineups from a Coronado team that finished last season with a 16-11 won-loss mark. Jimmy Johnson (6-0), Dwain Neff (6-2) and Kirk Johnson (6-4) are the only returning lettermen, to boot. But none of the three saw much playing time a year ago, Arnwine commented.

"We're going to have to get a lot of playing time in early," continued the second-year head man. "And I mean a substanial amount of playing time, too. That way we can gain some experience before district (4-AAAA) play starts."

"It looks like we were cut out of the same mold," noted Arnwine. "Look, we're 6-2 all the way down the list. Overall our size is pretty decent, that is if you take all five starters and then divide by five. We're not that short."

And then the experience subject popped up again.

"I'll tell you," said Arnwine, "that's what bothers me. We'll just have to utilize our personel the best we can until we get more experience."

On a pleasant note, Arnwine believes CHS is more-than-blessed at the guard position, or as the coach calls it "at quarterback."

"We're very stable there," said Arnwine. "Scott (Williams) is by far the best shooter on the team...and we've got some good shooters. And Sam (Law) can play either guard or forward. We've got some depth there."

Law, however, will be moved to forward this year after playing the guard slot as a junior.

Arnwine believes that until Monterey is knocked off the top of the hill, then the Plainsmen will have to be considered the conference favorite one more time. MHS has not lost a district contest in two years and has also won six of the last nine titles.

"Monterey deserves it (the pre-season nod)," commented Arnwine. "But I'll guarantee we'll be battling them tooth and nail, all the way. We haven't given them the title yet and neither has any of the other schools. They'll have to work for it."

Along with winning a district crown, Arnwine also hopes to start building a winning tradition at Coronado, a school that has had only four winning season in its history. Because of the mild success last year, Arnwine believes the program is moving in the right direction.

"We made strides last year," said Arnwine. "But what we have to do is become more consistent. We have to build up that winning momentum and sustain it.

"For example, Monterey wins games by intimidation. We aren't able to do that. We have to go out and work for what we get."

For now.

Bob Hope Impressed With Energy Level Of College Students

CHICAGO (AP) — Bob Hope thinks college students of today have so much energy that they must have borrowed some from Three Mile Island.

America's funnyman says he got acquainted with the nation's youth while visiting six college campuses at homecoming for his special Monday night on NBC, "Bob Hope on Campus".

Hope, 76, crosses the age gap and gives the collegiate generation a dose of his type of stand-up comedy, the kind their parents and grandprents enjoyed.

He says they liked it, and he loved the jumping, cheering and screaming he got at each of his stops.

Hope, who was in Chicago not long ago for several benefit shows, says the two-hour show to be broadcast at 8 p.m. CST was filmed at Harvard, Southern California, Colgate, Indiana State, Florida and Alabama universities.

"I was oked to play two or three colleges — personal appearances — and I finally got the idea," Hope says. "This is part and parcel of my TV show for April.

"This will be the longest monolgue I've ever done. I do almost 30 minutes of monologue," says Hope, who continues to exude enthusaism for his business after 55 years in the entertainment field.

"The amazing thing about these places (the campuses) is the audience. The students jump straight up in the air and they cheer and scream," Hope says, adding that while many may have been only a concept when the last of his 60 feature films were made, many have seen the reruns and TV specials.

Hope pokes fun at all things familiar — homecoming queens, the students, studies and anything else he thinks his audiences will like. But there was a time when Hope didn't get many cheers or bookings on campuses because of his support for the Vietnam war and then-President Richard M. Nixon.

"It went something like this in the monologue: 'Here's where studying is an extracurricular activity. I understand when you graduate, you don't wear mortar board, you wear a party hat.' The president didn't like that too much."

Hope says he has just signed a new agreement with NBC for two more years of special comedy shows. After 30 years of doing specials for NBC, he says he's trying out new ideas.

Now, he's working on a six-hour special — a mosaic of his overseas trips, including those to Peking and various military bases around the world.

"I'm making an appeal for original film of the early years," he says. "The Pentagon has a lot of it, but a great deal is newsreel film. We've got about the last 18 years on TV film."

That show will feature some 70 entertainers associated with Hope's overseas shows and will be aired three hours on each of two consecutive Sundays in February.

Senator Favors Tax Cuts For Economy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. John C. Danforth says wide-ranging tax cuts are needed to stimulate the growth of the non-government sector of the U.S. economy.

The Missouri Republican made the assertion in "What's the Issue," a U.S. Chamber of Commerce-produced program aired by the Mutual Broadcast System.

Danforth called for enactment of tax cuts that would provide an estimated $20 billion in relief for individuals and industry.

A DOG'S LIFE — Beauregard, the bloodhound who appears on the "Hee Haw" syndicated television show, gets a hug from Cathy Baker who is a member of the show's cast. Beauregard, who is three, is the grandson of another dog who appeared on the show previously. (AP Laserphoto)

TV Series Cast Member Leads 'Dog's Life'

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Every dog has his day, and in Beauregard's case, it's Saturday night.

But mostly, he just lays there. Rin Tin Tin he's not.

Lately, Beauregard's been in the doghouse. He's barked when other members of the cast were singing. But he gets back in good graces by barking on cue.

"He feels at home on the show," said his owner, a Memphis lawyer who prefers to remain anonymous. "He's real friendly toward the cast members."

Perhaps he feels so much at home because he's well paid.

"He put me through law school," his owner said, refusing to specify how much Beauregard makes.

Beauregard, who weighs 120 pounds, has been on the show three years. His grandfather appeared on "Hee Haw" until he died a few years ago.

Although he appears shiftless on the show, he's just acting. Actually he's very active and friendly.

"The cameramen and stagehands want to play ball with him and we have a hard time taming him down," the owner said.

When he's not taping the show, he spends most of his time in his owner's backyard. Sometimes he's near the television when the show is on, but he doesn't pay much attention.

"He gets confused with Duke on 'The Beverly Hillbillies,'" his owner said.

Buck Owens, a co-star of "Hee Haw," said fans ask about Beauregard all the time.

"They want to know if he's a nice dog and things like that," Owens said. "Questions about Beauregard are the second or third most-asked questions. The most-asked is whether Junior (Samples) is really like he is on the show."

He said Bearegard tolerates a good deal.

"With people dancin' around and guffawin' all these seasons, he's gotta be thinking, 'Good God, where's the looney farm,'" Owens said. "I know I've told the same jokes three times. He's got to be saying, 'Oh no, not again.'

"I think he thinks we're playing with a half deck or that somebody left the gate open or that our bread is just half baked.

"He just says, 'Sing faster, big boy.' I'm sure he's thinking about a shade tree."

'Candlelight At The Museum' Set To Become Annual Event

"Candlelight at The Museum," which began last year with a public after dark visit to the Ranching Heritage Center, will become an annual event. Dates for the 1979 observance are Dec. 5 and 6, from 6 to 8:30 p.m. each night.

The Ranching Heritage Center, a 12-acre outdoor exhibit depicting the history of ranching in America, will be lighted by a full moon, luminarias, lanterns and candles for a nighttime glimpse of 19th century holiday activities.

Visitors can peek in the windows of selected buildings to see holiday scenes, family Christmas preparations and activities. Holiday music will be furnished by fiddler Cecil Caldwell and the country and blue grass department of South Plains College, Levelland. Visitors can join in a "barn dance" south of the Reynolds-Gentry Barn.

Lighted buildings will include El Capote, Hedwigs Hill, the Jowell House, the Matador Half Dugout, the C.C. Slaughter Two-Story Dugout, the Harrell House, the JY Bunkhouse, Las Escarbadas, and the Picket and Sotol House.

Programs in the various buildings on display will be appropriate to the period and lifestyle each represents.

Report Given On Pat Nixon

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (UPI) — Pat Nixon's "spirits are high" and doctors at San Clemente Community Hospital say the former first lady should be home for Thanksgiving.

Mrs. Nixon, 67, who was hospitalized Tuesday for treatment of bronchial pneumonia, remained in good condition today.

"Her spirits are high, she is doing extremely well and she is constantly improving," hospital spokesman Malcolm Johnson said. "She is expected to stay in the hospital for another four or five days."

The former president visited his wife again Thursday, this time carrying a bowl of fruit and a radio.

Songwriter Corners Singers In Odd Places To Sell Works

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Some folks like to sell things over the phone or by mail, but for Paul Jabara, the direct approach has always worked best.

Sure, it may be unorthodox to corner superstars like Barbra Streisand or Donna Summer in bathrooms and hallways to get them to listen to your songs. People pay agents big bucks to do that kind of dirty work.

PAUL JABARA

But Jabara, a go-getter from way back, has little patience for cat-and-mouse games. And his sock-it-to-'em tactics have paid off: In the last two years he's amassed more than $3 million dollars, mainly on the strength of three hit songs: Miss Summer's "Last Dance," Miss Streisand's "The Main Event," and the current Summer-Streisand duet, "No More Tears (Enough Is Enough)."

Getting one of these two super-divas to record a song, let alone both, let alone together, sounds like the culmination of a lifelong songwriting career. But Jabara, 29, actually first practiced his undeniable hustling talents on his first professional love, acting.

Born to a Lebanese family in Brooklyn, Jabara got hooked on theater early. "I used to play hookey and see Broadway shows," he recalls. "I'd sneak in at second acts. I saw 'Gypsy' 37 times, I Saw 'Bye Bye Birdie' 43 times. I wanted to get into show business desperately."

So he started modeling, first for true confession magazines, then for television commercials. His dark features and curly hair weren't quite what most producers were looking for — ethnic wasn't in then — but even then Jabara was a good talker.

"I was so off-beat that I couldn't even find an agent," he says. "I'd go down — I must have been 15, 16 — and I'd say, 'I Can't help it if I don't have freckles and red hair, but I really can look good if you just give me the chance,' and I'd get it."

His big break came when he made the original cast of "Hair" in 1967. After two years with that show, he flew to Rome and was cast by the late director Pier Paolo Pasolini in the film "Medea" — a small role which, however, led to his first songwriting efforts.

"When we were doing 'Medea' in Turkey, we would be on the set at 7 in the morning, in the desert with no water, sitting on a bus waiting for Maria Callas to come at 2. So to fill up the time, I Began to write."

After a sojourn in London playing King Herod in the original London cast of "Jesus Christ, Superstar," Jabara returned to New York and put together a musical which "closed the night before it opened."

He limped off to Los Angeles to appear in "The Rocky Horror Show," talked Casablanca Records into a contract, heard of the company's plans for the film "Thank God It's Friday" and wrote "Last Dance" for Miss Summer. The problem was getting her to listen to it.

"I followed her down to Puerto Rico. She was busy, she was crazed, she had 20 people following her around. Finally I couldn't wait anymore, and I pushed her into the bathroom, and I had a tape recorder with me, and I locked the door.

"I played her the song 10 times until finally she said, 'OK, I'll do it, just let me out of here.'" Last year, the song won an Oscar, a Grammy and a Golden Globe award.

The in-person approach worked with Miss Streisand as well. Jabara co-wrote "The Main Event" with Bruce Roberts, then wangled an invitation to Miss Streisand's home and convinced her to sing it. Another smash.

To get Miss Streisand and Miss Summer to sing "No More Tears," another Roberts-Jabara collaboration, Jabara ingeniously enlisted Miss Streisand's son Jason, a fan of Miss Summer's.

"I figured if I could get Donna out there, get them together, just get them to hear the song together, I could do it. So I called out there and Jason answered the phone, thank God. I said, 'Would you ask your mother if it's all right if I bring Donna Summer out with me.' I got a phone call back saying we were welcome."

Again, Jabara sold the two stars on the tune by playing it to them behind locked doors — but not in a bathroom this time. The occasion is immortalized in a snapshot of the two women and Jabara that is prominently displayed in Jabaras new Hollywood hillside home.

Jabara hasn't given up on acting; he's looking forward to starring in a John Schlesinger film about a truck driver who wants to be a songwriter, and a television special is in the works.

The real irony of Jabara's career is that his own three albums have not sold spectacularly well. But he can afford to be philosophical.

"I think it's a matter of promotion," he says. "Had I sung 'Main Event' no one would have ever heard it."

Soul Singer's Dad Still In Hospital

DETROIT (AP) — A man originally accused of shooting the father of soul singer Aretha Franklin has been sentenced to a 10-to 15-year prison term on another charge in the case.

Patrick W. Thompson, 26, of Detroit, received the sentence Thursday from Recorder's Court Judge Clarence Laster Jr. for conviction of breaking and entering an occupied dwelling with intent to commit larceny.

The jury had acquitted Thompson of assault with intent to murder, a verdict that brought a rebuke to the panel from the judge.

CHINESE COTTON VISITORS — Three officials of the China National Textiles Import and Export Corp. (Chinatex), the largest buyer of cotton on the world market, visited Lubbock and the High Plains this week. From left are Sun Dequan; Mao Jizhi, manager of the import department of Chinatex; and Mao Binglin. The Peoples Republic of China, as of Nov. 4, had purchased 1,445,600 running bales of U. S. cotton for 1979-80 delivery, according to data compiled from U. S. Department of Agriculture reports. This was more than had been bought by any other country. (Staff Photo)

Gasohol Resolution Tops List Of Considerations By WIFE

By KATHLEEN HARRIS
Avalanche-Journal Farm Writer

Members of the resolutions committee of Women Involved in Farm Economics met Friday at the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center to consider resolutions to be voted on at the national W.I.F.E. convention.

About 600 members of the organization representing 10 states are attending the three-day meeting here.

A resolution on gasohol topped the list of considerations. National W.I.F.E. president Betty Majors of Osecola, Neb., said gasohol is the non-partisan organization's top priority.

"The past oil embargoes have been a mandate to the American people that we must begin securing alternate energy sources," she said. "Agriculture energy has become more expensive and less plentiful. The production of food and fiber in this nation may well depend upon our ability to produce these renewable energy sources."

Other resolutions to be voted on during the Sunday business meeting concern land grant colleges, carry-over basis tax provision, inheritance taxes, agricultural research, the 1979 Reclamation Reform Act, water and water rights and agricultural land use.

The metric system, farm program, parity, Occupational Safety and Health Administration, transportation and beef inspection resolutions also will be considered.

Dr. Bob Soleta, director of the alcohol division of Iowa Corn Growers Association, and Dr. Lance Crombie of Webster, Minn., discussed gasohol Friday night.

A gasohol still will be demonstrated today at 10 a.m., 2 p.m. and 4 p.m.

Dr. Frances Hill, University of Texas government professor, will speak about "Women in Agriculture" at 10:45 a.m.

Following a noon luncheon and style show, mini-workshops will be held at 3:15 p.m. and 4 p.m. with instruction in testifying, scheduling chapter activities, parlimentary procedure and how to meet the press and prepare news items.

At 7 p.m., members will attend a Texas style barbeque with a speech by newswoman Sarah McClendon, an all cotton style show and a square dancing performance.

Delegates will elect new national officers, adopt resolutions and have a luncheon before concluding the convention atm2 with a 2 p.m. business session Sunday.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

THE TWO MAJOR INDUSTRY GROUPS involved in the 1979 countercyclical meat import bill reacted as expected this week after House passage of the measure.

Bill McMillan, vice president for governmental affairs for the National Cattlemen's Association, said the NCA is extremely pleased with the House action to amend the Meat Import Act of 1964.

McMillan said he was especially pleased with the wide margin, 352-48, by which the bill was approved.

Al Leifer, chairman of the Meat Importers Council of America, said the MICA is terribly unhappy that the House passed what his group considers bad legislation.

"We think it's ludicrous to restrict imports in the next 10 years," Leifer said. He said U. S. population will grow by 20 million during that time and the total cattle population will remain low.

McMillan said the NCA now will be working to get the bill passed by the Senate. He said he does not know when the bill will come before that body.

THE MEASURE NOW IS IN THE SENATE Finance Committee, which has held hearings on the bill but is currently working on other legislation.

If the bill becomes law, Leifer said, MICA will put forth all its efforts to repeal the measure. He predicted the bill would be repealed within five years if it becomes law because, he said, it would result in higher beef prices.

The House approved the bill, which provides for a minimum import level of 1.25 billion pounds a year, after rejecting an amendment which would have increased the minimum to 1.3 billion pounds.

The administration has indicated President Carter would sign a bill containing the 1.25-billion-pound figure, which domestic producers regard as the very highest acceptable.

A similar bill has been introduced in the Senate by Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas. Any differences between the two bills would have to be worked out by a Senate-House conference committee before the measure could be sent to the president for his signature.

THE HOUSE BILL REPRESENTS a compromise between domestic producer interests and the administration, which vetoed a more restrictive measure last year.

It imposes strict limits on the president's authority to suspend the quotas except in specific circumstances: in a national emergency, when supplies are inadequate due to natural disaster, disease or major market disruption, or when revised mid-year data show declining domestic production.

The countercyclical feature, central to the bill, provides for reduced import quotas when domestic supplies are high and larger quotas when supplies dwindle.

The administration originally had favored a minimum import level of 1.3 billion pounds but compromised with legislators who sought to set the level at 1.2 billion pounds.

An amendment to raise the level to 1.3 billion pounds, offered by Rep. Willis Gradison, R-Ohio, was rejected by a 266-136 vote shortly before the bill gained final House passage.

Unless the bill becomes law by the end of the year, administration officials have said, Carter would have to decide whether to suspend quotas in 1980 and negotiate volunt ary restraint agreements with exporting countries, as was done in 1979 and as is authorized by the present Meat Import Act.

THE SENATE AGRICULTURE COMMITTEE now is scheduled to meet Nov. 27 to consider a House-passed bill that would increase the 1979 wheat and feed grain target prices by 7 percent.

Other amendments to the Agricultural Act of 1977, including several Senate bills to increase grain target prices, also will be considered, said committee chairman Herman Talmadge, D-Ga. The committee may amend the House bill to include 1980 target prices.

Talmadge said he hopes the committee can mark up the bill and send it to the full Senate on Nov. 27.

COTTON FUTURES CONTINUED WHAT SOME brokers called a technical downward correction on local selling Friday to close with losses of 50 to 98 points in nearbys.

Light speculative short covering brought prices up from losses of as much as 138 points, traders said. Estimated volume was 12,050 lots.

The market opened slightly higher but quickly fell into the loss column on heavy commission house selling. Light trade and commission house buying lifted prices off early lows at mid-session, when nearbys still were off 43 to 20 points.

Floor brokers said the early selloff reflected long liquidations on a follow-through from Thursday's losses and also sentiment that this week's export commitments report, although showing strong sales, wasn't as high as had been anticipated, especially since shipments — with 37 weeks remaining in the season — were only moderate.

THE U. S. COTTON HARVEST REACHED 52 percent completion last week, 3 percent above both the 1978 pace and the average rate, the USDA reported earlier this week.

A fast harvest in California offset a slower pace in the Delta states. California growers were shredding stalks and plowing fields.

The Alabama harvest still was a month behind normal. Texas growers south of the northern High Plains needed a hard freeze to defoliate plants and speed stripping, USDA said.

Arizona growers made excellent picking progress. In Mississippi, the harvest was 63 percent done, compared with 95 percent a year earlier and 74 percent on the average.

Receipts at High Plains classing offices now are averaging around 23,000 to 25,000 a day. With some gins not operating in areas hailed-out earlier this year, receipts at the harvest peak may not reach the daily level of 55,000 to 60,000 seen in previous years.

Under good weather, however, the areawide influx next week could touch maybe 40,000 a day.

Grain Futures

Traders reasoned that the lagging corn harvest is likely to progress this weekend if forecasts of clear weather prove correct. Country cash sales of corn could lead to more of the hedge-type commercial selling that weighed on Friday's futures prices, an analyst said.

Commercial grain firms engage in hedging when they buy grain on the cash market, then sell an equal amount on the futures market in order to lock in current price levels.

The government's announcement of another wheat and corn export sale totaling 900,000 metric tons to unidentified buyers had little effect because it was viewed as business already done. After this week's 3.1-million-ton export sales, the Soviet Union may have completed the bulk of its U.S. grain-buying plans for the 1979-80 season, an analyst said.

At the close, soybeans were 2 cents lower to 2 cents higher, November $6.74½; wheat was unchangd to 3½ cents higher, December $4.37; corn was ¾ to 2 cents lower, December $2.70¾; and oats were ¼ to 1 cent higher, December $1.47¾.

HIGH PLAINS COTTON
U. S. Department of Agriculture

Trading on the Lubbock spot cotton market was active. Supplies of cotton for sale were light to moderate and demand was good.

The base price of grade 41, staple 34, mike 3.5-4.9 was 60.35, up 25 points from one week ago. Grade 41, staple 32, mike 3.0-3.2 was quoted at 51.70.

High Plains Agricultural Marketing Services graded 126,000 samples the week ended Nov. 15.

The season's total was 267,000 samples. This compares with 177,000 samples graded by the same date last year.

Predominant grades for the week were grade 31 at 13 percent, grade 41 at 30 percent, grade 32 at 21 percent, grade 42 at 29 percent.

Predominant staples were staple 31 at 31 percent, staple 32 at 43 percent, and staple 33 was 14 percent.

Mikes 3.5-4.9 accounted for 15 percent, 3.3-3.4 was 15 percent, 3.0-3.2 was 38 percent, 2.7-2.9 was 29 percent and 2.6 and below was 3 percent.

LUCKLESS WITH LADIES AND LODGING — For 13 years, scientists have poked, probed and fiddled with Irish the polar bear. But with the closure of the Naval Arctic Research Laboratory in Barrow, he'll need a new home. It can't be the Arctic wild, and his age and lack of success at romance make him unattractive to zoos. (AP Laserphoto)

Eviction Notice Third Strike Against Luckless Polar Bear

BARROW, Alaska (AP) — After 13 years in captivity for the advancement of science, Irish the polar bear had been given an eviction notice.

He can't return to the wild, and it looks as if finding more civilized lodging will be difficult.

Irish's home has been the Naval Arctic Research Laboratory on the coast of the Arctic Ocean since he and a sister were brought here as orphaned 8-month-old cubs by Eskimo hunters. The sister has since died.

No problems are expected in finding zoo homes for most of the other 100 arctic animals kept at the laboratory. But Irish, on the downhill side of life and luckless with the ladies, is a different story.

"Irish is 13½ years old, and he's not been with a female with the exception of three tries, and they took unkindly to him, so he cowered in a corner and whined," says Dr. Gary Laursen, assistant science director of the lab.

"So, he can't be classified as a breeding male. And zoos, because of their financial situation, like to maintain breeding stock," Laursen said. "He's got two heavy strikes against him."

Scientists have been fiddling with Irish all these years, using him as a model for designing tracking and temperature transmitters now used to monitor his wild colleagues and grizzly bears. His diet has been purposefully varied and his blood and tissue scrutinized for understanding the biology of arctic mammals — and even arctic humans.

"Irish has lived a very useful research life," says Laursen. "He's extremely healthy and would no doubt live for some time" — up to 15 years more.

Irish's size — 995 pounds — is another logistical strike against him, says Laursen. "We'd probably have to fly him out in a special cage in a C-130. It would cost something, for sure, but it's not a feat that couldn't be handled."

He cannot be returned to the ice floes. "He' probably wander off and come back to town, where he would undoubtedly be shot," Laursen said. "He's never had to develop the skills to exist in the wild, he wouldn't be able to fish, to feed himself."

Irish probably has a home for another 10 months, Laursen said. But not many responses have come in from zoos where inqukries have been made on Irish's behalf, and those received are not encouraginw.

Room's Mirrors Covered Up During North American Bridge Tournament

CINCINNATI (AP) — Bridge tables filled the Hall of Mirrors, but the mirrors all around the hotel's great room were covered with brown paper as the Fall North American Bridge Championships began Friday.

"Mirrors often are a problem for us," said an official of the American Contract Bridge League. "At the summer championships in Las Vegas, the hotel had lots and lots of mirrors. They covered them up with bedsheets."

Players were still arriving Friday for the 10-day tournament, one of three yearly championships. Close to 5,000 bridge players were expected, and some of them would be at the tables 12 hours a day for the duration.

The strain of competition will begin to show even in the early going, predicted Henry Francis, the league's publications editor.

"At the national level, the players get pretty tired pretty fast," he said. "Doctors have done studies that show that the stress and strain on a tournament bridge player is more severe than an athlete in a track meet or even a professional football player."

Make no mistake, this largest of Thanksgiving week card parties is no ice cream social for the players.

"They take this thing extremely seriously," Francis said. "Some of them have a regular training program. They go to bed early, get up early to jog and they watch their diet.

Cheating isn't much of a problem because bridge players generally have a "very high code of ethics and principles," said Bob Bonomi, the league's director of public relations.

The rare cheating is very sophisticated, Francis said, and two teams who were caught were expelled and are suing the league.

"People have tried all kinds of thing — coughs, sniffs, the way they blew their smoke from their cigarettes," Francis said. "With one pair, signals were being transmitted by where they put their pencil in relation to their scorecard."

Francis said bridge players generally like all kinds of table games, especially backgammon. But Bonomi likes to compare the game of bridge itself to physical sports.

"It's a people game, much more like those ball-bouncing sports than you might suspect," he said. "The personality of the players is a determining factor in who wins, the same as in basketball.

"The fourth quarter of a bridge tournament is like the fourth quarter of a football game. The team that's behind tries for a long bomb on every play, and the team that's ahead is in a prevent defense."

The American Contract Bridge League makes its own playing cards and has brought along some 8,000 decks for the tournament, Francis said. He said about 260,000 hands of duplicate bridge will be played in the course of the tournament.

Dr. Albert Einstein arrived in the United States as a refugee from Nazi Germany in 1933.

Ex-Convict Recalls Alcatraz, Relates 1946 Escape Attempt

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — "This was my mailbox," Clarence Carnes says, pointing to a marble-sized hole in a concrete step in the exercise yard at Alcatraz prison.

Carnes, a Choctaw Indian from Oklahoma known to fellow cons as "Joe" or "The Choctaw Kid," used the "mailbox" during the seven years he spent in an isolation cell.

When he went to the yard twice a week, Carnes wrote messages on cigarette papers, rolled them into balls, put them in the hole and covered it with sand.

Carnes, now 52 with a snow-white fringe to his balding dome, was just 18 when he went to The Rock in 1945. He was the youngest convict ever sent to the grim island prison a mile from San Francisco's famed Fisherman's Wharf.

Now Carnes, sent to Alcatraz for 99 years for kidnapping, was back without chains or armed guards. He was accompanied by screenwriter Ernest Tidyman, who's writing the script for a four-hour NBC movie about the bloody May 2, 1946 Alcatraz breakout attempt.

"We tried to blast our way out," Carnes says of the six cons who plotted the aborted escape, which was crushed by battle-hardened Marines. Before the shooting stopped, two guards and three cons were dead.

Three other plotters, including Carnes, were convicted of murdering a guard. The others were executed, but the jury voted to spare Carnes because of his age and because he had been responsible for the survival of several guards.

As he walks through the deserted halls and yards of Alcatraz now, Carnes' leathery face is grim. "I was handball champion over there for 10 years," pointing to a section of the prison wall.

He remembers when a pal smuggled a ham sandwich to him in "The Hole," a black, solid steel cage. The friend broke the sandwich into tiny pieces and lowered them on a string down a utility shaft. Carnes reconstructed the sandwich on the floor and admired it before savoring each morsel.

Tobacco would be smuggled into D Block in a rubber glove slipped in a locked coffee urn. "We had a guy we called 'The Taster.' He could tell whether that glove was in there. Then I had a way of opening the urn to get it without disturbing the lock."

All that kept him going, Carnes says, was the belief that one day he would get out. After the 1946 fiasco, he never tried again.

Alcatraz was closed in 1963 by then-Attorney General Robert Kennedy, and Carnes, after 18 years on the island, was among the first to leave.

CARNES' 'MAILBOX' — Clarence Carnes, a Choctaw Indian from Oklahoma known to fellow cons as "Joe" or "The Choctaw Kid," points to a marble-sized hole in the exercise yard at Alcatraz prison in California.

But instead of freedom, it was seven more years of imprisonment, this time in Leavenworth, Kan. Then he went back to Oklahoma for three more years on his original murder conviction, stemming from a gas station robbery when he was 16. "The attendant was shot in a scuffle with my accomplice."

Carnes was paroled in 1972 after almost 30 years behind bars. He now is employed at an alcoholic halfway house near Kansas City, Mo.

He spent a week in the San Francisco area in October, going almost daily on the tourist ferryboat to Alcatraz to recall those years for the movie script.

During its 99 years as an "escape-proof" prison, it was home for a total of 1,576 prisoners. Since public tours began six years ago, 2.4 million people have visited the Rock.

As for his fellow convicts, "Most of them got out and made it. I know they made it because I never heard from them again. The ones I heard about were the ones that got busted again."

High Sales, Firewood Search Marking Wood Stove Revival

BOSTON (UPI) — The wood stove industry has seen a revival lately because of the energy crisis with sales of units booming and the search for firewood a very popular weekend pasttime.

Some people question whether burning wood instead of oil saves money, and there's an illustration — which most likely has been embellished over the years — making the rounds that fortifies their doubt.

Chain saw — $149.95

Gas and maintenance for chain saw — $44.60

4-wheel-drive pickup, stripped — $8,379.04

4-wheel-drive pickup, maintenance — $438

Replace rear window of pickup (twice) — $310

Fine for citting unmmarked tree in state forest — $500

Fourteen cases beer — $126

Littering fine — $50

Safety glasses — $29.50

Safety shoes — $49.50

Paint walls and ceiling — $110

Worcester chimney brush and rods — $45

Log splitter — $150

Taxes on woodlot — $310

Divorce settlemnt — $33,678.22

Total First Year Costs — $54,922.81
