Countless Exhibits Being Arranged In Agriculture, Livestock, And Poultry For South Plains Show

THE Panhandle-South Plains fairgrounds early this morning became a veritable cross section of the Southwest, as livestock, agriculture, poultry and countless exhibits arrived from widely separated points in preparation for opening tomorrow of the sixteenth annual exposition in this city.

Lubbock's message of welcome, delivered by automobile caravans, letters and catalogs, has been emphasized in every city and hamlet of the Plains, and the pulse of respective interest heralds an attendance of possibly 150,000 for the six days. Aggregate attendance in 1927 was 120,000 and in 1928 the turnstiles clicked 130,000 times. An increased attendance is expected this year on the basis of the rising figures during the last five years.

Gates Open At 9

Gates to the fair grounds will be opened at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning. Parking space in front of the buildings and an additional territory across the street south of the exposition grounds have been provided for the thousands of automobiles in which fair visitors will come.

All exhibits are expected to be ready late tonight. Departmental buildings were being filled with

Naval Expert To Answer To Charge

Rear Admiral J. M. Reeves Will Reply To Claims Of Working Toward Defeat Of Geneva Naval Parley

BY FRANCIS M. STEPHENSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28. (AP) — Reply will be made on Monday by Rear Admiral J. M. Reeves to the statement before the senate naval investigating committee that as one of the American experts at the unsuccessful Geneval naval limitations conference of 1927, he "frequently expressed the hope it would not succeed."

Admiral Reeves called Chairman Shortridge of the committee today by telephone to request the hearing. Drew Pearson, a newspaper man who reported the Geneva conference, told the committee during its investigation of the activities of William B. Shearer on behalf of shipbuilders at that conference, that he saw Reeves frequently in the company of Shearer in the Swiss city and heard Reeves express the hope of a failure of that parley.

After hearing the naval officer monday, the committee will turn at last to Shearer to hear his account of what he did at the conference, called by President Coolidge in futile attempt to limit the cruiser construction of America. Great Britain and Japan. Shearer has sued the shipbuilders for $250,000, above his $25,000 salary for services he allegse he rendered at the Geneva meeting.

Continental Head Sees Producer In Cochran Gas Well

Harold Vance Claims Test Almost Certain To Turn Out At Least 30 Barrels Daily When Completed

While 900 feet of oil is standing in the hole, plans are being made to cement the bottom of the Marland oil company's No. 1 Slaughter test, five miles southwest of Lehman, Cochran county, in an effort to counteract water, following "shooting" of the test late Friday, Harold Vance, of Midland, district superintendent of the Continental Oil company, told the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal in a telephonic interview last night.

"A small producer, at least, is assured by the present showing," said Mr. Vance." The well is almost certain to produce 30 barrels daily and it may reach the proportions of a 200-barrel producer. It will produce probably in commercial quantity."

Twenty barrels of oil were bailed in two hours time Friday night.

Mr. Vance appeared conservative in discussing the status of the wildcat test, hinting that he did not wish to place his estimate too high.

Dr. London, intimately acquainted with the facts in the case, will deal with the subject from three different angles. The home angle, the educational angle and the psychological angle. Having known of the family in his home city for over 25 years, and a visitor in the prison in California where Hickman was held, Dr. London has made a study of the case and considers the subject one of the most interesting lectures.

Ginning Total In County Tops 5500

Shortage Of Pickers Over Section Is Outstanding Condition; Yield Looms Larger Than Expected

With almost every community in Lubbock reporting all gins working and an apparent cotton crop of greater total volume than had been looked for, up to Saturday night more than 5,500 bales had been ginned in this county, according to a check made by the Avalanche-Journal.

A shortage of cotton pickers and quick maturity of the crop are outstanding conditions reported from almost every section of the county. Some think that with continued clear weather for the next 30 days the entire crop will have been matured and picked.

Half Ginned Here

The Lubbock gins report practically half of the county's total bales handled up to Saturday night, with 2,240, while Slaton's six gins announce a total of 1,374 bales ginned.

Hurlwood reports 150 bales. Idalou, with four gins, has ginned 595 bales. Shallowater, with two gins have handled 443. Other communities, which were impossible to reach by telephone, include Monroe, Wolffarth, Canyon, Acuff, Becton, County Line, New Hope and Woodrow.

State Militiamen To Be Sent To Borger Pending Action On Martial Law

Plans Of Governor Moody Are Kept Under Utmost Secrecy In Hope Of Wholesale Resignation Of Borger Officers

(By The Associated Press)

AUSTIN, Sept. 28.—Plans for establishing martial law for Borger and Hutchinson county went forward under complete secrecy today. Governor Moody stated that his formal action in declaring martial law would not be made public until state militiamen arrived in the Panhandle oil community where District Attorney John A. Holmes was assassinated and where "an organized and entrenched criminal ring" thrives, according to a report given the governor by his investigators.

"You will not get from me information that martial law has been declared; I certainly wouldn't care to announce my plans in advance of arrival of troops there," he said.

He asserted he would "stand behind" his investigators who reported the conditions there, describing a "conspiracy between officers and the criminal element, or law violators."

Delay Cause Unknown.

Although the governor would not state what was delaying occupation of the troubled community with troops, it was known that he was hopeful the officers complained of would voluntarily resign, thus averting martial law.

When the troops do move they will be mobilized and transported as secretely as possible and not until they arrive on the grounds will the governor file his official proclamation with the secretary of state it was indicated that infantryment would be sent and that companies would be carefully selected where the situation was such as to assure the men their civil positions back when they returned home.

Officers Search For 18 Convicts Escaped From Pen

Several Of Most Desperate Criminals In State Make Successful Break From Prison Through Tunnel

(By Associated Press)

HUNTSVILLE, Tex., Sept. 28.—Aided by two clues, officers tonight pressed their search for 18 escaped convicts, among whom were several of the state's most desperate criminals. The men crawled through a secret tunnel to escape from the Wynne state prison farm for tuberculars near here last night.

Huntsville city and county officers, prison officials, every available man and dog from the state penitentiary here and the four north prison farms and officers of Grimes county, west of Huntsville, were actively engaged in the manhunt. Authorities of at least a half score of East Texas counties were keeping a sharp watch for the desperadoes.

Fourteen Sighted

Fourteen men, said to be convicts were seen in Shiro, Grimes county, about 30 miles from here, early today.

Among the men who fled were Lloyd Davidson, who had been in prison only a short time. He was sent up from Navarro county under two life sentences for murder.

Several others were veterans at the art of jail breaking. Robert Hill, one of the alleged Cisco Santa Claus bank bandit, John Reid, serving 28 years for robbery by firearms from Young county, and Marvin Azbell, serving five years for burglary from Haskell county, who had escaped with Bob Silver this spring, were three of the 18 men at large.

New students are arriving at the school almost daily, according to the announcement. The present figure easily outdistances that of the corresponding time last year by about 20 per cent.

Advance Guard Of American Legion Arrives For Meet

Louisville Plans Welcome For Nation's Heroes In Annual National Confab Starting Tomorrow

(By Associated Press)

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Sept. 28.—The advance guard of the American Legion, many of its members survivors of those hordes that swept down upon the Marne, the Meuse, and the Argonne, swept down upon Louisville today for their national convention which opens here Monday.

The city was ready to welcome the nation's heroes. The streets literally were banked with flags and bunting, and banners shouted "welcome Buddies" every few feet.

McNutt Arrives

The central advance was led by Commander Paul V. McNutt of Indianapolis, who came during the morning to be welcomed by the cheers of hundreds of legionnaires gathered at the depot. After being welcomed, Commander McNutt was taken to the office of Mayor William Harrison, who officially welcomed him on behalf of the city.

As preparations went forward, legion officials joined in declaring that rumors that the convention might be "rough" were entirely without foundation.

The Forty and Eight, fun making body of the legion, already has entrenched and officials were making plans for a torchlight parade and "grand wreck" to follow the legion parade Tuesday.

Confirmation Of Farm Board Seen

All Members Are Expected To Be Approved Unless Unexpected Charges Are Made By Senate Group

BY RAYMOND Z. HENLE
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28. (AP)—Confirmation of all members of the federal farm board is looked for by administration leaders unless some unexpected charge of a serious nature is lodged against any of the eight men named by President Hoover.

Opposition on the floor of the senate to Chairman Legge and possibly two or three other members of the board, is considered inevitable. There is held to be no sign at present, however, of opposition based on past or present connections which might be construed as rendering any board member unfit to serve.

Administration leaders base their opinion that all will be confirmed upon assurances given them by various senators in what might be considered the opposition groups. A number of prominent democrats and western independent republicans have indicated that while they believe the board will prove ineffective, they are not disposed to vote against its confirmation because they regard the difficulties in the farm relief legislation rather than in the men named to carry out its provisions.

Mother, Temporarily Insane, Runs Amuck With Bread Knife To Kill Child And Injure Another

(By Associated Press)

WORCESTER, Mass., Sept. 28—A mother, temporarily insane, ran amuck with a bread knife this afternoon, killed her four-year-old daughter and probably fatally stabbed the child's three-year-old playmate. The woman then walked to the police station, tossed her bloody weapon on the booking desk and announced:

"I have killed my children."

Becomes Unbalanced

Mrs. Anna Kandrat, 27, the mother feared that her children were to be taken away from her and cared for by a welfare organization. Police say she became unbalanced and attacked her daughter, Ellen, and her playmate, Lillian Japolowski, as they were seated on the steps of the Kandrat home. A trail of blood leading from the steps through a hallway into a bedroom bore witness to Ellens flight to escape her maddened mother.

Ellens face and throat was brutally butchered as was the face and throat of her little playmate.

Two Children Away

Mary, another three-year-old daughter of Mrs. Kandrat, was only slightly cut and is now resting comfortably at St. Agnes Guild. Two other children were not at home.

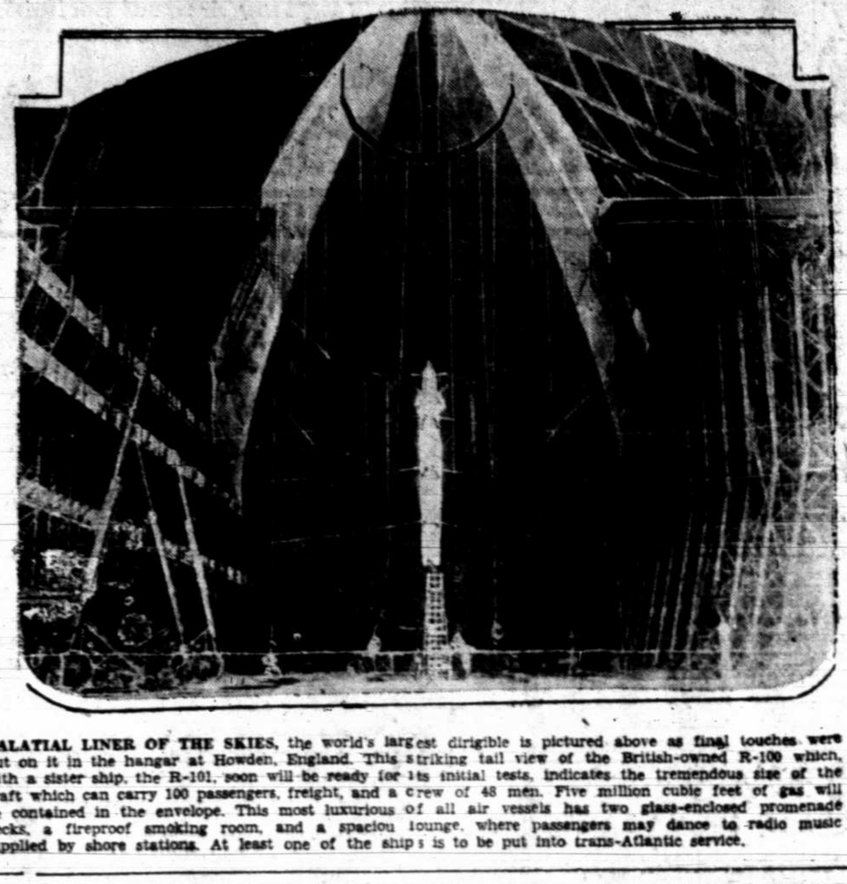
British Sky Liners To Be Ready For Launching In Near Future

Pair Of Luxurious Dirigibles Will Be Larger And Faster Than Graf Zep

FIVE SEPARATE POWER PLANTS like the one shown above will drive the British dirigibles R-100 and R-101, which are being made ready for initial tests in England. Here you see mechanics completing the mounting of one of the Rolls-Royce motors of 750 horsepower on the R-100. The engine gondolas, each about the size of a good-sized airplane fuselage, provide cabin space for mechanics who can attend the motors in flight. Thirty-eight tanks are fastened to the interior of the framework to hold the 29 tons of fuel the ship will carry. Government engineers say the craft, which is much larger than the Graf Zeppelin, will cruise at 70 to 80 miles an hour.



PALATIAL LINER OF THE SKIES, the world's largest dirigible is pictured above as final touches were put on it in the hangar at Howden, England. This striking tail view of the British-owned R-100 which, with a sister ship, the R-101, soon will be ready for its initial tests, indicates the tremendous size of the craft which can carry 100 passengers, freight, and a crew of 48 men. Five million cubic feet of gas will be contained in the envelope. This most luxurious of all air vessels has two glass-enclosed promenade decks, a fireproof smoking room, and a spacious lounge, where passengers may dance to radio music supplied by shore stations. At least one of the ships is to be put into trans-Atlantic service.

Government Plans To Put One Airship Into Trans-Atlantic Passenger Service

THIS LARGE DINING ROOM aboard the R-100, world's greatest dirigible now nearing completion at Howden, England, will accommodate more than 40 persons at once. It is luxuriously appointed and a cuisine equal to the smartest hotels will be offered. The wide stairways connecting the upper and lower decks of the giant airship are shown in the background. At the top of one stairway, upper right, you see the start of a long corridor, leading the entire length of the dirigible, and opening onto other compartments and staterooms with upper and lower berths.

Hoover-Smith Row Will Reverberate Throughout South

Coming Senatorial Vote To Determine If Revolt In Democratic Ranks Is To Prove Permanent

BY JAMES L. WEST
Associated Press Staff Writer.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28. (AP). — Echoes of the Hoover-Smith presidential contest will reverberate through portions of the South in the forthcoming senatorial contests, which are expected to furnish evidence on whether the 1928 revolt within the democratic ranks in that section was merely temporary.

Two of the senators who were foremost in the opposition to the election of the democratic presidential candidate, Alfred E. Smith, Heflin, of Alabama, and Simmons, of North Carolina—are up for reelection next year and Heflin already has opposition in the primary campaign, with John Bankhead offering for his place.

No Opponent Enters.

Senator Carter Glass, one of the outstanding democratic leaders of the senate who stumped his state of Virginia for Smith, is up for reelection there. Although his speeches formed a large part of the record of the bitter fight in the Hoover-Smith campaign in that state, it appears now that he may be unopposed in the democratic primary for renomination.

Some leaders of the rival parties here now are of the opinion that the republicans will nominate one of their own number for the senate, with C. Bascom Slemp, national committeeman, and Henry W. Anderson, of Richmond, most prominently mentioned.

Sheppard To Run.

Senator Sheppard, author of the prohibition amendment, comes up for re-election in Texas and is likely to have primary opposition. The name of Gov. Dan Moody now bulks large in the discussions of probable candidates. The republicans undoubtedly will nominate a candidate there, hoping for support from the anti-Smith democrats, since both Sheppard and Moody supported the former New York governor.

The democrats feel confident of regaining the senate seat from Oklahoma now held by Pine, a republican, but the G. O. P. board of strategy is confident of holding this seat.

Republican leaders entertain scant hope of wresting a senate seat in Tennessee from the democrats.

Peeler Acquitted Of Murder Charge

Jury Deliberates Only One Hour In Shooting Case; Defendant Charged With Killing Brother-In-Law

BEAUMONT, Sept. 28. (AP)—Fred R. Peeler was acquitted here today on a charge of murder in connection with the fatal shooting of his brother-in-law, W. T. Gonce, at Spindletop Springs last winter. The jury received the case at 4:30 o'clock and was out one hour.

Mrs. Peeler, the wife of the defendant, testified that W. T. Gonce, her brother-in-law, had come to her home in Sour Lake about a year ago and in the absence of her husband had made insulting advances.

Told of Incident

She said that on November 13, some time later, she told her husband of the incident, on November 14 Peeler shot his brother-in-law to death while the latter was at work on an oil well at Spindletop Springs near here.

There was conflicting testimony as to whether Gonce brandished an ax handle in threatening manner before Peeler shot him, or whether Peeler shot without his brother-in-law having made a move toward him.

Mrs. Gonce, the widow, appeared on the witness stand in mourning. She was a witness for the state, as opposed to her sister.

Mrs. Gonce and Mrs. Peeler were married to the two principals in the tragedy in a double wedding in 1905.

Shining-eyed and fresh for the hours that count

What man is pleased at the sight of a tired-out wife . . . too borne-down with household duties to try to dress, too weary to look her best for his homecoming.

The women men adore are shining-eyed and fresh, eager for the hours that count.

More and more women today are finding a way to keep young, ten, twenty, even thirty years longer than their mothers.

The great strides of engineering and electrical science have developed marvelous labor-saving devices to relieve women of drudgery. Modern medical science is outwitting middle age by revolutionary discoveries in diet and care of the body.

But it is advertising that has aroused women to a realization of what these new household helps can do. It is advertising that has brought a knowledge of beauty aids and their use. It is advertising that has created a desire for those products which aid women to lead healthier, happier, longer lives.

Always read the advertisements. Keep up with the ever-onward sweep of progress. Do not let yourself be left behind.

Famed Fighting Jew Organized Self-Defense That First Stemmed Arab Attacks On Palestine Praised

BY HAMILTON BRONNER
NEA Service Writer.

LONDON, Sept. 28. — Vladimir Jabotinsky, Zionist, Palestine representative of an American insurance company, and the most romantic Jewish soldier produced by the World war, is undismayed by Arab hostilities and the attitude of the British government in Palestine.

This despite the fact that after gathering an army of Jews with whom he fought through the Palestine campaign during the World war, he was arrested, court martialed and sentenced to prison for organizing a self-defence corps for protection against Arab violence.

"We still believe in England," said Jabotinsky, who now is in London, "but it is for England to corroborate or discourage our faith—by deeds. It is for the recent past to bury its pitiful dead. What we are looking to now is the immediate future. In my judgment England, as regards Palestine, has been guilty of two great failures.

England's "Neutrality."

"First, the government thought its job was only that of an onlooker at the Jewish effort in Palestine. Tehy called it being neutral as between the Jews and the Arabs. This is impossible. Colonization is a state business. Otherwise there can only be failure on both sides—failure of the Jews and failure of the government.

"We stand prepared to supply the men and the money, but the government must do its legislative and administrative part. The lands we have bought in the past have mainly been paid for with prices that would be worthy of Nebraska, Kansas and Iowa. The state must also act to give full support to local industries.

"Second, there must be ample troop protection for peaceful law-abiding citizens in Palestine. The country has been criminally left totally unprotected, as the recent progroms show. The pretext was that the British taxpayer did not want to pay for British soldiers in the Holy Land.

Jewish Soldiery Ready.

"The Jews will supply the soldiers—if the government consents. In the winter of 1921 the Zionist Executive submitted to the government a proposal whereby battalions of veteran Jewish soldiers would be formed. The proposal was turned down. The Jews actually had to start a volunteer self-defense force of their own in Palestine.

"You will have noticed that in such large Jewish towns as Tela-viv, where a considerable Jewish self-defense force was in existence, the Arabs walked very warily. It was such forces as these, acting before the government rushed troops from Egypt, which actually saved the Jewish settlements from total destruction.

"This same government now is actually disarming these forces and even arresting Jews who have arms in their possession — arms which they have for the protection of their homes.

Palestine Is Coveted.

"There is some discussion as to whether England wants to go on with her mandate for Palestine and if she does, whether she wants to go on with her proclamation that it shall be a homeland for the Jews. If England got out tomorrow, there would be several other great powers very glad to move in. Palestine with her important harbors on the Mediterranean and her strategic position is an important link in the empire. If England does her manifest duty, the Jews who feel homeless elsewhere will go to Palestine and ultimately build up a great farming and manufacturing industry, which will benefit everybody."

Jabotinsky is almost a man without a country. He was born in Odessa, Russia, 49, years ago and educated at the University of Rome. He speaks about nine languages, among them Russian, Hebrew, French, German, Italian and Arabic.

Journalist by Profession.

He is a journalist by profession, and in the beginning of the World war represented a big Moscow journal on the western front. In 1915 he made trips to Morocco, Tunis and Egypt to disarm the repercussions in the Moslem world as a result of Turkey joining with Germany.

In Egypt he found many Jewish refugees from Palestine. He worked among them and founded the famous Zion Mule Corps which took part in the great Gallipoli campaign.

In 1917, after America went into the war, Jabotinsky originated the idea of forming some Jewish fighting infantry battalions to join the British army in the Palestine campaign. Five thousand men were quickly gathered, of whom 40 per cent came from America, 30 per cent from Britain and about 30 per cent from Palestine itself. These forces were led by British colonels and were part of Lord Allenby's army.

Saw Much Action.

Jabotinsky became a lieutenant in the 38th Royal Fusiliers. He was in command of troops which took the fort of Umm-Esh-Shert on the Jordan near Jericho. The same men took part in the conquest of Galilee and Transjordania.

After the war, Jabotinsky remained in Palestine. Seeing trouble threatening with the Arabs, he formed a self-defense corps. He was actually arrested for this and sentenced to 15 years penal servitude by a British tribunal. After serving three months in a fort at Acra, he was pardoned by Sir Herbert Samuel, then High Commissioner. Six months later the supreme British Army council quashed the whole proceedings — tantamount to saying they should never have been started.

During the war, Vladimir Jabotinsky, above, began the movement to recruit an army of Jews, and himself served under Lord Allenby in the Palestine campaign. Later, anticipating trouble with the Arabs, he organized a self-defense corps, and was thrown into prison for his pains. He was pardoned after serving three months of a 15-year sentence.

Continuance Of A Strong Demand For Merchandise In Face Of Drought Is Big Feature Of Southwest Business

Department Store Sales In Area Show Gain Of 13 Per Cent; Cotton Yield Is Set Slightly Lower

(By Associated Press)

DALLAS, Sept. 28.—Continuance of a strong demand for merchandise, both wholesale and retail, in the face of a severe drouth in the major portion of the district, was an outstanding development during August noted in the monthly review of the Dallas Federal Reserve bank, issued today.

Financial statistics reflected largely the effect of seasonal factors, the daily average net demand and time deposits of member banks declining from $870,868,000 during July to $860,552,000 in August Federal Reserve bank loans to member banks of the eleventh district, due to demand for credit in connection with completion of crop cultivation, gathering and marketing of cotton rose from $37,479,423 on July 31 to a seasonal peak of $48,761,167 on September 7 but had declined to $45,855,552 on September 15 as a result of liquidation of country banks from returns of the cotton crop," the report said.

Sales Show Gain

Department store sales in August reflected a gain of 13 per cent over July and commercial failures showed a sharp increase. Valuation of building permits at principal cities was 29 per cent higher than in July, but six per cent less than in August, 1928.

Practically all growing crops in the eleventh district deteriorated during the past month as a result of the severe drouth which covered the major portion of the district," according to the report. "The heavy rains which have fallen over a large portion of the district since Sept. 1, however, have in most instances effectively broken the drouth and will be of material benefit to those crops which have not yet reached maturity. The rains were of particular benfit in northwestern Texas where they were needed for the maturity of late row crops, and for the preparation of wheatlands and the seeding of small grains.

Yield Is Lowered

The Department of Agriculture estimated the prospective yield of cotton in Texas on September 1 as 4, 107,000 bales as compared to an indicated production of 4,798,000 bales on August 1 and an actual production of 5,106,000 bales in 1928. The extremely high temperatures and the lack of moisture caused deterioration in the crop seldom equalled in rapidity or severity; in addition to this, many portions of the Southern half of Texas have sustained severe losses as the result of insect activity, many fields being infested with every insect known to the farmer. In many instances, poisoning has had little or no effect. In fact, there are many fields which will yield practically nothing. In portions of west, west-central, central, east and south Texas, root rot has taken a heavy toll. In the northern half of Texas insect activity has caused very little damage but the high temperatures and dry weather stunted the growth of the plant and caused premature opening of the bolls. Owing to the unusually high percentage of late planted cotton, abandonment has been heavy and the plants have fruited poorly. Reports indicated that bolls generally are small and the staple short. The general rains which fell over the state during the first half of September relieved the drouthy condition but the consensus of opinion is that they caused very little improvement in the crop. While the moisture will tend to cause unopened bolls to mature more normally and some of the cotton was still blooming will mature additional bolls, the damp weather will, undoubtedly increase the activity of insects which in many instances will preclude the maturing of a top crop. Picking in most sections has advanced rapidly.

In Louisiana, the drouth greatly reduced the threat of weevil damage, and did not affect plant growth so adversely as in Texas. While the condition of the crop in Oklahoma showed a decline greater than the average, the weevil damage was not as great as earlier expected.

"The Department of Agriculture reported that the condition of the Texas corn crop was 60 per cent of normal on Sept. 1, as compared to 74 per cent, a year ago. The estimated production was placed at 81,550,000 bushels, which represents a decline of 5,246,000 during the month.

"The Texas rice crop remained in good condition throughout the month. Peanuts were reported at 58 per cent of normal condition, with an indicated yield of 77,708,000 pounds.

Ranges Deteriorating

The extremely dry weather during August over North, Northwest and West Texas and some of the Southwestern counties of New Mexico, brought about rapid deterioration in the condition of ranges. Range grasses were becoming dry and browned and feed was getting short; stock water was scarce in many localities. In most other sections of the district, however, there had been sufficient moisture to sustain the growth of grass during the dry weather. The heavy general rains during the first half of September relieved the drouth in practically all sections except localities in southeastern New Mexico and scattered localities elsewhere.

"Continuing its upward trend which began last May total production of crude oil in the eleventh district showed a further gain of 1,094,000 barrels in August," says the review. "The total amount of crude oil produced during the month amounted to 28,500,000 barrels which compared with 27,405,200 barrels in July and 22,135,450 in the corresponding month (August) last year drilling was at a high rate, the number of completions being 998 of which 558 were producers of oil and 90 were gas wells as compared to 659 completions in July that netted 336 oil and 69 gas wells. The quantity of initial production rose from 104,970 barrels in July to 247,071 barrels in the current month."

Trying To Keep Track Of All Sug Schedules Is Impossible, Dutc Washington Correspondent, D

At Least 25 Plans Pushed Forward For Tariff, Says Capital Writer; Battle Is Mixed One

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28. — At least 25 different ways of fixing the sugar tariff schedule have been suggested since the Fordney-McCumber Act was sent to Congres for repairs.

Despite the plethora of suggestions, the so-called "battle of the sugar bowl" has centered around the 2.40 cent rate on Cuban sugar passed by the House, the 2.20 rate recommended by the Senate finance committee and the existing rate of 1.76 cents. Nevertheless, one of the many proposed solutions — a sliding bounty, a sliding scale or a sliding refiner's margin—may ultimately be adopted if the present rate is changed at all.

The fight is not a clear one between the domestic and Cuban producers because other organizations, such as the American Bottlers of Carbonated Beverages, h with pro-consumer org and the Democratic execu mittee in the fight to price of sugar down to its level.

A Mixed-Up Fight

Originally, however, it fight between American with sugar investments in and American capital with and cane sugar investments American soil. On the side intensely interested, are the sular producers of Hawaii, P Rico and the Phillipines, who bound to benefit if a higher ta barrier is raised against Cub raw sugar.

The sugar tariff suggestions ru from the three-cent rate recom mended by the American Farm Bureau Federation to the gradual elimination of the tariff in the next 13 years suggested by Cuban officials, who would grant reciprocal preference for American goods entering Cuba.

Five rates on Cuban raw sugar have been urged, three cents a pound, 2.40, 2.20, 1.76 and 1.23. The last and lowest figure is the difference in the cost of production here and in Cuba as found by the tariff commission.

Cuba gets a 20 per cent preferential on her exports to us, which is included in the foregoing figures. Two proposals to change that have been made. The Cubans suggested to the Senate finance

Razorbacks Go Six Times Over Goal Line Of College Of Ozarks In Mid-Summer Heat

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark., Sept. 28 (AP)—Arkansas university smashed six times over the College of the Ozarks' goal line to open its 1929 season with a 37 to 0 victory. The game was played in mid-summer heat.

Mountaineer fumbles gave the Razorbacks their first six points. Miller circled left end and within five minutes after the starting whistle to score the first touchdown. Schoonover, lanky end, grabbed a pass early in the second period and scampered over the line. Dale kicked goal. With this lead Coach Fred C. Thomsen jerkey hu entire first string. Butts and Kyle, sophomore backs who went in, annexed a pair of touchdowns on straight line plunges.

With the regulars finishing the game, Dale, veteran line smasher, plunged over almost the entire length of the field to score. Moore, tackle, fell on the ball over the goal line for the last touchdown. Chambers blocked the Mountaineer punt.

Hoover-Smith Row Will Reverberate Throughout South

Coming Senatorial Vote To Determine If Revolt In Democratic Ranks Is To Prove Permanent

BY JAMES L. WEST
Associated Press Staff Writer.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28. (AP) — Echoes of the Hoover-Smith presidential contest will reverberate through portions of the South in the forthcoming senatorial contests, which are expected to furnish evidence on whether the 1928 revolt within the democratic ranks in that section was merely temporary.

Two of the senators who were foremost in the opposition to the election of the democratic presidential candidate, Alfred E. Smith, Heflin, of Alabama, and Simmons, of North Carolina—are up for re-election next year and Heflin already has opposition in the primary campaign, with John Bankhead offering for his place.

No Opponent Enters.

Senator Carter Glass, one of the outstanding democratic leaders of the senate who stumped his state of Virginia for Smith, is up for re-election there. Although his speeches formed a large part of the record of the bitter fight in the Hoover-Smith campaign in that state, it appears now that he may be unopposed in the democratic primary for renomination.

Some leaders of the rival parties here now are of the opinion that the republicans will nominate one of their own number for the senate, with C. Bascom Slemp, national committeeman, and Henry W. Anderson, of Richmond, most prominently mentioned.

Sheppard To Run.

Senator Sheppard, author of the prohibition amendment, comes up for re-election in Texas and is likely to have primary opposition. The name of Gov. Dan Moody now bulks large in the discussions of probable candidates. The republicans undoubtedly will nominate a candidate there, hoping for support from the anti-Smith democrats, since both Sheppard and Moody supported the former New York governor.

The democrats feel confident of regaining the senate seat from Oklahoma now held by Pine, a republican, but the G. O. P. board of strategy is confident of holding this seat.

Republican leaders entertain scant hope of wresting a senate seat in Tennessee from the democrats.

Jury Deliberates Only One Hour In Shooting Case; Defendant Charged With Killing Brother-In-Law

BEAUMONT, Sept. 28. (AP)—Fred R. Peeler was acquitted here today on a charge of murder in connection with the fatal shooting of his brother-in-law, W. T. Gonce, at Spindletop Springs last winter. The jury received the case at 4:30 o'clock and was out one hour.

Mrs. Peeler, the wife of the defendant, testified that W. T. Gonce, her brother-in-law, had come to her home in Sour Lake about a year ago and in the absence of her husband had made insulting advances.

Told of Incident

She said that on November 13, some time later, she told her husband of the incident, on November 14 Peeler shot his brother-in-law to death while the latter was at work on an oil well at Spindletop Springs near here.

There was conflicting testimony as to whether Gonce brandished an ax handle in threatening manner before Peeler shot him, or whether Peeler shot without his brother-in-law having made a move toward him.

Mrs. Gonce, the widow, appeared on the witness stand in mourning. She was a witness for the state, as opposed to her sister.

Mrs. Gonce and Mrs. Peeler were married to the two principals in the tragedy in a double wedding in 1905.

committee that the preferential be raised to 40 percent, while farm organizations have recommended killing it altogether by abolishing the reciprocal treaty between the two countries.

That makes eight suggestions. The ninth is advanced by Juror Owens, secretary of the carbonated beverage bottlers, who would drink the soft drink industry a "drag back" on sugar consumption. It uses all the 300,000 tons of sugar annually, which would be equal to any tariff increase. This industry, which has been just as vociferous as the sugar companies themselves, contends that it must have protection against increased duties.

Candy Makers Protest

At least three proposals with refining differentials. Eastern refiners have asked that the duty 100 pounds higher than on raw. The House provided a 40-cent increase, making the duty on Cuban refined 2.80 cents a pound. But candy interests argued that this gave eastern refiners, who already had adequate protection against Cuban refined sugar, an additional annual profit of $19,000,000. They pointed out that only 200,000 tons of refined sugar enter the country as against about 5,000,000 tons refined here annually.

The famous sliding scale added at least 10 proposals to the list. At one stage sliding scales were being prepared for the price of raw sugar, the finance committee experts read them. Chairman Smoot based on the price of refined in New York. Others would based it on the price of raw sugar. Rudolph Spreckles, the refiner's margin. When fought for a sliding scale everyone opposed the sliding-scale at a special finance committee hearing the was junked.

Bull Fighters Stage Potent Attack In Final Periods After Fighting On Even Terms With Rabbits In 1st Half

Higginbotham-Payne Cohorts Look Promising In Opening Game Of 1929 Season; Intense Heat Hampers Scoring In First Two Quarters

BY ALLAN CARNEY
Avalanche-Journal Sports Editor

After a sluggish start, the Texas Tech Matadors unleashed a brilliant running and passing attack Saturday afternoon in their opening game of the 1929 season to defeat the husky Wayland College Jackrabbits, 19 to 0.

Displaying a powerful drive and a deceptive aerial attack after they once got started, the Bull Fighters overpowered the fighting Baptist gridsters in the third and fourth quarters and crossed the enemy goal thrice.

The cohorts of Grady Higginbotham and Victor Payne met a determined aggregation of Jackrabbits in the opening periods, and were unable to do more than hold their own with the opposition at hand. Members of both teams suffered from the intense heat and were forced to call time on several occasions.

Rabbits Show Strength

While the Matadors were having trouble getting their offense started, the invading Rabbits were showing the large opening day crowd how they held the Canyon Buffs to a scoreless tie on the previous week. A slashing attack built around the two Close brothers netted the visitors four first downs during the first half while the Matadors were making three.

Revived from their rest between halves, the Matadors opened up in the third quarter with their interference clicking perfectly and their backs sailing through for long consistent gains. With the ball at midfield, Basil Hill broke loose around the Rabbits' left flank and raced thirty yards before he was downed on Wayland's 25 yard line. He was aided by perfect interference at the start of his run. On the next play Brothers broke through tackle for 6 more, Hodges made two through center but the Rabbit line stiffened and the ball went over on the 1 yard line.

Rabbits Weaken

The Rabbits lacked the punch that had carried them through the Tech line in the opening periods, as they started their drive. Finding the Matadors holding on line plays, Close began throwing passes in all directions but one of these found the waiting arms of Basil Hill on their own 40-yard line. Hill tucked the leather under his wing and galloped 20 yards before he was downed. After Brothers had skimmed through tackle for 8 yards, Hodges darted across the other flank over the enemy goal line, but the play was called back and Tech penalized five yards, placing the ball on Wayland's 16-yard line. The Matadors refused to let up after the setback. After making two at the line, Hill tossed a 15-yard pass over the center of the line to Brothers who was downed on the visitors' one-yard line. Hodges plunged over for Tech's first touchdown of the season and made the extra point through the same hole in the line.

Tech Lineup Shifts

Coaches Higginbotham and Payne shifted their lineup often during the last quarter with the result that the Matador eleven grew stronger as the game wore on. As the Tech reserves continued to improve, the Wayland crew showed signs of weakening under the strain of battle. Taking the ball on Wayland's 40-yard line at the beginning of the final period, the scarlet clad gridsters drove to the 25-yard line and there lost the ball when Brothers fumbled a bad pass from center. Wayland recovered and when Close started to kick, Knowles and Dewitt were on him like a flash, Dewitt covering the ball on the seven-yard line. At this juncture Wooldridge took Hodges' place at fullback and on the first play crashed over for the Matadors' second touchdown. Dewitt's try for point after touchdown was wild.

Crites Breaks Loose

A beautiful 35-yard run by Harold Crites within the last few minutes of play gave the Matadors their third counter. Dick Green started the fireworks when he returned a Wayland punt 20 yards through a swarm of tacklers to his own 42-yard line. Chenoweth skimmed down the sideline for 8 yards. Wooldridge broke through the Rabbit line and made 20 yards through the secondary defense before he was downed. After Tech received another five-yard penalty, Crites took the pigskin on a sweeping end run and outdistanced the entire field to cross the goal line standing up.

Tech threatened to score again in the final minute of play when Dallas intercepted a Wayland pass on the visitors' 45-yard line and raced to the 25-yard line before he was downed. Wooldridge made seven over tackle but Crites' pass on the next play was intercepted and the game ended with the Jackrabbits in possession of the ball on their own 40-yard line.

Coach Kimbrough's aggregation showed worlds of power in the first half with E. Close and V. Close carrying the mail like veterans. Both of these shifty lads showed the Matadors plenty of speed and drive. Wilbanks at end also starred for the visitors.

Tech's backs by no means carried off the lion's share of the honors in yesterday's battle. Captains Knowles and Dewitt in the forward wall crashed through time after time to down the ball carrier for losses. Durham and Swift, the Tech centers, likewise were strong on the defense.

Sooner Teachers Trim Pittsburgh

PITTSBURGH, Kas., Sept. 28. (AP)—Flashing a running attack with Maurice Turner, halfback, getting away for huge gains, the Tahlequah, Oklahoma Teachers, defeated the Pittsburgh Teachers 13 to 7, before 4,000 fans here this afternoon.

After galloping 35 yards on a fake line play, Turner flipped a 12-yard pass to Wseley, left end, for the first counter in the initial period. His pass to Clark for extra point was incomplete.

The Gorillas tallied in the second quarter with straight off tackle plays, with Kahler carrying the ball. Smith put the Gorillas temporarily in the lead by adding the extra point from placement. The winning touchdown was made by Munn for the Indians.

The Gorillas made 161 yards from scrimmage as compared to 171 yards by Tahlequah.

Eastern Crushed 19 To 0 By Cagle And Army Crew

Fighting Guns Of Biff Jones' Aggregation Show Power In Overwhelming Defeat Of Boston University

BY BRIAN BELL
Associated Press Sports Writer

WEST POINT, N. Y., Sept. 28.—Army's big guns were too powerful today for a game little Boston University eleven and the Cadets started their season wit ha 26 to 0 victory. Early in the blistering mid-afternoon it seemed that the count would be much smaller. A crowd of approximately 12,000 saw the football curtain run up.

After the first two minutes of play when Army scored its first touchdown through excellent cooperation by Captain Keener Cagle and Herta Murrell in advancing the ball, the rest of the first half developed into a dingdong fight with no advantage in the draw.

Army Opens Up

The second half had much more Army activity, the home team counting three times, twice through the same Hurrell-Cagle combination so effective at the start and the last by the medium of a 35 yard pass toss from Hutchinson, the Army's most versatile athlete, to A. Maller, rangy end.

Boston University fought through to the final whistle, Marino playing a great defensive game. Hootstein was the Hub's best offensive threat until forced out in the third period by injuries.

Army did not escape representation in the casualty list, Carl Mark Perry and Piper suffering hurts.

Substitute Often

Captain Biff Jones relieved his troops by the dozen and late in the second period and through most of the last session had substitutes filling most of the places. Captain Cagle played only two periods but gained consistently while he was active.

Army's more or less green line played well although suffering many penalties through over-anxiety to be up and at the opposition. Miller, who started at center, gave a good account of himself as did Hillsinger, a new guard.

Lineups:

ARMY	Pos.	BOSTON
Miller	Center	Barrett
Hillsinger	Right Guard	Dincolo
Perry	Right Tackle	Stone

Longhorns Down St. Edwards In Opening Game, 13-0

Scoring Punch Is Lacking In First Game Of Champs

Steers Score First Marker On Blocked Punt; Saint Forward Wall Strong In Trying Times

AUSTIN, Sept. 28. (AP)—The scoring punch that carried the University of Texas to a Southwest conference title last year was missing today as the Longhorns defeated St. Edwards University, 13-0, in the Steers' first brush of the season.

One of the victor's touchdowns came in the second quarter when Ox Emerson hurled his giant form at Jansing and blocked the Saint back's punt. Peterson, who had been sent in to replace Rose at end, fell on the oval as it rolled across the St. Edward's goal line. Shelley failed in the try for an extra point.

For most of the third quarter, the two elevens battled on even terms, the Saint forward wall repulsing a Longhorn bid for a second touchdown on the five yard line, when Shelley was smothered by a mass of tacklers. Once more in possession of the ball, however, Shelley found a gaping hole in the line and raced 16 yards for a touchdown. This time he converted.

Saints Threaten

The Saints made their most noteworthy scoring threat early in the second quarter. After Beular had fumbled a punt and Captis had recovered for St. Edwards on Texas 30 yard line, Ransom and Figari carried the pigskin to the six yard stripe. There Bomba lacked inches of making first down and the Longhorns kicked out of danger.

The lineups:

TEXAS	Pos.	ST. EDWARDS
Emerson	Left Tackle	Blackwell
Burnett	Center	Farr
Nemir	Right Guard	Hertenberger (c)
Brown (c)	Right Tackle	Vogt
Rose	Right End	Frisch
Meadows	Quarterback	Fanette
Beular	Right Halfback	Parma
Beard	Fullback	Scott

By periods:

Texas	0	6	7	9	—13
St. Edwards	0	0	0	0	— 0

Touchdowns: Peterson (sub for Rose); Shelley (sub for Beular) point after touchdown, Shelley.

Officials: Wolf, Baylor, referee; Frasier; (Baylor), umpire, Henderson (Temple), head linesman; Dier (Rice), field judge.

Amarillo Sandies Punish Redbirds From City, 34-7

Sandstorm Eleven Gains Sweet Revenge for Defeat At Hands Of Oklahoma City Team Last Season

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

AMARILLO, Sept. 28.—The Amarillo Sandies today got sweet revenge on the Oklahoma City Cardinals for the defeat of last year by swamping them under a 34 to 7 score. With Bill MacGibson flashing bursts of speed and uncanny running and Burkins ability to lope over and through the opposition at will, the game was a case of Bill toting the mail down to scoring position and Burkin going over for counters. The Sandy line was all powerful on the defense and completely outclassed the Cardinal wall. Hudgins called the game for Amarillo and mixed things up in nice style.

The Oklahomans only score came in the first part of the game when Clemens, full, punted to the Amarillo's one-yard line. Lockhart's attempt to punt out of danger resulted in a feeble rise of the ball for only eight yards. Two plays with Clemens carrying the ball scored for the Redbirds.

The starting lineups:

AMARILLO	Pos.	CENTRAL
Nicklaus	Center	Hickman
Nolan	Right Guard	White
Sheppard	Right Tackle	Pace

Hudgins	Quarterback	Reese
Bufkin	Halfback	Boggs
Gibson	Halfback	Dobbs
Lockhart	Fullback	Clemens

Summary: touchdowns, Boggs 1, Bufkin 5. Goal after touchdown, Gibson 2. First downs, Amarillo 20, Oklahoma City 2, (Exclusive of penalty). Yards from scrimmage (including forward passes.) O'Doul Is Headed For Title Honors In National Loop

Philadelphia Slugger In Long Lead Over Herman For Batting Championship Of 1929 Season

NEW YORK, Sept. 28. (AP)—With only a week of the season remaining, Frank O'Doul of Philadelphia leads Babe Herman of Brooklyn by .392 to .384 in the race for the batting championship of the National League. By this time next week the former Yankee pitcher will have brought Baker Bowl its first blue ribbon since the palmy days of Ed Delehanty back in 1898 when the same structure was known simply as the Philadelphia ball park. Ed topped the National League with a neat .408 in the year of the Spanish American war.

Margin Seems Safe

Eight points fail to make O'Doul's position impregnable, but Herman for some weeks has been unable to close the gap separating him from the top. He has had nothing but bad luck since the ill-starred afternoon when he sacrificed in the ninth inning at Ebbets field with Brooklyn five or six runs behind. The great hue and cry raised over that seemed to do something to Herman's nerve.

Other leading regular batsmen, in averages issued today and including games of last Wednesday, are: Terry, New York, .375; Hornsby, Chicago, .374; Traynor, Pittsburg, .366; Stephenson, Chicago, .358; Klein, Philadelphia, .357; Lloyd Waner, Pittsburgh, .354 and Hendrick, Brooklyn, .349.

Frank Leads In Hits

In addition to heading the batting list, O'Doul leads in total hits with 237. Hornsby is on top in runs scored with 148 and his teammate, Hack Wilson, sets the pace in runs batted in with 152. In the week ending last Wednesday, both Melvin Ott and Chuck Klein entered the circle reserved for hitters of forty National League home runs. Ott shaded his Philadelphia rival by forty-two to forty-one on Wednesday, after tieing Rogers Hornsby's National League record on the previous afternoon.

John Frederick of Brooklyn hit two doubles on Wednesday to run his total to fifty-two, which shaded by two the modern National League record made last year by Paul Waner. Ed Delehmanty holds the all-time record with 56 in 1899. Lloyd Waner leads in triples with 19, and Cuyler in stolen bases with 40.

Despite his recent failures, Guy Bush remains at the head of the pitching caravan, this week with eighteen victories and six defeates for a percentage of .750. His teammate, Charlie Root, is directly behind him with seventeen and six for .739, and Pat Mwone, another Chicago entry, is third with twenty-two and nine for .710. Burleigh Grimes of Pittsburgh is next with seventeen and seven for .708.

Phils Lead In Batting

Philadelphia leads in team batting with .306, with Pittsburgh and Chicago tied for second place two points lower in the scale. New York is fourth with .297, Chicago leads in fielding with .975, one point above the Reds and the Giants who are tied for second honors.

Either High-Powered Pitching Or Hefty Slugging Will Dominate Coming World Series, Says Expert

Classic Is Likely To Resolve Into Battle Of Wits

Great Pitching And Devastating Punch Are Pitted In Series Between Macks And Chicago Cubs

BY BILLY EVANS

What has the 1929 world series to offer that is out of the ordinary with the Philadelphia Athletics and the Chicago Cubs as the contending teams?

High-powered pitching and hefty slugging, is the answer.

I seriously doubt if any world series has ever before presented as contenders two teams so nearly identical in their style of play. The Athletics and Cubs have great pitching and a devastating punch at the bat. To further carry out the scheme of equality and sameness, both play in ball parks made to order for the slugger type.

To me it would be no surprise if the coming series resolved itself into a battle of home runs and some of them are liable to be of the mighty, cheap- variety. Almost every member of both the Cubs and Athletics has a chance to deliver a home run drive, since all of them hit a long ball, as they say in golf.

Working at either Wrigley Field or Shibe Park, no pitcher can feel at all safe, unless he is out in front with a margin of four runs or better. A home run with the bases filled is a quick way of wiping out a four-run edge. On the small playing fields of the major leagues and Wrigley and Shibe Park must be included in that class, home runs with the bases filled are common occurences.

Battle of Wits.

Thus a resume of the situation makes it apparent that the series will early resolve itself into a battle of wits between clever pitchers and truly great hitters. As I see it, the chances are there will be no happy medium to the coming series. I look for either the pitchers or batters to control the situation. On that line of reasoning, the games should be either low or high score affairs.

I am not giving much thought to defensive play afield in the clash between the Cubs and the Athletics. I am inclined to think that most of the defense must come from the pitchers. While the outfields of the two clubs will pass muster from a defensive angle, neither of the two infields can be rated as impressive, defensively. There are several weak spots in both of the inner defenses that may play a decisive part in the final reckoning.

It is my thought that the two infields, while they rate as fair, cannot be classed with those of many other championship clubs I can recall. Back in 1911, the Cubs and Athletics waged battle for the world's title, the latter team winning. Those two clubs boasted super infields. The Cubs had Frank Chance at first, Johnny Evers at second, Joe Tinker at short and Harry Steinfeidt at third. The Athletics had what was known as the $100,000 infield — McInnis at first, Eddie Collins at second, Jack Barry at short and "Home-Run" Frank Baker at third. There you have two great infields, gentlemen! On the 1929 infields, Jimmy Foxx at first for the Athletics and Rogers Hornsby at second for the Cubs are the only standouts.

All of which again causes me to repeat the belief that never before have I seen two teams, so identical in every way, meet for the world's title. Throughout the season, each club has had fine pitching and there is every reason to believe it will continue. Each club has had a run-making punch and it has been confined to much the same quarters. The Cubs' outfield plus Rogers Hornsby at second have furnished the scoring power for the Chicago club, while the Athletic outfield and Jimmy Foxx at first have shown the way for the Mackmen.

In only one respect is there a wide difference of rating, to my way of thinking. I have reference to the catching. It is possible that some of the experts may disagree with me, but with all due respect to the Cub receivers, the Athletics will have a wide margin back of the plate. "Mickey" Cochrane of the Mackmen is easily the standout catcher of the American league and I feel he holds as wide a margin over the National league backstops.

Compare the two clubs at any positions other than catching and you will reach a 50-50 solution. The same holds good when you consider the offensive and defensive play and go into the pitching situation. However, when you get to the catching, it is a lopsided affair and in reaching such a conclusion, there is no desire to overlook the fact that the Chicago catching has been good enough to play an important part in the victory of the Cubs.

Brains and Courage.

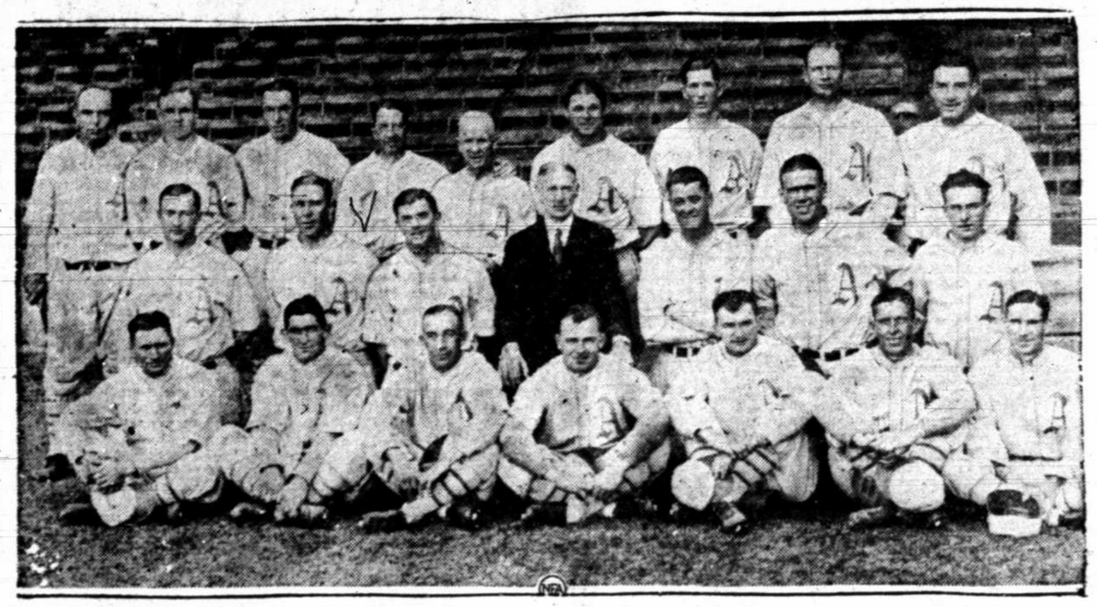
"Mickey" Cochrane of the Athletics must be classed as one of the really great catchers of all time. No list of the 10 best catchers in baseball would be complete without the name of Cochrane. He can do everything well and, best of all, has a keen mind that is on a par with his mechanical ability. He can think, and no more courageous catcher ever pulled a mask over his face.

Take "Mickey" Cochrane away from the Athletics and the team loses much of its fight, the edge is taken away from the pitchers' effectiveness. Even when the club wins without Cochrane in the lineup, it looks far less impressive. And you mustn't forget that the veteran Cy Perkins, Mack has a mighty fine catcher in reserve. Cochrane must be classed as one of the very important cogs in the Athletics' machine.

I can see no reason why the meeting between the Athletics and Cubs shouldn't provide one of the most interesting world series ever staged. For those who like pitchers' battles, there is a possibility that the rival hurlers may dominate the situation. Yet, if such a thing happens, there is always the element of uncertainty hanging over the scene, the chance that the big guns of either club may start firing and ruin some tense pitcher's battle by scoring runs in clusters.

Partisan fans will, of course, see only one side of the argument, but really, trying to pick the winner of this 1929 series, which I will attempt in another article, is anything but a soft job.

Mack Is Victorious After 15 Years Of Experimenting



YOU are looking at the 1929 champions of the American League, and possibly the world champions. Not since 1914 have Connie Mack's Philadelphia Athletics won a pennant. They turned the trick that season with a galaxy of stars that included Stuffy McInnis, Eddie Collins, Home Run Baker, and Jack Coombs. Since then the lank pilot of the Athletics has experimented with various players. He's had a good team for the past two years, but they accomplished little compared to the New York Yankees. The needed spark was added this spring and the Mackmen proceeded to burn up the league. They have enjoyed a substantial lead over the second place Yankees all season.

Southern Methodist Forced To Limit To Gain 13 - 13 Decision In Battle With Howard Payne Yellowjackets

Texas Conference Club Leads 13-0 At End Of Third Quarter; Passes Score For Ponies

DALLAS, Sept. 28. (AP)—Southern Methodist university was forced to the limit in gaining a 13 to 13 tie with the Howard Payne College Yellowjackets here today. The visitors led, 13 to 0, at the end of the third quarter. Twice in the final period the Ponies marched down the field, using a strong running and passing attack, and squared the score just before the last gun.

Gibbs, shifty Jacket halfback, took the Mustangs' breath away in the first quarter when he intercepted an aerial on his own two-yard line and ran through the entire Methodist team for a touchdown. He was not tagged on the way. Baker kicked the extra point, giving the visitors a 7 to 0 lead, which they carried through the half.

Jackets Score Again.

In the third period the Jackets counted again on a pass from Hutchinson to McCarver, who raced 25 yards across the line.

A 35-yard return of a punt by Weldon Eason paved the way for the Mustangs' first score in the last period. A pass, Mason to Koontz, took the ball to the four-yard mark, and on the next play Kattman went around end to score. Mason missed extra point.

After an exchange of punts, Mason tossed a basket pass to Davidson, who ran 25 yards untouched for the score. This time Mason made the needed point.

The Howard Payne forwards outcharged their conference adversaries consistently and Mustang power plays were useless. Only when they went into the air did the Ponies prove a match for Coach Cheaney's eleven.

Huskers Defeat Nebraska Frosh

LINCOLN, Nebr., Sept. 28. It was the first real tryout in a regular lineup under the tutelage of the new coach and he declared himself satisfied with the showing. The gates were thrown open to a crowd of 5,000.

Fonseca Gains On Simmons In Race For Swat Honors

Indian's First Baseman Takes Advantage Of Layoff Of A's Slugger To Put 5 Points On

CHICAGO, Sept. 28. (AP)—While Al Simmons of the Athletics rested his bludgeon to prepare for the World series, Lew Fonseca of Cleveland was busy gaining on him in the race for the American League batting championship during the past week.

In 25 official trips to the plate, the Indians' first baseman made twelve hits and lifted his batting mark for the season from .362 to .367, unofficial averages including Wednesday's games show. Simmons participated in but three games, batted ten times and hiked his average one point to .370.

Jimmy Foxx, Philadelphia first baseman who was tied for second place with Fonseca last week, also paid for championship inactivity, his average dropping three points to .359. Other leaders failed to make much headway toward the top. They and their unofficial averages are: Manush, St. Louis, .355; Lazzeri, New York, .363; Combs, New York, .345; Ruth, New York, .344; Alexander, Detroit, .340; E. Miller, Philadelphia, .338, and Gehringer, Detroit, .331.

Tom Zachary of the Yankees kept marching on with an undefeated record in the pitching race, winning another game for an even dozen victories. Lefty Grove, the recognized leader, started but one game and didn't finish that so held his record of 20 victories and five losses.

No changes of importance were noticed among the other leaders. Detroit dropped two points in team batting but held the lead with a .297 mark, two points better than Cleveland and Philadelphia, tied for second place, while the athletics lead in team fielding with a .975 mark, one point more than St. Louis. Simmons held his lead in the department of hits, and hits for most total bases. He has collected 207 blows, which have been good for 358 bases, and is tied with Babe Ruth if the Yankees in driving in runs each having pushed 146 across.

Gehringer of Detroit topped the field in individual runs scored with 125 and in stolen bases with 26; Lefty Grove is far ahead of the field with his 160 strikeouts, while Cleveland turned in nine double plays during the week for a total of 157.

Arkansas Routs C. Of O. In First Game Of Season

Razorbacks Go Six Times Over Goal Line Of College Of Ozarks In Mid-Summer Heat

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark., Sept. 28 (AP)—Arkansas university smashed six times over the College of the Ozarks' goal line to open its 1929 season with a 37 to 0 victory. The game was played in mid-summer heat.

Mountaineer fumbles gave the Razorbacks their first six points. Miller circled left end and within five minutes after the starting whistle to score the first touchdown. Schoonover, lanky end, grabbed a pass early in the second period and scampered over the line. Dale kicked goal. With this lead Coach Fred C. Thomsen jerkey his entire first string. Butts and Kyle, sophomore backs who went in, annexed a pair of touchdowns on straight line plunges.

With the regulars finishing the game, Dale, veteran line smasher, plunged over almost the entire length of the field to score. Moore, tackle, fell on the ball over the goal line for the last touchdown. Chambers blocked the Mountaineer punt.

The largest band Iowa U has ever had — 125 pieces — will lend color to the football scene this fall, very high at the University of Chicago this year. The Maroons upset Princeton in 1921. They meet again this year. "We haven't a fair chance," Coach Stagg predicts.

IOWA CITY, Sept. 28. (AP)—Oran Pape, Talls University of Iowa halfback, escaped the ineligibility axe in time to play against Carroll college today, but a dozen other Hawkeye football players, already in uniform, were barred from competition by action of the athletic board eligibility committee this afternoon.

Incomplete registration prevented Gus Mastrogany and Seward Lefke, ends, from joining the squad, and scholastic difficulties placed Randahl Hickman and Oliver Samsen, sophomore backs, and Earl Elting, center, on the ineligible list.

Others Barred

Others barred from the game were Pete Affre, halfback; Oakley Carlson, Carl Blickhan and Kenneth trickey, ends; and William McCulley and Harold Ahntelman, linesmen.

Hawkeye athletic officals, when news of the list leaked out tonight expressed the belief that the status of most of the men was due to minor technicalities.

Full Program On Tap For Plains Elevens At Fair

Strong Grid Teams Of Section Carded In Six-Day Attraction At Annual Exposition

Football fans of Lubbock and the South Plains are in for a full week of activity here next week as the Panhandle-South Plains Fair gets under way.

Beginning Monday afternoon at 3:15, a full week's schedule of football on the athletic field at the fair grounds will get under way with the Lubbock Pioneers and the Lorenzo Hornets matched.

Some of the strongest Class A and B grid aggregations of all West Texas are carded on the football program for this year's exposition which has been arranged by Jas. H. Goodman, director of fair athletics.

Ralls Jackrabbits, runners-up in the 1928 District Two Class B race, will clash with Marlin Hayhurst's Brownfield Cubs Tuesday afternoon. The Rabbits showed a flashy attack in their recent game here with the Lubbock Westerners, but are certain to find a stiff foe in the Brownfield eleven.

Coach Finis Vaughn and his Crosbyton Chiefs take the field Wednesday in a scheduled battle with the Levelland football aggregation. Although the Chiefs are doped to take this game with little effort, Levelland boosters are strong in their belief that Crosoyton has no set-up.

Two keen rivals in Class B football of this section meet Thursday when the Tahoka Bulldogs tangle with Littlefield. Reports from these camps indicates that the two clubs are just as evenly matched as in previous years.

Post Antelopes, 1928 regional champions, boasting one of the strongest teams in the history of the school, are here Friday with the O'Donnell eleven as their opponent. Coaches Harry Taylor and Anthony Hunt have their eyes set on the West Texas championship this season and their progress will be closely watched by the entire section.

Climaxing the week's program of gridiron activity will be the final game Saturday between the Plainview Bulldogs, members of District One, Class A, and the Slaton Tigers, another contender for the Class B crown in this region. The Bengals' performance in previous games this season indicates that the Plainview aggregation will have its hands full in turning back the cohorts of Paul Wright.

Following are the officials who have been named to handle the six games this week: Alton Swain, Vaughn Wilson, Hurley Carpenter, E. J. Lowery, Henry Prnka, Gilbert Jackson, Del Morgan, J. "Mule" Davis, Rhodes Ingerton, Bruce Reed, B. F. Condry and L. G. H. Williams. The last named will serve as field judge in all the games.

He Will Direct U. S. Waterways

Three of the greatest engineering projects in the nation's history will be directed by Brig. Gen. Lytle Brown, above, newly appointed chief of the Army Corps of Engineers. He'll supervise the flood control program in the lower Mississippi and its tributaries, and the proposed St. Lawrence deep waterway to the sea. He succeeds Lieut. Gen. Edgar Jadwin, retired.

No Pep Squad For T. C. U. This Year

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

FORT WORTH, Sept. 28.—Crowds which see Texas Christian university play football this season will miss one colorful feature of the contest. T. C. U. will have no Girls' Pep squad this year.

The 50 purple and white clad girls, in their jaunty bell-hop uniforms, have furnished many a colorful between halves stunt for football crowds.

The powers-that-be this year decided that the pep squad was "high schoolish" and ruled that it should be discontinued.

NAVY ELEVEN VICTOR

Middies Smother Denison University, 47-0

ANNAPOLIS, Sept. 28. (AP)—Navy made an auspicious start on its quest for 1929 football honors, smothering Denison University of Ohio, 47 to 0, here today. Navy displayed a smooth running attack which put Kohlas and Clifton over twice, and Spring, Crane, Clifton and Toth each once for touchdowns.

New York boxing critics were inclined to blame Victorio Campolo's inexperience for his surprise defeat at the hands of Phil Scott.

Intimate Sketches of World Series Stars

"CY" PERKINS

Cy Perkins is well physically, has one of the greatest arms in baseball, but will hardly play a bit more important part in the series than the crippled Hartnett. . . . The reason: the Athletics have the best catcher in baseball in Mickey Cochrane. . . . Perkins, a great catcher in his day, still a mighty good one, is getting his chance to late. . . . Joined the Athletics in 1918 and is serving his 12th year under Mack.

Cy Perkins

. . . When he was an outstanding catcher in the American league, the Athletics with a weak team were annually finishing in last place. . . . Is one of the few catchers in baseball to have worked more than 1,000 major league games. . . . For six consecutive years caught in 100 or more games. . . . Had four mighty strenuous years from 1920 to 1923. . . . In each one of those years worked 140 or more games, his high water mark being 148. . . . Always had a great arm and it is still as good as ever. . . . Cub players will testify to the truth of that statement if Perkins happens to get into the series. . . . Has been a great help to Mack in keeping his pitching staff on edge. . . . Not a great hitter, his average over 12 years is a trifle better than .260. . . . Has spent his entire big league career with the Athletics. . . . Mack first discovered him in 1914. . . . Did great service for Mack when things were breaking tough. . . . Probably has a job with the Athletics as long as he cares to stay.

"GABBY" HARTNETT

Charles (Gabby) Hartnett is both the hard luck as well as the good luck member of the Chicago Cubs—lucky because he is with a pennant winner—unlucky because his bad arm may prevent him from doing any catching. . . . Only chance to break into the series will be in the role of pinch hitter. . . . In the spring he suffered an arm injury that many critics feared would be a knockout to the Cub's pennant chances. . . . Arm failed to respond to treatment, despite the fact that any number of famous specialists were consulted. . . . Got his name "Gabby" because of his constant chatter back of the bat. . . . In 1927 he caught 127 games for the Cubs and the following year worked in 130. . . . There was no chance for any other catcher to break in, with Hartnett in shape to go. . . . That is why it was feared his arm injury would prove a hard blow to Chicago's pennant chances. . . . The winning of the pennant by the Cubs with just ordinary catching, temporarily disproves the accepted belief that a championship club needs a star back of the bat. . . . A good batter, noted for his long distance drives, it was felt the Cubs would miss his many hits for the circuit. . . . He undoubtedly has been missed but the team has gone along with mediocre backstopping. . . . Doubt is expressed as to the chances for his arm to recover. . . . It would be a shame to have so great a catcher pass out.

SPORT SLANTS

CROWD psychology is one of the strangest factors in sport.

The razzberries from a boxing crowd are a part of the game. The vocal chorus from the bleachers at a ball game is an institution.

"So long as they pay their money at the gate, the fans are entitled to yell their heads off," a famous ball player said to me once. "I am never bothered by what the crowd does unless somebody happens to get a little too personal. All the razz otherwise rolls off me like so much water on a duck's back. The cheers are the same. The boys who are for you one day are against you the next."

The raucious cry of the disappointed gambler or the leather-lung is taken for granted in professional sport. It is only recently that the more fashionable games of polo, tennis and golf, attracting an ever-growing public interest, have had to contend with the element of crowd psychology and reaction.

Golf is among the last to feel a break in the barriers of etiquette and decorum. Golf crowds have been difficult to control but the hostility displayed by the galleries of Pebble Beach toward one of the finalists, Dr. Oscar Willing, was something new, something of a shock—all because more partisan onlookers disliked the doctor's unwillingness to concede short putts or his habit of standing nearby when an opponent was in trouble or a bunker.

The trend, however, seems clear. Forest Hills has seen the tennis galleries become more partisan as the game has drawn greater public interest. Apparently golfers now must gird themselves for the same reaction—for the jeers as well as the cheers.

This business of needing silence or freedom from any disturbing factor in playing golf is largely a matter of habit," one of the contestants at Pebble Beach said. "Players in other sports have drilled themselves to ignore the crowds and so can golfers. It may never come to this point but we may as well be prepared some day to shoot while some partisans are yelling at us to 'miss it' or 'sock it into the bunker, you big stiff.' Stranger things have happened.

When ten thousand people or more become sufficiently interested in golf to gallop all over a championship course, blistering their feet, jostling and prespiring for the sake of seeing the stars make their shots, some play for the emotions may as well be expected. Even the polite traditions of the royal and ancient game cannot quite control outbursts of partisanship under such circumstances. The "razz" may not be sportsmanlike but it apparently has come to stay and develop in American sport, so long as the big bellyhoo keeps up.

COMPLIMENTS VISITOR

One of the largest social affairs of the season had its attractive setting in the T. G. Hendrick home on Harrison Avenue on Tuesday evening, when Mesdames Payton Powers, T. G. Traditions Mark Wedding Of John And Florence

Newlyweds Will Be Busy And Self Sufficient

BY JULIA BLANSHARD
NEA Service Writer

PLAINVILLE, Conn., Sept. 28.—John Coolidge and his bride will start their married life, in an early American setting, quite in keeping with the early American traditions of genuineness and simplicity that produced both the Coolidge and the Trumbull families.

"Mrs. Coolidge is giving us the loveliest early American furniture for the bedroom," Florence told me, her fresh young face alight with happiness.

"Mother is making us a present of Governor Winthrop's own desk, a very early American piece," she continued. "And I have picked the pine tree pattern of silver."

Aided In Picking Furniture

Along with the high boys, four-poster bed and two rocking chairs that the former First Lady of the Land chose, there are simple frilled curtains, old-fashioned patchwork quilts and replicas of old Colonial hooked rugs. "Mother and Mrs. Coolidge helped me pick out most of the rest of my furniture," Florence said.

Seeing Florence, this type of setting would seem most appropriate. The fondness of the townsfolk, who all call her "Florence," the way the pleasant-faced, middle-aged maid who opened the door spoke of her, the way she and John went to the minister to make wedding arrangements instead of summoning him to come to the Governor's daughter — all these bespeak the wholesome simplicity of the most famous September bride.

Rooms filled with gifts attest her popularity. They have come from all over the United States two or three dozen daily for the past month.

Don't Look For Presents

"We have received several lovely rugs," Florence began, listing some outstanding gifts. "One is a lovely Chinese blue one, two are Persian orientals. We've had several handsome lamps, vases. Some exquisite linen, pictures, china, silver candlesticks — I just can't remember them all.

"But the funniest presents are cook books from all over creation. I guess everybody's worried because I'm going to do the cooking and have admitted that I don't know very much about it."

Florence's young laughter rang out gaily. She really meant to start learning before now, she admitted. But she has been too busy. She has tackled neither bread nor pies as yet. But she intends to learn, and a lot of other things about housekeeping, too.

"I am going to do all my marketing, run the house on a budget, do the washing, ironing, and even scrubbing," she declared authoritatively.

She'll Be Own Manicurist

I asked her what about her hands, and her nails, which are beautifully kept. She looked at them. "I can do them, too," she said, quite as though she already were her own manicurist.

John and Florence chose their four-room apartment in the Westville section of New Haven partly because of its nearness to an excellent marketing section.

John is coming home to lunch every day. So Florence will cook three meals a day, including a seven o'clock breakfast to start John off right.

"I think keeping house for someone you care for is a real career," Florence said. "I never wanted to work outside, this way so many girls do nowadays. Anyhow," she smiled, "I know I won't have time for more than keeping house. And that will always come first."

House-Dress in Trousseau

Florence has some [illegible] house-dresses in her [illegible], which proves she means it. She looked so young in her soft blue jersey sports suit that as she talked joyously of such mundane things as marketing for carrots and spinach and scrubbing floors she seemed like a little girl playing make-believe house.

Florence's wedding gown is her first dress with a train. It is a lovely white satin princess one, with a very long court train, simple, elegant, with the Duchess lace veil its won decoration. Her going-away costume is of Hunter's green velvet, a three-piece ensemble with a little green turban to match. Other pretty things in her trousseau include a couple of rich blue flat crepe frocks, one with a lace color in ecru.

John and Florence's ideas of thrift will extend to their entertaining for it is to be economy all along the line if they are to live on John's salary. "And we are," Florence insists. "I have always kept within my own allowance."

"We aren't going to lead a social life," she continued. "Neither of us likes night clubs or formal dinners out. We'd both rather eat at home. And I think it will be the most fun in the world having dinner parties right in our own home. Both John and I want the same kind of home life our parents have."

The late closing of the majors is making it hard on the players who usually pick up exhibition game money in the fall.

Body Of Murdered Ranchman Shipped For Texas Burial

Group Of Old Friends Will Accompany Remains of P. R. Austin Following His Death In Hotel Room

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., Sept. 28. (AP)—The body of P. R. Austin, wealthy Victoria, Texas, cattleman who was murdered in his room at a local hotel Thursday night, was placed on a special car of the Sunshine Express today and will be accompanied back to Texas by a group of his old friends who reached town this afternoon.

Rewards totalling $3,000 have been offered for the arrest of his slayers. The hotel in which he was murdered has offered $1,000 and his friends have offered $2,000.

Robbery Motive

After investigating every clue obtainable officers today decided three men took part in the killing and that robbery was the most probable motive.

A description of three young men and a girl traveling in a small blue automobile bearing a California license was broadcast by radio today and officers were asked to pick the party up for questioning.

Three youths got off the elevator of the hotel shortly before the murder is thought to have taken place, and left that floor by the elevator shortly after the supposed time of the killing according to an elevator boy.

Services Set

VICTORIA, Tex., Sept. 28 (AP)—Funeral services for Preston R. Austin, prominent South Texas ranchman found murdered in a hotel at Hot Springs, Ark., will be held at his home here Monday afternoon. The body will arrive Monday morning.

Guy H. Hensley, secretary to Austin late today was unable to give information to Prosecutor W. G. Boulc supporting Boulc's theory that revenge might have been the motive for Austin's slaying.

One man about whom inquiry was made by Hot Springs authorities was said unofficially, however, to have had some trouble with Austin years ago.

Twenty-five Young Paraders Arrested

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 28. (AP)—Twenty-five members of the young communist league of America, including three women, were arrested by police tonight when they staged a demonstration on a down town street corner protesting against the trial of the Gastonia textile strikers in North Carolina, who are accused of the murder of a police official.

Despite the great number of automobiles in London a recent test of the saying that "you cannot cross the London Bridge without seeing a white horse" was found to be true.

Sender Of Letter Threatening Death To Wealthy Rancher Object Of Hunt

VICTORIA, Tex., Sept. 28. (AP)—The senders of a letter threatening John J. Welder, wealthy south Texas ranchman and president of the Victoria National bank, with death unless he deposited $2,000 under a bridge on the Seadrift road today, were sought tonight by federal and local authorities aided by a scouting airplane. Welder did not leave the money.

Welder turned the letter over to Sheriff Robert S. Weisiger. It was postmarked at Victoria, Sept. 26, undated and unsigned. The lettering, in pencil print, read:

Letter Threatens

"Dear Sir: We are in distress and need some money. There is three of us and we want you to leave two thousand dollars in ten dollar bills under the bridge on this end of the joice. This is the first bridge after you cross the railroad track and hit the shell road on the Seadrift road. And don't take no numbers of the bills. And we want you to put it there yourself and have no one with you. And have no one to watch or be around there. Only one of us will go there after it. So if you catch him the other two will leave you lying on the road some day if it takes them the rest of their lives to do it. So the best thing you can do is to leave it there and say nothing to anyone about it. We are honest about this and will pay you back when we get on our feet again. So if you want to stay in this world you had better leave that money there. We want you to leave it there on Sept. 28, 1929."

The bridge referred to is in Calhoun county a few miles beyond Bloomington. It was heavily guarded from various concealed vantage points throughout the day and an airplane was used to fly over the surroundings seeking to spot lurking men.

Contending Sides In Tariff Rookus Claiming Victory

Both Factions Confident Of Success Over Dispute On Retention Of Giving Power To Change Duties

By D. HAROLD OLIVER
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28. (AP)—Contending factions in the senate dispute over retention in the tariff bill of the seven-year-old policy of permitting the President to change customs duties, continued to express confidence of success today after a round of conferences.

The senate took a day off for the first time since it began consideration of the Hawley-Smoot measure three weeks ago and all groups, realizing the influence a victory will have for their respective causes, were bending their energies to corral all possible votes.

Claim Victory

Republican leaders, backed by President Hoover in their efforts to keep the flexible principle in the bill, reiterated they had enough votes to win when the issue is decided next week. Democratic chieftains countered with the claim that they had sufficient strength to repeal the provision. They were supported in this view by the republican independents who share their sympathies on the question.

That the issue may hinge on a single vote was indicated by Senator Smoot, republican, Utah, who said he was unwilling to give the democrats a pair for Senator Copeland, of New York, en route home from Europe.

To Ask For Vote

Smoot said he would ask for a vote by 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon but thought a decision would be delayed until later.

Anxious to strengthen the democratic cause, the republican independents held a meeting during the day and decided to propose an amendment to the Simmons' proposal for repeal of the flexible provisions, and for making the tariff commission an agency of congress alone.

Former Dancer Of Lubbock Married

Miss Anna M. Brown, 21, New York dancer and formerly of Lubbock, will be married today to John Harry Shutta, 30, a New York actor, according to a special dispatch to the Avalanche-Journal Saturday from New York.

A marriage license was obtained by the two at the municipal bureau at New York yesterday and their announcement stated they would be married Sunday.

Miss Brown, daughter of George W. and Anna Laura Hunt Brown, lives at the Hotel Embassy while Mr. Shutta, son of Charles and Gussie Lily Shutta, resides at 321 West 108 street.

Shutta, the dispatch stated, has been married once before, his wife dying in 1924.

Merchants of London are protesting that they are losing many orders because customers do not understand how to get the stores over new automatic telephones.

"Bat" Battalino, new featherweight champion, will spend a year barnstorming before meeting any of the topnotchers, 'tis said.

Americans are reported to have been the best customers when a London shop held a sale of flasks that would hold five bottles of whiskey.

Looting Reported In San Marcial's Flooded District

Martial Law Decreed Along San Acacia Section And Troops From Ft. Bliss, El Paso, Requested

(By Associated Press)

EL PASO, Sept. 28.—Looting has broken out in the deserted homes and stores of flood swept San Marcial, N. M., according to telephone messages to the Associated Press from J. E. O'Bannon, telegraph operator at the place. O'Bannon says that refugees from the hills come in at night to loot the unprotected stores.

The few persons left at San Marcial reported that troops from Fort Bliss would be sent there to patrol the village. Brigadier General Charles J. Symmonds, commander at Fort Bliss, said no request has yet been made to him for troops and that none would be sent until requests had been made by higher army officials.

Martial Law Declared

San Acacia has been declared under martial law by New Mexico officials and the work of rehabilitation has begun. A movement also was reported to call out the New Mexico National guard to send to San Marcial and other places in the flood area to prevent looting.

O'Bannon estimated the damage done San Marcial and the flooded district between 2 and 3 million dollars.

Find 'Killer'

Scarecrow Sends Lad To Hiding

TUCKAHOE, N. J., Sept. 28. (AP)—After sending a bullet through the straw stuffed head of a scarecrow, thirteen-year-old John Dirocco, of this town, early Friday fled into the cedar swamps south of here and remained there for more than thirty hours, believing that he was being sought as a killer.

He was discovered yesterday by a posse and taken to Mays Landing for medical treatment. He suffered considerably from exposure, but was otherwise unharmed.

Dirocco, and three companions took a gun from his home and went hunting. They finally chased a low-flying hawk. When Dirocco shot wild, a figure in a battered hat and waving arms was seen to fall and lay motionless.

The boys fled, all returning to their homes with the exception of Dirocco. Today they told their parents of what had taken place and a hunt was started for the "killer."

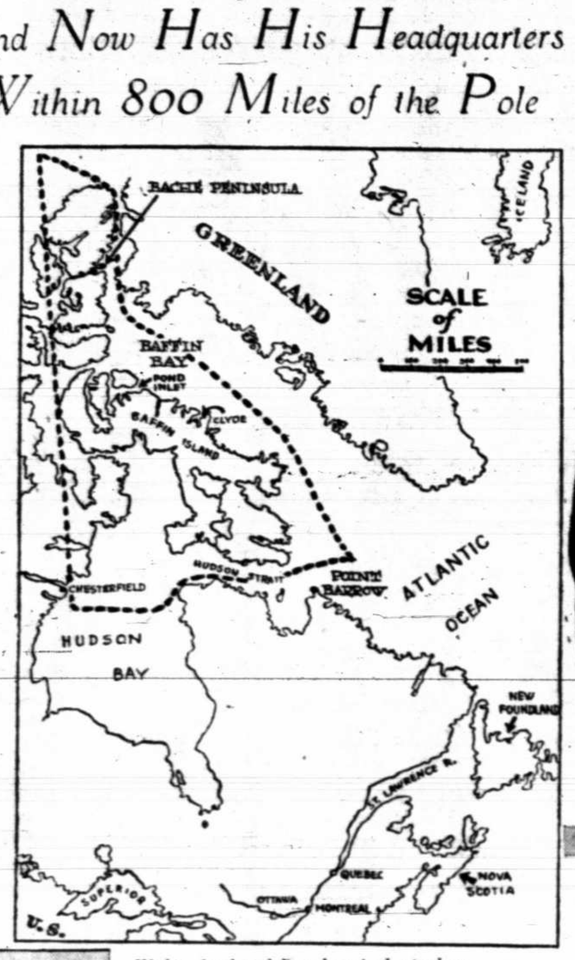
Down into the icy canyon went his dogs, Joy jumped at the brink. . . . A weighted 80-foot line failed to find the bottom.

Arctic Mountie Inspector Joy. . . . He has found the bones of unsuccessful polar expeditions on his "beat." . . . He has tracked criminals in places where no other white man has ever been.



Within the dotted lines here is the farthest north police beat in the world. . . . Bache Peninsula, headquarters for this vast ice-bound area, is indicated by the arrow. . . . The location of other points mentioned below is also shown.

Provisions stored in this cache, just south of Bache Peninsula, must last Inspector Joy during the four winter months of night. . . . It was being restocked when this picture was taken, during the summer.

. . By . .

JAMES MONTAGNES

INSPECTOR A. H. JOY of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, with headquarters at Bache Peninsula, Ellesmere Island, less than 800 miles from the North Pole, is the world's farthest north policeman.

His beat is a desolate Arctic waste extending north from the Hudson Straits to the pole and west to the 90th degree of longitude. In this region winter is four months of darkness and the only inhabitants are a few thousand scattered Eskimos and a few score white trappers, traders and missionaries.

Every call for police assistance which Joy receives may start him on a gruelling dog-sled chase over hundreds of miles of snow and ice. He has covered thousands of miles of this bleak territory, including perilous mountain slopes in winter and inland seas in summer. He has visited regions where no white man has ever been and others where he found skeletons which told too plainly of Arctic exploration trips which had come to tragic ends.

In his vast "beat" are the remains of the Franklin expedition of 1845 and of the more recent Sverdrup expedition. In his territory have sailed in recent years the various expeditions of Commander Donald MacMillan and those of Putnam, the publisher. Somewhere in his domain, Arctic explorers have always hoped to find a short route to China.

Inspector Joy has held the title of "the world's most northern policeman" since the summer of 1921, when, armed with a letter of instruction from Ottawa, he sailed for Pond Inlet on Baffin Island, then Canada's most northern police post.

HIS commission gave him the powers of magistrate, coroner, customs officer and postman. His job was to patrol all the region in the neighborhood. His special undertaking was to bring to justice the murderers of Robert S. Janes, a fur trader.

Young Joy's task was a solitary one. No ship would touch at his headquarters; no communication could be had with Ottawa or any other city. When the ship which brought him and the two constables under him to the post had left, they were divorced from the outside world.

Never before had the Canadian government maintained its famous mounted policemen so far to the north. This headquarters, at a point where the Hudson Bay Company had a trading post, was the first step in the establishment of a chain of northern police posts. The special reason for bringing these posts into being was the popularity of the country for traders and seal fishers. Then there was the murder of Janes, in which Eskimos were involved.

As soon as the post was in proper shape for the heavy winter, Inspector Joy, then a staff sergeant, set out. He traveled by dog team over the early snow and ice to Cape Crawford. Here Janes had been murdered. Here had lived the Eskimos who had committed the murder, therefore it was the first place to visit.

Joy learned that Janes had been murdered by a native named Nookudlah, who had been aided by Oorooreungnak and Ahteetah. The crime was committed in a little Eskimo village near Cape Crawford, where Janes had stopped overnight on his way out of the Arctic.

In investigating the details of the murder Joy acted as a police officer. Then Janes' body had to be exhumed to prove his death had been by violence and in doing this Joy acted as his office of coroner required him to act.

He swore in three or four traders to act as a coroner's jury and its verdict was, after hearing eight Eskimo witnesses, that the three suspected natives should stand trial.

Then, as justice of the peace, Joy issued warrants for the arrest of the three men and, as a policeman again, set out after them. The chase led across 500 miles of trackless ice and snow to an isolated little Eskimo village to which the guilty had fled. But, in the tradition of the mounted police, "he got his men."

FOR a year the three accused, the witnesses and their families, lived around Pond Inlet. The extra population worked a hardship on this northern settlement, for often there was not enough food for everyone. But the next summer the trial would take place, the report of the inquiry having been taken out by a supply ship.

So the next summer there arrived at this most northern police and trading post a collection of legal lights, such as never before had been witnessed in the north. Headed by His Honor Judge L. A. Rivet of Montreal, and assisted by counsel for crown and defense, the party arrived on the bleak shores of the post.

The trial was carried on with all pomp and ceremony, as if it were transpiring in a dignified supreme court room in one of the big cities of Canada. Scarlet-coated police officers acted as escorts for the judge and as guardians for the prisoners.

His Honor was robed in the traditional black gown with white tabs, as were the attorneys. The jury was drawn from the traders, government officials and officers of the supply ship.

The verdict was that Nookudlah was guilty of manslaughter. He was sentenced to serve 10 years at Stone Mountain penitentiary. Oorooreungnak was given two years at hard labor in the guardroom of the mounted police post at Pond Inlet. And Ahteetah was acquitted.

So ended one of the most notable murder cases in the Arctic, one wherein the police officer had acted in his own capacity, as well as that of coroner and justice of the peace in bringing his culprits to justice while in addition he had sent in documents as orderly as any clerk of the court would have done in a regular court.

INSPECTOR JOY was given his present rank in 1927, following the fine work he did in the Arctic, for he has been Canada's northermost police constable ever since that year when he went up after the murderers of Janes. And now he is in the farther north in charge of the entire Eastern Arctic Sub-District.

It is 20 years to the year since he first, as a young fellow just out of his 'teens, joined the force. That was in Calgary, when the Royal Canadian Mounted Police was the North West Mounted Police, the romantic police force of the west—the only police force during the years when the west was being settled. And it was during his own time that policing of the west was finished, when shortly after the war the various provinces assembled their own police units, and the North West Mounted Police became a Dominion body, changing its name in 1920.

It may have been the romance of the force, or it may have been a restlessness in young Joy that induced him to join. At any rate, he signed up, meeting all the requirements, and topping the height standard of five feet eight inches by a good four and one-half inches. He was unmarried, for the mounted police do not take married men into their ranks. And he is still unmarried, for he lives nowadays practically all the time in the north, which is not a place to bring one's wife.

Joy had a look at the possibilities of his Arctic job in 1920, when, with Inspector J. W. Phillips, he made a trip to the Belcher Islands in the Hudson Bay to look into the homicides which reports said were being committed there.

Two Eskimos had been killed on these islands, Ko-Okyauk and Ketaushuk. The causes in each case were the same, supposed insanity. Joy and his superior officer delved into the matter, after making a hazardous journey by canoe down the Missinaibi River to Moose Factory, then by sailboat and gasoline launch to the Belcher Islands.

Eskimo belles. . . . Their husbands are superstitious, but very moral. . . . Inspector Joy and a jury sanctioned their ethics.

THEY found a starved number of communities, in all 128 people, of whom 33 were men. Living conditions on the islands were so tragic that it was not hard to see the reason advanced by the natives as to the cause of the crime. There was so little game on the islands that for clothing they had scarcely enough, while there was practically no bedding for the cold winter months, the natives sleeping with their dogs for warmth. And so there was also little food.

As for fish, the kyaks were so flimsy that they could only be used when the bay was smooth, which is seldom. The nearest trading post was 70 miles away, on the mainland. It was the post at Great Whale River. Water cut them off, and only when there was plenty of ice on the bay was the journey at all safe. So the state of the natives was pitiful. It accounted for the killing of the two natives.

Both had run away with women of other men. The natives are superstitious, but have fine ethics. For the running away with other women, when each already had a wife, was deemed highly immoral, and could only be caused by a state of mind which bordered on insanity. In addition, the miscreants threatened to kill the others of their little band if they interfered. So to insure the safety of their women folks, and children as well as themselves, the few men of the village took one of the outlaws to another small island, where they tied him up and left him.

He managed to get loose by cutting his bonds on the sharp stones. The men came the next day and tied him so tight that they strangled him. The other outlaw was killed more quickly.

The police held an inquiry there and then, the jury being the crew of the gasoline launch. And because of the conditions of the natives, they decided that the killings were done in the best interests of society, while the villagers were warned not to do so in the future.

Sergeant Joy must have been highly recommended by his superior officer, for it was the following summer that he was sent to Pond Inlet as the world's most northerly policeman.

The Commissioner of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police only sends men of sterling qualities to the Arctic. The loneliness is one of the biggest hardships to overcome. Thus one will not find in that region men of moody or gloomy outlook, for they would soon commit suicide up north, where no white man is seen and only a few natives. Where the wind rages constantly and the winters are four months of night.

Inspector Joy has stood the test, for as those who have come in contact with him in the northland have told me, there is no more respected officer in the Arctic. His men and the natives all look up to him. With the natives it is akin to hero worship, for they believe implicitly his every word. What he says he does. Nowhere in the entire Arctic will one find white man or native who does not respect Inspector A. H. Joy.

HIS patrol of March, April and May, 1927, the first year that any police outfit wintered up at Bache Peninsula, brought him high praise from Ottawa. And well it might. He covered 1320 miles in 54 days.

He left Bache Peninsula and struck inland through the heart of Ellesmere Island, across a frozen sea to Axel Heiberg Island, the Ringnes Islands and King Christian Island, all the most northerly islands on the North American map. During the whole trip not a human being was encountered, only large numbers of caribou, bears, musk-oxen, hares, wolves and ptarmigan. Sometimes travel was over ice as smooth as glass, and at other times the heavily-laden komitiks had to be dragged over sharp boulders and gravel devoid of any snow—windswept tracts of land.

Two Eskimos accompanied him, Nookapeeungwak and Ahkeeoo, the former being considered the best hunter in all the Arctic. He had accompanied Joy on other patrols and has been with him since. He is with him this year on another of those lengthy patrols for which Inspector Joy is now famous. Then they had three komitiks and 40 dogs, quite a cavalcade to journey the Arctic silence and quite a mob to feed.

ON a similar patrol Joy had his narrowest escape from death. He was traveling along on one of those days which happen so seldom in the north, when it is clear and cold. They were making their way downhill at a fast pace when suddenly a chimera caused the whole landscape to change. It seemed as if they were going uphill, yet their pace showed them to be still going down. And then the dogs disappeared.

In a minute they came up over the surface again. They had broken through the deep snow into a crevasse. The other team coming behind was also running at a fast pace, for they make time when they can in the Arctic. There was no time to stop it.

Down . . . down went the whole outfit, dogs, harness and all. But the harness held, and the dogs came up again, minus one mate. His harness had broken loose. He had fallen down the crevasse.

The rest of the route ahead was broken by similar cracks and fissures in the ice, so that the party turned back. They dropped a weighted line down the crevasse where the dog had been lost, but though it went straight down its full 80 feet, no trace of the bottom could be felt, nor was the dog seen again.

(This is one of a series of articles on the aces of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, the world's most picturesque organization for the enforcement of law and order. Another will appear in an early issue.)

Cotton Steady; Stocks Are Flooded

Early Selling Is Absorbed In Mart By Heavy Buying

Prices Steady Later On In Session Saturday Under Week-End Covering Resulting From Weather

NEW YORK, Sept. 28. (AP)—Some early selling was absorbed by trade buying in cotton today and prices steadied up later on week-end covering which was probably promoted by uncertainty as to weather developments over the week-end. December contracts advanced from 18.52 to 18.62 and closed at 18.60 compared with 18.55 at the close of Saturday. The general market closed steady, net unchanged to 8 points higher.

The opening was steady at an advance of 2 points to a decline of 2 points, with the market paying very little attention to the relatively steady showing of Liverpool. There was considerable southern selling and prices soon showed net losses of 1 to 4 points on the active months with October easing off to 18.43 and March to 18.80. Trade buying was quite active on the decline to 18.52 for December, however, and the market steadied up later in the morning. Toward the close covering for over the week-end sent prices up to 18.52 for October and 18.88 for March, or about 4 to 11 points net higher on the general list.

Liverpool cables reported trade calling had absorbed hedge selling and liquidation in the market there.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 160,000 bales against 102,000 last year.

Cotton Is Quiet In Saturday Mart

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 28. (AP)—The short Saturday session in the cotton market was a very quiet affair relieved only by a little spurt of activity near the close. While prices opened slightly easier despite better Liverpool cables than due and showed losses of 3 points in the early trading, there was a gradual recovery and a slight rally in the final trading on the notice that the tropical storm would probably pass through the Florida Straits and enter the Gulf of Mexico possibly affecting the cotton belt. This recovery amounted to 10 points and the close was a shade under the top. December advanced from 18.34@18.44, and closed at 18.41, or 4 points net higher for the day. The general market closed steady at net gains of 4 to 6 points.

Liverpool Better.

Liverpool came in 3 to 5 points better than expected attributed by private cables to trade calling. First trades here showed no change to 2 points decline. The market eased off slightly after the start on some hedge selling, December dropping to 18.34 and January 18.42, or 3 points under the previous close.

Hog Values Sharply Reduced Under Increase In Livestock Saturday

KANSAS CITY, Sept. 28. (AP)—Under increased supplies hog values were reduced sharply early in the week but a reaction on later days regained most of the loss scored on offerings scaling under 250 lbs., and final prices are most steady to 15c lower. Weightier kinds shared in a part of the late advance but closing rates are mostly 15 to 25c under a week ago with some of the extreme heavies off considerably more. The top rested at $11.00 in St. Louis for choice lights. Receipts 455,026 as compared with 377,652 last week and 435,613 a year ago.

Wheat Decline Is Checked Saturday By Heavy Buying

Numerous Speculative Holders Of Wheat Sell Out Because Of Unsettled Session Of Mart

By JOHN P. BOUGHAN
Associated Press Market Editor

CHICAGO, Sept. 28. (AP)—Numerous speculative holders of wheat sold out today partly because of stock market unsettlement, but price declines were checked through aggresive buying from important sources. Houses with foreign and northwest connections bought most of the wheat for future delivery. Export business in wheat from North America, however, continued slack in most quarters.

Closing quotations on wheat were nervous 7-8c to 2c under yesterday's finish. Corn closed 3-8 to 1 3-4c down, oats 1-4c to 3-4c off, and provisions unchanged to a setback of 20c.

Corn Declines

Corn and oats received their downward impulse today largely from the action of wheat. Weather conditions over the corn belt were regarded as generally auspicious from a crop standpoint.

Provisions were responsive to downturns in the cereal markets.

since the assassination of District Attorney John A. Holmes September 13, had not been informed whether martial law would be declared, it generally was believed the governor's proclamation of military rule was being brought to Borger by troops to enforce the edict. Forecasters predicted soldiers would arrive late tonight or tomorrow.

Borger Quiet.

Borger was quiet, the streets being unusually empty for a Saturday. A number of automobiles loaded with household goods was seen leaving town. Several of them stopped in front of a bank before departing toward Panhandle.

Rangers, headed by Capt. Frank Hamer, continued investigation of possible clues in the Holmes slaying.

ABILENE, Sept. 28. (AP)—A special dispatch to the Abilene Sunday Reporter-News from Mineral Wells tonight told of the departure from that place of seven members of the cavalry medical detachment, Texas national guard. The men were in full uniform, the dispatch said, and refused to answer any questions as to their destination or mission. Apparently they were headed for Fort Worth.

RUSSIAN PLANE DAWN

"Land Of The Soviets" Is Halted By Storms

SEWARD, Alasma, Sept. 28. (AP)—Bouncing on top of twenty-foot waves, the Russian plane "Land of the Soviets" was rocked in a southeast gale here tonight, wedged in the only safe haven in the harbor, between the San Juan dock and the beach.

Mariners said the stormy weather may continue three or four days, making it unlikely that the plane will take off tomorrow on its hop to Sitka, less than six hundred miles away.

A dozen signal corps men were engaged all day hand pumping barrels of gasoline from the beach into the plane, using a thirty foot hose extending over the water. Minor repairs were made.

Market Is Washed By Heavy Selling In Short Session

Damage To Price Structure Repaired Before Close Of Mart As Flood Subsides; Quotations Irregular

BY CLAUDE A. JAGGER
Associated Press Financial Writer.

NEW YORK, Sept. 28. (AP)—The stock market was washed by another huge wave of selling in today's short session, but the flood subsided before the close, and a rush to cover short commitments, together with some bargain hunter buying, in a measure repaired the damage to the price structure. Closing quotations were irregularly higher, but the rally did little toward reducing yesterday's severe losses.

Trading was active, but the day's turnover totalled 2,205,260 shares.

Call Money Carries.

Yesterday's 9 per cent call money rate carried over the week-end, and bankers inclined to the opinion that indications are for higher rather than lower money next week.

U. S. Steel again showed weakness, dropping 4 points to 222, a new low for the movement, and closing at 225. Motors under considerable pressure, General Motors touching a new 1929 low at 66.

Industrials Higher.

Most of the leading industrials closed somewhat higher, after sagging considerably in the first hour. General Electric dropped about 5 points, then shot up 12, closing with a net gain of 7.

Utilities were under considerable pressure for a time, but rallied and several closed higher.

Foreign exchanges were quiet and fairly steady, with sterling cables a shade higher at $3.85 3-8.

livestock, agricultural commodities, poultry and innumerable displays, late Saturday. Counties arranging booths yesterday were Cochran, Roosevelt (N. M.) Lamb, Lynn, Crosby, Hockley, Potter, Lea, (N. M.) Martin, Gaines, Bailey, Swisher, Dawson. Roosevelt county won first place in the county exhibits last year.

Communities To Vie

Commities represented in early arrangements of displays were Woodrow, Acuff, Shallowater, New Hope, Posey, Foster, Grovesville, Hardy, McClung, Liberty, Union. J. N. Townsend, principal of the New Hope school, was arranging late yesterday the New Hope exhibit, which won first place last year, and the three previous years.

"We will have the greatest livestock assembly in the history of the fair," said R. M. Milhollin, of Plainview, superintendent of the livestock division. "Arrivals of stock are coming rapidly and need for space is apparent."

"All pens have been placed in order, but it seems that we will not have room for the great number of hogs which will be placed on show," said Douglas Pounds, superintendent of the swine division.

Great Array Of Poultry

Prof. Ray C. Mowery, of Texas Technological college, announces that indications point to a great array of poultry.

"There is no doubt but that this year's fair will be greater in scope of exhibits, more varied in entertainment and a more regional exposition than any of former years," said B. C. Dickinson, president of the fair association.

Approximately 2,000 commodities have already been placed in the women's building.

The industrial building is attractively filled with clever and representative displays of Lubbock merchants.

Six acts of comedy, daring and wizardous performances, spectacular fireworks displays and daily football games offer a continuous schedule of entertainment.

Football On Program

South Plains football teams have been worked into early season form for the six games to be staged here. The gridiron at the fair ground has been smoothed and marked for the battles.

The fair association will finance expenses to bring an assembly of bands from several South Plains cities. Spirited by music from home town bands, the football games, all free will have more glamour and attract greater crowds than those of previous years.

An appreciable increase in expenditure for fireworks assures a nightly program of genuine entertainment. The sky will be illuminated each night with an amazing galaxy of lights.

With the exception of concession attractions, all departments of entertainment will be positively free, after the gate admission is paid, fair officials announce. The gate fee entitles one to all football games, six acts of comedy, nightly fireworks displays and other attractions.

Perhaps the most spectacular division of the free attractions will be the scintillating fireworks displays each night. In the past the fireworks features have attracted universal praise of visitors.

A Red Cross station, under direction of Miss Vera Murfee, will be a temporary hospital on the grounds.

Boy Scouts, under direction of Rev. L. G. H. Williams, president of the South Plains area council, will be on the grounds to run errands.

Fire Chief W. E. Twitty will establish a temporary fire station to exercise precaution against possible fire.

Agriculture, D. F. Eaton; agriculture, individual exhibits, Prof. H. J. Bower; women's department, Mrs. Hub Jones; Boy Scouts, Rev. L. G. H. Cameraman Visits World's Loneliest Colony

Here are pictures that you seldom see, for they were taken at the loneliest outpost of the habitable world, almost never visited by photographers. Only once a year does a British ship drop anchor off the group of tiny islands known as Tristan de Cunha, 1500 miles southwest of St. Helena, in the South Atlantic. Above are shown typical homes on the only inhabited island, an extinct volcano 8500 feet high. At the right are women and children making their first visit aboard a steamer. The inhabitants, of whom there now are about 140, are descended from a white garrison placed on the island during the captivity of Napoleon on St. Helena. They are entirely self-supporting, from their farms and cattle.

Started In June.

Present campaign is resumption of efforts started here in June. Plans of the good roads association have been held in abeyance since the state highway department's action in rescinding the original designation of Highway 53. About one month ago the highway department started surveys on 53 from this city to Idalou and the preliminary surveys lead out of this city on Broadway. No definite designation has been made.

Represented in the petition presented by Mr. O'Neall are bankers, members of civic organizations and citizens of practically every section within district 2.

being prepared for cementing the hole, said Mr. Vance.

Tanks for storage will be placed at the location within the next week.

Ninety quarts of nitroglycerine were used in "shooting" the hole, which was plugged back to the 4897 foot depth. "Shooting" was under direction of the Independent Easters Torpedo company, of Wink.

Water was pushing up in the hole late Saturday at the rate of a barrel an hour.

Center Of Lease

The well, in the center of a 10,000-acre lease of the Continental Oil company is located on the C. C. Slaughter estate, in what is known as the "scraped out pasture."

It is 65 miles due west of Lubbock.

Drilled to a depth of 5001 feet, the well was plugged several days ago in preparation for "shooting," after water had entered the hole.

WARNS ON TRAFFIC

Cooperation Asked During Fair By Police Head

Chief of Police John Lemond last night issued a warning to all motorists to watch their driving this next week due to the great increase in traffic occasioned by fair visitors.

"There will be absolutely no double parking or blocking of traffic on Broadway from a point east of the fair grounds on into the city," he stated. "We are going to put forth every effort to facilitate traffic in all sections of the city but must have the cooperation of all citizens. Patrolmen have been told to watch closely all violators and these will be dealth with in accordance to the law."

"We have arranged adequate parking space for all automobiles," declared Manager A. B. Davis, of the fair association. "Additional space has been secured from that of last year and we feel that drivers will have no great difficulty in the operation of their automobiles."

Mr. Fink was a resident of Clarendon for several years.

PRO SLAYER SOUGHT

Lynn Stephens Is Thought In Rio Grande Valley

BROWNSVILLE, Sept. 28. (AP)—Acting on unconfirmed rumors San Antonio officers in connection with the ambush-slaying of prohibition agent Charles Stevens, was somewhere in the lower Rio Grande Valley, border authorities at Brownsville, Hidalgo and Roma tonight were keeping a sharp lookout for him.

City and county officers also were watching for him, although all of the officials felt that he would be "foolish" to come into the Valley. By doing so, they declared, he would be walking into a blind alley with no escape possible.

The theory was that if Stephens was in this section he was hoping to cross the Rio Grande into Mexico.

French Flier Thought Well On Way To Far East

PARIS, Sept. 28. (AP)—Friends of Dieudonne Coste, the French aviator ace who took off at 8:16 a. m., Friday in an attempt to better the world record for straightaway flight were without news of him tonight. He last was reported Friday evening when his big sesqui-plane flew over Cologne.

It was figured that unless he has met with an accident, he probably will not be heard from until he lands some time tomorrow morning. It was thought that today he was winging his way over the sparsely settled districts of Siberia.

The plane carried fuel for fifty hours. French aviation experts believed that it would cover more than 5,000 miles on that supply.

EXCITEMENT CAUSED

Little Damage Results In Fire Saturday Night

More excitement than damage resulted last night at the Popular Price Store on lower Broadway when the local fire department answered a rush call from the clothing concern where an ignited blanket caused considerable consternation.

An emergency fire extinguisher camo to the rescue and had everything under cnotrol when the entire corps of fire trucks from the central station arrived on the scene

Cyclone Disaster

ed in Miami and environs by winds which were sufficiently strong to blow water from Biscayne Bay over Biscayne Boulevard, the city's water-front thoroughfare. Several persons were injured on the causeways, but none seriously.

How the Florida Keys, which apparently were in the center of the storm, fared, was not known. Some of them are inhabited and hold small settlements. There was no word from Homestead and other towns on the mainland below Miami and it was feared they had experienced a severe gale.

Several Injured.

Several persons were injured and about 20 buildings wrecked or damaged by a sudden twister that blew into Port Lauderdale from the ocean late yesterday. Two small twisters at Stuart inflicted minor damage.

Key West, the south of the storm center's path, was buffeted by gales which reached 60 and 75 miles an hour.

Ships' Fate Unknown.

Nothing yet was known of the fate of the Isle of June and the Bahamian, two freighters with 30 men, unreported since they entered Bahaman waters shortly before the storm. Numerous small craft were thrown on the shores.

Key West, as well as the eastern mainland of Florida, escaped the full fury of the winds that tore Nassau and caused many deaths and enormous property damage. Streets of Key West were littered with minor debris, but the loss was said not to be great.

Damage Heavy.

Heavy damage was experienced in the Homestead section, south of Miami and in neighboring towns but there was no loss of life and but a few persons were injured slightly. Port Lauderdale, 25 miles north of Miami, had the most unusual blow of all. A freak twister from the ocean tore several buildings and hurt 16 persons.

Gales of near hurricane force were indicated for the section of the West Coast south of Tampa, while northeast storm warnings were out for the coast from Tampa to Pensacola. That the East Coast section might have another spell of wind was seen in weather bureau warnings for southern storm. Jupiter to Miami and southwest storm in the Key West section.

KEY WEST, Fla., Sept. 28. (AP) As the gale winds blowing here this afternoon began to moderate and barometric pressure rose steadily early tonight, weather bureau attendants here reported that the direction of the wind had shifted to west-southwest and expressed the hope that the worst of the trpical hurricane winds to be felt by this city had passed. They were unable, however, to chart the course of the storm at present.

PALM BEACH, Fla., Sept. 28. (AP) A second S. O. S. call from the Scandia, another tanker in the vicinity of the distressed Garnet Hulings off Sombrero Key was picked up here tonight by the radio marine corporation station W. O. E. Word of the plight of the Garnet Hulings was transmitted to the United States coast guard base at Port Lauderdale before the second S. O. S. call was received.

TAMPA, Fla., Sept. 28. (AP)—S. O. S. calls for immediate assistance were picked out of the air by the Gulf Radio service station here at midnight from the American tanker Salina and the Danish tanker Scandia. Positions of both ships were doubtful but the Salina, was apparently near the "Hole in the Wall" southeast of Bimini, and the Scandia was somewhere south of Jupiter.

American Opera To Give Young Singers Opportunity To Make Good At Home; Pioneer Movement Is Started

NEA Service Writer.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Sept. 28. — "American women have the best singing voices of any women in the world. There is no reason why, instead of our importing Europe—grand opera stars, America should not furnish Europe with singers for her operas."

This is only one of the encouraging convictions about American opera brought back to the United States by Kendall K. Mussey, manager of America's pioneer little opera, the Little Theater Opera company.

Mr. Mussey spent all summer surveying the European opera field. In Dresden he heard Elsie Wieber, a Pacific coast girl who made her debut in opera in his Brooklyn company, make her European debut in the Magic Flute. This engaging American young woman will have five leading roles with the Dresden Opera company this winter.

Was Active In Europe.

In Berlin, Mr. Mussey arranged for two new condensed orchestrations made for the Grand Duchess and Fra Diavolo, two operas his company will produce here. He also secured the use of the English version of the Magic Flute. At the Hague he engaged Karol and Loki Bruchman, two young artists from the Royal Theater, to design the scenery and costumes for the Grand Duchess, and in Paris, he looked over the costume designs for Fra Diavolo which a Denver artist, Elizabeth Moffatt, and her colleague, Mlle. Gratianne de Gardilanne, have finished. Here, too, he engaged Vasili Koughita, notable stage director, for the coming year.

The winter plans of the Little Theater Opera company, as sketched by Mr. Mussey, promise even greater opportunities than heretofore for young American singers who need a chance to make good at home, rather than be forced to make their debuts in Europe before they can get into opera here.

"There is no reason why there should not be many other Elsie Wiebers graduating from American little opera into title roles abroad," Mr. Mussey asserted. "But if we want young American singers to have a chance at operatic experience in their own country, there must be more little theater opera companies. I dream of hundreds of them, one in each city of 100,000 or over.

"Germany had 300 little opera companies before the war and now, even in her impoverished condition, she boasts 150 towns that have them. I believe Americans love good music and if prices were low, and the words in English, would go more often."

Incidentally in the two years the Little Theater Opera company has existed, it has given 41 unknown singers a chance at an operatic debut. Of these, five women are already singing in Europe.

Mr. Mussey brought back with him glowing accounts of the magnificent stage mechanism the continent is devising. Germany has one stage, for instance, that has eight different levels. The possibilities of unique stage effects is unlimited. Another stage has 200 feet of footlights.

Brings Siamese Kittens.

Along with those stimulating observations, Mr. Mussey brought back something else that is new and interesting. It is a little Siamese kitten, the youngest of its kind to enter America, just barely six weeks old the day it passed the Statue of Liberty. Little "Rikiki" is especially important, for he is the grandson of the favorite cat model of the famous Parisian animal sculptor, George Hilbert. "Rikiki" is pale beige in color, with the bluest eyes in the world set off to perfection by his pointed coal black nose and ears, a black streak clear across down his back and a little black tail that has two kinks in it, a sure sign of regal blood in Siamese cats.

"American women have a better chance today to get into opera on the continent than ever before," Mr. Mussey stated his belief. "Formerly, there was a practice in some impoverished companies, of engaging rich American women to sing, whether they had voices or not, provided they paid for the privilege. This is discontinued, I am glad to say. The only way American girls sing on the continent today is through their own ability. Since there are fewer rich families in Europe today who can afford to educate their daughters for the opera, American girls have a larger opportunity than ever before."

Pioneer in the American "home-made" opera movement is Kendall K. Mussey, above, manager of the Little Theatre Opera Company of Brooklyn, N. Y. That's "Rikiki," Siamese kitten brought back from Europe, on his shoulder.

Achievements Of Farm Bureau Are Reviewed Friday

The accomplishments of the Texas Farm bureau gin corporation and plans for the future of the organization were reviewed by Lynn Stokes, of Ballinger, general manager of the corporation, at a meeting of gin members at Lorenzo Friday night.

N. H. Payne, field representative of the Texas Farm Bureau Cotton association, also spoke at the gathering.

A round-table discussion of farmers was an interesting part of the meeting.

LONDON, Sept. 28. (AP)—The new taxable value of the city of Westminster, a mile square in metropolitan London, is $47,093,400, making it second only to Glasgow, Scotland, among British cities. In Westminster are Buckingham and St. James palaces, the Houses of Parliament, Westminster Abbey and St. James Park.

ZURICH, Sept. 28. (AP)—Nearly one-fifth of all workers in Swiss factories are protected by unemployment insurance. Swiss economists have concluded that this is a better way of relieving distress of the idle than the dole systems used in England, Poland and several other countries.

Card Delivered 18 Years Later

LE NEUBORG, France, Sept. 28. (AP)—A postal card, mailed 25 years ago at Conches, 12 miles away, was recently delivered. What annoyed the recipient was that he had to pay due postage because the post card rate, 10 centimes in 1904, has been increased to 40 centimes.

Marlin Hayhurst, of Brownfield, spent Saturday in Lubbock and attended the Tech-Wayland football game.

Miss Mary Hazel Hurn, who teaches in the home economics department of the Post high school, is spending this week-end in Lubbock. Miss Hurn is a Tech graduate.

Practically all of the 5,000,000 pounds of fresh vegetables imported into Cuba in the last 12 months were from the United States.

The Election Is Now Settled

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 28. (AP)—Jose Perez Vidal, candidate for mayor of Catemaco, Vera Cruz, settled the election by shooting Gabriel Perez Bernal, his rival, to death, says a report to El Universal Grafico.

Messages from Jalapa, capital of Vera Cruz, say the legislature has been flooded with complaints that the municipal elections, which were statewide Sunday, were characterized by violence. The legislature is considering a proposal to declare the elections void and convoke new ones.

HEARNE, Sept. 28. (AP)—From his lonely perch early yesterday, a railroad tower man here discovered that a carload of cotton on passing through freight was ablaze. He had the train flagged, set the car on a siding and the fire department extinguished the fire. Damage to the cotton, en route from Tyler, to Japan, was estimated at $500, and to the car at $150.

The Tinies eyed the wooden shoes. "Come on, we have no time to lose," said Clowny. "Let's all try them on. Upon the ground we'll sit. 'Twill be real fun to walk around. We'll thump upon the solid ground. I only hope that we have luck and all of them will fit."

Soon Carpy shouted, "I'm in luck. At first I thought my foot was stuck, but now the shoes fit perfectly. Oh, gee, but they feel queer. I'll try them now, around this place and then with anyone I'll race." Then as he clumped around a bit the bunch began to cheer.

"You're great," cried Coppy. "Now watch me and some real walking you will see. I never have been clumsy and I know I won't be now." He started off and then he slipped. Just one more step and, whoops—he tripped. The rest began to giggle and a frown spread on his brow.

"You needn't laugh," poor Coppy said. "If you can do this, go ahead. It isn't quite as easy as it looks, I'll tell you that. I didn't feel at ease at all. In fact I felt that I would fall. You might have had a real good laugh if I had sprawled out flat."

"Here, here," the carpenter cried out. "What is this fussing all about? You're not supposed to merely walk within those shoes. Now I will tell you just what you should do. This is a stunt that's very new. Now each of you stand very still and shortly you will fly.

"The shoes will take you through the air. They'll float you quickly here and there. I'm sure that they will do it 'cause I picked the proper size." And so the Tinies stood real still. In just a moment came a thrill. The carpenter yelled, "Good-bye, boys," as they began to rise.

Blouses Take Place Among Accessories Of The New Tailored Mode; Blouses Come To Fore

By HENRI BENDEL
Written for NEA Service

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—In a season that stresses the importance of accessories, blouses take their place as the most important accessory of the tailored mode.

Last season, with the advent of suits, blouses came to the fore. Now, with suits still in high favor, blouses start the season with all the self-assurance of the socially correct.

There are any number of different varieties of little blouses this season. Witness the faintly colored handkerchief linen ones, with fine hand work, the ecru batiste ones France sends us, the polo shirt and other sports blouses, and the exquisitely dressy little chiffons and georgettes that complete satin, panne velvet and other formal afternoon costumes.

Two Blouses are Most Important

Two types of blouses, however, will have a genuine importance all their own this season. One is the sweater blouse that derives its place in the sun because by color, light, design or line it makes of its suit a perfect whole.

Both of these columns are chic and charming. Both stress the feminine note by soft collar, fancy cuffs, embroidery or some other concession.

Most suits can change their character, if not their spots, by having two blouses instead of one. It is an excellent idea to buy the second blouse with this in mind, rather

A park committee which has been appointed by Miss Murfee, was announced as follows: Mrs. Johnson, Mrs. S. C. Arnett and Mrs. J. F. Hankins.

Judges Announced In Section; Large Show Is Entered

Annual Fair Exhibition In Women's Department Is Entered And Ready For Opening Today

EXHIBITS which have been entered in the women's department at the Panhandle-South Plains fair, which opens in the morning, are marked this year by a variety and early indications are that the show is to be bigger than in past years, according to Mrs. Hub Jones, director.

With the exceptions of fresh cooked foods and cut flowers, all articles were accepted yesterday in the department and the perishables are to be received until 12 o'clock Monday at the women's building.

Judges were at work last evening classifying the articles which were entered and this work is to be completed some time Monday afternoon, the director believes.

Men Will Judge

Miss Myrtle Murray, district home demonstration agent, and the new home demonstration agent in Lamb county are to judge in the textile, culinary and home demonstraion divisions. Miss Margaret Weeks and Miss Jean Dorrel are to judge in the art and curio departments and J. C. Dean, Mrs. Lon Mullican and J. C. Davis are to judge the floral exhibit.

In addition to Lubbock county, the Lynn county home demonstration clubs have a complete exhibit at the fair this year and it is in charge of the agent from that county, Miss Thelma Greenwade. The display was chosen following a fair at Tahoka and the winning exhibits in first and second places were brought to the fair here.

Superintendents Listed

Each department director has a group of helpers who will assist throughout the week at the fair grounds. The superintendents include Miss Delia Wilkinson for art; Mrs. A. W. McKee, culinary; Mrs. S. J. McFarland, textile; Mrs. W. F. Schenck, curios and relics; Miss Louise Baird, extension clubs; Mrs. W. O. Stevens, plants and cut flowers. Assisting Mrs. Jones in directing the department are Mrs. W. B. Price, Mrs. F. R. Friend and Mrs. R. Q. Pierce.

The beautiful weather which has followed the rains several weeks ago have brought out the fall flowers in a riot of color and the floral display at the fair is expected to be unusually attractive, the department director believes.

The women's building was a place of much activity yesterday and the entries were received and stacked in the building ready for judging. Directors and superintendents, with their assistants, worked until a late hour in the evening arranging the booths for the opening of the fair tomorrow. Receipts were given to those who made entries and these are to be used in redeeming the articles next Saturday when the exposition closes.

Precautions Taken

Watchmen have been employed for the season of the fair and every precaution is being used to insure the safety of exhibits.

The curio and relic division is enhanced this fall by the showing of many interesting objects and this department is expected to attract unusual attention.

The displays are to be found this year in the women's building located at the west end of the row of structures housing exhibits at the Panhandle-South Plains fair grounds.

Mrs. O. H. Westlake hase been ill for a week in the home of her daughter, Mrs. H. O. Waters, 1621 Broadway.

Mr. and Mrs. Royce Waters have returned from Corpus Christi and are at home at 2905 21st street.

Hundreds Of College People Attend Receptions Extended By Churches

Musical Programs Are Features Of Church Functions Given For Tech Students And Faculty Folk Friday

Country Club Is Scene Of Episcopal Party; Entire Presbyterian Membership Attends Party

Annual open house was held for students of the Texas Technological college Friday evening and hundreds of young people assembled in the different churches of the city and enjoyed several hours of musical programs and a getting acquainted occasion.

A very unique idea was carried out at the First Presbyterian church in the form of an invitation party. Guests upon entering were presented flying caps and the air motif was used in games and contests which were played throughout the evening.

A program was given with two numbers sung by a quartet composed of Mesdames Jack Lewis, Harry Blocker, L. J. Von Tungeln and James Lee. Miss Margaret Stone played a violin solo.

Party in Units

The entire membership of the church was invited to attend the affair and after assembling in the reception room different departments adjourned to their own rooms and enjoyed games.

Dean James M. Gordon and Dr. Jack Lewis made informal addresses welcoming the students to the church and Sunday school. Miss Virginia McLean directed the games.

About 100 Tech students were in attendance at the affair. Refreshments of fruit punch and cakes were served.

Musical Program

Young people of St. Paul's-on-the-Plains Episcopal church were hosts to Technological college students at the Country club.

Mrs. Walter Girand sang "Pagan Love Song", and "Vagabond Lover" and Miss Josephine Winslow played "La Cinquentain", on the violin. They were both accompanied at the piano by Miss Maurine Mullican.

Following these numbers general singing was enjoyed. Refreshments of punch and cake were served to about sixty guests.

Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Girand and Mrs. Mary Doak were chaperones.

Games Are Played

Students attending the Methodist church reception upon entering the educational building where open house was held, were greeted by a receiving line composed of Mrs. W. W. Royalty, chairman of Tech work in the church, Mesdames I. C. Enochs, Hub Jones, C. E. Maedgen, Carl Slaton, Rev. and Mrs. H. L. Munger and Miss Mary De Bardeleben.

After registering in a book presided over by Misses Dorothy Rylander and Murvel Rankin the students met officers and teachers in the Young People's department of the Sunday school, and were directed to a large reception room where games were played.

Miss Mary Gene Owen had charge of a college stunt which was given and an address of welcome was made by Rev. Munger.

The evening's program was under the direction of Mr. and Mrs. Hunter W. Richardson.

Upon adjourning to the church chapel the guests witnesses a short play staged under the direction of Mrs. Ray Mowery.

Refreshments of ice cream and cake were served from a booth in the basement of the church. Favors were candy. The Sunday school orchestra played at intervals throughout the evening under the direction of J. B. Galland.

About 300 guests were present.

Rev. and Mrs. W. P. Jennings, Messrs. and Mesdames J. E. Hartley, R. A. Mills, Miss Pearl Harrison, and Hill Garrison, composed a receiving line which met students attending the reception given in the First Christian church.

A getting acquainted contest was directed by Miss Harrison after which an interesting program was given. Miss Kate Pressley gave two readings, Miss Priscilla Watson played a piano solo; R. E. Mills played a violin solo, and musical numbers were sung by Ronnie and Donald Shepherd.

After games were played under the direction of Mrs. R. D. Allen, a sing-song led by Edgar Shelton with Miss Louise Jennings closed the evening's program.

Refreshments of punch and sandwiches were served to about 80 people.

Three hundred guests at the First Baptist church attended the mock track meet which was staged with pep leaders and songs forming a collegiate atmosphere. Guests were divided into four schools.

A receiving line was formed with church officials and heads of departments in the young people's department.

Tech students of the Cumberland Presbyterian church were entertained by young people of the church with Miss Dimple Ford, Miss Eleanor Reigel, and Miss Leona McClellan in charge. Games and contests were played.

Punch and cake were served to about 45 young people and guests. Favors were canes tied in scarlet and black. Tech colors and decorations carried out the motif still further.

Three-Act Comedy Booked For First Theatre Offering

"The Queen's Husband" To Be Played Here During Early Fall; Try-Out Will Be Wednesday

The play which proved most popular with amateur actors last winter and was produced more times by Little Theatres than any other play is to be the opening offering of the Lubbock Little Theatre this fall. It has been announced.

This is to be Robert Emmet Sherwood's "The Queen's Husband."

The first try-out for this play is to be from 7:30 until 8:30 o'clock Wednesday evening in Room 202 of the Tech college administration building, according to an announcement made by the director, Miss Ruth Pirtle. Anyone who is interested is eligible to enter the try-outs.

Fifteen characters participate in this three-act comedy, the scenes of which are laid in the study of King Eric VIII, a mild-mannered little man, in the imaginary kingdom of Marland.

The King, who thinks more of penguins and checkers than he does of affairs of state, is troubled by the rebellion of his daughter, Princess Anne, whose marriage to a good-for-nothing prince has been arranged by her mother, Queen Martha. The princess is desperately in love with her father's secretary.

The queen leaves for America to raise some much-needed money. The king has a delightfully amusing game of checkers with his footman and is constantly interrupted by an exciting revolution which he handles with characteristic nonchalance and captivates even his enemies.

In the third act the queen returns and arranges for the wedding but when everything is in readiness the king assists his daughter in eloping.

This play has been produced by the Dallas and Fort Worth Little Theatres and was used by the Sherman Little Theatre last year as the opening number. It is highly lauded where it has been produced.

VISITOR AT LORENZO

Mrs. R. T. Campbell Speaks At Club Meeting

Mrs. R. T. Campbell was a special guest of the Woman's Study club of Lorenzo Friday afternoon and she read a paper on "Standards of Judging Books," which was a review of a lecture given recently by Dr. Albert Cunningham before the Athenaeum club here.

The Friday meeting was the first session of the Lorenzo club and the study for this winter is to be on "The Recent English Novel."

Blouses

Soft Jersey Certain of Popularity

Perhaps the soft jersey blouses will have a larger prominence than figured silks for the simple reason that they are so serviceable, wrap into small space for packing when traveling and shake out with little effort. Moreover, they clean as easily as a handkerchief is washed and the fabrics and colors are so good now that they look just as shapely and pretty after much hard wear and many trips to the dry cleaning establishment.

I have imported from Patou one lovely jersey blouse that I think will please many types of women. It is tan and dull red jersey, and its fits tight over the hips. It is belted at natural waistline and blouses above this belt in a very new way.

There is a special cuff, with two square tabs, fastened with square red buttons. There is a scarf collar in the dull red tone, in fine flat crepe, that grows quite dignified by being attached to the frock's neckline across the back and then having its ends slipped through a loop of jersey.

For Wear With Tan or Dull Red Skirt

This is stunning with either a dull red skirt or a tan one. Or it is very effective worn with a black velvet suit. If this is the case, a little black velvet turban, softly draped by Reboux, is an excellent choice.

To complement a dark green suit, I have designed a blouse of plaid taffeta, in green, black and beige coloring. Since the skirt has panels of pleats, the blouse is cut coat effect to fit down over the skirt.

Three green and beige bone buttons hold the little coat blouse shut. The deep V neck ends in a soft bow of the taffeta and a tiny pocket at the right side is quite handy to hold a green chiffon handkerchief.

It's for Formal Suit Wear

This blouse is quite effective and excellent for quite formal suit wear.

One of the prettiest jersey sports blouses of the season, in my opinion, is a little chartreuse one, with a conventional pattern in cross-stitch in cream and black. While some of these blouses feature silk collars for softness's sake, this one has a yoke of cream silk that runs down the front like a vestee. This has a fine line of black running down it, to tie it up to the embroidery on cuffs and around the waistline. For wear with this type of blouse, a beige wool beret is excellent. It has a narrow black ribbon catching its side drape.

Paris Jewelry Appears In Colorful Accessories For Winter Gowns

By JEAN PATOU
Written for NEA Service

PARIS, Sept. 28.—The main preoccupation of the couturier in preparing his winter models should always be to lend as much color to his collection as is compatible with the season.

The ideal is to hit upon one or two shades that will contrive to look gay despite a wintry sky. Throughout any important collection, therefore, you will perceive this desire to "brighten up" the somewhat sombre shades set aside for the autumn and winter.

The vogue of combining several vividly colored materials at the neck and sleeves with a dark dress has been a favorite method the last few seasons. This, together with clever incrustation work, has somewhat superseded the use of embroidery as a decorative medium.

Jewelry Reigns

Jewelry, however, remains the most frequently worn as well as the most popular form of decoration. Long ago I studied the art of synchronizing jewels with dress and it is now quite a long time ago since I showed my first "jewel" dresses.

It was the absence of embroidery and the necessity of giving some sort of "light" to clothes that brought about the tremendous infatuation for fancy or rather imitation jewelry. The principal quality of such articles, which I readily recognize, is their lack of pretentiousness. Another quality, appealing particularly to women, is the wide range of colors that can be obtained in false stones, enabling them to match any frock.

The only fault I have to find with imitation jewelry, or rather, the fault I have to find with the women who indulge in this whim, is that they often make the mistake of wearing it with formal gowns. Such imitations undoubtedly deter from the acme of smartness a black dress can achieve.

Formal afternoon and evening gowns have definitely come into their own again, we all agree that real gems alone can correspond to their real distinction. A beautiful necklace or pendant will not only complete a gown of plain, although rich material, but will greatly enhance it.

The classical form is the only one under which real art is recognizable. Those people who assert that there is never any novelty in any form termed "classical" could not apply this reproach to the work of our leading jewelers. Vancleef and Arpels are the creators of the various pieces of jewelry shown with my dresses and these are all original, both in design and coloring.

A modern diamond necklace has none of the rigidity of pre-war days. Supple mountings have opened up a vast field to jewelers. Moreover, they now boldly mingle sapphires, rubies, emeralds and turquoises, fashioning them into a galaxy of color never seen before.

Importance of Jewelry

Women must remember that real jewelry is not always more a luxury or even a simple and natural adjunct to their dress. A valuable necklace or pendant will often form an integral part of either an afternoon or evening dress, in the same way as a flower or embroidery. It is more than a trimming.

Women who possess a quantity of real jewels should know instinctively when and how much to wear according to the circumstances, the clothes and the hour of the day. Too great a number of jewels on an informal dress are bad taste and discretion can never be overlooked in such a difficult question as that of wearing jewels.

The WOMAN'S DAY

Mrs. Grace Coolidge, other half of the famous writing "We" of Northampton, Mass., gives testimonial in the American Magazine to the solace that hand sewing, knitting and other needlework has been to her in times of stress.

Mrs. Coolidge states that one of her fond dreams for American women is that there be a renaissance in needlework, for she believes that many a nerve would be quieted, many a temper soothed and many a heartache eased a bit if the afflicted one could pick up a little handwork and keep busy.

THE WAR'S LESSON

I think the World War proved the soundness of Mrs. Coolidge's arguments. No one of us can forget the knitting fingers—motherd, sisters, sweethearts—driving themselves to make more sweaters, more socks. It wasn't only the desire to have hand-made gifts to send overseas. Behind it perhaps subconsciously, was the realization that stark fear for loved ones, lonely hours and the horror of the times could be stood only if one kept busy. There is something fundamentally sound in burying your hands, though your heart be dead and your brain paralyzed with grief.

There is one woman in America who has made it her life work to interest women in sewing. That it is a lucrative work is beside the point for the moment. Through all the days of cheap one-piece-straight-up-and-downs, through all the days when most women didn't think of making even their aprons, Mary Brooks Picken has kept on perfecting her technique of home dressmaking.

She has written 53 books on the subject, many of which have been translated into several foreign languages, even Japanese. She has lectured to thousands of women's clubs, given practical demonstrations in stores all over the country. In addition she has made all her own clothes, and she is tremendously chic looking.

IT'S DRESSMAKER'S DAY

Her faith is rewarded this autumn. The costume with that "dressmaker touch" is the desired one. It is to be a year of hand-made blouses, little frocks with a bit of lace and embroidery here or there, velvet and other fabric hats that softly frame the face.

Couple this trend with the increasing vogue for quaint hand-pieced quilts and it looks as if there were signs that America is about to pick up its needle again.

ABOUT CROSSED LEGS

Moralists who have objected to short-skirted woman crossing their legs now have scientific backing for their arguments.

Dr. Henry W. Woltman, of the Mayo Clinic, Rochester, Minn., records in the Medical Journal that there is a health menace in the habit of sitting with one leg crossed over the other. Palsy is the direct result of it in some instances.

Dr. Woltman asserts that palsy is caused by the pressure on the peroneal nerve, situated in the bend of the knee and results in a temporary paralysis, hindering the leg movement. Generally, the malady attacks heavily middle-aged persons, particularly those recovering from illnesses, he says.

But even with this plausible argument, it is pretty certain that the straight-laced crusaders will continue to emphasize the "immorality" of crossed legs rather than their possible health peril.

How to Achieve Beauty

BY MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

Modern times have made it a necessity for all women to be beautiful if they would be happy and get the most out of life. Formerly our grandmothers had so much physical work to do, in order to keep their homes in order, that they had no time for other interests.

MME. RUBINSTEIN

Today science has stepped in to create a veritable Paradise for the housewife. Electrical appliances of every kind help to make existence simple for her—washing machines, vacuum cleaners, automatic refrigeration—all makes housekeeping almost like child's play in many homes. As far as cooking is concerned, science has changed that, too. Baking the family bread is becoming more and more rare. Canned goods are available when necessary. Electric grills make the preparation of a meal a pleasure. Drudgery has been practically banished forever.

The average woman is virtually finished with her routine work at noon. It is then that she tries to decided what to do with the rest of her day. She looks about her and sees that many of her friends are out in the business world or doing interesting social work. She finds these women young and attractive looking, and wonders why they have left her behind. When she talks to them they tell her that they have to be attractive in their appearance, that every woman today who wants to be a success in whatever she undertakes must look her best. Beauty has now become obligatory.

You surely have had the experience of finding women older than yourself who have somehow managed to preserve their youth better, who make it a point of looking chic at all times of the day. They have realized, and you must, too, that standards of beauty have changed. In the first place, beauty no longer means regularity of features. It means chic, charm, personality. These come with care. This care is available to every woman. Formerly only the rich could afford to take beauty treatments to preserve their youth and beauty. Today these treatments are available to every-

Women Are Making Good Investors

Lubbock Bankers Say 'Weaker Sex' Has Judgement Just As Good As Man's And Accept Advice Freely

SOME of the worst paying investments in the world are made by men and not by women as is the popular belief, and on the contrary many women are as good judges of a sound investment as men are and in addition possess that inexplicable sense which they are pleased to term "womanly intuition" and which is accounted for by the males as being merely a "lucky break."

In addition, many of the so-called weaker sex display shrewd business ability and might make better profits than their husbands were it not for the law in Texas making it impossible for a woman to contract without her husband's consent.

Bankers on Lookout

All of this is according to statements made by local bankers who have made observations covering several years.

L. C. Ellis, vice-president of the Lubbock National bank, believes that if a woman has experience her judgment is practically as good as that of a man.

"Out here in this part of the country it is still an unusual thing to find a woman who manages a business largely by herself, said Mr. Ellis. "Comparatively few people put their money into stocks and bonds, but instead invest it in a building and loan association or buy bank shares", according to Mr. Ellis, and many buy real estate.

Each banker agreed that with the growth of the number of women and girls in the business world there is an increase in investments and the past ten years has witnessed a remarkable change.

"I have noticed from my desk," said O. L. Slaton, president of the First National bank, that at least twenty-five per cent of those who go to the windows to deposit money for business firms are girls. That is because women are now considered to be as efficient as men in many lines, although perhaps it is true that a young man who remains in the office can transact business and accomplish more than she could in the same length of time."

Women Ask Advice

Another reason why women are progressing financially is due to the fact that they take the advice of their bankers or lawyers and act upon it most of the time realizing that they need expert advice, while men on the other hand sometimes think the matter over and decide to invest as they think best.

Last April the Federal Reserve board issued a certificate of authority to the First National bank making it a trustee, executor, and administrator of wills in a fiduciary capacity. P. R. Friend is trustee. By this means wills are made to the bank who will place the money in approved securities and guarantees protection to a widow from "sharks" or "confidence" men. Several Lubbock women have taken advantage of this opportunity.

J. A. Hackaby, of Floydada, spent yesterday in Lubbock on business.

SPEECH DEPARTMENT GROWS

Three hundred students are enrolled in the speech department according to Miss Ruth Pirtle, head of the department. A freshman course in public speaking is being offered but a greater interest is being taken in the course by upperclassmen.

A class in stage craft has a laboratory which will make sets for Little Theatre plays. The sets will likely be used at a local theater. Other courses offered include fundamentals of speech, argumentation, dramatic technique and phonetics. This year is the first time that the courses have been so arranged that a student may major in speech. There are 15 people majoring in speech this year.

An effort is being made to bring a national honorary speech fraternity to the campus. At present the dramatic club is Sock and Buskin. Applications for membership in this club should be sent to Miss Ruth Pirtle at the college postoffice. There are several vacancies to be filled.

Expression classes are under the charge of Mrs. Ray Mowery.

CAFETERIA POPULAR

"Many town people are patronizing the college cafeteria for the noon meal and their interest in the college and this phase of the service offered to the general public by the School of Home Economics is highly appreciated," said Miss Katherine Harper, assistant professor of foods.

Due to the fact that the cafeteria is needed by the students and faculty members mainly for breakfast during the hours of 7 to 10 and for dinner from 11 to 1:30 o'clock, during week days, these are the hours observed. The cafeteria is a one-story stucco building located on the campus southeast of the Administration building. It is operated by the college under the supervision of the School of Home Economics and with Miss Katherine Harper in direct charge of the food.

Pyrotechnics Of Fair Will Be Of Public Interest

Carload Of Fireworks Will Be Shot Off Here During Annual Exposition; Huge Spectacle Promised

With the receipt Friday of an entire carload of fireworks, comprising well over a ton of rockets, bombs, set pieces, electrical control devices and other equipment, and the arrival of a special corps of technicians from the Thearle-Duffield laboratories at Chicago, everything is in readiness for the opening presentation Monday night of the big night spectacle, "The Festival of Fire," which will feature the entertainment each evening next week at the Panhandle-South Plains Fair.

"Indications point to a new attendance record for our evening show," B. C. Dickinson, president, said yesterday. "The show will comprise one of the most thrilling and unusual entertainments ever presented in the history of the fair."

Many Types Promised

According to the final program, "The Festival of Fire" embraces virtually every type and kind of fireworks of the last two centuries, woven together into a program which is far more elaborate and spectacular than anything ever witnessed here before. There will be naval battle scenes, enacted completely in fireworks with all the realism of a genuine engagement, volcanos in eruption, comedy cartoons reproduced and acted out in fire, such old favorites as "Niagara Falls" and the American Flag in natural colors, a special series of the newest modernistic effects and jazz devices just being introduced this year in the pyrotechnic field, and a profusion of other specialties never witnessed here before.

The general fireworks program embraces all the latest types of multiple-repeating rockets, hanging festoons of colored fire, bombshells which burst hundreds of feet in the air and paint the sky in every color of the rainbow, giant set pieces, unusual "trick" devices, and scores of other features too numerous to mention.

It is said to be one of the most costly entertainments of its kind ever produced at any country fair in the state, and one of the most all-embracing in its features that has ever been attempted in this type of program.

Stores in Switzerland now are compelled to obtain permission from trade organizations to conduct clearance sales, which are allowed only twice a year.

THE LIFE STORY OF DR. ECKENER

WRITTEN BY HUGH ALLEN FOR NEA SERVICE

Copyright 1929, By NEA Service, Inc.

CHAPTER VII

Dr. Eckener had just reached his 46th birthday when the world war broke out, and Delag ships were taken over by the government. He applied for a post as Zeppelin commander. But he was to lead no bombing raids, see no reconnaissance operations of the great fleet.

The spectacular operations of peace time airships had given the German public high hopes for their use in war time, especially as Germany was the only country possessing this type of aircraft. The government foresaw a need for many Zeppelins, realized the shortage of competent personnel, had some conception at least of the length of time needed to properly train officers and men.

Eckener had had wider experience than any other man in Europe in flying ships. He must be held at home to train new pilots. Someone must be at hand to pass on to new men the accumulated flying experience of four years of peace time operations. Dr. Eckener was logically that man. He set himself to the task of fitting other men for command.

How thorough the training Dr. Eckener gave the military pilots can be realized only by considering what an airship commander's duties are.

His motors are housed in small cars outside the hull of the ship, the farthest of them 300 feet away. From the control car up forward the commander may order his motors run at full speed, at half power, at idling speed. He may cut some motors and run the rest, may with the present type order some run in reverse if he wants suddenly to check speed. However, motors are motors, whether on airship or surface craft or automobile.

The airship has two sets of rudders, two steering wheels, one set controlling direction, the other altitude. For the airship sails in two dimensions. The commander must keep his ship in trim, know that whatever of fuel, or what shifting of ballast, the ship from stern to stem is in equilibrium. Though there are times when it may be desirable to fly his ship at an angle heavy or tail-heavy. He can direct the trim of the ship from his instrument board, can direct his helmsmen from the bridge.

The main lifting force in the ship comes from the fact it is inflated with a gas much lighter than air. The lift of a ship, however, is not constant. It varies with temperature and barometric pressure. The ship has better lifting power in cold, heavy air than in warm, lighter air. However, in cold weather his gas contracts, while in warmer air it expands, so that the resultant lift is a matter of rather careful mathematics.

In landing a ship he must be careful not to drive it down too hard and do damage to it, but he also must not swing down too cautiously and miss his landing crew entirely.

As he consumes fuel his ship grows lighter and flies higher, with the result that the lifting gas expands and the surplus flows out through the valves at top and bottom. At his peril he must be certain that his valves work freely and as needed.

He must know the principles of navigation, be able to fly blind, at night or through fog, and know where he is at all times.

He must know weather, and this is so long a story as to require special treatment later.

The manager of a ground station must be ready with landing crew when needed, must have men ready for refueling, regassing, overhaul and maintenance. But the ship commander's responsibility does not cease when he has landed his ship, nor when it is safe in the hangar. Aboard ship his vigilance and watchfulness can never slacken. But aloft or on land, the commander's responsibility persists continuously, until he is relieved of command.

Beyond that he must have junior officers about him thoroughly trained, responsible, at the engines, on the deck, on navigation, and must have crews who know exactly what to do.

And all must know what to do not only under ordinary and normal conditions, but under extraordinary and emergency conditions.

Perhaps the most spectacular single phase of the Eckener training course was the making of theoretical flights.

Well before the war the conviction had been growing in his mind and that of Count Zeppelin's that the time of Count Zeppelin's that airships would be flown regularly across the North Atlantic to America. With typical thoroughness Eckener began making plans to that end. He had directed the compilation of weather reports between Central Europe and New York, getting the data from the logs of a thousand ships and innumerable inland stations until he had assembled a fairly complete weather map of the route, covering nearly 25 years. From this he had been able to draw certain conclusions as to averages in wind directions and velocities. And this huge collection of data was now to become of immediate practical benefit.

A cadet commander would call at Eckener's office, receive directions to take a Zeppelin ship of given size from Friedrichshafen to New York City, making the flight as of July 1, 1915, let's say.

The commander would then assemble officers and skeleton crew, shut themselves in a great hall, make final preparations for refueling and servicing the ship, get out the weather maps of that period, settle down to work.

They find that a storm was sweeping down from the North Sea across Central Europe that day, but that it quieted down sufficiently by evening so that the ship can be taken out of the hangar safely. They order inspection of docking rail trolleys which harness the ship against cross hangar winds, reinforce the ground crew, place additional men on the windward side to hold the ship steady.

They calculate the lift of the ship at the barometric pressure of that evening, decide on the amount of fuel they can carry.

They determine whether to fly the northern route, take advantage of the fair weather that will follow the storm or to swing south to the Azores and catch the trade winds.

The ship takes off, flies 12 hours, in north of England, has consumed so many pounds of gas, has become lighter, is flying higher, is forced to valve hydrogen to keep down to a better flying level.

En route across, they find new storms and fair weather and hour by hour they calculate their position, their requirements in fuel, and their resultant lift. They alter their course to avoid storms or take advantage of favorable conditions.

Every order necessary to be given in the handling of a ship thought out in view of the factors and is written down.

From time to time Eckener comes in, surveys the theoretical ship log, consults with them over conditions ahead, asks sharp questions, makes criticisms, points out factors they had overlooked, and gives a quick quiz to make sure they understand the reason for each movement.

To add to the reality of the flight the officers must remain in their room, having their meals sent in to them, must stay by their tasks until they have made the theoretical landing in New York.

More than a thousand such theoretical flights were made by student commanders. And the lessons impressed on them were to become widely useful when they actually took the bridge of a Zeppelin.

Zeppelin engineers became highly expert through the accumulation of construction experience. During the building of more than a hundred airships, they had opportunity for experiment and for observing the results of experiment to a degree that no other group even approached.

But it should be said in fairness as well that the success of Zeppelin operations was due not entirely to the technical skill of the builders, but as well to the thoroughness of training which Hugo Eckener gave his commanders. And he trained them all.

...B. Jones, well known Spur banker and ...ntative of large New York interests who ...es as chairman of the board of regents at ...Technological college, tells a story, which, to ...Avalanche-Journal at least, forms an interesting ...light upon human nature.

The fallacies of man are many and varied. Idiosyncrasies of the genus homo have long been the basis of philosophical study. The incident related by Mr. Jones is symbolical of man's process of thinking and living. It is too unusual, yet at the same time, too natural to be overlooked.

While on a summer vacation trip, which carried him as far north as Canada and part of Alaska, Mr. Jones, together with his party, was a short time guest of a gold rush veteran, who, with his wife, makes his abode in an almost uninhabited region. Sixty miles is their home from the nearest town. Months pass, undoubtedly, when they see no other human beings save each other and two Japanese servants.

During a conversation between the Spur financier and the Canadian pioneer the latter brought out a fact little known in this country. "It is an unwritten law of the north," the old fellow told Mr. Jones, "that whenever a man meets misfortune of any kind his worst enemy must administer to his needs. And the law, peculiar as it is, is strictly enforced." Then the old fellow told a story.

"There is a man living in the next town, 60 miles away, to whom I have not spoken to since the gold rush of 1898. When we meet I do not speak and he looks the other way.

"Some years ago he met with misfortune—a setback from which he has never recovered. Since that time I have not visited the town without taking him something. Sometimes it is magazines, a bottle of wine or a basket of fresh eggs—a delicacy in the north. I go to his home, set the gift and his front step and leave. He doesn't know who leaves the gifts and of course I wouldn't tell him."

And as he finished the story Mr. Jones thought he saw a tear in the old fellow's eyes when he murmured, "What children we are!"

And from this vantage point, the writer, many miles removed from the scene, sees two old men, hoary and frost-bitten, living as they are on the fringe of civilization—at best with a few years left to live—barring the door of friendship because of false pride. There they are, curdling the milk of human kindness, all because of a preposterous something which is found in the make-up of us all—stubbornness.

You'll see the same thing right here in Lubbock. You'll see it everywhere. Men will hold high their heads when their hearts prompt them to better things all because of a principle unworthy of the name.

The old fellow in the Canadian wilds was right. We are children, all of us. Life would be fuller, sweeter if we weren't.

SACRIFICE OF IDEALS

Each day since their votes were cast brings less "balm in Gilead" for those Democratic senators who supported the motion to delay action on the Vare case until December. These men formerly voted with their party to bring the Vare case to a head. Their shift last week has created wide interest in an explanation.

"It was the expressed belief in senate circles," says the New York Tribune, "after the vote that most of the Democrats who supported the Watson motion and thus stood out against the Norris resolution are seeking tariff legislation which will benefit their states or sections."

If that be the reason, the situation is deplorable. Senators who would subordinate an issue of clean and honest elections in favor of tariff favors discredit themselves and bring humiliation to their constituents and their party. It is inconceivable that the good people of the states these senators represent would favor the tolerence of crooked elections in return for tariff protection.

These senators have taken the sordid materialistic view of the case. They have sacrificed principle of expediency. Democrats rightly accuse the Old Guard Republicans with subordinating human to property rights, of devotion to the golden calf rather than to those ideals of government under which the people have equal and exact justice and a chance at happiness.

One of the valid complaints against some of our Democratic brethern is that they would have the party sacrifice those high ideals that justify its existence and which have brought it into power to serve the public. One the Democratic party discards principle for pottage, it forfeits its right to exist.

STEWART SHOWS HOW SHIP PROGRAM, REGARDED BY MANY AS CINCHED, FILLS PESSIMISTS WITH FOREBODINGS

BY CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—To hear all th eoptimists talk about it—

Yes, and the pessimists also—because th etwo groups are in substantial accord as to what is about to happen—though the prospect fills the optimists with joy, whereas it fills the pessimists with forebodings.

Anyhow, to hear them both tell it—

One would suppose that any naval program which the United States and Great Britain agree on is practically cinched—that President Hoover and Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald have, in fact, agreed on one—that nothing remains but for them to shake hands on it in October—and that will end the matter.

Reminded of it, even the optimists do recall that two or three other sea powers will have to be consulted, before the pact can be regarded as definitely signed, sealed and delivered—to be exact: Japan, France and Italy.

However, Japan is only a secondary sea power, and France and Italy are only tertiary—Italy maybe only quarternary.

The will be amenable enough, the optimists are sure.

Still, for the sake of argument—supposing they balk? What of it? They needn't interfere with the Anglo-American bargain. These two first-raters' rivalry is between themselves, is it not? Certainly. Then they can limit themselves mutually.. if they choose—and who cares how the small fry feel about it?

Thus reason the optimists, wreathed in smiles. Sighing gloomily, the pessimistic big navy-ites admit that they can see no flaw in it.

No flaw in it, hey?

Cruisers are the nub of the Anglo-Amerikan negotiations.

Let us investigate.

John Bull wants plenty of them—his empire is so widely scattered. Uncle Sam wants naval parity or near-parity with John Bull, but needs fewer cruisers. If John Bull will promise to keep his cruiser fleet down to a minimum, they can make a deal; otherwise they will have to go on with their navy race—that is, cruiser building against one another.

Prime Minister MacDonald is ready to promise; that is the compact on which he expects to shake hands with President Hoover in October.

The Hoover-MacDonald handshaking in Washington is to be followed by a meeting of American, British, Japanese, French and Italian representatives somewhere in Europe, probably in January, to sign a regular treaty—if no one throws a wrench into the machinery.

Why! who would be guilty of so mean a trick?

Well, for instance, it might be Japan—though the Japanese, if they do such a thing, will consider it a necessary precaution, from their standpoint, and not a mean trick.

The famous Washington conference of 1921-22 fixed a naval ratio, as between the United States, Great Britain and Japan, of 5-5-3, respectively.

Not much attention has been called to it, in connection with the recent Hoover-MacDonald exchanges of views, because it was a discordant note, but Japan hints that she will ask, at the expected January meeting, for a change in the 5-5-3 ratio to a ratio of 10-10-7.

In other words, Japan wahts a larger cruiser allowance, to put her nearer to an equality with the United States and Great Britain.

This would be very painful.

Talk peace as the powers may, Australia is mighty suspicious of Japan. If Japan builds more cruisers, Great Britain assuredly must build more, to satisfy Australia. If Great Britain builds more, the United States must build more, to keep within gunshot of parity. If the United States builds more, Japan must build more, to maintain her ratio. Whereupon, on account of Australia, Great Britain must build more.

And so on ad infinitum.

Moreover—Some "freedom of the seas" grit threatens to get into the proceedings' bearings when the January conference opens.

As everyone knows, the seas are as public as the atmosphere whenever Great Britain is at peace with the whole world, but become British private property the minute John Bull exchanges declarations of war with any other country on earth—and only open to navigation by neutrals subject to British regulations.

Although America once fought a draw with England on this issue, President Hoover has not so much as mentioned it (at any rate for publication) during his entire series of chats with Premeier MacDonald—which may or may not be the reason why the discussion has progressed so amicably.

Diet and Health

WATER MORE NECESSARY TO MAN THAN HIS FOOD.

Drink, Or You Die!

K.—Usually thirst is a reliable guide to the amount of drinking water needed, but some have the thirst instinct dulled and are literally dried out and suffer generally because of this.

The body consists of two-thirds water and it is absolutely necessary for all chemical action. A liberal amount should be taken every day to supply the water loss and to keep up the normal chemistry of the body. From four to eight glasses a day is the average need. Two glasses, hot or cold, before breakfast, is a helpful remedy for many in avoiding constipation. If you take considerable watery fruits, naturally you would need less. In the summer, one needs a very liberal supply to make up for the excess loss through perspiration.

Don't drink liberally immediately after heavy meals, however, for it may distend the stomach and cause distress or worse.

Hawk, in his Physiological Chemistry, gives two interesting experiments to show the importance of water in nutrition. He placed two young guinea pigs in separate cages and gave each free access to the normal diet which had been rapidly dried. He permitted pig No. 1 all the water he wanted, and No. 2 none. No 1 pig receiving the water remained normal and showed normal gain in weight; but No. 2, which received no water, showed pronounced loss in weight and other signs of abnormality, and would die in a short time unless water is really more important than food!

The other experiment: Two young guinea pigs were placed in separate cages. One was given a dry diet, but no water was permitted. The second pig was given no food, but had free access to water. The pig which received the food but no water died sooner than the one that received the abundance of water but no food. This experiment impresses upon you the fact that man can live longer without food than without water.

Have a drink right now! Even though reducing. It is not fattening (of itself.)

"Could you tell me through your column if you know of anything that would remove discolored scars from burns on my arms? I have had them for about two months and they do not show signs of disappearing.

"I would also like to know if gum if fattening.

A."

Scars sometimes take two years to disappear, so don't be discouraged, A. If they are of such a type that they never will disappear, then a plastic surgeon could help you out.

AIRMEN TO PRACTICE

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 28 (AP).—The city will be subjected to a sham aerial bombardment by army aviators December 15 as part of the aviation week program. Today's Poem

A CONTEMPLATION UPON FLOWERS

Brave flowers—that I could gallant if like you,
And be as little vain!
You come abroad, and make a harmless show,
And to your beds of earth again.
You are not proud—you know your birth:
For your embroidered garments are from earth.

You do obey your months and times, but I
Would have it ever Spring:
My fate would know no Winter, never die.
Nor think of such a thing.
O that I could my bed of earth but view
And smile, and look as cheerfully as you!

O teach me to see Death and not to fear,
But rather to take truce!
How often have I seen you at a bier,
And there look fresh and spruce?
You fragrant flowers, then teach me that my breath
Like yours may sweeten and perfume my death.

On the Fence with The Seer

The Seer has decided that life in this modern era is a ready-made proposition. We are born into the world and go with the current that happens to strike us. We find pleasure, ideas, habits and everything else waiting for ut. That's nice, but the trouble is too manq of us take life just as we find it and never buck the wind as it blows. A meagre few choose their own direction. They are not usually the happy ones but nine times out of ten are the ones that count.

We are individual dynamos Some of us purr along the highway of existence, hitting on all cylinders while others chug along like a 1910 flivver.

The Seer remembers some lines from Longfellow which are beautifully adapted to this topic of discussion, indeed a prize jewel of wisdom:

"Not in the clamor of the crowded street,
Nor in the shouts and plaudits of the throng,
But in ourselves are triumph and defeat."

Think it over!

AUTHOR OF "RICH GIRL—POOR GIRL," ETC.

THIS HAS HAPPENED

HELEN PAGE feels unhappy when her classmates accuse her of being in love with her handsome guardian, LEONARD BRENT. But he represents all that she knows of home and family and she adores him blindly.

Brent changes all his plans for Helen's future after a chance meeting with a dying beggar, CHARLES OWENS NELLIN, who tells a strange story which Brent is able to corroborate to some extent by a visit to Yonkers.

On graduating, Helen reminds her guardian of his promise to reveal her parentage and is amazed when he informs her that she is heiress of a millionaire, CYRIL K. CUNNINGHAM, and that he promised her parents to take her to him when she was 18. They go to Yonkers and Brent introduces her to Cunningham. He offers as proof the locket containing a picture of EVANGELINE CUNNINGHAM which he had taken from the dying Nellin.

Helen remains at Bramblewood while the lawyer investigates the story. Cunningham presents her with a new car which she drives everywhere. One day she accidentally hits a girl, EVA ENNIS, who has to be taken to the hospital. Eva's brother, ROBERT, upbraids Helen for her reckless driving and then, noting her unstrung condition, offers to take her home. Cunningham receives him graciously and invites him to spend the evening. The young couple go for a canoe ride.

Next day Brent arrives and when he hears about her meeting with Robert asks her to go to New York for dinner and the theater.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XIX

"I'd love to," Helen exclaimed happily. "It's been terribly dull out here."

"I know," Brent agreed, "but I've hesitated to ask you before in fear that I might antagonize your grandfather and do you some harm."

"I don't think he would mind letting me go," Helen said. "He's really very kind. Shall I drive in with you?"

Brent made a quick excuse. "I have an engagement tonight," he said. "Will you come tomorrow?"

Helen's disappointment was instant, also her understanding of it. One of Leonard's many charming women friends, of course. She felt herself grow a little cold over the thought that again there was someone before her.

But she would not give in to the impulse to refuse his invitation altogether, seeing clearly that it would be childish to do so.

"Tomorrow, then," she said listlessly. Brent overlooked her tone, refusing to make an issue of it.

They talked of plays on the drive back to Bramblewood and Helen began to take an interest in selecting the one they would see together.

The next day she went to see Eva just before starting for New York, and Bob's name was not mentioned. Eva would not thrust it forward and Helen seemed to have forgotten him. Her anticipation of an evening with Leonard, at dinner and at the theater, had obscured all else.

Brent met her at the Grand Central Station and took her to his hotel, where he had engaged a room for her in which to change into her evening clothes. When she was dressed and went down to meet him she was a vision of loveliness.

Brent was proud of her, proud of the attention she attracted, but his heart beat no faster at the touch of her soft hands, the sight of her eager, animated countenance.

There was nothing in their souls to meet—no common transport for them. And it did not suit Brent to allow Helen's beauty to move him. His game with her was far too serious for what he called "trivial nonsense."

But Helen's anticipation of a wonderful time had affected her emotions to the point of obliterating doubt and uncertainty. Brent was the Brent of her school days to her. Let him be cold. She was used to that. She loved him just the same.

The kiss that he bestowed upon her fingers tingled there only slightly less than would her lips had he chosen them to receive the caress.

She was enjoying herself with the delicious misery of a young girl who feels herself hopelessly in love with an older man. Leonard might tell her that he loved her, but she knew that he did not live for her alone.

She forgot that only yesterday she had not wanted him to manifest love through jealousy—forgot that she had been loath to talk about Bob Ennis. She was enthralled with the time, the place and the man.

For Brent, in spite of his calculating attitude toward her, could and did let himself go in an effort to entertain her. He told her amusing anecdotes of smart people, saw that she dined as an epicure would, accorded her every attention she could have desired.

She saw beautiful women about them and yet not once did she observe Brent's eyes straying away from her to them. When the music was particularly loving the thoughts things to show thhat the thoughts it stirred in his mind were associated with her.

Helen fell under the spell of the hour's witchery without resistance. Soft lights, music, beauty, perfume, perfection. Her senses were stimulated by them until she was carried away, lifted to a plane of ecstatic delight.

From dinner they went on to the play—a romantic love story with the modern twist—an unhappy ending. It chilled Helen but her spirits revived again when Brent took her to one of the more restrained clubs and they dance for an hour.

Then they got her suitcase from the hotel and Brent drove her home.

And for the first time he kissed her on her lips. It was in the dim light of the great hall at Bramblewood. Helen trembled in his arms like a wild animal that finds itself in strange surroundings.

"I love you," Brent whispered into her ear. "I love you."

Helen dropped against him. She did not say to him, "I love you."

The words did not come to her. And she was without regret that they did not for the omission was unnoted on her part.

Brent was not so oblivious. He glimpsed defeat. Helen felt his arms tighten around her, then slacken. He had warned himself against destroying her romantic illusions. He knew that she did not love him, knew that he fascinated her, and he knew what to do.

Gently he held her away from him. "You must forgive me," he said with infinite pathos in his voice. "I had no right to do that."

His hands slipped from hers, pressed them, let them go. It was a gesture of renunciation, meant to awaken pity.

When he was gone Helen felt very tender toward him. She stood at her window and watched the road down which he had driven and hoped with a wildness that even she smiled over that he would come back.

The next day she was exceedingly sweet and soft with her grandfather and the old man made up his mind to a course of action that had suggested itself several days before.

He sent for Mr. Greaves and asked for a report on the progress of the investigation of Helen's parentage.

There was nothing new.

"It seems improbable, does it not, that if Helen is not my granddaughter, that I shall not locate the legitimate heiress?" Mr. Cunningham queried. Before he could be answered he added sharply: "Within my lifetime, I mean. That can not be long, you know, Greaves."

Mr. Greaves nodded. He understood what was going on in his client's mind. He had seen it coming.

"I've grown to love Helen—whoever she is—and I'm ready to accept her as my granddaughter," Mr. Cunningham went on. "I shall leave her my fortune on condition that she is not proved to be an imposter. In that event it will be held for my legitimate heirs. You may destroy my former will, Greaves, and make another."

Helen was with Eva, having a confidential chat with her, when the will that made her the heiress to a fortune of millions was drawn up, witnessed and signed.

Eva was talking about her ambition. She dreamed of being a world-famous violinist.

"Bob is going to be a lawyer," she interjected suddenly. "He's dear, works day and night. You know, he's paying for my lessons. I hate to have him sacrifice himself as he does, but I'll pay it all back some day."

She sighed gently. "It's awfully hard to get anywhere in music."

"I intend to make it easier for you," Helen said.

Eva looked at her with widening eyes. "You will make me very unhappy if you refuse," Helen told her. "I dislike owing any kind of debt, so please don't argue with me. My conscience will be much easier if I know you are glad we met." She laughed and added: "Even as we did."

And by the time Eva was able to go home Helen felt sure that she was glad they had met. And she herself was glad too. For she had never known a girl as guilelessly dear as Eva. Her soul seemed to be untouched by anything but beauty.

They grew, during the remainder of Eva's convalescence, to be real friends. Helen came often to the humble Ennis home and later, when Eva was able to drive to Bramblewood with her, they spent many hours there.

Of Bob Helen saw but little. That little was a great deal to him, however. He loved her. Loved her so that living had become a torture. His mind refused to hold any thought that was not of her. He could not study, could not work.

His mother worried over his loss of appetite, and his wakefulness worked havoc with his appearance. He was hollow-eyed and haggard. He had no hope.

Aside from the barrier of their distant stations in life, Bob knew that Helen, whatever the slight interest she had shown in him that night on the lake, did not care for him. She was polite, of course, but there was no question that he meant nothing at all to her.

For Helen was absorbed, completely, with Leonard Brent. She had gone to New York with him on several occasions since the night he kissed her.

And she hoped to spend her birthday with him, but a few days before that date her grandfather made an unusual request of her.

Bourland Requests W.T.C.C Directors To Gather

EL PASO, Sept. 28. (Special)—President-Manager A. M. Bourland of the West Texas chamber of commerce has just issued an appeal for all directors of the organization to be in El Paso Wednesday morning, October 23, for a meeting of the board, at which time he will submit his report. He has also appealed to all delegates to be in the convention city on the afternoon of the same day at time numerous business problems confronting West Texas are to be discussed. At this meeting it is expected the program for another year's work will be outlined.

Guatemalan At Tech Likes College

Alfredo Melindez Studies In This Country Because He Wants To Learn Correct Way Of Speaking English

"I came to the United States for my education because I wanted to learn English," said Alfredo Melindez, student at Tech from Quezaltenango, Guatemala. The manner in which he carries on his conversations proves that he has made good in doing what he started out to do. He speaks rather rapidly and in a broken manner but it is easy to understand him.

Melindez is 19 years old and weighs 165 pounds. He is studying pre-medic work in the School of Liberal Arts. After he finishes his education and stays in the United States for a while he wants to return to his home town and be a missionary.

In Texas Four Years

Melindez has attended schools in Texas for four years. The president of his preparatory college advised him to attend Tech. Since his arrival here he has met a great number of the student body. He declared that he liked Tech for the democratic spirit and the equality among the student body.

"I like to play football but I don't know if I can play this year or not. I go out for training every day. I played on the high school team for three years and was right guard. Football practice in college is pretty rough but I like the coach. I think it is worth the price to play. I bought my Athletic ticket and I'm going to all of the games. I like the pep meetings that I have attended."

Speaks French Well

Melindez can speak French as well as English or Spanish. He reads books in all three languages for a pastime. He said that it was easier for him to learn English than French because he had always had a desire to speak English.

An older brother is helping to put Melindez through school. A part of his expenses he earns himself. His father is a contractor in Guatemala. A younger brother may attend Tech next year. The younger boy is studying to be a dentist and is now attending a university in Guatemala.

"The student body is very nice to me. They must respect me because I am a foreigner. Every one seems to be glad to see me here. I enjoy my classes and seem to get along just as easy as every one else in them."

Russian Romance Comes To Lyric

"The Red Sword" Stars Marion Nixon

Vibrant with all the color and drama of the old days in Russia when the Czar ruled as a despot and kept the people under subjection through fear of the Cossacks, "The Red Sword," an FBO production which has been highly praised for its fidelity to those conditions, comes to the Lyric Theater this week.

Carmel Myers, whose stellar ability has been manifested in many of the outstanding screen triumphs of recent years, is seen in a dual role which affords ample opportunity for her splendid dramatic gifts. Marian Nixon, charming and capable ingenue, has another of the featured roles with William Collier, jr., playing opposite. Allan Roscoe and Demetrius Alexis are also in the exceptional cast.

"The Red Sword," directed by Robert Vignola from a story by S. E. V. Taylor, paints a vivid picture of the military oppression that led to the overthrow of Russia's imperial house by the long-suffering proletariat, with a highly dramatic narrative of suspense, romance and and retribution grippingly presented against this striking background.

To encourage good motor-bus transportation the Chinese government has ordered highway boards of each province to maintain a supply of motor-car parts.

Richard Dix Will Be Seen Today In Lindsey Offering

"Nothing But The Truth" Clever Picture

Richard Dix's Abridged Dictionary was the movie star's latest idea for perfecting the art of the talking picture until sound engineers made the book obsolete.

Dix learned a lot about sound effects during his work at Paramount's Long Island studio on his latest farce, "Nothing But the Truth" which comes to the Lindsey Theater for a four-day run beginning today.

He had seen the mechanical process improve greatly, so that the well-known tendency of talking pictures to lisp had been practically eliminated.

Words Cause Trouble

However, there were still a few words that caused trouble over the microphone. Dix's list of dangerous words for his own Dixionary included these—Conscientiousness, business, efficiency, office, voice and yes. Whenever he could find a synonym for one of them, he used it.

On his first trial with talking pictures, made just before work began on "Nothing But the Truth," the star said to the microphone, "My goodness sakes, this is a quiet place! Say, I've got a great name for this—speakeasy."

A speech just full of the dangerous "ess" sound. Then the record was played back for the star to hear his voice.

Sounds Like Snakes

"Is it possible?" asked Dix. "It sounds as if I was in a den of snakes."

And from that moment he began to compile his Essless Dixionary.

Unfortunately for the enterprise, however, the complete elimination of lisping was effected by the Paramount engineers a short time after Dix began the work, and now he knows there will be no market for the book.

Star Gazing

(By Central Press)

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—To succeed Herr Emil Jannings, the late departed, to those cumbersome Teutonic roles that have proven the delight of movie audiences, this department nominates Eric von Stroheim, ex-director-actor come back to life.

Von Stroheim wins the verdict by his work in "The Great Gabbo" now current on the screen. If "The Great Gabbo" is a good picture it is because Von Stroheim is in it. If this new talkie is a poor one then it is so despite Von Stroheim. For Eric is all there is to it.

The title role of "The Great Gabbo," played by Von Stroheim, is one of the toughest chores that have been handed to a movie star to do in a long time.

The Great Gabbo is a ventriloquist, slightly daffy over his own self-importance. He makes life extremely miserable for everybody, especially the girl who shares his act and apartment, played none too well by Betty Compson.

The plausibility of a ventroliquist becoming as important a show figure as Gabbo becomes is one of the weak spots of the film, the story structure of which is none too sturdy throughout. The best scene occurs when Gabbo goes insane at the finale of a great musical revue in which he is the star. The final fadeout showing him watching workmen remove his name from lights above the theater is typically Janningsesque.

Without Von Stroheim one shudders to think of what this picture might have been.

Lon Chaney Stars In "Where East Is East" On Thursday

Fantastic Picture Comes To Palace This Week

Lon Chaney, in one of his most fantastic, and certainly one of his most thrilling roles of the screen, comes Thursday to the Palace Theatre in "Where East Is East," vivid sound synchronized drama of the Siamese jungles, in which he stages desparate battles with wild animals and other thrills as a side issue in one of his most amazing characterizations.

The story, an original by Tod Browning, who directed it, and who has directed Chaney in the past in such successes as "The Unholy Three," "The Road to Mandalay," "West of Zanzibar" and others, deals with a strange trapper of wild animals in an Oriental jungle, and the amazing vagaries of fate which enmesh him in a grim and fantastic plot.

The cast is a notable one, with Lupe Velez, fiery little heroine of "The Gaucho" as his half-native daughter, Estell Taylor as a sinuous charmer of the Orient, and Lloyd Hughes as the romantic lead, a young American showman seeking animals at the trappers' camp.

Chaney's sensational feat of trapping a wild tiger by means of a lariat in a tree is one of the first thrills in the production.

In another breath-taking episode he and Lloyd Hughes fight a desperate battle with an escaped tiger to rescue Miss Velez and the climax of the play sees Chaney in a battle to the death with a giant gorilla. Trained circus animals, including a herd of elephants, cages of lions, tigers and gorillas were impressed for these scenes and several remarkable episodes were worked out by their means.

Comedy Pair Stars At Palace Today

Karl Dane, George K. Arthur In New Film

Karl Dane and George K. Arthur score a direct laugh triumph in their new comedy of navy life, "All at Sea," which will be at the Palace Theater today.

In this Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer farce, the famous co-stars run into all sorts of complications. They are cast as a pair of rollicking sailors who both have an eye on the same girl, a pretty photograph studio operator, portrayed by Josephine Dunn.

Byron Morgan, who wrote "Rockies" in which they first won comedy laurels, is the author of this yarn and has provided another knockout story for them in the salty tale of gobs who didn't want to leave any lonesome lasses behind. Numberless thrills abound in the plot and a spectacular fire scene brings a gripping climax to the zippy action.

The fun begins when Dane, a hard-boiled bo's'n's mate, hoots at Arthur, who first is seen as a small-time vaudeville magician and hypnotist. To get even Arthur places Dane under a hypnotic spell and when he brings him to finds he has an arch-enemy on his hands. To escape Dane's wrath, Arthur dons a sailor uniform, is picked up by a recruiting officer and finds himself in the navy with Dane.

Josephine Dunn enters into the situation by falling in love with Arthur while also having Dane as a would-be suitor. There is a navy ball, in which Arthur is seen disguised as a "vamp" who lures Dane into trouble and manages to get himself fired out of service for starting a panic. Arthur proves a hero in the arsenal fire, wins Dane's admiration—and also the girl.

Frances Howard played the lead of the silent "Swan" back in '25.

George Bancroft In Powerful New Film At Lindsey

"Thunderbolt" Is Tense Drama Of Life, Love

Tense, suspenseful drama, in a setting as intriguing as any ever brought to the screen, comes to the Lindsey Theater, starting Thursday, for three days, when "Thunderbolt" George Bancroft's new all-talking picture shows here. The gripping situations, surpassing the tremendous episodes of "Underworld," pulse with life-giving dialog and sound.

Harlem, New York's Negro district, with all its sinister, hidden underworld, is revealed on the screen as it actually is. Bancroft portrays the part of a hard-fighting gang boss in love with Fay Wray, Eric von Stroheim's beautiful heroine of "The Wedding March." The girl repulses Bancroft and, in an effort to go straight, turns to Richard Arlen. They fall in love but Arlen incurs the enmity of Bancroft.

Climax Thrilling

That is the big climactic situation. Bancroft, the virile he-man of the screen, has sworn to kill young Arlen, the likeable hero-aviator of the famous "Wings." They are together in Sing Sing's death house. Will Bancroft kill the youth? Will he let Arlen be sent to the chair? Will Bancroft go to the chair? Suspense! Tense, hard, cold, breathless drama and a love theme that keeps the heart beating fast.

Josef von Sternberg, the man who made "Underworld," in which Bancroft made his initial great hit, made "Thunderbolt." It has everything that made "Underworld" famous and a great deal more. It's all-talking.

Ralph Ince has tossed up the megaphone again and turned actor once more. Ince will have the leading role in "Wall Street."

Lillian Gish's new version of Ferenc Molnar's "The Swan" will be an all-gabbie.

Lenore Ulric is studying on hula-hula dancing for a forth-coming pic. Ruby Keeler, his wife, may play opposite Al Jolson in his next.

William Haines will play a lead in "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford." The pic was made silent eight years ago with Sam Hard as "Get-Rich-Quick."

Evelyn Brent's next is "A Lady in Love." Clive Brook will emote opposit the svelte beauty.

You'll see Ricardo Cortez in "The Phantom in the House."

"Ropati" Offers Gay Book About South Sea Isle

Newspaperman Has Success In His Adventures

"ROPATI," an American newspaper man condemned to die from the tubercular dregs of the World War, has written the classic story of the South Sea atolls where he found health and a fortune and where he intends to spend the balance of his days.

A beautiful brown Polynesian girl—his "wife"—by his side, Ropati intends to enjoy the lotus-life of Puka-Puka until the day when the malicious shadow of the white man's civilization drives him on to other horizons.

Former Telegraph Editor

"Ropati"—Puka-Pukan for Robert—is Robert Dean Frisbie, former telegraph editor of the Fresno Morning Republican and later trader-extraordinary on the island of Puka-Puka in the South Seas. The story of his strange adventures on this farthest atoll of the sun, entitled "The Book of Puka-Puka," has just been published by The Century Co.

Nine years ago Frisbie lay in a bed slowly dying of active tuberculosis contracted in the World War. The doctors smiled benignantly when they named six months as the probable duration of life left to him. He had been reading Stevenson's travel sketches of the South Seas one night when the thought came to him: "Why not go to the South Sea Islands? They may agree with you as well as they did with Stevenson." He was suddenly overwhelmed with visions of the care-free life. By daylight his clothes and books were packed, and by dawn he was on his way to San Francisco. A few weeks later he saw Tahiti rise out of the sea.

Even in those first days he knew that Tahiti was not the land he had dreamed of. It was beautiful, but it was fouled by the white man's civilization. He would listen, wrapt in romance, to the trade wind singing its immemorial song in the palm fronds—until the honk of an automobile or the latest jazz tune played on a phonograph in a nearby road house brought him back to the American reality he had left.

For two or three years Frisbie

Best Year Yet Is Seen Along River

SAN BENITO, Sept. 28. (AP)—The best produce year in the history of the Lower Rio Grande Valley, with an acreage 20 per cent larger than that of last year, and with at least 30,000 carlods of fruits and vegetables expected to move, is predicted by shippers at the outset of the planting season.

The Valley shipped approximately 25,000 carloads last season. Of the expected increase from 1,500 to 2,000 carloads probably be citrus fruit and the remainder vegetables. The weather, financial condition of the farmers, advance preparation and crop conditions in other sections are among the factors which have contributed to the predictions of a record year. The only serious drawback seems to be the possibility of a labor shortage. If that materializes more of he small tract farmers will do their own work, it was stated.

Indications now point to about the same acreage of potatoes, a large increase in tomatoes, about the same in cabbage, and an increase in carrots, beets and beans, with scatterin gincreases in the minor crops, it was said.

SET NEW RECORDS

Dodge Exports Show Heavy Increase This Year

Shattering an all-time record in the history of the company, Dodge Brothers export shipments of trucks and commercial cars from plants in the United States and Canada totaled 8,163 units for the first eight months of this year. This large volume represents an increase of more than 11 per cent over the corresponding period last year, and factory officials analyze the record as reflecting widespread approval of the new complete line of four and six-cylinder trucks now offered by Dodge Brothers.

Partial credit for the gain in the export market is attributed to the recently announced four-cylinder trucks now available in the half-ton 3-4 ton and one-ton capacities. In addition, five capacities of six-cylinder trucks ranging from the 3-4 ton to the heavy duty three-ton type are offered. Unfilled orders have required overtime production schedules at times to keep pace with the demand.

Railway Planned At Point Isabel

POINT ISABEL, Sept. 28. (AP) — Plans for construction of electrical tram railroads between here and San Benito and here and Brownsville will be rushed as a result of the recommendation by the board of army engineers at Washington that a $1,000,000 appropriation be made available for construction of a 16-foot harbor at Point Isabel.

This was the announcement of C. R. Tyrell, president of the Point Isabel company, who also said that arrangements would be complete for operation of a boat line from Point Isabel to New Orleans. A special boat will be so constructed so that trainloads of perishable vegetables can be run upon in and carried quickly from Point Isabel to truck line railroads at New Orleans.

The Point Isbel company has purchased the Rio Grande railroad from Brownsville to Point Isabel and will make an electric tram line of it and will construct another road to San Benito to handle valley products through that point.

A club composed of people past 40 years of age, and known as the Over Forties Club, has been started in Europe.

Ropati

wandered through the tiny islands of the Polynesian groups, searchihg for that glamorous island of which he had dreamt but could not find. Finally he found himself in Penrhyn Island, buying pearls for a Rarotongan firm. There he met Captain Viggo of the schooner "Tiare Taporo." It was Captain Viggo who took Frisbie to Puka-Puka, his last port of call, the remotest and most primitive of the South Sea atolls.

Three Others Failed

Three other white men had attempted to open trading stations on the island before Frisbie. The first two committed suicide within two months. The third was a half-caste from Tahiti who lasted about six months. Ure, the local witch-doctor, warned Frisbie that his time would not be long, as he had cast a spell over him. In the solitude of the first few months Ure's suggestion played on his nerves until he nearly became insane. Then he began reading books on modern psychology, and he saw the absurdity of the situation with sufficient force to throw Ura out the door the next time he came to fix his malevolent eyes on him.

Four years of lotus-eating followed. The Puka-Pukans, at first hostile, learned to like the white trader when they found that he did not bother them, laugh at their superstitions, try to foist new religions on them, steal their land, or care whether they traded in his store or not. They forgot his foreign blood, and he became one of them, taking Puka-Pukan mistresses and a wife, teaching the natives marble and crap-shooting, fishing with the men and sitting with the old people when they were dying. It was nine or ten months between schooners and he counted on 18 months for a reply to a letter.

A year ago Captain Viggo sold his business and Frisbie left Puka-Puka. His last trip to America, and the first in nine years, was made in the trading schooner "Tagus," with Captain Andy Thompson and a crew of six Kanakas. A month in this country was all that Trader Frisbie could stand; he is back now among his beloved South Sea Islanders, where he hopes, though not for some years, to die.

Local Radio Dealers Ready For Rush

New Models Are Being Shown Here By Seven Houses; Big Strides Are Being Made By Designing Experts

Starting In Small Way In 1921, Manufacturing And Sale Of Radios Becoming A Leading Industry

TODAY radio fans everywhere are discussing the new radio sensations along with other great achievements in radio industry, according to local radio dealers. Many years and many millions have been spent in the reproduction of music and now after manufacturers have profited by months of experimenting, a standard of radio excellence is realized that was not even dreamed of a few years ago. It is possible at present to enjoy clarity of reproduction and beauty of cabinet make at the same time.

Radios started on quite a small scale in 1921 and at that time most of the sets were built from accessories. Then radio fever began to sweep the world. Recognizing the opportunity offered hundreds of manufacturers placed on the markets parts and primitive sets that paved the way for the industry today. At the end of 1921 total investments in these instruments totalled less than $1,000,000. In 1922 there were 1,500,000 sets sold in America, while at the beginning of this year there were 9,000,000 radio sets sold in America and over three billion dollars invested in that industry. It has risen from zero place in 1921 to one of the major industrial divisions and is only exceeded in output by automobiles.

Seven Dealers Here

There are seven radio dealers in Lubbock and Atwater Kent, RCA Radiolas, Majestic, Philco, Sparton, Airline, Eveready and Victor and Brunswick RCA combinations are sold.

According to local dealers there is no longer a season for radios as was formerly the case but almost as many radios were sold through the summer months as at any time in the year.

The new Sparton Equasonne makes the claim of bringing one "face to face with realism." New features are offered in this instrument which enable it to offer richness of tone and static reduction.

It is offered in high-boy, low-boy table and cabinet sizes, and has risen from 67th place when it was first marketed to that of third place in sales.

New Battery Set

Atwater Kent offers this fall a completely new battery set with all of the very latest proved improvements chief of which is a screen-grid, electro-dynamic, illuminated dial.

Atwater Kent radios are made by the oldest cabinet and piano manufacturers in America and may be secured in a variety of styles and from popular prices on up to those which are more expensive.

One of the distinctive offerings is that of the model resembling a center table with the radio inside. This one received favorable comments at the radio show held in Chicago.

It is true, according to the local dealers, that there is an increase in the sale of radios with the beginning of winter because people spend more time at home, and one dealer has doubled his sales over those of last month.

Thirteen Tubes

The RCA super-heterodyne radio is also sold in Lubbock. Because of its sensitivity, selectivity, power, beauty of tone and ease of operation, this radio is acknowledged by many as being the last word in radio reception. It ranges from nine to a thirteen tube set.

The Majestic electric radio makes no hum at any wave length. It is a powerful and selective radio. Cabinet models are made of American walnut.

When radios were a new industry unsightly and troublesome aerials were a common thing but now one of science's latest contributions is the Bud antenna eliminator and selector and aerials are eliminated. Bud radios make this modern antenna.

Philco all-electric radios are also sold in Lubbock. This radio brings clearer tone, more stations and greater distances because of its balanced units.

Airline radios, whose motto is "quality first" are also sold in this city, as are Eveready sets.

Local dealers are pleased with the radio sales which are made here and predict a greater winter than ever before in radio popularity. Each declared that the radio industry is still in its infancy.

Radio's Prodigies

Just out of long dresses, two little girl radio entertainers are attracting a lot of attention on the Pacific coast. One is little Laura Daubman, 5-year-old Russian pianist, who has already memorized 20 Bach preludes and plays them with uncanny interpretation from KGO, San Francisco. She has studied the piano but a short time under Lev Shorr. The other is also a movie star. She is Joyce Coad, who leaves the studios of Paramount Pictures every Tuesday to recite, sing and tell stories from KNX Hollywood. Laura is shown here at the piano, with Lev. Shorr coaching her, and in the inset is Poyce.

Oakland Opens Up New Parts Depot

Another step in the constant extension of the service facilities offered by the Oakland Motor Car company has been completed in the establishment at Oakland, Calif., of a mammoth new parts depot in which will be kept a stock of Oakland-Pontiac parts valued at $1,250,600.

From this depot dealers of the entire Pacific coast region will receive their parts service, and in an emergency a telegram will bring delivery on the following day of any part needed in the servicing of an Oakland All-American Six or a Pontiac Big Six. The new depot which was placed in operation under the personal supervision of R. H. Armstrong, service manager for Oakland Motor company, is said to have no superior in the world in completeness of equipment.

Has Latest Methods

Mr. Armstrong has installed the latest methods of receiving, storing, and shipping automobile parts, many of which have been developed by the service department of the Oakland Motor Car company. Included in the arrangements for the saving of time and handling costs are new railway spurs which adjoin the loading platforms of the new structure.

Church Folks In Haslam Are Busy

HASLAM, Sept. 28. (AP) — Night services recently at the Haslam Union church were considerably beset with difficulties.

An automobile crash nearby was the first thing to disturb the worship. A young man ran his car into a post, wrecking it and hurting one of his hands badly.

Just as the congregation re-entered the house and began singing the first song, two automobiles met in a head-on collision. Both cars were wrecked but no one was hurt.

The opening song finally was sung and the minister began reading his text. About that time a black cat, which followed its owner to church, had a fit in the aisle. This feline was removed and order again restored.

From the president to the errand boy, duties in preparing for the exposition which opens tomorrow have been performed in an efficient manner.

The organization is headed by a "native son," Byron C. Dickinson. Under his management, the fair gates swing open tomorrow with the greatest array of exhibits, the greatest number of free attractions and amusement events and the greatest indications for an attendance.

Village blacksmiths in Europe are reviving their trade by turning from horseshoeing to making artistic wrought iron gates and screens for American tourists.

Farmers of Switzerland have organized co-operative societies for both buying and selling household and family needs, all profits to be divided among the members.

Philippine foreign trade for the first six months of this year was the greatest for a half-year on record.

BEFORE The MIKE

From the studios of WTAM, Cleveland, comes this one: Harold True, announcer, was covering Commander Eckener luncheon in a Cleveland hotel. In the crowd, an ambitious pickpocket got Harold's roll of $18. Legitimate expense, figured Harold, so he put the item down on his expense account.

Miss Morton

Combining customary southern beauty with a fine voice, Carol Morton, southern belle, is a valuable staff artist at WBRC, Birmingham. Carol is out of high school one year and is but two years past "sweet sixteen." Her voice, according to station officials, is a natural one and has required very little training. She is a native Alabaman, having been born in Mobile.

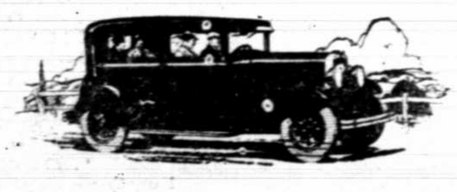
CONSIDER THE PRICE COMPARE THE VALUE



TODAY'S fine Oldsmobile can be purchased for as little as $875 for the two-door Sedan. Think what a comparatively small difference there is between the cost of this fine car and that of lower-priced automobiles.

Then consider what this small difference means in terms of appearance, comfort, performance, and all of the less outstanding but nevertheless important features that contribute to luxurious and carefree travel.

Compare Oldsmobile's appearance with that of other smart motor cars. You will find unusual beauty in the sweeping lines and graceful contours of its Fisher Body . . . excellent expression of taste in its luxurious upholstery and charming appointments.

Then compare Oldsmobile's riding comfort with that provided by other cars. You will thoroughly enjoy the riding ease assured by its deep-cushioned seats; flexible springs; and four Lovejoy hydraulic shock absorbers.

Compare, too, Oldsmobile's performance with that of other cars you have driven. You will find an abundance of power in Oldsmobile's big, high-compression engine . . . power to take you quickly and easily through crowded traffic or to convert long miles into minutes when you're out on the highway. This splendid full-range performance imparts a new exhilaration to driving, wherever you go.

Finally, when you have considered the results of these comparisons, check the many features that make up Oldsmobile's unusually complete equipment.

All these fine car qualities of appearance, performance, comfort, and durability represent exceptional value at Oldsmobile's price . . . value that you are not likely to find elsewhere in Oldsmobile's field. But make the comparisons yourself. Your own good sense of value will inevitably cause you to select Oldsmobile.

The VIKING

—the new 90-degree V-type Eight at medium price—is built in the Olds factories, by Oldsmobile craftsmen, and sold through Oldsmobile dealers. At $1595 for all models, f. o. b. factory, Lansing, Michigan, it is as outstanding in value in its field as the popular Oldsmobile Six, the fine car of low price.

TWO DOOR SEDAN $875 f. o. b. factory, Lansing, Mich. Spare Tire and Bumpers Extra

ON THE EVE of the opening day of the Panhandle-South Plains fair, many exhibitors have arrived in the city and a vast array of attractive exhibits of every description have been assembled at the fairgrounds.

At this time officials have been unable to estimate the exact number of exhibitors though it is understood that they will greatly outnumber those of last year. Exhibitors have made entries from every section of Texas, from New Mexico, Oklahoma, Colorado and other states ranging even so far away as Pennsylvania and California. This year's fair, from the standpoint of display interest, is expected to be the greatest in the history of the association.

Gates Open Tomorrow

The gates will swing wide open tomorrow morning and thousands of visitors to Lubbock will file thru the turnstile to view the wonders of the agricultural development, livestock industry and commercial progress of the South Plains.

All entries are to close today at 6 o'clock while agricultural exhibitors have until 9 o'clock Monday morning to get their booths in shape. Poultry exhibitors must be finished by 10 o'clock tomorrow.

In the woman's department all exhibits have been placed, the last date being Saturday at 4 o'clock. Out-of-the-city women exhibitors had completed their booths on Thursday at 6 o'clock.

Livestock Closed Out

Breads, cakes and cut flowers will be received for display up to 12 o'clock Monday. All livestock entries were closed on Friday.

Rules outlined for exhibitors by the fair association follow:

The display and decorations from each county shall be confined strictly to products grown in said county. Only agricultural products and farm equipment are to be used. (This is not to be construed to prevent the use of wallboard or bunting to cover the wall or floor of the booth.)

Products of state or government demonstration or experimental stations cannot be exhibited for these premiums.

Every exhibit should be carefully and tastefully arranged and installed, as this feature will be taken into consideration by judges.

Many Exhibits Slated

Each county must show 25 different kinds of agricultural products and not more than 50, which shall be selected from the general agricultural and horticultural classes in the fair catalog.

The exhibitor shall be required to major on three important crops of his county, and these exhibits will be scored on a basis of 100 points each, or a total of 300 points. Not fewer than five exhibits of each major crop shall be shown. The remaining 22 or more products shall be scored on a basis of 400 points.

An exhibit of cotton shall be 20 bolls, and exhibit of corn, 10 ears; an exhibit of grain sorghum, 10 heads. All other crops exhibited must be in quantities as indicated in catalog under classification in general exhibits.

Total Score 1,000

Neatness, attractiveness and general arrangement of the exhibit will be scored on a basis of 100 points. The total possible score will be 1,000 points.

No crop exhibited in any classification shall be exhibited in any other class. Example: Corn is one crop, as grain sorghums. You may exhibit white dent corn and yellow dent corn or any other dent corn and have three varieties, but you will have exhibited only one kind of crop; this applies also to grain sorghums, whereas you may exhibit kaffir corn, feterita and maize, different varieties, and at the same time will have exhibited only one crop.

Nat Ferber Has Book On New York As It Really Is; Names Are Used

Human Slant On Great City Is Portrayed

NAT J. FERBER, who was born in the shadow of Brooklyn Bridge, and who spent his boyhood in mean streets just back of the Manhattan newspaper of which he is today the book editor, has written a novel of Gotham in which the truth is far stranger than the fiction.

This work, entitled "New York" (Covici-Friede), is populated with real people. By which I mean that the real names are used. Through its pages pass something like 300 actual personalities who have played various parts in the growth and life of the Titan. For Ferber has written of a New York concerning which all too little has been said by novelists.

His is the physical New York—the giant of steel and stone that has come out of stubborn rock to amaze a modern world. I don't recall seeing Broadway mentioned, for instance. But I have come upon a vast parade of the East Side lads who came to build the city and its environs; to operate the banks and to occupy the seats of government, the court benches and spin the political wheel. Within the scheme of his story is the vitality of constant change and of the Aladdin-like speed with which these changes have come about.

Ferber used the true names of so many New York figures because he feared to make them fictitious.

"People would say that it was too far-fetched; that it couldn't be true," explained the author. "So I gave them their right names."

For instance—

Police Commissioner Whalen is shown as a boy taking a few cents from the Jewish families of the East Side for lighting bonfires on special Jewish holidays.

Or again, someone sniffs at the "herring eaters" of the push-cart belt, and an indignant character rises to give a reminder that some of the biggest and most prominent people were "herring eaters."

There was "that Itzkowitz fellow with the big eyes," who is now Eddie Cantor. There were "the Bruskins," who are now George and Ira Gershwin, the composers. There was Izzy Ballin, who became Irving Berlin, and Bennie Belnick who became Ben Bernie, the band leader. There was Max Rosen, one of the great violinists, "who ate herring in the back of a Rivington Street barber shop."

And when Ferber approaches the builders of New York, he recalls Alfred Chanin attending the old Cooper Union School and joining the world's greatest constructionists with a start of $200. He recalls Ben Winter, the immigrant who was a painter, and Lefcourt, who sold newspapers and palm leaf fans. And Julius Gold, who built a city of 15,000 homes.

He shows you William Fox, the film magnate, running a tiny jitney theater, with his father taking tickets, and Philip Wattenberg who took his tips as an East Side waiter and became one of the great philanthropists. Sam Rosoff is shown without a penny and in the next breath is building Manhattan's amazing subways. David Saranoff, chief of Radio Corporation, is another lad, "who used to come out to Edgemore to spend the week in tents with the other poor people."

There are Irish street gamins who became civic leaders, and Italians who act as guardian angels of their tenemented countryfolk.

There is James Butler, who grew from a $1.50 per day job in a hotel and became a chain store king. John J. Pullyns, president of the Emigrant Savings Bank—one of the largest in the world—was the son of an immigrant. Patrick Crowley, chief of the New York Central, was a messenger boy. Cardinal Hayes played marbles with the poor lads of the streets in the City Hall belt. John Delaney, Manhattan's transportation expert, was a poor printer.

And there are scores of others.

Of particular current interest, for instance is Paul Marks who came to New York from Germany with $20 in his pockets but was able to pay $3000 for a passenger's seat in the Zepp's Atlantic flight.

From all of which may be gathered that the melting pot all but bubbles over in this book. The story itself seems but incidental to the magic fairy-tale nature of the realities which penetrate it. A great deal of the dialect is of the Jewish variety highly good natured and not exaggerated in the Milt Gross manner.

Book News Notes For This Week

BORGIA COMPLEX

Death and disaster move through "Borgia," Zone Gale's latest of rural America.

Marfa Manchester becomes obsessed with the idea that within herself is a baleful influence. Paul Barker died of a malady contracted on a visit she suggested, a girl was blinded by a spark from the fire she asked to be stirred, a boy was drowned at a picnic spot she selected. For these and other misfortunes she holds herself responsible.

"It's a curse," she thought. "I'm a Borgia."

The trouble, it seems was in her emotional life, or lack of one.

"You are pretending reality and stealing the kick, to make up to yourself," she is told.

It is not until her sister persuades Marfa that she is too self-centered and a young man comes into her life, that the girl overcomes the obsession.

NOTES

The secret for attaining happiness is self-realization, says Walter B. Pitkin in "The Psychology of Happiness." It's a matter of adjusting one's personality for the fulfillment of one's wishes.

A middle-aged woman's love affair with her husband's worthless brother provides the story of H. E. Bates' "Catherine Foster."

The dynamic urge of nationalism in Ireland is reflected in "The Sword in the Soul," a novel translated by Ernest Boyd from the French of Roger Chauvire.

And Floyd Gibbons says his novel, "The Red Napoleon," is based on actual observations made in a year's investigation from Key West to Nova Scotia, which convinced him the latter point is the most vulnerable on the American coast. Hence he made it the landing place for the mythical red horde that he has sweeping along the St. Lawrence valley.

SELLS PLAY

Vera Caspary, whose novel of backstage life, "Ladies and Gents," is to be published by Century on August 16, has just sold her first play to Crosby Gaige, producer of many Broadway successes. It is called "One Beautiful Evening" and will be presented on Broadway next autumn.

SHOWING OFF

The story of Alexander Dumas' amazing career is told anew by Herbert S. Gorman in "The Incredible Marquis."

Gorman suspects that the last affair of the "mountain of French letters," with the actress, Ada Isaac Menken, was a concession to his vanity.

And in a letter to Fulton Oursler, who has written a fictionized biography of Menken, "The World's Delight," Thomas James Wise, London, authority on Swinburne, suggests that her brief acquaintance with the poet also "arose entirely from vanity on both sides."

IN MODERN DRESS

Morier Ravanel, the hero of Samuel Shellbarger's new novel, "The Black Gale," which has just been published, is designed as a study of Casanova in modern dress. An ex-flying ace and an officer of the Legion of Honor, Ravanel is an international gambler of world-wide repute, and his affairs with women are among the most celebrated and artistically carried on of the day. "The Black Gale" describes what happens to him when he really falls in love with an American woman.

Jonathan Cape will publish in London this fall Eugene O'Neill's Dynamo in the same volume with Lazarus Laughed, published here last year. Horace Liveright, O'Neil's American publisher, will issue Dynamo in October.

WHITEOAKS SAGA

Galsworthy buried the Forsyte saga in a genteel tomb, but the world of English letters is not to suffer for the lack of a family for Mazo de la Roche, the young Canadian, who follows her "Jalna" with "Whiteoaks of Jalna."

The Whiteoaks were a matriarchy and in this second book the family is sundered by the death of the incredibly vigorous old woman, the disposal of whose wealth has kept them together in spite of their quarrelings.

Pheasant and Piers have a baby; Maurice and Meg have a baby. Eden and his wife have separated and Rennie—sturdy, red headed Rennie—who shoulders the burden as master of the house, holds in check his love for Eden's wife and carries on.

Oldsmobile Shows Car Improvement

An impressive illustration of the marvelous improvement in automobiles in the last three decades—as well as in the appearance of women—was given recently by Virginia Sale, motion picture actress and sister of the famous musical comedy star, Chic Sale. She was aided by two Oldsmobiles, one dating back to the late nineties and the other resplendent in its 1929 grace and beauty.

The ancient Oldsmobile was a true representative of the first days of motoring. It was powered by a one cylindered engine, steering with a tiller arm, had two forward speeds and seated two in its buckboard body. And Miss Sale dressed the picture, wearing a pavement-length dress, a pompadour and a pained expression as she signalled help when the starter crank at the side of the car failed to get the engine in action.

In contrast Miss Sale, in chic garb of today, was pictured about to step into her 1929 Oldsmobile coupe. Her carefree expression graphically told the story that she had none of the fears of the early motorists that her engine would not start at a touch of the switch or that she might have to seek the services of a horse before she returned home.

Few present day motorists have any conception of the comforts and luxuries they obtained in automobiles as compared to the trials and travails of the pioneer motorists. The 1929 Oldsmobile coupe recently purchased by Miss Sale presents smooth, six cylinder engine performance, absolute dependability and a luxurious body comparable with the finest furniture. And sells for but little more than did its early predecessor whose greatest claim to fame was that "It runs."

Nation's Finest Livestock To Be Seen Here At Fair

Pedigreed Herds Of Many Owners Are On Schedule

Exhibitors Look To Lubbock Fair As Exposition Of The Greatest Interest In Livestock Of Southwest

Many of the numerous nationally known breeders of pedigreed livestock, who have been exhibiting their show herds at the Panhandle-South Plains fair, in Lubbock, during the past few years, have announced at past fairs here that more people see their stock and that a greater interest is manifest in them, than at any other regional fair in the southwest.

Since last year's fair there has been evident, throughout the South Plains, more of an interest in every phase of livestock than at any other period. The momentum already gained will undoubtedly again be climaxed in the showing of the nation's best in livestock. This will include beef cattle, dairy cattle, hogs, horses, mules, sheep.

Some of the famous herds to be on exhibition are the Texas Technological college dairy herd, its fine horses, sheep, mules and hogs.

There will be such firms represented as, McIlhaney's Dairy, Lubbock; E. W. Hester, O'Donnell; L. W. Squyres, Lubbock; Frank Scofield, Hillsboro; George P. Lilliard and Sons, Arlington; W. D. Corley Jr., Colorado Springs, Colo.; J. M. Peterson, Lamesa; Lynn Brown, Lubbock; G. W. Short, Tahoka; W. J. Soner, Lubbock; Campbell's Stock Farm, Temple, Okla.; Tom Cooper's Farm, Ardmore, Okla.; C. M. Largent and Sons, Merkel; Carl Williamson, Iowa Park.

Frank Scofield, of Hillsboro, although no premiums are offered on short horns, is bringing a carload of his well-known band of these, because of the great interest in them during past months throughout this area.

There will be many more and this division of the fair promises, as heretofore, to be of major appeal to the many thousands of visitors here this week.

CHAMP COWS BELIEVE IN MASS PRODUCTION

NEW YORK, Sept. 28. — Two cows stand out in the dairy world as the champion producers of their class. One in Queen Bessie Pieterje Ormsby, Holstein-Friesian, owned by R. V. Rasmussen of Deerfield, Ill., and the other is Sophie's Emily, a Jersey, owned by W. R. Kenan Jr., of Lockport, N. Y.

Queen Bessie began her first test at the age of two years, seven months and 15 days. At the end of her fourth lactation, taken at the age of seven years, five months and seven days, she had produced a total of 108,474 pounds of milk with butterfat equivalent to 5,366 pounds of 80 per cent butter. Her average for the four periods is 27,118 pounds of milk containing 1,073 pounds of fat.

Queen Bessie weighs 1,700 pounds and during her four lactations produced more than three times her weight in butter.

Sophie's Emily began her record nine years ago. This Jersey, on finishing her ninth test at 13 years of age, was proclaimed the living long-distance champion Jersey cow of the world by virtue of an average of 781 pounds of butterfat and 15,927 pounds of milk during the nine years.

Her total production during the nine-year test reached 7,030 pounds of butterfat and 143,348 pounds of milk.

Early Potato Crop Will Be Increased In Florida-Texas

Producers Are Planning To Add Thousand Of Acres; Storage Is Expected To Be Under Average

Florida and Texas growers of early potatoes have reported to the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, United States Department of Agriculture, that they intend to plant 37,800 acres for next spring's crop as compared with 31,080 acres planted for the 1929 crop. This increase is not excessive, says the bureau in its September 13 report on the outlook for early potatoes, in view of the relatively low supply of old potatoes that will be on hand next spring. The bureau estimates that stock of merchantable potatoes on hand Jan. 1, 1930, will be around 75,000,000 to 80,000,000 bushels as compared with 131,000,000 bushels on Jan. 1, 1929. With normal yields, the greater plantings in the two states would produce about 4,100,000 bushels as compared with 3,277,000 bushels in 1929, and even if production should reach 4,500,000 bushels, the price of the crop, in the bureau's opinion, should not fall far below the average secured in 1929.

tive movements. It also plans to create a loan division which will pass on the requests for financial assistance.

All grain dusts, says the U. S. department of of agriculture, when scattered in the air, are explosive and can be ignited by a spark or flame. For this reason it is urged that all machinery be grounded so that static electricity cannot cause sparks.

Demand for well bred horses and mules, together with good prices, will increase considerably with the next few years, according to J. O. Williams and S. R. Speelman, U. S. bureau of animal industry.

Present indications point to a slight increase in winter wheat acreage this year. If this is carried out, production will be well above domestic requirements and the 1930 winter crop will have to be marketed on an export basis, says the U. S. bureau of agricultural economics.

That there has been no outbreak of the Hessian fly, insect pest of wheat growers, is due to scientific research and the application of results of these researches by farmers, according to Dr. W. H. Larrimer, entomologist in the U. S. bureau of entomology. The last disastrous outbreak of the insect was in 1919.

A survey taken of more than 11,800 owner operated farms throughout the country by the U. S. bureau of agricultural economics, show an average net return of $1,334 for the year 1928, compared with an average of $1,290 for more than 13,800 farms in 1927. Returns in 1928 were the best for any year since the post-war agricultural depression.

Rock county, Wisconsin, is another of the countries in the United States which are classed as being free from bovine tuberculosis. It celebrated this distinction on its recent Dairy Achievement day.

AMARILLO TO AID

City Cooperates In Work For El Paso Convention

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

EL PASO, Sept. 28.—Indicating the real spirit of western co-operation, Amarillo is working with El Paso for the success of the eleventh annual convention of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce to be held here, October 24, 25 and 26. The metropolis of the Panhandle is urging that city as a centralization point for those who intend to visit the convention city and efforts will be made to centralize enough folk from the Panhandle area to bring two special trains to El Paso for the convention. Low rates have been offered by all railroads and many from the section north of Amarillo will take advantage of these rates. Then too, when they arrive they may occupy their pullmans and this will relieve to some extent the congestion expected in the hotels.

LIONS LAY PLANS

PERRYTON, Sept. 28. — W. B. LaMaster, president of the Perryton Lions' club, called the heads of all his standing committees into conference Wednesday evening, September 25, and a program of work for the year was discussed. Because of the interest that was manifested Lion Le Master plans to have these meetings regularly. The local Lions' club has been organized less than a year and now has more than 50 members and one of the most active clubs in this section.

Manless Machines Will Do Most Work Of Farm Field In Next Half Century

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 28.—The American farmer of 50 years from now will sit in an office before an electric switchboard and control auptomatic plows, cultivators and harvesters which will produce his crops for him without the aid of a single field laborer.

These are the interesting predictions made by C. R. F. Smith, widely known agricultural engineer of Iowa State college, in the September issue of The Farm Journal, national agricultural monthly.

Discussing the development of automatic farm machinery which already has reached the practicable stage, Mr. Smith declares:

"The great revolution in agricultural methods of the past 50 years will prove small in comparison with the revolution that will take place in the next 50 years.

Automatic Plow Already In Use.

"Automatic farm machinery which runs without constant human supervision will be widely used. Field markers will be located so that all machines necessary for field operations will be guided by long arms attached to these monuments."

Such machines will be able to work all night if necessary, thus doing the work of two or three man driven machines, The Farm Journal's writer point out. Their forerunner, which has already proved successful, is a manless plow in use at Iowa State college which, after being steered across the field to make the first furrow, guides itself automatically by a guide wheel which follows the last furrow plowed until the field is completed.

The greatest aid to super-farming in the future, and one whose realization is near at hand, will be a sool-tilling machine which will move over the field mixing and pulverizing soil, organic material and plane food in a single operation. Mr. Smith believes. "Under the present system of seed-bed preparation it is often two or three years before organic material has decomposed sufficiently to release all the plant food it contains," he shows.

"But such a machine would pulverize its material into particles so fine that all plant food will be made available the same year."

Such improvements in farming methods, together with an efficient mechanical means for eradicating weeds, will double the crop yields for the farmer of 1979, the expert predicts.

John Hill, who lost the use of both legs at the Somme, recently traveled 120 miles in his hand-propelled chair from Lower Edmonton to Clacton, England, and return, in 22 hours.

NATIONAL FARM OUTLOOK

BY ARTHUR H. JENKINS
Editor, The Farm Journal
Written for Central Press.

It seems difficult for many people to understand why farmers need be bothered by surpluses of crops.

We have been hearing of these surpluses for the last nine years, or ever since the war-time campaign for "more production" came to an end.

In these days, I receive many letters from puzzled citizens saying, in effect: "If the trouble with farmers is surpluses, why on earth do they continue to grow so much? Why not reduce their acreage, or why not produce something of which there is a shortage?"

The answer to that is simple, of course, but it seems not to occur to many people.

Farmers understand perfectly well that over-production hurts themselves and everybody else. But the difficulty comes when we ask: "Just who is going to do the reducing?"

If a grower of cotton, for example, knew for a certainty that every other grower of cotton would reduce his acreage by 25 per cent, he could, and undoubtedly would, go along and do the same. The resulting cotton crop would be short, and prices would go up.

But how could a cotton planter be sure that all other growers would cut down their acreage? Who would guarantee it? Who would inspect 1,900,000 cotton plantations and enforce the reduction? Who would say to a young farmer: "You did not grow any cotton last year, therefore you can't grow any this year, nor ever in the future?"

On the face of it, the thing is not possible. Neither voluntary organization nor laws nor public opinion could keep a large proportion of cotton growers, or farmers in any line, from going ahead and putting in a big acreage, aiming to profit by a huge crop at high prices at the expense of farmers who reduced.

Every farmer knows these facts. He is willing enough to do his part to hold down unmanageable surpluses, but before he does it, he must have the ironclad assurance that all the other farmers in his line will do their parts also.

No such guarantee can be given. And so the farmer, declining to be made the goat, goes ahead on his own individual operations, producing just as much as he possibly can on a given area of land, with what time, labor and money he has at his disposal.

If a surplus results—well, that is just too bad; but anway, he has his large production of cotton, or whatever it is, which he can sell, and no other farmer has the best of him.

That is the farmer's reasoning, and it would be your reasoning if you were in his place.

HINTS FOR THE FARMER

Supply of cattle available for slaughter during the next twelve months is expected to be equal to the supply during the past year, according to the U. S. bureau of agricultural economics.

A survey taken in Iowa indicates that 200 farm boys and girls per county are leaving farms annually to take up jobs in the city. If education of these boys and girls cost only $500 per capita, this is a contribution on the farmers' part of $100,000 toward adding to the sophistication of the city.

More than 17,300 livestock owners in the United States are now using pure bred sires, says the U. S. department of agriculture.

The federal farm board, further enlarging its activities, is attempting to organize a staff which will furnish facts concerning co-operative movements. It also plans to create a loan division which will pass on the requests for financial assistance.

WOULD HIKE PAY

SAN ANTONIO, Sept. 28 (AP).—An increase in pay for officers of the United States army is urged in a resolution adopted by the San Antonio chamber of commerce. The resolution set forth that many of the efficient officers of the army leave the service each year because of opportunities offered them in private life.

Counties And Communities Ready For Fair Opening

Pride Of Section To Be Exalted At Year's Exposition

Roosevelt County, In New Mexico, To Defend First Honors Won Last Season In County Contest

THE PRIDE of communities and counties in this section is to be displayed next week in booths at the Panhandle-South Plains fair in an exhibit designed to indicate the possibilities of the area, particularly in an agricultural way.

The ingenuity of people living in the various localities has been called upon to make each exhibit conform to the regulations of the fair association and, yet, to present the display in a fashion unique enough to attract the eyes of spectators and judges.

Roosevelt Wins In 1928

The booths compete for honors in the exhibits, as well as advertise the development of the country. First place among the exhibiting counties last year was won by Roosevelt, county, New Mexico, of which Portales is the county seat.

New Hope ranked first as a community.

A complete list of exhibitors in this section will not be available until the opening of the fair tomorrow morning, according to announcements made at the chamber of commerce yesterday. A number of communities and counties sign up each year, others do not notify the fair, and come in with their articles the day before the fair opens expecting to find exhibit space.

Nothing definite is known concerning the opportunities for winning that any county or any community has this fall, it was announced. Some of the last year's winners did not even indicate to the fair officials that they would have a display this year. Until the booths are ready for judging, very little can be done in the way of comparison and then expert judges render decisions.

Rank Is Given

County exhibits ranked last year as follows:

Roosevelt county, New Mexico, Potter coutny, Dawson county, Swisher county, Bailey county, Lynn county, Crosby county, Hale county, Lamb count, Gaines county, Hockley county, Lea county, N. M., Cochran county.

After New Hope, the communities ranked as follows last year: Acuff, Foster, Canyon, Groyesville, Hardy and Shallowater.

Communities that have indicated that they will have an exhibit ready in the morning for the fair are Acuff, Posey, McClung, Groveville, Shallowater, New Hope, and Foster.

Some Applications In

Hockley, C. H. Tubbs of Levelland; Cochran, George L. Lance, editor of the Cochran County News, Morton, exhibitor; Crosby, W. T. Dunn, secretary of the chamber of commerce, Crosbyton; Garza, George Samson, secretary of the chamber of commerce, Post; Lynn, C. C. Williams, chamber of commerce secretary, Tahoka; Dawson, W. W. Evans, county agent, Lamesa; Terry, J. E. Shelton, C. of C. secretary, Brownfield; Potter, P. C. Bennett, agricultural agent of Amarillo C. of C.; Dickens, W. S. Patrick, secretary Spur C. of C.; Roosevelt, N. M., S. M. Seay, secretary Portales chamber of commerce; Bailey, D. A. Adams, county agent, Amherst; Yoakum, P. G. Stanford, real estate agent, Plains; Martin, exhibitor from Stanton.

Specialists Will Judge Panhandle-Plains Contests

Twelve Authorities Are To Be On Hand Through '29 Exposition; Lists Fully Arranged

Twelve persons, specialists in various fields, will judge departments of the Panhandle-Sout Plains Fair to determine prize winners, officials of the fair association announced late yesterday.

Tuesday, Wednesday and Tursday will be judging days for livestock. Herefords will be judged Tuesday; sheep, horses and mules will be judged Wednesday morning; Jersey cattle, Wednesday afternoon, and hogs, Guernseys and Holsteins Thursday.

Judges Listed

Women's department: textiles, culinary, girls and women's clubs, Miss Myrtle Murray, College Station.

Tech's Youngest Will Study Hard

Roy Ruckman, 15 Year-Old Freshman, Is The Smallest Youth In College But He's Chuck Full Of Ambition

"I like Tech just fine and I suppose I'll like it better a little later," said Roy Ruckman, youngest and smallest freshman in Tech.

Roy is four feet tall and weighs 84 pounds. He will be 15 on his next birthday, December 31.

Roy's parents moved to Lubbock from Vernon last week and are living at 1917 Avenue R. Roy rides to school every day with his brother, who is also a freshman this year.

Likes Outside Work

"I'm taking five courses besides P. T. and Orientation. All of them are in business administration. But that doesn't mean that when I grow up I'll be an office man because I like to stay outside," he asserts.

Roy is very interested in sports. He says that he likes football when football is in season and baseball when baseball is in vogue. He picked the winners in the National and American leagues but his favorite didn't do so well in the Texas league. His choice was Wichita Falls.

Started Schooling Early

Roy started to school when he was five. He attended the public schools in Thalia, Texas, before he moved to Vernon, where he graduated. His average for high school was 86 which he says is "just fair."

"When I have nothing else to do I read. I like anything just so it is something to read, although I like fiction best. I don't like to ride horseback at all but if I were bigger I would like to play football.

"I think that it is all right to be tall. I'm going to grow pretty soon. When I weigh a 100 pounds I'm going to celebrate. I've weighed between 70 and 85 pounds for the last four years."

"I don't get whipped like the other freshmen do because I'm so little. I think that is nice."

Roy is a decided blonde. He was born in Clovis, New Mexico.

"Only Thing That Ever Helped Me"

Amarillo Man Had Suffered For Six Years And Spent Hundreds Of Dollars—Orgatone Brings Relief

"I found Orgatone after I had suffered for six years and it was the first thing that gave me relief from my trouble," said M. I. Huddleston, in telling of his restoration to health. Mr. Huddleston, who lives at 1309 E. Sixth St., is an employee of the Amarillo Gas Company and is well known in Amarillo.

"Yes", continued Mr. Huddleston, "I suffered for six years with a combination of stomach trouble, constipation and indigestion and general run down condition and you can just imagine how all those troubles simply made life miserable for me. I felt weak and worn out all the time and the bloating and gas spells bothered me so bad I could hardly ever get a good night's sleep. It just seemed as if I couldn't digest anything even the lightest kinds of food would sour on my stomach and form gas until I would bloat up and my heart would flutter and make me short of breath. I lost my appetite and hardly even felt like going to the table and, naturally going without food as much as I did, I failed to get enough nourishment to keep up my strength. I had constipation mighty bad, too, and it just simply worried me awfully all the time. I tried every kind of treatment and medicine that I had ever heard of and spent hundreds of dollars right here in Amarillo for same, and nothing seemed to do me any good.

"After reading a good deal about Orgatone in the papers and hearing what people were saying everywhere about the good it had done for them, I finally decided to give Orgatone a trial and that certainly was the luckiest thing I ever did for myself. I have never taken or even heard of any medicine that would give you results so quickly. I have used three bottles in all and I now feel better in every way. I rest well at night and I don't suffer at all from nervousness. I digest my food ever so much better, everything seems to agree with me and those spells of having gas on my stomach are a thing of the past. Constipation don't bother me any now and I feel so much stronger and better. Orgatone certainly is the best medicine that I know anything about and I am always glad to say anything I can in its favor and I take great pleasure in giving this statement so that others may learn of the benefits I have derived from it."

Genuine Orgatone may be bought in Lubbock at Bowens Drug Store. Adv.

Big Spring To Be Host To District Association

BIG SPRING, Sept. 28 (Special). The Mid-West Texas Medical association will hold its annual meeting in Big Spring October 15-16. Several medical men of state and national reputation are on the program. One of the chief features of the program will be a hair lip operation performed by Dr. A. C. Sloane of Dallas.

Such subjects of general interest as, "Origin of Cancer," "Headache and Its Significance," "Epilepsy," "Some Phases of Focal infection," and several others of unusual interest.

GINS ARE BUSY

SLATON, Sept. 28.—With excellent weather conditions for cotton picking during the past week, farmers of the Slaton territory have been exceedingly busy, and all gins here are running at practically full capacity. The supply of cotton pickers is some better but more pickers are yet needed, farmers reported Friday to the local chamber of commerce offices.

TUCKER ELECTED

PERRYTON, Sept. 28.—Marion Tucker, popular in student activities, and star athlete, has just been selected president of the Senior class. Other officers elected are Fay Hogland, vice president; Charles Bowen, secretary; Vivian Bruner, treasurer. Miss Eugenia Mitchell will be class sponsor. The social activities for the class will be in charge of a committee composed of Key Christopher, Lola Bell Barbour and Claudia Zirkle.

Fifty-five have already enrolled in the Senior class and enough new ones are expected to enter later to make it the largest in the history of the school, according to Supt W. B. Irvin.

PERRYTON, Sept. 28. — Sixty uniforms have been ordered for the "Pep Squad," of the Perryton high school, according to W. B. Irvin, superintendent. The youngsters will wear red jersey sweaters with the small letters "P. H. S." on the front, red caps and white trousers for the boys and white dresses for the girls.

Ione Packard and Frank Mitchell have been selected leaders for the organization, with W. F. Haggard as sponsor. A busy program is being mapped out by the youngsters.

Our Faith in the South Plains

When the gong sounds tomorrow at the opening of the 16th Annual Panhandle-South Plains Fair, its echos bring back thoughts of the days when our staunch belief in this great country was the sole reason for vast expenditures in plants and equipment.

When we view the enormous displays from all over this section it will gladden our hearts that we were pioneers and that we once dreamed of this day . . . a day when the vast agricultural potentials could be turned into actuality and prosperity.

We urge the populace from all over these great South Plains to come every day of this exposition and rejoice with us at the progress that we have made. Mingle with your neighbor and have the time of your life at this great exposition

Duncan Explains How Schools Will Close To Permit All Local Pupils To Closely View Exhibits At Fair

Schedule Arranged So That Every Youngster Will Be Given Opportunity; Day Set Aside For Kiddies

With a view to cooperating in the making of the Panhandle South Plains fair one of the most successful in its history and of stressing the educational value, the Lubbock public schools will next week dismiss part of their classes all during the week while the whole system will attend the exposition on Wednesday afternoon. Wednesday has been designated by fair officials as school day and all children in the school system of Lubbock is expected to attend when special attention will be given them.

During the entire week of the fair those schools of the city that have been having all day sessions will begin their work at 8 o'clock in the morning and close at 12:30.

System Explained

Classes that have been meeting in the morning from 8 to 12:30 o'clock will go on as usual as students have the afternoons off. Those classes which have been meeting in the afternoon will go on as usual, except that they will have no session on Wednesday.

"We feel that the Panhandle-South Plains fair offers to the children of our schools an unusual educational opportunity," said Superintendent M. H. Duncan. "We want to use this opportunity in the best way possible and are seeking to cooperate with fair officials in making of it the best fair ever in the history of the South Plains."

Teachers Urge Attendance

All teachers are urging their students to attend the fair and to inspect the exhibits in all of the various departments, with a view to reporting on them in their classes. Following the close of the exposition all students will be required to make reports of various natures on the fair in general and its different departments.

"I am sure that this work will be of a great value to the boys and girls and have no hesitancy in making such requirements. The Panhandle-South Plains fair has always been one of education to both old and young, and I feel that this year's affair will be of even greater value," said Mr. Duncan.

Fair officials have stated that every effort will be made for the entertainment of the students and that on the specially designated school day they will be accorded particular attention. The time has passed when adults are the only principals of fairs and now boys and girls of nearly all ages are taking a leading part with their exhibits and activities.

De Soto Overseas Sales Set Record

"With the production and sales of De Soto Six automobiles breaking all records for a first-year car, it is interesting to note that over 14 per cent of the entire production was sold overseas," according to H. P. Stewart, in charge of sales for the De Soto division of the Chrysler Export Corporation, division of Chrysler Motors.

"A year ago last month, the De Soto Six was little more than a name," he said. "Starting from scratch, with no dealers, a new name, and with an entirely new product, the end of the first year of manufacture found he De Soto Six firmly established among the leaders in the automobile industry. Latest national registration figures for the six months period ending June 30, 1929, definitely established De Soto well up in the first division in a list of forty-one leading companies.

Gasoline Mileage Chevrolet Factor

Millions Of Dollars Should Be Saved By Automobile Owners, According To Survey Made By Co.

DETROIT, Sept. 28.—Millions of dollars could be saved annually by the automobile owning public through a more strict observance of the factors that control the gasoline mileage offered by the average automobile, it was revealed in a survey on fuel economy completed today by the Chevrolet Motor company.

A gain of from two to five miles on the gallon of gas could be affected on the average, it was shown, if the motorist paid strict attention to the elements that govern fuel consumption.

The matter of economy has always been a factor of the uppermost importance with Chevrolet in the designing of its cars. Having brought the mileage to the highest point ever offered in a six cylinder car, Chevrolet sought to corral in this survey, the many seemingly unimportant details, which through carelessness or indifference on the part of the driver, cut down the mileage that might be obtained through more intelligent handling of the car.

Manufacturers have been doing their utmost to make gains in the direction of greater mileage and now it is felt that with greater cooperation from the driver, motorists may ride millions of miles yearly at no extra fuel cost if the matter of watchfulness can make a sufficient strong appeal.

Plymouth Meets New Car Problem

"With the increased building of good roads in all portions of the country and with motorists more and more extending the range of their automobile riding, many new problems in design and construction are presented to automobile engineers," according to A. van Der-Zee, general sales manager of the Plymouth Motor Corporation.

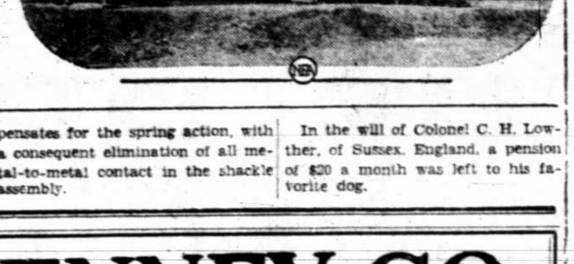
"In the early days of the automobile when it was still a novelty the question asked by the prospective purchaser was 'Will it run?' he says. 'The real problem that confronted the automobile engineers then, was to build the car so that it would run. Such features as comfort, economy of operation, dependability, stamina, speed and road ability were unthought of as qualities to be desired in an automobile. The public was skeptical and the engineers had to build their cars so that they would operate at least sufficiently to prove to the public that it could be done.

Improved Shackle Features Chrysler

Every experienced motorist knows that one of the hardest problems to "lick" on an automobile, is that of the noisy shackle. For years it was necessary to do a complete overhaul job on the shackles after every few thousand miles if silence was to be maintained. Regardless of advice from the dealers and factories, motorists neglected oiling the shackles with the result that they were nearly always noisy after the car was a few months old.

Of he various methods employed to overcome this trouble, one of the most interesting as well as successful is that used on the new Chrysler "66," in which the molecular displacement of rubber compensates for the spring action, with a consequent elimination of all metal-to-metal contact in the shackle assembly.

For Motorists With Memories Or Aspirations



The waning past and the promising future combine in this automotive age to give us motorists new thrills on the highway. Here they are both in effigy as it were, the upper view showing what can be done with the fast-passing street car, and the other photo showing how the coming airplane age is affecting the roadside customers today. Pertinent Facts About Automobiles By Israel Klein, Science Editor For NEA Service

BY ISRAEL KLEIN.
Science Editor, NEA Service

The power of your motor depends on four important considerations. These are:

1. Full compression.
2. Perfect valve action.
3. Proper ignition.
4. Proper carburetion mixture.

Any or all of these factors may cause an engine to lose power and therefore result in great loss of economy in motoring. Each requires constant care and attention in order to keep the engine in perfect operation.

To maintain full compression, complete lubrication must be maintained to prevent scoring of the cylinders. The valves must seat squarely into their positions and the valve springs must work efficiently to avoid letting some of the explosive charge in the cylinders escape before the valves shut tight.

Loss of compression results in a weak explosion in the cylinder and the suction of a smaller charge of fuel into the chamber. Besides, a part of even this reduced charge may escape before firing, and the part that does explode may not have its full effect on the piston if some o fthis force escapes through some crack or other opening.

A worn, scored or cracked cylinder is one means by which such explosive gases can escape before it can exert its force on the piston. The pistons may have cracked, or the rings may have become gummed, worn or broken. The valves might be pitted and warped and their stems bent so that the valves can't seat properly. Any or all of these faults may cause loss of compression and resultant power.

Loss of power may result also from leaks of the explosive gas through cracked or improperly seated spark plugs.

If the valve action isn't just right, power again will be sacrificed. Wear, without grinding of the valves can cause such faulty action. Sometimes the valve tappets may not have been given sufficient opening or may be set to give too much opening—which would result in under or over supply of fuel.

The valves may not be properly timed, and this may cause havoc with the entire engine—knocking, missing and lack of proper fuel mixture when needed.

In order that the engine work properly, that the pistons are forced down at the exact time each is designed to do so, the spark in each cylinder must be timed to the exact instant. Otherwise pre-ignition, or detonation, or missing of the engine might occur. The exact timing of the ignition is as important as the proper timing of the valves. All of these functions must work together, or the engine will merely sputter and lose power.

Any part of the entire ignition system, from battery to the distributor, may be the cause of this trouble. Only a competent electrical mechanic should meddle with this part o fthe system. It is too complicated for the average motorist.

The carburetor may be fixed so that the proper combustible mixture will be fed to the cylinders of the motor, yet proper compression will not result unless this fuel mixture is also used properly. The spark must be hot and properly timed.

The mixture consists usually of about 18 parts of air to one of gasoline by weight, but as winter approaches this proportion will have to be reduced. Whatever the ratio, it must be such as to give the greatest energy when it is ignited by the spark. The more combustible the mixture, and the hotter the spark, the greater is the resultant pressure on the pistons, provided of course there are no hidden leakages.

Studebakers Are Made Artisticly

Judgement Of Six Leading Artists Are Reflected In Dictator And Other New Studebaker Lines

Colors, finish, and appointments of current Studebaker cars, including the new Dictator eights and sixes recently announced, reflect the artistic judgment of six of the leading artists, designers and decorators in the United States, according to an announcement made by the Studebaker Corporation of America.

The style committee which has been acting in an advisory capacity to the Corporation include Helen Dryden, Mrs. Lee Simonson, Majorie Oelrichs, Neysa McMein, Rose O'Neill and Marion C. Taylor, women whose talents for true harmony in colors, in textures, in lines, curves and planes are world recognized.

Helen Dryden Best.

Helen Dryden is the highest paid women artist in the country. First to originate decorative magazine covers, she is considered a pioneer in modern art. She is also a successful interior decorator and designer of stage costumes. Mrs. Simonson, noted artist and decorator, enjoys an unique position as an arbiter of good taste, sharing the genius of her husband who is a director of New York's famous Guild. Marjorie Oelrichs was one of the first society women to enter business. She runs a fashionable interior decorating shop on Madison Avenue, New York, besides enjoying a national reputation for her paintings and sketches. Nevsa McMein is a sought-after magazine cover designer. She does covers for the Saturday Evening Post, McCalls and the Woman's Home Companion. Her work has been exhibited at the National Academy of Design, New York. Few American women have achieved more widespread artistic success than Rose O'Neill. The immortal "Kewpie" is but one of her creations. She is also an author. Marion Taylor, formerly merchandise editor for Vogue, Vanity Fair and House and Garden, is a style counselor for a number of large concerns. She is considered an outstanding authority on fashions at home and abroad.

Engineer Designs A New Type Of Motor

Each Cylinder To Be Equipped With Two Pistons, Plan

REDLANDS, Calif., Sept. 28—A double cylinder engine, with two pistons in each cylinder, is the invention of H. A. Johnston of Redlands.

The unique feature of this invention is its design so that two pistons oppose each other in the same cylinder, and the explosive gas operates on them in two directions. This is the product of about thirty years of thought in this direction.

Johnston is a pioneer engine builder. He made the first Peerless engine, he says, designed most of the motors used on Puget Sound, designed the carbonic refrigerating machines now used on many ocean liners, invented a garden tractor and has scores of other mechanical patents to his credit.

The double-piston engine that Johnston has built and is now operating in his little shop here is being run on gas, but can be operated on any motor fuel, he says.

Has Fewer Parts

Because of the opposing pistons, there is no cylinder head. All the explosive force of the fuel is spent on moving parts, and isn't absorbed in a heavy foundation or a stationary head. No high pressure gaskets are necessary.

First glance at the engine reveals that it has two flywheels, rotating in opposite direction. Each is mounted on the end of a crankshaft. These crankshafts are operated by the opposing pistons and, though separated from each other by the length of the engine, are mechanically connected so that the flywheels and pistons are always in perfect time.

From the side opposite the flywheels two power shafts protrude. These also rotate in opposite directions but are geared much lower than the crankshafts. Johnston points out that, for use as a power plant in a truck, there would be no need of a reverse transmission. Either of the shafts could be engaged or disengaged to produce opposite impulses.

Lists Seven Advantages

According to Johnston, the advantages to be derived from his double-piston engine are:

1.—No vibration.
2.—Utilization of all the explosive force.
3.—Engine balanced at all speeds.
4.—Double the power per unit of gas.
5.—No oil pump, oil holes, oil pipes or conveyors.
6.—No bronze or babbitt bearings.
7.—No high pressure gaskets.

Johnston is planning a three-cylinder engine with six pistons, embodying the two-piston idea in each cylinder, but without flywheels. Gyroscopic action is gained by the movement in opposite directions.

H. A. Johnston of Redlands, Calif., and (above) his double-piston engine says the inventor, so that flywheels will be necessary.

Brake tests of the two-cylinder model have shown that at 500 revolutions a minute, 35 actual horsepower was registered. This is considered quite good for a two-cylinder motor of this size.

Lubrication is automatic. The internal mechanical operation includes lifting the oil to all moving parts, keeping them flooded and so making oil pumping unnecessary. When oil gets to a certain low level the engine is stopped automatically, and it can not be started until the oil supply is replenished.

ON AUTO ROW

SALES LOOKING DOWN

The long looked for and sought after fall business which was scheduled to arrive in Lubbock with the advent of September days has failed thus far to make its appearance at the Plains' Hub, if the concensus of conditions along auto row during the past week can be taken as a barometer. With but one more business day to go, Lubbock automobile sales are certain to fall far below the record established during the month of August.

Several leading motor car dealers of the city are firm in their belief that business should break loose within the next two weeks. Unless this does happen within the near future, the majority of local distributors will find themselves overstocked with their new models.

SCOGGIN-DICKEY BUSY

A Lubbock automobile house that is fast coming to the front in retail sales is Scoggin-Dickey company, distributors for the Oakland and Pontiac motor cars. Three carloads of new machines were unloaded by this concern last week, the majority of which were Pontiacs.

FENDER MAN COMING

Sam McCleskey, an experienced body and fender expert from Floydada, is expected to arrive in Lubbock next week to take over the Fisher body department which is to be installed by Scoggin-Dickey company. The local Oakland-Pontiac dealers have been named Fisher body representatives for the entire district and will open up this branch of their business about October 1. The majority of the equipment for the new department has already arrived and will be installed at the earliest possible time. A factory representative will be on hand next week for the installation of fixtures.

FOUR CARS SOLD

Three used cars and one new Hupmobile were delivered last week by the West Texas Motor company, according to Lewis Hunter. This organization is likewise laying in a supply of new cars for the anticipated fall rush. S. D. Hunter, copartner in the concern, was in Fort Worth Thursday on business.

SYSTEM EXPLAINED

A system whereby the agency keeps in close touch with each Chevrolet owner was explained by G. P. Kuykendall, president of the Kuykendall Motor company. A strong believer in building a permanent business, Mr. Kuykendall, through his corps of salesmen, keeps an accurate check on the cars that go out from his place of business and from time to time gets reports on the service the machine is rendering and files complains on the sales records.

400 SIX OWNERS HERE

The index file kept by the local Chevrolet dealer chronicles reports from more than 400 owners of the new Chevrolet six that made its first appearance here in January. Indications are made on the cards whether or not the owner is satisfied and if not what the complaint happens to be. A hurried perusal of this list of owners indicates that the majority of Chevrolet drivers are well pleased with the new General Motors product.

GOUGH KEEPS BUSY

Sale of used cars continue to set the pace at Gough Motor company, local Studebaker-Erskine distributors. Up to date this month, the local concern has delivered 25 used machines as compared to 7 new cars. The latest new car sale recorded is an Erskine sedan, purchased by R. S. Kratzer of this city.

Buick Acceptance Shown By Orders

Greatest Activity In History Of Buick Company Is Brought About With 1930 Model Car

FLINT, Mich., Sept. 29.—Universal acceptance of the new 1930 Buick line of automobiles has brought about the greatest sales activity in the entire history of the Buick Motor company, according to C. W. Churchill, general sales manager. The volume of orders which are pouring into the factory offices here exceeds by far even the anticipations of Buick officials, Mr. Churchill states.

"The motoring public fully expected that during the last days of July the Buick Motor company would introduce a new, smart, and mechanical outstanding line of cars. Every facility at our command was made to function in order to answer this public demand and the result is extremely gratifying."

Orders Come In

Orders have come into the factory so fast during the first few weeks that it has been impossible for the production division to turn out enough cars to keep abreast of the demand. However, the Buick Motor company is now arranging its plant facilities to take care of greater production and they are rapidly getting in shape to handle any volume of business.

New Vikings Are Tested, Inspected

Tests and inspections which prove quality and performance ability are given every Viking engine before it is placed in a chassis and shipped from the Oldsmobile Viking factories. This method, insures that every engine leaving the plant meets the high requirements called for by the engineers and manufacturers.

As each Viking engine leaves the assembly line it is carried on overhead tracks to the test and dynamometer department where exper mechanics check its capabilities. First the engine is placed on a test stand and is driven slowly—at about 200 revolutions per minutes—by another engine. This is done to run in the new mechanism which is closely fitted to limits as fine as one ten-thousandths of an inch.

Engine Started

After being run in for an hour the engine is started under its own power and it, in turn, runs in another engine. As the two engines are connected through the reverse gear of the engine running under its own power, this latter engine runs at a speed ranging from 500 to 1,000 revolutions per minute.

During this period of its initial operation the engine is carefully inspected by experts. The valves are checked and set to a clearance of eight thousandths of an inch for the intake valves and twelve thousandths of an inch for the exhaust. Oil pressure is checked at various speeds and must show from 15 to 45 pounds depending on the speed of the engine. The carburetor is properly adjusted, the head bolts tightened while the engine is hot and othr details checked.

ECONOMY

is more than "miles per gallon"

Owners tell you the Dodge Six is unusually economical on gas and oil. They emphasize, too, that this constitutes only one item in its economy. Big, durable, oversize tires mean higher mileage. Body construction is such that utmost strength and rigidity are secured with a minimum of weight. The extra-large clutch—massive 7-bearing crankshaft—8-bearing rear axle—8-inch frame—permanently efficient internal-expanding 4-wheel hydraulic brakes—together with a score of unseen but all-important mechanical superiorities, insure that never-failing dependability which is the foundation of Dodge Six economy.

Proof of Oakland Value Superiority

The following facts were obtained from a comparison of the Oakland All-American Six with 20 other medium-priced automobiles. All told, 878 individual comparisons were made. Of these Oakland proved to be distinctly superior in 451 or 51.37 per cent. The 20 cars combined were at best equal to Oakland on 382 or 43.50 per cent. And 13 of the 20 were higher-priced than Oakland!

WHEELBASE Only one car as low-priced as Oakland has a wheelbase as long as Oakland's, which is 117 inches. That car requires a turning circle to the left of 42 feet as compared with Oakland's 36 feet. Six higher-priced cars have shorter wheelbases.

PISTON DISPLACEMENT Oakland's 228 cubic inch piston displacement is greater than 12 of the 20 cars in its price field. Of the 8 remaining cars, 7 are higher priced than Oakland.

FISHER BODY Only Oakland and two other cars in the field offer bodies by Fisher. And one of the two is nearly $100 higher in price than Oakland. Of the 18 cars which have less-known bodies, 11 are priced above the All-American Six.

HARMONIC BALANCER Only Oakland and one other car in the field have the Harmonic Balancer. Of 13 cars using some other device, 11 are higher-priced than Oakland. Oakland's crankshaft is fully counter-weighted. The crankshafts in nine higher-priced cars are not counter-weighted at all.

CRANKCASE VENTILATION While most cars in the field have crankcase ventilation, only Oakland and one other, according to available information, have any method for cleaning the air. Six have not, although three of the six are higher-priced than Oakland.

CROSS-FLOW RADIATOR Only Oakland in the entire field has the Cross-Flow Radiator or anything similar to it. All other cars use the down-flow radiator, this despite the fact that 13 of the 20 are higher-priced than Oakland.

BRAKES Only Oakland and one other car in its field use the fine type of brakes which Oakland employs. And no car in the field equals Oakland's 290 square inches of brake band area. Oakland's separate emergency brake operates on the transmission. Seven cars in the field have no separate emergency brakes.

Indians Are Not Greatly Pleased With Aid Of U. S.

Redmen Residing In Texas Fail To Respond Heartily To Government's Efforts To Benefit Them

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

AUSTIN, Sept. 28 (AP)—Texas' colony of Indians of the Alabama and Coushati tribes, who have been living on a reservation in Polk county since before the days of General Sam Houston, are entirely pleased with the campaign to modernize their surroundings.

They prefer having the 50 cottages which will be built by the state, with $30,000 appropriated by the legislature, scattered over the approximately 4,000 acres of their reservation instead of arranged along surveyed streets in the form of a village. They would like to live their lives in "the wilds" as near as possible.

The Federal government has spent about $40,000 on the colony, building the school house for their use.

Texas not only proposes to put adequate roofs over their heads, but it has made provision to see after their teeth, and general health, having allotted $1,500 annually for salary of a health nurse and $1,000 for dental work. Twelve hundred dollars a year have been set aside for medical purposes. Twenty-six miles of fencing at the cost of $7,500 will be built on the reservation. Texas is spending $47,900 for the colony during the current biennium. Half of the $3,000 annual salary of F. H. Fain, Indian agent, will be paid by the Federal government.

She Found Out

Snake Turns Out To Be Mean

HOUSTON, Sept. 28. (AP)—Mlle. Irene, circus snake charmer, probably will play only with her own pets in the future as a result of a recent experience while the troupe was in Houston. The mademoiselle was bitten several times on both hands by a country-bred Texas coral snake.

A Houston citizen had one more coral snake than he could use so he presented it to the charmer, Mlle. Irene, who delights in taming a 15 or 20-foot python, had never seen such a beautiful little reptile. The snake was in a glass bottle but mademoiselle wanted to see it more clearing so she fearlessly poured the few inches of brilliancy into her hand.

An educated snake would have realized it was being handled by a charmer and responded accordingly. But the lady's dainty hand looked just like that of any other person to the diminutive rural product of the Lone Star state. It quietly glided along her hand and embedded its tiny fangs in a forefinger. Unlike all other poisonous serpents, which strike and release their victims, the coral snake bites, hangs on and chews. This one was no exception. The mademoiselle tried to pull the serpent off with her other hand and the snake caught that.

She was rushed to a local hospital and treated with anti-venom serum. Two days later she was reported to be recovering.

Kelso Speaks To Slaton's Rotary

Utilities Chief Has Praise For This Section; Tells Of Progress He Has Seen In Fifteen Years

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

SLATON, Sept. 28.—In speaking before the Slaton Rotary club at its luncheon meeting here Friday, Judge I. R. Kelso, of St. Louis, president of the Texas Utilities company, "this section of Texas is making faster progress in developing great industries and in building fine homes, fine schools and fine churches than I have seen in any other part of the United States."

"Fifteen years ago when I first came to the Plains," the speaker continued, "there were slightly more than 10,000 people in an immense territory around Slaton. Now there are more than 100,000 people in that same section, and they are highly progressive citizens. There is more evidence here of advancement in the development of agriculture than I have found in any other part of the great Southwest," Judge Kelso declared.

The speaker was visiting here on official business, his company serving Slaton and forty other towns and cities in West Texas and Eastern New Mexico, furnishing them electric light and power service.
