Marines leave embassy but showdown possible

■ United States, several other nations keeps envoys in place despite Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's order to close all foreign embassies in Kuwait.

By Laura King
Associated Press Writer

The stage was set for a showdown in occupied Kuwait over Iraq's order that embassies close their doors Friday, and Saddam Hussein drove home his readiness to play the hostage card as the Persian Gulf crisis entered its fourth week.

The Bush administration on Thursday pulled Marine guards and most diplomats out of the U.S. Embassy in Kuwait, but left Ambassador Nathaniel Howell and a skeleton staff behind in defiance of Saddam's eviction order. Deadline time was 9 p.m. (1 p.m. EDT) Friday.

In scenes shown Thursday on Iraqi television, Saddam put foreign captives on display, ruffling the hair of one little boy and joking with the tense and uncomfortable-looking group.

The Iraqi president strongly suggested the foreigners' fate depends on the outcome of the standoff. The State Department called it "shameful theatrics" and British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd called the display "the most sickening thing I've seen for a long time."

About 21,000 Westerners, including 3,000 Americans, were trapped in Iraq and Kuwait by Iraq's Aug. 2 conquest of the New Jersey-sized emirate. Now Saddam seeks to cut their lifeline in Kuwait — foreign diplomatic missions.

The United States, Japan, Switzerland, Austria and the 12 European Community nations were among those keeping embassies open, with reduced staffs. The Philippines, India and Lebanon said they would close their embassies. Only about 60 countries have embassies in Kuwait.

Baghdad said keeping embassies open would be an "act of aggression."

The crisis was shaking world financial markets.

The Dow industrial average fell 76.73 points on Thursday to 2,483.42, its lowest in more than a year and 17 percent below the July 17 peak. The dollar kept on declining. The Tokyo stock market registered its fourth-biggest drop ever Thursday and was down in early trading Friday.

Oil prices shot to a seven-year high of more than $32 a barrel. Crude prices have surged nearly 50 percent since Aug. 2. The Thursday close on the New York Mercantile Exchange was $31.93 per 42-gallon barrel.

Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir warned that the gulf crisis was "mounting toward a peak."

The United States tried to add some teeth to U.N. sanctions imposed to punish Iraq for the invasion. U.S. Ambassador Thomas R. Pickering said Thursday the five permanent members of the Se-

Letters from home 'best medicine'

By Ed Todd

The best thing for American patriots to do while the U.S. armed forces are at battle-ready in the Middle East is "to show as much encouragement as possible," Army Sgt. 1st Class Doug Lukenbill said Thursday.

The sergeant recommended writing positive letters to the soldiers, sailors, airmen, and Marines in the Persian Gulf area.

"Don't be writing them that the dog died or the house flooded," Lukenbill told a support group of friends and family coordinated by the American Red Cross at the Golf Course Road Church of Christ. "Don't tell them bad news."

Instead, write about that recent "pay raise or that Midland's pumping more oil," Lukenbill exhorted, but please don't write that "You went to his girlfriend's wedding."

"The big thing is just to show them as much encouragement as possible," the Army recruiter said.

"They know about the '60s and the '70s," Lukenbill said of the Vietnam War era, when saddened and disenchanted American warriors returned home to a largely ungrateful nation.

Stock market again badly hurt as oil futures price nears $32

By Stefan Fatsis
AP Business Writer

U.S. stock prices fell to the lowest level in more than a year and the cost of oil approached record highs Thursday as mounting tensions in the 3-week-old Persian Gulf crisis shook world financial markets.

Trading activity in securities, oil and foreign currencies was nervous and heavy around the world, driven by fears of war between Iraq and an international force led by the United States.

"God only knows what could happen," said Robert Brusca, chief economist for Nikko Securities International Inc. in New York. "At this point nobody wants to take any risk."

The Tokyo stock market registered its fourth-biggest drop ever while a late-afternoon sell-off pushed the key Dow Jones industrial stock index to its lowest level since July 1989.

The Dow average of 30 big company stocks fell 76.73 points to 2,483.42. The index has dropped 17 percent since the market peaked at an all-time high a hair below 3,000 on July 17.

Hundreds of U.S. stocks hit 52-week lows and volume skyrocketed to 250.44 million shares in heavy selling that erased $95.1 billion in the value of corporate shares. Stocks have lost more since the July peak — about $550 billion worth — than during

Crash at Houston airport kills three men, injures 12

■ Three men — believed to be the flight crew — are killed when a Rowan Drilling Co. airplane crashes at Houston Intercontinental Airport, injuring 12 workers en route to their homes in Mississippi and Louisiana.

Associated Press

HOUSTON — A private airplane crashed on takeoff and burned at Houston Intercontinental Airport on Thursday, killing three men and injuring 12 others, officials said.

The twin-engine Grumman G-159 turboprop, carrying employees of Houston-based Rowan Drilling Co., crashed around 5:21 p.m. about a mile south of main terminal complex at the airport, said airport supervisor Frank Haley. The fuselage was torn nearly in half and a fire scorched sections of the aircraft.

Two bodies covered with blue blankets lay about 10 yards from the crumpled front section of the aircraft, while another body remained inside the cockpit about 90 minutes after the crash, according to officials at the scene. Workers were attempting to remove the third body from the cockpit in the early evening.

Two of the injured were airlifted to Hermann Hospital, while 10 others were transported by ambulance to Northwest Medical Center, Parkway Hospital and Northeast Medical Center, Haley said.

Robert Coryle, vice president of Rowan Drilling Co., said the employees had returned from a tour at the company's offshore oil rigs in the North Sea. He said they had flown a commercial airlines from the North Sea to Houston and

Sellecca to sue

Selleca

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Connie Sellecca claims she was fired from the starring role in ABC's upcoming comedy "Baby Talk" and is suing for more than $1.5 million.

The lawsuit, filed Tuesday, alleges that producer Ed Weinberger "beat up on Sellecca emotionally" and demanded that she submit unconditionally to his authority.

Sellecca, a former star of ABC's "Hotel," claimed she was paid only $25,000 for the pilot episode instead of a promised $45,000.

"Baby Talk," a spinoff of the hit film "Look Who's Talking," has been beset by problems. Before the spat with Sellecca, ABC had ordered the pilot redone.

OIL: Stock prices fall in response

(From 1A)

the Black Monday crash of October 1987.

The price of crude oil, which has surged nearly 50 percent since Iraq overran Kuwait on Aug. 2, gained another 71 cents to close at $31.93 per 42-gallon barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

The Merc is the leading market for futures contracts on petroleum, which determine the price of oil over the next several months.

Crude oil contracts reached $32.35 in intraday trading, equaling the highest level since futures contracts for oil were inaugurated in 1983. The record was set on Aug. 2, 1983.

After the 1979 Iranian revolution that ousted the Shah and curtailed world oil supplies, crude reached a peak of $39.80 per barrel in March 1980.

"This is by far the biggest thing that's ever happened to this market since crude sold off from $40 a barrel," said Brian Tagler, an oil futures broker for Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc.

Growing nervousness gripped world markets Thursday. The main fear is that war could disrupt oil supplies even further, worsening inflation, weakening an already wobbly U.S. economy and prompting an exodus from sensitive investments such as stocks.

Slow growth prior to the Middle East crisis led to hopes the government would lower interest to stimulate the economy, but oil-driven inflation fears have erased that chance.

"Everyone figured we're going to war, recession is imminent, interest rates aren't coming down — and they don't want to own stocks," said Dudley Eppel, a senior vice president at Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette Securities Corp. "Whenever there's uncertainty, people sell stocks."

A showdown loomed Friday over an Iraqi order to empty all Western embassies in occupied Kuwait, which Iraq seized after accusing its neighbor of cheating on OPEC production levels and depressing world oil prices. Iraqi President Saddam Hussein was shown on television with foreign captives.

Also, reports of a bolstered foreign military presence in Saudi Arabia, where the United States has massed its largest military buildup since the Vietnam War, and war preparedness in Israel added to market tensions.

"There's a significant risk that a significant amount of oil may not be available if there is warfare," said Warren Shimmerlik, an oil analyst with County NatWest USA in New York.

On the bond market, a sensitive barometer of the economy's direction, prices tumbled, with the yield on the 30-year U.S. government bond reaching 9.13 percent in late afternoon trading, its highest since April 13, 1989. The price of the bond fell nearly $8 per $1,000 face amount.

In Tokyo, the key Nikkei stock index closed at 23,737.63, losing 1,473.28 points, or 5.84 percent, the fourth largest single-day drop. The index shed 1,086.93 points Wednesday.

SUPPORT: Red Cross meets with families

(From 1A)

Lukenbill noted that American military personnel are in Saudia Arabia as "guests" of that country.

"Yes, we were asked to come over" after Iraq's military invasion of oil-rich Kuwait heightened unrest in the Mideast. "We have to obey their laws. We have to obey our own laws as well as military regulations."

Lukenbill was among military recruiters, Red Cross staffers and volunteers, and U.S. Postal Service spokesmen who talked to the support group.

Among parents of military service people now in the Persian Gulf area are Larry and Mary Myrick of Stanton. Their 22-year-old son, John Myrick, who is a U.S. Army 82nd Airborne Division paratrooper-medic, shipped out overseas in early August.

"It's a very scary situation," said Mrs. Myrick, "but we are proud of him for what he is doing.

"I write him every day," she said. "I just hope he is getting the letters."

"I write every other day," said the father, who farms near Stanton.

U.S. Navy recruiter Bob McAdams said, "the No. 1 part of the day was mail call.

"It was almost like Christmas Day. Keep the cards and letters coming."

Marine Corps recruiter Miguel Figueroa said that "as along as you write them, they are going to write you back." And stacks of letters for the military men and women to read "keeps them busy — gives them something to do."

Virginia Martin, who is the mother of two seamen, Ray Duke, 22, and Jeff Duke, 20, encouraged the people at home to send letters, prayers and CARE packages to the troops.

And the people back home need to support each other while their sons and daughters, brothers and sisters, spouses and friends are only moments from the front lines of a major conflict.

"We need friends that we can call on — friends who understand," said Mrs. Martin, who lives in Stanton. "We need a support group for ourselves, so that we can support others — support our kids."

GULF: Saddam seen on TV with foreigners

curity Council tentatively agreed on wording of a measure allowing use of military force to enforce the sanctions.

More U.S. troops and equipment poured into the region, bolstering the biggest American military effort since Vietnam. The newspaper of Iraq's ruling party spoke ominously Thursday of "flooding the Arabian desert with the blood of American soldiers."

But NBC News on Thursday night quoted unidentified U.S. intelligence sources as saying "perhaps more than 50,000" of Iraq's elite Republican Guards have been pulled off the front line with Saudi Arabia, to be replaced by "second- and third-string units ... dug in in deep defensive positions."

U.S. forces make up the bulk of a multinational army protecting oil-rich Saudi Arabia since Kuwait was invaded. Iraq had accused Kuwait of cheating on its OPEC production levels, thus driving down world oil prices and depriving Iraq of vital oil revenue. It also claimed Kuwait stole oil from a field that includes land both sides claim.

The Pentagon said Thursday that Defense Secretary Dick Cheney had approved plans to call up to 49,700 military reservists to active duty. Some members of the Army, Navy, Air Force and Coast Guard reserve forces could get the call as early as Friday, it said.

A series of Iraqi moves graphically demonstrated Saddam's willingness to use the trapped foreigners to try to pressure their governments to halt sanctions.

The most dramatic was a broadcast showing English-speaking adults and children gathered in an office, where Saddam told them: "Your presence here and other other places is meant to prevent the scourge of war."

That was an apparent reference to Iraq's stated intention to use trapped foreigners as human shields for key Iraqi installations.

The nationalities of those shown on TV were not immediately known, except a 11-year-old boy from Britain, but others spoke with British accents.

Military equipment, planes headed to Mideast

Associated Press

Hundreds of tanks, trucks and bulldozers began arriving at the Port of Beaumont Thursday on their way to the Middle East, but officials weren't saying much more about the equipment or where it was going.

In San Antonio, Kelly Air Force Base confirmed Thursday that soldiers and equipment have been or will be going to the Middle East. And military reservists from around the state waited for word on whether they would be called up to support the effort.

Flat-bed rail cars began arriving in Beaumont Thursday from Ft. Bliss near El Paso, 800 miles away. Other trains were en route.

"We're having a derailment of military support and combat supply vehicles," said Larry McCaskill, spokesman for the Military Traffic Management Command. "We're here in support of Operation Desert Shield."

Officials were tight-lipped about the operation. They refused to say whether the vehicles would be loaded aboard Ready Reserve Fleet vessels normally based in Beaumont.

"We're not talking about operations movements," McCaskill said.

At least five ships in the so-called mothball fleet were being prepared, according to officials at shipyards in the area.

No military transport ships had arrived at the port by afternoon and other ships at the docks were doing regular business, spokesmen said.

Nearly all the equipment aboard the flatcars was painted camouflage green. Only a few of the vehicles were sand-colored to disguise their presence in the desert.

They bore few, if any markings, but had only letters on the bumpers indicating they belonged to the 3rd Air Cavalry, based at Fort Bliss.

The first vehicle aboard one of the trains headed into Beaumont was a medical transport, emblazoned with a large red cross.

Other vehicles ranged from tow trucks to fuel tankers, plus jeeps, tanks and trucks carrying equipment hidden by large canvasses.

"I feel excitement and I feel fear," said Lucy Connor of Beaumont, who stood outside the port fence to watch the operation.

Mrs. Connor said her son was an Air Force sergeant based in North Carolina who two weeks ago was sent to Saudi Arabia.

"It's different to see all this machinery," she said. "I wanted to see everything going on. I wanted to know. You hear about it and you don't think it's real. But it's really happening. I feel so sad."

Few troops were in evidence, and those at the port Thursday were kept off-limits to reporters.

"You know more than we do," one soldier shouted.

McCaskill said some troops from Fort Polk, La., about 125 miles to the northeast, had been called to Beaumont to assist in the machinery transfer. In addition, he said armed forces reserves volunteers were assisting. He would provide no numbers.

"We have an increased military presence and increased longshoremen," he would only say.

The port has served as a military equipment staging area. Most recently it was used as the departure point for troops and equipment sent last year to Panama.

At Kelly Air Force Base in San Antonio, where an Air Force Logistics Center does maintenance on C-5 and B-52 aircraft, workers were hurrying Thursday to get planes ready for Operation Desert Shield.

Officials allowed reporters on the base for the first time since the military buildup began. Eight C-5 aircraft were being worked on and other Air Force planes were taking off.

Base officials refused to say how many planes or soldiers have gone or will be going, or why. They also have refused to say what kind of planes are going besides the C-5 cargo planes.

"We've tried to accelerate certain kinds of normal depot maintenance so that we can meet operational requirements," said Col. Dave Zorich.

Among the Air Force personnel who have left for the Persian Gulf from Kelly are members of the 2954th Combat Logistics Support Squadron, which repairs planes in combat.

CRASH: Workers returning from oil rigs in North Sea

(From 1A)

were taking the company's private aircraft, owned by a subsidiary, to their homes in Mississippi and Louisiana.

"We're trying to ascertain who was on the aircraft," Coryle said. "We believe they all were employees."

Harris County Assistant Medical Examiner Jay Evans said all three of the men killed in the crash were in the cockpit and are believed to be the three crewmen aboard. The names of the dead were not immediately available. The other 12 passengers also were men.

The airplane, carrying 12 passengers and a crew of three, was headed to New Orleans International Airport, Haley said.

"Everybody else is going to make it," Evans said of the injured.

It was unclear whether some of the injured escaped the wreckage on their own or whether all were rescued by firefighters.

Evans said the aircraft appeared to be taking off in a north-to-south direction, but it was unclear whether the aircraft had become airborne before it crashed.

J.H. Lynn, a Houston police accident investigator, said it appeared to him that the plane skidded from the runway, crossed a grassy median and then a taxi way before crashing and burning.

As night fell on the scene, workers moved in portable lights to flood the area while police and other emergency vehicles ringed the area.

Companies from about four other fire departments were dispatched to the airport, said airport firefighter M.G. McClelland.

Pieces of propeller littered the taxi way and there was a small area of blackened grass was near the aircraft. Remnants of fire fighting foam also were scattered about the scene.

The plane remained virtually broken in half. Just before the wing section, the cockpit was crumpled at a 90-degree angle from the rest of the fuselage. The fuselage also was buckled at the tail. The left wing was burned away and all that remained of the left engine was a skeletal shell.

Hoyt Brown, spokesman for the airport, said the runway was closed briefly, but airport operations were not otherwise hampered.

Marilyn Cordovi, spokeswoman at Northeast Medical Center, said all four crash victims there were listed in stable condition Thursday night. The most severely injured was Thomas Cornor, 28, of Quitman, Miss., who was listed in stable but guarded condition in the hospital's Intensive Care Unit with multiple traumas, she said.

Others at Northeast include Jimmy Smith, 32, of Meridan, Miss.; Pat Duran, 33, of Meridan, Miss.; and Edward Odom, 28, Stonewall, Miss. Ms. Cordovi said Duran and Odom were able to walk into the emergency room.

At Hermann, a spokeswoman said Allen Frost, 27, of Fairday, La., was listed in fair condition, and Walter Perry, 49, of Kosciusko, Miss., also was in fair condition with a neck injury.

A spokeswoman at Northwest Medical Center said two crash victims from Purvis, Miss., there were listed in good condition there Thursday night. She declined to release their names.

At Parkway Hospital, spokesman Daniel Baldwin said four crash victims there were listed in stable condition Thursday night. The men, two from Mississippi and two from Louisiana and all between 35 and 46 years old, declined requests to release their names.

Fire at Shell Oil refinery injures two employees

STATE

DEER PARK, Texas (AP) — Two workers were injured Thursday when a fire erupted in a crude-refining unit at the Shell Oil Co. petrochemical complex here, authorities said.

The fire apparently started when naptha, a hydrocarbon-based solvent, spilled in the unit and ignited, said Shell spokesman Mark Singer. It was brought under control shortly after it was reported at 9:15 a.m.

"It is still burning, it is a controlled burn and is expected to burn at least several more hours," Singer said Thursday afternoon. "But it's difficult to say how long it will continue. Basically, it will burn itself out."

One worker, Larry Keepers, was burned and another was sprayed with naptha, a light crude oil derivative used as a blending component in gasoline, as a chemical feedstock and as solvent like paint thinner, Singer said.

Keepers, 37, was taken by helicopter to Hermann Hospital, where he was in good condition Thursday afternoon with first- and second-degree burns over 23 percent of his body, Singer said.

Keepers has worked at the plant for 10 years and is a pipefitter in the maintenance division. Singer said Keepers was near the unit when the fire erupted, but he didn't know if he was doing any maintenance work.

The other worker, whose name was not released, was treated at the plant. A third employee was taken to the plant's medical unit as a precautionary measure but was not injured, Singer said.

The fire damaged one of two distillation units at the plant. The units have a combined capacity of refining 225,000 barrels of crude oil daily, Singer said.

Shell officials were not sure what impact the fire would have on the company's overall refining capacity, Singer said, adding that officials were not sure how long the unit would be shut down.

"It's premature to speculate on what the effects are going to be," he said. "Our main concern is the situation at hand and the safety of our workers."

The explosion comes one day after the Occupational Safety and Health Administration announced a vigorous inspection program for petrochemical plants in 10 states. The OSHA investigation was spurred by a Phillips Petroleum Co. plant explosion that killed 23 people last year.

Singer said the Shell plant refines crude for gasoline, aviation fuel, lubricants, ship and utility fuels and home-heating oils. The chemical section manufactures mostly base and raw-material chemicals for the manufacture of plastics, building materials and pharmaceuticals.

Dallas minister gunned down

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas police investigators said they would go all out to make an arrest in the shooting death of a Dallas minister during a robbery attempt at a gasoline station.

The Rev. Roosevelt Karl Kizzee, the 66-year-old pastor of the Greater Shiloh Baptist Church for the past eight years, was gunned down at a service station about four blocks from his church.

Police said nothing appeared to be missing from the man's car or pockets, but said they believed the shooting resulted from a botched robbery.

Witness says he was paid to bribe radio executives

NATION

LOS ANGELES (NYT) — A former employee of record promoter Joseph Isgro has testified that Isgro told him to bribe radio station executives with cash and cocaine to play certain records on the air.

Ralph Tashjian, 41, testified Thursday as a government witnesses in the payola trial of Isgro, 43, and two other defendants. Prosecutors have charged that Isgro supplied cash and cocaine to employees at at least four radio stations, enticing them to play songs promoted by his firm, Isgro Enterprises, Inc.

Tashjian, a consultant for Isgro's successful record promoting business during the mid-1980s, said that the issue of payola first came up when the program director of a radio station in Fresno, Calif. told Tashjian that he would play songs for money.

"I told (Isgro) this guy wants some money — I said $200 per record," said Tashjian, under questioning by Department of Justice attorney William Lynch.

"What was his response?" Lynch asked.

"If that's what it takes, do what you have to do," Tashjian said.

Tashjian said that after he gave cash to John Walker, a programming manager at Fresno station KYNO, Walker later demanded to be paid in small quantities of cocaine. Isgro also approved paying Walker with drugs, Tashjian testified.

"His response was 'Be careful, but do what you have to do,' " Tashjian said.

Tashjian pleaded guilty to payola charges last year and was sentenced to 60 days in a drug-rehabilitation program.

Isgro, of the Los Angeles suburb of Glendale, was once one of the most successful independent record promoters in the United States. His business was ruined in 1986 when news reports linked him to a federal investigation of widespread payola in the music industry.

Walker, who also testified Thursday, admitted that he had accepted up to $1,000 in cash a month from Tashjian in return for reporting to Tashjian which records had been placed on KYNO's weekly play list.

He also admitted receiving cocaine, but denied the cash or cocaine influenced him.

"I was making $45,000 to $50,000 a year," said Walker, who claimed he was fired by the station in 1987 because he cooperated with government investigators. "I never decided on one of his records for the money."

Under questioning by Isgro's lawyer, Donald Re, Walker also claimed that Tashjian had told him Isgro did not know about the cash payments.

Walker testified under an agreement that he would not be prosecuted for accepting the payola.

Isgro is charged with payola, tax fraud, conspiracy to distribute cocaine and obstruction of justice.

Raymond Anderson, 50, a former vice president of Columbia Records, is charged with accepting kickbacks to hire Isgro to promote the company's music.

The third defendant, 31-year-old Jeffrey Monka of suburban Agoura Hills is charged with supplying cash from drug sales to Isgro in a money-laundering scheme.

Judge upholds Roe v. Wade in Guam

WASHINGTON (NYT) — A federal district judge on the Pacific island of Guam has struck down the nation's most restrictive abortion law, one that directly challenged the constitutional right to abortion established in the landmark Roe v. Wade case.

The judge, Alex Munson, declared that the 1973 Supreme Court ruling "applied with equal force and effect to Guam."

Gov. Joseph F. Ada has not said whether the ruling would be appealed. He has 30 days to decide.

"We're nowhere near a decision," said Mark Forbes, the governor's deputy chief of staff. But he suggested that the territory might decline to take the case further because, he said, "we have never been inclined to affect national policy." He said the law had been enacted with the expectation that it would affect only Guam.

The law, signed by Ada on March 19, outlawed most abortions, including those in pregnancies resulting from rape or incest or involving fetal abnormality. An abortion would have been permitted only when a panel of two doctors determined that a pregnancy would "endanger the life of the mother" or "gravely impair" her health. The doctors' decision would be reviewed by a committee appointed by the Guam Medical Licensure Board.

The law carried a penalty of up to a year in jail and a $1,000 fine for obtaining an abortion or helping a woman obtain an abortion. Doctors performing an abortion faced as many as five years in jail. There was also supposed to have been a referendum on the law this November.

There was little doubt that the law went against the 1973 Supreme Court ruling. The 21-member unicameral Guam Legislature unanimously approved the bill on March 8 despite an opinion from the attorney general that the law would be ruled unconstitutional. Guam and other territories, like the Virgin Islands, are under the jurisdiction of the U.S. court system.

The principal issue has been whether the Guam law will serve as a vehicle to challenge Roe v. Wade. The Supreme Court could theoretically overturn the 1973 ruling in considering a case such as Guam's.

In ruling the law unconstitutional, Munson said: "After the emotionalism and stridency of the opposing views are stripped away, the strict legal issue before the court is not one difficult of resolution." He said the rulings of the Supreme Court explicitly applied to Guam under a 1968 law that redefined the Pacific Ocean territory's legal relationship to the United States.

The enactment of the law caught lobbying groups on both sides of the abortion issue by surprise and the small island territory, 9,000 miles from the Supreme Court, became enveloped in the debate.

Since the 1973 ruling establishing a constitutional right to abortion, the Supreme Court has shown a willingness to allow states to trim back the protections and increasingly regulate how and where abortions are performed.

Any appeal of Munson's decision would be heard first by the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco. The case could then go to the Supreme Court.

Mary Spaulding, an associate director of the National Right to Life Committee, based in Washington, said her organization strongly hoped that the ruling would be appealed. "It's another opportunity to get the issue before the Supreme Court," she said.

Lynn M. Paltrow of the Reproductive Freedom Project of the American Civil Liberties Union, which was involved in bringing the challenge to the law, said it was a decision that Ada would not make lightly.

"He has to be concerned that he would be seen as responsible for abrogating the right of reproductive freedom of all American women," she said.

Moderate Southern Baptists meet to ponder their future

ATLANTA (AP) — Moderates gathered Thursday to plot their revival after more than a decade of waning influence in the fundamentalist-dominated Southern Baptist Convention. They said they hoped to avoid a split in the denomination.

The opening session of the three-day meeting was marked by calls for cooperation and trust within the convention. But the fundamentalists were decried for having "maligned and libeled good and godly people."

An organizer of the meeting predicted it would take a miracle of biblical proportions to reconcile the political differences between the two Baptist factions.

"The only hope I can give you is that God parted the Red Sea," said the Rev. Daniel Vestal, pastor of Dunwoody Baptist Church in Atlanta and a defeated candidate for the Southern Baptist Convention presidency.

Vestal said the meeting of 2,5000 disaffected Southern Baptists had not been convened for the purpose of creating a new denomination.

Asked by a reporter if it would be wrong to interpret the meeting as the first step toward an eventual break, Vestal said:

"I wouldn't tell you not to interpret it that way. I'm just saying our intention is not to (split)."

Over the last 12 years conservatives have gained increasing control of the 14.9 million-member church, the largest Protestant denomination in the nation. They believe in the inerrancy of the Bible and contend that those who disagree are not true Christians. The moderates advocate local church autonomy and want the denomination to include those with diverse interpretations of the Bible.

Author files libel suit against N.Y. Times over book review

WASHINGTON (AP) — An investigative reporter angered by The New York Times' review of his book on the alleged links between organized crime and the National Football League filed a $10 million libel lawsuit against the paper Thursday.

Dan E. Moldea filed suit in U.S. District Court in Washington over the newspaper's Sept. 3, 1989 review of his book, "Interference: How Organized Crime Influences Professional Football."

The New York Times's top attorney expressed confidence that the suit would be thrown out of court and said the review was based "on accurate facts."

The review by Times sportswriter Gerald Eskenazi said, in part, that Moldea's book contains "sloppy journalism" as well as "errors and unfounded insinuations."

The lawsuit alleges that the review "was intended to protect the NFL by personally attacking Moldea, discrediting his reputation and smearing his good name as a careful investigative reporter."

"The review gave false impressions through use of false and misleading examples intended to injure Moldea's reputation, impeach Moldea's honesty and integrity and destroyed the likelihood that 'Interference' would become a widely read book by the public," the suit says.

Moldea said in an interview that his publisher, William Morrow and Co. Inc., had printed 33,000 copies of the book because initial sales had been strong. But after The New York Times review came out, sales dropped off precipitously, and only about 21,000 were sold.

"This thing could have been stopped so long ago had they just published a correction or my letter" that countered, point by point, statements in the review, Moldea said.

Other books by Moldea are "Dark Victory: Ronald Reagan, MCA and the Mob," which came out in 1986; "The Hunting of Cain: A True Story of Money, Greed and Fratricide," in 1983

Armenia declares independence; Estonia begins separation talks

MOSCOW (AP) — The republic of Armenia passed a declaration of independence on Thursday and Estonia began formal negotiations with the Kremlin on separation, bringing the Soviet Union closer to fragmentation.

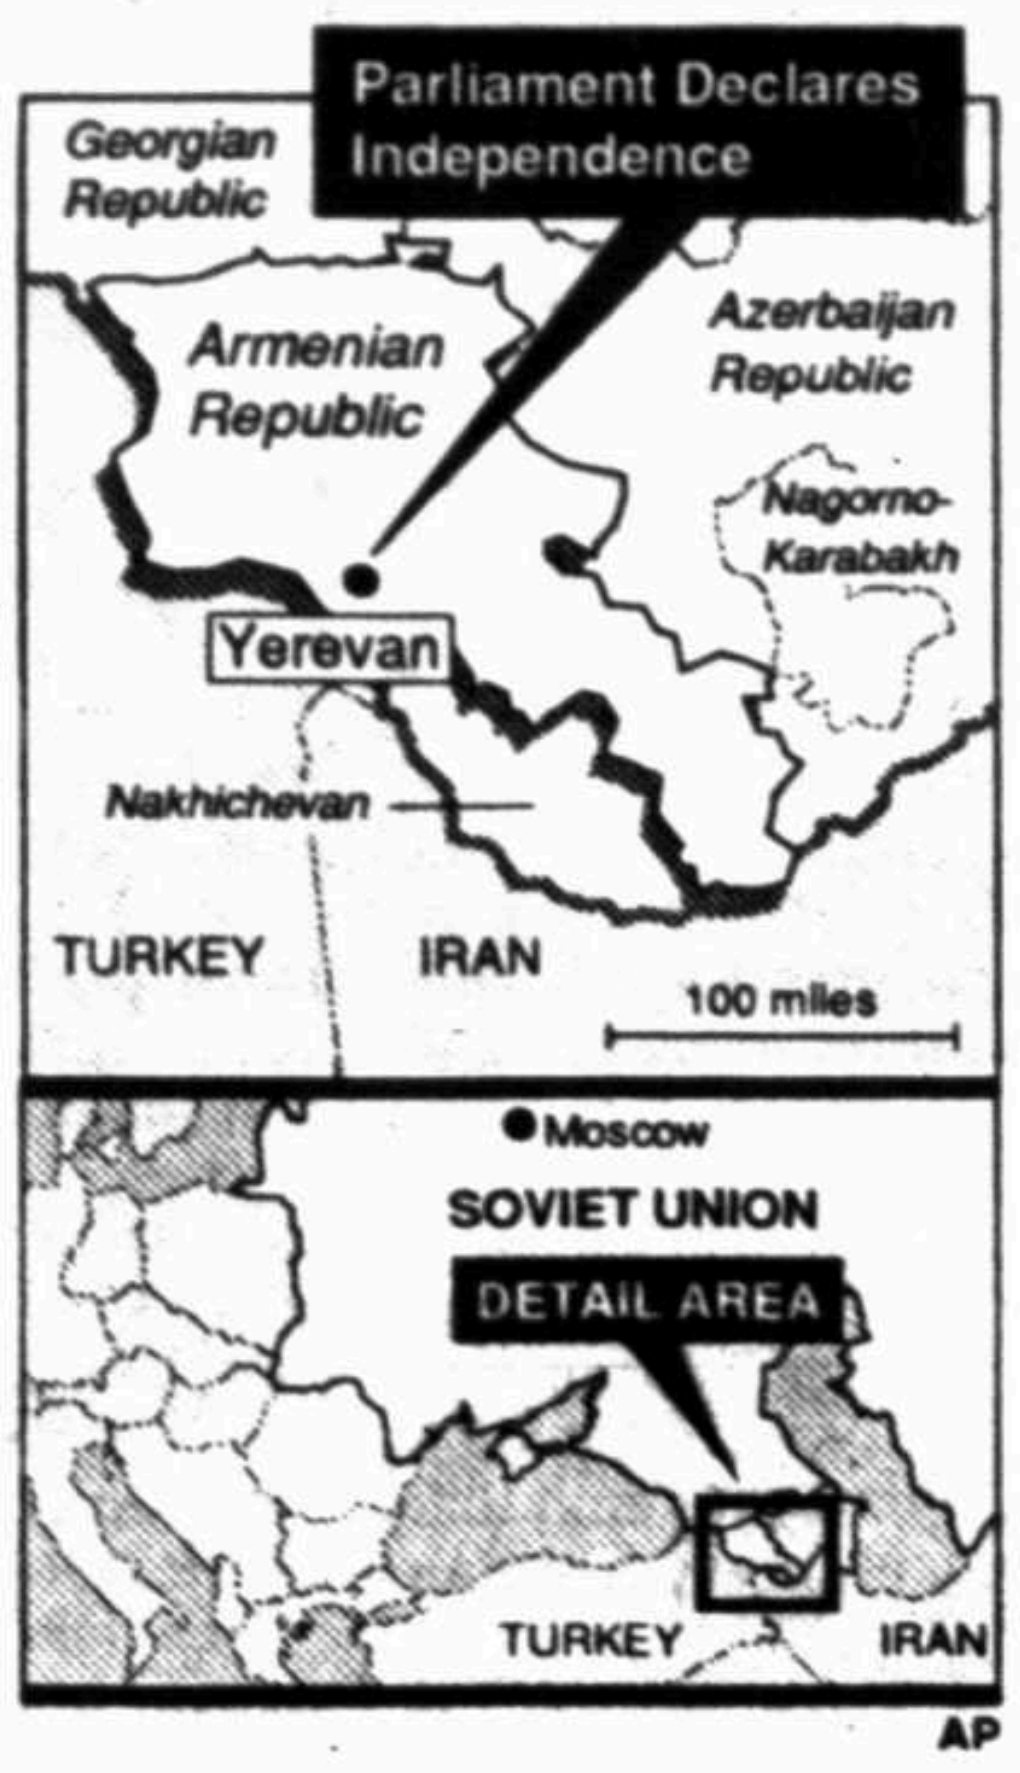
The central Asian republic of Turkmenia, meanwhile, declared itself sovereign with the right to overturn Soviet laws.

Armenia, a republic of 3.3 million people on the border with Turkey and Iran, is the fifth of the Soviet Union's 15 republics to move toward complete independence from the Soviet Union.

However, its path may be complicated by the bloody two-year conflict with neighboring Azerbaijan over the disputed territory of Nagorno-Karabakh.

The declaration calls for creation of Armenia's own armed forces to safeguard the border, which this week was again the scene of violent conflict with Azerbaijanis. The declaration also calls for Nagorno-Karabakh, a largely Armenian area of Azerbaijan, to become part of Armenia.

The Armenian resolution "declares the beginning of the process of establishing independent statehood," according to an English translation sent to The Associated Press.



AP

Armenian legislator Samvel Shakhmuradyan said he expects the republic to remain part of the Soviet Union only during an undefined transition period to complete separation.

Armenia's decision increases pressure on President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, who is struggling to develop a new union treaty attractive enough to keep his nation whole. However, Gorbachev seems to be bowing to Baltic demands for complete independence.

Kremlin officials began formal negotiations with the Baltic republic of Estonia on Thursday, the 51st anniversary of the Nazi-Soviet pact that led to Soviet annexation of the Baltic states. The two other Baltics, Latvia and Lithuania, are expected to begin independence negotiations with Soviet representatives soon.

The Estonian and Soviet delegations plan to meet weekly for two months and present a final document to Gorbachev's Presidential Council by the end of October, Tass said.

Seven republics have declared sovereignty, or the right to overturn Soviet laws on their territory. The republic of Turkmenia passed such a declaration Thursday, joining Russia — the largest Soviet republic — the Ukraine, Azerbaijan, Byelorussia, Moldavia and Uzbekistan.

Mandela says troops needed to curb violence in townships

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Nelson Mandela said Thursday the government should deploy troops in black townships, where Zulu and Xhosa war bands clashed for the 12th day with spears, axes and knives. Police said four people died.

President F.W. de Klerk said the government would announce new moves Friday to stop the tribal fighting, which has claimed more than 500 lives. He said the move would include additional restrictions on the ownership of weapons. He did not elaborate.

Mandela, the leader of the African National Congress, said the government should place soldiers and police around migrant workers hostels in the townships where much of the violence has occurred. Asked if he thought the violence was easing, Mandela said, "I don't think so. I think it's too early to say that."

Earlier, a spokesman for the ANC said the group could soon begin peace talks with the conservative Zulu-based Inkatha movement. Supporters of the two groups are the main combatants in the fighting.

In the Kagiso township west of Johannesburg, hundreds of heavily armed Xhosas said they wanted to destroy a migrant workers hostel occupied by Zulus.

"I don't care if I die! We just want to fight with the Zulus!" screamed an enraged Xhosa armed with a butcher knife.

The two sides fought with spears, axes and clubs, and police fired tear gas to drive them apart. Roaming gangs of Zulus with red headbands looted and burned several deserted homes, while Xhosas burned houses belonging to Zulu residents.

Police spokeswoman Lt. Henriette Bester said four people died, including a woman shot by police who were trying to stop a crowd from damaging and looting houses.

Jogger's rapists need true justice

The crime shocked the nation and caused even New Yorkers accustomed to violent crime to give up jogs around Central Park. A 30-year-old female jogger had been dragged 70 feet into the woods, gang-raped, beaten repeatedly with a brick and a pipe, and left to die in a pool of her own blood.

But she didn't die. She clung to a thread of life in a coma and began to respond to treatment. She regained consciousness after two weeks and soon even her doctors were amazed by her recovery. Her progress was phenomenal and eight months after the attack, which occurred on April 19, 1989, the woman returned to work as a vice president for Salomon Brothers, a Wall Street firm.

On Saturday, three teenagers — Antron McCray, 16, Yusef Salaam, 16, and Raymond Santana, 15 — were convicted of raping and assaulting the woman. The jury considered an attempted murder charge for three days, but eventually acquitted the youths on that charge because the jury did not believe they intended to kill the woman.

For their convictions, each of the three can receive a maximum of 10 years in prison. Sentencing is set for Sept. 11.

Even the maximum sentence for the crime on which they were convicted is insufficient. Is 10 years the just punishment for a gang-rape and brutal beating that left the spark of life so feeble in a brave young woman? The woman sustained brain damage in the attack and will never recover fully, doctors say.

As to whether or not the "boys" intended to kill the jogger, the jury's rejection of the attempted murder complaint seems particularly shaky since the gang that attacked her was part of a larger group of about 30 youths who attacked others in Central Park — including male joggers.

Salaam, McCray and Santana also were convicted of assault and robbery on charges stemming from other attacks in the park.

The attacks came when the youth gangs went on "wilding" prowls. Anyone unfortunate enough to be in their path at those times was either robbed, terrorized, assaulted or killed.

The woman jogger was lucky to have survived. She will never lead a normal life again. That was taken from her in a vicious "wilding" when she was in the wrong place at the wrong time.

What kind of violence does it take for the people of New York City to say "enough is enough" and begin to deal with ruthless criminals like the animals they are?

LETTERS

Teach children to avoid bites

This letter is in response to the one that appeared in the Aug. 2 edition titled, "Who Protects Children From Vicious Dogs?"

In the letter, Bobbie Badger says that dogs are returned to their owners if they bite another person, but destroyed if they bite another animal. The criteria for dogs returned to the owner is whether or not the owner wants the dog back. The dog referred to in the letter would only have been destroyed if that was what the owner desired. All the dogs and cats that are euthanized at Animal Control are euthanized because owners request it or leave us no choice.

In Midland's city limits, all dogs and other animals are required by law to be confined and licensed or must have permits (ferrets). Responsible owners already comply with these laws. Dog bites are frequently from free-roaming dogs. Most are not "vicious dogs." All dogs will bite under the right circumstances. Biting is a dog's defensive reaction if it feels threatened, startled, or injured. Even the dog's beloved owner can be the victim.

The letter asks, "What is a child entitled to?" Children and all other citizens are entitled to a risk-free environment from free-roaming dogs. Children are also entitled to be, and should be, taught how to avoid being bitten, such as never try to pet a dog unless it is with its owner and the owner gives permission. Children should stay clear of dogs that are loose, behind a fence, on a chain, eating, with puppies, etcetera.

In more than 1,500 bite cases in Midland we studied, more than 90 percent could have been prevented by responsible pet management and/or parental guidance.

There is much information to share with the public at Animal Control about animal bites. We have films for children and adults. We urge anyone who is interested to contact us at 685-7420.

Midlanders show care in time of sorrow

We have lived in Midland since '62. Our concept of this town has changed since July 21. It is not the cold, aloof town we thought, but really a town of warm, comforting people who care.

Our son, Len Furney, died July 24 as a result of an accident. Of course, we were proud of him as moms and dads are. During his stay at the hospital, doctors and nurses were compassionate to us as they cared for his needs and ours. As we would enter the corridors, there was always someone there to offer support — friends, acquaintances, and even strangers who had heard.

After his death, the kind, gentle support began immediately — phone calls, food being brought in, brief and lengthy visits, listening ears, and arms around shoulders, and comforting words. The business people were so patient, concerned and helpful as we went around town preparing for services and closing accounts.

People are still dropping by and calling. God bless you, Midlanders. You're really just like the people we were raised with in small East Texas towns. We love you and thank you for being there in our time of sorrow.

Is Saddam assassination possible?

WASHINGTON — U.S. officials and agents of the Central Intelligence Agency have put out the word to the enemies of Saddam Hussein that the United States would like to see him dead, or at least toppled from power.

The CIA agents and others involved in the secret campaign have made it clear that no one at the White House would shed a tear if someone took the initiative and assassinated Saddam.

The military and the CIA can't do it themselves without violating a long-standing presidential order against assassinations. But clandestine military and intelligence outfits across Europe and the Middle East now know, according to our intelligence sources, that the greatest favor they could do for the United States would be to take care of this little matter.

At the moment, the most likely assassins would come from within the Iraqi army, where some are already tired of Saddam. A number of those dissident officers are in touch with CIA agents through intermediaries.

There have been at least three army-instigated coup attempts against Saddam this year, CIA sources say. And at least a dozen top Iraqi army officers have been executed since January for suspected disloyalty.

The Israeli spy agency, Mossad, is known to be pulling out all the stops to get information on Saddam's movements, keeping in mind that the political payoff would be great from an appreciative President Bush.

White House and State Department sources told us that in private, heated discussions over this crisis, Bush and top advisers have mused aloud about how convenient it would be if Saddam were bumped off.

The best news for the White House has been Saddam's offer to give in to Iranian demands for a peace treaty in the eight-year war between Iran and Iraq. This has greatly angered some top Iraqi army officers who have told their confidantes, but not their leader, of their disenchantment with him.

Those Iraqi army officers saw too much bloodshed in that war with Iran and would not forgive Saddam for canceling it out. The war cost Iraq $150 billion and hundreds of thousands of lives, but Saddam has offered to vacate the 1,000 square miles he still occupies in southwestern Iran as the price for peace.

The bold move was an attempt to get Iran to break the worldwide economic embargo against Iraq, but it may also inspire a military revolt before the economic blockade would have a noticeable effect.

There are ways for Bush to skirt the presidential order against assassinations, but he would rather have someone else do it for him.

We reported during the Reagan years on how President Reagan defied the spirit of the anti-assassinations policy by having the CIA train a force that tried more than once to kill Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi. The 1986 U.S. bombing raid on Libya looked like military retaliation for Libyan acts of terrorism, but it was really an attempt to assassinate Gadhafi.

Bush hasn't played as fast and loose with the policy and has lived to regret it. He was unwilling to encourage surrogates to murder Panama's Manuel Noriega during a coup attempt last October.

The result was that when the coup failed and the plotters were caught, they ended up dead themselves. Bush had to use military force to invade Panama and capture Noriega alive.

The lesson for Bush from Panama was that he needed to take more decisive action to avoid the loss of American lives.

CHARLEY REESE

We're raising generation of psychopaths

Former federal judge Alcee Hastings of Florida, who ought to know something about the drug business, having been impeached and ousted from office by Congress for alleged hanky-panky with a drug dealer, made two interesting predictions recently.

Reese

He told a group of journalists that within five years people will need a bodyguard just to get to work and within 10 years, even with a bodyguard, the street gangs will be ramming cars and pulling people out of them.

That rather glum sociological forecast stems from his belief that the solutions to the growing permanent underclass and drug culture won't be found — not because there are not solutions, but because there is no political will to seek them.

I've known Mr. Hastings for some time and he has a gift for vivid speech, but all the same, I'm inclined to agree with him. I've been watching politicians talk about these problems for 30 years now, and both the politicians and the problems have gotten worse, not better.

It's always seemed clear to me that a mass of people could be governed by one of three ways. One way is with brute force and terror. Another way is to convince them that whatever situation they are in, that is their destiny. The third way is to provide them with hope and opportunity.

The destiny bit is obsolete. Too much communications in the world today to convince anyone that their present situation is the right situation ordained by God and they must do the best they can with it. Brute force and terror are still popular with some governments. The American way, however, was always hope and opportunity.

Our reigning majority, however, has chosen to restrict hope and opportunity to the few and has replaced them with dependence for the many. By world standards, we provide a fairly generous welfare system but it is riddled with disincentives for people to get out of it.

And since this is the age of mushy sentiment, the reigning majority has labored mightily to convince people there is no moral or social negative to being on welfare. Therefore, there's neither economic nor social incentive to get off the dole.

But just as nobody can do only one thing, so, too, no one thing is ever the cause of one effect. Added to this debilitating welfare system has been the de-industrialization of America with its replacement of good blue-collar jobs with high-tech jobs or low pay service jobs. Inflation and high interest rates make it impossible for low income people to save much or to find decent housing. Excessive regulations make it difficult to start small businesses with little or no capital as earlier generations did. Congress persists in keeping up a steady flow of foreign immigrants to compete for those fewer entry-level jobs. Next comes the drug flood. And, finally, the criminal justice system develops impotence. Lord knows the popular culture doesn't offer much in the way of role models.

This is a true witches' brew which will produce precisely the violent and dangerous society which Mr. Hastings forecasts. We are raising a generation of psychopaths, and a psychopath will kill you in a second because he has no regard for human life, his own or anyone else's.

It all rests on the family. If we do not begin to rebuild and renurture the family unit, we will never repair our society. If we do not open up economic opportunities for people on the bottom rungs, we will never restore hope and opportunity.

If we do not restore hope and opportunity to the many, then the few had better invest in guns and security systems. Perhaps we should require all politicians to take a vacation in Colombia or the South Bronx to get a glimpse of the kind of society we seem to be dead set on building here.

Charley Reese's column is distributed by King Features Syndicate.

WILLIAM MURCHISON

Decisions forced by Iraq won't go away

Well, of course, we can't dicker over the hostages — as President Bush now calls them — in Iraq and Kuwait. We can't dicker even when Saddam Hussein, alarmed at the trouble he has brought on himself, makes human shields of them.

Murchison

Saddam is like the movie murderer who, suddenly fingered by the detective, grabs the blonde next to him and holds a gun to her temple as he edges toward the French windows.

The police in such situations are unfailingly careful, and so must we be. We must be careful not to endanger the hostages' lives in a reckless manner, but in the end we are not talking about these discrete lives and only these. We are talking about thousands and thousands of lives all over the world, now and in the future.

What do we do about the hostages — who are the citizens of numerous nations besides our own — and whose exact number is hard even to calculate? Prayer never comes amiss. In a more secular vein, the Israelis suggest prompt air strikes before the hostages can be deployed around the targets we would be most interested in bombing — chemical weapons plants, power plants, and so on.

In a matter so delicate as this, one hesitates, with furrowed brow and arched fingertips, to offer the president of the United States potentially idiotic advice. It is better, and more modest, to paint in broad strokes.

The broadest thing to say is that the plight of the hostages — an all-too-familiar phrase 10 years ago! — can't deter us from doing what is needful. When, bitten by compassion and infected by fear, a peaceful government treats with terrorists, this merely inspires other terrorists, present and future.

Never mind the medals, the sashes, the whole apparatus of state power, Saddam Hussein is a terrorist. He is a terrorist no different in type and character than Abu Nidal, Carlos the Jackal, or the mad bombers of the Irish Republican Army.

Like the foregoing plug-uglies, Saddam is a murderer, except that his murders have been official in nature — e.g., the executions of dissenting military officers — and therefore he has generally escaped publicity and opprobrium. Rational nations that wouldn't give Abu Nidal the time of day should accord no more to Saddam.

This was Jimmy Carter's problem. Bless him, our president seemed to believe in his Georgia Baptist heart that if he found only the right words or the right contact within the Iranian government, prison doors would fly open, as with Paul and Silas at Philippi. Carter had miscalculated the nature of the captors. They were not normal folk, susceptible of persuasion. They were a thoroughly bad lot — like Saddam, come to think of it.

This hostage matter is bigger than the hostages involved. It is bigger than Iraq and the whole Middle East. The chief goal of American policy cannot be to get the hostages out. The chief goal of American policy must be to get Saddam out — out of Kuwait, out of power, out of this mortal life, if there is no alternative.

Years ago, in a history of "English Patriotism" published in 1913, I came across the bombastic assertion: "No Englishman is too poor, or too isolated, to walk a blameless path without the support of fleets and armies; and the sword that strikes him unjustly shall, if need be, set free the very demons of Armageddon, that the wrong may be made right."

The geographical proximity of Iraq and Kuwait to the biblical Armageddon makes assertions of this sort uncomfortable in the extreme. And then there's all that pre-1914 bombast and fustian. But there is something more here — a realistic appreciation of the world in all its imperfection; a dangerous world forever prey to brigands and bad guys.

The United States is No. 1, as was Britain in 1913. When you are No. 1, you try harder — and sometimes you sacrifice more, but you do what has to be done, as we are doing right now. That is why there are fleets and armies; it is why wrong, even at substantial cost, must be made right.

William Murchison's column is distributed by Heritage Features Syndicate.

EARNEST KIKER

Writer to offer glimpse of West Texas' future at Extension Field Day

The Texas Agriculture Research and Extension Center's Sheep and goat Field Day on September 6 is being dedicated to Elmer Kelton, noted West Texas author and journalist.

Kiker

The annual event begins with a 45-minute registration period beginning at 9:00 a.m. at the center, which is located eight miles north of San Angelo on U.S. Highway 87. Coffee and donuts will be served during the sign-up period.

The program — under the direction of Dr. George Ahlschwede — will consist of tours to various places, with informal question-and-answer sessions scheduled for each stop. Speakers and their areas of expertise include:

- "Potential contributions of the Australian Merino breed to sheep production in the U.S.," Dr. Maurice Shelton, Texas Agricultural Experiment Station Station (TAES), Animal Science professor, San Angelo;
- "Effects of supplemental feeds on weaned Angora kids on rangeland," Dr. Ed Huston, TAES Animal/Range Science;
- Dr. Ed Huston, TAES Animal/Range Science; Dr. Chris Lupton, Wood and Mohair Lab superintendent, San Angelo; and Dr. Charles "Butch" Taylor, Sonora Research Station superintendent.

Also,

- "Treatment of individual mesquite with herbicides," Dr. Jake Landers, Extension range specialist, San Angelo;
- "Reducing pearmouth and other health problems in sheep caused by prickly pear," Dr. Darrell Ueckert, professor of Range Science, TAES, San Angelo;
- "Safe use of cotton by-products as feed ingredients," Dr. Millard Calhoun, TAES professor of Animal Science, San Angelo.

A catered lunch will be served on the center's grounds following the morning tour. Ample time will be provided during the noon break for participants to view the many commercial exhibits on display.

The formal afternoon program will begin a 1:00 p.m. at the center auditorium, under the direction of Herman Moore, president of the Texas Sheep and Goat Raisers' Association.

Dr. Carl Menzies, TAES resident director of the center, will open the afternoon session with a special recognition honoring Elmer Kelton, who is retiring after 22 years with the Livestock Weekly here. Kelton is widely respected for his unique ability to plainly and accurately communicate issues affecting West Texas ranchers.

A noted author, Kelton has written 30 novels over the past 35 years. Some of his many accomplishments include: Being named a three-time winner of the Western Heritage Award from the National Cowboy Hall of Fame; and four-time winner of the Spur Award by Western Writers of America.

Kelton spent 15 years as a farm and ranch writer-editor for the San Angelo Standard Times and five years as editor of the Sheep and Goat Raiser magazine prior to joining the Livestock Weekly.

Following the recognition ceremony, Kelton will present "How will technology, environmental concerns and economics change our West Texas way of life?"

The afternoon's remaining speakers and their topics are: John Olson, executive director, American Sheep Industry Association, Denver, Colo. presenting "American Sheep Industry Association — New leadership"; Joe McFarland, Texas A&M University professor of Agricultural Engineering, on "What's affecting our weather?"; and Dr. Maurice Shelton with "Looking ahead in the sheep and goat industries."

The Field Day will conclude at 3:00 p.m. with optional tours for those interested in seeing the Wool and Mohair Research Laboratory in the Fourwing Saltbush Grazing Trail Research Area.

Everybody in Palestine knows 'Ted the Peddler'

By Glenn Evans

AP Laserphoto

Ted Spence, better known as "Ted the Peddler," shows off an onion set at his home in Palestine, Texas. Spence sold 16,000 yellow granex onions from his 100-by-100 feet lot this year.

PALESTINE, Texas (AP) — He might be Theodore Spence to his mother, but "everybody in Palestine knows ol' Ted the Peddler."

Father to 16,000 yellow granex onions, Ted the Peddler had his nickname cut out for him. No one sells 16,000 onions without a little salesmanship in the blood.

"I've been a-plowing and a-hoeing," he described his day on a recent Saturday.

Ted looked out over the 100-by-100 piece of sand that birthed this year's crop. The smell of raw vegetables, soil and of course, drying onions, hung in the air.

"There was people coming out here several different days when more onions was growing," he said. "They'd heard about so many onions in such a small spot."

Ted sold his goods this year at "the highway," the well-trod shoulder of Park Avenue just before it runs into Loop 256. Onions gone, he now spends most of his time in the front yard turing the soil and weeding the red peppers, black-eyed peas and other veggies still growing.

"This is his playground out here," said his wife, Annette. "He won't let me work out here."

Mrs. Spense described the tiny hoe her husband uses to reach between the crowded triple rows that he employs for his prize plants. His father once used that hoe, and when it wore down too small to be of use, Ted bought a new one and ground it to fit between his rows.

Ted the Peddler learned his craft on a farm outside Gatesville, but the skyline of Houston is where he once earned his living. He retired 11 years ago from Brown and Root Construction, where he worked as a carpenter.

"I got so old and ugly they threw me out," he said, laughing a bouncy, high-pitched laugh. He and Annette moved here shortly after retirement, and soon thereafter Ted the Peddler was born.

So how old is he?

"Guess," he answered. He later admitted to a spritely 77 years.

During the selling season, Ted's blue Toyota pickup will be backed into his spot along the highway. Folks stopping to ask him directions can expect a grinning peddler of oily onions ready to assist them.

"People stops here all the time," he said. "'Is this Palestine? How do you get to Palestine?' Of course, when the little train's running, they all want to know how to get out there. Yeah, when you're up there peddling, you have to know how to get from here over yonder and from there over here."

With little to sell now, though, he "might be out there for 30 or 40 minutes," but mostly he is at home, a-plowing and a-hoeing and watching his dog, Snooter, beat a circular path in the lawn.

"See that dog going around yonder?" he asked, pointing. "He's made a million miles going around down there."

Ted the Peddler hasn't made a million dollars at his hobby, but he's made some good company, sold more than a few pickup loads of onions, and lived where it "smells a whole lot better" than Houston.

"No," he said, "I don't make a whole lot of money at it. It just gives me something to do."

He laughed again, then returned to his patch of ground, hoe in hand, and began readying the ground for the next crop. The sprouts were ready to go in the ground and Ted the Peddler had to get busy.

"Where's my hoe at?" Ted called across the yard. He ambled over and found it leaning on the fence. "I'as raised on a farm," he said, and smiled.

Ranges suffer under high-pressure dome

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — For the second time this year, Texas is again caught under a high-pressure dome that is stressing ranges and pastures in some areas but pushing maturation and harvesting of such major cash crops as corn, cotton and sorghum.

The Texas Agricultural Extension Service reports that the driest regions are in South, South Central and East Texas, and the Upper Coast region.

Dr. Zerle L. Carpenter, Extension Service director, said East Texas pastures are suffering under hot, dry conditions but cattle remain in fair to good shape and markets are steady. The fair weather, however, is fine for hay production and some producers are getting second and even third cuttings.

He said soil moisture in south central counties is short and pecan nut shedding is reported. Pastures are holding up fairly well but stock tanks are low. Corn harvesting, nearing completion, is getting fair to poor yields. Cotton picking should start soon.

Soil moisture also is too short in South Texas, where ranges and pastures remain poor. Sugarcane conditions are less than normal. Cotton is excellent generally and is 85 percent harvested, but corn, 95 percent harvested, is only fair. Pruned citrus trees that survived the Christmas freeze are responding well.

Carpenter said another too-dry area is Southeast Texas, including the Upper Coast and the Houston area. Pastures are keeping cattle in good shape but rain would be welcome. Hot, arid weather is causing pecan nut shedding.

Areas receiving good rains in recent weeks are Southwest and Far West Texas.

Senator charges Canada with shipping tainted meat

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Agriculture Committee member Sen. Thomas Daschle, D-S.D., says Canadian companies are sending tainted meat to the United States and should not be allowed to avoid inspection as the administration proposed.

The Agriculture Department has proposed eliminating U.S. inspection of Canadian meat and poultry imports and wants to experiment with ending spot checks.

At the request of Daschle and Sen. Conrad Burns, R-Mont., USDA has said it will extend the comment period on the proposal until Sept. 5. The "open border" experiment could begin late this year or early next year.

Fire ant demonstration Monday

Staff Report

The Texas Department of Agriculture (TDA) and Ector County Extension Agent Jim Word will be conducting a demonstration on how to safely and successfully manage fire ants Monday at 10 a.m. It will take place at the Ector County Courthouse Annex Building, Room 330, 1010 E. 8th St.

After the demonstration, TDA fire ant specialists will be treating the Ector County Coliseum, located at 42nd and Andrews Highway, with the growth regulator fenoxycarb. The treatment is part of TDA's least-toxic approach to managing imported fire ants.

Although Ector County is not officially listed as a county with imported fire ants — solenopsis invicta — several isolated infestations have been discovered.

All interested individuals are invited to attend the demonstration and slide show and to observe the treatment.

WORLD in brief

Five killed in lab explosion

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — A clandestine cocaine-processing laboratory exploded in a coffee-growing region of southwestern Colombia, killing five people and injuring four, police said Thursday.

The blast was apparantly caused by misuse of flammable chemicals used to process cocaine, a police spokesman said in a telephone interview.

The explosion occurred last weekend, but police did not announce it until Thursday.

Meanwhile, security forces reinforced by three helicopters uncovered a drug cache in northeastern Colombia on Thursday, seizing 29 tons of marijuana, the police spokesman said.

The marijuana was found packaged, apparently ready to be smuggled abroad, he said. It was discovered in three underground passageways.

Plant fire injures 25

MOSCOW (AP) — A series of explosions and a fire at chemical plant in central Russia on Thursday injured 25 people and forced the evacuation of a nearby village, the Soviet news agency Tass reported.

The accident, in the Bashkir capital of Ufa, began when a new phenol-acetone factory blew up as it was being readied for production, Tass said.

The fire continued through the day, and may have spread to other facilities producing hydrocarbons, Tass said. Most of those injured suffered severe burns, and two were in serious condition.

Troops strike back

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — Government troops deployed on an island across from the chief stronghold of ethnic Tamil rebels and launched a broad offensive to lift the 10-week siege of a fort, the deputy defense minister said Thursday.

It appeared to be the largest military action since the Tamil Tiger rebels broke a 13-month cease-fire in June and resumed their war for independence against the Sinhalese-dominated government.

Deputy Defense Minister Ranjan Wijeratne said the troops landed Wednesday on Kayts Island across the lagoon from Jaffna Peninsula, the chief rebel stronghold.

Wijeratne gave no casualty figures and declined to say how many troops had been deployed.

Ships sail for Liberia

FREETOWN, Sierra Leone (AP) — Six ships carrying 3,000 West African soldiers sailed Thursday to enforce a cease-fire in Liberia, where a 10,000-strong rebel army threatens to fight them to the last man.

The West African Economic Community sent the soldiers and emphasized its task force was on a peaceful mission to halt the 8-month-old civil war in which 5,000 people have died, mostly civilians.

Rebel chief Charles Taylor says the peace plan is a maneuver to keep President Samuel Doe in power. Taylor's National Patriotic Front of Liberia has the largest of the three armies in the West African nation of 2.5 million residents.

Leaders blame Bhutto

KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — The military-backed caretaker government on Thursday blamed partisans of ousted Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto for a two-day ethnic rampage in which 30 people died.

Police arrested at least 32 suspects, officials said, and all but three are members of Ms. Bhutto's Pakistan People's Party. But the government admitted it had no proof of their guilt.

"Of course, we arrested them. If we didn't arrest them, how could we be sure? Once we have a lead, we'll have an open-and-shut case," Interior Minister Zahid Safraz told reporters in the capital, Islamabad.

Missionaries slain

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Gunmen shot to death two Mormon missionaries in Peru, the church announced Thursday.

The victims were identified by local church officials as Peruvian nationals — Manuel Antonio Hidalgo, 22, and Christian Andreani Ugarte, 21.

They were killed Wednesday on the outskirts of Huancayo, 120 miles east of Lima, as they were going to the home of church members for lunch, according to a statement from the church's world headquarters.

An unspecified number of gunmen got out of a car and shot the pair with pistols.

Kohl seeks healing for East German wounds

BONN, West Germany (AP) — West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl, on the threshhold of becoming the first leader of all Germany since 1945, appealed Thursday for an all-out effort to heal East Germany's wounds.

Just 12 hours earlier, the East German Parliament chose Oct. 3 as the day that nation will cease to exist and will merge with West Germany.

That means Kohl will become chancellor of all Germany on Oct. 3 until joint German elections are held on Dec. 2.

Kohl hopes to win those elections, but is facing a tough challenge from Oskar Lafontaine, candidate from the opposition Social Democrats.

There has been no single leader of all Germany since the World War II defeat of Adolf Hitler's Third Reich in 1945.

Parliament on Thursday ratified a treaty with East Germany that will make possible the first all-German elections since 1933. Government coalition partners and the opposition passed the measure easily, with a show of hands.

East German lawmakers approved the same treaty the previous day.

In a 40-minute speech to Parliament, Kohl praised his fellow Germans for persisting in their hopes of ending the division of their homeland.

"Today is a day of joy for all Germans," said Kohl.

Oct. 3, he said, "will be a great day in the history of our people. We are fulfilling a dream which many people among us had already abandoned."

But Kohl warned his countrymen that overcoming East Germany's considerable problems won't be easy. Unemployment is skyrocketing in East Germany, crime is rising, and many East Germans feel demoralized.

"We have a heavy responsibility," Kohl said.

"Even though we have every right to rejoice we know we are standing before an extraordinary challenge — overcoming the old economic and social order" in what is now East Germany, he said.

Kohl, clearly trying to bolster his standing among voters with elections 3½ months away, had high praise for East Germans.

"With their courage, their levelheadedness and above all their love for freedom, they have given an example of how dictators can be peacefully overcome," said Kohl, referring to last fall's peaceful revolution that toppled 40 years of Stalinist rule.

Kohl has made no secret of his desire to be considered the father of German unity.

In his parliamentary speech, he evoked the name of a beloved past leader, Konrad Adenauer, while reviewing his own contributions to the unity process.

Lafontaine had some rare praise for Kohl, pointing out an agreement by Kohl and Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev on German unity.

In that agreement, Gorbachev dropped his objections to NATO membership for a united Germany in exchange for promises Red Army troops can stay in East Germany for up to four years.

Man shot dead; Local woman free on bond

■ Officers said Celia Garcia Perez, 41, allegedly shot Jesus A. Perez, 46, four times with a .38-caliber revolver about 1:35 a.m. today.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

A Midland woman was free on a $10,000 personal recognizance bond Thursday following her arrest in connection with an early morning shooting.

Celia Garcia Perez, 41, 925 N. Weatherford St., allegedly shot Jesus A. Perez, 46, 405 N. Carrizo St. No. 59, four times with a .38-caliber revolver about 1:35 a.m. officials said

Midland police responded to a call in the 900 block of Weatherford and found Jesus Perez slumped half out of the driver's seat of a vehicle parked in front of Ms. Perez' residence. He had been shot twice in the right side of the neck, once in the upper left back, and once in the left middle of the back.

The victim was pronounced dead at 2:45 a.m. by Justice of the Peace Robert H. Pine, who also ordered an autopsy to determine which bullet or combination caused death.

The victim and the suspect had been involved in an argument in the front yard of the residence. Ms. Perez reportedly shot the victim through the passenger window while he sat in the driver's seat of a 1987 Buick Skyhawk, according to the police report.

Ms. Perez was arrested without incident. She was transported to Midland Memorial Hospital where she was treated and released for minor injuries to her knees police believe were caused by deflected lead shrapnel from the bullets striking the car window.

Bond for Ms. Perez was set Thursday by Justice of the Peace Pine.

Services for Perez are pending with Thomas Funeral Home.

Nighttime blaze

Testimony begins in Greenwood suit

By David Morris
Staff Writer

Did they quit or were they fired?

Former Greenwood school cafeteria workers who lost their jobs last year claim the latter, and they were in federal court Thursday to prove it.

The five women, citing retaliation and discrimination by the Greenwood Independent School District, in February filed a lawsuit against GISD seeking more than $1.5 million in damages.

The women claim they were fired in December by then-GISD Superintendent Hal Porter because they complained about having to "volunteer" their time to prepare special meals for the school board.

Defense attorneys, meanwhile, claimed that Porter never told the women they were fired and in fact invited most of them to return to

Involuntary manslaughter charged in Polson's death

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

A Midland man was charged Thursday with involuntary manslaughter in connection with the death of a man in a two-vehicle accident late Wednesday evening, law enforcement officials said.

Marshall Shan Wallace, 28, 6005 E. Highway 80, remained in jail Thursday under a $5,000 bond set by Justice of the Peace Robert H. Pine.

Wallace was driving a 1968 Chevrolet van east on Cityview Road about 10:35 p.m., when he allegedly ran a stop sign and crashed into a Midland County Sheriff's Office patrol car travelling south on Fairgrounds Road.

Killed in the accident was Wayne Marvin Polson, 63, of Midland, who was a passenger in Wallace's vehicle.

Upon impact with the patrol car, Polson was ejected through the windshield and subsequently run over by Wallace, the Department of Public Safety reported.

Polson was transported to Midland Memorial Hospital. He was officially pronounced dead at 11:41 p.m. by Justice of the Peace Pine.

Wallace sustained minor injuries as a result of the accident; the driver of the patrol car, sheriff deputy Gerald Lee Hall escaped injury.

Alcohol intoxication may have been a factor in the accident, officials said.

Graveside services for Polson are set for 10 a.m. Monday at Evergreen Cemetery in Stanton under the direction of Gilbreath Funeral Home.

Citizens fail to convince city council to force tax hike rollback election

By Erin Blair
Staff Writer

The dozen taxpayers who turned out for the city's tax hearing Thursday night failed to convince council members to increase the tax rate an extra hundreth of a percent to subject it to a rollback election.

The council has proposed a 7.99 percent tax hike, which would raise their rate from 58 cents to 64.82 cents per $100 valuation, a 6.8-cent increase.

The owner of an average $53,180 house will see city property taxes go from about $308 to $345, a $37 difference.

"We're within one-hundredth of a cent of the maximum rate before the rollback," said Scott Davis. "That's probably the most deceitful, cowardly way to raise taxes that this council has done."

Allen Harvey accused the city of "squeaking under" the rollback election amount.

"I really think you should take the voters into consideration and raise it to 8 percent just so the people of Midland can be heard," he said.

Davis urged cuts in all departments. "Let's do a Gramm-Rudman and cut every department's budget ten percent," he said.

At-large councilman John Castro explained that even if the council raised its tax rate and lost a rollback election, it would only have to reduce its increase to under 8 percent — in other words, to the 7.99 percent increase proposed currently.

"I don't see the real logic of a rollback," he said.

"To just politically make a point, I don't know that it's worth the effort."

At-large councilman J.D. Faircloth said any further decreases in the budget would require millions of dollars in cuts to generate tax savings.

"The only way to make cuts across the board is cuts in services," he said. "Half the budget is police and fire.

"People want streets paved, parks mowed, protection — we can't do those things and cut taxes at the same time."

Mayor Carroll Thomas said the city has eliminated 91 positions since 1986, paring its employee numbers down from 977 to 886, while increasing the police department by five officers.

He blamed a 32 percent decrease in property values, a reduction in sales tax revenues and an increase in anticipated operating costs, salaries and insurance premiums for necessitating the tax hike.

Beverly Shilling/Reporter-Telegram

Scott Davis listens to fellow taxpayers' complaints after speaking at the hearing.

"But the city council is freezing its salary at $25 a month and the mayor's salary will stay at $75 a month," Thomas said.

The total budget is $67.5 million, up two percent from 1989-90's $65.8 million budget. The tax rate will generate an additional $1.5 million in revenue.

"We all know we have to pay if we have services like protection and street paving, but there's no rhyme or reason for the perks in high places," said Edna Walger.

She criticized the policy of city-provided automobiles for officials including the city manager.

City manager Fred Poe said, "I don't deny it's a perk, or that I'm entitled to it."

Statewide GOP candidates campaign in Odessa

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

Railroad commission candiate Beau Bolter, center, and his wife Rosemary take advantage of Thursday evening's Ector County Republican Women's Club forum to visit with Bill Buchanan.

■ Issues on the candidates' minds at the old-fashioned political rally ranged from the ramifications of the Iraq situation to the Texas economy.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A group of statewide republican candidates on the campaign trail stopped in for an old-fashioned political rally Thursday evening.

"It's an opportunity for local people to meet candidates and the (Ector County Republican) Women's Club is sponsoring it because of their 30th anniversary," said Jane Tindall, a charter member of the Women's Club.

The rally, complete with a barbecue dinner and live musical entertainment, was held in the Pan American Ballroom.

About 500 constituents showed up for the affair.

Various candidates sat at host tables purchased by local sponsors, in support of the local Republican Party.

Issues on the candidates' minds ranged from the ramifications of the Iraq situation to the Texas economy.

■ Beau Boulter, candidate for railroad commissioner, expressed a need for a national energy strategy especially in light of the Iraq situation.

"What's happening in the Mideast has given cause for energy security," Boulter said.

"We cannot depend on the Mideast for oil imports. It's threatening our way of life ... we have abundant natural resources in Texas," Boulter said.

"The problem in congress is that unless there is a crisis ... people don't think far enough ahead," he said.

Boulter suggested an increased production of natural gas in Texas and drumming up incentives for further oil exploration in the state.

Boulter said he feels it is tragic but right for U.S. troops to be in the Mideast.

■ Rick Perry, candidate for commissioner of agriculture, recommended pushing various industries to boost the Texas economy.

Perry said that in Texas the leather tanning industry is an example of untapped resources. "Texas is the No. 1 beef producer but tans very few hides," he said.

Production of mohair and East Texas timber are also on Perry's list of commodities to revive the Texas economy. Perry said production should go another step to the manufacturing stage, such as using tanned leather production to supply the Texas boot industry.

"I think that is the real future for Texas economy — bring economic development to rural Texas," Perry said. "Our goal is a minimum of $50 million a year in new money," for Texas.

"I consider the possibilities to be almost unlimited."

■ Warren G. Harding Jr., candidate for comptroller of public accounts, said if elected he would strive to take the politics out of state revenue figures.

"Those numbers can be adjusted to the liberal political whims," he said.

Harding said he has hopes for building the tax base in Texas by adjusting those revenue figures into a proper perspective, getting friendly republican business legislature passed, and convincing present corporations not to leave Texas and attract new ones.

■ Wes Gilbreath, candidate for commissioner for the general land office, said if elected voters "can look forward to honesty, integrity, and accountability to be restored in the general land office."

Gilbreath said he has the know-how to pickup the financial shortfall in the current education program and reduce the cost of operating the veteran's land program.

GOP: Candidates visit Odessa

(From 1B)

"I am a businessman and a successful businessman ... my opponent has never worked in the private sector," Gilbreath said.

Gilbreath suggested "new initiative in creating revenue" such as getting rid of the mass inventory of land accumulated by the present commissioner, increasing oil production on land instead of steering oil firms to offshore drilling, and adjusting the present personnell structure of the general land office, which Gilbreath said he considers mismanaged.

■ Rob Mosbacher, candidate for lieutenant governor, pointed out that a recent Mason-Dixon poll shows that he now leads the race against opponent Bob Bullock for Lt. Governor.

The poll shows Mosbacher leading in the metro areas of Houston and Dallas, 43 to 36 percent and 46 to 35 percent in each city respectively.

Mosbacher attributes his stand on various issues for the turnaround.

Those issues include Mosbacher's proposals for creating jobs and job growth in small businesses.

Mosbacher said that providing low cost health insurance care to people across the state, and dealing with worker's compensation will push the opportunities for small business growth and economic growth.

■ David Berchelmann, candidate for re-election as judge, Court of Criminal Appeals, Place 4, said he offers appellate court experience as well as his background as a former prosecutor and district judge.

Berchelmann said he opposes the trend toward a more "activist" appeals court, saying the job of the appeals court is to interpret the law not make new ones.

He also expressed a need to speed up the appeals process for the sake of victims.

TRIAL: Defense claims women not fired

work after they walked off the job.

Testimony in the civil trial began Thursday before a six-member jury in U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton's courtroom. Plaintiffs in the suit are Linda Hopper, Johnnie Knowlton, Frances Popham, Cheryl Casbeer and Terry Mansell.

Melissa Hirsch, the plaintiffs' attorney, told jurors during opening arguments that Porter insisted that the women cook, at their homes and at their own expense, a special holiday meal for school board members. Although supposedly a volunteer effort, the meal was in fact a mandatory project, Ms. Hirsch said.

The holiday meal was in addition to two previous board meals the women prepared at the Greenwood Elementary School cafeteria for which they were not paid, Ms. Hirsch said.

On Dec. 5, 1989, the cafeteria workers met with Porter and told him they did not want to spend any more evenings preparing meals for the school board, she said.

"Several of them were having to pay babysitters — it was causing problems for their families," Ms. Hirsch said. "They knew that under the law they were not allowed to be working down at the school without pay."

Ms. Hopper, former elementary school cafeteria manager, testified that Porter told the workers that they would be paid for time spent preparing the two previous board meals, served in September and November.

She also testified that Porter, through GISD Food Service Director Donna Smith, told the workers on Dec. 7 that they would not have to prepare any more board meals.

However, she said Ms. Smith also told the workers that Porter was going to require them to sign a contract requiring them to work "subject to assignment."

Ms. Hopper said she went, at the behest of her crew, to ask Porter what he meant by "subject to assignment." High school cafeteria manager Frances Popham and Ms. Smith were present at the meeting with Porter, she said.

She said argued with Porter about the meaning of "subject to assignment." Porter refused to listen to offers of compromise, she said.

"He didn't want to work it out at that point," she said. "He let me know that it was going to be his way or no way....He put both his fists on his desk, stood up and said 'I guess it's time for you to go.'"

Under cross examination by defense attorney James Boldrick, Ms. Hopper admitted that Porter never told her she was fired and that he had said it was "time to go" only for those workers who could not abide by his rules.

Nevertheless, Ms. Hopper said she returned to her staff and told them that she "felt like" they had all been fired. Ms. Hopper said she, Ms. Popham and five other cafeteria workers left the school that afternoon under the impression that they had lost their jobs. According to testimony, Ms. Popham never told the high school cafeteria staff that they had been fired.

Boldrick said that the women, with the exception of Ms. Hopper, had not lost their jobs. He pointed out that Ms. Hopper, who had quit a previous GISD cafeteria job, was not eligible to be hired a third time by the district after her walkout.

Plaintiff Johnnie Knowlton admitted that at an impromptu meeting later that evening, Porter told the workers that they had not been fired. She said Ms. Smith had told her earlier in the day that the workers had not been fired.

She testified that Porter told them they could return to their jobs if they were willing to work "subject to assignment," and that this was the sticking point.

The workers were unsure what Porter meant by "subject to assignment," she said, and asked him if assignments might not include such tasks as cleaning the commode at Porter's home.

"At the end of the meeting that night I felt like if I went back to work the next day that's exactly what I would be doing — cleaning his house and his toilet," she said. "If it meant going back to work and doing that, I don't think that's fair."

Boldrick scoffed at the suggestion that Porter might make any of the workers clean toilets. He said Porter had defined "subject to assignment" and that the condition was essentially one under which all the women had been working anyway.

In earlier testimony, Terry Mansell said that said that Porter had mentioned that "subject to assignment" implied an expectation to supervise school activities that occur in kitchen areas.

One of the workers present at the evening meeting, Martha Shipman, returned to work the next week. Another worker, Gina Vines, remained off the job but didn't join in the lawsuit against GISD. The rest of the women never returned to work.

Porter resigned as GISD superintendent in July to accept a principalship in Sunray.

The workers' lawsuit claims that since no male employees were required to stay late and serve board meals, GISD was practicing sex discrimination. Furthermore, the suit claims that GISD violated the women's free speech rights.

Ms. Casbeer testified Thursday that Ms. Smith forbade cafeteria workers from discussing the board meal issue with board members.

Testimony is expected to continue today in the trial.

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Home burns

Staff Report

A family of three lost their home to a Thursday night fire in south Midland County.

Midland and Greenwood volunteer firefighters responded to the three-bedroom trailer home fire located at 4107 South County Road 1135 about 9:45 p.m.

Marie Wilson, 46, who owned the trailer and lived there with her son and daughter, said no one was at home when the blaze started.

Wilson said she had just recently paid off the trailer and didn't carry any insurance. The home was destroyed as a result of the fire.

A local teenager riding his bike on a nearby road first spotted the blaze and notified authorities.

The cause of the fire had not been determined Thursday night.

Robbery

Staff Report

An armed robber got away with an undetermined amount of cash from the Texaco station at Interstate 20 and Midkiff Road about 1 p.m. Thursday, police said.

The suspect, who police said may be responsible for other recent armed robberies, used a small-caliber handgun in the robbery, police said.

He was described as a white male, in his mid- to late-20s, 5 feet 5 inches tall, about 145 pounds, with short brown hair. The suspect was wearing a red, white and orange shirt and a red baseball-style cap.

Hispanic buying power grabs attention of firms

Hearst News Service

With Hispanic buying power increasing seemingly by the minute, the days of boycotts and threats to lure the attention of corporations are pretty much over.

"Some corporations started wooing the Hispanic market early. Now they're getting even more romantic," said Richard Lujan, chairman of this year's convention of the California Hispanic Chambers of Commerce.

More than 40 companies and corporations, anxious to make inroads into the growing Hispanic market, are taking part in a trade show starting Friday during the ninth annual convention at Concord, Calif.

And Hispanic business people will be more than ready to tap them for help in funding a variety of community programs and services.

"It's very different from 20 years ago, when we had to boycott and battle to get help and assistance from corporations," said Lujan, who heads the United Council of Spanish Speaking Organizations in Martinez, Calif.

There are more Hispanics in California, in fact, than anywhere else in the United States.

Thomas added that a car is a good incentive for luring experienced city employees to Midland.

Mrs. Walger said she didn't want to hear the justification that "all the other cities and counties are doing it.

"Didn't your mother ever tell you that just because one person jumps off a bridge you don't have to do it too?" she asked.

Ralph Holder mentioned the abuse of city vehicles, including a sighting of a Midland truck at a San Angelo motel.

Castro told Holder that if he'd provide him with license plate numbers of the offending vehicles, he'd look into the allegations.

Midge Erskine said the city would save money if it listened to taxpayers to begin with.

"The department heads don't do their jobs," she complained. "When something's brought to their attention, they don't look into it most times.

"We need a shake up in city hall so we can get our money's worth."

George Ochsner asked if the city couldn't contract out more services besides janitorial, light vehicle maintenance and park mowing.

Thomas replied that the city had evaluated its services and determined that contract work was appropriate for low capital investment areas.

"Where you have significant assets you have to be extraordinarily careful," he said.

Ochsner also suggested turning the city's new water storage reservoir into a recreational facility, an idea shot down by Poe, who said it was too small for a lake.

"I'm grasping at straws here, just trying to find you some revenue," Ochsner said.

STATE IN BRIEF

Texas pageant loses Magness

FORT WORTH (AP) — Embattled B. Don Magness said Thursday night he is stepping down as chairman of the board and chief executive officer of the Miss Texas Scholarship Pageant, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported.

Magness cited two weeks of unfair, negative news coverage in announcing during a meeting of the pageant's board of directors that he would not seek re-election to the unpaid position he has held for the past 20 years.

His decision, Magness said, was prompted by two weeks of negative, news stories about him and the pageant system that began with the publication of an unflattering article in the September issue of Life magazine.

The board of directors elected longtime pageant president Barry Hall of Fort Worth to succeed Magness.

Magness is also director of public events for the city of Fort Worth.

The magazine story depicted Magness as "a dirty old man" who made off-color remarks and made lewd comments to pageant contestants.

Later stories featured a variety of complaints about Magness' behavior and his operation of the pageant system, including an accusation by a former pageant director that Magness had attempted to influence the outcome of a local pageant.

Magness said he feared the negative publicity could have a detrimental effect on Miss Texas, Suzanne Lawrence, who will leave Saturday to compete in the Miss America Pageant in Atlantic City, N.J., Sept. 4-8.

Tape draws life term

DALLAS (AP) — Jurors who watched a 72-minute videotape of a brutal sexual attack say the tape clinched their decision to put the defendant in prison for life.

"I wanted to beat him to death," said juror Steve Gavlick of defendant Timothy Kehoe, 30, who taped the attack on the 25-year-old woman in his apartment this year.

The nine-man, three-woman jury sentenced Kehoe to life in prison Thursday after two hours of deliberations. It took only an hour to convict him of aggravated sexual assault Wednesday.

The jury viewed the tape, which was confiscated from Kehoe's apartment, on Tuesday.

Ultimate hunt defended

HOUSTON (AP) — Prison Board Vice Chairman Jerry Hodge took to the national talk show circuit Thursday to defend his participation in an exercise where he and two friends accompanied prison dogs to pursue inmates in what became known as the "Ultimate Hunt."

Hodge is a former Amarillo mayor whose ascension to the top job on the prison board may have been torpedoed by last week's disclosure of the hunt.

He again apologized for what he said was poor judgment in making jackets for his friends to commemorate the hunt that took place last year at the Ellis I Unit northeast of Huntsville.

But in an appearance on the nationally syndicated Oprah Winfrey program, he defended the dog training practice.

Port director named

HOUSTON (AP) — Edmund Balderas was named Port Director for the U.S. Customs Service at the Port of San Antonio.

The Department of Treasury announced the appointment Thursday. U.S. Customs personnel at San Antonio processed more than 105,000 passengers last year, the U.S. Justice Department said.

Balderas is a native of San Antonio and joined the Customs Service in 1962 as a documents examiner. He has been a senior inspector at the Port of San Antonio since 1980.

Opening lead: Seven of ♣

The secret of many bridge hands is delicate timing. To combine all your chances, you must test the possibilities in exactly the right order to give yourself every shot.

North's jump to two no trump promised a balanced 13–15 points. When South showed an unbalanced hand, North took a preference in spades, and South went on to the suit game.

West led a top-of-nothing club and declarer surveyed the prospects. With a normal 3–2 trump division, there was a sure loser there. The opening lead suggested that a club loser could not be avoided, so declarer had to limit his losers in hearts, where two were possible, to one.

With a combined holding in the suit of A Q 10 9, the percentage play for one loser is to take two finesses. And if hearts did not break 3–3, declarer would have to ruff the fourth heart in dummy.

Just in case, declarer played the table's queen of clubs at trick one, covered by the king and taken with the ace. It would have been wrong to draw trumps immediately. Instead, declarer led a heart to dummy's ten and East's jack. East cashed the jack of clubs and continued with the ten for declarer to ruff.

It was time to go after trumps, so declarer cashed the king and ace and was delighted to find both defenders following. Next the nine of hearts was run, and the last hurdle was cleared when that held. When East showed out on the ace of hearts, declarer returned to hand with the king of diamonds to ruff the remaining heart. The only losers were one trick in each suit except for diamonds.

Burke's abrupt departure ends calm at CBS News

Burke

NEW YORK (AP) — David Burke, CBS News' fifth president in five years, was out Thursday and Eric W. Ober in as his successor as the once-troubled division was back in the headlines after two years of relative calm.

One CBS source characterized the reason for Burke's departure as a "leadership issue" and not arguments over budget with the cost-cutting president of CBS Inc., Laurence A. Tisch.

Ober

Burke, 54, a former ABC News executive vice president who CBS hired in August 1988, did not return phone calls. But he strongly hinted in a statement that he'd been forced out.

Burke's hiring was preceded by six years of turmoil that included Gen. William C. Westmoreland's $120 million libel suit over a Vietnam documentary, and low morale caused by staff cuts, the largest of them occuring in March 1987, when more than 200 employees were fired. Westmoreland dropped the lawsuit after weeks of a costly trial for both sides.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Thousands of people said goodbye to Pearl Bailey, who was remembered at her funeral Thursday as an extraordinary entertainer and a woman who loved life and everyone she met.

Bailey

"Pearl was love, pure and simple love," said jazz legend Cab Calloway.

"I mean it from my heart and soul, that Pearl Bailey was something you'll never see again," said Calloway, who was a pallbearer and who co-starred with Miss Bailey in the all-black production of "Hello, Dolly" that brought her a Tony award and worldwide acclaim.

About 2,000 people filled the Deliverance Evangelistic Church while scores waited outside in cool, overcast weather for a glimpse of the casket and the singer's body, which was dressed in blue and adorned with a string of pearls. A single red rose was placed in her hand.

Flowers from Lena Horne and Ella Fitzgerald were among those displayed in the church, but for the most part the mourners were friends, family and ordinary people.

Miss Bailey, who spent much of her childhood in Philadelphia, died here Friday at age 72, apparently of a heart attack.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bill Cosby is wearing his competition on his sleeve, a T-shirt to be exact, after posing for a magazine cover wearing a shirt with Bart Simpson on it declaring, "Yo, Bill!"

TV's top pop was preparing to battle the smart-aleck Bart Simpson after Fox TV moved its runaway hit, "The Simpsons," from Sunday nights to a Thursday night time slot, pitted against NBC's "The Cosby Show."

Cosby said he's been changing "The Cosby Show," re-energizing it with nine new writers, as a matter of principle.

The shows were programmed head-to-head for the first time Thursday night, although both were reruns. "The Cosby Show" starts its new shows in September, a full month before Fox will have new offerings of "The Simpsons."

Not surprisingly, Cosby was critical of his animated, bewildered competitors.

"The mean-spirited and cruel think this is 'the edge,' and their excuse is, that's the way people are today. But why should we be entertained by that?" he asked.

"TV should be moving in a direction from the Huxtables forward, not backward."

EAST LONGMEADOW, Mass. (AP) — "Trump The Game" may have stumped some players.

Trump

At least that's the explanation Donald Trump offered Thursday in response to those who said the board game, introduced last year, hasn't sold as well as expected.

"I don't think over-the-counter sales ever made it up to the levels that Milton Bradley thought it would," said John G. Taylor, an analyst with L.H. Alton & Co. in San Francisco.

Analysts said the personal downturn in the real estate tycoon's fortunes probably had little effect on the game's sales.

The game is a sophisticated battle in which players first bid against each other for airlines, casinos, luxury hotels and other Trump properties and then try to negotiate deals.

Since the game's release, Trump has had to battle to save his real-life empire. Wednesday, he completed signing documents related to a bailout package and received the first installment of $65 million in new loans.

FAMILY MATTERS

Marriages require attention

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: Several of my friends are in various stages of divorce. Most of them didn't surprise me. I felt sorry for them, but I could see that there were some problems. Yesterday my best friend confided in me that she and her husband were going to get a divorce. She was very upset, and I spent most of the afternoon with her trying to console her. She said her husband just came home and said that they weren't getting along and that he had never been happy and wanted out. We talked a long time and neither of us could figure out what she had done.

May

I don't know what is going to happen with them, but it really scared me about my marriage. We have had a few problems but nothing that I think is a big deal. We don't talk as much as we used to, but we are both very involved with our children's activities.

I want to know if there is a way to find out if our marriage is in trouble before it is too late. I am tempted to just ask (husband), but I don't think he would tell me. How can I discuss this with him? SCARED

DEAR SCARED: Marriages, like anything else in life, require on-going work to make them succeed. People and situations go through normal life changes, which means rules and responses also have to change.

Taking a regular "marriage inventory" is an important way to give couples a forum to address these issues. Many marriages fail because one or both spouses waited too long to address pertinent issues within the marriage. As your friend has discovered, one spouse's happiness does not guarantee the other's.

Three basic ways can be used to check on a marriage. All three involve a marital evaluation test:

■ Each spouse evaluates the marriage for himself or herself, but does not share his or her answers with the other. Each spouse evaluates their test, and then discusses together such questions as: "Is our marriage less than we want it to be?" and "Do we want to find out what is wrong with our marriage and try to improve it?"

■ Spouses take the test together. After each has read and studied the test, they answer the questions out loud to each other with no discussion at the time. Each spouse takes turns and shares his or her answer. Discussions follow in a prescribed format the next day.

■ The couple uses the services of a trained third party, such as a clergyman or marriage counselor, which gives the couple freedom to disucss each answer with the third party helping to guide the process. This process is the most time consuming of the three, but also can be the most rewarding.

I believe addressing marital issues before the problems become so rigid that one or both spouses believe nothing can be done is extremely important. Encourage your friend to seek marriage counseling from her church or a trained professional.

For a copy of the marital evaluation test I use, write me at: P.O. Box 10485, Midland, 79702. Please enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

DEAR CONFIDENTIAL: You can do nothing to change your mother's behavior, but you can do something to change your responses. Parents often can reduce us to little children. An emotionally-abusive parent, such as your mother, can re-create all your worst nightmares. Learn how to protect yourself against this on-going assault.

Because you were never accepted and affirmed as a child, you continued to seek that acceptance and affirmation from your mother as an adult. She cannot give that to you because she does not approve of herself. Read Melody Beatty's book, "Beyond Codependence," and then go to a Codependents Anonymous meeting. Call 682-4721 for times and places.

Jim May is the director of the Family Wellness Center.

Questions for this column should be addressed to Family Matters, P.O. Box 10485, Midland, 79702.

Veterans' benefit handbook offered

One of the U.S. Government's most widely distributed publications "Federal Benefits for Veterns and Dependents" has been updated for 1990. Prepared by the Department of Veterans Affairs (VA), this handbook contains up-to-date descriptions of the wide range of benefits available to veterans and their dependents.

Eligibility requirements for entitlement to benefits, the important timetable for benefits and where to apply are described.

Education and training benefits for veterans including the GI Bill, veterans job training, vocational rehabilitation, and employment assistance administered by the Small Business Administration and other federal agencies are covered extensively.

Other special sections describe VA loans for home-buying vets, disability benefits, insurance, health care, what to do about Agent Orange exposure, death benefits, and benefits for survivors. In addition, the booklet lists the address and local telephone number for all VA facilities where veterans should go for assistance including VA hospitals, nursing homes, outpatient clinics, VET centers where counseling is available for Vietnam era veterans, and treatment centers for alcohol and drug dependence.

To order the 1990 Federal Benefits for Veterans and Dependents, send a check for $7.95 payable to Federal Reprints to Federal Reprints, P.O. Box 70268, Washington, D.C., 20024.

Guide lists legal rights of women

Women's legal rights as they pertain to jobs and job opportunities have changed significantly over the past two decades. But many women are still uncertain about their rights, protection and assistance offered to them under Federal and State law.

"A Working Woman's Guide to Her Job Rights" published June 1988 by the U.S. Department of Labor, outlines women's legal rights as they apply to employment and retirement. Federal laws enacted to guard against discrimination of women in the work force, the assertion of job rights, and the complaint process through the Equal Employment Commission are explained.

The guide has been especially prepared for today's working woman in government or private industry and includes information on all job-related areas where women have faced discrimination.

DEAR ABBY

All women with children earn title, 'mother'

EDITOR'S NOTE: Abby is on a two-week vacation. Following is a selection of some of her favorite past letters.

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a newly married person and I don't know what to call my mother-in-law. I can't address her as "Mrs. Smith" as I did before I was married, and addressing her as "Molly" would seem presumptuous and lacking in respect.

Van Buren

She has asked me to call her "Mother," but my own mother is still living, and I would have great difficulty calling anyone except my own mother "Mother."

Can you help me? — STUMPED

DEAR STUMPED: I think I can provide a solution to your problem, and to all others who share it, by publishing a letter from a reader who wrote to me some time ago:

DEAR ABBY: I would like to help all young marrieds who find it difficult to address their mothers-in-law as "Mother."

When I made my first visit to the doctor's office after the birth of my first child, the nurse motioned to me and said, "Mother, you are next."

I knew she wasn't addressing me as HER mother. Suddenly I realized that she addressed all of us with children as "Mother."

Immediately my vision was broadened, and I came to understand that "Mother" applied to all women with children. That was the moment I was lifted out of the narrow rut of thinking that the title belonged only to my own mother.

I soon put this knowledge to practice. When I wanted to attract the attention of friends, neighbors or even strangers, I would say, "Mother, watch your little one!"

You'd be surprised how quickly they reacted, having been reminded that they were mothers. The title is rightly theirs, and it never interfered with the special meaning it held for my own dear mother.

If we would all use the term freely, the next generation would learn from our example and thus alleviate a sticky problem. — BIRMINGHAM

No 'college kids' found in this class

LAFAYETTE, La. (AP) — The "Big Easy" credits rolled, the lights came up and the class was full of questions. Was the movie based on fact? Was Jim Garrison really responsible for cleaning up Louisiana? How do you pronounce that strange name, Chopitoola? Is Cajun music taught?

As in most classes, a few people asked most of the questions and the class clown made a crack or two. But there was a difference between this class and others at the University of Southwestern Louisiana: no college kids.

The 22 students had come from around the country to Lafayette for a weeklong "Elderhostel," part of a national program for people 60 or older.

"We must continue our education," 66-year-old Douglas Rowley said, and winked.

He and his wife, Lila, said they spent the past two winters in Texas. They came through south Louisiana on their way home last winter and wanted to see more of the area.

They looked in Elderhostel Inc.'s fat tabloid catalog — Elderhostels are given in every state and Canadian province and numerous countries overseas — and found the right combination of time, place and subject in Lafayette.

"We've known about them for three or four years, but this was the first time we were finally motivated enough to try one," said Mrs. Rowley.

The classes were an odd gumbo of topics: Cajuns and Creoles in Louisiana films, Louisiana architecture, Mississippi River customs and geology, and the Cajun waltz and two-step.

That's often the case in elderhostels.

You can go, for example, to Connecticut College in New London and study psychological portraits of American presidents, Dante's "Inferno" and country dances of old England.

Elderhostels try to schedule a variety of topics, preferably divided among science and arts and humanities, said Cynthia Trahan, administrative director for USL's program.

There are some exceptions. The elderhostel timed to coincide with the Festivals Acadiens focuses on Cajun food, Cajun music and dancing, and Louisiana arts and crafts. The Mardi Gras elderhostel describes the history of Carnival and its various traditions.

Tuition at Louisiana elderhostels ranges from $210 to $265. The classes bring instructors and the schools a little money, but not riches, Trahan said.

Many elderhostels put their students up in dormitories, but USL uses part of the tuition to pay for rooms in a motel, shuttling students back and forth in vans.

John and Corabeth — or Jack and Bess — Fuller of Houston liked that. "I always look for two or less to a room and a private bath," said Mrs. Fuller, 72. "I look at the subject carefully, but if you stay in cabins with six people to a room ..." She shook her head.

Fuller, 69, said he was particularly interested in the daylong tour of the Mississippi River and in the descriptions of Cajun life and culture.

They learned that Cajuns are the descendants of French Canadians whom the British kicked out of what was called Acadia in 1755.

They also learned that the movie "Belizaire the Cajun" is, as teacher Mathe Allain put it, a fairy tale; that inaccuracies in "Blaze" include having someone as handsome as Paul Newman play Gov. Earl K. Long; and that a pair of dams in central Louisiana is all that keeps the Mississippi River from changing course and leaving New Orleans on a mud flat.

As for "The Big Easy," Allain told the class its plot wasn't based on any particular case; Garrison was a district attorney rather than the judge he played in the movie and was known best for his investigation of John F. Kennedy's assassination; and that there aren't a lot of formal lessons in Cajun music.

One detail tripped her up. She spelled Tchoupitoulas Street correctly, but pronounced it "ChoopiTOOla" rather than the "ChoppuhTOOlis" heard in New Orleans.

"It does throw outsiders," she said.

Sensible diet part of healthy lifestyle

By Henry F. Page, M.D.

While waiting patiently at breakfast for my three-minute egg to harden, a few curious thoughts wandered through the vacant recesses of my head — namely:

Page

How come all that cholesterol in the egg, when all the chicken eats is grain and grits; and why doesn't it have hardening of the arteries?

How come the 92-year-old alumnus of a Harvard Reunion ate four eggs for breakfast all his life, while the professor who loudly termed eggs a slow form of cyanide died suddenly of a coronary at 52 years?

How come in an aging research study, 100 superior aging individuals had higher cholesterol levels than 100 inferior individuals?

How come the limp-necked giraffe in the zoo was cured by adding starch to its diet?

Now that we have your attention and before we are dropped off to the Funny Farm or drummed out of the Medical Corps, let us make our point that although cholesterol is a proven major risk factor in heart and major vascular diseases, it is only one of many. It is a vitally important factor in youth and middle age, but when seniority arrives the stage is already pretty set.

However, when blood levels are above 227 mgm you have a medical problem that requires attention. But fear not — cholesterol is not a poison, but rather an essential element of physiological function. Your endocrine glands in particular require a normal amount of cholesterol and usually have the ability to adjust to the proper level. For example, Eskimos eat blubber; Africans chew betel nuts; and experimental animals deprived of all sources of cholesterol manufacture their own as required.

On the subject of eating, partake just a small helping of everything in a pleasant environment amidst entertaining people. Be sure you drink plenty of liquids and that your teeth fit. Bon Appetit!

Dr. Henry F. Page is medical director for Trinty Towers and Manor Park.

IT'S YOUR LIFE

Caregiving of elderly an increasing problem

By Steve Edwards

Providing personal care for elderly parents is a task faced by many Americans. The problem is compounded by the fact that there are fewer caregivers than there used to be. For the first time in history, the average American has more parents than children.

Edwards

Although some elderly need constant bedside attention, most caregiving is accomplished by helping with housekeeping and food purchasing, assisting with transportation and providing caring companionship. These simple activities require time, compassion and willingness. Eighty percent of older Americans who need this type of caregiving receive it from their families.

But providing this kind of care can be stressful for the caregivers themselves. In one instance, moving a grandfather's daybed into the living room so that he could be more involved with the family, resulted in the teenage children asking their friends not to drop by. And trying to keep up with an elderly parent's medical bills can wipe out a family's savings.

The struggles of caregiving is made even greater because of the emotional impact of parenting your parents. Women, especially, are feeling both the joy and the stress of caregiving because nearly 90 percent of caregivers are women. Caregivers' average age is 57, and more than one-third are 65 or older. In fact, the average woman caregiver spends more years caring for her parents than she did caring for her children.

Working women who also are caregivers for their elderly parents are just as responsible as caregivers who do not work outside the home. They give up their own free time and socialization.

To help with the burdens of caring for aging parents, some employers and community agencies are beginning to recognize that the family problems brought on by an elderly population affect their companies and programs. Some companies are providing employees with family care management and educational programs, or are allowing a specific number of caregiving or parent-care days as a part of employee benefit packages.

Each day, about 5 million Americans spend some time caring for a parent, and within the next two decades this number is expected to double. Eventually, comprehensive, custom-designed personal care-management services will be available to help give the love, attending and care that were once the exclusive role of the family.

Steve Edwards is executive director of Community and Senior Services and the Visiting Nurse Service of Midland.

Johnson trains

NEW YORK (AP) — With only one month remaining in his two-year suspension, Ben Johnson is working overtime to make up for lost time.

The Canadian, penalized for testing positive for steriods following his first-place finish in the 100 meters at the 1988 Olympics, is undergoing a rigorous training course at York University in Toronto.

Under new coach Loren Seagrave and the supervision of business adviser Ed Futerman and manager Kameel Azan, the leaner and fitter Johnson has been working out nearly every day and sometimes twice a day. Occasionally, the workouts have lasted six or seven hours.

Patton loses

DENVER (AP) — Defending champion Chris Patton made an early, ignominious exit Thursday from the U.S. Amateur golf championship, losing the first five holes to Chris Zambri and finally succumbing on his opponent's hole-in-one, 8 and 6 in a first-round match.

Two other favorites, however, advanced to the second round of match play. Qualifying medalist Phil Mickelson overcame a balky putter to outlast stubborn John Grace 1 up, and two-time Amateur champion Jay Sigel got past Bill Hoeffle 2 up.

The second and third rounds both were scheduled Friday, with the quarterfinals and semifinals on Saturday and a 36-hole final on Sunday.

Thursday's Answer — No Los Angeles Dodger had ever homered in his first big league at-bat before Jose Offerman. The last player to do it for the old Brooklyn Dodgers was Dan Bankhead in 1947.

Permian probe planned

■ The Ector County Independent School District will begin an internal investigation after an allegation that the Odessa Permian football program violated University Interscholastic League rules.

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

ODESSA — In the wake of receiving a letter citing possible violations of University Interscholastic League rules by the Odessa Permian football program, Ector County Independent School District officials announced Thursday they will begin an internal investigation, the results of which will be forwarded to the District 4-5A Executive Committee.

In a news conference at the ECISD administration building, district public information officer Chuck Hornung read a prepared statement announcing the local investigation will be conducted by ECISD superintendent Gene Buinger, who has 15 days from Monday's receipt of the letter to finish his review and make recommendations to the district committee.

The letter in question was written by Odessa High head football coach Jerry Taylor, who claimed that on numerous occasions during the periods of Aug. 6-10 and Aug. 13-17, Permian coaches were witnessed giving players formal summer instruction before league rules allowed.

Copies of the letter were also sent to UIL director Bailey Marshall and representatives from the other 4-5A school districts.

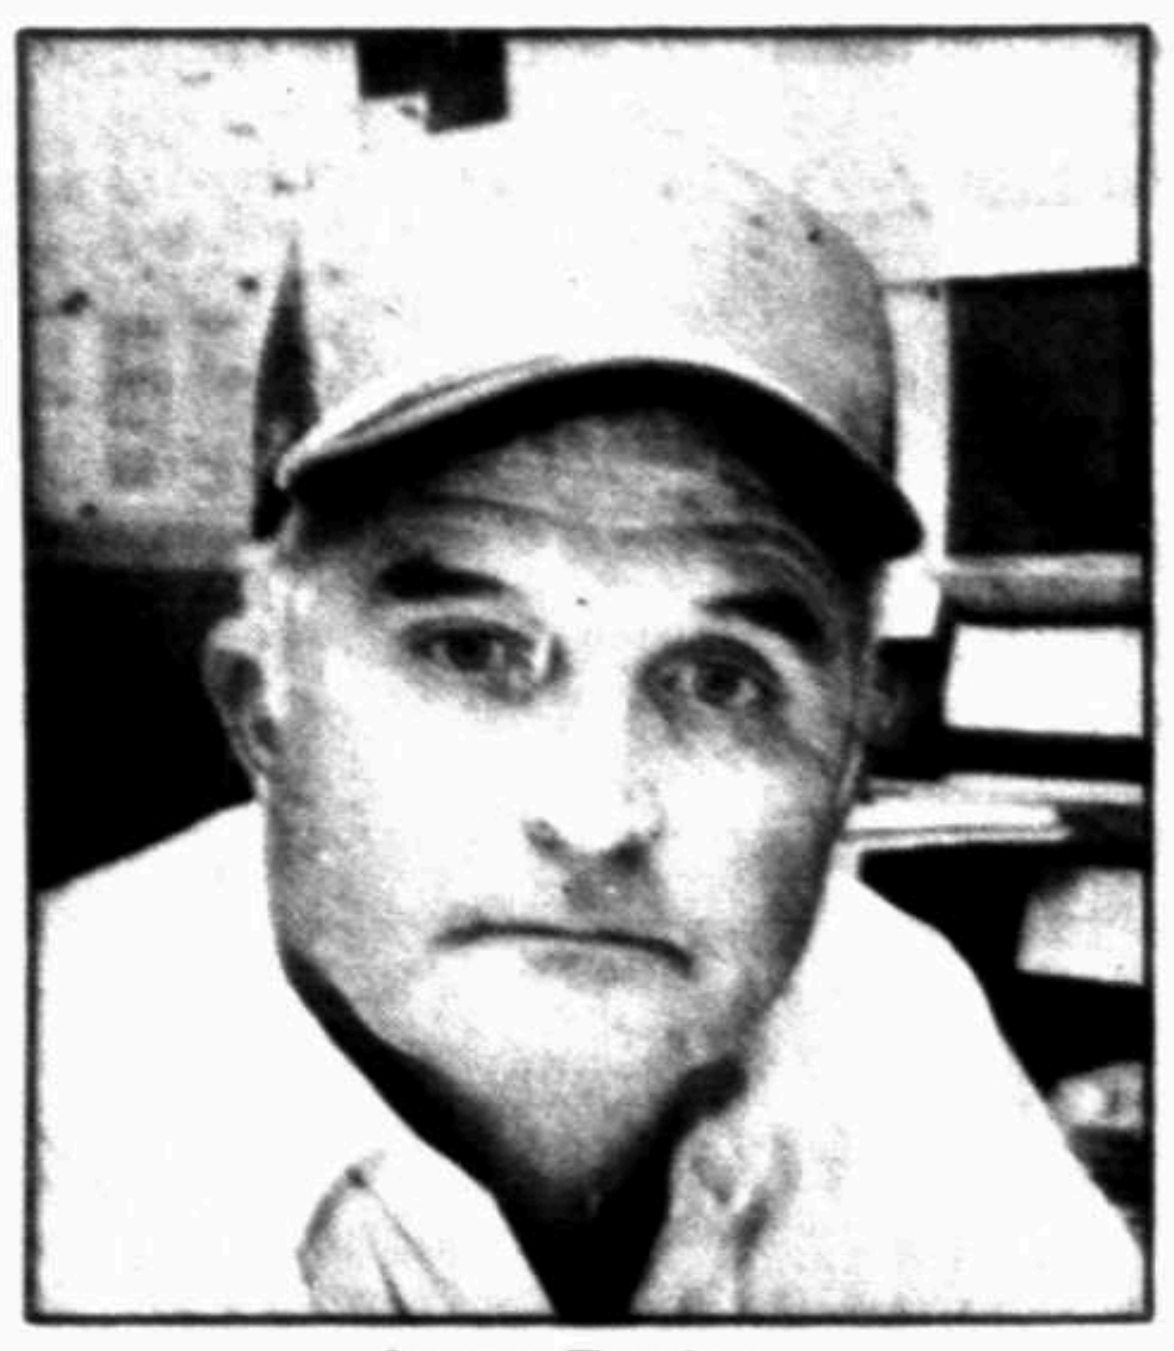
Enough is enough for coach Taylor

■ After approaching ECISD officials with his charge that the Odessa Permian football program was breaking UIL rules, Odessa High's football coach took a more drastic step.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

ODESSA — Evidently, Odessa High head football coach Jerry Taylor felt he had gone as far as he could before filing a letter to the University Interscholastic League calling for an investigation into the Odessa Permian football program for possible violations of UIL pre-season workout rules.

Taylor confirmed Thursday that he sent a letter to the UIL, members of the District 4-5A Executive Committee and league coaches that stated what he felt were UIL violations by Permian.



Jerry Taylor

"Yes, I sent a letter," said Taylor, "but it wouldn't be appropriate for me to discuss the matter any further than what was said in the letter at this time.

"We need to let the Executive Committee look at the situation and then I would be glad to talk about it when it seems to be an appropriate time."

Taylor said in his letter to the UIL that he had approached Ector County Independent School District officials at least twice before filing his letter with the UIL. However, Taylor would not mention what matters were brought to the attention of the ECISD at that time, leaving the impression that there were Permian violations other than the ones mentioned in his letter.

Alleged violations in the letter occurred during the periods of Aug. 6-10 and Aug. 13-17, but Taylor's letter indicates he brought forth other information prior to that time.

In part, Taylor's letter reads, "Approximately early April 1990, a meeting of Ector County I.S.D. administrators and head coaches contained UIL violations of Permian High School football program presented by Jerry Taylor. At this meeting a statement was made that if further violations continued, a letter would be written and signed by Jerry Taylor and addressed to District 4-5A.

"Shortly thereafter, but prior to the start of spring training 1990, ECISD officials were notified, in writing, by Jerry Taylor about Permian's additional violation of UIL rules concerning off-season football. I (Taylor) assume my superiors warned Permian coaches and principal, but in my opinion, other violations have persisted."

Taylor followed with a list of events that he believes is in violation of Section 1250 (B) (3), page 316 of the UIL Constitution and Contest Rules.

Taylor wrote, "I wish to report the following violations dealing with summer workouts at Permian High School and Bonham Junior High. During August 6-10 and 13-17, 1990 at Permian High School and/or Bonham Jr. High (Sophs.) players were observed working out (organized).

Frogs vow woe to opponents

SWC Tour: TCU

FORT WORTH (AP) — Southwest Conference rivals more accustomed to Texas Christian's bark than its bite may be in for a surprise or two this fall.

The word from the Horned Frog football camp Thursday: The Purple's Triple Shoot offense has some new and sharp teeth in it.

"If things jell just a bit and we get a few breaks, we can put a lot of points on the board," said co-captain Mike Sullivan, the Frogs' rough-and-tumble offensive tackle.

"Our quarterbacks are throwing the ball well and we have a whole stable of fine receivers. If we can come together as a team ... we could have a really good season."

"We have some great offensive weapons and I think we're going to be right there in the hunt with the rest of them," said TCU running back Tony Darthard, another co-captain.

Coach Jim Wacker, Mr. Optimism himself, told touring SWC writers his staff is "light years ahead of last year" when TCU unveiled its new wide open, one-back offense, a spinoff of the run-and-shoot attack.

"Our dream is to be the surprise team of the Southwest Conference," Wacker said of the Frogs, 4-7 last season but with a couple of eyebrow-raising upsets over Air Force and Southern Mississippi.

Wacker pondered his "dream" a moment, then added:

"Of course, I've had that same dream the last two years and I'm getting a little sick of it ... I'm ready to see some reality."

With eight offensive starters back, Darthard healthy and Sullivan ready it may not be too much of a surprise if the Frogs are for real. They could in fact surface from their second-division hovel and knock off a favorite here and there.

"We're being positive," Sullivan said. "Everyone wants to go to a bowl game. I just think we need to get off to a good start."

Wacker pointed out that TCU opens the campaign with non-conference opponents Washington State, Missouri and Oklahoma State and said: "If we can come out 2-1 or 3-0, that would be a big boost and help us tremendously."

And the Frogs no doubt will need help in a SWC title chase that could be as wacky as ever.

"Everybody's got to pick Texas A&M, but after that it's going to be a mad scramble," Wacker predicted.

Brother disputes tag; blasts Holtz

MANKATO, Minn. (AP) — Steve Huffman is neither a liar nor a quitter, said Dave Huffman, his older brother.

Dave Huffman, a Minnesota Vikings offensive lineman who, like Steve, played at Notre Dame, also said Thursday that he didn't have a very high opinion of Lou Holtz as a coach.

In his book, "The Fighting Spirit," Holtz wrote that he delivered a speech to his squad during which he said of Steve Huffman: "You let everybody in this room down if you quit. It almost seemed like he planned to put his teammates in checkmate."

Steve Huffman shot back in a first-person article published in this week's Sports Illustrated, saying he was injured but Holtz showed no concern for the welfare of his players. He added that use of steroids was widespread.

Holtz denied the steroid charges. He also apologized for naming Huffman in his book.

After speaking to his little brother, Dave Huffman was ready to offer support — something few others are doing.

"I've known Steve for his whole life," said Dave Huffman, who played under Dan Devine at Notre Dame. "He's not a liar. He's not a druggie. He's not a bum off the street.

"Here was a guy who got labeled by a pretty powerful man and by a pretty

Royal backs SWC change

AUSTIN (AP) — Darrell Royal, who coached Texas to two national championships in 20 years, says it's time for a change in the Southwest Conference.

"Either the conference must take on new members, or Texas and Texas A&M need to move to another conference," Royal said. "The Southwest Conference is not the same now. I think there will be changes made of some kind."

Royal, in an interview with the Austin American-Statesman, said he was speaking personally: not on behalf of the University of Texas, where he is special assistant to UT President William Cunningham. Royal retired from coaching in 1976.

"There's no reason," he said, that Texas "can't develop the same ties, the same loyalties and emotions to another group" if there's a shakeup in the SWC.

Arkansas has announced it's leaving the SWC for the Southeastern Conference. That's fueled speculation that UT and Texas A&M are next.

"When the conference was workable back in my day, we never considered anything else other than the Southwest Conference," said Royal. "Now things have changed so much from what I've observed that more changes are inevitable."

Royal thinks the reasons for changes are strictly financial.

Spaniard leads elite links field

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Jose Maria Olazabal had a shot at 59 — the record low score on the American pro golf tour — and didn't even know it.

Olazabal parred the last four holes Thursday for a 9-under-par 61 that set a course and tournament record for the Firestone Country Club and the World Series of Golf and gave him a four-stroke first-round lead.

He lipped out birdie putts of three and six feet on the 15th and 17th holes that could have given him a tie for the best score in PGA Tour history.

The 24-year-old Spanish star insisted, however, that thoughts of a 59 or records of any kind did not enter his mind until it was too late.

"No, no," he said. "I didn't realize I had a chance until my caddy told me."

That information was passed along, he said, after he'd lipped out a 6-foot birdie putt on the 17th hole, his last realistic chance to keep alive the chance of matching Al Geiberger's 13-year-old record set in the Memphis Classic.

Olazabal, making his first start in this winners-only tournament and on the course that has a long-standing reputation for length and difficulty, said he was concerned only with his relationship to par and did not realize Firestone plays to a par of 70 instead of the more common 72.

He went five under par on the first four holes — birdie, eagle, birdie, birdie — was five under at the turn despite a bogey and then went to nine under with a burst of four consecutive birdies ending with a 22-footer on the 14th.

Part-timer leads event

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — Steve Lowery, playing in only his fourth PGA Tour event this year, shot an 8-under-par 62 on Thursday to take a one-stroke lead after the opening round of the Chattanooga Classic.

PGA

Lowery, who closed out his round with consecutive 15-foot birdie putts at the eighth and ninth holes, leads Jeff Wilson, Tom Pernice Jr. and John Dowdell, all at 63.

Mitch Adcock and Peter Persons, who had eagle-3's at the second and 17th holes, each shot 64 and 12 others had 65's as the field wreaked havoc with par on the 6,641-yard Valleybrook Golf and Country Club.

Lowery, who has spent most of the year on the PGA mini-tour, used accurate short-iron play to take advantage of Valleybrook's slow greens.

"I got the line, gave it a good run and the hole got in the way. I was making my putts at the right time to keep my momentum going," Lowery said.

Lowery said his round was saved by a 25-foot birdie putt at the par-5 fourth hole. After placing his second shot in a bunker, Lowery came up short out of the sand but then sank the putt to get to 5-under for the day.

Lowery saved par at the sixth and seventh holes, then closed out his round with birdies to take the lead.

Wilson, in his first year on the tour, caught fire on the back nine with five straight birdies.

"I didn't make any long putts, but you still have to make them no matter what the length," Wilson said. "I played the first nine pretty solid, but it was nothing spectacular. All of a sudden, I chip the ball in (from off the 13th green) and I made a 15-footer for birdie (at 14) and I was on my way."

He sank putts of 10, 1 and 4 feet on the next three holes to get to 7-under. He had a chance to share the lead at 18, but missed an eight-foot putt for birdie.

PROBE: Coach denies charges

in the C & CR (the UIL Constitution and Contest Rules), Dr. Buinger has 15 days in which to reach his review. And then based upon his intent and his communication with Dr. Marshall, there will, as expeditiously as can be called, a meeting of the district committee," Hornung said.

"I'm sure the internal investigation will take the full 15 days. At that time I assume Dr. Buinger will do the best he can do to get the other members of that (district) committee together for the review.

"Because this is an internal investigation at this time, we have no comment on any of this until such time as the district committee has had a chance to review those allegations."

Though he attended the news conference, ECISD athletic director John Wilkins did not comment on the allegations.

However, Wilkins will have a part in the investigation. Again citing the UIL guidelines, Hornung said the internal investigation will include the superintendent's talks with Wilkins, Taylor and Permian coach Tam Hollingshead.

"All the allegations are being taken seriously, and each one of those is being requested to be answered in full," Hornung said.

After receiving Buinger's findings, the 4-5A committee may take them under advisement, but also can begin its own investigation. The committee could issue a private reprimand to the individuals involved, or transfer the case to the state committee with a recommendation that the individuals should be publicly reprimanded or suspended.

If found guilty of the allegations, the school's football team could also face probation or suspension. A school found guilty of accusations such as Taylor's may also be forced to forfeit any games played from the time the grievance was filed until a decision is made by the UIL.

Probation would allow Permian to continue to play for a district championship and state playoff berths, but the district committee could also exercise its broad powers and make Permian ineligible for district championship or playoff honors. The committee is composed of school superintendents within District 4-5A. ECISD's Buinger currently is the head of the Executive Committee, but may not participate in the decision by the committee, according to Section 603 of the C & CR.

In his letter, Taylor also refers to other supposed violations he reported in April. However, the current investigation deals only with the the charges of improprieties this summer.

"The investigation that Dr. Buinger is conducting now will specifically address the comments and allegations made by Coach Taylor in this specific matter," Hornung said.

"The investigation was begun at the request of Coach Taylor as specified in Section 1250 of the UIL C & CR. At this point Dr. Buinger is doing what is required under this."

Hornung also said that an internal investigation was conducted after Taylor's charges in April were received. That investigation never proceeded beyond the internal stage because — as Taylor holds in his letter — he petitioned nobody outside ECISD.

Hollingshead said Thursday, "We don't feel any of the allegations are true and we will continue to prepare for our first football game with El Paso Irvin."

TAYLOR: Letter goes into detail

From 1C

"2. Being timed on fence lap around campus.

"3. Coaches with clip board in area (Checking attendance and offering instructions).

"4. Coach instructing QB (quarterback) on whom he should have thrown to on a given play (Pass Hull).

"5. Assistant coach picking up footballs after practice and placing in a white mesh equipment bag.

"6. After running of fence lap, 1 group (linemen) met with one coach on the field and was dismissed.

"7. Remaining players (Backs and receivers) stayed and ran plays (Passes) while at least one coach observed and offered instructions."

Under UIL rules noted by Taylor, no coach is to have any organized activity with athletes prior to the official date assigned by the UIL, which was Aug. 20 this year for football.

Taylor's letter also said that "two known PHS assistant coaches and presumably an assistant coach (timer) driving a blue crew cab Ford pick-up with white camper, Texas license plate 5846 IP," were involved at Bonham Junior High.

Taylor also claimed that the incidents at Permian had Panther head coach Tam Hollingshead and three PHS assistants involved. Taylor did not specify which of the alleged violations took place at Bonham and which occurred at Permian.

powerful institution, by a pretty powerful media machine, as a quitter and is gonna have to fight that label for a long time. That's the kind of thing you don't want to have to go through life with. He's not a quitter."

He said he knew of no steroid use when he was at Notre Dame from 1975-78.

"We also had Notre Dame people there who watched out for their kids. Maybe that situation has changed," Dave Huffman said.

Asked if he meant the well-traveled Holtz is not a "Notre Dame person," Huffman said: "You can take that for whatever you want."

He later said: "The thing that started this was Lou's indiscretion in his book. I think even he realizes the stupidity of something like that."

Graf, Capriati may meet early

Tennis

NEW YORK (AP) — Two-time defending U.S. Open champion Steffi Graf and teen upstart Jennifer Capriati, who waged a memorable duel on Wimbledon's Centre Court, may be headed toward an early rematch for American fans.

Graf, the top seed seeking to regain her dominance of the women's tour after losing in two straight Grand Slam events, will get an easy start in the $6.3 million Open when play begins next Monday but could meet Capriati in the fourth round.

That's the same round in which Graf beat Capriati at Wimbledon.

In Thursday's draw, Graf was matched against a qualifier in the first round. In the second round, Graf is likely to face Australia's rising star, 18-year-old Rachel McQuillan, in the second round.

Capriati, hoping to cap her glorious summer of Grand Slam debuts with a splash in the Open, drew perhaps the toughest first-round match of any women's seed as she goes for $350,000 top prize.

Capriati, the 14-year-old with a grown-up game, will take on another talented teen with a two-fisted backhand, 15-year-old Anke Huber of West Germany.

Raiders dispute article

PALO ALTO, Calif. (AP) — Al Davis was quoted in a published report Thursday as saying the Raiders are "100 percent certain" to return to their old home in Oakland to play the 1990 season.

The Raiders, however, vehemently denied it.

"We fully expect to play our 1990 home games in Los Angeles," said Al LoCasale, the Raiders' executive assistant. "This sort of reporting makes it extremely difficult for us to sell tickets in Los Angeles."

Steinbrenner retains USOC veep position

Olympics

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — For the second time this week, George Steinbrenner agreed to be seen but not heard. This time, the deposed boss of baseball's New York Yankees at least didn't have to resign as a vice president of the U.S. Olympic Committee.

He apparently was ready to do just that Wednesday night before being placed on inactive status.

The party line Thursday was that both sides agreed without dissent on the inactive status. Several members of the executive committee, however, hinted that Steinbrenner, forced to give up control of the Yankees for paying a small-time gambler $40,000 to get dirt on outfielder Dave Winfield, offered to resign altogether but was told that wasn't necessary.

"George was saying, 'I'll quit,' and we were saying, 'Isn't there something we can work out?'" LeRoy Walker, the USOC treasurer, said.

Walker then tried to recant, saying he had only heard others discussing that scenario, although he was one of the officers who met privately with Steinbrenner during the executive committee's deliberations.

Executive committee member Anita DeFrantz would not address the resignation issue.

"I'm not going to second-guess George Steinbrenner," she said. "He has agreed that the Olympic Committee is very important to him. He has agreed to remain on inactive status until this all settles out."

What that means is unclear, and the USOC wasn't saying.

"He will remain inactive, period," said USOC president Robert Helmick. "There's been no issue of his credibility. The only desire is for him to remain inactive until the controversies surrounding him are all sufficiently resolved."

Helmick said Steinbrenner was not asked to resign by the committee because "it was felt we really didn't have enough information to decide if he should or should not resign."

Steinbrenner agreed to banishment from baseball after turning down Vincent's proposal to take a two-year suspension in hopes of preserving his USOC role.

In a statement released late Wednesday night, Steinbrenner said he backed away from the everyday involvement with the USOC to "allow matters of con-

Helmick said the USOC would not conduct an investigation of Steinbrenner's activities and would not elaborate on how soon the committee would again take up the issue.

Rain delays World Series

Little League

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. (AP) — The most active people on the baseball field during Thursday's session of the Little League World Series were the dozen groundskeepers who battled rain and mud in a losing cause.

The dirty dozen slogged through the mud, rebuilding part of the Lamade Stadium infield, covering and then uncovering the infield with a tarp three times. But they couldn't beat the elements, and that means the championship game of the World Series won't be played as scheduled on Saturday afternoon.

"It's a sad day for the kids who played so hard at all levels to get here," Little League spokesman Steve Keener said. "We're sad for the players who didn't get a chance to play here all week."

The 43 previous Little League finals were played on Saturday afternoons. The start of the 1980 game was delayed 1½ hours by rain.

Keener said that while crews struggled to get the games in so Little League could keep its championship game on national television Saturday, player safety had to come first.

"The tournament committee has examined the playing field and found it to be unplayable," public address announcer Cliff Blair said at 4:03 p.m., two hours after the East-South quarterfinal game was scheduled to resume.

Water was pooled up to 4 inches deep in some parts of the outfield. The infield appeared playable in spots, but only those spots where the grounds crew had done more than six hours of work.

Lady Rebels swept away by Tornado

Staff Report

Midland Lee's volleyball team ran into a Lamesa Lady Tornado Thursday, as the Lady Rebels fell to the count of 15-2, 15-5.

In junior varsity play, Lee's first j.v. lost 7-15, 15-0, 15-8, and the second j.v. was beaten 15-12, 7-15, 15-5.

According to Lee coach Elise Wheat, her team suffered from first-match nervous jitters.

"We had some added pressure because Midland High beat them Tuesday," Wheat said. "It will take some time for our kids to get used to each other and make it click.

"They're expecting it to happen all of a sudden instead of being patient," Wheat added.

Still, the second-year Lady Rebel coach is convinced that this year's team will be nothing like this year's team.

"There's no comparison to last year," Wheat said. The Lady Rebels finished last in District 4-5A last year.

The Lee spikers travel to the Monahans Tournament today, facing Sweetwater at 8 a.m.; Seminole at 1 p.m.; and Alpine at 3 p.m.

Sochia suspended

NEW YORK (AP) — Brian Sochia, the starting nose tackle for the Miami Dolphins, was suspended for five weeks by the NFL Thursday for violating the league's policy on steroids.

Sochia, an eighth-year player, will have to sit out the next two weeks and the first three weeks of the regular season. If he shows no traces of the substance in another test, he will be reinstated for the fourth game.

Jays slide past Bosox

Associated Press

Mookie Wilson slid home with the winning run on Kelly Gruber's broken-bat grounder in the bottom of the ninth inning Thursday night as the Toronto Blue Jays beat the Boston Red Sox 4-3 in the opener of a four-game series between the top two teams in the AL East.

The victory moved Toronto within one game of the division-leading Red Sox. It was only the second time the Blue Jays have beaten the Red Sox in seven games this season.

Wilson began the winning rally with a single to right, his third hit of the game, and took third when Joe Hesketh (0-1) threw a pickoff attempt down the right-field line.

Tony Fernandez was walked intentionally and Jeff Gray relieved Hesketh. With the infield in, Gruber broke his bat on a 1-1 pitch and grounded softly to third baseman Wade Boggs. But Wilson, running on contact, beat the throw to the plate, sliding in just ahead of Tony Pena's tag.

White Sox 4, Angels 2

Rookie Alex Fernandez allowed seven hits in eight innings and Bobby Thigpen earned his major league-leading 42nd save for Chicago.

The win allowed the second-place White Sox to pick up a half-game on idle Oakland, narrowing the Athletics' margin over Chicago in the AL West to five games.

AL Roundup

Fernandez (2-1), Chicago's top pick in this year's amateur draft, walked two and struck out six. Thigpen got the last three outs for his 42nd save in 48 opportunities.

Royals 4, Mariners 1

The Kansas City Royals reached the .500 mark for the first time since April 19 as George Brett and Mike Macfarlane each drove in two runs for Kansas City.

The Royals won their fourth straight game and are now 62-62. The last time they were at the break-even point was eight games into the season.

Kevin Appier (10-4) went six innings, allowing only an unearned run on three hits for his fifth straight win and eighth in nine decisions. Steve Farr pitched two innings before Jeff Montgomery got the last three outs for his 19th save.

Brewers 8, Yankees 2

Dave Parker drove in four runs to back Jaime Navarro's first complete game of the season, and Milwaukee ended the New York Yankees' six-game winning streak.

Dopson scheduled for elbow surgery

BOSTON (AP) — Red Sox pitcher John Dopson is scheduled for surgery Monday to have bone chips removed from his right elbow.

The surgery will be performed in Alabama by Dr. James Andrews, the same surgeon who treated Roger Clemens.

Wilson leads Astro explosion

Associated Press

Glenn Wilson had four of Houston's season-high 18 hits, scored three runs and drove in two, leading the Astros past the Atlanta Braves 8-3 Thursday night.

It was only the Astros' 20th victory in 65 road games this season. They are 35-25 at home.

Mark Portugal (7-9) scattered seven hits over six innings and won his third straight decision. Larry Andersen pitched two innings and Dave Smith finished.

The Astros took a 1-0 lead in the second on consecutive singles by Wilson, Mark Davidson and Rafael Ramirez off Charlie Leibrandt (5-8). Houston made it 3-0 in the fourth on Franklin Stubbs' RBI single and Carl Nichols' sacrifice fly.

Davidson helped the Astros pull away with a two-run double in the fifth. Singles by Stubbs, Nichols, Casey Candaele, Bill Doran, Ken Caminiti and Wilson produced three more runs in the sixth to make it 8-2.

It was the Astros' highest hit total since June 25, 1989, when they also had 18 in a 12-6 victory at Atlanta.

NL Roundup

Leibrandt surrendered six hits and three runs in four innings before Marty Clary relieved.

Atlanta scored two runs in the fourth on Andres Thomas' two-run, bases-loaded double and added a run in the sixth on pinch-hitter Jim Vatcher's RBI single.

Pirates 9, Reds 3

Bobby Bonilla hit a grand slam to cap Pittsburgh's six-run fifth inning and Barry Bonds added a two-run homer as the Pirates won their fifth straight over Cincinnati in a battle of National League division leaders.

Zane Smith (9-7) gave up two runs in 6 1-3 innings to win his third in a row since being traded to Pittsburgh on Aug 8. The Pirates have won 10 of their last 12.

Giants 6, Phillies 3

Ernest Riles tied a club record with his fourth pinch home run of the season and reliever Francisco Oliveras pitched three scoreless innings for his first National League victory.

The Giants, who have won three of four games, moved to within 6½ games of first-place Cincinnati in the NL West and broke a six-game losing streak to the Phillies.

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil matched an all-time high and unleaded gasoline notched a seventh-straight record in the futures market Thursday, as traders worried about the threat of combat in the Mideast.

"Again, it's the possibility of war and the probability of damage to Saudi oilfields if a war did occur," said Ann-Louise Hittle, a senior oil analyst with Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc.

The price of light, sweet crude reached a high of $32.35 per barrel for October delivery on the New York Mercantile Exchange, before slipping back to a close of $31.93, up 71 cents from Wednesday. The intra-day high equaled a record set Aug. 2, 1983, the Merc said.

For the second day, oil stayed above the $30-per-barrel mark, last seen in late 1985, but the market "didn't have quite the charge that it did yesterday," Hittle said. "It was not quite such a rush."

The posting price for Permian Corporation and Marathon Oil reached $30.25 while Sun Refining and Marketing's set their posting price at $30.75 per barrel.

Dollar's new low

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar continued its losing streak Thursday, falling broadly to achieve new lows against the German mark and the Swiss franc and reach its lowest level in nearly nine years against the British pound.

Gold prices were mostly higher.

The dollar fell in New York trading, declining to 1.5445 marks from 1.5575 late Wednesday.

The pound rose to $1.9515 in London from $1.9275 late Wednesday and to $1.9570 in New York from $1.9235. On June 23, 1981, the pound reached $2.0014.

In New York, the dollar edged down to 146.12 yen from late Wednesday's 146.15.

In New York, a troy ounce of gold picked up $1 to close at $412 on the Commodity Exchange. Silver slipped 0.3 cent to $5.126 a troy ounce on the Commodity Exchange.

Bank purchase

TEXARKANA, Ark. (AP) — A Texarkana bank holding company has announced plans to buy controlling interest in a Texas bank for an undisclosed price.

If approved, State First Financial Corp.'s acquisition of Atlanta National Bank of Atlanta, Texas, apparently would make the Arkansas firm the state's fourth largest bank holding company. Its assets could increase to $576 million.

JIDDA, Saudi Arabia — A militant group of oil producers led by Algeria, Libya and Iran has blocked a renewed attempt by Saudi Arabia and Venezuela to convene an emergency meeting of OPEC to try to stabilize soaring oil prices.

The move creates a deep rift within the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries as it faces its most severe crisis in 30 years.

The Iraqi invasion of Kuwait on Aug. 2 interrupted the flow of 4 million barrels of oil a day from the two countries, and prices for OPEC crude have since surged to around $28 a barrel here, the highest level in at least five years.

This latest OPEC disagreement comes as oil markets are beginning to experience serious shortages of some refined products.

Many oil experts expect the situation to worsen and prices to rise further over the next two months.

Saudi Arabia notified many customers Wednesday that it would not be able to deliver large quantities of jet kerosene, gasoline and gas oil, because in the event of military action against Iraq, the fuels would be needed by its own armed forces and the U.S. forces in Saudi Arabia.

The OPEC dispute splits the organization into two camps: price hawks who argue for higher oil prices and the Saudi-Venezuelan group, which insists that OPEC must raise output immediately to push down prices and ease the strains that short supplies are causing for both Third World countries and the industrialized nations.

Trying to ease the friction, Algeria's oil minister and the OPEC conference president, Sadek Boussena, suggested Wednesday that all 13 members of OPEC meet informally in Vienna on Sunday without a mandate to make a decision, OPEC officials said.

Saudi Arabian and Venezuelan officials indicated, however, that they would hold a separate meeting by Sunday with the other OPEC members who favor immediate increases in output.

Petroleum Museum kicks off fundraiser

■ The Petroleum Museum has honored a lead contributor as it kicks off its educational funding program.

By John Paul Pitts
Business & Oil Editor

Education and exploration mingled Thursday as the Petroleum Museum kicked off its Partners in Education funding program at the monthly meeting of the Permian Basin Exploration Managers.

Petroleum Museum President Art Dinsmoor officially kicked off the program with the presentation of a plaque to Tim Parker, exploration manager for Santa Fe Energy Resources Inc., which became the charter member of the program with a presentation of a check for $20,000 to the program.

Parker told the luncheon gathering at the Museum that Santa Fe was happy to be the lead partner. "Santa Fe has highlighted education as one of its prime areas of interest, because that is where you get the most bang for your buck."

Ed Rowland, executive vice president and director of the Petroleum Museum said the Partners in Education program was the outgrowth of a decision by the Museum's board to increase the Museum's commitment to education. That decision resulted in the creation of an education department, which now consumes one-third of the Petroleum Museum annual budget.

The program in turn has resulted in a 250 percent increase in services to school children and the development of educational programs for adults.

Jane Phares, curator of education, noted that some of the youth education programs include special studies in geology, fossils, dinosaurs, early Permian history, Indians and sharks. The Museum also

Orders show listless economy

By John D. McClain

WASHINGTON (AP) — Factory orders for "big-ticket" durable goods rebounded 2.9 percent in July, the government reported Thursday. But analysts said the zig-zag performance this year indicates a listless manufacturing economy that could worsen because of the Middle East crisis.

"Orders have been bouncing up and down and the net effect is a very weak upward trend," said economist Cynthia Latta of DRI/McGraw-Hill, a Lexington, Mass., economic research firm. "I don't actually see the industrial sector in decline, but there's not much stimulus for expansion there."

Economist Thomas Runiewicz of the WEFA Group in Bala Cynwyd, Pa., agreed, but added: "Since the Middle Eastern crisis, we're in a different ball game ... it makes things a little tougher than what we were experiencing before and that was fairly flat."

The Commerce Department reported that orders for durable goods — those expected to last more than three years — totaled a seasonally adjusted $128.3 billion after slumping 3.2 percent in June.

In the first half of the year, orders rose during three months and fell in the others, including a record 10.5 percent drop in January. During that time, orders totaled $744.7 billion, a 1.5 percent decline from the same period of 1989.

The future of gold prices, anybody's guess

By Jane Bryant Quinn

NEW YORK–Today, gold investing is an up-or-down bet on the politics of the Middle East.

Quinn

Before Iraq swallowed up Kuwait, the gold bulls had been making a case for buying the metal at around $350 an ounce. Rising U.S. inflation and a devaluing dollar were two of the many reasons they gave.

John Sack, a precious-metals trader at Shearson Lehman Hutton, says that a lot of heavy hitters stepped in when the Dow Jones Industrial Average touched 3,000, because they thought that was too high. Often, gold and gold stocks go up when other stocks are going down.

Now, however, with gold seesawing over $400 and on wartime alert, its future is anybody's guess. Judging by the rise in sales, a lot of guessing is going on.

Not all of the vendors are at their old stands. Citibank, for example, is dropping its retail gold-selling operation, after several years of yawning disinterest on the part of the public.

By contrast, two new no-load (no-sales-charge) mutual funds started up just in time to catch the wave.

Gold mutual funds buy the stocks of companies that mine, fabricate and process gold. They're an especially speculative play. When gold prices rise, the stocks of gold-mining companies rise even faster. And they drop even faster on the downside.

One recent top performer: The year-old, $116 million Benham Gold Equities Index Fund in Mountain View, Calif.–up 11 percent since Aug. 1, the day before Iraqi tanks rumbled into Kuwait. Benham has created a "gold-shares index," made up of 35 major U.S. and Canadian companies. The fund invests proportionately in all of them, so you'll match the moves in the market, up and down.

Ironically, Benham's market-matching fund has been outperforming most of the gold funds that try to beat the market. The main reason for this, says portfolio manager Steven Colton, is that index funds are fully invested in stocks when the market moves up, while other funds may be holding cash reserves.

In theory, index funds should fall harder than the other funds do when gold shares decline. But in practice, the mutual funds indexed to other types of securities have proved pretty resilient on the downside, too.

But there are indexes and indexes. The Rushmore group's year-old $8 million Precious Metals Index Plus Portfolio in Bethesda, Md., which owns 25 North American companies, has been running more toward the middle of the pack. Gains since the day before the invasion: 9.1 percent.

Mutual funds are used principally by gunslingers, who buy now and sell later, when they think that gold prices will fall. But if you're bullish on gold long-term, you could accumulate mutual funds slowly, buying some shares every month, so as to dollar-average your position. Gold companies may pay dividends, which the metal itself does not.

Long-term holders, however, are more likely to turn to the gold itself. Best buys for investors are one-ounce "bullion" coins, meaning coins sold for their gold alone, with no special numismatic value.

Shop around, because the market is highly competitive. Last week, five one-ounce gold American Eagles, the U.S.-minted coin, could be had (by phone) at 4.75 percent over the spot price of gold both from Benham Certified Metals in Mountain View, Calif., and the Rhode Island Hospital Trust National Bank in Providence.

If you wanted to sell the same order back, however, Benham offered 1.5 percent over the gold price (after sales commissions) and Hospital Trust, 2.25 percent over. So on a round trip–both buying and selling–the bank was cheaper. Still, these prices are good. Some vendors charge retail customers more.

ANALYSIS

NEW YORK (AP) — Heavy selling sent stock prices tumbling to their lowest levels in more than a year Thursday as runaway oil prices and fears of war in the Middle East kept the world's financial markets in turmoil.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials plunged 76.73 points to 2,483.42, its lowest close since it stood at 2,462.44 on July 6, 1989.

Since July 17 the average has fallen 616.33 points, or 20.5 percent.

Declining issues overwhelmed advances by about 11 to 1 on the New York Stock Exchange, with 148 up, 1,645 down and 242 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board reached 250.44 million shares, up from 175.55 million in the previous session.

Analysts said there was little question about where U.S. stock prices were headed as Wall Streeters came to work Thursday morning.

The Dow Jones industrial average had fallen more than 96 points in the last two sessions. Overnight, the Tokyo stock market suffered a 5.8 percent loss, its fourth largest single-day drop on record.

The slide in U.S. stocks picked up momentum late Wednesday as the price of oil surged past $30 a barrel to levels nearly double where it stood at the beginning of the summer.

The showdown in the Middle East that began with Iraq's invasion of Kuwait on Aug. 2 has raised the specter of a wide range of economic problems, including recession and a simultaneous surge in inflationary pressures.

Brokers say stock-market investors have been dismayed to find themselves trying to calculate the economic damage from the situation in the Persian Gulf even as the crisis continues to unfold.

Losers among the blue chips included General Electric, down 1¾ at 58⅛; Philip Morris, down 1⅝ at 41⅜; Boeing, down 2½ at 42⅛, and International Business Machines, down 2⅝ at 96⅞.

Energy stocks, which had been a notable bright spot of late on the strength of higher oil prices, also got caught in the downdraft.

Federal National Mortgage lost ⅛ to 26⅝. The stock traded as low as 24⅞ before the company announced that it would devote as much as $500 million to buybacks of its common shares and warrants.

Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 298.29 million shares.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks dropped 5.34 to 168.88.

Standard & Poor's industrial index fell 11.41 to 362.23, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was down 9.49 at 307.06.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market dropped 14.61 to 360.22. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 315.85, down 8.54.

OPEC: Cartel split into two factions

(From 7C)

"The unwillingness of some OPEC members to meet just to look into what we should do to alleviate the shortage of oil and the pressure on prices is incomprehensible, given the fact that we have called many emergency meetings over situations that were far less serious," said the Saudi oil minister, Hisham M. Nazer, in an interview here.

Saudi and Venezuelan officials said they had hoped that a decision to increase production could be arrived at under "an OPEC umbrella" to preserve the organization's cohesiveness, but the failure to do so will not delay an increase in output for more than a few days.

"We wanted to avoid triggering a free-for-all because this is not going to be a matter of short duration," said a senior Venezuelan OPEC delegate who asked not to be identified.

He added that "now we will coordinate our action with Saudi Arabia and those others who want to join us because it would be irresponsible not to step in now and dampen the price rise in such a crucial time."

The official noted that failure to act now "will affect OPEC's credibility as a reliable supplier of oil and as a responsible economic organization."

But Iranian and Algerian oil industry sources maintain that there is no real shortage of oil and that the Western oil companies should use up the large stocks of oil they have on hand to ease the crisis.

These officials also say that the Saudis and the Venezuelans made no move to restrict output when oil prices sank to $14 a barrel in May and they maintain that the present increase is compensation for the revenue lost then.

"If the Saudis are once again undertaking to check the increase in oil prices, the oil-producing countries will stand against such plans and neutralize them," the Iranian press agency, Irna, quoted the daily Joumhouri Islami newspaper of Tehran as having said in an editorial Wednesday.

There are six OPEC members favoring a meeting, but that is one short of a majority of the 13-member organization.

The six nations are Saudi Arabia, Venezuela, the United Arab Emirates, Qatar, Ecuador and Kuwait, which all members except Iraq still recognize.

Iraq, Iran and Libya have staunchly opposed a meeting that would try to raise output.

Indonesia, Algeria, Nigeria and Gabon have said they see no need for a meeting now but want consultations to continue.

Oil experts said OPEC's procrastination in agreeing on a course of action, coupled with the certainty that some OPEC members will raise output anyway, had made the group's deliberations irrelevant to world oil markets.

QUINN: Shop gold market

(From 7C)

When shopping, also compare shipping charges and any other fees.

In the opinion of investment adviser John Dessauer, of Dessauer's Journal, the gold price can't hold at a high level as long as real interest rates stay so high. Gold pays no interest, so investors would rather own Treasury securities. When interest rates finally fall, he says, gold will really start to looking interesting.

Jane Bryant Quinn's column, syndicated by Washington Post Writers Group appears on the Reporter-Telegram business pages each Tuesday and Friday.

FUND: Museum education

also offers week-long summer classes for students 4-12 years of age, and camp-ins for area Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts.

Adult programs, says Phares, include adult tour groups and teacher in-service workshops to acquaint teachers on how to establish "oil" programs in the classroom, using Petroleum Museum materials.

Other educational events include field trips, brown bag luncheon lectures, the H.B. Fugua Distinguished Lecture Series, Smithonian events and participation in Elderhostel programs to educate senior citizens.

"The Petroleum Museum is a prime educational resource for the oil and gas industry. It's the one place where a visitor can get a general understanding of the oil industry and its operations while being entertained," said Rowland.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

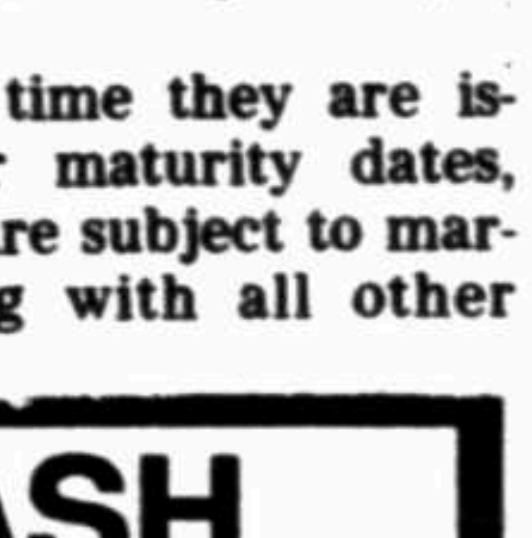
Riding out mutual fund shares can be bumpy

By Bill Doyle

Q. As a retired senior citizen of moderate means, I trustingly placed portions of my little nest egg in two money market mutual funds. Enclosed are recent statements from those funds. I have no concern about the ethics of either fund. One is associated with the insurance company at which I worked. I assume the other is equally well run.

I do not understand the fluctuations in share values of these funds. If I had not reinvested my dividends, my accounts would be worth less than the amounts I originally invested. My calculations, which I also enclose, indicate I would have done about as well by investing at 9 percent simple interest and even better by investing with quarterly compounding.

Can you explain this?



Doyle

A. Your calculations are correct. But the statements you sent along show you did not invest in money market mutual funds. The share value of that type of mutual fund does not fluctuate. A money market mutual fund uses accounting practices that keep its per share value constant — at $1, in most cases.

One of the funds whose shares you own invests in U.S. Treasury and federal agency securities. The other invests in Government National Mortgage Association — GNMA or Ginnie Mae, for short — securities.

Treasury, federal agency and GNMA securities are rock-solid safe, assuming they are held until they mature. There is absolutely no doubt those securities will meet their interest and principal payments.

Between the time they are issued and their maturity dates, however, they are subject to market risk. Along with all other fixed-income securities — those paying unchanging interest rates — the market values of previously issued Treasuries, agencies and Ginnie Maes rise when interest rates fall and drop when interest rates go up.

The share values of mutual funds such as yours, do the same thing — rising and falling in line with the market values of bonds and other fixed-income securities.

Q. I have more than $150,000 in U.S. Treasury securities coming due soon. My broker wants me to put that entire amount into a leasing limited partnership, which he says is rated triple A.

I want and need 100 percent safety. What do you advise?

A. To stay away from the leasing deal — and probably from that broker.

The financial press has been chock full of stories about limited partnerships in leasing, real estate, oil and gas, cable television, motion pictures and many other lines that are on the ropes or have gone bust. Limited partnerships were the financial disaster area of the late 1980s.

Some have worked out well, but all too many have not. Every one has to be counted as a risk. And you leave no doubt you want no risk.

To the broker's assertion that leasing limited partnership is rated triple A, ask: "By whom."
