LOS ANGELES — Nancy Reagan biographer Kitty Kelley has signed a deal with MCA-TV to be host of her own syndicated talk show, the company said Wednesday. Kelley, whose unauthorized biography of the former first lady still tops The New York Times best seller list, is jointly developing the one-hour daytime program with MCA, the company said. Further details will be released later, MCA said. The subjects of Kelley's gossipy dissections of celebrities have included Frank Sinatra, Jackie Onassis and Elizabeth Taylor. Her Sinatra biography has sold more than 2 million copies in the United States and Canada. Former President Reagan said Kelley's book about his wife contained "flagrant and absurd falsehoods."

Tongue-twister spells success

Midland youth reaches national bee's 4th round

By James R. Owen
Reporter-Telegram Washington bureau

WASHINGTON — Fortunately for Jared Hoggan, a 12-year-old Midland student, spelling the word "gamopetalous", came easily Wednesday, and it propelled him into the fourth round of the national spelling bee here on Thursday.

Jared, a sixth grader at Hillander School in Midland, scarcely missed a beat in spelling that third-round tongue-twister, which means a "corolla or plant composed of leaves."

Earlier in the first day of the 64th annual Scripps Howard National Spelling Bee, Jared effortlessly rattled off "sleazily," which needs no explanation, and "camoufleur," or someone who uses camouflage.

"Those aren't words we normally use in our everyday conversation," said Barbara Hoggan, Jared's mother.

But Jared and his mother have been using such words almost daily in preparation for the contest, which pitted Jared against 226 of the nation's other spelling masters for two days here.

Jared, who captured the fourth annual Midland Reporter-Telegram Regional Spelling Bee title on April 6, is sponsored by the Reporter-Telegram in Washington.

The first day of competition brought a double dose of excitement for Olivia Ann Munoz, 11, of Odessa. During the night, her mother was rushed from their hotel to a local hospital, where she gave birth

Bush urges Middle East arms freeze

■ Proposed new constraints on nuclear weapons would mainly affect Israel.

Associated Press

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. — President Bush on Wednesday unveiled an ambitious plan to curb "unnecessary and destabilizing weapons" in the Middle East, including a freeze on nuclear-weapons programs and an eventual ban on all missiles throughout the region.

The president also invited the world's largest arms suppliers besides the United States — the Soviet Union, China, Britain and France — to meet quickly with U.S. officials to work out a new code for arms sales and transfers throughout the region.

"Nowhere are the dangers of weapons proliferation more urgent than in the Middle East," Bush said as he laid out the plan in a commencement address at the U.S. Air Force Academy.

His proposed new restraints on nuclear weapons and materials would mainly affect Israel, believed to be the only Middle East nation with a developed nuclear-weapons capability. Israeli officials expressed some resistance to the plan even before it was announced.

A top aide to Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir said Wednesday that Israel welcomed U.S. efforts to limit the spread of arms in the Middle East but said an international conference should include weapons recipients as well as suppliers.

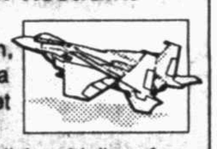

Bush spent nearly an hour and a half shaking hands with the 980 Air Force Academy graduates as they received their diplomas, then watched as they hurled their white uniform hats into the air and six fighter jets roared overhead in close formation.

The ring finger on Bush's right hand was

Comptroller: $1.6 billion in budget savings found

Sharp

AUSTIN (AP) — A state government audit has turned up at least $1.6 billion the state could save without cutting services, Comptroller John Sharp said Wednesday.

The preliminary estimate is a result of the Texas Performance Review, which the comptroller's office began in February at the request of Gov. Ann Richards and legislative leaders.

The mission of the review is to find ways to increase efficiency and minimize the state's projected budget shortfall of $4.7 billion.

Sharp's final recommendations will be released July 1, although Richards, Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock, House Speaker Gib Lewis and the Legislative Budget Board will receive their copies June 26.

Richards has said she will call a special session July 8 so the Legislature can write a state budget, a task lawmakers put off until completion of the review.

Council considers axing crossing-guard funding

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

City councilmen have discussed putting a cap on the number of school crossing guards or eliminating funding for them altogether.

"Right now there's a question of whether crossing-guard funding is a school problem or a city problem," at-large Councilman J.D. Faircloth said Wednesday.

Earlier this year, the city offered to pick up the full cost of a substance-abuse education program in schools if Midland Independent School District would finance crossing guards.

Undaunted by MISD's recent rejection of the proposal, Deputy City Manager Mike McGregor said the city is still working on a compromise.

Bill requires insurance proof for inspection sticker

AUSTIN (NYT) — Beginning Sept. 1, Texas motorists will have to show proof of mandatory liability insurance or other evidence of "financial responsibility" to obtain a state vehicle inspection sticker.

That's just one of the ways that a bill revamping the state's insurance laws will affect Texas consumers. The 700-page bill, approved Monday, tackles a variety of other cost-drivers in the state's $27 billion-a-year insurance industry.

While cracking down on illegally uninsured motorists who drive up the cost of other people's coverage, the legislation attempts to stabilize rates for property and casualty insurance that sometimes increase 20 percent to 30 percent a year.

Other goals of the measure are to prevent insurance company failures due to fraud or mismanagement, guarantee prompt payment of claims, improve handling of consumer complaints and limit the industry's influence on its own regulation.

Passage of the bill was hailed as an unprecedented compromise on the part of the industry and consumer groups. Gov. Ann Richards, who took office vowing to shake up insurance regulation, called it a "home run" for her administration.

A coalition of consumer-advocacy groups — including Consumers Union, the American Association of Retired Citizens, Gray Panthers and others — praised the measure Wednesday, saying it "puts in place fundamental insurance reforms that consumer groups had asked for beginning in 1989."

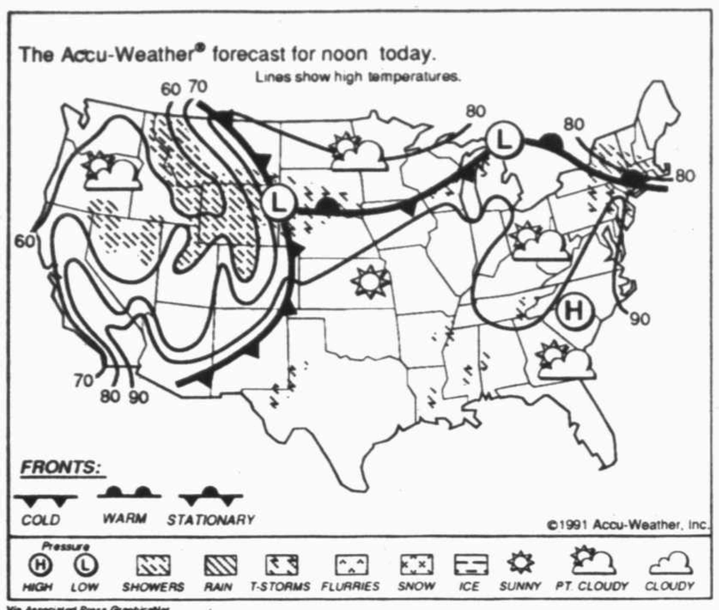

One of the biggest questions remains answered. Experts and politicians alike said it is uncertain whether or when rates will go down, although it's presumed they will stabilize.

"I have yet to find anyone — proponent or opponent — who with any degree of accuracy can predict that it will lower rates. But I do think there are some changes in there that are healthy," Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock said.

The chief author of the bill, Rep. Eddie Cavazos, D-Corpus Christi, chairman of the House Insurance Committee, was equally hesitant to predict rate

Severe thunderstorms with wind up to 60 mph and hail as large as softballs swept through Minnesota late Tuesday and early Wednesday. Power outages, downed trees and flooding were reported in many areas of southern and central Minnesota.

Northern States Power Co. reported 42,000 customers without power early Wednesday.

Hail the size of softballs was reported near Morgan, Minn., in Redwood County, where some windows were broken, the National Weather Service said. Baseball-size hail was reported in the Sleepy Eye and Wabasso areas of southern Minnesota.

Rain and thunderstorms also extended across the eastern half of Texas, Louisiana, southeastern Arkansas, Mississippi, southwestern Alabama, the Florida Panhandle, the southeast half of South Carolina and east-central Georgia.

FREEZE: President unveils plan to curb weapons

bloodied when he finished, and when he arrived back in Washington he was wearing a small bandage.

He praised the nation's military for its performance in the Gulf War, declaring, "When others weren't sure, we were up to the task — you were."

But two months after the war's end, he said, the Middle East remains a region "packed with modern weapons and seething with ancient ambitions."

Administration officials said that French President Francois Mitterrand had agreed to host the U.S.-proposed meeting of the world's five major arms suppliers, which have furnished 80 percent of the weapons going to the region over the past decade.

Aides said the meeting of ministers from the five nations, which also are the permanent members of the United Nations Security Council, would occur next month in Paris. They also said the issue would be high on the agenda of the seven-nation economic summit of industrialized democracies in July in London.

"Halting the proliferation of conventional and unconventional weapons in the Middle East — while supporting the legitimate need of every state to defend itself — will require the cooperation of many states, in the region and around the world," Bush said.

'It won't be easy — but the path to peace never is," he said.

The initiative will not affect planed U.S. arms sales to allies in the Middle East or to other areas pending the development of new codes or ground rules, Bush aides said.

On Capitol Hill, lawmakers who had been calling for a temporary moratorium on U.S. arms sales to the region welcomed Bush's announcement, but said the test will be whether it can be followed quickly by action.

"The Soviets and others have the impression that we have reverted to business as usual" in selling weapons following the war, said Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind.

"Overall, I consider it a step forward," he added. "It all depends on the follow-through."

The major components of the president's proposal include:

■ His call to the world's five major arms suppliers to begin meeting to develop a code that would restrict "destabilizing transfers" throughout the region of both conventional weapons "as well as the weapons of mass destruction and associated technology."

reductions.

"We're going to put some competition back into the industry. We hope in the near future that competition will drive the rates down. There's no guarantee that will happen, but we had to try something different from what we've been doing in the past," Cavazos said Wednesday.

"The main thing is, we're going to have some stability. No more rate increases of 35-40 percent," he said.

One reason for optimism is the likely overall savings from the presumed reduction of uninsured driving.

Although much of its work was in damage control, the insurance industry came away with a new "flexible" rate-making system that is used in most other states. Beginning Sept. 1, 1992, instead of the entire industry being treated as a whole, individual companies will file their own rate requests, pegged to benchmark rates that will continue to be set by the three-member State Board of Insurance — soon to be renamed the State Department of Insurance.

The industry also retains its authority to use private data-collection and analyzing entities, which have been criticized as exerting too much influence on rate-making. Richards and other critics said advisory entities traditionally "cook" industry data to win rate increases.

The critics fell short of their goal to initiate independent data collection and analysis by the state, partly because of the potential cost of at least $50 million.

But the advocates of change succeeded in guaranteeing an end to the industry's unique antitrust exemption in two years.

Among other key provisions of the law:

■ Some lines of coverage offered by farm mutuals and certain other companies will be regulated.

■ Civil penalties for violation of regulations will increase from $10,000 to $25,000.

■ Regulation of reinsurance companies, which buy other carriers' risk, was tightened, but not as much as consumer advocates wanted.

■ Anti-fraud efforts will be bolstered.

FUNDING: City 'is working on a compromise'

(From 1A)

The city has paid $90,000 annually in school crossing-guard salaries and financed $30,000 of the budget for the Drug Abuse Resistance Education program in Midland elementary schools.

MISD, meanwhile, has financed $30,000 of the $117,000 annual DARE budget but has paid nothing for crossing guards, which are overseen by the city. The state this year granted $57,000 for DARE funding.

At Tuesday's council meeting, District 4 Councilman Tom Johnston advocated eliminating crossing-guard funding.

"We're getting out of the crossing-guard business," Johnston said.

But at-large Councilman John Castro said that would generate too much public outcry.

"I think we should keep what we have and not expand it any more," Castro said.

Faircloth said that if MISD rejects another city offer, school children will not be left to cross the streets on their own.

"I guess if push comes to shove, we're going to make sure those kids are protected," Faircloth said. "But we feel like crossing guards are a legitimate school project and we will encourage MISD to pick up at least some of it."

City Manager Fred Poe said both MISD and the city could save money from a DARE-crossing guard trade, he said.

The city's cost after the exchange would fall from $90,000 for the guards to $60,000 for DARE, he said. The school district, in turn, could save money by bringing in volunteers to perform crossing guard-duties, he said.

None of the city's 19 crossing guards works for free. MISD, though, may be in a better position than the city to recruit volunteers through school organizations, he said.

The trade, he said, also would end another argument between city and school district over DARE funding.

However, Superintendent Joe Baressi said getting enough volunteers to serve as crossing guards would be difficult.

"It's not a question of liking or disliking the (city's) offer," he said. "We don't think the school district can maintain the crossing guard program with volunteers."

In addition, Baressi said school-controlled crossing guards may not have jurisdiction on city streets.

"At the request of the Midland Police Department we've restricted our authority to our own property," Baressi said.

City officials complained last year after MISD budgeted only $20,000 — $10,000 less than the previous year — for DARE. Later that year, the district agreed to bump funding back up to $30,000.

Initially developed by the U.S. Department of Justice for use in Los Angeles schools, DARE is a law enforcement program to prevent drug use among children.

The program, taught by Midland Police Department officers, was implemented in MISD elementary schools in the fall of 1989.

SAVINGS: Audit turns up at least $1.6 billion

(From 1A)

Sharp characterized the tough choices politicians will be forced to make in poring over the recommendations as "two weeks of misery with me, or two years of misery with the taxpayers."

Sharp refused to provide details about his findings Wednesday, saying that some agencies already have hired lobbyists seeking to protect their operations.

"If we laid everything out as soon as we came across it, there'd be interests out there trying to kill it," he said. "That's the kind of things that legislators are going to be faced with, but we can show them that everything we're going to recommend makes sense."

But he did say the across-the-board cost-cutting measures wouldn't mean firing a "great deal" of the state's 200,000 employees, or cutting back on services. Most layoffs would come in middle management, he said.

"There is no significant reduction in services. Matter of fact, there's probably more enhancement of services than there is a reduction," Sharp said.

The savings methods will include consolidation and privatization of state services, liquidation of state assets, finding new methods of service delivery and maximization of federal funds, he said.

About 25 percent of the savings will be one-time, Sharp said.

Audits and a series of public hearings around the state have identified more than 700 ideas for running state government more efficiently, Sharp said.

Thousands of people also have called the agency's 1-800-BEAT-WASTE telephone line with suggestions, he said.

"Most of the stuff ... comes from front-line state employees who have been wanting somebody to ask them these things for years," he said. "They're the ones that know how this stuff works, they're the ones that have always had suggestions on how to make things better."

Sharp said he will recommend "weeding and cultivating" the Texas bureaucracy, rather than the "slash and burn" method.

"Some of the things that we're going to recommend will cost money in order to save money two years from now," he said.

to a son — Olivia's first brother.

"She was really shocked this morning," said father Javier Munoz of Olivia, who made it through the first two rounds before she misspelled "capitatim," meaning a head tax, and dropped out.

After the first day's challenge, Jared sighed heavily and said, "Those words are going to be easy compared with tomorrow. The next ones are going to be killers."

Jared said he has no special techniques to master spelling, other than hard study and an occasional computer program that says a word and asks the user to type in the correct spelling.

"You just kind of know them, like your own name," he said. "Sometimes you can look for the root word."

Or, he added candidly, "Sometimes you can just guess."

But like most good spellers, Jared rarely guesses. And he also reads a lot, "all kinds of books," and says he enjoys writing, too.

But Jared, a native Texan whose family moved to Midland from El Paso three years ago, says he also enjoys sports, particularly tennis and soccer, as well as building models.

Joining Jared in Washington are his mother, father Kerry, a traveling salesman, and sister Celeste, 14, and brother Jason, 7.

Jared and his family have found time to tour the capital, visiting the Library of Congress and the National Aquarium in Baltimore, as well as a barbecue for all the spellers and their families.

Later tourist highlights will include the U.S. Capitol, the Smithsonian museums, and the national monuments.

"We've really enjoyed the trip, except maybe for the humidity," said Mrs. Hoggan. "And the high prices in Washington," she added, referring to an unexpectedly steep breakfast tab the family ran up in the hotel restaurant Wednesday.

"From now on, it's Burger King," she said, half-jokingly.

At the close of competition Wednesday, 61 young spelling champions had been eliminated, leaving 165 to complete the bee on Thursday.

Jared wouldn't predict how far he would advance in the later rounds, when the competition will stiffen considerably. But he did say he hoped to get as far as the sixth round.

"You just try to stay in control and not get too overconfident," he said.

Inventors pedal shoe sculpture across U.S.

By John Austin
N.Y. Times News Service

GRAND PRAIRIE — Anthony Hoffmann had to pull over for a second look when he saw the contraption Ken Beidleman and June Moxon were pedaling toward Arkansas Lane.

"What in the hell?" Hoffmann asked as he climbed out of his delivery truck for a closer look at the giant snakeskin high-heeled shoe cruising through Grand Prairie on Tuesday.

Beidleman and Moxon have been getting that reaction to their four-piece, 37-foot "kinetic sculpture" with 32 wheels and 39-gears for about two years.

"I guess we'd kind of classify it as slow-moving art," said Beidleman, designer and lead driver. "We don't need a license for it because they have no category for us."

He and Moxon hit the road from Ferndale, Calif., 3,000 miles ago in the 2,140-pound vehicle they pedal like a bicycle.

After wintering twice along the way and stopping to make money painting signs, the pair are on the downhill end of a cross-country ride that will terminate in Kitty Hawk, N.C., in October.

"We're just kind of setting the standard," said Moxon, explaining that they wanted to be the first to make a transcontinental trip in a piece of sculpture.

Beidleman and Moxon welded $6,000 worth of bicycle tubing and components, chicken wire and paper mache into the "recumbent tricycles" and took off.

Of course, there have been surprises.

"We thought Kansas was flat," said Moxon, a compact, incessantly grinning former rodeo rider. "Kansas is rolling like a Belgian waffle."

She said people want to know why they don't raise a sail to speed things up.

"We have a sail," she said, but explained that it sometimes works against them. "We were in Kansas and we had to peddle downhill."

Although cruising speed is only about 3 or 4 mph, with 39 gears, the trike is easy to peddle, even on water, which Beidleman and Moxon can cross with their handy paddle wheels and foam pontoons. Mostly they stay on the access roads of interstate highways.

But that doesn't mean the going is easy, especially in Texas.

"We're used to sweating six to eight hours a day," Moxon said. "In Texas you sweat 24 hours a day."

That means they each guzzle up to two gallons of water a day.

But the pace keeps them in shape.

"She used to have pencil legs," said Beidleman, 39, pointing to his traveling companion. "I've lost 20 pounds."

Moxon, 38, used the high heel motif for her trike body because she's an admitted shoe freak. "My feet grew a full size," she said.

Both admit that being confined with another person 24 hours a day can get old, but they've learned to cope by listening to music, reading or just taking in the scenery.

"We're lost in America and we love it," Beidleman said.

Except for skipping showers for up to nine days at a time and repairing multiple blowouts, the trip has been a lot of laughs.

'I guess we'd kind of classify it as slow-moving art.'

designer, lead driver

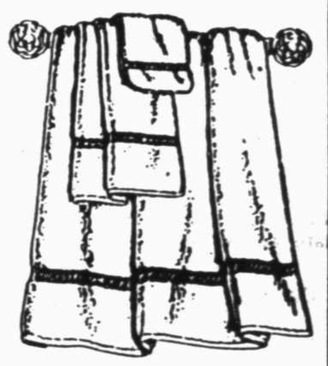

Beibleman recounts one particular piece of dialogue he overheard on his solar-powered CB.

"Did you see that?" said one trucker to another driver, who had just passed the triking twosome.

"Nope," said the other trucker, who didn't want to admit he had seen something that escaped from "The Flintstones."

"I don't know what's in my coffee," said trucker No. 1. "But I'm dumping it out."

Soviets OK unrestricted foreign business

MOSCOW (AP) — Lawmakers voted Wednesday to let foreigners do business in the country without Soviet partners and to exempt them from costly tariffs — a key step toward opening the Soviet market.

"Foreign investments could play an important role in the structural reorganization of the Soviet economy and its demilitarization," Prime Minister Valentin Pavlov told the Supreme Soviet legislature, said the state news agency Tass.

Lawmakers reportedly rushed through debate, apparently in order to ensure the law's final approval before next month's economic summit in London of the seven key industrial nations. President Mikhail S. Gorbachev is hoping to attend and to present his reforms in order to win foreign aid.

The law was given preliminary approval by a vote of 291-11, with 21 abstentions. It was sent back to a committee for editing, a traditional Soviet legislative procedure.

The measure would advance Gorbachev's early reforms that allowed joint-venture companies between Soviets and foreigners.

The reforms were designed to open the insulated Soviet economy and bring in needed foreign currency and goods. But the Soviets, fearing that foreigners would take over industries and exploit their workers and resources, imposed the early restrictions.

The new law does not provide for foreign acquisition of Soviet enterprises and still places restrictions on foreigners, Tass said. It would require wholly foreign-owned companies to be set up individually, rather than by parent companies, by limiting foreign ownership of a subsidiary to no more than 50 percent.

Pavlov said the restriction would prevent foreigners from "creating holding companies which can assume control over entire industries," Tass reported.

One legislator, former Byelorussian republic Communist Party chief Yefrem Sokolov, contended the law would turn the Soviet Union into a colony by enabling foreigners to build and buy up everything, Tass reported. His pleas fell on deaf ears.

"Virtually all the participants in the debate urged the early adoption of the draft law," Tass said. "They emphasized that it will create the necessary conditions for attracting foreign capital to the Soviet economy and will make it more open."

The law would give foreign investors the right to unlicensed export and import, and would exempt them from paying import duties and export taxes, Tass said.

According to Pavlov, foreign investors would be protected under the law from nationalization or changes in Soviet legislation. They would be guaranteed permission to transfer profits in hard currency out of the country and to use profits in rubles inside the country, Tass said.

Final approval will leave only a few major obstacles to free trade by foreigners, including the inconvertible ruble and limits on private property ownership. The law was aimed to give foreigners the same freedoms enjoyed by Soviets, but even those freedoms are limited.

The government has moved to make the ruble convertible in stages and has created a complex system of exchange rates, some set arbitrarily by the state and others determined theoretically in a currency auction.

Gorbachev and other reformers have made little headway in letting anybody, Soviet or foreign, own property outright. Land in the Soviet Union is owned by the government. The heaviest opposition to privatization has come from the Communist Party, which still controls most government property.

Congress Party chooses Rao as Gandhi successor

NEW DELHI, India (NYT) — The Indian Congress Party on Wednesday elected P.V. Narasimha Rao, a self-effacing party loyalist, as party president to succeed the assassinated Rajiv Gandhi.

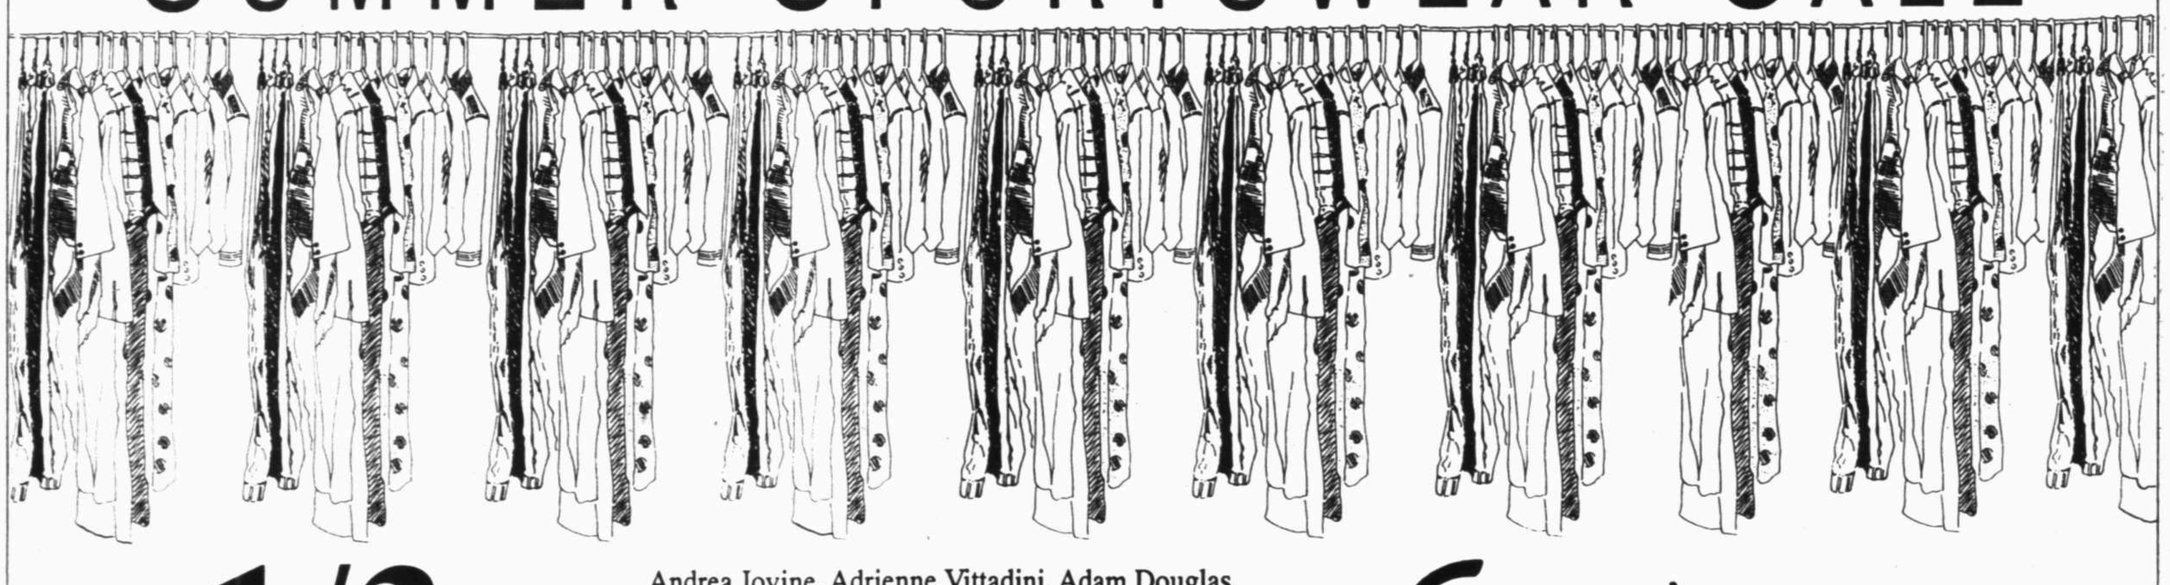

Rao, a former foreign minister, is expected to lead the party into the final phases of an interrupted election. But most politicians assume that he will not not be the party's candidate for prime minister.

His election is plainly an effort to fill a vacuum in the party's leadership by appointing the most senior leader of the party as opposed to one of several younger, ambitious politicians who have failed to gather sufficient support within the divided party.

"He's very intelligent, extremely articulate, but in all fairness, he's considered quite indecisive," said Narasimhan Ram, an editor.

But The Economic Times, a respected New Delhi daily, said last week: "The general opinion here is that P.V., because of a lack of will and charisma, will at best be a compromise candidate, not the leader the party needs at the moment."

Ethiopians protest U.S. peace talk role

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (NYT) — Thousands of residents of the capital turned out Wednesday in violent protests against the American role in negotiations that they say are leading to the partition of Ethiopia among rival guerrilla groups.

Members of the Ethiopian People's Revolutionary Democratic Front, which took over Addis Ababa on Tuesday from the collapsing national army, opened fire on the demonstrators. Officials of the front acknowledged that there had been casualties, but gave no figure; reports from diplomats and witnesses indicated that 10 or more people had been killed.

The violence, which was quelled when the guerrillas cleared the streets Wednesday afternoon, was a reversal for a plan backed by American officials. Under the plan, the northern-based rebel front took control of the city, promising to forge a broader coalition that would replace the overthrown Marxist government of President Mengistu Haile Mariam.

The violence also underscored the tension between the Amhara ethnic group dominant in the capital and the northerners, from Tigre province, who dominate the Democratic Front.

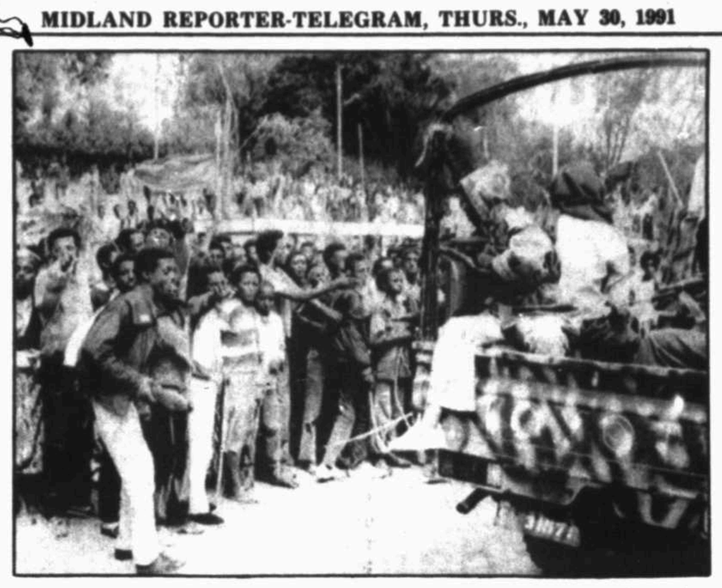

The Tigreans are supposed to govern the capital until they and rebel organizations drawn from the Eritrean and Oromo ethnic groups can meet to create an interim coalition government. Under the American-mediated plan, that is to occur by July 1. The rebel factions, who want varying degrees of autonomy from Addis Ababa, forged a tactical alliance to defeat the Mengistu government.

Riots and some looting broke out around the city on Wednesday after radio reports here that Herman J. Cohen, the assistant secretary of state for African affairs, said the people of Eritrea, the northernmost province, deserved the opportunity to vote on the question of independence from Ethiopia. Cohen made his remarks in London, where he has been mediating talks among the various Ethiopian groups.

Students at the University of Addis Ababa and others interpreted the report as meaning that the United States had reversed its traditional policy favoring a united Ethiopia and now supported the separation of the Red Sea province.

"I'm very apprehensive because the demonstrations were very spontaneous," said Aminu Hussein, a political science professor at the University of Addis Ababa. "The people think they have been betrayed by the United States."

The Tigreans brought order to the city by declaring from bullhorns on patrolling trucks that they were immediately enforcing a 24-hour curfew announced the day before. Sporadic automatic-weapons fire was heard in the city, but it died down.

Croatia declares itself an independent state

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Croatia declared itself an independent state Wednesday as a European Community delegation arrived in Yugoslavia to urge the country's feuding leaders to stick together.

Croatia's declaration was contained in the latest issue of the official gazette — the Narodne Novine (People's News) — and was signed by state president Franjo Tudjman. It was expected to be proclaimed at the current session of the Croatian legislature.

"The republic of Croatia, as a sovereign and independent state which pledges cultural autonomy and all civil rights to Serbs and other nationalities, can join a confederation of sovereign states with other republics," said the declaration.

The declaration, based on overwhelming support for a sovereign Croatia in a referendum held May 19, reiterated the official Croatian position and emphasized the republic will not remain part of a closely knit Yugoslav federation.

Together with its northern neighbor, Slovenia, which plans to declare its independence June 26, Croatia wants the country transformed into a loose alliance of six independent states. Bosnia and Macedonia also support a confederacy.

This is strongly opposed by Serbia, the largest republic, and its small ally Montenegro, which both favor a centralized federation.

Recent ethnic clashes between Serbs and Croats have resulted in the death of at least 20 people, raising fears of widespread violence or even civil war.

The West has urged Yugoslavia's states to remain together — whether in a federation or a confederation.

In an apparent bid to persuade the states to stay together, European Community Commission President Jacques Delors and Jacques Santer, chairman of the Council of Ministers, arrived in Belgrade on Wednesday for a two-day visit.

However, the feuding eight-member collective federal presidency did not convene to meet the delegation.

Pope appoints 22 cardinals

POPE APPOINTS 22 CARDINALS

ROME (NYT) — Pope John Paul II appointed 22 new cardinals Wednesday, including two Americans, and revealed that 12 years ago he had secretly named a Chinese archbishop who spent 30 years in prison for refusing to renounce his loyalty to the Vatican.

In his first designation of cardinals since the collapse of communism across Eastern Europe, the pope also selected three prelates from former Warsaw Pact countries — a Romanian, a Czechoslovak and a German from what used to be East Berlin.

This brings from 10 to 13 the number of known "princes" of the Roman Catholic Church who come from the Soviet Union and the former Eastern bloc.

The two Americans elevated to the church's highest rank below pope were Archbishops Roger M. Mahony, 55, of Los Angeles and Anthony J. Bevilacqua, 67, of Philadelphia. Like virtually all the men named Wednesday, they adhere to John Paul's basic policy of conservatism.

FDIC, Bush reach tentative agreement in Silverado lawsuit

The Nation

DENVER (AP) — A $49.5 million tentative settlement was announced Wednesday in the government's $200 million lawsuit against Neil Bush, the president's son, and 12 other former directors of a failed thrift.

Chief U.S. District Judge Sherman Finesilver announced the agreement in principle late Wednesday in the lawsuit against former directors of Silverado Banking, Savings and Loan.

The former directors agreed to pay $26.5 million to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., said Alan Whitney, a spokesman for the FDIC in Washington, D.C. He said the FDIC also will take over the $23 million Silverado Indemnity Fund.

"We think it's a fair and reasonable settlement," Whitney said.

The FDIC sued Neil Bush and the other former Silverado directors in September, alleging they were grossly negligent in the thrift's seizure by federal regulators in 1988. It has been estimated the Silverado collapse will cost taxpayers about $1 billion.

James Nesland, a Denver attorney representing the president's son in the lawsuit, said, "I think my client's relieved that the matter is settled."

Other lawyers involved in the huge lawsuit either couldn't be reached by telephone for comment or wouldn't comment.

After the lawsuit first was filed, all the defendants denied the allegations. Some contended the thrift's failure was caused by outside experts and government regulators who served as Silverado advisors.

Settlement discussions began April 15, guided by U.S. Magistrate Donald Abram in Denver.

"Settlement discussions have been protracted and intense, and on numerous occasions, have been around the clock," Finesilver wrote in an order Wednesday. "Attorneys have traveled frequently from Denver to Washington and New York in an untiring effort to resolve the matter well ahead of trial."

"The court notes that allegations in the complaint did in fact present difficult and novel legal issues in a complex and changing legal environment," Finesilver wrote.

Finesilver said details of the agreement will be filed Friday and final settlement documents are due June 12. He said he wouldn't yet cancel the Oct. 7 trial date he had set.

In addition to Bush, defendants in the case include Michael Wise, former Silverado chairman; Bob Lewis, former chief financial officer; Richard Vandapool, former chief operating officer, and the Denver law firm of Sherman & Howard.

Inmates free hostages after day-long siege

PINE CITY, N.Y. (AP) — Inmates freed three guards Wednesday and agreed to go back to their cells more than 24 hours after they took over the maximum-security prison for the state's toughest convicts.

The standoff at the Southport Correctional Facility ended after television reporters interviewed two inmates and a tape of the interview was played for the rest of the rebellious inmates, said State Corrections Commissioner Thomas Coughlin.

"Once we played their audio tape back, the inmates freed the hostages and moved back into the cellblock in an orderly manner," Coughlin said.

"The biggest concern the inmates had was to tell their story to the outside world," he said.

Inmates complained in the interview that the guards were abusive, that there wasn't enough supervision of guards during the recreational period to prevent abuse, meals were often late and they were given only five minutes to shower and shave each morning.

Coughlin said the three released guards walked out of the prison's yard separately on their own power, but one had a leg injury and was placed on a stretcher. All three were taken to hospitals.

Guards said the hostages had been stripped, chained about the neck and paraded around. Later, the inmates dressed the hostages in prison greens, made up beds for them and requested sandwiches for them, said James Flateau, state corrections spokesman.

Early Wednesday, prison officials had cut off food, but not water, to the inmates in an effort to force an end to the standoff.

In Albany, Gov. Mario Cuomo, congratulated Coughlin and said there would be an inquiry.

"For now, we can all be satisfied that the confrontation has been defused without loss of life," Cuomo said.

Barry Fletcher, president of the local guards union, said incidents of inmate violence against guards had increased dramatically this year. He said prison superintendent Robert McClellan received a letter from an inmate this week revealing a hostage-taking plot was imminent.

"No one's shocked this happened. We've been telling them about it for a long time," Fletcher said.

Dennis Middaugh, the union's field staff representative, blamed the uprising on reduced staffing at the prison.

However, Coughlin dismissed claims that the incident resulted from staff cutbacks.

"In hindsight people all over the state are telling me how I could have avoided this. If I had unlimited resources, unlimited money, I could do the job right," he said after the incident ended.

The uprising began around noon Tuesday when 52 prisoners, some armed with homemade knives and other weapons, overcame guards, said Flateau.

Authorities said four inmates broke a weld in a chain-link fence and surprised guards, then freed other prisoners during their daily one-hour period of exercise.

Two guards were injured in the initial confrontation.

Study: 200,000 died in war

WASHINGTON (AP) — The environmental activist group Greenpeace reported Wednesday that as many as 200,000 people died as a result of the war with Iraq and 5 million to 6 million were displaced.

"We're uncomfortable with the celebration of victory in the face of this devastation," said William Arkin, the group's director of military research who co-authored a report on the human and environmental toll of the 43-day war.

The oil spill and oil well fires caused by Iraqi troops in Kuwait are the "worst ever manmade environmental disaster in so short a period of time," said the organization's U.S. executive director, Peter Bahouth.

"With the oil spills and fires, I think we can all see now that green and peace are inextricably linked," he said at a news conference to present the 150-page report.

Greenpeace is sending a ship to the region with a scientific crew to investigate the damage, he said, accusing the U.S. government of "indifference" to the effects of the war.

The Greenpeace report — based on interviews with international relief workers, reporters, U.S. officials and news reports — estimates that 5,000 to 15,000 Iraqi civilians died in the massive allied bombardments of Iraq.

Overall, allied actions "could be seen as paving the way for positive new standards for humanitarian and military conduct," the authors said.

"Iraq's gross behavior, particularly its devastation of the natural environment, serves as a sad contrast," they added.

The report — the first comprehensive published survey of the war's results — estimated that:

— 100,000 to 120,000 Iraqi troops died during the war.

— 5,000 to 15,000 Iraqi civilians died.

— 2,000 to 5,000 Kuwaitis died during the Iraqi occupation of Kuwait and the war.

— 20,000 Iraqis died in the month-long civil war set off by the Kurdish and Shiite rebellions against President Saddam Hussein.

— 15,000 to 30,000 Kurds and other displaced people have died in refugee camps and on the road.

— 4,000 to 16,000 Iraqis have died of starvation and disease since the war ended.

— 343 allied troops died in combat and accidents; among them were 266 Americans, of whom 145 were killed in action.

Greenpeace said as many as 30,000 more refugees and Iraqis are estimated to have died of disease.

A team of Harvard University doctors just back from Iraq predicted 170,000 Iraqi children would die by year's end from malnutrition and poor medical care.

Scientists find retardation gene

BOSTON (AP) — Scientists said Wednesday they have discovered the gene that causes fragile X syndrome, the most common inherited form of mental retardation.

The discovery should help doctors diagnose the disorder more easily. It also will allow researchers to delve into the basic defect that underlies it and perhaps eventually design a treatment.

"Understanding the disease is now possible," said Dr. Stephen Warren of Emory University. "Prior to having the gene, it was still a black box."

Warren coordinated an international team of researchers that tracked down the errant gene, pinpointing its exact location on the X chromosome in the genetic library of every cell.

The research goes beyond a study published last week by some of the same researchers, who announced finding a gene probe, a kind of genetic homing device that reveals whether people carry the gene that causes the syndrome.

Dr. Charles Laird of the University of Washington called the latest work an important step in understanding the disease.

"We desperately need to know everything we can," Laird said. "We need to know all the molecular details."

Fragile X syndrome, which is incurable, occurs in 1 in 1,000 males and 1 in 660 females. Down's syndrome is a more common form of mental retardation resulting from a genetic defect, but it does not run in families.

Symptoms of fragile X syndrome can range from mild learning disability to severe retardation and behavioral problems. Some gene carriers are completely normal but risk passing the syndrome to later generations.

Until now, diagnosing the syndrome has sometimes been difficult. The gene probe described last week allows doctors for the first time to spot the syndrome even before birth.

Just what the gene does — and how a defective copy causes retardation — remain mysteries. However, the latest discoveries should allow scientists to unravel the precise nature of the disorder, an essential step for designing treatments to relieve it.

What's in name? Not a whole lot

What's in a name? Not much — if you happen to believe the nine Soviet republics that opted last weekend to rename the "Union of Soviet Socialist Republics" the "Union of Soviet Sovereign Republics."

The U.S.S.R. will remain the U.S.S.R. but it won't mean the same thing, or something like that.

Actually, for some of the Soviet republics the change could really mean something. For others, it won't mean so much. Latvia, Lithuania, Estonia, Georgia, Moldavia, and Armenia have refused to sign Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev's proposed Union Treaty, opting instead for independence. What they want, it seems, is a wooden spike driven through the vampire's heart.

The meeting of Soviet republics took on an ominous tone when Boris Yeltsin, a leader of the Russian republic, told reporters that the Western world, too, has a stake (but not wooden) in seeing a stable Soviet Union "because the cataclysms which will take place in this country if the reforms don't happen will shake all countries, including the United States."

A sow's ear certainly is not a silk purse and simply changing the name from "socialist" to "sovereign" does not make captive nations free, but Yeltsin is absolutely correct in noting that the deep and earth-moving changes that Gorbachev has already brought to the Soviet Union will also affect much of the world beyond Eastern Europe. The United States does have a very real stake in changes now occurring inside the Soviet Union. Determining the best course for the United States now is the job of President George Bush.

What's in a name? From past experience, we'd say it will depend on the actions of the Soviets. Words don't mean much in the Soviet Union. Just last week, they called themselves socialists.

Monaghan deserves thanks of Midland

The resignation of Bob Monaghan from the Midland City Council this week obviously caught many Midlanders off guard. Monaghan, who came to Midland in 1969, has served the community well as a city council representative as well as in other capacities.

Monaghan, 66, who underwent skull surgery about a year ago, expressed concerns that he can no longer effectively represent his constituents in District 3. He has performed his tasks on the council admirably for five years.

Mayor Carroll Thomas and other members of Midland City Council praised Monaghan for his work in the interests of the city. "I know the citizens will miss his good service," noted the mayor.

While residents may be inclined to take for granted the community service of those who give of themselves to make life better in Midland, it is a fact that such performance requires a public-minded individual. Service on the city council or one of the other governmental bodies at the local level generally entails long hours of extra work in order to make decisions on matters involving the public good, which generally brings little thanks from the other residents of Midland. Like others before him, Monaghan has done this job effectively and now must step down for health reasons.

Midland residents — and particularly the residents of District 3 — owe Bob Monaghan their sincere gratitude for his work on the council. Our best wishes go with him for his improved health.

Argentina's Menem earns credibility

Argentina's president, Carlos Menem, wants the world to invest in Argentina. His government, he proclaims, is committed to turning around a 60-year legacy of coups, hyperinflation and government favoritism. Menem's performance at first undermined his ambitions. But now a revised administration has begun to earn credibility.

As 1991 began, Argentina's fortunes seemed near rock bottom.

Menem's efforts to win army loyalty by pardoning human rights crimes failed to prevent a bloody, unsuccessful military revolt. Despite seven emergency economic programs in 20 months, inflation remained untamed and the currency remained vulnerable to damaging runs.

U.S. Ambassador Terence Todman denounced official extortion of bribes from American businesses.

Menem exchanged noisy corruption charges with his estranged in-laws, and he flaunted a red Ferrari given to him by Italian investors considering a hotel project.

In January, however, Menem shifted Domingo Cavallo, an independent economist, from foreign minister to economic policy chief.

Cavallo committed the government to live within its fiscal means. Budgets would be kept in surplus, tax laws strictly enforced, printing of unbacked money prohibited and the currency tied to the dollar.

So far, it has worked brilliantly. Inflation has dropped from triple to double digits and continues to fall. Interest rates have fallen from 200 percent to 10. Confidence and production have revived.

But to sustain these gains, the Menem government will have to accomplish what its predecessors could not: cut spending and raise tax collections sharply.

True, scandals still erupt: Wealthy Argentinians sneak luxury cars into the country; the air force pursues an out-of-control missile project once funded by Iraq. But for a welcome change, these scandals are no longer laughed off.

The car importers are being prosecuted, along with some notorious Menem in-laws. And the president is struggling to rein in the renegade missile program.

Argentine governments are notoriously fickle about tough economic plans. But if Cavallo's efforts persist, Washington can consider more substantial forms of encouragement.

Pennsylvania wins Pentagon's extras

WASHINGTON — Pennsylvania lawmakers have managed to make their state the first in line when it comes to receiving handouts from the Pentagon.

The political coup means that Pennsylvania can claim excess forklifts, tractors, backhoes, dump trucks, salt spreaders and other heavy equipment in the Defense Department inventory before other states get a chance to look over what's available.

Anderson

This arrangement was quietly tacked on to the Dire Emergency Supplemental Appropriations Act of 1990. It was made possible by the powerful Rep. John Murtha, D-Penn., chairman of the defense appropriations subcommittee. Murtha slipped the "demonstration program" into the bill for his colleague, Rep. Paul Kanjorski, D-Penn. This regional equipment center is based in Kanjorski's district and services the entire state.

Pennsylvania's preferential treatment has left members of the House Armed Services Committee irate. At an April hearing, Rep. Richard Ray, D-Ga., noted that Congress had given "Pennsylvania a kind of plum which other states feel they ought to have some of, too."

Kanjorski admits Pennsylvania got a plum — but one that otherwise "would have rotted on the ground."

Because Murtha is one of the people who controls the Pentagon's piggy-bank, no member of Congress is eager to challenge the rationale behind Pennsylvania's sweetheart deal. An Armed Services subcommittee held a private meeting recently at which the issue was raised. But many lawmakers fear that raising the challenge would backfire against their own bids to acquire military bases and projects in their own districts. And they know Murtha has a long memory.

But a few members drafted an amendment to grant all states the same access to excess military equipment that Pennsylvania now holds. Our associate Jim Lynch has learned that the House Rules Committee has quietly killed the amendment.

Kanjorski told us that the "emergency" appropriations bill was a "good engine" to propel his pet project into law. It would have wasted valuable time to wade through the conventional legislative process to win approval. Kanjorski also noted that the program doesn't cost the government a nickel.

In the wake of the spending-spree of the 1980s, U.S. military warehouses are overflowing with surplus equipment, and much of it is of value to municipalities and the private sector. The glut of surplus will swell further as military bases close around the country.

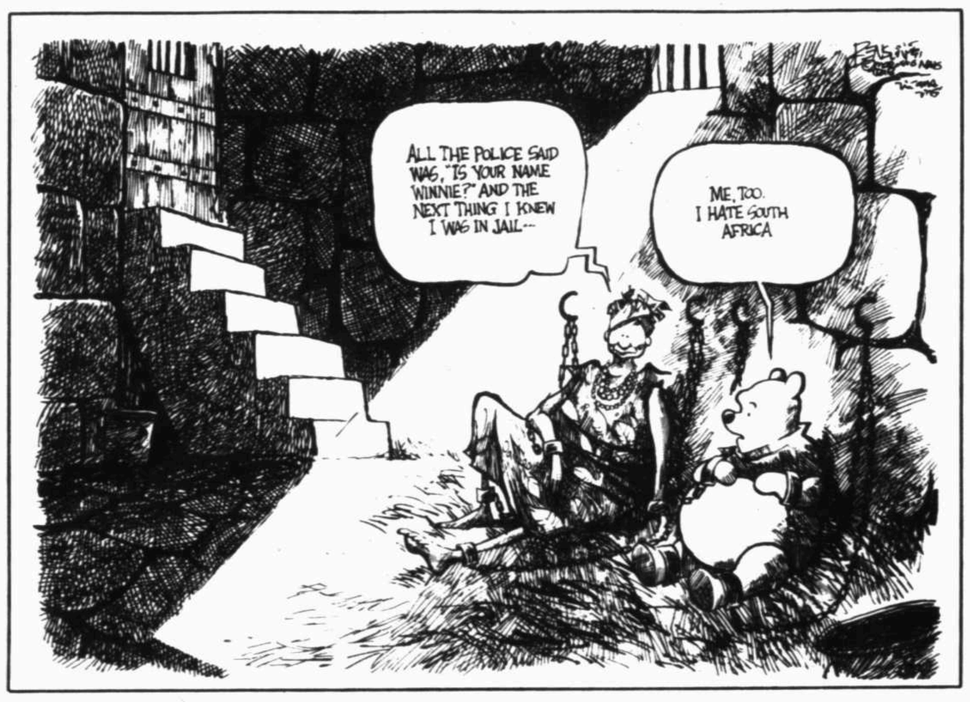

But few realize the Pentagon has a new pecking order for this excess equipment. It is first offered to all military units, then to Pennsylvania and needy foreign governments. Everyone else gets leftovers.

Despite the dubious manner in which it became law, Kanjorski's project carries the seeds of a sound idea. Kanjorski may understand how states can better use the massive military surplus that often otherwise winds up selling at auction as scrap.

The Pennsylvania equipment center glories in comparing itself to Benjamin Franklin's concept of a book library. Its brochure credits Kanjorski with the vision to create an "equipment library."

Last year, the regional center received surplus equipment that cost the Pentagon about $3 million. The center's entire laundry list includes 30 backhoes, 25 dump trucks, 20 garbage trucks and 17 cranes. Kanjorski claims the wish list will barely dent the surplus stockpile.

GEORGE WILL

'Dysfunctional' poor require rehabilitation

NEW YORK — The crumbling — fiscal, social, even physical — of this city is stirring complaints about the ineffectual Mayor Dinkins and longings for a man on horseback, some savior riding to the rescue, wielding power like a sword. New York, like many other cities, needs a man on horseback, but not that sort. It needs John Wesley.

Will

So says Roger Starr, veteran of this city's governmental, commercial, journalistic and academic life. Starr sees resemblances between New York now and 18th-century London.

Then industrialism was uprooting villagers, sucking them into cities where many succumbed to a new form of an old drug — gin. It was as devastating as crack has been. London had 17,000 gin shops: penny a shot, two-pence for a full glass, another penny for a straw sack for drunken slumber. Wesley, who tirelessly (250,000 miles) rode Britain's rural roads and city streets, evangelized the underclass, exhorting pride and combatting family disintegration by reforming behavior.

Starr's suggestion about a Wesley is shorthand for a spreading belief: Reduction of poverty requires restoration of the moral environment in which the poor live. This idea is developed in two articles in The Public Interest.

Joel Schwartz, executive editor of that quarterly, says the challenge is to energize the passive, "dysfunctional" poor to take responsibility for themselves — to work, marry, obey the law. This emphasis departs from contemporary liberalism's agenda, which locates poverty's cause in the social environment rather than personal behavior.

Resistance to policies aimed at "remoralizing" the non-working poor comes primarily from elites who regard such efforts as "blaming the victim." But Schwartz says the nature of the underclass refutes the left's theories that "bourgeois" virtues (sobriety, industry, thrift) are overrated, that solidarity with the poor precludes making distinctions among them (between the "deserving" poor and others), and that sterile conformity among the poor is a more pressing urban danger than disorder and degeneracy.

Lawrence Mead, New York University professor of politics, argues that today's underclass poverty stems less from an absence of opportunity in society than from the inability or reluctance of individuals to seize it. In previous arguments about poverty, liberals and conservatives agreed that available employment opportunities would be seized by the poor. Today the passivity of the non-working poor disproves that and discomforts liberals who are most comfortable advocating government redistributions of wealth and opportunity.

The new anti-poverty "politics of conduct" focuses on behavior characteristic of the "culture of poverty" rather than on removing social barriers. The flood of new immigrants, especially Asians, into the job market shows that opportunity still exists. The fact that the longest boom in American history did not reduce poverty below 13 percent, Mead says, supports the belief that demoralization, not impersonal impediments, explain the non-working poor.

Most Americans deny that the poverty of people who fail to take available jobs is the fault of society's failure to expand opportunity. Hence, says Mead, social policy has moved from structural reform toward paternalism–Schwartz's "remoralization."

Unlike during the Depression, today's focus is on troubled individuals and groups rather than troubled industries, agriculture or labor-management relations. The emphasis is on reform of behavior, and the inculcation of basic social competence, rather than manipulation of the economy. Thus the stress on youth, whose behavior is most malleable.

The bleak alternative is the sterility of "dependency politics." It features middle-class liberals demanding for the passive poor a right to permanent support, unconnected with performance in the marketplace, based on past injuries rather than anticipated contributions.

We now need paternalistic policies to practice the "politics of conduct" on, and on behalf of, the non-working poor. They are, Mead says, "depressed but dutiful, willing to observe mainstream norms like work if only government will enforce them."

Such policies, reinforced by a cohort of contemporary Wesleys–does anyone have a better idea?

Stop scent squad before it sprays again

It's happening more and more. Whenever I go into a department store, I have to run the gauntlet of beautiful models spraying perfume at me. I feel as if I am being attacked with fragrant-smelling Mace.

Art Buchwald

These people do not work for the store but are employed by the various perfume houses who obviously hope that after dousing you with the perfume, you'll buy barrels of it for a loved one, or use it to attract somebody who could be.

This is what took place the other day. I walked into the main entrance of Dumbold and Klein when a most attractive model yelled, "Stop, or I'll fill you full of Thinning Ozone."

"Don't shoot," I begged. "I'll do anything you want me to, providing it's almost within the law."

"I'm going to slosh your wrist, but I must warn you that Ozone has been known to drive men into fits of passion, from which there is no return."

"Don't do it," I said. "I have an appointment with my dentist this afternoon, and he gets upset when I wiggle in the chair."

As the model raised her bottle, another young woman raced up with her flacon and sprayed me first.

The Ozone lady erupted in anger. "He was mine," she cried. "I had him in my atomizer as soon as he walked through the door."

"Baloney. He was standing in the neutral zone," the second declared. "Anyone's fair game in the aisle next to the costume jewelry counter."

"What did you spray on me?" I demanded to know.

"It's called Designated Lover. The person who wears this will never have to go home alone."

"Don't believe her," the Ozone lady whispered.

"Her perfume is made from recycled cabbage leaves. It will drive away the one you love."

The other saleslady said to her, "If Designated Lover wasn't the most costly perfume in the Western world, I'd spill it all over your pantyhose."

I didn't know what would happen next. Then I looked around and saw eight beautiful women, all with tasseled atomizers, coming toward me. I was surrounded.

"Please," I pleaded. "Don't spray. My wife will never believe me when I explain to her why I smell like the Philadelphia Madam."

One lady said, "I'm going to spray Naked Panda on your earlobe. Tell me what you think."

"I can't hear you if spray perfume in my ear," I told her.

A model stepped forward holding a Gucci scarf.

"What's that for?"

"We're going to put you against the wall and give you a smell test."

"Can I at least have a last cigarette?"

"Smoking is not allowed in the store."

I heard a voice say, "Ready, aim, fire."

A dozen squirts of perfume hit my face, my chest and my arms.

Only then did they take the blindfold off and allow me to buy a pair of socks, which is what I went into the store for in the first place.

■ Schwarzkopf praises gulf war cooperation

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — The Army's biggest hero of the Persian Gulf war, Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, told the 146th graduating class of the U.S. Naval Academy on Wednesday that interservice cooperation had been instrumental in defeating Iraq.

Addressing more than 25,000 spectators and midshipmen in sweltering Navy-Marine Corps Memorial Stadium, where the Army's name is usually mud or worse, the commander of all American forces in the gulf war lauded the Navy's efforts and noted that the conflict had been marked by teamwork instead of the rivalries that split the services in past wars.

"Even though we allow ourselves to hate each other a little bit a few hours each year on the fields of friendly strife, we sailed to victory in Desert Storm as members of an unstoppable joint team," he said.

The speech by Schwarzkopf was the first commencement address at the Naval Academy by an Army general on active duty, although the address has been delivered by retired Army generals, including President Dwight D. Eisenhower.

He reeled off a list of "firsts" for the Navy in the crisis, ranging from the first service to respond to Iraq's invasion of Kuwait on Aug. 2 — with an aircraft carrier and its attack planes — to the first wartime launching of Tomahawk cruise missiles from ships and submarines.

The Naval Academy on Wednesday graduated 936 midshipmen, including 77 women and one student each from Colombia, Egypt, Jordan, Peru, South Korea and the United Arab Emirates. This was the 11th year the Academy had graduated female midshipmen.

■ Prosecutors seek AIDS test on Smith

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — Prosecutors asked a judge Wednesday to order an AIDS test for William Kennedy Smith, who is charged with raping a woman at the Kennedy estate.

Assistant State Attorney Moira Lasch filed the motion in Palm Beach County Circuit Court a day after Palm Beach police released genetic test results that indicate Smith did have sex with the woman who accused him of rape, the Sun-Sentinel in Fort Lauderdale reported.

Prosecutors routinely make such requests when asked by an alleged rape victim, and judges usually approve the test, the newspaper said.

■ Study: Fewer top students earn degrees

WASHINGTON — More of the top 25 percent of high-school graduates headed for college in 1980 than in 1972, but fewer actually earned a degree, according to a study which tracked both groups for seven years.

The Educational Testing Service said that 71 percent of the high-school seniors who scored in the top quarter on standardized tests in 1980 went on to college, compared to 65 percent of the same group in 1972. But just 49 percent of the 1980 sample received bachelor's degrees, compared to 51 percent for the 1972 contingent, the ETS said.

In both cases, 12 percent went on to enroll in college graduate courses.

"Our pipeline to produce top talent is leaking," said ETS President Gregory R. Anrig in releasing the study, which also compared the academic achievements of American students, ranging from fourth-graders to doctoral candidates, to those of other industrialized nations.

And it found that "our top students often have such unremarkable achievement" by global standards, Anrig said.

Among 13-year-olds tested in 1988, only 9.2 percent of the Americans registered the scientific knowledge matched by 40 percent of their counterparts in Korea, 23.8 percent in British Columbia and 18.4 percent in the United Kingdom, the report said.

The ETS, the nation's largest testing organization, based in Princeton, N.J., said the data showed that only 13 percent of the eighth graders sampled in 1988 can "understand basic historical relationships." In high school, just 6 percent had writing skills rated beyond "adequate" or "minimal."

■ Stairs, sports most dangerous to health

WASHINGTON — Falls on stairs sent nearly 1 million Americans to hospital emergency rooms last year. Sports activities also proved dangerous, with basketball injuries alone accounting for more than 640,000 hospital visits, new safety figures show.

The statistics, to be released next week by the Consumer Product Safety Commission, track injuries sustained in a number of areas, ranging from roller skating to non-professional athletics.

Commission researchers provided the statistics Wednesday in response to queries from The Associated Press.

The CPSC figures show that 998,906 people were treated in emergency rooms after they were injured in falls on steps and stairwells.

About 43 percent of them were in the 25-64 age range. The second largest group, those age 65 years old and older, comprised nearly 14 percent of the injuries. Children 5-14 accounted for about 12 percent, those 15 through 24 had 18 percent and the remaining 13 percent involved children under age 5.

The accidents are caused by a variety of factors, he said, ranging from women getting their high-heeled shoes caught in carpets covering stairs to depth perception problems in older people.

■ Businessman buys Rajneesh commune

THE DALLES, Ore. — The 64,000-acre ranch that served as world headquarters for Indian guru Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh in the 1980s, complete with its own airport, 140-room hotel and shopping mall, has a new owner.

Dennis Washington, a Montana businessman, refused to say how much he paid for the property when he announced the sale Tuesday, but he said he might turn it into a true cattle ranch.

The Rajneesh sect bought the arid, sagebrush-covered Big Muddy Ranch for $6 million in 1981. Leaders said they pumped more than $100 million into it to create the massive commune they called Rajneeshpuram.

It was abandoned after the guru was deported in 1985 for immigration violations. The white-bearded Rajneesh, who called himself the rich man's guru, died in Pune, India last year at age 58.

Hospital's indigent-care coffers empty

■ MCHD is $2 million short in its operation of programs for the needy, and charges to paying patients will make up the difference, Bruner says.

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Predictably, the Midland County Hospital District is again out of money for indigent care long before the fiscal year ends.

Pittman

And, once again, revenues from paying patients at Midland's Memorial Hospital and Medical Center will make up the $2 million shortfall, noted Tom Bruner, ex-president of the district's seven-member board of directors.

The hospital budgeted $7.8-million for indigent care for the 1991 fiscal year that ends Sept. 30 but anticipated only $6.1 million in revenue based on a 15-cent tax rate per $100 valuation. But not all of that projected revenue has been collected by the Midland Central Appraisal District. And while more tax funds will be coming in for indigent care, they will not cover charges.

After treating more than 4,500 non-paying poor patients in seven months at a cost exceeding $4.5 million, the hospital's indigent-care coffers are empty.

The deficit-laden indigent care situation was outlined Wednesday by Jim Kendrick, the hospital's senior vice president for finance.

The shortfall condition matches the statewide budget situation, noted Midland County Court-at-Law Judge Al Walvoord, at the board meeting to swear in new and re-elected members.

6th graders celebrate graduating from DARE

■ Students make 'joyful noise' at ceremony attended by police officers and Clayton Williams.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Even Midland police officers dared to have fun when Wednesday's sixth grade DARE graduation took on a celebratory mood.

DARE (Drug Abuse Resistance Education) officers donned "shades" and formed a dance line on stage during a bluesy number performed by the Christian rock band Advocate.

The officers performed — much to the delight of hundreds of screaming sixth graders — as rock and roll filled the Holiday Inn Convention Country Villa.

Pupils clapped, formed human "waves," and followed the admonition of an Advocate band member to "rattle their vocal chords until the roof falls in."

Officer David Beatty thanked Advocate for "setting the tone."

"This is a celebration of your commitment to live your life without drugs and alcohol," Beatty said.

Moments of jubilation, however, were tempered with serious a note when former Republican Gubernatorial Candidate Clayton Williams Jr. declared that his son "was a druggie."

Williams, the keynote speaker of the event, said, "My boy is a druggie. He is in jail today in a boot camp. He started with beer, marijuana and LSD. He gave away — unless he fights to regain it — a bright future."

Williams encouraged the youngsters to have fun without drugs and alcohol and to put the drug dealers out of business.

"I have had the best time. I have laid pipeline, drilled wells, punched cows, killed a lion and a leopard," Williams said. "I finished grade school, high school, and I even finished going to a university called Texas A&M. When you graduate there is just one major obstacle in your way — drugs."

Williams advised the students to "trust in the Lord and stay off drugs."

Grand jury indicts Hale for burglary

By David Morris
Staff Writer

ODESSA — An Ector County grand jury indicted former Glenwood Psychiatric Hospital administrator Bryan Allen Hale for burglary of a habitation Wednesday, Ector County officials reported.

If convicted, he could face up to 99 years or life in prison and up to a $10,000 fine.

Meanwhile, court officials in Midland said Hale's trial on federal charges of receiving child pornography has been tentatively set for July 16.

Hale, 47, is being held without bond at the Midland County Central Detention Facility. Federal court officials said Wednesday that results of a psychiatric evaluation to determine his competency to stand trial have not yet been made public.

Ector County Assistant District Attorney Mike Griffin said Hale's arraignment on the burglary indictment is tentatively scheduled for June 17 in 244th District Court.

Hale is accused of breaking into the home of Glenwood Community Relations Manager Marilee Anne Kyler, 4637 Summerset Lane, last March and stealing some documents.

Pretrial testimony has indicated that the papers included notes Ms. Kyler was keeping about Hale to use in support of a possible sexual

A U.S. magistrate ordered a woman accused of robbing an Odessa bank last week held without bond following a detention hearing Wednesday in U.S. District Court in Midland.

Judge Robert R. Sykes also ordered the woman, 39-year-old Karen Lynn Lopez of Odessa, to undergo a psychiatric evaluation to determine her competency to stand trial and whether she was sane at the time of the robbery.

Odessa police arrested Ms. Lopez last Thursday morning after she allegedly stole $3,000 from the Bank One Motor Bank at 3800 E.

Brenda Hansler, Odessa Chamber of Commerce, views a historical marker honoring the late John Ben Shepperd.

Shepperd's papers donated to UTPB

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Personal papers of the late civic leader John Ben Shepperd were officially donated to the University of Texas at the Permian Basin at a ceremony Wednesday afternoon.

"John Ben Shepperd was living proof of his philosophy: One person can make a difference," Texas Attorney General Dan Morales told a group of about 150 attending the dedication.

"The honorable John Ben Shepperd made a meaningful difference to this community and this state," Morales said of his predecessor as the state's chief lawyer.

Shepperd, who died in March 1990 at the age of 74, held the position of Texas secretary of state and Texas attorney general, both in the 1950s.

Among many accomplishments on the local level, Shepperd, who thought he could be more effective in public service as a private citizen, was instrumental in the establishment of UTPB and was director of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce.

Some of his public papers — of historical and academic importance — which date as far back as 1947 make up the 300 boxes donated, according to Travis Woodward, UTPB spokeswoman.

Shepperd's widow, Mamie Shepperd, who attended the ceremony with family members, friends and associates, said she and her late husband had discussed donating some of the papers to UTPB.

"A lot of the papers have to do with West Texas. We lived here for 33 years and he put a lot of energy into the university," Mrs. Shepperd said.

Included in the donation ceremony, a John Ben Shepperd historical marker was unveiled and Thomas E. Rodman, representing the Heritage of Odessa Foundation, paid tribute to

Wildflowers soothing sight along country roads

If highways scar the landscape, and they do, then roadside wildflowers soothe the wounds.

Todd

Springtime traveling in Texas, especially for the weary sojourner, is enlivened by the lavenders, the reds, the blues, the oranges, the yellows, the purples, the pinks, the greens, the whites and all the shades and hues of wildflowers.

Like Halley's comet, rainbows after a downpour, Venus in the western sky, and sunrises and sunsets day after day, wildflowers grace wherever their aura spreads.

And there is much off the road to refresh the spirits.

Behind an old rock house on the outskirts of downtown Bowie, a trumpet vine surely creeps up the wooden frame of an old Aeromotor windmill behind Spec and Willie Mae Dodson's rock house — their home for 50-odd years.

The vine is there because it belongs there. The towering creeper must have taken over after the old windmill froze up and ceased responding to the whims of the wind.

Up the road apiece, on a hill near Decatur, a colorful cloth mannequin slumps over a grassy strip between the road and fence. Behind the fence is an old farm. Time has weathered the barn, the house, and the old farmer who, now well into his 80s, lives in town.

The stuffed mannequin, unlike the old man and the wildflowers along the roadside, attracts roadside traffic to a "pasture sale" of dated household farm stuff.

The old farmer, like the mannequin, is bent, slumping, but on the homestead side of the barbed-wire fence. He is positioned right in the middle of the sale, under a shade, watching the goings-on.

"Young fellow," he asks a friendly stranger, "do you know how to get a cow out of a pasture?"

Well, yes, I told him. My granddaddy farmed cotton, raised some Jersey dairy cows, and slopped a pen full of hogs expressly raised for use in the kitchen and on the dinner table once they were through squealing and were dressed out and well cooked.

I have chased after cows and heifers in East Texas pastures. Bulls, more steadfast and more easily riled, don't cotton to being followed about. They will do the chasing if any is to be done. Mostly, the cows didn't need rounding up. Quite naturally, they head for the dairy barn twice daily, before sunup and at dusk, to feed. I don't known if milking was ever on their agenda, but they got milked, first by hand and, in later years, by machine, while they where locked in stalls. About all the cows did was just stand there, eat, swish their tails at flies and at the milker, who was either grandmother, granddaddy or, later on, the milking machine. Occasionally, they'd bawl and kick.

The old man, across from the slumped mannequin, seems intent on getting his lost cow out of his neighbor's pasture.

He doesn't move; he just sits there.

"My cow," he says, "got out and got into my neighbor's pasture. Would you help me get her back?"

"Why, sure," says I, not knowing if I should or shouldn't or exactly how to handle an old cow whose temperament is, to me, an unknown.

Before the old man and I could amble over to another pasture, his daughter, catching the drift of our brief conversation, drifts over toward us.

"Daddy thinks he still has cattle," she whispers to me. "He doesn't. He imagines his cows get loose and out of the pasture every now and then."

It seems, after he sold his cattle, the old farmer got to wandering around and off the farm and worried the family. So, the family moved him into town. Occasionally, he returns to the farm to sit and look and wander. It is a familiar and a comfortable place.

"What did you say?" the old farmer asks his daughter after she, in her kindness, tells me that he has no stray cattle. No cattle at all. Not any more.

The watchful daughter says something sweet to her father, talks about the farm, and says that he no longer has any cattle to round up.

"Oh," he murmurs somewhat sadly, and then succumbs to another dream.

Long after the old farmer has faded into the sunset, and long after the old windmill is consumed by the trumpet vines and even after the windmill, too, has turned into dust, the wildflowers, somewhere, will be blooming at springtime and consoling the scarred landscape and soothing the hurts of all who revel in their quiet beauty.

MCHD: Funds needed for indigent care with Texas Attorney General Dan Morales, quoted Morales on Texas' hard economic times.

"Don't look for any help from the state," Walvoord cautioned. "You folks have your work cut out for you."

Walvoord swore in newly elected board member, Jean Pittman, who was elected secretary of the board and adminstered the oath of office to re-elected directors Dr. Stephen Wiesenfeld, Margaret Williams and the Rev. Sylvester Ferguson. The board re-elected Ms. Williams as board vice president, and elected Weisenfeld as president. Judy Farris, administrative assistant to MHMC President Ray Branson, was elected assistant secretary.

In the recent hospital-board election campaigns, critics of the current board had faulted the hospital for trying to make a "profit" off of indigent care and for not charging indigent-care "at-cost" charges.

However, to overcome the indigent-care deficit in future years and to drop property taxes to 15-cents per $100 valuation from $16.62 cents, the board is studying a proposed quarter-cent sales tax for indigent-care relief.

But to be implemented, the sales tax must first be approved by the Legislature and by voters if the hospital board calls for a sales-tax election.

A quarter-cent sales tax would bring in an additional $2.2 million, noted Bruner. In the meantime, a drop in ad valorem taxes to the 15-cent level, originally set in 1977 when the hospital district was created to raise funds for indigent care, would cut revenues by about $500,000, Bruner reckoned.

"As happens every year," Bruner said, "we have used up all of the district's funds for care" of indigent patients.

"From this point on," Bruner said, "the patient still receives the care, but the hospital is not reimbursed by the district or its taxpayers. For that reason, we have a shortfall of about $2 million in this year's operations that have to be paid for from hospital revenues. And those, of course, come from patient charges."

Prenatal and pediatric indigent-care costs are expected to be dramatically reduced later this year when the hospital opens its Delano Street clinic where treatment would far less expensive than patients' reporting to the hospital's emergency room for non-acute and non-traumatic illnesses and conditions.

The board, too, formally adopted a policy to restrict medical treatment for indigents. Disease-preventative vaccinations are covered by the indigent-care program.

"We will not provide cosmetic surgery," noted Bruner. Among other excluded treatments are elective sterilization and elective abortion, prosthetic devices, hearing aids, eyeglasses, gastric stapling and intestinal bypass to counteract obesity, most rehabilitation services, and non-emergency psychiatric treatment.

"Treatment for obesity would certainly be a healthy thing," Bruner said, "but we don't think the taxpayers ought to pay for obesity programs.

"The district does not pay for those treatments that are not acute" and that are not emergency-type treatments, Bruner said. "If they are in the ambulance, they are going to emergency room. I'll guarantee you."

WEST TEXAS IN BRIEF

Runway resurfacing to begin next year

Staff Reports

A resurfacing project on Midland International Airport's east-west runway is set to begin next year now that federal grant money is in hand, an airport spokeswoman said Wednesday.

U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm announced that the Federal Aviation Administration had awarded the city of Midland a $1.5 million grant for the project.

The grant will fund 90 percent of the $1.6 million project, while the city will pay about $162,000.

"These are preliminary costs," airport spokeswoman Marcy Blauvelt said. "We do not have construction bids yet."

Ms. Blauvelt said construction on the 8,300-foot runway will begin in the summer of 1992 and take three to four months to complete.

Bids on the project will be accepted sometime next spring, she said.

Commercial air traffic during the construction period will use the 9,500-foot, north-south runway, where a resurfacing project was completed two weeks ago, Ms. Blauvelt said.

The FAA paid $1.5 million of that $1.7 million project, while the city footed about $180,000 of the cost.

Ms. Blauvelt said the city is working on an application for a $6 million FAA grant for a project to extend the 8,300-foot runway by 1,000 feet.

Scholarships given

Five Midland National Merit Scholars were awarded university merit scholarships.

James Blaylock of Lee High School was awarded the scholarship from Texas A&M University. Burr Vogel, another LHS student, was awarded the scholarship from the University of Texas at Austin.

Three Midland High School students were awarded the university merit scholarships. Sharon Overton and Matthew Renick were awarded scholarships from Texas A&M University in College Station. Brandt Jordan was awarded the scholarship from Johns Hopkins University.

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Cyclist dies

Staff Reports

An Odessa man involved in a motorcycle accident in Midland on May 18 died at Midland Memorial Hospital on Wednesday, police reported.

Richard Wayne Nelson, 27, suffered a crushed skull and both arms and legs broken after the 1985 Honda motorcycle he was driving collided with a 1988 Ford Tempo about 11 p.m in the 3500 block of Andrews Highway.

According to police reports, Nelson was travelling west on the highway when he collided with the car, driven by Lisa Perez Moreno, 26, who was attempting to turn left onto Golf Course Road.

No citations were issued, police said.

Shooting

A man was transported to Memorial Hospital and Medical Center shortly after 11 p.m. Wednesday following a shooting in the 4500 block of Anetta Drive.

Police said they had a male suspect in custody at the 4518 Anetta residence where the shooting occurred.

A semi-automatic handgun was recovered at the scene, but other details, including the descriptions and identities of the parties involved, were not available from officers at the scene at press time.

Store robberies

Law enforcement officials believe two recent convenience store robberies may have been committed by the same people, a Crime Stoppers official said.

In both incidents, one of the robbers was armed with a tire iron.

The most recent incident occurred May 22 at the 7-Eleven store, 13920 W. Highway 80. Three black men, one armed with a revolver and another with a tire iron, robbed the store of an undisclosed amount of cash.

Law enforcement officials believe two of those men may have also robbed the Phillips 66 gas station and convenience store at 3006 Garden City Highway on March 29.

In that incident, two black men in their 20s, one with a tire iron, robbed the store of an undisclosed amount of cash. During the robbery, two clerks were struck with the tire tool and required hospitalization.

Odessan jailed

A 20-year-old Odessa man remained jailed Wednesday following his arrest Tuesday afternoon for distribution of one kilogram of cocaine, federal law enforcement officials said.

Edilberto Quiroz Leyva made an initial appearance before a U.S. magistrate Wednesday and a motion to detain was granted. A detention hearing was set for Friday.

Leyva was arrested at the Motel 6, 200 Interstate 20, about 1 p.m. Wednesday after trying to sell the drug to an Odessa police officer working in conjunction with the Drug Enforcement Agency, police said.

Attempted arson

Fire officials were investigating a case of attempted arson where a Molotov coctail was lobbed at the door of an unoccupied house Wednesday night, officials said.

The makeshift incendiary bomb caused light damage to the door of the house located at 105 E. Dakota Ave.

Firefighters quickly doused the blaze that began about 9:40 p.m.

The home was apparently newly renovated and for rent, officials at the scene said.

No one was arrested in connection with the incident.

officers was evident as students cheered each officer who took the microphone.

Students gave a rousing standing ovation to Officer Phyllis Blair, who replied, "I love you, too."

Pupils from Crockett, Pease, South and Travis elementary schools received certificates for completing the sixth grade DARE course.

Some students from each school received stuffed animals as prizes for winning essays they wrote about the DARE program.

Cody Brown of Crockett was awarded a bicycle, provided by Wal-Mart, for writing the top essay overall. In his essay Cody said that he had been offered drugs for the first time this year and "cold shoulder" tactics he learned in the program helped him to refuse the drugs.

Sheriff Gary Painter presented a $5,000 check to Police Chief Richard Czech to fund the DARE program. The funds were raised by the Midland County Sheriff's Department and the Midland County Volunteer Fire Fighters Association at the April basketball game attended by the Houston Oilers NFL football team.

"We would have won," Painter told students, "except the Oilers showed up."

"In the war on drugs," Painter added, "you need a lot of soldiers. The DARE program is producing a lot of soldiers."

The Travis Elementary School Choir sang, "Somewhere Out There" and "Lean On Me," which brought tears to the eyes of several parents in the audience.

"It is possible to get through school without drugs," said Advocate guitarist Steve Pruitt. "I went through 12 years of public school and I never tried drugs or alcohol. You can have fun without it."

Linda Clark, parent of one of the sixth graders, said, "These kids really respect the officers and the program has taught them a lot about peer pressure. The only problem with the DARE program is that we didn't have it sooner."

INDICT: Hale charged with burglaryof habitation harassment lawsuit against him.

The papers, which reportedly disappeared while Ms. Kyler was out of town between March 29 and April 1, were later found among documents seized by U.S. Customs agents April 8 while they were executing a search warrant at Hale's Glenwood office.

The documents were described in an arrest warrant affidavit as "two notes, a memo card with phone number, a florist card and note written by Bryan Allen Hale to her."

"The two notes were made by herself (Ms. Kyler) in regard to the behavior of her employer, Bryan Allen Hale...," the affidavit goes on to say. "The note written by Hale was left for her at work, and she had taken it home."

Ms. Kyler, who filed the burglary charges against Hale April 12, testified last week during a detention hearing that she thought Hale was stalking her 13-year-old daughter.

U.S. Customs agents arrested Hale after finding a videotape entitled "Educating Valerie" in his office during the same search that uncovered the supposedly stolen documents.

The arrest followed a three-month undercover investigation in which a person believed to be Hale, using the pseudonym "Ready Man," purchased the tape from Florida Customs agents via a computerized bulletin board system.

A federal grand jury indicted Hale for receiving the tape, which reportedly depicts a 10-year-old girl engaging in sexual activity with her father. The same grand jury also indicted Hale for receiving photocopies of a magazine entitled "Lolita" that reportedly contains child pornography and for sending obscene material through the mail.

Receiving child pornography carries a maximum punishment of 10 years in prison and a $250,000 fine. Sending obscene material through the mail carries a maximum penalty of five years and a $250,000 fine.

Hale has been replaced at Glenwood.

Andrews woman dies in accident

Staff Report

ANDREWS — An 82-year-old Andrews woman died from injuries sustained in a two-car accident Tuesday, police officials reported.

Neva Porter died Tuesday night at Permian General Hospital after the 1980 Mercury she was driving about 11:30 a.m. collided with another car, went through a fence and came to rest in the yard of a mobile home.

According to police reports, Ms. Porter was eastbound on Southeast Avenue B, when she either failed to see a stop sign or accidently accelerated instead of braking at the intersection of Southeast Mustang Drive.

Before crashing through the fence, Ms. Porter's car struck a 1989 Ford pickup driven by Al Stewart, 58, of Andrews. Stewart escaped major injury with minor bruises.

UTPB: School gets papers of Shepperd

(From 1B)

Shepperd. He and Shepperd were partners for 33 years in the Odessa law firm of Shepperd & Rodman.

Shepperd was responsible for creating Texas' official highway historical markers during his chairmanship of the Texas Historical Commission in the early 1960s.

Shepperd's place in the university is more than the marker that bears his name, Rodman said.

"Look around the university here to see a living monument of John Ben Shepperd," Rodman said.

Duane M. Leach, UTPB president, who acted as master of ceremonies at the dedication, also spoke of the everlasting presence of Shepperd at the school.

"Today the university becomes the public depository for the papers of John Ben Shepperd," Leach said, adding that the dedication was particularly fitting 17 days after Gov. Ann Richards signed a bill making UTPB a four-year school.

The historic papers will be housed in a fourth floor suite at the university, Ms. Woodward said. The university archivist will catalog the papers which will be available to the public by appointment only, Woodward said.

"Perhaps the greatest legacy of his is yet to come," Morales said of the inspiration Shepperd has left behind.

House rejects efforts to erase SSC funding

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House rejected efforts Wednesday to kill the super collider, tossing aside claims that the $8.25 billion atom smasher was a "tunnel of debt" and a Texas Gila monster snapping up "every federal dollar in sight."

By a vote of 251-165, the House defeated an amendment that would have stripped $434 million for the superconducting super collider from a $21.5 billion energy and water spending bill.

The Illinois congressional delegation also backed away Wednesday from efforts to strip the SSC of $43.5 million and put the money into Fermi National Accelerator Laboratory outside Chicago.

SSC supporters said they finalized a deal early Wednesday with the Illinois lawmakers to take $10 million out of the science budget and pump it into research for a new injector at Fermilab. The deal averted a fight on the floor between the powerful Illinois and Texas congressional delegations.

The House Appropriations Committee had already stripped $100 million from President Bush's $534 million request for the collider, which is being built in Texas. The Energy Department has warned that the cuts could cause costly delays and jeopardize foreign contributions.

Opponents who sought to kill the SSC entirely criticized it as a "dollar-gobbler" and a "gourmand of federal dollars" and said it would cost far more than the Energy Department estimates while siphoning money from other research.

Supporters countered that the SSC was the most scrutinized federal project in history, with the potential for spinoffs in cancer and other medical research, electronics, transportation, fiber optics, data processing and energy.

The State

Rep. Tom Bevill, D-Ala., said not proceeding with the SSC would turn the United States into a "Third World" in the realm of science.

The SSC, a 54-mile ring to be burrowed under Central Texas farmland, would be the world's largest scientific instrument, designed to accelerate beams of protons to nearly the speed of light before they collide with an energy of 40 trillion electron volts.

Scientist hope to discover new subatomic particles in a bid to unravel mysteries about basic matter and the origin of the universe.

"The SSC will help scientists answer fundamental questions about our universe that have been asked since the beginning of civilization: What are we made of? What is matter? How did the universe begin. Will it ever end?," said Rep. Jim McCrery, R-La.

But Rep. Richard Durbin, D-Ill., said the massive investment needed to build the collider could kill spending on new projects and begin taking money out of the operating budgets of other federal laboratories.

"This Texas Gila monster with a 54-mile tail snaps up every federal dollar in sight," Durbin said. "If we hang on to the super collider, with an unknown price tag, we are going to see ... the majority of new federal dollars heading toward this one project."

Rep. Sherwood Boehlert, R-N.Y., a co-sponsor of the amendment to kill all federal spending on the collider in 1992, criticized the Energy Department for repeatedly misleading Congress about construction costs.

Another co-sponsor, Rep. Jim Slattery, D-Kan., said the collider's actual cost is projected to reach $11.8 billion or more, and that it offers only limited potential for technical spinoffs.

"The costs of the SSC are too high and its benefits too uncertain for the SSC to be a responsible recipient of America's limited research dollars," Slattery said.

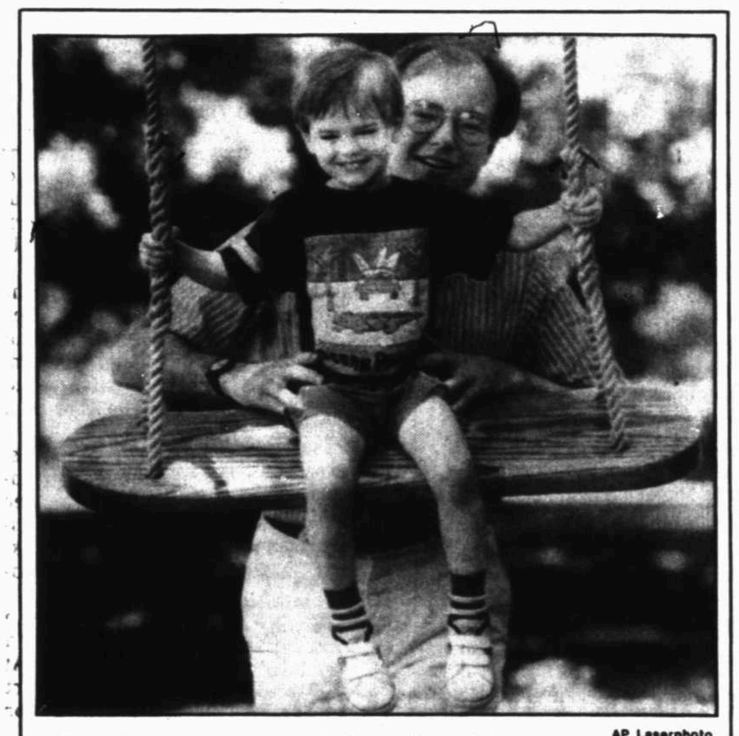

But Rep. Pete Geren, D-Fort Worth, said the collider was the "most reviewed, researched, scrubbed-down, scrubbed-up scientific project in the history of this country."

And Rep. Joe Barton, R-Ennis, whose district includes the SSC site, said the project was being built on time and under budget.

"If we're going to be a world leader (in scientific research) we've got to pay the ante to get into the game and the ante in this case is $534 million this year for the SSC, which has already been cut by $100 million," Barton said.

Rep. James A. Traficant Jr., D-Ohio, defended the collider against attack from House members who had supported the collider when their states were still in the running to win the giant atom smasher.

"There's more political gas today colliding than any item that would collider in the great project," said Traficant. "Today it's about political hypocrisy."

GOP officicals tour 1992 convention site

HOUSTON (AP) — Republican National Committee Chairman Clayton Yeutter stood on second base at the Houston Astrodome Wednesday to get the view from where the GOP will nominate its next presidential candidate.

Yeutter and GOP Convention Manager Bill Harris joined Harris County Judge Jon Lindsay and Houston Sports Association vice president John Elsner on a tour of the Astrodome to review the facilities for the 1992 Republican National Convention.

"This is my first chance to really look the facility over," Yeutter told reporters after the tour. "I was here for the Economic Summit (last summer), so I saw some of it at that time. But this is my initial opportunity to really evaluate the space situation."

Lindsay said Yeutter's visit was planned for him "to look over our facilities and maybe give us some direction on what he'd like to see happen at the convention next year."

Yeutter said the Republican National Committee will visit Houston next month for a few days to continue the review. He said the group includes the state chairmen, state national committeemen, state national committee women from each of the 50 states as well as the executive director from the Republican Party.

"We're delighted with what we've seen thus far," Yeutter said. "Lots of excellent space here. We'll need to get it configured properly to meet our needs, but we see no reason why that shouldn't happen."

Yeutter said the GOP plans to use about 60 percent of the Astrodome for seating about 42,000 delegates and other visitors. Some 5,000 delegates will be seated on the floor of the Astrodome.

A 70- to 95-foot-long curtain will be stretched in a line that crosses second base to provide a background for the stage area and cordon off the seating, he said.

The Astroturf will be rolled up and put away for nearly a month in 1992 to prepare for the Aug. 17-20 convention.

Harris said the Astrohall Arena adjacent to the Astrodome and the George R. Brown Convention Center in downtown Houston also will be used during the convention.

Blacks protest shooting by police

AMARILLO (AP) — Protests over the death of a black man fatally shot by Amarillo police is a 'spillover' from the widely publicized and controversial incident involving a black man and the Los Angeles police department, Amarillo's police chief says.

About 20 black citizens picketed Tuesday outside the Amarillo Police Department to protest the May 4 shooting of Foubert Lawrence "Sloan" Harris by Amarillo police officer Bruce Anderson.

"What we're seeing is a spillover from the Los Angeles police brutality incident, where a handful of officers beat up a black man," Police Chief Jerry Neal said. "I don't think it's fair to stereotype all police, all officers as being like them."

Neal said the Potter-Randall Special Crimes Unit found Harris was intoxicated, resisted arrest and tried to choke Anderson on the night that Harris was killed during a scuffle. Harris was shot three times, records showed.

Protester Joe Jiles said Harris could have been the victim of police brutality.

"My concern is that the policeman did not have to shoot the man three times," Jiles said. "The police are not doing the black community right, and we have a long way to go to bring equality and justice. I know there's a lot of prejudice by the police against the black community."

He said the demonstrations would continue until justice is served.

Potter County grand jurors reviewed the shooting and declined to indict Anderson.

Another protester, Jo Stein, said she thought police covered up the incident and harassed the victim's family members.

"We picketed the Paramount and Esquire theaters in the '60s and we're back 30 years later picketing for equality," Ms. Stein said.

Neal said police never harassed members of the Harris family.

'City slicker' paramedic delivers calf

AUSTIN (AP) — An emergency technician proved to be outstanding in the field when he successfully completed his first delivery — of a calf.

Joe Granberry, a senior paramedic with Austin Emergency Medical Services, had never delivered a baby — human or bovine — until last Friday.

"'I've been with EMS 11 years, 10 with Austin," he said. "And when I finally go out in the field for a birth, it turns out to be a bull."

Granberry, 32, and EMS shift commander Gordon Bergh had been attending an emergency vehicle training workshop at Texas A&M University.

The two stopped at a small country store, where an elderly farmer was seeking someone to assist one of his cows, which had been in labor all night.

Bergh is a self-admitted "city slicker" from Los Angeles who has some farming experience. Granberry's father had a farm outside Corpus Christi, and the paramedic had often watched — but never assisted — in birthing animals.

Upon reaching the cow, which was in obvious distress, Bergh slipped his hand inside the birth canal to see if he could reposition the calf.

"There was no option," he said. "We pulled the feet, gave it about four tugs, and broke the calf loose."

The paramedics at first worried that the calf had died during the 20-minute ordeal, and the cow was bleeding profusely because the umbilical cord was torn.

But Granberry got the cow to stand up. Within 15 minutes, she had nudged her calf into nursing.

HEALTH

YOUR FOOD PHARMACY

Not just for Friday anymore, fish gets researchers' OK for whole-heart healthiness

If you want to do something good for your heart, eat more fish. That's the advice from two new studies. And eating the real thing is better than taking fish-oil capsules, say researchers.

Carper

In one test, Harvard researchers gave healthy subjects equal doses of EPA-type fish oil contained in either capsules or tuna fish. The volunteers absorbed three times more EPA oil from the tuna than from the capsules.

In another study, Australian researchers compared the heart-protective effects of eating about 5 ounces of salmon or sardines a day with taking capsules equal in fish oil. They found the fish superior.

Both the capsules and the fish boosted good-type HDL cholesterol. But only fish had a favorable anti-clotting impact by "thinning" the blood and depressing a clot-promoting factor called fibrinogen. Eating fish lowered hazardous fibrinogen 15 percent and increased bleeding time 11 percent. Such blood is less likely to form dangerous clots, leading to heart attacks and strokes, experts say.

The Australian researchers suspect fish has other compounds that somehow enhance the benefits of the oil itself.

Eat more fiber, less fat

It's looking more certain. Your best dietary prescription for avoiding colon cancer is to eat less fat, especially saturated animal fat, and more fiber, notably from wheat bran.

But you may have to cut out more fat and eat more fiber than you thought. Just eating a little less fat — like leaving the butter off your bread — may help save you from heart disease, but not from colon cancer, say experts at the Centers for Disease Control. The fat intake must dip to 20 to 25 percent of calories to make a dent in colon cancer risk, it appears.

Especially important is slashing your intake of saturated animal fat in meat and dairy products, say Harvard investigators who recently studied 7,248 men. Those who ate the least saturated fat (7 percent of calories) had half the rate of precancerous growths in the colon called polyps as men who ate twice as much saturated fat (14 percent of calories). Such polyps can develop into full-blown tumors.

Further, men who ate the most fiber (more than 28 grams a day) had only one-third the rate of polyps as men who ate the least (17 grams per day). Wheat bran looks especially protective.

Macrobiotics cause deficiency

Experts have long feared that a strict vegetarian macrobiotic diet can lead to vitamin B-12 deficiencies. Two new studies say it's true.

Followers of such diets usually consume largely grains, vegetables, beans, sea vegetables, little or no dairy foods or eggs and no meat. Vitamin B-12 is found almost exclusively in animal-foods.

However, some macrobiotic diet advocates believe they get enough B-12 in sea vegetables and fermented soybean foods like miso and tempeh. Such foods do contain some B-12, say authorities. Even so, most adults and children who depend on such sources are deficient in B-12, according to a new study from the University of Cincinnati Medical Center. The longer a person stayed on the diet, the greater the risk.

Further, a Dutch study found that although children absorbed some B-12 from sea algae (nori or spirulina), the vitamin was not biologically active in their blood. The researchers suspect the B-12 in sea vegetables is not "bioavailable" to humans. Symptoms of B-12 deficiency are weakness, weight loss, nervous-system disorders such as memory loss and confusion, and in children, growth retardation.

Graves' disease affects one million

WASHINGTON (AP) — The cure rate for Graves' disease, the form of hyperthyroidism afflicting President Bush, approaches 100 percent although the disease can be fatal if left untreated.

The thyroid gland produces a hormone that plays a role in the regulation of many body processes, including heartbeat, digestion and metabolism.

In healthy people, an elaborate system of chemical checks and balances makes certain the body gets only as much thyroid as needed. The word, hyperthyroidism means too much thyroid is going into the bloodstream; hypothyroidism means too little.

Thyroid problems affect an estimated seven million Americans, about one million of whom have Graves' disease.

An unproven theory of what causes Graves' disease is that the body's immune system attacks the gland and causes it to secrete too much hormone into the blood.

An overactive thyroid gland can produce symptoms such as a fast heartbeat, increased perspiration, high blood pressure, agitation, difficulty in sleeping, diarrhea and bulging eyes. In older people, symptoms can include abnormal heart rhythm — as in the president's case — poor appetite and loss of weight.

One treatment, the one the president is receiving, is a routine one with a long history of success. It involves drinking radioactive iodine, which turns an overactive thyroid gland into an underactive one. The patient is closely monitored and if the output of thyroid goes too low, doctors prescribe a daily supplement.

The president's thyroid problem

President Bush's overactive thyroid, blamed for the atrial fibrillation of his heart, has been treated with radioactive iodine. His physicians expect to be able to control the condition, called Graves' disease.

What the thyroid does

The thyroid secretes hormones that control the body's metabolism, including functions of the heart, liver, brain and muscle tissue.

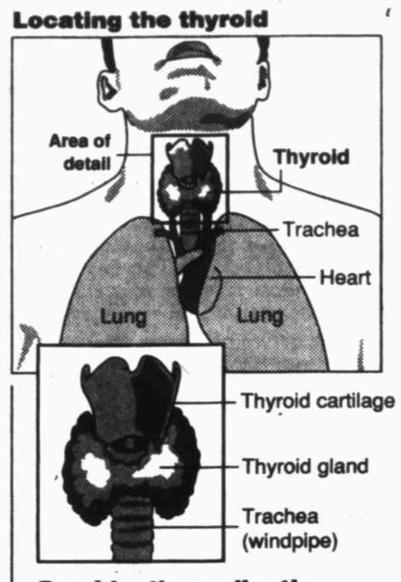

Hyperthyroidism (Graves' disease)

- Excessive production of thyroid hormones.
- Cause unknown.
- Can cause increased or irregular heart rate, fast breathing, weight loss despite appetite increase, increased sweating, heat intolerance, fatigue and muscle weakness.

Bush's treatment "Radioactive cocktail":

- Bush was given drink of radioactive iodine solution.
- The iodine passed into his bloodstream and concentrated in the thyroid.
- In coming months, radioactivity will destroy some of the thyroid gland's cells, reducing its activity.
- Doctors can fine-tune Bush's thyroid activity with thyroid hormone pills.

Locating the thyroid

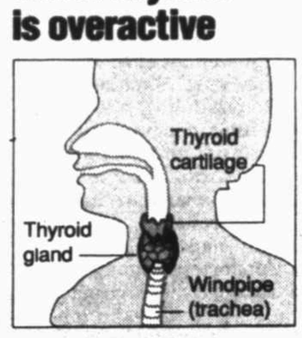

President's medication

Bush's heart condition is being treated with these drugs:

- Digoxin: Calms the activity of the entire heart.
- Procainamide: Blocks the errant electrical signals producing irregular heartbeats.
- Coumadin: Thins the blood to prevent a stroke if a blood clot forms.
- Aspirin: Another blood-thinning drug.

SOURCE: Chicago Tribune, Encyclopedia of Science and Technology, news reports

When thyroid is overactive

What gland does: Thyroid gland takes iodine from the blood to make hormones essential for mental development, physical growth

Overactive thyroid: Occurs when too many hormones are produced; results in an increase in the rate of most body reactions

Symptoms: Fidgety, anxious, tired but unable to relax or sleep; feel shaky, hands tremble; heartbeat irregular, much faster (what President Bush experienced); weight loss; eyes protrude

Treatment: Three options

- Anti-thyroid pills
- Drink clear, slightly salty radioactive iodine solution (nicknamed "atomic cocktail")
- Operate if lump appears in thyroid gland

Chemist patents cancer drug process

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — A chemist has gotten a patent on a process for making an experimental cancer-fighting drug that currently is available in tiny amounts from tree bark.

It takes the bark of about 12,000 Pacific yew trees to produce only 2.5 pounds of the drug, taxol. The trees are sparsely distributed in Pacific Northwest forests, including areas where logging is banned to protect the spotted owl.

"If all of the yew trees were cut down tomorrow ... there would not be enough taxol for even one year," Florida State University chemistry professor Robert Holton said Wednesday.

The shortage of taxol has slowed research efforts, said Matthew Suffness, project director for biochemistry and pharmacology grants at the National Cancer Institute.

"It's very critical," he said. "We're having to hold off on doing studies because there isn't enough of the drug."

Human studies on ovarian cancer have been going on for several years. Approval of the drug for its treatment "is as close to a sure thing as you can get," Holton said.

Results of tests on breast cancer are expected to be released within a few weeks.

Tests also are being conducted on lung, colon and other types of cancer.

The U.S. Patent and Trademark Office issued a patent to Holton on Tuesday for his method of combining taxol's two chemical components.

Florida State has licensed Bristol Myers-Squibb of New York to develop Holton's discovery into a commercially viable process.

Hairy caterpillars sting Texans

DALLAS (AP) — This is the season to beware of tiny hairy caterpillars that pack a big sting.

"I tell my grandchildren, 'Anything with long hair on it, you do not touch,'" says Dr. J.W. Stewart, Texas A&M Extension entomologist in Uvalde.

There are several types of stinging caterpillars in Texas, Stewart said, including the io moth, saddleback caterpillar, buck moth and hag moth.

But the most unpleasant crawling critter of the bunch is the puss caterpillar, also known by the deceptively cute name of wooly worm — or, more ominously, the tree asp.

A report in the May issue of the Annals of Emergency Medicine warns that the puss caterpillar can cause severe pain. Although no deaths have been reported, two U.S. Army doctors who studied the effects of the caterpillar's sting say it has caused swelling, shock-like syndromes and convulsions.

The caterpillars do not have a stinger such as a wasp or bee. Instead, their venom flows through hollow spines.

Reaction to the caterpillar's venom is fast. The site of the sting often swells rapidly and limbs can double in size. Other symptoms include headaches, fever, nausea, vomiting and cramps, said doctors Robert T. Pinson and James Alan Morgan.

"The cases I treated complained of intense pain, with a couple requiring treatment with narcotics," said Pinson. The research was conducted at Darnall Army Community Hospital at Fort Hood.

Hands and arms are most often affected, the doctors said. The best way to avoid being stung is to stay out of the caterpillar's way, Pinson said.

"The fur is very fine, almost the texture of a pussy willow," Pinson said.

The pattern of the spines creates a characteristic grid pattern on the victim's skin, Pinson said.

"It doesn't take much contact," Pinson said. "It's like brushing a cactus. If you pick it up wrong, have it fall on you or step on it in bare feet, you have envenomation."

Treatment includes ice packs, pain medication and treatment for the intense itching that can follow.

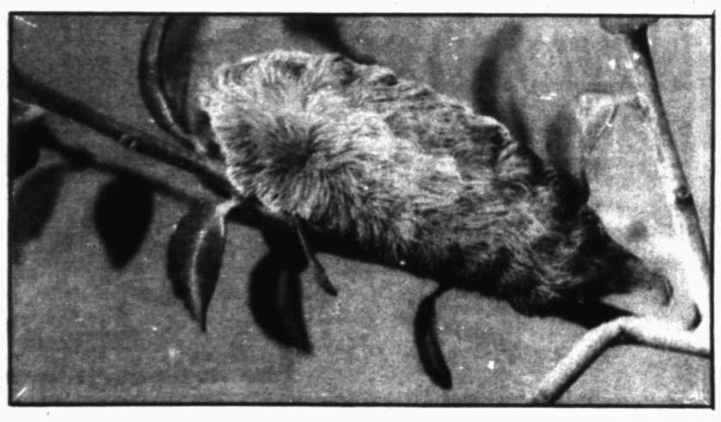

Populations of the puss caterpillar vary from year to year, depending on the number of natural predators, wasps and flies. Scientists said it is too early to guess what this year's population will be.

In 1921, the caterpillars became so abundant in San Antonio that public schools were closed until the larvae could be controlled.

The puss caterpillar is the larval stage of the flannel moth. Scientists know the caterpillar by its Latin name, Megalopyge opercularis.

In various regions of the United States, the caterpillar also is known as the "Italian asp," "woolly slug," "opossum bug," "el perrito" (little dog) and "Bicho peludo negro," (black hairy bug), the report said.

The mature larva is about an inch and a-half long.

STATE IN BRIEF

■ School fires drama teacher

DALLAS — A drama teacher fired at a Catholic high school for directing a non-school affiliated play about homosexual relationships says the production was part of his "private, professional life."

Bruce Coleman, a former substitute teacher at Bishop Lynch High School, said Tuesday he was fired May 6 after principal Edward Leyden read a newspaper review of the play "Jerker."

The play, shown at the Dallas Alliance Theater, depicts the growing love between two men whose relationship is based almost entirely on phone calls. The play features full nudity and explicit language, and was written by Robert Chesley, who died last year of AIDS.

Coleman, 30, said that at the time he was hired, he did not tell school officials about the play because he thought it was part of his "private, professional life, separate from what I did at school."

The are few options now, Coleman's lawyer said, since the school is a private institution.

■ Ex-prison guard acquitted

HUNTSVILLE — Former prison guard Luis Sandoval was acquitted Wednesday of murder in the 1986 slaying of an inmate.

Sandoval, 27, was charged in connection with the death of Joe Arrendondo. Sandoval was accused of leaving open a door so gang members could get at Arrendondo. The victim was beaten and stabbed.

The trial began May 20, after a two-month delay. Sandoval still faces escape charges for failing to show up at his mid-March trial. He later was arrested in Van Nuys, Calif.

Sandoval claimed he fled Texas in fear of his life and his family's welfare.

■ Geological Society head dies

HOUSTON — Doris M. Curtis, president of the Geological Society of America and a Rice University professor, has died of pneumonia, the society said. She was 77.

Ms. Curtis died Sunday at the M.D. Anderson Cancer Research Institute. Geological Society spokeswoman June Forstrom said Ms. Curtis had been hospitalized for cancer, but later contracted fatal pneumonia.

Ms. Curtis worked for Shell Oil as a geologist from 1942 to 1979, when she opened a consulting firm in Houston.

She also served as an adjunct professor of geology at Rice University in Houston.

She is listed in American Men and Women of Science and Who's Who in America and wrote more than 30 publications in the field of geology.

■ 3 people shot, 1 beaten

HOUSTON — A woman and two children were shot and another woman was pistol-whipped and cut with a butcher knife during a burglary Wednesday at a Northwest Harris County home.

An 11-month-old boy was left unharmed in his crib during the attack, Harris County sheriff's Sgt. Bruce William said.

The four victims were flown by LifeFlight helicopter to Hermann Hospital. Police said a 5-year-old boy and a 13-year-old girl were in critical condition with gunshot wounds to the head and back. The woman who was shot and the woman beaten and stabbed were listed in serious condition.

All four were bound with duct tape when they were found.

Police were searching for four men. One of the four apparently was an acquaintance of one of the victims and she was able to identify him to sheriff's deputies.

■ Killer gets death penalty

HOUSTON — A Harris County jury Wednesday sentenced to death a man convicted of killing a woman to get her car because his was low on gas.

After about six hours of deliberation, the jury decided Lionell Gonzales Rodriguez, 20, should be executed by lethal injection for killing Tracy Ann Gee, 22.

His case automatically will be appealed to the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals.

Ms. Gee was shot through the right temple with a .30-caliber military rifle as she sat in her Honda at a traffic light in southwest Houston Sept. 5.

According to his confession, Rodriguez, who had been on parole only three weeks, wanted her car because the car in which he was riding was nearly out of gasoline.

After shooting her, he dragged her body into the street and drove off in her car. He was arrested in her car, sitting in a puddle of her blood.

7-year-old pilot alters flight plan because of bad weather

Associated Press

'Mountain flying is the hardest...Because they're mountains ... and there are a lot of bumps in the air.'

— Daniel Shanklin

The perks and the pitfalls of flying cross-country have quickly become apparent to 7-year-old Daniel Shanklin, now at the halfway point in his cross-country flight from California to North Carolina.

Daniel

"Mountain flying is the hardest," said Daniel, who will be entering the third grade next fall.

When pressed to explain further, Daniel said: "Because they're mountains ... and there are a lot of bumps in the air."

Then there's weather to contend with, like the East Texas thunderstorms that forced the four-seater Cessna 172 Daniel was piloting with instructor Stuart Moon, to land in Lufkin Wednesday afternoon.

"It's bad, bad weather," said the pint-sized aviator. "It's real bad thunderstorms that they have. It's real big lightnings, you know, crack!"

The family flew from Lufkin, Texas, to Monroe, La., late Wednesday afternoon, trying to beat bad weather.

Daniel was to have landed in Alexandria, La., but was his flight plan was rerouted to Lufkin when thunderstorms and overcast skies interfered.

The San Antonio youth is trying to reach First Flight Airport at Kill Devil Hill, N.C., near Kitty Hawk, before his eighth birthday on June 4.

He landed the craft safely at about 1:30 p.m. CDT in Lufkin, about 160 miles southeast of Dallas. Daniel left San Antonio at about 10:25 a.m. CDT, said Dr. Ken Shanklin, the boy's grandfather.

Despite the delays, Daniel said the trip, which began Sunday in San Diego, is still fun. Daniel's brother, 9-year-old Michael, who also flies, is sharing the controls with his grandfather in a separate plane.

Both boys agree about what is the easiest part of flying, takeoffs.

"Taking off is the easiest, because all you have to do is full throttle and take off at the right speed," Daniel said.

Landings on the other hand, require much more concentration.

"It's complicated and you have to do it all at one time," said Michael, who will be entering the fourth grade next fall. "There's the wheels. You don't want to hit your front wheel or else it will be pretty rough."

Daniel and Moon began the trip with a flight from San Diego to Tucson, Ariz. From there, they flew to El Paso Monday afternoon. Daniel refueled in Sonora, Texas, Tuesday before arriving in San Antonio at 4:30 p.m.

Tentative plans are to fly from Louisiana to Montgomery, Ala., on Thursday and Charlotte, N.C., Friday. But with the stormy weather, the entourage might be rerouted through Jackson, Miss., Shanklin said.

Shanklin said he believes Daniel is the youngest pilot to attempt the cross-country trek, although the Guinness Book of World Records does not keep note of age-related records.

The National Aeronautic Association in Washington stopped keeping age-related flight records in the late 1980s. But two 9-year-olds completed separate flights in 1988 and 1989 before the NAA stopped keeping records.

BANK: Robery suspect ordered held without bond

42nd St.

The Midland FBI agent in charge of the case testified Wednesday that the unarmed woman presented a teller at the bank with a note that read: "I'm sorry. This is a holdup. Count me out $3,000 and don't say a word. Thank you."

While counting out the money, which she placed in a Bank One deposit bag, the telier activated a silent alarm, the agent said. According to reports, police responded to the alarm at 10:35 a.m.

The robber fled on foot after the teller handed her the money, the FBI agent said, but bank employees followed the woman to her apartment at 3904 Englewood Circle and identified her when police arrived a few minutes later.

Odessa police, who reportedly found the deposit bag containing the $3,000 in Ms. Lopez' apartment, arrested the woman and turned her over to the FBI for federal prosecution.

Before the FBI took custody of her, however, Ms. Lopez reportedly signed a statement in which she confessed to the robbery.

John Woodside, the woman's attorney, pointed out that no weapon or threat of violence was involved in the incident.

Nevertheless, Sykes said the woman might represent a danger to herself and the community if released on bond.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Take more time when making decisions and you will make better choices. Luck favors you in financial matters this coming fall. Although romance can be a challenge at times, it will add great color and glamour to your life during November and December. The business outlook holds bright promise in January 1992. Heed the advice of your family in February. Your career goals will be more clearly defined by next spring.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actor Michael J. Pollard, running back Gale Sayers, actor Clint Walker, jazz great Benny Goodman.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You delight in what is going on around you. VIPs may have a special project that is tailor-made for you. Be creative! Put aside strong-arm tactics and use quiet diplomacy.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be more attentive to your responsibilities; focus on negotiations related to organizational, governmental or parental concerns. Avoid making a diplomatic blunder at home. Romance flourishes.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Pitch your ideas behind closed doors today and you will get the results you want. Becoming a comparison shopper can save you big dollars. Go ahead and take center stage this evening.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A prime time to work at improving family relationships. Whatever you give you will receive in return. Move slowly in business. Visit someone who is ill. Romance is in the air.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your relationship with a friend or family member will be enriched today. Count both your money and your blessings! It may be time to make a permanent commitment. Know your own heart.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Make amends to someone you may have slighted in the past. Hasty decisions could backfire. Obtain all facts and figures before taking action. Romance could blind you to loved one's faults.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Contact those in authority and make a reasonable request. Buy and sell — especially jewelry, gold ornaments and high-quality clothes. Romance and your social life enjoy favorable influences.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Do not be afraid to ask probing questions. You will get straight answers. Stress your originality and independence at work. Employers will be impressed by your ability to deliver.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Get an early start today to complete important paperwork on time. Your work habits may be questioned. A change of lifestyle could improve a close personal relationship.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Beware of dipping into your savings to splurge on clothes. Use extra tact when discussing ticklish subjects with your elders. You meet new people and gain fresh insights at a social function.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Risky new ventures are best avoided. Conduct as much business as you can from home. Someone's change of attitude could frustrate you until you learn the reasons behind it. Be more tolerant.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Take things quietly. Any health problem requires immediate attention. If you are late for work, explain why. Your personal desires will have to take a backseat to an employer's needs.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are curious, alert and loyal. They love to take shortcuts — even if these sometimes end up being long detours! Anything new or trendy will attract the attention of these fun-loving Geminis. With maturity, they will become much more disciplined, able to focus on their careers. Although these children rarely feel jealous, they are possessive of their loved ones. Give them plenty of attention and praise.

This hand was submitted by a reader. "I play by the seat of my pants," our correspondent states. "I felt that West had the jack of clubs, so with only 11 tricks in sight, I tried for the 12th by leading a low club to the ten. As you can see, that didn't work. Partner said I should have led a club to the ace and another back to the queen. I claimed it was purely a guess as to which defender held what. Who's right?"

First, let's compliment South on the jump to three no trump. With 20 points, a hand that is essentially balanced and an excellent source of tricks in the diamond suit, three no trump was an intelligent rebid.

However, the writer does have a peculiar notion of the function of the seat of one's pants. It's there to sit on, not reason with! The situation in the club suit is covered in all textbooks on play, and is often mishandled even though it recurs often.

While it is true that West is as likely as East to hold the jack of clubs, correct technique is to try to take advantage of a favorable location of either the king or the jack. Proper management will give you two chances to land the slam, not one!

Declarer should win the opening spade lead in dummy with the king and immediately lead a low club toward the queen. If East holds the king, the slam is made there and then. But if West wins the king and perseveres in spades, all is not yet lost. South wins and runs the red-suit winners, ending in hand, then leads a club to the ten. That will still generate a 12th trick if West holds the jack. If not, there was no way to make the slam.

Thatcher says she has no intention of quietly retiring

LONDON (AP) — Margaret Thatcher said Tuesday that while she's no longer Britain's prime minister she has no intention of quietly retiring.

Thatcher

"I shall not stop making speeches. I shan't stop saying what I think. I shan't stop trying to influence things, because I believe in what I am doing," she said in an interview broadcast on Independent Television News.

Mrs. Thatcher said her departure in the face of a party revolt left the Conservative Party united and going into the general election with a fresh face.

"When you have been in power as I have for nearly 12 years you make a lot of enemies and a lot of people thought there should be a change," she said.

FINDLAY, Ohio (AP) — Rock star Steve Winwood's tour bus was side-swiped by a truck early Wednesday but only the bus driver was slightly injured.

Winwood

Winwood and his band had finished a concert in Fort Wayne, Ind., and were headed to Columbus on two buses.

A State Highway Patrol dispatcher says the accident happened about 15 miles southwest of Findlay and both vehicles were damaged.

Winwood, who was aboard the bus involved in the accident, got on the second bus and continued to Columbus.

The driver of the truck was cited for going left of center, authorities said.

The dispatcher said the bus driver was taken to Lima Memorial Hospital for treatment and was released.

DENVER (AP) — President Bush's son Neil was disqualified from a tennis tournament last weekend for playing in a bracket that was too easy for him.

Bush

Bush and partner Bob Shopneck trounced opponents in a doubles match at the Colorado Tennis Association's Clyde Rogers Memorial Day Open.

'Someone officially protested and after a review, he was disqualified," coordinator Harold Aarons said.

Aarons said he believes Bush did not realize he was registered to play a team rated a full point below his U.S. Tennis Association rating of 5.5 on a 10-point scale.

"The bottom line is that it's the player's responsibility. He blew it, as far as that goes," Aarons said.

Bush, involved in a court battle with federal regulators over his role as a director of the failed Silverado Savings and Loan, has an unlisted phone number and could not be reached for comment.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — For decades, actress Sally Field has concealed an addiction. Now, the Oscar-winner comes clean: she's obsessed with afternoon soap operas.

Field

"I left these people on for one minute and stayed 21 years....I became theirs for life," Miss Field said in a recent interview to publicize her new movie, "Soapdish," opening Friday.

"One Life to Live," "General Hospital" and "All My Children" have been her favorite daytime dramas over the years. The actress now stars as a soap queen spoofing the afternoon TV fixtures.

"When I turned on that soap, it was immediately compelling. I don't know what it was, but there was something different going on and I couldn't stop watching," Miss Field said.

"It's like an illicit love affair or ditching school. You know you should be somewhere else, like at work or out in the sunshine doing something healthy, but you're doing this little secret thing in your bedroom."

In "Soapdish," the actress plays Celeste Talbert on the fictional hit soap "The Sun Also Sets."

"It's a very loving jab at soap operas, but it's also a loving jab at show business and actors," said Miss Field. "Celeste is a bitch and not too bright to boot.

"But as much fun as she was to play, she was just as challenging as any dramatic role I've done."

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country music singer Paulette Carlson is asking fans to help her name her first baby.

She has invited fans to stop by her booth at the annual Fan Fair music festival June 10 to June 14 and submit names. The winning entrant will receive a picnic basket of treats.

Carlson is due in mid-June.

She is the former lead singer of the country group Highway 101 and recently began a solo career. Her first album will be released later this year.

With Highway 101, she was known for her vocals on the No. 1 songs "Cry, Cry, Cry" and "Somewhere Tonight."

Hill Country Stonehenge started out as extra rock

By David Matustick

HUNT, Texas (AP) — Unlike its counterpart in England, there is no question about who built the Kerr County arches.

But why Stonehenge II was built is just as elusive as the mystery surrounding the prehistoric megaliths rising up from the English countryside.

"We didn't set out to build Stonehenge," said Al Shepperd, who designed the structure along with neighbor Doug Hill. "We were just messing around with rock and it kind of grew. We certainly had no idea the way it would turn out."

Far from the Salisbury Plain, this modern-day monument rises in a pasture along a rural lane in the Hill Country, two miles west of Hunt on Farm Road 1340 — about 115 miles west of Austin.

The massive structure is generally 60 percent as tall as the original and 90 percent as large in circumference.

"When you turn the corner, you know what a great curiosity it is and the mindset — why is it here? Why is the original one built where it is?" said Phil Neighbors, executive vice president of the Kerrville Area Chamber of Commerce.

Many theories exist about the origins of the English Stonehenge, but no one knows for sure who built it or what prompted its conception. But Stonehenge II was born at the Kerrville dump in the summer of 1989.

Hill, 39, a tile contractor, was gathering limestone for his patio but decided one stone was too large for his use. So he crossed the road and stood it upright in Shepperd's field.

"Doug pulled up at 7:30 (a.m.) and said 'I've got a rock out here for you,'" said Shepperd, 70, a retired motel owner.

"I said, 'It looks kind of funny by itself, let's put an arch somewhere,'" he said.

Hill constructed an arch 13 feet tall, with a three-foot wide opening. Together, the haphazardly placed limestone and the man-made frame reminded Shepperd of Stonehenge, which he had visited earlier in 1989.

The two then set out to create a replica of the famous landmark. From August 1989 to May 1990, Hill built hollow plaster arches that were reinforced with steel rods and metal lath.

Each pillar of the arches is set in concrete for stability. The plaster was tinted a dark gray and allowed to weather to resemble the stone of the original.

The four inner arches are 11-12 feet tall. The ones that ring the outside vary from 9 to 11 feet tall to compensate for the slope of the land. Five thousand square-feet of plaster and 800 bags of cement were used in the construction.

Hill said he was more interested in making the Stonehenge replica look right than trying to match the scale of the original. He said he did not attempt to align the sculpture with astronomical bodies — as the original Stonehenge appears to be — since the hills in the area block the sun at various times anyway.

"It's probably not perfect, but it gets the point across," Hill said. 'It's a play thing. I like to think of it as a work of art, but I haven't found anyone else who needs one."

Since the early days of construction, cars have screeched to a halt when the project comes into view.

Already, there has been a wedding, youth campouts and numerous photo sessions — including one for a ballet troupe and rock album cover — at the site.

The story has appeared on national television and in a children's magazine.

"People thought we were crazy," Shepperd said. "They thought we were getting into satanism."

But not everyone likes Stonehenge II. Hill said an employee of a nearby youth camp told him she looks the other way when she drives by because she believes the design is evil.

"She is thoroughly against it," Hill said, "like it was an idol."

But most people see the sculpture as a quirky tourist attraction.

"It's another thing that draws attention to Kerrville and Kerr County," said Neighbors.

The Kerrville Area Chamber of Commerce includes the sculpture on its list of attractions.

"We encourage people to come and look," Shepperd said.

He and Hill are planning to add a log book for visitors to sign. T-shirts depicting the project are also a possibility.

The two designers now are discussing a second project in the 22-acre field that would depict the crash of an unidentified flying object.

Shepperd said he generally visits the site during the day and doesn't get hooked into its mysticism.

Hill, though, says the replica is a special place.

"I come out every solstice," Hill said. "Full moons are really nice — to see the shadows on the ground is something you can't experience anywhere else."

Ryan ineffective in return

■ Rangers unable to get back on winning track despite presence of ace

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

ARLINGTON — The only thing hurting after Nolan Ryan's return from the disabled list was his feelings.

The Minnesota Twins and Greg Gagne in particular gave him a rude welcome back in a 9-1 victory over the Texas Rangers on Wednesday night.

A three-run homer by Gagne, who had four RBIs to tie his career high, was the big hit off Ryan (3-4). Pitching for the first time since straining a shoulder muscle on May 13, Ryan went four innings, allowed five runs on five hits, struck out four and walked one.

Nolan Ryan gets roughed up in first game back from disabled list.

"It felt fine physically," Ryan said. "I was pleased with the way my arm felt, but I was disappointed by the way I pitched. I figured I wouldn't have good command because of the layoff.

"I showed that if you make bad pitches you are going to get hit hard. They were hitter's pitches, hanging curves and fastballs up in the zone. I don't expect any stiffness or discomfort."

Gagne's homer was the 299th ever hit off Ryan.

Ryan (3-4) walked one and struck out four. His fastball was clocked at 93 mph.

Minnesota manager Tom Kelly said it was obvious Ryan was off form.

"I'm sure Nolan was not as sharp as he would have liked to have been and I'm glad we caught him when he wasn't," Kelly said. "You count your blessings any time you get a couple of runs off Nolan."

Jack Morris (5-5) cut down baseball's hottest hitting team on just four hits, tying a season low for the Rangers. Morris (5-5) has won five of his last six decisions after an 0-3 start. He struck out a season-high eight and walked two in his third complete game.

"Everybody has great respect for Nolan," Morris said. "He didn't have his best stuff so we've got to beat him and we did."

The loss was the second straight for Texas, which had won 14 in a row prior to being shut out 3-0 Tuesday night.

Ryan's earned run average jumped from 2.94 to 3.56.

Athletes perform in class, too

By Joe Wyatt
Staff Writer

Athletes have long been unwilling fall guys in society's push for easy stereotypes, but the term "dumb jock" is losing its echo in the halls of two Tall City high schools.

Stephen Canon will address the subject of goals tonight when he gives the valedictory at Midland High's graduation, and he will not be referring to the goal-scoring abilities that earned him a spot on the District 4-5A honorable mention soccer team.

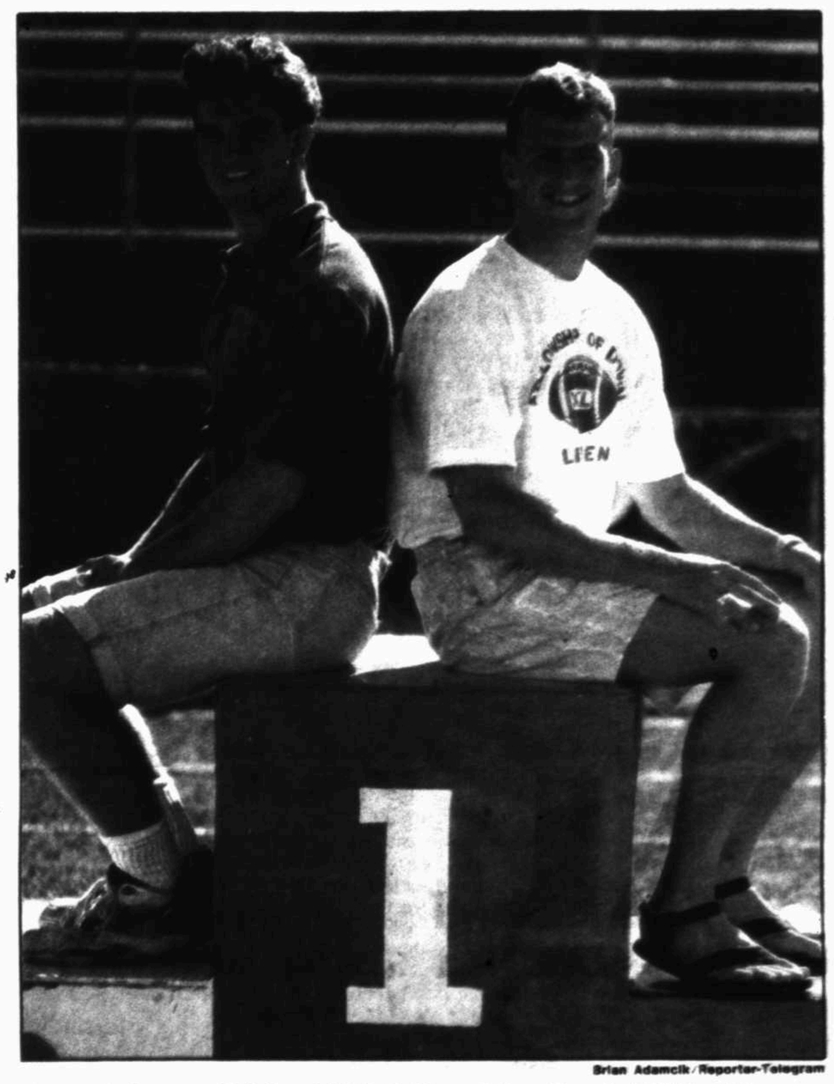

"When I was in ninth grade I decided that I wanted to be all-district in basketball, I wanted to be valedictorian and I wanted to be the president of student council," said Canon, who lettered in both basketball and soccer at MHS.

"I made valedictorian, but I didn't reach the other goals. Still, by working toward those goals I made every aspect of my life better."

Midland Lee senior Burr Vogel, who will cross the stage tonight ranked 17th in his class, says student athletes can no longer be parceled together under one specific label. And he should know.

Vogel lettered in football and soccer — both playoff teams at Lee — and he still found the time to excel in the classroom, making the National

Winners will meet at Belmont

Associated Press

NEW YORK — The Belmont Stakes will have what it didn't have last year — a matchup between the Kentucky Derby and Preakness winners.

The showdown was assured Wednesday after Frank Brothers, Hansel's trainer, said he would enter his Preakness winner in the June 8 Belmont despite New York's ban on the diuretic Lasix, which Hansel takes to control bleeding.

"Yes, we're definitely going in the Belmont," Brothers said Wednesday in Chicago. Hansel is due to arrive in New York on Friday, he said.

Last year, Preakness winner Summer Squall did not enter the Belmont because of New York's ban on medication, eliminating a matchup with Derby winner Unbridled.

Brothers said his colt was successful in New York last year without using the diuretic.

"I feel good about taking our chances running in New York without Lasix," Brothers said. "I'm confident in what he can do and if I didn't things weren't in our favor, we wouldn't be running."

Hansel, who finished 10th as the Derby favorite, worked a half-mile in 48 2-5 seconds at Arlington International Racecourse on Tuesday, going the last eighth of a mile in :11 2-5ths. That was enough to convince Brothers and owner Joe Allbritton to send him on to the Belmont.

The addition of Hansel to the Belmont field means the colt has a chance to win the $1 million bonus given to the horse who fares best in the Triple Crown races. Hansel and Strike the Gold both have 10 points in the sweepstakes.

Hansel will again be ridden by Jerry Bailey.

Trail Blazers must win in Forum

■ Portland can only stay alive by beating the Lakers on a court that has already cost them dearly.

Associated Press

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — The Portland Trail Blazers believe they can become the fifth team in NBA history to rally from a 3-1 deficit and win a playoff series.

They're one-third of the way there, but now comes the hard part.

In order to stay alive in the Western Conference finals, the Blazers have to beat the Lakers at the Forum, an arena where they've been beaten soundly twice in the series.

"With our backs to the wall, either you have the intensity or you don't," said Clyde Drexler, who had 19 points, seven rebounds and five assists in Portland's 95-84 victory in Game 5 Tuesday night. "But there's going to be a lot of pressure on the Lakers."

Drexler was referring to the fact that if the Blazers win Game 6 Thursday night, a seventh game will be played Saturday in Portland.

"It's gut-check time," said Magic Johnson, who had 29 points, eight rebounds and seven assists in Game 5. "If we rebound, we have a good chance to win the game."

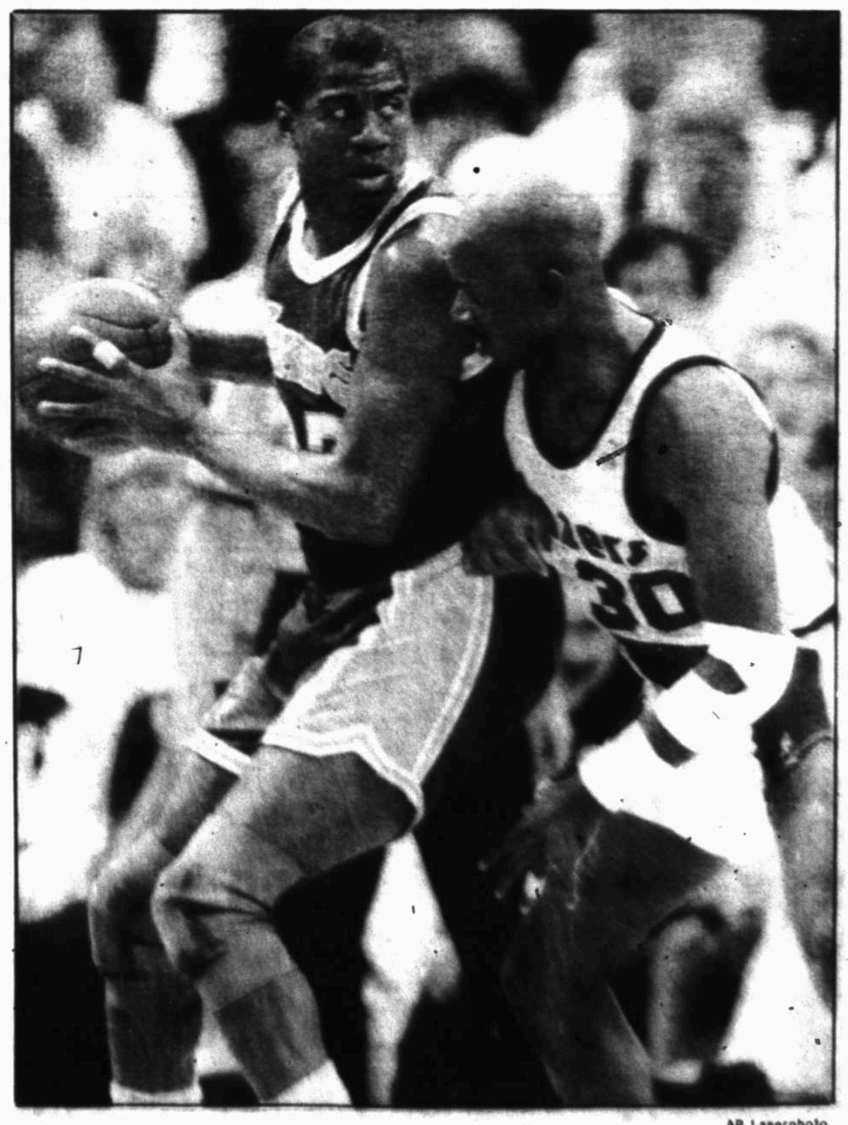

The Lakers didn't rebound in Game 5 — they lost the battle of the boards 52-33, with the Blazers grabbing a 26-9 advantage on the offensive boards.

"They attacked the offensive boards," Johnson said. "We didn't box them out. You can't half-body them. You'd body one guy, and here came two more."

The Lakers were outrebounded 51-28 in Game 2, a 109-98 loss. Then, they came home and held their own on the boards while winning Game 3 106-92 and Game 4 116-95.

A significant difference in Game 6 from those two games will be the physical condition of James Worthy, limited to 24 minutes in Game 5 because of a sprained left ankle.

Bulls remain confident

Associated Press

CHICAGO — The Chicago Bulls are 40-8 since the All-Star break, winners of 11 of 12 playoff games and the Eastern Division champions.

Are they confident heading into their first NBA Finals next week?

Listen.

"We didn't come this far to just get here," Bulls coach Phil Jackson said. "No one remembers who finishes second in the finals."

The Bulls practiced Wednesday in Deerfield as they await the winner of the Western Conference finals between Portland and the Los Angeles Lakers. The Lakers lead 3-2 with Game 6 on Thursday at the Forum.

"I don't think we're going to get complacent," Michael Jordan said. "We know what we still want to achieve. We want to win it all, because who says we're ever going to get back here again."

Jackson said following the Bulls' four-game sweep of the two-time defending Detroit Pistons that his team is performing just the way he wants.

"We're playing the kind of basket-

Man dies at Indy

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A man drove a pickup truck into the Indianapolis Motor Speedway on Wednesday for several fast laps, then was killed when he crashed into a vehicle parked on the track to stop him.

The man apparently got in through a gate left open during cleanup from Sunday's race, police said.

The truck went around the track three or four times at a high speed before crashing near the start-finish line about 7:30 a.m., said Jeffrey Dine, police chief in the community of Speedway inside Indianapolis.

"Witnesses said he appeared to be having a very good time. They saw him laughing and waving his arms," Dine said.

Luther Wray, a foreman in the speedway's maintenance department, tried to block the truck by parking a minivan on the track, Dine said. Wray stood between the van and the track's outside retaining wall, waving his arms at the driver.

Dine said Wray jumped over the retaining wall and climbed a fence before the pickup came down the front straight and rammed the van, Dine said.

Witnesses said the impact sent the minivan into the air.

The man carried no identification but appeared to be 30 to 35 years old. His pickup had Indiana license plates, Dine said.

Angels beat Arkansas for 11th win in last 13 games

Staff Report

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — The Midland Angels claimed their 11th win in the last 13 games here Wednesday night, taking a 3-2 decision over the Arkansas Travelers.

Angel starting pitcher Don Vidmar went 8⅔ inning for Midland, allowing two runs to pick up his fourth win without a loss in Class AA ball this year. Counting his record in Class A Palm Springs, Vidmar is 8-2 in 1991.

The win puts the Angels at 20-26 for the season, while Arkansas dropped to 11-29. Midland is 12 games behind Western Division leader El Paso (32-14).

Midland broke the scoring ice in the top of the fourth inning, as Alex Trevino hit a lead-off double to left field, then was driven in by Terry Taylor's two-bagger to right. Marcus Lawton smacked the Angels' third consecutive double in the next at-bat, sending Taylor across to give Midland a 2-0 edge.

Then with one out in the top of the fifth inning, Angel second baseman Kevin Flora drove a home run over the left field fence to make it a 3-0 lead for the Angels. The homer was Flora's fifth of the season, but his third of the road trip, which now stands at six games.

The Angels are now 5-1 on their 10-game road trip after Jackson ended a five-game Midland win streak Tuesday night. Midland is also 5-1 for the season against the Travelers, who host Game 2 of the five-game set at 7:30 p.m. tonight. Scheduled to pitch for Midland is Dave Shotkosky (2-3) against Arkansas' Luis Faccio (0-0).

SCHOLARS: Time management plays key role

(From 1C)

Honor Society, the Academic Decathlon Team and the Texico Star Academic Challenge Team.

"I wouldn't even want to try naming all the members of the National Honor Society on our soccer team," said Vogel, who owns a full scholarship to the University of Texas at Austin where he will study petroleum engineering.

"You just can't stereotype athletes anymore. Each year the competitive build-up gets bigger, and if there's no way to stop that then athletics are going to keep getting more important and academics less.

"But there's plenty of time to do both if you are disciplined enough to get yourself in bed at a reasonable hour," Vogel said.

"That's been a big key to my success. That, and using all the time I can at school in the classroom.

"Let's face it, when you come back from a hard day at spring training you get dinner and fall asleep because you're exhausted."

Canon has a few reasons to be exhausted even before hitting the practice field or the basketball court.

The son of Michael and Judy Canon, Stephen presides over the National Honor Society, Easter Seals and the Spanish Club at MHS. And the top-ranked student also instructs junior high dance classes, works with Young Life and participates in the Fellowship of Christian Athletes.

"Managing your time is the most important factor if you're going to compete in both academics and athletics," said Canon, whose road to becoming a doctor will begin when he majors in bio-chemistry at Texas A&M this fall.

"There are a lot of people that are smarter than me, but it's because I worked hard and because I am fortunate enough to have good parents.

"My parents are two of my best friends and I credit them more than I credit myself because they instilled confidence in me.

"A stereotypical jock is not supposed to be smart. He might feel confident on the football field, but in the classroom he may be unsure of himself.

"You have to have confidence in yourself in everything you do or you'll never succeed."

Burr, the son of Rodney and Suzanne Vogel, collected scholarships from the West Texas Geological Society, the Society of Petroleum Engineers and Marathon Oil as he worked his way to a 5.05 grade-point average. A soccer goalie and a tight end on the Lee football team, he says he will be leaving the big-time college sports to the larger members of the UT student body.

"I'll play intramurals at college, but I'm not really big enough to play major college sports," he said.

"And Division I college programs are so demanding on students that even if a kid is bright enough to make it, he really has to kill himself to get good grades and also start on that football team because they're so competitive."

While a good many exceptional athletes will be moving through the MHS and Lee turnstiles with tonight's graduation, so will a good many exceptional students.

Canon and Vogel are not the only scholars that Tall City schools have had the good fortune to put on the playing fields in 1990-91, and with the groundwork firmly set they ought to be far from the last to straighten out those echoes.

WEST: Ankle leaves Worthy questionable

(From 1C)

Worthy arrived at the Forum early Wednesday to receive treatment on his ankle. Worthy sprained his ankle in the first quarter and was used sporadically after that. He finally sat down for good with 9:34 remaining, having scored 12 points.

The Blazers showed they could win at the Forum during the regular season, winning a pair of overtime games. Now, they have to show they can win there in the playoffs.

"Hopefully, you'll see a different team come out at the Forum," Blazers coach Rick Adelman said. "We were a little embarrassed, especially by the second game.

"We have nothing to lose. We're just going to try and play a solid game and see what happens."

The Blazers had the best road record in the league in the regular season, but they're 1-5 away from home in the playoffs.

"A lot of things have been said about this team's mental toughness," said Portland forward Buck Williams, who had 13 points and a game-high 16 rebounds in Game 5. "The true test is going to be in Game 6."

Seven of Williams' rebounds came in the third quarter, when the Blazers outscored the Lakers 28-18 to take control of the game. Los Angeles had held a 50-47 halftime lead.

"He was unbelievable," Adelman said. "It seemed like every time we needed a rebound, he'd just go up and get it."

BULLS: Tickets nearly all sold

ball that's real solid," he said. "Movement of the ball, assist-creating basketball. Passing and being unselfish with the basketball. Our style is enjoyable to watch — at least it is to me."

It's not only enjoyable; it's powerful. The Bulls are averaging 105 points per game, while giving up 92.5, and shooting 50.8 percent from the field.

"We proved who the best team in the East is," said Will Perdue. "We've gotten over the hump. I think, for most guys, it's a feeling of relief and now the reality is setting in. It's time to get back to work because we have a goal."

As the Bulls prepared for the Finals, local phone companies prepared for a barrage of phone calls they expect on Monday, when remaining tickets for Bulls home games will be sold.

The first two home games are sold out. But 2,500 tickets will go on sale for each of the other home games. There will be one more home game if the Bulls oppose the Trail Blazers, and two if they play the Lakers.

"It's tough to draw parallels when you only play a team twice a season," said Jackson. "But L.A. is more like we are in style."

Creighton becomes first home team in College World Series

Associated Press

OMAHA, Neb. — Wichita State's Gene Stephenson expects the 1991 College World Series to be far different from the three others in which he has coached.

For the first time in the 41 years that the NCAA Division I baseball championship has been held in Omaha, there will be a hometown favorite: Creighton University.

"We expect to do well in Omaha," said Stephenson, whose 1989 Shockers took the title after finishing second in 1982 and third in 1988. "But it's going to be a unique experience, different than it's ever been before."

Creighton qualified as Nebraska's first entry to the national event.

"The NCAA has never been in this position before. The CWS committee has never been in this position before," Stephenson said.

"But most of the people have never seen Creighton play," he said. "Most of the people who will buy tickets to the College World Series have never come out to watch Creighton play up there. It will be very different for Creighton, too."

Stephenson said the crowd could be good or bad for the Bluejays. It will be good because the 17,500-seat Rosenblatt Stadium likely will be filled for Creighton games. But it could be bad if the Bluejays are unable to adjust to playing in front of so many people.

"It affects you," Stephenson said. "It really charges your guys up."

The tournament opens Friday with top-seeded Florida State (57-12) meeting No. 8 Fresno State (41-21) in the first game and No. 4 Louisiana State (51-18) facing No. 5 Florida (49-19) in the nightcap.

Stephenson said his team proved to be something of a surprise this season after being picked to finish second in the Missouri Valley Conference behind Creighton.

He said a suspected rebuilding season became a championship one instead because a brand new infield meshed well.

"And we filled the holes with people fromn inside the program," he said.

"From an offensive standpoint, 1990 was a poor year. I wouldn't dispute that Creighton looked like a better team to the coaches and media in the preseason. They returnmed outstanding people. They looked like the team to beat.

"I couldn't say we would be a strong offensive team, and we lost all our infield. It looked like we were going to be way down."

Both problems were solved when the replacement infielders turned out to be pretty fair hitters as well. Shortstop Chris Wimmer led the team with a .408 averaged and second baseman Billy Hall batted .374. First baseman Jason White hit .349 and led the team with 13 homers.

None of the players appeared to have to outstanding talent, but "then you watch them play together and they're the best infield we've ever had," Stephenson said.

"Pitching was supposed to be our strength, and it has been, but the defense has been extraordinary, and the offense has been better than we anticipated."

The Shockers hit .339 as a team and provided plenty of offense for a pitching staff led by Kennie Steenstra, who was 15-0 with a 1.98 ERA.

Connors stages dramatic come-from-behind victory

Associated Press

French Open

PARIS — Jimmy Connors defied age and exhaustion to keep alive his impossible dream at the French Open Wednesday, while Boris Becker overcame a thigh injury and a two-set deficit to advance his quest for the world's top ranking.

The 38-year-old Connors shrugged off a mid-match collapse to defeat Ronald Agenor, a dozen years younger and nearly 300 places higher-ranked than the American. Connors, a wild-card entry in the only Grand Slam tournament he has not won, celebrated his 6-4, 6-2, 3-6, 0-6, 6-4 victory by tossing his racket skyward as the center-court crowd cheered.

"I don't throw my racket in the air for just anybody," he said. "I was in the trenches. I felt once it got into the fifth and it was a matter of who was going to get down and dig and grind and do whatever it would take to win the match. I'm pretty happy in that position."

Connors' dramatic victory overshadowed an improbable comeback by Becker, who also has won every Grand Slam event except the French. A victory could boost him back to the No. 1 ranking.

Becker, his mobility limited and his game in disarray, lost the first two sets to Australian Todd Woodbridge and was trailing 3-1 in the third when he rallied by winning four straight games.

Then it became a question of which would last longer — Becker's leg or Woodbridge's nerve. The Australian cracked first, allowing Becker to escape with a 5-7, 1-6, 6-4, 6-4, 6-4 victory.

The German, who has an uncanny ability to lift his level of play when threatened, still had to recover from an early service break in the fourth and fifth sets in the four-hour, 25-minute match.

Another German seeking to regain a No. 1 ranking, two-time women's champion Steffi Graf, had a much easier time. The second-seeded Graf overpowered Petra Langrova 6-0, 6-1 in 46 minutes.

Andre Agassi, the men's fourth seed, rolled to a 6-1, 6-2, 6-2 victory over Petr Korda but 10th seed Michael Chang, the 1989 champion, needed five sets to defeat Lars Jonsson.

Chang, who plays Connors in the next round, now has won his last eight five-set matches.

Seventh seed Guy Forget of France struggled through four sets to eliminate Jimmy Arias, but Spain lost both its seeds. Sergi Bruguera, seeded fifth, pulled out of his match with Omar Camporese with a back problem while leading two sets to one.

Mets pull off series sweep in Chicago

Associated Press

NL

CHICAGO (AP) — Dave Magadan drove in three runs and David Cone pitched a seven-hitter as the New York Mets beat the Chicago Cubs 8-1 for a sweep of their three-game series.

Magadan singled home two runs during a five-run third off Bob Scanlan (2-1) and had an RBI single off Rick Sutcliffe during a three-run fourth.

Cone (5-3) wild pitched Ryne Sandberg home with the bases loaded in the first inning, but struck out Andre Dawson and Chico Walker, stranding runners on second and third.

He then retired 13 men in a row until reliever Chuck McElroy got his first major league hit with two out in the fifth.

Pirates 6, Cardinals 0

ST. LOUIS — Zane Smith pitched the Pittsburgh Pirates' second one-hitter in three days as the Pirates knocked off St. Louis Cardinals.

Smith's one-hitter came two days after Doug Drabek one-hit the Cardinals in an 8-0 victory. It was the second one-hitter of his career, and second in 20 starts with the Pirates. He held the Mets to one hit last Sept. 5.

It also gave the Pirates their first three-game sweep of the Cardinals at Busch Stadium on their first visit since clinching the NL East Sept. 30.

Giants 6, Reds 1

SAN FRANCISCO — Matt Williams hit a wind-blown, opposite-field homer to key a four-run seventh inning that carried the San Francisco Giants past Cincinnati.

Willie McGee drove in three runs with two hits as the Giants won for the fourth time in five games, taking two of three from the Reds.

Phillies 2, Expos 1

PHILADELPHIA — Charlie Hayes, who earlier snapped an 0-for-31 streak, led off the eighth inning with a home run to give the Philadelphia Phillies a victory over Montreal.

Hayes' fifth homer came on a 1-0 pitch from Barry Jones (2-2), and made a winner of Terry Mulholland (6-3).

Mulholland, who has worked through at least eight innings in six of his last seven starts, gave up six hits in eight innings. He was lifted for a pinch-hitter in the eighth and Mitch Williams worked the ninth for his ninth save.

Braves 5, Padres 1

SAN DIEGO — Tom Glavine pitched a seven-hitter for his sixth straight victory and took over the National League ERA lead at 1.99.

Glavine (8-2) threw his second straight complete game to extend his NL lead to five. He struck out four and walked two.

Glavine was two outs away from his second shutout when Shawn Abner, who was hitting .167, hit his first homer of the season.

AL

SEATTLE — Brian Holman pitched a four-hitter and Pete O'Brien homered as the Seattle Mariners ended a seven-game losing streak with an 8-0 victory over the Kansas City Royals on Wednesday.

OBrien, Greg Briley and Omar Vizquel each had two RBIs for the streaky Mariners, a team with winning streaks of eight, six and six games as well as losing streaks of seven, six and five games this season. The Royals had their four-game winning streak snapped.

The Mariners broke open a 2-0 game by sending 11 batters to the plate in a six-run seventh against reliever Storm Davis. It was just the second loss in six games for the Royals under new manager Hal McRae.

Brewers 6, Tigers 2

MILWAUKEE — B.J. Surhoff had three RBIs, including a a two-run triple in a four-run fourth inning and Jaime Navarro won his third straight for Milwaukee.

Navarro (5-2), allowed six hits, walked one and struck out six.

He allowed just two hits over the first seven innings and didn't permit a runner beyond second until the Tigers scored two in the eighth on three hits. Tony Phillips had an RBI single and Lou Whitaker a sacrifice fly.

Orioles 2, Indians 1

BALTIMORE — Bob Melvin drove in the tie-breaking run in the seventh inning as the Baltimore Orioles beat slump-ridden Cleveland.

The Orioles took two out of three from the Indians to improve to 2-11-2 in series play this season. Baltimore won two of three in Texas in mid-April.

Yankees 7, Red Sox 0

NEW YORK — Jesse Barfield continued his assault on the Boston Red Sox by hitting one of three New York homers, and the surging Yankees got strong pitching from Scott Sanderson.

Barfield hit a three-run opposite-field homer off Tom Bolton (5-2) to cap a four-run first inning. The homer was Barfield's ninth this season and third in the three-game series against the Red Sox.

Angels 8, White Sox 4

CHICAGO — Chuck Finley became the first American Leaguer to win eight games, and hot-hitting Dave Winfield led California's 15-hit attack as the Angels beat error-prone Chicago.

Wally Joyner had the tie-breaking RBI in California's six-run sixth inning, during which the White Sox committed two of their four errors. Winfield was 3-for-5 with his eighth homer. He has eight hits in his last 11 at-bats and has hit two homers in as many nights at Comiskey Park.

Blue Jays 8, A's 3

TORONTO — Joe Carter hit a game-tying two-run homer and Devon White — who had three hits and three RBIs — hit a run-scoring single in the decisive sixth-inning as Toronto beat Oakland.

Manuel Lee had four hits and scored two runs for the Blue Jays.

Morgan looks to regain his Kemper stroke

Associated Press

POTOMAC, Md. — If past performances mean anything, then Gil Morgan should rediscover his putting stroke this week at the Kemper Open.

The Kemper has been Morgan's favorite stop on the tour, for a very obvious reason — having collected $322,925, he has earned more money at the tournament than any other golfer. After finishing in third in 1986 and 1982, second in 1983 and fifth in 1989, he took home the winner's check of $180,000 last year.

It was his first victory on the tour in seven years, and Morgan hasn't won since, although last year he earned a career-best $702,629.

This year, however, has been a struggle for the 44-year-old. He started well, finishing 18th, fourth and second in his first three tournaments, but since that time he has missed the cut three times in 10 attempts and done no better than 30th.

"My game is kind of mixed right now," he said. "Certainly, I'm not playing as well as last year. My putting is bugging me the most."

Morgan hopes to straighten his game out, beginning Thursday, on the 6,904-yard, par-71 TPC at Avenel course. As he prepares to defend his title, he would like to make this weekend as memorable as the one he experienced last year.

"The Kemper was the highlight of my season," he said. "I went seven years between victories, so I'll always remember the Kemper Open as the tournament that turned my career around."

Corey Pavin, the top-ranked money winner on the tour this year, pulled out earlier this week, citing fatigue. But Morgan will still have plenty of competition to contend with.

Greg Norman is playing in the Kemper for the first time since 1987, when the tournament first made the move from the spacious Congressional Golf Course to the stadium-style Avenel course.

Other contenders include Lanny Wadkins, currently second on the money list; 1987 champion Tom Kite; and 11 of the top 30 money winners on the tour this year.

Virginia might have surpassed NCAA numbers

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The University of Virginia may have violated NCAA regulations by having more than 95 players on football scholarships in 1989, a newspaper reported Wednesday.

The Virginian-Pilot and The Ledger-Star of Norfolk reported that NCAA officials said the school was over the limit when it rescinded the scholarship of a punter and gave it to a junior-college transfer.

The school rescinded the scholarship of Fred Carter in the fall of 1989, but paid for his tuition and living expenses on the condition he graduate in December. The school then gave his scholarship to Eugene Rogers when he enrolled in January 1990.

When Carter failed to graduate in December, he was billed for $2,141.48 in tuition and expenses. The school completed the paperwork on the scholarship withdrawal in March 1990.

"Midway through the year, you can't ask him to pay a scholarship back and avoid" being over the 95-scholarship limit, said Steve Mallonee of the NCAA legislative services office.

Weak report casts doubt on recovery

U.S. economy slumps in everything but trade in first quarter

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. economy fell at an annual rate of 2.6 percent in the first three months of 1991, reflecting weakness in virtually every corner except for the first — though not wholly encouraging — trade surplus in eight years, government figures showed Wednesday.

The Commerce Department said that the gross national product, the most widely watched measure of economic health, posted a second consecutive quarterly decline for the first time since the 1981-82 recession.

While the first-quarter drop was revised upward slightly from an original estimate of 2.8 percent, private economists were not impressed, noting that the economy was still falling at a rate significantly faster than the 1.6 percent GNP decrease in the fourth quarter.

"The picture of the first quarter is one of a sweeping and widespread recession. Literally, 85 percent of the economy was in a tailspin," said Allen Sinai, chief economist of the Boston Co. "This report is loaded with questions for the future about how can we mount a sustainable recovery."

One of the few sources of first-quarter strength was in the trade sector, where the country recorded its first quarterly trade surplus on a GNP basis in eight years. The surplus was $6.4 billion at an annual rate.

But even there, economists saw danger signals. The first quarter improvement came entirely from an 11.3 percent drop at an annual rate in imports of goods and services as the recession cut into Americans' appetites for foreign products.

And in a worrisome sign for the future, exports, the one bright spot for the economy over the past three years, fell as well, declining at a rate of 2.6 percent. The Bush administration is pinning much of its hopes for a second-half recovery on further gains in exports. Michael Boskin, chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers, has listed weakening economies in key U.S. export markets as one risk in the administration's forecast.

In another sign of the recession's deepening impact, the Commerce Department said Wednesday that after-tax profits of U.S. corporations fell by 5.6 percent in the first quarter. It was the biggest setback for profits since the third quarter of 1989.

While the Bush administration is forecasting a pick-up in the current April-June quarter, many private analysts said it is hard to see what will lead the economy out of the slump.

The Bush administration, worried about the timing and strength of an upturn, has been applying pressure to the Federal Reserve to cut interest rates further.

Prices slump

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices retreated Wednesday in advance of an industry report showing higher supplies.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in July settled at $21.11 per barrel, down 22 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Traders had accurately anticipated that the American Petroleum Institute's weekly inventory report would show the nation's supply of crude oil and petroleum products had gone up last week.

But the market was still uncertain about making any major moves as the OPEC ministers prepare to meet in Vienna, Austria, next Tuesday. Volume was light for a second straight day.

Natural gas for delivery in July closed at $1.344, up 1.3 cents per 1,000 cubic feet.

The API statistics showed the U.S. supply of crude oil totaled 347.2 million barrels for the week ending Friday, compared with 344.9 million a week earlier and 381.8 million a year earlier.

The supply of gasoline was at 209.8 million barrels, compared with 209.4 million a week earlier and 214.2 million a year earlier.

The nation's refineries were running at 87.0 percent of capacity, up from 86.3 percent a week earlier but down from 88.4 percent a year earlier.

Stocks advance

NEW YORK (AP) — Hopes for a recovery from the recession helped push stock prices higher Wednesday, extending Tuesday's sharp advance.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 44.95 points Tuesday, rose another 10.73 to 2,969.59.

Dollar rises

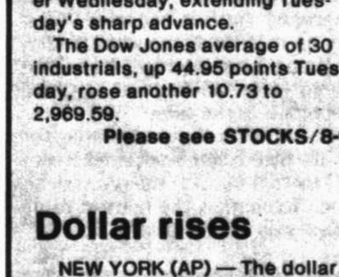

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar closed higher Wednesday in thin trading driven largely by technical factors.

Gold prices fell in New York, retracing some of their steps following their surge on Tuesday.

The British pound slipped against the dollar, dropping in London to $1.7315 from $1.7450 late Tuesday.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Tuesday's prices, included: 1.7137 German marks, up from 1.6938; 1.4610 Swiss francs, up from 1.4440; 5.8145 French francs, up from 5.7540; 1,273.00 Italian lire, up from 1,260.00; and 1.14665 Canadian dollars, up from 1.14655.

Inventors unveil new oil-refining technology

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — New technology designed to refine crude oil more cheaply and efficiently could increase production by 1 percent over current methods, its inventors said Wednesday.

Milton B. Thacker, who pioneered the process, unveiled an experimental apparatus called a Low Profile Fluid Catalytic Cracker.

"The main purpose of the prototype was to prove the operating concept," said Thacker, who also is chief executive officer of Process Inventors Inc., the company that holds U.S. patents on the invention.

"It functions. It breaks down the oil. We can control and circulate the catalyst," Thacker said.

The prototype unveiled at a news conference at the University of Utah can produce about 50 barrels of oil per day. Thacker said it introduces a new generation of fluid bed catalytic cracking technology into the world's petroleum refining picture.

Catalytic cracking is one of the principal steps in oil refining. The crackers split petroleum's heavier ingredients, including tar and asphalt, into lighter molecules to form gasoline, kerosene, dyes, aromatic substances, and numerous other chemical products.

To break down the petroleum, a cracker uses tons of catalyst — a fine white porous powder of zeolyte or alumina-silica mix.

Conventional crackers, some as tall as 300 feet, contain a tube where the catalyst and petroleum are mixed. An enormous, costly superstructure is required to support the tube, Thacker said.

In the conventional unit, the catalyst and petroleum tend to stay in contact for some minutes. "In that process, some of the petroleum is converted into light gas rather than usable liquid," he said.

The prototype, on the other hand, is laid out horizontally. It consists of a set of tubes and takes up about the same amount of space as a large house.

Because the catalyst circulates through the tubes, it breaks down the petroleum more efficiently, Thacker said.

During refining, the catalyst becomes clogged with carbon, which is burned off before the catalyst is recirculated.

Panel to decide fate of asbestos cases

NEW YORK (NYT) — A panel of federal judges will hear from dozens of lawyers today in a proceeding that could turn out to be one of the most significant arguments in the history of product liability.

The fight is over a forum — whether and how the federal courts should consolidate before one or a handful of judges the tens of thousands of asbestos personal injury cases that are now clogging many dockets.

If the panel consolidates the enormous caseload, as it has indicated, the move will represent a pivotal procedural change in handling asbestos cases.

Nearly 50 lawyers are scheduled to make oral arguments before the Judicial Panel on Multidistrict Litigation, the branch of the federal judiciary that rules on procedures for handling large and complex cases.

The seven-judge panel hearing the arguments in a courtroom in lower Manhattan includes some of the nation's most innovative federal judges: Milton Pollack, who recently forged a settlement in the complex bankruptcy of Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc.; Robert R. Merhige Jr., who resolved the vexatious litigation over A.H. Robins' Dalkon Shield birth control device, and Louis H. Pollak, a former dean of the law schools at Yale and the University of Pennsylvania and one of the lawyers who won Brown vs. Board of Education.

The multidistrict litigation panel has declined to do anything about asbestos litigation on five previous occasions dating to 1977. But its January order setting the stage for the Manhattan hearing indicated it would take steps to alleviate what it called "mammoth litigation" that has become "almost unmanageable in scope."

The order for the hearing said that the judges' goal would be "to streamline the common questions in this litigation to the greatest extent possible; to eliminate duplication and overlap; to encourage a uniform case management plan." The order also mentioned the possibility of establishing one or more registries, presumably to give higher priority to those with the most severe afflictions.

Shortly after the panel's order, a committee of judges appointed by Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist concluded that asbestos litigation had reached crisis proportions.

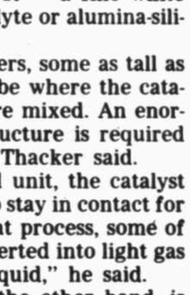

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Utility stocks usually steady investment

By Bill Doyle

Q. Both my wife and I are past 65 and retired. Ten years before retirement, we planned for supplemental income by investing in and holding electric utility stocks. The dividends from these investment are now providing a healthy supplement to our pensions.

What are your thoughts on our method of investment for the present and the long term?

Doyle

A. Your results show your method is excellent. What else can I think? If more people invested during their working years to have additional income when retirement time rolls around, far fewer letters would come to this column from senior citizens strapped for cash.

In general, utility stocks are conservative investments whose dividends and share prices rise moderately, but not spectacularly, over the years. The other side of that coin — equally comforting — is that utility stocks seldom take big plunges in price.

There are exceptions, backing up the adage: "It's not a stock market; it's a market in stocks." That means you can't expect to make money in all stocks. You have to choose stocks carefully.

The earnings of some electric utilities and, consequently, their share prices and dividend payments have been hurt when their requests for rate increases have been turned down or drastically reduced by state regulators.

Bigger problems come when costs of nuclear generating plants, which are staggeringly expensive, get out of hand. Even worse, in a handful of cases, those plants never go "on line" to produce electricity. And let's not overlook the accident at the Three Mile Island facility, which came close to bankrupting General Public Utilities. Fortunately, that company recovered and its stock is well above its pre-accident price.

The lesson behind all this is to investigate before investing. For folks who can't do the necessary research on their own, that means getting information and recommendations from brokers.

Q. I maintain accounts with two brokers. One is with a "full-service" brokerage house; the other with a "discount" firm. The full-service guy, who is with one of this country's biggest brokerage, constantly sends me research reports on the overall market and individual stocks. The discounter never sends anything.

I study the material from the full-service firm. Then, when I buy or sell, I usually do so through the discounter. I occasionally place an order with the full-service broker, to keep the reports from him coming.

Am I breaking any securities rules or regulations?

A. Of course not. You're free to deal with any individual broker or as many brokers as you choose. Your full-service broker undoubtedly would be mighty unhappy if he found out. But that would happen only if someone at the discount house spilled the beans.

And that's a no-no. Brokerages are required to keep information about their customers' buying and selling activities and, even, the names of customers' accounts confidential.

Although it's impossible to guess, much less come up with firm figures, how many investors do what you do, it's a safe bet the number is huge. The reason is simple. Discount brokerages charge lower commissions.

Q. A friend tells me he receives market and research reports from the discount brokerage firm with which he deals. The only thing I ever get from mine is the confirmation statement after I buy or sell a stock. Should I switch firms?

A. That depends on whether you want to pay rock-bottom or somewhat higher commissions. It's clear you are dealing with what's called a "pipe rake" or "bare bones" discount firm, which does nothing other than fill buy and sell orders. Some discounters provide research and varying degrees of other services, which increases both their costs and the commissions they charge customers.

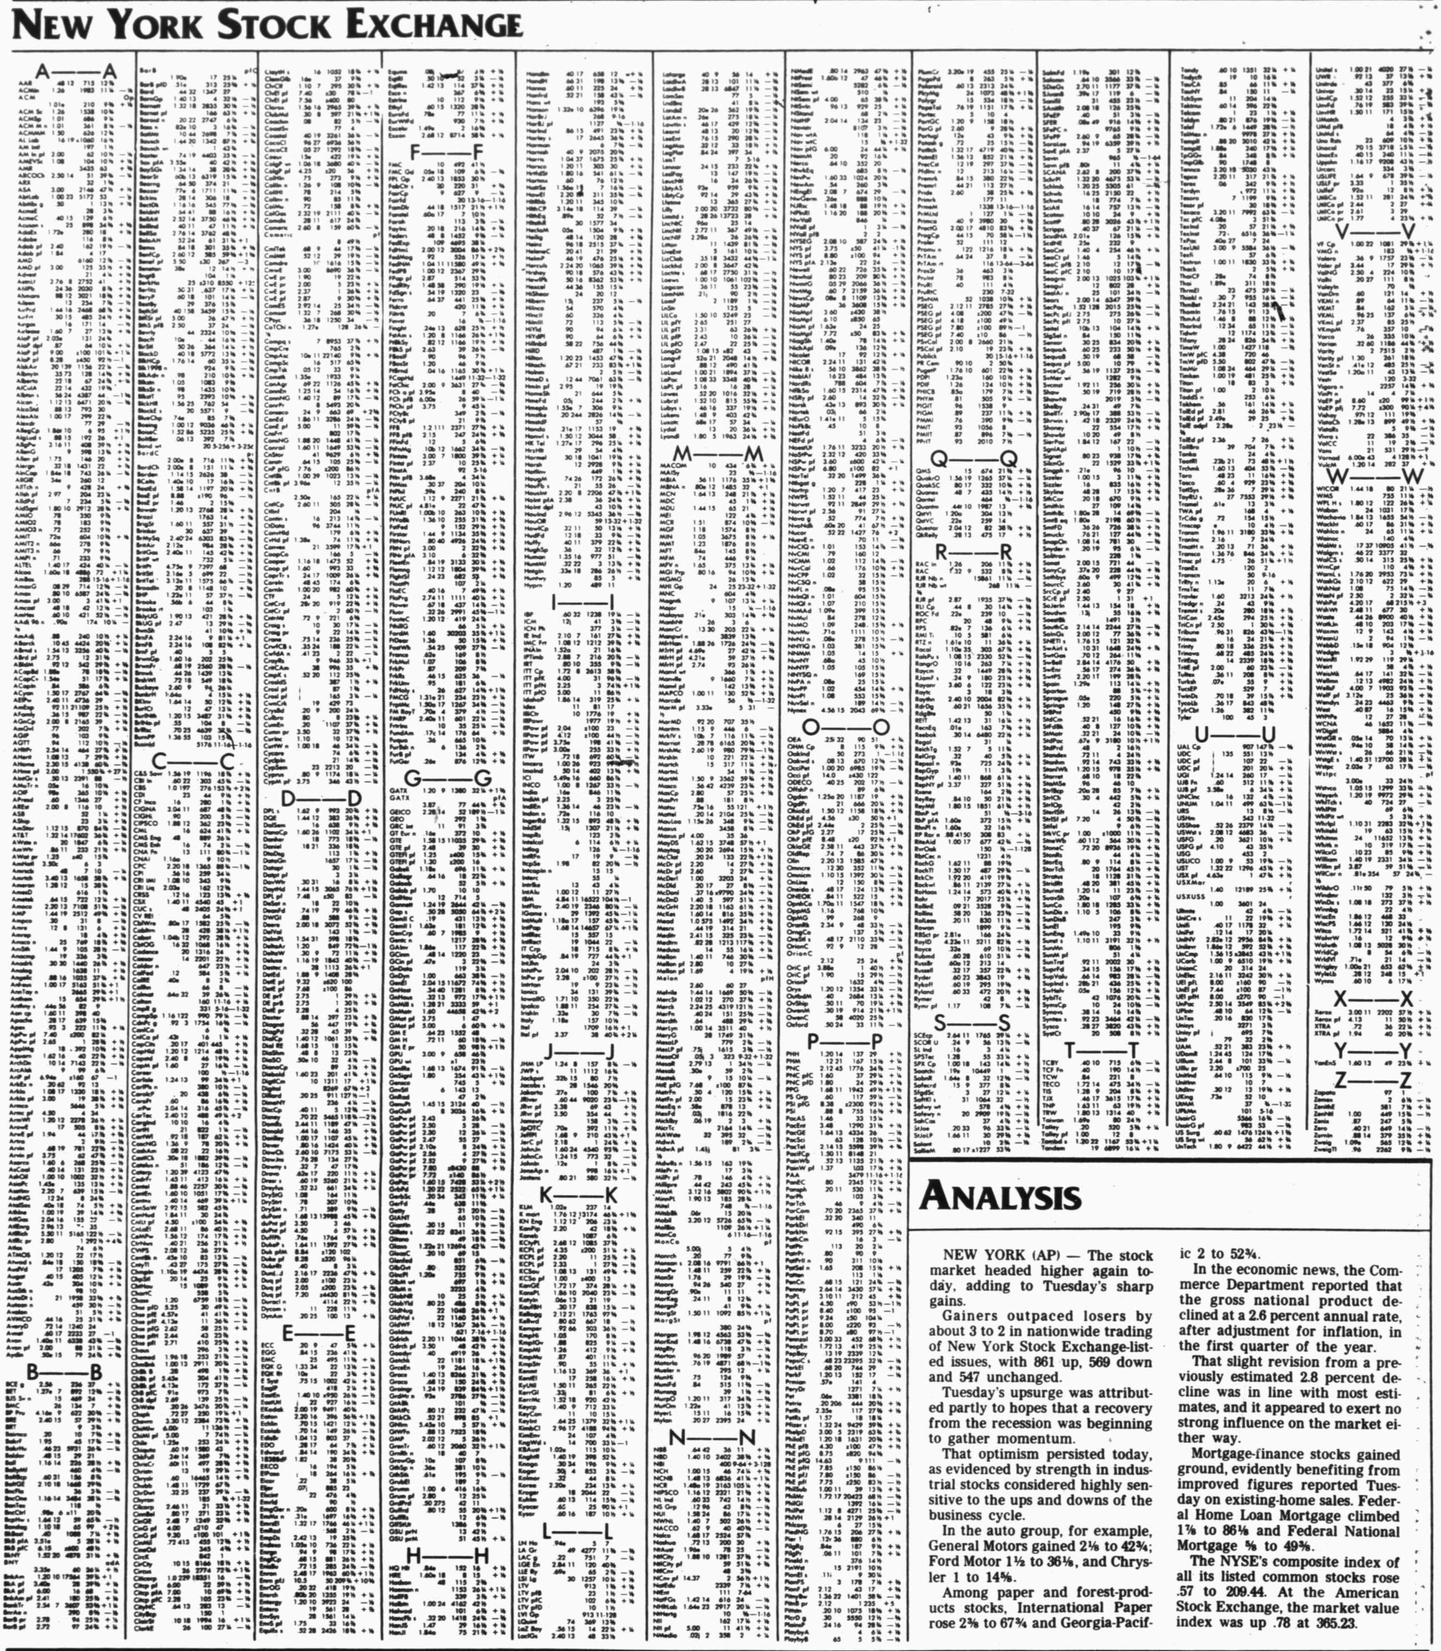

If you check, you almost certainly will find the commissions you pay are lower than those paid by your friend.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

ANALYSIS

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market headed higher again today, adding to Tuesday's sharp gains.

Gainers outpaced losers by about 3 to 2 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 861 up, 569 down and 547 unchanged.

Tuesday's upsurge was attributed partly to hopes that a recovery from the recession was beginning to gather momentum.

That optimism persisted today, as evidenced by strength in industrial stocks considered highly sensitive to the ups and downs of the business cycle.

In the auto group, for example, General Motors gained 2⅝ to 42¾; Ford Motor 1½ to 36⅛, and Chrysler 1 to 14⅝.

Among paper and forest-products stocks, International Paper rose 2⅜ to 67¾ and Georgia-Pacific 2 to 52¾.

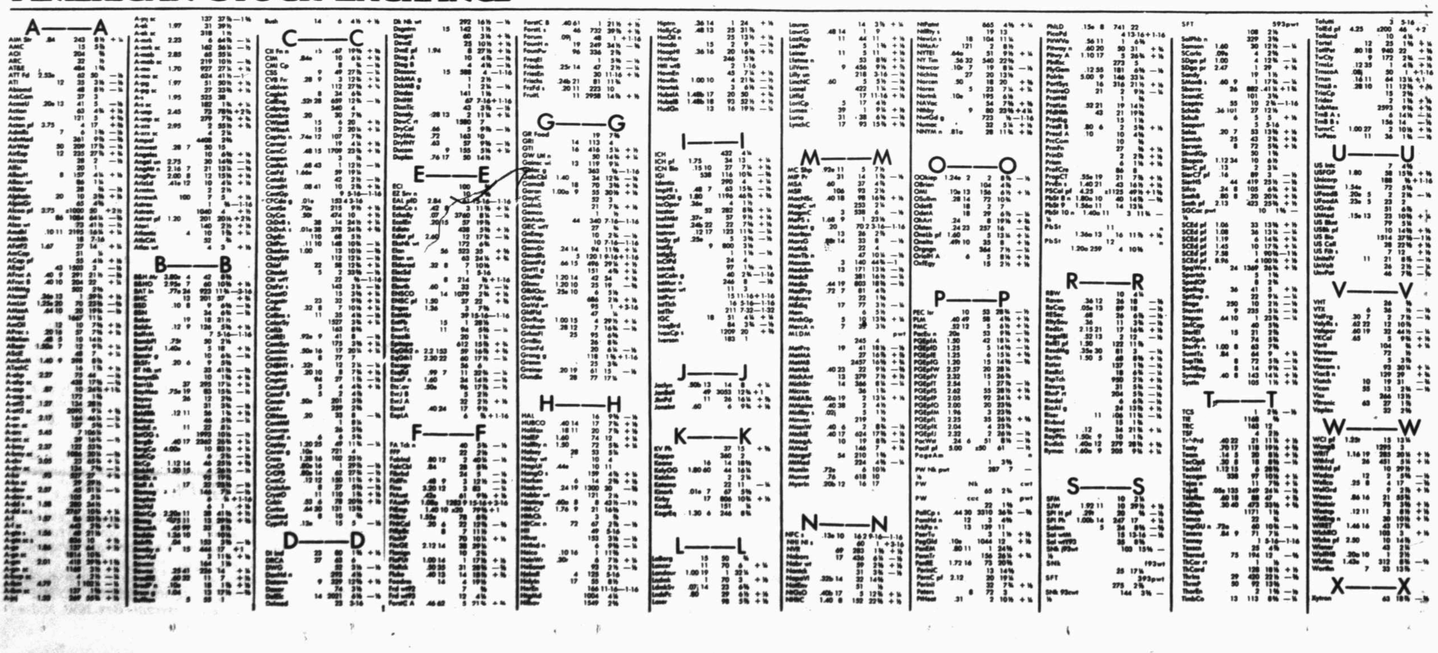

In the economic news, the Commerce Department reported that the gross national product declined at a 2.6 percent annual rate, after adjustment for inflation, in the first quarter of the year.

That slight revision from a previously estimated 2.8 percent decline was in line with most estimates, and it appeared to exert no strong influence on the market either way.

Mortgage-finance stocks gained ground, evidently benefiting from improved figures reported Tuesday on existing-home sales. Federal Home Loan Mortgage climbed 1⅛ to 86⅛ and Federal National Mortgage ⅝ to 49⅝.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose .57 to 209.44. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .78 at 365.23.

IBM chief turns up heat as computer giant faces slump

Source: Company reports, Bloomberg Financial Markets AP/Cynthia Greer

NEW YORK (AP) — IBM Chairman John Akers has been making blunt speeches to his managers warning that the computer industry is in a crisis and that company employees are "too damn comfortable" as it loses business.

Akers' comments may indicate deeper trouble at one of the nation's most important companies than it has publicly let on. IBM has blamed the poor economy worldwide — not internal shortcomings — for lower sales and profits it reported in the first quarter.

On top of the recession, International Business Machines Corp., like other computer makers, must contend with a more competitive industry that is seeing historic growth rates slow.

IBM's worldwide market share has slipped to about 23 percent, down from 37 percent in 1983, according to Gartner Group Inc., a technology research firm.

In recent weeks, a number of analysts lowered their earnings projections for IBM for this quarter and the year. IBM shares fell $1 to close at $104.12½ in New York Stock Exchange trading Wednesday.

One industry analyst said Akers' comments, reported in several newspapers Wednesday, appear to represent a change in tone.

"I never felt a sense of urgency" before, said Martin Ressinger of the Chicago investment firm Duff & Phelps Inc. "Now you sort of sense that it is time to get a little bit tough."

According to the newspaper accounts, based on notes taken at one Akers session by an unidentified IBM employee, the chairman told managers a few weeks ago that the company had "too many people standing around the water cooler waiting to be told what to do."

Akers was said to have told the managers to fire more marginal employees.

"The fact that we're losing market share makes me goddamn mad. I used to think my job as a (sales) rep was at risk if I lost a sale," Akers was quoted as telling the managers. "Tell them theirs is at risk if they lose" one.

"The tension level is not high enough in the business — everyone is too damn comfortable at a time when the business is in crisis," Akers was quoted as saying.

Akers also was quoted as saying IBM needs to improve product quality.

Copies of the notes from Akers' talk were widely circulated inside IBM through an electronic mail network, and printed copies were sent to several newspapers by an IBM employee who acted on his own, according to an IBM source. IBM spokesman Peter Thonis said he could not confirm Akers' actual words, but said the tone of the reported comments was accurate.

He said Akers' concern wasn't prompted solely by IBM's poor showing in the first quarter, when sales fell 17 percent from a year earlier and operating profit dropped 50 percent.

"He's been making these speeches for several months," Thonis said.

Analyst Bob Djurdjevic of Annex Research said Akers' sharp comments could hurt the 6-year IBM chairman.

"This would be like the manager blaming the team for the fact that they lost the game. And that sort of manager starts to lose the respect of the players," Djurdjevic said.

One IBM employee posted a memo on the company's computer mail system several days ago calling on Akers to resign over the comments, he said.

"I never felt a sense of urgency before. Now you sort of sense that it is time to get a little bit tough.'

Airline hopes to ground discount-fare newsletter

NEW YORK (AP) — American Airlines, giant of the U.S. air travel industry, is trying to stop a tiny newsletter from publishing information about discount fares for people going to conventions and trade shows.

American says in a federal lawsuit that the newsletter, Travel Confidential, is engaged in a civil racketeering violation that helps travelers commit fraud. Travel Confidential publisher Paul L. Edwards says he is merely collecting and distributing public information.

Edwards recently began selling his monthly listing of discount air fares, hotel rates and car rentals, offered by companies in the travel industry to groups planning large meetings. Those interested in attending the meetings can use a special code number for each event to obtain discounts when they reserve their flight, car or hotel.

In the case of air fares on American, the discounts can range between 5 percent and 40 percent, depending on the type of ticket.

American says the cheap fares are supposed to be used only by members of groups sponsoring the various meetings or people who plan to attend them. There have no doubt been violations in the past when others found out about the code numbers and used them, airline spokesman Marty Heires acknowledges, but American fears Travel Confidential could create bigger problems.

"When a newsletter suddenly grabs all of these fares out there, that certainly becomes a much more valuable resource to someone who wants to cheat the system," Heires said Wednesday.

Edwards said neither he nor his newsletter, published in New York, encourages anyone to cheat.

"We understand what American Airlines is saying, but we have not committed any fraud," Edwards said. "If my subscribers are running afoul of American Airlines somehow, that is a matter between American Airlines and them."

The convention discounts are widespread in the airline industry, and American is not the only carrier to take notice of Travel Confidential. Edwards said he also received a letter from United Airlines, the nation's second largest carrier, saying United did not like what he was doing.

United had no immediate comment.

Q. How may a person become an organ or tissue donor?

A. Pursuant to the Texas Anatomical Gift Act, a person of sound mind, having attained the age of 18, may donate all or any part of their body as an anatomical gift. Also, the person's spouse, an adult child of the person, either parent of the person, or other statutorily authorized persons may make an anatomical gift of part or all of that person's body. Subject to a donee's obligation to refuse a gift if the donor or other statutorily authorized person opposes the gift, the gift may be accepted by any statutorily authorized person or entity. An anatomical gift may be made in a will, another written document executed by the donor in front of two witnesses, through a form on the back of the donor's Texas driver's license, or through a recorded telephonic or other recorded message. Even after a person has designated all or part of their body to be an anatomical gift upon their death, the donor may still amend or revoke that gift as long as the amendment or revocation complies with the relevant statutes.

Q. What does the term "emancipated minor" mean?

A. A person is considered a minor until he reaches age 18, at which time he is considered an adult, capable of handling his own legal matters. Texas law provides that a minor who is at least 17 years of age, or is at least 16 years of age, living separate and apart from his parents, who is self-supporting and managing his own financial affairs, can petition the court to have his disabilties of minority removed. Specific facts must be included in ths petition as required by law, and the parent or legal guardian of the minor must verify the petition in writing. If the petition is granted, the minor would then have the legal capacity of an adult, including the capacity to contract, subject only to the specific statutory or consitutional requirements of other laws.

Q. What is the Deceptive Trade Practices Act ("DTPA")?

A. Because merchants generally have a more powerful bargaining position than consumers in typical business transactions, the DTPA mandates extra harsh penalties to deter merchants from taking advantage of consumers. In addition to purchase transactions, the statute specifically covers lease transactions as well.
In especially egregious situations, the statute entitles the consumer to triple the actual damages he may have suffered. Any consumer who prevails under this statute is entitled to attorneys' fees.
Because "consumer" is generally defined in the statute, courts allow a wide variety of people to sue under the DTPA; therefore, if you feel someone has taken advantage of you in a business transaction in which you received goods or services, it may serve you well to contact an attorney to inquire as to whether you are entitled to penalties under this statute.

Father's Day gifts have flair, style

By Francine Parnes
Associated Press

Only a handful of shopping days till Father's Day, and still no gift for Dad?

Start with a card.

This year, Father's Day cards reflect changing family roles.

"They're showing Dad's softer side," says Andrea Boren, spokesman for the Greeting Card Association in Washington. "Cards showing him helping with homework or making dinner are in the rack right alongside the more traditional hunting and sporting cards."

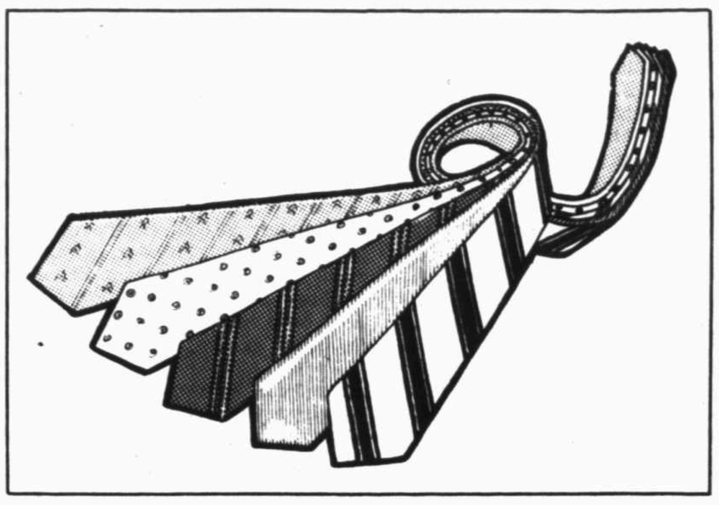

The association says some 100 million cards will be sent this Father's Day.

If a card won't do, add class to a personal note by having it written in calligraphy, about $17 to $21. Choose from handmade floral papers, rolled, tied with satin ribbon and sealed in a special tube. Call Love Letters at 1-800-448-WORD.

If you want to offer more than words, go for neckwear. Between 12 million and 15 million ties are sold each Father's Day, says Gerald Andersen, executive director of the Neckwear Association of America, a New York trade group.

Even if you have a conservative, pinstripe kind of dad, Andersen says, "You can upgrade him into the world of tie fashion by buying a more updated version of something he's familiar with."

Florals, he says, are the most popular pattern, followed by abstract designs. They start about $20 and hit $100.

IF YOUR DAD is the ideal candidate for conversational neckwear, give him a Kenneth Cole silk crepe tie silkscreened with an array of footwear — Oxfords, riding boots and loafers. It's about $37.50 at Bloomingdale's, Macy's California, Nordstrom and Burdine's.

Some of Nicole Miller's silk neckties, $60, as well as silk boxers, $70, and bathrobes, $260, feature a vice motif — with dice, coffee, cigarettes and chocolate. The line is carried at Saks Fifth Avenue.

Or give him happy feet. From E.G. Smith hosiery come "The City that Never Sleeps," socks. They feature taxis, apples and the Empire State Building. For West Coast dads, E.G. Smith offers "Lights, Camera, Action!" socks, starring rolls of film and the "Hollywood" sign. Smith's socks run about $10 at Macy's, Burdine's, A&S and Bloomingdale's.

There is no lack of theme gifts for golfing dads. They can tee off in E.G. Smith's "Hole in Sock," green hosiery with fairway, $10. Kenneth Cole has a multicolor silk tie with golfers at play, about $37.50 at Bloomingdale's, Macy's California, Nordstrom and Burdine's.

Spiegel catalog (1-800-345-4500) has a goldtone wrist watch, $45, with a golfer on the face. The strap is leather and fabric. There's also a cotton knit crew neck sweater in green, cream and red with all-over tournament pattern, $68, and cotton boxer shorts with bold golf print, $14.

IF TENNIS is his game, treat him to pleated broadcloth Bermudas with nostalgic tennis memorabilia on a black or burgundy background. They're about $40 from Boston Preparatory Co. (1-800-333-7385).

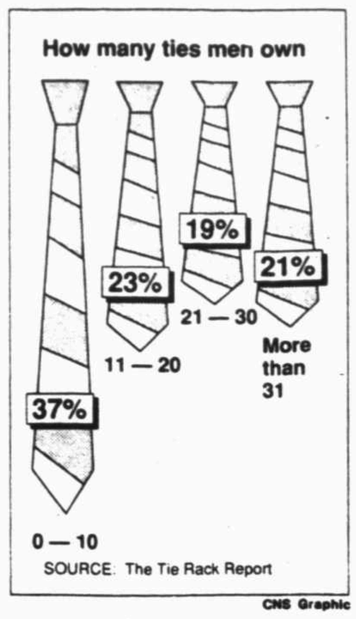

Or take him out to the ballgame in a Cooperstown collection baseball cap, copies of hats worn in eras gone by. A hang tag gives a brief history of the team during the time period and comes with a certificate of authenticity. They're $19.90 to $24.90 through Spiegel.

Be it fishing, sailing, skiing, horseback riding or golf, there's a sweatshirt with a logo of Dad's favorite sport. First Class offers cotton blend custom-embroidered crew necks in loden, navy, gray or powder blue, $55 by mail, (1-800-334-2249).

For beach fun, dads will delight in Claiborne's fuchsia or salmon cotton hooded sweatshirt with "Surf" emblazoned across the chest. It's $68 at Lord & Taylor, A&S, Jordan Marsh, Foley's and Dillards. A matching cotton T-shirt is $26.

Also seaworthy are Jockey International's cotton boxers with green, red and blue fish. They're $12 at Macy's, Dillards, May Co. and Bloomingdale's. A nautical crew neck cotton sweater in blue, white and gold with anchor design is $105 at J.C. Penney.

If he likes gardening, spoil him with jewelry designer Robert Lee Morris' upscale hand tools, $150 for brass, $195 for gold plate. The implements are sold at Robert Lee Morris boutiques in New York, Ultimo in Chicago and Zona in Aspen, Colo.

BUT IT NEITHER water nor land will do, go for a flight jacket from Avirex, suppliers to the American military. An embroidered "Keep 'em flying" logo features the American flag and a B-17 bomber. It's $119.95 from the Hammacher Schlemmer catalog, (1-800-543-3366).

Henry Grethel takes flight with a short-sleeve cream and burgundy cotton polo shirt with old-time aircraft, $55 at Wallach's, J.C. Penney and Nordstrom.

Enterprising gift givers with Dads on the go can drop $9,600 for a watch with two time zones. In 18 karat gold with sapphires, it's at Cartier stores across the country.

Or for the truly discriminating Dad, a cool $1 million will get a wrist watch from Piaget with 55 carats of diamonds.

New styles in lingerie are pushing up sales

By Carrie Donovan
N.Y. Times News Service

Little lingerie shops and giant department stores alike are reporting an impressive increase in the sales of push-up bras. These brassieres redefine the contours of the bosom, making it smaller on the sides and puffier in front. Thus, even an A-cup customer can exhibit a little cleavage.

"It took American women a long time to get used to this new definition," said Samantha Jones, the owner of the Samanatha Jones Lingerie boutique in Manhattan.

Susan Falk, the president of Henri Bendel, believes that the push-up bra's success has a direct correlation to the current evening-dress silhouettes. "We've been selling so many evening designs that show a lot of decolletage" she said. "It follows that a woman wants a bra that emphasizes the bosom."

Bendel's two best-selling bras of this sort are both very feminine and lacy. One, by La Perla, has removable pads, and costs $98; the other, by Felina, is a good value at $30.

Though Macy's will not give exact sales figures, it has recently been selling a lot of push-up bras. The popular padded versions by Jezebel cost $24 and $29.

Underwiring is essential to the framework of the bra. Small pads, or "balconies," as Ms. Jones quaintly calls them, give the most obvious shaping. Some women might find them too extreme, but balconies or no, a push-up bra will give a youthful uplift to anyone.

In spite of warm summer sun, 'vampire' look is catching on

By Carrie Donovan
N.Y. Times News Service

One would suppose most women would want to look healthy and natural as summer approaches, so it is odd that vampire-style makeup is catching on just now. But fashion often has no rhyme or reason. Even Madonna is wearing her version of it.

For those who would sink their teeth into the vampire look, the mouth is the place to start. Pass by the lipsticks in reds, pinks, corals and oranges. Go straight for those with a purply, brownish cast. They may have names like Sepia or Blackberry, but their coloration should more closely resemble that of fresh liver — or dried blood.

Next, get out the black eyeliner. Draw a rim around each eye and carry the line out a bit at the outside corners. (You can smudge the line if you find the effect too startling.)

The eyebrows should be thin but shapely, and arched slightly. If necessary, darken them. Leave off any trace of rouge or blusher and work toward achieving a matte finish for the rest of your face.

If this is well done, it isn't ghoulish, just interesting. The vampire look is best on brunettes, but blondes seem to be falling for it as well. On them, it is even more arresting. To achieve a slightly more sprightly variation, keep the eye treatment blurry and soft, and the lipstick glossy.

Some nail salons are little shops of horrors

By Torri Minton
N.Y. Times News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — When nurse Linda Holleman walked into a beauty salon with official-looking plaques on the wall in an expensive neighborhood, she assumed it was a safe place to get her nails done.

She saw someone bleeding from a cuticle clipping foul-up. It happens.

The manicurist stopped the bleeding with a chemical pencil. It's done.

The pencil went back into a pitcher of dirty tools, including a slightly bloody pair of scissors.

The salon owner insisted he always cleaned his instruments — every night.

"I was in shock," said Holleman, a former nursing instructor at the University of San Francisco, with a doctorate in medical anthropology. "It's like dirty needles."

The shop, like many others, was not licensed.

With fancy fingers — from snakeskin wraps to solid gold nails — all the rage, stories of dirty manicures that pose health dangers are growing.

And with a scant four inspectors for 25,000 California beauty salons, it's consumer be wary.

AMONG OTHER problems, there is a slight risk of transmitting the AIDS virus and hepatitis B when instruments contaminated with blood are not cleaned between clients, say the state Board of Cosmetology and the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta.

Although no such cases have been reported, the board changed its rules about salon sanitary conditions two years ago to reflect the concern.

'We require restaurants to have a certain temperature in their dishwashers to ensure that the glassware is sterile. Would you rather have a pair of cuticle scissors that's going to cut into you than a glass of water touch your lips? That's direct invasion. Very similar to a needle stick.'

Centers for Disease Control
regional AIDS consultant

"Let's not wait for an outbreak, folks, let's just wash our stuff," says Dr. Don Francis, Centers for Disease Control regional AIDS consultant. He cited a hepatitis B outbreak in Florida started by an acupuncturist who didn't sterilize needles.

"We require restaurants to have a certain temperature in their dishwashers to ensure that the glassware is sterile.

"Would you rather have a pair of cuticle scissors that's going to cut into you than a glass of water touch your lips? That's direct invasion. Very similar to a needle stick," he says.

The number of "nail techs" has grown dramatically.

In 1970, the state had 8,710 licensed manicurists. By 1989 the number had more than quadrupled to 41,557.

"In concept, we should be out there because there are more issues than hair in the bowl," says Jeff Weir, assistant executive officer for the cosmetology board, which has more members (seven) than inspectors.

Weir says the board, funded by licensing and exam fees, has tried introducing legislation to get more inspectors to enable inspections at least once every two years. It was vetoed. The board asked the state if it could spend more money on inspectors. It was turned down.

Now, a bill is in the works that would require inspections once a year at barber and beauty shops. The boards overseeing both will merge into one barbering and cosmetology board in July 1992.

CUSTOMERS, MEANWHILE, have complained about everything from nails rotting and falling off to getting yeast infections from manicures.

Shirley Thomas, enforcement coordinator for the state cosmetology board, hears it all:

One woman alleged that a manicure gave her warts all around her cuticles. Fungus and molds are the most common problem.

Fingernails can fall off or separate from the skin if artificial nails aren't applied properly.

"This sounds pretty gross, but some people's fingers will start throbbing the night after a manicure, and by the time they get their (artificial) nails off, they might have pus coming out from under their nails."

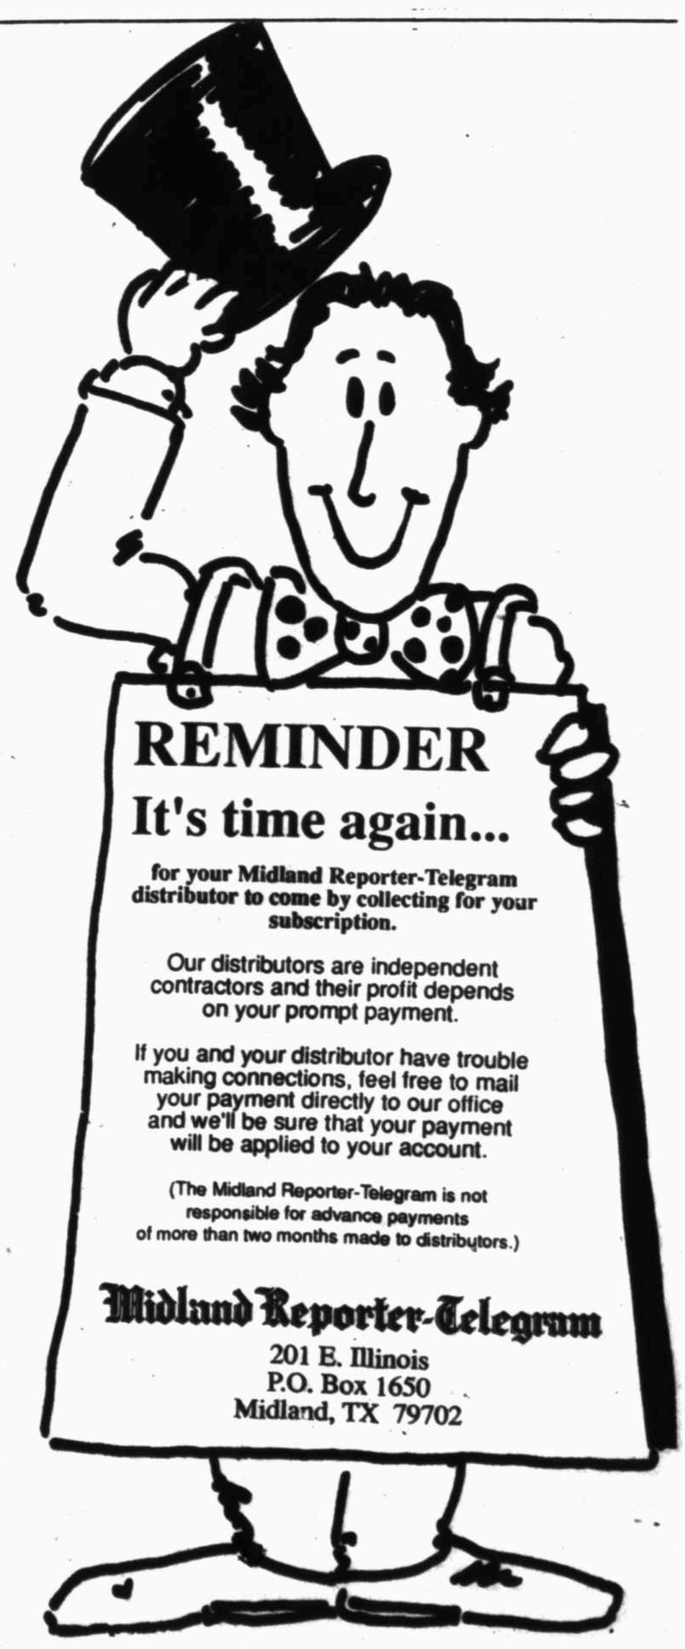

In a few cases, people have lost their nails permanently. "It's likely it came from the manicure," says Thomas.

The problem is, she says, it's very hard to prove.

"You need a preponderance of evidence. If somebody has a yeast infection, their doctor's not going to ask if they had a manicure recently."

About half the violations at beauty salons in the past year were of health and safety rules, says Denise Ostton, executive officer of the state Board of Cosmetology.

"In manicuring establishments it was usually in the area of non-disinfection of the equipment."

Summer's here, but in fashion it's fall

By Francine Parnes

NEW YORK (AP) — While some of us haven't given a thought to what to wear this summer, fall's trends are in.

Plaids, leggy looks, monochromatic brights and easy formulas for dressing are fall '91 themes from American designers who recently previewed their best for the fashion press and retail buyers.

A fling with tartan is surely afoot — with new twists on a classic pattern. Bill Blass, known for casting daytime fabrics in after-five silhouettes, takes plaid into the evening with a silver, gold and black spangled tweed bustier and tulle skirt. Oscar de la Renta goes dressy with sequinned and bejeweled plaid jackets, complete with matching gloves. And Ralph Lauren adds a peplum to his brass-buttoned tartan jackets.

Plaids get an update by going bright. Adrienne Vittadini infuses her group with acid shades of magenta, gold, yellow and blue. Gloria Sachs' new line, GSGS, features tartan kilts in a vivid combination of orange, khaki and red. Added punch comes from sweater sets and ribbed tights in orange cashmere and ankle boots in shiny yellow rubber.

WHETHER HEMLINES rise or fall, legs remain the focus — with fishnet stockings at Bob Mackie, trellis-patterned tights at Bill Blass, high-slit gowns and open coatdresses at Isaac Mizrahi, irregular hemlines at B. Moody and Geoffrey Beene, and scalloped lace hems at Calvin Klein.

In a season when many skirts still land squarely on the thigh — or are eliminated in favor of hip-length tunics or jackets — opaque leggings and tights are the requisite cover-up. Many designers, including Blass, Jennifer George, Nicole Miller and Louis Dell'Olio for Anne Klein keep legs under cover with thigh-high suede boots that soften the impact of sky-high hemlines.

Topping it all off is a jacket, the season's building block. Many are long and lean, stopping around mid-thigh, such as Calvin Klein's jacket-dresses. It's a minimalist look, simply put with matching opaques and flat suede shoes.

The good news is that easy, comfortable dressing ruled the runways.

Fabrics are soft and stretchy, in Lycra blends and cashmere. Silhouettes take on the ease of leggings or catsuits with something on top such as an oversized tunic. Ralph Lauren's wool and spandex ski pants and knit stirrup pants with racing stripes from his "Military Ski Patrol" collection likewise go easy. Louis Dell'Olio for Anne Klein offers pant-boots, all-in-one leggings and boots that simplify what-to-wear dilemmas.

EASY DRESSING means that colors go monochromatic, either in a muted palette of earth tones from Calvin Klein and Ralph Lauren, military grays and khakis from Norma Kamali or head-to-toe incendiary orange, blue, fuchsia or kelly green from Anne Klein.

Calvin Klein and Donna Karan are two designers who go the easy route most successfully. Calvin Klein's formula is based on sportswear separates. Ribbed knit cashmere cardigans and tunics slide over narrow stretch-velvet pants or cashmere stretch tights. Matching suede gloves and suede flats or slip-on boots with a one-inch heel complete the look. It's all cast in low-key shades such as loden, curry, sienna or camel.

Donna Karan takes it easy with layers of single-color dressing, too, this time in black. A deerskin trench jacket slips over a matte jersey crewneck bodysuit and a short asymmetrical wrap skirt in wool jersey.

For evening, Carolyne Roehm's one-color strategy is midnight blue. She sent 20 models down the runway in a sea of navy jersey dresses accented with lace, chiffon, velvet or voile.

If monotones aren't your thing, eye-popping crayon-bright color combinations light up the collections, too. Nicole Miller goes back to the '60s with color-block dresses that mix red, purple, tobacco and black, or gold, yellow and orange. Her gold bodysuit contrasts with a purple zip-front coat and purple jumper.

Red with orange stirs up a blaze in Carolina Herrera's wool-tweed parkas and spencer jackets.

Marc Jacobs, the designer for Perry Ellis, likes to add a zing of color to gloves. A grape-colored car coat tops an ivory sweater and chocolate trousers, while gloves serve up a dash of fuchsia. His strawberry or blue dresses with flip skirts get their zest from bronze gloves and tights.

A FINAL WAY to pack punch: Zip up. Carried over from spring, zippers are closing up everything from Geoffrey Beene's taupe scuba suit and funnel-neck wool jacket to Nicole Miller's retro red patent-leather zip-front car coat. Eleanor Brenner gets into the act with zip jumpsuits and twill blazers, and Donna Karan creates the look in black suede ankle boots with chunky gold back zippers.

But it's Louis Dell'Olio's Anne Klein collection that's really zipper-happy. Sweaters, double-breasted dresses, stretch wool-crepe jackets and motorcycle jackets all get the treatment. Accessorize with black suede boots with spiraling zippers.

Top off with the season's short trench coat, and fall awaits.

DEAR ABBY

Elderly advised to ask doctor questions

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I have recently seen two letters in your column regarding the use of medicines by older people and the problems that medicines may cause, especially in the elderly.

Van Buren

People should consider themselves "consumers," not "patients," when it comes to health care, particularly when it comes to the use of medications. Many older people believe that "M.D." stands for Minor Deity, and they don't ask questions of their doctors (or pharmacists) when they should!

Asking questions means taking some responsibility for one's own health care. It helps to know what to expect from a medicine. For example, ask:

1. Exactly what is this medication being used for?
2. How will I feel after I start taking it?
3. How will I know if the medicine is working?
4. What are the most common side effects I can expect?
5. Can I do anything to prevent any of these side effects?
6. How long will I have to keep taking this medicine?
7. Will this medicine be very expensive? About how much?

You are doing a major service to older adults and their care-givers by calling attention to this issue, Abby. I hope this letter is helpful to your readers. — MADELINE FEINBERG, DIRECTOR, ELDER HEALTH PROGRAM, UNIVERSITY OF MARYLAND SCHOOL OF PHARMACY

DEAR MS. FEINBERG: Since overmedication can be such a serious problem for senior citizens, I am sure your letter will be of more than passing interest to many. Other valuable tips for using medicines are available, free. Send a stamped (29 cents), self-addressed, business-sized envelope to: Information Officer, School of Pharmacy, 20 N. Pine St., Room 352, Baltimore, Md. 21201.

DEAR ABBY: I am praying that you can give me some guidance. My husband of many years uses credit cards constantly. He has no pension and has never believed in life insurance or having a savings account. Social Security is his only income.

I have learned that he owes approximately $8,000. I believe he pays his monthly dues from each of his credit cards, in turn. I have no idea how many cards he holds, and I have never signed for any of his credit cards.

We each have our own checking accounts at different banks. I am forced to work full-time because of the many times I have had to come to his financial aid. He is now past 80. I am 69. My concern is that in the event that he should die before I do, would I be held responsible for his debts? — WORRIED IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR WORRIED: Because you are living in a community property state, you are indeed responsible for your husband's debts if he predeceases you. You would be wise to consult an attorney.

Most teen-agers do not know the facts about drugs, AIDS and how to prevent unwanted pregnancy. It's all in Abby's updated, expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." To order, send a business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

AT WIT'S END

Athletes keep running 'comeback trail'

By Erma Bombeck

I call it the Nolan Ryan frenzy.

A guy who at 44 should begin to see his father's arms come through the sleeves of his sweater any day now, goes out to the pitching mound and pitches his seventh no-hitter. And all the fortysomethings begin to think, "Hey, maybe it isn't all over. Maybe I can make the time machine go back for me."

Bombeck

So at 46, Jim Palmer takes another shot at baseball, Mark Spitz at 41 eyes the Olympics, and Bjorn Borg tells his 34-year-old legs to "move."

Don't act shocked. We all do it. Maybe not on such a public scale, but who among us has not tried to grab youth by the throat and make it dance with us just one more time?

There's the father who plays touch football with his cronies on a Saturday and can't get out of bed on Sunday. There are the women with Spandex faces and men who have bun implants. The competition between mother and daughter is a staple. We are all guilty of fighting old age like it's a catastrophic disease.

Maybe it's because we're a young country and don't have a lot of history to revere, so we erect shrines to George Burns and Bob Hope. Whatever the reason, I don't find the comeback trail as pathetic as some writers have pointed out. In fact, I find it a rather gutsy thing to do.

After all the sports heroes have gone to Disneyland, what do you expect them to do with the rest of their lives? Sell coffee machines? Liniment? Health insurance? Cars? Hardware?

They're used to discipline, hard work and surmounting crummy odds. That's what the sports business is all about. If they had been discouraged by any one of those three virtues, they'd never have gotten to the top of their profession in the first place.

I've always felt sorry for ex-presidents of the United States. What are they supposed to do after they've written their memoirs and built their library? The public puts you out to pasture with an expired driver's license and a closet full of power suits and no place to wear them.

Successful encores are rare. Few can recapture that momentum, that instant that brought crowds to their feet as one and in one burst of approval declared you the best.

But I don't think it's that moment that brings many former champions out of retirement. I think it's the struggle, the work, the sweat, the race itself that seduces them.

If you can hang onto that drive in your 40s, 50s, 60s or even 80s ... you are blessed.

Sierra Spring Water vs. Water Stores "Their Final Product Is Our First Step"

Q: Is there really a difference in what I can get at a water store and Sierra Spring Water?

A: Definitely. One big difference is the bottle itself. Our bottles are washed at temperatures in excess of 130 degrees. In addition, as soon as it is washed, it is filled and sealed in a controlled environment meeting FDA specifications.

Q: What about the water? Is there a difference there too?

A: YES. In fact, their final product is just our first step. Most water stores sell RO water. The reverse osmosis process takes whatever is in the water and reduces the concentration. So, the contents and levels of those contents in RO water simply depends on the make up of the water going in. That results in an inconsistent product. Because RO water is only our starting point, we control the quality of our end product.

Q: How do you make your drinking water?

A: After reverse osmosis, our water goes through an ion exchange process known as deionization. This takes out virtually ALL the dissolved solids in the water. Then, we take the purified water and blend certain minerals back in to produce an inexpensive facsimile of mountain spring water.

Q: Don't you also have spring water?

A: Yes, we have the largest variety of waters available in this area. We bring our spring water all the way from Arkansas. In addition to spring and drinking water, we also have steam distilled and even reverse osmosis water available.

Q: Are there any other differences between Sierra Spring Water Company and the water stores?

A: Just the obvious - home delivery. Sierra's home delivery service is still the most convenient way to have great tasting water in your home.

Q: How do I get Sierra in my home?

A: Just call the number below, we would love the opportunity to serve you.
